GOP tries to steer wrath from Bush to Congress

By JOHN KING
AP Political Writer

HOUSTON (AP) — Republicans are trying to steer the wrath of disenchanted voters from President Bush to the Democratic-controlled Congress and using their convention spotlight to portray Bill Clinton as a failed governor and foreign policy novice.

After an opening night reflection on 12 years of White House dominance, the Republicans looked ahead today, with a tribute to congressional hopefuls and a prime-time parade of 1996 presidential prospects hoping to boost their own stock while helping Bush.

The president interrupted work on his acceptance speech today to attend a karate exhibition as part of a school "kick-drugs" program. He declared his convention "off to a pretty good start." Party chairman Rich Bond was more effusive: "We started out on a roll."

But with Bush trailing in the polls and yet to define a second-term agenda, there was more work to be done.

"What we need now is a good cavalry charge and that's what we've got to begin at this convention," said Sen. Phil Gramm of Texas, who promised that tonight's keynote address would take apart Clinton's economic plan. "We've got to pull out our sabers, spur our horses and head out for the wagon train hoping we get there on time. I believe we're going to."

Democrats wasted no time responding to the barrage of attacks. Clinton today mocked the GOP's opening night message, saying it added up to: "'We will discover America in our fourth term' — sort of a Columbus theory of politics. 'We had to do all this other stuff, but give us a fourth term and we'll discover America.'"

And Democrats also unveiled two new television ads suggesting the Republicans weren't worth believing, both ending with the refrain, "Those are the facts, back to the show."

The ads, to air beginning today in Houston and Washington during the convention, contrasted the economic records of Bush and Clinton, reminding voters of Bush's broken "no new taxes" promise and the anemic job growth during his presidency.

Bush arrived Monday for his second coronation as Republican standard-bearer and immediately joined the anti-Congress chorus. At a welcoming rally, he rebuked the Democratic leadership as the "sultans of the status quo."

In the cavernous Astrodome, the delegates' refrain was "Clean the House" as Ronald Reagan sought to rally conservatives to Bush's side and convince voters the change they need is in Capitol Hill — not at the White House. Chants of "Four More Years" were designed to reinforce that point.

"We cannot afford to take a chance" on Clinton, Reagan said in his convention return. It was a folksy, vintage Reagan speech in which he endorsed his former vice president "warmly, genuinely, wholeheartedly."

Republicans previewed fall campaign lines aimed at reversing Clinton's double-digit lead in the polls. They portrayed Bush as an unparalleled world leader now ready to turn his energy homeward and the Democratic nominee as a poor governor, closet liberal and Vietnam draft evader.

"Where was Bill?" the delegates bellowed when conservative Patrick Buchanan recalled Bush's World War II service. Now in Bush's corner after a scorching primary challenge, Buchanan said Clinton's agenda was topped by abortion on demand, gay rights, and combat roles for women.

"That's change all right," Buchanan said. "But it is not the kind of change America wants. It is not the kind of change America needs."

The morning after his harsh words, Buchanan praised Clinton as "a tough customer; he takes a beating and he comes back." And he said, in an interview on ABC-TV, that Clinton "is making a real reach for those Reagan Democrats in the center."

Bush watched the convention's opening night on television from his hotel — also his legal residence — while working on his Thursday night acceptance speech. Republicans emphasized the importance of that speech — and the need for Bush to clearly define his campaign themes.

At the welcoming rally, Bush promised the frustrated GOP faithful, "When history writes about this election, they're going to say it started right here when you fired up this president to take this message to the American people."

Vice President Dan Quayle was at Bush's side, and later went to the convention floor to catch the opening night's proceedings.

"I don't care what my critics say," Quayle said. "I will never back down from talking about traditional values."

Today, Quayle attacked the American Bar Association for criticizing Bush's anti-crime package and was speaking to three state big-state delegations.

Clinton was home in Arkansas, with one eye on solving a state budget problem, the other on GOP attacks.

Buchanan was the first of the party's likely 1996 presidential prospects in convention prime time, but hardly the last. Tonight has keynote Gramm, whose visits with Iowa and New Hampshire delegates underscored his ambition, as well as Housing Secretary Jack Kemp and Education Secretary Lamar Alexander. Also, a 1996 long shot: Massachusetts Gov. William Weld.

Their job is to continue the boost-Bush, bash-Clinton routine begun Monday.

Buchanan said Clinton's foreign policy experience amounted to "breakfast at the International House of Pancakes." Quayle conceded, mockingly, that Clinton had "a summer internship with the Senate Foreign Relations Committee."

Not to be outdone, delegates wore buttons referring to Clinton as "Failed Governor of a Small State."

South Dakota Sen. Larry Pressler, by no means a Clinton fan, protested, "I find it a little offensive," he said. "Most Americans live in small states."

Protests continued outside the convention. Six people were arrested Monday night as a crowd of about 500 clashed with police at the Astrodome after a demonstration demanding more money for AIDS research. Forty-one anti-abortion demonstrators were jailed at a demonstration at an abortion clinic Monday, and a total of 600 people on both sides of the issue chanted at each other today outside a Houston Planned Parenthood office.

Most delegates found Houston to their liking. For many, busy restaurants and loud music were the choices for spare time. Some Iowa delegates took a different approach: "Romeo and Juliet" under the stars.

Sign of the times

One of the first signs that classrooms are about to fill is the Pampa High School Cross Country team as they prepare for their first meet by running around the high school campus early today.

PISD to hold public hearing; discuss hiring of personnel

By ANGELA LEGGETT
Staff Writer

A public hearing on Pampa Independent School District's site-based decision-making plan is scheduled for the regular session of the PISD board at 6 p.m. today in the Carver Center conference room, 321 W. Albert.

Topics on the agenda include the following items:

- Consideration and approval of hiring of an assistant principal at Pampa Middle School.
- Declaring an intent to set the 1992 tax rate.
- The purchase of real estate property.

- Approval of health insurance fund rates and participation in a preferred provider organization. The administration recommends the board approve a premium increase to employees of $20 per month and authorize the district to enter into an agreement with ProAmerican Managed Care, Inc.
- Approval of the Texas Association of School Boards (TASB) workers compensation self-insurance fund interlocal agreement which includes changes in the terms of the contract.

- Renew a waiver concerning second semester senior exams exemption for 1992-93. Students who meet certain criteria would be exempt from second semester final exams for the 1992-93 school year and subsequent school years.

- Approval of student travel policies including lodging, meals and transportation costs for all school sponsored co-curricular and extra-curricular activities.

- Approval of two early dismissal days for staff development for 1992-93. The dismissal days would include one day the district is required by state law to provide employees certain training relating to the transmission of the HIV virus on which would take place on August 25. The remaining date would be held for weather related needs.

- Approval of the list of organizations the Commissioner of Education has previously approved as extra-curricular activities for 1992-93. These organizations would be held accountable to comply with all rules regarding extra-curricular absences. This includes the "no pass - no play" rules for all students who participate in any of the organization's activities.

- Approval of teacher appraisals that would include the list of first, second and third appraisers and the appraisal calendar for 1992-93.

- Sale of delinquent tax property for $400 at 511 Oklahoma.

An academic spotlight is scheduled for the meeting.

The superintendent's report is scheduled to include the following reports, tech/prep, utility, CED #14, and administrative computer software report.

It will also include athletic ticket/courtesy passes and a TASB leadership program.

A budget amendment and adoption of the 1992-93 budget are included in the agenda.

Board members will consider bids of computers, printers, data projection panels, adapters, a hard drive, drafting station and other computers and equipment for computers.

Additional topics to be approved include the cash receipts and expenditures for July, the monthly budget report, investment and tax collection reports.

Minutes from the last regular meeting will be presented for approval.

Lake McClellan shows progress

By BETH MILLER
Senior Staff Writer

Lake McClellan continues to show improvement since Gray County took over as concessionaire in January, says Precinct 3 County Commissioner Gerald Wright.

Wright gave the Commissioners Court an update on progress at the lake during a Friday meeting.

"In the past eight months since Gray County has been concessionaire, I feel like we've made some progress and we've done a good job with what we had to work with," Wright said.

Since Jan. 1, Gray County has sold $21,223.71 in permits, $11,452.21 in bait and $15,157.88 in groceries at the lake.

For start-up money, Gray County placed $13,593 in the Lake McClellan fund. Wright said there is only a $5,000 loss at present, with that amount expected to be made up by the end of the year and the loan paid back to the county coffers.

To date, $48,898.75 has been collected at the lake this year, compared to $53,906.67 in expenditures, which includes inventory and expenses.

"Lake McClellan is like a lot of other recreational areas, we have competition," Wright said.

He added that better promotional work needs to be done to attract more people to the lake.

Wright also said he is hoping to attract travelers from Interstate 40 and Highway 287 by placing a brochure about the lake at tourist bureaus.

"If we can do a good job on promotion, we can see the revenue coming up," Wright said. Recreational vehicle hook ups have been added at the lake and a family center is in the planning stages. Forty fire rings, grills and picnic tables will also be installed soon, Wright said.

Wright said such things as shelving, coolers, and a cash register would not be an expense next year, should the Commissioners Court vote to continue having Gray County as the concessionaire.

The current contract with the U.S. Forest Service, which owns the lake, is for a one-year period. But Wright said he has been led to believe that the Forest Service will propose a five- to 10-year contract in November or December.

"We think the Forest Service is looking for a long-term partnership. We won't know until it's finalized. I'd like to hold up on making a decision until we get the prospectus from the U.S. Forest Service," Wright said.

"I really believe, that in the future, Lake McClellan will do a lot better than it did this year," he added.

Precinct 4 Commissioner Ted Simmons said, "I don't think we're going to see much profit out of it for two to three years. After it gets dredged out, I don't think it will be any problem."

Wright agreed, saying, "The long-range plan from the U.S. Forest Service is going to do nothing but help it."

Wright said that he can see more people going to the lake each year if improvements continue and if Mother Nature cooperates by providing good rainfall.

He said that should Gray County continue being the concessionaire, the couple that runs the store and cleans the restrooms and takes care of public safety and other items needs some relief help. Wright said he also would like lake responsibilities divided among all four county precincts to give him some help.

Lake McClellan Improvement Inc., a non-profit organization formed to help with improvements at the lake, also has been instrumental in getting work completed.

On Aug. 27, representatives of the U.S. Forest Service are scheduled to be at the improvement group's meeting to present the challenge cost share program, which is expected to include a dredging plan for the lake.

U.S., allies pressure Iraq on Shiites

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — U.N. weapons inspectors were leaving Iraq today with important information on ballistic missiles, as the United States and its Western allies pressured Baghdad on another element of the Gulf War cease-fire — Iraq's treatment of Shiite Muslims.

