Intensified Protests Urged

By The Associated Press

Poland's outlawed Solidarity union is urging Poles to intensify martial law protests — to "strengthen the position of representatives of the church" in secret talks with the government on a "political solution" to the crisis.

"If we display our intention to fight against the regime of (Premier Wojciech) Jaruzelski, these negotiations can make possible a way out of this blind alley in which society and the Polish state now find themselves," read a clandestine Solidarity bulletin circulating in Warsaw.

The Dec. 23 bulletin, quoted in uncensored reports reaching the West Friday, disclosed that Poland's Roman Catholic bishops have been meeting secretly with top Communist Party officials to seek a "political solution" to the crisis.

"Every action of protest, even the most insignificant, strikes a blow against (the military government) and hastens the time of returning the army to the barracks," the bulletin said.

In Vienna, two envoys sent to Poland by Pope John Paul II returned to the Austrian capital today but revealed nothing of what they did during their six-day trip. Archbishop Luigi Poggi, who met with Jaruzelski, and the Rev. Janusz Bolononk refused comment. Poggi said they were "very very tired."

John Paul sent the two churchmen to Warsaw on Dec. 19 in an apparent attempt to negotiate an end to the crisis in his native country. The Solidarity bulletin did not specify whether Poggi and Bolononk were involved in the secret talks.

The union's communique stopped short of suggesting armed rebellion. A protest to be emulated, it said, was the one at the giant Ursus tractor plant near Warsaw where, it said, only one tractor was turned out in the first week of martial law.

The bulletin called on Communist Party members to resign and for Warsaw residents to place candles in their windows to mourn those "murdered" by the military and police.

Although the government has acknowledged seven deaths in clashes since martial law was imposed Dec. 13, unconfirmed reports reaching the West say as many as 200 have died.

The tract did not mention the 1,276 striking coal miners in Piast, who Poland's official media said remained underground today despite emotional appeals from their families to come home.

A similar number of miners from the adjoining Ziemowit mine gave up their occupation Thursday to be with their families for Christmas, according to Warsaw Radio broadcasts monitored in Europe.

Throughout Christmas Day, the radio broadcast appeals from wives and mothers for the Piast miners to give up their protest.

In a voice choked by sobs, one woman was heard pleading with her husband over a telephone line to the Piast pit: "Come out as soon as possible, Sylwek. Today 20 miners have come to the surface and they did not face any consequences."

Another woman pleaded, "Come out my darling. I cannot bear it any longer. I have talked to the colonel and he told me that nothing will happen to you when you are out. There is no point staying down there any longer."

Wife, Child Injured. . .

One-Car Road Mishap Fatal To Snyder Man

R. D. Phillips, 19, who lived at 501 34th St., was killed and his wife and infant daughter were seriously injured Thursday night in a one-car crash 13 miles west of Snyder on U. S. Highway 180.

He was pronounced dead at the scene by Justice of the Peace Dan Callaway of Snyder after the car crashed into a bridge abutment and overturned. All three occupants were thrown from the vehicle.

Mrs. Phillips and their infant daughter, Brooke Lynn, were taken to Lubbock General Hospital. Both of the child's legs were broken, and Mrs. Phillips suffered a broken ankle and a back injury as well as cuts and bruises. They were reported to be in satisfactory condition.

The mishap occurred as they were returning to Snyder from Lamesa where they had attended a family Christmas gathering earlier in the evening.

Funeral services for Phillips have been set for 2 p. m. Sunday at Colonial Hill Baptist Church. The Rev. Miller F. Robinson, pastor, will officiate. Burial will be in the Ira Cemetery, under direction of Bell-Seale Funeral Home.

In addition to his wife and daughter, survivors include his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Dixon Phillips of Snyder; two sisters, Marla Phillips of Snyder and Mrs. Pam Altman of Lamesa; a brother, Dean Weber of Alamo; and a grandfather, R. G. Phillips of Winters.

New Year To Usher In New Duties For DPS

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The Department of Public Safety gets two new jobs on New Year's Day — keeping track of what medicine you're taking and making sure you have automobile liability insurance.

Car insurance and "triplicate prescriptions" become mandatory Friday, thanks to the 1981 Legislature. There also will be changes in the way property is appraised for taxes.

The auto insurance law requires you to carry at least $20,000 coverage for medical expenses and $5,000 for property damage. Drivers caught without insurance could be fined $75 for the first violation and $200 for subsequent offenses.

DPS Col. Jim Adams said his troopers will check for insurance during traffic stops and accident investigations. Adams said drivers must carry a copy of their insurance policy or a company-issued card.

