Seven Races Hold Main Local Interest In Saturday's Elections

The Gubernatorial Candidates

In A Cloud Of Oratorical Dust

Governor Contestants Nearing The Finish Line

By WILLIAM CLAYTON
United Press International

The wildest, most jam-packed governor's race since 1946 neared the finish line Friday kicking up a cloud of oratorical dust as many of the candidates already claimed victory.

"I will be in the runoff," Marshall Formby said, "because of the frantic efforts of my opponents to get the support of special interest groups, cliques and block votes . . ."

"My re-election," Gov. Price Daniel said, "will mean continuation of an all-out crusade for better law enforcement, stronger controls on lobbyists and strict regulation of loan sharks."

"I am confident we will lead Saturday," John Connally said, "and we are going to have to get someone who is a working governor who is concerned about the people of Texas—John Connally wants to be that kind of governor."

"I am clearly in the lead," Don Yarborough said, adding that Texans will decide whether to elect a "loyal Democrat or an ashamed Democrat such as the type who lost to John Tower last year."

"I expect to win the Republican nomination for governor by a substantial majority," said Jack Cox, who predicted the general election will be a test of the Kennedy administration.

Formby was in a Fort Worth-to-Lubbock tour Friday to close out his campaign. Daniel campaigned in Central Texas. Connally went to Fort Worth Friday for hometown visits and a statewide telecast and Yarborough was on a South and West Texas tour. Cox stumped in Fort Worth.

Republican Roy Whittenburg continued a statewide swing for the GOP nomination.

Edwin A. Walker closed out his campaign with a combination of national and state issues, challenging Daniel to explain "why the Texas Employment Commission is now holding open meetings in the Rio Grande Valley at state expense, cooperating with Washington in an unconstitutional and immoral use of pressure to force Texas farmers to pay a minimum wage?"

Atty. Gen. Will Wilson took an East Texas tour. He said he also expected to make the runoff. He blasted Daniel for "negligence and lack of leadership" that Wilson said allowed oil imports to depress the Texas oil market.

Wilson also said Connally had been "turning one face to the public and another to the oil and gas industry on the foreign imports issue."

Confidence ran high in the race for lieutenant governor. Speaker James Turman, Sen. Crawford Martin, Sen. Bob Baker and Sen. Preston Smith all predicted they will lead the ticket.

Baker, in Beaumont, said "everywhere I have been people

Demo, GOP Primaries Set 1st Time In History

Five contests among Democratic candidates and two on the Republican ticket will hold the main local interest of Gray county voters when they go to the polls in tomorrow's primary elections.

Both Democrats and Republicans are holding Primary Elections for the first time in history in Gray County.

The biggest battle for elector affections will be found in the 7-way Democratic race and the 3-way Republican contest for County Commissioner in Precint 2.

Democrats out for the nomination are E. C. (Ed) Mackie, John B. Kelly, Dean Monday, G. L. (Nat) Lunsford, Clyde Organ, W. M. Lane, and Marvin C. Webster.

Republicans bidding for the No. 2 Pct. commissioner nomination are Bill Tidwell, L. P. Fort and W. C. Epperson.

Probably one of the most interesting races on either ticket will be the G.O.P. contest between Warren Fatheree and Johnny Wills, both of Pampa, seeking the nomination for State Representative from the 87th District.

Both Fatheree and Wills have been waging active campaigns through the three counties comprising the district.

On the Democratic ballot, three candidates — Lester A. Jones and George W. Terry, both of Gray County, and Grainger McIlhaney of Wheeler County are seeking the nomination for the state representative's job from the 87th District. McIlhaney, the incumbent, is seeking re-election.

The County Commissioner 2 post and the State Representative spot are the only two contested races on the Republican ballot as far as county politics are concerned.

On the Democratic ballot another contest looms up large as attracting much voter interest among party adherents. That's the 3-way bid for the nomination as Gray County Judge. Bruce L. Parker, Clyde L. Carruth and William J. (Bill) Craig are the candidates. Craig is seeking re-election. All three are Pampans.

There will be no Republican candidate for County Judge listed on the ballot. However, Bill Watson, owner of Pampa Roller Rink, is campaigning for the post on a write-in basis.

Quite a battle of the ballots is looming on the Democratic ticket for the job of Justice of the Peace No. 2 in Pampa. Here J. W. (Bill) Graham will be fighting to retain the spot he now holds. Graham is asking a second term against the bids of John E. Brockmeier and E. L. (Ed) Anderson. The Republicans have no candidate for the post.

Another race of unusual interest among Gray County voters is the Democratic bid for the nomination as State Senator in the 31st District. The candidates are incumbent Sen. Grady Hazlewood of Amarillo and Charles L. Ballman of Borger. The winner of this 2-way race tomorrow will fight it out in November with Republican L. R. Ernce of Amarillo, who has no opposition on the GOP primary ticket.

Another uncontested race that must wait until November for final decision is the post of Congressman from the 18th District. Rep. Walter Rogers of Pampa, Democrat, seeking re-election, has no primary opponent tomorrow. Neither does Mayor Jack Seale of Amarillo who will be Rogers' Republican opponent at the general election in the Fall.

Democrats who already "have it made" — those who have no opposition on either the Republican or Democratic tickets tomorrow — include District Judge

(A list of voting places and presiding judges in tomorrow's two Primary elections is presented in today's Pampa News on page 8. The list includes the location of each box and the presiding judge in both the Democratic and Republican Primaries.)

US 'Partnership' For Economy Is Proposed By JFK

NEW ORLEANS (UPI)—A vast "Atlantic partnership" with a joint economy of more than a trillion dollars was forecast by President Kennedy today as a new boost for his low tariff program now embattled in Congress.

"We stand at a great divide, deciding whether....to go forward or fall back—whether we are to trade or fade," the President said in a speech prepared for the opening of a new dockside terminal in this great port city of the South.

He flew to New Orleans this morning from Washington, primarily to fire another volley in support of his trade expansion bill. After a welcome at City Hall following his dockside speech, the President planned to fly to Eglin Air Force Base in Northwest Florida for a fire-power demonstration, and on to Palm Beach tonight.

With tools provided by the administration trade bill, the President said this country would move toward "an open partnership among all free nations, a gradual levelling of trade barriers that will draw the whole non-Communist world together with the strings of economic self interest."

"That partnership," he added, "will be specifically and initially expressed in terms of a genuine Atlantic partnership—between the Common Market of Europe and the common market of 50 United States."

Mindful of the heavy stake New Orleans has in foreign trade through its active port, the President chose his background to slap

Sen. McClellan May Probe Estes Scandal

By WILLIAM THEIS

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. John L. McClellan, D-Ark., said today his investigating subcommittee may hold public hearings into the agriculture scandal involving Texas millionaire Billie Sol Estes.

But McClellan said if the hearings are held they will not take place for another month.

The chairman of the Senate investigations subcommittee added that he would not be stampeded by Republican demands to broaden the preliminary inquiry he already is making into the case.

McClellan told United Press International he expects public hearings may result from the present study.

GOP congressional leaders, sensing political dynamite in the fraud case, called for a sweeping House-Senate investigation of all financial operations of the Agriculture Department. Their demand was endorsed by former President Eisenhower.

Democratic leaders were quick to reply that both McClellan's investigations subcommittee and the Agriculture Department already are checking on the Estes case and should have a chance to do the job.

But the Republicans claimed that neither the Senate nor House evinced interest in the matter.

"Apparently the lid is on," conceded Senate GOP leader Everett M. Dirksen, Ill.

Senate Democratic leader Mike Mansfield, Mont., said he did not think a joint inquiry of the department is necessary but that Republicans "have a right" to seek it. He said he was "sure the McClellan committee and the department will do nothing to cover up any facts."

Senate Democratic whip Hubert H. Humphrey, Minn., said too "there is no lack of inquiries."

Estes has received contracts for storage of huge amounts of government grain. He is under indictment in Texas on charges of fraud arising out of sales of fertilizer tanks.

The Dallas News reported today in a copyrighted story that it learned N. Battle Hales, 48, a former Agriculture Department official who was transferred against his will when the Estes case broke, is willing to testify before a congressional committee about Estes' relations with the department.

Hales was an assistant to Emery E. Jacobs, who resigned when he was accused of going on a shopping tour with Estes. It was reported Hales recommended that the Justice Department investigate Estes more than six months ago, but his recommendation was overruled by superiors.

In other developments:

—Agriculture Secretary Orville Freeman said in a nationally televised interview the FBI, at his request, is investigating to see if Estes purchased expensive clothing for Dr. James T. Ralph, former assistant secretary of agriculture now training for a post in the Philippines.

City Seized In Venezuela Revolt By Naval Group

CARACAS (UPI) — The 1,000-man garrison of Venezuela's second largest naval base at Carupano revolted against the government today and seized the city.

The rebels broadcast a proclamation demanding the immediate resignation of President Romulo Betancourt. They claimed total control of the city.

"The armed forces want to re-establish a really democratic Venezuela," a rebel communique said. It said triumph of the uprising was assured.

Bloody fighting appeared imminent. The government mobilized sea, land and air forces to move against the eastern port city to the east of Caracas.

There was no immediate word of the fate of the small national guard detachment at Carupano.

A four-stripe line officer, Capt. Jose Teodoro Molina, was reported leading the revolt. The rebels seized the town's only radio station, radio Carupano.

Defense Minister Antonio Briceno Linares said troops were being embarked at Cumana, 60 miles west of Carupano and the nearest major city, and at La Guaira, the port city for Caracas.

It was the biggest military movement against the government in two years. However, officials described it as an isolated action.

The rebels were reported to have no major warships under their control but to be operating small, fast patrol craft.

All communications were cut with the area, which lies about 350 miles east of Caracas. But the government issued a communique confirming the uprising and saying its forces were in action.

The communique said the rest of the country was quiet.

US Is Expecting Russians To Renew Nuclear Tests Within Next Few Days

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Administration officials said today they have solid evidence the Soviet Union is prepared to resume atmospheric nuclear tests very soon, possibly within the next few days.

They said all available intelligence shows the Russians have completed preparations for a massive new series and are only awaiting what they consider the best time, from the standpoint of weather and political factors.

In addition, these officials said, psychological factors seemed to favor resumption of Russian tests while the United States is still engaged in its Pacific series of nuclear blasts.

By beginning while the U.S. tests are in progress, the Russians will not bring down upon themselves as much world condemnation as if they waited until the U.S. program ended and the atmosphere cleared.

The U.S. tests, which began April 25, were ordered by President Kennedy after more than three years during which the U.S. government held off such experiments.

The President, in ordering the resumption, said the new series was necessary because of "substantial gains" the Russians made in their massive blasts last fall which broke the three-year moratorium on nuclear testing.

U.S. officials are discussing the wisdom of proposing an uninspected ban on atmospheric tests as soon as the American and Russian tests this year have ended.