French Foreign Minister Roland Dumas confirmed today that the Western allies will try to protect the Shiites by forbidding Iraqi military flights over Shiite territory. And British Prime Minister John Major met with his Cabinet to discuss the situation in Iraq.

Dumas said the U.N. Security Council is discussing giving Shiites in southern Iraq the same protection it gives Kurds in the north.

"The Baghdad regime has not been any more tender with the Shiite population than with the Kurdish population," Dumas said in Paris. "Thus the international community, and the allies in particular, are concerned about this situation."

Iraqi opposition leaders say they have received assurances that Washington will do everything it can to stop Saddam Hussein from attacking tens of thousands of Shiite rebels in the southern marshes.

Al-Iraq, a leading pro-government newspaper, today called the focus on the Shiites an attempt to "prolong the U.N. economic sanctions and to continue the aggression against Iraq."

The U.N. weapons team had planned a surprise inspection of an Iraqi military ministry in Baghdad but postponed it after a weekend New York Times article depicted the down and promised better cooperation.

A U.S.-led international military force last year forced Iraq to relinquish Kuwait, which it had seized in August 1990. Under the U.N. cease-fire resolution that ended the war, Iraq agreed to surrender its nuclear and chemical weapons and to stop persecuting its Kurds and Shiites.

On Monday, Bush administration officials said the United States and its allies were preparing to protect Shiites with an aerial umbrella and threaten Saddam with force unless he halts attacks on them.

Allied units established havens in northern Iraq last year for Kurdish separatists whose postwar uprising was crushed by Saddam's forces. Under international protection, the Kurds in northern Iraq have declared autonomy from Baghdad.

Last week, Edward J. Perkins, the U.S. ambassador to the United Nations, said "events in southern Iraq show an equally heinous disregard for human rights of the Iraqi people."

GOP Convention a gala affair

By Marc Gilbert

HOUSTON — President George Bush's first appearance at the Republican National Convention had all the markings of a high school pep rally Monday.

Gilbert

Delegates, guests and members of the media packed into the Astrodome adjacent to the Astrodome for the President's mid-afternoon arrival.

The festivities got under way with the Houston Oilers Dancers performing routines to "Boogie Woogie Bugle Boy from Company 'B'" and "The Twist." A jazz orchestra followed with a 15-minute set and then the crowd of more than 10,000 got a real surprise.

Country singer Randy Travis, accompanied by his band, took the stage for what was probably supposed to be a three- or four-song appearance. Travis sang his hits "Diggin' Up Bones," "Is It Still Over" and "Point of Light." But with the presidential party running late, Travis performed another handful of songs including his latest release.

To complete the pep rally atmosphere, Houston Oilers quarterback Warren Moon and defensive end Ray Childress were introduced and paraded onto the stage with other dignitaries, including widely-telvised Dr. Red Duke.

With things back on schedule, Vice President Dan Quayle and his wife Marilyn took the stage amid cheers of support.

"I am more determined than ever to stand up and tell it like it is," said Quayle in opening his brief speech. "And that means four more years of George Bush as our president."

Quayle then lashed out at the Democrats while asserting the Republican commitment to family values.

"Did you see (Democratic nominee) Bill Clinton's speech in New York?" Quayle asked. "He spent the first 15 minutes of that speech talking about family values."

"Now we are making real progress in America when Bill Clinton's talking about family values."

Quayle concluded his speech by saying the greatest role models in America are George and Barbara Bush.

The Bushes entered the arena down one of the aisles and made their way to the stage accompanied by Secret Service agents.

In his opening remarks, the President returned Quayle's compliments, announced his support of the nation's law enforcement officers then began attacking his opponents.

"The Democrats say they're the party of change," he said. "But they want to put the largest tax increase in history on the people of America."

"By the time they're through, change is all you'll have in your pockets."

Bush continued that his position in the polls presents a challenge — but one he's ready for.

"I've always done better fighting back," he said. "I can change what the polls say because I do what's best for America."

Bush predicted that his would be the most stirring comeback since that of Democrat Harry S. Truman in the 1948 presidential election.

"When historians write about this election, they're going to say it started right here when you fired up this convention."

The Republican leaders then left the stage amid cheering while the orchestra played "The Eyes of Texas."

Possibility of new primaries raised in redistricting hearing

By PEGGY FIKAC
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN (AP) — Lawyers expect a federal court ruling this week in a heated battle over Senate district boundaries.

Secretary of State John Hannah has directed that a different map be implemented for the November general election than was used in the March primaries.

The primary map was ordered by a federal three-judge panel in Austin, but the Legislature's plan subsequently won approval from a Washington three-judge panel.

Republicans and others are challenging the order by Hannah, a Democrat. The Austin panel of judges took the matter under advisement after a Monday hearing.

Assistant Attorney General Renea Hicks told judges that Hannah didn't have the authority to order new primaries, so he devised a different method for using the Legislature's Senate map in November. Hannah's order has been submitted to the U.S. Justice Department for approval.

"Are you inviting us to order you to have a primary?" asked U.S. District Judge Harry Hudspeth, one of the judges presiding over the case in Austin.

Hicks said the state has concerns about minority turnout in new primaries, but that such elections would be preferable to forcing the state to use a "tainted" map.

Kent denounces network

NEW YORK (AP) — NBC correspondent Arthur Kent, suspended after refusing an assignment to the former Yugoslavia, stood outside NBC headquarters and passed out leaflets denouncing the network.

In the fliers handed out to NBC colleagues Monday, Kent complained of "being slandered as a coward and a shirker."

Kent, nicknamed the "Scud Stud" for his good looks and calm delivery when he reported from Saudi Arabia during the Gulf War, was suspended along with a producer last week after the two refused an assignment to Zagreb, Croatia.

The suspensions were announced Thursday, the day ABC producer David Kaplan was shot to death in Sarajevo, about 175 miles from

As another option, he suggested holding over the old Senate for a period of time.

U.S. District Judge James Nowlin of Austin drew up the plan used in the primaries. But he stepped down from the case after he was reprimanded by a panel of federal judges who said he violated judicial rules by getting secret help from a Republican lawmaker.

Hudspeth replaced Nowlin on the panel in Austin, which also includes federal judges Walter Smith Jr. and Will Garwood.

Hannah and others have said the Legislature's plan is fairer to minorities. It is favored by Democratic leaders.

But Republicans say minorities would be hurt by changing to a different map from that used in the primary elections. The primary map also was expected to give the GOP increased strength in the Senate.

"Our first priority is to see the rights of minorities are protected and the state's will is worked," Hicks said after the hearing.

But lawyer John McCamish, who led the fight against Hannah's order, said after the hearing that having new primaries is an "Alice-in-Wonderland" idea.

And Hannah's order, he said during the hearing, would "displace rightfully elected candidates."

"What kind of havoc is the state trying to wreak on the voters?" he asked.

Zagreb. NBC officials said they would not order an employee into a war zone; they said Zagreb was not as dangerous as Sarajevo.

But both sides said Kent's dispute with the network was over larger issues than the Zagreb incident.

NBC said the incident was the "culmination of a progression of problems that we have had with Arthur, including assignments and editorial direction, with Arthur often refusing even to communicate with NBC personnel."

Kent's leaflets denounced the network's management in general terms, accusing it of "brute stupidity" and "unworthiness to command" and threatening legal action unless the network apologized and reinstated him.

U.S. plans airlift to hungry Somalia

By DIDRIKKE SCHANCHE
Associated Press Writer

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — The United States said today it plans to begin an airlift to starving Somalis within 48 hours, using 11 military cargo planes in a two-month effort to deliver 145,000 tons of donated and low-cost food.

Some aid agencies with workers in Somalia expressed concern that the American operation could overwhelm their staffs and create a distribution problem.

The food coming from the United States is almost double the total tonnage delivered to Somalia since January by the International Committee of the Red Cross, the United Nations and other agencies.

War and drought in the Horn of Africa nation have combined to threaten nearly three-quarters of its 8.4 million people with hunger.

Aid experts estimate 1.5 million Somalis could starve within weeks if food is not delivered immediately, and nearly 4.5 million are malnourished.

Marine Brig. Gen. Frank Libutti is leading the 34-member U.S. military team that arrived in Kenya's coastal town of Mombasa on Monday to lay the groundwork for the airlift.

In a telephone interview, Libutti said the Americans would not handle the unloading and distribution of the food in Somalia and had not yet determined who would.

Distributing such a large amount of food quickly represents a huge logistical operation that could overwhelm the small international relief staff trying to feed starving people in Somalia's interior.

"We've been working all along for the flooding of food into Somalia," said Tony Knight of Save the Children. "But if the U.S. is just going to dump the food in an uncontrolled fashion, it could cause more problems than it will solve."

Food is a magnet for the many armed bandits and militias roaming the largely desert nation. Some aid workers estimate up to half of the 88,000 tons delivered to Somalia so far has been stolen.

The first U.S. flight into Somalia is not expected until early next week, and the first recipients will be the hungry in Baidoa, in the interior. By Thursday, the U.S. team plans to fly food to the northeastern Kenyan town of Wajir so it can be trucked to nearly 400,000 refugees living in U.N.-run camps along Kenya's border.

Food also will be trucked from Wajir across the border into Somalia, Libutti said.

An undetermined amount of the 145,000 tons will be sold at low cost to Somali traders.

Despite relief efforts by the Red Cross and other smaller charities, the world until recently ignored Somalia's plight, and tens, if not hundreds of thousands of people already have died.

There has been little available in Somalia's markets since November, when four months of civil war erupted in the capital, Mogadishu. That closed Somalia's biggest port and slowed imports to a trickle.

Surgeon general: Gulf ailments need investigation

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The mysterious ailments plaguing Desert Storm veterans need a full investigation, the man who will become surgeon general of the Army says.

Maj. Gen. Alcide N. LaNoue, who will assume his new duties Sept. 11, said Monday he has an "open mind" concerning a mysterious illness that some veterans are blaming on exposure to fumes from Kuwaiti oil-well fires set during the Persian Gulf War.

"It needs more investigation," LaNoue, the immediate past commander of the Army Health Services

Command at Fort Sam Houston, said.

Some Gulf war veterans around the country, including a cluster of Indiana reservists, are complaining of such maladies as fatigue, depression, hair loss, aching joints, and sore and bleeding gums.

LaNoue said that although the number of people complaining of the symptoms still is fairly small, the Army will not ignore the problem.

"This is something that the symptoms are hard to define. So I expect it's going to take months to years to analyze, and understand what's happened here," LaNoue said after a change of command ceremony at Fort Sam Houston.