Issuing cards to all policy holders could be burdensome for insurance agents, according to an agents organization.

"Obviously, agents are caught in a moral dilemma — on the one hand wishing to fulfill their responsibilities to their clients, on the other resisting the imposition of a task that can literally paralyze an agency for weeks," said a newsletter from the Professional Insurance Agents of Texas.

The newsletter pointed out the new law does not require the issuance of identification cards. The newsletter recommended that agents share the burden with insurance companies. Several major companies are sending cards to their customers.

Ernest Stromberger of the Independent Insurance Agents of Texas said most Texas drivers should receive insurance identification cards in the mail by Jan. 1.

Jerry Johns, president of the Southwestern Insurance Information Service, said mandatory insurance does not mean every driver will have the required coverage. Therefore, he said, Texans should not drop insurance coverage protecting them against damage done by uninsured drivers.

Current figures indicate that only 74 percent of the drivers involved in wrecks carry insurance.

DPS' other new job, keeping track of prescriptions, is a result of Gov. Bill Clements' War on Drugs. Prescriptions for more dangerous drugs must be written in triplicate. The doctor keeps one copy, the pharmacist gets one and the third goes to the DPS.

The form requires specific information, including the patient's name, address and age.

DPS will computerize its records, and the law makes it a third degree felony to improperly release the information. Only investigators from the boards of Medical Examiners, Podiatry Examiners, Dental Examiners, Veterinary Medicine Examiners, and Pharmacy will be allowed

Lead Reported In Dozier Kidnapping

VERONA, Italy (AP) — Police said today they had discovered "useful new elements" in their investigation of the kidnapping of U.S. Brig. Gen. James L. Dozier.

"We're following a lead," said an anti-terrorist officer who asked not to be identified. "Things are improving." He refused to elaborate.

In Milan, police identified a third suspect arrested in a bar raid last week as Maria Grazia Chiari, 24, believed to be a member of the Red Brigades terrorist group. Police have not said what role, if any, they believed the suspects played in the kidnapping.

Under Italian law, suspects may be held for as long as three days without being charged.

The Red Brigades, Italy's most feared terrorist group, claimed responsibility for the Dec. 17 kidnapping of Dozier, 50, from his Verona apartment. Police said the armed kidnappers posed as plumbers to enter the apartment.

Meanwhile, Dozier's wife, Judith, spent Christmas with relatives and four U.S. military officers and their families. She attended a Christmas service in the military chapel at the NATO base where her husband was the highest-ranking U.S. officer.

Mrs. Dozier, 47, was accompanied by the couple's children, Cheryl and Scott, and Dozier's younger sister, Joan Townsend of Houston, Texas.

Mrs. Dozier "wanted everything that was scheduled before the kidnapping to go ahead," said Col. Luciano Dalcheggio, spokesman for the NATO base.

Dozier's captors have made no demands and circulated no evidence such as photographs or tape recordings to prove he is alive.

The Red Brigades kidnapped and killed former Premier Aldo Moro in 1978. The group claimed the Dozier kidnapping was part of its attack on the North Atlantic Treaty Organization and the United States.

Weekend update

China Grain Crop Up

PEKING (AP) — China is predicting a 7½ million to 10 million ton increase in its 1981 grain harvest despite a 6.4 million-acre decrease in the amount of land used for grain crops, the official Xinhua news agency reported today.

Premier Zhao Ziyang had said earlier the 1981 harvest would approach the 1979 record of 332 million tons. Last year's grain crop dropped to 318 million tons because of flooding and droughts.

Grain output has been rising by an average of 10.5 million tons, or 3.5 percent, over the last four years, Xinhua said. It did not explain the phenomenon, presumably attributable to the planting of higher yield-per-acre strains of grain.

Xinhua said more land was turned over this year to cash crops, such as cotton, tea and tobacco.

It said the cotton crop is expected to be up by 150,000 tons, sugar crops 10 percent and oil-bearing crops 17 percent, with tobacco and tea also expected to "rise remarkably."

Methanol Getting Test

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Conoco Inc. branches in Ponca City, Houston and Stamford, Conn., are conducting a long-term experiment to test methanol as a substitute fuel for powering cars.

The Ponca City test vehicles, all 1981 Ford Fairmonts, are modified to burn methanol and will be operated under normal work-day driving conditions by engineers and research specialists.

Should the vehicles stand up under two or three years' use of methanol, Conoco would consider it a prime candidate to replace gasoline in at least some engines, Conoco officials said.

Tanks Ripped By Blast

WICHITA FALLS, Texas (AP) — An explosion heard across a 30-mile area of Northwest Texas set off fires in two natural gas processing tanks at a small plant 15 miles south of here, authorities said.

