Town meeting

District 4 City Council member Claudia Egan, reacting to numerous campaign requests from her constituents, will hold a "town meeting" Monday night where citizens can discuss their concerns and ask questions of other council members and city employees. The meeting will be held at the Dellwood Senior Center at Dellwood Mall, 3301 W. Illinois Ave., from 7 to 9 p.m. Mrs. Egan said some city departments will give brief presentations relating to District 4 concerns.

Escobar's escape

BOGOTA, Colombia — A fugitive again, cocaine baron Pablo Escobar is adding new stanzas to his own old, bold and often bloody version of "Don't Fence Me In." So far this time, his tone is non-violent. "We're feeling good-willed, we'd like to resolve the problem," the powerful Medellin cartel boss declared matter-of-factly in a telephone conversation reportedly intercepted by security forces after he, his brother and eight others fled a sumptuous, custom-built prison on July 22./8A

Quayle on attack

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Vice President Dan Quayle charged Friday that Democratic candidate Bill Clinton's economic, tax and regulatory policies would put up to two million Americans out of work. Quayle, on the second and final day of a campaign swing through Ohio, was using the same cudgel that President Bush employed Thursday that the Clinton campaign was quick to counter./12A

Free trade pact

EL PASO — Although some officials feel El Paso has been ignored in the run to a free trade pact, they say few other cities will reap as many benefits when business barriers fall. "We're right on the border and right in the middle of the U.S. border with Mexico. You cannot build that kind of geographic accessibility," said Bob Cook, vice president for governmental affairs and education at the city's Economic Development Council. "There's an awful lot happening here that people don't realize," Cook said./3C

Bush meets with advisers on Yugoslavia

Military experts debate degree of intervention

By Donald M. Rothberg
Associated Press writer

■ Analysis

WASHINGTON — Any effective operation to secure the Sarajevo airport and end the indiscriminate shelling of civilians could require hundreds of thousands of troops — perhaps a force larger than the U.S.-led coalition that drove Iraq from Kuwait, some military experts say.

The possibility of military action to ensure the delivery of humanitarian aid to Bosnia-Herzegovina revives the use of the word "quagmire" and evokes more comparisons to Vietnam and Beirut than to the swift, one-sided Persian Gulf War.

President Bush likened Serbian detention camps to World War II Nazi concentration camps on Friday and demanded international inspection of the facilities.

But when asked about the prospect for U.S.

KENNEBUNKPORT, Maine (AP) — President Bush said Saturday there are no fundamental differences between the United States and its allies on reluctance to use force in the strife-torn former Yugoslav republics.

"There isn't an easy formula. If there was, we would have put it into effect before now," Bush told a news conference after meeting at his vacation home for a strategy session with his top national security advisers.

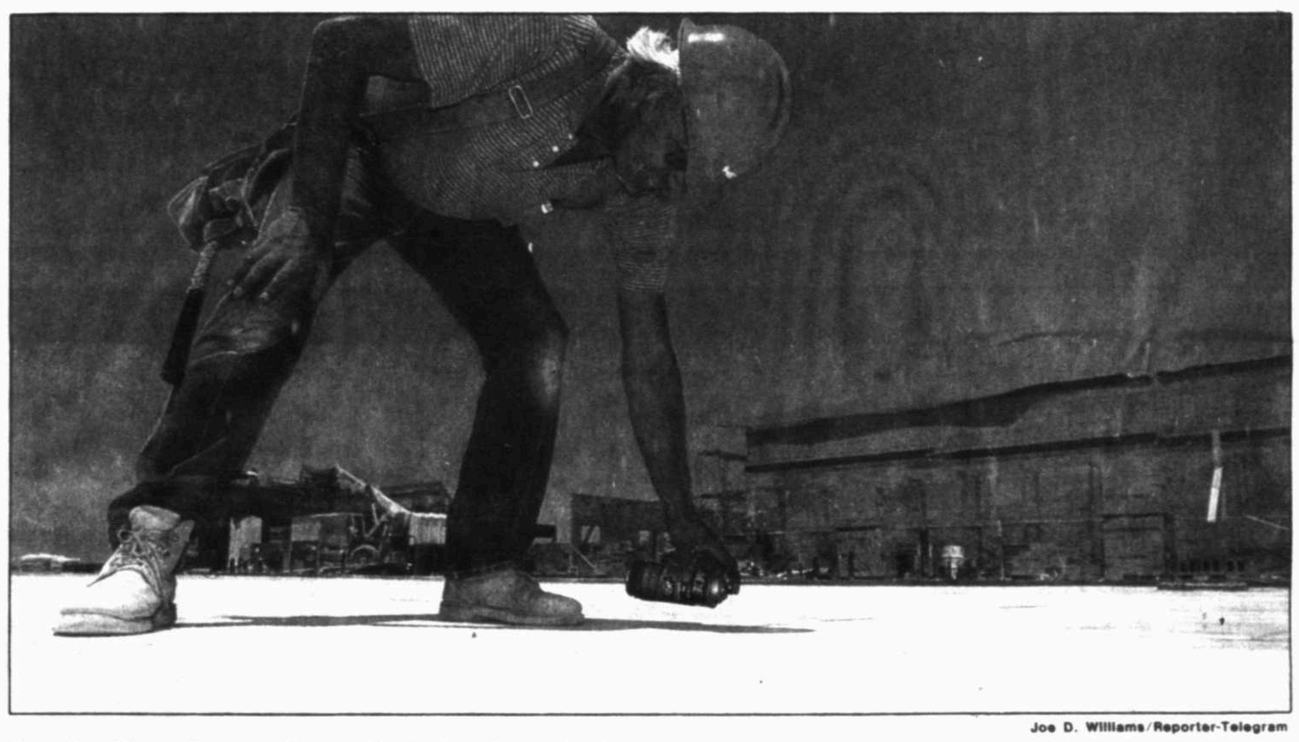

There are arguments among the U.S., Britain and France over how

Plans would raise school property taxes

If you pay property taxes in Midland, your burden to support local school children will most likely increase next year.

If proposed tax rates are approved, school property taxes for the two taxing entities — Midland Independent School District and the Andrews-Midland County Education District — will increase a total of 16 cents more per $100 valuation. This would result in an annual tax increase of more than $76 — with general exemptions — for the owner of an average homestead.

The MISD Board of Education has recommended raising its rate from 44.5 cents to 48 cents per $100 valuation. The 3½-cent increase reflects the district's debt service tax increase

Fund-raising record falls; money game accelerates

■ Congressional candidates fill war chests at frantic pace.

By John Solomon
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — House and Senate candidates are raising money at a record pace — $90 million above the levels of two years ago — as they try to capitalize on the anti-incumbent fervor that already has cost 16 lawmakers their seats.

Challengers and contestants for open seats, sensing their best chance in years to unseat long-entrenched lawmakers, still trail incumbents in raising money but are filling their war chests faster than ever all the same.

They're the main reason congressional fund-raising increased by 27 percent in House races and 40 percent in Senate races during the first 18 months of the 1992 election cycle, the government reported Saturday.

"Money has a nose and it knows where opportunity lies," says Rep. Guy Vander Jagt, R-Mich., who last week lost the seat

FDA acts to control vitamin claims

■ Aggressive policy brings simmering battle between mainstream medical science, alternative health movement into legal arena.

By Lena Williams
N.Y. Times News Service

In Texas, state health inspectors raided health food stores across the state in May and, as startled customers and bystanders watched in amazement, removed hundreds of products, including vitamin C, aloe vera products and herbal teas.

In Kent, Wash., armed agents of the Food and Drug Administration burst into the Tahoma Clinic, where practitioners of alternative medicine used injections of vitamins, minerals and amino acids to treat a variety of ailments.

That raid on May 6, captured on videotape by a patient and later broadcast on television news programs, shows FDA agents, dressed in bulletproof vests, bursting into the clinic and commanding clinic employees to freeze. The agency said the clinic was raided because it made illegal drugs, including "vitamin-mineral concoctions," that were being injected into patients.

No charges have been filed in either incident, but officials at the FDA say the raids are part of the agency's increased efforts to stop manufacturers of nutritional supplements from making unproven claims for their products, to bar their use by doctors unless first it is approved by the agen-

Boris Yeltsin's wife grants first newspaper interview

Editor's Note: The following is the first newspaper interview granted by Naina Yeltsin, wife of Russian President Boris Yeltsin. The interview was given to We/Mbl, a 350,000 circulation joint-venture newspaper owned by the Hearst Newspaper Group in the United States and Izvestia in Russia, and sold throughout the Commonwealth in Russian and in the rest of the world in English.

By Boris Ivanov and Peter Klebnikov

MOSCOW — Naina Yeltsin insists she is no first lady, but in defending her embattled husband's policies she certainly acts like one.

In a wide-ranging interview in the winter garden of the Grand Kremlin Palace recently, the publicity-shy first lady spoke at length about the changes that have enveloped the first family and Russia in general in the past year.

Boris Yeltsin, she says, owes his ability to prosper in adversity to a phenomenal sensitivity.

"Nature has endowed him with rare intuition, a gift for feeling the situation and sensing the finest shades and details of what's going on," she said.

"This was already apparent to me when we were students together. Since then it has often helped him find solutions to what seemed like total deadlocks."

Mrs. Yeltsin said a former Yeltsin colleague in Yekaterinburg (then Sverdlovsk) "once told me: 'He is like a fortress for us, because he never makes rash decisions.'"

Mrs. Yeltsin insists that her husband makes all decisions himself. "It has always been so," she said. "Of course, he listens to his aides' advice and opinions but his is always the last word. He is a very resolute man. In all the years that we have lived together I have never seen him at a loss."

She revealed herself as a caring person

U.N. doctor charges Iraq hinders care of children

BAGHDAD, Iraq (NYT) — The United Nations doctor overseeing children's health care in Iraq has complained that the government is obstructing his work despite serious problems among children, including many cases of weight loss and the threat of a measles epidemic.

Dr. Enzio Gianni Murzi of Italy, who heads the U.N. Children's Fund's delegation in Iraq, said in an interview here that since the start of July the Iraqi government had refused to issue his staff and drivers the travel permits that are necessary for moving about the country.

As a result, his staff is unable to supervise and monitor the children's health programs that Unicef is supporting outside Baghdad.

Last month Unicef requested travel permits to deliver seven consignments of medicines to different parts of the country, but nothing has been granted.

Since the Iraqi government also refuses to renew U.N. staff residency permits or issue new ones, Murzi said he could not replace staff members who go on leave or whose contracts expire. "We face enormous problems," he said. "Our professional capacity is decreasing."

Murzi's problems are shared by other U.N. agencies working to ease the impact of the economic embargo on vulnerable groups in the aftermath of the Persian Gulf war.

They are also shared by the handful of private groups doing similar work, like Catholic Relief Services, CARE, Oxfam, the Quakers and the Middle East Council of Churches.

The agreement, negotiated between Iraq and the United Nations, under which all these agencies and organizations are operating in the country expired at the end of June and thus far Baghdad has refused to renew it.

Iraq has not asked foreign relief workers to leave, and the U.N. secretary general, Boutros Boutros-Ghali, has ordered them to remain at their posts while he presses for an extension.

Land mine blast kills 10 top military officials

COLOMBO, Sri Lanka (AP) — The general leading the war against Tamil separatists was killed Saturday along with nine other top military officers when their vehicle was blown up by a land mine, officials said.

The deaths dealt a potentially severe blow to the military's morale, which recently had been boosted by a series of victories over the rebels, the Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam.

A London-based spokesman for the Tigers, Lawrence Thilakar, claimed responsibility for the blast. But it was not clear whether the land mine was specifically intended to kill the officers, or was left over from an earlier campaign.

The Defense Ministry issued a statement asking the public to "remain calm."

"This is ... a big shock to the military," said former Air Vice Marshal Harry Goonatilleke. "There should be a reassessment of the military's battle strategy, followed by a reassessment of the political situation."

The explosion occurred on Kayts Island, which government forces retook from the rebels in November. The island is a few miles from the Jaffna Peninsula, the center of the Tamil insurgency.

Those killed included Maj. Gen. Denzil Kobbekaduwa, commander of the anti-separatist war, and Brig. Gen. Vijaya Wimalaratne, the government commander in northern Sri Lanka. Wimalaratne led the forces that retook Kayts Island.

Kobbekaduwa was to have become the army chief in January and had been part of the government's offensive against Tiger rebels since it began in 1983.

"We feel this is the time for the government to start negotiations with the" rebels, Thilakar, their spokesman, said. He read a prepared statement to The Associated Press.

"The government should realize the futility of going for a military solution ... causing suffering to Tamils as well as Sinhalese people," Thilakar said.

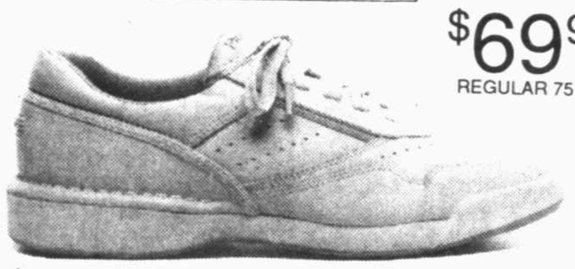

Dayan Jayatilleke, a political analyst, said: "The loss may not be an irreversible strategical gain for the (Tigers, but) certainly at this moment, the balance of forces stands altered."

The land mine exploded under the officers' jeep as they were driving to a helicopter to fly back to the Jaffna Peninsula after a tour of the island.

The Tigers have proved repeatedly in their eight-year war that they can strike at the most well-protected targets.

In March, a powerful car bomb explosion in the heart of Colombo killed Defense Minister Ranjan Wijeratne and 29 others. The Tigers were blamed for the attack although they never claimed responsibility.

Serb leader proposes giving camps to Red Cross

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — Trying to fend off criticism over reported atrocities in Serbian camps, Bosnia's Serb leader on Saturday proposed dismantling the compounds and exchanging prisoners with Croat and Muslim enemies.

Another Bosnian Serb official, meanwhile, threatened "kamikaze missions" against nuclear plants in Western Europe in the event of any outside military intervention in Bosnia.

President Bush praised the offer on detention camps, but condemned Aleksa Buha, foreign minister of the self-proclaimed Serbian republic of Bosnia-Herzegovinia, as "reckless" for his threat of suicide strikes.

The president, speaking to reporters in Kennebunkport, Maine, after meeting with top national security advisers, also reiterated his reluctance to become involved militarily in Bosnia.

"We are not going to get bogged down in some guerrilla warfare," he said.

News reports last week of Serb detention camps where Muslim prisoners have allegedly been beaten to death, raped and starved have shaken the world, reminding many of the Nazi horrors during World War II. They have also provoked talk of military intervention.

But Washington and its allies remain wary of sending troops into the civil war, except to ensure aid deliveries. The United States is preparing a U.N. Security Council proposal to use military force to protect aid shipments.

Relief flights to the U.N.-controlled Sarajevo airport resumed Saturday after a three-day suspension.

Shelling around the capital also resumed late Saturday. Heavy fighting was reported around Visoko to the northwest, where government forces have been trying to break the Serb siege of the city.

Clashes also flared along Bosnia's northern front, particularly along the Sava River border with Croatia. Two people in the Croatian town of Slavonski Brod were reported killed by artillery and rocket fire from Serb positions in Bosnia.

Bush said that despite some remaining differences between the United States, France and Britain, "We are continuing to work with U.N. Security Council members on the substance of a resolution."

"Providing humanitarian assistance is our goal," he said.

Bush said he had talked earlier Saturday with U.N. Secretary General Boutros Boutros-Ghali.

Bosnian Serb leader Radovan Karadzic told The Associated Press on Saturday he has proposed handing over all detention camps to the Red Cross and has ordered the immediate release of all sick prisoners and those at least 60 years old.

Karadzic also called for an "all-for-all" exchange of prisoners with Muslim forces in Bosnia and said he was ready to close down all camps in Serb control within three weeks if the other sides agree to do the same.

A Bosnian official said Karadzic's offer was a smoke screen to cover further Serbian abuses in Bosnia.

"Of course he has no intention of releasing anyone," said Hajrudin Somun, an aide to Bosnian President Alija Izetbegovic.

In Geneva, Pierre Gauthier, a spokesman for the International Committee for the Red Cross, said the organization had received an official letter from Serbian authorities but would not disclose its contents.

Karadzic suggested he was responding to directions from Milan Panic, premier of Serb-dominated Yugoslavia, who said Friday he would order Serbs in Bosnia to close detention camps or resign.

Serb rebels hand over Americans

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) —Two American mercenaries captured by Serb rebels in war-torn Bosnia were handed over Saturday to U.S. consular officials in Belgrade.

Colton Perry, 25, of Portsmouth, Va., and Marin Pesha, 22, of Livingston, N.J., had been members of the Croatian army and were captured by Serb rebels in northern Bosnia after fighting broke out there in March. Croatian troops fought on the Bosnian government side against the insurgents.

Sunny skies stick around

Staff report

Today's forecast calls for mostly sunny skies with a high in the upper 90s and south winds at 10 to 15 mph. Tonight should be fair with a low around 70, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Monday should be mostly sunny with a high around 95 to 100.

After an overnight low of 67, Saturday's high reached 97 compared with the record high for that date of 104 set in 1952. The record low for that date is 56 set in 1989.

STATE

The heat advisory remained in effect Saturday afternoon for North Texas, and the hot weather is expected to continue.

Heat index values in North Texas ranged from 96 in Abilene to 106 in Waco.

Scattered thunderstorms brought some relief to South and West Texas. Storms developed Saturday afternoon over the southwest mountains and Big Bend area.

State temperatures ranged from the mid-80s to 101 in West Texas near Wink. Skies were partly cloudy in the south and to the west, as mostly sunny skies prevailed over North Texas.

Skies will remain partly cloudy in South and to West Texas, with a slight chance of thunderstorms through today. Lows will be in the 60s to mid-70s with highs ranging from the mid-80s to the 100s.

The weather in North Texas will continue to be mostly sunny and hot. Lows today will be in the mid-70s. Highs will range from 93 to 98 degrees.

Some isolated thunderstorms will return to the area Monday, with highs ranging from 95 to 98 degrees.

NATION

More than 8 inches of rain fell during the morning in north-central Kentucky, and some streets in Scottsburg were under as much as 4 feet of water for a time.

Heavy rain also caused widespread flooding northeast of Louisville.

In southern Indiana, torrential rain dumped about 9 inches in the hills and valleys between Bedford and Madison. Bridges were washed out and roads were made impassable by high water, emergency management officials said.

The weather also created traffic snarls along interstates.

At midday, rain and thunderstorms extended over the lower Great Lakes, the Ohio Valley, the Tennessee Valley, the south-Atlantic coast and the Gulf coast from Florida to Texas.

Showers were scattered in southwest Missouri, south-central South Dakota, eatern Kansas, northern Colorado, central Montana and western Washington state.

Heavier rainfall during the 6 hours ending at 1 p.m. CDT included 2.80 inches in Louisville, Ky., and 1.46 inches in Lexington, Ky.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

U.S.: Allies share reluctance for force, Bush says and what we couldn't do and soon we had a 10-year war on our hands."

"No country wants to commit ground troops" and the main purpose of the U.N. resolution is not to commit allies to using force but to bring political pressure to bear to stop the Serbian onslaught in Bosnia-Herzegovina, the official said.

Bush denied that any of his actions, including the holding of his third news conference in three days on foreign policy, were motivated by presidential politics.

Aides said the president called the session to decide how a U.S.-proposed resolution authorizing possible use of force in Bosnia might have to be modified to win support in the U.N. Security Council, said another administration official, speaking on the condition of anonymity.

The resolution — to be voted on next week — has encountered resistance from Britain and Germany, which had been wary of the use of military force.

But, Bush said, "I don't think we've got a difference. . . . I don't think anybody wants to go forward to use force."

Bush said that "we are continuing to work with U.N. Security Council members on the substance of a resolution."

"Providing humanitarian assistance is our goal," he said.

Bush rejected a suggestion by former British prime minister Margaret Thatcher that the arms embargo against Bosnia be lifted so that the Bosnian people could defend themselves against attack from Serbs.

"There are enough arms there already," Bush said. "We've got to stop the killing some way. And I don't think that it's enhanced by more and more" arms.

The high-profile session came as Bush campaign strategists sought to portray Bush as busy doing his job as president, rather than vacationing.

Summoned to the mid-afternoon session were Defense Secretary Dick Cheney, national security adviser Brent Scowcroft, U.N. envoy Alexander Watson and Deputy Secretary of State Lawrence Eagleburger.

Appearing in a coat and tie in front of his vacation home, Bush told reporters: "I'm going to keep doing it (holding news conferences on foreign policy). Nobody has to attend. This is not political."

Bush said that, through Scowcroft, he had offered Democratic presidential candidate Bill Clinton briefings on foreign policy, including the former Yugoslav republics.

Clinton accepted the offer but a date has yet to be scheduled, the senior administration official said.

Bush reiterated his earlier statement that "nothing is ruled in or out" in terms of military force and that "We are not going to get bogged down in some guerrilla warfare."

The meeting came two days after Bush announced a tougher stance on the crisis in the Balkans by asking the U.N. Security Council to vote on the resolution authorizing the use of force to deliver humanitarian aid. The vote is scheduled for next week.

And the Saturday session came as two American mercenaries captured by Serb rebels in Bosnia were handed over to U.S. consular officials in Belgrade.

The president praised as a good first step reports that Serb-run detention camps in Bosnia might be turned over to Red Cross officials. But he condemned as "reckless" a statement by a Serb leader, Aleksa Buha, foreign minister of the self-proclaimed Serbian republic of Bosnia-Herzegovinia.

Buha told a news conference in Belgrade Saturday that ethnic Serbs outside Yugoslavia "have offered to participate in kamikaze missions against European targets in the event of Western aggression" against Serbs in Bosnia.

ANALYSIS: Military experts debate use of force

military action, he was very cautious.

"I'm thinking it out very carefully. I do not want to see the United States bogged down in any way in some guerrilla warfare," he said.

In an earlier statement the president acknowledged that silencing the mountainside artillery positions in Bosnia-Herzegovina "is not an easy military problem, even for our fantastic air force."

Calls for varying degrees of military intervention in what was once Yugoslavia were also coming from Democratic presidential nominee Bill Clinton, former British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher and from a bipartisan coalition in Congress.

The pressure to use force is motivated by daily scenes of civilians, including children, under attack from snipers and artillery bombardment. Added to that are reports that Serbian forces are waging a so-called "ethnic cleansing" campaign that involves herding non-Serbs into detention camps.

Maj. Gen. Lewis MacKenzie, former commander of United Nations forces in Sarajevo, gives one of the most pessimistic assessments of the prospects for military intervention.

He said a limited strike against Serb positions would expose U.N. forces to attack. A more extensive involvement would require an international force of up to 800,000 "as a starting point." At its height, the Persian Gulf coalition numbered 700,000 of whom 540,000 were U.S. forces.

William J. Taylor, director of political-military affairs at the Center for Strategic and International Studies, warns that "the propensity for doing something wrong is very high right now."

Putting ground troops into the Sarajevo area "would be a replay of Vietnam," said Taylor.

Serbian artillery and mortar positions are in the 7,000-foot heavily wooded mountains that surround Sarajevo. "We wouldn't know who to hit," said Taylor. "We wouldn't be able to separate Muslims from Croatians from Serbs."

Is there a better way? Taylor strongly advocates air strikes on the Belgrade headquarters of Serbian leader Slobodan Milosevic.

"He controls at least seven divisions in the Bosnia region," as well as most of the irregular forces, said Taylor.

The strategy is to force Milosevic to "stop doing something they're doing."

In an article in the New York Times, Thatcher called concerns about becoming bogged down "partly alarmism, partly an excuse for inertia." The former prime minister advocated using air power on Serbian supply routes as well as on military positions.

What would it take to keep the airport open for relief shipments?

Senators were stunned by what they were told in a closed-door intelligence briefing: that it would take two divisions — thousands of soldiers — just to secure the airport and a safe route to it from the city.

Col. Harry Summers, an analyst at the Army War College, estimated it would take up to 40,000 troops to secure the airport.

"You've got to cordon it off far enough out to be outside artillery range," said Summers, a distance that could be 10 or 15 miles.

U.S. forces trying to secure the airport also would be vulnerable to terrorist attacks similar to the one that killed 241 U.S. troops in 1983 when a truck bomb destroyed a barracks at the Beirut airport.

"Once you put forces on the ground, you yourself are to some degree hostage to the situation," said Summers.

As for using troops to force access to detention camps, Summers said, "There you're going to have to go into the country and overrun the entire country. You're talking a major invasion."

Not everyone predicts military forces would face stiff resistance from the Serbians.

"I think these so-called Serbian fighters will back down," said James Blackwell, another military expert at the Center for Strategic and International Studies.

"They certainly don't have a stomach for taking on the U.N. forces or anyone more powerful than innocent women and children," he said.

he held for 26 years.

"The depth of the anti-incumbent mood is deeper and stronger than anybody realized," says Vander Jagt, chairman of the Republican Congressional Campaign Committee and, ironically enough, one of the GOP's star fund raisers.

The reason why incumbents are filling their war chests at a faster pace than two years ago is clear. Fifteen House members have been defeated in primaries this year — three shy of the all-time record.

House and Senate candidates raised $369.3 million and spent $287.6 million through June 30 and entered the general election stretch with $162 million in cash on hand, the FEC reported.

That's $90.2 million more in fund-raising and $95.8 million more in spending than the record levels for the first 18 months of the 1990 election, when candidates raised $279.1 million and spent $191.8, the FEC said.

In House races, challengers raised $35.9 million through June 30, up $15 million from two years ago. Candidates for open seats raised $49.5 million, up more than $19 million, while incumbents raked in $121.9 million, about $9 million more than 1990.

House incumbents still hold a substantial fund-raising edge, amassing the top 50 war chests in terms of cash on hand at the end of June and receiving 85 percent of all political action committee donations.

House Majority Leader Richard Gephardt, D-Mo., and House Ways and Means Committee Chairman Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., were the top two fund-raisers during the 18-month period with $2.6 million and $1.4 million in receipts respectively.

But Republican Michael Huffington, a California businessman bankrolling his own House bid, was the top spender at $3.4 million.

Challengers and open seat candidates got $34 million in increased donations. And there were more of them: 184 non-incumbents had raised $50,000 by June 30, up from just 113 two years ago.

"There are a record number of challengers who people think have a shot," said Roger Craver, a veteran Democratic fund-raiser. "And if they have a chance, people and PACs will give."

House candidates also amassed $28.2 million in debts. California Republican Sang R. Korman's $961,139 topped the list.

In Senate races, challengers more than doubled the $25.8 million they raised in the first 18 months of 1990 to $53.6 million while contestants for open seats raked in $38.2 million, six times more than two years ago. Incumbent fund-raising, meanwhile, fell from $83.1 million to $69.4 million.

Senate non-incumbents not only outraised incumbents, they also outspent them $79.6 million to $43.7 million.

Nehl Horton, a spokesman for the Democratic Senatorial Campaign Committee, attributed the increases to the fact that the most hotly contested races are in states with large donor bases and expensive media markets like California, New York and Pennsylvania.

But he too agreed the anti-incumbent mood was playing a role, especially aiding women candidates such as Democrats Dianne Feinstein and Barbara Boxer in California, Lynn Yeakel of Pennsylvania, and Carol Mosley Braun in Illinois.

"Women candidates out there see that with the end of the Cold War and with the demise of the American economy . . . there is a real opening to talk about domestic issues and change in a substantive way," Horton said.

"They personify change in an institution where their representation is just 2 percent," he said.

Boxer led all Senate candidates in fund-raising with $5.6 million in receipts through June 30 while Feinstein finished No. 7 with $4.5 million.

Candidates for California's two Senate races accounted for five of the top 10 fund-raisers, including the top four. Unsuccessful primary challengers Mel Levine ($5.5 million) and Thomas Campbell ($5 million) finished No.2 and No.3 followed by Sen. John Seymour ($4.8 million), who is trying to keep the seat he was appointed to last year.

Unlike the House, the Senate has lost only one incumbent, Illinois' Alan Dixon, in the primaries.

FDA: Agents attack unproven claims in battle cy, and to halt their sale as medicines.

The FDA says its actions are grounded in hard science and law. But across the country the agency's tactics have caused anger, frustration and in some areas organized consumer rebellion. The interest groups fighting the FDA represent the makers of health foods and vitamins and the practitioners of so-called alternative medicine — some doctors as well as herbalists and acupuncturists.

On Saturday, some of these alternative-medicine advocates will be joined by a group of Hollywood celebrities at a news conference in Beverly Hills to urge the public to "start screaming at Congress and the White House not to let the FDA take our vitamins away," said Sissy Spacek, the actress. She and many other celebrities say they use vitamins, herbs and other homeopathic remedies at work and at home.

The agency's actions come amid the growing phenomenon of megadose vitamin therapy, popular among New Agers, health faddists, the back-to-nature movement and self-styled nutritionists. The therapies are partly based on intriguing but unproved theories that call for taking huge doses of vitamins, minerals and herbal medicines to enhance health or to treat chronic ailments like allergies.

The newly aggressive policy by the FDA has brought into the legal arena the simmering battle between mainstream medical science, which is cautious or dismissive about many of the unconventional medical treatments, like megavitamin therapy and acupuncture, and the alternative health movement, which argues that these treatments can be effective, whether or not they are backed by science.

The FDA says it is acting under authority of the Nutrition Labeling and Education Act, signed into law by President Bush in 1991, to provide reliable nutritional information for consumers. But others argue that the agency is jumping the gun, enforcing the law before regulations are ready, and that it is overreacting to issues consumers could sort out for themselves. The FDA proposal cannot be made final until Nov. 8, the deadline for public comment and agency review.

Last year, the FDA proposed regulations for the labeling law that would classify vitamins and minerals as drugs if dosages exceeded the daily recommended allowances; restrict or prevent the sale of most medicinal herbs like camomile; prevent unsubstantiated health claims for most dietary supplements, and lower the recommended vitamin-intake levels for various age groups.

"Once we set those levels, it is my belief that anything above those levels would be considered unapproved food additives, and it couldn't be made," said Gary Dykstra, the agency's deputy commissioner for regulatory affairs.

"You couldn't get it by prescription or otherwise; you'd just have to take more pills."

Under the proposal, food labels could not carry health claims about the relationship between the food and specific disease or health conditions, except in the cases of calcium and osteoporosis, sodium and hypertension, fat and cardiovascular disease, and fat and cancer.

For 90 years, until 1987, a food product with such a claim on its label was treated as a drug and considered misbranded unless the claim was backed by an approved drug application. The FDA under President Ronald Reagan, prodded by arguments that food packages were a good way to disseminate information about nutrition, began to allow such claims.

The FDA, under the proposal, would have the authority to recall or embargo products and impose fines of up to $250,000 on individuals and $1 million on companies for each violation.

Officials at the FDA say the regulations are needed to protect the public against manufacturers who promote the supposed healing powers of supplements and make phony health claims. Some officials say the crackdown is a direct response to the hundreds of cases of a blood disorder and 38 deaths recently linked to a tainted shipment of the amino acid supplement L-tryptophan, which was widely used as a stress reducer.

Russian troops destroy 2,000 armored vehicles under treaty

WUENSDORF, Germany (AP) — Under the watch of American and other NATO monitors, Russian troops on Saturday began destroying more than 2,000 armored vehicles to fulfill a treaty reducing non-nuclear arms in Europe.

Russia became the second country to start dismantling heavy weapons under the landmark Treaty on Conventional Armed Forces in Europe. Germany began the same work last Monday.

The treaty, signed in 1990, requires NATO and the former Warsaw Pact countries to dismantle nearly 40,000 tanks, armored vehicles, artillery pieces and warplanes in the next 40 months.

The treaty provides for elaborate inspection procedures so the 29 signing countries can check what weaponry other countries have and what they destroy.

Nine NATO observers, including five U.S. soldiers and others from Belgium, Canada, Italy and Britain, moved into the massive Red Army base at Wuensdorf, about 15 miles south of Berlin, to monitor an assembly line-like process the Russians created to dismantle armored personnel carriers and render them permanently inoperable.

The Russians "are excellent hosts, bending over backward for us," said Michael A. Lehrter, a civilian from Washington, D.C., working for the agency originally set up to monitor removal of nuclear weapons from Europe under another treaty.

"I had expected there to be some distance. But they have been very warm, and I feel almost at home," Lehrter said.

Russian Col. Gen. Alexei Mituschin said the Red Army had been in eastern Germany for 47 years "protecting peace in Europe." But now the same army — gradually being withdrawn from a united Germany — is destroying some of its own weapons in full view of NATO observers and the news media, he said.

After Mituschin's speech, an officer shouted a command and scores of Russian soldiers went to work on eight armored vehicles, the first of 2,319 to be destroyed in Germany.

At the beginning of the line, troops removed tires, lifted off turrets, dismantled 73 mm cannons, pulled out engines and blasted hulls of the vehicles with high-pressure steam to remove oil and other impurities.

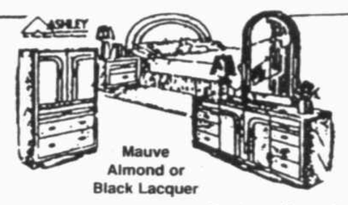

At the other end, soldiers with acetylene torches cut up the cannon barrels, burned away wheel mountings and sliced into the turrets so cannons could not be remounted.

NAINA: Yeltsin's wife grants first newspaper interview, offers views familiar with the problems of ordinary people and much different from Raisa Gorbachev, a former teacher of Marxism given to hectoring audiences.

Like many in her country, Mrs. Yeltsin, born in 1932 in the central Asian republic of Orenburg, is at times confused by the tumultuous changes in Russia, but she remains a passionate advocate for her husband's policies.

Mrs. Yeltsin graduated from The Urals Polytechnical Institute, as did her husband. For many years she worked for a design organization and eventually was promoted to head of department. Their oldest daughter, Yelena, is a graduate of the same institute and the younger, Tatyana, is a computer expert with a Moscow University degree. "We are all technicians in this family," Mrs. Yeltsin jokes.

Although the Russian president's popularity has declined in the past year and he is often under fire from left and right, Mrs. Yeltsin closely follows the reaction to his policies through the media, even though she sometimes finds it distressing. She is quick to take offense to what she sees as unfounded attacks.

"How can the press write and pass judgment on what they know absolutely nothing about?" she said, folding her hands in the lap of her blue-green silk dress.

"Indeed, many things in this country are falling to pieces today, but it could not have all happened in just one year. Why should they blame everything on Yeltsin?"

In her opinion, attempts to accuse the Russian president of initiating the break-up of the Soviet Union are groundless.

"It is downright untrue because Russia never withdrew from the union," she said. "I, for one, cannot get used to the concept of 'foreign countries' next door, to the fact that Kiev is 'abroad' now. It is an objective process, and it cannot be reversed."

Family life for the Yeltsins has not changed much since Boris became president. Like all Muscovites, Mrs. Yeltsin complains about high prices and the inadequacy of public services.

As before, the Yeltsins live with one of their daughters, their son-in-law and their grandson in a four-room flat in downtown Moscow that they moved into shortly after arriving from Yekaterinburg in 1985.

"Everything is as before," she said. "I am the homemaker, although unfortunately I seldom shop now. This duty is taken over by our children. We have never had servants and do all our cooking ourselves."

One of the few changes in the family's life is that Yeltsin doesn't come home for lunch during the week now that he is president. But at supper time, one of the children or grandchildren always tries to be around, all of them waiting "for dad and granddad," Mrs. Yeltsin says.

"He usually works until 10 or 11 p.m. If he happens to come home at 9, it is reason to celebrate — but that is very, very rare."

Family lunch on Sundays, however, remains a "sacred ritual." The special meal gives Yeltsin a chance to relax and enjoy the company of his children and three grandchildren — Boris, Katia and Masha.

"The entire family gathers at the table," Mrs. Yeltsin said. "It is the only time during the week when we all see each other and discuss everyday problems."

The Russian president's favorite dish, she says, is homemade Ural dumplings. "It is our family specialty," she said.

After 30 years of marriage, their relationship is as good and caring as ever. "All these years we spent our holidays together," she said. "The one time we separated we could not stand it for longer than three days. I cannot remember a single quarrel or serious difference with him."

Mrs. Yeltsin still irons her husband's suits. "Perhaps it is a habit," she says. "I choose his ties and look after his shirts and suits."

According to Mrs. Yeltsin, the past seven years in Moscow have been the most trying period in the lives of the Yeltsins.

"In Yekaterinburg, where we lived for 35 years, things were not always smooth either but each time I go there, my heart feels freer," she said. "When I return to Moscow I find it hard to breathe, literally as well as figuratively."

Among the trials the Yeltsins have faced in Moscow, last August's aborted coup stands out. Mrs. Yeltsin appeared close to tears as she recalled the three tension-filled days.

"I cannot remember those days calmly," she says. "My daughters and I never shed a tear then, although we fully realized the weight of the responsibility my husband shouldered and the seriousness of the matter. Only later did I feel the full horror of those days."

She said she spent the three days and nights that shook Russia with her daughters and grandchildren in their Moscow flat, keeping up with events through CNN radio broadcasts and numerous leaflets that appeared clandestinely around the city.

'I wince every time they call me 'the first lady,' I cannot accept this form of address. In order to be a lady, let alone the first lady, one must live like a lady. I am no lady, just the Russian president's wife.'

— Naina Yeltsin

Her husband managed to get through to them only once by telephone from the besieged "White House" (the popular name for the seat of Russian government).

"He said just a few words, that he was well and that we should not worry."

Like her husband, Mrs. Yeltsin had been a member of the Communist Party and was the last in the family to quit the party, after her son-in-law and her husband.

She is incensed by the coup leader's statements suggesting there was no putsch and that the state of emergency was introduced simply as a temporary measure to put the country in order.

"Gennady Yanayev (the former Soviet vice president and coup leader) appeared on television to say that they were not after Yeltsin or the Russian government, and that they were only acting for the good of the people," Mrs. Yeltsin said.

"Why then did they bring so many tanks and other armored vehicles to Moscow? Why did they choose to mock the people, to humiliate Muscovites and wound their hearts? I still remember how our apartment windows shook from the tanks."

The wives of Western presidents often work for social causes but, despite a concern for orphans, Mrs. Yeltsin says that isn't possible in Russia now because "the conditions in this country are totally different."

She says it is inappropriate to compare the West with Russia in certain areas because they are different worlds with different traditions and opportunities.

"I wince every time they call me 'the first lady,'" she says. "I cannot accept this form of address. In order to be a lady, let alone the first lady, one must live like a lady. I am no lady, just the Russian president's wife."

When her husband was elected president in June of last year, she tried to help orphaned and abandoned children but quickly realized she was helpless to change anything.

"Unfortunately, the only thing I can do is to ask the president to help this or that orphanage. I can do that," she said. "But it will not solve the problem of orphans in Russia. What about other orphanages? They are all in dire straits. They all need help. Children's problems must be dealt with professionally and permanently. We have always been told that our children are the happiest in the world, even while many of them lived under barbaric conditions."

For the same reason, she does not work for any public foundations or organizations. "They all need help, of course, but all I can do is turn to the president. Our family has an unwritten law: never ask (Yeltsin) for anything having to do with his work."

She is encouraged by the emergence of charity among Russia's new business classes and sees the development as an important source of help for Russia's social needs.

"I am all for giving people the right to make money," she says. "It is true that at present this desire often takes on unseemly characteristics. Many people just want to grab as much as possible. But this period will certainly pass.

"The main thing is that finally people have a chance to show initiative, enterprise and talent and get appropriate remuneration for their work.

"For many people of my generation, free enterprise is alien. We suffer because we have been brought up in a different way and in a rigidly ideological atmosphere. I feel sorry for the people who cling blindly to their past. We should acknowledge, at long last, that the social system in the West gives the human being more, that the state there works for the individual, whereas here the individual has always been enslaved by the state."

Mrs. Yeltsin believes religion contributes a great deal to the spiritual emancipation and enlightenment of people. But she believes that many people of her generation are not ready to embrace religion.

"Because of long and forcibly promoted atheism, we find it difficult to change our mentality. In order to believe, one must feel a yearning for God," she says.

'I cannot remember those days calmly. My daughters and I never shed a tear then, although we fully realized the weight of the responsibility my husband shouldered and the seriousness of the matter. Only later did I feel the full horror of those days.'

— Naina Yeltsin

She says she seldom goes to church but when she does, "I feel very good there. I feel at peace."

She knows little of church rites and traditions. "In this respect my grandchildren are far more knowledgeable than I am," Mrs. Yeltsin said. "They have been baptized and have read 'The Children's Bible' with pleasure. They always cross themselves when passing a church."

Mrs. Yeltsin says the ethnic conflicts raging in the countries that formerly made up the Soviet Union must be settled without bloodshed or involvement of the Russian Army. She believes that the army must be reformed and become professional. She appreciates the motives behind the militant movement of soldiers' mothers whose sons died while serving in the armed forces.

"I share the grief and pain of these women," she said.

RATE: School property taxes could rise 16 cents per $100 valuation

— from 10.5 cents to 14.2 cents.

In 1991, taxpayers voted to increase MISD's debt service taxes through the passage of a $24.175 million bond election, which is funding renovations to campuses throughout the district and constructing three new schools — Barney Greathouse Elementary, George Abell Junior High, and Viola Coleman High School, an alternative school and drop-out prevention facility.

School board trustees have proposed to "confine the tax increase to what was mandated in the bond election," said MISD Superintendent Joseph Baressi Jr.

"Our maintenance and operation portion of the tax rate actually is coming down a little bit (from 34 cents to 33 cents) because of the increase in property values," Baressi said.

The small decrease in maintenance and operation portion of the tax rate is the result of an increase in the taxable value of the district from $3,320,525,536 to $3,332,653,364.

MISD's proposed tax rate is considerably below the 61-cent levy that would allow citizens to call for a rollback election.

Ted Miller, MISD spokesperson, said recent changes in school tax legislation "require that the debt service portion of the tax rate be included in calculations used to compute the rollback rate."

The school district's 44½-cent tax last year amounted to about $192.86 for the average ($53,710) home. The $192.86 results from figuring the average taxable value of a $53,710 home, minus general exemptions — the 10 percent local option ($5,370) and a $5,000 exemption mandated by the state for all school districts — according to Ron Stegall, chief appraiser.

Stegall said the average home value in Midland this year is $54,220. With general exemptions — resulting in the average taxable value of a $54,220 house being $43,800, the homeowner would see a proposed increase of $17.38 (from last year's levy of $192.86 to this year's proposed $210.24).

"Persons 65 and over get a better break," Stegall said, noting that there are further exemptions for retirees and the disabled "including a ceiling."

The homeowner of an average home in Midland with general exemptions, however, would realize a $76.21 increase if the CED proposed tax hike is combined with MISD's.

The CED is proposing increasing its tax rate from 77.5 cents to 90.73 cents per $100 valuation. The effective tax rate (that amount of tax levy necessary to generate the same level of revenues of the previous year) is 78 cents per $100 valuation, which reflects a slight decrease in taxable value within the two-county area.

The average home value of the Andrews-Midland County CED (which includes Greenwood) is $54,160, slightly lower than Midland's County's average home value of $54,220.

The CED general exemption is also different from MISD's because the two-county district allows for a 20 percent local option.

The local CED serves MISD with an enrollment of 21,000; Greenwood ISD, enrollment 1,400 and Andrews ISD, 3,600.

Baressi, who is serving as chief administrator for the local CED, said the education district board elected to raise the tax 12½ cents "because of exemptions, plus we expect to collect only 97 percent of the levy."

"The rate should give the district the $50 million required to be collected by the Texas Education Agency," Baressi said.

The CED taxes statewide have been mired in controversy because they have been declared unconstitutional.

The Texas Supreme Court ruled in January that the tax violates the state constitution but delayed the effect of its ruling until June 1, 1993, to give lawmakers time to fix the system.

Texas schools recently won federal court approval to continue collecting the state property tax.

"If enough people would say, 'I'm not paying this unconstitutional tax,' you know the Legislature would then meet and do something," said Jim Keahey, an Austin attorney who sued in federal court on behalf of Capt. Coleman Smith, U.S. Navy ret., Lakeway, saying continued collection of the levy denies taxpayers due process, violating the federal Constitution.

"There is no public interest in the payment of an unconstitutional tax," Keahey says in a brief filed with the court. "A taxpayers' revolt may be the consequence of a failure by the courts to uphold fundamental law."

The CEDs may raise further ire when districts across the state begin announcing they are raising the rate above the rollback rate.

In normal circumstances a rollback election may be called if the tax rate is 8 percent above the effective tax rate calculation.

The Andrews-Midland CED figured rollback rate is 85 cents per $100 valuation, and the board has proposed raising the rate to 90.7 cents per $100 valuation (a 15 percent increase over the effective tax rate). Since the Legislature requires CEDs to hike taxes to yield an effective increase of 10 cents per $100 valuation, the question remains whether the CED rate is eligible for a rollback election.

"All of the CEDs are above the rollback rate this year," Stegall said. "The state has not decided if CEDs are subject to the rollback election, but, if they are, they are in a lot of trouble."

Education experts have said Texas schools would close without the CED collections.

Although Keahey lost his challenge to the federal appeals court to block Texas schools from collecting the CED taxes, he called on fellow citizens to not pay those taxes.

"That won't be an option," Stegall said.

"We won't allow people to pick and choose jurisdictions. Either they pay or won't pay at all," the chief appraiser said. "For example, someone can't say I'll pay the city tax, but not the CED tax. They pay the taxes, and we distribute them to the jurisdictions."

Stegall said taxpayers who deduct CED taxes from their payments will have their payments returned to them.

Although collecting taxes for the CEDs is under fire, Stegall said, "I don't see any way around it, until lawmakers come up with something else."

"I appreciate the the frustration of taxpayers," Baressi said. "But we could not operate the schools without the CED."

All public hearings and school board meetings will be conducted in the Midland Independent School District Administration Building board room, 615 W. Missouri Ave.

The MISD Board of Trustees will conduct a public hearing on setting the school district's tax rate 7 p.m. Tuesday, following the 4 p.m. regular board meeting. The board meeting will adjourn for the public hearing and reconvene following the hearing. Trustees will vote on the tax rate at the Aug. 25 board meeting.

A public hearing on the proposed CED rate has been set for 7 p.m. Aug. 17 in the MISD board room. The CED will adopt the tax rate 7 p.m. Aug. 27.

■ Shining Path swears to crush peasant militia

LIMA, Peru — Shining Path rebels killed at least six members of a peasant militia organized to defend a small Andean village, according to news reports Saturday. Seven more peasants were wounded.

The attack occurred early Friday in Pichihuillca in the Apurimac River Valley, about 310 miles southeast of Lima, according to the El Comercio newspaper.

Survivors said the rebels were heavily armed and controlled the town for six hours.

The peasant militas have been successful in checking the rebel's progress in the highlands, especially in the Apurimac River Valley. The Shining Path has sworn to crush the militias.

La Republica, a Lima tabloid, reported that 25 peasants were killed in the confrontation. No military spokesman was available for comment Saturday.

More than 25,000 people have died in political violence since the Shining Path launched its armed insurgency in 1980.

■ Ecuador, U.S sign laundering agreement

QUITO, Ecuador — The United States and Ecuador have signed an agreement to help combat drug-money laundering in this small South American nation that borders Peru and Colombia.

Under the agreement signed Friday, Ecuador will for the first time report the names, addresses and occupations of people who deposit more than $10,000 in foreign currency in Ecuadorean banks.

The information will be shared with the United States and could be used to track proceeds from the drug trade, said interim U.S. Ambassador James Mack, who signed the agreement with Foreign Minister Diego Cordovez.

Ecuador developed the plan in response to a U.S. request to improve bilateral cooperation in the fight against drug trafficking.

Peru grows more than 60 percent of the world's supply of coca leaf, the raw material used to produce cocaine; and Colombia is home to the some of the world's largest drug trafficking organizations.

■ Army seizes 124 pounds of cocaine, arrest 3

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti — The army seized 125 pounds of cocaine and arrested three people Friday, one day after it was accused of drug-dealing by a top narcotics officer under ousted President Jean-Bertrand Aristide.

The cocaine was confiscated at "a drug storage and distribution center" in the upscale suburb of Bourdon, Col. Antoine Atouriste, head of the National Anti-Drug Information and Coordination Center, told The Associated Press.

The street value of the haul was estimated at more than $2 million.

■ Heads of states to come together in Jakarta

JAKARTA, Indonesia — U.N. Secretary-General Boutros-Boutros Ghali and Cuban President Fidel Castro will attend the 10th summit of the Non-Aligned Movement next month, the official Antara News Agency said Saturday.

Antara said the heads of states from the Bahamas, Guatemala, Jamaica, Nicaragua and Panama are among about 101 countries that have agreed to come to the Non-Aligned Conference on Sept. 1-6 in Jakarta.

Minister of Trade Arifin Siregar, who recently visited several Middle East countries, said Friday that Iraqi President Saddam Hussen would participate in the summit if he was allowed to fly to Jakarta in one of the Iraqi aircraft held in Iran since the Gulf War or other neighboring countries.

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — A fugitive again, cocaine baron Pablo Escobar is adding new stanzas to his own old, bold and often bloody version of "Don't Fence Me In."

So far this time his tone is non-violent.

"We're feeling good-willed, we'd like to resolve the problem," the powerful Medellin cartel boss declared matter-of-factly in a telephone conversation reportedly intercepted by security forces after he, his brother and eight others fled a sumptuous, custom-built prison on July 22.

"It's really not my fault," he said, referring to loose security at the prison, nicknamed the Cathedral, in the Medellin suburb of Envigado. He said it was up to authorities, not him, to enforce prison rules.

A tape of the conversation was obtained by the Bogota daily El Nuevo Siglo, which published excerpts this week. The newspaper said Escobar was speaking with unidentified "important citizens" on the tape.

