Dozens jailed in East German protests

BERLIN (AP) — East German authorities ordered dozens of people jailed up to six months for taking part in pro-democracy demonstrations across the Communist country over the weekend, West German television reported today.

As many as 15,000 people, mostly young people, staged a sit-down strike in Dresden late Sunday, while thousands more demonstrated in other cities. Witnesses said police using clubs and dogs broke up the protests.

East Germany accused the "gang of Western news reporters" for stirring up the protests, which began over the weekend as East Germany marked its 40th anniversary.

In addition to the protests, East Germany's hard-line leadership was embarrassed during the anniversary by the exodus of tens of thousands of its citizens to the West.

The government began letting Western tourists back into East Berlin today after having kept them out since Thursday during the anniversary ceremonies.

However, some West Germans were still being kept out, West Berlin officials said.

On Sunday, the second day of protests, police used clubs and dogs to attack thousands of demonstrators rallying for democratic reform outside an East Berlin church.

The peaceful protesters shouted "We want freedom!" and "No violence!" as security forces broke up their sit-in at the Protestant Gethsemane Church, beating demonstrators and chasing them into side streets.

One man who watched the violence from his apartment window said, "It's getting worse and worse. Someday soon, rocks and Molotov cocktails are going to fly."

Police seized 30 to 100 people, according to Hessische Rundfunk radio in Frankfurt. Several people were injured, it said.

On Saturday, hundreds of people were detained during protests in East Berlin, Leipzig, Dresden, Jena, Potsdam and Plauen. Some estimates put the number arrested at more than 1,000 in East Berlin alone.

Police beat many protesters with truncheons and clubs and used trucks with steel-mesh barriers in front to disperse crowds, according to witnesses.

The authorities punched, kicked, beat and dragged away the protesters, roughing up Western journalists as well. At least two Western reporters were detained in separate incidents for six hours.

"Many of those arrested have been given summary trials and sentenced to prison terms of up to six months," West Germany's ARD television said today. It did not give a more precise estimate.

ARD said demonstrations had also occurred in Karl-Marx Stadt.

East German officials gave no reports of arrests or injuries.

However, the nation's state-run newspapers prominently printed a Sunday dispatch from the official news agency ADN calling the pro-democracy demonstrators "troublemakers."

"Wherever the Western reporters went, especially the television crews, certain types showed up seconds later and started trouble," the Communist Party youth newspaper Junge Welt claimed.

Authorities refused to renew the visas of dozens of Western journalists in East Berlin for the anniversary. The reporters were told to leave the city when their visas expired at midnight Sunday.

East Germany is in the throes of the most serious street demonstrations since Soviet tanks and troops put down a workers' revolt in 1953.

Tens of thousands of East Germans, most expressing disenchantment with the authoritarian government, have fled to West Germany in recent weeks in the largest exodus since the Berlin Wall was built in 1961.

American cancer researchers win Nobel in medicine

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — Americans J. Michael Bishop and Harold E. Varmus won the Nobel Prize in medicine today for their discovery of a family of genes that has helped scientists understand how cancer develops.

Bishop, 53, and Varmus, 49, work in the Department of Microbiology and Immunology at the University of California School of Medicine in San Francisco.

"I was stunned," said Bishop, who lives in Belvedere, outside San Francisco.

Varmus said a radio reporter called him with the news. "I didn't know if it was a false alarm or they got my name confused, not having talked to anyone directly," he said from his home in San Francisco. "As we say in science, I needed confirmation of the information."

The 50-member Nobel Assembly of the Karolinska Institute, Sweden's largest and oldest medical university, cited the researchers "for their discovery of the cellular origin of retroviral oncogenes."

In 1976, Bishop and Varmus "published the remarkable conclusion that the oncogene in the virus did not represent a true viral gene, but instead was a normal cellular gene," the citation said.

That is, cancer viruses cause cancer with the help of animal genes that have become incorporated into the viruses. The animal genes normally help control the regular growth of cells. But when the genes become part of viruses, they can trigger the uncontrolled cell growth that typifies cancer tumors.

The research helped scientists understand how cancer begins, and it "widened our insight into the complicated signal systems which govern the normal growth of cells," the assembly said.

The first oncogenic virus was discovered in 1916, but its operation was not fully understood until nearly 50 years later.

"The great importance of the discovery is that we have a completely different view on how cancer can originate, and through that we hope to be able to use this practically later on," said Peter Reichard, chairman of the Nobel Assembly.

Varmus called the research by him and Bishop a "cornerstone in understanding the genetic mosaic of cancer."

Team 'stunned' by new of honor

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Harold E. Varmus says his first reaction was disbelief when he was awakened by a radio interviewer this morning and told he had shared the 1989 Nobel Prize in medicine.

"I didn't know if it was a false alarm or they got my name confused, not having talked to anyone directly," said Varmus, 49.

He and J. Michael Bishop, a colleague at the University of California School of Medicine in San Francisco, won the Nobel for their discovery of the cellular origin of retroviral oncogenes.

Their 1976 work on oncogenes, which control the growth of cells, helped understand how malignant tumors develop, the Nobel citation said.

Bishop said he was "stunned" by the news but would withhold further comment until a news conference later in the day.

But Varmus was more talkative, saying that he didn't think at the time that his work would lead to the prize.

"I don't go to work thinking about the Nobel Prize," he said. "I go to work thinking about the next experiment."

"Obviously, in the last few years when you look back and see that it had an impact in the field, then it becomes a possibility," he said. "But it's a possibility surrounded by the incredible work of others who would also be deserving of it."

He called the original work published in 1976 a "cornerstone in understanding the genetic mosaic of cancer"

Modern alarms guard ancient cave art

NEW BRAUNFELS (AP) — Vandalism at a Texas park containing prehistoric cave art prompted state officials to install surveillance devices in an attempt to catch trespassers along the Pecos River, officials told a symposium.

The security equipment, installed at six shelter caves containing significant American Indian art, help protect the paintings and other artifacts from vandalism, Barry L. Bennett of the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department said Saturday.

"Given the remote nature of the shelters and the rock art, we were concerned about vandalism," Bennett of Austin told the National Cave Management Symposium. "Some people are specifically searching out this rock art."

Bennett was one of more than a dozen speakers to address the four-day symposium on problems and solutions in managing caves and their contents on government and private lands.

He said graffiti discovered at Seminole Canyon State Historical Park, northwest of Del Rio near the Texas-Mexico border, resulted in installation of infrared and magnetic sensors in 1985.

"People were coming by and some were throwing their beer cans and pitching pop bottles," said Bennett. "Because of the rock art and its value in preserved condition, they did not want anyone defacing the walls with graffiti."

The security system alerts the park superintendent and his staff when anyone approaches the cave art, some of which was drawn about 12,000 years ago.

"The sensors have been working quite effectively," said Bennett, adding they also protect spear points, pottery and other artifacts at the park.

The Texas park system, totaling 434,000 acres in 129 units, contains dozens of caves, and TPWD officials are working with cavers to develop management plans, said Michael W. Herring, the department's chief of park special services in Austin.

The parks and wildlife department and the New Braunfels-based Texas Cave Management Association co-hosted the symposium, which also included field trips to San Antonio and Austin area caves and educational facilities.

About 50 representatives from the Nature Conservancy and government agencies including the National Park Service, U.S. Geological Survey, Bureau of Land Management and U.S. Forest Service attended the conference.

As millions of Mexican free-tailed bats exited Bracken Bat Cave, Rex Wahl of TPWD said the creatures have been declining in population, especially in Arizona and other states.

Austin-based Bat Conservation International estimates the cave's bat population at 35 million — one of the world's largest such colonies. The group and the National Speleological Society of Huntsville, Ala., have been working to save bats, which eat harmful insects and pollinate plants.

Two San Antonio caves, Genesis Cave and Hills and Dales Pit, are important for replenishing the Edwards Aquifer with water, said George Veni of the Texas Speleological Association.

The nation's ninth largest city, San Antonio relies mainly on the layer of cavernous limestone to supply water to more than 1 million residents.

But TCMA officials said urban development has destroyed more than 50 caves and other features that replenish the aquifer in the past several years.

Hungary's new party adopts democratic goals

BUDAPEST, Hungary (AP) — A party created to replace Hungary's Communist Party today adopted a manifesto that pledges to help bring democracy to the Soviet bloc nation.

Members of the new ruling Socialist Party then went into closed session to debate who will lead the party during the campaign for the first free national elections in 41 years.

Sources reported tension following a decision by the party congress Sunday to continue allowing party politics in the workplace. It has been a common practice for Communists to hold meetings and conduct political courses for employees in the workplace.

Reformers associate it with the indoctrination practices of traditional Marxist-Leninist communist parties.

Rezsoe Nyers, the top candidate for the party's presidential post and chairman of the old party, was reported at odds with Premier Miklos Nemeth, a reformer who favors keeping politics out of the workplace.

As a result, reformers began a campaign to create an honorary chairman's post as a way to shunt Nyers aside and elect Imre Pozsgay as Socialist Party president, sources said. Pozsgay opposes politics in the workplace.

In a vote today taken by a show of hands, delegates to the party congress overwhelmingly approved a manifesto calling for "a constitutional state based on a multiparty system, where the source of power is the will of the people expressed in free elections."

The Socialist Party was described as "an organization in the Marxist spirit ... totally committed to democracy."

The delegates voted Saturday to disband the ruling Communist Party, an event unprecedented in the Warsaw Pact.

All members of the old party are automatically members of the new one and can continue to remain so by stating their agreement with its democratic principles.

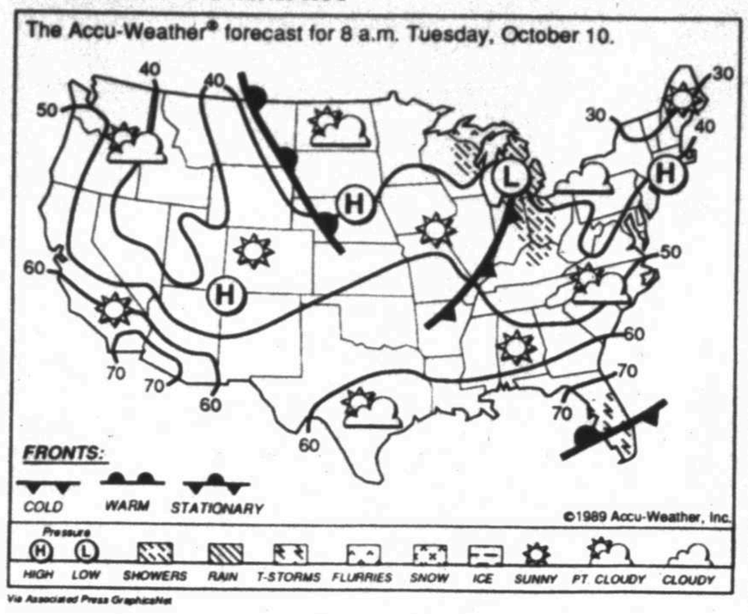

The document creating the Socialist Party said it supports the concept of private and state property and "the development of a ... multiparty parliamentary democracy."

The move was the latest of a number of bold reforms in Hungary, which with Poland is in the forefront of democratic reform in the East bloc.

But the initial euphoria of reformers seeking to create a party with wide popular appeal was dampened when the congress endorsed keeping politics in the workplace.

Fair skies likely in Permian Basin

From Staff and Wire Reports

Fair skies are in the forecast for tonight, according to the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport. The low will be in the lower 50s and winds will be light and variable.

Tuesday is expected to continue fair with the high in the middle 80s and winds from the south at 5-10 mph.

Sunday's high of 81 was 19 degrees cooler than the record high of 100 set on Oct. 8, 1979. The overnight low of 58 was 22 degrees warmer than the record low of 36 set for this date in 1970.

STATE

High clouds associated with an upper level disturbance in New Mexico covered much of the south plains and western sections of North Texas early Monday.

Showers and thunderstorms in West Texas late last night had dissipated. Other than the high clouds in the west, skies were clear around Texas.

High pressure maintained its place over texas, leaving the wind light and variable around the state.

Temperatures were cool with readings mostly in the 50s. Some 60s were observed in the deep south and the Permian Basin with 40s in the northern Panhandle. Extremes at 4 a.m. ranged from 47 degrees at Dalhart to 63 degrees at Midland and Sanderson.

Mostly sunny across the state today with highs in the 80s. Clear and cool tonight with lows in the 50s to near 60.

Other early morning temperatures around the state included 52 at Amarillo, 55 at Lubbock, 49 at El Paso, 61 at Midland, 51 at San Angelo, 54 at Wichita Falls, 53 at Dallas and Fort Worth, 53 at Waco, 58 at Austin, 62 at Brownsville, 60 at Corpus Christi and 51 at Houston.

NATION

Chilly fall weather settled over the Ohio River Valley and the central Appalachians this morning, while heat waves held sway in Florida and along the central California coast.

A chance of wet snow was forecast for the West Virginia mountains today, and frost advisories were posted for parts of Ohio, Indiana, North Carolina, Tennessee and Virginia and Pennsylvania.

Early morning temperatures were in the 30s in parts of Ohio and Indiana and in the 40s as far south as Georgia and Alabama.

Rain was falling early this morning in Anchorage and skies were partly cloudy over much of the Northeast and parts of the Plains.

On Sunday, a record high for the date of 94 degrees was set at Hollywood, Fla., and much of the state had temperatures in the 90s.

Normally chilly San Francisco recorded a high of 86 amid a heat wave along California's central coast that pushed temperatures to 92 in Salinas, 91 in Santa Maria and 99 in San Luis Obispo.

The hot spots in the nation Sunday were all in inland California, with 101-degree readings in Ontario, Palm Springs, Borrego Springs and Thermal.

Colombian bus fire kills seven; Army aide slain

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — Another outbreak of violence struck this country at war with drug lords Sunday as fire blamed on a bomb killed seven people on a bus and the body of an army secretary was found riddled with bullets.

There were no immediate claims of responsibility, but the attacks came in the midst of a 7-week-old war that drug traffickers and government officials have been waging.

Also Sunday, there were accusations and denials over allegations that President Virgilio Barco's government explored possibilities of a truce with the Medellin drug cartel.

The driver of the bus in Bogota, Luis Fernando Pataquiva, told the RCN radio network that a man and a woman apparently left a bomb in the rear that exploded moments after they got off.

Police said seven people were killed and seven injured, but local news reports said seven were killed and eight injured.

"Apparently the fire was caused by an incendiary bomb," a national police spokeswoman said on condition of anonymity. She did not elaborate.

Radio station Caracol reported that a policeman at the scene said the fire apparently started in a five-gallon plastic container of gasoline in the back of the bus.

Police said they found the body of Mrs. Nury Veelasquez de Vasquez, private secretary of the commander of the Fourth Army Brigade, shot 18 times.

Unidentified men dragged her from a taxi in Medellin on Friday and took her with them in their car, police said.

Police said they found her body next to a car near the town of Marinilla about 8 miles northwest of Medellin.

Authorities said they had no motive in the crime, but the Fourth Army Brigade has been active in confiscating property of suspected drug traffickers.

Before Sunday's reports of violence, 148 bombings and other attacks blamed on drug traffickers killed at least 10 people and wounded 164 since Aug. 19, when the traffickers declared war on the government.

The government declared an anti-drug crackdown Aug. 18, the same day leading presidential hopeful Sen. Luis Carlos Galan was assassinated.

Joaquin Vallejo, a former interior minister, said in reports published Sunday that he acted as a go-between in truce negotiations between the Medellin cocaine cartel and the government before the anti-drug crackdown began.

The new interior minister, Carlos Lemos Simmonds, denied that the government had talks with drug traffickers.

"The government received a proposal and immediately answered 'no,'" he told reporters outside the presidential palace moments after being sworn in, replacing Orlando Velasquez.

Also sworn in Sunday was Roberto Salazar Manrique as minister of justice and Enrique Danies as communications minister.

The report of the negotiations was published Saturday in the Bogota daily La Prensa, an opposition-owned newspaper. Vallejo backed the La Prensa account in interviews published by two other Bogota newspapers, El Tiempo and El Espectador.

Valleho served briefly as interior minister in the 1970s when the Conservative Party was in power. It is now in opposition to Barco's governing Liberal Party.

The crowd flees as a Mirage 2000 fighter plane explodes upon crashing at a New Delhi air show.

Fiery crash at air show 15th this year for Indian Air Force

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — An air force jet plunged to earth and exploded during an air show after the pilot apparently misjudged his altitude and tried an extra maneuver. The flier was killed and dozens of spectators were injured fleeing the fiery wreckage.

The crash Sunday was the 15th this year for the Indian air force, which has the world's highest accident rate, defense statistics show.

The Mirage 2000 fighter jet crashed at Indian Air Force Day celebrations. The pilot, Ramesh Bakshi, the 39-year-old commander of the Mirage squadron, was killed instantly.

Dozens of panicked spectators suffered sprained ankles, bruises or broken bones while running toward or away from the giant fireball.

Four people were hospitalized in serious condition with burns over 50 percent of their bodies, military officials said.

The silver delta-winged aircraft was completing a stunt known as a "Vertical Charlie," the finale of a 20-minute display of the air force's supersonic fighters, transport and training aircraft.

Air Marshal N.C. Suri, vice chief of the air staff, said Bakshi was only scheduled to perform three rolls but instead attempted a fourth.

Unable to complete the roll and pull out of its rapid descent, the plane hurtled to the ground as 2,000 military and civilian dignitaries and other guests attending the 57th anniversary watched in horror, only 300 yards away.

The plane slammed into the ground and exploded, igniting a huge fireball as the wreckage bounced through fuel tanks on the ground. Chunks of burning debris hit several vehicles in the parking lot of the military section of Palam Airport in western New Delhi.

Suri said the pilot may have miscalculated his height because the sky was hazy. When Bakshi started to pull up, the plane was about 18 feet from the ground, they said.

"The basic idea that we helped establish is that cancer has its origins in genes that normally do us some good. But after they become abnormal through mutation, they cause a role in cancer."

He and Bishop will share a $469,000 cash prize.

It was the third time the Nobel Prize has been awarded for research in connection with this field of research. Peyton Rous was first given the prize after his 1916 discovery of the tumor-inducing virus known as the Rous sarcoma virus.

In 1975, David Baltimore, Renato Dulbecco and Howard Temin were awarded the prize for discovering how viruses could comandeer the reproductive machinery in cells.

Bishop and Varmus were added to a long list of Americans who have dominated the medicine prize over the last 20 years. They were the 30th and 31st U.S. winners since 1969, compared with 19 laureates from all other countries combined.

In 1982, Bishop and Varmus were among the winners of the Albert Lasker Award, the most prestigious American medical research award.

Bishop was born in York, Pa. on Feb. 22, 1936, studied at Gettysburg College and Harvard and worked in the National Institutes of Health outside Washington. He spent time in Hamburg, West Germany before moving to the University of California in 1968.

Varmus came from Oceanside, N.Y., where he was born Dec. 18, 1939. He studied at Amherst College in Massachusetts, and earned his masters degree at Harvard in 1962, the same year Bishop earned his medical degree at Harvard. Varmus received a doctorate from Columbia University in 1966.

Varmus also worked at the National Institutes of Health as a clinical associate before becoming a postdoctoral fellow at the California School of Medicine in 1970.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Red Cross officials held by 'radicals'

SIDON, Lebanon (AP) — Police said today that two Red Cross officials kidnapped last week are being held by radical Palestinian guerrillas led by terrorist mastermind Abu Nidal.

Nidal's group has denied taking part in the kidnappings.

"We have established that Abu Nidal's men carried out the abduction. We believe the hostages are held in a base east of Sidon," said a police spokesman, who cannot be identified under standing regulations.

He said the base was "between the villages of Majdalyoun and Bkosta," three miles east of Sidon, the provincial capital of south Lebanon.

"The area is controlled exclusively by Abu Nidal's group," the spokesman said.

Masked gunmen grabbed the two Swiss men, Emmanuel Christen, 32, and Elio Erriquez, 23, in Sidon on Friday, bundled them into the trunk of a car and drove off toward the Ein el-Hilweh Palestinian refugee camp on Sidon's southeastern outskirts.

The police spokesman said the kidnappers drove through Ein el-Hilweh to their base east of Sidon. Ein el-Hilweh is controlled by Yasser Arafat's Palestine Liberation Organization, which is at odds with Abu Nidals' breakaway faction.

Firebomb injures three

JERUSALEM (AP) — An assailant hurled a firebomb at an Israeli military patrol today and injured three soldiers, hours after Israeli troops shot and killed a masked Palestinian in the West Bank, the military said.

The violence came as Jews marked Yom Kippur, the Day of Atonement, with fasting and prayers.

A curfew was imposed in Nablus, the West Bank's largest city, after the shooting death of the Palestinian on Sunday night. Nablus is the West Bank's largest city, with 120,000 Arab residents.

The army said soldiers in Nablus encountered several masked Palestinian men in the town's central market. An army spokesman, who cannot be identified by name under military rules, said some of the Palestinians were armed with swords or knives.

He said troops opened fire when the Palestinians failed to respond to warning shouts and warning shots. The army spokesman said one Palestinian was killed and another wounded.

Arab reports identified the dead man as Ghassan Hudhud, 32.

Abbado to direct opera

BERLIN (AP) — Claudio Abbado, musical director of the Vienna State Opera, was chosen Sunday to succeed the late Herbert von Karajan as chief conductor of the Berlin Philharmonic orchestra.

Abbado

Abbado, 56, was selected in a secret ballot by the Berlin Philharmonic orchestra's 120 musicians and accepted the post in a telephone conversation, Anke Martiny, West Berlin's chief cultural official, told reporters.

Abbado, who will be only the fifth chief conductor in the 107-year-old state-subsidized Berlin Philharmonic, was not considered among the favorites for the post.

Other musical luminaries, such as Lorin Maazel, James Levine, Daniel Barenboim and Riccardo Muti, were initially thought to have better chances in the musicians' first direct balloting for a new leader.

Karajan, who headed the Berlin Philharmonic for 35 years, died July 16 at age 81. The brilliant and revered maestro stirred millions of people with his music and was perhaps the world's most honored and prolific conductor.

Ulster soldiers arrested

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — Police investigating security leaks arrested 28 members of the army's Ulster Defense Regiment in raids on their homes and four were charged with unspecified firearms offenses.