The blast rattled windows in Wichita Falls and was heard by residents of Burkburnett, some 30 miles to the north, according to reports received by law enforcement agencies.

Firefighters from five area departments rushed to the scene, but efforts to contain the blazes were hampered by intense heat.

No injuries were reported.

The SDN Column

Among all the tinsel and brightly colored packages that appeared at our house during the Christmas season is a new version of an old friend.

We refer to the 1982-83 edition of the Texas Almanac.

This awesome compilation of facts about our state has served yours truly in a variety of ways over many years.

It provided information needed for courses during our public school and college days. It also provided answers to questions asked by offspring when they were "growing up." Now, it continues help out when we need facts and figures to embellish news stories. It even provides answers to some of the questions addressed to "Ask Us."

The Texas Almanac is published every two years by The Dallas Morning News. Some other states may have a similar book, but it they do, we have never encountered one. It can tell you all you want to know---almost---about Texas, ranging from the population figures for the past 130 years to political and business records. Naturally, it has become more diverse in its content over the years, and will continue to do so as the state grows and activities of its people expand.

However, we were a bit disappointed in one area when we glanced through the 1982-83 edition. The records on junior college sports completely ignore the Western Junior College Athletic Conference, which has eight members in Texas, including WTC. But we predict that Dr. Don Newbury, WTC President-Athletic Director, will take care of that by the time the next edition comes out.

Ask Us

Q.—Does the temperature ever get below zero in Texas and how low is the coldest it has ever been in West Texas?

A.—Yes. Sub-zero temperatures, although not frequent, are not unusual. The lowest reading we have heard of in West Texas (or the entire state) was -23F in Swisher County on Feb. 12, 1899.

Shelburne In JP 4 Race

T. E. Shelburne of Hermleigh became the second to announce that he will be a candidate for public office in Scurry County in the 1982 election.

Shelburne, Justice of the Peace in Precinct No. 4, said that he would be a candidate for re-election to that office.

Earlier, Dan Callaway, justice of the peace in Precinct No. 1, announced that he would seek re-election. Both will run in the Democratic Party Primary.

Candidates will file for places on the primary ballots from Jan. 1 through Feb. 1.

Local Financial Firms Offer New IRA Plans

New rules to become effective Jan. 1 are expected to generate new interest in Individual Retirement Accounts, and Snyder's financial firms are preparing to participate.

"We don't know all of the details, in fact it seems that nobody does, but we are going to offer the service to people in the Snyder area." That is a concensus quotation from officials at West Texas State Bank, Snyder National Bank, First National Bank, Snyder Savings and Loan, First Federal Savings and Loan and Homestate Savings and Loan. Homestate, the newest member of the Snyder financial community, does not expect to have its newly-approved branch open at the outset, but expects to be in business at 3405 College Ave. in about six weeks.

The new IRA rules stem from a change in 1982 tax laws which make many more people eligible. It also makes IRAs more attractive to prospective investors by raising the ceiling of allowable, tax-free IRA contributions.

The term "tax-free" may be misleading, but there is the prospect of tax relief, local financial firms reported. Taxes on funds committed to IRAs are delayed until retirement, which usually means that the individual involved will be in a lower income tax bracket when these funds become taxable. In some cases there may be no tax due at all.

The new rules permit an individual to invest as much as $2,000 annually in an IRA and deduct all of it from federal income tax for that year. For example, a person in the 33 percent tax bracket would save $660 in taxes immediately.

IRAs also offer future tax benefits, because interest earned on the money is not subject to income tax. A non-IRA investment of $2,000 for 20 years at 10 percent would yield $84,372. The same amount invested in an IRA at the same rate would yield $126,005. The $41,633 difference is realized because no tax is paid on the IRA interest.

In some cases, the new rules allow an investor to contribute to an IRA as many times in a given tax year as desired. And the

Questions A Problem For Reagan

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan had some problems a week ago when he tried to communicate his policies in the first week of the Polish crackdown.

He breezed through his opening statement at a news conference. It was when the questions began, that his agility failed him.

But then, this president has had few opportunities to practice the art of the presidential news conference. Last Thursday's was his sixth in the 11 months he has been in office.

As he was peppered with questions, he peppered his answers with the response that any detailed discussion had to be avoided so he would not tip his hand about future actions.

It was in the written statement, prepared and rehearsed before the president entered the East Room, that Reagan made news. It was there that he said, in precisely the chosen words, what he wanted to say: The Soviet Union was behind the swiftly imposed repression in Poland and "it would be naive" to think otherwise.