Escobar, 42, says he wants to return to the Cathedral. In communiques right after the escape, he said he didn't plan to renew the terror campaign that claimed hundreds of lives in the two years before his negotiated surrender on June 19, 1991.

But almost daily revelations of irregularities at the prison have fueled public indignation and stiffened opposition in President Cesar Gaviria's government to new negotiations.

As he did when he first turned himself in June 1991, Escobar wants guarantees that he won't be placed in any other prison or extradited to the United States, which wants him badly.

The government says Escobar's surrender must be unconditional.

The hunt continues, but few Colombians doubt Escobar's capacity to elude or buy off police and military forces, as he has done for years.

"He has spies everywhere," Attorney General Gustavo de Greiff. "He has his own intelligence service."

In an interview with The Associated Press, de Greiff said he didn't expect Escobar to turn himself in soon.

He said he would insist that Escobar face charges that, inside the Cathedral, he tried and condemned to death several fellow traffickers accused of cheating him on drug profits. He also would be charged with escape.

"This would have to be included in any negotiations," de Greiff said.

Should Escobar turn himself in, "under no circumstances would conditions be the same" at the prison, the attorney general vowed.

De Greiff said he has solid evidence that Escobar directed his multibillion-dollar international smuggling empire from prison and was ordering the execution of accomplices. It was not clear if any killings took place on the prison grounds, de Greiff said.

A de Greiff report on Escobar's activities helped prompt a June 21 decision to move him from the Cathedral to a Bogota jail. But the operation was badly bungled, with Escobar slipping into the night with nine cohorts while army troops exchanged gunfire with prison guards.

The 24 prison guards are under arrest, and some soldiers allegedly helped Escobar flee.

By all accounts Escobar ran the Cathedral, constructed on a wooded hillside estate he had originally gave to the Medellin city government for a drug treatment center.

He gave orders to his hand-picked guards, who catered wild parties in specially built cabanas and turned a blind eye to the regular arrival of family, friends, business associates and luxury goods. A delivery truck came three times daily from Envigado, a town Escobar virtually owns.

Photographs show Escobar's two-room suite was comfortably furnished with a color-coordinated living room set, a kitchenette, waterbed, 60-inch television and expensive stereo equipment. Authorities say they found two cordless telephones, fax machines, computers, weapons and a supply of lingerie.

Women came often. According to a Bogota television station, prison authorities were planning to hire several female guards and had requested construction of a separate barracks for them.

Before the escape, the government publicly insisted that conditions at the Cathedral were spartan, like any other Colombian prison. Only a few days before the escape, in a state-of-the-nation address, Gaviria cited Escobar's 1991 surrender as one of the principal achievments of his 2-year-old administration.

But in a report to congress after the escape, Gaviria revealed that his administration had been receiving reports of special privileges and faulty security since late last year.

When government-contracted workers tried to erect a second fence around the prison in January, prison authorities and local army troops stopped them, saying they lacked the proper permits, he disclosed.

When the workers returned in June and started putting up the fence, soldiers tore part of it down. A group of 10 prisoners beat up a foreman and threatened the workers with death.

When an air force surveillance plane flew over the compound June 27, checking on reports that secret tunnels were being dug, it came under fire from an anti-aircraft battery.

It was the prisoner, not his guards, who apparently was obsessed with security. Escobar's head is sought by rival traffickers, police and other enemies he has made in his ruthless career.

Most Colombians believe that he surrendered in 1991 because the state was the least threatening of his foes, and the only one willing to protect him.

Since starting out as a car thief in the early 1970s, he allegedly has made a practice of killing those who stood in his way, including policemen, judges, journalists, a justice minister, a supreme court judge and a leading presidential candidate.

Gore, Quayle defend their views on environmental issue

WASHINGTON (NYT) — Sen. Al Gore, the Democratic nominee for vice president, visited a motor oil recycling plant in California last week and extolled tough environmental regulations as the key to increasing the efficiency of business, spurring technological innovation and generating millions of new jobs.

Three days later, Vice President Dan Quayle flew to Columbus, Ohio and delivered a broadside against environmental regulations, declaring that many are unnecessary and that they slow the economy and cost jobs.

The appearances marked the start of a long-percolating debate about the ties between the environment and the economy by two politicians who are polar opposites. Never has the dispute been so fully engaged in a presidential campaign, in part because the ideological foundations have never been defined more clearly by the candidates.

Quayle and other conservatives argue that only by lowering environmental regulatory costs and more fully opening the country's natural resources can industry be expected to thrive in an ever-more-competitive world market.

Colonial black cemetery unearths glimpse of past

NEW YORK (NYT) — When a few human bones were uncovered during work on a federal construction site last summer, they were hardly more than a minor curiosity. But in recent months, as hundreds of skeletons were unearthed, experts have come to conclude that the site in lower Manhattan may be one of the nation's most important archaeological finds of this century.

The site, a colonial-era burial ground mostly for enslaved Africans, was the focus of a political dispute in recent weeks as Mayor David N. Dinkins and others fought successfully to halt a federal construction project. Efforts are being made to designate the cemetery a federal historic site.

Surprisingly preserved more than 20 feet below New York City streets, the Negros Burial Ground, as it was known, is believed to contain the remains of as many as 20,000 people. It once covered roughly five city blocks on the outskirts of 18th-century New York, land one observer described as "unattractive and desolate."

Historians, archaeologists and anthropologists are still trying to assess the find, which they say is the oldest municipal and only pre-Revolutionary African cemetery known to exist in the United States.

But they believe the burial ground will yield a wealth of information on what Laurie Beckelman, chairwoman of the city's Landmarks Preservation Commission, describes as "the daily lives of enslaved Africans for whom there are no other written records."

Anthropologists like Prof. Michael Blakey of Howard University, using the most modern tools, hope to be able to determine what part of Africa the people came from, what their diets were there and in the New World, what their status was in New York City and how they died.

"We can, in a sense, go back to the actual ancestors themselves and glean from what they have left us in their material representation as much of their experience as we can find," Blakey said.

Preliminary studies of the 415 skeletons removed from the site have already revealed much about life in the 18th century. From the number of skeletons of children for instance, experts have estimated that 50 percent of the black population died at birth or in the first few years of life.

The remains are also raising questions about burial customs and whether they were transported from Africa or borrowed from Europeans.

"There are no mass burials here," said Daniel N. Pagano, the city's urban archaeologist. "We know from historic records there were epidemics. There's yellow fever and cholera. But each individual is carefully placed in the ground and with great respect."

Some individuals were buried with coins in their hands or over their eyes. One was buried with a shell next to the head. "That ties into one of the traditional sayings, 'By the sea we came, by the sea we shall go' and was perhaps symbolic of spiritual freedom," Pagano said.

Trade experts predict winners, losers in U.S.-Mexico trade pact

WASHINGTON (AP) — A North American Free Trade Agreement could be a boon to U.S. manufacturers of machinery and telecommunications equipment, trade experts say.

On the downside, a trade pact could hurt some American agribusiness, apparel and textile sectors.

Trade ministers for the United States, Mexico and Canada have been meeting at a Washington hotel since last Sunday in an effort to reach agreement.

"Without seeing the text, I'd say the gainers in the U.S. are going to be the auto companies, auto parts suppliers, capital equipment suppliers, services providers and high-tech," said Colleen Morton, executive director of the U.S. Council of the Mexico-U.S. Business Committee.

She and others said that as the Mexican economy continues to grow and the standards of living improve there will be increased demand for products ranging from automobiles to refrigerators and computers.

"Those are the areas where the Mexican economy has an incredible area of pent-up demand," Ms. Morton said.

In the industrial sector, as new factories are built, Mexico will need heavy equipment such as bulldozers, cranes and environmental protection devices, others said.

"The capital goods sector is a big gainer," said Gary Hufbauer, a trade expert with the Institute for International Economics and co-author of a study on the potential effects of a trade agreement.

"That includes things like heavy trucks, machinery, telecommunications equipment, computers and speciality steels," he said. American producers of upscale consumer goods also stand to gain from freer trade, he said.

But Jeff Faux, president of the Economic Policy Institute and a critic of the proposed free trade agreement, said those capital expenditures would be a one-time deal. Once the new Mexican plants are up and running, the benefits to the United States end, he said.

"I believe that's a short-run advantage," he said. "When those factories get built, the new product coming out of those factories is ... coming right to the U.S."

U.S. Chamber of Commerce vice president Willard Workman said overall the biggest winners potentially are small- and medium-sized businesses. They will have new access to the Mexican market, whereas multinational and large firms already have established a presence there, he said.

Man fakes death for insurance money

BELLINGHAM, Wash. (AP) — A baker who vanished on his way to work, then turned up far from home six weeks later, was trying to fake his death so his family could collect on his life insurance, investigators said.

But when James R. Lang, 37, of Birch Bay found starting a new life too difficult and read in a newspaper that the insurance company wasn't going to pay his wife, he faked amnesia to rejoin his family, authorities said.

Lang confessed the frauds on Friday under questioning by sheriff's investigators, said Whatcom County Undersheriff Dave Wareing.

His disclosure "devastated" Lang's wife, Mary, who was unaware of the scheme and had organized searches for her husband, Wareing said.

Lang is unlikely to be charged with a crime, Wareing said, but will be required to get counseling.

Lang disappeared before dawn on June 12, purportedly headed for work in Bellingham. On July 27 he surfaced in Puyallup, about 150 miles south. He had grown a beard and lost at least 20 pounds. At first he told his wife and doctors he couldn't recall what had happened in the six-week interlude.

Under police questioning, he divulged his ruse.

"He said that he had become so depressed because of a multitude of personal and financial problems that he was driven to the point of suicide," Wareing said.

Not wanting to die, however, Lang planned to stage his death, believing his family could collect on a life insurance policy for nearly $200,000, Wareing said.

"He basically would be able to ride off into the night and create an existence for himself," Wareing said.

So instead of driving for work that June morning, Lang told investigators, he went to the Nooksack River, taking along a bicycle. He dumped the car in the river and peddled off on the bike. From a convenience store he called 911 to report an accident and a car in the river.

When the bicycle broke down, Lang walked and hitchhiked to Tacoma, Wareing said.

You're Welcome, Dan Loftin.

Independent pumper Dan Loftin knows about extra miles. He drives 180 miles a day overseeing operations of 40 wells in Reagan and Glasscock counties.

He counts on companies like Cap Rock Electric to make his job easier and more profitable.

"If a fuse goes out on an electric line, you can't run that well until the line is refused -- and you sure don't want to have to wait two or three days to get that well working again. If the well is served by Cap Rock, the most you're going to have to wait is a day. In most cases, it's just a matter of hours," says Dan.

"They know where every water well and every oil well is located. They know what the problem is, where it's located and how to get it fixed in a hurry," he says. In fact, Dan says, doing business with Cap Rock is "kind of like doing business with family."

It should be. We've been part of the oil field business of West Texas for more than 50 years, serving nearly 6,000 oil wells. In fact, we're the only electric company headquartered in the Permian Basin.

Clinton bus tour courts reporters

EAU CLAIRE, Wis. (NYT) — "We interrupt 'Family Feud' to bring you special coverage," a sober-voiced announcer alerted viewers of WKBT-TV, the CBS affiliate in western Wisconsin.

Was it a war? Was it a tornado? A major address from the Oval Office?

It was Gov. Bill Clinton's made-for-television bus tour, rolling from local media market to media market. The caravan was more than an hour late getting from its hotel to a 9 a.m. rally Friday at a park in La Crosse, Wis., but that did not stop the station from going live for the next 90 minutes.

It was the sort of abundant and friendly coverage that no paid commercial could match. The Bill Clinton-Al Gore bus tour is, in essence, a free commercial on wheels.

At every stop and in between on their three-day trip zigzagging up the Mississippi River, the Democrats were showered with largely uncritical, and often downright enthusiastic, reports from television, radio and newspapers.

Riding the bus may seem like a throwback, but Democrats say it is the wave of the future in presidential campaigns. It is more successful than the conventional hopping from airport to local television studio, a technique perfected by the Republicans and copied by the Democrats to bypass the less flattering national press.

With plenty of air time to fill before the rally in La Crosse, WKBT reporters held forth at the site, describing practically every move made by "Bill and Al," as they were called by the anchor reporter, Julie Nelson.

Even "The Price Is Right" was pre-empted so WKBT could examine pressing questions: Was the caravan always late? Where were the next stops? What did the candidates say? What did they eat? (The restaurant at the hotel was closed when they pulled into La Crosse at 2 a.m. on Friday.)

There was an exclusive interview taped the night before with Tipper Gore, and Adam Schrager, a station reporter who rode the bus for two days, shared with viewers his inside "look at the campaign as few people get to see."

Another reporter at the station, Bill Hoel, offered minute-by-minute updates about what was happening with the caravan, saying at one point: "The interesting question is, of course, if the press bus is here, is the candidate far behind? That's the great unknown."

After a brief pause, he added, "Now, we've been told confidentially they always let a couple of minutes go by, so people can be a little late and still get the full effect."

The major networks eagerly covered the Democrats' first bus tour last month, but only mentioned the second tour in passing. The local press, though, was fascinated.

Police can only play limited role

WASHINGTON (AP) — The American Bar Association's president is attacking the Bush administration's anti-crime strategy, saying that police power can play only a limited role in combating drugs and violent crime.

The administration's constant emphasis of its "war" on drugs "has disturbing implications for constitutionally-set rules of fairness in our justice system," said ABA president Talbot D'Alemberte.

The approach "moves the public away from a real understanding of a terribly complex (social) problem and will not lead to long-term improvements in this area," he added.

D'Alemberte made the comments in letters to Bush and Democratic presidential candidate Bill Clinton. The ABA released copies of the letters Friday.

D'Alemberte said a recent Justice Department report on violent crime is flawed because it ignores the social causes of violent crime.

The department's report fails to recognize "the critical need for drug treatment in our prisons to stop cycles of drug abuse and crime," D'Alemberte stated in the letters.

The ABA also issued a report on bias on the nation's justice system.

It concluded that the disproportionately high number of blacks and other ethnic minorities in the nation's prisons "is linked to poverty and the lack of family structure and education that plague the lives of the urban poor."

Nation in brief

■ Woman settles AIDS lawsuit with hospital

SAN DIEGO — A woman injected with a syringe that had been used on an AIDS patient in a hospital mix-up two years ago has settled her lawsuit against the hospital for $1 million, a newspaper reported Saturday.

The amount of the settlement wasn't made public but appeared in documents obtained by The San Diego Union-Tribune.

The mix-up occurred in September 1990, when the 23-year-old woman was at Mercy Hospital seeking treatment for back pain. A technician mistakenly used a syringe that had been used on an AIDS patient.

It was not disclosed whether the woman has the virus.

Documents related to the settlement indicate the woman received $600,000 at the time of the settlement May 11 and will get $2,300 a month. The payments remaining after her death within a 20-year period will go to the person she designates.

■ Boy hears gunfire that kills state legislator

YAZOO CITY, Miss. — A state legislator died after being found in his yard with a gunshot wound to the head, authorities said Saturday.

Rep. Joel Netherland, 56, a Republican, was found shot in his yard Friday afternoon after a neighbor boy heard the gunfire. The lawmaker later was pronounced dead at St. Dominic-Jackson Memorial Hospital.

A autopsy was performed Saturday, but results were not immediately available. The cause of the shooting wasn't known, officials said.

"We are still investigating the situation," said Lt. Michael Wallace. "No details will be released until we have all our questions answered."

Netherland had served in the legislature since 1984 and was chairman of the House Game and Fish Committee, which oversees wildlife issues.

■ Counselors refuse to submit confidential records

TRAVERSE CITY, Mich. — Sexual assault counselors say they are ready to risk jail or fines and defy a court order to turn over records from confidential sessions with a 14-year-old girl.

The Michigan Supreme Court instructed a judge to examine the records for evidence that might raise doubt about the guilt of the man convicted of raping the girl.

Victims' rights advocates worry the order may jeopardize a Michigan law that makes communications between sexual assault victims and counselors inadmissible in court without the victim's permission.

"If this stands, it will discourage victims from getting counseling because they'll know everything they say could end up in court," said Suzanne Kensington, executive director of the Women's Center in Marquette.

"Why the hell would they come in? I certainly would not," she said Friday.

Quayle claims Clinton will cause job loss

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Vice President Dan Quayle charged Friday that Democratic candidate Bill Clinton's economic, tax and regulatory policies would put up to two million Americans out of work.

Quayle, on the second and final day of a campaign swing through Ohio, was using the same cudgel that President Bush employed Thursday that the Clinton campaign was quick to counter.

Faced with GOP attacks on his economic policy, Clinton said during his campaign's stop in Iowa Thursday that his plan would result in one million new jobs for each of the next four years.

Quayle also boasted that "during the '12 long years' our opponents talk about, median family income increased by 8.4 percent." But his aides later admitted that income has been flat during Bush's 3 1/2 years in the White House.

Quayle, addressing a conservative business group, put a negative spin on Clinton's health care, budget and tax proposals as well as environmental ideas suggested by running mate Al Gore in a recent, best-selling book, "Earth in the Balance: Ecology and the Human Spirit."

"When you add up their entire package — their proposed cuts in the defense budget, their federal government-mandated programs, their family leave mandates, their training tax and all the rest — they're talking about a loss of almost two million jobs in a year," Quayle claimed.

'When you add up their entire package — their proposed cuts in the defense budget, their federal government-mandated programs, their family leave mandates, their training tax and all the rest — they're talking about a loss of almost two million jobs in a year.'

—Dan Quayle

His staff produced figures from the Republican staff of the Joint Economic Committee as well as some think tanks to buttress the attack.

The committee's majority staff later in the day issued a seven-page statement taking issue with the GOP effort, saying their work "makes up programs which are not part of the Clinton plan and then attributes job losses to these fabrications."

The analysis of the Republican critique also said it relies on erroneous statistics, systematically understates the positive impact of provisions while exaggerating the negative and fails to acknowledge that spending on various programs will create jobs.

The Clinton camp sought to blunt Quayle's criticisms, which followed by a day Bush's charge that Clinton would impose "the largest tax increase in American history."

Clinton adviser George Stephanopoulos said Thursday that the Republicans were misrepresenting the Democratic plan, and noted that the private economy has lost 82,000 jobs in Bush's term while Arkansas, under Clinton's leadership, has created over 85,000.

Bush himself, in his 1990 deficit reduction deal with Congress, raised taxes by $165 billion over five years.

Quayle said Clinton's advocacy of a 1.5 percent payroll tax to worker training would cost $50 billion a year and 175,000 to 350,000 jobs over five years. A 7 percent health insurance tax "will cost some 710,000 Americans their jobs."

Alison Gertz, AIDS activist, dies at age 26

NEW YORK (AP) — Alison Gertz, who said she contracted the AIDS virus during her first sexual encounter at age 16 — and who publicized her misfortune to show that anyone can be at risk — died Saturday. She was 26.

Miss Gertz, whose story was told in the television movie "Something To Live For," died at her parents' home in Westhampton Beach, Long Island, according to friends of the family.

She said she was exposed to the human immunodeficiency virus the first time she had sex and that she only had sex once with the partner who infected her.

She was not diagnosed until she was 22, long after her health began to decline.

She blamed the delay on what she said was doctors' assumptions that an affluent heterosexual woman wasn't at great risk of acquiring HIV.

Have ball, will travel

Midland Lee to open fall workouts, prepare for lengthy road trips

By Terry Williamson
Sports editor

The Midland Lee football team has nine consecutive trips to the state playoffs under its belt, but if the Rebels want to finish the decade in the style in which they have become accustomed, they literally have miles and miles to travel.

The short trip is to the Lee fieldhouse Monday as two-a-day workouts begin at 9 a.m. and 4 p.m. Since Lee didn't participate in spring training drills, the Rebs have an extra week and an extra scrimmage to play with before the season starts.

Midland High cannot begin workouts until Aug. 17 because the Bulldogs did have spring training.

'One thing is for sure, our kids get to see the world when they play football at Midland Lee.'

— Ronnie Stephens, Midland Lee offensive line coach

Lee can't put on full pads, however, until Friday. They have already been issued equipment they will need to start practice Monday, which is helmets, shoes, socks and T-shirt. Conditioning is the major word for the first four days.

Lee will hold its first scrimmage on Aug. 29 at 10 a.m. in Sonora against San Antonio Clark. That's where the travel part starts. Lee will have its second scrimmage on Aug. 29 against El Paso Jefferson at 10 a.m. in Van Horn. The season starts Sept. 4 at El Paso Andress. In round numbers, that's somewhere in the range of 1,700 miles.

"One thing is for sure," Ronnie Stephens, Lee offensive line coach, said Saturday, "Our kids get to see the world when they play football at Midland Lee.

"We ended the season last year with trips to Wichita Falls and Lubbock. We also had a trip to Amarillo. That basically means that we have long road games in five of six weeks."

When the Andress travel is complete, Lee will have close to 3,000 miles of travel in its last six outings.

"We've looked at it hard, and it still seems better this way than what we had last year when we had games to Amarillo and Del Rio on consecutive weeks before opening district play. At least we are at home two weeks before opening district play (against Midland High on Sept. 25)."

With three teams again making the playoffs, Lee should be in good shape to complete 10 solid years in the state playoffs, a mark that no other 4-5A team can claim. Lee is picked as high as No. 14 in the state and is in nearly all Top 25 rankings.

Angels batter Diablos

■ Midland explodes for seven runs in the second inning and increases its league lead with an 8-3 win over El Paso.

By Joe Wyatt
Staff writer

Seldom seen since July, Midland's elusive offensive firepower came out of hiding ever so briefly, but oh so decisively, Saturday night at Angels Stadium.

Midland, batting just .178 as a team in the month of August, exploded for seven hits and seven runs in the second inning and easily beat El Paso, 8-3.

The victory — coupled with Wichita's 2-1 loss at San Antonio — increases Midland's lead in the Texas League West to 3½ games over both the Wranglers and the Missions.

The Diablos, with the help of Midland lefthander Hilly Hathaway, slipped into the division cellar with the loss, four games off the pace.

Hathaway raised his record to 5-1 with 7⅔ innings of seven-hit work. He issued just one walk — bringing his season total through 71⅓ innings to seven — and he allowed only two singles through the first six innings as Midland dropped the Diablos for the second straight night.

Edgar Alfonzo used a three-run homer to put the finishing touches on the big inning, a frame that El Paso starter Steve Sparks never finished, and one the Angels never came close to repeating.

Busters, Lightning dancing

By Terry Williamson
Sports editor

Things are getting tough at the Bill Williams Softball Complex as the National ASA Under-14 Girls Fast Pitch Softball tournament heads into the final day of play, but things aren't completely out of hand.

For instance, the tournament favorite Orange County Bat Busters of Garden Grove, Calif., are still unbeaten and one of the two teams left in the tournament without a loss. But it is getting tougher.

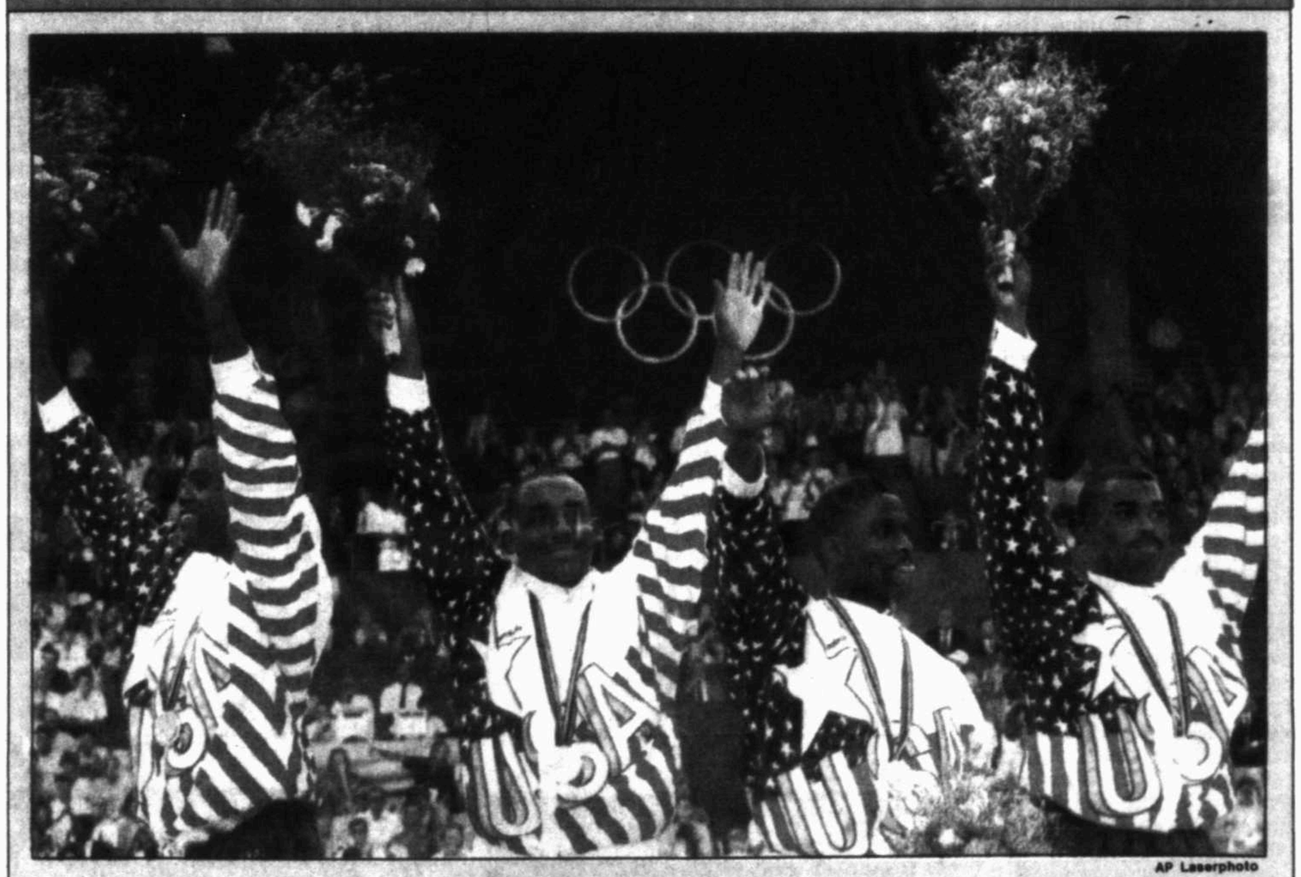

The Bat Busters outscored opponents by a 35-0 margin in their first four games. The St. Louis Foxes couldn't stop the Buster win streak, but they did scored two runs in a 6-2 loss. At least, the Busters will not go home unscored upon.

The Bat Busters exploded to an early 3-0 first inning lead off the Foxes in business as usual, but the Foxes came back with both of its runs in the bottom of the inning. Katie Haornburg walked and later scored on a Buster error and Stephanie Caldwell produced an RBI single to cut the margin to 3-2. That was as close as it got.

Still, the Busters are drawing the crowds. The stands were full up and down the lines for the game between the Bat Busters and the Foxes. On Saturday night, estimated crowds of near 7,000 at-

I like pro basketball a lot, and Charles Barkley has been my favorite player for a long time. He's a pragmatic athlete who approaches his high-paying, glamorous job the way a good mechanic would approach a Rolls-Royce that needs a lube job or a new muffler, which is to say, with a maximum of skill and a minimum of respect.

The fact that the dominant image to come out of the Summer Olympics has been, for me at least, that of Barkley throwing an elbow into an Angolan player roughly half his weight depresses me. But then, the entire business of the so-called Dream Team has depressed me. I don't even care whose duds they wore when they accepted their medals. Reebok? Nike? They can wear polyester from K Mart and white belts, for all it means to me.

Will I be able to go on rooting for Barkley next season? I think so, if I keep in mind the fact that he had no business being in Barcelona to begin with, and his recent statements suggest that Barkley has realized this, too. The only player who does belong in Barcelona is the one who has gotten the least amount of playing time, Christian Laettner. Remember those sports-page cartoons during the prelims that showed him carrying the other players' luggage? If the sports fans of America needed a warning that the Dream Team was a nightmare waiting to happen, surely that was it.

I'd go so far as to say that these high-salaried, promotion-conscious pros, with their baggage of bad court habits, loud mouths, and absolutely staggering basketball skills, can serve as a perfectly apt epilogue to the last 12 years of American life, when the almighty buck swamped just about everyone's principles, when the deal became more important than the game, and any sane discussion of ath-

■ Woman settles AIDS lawsuit with hospital

SAN DIEGO — A woman injected with a syringe that had been used on an AIDS patient in a hospital mix-up two years ago has settled her lawsuit against the hospital for $1 million, a newspaper reported Saturday.

The amount of the settlement wasn't made public but appeared in documents obtained by The San Diego Union-Tribune.

The mix-up occurred in September 1990, when the 23-year-old woman was at Mercy Hospital seeking treatment for back pain. A technician mistakenly used a syringe that had been used on an AIDS patient.

It was not disclosed whether the woman has the virus.

Documents related to the settlement indicate the woman received $600,000 at the time of the settlement May 11 and will get $2,300 a month. The payments remaining after her death within a 20-year period will go to the person she designates.

■ Boy hears gunfire that kills state legislator

YAZOO CITY, Miss. — A state legislator died after being found in his yard with a gunshot wound to the head, authorities said Saturday.

Rep. Joel Netherland, 56, a Republican, was found shot in his yard Friday afternoon after a neighbor boy heard the gunfire. The lawmaker later was pronounced dead at St. Dominic-Jackson Memorial Hospital.

A autopsy was performed Saturday, but results were not immediately available. The cause of the shooting wasn't known, officials said.

"We are still investigating the situation," said Lt. Michael Wallace. "No details will be released until we have all our questions answered."

Netherland had served in the legislature since 1984 and was chairman of the House Game and Fish Committee, which oversees wildlife issues.

■ Counselors refuse to submit confidential records

TRAVERSE CITY, Mich. — Sexual assault counselors say they are ready to risk jail or fines and defy a court order to turn over records from confidential sessions with a 14-year-old girl.

The Michigan Supreme Court instructed a judge to examine the records for evidence that might raise doubt about the guilt of the man convicted of raping the girl.

Victims' rights advocates worry the order may jeopardize a Michigan law that makes communications between sexual assault victims and counselors inadmissible in court without the victim's permission.

"If this stands, it will discourage victims from getting counseling because they'll know everything they say could end up in court," said Suzanne Kensington, executive director of the Women's Center in Marquette.

"Why the hell would they come in? I certainly would not," she said Friday.

Quayle claims Clinton will cause job loss

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Vice President Dan Quayle charged Friday that Democratic candidate Bill Clinton's economic, tax and regulatory policies would put up to two million Americans out of work.

Quayle, on the second and final day of a campaign swing through Ohio, was using the same cudgel that President Bush employed Thursday that the Clinton campaign was quick to counter.

Faced with GOP attacks on his economic policy, Clinton said during his campaign's stop in Iowa Thursday that his plan would result in one million new jobs for each of the next four years.

Quayle also boasted that "during the '12 long years' our opponents talk about, median family income increased by 8.4 percent." But his aides later admitted that income has been flat during Bush's 3 1/2 years in the White House.

Quayle, addressing a conservative business group, put a negative spin on Clinton's health care, budget and tax proposals as well as environmental ideas suggested by running mate Al Gore in a recent, best-selling book, "Earth in the Balance: Ecology and the Human Spirit."

"When you add up their entire package — their proposed cuts in the defense budget, their federal government-mandated programs, their family leave mandates, their training tax and all the rest — they're talking about a loss of almost two million jobs in a year," Quayle claimed.

'When you add up their entire package — their proposed cuts in the defense budget, their federal government-mandated programs, their family leave mandates, their training tax and all the rest — they're talking about a loss of almost two million jobs in a year.'

—Dan Quayle

His staff produced figures from the Republican staff of the Joint Economic Committee as well as some think tanks to buttress the attack.

The committee's majority staff later in the day issued a seven-page statement taking issue with the GOP effort, saying their work "makes up programs which are not part of the Clinton plan and then attributes job losses to these fabrications."

The analysis of the Republican critique also said it relies on erroneous statistics, systematically understates the positive impact of provisions while exaggerating the negative and fails to acknowledge that spending on various programs will create jobs.

The Clinton camp sought to blunt Quayle's criticisms, which followed by a day Bush's charge that Clinton would impose "the largest tax increase in American history."

Clinton adviser George Stephanopoulos said Thursday that the Republicans were misrepresenting the Democratic plan, and noted that the private economy has lost 82,000 jobs in Bush's term while Arkansas, under Clinton's leadership, has created over 85,000.

Bush himself, in his 1990 deficit reduction deal with Congress, raised taxes by $165 billion over five years.

Quayle said Clinton's advocacy of a 1.5 percent payroll tax to worker training would cost $50 billion a year and 175,000 to 350,000 jobs over five years. A 7 percent health insurance tax "will cost some 710,000 Americans their jobs."

NEW YORK (AP) — Alison Gertz, who said she contracted the AIDS virus during her first sexual encounter at age 16 — and who publicized her misfortune to show that anyone can be at risk — died Saturday. She was 26.

Miss Gertz, whose story was told in the television movie "Something To Live For," died at her parents' home in Westhampton Beach, Long Island, according to friends of the family.

She said she was exposed to the human immunodeficiency virus the first time she had sex and that she only had sex once with the partner who infected her.

She was not diagnosed until she was 22, long after her health began to decline.

She blamed the delay on what she said was doctors' assumptions that an affluent heterosexual woman wasn't at great risk of acquiring HIV.

Midland Lee to open fall workouts, prepare for lengthy road trips

By Terry Williamson
Sports editor

The Midland Lee football team has nine consecutive trips to the state playoffs under its belt, but if the Rebels want to finish the decade in the style in which they have become accustomed, they literally have miles and miles to travel.

The short trip is to the Lee fieldhouse Monday as two-a-day workouts begin at 9 a.m. and 4 p.m. Since Lee didn't participate in spring training drills, the Rebs have an extra week and an extra scrimmage to play with before the season starts.

Midland High cannot begin workouts until Aug. 17 because the Bulldogs did have spring training.

'One thing is for sure, our kids get to see the world when they play football at Midland Lee.'

— Ronnie Stephens, Midland Lee offensive line coach

Lee can't put on full pads, however, until Friday. They have already been issued equipment they will need to start practice Monday, which is helmets, shoes, socks and T-shirt. Conditioning is the major word for the first four days.

Lee will hold its first scrimmage on Aug. 29 at 10 a.m. in Sonora against San Antonio Clark. That's where the travel part starts. Lee will have its second scrimmage on Aug. 29 against El Paso Jefferson at 10 a.m. in Van Horn. The season starts Sept. 4 at El Paso Andress. In round numbers, that's somewhere in the range of 1,700 miles.

"One thing is for sure," Ronnie Stephens, Lee offensive line coach, said Saturday, "Our kids get to see the world when they play football at Midland Lee.

"We ended the season last year with trips to Wichita Falls and Lubbock. We also had a trip to Amarillo. That basically means that we have long road games in five of six weeks."

When the Andress travel is complete, Lee will have close to 3,000 miles of travel in its last six outings.

"We've looked at it hard, and it still seems better this way than what we had last year when we had games to Amarillo and Del Rio on consecutive weeks before opening district play. At least we are at home two weeks before opening district play (against Midland High on Sept. 25)."

With three teams again making the playoffs, Lee should be in good shape to complete 10 solid years in the state playoffs, a mark that no other 4-5A team can claim. Lee is picked as high as No. 14 in the state and is in nearly all Top 25 rankings.

Angels batter Diablos

■ Midland explodes for seven runs in the second inning and increases its league lead with an 8-3 win over El Paso.

By Joe Wyatt
Staff writer

Seldom seen since July, Midland's elusive offensive firepower came out of hiding ever so briefly, but oh so decisively, Saturday night at Angels Stadium.

Midland, batting just .178 as a team in the month of August, exploded for seven hits and seven runs in the second inning and easily beat El Paso, 8-3.

The victory — coupled with Wichita's 2-1 loss at San Antonio — increases Midland's lead in the Texas League West to 3⅓ games over both the Wranglers and the Missions.

The Diablos, with the help of Midland lefthander Hilly Hathaway, slipped into the division cellar with the loss, four games off the pace.

Hathaway raised his record to 5-1 with 7⅔ innings of seven-hit work. He issued just one walk — bringing his season total through 71⅓ innings to seven — and he allowed only two singles through the first six innings as Midland dropped the Diablos for the second straight night.

Edgar Alfonzo used a three-run homer to put the finishing touches on the big inning, a frame that El Paso starter Steve Sparks never finished, and one the Angels never came close to repeating.

Busters, Lightning dancing

By Terry Williamson

Things are getting tough at the Bill Williams Softball Complex as the National ASA Under-14 Girls Fast Pitch Softball tournament heads into the final day of play, but things aren't completely out of hand.

For instance, the tournament favorite Orange County Bat Busters of Garden Grove, Calif., are still unbeaten and one of the two teams left in the tournament without a loss. But it is getting tougher.

The Bat Busters outscored opponents by a 35-0 margin in their first four games. The St. Louis Foxes couldn't stop the Buster win streak, but they did scored two runs in a 6-2 loss. At least, the Busters will not go home unscored upon.

The Bat Busters exploded to an early 3-0 first inning lead off the Foxes in business as usual, but the Foxes came back with both of its runs in the bottom of the inning. Katie Haornburg walked and later scored on a Buster error and Stephanie Caldwell produced an RBI single to cut the margin to 3-2. That was as close as it got.

Still, the Busters are drawing the crowds. The stands were full up and down the lines for the game between the Bat Busters and the Foxes. On Saturday night, estimated crowds of near 7,000 at-

ANGELS: Alfonzo caps big inning with three-run homer

(From 1B)

Midland got just two base hits and had but three baserunners after the second inning.

But wasting not, the Angels did not want for runs after the early going.

Midland jumped all over Sparks, a knuckleballer, who fell to 8-8. Sparks, working on just three days rest after going 4⅓ innings on Wednesday against San Antonio, was touched for six straight hits with one out in the telling inning. RBI doubles by Bobby Jones and Terry Taylor gave Sparks the rest of the night off.

"Hey, we just ran into some good pitching over in Wichita and it happened to be at the start of the month," Angels' coach Nate Oliver put the August numbers into perspective. "We're a much better hitting team than the first few games in August might show."

Indeed, Midland entered Saturday's game with a .255 team batting average, fourth in the TL.

"We started sitting back and waiting on the pitches tonight and that's what you have to do, especially against a knuckleballer," Oliver said. "Knuckleballs tend to duck and sink, and you have to keep your head down on them and try to take them to the opposite field, which is what we were able to do."

Alfonzo's shot over the left-field wall was his third of the season and came off reliever Tim Dell, who inherited runners at the corners left by Sparks.

Hathaway was up to the task of holding the cushion. He faced just two batters over the minimum number for six innings.

And J.R. Phillips padded Midland's lead to 8-0 with a ground ball to the right side that scored Alfonzo in the fifth inning. Alfonzo got aboard when he was hit by a Tim Dell pitch.

But El Paso managed single runs in the seventh and eighth innings to take Hathaway out of the game. John Byington's RBI single to left field brought the Diablos to within 8-2 and signaled shower time for Hathaway.

The Diablos capped the scoring with a single run off of Ken Edenfield in the ninth.

Game 4 of the five-game series begins at 6 p.m. today with Hall of Famer Bob Feller to put on a pitching exhibition against some of the city's better swingers.

Woodforde moves to Volvo finals

Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Top-seeded Aaron Krickstein suffered a serious foot injury and retired from his semifinal match Saturday night, sending unseeded Australian Mark Woodforde into Sunday's final of the $260,000 Volvo Tennis-Los Angeles tournament against second-seeded Richard Krajicek of The Netherlands.

ATP tour trainer Bill Norris said a preliminary examination indicated a possible fracture of the fifth metatarsal or a sprained ligament in Krickstein's left foot when he landed after reaching for a ball down the line. Krickstein has a history of foot problems.

He immediately went down in pain and was unable to put pressure on the foot. He had to be helped off the court, left the training room of the Los Angeles Tennis Center in a wheelchair and was driven across the street to UCLA Medical Center for X-rays.

Woodforde, who led 4-2 in the first set at the time of the injury, later played in the doubles semifinal and his partner was Sunday's singles opponent, Krajicek, who won his singles semifinal Saturday against Sandon Stolle 6-2, 6-4.

"I feel sorry for Aaron. It was unfortunate, but I'll take it any way I can," Woodforde said. "It's a bad break for him, but a good one for me."

Woodforde, ranked 91st in the world, controlled the match from the start and will now play one of the big servers in the game. Krajicek finished off his victory with a 127 mph ace, his 10th of the match.

The victory for Krajicek avenged an earlier loss to Stolle in an Australian Open qualifying match at Adelaide last year. This was the first time Stolle had gotten as far as the semifinals of a regular tour event. Krajicek is ranked 15th in the world compared to Stolle, who is 85th.

The big-serving Krajicek, 20, took control of the match in the first game when he broke the serve of the 22-year-old Stolle, son of Australian champion Fred Stolle.

Krajicek has the fastest serve of the year on the men's tour, 132 mph at Indian Wells, and his 127 mph winner against Stolle was the fastest of this tournament.

"I wanted to hit it hard, but maybe I shouldn't have done it," Krajicek said. "I'll see how my shoulder feels tomorrow. It's fun for the crowd and fun for me, but if I can't lift my shoulder tomorrow, it's not so much fun."

Krajicek repeated earlier comments that he no longer is serving 100 percent on every serve in order to protect a sometimes tender shoulder and to expand his game.

"Once I held back, I saw that it's easier to win when my serve is a little less," he said. "A higher percentage of serves in is good."

Stolle admired Krajicek's strategy as well as his ability.

"His serve is too big," Stolle said. "He got me early and got me off to a shaky beginning. Then he kept on coming. I should have done what he did, step up and give him a scare. He got on top and that was it."

Barcelona is sweetness to Carl Lewis

BARCELONA, Spain — A split second after Dennis Mitchell perfectly slapped the baton into his trailing left hand, 100 meters from the finish of his third and most improbable Olympics, Carl Lewis hollered with joy.

"Yes!" he screamed. And, even with arms and legs pumping furiously, an ear-to-ear smile crossed his face. And again: "Yes!"

You might have thought those shining teeth merely reflected the grimace of effort. Or the strain of his incredible acceleration, unmatched by any other human. Not so. The former University of Houston standout was flying on wings of laughter. And with each lengthening stride, he was leaving an indelible stamp in the annals of the Summer Games.

He came to Barcelona predicting a world record. He got one, as well as a gold medal, he never expected. Now he has eight golds and a silver. No American track athlete has ever done better.

Mitchell had given him a one-stride lead over runners from Britain, Nigeria and Cuba in the men's 400-meter relay. End of contest. That's like spotting the Dream Team 50 points before tipoff. Carl Lewis, with 70,000 people standing in throaty appreciation, finished six strides ahead of the Nigerian who put his team second.

Time: 37.40 seconds. World record. And the 31-year-old Lewis, who had expected to compete only in the long jump after a virus doomed him in the sprints at the U.S. trials, had a second gold medal of the Barcelona Games.

Mitchell, Leroy Burrell and Mike Marsh — the men who, in New Orleans, had edged him out of the individual sprints — shared the relay honors. But none ran faster on this night than Lewis, who had made the team only because of the Achilles rupture suffered by Mark Witherspoon a week ago.

Mitchell himself had hollered at Lewis just before the handoff. "I was telling him, 'They're coming! They're coming! They're coming!'" Mitchell said. "You better run! You better run! You better run!'"

"Yes!" came the joyful rejoinder.

"That's exactly what I said," Lewis said. "When I first got it, I did scream. That was helping me bring focus to running fast. I put my hand back, the baton was there, and I was saying, 'We have the gold medal.'"

After flashing across the line, Lewis eased to a trot, then leapt straight up, again and again, when the world record was posted on the scoreboard. Pumping his arms several times, he then threw the baton into the crowd, turned and embraced his teammates.

"That finish line was the most special of them all," Lewis said, laughing again. "Because getting the record is incredible. It's definitely the one."

The mark broke the standard of 37.50 set by the United States at last year's world championships in Tokyo. That team was the same as the current record-setters, except Andre Cason, not Marsh, ran the leadoff.

ASA: Controversy hits Lightning, Force Pink game

tended games at Angels Stadium and the Bill Williams Complex. The two stadiums are less than ½-mile apart.

The Lightning of San Diego is the only other unbeaten team left and this came as little surprise that the two California teams are meeting for the right to earn a finals berth at 8 a.m. today.

However, there was some controversy in the Lightning's 4-3 win that sent Force Pink of Fresno, Calif., into the losers' bracket Saturday night.

The Lightning struck for all four of its runs in an error-filled first inning by the Force Pink. Then came the sixth inning.

Kellie Wigington of the Force team bunted with runners at first and third bases. By the time Lightning quit throwing the ball around, all three had scored. However, interference was called and Force Pink was charged with an out and one runner sent back to third. Instead of a tie game at 4-4, Lightning led by a 4-2 margin. Force Pink protested the game.

But it is Lightning and Bat Busters going for what is considered one of the key games of the tournament at 8 a.m. The winner will earn a 1 p.m. finals berth while the other will have to go down into the losers' bracket.

Late Saturday four teams were left in the losers' bracket and six will be around to challenge for the championship today.

Associated Press

WICHITA FALLS — Brian Smith of Flower Mound Marcus had 72 yards receiving Saturday to lead Texas high school football All-Stars past top Oklahoma schoolboys 24-7 in the annual Oil Bowl.

Texas ended a two-year losing streak and extended its lead in the overall series pitting graduated seniors from the two states to 34-12-1. Oklahoma beat Texas 21-7 last year and 20-0 in 1990.

The fourth quarter began 7-7, but Texas took the lead on the period's first play when Miller Spessard of Burkburnett kicked a 42-yard field goal.

Wesley McKnight of Wellington added a 17-yard touchdown run and Vincent Prox of Mabank scored on a 21-yard run later in the quarter.

Smith, who had four catches for 72 yards, was named the game's most valuable offensive player. His teammate Edwin Feaster of Wichita Falls Hirschi was the defensive MVP.

Oklahoma scored first on a one-yard run by Wes Galloway of Clinton. The drive was set up when the Oklahoma recovered a botched punt snap at the Texas 12-yard line.

Texas came back late in the second quarter as quarterback Stormy Case of Odessa Permian found Smith.

KING: The Dream Team was a 'bad dream, bad idea'

letics and what they mean disappeared into a welter of Chroma-Key effects, slow motion, and game-diagram supers, all before fading into the next beer ad, naturally.

If I sound angry, I am. The stated philosophy of Davy Crockett, at least according to the Walt Disney myth many of us aging baby boomers absorbed in the days of youth, was "be sure you are right, then go ahead." As we approach the end of this century, the motto has become a good deal less idealistic: "Be sure you are going to win, then go ahead."

The so-called Dream Team is the perfect encore for all those folks who loved the United States versus Grenada, the United States versus Panama, and, of course, the United States versus Iraq (that last one was a little tougher; on a level with, say, the basketball team's 115-77 spanking of Puerto Rico last Tuesday).

In Iraq, we had smart bombs that guided themselves right through the doors of enemy hangers before exploding; in Barcelona we had Magic Johnson, Michael Jordan, Scottie Pippen, and Charles Barkley: basketball smart bombs, if you will. In both Iraq and Barcelona, we wheeled out the very best the richest country in the world could provide, and once again — surprise, surprise — we flattened the competition. No one took a chance of — oh, gasp! — losing. And there are a lot of folks in America who have come very much to enjoy winning over the last few years, and if that means the big guys beating up on the little guys, why, so be it.

There are a lot of sportswriters in this country who wax thunderously righteous when this big-guys-versus-the-little-guys argument is raised. Why, we've been the little guys for years! they cry. What about all those years when the Eastern bloc countries were machine-tooling their Olympic athletes, using them as advertisements for their Horrible, Godless Way of Life (and probably pumping them full of steroids and other drugs in the bargain), and our brave athletes were being sent to the Games on nickels and dimes raised at community car washes and baked-good sales? Then they were being sent to be more or less buried?

Yes, all right. There are lots of American sports fans — and I am one — who remember being ashamed of the relatively few medals American athletes brought back from the Olympic Games in previous years. But surely we must realize from our current understanding of how others were approaching the Games in the years between the end of World War II and the collapse of communism in Europe that our failure to haul home medals by the carload had nothing to do with any physical or moral failing on our part; it was just that these other countries were approaching these supposedly amateur competitions with a nearly hysterical determination to win.

The so-called Dream Team is the perfect encore for all those folks who loved the United States versus Grenada, the United States versus Panama, and, of course, the United States versus Iraq.

— Stephen King

The way the United States has begun to approach them, in other words.

The sportswriters who like to think of themselves as pragmatists (and there are a surprising number of them) tell us to grow up, tell us that most of the other teams our men's basketball team faces at the Olympics are made up of pros, and if we expect to win, we must do the same. Those who espouse this view do so as if it really makes sense, but suppose their kids came home from school saying they wanted to smoke a little rope or maybe shoot a little crack, because it's how their peers are keeping up with the old homework rat-race? For a country that supposedly believes in individualism, I find this an extremely peculiar line of argument and justification.

The simple fact is this: In the last 12 years — the Reagan-Bush years — a lot of affluent Americans have gotten hooked on winning. Most of them come from my own generation, I'm terribly ashamed to say; a generation which, in the words of Jackson Browne, "started out so young and strong, only to surrender."

We baby boomers have sold out on a lot of fronts since we stood in the rain at Woodstock, yelling the Fish Cheer; is it any wonder that we eventually sold out our athletic principles as well? For every college basketball fan who ever apologized for Jerry Tarkanian, for every pro football fan who sees nothing wrong with a few 'roids, for every baseball fan who has learned to shout "Mattingly, you stink," instead of "Get him next time" — this Dream Team's for you, Bud.