LaNoue said he wants to wait and see the results of studies by the Army Environmental Hygiene Agency on the effects of the oil-well fires set by Iraqi soldiers in Kuwait during the Persian Gulf War.

Even before the reports of the ailment surfaced, LaNoue said, the Army Environmental Hygiene Agency, at Aberdeen Proving Ground, Md., gave him a briefing on research it began after the war "because they were interested in trying to understand what might happen."

The agency flew planes through the clouds of smoke above the burning oil wells to take samples and "took samples on the ground where the soldiers were and they took samples in the hospitals," he said.

The Veterans Affairs Department has announced it will set up three special referral centers to offer treatment, and that one probably will be located in Texas. Sites have not yet been announced.

Daily News embraces offer from Canadian publisher

NEW YORK (AP) — Canadian publisher Conrad Black has received the blessing of the Daily News' management to buy the troubled paper, provided he can win over its unions.

The News filed a reorganization plan Monday in U.S. Bankruptcy Court naming Black as the tabloid's future owner.

The deal requires the 47-year-old Black to pay $75 million for the paper's debts, some capital improvements, severance packages and other employee expenses, and commits him to building a $200 million color printing plant.

The agreement is void unless Black can reach agreements with 10 unions representing about 1,800 workers.

Union leaders have been divided between Black and his main rival for the Daily News, U.S. News & World Report publisher Mortimer Zuckerman.

"There's a lot of work that has to be done," News publisher James Willse said of the deal. "It does not preclude a better later offer from emerging. But as of now this is the best offer."

Zuckerman's lawyer objected to the reorganization plan, and Judge Tina Brozman gave Zuckerman permission to keep negotiating with the unions despite management's preference for Black.

Of the three most powerful unions, The Newspaper Guild, which represents editorial employees, favors Black; the pressmen favor Zuckerman; and the drivers originally preferred Zuckerman but have made progress in talks with Black.

Black's holdings include 102 daily papers on four continents, including the London Daily Telegraph, the Jerusalem Post and the Sydney (Australia) Morning Herald.

British publishing magnate Robert Maxwell bought the Daily News, once the nation's largest-selling newspaper, from the Tribune Co. in 1991, ending a bitter strike that nearly pushed it over the edge. But the paper filed for bankruptcy protection in December as Maxwell's empire collapsed after his death at sea.

The News has never regained its prestrike circulation of 1.2 million. Circulation is now 800,000.

Howard Seife, a lawyer for the paper's creditors, said that while his clients have not formally endorsed Black, the Canadian's offer provides "a substantially greater return" to creditors than Zuckerman's.

Black's $22 million pot for debt payments would give creditors about 40 cents on the dollar for what they are owed. Zuckerman had earlier proposed about $18 million for creditors.

Union coalition leader George McDonald scoffed at the importance placed on the creditors' needs. "So Conrad Black offered more money to them," he said. "It's easy enough, all right. But we're here too — the workers."

Brozman scheduled a series of hearings on the reorganization plan, including a Sept. 8 deadline for a binding agreement with Black.

"It's hoped that Black would have the requisite contracts under his belt by then," said News lawyer Marc Kirschner.

The reorganization plan also provides employee bonuses if the paper reaches specified profit levels; offers workers the right to buy stock in the paper; changes manning levels and work rules; proposes pay raises of 4 percent each to most unions after six months and another 4 percent after a year from the purchase date; and outlines buyout provisions such as early retirement.

Refugees leave after Sarajevo hotel shelled

By JOHN POMFRET
Associated Press Writer

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — Nearly 1,000 women and children were pulling out of Sarajevo today, hours after a mortar attack on a crowded refugee hotel underlined the dangers innocents face in Bosnia's civil war.

Four mortar rounds slammed into the Hotel Europa late Monday and set it ablaze. Bosnian radio said at least five people were killed.

Radovan Karadzic, leader of Serb militants, denied reports his forces shelled the hotel in retaliation for an attack on his headquarters on Sarajevo's eastern outskirts.

In an interview today with The Associated Press, he implied Bosnia's defenders had attacked the hotel in hopes Serbs would be blamed and other countries would be moved to help.

"Those seeking foreign military intervention shelled the hotel," Karadzic said by telephone from his Pale headquarters.

The Belgrade-based Tanjug news agency reported earlier that Serb forces had launched a "fierce attack" on the hotel and old parts of Sarajevo in retaliation for the shelling of Pale.

Belgrade TV said the Bosnian government shelling of Pale was the first in five months of fighting.

Tanjug quoted officials in Pale as saying Sarajevo "would have to pay a price 10 times higher" for the attack and warning that Serbs would "no longer choose targets" in the besieged Bosnian capital.

That apparently meant they would fire indiscriminately. Serb fighters perched in the hills surrounding Sarajevo have been able to attack it almost at will, and have often appeared to deliberately target civilians.

This morning, much of the five-story Hotel Europa, home to 1,500 Bosnians who had fled fighting elsewhere in the republic, was flooded with water used to fight the blaze. Refugees picked through suitcases and scattered clothing.

Hundreds moved back to the hotel.

"I have no place to go," said Behia Aslatina. She spent the night in the street, huddled in a doorway with her two daughters, ages 5 and 8.

Serbs who want to remain part of Serb-dominated Yugoslavia have seized about two-thirds of Bosnia-Herzegovina since the republic's majority Croats and Muslims voted for independence on Feb. 29.

Tens of thousands of people have died or are missing in the conflict, and more than a million have been forced from their homes.

This morning, the first buses carrying an expected total of 964 women and children rolled out of the bus station and headed for Serbian lines in Lukavica, to the southwest.

The United Nations provided two armored cars as escort.

In Lukavica, passengers were to be transferred to Serbian buses and receive a Serb military escort to Belgrade.

"There's no food, that's why I have to leave my city," said Ljiljana Beslema, 27, whose 6-year-old son, Branko, wept at leaving his grandparents behind at the bus station.

Last week, about 300 Croat and Muslim women and children left for Croatia and then Austria.

Serb militias agreed last week to allow women and children safe passage out of the capital, a move that while humanitarian on the surface was viewed by many residents as aimed at hastening a final assault on Sarajevo.

Dusko Tomic, head of the Children's Embassy orphanage in Sarajevo, said upcoming convoys would alternate between taking Croats and Muslims to Croatia and Serbs to Belgrade, the capital of Serbia and Yugoslavia.

The Belgrade-based Tanjug news agency reported Monday that a weapons agreement being negotiated would put U.N. peacekeepers in control of all heavy weapons in Sarajevo and surrounding hills.

A first agreement, signed before the capital's airport was opened June 29, included only the region of the airport.

Col. Jovan Divjak, a senior officer of Bosnian government forces, said talks were under way on withdrawing the artillery. But he said there were major differences between the two sides on how far back it should be pulled.

Meanwhile, a convoy from the U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees returned to Sarajevo early Monday from a tense trip to Gorazde, where it gave besieged government supporters their first relief supplies in more than three months.

In Geneva, officials said the organization had also succeeded in delivering 88 tons of aid to the northwestern Bosnian city of Banja Luka.

UNHCR officials had said their next convoy would head today to the northwestern city of Bihac, where government supporters are besieged by Serbs.

ANC opposes amnesty for government forces

By BARRY RENFREW
Associated Press Writer

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — The African National Congress claims the white government wants an amnesty for its security forces because top officials have been involved in political crimes.

Rejecting government proposals for a blanket amnesty, the main black opposition group says an amnesty could perpetuate rather than end the political violence that has claimed thousands of lives.

"The sudden promotion by senior government officials of the concept of a general amnesty clearly relates to accumulating evidence of senior ministerial and security force involvement in assassinations and violence," the ANC said in a statement Monday night.

The ANC was responding to a government call last week for a blanket amnesty for all members of the security forces and black resistance groups for any politically motivated offenses.

The government believes an amnesty is vital to forestall possible reprisals against security force personnel under any future black government. An amnesty could also generate support for a political settlement among government security forces.

The ANC wants a full disclosure of any illegal acts by the security forces, some of whose members have been implicated in killings and beatings of anti-apartheid activists in the past.

Amnesty should be granted to security force members who provide information to help expose past crimes and halt political violence, the ANC statement said.

In a separate statement, ANC President Nelson Mandela said an amnesty could be considered by a future, multiracial government.

But he said the white government had no right to issue an amnesty because it was responsible for political crimes.

"The rampant lawlessness can be seen in the systematic torture — by such means as beatings, electric shocks and the use of hoods to suffocate prisoners — as well as the continued occurrence of deaths in police custody," Mandela said in a speech Monday night in Cape Town.

The ANC pulled out of power-sharing talks in June to protest political violence in black townships. It is demanding an interim government and other concessions as the condition for returning to the talks.

Mandela reiterated Monday that he believes President F.W. de Klerk is partly responsible for the violence in black townships in which thousands have been killed.

"We decided that it would serve no useful purpose to continue talking to a government which is deaf and blind," Mandela said.

Stoffel van der Merwe, secretary-general of the governing National Party, said Mandela's claims that de Klerk was behind the violence were unacceptable.

"The repetition of these unfounded allegations is becoming a serious obstacle in the way of improving relations with the ANC," he said in a statement.

American detained for spying

MOSCOW (AP) — A U.S. citizen accused of spying has been detained by security officials in the northern Russian city of Murmansk, a news agency reported today.

The American, identified only as Levitus, was apprehended as a Russian gave him computer disks containing classified information on research in the Arctic Ocean, ITAR-Tass said, citing unnamed sources.

The Russian was identified as Yu. Avrutin.

Levitus, whose visa was reported to have expired, works as a representative for a U.S. company in Murmansk, ITAR-Tass said. It did not specify which firm.

Murmansk is the closest city to the Severodvinsk naval base on the Barents Sea. Severodvinsk is the home port of the nuclear submarines and surface warships of Russia's Northern Fleet.

ITAR-Tass also quoted a U.S. State Department official, identified as P. Napper, as saying that the detention of Levitus was "not quite lawful."

A U.S. embassy spokesman in Moscow contacted by The Associated Press said he was unaware of the case and not able to provide any immediate comment.

Ocean experts: QE2 was going too fast

BOSTON (AP) — The Queen Elizabeth 2 was going too fast through a channel when it hit bottom, two marine specialists were quoted today as saying.

The 937-foot luxury liner had speeded up to 24.5 knots — or 28 mph — before it hit uncharted, submerged rocks off Cape Cod on Aug. 7, gashing its hull, witnesses said. No one was injured, but 1,815 passengers were evacuated.

Coastal pilot John Hadley, who was brought aboard to navigate a passage near Martha's Vineyard, said he normally would pass through more slowly with such a big ship. But he said he felt secure because of the QE2's excellent crew.