Then came the questions, including:

Mr. President, what does it all mean for U.S. relations with Poland and the Soviet Union?

"You're getting into the area there that I just don't feel that I can discuss — the area of initiatives and options that might be available as conditions develop that we may not be able to foresee, so I just am not going to answer questions or discuss what those initiatives might be or what our reaction might be.

A few more questions on Poland, then switch to the Middle East.

Do you think, Mr. President, that the Golan Heights should be returned to Syria?

"Now you are getting into the area of what is trying to be settled in the ... peace-making talks ... and therefore, it is not proper for me to comment on this. This is the very matter that is being negotiated."

Switch to taxes and the economy — often a favorite topic of the president.

Can you promise the American people and American business that the tax cut enacted during the first year of the Reagan administration "will not be pulled back or somehow delayed?"

"I sure can promise the American people that ... and I have no plans for increasing taxes in any way," Reagan responded, leaving no ifs, ands, or buts.

But that answer, near the end of the news conference, led Larry Speakes, a White House spokesman, to explain that what Reagan meant to say was that he might seek "loophole pluggers" intended to raise revenue by eliminating certain deductions and other tax breaks.

Our cells make uric acid

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I had three acute attacks of gout. The first attack came on suddenly. The pain was so intense that I couldn't walk. The doctor prescribed Zyloprim for uric acid, Naprosyn for the arthritic pain which I have in my fingers. The gout in my toe was arthritic gout.

I would like to know where the uric acid comes from. I am 80 years old, weigh 130 pounds, don't smoke and have a beer at dinnertime or one glass of wine. I have a brandy before going to bed. I keep busy in my orchard. Could it be the diet? I eat light, seldom eat pork. I eat beef, chicken, veal and keep away from salt.

DEAR READER — Most of the uric acid in our bodies comes from our own cells. This is true whether one has gout or not. The uric acid is a byproduct of the cells duplicating and regenerating themselves. In the process of making new nucleic acid we form uric acid. That is a very important point and explains why doctors today pay less attention to the diet and put more stress on medicines, such as Zyloprim (allopurinol) that act by preventing the formation of uric acid by our cells.

Diet is sometimes helpful but even the most severe diet will not decrease the uric acid levels more than about one point, and that is often not enough.

I am sending you The Health Letter number 16-10, Gout, The Uric Acid Disease. This does include the old gout diet which still has some merit. Others who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

Zyloprim is useful in preventing the formation of uric acid but it is not used to treat an acute attack of gout. The acute attack is caused by an inflammatory reaction to uric acid crystals that form in the joint. The big toe is a favorite place for this to occur. Colchicine, Indocin and Butazolidin are all medicines used to relieve an acute attack. Ben Franklin brought colchicine to the United States to treat his own gout. Other medicines are used to help your kidneys speed up the elimination of uric acid.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I am a 68-year-old woman with arthritis of the spine. I am putting in a pool hoping swimming will help me take off excess weight. I'm 5 feet 1 and weigh 154 pounds. What kind of exercises can one do besides swimming that would be of benefit?

DEAR READER — You are doing two things that are right, using a swimming pool for exercise because of your arthritis and making an effort to lose weight. Both will help.

Water helps to support the body weight, avoiding injury to arthritic joints that can occur with jogging, running or even with a lot of walking if your arthritis is severe.

Swimming is great but you can do all types of calisthenics in water. Hang on to the edge of the pool and kick your feet. Bob up and down in the water, whatever suits your fancy; movement is what counts. The best rhythmic movement is swimming but any water exercises will help you use calories.

Don't overdo it. A mistake many people with arthritis make is to try to do too much exercise. The joints should not be overworked, and water support of body weight helps prevent that.

Kenny Rogers To Star In 'Six Pack'

BRASELTON, Ga. (AP) — Country-music singer Kenny Rogers will star in a feature-length motion picture to be filmed in northeastern Georgia beginning next month.

"Six Pack" will be shot here and in the town of Buford, as well as in Atlanta, by 20th Century Fox, which said shooting begins Jan. 12.

Lynn Foster, a spokeswoman for the film division of the Georgia Department of Industry and Trade, said film crews expect to spend 10 weeks here creating the story of a down-and-out auto racer who befriends six troubled orphans.

Rogers is the star, but no information has been released about other possible cast members.

Lewis Braselton, mayor of the city founded 105 years ago by his ancestor, William Harrison Braselton, said a 20th Century Fox official contacted him recently and said the burg "was chosen out of 20 different cities. I guess Braselton was the most suitable."

Braselton is the site of Road Atlanta, a racetrack where the stock-car scenes probably will be shot, Ms. Foster said.