Officials reported a ground swell of opinion that the United States should propose such a ban, relying only on long-range detection methods to enforce it, since Russia will not agree on territorial inspection to check bootleg blasts held underground.

American scientists generally agree that present detection methods might not catch all atmospheric blasts.

$194.74 Taken In Church Safe Job

Safe robbers broke into Central Baptist Church, 513 E. Francis, sometime this week and looted the office safe of $194.74.

The burglary was not discovered until yesterday afternoon but Police Chief Jim Conner said today he believed it happened Monday night. Chief Conner said Mrs. Ruth Allen, church secretary, recalled that she had found a side door to the church open Tuesday morning.

Neither Mrs. Allen nor the Rev. T. O. Upshaw, pastor of the church, had occasion to open the safe until yesterday. They reported that $5 also was taken from a desk in the office.

Police said indications were that the safe was unlocked. There were no marks on the safe to indicate it had been forced open.

Robert Wells, 427 Hill St., reported to police that someone entered his garage and stole a set of boat controls from his motor boat. The controls were valued at $35.

Police were questioning a suspect today about the theft of an $8.95 jacket reported stolen by Melvin Bagwell of Tulsa, Okla. Bagwell said he was playing dominoes in a W. Foster St. club and that when he left the table for a few minutes the jacket disappeared from the back of a chair.

Mrs. Tony Smith, 332 N. Faulkner, an employe of Radio Station KHHH, reported the theft of her purse and a billfold containing $47 which disappeared from a desk while she was absent from her office for a few minutes.

Commissioners In Discussion Of Million-Dollar Improvement Job

Pampa's City Commission last night heard a million-dollar discussion and detailed report of an extensive engineering study on sewer and drainage requirements attendant to proposed improvements on State Highways 273 and 152 and U. S. Hwy. 60 through the south and west portions of the city.

The report was given to Mayor E. C. Sidwell and Commissioners Lloyd Simpson, Leon Holmes and L. P. Fort by Wayland Merriman of the firm of Merriman and Barber, consulting engineers. The engineers have been working on the survey report for the past five or six weeks.

The commissioners heard the estimated cost set at $967,000 for the total project, including drainage channels, storm sewers, bridges, curb and gutter work plus right-of-way costs.

This would include widening and paving of S. Barnes, S. Cuyler, W. Alcock and improvement of E. and W. Brown Sts.

The commission listened for an hour and a half as Merriman detailed his firm's plans and recommendations for what he termed immediate needs and a conservative program to be tied in with the plans of the State Highway Department street improvement program within the city limits.

Following the engineers' report the commissioners asked questions relative to the project and Merriman gave them the answers.

The mayor and commissioners, before adjourning, decided to review thoroughly the city's overall picture on municipal needs and necessary improvements within the next five or ten years in an effort to determine how these future requirements will tie in with the city's financial setup.

It was indicated that a million-dollar improvement bond issue will be necessary to finance the project if it is to be done concurrently with the State Highway Department's plans for Pampa highway improvements.

Officials called to mind that other major Pampa improvements on the horizon in the next few years will include, among other things, a solution of the city's over-loaded sewage disposal plant problem and preparations for the handling of water from the Canadian River dam. Both of these also will be "big money" projects, it was pointed out.

Mayor Sidwell indicated that quick action will be sought on the solution to the highway improvement projects as well as preliminary planning for the other major projects of the near future.

Some Suggestions For You If You Plan A Visit In Washington, D. C.

By HARRY FERGUSON
United Press International

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Tourists are passing through Washington now at the rate of about 33,000 a day. They spent $380 million here in 1961 and it looks like around $400 million this year.

The tourist guide-books list 68 main points of interest and for $18.50 you can get a two-day bus tour that includes all of them. Or you can get a three-hour job for $5. Washington is a fascinating and inspirational city, and every American should see it. But there are perils and pitfalls, too, and the following advice is free:

—Don't wander too far away from your sightseeing bus when you get out to inspect a building. Tour No. 62 lost Mrs. Elva Ginsburg the other day and nobody knows her present whereabouts. During a 20-minute stop at the National Archives Building she went inside to see the original of the Declaration of Independence and never returned. After a long wait, the driver of No. 62, Orrin Rodgers, reported by radio to headquarters and received this order: "Proceed to Treasury without Mrs. Ginsburg." If she is still in the Archives Building, she must be hungry, for it is filled with signs reading: "No smoking, no eating."

—Wear lightweight clothing. It's getting hot here.

—The driver of the sight-seeing bus delivers a running lecture but here you must proceed at your own risk. You will pick up fascinating information such as the fact that the Washington Monument is 555 feet, five and one-eighth inches tall and sways one-quarter of an inch in a 30-mile wind. But you also will get: "On our right, ladies and gentlemen, is the Bureau of Internal Revenue, ha ha." Your ticket clearly states that you cannot get off the bus at any intermediate stage and claim a refund. Like matrimony, you are aboard for better or for worse, in sickness and in health. Caveat emptor.

—Beware of advice from strangers. At the end of a long line stretching four abreast for three-quarters of a mile and winding into the White House stood Miss Doris Leppert, 12-year-old Girl Scout (five merit badges) from New York City in charge of a patrol of six. In a confident voice she stated that when we got inside the White House and reached the Green Room, Caroline Kennedy would be there to receive us. Perhaps Caroline's mother, too, but we shouldn't count too heavily on that. One hour later, we arrived in the Green Room which was inhabited only by an oil portrait of Calvin Coolidge. There was a long, embarrassed silence, in our little group and then Miss Leppert said briskly: "Over at the Bureau of Engraving we will see them making dollar bills right before our eyes."

There was a time, especially when Congress was in session, that the Capitol was the most popular tourist attraction. Mrs. Jacqueline Kennedy changed all that with her televised tour of the White House.

The lower floor of the White House is open to the public from 10 a.m. to noon on week-days and the line begins forming around 8 a.m. No matter what time you get in line you will not see any of the Kennedy family. Their living quarters are on the upper floors.

At the height of the tourist season almost 7,000 persons pass through the public rooms of the White House every hour. The State Dining Room seems to be the most popular room, especially with women tourists. There are 20 chairs at the table, but Miss Leppert explained to our group that Caroline did not have her meals in this room. She ate upstairs and, as a matter of fact, might be having luncheon right this minute which would explain why she had left the Green Room in the sole custody of Calvin Coolidge.

The Federal Bureau of Investigation also draws heavy tourist traffic, especially men with sons between the ages of 10 and 18.

The FBI puts on a good show by demonstrating finger-printing techniques, crime detection methods and weapons seized from notorious law violators.

Most visitors here judge the Lincoln Memorial to be the capital's single most impressive monument. Like the Taj Mahal, it should be seen at night and across water. Daniel Chester French's sculpture is carved out of Georgia marble. It depicts Lincoln seated in a flag-draped chair, his head bent slightly forward and his arms resting on each side of the chair as if he were about to rise. Tourists chatter away gaily when visiting most points of interest here, but inside the Lincoln Memorial there usually is silence.

This is the 50th anniversary of the planting of the first Japanese cherry blossom tree here by Mrs. William Howard Taft. They do not bear edible fruit, but burst into pink and white blossoms any time between March 20 and April 17. The Japanese sent them to this country in appreciation of President Theodore Roosevelt's help in ending the Russo-Japanese War with a treaty signed at Portsmouth, N.H.

Yukio Ozaki, mayor of Tokyo, was the man in charge of shipping the cherry trees and he had to send two consignments of 3,000 trees each. The first shipments became infected with insects and plant disease and had to be destroyed after arrival in the United States. The mayor agreed to send another shipment and then got off this neat ad lib: "Commencing with their first president, Americans have always been a little hard on cherry trees."

Foreign Commentary

By PHIL NEWSOM
UPI Foreign News Analyst

Of India's half-dozen next door neighbors, Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru at the moment is quarreling with two and on cool terms with a third.

He is disputing possession of Kashmir with Pakistan.

He is disputing with Red China about 12,000 square miles of border seized by the Red Chinese but claimed by India.

Deteriorating steadily are his relations with King Mahendra of the neighboring Himalayan state of Nepal.

The latter two situations are related and, as in the dispute with Pakistan, contain the seeds of armed conflict which neither India nor the whole of South Asia could afford.

Nepal is one of three small Himalayan states—Nepal, Sikkim and Bhutan—sandwiched between India and Red-Chinese controlled Tibet. India guarantees their defense and considers them within the Indian sphere of influence.

Nehru's quarrel with the 42-year old King Mahendra might be considered a family affair except that so far as India is concerned the king lately has been showing an unpleasant independence which includes closer relations with Red China.

An April summit meeting in New Delhi between King Mahendra and Nehru failed to improve conditions.

On his side, Mahendra accuses India of permitting Nepalese rebels to carry out attacks on Nepal from Indian soil.

Nehru is concerned primarily because of Nepal's agreement with Red China permitting construction of a highway between Lhasa, capital of Tibet, and Katmandu, capital of Nepal.

He also is unhappy with Nepal's border agreement with Red China which ceded to the Red Chinese the northern slope of famed Mt. Everest.

But the highway is the most important.

Nepal stretches along India's northern border for 500 miles and is the guardian of India's Ganges Valley. Completion of the road will mean that Red China has pierced the Himalaya barrier and will have an open highway to India's heartland.

Besides its strategic value, it also gives Red China an opportunity to encourage the smuggling of goods she needs from the outside world.

Nehru's concern, therefore, is understandable.

Red China not only promised to spend $8.8 million to build the road, she also promised to step up aid in other road building, communications and industrial projects, thus in effect placing the tiny kingdom under two spheres of influence—Chinese in the north and Indian in the south.

King Mahendra took over in 1955 a kingdom which for hundreds of years had been closed to the outside world, shot with intrigue and corruption. In 1960, he abandoned any pretense at democratic government, took over full powers and announced he would sponsor his own conception of a "guided democracy."

The Indians claim he is overlooking the lessons of history, specifically Red China's grab of Tibet after a period of pretended friendship.

FBI Director Wants Out Of 'Bet' Squabble

By United Press International

J. Edgar Hoover, chief of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, today found himself in the middle of the Texas horse racing squabble and was trying to get out.

Supporters of the pari- mutuel betting referendum in Saturday's primary elections have quoted Hoover as saying that racing is a well-supervised sport.

"Actually, from a law-enforcement standpoint, a well-conducted race track is a help to a community if only for the reason that the people are finding an outlet for their emotions, are enjoying a diversion," Hoover once said.

However, Hoover Thursday sent a telegram to Dr. W. R. White, chancellor of Baylor University and a leader of the fight against the issue, saying his support had not been solicited for legalized betting on racing in Texas and the statement was without his permission.

"I would not give permission for my statement to be used in this matter," Hoover told White, "since only the citizens of the area who have first-hand knowledge of the local situation can intelligently resolve the issues."

There's A Marked Difference Seen In Current Protestant-Catholic Relations

By LOUIS CASSELS
United Press International

The past few years have witnessed a remarkable change in Protestant - Catholic relationship.