The soldiers allegedly leaked files identifying IRA members some of whom were targeted for assassination by Protestant extremists, police said.

Some of those detained in the raids early Sunday were later released, and it was not clear whether others would be charged. Police said they found security documents, ammunition and weapons in the raids.

The four charged with unspecified firearms offenses were to appear in court today.

Supply train stopped

MOSCOW (AP) — Defying a nationwide ban on transport strikes, Azerbaijani railroad crews stopped desperately needed supplies from reaching rival Armenia in the latest episode of a dispute over territory both republics claim.

Azerbaijani activist Shahin Gadzhiev said, "Our drivers are striking and demanding guarantees of their safety," in response to gunfire and stoning attacks on trains late Saturday in Armenia.

About 400 trains with a total of 60,000 cars have been reported idled on main lines in the southwestern region. There were conflicting reports over how much food, fuel and building supplies managed to reach the Armenian republic.

The republics are feuding over Nagorno-Karabakh, a fertile predominantly Armenian enclave that has been part of Moslem-dominated Azerbaijan since 1923.

Pair won't be sent home

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Two Burmese students who hijacked an aircraft to demand democracy in their military-ruled country will be tried in Thailand and not sent back to their homeland, a senior Thai official said today.

Deputy Prime Minister Tienchai Sirisunpan told a news conference that while they faced a maximum penalty of death he expected the two students, who hijacked a domestic Burmese flight on Friday, would be dealt with leniently.

"We will not send them back to Burma," said Tienchai.

Tienchai said the students — identified as Ye Tin, 21, and Ye Thi Ha, 25 — could not request political asylum in Thailand or any other country until after legal proceedings against them are completed.

Soviet tanks improved

LONDON (AP) — New weapons and equipment have given the Soviet Union an edge in tank forces that has allowed it to withdraw thousands of older tanks from the front line facing NATO, a new study said today.

The Soviets no longer need so many tanks because their latest models are superior in some cases to those of the West in armor, mobility and firepower said Christopher F. Foss, editor of the 1989-1990 edition of the respected "Jane's Armor and Artillery."

HUNGARY

Of about 1,200 delegates present for Sunday's balloting just 107 — including Pozsgay, Nemeth and Foreign Minister Gyula Horn — voted against the measure. There were 34 abstentions.

Free national elections are to be held by June, and the Socialist Party will remain in power at least until then.

But the new tensions could create a conflict between the party and the government, which Nemeth leads.

A source, speaking on condition of anonymity, said Nyers and Nemeth "aren't talking to each other."

Even before the workplace vote, Deputy Premier Peter Medgyessy had urged the new party to stop interfering in government business pending the national elections.

In other developments Sunday:

■ A ranking Communist conservative, former Politburo member Janos Berecz, defied Saturday's decision by the congress to create a new party. He said the old party should should continue to exist until the rank and file decides on its fate.

Robert Ribanszki, another opponent of change, said he planned to organize a plebiscite among the party's 720,000 members.

■ Officials at the congress said the hard-line Communist East Berlin leadership — embittered over Hungary's decision to allow East Germans free passage to the West — had expressed its congratulations at the party's transformation.

Spokesman Emil Kimmel refused to elaborate, telling reporters the text of the East German message would be published today, along with one from Romania, a Soviet bloc country that has previously condemned Hungarian reforms.

He also did not say whether the Soviets had sent congratulations.

Twelve killed as logging truck hits hay wagon

CAP-PELE, New Brunswick (AP) — A logging truck crashed into a wagon that was taking relatives at a family reunion on a hayride, killing 12 people and injuring 45, many of whom were pinned or crushed by logs, witnesses said.

Several of those injured in Sunday's crash were in critical condition and five of the dead were children, according to a hospital spokesmen in Moncton, 25 miles west of Cormier, where the accident occurred.

About 50 people were involved in Sunday's outing, part of a traditional family reunion in Cormier each Canadian Thanksgiving weekend. Most were riding on the hay-covered wagon, which was being towed by a tractor when it was hit.

Others were traveling behind in two pickup trucks, both of which were also hit by the logging truck. One tipped over and dumped its riders into a ditch.

"The logs ended up on the people when the truck failed to negotiate the curve" on a two-lane highway, said a local resident, Gerry LeBlanc.

Edmond Leger, another local resident, said the tractor-trailor jackknifed and fell on the hay-covered wagon. He said one man lost three members of his immediate family.

"The worst thing was that it happened only about 100 yards from the hall where the family reunion was being held," said Val Gogen, who works at a gas station in Cormier.

Stricken family members, many in tears, stumbled around the accident site desperately looking for relatives, a police officer said.

The accident occurred on Highway 945 near Cap-Pele in the southeastern part of New Brunswick, an eastern Canadian province.

Some victims were pinned under the bales of hay. The driver of the tractor-trailer had to be pried from the wreckage, witnesses said.

Pope urges democracy, reunification of Korean peninsula

WORLD

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Pope John Paul II left for Indonesia Monday after challenging South Korea's president to move his country toward full democracy and praying for reunification of the two Koreas.

"The Korean nation is symbolic of a world divided and not yet able to become one in peace and justice," the pontiff said Sunday, speaking alternately in Korean and English at an outdoor Mass attended by 700,000 people.

John Paul told the vast throng of the faithful of his desire to visit China, and he offered prayers for the people of Asia's communist nations, including North Korea, just 30 miles from Seoul.

At an earlier meeting with President Roh Tae-woo at the Blue House presidential mansion, the pope challenged the South Korean leader to make every effort to eradicate any traces of authoritarian rule, a Vatican spokesman said.

John Paul, who said there had been big steps toward democracy since he first visited South Korea five years ago, told Roh that South Koreans want full democratic rights and freedoms, according to Vatican spokesman Joaquin Navarro.

"This present visit enables me to note the strong desire of all your people to proceed along the way to ... a prosperous and tranquil civil life and to generous and fruitful cooperation with the other nations of the world," the pope told Roh.

A statement by the presidential palace said the two leaders discussed the international situation and relations with communist North Korea, but it made no reference to domestic political issues.

South Korea has made considerable progress toward democracy in the past two years, and most Koreans agree they now have a large degree of political freedom. But the government still imposes restraints on left-wing and other radical groups, and hundreds of anti-government dissidents have been jailed for political activity in recent months.

The vast crowd at the outdoor Mass waved white Korean flags and wept as the pope arrived at the immense asphalt plaza in southern Seoul to celebrate the end of the 44th International Eucharistic Congress. Many worshipers arrived before dawn.

John Paul offered prayers for the people of communist North Korea and China, calling them "our brothers and sisters."

China broke relations with the Vatican in 1957 and recognizes only its own "Patriotic Catholic Church," which names its own bishops. The Vatican estimates there are 2 million Chinese loyal to the pope.

A choir of hundreds sang hymns in Korean as the pope walked along a red carpet toward a four-story-high stage and altar, tiered with thousands of red, white, yellow and pink flowers and flanked by white, yellow and blue banners.

Plainclothes South Korean security agents carrying attache cases containing machine guns ringed the stage and 11,000 police were deployed on the outskirts of the plaza. Those who attended the Mass had to go through metal detectors.

About 2,000 priests, aided by 2,000 women in traditional Korean gowns, served Communion while 1,200 white doves were released as a sign of peace. Prayers were offered in Chinese, Japanese, Spanish, German, French, Korean, English and other languages.

Cardinal Stephen Kim of Seoul said in his welcome that the church issued an invitation to North Korea to send delegates, but they did not come.

"This indicates that the division of the mind is more painful than the division of land," he said.

Eight mountain climbers killed in Japan

TOKYO (AP) — Six climbers were found dead in the northern Japan Alps today after the season's first snow and two others from the same group died later after being evacuated by helicopter, police said.

The eight — six men and two women — were members of a 10-member party from western Kyoto and neighboring towns who started a climb Saturday and planned to return today, said Toyama Prefectural police.

The climbers, who ranged in age from the late 40s to 60s, may have died of exposure after getting caught in a sudden snowstorm in light clothing, local press reports said.

It was the most people killed in a mountaineering accident in Japan since March 1982, when 12 climbers were killed in an avalanche in the central Japan Alps.

TUESDAY, OCTOBER 10, 1989

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Your friendly and conscientious manner will win you new allies and admirers. If employed in the arts, you can look forward to an exceptionally busy and happy winter. Your punctuality and attention to detail make your competitors seem lazy. Beware of any get-rich-quick schemes proposed by friends next spring. Keep your feet firmly anchored to the ground. Deception is possible in a romantic relationship. The best partner is someone who will be loyal in both bad times and good.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actress Helen Hayes, jazz legend Thelonius Monk, politician Adlai Stevenson III, author James Clavell.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Keep informed about employer-employee relationships. Scrutinize fine print before signing contracts or agreements. Mate's part-time employment could aid your efforts to balance the budget. Romance holds few surprises.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Work done in seclusion is completed quickly. Deal with people firsthand to achieve the best results. News from afar holds financial promise. Follow up any hot leads. A social encounter could foster romance.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Keep your nose to the grindstone no matter how you feel. Changes are in the works that will benefit you. Real estate transactions are not favored today. Double-check home security.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Rise above petty jealousies, minor worries. Someone is working behind the scenes on your behalf. Be patient with a gossipy co-worker or relative.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Dealings with foreigners or attorneys are likely today. Unusual circumstances make you eager to get out of town. Temper your enthusiasm for a project with practicality.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You could feel under the gun, expected to produce too many miracles. Do your best and stay calm. The emphasis later today will be on expenses, loans and tax matters. Rely on experts.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Be more tactful and considerate around your colleagues. Jealousy could be the underlying cause of someone's irritability. Extra attention to details and directions will pay off. A waning relationship responds to tenderness.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23- Nov. 21): The financial advice of a well-intentioned friend may be based on a faulty perception. Study nutrition and look for ways to improve your diet. Be more flexible when dealing with loved ones.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Parents need to show understanding and patience when dealing with tiny tots. Make friendly overtures to someone who is down. Lunching at an "in" spot boosts morale.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): A school friend could play a major role in your happiness. Remember to repay favors. A romantic relationship could confuse you. Postpone making a formal commitment if your doubts grow.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Authority figure will offer valuable backing, support. Professional advice turns out to be more to the point than you expected. Be alert when friends inquire about your personal finances. Probe their motives.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Discretion pays off in both business affairs and domestic matters. Increased communication helps mend a long-time rift. Work done around the house will add to the value of your property.

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠J93 ♡AK8 ◇63 ♣K10542
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♡	Pass	2 ♣	Pass
2 ◇	Pass	?

What do you bid now?
A.—You have excellent support for partner's first suit, but that doesn't entitle you to go wild. Since those values were already taken into account when you made your two-over-one response, a bid of two hearts now does your hand full justice.

Q.2—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠83 ♡Q95 ◇AK1072 ♣1054
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♣	Pass	1 ◇	1 ♠
1 NT	Pass?

What action do you take?
A.—Since partner bid freely, he must have a better-than-minimum opening. You have a reasonably good five-card suit which should be a source of tricks, and a smattering of values elsewhere. Invite game by raising to two no trump.

Q.3—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠KJ102 ♡AJ543 ◇Q106 ♣7
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	Pass	1 ♡	Pass
1 ♠	Pass	?

What do you bid now?
A.—In support of spades your hand is worth 14 points, so you want to be in game. The way to do that is, strangely enough, to bid four spades! A jump to three spades these days is only invitational.

Q.4—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠K763 ♡J82 ◇KQ763 ♣Q
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 NT	Pass	2 ♣	Pass
2 ♡	Pass	?

What do you bid now?
A.—This is not the sort of hand where you want to consider playing a 4-3 major fit, or where you want to look for a possible slam in a minor. You have more than enough to contract for game, so bid three no trump.

Q.5—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠652 ♡A83 ◇8752 ♣QJ6
Partner opens the bidding with three no trump. What action do you take?
A.—Partner's bid shows a balanced hand of 25-27 points. If he is at the top of his range, you should have play for slam. Invite him to the party by raising to four no trump. He will pass with a minimum, bid a slam with 27 and look at his intermediates before deciding what to do with 26.

Q.6—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠752 ♡AJ93 ◇A1062 ♣83
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ◇	Pass	1 ♡	Pass
2 NT	Pass	?

What do you bid now?
A.—You have excellent support for partner's suit, but there's really no point in revealing it. There are not enough values for slam, and even 11 tricks could be beyond your combined resources. Since you have a balanced hand and partner has announced one too, bid three no trump.

Elvis' image tarnished, corroded

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — A bronze statue of Elvis Presley, whose smoldering looks made women swoon and scream, won't win any beauty contests now.

The figure is tarnished by graffiti and corrosion and the decorative fringe on the King's shirt is routinely stripped off by souvenir-seeking fans.

Several Elvis fans are appalled and have written angry letters to Mayor Dick Hackett, demanding that the city repair the statue.

As recently as July, the city paid $1,800 to replace the shirt fringe and the strings on Elvis' guitar, and to have drain holes cut to reduce corrosion. But now, Hackett and others are hesitating because of the cost and becasue of uncertainty over who's really responsible for upkeep.

"It's going to cost several thousand dollars," said Ray Pohlman, Hackett's director of communications. "I'm trying to get it taken care of, (but) I haven't been able to find out who owns it."

Representatives of Memphis Light, Gas & Water, which owns the property under the statue, said they are unsure who is responsible.

Pat Halloran, president of the Memphis Development Foundation, which commissioned the statue in 1980, says it's the city's responsibility because the statue was donated to Memphis.

Pohlman said he is trying to get millionaire Memphis promoter Sidney Shlenker or Graceland, which administers Elvis' estate, to take over the statue and make the repairs.

Memphis Arts and Sciences Commission chairman Downing Pryor said Saturday he would raise donations for the cleanup.

Elvis fans don't really care who takes charge; they just want the memorial cleaned up.

"It is in heartbreaking condition," Evelyn Slayman of Cerritos, Calif., wrote to Hackett after a visit to Memphis. "Whether this is from natural causes, abuse or neglect is beside the point. The condition is appalling and is no longer a tribute to Elvis, but a slap in the face."

NEW YORK (AP) — Jane Pauley says she gets along with "Today" news anchor Deborah Norville better than it may seem, although she admits Ms. Norville's recent addition was a jolt.

"The 'feuding family' thing really gets my goat," Ms. Pauley says in the Oct. 16 issue of Newsweek.

The same goes for her and co-host Bryant Gumbel. "We aren't best friends in every category, but we are very, very good friends," she said.

Pauley

Gumbel

Ms. Pauley said the recent addition of Ms. Norville to the "Today" cast, along with speculation that Ms. Norville is being groomed as her replacement, woke her up.

NBC executive Dick Ebersol "said in USA Today, perhaps accurately, that the show needed a jolt," she said.

"I took it personally, then began to realize that maybe Jane Pauley needed a jolt, but didn't realize it. It inspired some questions that came to the surface," she said.

Newsweek cited NBC sources as saying the most likely outcome is for Ms. Norville to succeed Ms. Pauley, who would leave "Today" and join a male anchor on a prime-time news show.

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Actor Paul Newman stood up his studio and a crowd of reporters, passing up a screening of the movie "Fat Man and Little Boy" to work on his latest project.

Paramount brought dozens of television reporters to Kansas City for Saturday's screening, a rare event for the city arranged especially to make it easier for Newman to meet the press. Newman is in town filming "Mr. and Mrs. Bridge."

However, the reporters had to make do with Newman's "Fat Man" co-stars, John Cusack and Dwight Schultz, as well as producer Tony Garnett. The film is about the making of the atomic bomb and takes its title from the nicknames of the bombs dropped on Hiroshima and Nagasaki.

Newman latest movie, about a Kansas City family in the 1920s and '30s, is based on the novels "Mrs. Bridge" and "Mr. Bridge" by Evan S. Connell.

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Willy Theisen, the hard-driving, workaholic founder of the Godfather's Pizza chain, has become a marathon-running family man who refuses to work past noon.

Theisen, who netted $122 million in stock when he sold the chain to Chart House Inc. in 1983, says he enjoyed running what was for a time America's fastest-growing business. But workdays that often lasted until 1:30 a.m. took a toll on his health and cost him two marriages.

"I woke up in the morning and felt bad," Theisen, 44, said recently. "I was overweight. I was drinking maybe a little bit too much and apparently eating too much."

These days, his top priority is spending time with his wife, Karen, and his five children. He runs, plays tennis and does charity work in addition to managing investments that include apartments, a partnership in a budget hotel chain and mini-warehouses.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Indigo Girls say their brand of folk-rock music isn't necessarily part of a return-to-roots movement among pop performers.

"I don't know if we're big enough to be part of a trend," Amy Ray said in a recent interview. "I think once every 15 years acoustic music gets popular again. But we never thought of acoustic music not being popular."

Ray and her partner, Emily Saliers, have been getting unaccustomed attention since their debut album, "Indigo Girls," went gold two weeks ago.

The childhood friends from Decatur, Ga., began collaborating when they were in high school and became Indigo Girls while students at Atlanta's Emory University.

Ray said her listening tastes lean more toward rock 'n' roll, while Saliers favors the acoustic sound.

WOODBRIDGE, N.J. (AP) — Capt. Henrick Kurt Carlsen, a sea captain who gained international attention in 1952 for stubbornly staying aboard his crippled freighter for seven days as it slowly sank, died Saturday at his home. He was 75.

On Dec. 29, 1951, Carlsen was the 37-year-old captain of the freighter Flying Enterprise when a storm ripped open the ship's hull in the English Channel.

After ordering the 40 crewmen and 10 passengers overboard, he remained with the ship, owned by American Export-Isbrandtsen Lines of New York, so the vessel could not be claimed for salvage by another company.

On Jan. 5, 1952, Carlsen and a companion jumped overboard and watched from the tugboat's deck as the ship sank into the Channel near Falmouth.

Carlsen, who was born in Denmark, came to United States in 1938 and worked for the New York-based shipping line from 1944 until his retirement in 1976.

Bakker verdict sounds an alert

One member of the jury which last week convicted television evangelist Jim Bakker of defrauding his followers of $3.7 million summed up the tragedy for millions of Christians when he said, "He was called by God. But eventually the money became too much for him."

It was, ironically, a story as old as the Gospel Bakker himself had preached. Two of the strongest temptations of human life — sex and money — brought Jim and Tammy Bakker's "walls" tumbling down. Bakker has indicated he will appeal the conviction that carries a possible sentence of 120 years in prison and $5 million in fines for all of the 24 counts of fraud and conspiracy.

Jim and Tammy Bakker's ministry was popular with many individuals here as well as across the country and without a doubt there are some who still believe that Bakker is innocent of the charges. But the jury could not find the evidence to substantiate Bakker's defense and, in that absence, there was only one reasonable verdict.

Saddest of all is the fact that Bakker, through his actions, defrauded millions of elderly Americans not only of their very life savings, but of their faith in a highly visible religious leader. That may be the greatest fraud of all.

It can be argued, with cause, that those who subject themselves to the pleadings of politicians, evangelists or whomever have the duty to be on guard against fraudulent claims. In the spirit of the free marketplace, such a policy is not only traditional but wise.

Yet the tragic consequences seen in Bakker's trial underscore once again the fact that individuals cast into the public spotlight — whether as politicians, entertainers or even television evangelists — have an additional responsibility to proceed cautiously as to how they lead their followers or fans. As the Jim Bakker trial verdict has emphasized, the laws of this land demand it.

Oppose this 'tyranny'

The nationwide effort by fundamentalist Christian evangelicals to proselytize their religion in public schools should be recognized for what it is: Part and parcel of a wider agenda to seize the reins of political power and limit the public debate of all issues — social, political, economic, religious and scientific — to a realm in which their ideas and only their ideas will be heard.

Madison, Jefferson and the other framers who shepherded the establishment clause through the national and state debates recognized that churches and religions, regardless of how innocuous they might appear in their primal forms, invariably upon establishment become tyrannizers over the consciences of men and women, and destroyers of liberty.

And history, a subject at which the framers were no slouches, bore them out then, and seem to vindicate now with every passing day. Witness the past handiwork of those who would have the state do their religious bidding: The burning of the Library of Alexandria by a mob of reason-hating religious zealots; the Albigensian Crusade, where the armies of Pope Innocent (irony, anyone?) murdered and burned 40,000 men, women and children over a simple, abstract theological point of debate; or the Spanish Inquisition, the minions of which, hearts aflame with the savagery of the righteous, subjected suspected heretics (read: people who did not agree with them) and women suspected of witchcraft (read: midwives, nurses and herbal healers) to tortures unimaginably brutal and heinous — all in the name of Christ; and witness the madness that continues to this day in places like Khomeini's Iran, anywhere religious zealots attempt to foist their world-views on others with the aid of the police powers of the state, and tell me with a straight face that this is what we want for our country.

No, it is certainly not what we want. Religious and spiritual life flourishes in America because the establishment clause and the subsequent case law supporting separation of church and state allows the churches to attend to matters of religion and spirit without undue interference from the state, and the state to attend to its secular duties without the same from the churches. Any deviation from this state of affairs, in either direction, is tyranny and should be opposed.

Question is praying

When, where and how to pray — that is the question. The answer is given by Jesus and St. Paul.

When? "Without ceasing." Thessalonians. 5:17 (St. Paul).

Where? Go in your closet and pray in secret. Matthew 6:6.

How? "After the manner of the Lord's Prayer." Matthew 6:9.

Jesus is very wise; that is why He is the Master and we the followers. If we are following Him, what power does Madalyn Murray O'Hair have over us? All she has power to do is disorganize the "hypocrites and those who want to be like them." Matthew 6:5.

If a student needs a quiet place to pray, in secret, there is the school library.

So don't worry, be happy. God is on His throne.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Monday, October 9, the 282nd day of 1989. There are 83 days left in the year. This is the Columbus Day holiday, as well as Thanksgiving Day in Canada. This is also the Jewish Day of Atonement, Yom Kippur.

Today's highlight in history:

Seventy years ago, on October 9, 1919, the Cincinnati Reds won the World Series, five games to three in a best-of-nine contest, by defeating the Chicago White Sox 10-5 at Comiskey Park. However, the victory turned hollow amid charges that eight members of the White Sox had accepted bribes from gamblers to throw the series in what became known as "The Black Sox Scandal."

On this date:

In 1635, religious dissident Roger Williams was banished from the Massachusetts Bay Colony.