In Buford, city Clerk Judy Martin said residents are "tickled to death, especially with Kenny Rogers coming to town."

Biography Of Lennon Off

NEW YORK (AP) — A million-dollar deal for a biography of slain ex-Beatle John Lennon by Albert Goldman, author of a controversial biography of Elvis Presley, has fallen through, The New York Times reported today.

The agreement collapsed because of a disagreement between Goldman's agent, John Hawkins, and Avon Books over whether Avon could publish the paperback version before a British edition comes out, the Times said.

An agreement among Avon, William Morrow & Co. and Hawkins called for an advance of about $1 million, but a contract was not signed.

"Elvis," Goldman's scathing biography of Presley, angered many of the late singer's fans.

But Goldman said in a television interview Dec. 8 that he was more sympathetic to Lennon's life and work, and was apt to write a more favorable biography of the former Beatle.

Hawkins said the book would be published in England by Granda Publishing and he expects to work out arrangements for U.S. publication with another company.

HOSPITAL TREES JUDGED--Christmas trees at Cogdell Memorial Hospital were judged by Rex Robinson, chairman of the hospital's board of managers, and Donna Fowler. Reagans Opt For Ranch Gifts

WASHINGTON (AP) — Instead of buying Christmas presents for each other, President Reagan and his wife, Nancy, will buy something for their California ranch as a 30th wedding anniversary gift, a White House spokesman says.

Over the years, the Reagans have become "more practical" in their gift giving, said spokesman Mark Weinberg.

The Reagan's 30th anniversary is March 4.

The Reagans and two of the president's four children gathered Friday morning around a Christmas tree on the second floor living quarters of the White House.

The Reagans gave son Ron a portable stereo cassette player with earphones. Ron's wife, Doria, received a pair of earrings.

And Patti, the Reagans' daughter, received a pair of boots.

Patti gave her mother an exercise suit and leg warmers and Ron and Doria gave the president and first lady special neck pillows.

The first lady's parents, Dr. and Mrs. Loyal Davis, sent their daughter a necklace that had belonged to Mrs. Reagan's grandmother and a pair of earrings that had belonged to Mrs. Davis.

Later Friday, the first family hosted a Christmas dinner of turkey with chestnut stuffing, candied sweet potatoes with marshmallow, cranberry sauce, turnips, green beans and monkey bread, which is an egg bread. For dessert, there was a frozen "Christmas log" with a pistachio filling.

Long-Standing Battle Rises On Cholesterol

WASHINGTON (AP) — A long-standing battle may be warming up between nutrition advocates and those who think government should not be telling people what to eat.

Livestock producer groups, generally, have bristled at what they consider ill-founded claims that fat and cholesterol found in meat contributes to heart disease and other disorders. Meat industry representatives also have been critical of some the government's diet work.

The latest episode involves a new Agriculture Department publication that has been in the works for some time, Food 2, which was to have offered recipes and nutrition advice, including a section on fat and cholesterol.

According to department sources, who asked not to be identified, the final decision on whether to proceed with Food 2 has not been made and that the fat-cholesterol question is still being reviewed.

Meanwhile, four private consumer organizations this week protested what they understood to be the Agriculture Department's decision "to delay, perhaps indefinitely" publication.

The groups included: The Center for Science in the Public Interest, Community Nutrition Institute, Consumer Federation of Amrica, and National Consumers League.

In a letter to Agriculture Secretary John R. Block, the groups said that he had reversed an initial decision to publish Food 2 because of strong opposition by agricultural lobbyists whose products are high in fat and cholesterol.

"The meat, egg and dairy producers have fought tooth and nail to undermine and obstruct the efforts of health experts to encourage Americans to eat less fat and cholesterol," the letter said. "We have watched these groups labor for years to mold public health policy to serve their own economic needs."

Block was asked specifically to publish Food 2 without deleting or revising the section on fat and cholesterol.

However, the consumer groups told Block that if the decision is made to change that section or to delay indefinitely the magazine's publication, "we urge you to release the original manuscript so it can be published by non-governmental organizations."

According to the consumer advocates, the department's official excuse for the publication is the tight federal budget. That is not the case, they said.

One of the four groups — Community Nutrition Institute — reported earlier that Claude Gifford, assistant secretary of agriculture for governmental and public affairs, had written Rep. Margaret Heckler, R-Mass., that "cost was not a major consideration" of the delay because funds were already earmarked for Food 2.

The Gifford letter, however, indicated the magazine would be published.

Part of the confusion stems from a statement in a Sept. 24 speech by Block that the magazine would be forthcoming. Reports then circulated that Deputy Secretary Richard E. Lyng said the publication would not be issued.

