Bombing intensifies

Saudi pilot downs 2 Iraqi warplanes

DHAHRAN, Saudi Arabia (NYT) — As allied bombers, blessed with improving weather, stepped up the pace of their attacks deep inside Iraq, the largest marine amphibious force assembled since the Korean War practiced landings in the Persian Gulf and a 30-year-old Saudi pilot shot down a pair of enemy Mirage fighters.

The American command said allied planes had taken off more than 15,000 times in the first week of the war against Iraq, and that more than 8,000 of those flights were combat sorties.

A 15th American plane was lost, an Air Force F-16 hit over Iraqi-occupied Kuwait, but its pilot managed to get the craft over water before ejecting and was picked up in the gulf by a helicopter from the American frigate Nicholas.

The Bush administration continued an effort to dampen public expectations of a short war.

"We would prefer not to talk in terms of days or weeks but months," said Marlin Fitzwater, the White House spokesman.

Reporting sketchy details of an encounter between American planes and a pair of Iraqi minesweepers, Air Force Lt. Col. Phil Lacombe said one of the sweepers apparently struck one of its own mines and sank.

A helicopter from another American frigate, the Kurtz, plucked 22 survivors from the water, he said, and when it came under small arms fire from the island of Qura, a tiny dot off the Kuwaiti coast, the Americans took 29 more prisoners there.

Three Iraqis were said to have been killed in the skirmish.

The Kuwaiti press agency reported that the reduction of the defenses on Qura made it the first piece of Kuwaiti territory to be wrested from Iraqi control since the Aug. 2 invasion, but Lacombe said he could not confirm the report.

For the first time, French warplanes attacked targets inside Iraqi territory, bombing artillery units attached to Iraq's elite Republican Guards. The strike followed President Francois Mitterrand's decision over the weekend to reverse France's previous policy of striking only targets in Kuwait.

Midlander, son watch war scene firsthand

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

While many Midlanders watched U.S. Patriot missiles intercepting Iraqi Scuds in the skies over Saudi Arabia on television, Pam Parry and her 12-year-old son Mathew watched the action live.

Mrs. Parry and her son spent almost a week — since the night before the bombing of Baghdad began — trying to leave Saudi Arabia. On Wednesday they arrived in Midland, where they will stay with her parents until the Mideast war ends.

In a harrowing week, the duo went from almost being able to leave before hostilities began, to sealing themselves in a bedroom for protection from potential chemical warfare, to going back to Dharhan in time to witness U.S. missile defense firsthand.

"It was a hairy experience. I know my son and I will never forget it," Mrs. Parry said.

Her husband probably won't, either. Tom, 40, remains in RasTanura, Saudi Arabia, about 100 miles from the Kuwaiti border.

The Parrys have lived in RasTanura for five years. Tom works as a helicopter pilot for an oil company — Saudi Aramco, formerly Arabian American Oil Co. Mrs. Parry is a Midland native.

Mathew said he was worried about his father's well-being, "but if something happens I think he'll get out."

As for himself, Mathew said he was "really scared that the bomb could hit. I could see them coming down right for us," he said.

"Once the bombing started, I didn't think we'd get out," Mathew said.

Mathew and his mother witnessed three Iraq Scuds being intercepted by Patriots on Sunday.

The two were getting off a bus at the U.S. consulate in Dharhan on their way to the airport when the interception took place.

"Getting off the bus, the sirens went off and I looked up and saw Scuds and hear boom, boom, boom," Mrs. Parry said.

"I watched them come in above

White House: Brace for long war, setbacks

■ Somber appraisal is combined with prediction that 'in final analysis, we will prevail.'

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The war against Iraq probably will last months, not weeks, and will entail "enemy victories" and allied losses before Saddam Hussein is defeated, the White House said Thursday in its first, tentative predictions about the duration of the conflict.

The somber appraisal was combined with a confident prediction that "in the final analysis, we will prevail."

Eight days into the war, Republican leaders of Congress were briefed on the fighting by President Bush and Defense Secretary Dick Cheney. Leaving the White House, the lawmakers said Americans should not expect lightning victory.

"It's not going to be a short war," said House Republican Leader Bob Michel of Illinois. "We're not going to be rushing into a land war while the air strikes still have much to accomplish."

Rep. Newt Gingrich, the GOP House whip from Georgia, said Saddam was "a very, very dangerous opponent"

Yugoslav army, Croatia go on alert

■ Military units, tanks move on outskirts of Zagreb.

Associated Press

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia — The federal army and security forces in the pro-independence republic of Croatia were put on battle alert Thursday and tanks were moving near the Croatian capital, news media reported.

A meeting set for today between Serbia's communist President Slobodan Milosevic and Croatia's conservative leader, Franjo Tudjman, was called off by the Croats.

Croatian Defense Minister Martin Spegelj told an emergency Cabinet meeting that military units, including tanks, had been seen moving on the outskirts of Zagreb, Belgrade radio said. Spegelj said his defense forces and federal units were on the "highest degree of combat readiness."

Croatian Premier Josip Manolic was quoted as saying, "In the circumstances in which it (Croatia) is threatened with a military resolution of the Yugoslav crisis and in which tank and other units are being deployed in a manner sensitive for the security of the republic of Croatia, it would be nonsense" to hold talks with Serbia.

Milosevic met Thursday with President Milan Kucan of Slovenia,

Republics defy Kremlin

Thousands of Muscovites storm banks

MOSCOW (AP) — Boris Yeltsin's Russian federation and three other republics snubbed President Mikhail Gorbachev on Thursday by giving their residents more time to exchange high-denomination rubles before the banknotes become worthless.

The central State Bank declared the extensions illegal but for the second day, this nation of 290 million people was in an uproar over Gorbachev's decision to scrap the 50-ruble ($80) and 100-ruble ($160) notes.

Soviets tried to get rid of the cash by buying train and plane tickets, turning over their money to black marketeers or even racking up traffic fines, paying the fine with the large denomination notes in order to get change in smaller bills.

Thousands massed at banks, leading one economist to predict those packed in bank lines would riot.

In Leningrad, the second-most populous Soviet city, two people died of heart attacks and 19 were injured waiting to exchange money, a police spokesman said. Details of what happened to cause the injuries were not clear.

Gorbachev issued a decree Tuesday withdrawing the notes and giving Soviets until today to exchange them for smaller bills. The measure was aimed at the millions of Soviets with illegal incomes and at soaking up billions

ATHENS, Greece — Explosions rocked branches of U.S. and British banks early Friday, a police spokesman said. A radio station reported a third blast near the home of the French consul. There were no immediate reports of injuries. The spokesman said the explosions took place after midnight at the Citibank branch in the residential suburb of Halandri and at British-based Barclays Bank in Marousi, another northern suburb of the capital. Another blast was reported near the Columns of Olympian Zeus in downtown Athens. The officer said he did not know the target of that blast.

Get ready for sunny skies

Staff Report

Today's forecast is sunny with a high near 60, and southwest winds 10-20 mph, shifting to northwest by afternoon, according to the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport.

Tonight is predicted to be fair with a low 25-30.

Saturday's forecast is fair with a high in the upper 50s, the NWS said.

After an overnight low of 29, Thursday's high was 53, compared to the record high for the date of 82, set in 1950. The record low today's is 13, set in 1940.

STATE

Clearing skies spread through North and West Texas but persisted in southern regions Thursday, as cooler temperatures and rainfall were predicted through the start of the weekend.

A weak high-pressure system in North Texas was responsible for the clearing trend and pumped drier air into the region for a time.

High temperatures ranged from the upper 30s in the Panhandle to the mid-60s along the Rio Grande.

Light rain fell earlier Thursday in South Texas before moving out of the area, the National Weather Service said.

Winds were northerly to northeasterly at speeds of 5 to 15 mph in North and South Texas. Winds gusted over 30 mph in the Panhandle and through Guadalupe Pass, but were light and variable in the Concho Valley and Edwards Plateau.

It should be partly cloudy Friday with highs ranging from the 40s in Northwest Texas to near 70 degrees in the lower Rio Grande Valley. Colder conditions were expected through Saturday statewide.

NATION

Snow closed schools and snarled traffic Thursday in South Carolina and northern Georgia. Rain fell elsewhere in the Southeast.

South Carolina Gov. Carroll Campbell ordered the closing of state offices in 36 of the state's 46 counties for "all but essential personnel" because of road conditions, said his spokesman, Tucker Eskew.

Clemson University and the University of South Carolina campus in Columbia canceled classes because of the weather.

South Carolina businesses reported increased demands for winter items such as coats and boots that are normal winter attire in other parts of the country.

"People want coats, but we don't have any to sell them," said Pearl Nelson, area manager for Upton's at Anderson mall in Anderson. "We just got in our spring and summer stock."

Northern Georgia had up to 6 inches of snow around Clarksville and in Lumpkin County by midday.

Midland statistics

Today: Sunny, high near 60, southwest winds 10-20 mph, shifting to northwest by afternoon.

BOMBING: Marine amphibious force prepares quest of Kuwait. Baghdad radio quoted Iraqi President Saddam Hussein as denouncing "the forces of arrogance and evil" arrayed against him during a visit to the front.

The broadcast said field commanders had told him the allies were displaying "cowardice and fear" by waging war in the air and avoiding ground combat.

Television pictures shown on Cable News Network, the only news organization with a Western correspondent remaining in Baghdad, showed considerable bomb damage to houses and small shops in the Iraqi capital. The pictures were shot under the supervision of an Iraqi government censor.

"We do not target civilian facilities," a spokesman at the Pentagon said, but allied pilots readily conceded mistakes were inevitable even with sophisicated new bombs and missiles.

CBS News said one of its correspondents, Bob Simon, had been missing since Monday with his three-man crew. Their vehicle was found Thursday near the Kuwaiti border by a Saudi patrol, out of gas and with the keys in the ignition. CBS officials said they hoped Simon was with allied troops.

Among key targets for the allied bombers Thursday, with skies clear over Kuwait and over Iraq as far north as Baghdad, were the positions of the Republican Guards in northern Kuwait and southern Iraq. About 150,000 members of the unit, reportedly heavily dug in, were hit by waves of B-52s and other bombers, according to Lt. Col. Greg Pepin, an American spokesman.

"We are hitting them with all the assets available to us," Pepin said at the daily briefing in Riyadh, the Saudi capital.

The Iranian press agency said Basra, Iraq's second city and the main staging area for the occupation force in Kuwait, was under allied bombardment from land and sea.

In the Iran-Iraq war, Saddam kept the Republican Guards in reserve and used them for counter-attacks. He apparently has something similar in mind this time; the Guards are well away from the front, behind 22 or 23 less experienced divisions that would take the first blows of an allied attack.

Aircraft of eight nations also hit Scud missile launchers, lines of transportation and communication, control sites and enemy airfields. On one of the airfields, the command said, three Soviet-built TU-16 heavy bombers were caught on the ground and destroyed.

A sixth Royal Air Force Tornado was reported downed. British officials said the proportionally heavier losses suffered by the Royal Air Force were the result of the missions the Tornadoes are flying, mostly to crater airfields, which means very low-level flying against targets heavily defended by anti-aircraft guns. Tornadoes from the Saudi and Italian air forces have also been shot down.

The downing of the Iraqi Mirages grew out of the first reported attempt by the Iraqis to stage an air raid south of the Kuwaiti frontier.

The Saudi pilot who brought down the two French-built Mirages — some of the best planes in the Iraqi Air Force — was identified as Capt. Ayedh Shamrani. A slim, bearded 30-year-old, he told reporters after the mission that his American-made F-15 was "the best airplane in the world" and said his dogfight with the enemy planes was "magic."

"I just rolled in behind them and shot them down," the fighter pilot said, with a touch of the Red Baron in his demeanor. "It was easy."

According to Col. Ahmed Robayan, a Saudi Air Force spokesman, three Iraqi planes were identified by an Awacs reconnaisance plane shortly after noon Thursday. They were flying low over the Persian Gulf, not far off the Saudi coast, he said, armed with Exocet anti-ship missiles and perhaps bombs.

The Saudi report said two Saudi F-15s were able to get behind the Iraqi planes, and that from a range of 3,000 feet Shamrani brought two Mirages down with air-to-air missiles, becoming the war's first pilot with two kills. The third Mirage was reported to have jettisoned its Exocet and escaped.

The British reported the same dogfight and said the Mirages may have been heading for two British destroyers, the Gloucester and the Cardiff.

Exocets, made in France, were used to devastating effect by the Argentines against British ships in the Falklands war, sinking the frigate Sheffield. An Exocet accidentally fired by an Iraqi plane in 1987 nearly sank an American frigate, the Stark,

While the war in the air continued, the U.S. Marines, who constitute a floating reserve in the Persian Gulf, were going through a dress rehearsal for what may be an amphibious assault in the next few weeks.

The American command said it would not disclose how many Marines were involved, but described the force as the largest of its type since Gen. Douglas MacArthur's landing at Inchon in Korea 40 years ago.

Pepin said Iraq fired six Scud missiles Wednesday, one toward Israel and five toward Saudi Arabia. All six of the surface-to-surface missiles were intercepted.

Iraq has now fired about 22 Scuds toward Saudi Arabia, according to the American count, with 18 intercepted and four allowed to crash in unsettled areas. Thirteen Scuds have been fired at Israel; eight landed, including one on Tuesday.

SOVIETS: Extension has most impact in Russia of extra rubles that fuel inflation.

Russia and Uzbekistan extended the exchange deadline to Feb. 1. Kazakhstan gave citizens until Saturday and Armenia until Sunday.

The extension had the most impact in Russia because it is the largest of the 15 republics, with 150 million people. Russia, with Yeltsin at the helm, has a reputation for defying Gorbachev's commands, especially those on economic reform.

A Russian government decree also increased the amount retirees can exchange monthly from 200 ($320) to 500 rubles ($806). The measure orders banks in Russia to stay open around the clock.

The State Bank in Moscow said the extensions were "directed at wrecking the purposes of the president's decree." It threatened to revoke banks' licenses and annul unauthorized transactions.

"Crowds of Muscovites are storming savings bank offices and have already broken doors and windows in some," the independent news agency Interfax said.

In Riga, Latvia, hundreds of people lined up at the savings bank in the city's old section to exchange money.

Anatoly Topchy held of a stack of 100-ruble notes. "Trash, just trash," he said. "We don't know how or when we are going to get this money. We just hope we haven't lost it all."

One of Yeltsin's economics advisers said things are likely to get worse.

"I predict that in the coming days, a riot will start at banks," economist Igor Nit said in an interview.

He said people are rushing to pull their money out because the government restricted withdrawals from savings accounts to 500 rubles ($806) a month, about twice the average monthly salary of 267 rubles ($430). Nit predicted 60 billion rubles ($96 billion) will be withdrawn by month's end and that authorities will be forced to freeze accounts altogether.

"Social tension will only increase," Nit said. "The consumer market will not improve because more goods will not be available. From an economics standpoint, it makes no sense."

Arnold Voilukov, deputy chairman of the State Bank, said people should not panic because honest Soviets will be able to change their money without problems.

"The exchange was meant to disrupt unearned incomes, intensify tne struggle with the shadow economy and to prevent money hoarded abroad from re-entering the country and playing havoc with the monetary system," Voilukov told the newspaper Pravda.

But people with large amounts of cash such as private businessmen and older people who do not trust banks were left to their own devices.

Traffic police in Moscow reported that motorists were deliberately violating laws to pay fines with 50- and 100-ruble notes, getting change in smaller bills, the newspaper Moskovskaya Pravda said.

Thousands of people flocked to train stations and travel agencies to buy tickets that could be partially refunded. Others tried to wire themselves money orders.

Black marketeers stepped in to reap fast profits by buying the big bills at cut rates, but it was not clear how they would get rid of the notes.

FIRSTHAND: 'I told my son to get his gas mask on' my head and us blow them up. I said to myself, 'I can't believe this is happening,'" she said.

Military personnel scrambled to put on gas masks and escorted Mrs. Parry, Mathew and others from the bus to a bunker under the consulate building.

Everyone stayed in the bunker until 10 p.m., when they went upstairs.

"While my son was on the telephone with my husband, the sirens went off again, and we went back in the bunker until midnight. Then we went upstairs and the sirens went off again until about 3:30 a.m.," Mrs. Parry said.

At 4 a.m. the group finally was able to leave for the airport, where they boarded a plane to Frankfurt, Germany.

Mrs. Parry said they were lucky to leave Monday morning.

The night before Operation Desert Storm was launched, they were seated on a plane at the Dhaharan airport preparing for takeoff.

Mrs. Parry said she looked out the window and noticed two planes moving hastily nearby, and first-class passengers began deplaning.

"I told my son to get his gas mask on," she said. They had been carrying gas masks for 10 days.

"When I got to the aircraft door, I heard sirens," Mrs. Parry said.

"When I looked out everyone had gas masks on. My heart started to do a double-take," she said.

"I asked a Saudi what was going on and he said war had started," Mrs. Parry said. She found out their plane was delayed because of military jets from the same airport headed for Baghdad.

The Parrys stayed in an airport bunker until the next morning, when they made their way home to RasTanura, about 40 miles away.

"We went to bed about 6 p.m. and sirens went off at 3 a.m. A neighbor called and said to get Mathew into the bedroom, to seal it and wear gas masks," she said. They stayed until an all-clear siren sounded a couple of hours later.

The two endured restless nights until Saturday, when Tom came home from his work near the Kuwaiti border. Then, everyone got a good night's sleep, Mrs. Parry said.

"He said he'd never seen so much military on the road on the Kuwait Highway. He counted 5,000 vehicles headed north," she said.

The next day the consulate called with word that transportation out of the country was available — in the next hour.

They rushed to Dhaharan — driving at speeds of up to 120 mph and having to change a flat tire. After arriving at the consulate where their baggage was stored, they waited with others in a gymnasium.

While they were retrieving their luggage, the Scud interception exploded in the skies above them.

"Nobody panicked except the children," Mrs. Parry said.

But adults were not without concerns.

"One lady was freaking everyone out, worrying about terrorism," Mrs. Parry said.

Mrs. Parry said she was glad to be out of danger but wishes her husband could have come along. But leaving Saudi Arabia now would mean losing his job, she said.

Parry will be able to come to the United States in six weeks, when his vacation is due, Mrs. Parry said.

And she believes the war still will be going on.

"It's not going to be a two-week thing. Saddam is calling us chicken for not having a ground war. He wants to fight. He wants to see a body count and we don't," she said, adding that Saddam doesn't care about his people.

Mrs. Parry said there is more to the war situation than the American public has heard.

"I know the news is not telling everything, for the safety of the military. They are only telling what you need to know."

ALERT: Tension mounts

another republic that is seeking independence, the official Tanjug news agency reported.

However, in a statement from the Slovenian capital, Ljubljana, Kucan said that there was an essential difference between the two leaderships over whether "sovereignty of peoples or of republics should be honored." Many ethnic Serbs live in western Croatia, and Serbia has talked of expanding its borders if the country's political configuration changes.

The northern republics of Croatia and Slovenia have sought to transform the Yugoslav federation of six republics and two provinces into a confederation of independent states. Center-right parties in the two republics ousted Communists in elections last year.

But Serbia, the largest republic, is ruled by the Socialist Party, renamed communists who favor a strong central government and has opposed reforms. Some officials in Slovenia and Croatia claim the army is in collusion with Serbia, but senior military officers have repeatedly denied the claim.

Militias in Slovenia and Croatia defied a Monday deadline set by the eight-member federal presidency to disband all "illegal paramilitary groups." Federal leaders have said they will not send the army to attack, but they have threatened measures against people who illegally possess weapons.

On Wednesday, the army again ordered Croatia's militia to immediately demobilize, claiming they were preparing terrorist attacks on the central government's military.

Spegelj, the Croatian defense minister, said his forces and federal army units in Croatia were placed Thursday in the "highest degree of combat readiness," Belgrade radio said in its report, which was confirmed.

WARNING: White House issues somber appraisal

and that "all of us ought to understand that this is still a long, difficult undertaking."

Even so, Gingrich said Saddam is "going to get his butt kicked."

Following up on words of caution from President Bush, the White House issued a blunt warning that Americans should be prepared for setbacks.

"There are going to be enemy victories, there are going to be enemy surprises, days when we see allied losses," presidential press secretary Marlin Fitzwater said.

"We need to get into a frame of mind that allows us to accept those reverses and surges and still keep track of the main thrust and our conviction that we will win, that we are being successful at this point," Fitzwater said.

With Iraqi forces hunkered down and refusing to come out fighting, allied casualties have been kept low. However, that could change dramatically if the war moves from the air to a fierce battle on the ground between infantry, armored and artillery forces.

U.S. officials have been reluctant to talk about the length of the war. However, Fitzwater said the administration was looking at it in terms of months.

"We would prefer not to talk in terms of days or weeks but months because we think the people need to be prepared for the idea that this is not a short war," he said. "But we don't know how long it's going to last."

In other developments:

■ The Army said it was calling 8,478 more reservists and National Guard members to active duty from units in 22 states, Puerto Rico and the District of Columbia. More than 190,000 have been called up since U.S. troops were sent to the gulf last August.

■ The Senate voted 99-0 in favor of tax relief for troops in the gulf. The measure, already approved by the House, allows the troops to delay filing their 1990 tax returns until they have been out of the combat zone for six months.

The White House said it did not want the war to become a divisive political issue, but it appeared more likely it would.

Agriculture Secretary Clayton Yeutter, Bush's choice to become chairman of the Republican National Committee, created a uproar when he suggested Democrats who opposed authorizing use of force in the gulf would suffer politically.

Bush ignored reporters' questions about Yeutter's remarks, and Yeutter himself said, "You need a little more precision on what Mr. Yeutter said."

House Speaker Thomas Foley of Washington, who had opposed the war resolution, said Yeutter's "judgment has deserted him." He said, "To try to raise a political scare tactic out of that is, I think, unwise."

Fitzwater said, "We don't believe the gulf conflict is a partisan issue. On the other hand, it will be noted, I'm sure, that there was a certain partisanship" to the way votes were cast.

Bush, in his meeting with Republicans, called the gulf war "the No. 1 issue of the day."

Correction

A new University Lands royalty schedule was incorrectly stated in Thursday's edition.

The standard royalty on University Lands remains at 25 percent, however if a well is drilled and produces within the first 18 months of the lease term, the royalty drops to 20 percent. If a well is drilled and produces between the 19th and 36th month the royalty is 22.5 percent. After 36 months the royalty reverts to 25 percent.

OPERATION DESERT STORM

Basra again comes under bombardment

WASHINGTON (NYT) — For more than a millennium, travelers knew Basra as a shabbily cosmopolitan river town laced with canals and studded with millions of date palms — the Venice of the East, residents boasted, and home to the original Garden of Eden.

No one would make those comparisons today.

Less than three years after a relentless bombardment by Iran reduced much of Basra to rubble, American and allied aircraft are putting the Iraqi town under heavy attack, seeking to wipe out command centers and supply depots that sustain Iraq's huge army inside Kuwait. The precise targets and extent of the damage are not publicly known.

Close to 90 percent of Basra's buildings were obliterated by Iranian jets, missiles, and more than 65,000 artillery shells during Iraq's eight-year war with Iran.

Iran never got closer than eight miles to Basra, which lies only a few miles from the Iran-Iraq border, but the war turned the city of 750,000 into piles of brick and millions of shrapnel-pocked sandbags.

When the war ended in 1988, President Saddam Hussein began a dizzying program to remake the town into an elegant memorial to the conflict.

He boasted of spending $6 billion to rebuild roads, erect new buildings, and plant some 100 statues of Iraqi war heroes in plazas, each pointing a finger toward despised Iran. The rebuilding included a half-billion-dollar international airport.

But vast areas of the town remain stretches of half-cleared debris, and many of Basra's old charms have been bulldozed under and supplanted by a sprawling military presence.

Basra is the primary center for military communications and the staging point for supply lines to Iraqi troops in Kuwait, 30 miles distant.

It is the "brain" that Gen. Colin L. Powell, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, pledged on Wednesday to sever from the body of the Iraqi army in Kuwait.

"It's the nerve center of the KTO," one government intelligence official said on Thursday, referring to the Kuwaiti theater of operations targeted by allied forces. "It's what you'd call a target-rich environment."

Once Basra was richest in history. Its site was a way station for Alexander the Great, and home to the legendary Sinbad the Sailor in "The Thousand and One Nights." Forty years after its founding, in A.D. 636 by Caliph Omar I, Basra counted 300,000 people and was a major trading center.

The town declined in later centuries, until the British East India Trading Co. set up shop in the mid-1700s and made it a transfer point for shipments bound for Baghdad. It became a major military port for the British in World War I and II, and it mushroomed when Iraq dredged the Shatt al Arab waterway.

Fewer Iraqi soldiers defecting than U.S. officials expected

N.Y. Times News Service

DHAHRAN, Saudi Arabia — Despite eight days of a massive allied bombing campaign designed in part to dislodge and demoralize Iraqi ground troops dug in along the border, American military officials say the number of defections has been far lower than expected.

Army Lt. Col. Greg Pepin said Thursday in Riyadh, the Saudi capital, that only 40 Iraqis had defected since the start of the war.

"Right now there have not been major defectors or deserters coming across the lines," said Pepin.

Prior to the Jan. 17 start of the war, military officials believed that Iraqi troops manning the well-entrenched positions along the border with Saudi Arabia were primarily conscripts, many of whom never had been in combat and would bolt from their positions at the first sign of a concentrated aerial and artillery bombardment. If anything, the opposite has been true since the shelling started, according to Marines stationed near the border.

The Iraqis who fled their positions at the start of the war went north instead of south, and now appear to be returning and reinforcing their positions in anticipation of an allied ground assault.

Those front-line Iraqi troops are trading artillery fire with allied units on a nightly basis, and there are occasional short-lived fire fights involving reconnaissance patrols from both sides of the border.

That indicates to some military officials that the Iraqi ground troops are more cohesive and tenacious than previously thought.

Six Iraqis were captured in one such skirmish late Tuesday night in which two American troops were slightly injured.

Allied troops have captured about 80 Iraqis since the start of the war, 23 of whom were taken last Saturday during a raid on oil platforms in the northern Persian Gulf.

According to Pepin, the Iraqi POWs are lower-ranking enlisted men and several junior officers. He said there was no information about whether any of them were conscripts.

Pepin said that information from the POWs indicates "their morale is getting lower and lower."

There is a general lack of food, adequate clothing and communications for Iraqi troops, according to American military officials.

"Apparently their living conditions are quite bad," said Pepin.

But front-line Marine troops say they are not expecting mass defections despite the nightly artillery duels and bombing runs by allied aircraft.

Marine Col. Ron Richard, of the 2nd Marine division deployed near the Kuwaiti border, said some officers initially expressed surprise about the lack of defections, but have changed their minds.

"All reports that discount his (Iraq's) ability are just wishful thinking," said Richard. "I'm not expecting 100,000 troops to come down here begging for rice. He is well-armed, well-trained and in a strong defensive position."

WWII-era cartoonist rips U.S. involvement in war

SANTA FE (AP) — Cartoonist Bill Mauldin, who won the Pulitzer Prize for his depiction of GIs during World War II, said Kuwait has essentially hired troops to do their fighting so they can regain their oil wells.

"That's not our war," said Mauldin, who has lived in Santa Fe the past 20 years. "Is it really our obligation to get Kuwait's oil wells back for them? I don't think it is.

"They've hired us to do their work for them. They're used to having us do their work for them. We're their fighting men. We're their suckers."

Mauldin, a New Mexico native who produces cartoons for the Chicago Sun-Times syndicate, said he's not against war. But he thinks the United States should be more careful getting into one.

"When World War II came along, I volunteered in 1940, a year and a half before Pearl Harbor," he said. "I thought Hitler was a clear and present danger and I wanted to stop him."

Mauldin said Iraqi President Saddam Hussein is a threat today, but the United States government is partly to blame.

"What we're doing is trying to eradicate a monster we helped create," said Mauldin, who has seen war from the trenches. "We armed Saddam when he was fighting the Iranians. We were so mad at the Iranians that Saddam suddenly became our hero. We probably gave him more of his technology than the Russians did."

Mauldin took particular aim at President Bush and Vice President Dan Quayle.

"I really don't know what Bush thinks he's doing," he said.

"What's more fun than to go doodle off in a war, especially if someone else is doing the fighting? I don't see any of his kids in there. I don't see Danny Quayle in there. I'm very sorry over it all."

Israelis mobilize to combat mental stress over attacks

JERUSALEM (AP) — It's a strange war for Israel. Generals appear on children's television shows and civilians are more endangered in their homes than soldiers are at the front.

The pressures on Israelis, who are not used to waiting out a war, have brought a flood of phone calls to hot line services about the paralyzing uncertainty of when the next missile will fall.

Psychiatrists say the anxieties build every day as the gulf war drags into a second week with no quick end in sight. Iraq has already struck four times at Israel with missiles but has not made good on its most dreadful threat — to use chemical weapons.

Schools have been closed since last Thursday because of the missile threat, and state television is trying to keep national morale high with children's shows that deal with the fears.

Children are shown making clowns out of gas masks, the splashes of color concealing the sinister blackness and bug-like appearance of the masks.

An Israeli version of "Sesame Street" features a burly porcupine named Kippi who jokes with Oscar, of trash can fame, about suffering insomnia because of the missiles.

The older kids get to interview army officers. Thursday's guest was Agriculture Minister Rafael Eitan, a retired general who was army chief of staff in Israel's 1982 Lebanon invasion and a paratrooper in Israel's earlier wars.

Asked by a wide-eyed girl named Adi Ezroni how he managed to keep from being afraid all the time, Eitan recalled four jumps when his parachute failed to open properly.

"There is no such thing as a person who isn't afraid. ... You just try to think about other things," he said.