In 1701, the Collegiate School of Connecticut — later Yale University — was chartered in New Haven.

In 1888, the public was first admitted to the Washington Monument.

In 1930, Laura Ingalls became the first woman to fly across the United States as she completed a nine-stop journey from Roosevelt Field, N.Y., to Glendale, Calif.

In 1936, the first generator at Boulder (later Hoover) Dam began transmitting electricity to Los Angeles.

In 1967, Latin American guerrilla leader Che Guevara was executed after being captured leading a guerrilla band in Bolivia.

In 1975, Soviet scientist Andrei Sakharov won the Nobel Peace Prize.

In 1983, President Reagan's controversial Interior Secretary, James G. Watt, resigned under fire.

In 1983, a bomb explosion in Rangoon, Burma, blamed on North Korean agents killed 17 visiting South Koreans, including four cabinet ministers.

Ten years ago: President Carter told a news conference he would announce his plans for the 1980 presidential campaign in December, but left little doubt he intended to run for re-election.

Five years ago: One day after Salvadoran President Jose Napoleon Duarte unexpectedly offered to hold peace talks with leftist rebels, a coalition of guerrillas accepted the proposal.

Soviet Union experiencing crime wave

LENINGRAD, U.S.S.R. — An American tourist in his early 70s learned the hard way that increased openness has brought increased crime in the Soviet Union.

Jack Anderson

Holland Salley owns an interior design company in Naples, Fla. He was browsing through fabrics in the largest department store in Leningrad recently when two youths tried to mug him. "I yelled and screamed," Salley told us when we met him soon after the attack. The muggers panicked and fled, but they weren't finished yet.

Salley left the store and walked to an underground street crossing. It was about 5 p.m. and shoppers packed the passage. The same two boys, plus a third, jumped Salley and shoved him against a wall. Again he shouted, but no one came to his aid. The thugs got away with $1,500 and his credit cards.

When Salley told his story to the Soviet police, they didn't seem surprised. Salley was. He hadn't expected to be mugged in one of the most controlled societies in the world, where the gulag awaits those who step out of line.

He compared notes later with others on his tour. Two of the group had their pockets picked. Four of them who tried to exchange money on the black market were ripped off. The money changers either gave them worthless Yugoslavian currency or took their dollars and ran.

Salley's tour group was made up of conservatives who came to the Soviet Union with a bias against the KGB and its tyranny. Some of them left complaining that the KGB had gone soft, that at least in a true police state people were protected from street punks.

Crime is one of the most visible downsides of Mikhail Gorbachev's perestroika. Violent crime would not have flourished under a more repressive regime. In the past, Soviet propaganda had it that crime was a product of capitalism. It just didn't exist in communist and socialist states. But in the past year, police and the Soviet State Committee on Statistics have started issuing candid data on crime. Now some comparisons can be made to the United States.

The overall crime rate in the Soviet Union went up 16.4 percent last year. In the United States, the increase was 5.5 percent. The Soviets have more murders per capita than the United States, but fewer rapes reported. The crimes posting the largest increase in the Soviet Union last year involved consumer goods, which are often easier to steal than to buy in empty stores. Burglary was up 44.4 percent and robbery up 42.8 percent.

According to our sources, Soviet police have something in common with their American counterparts — they feel outgunned and outmanned by the enemy. Soviet criminals are showing a new boldness. They carry more weapons and aren't afraid to use them.

A senior lieutenant in the Moscow police force recently reported a case concerning foreign tourists who picked up two prostitutes. They drove a short distance with them in a taxi before their car was forced off the road by two more taxis filled with thugs. The tourists were beaten and mugged before the police lieutenant arrived and gave chase.

He recounted that the criminals opened fire on his car with sawed-off shotguns. "They were shooting from both rear windows. It was half past midnight, there was a lot of traffic, and I knew I couldn't return fire, fearing I'd hit someone in the oncoming traffic." The robbers got away.

Lt. Gen. Pyotr Bogdnov, Soviet deputy minister of internal affairs, vented his frustration in an interview with the Moscow News. "I attribute a sharp rise in crime and its more dangerous forms to the general laxity of law and order, the fall of regard for law and the law enforcement bodies. I'm no advocate of tightening the screw or an indiscriminately tough line, but today's situation is clearly abnormal."

WHY WHEELING — Our recent report on a threat against President Bush by the Medellin cocaine cartel stirred up readers in Wheeling, W.Va. We reported that cartel assassins were allegedly planning to use Wheeling, about five hours drive from Washington, D.C., as a base for their attack. That's not a good idea, according to Cindy Hubbard of Wheeling. "Do they have any idea of what traffic is like here now?" she wrote to us. "The tie-ups, backups, delays and detours would throw their schedule off considerably." Once the cartel assassins were on the road out of Wheeling, their troubles would be just beginning. Hubbard asked us to get the word to the assassins that the road to Washington is "constantly, endlessly under construction." What Wheeling needs, Hubbard said, is not terrorists but tourists. Amen to that.

MINI-EDITORIAL — We're confused. In a speech in Sioux Falls, S.D., President Bush said trees were the "oldest, cheapest and most efficient air purifier on Earth." But Bush's mentor Ronald Reagan once branded trees as worse air polluters than industry. Bush implied in the 1988 campaign that he was his own man, but he was shy about explaining exactly how he differed from Reagan. This must be what he was talking about.

CHARLEY REESE

Americans must continue to support Israel

Agitation on the West Bank and in Gaza seems to be tapering off or at least the American news media seem to be getting bored with the story.

Charley Reese

When the so-called intifada started nearly a year ago, its leaders plainly stated their goal. They would force the Israelis to withdraw from the territories. At the time, I predicted they would fail.

Israel will not be driven out of the occupied territories for the same reason it does not lose its wars. It has no choice.

Israel is far too small a country — smaller than Massachusetts — to hand over the West Bank and Gaza to fanatics who would do to those places what they have done to Lebanon. The West Bank areas are the high ground overlooking the coastal plain. Where the road from Jerusalem comes down, the old border of the West Bank is only 9 to 15 miles from the sea.

That does not mean Israel will never relinquish control of the areas but it does mean Israel will never relinquish control to hostile, armed forces who would be in a position to cut Israel in half.

Nor should any reasonable person expect Israel to do so. After 40 years of wars and terrorism, after 40 years of the Israelis asking for negotiations and peace and getting a flat no, after 40 years of unceasing anti-Israel propaganda, economic boycotts and blacklisting, the Israelis have sound reasons for proceeding cautiously.

These areas, after all, were captured in the course of defending herself in 1967 from a war launched by Egypt, Jordan and Syria. For 22 years since, Israel has asked those parties to sit down and negotiate a peace. Only Egypt finally responded.

Those Americans who wish for peace in the area can do nothing more effective than hold fast in support of Israel. Everytime the Arab governments think the United States is backing away from Israel, they become more hostile. They believe that if they can break the American-Israeli bond, they can destroy the little country. A great deal of their propaganda is directed toward this goal.

The Israeli peace proposal is a good one. It calls for direct negotiations and establishment of normal relations between Israel and the Arab governments. This would be followed by democratic elections in the territories. This would be followed by a period of interim local self-rule while the final status of the areas is negotiated.

That is essentially what the U.S. signed on to in the Camp David Accords. We should stand firm. Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak's counter proposal is nonsense — the same old Arab scam. Israel must guarantee the outcome of the negotiations before negotiations begin. Hogwash.

As for this agitation in these areas, it is being done the way the PLO always does things — backed up by murder and intimidation. Over 100 Palestinians have been executed — some tortured in the process — by the fanatics for the crime of wanting peace.

That's been the sad history of this conflict as the extremist Palestinian self-appointed leaders have for decades murdered every Palestinian who wanted to reach an agreement. The tragedy of the Palestinian people is a direct result of fanatic Palestinian leaders and the cynical exploitation of them by other Arab governments.

Nor should Americans be fooled by television superficiality into believing these protests are just kids tossing stones at soldiers. In the first five months of 1989 the terrorists used 2,140 gasoline bombs, committed 943 cases of arson, handed out 223 beatings, 75 stabbbings, used 165 explosive devices and 28 hand grenades, and staged 73 shootings. During this period, 73 percent of the victims were Arabs who had displeased the fanatics.

For once in this postwar era, we should insist that our government stand by an ally and not be made a fool of by terrorists and greedy banks and international oil companies who prefer profits to principles.

LEWIS GRIZZARD

Reality bites the bullet in old western movies

Remember how cowboys in Western movies could get into a 15-minute gunfight and never have to reload their pistols?

Lewis Grizzard

In case you're too young to remember Western movies, that happened all the time.

Growing up, I must have seen 20 Roy Rogers movies, and I never recall Roy ever running out of ammunition.

Of course, the Indians rarely ran out of arrows either, and the other thing I always wondered about was when an Indian spoke English he never used articles and never referred to himself as "I."

Tonto would never have said to the Lone Ranger, "I think I'll go over and water the horses."

He would say, "Me go water horses."

I realize a certain economy of the language is often necessary, especially when one is involved in the high-minded business of making certain that good triumphs over evil.

But it seems to me, the Lone Ranger would have finally gotten tired of the way Tonto spoke and said to him, "Listen, Tonto, this 'Me go water horses,' thing has got to stop.

"In the future, please use the pronoun 'I' when you refer to yourself and throw in a 'the' occasionally."

I bring up the past to make a comment about movies of today.

A lot has changed in the area of movie weaponry. Very rarely do movies today involve the old Western six-shooter. Mostly they involve assault weapons, weapons that will spit out a bullet a millisecond, weapons that crazies buy when they want to wipe out some kids on a playground.

But in the last couple of modern shoot-'em-ups I've seen, namely "Die Hard," with Bruce Willis, and "Lethal Weapon II," with Danny Glover and Mel Gibson, I've noticed another flaw reminiscent of the you-never-need-to-reload-a-six-shooter.

In "Die Hard," Bruce Willis, a lone cop against a group of terrorists in a high-rise office building, must have had at least a thousand bullets fired at him, some at very close range.

But was he ever hit by a single shot? No.

In "Lethal Weapon II," more people got shot than live in medium-sized towns in Kansas.

I admit Mel Gibson finally got hit at the end, but not enough to kill him — so we can look forward to a "Lethal Weapon III," in which every living thing in Salt Lake City is blown to bits.

If terrorists and drug dealers and South African bad guys spent two hours shooting at you with automatic weapons, you're probably going to wind up dead in a real world.

Do you know what I think? I think the National Rifle Association is behind all this somehow and is trying to give the subtle message that it's no use to ban assault weapons because the good guys aren't going to get hit anyway.

It's time Hollywood realized its responsibilities and had a few stars shot up to prove bullets don't discriminate between good guys and bad.

In the immortal words of Tonto, "Me go water horses. You stay here and get head blown off."

Coup's failure thwarted grab for Noriega

NATION

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Bush administration was preparing for covert action to grab Panamanian leader Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega near the end of an uprising last week but dropped the plans as the coup fizzled, top officials say.

The officials, in televised interviews Sunday, fended off congressional criticism that they acted in confusion and hesitation last Tuesday during the coup attempt.

The Panama Defense Forces rebels refused a U.S. request to surrender Noriega to face drug charges in the United States, and President Bush ordered the military to plan on using covert force to grab the Panamanian strongman, said Defense Secretary Dick Cheney, Secretary of State James A. Baker III and Brent Scowcroft, the White House national security adviser.

"The message that was sent was that if there were an opportunity to do this, without risking bloodshed and significant loss of American life, and to do so without open military involvement, then he was free to go ahead, the commander on the ground was free to go ahead," Baker said on the NBC-TV program, "Meet the Press."

Cheney said that, at the outset of the coup, he told the commander of U.S. forces in Panama, Gen. Maxwell Thurman, to be prepared to use peaceful means to take custody of Noriega, but the chance never came.

"We never made the decision to use military force, that would have involved going in against the rebels and taking Noriega from them ... but we told him to be prepared in case he got the order to do so. Shortly after that, the coup fell apart," Cheney said on the CBS-TV program, "Face the Nation."

The order to ready non-uniformed U.S. forces for a covert action to grab Noriega was first reported in Sunday editions of The Washington Post.

Although that report did not attribute the decision to the president, Scowcroft said, "President Bush personally ... ordered whatever guidance was sent to General Thurman."

Baker, Cheney and Scowcroft said top presidential advisers believe they acted correctly during the failed coup, despite criticism from Congress that U.S. forces should have helped the rebels.

"There is nothing like 20-20 hindsight. Given what we know now about what was actually happening on the ground, then, I think I would not change what we did," Scowcroft said on the ABC-TV program, "This Week with David Brinkley."

Nearly a week after the incident, it was still not certain whether the rebels who seized Noriega's headquarters ever had him in custody, and they told the deputy U.S. commander in Panama, Maj. Gen. Marc Cisneros, that they would not hand him over, said Scowcroft.

"The rebels never asked us, indeed when we had that one meeting with General Cisneros, we asked them to give him, and they said, 'No,'" said Scowcroft. "At that point ... we had pretty good assurance that Noriega was in fact there."

The indication later Tuesday that Noriega was at his headquarters about 600 yards from the U.S. command center "changed the calculus of what we were prepared to do," and plans were laid to use non-uniformed U.S. forces to grab him, said Scowcroft.

Noriega has told reporters that he was never in custody and "the last thing he has said was that, no, he was never there," said Scowcroft.

Throughout the coup, said Scowcroft, the administration was in "the fog of war. ... You are operating without a full deck of intelligence information."

Congress no longer averse to using force to overthrow Noriega

An Analysis

By BRYNA BRENNAN

WASHINGTON (AP) — The congressional post-mortem over the U.S. role in the failed coup against Panama's Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega apparently reflects a widespread belief that U.S. troops could participate in a future bid to oust him.

"The United States retains the option to use American forces," but on a timetable determined by the administration, Secretary of State James A. Baker III told the Senate Finance Committee on the morning after the coup was crushed. He heard no objections from the senators seated across from him.

Sen. David Boren, Democratic chairman of the Senate Intelligence Committee, seemed incredulous about what had happened.

"And for the United States, with all of our strength and force and all of our belief in democracy, to stand by — two miles away as the crow flies — and do nothing, and allow these people to fail, personally I think is wrong," he said.

For years, any talk of U.S. intervention in Central America provoked a sharp debate about the use of force, a residue of the long and unpopular war in Vietnam.

Bitter disputes broke out on Capitol Hill when President Reagan decided to send military advisers to El Salvador in 1981.

It had been decided: The United States would not commit its sons to a prolonged war that would cost American lives.

A brief invasion into Grenada in 1983 in the Caribbean received popular support, but it was quick. Few lives were lost, and a leftist regime was ousted.

But it's clearly different in Panama, at least.

Three days after the coup failed, Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., declared, "We have had a definite, longstanding policy in this country of encouraging a coup. We should anticipate that our policy ... might succeed. Then we have to know what we're going to do next."

In the wake of the failed coup, the Senate approved Nunn's resolution that endorses the Bush administration's efforts to bring to democracy to Panama, including military options.

Tensions had reached a boiling point in Panama last year after simmering for years. American troops were systematically harassed by the Panamanian military but were under orders not to react.

Military sources say the former commander of the U.S. Southern Command, Gen. Frederick Woerner, was fired earlier this year after complaining the Bush administration lacked a clear-cut policy for Panama. The sources, speaking on the condition of anonymity, said Woerner was frustrated because he felt the administration and Congress weren't willing to back military action.

With that as a backdrop, it was notable that American troops took up positions around Panama City during last week's uprising, ostensibly as part of military exercises. Defense Secretary Dick Cheney said later the Marine and Army units that were in place probably would have been the ones used if a call to act had come from Washington.

But it never did. Hindsight versions point to a number of reasons, ranging from confusion and mistrust of the rebels, to the rebels' refusal to turn Noriega over to the United States and a lack of clear orders.

On Capitol Hill, Republicans and Democrats alike said the United States lost a key chance, and they seemed to be looking forward to another one.

"Once again we have snatched defeat from the jaws of victory, and I think its an outrage," said Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C.

Sen. Alfonse D'Amato, R-N.Y., among the many lawmakers faulting the Bush administration for failing to aid the uprising, said the United States had "botched" the handling of the coup.

Sen. Dennis DeConcini, D-Ariz., said: "In my opinion, we should be involved. We have the absolute unilateral right to use force."

The 1977 Panama Canal Treaties, which call on the United States to relinquish control of the American-built waterway at the end of the century, requires the United States to maintain the neutrality of the canal. A broad interpretation of those pacts could be used to condone the ouster of Noriega.

Chosen seed doesn't make 'Great Pumpkin'

HARVARD, Ill. (AP) — Larry Davidson lavished months of attention on one prickly vine in hopes of growing the Great Pumpkin, but was disappointed when plants he gave less water and manure produced greater gourds.

"I spend so much time pampering one plant and it doesn't cooperate," grumbled the owner of Larry Davidson & Sons Giant Pumpkins.

He had sheltered his favored seedling with a tent, warmed it with a space heater, encouraged it with a grow light, dumped 1,600 gallons of water on it and monitored it with a thermostat.

The chosen seed turned into a 250-pound pumpkin, but others on Davidson's eight-acre farm grew larger.

Davidson's biggest pumpkin ever, which weighed 347 pounds, grew on its own one year.

Hispanic commissioner may have abused special program

HOUSTON (AP) — A Hispanic city planning commissioner has earned at least $160,000 for his engineering company through procedures that may abuse a program designed to direct municipal business to minority-owned firms, a city official says.

According to court depositions given by planning commissioner D.V. "Sonny" Flores, the practices helped several non-minority construction firms earn millions of dollars in city contracts by satisfying minority business enterprise goals.

Lee Elliott Brown, director of the city's Affirmative Action and Contract Compliance Division, questioned the practices described by Flores and said the city would investigate his firm, Paragon Engineers & Constructors Inc., the Houston Chronicle reported Sunday.

In depositions taken last year, Flores said Paragon received commissions for buying materials from white-owned supply companies and passing them to white-owned construction firms.

The practice is called "brokering" and is prohibited in the city's minority business enterprise ordinance, the newspaper said.

Flores also testified he put employees of a white-owned construction company on Paragon's payroll while they worked on city projects. The depositions, obtained by the Chronicle, were taken in connection with a lawsuit Paragon filed against five former employees and associates.

"If what he says he has done is true, it totally violates the intent of the ordinance," said Ms. Brown, who oversees the program that was established to help businesses owned by women, minorities or disabled people obtain a greater share of city contracts.

But Flores said he has done nothing wrong.

"If Brown has a problem, let her come talk to me about it," Flores said. "I'm a good businessman."

Tex Mex Railroad workers clear up a four-car derailment Sunday afternoon in Laredo. The derailment happened Saturday, when the cars came off the tracks and struck part of a service station.

Station attendant flees train's derailment after sparks fly

LAREDO (AP) — A service station attendant said he was sitting alongside the railroad tracks near his station in downtown Laredo, visiting with three clients, when he heard "sparks flying from the rails."

"We all ran," said Francisco Marchan, 51, of Laredo, who narrowly escaped injury when three loaded grain cars on a 60-car Tex Mex Railroad train derailed about 7:15 p.m. Saturday near a busy intersection in central Laredo.

One of the cars already had jumped the tracks when he looked up, Marchan said. The derailment occurred as the train was en route to holding tracks, officials said.

Laredo Fire Chief Mike Perez said: "It could have been a catastrophe if the cars had been carrying hazardous materials. The gas station attendant was very lucky."

As one of the grain cars slid off the track and onto its side, the small Conoco gas station where Marchan worked was damaged. Power lines and a railroad traffic signal light also were knocked down during the derailment.

Perez speculated that the wet ground from rain on Saturday or the shifting weight of the cars could have caused the derailment.

A Tex Mex official on the scene said a crane probably would be brought in from Corpus Christi to remove the cars from the intersection of Corpus Christi and Marcella streets in Laredo.

Traffic was routed onto other streets because of the derailment, police said.

Utility officials were summoned to the scene because of a gas leak on a natural gas line, officials said. The gas line was capped until the derailed cars could be removed.

The train was arriving from Corpus Christi.

Reservist dies after jump into lake

DALLAS (AP) — A U.S. Army Green Beret reservist who was blown into a lake during a parachute jump died early Sunday, authorities said.

Sgt. Joseph M. Oney, 27, of San Antonio was submerged about 15 minutes Saturday in Mountain Creek Lake in southwest Dallas County, officials said.

Oney was pronounced dead at 2:49 a.m. Sunday at Methodist Medical Center, officials said.

He was attached to Company A, 2nd Battalion of the 12th Special Forces group based in Oklahoma City.

Oney was one of three men jumping from a CH-7 helicopter at 1,500 feet as part of a demonstration for the reunion of a World War II Rangers unit.

Fanciful FLIGHT

Tender Loving Care Keeps Old Flying Machines Aloft

The concept of flight fascinated mankind ages before the advent of the flying machine.

And in these days when airplanes, big and small, fast and slow, are about as commonplace as steeds and stagecoaches were last century, flight still captures the hearts — and fortunes — of men and women who have a flair aviation.

It is a romance.

Midland's Joe Mabee is enthralled with flight today and in the yesteryears. He has a particular fancy for extremely rare, and expensive, airplanes — warbirds — that were expressly designed for warring. His airplanes, such as the United States Army Air Corps' Curtiss P-40N Warhawk and the U.S. Navy's Grumman Wildcat, were put into World War II to carry out as many missions as possible ... until they were blasted out of the sky or the war ended.

Mabee has a veritable air museum that brilliantly expresses his fancy for antique aircraft and his zest for living in a first-class style.

Mabee, a Midland-based rancher, oilman, banker, philanthropist and aviator, has the wherewithal to experience flight as it was almost 50 years when aviation progress was catapulted by World War II.

"I have always been interested in airplanes every since I was a kid," said Mabee. "The first airplane I ever rode in was a Ford Tri-Motor in Kansas about 1936" when Mabee, now 58, was a child.