The cold war among Christians has thawed to such a degree that it is no longer particularly newsworthy when a Protestant clergyman makes a call to the Vatican, or when Pope John says nice things about the "separated brethren."

Theologians and Biblical scholars from both sides of the Reformation divide are meeting together with increasing frequency to discuss their differences in an atmosphere of candor and mutual respect.

But to date there has been relatively little of this kind of friendly "dialogue" at the grass roots. Pastor Jones and Father Murphy may exchange civil greetings when they meet at a community function, but they are not likely to sit down together in the evening for a long talk about the meaning of baptism. Catholic and Protestant neighbors may play bridge together, but there is usually a tacit agreement that no one will bring up the sticky subject of religion.

Church leaders are now making an earnest effort to stimulate more concern and conversation about Christian unity at the community level.

Richard Cardinal Cushing, Catholic archbishop of Boston, stressed in a recent pastoral letter that "the work of unity is the work of every Christian." Several Catholic dioceses have appointed "ecumenical committee" to arrange local contacts with Protestant groups.

At its recent meeting in Kansas City, the general board of the National Council of Churches, composed of representatives of 34 major Protestant and Orthodox denominations, established as one of its chief objectives for the coming year "helping to make the spirit and purposes of the ecumenical movement effective in local communities."

The experience of Alexandria, Va., indicates that Protestant and Catholic laymen are ready to participate enthusiastically in the "dialogue" if they are given the right opportunity.

Since the fall of 1960, a group of Protestant pastors and Catholic priests had been holding regular meetings in Alexandria to talk about Christian doctrines. Although they made no effort to avoid "delicate" subjects or to gloss over their differences, they got along so well that they decided it was time to share the experience with others.

Last January, they organized a week-long Christian unity observance during which Protestants and Catholics held three joint meetings.

At the first meeting, in a Catholic parish hall, seats were hopefully provided for 100 people. Nearly 400 persons attended.

The second meeting was held in a lecture hall with a seating capacity of 700. Standees lined the walls, and many late-comers had to be turned away.

Rev. Upshaw Gives Topic For Sermon

"Remember Lot's Wife" will be the sermon subject of T. O. Upshaw, pastor of Central Baptist Church, in morning worship services at the church Sunday. Two services are set for Sunday morning. They are to begin at 8:45 and 11 a.m. Sunday school for all age groups will be at 9:45.

Training union for all age groups will begin at 6:30 p.m. with the evening worship service at 7:30 The pastor will be preaching.

Wednesday evening at 7 the YWAs, GAs, RAs, Sunbeams, and the Sunday school officers and teachers will meet. Mid - week prayer service will be at 8.

Thursday morning at 10 o'clock a meeting of all Vacation Bible School workers of the church will be held for the purpose of planning for the school scheduled to begin June 4.

HAROLD STARBUCK, MINISTER
HI-LAND CHRISTIAN CHURCH

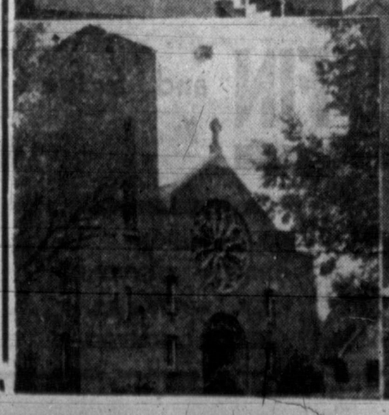

DISBELIEF IN THE CHURCH

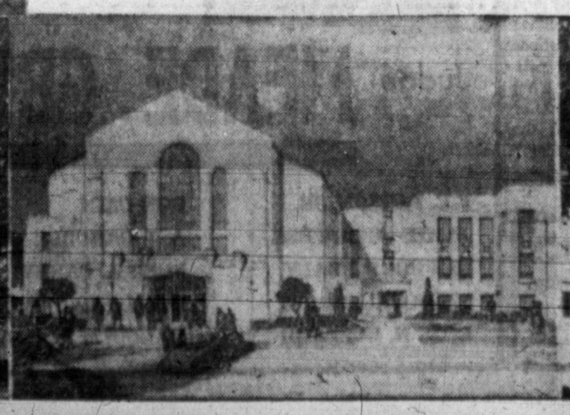

The great agnostic of the last century, with genius born of generations of believing ancestors, spoke at his brother's grave. What an orator he was! What and intellect was his! What a power for God he could have been! But beside his brother's grave Colonel Robert Ingersoll gave the answer of skepticism at the place of death. President Garfield, who was one of the pallbearers, said that the Colonel broke down and cried like a child in the delivery of that speech which can be read in less than three minutes.

Among other things in this masterfull oration, Ingersoll said, "Whether in mid-ocean, or amidst the breakers of the farther shore, a wreck must mark the end of each and all. Though every hour is rich with love, and every moment is jeweled with joy, it will at its close be a tragedy as deep and dark as can be woven of the warp and woof of mystery and death. Life is a narrow vale between the cold and barren peaks of two eternities: We strive in vain to look beyond the heights: We cry aloud, and the only answer is our wailing cry. From the voiceless lips of the unreplying dead there comes no word . . ."

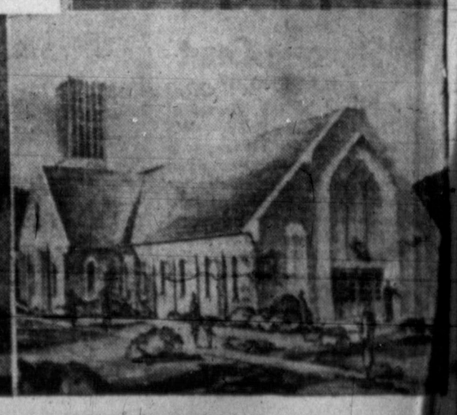

This is disbelief in the crucible! How much more blessed and satisfying is that simple trusting faith which declares: "I know Him whom I have believed and I am persuaded that He is able to guard that which I have committed unto Him against that day . . . For we know that if the earthly house of our tabernacle be disolved, we have a building from God, a house not made with hands, eternal in the Heavens."

This is the way of faiths! This is the one way of life that satisfies! And this can not be denied!

AUTO CLUB DIRECTORS — Here are members of the board of directors of the Panhandle Auto Club. The board met in Coronado Inn here last night with some local civic leaders to tell them of the advantages of membership in the nation-wide American Automobile Asociation, with which the Panhandle Auto Club is associated. Front row, left to right, are George Hammack of Amarillo, treasurer; Guy Lawrence of Hereford, president; and Charles Burton of Pampa, director. Back row, same order, Sam Bell of Amarillo, manager; Lloyd Laird of Amarillo, director; and Morris Higley of Childress, director. Services the club renders include sponsorship of Driver Education courses in area schools emergency aid for motorists, insurance coverage for drivers, and support for legislation important to motorists. United Press International

WASHINGTON (UPI)— George Romney, an industrialist turned politician, has just arranged to enjoy the all-out and probably angry opposition of union leaders to his effort to be elected governor of Michigan. He is a Republican.

Romney would have been opposed in Michigan by big labor any way you slice it. That is because the Democratic Party and big labor work the same side of the political street in Michigan and work it together. They are as alike, politically, as identical twins.

Deliberately or not, Romney now has invited the same big-spending, over organized, agonized labor opposition in Michigan this year that confronted the late Sen. Robert A. Taft in his 1950 Ohio re-election campaign. Big labor over-did it in Ohio that year. That probably increased the enormous margin of Taft's re-election victory.

Romney's bid for union opposition was made April 28 at Depauw University, Greencastle, Ind., in a speech before an industry and business conference. He had said it before, but on April 28 Romney best spelled out his idea that big labor is too powerful and should be curbed.

Ditto for big industry. But big industry is accustomed to the discipline of checks, balances, brakes and an occasional bust on the nose from big government.

Big labor is not so disciplined. On the contrary, big labor is licensed by Congress for monopoly. What Romney proposes is that this license be rescinded. The Advisory Committee on Labor-Management Policy reported this week to President Kennedy. Some of the industry members raised the labor monopoly question. But they mumbled, merely, compared to Romney's forthright remarks at Greencastle.

Labor's advisory committee representatives sharply countered that the monopoly baddies were industrial not labor. Labor Secretary Arthur J. Goldberg, a public member of the committee but more truly a spokesman for the Kennedy administration, was able to shove the labor monopoly-power question under the rug for consideration in some other study.

To hold your breath until that study takes place surely would be fatal. The monopoly-power of labor and industry, especially of labor, is developing however toward becoming a major political issue.

Some illuminating sentences of our national life, the individual . . . is transferring his rights of citizenship to the corporation, union, association, bureau or league, or idly watching his responsibilities drift to Washington.

"I think one of the most regrettable aspects of American life today is a situation where union power and employer power can be concentrated to a point where an industry that is basic to the economic welfare of either group. We do not need more law but modern law. Neither our labor laws nor our antitrust laws are up to date.

"Our inconsiste (labor) laws encourage the fostering of labor monopoly . . . "it is morally and economically wrong for either unions as unions or corporations as corporations to get into politics directly or indirectly. What I am talking about is direct or indirect political activity on the part of economic organizations."

Romney will get some cheers on that.

FREE PAINT JOB

ST. LOUIS, Mo. (UPI) — Dr. James H. Allen, 36, got his "stolen" sports car back Wednesday with a complimentary bright red paint job.

Allen left the car in a hospital parking lot the other day. So did a woman patient, who ordered repair shop operator Earl Boyd to pick up her car and paint it while she was hospitalized.

The woman called Boyd Wednesday to ask why her car hadn't been picked up and Boyd discovered that the brightly painted auto he had outside his shop was the one reported stolen by Allen.

Television In Review

By RICK DU BROW
United Press International

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — There is such a general abhorrence of television violence lately that I tuned in ABC-TV's "The Untouchables" Thursday night half expecting to find Eliot Ness in a panel discussion with the Capone boys.

I am happy to report that things haven't changed a bit on this consistently well-knit show, despite an idiotic sort of reverse trend exemplified by letters to this viewer in which terrible programs are defended on the sole basis that they are non-violent.

It is a tribute to the balanced sense of many viewers that "The Untouchables" will return again next season. No one, of course, likes to see the use of violence abused, as it has been by many inferior shows. But the only thing a writer or performer can be held accountable for is whether his achievement is artistically successful.

Thursday night's "Untouchables" was, as usual, a success, particularly because of the stunning performance of Stephen Hill as a bankrupt railroad man who throws in his lot with the underworld to save his empire and instead sees his family name and business degraded.

There was violence, and it added legitimately to the dramatic impact. It is not the network's fault if children watch it, especially at such a late hour. You can, after all, turn it off.

Once again, "The Untouchables" painted its villains without whitewash. It made clear that no matter ho wexpensive their suits, they are still bums.