Dr. Yehuda Oppenheim, a psychiatrist at Jerusalem's Shaarei Zedek Hospital operating an emergency nationwide hot line, said adults often have a harder time coping with the missile threats than children.

"It is happening to the most outwardly confident people," he said. "They find themselves in a situation where they have no control and cannot have control."

The experience is different from previous wars, when soldiers were called away to fight while their families stayed home, safe but worried.

This time, Israelis tell of phone calls from sons on remote border outposts asking if everybody is safe at home. The daily Haaretz ran a cartoon showing a helmeted Israeli in a dugout phoning home and asking: "Hello mom, is everything OK at the front?"

Almost nobody is immune to the anxiety, but Holocaust survivors and mothers of newborns seem particularly troubled.

Oppenheim advises new mothers to continue Lamaze breathing exercises after labor is over to reduce tension so they can take care of their babies.

He told of an elderly woman who saw a newspaper photo of Iraqi President Saddam Hussein, was reminded of Hitler and stopped breathing in a fit of fear that she would be sent back to a World War II concentration camp.

Allies may win war but lose peace in Middle East

By David Crary

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — No matter how decisively the Persian Gulf war ends, turmoil and bloodshed are likely to persist in the Middle East unless the anti-Iraq alliance accepts the need for profound political change.

Experts of widely varying viewpoints agree on some basic challenges that will face the United States and its friends, Western and Arab, whenever they complete their onslaught on Saddam Hussein.

These include democratic reform in such countries as Saudi Arabia and Kuwait, redistribution of oil wealth to benefit the Arab world's resentful have-nots and some sort of accommodation for the Palestinians.

"Nothing in the Middle East will return to the status quo," said Egypt's Tahseen Beshir, a former presidential spokesman.

"The key will be whether the Americans and their allies put the same effort into building the peace as they did in launching the war."

To many Arabs and Muslims, the war has elevated Saddam to the status of holy warrior, the only man willing to take on the might of the entire Western world. His defeat may not dilute this sentiment.

"A defeated Saddam, particularly a dead one, will take on a much more favorable image," Robert O'Neill, an Oxford University history professor, wrote in Britain's Financial Times.

"We should be prepared after a gulf war to face a long and uncertain period as a new system of regional security is built."

In Israel, there's hope that a victory over Iraq could lead to a new era of regional harmony, with the U.S. possibly having more influence due to its alliance with Saudi Arabia, Egypt and Syria.

"I think more opportunities are going to open up," said Itamar Rabinovich, rector of Tel Aviv University. "An American primacy will have been established."

■ An Analysis

But Rabinovich, a professor of Middle Eastern studies, added in a telephone interview: "There will have to be some redistribution of wealth in the Arab world, and there will have to be political reform. ... The coalition should represent the triumph of democratic reform, not the return to oligarchy."

Rabinovich said Israel would have to address the Palestinian question, but not necessarily through talks with the Palestine Liberation Organization.

"It's very important, in the aftermath of war, that those who banked on the wrong side will not be rewarded," he said. "It would be wise to deal with the Palestinians, yes. But the PLO was in the Iraqi camp."

A senior PLO official, Assad Abdul Rahman, says anti-Americanism has become a pervasive ideology in the Middle East and could erupt in widespread violence after an Iraqi defeat.

He said this anger could be defused only if the allies act swiftly on the issue of Palestinian statehood.

"The defeat of Saddam Hussein would create very deep, bitter feelings," Abdul Rahman said.

If President Bush delayed action on the Palestinians until after the 1992 presidential elections, Abdul Rahman said, "I believe this area would see a lot of bloodletting."

There is widespread concern about a possible post-war power vacuum. Iran, Syria and Turkey all have been mentioned as possibly interested in exploiting an Iraqi defeat, either territorially or politically.

Christine Helms, an American expert on the Middle East, wrote in the journal Defense and Diplomacy that if the allies were to crush Iraq's military, "the result will be a power vacuum, the consequences of which even the Four Horseman of the Apocalypse might shrink from considering."

The pro-Western nations of the Arabian peninsula — Saudi Arabia and the emirates — already are discussing arrangements for post-war regional security after Western forces depart.

4-man CBS crew missing near border

A four-man CBS News crew led by the veteran correspondent Bob Simon has been missing in a front-line region of the Persian Gulf war since early Monday, the network said Thursday after the crew's vehicle was found in the Saudi desert near the Kuwaiti border.

Simon

Four sets of footprints, apparently those of the missing men, were found in the desert trailing northward from the car toward the Kuwaiti border, Saudi and American officials said Thursday night. There was no word on when the car had been abandoned.

It was the first report of any news personnel missing in the nine-day war.

The Saudi Defense Ministry issued a statement early today saying the four men "apparently left their vehicle near the Saudi Arabian-Kuwaiti border and headed north into Kuwait."

"Expert Saudi trackers followed footprints from the Simon vehicle into Kuwait and north to the nearest Kuwaiti checkpoint manned by Iraqi forces. The trackers were unable to proceed further."

The ministry said when the car was found, it contained personal belongings, $6,000 in cash, some Iraqi currency, television equipment and a wristwatch bearing the face of Saddam Hussein on its dial.

It said the CBS crew was on an "unsponsored and unescorted trip, a direct violation of established U.S.-Saudi combat media pool ground rules."

The ministry reminded all journalists now in the kingdom that travel into restricted areas without official escort or written permission is prohibited.

As concern arose that the crew might have been captured by Iraqi forces, CBS News had quietly asked the Pentagon and American military forces in Dhahran Wednesday for help in finding the missing men. It delayed making a public announcement in the hope the crew would turn up.

CBS disclosed its crew was missing after a Saudi military unit on routine patrol found the crew's Toyota Land Cruiser Thursday morning on the side of a road near Ar Ruqi, a Saudi town just south of the southwestern corner of Kuwait. There was no sign of a struggle, CBS said.

"We hope they've hooked up with a friendly military unit and are off somewhere and just not able to communicate," said Tom Goodman, director of communications for CBS News. "But the reality is we just don't know their whereabouts or condition."

News correspondents in war zones are occasionally unable to communicate with their offices for two or three days. It is rare for reporters to be missing as long as Simon, who last contacted the CBS base in Dhahran at 9 a.m. Monday.

Pete Williams, the Pentagon's chief spokesman, said at a briefing Thursday that all allied military commanders in the northern Saudi desert had been asked to be on the lookout for the CBS crew.

Simon, 49, a correspondent who covered the Vietnam war, conflicts in the Middle East and Central America and other major news events in 24 years with the network, was accompanied by Peter Bluff, 47, a CBS News staff producer; Roberto Alvarez, 37, a cameraman; and Juan Caldera, 31, a sound man. Alvarez and Caldera are a freelance team based in Miami who often work for CBS.

Florida aircraft carrier heads to sea for training

AP Laserphoto

Amy Mason, from Uriah, Ala., weeps into a United States flag as she watches her husband, Tom, set sail on the USS Forrestal Thursday morning. Tom, an airman apprentice aboard the ship, and the rest of the Forrestal crew are heading out for training off the coast of Florida.

MAYPORT, Fla. (AP) — The USS Forrestal sailed out of Mayport Naval Station Thursday for what officials claim is a short training mission off the coast of Florida.

The crew knew their orders specified a training session, but they didn't know if the assignment would stop there.

"Our families are caught in the middle," said Capt. Bob Cole, the ship's commanding officer. "I think you'll see our people get an extra hug in case we don't come back.

"We are leaving on a routine training mission and if we are ordered to deploy, we can do that."

The crew and family members were wondering if reports about the carrier eventually heading to the Mideast might be true.

On Sunday, Bush administration sources said the carrier would be deployed to the eastern Mediterranean "in the near future" to help bolster Israel's defenses.

"It's an add-on," said the source, who spoke on condition of anonymity. "It will bring the total to seven in the region."

But Pete Williams, a Pentagon spokesman, said Monday, "I want to steer you off any speculation."

Williams said there "may have been some folks (at the Pentagon) who wanted them (the Forrestal) to go over there."

The carrier holds 5,300 people, both sailors and air crews. It can carry 85 jets and helicopters.

Mayport's other carrier, the USS Saratoga, is already in the Red Sea, along with the USS John F. Kennedy and USS America. The USS Ranger, USS Midway and the USS Theodore Roosevelt rotate within the Persian Gulf waterways.

Germans built Saddam's bunker, Bavarian construction firm claims

FRANKFURT, Germany (AP) — A German company helped build a nuclear-proof bunker for Saddam Hussein, a spokesman for a Bavarian construction firm said.

Britain's Ministry of Defense also said British and other Western expertise helped build concrete and steel shelters for Iraq's fighter aircraft. But the military said its weapons have destroyed some of the shelters.

Sunday, the newspaper Bild am Sonntag reported German companies built a $100 million bunker for Saddam beneath his presidential palace in Baghdad. It said the bunker, which reportedly was completed in 1982, is beneath the palace and can withstand heat of more than 570 degrees Fahrenheit.

The report said the presidential palace near the Tigris River has been badly damaged by allied bombing raids in the Persian Gulf war.

"The company that worked on it was Boswau-Knauer from Neuss, which no longer exists," said Georg Niedermeier of the Augsburg-based Walter Thoste Boswau construction company, which bought out Boswau-Knauer in 1983.

Niedermeier said his company did not retain the Boswau-Knauer employees who worked on the bunker. Neuss is in north central Germany near Duesseldorf and Augsburg is about 240 miles southeast of Frankfurt in Bavaria.

Niedermeier said he could not confirm the accuracy of a sketch of the bunker published by Bild.

"We have no blueprints for the bunker left over from the old company," he said. "They probably had to be left in Iraq because they were secret."

The French newspaper France Soir, meanwhile, quoted a French engineer as saying he and other Westerners helped construct Saddam's bunker.

Jean Yves Leberre — reportedly interviewed in Riyadh, Saudi Arabia — told the newspaper he, another Frenchman, a German and an Italian were involved in its construction.

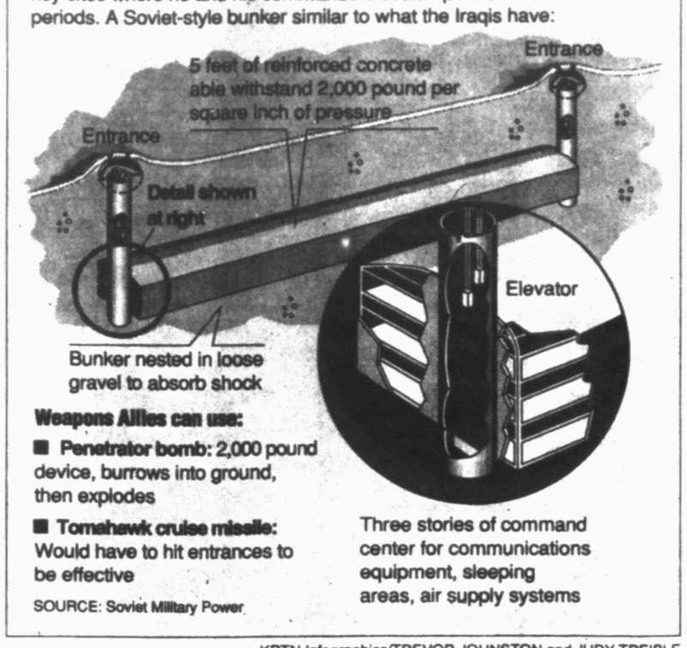

A British Defense Ministry spokesman, speaking on condition of anonymity, confirmed Iraqi aircraft shelters were built to a British design in the 1980s, when sales of non-lethal equipment to Iraq were legal.

He was commenting on a British Broadcasting Corp. report Tuesday that up to 300 British-designed aircraft shelters were buried in Iraq.

Major Gen. Alex Harley, the deputy director of British operations, told reporters that British Tornado fighter-bombers attacking Iraqi airfields have carried "precision weapons as well as bombs" to attack the shelters.

Where Saddam might hide

Saddam Hussein has protective bunkers built in Baghdad and other key sites where he and his commanders could operate for extended periods. A Soviet-style bunker similar to what the Iraqis have:

Weapons Allies can use:

- Penetrator bomb: 2,000 pound device, burrows into ground, then explodes
- Tomahawk cruise missile: Would have to hit entrances to be effective

German companies helped Iraq extend Scuds' range, official says

BERLIN (AP) — German companies illegally helped increase the range of Iraq's Scud missiles, the same type of rockets that have hit Israel, a top adviser to Chancellor Helmut Kohl said Thursday.

The modifications took place in 1986 or 1987, said Lutz Stavenhagen, Kohl's top intelligence adviser. He did not name the companies.

A justice official who spoke on condition of anonymity said it was "highly probable" the changes helped Iraqi Scuds reach Israel. Scores of Israelis have been injured by the Scud attacks.

Stavenhagen said the original range of the Scud was believed to be about 220 miles, too short to reach coastal Israel, while some modified Iraqi versions now have a range of 500 miles.

Increasing the range was the "most serious" aspect of German companies' help, he said.

Also Thursday, the government expelled 28 of the 32 Iraqi diplomats in Germany, saying it was feared they might direct terrorist attacks in the country.

The expulsions came amid a campaign by Germany to prove it is not a reluctant supporter of the Persian Gulf war.

"Everyone in the world should know where Germany stands," said Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher, who ordered the expulsions before leaving for talks in Tel Aviv. "It stands on the side of the allies."

All 14 diplomats at Iraq's mission in Berlin were told to leave within four days, said Foreign Ministry spokesman Hanns Schumacher. Fourteen diplomats at the embassy in Bonn also are being expelled, leaving only the ambassador and three other diplomats, Schumacher said.

A government official who spoke on condition of anonymity said there was "very great suspicion" that some diplomats controlled extremist groups in Germany and could order terrorist activities.

Prosecutors have confirmed two separate investigations into German support for Iraqi missile research.

In the southern city of Karlsruhe, the prosecutor's office said it was investigating the ABC company of Stutensee, which authorities allege shipped missile technology to Iraq. The criminal probe is aimed at determining what kind of technology was involved.

A secretary answering the telephone at the company said there was no one available to comment.

In its Thursday editions, the Berlin newspaper Der Tagesspiegel said: "Above all, German firms helped the Iraqis improve their propulsion systems so that the now-infamous Scud-B rockets can hit the Israeli cities of Jerusalem and Tel Aviv ..."

There also have been allegations Germans also aided in chemical weapons projects. In addition, more than 100 German companies are believed to have broken the country's export laws and the international embargo by shipping sensitive material to Iraq, the Economics Ministry says.

Israel has been especially critical of Germany in the latest Mideast crisis. Jews who survived the Nazi Holocaust worry they might be attacked by Iraqi chemical weapons made possible by German expertise.

Kohl has vowed to increase the $2.2 billion in money and materiel he has already committed to the gulf war, and has sent 18 warplanes to Turkey to help protect that NATO ally from neighboring Iraq. Wednesday, Kohl offered Israel $166 million in aid.

Troops focus hatred on Saddam

By Mort Rosenblum

IN SAUDI ARABIA (AP) — Unlike earlier wars, this one has no Jerries or Charlies, no commies or cocaine kings. For Desert Storm, the enemy is personified in a single hated visage: Saddam Hussein.

For most U.S. troops, their war is not about oil or ideals but rather a lone megalomaniac. The heavily armed Iraqis across a desert no man's land are viewed by many as reluctant victims of their common nemesis.

The commander in chief, President George Bush, calls it "the war against Saddam." In almost every interview, servicemen echo his sentiment, describing their foe in the singular.

"This is about Saddam," said Chief Warrant Officer Roy Lester of the 82nd Airborne Division. "It's like when you see a snake in the grass. You kill it. The Iraqis are just following orders."

Another paratrooper put it succinctly: "We're gonna kick his butt, sir."

Focusing on Saddam fits into the American penchant for identifying foreign entanglements with a single leader, as with Ayatollah Khomeini in Iran, Moammar Gadhafi in Libya and Manuel Noriega in Panama.

But the Iraqi despot is considered in a class by himself, a symbol of evil incarnate unmatched since Adolf Hitler poisoned himself in a Berlin bunker nearly 50 years ago.

Even seasoned analysts of world affairs lay the blame for Iraq's deadly power play squarely at its leader's feet.

Saddam, in turn, has blamed the war on the aggression of "the Satan Bush." Perhaps the residents of Baghdad and the Iraqi troops, pounded from above day after day by the U.S.-led forces, have the same single-minded hatred for the U.S. president that Americans are concentrating on Saddam.

Saddam is known as a man who began as a teen-age assassin, a ruthless and cunning opportunist who rose to the top by murder and deceit.

As president of Iraq, he quietly amassed chemical weapons and used them not only on Iranians but also on Iraqis, recalcitrant Kurds in the north of his country.

He purified his officer corps with summary executions. Last year, he hanged as a spy a British journalist of Iranian extraction.

In the Desert Storm rear echelons, hostility toward Saddam has an edge of black humor.

At Christmas time, the hot item among U.S. information officers in Dhahran, Saudi Arabia, was a cheap day-glo plastic bust of Saddam suitable for smashing with a stick like a Mexican pinata.

T-shirts and baseball caps proclaim "Saddam Busters." Caricatures of the familiar mustachioed face decorate headquarters walls.

Out in the desert, or on flight lines, however, Saddam is no joke. At least one tank is rolling north with "Hussein's Nightmare" painted on its cannon barrel. More than one bomb has Saddam's name on it.

Men hold him responsible not only for endangering the world but also for condemning them to leave their families for months of anguish and hardship in the Saudi desert.

When the war moves from the air to the ground and contact with the enemy becomes more personal, the hatred many U.S. warriors focus exclusively on Saddam likely will extend with more intensity to his soldiers.

But, for now, as Marine Lt. Col John Himes said, "This is no longer a conflict between world powers and Saddam Hussein. This has become a personal thing."

Himes, a battalion executive officer from Dayton, Ohio, explained:

"You coop Marines up, deprive them of their freedom, liberty, families and special occasions, and how could it not become something personal? When we come to get him, he's got to understand that."

Among the 82nd Airborne, messages chalked on laser-guided antitank Hellfire missiles make that plain enough:

"Here's Looking at You, Saddam."

And, "I Am Gonna Get You Sucker."

Spec. 4 James Cox of Houston, a supply technician with the Apache helicopters that fire Hellfires, said: "We know he'll never be able to read this message. It's like a personal vendetta. It's a state of mind."

At least, Cox concluded, "He's going to know I was here."

Red Cross visits Iraqi POWs in Saudi hospital

GENEVA (AP) — The Red Cross visited Iraqi prisoners of war for the first time Thursday and will continue to pursue access to allied prisoners captured by Iraq, a Red Cross official said.

Jean de Courten, director of operations for the Persian Gulf, said the International Committee of the Red Cross visited seven Iraqi POWs at a hospital in eastern Saudi Arabia and planned to make more visits to check on conditions.

He told reporters that earlier this week the neutral all-Swiss agency privately interviewed 61 Iraqi civilian internees and two POWs held in Britain.

The Red Cross in London reported the Iraqi men were being treated in accordance with Geneva conventions on international humanitarian law.

De Courten said the Geneva-based committee had also asked several countries about the measures they have taken to "restrict the freedom" of Iraqi nationals. He declined to give details.

The International Committee of the Red Cross is responsible for monitoring compliance with the Geneva conventions, which include provisions on the treatment of POWs and civilian populations in times of armed conflict. It acts as a neutral intermediary in times of war.

De Courten said the committee had received assurances from official Iraqi sources outside Iraq that the government would allow it to visit allied POWs. But he said Baghdad had not confirmed this.

Under the Geneva conventions, POWs must be treated humanely, protected against insults and public curiosity — including through television appearances — and must not be used to prevent attacks on military targets.

The committee has said it is "making representations" to Baghdad over its violations of the conventions. Iraq has paraded allied POWs on television and said they were sending them to strategic targets.

De Courten said the Red Cross knows little about the needs of the civilian population in Iraq after the week-long air bombardment by allied forces. He said communication with Red Cross members in Iraq was difficult.

The committee has sent emergency medical supplies and food to Bahrain, Iran, Jordan and Syria to prepare for a full-scale relief operation, estimated to cost $114 million, inside Iraq. Other supplies were being stored in warehouses in Cyprus and Europe.

Iraq has refused to allow the committee to visit occupied Kuwait.

Military's Code of Conduct

New rules better protection for American service personnel

By Larry Lipman
N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — Countless war movies have depicted steadfast GIs refusing to give enemy interrogators anything more than their name, rank and serial number. But in a change that military officials call more realistic, service personnel now swear to resist answering other questions "to the utmost of my ability."

Since Iraq's broadcast this week of two captured American fliers criticizing the allied attack on "the peaceful people of Iraq," the code has taken on heightened significance.

"I think what these men are doing is an affirmation that (the) policy change is correct," said Sen. John S. McCain, R-Ariz., a former Navy fighter pilot held prisoner of war in North Vietnam for 5½ years.

"Nobody believes that they're sincere in these statements. They are clearly sending a message that they've been mistreated and they do not believe a word that they're saying. Therefore, I believe that they're in full compliance with the code of conduct, and I'm proud of them."

Rep. Pete Peterson, D-Fla., a former Air Force jet pilot who spent 6½ years as a North Vietnamese POW, said the statements by the American airmen were "just survival statements."

"They have been very courageous and sent some rather subtle messages through body language and by the nature of their tone that they are defying their captors to their face."

THE ORIGINAL Code of Conduct was drafted after the Korean War but was interpreted slightly differently by the various military branches during the Vietnam War. Returning POWs, including Peterson, recommended changes based on their experiences.

"We were in the business of surviving," he said. "You can't survive if you just give your name, rank, service number and date of birth. You are going to have to give something in order to get out of the torture session and have time to recover — time to get something to eat, time to get something to drink."

POWs in Vietnam established their own code, Peterson said, which required each captive to resist answering questions "to the point of permanent physical injury or just short of death." Each person decided where that point was for himself.

"Each time you went to a quiz — which is what we called an interrogation — you resisted to that point," Peterson said. A captive couldn't resist just one time, "he resisted each time he walked into the interrogation room."

The code was changed through an executive order signed by President Jimmy Carter in 1977.

"The feeling was to make it more reasonable," said Lt. Dane LaJoye, a Navy spokesman. "You can only take so much. Instead of saying 'no way, shape or form,' you take it as long as you can take it. They don't expect you to be a superman, or superwoman, or superhuman."

THE CHANGE was made in the six-part Code of Conduct sworn to by each member of the U.S. armed forces. Previously, the code, based on the Geneva Convention, said that captured troops were "bound to give only name, rank, service number and date of birth."

The code also said that POWs should "evade answering further questions" and "make no oral or written statements disloyal to my country and its allies or harmful to their cause."

The new code struck the word "bound" and inserted "required." It also struck "only" and added the phrase "to the utmost of my ability."

The change was designed to protect not only the captured servicemen, but also their fellow troops. POWs who attempted to maintain strict adherence to the code sometimes broke down mentally as well as physically, McCain said.

"They then had great difficulty in resisting further exploitation. They were reduced to such an abject mental state they would respond to almost whatever (was asked) almost in a Pavlovian fashion," he said.

"We found in the Vietnam experience that when you came close to that point that it was better to give false information, to obfuscate, to delay, to lie and that way deprive the enemy of the ability to exploit."

McCAIN RECALLED a time when "after some severe beatings," he was ordered to draw a picture of an aircraft carrier for his Vietnamese captors.

"And I did. I had the swimming pool back on the end of the flight deck and the saunas and the Jacuzzi and all that stuff and gave it to them. It took several hours to make this drawing of an aircraft carrier, and by that time, I'd regained some of my strength and was able to go back at them again."

Peterson said POWs in North Vietnam learned creative ways to give their captives misinformation — such as giving the wrong range for various missile systems. Such misinformation could actually help the troops, he said.

Since World War II, the military has put all flyers through an intensive school known as SERE for survival, evasion, resistance and escape. A water survival course is given at Homestead Air Force Base in Florida; an Arctic survival course is given at Eielson Air Force Base in Alaska and a course mirroring the torture of a POW camp is given at the U.S. Air Force Survival School at Fairchild Air Force Base outside Spokane, Wash.

Defense Department spokesmen declined to give details about the survival schools or to describe what types of misinformation captured troops are taught to give. But Peterson said he was confident that the lessons learned by the former Vietnamese POWs have not been forgotten.

"The guys running the schools now are fellows of mine that have experienced this, and certainly their experiences are being passed on to the classes that are going through now," he said.

OPERATION DESERT STORM

Allied Onslaught Viewed From an Iraqi Tank

An Iraqi tank commander on the battlefield can expect to be threatened by a storm of deadly high-technology weapons developed especially to destroy Soviet-built tanks like his. They range from modern armor-piercing shells fired by allied tanks to anti-tank guided missiles launched from helicopters, jets, and infantry vehicles. Here is how it all might look on the receiving end:

Marines race across the desert in practice drills

By Chris Hedges
N.Y. Times News Service

IN SAUDI ARABIA — Blunt-nosed armored personnel carriers, surrounded by squat jeeps equipped with anti-tank missiles and .50-caliber machine guns, accelerated down a rise and headed across the desert valley.

Over an arid tract of two square miles, some 150 vehicles raced forward, sending up clouds of dust, pitching and rolling like unwieldy ships on an open sea and filling the air with the noise of strained engines and treads.

A few haughty camels, oblivious to the might of man, walked toward the oncoming fleet as if on a Sunday stroll.

The Marine Corps colonel in charge of the maneuver, in deference to the placidity of the beasts, broke his formation to go around them.

All across the desert of northwestern Saudi Arabia hundreds of tanks, armored personnel carriers, and jeeps with heavy weapons mounted on the roof are making mock assaults on enemy positions and breaching simulated minefields and trenches in preparation for a ground war against the Iraqis.

THE CAMELS, who still seem to believe that they own the desert, may be in for a surprise.

"Power sweep left!" the Marine commander, who asked that he and his unit not be identified, yelled through the radio. "Power sweep left!"

The great hulking machines making up Company D spun left and took off in an arc to come around the rear of the day's objective, Goat Hill.

Company A trained its weapons on the site and Company B prepared to make the assault.

"Bravo, this is 3," a voice crackled over the radio. "Are you ready to move? Over."

"We are linked with heavy machine guns," Bravo replied. "We need to let Delta pass by. Over."

AP Laserphoto

Two U.S. Marines take part in trench warfare exercises in the Saudi desert earlier this week. They are deployed along the border with Kuwait.

DUST FLEW in billowing clouds as the vehicles in Company B lurched forward, covering the faces of the Marines who sat in flak jackets, helmets, and goggles in their turrets.

The racing engines sent a high-pitched whine, like the sound of a jet engine, through the earphones on the helmets. The rocking and rolling of the vehicles banged crew members against the thick metal sides.

Drivers worked as clumsy choreographers, moving together, keeping the distances even and gauging the space ahead to arrive within range of enemy fire together.

But on Thursday, the enemy fire was imaginary. There were no casualties, no burning wrecks to litter the desert valley, no gruesome remains of Iraqi and American soldiers, and no costly mistakes.

Even the language of the exercise still has the illusion of a game.

"When I teach, I try to draw analogies to football," the colonel said, as he sat in his armored carrier on the top of the hill overlooking a simulated minefield. "All the kids know football. I use football terms and draw a relation to simple plans to show them what to do. The challenge is that you only have to control 11 people on a 100-yard field in football. Here we play over two square miles, at speeds of over 40 miles an hour, with over 50 tracked vehicles."

AND HERE they also play for keeps.

The young officers who handle these weapons are haunted now by their inadequacies. At night they meet to discuss the day's battle formations, and many are rereading the military manuals on armored tactics.

"Any foul-up I make now will cost someone their life," said 2nd Lt. James M. Bright, who commands a platoon of jeeps fitted with anti-tank missiles.

"I wonder how shaken up I will be when someone starts shooting at me for the first time," the 27-year-old Marine from Muenster, Texas, said. "I hope I will still be able to make the right decisions."

In an effort to insure that the right decisions are made, brigades like this one drill day after day, storming a variety of defensive formations until, it is hoped, it becomes second nature.

But coordinating the timing of maneuvers is an unwieldy task, which will not be made easier when these men have to act in concert with other units, all under fire for the first time.

IN THE day's effort to cross a path cleared through the simulated minefield, the armor had trouble getting in line and then bottled up on the opposite side of the breach, a tiny area that enemy gunners would be almost certain to hammer.

That night, under a half moon, the colonel gave critiques to his crews, going over again how to move into position, drawing his diagrams like a backlot football coach in the sand and demanding improvements.

But the time to make improvements may be running out.

Troops fire howitzers on Iraqi rocket battery

EDITOR'S NOTE: The following report is based on a pool dispatch by Kirk Spitzer of Gannett News Service that was subjected to security review by U.S. military authorities.

NEAR THE KUWAIT BORDER IN SAUDI ARABIA (AP) — U.S. Marines unleashed a barrage of 155mm howitzer fire on an Iraqi rocket battery in southern Kuwait Wednesday during the second night of artillery attacks on the Iraqi unit.

The Marines withdrew before the Iraqis could return fire, and there were no American casualties in the attack, Capt. Bruce Kowalski said.

"If we got a good grid — and I believe we did — then we rocked somebody's world pretty good," said Kowalski, commanding officer of the 1st Marine Division's Fox Battery.

Each of the howitzers fired 35 rounds of long-range, rocket-assisted artillery rounds at rocket positions more than 15 miles inside Kuwait.

U.S. restrictions on coverage of the war barred disclosure of how many howitzers were used, but typically a battery has eight such guns.

"What we did was send a message to Saddam that if he sends over mail, we'll return it marked 'Postage Due,'" said Kowalski.