Schwartz To Study Beaches

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — State Land Commissioner Bob Armstrong announced Monday he has named former state Sen. A.R. "Babe" Schwartz of Galveston to represent Armstrong on the new Committee to Study the Development of Texas Beaches.

Schwartz, 55, served in the Legislature for 25 years and was chairman of the Texas Coastal and Marine Council for eight years. He is in private law practice in Galveston.

ASTRO-GRAPH

Your Birthday

December 27, 1981

Keep your shoulder to the wheel this coming year. Achievement lies in not giving up. Thought you may be tested, the tough times will serve to strengthen your character and resolve.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) This is not a good day to request favors from influential contacts. Your possibilities for being rejected are stronger than for getting a "yes." Find out more of what lies ahead for you in each of the seasons following your birthday by sending for your copy of Astro-Graph. Mail $1 for each to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth date.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Associates will put considerable stock in what you have to say today, so be careful about offering advice on matters on which you lack expertise.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Business and pleasure make a poor mix today, so try not to blend the two. Keep social situations strictly social. Discuss commercial proposals later.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) You're the type who enjoys challenges, but be careful today or you may become involved in something which you can't handle.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Try to find ways to praise coworkers today rather than criticize their shortcomings. A wrong choice of words could cause them to lay down their tools.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Avoid negative companions today. They could turn activities which should be fun into something serious and dour. Seek instead those who are lighthearted.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Skirt issues today upon which you and your mate disagree. There is a possibility small discords could be blown way out of proportion.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Before telling others that they should do things a certain way, be sure you're not guilty of the same infractions yourself or your advice will be ignored.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Be able to distinguish today between being prudent or just plain stingy. If you expect friends to treat you generously, loosen your pursestrings likewise.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Usually you'll bend over backward to treat others fairly, but today it may be very difficult to appreciate the other guy's position.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Don't worry about matters today which haven't yet happened and chances are never will. When and if any problems arise, you'll be able to cope.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Be doubly protective of your cherished possessions today. Don't leave items unguarded which could tempt one who has taking ways.

Your Birthday

December 28, 1981

Your possibilities for achieving what you set out to do this coming year look good, but it would be wise to have alternative plans ready. You might have to change course several times.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Focus your efforts and energies today on things important to you financially and career-wise. Schedule your social activities so that they won't interfere. Find out more of what lies ahead for you in each of the seasons following your birthday by sending for your copy of Astro-Graph. Mail $1 for each to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth date.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Success is likely today if you follow through on your plans as you initially conceived them. Making last-minute changes could prove unwise.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Usually you're a very giving person, but today others are likely to treat you more generously than you will treat them. Keep your accounts in balance.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Treat fairly all with whom you have dealings today without putting yourself at a disadvantage. There's a chance someone could abuse your generosity.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) This could be a very productive day, provided you don't do things in fits and starts. Once you establish a goal, persevere until it is achieved.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) You have the capacity today to brighten the lives of others. Spread yourself around and enjoy it, but beware of any form of overindulgence.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) You should do well in commercial matters today, provided you follow your common sense and prudence. Where you take gambles, losses are likely.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Normally you're the type who stands by your decisions. Today, however, you could be a little too wishy-washy for your own good.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You'll be amply rewarded today for any work or service you perform, but you could be disappointed if you expect more than you're entitled to.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) You're very capable of managing difficult situations, for yourself as well as for others, today. However, your grades for handling money may be low.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) In situations which are presently running smoothly don't introduce new elements or conditions which might gum things up. Chances are they will.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Your possibilities for bringing your hopes into being are good today if you deal with matters realistically. Wearing rose-colored glasses won't do the trick.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY

I Love You,
Linda

Missing Priest May Have Been A Victim Of Those He Helped

DENVER CITY, Texas (AP) — A Catholic priest who left a meal on the stove when he vanished from his parish in this small West Texas town may have become a victim of his passion for helping others, a fellow priest said.

The Rev. Patrick Ryan, 51, was reported missing Christmas morning, but he had not been seen since Tuesday, said Yoakum County Sheriff Jim Rice.

"There was no evidence in the house of any struggle. There was a fully cooked meal prepared and still sitting on the stove," said Rice.

The sheriff said Ryan's 1979 white-over-maroon Chrysler Newport also is missing. But he said the priest left without taking any personal articles, such as a tooth brush, a razor or a suitcase.

"There are lots of things to put dampers on our expectations and our hopes," said The Rev. Bill Hanly, a fellow Pallottine priest and long-time friend of Ryan.