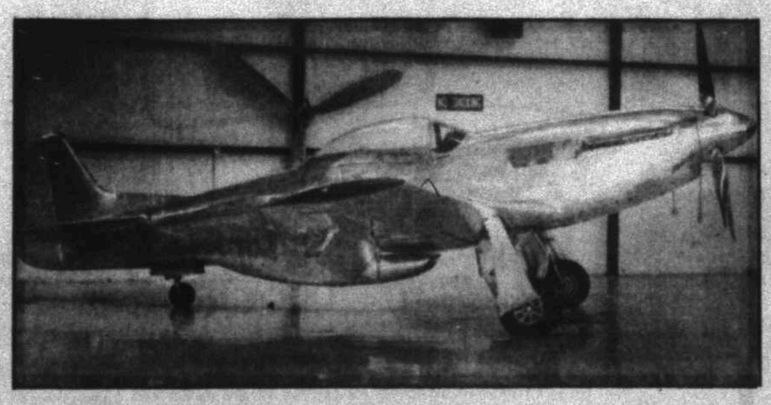

Mabee, who was too young to serve in World War II, does recall the exciting rumble, the scream and the sight of World War II fighters and bombers over West Texas where many pilots, bombardiers and other crew members were widely trained for the war effort.

Odessa investigator's removal linked to firm

ODESSA (AP) — Under pressure from a major synthetic rubber plant repeatedly fined for air pollution, Texas Air Control Board officials removed a relentless state investigator from the company's case, the Austin American-Statesman reports.

In a copyright story, the newspaper said state officials then doctored or dismissed six reports that the investigator filed during the summer, detailing additional pollution violations at the plant operated by Dynagen Inc., a General Tire subsidiary.

Air control board officials said they removed Odessa investigator Neil Carmen — whose work provided the backbone for $83,000 in fines against Dynagen during the past year — because Dynagen contended Carmen was biased.

However, the American-Statesman said, after the paper inquired about the case, reviewed thousands of documents and conducted dozens of interviews, board officials changed their mind last week.

They said the six Carman reports would be considered with two violation reports written by other investigators for possible new penalties against Dynagen.

"The agency attempted to cover up these violations by not pursuing them. They were just appeasing the company," Carman told the newspaper. "Now that it's being brought out, they're covering up the cover-up."

The American-Statesman report said the plant releases hundreds of tons of chemical pollutants into the air annually, including styrene and butadiene, both listed by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency as hazardous substances and suspected carcinogens.

Earlier this year, the EPA listed the Dynagen plant as one of 200 nationwide that pose a severe cancer risk.

Top air board officials all had high praise for investigator Carman's work. They contended that his removal wouldn't hurt enforcement efforts because other investigators in the Odessa office could handle complaints against Dynagen.

The newspaper said records and interviews "showed that Carman was the most willing member of the Odessa staff to respond promptly to late-night and weekend complaints about Dynagen." Promptness is essential since pollutants can quickly disperse in the desert, the paper said.

The newspaper also said Carman ultimately was told to ignore complaints about Dynagen that came in after hours or on weekends when he was the only one on duty.

"That's inappropriate if that's what happened. This sounds like a communication problem," said Air Control Board Director Eli Bell.

The Dynagen plant, part of a petrochemical complex along Interstate 20 south of Odessa, produces what it calls crumb rubber, a principal tire ingredient.

According to the American-Statesman report, Dynagen representatives began complaining about Carman in late 1988.

"Dynagen was frustrated and wondered why they should continue to review plant operations, since the perception of people at the plant was that no matter what they did Neil Carman always seemed to find something to cite them for," wrote air board lawyer Bill Zeis after talking to a company lawyer.

"I told him such zeal was commendable given the pattern of violations and that I was not aware of any specific errors" in Carman's reports, Zeis said.

In March, Dynagen plant manager Joe Mudd told plant employees the company had hired a lawyer to get Carman off the case, the newspaper said.

"He said we have hired a high-dollar attorney from Houston who will keep the Texas Air Control Board and Neil Carman out of the plant," said Ken Scheible, a Dynagen employee. Mudd declined to comment.

The Houston lawyer, Larry Feldcamp of the firm Baker & Botts, said he raised questions about Carman's objectivity and complained to air board officials about what he called inaccuracies in Carman's reports.

"What surprised me as their length (up to 50 pages). Two pages is the longest I usually see," said Feldcamp, who has practiced environmental law for 20 years.

But Feldcamp said he never was instructed to get Carman removed and never asked for such action. "Air board officials apparently thought of that themselves, records and interviews show," the Austin newspaper reported.

Miss Tracy Walla, of Columbus, Texas, is crowned Miss Columbus USA by her predecessor, Miss Traci Green, of Columbus, Ga., Saturday in Columbus, Ohio.

UT senior walks away with Columbus crown

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — A University of Texas senior won the title of Miss Columbus USA, a pageant for women from cities named Columbus across the country.

Tracy Walla, 21, Miss Columbus, Texas, was named Saturday night by Barrie Brandt, president of the Columbus USA Association. She was crowned by last year's winner, Traci Green of Columbus, Ga.

Miss Columbus, Ohio, Crystal Bozeman, 23, was not eligible to compete because she is from the host city.

Arnold Schwarzenegger, who was scheduled to crown the winner, was delayed on a flight out of Austria. He arrived late for the evening's festivities.

Ms. Walla is majoring in advertising and hopes to become an ad agency copywriter.

The pageant is part of the Columbus USA Weekend 1989 celebration. It is open to women aged 18 to 25. The women are judged on poise, personality, attitude, intelligence and beauty.

Eleven other women from Columbuses in Wisconsin, North Carolina, Montana, Indiana, Georgia, Kansas, New Jersey, North Dakota and Missouri and Columbus City and Columbus Junction in Iowa competed in the pageant.

NM farm bureau wants audit of USFS' wilderness celebration

LAS CRUCES, N.M. (AP) — The New Mexico Farm and Livestock Bureau says the U.S. Forest Service's recent Gila Wilderness celebration was one-sided and that an audit should be done of related expenses.

"Our main concern is that there didn't appear to be any efforts made to balance this program," said Erik Ness, director of public relations for the bureau. "If you're going to spend tax dollars, why not tell both sides of the story?"

The Farm Bureau is questioning why the government spent $35,000 on the Sept. 30 event at Western New Mexico University in Silver City. Some 3,000 people attended the celebration of the 25th anniversary of the federal Wilderness Act, which protects the Gila and other wilderness areas from most development.

The Farm Bureau opposes expansion of New Mexico's wilderness because of possible effects on water rights and mineral development.

A bureau news release issued two days before the event questioned the legality of the Forest Service spending money to support "private groups with heavy political agendas" and "extreme special interests."

4 expected to be charged in robbery

From Staff Reports

Four Midland men are expected to be charged today with the aggravated robbery of a convenience store early this morning.

According to reports, a clerk told officers the men entered the 7-Eleven store at the intersection of Florida Ave. and Terrell St. about 1:30 a.m. When the clerk refused to sell the men a 12-pack of beer, one of the men pulled a knife and the other grabbed a wine bottle and moved threateningly toward the clerk, reports said.

The men then sped away from the store, but were stopped by police in front of a residence in the 200 block of South Dallas Street. The suspects — 23, 20, 18, and 22 — were arrested without incident, according to reports.

TCU food drive hampered by sacks

FORT WORTH (AP) — A Texas Christian University fraternity says its food drive is a legitimate effort and apologized for any confusion caused by mislabeled collection sacks.

The men of Lambda Chi Alpha had passed out grocery sacks last week that they hoped would be filled with leftover canned goods. The charity drive was billed as a "Pantry Raid."

There was one major problem.

The sacks read: "Panty Raid."

But Lambda Chi member Bill Swope, a TCU junior, told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram that the fraternity wanted to encourage others to raid cupboards not dressers.

"We fixed some sacks but not all," he said. "We want people to know we are serious."

The fraternity was collecting the food Sunday.

BIRDS

By 1965, Mabee was flying civilian aircraft for business and pleasure. World War II had been over 20 years. And many of the old warbirds," which became instant surpluses and "dirt cheap" after the Axis Powers surrendered to the Allies, were summarily destroyed.

Many were dumped into the oceans from aircraft carriers. Others were dismembered, wrecked or smashed for junk aluminum and were cast into smelters for the market value of their metal. Some aircraft, just off the aircraft assembly lines or just returned from the European and Pacific Theaters, were sold for less than the value of the gasoline in their fuel tanks.

Most were scrapped.

Some of the more high-performance aircraft, such as the North American P-51D Mustang, the Lockheed P-38 Lightning, the Vought F4U Corsair, and the Boeing B-29 Superfortress, waged battles in post World War II conflicts and skirmishes. Transports, such as the Douglas C-47 Skytrain, were put into civilian service. Some bombers, such as the Boeing B-17 Flying Fortress and the North American B-25 Mitchell, were converted to executive aircraft but later were phased out. Old warbirds ended up in graveyards.

By 1975, like today, warbirds in most any condition were so rare as to be virtually invaluable.

And it was in 1975 that Mabee was thoroughly smitten by the warbird mystique.

That year, a crop duster who was spraying on the Mabee Ranch invited Mabee to fly in his P-51D Mustang, a single-engine fighter that had been fitted with a jump seat to carry a passenger.

"He gave me a ride in a P-51, and I have never been the same since," Mabee said. "I was hooked."

For aviators, the experience of flight stimulates life, as the pilot charges the throttle toward the fire wall and deftly maneuvers the aircraft with control stick (or yoke) and rudder pedals.

And, as Mabee is well aware, flying safely requires the exercise of skill and critical judgment, which is alluded to in this aviation truism: "Aviation in itself is not inherently dangerous, but to an even greater degree than the sea, (aviation) is exceeding unforgiving of any carelessness, incapacity, or neglect."

Mabee got the fever for the warbirds. He was smitten by the sight and sound of their rumbling pistons firing. He was moved — exhilarating — by the propeller blast. He was thrilled by the feel of the cockpit and all the horsepower at the pilot's command.

The next year, Mabee joined the Texas-based Confederate Air Force, an organization that is dedicated to preserving, in flying condition, the rare remnants of World War II aircraft.

Mabee, a congenial, down-to-earth West Texan, became the prime mover behind the CAF's West Texas Wing and its Desert Squadron.

Before the decade of the 1970s was rounded out, Mabee, who is a colonel in the CAF, had started his collection of restored aircraft and planes that are in bits and pieces.

Mabee's private collection of warbirds includes:

- The Curtiss P-40N Warhawk fighter.
- The North American P-51D Mustang fighter.
- The Grumman Wildcat fighter.
- The Grumman Hellcat fighter.
- The Grumman Avenger torpedo bomber.
- The Beechcraft AT-11 bomber trainer.
- The North American Harvard, a Royal Canadian Air Force version of the AT-6 Texan trainer.

In addition, Mabee owns two Beechcraft T-34 Mentors, which are post-war straight-tail military versions of Beechcraft's famous V-tail Bonanza.

His restored Warhawk, painted in olive drab and bearing the Flying Tigers' markings, is "easy to fly once you get it off the ground" and is "lighter on the controls" than the more powerful Mustang. The Warhawk is a "more pleasant airplane to fly," Mabee said.

The P-40 Warhawk is powered by an in-line Allison 1,460-horsepower engine, which drives a three-bladed propeller. The Mustang is powered by a more powerful V-12 Rolls-Royce Merlin engine, which drives a four-bladed propeller.

The Warhawk, Mustang, Wildcat, Harvard and the two Mentors are all airworthy and are in exquisite condition. The Avenger, which is the type of aircraft President George H.W. Bush flew in World War II, the Hellcat and the AT-11 are in the process of being restored by Mabee's aircraft mechanic-pilot, Ken Shugart.

His Wildcat, which was restored over a 10-year period by two Chicago tool-and-die makers, won the "Best Warbird" award in an Experimental Aircraft Association (EAA) annual fly-in.

Mabee bought the mid-wing Wildcat in the early 1980s after the Chicago restorers of the airplane "got too old to fly it," Mabee reckoned.

"A lot of people think that this (his Wildcat) is the best-restored warbird in the world," said Mabee. "Period."

Mabee's Wildcat is powered by a Wright Cyclone radial engine.

In addition to his warbirds, Mabee hangars a warehouse of World War II airplane parts — from propellers and engines to rivets and tail-wheels. And he stores some CAF aircrafts and parts, such as major pieces of the British Seafire, the aircraft-carrier version of the famous land-based Spitfire of Battle-of-Britain fame. The CAF's Seafire, which features counter-rotating propellers, "someday will be put into the air," Mabee said. "I have seen them start with a lot less. We have got all of the big chunks," including the fuselage, wings and tail.

And pre-war, war, and post-war memorabilia reflects his interests in aviation and history: posters of the Wright Brothers Flyer and of The Lone Eagle, Charles A. Lindbergh, war propaganda posters, and flags and emblems, such as Old Glory, the Nazi Swastika, Japan's Rising Sun, and, particularly dear to Mabee, the Confederate Air Force's flag and symbols.

Mabee, who is a member of the CAF's governing General Staff, is helping to engineer a campaign to move the CAF headquarters and Flying Museum from Harlingen in South Texas to Midland International Airport. Dedication of CAF headquarters and Flying Museum would be on Dec. 7, 1991, on the 50th anniversary of the attack on Pearl Harbor and of the United States' entry into World War II.

CAF colonels will vote on the proposed move to Midland this Friday at the CAF's AirSho'89 in Harlingen.

"Joe (Mabee) is Midland's hero regardless of how this (campaign) turns out," noted Pat Day, who is a CAF colonel, pilot and operator of Skywest Airport near Midland.

While Mabee continues to expand his collection of "warbirds," he is assured that his airplanes eventually will be in museum collections.

"They will end up in some museum, I am sure, somewhere," Mabee said, "hopefully in the Confederate Air Force Museum in Midland, Texas."

Two Amarillo residents injured in plane crash

AMARILLO (AP) — Two Amarillo area residents were injured when their plane clipped a fence and crashed during a landing in Randall County, authorities said.

The plane had just taken off from a private airstrip Sunday when it went out of control, one of its occupants told the Department of Public Safety.

The occupants, John Wellborn, 64, and Myrtle McKinney, 60, were taken to St. Anthony's Hospital. McKinney was treated and released. Wellborn was in satisfactory condition.

Wellborn told DPS the plane began to turn on its own and he tried to land, DPS trooper John Salter said.

"It looks like he was in a continual left turn," Salter said.

Cousins die in house fire

LONGVIEW (AP) — Two young cousins died in a house fire that may have started in a gas space heater.

Authorities identified the victims as Steven Scott Currier, 3, and George Randall Henderson, 2.

Currier's mother and stepfather were at home when the fire broke out Sunday morning, Longview Fire Department investigator Phillip Mauldin said. But stepfather Michael O'Brien's attempts to the rescue the toddlers failed, Mauldin said.

Man killed in collision between truck, train

BELTON, Texas (AP) — One man died today after a soft drink delivery truck collided with a train northwest of Belton, derailing at least one locomotive, authorities said.

The Bell County sheriff's office said the Santa Fe train slammed into the truck about 9:52 a.m. at a crossing at FM 93. Officials did not immediately disclose the truck driver's name, pending notification of his family.

One of the locomotives was pushed off the tracks during the accident and Santa Fe crews worked to clear the tracks, said railroad spokeswoman Susan Metcalf.

The latest fatality pushed the number of deaths in train-vehicle accidents in Texas to five in less than 24 hours.

Overload may be key issue for women in 1990s

'Having it all' at the same time may be wrong goal to work toward

By JANE CLIFFORD
Copley News Service

As women enter the '90s, life seems to be a perpetual good news/bad news joke. The good news: Women can have it all. The bad news: They're still trying to.

"Overload is the issue for women in the '90s," said Marjorie Shaevitz, author of "Superwoman Syndrome," during a recent interview.

"We've brought a kind of perfectionism to our lives. We want to be the best worker, best friend, best mother, best daughter, best sister, best fund-raiser, best PTA person, best wife ... There's plenty of time to experience all those roles — just not at the same time."

Shaevitz says the situation is worse now than it was five years ago when she identified this superwoman in her best-selling book. But the potential for "getting better" is good.

Women are more aware of the problem, she says, and the next step is action.

"On the one hand," she said, "we know in our heart of hearts what's wrong, but on the other hand, I think we're scared to change.... We think that if we let up for a minute, it will all fall apart."

IT WON'T, says Shaevitz, a marriage and family counselor and partner with her husband, Mort, in the Institute for Family and Work Relationships in California. She has helped women learn how to juggle the demands in their lives. And, as a self-described "recovering superwoman," she has applied the same techniques to her own life.

She's developed a basic, five-step plan:

■ Sort out your priorities and make your behaviors match them.

Work is a given for Shaevitz; but her husband, her children and her parents are at the top of her list, so she makes sure there is time for them. Exercise is also important, and she makes time for that, too. By forcing herself to analyze her schedule, she was able to devise a way to combine priorities. She takes an hour-and-a-half walk daily — and takes one of the children with her.

■ Never, ever say yes to anyone who asks for your time and energy without thinking about it first.

Shaevitz says that whenever anyone used to ask her to help on this project or stop by for that cup of coffee, she was reluctant to say no.

"I found a way to do it," she recalls. "I twisted myself like a pretzel."

Many women say yes, she believes, even when they want to say no, because they don't want to hurt the other person's feelings. Shaevitz attributes it to socialization — women learn to care for others, sometimes at their own expense.

"Now I say not 'Can I do it?' but 'Do I choose to do it?'"

■ Take a look at how you spend your time.

"We must stop jumping to everyone's needs," Shaevitz urges. "We must limit the time spent on unimportant people, events and things that don't count."

She suggests evaluating every invitation and opportunity on a scale of one to 10. Ask yourself first, how much do you want to do this particular thing and, second, how important is it? The answers should help you sort out the demands on you, leaving time for what you decide really matters in your life.

SHE SAYS this is particularly important for single women:

"We've brought a kind of perfectionism to our lives. We want to be the best worker, best friend, best mother, best daughter, best sister, best fund-raiser, best PTA person, best wife ... There's plenty of time to experience all those roles — just not at the same time."

——— Marjorie Shaevitz, author of "Superwoman Syndrome"

"Essentially they feel they have no excuses. They believe they must be totally available to everyone who needs them since they don't have husbands or children making demands on them."

■ Take better care of yourself.

Many women, Shaevitz says, brush off the feeling of being tired, exhausted, even slightly ill.

"We accept as normal an overwhelming, crazy lifestyle ... We've forgotten how to relax and have fun. We make sure others eat well and get enough sleep, but we don't."

She urges women to practice what they preach: Exercise to relieve stress, even something as simple as a walk. Eat right; stop jumping up and down from the table to serve everyone else's second helpings — let them get their own. Get up earlier to eat breakfast and have some time alone. Don't work through lunch; it's another opportunity to clear your head.

■ Whenever possible, buy it, barter it, hire it out, delegate it.

In other words, stop doing it all yourself.

"Of all the areas where the '90s woman needs control, it's home. Our personal lives are out of control."

She says women need to become more adept at applying the savvy they use in the workplace to running their homes. Some of the skills work well on both fronts.

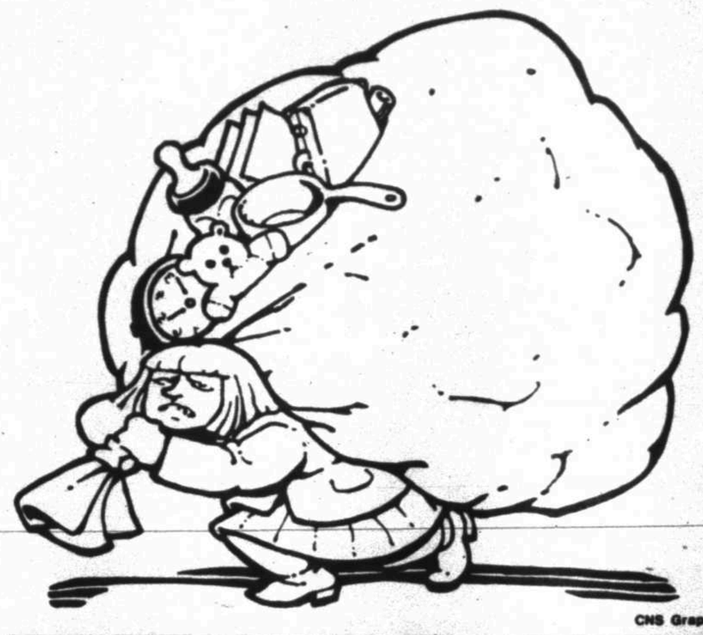

SHE ENCOURAGES single mothers, especially, to take advantage of the barter concept. They need a break as sole caretaker of their children but often can't afford the luxury of a baby sitter. Shaevitz suggests striking a deal with other mothers to trade off child care. They win time alone and it doesn't cost them financially.

Women who are able to implement these changes, Shaevitz says, can look forward to no longer feeling sick, angry and overwhelmed all the time.

"It's terribly difficult to stop what you're doing, to take time to make an assessment," she acknowledges.

She knows that, for the superwoman, the thought of making life changes becomes just one more thing on the to-do list.

"But what's the alternative?" Shaevitz prompts. "If I can change, so can everyone else. I was the worst example of the superwoman."

IT'S TIME FOR YOUR ANNUAL CHECKUP

Your natural gas furnace has been sitting quietly all summer, waiting for the time that it's really needed. And like anything that's been idle awhile, your furnace needs a checkup before it starts to work.

For another winter of worry-free, low-cost heat for your home, be sure the entire checklist below has been followed. Although you can perform some of the checkup yourself, we recommend you have your furnace inspected by a qualified professional heating contractor. Do it now, before heating season gets here.

Here is the checklist that any qualified heating professional will follow:

- ✓ Check the exhaust vent for rust and corrosion.
- ✓ Clean and replace the air filter.
- ✓ If your furnace has a blower belt, replace it if it is cracked or frayed.
- ✓ Lubricate the furnace motor. Newer models have sealed motors and do not require lubricating.
- ✓ Light the pilot light.
- ✓ Perform a carbon monoxide test.
- ✓ Conduct a complete safety inspection.
- ✓ Be certain there are no materials of any kind stored in the furnace closet.

When properly cared for, your natural gas furnace will continue to provide years and years of low maintenance cost-efficient comfort for you and your family. Get your checkup done early and avoid the crunch when that first Northern storm blows in!

A safety message from your friends at Energas Company.