The purpose of the attack was to destroy an Iraqi rocket battery that is believed responsible for the persistent shelling of Marine positions and the nearly deserted Saudi border city of Khafji.

The military gave no official estimate of damage in the Marine attack.

On Monday, the same Marine unit attacked an Iraqi artillery battery that had been sporadically shelling U.S. troops in roughly the same area.

Kowalksi said the Marines were relying on speed and stealth because Saddam Hussein's forces have almost five times as many artillery pieces in and around Kuwait as the allied forces.

"I'm glad it got started, but this is a real dangerous place," said Sgt. William Beathards, 27, an artillery mechanic from Millsboro, Del. "If they hit us, we won't make it out."

Morale high among medical reserve unit

Hearst News Service

EASTERN SAUDI ARABIA — A unit of Texas medical reservists is heading to a spot in the Saudi desert where it expects to treat allied casualties for the duration of Operation Desert Storm.

Before leaving, members of the 114th Evacuation Hospital from San Antonio talked to reporters over lunch at Camp Jack, the temporary quarters at a Saudi Arabian air base where they have slept since arriving in the kingdom.

Morale was high among the reservists, who will treat combat injuries among ground troops while providing general care in the meantime. Members milled around in brown T-shirts, the straps of green gas masks dangling across their chests.

"We are all very prepared," said Col. Harold Fenster. "We're all psyched up to do the job. We're here to help the wounded."

Medics, doubling as cooks, flipped hamburgers and passed out buns. Troops listened to rap music and ate while lounging under the warm sun.

The medical reservists, though here to heal the injured, sported green combat helmets, personalized in black marker with names such as "Camarillo" and "Aguilar — El Tejano." One woman painted a peace sign on her helmet.

Spc. Scott Caballero, a medical technician called into service from his job in the operating room of San Antonio's Methodist Hospital, said his work at home has prepared him for what he will see at war, although on a larger scale.

"Gunshot wounds, major trauma, constricting major arteries and natural amputations," said Caballero, reeling off a litany of woes that have passed through his hospital. "They're all applicable."

The medical reservists have been on the ground only a short while, but some members of the 114th say they already have been made welcome by their Saudi hosts.

This report is based on material filed by CBS News.

Air Force pilot impressed by U.S.' preparedness

FORT WORTH (AP) — Air Force Lt. Col. Gary Wilson was in Fort Worth on Wednesday, but his mind was on Saudi Arabia.

Wilson, 42, piloted an F-15 fighter in the first wave of air assaults against Iraq last week. He was called home on emergency leave after the death of his father, J.E. Wilson, 83.

"Whenever you get to see America, that's wonderful, even under the worst personal circumstances," Wilson said. "I just wish that we could have wrapped up and everybody could have come home with me."

He said he doesn't know when or if he will return to action in the Persian Gulf.

Wilson said he flew night missions over enemy territory to provide escort to allied bombers.

"The main thing I saw was how well-orchestrated the whole thing was," he said. "We've been prepared all the time to take care of this kind of situation. It's not something you look forward to. It's something that you want to avoid at all costs, but if it happens, you want to be able to take care of it."

He said there was a sense of relief after the first attacks on Iraq and Kuwait.

"You're pretty pumped up," Wilson said. "There is a sense of relief that everybody was all right, that everything went as well as anticipated."

Still, there are "deep emotions" for American pilots taken prisoner by Iraq.

"These are friends," he said. "I feel very sympathetic toward their families, and obviously my main concern is to get this over with and get them back with us as quickly as possible."

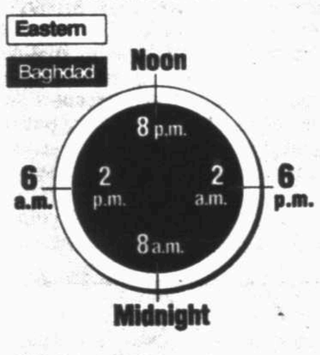

Wilson said American troops in the Middle East have been overwhelmed by support from America.

"I think the American people realize that they're really getting their money's worth," he told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram. "It's not just a job; there's a great sense of pride that we're called on to defend our country. But because of the training, there's a great deal of confidence that we can do that.

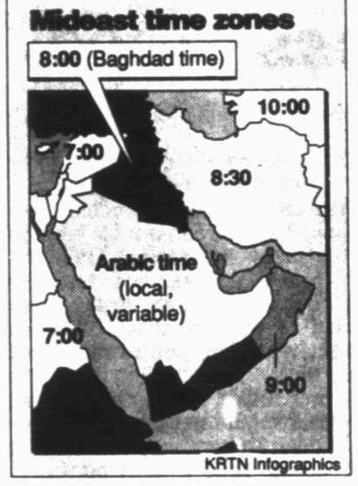

"It's a team effort for a change. It's not just one fighter wing or one branch of the service. It's not just the military, it's not the politicians; everyone has a part. America is a great place."

War causes cancellation of Senate program

Hearst News Service

WASHINGTON — Cancellation of the 1991 United States Senate Youth Program was announced Thursday by Randolph A. Hearst, president of the William Randolph Hearst Foundation, on behalf of the trustees.

The decision to cancel the program, established 29 years ago and funded by the foundation, was made with the approval of this year's program co-chairmen, Sens. Christopher J. Dodd, D-Conn., and Thad Cochran, R-Miss.

The program, which brings two senior high school students from each state to Washington for a week's visit in February, was canceled because of general agreement by the Hearst trustees and Dodd and Cochran that with the United States involved in war in the Middle East it might be unwise to have 104 high school students in Washington at this time.

Public tours of the White House and other government and congressional buildings have also been canceled.

Under the circumstances, the trustees felt it would be improper to subject the students to the potential risks of being in the nation's capital next week. The program will be resumed next year.

Each of the Senate Youth Program students has received a college scholarship grant, which in recent years was $2,000.

The Hearst Foundation trustees agreed that the students, selected on the basis of their high grades by the state superintendents of schools for this year's program, will receive an additional $500 to bring the total grant to $2,500.

MHCC program teaching success

Yvette Hargrove attended a seminar at Midland College Saturday and learned a difficult lesson the easy way at only 15 years of age.

The lesson was on the importance of staying in school.

"It let me know," she said, "that education is the most important thing in life if you want to achieve all your goals. It helps encourage you that you have to fight for what is right."

Now, perhaps Yvette will not fall victim to the tragic trap of dropping out of school and becoming another of those dejected young people reflected in the statistics.

The youth conference, called "Step Up To Success," was sponsored by the Midland Hispanic Chamber of Commerce (MHCC). It emphasized the importance of education for minorities, which traditionally have constituted the bulk of the dropout problem.

Elvia Hernandez with MHCC noted that the chamber started the youth conference to "encourage them to stay in school and once they graduate to continue in higher education."

"Step Up To Success" is a worthwhile program that focuses attention where it's needed — at problems such as drug abuse and low self-esteem that can undercut the best efforts of society at-large to help young people break through the cycle of despair that thwarts efforts to succeed.

"It shows them there are people in the business community who care about them and want them to prosper," noted Ms. Hernandez.

Education properly is the duty of us all. As that great educator Robert Maynard Hutchins noted, "The object of education is to prepare the young to educate themselves throughout their lives."

"Step Up To Success" is the best example of that philosophy in practice.

CIA profiles Saddam as abused child

WASHINGTON — When U.S. bomber and fighter planes crossed the border into Iraq on Jan. 17, the United States declared war on an abused child.

Saddam Hussein's psyche was formed in childhood. The unique circumstances of his upbringing presaged that he was unlikely to surrender to anything less than a bullet in the head. At least that is what the latest secret Central Intelligence Agency psychological profiles say about Saddam.

Anderson

The CIA profile and reports on the Iraqi leaders around Saddam predicted that the only way he would leave the scene was the same way he got there — by violence.

One source who read the top-secret file on Saddam said that he was "moved" by it, in spite of what he knew about the horrors Saddam had unleashed on his own people and then on the world.

The source said the CIA psychological profile "actually is rather sympathetic to him, portraying him as a disadvantaged orphan child, raised by his mother's brother and becoming an assassin at an early age."

The CIA reached its conclusions by gathering intelligence on Saddam's childhood and then having it analyzed by CIA psychiatrists. Our source says that the report explains, "Saddam's psyche was shaped by his rejection by his natural father and mother. But the report admits that he is a triggerman who is very ruthless, willing to kill anyone and only likely to disappear from the scene if he is killed."

This source and others filled in the details of the CIA profile on Saddam.

He was born in 1935 in the village of Takrit north of Baghdad. Most of his closest aides, those who joined him in his butcheries, were Takritis too.

His mother, Subha, was a tyrant in her own right. She had three sons by a prior marriage before Saddam was born. Saddam's father, a farmer, left before Saddam was born. Saddam later put out the false story that his father had died.

Subha went looking for another husband and found Ibrahim Hassan, who was already married. He could have added Subha to his family as a second wife, but she wouldn't share him, so she forced him to divorce his first wife.

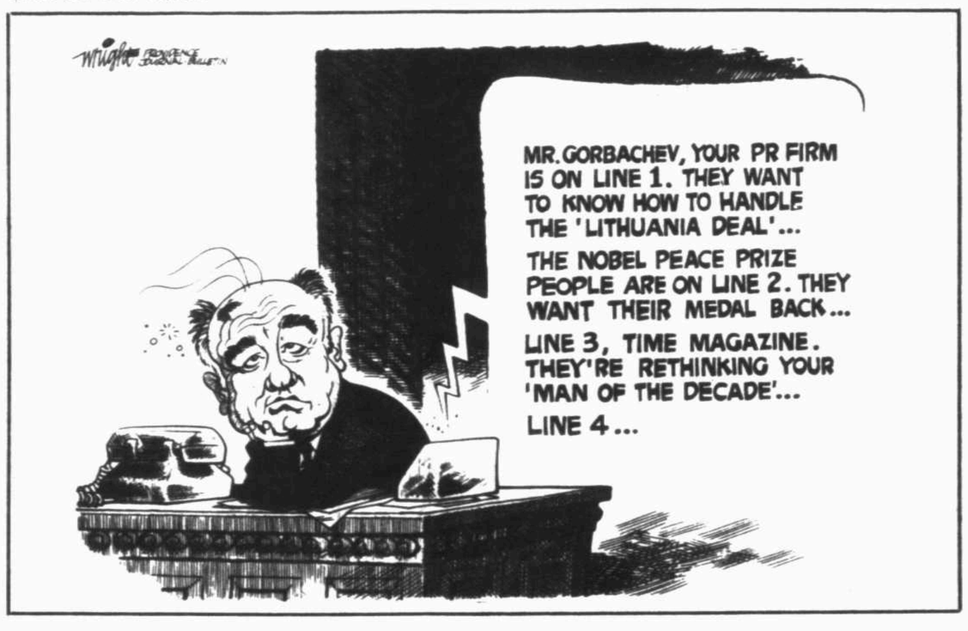

Hassan, according to the CIA profile, was an abusive stepfather. He regularly beat Saddam and, like Charles Dickens' "Fagin," made the boy steal for the family, and possibly ordered Saddam to commit his first murder. The village knew Saddam's stepfather as "Hassan the liar."

Neighbors and early childhood friends of Saddam's reported that Hassan would sometimes beat Saddam to wake him up, often shouting epithets such as, "You son of a dog, I don't want you!" Saddam would steal sheep and chickens for Hassan, who would sell them.

At a young age, Saddam was put in a detention center for an unspecified period of time. At 11, he ran away from home and moved in with an uncle, Khairalla Tulfah, his mother's brother, who lived in a nearby village. According to a semi-official biography of Saddam, the uncle and other relatives "gave him a pistol and sent him off in a car to Takrit" in his late teens to take care of himself.

Saddam found a political outlet for his dark side — the violent Baath Party. At the age of 24, he tried to assassinate Abdel Karim Kassem, the despotic ruler of Iraq. Kassem survived that attempt, but was assassinated by someone else four years later in 1963. In 1979, Saddam became supreme ruler of Iraq, a position from which he has taken out his aggressions on his own people and neighboring Arab nations.

The upbringing of Saddam should give child psychologists grist for the mill for years to come.

MINI-EDITORIAL — "Oligopoly" is an ominous word making the rounds of the Federal Aviation Administration these days. An oligopoly is the term used to describe the control of an entire industry by a few large companies. With the economic collapse of some airlines and the merger of others, Americans could well find themselves flying the monopolistic skies within just two years. And fewer is rarely better in the transportation business.

Dead tongue back in puzzling move

The West is going through some, forgive me, heavy stuff, here in the 20th century's twilight years. The West's great universities have become psychiatric couches. Doctor, oh, doctor, can you help? We can't stand our forefathers, who robbed and oppressed weaker cultures. Patriarchalist laws and moral codes, smokestacks, deforestations, voyages of discovery (Columbus-bashing is the new gig) — what a mess Western culture has made!

Murchison

A new term of opprobrium has entered the lexicon: "DWMs." Dead white males. Like Bach and Shakespeare. University students increasingly are taught to ignore or, if that's not feasible, to despise the breed. Western literature and civilization courses are being turned inside out with a view to downplaying the West and exalting the thought and folkways of Asia and Africa. Ted Turner, a guru of Right-think, has banned the word "foreign" on his cable network's broadcasts, yes, and in private conversation among employees.

Thus I state in some befuddlement at the New York Times headline: "Latin Redux: A Dead Language Finds New Life." Latin? New life? Enrollment in Latin Classes up sharply? Latin teachers tracked down like 18-point bucks by school districts unable to match pedagogical supply with student demand? Thank you, Lord.

There are hard-headed reasons for the revival. Latin illuminates; it broadens. The, I guess we'd say, relevance of Latin, a language deader than Elvis, is the structure. By studying Latin, we find out what makes English tick — or, in these fallen times, not tick.

It is more than a matter of vocabulary — "aqua" yields "aquatic," "magna" "magnify" and so on. It is, oh, so much more than recognizing, when we see them, ante bellum and e pluribus unum. Latin is structured, ordered, symmetrical, every word in its place and a place for every word. As we read Latin, we come to fathom, and even to value, structure, order, symmetry.

Such concepts as these are unfashionable because they bind and restrain. In these twilight times, we want nothing bound, nothing restrained. We want it, you know, loose.

Appreciation of Latin goes hand in hand, the Times tells us, with appreciation of Roman culture. This may be the most curious aspect of the Latin revival. By modern standards, the Romans were the pits. "Patriarchal" comes from "pater," father. Daddy ran the show in ancient Rome. "Senate" is from "senex," elderly. Rome deferred to the wisdom of age — and of the ages.

There was a generous, public-spirited sternness in Roman culture, hard to appreciate in a modern culture that puts appetite and self-gratification on adjacent pedestals. The prized Roman virtues were virtus (strength), gravitas (moral seriousness), and pietas (piety). Man! What did these birds do on Saturday night for fun?

The Roman concept of duty and responsibility was likewise lofty. Cincinnatus, elected director, left the furrow he had been plowing, defeated the invading enemy, handed back the authority he had wielded, and returned to his furrows. "Then up spake brave Horatius (Lord Macaulay says), the captain of the gate./To every man upon this earth death cometh soon or late./And what death could be better than facing fearful odds./For the ashes of his fathers and the temple of his gods?"

"Family values," as we might call them today, resonated in Rome. The matron Cornelia, besought by nosy friends to bring out her jewels, instead brought forth her children. "These are my jewels," quoth she. Cornelia, you poor, sweet dope — how're you going to make president of IBM that way?

Then, mirabile dictu, we look around, and there aren't enough Latin teachers in America to satisfy the demand for instruction in a dead tongue and culture we thought nobody'd ever want to bother with again! I'm jiggered if I know what — if anything — it all means, but it couldn't be bad, could it?

CHARLEY REESE

Bankers must be more prudent, less greedy

There's an old joke about bankers. A banker is a man who will lend you an umbrella when the sun is shining but when it starts to rain, wants it back.

Well, as it starts to rain on the banks, you can be sure they will be looking for ways to dump their losses on the backs of the taxpayers. They never share the profits on a loan, but if the loan goes bad, they want the taxpayers to pick up the loss.

Reese

One laughable excuse being peddled by the bank lobby these days is that banks are in trouble because of foreign competition. This big fat fib is aimed at greasing the way for new legislation that will give the big banks the green light to sell everything from insurance to stocks.

Look at every bank that is in trouble. Is it in trouble because some foreign bank sneaked into town and stole its customers? No, it's in trouble because it made too many bad loans, usually on real estate. Foreign competition has nothing to do with the bad judgment of loan officers.

The trouble with commercial banks is greed. Real estate lending is really a specialized business because real estate investments are in fact long-term investments. Over that long term the value of the project may go up or go down or remain static. But commercial banks wanted to muscle in on the real estate business and pumped out the loans. Now, when the value of the projects plummet, the banks get in trouble.

It's true that God doesn't make any more real estate except for an occasional volcanic eruption, river deltas, and changing shorelines. Real estate promoters love to point that out. What they fail to point out, however, is that God doesn't guarantee real estate prices or return on investments either.

The same real estate being sold today has been sold for centuries. Sometimes it was worth this and sometimes it was worth that. The land is permanent. The market demand for it is not. Real estate, as a commodity, is worth what the owner is willing to sell it for and what a buyer, with the money or credit, is willing to pay. This varies. It is, in fact, a floating value so to speak because it is never permanent.

If there are no willing buyers at all, the market value is zero. If there are willing buyers but they are all broke or can't get credit, the market value is zero. If the currency in use is inflated, the price will be this; if the currency in use is deflated, the price will be that. It's entirely possible that what you can sell for at some point in time will be less that what you paid or even less than what you owe on it. This happens periodically. That's why real estate investors and real estate lenders have to be prepared to be in the game for the very long haul.

Commercial banks were not intended to be in the very long-term lending business, and that is one reason they got in trouble.

The big money banks are in trouble because they made too many bad foreign loans. It's pretty hard to repossess Mexico or to foreclose on Brazil. In the distant past, the British army and navy used to practice those collection methods for their bankers but it's rather out of style these days.

Banks, like individuals, need to be prudent. Just as borrowers should not get overextended, neither should lenders who are lending money other people have a claim on.

Unfortunately, in a society of political bootlickers, families and working people who make mistakes are called deadbeats, but deadbeat bankers are called blameless victims of mysterious forces who need to be rescued by the government.

Wise and prudent banks, likewise and prudent businesses, likewise and prudent families and individuals are less likely to be in trouble in an economic slowdown. It's funny how modern Americans, or most of them, have forgotten that virtue is the heart of any success. Banks don't need new powers; they need to rediscover old virtues.

LEWIS GRIZZARD

Names are no game; they last a lifetime

From a UCLA psychology professor comes a new book titled, "The Name Game: The Decision That Lasts a Lifetime." It is published by National Press Books and will cost you $9.95 to have a copy of your very own.

Grizzard

I read about the book in my local newspaper, which costs me a quarter. These are tough times.

According to the report, Dr. Albert Mehrabian, the author, says children are often given names on a whim, instinct, family tradition or as attempted humor.

Says Dr. Mehrabian: "You owe it to your children to select a name that will help them get through life and not handicap them."

Having a child soon?

What name should you select for the addition to the family that will help the little darling get through life without a handicap such as being named "Norbert" or "Ernestine"?

In his book Dr. Mehrabian offers the following names as the ones that best say, "This person is a success."

FOR GIRLS: 1. Jacqueline 2. Katherine 3. Samantha 4. Victoria 5. Lauren

FOR BOYS: 1. James 2. Madison 3. Charles 4. Alexander 5. Kenneth

I can go along with these. There's Jacqueline(s) Bisset and Onassis. And, of course, Lauren Bacall.

Samantha Farnsworth won back-to-back Miss Collard Festival titles back home. Then there's Queen Victoria, Victoria Principal and Victoria Station.

For boys there's Jesse James, who was a successful bank and train robber before he turned his back.

There's Prince Charles, Alexander the Great (no relation to Catherine), and my cousin Kenneth, a successful hunter and fisherman who showed me how to throw a curveball when I was 8.

I've never had any children of my own to name, but if I ever do, I want to take Dr. Mehrabian's advice and be very careful.

Here are some names I would avoid if I had a son: Norbert, Gunther, Seymour, Pig Face, Clarence, Spiro, Sammy Joe Bob, Running Buffalo or Gilroy.

For girls I'd stay away from Ernestine, Willamena, Clovis, Mavis, Nanci Jo, Anna Sue, Gourd Head, Darting Squirrel or Opryландria.

You are asking, "Opryландria?"

I have a friend who is a teacher and she swears there was a little girl in her class named Opryландria.

When she asked the parents why such a name, they said it was because the child was conceived during a visit to Opryland. A sick attempt at humor, indeed.

God help the child if her parents had been visiting Little Rock.

I'm fairly satisfied with my own name, Lewis. That was my father's name, too, and he got it from his maternal grandfather.

It's no "James" or "Madison" or "Alexander," but my mother explained to me I was conceived in 1945 in a sleeping berth on a train.

So, had my own parents had the weird sense of humor of little Opryландria's parents, I could have been named "Coal Car," "Sidetrack" or "Three Hours Late."

Another one of my cousins, "Motel 6," is a story I'll get to at another time.

Two F-16 fighters crash near Wichita; 1 pilot killed

PIEDMONT, Kan. (AP) — Two F-16 fighters from McConnell Air Force Base crashed this morning about 30 miles east of Wichita, killing one of the pilots, the Air Force said.

Both pilots bailed out of their planes. Capt. Louann Woods, a base spokeswoman, said the second pilot was fine.

"He's been taken to a hospital," she said. "That's standard procedure after an accident."

The Kansas Highway Patrol had said it was told the planes collided. But Ms. Woods said she had yet to hear from Air Force investigators sent to the scene and did not know if that was the case.

"All I know is that they crashed," she said.

The planes were Kansas Air National Guard F-16 Falcons on routine training missions, Ms. Woods said. The crash happened about 9:55 a.m., about four miles west of Beaumont.

The pilot who survived was assisted by a local farmer, whose identity wasn't immediately known, officials said.

The crash site is in Greenwood County, between Piedmont and Beaumont, just north of Kansas Route 96 in an area of cropland and pasture at the edge of the Flint Hills in southeast Kansas.

Dorothy Gerkin of rural Piedmont called the Greenwood County sheriff's office and said her son-in-law, Bob Bray, reported seeing one of the planes crash after flying sideways toward the ground.

"I could see the smoke from my picture window at home," Mrs. Gerkin said.

Bray's wife, Dorothea, said her husband saw one pilot eject from the plane and parachute to the ground.

The Kansas Highway Patrol dispatched two state troopers to the crash sites. Sheriff's deputies from Butler County, which adjoins Greenwood County, also were sent.

Most of the F-16s based at McConnell are used by the Kansas Air National Guard for training pilots.

Student to stand trial on poisoning charge

TROY, Mich. (AP) — A high school student who allegedly told friends she drugged her English teacher has been ordered to stand trial on a poisoning charge.

Linda Marie Conflitti, 17, could face up to five years in prison for allegedly dropping the hallucinogen LSD into teacher Robert Heffernan's coffee Dec. 7.

"(Linda) said that Mr. Heffernan was going to be tripping out or high and that something had happened (in the) third hour," another student, Heidi Klebba, 17, testified Wednesday during a preliminary examination in Troy's 52nd District Court.

Klebba said Conflitti then told her she had drugged him.

Heffernan said he started hallucinating and felt nauseated shortly after the third-hour class. He went to rest in the teachers' lounge and later became terrified when family snapshots at his desk triggered hallucinations.

"I observed my children looking deformed," Heffernan said.

Heffernan, who has not returned to school since the incident, said that when he went to a hospital for treatment, he confused the emergency room doctor for the character Spock on the TV series "Star Trek" because his ears looked distorted.

Conflitti, free on bond, is suspended from school pending the case's outcome. No trial date has been set.

Handlers want home for cranky snake

SAN GABRIEL, Calif. (AP) — Humane society workers are looking for a new home for Bonnie, a petulant python, after five years of trying to make the snake sociable.

Bonnie, a 9-foot Burmese python, was the pet of a drug dealer who escaped a raid, and police turned the snake over to the nonprofit San Gabriel Valley Humane Society and Wildlife Rehabilitation Center.

Originally mistaken for a female, Bonnie butts employees with his head and pokes his tongue out at visitors.

"He hisses and snaps his jaw at you. You can't take him around small children," said Executive Director Joan Coleman. Kennel master John Esparza said Bonnie can't bite, but when he strikes with his head, he can bruise.

More frequent handling probably would make Bonnie more docile, Coleman said. But after five years, they are putting the python up for sale.

"Handle a python and he'll be perfectly tractable. If you don't handle him, he becomes antisocial," Coleman said. "We'd like to find a home for him with someone who can spend more time with him."

Risk of breast cancer jumps one in nine

NEW YORK (AP) — The average American woman runs a one-in-nine risk of developing breast cancer during her lifetime, an increase over the previous estimate, the American Cancer Society said Thursday.

The increase reflects rising breast cancer rates and the fact that women are living longer, the society said.

About 175,000 American women will get breast cancer this year, and 44,500 women will die from the disease, the society said in releasing its annual projections.

"Every American woman should consider herself at risk," Dr. Clark Heath, the society's vice president for epidemiology and statistics, said in a statement.

The society had projected a 1-in-10 risk since 1987, based on data from the early 1980s. The new estimate is based on federal figures for 1987, the latest available, said cancer society statistician Catherine Boring.

Edward Sondik, the National Cancer Institute's deputy director of the division of cancer prevention and control, noted that the change means going from a risk of 10 percent to one of 11 percent.

Boring said one reason for the increase is a rise in reported breast cancer rates, which has not been well understood.

GNP report: The first and last of bad news?

WASHINGTON (AP) — Analysts are awaiting Friday's release of what they hope will be the beginning and the end of the really bad news during this recession — a report they expect will show that America's total output of goods and services shrank precipitously during the last three months of 1990.

The Commerce Department will provide the first look at its broadest measure of economic health — the gross national product — for the October-December period.

Economists both in and out of government are expecting the GNP figure to show a sharp drop in the October-December quarter.

"This is the most definitive number that says the recession is underway," said David Wyss, an economist with DRI-McGraw Hill. The GNP totaled an inflation-adjusted $4.17 trillion in the third quarter, and Wyss said he expected that figure to contract by $35 billion in the fourth quarter.

The consensus of 50 top economists surveyed by Blue Chip Economic Indicators called for a GNP decline of 2.5 percent during the fourth quarter.

Lawyers challenge electric-chair design

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Louisiana's electric chair unnecessarily burns and mutilates the people it kills, an engineer testified Thursday in a challenge to state executions as cruel and unusual punishment.

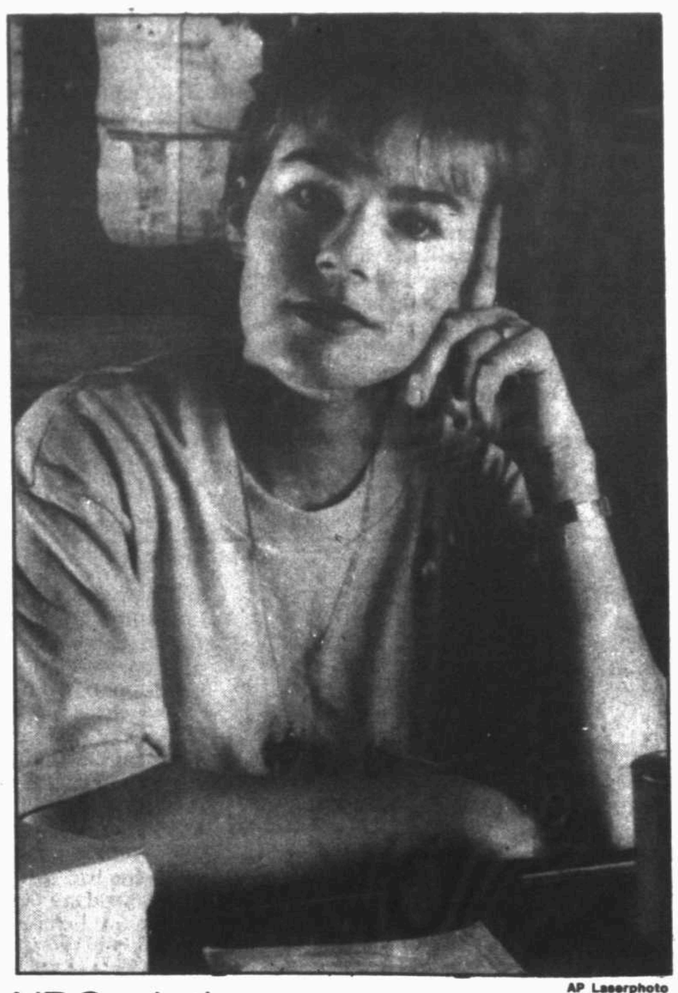

The engineer, John Webster, was the first witness in a federal court hearing on whether the chair is so badly designed that Robert Wayne Sawyer shouldn't be executed in it for torturing and killing a woman in 1979.

Webster criticized the shape of a big, curved electrode that is strapped to an inmate's head to carry a 2,000-volt blast to the brain, and the placement of a second electrode below the knee.

The biggest problem, Webster said, is that the head electrode is a long oval.

"This elongation concentrates the current density just beyond the electrode's end," he said. "This causes unnecessary heating, burning and mutilation."

In addition, Webster said a sponge used to conduct electricity from the electrode to the scalp has many large spaces in it and is wetted but wrung out rather than left thoroughly soaked. Wringing out the sponge makes it harder for electricity to flow through it, causing more heat and burns, said Webster.

U.S. AIDS deaths more than 100,000; one-third die in '89

ATLANTA (AP) — The death toll from AIDS in the United States has topped 100,000, with nearly a third dying just last year, and is escalating, federal health officials said Thursday.