Perhaps we need to look to our Olympic baseball team to remind ourselves of a very simple truth: There's nothing wrong with losing if you played your best guys and put out a hundred percent, and if that sounds corny to you, my friend, I submit that you are part of the problem.

We need to rethink the basic purpose of Olympic competition, and we might start by going back to where we came in: Charles Barkley and that thrown elbow. "It's a ghetto thing," Barkley opined when questioned about the incident later.

Well, no, Charles, — actually, it's "an amateur-competition thing." It's "a sportsmanship thing." And, corny as it might sound to an electorate who has a man who had vowed "I intend to win at any price" as its president, it might even be "a world-peace thing."

But if you don't want to admit world peace into your scenario, think how embarrassing it is to have all these millionaire athletes squabbling about what brand of sportswear they're going to have on when they get their medals. Think about how the Dream Team stayed in Monte Carlo as they tuned up for the Games, and how the Angolans slept in high school gymnasiums and ate at Burger Kings when they toured this country. And if those things aren't enough to make you feel a flush of shame, try to remember how excited you were, how thrilled and happily disbelieving you were, when the American hockey team came from nowhere to stun the Russians at Lake Placid.

Does it give you pause to know that most of the world would react that way if our team of basketball bounty hunters had happened to be upset in Barcelona? It was a bad idea. No one likes to risk sounding like a Boy Scout by coming right out and saying it, but I will, just this once: Sliding away from sound ideals in favor of fast results is always a bad idea. Whether it's basketball or bonds, junk is still junk, and a sellout is still a sellout.

It was a bad idea, a bad dream, if you will. Let's not do it again.

GAMES: De La Hoya saves boxing

(From 1B)

Wake up, America. The dream is finally over. On Saturday, the Dream Team stopped by the Palau d'Esports to pick up the medal it won two months ago, when it was first assembled.

"I love you, mom, I'll be in Alabama soon," Charles Barkley yelled, and that was about all there was to the celebration. The Dream Team walked off the court, job done.

It was a day of triumph and disappointment for America, and a day when the last vestige of the old Soviet sports machine stubbornly refused to pass the baton of Olympic supremacy to the United States.

With just one day left in the Games, the Unified Team led the United States 109-105 in total medals. The Unies had 45 golds, America 37.

While the United States and Unified Team battled for the medals lead, Spain celebrated a little of its own Olympic prowess Saturday.

Winner of only four medals at Seoul in 1988, the home team had two gold, including a 3-2 soccer victory over Poland, and three silver Saturday, and beat the powerhouse American team in the water polo semifinals. That gives Spain 13 golds and 20 medals overall.

"This is the most important day of my life," said Spain's Fermin Cacho, winner of the men's 1,500 meters. "I think I've lived up to everybody's expectations."

The relay gold was sublime redemption for Lewis, the 100-meter world record-holder who failed one month ago to even make the Olympic team in his specialty. He now has two gold medals here and eight in his glorious career.

"After the worst month of my life competitively, I could never imagine the Olympics ending with two gold medals and a world record," Lewis said.

Lewis, who won the long jump Thursday, only got on the relay team because of an injury to Mark Witherspoon.

He took the final exchange from Dennis Mitchell with about a one-step lead over Nigeria. As he released the baton, Mitchell spread his arms, then held them out toward Lewis, thumbs up and index fingers aimed at the middle of Lewis' back. The thumbs snapped down. Bang!

Lewis was gone like a shot, crossing the line 6 meters in front after running the last 100 meters in less than 9 seconds.

Mike Marsh of Los Angeles, who won the 200 meters on Wednesday, ran the first 100-meter leg, Leroy Burrell of Houston was next, then Mitchell, of Gainesville, Fla., who actually gave the Americans the lead.

Their time of 37.40 seconds took .10 off the world record set at the world championships last September in Tokyo by Andre Cason, Burrell, Mitchell and Lewis.

A U.S. team of Andrew Valmon of Bloomfield, N.J., Quincy Watts of Inglewood, Calif., Michael Johnson of Waco, Texas, and Steve Lewis, of Santa Monica, Calif., ran the 1,600 relay in 2:55.74. The previous mark of 2:56.16 was set by the United States at the 1968 Olympics and equaled in 1988.

Valmon got the team off to a strong start, and Watts, who won the 400 on Wednesday, finished his leg with a 10-meter lead. Johnson added about 5 more meters, and Lewis ran away from the field.

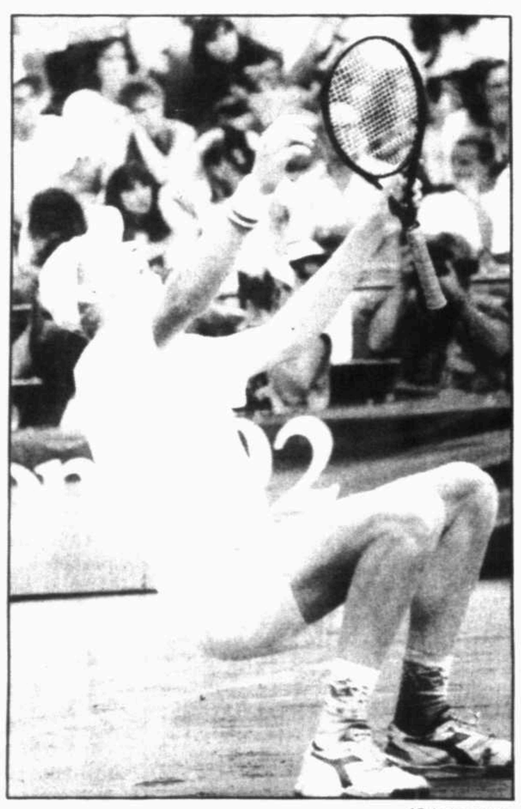

The women's 400-meter relay team also won, giving Gwen Torrence of Decatur, Ga., her second gold medal of the Games. Torrence, who also won the 200, ran the anchor leg, passing Irina Privalova of the Unified Team and giving the United States victory by .05 seconds in 42.11.

Also on the U.S. team were Evelyn Ashford of Walnut, Calif., Esther Jones of Baton Rouge, La., and Carlette Guidry of Austin, Texas.

"I wanted to leave Barcelona with a gold medal," Ashford said. "This is the third one — '84, '88 and now '92. I feel great."

The only relay U.S. runners didn't win was the women's 1,600. The Unified Team won in 3:20.20, with the U.S. team of Natasha Kaiser, Torrence, Jearl Miles and Rochelle Stevens .72 behind for the silver.

Dieter Baumann of Germany won the men's 5,000 meters, Heike Henkel of Germany won the women's high jump with 6 feet, 7½ inches, Hassiba Bolmerka of Algeria captured the women's 1,500, and Jan Zalezny of Czechoslovakia set an Olympic record in winning the javelin. His toss of 294-2 shattered the mark of 281-10 he set in 1988.

Switzerland's Marc Rosset, the gold medalist in men's tennis.

The world was pitching a shutout against America's boxers until Oscar De La Hoya stepped into the ring. De La Hoya, whose mother died of cancer in 1990 at the age of 39, won the 132-pound championship with a 7-2 decision over Marco Rudolph of Germany.

"I was so happy because I thought of how happy my mother would be," De La Hoya said. "I made my dream come true and my mother's dream come true."

The U.S. team finished with a gold, a silver and a bronze, its worst showing since 1948, when it won just one silver.

Only one other U.S. boxer made the finals, the coach's son, Chris Byrd, of Flint, Mich. He lost the 165-pound title to Ariel Hernandez of Cuba, 12-7.

"I had my heart set on the gold after Oscar won it," Byrd said. "I wanted one so bad."

Mary Joe Fernandez and Gigi Fernandez, who not only aren't related but don't usually even play doubles together, beat Spaniards Arantxa Sanchez Vicario and Conchita Martinez 7-5, 2-6, 6-2 in the gold medal match.

"This is huge," Mary Joe said. "It's hard to describe how happy I am. It's a dream come true."

The victory came came a day after Jennifer Capriati upset defending champion Steffi Graf for the singles championship.

Marc Rosset won Switzerland's first medal of the Games, beating Jordi Arrese of Spain 7-6 (7-2), 6-4, 3-6, 4-6, 8-6 for the men's singles tennis title.

There were four members of the 1988 gold-medal winning Soviets on each team that played for the basketball bronze. Score: Lithuania 82, Unified Team 78.

The victory not only gave Lithuania the medal, but it also avenged a loss last week to the Unified Team. Sarunas Marciulionis led the Lithuanians with 29 points, and Arvidas Sabonis had 27.

"There were reports people had taken their lives after we lost to them last week," said Lithuania's assistant coach, Donn Nelson, son of Golden State Warriors coach Don Nelson.

Now, there is only celebration.

"This is the best thing that's ever happened in my life," Sabonis said. "Winning the bronze medal makes me even happier than the gold I won with the Soviet Union in Seoul. I shall dedicate this medal to the people of Lithuania."

Much-criticized Dream Team wins gold medal

By Bill Barnard
AP Sports Writer

BARCELONA, Spain — America's long basketball nightmare is over.

The Dream Team fulfilled its mission Saturday night, winning the Olympic gold medal with a workmanlike 117-85 victory over Croatia that reestablished U.S. dominance after a generation of decline and defeat in international competition.

"We were able to do what everyone expected us to do," said Michael Jordan, who scored a team-high 22 against the Croats. "Now we can be proud of our basketball program again."

In the end, Team USA, unstoppable and unchallenged through the first seven games, was merely unstoppable, even trailing 25-23 more than halfway through the first half.

"There were about three times (in the tournament) I felt threatened, and one of them was tonight in the first half," coach Chuck Daly said. "I made kind of a promise I wasn't going to call a timeout in this tournament, but I came close tonight."

He needn't have worried.

Charles Barkley hit a 3-pointer, turned toward the opposing bench and pumped both fists as if to tell the Croats they would never see the lead again.

And they didn't.

The United States went on to a 56-42 halftime lead, still its smallest of the Olympics, then started the second half with an 11-2 run. The eighth consecutive blowout was assured. The gold medal, only the United States' third in basketball since 1972, was never in doubt again.

Playing the best a fragmented world had to offer, the Americans shattered the previous Olympic scoring record and became the first team to score at least 100 points in every game. They averaged 117.3 points, easily eclipsing the 1960 U.S. team's standard of 101.9. They won by an average of 43.8 points — the 32-point margin in the final being the closest.

When it was over, the players on the bench hugged Daly, and Barkley — smiling widely — went on the court and gave his warmup jacket to Croat Dino Radja.

The Dream Team was born out of the humiliation of a series of international losses, including the 1987 Pan American Games to Brazil, 1988 Olympic semifinals to the Soviet Union and the 1990 world championships to Yugoslavia.

The seeds, though, went all the way back to 1972, when an all-collegian U.S. team suffered its first-ever loss in 63 Olympic games — to the Soviets, when the final seconds were replayed three seconds, allowing the winning basket to be scored.

That memory served as some final inspiration Saturday night.

"Before the game we watched the tape of the 1972 Olympics," Barkley said.

Richardson leads Oilers in 17-7 win over Detroit

Associated Press

PONTIAC, Mich. — Bucky Richardson's 1-yard keeper in the fourth quarter gave Houston its first lead and the Oilers remained unbeaten in exhibition play with a 17-7 victory over the Detroit Lions.

Richardson, a rookie quarterback out of Texas A&M, slid off right tackle for a 10-7 lead from a fourth-and-goal situation with 12:52 left in the game.

Mike Elkins, the third Houston quarterback, tossed a 6-yard insurance TD to Gary Wellman with 1:54 remaining.

Harry Colon, a free agent obtained from the New England Patriots, scored Detroit's only touchdown on a 32-yard pass interception.

Al Del Greco kicked a 26-yard field goal for the Oilers, who won the AFC Central Division with an 11-5 record last season.

It was the second game for the Oilers (2-0), who got a jump on the NFL exhibition schedule by defeating the Dallas Cowboys 34-23 last week in Tokyo. It was the first exhibition game for the Lions, who won the NFC Central with a 12-4 mark in 1991.

The Oilers, who controlled the ball for 12:41 of the second quarter, had a third-and-10 situation at their 29 when Colon picked off Cody Carlson's pass and returned it 32 yards for a touchdown.

Eagles 35, Steelers 33

PITTSBURGH — Philadelphia quarterback David Archer threw three touchdown passes after Randall Cunningham made a promising return from a long injury layoff, and the Eagles held on to defeat Pittsburgh, ruining new Steelers coach Bill Cowher's exhibition debut.

The Eagles charged to a 35-6 lead, then watched their backups nearly blow it as the Steelers scored the final 27 points behind Neil O'Donnell's three touchdown passes in the fourth quarter.

The game ended in bizarre fashion after O'Donnell completed a desperation 58-yard fourth-down pass to Darrick Owens at the Eagles' 23-yard line with 4 seconds left.

Broncos 31, Buccaneers 10

DENVER — John Elway, seeing his first action of the preseason, threw two first-half touchdown passes to Mark Jackson, and Shawn Moore directed the Denver Broncos to two more scores in a romp over the Tampa Bay Buccaneers.

In a game featuring long scoring passes, the Broncos (1-1) used a 49-yarder from Elway to Jackson and a 65-yarder from Moore to Shannon Sharpe to offset the 79-yard

NFL Roundup

Spoiling the debut of Bucs head coach Sam Wyche, the Broncos scored on three of their first five possessions and led 21-3 at halftime.

Browns 7, Falcons 0

CLEVELAND — Todd Philcox threw a 34-yard touchdown pass to Michael Jackson in the second quarter as the Cleveland Browns beat the error-prone Atlanta Falcons.

The game was interrupted in the fourth quarter by a violent collision that injured Cleveland receiver Lynn James and Atlanta rookie cornerback Frankie Smith.

Colts 34, Patriots 14

INDIANAPOLIS — The Indianapolis Colts, the NFL's worst offensive team a year ago, used two first-half touchdown passes by Jeff George and near-perfect relief by backup Mark Herrmann for a preseason victory over the New England Patriots.

George completed 15 of 19 passes for 215 yards and had scoring passes of 41 yards and 38 yards to Bill Brooks as the Colts built a 20-7 halftime lead.

Herrmann hit all seven of his pass attempts in the third quarter, including a 15-yard touchdown to Reggie Thornton, and three of five on the first series of the fourth period, setting up a 31-yard TD run by Ken Clark for the Colts' final score.

Herrmann finished 12 of 15 for 141 yards.

Packers 21, Chiefs 13

GREEN BAY, Wis. — Brett Favre tossed a go-ahead, fourth-quarter touchdown pass to Jerry Evans after an interception by Brett Collins as Green Bay beat the Kansas City Chiefs night in Mike Holmgren's debut as Packers head coach.

Collins, a rookie linebacker chosen in the 12th round, intercepted Kansas City backup quarterback Mark Vlasic on the second play of the fourth quarter at the Chiefs 28.

Favre hit a 9-yard pass to rookie Dexter McNabb, ran an 8-yard keeper and found tight end Evans from 5 yards out with 11:10 left as Green Bay took its first lead at 14-10.

Vlasic then completed two straight passes for 46 yards as the Chiefs reached the Packers 11 before settling for Mike Lansford's 28-yard field goal with 8:51 to go, making it 14-13.

Vikings 24, Bills 3

MINNEAPOLIS — Sean Salisbury passed for 251 yards, serving notice that he isn't ready to surrender Minnesota's quarterback job to newly signed Rich Gannon as the Buffalo Bills suffered another Metrodome massacre.

Minnesota's victory in Dennis Green's coaching debut came over a Buffalo team that was playing for the first time since a 37-24 Super Bowl loss to Washington in the Metrodome.

The Bills used mostly backups Saturday. Jim Kelly played three series, completing three of five passes for 24 yards. Thurman Thomas played only two series, carrying once for 5 yards.

Jets 14, Redskins 13

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Rookie Keo Coleman's interception set up a 13-yard fourth quarter touchdown run by A.B. Brown as the New York Jets rallied from a 13-0 deficit to beat Washington.

It was the second straight exhibition win for the Jets and the second straight one-point loss for Washington, which was 1-3 in exhibition play last year before going 17-2 in the regular season and winning the Super Bowl.

Brown, a third-year player from West Virginia, scored both Jets touchdowns and gained 62 yards in seven carries, all in the second half against a defense made up mostly of backups.

The Redskins, who lost 22-21 to Miami last week, had taken a 13-0 first-half lead on 22- and 27-yard field goals by Chip Lohmiller and a 14-yard pass from Cary Conklin to Joe Johnson.

San Francisco 24, Raiders 10

SAN FRANCISCO — Rookie running back Amp Lee caught two fourth-quarter touchdown passes from Bill Musgrave as the San Francisco 49ers beat the Los Angeles Raiders.

Musgrave, the 49ers' fourth-string quarterback, completed all 9 passes for 134 yards and two touchdowns.

Lee's second score came with 1:46 remaining when he turned a short sideline pass into a 69-yard catch and run for the touchdown.

The second-round draft pick out of Florida State gained 52 yards (33 rushing, 19 receiving) in an 80-yard drive that ended with his first scoring reception, a 13-yarder on the first play of the fourth quarter.

LEWIS: Hopes he helped change track

beat teammate Mike Powell, but to get the one world record that has eluded him throughout his career. The standard had been Bob Beamon's, for 23 years, until Powell finally broke it on an electrifying night in Tokyo last year when Lewis himself came oh-so-close.

Lewis did edge Powell and won his third Olympic gold in the long jump, though winds and sultry conditions dashed his dream of finally claiming the record. It may yet happen. Anyone who thinks Lewis is on the downslope of his career didn't see that anchor leg in Estadi Olimpic Saturday.

Twenty years ago, when Frederick Carleton Lewis was nearing his 11th birthday, he won the long jump at a junior track meet in Philadelphia. The man who presented his medal knew he had seen something special.

"You're really talented," Jesse Owens said. "You're a little guy, but you beat all the big guys."

Now, with eight Olympic golds, he has beaten even the great Owens' legend, even if America has been irritated over the years for not acting like Owens. Lewis is much mellower now, more at ease with himself and the world, but his past outspokenness and different lifestyle have landed him in disfavor many times.

But Owens, if he were alive today, likely would express appreciation for something other than Lewis' physical talent. Nobody has done more to make track and field a respectable profession, where the gifted can make a decent living. Many Americans have conveniently forgotten that Jesse Owens, the great hero who stuck it to Adolf Hitler in the Berlin Games of 1936, quickly slipped from Olympic glory to become a carnival sideshow, racing ponies for lunch money.

And for all his records and medals, Lewis says he hopes his principal legacy is one of trying to make things better for his fellow athletes.

"If I helped change the sport," he said, "by creating more attention for it, by fighting drug use, by bringing more money into it, if I helped give the sport a voice ... then that's how I'd like to be remembered the most."

Future not too bright for Toby Harrah, Texas

By Mike Drago
Associated Press Writer

ARLINGTON — Since Toby Harrah became manager of the Texas Rangers a month ago, he has gone from fighting to keep the team in contention in the AL West to struggling to keep his job after this season.

He probably has little chance at either.

But the 43-year-old first-time manager hasn't given up on his team, despite its 11-15 record since he took over. The team went from third place, 6½ games behind Minnesota on July 9, to fourth place, 11½ games behind Oakland, entering play Saturday.

"We all feel like we can go out there and win eight or nine games in a row," Harrah says. "But in order to do that we have to start hitting and our starting pitchers have to keep doing the job they've done all season.

"Of course, our bullpen has had trouble, but it's gotten better and, defensively, we're trying to improve our club also."

The Rangers, expected by many to at least challenge for a division title this year, have shown plenty of room for improvement.

Built by Bobby Valentine with a heavy accent on hitting, the team hasn't done much of that, and the middle relief has provided little. Add to that below-average defense and the lack of a consistent fifth starting pitcher, and you get the Rangers' 20th season without any kind of championship.

Harrah still believes this team has a strong nucleus that can win big with a some tinkering and a few additions.

He says the team needs a change of philosophy, just for starters. If Harrah survives this season as manager, the former Rangers' infielder says he would rebuild the team from the ground up to switch the accent from slugging to pitching, defense and speed.

"To do that we're eventually going to have to make some changes on the structure of this team," he says. "I believe it's going to take a little bit of a change in personnel.

"What personnel we don't know yet, but I believe there needs to be a change."

Changes are likely to come in the outfield, where there is little speed and where routine fly balls have been anything but routine.

Harrah said he's likely to give Julio Franco a try in left field, where Kevin Reimer's play has been an adventure this year.

"Franco can play the outfield," Harrah said. "He's got good speed. He played out there before, but I think he needs to get out there in spring training and play every day. That's the key."

Juan Gonzalez also could be moved to left or right, depending on whether the team signs Ruben Sierra or loses him to free agency, Harrah said. Moving Gonzalez would leave the team free to seek a center fielder who is a natural lead-off hitter.

"We're going to have to get some speed out in that outfield," Harrah says. "Not only speed, but someone who is a proven player who you know can contribute offensively to the team.

"It would be nice to have a guy who could lead off and steal 30 bases and play a good center field."

Next on Harrah's wish list is reinforcing his rag-tag crew of middle relievers, who have lost 20 games this season. Obtaining at least one proven bullpen pitcher is a top priority.

"We need somebody there who's been successful in the past and who we know will be successful again," Harrah says.

He also says he'd like to add a veteran starting pitcher to go with the rotation of Kevin Brown, Nolan Ryan, Bobby Witt and Jose Guzman.

Harrah's assessments are nothing new.

The team acknowledged the same shortcomings entering this season, but had expected more run-production from a lineup that included defending AL batting champion Franco, lifetime .300 hitter Rafael Palmeiro and sluggers Sierra, Gonzalez and Dean Palmer.

With Franco spending nearly all season nursing an injured knee and both Palmeiro and Sierra having below-average seasons, those expectations and the Rangers' season have crumbled. The managerial change last month changed little.

But Harrah, always the optimist, sees a bright future.

"What people have to realize is that this is a young team," he said. "You're looking at a 22-year-old third baseman (Palmer) with 17 home runs. You're looking at a 20-year-old catcher (Ivan Rodriguez) who is an all-star. You're looking at Juan Gonzalez, who is 22 and has 27 home runs. That's a good nucleus."

The only problem for Harrah is whether he'll be around to see the nucleus develop. When he was installed, it was understood he would have to keep the Rangers in contention to keep his job.

Harrah gives his standard answer to that question.

"There's nothing wrong with high expectations," he says. "I just appreciate the opportunity to manage this ballclub."

Braves mount another win streak

Associated Press

ATLANTA — Terry Pendleton hit a grand slam and Sid Bream drove in four runs with two singles and home run, leading the Atlanta Braves over the Los Angeles Dodgers, 12-2.

The Braves pounded out a season-high 18 hits in winning their eighth straight game and 46th in their last 61 games.

NL Roundup

Pendleton's homer was his 16th of the season and the first grand slam of his career. It came off Roger McDowell in a six-run seventh inning that put the game away.

Pete Smith (2-0) earned the victory in his second start and third appearance since being recalled from Richmond on July 29. He pitched 5 2-3 innings and gave up seven hits and two runs.

Bream had a two-run, bases-loaded single in the first, a home run in the third and an RBI single in the eighth. He has driven in 17 runs in his last 16 games.

The Braves got to Dodgers starter Tom Candiotti (9-10) for four runs in the first inning.

Otis Nixon led off with a single and stole his 26th base. Candiotti then loaded the bases by walking Pendleton and David Justice.

The runs broke Smith's scoreless streak at 15 2-3 innings. Mike Stanton relieved Smith and got the final out.

The Braves turned the game into a runaway in the seventh. A single by Blauser and a pinch-hit double by Lonnie Smith brought in the first run before a walk by Nixon and Mark Lemke's third straight single loaded the bases for Pendleton. An RBI single by Berryhill capped the inning.

Pirates 2, Cardinals 1

ST. LOUIS — Pittsburgh won its ninth straight game as Zane Smith and three relievers pitched the Pirates past the St Louis Cardinals.

The Pirates matched their longest winning streak of the season. They have not allowed more than two runs in any of the victories.

Andy Van Slyke hit a tie-breaking sacrifice fly in the eighth inning as Pittsburgh beat the Cardinals for the ninth time in a row. The Pirates are 11-2 against St. Louis this season.

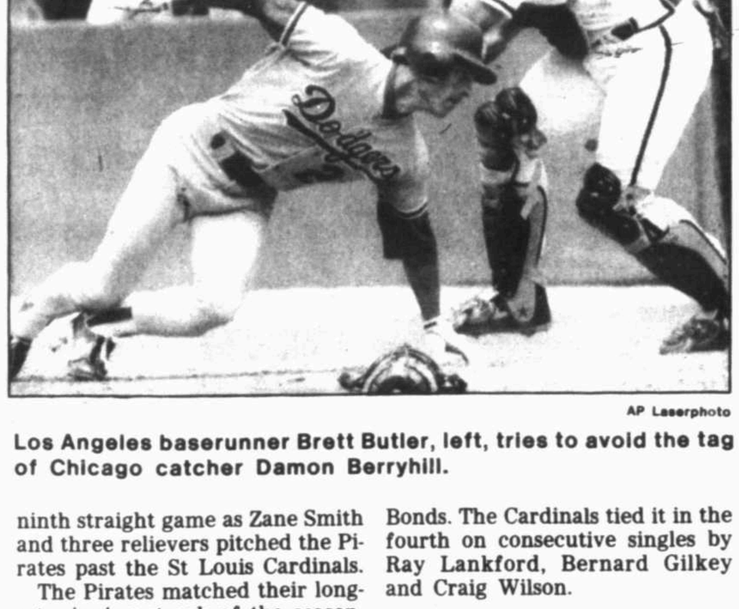

Smith, out for a month with tendinitis in his left shoulder, was activated from the disabled list before the game and got a no-decision in his first start since July 11. He gave up one run on seven singles in five innings, struck out four and walked none.

Bob Walk (6-4) pitched two scoreless innings for the victory. Denny Neagle got two outs and Stan Belinda went 1 1-3 innings for his 15th save.

Bob Tekwsbury (11-5) allowed two runs in 7 1-3 innings. He leads the majors with a 1.95 ERA. Tewksbury has a 1.19 ERA and two victories in three starts against the Pirates.

The Pirates took a 2-1 lead in the eighth when Alex Cole singled with one out, moved to third on a hit-and-run single by Jay Bell and scored on Van Slyke's fly.

The Pirates scored in the first inning on a two-out single by Van Slyke and a double by Barry Bonds. The Cardinals tied it in the fourth on consecutive singles by Ray Lankford, Bernard Gilkey and Craig Wilson.

Cubs 4, Mets 3

CHICAGO — Mark Grace hit a sacrifice fly to score Doug Dascenzo in the bottom of the ninth inning, giving the Chicago Cubs a victory that sent the New York Mets to their fifth straight loss.

Dascenzo, who has had a hand in all three Cub victories in this series, singled to open the ninth and went to third on a single to right by Ryne Sandberg.

Jim Bullinger (1-2) picked up his first major league victory with one scoreless inning of work.

Dwight Gooden, making his first start since going on the disabled list July 17 with inflammation of the right shoulder, lasted 4 2-3 innings. He gave up seven hits, three runs, walked two and struck out two.

With New York trailing 2-0, Gooden helped his own cause with a single to start a three-run fifth. He went to second on a single by Vince Coleman and scored on a single by Dave Magadan, with Coleman going to third.

Bass, acquired from San Francisco Friday, grounded into a force play to tie the score on a play in which Magadan was hit in the wrist by Rey Sanchez's relay throw.

Reds 4, Giants 3

CINCINNATI — Bill Doran drew a bases-loaded walk with two outs in the 16th inning and the Cincinnati Reds, after blowing several other chances, finally beat the San Francisco Giants.

The Reds left the bases loaded in the ninth, 10th and 13th innings, and stranded 18 runners in the five-hour game.

Padres 7, Astros 5

SAN DIEGO — Sizzling Gary Sheffield homered and drove in three runs, leading the San Diego Padres past the Houston Astros for their fourth straight victory.

Darrin Jackson had a three-run homer and Benito Santiago hit his first home run since May 25 for San Diego. The Padres, 6-0 at home against Houston this season, moved 10 games above .500 for the first time since the end of the 1989 season.

Sheffield went 2 for 3, and is 10-for-20 with four homers and 11 RBIs in the last five games. He has 77 RBIs, one behind NL leader Darren Daulton of Philadelphia, and is second in the league with 23 home runs, two behind teammate Fred McGriff.

Expos 6, Phillies 1

PHILADELPHIA — Dennis Martinez pitched a four-hitter and the Montreal Expos beat the Philadelphia Phillies.

Martinez (12-10), who led the majors last year with five shutouts, made an error with two outs in the ninth inning that eventually cost him his first shutout of the season.

Martinez missed the bag while covering first base on a grounder, enabling Dave Hollins to reach safely in the ninth. The Expos allowed Hollins to run to second, and Darren Daulton followed with a single for his NL-leading 78th RBI.

Indians' pitcher throws one-hitter

Associated Press

AL

BALTIMORE — Charles Nagy pitched a one-hitter, allowing only an infield hit in the seventh inning by Glenn Davis, and the Cleveland Indians beat the Baltimore Orioles, 6-0.

Nagy (12-7) had allowed only two baserunners, both on walks, until Davis hit a grounder deep in the hole at shortstop with one out. Mark Lewis made a valiant effort, scooping up the ball and making an off-balance toss in one motion, but Davis easily beat the throw.

In the fourth, Lewis had preserved the no-hitter by moving behind second base to grab a grounder and throw out Mike Devereaux.

Nagy, who was 0-3 in four starts since the All-Star break, walked Brady Anderson to open the game and retired the next 15 batters until Bill Ripken drew a walk to open the sixth. After Davis' single, he did not allow another baserunner. Nagy struck out seven.

It was Nagy's third shutout of the season and eighth complete game. He had not won since July 8 and was winless on the road since June 6.

Albert Belle, returning after a three-day suspension for charging pitcher Neal Heaton on May 4 against Kansas City, hit a run-scoring double in the first inning. Belle hit his 21st homer in third after Carlos Baerga hit a two-run shot.

Lewis also homered for the Indians, who have won four of five and 10 of 15.

Red Sox 4, Yankees 2

NEW YORK — Roger Clemens pitched six-hit ball for 8 1-3 innings and Bob Zupcic put Boston ahead with a two-run single in the eighth as the Red Sox rallied to beat the New York Yankees.

Clemens (13-7) walked none and struck out four, raising his total to 147, tying New York's Melido Perez for the American League lead. Clemens allowed an unearned run in the third when Andy Stankiewicz singled, stole second and scored after left fielder Phil Plantier dropped Bernie Williams' fly, Boston's third error of the game.

After Matt Nokes hit his 16th home run in the ninth, Tony Fossas relieved and hit Kevin Maas with a pitch. Jeff Reardon then got Charlie Hayes to bounce into a double play on his first pitch for his 24th save.

Scott Kamieniecki (2-9) was headed for his first career shutout until the eighth. Pinch-hitter Herm Winningham singled with two outs and took third on Jody Reed's double. The Yankees then elected to walk Plantier, a 14-for-84 (.167) hitter with runners in scoring position, and pitched to Zupcic, who was 13 for 41 (.317) with runners in scoring position.

Jack Clark hit his fourth home run of the season in the ninth off Rich Monteleone on an 0-2 pitch. Clark, who hadn't homered since June 2, had been 0 for 18 on 0-2 pitches, striking out 14 times.

Athletics 5, Royals 3

OAKLAND, Calif. — Dennis Eckersley's major-league record for consecutive saves ended at 40 but the Oakland Athletics got a three-run homer from Harold Baines in the bottom of the ninth to defeat Kansas City Royals.

Eckersley (4-0) was on the verge of losing after giving up a two-run, two-out single to Gregg Jefferies before Baines connected off reliever Jeff Montgomery to give the A's a team-high seventh straight win this season.

It marked the first time since Sept. 11, 1991 that Eckersley had failed to hold a lead. The right-handed reliever had converted 36 straight save chances this season and his final four last year.

Montgomery (1-6) blew his fourth save of the season after walking Rickey Henderson and Carney Lansford. Baines then hit Montgomery's first pitch over the right field fence for his ninth home run of the season.

After Curtis Wilkerson's one-out single, Brian McRae missed a two-run homer by inches on a double off the left-field wall, sending Wilkerson to third. Eckersley struck out pinch-hitter Juan Samuel before Jefferies delivered his hit.

The hit was momentary redemption for Jefferies, whose three-base throwing error had given the Athletics a 2-1 lead.

Tigers 8, Blue Jays 6

DETROIT — Mickey Tettleton put Detroit ahead with a sixth-inning homer and Lou Whitaker hit a two-run shot in the seventh, leading the Tigers past the Toronto Blue Jays.

Tettleton's 24th home run of the season came against Doug Linton (0-1) and gave Detroit a 6-5 lead.

Whitaker hit his 12th homer, connecting against Duane Ward. Whitaker has hit 202 career homers, all but two of them as a second baseman. He and Joe Morgan are the only second basemen to play 2,000 games, get 2,000 hits and hit 200 homers.

Reliever John Kiely (4-1) pitched one inning for the victory. Mike Henneman finished for his 19th save, allowing Roberto Alomar's RBI single in the ninth.

Rangers 7, Mariners 3

SEATTLE — Jose Guzman pitched a five-hitter over seven innings and Texas beat the Seattle Mariners for the Rangers' 13th victory in a row over three seasons in the Kingdome.

It was Seattle's seventh consecutive defeat and its major-league high 70th loss in the club's 112th game of the season. The Mariners have dropped six in a row to Texas at home this year.

Guzman (9-9) was handed a 3-0 lead in the first inning on Ruben Sierra's RBI double and Kevin Reimer's two-run single. The Rangers added unearned runs in the third, fourth and sixth innings as the Mariners committed four errors.

Guzman struck out six and didn't walk a batter before getting relief help in the eighth. Reliever Matt Whiteside gave up a two-run homer to Ken Griffey in the eighth before Kenny Rogers got the last two outs in the ninth.

Brewers 4, Twins 0
Twins 3, Brewers 1

MILWAUKEE — Bill Krueger won for the first time since July 11 and the Minnesota Twins ended a four-game losing streak, beating the Milwaukee Brewers to salvage a doubleheader split.

The Brewers won the opener 4-0 as rookie Cal Eldred pitched seven strong innings and combined with two relievers on a three-hitter.

A crowd of 52,434 saw Minnesota bounce back in the second game behind Krueger (10-3). He had been 0-1 in four starts in the last month, but won by allowing only one run on five hits and no walks in six innings.

Bush still deserves our praise, support

It was good to see President Bush on the election trail offensive again in recent days, meeting with GOP loyalists and drumming up support for his re-election campaign. For far too long, Bush has been on the defensive as poll after poll has indicated his support lagging.

His falling support has even raised questions of his ability to lead the nation where it needs to go in the post-Cold War world. No doubt the challenges faced today are strikingly different from those faced during the past 30 or 40 years.

There are a number of reasons for Bush's tremendous approval rating during and immediately after the Persian Gulf War having dropped to this low point. They include:

— The lackluster state of the domestic economy, especially in the nation's Oil Patch, where the oil industry is suffering one of its worst downturns in history.

— A wide misconception that Bush has not tried to achieve any domestic goals, overlooking his calls to the Congress to make affordable health insurance available to all Americans along with other economic recovery plans. The reality of that situation is that Bush can ask, but the Congress doesn't have to comply.

— The fact that Bush's presidency followed eight years under Ronald Reagan, one of the most popular presidents of all time, despite his critics.

— Unlike Reagan, Bush doesn't possess carefully groomed communications skills and has largely failed to portray for Americans and others his vision of the United States' role in the future with the Communist threat greatly reduced. As a result, there is uncertainty as a nation on how to proceed.

— Unusual scrutiny that is focused on domestic affairs, admittedly Bush's weak point.

By no means are we saying that Bush's performance during his first term has been totally outstanding. In foreign affairs, it has been but on the domestic front it has been lacking, but certainly has not merited the calls to not seek re-election made by several newspapers last week.

During these four years, Bush has spoken up for the cause of freedom and liberty and has stood firmly against oppression. He acted decisively to counter bullying dictators around the globe. He has spoken out for the unborn and for family virtues. In those instances and more, he has indicated his beliefs in the way our society should move and set a tone for the future based on values most in our society embrace.

Despite his shortcomings — and all Americans are well aware what those are — George Bush still stands for the United States as a leader of the free world and continues to set a moderate to conservative tone for the U.S. Government. He deserves continued support.

Teacher survey results surprising

As you would expect, the biannual survey of Texas teachers released last month by the Texas State Teachers Association was something of a mixed bag. Out of all the data, however, two chunks of information — one encouraging, one downright appalling — stood out:

■ Very much on the positive side was the finding that support for the no-pass, no-play rule, one of the centerpieces of the 1980s school reform movement, has risen to record levels.

■ The other datum all but defies belief: In Texas, in 1992, some 20 percent of the teachers surveyed indicated they had no health insurance coverage. None whatever. Granted, the cost of insurance has skyrocketed to the point that it is difficult for many districts to cover the expense, and in some instances teachers may turn down coverage because they cannot cover their share of the premiums — but it would seem that in any moderately enlightened state, adequate health care coverage would be taken as a given.

Rape's a crime even during wartime

Though the Tailhook scandal was a stain on the honor of the U.S. Navy, that particular record of caveman etiquette is apparently being challenged by the actions of certain members of the U.S. Army during the Persian Gulf War.

According to the Army Times, at least 24 U.S. Army servicewomen were raped or otherwise sexually assaulted by male personnel while serving in the Persian Gulf during Operations Desert Shield and Desert Storm. No statistics are available regarding the disposition of these cases because judicial proceedings are not yet complete. If the Tailhook affair warranted serious reflection about attitudes in the Navy, the Army must now do some soul searching as well. To begin with, such outrageous and intolerable conduct must be prosecuted to the fullest extent of military law.

The disturbing revelations emanating from the Persian Gulf will doubtless intensify the debate over whether women should be allowed to serve in combat... The message should be that sexual assault is illegal during a military operation as well as in peacetime.

Chicago may see gambling in its future

CHICAGO — Whenever religious leaders team up with horse breeders and race track owners, something momentous must be stirring in the American heartland.

Driven by very different motives, these disparate groups are digging in to keep legalized casino gambling out of this city's storied downtown. But it may be too late. The gambling genie is out of the bottle locally as well as nationally. To the extent the country has an economic plan for urban renewal, gambling seems to be the ultimate "enterprise zone."

Anderson

Some form of legalized gambling is expected in every state in the country within 10 years. Legalized gambling is now a $26 billion a year growth industry, with 12 states offering casino-style gambling and 34 running lotteries featuring multimillion-dollar winnings. Riverboat casinos steam along the Mississippi River in Illinois, Mississippi and Louisiana. That doesn't count the more than 75 Indian tribes also vying for a piece of the action.

After months of political fireworks, next month the Illinois state legislature will consider authorizing a four-casino complex in Chicago built with private money.

Mayor Richard Daley has waged a full-court press that has put him on a collision course with Illinois Republican Gov. Jim Edgar. Edgar, an occasional horse trader, is looking out for the state's rural and largely Republican economy, but he says he's more worried about the potential for the crime that could get unleashed by such gambling.

Daley sees the bottom line for his beleaguered city starkly: "Jobs, jobs, jobs, jobs. It's 10,000 construction jobs," he argues. He also predicts another 25,000 permanent jobs.

As an exclamation point, there's the example earlier this summer when more than 2,500 people lined up — some as early as 4 a.m. — to apply for 350 jobs at an O'Hare Hilton Hotel. They were interviewing for positions as bellhops, clerks, cooks and secretaries. Just days earlier, President Bush told a Chicago audience that "most Americans are fundamentally optimistic, and they're going to see a recovering economy... Hey, things are getting better."

"How can you be against this (casino gambling) if you're for off-track betting, you're for lotteries, you're for people running to the race tracks, you're for bingo palaces, you're for charity gambling and riverboat gambling?," Daley argues. "How can you say a land-based casino is worse?"

The Illinois United Methodists have launched a campaign to keep casino betting out of Chicago on the grounds it won't "solve the longstanding social and economic problems confronting this state. It will only create more."

The moral card, however, is apt to get trumped by more material considerations.

Feeling orphaned by the federal government and overrun with financial and social woes, big cities like Chicago are discovering that Washington has dealt them a lousy hand. That's why putting it all on 18 red in roulette seems to be a good bet.

GEORGE WILL

It seems war may be only solution in Bosnia

WASHINGTON — Fifty-three Augusts ago Europe's peace died amidst cries of "Why die for Danzig?" Today, because the peace of the rest of Europe is not threatened, few people are prepared to die for Bosnia, or for the blue flag of the United Nations. But reports of Serbian "death camps" are causing some people here to insist on the necessity, legal as well as prudential, of doing something — anything rather than nothing.

Will

Modern history, from "brave little Belgium" in 1914 to Kuwait in 1990, teaches that reports of wartime atrocities should be handled with care. But even while judgment is suspended regarding Serbian camps, the indisputable fact is that Bosnia, an internationally recognized state, has been invaded. "To do nothing," says Sen. Pat Moynihan (D-N.Y.), "is to invite the 1930s back."

When Rep. Tom Lantos (D-Calif.), who calls himself "the only congressman who owes his life to the Red Army," speaks about what Serbia calls "ethnic cleansing," pay him heed. Jewish and Hungarian, he escaped from a Nazi slave labor camp and survived with Raoul Wallenberg until the Red Army drove the Nazis west. Lantos wants Europe to take the lead in finding some middle way between jumping into fratricide and merely watching it through binoculars.

Lantos compares today's United Nations to the guns that failed to protect Singapore in 1942. (The legend is that the fixed guns faced the wrong way. Actually, the problem was the wrong ammunition.) Lantos regrets that the United Nations has peace-keeping but not peace-making capabilities.

But the world, emphatically including the United States, is not about to equip the United Nations for such military peace making. And the United States can do little unilaterally beyond symbolic measures such as (as Lantos suggests) quickly opening a U.S. embassy in Bosnia.

The United Nations could authorize members militarily to (Moynihan enumerates the possibilities) stop the flow of oil to Serbia, seal the Dalmatian coast, destroy all bridges in Belgrade and "blow the side off a mountain" to silence some of the Serbian mortars shelling Sarajevo. But Americans reasonably believe they have done quite enough liberating, resuscitating and defending of Europe. So any bombs that fall on Serbians should fall from European planes.

Even bombs probably will do nothing to improve Serbian behavior. People who believe that a few air strikes — "surgical" is always the adjective of choice–will reform a people that struggled with the Turks for a thousand years are overestimating air power and underestimating Serbs. Besides, most Americans do not believe their interests are at issue in the Balkans.

Moynihan believes they are mistaken about that. Because international law is at risk. He says force will be constructive even if it has only the political effect of dispelling the impression of international indifference.

Indifference, Moynihan insists, is not just morally but also legally impermissible, given our and other nations' formal undertakings. Moynihan, a Wilsonian, believes the U.N. Charter, the Geneva Conventions of 1949 and the Nuremberg norms concerning aggressive war and crimes against humanity could all perish in the corpse of Yugoslavia (itself a product of Woodrow Wilson's overreaching diplomacy).

So Moynihan reminds Serbian killers that the Fourth Geneva Convention was drawn to make legal the sort of juridical acts that were extra-legal when done by the Nuremberg tribunal. That Convention makes individuals subject to international law. Moynihan says, "you can get yourself hung for running a concentration camp. We should see to it that in time some people get hung."

But seeing to that sort of thing requires a nation's unconditional surrender. A large, long land war would be required to bring Serbian war criminals to the dock. That will not happen.

So a moral consideration supersedes all legal considerations: We may not be economizing violence when we hold out the gossamer hope that international law can help the people resisting Serbia.

Summoned to the Oval Office, Dan Quayle sees a big dead bird on the president's desk. Bush: "Do you know what this is, Dan?"

Sensing that the president wants to tell him, Quayle stifles the impulse to say, "Could it be a big dead bird?" and, instead, says, "No, sir. What is it?"

Baker

"It's an albatross, Dan," says the president. "What do you know about the albatross?"

"Very little, sir," says Dan, "except that it is a three-syllable word composed of the prefixed Latin 'alba,' meaning white, so placed in the construction as to modify the mysterious word 'tross,' which looks suspiciously to me, sir, if I may say so, like a back-formation through the Icelandic from the moderately Olde Englishe word 'troth.' Thus an albatross is probably a white troth, sir."

"Dan," says the president, "do you think the president of the United States has to summon you, Dan Quayle, here to give him a lecture on white troths?"

"Sorry, sir —"

"When I want to know about white troths all I've got to do is pick up this phone and tell the CIA. I want the complete troth file."

"Including the top-secret psychological profile, sir?"

Uncertain whether a troth can have a psychological profile, the president changes the tune. "Pick up that albatross, Dan," he says. Surprise: Quayle can scarcely lift it.

"Wow, this albatross must weigh a ton, Mr. President."

"Not quite a ton, Dan," says the president. "In fact, it is exactly your weight. That's why it was chosen for this meeting. I want you, Dan, to know how impossible it would be for a man to win a tough race with an albatross wrapped around his neck for three long months. You wouldn't want a friend of yours to have a handicap that brutal, would you?"

Slipping from Quayle's grasp, the albatross falls to the floor with deafening clangs. Anvils and horseshoes, which have been incompetently sewn into the albatross carcass by the president's campaign managers, tumble across the floor.

"No wonder it was so heavy," says Quayle, now able to toss the albatross lightly over his shoulder. "When you get those horseshoes out," he assures the President, "you can play 18 holes wearing this albatross and not even notice you've got it on."

■ Scenario Two: What? A Dump?

Several incompetent campaign managers are waiting for President Bush to stop sobbing over the new poll they have just taken.

Finally: "Since Dan won't take the hint and drop himself off the ticket, Mr. President, you've got to give it to him straight from the shoulder."

"You mean dump him? Dump Dan? I, George Bush, a Yale man, a man who believes in the tradition of the gentleman, who treasures friendship and loyalty — I should dump Dan? As I was always loyal to Ronnie, so Dan has always been loyal to me. A gentleman does not repay loyalty with a glove in the face, gentlemen."

"Exactly. Give me a better scenario."

■ Scenario Three: Basta, Giorgio!

"George."

"Yes, Bar?"

"Have you been following this Mafia story from Sicily?"

"Bar, you're surely not suggesting I send Dan over there to bring those Mafia murderers to heel."

"Shame on you, George Bush. That Mafia crowd won't draw the line at blowing up anybody, no matter how important, who tries to make them give up their wretched lives of crime. I'd never let you send our Dan out on a mission as deadly as that."

"You wouldn't, Bar?"

"Never."

■ Scenario Four: Boola Boola

The Oval Office. Bush and Quayle. The president is speaking. "Then the papers were right, Dan. You're dropping me from the ticket?"

"It's just, politics, Mr. President. Nothing personal. And to prove it, here are the Whiffenpoofs. Sing him out, guys, with a rousing 'Boola Boola.'"

Predicting tomorrow's headline is getting easy

From his columns, I perceive that Gary Ott is a thoroughly disorganized individual, so disorganized that I doubt it if he claims to be a member of any political party. He probably seldom votes and identifying him as a rebellious, anti-establishment liberal would probably please him.

None of these things would be of importance were he not in position to influence or put the spin on the newspaper's content — particularly the front page.

Last Monday's headline, in a banner usually reserved for declarations of war, was "Bush is not a quitter," with a bold sub-head about those urging President Bush to quit. Richard Viguerie, who makes his living soliciting campaign funds, is in that camp. So is George Will who hates President Bush with such passion that though classified a conservative he would vote for Eugene Victor Debs or Mother Bloor were either Bush's opponent.

On the same day, the San Angelo Standard-Times carried the same story on page 1-A, under this modest banner — "Supporters: Bush in race to stay."

On Wednesday, July 29, the blackest, boldest type on the front page announced "Salaries lag; confidence index drops." This was accompanied by a graph, in color, showing the consumer confidence level from July, 1991 to July, 1992 was down 16.7. The chart also shows, but does not point out, that the index was about 13 points higher in July, 1992 than in February, 1992.

On the same day, under a Business News and Trends column in the San Angelo Standard-Times, the story was handled thusly "Report: Wages rise 3.6 percent this year."

On the next slow news day I suggest this headline in keeping up with the tradition of always looking down: "250 Million Americans to die."

"Today the New England Journal of Medicine predicted that by the year 2100 98.9% of Americans now living will be dead. This projection was made assuming the average lifespan of Americans will increase by 15 years. These predictions were questioned by Dr. William Harvey who believes that an anti-aging drug will be developed by March 14, 2037 and the lifespan of the average American will increase to 175 years."

There is, of course, another headline possibility.

"Middle age may start at 75!"

The taxpayers of Midland County are going to lose their voice in local taxation if they don't wake up. Budget cuts imposed by Midland County Commissioners Court have forced the Midland County Tax Office to reduce its staff significantly — the staff in the collections department alone has been reduced from four employees to one, and further budget cuts may eliminate the collections staff entirely. Collection of local taxes would then be exclusively in the hands of the Appraisal Board officials appointed by the city council, school board, and the county commissioners.

If consolidation occurs, our elected county tax assessor-collector will in reality have no authority over local taxation, and the taxpayers will lose their sovereignty in local government. Some may argue that the appraisal district and county tax office perform the same functions, and that this "redundancy" must be eliminated. Then why not eliminate the appraisal district and retain our voice in government?