Thursday night, the program's punch came far less from the violence than from Hill's portrayal of a man in quiet desperation, basically a human being with animal instincts, sipping himself into a semi-stupor with coffee cups filled with whiskey in his plush office.

In sum, there is a proper place for violence. And I suspect that an occasional, well-reasoned punch in the nose is not as dangerous in the long run as the empty way of life portrayed as desirable by such shows as "Ozzie and Harriet." It might, in fact, be dangerous to get so sissified that we arrive at a point where we believe a punch in the nose is never in order.

The channel Swim: Emile Griffith, the other boxer in the ring when Benny (Kid) Paret was fatally injured, will be interviewed may 16 on NBC-TV's "David Brinkley's Journal."

-AFTER 22 YEARS IT'S TIME FOR A CHANGE-

Walter Rogers Reports

Why Mr. Norman?

"Mr. Norman" is Mr. James M. Norman, who resides in Memphis, Texas. He was wronged by the government — his own Federal government; not deliberately wronged, perhaps, but nevertheless a victim of too much red tape or inefficency or, perhaps, a reasonable mistake. In any event, Mr. Norman has been out $2,001.48, which, in the opinion of the House of Representatives (which passed a bill for his relief), he is entitled to recover.

He would have been well on his way to recovering it, had the other body of the Congress (sometimes referred to as the Senate) proceeded to discuss his bill for relief on its merits. However, when the bill for the relief of James M. Norman came up on the calendar of the Senate, an amendment known as the Mansfield-Dirksen Amendment was offered, to substitute the provisions of S. 2750, a bill to bar arbitrary literacy tests in Federal elections, for the contents of the Norman bill.

Mr. Mansfield is the Majority Leader of the Senate, and a Democrat. Mr. Dirksen is the Minority Leader of the Senate, and a Republican. So, it would seem that Mr. Norman involuntarily became a bipartisan victim.

If the amendment is adopted, it will mean that Mr. James M. Norman, individual citizen of the United States, will be denied the relief to which he is entitled and be forced to begin anew the mechanics of obtaining a recovery of his money. The irony of the situation lies in the fact that the debate on S. 2750 will no doubt produce much weeping and wailing about the violation of the rights of individual citizens of the United States of America.

Yet here is Mr. Norman, an innocent victim of the fault of the Federal government, whose rights as an individual citizen are being ignored and encroached upon. And, this encroachment of individual rights in this particular situation is being used as a platform or a vehicle from which to argue against the encroachment upon individual rights. One wonders, how inconsistent is inconsistency?

The facts of the Norman case are simply this: in 1952 he was approached by representatives of the Federal government to purchase crop insurance on property owned by him in Foard County, Texas. He yielded to the entreaties and agreed to purchase the crop insurance. Under the rules then applicable, such crop insurance, once purchased, remained in force and was reinstated each year unless affirmatively cancelled by the landowner. And, in the event a landowner did not cancel the insurance, he was charged the premium for the full year and it could be collected from him by law and, in fact, was in many cases. Hence, Mr. Norman was insured beginning with the 1952 crop year, and from year to year afterward, through 1958.

For some unexplained reason, the description records reflected section 26 rather than section 16. This was unknown to Mr. Norman, as he had not made out the applications but had only signed them in the first instance at the request of representatives of the Federal government. In 1952, 1953, 1955, and 1957, indeminities were claimed in accordance with the contract and were paid by the proper agency in the Department of Agriculture.

It will be remembered that this was the period of the long drouth in Texas. In 1958 there was another crop failure and Mr. Norman again claimed the indemnity to which he was entitled. It was then that the Department of Agriculture discovered that his land was actually section 16 and not section 26. They also discovered that section 16 was not in an insurable area, although this fact had never been made known to Mr. Norman.

Consequently, the 1958 claim was rejected and a demand was made upon Mr. Norman to pay to the Federal government the sum of $2,001.48. When Mr. Norman made these facts known to me, I immediately instituted an investigation of the matter and concluded that Mr. Norman was not at fault, but that the fault lay with the Federal government. In fact, had the insurer been a private corporation instead of the Federal government and had made the same mistake, any claim against Mr. Norman would have been barred by the statute of limitations, or Mr. Norman could have successfully defended a law suit from an equitable standpoint.

However, not so with the Federal government.

Under the circumstances, I introduced a bill for the relief of Mr. James M. Norman in the summer of 1960. Due to the lateness of the time, the bill was not reached during that session of the Congress. Hence, on January 3, 1961, I reintroduced the bill and proper hearings were had before the Judiciary Committee of the House of Representatives. The bill, H.R. 1361, was favorably reported from the Committee and was subsequently passed by the House of Representatives and sent to the Senate. It passed through the Judiciary Committee of that body and was placed on the calendar for consideration by the Senate. Mr. Norman was kept fully advised of the progress of the measure, as he was entitled.

He no doubt subscribed to the policy that in this country justice is slow, but sure. There is no doubt in his mind about it being slow, but when his bill became the vehicle for a civil rights dispute with the bipartisan support of both the Republican and the Democratic Parties, I wonder if Mr. Norman is not somewhat skeptical about justice being sure.

In any event, let it be known here and now that we shall continue the fight for justice, whether it be Mr. Norman or any other individual citizen of this nation who is entitled to redress.

Canadian Dollar Exchange Rate Is At 'Fixed' Figure

By MAURICE CUTLER
United Press International

OTTAWA (UPI) — The Canadian dollar stood today at the fixed international exchange rate of 92½ cents in relation to the United States dollar after more than 11 years of a "floating" rate.

The government announced shortly before midnight Wednesday the rate was being pegged at "a definitive rate" to bring stability to international transactions.

Finance Minister Donald Fleming said stabilization of the Canadian dollar at 92½ cents in terms of U.S. currency would be "of great advantage to the Canadian economy," which has been plagued in recent years by heavy international payments deficits.

Another way of expressing the new fixed exchange rate is that one United States dollar equals $1.08 Canadian.

At the close of trading in New York Wednesday the Canadian dollar stood at slightly more than 95 cents — or 2½ cents more than the new rate.

The lower rate will reduce the cost of Canadian products in international markets and increase the cost of imports, giving Canadian products a better competitive position at home and abroad.

Canada had been the only major country without a fixed exchange rate, and under the floating rate the Canadian dollar had floated upwards by late 1960 to a premium of six cents above the U.S. dollar.

Alarmed by the rising cost of Canadian exports and the lower cost of imports resulting from the overvaluation, the Canadian government began taking action to drive the rate down.

A Look At The Gubernatorial Candidates

Edwin A. Walker

EDITORS—The following is the last of a series of biographical portraits of each of the six Democratic and two Republican candidates for governor of Texas.

WALKER BIOGRAPHY

By United Press International

Edwin A. Walker is a native Texan, a ramrod-stiff West Point graduate described by admirers as a crusader on horseback.

His opponents agree, but claim his horse is aimed in the wrong direction.

Born on a ranch near Center Point, Kerr County, Tex., Walker is now 52 years old. Wherever he goes, controversy surrounds him.

"I am for America, first, last and always," he likes to say. He argues that American youth has not been educated against the insiduous doctrine of communism, and that communism has been working from within to the country's heart.

Walker attended public schools in the Center Point area and then New Mexico Military Institute at Roswell, N. M. He graduated 229th in a class of 296 from West Point in 1931. He is a bachelor.

Walker's star began to shine brightly during World War II. He commanded the Canadian-American-First Special Commando Force in France, Germany and Italy.

In Korea, he was a regimental commander in the famed 24th Division which helped hold the center of the Allied line against the Communists.

He was commander of the 101st Airborne Division after Korea, and was in charge of the troops when President Eisenhower rushed them to Little Rock to maintain peace during the school integration crisis. He later said he did what he was ordered to do, but had no stomach for it.

In 1959, he was sent to Germany as commander of the 24th Division. His growing feeling that the political education of American youth had been neglected led to his pro-blue anti-Communist education program for his troops, and eventually to his return home.

He was relieved of his command because of his political training program and, according to the Army, "participating in controversial activities." The Army also said he was a member of the John Birch Society.

Walker resigned his commission, forfeiting a $10,000 annual pension and allowances worth another $2,000 a year because, he said, he wanted to be free to campaign against the dangers of communism at home.

Wall Street In Review

NEW YORK (UPI) — Bradbury K. Thurlow of Winslow, Cohu & Stetson says it is logical to expect the persistent stock market liquidation witnessed in the early months of the year to let up, at least temporarily.

And while this is happening, the analyst says, the various groups could sort themselves out and those issues which are taking over the reins of leadership could begin to demonstrate their fundamental abilities.

The stock market expert says this interim period seems a good time to look for promising special situations while waiting for the new patterns to crystalize. Also, he adds, it should be used as an opportunity to sell those stocks that may be in for further trouble if deflationary psychology and fear of price controls come to dominate investment thinking.

Kenneth Ward of Hayden, Stone & Co. says while it may be safer to await a return of market confidence before initiating any new purchases, history shows that when bearishness is so prevalent as it is right now, the market may be reaching a turning point.

The Dow Theory Trader is predicting a sharp "snap-back" in the market to the upside "and the early beginnings of a good summer rally in May to new highs for many stocks by July or August."

Dear Abby....

Change Daily Routine... Not Delivery Route

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I am a delivery man. There is a divorcee on my route who is undergoing psychiatric treatment. She is lonely and says that her doctor told her she needs someone to talk to. Whenever I stop at her house she invites me in for coffee. I stay and visit with her a little while. I told my wife about it, because there is nothing to hide, and she had a fit. She told me not to do it again. I am afraid if I refuse this lady's hospitality she might have a setback. What should I do?

DELIVERY MAN

DEAR MAN: Even though you may be "what the doctor ordered," I think you ought to change your routine — if not your route. Your wife is no fool.

DEAR ABBY: Is there anything wrong with answering a question with another question?

I came home from school and my father said to me, "Did you put your books and things away?" I replied, "Do you see them?" He walked over and slapped my face. Another time he asked, "How are you doing in algebra?" I answered in a very nice tone, "Did you get any complaints?" He slapped me a good one for that. I am getting tired of being slapped around and want to know if you think my answers to him were disrespectful. They were simple questions, weren't they?

SLAPPED FOR ASKING

DEAR SLAPPED: When you are asked a "simple" question, reply with a simple answer. Like yes or no. Either that, or duck, dear.

DEAR ABBY: Please give me any suggestions you have for how to get along with a man who shouts at the top of his lungs whenever things don't go his way. He comes from a real noisy, loud-mouthed family. They yell and holler at each other, and the one who yells loudest wins the argument. I knew what his people were like before I married him, but wasn't smart enough to know that as soon as the honeymoon was over he would act the same as the people he grew up with. We've been married 17 years and have 4 children and he thinks we are just here to scrape his feet on. I thank you.

DOOR MAT

DEAR DOOR MAT: You are not going to change your husband, so you might as well change your tactics. Avoid subjects that provide his shouting. Tune out his tirades with practiced deafness and I'll tell you what books to read on the subject.