Out of 161,073 AIDS cases reported in this country since June 1981, 100,777 people had died as of the end of December, the Centers for Disease Control said, citing new statistics.

CDC researchers project that, in the next three years, as many as 215,000 more Americans will die of AIDS.

"The epidemic is here," said Dr. Ruth Berkelman, chief of the CDC's AIDS Surveillance Branch. "We see from these numbers alone that AIDS has already taken an incredibly heavy toll, and there's no letup in sight."

Although AIDS has been a part of American life for nearly 10 years, the statistics now, more than ever, point to an escalating crisis.

Last year, 31,196 Americans died of AIDS. Over the past two years, 55,460 have died — more than died in the first eight years after the disease was discovered.

"It really is hard to imagine that many people having died," Berkelman said.

Federal health officials estimate that 1 million Americans are already infected with HIV, the virus that causes AIDS. "Of these, an estimated 165,000 to 215,000 will die during 1991-1993," the CDC predicted.

Worldwide, the World Health Organization estimates more than 300,000 AIDS cases so far, and about 10 million people infected with the virus.

In the United States, most AIDS victims are male — 90 percent — and young — nearly three-fourths are between 25 and 44, according to the CDC.

Gay or bisexual men and intravenous drug abusers of both sexes are at highest risk, accounting for more than 86 percent of AIDS deaths.

By 1989, AIDS was the second leading cause of death among men aged 25-44, second only to injuries.

Lithuanian leader accuses troops of kidnappings

Landsbergis

VILNIUS, U.S.S.R. (AP) — Lithuania's president on Thursday accused Soviet troops of two kidnappings, and reformers in the Russian legislature failed to muster enough votes to pass a resolution condemning military attacks in the Baltic republics.

Vytautas Landsbergis, president of separatist Lithuania, condemned the overnight abduction of two draft-age students and the military occupation of two buildings on Wednesday.

"These events can only be labelled as the continued license of the Soviet Armed Forces (to operate) despite ... promises that this would be discontinued," Landsbergis told Lithuania's parliament. He was alluding to a statement Tuesday by Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev saying there would be no more military assaults on separatist government bodies in the Baltics.

Reformers were given a setback Thursday by the continuing Soviet military activities in the Baltic republics and the failure of Russian federation lawmakers to pass a resolution condemning the incidents.

In Moscow, the Russian legislature voted 117-to-51 in favor of a resolution condemning what it called "unconstitutional acts of military force against the civilian population." But the measure failed because it did not gain a majority in the 250-member body.

The resolution asked national legislators to consider criminal proceedings against those responsible for Soviet troop attacks and barred the formation in Russia of "illegal structures" like the shadowy National Salvation Committees in the Baltic republics.

Oleg Rumantsev, leader of the reformist Social Democrat Party, said that Communist traditionalists have formed a salvation committee in Russia.

Hard-liner Col. Viktor Alksnis applauded the collapse of the resolution, which was backed by Russian Federation President Boris N. Yeltsin.

"I can say this is a positive step," said Alksnis, a leader of the hardline Soyuz political group. The group has urged Gorbachev to declare direct Kremlin rule in the Baltics.

"Boris Yeltsin will break his neck on the Baltics," said Alksnis, who is a member of the national Supreme Soviet that represents Soviet troops stationed in the Baltic republic of Latvia.

Alksnis accused Gorbachev of betraying the salvation committees that ordered military actions in Lithuania and Latvia.

"Gorbachev is trying to put a good face on the matter. He's trying to look as though he was not responsible for what's going on," Alksnis said in a telephone interview with The Associated Press.

"He knows about everything and it can't be that all these actions had been taken without him knowing about it," said Alksnis.

Gorbachev has denied advance knowledge of the Jan. 13 Soviet tank assault on the main Lithuanian broadcast facility, which claimed 14 lives, and attacks in Latvia this month that have left six people dead.

Latvian Communist Party chief Alfred Rubiks undercut the credibility of Alksnis' allegations about Gorbachev. Rubkis was quoted by the newspaper Moskovsky Komsomolets as saying he denied feeling "betrayed" by Moscow.

Two profs mark fourth anniversary as captives

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — The wives of two kidnapped American professors published letters Thursday urging their husbands to keep faith as they marked their fourth year in captivity.

The messages from the wives of Alann Steen and Jesse Turner ran in the leftist Beirut newspaper As-Safir.

Steen and Turner were kidnapped from the campus of the U.S.-affiliated Beirut University College by gunmen posing as Lebanese policemen on Jan. 24, 1987.

"We love you and we miss you. The family is fine. Please keep up your strength and faith," said the message from Virginia Rose, Steen's wife. "We are working to see you soon. I'm always with you."

Turner's Lebanese wife, Badr, wrote: "We always pray for your return. Joanna loves you and knows you by picture. She's almost 3½ half years old. The family is all right and send you their love. Keep up your hope. We love you and are trying to help you."

Joanna, Turner's daughter, was born a few months after her father's abduction.

Steen, 51, of Boston, was journalism professor at Beirut University College and Turner, 43, was professor of mathematics and computer science. Turner's mother lives in Boise, Idaho.

Steen and Turner are among six Americans, four Britons, two West Germans and one Italian missing in Lebanon.

Most of them are believed held by pro-Iranian Shiite Muslim extremists.

The longest-held hostage is Terry Anderson, 43, of Lorain, Ohio, chief Middle East correspondent for The Associated Press who was kidnapped March 16, 1985.

A group calling itself Islamic Jihad for the Liberation of Palestine has claimed the abduction of Steen and Turner along with Beirut University College professors Robert Polhill and Mithileshwar Singh.

Singh, an Indian and a resident of the United States, was freed Oct. 3, 1988. Polhill, 56, a New Yorker, was among five Western hostages released in Lebanon in 1990.

China tries protest leader, closes doors

BEIJING (AP) — A Chinese people's court on Wednesday put on trial Wang Dan, the most-wanted student leader of the 1989 pro-democracy movement that was crushed by Communist authorities.

Wang is at least the 25th activist to be tried or sentenced this month as the government seeks to wrap up such cases while the world is preoccupied with war in the Persian Gulf. Wang, 23, has been jailed 19 months.

His name topped a police list of the 21 most-wanted student leaders after the democracy movement was put down in an army assault across Beijing on June 4, 1989. Hundreds of people were killed.

Wang was arrested the next month while meeting with a Taiwanese reporter to ask for help in fleeing China.

A small notice announcing Wang's trial was posted outside the Beijing Intermediate People's Court. It said he was charged with "counter-revolutionary propaganda and incitement," the charge most freqently used against political prisoners.

Court officials refused to say if Wang's family was allowed to attend the trial, which was closed to the public. Six Hong Kong university students who arrived Monday in Beijing in hopes of observing political trials visited a court office but were turned away.

Adoption of U.S. Patriot patrol is now an option

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

United States military personnel dispatched to Israel to man Patriot missiles have been adopted by Israeli families, Bridges for Peace representative Judy Stone of Midland said on Thursday.

"Oh, I just think it's wonderful," she said. "The Israelis are really warm. I think they are the closest now that they have ever been" to Americans.

News of the adoption program came Thursday to Mrs. Stone from Clarence H. Wagner Jr., Bridges for Peace's international director in Jerusalem.

Bridges for Peace is a Christian organization headquartered in Jerusalem and conceived to build "bridges of understanding between Christians and Jews and to encourage greater concern for the land of Israel," Mrs. Stone said.

The Patriot missiles are deployed to shoot down the Russian-made ballistic Scud missiles which Saddam Hussein's Iraqi military forces are aiming at civilian targets in Israel and in Saudi Arabia in the Persian Gulf war.

MCHD board canvasses rollback vote

■ Hospital board members agree to put issue of indigent-care costs on the agenda — permanently.

'What we owe the community is better information on what we're doing.'

— Ray Branson, MMH president

By Erin Blair
Staff Writer

Midland County Hospital District directors certified the defeat of the tax rollback in Saturday's election during a short meeting Thursday.

Directors glanced over their precincts' tallies before unanimously approving Election Administrator Bettye Calvert's totals of 3,992 votes for the rollback and 5,135 against it.

Dr. Stephen Wiesenfeld, an MCHD director, said he interpreted the election's results as a mandate to continue controlling the cost of indigent health care.

He suggested creating a permanent board meeting agenda item concerning indigent care costs so that suggestions brought up during meetings could be implemented and "we'd know these things were being done."

"We could use it as a way of focusing attention each (meeting) on cost-containment measures," Wiesenfeld said. "We owe it to the taxpayers to do the utmost that we can."

The board agreed to his proposal. Bruner reminded the directors that Midland Memorial Hospital administrators planned to present a report following up on previous recommendations concerning indigent care costs at the Jan. 30 regular board meeting.

Memorial Hospital and Medical Center President Ray Branson said the rollback process was an educational experience for him.

"What we owe the community is better information on what we're doing," he said. "We need to include more details on what we are doing, have done and plan to do."

In that spirit, Branson told the board that the hospital, through its membership in the Texas Hospital Association, is participating in a lawsuit against the National Heritage Insurance Co. and the Department of Human Services.

Filed Wednesday in a Travis County state district court, the litigation addresses inadequate reimbursements to hospitals for health

Man charged in assault of officer pleads ignorance

By David Morris
Staff Writer

A Midland man accused of assaulting a police officer testified Thursday that he didn't know his alleged victim was a lawman.

Joe Nicolas Argumaniz, 28, is charged with aggravated assault on a peace officer in connection with a 1990 incident in which Midland Police Officer Ken Boone suffered a shoulder injury.

Testimony in Argumaniz' trial began Thursday in 238th District Court before Judge John Hyde. Jurors are expected to return a decision in the case sometime today.

Boone, a 5-year Midland Police Department veteran, told jurors he hurt his shoulder during a "scuffle" with Argumaniz on Feb. 15, 1990. He said the injury caused him to miss three weeks of work and has prevented him from keeping up with police department fitness requirements.

The scuffle between the two men broke out after Boone entered Argumaniz's apartment at 2438 Whitmire Blvd. in response to a disturbance call shortly before 2 a.m. Feb. 15, witnesses testified.

Boone, 35, said he grabbed Argumaniz and attempted to handcuff him

Panel OKs 'freeze' bill

AUSTIN (AP) — A bill that would freeze some state spending and place the governor, lieutenant governor and House speaker in command of the budget breezed through a Senate committee Thursday.

"It's a tough proposal," said Sen. John Montford, D-Lubbock, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee. "We simply have got to get meaningful controls on the spending side."

Montford's bill would freeze spending and hiring beginning Feb. 1, and launch an intense round of audits and reviews to streamline state government in order to make up a $296 million budget deficit.

In addition to that shortfall, lawmakers face a $4.6 billion deficit to continue the current level of state services for the next two fiscal years.

The Finance Committee adopted Montford's plan 13-0 before a roomful of lobbyists and state agency representatives, none of whom volunteered to testify on the bill. The full Senate may take up the measure Monday.

The bill will meet tough opposition in the House, Montford said, but Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock, presiding officer of the Senate, said he believes the House will adopt it.

"I have no reason to believe they would not. I've talked with the speaker and he has said, 'Send it over,'" Bullock said.

Austin author Ann Fears Crawford discusses the role of women in history with Jane Phares Thursday night at the Nita Stewart Haley Memorial Library.

Local educator wants to write women back into history books

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

"Napoleon Bonaparte once said: 'History is the myth agreed upon.' I say: 'History is the myth agreed upon by men.' It's time to change that," said Lucinda Windsor.

Ms. Windsor, reading coordinator for Midland Independent School District, has joined the national movement to "write women back into history."

To kick off her "multi-cultural" crusade — launched with fellow coordinator Patty Smith — Ms. Windsor brought Ann Fears Crawford of Austin to Midland Thursday evening.

The Austinite, an author of Texas history and cohort of Gov. Ann Richards, enthralled an audience of educators at the Nita Stewart Haley Memorial Library with her knowledge of women on the frontier.

"Women have always been a part of public life and politics," Ms. Crawford said. "We've all heard of Molly Pitcher in the Revolutionary War, and women spies during the Civil War, but what about the hundreds of women who fought in those wars?"

Ms. Crawford said the image of frontier women as "long-suffering, submissive, pious beings, victims or drudges" is a myth.

"Women toughed it out," she said. "There were a couple of instances where the mules gave out and the men hitched up the women," she joked.

The author said that it was common knowledge that early Texas "was marvelous for men and mules, but hell on horses and women."

Although her talk was peppered with humor and crusty anecdotes, Ms. Crawford discoursed on a serious subject — the lack of female role models or heroines in history books.

"When women are excluded from history, then only half of history is told," said Ms. Windsor.

She said she and Ms. Smith, Midland Independent School District social studies coordinator, attended a seminar in San Antonio which enlightened them about the need to "reclaim the past and rewrite the future" to include women.

The seminar was offered by the National Women's History Project, a nonprofit organization headquartered in Windsor, Calif.

"We were made aware of the broad scope of ethnic groups and women missing from textbooks," Ms. Smith said. "For years we have just accepted what we learned in school and assumed it was the whole story."

Ms. Windsor said women and minorities have been excluded from curriculum in the past. "Children from all cultures and female children all need to have role models." she said. "Although many women played vital roles in their communities and were well-known in their day, they were written out of history."

"There is a whole unfolding story of women going from second-class or non-citizens to become first class citizens," Ms. Windsor said.

Ms. Crawford said, "Women are the carriers of culture. An early Texas town may have had a saloon, sheriff's office and jail. When women came to town a church and school were soon to follow."

The MISD coordinators said that infusing women into language arts and social studies curriculum would not be a difficult task.

"However, we would like to integrate multi-cultures across the curriculum as much as we can," Ms. Windsor said.

"We have all heard of women's struggle for suffrage," Ms. Windsor added, "but what about the first female doctor who was barred from practicing in hospitals simply because she was a woman?

BOARD: MMH files suit over Medicaid

care to the poor and administrative problems associated with the state's Medicaid program.

It seeks $200 million in unpaid Medicaid, which dates back to 1986 when state reimbursements were cut 10 percent. It also seeks a reversal of that 10 percent budget reduction.

In addition, the lawsuit challenges overall reimbursement rates for hospitals and lengthy delays in obtaining administrative relief on denials.

For the first 10 months of 1990, Texas hospitals lost an average of $840 for each Medicaid patient treated, according to information from the THA.

"You see how desperate we've become, resorting to lawsuits to obtain funding for poor people," Branson said.

"Things are going to get worse before it gets better. Payments must be corrected to address indigent care issues."

Branson said the state-level Medicaid crisis has an effect on the tax burden shouldered locally: if Medicaid is adjusted to cover more poor people, it will remove some individuals from MCHD's indigent rolls.

Jim Kendrick, the hospital's chief financial officer, said National Heritage Insurance Co., DHS' insurance carrier, has already agreed to reimburse Texas hospitals, including MHMC, $8 million in the next month for newborn care.

In other action, the board:

■ Decided to adopt a public comment procedure similar to that used by the city council and Midland Independent School District, whereby citizens would sign in and indicate their interest in addressing a specific agenda item at the beginning of each meeting.

■ Heard directors Williams, Ferguson and Wiesenfeld announce their intentions to seek reelection in May precinct elections. Director David Porter's precinct 5 seat is open for candidates, as he will not run again.

■ Approved a bookkeeping measure that combines Medicare provider numbers for Midland Memorial Hospital and Clearview Hospital.

■ Appointed director Margaret Williams to a preliminary redistricting committee and appointed director Sylvester Ferguson as Hospital Day liaison in Austin Feb. 26-27.

Police seize drug cache, arrest 2

Staff Report

Two men remained in Midland jail Thursday after being arrested in Odessa in possession of 270 pounds of marijuana, Odessa police and federal magistrate's officials said.

Tomas Raymundo Hernandez, 31, and Gerardo Guevara, 31, were arrested by police and Drug Enforcement Administration agents about 11:50 a.m. Thursday after a lengthy investigation, police said.

The two were stopped while driving in the 2000 block of West 14th Street and a search revealed the marijuana, which authorites estimated to have a valued of $202,500.

Both were charged in federal court in Midland and were ordered detained without bond pending a hearing Tuesday, according to the U.S. Magistrate's office.

secretary, John Bender, said the speaker supports the concept of the bill, but "he wants to get together with his committee chairmen and get their thoughts on it."

Some critics in the House say Montford's plan would consolidate too much budget power into the hands of Texas' top three officials.

But Montford said, "The bill does not usurp the authority of the House Appropriations and Senate Finance committees."

The bill would place Gov. Ann Richards, Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock and Lewis, D-Fort Worth, in charge of overseeing the review of all state agencies, programs and services conducted by another new board called the Performance Audit Panel. That panel will be headed by State Comptroller John Sharp.

Anti-abortion group to sponsor 'verbal' tour

By Erin Blair
Staff Writer

Why would a woman who made $13,625 in one month operating abortion clinics be sponsored in an Odessa speaking engagement by West Texans for Life?

Carol Everett will give her audience a "verbal walk through an abortion clinic" Saturday.

"In an attempt to justify my own abortion, I became involved in the abortion industry, believing I was helping women exercise their right to choose a safe, legal abortion," Ms. Everett said.

"The reality is that I was involved in the murder of 35,000 babies and the maiming or death of at least 20 of those mothers."

Ms. Everett ran two abortion clinics in the Fort Worth-Dallas area from 1977 to 1983, which performed abortion procedures for women, including some from Midland and Odessa, she said.

"We met them at the plane, provided the services and took them back to the airport," she said.

The clinic was later featured in a local television expose for performing abortions on women who weren't pregnant and for using a doctor not licensed to practice medicine in Texas.

Ms. Everett now argues that "the abortion industry is not about choices, it is about money."

"Abortion is not a choice women make," Ms. Everett said. "It is a skillfully marketed product sold to a woman at a crisis time in her life."

Mark Mosley of West Texans for Life said the group is sponsoring Ms. Everett's presentation in Odessa because of its relevance.

"With the possibility of school-based clinics, which studies show lead to abortion services for minors, being instituted in the Permian Basin, this is a timely meeting," he said.

"We realize that minors are easily influenced, so we wanted ... to raise the level of education.

"We feel the truth (about abortion) hasn't been told, and who better to tell it than an insider?"

Tuesday was the 18th anniversary of the 1973 Roe v. Wade Supreme Court ruling that the abortion decision should be between a woman and her physician.

Jane Hellinghausen, director of education and community development for Planned Parenthood of West Texas, which does not perform abortions, said that abortion-related deaths of women have dropped 90 percent since the procedure was legalized. They dropped 40 percent in the first year alone.

She doubts that abortion clinics are as hot a commodity as Ms. Everett claims.

"If that was the case, why aren't more people operating clinics," Ms. Hellinghausen asked. "Out of 254 counties in Texas, only 22 have abortion services."

"A woman really has to search out abortion services here," she said. "Planned Parenthood doesn't market them and neither does anyone else.

"No one benefits from abortion as an option. Women don't rely on it as birth control, it's not an easy choice to make and it's not something anyone would care to repeat."

She accused pro-life groups of spreading propaganda but not doing much to offer tangible assistance to pregnant women.

Ms. Hellinghausen also said that neither Ector County nor Midland Independent School District had any plans to institute school-based clinics.

Ms. Everett will speak at 7 p.m. Saturday at the Holiday Inn Parkway in Odessa. There is no admission charge.

One Greenwood pupil exhibited resignation that his father was in the military in Saudi Arabia. "... what I think doesn't matter," he wrote. "But, if my dad reads this, I want him to know that I love him and I want him to WIN THAT WAR..."

Another pupil who has a parent involved in Operation Desert Storm is Jeremy Awong. Jeremy, a seventh grader at San Jacinto Junior High School, is getting moral support from his classmates who have chosen to write letters to Americans in Saudi Arabia.

Jeremy's teacher, Betty Pyle, said, "It's refreshing to see young people showing concern and compassion for one of their peers as well as individuals who are serving our country."

Other students involved in a flurry of letter writing activity are seniors at Lee High School. The LHS student council — chaired by Kathy Hale — were infected with yellow ribbon fever once they received a letter from a LHS graduate in Operation Desert Shield.

Felix Riggs, who wrote a letter to LHS students, wrote, "Letters are like gold over here ... any friend of Texas is a good friend of mine."

His letter inspired the seniors to contact Americans stationed in Saudi Arabia.

"We realized that there are a lot of people we know in Operation Desert Storm," Kathy said. "And we want to show our support for American troops in Saudi Arabia."

Kathy said that every classroom door on campus sports a yellow ribbon. "We've tied them on trees, the cannons in the patio and on each other," she said. "We painted windows and started a pen-pal tree.

"We want to extend the way we feel towards the war in a positive way by letting everyone know that we support and care for their loved ones in the Persian Gulf."

Leaders agree statewide tax may be all that's left

By James Cullen
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The state's top three lawmakers Thursday appeared to be lining up behind Port Arthur Sen. Carl Parker's plan to replace local school taxes with a statewide property tax.

Gov. Ann Richards, at a Capitol news conference, said Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock and House Speaker Gib Lewis have agreed to explore the proposal in an attempt to comply with a court order to come up with an equitable school finance system by April 1.

Under the plan, the Legislature would approve the statewide property tax by the April 1 deadline the Texas Supreme Court courts set, but the plan depends on voter approval of a constitutional amendment authorizing the tax in a May 4 general election.

The state would levy a tax rate up to $1 per $100 of assessed values. Under Parker's plan, school districts could levy an additional 25 cents per $100 as a local enrichment.

Some lawmakers complained that the Supreme Court did not specify an acceptable plan in Tuesday's order, but Richards said she saw no vagueness in the order.

"The decision that came down from the Supreme Court could not have been more specific," she said.

"It said that this state had not addressed the problem of reform of the educational finance system. It said that we could no longer tinker with the system, that there had to be a dramatic change, and if that dramatic change was not executed by the first of April of this year, then we face the very likelihood that our school system is going to be run by the courts, and I believe that they're going to do that job," she said.

Richards said she believes the Supreme Court would accept the statewide tax plan.

Richards said putting the measure to a statewide vote would fulfill the responsibilities of the governor and the Legislature.

"The question remains is whether the public is going to ... choose that system or allow the courts to devise their own system and impose it upon us and upon the school districts of the state," she said.

TRIAL: Man failed to notice patch

after Argumaniz threatened him and shoved him.

"We tripped over something, and as we fell, I fell into the corner of a wall," Boone said.

But Argumaniz, under questioning by defense attorney Paul Williams, said he didn't realize Boone and officers who arrived later were police.

"I remember saying, 'You guys ain't cops. Who are you?'" Argumaniz testified. "I was just trying to defend myself."

Under cross-examination by District Attorney Al Schorre, Argumaniz said he hadn't noticed the police department shoulder patches on Boone's jacket.

Argumaniz, a construction worker and ex-Marine, said he had been drinking heavily on the night in question. He said he'd had an argument with his wife that prompted a friend to call police.

If convicted, Argumaniz — who is eligible for probation — faces up to ten years in prison.

Child-safety program Saturday

Staff Report

The Red Cross will host its annual "I'm In Charge" child safety program Saturday at the First Baptist Church.

The four-hour program, geared to K through 6th graders, is designed to teach youngsters how to deal with emergencies.

Members of the sheriff's department, Midland Fire Department, Department of Public Safety, Southwestern Bell, the district attorney's office, TU Electric, KOSA and the Red Cross will give children hands-on experience in safety skills.

Children will learn first aid, water safety, severe weather precautions and procedures for contacting law enforcement and emergency services in age-specific groups.

Their parents and other concerned grown-ups are invited to attend an hour-long program at the beginning of each of the two kids' sessions that will teach them how to keep their children safe and prepared for emergencies.

One session runs from 8 a.m. to noon and the other from 1 p.m. to 4 p.m. The programs are free and can accommodate 500 to 600 children.

To register a child for the program, call the Red Cross at 684-6161.

WOMEN: Female role models are uncommon

(From 1B)

"Such amazing revelations add a new dimension to our perspective of those who sacrificed so that we can be anything we want to be," she said.

Ms. Crawford, who has written books on frontier women and Texas heroes and heroines, said, "Not too long ago, I was told there was no interest in a book about women. In the early '70s, I was told by a publisher that 'women don't read books.' Yet the fabric of cultural and social history is riddled with the names of women.

"It's time to let the sewing machine be right up there in history with barbed wire."

ADOPT: Soldiers showered with love

"'Each of the U.S. servicemen who came into Israel to man the Patriot missiles has been adopted by an Israeli family who has gone all out to shower them with love and gifts,'" Mrs. Stone said in quoting Wagner.

The Israeli Ministry of Tourism will be giving each of the servicemen a free tour of Israel after the war.

"The Israelis are just in love with America now more than ever, and they cannot say and do enough," reported Wagner.

Chicken feuding

Struggling chicken farmers band together, sue processing companies

EDITOR'S NOTE: Americans eat more poultry every year, and the big chicken processing companies have been reporting record earnings. But at the production end of this booming business, many family farmers who raise the birds say they're struggling to get by. Now they're banding together for bargaining clout and fighting the companies in court — and winning millions.

ANDALUSIA, Ala. (AP) — Six weeks after delivering thousands of day-old chicks to Forest Powell's poultry houses, a ConAgra truck rumbles back to pick up the flock, now grown to four-pound broilers.

The process usually is simple. The truck returns to the processing plant, pulls onto a scale, is unloaded and then weighed again. The difference determines how much Powell gets paid. It also can help decide whether he gets another flock, whether he stays in business.

Though his birds seemed as plump as ever a few years ago, Powell's flock weights were mysteriously falling — or so the records from the ConAgra scales said. He couldn't sleep for worrying about the debt he owed on his three chicken houses and equipment, more than $80,000 at the time.

Powell, consistently a top-rated grower, was told he'd get just one more batch of chicks, one six-week chance to save his livelihood. Under his contract, he'd have no appeal.

They find answer

Again and again, he and his wife, Dorothy, pored over the company weight charts, "and finally we come up with it."

What they came up with was evidence of systematic underweighing, evidence amplified in the trial one year ago of a fraud suit filed by Powell and 267 other growers for ConAgra, the nation's second-largest chicken processor.

Witnesses testified that ConAgra workers hiked the weights of "empty" trailers with such tricks as loading them with heavy steel drainage grates or standing on the scales.

A U.S. District Court jury in Dothan, Ala., awarded the growers $13.6 million, including $9 million in punitive damages. It was a case, said Judge Myron Thompson, of "the rich seeking to get richer by stealing from those who could least afford to be stolen from." ConAgra has appealed.

Companies sometimes lure farmers into making huge investments in chicken houses with ads boasting of easy money waiting to be made. But the reality of the business today is that contracts afford growers no protection against unexpected expenses ordered by the company.

Short notice

Contracts that companies offer to chicken growers generally run flock-to-flock and permit termination without stated cause, often with as little as 20 days' notice.

"What you've got," said Vreeland G. Johnson, a lawyer for the growers, "is a feudal system, almost. These people are at the total whim and mercy of the processors."

Consider:

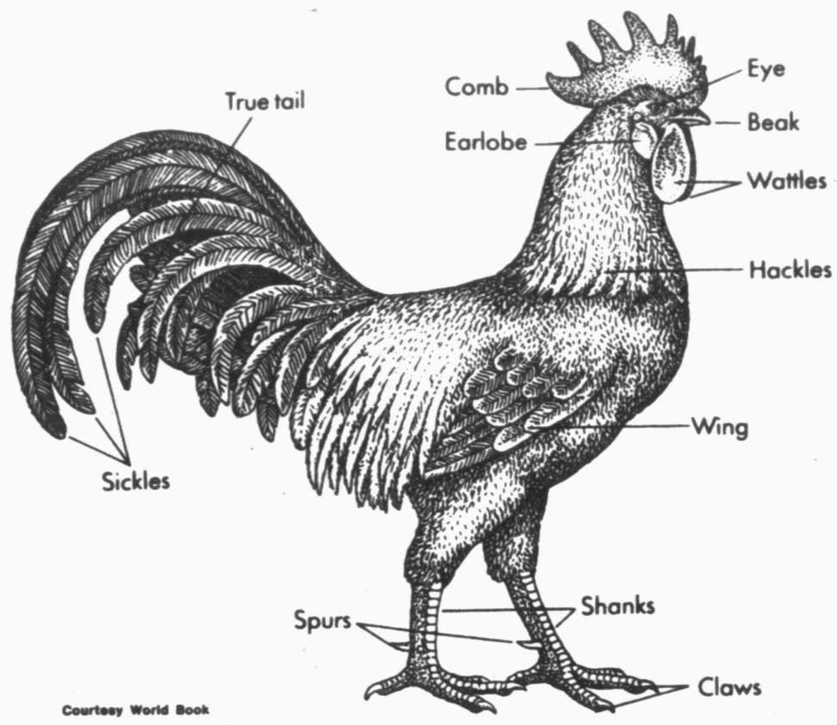

— Underweighing and other alleged inequities have prompted complaints from North Carolina to Texas, the heart of the broiler-growing belt. "Everybody has the same problems, everywhere," said Mary Clouse, who edits Poultry Grower News, a newsletter. "It's David and Goliath."

— State agriculture authorities in Florida, Texas and Minnesota have zeroed in on contract problems. "An oligopoly is developing in which a handful of mega-companies will soon control over 43 percent of the total U.S. poultry meat products market," said a January study by the Texas Department of Agriculture.

— A lawsuit by fired growers in Louisiana, which ended in a sealed cash settlement, accused ConAgra of maintaining "oppressive and one-sided" contracts. The suit said that after growers invested in chicken houses, ConAgra imposed contract terms that hadn't been previously agreed on. It also contended the company's standards for production were "ill-defined." ConAgra contended the fired growers had performed poorly.