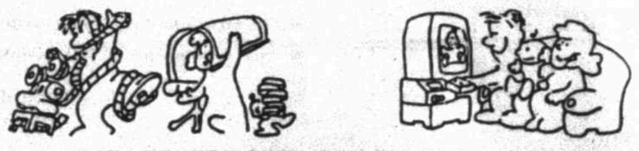

SPECIAL SAFETY TIPS FOR FLOOR FURNACES

1. The grate of a floor furnace can get very hot. Don't touch it, and particularly don't walk on it barefooted.
2. Keep young children from playing on the floor furnace.
3. During heating season, keep open any door between the floor furnace and the room where the thermostat is located.
4. Do not put a rug, carpet, or piece of furniture over a floor furnace. Keep it uncovered at all times during the heating season.

Relocation may help species survive

Copley News Service

East Africa's chimpanzees, gorillas and other primate species may have to move to new habitats or die, says anthropologist and University of California at San Diego Professor Shirley Strum.

While poachers have decimated some African animal populations, such as elephants and rhinoceroses, increasingly, many primate species in East Africa are threatened with shrinking habitats as the human population claims more land for farming and homes.

Strum, one of the world's foremost experts on baboon behavior, said relocating animals to other parts of Africa may be the best strategy for ensuring their survival.

Strum speaks from experience. Faced with losing the habitat of a baboon troop she called the "Pump House Gang," Strum moved more than 50 baboons from one cattle ranch outside Nairobi, Kenya, to another.

Conservationists call the practice "translocation."

"Until I did baboon translocation I think no one understood it could be done for primates," Strum said. "If it wouldn't work with baboons, it wouldn't work with any other primate."

Keeping animals in the wild rather than relocating them to zoos is especially important for primate species such as chimpanzees, baboons and gorillas, Strum emphasizes. Primates, which are ancestral to modern humans, have complex social behaviors that are often lost in captivity, she said.

"It's a new direction," Strum said in an interview before returning to Kenya recently. "It's the beginning of a movement recognizing that we could lose so many species."

UNDER THE pressure of burgeoning human populations, Strum said, "The challenge is to see whether it is possible to have a happy marriage between animal and human rights."

In recent years, various ways have been suggested for protecting African animals. Some have suggesting building fences around preserves. Others have suggested allowing limited hunting of animals on preserves as an incentive for local Africans to take an interest in protecting the animals until the time of a hunt.

But Strum's reputation, built upon nearly two decades of studying baboon behavior in the bush, is drawing attention to the possibility of further translocation.

She cited the DeBrazza monkey as one candidate species for relocation within central Africa. Already, she said, rhinos have been translocated within Kenya.

Translocation has been tried with 90 species of mammals and birds in the United States, Canada, Australia and New Zealand from 1973 to 1986. A study of those efforts showed that the greater the number of animals in the group being moved, the greater their chance of survival.

Strum said it is important to try the relocations now rather than wait until only a few members of a species remain and then place them in zoos.

"The problem with conservation is it has done one last stand after the other," Strum said.

She said her interest in conservation is a natural evolution from her work with the Pump House Gang, a baboon troop known for hanging around a pump house on the ranch land where they lived.

Her research with the Pump House Gang showed, among other things, that it was the friendly, cunning and helpful male — not the aggressive one — that was more apt to win the female. At the time, it was often assumed that aggression was an advantage.

STRUM BROKE new ground again when she was forced to move the troop and demonstrated that translocation could work.

In 1984, as the Pump House Gang was about to be chased off the ranch, Strum found a nearby ranch owner who would accept the animals on his property. The elaborate relocation effort ended successfully with the gang mixing with baboons in the new area. There was food and range enough for all, matters Strum assessed carefully before initiating the move.

For weeks in advance of the move, Strum placed open cages baited with food near the baboons so they would become used to them. The animals grew so comfortable with the cages that some climbed on them and some mated in them.

Finally, she set the traps and the cage doors clanked shut. The animals were sedated and driven on a truck to the new ranch.

There, she kept the males caged, but released the females and infants. She hoped the females would not wander far from the males and she sought as well to keep the females nearby by scattering food in the vicinity.

Strum hoped that the females would learn the new territory and that the males would then be more inclined to stay on that range once they were released.

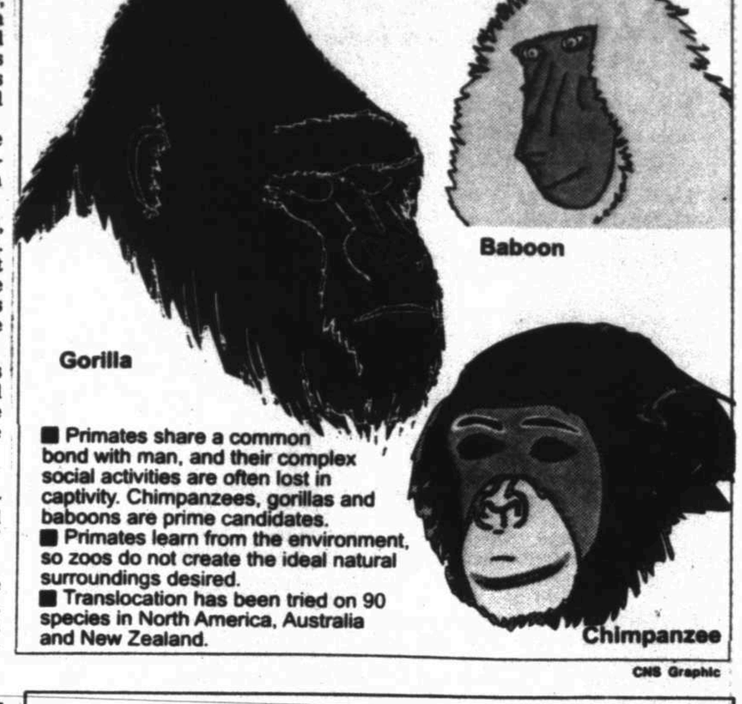

The procedure worked.

"There wasn't any adverse consequence," Strum said. "And they did integrate with the local population."

TRANSLOCATION SAVES the expense of moving animals to a zoo, but more important, it keeps them where they can behave and propagate more normally, Strum said.

Candidates for translocation

As more and more of the earth's species border on extinction, conservationists grapple for solutions. One method involves moving groups of animals to more hospitable locations.

- Primates share a common bond with man, and their complex social activities are often lost in captivity. Chimpanzees, gorillas and baboons are prime candidates.
- Primates learn from the environment, so zoos do not create the ideal natural surroundings desired.
- Translocation has been tried on 90 species in North America, Australia and New Zealand.

DEAR ABBY

Lost children should stay put if they want to be found

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: You recently had a letter voicing concerns about children losing their way in the woods or campgrounds. You suggested that they should always carry a whistle, which is fine, but parents can take a few more steps to keep their children safe.

One of them is called "Hug a Tree." This is a program founded by Abe Taylor, a retired U.S. border patrolman who is an expert "tracker." He honed his talents to such an extent that the National Parks and Recreation Agency held special training sessions with Taylor to assist their agents in finding people who had lost their way in our deserts, mountains and forests.

Mr. Taylor and other volunteers carry this lifesaving message to children in our schools and summer camps: "Hug a tree, if you suddenly realize that you have lost your way. Sit still; trackers will find you! All children should have a whistle, and in their pocket — folded and kept as an emergency item — a PLASTIC TRASH BAG to be stepped into and pulled up ONLY TO THE CHILD'S NECK, AND NEVER OVER THEIR HEAD, to protect them from exposure to the chill of the night. And no one, child or adult, should go hiking without taking along a 'buddy.'"

Family outings are great fun, but many end in tragedy because the areas do not appear sinister (they have brooks, trees, small animals, birds, picnic tables, etc.). Because of the friendly atmosphere, we all tend to let our guard down.

"Get Lost — Hug a Tree" is easy for a child to remember, and it's recommended for adults, too! — MURIEL C. WATSON, BONITA, CALIF.

DEAR MURIEL: And a hug for you, Ms. Watson, for sharing the excellent lifesaving suggestions for campers.

DEAR ABBY: Two years ago our son was killed in an accident. He left a wife and two sons, ages 4 and 6. Within a year, his wife (I'll call her Jane) met a man who moved in with her, and our grandsons started calling him "Daddy." We begged Jane not to let the boys call this man "Daddy" because we felt there was no lasting commitment in that relationship and never would be. Jane had told us that she had no intentions of marrying again because she'd lose the $500 a month in Social Security she gets as a widow.

Meanwhile, my husband and I were always there for Jane and the boys, and we kept our grandsons every weekend we could get them.

Three months ago, "Daddy" left Jane and she started to drink too much. Last weekend we had the boys, and when we brought them back on Sunday evening, Jane came to the door very disheveled with a swollen lip and dark glasses. She looked as though she had been in a fight. When I asked what happened to her, she went totally out of control and struck me! I hated to leave the boys with her, but since she was so hostile, I didn't want to start anything in front of the boys, so I left.

Now Jane refuses to let us see our grandsons. When I call her, she hangs up on me. We do not want a public court battle, but we worry about our grandsons. We are desperate. What should we do? — KEEP ME ANONYMOUS

DEAR ANONYMOUS: Discuss this with your lawyer immediately, and follow his or her advice. Please do not delay, for the sake of your grandchildren. Jane is not a fit mother, and your grandsons need to be protected.

DEAR ABBY: I've been married for a year and a half to a man who is good-looking, hard-working and has a nice personality.

The problem is his use of the English language. He says, "I ain't got none," and, "They don't got no time."

Abby, I was reared in a family where good English was stressed. My parents would never let any of us children get away with using poor grammar. We were corrected immediately if we made a mistake. I am glad now because I know how important correct grammar is in social situations, as well as in the business world.

I never noticed how poor my husband's grammar was before we were married, but now it's driving me crazy! I am embarrassed before my friends and family.

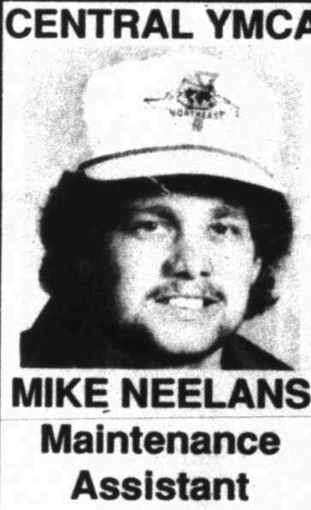

What would you do? Please don't blow this off and say, "Well, if you love him, you'll accept his faults." I can't see myself spending the rest of my life being embarrassed this way. — IN LOVE

DEAR IN LOVE: Tell your husband exactly what you have told me. If he agrees to "learn" to speak correctly, he must enroll in an adult-education program or arrange for private tutoring. If he is not willing to learn — for his sake or yours — then feeling as you do, your marriage is doomed. I recommend counseling.

"How to Be Popular" is for everyone who feels left out and wants an improved social life. It's an excellent guide to becoming a better conversationalist and a more attractive person. To order, send your name and address plus check or money order for $2.89 ($3.39 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Popularity Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054.

It's all over for Blue Jays; Cubs close to elimination

Henderson Oakland's spark plug

TORONTO (AP) — Rickey Henderson ran over the Blue Jays and now Oakland is ready to make up for last year.

Henderson hit, Henderson ran and Henderson was named Most Valauble Player as Oakland beat Toronto 4-3 Sunday to win the American League playoffs in five games. The Athletics became the first league champion to repeat since the New York Yankees and Los Angeles Dodgers did it in 1978.

"We did not want to be complacent because of last year's success," A's manager Tony La Russa said. "Sometimes you don't repeat because you back off. I hope people realize how special this team is to have repeated."

Oakland added Mike Moore to the pitching staff, signing the right-hander last December for $3.95 million over three years. And on June 20, the A's reacquired Henderson in a trade with the New York Yankees.

"They're a real good team," Blue Jays manager Cito Gaston said. "I guess they stack up pretty close to that great Cincinnati team in 1976."

The Reds won the World Series in 1975 and 1976. This group of A's lost the World Series last year in five games against Los Angeles.

"We left last year behind us and we're just going ahead," said Dave Stewart, who allowed two runs and eight hits in eight-plus innings in winning his second game of the series.

Oakland was favored to beat the Dodgers last year and was one out away from winning Game 1. But Dennis Eckersley walked Mike Davis and injured slugger Kirk Gibson hobbled out to hit a dramatic pinch-hit home run and the Dodgers were on their way.

"I think just the experience from last year should help," Eckersley said. "Everybody got sky high" after beating Boston in the AL playoffs.

The memory of the loss to Los Angeles remains. The struggle for Oakland is to put it behind.

"One of our goals in spring training was to repeat," Mark McGwire said. "Last year's loss in the World Series is done and over with. People who live in the past shouldn't."

It was the 14th AL title for the Athletics and fifth since the club moved to Oakland. Last year's pennant winner is remembered for the Bash Brothers, Jose Canseco and McGwire. This pennant-winning team will be remembered for Henderson.

"One player. Rickey Henderson. That was the difference," Toronto's Mookie Wilson said.

Henderson stole eight bases, a postseason record, and wasn't caught. He hit .400, going 6-for-15. Add seven walks and he reached base 14 times in 23 plate appearances. He scored eight of Oakland's 26 runs and drove in five. He homered twice and also had a double and a triple.

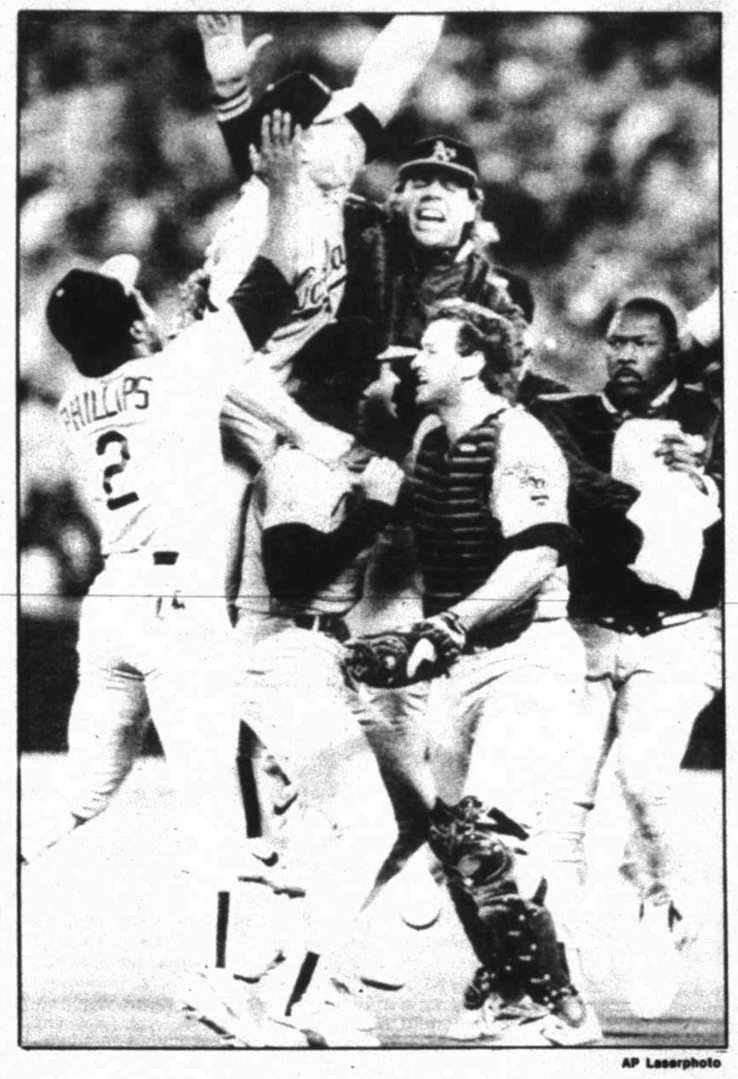

"I can't say I surprised myself," said Henderson, the only A's player who lives in Oakland. "They call it the money players. I guess I'm one of the money players, one of the guys who wants to be there when it counts."

He seemed exhuberant in the Oakland clubhouse as teammates sprayed him with champagne.

"Ten years I've been waiting for this," he said. "It's the best thing that's happened to me in my career."

During his time in New York with the Yankees, he often seemed sullen. When he was injured, it was interpreted as malingering. Now, with the spotlight shining on him, he showed how great he can be.

...more than ready to make up for last year

Giants one win away from Series

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Matt Williams and Kelly Downs were supposed to blossom into Mike Schmidt and Cy Young last spring. Instead they turned into Phoenix Firebirds.

But on a memorable Sunday night in October, the two lived up to all expectations and then some.

Williams had "the best at-bat of my life" — resulting in a game-winning, two-run homer — and set a National League playoff record for RBIs in a series with nine. Downs pitched four shutout innings in the best clutch performance of his career, getting credit for San Francisco's 6-4 victory over Chicago.

In a series long on heroics and short on pitching, it was the two late bloomers, along with Will Clark, who gave the Giants a 3-1 lead in the best-of-seven series going into Game 5 this afternoon. That left the Cubs to practice their best visualization techniques in a bid to escape back to their own friendly confines.

"If we get back to Wrigley, who knows what can happen?" Chicago reliever Steve Wilson, the Game 4 loser, ventured hopefully.

Candlestick Park, site of many past frustrations for Williams and Downs, was finally their field of dreams.

The first time the Cubs flew into San Francisco this season, on May 1, Williams flew out with an embarrassing .130 batting average and a demotion to Class AAA Phoenix. Now he's a main reason the Cubs may be going home early and without a World Series berth for the 44th consecutive year.

"You dream of things like this," the 23-year-old Californian said. "You want to be the guy that's carrying the team.

"In the last couple of years, I haven't had a lot of good feelings. I didn't know if it (major-league success) was a reality or not."

There's never been any question that Williams could hit the long ball or field almost everything hit his way cleanly. It's the 'C' problems that have plagued him — contact, curveballs and confidence. He still has far more strikeouts with the Giants than hits (181-137), and breaking-ball woes have limited his career batting average to .198.

Handed the starting third base job in spring training, he hit his second career grand slam opening week in Cincinnati but otherwise muttered his way through an exasperating April.

Three months in Phoenix, his off-season home, did wonders for the former All-American shortstop out of Nevada-Las Vegas. Twenty homers and a .320 average later, he was back with San Francisco and a much-improved member of the league's most feared 3-4-5 combo along with Clark and Kevin Mitchell.

He fouled off five pitches in a row in his dramatic 12-pitch duel with Wilson in the fifth inning Sunday night. Then he devoured his favorite dish: a fastball on the plate. The line shot over the fence in left was his 46th homer of the season, including Phoenix and two in the playoffs.

"Matt Williams is going to be something to watch during the next few years," Giants manager Roger Craig said. "I can't say enough about what he has done for the ballclub since he came back from Phoenix, both defensively and offensively."

Downs, picked by one national publication to win the NL Cy Young Award, was having his own fantasies as he relieved Scott Garrelts with the game tied 4-4. He was relegated to relief down the stretch in 1987 and pitched only once in the playoff series with St. Louis, so this is his chance for redemption.

Green Bay's Sterling Sharp (84) pulls out of the grasp of Dallas' Ray Horton for a 79-yard TD reception from quarterback Don Majkowski, who threw four touchdown passes against Dallas.

Patriots upset Oilers

FOXBORO, Mass. (AP) — John Stephens couldn't wait to play again. New England couldn't wait much longer to win again.

A fired-up Stephens charged back into action on his healed left ankle in time to revitalize a Patriots' season that was quickly dying amid an epidemic of injuries and poor performances.

His running, New England's best defensive game of the season and Greg Davis' three field goals gave the Patriots a 23-13 upset over Houston's high-powered Oilers and stopped a three-game losing streak Sunday.

The Patriots began the game with a 1-3 record and fading playoff hopes.

"This was a burning building and we had to put some water on it or we'd be living outside," New England defensive end Ken Sims said.

"This was a game they had to have," Houston quarterback Warren Moon said.

And the Patriots had to have Stephens.

"Other guys can do the job," tackle Bruce Armstrong said, "but he's our Pro Bowl back."

An ankle injury had sidelined Stephens the previous two games. Without last season's second leading AFC

Packers don't even need comeback to beat winless Dallas

GREEN BAY, Wis. (AP) — This time there was no staggering halftime deficit to overcome, no miraculous rally needed.

The Green Bay Packers, for a month the king of NFL comebacks, went ahead just before the half Sunday on a 79-yard touchdown pass from Don Majkowski to Sterling Sharpe.

And given than uncommon feeling of being in front — they had trailed at the half in each of their first four games — the Packers went on to a 31-13 victory over the winless Dallas Cowboys.

"We had to see if we could hang onto a lead because we hadn't been in that position before," said coach Lindy Infante. "We didn't know how to act."

So how will his team act with a 3-2 record, the Packers' best through five games since 1983? A year ago they were 0-5, just as the struggling Cowboys are now.

Majkowski, who had his third 300-yard passing game in the last month to go with four touchdown passes, says it's something that has been building since last season.

"We knew we would be more competitive this year and we're improving. We've taken another step forward and we're on a nice roll," he said after completing 21 of 32 passes for 313 yards with no interceptions. He'd thrown nine in the first four games.

"The biggest difference is the mental aspect. Everyone knows much more about what we're doing. We're eliminating mistakes, making bigger plays," he said.

That's added up to an offense that is leading the NFL in yardage per game, a standing that was not hurt Sunday when the Packers rolled up 501 yards, their most since 1985. Brent Fullwood led the Packer rushers with 119 yards on 28 carries.

"We know what we're doing a lot better this year."

Raiders always find Jones Stadium phone booth

Texas Tech's "Fourth Street Miracle" Saturday at Jones Stadium over the No. 19 ranked Texas A&M Aggies was just another example of home carpet heroics for the "Black Attack."

Williamson

The truth is, when playing at home, the Red Raiders play like caged gorillas. On the road, they sometimes look as average as is their overall talent.

Still, you get the impression that when Tech is at home, just about anything can happen. Tech has three of its four victories at home, including wins over Arizona and A&M, both of which carried Top 20 rankings into the Jones Stadium graveyard.

Why is Tech so good at home? That is the question that begs for an answer and the Red Raiders don't seem to have a good answer.

Tech head coach Spike Dykes, who guided Lee to the state 5A finals in 1983, doesn't know the answer and doesn't particularly want to know.

"I don't know why these kids play the way they do at home," said Dykes. "I just hope it continues to hold true. But I will say one thing — our fans give us a really big boost. We were down 24-14 mid-way through the fourth quarter and things were looking pretty bleak, but our fans were on their feet. They never got out of the game and that really helped us."