Journalist Gary Allen has identified a nationwide effort to centralize government in the hands of a select few, which began when Nixon divided the country into 10 Federal Regional Councils by Executive Order #11647 in 1972. The councils promote something called "Metro Government," which is "the governing of an area or region by a central body of "experts" — planners who are usually appointed ... and who are not directly accountable to the people." Metro's basic strategy "involved merging ... of local city or town governments into a larger area government. Cities are merged with other cities and/or with a county" (Gary Allen, "Beware Metro," American Opinion, January, 1973).

But the Texas Constitution protects us from such centralization. Article VIII, Section 14 states that the "Assessor and Collector of Taxes shall perform all the duties with respect to assessing property for the purpose ... of collecting taxes." And Attorney General's opinion No. JM-833, issued on Dec. 7, 1987, states that tax assessors may not voluntarily surrender these duties, nor may they be taken away by election.

The current budgetary gymnastics threaten our constitutionally-protected voice in local taxation. Failure to raise our voices now in disapproval will surely mean losing them forever.

Pro-lifers are a shame and disgrace to society

The two letters against abortion and the labeling of the local head of Planned Parenthood as "Ms. Terminator" ("Right confused with responsibility" and "God is the only one who can take life," letters, July 26) show how hypocritical these people are toward the quality of life they supposedly worship.

As a paraplegic who has been personally affected and involved in more important issues, I've not seen one "pro-lifer" protest low-quality nursing home care, expensive hospital bills or even contradictory Medicare regulations.

Specifically, what good does it do to save from abortion a fetus who may be severely disabled after birth if there are no support systems such as affordable medical care or proper vocational training? Moreover, the anti-abortion movement proclaims it wants to "save" these children, yet it did little to advance legislation, such as the Americans with Disabilities Act of 1990, designed to improve the quality of these lives by insuring protection for the disabled against discriminatory practices by public and private institutions.

If I see these fanatics constructively discuss any of the above issues the physically and mentally disabled contend with, I'll be glad to march with them against truly unnecessary abortions. Until that day comes, however, I have no choice but to label these "pro-lifers" for what they are — a shame and a disgrace to American society.

George Bush certainly has become a quitter

George Bush is not a quitter (headline, Page 1A, Aug. 3)? Well, yes he is. He became a quitter when he jumped the victory gun and quit the Persian Gulf War a day too soon. Now the U.N. (read USA) may have to go in and clean up what he left undone.

Media hype has it that he is going to yank James Baker out of the Department of State to run his floundering campaign. Die-hard party members are always more concerned with the future of The Party than they are with the welfare of the country.

The Republicans should say to George Bush what some members of the English Parliament said to the "too late" (British Prime Minister Neville) Chamberlain government during the dark spring days of 1940: Just go. But they do not have a (Winston) Churchill waiting in the wings so they won't. For that reason we will probably, stress probably, have another four years of Bush. But some convention time the Republicans could have a better chance of staying in the saddle if they came up with a James Baker-Jack Kemp ticket. What's that? Oh don't be silly.

Libertarians oppose other's control of self

While Libertarians want the same things for their lives and children as those who support government control and oppression (Democrats, Republicans, other socialists, etc.), Libertarians recognize that government control of life is immoral and is opposed to the founding principle of this great country. The government, be it king or Congress, does not own you, do they? You aren't their slave, are you?

You have the unalienable right to manage your own body and mind and the property created or earned by you and no one or group of ones (government) has the right to deprive you of that property by the initiation of force or fraud, true?

Let's use some common sense. Who will watch over you and your family best? Who can best decide what kind of education you want, religion to follow, business to be in, or entertainment you prefer? You or me? Your friends or mine?

What if I have the power to force you to do what I think is best for you; is it moral for me then to use that force to make you do as I want? If you own yourself, doesn't that include running your life as you see fit? Do you need someone's permission? If you do, you are their property, their slave, aren't you? Am I or my friends capable of discerning what makes you happy and productive or are you all-knowing enough to run my life, make my life's decisions? Want to trust my judgment or yours?

Libertarians have been accused of being against nearly everything. The only thing we are against is someone else making our decisions for us (i.e.— most libertarians are against drug use but accept it is not their decision to make for you, only for themselves). Because I think you are being foolish, does that give me the right to enslave you? Does it? That is the stand that Republicans, Democrats and others have taken on education, business, prices, medicines, sexual orientation, abortion choices, art, entertainment, self-defense, religion, etc. Do you really want to be associated with the philosophy that you are too stupid to do what is best for yourself without oversight? Why do they even trust you to vote ... because you still believe the lies?

Libertarians are for each person realizing it is up to themselves alone to make the most of their time on earth, not someone else's. My Lord, Jesus Christ, said it best, "Remove the log from your own eye before you look for the mote in your brothers' eye."

City Council upsets concerned citizens

Last week I had the dubious honor of attending my first city council meeting. I have been, I'm ashamed to admit, one of those uninvolved citizens who "go with the flow" and leave city government and important decisions in the hands of those in power. I really had my eyes opened at this meeting.

A proposal for rezoning a now residential area into a commercial area for the purpose of constructing a motor bank was presented to the city council. The zoning commission had already turned down the proposal after extensive study. This fact, along with the recommendation of Cameron Walker and a petition containing 68 or so signatures of homeowners opposed to the proposition, did not deter our illustrious mayor one bit from trying his best to push through this rezoning change that he had already decided he was in favor of long before anyone had spoken a word for or against it.

Mayor (J.D.) Faircloth's rudeness to anyone who did not agree with him or his overall arrogance surprised me. His total lack of concern for the wishes of the majority of persons living in the area was also of concern to me. I was under the mistaken impression that these people (some who probably made the mistake of voting for him thinking he cared about their opinions) should be of primary concern.

Buddy Sipes, as representative for this district, also was completely in favor of the rezoning even though the majority of those who elected him to office were against it.

The other council members, Mrs. (Claudia) Egan and (Juluis) Brooks, once they found out that the majority of residents did not want the bank in their neighborhood, voted against the rezoning. At least there are two city council members who care about the people who supported them.

If we, as citizens of this city, want elected officials to represent our best interests, we need to attend meetings and become aware of just who works for us and who works for special interest groups. I, for one, am going to be more aware of what is going on in our city government as I hope you will be too. After all, we are the ones to blame if our apathy allows J.D. Faircloth and others to do whatever they choose because we don't care.

Midlander says bank can build elsewhere

Thursday's Reporter-Telegram had a letter from Thomas H. Dollahite bemoaning the fact that the Midland City Council rejected "economic diversification" by failing to spot zone a property so that a drive-in bank could invade a residential area. What Dollahite overlooked is that the bank can build somewhere else and provide all those jobs he sees lost.

The reason the bank was so determined to build at this location is because the land is an FDIC-foreclosed property which the bank could get for a song, at the expense of the American taxpayers who are bailing out of the savings & loan/banking mess. If the bank is truly interested in "economic diversification" (instead of making a buck at taxpayers' expense), it can build a bank in west Midland at a better location than the FDIC-foreclosed property in a residential area. Perhaps a bank should contact a local realtor and circulate some money in the Midland economy.

The city council that voted to maintain the integrity of this neighborhood represented the majority of those homeowners who live in the area and those council members should be commended, not condemned.

Smoking policy tears out page for smokers

At the time the present smoking ordinance was being considered by the City of Midland, only two councilmen considered smokers had any rights at all. Through the efforts of only two councilmen a committee was formed, consisting of representatives of non-smokers and members of a smokers' rights group. I was privileged to be a member of that committee, working out a solution to a smoking ordinance that everyone could live with. I believed we did just that, until now.

As usual there were compromises on both sides, which is the American way. One small compromise was a smoking area (very small) at each end, upstairs at the Air Terminal before smokers got on non-smoking flights. Now our city council says that due to countless (count them) complaints from the majority, the council has rescinded its promise made in the original smoking ordinance to the minority smokers and that page is torn out.

This type of forked-tongue city government reminds me of when I was a small boy, my dad telling me of why he was born on a reservation in Indian Territory. It seems government troops took his ancestors from their homes and town and herded them like cattle to a reservation in Indian Territory. After a few years the majority made countless clamors for a state called Oklahoma and even the reservations were taken away and that page of the treaty torn out.

Smokers, we have no place to go, there are no more reservations to be herded out of, so it's time to fight back. Smokers in Midland and Odessa, let's boycott the Air Terminal and refuse to be treated like the "nobodies" without any rights the Midland City Council makes us out to be.

I read where Midland and Odessa leaders have formed an alliance and that puzzles me. Odessa, has a strong, compassionate city government that considers everybody's rights and it's hard to believe they would form an alliance with Midland government when it considers only the majority's rights. Smokers, we need about 1,000 of you to show up at city hall Tuesday, Aug. 11, to let our council know we are human beings just like the non-smoking majority.

Woman believes men are just as responsible

I was positively infuriated by the letter of July 29th submitted by Robert E. Ristom. His letter reeked of what I have come to call "manthink" — faulty, biased assumptions made by the male sex, pointing fingers at the female sex, for problems that involve both sexes.

Ristom's letter involves two faulty premises. First, that Planned Parenthood propagandizes abortion, and second, that promiscuity is the reason women are believed to be more susceptible to the AIDS virus.

Let me come to the defense of Planned Parenthood. The organization does not propagandize abortion. Planned Parenthood stresses contraception methods for "non-parenthood," not abortion as Ristom implies. Furthermore, Planned Parenthood does no more to propagandize abortion than your local yellow pages.

Next let me come to the defense of women. Ristom's letter indicated that a woman's sexual promiscuity makes her more susceptible to the AIDS virus. The fact is promiscuity makes anyone more likely to come into contact with the virus. What makes a woman more susceptible are the physical characteristics of the female body. A woman sleeping with a man is no more promiscuous than the man sleeping with her. What about male behavior? Why is this type of behavior acceptable for a man but wrong for a woman?

Men need to take on their share of the mutual responsibility of birth control and safe sex. If men would begin carrying and actually using condoms and spermicides many of these "dilemmas" would not exist.

Our policy on letters

The Reporter-Telegram recognizes the "Letters to the Editor" format as an important forum for citizen opinion and encourages participation of all readers. To that end, we have set as few rules as possible. However, we must have some, and they are:

- Letters must be signed and include a street address and daytime phone number for verification.
- They should be no more than 350 words in length. While some lengthy letters are published we reserve the right to edit when necessary due to space limitations.
- Only one letter per month per writer can be published.

Because we cannot research and verify all information in letters, by publishing them we neither imply nor guarantee the accuracy of information stated by writers.

Anniversary reminds us that our world is safer today

By WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST JR.
Editor in Chief, The Hearst Newspapers

NEW YORK — This month's 47th anniversary of the destruction of Hiroshima and Nagasaki should remind us that the peril of global nuclear disaster has been cut so dramatically that we are now safer from nuclear calamity than ever before in the nuclear era.

Hearst

President Bush will be fully justified in making this point with the American voters in the election campaign, just as he did recently when he declared that "every child in America can sleep more securely without that fear of nuclear war that generations that preceded it had."

The president also noted the end of the Cold War and the collapse of communism during the past four years. "It is a safer world — safer than it was a decade ago, a year ago; safer than it was two months ago," he said.

One reason the world is safer now than it was only two months ago is because President Bush and Russian President Boris Yeltsin agreed in June to slash their nations' nuclear arsenals from the 10,000 warheads now owned by each nation to between 3,000 and 3,500 in 10 years.

President Bush deserves great credit for presiding over these historic changes: The end of the Cold War and the dangerous East-West confrontation that has chilled generations with the threat of nuclear holocaust and has cost the world trillions of dollars. I hope he continues to make this point during the campaign so that the American voters are mindful of his contributions to world peace.

Meanwhile, I've asked Charles J. Lewis, the Washington bureau chief of the Hearst Newspapers, to give me a report on how President Bush's re-election campaign is going. Here's his report:

The mood among the 300 men and women who run the national headquarters of Bush-Quayle '92 is so upbeat that a visitor would never guess President Bush is struggling in the public opinion polls.

Pizza deliverers compete with a steady stream of campaign volunteers to squeeze past the security desk in the lobby and cram the elevators to get to offices in the headquarters building five blocks from the White House.

The office with the antique pinball machine jammed against the desk is occupied by David M. Carney, political director of the campaign. Carney, a former aide to ex-White House staff chief John Sununu, has toted this souvenir from the 1950s with him wherever he's worked.

"We don't feel any panic here," said Carney as he eased his bulky frame to a conference table and began explaining how President Bush's re-election campaign sees the future.

Carney points to these numbers:

- During the primary season, President Bush won more than 2 million votes more than he got in the 1988 primaries. Total turnout in Republican primaries this year also was up more than 2 million compared to four years ago. Democratic primary turnout was down more than 2 million. Carney says this shows the GOP has more energy and organization than last time.
- Gov. Clinton's unfavorable ratings have been higher than Democratic challenger Michael Dukakis' were in 1988. Bush went on to beat Dukakis easily in that election.
- When they report large leads by Clinton in public opinion surveys, pollsters also say they find that some of Clinton's support is soft. Andrew Kohut, director of surveys for the Times Mirror Center for the People and the Press, made that point last week when he observed: "Clinton's grip on these people is very tenuous."

That's music to Carney's ears. He predicts Clinton's 20-plus-point lead over Bush will begin to shrink after Labor Day.

Meanwhile, Carney and other leaders of the Bush re-election organization are planning on a spectacular convention in Houston Aug. 17-20 to give the Republican ticket the same kind of bounce in the polls that Gov. Clinton has enjoyed since last month's Democratic convention in New York.

Themes at the GOP convention will stress the safer world, education, welfare reform, foreign trade, family values and party unity, with Republican governors making many of the most important presentations during prime TV time. Also speaking will be Barbara Bush, former President Ronald Reagan and conservative challenger Patrick Buchanan, who is expected to endorse the president's re-election bid.

The president will go directly to the campaign trail the day after his acceptance speech, probably hitting some of his "base states" in the South and the Rocky Mountains and "target states" such as California and states in the Midwest and the Northeast. These states are the ones that officials of the re-election campaign believe the president has a good chance of winning in November, especially if the economy picks up some steam.

Last week's encouraging report on the July unemployment rate could be the start of the economic turnaround that would bring good news to President Bush. The decline in joblessness to 7.7 percent was the first improvement in the unemployment rate since April, when the rate dipped to 7.2 percent. In May and June, unemployment jumped by 0.6 percentage point to an eight-year high of 7.8 percent.

The low interest rates that American business now enjoy could fuel the economic growth that will put more people back to work.

Elkington, Sullivan tied

Associated Press

PGA

GRAND BLANC, Mich. — Steve Elkington shot 67 and Mike Sullivan shot 68 Saturday and to tie for the lead at 10-under 206 heading into the final round of the Buick Open.

There was a logjam of four golfers two strokes behind the leaders at Warwick Hills Golf and Country Club: Defending champion Brad Faxon shot 70, Keith Clearwater 70, Australian Wayne Grady 1-over 73 and John Huston 71.

The start of the third round was delayed two hours, 24 minutes by heavy overnight rains that soaked the course. When starting times were redone, players were grouped in threesomes instead of twosomes and teed off on both No. 1 and No. 10.

The course was whipped by high winds the rest of the day, but it didn't seem to bother the leaders.

Sullivan had a chance to lead alone, but left his approach to No. 18 short of the green and made bogey on the 435-yard par-4.

Sullivan, who hasn't won since the 1989 Independent Insurance Agents Open, started the day at 138. He remained 6-under at the turn after two birdies and two bogeys on the front nine.

But Sullivan ran off a dramatic string of five consecutive birdies, starting at the par-4 11th, to join the chase.

Sullivan lost his playing card and had to go through qualifying school again in 1991. His best finish this year has been a tie for eighth at the Hawaiian Open, his only Top 10 finish. He missed the cut at 11 of the 19 tournaments he has played this season.

Elkington began at 5-under 139 and dropped a stroke with bogey on the second hole. But birdies at No. 5 and No. 7 enabled him to turn at 6-under. He started the back nine with birdies at the 10th and 11th and finished with birdies at 16 and 17 to go 10-under.

Elkington, who won the Tournament of Champions in January and tied for third at the New England Classic on July 26, is 18th on the current money list with $424,852.

Grady, who started the round one shot off the pace at 135, remained 9-under at the turn. Birdies at the 11th and 14th got him to 11-under, but he then made three successive bogeys at Nos. 15-17.

Grady is currently No. 76 on the money list with $146,763. His only Top 10 finish in 16 previous starts this season was a tie for sixth at the MCI Heritage.

South African David Frost, the second-round leader at 10-under 134, had five bogeys for a third-round 77 which left him well off the pace at 211.

The winner of the $1 million tournament, which concludes Sunday, will earn $180,000 and one of the sponsor's cars.

Renewed Hill leads Digital Seniors

Associated Press

CONCORD, Mass. — Mike Hill took three weeks off after a 38th-place finish in a tournament last month. He was hoping to regain the intensity that made him the top money earner on the Senior PGA Tour last year.

The strategy appears to be working.

Hill fired a 5-under-par 67 Saturday to jump into a tie with first-round leader Walt Zembriski at 136, two strokes ahead of Gary Player, DeWitt Weaver and Bruce Crampton, in the Digital Seniors Classic at Nashawtuc Country Club.

"I've gone six or seven weeks when I haven't played well at all," said Hill, who has 10 top-10 finishes this year. "I don't know why. I can't put my finger on it. I took three weeks off in hope that it would inspire me but the more time I spent at home, the more I wanted to stay home.

"I've played so many tournaments the last three years that the desire and intensity may have caught up with me."

It couldn't be guessed from Hill's performance Saturday as he got into position for a possible 13th senior victory. He had four birdies, the first on a 50-foot putt on the first hole, and an eagle against one bogey.

Zembriski, who held a one-stroke lead after the first round, shot a 2-under-par 70 on Saturday. He had a consistent round of three birdies and one bogey.

"I just kept playing my game and didn't get too excited," said Zembriski, a former construction worker. "We start level tomorrow. If one of us goes out and shoots 4- or 5-under, he'll probably win."

Weaver thrived on the back nine again. He had six birdies over that stretch on Friday and had three birdies and an eagle on Saturday, completing his round with an uphill 35-foot putt for birdie on No. 18.

"I lulled them to sleep on the front," Weaver said. "I'm now 9-under for two days on the back nine. For some reason, I've focused well."

Player, who was one stroke behind Zembriski after the first round, had a consistent round Saturday, hitting 17 greens in regulation. He had two birdies and a bogey to finish 1-under on the day and drop to 6-under for the tournament.

"It was a lackluster round; no fireworks at all," Player said. "To shoot 71 was kind of a gift. As they say in Scotland, 'It's a strange game, laddie.'"

Crampton, who entered the round at 4-under, had three birdies to tie for the lead, but fell back with a bogey on No. 16.

Lee Trevino, Al Geiberger, Gene Littler and Ben Smith enter the final round three strokes at 5-under and six players are at 4-under.

Littler's 5-under 139 was good enough to take the top spot in the 36-hole Vantage Classics competition for players 60 or older. It was the fifth Super Seniors' victory of the year for Littler, 62. Miller Barber, 61, was one stroke back at 140.

Rarick's 66 tops Vt. stop

Associated Press

LPGA

STRATTON MOUNTAIN, Vt. — Cindy Rarick was beginning to wonder if all those birdies were worth it.

Although she ranks sixth in birdies on the LPGA Tour, Rarick is only 40th in earnings.

"That's not the way it should be," she said.

The reason is too many bogeys. But Saturday she had only one bogey and rattled off six birdies for a 5-under-par 66 to surge from seven strokes behind into a share of the third-round lead in the $500,000 Stratton Mountain Classic.

She is tied with Dottie Mochrie at 209, and if she can keep her bogeys at a bay Sunday,another birdie run could be worth the $75,000 first prize.

"I've made a lot of cuts this year, but not a lot of money," she said.

Actually, she's made $100,000 to put her over the $1 million mark in career earnings, but she reached that figure by March last year.

"I consider myself to be a fairly consistant player," she said, "but this summer my game has not reflected that."

She blamed mental errors, which she reduced to almost zero Saturday.

Her only bogey, on 15, came when her tee shot landed in the left rough "next to the weirdest weed" that affected her swing. Then she misread a 9-foot putt.

Mochrie, the tour's leading money winner who's seeking her second straight victory, started the day two strokes off the pace at 4-under, and climbed into first despite an uneventful round.

Notice of Effective Tax Rate
1992 Property Tax Rates in Midland County

This notice concerns 1992 property tax rates for Midland County. It presents information about three tax rates. Last year's tax rate is the actual rate the taxing unit used to determine property taxes last year. This year's effective tax rate would impose the same total taxes as last year if you compare properties taxed in both years. This year's rollback tax rate is the highest tax rate the taxing unit can set before taxpayers can start tax rollback procedures. In each case these rates are found by dividing the total amount of taxes by the tax base (the total value of taxable property) with adjustments as required by state law. The rates are given per $100 of property value.

SCHEDULE C: Expected Revenue from Additional Sales Tax

In calculating its effective and rollback tax rates, the unit estimated that it will receive $4,850,000.00 in additional sales and use tax revenues.

SCHEDULE D: State Criminal Justice Mandate (For Counties)

The Midland County Auditor certifies that Midland County has spent $848,957.50 in the previous 12 months beginning August 1, 1991, for the maintenance and operations cost of keeping inmates sentenced to the Texas Department of Criminal Justice. Midland County Sheriff has provided information on these costs, minus the state revenues received for reimbursement of such costs.

This notice contains a summary of actual effective and rollback tax rates' calculations. You can inspect a copy of the full calculations at 707 W. Washington, Midland, Texas

Calvert expects heavy polling, touts registration

■ Officials advise voters to meet registration deadlines for upcoming election.

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff writer

Voter turnout in Midand County is expected to be good this election but those who wish to cast a vote are reminded to be registered, said Bettye Calvert, Midland County Elections Administrator.

Voters, who moved and did not receive their new blue voter certificates mailed in December and January, need to notify the voters' registrar by the end of this week to prevent cancellation.

"We got back over 5,000 (5,684). Every two years new certificates are mailed out ... all that come back unclaimed are not forwardable by law," Ms. Calvert said.

Some of the people went to the polls during the primaries and updated their address, she said.

Others wondered why they didn't receive their certificate and updated their address. Some moved and notified the office as well.

But by July 17, there were still 3,500 unclaimed certificates.

If they don't make the deadline "that means they can't vote, they have to re-register," Ms. Calvert said.

"It has to be in this office (by Aug. 14) not post marked like voter registration," she said.

For those who need to re-register or register for the first time, the deadline isn't until Oct. 4. Because that date falls on a Sunday, voters-to-be should mail registration cards by Oct. 2, also the last day to register in person.

But Ms. Calvert suggests doing so earlier to avoid missing the deadline.

"We listen to sad stories every time about people swearing they had them in the postbox the day before," she said.

To register — those over 18 years old and eligible — can mail in a postage-paid registration card available at various locations around town or do so in person at the Elections Administrator office, 709 W. Washington Ave.

"Texas is the easiest state to register," Ms. Calvert said.

A parent can even register for a child and vice-versa, and spouses for one another, she said.

Once registered, those who wish to vote early can do so Oct. 14-30. Early voting will be available from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m., Oct. 14-16 and 19-23; from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m., Oct. 24 and 26-30; and from noon to 5 p.m., Oct. 25.

Applications for mail-in voting, which requires approval, are accepted between Sept. 4 and Oct. 27.

"We get a lot of requests for ballots by mail from out of town college students, overseas workers and quite a few military," Ms. Calvert said.

Whether voting by mail, early, or on election day, November 3, voter turnout is expected to be good because of the presidential election.

"Definitely. Some people go vote every four years and that's it. I don't understand it. They don't vote in the primary," Ms. Calvert said.

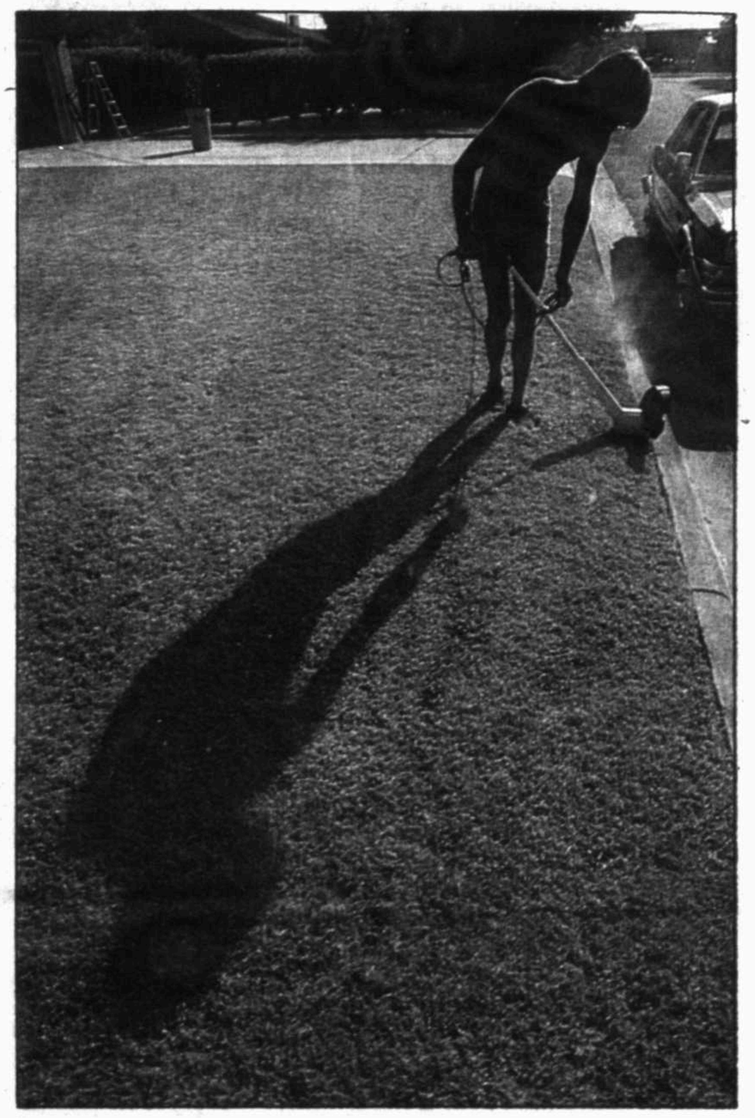

"It picks up in a gubernatorial election as well but not as much as a presidential election," she said.

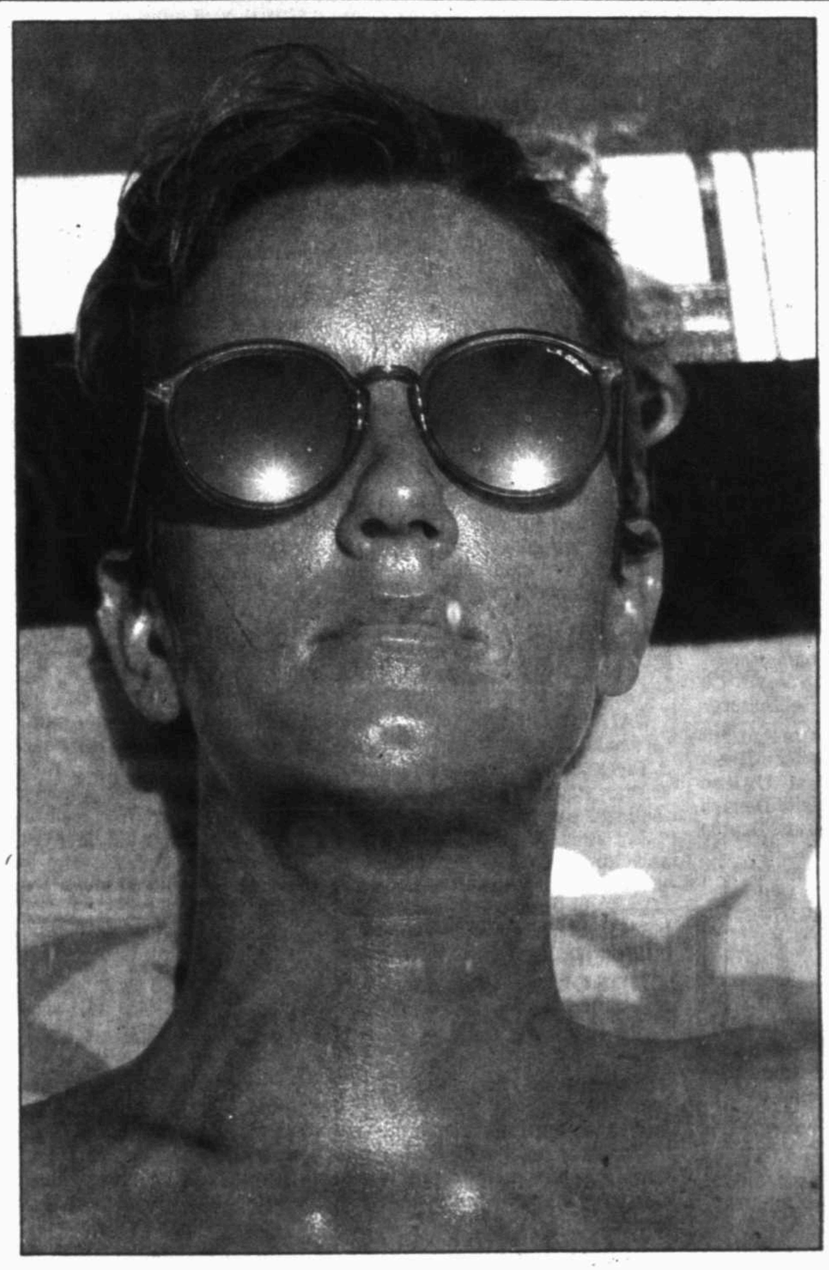

Ms. Calvert estimates "about 75 percent of registered (Midland) voters will vote" in the general election.

During primary elections in March, 46 percent of registered voters voted (40 percent early) in both primaries, the highest in the state, Ms. Calvert said. The state average was about 28 percent, she added.

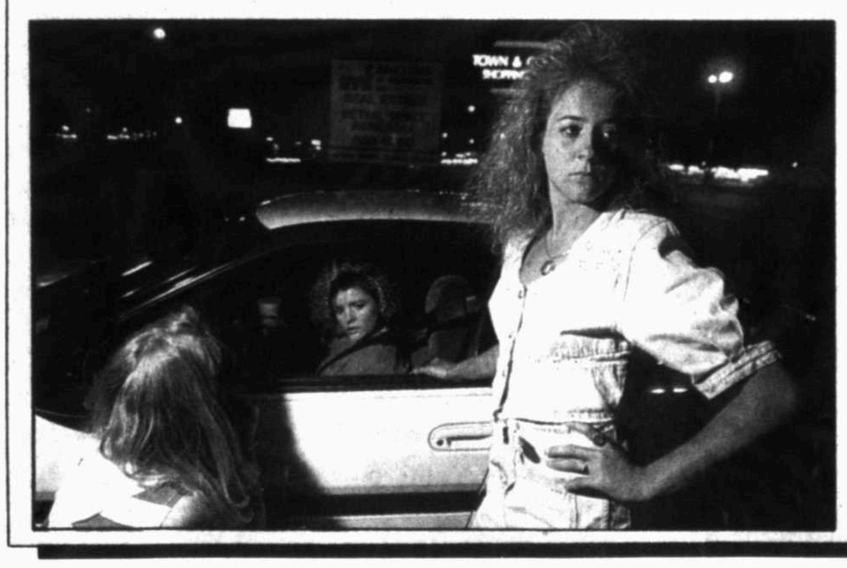

Currently about 69 percent of Midlanders are registered to vote, and more are expected to do so by October, Ms.

Officials ponder park proposition

■ City Council members are proposing plans for construction of a 100-acre park in southwest Midland.

By Darren J. Waggoner
Staff writer

City officials are mulling long-range plans for the development of a 100-acre park — including 10 baseball fields — in southwest Midland in hopes of stimulating development in the area, according to Mayor J.D. Faircloth.

The proposed site, located just east of Loop 250 and north of Highway 80, is currently vacant. Faircloth believes there is room for at least 600 homes to be built in the area.

"We want to stimulate in-fill development where the water and sewage is already there," he said. "We see a tremendous opportunity for growth in that area."

The park would also attract a high volume of little league action and thereby free several other area parks for different activities, Faircloth said.

"There are a lot of kids living in west Midland. This park would certainly gain a large following," Faircloth said. "We're looking at a Hogan Park-type facility." Hogan Park — including Angels Stadium, the 27-hole golf course, softball and baseball diamonds and the park itself — lies on about 75 acres of city-owned land.

Faircloth estimates the complex would cost between $1-1.5 million. But he hopes to partially fund the construction with private money.

"We're looking at 10 (baseball) diamonds in a circle, soccer fields and a large open area with a pavillion and a picnic area," Faircloth said. "The concession area would be in the middle with the fields circling."

On Monday, District 4 city council member Claudia Egan and Faircloth will host a "town meeting" at the Dellwood Senior Center where they expect to discuss the park proposal with District 4 residents.

An informal survey of several residents living near the proposed site overwhelmingly supported the park.

"This area is full of children day and night. And most of the time they'll be playing in the street," said Ben Rickstrom, of the 1200 block of Century Drive, while pointing to about 20 children playing tag in the street a block away.

"But how ever they could get these kids organized ... more power to them. It's a miracle no child has been smashed in the street the way some of these drivers drive around here."

Jeremiah Allen, of the 4700 block of Cherokee Drive, believes the park would be put to good use.

"Only thing out there now is a bunch of cows grazing. I would be for it, no question at all," he said.

Allen's neighbor, James Keith, concurred but had one reservation.

"I wouldn't want it too close to the Loop. Those kids would get out there and be hit in a second," he said. "If it's set off a ways (from Loop 250) then it would be OK. Anything to get these kids out of my yard."

Whether to save or not to save: That is the question

Today's question is this:

Should people take what money they have and spend it lavishly, thus enjoying life to the fullest; or should they be painfully conservative in their spending habits, always keeping an eye on the future and, as a result, assuring themselves of financial security in their latter years?

Ott

There are pros and cons to both approaches.

Let's examine the two groups.

First, the happy-go-lucky types. For whatever faults they may possess, we can't deny the fact that they really do seem to enjoy life. They go places and do things the rest of us just dream about. Money — or the lack thereof — is never an obstacle. They drive new cars. They ski in Switzerland. They golf in Scotland. They tan in the Caribbean.

In other words, they are flashy. They toss around money with little or no regard for the future. If they see something they want, they buy it.

But how?

They earn a good salary, that's for sure, but so do lots of people. Still, these happy-go-lucky types always seem to have something tangible — a new toy, so to speak — to show for it while their more frugal counterparts don't.

Is it fair?

That depends on your perspective.

But one thing is clear. For whatever reason — good or bad, right or wrong — certain people just seem more at ease spending their money than others do. They possess a lust for life, a craving for adventure, that demands action. And if it requires money, so be it. They will somehow come up with the cash.

"Enjoy today because tomorrow may never come." That's their credo.

The down side to this type of living, of course, is that tomorrow does indeed arrive. And with it comes the requirement that you pay your debts.

With cold hard cash.

For many, it comes sooner than expected, often without warning, without fanfare. They wake up one morning, and, boom, the day of reckoning is staring at them.

We've all heard the horror stories. A person we always assumed had money to burn suddenly finds himself at retirement age with nothing to show for it.

He's broke.

For years, he had enjoyed the best of everything. Nothing was too good or too expensive. He was one of the fun people. Life was a breeze, a game at which he always excelled. Laughs were a dime a dozen, and so were the parties. If you were ever in the mood for a good time, all you had to do was find him. The rest would take care of itself.

But time passes.

Now the old man lives alone in a cluttered apartment, surrounded by fond memories, but little else of value. He's not bitter, but you can't help but feel pity for him. Even though he can recall the good times in great detail, it is painfully obvious that his lust for life has faded.

Still, if you asked him today, knowing what he knows, if he would change the way he lived his earlier life, chances are he would grin and say, "Nope, not a bit."

So is this man a winner or a loser?

You be the judge.

Then there is the other group, those cautious men and women who cling to their earnings with an ever-present eye on the future, carefully planning their retirement years so that comfort and security will be guaranteed.

They do without today in order to have plenty tomorrow.

At first glance, you might think they lead a boring life. They don't travel. They don't purchase frivolous gifts. They don't spend money on what they don't need.

They save because they are practical people. Their immediate needs are taken care of, but if something is not truly necessary, then chances are they will pass on buying it.

It is more important for them to have money in the bank, collecting interest for the future. They wouldn't enjoy an extravagant lifestyle, even if they could afford it, because to spend money foolishly would leave them feeling guilty.

That's just the way they are, no-frills kind of people.

But on the positive side, they do indeed have a nest egg waiting for them at age 65. They retire in comfort. The house is paid for, and there's even a modest amount of cash to pass on to their children.

Maybe they didn't dine in Paris or gamble in Monte Carlo or even make that token trek to London to witness the changing of the guard at Buckingham Palace.

But for them, such memories are irrelevant. They lived life on their terms ... conservatively, cautiously, carefully.

They did it their way.

Are they winners or losers?

You be the judge.

Dems change state Senate candidates

AUSTIN (AP) — In a game of political musical chairs, the Texas Democratic Party rearranged its candidates Saturday in several state Senate districts.

The action — occurring 5 months after the primary elections, and less than 90 days before the general election — was in response to Secretary of State John Hannah's order to change district boundaries.

Under the decision by the State Democratic Executive Committee, two candidates rejected by voters earlier this year received new political life — Roman Martinez of Houston and state Sen. Temple Dickson of Sweetwater.

And Democrats, reinvigorated by the new redistricting map that favors their party, had only harsh words for Republicans who are challenging the district boundaries in court.

"They're doing what they do best, and that is acting like a bunch of damn kids," State Democratic Party Chairman Bob Slagle said referring to the GOP.

Democratic candidates involved in the changes said they were happy to be back in more friendly districts, but that voters are likely to be confused.

Talking about a district he switched from, Frank Madla said, "Originally, it was only a Bexar County district. Then it was a West Texas district. Then it was a South Texas district. Now it's back to West Texas. There's confusion out there."

Karen Hughes, executive director of the State Republican Party, said the candidate changes were "a futile exercise." "The Democrats are attempting to rewrite history," she said.

For the Nov. 3 general election, Hannah ordered that the state Senate district boundaries approved by the Legislature be in place.

Those boundaries are vastly different from the ones that were in place for the March 10 primary elections. The primary election district lines were set by a three-judge federal panel in Texas, and were expected to help Republicans make significant gains in the 31-member Senate.

But last month, a three-judge federal panel in Washington, D.C. approved the plan adopted by the Legislature. Hannah then ordered the change in districts.

In response, here's what the Democrats did Saturday:

■ Martinez is now the party's nominee in District 6, which is a Hispanic-dominated district under the Legislature's plan. Don Coffey, the previous District 6 nominee stepped aside. Under the Texas judges' plan, Martinez faced, and lost, the Democratic nomination against Sen. John Whitmire in District 15 in a runoff.

■ Madla of San Antonio quit the nomination in District 24 and became the nominee in District 19.

■ Dickson became the nominee in District 24. Under the Texas judges' plan, he was paired in the Democratic primary against state Sen. Bill Sims of San Angelo and lost.

■ Greg Luna of San Antonio became the nominee in District 26. Carlos Higgins who won the nomination stepped aside.

Texas death row inmate wins new trial

HOUSTON (AP) — A federal judge has ordered a new trial for Texas death row inmate Roger Leroy DeGarmo because jurors who convicted him were not told of a witness' plea bargain with prosecutors.

U.S. District Judge James DeAnda issued the order Friday, staying DeGarmo's Feb. 13, 1993 execution date which was the inmate's seventh in 12 years.

DeGarmo, 37, was convicted of Jan. 8, 1979, kidnapping and shooting death of Kimberly Ann Strickler, 20, of Houston, in Fort Bend County.

Testimony showed DeGarmo and co-defendant Helen Leydalia Mejia stole Miss Strickler's car in Houston, putting her in the trunk. She later was shot in the head as she was held in the trunk.

DeAnda ruled that Fort Bend County prosecutors failed to tell DeGarmo or the jury that Ms. Mejia had agreed to testify against DeGarmo in exchange for a 10-year deferred adjudicated sentence. The sentence allowed her to serve probation and have the charge expunged once she successfully completed the term.

DeAnda ordered a new trial to be conducted within 120 days.

Assistant State Attorney General Bill Zapalac said he may appeal the ruling.

In his order, DeAnda said former Fort Bend County District Attorney Bill Meitzen and prosecutor Timothy Sloan "failed to provide requested arrest and conviction records and secreted medical, psychological and psychiatric evaluations of (Ms.) Mejia, a drug addict with a history of mental problems."

The case also questioned the propriety of State District Judge Charles Dickerson, who DeGarmo and his attorney allege was privy to Ms. Mejia's deal with prosecutors in the 1980 trial.

"Because this court finds that the now developed record shows the existence of a more extensive, secret deal between the state and its key witness and reflects a disturbing reappearance of (Ms.) Mejia's missing medical records in 1987 from the custody and home of the prosecutor, the court finds that relief should be granted for petitioner's claim of impaired confrontation," DeAnda wrote.

But Meitzen, now in private practice, said Friday, "No deal was ever made with (Ms.) Mejia except that we would not seek the death penalty."

A jury of four men and eight women took only one hour to find DeGarmo guilty of capital murder and the aggravated kidnapping of John C. Moers of Missouri City.

In a five-minute speech to the jury after his conviction, DeGarmo told the panel that they had done the right thing.

"I was there," he said. "I committed a crime."

He had threatened to kill jurors at his trial if they did not sentence him to death.

Shirley Parish, Miss Strickler's mother, said she hoped the state would appeal DeAnda's ruling.

"What is the justice system all about? In my opinion, it's to determine innocence or guilt. DeGarmo admitted his guilty. It was just a technicality (that led to the new trial). It's a terrible waste," she said.

Known on death row as "Animal," DeGarmo originally welcomed the sentence, thanking the first judge who set a date. He later said he would auction off three of his five tickets to the execution, sending the funds raised to his family and to the that of the victim.

In February, he was granted his sixth stay two days before he was scheduled to be executed. He said then he was disappointed, comparing himself to an astronaut who has been told his flight was scrubbed.

Prosecution rests case in starvation trial

GALVESTON (AP) — Prosecutors have rested their case against a Tarrant County couple accused in the starvation death of their teen-age son.

Jay and Linda Hill held hands and appeared to cry Friday as three doctors testified to the emaciated condition of 13-year-old Stephen Hill before his death Nov. 16.

"He was lethargic and comatose. His heart had stopped, and when it was started again, the heart rate was low," said Dr. Michael Patrick Morris, who treated the 55-pound boy at Cook-Fort Worth Children's Medical Center. "His skin was transparent, and he had rashes and ulcers. His kidneys were in failure."

He testified that, in essence, because the child's body was not receiving proper nutrition through food, it was trying to get them from within.

"So, does that mean that his body was basically devouring itself?" asked Tarrant County prosecutor Alan Levy.

"Yes, that's right," Morris said.

Court-appointed attorney Larry Moore, who represents Hill, 42, and Charles Baldwin, the court-appointed attorney for Mrs. Hill, 38, said they plan to call witnesses Monday.

The White Settlement couple is charged with injury to a child. If convicted, they face a maximum sentence of life in prison.

Authorities have said the defendants deprived their son of food and occasionally chained him away from food.

Brooks, Cyrus vie for nominations

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Million-selling singer Garth Brooks and sensation Billy Ray Cyrus are expected to receive multiple nominations this week for the annual Country Music Association awards.

Veteran Reba McEntire and new solo singer Wynonna Judd also are likely to be nominated in several categories when five finalists in 12 categories are announced Thursday.

Winners will be chosen Sept. 30 at the 26th annual CMA awards show televised on CBS-TV.

Brooks is rated a strong candidate to be a finalist in five categories: entertainer of the year, No. 1 male vocalist, song of the year, best single and top album.

His "What She's Doing Now" is eligible for both song of the year (award to songwriter) and single of the year (award to performer). His album "Ropin' the Wind," which has sold 7 million copies, is a prime candidate for best LP.

Cyrus, an unknown just four months ago, is expected to be nominated for top awards based on his smash single "Achy Breaky Heart" and million-selling debut album "Some Gave All."

Although he's new to the national scene, he's still likely to be a finalist in such categories as album of the year, best single, top video and the Horizon Award for most promising artist.

McEntire could be a finalist in up to five categories: entertainer of the year, No. 1 female vocalist and top video for "The Night the Lights Went Out in Georgia." She also could garner nominations for best single and best album, both for "For My Broken Heart."

Judd, singing solo since January, is likely to become a finalist for awards based on her album "Wynonna" and her single "She Is His Only Need."

Voters support organization's proposal to protect waterways

AUSTIN (AP) — Austin voters overwhelmingly supported an environmentalist group's proposal to protect Barton Creek and Barton Springs, sinking a city council member's plan favoring development.

The Save Our Springs initiative, organized by a citizen's group to oppose development which could hurt the two waterways, was approved by almost a 2-1 margin.

Voters thrashed Councilman Ronney Reynolds' proposal, supported by Citizens for Responsible Planning, which was organized to oppose SOS. His alternative also was defeated nearly 2-1.

With 62 percent of the precincts reporting, the SOS plan had 64.3 percent support. Reynolds' proposal was opposed by 64.9 percent.

The SOS plan tightens water quality controls by limiting the degree of construction and amount of pollutants that could be discharged in the Barton Creek watershed and Barton Springs' recharge zone.

Critics say it is so strict the city would lose jobs and tax dollars.

Adoption of the SOS plan adoption ends a long struggle that divided the council and spilled into courtrooms.

SOS members initially expected a May 2 election after gathering almost 27,000 signatures from voters, but a majority of council members opposed a judge's order and blocked the election.

The council then drafted its blueprint and placed both to voters Saturday.

Reynolds' plan would have brought regional — not just city-controlled — land under regulations.

Reynolds says Austin already has tough clean-water laws on the books, but opponents say his plan, which they claim to be riddled with loopholes, would allow overdevelopment in the environmentally sensitive 354-square-mile area.

Free trade could mean coming out party for El Paso

EL PASOs (AP) — Although some officials feel El Paso has been ignored in the run to a free trade pact, they say few other cities will reap as many benefits when business barriers fall.

"We're right on the border and right in middle of the U.S. border with Mexico. You cannot build that kind of geographic accessibility," said Bob Cook, vice president for governmental affairs and education at the city's Economic Development Council.

"There's an awful lot happening here that people don't realize," Cook said. "When industry looks at where to locate to tap into the Mexican market, El Paso is always going to be on the list."

The future may look good, but some city leaders say the city has been excluded from a role in developing the North American Free Trade Agreement.

"I get perturbed when I go to meetings (on free trade) and they don't even mention El Paso," said Barbara Perez, El Paso Hispanic Chamber of Commerce chairwoman. "They talk about going to the border and they are thinking San Antonio, and that's ridiculous to me."

El Paso sits adjacent to Ciudad Juarez, Mexico's largest border city. San Antonio, by comparison, is about 150 miles north of the border.

City leaders were disheartened when free trade talks were held in Dallas and Houston.

And Mayor Bill Tilney in the past year has fired off letters to national leaders and government agencies when he thought El Paso was being left out of free trade discussions.

City officials joined the chorus of critics when the Environmental Protection Agency issued a draft of its border cleanup plan before it had held any public hearings in border cities.

El Paso still has doubts that the federal government will provide funds to offset the environmental and infrastructure problems the city will suffer. El Paso County Judge Alicia Chacon has fought the trade pact for that reason.

But if an agreement is finally approved, El Paso could be holding a coming out party.

Not that El Paso will be doing anything new. Since Spanish colonizers crossed through Paso del Norte from Mexico four centuries ago, the city has always been closely tied to Mexico — in trade, culture, families.

The maquiladora industry, which dates to the 1960s, was founded in El Paso-Juarez and thrives in the area today. El Paso exports $5 billion of Texas' $17 billion a year to Mexico.

"This community had a proper perspective on free trade and that perspective is that free trade is an acceleration of trade policy that has been ongoing between the United States and Mexico for a number of years," said Don Michie, director of the University of Texas at El Paso Institute for Manufacturing and Materials Management.

"NAFTA is not a panacea. It won't substitute for a sound, level plan for the community, but it will make a good plan better."

Michie said El Paso businesses directly consulted with negotiators on rules of origin and transportation provisions. While Dallas, Houston and San Antonio are discussed in terms of becoming financial centers, he said that's not the niche that would fit El Paso.

"El Paso and Juarez are the mecca for production sharing between United States and Mexico," he said. "It has all the attributes to assume an incredible role in the area of higher tech manufacturing in support of North American industry.

LETTER FROM COLLEGE

Midland College to form vocal, instrumental group this fall

By H.A. Tuck

A select vocal and instrumental group is being formed this fall to provide both on-campus and off-campus performances. Called "The Midland College Ambassadors," the group will be directed by Rob Hunt, who is in charge of the college's Commercial Music program. The ensemble will perform for service club luncheons, campus events and community events. Hunt is seeking highly motivated vocalists and instrumentalists.

Tuck

The repertoire for the group will run the gamut, including pop, musical theater, madrigals, jazz, and country styles. In addition to singers, Hunt is seeking drummers, brass and reed players, plus guitarists and bass players.

An audition may be scheduled by calling the Communications-/Fine Arts Division at 685-4624. Hunt will arrange a time for an audition.

Beginning tomorrow, time permits will be issued for persons wishing to reserve times for fall semester registration. Time permits assign specific periods to report for official registration on either Aug. 25 or 26. The permits are being issued in the Student Services office, which is located in the Student Center. Hours are 7 a.m.-5 p.m. Monday through Thursday through Aug. 20.

It has seemed like a long wait, but the new entrance road to the campus is complete and open for traffic. Contractors paved the road, then waited almost a week before striping the lanes and removing traffic barricades.