"I considered it the standard operating procedure of the vessel," Hadley said at a Coast Guard hearing Monday.

But Jerome J. Milgram, professor of ocean engineering at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, was quoted in today's The Boston Globe as saying "there was a good probability of grounding — a high probability" at that speed.

The ship normally has a draft of 32 feet and was on course over water charted to be 39 feet deep at low tide. But increased speed causes a ship to sink deeper into the water, increasing the chances of hitting bottom, Milgram said.

Clifford Goudey, a scientist at MIT's Sea Grant program, cited a 1971 paper in the journal Transactions of the Society of Naval Architects and Engineers that indicated the QE2's maximum safe speed in that area was about 21 mph.

"Anything over that, and the vessel would hit bottom," he told the Globe.

Divers this weekend found the spot on the ocean bottom where they believe the flagship of the Cunard Line ran aground. The rocks were about 35 feet deep.

Harry Gotimer, a lawyer for the Cunard Line, said Monday that if the water had been 39 feet deep, as the charts indicated, "You couldn't touch the bottom if you tried." He said the captain wasn't responsible for the accident.

The captain said he boosted the ship to 28 mph because "we were going to need that kind of speed further out (in the ocean) for the trip to New York."

The crew was reading British admiralty charts, which use information from the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration. The U.S. agency last surveyed the area in 1939.

1992 Property Tax Rates in Grandview-Hopkins ISD

This notice concerns 1992 property tax rates for Grandview-Hopkins ISD. It presents information about three tax rates. Last year's tax rate is the actual rate the taxing unit used to determine property taxes last year. This year's effective tax rate would impose the same total taxes as last year if you compare properties taxed in both years. This year's rollback tax rate is the highest tax rate the taxing unit can set before taxpayers can start tax rollback procedures. In each case these rates are found by dividing the total amount of taxes by the tax base (the total value of taxable property) with adjustments as required by state law. The rates are given per $100 of property value.

Last year's tax rate:
Last year's operating taxes	$ 316,788.30
Last year's debt taxes	$ 0
Last year's total taxes	$ 316,788.30
Last year's tax base	$ 80,403,122
Last year's total tax rate	$.394 /$100
This year's effective tax rate:
Last year's adjusted taxes (after subtracting taxes on lost property)	$ 314,938.35
+This year's adjusted taxes (after subtracting value of new property)	$ 66,774,545
=This year's effective tax rate	$.47164 /$100

In the first year a hospital district or city collects the additional sales tax, it must insert the following lines unless its first adjustment was made last year:
- Sales tax adjustment rate	$ 0 /$100
=Effective tax rate	$.47164 /$100

x1.03=maximum rate unless unit publishes notices and holds hearing	$.48578 /$100
This year's rollback tax rate:
Last year's adjusted operating taxes (after subtracting taxes on lost property)	$ 314,938.35
+This year's adjusted tax base	$ 66,774,545
=This year's effective operating rate	$.47164 /$100
x1.08 (or add .08 for schools) = this year's maximum operating rate	$.55164 /$100
+This year's debt rate	$ 0 /$100

A school district must insert the following lines:
=This year's rollback rate before adjustment	$.55164 /$100
+Rate to recoup lost revenue	$ 0 /$100
=Adjusted rollback rate	$.55164 /$100
=This year's rollback rate	$.55164 /$100

A hospital district or city that collects the additional sales tax, including one that collects the tax for the first time this year, must insert the following lines:
- Sales tax adjustment rate	$ 0 /$100
=Rollback tax rate	$.55164 /$100

Schedule A Unencumbered Fund Balances
The following balances will probably be left in the unit's property tax accounts at the end of the fiscal year. These balances are not encumbered by a corresponding debt obligation.
Type of Property Tax Fund	Balance
Maintenance & Operations	$362,000.00

are not encumbered by a bond-sponsoring debt obligation.
Type of Property Tax Fund Maintenance & Operations		Balance $362,000.00
Schedule B 1992 Debt Service
The unit plans to pay the following amounts for long-term debts that are secured by property taxes. These amounts will be paid from property tax revenues (or additional sales tax revenues, if applicable).

NONE
(Expand as needed)
Total required for 1992 debt service				$ -0-
-Amount (if any) paid from funds listed in Schedule A				$
-Excess collections last year				$
=Total to be paid from taxes in 1992				$
+Amount added in anticipation that the unit will collect only % of its taxes in 1992				$
=Total Debt Levy				$

Schedule C Expected Revenue from Additional Sales Tax
(For hospital districts, cities and counties with additional 1/2 - cent sales tax)
In calculating its effective and rollback tax rates, the unit estimated that it will receive $ in additional sales and use tax revenues.

Schedule D State Criminal Justice Mandate (For Counties)
The County Auditor certifies that County has spent $ in the previous 12 months beginning 19 for the maintenance and operations cost of keeping inmates sentenced to the Texas Department of Criminal Justice County Sheriff has provided information on these costs, minus the state revenues received for reimbursement of such costs.

Dispute rages over reason for failure to save fish

By NANCY PLEVIN
Associated Press Writer

SILVER CITY, N.M. (AP) — Gila trout flourished millions-strong in the waters of the Mogollon Plateau at the turn of the century — as the hardy fish had for thousands of years.

By the 1960s, development and government efforts to stock the area's water for fishermen had pushed the only trout native to this rugged southwestern New Mexico wilderness to near extinction.

Now after a quarter-century of work to save the gold and copper-colored fish — one of the first species worldwide considered endangered — its status is still shaky.

Officials blame natural disasters. Environmentalists say bungled government recovery plans and acquiescence to ranching interests in the Gila National Forest are at fault.

"It's more complicated than you would think — in trying to figure out what the species needs, what it takes to restore them and how they respond to events over time," said Bruce Anderson, U.S. Forest Service biologist and 17-year member of the Gila Trout Recovery Team.

Officials were close five years ago. The ink was drying on proposals to downlist the 10,000 remaining Gila trout living in five streams from endangered to threatened.

But two years of drought culminating in an unusually hot wildfire coupled with a fierce hailstorm hit Main Diamond Creek, home to the largest Gila population.

The combination wiped out 80 percent of the species and set the 22-year recovery effort back a decade.

"It was a powderkeg," created by years of a now-defunct Forest Service policy to suppress all fires, Anderson said. "It charred the area and then the hail raked tons of ash into the stream bottom."

It would be at least five years before the fish could once again live in that creek and others nearby.

"Three years ago our morale was pretty low," said recovery team leader David Propst of the New Mexico Game and Fish Department.

Bruce Anderson, left, wildlife biologist for the U.S. Forest Service and forest ranger Gerry Engel check a man-made dam on McKnight Creek in southwestern New Mexico's Gila Wilderness recently.

"But in the last two years we've regrouped and are moving forward. We're getting streams renovated and establishing additional streams (as Gila habitat)."

But environmentalists say the fish hasn't got a fighting chance because the Forest Service has allowed the destruction of at least two important stretches of Gila trout habitat — Upper Black Canyon and South Diamond Creek — with uncontrolled cattle grazing. They also contend the Main Diamond fire and hail wouldn't have devastated the area if cows hadn't already ravaged the riverside.

Jim Norton of the Wilderness Society in Santa Fe said his agency is fighting, and may challenge in court, a Forest Service proposal to increase the number of cattle that can graze on its 145,000-acre allotment leased to the Diamond Bar Ranch, which includes Upper Black Canyon and South Diamond.

"It's typical of the Forest Service," Norton said. "They bend over backwards to accommodate the commodity interest. In this case, there's one rancher who is damaging 145,000 acres — 85 percent of it wilderness — and the Forest Service is coming down on the side of the rancher instead of coming down on the side of the fish."

At the request of several conservation groups, Arizona State University zoology Professor Robert Ohmart, an expert on riparian zones, recently walked through Upper Black Canyon.

"This is one of the worst degraded streams I have ever seen," Ohmart said. "What I'm seeing in there is the result of many, many years of lack of management. It's deplorable."

"There's no question that the Gila trout, if it was in there, would be in trouble," Ohmart said. "There's not enough vegetation to stop runoff. Even a mild rainstorm will bring a sediment load into the stream. The banks are beat out and very wide."

Last year, the state Game and Fish Department recommended reducing the Diamond Bar allotment from 900 head of cattle to 300 because of "profound impact on terrestrial and aquatic livestock habitat."

And preliminary results from water quality tests by the state Environment Department show high sediment loads that "literally smother the fish eggs and inhibit the trout's feeding ability," said Jim Piatt, the department's surface water quality bureau chief.

But officials defend their actions and say the path to saving a species is not written in black and white. And while they say the cost of the recovery effort is hard to gauge because it is a joint effort by the Forest Service, New Mexico State University and the state and federal Game and Fish departments, they guess the shoe-string operation has run from $1 million to $2 million over the 25 years.

"We learned a lot off of those losses and based on what we learned there we have improved our strategies to recover the fish so no one disaster will wipe out a population," Propst said.

The fish's near demise was wrought when the state Game and Fish Department and federal agencies brought other trout subspecies — brown and rainbow — from the Pacific Northwest and deposited them in the streams of the pinon and juniper-studded forest for miners and other fishermen.

"They brought in thousands and thousands, mainly in the 1940s and 50s," Anderson said.

The genetically similar species hybridized until the Gila, which can grow to 21 inches, was nearly bred out of existence.

On a recent trip into the steep forested canyon that houses McKnight Creek, where 202 Gila that survived the 1989 fire were placed, not a trout was in sight.

But Anderson wasn't worried because he saw no sign that a recent major catastrophe, such as flood or fire, had hit the area.

The trout, which originally swam 300 miles of river in the wilderness areas north of Silver City, is now found in about 35 miles, Anderson said.

Officials insist the future of the few thousand remaining Gila is bright — but only if the recovery team can get more money, more manpower and a hatchery.

"At this point, we need to get this species up and going," Anderson said. "Genetically, they're on the edge. We need to accelerate and get it over that hump."

But even with a hatchery and no more setbacks, Anderson predicts it will take another 12 to 15 years before the Gila is assured of survival.

Racially charged police trial seeks home

MIAMI (AP) — The retrial of a Miami policeman whose slaying of a black motorcyclist touched off three days of riots in 1989 is a case without a courtroom.

A judge first ordered the trial moved from Miami to Orlando, then changed his mind after the Los Angeles riots and moved the powder-keg case to Tallahassee, which has a higher percentage of blacks.

But the chief judge in Tallahassee rejected the case, and now an appeals court must decide where the trial will be held. It's scheduled to start Oct. 6.