Not only does the Jones Stadium advantage seem to spark the Raiders, but it also seems to have a healing quality. The hero of the day was Wink's Travis Price, who caught two fourth quarter touchdowns from quarterback Jamie Gill to produce the win.

Price wasn't even supposed to play. He injured an ankle against Baylor and didn't practice until Friday. Dykes said he didn't think Price would play at all.

"We didn't think he could cut on that ankle," said Dykes. "We didn't even let him do any cutting moves on Friday when he worked out. I thought he was out. That just shows you how smart I am. Look at him over there. He doesn't look like he's hurting."

Dykes kept Price on the bench at the start of the game, but he got him on the field in the nick of time.

"He told me before the game that he could play if he was needed," said Dykes. "Obviously, we needed him. He's a game player. I asked him how much room he had toward the sideline when he caught the touchdown pass and he said, 'Plenty, there was about six inches to spare.'"

Price, prior to his first TD reception, dropped a pass right in his bread basket that killed a first down chance for Tech.

"I was really down after I dropped that pass," said Price. "I knew I had to catch the next one."

Price, too, can't explain why Tech is so good at Jones Stadium.

"I can't understand it. I've been trying to figure that out for three years. But I do know it's fun to play for the crowds here. It's just like we have a feeling we can't lose here. Even when we are behind, the team just goes about its business. There is never any panic."

Another big factor in Tech's win that won't get much notice is the fact that All-America defensive star Aaron Wallace of A&M didn't have much of an impact on the game. His name was rarely heard through the day.

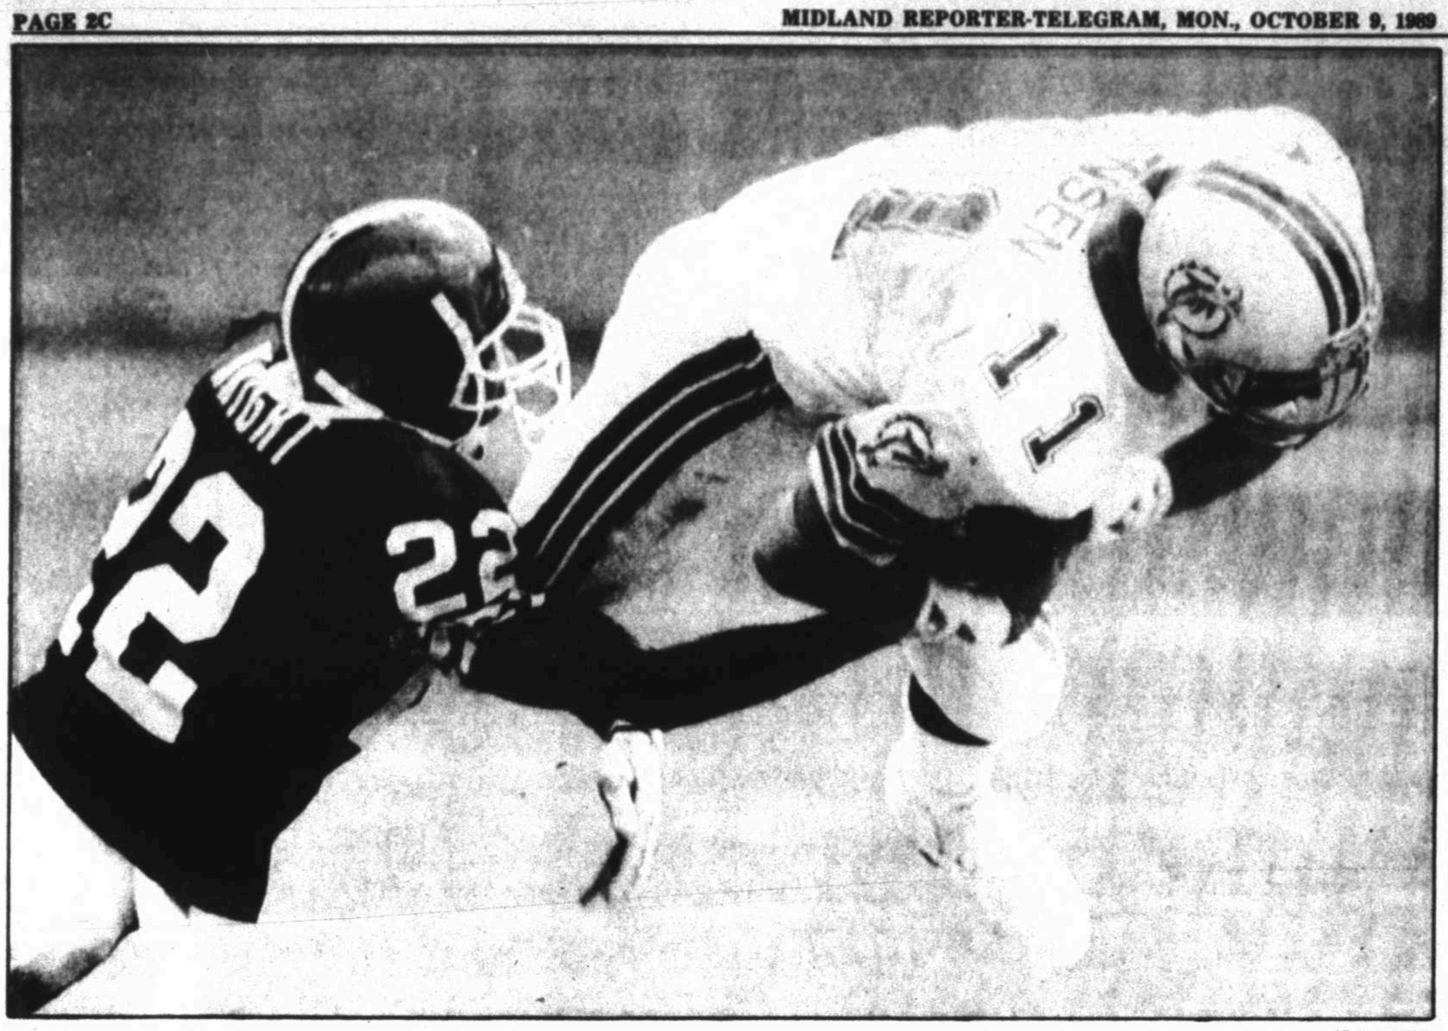

"Well, Wallace is a great athlete. There is no doubt about that," said Dykes. "But we had (280-pound offensive tackle) Charles Odiorne blocking on him. I know we have a bunch of kids stranded out here in Lubbock that no one has ever heard of, but I tell you that Odiorne is an exceptional football player. He is truly one of our players who could play with any team in the country. It's just that no one much knows about him."

The Jones Stadium test isn't over. Tech hosts Arkansas Saturday and the Hogs come calling as a Top 10 ranked squad.

If you try to match up position-by-position the Tech players against A&M and Arkansas, you would have to say that Tech couldn't win. But something seems to happen to the black-clad Raiders when playing at Jones Stadium. In fact, there must be a phone booth on Lubbock's Fourth Street. Superman always had his phone booth nearby.

And that, folks, has to be the real reason why Tech does the monster mash at home.

Rams hope for Christmas peak

Tampa Bay knocks Chicago from undefeated list

Associated Press

The Los Angeles Rams, at the top of the NFL after five weeks, hope they aren't peaking too soon. Recent history would support that fear, lest anyone figure on making early Super Bowl plans.

"We're not some juggernaut," Coach John Robinson said Sunday after the Rams beat the Atlanta Falcons 26-14 to remain the only unbeaten team in the league.

While they may not have Super Bowl fever, the Rams have a holiday spirit.

"We want to peak at Christmas," said Jim Everett, who threw for 290 yards and two touchdowns to enhance his league-leading passing numbers.

The Rams, who hold a one-game lead over the San Francisco 49ers in the NFC West, are no strangers to fast starts.

They were 4-0 last season, but played only .500 the rest of the way. In the pre-strike 1986 season, they won their first three games before going 7-6 in the final 13.

In both seasons, they were eliminated in their opening playoff game. So much for the Super Bowl.

"We're just a bunch of guys playing good right now," Robinson said. "But it's too early."

The Rams assumed sole possession of the penthouse when the Tampa Bay Buccaneers upset the Chicago Bears 42-35 and the Philadelphia Eagles edged the New York Giants 21-19.

Perhaps most important to the Rams than the unbeaten record is maintaining perspective in the face of perfection.

"We played a heck of a game but we still didn't play to our potential," cornerback Jerry Gray said. "I'm afraid to see what would happen if we do play to our full potential."

His backfield partner, LeRoy Irvin, also is cautious.

"We're not playing championship-caliber football right now," Irvin said.

If not, they're fooling somebody who should know by now.

"They are an outstanding team ... a championship team," Atlanta coach Marion Campbell after the Falcons (1-4) lost to the Rams for the second time this season. "You may see this bunch in January."

Henry Ellard had eight receptions for 165 yards and Mike Lansford kicked four field goals for the Rams.

The victory overshadowed a career-best passing day by Atlanta's Chris Miller, who missed last week's game with bruised ribs. He completed 28 of 39 passes for 340 yards and a touchdown.

Everett completed 16 of 28, including touchdown passes of 13 and nine yards as the Rams took a 20-7 halftime lead.

Bucs 42, Bears 35

Tampa Bay's first victory over Chicago since 1982 was food for considerable thought.

"Looks to me like they're tired of getting beat by the Bears," Chicago coach Mike Ditka said after the Bucs broke a 12-game losing streak against the Bears.

"This could be one of the best wins in the history of the franchise," Tampa Bay coach Ray Perkins said.

"I'm not surprised with this," said Vinny Testaverde, who recovered from last week's season-worst performance to complete 22 of 36 passes for 269 yards before an injury sidelined him in the fourth period.

Testaverde, who threw for just 82 yards in a 17-3 loss to Minnesota last Sunday, was diagnosed as having a bruised knee.

Tampa Bay (3-2) forced three turnovers in building a 28-14 halftime lead.

Eagles 21, Giants 19

New York's loss didn't upset Coach Bill Parcells, who, like Robinson, has taken a wait-and-see approach to his team's early-season success.

"The only way we can get hurt by this defeat is to let it matter in the next few weeks," Parcells said. "It's a long season."

High fives for the Colts
...separated shoulder for Kelly

Randall Cunningham, held in check virtually all day, drove the Eagles (3-2) 81 yards for the decisive touchdown, a 2-yard-run by Anthony Toney with 2:18 remaining.

The Giants led 19-14 as Raul Allegre kicked four field goals and backup quarterback Jeff Hostetler threw a 22-yard scoring pass to linebacker Carl Banks on a fake field goal.

Cunningham hit Cris Carter for 23 yards, Mike Quick for 21 and Gregg Garrity for 15 as the Eagles moved to a first down at the Giants' 15 in the final drive.

"When we get down to the nitty gritty, the guys have the confidence we'll come back," said Cunningham, who hit 10 of 24 passes for 106 yards.

Phil Simms, quoted in Philadelphia earlier in the week as saying a good high school quarterback could throw for 300 yards against the Eagles' defense, was 21 of 39 for 241 yards.

Simms denied the quote, saying, "I'm not going to talk to you — write that down, then get away from me."

Colts 37, Bills 14

Buffalo quarterback Jim Kelly separated his left shoulder in the third quarter and had to leave the game. How long he will be out is undetermined, although Coach Marv Levy thinks the AFC's leading passer won't be back in time for next Monday's game against the Rams.

"His arm is in a sling, and he is in a lot of pain," Levy said. "He will be examined and the team will make an evaluation on Monday or Tuesday."

Eric Dickerson, still sore from a hamstring injury, ran for two touchdowns, and Buffalo (3-2) committed six turnovers that Indianapolis converted into 23 points.

The Colts (3-2) had four quarterback sacks, intercepted four passes and forced two fumbles. Dickerson, who didn't start, rushed 22 times for 92 yards.

49ers 24, Saints 20

Joe Montana brought San Francisco from behind for the fourth time in five weeks. Montana had rallied the 49ers in victories against Indianapolis, Tampa Bay and Philadelphia in the first three games this season.

This time, he threw three second-half touchdown passes — two to John Taylor in the fourth quarter, erasing a 17-10 New Orleans lead.

"This is bad for the heart," said Montana, who also hooked up with Jerry Rice for a 60-yard scoring pass.

New Orleans (1-4) finally got a break of sorts when Paul Cofer, who had kicked a 41-yard field goal in the second quarter to open the scoring, missed a 44-yard attempt in the third. It was the first time in 16 attempts that a New Orleans opponent had missed a field goal.

Bobby Hebert led the Saints with two touchdown passes.

Bengals 26, Steelers 16

Boomer Esiason directed a pair of 80-yard scoring drives on a gimpy ankle, and James Brooks ran for two fourth-quarter touchdowns for Cincinnati (4-1).

Pittsburgh (2-3) led 7-0 and 10-6 before Cincinnati rallied on Brooks' touchdowns. Brooks ran in from 13 yards early in the fourth quarter, then scored on a 65-yard run with 1:49 left. He wound up with 127 yards.

Steelers quarterback Bubby Brister was carried off on a stretcher with 35 seconds left after spraining his left knee. The severity of the injury was not immediately determined, but the Steelers were already talking about rallying behind backup Todd Blackledge next Sunday at Cleveland.

Broncos 16, Chargers 10

With its running game depleted through injury, Denver turned to rookie Bobby Humphrey. He answered by rushing for 102 yards in his first pro start and scoring on a tackle-breaking, 17-yard run with 1:03 left.

The Broncos (4-1) trailed 10-9 before mounting the decisive 74-yard, 11-play drive that gave them a two-game lead in the AFC West.

John Elway kept the drive alive with a 17-yard pass to Orson Mobley on third-and-11, and Steve Sewell went seven yards on a reverse on fourth-and-1.

San Diego (2-3) hurt itself with 10 penalties for 57 yards.

Dolphins 13, Browns 10

Rookie Pete Stoyanovich, who missed a 45-yard field goal with three seconds left in regulation, kicked a 35-yarder in overtime for Miami (2-3).

Cleveland (3-2) took the kickoff to start overtime and drove 46 yards, but Matt Bahr was wide left on a 44-yard field goal attempt.

Miami led 10-0, but a 50-yard field goal by Bahr, his longest since 1986, and an 8-yard run by Eric Metcalf in the third quarter tied the score.

Vikings 24, Lions 17

Mike Merriweather and Ike Holt scored on pass interceptions for Minnesota, and the NFL's leading defense had eight sacks against winless Detroit.

Keith Millard had three sacks and a 41-yard interception return as the Vikings (3-2) limited the Lions to 84 yards through the air.

Merriweather picked off Eric Hipple in the second quarter with Detroit leading 7-3 and ran 15 yards for a touchdown. Holt returned a 90-yarder 5:19 later. The Vikings scored all their points in the second quarter.

Redskins 30, Cardinals 28

Mark Rypien threw fourth-quarter touchdown passes to Art Monk and Gary Clark as Washington (3-2) rallied past Phoenix, extending the Cardinals' losing streak in the nation's capital to 11 years.

The Cardinals (2-3), who have not won at RFK Stadium since November 1978, took a 21-13 lead late in the third quarter on Earl Ferrell's 44-yard touchdown run.

Chiefs 20, Seahawks 16

Christian Okoye scored on a 13-yard run and Deron Cherry intercepted a Dave Krieg pass that Kansas City turned into a second-half touchdown as the Chiefs (2-3) overtook Seattle (2-3).

Kansas City trailed 16-3 at halftime before winning at the Kingdome for the first time since 1981.

Okoye, a 260-pounder from Nigeria, was too big and too strong for Seattle's undersized defensive line. He rushed 30 times for a career-best 156 yards.

OILERS

rusher, the Patriots were beaten easily by Seattle and Buffalo. His return meant Houston had to focus on the run as well as the pass and had to cope with the Patriots' renewed enthusiasm.

Stephens celebrated successful runs with fists thrust into the air and tried to fire up the crowd.

"I did have more intensity out there because I felt the frustration of not being out there for some time," he said.

"John Stephens gives us speed, power, finesse," Patriots' wide receiver Cedric Jones said. "The defense has to be aware of him at all times. He sets up all types of plays for us."

Although Stephens gained only 59 yards in 21 carries, he made key plays to keep New England's first three scoring drives alive and scored on an 11-yard run on its fourth. That made the score 20-3 with 5:58 left in the third quarter and enabled the Patriots to survive a 10-point Houston fourth quarter in which Tony Zendejas kicked his second field goal, a 22-yarder, and Moon threw a 20-yard scoring pass to Drew Hill with 5:11 left.

In their last two games, the Patriots converted only 6 of 28 third-down opportunities. On Sunday, they succeeded on 8 of 16, with Stephens getting four of those first downs.

"Running hard when you need to is what counts" more than his total rushing yardage, Stephens said. "To me, getting first downs is getting (the job) done.

"I didn't feel there was anything their defense could do that we weren't prepared for," he added. "I like their aggressiveness because when they hustle to the ball, I can cut back."

Houston ended the game with the same record as the Patriots but with a much different mood.

"We just took a real step backwards," linebacker John Grimsley said.

"Our intensity just wasn't there," said Moon, who completed just 14 of 29 passes after connecting on a career-high 82.6 percent a week earlier in a 39-7 rout of Miami. "I never got into a rhythm.

"They were trying to double cover our inside receivers and I had to hold the ball a lot longer than I wanted to and that enabled their ruh to get to me."

Rookie cornerbacks Maurice Hurst and Eric Coleman, playing because of injuries to Ronnie Lippett and Rod McSwain, each intercepted one of Moon's passes.

Houston's other two turnovers led to New England's two touchdowns.

Six plays after Marvin Allen recovered Leonard Harris' fumble on a kickoff Allen scored on a 1-yard run that made the score 10-0 late in the first quarter. And one play after Vincent Brown recovered Kenny Johnson's fumbled punt return, Stephens got his touchdown.

GIANTS

"This is where we want to be," he said, dismissing any suggestion of nervousness. "This is a childhood dream. It's great to get a chance to help your team to make it into the World Series."

Downs, 28, was a combined 25-18 in 1987-88, but suffered an inflamed shoulder on May 1 against the Cubs and did two stints on the disabled list while also pitching for Phoenix. He lost a career-high five straight games before recovering to finish 4-8 with a 4.79 earned-run average as both a starter and reliever.

He needed only last-out relief help from closer Steve Bedrosian to put the Giants on the brink of their first World Series appearance since 1962. Only seven teams out of 38 who have trailed 3-1 in a postseason series have come back to win.

"After the year I had it's good to come in and contribute any way that I can," he said. "It has been a frustrating year."

When Downs made a joking reference to the Cubs' Shawon Dunston after the Chicago shortstop blooped a hit in the fifth, it was Dunston who was frustrated. "You can't take that," Downs said with a smile, figuring his long-time acquaintance would realize he was joking. But Dunston reacted angrily and both benches emptied briefly.

Downs' 3.12 ERA is the lowest of any pitcher in this offense-happy series. In the four games, the starting pitchers of the teams have combined to allow 50 hits and 32 runs in 33⅓ innings. The Giants have a 4.89 team ERA, the Cubs 6.09.

"I don't think it's been the best-pitched series I've looked at in a long time," Chicago manager Don Zimmer said. "But I guess in the last two days they've probably scored five runs without the ball out of the infield. We just haven't played good."

Mark Grace is a glaring exception. Grace, whose two RBIs briefly gave him a share of the NL playoff record of eight, took a .643 batting average and a 1.214 slugging average into Game 5.

"I'm glad I'm doing well but I'm just not doing well enough," he said. "I'd be happier with less stats and more wins."

His counterpart at first base, Will Clark, also tied an NL playoff record with his 10th hit. He was 3-for-4 to improve to .625 with six RBIs.

"We're getting the clutch hits," Clark said. "Everybody is doing it when they have to."

OAKLAND

"I went out there and did the things I knew I could," he said. "I wanted to make everything happen and everything fell into place."

He did it from the first inning Sunday. Dave Stieb walked Henderson leading off the game, and Henderson stole second. It was his eighth steal of the series, breaking the postseason record set by Lou Brock in the 1967 World Series and tied by the St. Louis Cardinals' outfielder in the 1968 Series.

Henderson then scored the game's first run on Canseco's single.

In the third, Henderson struck again. Walt Weiss led off with a walk, Mike Gallego sacrificed and Henderson tripled up the gap in right-center.

"Every time he got on base," Stewart said, "it seemed we scored a run."

Oakland added two runs in the seventh. Steib walked Dave Henderson (of the four A's who scored runs, three reached via walks) and McGwire and Terry Steinbach hit consecutive singles that made it 3-0. Weiss' fly to center allowed McGwire to tag and go to third and Gallego squeezed in a run off Jim Acker, the A's second successful squeeze of the year.

Stewart, who hasn't pitched a shutout since Aug. 30, 1988, took a 4-0 lead into the eighth before giving up a one-out home run to Lloyd Moseby. Then he allowed a home run to George Bell to start the ninth.

"I don't think the homer was too late," Bell said. "We still weren't out of it."

Eckersley relieved and Gaston had the umpires check his glove.

"Some of the guys seemed to think his ball was moving funny," Gaston said. "Eckersley took something from his glove and dropped it down his shirt. Then it fell to the ground and he picked it up and put it down his pants. You can't check down his pants."

La Russa ran onto the field and argued with the umpires.

"I don't like gamesmanship and that was nothing but pure gamesmanship," he said.

Eckersley cursed at the Toronto manager.

"I did it. I'm sorry," Eckersley said. But he was livid. "It was a ploy. It didn't work. It got me pretty mad."

Tony Fernandez singled, stole second, took third on Ernie Whitt's groundout and scored on Kelly Gruber's sacrifice fly. Eckersley then struck out Junior Felix for his third save of the series and his seventh of the playoffs in two years.

In 1988, the playoffs ended with Eckersley saving Stewart's victory. It seemed like old times.

"Now we're expected to do it," Eckersley said. "And we did."

In failing for the second time to bring Canada its first pennant, the Blue Jays, who blew a three-games-to-one lead against Kansas City in the 1985 playoffs, had little offense and so-so pitching.

Bell went 4-for-20, AL home run champion Fred McGriff didn't hit one after Sept. 4 and didn't have an extra-base hit after Sept. 13.

Toronto got two hits in its last 20 at-bats with runners in scoring position and its starting pitchers gave up 19 earned runs in 26⅔ innings.