"We have and have had for a number of years good grower relationships throughout the country," said Lynn Phares, ConAgra's vice president for public relations. "We want happy growers. The vast, vast majority do indicate satisfaction."

— In Arkansas, the leading chicken-producing state, 200 growers turned out in October to organize for better contracts. The meeting in Nashville, Ark., was a first. "Growers have been afraid to speak out for fear of being laid off," said Bill Fritts, a leader of the group.

Courtesy World Book

Arthur Gaskins, president of the Northeast Florida Broiler Growers Association, was one who spoke out and got laid off by Cargill, the Minnesota-based agribusiness conglomerate.

Gaskins, who had grown chickens for Cargill for nearly two decades, charged that he was cut off in retaliation for a suit the growers group filed alleging weight falsifications.

In April, U.S. District Judge John H. Moore II in Jacksonville, Fla., ordered Gaskins reinstated. The judge found "substantial likelihood" that the growers would succeed in their claims against Cargill, including unlawful "coercion, intimidation and discrimination against agricultural producers based on the exercise of their legal rights."

No trial date has been set in the case, attorneys said.

"We have done nothing to defraud or manipulate growers," said Greg Lauser, a spokesman for Cargill, which is appealing the injunction and denies intentional wrongdoing. Some improper weighing was done by "low-level employees" who since have been fired, he said, adding that growers were compensated, with interest.

But Gaskins maintains low-level employees are not the problem.

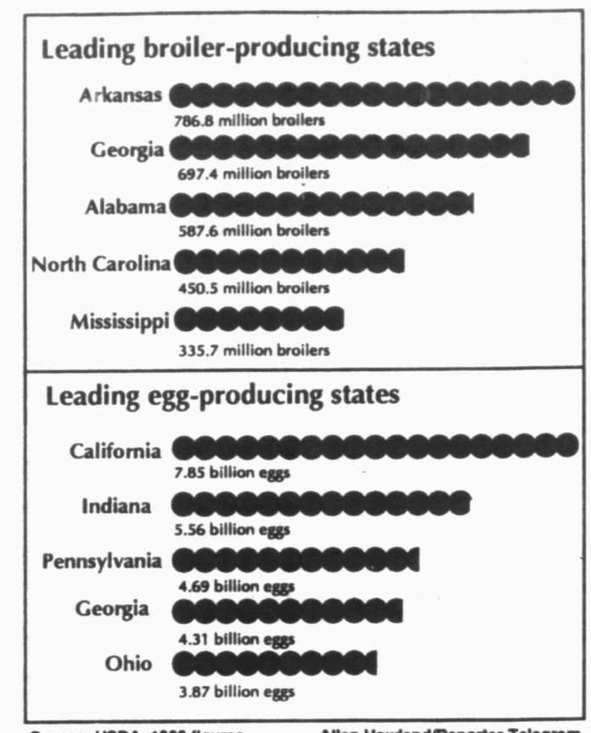

The industry denies being unfair and insists that relations between companies and all but a minority of growers are satisfactory and mutually profitable.

Grower advocates agree that the job can make money, especially for growers whose chicken house loans are paid and who operate in areas such as Maryland, where they have a choice of processors to contract with.

But most areas of the country don't have much competition among the chicken processors, so growers are left at the mercy of one firm. They say their risk comes when they sign 15-year mortgages on chicken houses that can cost $65,000 each, or make expensive company-mandated improvements with no guarantees beyond a seven-week contract.

Lengthening contract periods to match growers' mortgage periods was among reforms proposed by the Texas Agriculture Department study. The report also called for grievance procedures, bonded weighers and "flexible contracts with a set minimum operating margin of profit." It found growers' return on a 20,000-bird flock ranged from $579 to $4,835.

But money was not the biggest problem the study found. Growers "have no due process ... and they don't have any recourse and they don't have many rights," said the Texas Agriculture Department's Richard Salmon.

Statistics reveal chicks hot business

Associated Press

Every week, 115 million chickens are slaughtered to feed the U.S. appetite for cordon bleu, McNuggets and everything in between, according to the National Broiler Council, a poultry industry group.

Driven largely by a demand for lower-cholesterol, lower-fat meat, poultry consumption has grown to 73 pounds a year per person, up from 49.7 pounds a decade ago, said Bill Roenigk, vice president for the Washington-based council. Beef consumption has fallen during the same period from 76.4 pounds per person to a projected 67.4 pounds this year.

The top 10 broiler chicken producing states, in order, are Arkansas, Georgia, Alabama, North Carolina, Mississippi, Texas, Delaware, Maryland, California and Virginia.

About 25,000 farmers raise the chickens, nearly all under contracts with processing companies.

Tyson Foods is by far the largest processor, handling 75 million of the 400 million pounds processed weekly, the broiler council said. The next largest are ConAgra, 30 million pounds; Gold Kist, 25 million; Perdue, 25 million; and Pilgrim's Pride, 15 million. Cargill ranks 21st at 4.5 million pounds per week.

STATE

Treasurer: Debt crisis awaits us

AUSTIN (AP) — The state must improve its debt management or face a crisis in future years, Texas Treasurer Kay Bailey Hutchison told the Texas Chamber of Commerce on Thursday.

Ms. Hutchison said during the group's annual meeting that debt management and control will be one of her major concerns over the next four years.

"A lot of people think that Texas is a pay-as-you-go state. That is not true," she said. Ms. Hutchison said the state now is $3 billion in debt, along with another $7.2 billion in general obligation debt that has been authorized but not issued. That is up from $45 million in 1950, she said.

"We are not in a crisis right now. If we don't do something, we will be in a crisis within the next eight years," she said. "We have been basically doubling our state debt every three years. We can't continue on that kind of growth pattern."

Ms. Hutchison said Texas government needs to re-evaluate the state's needs and look at the long-term picture to cut debt growth.

"We can do that responsibly, I think, without Draconian cuts in the things that we expect," she said.

The new treasurer also said she would try to improve the state's cigarette tax collection to eliminate what she called a "black market," and advocated lifting the 95 percent capacity ceiling on the prison population. Ms. Hutchison said raising the cap to 100 percent could save the state $92 million in prison construction costs and $1 billion over the next 20 years.

Also addressing the Chamber of Commerce were Comptroller John Sharp; Land Commissioner Garry Mauro; Agriculture Commissioner Rick Perry; and Attorney General Dan Morales.

The officials painted a picture of belt-tightening, but not severe cuts, in the immediate economic future. Sharp compared the upcoming budget to rock soup: "It'll fill you up. It just doesn't taste very good."

All said they supported restructuring state government to eliminate middle management.

Mauro said his agency would consider increasing veterans benefits to help prime the economic pump, and hailed the approximately 7 percent increase in state oil revenues.

Bill would pump funds to schools

AUSTIN (AP) — School districts would not have to absorb an expected $109 million shortfall in promised state aid this school year under an emergency funding proposal by a state lawmaker.

Rep. Eddie Cavazos, D-Corpus Christi, said the state comptroller's latest revenue estimate shows a $126 million surplus in state money that could be used for school districts.

"Too often, superintendents are forced to perform miracles just to make the education system work, while operating on shoestring budgets and unpredictable state funding. We simply can't expect them to continue to operate their schools with reduced state funding," Cavazos said Thursday.

The Texas Association of School Administrators has written Gov. Ann Richards asking her support for the bill.

The shortfall occurs because state aid is partly tied to local property tax rates. Lawmakers in passing a school finance measure last summer did not put enough money in to account for local tax rate adjustments.

Cavazos said his bill is needed even though the school finance system has been declared unconstitutional by the Texas Supreme Court. School districts set their budgets and tax rates last September based on the current law, he said.

Without new state money, the shortfall would be prorated among school districts.

"This is like accepting a $30,000-a-year job, going out and buying a new car, and renting an apartment — only to find out your employer, faced with tough times, can pay you only $20,000," he said.

Video implicates two in Houston murder

GARRISON (AP) — A second man was charged Thursday with capital murder in the slaying of a constable who unwittingly videotaped his own death, and authorities continued searching for a third suspect.

Nacogdoches County Constable Darrell Lunsford, 47, was killed early Wednesday after he stopped a car on U.S. Highway 59 near Garrison, a town of about 1,000 residents in northeastern Nacogdoches County.

Two brothers, Baldemar S. Villarreal, 29, and Reynaldo Sambrano Villarreal, 24, both of Edinburg, have been charged with capital murder in the slaying and ordered held without bond. The elder Villarreal was arrested Thursday, while the younger was arrested late Wednesday.

But a warrant issued for Jose Gabriel Galvan, 22, of Edinburg, was dropped Thursday because authorities no longer were certain Galvan was in the car, said Texas Department of Public Safety spokesman David Wells said. The car stopped by the slain constable had a Maine license plate and was registered to Galvan, he said.

"The investigation is still pending," Wells said. "But they're going to drop the warrant against this individual at this time."

Nacogdoches County Sheriff Joe Evans said two Texas Rangers were questioning Galvan in Edinburg, but crews continued to search for a third suspect in the case.

"We're keeping the manhunt going right now while we find out something definite about this suspect," Evans said. He added that officials dropped the warrant for Galvan after finding him in South Texas.

Evans said the Villarreal brothers had named Galvan as being with them, but authorities were unsure if the brothers were covering for another suspect. "Besides, there are a lot of Jose Galvans in South Texas; we have to be sure we have the right one," he said.

Evans said Lunsford "is the first officer killed in Nacogdoches County in the line of duty that I can ever remember."

FAMILY MATTERS

Unruly child's behavior concerns grandmother

By Jim May, Ph.D.

DEAR FAMILY: I have spent almost the last two weeks with my daughter at her home. She had her first baby about this time two years ago. Her son was a cute baby, but I have been concerned about him right from the beginning. He was very irritable as a baby and I don't think that he ever slept very well. My time trying to help her when he first came home from the hospital was very difficult for all of us. For the first time in my life as a grandmother, I was glad to go home. That baby exhausted all of us.

May

I was hoping that he would outgrow all this and be a happier baby. That has never happened.

My daughter has called me numerous times in tears about him. I thought at first that it was just her being a first-time mother, but I really don't believe that now. (Grandson) never wanted to be held and was always restless. Everything that we tried to do with him was an effort. Something as simple as changing his diaper was a major task because he wouldn't hold still.

Now that he is 2, he is even worse. He is very aggressive and difficult to parent. The final straw occurred just before I went to visit. My daughter was just beside herself because he has been "kicked out" of his Mother's Day Out Program. That time was the only time that she had without him.

I am out of suggestions. Do you have any ideas as to what might be wrong with him? He is still a very cute child and at times seems to be fine, but when he is "wound up," no one can deal with him. FRUSTRATED

DEAR FRUSTRATED: Your grandson may need to be evaluated for Attention Deficit Hyperactivity Disorder (ADHD). According to Dr. John Taylor, some of the more common symptoms in toddlers are:

- Overly aggressive — pushes, shoves, bites. The child is not able to play cooperatively for a sustained time.
- Destructive — breaks, throws and tears things apart.
- Overactive — acts as if driven by a mainspring that is wound too tightly, resulting in non-stop movement and an inability to sit quietly for more than a few minutes.
- Incorrigible — under-responsive to parental correction and requiring constant attention, reminding and restraining.
- Reckless — accident prone.

Encourage your daughter to have him evaluated by a competent professional who is trained and familiar with ADHD. You did not mention where she lives, but most cities have such professionals, such as psychiatrists, neuro-psychiastrists and psychologists. If your grandson does have ADHD, this disorder needs to be addressed as quickly as possible. If undiagnosed and untreated, it can have a devastating effect on the entire family.

DEAR FAMILY: My husband retired in December and my life has been a living hell ever since. He wants to do everything that I do. Well, I am ashamed to say that I don't want him around all the time.

It wouldn't be so bad, but he doesn't want to do much and doesn't want me doing much either. I have already told him that I am not going to give up all my activities just because he is home now. After that argument, he sat around and didn't talk for almost three days. I felt bad and told him that I was sorry (I really wasn't).

I just don't know what to do with him. I feel that he provided a good living for me and our children all these years and that I owe him something for all that. But do I have to give up my life now that he is home all the time? All that he wants to do is watch television. To make things worse, he thinks that soap operas are just "stupid," and so I have to sneak around to watch the two soaps that I have been watching for years.

What can I do with him without hurting him feelings? I don't want to hurt him, I just want a life of my own. PRISONER.

DEAR PRISONER: Direct communication is the best path. He may not like what you have to say, I think you should tell him how you feel. Some people like to write down their concerns before having this kind of discussion.

Find a good time to sit down with him without any outside influences (no television). Tell him all the behaviors that concern you. Tell him what you expect from your relationship, and ask him what he expects from your relationship. What are your goals for the future?

Retirement can be the golden years, or it can be very bleak. Life is what we make of it. We can grow when we face one of these normal life cycle transitions. We must take the actions necessary to follow God's plan for us.

Hope targets hearts, minds of U.S. soldiers with music

By Bob Banta
N.Y. Times News Service

In Saudi Arabia, where the night skies blaze with exploding Iraqi missiles, Army Spec. Milton Hope fires back with songs of humor and love.

His targets are the hearts and minds of American soldiers in the Middle East, and so far his aim has been better than Saddam Hussein's. Hope, a graduate of San Antonio's Roosevelt High School, is a disc jockey with Armed Forces Radio, working 9 p.m.to 9 a.m.

"We've got something for every soldier over here," he said in a telephone interview from his broadcast van in Saudi Arabia. "We play country, rock, soul, fast songs, slow songs.

"A lot of military units will rib each other by dedicating weird songs to other units," he said. "A big favorite is a rock song called 'We Are the Champions' by Queen. One unit will dedicate it to another, and that unit will respond by dedicating something like Dolly Parton's '9 to 5.' It's a jocular air wave exchange."

Hope, 34, said the most poignant part of his job is playing dedications from spouses or sweethearts who mail or phone requests from the United States. Song dedications can be sent to Desert Storm Network, Operation Desert Storm, USCENTCOM/CCPA-AFRTS, APO New York, 09852.

"Their favorites are love songs and ballads," he said. "They'll dedicate Richard Marx's 'Right Here Waiting' to their husbands over here. They also want Bette Midler's 'From A Distance' and 'Wind Beneath My Wings'."

Because of heavy security, the disc jockey cannot say exactly where his studio is situated, but he broadcasts from a 7x10-foot mobile van.

"There is a little nervousness here," he said of the personnel who work at the studio-on-wheels. "Whenever any sort of alarm goes off, your heart races a little faster. I have something more to accomplish in life than to have anything happen to me over here. But we are all together in this thing."

Hope, who broadcasts with a gas mask and protective clothing stacked near his microphone, is part of the Armed Forces Network that carries television signals to TV sets at troop installations.

Because the Saudi society is rooted in strict religious and traditional standards, American situation comedies and similar shows are not aired for service personnel.

"We are very careful not to offend Saudi sensitivities," he said. "We used to carry a lot of network sports shows for the troops. But since the crisis, the main thing we've been showing is war coverage over ABC, NBC, CBS, and CNN — the same stuff you're watching in the States."

DEAR ABBY

California county has right to dog you about your pets

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I just read that the San Mateo County (Calif.) Board of Supervisors passed the nation's first law requiring the owners of dogs and cats to buy a breeding license, or get their pets sterilized.

Van Buren

The article stated that the Humane Society said it was "fed up" with putting to death more than 10,000 unwanted dogs and cats each year — and in order to coerce the voters, they published photographs of trash barrels filled with dead cats they had picked up throughout the Bay area.

The society then held a public pet execution at the press conference, injecting five cats and three dogs with poison from a bottle marked "Fatal Plus" as the camera whirred and reporters jotted notes.

Abby, now anyone in San Mateo County owning a cat or dog that has not been spayed or neutered must produce a "breeding license" or face a fine of $500!

Does this sound "humane" to you? Please state your opinion. — HORRIFIED IN REDWOOD CITY

DEAR HORRIFIED: Bow-wow and mee-ow! It's high time someone spoke for the voiceless. Although its approach was somewhat extreme, the Humane Society of San Mateo County rates applause and high marks from this animal lover.

DEAR ABBY: Yesterday, I answered the telephone and patiently listened to a gentleman with a very nice voice trying to sell me a $39.95 book of coupons from the "local merchants." He said if I purchased a book of these coupons, I would be helping a child in his fight against leukemia.

I explained that we were on a very tight budget and I couldn't afford $39.95, but could I send a smaller donation to help the child? At first there was a stony silence, then BANG went the receiver. Abby, that man had actually hung up on me!

I realize that most of these telephone solicitors are just doing their jobs, but I would think they would appreciate being told BEFORE they give their entire pitch that the party on the other end of the telephone is not interested.

Speaking for myself, as a matter of policy, I never buy anything on the telephone. I would never be rude, but I hate to take up their time when I know I'm not going to buy anything. — DENNISON, OHIO, HOUSEWIFE

DEAR HOUSEWIFE: I can't speak for all telephone solicitors, but if I were one, I would not want to waste my time giving my entire pitch to someone who, as a matter of policy, never buys anything on the telephone. A courteous, "I'm sorry, sir ..." etc., as soon as one recognizes the caller as a telephone solicitor, would be my recommendation.

DEAR ABBY: Our family is hoping that you can settle a dispute. Our teen-age and "20s" kids insist that the message on a postcard is private and should not be read by anyone other than the addressee.

I maintain that any postcard that comes to my house, no matter to whom it is addressed, is fair game for me, or anyone else, to read. What do you say, Abby? — NOSY OR NOT NOSY MOM

DEAR NOSY: Anyone who writes anything of a confidential nature on a postcard and assumes that it will be read only by the addressee knows very little about curiosity, temptation and the human animal.

Everything you'll need to know about planning a wedding can be found in Abby's booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding." To order, send a long, business-size, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Wedding Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. (Postage is included.)

Abigail Van Buren's column is distributed by Universal Press Syndicate.

Choosing ideal retirement home

By Steve Hurtado
Copley News Service

Most older Americans want to stay in their current homes as long as possible, reports a new housing study by the American Association of Retired Persons.

But this isn't always easy — or the best option.

"Home" may be an aging three-story house in a declining snowbelt neighborhood. Who's going to mow the lawn, shovel the snow, wash the windows and keep the place painted and repaired? Hiring help is an expensive and not always satisfactory option — and besides, increased neighborhood crime may be a concern.

No wonder a move to a sparkling Sun Belt community appeals to many seniors.

Those who choose to stay in their own homes may find renting out a room — perhaps to a companion/handyperson — to be an ideal solution. They may want to utilize community resources such as senior centers and area agencies on aging, and they also have the option of receiving additional income from a home equity conversion mortgage ("reverse mortgage").

Others may choose to ease into a retirement community nearby, where their needs are met and their lives simplified, yet relatives and longtime friends are still close at hand.

The ideal community provides residents with the independence of private apartment living, along with the health-care and professional services they may need as they grow older.

Monthly fees typically provide daily meals in a full-service dining room, weekly housecleaning and linen service, building maintenance, a 24-hour medical alert system and an on-premise security staff. Other amenities might include regularly scheduled local transportation, social and recreational activities, educational seminars and cultural events.

The trend is toward communities that offer varying levels of services and care, allowing residents to maintain the maximum level of independence while at the same time receiving needed services. Here's how the care levels are defined:

Independent living. Private apartment living with a limited or full-service meal plan; other services readily available if needed.

Assisted living. Residents receive limited assistance with day-to-day activities, such as dressing, grooming, bathing and/or monitoring of medication.

Personal care. A greater level of hands-on assistance, with the goal of allowing as much independence as possible.

Licensed nursing facility. Private and semiprivate rooms for residents who need long-term or short-term intermediate and/or skilled nursing care and supervision. May be open only to members of a nearby retirement community.

Dr. Morris A. Okun, director of Arizona State University's Adult Development and Aging program, believes older adults whose lifestyles include recreational activities, quality medical care and volunteer work can increase the number of active years they have to live.

CNS Graphic

Many retirement communities located in the Sun Belt offer these attributes — and seniors are migrating to them in unprecedented numbers.

How do you find the one that's right for you? Start at your local library or bookstore. Pick up a copy of "Retirement Places Rated" by David Savageau (Prentice Hall Press). This frequently updated guide ranks cities based on climate, personal safety, health care, leisure activities, part-time job outlook, money matters and housing costs.

When you've narrowed down your choices, contact your travel agent. Special tours are available to retirement areas; you'll want one that provides an introduction to the community and its lifestyle, hosted by local residents rather than housing developers.

If you like what you see on one of the tours, rent an apartment in the area for a month or more to get a better feel for the place.

Among those you might want to consider:

Southern California. Leisure World is 10 miles southwest of Disneyland in Seal Beach. This peaceful garden city of about 9,000 covers 540 acres and is one of the first planned communities devoted to retirement living. One- and two-bedroom apartments begin at $35,000; monthly costs run about $300.

Florida's west coast. Southwestern Florida is home to numerous retirement communities; Sun City Center, 25 miles south of Tampa near Ruskin, is a self-sufficient town of 12,000.

DR. PAGE

Fear of falling parallels fear of flying

By Dr. Henry F. Page

"Please don't make me walk — I might fall and break my leg"... "Mrs. Jones, get back in that chair at once — do you want to fall and hurt yourself!"

Page

Such dismal decepratory phrases can be heard anyplace where the elderly are housed or are attempting to make one last attempt at independence. Fear of falling grips both the old person and also his or her mental and physical state another notch. Stimuli so necessary for healthy aging are withdrawn from the victim's environment.

Unfortunately the fear does indeed pervade all elderly activity and rightly so, because accidents constitute the seventh leading cause of death in persons over 65, and a large proportion of these accidents are falls. Luckily modern medicine insures that broken bones, even hips, can be expertly repaired with minimal stress to the patient no matter how old.

The injured can usually return to his or her accustomed activity. For example, a pianist can recover to play the most difficult pieces — that is if she could play the piece prior to the injury! The present state of medical art is such that deprivation of activity with its attendant risks has become much more harmful to the older person than the risks of an accident if it does occur.

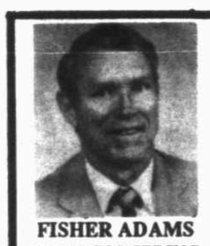

The fear of falling parallels the emotions of the fear of flying now popularized by some of the younger generation. It limits natural healthy desires to broaden one's horizons. Homosapiens should be something more than a plant sitting in a pot, bed or wheel-chair. Canes and walkers constitute a badge of honor and command respect.

The older person should live in an environment geared to the accident prone individual. That mandates the following precautions: proper footwear, canes and walkers; adequate lighting including night lights and accessible wall switches; hand rails by stairs and landings allowing a good grasp; non-slippery surfaces including non-skid rugs and the absence of sliding mats; relegation of grandchildren with their toys and pets in separate areas; and finally, avoidance of bric-a-brac in their own room.

Oldsters also should avoid sudden changes of position such as arising quickly from bed or impulsively bending to pick up a $20 bill. The family doctor must oversee all medications, many types which can cause vertigo.

Bearing these few simple facts in mind, the elder citizen, while flying by the seat of his pants, must bear the risks and hopefully be supported and understood by all. All has been proclaimed so many times, aging is not for sissies, but the rewards for courage are profound. Remember our motto at Trinity Towers — Manor Park, "One on their feet is worth ten on their seat," and so in the best theatrical jargon as you stride on the stage of life — "Break a leg!"

Henry F. Page, M.D., F.A.C.P., is health and safety consultant to Midland Presbyterian Homes.

Coaches offer different views

■ While Marv Levy is treating Sunday's Super Bowl as the game of his life, Bill Parcells has been there before.

Associated Press

TAMPA, Fla. — To Marv Levy, Sunday's Super Bowl is "the biggest game in my 40 years of coaching." To Bill Parcells, it's simply an important end to 27 weeks of meetings, practice and games.

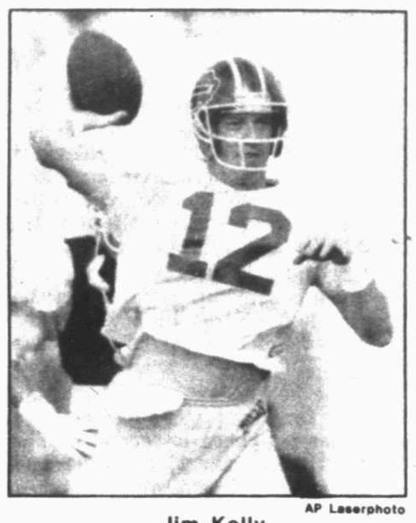

That's easy enough to understand.

None of Levy's Buffalo Bills have been this far, although Levy was an assistant on George Allen's 1972 Washington Redskins. Parcells' New York Giants have 22 players and nine coaches with at least one Super Bowl behind them.

So far, the 62-year-old Levy has made the biggest faux pas, becoming on Tuesday the first coach in 25 years of Super Bowls to miss a media session. The result: a reprimand from NFL commissioner Paul Tagliabue with the threat of a fine or other action after the game.

Levy's excuse: He was behind on the game plan and lost track of the time.

Was Super Bowl inexperience getting to him? Will it get to his team Sunday, even though the Bills are favored over the team that won this game four years ago?

AP Laserphoto

Jim Kelly

"We're putting it aside as a minor element," Levy said Thursday. "I tend to discount anything that will happen outside the 100-yard rectangle that we're playing in."

The Giants think the same way, particularly since there's only a one-week break between the conference championship games and the Super Bowl rather than the customary two weeks. Simply, that means the rookies — in this case, the Bills — would have had more time to get nervous, more time to get distracted by questions, to be concerned about tickets and hotel rooms for their families.

This year, there's the added distraction of war in the Persian Gulf, where players on both teams have friends and family members. That's not unprecedented — Super Bowls were played during the Vietnam War, and two years ago there were racial disturbances in Miami's Overtown neighborhood, within sight of the Cincinnati Bengals' hotel.

"Last night I saw a movie called 'Mississippi Burning,' " safety Solomon Wilcots noted then. "When I got back to the hotel, I looked out the window and saw Miami burning."

Then there are the personal crises, which have nothing to do with experience but can be distracting nonetheless.

Buffalo's Bruce Smith, for example, discovered Wednesday night that his father had been hospitalized the previous day in Norfolk, Va., after what Smith described as "a breathing attack." His family tried to withhold the information.

"It takes away from my concentration," the NFL's Defensive Player of the Year said. "With that and the war, it's a little hard to get into things."

Parcells, whose team beat Denver 39-20 in the 1987 Super Bowl, knows what can happen in a fishbowl game like this, with 3,000 media types poking around and tickets and hotel rooms scarce.

"It's not easy to concentrate in this environment," he said. "Your families are coming. You're trying to make sure they get their tickets and their hotel rooms. You don't always keep your mind on your job."

How much will that mean in the game?

The Giants appear more relaxed with the atmosphere than they were the first time. The Bills appear a little bored by the repetition.

"I'm getting a little tired of hearing the same questions," Kent Hull, Buffalo's center, said. "Maybe I should type out all the answers on a piece of paper and just hand them out."

One Giant who's enjoying the experience is one of the most unlikely — Mark Bavaro, the normally silent tight end. Four years ago, his basic comments were "yes" and "no," and he had to be forced to interview sessions under the threat of fine, although that didn't stop him from catching a touchdown pass during the game.

This time he's been positively garrulous.

NMJC gets 'technical' with MC

By Jimmy Patterson
Assistant Sports Editor

Technical fouls are often used by coaches to inspire their teams. If a coach gets upset enough, so the theory goes, a referee will call a 'T', which will light a fire under a team. In the end, said team is supposed to score a miraculous, come-from-behind win. All because of a technical.

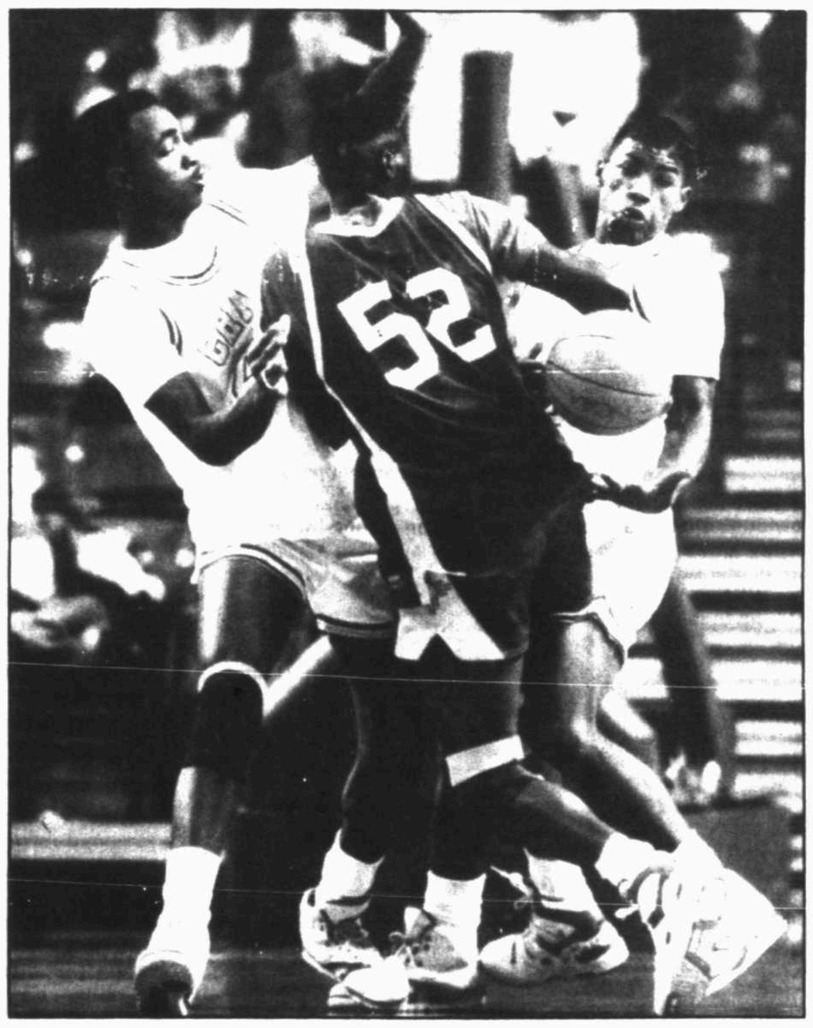

Such was not the case Thursday night at Chaparral Center.