"They're playing nothing but pingpong," say Charles Evans, president of the Tallahassee chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

Officer William Lozano shot speeding motorcyclist Clement Anthony Lloyd in 1989. Lloyd was killed instantly; a passenger, Allan Blanchard, died in the ensuing crash. The deaths set off Miami's fourth race riot of the decade.

A multiracial jury in Miami convicted the Colombian-born officer of manslaughter that December despite his claim that he fired in self-defense as the motorcycle bore down on him. An appeals court overturned the verdict last summer, ruling the jurors had been influenced by their fear of more rioting.

On April 2, Dade Circuit Judge Thomas W. Spencer ordered Lozano's retrial held in Orlando, where Lozano's partner was acquitted of perjury charges stemming from the original trial.

But then came the riots in Los Angeles prompted by the acquittal of four white officers in the videotaped beating of black motorist Rodney King.

That trial had been moved to suburban Simi Valley to escape the political upheaval the beating caused in Los Angeles. But many blacks said holding the trial in a conservative, mostly white suburb helped ensure the officers would get off.

After the riots, Spencer shifted the trial to Tallahassee, saying that would ensure a more racially mixed jury. Tallahassee and Miami are both about 20 percent black, while Orlando is 10 percent black.

Tallahassee officials promptly started planning for possible riots, even though neither that city nor Miami experienced unrest after the King verdict.

"We started planning two months ago and did not stop planning," said Tallahassee Police Chief Mel Tucker. "Look at L.A., they had a plan. But it was not implemented soon enough."

Some of Tallahassee's black leaders said the trial should be held in Miami. But in late July, Leon County Chief Judge William Gary ordered it back to Orlando, saying Spencer should have held a hearing before choosing a city.

Spencer said Monday that he still prefers Tallahassee but will wait for an appeals court to decide whether it should be held there or Orlando. He has denied a request by Blanchard's family to return it to Miami.

"Miami is still our first choice," John Hogan, chief assistant state attorney in Dade County, said Monday. "But obviously we think Tallahassee is a better place than Orlando."

Defense attorney Mark Seiden prefers Orlando, saying he worries that in Tallahassee, "there might be civil disobedience, civil unrest following William Lozano's acquittal."

Lozano's chief attorney, Roy Black, said simply: "I'm not making reservations just yet."

1992 Property Tax Rates in Gray County

This notice concerns 1992 property tax rates for Gray County. It presents information about three tax rates. Last year's tax rate is the actual rate the taxing unit used to determine property taxes last year. This year's effective tax rate would impose the same total taxes as last year if you compare properties taxed in both years. This year's rollback tax rate is the highest tax rate the taxing unit can set before taxpayers can start tax rollback procedures. In each case these rates are found by dividing the total amount of taxes by the tax base (the total value of taxable property) with adjustments as required by state law. The rates are given per $100 of property value.

	General Fund	Farm to Market/ Flood Control Fund	STATE IND HEALTH CARE
Last year's tax rate:
Last year's operating taxes	$ 2,403.297	$ 604.142	$ 284.206
Last year's debt taxes	$ 0	$ 0	$ 0
Last year's total taxes	$ 2,403.297	$ 604.142	$ 284.206
Last year's tax base	$ 1,088,499.212	$ 1,078,056.210	$ 1,088,499.212
Last year's total tax rate	$ 2.2079 /$100	$.0564 /$100	$.02611 /$100
This year's effective tax rate:
Last year's adjusted taxes	$ 2,400.518	$ 603.101	$ 283.878
(after subtracting taxes on lost property)
+This year's adjusted taxes	$ 1,041,526.896	$ 1,031,178.066	$ 1,041,526.896
(after subtracting value of new property)
=This year's effective tax rate	$.23048 /$100	$.05848 /$100	$.02725 /$100
for each fund
Total effective tax rate	$.31621 /$100

In the first year a county collects the additional sales tax, it must insert the following lines unless its first adjustment was made last year.

-Sales tax adjustment rate	$ 0 /$100
=Effective tax rate	$.31621 /$100

x1.03=maximum rate unless unit publishes notices and holds hearing	$.32569 /$100
--	------------------

This year's rollback tax rate:

Last year's adjusted operating taxes	$ 2,400.518	$ 603.101	$ 283.878
(after subtracting taxes on lost property and including taxes for state criminal justice mandate)
+This year's adjusted tax base	$ 1,041,526.896	$ 1,031,178.066	$ 1,041,526.896
=This year's effective operating rate	$.23048 /$100	$.05848 /$100	$.02725 /$100
x1.08 = this year's maximum operating rate	$.248918 /$100	$.063158 /$100	$.02943 /$100
+This year's debt rate	$ 0 /$100	$ 0 /$100	$ 0 /$100
=This year's rollback rate for each fund	$.248918 /$100	$.063158 /$100	$.02943 /$100
This year's total rollback rate	$.341506 /$100

A county that collects the additional sales tax, including one that collects the tax for the first time this year, must insert the following lines:

-Sales tax adjustment rate	$ 0 /$100
=Rollback tax rate	$.341506 /$100

Schedule A Unencumbered Fund Balances

The following balances will probably be left in the unit's property tax accounts at the end of the fiscal year. These balances are not encumbered by a corresponding debt obligation.

Type of Property Tax Fund	Balance
General Fund	0
Farm to Market/Flood Control Fund	0
State Indigent Health Care	0

Schedule B 1992 Debt Service

The unit plans to pay the following amounts for long-term debts that are secured by property taxes. These amounts will be paid from property tax revenues (or additional sales tax revenues, if applicable).

Description of Debt	Principal or Contract Payment to be Paid	Interest to be Paid	Other Amounts To Be Paid	Total Payment
NONE (Expand as needed)
Total required for 1992 debt service				$ -0-
-Amount (if any) paid from funds listed in Schedule A				$
-Excess collections last year				$
=Total to be paid from taxes in 1992				$
+Amount added in anticipation that the unit will collect only % of its taxes in 1992				$
=Total Debt Levy				$

Schedule C Expected Revenue from Additional Sales Tax

(For hospital districts, cities and counties with additional 1/2 cent sales tax)

In calculating its effective and rollback tax rates, the unit estimated that it will receive $ -0-

Schedule D State Criminal Justice Mandate (For Counties)

The County Auditor certifies that County has spent $ in the previous 12 months beginning 19 for the maintenance and operations cost of keeping inmates sentenced to the Texas Department of Criminal Justice, County Sheriff has provided information on these costs, minus the state revenues received for reimbursement of such costs.

This notice contains a summary of actual effective and rollback tax rates' calculations. You can inspect a copy of the full calculations at Gray County Tax Office.

Sunshine House sets grand opening

By CHERYL BERZANSKIS
Lifestyles Editor

Sunshine House, a community support facility of Pampa Family Service Center, is set for grand opening 2 - 5 p.m. Friday at 312 N. Gray.

"Our goal is for (Sunshine House) to be a consumer run clubhouse," said Jamilou Garren, rehabilitation specialist and manager of the facility. Sunshine House offers day programs including meal preparation, recreation and social opportunities for the chronically mentally ill.

More programming is scheduled to begin in September. "It is to help the chronically mentally ill rehab back into a normal lifestyle," she explained.

The clubhouse concept reflects a trend in the mental health field to allow those with mental illnesses to remain in the community rather than institutions, Garren said, by providing support systems they need.

Also officed in Sunshine House is Rebecca Dinsmore, case manager for Pampa Family Service Center. It is her job to link clients of the center with services needed to maintain them in the community. "Our goal is to keep our clients functioning on the most stable basis so they can live in the least restrictive environment," Dinsmore said.

Dinsmore sees clients which come to her through Pampa Family Service Center at least once each month, but the schedule of visits is personalized depending on their condition, she said.

The hours for Sunshine House are 10 a.m. - 4 p.m., Monday, Tuesday and Thursday. The office is open 8 a.m. - 5 p.m., Monday through Friday.

Older bride's shower is her chance to splash

(EDITOR'S NOTE: Dear Abby is on a two-week vacation. Following is a selection of some of her favorite past letters from 1972 and '73.)

DEAR ABBY: I can't believe I'm actually writing a "Dear Abby" letter, but a friend has just put me on the spot, and I don't know how to handle it.

Sarah is a 59-year-old widow who is marrying a 72-year-old widower she met on a cruise last winter. They are being married soon. She was just here and is as excited as a teen-ager. I think she's flipped her lid. She wants a bridal shower! Abby, Sarah has everything she needs, and she can afford to buy anything she wants, but she insists it's not the gifts, it's just the idea of having a shower.

She said when she was married the first time, things were rough and she never had a shower, and now she'd like one. Sarah is such a dear and generous person I hate to let her down, but, Abby, how can I invite women to a bridal shower for a 59-year-old bride who has everything?

ON THE SPOT IN PASSAIC

DEAR ON: Easy. Make it a gag gift shower. Ask everyone to bring a cute little inexpensive present for the 59-year-old bride of a 72-year-old groom. The possibilities are endless.

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

sive present for the 59-year-old bride of a 72-year-old groom. The possibilities are endless.

DEAR ABBY: I am a single girl living in New York City. I have my own car and I am dating a guy who doesn't have a car. It takes about an hour and 15 minutes from his house to mine using public transportation, but it's only 15 minutes by car. I find myself in the position of picking him up and taking him home whenever we go out.

Compounding the problem is the fact that I must use the toll bridge to get to and from his house, which adds up considerably for me.

I find this a very difficult adjustment, as I have been accustomed to having my dates pick me up and take me home. Should I continue this pickup and delivery service? He's not a native New Yorker and is afraid to take the subway late at night.

DOOR-TO-DOOR SERVICE
DEAR DOOR: Thirty minutes in an automobile beats two and a half hours in a subway, no matter who does the driving. If he hasn't offered to pay for the toll, suggest it. If he can't or won't pay for it, you will have to decide whether dating him is worth the portal-to-portal service you're providing.

CONFIDENTIAL TO
"GRATEFUL BEYOND WORDS": Most small-town clergymen are overworked and underpaid, so since you say you can "well afford it," offer him a gift of cash. If he wishes to donate it to the church, let it be his option. Your letter indicates that your clergyman went far above and beyond the call of duty on your behalf, so be as generous with him as he was with you. (And if he's "insulted," you can blame me.)

Tri State Fair parade rescheduled for Sept. 26

The parade which marks the opening of the Amarillo Tri-State Fair that was originally planned for Sept. 21 has been changed to Sept. 26. The change was necessary because of a recent adjustment in schedule of the Amarillo Public Schools whereby schools will be in session on Sept. 21.

Marching bands, floats, military units, youth groups, clowns and horses will march down Polk Street in Amarillo beginning at 10:00 a.m. The theme of the parade is "Rediscover America" in observance of Columbus year activities.