Regardless, the traffic artery now is open, linking the north side of Chaparral Circle to Garfield Street. The access at Garfield is aligned with the southern portion of Siesta Drive, which is a U-shaped street.

Coming next will be installation of the electronic message sign, which will be located quite near the new entrance. The message board will list events which are taking place on campus and will be operational 24-hours per day.

Also being installed soon will be a new scoreboard at Chaparral Center. Both the message board and the scoreboard were made possible through an agreement between the college and Coca-Cola.

We've received an advance copy of the Continuing Education course listings for the fall semester and there are some great new classes. Registration will start on Aug. 17. Our advice is to enroll early to avoid disappointment, since many of the classes reach their enrollment limits several days, or even weeks, prior to their starting days.

The course bulletins are being inserted in next Sunday's edition of the Reporter-Telegram, so look for it then.

Commissioner backs school's condom plan

HOUSTON (AP) — A plan to distribute condoms at a Galveston high school has won the backing of the state health commissioner.

Dr. David R. Smith wrote Ball High School board president Susan R. Broll to encourage what he called a health issue — not a political one.

"For the record, I am a proponent of a strong school-based health education program that includes sex education. I am biased, no question about it," Smith wrote Aug. 5.

At a board meeting this week, a group of citizens called on trustees to rescind the decision.

St. John's School of Odessa Paves The Way From Pre-kindergarten Through 6th Grade

During the earliest years of school, even in pre-kindergarten for ages 3 and 4, and kindergarten for age 5, your girl or boy will acquire most of the learning habits, good and bad, that endure through life.

Since 1950, St. John's Episcopal School has existed to give children a running start through excellence in education. As Odessa's only certified Carden-Method school, St. John's essential thrust is to take average boys and girls - from any racial or religious background - and create "advantaged children" who find pride in achievement, self-confidence in comprehension, and pleasure in problem solving.

The school takes understandable pride in its pupils' exceptionally high test scores and in the grade records posted in high schools, colleges, and universities by its past students.

Here's how St. John's will help your child discover the joy of learning...

THE CARDEN METHOD of teaching is nationally recognized for helping the child function at the upper level of his capacity and for expanding that capacity. St. John's teachers are degreed and all receive periodic training in the use of Carden materials and methods.

SMALL CLASSES, through limited enrollment, assure ample individual instruction for every girl and boy.

LEARNING PROCESSES begin right in pre-kindergarten with letters, numbers, and "Reading Readiness". Each level provides a solid foundation beneath the next.

BEYOND THE "THREE R'S," St. John's provides excellent training at virtually all levels in such fields as art, science, physical education, computer-science, Spanish, and music. Fifth and sixth graders may participate in elementary-school band. Should your family move, St. John's pupils are fully prepared to enter any other school.

THE CHRISTIAN HERITAGE is central to St. John's so that Christian thought and ethics become natural to your child's everyday life and learning.

EXTENDED DAY ENRICHMENT CLASSES are available for all ages until 5:30 p.m.

EDUCATION IN BRIEF

Lee High School Principal Jack D. Fryar recently received a letter commending the school's ability to prepare students for college veterinary studies.

William Banks, associate dean of the Texas of Veterinary Medical Center at Texas A& M in College Station, wrote, "Preparation in high school certainly provides an important foundation for students continued success in the rigorous academic programs that lead to the degree of Doctor of Veterinary Medicine.

"I applaud you, your faculty, and staff for the continuing success that your high school has demonstrated in placing students into our program ... Please give a job 'well done' on behalf of the College of Veterinary Medicine to your counselors, biology teachers and science teachers ... Thank you for sending us your best."

Dates for AIMS testing program slated

Staff report

Students can take a battery of tests and evaluations — for a fee of $550 — which will reveal their aptitudes or things they are best at doing.

Midland College has announced the fall dates for hosting the AIMS Aptitude Testing Program on campus. The dates are Sept. 11-13, Sept. 25-27, and Dec. 11-13.

AIMS is a non-profit, tax-exempt research foundation which develops, administers and interprets aptitude work samples. Based in Dallas, its main goal is to help youngsters and adults plan their educations and careers.

Participating students are given specific information on vocations they will probably find most satisfying, which college majors and colleges they should consider and what occupational pitfalls to avoid.

The fee for the entire program is $550 and includes the entire battery of tests and the evaluation.

AIMS staff member Brenda Smith said that rising college costs force students to be more careful when they choose their colleges and college majors.

"Knowing your aptitudes — the things you're best at doing — before you go to college can save time and money. We tested a high school student who was considering a psychology major. During her evaluation she learned that she had wonderful aptitudes for occupational therapy," Ms. Smith said.

"After exploring this new career idea, she decided to pursue it. Unlike psychology, occupational therapy is offered at very few schools. She was tested early enough to apply to three colleges with occupational therapy majors and was accepted at two of the schools.

"None of the colleges she was considering before her AIMS testing had an occupational therapy program. She saved herself the pain of changing colleges, the loss of credits that would not transfer, and the extra time in college that switching majors would entail," she added.

College students who cannot decide which major is best for them take the AIMS tests, as well.

"Knowing their real abilities helps them focus on appropriate majors," Ms. Smith said. "Sometimes the aptitudes confirm the direction they have already considered. Other times they open a whole new world of possibilities. One recent client switched from anthropology to criminal justice without having to get a Ph.D."

The three day program involves tests which measure an individual's inherit, natural abilities. The aptitude work samples measure one's talent for specific areas of determining how quickly and accurately he or she can perform certain tasks. These work samples are not school or I.Q. tests and there is no pass/fail judgment.

Some of the aptitudes measured by AIMS are perceptual speed, finger dexterity, frame of reference, total memory and pitch discrimination, structural visualization, convergent and divergent thinking.

Tests are administered on a Friday with a one-to-one session on either Saturday or Sunday to review the results and make recommendations based on the scores. Written materials include a report designed specifically for the examinee. An audio tape of the conference is also given to each client.

The AIMS Testing Program has been hosted by Midland College since 1976 and is offered several times during the fall and spring semesters. It is now conducted in the new wing of the counseling center at Midland College.

As enrollment space is limited, interested persons should call the AIMS office in Dallas at their earliest convenience for further information or to schedule appointments.

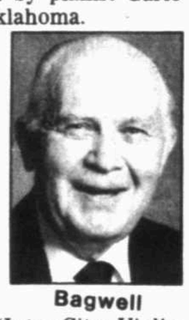

The telephone number for AIMS is (214) 234-8378.

Bagwell to perform at orchestra camp

Staff report

Musician Herbert Bagwell of Oklahoma will be the guest artist at Summer String Orchestra Camp 7 p.m. Thursday. The violinist will be accompanied by pianist Garie Kyle, also of Oklahoma.

Bagwell

The performance will be presented in Midland College's Allison Fine Arts Auditorium, and is the culminating event of summer string camp activities.

Bagwell established the "Inter-City Violin Studios" in Oklahoma City, which is sponsoring the concert. He will perform as part of the annual summer string activities for Midland Independent School District.

Bagwell's performance is open to the public. His performance will include classical music, jazz, ragtime, country and Nashville-style fiddle playing.

The second week of summer string camp activities continue Monday.

The camp is open to any string student in Midland and costs $22.50 for students in grades 9-12, and $17.50 for students in grades 6-8.

Seven MISD string teachers are conducting the camp and two guest teachers will participate.

Students in grades 9-12 meet 8:30 a.m.-12:30 p.m. Monday through Thursday. Students in grades 6-8 meet 10 a.m.-12:30 p.m. on the same days.

Camp instruction will include new theory, new pieces and introduction to the All-Region/All State Music competition skills.

More soldiers to leave for Kuwait

DALLAS (AP) — About 500 Fort Hood soldiers are scheduled to leave Monday for Kuwait to participate in military training exercises, officials have announced.

This is the largest contingent to be deployed from the base since Pentagon officials announced last week that 2,400 soldiers, including about 1,900 from Fort Hood, would return to the Persian Gulf.

The 1st Cavalry Division troops will depart Monday between 4 p.m. and 6 p.m.

REPUBLICAN CONVENTION
HOUSTON '92

GOP hurricane has Houston in its path

By Michael Graczyk

HOUSTON (AP) — If it's August, then it's prime hurricane season for Houston-area residents.

But this August there's a storm of a different sort gaining momentum to strike the city.

The Republicans are coming.

And Houston asked for it.

In the wake of the four-day Republican National Convention that begins next Monday, city boosters hope the GOP and thousands of media types and political junkies who follow such shows will leave behind more than $100 million.

The Houston Astrodome, the site of the event, is undergoing a metamorphosis as it's transformed from a 60,000-seat sports arena into a cozy TV studio with a live audience of 35,000. For two weeks, construction crews have been working nearly around the clock to put up a podium, hang flags and special lighting, erect television anchor booths and install a media village in the Astrohall next door.

"There are certain things you don't want to get too far ahead with because the longer they are up there the greater the chance to get it messed up," Mike Miller, director of operations for the convention, said.

The final touches go in this week even as Republicans begin showing up in town for discussion of the party platform.

Ironically, the platform hearings are scheduled for the George Brown Convention Center in downtown Houston, the brand-new center that was built for a national political convention but was shunned in favor of the Astrodome.

"I think we're going to have a great convention," Robert Mosbacher, chairman of the Bush re-election campaign, says. "The president and everybody in Washington really knows how much that means.

"Houston has done a better job than any other city in getting ready for a convention. People who have worked on the convention (from Washington) and the president always tell me that Houston has done a superb job."

The road to nomination for a second term certainly changed for Bush, however, since Jan. 8, 1991 when Houston was selected as the convention site over San Diego and New Orleans.

Eighteen months ago, the likelihood of war in the Persian Gulf was on everyone's minds. The war came and went quickly. Almost as quickly, Bush's standing in polls soared and then crashed. The Democrats went from a half-dozen candidates to a solid ticket headed by Arkansas Gov. Bill Clinton, whose fortunes rose as fast as Bush's cratered.

Among the first speakers to address the convention will be former President Ronald Reagan.

"I think what Ronald Reagan started around the world — the fall of communism, the fall of the Soviet Union — George Bush completed," Mosbacher said. Reagan's appearance, he added, is "a great way of reminding them of the team effort."

Republicans aren't the only ones hoping to grab the media spotlight during the Aug. 17-20 convention.

Dozens of groups of demonstrators supporting and opposing abortion, gay rights, veterans' issues, AIDS research, environmental concerns, arts funding, religious issues, civil rights and affirmative action are sending representatives from Texas and other parts of the country to Houston.

"There's no doubt we'll have protesters and parades," says Kenneth Lay, chairman of the Houston Host Committee. "But the Houston Police Department has set up a certain site for protesters and that's been taken care of."

A convention-related organization known as Clean Houston Inc. used the GOP event to conduct a cleanup campaign in some areas of the city throughout the summer, carting away 1.5 million pounds of trash, cleaning 239 illegal dump sites and planting nearly 17,000 flowering plants.

"We have well over 10,000 volunteers now and we will have 15,000 or more involved before it's all over," Lay said. "There's a real outpouring of support. We intend to make Houston look very good at the convention."

There's no place like Dome

HOUSTON (AP) — It's the place where heavyweight boxer Tex Cobb, still standing after a fearsome beating from champion Larry Holmes, tilted his bloody and sweat-soaked face over the ropes and shouted through swollen lips: "Let's party."

It's where Billy Jean King and Bobby Riggs staged the "Battle of the Sexes" in a historic tennis challenge and the site of bloodless bull fights where the bulls expended less energy than Cobb.

Billy Graham preached in it; guru Maharaj Ji filled it with incense; Satchel Paige joked about it; Mickey Mantle hit the first home run in it and football coach Bum Phillips once cried there.

Now it's the Republicans' turn to party in the Astrodome.

The Aug. 17-20 Republican National Convention is coming to what was lavishly nicknamed "The Eighth Wonder of the World" by its creator, Judge Roy Hofheinz, when it opened April 9, 1965.

In order to host its first national political convention, the Astrodome had to evict two of its regular tenants, Major League baseball's Houston Astros and the National Football League Houston Oilers.

The Astros are in the midst of a grueling 26-game, 28-day road trip and the Oilers will play all five preseason games on the road to accommodate the Republicans.

The Republicans will have to come up with quite a spectacle to match some of the thrilling moments that have occurred inside the world's first air-conditioned domed stadium.

It's already had more than one landslide. The Houston Cougars defeated Tulsa 100-6 in a 1965 college football game. The 1991 Cougars beat Southwestern Louisiana 73-3.

Oratory already has echoed from its 208-foot ceiling and across its 642-foot diameter, to its 25-feet below ground level floor.

"That's quite a dugout," New York Yankee Manager Casey Stengel once remarked.

Former Oilers coach Bill Peterson, a master of malaprops, was heard to instruct his team in proper patriotism: "Men, for the national anthem, I want you standing on your helmets with the sidelines in your hands."

And when the speeches begin, it may be comforting to remember that the Astrodome's roof is constructed to withstand wind up to 135 mph.

The Astrodome started as a Hofheinz brainstorm after he visited Greek ruins and foresaw not only a circular coliseum on a prairie in southwest Houston — the vision also included a roof and air conditioning.

Groundbreaking for the Astrodome was typically Texan. Dignitaries marched out to the site with their Colt .45 pistols and fired into the ground to signify the start of construction.

The place has been popping with a full range of emotions ever since. The Astrodomain complex, which includes the Astrodome, Astroarena and Astrohall, serves over 6.4 million customers each year.

Graham attracted 61,000 in 1965, largest ever in the Dome at the time. Elvis Presley set a one-day record of 88,149 for a matinee and evening performance at the 1974 Houston Livestock Show and Rodeo.

Evel Knievel set a world indoor motorcycle jump record that since has been broken. In 1985, Knievel watched as another daredevil, Karel Soucek of Canada, fell to his death attempting to drop in a barrel from the Astrodome ceiling into a tub of water.

Fans cheered when Nolan Ryan pitched his record breaking fifth no-hitter in 1981 and again in 1986 when Mike Scott's no-hitter clinched the National League West Division crown for the Astros.

They cried with Phillips, the popular former Oilers coach, when the Luv Ya Blue Oilers returned at midnight to a 50,000-plus crowd in an Astrodome pep rally after losing to Pittsburgh in the 1979 AFC championship game.

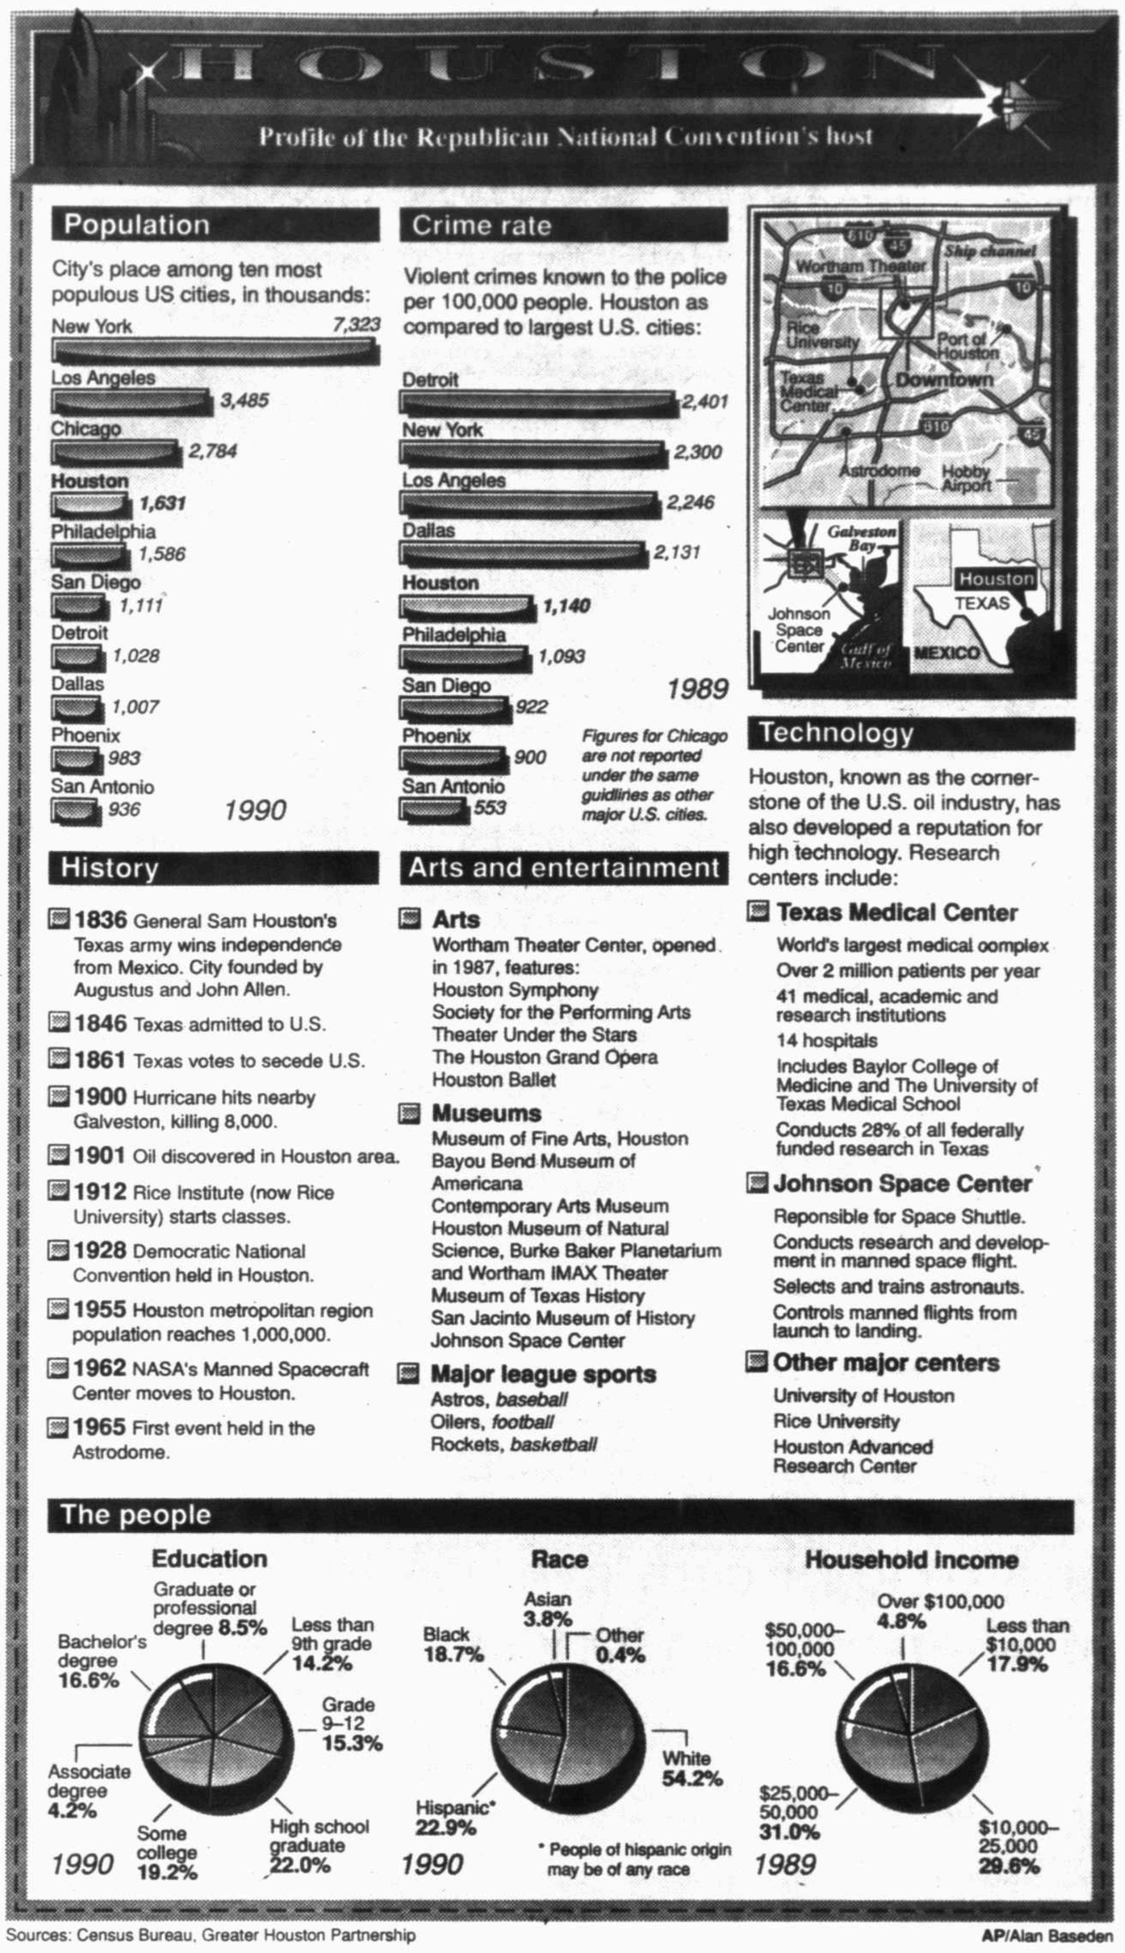

The Astrodome has inspired many who performed there.

"This is in truth one of the great wonders of the world . . . a magnificent dream coming true before our eyes . . . the boundless imagination of man transformed to reality," Graham said.

Baseball Hall of Famer Ernie Banks expected its stature to grow.

"This place still the Eighth Wonder of the World?" he asked after a game.

Told that is was, he replied: "I thought maybe it had moved up."

Republicans had tough times in Texas

By Michael Holmes

AUSTIN (AP) — The first Republican elected president didn't get a single vote in Texas.

Things didn't get much better for the GOP in the next 100 years or so, either.

But today, the incumbent president is a Texas Republican. Texas this month will host its second GOP national convention in eight years.

And the nation's third-largest state remains, as Richard Nixon's strategists once described it, the "big enchilada" — a huge electoral vote prize. No modern Democrat has won the White House without carrying Texas.

"There's no doubt that we're a two-party state now," said George Strake of Houston, former state GOP chairman who presided over dozens of election victories during the 1980s.

It wasn't always so. From the Civil War to the 1960s, Texas was like other Southern states — while there may have been liberals and conservatives, all voted Democratic.

President Bush, who calls Houston home, recounted that dilemma in his autobiography, "Looking Forward," when discussing his early involvement in Texas politics.

"The case against Republicans, as far as Texans were concerned, went back a century, to the Civil War and Reconstruction era. The state was solidly Democratic, and the allegiance of Texans to 'the party of our fathers' became even stronger during the lean years of the Depression," Bush wrote.

How lonely were Texas Republicans?

■ Abraham Lincoln, the first Republican U.S. president, got no votes in Texas. He wasn't on the 1860 ballot.

■ The first Republican elected governor, E.J. Davis in 1869, is described by one book as "the most vilified" in Texas history. He left office only after President Ulysses S. Grant denied his request for troops following his election loss to Democrat Richard Coke.

■ Republicans lost control of the Texas Legislature in 1871. They've never regained it.

■ By 1892, Republicans were so scarce that gubernatorial candidate A.J. Houston — youngest son of Texas hero Sam Houston — received only 1,322 votes, less than 1 percent of the total received by winner Jim Hogg, a Democrat.

■ The first Republican to win a statewide race after Reconstruction didn't do so until 1961. Wichita Falls college professor John Tower's victory in that U.S. Senate race came by a margin of 10,343 votes out of 886,091 cast.

■ The 1964 presidential victory of Texan Lyndon B. Johnson swept most Republicans from office. "All GOP congressmen in Texas were defeated, and only one Republican was elected to the Legislature. The work of a decade was in shambles," says the newly published "Texas Almanac's Political History of Texas."

■ In 1975, elected Republicans remained hard to find. The GOP held just 17 of 181 seats in the Legislature, one of 254 county sheriff posts, eight of 254 county judgeships and 19 county commissioner seats out of 1,016.

■ A total of 105 years passed between the time the first GOP governor, Davis, left office in 1874 and the second, Dallas oilman Bill Clements, entered in 1979. Defeated in 1982 and elected again in 1986, Clements remains the only Republican governor since Reconstruction.

"It was a long time" between those victories, Strake says. "I remember that when I became secretary of state (appointed by Clements), I was only the third Republican. I said my goal was to be the best . . . I think the first one committed suicide and the second was indicted."

The first cracks in the Democrats' stranglehold occurred in the 1950s, when Dwight Eisenhower twice carried Texas in presidential elections. The split between conservative "Tory" Democrats and liberals began to widen.

Then, in 1961, Republicans grabbed their first major prize. Tower won a special election to the U.S. Senate, filling the seat vacated by LBJ's election as vice president.

"If a political Richter scale had existed on May 27, 1961, it could not have registered the magnitude of this sudden, fierce earthquake that shook the entire state of Texas," writes Austin consultant John Knaggs in his book, "Two-Party Texas."

"Nor could it have measured the massive aftershock that rumbled across every other state of the old Confederacy . . . The once Democratic Solid South, shaken somewhat by the revolt for Dwight Eisenhower in the 1950s, had been cracked wide open," Knaggs wrote.

Tower's victory was staggering. Texas Republicans hadn't even bothered to hold a primary election in 1960. But liberal Democrats couldn't bring themselves to vote for conservative William Blakely of Dallas, and many figured Tower would be easier to knock off when the term ended in 1966.

He wasn't. Tower won re-election in 1966, 1972, 1978, retiring in 1984. His seat remains Republican. In 1984 and 1990, it was won by Phil Gramm, a one-time "Boll Weevil" Democrat who had changed parties in 1983 and is widely considered a 1996 presidential prospect.

"The political system prior to Tower was one party with two factions," Knaggs said. "It didn't change the whole picture immediately, but Tower's election provided a rallying point for Republicans at lower levels who'd been voting for conservative Democrats."

Current GOP Chairman Fred Meyer of Dallas says the gradual change in voting by conservative Texans has boosted his party's ranks.

"Go back 20 years ago, the conservative Democrats were in control," Meyer said. "The thing today is that somewhere between 50 and 60 percent of voters in Texas identify themselves as conservative. They may not all be Republicans, but they're conservatives."

Republicans say several factors contributed to GOP growth:

■ Republican women's clubs. For years, they staffed phone banks, licked envelopes, conducted get-out-the vote drives. "I give them a huge amount of credit. They provided the determination and the workers that allowed us to get where we are today," Strake said.

"Two people who helped on that were Phil Gramm and George Bush," Strake said. "I could call them night or day and say, 'I've got a county commissioner who's thinking about becoming a Republican.' They would make the calls. You get a call from a United States senator or the vice president of the United States, that's pretty impressive."

■ Immigration. As the Texas economy boomed in the 1970s and 1980s, thousands of Republicans moved in from the Northeast and Midwest. For the newcomers, voting Republican wasn't an alien notion.

■ Ronald Reagan. His 1984 renominating convention was held in Dallas, and his personal popularity helped candidates down the ballot.

Despite the gains, change has come slowly.

In many areas, Texas remains a Democratic stronghold. Nearly two dozen counties didn't even hold GOP presidential primary this year. Democrats control the state House and Senate. Of the seven top statewide offices, only two — treasurer and agriculture commissioner — are held by Republicans.

But Republicans are only one vote short of a majority on the nine-member Texas Supreme Court, hold more than one-third of the state House seats and count eight seats in Congress. Hundreds more hold local offices, which Meyer and Strake see as the real achievement.

"We control 23 of the 254 counties, but it's 45 percent of the population," Meyer said, noting GOP success in the state's metropolitan areas.

"It's not so much that we have a Texas Republican as president, or the fact that we've had a Republican U.S. senator for the last 31 years, but more that we have 800-plus Republicans who are in the courthouses now," Strake said. "That's what makes it a viable two-party state."

Students over 55 find it's not too late to learn

By Chip Brown
Associated Press Writer

LUBBOCK (AP) — At 74, Robert Dennis figures it's time to ditch his suit for tennis shoes, jeans and a T-shirt.

Genevieve Smead has gotten hooked on computers at 82.

And Marjorie Cartwright, 66, has become a die-hard fan of the Texas Tech Lady Red Raiders basketball team.

All are a part of Texas Tech's Seniors' Academy, a 2-year-old program encouraging folks over 55 to return to or even start college.

Dennis says he has "never felt younger," studying his scrupulous notes with classmates a quarter his age.

Mrs. Smead is majoring in ceramics, writes poetry on computers and laments, "Geography is difficult — so much to learn in a short period of time."

Kay Caddel, an adviser for Seniors' Academy students, says they get more out of their studies, in part, "because they don't party as much as our younger students."

Most of the 25 people enrolled in the senior education program are making up for lost time, Ms. Caddel says.

"It's not that they will go on to a second job," she said. "They are here because it's important to them at this stage of their life."

Many of the older students come back because they couldn't afford college when they graduated from high school in the 1930s and 1940s. Some are resuming an education interrupted by work, World War II or the start of a family.

The Seniors' Academy at Tech, one of several such programs across the country, attempts to make hitting the books a breeze for senior scholars.

No previous experience or results from college entrance exams are required. Seniors' Academy members are given individualized counseling and tutoring at no cost.

The older students are also allowed to register before everyone else, and courses are set up to ensure no running is required between classes to get there on time.

But Mrs. Cartwright is quick to point out that's where the benefits end.

"There is no special treatment in the classroom," she said. "Just because we are old and gray-headed doesn't mean they give us an A."

The senior seniors also get the same degree as younger seniors.

For Mrs. Smead, the oldest student at Texas Tech, getting that degree has been a lifelong ambition. A nurse for 45 years, she retired and spent seven years taking care of her husband who suffered from Alzheimer's disease and cancer.

A year and a half after her husband's death in 1984, Mrs. Smead enrolled at Tech. She is scheduled to graduate this month and credits the hard work required in the classroom with keeping her going.

"Heading back to school makes a person's life longer," says Mrs. Smead, who recently had an exhibit of numerous clay pitchers she has sculpted. "It keeps you thinking, alert and physically fit."

"For people who have been through a lot of life experiences, Genevieve does not hesitate to participate fully in the learning process," says Melody Weiler, chairwoman of Texas Tech's art department. "The students have respected her and she has provided an inspiration to others."

Mrs. Smead has composed dozens of poems on computer, adding, "I don't think I ever want to go back to a typewriter. You make too many mistakes and you have to type it all over again."

She confesses to seeking help on math problems from her 46-year-old son Ray, who gushes with pride.

"It speaks well for a person's capacity to keep growing and learning," he said. "Mom is a model for that."

Mrs. Cartwright was never much of a women's basketball fan. But after enrolling at Tech last fall as a general studies major, she discovered the Southwest Conference champion Lady Red Raiders and jumped on the bandwagon.

"We wouldn't miss a game now," she says.

Dennis, also a general studies major, says it was a little hard to blend in with students at first. So he mothballed a suit he wore to class and slipped into a T-shirt and jeans.

"I have got clothes just like the rest of them, right down to my Nike socks," says Dennis, a retired printer who graduated from high school in 1935 and immediately went to work. "I even wore my shorts this semester."

Dennis says he felt self-conscious when first going to class because he felt like "everyone was looking at the old man."

But after a while, students began asking Dennis for copies of his notes if they missed a class.

"That made me feel good," says Dennis, who is scheduled to graduate in May of 1994. "When you have been in the printing business as long as I have, you try to get everything into your notes. I think the other students appreciate that."

Mrs. Smead calls the past six years of chasing her bachelor of fine arts degree one of the greatest challenges in her life.

"I started when I was 76, and I have done it semester by semester," she said. "I am not saying these past six years have been a bed of roses. But I am determined to see it through. I try never to back away from a challenge."

Chili pickers earn average of $7 an hour, agency says

LAS CRUCES, N.M. (AP) — A state agency says the average green chili picker made more than $7 an hour last year in the Las Cruces area, but a farm workers union leader says the actual amount less than half that.

The state's wage information came from a survey of farmers, labor contractors and workers after interviews with nearly 2,000 chili pickers in Dona Ana and southern Sierra counties last fall, said Charles Gore of the New Mexico Agricultural Statistics Service.

But Carlos Marentes, president of the Border Agricultural Workers Union, said his $3.40 estimate is based on figures derived while helping prepare 500 to 600 income tax returns.

"I have seen these statistics (from the state Statistics Service) and really don't understand what they're trying to prove," Marentes said Thursday. "The Department of Agriculture relies on farm contractors and farmers rather than workers. They are partial — and their numbers do not exactly tell the reality of the situation."

Gore's figures showed most green chili pickers earned $5.30 to $8.30 an hour — an average of about $7.10 an hour. The lowest reported wage was $3.43 an hour, the top $15.20. The pickers worked six to seven hours a day.

Workers picking red chili averaged $5.70 an hour while jalapeno and cayenne harvesters averaged about $6 an hour, Gore said.

His numbers suggested that only 13 percent of the workers did not pick enough chili to earn minimum wage at the per-bucket rate. Federal labor law requires farmers to make up the difference between the amount earned by pickers and minimum wage, which was $4.25 an hour in 1991.

Marentes acknowledged that some workers occasionally earned $14 to $15 dollars an hour and that some averaged $5 to $6 an hour for full days. But he said: "The days are rare when a worker makes $30 to $35 a day."

The union reached an interim settlement this week in a strike against La Mesa grower Loyad Anderson, agreeing to suspend the strike until Aug. 12 while negotiations continue. Anderson agreed to raise the wage five cents, to 90 cents per six-gallon bucket of jalapenos. Marentes said a meeting is scheduled next week to decide if the strike should resume.

In another report, the state Cooperative Extension Service estimated the average chili farmer in the area made about $2,500 an acre and had expenses totaling more than $2,000, while land payments cut another $200 to $250 from the profit, leaving them an average $200 an acre after deducting costs.

New Mexico had almost 30,000 acres in chili last year with a total crop value of more than $59 million.

Broccoli stalks presidency

By Cheryl Laird
Hearst News Service

HOUSTON — A fresh new political group is taking on the behemoth Republican National Convention next week under the leadership of a much-maligned and politically seasoned green vegetable.

It's been more than two years since President Bush publicly slammed broccoli.

"I do not like broccoli," he said. "I'm president of the United States, and I'm not going to eat any more broccoli."

Now the National Broccoli Party is fighting back.

"We've gone the extra mile with the administration trying to reach an accommodation in this matter," said 64-year-old party chairman Warren Brice. "Now we're going to take the gloves off and play hardball and start our own party. It's a No-More-Mr.-Nice-Guy kind of thing."

Brice, also marketing director for the Houston Food Bank, will lead his "nutrition activists" at a press conference next week in unveiling the party platform and candidates, hoping to attract the attention of visiting political and media heavyweights.

"Forget all the rest, broccoli is the best!" will be the rallying cry as party disciples stand in front of one ton of broccoli, to be donated by MANN Packing Co. to charities under the care of the Houston Food Bank.

The new party platform features the slogans "Feel Good. Be Happy," "Do What's Right," and "Every Day, Eat Five Servings of Fruits and Veggies." It also calls for a balanced budget and lawyer limitation/abatement.

At the same folks' Broccoli Summit at Hermann Park two years ago, a human-size stalk of broccoli danced onstage while world leaders attended the economic summit.

FEMALE PERSONAL ADS
The following ads have been placed by females looking to meet males

I would like to meet a gentleman for companionship who likes to dance. Any age from 50 to 70. I'm 68-years-old and 5'8" and 130 lbs. I like C & W music and dancing; travel and camping; movies and rodeos. I don't want drinkers please. MP - 461

NO MUSH in this ad just truth. Attractive, 5'6" lady, slim, early 40's. I've been there, made mistakes and learned from those mistakes. What I learned is that relationships take alot of work, understanding and love on both sides. Now ready to start over but where do I go to mmet you? If you're 35-45, professional, tall, good physical shape, like C&W dancing, skiing, scuba, cooking, together, hot coffee on cool mornings, non smoker, then take chance. Send letter and photo. The holodays are coming; cool weather will soon be here. My fireplace would welcome a visitor and so would I. MP 467

34 YRS, SINGLE Hispanic female, enjoys dancing, eating out, movies, and swimming. I am 5' petite, brown hair/ eyes, attractive, fun loving and honest. Looking for single caucasion or Hispanic man, 30-40 yrs, handsome, intelligent, professional, fun loving, caringand honest. I will answer all responses. Only sincere need to respond. MP 468

ATTRACTIVE, BROWN- EYED brunette, 25, caucasion female. Never married and no children. I am a college educated professional who is easy going, honest & ready for fun. Would like to meet an educated, financially stable caucasion male, 25-32, with a great sense of humor & an outgoing personality. Must be drug-free & preferrably non-smoker. Please send photo, letter & phone number. MP 470

IS LIFE almost perfect for you? Are you not into the bar scene(at keast for meeting women)? Are you financially secure? Can you balance career, family and find some special times for us alone? Are you a gentleman between 38 and 48 years old? Well if these character traits apply to you get ready for the friendship of a lifetime..and let's see what happens. I'm an acheiver and desire a companion who is also capable. I'm a firm beleiver that working together in a business and towards common goals can bring challenge, exitement and togetherness fo a long, long time. I'm very happy being single and have learned to be alone. I can accumulate more property, business, money. But the one thing I want to experience is that one friendship that might lead into a lifelong companion. If you have had ups and downs in your life but are standing on your feet, good memories and busted dreams, enough life in you to still dream with enough faith to still acheive them. Wrire and send a picture! We might just have a good time. MP 471

38 YEAR OLD divorced caucasion female 5'6". Brown hair, green eyes, professional career. Looking for someone to share quality time with. I enjoy dancing, sports, movies, traveling or just quiet times at home. Would like to meet caucasion male 30's to 40's. Please send photo if possible. All replies answered. MP 472.

CUTE 5'2" brown hair, brown eyed 37 year old caucasion female looking for a 30 to 40 year old caucasion cowboy gentlemen. If starting out as friends doesn't scare you, drop me a line. Kids welcome. Not looking for game players. Thanks anyways. MP 476

WANTED, PROFESSIONAL MAN who enjoys spoiling, pampering, and romancing that special lady in his life. Someone financially secure and well educated as myself. If you're intrigued by an attractive green eyed blonde that is spoiled, spontaneous, confident, classy, fun, loving, and intelligent then we should meet. I love giving attention but must admit I require alot as well. MP 477.

FEMALE PERSONAL ADS

MY FRIEND'S tell me the following man no longer exists but I have faith that he does- He is a Caucasion male 45-50 years of age - 6ft. tall or taller - 190 lbs - Christian (Baptist preferably) who believes in family & home values - financially stable - enjoys children (grown) enjoys good music, movies, long walks, outdoor sports, or week-end excursions. He does not drink, smoke, and is drug free. He is faithful to one and can shower a lady with TLC - in return for a lot of love and pampering- someone who wants a serious lasting relationship with a blue eyed, 40ish, tall Caucasion female. Photo and phone number- all replies answered - Children welcome. MP 478

LOOKING FOR that special man. You are out there! I'm 65 (plus a year) weight 145lbs, 5'3" caucasion female, healthy, young at heart, with lots of love to give. What about being friends and enjoy life? What then- we'll see. Please send photo and phone number. I will surely call you. MP-480

ROAMNTIC, HONEST, sincere, attractive, fun-loving, intelligent, spoiled, assertive, green-eyed blonde, is searching for Mr. Right who is handsome, stable. I am looking to becomethe best of friend's and lovers with that someone special and to make a fairy tale romance come true forever. I enjoy all types of romance. I love attention and surprises and enjoy returning the favors. I don't have any children, but would like to. So if any of this strikes you as intriguing, then take a chance you won't regret and write me! Send photo if possible MP 479

55 YEAR OLD Caucasion widow. Enjoys quiet times, movies, just sharing, laughter and not being alone. I work, not high class just got a lot of love and friendship for the right person. I am not the perfect one or size. But I do have a lot of humor, and don't except any man to be perfect. It is hard to start over after living so many years with a dear one that knew ypu and loved you for what you are and what you had been. I think at this time I would just really like to find someone to be friends with. Hope to hear from a lonely person that, if nothing else, needs to talk to someone who understands the pain and and lonliness. Please write or send phone #. MP-485

PREFER: Non smoking, light drinking, tall, gorgeous, rich, articulate, intelligent, professional, who's a great dancer with his own hot tub & a fireplace Will settle for non- smoking, light-drinking, self- supporting "good ole boy", who enjoys dancing & has a good sense of humor. Send photo & phone #. MP-487

SINGLE LADY, 41 wishes to meet a man, 29-39 years old. I have 4 daughters and am 5'8" tall, 185 lb. Average looking. Loves old cars, motorcycles, and 50's music. Also, cats, camping, and cooking. Only serious replies. Photo and Phone please. All lettersb will be answered. MP-488

Smooth Strokes

By Sonja Merrick

A profusion of lush landscaping, including many heavily-leaved trees, shade the well-manicured front lawn. A brick courtyard graces the exterior of this delightful Plantation Hills home. The outdoor ambiance creates an immediate sense of warmth and comfort. And the interior is filled with all manner of delightful touches that make it so very appealing.

Continue straight ahead to the spacious, sunny dining area. Then make a left turn and find an enormous, graciously appointed great room — which can also be reached by continuing forward from the foyer. Walls are paneled in a warm, rich wood — floor-to-ceiling picture-frame paneling adds texture and visual interest. The vaulted ceiling is beamed. A brick fireplace is situated in the center of the long wall. A complete wet bar is neatly tucked inside a spacious closet.

Windows look out to a walled back yard where a spectacular kidney-shaped swimming pool and spa are framed by a gleaming walkway. The pool is heated to extend the swimming season. A concrete block fence surrounds the pool area providing both privacy and safety.

Back in the foyer, a right turn leads to two sizeable bedrooms separated a by a full bath.

Other amenities include a two-car, rear-entry garage, overhead speakers, wiring for stereo and plush ecru carpeting throughout.

The home is being offered by The Prudential Adobe Realtors for $89,900.

ReMax presents summertime safety tips

It's summertime! Time to swim, barbecue and enjoy the outdoors. Here are a few safety tips to help you have a fun and safe summer.

Tips for children's safety:

■ Children are just as susceptible to heat as adults — monitor their time outdoors, make sure they drink plenty of water.

■ Start the car and cool off the interior before children get in the car, especially if you are using a vinyl infant car seat or one with exposed metal belt buckles.

■ Always apply sun protection and mosquito repellent when children are outdoors — reapply as needed.

■ Never allow a child to bike ride or play in the neighborhood alone, use the buddy system. Young children should always have adult supervision when playing outdoors.

■ Pick up sticks, rocks, etc, in the yard to avoid any injuries while playing or using a slip and slide water toy.

■ Teach your child bicycle safety, instruct your child to be aware of cars backing out of driveways.

■ Swing sets should be secured into the ground and maintained properly.

■ All sliding glass doors should have a sticker or sun catcher so the children know when the door is closed.

Children should be aware of safety rules inside the house, no running, telephone safety, etc.

■ The front and back doors should have secure locks at the top so that a young child cannot open the door. All children should know the rules of opening a door for a stranger.

■ Young children should not be left unattended in a small wading pool.

Tips for outdoor safety:

■ Treat all ant beds, keep sidewalks swept, etc.

■ Before mowing pick up all rocks, sticks, etc.

■ Always wear gloves when wading and never reach behind bushes or areas you cannot see. Because of snakes, you might even want to take a stick and poke around first. Snakes also like to lie by the air conditioning unit outside because of the moisture.

■ When mowing and edging, wear proper clothing — long pants, good tennis shoes, gloves, eye protection and a hat.

■ When you barbecue, keep all charcoal starter out of the reach of children. Explain to small children that the grill is hot. Never walk into the house for "a minute," leaving a child outside when the grill is lit.

■ Select a good place to grill, consider the direction of the wind, closeness to the house, etc.

■ Never start a fire with gasoline or any other flammable liquid.

Other safety tips:

■ Animals should be given plenty of water and have a place available in the shade where they can lie down.

■ If you need to keep an extra key available don't hide it outside, in the mail box, etc. Give it to a neighbor you can trust.

■ If you go on vacation, have a neighbor keep an eye on the house, put mail and newspapers on hold and set timers on your lights.

■ If the family goes on an outing check the areas where the children will be. Look for ants, snakes, broken glass, grass stickers and closest lake or pond and so on.

■ Be sure to ice down perishable food when packing for a picnic.

Hope this helps your family have a fun and safe summer.

Adobe Inc., Realtors joins The Prudential Real Estate affiliates

Adobe Inc., Realtors has joined The Prudential Real Estate Affiliates as its newest affiliate in Midland.

The announcement was made by Bill Jackson, President, Adobe Inc., Realtors and Mike Porterfield, Regional Vice President, The Prudential Real Estate Affiliates, Inc. The company will now be known as The Prudential Adobe Realtors.

As a Prudential Affiliate, The Prudential Adobe Realtors will automatically become a member of Prudential Referral Services (PRS), a national computerized relocation network that provides detailed market information on more than 4,000 communities across the U.S. to its members. Thus, if a consumer is moving to or from Midland, The Prudential Adobe has the ability to pinpoint housing prices as well as a list of amenities within those 4,000 communities.

In making the announcement, Bill Jackson said, "Our main goal is to provide superior service and the best support and training in the industry to our agents. With Prudential's quality service, training, and its outstanding national image, the affiliation will be a significant benefit to both our agents and customers. It is a logical step in the progression of our company."

Porterfield said, "We are extremely pleased to welcome The Prudential Adobe Realtors into the Prudential Real Estate Network. It's a winning combination of excellent local reputation and expertise and a strong national image."

The Prudential Adobe was founded in 1978. It has 17 sales associates and 1991 sales of $22,200,590.85. The firm will remain independently owned and operated as a member of The Prudential Real Estate Affiliates, Inc.

Since it began awarding franchises in 1988, the 5-year-old Prudential Real Estate Network, the fastest growing in industry history, has nearly 900 offices and 24,000 sales associates. In 1991 sales were $29.8 billion.

Creps receives 'top speaker' designation

Dennis Creps has been awarded the Certified Speaking Professional (CSP) designation by the National Speakers Association at is annual convention in Orlando, Fla. Creps joins a select group of speakers who have earned this award because of their success as professional speakers.

Along with Creps, other speakers honored at a special awards ceremony included Cavett Robert, Nido Qubein and Danielle Kennedy.

KENT KWIK
CONVENIENCE STORES

WHY KENT OIL COMPANY?

Kent Oil (operating Kent Kwik convenience stores) is a West Texas-based company, thirty five years old and still growing. We offer many benefits to our employees. These benefits include:

- Company-assisted medical, dental and life insurance
- Paid vacations
- Sick pay program
- Tuition reimbursement program
- Special incentive programs for all employees
- Profit-sharing and retirement plan
- Intensive new hire training
- Structured continual management training
- Flexible scheduling
- Full and part time hours available
- Work close to home
- Affiliation with Odessa 66 credit union

We attempt whenever possible to promote from within. All of our current store managers, middle and upper management started with the company at the entry level. It is possible to move up quickly based on your experience and level of education.

Working in a convenience store is both exciting and challenging. You have to be outgoing and enjoy serving the public, while at the same time be a self-starter, as you receive very little on the job supervision.

If you are considering a career in the retail industry, give Kent Oil your consideration. Please apply at the Kent Oil office Monday-Friday 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. 3314 N. Loop 250 in Midland.

Things You Wanted to Know About Buyer Agency

How does a Buyer's Agent get paid at no additional costs to the Buyer when she represents ONLY the Buyers' Interests?
A Buyers' Agent is paid in any ONE of the following ways:
1. She can collect the fee split offered to the selling office thru the MLS
OR
2. Buyer may elect to pay the fee by financing it into the loan package as is currently done, or by separate arrangement.
OR
3. As a consultant, on an hourly basis.

BRIEFING

Prices weaken

Sales from this tank battery won't be as high this week. Oil prices weakened this week, falling near the $21 level on signs of a larger than expected increased in d U.S. supplies and reports that the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries had produced well above their limits in July.

The futures price for West Texas was at $21.18 per barrel at mid-week and the posted price was $20.

Rigs edge up

The rig counts were slightly higher for the week ended July 31, according to Baker Hughes Inc.

The company reported that the Permian Basin rig count was up three to 98 while the U.S. tally inched up two to 690.

A year ago, the Basin count was 103 and the U.S. count 831.

Oil congress

WASHINGTON — Preparation have begun for the 14th World Petroleum Congress, which will be held in Stavanger, Norway from May 29 to June 1, 1994.

Some 3,000 to 4,000 delegates from more than 70 countries are expected to attend the triennial Congress, which is the world's largest forum for the interchange of technical and managerial information about the petroleum industry.

Founded in 1933, the WPC now includes representatives of the petroleum industries in 38 nations that collectively account for:

- 89 percent of global oil production;
- 91.5 percent of global natural gas production;
- 87.5 percent of global oil consumption;
- 90.6 percent of global natural gas consumption and
- 85.4 percent of global refinery capacity.

The 1994 Congress will coincide with the 25th anniversary of the first commercial oil discovery on the Norwegian Continental Shelf. Since then, Norway has become the world's largest net oil exporter outside of (OPEC).

Chemicals

The oilfield chemical industry has seen many changes in recent years. Writer Ellen Hopkins reports on the rapidly changing industry.

Atmos plan

Dallas-based Atmos Energy Corp., parent of Energas Co., a West Texas utility, has announced a direct stock purchase plan that will allow customers and others to purchase common shares directly from the company without a commission. It is the first company in the state to offer such a plan. "We believe our customers in our service areas will make good owners of the company," said Energas President, Eugene Ehler.

Minimum initial investment is $200 and investors can purchase stock monthly in $25 increments.

Top a Tretolite truck and a fresh load of chemicals for the oilpatch. Chemicals have become essential to the industry. The company pioneered oilfield chemicals in 1907 with a formula to treat cut oil. Below, John Kendrick, facility operator for Nalco, poses with the company's Porta-Feed unit which was started in 1985 and has elimiated the need for one million drums. Nalco has invested $115 million in the program which has 55,000 units worldwide.