New Mexico Junior College scored four points off two technical foul calls against Midland College as the Thunderbirds rallied for a three-point, 91-88 win against MC at Chaparral Center.

In other Western Junior College Athletic Conference action, No. 2 South Plains defeated No. 3 Howard College, 90-82; Odessa College handled New Mexico Military, 95-68, and Frank Phillips defeated Western Texas, 99-95. Clarendon was idle.

MC head coach Reggie Franklin was called for the first technical with 6:00 left in the second half and MC having just relinquished the lead. NMJC freshman guard Greg Brown stepped to the line and converted both free throws as the T-Birds jumped ahead 78-75.

Big Spring promotes Butler

■ New Big Spring head coach Dwight Butler faces the task of living up to the standards that predecessor David Thompson set for the Steer football program.

By Joe Wyatt
Staff Writer

BIG SPRING — Dwight Butler spent the past three football seasons masterminding the dominating defenses of the Big Spring Steers, but offense will be his pet project when the 1991 season gets underway.

Butler, 35, was named athletic director and head football coach at Big Spring High School Thursday on the strength of a 5-2 vote by the Big Spring Independent School District's board of directors.

He replaces former head coach and AD David Thompson, who resigned early this year to accept the head post at South Grand Prairie.

"I'll probably move over to the offense," said Butler, who coordinated a defense that allowed opponents a total of 97 points in 10 regular season games last fall.

"I know it (the move to offense) is a surprise to people, but I feel like things need to be on my shoulders.

"Not to say that I will never go back to defense," Butler quickly added. "That's been my pride and joy here."

Steer teams amassed a record of 22-12-1 during the three years that Thompson headed the staff and Butler served as defensive coordinator.

Big Spring reached the state semifinals in 1989, and the Steers made it two weeks into postseason play last season.

"We feel like there will be some continuity," said William A. McQueary, superintendent of the Big Spring I.S.D.

"Dwight is aware of our weaknesses and our strong suits. He has worked under some excellent head coaches — one of those being David Thompson, who just left — and we feel like he has gained the experience to provide us with a coach that will take us on to bigger and better things in Big Spring, McQueary said.

Butler's contract is for two years and puts an end to speculation that the Big Spring I.S.D. might conduct a search for a coach outside the district.

Butler, who was raised in Artesia, N.M., is a 1978 graduate of Eastern New Mexico University. His first coaching position was a two-year stint in Hobbs. He later moved to assistant posts at Monahans, Abilene Cooper, Artesia and finally Levelland before joining the Big Spring staff.

"Coach Thompson did a good job of getting something started here that's real positive, and we're just hoping we can carry on from that and take it to another level," Butler said.

Butler will inherit a team with several standouts returning from last season's regional round team, including quarterback Gerald Cobos, strong safety Pat Chavarria, linebackers Kevin Rodgers and Lance Reeves, and defensive tackle Freddie Williams. But he must find replacements for tailback Jermaine Miller, wingback Neal Mayfield, middle backer Felipe Saiz, and free safety Freddie Rodriquez.

MHS, Lee face cage rematch

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

Midland High vs. Midland Lee — the last go around. That is the theme of today's matchup at Chaparral Center when both boys and girls teams in the cross town rivalry meet for the last time in 1991 with a 6:15 p.m. doubleheader.

The girls kick off the action with the boys to follow at 8 p.m. and MHS is searching for a season sweep in both games.

This will be the third time the Lee-MHS boys have tangled and the Bulldogs have victories of 21 and 12 points in the previous two meetings. MHS will try for the hat trick tonight.

The MHS girls own a meager 1-point win over Lee in the only meeting of the year between those two teams.

The Bulldog and Rebel boys have been going in opposite directions this year with MHS jumping to a 5-1 first half district mark, owning sole possession of second place and the inside track to one of the district's two playoff berths while

District 4-5A

Lee is tied for last place with Odessa High at 1-5, the exact opposite start the Bulldogs enjoyed.

But enough has changed to keep interest at a high level tonight for the boys. Midland High has lost leading scorer Rodrick Hickey, who was averaging 18 points per game, to grades. Just what effect is that going to have on the Bulldogs in the second half?

MHS coach Jack Stephenson is hoping that his team bench strength can take up the scoring slack.

"I regret that Rodrick didn't make his grades, but I'm more concerned for him as an individual than I am about the basketball team," said Stephenson. "I don't think the loss of Hick will have an 18-point impact on the team because we have a lot of

Rebels celebrate gridiron feats

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

Midland Lee celebrated its 8-2-1 season, a District 4-5A co-championship and eighth consecutive trip to the state playoffs Thursday night with the annual Football Sports Banquet at the Holiday Inn Convention Center.

Annual player awards were made at the banquet, including the prestigious Lena Douglas Award and the Bob Dillon Memorial Fighting Heart Award.

Senior Mike Vogel, a tight end, was named recipient of the Lena Douglas honor, which goes to the player with the highest grade point average. Vogel, one of the six Lee students to be named as a National Merit semifinalist, carries a 5.029 grade point average and ranks 17th overall in his class.

The Bob Dillon award goes annually to the player who gives the most of himself during the course of the season. That award was earned by senior defensive end Korey Munson.

Those two awards were picked by the coaches, but all other awards were voted on by the players.

The most valuable offensive player was senior quarterback Derrick Turner. Turner was an All-District pick at linebacker as a junior, but did not make the All-District team as a quarterback after changing positions for the good of the team.

Turner had 956 yards rushing and eight touchdowns while passing for an additional 537 yards and five touchdowns.

Senior linebacker Mike Loftis, who led the team in tackles and an All-District pick last fall, was voted as the team's most valuable defensive player.

Junior center K.C. Jones, and All-District pick and an All-State honorable mention selection on the Associated Press Sports Editors team, was named as the outstanding offensive lineman.

Offensive linemen was a strength of the Lee squad this past season. Senior Justin Firkins, a first team All-State pick in 1989 at tackle, was second team All-State in both the Associated Press vote and the Texas Sports Writers Association.

Senior Reggie Webb, who had 943 yards rushing and nine touchdowns, was named as the outstanding running back. Webb also led the team in receiving with 244 yards and three touchdowns on just

MHS boys, Lee girls favored in local meet

By Bill Grimes
Staff Writer

Two-a-days aside, Larry Ridge would like his Midland High boys to win the Midland Swimming and Diving Invitational this coming weekend.

"Our swimmers who are tapering for the regional meet (next month) will go through another month of two-a-days," Ridge said. "Still, we should win the boys title."

The Midland Lee girls are favored to repeat as girls champions, despite the fact that the Lady Rebels may not win an event. Midland High hopes to improve on last year's third-place finish in the girls division.

The 26-team meet begins at 8:30 a.m. today with diving competition at the Lee pool. Preliminary swimming events begin at 1 p.m.

Saturday's competition begins at 10 a.m.

The Aquadawg boys placed second to San Angelo last season despite having three swimmers win two events each. Two of those swimmers — senior Moss Fennell and junior Matthew Houston — are back this season.

Prep Swimming

Fennell is expected to successfully defend his 200- and 500-yard freestyle titles, while Houston could probably win just about any event he chose.

Houston won the 100 butterfly and 100 backstroke in last year's meet. Who knows what events he'll enter this weekend? He won eight events at last weekend's COM Winter Invitational, and his winning times at the age group meet were faster than first-place times at last year's high school invitational in four of those events

"He'll probably slam the competition in whatever he swims," Ridge said.

Fennell also appears to be ahead of last year's pace. The senior won the 500 free last weekend more than three seconds faster than his time of a similar point last season.

"Moss is ahead of where he was at this time last year," Ridge said. "He's been swimming a lot of different events, so he's hungry for a couple of wins in the distance races."

As if Houston and Fennell weren't enough to make the Aquadawgs competitive, MHS will also call on junior Steve Thomsen in the freestyle sprints. Thomsen was second in both the 50 and 100 free events at last year's Midland meet as an Abilene Cooper sophomore. He's the top seed in both events this season.

The Aquadawgs also appear to have point-scoring ability from several other swimmers, including freestylists Rick Neatherlin and Rhett McKeller and Swedish foreign exchange student Stefan Nilsson, who can swim freestyle and butterfly.

Ridge also expects his boys to compete well in both relays. The 400 free relay team of Houston, Fennell, Thomsen and either McKeller, Neatherlin or Nilsson is shooting for All-American honors and a school record, while Ridge expects the 200 medley relay to be a shootout between MHS and Lubbock Coronado.

While Ridge is shooting for the top, Lee mentor John Bettina would settle for a top 10 finish from his boys — something that didn't happen in last year's meet.

But the Rebels didn't have Jesse Nattrass last year. The junior appears to be a contender for points in several events, including the 100 and 200 freestyles and the 200 individual medley.

"Jesse has a shot against (Steve) Thomsen," Bettina said.

Lee's best hope for an individual title is junior diver Juan Arguello, who has won several meets already this season and is considering to be a contender for the Region I championship in March.

The Lee girls swam away with last year's local invitational, despite winning only one individual event. Bettina thinks his girls have a shot at defending their title, even though standout distance swimmer Stephanie Reed graduated.

"We have more depth on the bottom side — places nine through 16," Bettina said. "We don't have anyone who can win outright, but I think all three relays can place in the top three."

Texas high school girls now swim a 200-yard freestyle relay, in addition to the existing 400 free and 200 medley events.

Lee girls with the best shot at a finish in the top three are backstroker Heili Whitlow, butterfly specialist Mimi Morrison, breaststroker Ginger Brininstool, freestyle sprinter Shanna Tomlinson and distance freestylist Melanie Reed. Morrison was second in the 100 fly at last season's Midland meet.

The Lady Rebels got a big boost from a 2-3-4-6 finish in diving last year, and Bettina hopes for more of the same from the likes of Carey Forsythe, Jogee Woolard and Christy Connell. Forsythe and Woolard were fourth and sixth in last year's meet.

Ridge said Lee should defend its title. "They should walk away with the title, because they have so much depth," the MHS coach said.

The Lady Aquadawgs pin much of their hope for second on defending champion sprinter Carrie Henry, who is near her pace of last season when she won the 50 and 100 free at the Midland meet. The MHS junior was set back by illness in the fall, but appears to rounding into championship form.

Henry spearheads a 400 free relay that is undefeated when stacked with the team's four best freestylists, including Kelli Hales, Sunday Brasher and Jennifer Hendricks.

Diver Robin Koiro and freestylists Elizabeth Braun and Angie Seltzer also have good chances of scoring points.

This weekend's meet is the last for both local teams until the District 4-5A meet Feb. 15-16, also in Midland.

CHAPS: MC needs win in Odessa

(From 1C)

Four-and-a-half minutes later, MC sophomore post Carroll Boudreaux was called for the second 'T' after charging toward NMJC wing Will Scott. Once again, Brown stepped to the line and swished both. Instead of MC trailing 84-82 and in possession of the ball, the Chaps found themselves down by four with 93 seconds left.

"The technicals were costly," Franklin said. "Both times we have the ball when we get called for the tech. Usually, you get called for a technical when you're swearing. I got called because I was 'griping.' "

Sixty seconds after the technical on Boudreaux, NMJC's Chris Birden connected on a layup and the T-Birds were up 88-82. MC guard Steve Armstrong quickly led the Chaps back within striking distance on a three-pointer which cut the lead to 88-85.

After Scott connected on a free throw with just 22 seconds remaining, MC again brought it close when Malcolm Milam hit a 23-foot jumper and cut the T-Birds lead to one, 89-88.

After two more NMJC free throws and a 91-88 lead, Armstrong and Milam — would-be heroes just seconds earlier — tried to hook up on a length-of-the-court pass to set up a Milam three-pointer. Milam, however, mishandled the pass and possession went to the T-Birds, who ran out the clock.

MC had held a 12 point lead earlier in the second half before the T-Birds turned on the heat, installing a full-court press which stymied the Chaparrals' offense.

NMJC head coach Ron Black said he had thought about calling for the press the entire game, but didn't know whether his team could keep up the intense pace of the defense.

"It (the press) shouldn't even have bothered us," Franklin said. "It was the same press we had against Western Texas," when the Chaps won 120-109 Monday night.

"We just couldn't get the ball down court like we should have."

And why would the same press rattle a team which handled it so well only three nights earlier?

"If I knew that I'd be a much better coach than I am," Black said. "You just can't tell what kids are going to do from one night to the next."

Franklin said he was suspicious of his team's frame of mind almost a full 24 hours before tip off.

"We didn't come to play," Franklin said. "I was nervous about the game today. I couldn't sleep before the game, and usually, it's that I can't sleep after a game."

Sophomore post Eugene Witherspoon was on his way to his best offensive output this season for the Chaps before he was poked in the eye early in the second half. Eighteen of Witherspoon's 23 points came in the first half; ten of those 18 came in the final three minutes of the first half.

Scott led NMJC with 20 points, but the consistency of freshmen James Inman was the highlight for Black and NMJC. Inman, suffering from the flu, scored 19 points and was one of four T-Birds who played the entire second half.

"He's going to be the best big man to ever play at New Mexico Junior College," Black noted."

The loss drops the Chaps to 12-9 overall, 3-4 in conference play; NMJC moves to 12-8, 3-4. At 3-4, both teams are a game off the pace in their searches for Region V tournament berths. With OC and FPC both Thursday night winners, both move to 4-3 and in control of the third and fourth tournament bids. MC and OC play in Odessa Monday at 8 p.m. in a game Franklin is already anticipating.

"It's very crucial," Franklin said of a win at the OC Sports Center. "We have to win at OC. We must win now."

CHAP NOTES: Witherspoon was 11-of-14 from the floor, including hitting 9-of-10 field goals in the first half. ... MC leads the all-time series against the T-Birds 23-8, but NMJC has won two of the last three.

SPC establishes supremacy — for now

Staff Report

LEVELLAND — South Plains freshman forward Dwight Stewart scored 10 of his 18 points in the last six minutes and the second-ranked Texans went on a 13-0 second-half run to beat No. 3 Howard College 90-82 at the Texan Dome Thursday night.

The Texans improved their record to 22-0 overall. SPC finish the first half of Western Junior College Athletic Conference action at 8-0. Howard fell to 20-1, 6-1.

Howard rose from a 10 point deficit early in the second half, but switched to a 2-3 zone defense and took a two-point lead with 7:02 remaining.

David Diaz led SPC with 19 points; Corey Beck had 15.

Howard's Harvey Petty led all scorers with 24 points — including five three-pointers. Vernon Broughton came off the Hawk bench to score 18.

SPC's Stewart, Charles Outlaw and Terry Alexander each played the final nine minutes of the game with four fouls apiece.

Howard's Johnny McDowell, who averages 20 points per game, was held to eight points and fouled out with 8:45 remaining in the second half.

SPC hit just 20 of 40 free throws, including a mere 1-of-12 in the first half.

Joey Martinez, who caught two big playoff passes, was named as the outstanding wide receiver.

Senior defensive tackle Roy Melgoza, who scored a playoff touchdown against Plainview with an interception, was named as the team's top defensive lineman. It was the second year in a row that Melgoza was given that honor.

Junior Henry Stewart was honored as the top secondary back while sophomore Sherman Dedrick won the honor as MVP of the specialty teams.

Firkins, Loftis and Turner were picked by team members as captains of the team. Lee has weekly captains during the year, but lets team members pick the team captains at the conclusion of the season.

Lee principal Jack Fryar announced at the banquet that Henry Kitzman and Bobby Dunn, both vice-principals at Lee, have announced their retirements at the end of the current school year. Both have been well known for their support of high school athletics in the community.

kids who can come in and do the job.

"Tyler Beard, John King, Mark Farias and Jose Rios can all come in and help us."

The key down the stretch, however, may lie in the ability of sophomore Antwan Goodley to mature beyond his experience.

"I told Antwan that he is no longer a sophomore. He must now play like a senior and he played well against Cooper," said Stephenson.

Also, senior Earl "Showtime" McDonald, averaging 11 points per game, will have to step up his scoring attack and he is capable of turning in big games.

Lee coach Jon House also doesn't feel the loss of Hickey means that the Bulldogs are in for trouble.

"I'm sure Midland High will play hard just like they did in the first two games," said House. "They've got a lot of good players.

"The pressure is off of us (Lee). We have six games left and we just wipe the slate clean and see what we can do the rest of the way."

Lee has emerged with three key players that Stephenson feels the Bulldogs must stop. Senior Eugene Hicks leads the team with a 13.2 scoring average while sophomore Martin Lattibeaudiere is hitting at a 12.1 clip and junior Wayne Wilson at a 12.3 average.

"We've got a young team and Martin and Wayne have been coming along," said House.

The first time the girls met this year, Lee's Debbie Kuntz, who is averaging 5.5 points per game, hit four of five three-point shots to almost deal MHS an upset.

The Lee girls have no one averaging in double figures, but Lachette Crisp is leading the way with a 7.5 average. She is followed by Tiffany Grafa and Alicia Furrow with 6.2 each.

The Lady Bulldogs own a three-pronged scoring attack with Sally Gibson, 13.7; Ashley Chase, 11.0; and Donna Eaden, 10.4. Angie Johnson has also been playing well as of late.

Sketches

MELBOURNE, Australia (AP) — Thumbnail sketches of the men's singles semifinalists at the Australian Open (seedings in parentheses):

Stefan Edberg (1) vs. Ivan Lendl (3)

A rematch of last year's final. ... Edberg retired with a stomach muscle pull in the third set, Lendl winning 4-6, 7-6, 5-2. ... Edberg, a right-hander from Sweden, replaced Lendl as the world's top-ranked player last year, winning Wimbledon for the second time. ... A two-time Australian Open champion, winning the last edition on grass (1985) and the first on the hard courts of the National Tennis Center (1987). ... Won almost $2 million, with seven tournament titles and a 70-14 match record. ... Won four straight tournaments, starting with Wimbledon and ending with an event on Long Island, N.Y. ... In his 12th Grand Slam semifinal, has won seven of the first 11. ... Reached the semifinals with victories over Dimitri Poliakov, Eduardo Masso, Pat Cash, 16th-seeded Jim Courier and 10th-seeded Guy Forget. ... Lives in London and is coached by Britain's Tony Pickard.

Lendl, the winner of the Australian Open the last two years, is in the semifinals for the sixth year in a row. ... Slipped to third in the ATP rankings last year, but still won five tournaments and $1.1 million. ... The right-hander from Czechoslovakia is based in Greenwich, Conn. He owns some of the most powerful and accurate groundstrokes in the game. ... He has an 11-9 career record against Edberg, although Edberg has won four of their last six meetings. ... In his 26th Grand Slam semifinal, he's won 16 of the previous 25. ... Known for his comebacks and strength in five-set matches. ... Lost in the semifinals to Edberg at Wimbledon last year, after skipping the French Open to add to his grass-court practice, and to Pete Sampras in the U.S. Open. ... Reached the semifinals with victories over Tarik Benhabiles, Scott Davis, Magnus Gustafsson, 13th-seeded Aaron Krickstein and Goran Prpic. ... Described in the ATP media guide as a "workaholic, self-motivated individual." ... Coached by former Grand Slam finalist Tony Roche. ... He and wife, Samatha, are expecting twins.

Patrick McEnroe vs. Boris Becker (2)

Becker, the three-time Wimbledon champion, is in the semifinals at the Australian Open for the first time. ... Best performance here before beating 10th-seeded Guy Forget Wednesday night was quarterfinal finishes in 1984 and 1990. ... Ranked second in the world with four tournament titles, a 71-15 record and $1.6 million in winnings last year. ... Best on faster surfaces, he relies on serve and volley, although some say he's lost something of his big serve that helped him take Wimbledon as a 17-year-old. ... Lost to Edberg in five-set final at Wimbledon last year, Andre Agassi in U.S. Open semifinals. ... A first-round loser, along with Edberg, at last year's French Open. ... Reached the semifinals with victories over Jeremy Bates, Marian Vajda, Omar Camporese, Wayne Ferreira and Forget. ... The 7-6, 7-6, 0-6, 4-6, 14-12 victory over Camporese in the third round lasted a open-record 5 hours, 11 minutes.

McEnroe, the 24-year-old brother of John McEnroe, is in the semifinals in only his second Grand Slam appearance. ... A doubles star for years, he won the French Open men's doubles with Jim Grabb in 1989. ... Decided to concentrate on singles last year and moved from 360th to 120th in the rankings. ... Ranked 114th coming into the Australian Open.

Lendl takes charge on Edberg's faults

MELBOURNE, Australia (AP) — Ivan Lendl gladly took the gift of 12 double faults by Stefan Edberg, including one at match point, and marched into his third straight Australian Open final.

The top-ranked Edberg lives by his serve, and Friday he died by it, falling 6-4, 5-7, 3-6, 7-6 (7-3), 6-4 to the two-time defending champion in just over four hours of center court suspense and blunders.

Edberg gave Lendl the title last year by quitting with a strained stomach muscle in the third set. This time, he gave Lendl a victory by choking on the big points.

The usually unflappable Swede had two chances to put the match away when he served with a 5-4 lead in the fourth set.

Edberg netted a backhand volley to drop the first match point at deuce, then double-faulted after getting his second match point on a service winner.

Lendl didn't waste the opportunity. He smacked a forehand return past Edberg for break point, then evened the set when his forehand clipped the top of the net, hopped past Edberg and landed inside the baseline.

In the tiebreaker, Edberg's woes continued. After Lendl raced to a 6-2 lead, Edberg saved one set point but gave Lendl another gift by double-faulting again.

Edberg looked demoralized as he came out for the fifth set, and not even the chants from the Swedish fans could help him. Lendl broke him in the first game with the help of another double-fault to break point. Edberg rallied briefly, breaking back to 1-1, but was broken again at 15-40 on a backhand volley into the net in the fifth game.

Lendl, who served 12 aces, suddenly came up with a case of serving blues, himself, double-faulting twice while trying to end the match in the 10th game. But Edberg again netted a backhand volley, then Lendl finished it off with a forehand winner in the corner, far out of the reach of Edberg's backhand.

Lendl ran to the net, pumping both fists over his head, then consoled Edberg with a pat on the back.

Gaetti ends search, signs with Angels

Baseball

NEW YORK (AP) — After weeks of indecision, Gary Gaetti made his big choice on Thursday and agreed to an $11.4 million, four-year contract with the California Angels.

Gaetti, a former All-Star third baseman, spent the afternoon talking it over with his wife and then turned down Minnesota's final offer of $7.1 million over four years plus the chance for another $4.5 million in performance bonuses.

"It was obviously a very tough decision," said Gaetti's agent, Jim Bronner. "He felt a tremendous tie to the Twins and Minneapolis. The contract proposals were very different. Based on last couple of seasons, he felt it was time for him to get a new beginning."

Twins general manager Andy MacPhail said Minnesota's final offer was for $2.6 million in 1991 and guaranteed salaries of $1.5 million in each of the next three seasons. The latter three years also had provisions for $1.5 million in bonuses.

Instead, Gaetti opted for California's offer of $2.7 million in each of the 1991 and 1992 seasons and $3 million in each of the final two years.

"Third base was obviously an area where we were looking for improvement, either from Jack Howell or somebody else," Angels general manager Mike Port said. "We're expecting that Gary will give us the hoped-for improvement at that position.

In addition, six players in salary arbitration agreed to contracts on Thursday, reducing the remaining players in arbitration to 124.

Texas pitcher Bobby Witt got the biggest deal, a three-year contract worth $7.3 million.

Houston pitcher Jim Deshaies agreed to a one-year contract worth $2.1 million, a raise of $1,025,000, while St. Louis pitcher Joe Magrane tripled his salary to $1,025,000. Magrane made $315,000 last season.

Atlanta pitcher Mark Grant got $540,000, a $140,000 raise, and Twins second baseman Nelson Liriano agreed to $507,500.

Spur victory marred by numerous fouls

Associated Press

SAN ANTONIO — David Robinson had a feeling the officials would call a tight game Thursday night when he saw a familiar among the crew.

In a contest plagued by 63 fouls, including 28 in the final period, the San Antonio Spurs outlasted the Cleveland Cavaliers 111-103.

"I think the referees were especially sensitive to the physical contact under the boards," Robinson said. "When we played them in Cleveland, Bruce (Alexander) was the referee and we had a couple of incidents."

Alexander made sure Thursday's game stayed under control by calling 17 fouls on the Cavs in the final 12 minutes, an all-time record for a Spurs opponent in one quarter. San Antonio also matched a franchise record with 11 fouls in the period.

The Spurs capitalized by hitting 17 free throws in the fourth quarter, including 13 in the final three minutes.

"Fouls seemed to dictate the game," San Antonio coach Larry Brown said in somewhat of an understatement.

Robinson scored 30 points and surging San Antonio handed Cleveland its 13th loss in 15 games.

Terry Cummings added 18 points for the Spurs, who won for the 18th time in 23 games. San Antonio is 15-3 at home this season.

Cleveland was led by Larry Nance with 32 points. Brad Daugherty fouled out with 8:09 to play and finished with just 11 points, all in the first half.

The Spurs led 94-88 with 4:25 left when the Cavaliers, led by John Morton's five points, went on an 8-3 spurt to pull to 97-96 with 2:43 remaining. But the Spurs made six free throws to go up 103-96 with 45 seconds left.

Cleveland, 5-15 on the road, came no closer than four points thereafter.

"We hung in there tonight," Cavaliers coach Lenny Wilkens said. "We had some opportunities at the end but we just couldn't capitalize."

Nance scored 13 first-half points as Cleveland built a 49-46 lead. The Spurs trailed by as many as 11 early in the second quarter, but a 7-0 run, including five points from Rod Strickland, pulled San Antonio to 39-35 with 5:27 left in the half.

Cleveland center Brad Daugherty fouled out with 8:09 to play and finished with 11 points, all in the first half.

Danny Ferry added 15 points for the Cavs and Morton finished with 13 despite a 1-of-5 effort from the field.

San Antonio also got 15 points from both Willie Anderson and Paul Pressey.

Houston 118, Minnesota 94

HOUSTON — Larry Smith grabbed 23 rebounds for Houston, his third 20-plus rebound game in the last five contests.

Otis Thorpe added 12 rebounds as the taller Rockets outrebounded Minnesota, 53-32.

Thorpe also led all scorers with 23 points followed by Kenny Smith with 22 points and eight assists and Vernon Maxwell, who had 19 points and 10 assists.

Kenny Smith has 20 or more points in four straight games and has connected in 25 of his last 33 floor shots.

Playing without leading scorer Tony Campbell for the second game, Minnesota was led by Pooh Richardson's 23 points and Sam Mitchell, who had 22.

Lakers 113, Hornets 93

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — James Worthy had 17 of his 24 points in the first quarter as the Los Angeles Lakers took a 14-point lead en route to their season-best ninth straight victory.

The Lakers, who also got 19 points from Magic Johnson, made 58 percent of their shots to hand Charlotte its third straight loss and sixth in seven games. Reserve Kelly Tripucka led the third-year Hornets — winless against the Lakers in all nine tries — with 23 points and Dell Curry had 19.

The end came early as the Lakers took a 34-20 lead after the first quarter, largely on the efforts of Worthy and Johnson, who had 11 of his 17 assists in the period.

Nuggets 120, Knicks 117

DENVER — Michael Adams scored 31 points as the undermanned Denver Nuggets overcame a strong game by Patrick Ewing and rallied for a win to end the Knicks' three-game streak.

The Nuggets played with just nine men after Walter Davis was traded to Portland and Terry Mills to New Jersey. Greg Anderson, obtained from New Jersey in a three-way trade also involving draft choices, had not arrived.

Ewing led New York, seeking to match its season high for consecutive victories, with 30 points and 16 rebounds.

NBA Roundup

Jordan paces voting

NEW YORK (AP) — Michael Jordan remains king of the NBA All-Stars, but an admiral is gaining on him.

Jordan, the league's leading scorer, finished as the top All-Star vote-getter for the fifth straight year Thursday. The Chicago guard has been named to the Eastern Conference team in each of his seven NBA seasons, although he didn't play in the 1986 game because of an injury.

Jordan received 1,217,429 votes in fan balloting for the Feb. 10 game at Charlotte.

San Antonio center David Robinson was the leading vote-getter in the Western Conference with 695,519. The Navy graduate, who was rookie of the year last season, is among the league leaders in scoring, rebounding, blocked shots and field-goal percentage.

The starting lineup for the West also features guards Magic Johnson of the Los Angeles Lakers and Kevin Johnson of Phoenix and forwards Karl Malone of Utah and Chris Mullin of Golden State.

The East lineup includes guard Isiah Thomas of Detroit, center Patrick Ewing of New York and forwards Charles Barkley of Philadelphia and Larry Bird of Boston.

Bird easily beat Washington's Bernard King for the second forward spot in the East even though King is the league's third-leading scorer and Bird has missed eight straight games with a bad back. Bird got 717,049 votes, more than twice as many as King, who has made a remarkable comeback from major knee surgery.

Bird's injury could prevent him from playing in the All-Star game. Barkley and Thomas also are injured and may not be able to play.

Bird and Magic Johnson each made the All-Star team for the 11th time. It is the 10th selection for Thomas, fifth for Barkley and Ewing, fourth for Malone, third for Mullin and second for Kevin Johnson and Robinson.