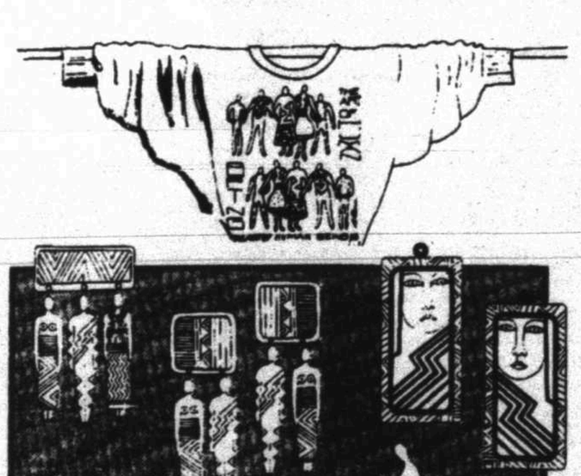

"I hope they enjoy the World Series," Bell said. "I hope they get beat like we did."

Oakland, which opens the World Series at home Saturday, will play either San Francisco or Chicago. The Giants lead the National League playoffs 3-1, with Game 5 scheduled today.

La Russa was hoping to attend the game at Candlestick Park "if I can get a ticket."

Florida fires Galen Hall for NCAA rules violations

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Florida coach Galen Hall, rumored to be on the hot seat because of his team's so-so performance on the field, instead got the ax for admitted rules violations.

"We made this move because the man violated his contract and committed major violations of NCAA rules," Robert Bryan, the university's interim president, said during a news conference Sunday night. "We cannot allow him to coach."

Bryan said Hall had acknowledged last Monday that he broke NCAA rules. By last Friday, the university's lawyers had negotiated the terms of his resignation, which include $65,000 in severance pay.

Hall, who became coach in 1984 when a recruiting scandal prompted the firing of Charley Pell, will be replaced by Gary Darnell, the Gators' defensive coordinator. Darnell inherits a team that, with a 4-1 record, had gone a long way to quiet the critics who were carping about Hall's performance on the field.

Hall officially resigned amid allegations he made improper payments to assistant coaches from 1986-88 and to a player two years ago. He coached his last game Saturday night, a 16-13 victory over Louisiana State.

"This is not a rogue university," Bryan said. "But we contracted a disease in the early 1980s that my predecessor, Marshall Criser, almost broke his heart trying to cure. But I guarantee to all who are interested in the university that it will be cured."

Hall, 49, came under fire in 1988 when the Gators lost five of their last six games to finish the regular season with a 6-5 record for the third straight year. He began 1989 amid speculation that Florida was already looking for a replacement and that the Gators would have to win at least eight games to save his job.

The one-time Oklahoma assistant got the Florida job because he was the highest-ranking member of Pell's staff who was not linked to NCAA violations. He finished with a 40-18-1 mark and said he and his staff had "worked hard to maintain strict compliance" with rules.

"What took place was my use of poor judgment in a limited number of instances, none of which involve any current athletes, assistant coaches or graduate assistants affiliated with the football program in any manner," Hall said in a statement.

"My primary concern as a football coach has always been the welfare of the players, coaches and the university," he added. "It is that concern and respect which led to this decision to resign."

In a letter to Bryan, Hall admitted that in January 1987, he helped out a player who faced a court order arising from non-payment of child support.

An unidentified graduate student told university officials that Hall had him deliver money for the player in a sealed envelope. Hall denied the accusation, telling Bryan that, in his recollection, the envelope contained only court papers.

"I recognize that my involvement in this matter has the appearance of impropriety," Hall wrote.

He also admitted paying unauthorized salary supplements to assistants in 1986, 1987 and 1988, a violation of NCAA rules. One coach was paid $18,000 and another was paid $4,000, Hall said in the letter.

"I resign with great regret, particularly that events compelled this decision within the season. However, I have recognized that my actions may jeopardize our football program, particularly given the prior history of the university."

Florida was slapped with a three-year probation in 1984 after the NCAA documented widespread rules violations ranging from improper payments to players to illegal scouting activities. The final 12 months of the penalty, which included scholarship restrictions and a ban on bowl and television appearances, was waived because of corrective action taken under Criser's direction.

Programs determined to have committed major violations of NCAA rules twice during a five-year period face the possibility of receiving the so-called "death penalty" — a suspension of the program for up to two years. Southern Methodist is the only university to receive that penalty and this year is fielding a team for the first time since 1986.

While Florida has received no official notification of an NCAA investigation, school officials have talked with the organization about a federal probe of alleged drug use by Florida athletes as well as the court case of four sports agents who pleaded guilty to charges of making secret payments to former members of the school's basketball and football teams.

Hall became a hero in Gainesville when he took over for Pell and led the team to eight consecutive victories. Florida finished 9-1-1 with its first-ever Southeastern Conference title and a No. 3 national ranking.

The SEC later stripped Florida of its conference title because of the NCAA's charges of rules violations committed during Pell's tenure.

Despite NCAA sanctions, the Gators were 9-1-1 in 1985, giving Hall a record of 17-1-1 that was the best in the nation over that two-year period.

Buffs, Cougars gaining respect

Associated Press

Notre Dame is still No. 1, but the explosive Colorado Buffaloes are winning supporters on and off the field while the Houston Cougars were making the biggest jump.

The Irish, who beat Stanford 27-17 Saturday, received 54 first-place votes from a nationwide panel of 60 sports writers and broadcasters, accumulating 1,494 out of a possible 1,500 points.

Notre Dame has topped the Associated Press college football poll since supplanting Michigan the first week of the season.

The third-ranked Buffaloes blew out Missouri 49-3 in their first home game since the death of quarterback of Sal Aunese and picked up a pair of first-place votes. Colorado, which moved from fifth to third last week, received 1,371 points.

Miami, Fla., which pounded Cincinnati 56-0, remained No. 2 with the other four first-place votes and 1,428 points. Missouri cornerback Otis Smith, whose team fell 38-7 to the Hurricanes two weeks ago, was more impressed by the Buffaloes.

"My own belief is that Colorado is way better than Miami," Smith said after Saturday's game. "They're faster, bigger, stronger and a better team overall."

Houston (4-0) got six touchdown passes from quarterback Andre Ware in a 66-10 victory over Baylor and made the biggest jump in the poll, from No. 12 to eighth. The Cougars have 1,002 points, eight more than Pittsburgh (4-0-1), which dropped one place to ninth after beating Temple 27-3.

The top three teams are each 5-0, as is Nebraska, which stayed at No. 4 after racking up 723 yards of offense in rolling over Kansas St. 58-7. The Cornhuskers collected 1,298 points.

No. 5 Michigan (3-1), No. 6 Tennessee (5-0) and No. 7 Arkansas (4-0) all held position.

The Wolverines, the top-ranked preseason team, shut down Wisconsin 24-0 and received 1,232 points. Tennessee, which collected 1,205 points, edged Georgia 17-14. Arkansas got a pair of touchdowns each from fullbacks Barry Foster and JuJu Harshaw in beating Texas Christian 41-9 and got 1,108 points.

West Virginia, tied with Southern Cal last week at No. 9, had the biggest drop, falling to 20th thanks to its first regular-season defeat since 1987, a 12-10 upset at the hands of Virginia Tech.

USC (4-1) rounded out the Top Ten. The Trojans beat Washington 24-16 and picked up 951 points.

The Second Ten is made up of Alabama, Auburn, North Carolina State, Clemson, Oklahoma, Illinois, Air Force and Washington State at 17th, Florida State and West Virginia.

Be Ware: Cougs roll out numbers

Associated Press

SWC Roundup

Be Ware of the Houston Cougars!

They can't win the Southwest Conference football title but it's obvious they'll decide who does.

The Cougars and their bionic-armed quarterback, Andre Ware, are college football's most dangerous football team. It doesn't seem to matter to them that they won't be rewarded with a bowl bid or championship honors because of NCAA sanctions.

They destroyed the nation's top passing defense on Saturday with a 66-10 verdict over the proud Baylor Bears, considered by many to be the main contender for the SWC title.

It was the most points Baylor had yielded in a game since 1913 when the Bears lost 77-0 to Texas.

Ware finished with an SWC-record 33 completions and broke his own record for passing yardage in a game with 514. Manny Hazard set another record with five touchdown receptions. He had 13 catches for 218 yards.

In other games, Texas Tech upset 19th-ranked Texas A&M 27-24 on Jamie Gill's two fourth-quarter touchdown passes, seventh-ranked Arkansas rolled to a 41-19 victory over Texas Christian, and Texas survived for a 31-30 victory over the Rice Owls in a wild game at Memorial Stadium.

Baylor committed seven turnovers and Houston cashed them into touchdowns like they were coupons at the State Fair of Texas.

"It wasn't a situation where they came out and marched down the field," said Baylor coach Grant Teaff. "Still, I was surprised they got that many points."

"What a great game," said Houston coach Jack Pardee. "We were a little nervous in the first quarter and had trouble playing pitch and catch."

The victories by Tech and Texas provided some controversy.

Besides a bench-clearing brawl in the A&M-Texas game, the Aggies were late getting their defense back onto the field on the play when Jamie Gill hit Travis Price for the game-winning touchdown pass on third-and-28.

A&M coach R.C. Slocum said the officials signaled play to start with his defense huddled on the sidelines.

"We were running like the devil to get all the way across the field," Slocum said. "I'm sure we would have had a lot better chance to play that play had we been lined up."

Price said: "We worked in practice on snapping the ball before the defense is set. It worked."

Two plays before the touchdown, A&M claimed Gill fumbled when hit by linebacker William Thomas. But Gill was ruled down.

"I would have liked for it to be a fumble but the officials are paid to make those kind of calls," Slocum said.

Texas quarterback Pete Gardere scored on a 4-yard scramble on a fourth-and-goal play with four minutes to play to save the Longhorns.

"There was some conjecture as to whether he was down or not," said Rice coach Fred Goldsmith.

Arkansas rolled over TCU as Barry Foster and JuJu Harshaw enjoyed career rushing days. Each scored two touchdowns.

"We just wore out," said TCU coach Jim Wacker. "We played them off their feet for three quarters, but you have to play 60 minutes. We just didn't have the depth."

In games this week, Houston is at Texas A&M, Baylor is at Southern Methodist, Arkansas is at Texas Tech, Texas plays Oklahoma in their annual grudge match-up at the Cotton Bowl in Dallas, and Rice hosts TCU.

Schrader wins crown, but Wallace has points

All Pro 500

CONCORD, N.C. (AP) — Rusty Wallace gained the points lead and Ken Schrader gained some credibility in the All Pro Auto Parts 500.

While Schrader drove to victory Sunday at Charlotte Motor Speedway, Wallace got a big break from Dale Earnhardt's engine, moving into the lead in the Winston Cup driver standings with four races remaining.

Earnhardt, a three-time champion who had led the season points chase for 14 races, went out Sunday after just 13 laps on the 1.5-mile oval with a broken camshaft — finishing last in the 42-car field.

Midland's Bobby Hillin Jr. had a Top 10 finish, placing ninth in his Buick Regal and winning $12,300.

Earnhardt came into the race leading Wallace by 75 points and left the track trailing by 35, 3,612-3,577.

Wallace, who lost the title last year to Bill Elliott by just 24 points and had not led the points in 35 races, dating to August 1988, said: "It's not like I fell into something.

"If everybody remembers, at the beginning of the season I had three 31st-place finishes. I blew up at Martinsville, at Atlanta and blew up here at Charlotte. Dale doesn't have three finishes like that.

"I'm sorry Dale had a problem, but just about the time Dale has some bad fortune, I have some good fortune. I just hope that I can race him to the end and that we don't trip.

"I just want to run consistent, run up front and stay up front."

Earnhardt took the terrible day philosophically — at least outwardly.

"You can't drive the car if it ain't running, and it wasn't running," Earnhardt said. "Anybody can have trouble and we had it today.

"Rusty didn't beat us, we beat ourselves. But we won't give up on winning the championship. It's definitely not over. This was the wrong time for this to happen, but there's still four races left and anything can happen."

Races fuel Brady spending

BRADY, Texas (AP) — Russell Willis, an employee at a feed store in this Central Texas town, said a lot of people were skeptical about how much good, if any, a horse track with pari-mutuel betting would do for the community.

"I think they're eating their words today," Willis said.

Business was up sharply in Brady over the weekend as racing began Friday at G. Rollie White Downs, marking the first legalized pari-mutuel betting in Texas in 52 years.

A city-conducted survey told merchants they could expect every track visitor to spend about $40. It was an encouraging word to the Central Texas area that has seen hundreds of workers laid off recently in sand mining and trailer manufacturing industries.

"I don't see how 6,000 people can come in and not do some good," Willis said. "They're going to spend some money. The motels are full; the restaurants are full. I went to A&M, and even I can figure that out."

Most of the purchases were predictable expenses such as meals, lodging and horse-related goods, merchants told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram.

"They're good eaters — steak, most of them — the high-dollar things on our menu," said Al Miller, owner of the Club Cafe, which was swamped Friday night after the last horse had been walked through the winner's circle.

Some race fans were spending money to make last-minute adjustments in their wardrobe, after arriving at the track and finding others dressed more comfortably or appropriately.

"They don't know what to wear, so they see what everybody else is wearing and they come in," said Diane Hill, a clerk at Circle H Western Wear Store on Brady's main drag.

Fed may delay lower interest rates

N.Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK — Credit market analysts predict that the Federal Reserve Board will not move quickly to lower interest rates, despite fresh signs of economic weakness.

Anticipation of a speedy move by the Fed was rampant in the credit markets Friday, as an unexpectedly bad September employment report sent short-term rates tumbling and reignited talk about recession.

The report included the largest drop in manufacturing employment since November 1982. The number of factory jobs declined by 105,000 last month, and the overall unemploymnt rate increased one-tenth of a percentage point, to 5.2 percent.

"The economy was clearly much weaker at the end of the third quarter than it was at the beginning," said Joseph Carson, senior economist at Chemical Bank. "Many people have said the Fed has been looking for an excuse to ease monetary policy. These employment numbers show they have a need to ease."

A number of analysts said they share Carson's concern. But they said that several factors were likely to persuade the Fed to delay any further reduction in rates, which have been lowered several times in the last 18 months.

Some economists questioned the validity of the September figures, and said October data could show a rebound. Moreover, they noted that the Fed seldom makes a policy decision based on one economic report.

"I was very, very surprised by the sharp decline in manufacturing employment, but there may be a statistical problem with the number," said Stephen S. Roach, a principal and senior economist at Morgan Stanley & Co.

Roach noted that in seven of the last nine years, September factory employment figures were "strikingly" weak.

"The report may temper some of the enthusiasm I had about the economy," he said, "but I will go out on a limb and say we will have a reasonable rebound in the October report."

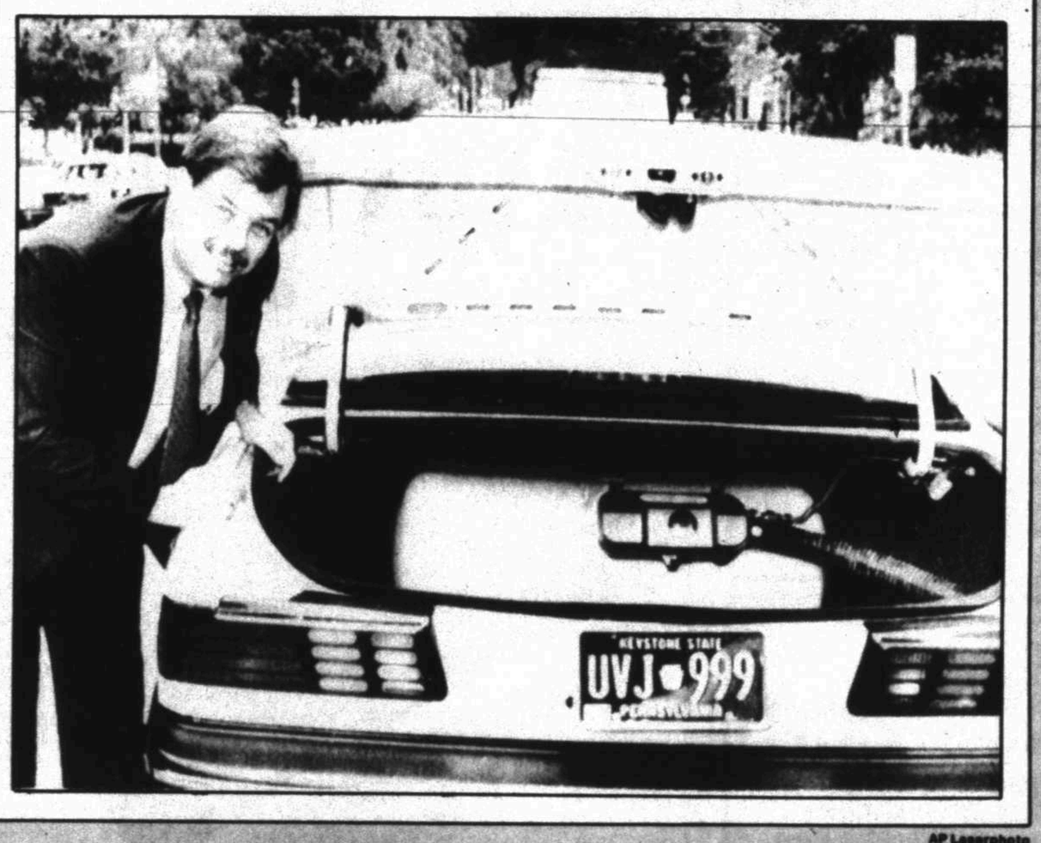

Mickey D. Levy, chief economist at First Fidelity Bancorp in Newark, said the "numbers were decidedly weak, and shifted market psychology."

But Levy added that the Fed would not push rates lower yet. "They will be looking for further signs of economic weakness before they move," he said.

Standing in the way of a reduction in the overnight rate for federal funds from its current level of 9 percent are coming reports on producer prices and consumer prices, which are scheduled for Friday and next week, respectively.

Largely because of a 13 percent rise in gasoline prices in September, some analysts are forecasting that the producer price report could

Clean fuel push is on

Associated Press

As the Bush administration pushes for cleaner air, a host of fuel promoters are pushing their own causes. Ethanol, methanol, compressed natural gas and propane are a few making bids to be the fuel of the future.

Among the latest entries are ethanol powered buses. Ethanol — alcohol squeezed from the United States' abundant corn supply — is being injected into diesel bus engines, turning billows of black exhaust smoke into nearly invisible white clouds.

Supporters say the alcohol fuel will reduce air pollution, extend the life of engines, and raise the price farmers receive for their corn by boosting demand.

The first ethanol-diesel buses are rolling through the streets of Des Moines, Iowa, in the heart of the Cornbelt.

And dozens of other transit systems — including Cedar Rapids, Iowa, and Decatur — have expressed interest in burning ethanol in their fleets as they prepare for tougher emission standards.

"Our findings could revolutionize the way mass transit systems are fueled in the future," said K. Stephen Spade, general manager of the Des Moines Metropolitan Transit Authority.

"By using ethanol ... we expect to reduce hazardous emissions by 50 percent while maintaining diesel fuel mileage."

The ethanol injector system is manufactured by Midwest Power Concepts, a Radcliffe, Iowa, company that developed the technology so farmers could burn ethanol in diesel tractors and combines.

The test buses have separate fuel systems — one for diesel fuel and one for ethanol, MPC President Warren Dobbertin said. The fuels are not mixed as gasoline and ethanol are blended to create gasohol.

The buses draw ethanol during high power demand, such as acceleration, when the greatest pollution would occur with diesel fuel. At other times, such as cruising speeds, buses switch to diesel for top economy, Dobbertin said.

"You don't have to scrap all the engines that are in place now as you would with other alternative fuels," said Dobbertin. "We can do this now, with existing buses, in a few hours."

Des Moines will run 17 buses with the ethanol injectors. They will be tested for pollution from the exhaust pipes and for fuel mileage.

Spade said an initial side-by-side test of two buses was dramatic, with the ethanol bus creating virtually no visible exhaust.

"It's just a white plume versus the big billows of black smoke we all see when we're driving behind a bus," said Martin Andreas, senior vice president of Archer Daniels Midland Co. in Decatur.

Brady reaps bucks

BRADY, Texas (AP) — Many in Brady are walking around with fatter wallets, but it's not from picking winners at the track.

Horse racing is pumping up the town's sagging economy, as many predicted it would, and local merchants say they are pleased.

"There are a lot of skeptical people in Brady, and I think they're eating their words today," said Russell Willis, employee at a feed store where business is up sharply since pari-mutuel racing began Friday at G. Rollie White Downs.

A city-conducted survey told merchants they could expect every track visitor to spend about $40. It was an encouraging word to the Central Texas area that has seen hundreds of workers laid off recently in sand mining and trailer manufacturing industries.

"I don't see how 6,000 people can come in and not do some good," Willis said. "They're going to spend some money. The motels are full; the restaurants are full. I went to A&M and even I can figure that out."

Most of the purchases were predictable expenses such as meals, lodging and horse-related goods, merchants told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram.

And maybe it was those who cashed in winning tickets, but many left the track with plenty of spending cash.

"They're good eaters — steak, most of them — the high-dollar things on our menu," said Al Miller, owner of the Club Cafe, which was swamped Friday evening after the last horse had been walked through the winner's circle.

Some race fans were spending money to make last-minute adjustments in their wardrobe, after arriving at the track and finding others dressed more comfortably or appropriately.

"They don't know what to wear, so they see what everybody else is wearing and they come in," said Diane Hill, a clerk at Circle H Western Wear Store on Brady's main drag.

Several male track-goers came into the store and traded khaki slacks for blue jeans, she said. And one woman from San Antonio came into the store wearing a western suit with tennis shoes.

"She said she had to get a pair of boots today," Ms. Hill said.

But despite a solid opening weekend for most of the town, a few merchants said they had hoped for better results. Employees stayed busy, but weren't overwhelmed, at local Kentucky Fried Chicken and Dairy Queen franchises.

Oil closes mixed in slow trading

From Staff and Wire Reports

The price of oil dropped 3 cents this morning on the New York Mercantile Exchange, resting at mid morning at $19.84 per barrel.

On Friday, crude oil futures prices finished mixed in light, uneventful dealings.