For a personal (unpublished) reply to your problem, send Abby a self-addressed, stamped envelope.

For Abby's booklet, "How To Have A Lovely Wedding," send 50 cents to Abby, Box 3365, Beverly Hills, Calif.

Pretty Criticism Masks Real Wish

By Mrs. Muriel Lawrence

Today, between 4:15 and 8 p.m. Millie's mother said these things to her:

"Is the sofa the place to drop all your school things the minute you get in the house? . . . There are other people in this family who will want a slice of that cake . . . When I was your age I'd have been ashamed to sit reading a trashy movie magazine while my mother got supper on the table . . . How can we listen to this television program with your record player blaring out that rock-'n'-roll noise upstairs?"

In response to the last remark, Millie, slamming her door, muttered, "Oh, shut up, why don't you?" One cannot wonder. Ever since she got home from school she has been pursued with reproaches FOR NOT DOING THINGS HER MOTHER HAS NOT ASKED HER TO DO. Every order given her from "Take your books off the sofa" to "Turn down your record player" has been delivered as deviously as the messages hidden by spies in old newspapers left on a park bench. In these complaining orders neither the commander nor the command has been visible. Both have been left vague and unidentified.

There is nothing that children resent in parents so much as they resent this "hidden persuader."

Like those advertisements which suggest that our bodies will offend others if we don't deodorize, brush our teeth and wash our hair with somebody's merchandise, the "hidden persuader" in Mille's mother works to get what it wants - help with serving dinner — by seeking to make Millie ashamed of herself. Like us, children can stand only so much of this vague but pervasive accusation. To protect their nervous systems, they can only develop a chronic distrust and resistance to parents who indulge in it that is as nerve-racking to the parents as the parents' evasiveness is to them.

The capacity to give a straightforward command to a child is a chief requirement of parental responsibility.

Parental responsibility tells Millie to take her school things off the sofa — and risks the consequences of its demand, no matter what they are or where they lead. If it doesn't choose to risk the consequences, it removes her things from the sofa itself without talk of any kind. IT IS FREE TO COMMAND OR NOT TO COMMAND.

If we cannot say, "Turn down that record player, please," we may need to know that we fear challenge to what we want as "bad" or "selfish" or some other immoral thing. We need to become acquainted with that "hidden persuader" in us which has always sought to get along with other people by pretending that we don't want anything from them.

People agree: it's time for a change!" (Pd. Pol. Adv.)

BIG MAN WITH A BIG JOB is Randy Matson, the 6-5, 220-pound field star for the Pampa Harvesters who is competing in the state track and field meet in Austin today and Saturday. Matson is holding the shot and the discus, the two events which the broad-shouldered athlete will compete in in his bid for two state titles. (Daily News Photo)

Eder Jofre Is Favored 2-1 To Retain Bantamweight Ring Title In Bout With Herman Marquez Tonight

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — It will be an interior decorator against a longshoreman tonight when Eder Jofre of Brazil defends his world bantamweight title against Herman Marquez, ambitious dockworker from Stockton, Calif.

Jofre, who is undefeated in 44 professional contests, is a 2-1 choice to defeat Marquez and retain the undisputed title which he captured last Jan. 18 when he stopped Johnny Caldwell of Ireland in a showdown bout.

The Brazilian is a disarming looking, studious type in street clothes. He once harbored ambitions to go into interior decorating on a fulltime basis but has been so successful in the prize ring that he has stayed there.

"I expect to win by a knockout in the later rounds," Jofre said through an interpreter during a physical examination Thursday. "But I am prepared to go the full distance at top speed if necessary."

Marquez also expressed confidence.

"I am in excellent condition and I feel that is all that is necessary for a fighter to win,' he declared.

Jofre is expected to collect about $30,000 for tonight's defense, including fees for a special broadcast to Brazil. There is no domestic television or radio broadcast.

Marquez has said that he is happy with his $5,000 guarantee and the shot at the title.

Jofre, a skilled boxer with lots of power, will be seeking to make Marquez his 12th straight knockout victim.

Marquez, at 28, is two years older than Jofre but not as experienced. He has 9 wins, seven defeats and a draw on his record.

Harvester Star Favored In Shot, Discus Events

Randy Matson marches into the Austin arena today in quest of the state discus title in Class AAAA as the farflung state track and field meet gets underway in the capital city.

Matson will wind up his magical arm today at 3:30 p.m. in an effort to cop the first of two state titles in the two-day meet. Saturday Randy tries for the state title in the shot put at 1 p.m.

The 6-5 220-pound cinder star has been given an excellent chance of winning both titles in the big showdown starting today which pits the state's finest athletes in five different divisions.

Matson earned the right to compete in the shot and discus by winning ten consecutive meets in the shot put and eight out of the ten meets in the discus throw. Randy had his finest hour in the Regional meet in Odessa when he tied the all-time Texas high school record in the shot put with a toss of 62 feet 8½ inches. Matson also threw the discus 183 feet 6½ inches to come within three feet of the state mark of 189 feet set by Carl Pelligrini of Jesuit high of Dallas.

Matson has thrown the 12-pound iron ball better than 55 feet in every meet he has participated in this year as sportswriters throughout West Texas as well as throughout the state have acclaimed his achievements for the past two months.

The broad - shouldered junior, who hurt his arm a couple of weeks ago, has been nursing his arm along to where it appears to be in excellent shape for his double assault on the record books and the state titles in both the shot put and the discus.

Here is a rundown on Matson's record - breaking performances in both the shot put and the discus this year. Shot records are listed first and discus marks are second.

Ft. Stockton Invitational — 55 feet 10¾ inches, 159 feet 8 inches.

Snyder Relays — 58 feet 8 inches, 156 feet 2 inches.

Graham Invit. — 55 feet 7 inches, 157 feet 8 inches.

Odessa Relays — 56 feet 3½ inches.

Lubbock Invt. — 57 feet 6 inches.

Amarillo Relays — 59 feet 3½ inches, 167 feet 1 inch.

District 3-AAAA Meet — 60 feet 10 inches, 155 feet 8 inches.

Regional 1 Meet — 62 feet 8½ inches, 186 feet 6½ inches.

Mustang Relays — 59 feet, 177 feet 6 inches.

Red Raider Relays — 60 feet 3 inches, 165 feet 2 inches.

Records Are Expected To Fall In State Meet

AUSTIN (UPI) — More than 30 records are in danger when the best of Texas' schoolboy track and field performers go after championships in five divisions starting tonight in the 51st annual state meet.

Class AAA and AA titlists will be determined tonight. Champions in Class AAAA, A and B will be crowned Saturday afternoon.

Andrews, Class AAA champion in 1958, 1959, 1960 and 1961, qualified only its mile relay team for the meet and a new champion will emerge in that division. Robstown may be the successor but will have to fight off strong Brownwood, Lamesa, San Antonio Lee and Alvin teams.

Abilene stands a good chance of repeating in AAAA, but will be pressed by San Antonio Highlands, Baytown and Amarillo Tascosa. Blomington returns to defend its Class A title against strong teams from Gaston, Whitesboro, Hallsville, Hawkins, Anahuac and Chillicothe.

Fort Stockton, with four individuals and two fine relay teams, is the pick in Class AA. Quanah, Daingerfield, Duncanville, Brady, and Fredericksburg are the con- Baird, Bartlett, and Masonic tenders. Booker, Rising Star, Baird, Bartlett, and Masonic Home are the cream of the Class B teams.

So classy is this year's crop of athletes that 11 of the 14 overall meet records may tumble.

Class AAAA, which holds nine of the 14 overall marks appear in for a massive rewriting of its division records.

New records are almost certain in both hurdles, where the field is headed by John Roderick of Highland Park and Fred Brocker of Austin.

Pampa's Randy Matson has already bested the AAAA discus record by 11 feet and Abilene's David Jeffries, who has soared 13 feet 8 inches, should better the pole vault standard.

The final event of the two-day carnival will be the AAAA mile relay and it promises to be a blazer. With probably the finest overall field ever assembled in this event, it is likely the record of 3:17.5 will go.

The 100-yard dash mark of 9.5, first established 19 years ago by Charlev Parker of San Antonio, is within reach of a fine group of springers including Steve Laddy of San Angelo and Mike McCright of Wichita Falls.

Thirteen champions will defend their titles in the meet. The entries also include four champions still around from the 1960 meet.

Sir Gaylord Turns Lame Before Race

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (UPI) —Tension mounted on the backstretch at Churchill Downs today, where trainers supervised the final preparations of the 18 horses entered in Saturday's 88th running of the Kentucky Derby.

BULLETIN

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (UPI)—Sir Gaylord, the Kentucky Derby favorite, turned up lame after a workout this morning making his status for Saturday's 88th running of the Kentucky Derby uncertain.

Injury already has struck down one horse which came all the way from California. It also threatened to eliminate a second shipped from New York for a chance to win the most coveted prize in horse racing.

And the possibility that it could happen to them had other owners and trainers on pins and needles in the few remaining hours before the first of the triple crown classics.

Three years of dreaming of a Kentucky Derby victory were ruined for Lionel Sternberger on Thursday when Doc Jocoy pulled up lame after a workout. The colt had a bruised foot and Sternberger immediately decided to pass up the Derby.

"I never run a horse that has a pimple on him and I won't try to run Doc Jocoy in the Derby. I just like my horse too much," Sternberger said.

Owner Verne Winshell reacted differently when infection was discovered on the left hind heel of Donut King.

It was the same foot the colt injured at Santa Anita and forced trainer Ron McAnally to put Donut King on the sidelines, missing the rich races at the meeting.

Winchell insisted that Donut King be entered in the rose run over the objections of McAnally in hopes that the trouble would clear up quickly. That appeared unlikely, for the vetenarian had to cut away too much of the hoof to clean out the infection.

It was a day of decision, too, for Christopher T. Chenery and Casey Hayes, who trains the Meadow Stable horses for him. Sir Gaylord, the 8 to 5 Derby favorite, and Cicada, a hard-hitting filly which finished only a nose behind Ridan in the Florida Derby, both were entered in the classic. But Cicada also was entered in today's running of the $35,000 added Kentucky Oaks, for which she is an odds-on favorite.

All hopes of having Cicada become the second filly ever to win the Kentucky Derby, joining Regret, evaporate if Chenery and Hayes decide to run her in the Oaks.

Ridan, undefeated in seven races as a 2-year-old and the winner of the Florida Derby and the Blue Grass Stakes, is second choice for the Derby at 5 to 2 with Manny Ycaza riding.

Six Seniors Are Seeing Action In Finale Today

Mike Clark will attempt to salvage the final game of the season for the Pampa Harvesters today at 4 p.m. when he toes the hill against the Borger Bulldogs in Borger in the season finale in District 3-AAAA competition.

The Harvesters, 7-6 for the year, downed the Bulldogs in their first round skirmish, 2-1 in 12 innings. The Harvesters won the marathon contest with a single run in the bottom half of the 12th inning to post the win.