Chemicals essential to industry

■ Oilfield chemical business was built on results.

By John Paul Pitts
Business/Oil editor

Little has changed since Ponce DeLeon went in search of the fountain of youth — the world is still looking for a magical elixer or tonic to take away ills and aches, to rejuvenate.

Focus on OILFIELD CHEMICALS

Ponce DeLeon may have failed in his quest, but the oil industry has been considerably more successful in finding its fountain of youth in oilfield chemicals that revitalize sluggish oil wells and make them pump more oil.

Since it was first found that chemicals could be used to separate oil and water, oil producers and chemical inventors have been on a constant quest to find other magical potions to handle a myrid of production problems, and for the most part they have found them.

Because of the human propensity to seek cures in bottles, jugs, and barrels, one might think the oilfield chemical business would be load ed with "snake oil" salesmen. While there have been "snake oil" vendors in the oilpatch, who were long on promises and short on deliv-

Record Oil Show expected

■ Officials expect a record Permian Basin Oil Show in October.

By Mella McEwen
Staff writer

A renovated Ector County Coliseum has given a major boost to the upcoming Permian Basin Oil Show, which is expected to be a record event.

Galvin

When the Oil Show opens on Oct. 21, there will be a record number of spaces — 1,104, up from 899 — and a shortened Oil Show, to three from four days.

Honoree for the 1992 Oil Show is Ray Galvin, president of Chevron U.S.A. Production Co. and a vice president of Chevron Corp.

Jay Alvey, executive director of the Oil Show for 32 years, said that the four new exhibit buildings in the Coliseum complex have 132 exhibit spaces and that with the four new buildings, 123 new exhibit spaces have been added to this year's show, along with another 85 outside spaces, for a total of 210 new exhibit spaces.

In addition, the Coliseum itself has been renovated and re-roofed and the grounds enclosed in a concrete tile block fence. The main parking lot has added parking space and been resurfaced and there is a new street between the Coliseum grounds and the water storage tank.

Alvey added that the show was shortened at the request of the exhibitors, but that the final day of the show would remain open to the public. "We are a business and educational non-profit organization and under our charter we are required to admit the public during some of the show," he explained.

Honoree Galvin is a native of Cisco, Texas and holds a bachelor's degree in petroleum engineering from Texas A&M University.

He began his career with Gulf Oil Corp. after graduation as an engineering trainee. He served in various engineering and management positions in Oklahoma, Pennsylvania, Texas and Louisiana, becoming vice president, Production U.S. Operations in 1979.

In 1981 he was named vice president, south and east offshore division, Gulf Oil Exploration & Production Co. He was elected vice president, exploration, land

Natural gas prices gain

■ Uncharacteristicly strong natural gas prices are giving producers cause for optimism.

By Mella McEwen
Staff writer

Natural gas prices are showing uncharacteristic strength during the dog days of summer, strength not seen by the commodity for several years.

Robert Anderson, a Midland natural gas consultant, said that cash prices — which climbed 30 cents to $1.70 per thousand cubic feet for August — got a boost largely from local distribution companies filling storage for the coming winter.

"Utilities probably made a strategy error," he said. "We didn't have a strong winter this past year and they saw the lowest natural gas prices in years in February. Typically, utilities begin filling their storage in the spring and early summer, but they expected prices to be softer this year than last year so they delayed filling storage. Then in April a real late cold front moved throughout the country and drew storage levels to their lowest point in five years."

He said that the cold wave, combined with utilities expecting prices to be soft, has led to the best spot price for August since 1985. "With Waha being about $1.80, that's better than what we got in January, an anamoly in itself," he added.

While he didn't suggest uncorking champagne because the natural gas bubble has disappeared — Anderson cautioned that prices could slide in September — he did acknowledge that "what we're seeing is a fairly strong market."

He cited a number of reasons for the market's strength ... first and foremost low storage levels throughout the country.

Secondly, he said, the strength is Mercantile Exchange-related. "The NYMEX is starting to have an impact on the cash price of natural gas just like crude oil. And anytime you have market players in futures beginning to get nervous,

JOHN PAUL PITTS

Future of oil industry is a blank screen

Pitts

One of the interesting things about newspapers is the ability to look back at old issues and see where we have come from and what events, rhetoric and ideas have brought us to our present condition.

Geologist Gerry Calhoun sent me a Sunday copy of the Reporter-Telegram oil section from a decade ago. Dated September 6, 1981, the big stories were Reagan's plans to deregulate natural gas, concern over oil leasing and its impact on the environment and the rig count. One thing was obvious from reading these stories — nobody had the foggiest idea what 1992 would look like.

That week in history, the headline read: "Rig count pushing 500." According to the story 497 rigs were working in the Permian Basin, indicating a 50 per cent increase in activity over the previous year when the rig count was 333. A rundown of counties indicated that 40 rigs were working in Eddy County and 54 in Lea County alone.

It is ironic to note that those two counties nearly equal the rig count for the entire Permian Basin today and the total rig count for the Basin in 1981 was not too far from today's national account. The national rig count that week in 1981 was 4,194. One can only speculate what comments and ridicule would have been in store for the expert who would have predicted that only 98 rigs would be making hole in the Basin in 1992.

Rule 636 and the end of natural gas deregulation is making headlines today. Deregulation was also making headlines in 1981. The lead headline on the energy/business page that Sunday read: "Reagan request (to decontrol natural gas prices) could cost billions."

The lead noted that Reagan's soon-to-be-proposed natural gas deregulation could cost consumers billions of dollars when price controls were finally removed.

Critics of the plan thought that a free market approach to natural gas pricing would cause prices to increase by as much as 50 percent. "This is a case of the consumers against a handful of big oil companies," said Eugene Lutney, president of Brooklyn Gas Co.

The Citizen Labor Energy Coalition called decontrol a "pipeline to disaster." Looking back it is easy to see the fallacy of this rhetoric.

Today, decontrol, thanks to Martin Allday and FERC, is nearly complete and is being hailed by most concerned as the salvation of the industry.

No one dreamed, however, that the Natural Gas Policy Act of 1978 would create such confusion, disorder and inequities in the natural gas market that it would take over a decade to finally achieve decontrol and clean up the regulatory mess.

As for the high prices, they never materialized. Reagan was right. Trying to calm the northern masses and ease their fears of free market prices, he assured them that natural gas prices would not increase if decontrol was phased in over a three-year period.

But what Reagan nor anyone else failed to envisioned was that natural gas prices would go into the basement a few months later and would stay there until this day.

PITTS: An unseen future

As for oil prices, they were $36 a barrel that week and it was predicted that they would be even higher in 1985. It would have taken a pretty stupid expert to predict $9 per barrel oil coming in 1986.

Also, nobody saw the environmental monster that was being grown in Washington D.C. The headline of the second story on the page read: "Oil or scenery — which do we want?"

The story was about oil and gas explortion in Bridger-Teton National Forest near Jackson, Wyoming. Tires were slashed and oil drained from seismic trucks. Environmentalists did not want oil and gas exploration in the forest.

The liberal-conservative controversy pitted Interior Secretary James Watt against former Interior Secretary Stewart Udall, and was just a controversy. Environmental extremism was still in its infancy and nobody dreamed it would eventually put the oil industry under its boot.

Also in this issue, a photo of Charles Fraser, President of First National Bank of Midland, was shown congratulating Oralia Corrales on the opening of her new insurance office. It would have been hard to believe that "Mother Midland," the bank that had suckled much of the growth for the city would die a few months later.

What all this looking back tells me is that the future takes sudden, unexpected and unpredictable twists, that the experts are no more expert than anyone else, and that if history repeats itself we will see some exciting and undreamed of events in this business in the years to come.

GAS: Prices improve

they'll keep futures prices up and that will have an impact on the cash price."

Anderson listed four reasons futures players are nervous about natural gas.

First, he said, they're concerned about revamped prorationing attempts by producing states like Texas. "I don't think they have a legitimate concern, but they do. They think Oklahoma and Texas will restrict the supply, but they're not. The allowables for July and August are higher now than they were a year ago under Texas' new rules."

Secondly, he said, traders have been reading about concerns expressed by local distribution companies about FERC Order 636 increasing prices to utilities.

Thirdly, most government and private sector reports indicate Gulf Coast offshore gas deliverability and reserves are declining dramatically.

And finally, Anderson said, traders don't expect Congress to extend the Section 29 tax credit spud date beyond the end of this year. Section 29 concerns tax credits for tight sands and coal seam gas drilling and production.

"When the market players see those four ingredients, it tends to make them think gas will be in short supply in the near term and they're absolutely keeping the price of gas up."

While he emphasized that the market is always difficult to predict, Anderson ventured several guesses: "I don't anticipate spot gas prices dropping to February levels anytime soon, and I think we're in for a real good fourth quarter and early 1993. Things are cautiously optimistic."

CHEMICALS: Prove selves

es and short on delivery, they are quickly weeded from the ranks.

Snake oil may be easy to sell when it comes to health and beauty potions, because imagination is often used to trick oneself into thinking he or she feels better or looks better. It's not that easy in the oilpatch. Either the paraffin is gone or it's not. Either it works or it doesn't. There's little room for imagination. And that why the oilfield chemical business has had, for the most part, a history long on results.

Now essential to the oilfields, chemicals have been a part of the oil industry since 1907 when William Barnickle pioneered a chemical process to treat "cut oil." His process, which he called Tret-O-Lite, literally saved the oil industry, which in those formative years was awash in a yellowish emulsified mixture of oil and water. Unsalable and worse than useless, it was stored behind earthen dams and dikes and leaked into streams and rivers. In Oklahoma it blackened the Arkansas River all the way to the Mississippi where it put a sheen on the Mighty Mississippi all the way to New Orleans.

Barnickle, a self-taught geologist from St. Louis, knew that if he could come up with a chemical that would separate cut oil into salable oil and disposable water he could make a fortune.

He was right.

Since then other entrepreneurs have been seeking to make their oil fortunes through better chemicals. The returns are obvious: If a dollar's worth of chemicals can make a well produce just one more barrel of oil per day, that is about a $20 return for a $1 investment. It is an economical equation that keeps both producers and chemical companies continually concerned about getting better and has made the chemical business highly competitive.

"Chemical companies are continually developing new products," says Richard Findley, general manager of technical operations for Champion Chemicals.

Chemical companies that don't improve and develop new products may often find themselves out of the game. With each new improvememt the competitive edge is sharpened and knowledge is expanded. It is now possible for chemical companies to custom design chemicals for specific production problems.

For instance, poisonous hydrogen sulfide gas produced with oil has long been an oilpatch danger. "Scavenger" chemicals now being formulated could react with the deadly gas and render it harmless in the production stream.

There are chemicals designed to withstand heat. Others are designed to do only one specific job, and still others are designed to do everything. When a new twist is discovered, chemical companies are quick to patent it and tout it.

Remember when all the oil companies sold a branded gasoline and highly touted their added ingredient that made their gasoline better than the gasoline down the street?

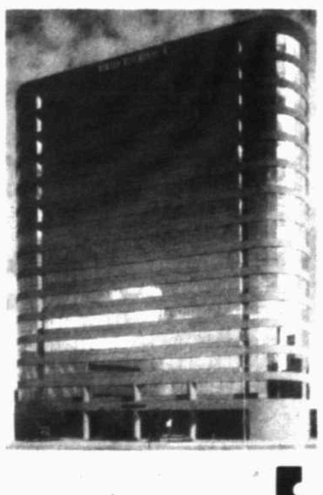

One Permian Basin chemical company has applied the same principal to marketing oilfield chemicals and is making it work. When Petroplex Acidizers formulated a new multi-purpose solvent, it quickly named it X-25 and began to sell it heavily through newspaper, TV and billboard advertising.

Larry Foster, president of Petroplex Acidizing, said the advertising program has been very successful for the product, which has found wide application in secondary recovery units, and has helped keep the company going during the severe downturn. But whether or not this success will prompt a new trend and cause chemical companies to resort to brand names, patented formulas and advertising to push their chemicals remains to be seen.

One trend is certain, however. The business of selecting the right chemicals for the the right problems has become so complex that producers must increasingly trust and rely on chemical companies to design chemical programs for their particular needs.

Jim Davis, operations manager for Tretolite, points out that trust is the key, and that major oil companies, to maintain trust, will often conduct audits of all the company's processes. "It's a win-win situation, because oil companies today don't have the time to become chemical experts," Davis said.

Mock Resources forms natural gas subsidiary

Mock Resources, Inc., an independent marketer and distributor of refined petroleum products and natural gas, has announced the formation of a wholly owned subsidiary, Cal Western Pipeline, Inc., which will provide natural gas and alternative natural gas delivery options for its customers. Although Cal Western Pipeline, Inc., which will provide natural as and alternative natural gas delivery options for its customers. Although Cal Western will also work with natural gas producers to gather and process natural gas, early efforts will concentrate on the unique opportunities created by the recently completed Mojave and Kern River interstate pipeline systems.

Chevron spending $1.2 billion on upgrades

LOS ANGELES — Chevron Corp. says it will spend about $1.2 billion in California to meet federal and state mandates for cleaner burning gasoline and to generally upgrade refinery production.

Officials of the company's marketing arm, Chevron U.S.A. Products Co., outlined plans for a $750 million upgrade at its Richmond refinery near San Francisco and talked more generally about its facility in the Los Angeles-area city of El Segundo.

The Northern California project will generate nearly 1,000 new jobs over a four-year period and enhance the refinery's operating efficiency, the company said.

The El Segundo project is likely to cost more than $500 million and possibly create more jobs during peak construction than in Northern California, said Rod Spackman, a Chevron spokesman in El Segundo.

The El Segundo refinery — the largest in Southern California — can process 250,000 barrels of crude oil each day and produces about 20 percent of the transportation fuels used in the region, he said.

Work in El Segundo could start as early as next March, Spackman said.

Five major oil companies operate refineries in the Los Angeles basin and all are working on upgrade plans.

Ashland Oil announces early retirement offer

ASHLAND, Ky. (AP) — Ashland Oil Inc. announced a cost-cutting early retirement plan a week after the company posted a 52 percent decline in its quarterly earnings.

The early retirement plan is being offered to 425 eligible full-time workers. They included members of the corporate staff, as well as employees of Ashland Petroleum Co., Ashland Services Co., Ashland Exploration Inc. and Ashland Branded Marketing Inc.

There are 3,000 people employed in those divisions.

John R. Hall, Ashland's chairman and chief executive officer, said the company expected to save $15 million a year with the program. Ashland expects to take a one-time, pre-tax charge against earnings of about $25 million in the fourth fiscal quarter to implement the plan, he said.

Consortium to study oil potential off Peru

LIMA, Peru (AP) — A consortium of two U.S. companies Thursday signed a $10 million, 18-month deal to carry out seismic studies off Peru's coast, the state oil company said.

Ribiana, Inc., and Simon Petroleum Technology Corp. of Houston, Texas will operate the scientific ship The Ross Chouest within a 4,000 square-mile zone off the northern coast between the towns of Bayovar and Concordia, according to a communique issued by Petroperu.

Aramco president to speak at PBPA meet

Staff report

Naimi

Ali I Naimi, president of Saudi Aramco (formerly, Arabian American Oil Company) will be the featured speaker at the monthly general membership luncheon of the Permian Basin Petroleum Association.

The luncheon will be Friday at the Petroleum Club beginning at 11:30 a.m.

Naimi joined the company's training program in 1947 at the age of 11, and since, has gained experience at many levels of operations and management.

In 1953, he became a geological technician in the exploration department. In out-of-Kingdom training programs between 1956 and 1963, Naimi studied at the International College in Beirut, Lebanon, and the American University of Beirut before attending Lehigh University in Pennsylvania.

He graduated from Lehigh with a bachelor's degree in geology and earned a master's degree from Stanford University in 1963 for his work in hydrology and economic geology.

Returning to Dhahran, Saudi Arabia, Naimi undertook a series of developmental and acting assignments.

He was a geologist and hydrologist in the exploration department from 1963 to 1967 and spent the next two years in the economics and public relations department and the Abqaiq Producing Division. In 1969, he became superintendent of Abqaiq Producing.

Between 1972 and 1975, Naimi held posts of assistant manager, producing department; manager, northern area producing department. In mid-1975, he was elected vice-president of producing and water injection. He was designated senior vice-president for oil operations in July 1978 and elected to the Aramco Board of Directors in July 1980.

When he was first elected Aramco's first executive vice-president for operations in March 1982.

His election as president in 1984 made him Aramco's first Saudi president.

and production for Chevron U.S.A. Inc., southern region, after implementation of the Gulf-Chevron merger in 1985.

In August 1988 Galvin was elected senior vice president, exploration, land and production for Chevron U.S.A. He assumed his current position as president the first of this year when Chevron U.S.A. was divided into two units, exploration and production, and for refining and marketing.

This year's Oil Show is helmed by Midlander Robert K. Beggs, who joined the show's board of directors 20 years ago and has worked on almost every Oil Show committee.

"The reception to this year's show has just been overwhelming because of the almost new show grounds and buildings," he said. "This year we will be hosting the largest Oil Show ever staged in the Permian Basin and the largest oil show in the nation devoted to the inland petroleum industry.

"The inland petroleum industry is presently undergoing some very difficult times because of economic conditions, and because this is an election year, with the presidential election in full swing, those in the oil business will be watching closely to see which directio the industry will take."

Beggs, bornin Huron, S.D., moved to Texas at the age of six months and was raised around the East Texas oil fields. He attended the University of Texas and began his oil career at Sun Oil Co., interrupting it to serve in World War II. After being discharged in 1946, he rejoined Sun Oil, where he worked in South Texas, Louisiana and Mississippi as chief clerk. After working in Robert Lee, Gainesville and Dallas, he came to Midland in 1971 as district manager, retiring in 1985.

1992 PERMIAN BASIN OIL SHOW

OCT. 21-22-23

When it comes to advertising for the 1992 Oil Show the Permian Basin Oil Report is your most logical choice.

Distributed to every oil and gas company and service company in the 54-county area of the Basin, it is the most widely read energy publication in the nation's largest oil and gas producing province.

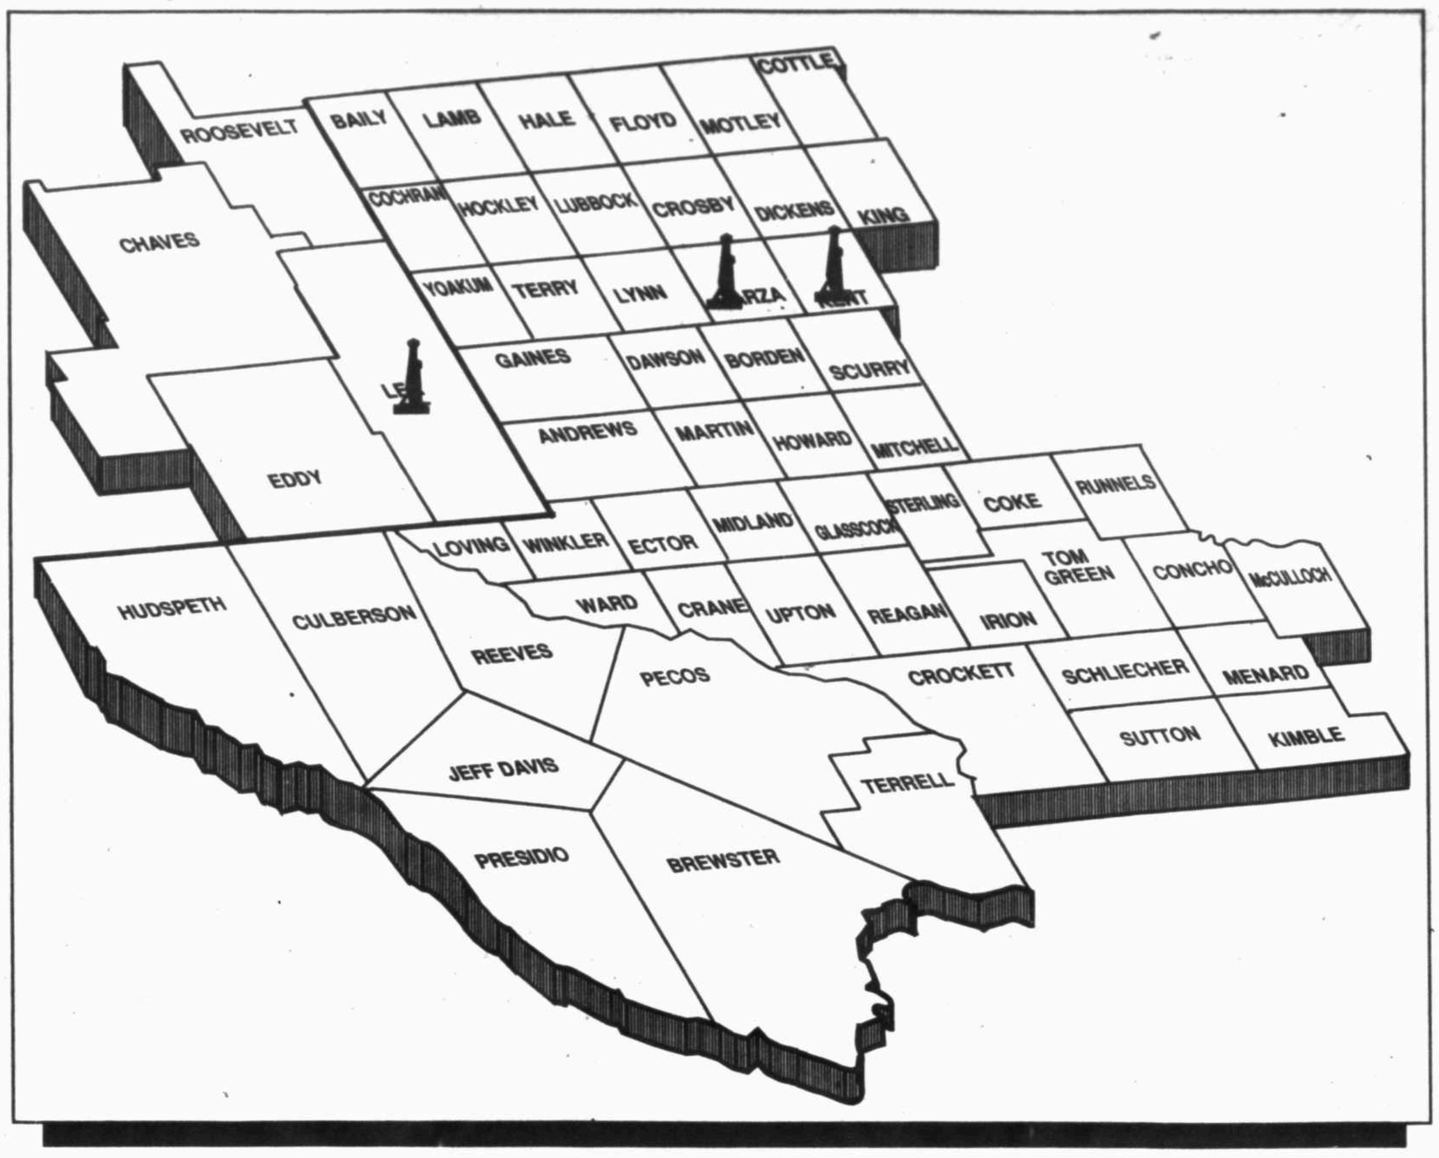

With a staff of award-winning oil and gas writers that include petroleum engineers and geologists, the Oil Report also provides the most extensive and comprehensive coverage of oil and gas news in West Texas and New Mexico.

During the Oil Show the Permian Basin Oil Report plans to publish the largest edition ever produced for an oil show. Additionally, we will publish an update edition each day of the Permian Basin Oil Show.

We have a highly professional staff of advertising representatives available to assist you in planning and creating your Oil Show advertising.

ACTIVITY HIGHLIGHTS

Lea recompletion yields Queen find

Staff report

A former Bone Spring producer in the Buffalo field of Lea County, N.M. has been recompleted as a possible new field discovery producing from the Queen formation.

POGO PRODUCING CO. reentered the No. 1 Buffalo Federal, testing it to pump six barrels of 36.7 gravity crude, 5 Mcfd and 80 barrels of water from perforations 4,939 to 4,958 ft. The interval was acidized with 1,000 gallons of 15 percent NeFeHCL acid and fractured with 12,000 gallons of gel and 15,625 lbs. 20/40 sand.

The well was originally drilled to 13,450 ft. with 5 1/2 inch casing set at 9,700 ft.

Formation tops, on ground elevation of Rustler at 1,522 ft., Queen at 4,342, San Andres at 5,053, Bone Spring at 7,781, Second Bone Spring at 9,554, Third Bone Spring at 10,460, Wolfcamp at 10,764, Strawn at 12,034, Atoka at 12,336, Morrow at 13,060, and Chester at 13,400 ft.

Location is 660 ft. from north and 1,980 ft. from east lines of T19s, R33e.

The well was originally completed in March 1988 by Oryx Energy Co. to pump 12 barrels of 35 gravity crude, 22 Mcfd and 30 barrels of water from Bone Spring perforations 9,264 to 9,586 ft.

Garza recompletion opens 8320 Lime pay

A former Lower Strawn producer in the Vern-Mag field of Garza County has been recompleted to open 8320 Lime production in the field, 3/4-mile west of 8240 production in the field, six miles southwest of Post.

MAGUIRE OIL, Dallas, reentered the No. A-1 Fletcher-Lott, completing it to flow 248 barrels of 34.9 gravity crude and 35 Mcfd on a 22/64 inch choke with flowing tubing pressure of 90 psi. The well flowed from perforations 8,322 to 8,350 ft., which had been acidized with 250 gallons of 15 percent acid. Gas-oil ratio is 1,411:1.

Drilled to 8,803 ft., the well was plugged back to 8,358 ft. with 5 1/2 inch casing set at 8,550 ft.

The well topped the Upper Spraberry at 5,510 ft., Wolfcamp at 6,835, and Strawn at 8,155 ft. on ground elevation of 2,769 ft.

Location is 3,253 ft. from north and 2,028 ft. from east lines of Section 1, G.N. Fletcher survey 1, Abst. 438, six miles southwest of Post.

The well was originally completed in 1977 to flow 125 barrels of crude and 8 barrels of water from perforations 8,364 to 8,378 ft.

Strawn pay reopened in Kent County field

MARALO INC. has recompleted a former Ellenburger producer in the Polar Northwest field of Kent County to reopen Strawn production in the field.

The No. 8 Connell "B" was recompleted to pump 50 barrels of 39.8 gravity crude from perforations 7,282 to 7,286 ft. The interval was acidized with 2,000 gallons of 15 percent NeFe.

Originally drilled to 7,841 ft., the well was plugged back to 7,760 ft. with 5 1/2 inch casing set at 7,839 ft.

The well topped the Strawn Lime at 7,212 ft., Mississippian Lime at 7,640, and Ellenburger at 7,839 ft. on ground elevation of 2,344 ft.

Location is 1,880 ft. from south and 660 ft. from west lines of Section 53, Block 5, H&GN survey, five miles northwest of Polar.

The well was originally completed to flow 111 barrels of crude and 89 barrels of water from open hole interval in the Ellenburger, 7,839 to 7,841 ft. It is located two miles west and slightly south of the original opener.

Shell quarterly earnings post sharp increase

HOUSTON (AP) — Shell Oil Co.'s 1992 second quarter earnings, buoyed by cost-cutting efforts, climbed to $183 million, a sharp turnaround from the $68 million loss posted for the same period a year ago, Shell said Friday.

The Houston-based company also said several special items, including a prior-year tax adjustment, resulted in a benefit of about $100 million for the second quarter.

Revenues for the second quarter were $5.5 billion, up slightly from revenues of $5.3 billion a year ago. Shell does not report per share earnings because it is a wholly owned subsidiary of Royal Dutch/Shell.

Mesa suffers $20.6 million quarterly loss

DALLAS (AP) — Mesa Inc. said it lost $20.6 million in the second quarter as natural gas production volume and the per-barrel price of oil fell compared to last year.

The loss amounted to 53 cents per share. A year ago, Mesa lost $1.2 million, 3 cents per share, in the second quarter.

Revenue was $51.6 million, up 15 percent from $44.9 million in the second quarter of 1991.

The Dallas-based company, led by T. Boone Pickens, received $13.2 million from the sale of oil and gas properties, chiefly in Canada, during the second quarter. A year ago, Mesa received $33.7 million from property sales in the April-June period.

Fina says profits show 30 percent increase

DALLAS (AP) — Fina Inc. reported a second-quarter profit of $5.53 million, up 30 percent from a year ago.

The Dallas-based energy company earned 36 cents a share. A year ago, Fina earned $4.24 million, or 27 cents a share, in the second quarter.

Revenue was $895.1 million, up 9 percent from $823.6 million.

Fina Chief Executive Ron Haddock said the boost came from slightly higher oil and natural gas prices along with lower exploration costs.

Halliburton net profits decline 60 percent

DALLAS (AP) — Halliburton Co. reported a $12.8 million profit in the second quarter, a 60 percent decline from last year chiefly due to lower operating income from the service and engineering work it does for energy companies.

Halliburton earned 12 cents per share during the three months that ended June 30. A year ago, the company earned $32.2 million, or 30 cents a share.

Revenue was $1.62 billion, down 9 percent from $1.79 billion in the year-ago quarter.

Amoco suffers loss on after-tax charges

CHICAGO — Amoco Corp. has reported an estimated consolidated net loss of $478 million, or $.96 per share, for the second quarter of 1992. Results were reduced by previously announced after-tax charges totaling $805 million. These charges primarily represent anticipated losses on asset dispositions, and the cost of restructuring and workforce reductions, as part of a strategic reassessment of business operations.

Texaco posts decline in income over 1991

Texaco Inc. announced that consolidated worldwide net income for the second quarter of 1992 was $245 million, or $.85 per share, compared with the net income of $269 million, or $.94 per share, for the second quarter of 1991. Net income for the first half of 1992 was $445 million, or $1.53 per share, as compared with $684 million, or $2.45 per share for the first half of 1991.

The next step in ramp blending.

We offer total blending control with the most complete microprocessor-based ramp blending system in the industry.

Smith Energy Services developed the APAC/ALAC (Automated Proppant/Liquid Additive Control) Blender in conjunction with Stewart & Stevenson Services, Inc., to not only deliver the most precise proppant addition, but also complete liquid additive control and monitoring.

Precisely. As scheduled. Even during rapid proppant stage or rate changes. So our fluid is fully crosslinked and buffered and the correct amount of breaker is added.

Which ensures that you will receive the cleanest fluid and highest conductivity fracture. And optimum well performance.

Otherwise, we wouldn't be the choice of some of the country's finest oil and gas operators.

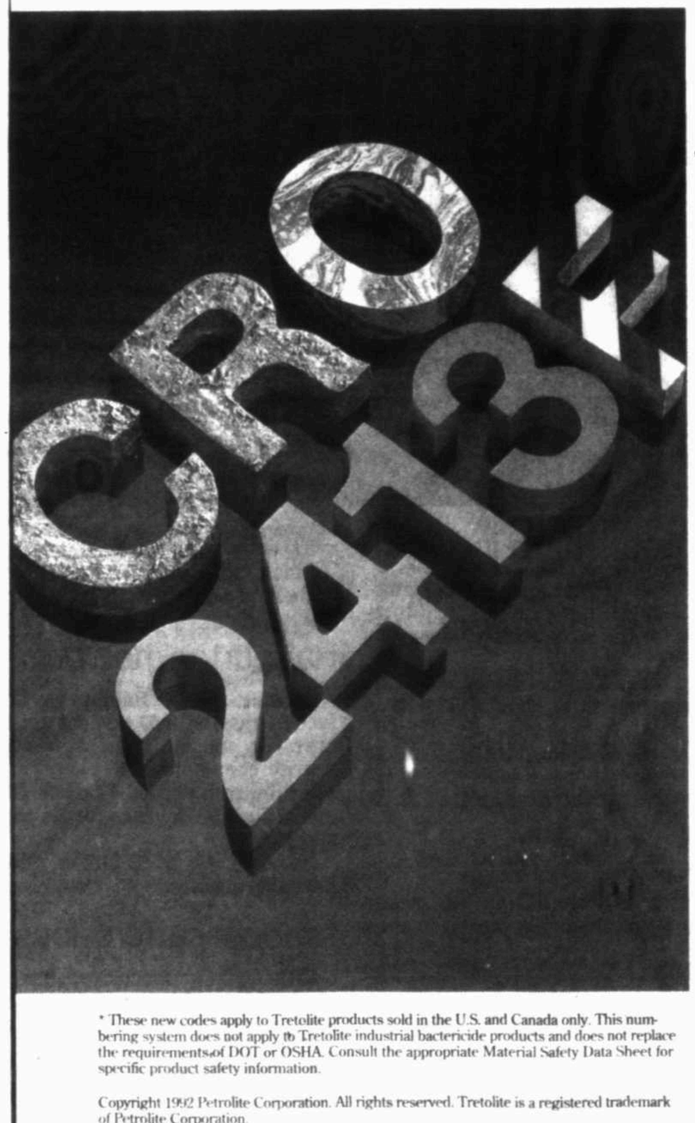

So if you're concerned about how your well performs and the next step for unearthing your profits, take the first step.

There's safety in numbers.

CR O 2413 F

Now our corrosion inhibitors, paraffin controllers, scale inhibitors, demulsifiers and water clarifiers come labeled with a new product number that reveals their function, solubility and potential hazard—important safety information.

Our safety in numbers program is widely useful. Include it in your training, for example, and it will help your employees understand proper chemical handling procedures of our products. This emphasis will reinforce the importance of alertness and awareness when applying production chemicals.

These informative numbers will also help you and your staff act quickly to protect people and the environment in case of a mishap. And, because the new product identification numbers are built around our original codes, they're easy to learn.

A brochure explaining the details and many benefits of this new system is available from your local Tretolite representative, or from the office below. Putting safety in numbers is one more example of the lengths we're going to at the Tretolite Division to help protect you, your employees and the environment.

Tretolite Division, Petrolite Corporation, 200 N. Loraine, Suite 1100, Midland, TX 79701. Phone: 915/682-4301. Fax: 915/684-7873.

* These new codes apply to Tretolite products sold in the U.S. and Canada only. This numbering system does not apply to Tretolite industrial bactericide products and does not replace the requirements of DOT or OSHA. Consult the appropriate Material Safety Data Sheet for specific product safety information.

Houston firm, Kazakhstan sign accord

HOUSTON (AP) — Anglo-Dutch Petroleum International, based in Houston, has signed an agreement to develop Kazakhstan's Tenge Field, which has estimated reserves of 500 million barrels of crude oil and 1 trillion cubic feet of natural gas.

The Tenge Field is located on the eastern shore of the Caspian Sea and is about 217 miles southwest of the much larger Tengiz Field, which Chevron Corp. has agreed to develop.

"This is a major field by our (Western) standards," said Kindell McNeil, vice president for Houston-based MDS EIS U.S.A., which offers production history and seismic logs of oil fields to Western companies for possible development.

Richard Startzman, project manager for the Center for Russian Petroleum Studies at Texas A&M University, said such an agreement typically gives the signing company a certain time period of exclusivity and calls for some sort of payment or performance before the deal moves to more final stages.

MEETINGS

'Radio Week' focus for Desk and Derrick meeting

The Midland Desk and Derrick Club will meet Thursday at the Petroleum Club beginning at 6 p.m.

The meeting will be centered around "Radio Week" in conjunction with the upcoming Permian Basin Oil Show.

Guest speakers will be Dick Baze with KCRS Radio and Harry Spannaus of the Permian Basin Oil Show.

Baze will discuss the club's function as commentators for "Radio Week" prior to the Oil Show.

Spannaus, also executive vice president of the Permian Basin Petroleum Association, will discuss members' responsibilities in registering guests before the opening of the Oil Show and will work the show's information booth.

Reservations can be made by calling 684-7441 or 688-5439.

UTPB business center offers start-up workshop

The Small Business Development Center of the University of Texas of the Permian Basin is co-sponsoring a "Starting a Business" workshop Thursday at the Center for Energy and Economic Diversification, Highway 191 and FM 1788. The workshop will be from 1 to 5 p.m.

"Starting a Business" will assess and identify the personal and business skills needed to plan, organize, finance and operate a successful business.

Advance registration is encouraged and can be made by calling 563-0400.

The seminar is free and open to the public.

Local ad club hosts district AAF conference

More than 130 members and officers of advertising clubs in Texas, Arkansas, Oklahoma and Louisiana will attend the American Advertising Federation's 10th District summer leadership conference Thursday through Saturday at the Holiday Inn Centre in Odessa. The conference is being hosted by the Permian Basin Advertising Federation, an AAF affiliate.

Those attending will hear an address by Clark Rector of the AAF entitled "Legislative Affairs: What We Need to Do to Save Advertising."

PBAF President Laurie Johnson said the conference will let all the clubs participate in strategic planning for the district.

In addition to legislative affairs and strategic planning, entertainment includes bullriding and fajitas at Dos Amigos Restaurant and Stables, an evening at Summer Mummbers, a golf tournament, barbecue at the Confederate Air Force and treasure hunt.

Registration is $95. Information is available by calling 337-2424 or 685-1540.

Solar Injection Systems, Ltd.
SOLAR POWERED CHEMICAL INJECTION PUMPS

* Need to start a new chemical injection program?
* Expand existing chemical injection systems?
* Replacing your present chemical injection equipment because of high maintenance costs or unsatisfactory performance?

Using todays technology, modular design, and a systems approach, Solar Injection Systems, LTD. offers a solution to these problems and more.

* A self contained, stand alone, solar powered chemical injection system.
* Engineering and designed for simple and low cost installation and maintenance.
* All components are oilfield tested and proven reliable.

Eddins - Walcher Company
LUBSEAL® PRODUCT DATA

NM-91
ENVIRONMENTALLY SAFE - METAL FREE
Tool Joint And Drill Collar Compound

PRODUCT DESCRIPTION: NM-91 contains no lead, zinc, copper, aluminum, or any other metal powders. The compound is designed for rotary shouldered connections as well as all other threaded connections. NM-91 can be used in all applications where thread compounds are used for protection of threads or sealing. NM-91 has excellent water resistance, good corrosion resistance and adheres well to metal surfaces. It contains corrosion and H2S inhibitors, as well as extreme pressure additives, NM-91 is manufactured to API7-A1 recommendations. it has a friction factor correction value of approximately 1.2. This product contains no hazardous ingredients per OSHA 29 CFR 1910.1200.

ENVRIONMENTALLY SAFE- METAL FREE
(API Modified Replacement)

PRODUCT DESCRIPTION: LOS-MODIFIED is designed for casing, tubing and line pipe. It provides excellent service characteristics in the areas of lubricity, sealing properties, make-up and break-out torque and long-term corrosion protection during periods of storage. It contains corrosion and H2S inhibitors as well as extremem pressure additives. LOS-MOTIFIED is recommended for threads being hydrostatically tested. It meets or exceeds all performance specifications of API bulletin 5A2. It has a friction factor correction value of apprximately 1.2 in addition. LOS-MODIFIED meets the objective of eliminating hazardous heavy metals in the workpalce. This product contains no hazardous heavy metals in the workplace. This product contains no hazardous ingredients per OSHA 29 CFR 1910.1210.

FOR USE ON: Casing, tubing, line pipe, any threaded connections.

Oilfield microbes mount a challenge

■ Microbes are challenging chemicals in paraffin control.

By Joe Dominey

In recent interviews with executives of companies marketing microbes to dissolve paraffin and clean up the well bore it was suggested that biological products would eventually replace much of what chemicals are used for today.

Fred G. Brown, chief executive and principal owner of National Parakleen Co. Inc. with headquarters in Midland, said he has detected "a big resistance to what we do from a big lobby and a big political segment that's called the chemical industry."

Putting it bluntly, he asserted, "Long range, they're history. Every where we go and apply our technology, we eliminate the chemicals."

Brown pointed out that what the oil industry does because of legal exclusions, "in other industries is what we call 'toxic waste.' In the petroleum industry we've had a white-washed grandfathered benefit for this sort of thing."

Chemical company spokesmen point out that while it's true that chemicals used in well treating are classified as hazardous materials, they become neutralized in the down-hole environment.

Wm. B. (Bill) Blakemore Jr., chief executive of Alpha West, Inc., a bio-remediation company, said his industry has gotten a slow start because of apprehensions and misinformation about biological products.

"We were not successful mainly because the bad press bacteria had gotten in the oil field. In engineering school one of the first things they learned was you've got to get rid of all the bacteria because bacteria is bad. Not only did they want to continue using chemical treatments, but they thought they had to get rid of bacteria at all costs.

"So we attempted to re-educate the people. In the last two years people have started listening. We started using bacteria as a paraffin control because we wanted to show these people, in a relatively safe way, that bacteria would be effective. We felt that once we got over the initial negativism they had, we could get into other areas, and that's what's happened."

Blakemore stated that Alpha West has an EOR project with Phillips Petroleum underway, and a cumulative total of about 150 paraffin wells it's treating per month for a number of companies.

"What we're looking for there is enhanced recovery and also paraffin control. We've had some good success doing that. Interest has picked up recently, perhaps because of the economics. And it's easier to handle than chemicals."

But are bacterial products more cost effective than chemical treatments?

"It can be more effective than, say, xylene treatment for paraffin or paraffin solvents dripped into a flow line. It can be more cost effective than hot oiling and you don't have the resulting damage to the formation. You don't have to worry about getting all your oil back as you would on a hot oiling job. So, spread over a number of wells, it certainly does produce a cost savings."

Jim Davis, regional manager for Tretolite, a division of Petrolite, said that bio-technology is recognized as a very important future development in a variety of industrial applications. He said Petrolite had formed a business alliance with Energy Biosystems Corporation of The Woodlands, near Houston, to explore industrial and oil field applications. Dr. Ralph Churchill, vice resident of technology for Petrolite, in a telephone interview from his office in St. Louis confirmed Petrolite's interest in bio-tech processes.

"There's a lot going on in the bio-technology field, including bio-remediation and going back to the more conventional applications. But it's unlikely that either chemical or bio-technology will be able to address all the problems in the field. The two are very complimentary," Dr. Churchill said.

He predicted that a lot of companies in the chemical industry will augment their business with bio-technology.

The alliance with Energy Biosystems is directed at commercializing a technology for catalytic desulphurization of hydrocarbons, including crude oil, as well as refined products such as diesel and gasoline.

"We hope to bring to the market a technology to provide for desulphurization through a process as opposed to a product," he said.

Larry Foster, president of Petroplex Acidizing, Inc., was asked whether paraffin eating microbes would eventually make use of chemicals obsolete.

"Some of our customers have tried it. If you have a system where hydrocarbons are in the soil out there, it'll do a good job. Or if you put them on a tank to remove hydrocarbons, there're great. But as far as being successful down-hole, they haven't been as successful," Foster stated.

He pointed out that chemicals become neutralized in the subsurface environment. What remains is spent acid water, basically a brine water, which is then re-injected into a disposal well.

Vithal Pai, technical manager for the Midland district of The Western Company, acknowledged that biological remediation companies started in the early 1980s, but that the progress has been very slow at best.

"Some good products have been tested and proven. It's in an infant state right now. Eventually, it's going to be done biologically, using the biodegrading process."

Asked if he saw biological products as a threat to The Western Company, Pai said, "I don't think it's a threat, but eventually they may take some market share."

Chemical business sees change

■ The oilfield chemical industry has undergone many changes in recent years in terms of innovation, relations and environment.

By Ellen Hopkins

The chemical industry has changed in the last couple years, partly because of necessity and partly due to the desire to provide the oil and gas industry with innovative solutions to production problems.

Jim Davis, operations manager with Tretolite Chemicals & Services, described changes in the chemical industry related to the environment, reporting, technology and producer relations.

"Foremost in the chemical industry today is dealing with the area of safety, health and the environment," said Davis. "Chemicals are an economic necessity, but they are sometimes considered an evil necessity from an environmental standpoint.

"Chemical companies are required to invest in spill containment devices such that should a chemical leak, it can't hit the ground."

Davis said Tretolite has developed containment equipment with registered trademarks. They've also assured that all their personnel who use chemicals have been educated in proper handling.

"Federal regulations stipulate that anyone who comes in contact with chemicals be versed and educated about them," said Davis. "Our attitude is to meet or exceed those requirements. We take a 'pro-active' approach because in the long run it's less expensive in a lot of ways."

Sam White, chairman of the board for Champion Chemicals said all chemicals are organic and whether some producers switch to bioremediation as an alternative to chemicals is more a question of what is most effective.

"As the years have passed, old chemicals that were considered harmful to the environment were no longer used," White said. "Today there is nothing we produce or that anyone in the chemical industry produces that is harmful to the environment. Consider the chemicals found in the kitchen. No one would eat or drink them, but if directions are followed, they are considered safe."

Davis explained that belonging to the Chemical Manufacturers Association (CMA) keeps Tretolite abreast of local, state and federal regulations.

"Our affiliation with CMA allows us to be in the forefront of changes in the chemical industry," he said. "Our Petrolite office in St. Louis has a department that oversees this work; it's known as SHEA — Safety, Health, and Environmental Administration. We have SHEA reps throughout the company."

Davis said reporting is another area of change. "We report the composition of every chemical, complete material safety data sheets, and do a lot of other required paperwork."

Changes in the chemical industry also include new products. Richard Findley, general manager of technical operations for Champion Chemicals in Houston, said development on new types of chemicals is continuous.

"We're always trying new types of corrosion inhibitors tailored to specific needs," he said. "One of the ways since 1985 we've tried to treat H_2S out of gas streams is to use scavengers, which are products that react with the H_2S and convert it to a non-poisonous state. And we're trying scavenging by directly injecting into oil transmission lines."

Findley also described a relatively new scale inhibitor product that is tolerant to high calcium and temperature, and a state-of-the-art demulsifyer for use in steamflood applications.

Industry attention has also been focused on an innovative technique for applying corrosion inhibitors. "Tretolite has developed a patented structured fluid technology which reacts in a time release manner," said Davis. "The application of corrosion inhibitors is through the structured fluid. Inhibitors for other uses such as scale are also being studied."

Scaling is just one of the areas Davis pinpoints. "We see that problems downhole are threefold: scaling, asphaltines and paraffins choke production. Drilling activity has dramatically decreased and producers are trying to squeeze more out of existing production. It's not a simple task to apply chemicals at random because each well and composition of materials downhole is different."

Dave Ellis, regional technical manager for Tretolite, said these differences in wells are taken into consideration in an innovative laboratory modeling and testing program.

"We take information from a producer about a well, input it to our modeling program, and it reports which chemicals to use and the best application techniques. We model reservoir conditions and absorption characteristics," Ellis said.

"The modeling program is based on historical information and experience, our knowledge of the behavior of chemicals, physical parameters of the well and scientific data," said Davis. "The result is a prediction of why a particular treatment will work and how long it will last, all with a lot less trial and error than other methods.

"Belt-tightening today means more companies are economically focused," he said. "When you get to the bottom line, the question is, 'what is the economic benefit?' We can give this information to them now with our data base and the modeling program's ability to manipulate the data for specific wells. In sensitive areas producers can determine their economic benefit immediately."

"Producers don't have time to become experts in chemicals and we see the tendency now for them to rely on companies with that capability," he said. "We see a business to business relationship that is a win-win situation for producers and us. We offer customers our internal partnering team so they can rely on us as a vendor and know we have the staff to handle the work. For example, we even have a number of majors who come to our facilities to audit all our processes which affect them such as billing and safety. Accurate records are passed back and forth. Trust is the key."

White said Champion also has alliances with oil companies and there is mutual benefit.

"It behooves us to do a good job for them so we'll all make money and create new jobs," he said.

Davis said everything Tretolite invests in to make money will show a benefit to its customers. "The company's Quality Improvement Process necessitates that we cut down on waste and develop consistency in operations, sales, marketing, billing and invoicing."

He described one of their improvements known as the "loran system."

"It's like a bar coding system which allows immediate tracking of the treatment of a well," Davis said.

Ellis explained that the significant time savings is in reporting treatment back to producers. "The producer knows what wells are being treated and when. With the loran system the data about the treatment is transmitted via satellite back to a central point. This allows better planning.

Halliburton sells subsidary

DALLAS (AP) — Halliburton Co. has tentatively agreed to sell its health care services subsidiary, Health Economics Corp., to Equifax Inc., a giant credit and financial services company.

The companies did not disclose terms of the transaction. Last week, Halliburton announced it was trying to sell its insurance subsidiary, Highlands Insurance Co., to focus on its core energy service and engineering businesses.

Dallas-based Health Economics helps companies manage health costs through claims processing, case management, data studies and other services.

Equifax, based in Atlanta, is a provider of personal credit information to businesses and employers.

Drilling lowest since 1971

WASHINGTON — The estimated number of oil wells, natural gas wells and dry holes drilled in the United States during the first six months of the year reached its lowest level since 1971, the American Petroleum Institute reported today.

According to API's Quarterly Drilling Report Second Quarter 1992, 12,313 oil wells, natural gas wells and dry holes were completed during the January-June period. This was 21.2 percent less than the 15,629 completed during the first half of 1991.

Of this year's total, 5,146 were oil wells, 25.5 percent fewer than in the first half of 1991; 3,459 were natural gas wells, 26.8 percent less than the comparable period a year ago; and 3,708 were dry holes, 7.2 percent fewer

API also reported that total footage drilled during the first half of the year amounted to 64,423,000 feet, a decline of 16.1 percent.

Atmos has direct stock buy plan

Atmos Energy Corp., which provides natural gas service locally through Energas Company, today announced a Direct Stock Purchase Plan that allows customers and others to purchase common shares directly from the company without commission fees.

"We believe that customers and residents of our service areas would make good owners of the company since we share a mutual interest in the benefits of having reliable, dependable natural gas service," said Energas President Eugene Ehler.