Jordan, Thomas and Robinson are the only starters who have been All-Stars every year they've been in the league.

The remaining All-Stars will be chosen by a vote of conference coaches. The results will be announced next week.

The West will be coached by Rick Adelman of Portland and the East will be coached by Boston's Chris Ford. They were selected because their teams have the best records in their conferences.

It is the first time in All-Star history that the 10 starters represent 10 different teams.

Magic Johnson, Malone and Robinson were the top vote-getters at their positions in the West. In the East, the leading vote-getters by position were Jordan, Barkley and Ewing.

The closest competition for a starting berth was between Kevin Johnson and Portland's Clyde Drexler for the second guard spot in the West. Johnson beat Drexler by 31,468 votes.

Third-ranked Hoosiers stay in Big 10 race

Associated Press

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — Indiana coach Bob Knight said the Hoosiers needed a victory and Greg Graham carried the message to Michigan.

Indiana got back on track in the Big Ten as Graham scored 19 points to lead the third-ranked Hoosiers to a 70-60 victory over Michigan on Thursday night.

"I thought this was an extremely important game for us," Knight said. "I thought if we want to be any kind of contender in the league, we had to win this game.

"I felt that we had to play in such a way that we couldn't let the game get away from us in the first half."

It almost happened.

But Graham scored the first 11 points for the Hoosiers, who actually fell behind by two points and led by only five at halftime.

"I think Greg has good stamina," Knight said. "He made two or three steals for baskets in the second half."

Indiana (17-2, 5-1) needed the win to shake off the effects of a 93-85 loss to No. 4 Ohio State at home on Monday night. The Wolverines (9-8, 2-5), who had a modest two-game winning streak ended, have lost four of their last five games with the Hoosiers.

"Greg Graham had a great game," Michigan coach Steve Fisher said. "When other guys get shut down, somebody has to rise up and he did that."

It also helped that Indiana hit 15 of 24 free throws while the Wolverines went to the line just five times and missed four. The Hoosiers, who shot 49 percent, are 6-0 on the road, 6-1 on neutral courts.

Calbert Cheaney scored 17 points for Indiana, 11 in the second half, and led the Hoosiers with 12 rebounds.

"Cheaney had far from a good game," Knight said. "He didn't shoot the ball particularly well and yet got some good offensive plays."

The Hoosiers played without freshman Damon Bailey who warmed up but remained on the bench with a wrap on his bruised left thigh.

Demetrius Calip scored 21 points for Michigan, which shot 43 percent and had a 41-31 rebounding edge.

Graham scored six of his eight first-half points to help the Hoosiers to a 20-11 lead with 11:47 left.

But Tony Tolbert scored five points, including a 3-pointer, and Calip hit two long jumpers to lead a 13-2 Michigan burst. Kirk Taylor's layup gave Michigan a 24-22 lead with 6:41 left.

Then Graham scored to tie it 24-24 with 5:31 remaining and Lyndon Jones hit two baskets, including a 3-pointer, as the Hoosiers went on a 7-0 spurt and led 33-28 at halftime.

Calip scored seven points early in the second half as the Wolverines worked the deficit down to 49-48, but the Hoosiers just had too much fire power.

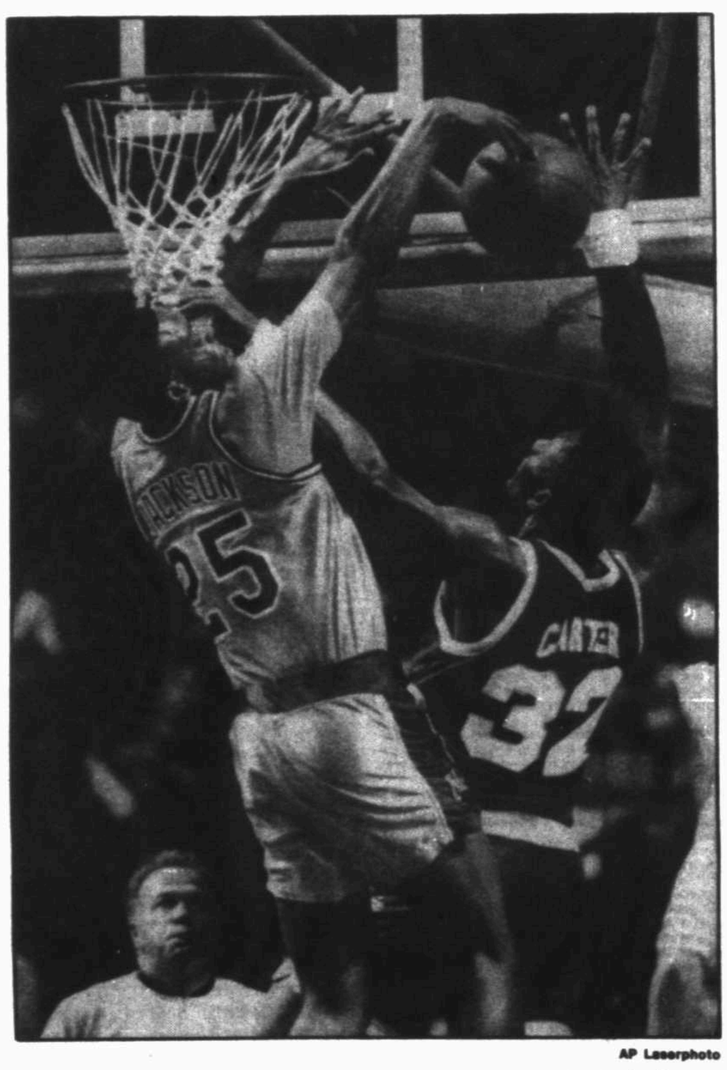

"From that point on, we got a little better ball movement than we had," Knight said.

Ohio State 80, Minnesota 70

MINNEAPOLIS — Jamaal Brown scored seven of his 17 points during a 21-8 first-half run as No. 4 Ohio State remained unbeaten.

Ohio State (17-0, 7-0) and top-ranked UNLV are the nation's only undefeated teams. The Buckeyes are off to their best start since the 1962 NCAA runners-up began 22-0 and their best Big Ten start since the 1979 club was 8-0.

Mark Baker and Perry Carter scored 15 points each and Jim Jackson added 13 for Ohio State, which has outscored opponents by an average of 92.8-65.5 and has won by fewer than 10 points only three times.

Minnesota (9-7, 2-4) has won three of 10 games since a 6-0 start and lost for only the seventh time in its last 41 games at Williams Arena.

Kevin Lynch, who scored a career-high 27 points, made two baskets to cap an 8-2 run that gave Minnesota a 22-16 lead with 10:49 left in the first half. Chris Jent then hit a 3-pointer to begin Ohio State's 21-8 surge.

A basket by Brown and two by Jackson made it 25-25 and Baker hit four straight free throws as the Buckeyes took the lead for good, 29-27, with 5½ minutes left in the half. Brown followed with a 3-pointer and two free throws and Carter finished the spurt with a three-point play.

Ohio State led 44-37 at halftime and opened the second half with a 18-8 run behind Carter's three baskets for a 62-45 lead. Minnesota still trailed 69-56 with 4:39 to go before a 10-4 spurt, capped by Arriel McDonald's 3-pointer, made it 74-68 with 1:03 left.

But Brown made a layup on a court-length pass from Jackson and Baker, who made 11 of 12 free throws in the game, hit three foul shots as Ohio State regained control down the stretch.

S. Mississippi 84
Louisville 81

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — Clarence Weatherspoon scored 25 points as No. 15 Southern Mississippi, playing without Metro Conference scoring leader Darrin Chancellor, turned back Louisville.

Chancellor, who averages 21.6 points, sat out after a flareup of tendinitis in his right ankle several hours before the game.

Southern Mississippi (12-1, 6-0), winning for the first time in 12 games on Louisville's home court, took the lead for good when Weatherspoon powered inside for a dunk and Russell Johnson followed with two straight fastbreak layups for a 71-67 lead with 6:14 to go.

Another jam by Weatherspoon increased the margin to 80-75 with 2:17 left before Louisville (7-8, 1-5) came back within one point on a dunk by Cornelius Holden and LaBradford Smith's 10-footer 1 minute later.

Ron Rembert then hit one of two free throws with 47 seconds left to give Southern Mississippi an 81-79 advantage.

Louisville worked 21 seconds off the clock before Smith missed a short baseline jumper, but the Cardinals retained possession when a Southern Mississippi player touched the ball before it sailed out of bounds.

Smith missed a jumper in the lane with 14 seconds to go and was then called for an intentional foul when Southern Mississippi's Daron Jenkins grabbed the rebound. Jenkins made both free throws to put Southern Mississippi out of reach.

Jenkins finished with 17 points while Bernard Haslett had 13, Johnson 12 and Rembert 11 as Southern Mississippi won its 10th straight game.

Louisville was led by Everick Sullivan's 26 points, which included four 3-pointers, and was followed by Smith with 18 and Holden 16.

Southern Mississippi, despite 11 turnovers, led 42-39 at halftime.

No. 20 Utah 55, Colorado St. 51

SALT LAKE CITY — Colorado State gave No. 20 Utah a scare before the Utes, behind Josh Grant's 17 points, managed to hold on for their 15th straight victory.

The Utes (18-1, 7-0) led 53-46 with 2:13 remaining, but the Rams scored five straight points and had the ball with 35 seconds remaining after a Utah turnover. Grant then stole the ball, raced the length of the court and dunked to clinch the Western Athletic Conference victory.

Utah got 13 points from Walter Watts and nine from Byron Wilson. The Rams (9-8, 1-5) were led by Doug Larson's 16 points, while Chuckie White added 12.

Both teams shot poorly in the first half, which ended with Utah leading 28-25. Larson, who scored 12 points in the first half, kept the Rams in the game.

Colorado State took its first lead since the opening moments, 29-28, on Lynn Tryon's basket 1½ minutes into the second half. The teams exchanged leads until successive 3-pointers by Phil Dixon and Grant gave Utah a 47-44 lead and the Utes never trailed again.

Watts' basket and two free throws from both Tyron Tate and Jimmy Soto put the Utes up by seven, but a basket by Mark Meredith and a 3-pointer by Tryon cut the lead to two and set the stage for Grant's last-minute heroics.

No. 23 N.M. St. 88, San Jose St. 58

LAS CRUCES, N.M. — Reggie Jordan scored 16 points and Chris Small added 15, all on 3-pointers, to lead No. 23 New Mexico State to a Big West Conference victory over San Jose State.

The Aggies (14-2, 6-1) took the lead for good with 10:39 remaining in the first half. They were up 38-28 at halftime and led by as many as 35 points in the second half, 77-42 with 4:57 left.

Randy Brown added 12 points for the Aggies and William Benjamin and Ron Putzi had 10 each.

Chad Higginbotham had 12 points for San Jose State (4-13, 2-6), while Terry Cannon added 11 and Mike Wasserburger 10.

The Aggies forced 21 turnovers and had a 49-31 rebounding edge. Brown and Jordan each pulled down eight, while San Jose State's starting center, 6-foot-7 Kevin Logan, had only three.

Miners beat Hawaii by eight

EL PASO (AP) — Marlon Maxey scored 12 points and grabbed nine rebounds, leading Texas-El Paso to a 60-52 victory over Hawaii Thursday night in a Western Athletic Conference game.

The win boosted UTEP's record to 4-3 in the conference and 12-5 overall. The Rainbows dropped to 2-5 and 10-8.

Maxey was 8-for-8 from the free throw line in the second half. It was the 6-foot-8 junior's first game since Dec. 17 because of a knee injury. He was UTEP's top scorer and rebounder last season.

Ismail completes about-face, declares for draft

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — Raghib "Rocket" Ismail, a breakaway threat for three seasons at Notre Dame, broke clear from college football Thursday and dashed to the pros.

"I will be officially entering my name in the 1991 (NFL) draft," he said, ending weeks of speculation.

The decision represents an about-face for the junior from Wilkes-Barre, Pa., who had insisted that he would return for his senior season.

But the death of teammate Chris Zorich's mother hours after Notre Dame's Orange Bowl loss to Colorado on New Year's Day helped change Ismail's mind about turning pro.

"It's something that made me realize that things in life don't always happen the way you expect them to," he said. "I want to do something for my mother and my family."

College Football

Ismail, a two-time All-American and runner-up for the 1990 Heisman Trophy, made his final decision on Monday.

"It's going to be exciting — it's something I want to do," he said.

Ismail is likely to be one of the first three players picked in the April draft, but he said a multi-million-dollar contract isn't his top priority.

"Money isn't everything, and money isn't happiness," he said.

The New England Patriots, who finished 1-15 this season, have the first pick in the draft. But they aren't saying which player they'll take.

"The Patriots, like other NFL teams, are in an evaluation process at this particular time and it is far too early to make decisions," said Sam Jankovich, the team's chief executive officer.

Ismail said he won't be choosy.

"Anybody who picks me, I'll be happy to play for them," he said.

Ismail is the 12th underclassman — and fourth in the last two days — to enter the NFL draft. The other entries this week were Virginia receiver Herman Moore, Tennessee running back Chuck Webb and Syracuse receiver Rob Carpenter.

Concern that a salary cap may be established in the NFL is one of the main reasons talented juniors are deciding to leave school early.

Ismail was a flanker, tailback and kick returner at Notre Dame, but the 5-foot-10, 175-pound speedster will probably concentrate on receiving in the pros.

Ismail returned five kickoffs for touchdowns at Notre Dame, one short of the NCAA career record by Southern Cal's Anthony Davis. During his three seasons, he gained 4,187 all-purpose yards and scored 15 touchdowns.

Opposing coaches were amazed by Ismail's blazing speed and versatility. Michigan's Bo Schembechler called him "the most dangerous player around" and Tennessee's Johnny Majors said Ismail was "like a blur."

Despite his decision to turn pro, Ismail pledged to complete the 30 credits he needs for a degree.

"There's no doubt I will graduate from this university," he said.

Notre Dame coach Lou Holtz was on a recruiting trip Thursday, but he praised Ismail in a written statement.

"We thank Rocket for the contribution he has made to the University of Notre Dame, both on the field and off," Holtz said. "He has been a pleasure to coach, and we certainly wish him well."

Ismail has shied away from reporters throughout his college career, but he smiled and appeared relaxed as he announced his decision to turn pro.

"It's something I'm glad is off my shoulders," he said. "Onward and upward."

MUGS receives grant

Staff Report

Softball

The Midland United Girls Softball Association announced this week that the organization has received a $15,000 grant check from the Abell-Hanger Foundation to build a seventh softball field at the girls softball complex in Ulmer Park.

Because of the growing number of girls participating in recreational softball in MUGS, it has been increasingly difficult to schedule all of the games necessary for the Midland leagues and for the national tournaments, which the Midland leagues host.

In order to schedule all of the games, it has been necessary to play late evening games and schedule additional days. The addition of a seventh field will enable the MUGS to serve more girls in the community and the region while providing reasonable practice and game schedules.

MUGS currently registers approximately 550 girls in ages seven through 19 in four playing divisions in the spring season and another 140 girls in the fall season.

The fall season was held for the first time in 1990 and attracted girls from surrounding towns who did not have fall softball available.

It is anticipated that both programs will significantly increase in the number of participants in upcoming years.

Without the Abell-Hanger grant, the new field would not be a reality this year.

Jones holds narrow lead

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. (AP) — Steve Jones carded a bogey-free, 8-under-par 63 Thursday to take a one-shot lead over late-charging Curtis Strange before first-round play was suspended at the Phoenix Open.

Play was stopped due to darkness at 6:05 p.m. MST with 21 players still on the course. None were in contention for the lead.

The start of the $1 million tournament was delayed for one hour by morning frost on the 6,992-yard TPC course. Most of the top scores were posted by the early finishers in the 144-man field.

Jones started at 8:41 a.m. and had five of his eight birdies on the back nine.

Strange, who didn't tee off until 1:04 p.m., birdied his final three holes on the front nine and had two birdies on the back to go 7-under.

Sandy Lyle, the 1988 winner, was at 65 along with Bob Tway, Russ Cochran, Robert Wrenn, Nolan Henke, Gene Sauers and 1964 champ Tom Purtzer.

Golf

Davis Love III and Gil Morgan were at 66 with Kirk Triplett, Brad Fabel, Bruce Lietzke and amateur Phil Mickelson all at 67.

Mickelson, a 20-year-old lefthander from Arizona State, won the Northern Telecom Open in Tucson two weeks ago.

Defending champion Tommy Armour III and 1987 champ Paul Azinger both shot opening-round 69s.

Jones, a 32-year-old Phoenix resident who has four titles in his eight-year PGA career, birdied on Nos. 4, 7, 8, 10, 13, 14, 15 and 17. He was 5-under 31 on the back nine.

"I didn't have many chances to bogey," Jones said. "The second hole, I think I had a three-footer for par. That was my longest putt.

Milers duel in Tennessee

JOHNSON CITY, Tenn. (AP) — Top milers Marcus O'Sullivan of Ireland, Peter Rono of Kenya and American Steve Ave will compete in the USAir Invitational indoor track and field meet at East Tennessee State.

The meet, featuring more than 3,000 athletes, begins Friday night with the invitational events and ends Saturday with college and high school competition. About 225 colleges will be represented.

In addition to the men's mile, the women's mile race promises to provide top-notch competition. Defending champion Gina Procaccio returns, along with last year's runner-up, Svetlana Kitova of the Soviet Union. The top entrant, however, is Doina Melinte of Romania, the world indoor record-holder.

"It may be the best race of the night," said Dave Walker, East Tennessee State track coach and director of the meet

Palmer defends Sr. Skins title

KOHALA COAST, Hawaii (AP) — Arnold Palmer sighed, an exhalation composed of resignation, frustration — and anticipation.

"I keep saying I'm going to slow down, but it looks like I'm playing a heavy schedule again," Palmer said before a practice round for the Seniors Skins Game.

He's been talking about a reduction for more than 25 years, since the height of his Hall of Fame career in the early-to-mid-'60's when he helped take golf into the television era and became the most popular player the game has known.

But the combination of constant, clamoring demands for his appearances and Palmer's delight in performing have prohibited any significant reduction in his world-wide schedule.

Last year, for example, he played in 28 competitive events, plus dozens of one-day exhibitions and appearances. And a reduction doesn't appear to be on tap this year, either.

Palmer, 61, and starting his 37th season as a touring pro, will begin three consecutive weeks of competition with the five-man, two-day, 18-hole Senior Skins Game Saturday and Sunday.

He'll follow that with his first appearance since 1980 in the Pebble Beach National Pro-Am and his 33rd consecutive start in the Bob Hope Classic.

His immediate schedule also includes a Senior PGA Tour event, a trip to Tokyo in March, the Masters and the Senior PGA championship.

"I look forward to it," said Palmer, as usual besieged by autograph seekers and well-wishers after his practice session at the Francis H. Brown course at Mauna Lani.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

FRIDAY, JANUARY 25, 1991

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Knowing when to let go of a losing proposition is essential now. Be on the lookout for business opportunities! The need for a career change will become increasingly clear in early summer. Follow the dictates of your heart where romance and family matters are concerned. Next fall is the best time to take a vacation abroad. Contact overseas friends well in advance. Try to do part of a home decorating project yourself.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A hobby could become a source of income. Students feel motivated. A temporary setback could teach an important lesson. Nurturing a platonic relationship will bring lasting benefits.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Foreign travel enjoys favorable infuences. You need to make a choice where romance is concerned. Those in seasonal businesses will reap higher profits when they diversify.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): An older person is receptive to your suggestions. Your analytical powers are widely respected. Be willing to give an opinion when asked. A friend rescues you from a difficult situation.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Long-distance communciations should be on a pleasant note today. Your attempts to gain cooperation will be successful. Seek introductions to people you respect. Be upbeat.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Getting organized may not be easy but it will certainly boost productivity. Someone offers you a loan if you find yourself short on cash. Romance could have its ups and downs. Be patient.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A child who learns to handle responsibility will be a much happier person. Cut the apron strings. Romance cannot be rushed. A last-minute change of plan proves to be a brilliant move.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Concern over what your relatives might think could influence the decisions you make. Stop worrying so much about other people's opinions. They may want to make some changes, too.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Conditions are not favorable for discussing domestic issues. Self-improvement activities boost your confidence. Someone presses you for a romantic commitment. Know your own heart.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Seek an introduction to someone you find attractive! Fortunate developments could unfold where entertainment is concerned. Romance beckons this evening. Put your best foot forward.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Today is an auspicious time for discussing an ailing relationship. Avoid making accusations. Do not be too much of a homebody now; you will gain a lot by getting into the social mainstream.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Your plans could go awry if you push too hard and fast. A prominent individual may not be on the up-and-up. Take care of routine matters. Delights await you in romance.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Someone who has tremendous personal magnetism fills your head with romantic ideas. You are able to make fresh financial progress. Develop your natural efficiency and the sky is the limit!

TODAY'S CHILDREN are both sensitive to other people's feelings and highly opinionated. Count on them to argue their point of view in a calm and polite way. These youngsters have a tremendous gift for concentration. A keen intellect and fixity of purpose lead these Aquarians to finish whatever they start. They find it difficult to change course once they have laid their plans. Emphasize the benfits of greater flexibility.

Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: King of ◇

If you are in an "impossible" contract, try to find a lie of the cards that will permit you to get home. If you find one, play as if it exists.

North's actions were completely inconsistent. Had he wanted to bid, North should have done so over the three diamond preempt. To bid at the five-level, even after partner had shown a good hand, was rather risky. At duplicate, there might be some justification; at rubber bridge, it's lunacy—North-South could have netted 500 comfortable points from a double. Incidentally, note East's bid of four clubs. Instead of simply raising to four diamonds, which was East's intent, the bid accomplished that while showing where East's strength was located.

West led the king of diamonds, and declarer realized a lot of luck was going to be needed to land the contract. Besides finding the ace of clubs and king of spades onside, South would have to engineer an endplay, as well.

There were two distributions that would permit that. West had to hold either a singleton ten or nine of spades, or ten-nine doubleton. Since the former was twice as likely as the latter, declarer opted for that lie.

After winning the ace of diamonds, declarer crossed to the queen of hearts and led the queen of spades. East covered, declarer won and was delighted to see West's ten. South returned to dummy with the jack of trumps, and the fact that West held two trumps reinforced declarer's suspicion that the ten of spades was singleton. Dummy's remaining diamond was ruffed and a heart to the eight served as the entry for a club lead. East played low and, when the king won, declarer was almost home. South exited with a club and did not mind which defender won the third club. West would be forced to yield a ruff-and-sluff. East would have to either do the same or else lead a spade away from the nine into dummy's jack-eight tenace.

Las mujeres de Cuba pose for March Playboy pictorial

In the wake of the Cold War, hace calor. The Cuban government, hungry for tourist dollars and taking the lead from a recent pictorial about the women of Russia, has given permission for a Playboy extravaganza on the women of Cuba.

Cuban government officials had told Playboy that 92 percent of Cuban women belong to feminist organizations, and that it would be hard to get anyone to pose.

But Bill Page of Playboy said that Intour, the Cuban government's tourism arm, had provided a group of professional models from which the finalists were chosen.

The government has paid the modeling fees for the women selected.

They will appear nude above the waist only.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Country singer Tammy Wynette breached a contract to perform on a cruise ship but promoters can't collect damages because they replaced Wynette with a hotter singer, a Chancery judge ruled.

Wynette's lawyer, S. Ralph Gordon, argued that Wynette, "whose career had peaked some years prior, was replaced with the hottest female artist on the country music charts," Reba McEntire.

But promoters who said they lost more than $250,000 in the deal filed a lawsuit against Wynette, whose hits include "Stand by Your Man" and "D-I-V-O-R-C-E."

Wynette's husband-manager, George Richey, agreed in April 1985 that Wynette and her band would perform on the cruise ship Emerald Seas in December 1985, in exchange for 13 cabins, food and drink for the band and $2,000.

Richey subsequently decided that Wynette instead should appear at that time in Las Vegas for more than $100,000. He testified before Chancellor C. Allen High that he made the Vegas deal only after trying to reach promoter Kelly Albert for more than two months. Richey said he assumed the cruise had been canceled.

In July 1985, the promoters signed McEntire, whose hits include "Whoever's in New England" and "Cathy's Clown."

LOS ANGELES — Vixen could use just a little more respect.

The all-woman heavy metal band is developing a loyal following but still gets backhanded compliments like, "Jan Kuehnemund is the best female guitarist around."

"It used to bother me, now we're just kinda used to it," says drummer Roxy Petrucci. "They really mean it as a compliment but it would be nice just to hear, 'They're a great band.'"

Petrucci says she, guitarist Kuehnemund, bassist Share Pedersen and vocalist Janet Gardner don't rely on sexuality to sell the band, but they don't hide it.

"Sex goes along with rock 'n' roll," she says. "It goes with the territory. Why hide it."

The Los Angeles band has recently completed tours with Ozzy Osbourne, the Scorpions and Bad Company.

Oil dips

NEW YORK (AP) — Oil prices eased back Thursday in sluggish trading that seemed to reflect the energy market has grown used to nightly bombing raids and missile attacks in the Middle East.

West Texas Intermediate oil for delivery in March settled at $21.71 per barrel, down 33 cents, at the New York Mercantile Exchange. In London, North Sea Brent Blend crude closed at $20.37 a barrel, down 19 cents, on the International Petroleum Exchange.

Natural gas prices were mixed. For delivery in March, natural gas fell .3 cent to $1.382 per 1,000 cubic feet.

Silver plunges

NEW YORK (AP) — The dollar held its ground against foreign currencies in light trading Thursday amid a lack of significant war and economic developments.

Gold fell in New York while silver plunged 14.7 cents a troy ounce to $3.761 on the Commodity Exchange. It was the lowest spot silver price since the metal hit $3.73 an ounce in September 1974.

The dollar was up fractionally against the German mark in New York, closing at 1.4868 marks compared to late Wednesday's 1.4820.

The dollar also rose slightly against the Japanese yen, buying 132.35 yen compared to late Wednesday's 131.72.

The dollar was worth slightly more against the British pound in New York, where sterling weakened to $1.9565 from $1.9595 late Wednesday.

Other late dollar rates in New York, compared with late Wednesday, included: 1.2575 Swiss francs, up from 1.2500; 5.0550 French francs, up from 5.0390; 1,117.75 Italian lire, up from 1,114.25; and 1.1600 Canadian dollars, up from 1.1571.

Gold fell in New York, closing down $5.40 a troy ounce to $373.00 on the Commodity Exchange.

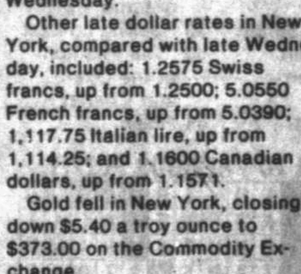

Stock market up

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market turned in a strong showing Thursday amid revived optimism about the outlook for domestic interest rates and progress in the war against Iraq.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials rose 24.01 to 2,643.07 on top of Wednesday's 15.84-point gain.

Advancing issues outnumbered declines by more than 3 to 1 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed stocks, with 1,231 up, 398 down and 379 unchanged.

Volume on the floor of the Big Board came to 223.15 million shares, against 169.44 million in the previous session.

Bold reforms loom for nation's banks

■ President Bush is expected to unveil some of the most radical reforms of the nation's banking system in 50 years during his State of the Union address next week.

By Terry Sacks
Copley News Service

SAN DIEGO — As President Bush prepares to unveil later this month what many believe to be revolutionary changes in the U.S. financial system, one of his senior lieutenants was here Wednesday (Jan. 23) stumping for doing away with laws that bar the IBMs, AT&Ts, and presumably even the K marts from owning the local bank.

Richard C. Breeden, chairman of the Securities and Exchange Commission, argued for dismantling the longstanding tradition in U.S. banking law that prohibits non-bank commercial firms from owning banks.

Breeden made the remarks at the annual conference of University of California San Diego's Securities Regulation Institute.

Breeden pitched the reforms as the Bush administration prepares to unleash the most far-reaching proposal in 50 years to change the U.S. banking system. Bush is expected to talk about the proposal in his State of the Union speech on Tuesday.

Breeden said he has been in close contact with Treasury Secretary Nicholas Brady, whose agency is writing the proposal. In an interview, Breeden said that while he has not seen the final document he was "encouraged" by the "no holds barred" process.

He said the Treasury proposal is "very likely to include a number of bold steps that are long overdue for action."

One industry analyst said Wednesday that unless Treasury "chickens out at the last minute," one of those steps will include a proposal to amend the Bank Holding Company Act that now prohibits commercial companies from owning banks.

Breeden said proponents of the restriction can justify it only for the sake of tradition. But he said the prohibition leads to strange results, including the fact that foreign companies can operate a U.S. bank but a U.S. company can't.

He pointed to Mitsubishi Heavy Industries' ownership of California's Union Bank as an example.

"Ironically, we allow U.S. banks to be owned by foreign banks with commercial affiliates, but we resolutely make it unlawful for IBM, General Electric, or AT&T to consider owning a bank, or at least one located in the United States," Breeden said.

Because non-banking firms control 80 percent of U.S. capital, banks are restricted from raising fresh capital at a time they need it most, Breeden said.

Bert Ely, a Washington, D.C., financial analyst, said Treasury probably will propose the changes that Breeden outlined. But he said the Bush administration is bracing for a defeat on any proposed changes in this session of Congress to amend the Bank Holding Company Act.

Federal agency turf wars and congressional skepticism in the wake of the savings & loan fiasco are formidable hurdles, Ely said.

"You take all of those together and modernization doesn't stand much of a chance this year," he said.