Clark was also the winning pitcher in that game.

The Harvesters won their last outing in extra innings also over Palo Duro in the last half of the eighth, winning 3-2.

This will be the final game for six seniors, who will be seeing action for the final time for the Green and Gold. Playing in their last game for the Harvesters will be catcher Mike Stewart, pitcher Mike Clark, shortstop Butch Crossland, first baseman Gerrel Owens, left fielder John Arthur and third baseman Ab Cullender.

Around the infield today will be Owens at first, Jerry Glover at second, Crossland at shortstop and either Cullender or Ricky Stewart at third base. Glover knocked in the deciding run for the Harvesters against the Dons with a deep fly in the eighth inning while Crossland had a key double in the seventh which knocked in the Harvesters first run of the game.

In the outfield will be Arthur in left, Kenny Hebert in center and Howard Reed in rightfield.

Mike Stewart will handle the catching duties while Clark will be on the mound seeking victory number four in loop play. He has lost three.

Simmons Cops Fourth Straight Mound Win

by Milton Richman
UPI Sports Writer

Southpaw Curt Simmons and right-hander Johnny Buzhardt offered a pair of classic examples today that the "best information" in baseball sometimes can be worth less than ten cents.

Take Simmons' case first. Not only because he pitched the St. Louis Cardinals to a seven-hit 4-0 victory over the Houston Colts Thursday night, but also because he has won four straight without a loss and two of those victories have been shutouts.

Three years ago, according to the "best information," Simmons was all through.

That information seemed right, too, in view of Simmons' trip to the minors and subsequent outright release by the Philadelphia Phillies.

The Cardinals took a chance on him, though, picked him up for a song and have been congratulating themselves ever since.

Buzhardt's case is somewhat different. The Phillies traded him to the Chicago White Sox last November and the first time the New York Yankees got a look at him they rubbed their hands in glee.

That first time was last March 24 during spring training at Sarasota, Fla. Buzhardt blanked the Yanks that day but they said it would never happen again. Not with the stuff he threw.

So guess what?

Thursday night, Buzhardt snapped a seven-game Yankee winning streak with a fancy five-hitter in a 1-0 victory for the White Sox. It was Buzhardt's fourth victory, including his second straight over the Yankees, against one defeat.

Jim Landis' sixth homer in the fourth inning was enough to inflict the first defeat of the season on Whitey Ford, who previously had won twice.

The victory boosted the White Sox into second place, 1½ games behind the pace-setting Yankees. In other American League games, the Boston Red Sox beat the Washington Senators, 7-4, the Minnesota Twins rapped the Baltimore Orioles, 8-4, and the Kansas City A's downed the Detroit Tigers, 6-4.

Only three games were scheduled in the National League where the first-place San Francisco Giants won their ninth straight, 8-4, over the Pittsburgh Pirates, and the Phillies outlasted the Milwaukee Braves, 9-8.

Pete Runnels helped end a five-game Red Sox losing streak by driving in three runs against the Senators. Bill Monbouquette (2-2) was the winner although rookie Dick Radatz had to bail him out after Harry Bright hit a pinch two-run homer and Jim Piersall doubled in the ninth.

Don Mincher's grand-slam plus homers by Bernie Allen and winning pitcher Jack Kralick accounted for all of the Twins' runs against the Orioles. Mincher's grand-slam was his second of the season and came in the first inning off loser Milt Pappas.

Rookie reliever Diego Segui blanked the Tigers over the final three innings to pick up his second victory for the Athletics. Norm Siebern homered for the A's while Norm Cash and Bill Bruton connected for the Tigers. Rookie Doug Gallagher was the loser.

The Cards clinched their game against the Colts on Bill White's two-run homer off loser Dave Giusti in the first inning. Curt Flood homered in the third and now has hit safely in all 16 of the games he has played this season.

Grainger McIlhaney

QUALIFICATIONS: Graduate of The University of Texas in law and business; lawyer, small-town busines man and farmer; veteran of World War II; church, lodge, and civic worker; married with three small children.

EXPERIENCED LEGISLATOR: Graiger McIlhany is respected by his fellow members — has the unique record of never having a bill up for final passage defeated in the House; McIlhany is now in point of service one of top ranking members of the Legislature.

RECORD OF PROVEN ACCOMPLISHMENT: Grainger McIlhany is seeking your support on the basis of his work for this District and our State. McIlhany believes that a candidate should run his qualifications rather than on a campaign of "mud-slinging".

- COMMENDED by Texas Sheriff's Association for his work for better law enforcement; McIlhany is author of many bills for narcotic control, traffic safety, curbs on juvenile delinquency; and ban of lewd and indecent literature.
- PROVEN leader for good schools and state institutions effeciently managed. McIlhany is now representing Texas on the Graduate Commission of the Southern Regional Education Board upon the nomination of Texas A & M College.
- CO-SPONSORSHIP OF ORIGINAL FARM ROAD BILL passed in 1949 — thirty-five thousand miles of road have been built under this program. HOUSE SPONSOR of bill passed this year to provide maintenance funds for farm roads and relieve the primary highway fund of this expense.
- FOR LEADERSHIP IN FARM AND RANCH LEGISLATION, Grainger McIlhany, Chairman of the House Agriculture Committee, has been commended by the Texas Animal Health Council, the Texas Farm Bureau, the Texas Association of Soil Conservation Districts, and the Texas Vocational Agricultural Teachers Association.

- OIL AND GAS: McIlhany is a member of the House Oil and Gas Committee and is recognized as a leader in protecting the interests of the royalty owners and producers of the Panhandle. McIlhany sponsored repeal of the unfair manufacturing tax on carbon black, which has helped keep a valuable payroll industry in this area.

GRAINGER McILHANY PLEDGES his continued efforts to accomplish:

- Correction of inequities in preseat sales tax. McIlhany voted against the passage of the conference committee plan which is the present sales tax because its complicated provisions create an unreasonable hardship on the people of Texas.
- Revision of auto merit rating plan to correct unfair provisions.
- Pasage of an effective small loan bill. McIlhany has actively supported all bills to stop the loan sharks. Figures compiled by the Texas Legislative Council show that on loans of under fifty dollars, these illegal operators charge interest rates that range from 262% to 347%. This is a disgrace to Texans and must be stopped.

Tomorrow's Primary Election

Gray County voters, in common with the rest of Texas, will cast their ballots tomorrow in the first primaries for both Democratic and Republican parties. They will be making their choices of public officials for the next two years from governor all the way down to the precinct level.

For the past several weeks Texas citizens have been deluged with candidate appeals that ranged from common sense to the absurd and ridiculous.

Voters should keep in mind that by their vote tomorrow they will be nominating a person to function as one of their board of directors in government, regardless of whether it is at the national, state, county, city or precinct level.

Many grave decisions will be made in Texas in the next two years, and these decisions will be made by the men the electors nominate tomorrow. So the question is, who can best make these decisions in the interest of freedom and self-reliance?

The voters of Texas, especially those in the Panhandle, have shown in the past that they want to see men elected who are dedicated to the concept of limiting government.

And the Texas Panhandle tomorrow is offering two men of this same conservative type whom we believe to be good choices to represent the area in the Senate and House of Representatives at Austin.

State Senator Grady Hazlewood of Amarillo is bidding for re-election from the 31st district in the Democratic primary. Senator Hazlewood's record is his best witness. He has consistently voted against frill spending in state appropriation bills, opposed natural resource tax increases, opposed state control of underground water and state control of the use of insecticides and chemical sprays. He has been a stable, capable state senator.

Certainly, voters will have an historically clear-cut choice between Warren Fatheree, G.O.P. candidate for 87th district State Representative, and an opponent who had difficulty making up his mind under which party banner he thought he could garner the most votes. Fatheree, a sound and solid citizen, long has been on record as a conservative who is dedicated to free enterprise and opposed to federal encroachments and controls.

Voters have only to study the records and aims of Hazlewood and Fatheree. A vote for them would help insure able representation in Austin for their respective districts. People in these districts are noted for staunch support of limited government and the free enterprise system. Another opportunity to continue that support will come at the polls tomorrow.

What's In A Word

Triumph is a word which indicates that a certain amount of "try" is followed by a great deal of "umph."

You Pay For Pro-UN Mail

The dissemination of ideas is always of major importance. Freedom of thought and expression is of paramount consideration among any people who value the idea of liberty.

We champion the idea that those who disagree with us have an equal right to express their views. But in the interest of both freedom and justice, it should be pointed out that there is one set of ideas, mighty popular these days, which, regardless of doctrine, are defeatist ideas insofar as freedom of expression is concerned.

We are referring to the popular custom of having the government express its opinion on various subjects.

Lets take the UN as an example. We do not agree with the philosophy of the UN, nor do we favor supporting it with tax money. We consider it an active threat to the peace, a catch-all for defeated politicians, and a mischief maker without parallel in the history of the world.

We have often said so. Also, we have printed some opinions from others who disagree with our views.

But the thing that gets us disturbed is the fact that both the UN and our own government spend millions of dollars in putting out information respecting the UN. We wouldn't approve of this even if the government took the same view as we do of the UN. Because when the government takes any position in the field of expression, it always injures the people who don't happen to agree with it.

Here is what we mean:

The other day there came to our desk through the mail some pro-UN material. The postage meter imprint says: "Postage and fees paid Dept. of State." Inside the envelope was a little booklet boosting the operation of UNESCO, together with a page reprinted from the Congressional Record.

There was no notice on either of these documents that they had been privately paid for. Instead, there was the bland assertion on the envelope that the State Department was in the business of propaganda dissemination. And every dime the State Department has to spend, it took away from the people of the United States, directly or indirectly.

Now it happens that whenever we think of the UN, we also think of UNESCO. If there is one agency of the UN which to our view is the worst of the lot, that would be UNESCO.

So here we are, taxpayers in the United States, being coerced into paying for the printing and distribution of stuff we heartily condemn.

This is not freedom of speech.

Sure, the people who believe in the UN and in UNESCO have a right to say so. But do they have a right to assess us, who hold to different views, and compel us to subsidize their propaganda efforts?

They may have the power to do it, but nothing on earth can grant them this position of privilege as a right; as a part of the concept of freedom of expression. We know quite well what it costs to print and distribute ideas. But the use of tax measures to wrest from everyone the money necessary to pay for the dissemination of one set of ideas is absolutely immoral.

We don't believe it would be right to approach government and ask that it circulate beliefs we hold to be true and right. There are people who would disagree with us and we would not want to be in a position of robbing them in order to get our ideas across.

But that is exactly the position taken by the UN, UNESCO and all government lovers. They have so little faith in their ideas that they believe the only way they can get them across is through forceful expropriation of funds. And maybe they're right on that score.

For we believe that if we truly had freedom of expression in this country, and that if those who favored UN or UNESCO had to pay for the dissemination of their ideas, those willing to pay for the dissemination of ideas opposed to UN or UNESCO could carry the day.