Atmos, which operates in Texas, Louisiana and Kentucky, is the first public utility in those states to offer a direct stock purchase plan. A variety of features and options allows investors to tailor the plan to specific investment needs.

The minimum initial investment is $200, and investors can purchase stock as often as monthly with optional cash payments of $25 or more. The annual maximum investment is $60,000.

The Atmos plan also provides a 3 percent discount on shares purchased with reinvested dividends. The investor can choose to have automatic reinvestment of all or part of the dividends paid on the stock. The current indicated annual dividend is $1.24 per share.

An individual retirement account (IRA) can be established or an existing IRA rolled over with the plan, and an investor can make transfers or gifts of Atmos stock to another person or charity through the plan. This plan replaces the existing Atmos Dividend Reinvestment Plan and participants in that plan are automatically enrolled in the Direct Stock Purchase Plan.

A prospectus offering participation in the plan and enrollment forms are available from the company. This is not an offer to sell nor a solicitation to buy securities. The offering will be made only by prospectus. For information, call the company toll-free at 1-800-38-ATMOS, or write Atmos Energy Corporation, Shareholder Relations, P.O. Box 650205, Dallas, Texas 75265-0205.

Atmos Energy Corporation of Dallas, Texas, provides natural gas service to more than one-half million customers in Texas, Louisiana and Kentucky.

HOLD THE RYE, WHEAT, OATS, AND BARLEY: Recipes for Gluten-Free Cooking

By Linda Anderson
Staff writer

For those who suffer from celiac disease or dermatitis herpetiformis, maintaining a gluten-free diet is of utmost importance. These patients lack an enzyme that breaks down gluten in the intestine.

Because of this malabsorbtion problem, these people cannot utilize the nutrients found in wheat, oats, barley and rye. However, by eliminating these grains, and the gluten they contain, from their diets, the malabsorbtion problem is solved.

While it might seem difficult to eliminate wheat, oats, barley and rye from the diet, members of the West Texas Gluten-Free Awareness Support Group say it is far from impossible. The group was founded to help suffers of the diseases learn more about these conditions and how to deal with them. In the process, they have shared several gluten-free recipes. The following are some of their favorites:

GLUTEN-FREE YOGURT PANCAKES

½ cup white rice flour
1½ teaspoons baking powder
1 (8-ounce) container low-fat plain yogurt
1 tablespoon potato flour
½ teaspoon baking soda
2 eggs

Combine all ingredients in small bowl of electric mixer. Turn to high speed and mix until well blended. Pour about ¼-cup at a time onto a hot, lightly greased griddle and cook as usual. Makes 6-8 pancakes.

Variation: Flavored yogurt may be used and you may use an electric sandwich maker instead of a griddle.

EASY PEANUT BUTTER COOKIES

1 cup peanut butter
1 cup sugar (white or brown)
1 egg
½ teaspoon gluten-free vanilla

Beat egg and mix with peanut butter and sugar. Add vanilla and dash of salt. Drop by teaspoon onto cookie sheet and bake at 325 degrees for 8 to 10 minutes. Press pecan half on top if desired.

CRANBERRY SALAD

1 package (3 ounce) orange gelatin
1 package (3 ounce) cherry gelatin
1½ cups hot water (or 1 cup if using mold)
1 can whole cranberry sauce
1 can (15 ounce) crushed pineapple, undrained
1 can (6 ounce) frozen orange juice, not diluted
½ cup pecans, optional

Dissolve gelatins in hot water according to package directions. Add other ingredients and chill until set.

Suggestion: Serve as accompaniment to chicken, turkey or tuna.

LIVING GLUTEN-FREE:
It's not as hard as you think

If, as the old saying goes, "You are what you eat," then people on gluten-free diets may be more healthy than most because a lot of "junk foods" are made with wheat flour, which is not on their diet.

In fact, people on gluten-free diets cannot have anything made with wheat, oats, barley or rye, according to Lois Newbold of Midland, co-founder of the West Texas Gluten-Free Awareness Support Group.

The support group helps those with celiac disease (a gastrointestinal condition) or dermatitis herpetiformis (DH, a skin condition) learn about their diseases and how they affect their diets. For information about the group and its meetings, call 684-4671.

Celiac disease is "not an allergy, it's an intolerance," Mrs. Newbold said. "You can treat an allergy. You can't treat an intolerance without eliminating it (the offending foods) from your diet."

"It's a malabsorbtion problem," said Pat Gatlin, president and co-founder of the local support group.

Some of the symptoms may include slow growth, diarrhea, anemia, tiredness and fatigue, weight loss or slow weight gain, and bloating and cramps, according to a brochure from the Celiac Sprue Association/United States of America Inc. (CSA/USA). "A number of clinical symptoms may be present," the brochure cautioned, "but the definitive diagnosis is made by small bowel biopsy."

The brochure also states that the condition is "not contagious. Although little is known abut the cause of the disease, it is thought to be an immune problem which is inherited in the blood line."

DH is an "associated disorder or complication of celiac disease," according to another brochure from the CSA/USA Inc. In patients with DH, the gluten intolerance is linked to "an intensely itchy skin eruption."

Celiac and DH patients lack an enzyme that breaks down

HAVE YOU HEARD?

Event features local musicians

By Marilyn McKnight Harrison

Showcasing local talent, the Rob Hunt Jazz Quartet and The Symphony Pops Singers entertained a large Permian Basin audience recently at the Midland Petroleum Club. The event, billed as "A Moonlight Serenade Cabaret," was sponsored by the West Texas Jazz Society.

McKnight-Harrison

The two groups, brought together under Rob's musical artistry, provided an unforgettable evening of listening pleasure.

Rob is associate conductor of the Midland-Odessa Symphony and director of the Symphony Chorale and Pops Singers.

The jazz quartet, composed of Rob on piano, Mark Lowe on bass, Robert LaCroix on guitar and Neal Goates on drums, led off with "All the Things You Are" and played a number of jazz aficionados' old favorites.

The Pops Singers, a seven-member ensemble reminiscent of the Manhattan Transfer, sang a number of songs from the Big Band era, as well as rock 'n roll hits of the '50s and '60s, before crossing over to C&W with Hank Williams' "Your Cheatin' Heart."

The concert ended on a high note with the Barry Manilow hit, "Big Fun."

Among the Midlanders spotted in the throng were Dorothy and Todd Aaron, Jackie and Earl Gaertner, Alice Moxey, Jayne and Fred Kester, Dixie DeWees and Catherine and Greg Miller, and from Odessa, Pat and the Rev. Joe Turner, Marian and Charles Jones, Mary Kay and Gene Buinger and Mimi and Fred Wilkinson.

AS A GIFT to their mother, Midlander Nona Aday, her five children arranged a family reunion in Burbank, Calif., recently.

Her daughter and son-in-law, Pat (Patsy Aday) and Ernie Moreno hosted the event. The other children and spouses are Judy (Aday) Caramanna of Phoenix, Ariz., James and Linda Aday of Portland, Ore., Don and Diana Aday of Eugene, Ore., and Ron and Mary Aday of Midland.

All the Aday children grew up in Midland and graduated from Midland High School. Their father, the late Delmar Aday, managed the Midland Theaters from 1946 to 1969, and the entire family worked at the historic Yucca Theatre at one time or another. Nona also was a secretary at several Midland schools and former Sen. Pete Snelson's personal secretary before retiring in 1988.

Family members gathered at the Morenos' home for poolside brunches and dinner parties during the get-together. The group also enjoyed many special event, including a day at the Bel Air Beach Club at Pacific Palisades and a picnic and evening at the Hollywood Bowl, where Mel Torme and Peggy Lee were performing. In addition, the Aday clan met Nona's sister, Shirley (Mrs. Merle) Carriger and her family of Glendale, Calif., for an old-fashioned picnic at Burbank's Johnny Carson Park.

Also on the agenda were a day at Laguna Beach browsing at the Festival of Arts and an evening at the world-renowned Pageant of the Masters at the Irvine Bowl Amphitheater. Another day saw part of the clan opening and closing Disneyland.

Home videos taken at the various events were viewed with amusement at the end as the family planned the next reunion for 1997.

IN VISITING with Verneta (Mrs. Dedric) Baxter recently, we were interested to hear about the district meeting of the Texas Association of Hospital Auxiliaries to be held in Midland this fall.

Not only will the meeting give members of the various auxiliaries an opportunity to exchange ideas, but also to learn from the impressive lineup of speakers.

To be held on Sept. 23 at the Golf Course Road Church of Christ's Family Center, the all-day meeting will include talks by Dr. Harold Rubin, president of Memorial Hospital and Medical Center, on "Critical Health Care Issues;" Tom Vermillion, minister of singles at the Golf Course Road church, on "The Power of Listening," and Diane Comstock and Joan Pace from Samaritan Counseling Center, on "Play Therapy — The Windows to Our Children."

On a lighter note, Midland attorney Mary Lou Cassidy will entertain the group at lunch with a review of Dave Barry's Book, "The Only Travel Guide You'll Ever Need."

State officers will be special guests.

Verneta is chair of the district meeting, and Dorothy (Mrs. Bud) Scott is president of the host auxiliary.

DEAR ABBY

Bar association helps organ donors

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: A year ago, the members of the American Bar Association's Section of Real Property, Probate and Trust Law wondered what we could do to help the people on the waiting list for organ and tissue donations. As science and technology progresses, there seems to be a greater need for organ and tissue donors. At any one time, there are at least 5,000 people waiting for corneal transplants so they can see again, and approximately another 27,000 waiting for other organ transplants.

Van Buren

At our winter meeting, the entire American Bar Association adopted a resolution urging all attorneys to raise (when appropriate) the subject of organ and tissue donations with clients, and to provide donation forms to those who indicate an interest in making a donation.

As part of the resolution, we urged the legal community to coordinate its efforts with the medical community, including physicians, nurses, paramedics, hospitals, organ and tissue donor registries (in particular, The Living Bank — the only national multi-organ and tissue donor registry), and others involved in transplantation.

We believe that as attorneys we can help educate the public about the need for organ and tissue donations, and the process for registering a commitment to be a donor. Those interested in becoming a donor may register, without cost, with The Living Bank, P.O. Box 6725, Houston, Texas 77265. — DAVID ALAN RICHARDS, CHAIR, ABA SECTION OF REAL PROPERTY, PROBATE AND TRUST LAW, CHICAGO

DEAR MR. RICHARDS: I am printing your letter, hoping to recruit more organ and tissue donors.

I want to add here that contrary to some rumors my readers may have heard, organ donors (and their families) are NEVER charged for the surgery involved.

I have carried a donor card for 22 years, and feel that there is nothing I could leave after my death that would be of greater value.

DEAR READERS: Credit Georgia's Gov. Zell Miller with one of the best quotes to have come out of the Democratic National Convention in New York on July 13:

"I know what Dan Quayle means when he says it's best for children to have two parents.

"You bet it is!

"And it would be nice for them to have trust funds, too.

"But we all can't be born rich, handsome and lucky ... and that's why we have a Democratic Party ...

"I made it because Franklin Delano Roosevelt energized this nation.

"I made it because Harry Truman fought for working families like mine.

"I made it because John Kennedy's rising tide lifted even our tiny boat.

"I made it because Lyndon Johnson showed America that people who were born poor didn't have to die poor."

DEAR ABBY: I teach macroeconomics at the University of Massachusetts, Amherst. I have decided a reasonable exam question is: "How big is the U.S. federal budget deficit?" Most of my students answer correctly: approximately $400 billion.

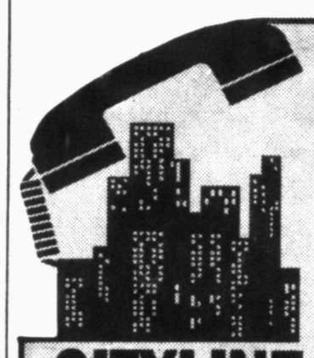

What my students still find surprising is the size of the tax increase necessary to eliminate that deficit. If the balanced-budget amendment passes, and each of the 250 million people in the United States has his or her taxes increased by an equal amount to cover the deficit, that will be a $1,600 tax increase.

If we increase taxes for only those people in the labor force (about 120 million people), balancing the federal budget will require a tax increase of more than $3,300 per working person per year! That's not a one-time increase, but an annual increase. Moreover, this will not reduce the outstanding debt of the U.S. government, which is currently about $4 trillion (or $4 million million); such a tax increase will simply stop our nation's debt from increasing any further.

I think most people will be surprised by these figures. What do you think? — MARTHA L. OLNEY, ASSOCIATE PROFESSOR OF ECONOMICS

DEAR PROFESSOR: I think "surprised" is an understatement.

AT WIT'S END

Vacation not fun for runner's 'widow'

EDITORS NOTE: Erma is taking a one-week vacation. This column originally ran in June 1983.

By Erma Bombeck

Vacations used to be a great escape. For a couple of weeks a year, you got away from the routine.

Bombeck

Not any more.

Now you can follow your hobbies and avocations all over the world without missing a beat. There are wine-tasting tours, ski tours, jazz tours, bicycle tours and a tour of cooking schools for gourmet cooks.

There's a chocolate tour (guaranteed to make every single occupancy into a double on the return trip), a cathedral tour and even a pasta tour.

But the one I clipped from the paper and stuffed down the disposer is the marathon tour for runners.

If you're married to a runner, I don't have to tell you how the thought of running around the world would make him salivate right down his or her chin.

Do you have any idea what it's like to travel with a man who packs everything he needs for a three-week cruise in a gym bag?

Who never knows what time it is because a runner's watch takes three days to set?

Who, when someone says, "You look terrible. Have you been sick?" smiles and says, "Thank you."

My husband has run all over the world, knocking over little old ladies in every language. He has caused traffic jams in Copenhagen, raised eyebrows in Brazil and been stalked by hungry warthogs in Africa. The man is certifiable.

There is no other sport in the world that is so addictive to travelers. With hockey players, you can lose their sticks, and they're out of business. With golfers and tennis players, they need a partner. But with runners, they're all they need.

No one talks about runners' widows, but we exist. We're the ones sitting at a breakfast table alone because he has to run and shower before breakfast.

We're the ones who drag out of a warm bed at 7 in the morning to open the hotel room door because he has no place on his body to carry the hotel key.

When my husband returned with the paper he said, "What's missing? What did you cut out?"

"A recipe for tripe quiche," I said.

He bought it. He runs long and fast. I never said he was bright.

SEEDS FOR THOUGHT

Colorful insects are garden pest

By Deborah A. Benge

What are those giant green bugs buzzing around the backyard, trying to beat you out of your peaches? Green Metallic June Beetles. They look like Japanese Beetles, but they are a cousin to the smaller, brown June Beetle.

Benge

This year and last year, we seem to have an unusually large number of these pests around. Numerous calls have come into the Extension office describing the numbers and the conditions in which home gardeners find them.

The adults are almost an inch long and half inch wide. They are green on their backs with a tan color along the margins of their backs. The underside of the body is a beautiful metallic green.

The adult beetles can create uncomfortable moments in the garden for gardeners because they seem a little threatening. They have hard wing covers that position upward allowing this awkward insect to fly. It makes such a production of flying that many people confuse it with a large bee, but they are completely harmless to people.

The immature form of the beetle is a large, dirty-white grub that pass the winter in the soil. The grubs move on their backs and feed on the roots of grasses, a few other pants and decaying organic matter. These grubs will pupate into the adults sometime in July.

The adults really got our attention this year by attacking ripening fruits, grapes, sweet corn and the foliage of many trees and shrubs. In addition, we've seen some red oak trees with a frothy, bubbly plant sap oozing out of pruning cuts this summer, the Green June beetle seems to be highly attracted to this fermenting plant sap. To control these unwelcome pests, you may want to try hand picking them from your trees and plants. Carry a container half filled with soapy water or a mixture of rubbing alcohol, water and a few drops of mineral oil to the garden you can drop adults into the container.

A baiting method of control, would be to place halved watermelon rinds (you can eat the good part first) under your trees or vines and sprinkle or spray this with carbaryl (SEVIN) dust or spray. The watermelon rind is so highly attractive to the insect that they will be attracted to it and killed by the insecticide. Any fully ripe or fermenting fruit in containers could be substituted for the watermelon rind. Use these methods with care if you have children or pets. Place these decoys up out of the reach of curious children or pets.

Another method of control would be to simply spray your fruit or plant being attacked by the pest with carbaryl. The harvest delay with carbaryl on almost all fruit and vegetables is very short and that information can be found on the label.

Consumers' questions about olive oil, its uses, answered

SECAUCUS, N.J. (AP) — Increasing use of olive oil in the American kitchen means consumers are seeking more information about this imported product.

Here are answers to some frequently asked questions from William C. Monroe, president of olive oil maker Bertolli:

■ What is "Extra Virgin" olive oil? Made from top grade olives in a single cold pressing, its acidity must be less than 1 percent, with taste, color and aroma of "superior" quality.

■ How is olive oil used? For salads, sauces, marinades, soups and stews. Also for sauteeing, stir-frying, basting and baking.

■ What is "Extra Light" olive oil? Newly developed for American tastes, this 100 percent pure olive oil has milder taste, lighter flavor, color and aroma.

■ How do you store olive oil? Keep away from light and heat in a tightly capped bottle. Refrigerate in hot weather.

Sand made from rock

Associated Press

Sand on the beach is tiny fragments of rock. As big boulders erode and assume different sizes they are called different names by scientists. Boulders become cobbles, which become pebbles, then gravel, then sand. Eventually sand becomes bits of silt and dust.

New game tests business sense

MILWAUKEE (AP) — About 650,000 entrepreneurs open businesses each year, but 60,000 small businesses also fail in the same period. What makes some succeed?

A new 22-question game for those considering start-up enterprises has been introduced by Northwestern Mutual Life Insurance Co.

Called "What Is Your E.Q.?" (Entrepreneurial Quotient), the game scores factors such as early background and experiences, personality traits, values and beliefs.

Sample questions: "Are you easily bored?" and "Do others' opinions matter to you?"

The game is based on research by the insurance company of its agents and policyowners to determine why certain entrepreneurs achieve success.

Couple observes 50 years together

E.B. and Dessie Pruitt of Midland will be honored with a 50th wedding anniversary party today at Crestview Baptist Church Parlor. Hosts will be the couple's children and their spouses.

Pruitt and the former Dessie Marie Bailey were married Aug. 9, 1942, in Wright City. They have three children, Donnie Pruitt of Midland, Becky Childers of Denver, Colo., and Cherry Head of Hazelhurst, Miss., as well as five grandchildren.

The couple lived in Houston, Turnertown and Kilgore before moving to West Texas in 1948. They moved to Midland in 1960. Pruitt retired from Texas Oil Co. in 1978, then worked for Resource Investment until retiring in 1985.

Women's health concerns get attention

ATLANTA (AP) — The special health concerns of women are getting priority attention from pharmaceutical manufacturers, reports the Arthritis Foundation.

According to the foundation, a survey by the Pharmaceutical Manufacturers Association disclosed that more than 250 medicines are in human clinical trials or awaiting approval by the Food and Drug Administration for diseases that primarily affect women or are among the top 10 causes of death in women.

They include 37 medicines currently being tested for five specific types of arthritis and other musculoskeletal diseases — juvenile rheumatoid arthritis, osteoarthritis, osteoporosis, rheumatoid arthritis and systemic lupus erythematosus.

gluten in the intestine, Mrs. Newbold said. "You are born with the tendency."

And although celiac disease is not a life-threatening condition, "if you don't get help over a long period of time, it can be fatal," Mrs. Gatlin said, because the body can't absorb the right amount of nutrients.

People with celiac disease or DH eliminate all products made with wheat, oats, barley and rye from their diets, which means most commercially made bread, rolls, pastries and pies; soups, sauces and gravies thickened with these flours; and even drinks such as beer, sherry, vodka, gin and whiskey made with grain alcohol must not be included in their diets.

Yet the people with celiac disease or DH learn that eliminating these foods and others made with the forbidden flours from their diets makes them feel so much better that they don't even miss some of their former favorite foods.

Going out to eat may be a problem, but not an insurmountable one, the women said. They advised discussing their dietary options with the restaurant manager and finding out what they can and cannot have on that establishment's menu.

"I can have anything I want," Mrs. Newbold said, "as long as it's not prepared in any way with wheat, oats, barley or rye."

Before going on the gluten-free diet, Gwen Lorenz said, "I used to be sick a lot, and thought I had a virus. I've been treated for parasites a lot (because her reaction to dietary gluten had not been checked).

"I feel great now — as long as I don't eat the wrong things. And they don't tempt me. If you get sick enough (from eating the wrong foods), you learn real quick."

Gluten-free diets do include such flours and grains as corn and rice, so people on these diets can prepare their own baked goods, once they learn how, said Mrs. Gatlin. "You have to learn to cook (the recipes) because if you cook with rice flour (alone), it's kind of grainy and not very palatable."

Some gluten-free food products can be found in some health food stores, or can be ordered from companies specializing in gluten-free foods.

But with the right ingredients, tasty and nutritious gluten-free recipes aren't difficult to prepare, the members have found. And through the West Texas Gluten-Free Awareness Support Group, members have been able to share their culinary experiences, as well as everyday happenings, allowing them to more easily deal with their intolerance.

RECIPES: Gluten-free cooking can be tasty

(From 1F)

GLUTEN-FREE WAFFLES

⅔ cup rice flour
⅓ cup cornmeal
2 teaspoons baking powder
⅛ teaspoon salt
⅓ cup dry milk and 1 cup water
1 egg beaten separately
¼ cup sugar (scant)
⅛ cup cooking oil
¼ to ½ cup chopped pecans

Mix to fairly thin batter and cook on hot waffle iron.

BLUEBERRY DESSERT

2 boxes (3 ounce each) blueberry gelatin
2 cups hot water
5 ounces crushed pineapple
1 can blueberry pie filling

Dissolve gelatin in hot water according to package directions. Fold in crushed pineapple. Add blueberry pie filling and chill until set.

Top with topping made from: 8 ounces cream cheese, 1 cup sour cream, 1 cup powdered sugar and 1½ teaspoon vanilla blended together.

PUMPKIN BARS

4 eggs
1⅔ cups sugar
1 cup oil
1 can (16 ounces) pumpkin
1½ cups rice flour
¼ cup soy flour
¼ cup potato starch
2 teaspoons baking powder
2 teaspoons cinnamon
1 teaspoon salt

Combine and beat together eggs, sugar, oil and pumpkin. Sift together rice flour, soy flour, potato starch. Add baking powder, cinnamon and salt to dry ingredients. Add to above mixture and beat well. Spread batter into 15x10x2-inch pan that has been greased and dusted with gluten-free flour. Bake at 350 degrees for 25 minutes.

FROSTING

3 ounces cream cheese
½ cup margarine
1 teaspoon gluten-free vanilla
2 cups powdered sugar

Combine all ingredients and beat well. Frost pumpkin bars.

HAM AND CHEESE DELIGHT

Cook ½ cup finely chopped onion in 1 tablespoon margarine. Combine with 2 cups finely chopped cooked ham, 3 slightly beaten eggs, 4 ounces sharp Cheddar cheese, ⅔ cup corn flake crumbs, 1½ cups milk and dash of pepper. Mix well. Pour into 13x9-inch pan. Bake at 350 degrees for 45-50 minutes or until knife inserted just off-center comes out clean. Makes 6 servings.

ITALIAN SKILLET SUPPER

1 pound ground beef or turkey
½ cup chopped onion
½ cup chopped bell pepper
½ cup chopped celery
½ cup uncooked brown rice
1 can (8 ounces) tomato sauce
1 can Italian-style stewed tomatoes
¼ cup water
1 teaspoon garlic salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
½ teaspoon oregano
1 cup shredded Mozzarella cheese

Brown meat, onion, pepper and celery. Drain. Add water, tomato sauce, stewed tomatoes and rice. Add seasonings and cooking according to label directions for rice. Top with cheese.

Vacation guide designed to help vegetarians find places to eat

By Emily K. Kelley
Hearst News Service

HOUSTON — Eating out is a big part of vacationing, but for vegetarians, this simple event can become a nightmare in an unfamiliar city.

To ease this stress, the Vegetarian Resource Group has produced a "Vegetarian Vacation Guide," which lists more than 100 ideas for healthy travel including 49 camps that offer vegetarian food.

Relax at the Savannah Inn, a vegetarian bed and breakfast in Lewes, Del., near the beach. Idaho Afloat, a white-water rafting organization in the Pacific Northwest, can accommodate vegetarians and will hire a local vegetarian cook for a group of 12 or more.

If you'd rather go with the wind, Figaro Cruises in Maine offers sailing trips. Most of the meals on their vegetarian menu are made from scratch.

For the landlubber, Michigan Bicycle Touring offers a Glen Lake Veggie Amble featuring non-dairy international cuisine.

If you want to see a rain forest, the Instituto de Vida Natural is a spa with both a rain forest and ocean at its doorstep. Ancient Forest Adventures offers tours throughout the Pacific Northwest. Five percent of its proceeds are donated to conservation efforts.

Also included in the guide are kosher, macrobiotic and hygienic vacations.

Kesher Worldwide Jewish Home Link helps kosher and vegetarian people exchange homes while traveling. When in Israel, visit Moshav Amirim, a vegetarian village in upper Galilee.

The guide also lists vegetarian outings designed just for children, such as Camp Legacy in Virginia, a vegetarian camp affiliated with the United Nations and attended by students from around the world.

To order the 12-page guide, send $3 to The Vegetarian Resource Group, P.O. Box 1463, Baltimore, Md. 21203.

The Greatest Show on Earth features several clown acts (top center) as well as performer Lisa Dufresne (above right) who guides several barnyard animals in her act. Also performing are the acrobats from the People's Republic of China (above) who will demonstrate their bicycle ballet.

By Georgia Todd Temple

David and Vivian Laribe have more in common than being brother and sister. Both are seventh generation Italian circus performers who love what they do for a living.

"We love what we do, and we enjoy it at any moment," the 33-year-old clown said in a joint telephone interview. "It's a profession, it's an art that requires a lot of sacrifice, many, many hours of rehearsal and preparation, and, too, that is not possible if you do not have the talent, if you are not born with the talent. All these things together make a good performer."

His 23-year-old sister agreed. Laribe is featured in his sister's Washington trapeze act in the 121st edition of Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey Circus, which comes to Ector County Coliseum Aug. 14-16.

Both have known since childhood exactly what they wanted to do with their lives.

Laribe was 8 years old when he first entered a ring as a clown.

"I was in the circus of my mother's family," Laribe recalled. "For my birthday I wanted the clown to make me up, and bring me with him into the ring. It was a beautiful feeling, and, from this moment, I knew that's what I wanted to do. It's a wonderful feeling when you hear the people laughing and really enjoying what you are doing."

Miss Laribe first appeared in the circus arena at age 7. The daughter of internationally known Washington trapeze artist Eugenio Laribe, she was his human juggling apparatus. He rotated her in circles with his feet, 20 feet off the ground.

"It's hard to explain the feeling when I stepped out and did my job. I knew I was going to do that for my life, because I like it so much. It's a special feeling to perform rather than practice."

When she was 9, her performance included climbing to the top of a 22-pound ladder her father balanced on his feet in the same upside down position. Their next act featured Miss Laribe, known as "Vivi" to her friends and family, juggling a large cylinder with her feet while supported by her father's feet as he balanced on the Washington trapeze.

Obviously, Miss Laribe has no fear of heights.

"I'm always careful, and I really concentrate. Scared? No. I have many, many years to do that."

She said it is important to never take the work for granted. "For me, every day is like the first day to do the act. I really put special attention on that."

Her current act took five years to learn, Miss Laribe said, adding that she has been working on a new act which she hopes will be perfected in another three years.

Her trainer is someone in which she has complete confidence — her father. In addition to performing sometimes twice in a day, she rehearses daily.

Although Laribe is a circus performer, he has broken with tradition by performing as a clown.

"My father was not a clown, my father was an aerialist and normal in the circus is for son to follow father — your father teaches you what he knows. If he's an aerialist, he's going to teach you to be an aerialist."

Laribe's earliest circus training was as an acrobat, trapeze artist, juggler and horseman. He attended school in Verona, Italy, studying music and ballet. When he was 16, he made his professional debut in Circus Medrano in a roller-skating act headed by his uncle.

"But, I always dreamed to become a clown one day because I was fascinated by the power that these people have to bring fun and joy and to entertain. I was thinking it was a wonderful thing, so in my mind was, 'That's what I wanted to do.' That one thing."

Actually, Laribe does more than "that one thing." Considered a Renaissance man of the circus, Laribe will, at different times, display his talents as a mime, juggler, musician and acrobat.

Following the roller-skating routine with his uncle, Laribe secured clowning spots in the prestigious Swiss Circus Nock and Germany's Circus Krone and quickly earned permanent billing as a clown.

In 1988 at the International Circus Festival in Monte Carlo, Laribe was honored by being included in the Festival's closing night gala performance. He won both the Junior Jury's Award from a panel of judges comprised entirely of children and the 1988 Silver Crown.

More recently, he has appeared in England's Blackpool Tower Circus and as a star of the Mexican Circus Union. He joined The Greatest Show on Earth in 1991.

In the brother and sister duo, Laribe sings "Send in the Clowns" as Miss Laribe ascends to her trapeze. Later, the duo offers a unique rendition of "Skater's Waltz" with bells on their ankles and wrists and Miss Laribe in her usual upside down position.

"It's like a romance between the beautiful trapeze artist and the goofy clown on the floor," Laribe said. "Nobody has done this act before."

Although the two have little time off, they do have hobbies which they participate in when they have the opportunity. Laribe is an avid reader who has recently taken up playing golf. Miss Laribe, who designs and sews all her costumes, enjoys photography, sewing, learning languages, traveling and shopping.

Laribe speaks five languages including English, Italian, French, Spanish and German. Miss Laribe speaks the same languages with the exception of French.

All of their relatives are circus performers, Laribe explained, including uncles, cousins and their two sisters, who now live in Germany.

"Circus art is really an art," Laribe said. "Like any other form of art, you have to work a lot. You have to have your own style. You have to create what you do with it."

Both only realized as adults that growing up as a circus performer's child presented a different lifestyle than most children know.

"When you are born in a circus family, you really don't realize until you grow that you have a particular life, that you are different than other children. It's no problem to be around all these people from all over the world, animals and things. For you that is the normal life."

Miss Laribe agreed.

"For me, I don't know other life because I've grown in the circus since I was very little. I'm used to go around to know new town and land. You have the chance to learn many languages. It's no trouble. It's a pleasure," she said.

Despite the hard work and hours of dedicated training, both find the circus way of life to be perfect for them.

"It is a beautiful life. It is a very clean life," Laribe said. "In the circus family we do not have drugs, we don't have alcoholism ... We have already our drug. Our drug is when we go in the floor and see the people who applaud. That's beautiful. That's what we need. We need nothing else."

Former Texas ranch hand documents authentic cowboy songs

AMARILLO (AP) — Buck Ramsey, a Texas cowboy forced to switch trades because of a severe back injury in 1963, wants to preserve the special music once heard in cow camps and around chuckwagons each evening.

Ramsey, a cowboy poet whose work includes the instant classic epic, "Anthem," is recording what he thinks will be more than 150 authentic ranch and trail songs by next year.

Although Ramsey's interest primarily is preserving these songs in their original style, the Amarillo, resident also has issued his first commercial tape from the anthology, "Rolling Uphill to Texas."

The 43-minute cassette includes "Railroad Corral," "Roundup in the Spring," "Doney Gal," and "Brazos River Song."

"There's something very clean and simple about them," Ramsey said. "They are the story and song of the one real mythology that Americans gave the world."

His efforts have attracted the attention of Lonn Taylor, associate director for public programs at the National Museum of American History at the Smithsonian Institution in Washington, D.C.

"I think Buck is a wonderful performer and an excellent researcher," said Taylor. "I'm very impressed."

Taylor said Ramsey's work is similar to that of John Lomax early this century. Lomax, a musical historian, produced recordings and books of many early-day American songs on the verge of extinction.

"I think what he will end up with is a valuable collection," Taylor said. "Most of all I'm impressed by Buck's research. He's told me things about songs that I've always heard but never knew. He's a fine historian as well as a fine performer."

Kevin Mulroy, librarian and archivist at the Gene Autry Western Heritage Museum in Los Angeles, said Ramsey's work will be enjoyed by generations to come.

"I consider him to be a national treasure," Mulroy said. "I think he's really saving an endangered art form, an endangered species, in preserving some of the traditional Texas songs."

Most, if not all the songs, are documented in books, Ramsey said, but there have been only sporadic attempts to record the music.

"They contain all the parts of poetry; they tell stories. They have such great melodies, the kind that seem to speak to our common memory, take us back to what some of us think must have been a better time."

"For the people who know, this gives the song special meaning," he said.

The recording sessions began more than a year ago, shortly after Ramsey met Lanny Fiel in Lubbock, host of a public radio program on traditional American music.

Convention to host country music stars

HOUSTON (AP) — The "American Spirit Pavilion" at the Republican National Convention will include samples of Houston foods, live entertainment, a merchandise mart of political memorabilia, and exhibits from NASA, Kodak and General Motors.

Houston Host Committee Chairman Ken Lay said the pavilion is a commercial enterprise created by the committee in conjunction with Richard Flowers & Associates of Houston. It will be open to all credentialed visitors from noon to 11 p.m. daily in the AstroArena during the Aug. 17-20 convention.

The pavilion will feature performances by Country and Western stars Randy Travis, Louise Mandrell and Wynnona Judd and blues great B.B. King.

The food court will include cuisine from local restaurants and national chains, while the Houston-based company Spectrum will handle the merchandise mart.

An information center sponsored by Southwestern Bell and the committee will provide a message center, useful maps, tourist and transportation information. Other services in the area will include automatic banking machines, a photo development center and a post office.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

SUNDAY, AUGUST 9, 1992

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: A marvelous business partner and unexpected funding make this an outstanding year. Financial wheeling and dealing reach a zenith in October and November. In December, balance work with a healthy dose of romance and pleasure. Early 1993 is the best time to negotiate real estate ventures. Windfall profits are possible late next spring. Remain patient with a loved one who seems unsure what to do next.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actress Melanie Griffith, singer Whitney Houston, actor Sam Elliot, boxer Ken Norton.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Focus on home improvements now. If choosing a new color scheme, consult family members. Even tiny tots have their favorite shades. Romance thrives on considerate gestures.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): A lack of ideas could have you singing the blues. Seek the suggestions of friends and family members. By evening, you will be feeling on top of things again.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Your instincts are razor sharp where people and new situations are concerned. A special group or organization lends powerful support. There should be plenty of rejoicing within the family circle.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): The urge to play is strong today. Be careful not to overdo where athletic activity is concerned. Take an armchair journey with a travel magazine or video tonight.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): The danger signal is flashing furiously; take nothing for granted. Protect your loved ones and property. An old flame could re-enter the picture. Be careful not to put yourself in a compromising position.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Money spent on pleasure is not wasted; enjoy a lighthearted gathering with friends. You are right to have a high opinion of your talents. A casual meeting could lead to new romance.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Break free from the confines of home today and make this a day of exploration. Opt for group participation and friendship. Someone who is not feeling well deserves every consideration.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Your financial worries may be exaggerated. Recognize the value of your partner's insights. A pleasant surprise is featured later today. Be tactful when arguing with friends.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Your spirits soar when you plan an enjoyable day with that special person. Your quiet strength and understanding are a boon to loved one. Spend some time evaluating your career goals.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): A loved one's actions suit you to a T. You do not have to travel far to find what you want. A church or community event provides plenty of fun and stimulation.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Share your feelings with a friend who needs your loving support. Trust your moneymaking instincts. Your hopes for a better life will bear fruit. Romantic partner could keep you guessing.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Your calm manner is a big help to a friend going through a crisis. Make any suggestions both clear-headed and loving. Remember to keep in close touch with the folks at home.

If we were asked to give just one piece of advice to bridge players, it would be three little words: Count your tricks! You would be surprised how often a task you learned in childhood can steer you to the winning line.

Consider this hand where routine bidding lands North-South in a contract of three no trump. After the opening lead, declarer can count two tricks each in spades and hearts and one in diamonds. Therefore, four tricks in clubs will suffice to land the game.

Is there any risk to the contract? Yes. If East can gain the lead early and shift to a diamond, there is the possibility that the defenders can collect three diamond tricks, a heart and a club before South can reel in nine tricks.

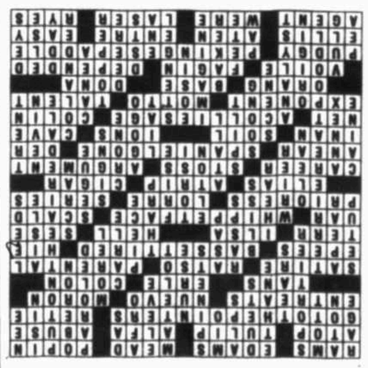

With the disease diagnosed, the cure is simple. Since two heart tricks are guaranteed no matter what, win the ace of hearts at trick one! Next lead a club and simply cover any card East produces. Here, the nine of clubs will be covered by the jack and West will be welcome to take the queen.

West can do nothing to harm you. A heart will set up a second trick for you; a diamond into your A 10 gives you two stoppers in that suit with time to set up another red-suit trick. The safe return is a spade, but you can win that on the board and set up the fulfilling trick by leading another heart immediately.

■ Larson displays work

Midland Arts Association member Audrey Larson is displaying her work in the lobby of First City Bank this month.

Her work includes landscapes, still lifes and portraits.

She attended the American Academy of Art in Chicago and the Art Institute in Chicago. She also majored in art at the University of Wisconsin, where she was a member of Delta Phi Delta, a national honorary art society.

She has attended art classes at the Fort Worth Art Museum where Emily G. Smith and Dixson Reeder were her instructors. She also has attended workshops conducted by Jan Herring, Warren Cullar, Ted Goerschner and Betty Lynch.

■ Band hosts crafts fair

An Arts & Crafts Fair is scheduled from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. Aug. 29 at Lee High School Courtyard.

Booth space is available by calling 697-4084 or 697-0073. The fair is sponsored by Rebels 'n Roses, Lee High School Band in conjunction with a family carnival, garage sale and evening summer band concert.

All proceeds go toward the trip fund to the 1993 Tournament of Roses Parade.

■ Art competition slated

SAN ANGELO — The San Angelo Art Club, Inc., is having its "Everything Goes-Almost" competition and exhibit in September.

Entry forms will be available and accepted between 9 a.m. and 5:30 p.m. Sept. 2 at 119 W. First St.

All styles and all media will be accepted, with the exception of nudes.

Entry fee is $6 per entry, with no limit on entries. Awards will be given for first, second and third places with honorable mentions receiving ribbons.

For more information call Nelta Kiser, 1-949-8393; Vivian Fields, 1-915-653-7024; Doris Greer, 1-655-1754; or Kendall Art Gallery, 1-653-4405.

■ Museum hosts band

Keyboardist Richard Theisen is a Grammy winner for his song "Rock & Roll Me Again" for the "Beverly Hills Cop" sound track album. Custom Made has been performing as a group since 1986 and in April 1992 received the highest honor at the Annual Society of Texas Entertainment Professionals Performance Showcase.

Advance tickets will include a full dinner catered by West Texas Cuisine before the concert and can be purchased at Mida Computer, Midland, or Wells Boots, Odessa, for $15 per person. Tickets for the event that do not include dinner will be on sale at the door for $10.

The event will be held at Midland Center, Wall Avenue at Main Street. Dinner is from 6 to 7 p.m. The concert is from 8 p.m. to midnight.

Sponsors for the museum benefit include Paine Webber, Texas Commerce Bank, Reporter-Telegram, Wagner & Brown, Channel 9 and KGEE.

Burke is brassy as ever in new comedy

LOS ANGELES — Delta Burke has a lot to prove with "Delta," and she knows it.

The ABC series, which will air this fall on Wednesdays (against Fox's "The Simpsons," CBS's "Top Cops" and NBC's stalwart "A Different World"), appears to be one of the better bets for the new TV season, based on a sneak-peek of the show's pilot episode.

Burke plays Delta Bishop, a Southern housewife married to a man who refused to take her dream — quitting her job at Mona's House of Hair and becoming a country music star — seriously enough to suit her.

One day, she has enough: Delta packs her bags and heads to Nashville, where she will live with her cousin Lavonne (Gigi Rice), and Lavonne's husband Buck (former Dallas comedian Bill Engvall). Delta will live in a spare bedroom: "All we did was store car parts up here," Lavonne tells her, "and I told Buck, 'What do you think the yard is for?'"

Delta gets a job waiting tables at a bar where her idol, Patsy Cline, once sang, and she's determined to star in the club's amateur night competition. Club owner Darden (Earl Holliman) is skeptical but supportive, and gives Delta a shot.

Burke does her own singing, and it's something new to her. "The only singing I've done before was for comic effect," she said on Tuesday, "just to get a laugh. It wound up being my favorite part of the show. Now, you can't shut me up." She has been taking instruction from some of the better-known vocal coaches, and she isn't bad.

The pilot episode shows promise, not only from Burke but from the supporting cast, including Rice and Beth Grant, who plays Thelma, hairstylist to the stars.

"She once styled Dolly Parton's hair!" Delta is told.

"Really? What's she like?" Delta asks.

"How would I know?" Thelma says. "She didn't come in — she just had her hair sent over."

"Delta" does rely too much on the drawling Southern stereotype; hopefully Engvall's character will get a chance in the future to do more than complain about his soggy Cocoa Puffs.

Jennifer Beals slows for career stop at '2000 Malibu Road'

LOS ANGELES (AP) — During nine years of movie and stage work, Jennifer Beals says she always had been leery of staying in one place long enough to do a television series.

"Nor had I found a character I wanted to live with for several years," she says.

Yet Miss Beals, who whirled into prominence with the 1983 hit "Flashdance," has decided to take up residence at "2000 Malibu Road," CBS' new summer series that debuts with a two-hour movie Sunday, Aug. 23. That will be followed by four hour-long episodes on Wednesdays, the first on Aug. 26.

The Aaron Spelling youth show focuses on four women who share a spectacular beach house: a lawyer (Miss Beals), a retired prostitute (Lisa Hartman), a young actress (Drew Barrymore), and the actress' manager (Tuesday Knight).

Working with Spelling on the series is "L.A. Law" co-creator Terry Louise Fisher and Joel Schumacher, who has directed such youth-oriented films as "St. Elmo's Fire," "Flatliners," "Dying Young" and "Lost Boys."

Why did Miss Beals finally submit to series television?

"I like the character," she says. "I liked the fact that Joel Schumacher was producing and directing the first six episodes. That made it more attractive."

A hallmark of a Spelling show — his current offerings are "Beverly Hills 90210" and "Melrose Place" — is the exposure of lots of flesh and of secrets each character hides.

"My character is Perry Quinn, the attorney with the drinking problem," Miss Beals says. "What I like about her is that on the outside she is very together, very motivated. She can be quite cynical, quite dry. It's all a cover. I wouldn't be interested in a character who was smooth and perfect. No one's like that. Everyone has her secret and Achilles heel. I feel she comes to Malibu seeking a sanctuary from all her problems."

The actress, who is married to director-writer Alexandre Rockwell, said one of the first questions she asked Schumacher was, "What if I get pregnant?"

"He said, 'Then the character will get pregnant.' I wouldn't mind being a single mother on television," she said. "I'd be proud to try to deal with that. You can't always have a complete family unit. I know my mother for the most part raised me by herself."

Miss Beals will be seen in two films this fall: the USA Network murder mystery "Indecency" and the theatrical release "In the Soup," which was written and directed by her husband. The movie was judged best at the 1992 Sundance Film Festival and has been entered in the Venice Film Festival.

"It's a comedy, but also a coming of age for an artist," she said. "My husband and I put a lot of our own money into it, which breaks the cardinal rule. My mother gave her teacher's pension."

Her husband also directed her in "Sons," a movie widely distributed in Europe but not in the United States.

"He's a lot of fun to work with," Miss Beals said. "He loves actors, he loves the whole process. We met through a mutual friend and have been married more than six years. We were married before I saw any of his films."

Although she is committed to "2000 Malibu Road" for the time being, Miss Beals continues her interest in film projects.

"What I want to do now is film work with directors who have a strong point of view and a particular vision," she says.

Miss Beals grew up in Chicago, but now considers New York her home, even if the Hollywood-produced "Malibu Road" stays in production for six years.

She studied at the Goodman Theater in Chicago, then studied acting for several years in New York. She got her degree from Yale University, where she studied American Literature and Italian.

She had just started the fall term at Yale when she got the role in "Flashdance," causing her to delay her entrance until January. She had to promise her schoolteacher mother she would come back and complete college.

"I love the theater," she says. "You never know what's going to happen. I had my costume fall off on stage while playing a Latin American version of 'Macbeth' in a sarong. Another night my light went out during the sleepwalking scene. But I've never had a prop fall into the orchestra pit. I've come close."

McClinton plans to rock 'The Bar'

By Georgia Todd Temple
Staff writer

Although Texas grass roots rocker Delbert McClinton doesn't like to give advice, he has one piece of wisdom he would pass along to a young musician at the beginning of his career.

"I'd tell him never leave his wallet in the dressing room while he was on stage," McClinton said in a recent telephone interview. "That's about the only advice I want to give anybody."

McClinton, who won a Grammy for Best Rock Vocal Duo on "Good Man, Good Woman" with Bonnie Raitt, comes to Midland's The Bar Saturday.

"It was a big thrill," McClinton said, recalling how it felt to win this spring. "Bonnie Raitt and I have been good friends for about 120 years, and she called and invited me to sing a duet with her. And I was flattered and thrilled to get to do it. And then when we won the Grammy together, it was just that much more of a thrill."

McClinton is currently on an extensive U.S. tour in support of his latest album, "Never Been Rocked Enough," featuring "Everytime I Roll the Dice" as its first single. The Curb Records release, produced by Don Was, is a blend of rock, R&B and country that features the vocal talent of Tom Petty, Bonnie Raitt, Melissa Etheridge and Francine Reed; guitarist Waddy Wachtel; drummer Kenny Aronoff; and keyboardist Benmont Tench.

"I'm having more success than I've ever had and I've been recording since 1961, so that's about 30 years at least. I've been making records, not with great regularity, but I've been making records that long."

McClinton, who taught Beatles member John Lennon how to play a harmonica, never remembers a time in his life when he didn't want to be a musician.

"Ever since I was a boy, I wanted nothing more than to sing and play music so when I was in high school, I started my first band. I've never really thought about having a career at anything else. This is what I've wanted to do. I've always been fortunate enough to do it well enough to make a decent living at it.

"Of course, I've had other jobs. Had to to support myself and family at different times in my life, but I ultimately always knew I wanted to be a singer, songwriter and performer."

A Lubbock native, McClinton, whose father was a switchman for the railroad and his mother was a beautician, remembers his first time on stage.

"It was 1957, and it was right outside of Fort Worth — White Settlement. I did one of those hoedown shows . . . a poor man's Grand Ole Opry. I did a song called 'Crazy Arms.' It scared me to death, but it was great fun."

McClinton, who is listed in the "Rock Book of Lists" as one of the 20 best harmonica players in the world, receives his inspiration for songs from the world around him.

"There's a never-ending story going on around us all the time. There's as many stories as there are people. Life is full of great stories and great songs. All you have to do is open your eyes."

When it comes to favorite songs, McClinton said he has no one favorite, adding, "Hundreds, but not one."

'There's a never-ending story going on around us all the time. There's as many stories as there are people. Life is full of great stories and great songs. All you have to do is open your eyes.'

Delbert McClinton

McClinton, whose known for his incendiary live shows, said those attending his Midland performance can expect "about two hours of real fine music. I won't have written all the songs, but most of them will be things I have recorded. You won't hear me doing anybody else's current songs."

Fans are important to McClinton, who is the father of two sons, one 30 and the other 18.

"We've got a lot of fans all across the country and have for years. When you've got something like that going, it really gives you the want to to get out there and do a good job."

Performers make their own opportunities, said McClinton, who will be on Late Night with David Letterman Aug. 20.

"I'm a firm believer in you make your way. Of course, there's always the chance that people stumble into success, but I think for it to be a continuous, ongoing upward process is something you have to make happen."

A necessary ingredient for success, McClinton said, is confidence.

"If you're not confident, you can get taken down really easily. If you're over confident, you can get taken down even quicker, so I think true confidence is the key to any success."

'Wascally bwoadcaster' to start cartoon network

NEW YORK (AP) — A Turner Broadcasting official this week unveiled the program lineup for the Cartoon Network, a 24-hour, all-cartoon channel that will be launched as a basic cable service in October.

Guess what happened next:

(a) She waved a big club and bellowed "Yabba-dabba-doo!"

(b) She said, "I taut I taw Ted Tuhnuh."

(c) She gave additional details about the Atlanta-based network, then answered reporters' questions.

OK, OK, so the answer is (c). But Executive Vice President Betty Cohen did get pretty animated describing Turner's never-ending 'toon telecast.

And why not?

Isn't constant cartoon availability any child's answered prayer?

Isn't it also a long-buried fantasy of many adults, who as kids went unsatisfied by their meager cartoon rations aired mostly on weekday afternoons and Saturday mornings? These long-deprived grownups, too, may prove to be Cartoon Network fans.

"Toons appeal to all ages," Cohen noted.

Sufferin' succotash, this is gonna be Ted Turner's fifth cable network, joining Turner Network Television, CNN, Headline News and TBS.

At least at first, the heart of it will be a stash of some 8,500 cartoon titles from the drawing boards of Hanna-Barbera, MGM, Warner Bros. and Paramount. Other cartoons will be acquired as time goes on, said Cohen, adding that within two years original programming would further supplement the mix.

Rather than what she dismissed as "cartoon wallpaper," the daily schedule has been built block by block, much like any other channel.