Crude oil futures traded on the New York Mercantile Exchange moved lower. The November contract for West Texas Intermediate, the benchmark grade of U.S. crude which slipped 19 cents on Thursday, lost another 9 cents to finish at $19.87 per 42-gallon barrel. Subsequent months also retreated.

Among petroleum products, gasoline futures contracts traded on the exchange also fell while home heating oil rose.

The November contract for unleaded gasoline was down 0.17 cent to 54.80 cents a gallon. The near-term contract for home heating oil, which tumbled 1.08 cents a gallon on Thursday, finished up 0.27 cent at 58.18 cents a gallon.

Trading was very light. "There's very little happening," said Peter Beutel, an assistant director at Elders Futures Inc. "Basically people are balancing their books before the weekend."

Beutel predicted trading would continue at a slow pace on Monday since many traders will be out in observance of Yom Kippur.

Reports that representatives of 12 independent oil-producing nations would issue a communique on talks held for the past two days in Kuala Lumpur had little effect on the day's activity in the pits.

The communique is scheduled to be issued at 5 a.m. EDT Saturday.

Holiday slows dollar's trading

LONDON (AP) — The dollar was mostly lower in early European trading today, but gained more than 2 cents against the British pound.

Gold prices were little changed.

Currency dealers said trading was quiet because of the Columbus Day holiday in the United States, and because Canadian financial institutions were closed for that country's Thanksgiving holiday.

EXCHANGE RATES

- 1.8862 West German marks
- 1.6450 Swiss francs
- 6.3955 French francs
- 2.1333 Dutch guilders
- 1,378.38 Italian lire
- 1.1750 Canadian dollars

Dealers said the market is trying to find new direction after European interest rate hikes, central bank interventions and weaker-than-expected September U.S. job figures all failed to take the dollar much lower.

In Tokyo, where trading ends before Europe's business day begins, the dollar fell 0.22 yen to a closing 142.23 yen. Later, in London, it was quoted at 142.65 yen.

In London, the pound fell. It cost $1.5815 to buy one pound, compared with $1.6030 late Friday.

Gold opened in London at a bid price of $363.50 a troy ounce, compared with late Friday's $363.25. At midmorning, the city's five major bullion dealers fixed a recommended price of $362.95.

In Zurich, the bid price was $363.00, up from $362.80 late Friday.

Silver was quoted in London at a bid price of $5.13 a troy ounce, down from Friday's $5.14.

Financial institutions in Hong Kong were closed on today because of the Chinese Chung Yeung or Grave Sweeping Festival.

Stocks continue drive, gain ground

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market gained more ground Friday, continuing its week-long drive to record highs in buying attributed to hopes for an easier Federal Reserve credit policy.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials rose 11.82 to 2,785.52, extending its gain for the week to 92.70 points.

That marked the best weekly showing for the average since it climbed 114.86 points May 31June 3, 1988.

Advancing issues outnumbered declines by about 7 to 6 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed stocks, with 780 up, 667 down and 520 unchanged.

Volume on the floor of the Big Board came to 172.52 million shares, against 177.89 million in the previous session. Nationwide, consolidated volume in NYSE-listed issues, including trades in those stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, totaled 209 million shares.

Before the opening the Labor Department reported that the civilian unemployment rate rose a tenth of a percentage point in September to 5.3 percent.

BUSINESS IN BRIEF

AA union seeks ways to fend off Trump

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — The head of American Airlines' second-largest union met with advisers to discuss possible ways to help management fend off developer Donald Trump's $7 billion buyout proposal.

Michael Kelleher, president of the 16,000-member Association of Professional Flight Attendants, traveled to New York Friday to meet with "legal and labor advisers to prepare contingency plans in light of any events that may transpire," said a spokesman for the independent union.

Also Friday, Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, exchanged letters with Trump, expressing concern over the wave of airline takeovers.

Bush rejects deficit reduction bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush has rejected a Democratic offer to pare down a deficit-reduction bill the Senate is about to consider, removing his capital gains tax cut along with provisions close to the Democrats' hearts.

Bush and his Republican Senate allies on Friday branded the Democratic proposal as inadequate, although negotiations aimed at finding middle ground seemed possible.

"Capital gains is vital," Bush said before discussing the situation with Senate Republicans in the Capitol. "It's not an extraneous matter with me."

Brokers look to charge clients for holding stocks

N.Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK — Goldman, Sachs & Co. has adopted a policy to charge retail investors for holding their securities.

The policy, described by people inside and outside the firm last week, is designed to compensate Goldman for the cost of "custodian services." In addition to holding the securities, these services can include mailing annual reports and proxy statements.

Under the new policy, Goldman will charge one-fourth of 1 percent of the dollar amount of the securities it holds, up to a maximum of $1,000 a year for a customer.

Goldman executives said the move was prompted by the firm's losses from providing such services to customers who did very little of the trading that would earn fees for the firm.

"Economically, if somebody does $5,000 a year in trades, and you are doing all the things involved in custodial service, you will lose a lot of money," a Goldman executive said.

Under federal securities laws, Goldman must maintain segregated accounts for the securities it holds for customers who are not trading on margin. That means the firm is not able to profit by loaning these securities out to traders who wish to sell a security short in anticipation that the stock will drop in price.

Goldman's retail business, which concentrates on wealthy individual clients, is a relatively small part of the firm's activities.

According to the Securities Industry Association, Goldman had 659 brokers at the beginning of this year, ranking it 18th by the number of registered representatives.

Since the market crash in 1987, many Wall Street brokerages have faced declining orders from individual investors, as well as increasing costs for their retail operations.

Firms have a variety of charges for individual investors for their retail business more than the costs of commissions.

Merrill Lynch & Co., the largest retail firm on Wall Street, charges customers $2.35 for each transaction and $30 a year for an inactive account.

Morita

Sony head knows international trade

TOKYO (AP) — Chairman Akio Morita of Sony Corp. grew up in a wealthy family surrounded by the best technology of the 1920s and 1930s: A Victor phonograph, a Westinghouse refrigerator and a Buick sedan.

He went to American movies. "King Kong" was a favorite.

Today, his company not only sets a high standard for consumer electronics around the world, it owns America's largest record company and is buying a major Hollywood motion picture studio.

Sony's plan to pay $3.4 billion to take over Columbia Pictures, following its buyout of CBS Records in 1987, has some Americans worried a Japanese company is taking over the popular cultural heart of the country.

But the friendly takeover is only the latest in decades of international investment by a company that has proved its sophistication in operating around the world.

Morita helped found a tiny company in the basement of a bombed-out department store in 1946 and its early attempts at an electric rice cooker failed.

Morita himself, trained as a physicist, struggled to paste together paper hand-painted with magnetic material to use as tape in Japan's first tape recorder. Postwar shortages made plastic unavailable.

But when in the 1950s Sony bought the rights to an American invention called the transistor and used it in ways its originators never imagined — in radios — the Sony reputation for innovation was born.

In the 1960s Sony transformed video tape recorders, also an American invention, from huge machines run with vacuum tubes to compact transistorized models that became the professional standard.

When it adapted those machines for home use in the 1970s, it helped create the VCR and the culture of "couch potatoes," people who don't have to leave the house for entertainment.

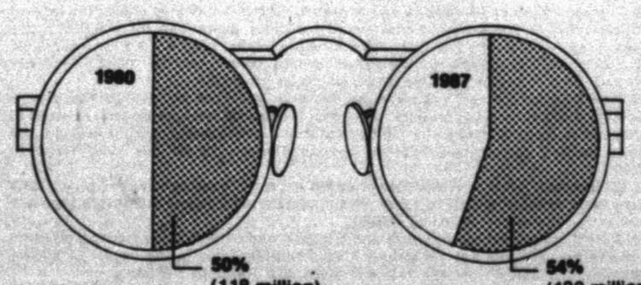

In the 1980s Sony's Walkman became a symbol of self-absorbed joggers, commuters and other yuppies.

COMPUTER NOTES

The computer will keep date and time

By DENNIS SEVER

In your column of Sept. 25 you suggested leaving the computer up and running all the time. My system prompts me for the date when I turn it on. If I leave it on all the time how would I be able to enter the new date and time when necessary?

Normally you will not need to reenter the date and time. The computer will keep up with these for you. In fact most newer systems include a battery powered clock that keeps time even if the power is turned off. (These batteries will usually last a year or more.)

If your system does not have this kind of clock then it will lose or gain as much as a few seconds a day, but resetting the date and time is easily accomplished by issuing PC-DOS's DATE command from the command line. This command is internal to DOS, and can be issued from any directory.

I am using batch commands to start some programs, and have placed them in the C:root directory. Somewhere, I read that the root directory should contain only certain files. Please comment on this and suggest where batch files should be placed.

If we try to visualize the hard disk as a very large filing cabinet or a kitchen counter we can easier see how it should be organized. Consider a directory to be the same as a filing cabinet drawer, or if you prefer things domestic, a kitchen drawer.

The purpose of the drawer is to group like things into proximity. That is you probably have a vendor drawer, a customer drawer, an employee drawer, etc. And at home you have a silverware drawer, a knife drawer, a towel drawer, and my kitchen boasts a junk drawer that holds things that we don't have a special drawer for.

If we group all of our batch files in a directory called C:BATCH is this unlike keeping all the silverware together or all the customer correspondence files together?

This technique certainly helps to keep us from losing (forgetting the names) files, and it also helps to keep data and program files that are related from being corrupted by unrelated programs. It is even allowed (and advisable) to further segregate files within a directory if the segregation will make locating the files easier. There are a few files that must be in the root of the boot disk if you have them. These files are of course the PC-DOS hidden files, a file named COMMAND.COM and the files, AUTOEXEC.BAT and CONFIG.SYS

It would be appreciated if you or Paul Pause' would comment on the management of a hard disk, particularly the PATH command — what it should contain and how to edit it using the DOS Line Editor (EDLIN).

One of the things that makes hard disks manageable is the PATH command. But understanding it requires an understanding of the hierarchical directory system discussed in the previous question. The PATH command allows us to modify a special area of DOS's memory that the computer checks every time a command is entered.

We place into this memory area a list of the directories and subdirectories where we have placed executable files that we may wish to execute from some unrelated directory or subdirectory.

FALL HOME IMPROVEMENT GUIDE
It's time!
Time to spruce up the yard
And clean out the gutters
Put a new coat of paint
On all of the shutters.
Pick up your hammer
Sharpen your saw
It's time to make an inspection
To find every flaw.
You can landscape the lawn
Plant some new flowers
And planning your garden
Will absorb you for hours.
So don't miss your chance
To read about all the new ways
To improve your home
A job that doesn't cost-it pays!
We're building a section
To give you all the details
From looking at blueprints
To driving home the last nail!
Don't miss this special Classified Home Improvement Directory coming your way Wednesday, October 18th.

Introducing Preferred Access
A New Twist
9.50% ANNUAL INTEREST 9.92% ANNUAL YIELD*

That Bears Checking.
At ClayDesta National Bank, we know that life can take some very unexpected turns. So while you want to keep your money hard at work, you still need to have ready access to your funds. Our Preferred Access Account is the answer–paying up to 9.50% interest while allowing you to write three checks and make unlimited in-person transactions each month. And to make things a little more interesting, we've added a unique twist. Maintain a minimum balance of $2500, and there's no monthly service charge. Now, that's an offer you can't turn down.
*Rates based on monthly compounding of account balances. Interest accrues only on days that account balance is $1,000 or more. Balances of $1,000-$14,999 earn 7.00% annual interest. Balances of $15,000 or more earn 9.50% annual interest.
Preferred Access Account is open to individuals only. Charges will be imposed on excessive withdrawals and early account closing.
Rates subject to change without notice.

Gallup Survey of College Seniors

A survey of 696 college seniors was taken to test their knowledge of history and literature. The survey was conducted under contract to the National Endowment for the Humanities (NEH), and is believed to be the first of its kind.

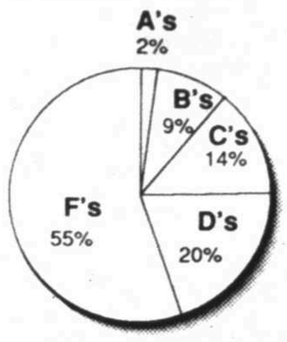

The 87-question Gallup survey was conducted between April 4, 1989, and April 27, 1989, using self-administered test booklets. A total of 696 seniors at 67 four-year American colleges and universities, both public and private, responded to the survey.

The results: "If the students' answers were to be graded, more than half of those tested should have failed."

Performance of college seniors on history questions designed for 17-year-olds.

Performance of college seniors on history and literature questions.

A few of the results:

24 percent of the college seniors surveyed thought Columbus landed in the Western Hemisphere some time after 1500.

42 percent could not place the civil war in the correct half-century.

58 percent did not know that Shakespeare was the author of "The Tempest."

58 percent did not know that Harry Truman was president when the Korean war began.

55 percent could not identify the Magna Carta.

23 percent believed that Karl Marx's phrase "From each according to his ability, to each according to his need," is part of the U.S. Constitution.

Poll shows students lack basic knowledge

WASHINGTON (AP) — Many college students don't know when the Civil War occurred or what the Magna Carta was, according to a Gallup Poll being cited in a call for colleges and universities to revise curricula.

Too many students are graduating from college without knowing "basic landmarks of history and thought," Lynne V. Cheney, chairwoman of the National Endowment for the Humanities, said in releasing the poll Sunday.

Part of the problem is that upon entering college, students "often find few requirements in place and a plethora of offerings," she said.

Cheney issued a new report that offers colleges and universities a study plan of 50 hours in five basic areas of knowledge, including foreign language, mathematics, science and civilization.

The booklet has drawn both criticism as running a risk of "dangerous superficiality" and praise for mirroring the efforts of some higher education institutions.

At many colleges, she said, "There are hundreds of courses to choose from, a multitude of ways to combine them to earn a bachelor's degree, and a minimum of direction." Some students do well with such choices, "but others move through college years with little rationale," she said.

The Gallup Organization survey found that 24 percent of the college seniors surveyed thought Christopher Columbus landed in the Western Hemisphere for the first time after 1500, 42 percent could not place the Civil War in the correct half-century and 58 percent did not know that Shakespeare was the author of "The Tempest."

Also, the survey showed 55 percent could not identify the Magna Carta and 23 percent believed that Karl Marx's phrase, "From each according to his ability, to each according to his need," is part of the U.S. Constitution.

According to the survey, 39 percent of the college seniors failed the 49-question history section. On the 38-question section devoted to literature, 68 percent of the students failed.

The Gallup survey of 696 seniors was conducted between April 4 and April 27, using a self-administered test booklet. The participating students attend 67 four-year American colleges and universities, both public and private.

Cheney, in the booklet, urges trustees and administrators to support faculty members who are working to strengthen general education requirements.

The proposed core curriculum suggested five basic areas of knowledge:

- Cultures and civilizations: three-hour courses each of the origins of civilization and American civilizations; two semesters of Western civilization, three hours each, and six hours of other civilizations, including Africa, East Asia, Islam, South Asia and Latin America.
- Foreign language, 12 hours.
- Concepts of mathematics, six hours.
- Foundations of the natural sciences, eight hours.
- The social sciences and the modern world, six hours.

James Underwood, dean of faculty at Union College in Schenectady, N.Y., criticized the NEH for recommending a "superficial, rigid, and impractical" college curriculum. He added that Union College this fall began a general education curriculum with an emphasis on history and literature.

"A reform that relies so heavily on the traditional Western civilization course runs the risk of a dangerous superficiality," said Underwood. "The Western civilization course tries to 'do everything' and demands for its success the mythical 'Renaissance man' as teacher."

NATION in brief

Cousteau refuses to yield floor on 'Today'

NEW YORK (AP) — French oceanographer Jacques Cousteau, famed for his TV documentaries, sank half of a "Today" discussion on Antarctic issues today by refusing to yield his seat to an American guest awaiting his turn on the show.

The incident occurred at NBC's facilities in Paris. Delegates of 33 nations are meeting in that city to discuss an Antarctic treaty. Cousteau is part of the French delegation, which wants the Antarctic made into a world park.

Before his appearance, Cousteau, who opposes any Antarctic development, refused to discuss the Antarctic issue on "Today" with P. Tucker Sculley, head of the U.S. delegation to the conference, NBC spokeswoman Peggy Hubble said.

However, she said, Cousteau had told NBC officials that he would leave after his interview so that Sculley, awaiting his turn in the Paris studio, could be interviewed about the U.S. position on the Antarctic.

But after "Today" news anchor Deborah Norville concluded her interview of more than two minutes with Cousteau, "he wouldn't leave," thus blocking Sculley's scheduled appearance, Hubble said.

Viewers didn't see Cousteau staying put. Nor did they see Sculley awaiting his turn.

"We're having a little difficulty getting Mr. Sculley hooked up there in Paris," Norville told viewers as the off-camera problem, of which she also seemed unaware, began across the Atlantic.

"Our apologies to him and our apologies to you for not being able to give you the other side of that discussion. Our thanks, though, to Capt. Cousteau in Paris."

Immediately after a station break, though, Norville was back on the air, offering "a little explanation as to how strong the feelings run on this Antarctic issue. Capt. Cousteau refused to move over so that we could talk to Mr. Sculley, who was sitting right there, waiting."

Ericson's visit championed

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — There's no way to keep Christopher Columbus from getting credit for today's holiday, but some Norsemen just can't help pointing out that Leif Ericson beat him to the New World by 507 years.

Ivar Christensen, president of the Leif Ericson Society, says he can't understand why the Italian explorer's backers won't just admit the Viking's claim to fame.

"After all, Columbus landing in America is like being the second person to land on the moon," Ericson said recently. "There is a lot to be said for that."

The society is devoted to advancing the argument that the son of Eric the Red landed with his family in what is now known as Greenland in the year 985. Columbus, trying to sail around the globe to the Orient, ran into San Salvador, or Watling Island, in the Bahamas, on Oct. 12, 1492.

Anti-Semitic acts deplored

WELLESLEY, Mass. (AP) — Police were searching for vandals who left behind a trail of anti-Semitic and racist graffiti through several miles of this suburban town.

"It's rather sad this could happen in 1989 in a town where we like to think everyone gets along," said Detective Jim Fitzgerald.

The vandalism occurred late Saturday or early Sunday, the eve of Yom Kippur, the Jewish Day of Atonement.

Officer Joseph Collari said vandals spray-painted swastikas and racial slurs on a downtown building, mailboxes, garages, homes and cars across a two-to-three-mile stretch of this town west of Boston.

"We've had probably 40 to 50 separate complaints come in on this already," Collari said.

Countdown for planned shuttle launch started despite lawsuit

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — The countdown for this week's planned launch of space shuttle Atlantis started today despite the promise of anti-nuclear activists to sit on the launch pad if necessary to block a payload that carries radioactive plutonium.

Electrical power flowed into the shuttle's systems as the clock began ticking at 8 a.m.

If a federal judge approves, Atlantis is to lift off at 1:29 p.m. Thursday with five astronauts who are to dispatch the nuclear-powered Galileo spacecraft to explore the planet Jupiter.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration decided to begin the count on schedule this morning even though a decision is pending on a lawsuit by three citizens' groups seeking a temporary restraining order to halt the launch. The groups contend that an explosion on liftoff could spread cancer-causing plutonium particles over a large area of east-central Florida.

NASA officials say the two nuclear-powered generators aboard Galileo have been thoroughly tested and that flying them poses minimal health and environmental risks.

U.S. District Judge Oliver Gasch scheduled oral arguments on the suit for Tuesday in Washington.

This is the first time anyone has gone to court to stop a space launch.

The space agency said it could stop the countdown at the 11-hour mark for several days to await the judge's decision, if necessary.

The Galileo probe must be launched by Nov. 21 or Jupiter will no longer be in the right position. If the deadline is missed, the Galileo probe could not be launched until mid-1991, NASA said.

The activists have said that if they lose in court, they will attempt to block the flight by infiltrating the launch area Thursday.

"We are going to attempt to enter the launch area and sit on the launch pad," said Bruce Gagnon, coordinator for the Florida Coalition for Peace and Justice, one of the groups that filed the suit.

More than 200 security guards armed with M-16 assault rifles and semiautomatic 9mm pistols will patrol the Kennedy Space Center to stop any infiltrators, and the center also will be guarded by helicopters and boats.

"They indicated to us and to the press an intent to do some back-country-type activities to try to stop the launch," said Gary Wistrand, deputy director of the space center's security office. "We are postured to try to prevent that."

There is only a 10-minute launch period available Thursday, and NASA is concerned the time could be consumed if protesters penetrate the launch danger zone with a boat, plane or on foot in the final minutes of the countdown.

The astronauts who will fly the mission were to arrive here this afternoon from their training base in Houston. All five said they are not concerned about flying with plutonium.

"I have absolutely no qualms about the devices," said commander Donald Williams.

The generators, each containing 24.7 pounds of radioactive plutonium-238 dioxide, were installed Sunday in the Galileo probe stored in Atlantis' cargo bay.

Officials said without nuclear power, spacecraft could not function at distant planets like Jupiter because they are too far away to draw energy from the sun.

Gang shouting ethnic slurs beats three Jewish men

NEW YORK (AP) — A gang of youths shouthing ethnic slurs set upon three young Jewish men emerging from a party at a Jewish student center and beat them severely, leaving two in serious condition, authorities said.

The police department's bias unit was investigating the incident, which took place on the eve of the solemn Jewish holiday of Yom Kippur, said Sgt. Diane Kubler, a police spokeswoman.

The attack prompted an immediate outcry from community leaders.

"They came out of a fraternity party and were set upon by about 15 white youths who called them names and then beat the daylights out of them," said city Councilman Noach Dear of Brooklyn.

"They were beating up anybody who wasn't of their kind," he said.

Two Brooklyn College freshmen were beaten just after midnight Saturday when they emerged from a party at the Hillel House Jewish student center near the college campus, Kubler SAID. A third man was beaten when he came upon the gang and told them to stop, Dear said.

Dear identified the two students as Joshua Fogel and Steven Weisburg, both freshmen at the college.

Mayor Edward I. Koch and Dear visited the students at Kings County Hospital. Dear said Fogel had a fractured skull and Weisburg had a ruptured spleen, which was removed, a broken leg and injuries to one of his knees.

Police said Weisburg was listed in serious condition. Fogel was in stable condition. The third victim, Steve Eilat, did not need to be admitted.