From the standpoint of logic and truth, the anti-UN and anti-UNESCO arguments could win. The only trouble is that the exchange of thought isn't a fair exchange. For we have to subsidize both sides and the pro-UNers don't have to pay for any but their own point of view.

Cheddi Jagan of British Guiana says he intends to nationalize the important means of production and distribution, because this will insure a fairer distribution of a country's wealth than any other system." In that, he is mistaken. Wealth is more fairly and equitably distributed in the United States than in Russia. The difference in income between the lowest and highest groups in our country is not as great as in Russia and other Communist countries. In the first place, socialism does not produce wealth as abundantly as private enterprise, and in the second place, it does not distribute it as fairly. Workers in the United States get about 80 per cent of the income available for owners and workers. Owners get about one-seventh or one-eight of the amount going to workers. Surely that is a very small reward for the savers who make possible the tools and equipment with which the workers earn high incomes. If it were any less, it is doubtful if there would be enough savers to supply workers with tools, factories, assembly lines and essential equipment.

Moreover, the incentive which private enterprise offers calls forth the very great abilities of the most capable men who reach the top positions in industry. If they are paid well, the amounts which they receive are relatively small in comparison with the increased production their ingenuity and capable management makes possible.

Socialism has no means of selecting the best men to manage industry. It selects its managers on the basis of Party ideologies and the ability to support the Party line. Such qualifications do not indicate managerial ability. Free enterprise, on the other hand, entrusts young men with small responsibilities and if they make good, advances them to more important positions. In this way, the most capable men finally reach the top and that makes a vast difference in the amount of wealth produced in a country.

Even though socialism could succeed in dividing wealth equitably, there would be so much less to divide that the share of each one would be very much less than it is in a free-enterprise country. The proof of that statement lies in the fact that free enterprise has been followed in the countries that have achieved abundant production while socialism prevails in the countries where goods of all kinds are very expensive and the standard of living low.

Giving Mr. Jagan credit for good intentions he nevertheless lacks knowledge in how to bring about abundant production of wealth; he ignores demonstrated facts and he is heading his country in the wrong direction.

Congress Reluctant to Vote Long-Term Funds For President's Alliance for Progress Program

WASHINGTON—President Kennedy's hopes to persuade Congress to authorize $3 billion more for Alliance for Progress spending are getting nowhere.

At the most, he will be lucky if he winds up with more than $750 million.

For the current fiscal year, Congress voted $600 million for the Alliance for Progress. The President wants to increase this to $3 billion over a four-year-period — a proposal, incidentally, about which little has been said publicly.

But from all backstage indications, there is little likelihood Congress will agree to that.

Legislators handling this measure, even some strongly pro-Administration, are evincing marked reluctance to approve foreign aid spending of this magnitude over such a long period. They favor more Alliance for Progress money, but strictly on a year-to-year basis.

They are insisting it is sounder and safer to require the President to submit an annual budget for detailed congressional scrutiny and questioning.

This significant behind - the - scenes attitude was pointedly voiced at a House Foreign Affairs Committee meeting with two key Alliance for Progress officials —Coordinator Teodoro Moscoso, and Richard Goodwin, young Deputy Assistant Secretary of State for Latin American Affairs.

Both were subjected to blunt grilling by Democrats and Republicans — not so much against the Alliance for Progress program, but the President's proposal to spend $3 billion over a four-year period.

The President has a long and difficult row to hoe on this little-publicized issue.

The battle over his ambitious authorization plan is only the opening round. Regardless of what Congress finally decides on the amount of funds to be authorized for the Alliance, he will have to wage another equally tough struggle over the actual appropriation, with the odds against his getting as much as is authorized.

That is the usual practice—especially in the economy - minded House Appropriations Committee, where this legislation has to originate.

ON A HOT GRILL — Coordinator Moscoso, who is also Latin American administrator of the over-all foreign aid agency, defended the $3 billion-four-year plan on the ground it is necessary to "encourage long-range projects and long-term development."

"When countries obtain such committments," he told the House Foreign Affairs committeemen, "they will understand that Congress, as well as the President, is supporting the long-term development of Latin America. This is of the utmost importance in ensuring the success of the Alliance for Progress."

"If Congress authorizes funds only on a year-to-year basis," said Representative Thomas Morgan, D-Pa., chairman, "would that have adverse psychological effect in Latin America?"

"Definitely," replied Moscoso. "I am strongly convinced that would slow down the program. If we make long - range commitments, I believe these countries will really get on the job and work much harder and faster to effect the vital changes necessary in their economic and social structures. Long - range authorization will give us the tool to use the carrot-and-stick approach to induce certain of these countries to undertake necessary reforms."

"But don't you think Congress should also have the power to withhold authorization and funds until it knows more about this program and what changes these countries will undertake?" asked Representative Walter Judd, R-Min. "Why should we turn over to the executive branch unlimited authority to give or to withhold public funds? It's the Congress that takes the money from the people."

"We are the people who are administering this program," argued Moscoso. "It's up to us to make it work, and if we don't have the tools, we can't do the job."

WHAT ABOUT THE GRABBERS — Representative Edna Kelly, D-N.Y., raised the thorny issue of confiscation of U.S. business and other holdings in Latin America.

"Do you think we should give aid to governments that have seized or plan to grab American property, or don't pay their honest debts?" she demanded. "How do you feel about that?"

"As you know," replied Moscoso, "there is a section in the foreign aid law which provides that assistance shall be withheld in the event a country does not meet its debt to U.S. citizens."

"Yes, I know about that," snapped Mrs. Kelly, "and are you enforcing this law?"

"Yes. We halted aid to Haiti until it paid debts owed to U.S. businessmen," said Moscoso.

"What about Brazil and Argentina?" continued Mrs. Kelly. "There is plenty of trouble in those countries as far as expropriating U.S. holdings and not paying for them. So far as I know, nothing has been done about that."

"I will look into it," promised Moscoso, "this has not been brought to my attention."

Representative Omar Burleson, D-Tex., wanted to know what is being done about the Latin American countries that balked at the Punta del Este conference at outlawing Cuba.

"Are we going to give those nations aid," demanded Burleson. "I'm talking specifically about Mexico, Brazil and Argentina."

"All of them will benefit from the Alliance program," said Moscoso. "The reason is that they all supported the resolution declaring Communism is incompatible with the American system. We do not feel these countries favor Castroism."

Representative Judd asked Deputy Assistant Secretary of State Goodwin about persistent reports of the flight of capital from Latin America.

"Can you tell us how much truth there is to these reports?" asked Judd. "According to them," Latin American capital is being withdrawn and invested in Europe and other places while we are pouring hundreds of millions into Latin America to develop it."

"There have been estimates that $3 billion of Latin American capital has been withdrawn since 1959," admitted Goodwin. "That is a very conjectural figure. There is no question considerable money has been pulled out of Latin America and invested elsewhere. But we have not been able to determine the exact amount, although it is undoubtedly quite a lot."

"In that event," asserted Representative E. Ross Adair, R-Ind., "are we going to pour money into Latin America through the top only to see it siphoned off at the bottom by native financial interests?"

"Alliance for Progress funds are not siphoned off," contended Goodwin, "because most of this money is for specific projects and programs. Of course, if the owner of a factory makes money and sends it to Switzerland that is a different story."

"Why is capital leaving Latin America?" continued Adair.

"It is a complicated matter," replied Goodwin, "but the chief reason is fear there will be other Castros. We are trying to combat that fear by developing political stability and economic security in these countries. It is not an easy job, but it is an inescapable one if we are to prevent Castroism and all its evils."

LATIN FLASHES — A Red Chinese trade delegation, headed by Vice Minister Yang Hao-lu, is in Cuba negotiating a new agreement based on exchange of sugar, tobacco and agricultural products for textiles and manufactured goods. . With swimming weather approaching, Today's Health mag warns of the hazards which could explain the mysterious downings of excellent swimmers. One is holding the breath too long under water, and so losing consciousness. The other is excessive breathing before going into the water. Too much deep or rapid breathing reduces the concentration of carbon dioxide, a main trigger of the urge to breathe and replenish oxygen supply, thus causing the swimmer to stay under too long.

Pegler Says:

Billie Sol Is 'A Hick Beyond Bounds Of Fiction'

By WESTBROOK PEGLER

PECOS, Tex. — This Billie Sol Estes who improvised a maze of games which finally reached into the Department of Agriculture with embarrassing consequences to Vice President Lyndon Johnson is a hick beyond bounds of fiction. He is 37 years old, he often preached in bad grammar to the pious sect called the Church of Christ, he set up an undertaking palace on the ugly main street of Pecos with capacity enough for a vast holocaust, he segregated his own little girls from his own little boy in their own swim-pool, he planted thousands of ammonia fertilizer tanks on small - patch cotton farmers with potential capacity to fertilize the entire allowable national cotton acreages and, like a stupid clown, he let his "society editor" run a loud, exultant piece in his own paper which brought his whole cosmos crashing down.

His paper is called the Pecos Daily News. Pecos has 11,000 population, including infants and illiterates, and there was already in vigorous, going condition a twice-a-week paper called the Independent and Enterprise. However, the Independent and Enterprise is conservative and Estes is a frenzied Democrat so he had to horn into journalism, too.

The loud, exultant society piece was an account of the pilgrimage of Billie Sol and his modest, pretty wife, a chick town belle, to our nation's capital last January for a dinner at $100 a plate celebrating the first anniversary of President Kennedy's Inauguration. It is commonly known in Pecos that neither Billie Sol nor Mrs. Estes ever climbed outside of any potation more sinful than a black cow with a double dollop of ice cream. They once gave a barbecue in their patio for a thousand guests with three steers turning on the spits and there must have been agony by night because average Texans have been known to tear down the Baker Hotel in Dallas brick-by-brick on big football nights.

Billie Sol bought two tables at $1,000 each for the inaugural anniversary ball and two tables at $1,000 each for another ball to pay the debt of the solemn referendum of 1960. At each gala, the Billie Sols and their guests sat right under Vice President Johnson's position on the holy of holies.

After the ball was over, and Mrs. Estes had returned to Pecos, Miss Ida Belle Riggins, the society editor of the News, wrote an account of the gala which fizzled like a seidlitz powder. It said in part: "'We enjoyed every minute of it but it is good to be back.'

"That was the opinion of Mrs. Billie Sol Estes who accompanied her husband and other Texans to Washington, D.C., to attend the inaugural anniversary dinner honoring John Fitzgerald Kennedy, President of the United States, last week.

"'The first we went to was a style show luncheon at the Sheraton Park Hotel,' Mrs. Estes smiled. Asked if she had brought any of the styles back to Pecos, Mrs. Estes laughed. 'The one I liked would have cost $800 and that was too much to pay for one outfit.

"'Thursday night we had a private dinner in the hotel for 60 friends. We didn't have to do any decorating. The hotel did all that. There were six round tables each seating ten people. It was very informal and lots of fun.'