"He loved to work for the poor. ... He worked constantly to help people. He might have tried to help someone and they took advantage of that," Hanly said in a telephone interview from Lubbock.

Hanly said he had known Ryan since 1949 when they entered the seminary together in Thurles, Ireland. He said they were ordained together in 1956 and celebrated 25 years in the priesthood together last summer.

"At this point everything is speculation. He missed Wednesday night mass, he was absent for midnight mass last night and again today at the Christmas noon mass," Rice said Friday.

"I am going on the assumption that foul play is involved until something indicates to me there is a different angle to it," said Rice, who added that he has not ruled out the possibility Ryan may have become ill and wandered away.

He said he was told Ryan had contracted malaria during the 12 years he served as a missionary in east Africa.

However, Hanly said although Ryan did have malaria in Tanzania, it rarely affected him in later years.

"It would be quite unusual for him to have a bad attack," said Hanly.

Hanly said the disappearance may not have been reported until Christmas morning because in a rural parish a priest could be called away and it would not be considered uncommon for him to miss a mass.

But when Ryan missed mass Wednesday, and Christmas Eve and a morning Christmas mass in Plains without leaving word "that was what concerned us and triggered all the suspicion."

Ryan, who was born in Doon, Ireland, lived alone in a parsonage beside St. William's Catholic Church and was the only priest for this town of 5,000 located 85 miles southwest of Lubbock, and for the nearby community of Plains.

Hanly estimated Ryan had a combined congregation of about 700 people in the two towns.

"I am sure they must be stunned and worried to death and like ourselves just wondering and hoping there is some good explanation," said Hanly. "That we will get word that will help us understand what has taken place. ... That he will just come back."

Unhappy Incident Is Turned Around

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — An unhappy Christmas Eve became a Merry Christmas for Linda Blake and her three children after a burglar "kicked in the door and ransacked the house" while they were gone and fled with all their holiday gifts.

Among the items taken was a Barbie doll for oldest daughter Tammy Reed, 12, a toy drum for Jamie Reed, 9, and books for 4-year-old Brett Blake.

"They could have taken anything," Ms. Blake said Friday. "I don't know why they took the Christmas gifts. They left our stereo components, but took the dolls, books and things like that."

Ms. Blake, 31, who has a part-time job, said she purchased the gifts with $300 she had saved and "after the break-in there was nothing I could do."

But her misfortune was told in Friday editions of The Indianapolis Star and phone calls offering help began early Christmas Day. Offers were still coming in at night.

"My girl got a Barbie doll," she said. "We received games, books some stuffed animals and a lot of goodies. And we received plenty of stuffed stockings."

A color television Ms. Blake was renting and hoped to buy also was stolen but on Friday night, a volunteer came to her door and began trying to fix their other, broken TV.

"My daughter said she'd never seen so many people and that 'Christmas turned out real good,' " Ms. Blake said. "That made me feel happier than I'd been for several days."

Delta To Reduce Fares

NEW YORK (AP) — Delta Airlines is cutting coach fares by up to 51 percent on flights between nine Florida airports and 24 Northern and Midwestern locations.

The new fares will take effect Jan. 6. They are designed to offset slow advance reservations for January, the airline said. January is usually a peak month for air travel to Florida.

France exploded its first nuclear bomb in 1960.

IRA

amount contributed each time may vary. You can even skip a year or two, if you wish.

An IRA can be established for any given tax year up until April 15, the date when federal income taxes are paid. To open an IRA for 1982, a person has until April 15, 1983 to do it.

IRA contributions for a year also can be divided between two different investments. For example, a portion could be invested in certificates of deposit with a bank or savings and loan, and the remainder in blue chip stocks through a brokerage house.

Withdrawals from the account can begin at the age of 59½ or older. If the money is removed earlier, the investor must pay a substantial penalty.

However, IRA assets can be withdrawn without penalty if a person becomes disabled, or they can be given to a beneficiary if he or she dies.

Both a husband and wife who are working can establish an IRA. Their contributions are deducted as a lump some at income tax time.

If one spouse is employed and the other is not, a "spousal" IRA may be established with a maximum investment of $2,250 annually.

One feature which may appeal to many is the fact that money in an IRA cannot be reached by creditors.

Financial firms will have more information and answers to more questions as the Internal Revenue Service completes its analysis of the new rules.

Dance Instructor, 77 Finally Gets To College

NORMAN, Okla. (AP) — Doris Eaton Travis followed a long and twisting trail to reach college, but she can say that she danced nearly every step of the way.