State gas allocation changing

■ RRC Chairman Jim Nugent sees a bright future for natural gas, and the RRC is overhauling the state gas allocation system to help producers.

By Mella McEwen
Staff Writer

While the events in the Middle East cloud the future for crude oil supplies and prices, Railroad Commission Chairman Jim Nugent says Texas gas producers are facing a brighter future.

Nugent

In Midland to speak at the monthly meeting of the Permian Basin Petroleum Association and their guests at the Midland Hilton, Nugent told the audience he and the other commissioners are working to overhaul the state's gas allocation system. He said plans are to have the proposed revisions available for publication and comment around Feb. 4.

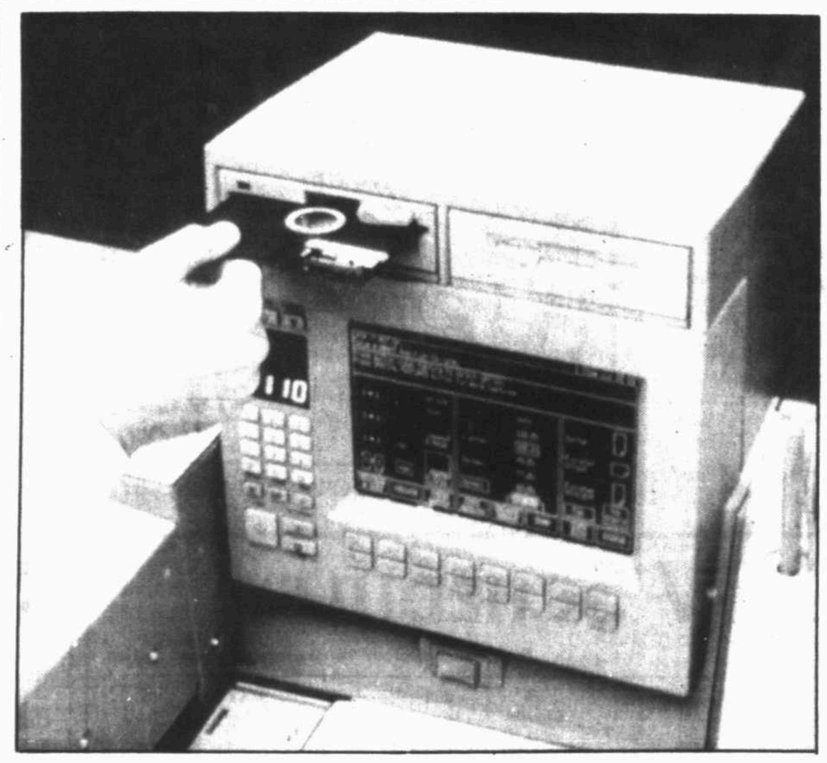

"I think it will bring fairness to the market, give producers the opportunity to produce natural gas," he said, adding that he estimates the revisions would reduce paperwork and save $4 million in administrative costs annually.

In addition, he said, the new system would encourage longer contracts, assist producers in finding additional markets, and give the Railroad Commission a better handle on state gas markets and production.

Among the changes would be requiring four schedules a year instead of four, which would save $61,000 in postage and handling, and cutting 100,000 T-35 forms and associated paperwork, which would save the commission $30,000 and producers $900,000 a year.

"Under the new system, we will be able to predict gas demand for the next year by the preceding September or October, based on prior-year production," he said. "We can establish a field allowable on a month-to-month basis for the entire year."

General Cinema to buy Harcourt

■ General Cinema Corp. has agreed to buy debt-laden publishing and insurance company Harcourt Brace Jovanovich in a deal worth more than $1.4 billion.

By Jonathan Yenkin
AP Business Writer

BOSTON (AP) — Itching to use some of its cash, General Cinema Corp., parent of the Neiman Marcus Group, agreed Thursday to buy the debt-laden publishing and insurance company Harcourt Brace Jovanovich Inc. in a proposed merger worth more than $1.4 billion.

A General Cinema spokesman said the deal may not totally satisfy the company's appetite for new business opportunities.

Harcourt, based in Orlando, Fla., has been burdened with nearly $2 billion in debt and acknowledged last fall it was considering selling the company.

At the same time, General Cinema, one of the country's largest theater chains with about 1,500 movie screens, has been sitting on $1.6 billion in cash and was rumored to be looking for a company to buy.

General Cinema stockpiled its cash primarily through the sale of its soft drink bottling business in March 1989 and the sale last October of its investment in Cadbury Schweppes PLC.

Peter Farwell, a spokesman for General Cinema, said the Newton-based company has been anxious to find a good investment for its money. "We've looked at a lot of opportunities over the past three or four years," he said.

General Cinema said the purchase of Harcourt will be funded out of its cash balances. While the deal is expected to depress General Cinema's earnings for a couple of years, the company still has available financing to consider other possible acquisitions, Farwell said.

"This merger represents a new beginning for one of America's great publishing houses," said John Herrington, chairman of Harcourt.

Herrington

Peter Jovanovich, president and chief executive officer, said he was "pleased that this merger will help us preserve the company and make it grow."

Harcourt amassed a huge debt in a recapitalization in 1987 that was designed to thwart a takeover effort by British publisher Robert Maxwell.

Interest payments due on that debt were scheduled to rise sharply next year, and the company has been exploring its alternatives for several months. Some analysts said a sale was the best hope for the company.

Bert Boksen, an analyst who follows the publishing industry for Raymond, James & Associates Inc. in St. Petersburg, Fla, said General Cinema was "getting a bargain basement price. It's probably half of what (Harcourt) would have fetched a couple of years ago."

But Boksen said Harcourt's problem was its debt, "not an operating problem."

The opening of trading in both stocks was delayed for about two hours on the New York Stock Exchange pending the announcement. By late afternoon, Harcourt was down 12.5 cents a share at $1.12½ while General Cinema was unchanged at $20.37½ a share.

Harcourt, which publishes textbooks, psychological tests and general interest books, also is an underwriter for life, health and accident insurance. For the 12 months ended Sept. 30, the company reported a net loss of $26.3 million on revenues of $1.4 billion.

General Cinema earned $111.3 million on revenue of $2.1 billion for the fiscal year that ended Oct. 31.

Instant mortgages can be more costly

By Jane Bryant Quinn

NEW YORK--Scratch a real-estate agent and you'll find a wannabe mortgage broker. After finding you a house, agents want to be able to turn to a computer terminal and rustle you up a mortgage, too.

Quinn

New government regulations--or rather, deregulation--will soon give this infant mortgage-making system a leg up--although not quite as firm a leg as was originally proposed to Congress in September. For borrowers, instant mortgage commitments are quick and easy, but could be costly over the long run.

Current law prohibits real-estate agents from taking fees for referring buyers to specific mortgage lenders. Congress felt, correctly, that agents would be tempted to recommend lenders who paid the biggest kickbacks rather than the ones with the best consumer rates.

But blatant violations of the law occur--ones which the feds haven't bothered to address. Mortgage companies have offered agents $100 gift certificates, $1,000 for two completed referrals per month, and trips to Hawaii. A Michigan court decision muddied the waters in 1984 by concluding that these payments were not criminal in nature. After that, any illusion of enforcement stopped (although kickbacks are prohibited in some states).

In 1986, Citicorp made an end run around the federal law with a system known as MortgagePower. Its full-dress, computerized version, installed in the office of a real estate agent, not only displays Citicorp's mortgage products. It also lets the agent enter the data that will give you, the borrower, an instant thumbs up or thumbs down on a mortgage application.

Citicorp doesn't pay for these loans. Instead, the agent charges you for the loan application. The Department of Housing and Urban Development gave Citicorp a letter declaring that MortgagePower broke no federal rules. But when competitors asked for similar letters, "They were told that HUD wasn't giving more letters. Or else they were put on hold, which gave Citicorp an inside track," says HUD general counsel Frank Keating. He ascribed the lapse to "a previous administration."

MortgagePower has been hugely successful, even though its interest rates and fees may be higher than other lenders offer. Lazy or unknowledgeable home-buyers take what the real-estate agent dishes up rather than finding a more competitive loan.

Other computerized systems show real-estate agents the going rates of a variety of lenders. With some, a person licensed to originate mortgages (and collect fees) can pre-qualify a home-buyer for a loan and initiate the application.

One such: Homenet, in the New York metropolitan area, which displays information from 50 national and local lenders. Price: One-half of 1 percent of the loan, although Homenet's Matthew Broderick says that the lenders reduce their costs by the same amount.

Early next year, HUD expects to level the playing field, Keating says, by allowing competitors to Citicorp. However, the deal for consumers may not be good as he outlined in his September testimony. Then, Keating said that any system accessible from a real-estate office would have to display loans from competing lenders. But Citicorp Mortgage chairman Robert Horner is arguing, apparently successfully, that since Citicorp can't grant commitments for other lenders' mortgages, other mortgages shouldn't have to appear on Citi's screen.

Keating now envisions a regulation requiring real-estate agents merely to install the systems of competing lenders--if other lenders happen to knock at their door. If not, Citicorp could retain its monopoly. The law against kickbacks would be clarified and enforced through a new HUD office.

The amount that a real-estate agent could charge you for loan prigination would be capped at perhaps $250. Warren Lasko, executive vice president of War takes shine off gold

By Mariann Caprino
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — For centuries, gold has provided safe haven for wartime investments, but as prices stumble in the wake of the Persian Gulf war, it seems the metal is not the precious hedge against world turmoil it once was.

The supply of gold worldwide is vast, but unlike bonds, certificates of deposit and other investments, gold pays no interest, said August F. Arace, a co-portfolio manager at the Tucker Anthony Inc. investment firm.

When interest rates are outpacing the rate of inflation, many investors prefer to reap constant, reliable returns from safe, interest-bearing investments, rather than bet on the direction of gold prices.

With interest rates on 30-year Treasury bonds hovering above 8 percent and inflation at about 6 percent, for example, holders of these securities have a positive rate of return.

Putting money in gold, on the other hand, is far riskier.

Consider that the cash price of gold reached a 1990 low of $346 a troy ounce in mid-June, then shot up to $414 after Iraq invaded Kuwait on Aug. 2.

Appetite for the metal peaked on Jan. 15, the U.N.-imposed deadline for Iraq's withdrawal, when investors snapped up a record 31,000 ounces of American Eagle coins, close to the monthly average of coin sales during all of last year, U.S. Mint figures show.

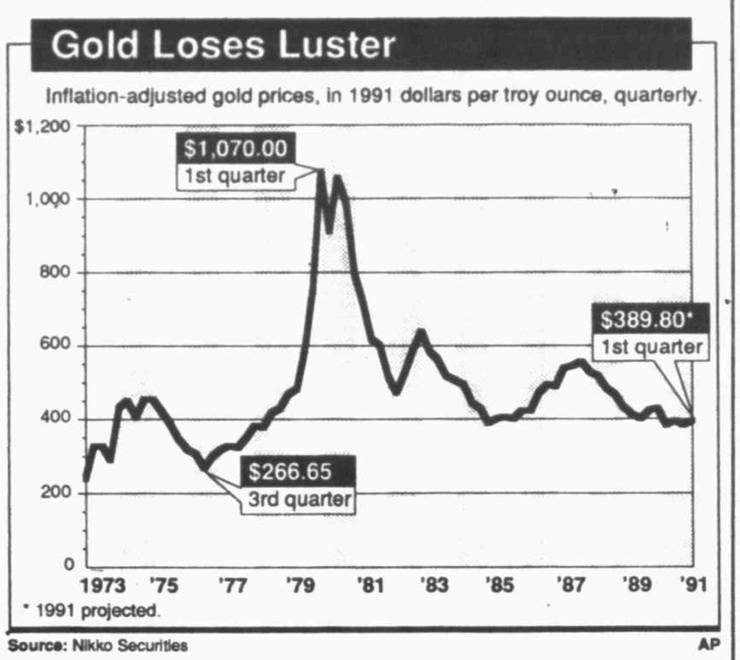

"People thought if there were a serious war, gold would shoot up," Arace said. In an attempt to explain the mass psychology behind the move, he noted that "a lot of people were brought up in a high-inflation period and they think (inflation) will be a problem" and gold would be the hedge.

So far the popular thinking has been wrong. On world metal markets, gold prices collapsed about $30 an ounce when it appeared the allied attack would result in a quick victory.

Despite sobering reassessments of how long the war might last, gold prices have yet to recover. On Thursday, gold traded at the $373-an-ounce level in the cash market in London. Moreover, silver, platinum and palladium prices are hitting new lows and gold could follow them, Arace said.

Precious metals experts say gold won't strengthen dramatically unless inflation accelerates and interest rates fall to the point where fixed-rate investments essentially are money losers.

While that may be unlikely now, "the history of wars shows that the longer and deeper they are, the more inflation they cause," said Richard Sylla, a professor at New York University's Stern School of Business.

American Airlines pilots warned not to expect quick resolutions

DALLAS (AP) — The union that represents pilots of American Airlines told its members Thursday not to expect a quick resolution to contract talks.

Negotiators from the Allied Pilots Association and the airline have struggled for 16 months to create a new contract to replace the one that expired Jan. 1, 1990.

The union presented its newest proposal to the airline Wednesday night. It seeks lower pay increases than previously asked for but higher than American's latest public offer.

The union also seeks an end to the two-tier pay scale implemented during the 1980s. Most of American's 8,700 pilots are now on the so-called B scale that pays lower wages.

American spokesman John Hotard said the company was studying the new offer Thursday and had no comment about it.

"They're talking about the substantive issues. That's a good sign," Hotard said.

But he added, "We still don't know if this will go to a successful conclusion."

The message on American's hotline for pilots had not changed in a week Thursday. But the union's hotline advised pilots: "Do not expect a quick resolution to these negotiations. It is possible that mediation may fail to produce an agreement."

The union's hotline also told pilots not to rely on news accounts of the negotiations.

The talks had a new urgency when they resumed before a federal mediator in Washington Jan. 7.

The two sides then had traded barbs over holiday flight cancellations. The airline accused pilots of disrupting the schedule by illegally staging a "sickout." Pilots said American promised a schedule to passengers that was more than the Fort Worth-based carrier could deliver.

Both sides say they have been serious and there has been agreement on some issues. But the sides may revisit issues that seem settled when they discuss larger disputes, union spokesman Tom Hunt said.

"It could go either way, just as easily toward an impasse as toward an agreement," Hunt said.

Declaration of an impasse by the mediator would start a 30-day cooling off period. If there is no agreement by the end of the 30 days, the union's members would be allowed to strike.

Hunt said the union's strike preparedness committee has obtained office space in American's hub cities to be used if a strike ensues. The union has even obtained permits to picket at airports and printed signs, he said.

"We will be prepared to shut American Airlines down," Hunt said. "They know that. They know now we have the organization in place."

Fares hiked after Eastern demise

DALLAS (AP) — The demise of Eastern Airlines will cost air passengers in cities where the carrier often fired the first shot in fare wars.

But most of the changes, including the elimination of $79 flights between New York and Florida cities, will not take effect until Feb. 1, representatives of the airlines said.

"We are going through and removing a myriad of Eastern Airlines special fares that we had matched for competitive reasons," said John Hotard, spokesman for Fort Worth-based American Airlines.

Eastern, hoping to improve its cash flow as it pushed through bankruptcy reorganization, offered discount fares between many major markets in the East. Labor problems and the bankruptcy process beset Eastern for nearly three years before it ended service Friday night.

Other airlines had matched Eastern's low fares, primarily to its Miami hub and other Florida cities. They moved quickly to boost the fares and cut losses that have been intensified by high jet fuel prices.

"We had to match Eastern in order to remain competitive," United spokeswoman Sara Dornacker said. "Obviously they (the routes) were not lucrative."

"Fares in many markets had not been economically sound and did not cover the cost of operations," said Ned Walker, spokesman for Houston-based Continental Airlines.

American, Continental, and Pan Am planned to eliminate the $79 one-way fare Eastern had between New York airports and cities in Florida. The next lowest fare for American and Pan Am will be $190 one-way.

Continental's discounts would leap to $139 one-way during off-peak flights and $159 one-way during peak flights, Walker said. He noted that two years ago fares in some of those markets were $298 round-trip. At $159 one-way, the round-trip would cost only $20 more now than two years ago, Walker said.

Continental and Pan Am have both declared bankruptcy in the last two months.

United is raising its lowest weekday fare between Chicago and Miami to $379 round-trip from the Eastern-led $198. United's $198 fare between Newark, N.J. and Orlando will go to $342, Ms. Dornacker said.

Arlington, Va.-based U.S. Air will raise its fare between Newark and Orlando to $301.

Delta Air Lines, Eastern's chief competitor at its Atlanta hub, has not announced an end date to its $158 and $198 fares between New York, Chicago and several Florida cities.

But Delta has led the scrapping for Eastern's routes and other assets.

Southland seeks vote on new plan

DALLAS (AP) — Southland Corp. will ask all its creditors to vote on a new bankruptcy reorganization plan after dissenters agreed to changes in it.

The parties Wednesday agreed to an option that will allow creditors to raise their stake in the restructured Southland at the expense of the company's founders, the Thompson family.

U.S. Bankruptcy Judge Harold Abramson approved the presentation of the changes and ordered them sent to the company's creditors.

Creditors must return a vote by the end of business Feb. 16. Abramson scheduled a confirmation hearing Feb. 22.

Southland, owner of the 7-Eleven convenience store chain, filed to reorganize under Chapter 11 of the U.S. Bankruptcy Code in October, saying it was overburdened by debt from its 1987 leveraged buyout.

The company filed a "prepackaged" plan, one already approved by creditors, in hopes of getting through the bankruptcy process sooner.

But those hopes were dashed when Abramson opened confirmation hearings last month. Dissident bondholders said the creditors' vote was conducted too quickly and missed individual investors whose bonds were held by securities houses that voted in bulk.

The judge ordered Southland to prepare a new summary of the plan so creditors could recast their vote. That package contained letters supporting the plan from Southland officials and others and letters against the plan from the dissidents.

With changes agreed to by the parties Wednesday, the dissidents withdrew their letters.

The fundamentals of the restructuring were unchanged by the new agreement. Creditors would get a 25 percent stake in the new company. Existing stockholders including the founding Thompson family would retain a 5 percent stake. And Southland's Japanese affiliates, Ito-Yokado Group Ltd. and Seven-Eleven Japan Co. Ltd., would get 70 percent.

In addition to the new debt and securities offered Southland's creditors, the new agreement creates warrants that allow them to purchase holdings of the Thompsons. If all warrants were exercised by the creditors, the Thompsons' stake in Southland would fall 2.5 percent.

The new agreement also gives investors holding 16.75 percent subordinated debentures the choice of accepting either warrants or a package that includes cash and senior notes.

Southland wants the bankruptcy plan confirmed in order to take advantage of a $430 million buyout offer by the Japanese affiliates. That offer expires March 15.

NUGENT: Sees new markets

(From 8C)

He stressed that, with the new rules, producers need to get G-10 forms witnessed in order to make them more reliable, and said gas wells must be produced at their allowable or lose it, and promised that allocations will not be reduced more than 10 percent.

"Our gas system today does not work. It is not fair, it isnot equitable. It does not allow you to produce your fair share of gas. These new rules will bring proration back to where it should be," he told the gathering.

In addition to a more equitable gas allocation system, Nugent said the state's gas producers can look forward to new markets that will be created in large part to environmental concerns.

"Natural gas is viewed as the premium fuel of the 1990s," he said.

Nugent pointed out that the Clean Air Act of 1989 will spur the conversion of millions of vehicles to compressed natural gas nationwide, and state-level clean air acts will create new markets and help "create thousands of jobs in Texas as the state leads the drive toward clean air."

Natural gas is the most readily available substitute for foreign oil to industry, transportation and utilities, and environmental legislation will boost the demand for the clean-burning fuel. Legislation will require plants and electric utilities to cut their emissions, prompting them to convert to natural gas, and fleets nationwide will convert to CNG.

"If fleet vehicles, which are stored in one place and refueled at the same place were to convert to CNG, it would reduce oil imports by 140 million barrels a year," he told the audience.

"Natural gas is certain to win a larger market share of the energy mix. We need that market, and we need a national energy policy to stabilize or diminish our dependence on imported oil and keep the domestic industry alive."

QUINN: Shop around for rates

the Mortgage Bankers Association, considers that far too high. His proposal: something in the $100 to $150 range.

Here's the bottom line for consumers: (1) Although more lenders will be able to display their mortgages in real-estate offices, many agents will continue to show just one. (2) Agents will be required to disclose their fees and say that you can probably find better terms somewhere else. (3) You should do so. An extra quarter point today might cost you $6,750 on a 30-year $100,000 mortgage. Speaking technically, that ain't chicken feed.

Analysis

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices showed widespread gains today in buying encouraged by hopes for continuing declines in interest rates.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials climbed 28.71 to 2,647.77 by 2 p.m. on Wall Street.

Gainers outnumbered losers by more than 3 to 1 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues, with 1,118 up, 322 down and 399 unchanged.

Analysts said the market seemed to have aborbed the idea that the war against Iraq would take some time to produce any conclusive results.

At the same time, they said investors remained generally optimistic that U.S.-led forces would prevail.

Volume on the Big Board came to 164.78 million shares with two hours to go.

STOCKQUOTE HOTLINE

WHAT IS STOCKQUOTE HOTLINE?
Stockquote Hotline gives you the latest stock prices direct from the wires of the Associated Press. Over 9,000 stocks are listed from NYSE, AmEx, and OTC sources; all available 24 hours a day. You can receive up to 10 quotes with one easy phone call.

HOW TO USE STOCKQUOTE HOTLINE:
1) Call the Stockquote Hotline at 560-2400; enter the category number which is 9988.

2) You will be asked to enter your stock ticker symbol. These are based on industry-standard symbols, which can be found in a Standard & Poor's Ticker guide, or by calling your local stock broker.

3) Once you've entered the numberical code for the ticker symbol, press the Star Key(*) and you will hear the current price and net change from the last Associated Press update; which is a few minutes behind market activity.

4) After the stock is quoted, you will be asked to enter another ticker symbol. You now have 2 options:
- You may request a quote for another stock by repeating steps 2 & 3.
- You may request additional information on the stock just quoted by once more pressing the Star Key(*). Now the volume, high and low will be given, and then you will be asked to enter another ticker code.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

EE bond interest deferred

By Bill Doyle

Q. I am single, re ' d and cashed $2,000 of Series EE, U.S. Savings Bonds, in October. her than the bonds, my total 1990 income amounted to $4,500. I know EE bond interest is deferred from income tax. Will I owe any tax on that bond interest now?

A. That depends on how much interest you received when you redeemed the bonds. The interest is the difference between the price you paid for the bonds and the amount you received upon cashing them.

Doyle

Along with most people, you probably did not report the interest on your annual income tax returns as it accrued. As a result the interest was deferred from federal income tax until the bonds were redeemed. U.S. Savings Bond interest is never subject to state and local income tax.

Add that interest to your other income. If the total is less than $5,300 and you are under age 65, you owe no 1990 federal income tax and do not even have to file a return. If you are 65 or older, that filing threshold number is $6,100.

To head off a batch of mail, here are the filing thresholds for other folks.

For married people living together at the end of the year and neither spouse being claimed as a dependent on another return, it's $9,550 if both are under 65, $10,200 if one is 65 or younger and $10,850 if both are 65 or older. It's $2,050 for married people living apart or filing separate returns.

For a head of household, it's $6,800 if 64 or younger and $7,600 if 65 or older. For a qualifying widow or widower under 65, it's $7,500 and $8,150 if 65 or older.

Q. How will I know how much interest I receive when I cash my Series E bonds?

A. The bank or other savings bond paying agent will give you a Form 1099-INT, listing the exact amount of that interest. One copy goes to you, another to the Internal Revenue Service to feed into its computers.

You might get a 1099 each time you redeem an E or EE bond or a U.S. Savings Note. Or you might get one 1099 in January, showing the total interest you receive from all Es, EEs and savings notes you cashed at the same institution the previous year. Savings bond paying agents have the choice of doing it either way.

Q. At retirement in 1982, I was happy to exchange all the E and EE bonds I had purchased over 35 years for Series HH bonds, thus keeping the accumulate E and EE bond interest deferred from federal income tax. Meanwhile, I receive interest from the HH bonds.

My HH bonds will mature in 1992. Can I renew the HH bonds or is there any other way I can continue to defer the E and EE interest? I shudder at the thought of paying tax on all that interest in 1992.

A. You won't have to do a thing. HHs, originally issued with 10-year maturities, have been given 10-year extended maturities. As a result, they reach final maturity in 20 years. You can keep your old E and EE bond interest deferred from tax until the year 2002.

H bonds, the predecessors to HHs, were given two 10-year extended maturities. Hs still outstanding finally mature in 30 years.

But brace yourself for lower interest payments. HHs issued in 1982 pay 8.5 percent annual interest by check twice a year. HHs issued since November 1985 — as well as HHs and Hs entering extended maturities since that time — pay only 6 percent.

After your HHs go into an extended maturity in 1992, your semiannual interest payments will drop from $42.50 to $30 per $1,000 bond.

Q. The last two semiannual interest checks for my Series HH bonds have not arrived. Where should I inquire about this?

A. Write to The Bureau of the Public Debt, P.O. Box 1328, Parkersburg, WV 26102-1328. In your letter, include your bonds' serial numbers, issue dates and the months for which interest you were due has not received.

First Texas bank failure

FARMERS BRANCH, Texas (AP) — Metropolitan National Bank of Farmers Branch Thursday became the first bank in Texas to fail this year.

The bank was closed by the Office of the Comptroller of the Currency and turned over to the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp.

The bank's eight offices will reopen Friday as branches of Comerica Bank-Texas of Dallas.

Metropolitan National Bank had assets of $93.9 million. Comerica Bank will assume about $91.4 million in 14,800 deposit accounts and will pay the FDIC a $2 million premium for the purchase.

The FDIC advanced about $53.6 million to Comerica to facilitate the transaction. The regulator will retain assets worth about $58.1 million and recover some of its outlay through the sale of those assets.

McGovern considers running for president — again

N.Y. Times News Service

DURHAM, N.H. — The year is 1991 and America is at war in the Persian Gulf. But for a moment Thursday it seemed as if it was the early 1970s and a different war, for here was George S. McGovern on a college stage talking about running for president.

"I have not yet made the decision, but I am seriously considering it," former Senator McGovern told an overflow audience of 850 students and faculty members at the University of New Hampshire. His suggestion drew cheers and prolonged applause on a campus not noted for political activism.

Donna Melillo, a 42-year-old psychologist with the school's counseling service, said, "It's great to hear him talk again." Dr. Melillo said she had voted for Mr. McGovern when he was the Democratic nominee in 1972 and, running on a platform of opposition to the Vietnam War, lost badly to President Nixon. He carried only Massachusetts and the District of Columbia.

"It sounds kind of hookey, but he appeals to what is best in us, to honor, and not to the greed of the '80s," Dr. Melillo said.

The former senator said that if he does decide to run again, "I would not plan to base my campaign primarily on opposition to the war in the Persian Gulf."

He said that while he would have preferred that the United States had continued with economic sanctions against Iraq and not gone to war in the gulf, "As an American, I want our forces to prevail."

McGovern, 68, said that in the upcoming election he was primarily concerned with America's deteriorating economy and the erosion of the nation's political system. Borrowing a catch phrase from the Republicans, McGovern said that what America now needs is "a new definition of patriotism" that gets beyond symbolic flag waving.

Under this new patriotism, he said, it would no longer be patriotic to accept huge national debts, to spend hundreds of billions of dollars for defense against the Soviet Union with the cold war over, to tolerate pollution or to go along with "the philosophy of greed and breakdown of federal supervision that produced the savings and loan scandal."

"It is not patriotic to commit young Americans to war unless our national security clearly requires it," McGovern added. "It is certainly not patriotic to wink and nod as race relations come under new strains."

Looking tanned and relaxed, McGovern said, "I would prefer that a younger, less battle-scarred candidate would now come forward" who provided a strong new voice for the Democrats. "But if that is not to be, I believe that I am ready in heart, mind and body to raise the Democratic standard."

He noted that so far, no Democrat has seriously begun a campaign for the presidency, and in particular that not a single Democrat has opened a campaign operation here in New Hampshire, with its influential first-in-the-nation primary.

PART-TIME INCOME AVAILABLE

The Midland Reporter-Telegram has several routes which need to be filled with qualified, responsible individuals. Now is one of the best times ever to obtain a route in your area!

Often asked questions:

Is it worthwhile for adults also?

Yes! Our current carrier force is already 65% adult and 35% youth. Morning newspaper routes are attractive for:

- ADULTS who have full-time jobs, yet want to supplement their income with a steady part-time job.
- MOTHERS who can't justify a small job and daycare, because as a carrier, you do not need daycare!
- COLLEGE STUDENTS needing a part-time job which will work with classes!
- YOUTHS who are involved in afternoon school functions, but want to work!
- SENIOR CITIZENS wanting regular exercise, added income, or just want to work with people, neighbors, and friends.

How much money can I make as a carrier?

Depending on the size of the route(s) from $200 to $600 monthly! Some motor routes make even more. Although no motor routes are expected to be available, depending on your service record, you may qualify to move up to a motor route later!

How long does it take?

The actual delivery takes 1 - 2 hours Monday - Saturday, and 2 - 3 hours on Sunday, again depending on the size of the route(s). Also, a few hours a month are needed to collect from subscribers. Many carriers choose to handle some of this by putting envelopes in subscribers' papers. Collecting in person will be necessary though!

When do papers have to be delivered by?

6 AM Monday - Friday and 7 AM on Saturday and Sunday

Do I ever get a day off?

The job requires a 7-day a week commitment. However, carriers do take days off by finding a friend or family member to substitute for them!