Cash awards of $400.00 will be given to the three floats that best follow the theme of the parade. In addition, some fourteen trophies will be awarded to winners in the various categories of the parade. Winners are determined by a panel of judges selected by parade chairman John Kuhn. Winners will be presented

Latch Key child care registration planned

Latch Key after school child care will hold registration from 1:30 - 3:30 p.m. Aug. 19 on all six elementary school campuses.

Latch Key services will begin at 2:40 p.m. Aug. 20, on each elementary school campus.

Children enrolled in Latch Key will have the opportunity for snacks, arts, crafts, music, gym time and outdoor play.

Airports more aggressive in attacking bird menace

By PAT DURKIN
National Geographic

NEW YORK — As the morning sky lightens, two federal marksmen raise their shotguns and take aim. A cloud of laughing gulls has risen from Joco Marsh and is heading across a jet runway.

It's going to be another killing day at Kennedy International Airport.

By sunset, the tarmac will be littered with the carcasses of hundreds of gulls, shot before flying into the paths of oncoming jets.

On food-gathering missions for their young, the birds at Kennedy are a menace to airline safety. Most major U.S. airports have elaborate bird-control programs to reduce midair collisions between birds and planes. Humane, non-lethal approaches are routinely tried first, but are not always effective.

"We hate to kill the birds, but we have no choice," says Kennedy safety chief Jack K. Gartner, who has received letters from schoolchildren addressed, "Dear Slaughterer."

Before the controversial shooting started last year, the colony of 20,000 laughing gulls inhabiting a wildlife refuge at the end of a Kennedy runway was responsible for as many as 170 bird-plane collisions a year. In 1991, the number dropped to 60.

Bird-protection organizations insist that this result is not worth the bloodshed. About 15,000 gulls were shot at Kennedy last year.

Although the gull problem at New York's coastal airport is one of the worst, more than 2,000 collisions between birds and U.S. aircraft occur each year, most below 2,500 feet. Airports in San Francisco and New Orleans are among many others plagued with birds.

Airlines complain that repairs cost $25 million annually, most of it expensive body work. But birds also get sucked into engines and sever engine parts. When stalls and engine failures occur at low altitudes, pilots have few emergency alternatives.

A gull incident at Kennedy last year forced a Northwest Airlines jumbo jet to abort takeoff while speeding down the runway, causing $200,000 damage to the aircraft. More than 100 people have been killed in bird-caused crashes in the United States, 62 in a single crash at Boston's Logan International Airport in 1960.

Worldwide, birds, especially gulls, are the major animal menace at airports. But pilots have to be on alert for deer or moose grazing near runways in airports such as Washington's Dulles in the Virginia countryside, Houston's International and Alaska's Anchorage.

In India, large flocks of vultures that prey on dying sacred cows can be a hazard.

At some British and other European airports, trained falcons and rock music have been used to scare off birds. In Israel, motorized gliders are sent aloft to track thousands of migratory birds that fly over the tiny nation.

The U.S. Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) requires aircraft-engine manufacturers to toughen equipment against birds. Redesigned engines reduce the chance that ingested objects will contact moving parts.

Birds are attracted to airports because of insects in the grassy strips between runways, puddles created by heavy runoff and the expanse of sun-warmed asphalt.

Noise cannons, recorded bird-distress calls, owl look-alikes and professional bird harassers help keep runways clear.

At some airports, control methods, such as closing nearby garbage dumps, eliminating standing water and varying grass heights, are preferred.

"It's a simple theory, really. If you get rid of what animals need — food, cover and water — they won't hang around," Eugene LeBoeuf, a FAA wildlife biologist, tells National Geographic.

Amazingly, most U.S. airport birds learn to stay out of harm's way. Some even time their flights between airplane takeoffs and landings.

Aviation safety experts say birds that are slow learners are usually trained to stay off runways when one or two of their own kind have been shot.

Kennedy's laughing gulls are so focused on feeding their chicks during the summer nesting season that they don't seem to watch out for themselves.

From dawn until dusk, the gulls speed back and forth over busy runways to various feeding spots. During peak times, pilots report up to four gull strikes a day.

Airport officials talk about relocating the gulls or burning the marsh while the birds are gone in winter. But the wildlife refuge belongs to Gateway National Recreation Area.

"We'd never, never agree to relocation," says John T. Tanacredi, the park's natural resources chief. Besides, he contends, the airport hasn't done enough to make itself less attractive to gulls.

Officials at Kennedy say they have spent hundreds of thousands of dollars on studies, cooperative efforts with park officials and humane control programs. Yet the laughing-gull population has exploded since 1979, when the first pairs were sighted in the New York area.

"We've tried everything," says bird sweeper Charles Zeifelder. "But laughing gulls are uneducable."

Scams reward consumers with booby prizes

By GOOD HOUSEKEEPING
For AP Special Features

Somebody really does win that $10 million dollar sweepstakes — but there also are all sorts of scams out there designed to reward you only with the booby prize.

The first thing to understand, according to an article by Suzanne Perney in the current issue of Good Housekeeping, is that companies are not giving away millions for nothing.

Sweepstakes, a random prize drawing where entry requires no purchase, and game promotions, where you collect, match, scratch or decode game pieces, are marketing tools used to induce you to buy products, read direct mail offerings or to get your name for mailing lists.

Some operators use prize notifications as a ruse to try to sell inferior or merchandise at inflated prices or rip off consumers completely.

When considering a prize offer, use common sense. What is the sponsor trying to sell you? If its only business is giving things away, beware.

"If you get a prize-winning notification, by phone or by mail, that asks for payment of any kind to get your prize, it's not a legitimate sweepstakes," said Deni Hamilton, editor of Contest News-Letter. She advised checking the postage.

saying: "If it's bulk rate, even first-class presort, you're not a winner."

The U.S. Postal Service warns consumers to be wary of postcard-type or official-looking notices that say you have definitely already won and your prize will be one of four or five valuable items or a free vacation.

"Those notices require you to call an 800 number to redeem your 'prize.' But when you do, you are told by a high-pressure salesperson that you must buy something else, like high-priced vitamins or a water purifier, or pay shipping and handling, or join a costly vacation club to get your prize. Don't fall for it," U.S. Postal Inspection Service spokesman Paul Griffo said.

Some sweeps have you call a 900 number to claim a "free" gift. Others switch you from an 800 number to a touchtone-activated pay call that may cost more than $5 per minute and take several minutes. Often your "gift" will be worth less than the call.

The Better Business Bureau also advises you to be careful when you fill out an entry blank, because it may be designed so that you automatically order products.

State laws governing games and sweepstakes vary, but they must meet certain criteria. Sponsors can request but cannot require a purchase, said John Mendenhall of the Federal Trade Commission. Skill contests, where you submit a recipe or write an essay, may charge an entry fee or require a purchase.

Sweeps that require a pay call or a purchase must also provide a free alternative, explained in the promotion rules. If there are no rules, watch out. In a legal sweep, all entrants must have an equal chance of winning, regardless of whether a purchase is made.

"The more difficult it seems to enter a sweeps, the better your chances of winning," said Jeffrey Sklar, publisher of Winning Sweepstakes Newsletter.

Sklar recommended entering sweeps and games that are open for a short time, have complex rules that tend to discourage entrants, offer great middle or lower prizes rather than one gigantic grand prize, are not heavily advertised and are restricted by age, geographic area or other qualifiers.

Organizational activities could have a special appeal for you in the year ahead. These arrangements tend to benefit you, but you must be careful to budget your time and money wisely, so you don't waste hours and resources.
LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Even though you might feel a bit superior to your contemporaries today, keep your opinions to yourself. Associates need pats on the back more than you do. Leo, treat yourself to a birthday gift. Send for Leo's Astro-Graph predictions for the year ahead by mailing $1.25 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.
VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You might not have as much self-assurance today as you usually do. You'll scrap a good idea — if a negative thinker convinces you to.
LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Unless you have truly effective suggestions to offer a friend who is trying to sort out a financial problem, it's best not to say anything today.
SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Don't be taken in today by the exterior trappings of an impressive spellbinder. The substance of what this individual is espousing may be void of value.
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) You're pretty good at telling others what to do and how they should do it. But you may not be as good a listener today when someone offers you sound advice.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) If unflattering comments that were allegedly said by another come back to you today, don't be dismayed when friends consider the source — even if you don't.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Get together with your mate today before establishing the ground rules you want the children to follow. If you don't, you may say one thing while your spouse says another.
PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Where your career is concerned, be extremely careful what you say or commit to writing today. Ill-chosen words could come back to haunt you.
ARIES (March 21-April 19) You're not apt to make large errors in the management of your resources today, but, through indifference, you may make a number of small mistakes that add up to a disturbing total.
TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Do not make any promises today to family members or relatives you do not think you'll be able to keep. You might not take them seriously, but they will.
GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Carefully screen information you get from others today so you don't pass on inaccurate gossip that could damage another's reputation.
CANCER (June 21-July 22) You're essentially a compassionate person who finds it hard to understand why others aren't as well, such as those you might become involved with today.

Unlike at this practice last week, the Wheeler Mustangs will have little time to rest this season after moving from Class A to Class 2A.

Mustangs move at awkward time

By L.D. STRATE
Sports writer

WHEELER — It's been a few years since the Wheeler Mustangs have not been considered a lock for a playoff spot.

All that changed when the University Interscholastic League realigned the districts this year, moving Wheeler from Class 1A to Class 2A. The timing couldn't have been worse for head coach Ronnie Karcher, who faces a major rebuilding job.

"Going into double A is going to be double tough, especially since we lost our senior class. We're going to be an underdog, but hopefully we might be able to slip up on some people. I know our kids will work hard and play hard, but a lack of experience is going to be tough to overcome," Karcher said.

The Mustangs return just four starters — running back Mark Marshall, wingback Joe Dan Ledbetter, offensive guard-linebacker Genaro Meraz and safety Chad Dunnam — from a team that went 9-1 during the last regular season. In a battle for the district title, eventual state champion Memphis handed Wheeler a 26-21 loss to end the regular season. In the playoffs, Wheeler won its first two outings before being eliminated by Rankin.

Now, Wheeler must not only contend with traditionally tough Panhandle and Wellington in District 2-2A, but Memphis again as well. The Cyclones were also moved into the same district.

"Wellington, Panhandle and Memphis are all going to be tough. They all return a bunch of starters and they had good teams last year. The rest of us are all going to be of the same caliber. Canadian should have a pretty good team and Clarendon should do better," Karcher said.

The Mustangs have been to the playoffs the last three years. This season, Wheeler may find it difficult to even nail down third place in district.