Not only does this enable the network to tailor each portion of the day's programming to the available audience, it also will allow the more discriminating viewer to, say, zero in on the Warner Bros. classics while steering clear of the last 30 years' output by Hanna-Barbera, who, despite creating "Yogi Bear" and "The Flintstones," haven't had a fresh idea since —well, the Stone Age.

NEW YORK (AP) — Like prize fighters staying in shape between bouts, members of the Rolling Stones are busy with solo projects as the group takes another year off from recording and touring.

Little has been heard from bassist Bill Wyman, but Mick Jagger and Keith Richards have albums due out late this year, and Ron Wood and Charlie Watts recently were both in town to promote records that already have been released. The Stones are not expected back in the studio until 1993.

Jagger

"After the last tour, we were all in agreement," said Wood, interviewed at a Manhattan hotel. "Keith was going to make an album, Mick was going to make one, Charlie has his jazz group and I'm doing my thing. We all need to work."

"What I do is play the drums, or try to," said Watts, speaking during rehearsals for a show at the Blue Note jazz club. "I enjoy being with the jazz group and I enjoy being with Keith Richards.

"It's just two different bands. The pressure is much greater, the demands are much greater with the Stones, with the time and the tours. But it's really the same job; it just gets a bit crowded."

Watts and Wood are close friends, but as interview subjects they couldn't be further apart. Watts, thin and gray, tugging nervously at his eyelid, views talking to the press with all the pleasure of a grade schooler sent to the principal's office. But Wood, the Stones' perpetual new kid on the block, couldn't be happier if you reached into your bag and produced a bottle of Guinness Stout.

Watts is fronting the Charlie Watts Quintet, and has put out the live "A Tribute to Charlie Parker ... With Strings," his second record dedicated to the late jazz saxophonist.

The shy, soft-spoken drummer had longed to play jazz before he even heard about rock 'n' roll. He was approached a few years ago about making a record out of "Ode to a High Flying Bird," a children's book based on Parker's life that Watts wrote in the early 1960s.

"I never liked rock 'n' roll when I was young," Watts, 51, said in his deadpan style, a cross between a drawl and a yawn. "The people I liked were Miles Davis, Billy Eckstine. I never liked the image of rock 'n' roll. It was so dreadful, I thought. The only rocker I liked was Fats Domino."

The new record is an informal musical biography, combining Parker songs, popular standards and originals written by Peter King, the sax player in Watts' band. Between songs, vocalist Bernard Fowler reads excerpts from Watts' book.

"We tend to write things around Charlie because he's not an experienced jazz drummer," King said. "He's the first one to tell you that; there's certain things he can't do. He doesn't like to play solos, but I was surprised at how well he does play. He plays very much in the vein of bebop, a very sort of relaxed feel. He drops a few bebop bombs in the right place."

Wood's album, "Slide on This," his first solo outing in a decade, combines country, blues, James Brown and some typically Stonesy riffs. The guitarist never has lacked for friends in the music business and the record has plenty of guest stars, including Watts, U2 guitarist The Edge and Joe Elliott of Def Leppard.

"We had this blackboard in the control room with all the songs and all the suggestions," said Wood, who recorded most of the album at his home in Ireland. "We'd look up and say, 'This would suit Charlie's drums; a fiddle and squeeze box on this one, strings on this.'"

Wood first played with the Stones on their 1975 tour when guitarist Mick Taylor quit the band after the release of the "It's Only Rock 'n' Roll" album. Before that, Wood was a member of two bands with Rod Stewart: the Faces and the Jeff Beck Group.

If Watts prefers to just play drums and attract as little attention as possible, Wood, forever young at age 45, sees his role in the Stones as keeper of the flame, making sure the other four members appreciate what they have.

Sometimes, that means playing peacemaker. When he first joined the band, Wyman and Richards were barely on speaking terms and it was Wood who got them to patch it up. When a feud between Jagger and Richards nearly finished the Stones a few years ago, Wood again came to the rescue.

"I got on the phone to Keith first and I said, 'Will you please talk to Mick,'" Wood explained. "He said, If he wants to, I'll talk to him.' I rung Mick and said, "Keith said he's ready to talk to you now.' Mick said, 'Are you sure, Woody?' Sure enough, Mick rang Keith and Mick rang back and said, 'I called him and it was great, it was all right.'

"I value the Stones as an institution. I wouldn't have let it break up, and I think if I hadn't been there, it would have flown apart. They just needed someone to do what I did."

In fact, about the only way to ruffle the unruffable Wood, is to make him consider life without the Rolling Stones.

Creator bases new character on Molly Ivins

Hearst News Service

LOS ANGELES — Linda Bloodworth-Thomason produces sitcoms that walk the cutting edge of political comment — and she's proud to be out there on the brink.

Fresh from helping her good friend Bill Clinton win the Democratic nomination, Bloodworth-Thomason has picked Gov. Ann Richards and Texas political columnist Molly Ivins as the role models for a new star on Designing Women.

Bloodworth-Thomason said the new character is "a Molly Ivins character who says, 'Housework if done properly can kill you.' She's married to this very wealthy Texas man she really loved, and he died at the wedding reception. Now she's got three private jets on the runway and doesn't know where to get them gassed up. And she buys into Sugarbakers because she's bored with all this money and all those board meetings ... Beyond that, I don't know. I still have to write the script."

Texan Judith Ivey will play her. She recalled the meeting to set that new "Designing Women" deal: "Linda said, 'Have you ever heard of Molly Ivins?' And I said, 'Sure. She has dry wit, a perspective on the world, a true Texas point of view and good-old-boy delivery. I'm trying to get the rights to her book. I want to do it as a one-woman show.' And Linda said, 'Oh, you're the one.' I guess she'd been trying to get the rights, too."

Neither one has the rights yet.

Ivins has been out of pocket covering the Democratic convention. But Ivey still is trying. She wants to do "A Day In the Life of Molly Ivins" — the day the Dallas Times Herald folded.

"I think it's a very political creature Linda's creating in this new character," said Ivey. "I'll be surprised if she isn't, and surely she'll be liberal."

"Designing Women" is just made for political comment, says Bloodworth-Thomason. "It's a soapbox show ... "I don't want to lose the edge I've had on "Designing Women" in writing about political issues like 'The Strange Case of Clarence and Anita,' but that's something I'm going to have to watch, because I do want to be responsible," she said.

"I don't want to do anything either way that could be construed as trying to manipulate the election. After November, we'll be more political."

Ralph Cooper, of Apollo Theater fame, dies

N.Y. Times News Service

Ralph Cooper, the originator and master of ceremonies of Amateur Night at the Apollo Theater in Harlem, died Tuesday at his home in Harlem. His age was not known, but his associates at the theater said they believed that he was in his mid- to late 80s.

He died of cancer, said Percy Sutton, a friend and business associate.

Since 1935 when he became the Apollo's master of ceremonies, Cooper introduced a myriad of performers who would become household names. Billie Holiday, Ella Fitzgerald and Sarah Vaughan were among those who achieved stardom after their triumphant appearances at the theater. Others who appeared there included Gladys Knight and the Pips, James Brown, Stevie Wonder, Aretha Franklin and Diana Ross. Michael Jackson was 9 when he first performed at the Apollo with his brothers.

Cooper was born in New York City. He began his career as a dancer in small downtown clubs near New York University, which he attended for a semester. He eventually became involved in the business side of music, and in 1935 established the Apollo's Amateur Night competition, a Wednesday night tradition that became known around the world.

The Apollo closed in the 1970s, but the contest was resurrected in 1985 after the theater was renovated, with Cooper once again serving as master of ceremonies. His son, Ralph Cooper 2nd, took over the show after his father recently became ill.

Ralph Cooper, believed to be in his 80s, died Tuesday. Cooper was an emcee at Harlem's landmarked theater.

Cooper, who was also an actor, choreographed the Shirley Temple film "Poor Little Rich Girl," and appeared in films with Lena Horne and Duke Ellington. He was also the author of 10 screenplays and a co-author of "Amateur Night at the Apollo" (HarperCollins, 1990).

In addition to his son, he is survived by his wife, Elizabeth, both of Manhattan; a daughter, Lisa Cooper-Turner; a grandson, Wayne Turner, and a granddaughter, Elise Turner, all of Kenner, La.

A funeral service is to be held at 6 p.m. on Monday at the Apollo Theater, 253 West 125th Street.

The marquee of the Apollo Theater in Harlem carries a tribute to Ralph Cooper on Wednesday. Cooper, who in 1935 founded Amateur Night at the Appollo, died on Tuesday.

Fox hopes popularity of potent twosome keeps pace this fall

LOS ANGELES (NYT) — "Beverly Hills, 90210" and "Melrose Place" are proving to be such a potent combination for Fox Broadcasting Co. on Wednesday nights, the network will keep the pair together in the fall.

Fox's original plan was to broadcast new episodes of "90210" on Wednesdays and reruns of the first season at its regular 9 p.m. Thursday time period only during the summer.

But, said Fox Entertainment president Peter Chernin, "'Beverly Hills, 90210' has outperformed all our expectations for Wednesday nights."

"Melrose Place" was scheduled to have "The Heights," also produced by Aaron Spelling Entertainment, as its Wednesday night lead-in. It now takes "90210's" Thursday time slot following "The Simpsons" and "Martin."

"The Heights" makes its bow Aug. 27 preceded by a new episode of "The Simpsons" featuring the voice of Danny DeVito and the premiere of "Martin."

The senior year of the "Beverly Hills, 90210" denizens begins Sept. 9, said Fox spokeswoman Cindy Ronzoni.

NO JACKSONS VIDEO: Motown Home Video won't be releasing "The Jacksons: An American Dream," the four-hour ABC miniseries based on the singing Jackson family, but the record label will release a soundtrack before the show airs.

On Sept. 22, Motown is releasing a 14-song soundtrack album from the miniseries, which will include the previously unreleased "Who's Loving You."

The song, recorded live by the Jackson 5 in Gary, Ind., will be released as a single on Sept. 8.

Motown says the album will include "unreleased, live and archival Jackson 5 performances, as well as songs inspired by the miniseries from cast members, including Grammy-winners Boyz II Men who appear as street-corner singers."

TUBE NOTES: k.d. lang, who begins a two-night stint at the Universal Amphitheatre on Friday, is host of "ABC in Concert" at midnight Friday. Lang also performs "Constant Craving" from her "Ingenue" album. Also on the show is Tracy Chapman and Simply Red.

Melody Thomas Scott, who plays Nikki Newman Abbott on "The Young and the Restless," is the host of her third annual benefit for the Save the Earth Foundation at 7 p.m. Friday at the Hotel Bel-Air. Save the Earth funded research at UCLA, Columbia University, Duke University and the University of California, Davis.

"Middle Ages," the show CBS loved so much it was holding it back until midseason, will have its premiere at 10 p.m. Aug. 31 instead, in the choice "Northern Exposure" time slot.

Reggae Sunsplash tour comes to age this summer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Reggae Sunsplash tour, now in its eighth year, has become one of America's rites of summer — and with age has come maturity.

"We encourage the audience to come on time," says producer Tony Johnson.

One of Johnson's goals is to demonstrate to mainstream American audiences a professionalism that may surprise longtime reggae fans accustomed to one of the genre's old bad-boy rules: Reggae doesn't start on time.

The 1992 edition of Reggae Sunsplash is midway through its U.S. and Canadian run, which began in Honolulu in late May and ends July 26 in Miami.

The showcase features Great Britain's Aswad, South Africa's Lucky Dube, John Holt, Barrington Levy, Papa San and the Sunsplash house band Skool.

"It's just four hours of a lot of positive vibrations," says Johnson. "It's not about drugs; it's not about degrading anyone, man or woman."

RUIDOSO DOWNS IS YOUR WINNING VACATION CHOICE FOR THE SECOND YEAR IN A ROW!

- It's because of you that Ruidoso can proudly say we are once again your winning vacation spot for 1992 and a trip would not be complete without a visit to Ruidoso Downs!
- We can offer you the chance of winning lots of cash every race day, wagering on the world's top Quarter Horses and Thoroughbreds all against a backdrop of beautiful mountains and cool weather.
- See history come to life at New Mexico's newest attraction – The Museum of the Horse, next to Ruidoso Downs.
- Enjoy scenic vistas as you play golf at The Links at Sierra Blanca.
- We also offer you the month-long excitement of the All American Festival beginning August 14th and ending with the world's richest Quarter Horse race - the $2.3 million All American Futurity on September 7th. Plan your trip now to Ruidoso Downs - your winning vacation choice!

Trinity Presbyterian Preschool offers students several options

Preschool Programs

Parents and educators are becoming increasingly aware of the importance of early childhood experiences and how these experiences influence the future development of the young child. At Trinity Presbyterian each child is helped to experience success and given many opportunities to learn through new activities and experiences. Specific program goals enable a child to:

■ Develop an ability to communicate effectively with teachers and classmates, to hear and imitate sounds used to form words and to understand and follow simple instructions.

■ Develop a growing concept of the relationship of numbers, time, space and form.

■ Have opportunities for observing and understanding nature and science.

■ Learn more about self and others through informal role play and through inter-action with peers.

■ Understand that God has something to say to each person in every situation that will be encountered.

■ Learn to understand what God says to each person through knowledge of the Bible, especially in relation to Jesus Christ and through the work of the Holy Spirit in self and others.

■ Become aware that each person is worthy of God's love and the love of other human beings.

■ Grow in assuming personal responsibility for self and others and growth in independence.

■ Develop understanding, attitudes and skills including decision making appropriate for the child's particular age.

■ Experience the loving care of adults whose own lives exemplify commitment to the Christian community.

Under the direction of Rhonda Brau, director of the preschool, the programs offer several options for 3 and 4-year-old children. The program opens at 9 a.m. and dismisses at 11:30 a.m. Tuesday and Thursday programs are available for 3 and 4-year-olds, Monday, Wednesday, Friday and Monday and Friday programs are available for 4-year-olds. Limited space is available. Call 682-5021 for enrollment information.

Mother's Day Off Program

On Wednesdays and Fridays, from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m., the Mother's Day Off (MDO) program takes place in the children's wing of Trinity Presbyterian Church. The Fellowship Hall and outside playground area are also used by the busy youngsters.

Children from 6 months to 4 years of age are welcome in the program.

MDO serves as an outreach to members of the community who desire that their children be in a quality Christian atmosphere. First Presbyterian Church's main goal is to provide a group experience that will help children be happy and at ease outside the home.

J'Lynn Wheeler, director of the MDO program, reminds parents to share with her any information that might might a child's stay more comfortable. For enrollment information in the MDO program, call Ms. Wheeler at 682-5325.

Trinity Presbyterian Church is located at 2800 W. Louisiana Ave. (at the intersection of Andrews Hwy and Louisiana Ave).

Goode Beginnings Child Care gives children a great start

Goode Beginnings Child Care Center began operation in August of 1988. The Center has adopted the Little People's Curriculum, which is developmentally appropriate for infants to school-aged children. Goode Beginnings has a caring staff dedicated to the healthy growth and development of all children.

A new library has recently been installed. It consists of about 1,4000 books and an encouraging letter from First Lady Barbara Bush.

Goode Beginnings, conveniently located in South Midland, is open from 7:30 to 5:30 p.m. Monday through Friday. The Center offers care for children from birth to age 10. Drop-ins are welcome. Transportation from various local schools is available.

Food is provided at no additional charge. A nutritious breakfast, lunch and afternoon snack are offered as well as formula and baby food for the children in the nursery.

The center works closely with the Child Care Management Service (CCMS), which aids eligible families in finding and paying for quality child care. Goode Beginnings also participates in the Federal Food Program.

Goode Beginnings is directed by Kitty McClane. It is located at 1321 S. Goode. Call 687-2330 for more information.

Grace Lutheran helps develop the total child

Grace Lutheran Early Childhood Program provides a challenging environment where children can develop spiritually, physically, emotionally, socially and intellectually in a Christian atmosphere. This growth is encouraged by Christian teachers who are motivated by the love of Christ in their own lives.

Patrice Allen and Jean Seiler direct the program which began in 1982. A preschool and a Children's Day Out for children 12 months to 5 years is available. The preschool has two sessions, one session meets Mondays and Wednesdays from 9:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. The other session meets from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. on Tuesdays and Thursdays.

Extended care is provided for preschool students to coincide with the Children's Day Out hours. The Children's Day Out program meets on Tuesday and Thursdays from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m.

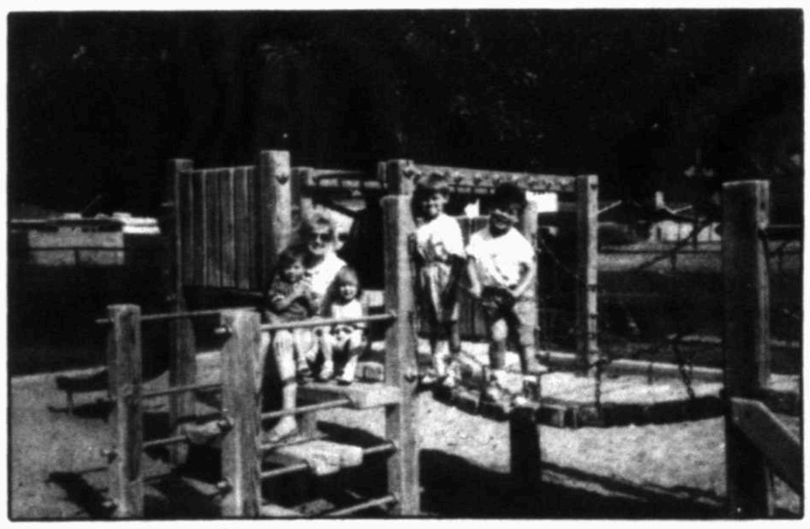

Grace Lutheran Early Childhood Program is licensed by the State of Texas to offer quality care. The staff is trained in early childhood education and has more than 50 years combined experience in teaching young children.

Some of the goals Grace Lutheran Childhood Program has for each child:

- To help the child discover what Christian faith is all about through a pervading atmosphere of love and concern.
- To develop a good self image in the child along with a sense of accomplishment.
- To have a controlled environment in which a child can learn about the world and work out problems.
- To help children develop curiosity and inquiring minds.
- To teach children how to get along with peers, to respect property and the rights of others to share.

In addition, each child participates in chapel services, minigym activities, field trips and other activities appropriate for preschoolers.

Grace Lutheran Church is located at 3000 W. Golf Course. For more information call 694-3063.

Grace Lutheran's staff is trained in early childhood education and has more than 50 years combined experience in teaching young children.

Grace Presbyterian Preschool children move to their new location. The center is also changing it's name to Village School.

Village School and Child Care is an established center with new name

Grace Presbyterian Child Care Center has been in operation for 22 years. Heading into year 23 they've changed their name and location — but not the high quality of the tender, loving care they've lavished on children for nearly a quarter of a century.

Now known as The Village School and Child Care Center, the school was originally begun by some very caring educators that felt there was a better way to operate such a facility in Midland.

Children from 6 weeks through sixth grade are accepted. Hours of operation are 7 a.m. to 5:30 p.m.

After-school pick-up from Anson Jones, Bonham, Henderson, Scharbauer, Bush, Burnett and Rusk is provided.

Nutritious lunches, snacks and special agendas such as preschool readiness and an elementary program make Village School a special place for children. Tuition includes bowling, field trips, dance and music activities. A full summer program is offered for school-age children.

The Village School is especially proud of its caring teachers — they have 150 years combined child-care experience — its wonderful cook, parent support and great kids.

The center is directed by Shirley Hull. It is located at 2600 W. Illinois Ave. For more information call 684-6426.

MLPS adapts programs to meet each child's needs

Midland Lutheran Palaestra School (MLPS) provides a challenging environment where preschoolers (age 3 and up) and kindergarteners can expand their horizons in many ways: Socially, physically, emotionally, spiritually, creatively and intellectually. It is also a place where there is freedom of expression and where children can experience the joy and excitement of learning, all within a loving atmosphere.

Whether it's in the "home living" center, the "science" center, the "listening" center or the "art" center, children are encouraged to explore learning at their own pace and pleasure. It's a time to "center" or concentrate the child's efforts whether it be for work or play. The children learn how to listen, play "one-on-one," play with puzzles, building blocks, board games and learn a variety of arts and crafts.

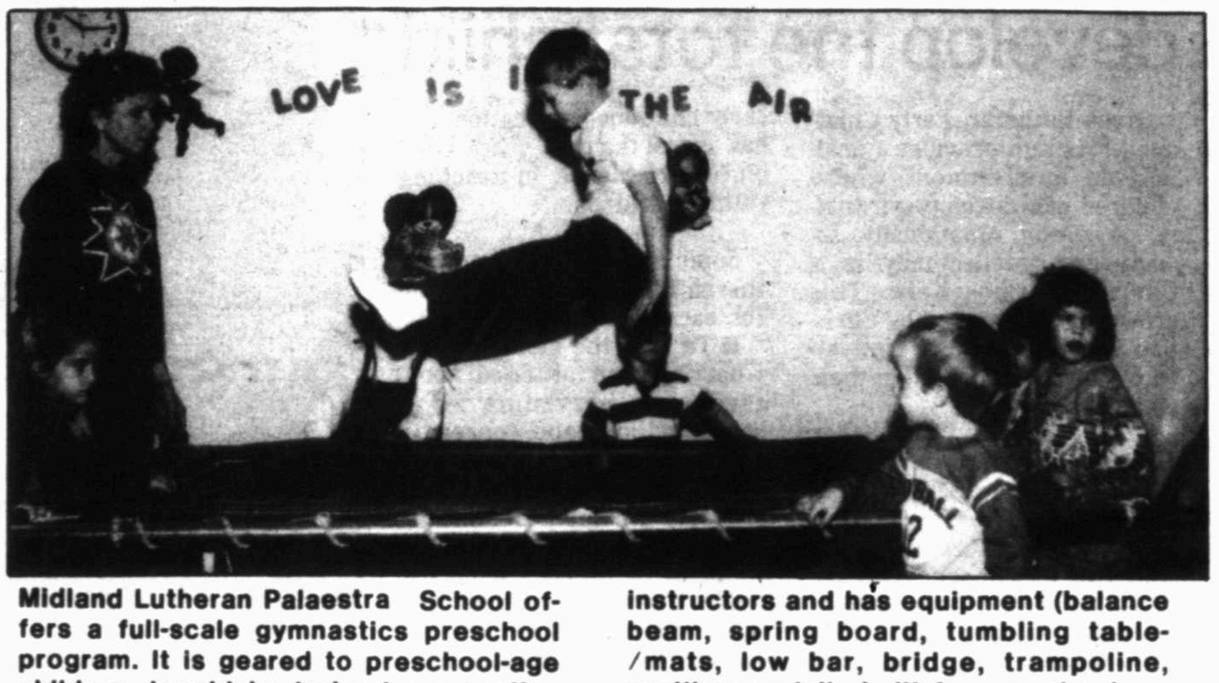

Part of MLPS's name is Palaestra, meaning the combination of large and small motor skills to coordinate the total development of the child. The school has a full-scale gymnastics program. Not only is it geared to preschool age children and taught by trained gymnastics instructors, but even the equipment is especially built for preschoolers.

Even though academics are teacher directed, there is a lot of freedom within the structure. The teacher leads the class in activities that reinforce letter sounds and basic concepts — such as large/small, up/down. There is also emphasis on writing readiness, story time, drama, music and health.

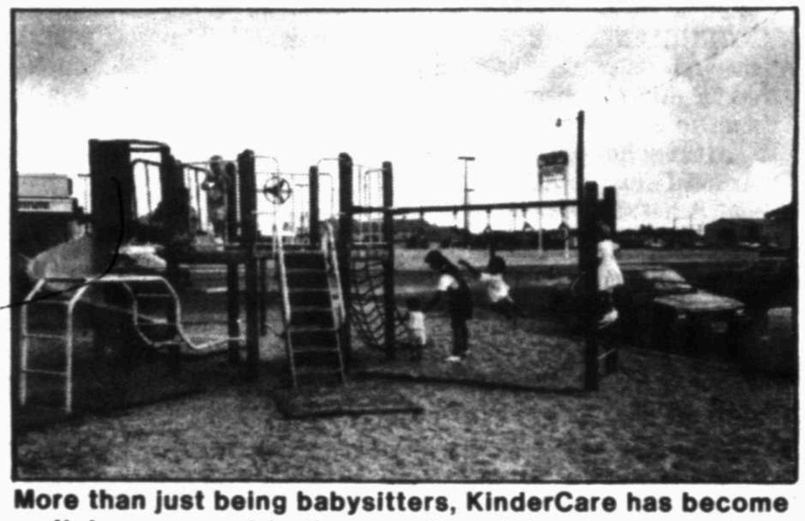

MLPS's large playground encourages lots of healthy outdoor play. Field trips are also part of the program. Children are divided into small groups led by loving, caring teachers.

An extended care program — 7:30 a.m. to 5 p.m., Monday through Friday — is available. For both preschoolers and kindergarten age children, the program includes set activities, snacks, play time and outside play.

Tuition and registration charges are competitive. MLPS is located at 2705 W. Michigan. Call 694-9322 for more information.

Midland Lutheran Palaestra School offers a full-scale gymnastics preschool program. It is geared to preschool-age children, taught by trained gymnastics instructors and has equipment (balance beam, spring board, tumbling table-/mats, low bar, bridge, trampoline, vault) especially built for preschoolers.

More than just being babysitters, KinderCare has become a vital component in the growth and development of the child.

KinderCare staffers work in partnership with parents

KinderCare takes an enlightened approach to teaching. Their method takes into account the emotional, intellectual, social and physical development of each child and provides activities and experiences carefully designed to nurture all four.

According to recent findings by leading pediatricians, the "whole child" approach results in a number of benefits for the growing child. They are:

- Healthy emotional development — increased self esteem as a result of making a child feel good about what he or she can do.
- Heightened intellectual development — improved language skills and grasp of abstract concepts from daily interaction with peers.
- Advanced social development — better prepared for kindergarten and more at ease socializing and negotiating differences with peers.
- Stronger physical development — enhanced fine and gross motor skills from participating in more organized physical activities.

Children from 6 to 12 years of age are accepted in the program. At KinderCare, director Barbara Brown and her staff understand and recognize the needs of each child.

They work in partnership with parents to provide a safe place for children to learn and play. It's an environment in which children grow, blossom, and enjoy the excitement, the wonder and joy of childhood. KinderCare special features include lunches and snacks, RO system drinking water, a safety awareness program, a swimming pool and on the grounds and individual lesson plans for infants (6 weeks through 12 months).

KinderCare Learning center is located at 4303 W. Illinois. Hours are 6:30 a.m. to 6:30 p.m. Monday through Friday. Drops-ins are welcome if space is available. And, if all that weren't wonderful enough, those who enroll by Sept. 30 receive a $50 savings bond.

Sylvan Learning has courses in enrichment and remediation

What do you do when your child comes homes with poor grades? It's perfectly understandable to feel angry, worried and guilty — all the same time. Nothing else can get your family off the emotional roller coaster faster than a confident plan of action.

Sylvan Learning Center of Midland can help. It's part of a group of neighborhood educational centers that offer a wide choice of educational programs for students age 5 through adult.

Sylvan staff members work in partnership with public and private schools in the community. They offer a variety of instruction programs:

■ The Reading Program develops comprehension and vocabulary skills and fosters a desire to read.

■ The Math Program includes help in computation, application and enrichment. The Algebra Program strengthens theoretical math skills.

■ The Study Skills Program teaches students the most important skill of all — how to study.

■ The writing program helps develop clear thinking, organization and creative skills required for effective composition.

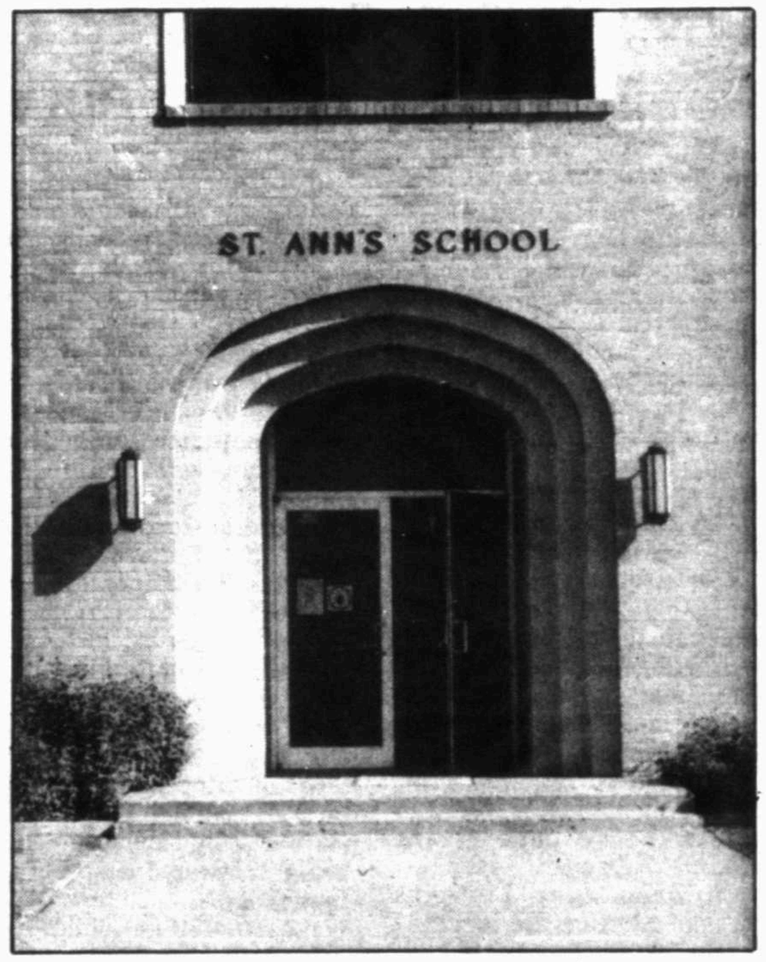

■ The Enrichment Program gives students the extra challenge they need.

Other special programs include a Beginning Reading Program that is designed to prepare a child entering first grade or help an older student who needs a review of important beginning reading skills. There is also a School Readiness Program that develops number concepts, pre-reading skills and fine motor skills. And, there's a College Prep Program that stresses study skills and preparation for college entrance examination such as the SAT and ACT.

Sylvan Learning Center administers a battery of diagnostic tests that pinpoint strengths, weaknesses and specific areas in which a child needs help.

Most Sylvan students are given a progress test after every 36 hours of instruction. This documents the student's progress and ensures the accountability of the program.

Sylvan Learning Center of Midland is located at 4410 N. Midkiff, Suite D-201 (in The Courtyard). For more information call 520-9411.

Children blossom, grow at Rainbow Day Care Center

Exploration and discovery are the main concerns at Rainbow Christian Day Care. The facilities provide a cheerful, comfortable environment. The experienced staff offers learning experiences to help develop growth of a child's personality and mind.

Meeting the professional staff gives parents peace of mind. They know their children are getting the best kind of day care — a safe, healthy, loving environment. And, with the open door policy, parents can experience various activities with their children.

Programs include field trips for all age groups. Destinations include museums, learning centers and interesting area business locations. Physical activities — including water gun fights in the park — are offered.

Children ages 2 weeks through 12 years are accepted in the various programs at Rainbow.

Hours are from 6:30 a.m. to 7:30 p.m. Monday through Friday. A hot lunch and two snacks are served daily.

Children are always given the opportunity to grow, blossom and experience the joy and wonder of their world through free play in the huge indoor playroom. It's loaded with toys to stimulate creative activity.

Before and after school programs coordinate activities with the day's current events.

Transportation to and from school is included in the tuition.

According to owner Robert Evans, the motto at Rainbow Christian Day Care is: "An open door is an invitation to explore."

"And our obligation is to open the door allowing children to safely explore their world and gain self esteem through independent activity." he said. "We feel that children learn best by exploring and by being motivated and encouraged to experience new things. We want all of our children to know that as individuals they have something to offer."

Rainbow Christian Day Care invites parents to drop by the center at 1009 W. Missouri for a tour. Call 683-5161 for more information.

Heritage Preschool teaches 3 to 5-year-olds basic preschool skills, socialization skills and special units of study — all in a Christian environment. Basic skills include the alphabet, numbers, colors and shapes. Socialization skills involve learning to share, taking turns and so on.

Special units of study, especially designed for preschoolers, are big favorites with the younger set. They include such themes as Community Helpers, Transportation and Texas.

Heritage celebrates "special" days with the children such as a "Let's Pretend Day" at Halloween, a Thanksgiving Feast, a Rodeo Day — at the conclusion of the "Texas" unit — and a Splash Day at the end of the year.The school offers a large playground, music study, mid-morning snacks, field trips and guests speakers.

The school, which has been in operation for 12 years, is associated with the Christian Church of Midland, an independent Christian Church.

School is in session from 9 a.m. to 11:30 daily during the school year. Heritage is located at 2602 Neely. For enrollment information call Director Kay Soderstrom at 683-7343 or 685-3486.

Heritage provides a loving environment with caring teachers and a small teacher/child ratio. Parent participation is encouraged.

The YMCA recognizes that children like to remain in an environment they already know and trust.

YMCA child-care program is available in the schools

Children who require after-school care have to be transported to wherever the caregiver is. Unless, of course, after-school care can be provided within the confines of the school itself.

Starting this fall, the YMCA is launching a new program that will make it possible for children attending Milam, Bowie and DeZavala schools to be cared for right on the premises. The YMCA recognizes that children like to remain in an environment they already know and trust. They also understand the importance of peer interaction among school-aged children.

They'll be there with all the things school-age children want and like. Like activities that are self-selected as opposed to staff-selected. These activities are designed to foster a positive self image and a sense of independence. They also create awareness of wise use of leisure time. Self-selected activities encourage children to think, question, reason and experiment, plus allow for flexibility and individuality.

Child care on the student's own school grounds also provides playgrounds to run, swing, climb and dig in.

Other benefits offered are good food to prepare and enjoy. An active, caring, involved staff. Homework help and tutoring. Field trips and special guests of interest to this age group.

The YMCA encourages parental visits and participation.

They aim to encourage active communication with the child's school and teachers, so that they may be more helpful to the needs of the whole child — be it homework, tutoring or special attention to some other area of concern. The programs will operate Monday through Friday from dismissal until 6 p.m. The cost per child is $22.50 a week — financial help is available. Children can be enrolled at the Central YMCA, 800 N. Big Spring or at the North East location, 2300 Butternut Lane. The first week's tuition will guarantee placement.

Those with questions might be interested in attending an open house at 5:30 p.m., Aug. 20. Staff members from programs of all three schools will be there. For location and more information call Karen Campbell at 682-2551.

Year-round care at Salvation Army

Parents who need an excellent child care in a facility that's open year-round should call The Salvation Army Day Care Center. From 6:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. from Monday through Friday, the Salvation Army provides children — ages birth to 12 years — with tender, loving care and intellectual stimulation all in a Christian atmosphere.

The Salvation Army facility boasts a large, well-equipped playground, plus access to a nearby city park. Field trips are offered in the summer, Chapel is available once a week. One week of the summer is devoted to Bible School.

Curriculum for preschoolers includes familiarization with numbers, letters, shapes and colors. Arts, crafts and music are also part the the preschool program. Teachers attend workshops and seminars throughout the year to stay abreast of the latest developments in early education and child care.

The Salvation Army accepts West Texas Opportunity clients. They also offer sliding scale fees for those not eligible for West Texas Opportunity benefits, yet not financially able to pay the full fee.

Transportation from Jane Long, Barnett, Lamar, Anson Jones, Rusk and Henderson elementaries is available for the after-school care crowd.

The day care center is located at 3500 Park Lane. Call Director Maria Garcia or her assistant Don Montgomery at 697-7262 for more information.

The Salvation Army provides children — ages birth to 12 years — with tender, loving care and intellectual stimulation all in a Christian atmosphere.

At Kelview Preschool and Day Care all children are allowed to be children while learning in a fun way.

Kelview Preschool lives by its 'We Care' theme

At Kelview Preschool and Day Care all children are treated as individuals with individual needs. Children are allowed to be children while learning in a fun way. All preschoolers are enrolled in the A Beka preschool curriculum during the morning. Children who stay all day will participate in fun activities in the afternoon.

Phonics, number concepts, science and Bible lessons are part of the curriculum. Music is very important in the class also. Parents are encouraged to visit their child's classroom.

All teachers are well qualified and meet all state requirements. Most teachers are members of the Church. From the Infant Room through the Schoolers Program, care is given to balancing the day with learning activities, Christian concepts and fun. Learning is encouraged whether the child is in a class or on the playground. The teacher/child ratio is low.

Kelview boasts clean, large, safe classrooms with planned activities. The schools has a 20,000 sq. ft. playground — with plans to enlarge it! Indoors, there's a 4,500 sq. ft. gymnasium. And, new this year, a sophisticated security system to ensure children are safeguarded!

Daily reports are provided to parents of infants, toddlers and 2-year-olds. This helps parents understand what activities their children are participating in. Schedules of planned events are given to parents on a monthly calendar.

After-school care is available for older children, transportation is available from most areas and is free.

According to Kelview director Lana Maxey, "We Care" is the school's theme.

"This is projected to every child and parent," she said. "

"Children are an heritage of the Lord." (Psalms 127:3) are words all staffers at Kelview keep in mind. They take their responsibilities seriously.

All diapers are provided for infants to 2-year-olds. Kelview also helps potty train when children reach age 2. A hot, nutritious lunch is and two snacks are provided daily. Menus are given to parents on a monthly basis.

Children from ages birth through 12 are accepted. Drop-ins are welcome if space permits. Hours are 7:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Monday through Friday. Kelview is located at 402 W. Alta, just north of Scharbauer. Call 683-3238 for information.

To you, they're blocks.

To your child, they're patience, aesthetics, learning to balance, and a skyscraper bigger than the whole world.

At KinderCare® child care centers, wooden blocks are more than imaginary structures. They're an exercise in skills your child will build on for life. That's why the programs at KinderCare are designed to help your child choose activities that lead to social, physical, emotional and intellectual growth. It's a concept we call Whole Child Development.

If you would like to learn more about our Whole Child philosophy, stop by the KinderCare in your neighborhood. Then, if you enroll by September 30, we'll give you a $50 savings bond in your child's name. To you and your child, it's one more way that KinderCare helps children build a sturdy future.

Kids have fun, learn at all Midland YMCA Child Development Centers.

Midland YMCA Child Development Centers are strategically located throughout the city in order to most effectively serve working parents and their children. To ensure the best supervision and care for each child, a one to 15 child-/staff ratio is maintained at all the YMCA Child Development Center locations.

■ The Central YMCA, located at 800 N. Big Spring, offers an after school program for children ages 5 to 12.

Transportation is provided from all Midland public and private schools. Early kindergarten and after-school transportation is also provided. Call 682-2551 for more information.

■ The Alamo YMCA, located at 901 N. Midland Dr., offers an after-school program for children ages 5 to 12.

The Alamo YMCA is open on holidays — such as spring break, Christmas break, early dismissal days and so on — from 7 a.m. to 6 p.m.

Transportation is provided from all Midland public and private schools. An early morning and late kindergarten child care program is offered for 5-year-olds. Transportation is provided from Midland schools for children attending early kindergarten. The late kindergarten program provides transportation to and from public and private schools. Call 694-2528 for more information.

■ The Northeast YMCA located at 2301 Butternut La. (across from Lee Freshman High school) offers an after-school program for children ages 5 to 12.

Tutoring services are available for students who need additional help with their homework and schoolwork. For more information call 682-8469.

■ The Midland YMCA Child Development Center, 815 S. Carver, provides all-day child care for infants and children up to 12. Breakfast, lunch and a snack are provided. A preschool program is also offered at this location.

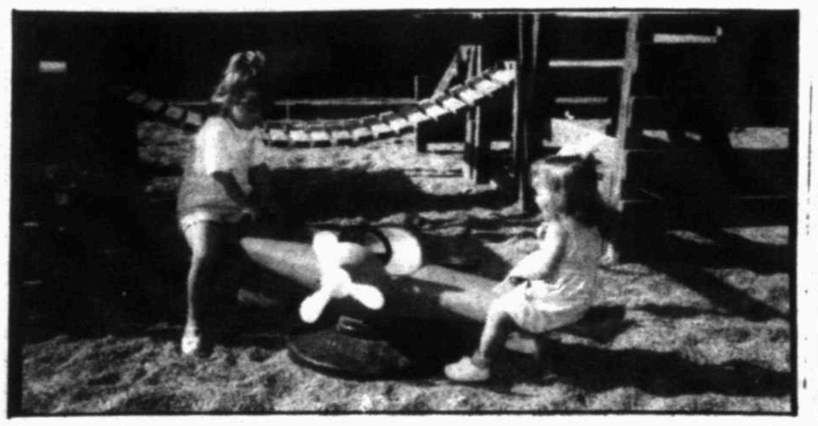

Additional activities are designed for all age groups. Call 684-9027 for more information.

These programs are licensed by the State of Texas and all caregivers are certified in CPR, first aid, and drivers participate in safety awareness training.

All Midland YMCA Child Development Centers provide safe, well-supervised activities. A well-trained, mature, responsible staff (with 86 years of combined child-care experience) implements these programs, which maintain the quality and standards established by the YMCA. Activities include field trips, sports, games, arts and crafts, swimming, gymnastics, values education, environmental awareness and much more.

All four YMCA locations offer participation in Girl Scout, Boy Scout and Campfire organizations. Call for more details.

The YMCA is a Christian organization where all programs and activities are value driven

St. Paul's School Preschool prepares children for future

St. Paul United Methodist Church's Tuesday/Thursday School is open to children from the ages of 9 months to 5 years. All children in this age group can be enrolled for either one or both days.

Special features include morning snacks, field trips, A Beka pre-school curriculum for older children and music activities.

St. Paul's Tuesday/Thursday School, is, above all else, a Christian program, offering a variety of learning experiences based on Christian principles.

The curriculum includes a monthly Bible story and memory verse as well as academic learning of colors, shapes and numbers.

Crafts are designed to enhance each month's unit of study and to encourage creativity.

A before and after-school program for kindergarten children is being offered with transportation to Jones and Henderson Elementary schools.

And, this year, St. Paul Tuesday/Thursday School has added a terrific new playground.

The school's motto is "Preparing today's toddlers and preschoolers for the challenges of the future." For enrollment information call 694-2544 or 694-4791.

At First Presbyterian, a Christian development approach towards learning is used in teaching the curriculum activities.

First Presbyterian: Challenging program in Christian context

First Presbyterian Child Development Center, conveniently located downtown, is committed to providing an exciting, challenging, learning atmosphere within the context of Christian values. Programs include 3 and 4-year-old preschool classes and a Tuesday/Thursday Children's Day Out program.

Preschool

Preschool for 4-year-olds meets either Tuesday, Thursday and Friday or Tuesday and Thursday. For the 3-year-olds, school meets Tuesday, Thursday and Friday; Tuesday and Thursday, or Monday, Wednesday and Friday. Twice weekly preschool classes are $70 per month and three-day per week classes are $90 per month. There are still a few openings for 3-year-olds in the Monday, Wednesday, Friday class.

Extended day hours are available on Tuesdays and Thursdays for all classes. Hours are from noon to 2 p.m. or from noon to 4 p.m.

A Christian development approach towards learning is used in teaching the curriculum activities. Included in the program are gross and fine motor skills, arts and crafts, chapel time, music class with rhythmic instruments and language and social development. The classes take many field trips to enhance the children's education development.

Students learn new songs, have daily Bible stories and alphabet and sound recognition as well as geometric shapes, colors and mathematical skills, outdoor playtime, snack time, science and health. Several speakers are scheduled each year.

All preschool teachers are degreed and have years of experience in teaching young children. First Presbyterian Preschool offers small teacher-child ratios, The school is licensed through the Texas Department of Human Services. The aim is for each child to gain a positive self image while learning about the love of God , which, in turn, promotes future learning experiences.

Children's Day Out

The Children's Day Out program corresponds closely to the public school calendar, normally beginning in August and ending in May. An eight-week summer session is offered with dates being determined in accordance with other church activities.

The program is held two days a week, Tuesdays and Thursdays, from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. The extended day program will operate until 4 p.m. Children are accepted from ages 2 months to 5 years. A half-day program will be provided for children who attend preschool or kindergarten. A tuition fee schedule is available on request.

First Presbyterian strives to make use of a child's natural curiosity and desire to learn by providing a Christian environment filled with age-appropriate learning activities as well as free play. A music instructor comes in on a weekly basis to provide the children with fun and learning through music. Guests are invited to share resources about once a month. The children will be exposed to Bible stories and verses.

First Presbyterian provides a caring environment in which teachers strive to give the child a greater awareness of God, himself and the world.

And to make First Presbyterian even more appealing, the school has just installed spectacular new playground equipment — along with a synthetic, carpet-like turf for maximum safety.

First Presbyterian is located at 800 W. Texas. For more information on these programs, call Preschool Director Amy Savage or Day Out Coordinator Goldie Allen at 683-0851.

'Child Care at its Best' is more than a motto at Wonder World

At the center, children are offered a clean, loving environment and are taught that learning is fun and exciting. Music, introduction to phonics and number manipulation are a part of the curriculum along with games, crafts and exercise.

Wonder World also offers dance and gymnastics by Dana Wear who has a studio in the facility. Plans to offer Tae-kwon-do at Wonder World will be finalized by fall. Center activities also include skating, bowling and "picnics in the park" as part of their programs.

The goal of Wonder World, as expressed by owner Becki Bates, is to offer children the very best environment in which to develop. Also the best staff to nurture and encourage children to develop their unique and special qualities.

The center provides children with plenty of space. This includes two separate recreation areas indoors with a total of more than 6,500 sq. ft. There is also a large outdoor play area.

Parents are always welcome at Wonder World and are encouraged to be as involved in their child's day care experience as possible.

Wonder World accepts children from birth to 12 years of age. Drop-ins are welcome when there's space is available. The facility is open from 6:45 a.m. to 5:45 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Registration for fall enrollment is open for all ages, including the after-school program.

Creative day care spaces lead to happy faces

By Barbara Mayer
AP Special Features

There's more to day-care center design than child safety. Color and scale play a major role in how youngsters relate to the space, how they behave, how they learn.

Torrice, of Burlingame, Calif., co-author of "In My Room" (Fawcett-Columbine, 1989, $22.95) and a specialist in designing spaces for children, was co-chairman of the National Task Force on Day Care Interior Design which issued a report of its findings this spring.

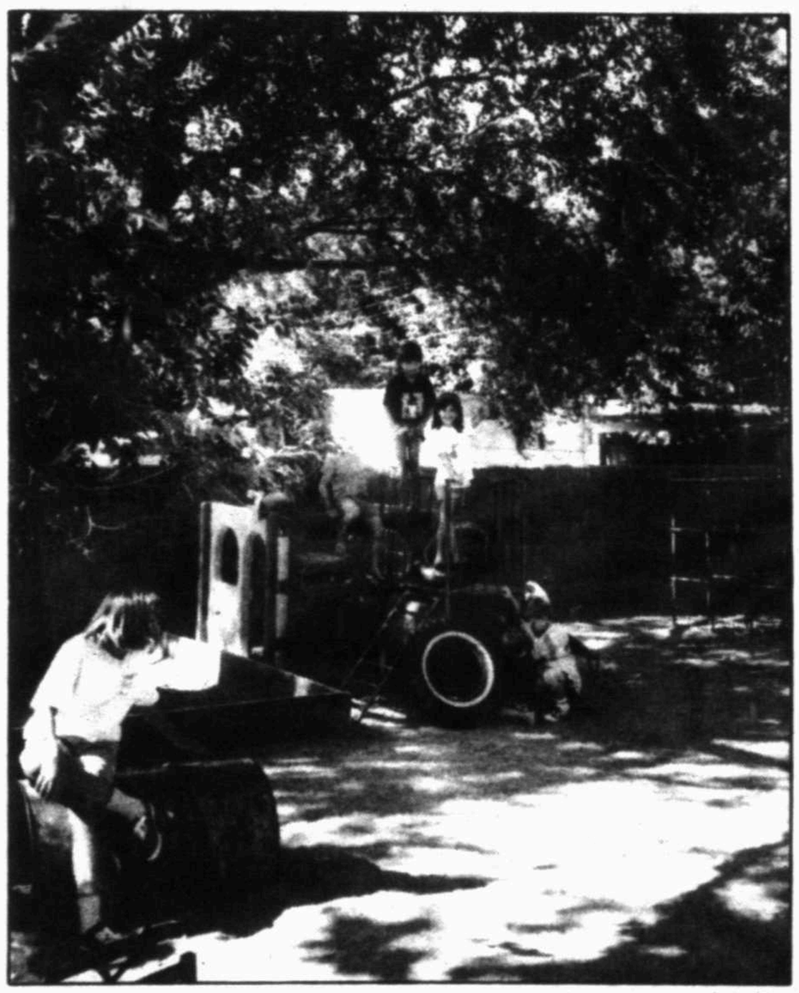

The group studied the design of 155 centers over a two-year period and interviewed about 100 day-care providers, educators, pediatricians and psychologists on worthwhile interior elements for young children. It also set up a controlled experiment at the University of Tennessee in Knoxville. There, observers studied how children respond to different environments.

They found, among other things, that little ones enjoy retreating to an enclosed space from time to time during the day to read or play quietly. The space can be a room apart, a table draped with a cloth or bed sheet or a large cardboard box up-ended on the floor with cut-outs as windows and doors.

"Physically, a child's world starts at an adult's waist and goes down," Torrice says. "Just because a room is full of child-related artwork doesn't mean it's a child-sensitive room."

One center with child-sensitive decor is in Terre Haute, Ind. The Rose Southside Child Care Center, designed by local resident Carolyn Lockman, was selected by a professional jury, including Torrice, for a $5,000 building grant from the Du Pont Company. The rest of the money for the $10,000 project was raised by the center.