"Among those attending the dinner Mrs. Estes mentioned Senator and Mrs. Yarborough (he is the senior Senator from Texas), Congressman Jamie Whitten from Mississippi (who is head of the Appropriations Committee on Agriculture), Bill Morris, Assistant Secretary to the Secretary of Agriculture, and his wife, Alice."

There will be a pause for elucidation at this point. Congressman Whiten has gratuitously denied that there was anything questionable, and for a man of his shining Democratic integrity, it goes without saying, of course not. Anyway, nobody accused him. It just seemed interesting, that's all, that Lyndon Johnson's bosom buddy, Mr. Estes, was there with the chairman of the Appropriations Committee on Agriculture, in view of later disclosures that Billie Sol got favors of colossal financial value from the Department of Agriculture. Don't you think so?

And interesting, too, that Bill Morris, of the Department of Agriculture, and his wife were guests of the Estes at this gala dinner for 60, because only recently Mr. Morris was canned for failure to show up for questioning after a witness at an official court on inquiry in Texas had accused him of accepting a hat worth $100 from Billie Sol. And Mrs. Morris had somehow landed on the payroll of Congressman Edmondson of Oklahoma, Democrat, of course, for $12,000 a year and on Billie Sol's payroll as Washington "columnist" of the Pecos Daily News at $796 a month — for two months. Then the roof blew off. Mr. Morris was canned from a job paying $14,000, and she resigned from Mr. Edmondson's staff and silently vanished from the editorial page of the Pecos Daily News. Who can say what her column was really worth?

Well, later there was a box party for 60 at the National Theatre and "completing the round of entertainments was a Sunday afternoon tea in the Lyndon Johnsons' home, a three - story house formerly belonging to Perle Mesta."

Johnson went to Washington 29 years ago at $125 a month as third-string secretary to Congressman Dick Kleberg, of the King Ranch. He has been constantly in politics ever since. He is naturally frugal. He had, until it crashed only recently, a great, expensive private plane and he bought Perle Mesta's castle without apparent strain.

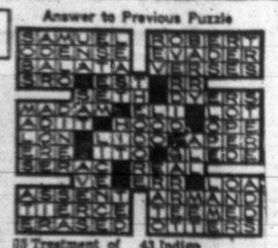

The Johnsons were real proud of the house and they showed Mrs. Billie Sol around "just like any one else would."

The Pecos Daily News ran photographs of Billie Sol talking with the Johnsons' daughter, Linda Bird, a happy smiling picture of its recent columnist, Mrs. Morris, and a left-to-right shot of Congressman Jamie Whitten of the Agriculture Appropriations Committee and Mrs. Whitten, and Mrs. senior Senator Yarborough. All the ladies looked right nice and sweet.

A thought for the day: Greek philosopher Plato said: "Mankind censure injustice, fearing that they may be the victims of it and not because they shrink from committing it."

A Rose, By Any Other Name...

By DICK WEST
United Press International

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Suppose your name were George and people kept calling you Charlie.

You might overlook the mistake a few times, but after so long a time it would begin to get on your nerves. Right?

Consider then, Dr. Leonard Carmichael, the tall, distinguished head of the Smithsonian Institution. For years, he has had to listen to people call his domain by the wrong name.

For some reason or another, nearly everyone, calls it the Smithsonian "Institute." Even those who should know better make the error.

I don't see how Carmichael has managed to maintain his equanimity. If I were in his shoes, I would long ago have cracked under the strain and attacked someone with a stuffed owl, or whatever museum piece was handy.

Fortunately, however, Carmichael is made of sterner stuff, as witness the control he exhibited Tuesday during a double header ceremony at the Smithsonian.

At one of the rites, Carmichael accepted for the museum's permanent collection a rare 13-volume set of the first edition of the Encyclopedia Americana, published in 1829.

The presentation was made by Vincent E. Sutliff, president of the Americana Corp., who, in keeping with the pattern, repeatedly alluded to the Smithsonian as "institute."

I watched Carmichael closely and he didn't even wince. He did, however, tactfully remind Sutliff that the Smithsonian's second name was "institution."

He said he used to have a secretary who "devoted her life to taking the 'toot' out of institution."

After this ceremony, Carmichael went immediately to another building to accept a plaque presented to the Smithsonian by a trade organization.

When I saw the name of the donating group, I caught my breath. It was the American Bicycle Institute. I figured its officials would mislabel the Smithsonian from force of habit.

Strangely enough, they all got the name right. It was a guest speaker, Dr. Carl A. Troester of the American Association of Health, Physical Education and Recreation, who made the slip.

Carmichael let it pass, but if this sort of thing keeps up I doubt that even riding a bicycle will keep the tension from getting him.

There is only one way I can see to bring the Smithsonian's correct name into common usage. That would be for Congress to pass a bill renaming it "institute."

US Scientists See No Harm In Van Allen Radiation Belt Blast

EDITOR'S NOTE — Some foreign scientists have lamented the fact that the United States plans to explode a nuclear bomb within the lower part of the Van Allen radiation Zone which girds the earth's middle. The following dispatch reports that U.S. scientists feel the explosion will do no harm to human beings and will not permanently change the earth's space environment.)

By JOSEPH L. MYLER
United Press International

WASHINGTON (UPI) — It is at least possible that an H-bomb this country plans to fire high over Johnston Island in June or July will inflict a grievous wound on the bottom side of the thick radiation zone around the earth.

But foreign scientists who have been lamenting the passing of the so-called Inner Van Allen Belt may have mourned prematurely. They may take comfort from the fact that some leading U.S. authorities on space radiation believe the belt will survive and recuperate in plenty of time for further satellite study in the near future.

The radiation zone is a region extending out to some 40,000 miles in which charged particles from space have been trapped by the earth's magnetic field. It is named for Dr. James A. Van Allen of the State University of Iowa whose satellite-borne experiments discovered it.

The botom part of the zone is populated largely by high energy protons, subnuclear particles which could do in astronauts who lingered too long among them without massive shielding. This belt is 3,000 to 4,000 miles long north to south. At its ends it dips to 400 miles above the earth and rises to about 2,000 miles over the equator.

The United States plans three high altitude nuclear detonations over Johnston Island in the first two months of summer. The highest will be a device equal in energy to several hundred thousand tons of TNT. Carried aloft by a Thor missile, it will explode at an altitude of about 500 miles.

This will wreak havoc on the high-arching lines of force in the geomagnetic field which act as jailors for the positively charged protons in the bottom part of the radiation zone.

One of the results will be a grand distortion of the electrified regions of the thin upper atmosphere which mirror radio signals and make long distance communication possible. A blackout of radio and radar signals, lasting hours and perhaps days, is expected to ensue.

Another will be auroral displays of heavenly fireworks visible for perhaps thousands of miles. These displays will occur because energetic particles, normally held in thrall by the earth's field, will be dumped into the atmosphere when their magnetic restraints are momentarily broken.

Van Allen himself told United Press International he doubts a bomb of the reported size exploded only 500 miles high would have any great effect on the radiation zone. He thought it would take a more powerful bomb detonated at about 1,200 miles altitude to empty the zone completely.

In any case, he said, the zone would be refilled with charged particles and be as good as new in a matter of months or weeks, depending to what extent it was drained by the blast.

Whatever happens, "it will be very interesting," Van Allen said. "And we will have two satellites up there watching it."

He referred to the Injun satellite, launched last June 29 with Van Allen instruments aboard, and to TRAAC, launched Nov. 15, 1961, with instruments designed by the Johns Hopkins University.

Van Allen said both Injun and TRAAC "are working fine" now and should be in good condition in June or July when the high shot is fired.

The Russians have three scientific satellites aloft which also could measure the effects of the blast. Whether they will still be in orbit at shot time is not known here.

The Van Allen zone generally is considered the most interesting scientific discovery to date in space exploration. Scientists still have a lot to learn about it. They are still divided as to the mechanics of its origin.

This is why some foreign scientists have deplored any tampering with it by man. They want it preserved intact until its mysteries are solved.

On one thing everybody seems agreed: The sudden dumping of protons would not hurt anybody, the atmosphere itself is a fine shield against charged particles. Nor is there any reason to suppose a clearing out of particles at the bottom of the zone would have even an indirect effect on life at the surface of the earth.

It is a fact realized only by some scientists that the total weight of all the particles in the entire radiation zone is only about one pound. Halted in their flight along the magnetic lines of force and collected, they would make a pile of matter you could easily hold in one hand.

According to one theory on the formation of the bottom zone, it would take up to 100 years to recreate it if it were suddenly emptied. But satellite observations cast doubt on this theory.

The Lighter Side

He's Glad He Will Be Gone

By DICK WEST
United Press International

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Even under the bleakest circumstances, a genuine Pollyanna type like myself can see a little ray of sunshine filtering through the silver lining.

The bluebird of happiness flew in my window just now as I was reading some predictions by the editors of the Enclyclopedia Americana of what life will be like in the 21st Century.

What brightened the outlook for me was the thought that by the time the year 2,000 rolls around I either will already have departed this vale or else will be too old to care very much.

The beginning of the 21st Century, say the editors, will find more than 60 per cent of the natio's population dwelling in the suburbs. Offhand, I can't imagine anything more ghastly.

The suburbs are bad enough with whatever percentage that dwells in them now. Clutter them up with a few more "gracious living" fanatics and they will become unbearable.

The editors don't make 2,000 A. D. sound any more inviting by promising "a lawn of slow-growing grass that stays neat for weeks without cutting."

If I know suburbanites, they will work out a schedule so that someone in each neighborhood will be firing up a power mower at 8 o'clock every Sunday morning.

Neither am I enticed by the prospect that "meals can be prepared in advance and stored in a thermal cavity hidden in the service wall of the dining area."

At my house, a meal prepared in advance inevitably means a meatball and eggplant casserole. Storing it in a thermal cavity wouldn't help any.

"Families will be able to use the outdoor terrace even in brisk weather since it will be heated by concealed thermoelectric devices," the soothsayers predict.

In other words, winter will bring no relief from the noxious odors of patio cookouts.

With so dismal a future in store for the suburbs, one might think the city would be an improvement. But if the Americana is correct, things won't be any better there.

"Combination buildings with schools atop apartment houses will be routine," it says.

Children will be able to ride an elevator to school, which means they will be under foot at home for an hour or so longer every day.

In short, if 21st Century life is anything like the Americana editors foresee it, then I am vastly cheered by the prospect of not being able to participate.

HOLD EVERYTHING!

MANCHESTER, England (UPI) —Conductor Sir John Barbirolli raised his baton before the Halle Orchestra and 2,000 concert goers Wednesday night to begin a performance of Verdi's Requiem but nobody could find the soloist.

Fifteen minutes later breathless soprano Miss Erna Spoorenberg arrived and blushingly explained she had difficulties with the five-foot zipper on her green velvet gown.