"We've got a lot of young players with no experience," Karcher said. "They're going to have to get experienced early in the season, before district starts. We've only got five lettermen, so most of our players were on the junior varsity last season. Hopefully, most of these players will show some early improvement."

Players having the best shot at a starting position include Todd Baize (offensive tackle, defensive end), Marcus Hardcastle (split end, secondary), Russell Woolard (center), Jarrod Ledbetter (offensive back, defensive line), Ryan McNeil (offensive guard, outside linebacker), Cory Case (offensive tackle, defensive linebacker), Phillip Wiggins (offensive guard, defensive linebacker) and Heath Sabbe (split end, defensive secondary).

The Mustangs also lack size, averaging around 170 pounds on the line, compared to close to 190 a year ago.

"We are going to be smaller than we have been in recent years. Maybe we'll have a little more quickness. I know these players will go out and do their best, like they always have. That's something I'm not worried about," Karcher said.

Larry Bird announces retirement

BOSTON (AP) — Larry Bird, an Indiana country boy who helped take the NBA to new heights of popularity, announced his retirement today.

Bird's brilliant passing, pinpoint shooting and relentless rebounding made him the consummate team player, and he and archrival Magic Johnson, another selfless master of the court, together kept the NBA from becoming just a bunch of schoolyard superheroes.

During the Bird-Magic era, attendance soared, TV money ballooned, salaries skyrocketed and basketball once again became a game of five players a side.

Bird, 35, was plagued by back problems for the last two seasons of his 13-year NBA career.

His last game appearance was Aug. 8 when the United States won the gold medal at the Olympics. He was scoreless in 12 minutes.

Afterward, he said he would announce his plans for the future in 2-3 weeks.

Bird was a three-time NBA MVP, winning the award in 1984, '85 and '86 and was on the league's all-star team 11 times.

Bird, drafted in the first round in 1978 as a junior, was beset by a series of injuries in the last four seasons. He played only six games in 1988-89 before undergoing surgery to remove bone spurs from both heels.

Bird took Indiana State to the NCAA Final Four in 1979, losing to a Michigan State team led by Johnson. It was the beginning of a career-long rivalry in which they met in the NBA finals three times and which culminated this year when the two played together to bring the United States Olympic gold.

Between them they won eight NBA championships and popularized a new statistic, the triple-double — double figures in points, rebounds and assists.

Johnson retired last November after announcing that he had contracted the AIDS virus and now is considering a return to the NBA.

Bird played in all eight games of the Olympic tournament, scoring 67 points with 30 rebounds and 14 assists.

In the last game, he sat out the entire first half and looked tentative when he got into the game for the first 12 minutes of the second half, taking just one shot, a missed 3-pointer.

After that game, Bird was noncommittal about his future, although he dropped some hints.

"It's a great way to end a career. It's a great way to start a career. It's a good way for me to go out as a winner," he said.

Bird was always a winner.

At 6-foot-9 and with little jumping ability, he added a new dimension to the forward position with his passing acumen and creativity that helped bring the Celtics three NBA titles in 1981, '84 and '86.

He was healthy in the 1989-90 season, playing 75 games and averaging 24.3 points. In 1990-91, however, the back problems surfaced as he missed 22 games during which the Celtics went 10-12.

Back troubles inhibited him through the playoffs that year, and he underwent surgery on June 7, 1991.

He played just 45 games last season, missing most of the second half and most of the playoffs.

Bird, born and raised in French Lick, Ind., was drafted in 1978 as a junior eligible and joined the Celtics in 1979. He was rookie of the year in 1979-80 and the playoff MVP in 1984 and '86.

Bird finished his career averaging 24.3 points per game, 10 rebounds and 6.3 assists. He scored 21,791 points in his career, 11th on the all-time list.

"As a young kid, you always dream about playing in the Olympics," Bird said after the gold medal game. "The reason I played in these Olympics is because my career is winding down. It's a good way for me to go out a winner."

Dodgers' Gross tosses no-hitter at San Francisco

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Manager Roger Craig has been watching Kevin Gross pitch against his San Francisco Giants for the past seven seasons in three different uniforms, and one thing keeps puzzling him: Gross' won-lost record.

"I told my coaches before the game I've never understood why this guy didn't win more ball games," Craig said Monday night after the Los Angeles Dodgers right-hander pitched the first no-hitter of 1992 and ended a personal five-game winless streak with a 2-0 victory at Dodger Stadium.

"He's a big, strong guy and he's got outstanding stuff. His fastball's not what you'd call 93, 94, 95, but it moves so good."

So good, in fact, that the Giants' entire offense consisted of second-inning walks to Cory Snyder and Matt Williams, and a hit batsman — pinch-hitter Mark Leonard — lead off the ninth.

Gross (6-12) escaped the second inning on a double-play grounder by Kirt Manwaring and set down 22 of his final 23 batters, including Willie McGee on a fly to left for the final out.

"The later it got, the more the adrenaline started pumping," Gross said. "When you're having a good game like this, you're just locked in and you're concentrating totally on every pitch."

"There's a great lineup I'm pitching against, guys that I've battled all my career. There were a few times when I made a bad pitch and they just missed them."

Gross didn't make many bad pitches. He threw 99 of them, 71 for strikes. His primary weapon was his breaking ball as he struck out six and ended a string of 10 consecutive losing decisions against the NL West, dating back to last season.

"That's the best control he's had, from my standpoint," said Giants slugger Will Clark, who did not hit a ball out of the infield in three tries. "I've seen him have better stuff, but not as good control."

"But when you're on this level, it doesn't matter how hard you throw. It's where you put it. And he didn't make many mistakes."

Dodger shortstop Jose Offerman, who leads the most error-prone team in the majors with 32 miscues, caught Gross' biggest mistake. He preserved the no-hitter when he lunged to his right to snag Robby Thompson's line drive leading off the eighth inning.

"I thought it was a base hit," Gross said after recording his 14th career shutout and third of the season. "When he caught it and came in after the inning, he said, 'We're going to get it.'"

The Dodgers signed Gross as a free agent in December 1990 after he left the Montreal Expos. Since coming to Los Angeles, he is 16-23 and 96-113 overall.

The last time he had a winning season was 1985, when he finished 15-13 with the Philadelphia Phillies.

Bills beat quarterback-hunting Detroit, 30-24

ORCHARD PARK, N.Y. (AP) — Rodney Peete will start at quarterback for Detroit this season and Erik Kramer will be his backup. Coach Wayne Fontes isn't sure where the Lions will go from there.

"There's no question who the No. 1 and No. 2 quarterbacks are, but No. 3 is still in a little bit of turmoil," Fontes said.

It didn't seem that murky in the Lions' 30-24 exhibition loss to the Buffalo Bills Monday night. Chuck Long clearly outplayed Andre Ware in a game prolonged to three hours, 46 minutes by 31 penalties.

Both quarterbacks led the Lions on scoring drives, but Long showed greater field presence and easily had the better statistics. He completed 4 of 6 passes for 28 yards, including a 1-yard touchdown pass.

"In the minimal time that you're out there, you have to make good, and I felt good about that," Long said. "It felt good to get in there and get rid of my game rust."

Ware, the 1989 Heisman Trophy winner who was the Lions' first-round draft choice three years ago, threw a shutout in the game (0-for-3 after playing the first quarter and a half) and then again in the interview room afterwards.

"I've got nothing to say to anybody," he said.

If Fontes thought Long did the better job than Ware, he was careful not to say so after the game, possibly because Detroit may be looking to move Ware in a trade.

"I thought they both had pretty good first series," Fontes said. "They both led the team to scores, and that's the important thing. When you shine with the team, that's what I'm looking for."

Like Ware and Long, running back Ed Tillison has no chance of being the Lions' starter, not with Barry Sanders around. Still, the rookie ran hard, trying to distinguish himself from the pack of backs looking to sit on the bench behind Sanders.

He caught the Lions' only touchdown pass, a 1-yarder from Long, and added 73 yards on six carries. Unfortunately, he also fumbled twice.

"My performance was good but not good enough because I didn't secure the ball when I was getting ready to get hit," the eighth-round draft choice out of Northwest Missouri State said. "I know I have to work on that to make the team."

Sanders and his former teammate and rival for the title of the NFL's best back, Buffalo's Thurman Thomas, didn't stay in the game long.

Thomas left after suffering a bruised cheekbone halfway through the first quarter. Sanders seemed to elude all 11 Bills defenders on a 24-yard, sideline-to-sideline run that set up his 3-yard touchdown run. Shortly after that, he left the game.

Thomas' replacement, Ken Davis, once again showed that Buffalo has a more than adequate backup for Thomas. Davis scored on 1- and 4-yard touchdown runs, carried the ball 10 times for 56 yards and added a 10-yard reception.

"I may take these exhibition games more seriously than some other guys because this is my proving ground," Davis said. "I think I have to look at it that way."

Buffalo's talent evaluators will have some work on the defensive side of the ball. Rookies Frank Kmet, Keith Goganious and Kurt Schulz each made big plays.

Kmet, whom the Bills would like to see develop as a run-stopper in the middle of the defensive line, blew past a Detroit lineman in the fourth quarter and blindsided Kramer, forcing a fumble that Schulz returned 47 yards for a touchdown.

"It's exciting and a big confidence-builder for me," said Kmet, who's still recovering from a broken leg suffered in college. "I'm just waiting for it (the leg) to be 100 percent, but things are going pretty good right now."

Schulz, a defensive back, saw more playing time than he expected. "I was running around too much and I've got to concentrate a little more on my responsibilities, but it was good just to be out there," he said.

Goganious, a linebacker from

Penn State, forced a fumble and, while covering a kick, recovered another. He said that solid special teams play may be what secures him a roster spot.

"At my position, you've got three Pro Bowlers, so it has to come down to making this squad as far as special teams," he said. "It's very competitive and I have to learn the whole system because I didn't do much special teams in college."

Detroit's Gary Pettis, left, dives back to the bag ahead of the tag by Kansas City Royals first baseman Wally Joyner during the top of the third inning Monday night in Kansas City.

Braves top Pirates

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Big series. Big victory. Big momentum-booster.

So how big were the Atlanta Braves' three victories over the Pittsburgh Pirates in their four-game showdown series of National League division leaders?

"Big. Real big," Braves manager Bobby Cox said after Monday night's 5-4 victory in 10 innings.

And what will the season-series edge — and Atlanta's 7-5 season series edge — mean if the Braves and Pirates are rematched in the NL playoffs in October?

According to Cox: A big zero.

"No, no, believe me," Cox said. "It's a whole different game in the playoffs. I just hope we're in them."

The Braves have a much better chance after taking their second consecutive series from Pittsburgh, giving them 51 victories in their last 69 games — a .739 winning percentage.

Atlanta won the first two games by a combined 22-5, lost to knuckleballing Tim Lincecum 4-2 on Sunday, then won the series finale on Mark Lemke's two-out RBI double in the 10th inning off Bob Patterson.

"Is it big? I think so. That was a big win for us," Cox said. "When you win the first two, you want them all but when you lose the third one, three of four is good."

Five of seven is almost as good, and that's what the Braves did in their final two series against NL East leader Pittsburgh. The Braves won two of three games July 24-26 in Atlanta before continuing their success in Three Rivers Stadium, where they took 4 of 6.

All but two of the 12 Braves-Pirates games this season were decided by two runs or less.

"Both teams played real tough. They didn't want to give up and neither did we," the Braves' David Justice said. "They're a championship-caliber team, and we think we are, too."

"They're good, so are we," Pirates manager Jim Leyland said. "The last two (series) were just excellent series, just the way they should be."

The Braves were just a little more excellent.

Justice, in a 1-for-16 slide, went 3 for 4 with a walk and scored three runs, including the game-winning. He doubled leading off the 10th against Patterson (5-2) and scored on Lemke's two-out double.

Judge blocks Tyson's bid for new trial

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — A judge has denied Mike Tyson's motion for post-conviction relief, blocking his efforts to win a new trial.

Marion Superior Court Judge Patricia Gifford said in an order issued Monday that a contingency fee agreement between the woman Tyson was convicted of raping and her attorney was not "newly discovered evidence" and would not merit a new trial.

Gifford's eight-page order also affirmed her earlier decision to deny Tyson's attorneys the right to question 19-year-old Desiree Washington of Coventry, R.I.

Tyson's appeal attorney, Harvard law professor Alan M. Dershowitz, had sought a copy of the retainer and fee agreement between Washington and Rhode Island attorney Edward Gerstein.

Dershowitz had claimed the contingency fee pact was the "smoking gun" that would win Tyson a new trial. He said it showed Washington pursued criminal charges against Tyson because she wanted the financial gain of a lawsuit.

Tyson was convicted Feb. 10 of raping Washington, then 18, in his Indianapolis hotel room in July 1991. He is serving a six-year sentence at the Indiana Youth Center. Dershowitz is appealing the conviction before the Indiana Court of Appeals.

Dershowitz said the deposition would have proved that Washington lied on the witness stand when she was asked about any fee agreements her family had with a private attorney, he said.

"What Judge Gifford fails to understand in this opinion is the key is not that there was a contingency fee agreement, but that Desiree Washington was willing to cover it up and give misleading testimony," Dershowitz told the Indianapolis Star.

Gifford said Indiana law requires that such evidence must be likely to produce a different result and not simply be an addition to evidence the jury already heard.

"The fact that a written agreement with her former attorney was in existence would be but one more of a piece of cumulative evidence that would not have produced a different result," Gifford wrote.

The fee agreement came to light after the Rhode Island Supreme Court publicized its existence when Gerstein requested an opinion on whether he should reveal it.

Gifford also criticized Tyson's appeal attorneys. She noted that to bolster his claim that the Washington family was only seeking financial gain, Dershowitz cited a June 28 interview on ESPN radio with the victim's father, Don Washington.

In the interview, Don Washington makes a reference to movie rights concerning the case, and says, "That's where the money is."

But Gifford wrote that a transcript shows Washington was merely quoting Gerstein, while Dershowitz's motions attributed the remark directly to Don Washington.

Dershowitz countered that he did not rely exclusively on the ESPN interview to support his argument.

Counselor says teachers treatment of athletes causes some of them to fail in the classroom

BLACKSBURG, Va. (AP) — The way some teachers treat athletes may perpetuate the view that athletes are academically inferior.

And that may become a self-fulfilling prophecy, according to an academic counselor in Virginia Tech's athletic department.

"If you think you can't function well except on the field of glory, then you are going to be that way," said Lois Berg, who will survey athletes from seven colleges to determine the effect of teachers' views on the students.

"These kids are not dumb jocks," Berg said. "I see how hard these kids work both in the classroom and in the weight room."

Part of Berg's job is to overcome what she sees as the handicap of discrimination. Her own story of overcoming adversity, she said, helps her empathize with and motivate student athletes.

Berg, 48, played high school basketball and was a swimmer in the 1959 Pan Am Games. Until 1983, she was operating a sporting goods store, teaching skiing in the winter and kayaking in the summer. That year, a van she was riding in hit an oak tree and doctors had to amputate her right arm.

In the hospital, where she spent 18 months recuperating, she decided to disregard her family's advice and return to college.

"I've been told a lot of times I can't do things," said Berg, still an avid swimmer. "I'm an example that you can do anything you set your mind to."

Berg said any student athlete who has the grades to get in a university like Virginia Tech can succeed academically. But some, particularly football and basketball players, are encumbered by prejudice, she said.

"You cannot discriminate against people because of gender or race, yet student athletes get discriminated against because of their physical abilities," she said. "I see reinforcement daily."

Professors have accused her of writing papers for students whom they considered incapable of the work and suggested that athletes drop their classes on the first day, she said.

Allan Thomas, a Blacksburg Police Department detective who was a running back at Virginia Tech from 1982 to 1986, said he felt his teachers treated him differently and seemed to resent him.

"They used to say we had a free ride but not knowing what really goes on," Thomas said. During the season, football would take eight or nine hours a day, seven days a week — more than a full-time job, he said.

"You constantly have to prove you are not a stupid jock instead of just a regular student judged on merit alone," he said.

David DeWolfe, vice president of the Virginia Tech Faculty Senate, said he has seen no evidence of discrimination against athletes.

"Unfortunately, the statistics I've seen about performance of student athletes, particularly basketball and football players, seem to indicate there are some weaker students among them," said DeWolfe, a professor of electrical engineering.

According to an NCAA-sponsored study in 1987-88, college football and basketball players have, on the average, lower entrance test scores than the general student population. Studies also have found that varsity athletes take longer than normal to complete their degrees, their grade point averages are lower and they often have less demanding majors, Berg said.

DeWolfe said he has had only one athlete as a student in 10 years and added that he was surprised to hear that six student-athletes were majoring in electrical engineering at Virginia Tech.

Told that Rusty Pendleton, a linebacker, was majoring in aerospace engineering, DeWolfe said, "Amazing. Those poor guys have to spend so much time on the field."

Berg will send questionnaires next month to randomly selected track athletes and basketball players at the seven Metro Conference schools — Louisville, Southern Mississippi, Tulane, South Florida, UNC-Charlotte, Virginia Commonwealth and Virginia Tech. She will assess the extent to which student athletes perceive they are prejudged.

With Berg's encouragement, Thomas is taking the first of a handful of classes he needs to get his degree. He dropped out after signing a contract to play for the New England Patriots and then suffered a career-ending eye injury his first year.

"I have to tip my hat to her," he said of Berg. "She really gets guys focused on academics."

Actor-director Woody Allen and actress Mia Farrow are shown in a scene from the 1986 film "Hannah and Her Sisters." Allen admitted Monday to having an affair with Farrow's 21-year-old adopted daughter Soon-Yi.

Woody's affair: Life imitates movies

By SAMUEL MAULL
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Like a character from one of his movies about love and angst in New York, Woody Allen has fallen for a much younger woman — the adopted daughter of Mia Farrow, his longtime leading lady on screen and off.

Allen, 56, confirmed Monday that he is romantically involved with 21-year-old Soon-Yi Farrow Previn, whom Farrow adopted when she was married to conductor Andre Previn.

"Regarding my love for Soon-Yi — it's real and happily all true," the filmmaker said through a spokeswoman. "She's a lovely, intelligent, sensitive woman who has and continues to turn my life around in a wonderfully positive way."

The New York Post reported today that Farrow learned of the affair when she discovered nude pictures of her daughter in the young woman's bedroom in Farrow's apartment and realized they had been taken in Allen's apartment.

Meanwhile, Connecticut State Police said they are investigating a case that involves Allen. And Farrow's lawyer, Alan Dershowitz, was quoted by The New York Times today as saying the case concerns suspicions of sexual abuse of another of Farrow's children. It was not known whether Allen is a suspect.

His spokeswoman Leslee Dart told the Times, "Anybody who wants to can make a complaint, whether false or not false, and the police have to investigate."

Dershowitz said the investigation was spurred by a doctor who examined the child two weeks ago.

Allen said the affair with Miss Farrow Previn, a college student in New Jersey, had nothing to do with the lawsuit he filed Thursday seeking custody of three of Farrow's 10 other children: their 4 1/2-year-old biological son and two youngsters they adopted.

On Monday night, Allen brushed past reporters and photographers outside Michael's Pub, a bar where he plays his clarinet once a week. He left after a 40-minute medley of ragtime and Dixieland jazz.

News reports Monday said the affair had led to Allen's breakup with Farrow. But a source speaking on condition of anonymity said that the affair began seven months ago, "at a time when the relationship with Mia was virtually over."

The Daily News quoted Farrow's 81-year-old mother, Maureen O'Sullivan, as saying she was "revolted" by the affair. "Maybe Soon-Yi was charmed by an old man of fame ... who is old enough to be her grandfather," she said.

Farrow was Allen's principal leading lady in all 13 of the movies he has made since they met in 1980. But the two never wed, and they lived in separate apartments facing each other across Central Park.

Several of Allen's movies deal with nebbishy older men in affairs with younger women.

In the 1979 film "Manhattan," Allen plays a 42-year-old writer in love with a 17-year-old prep school student. He quips that he is "dating a girl who does homework."

In "Hannah and Her Sisters" in 1987, Farrow plays a woman whose husband has an affair with her younger sister. Ms. O'Sullivan plays her character's mother.

And in "Husbands and Wives," scheduled for release next month, Allen plays a college professor who becomes romantically involved with a student, played by 19-year-old Juliette Lewis.

A lawyer familiar with the child-custody application said Allen charged that Farrow, 47, is an unfit mother. The lawyer requested anonymity because the court papers are sealed. A hearing is scheduled Aug. 25.

"In the matter of child custody:

The last thing I wanted to do was go to court," Allen said in his statement. "I have tried agonizingly to work out the details privately, but finally I was left with no alternative."

Allen is known for guarding his privacy, often concealing himself with a floppy hat as he walks around Manhattan. But he's no recluse: he eats at the fashionable restaurant Elaine's and plays clarinet regularly at Michael's Pub.

Celebrity divorce lawyer Raoul Felder, who is not involved in this case, said Allen's affair with Miss Farrow Previn will doom his custody suit.

"For all intents and purposes, he has been her father," Felder said. "If this is the case, if the accusations are true, he'll never even be able to visit them, much less have custody."