At an age when most other people would be content to sit in a rocking chair with a shawl around their shoulders, Mrs. Travis slips on her blue jeans and T-shirt and mingles with the other freshmen at the University of Oklahoma.

But it's not all work for the sprightly 77-year-old who never attended high school

"Every Friday night my husband Paul and I have a date," she says, her blue eyes twinkling. "We go to the University Club and dance."

It's only proper that they go dancing. After all, they met when she was the owner-instructor of an Arthur Murray Dance Studio in Detroit and Paul Travis was one of her pupils.

"He took lessons for 10 years until I finally caught him," she says, grinning.

Her profession of owning dance studios followed careers as a child actress, a Ziegfeld Follies girl, and a dancer.

"I've been around," she says, leafing through scrapbooks in the comfortable living room of the home that serves as the centerpiece of an 800-acre ranch where her husband breeds quarter horses.

She became a Ziegfeld Follies girl at the age of 14 — "I had to use another name because you couldn't be in a musical show until you were 16" — and left at the grand old age of 17 to make a movie in England.

Although formal education ended at an early age, she still attended classes when she could — "I finished the seventh and eighth grades in summer school" — and she always had textbooks with her when she was on tour.

When the theatrical business was poor, she became the tapdance instructor for Arthur Murray in New York, teaching 10 hours a day. She moved into ballroom dancing and she and her dancing partner spent several summers performing in New Jersey and Florida. Then, in 1938, they opened an Arthur Murray dance studio in Detroit, and got the franchise for Michigan.

She eventually owned 19 Arthur Murray studios in Michigan. It was during this period she met the student who would become her husband.

Her husband became interested in raising and racing horses and they moved to Oklahoma, where she did the office work at the ranch.

She still had the desire for a formal education.

"Every day for a solid year was school day. From 9 a.m. until noon I studied.

"Finally, one year to the day after I applied, I took the GED test and passed — with a good mark, the person who gave me the test told me," she says.

She entered the university in August — "I love every minute of it" — and anticipates majoring in either English literature or world history.

to peruse the records.

The intent of the law is to keep better track of certain dangerous drugs, including amphetamine, cocaine, codeine, methadone, morphine and opium.

Another change in prescription laws allows pharmacists, with a doctor's approval, to substitute generic drugs for brand-name drugs when the switch will mean a savings to the patient.

The generic substitute will be allowed only if it contains the same active ingredients as the brand-name drug. The therapeutic effect and duration also must be the same.

Changes in property appraisal will be a result of the Peveto Bill, which requires — in all but 15 counties — one central appraisal district to set taxable values on property.

Most property will be reappraised by May, and that new appraisal will be used to calculate all taxes, including school, city or special district.

The law will mean some property taxes will rise, while others will fall.

Dear Abby

Neighbor's 'I Spy' Is Dangerous Game

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1981 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I moved into this apartment six months ago. I like it very much. The only problem is that shortly after I moved in, I noticed that a man in the building directly across from me kept looking into my apartment. At first I ignored it, then he set up a telescope, which he has had permanently trained on my window!

It's not just my imagination; my boyfriend has also noticed it. This has made me feel very nervous and uncomfortable.

Would you consider this to be normal, harmless behavior on the man's part? Or should some action be taken on my part to put a stop to it?

UNCOMFORTABLE

DEAR UNCOMFORTABLE: Being observed constantly (and through a telescope yet) could be considered harassment. Behavior that makes you nervous and uncomfortable is not "harmless." Notify the police.

DEAR ABBY: Since my husband retired two years ago, he has started one project after another. But he hasn't finished any of them.

First he thought it would be nice if we had a vegetable garden, so he dug up the backyard and bought all kinds of seeds; but so far he hasn't gotten around to planting anything.

Then he decided we needed a patio, so he bought a truckload of sand and a load of bricks. It's been five months, and the bricks and sand are still piled on our back porch, and he hasn't started to build anything yet.

Now he is buying electric tools and equipment for a woodworking shop in our basement! Abby, he is such a dear man, and he has really earned his retirement, but all he does is read "how-to" books and whistle as he takes off for the hardware store to do some more shopping. Thank heavens we can afford it, but all these unfinished projects are getting on my nerves. Any suggestions?

MILLIE IN PHILLY

DEAR MILLIE: Look at it this way: You have a cow pasture for a backyard, a pile of bricks and sand on your back porch, and some woodworking equipment in your basement. But you have a husband who is alive, retired and happy as a lark. If the unfinished projects annoy you, quietly hire someone to finish them, and whistle as you walk around them.

DEAR ABBY: A married couple have invited my husband to their home for supper many times. Last week they called him to come for coffee and birthday cake. My husband always goes alone.

Abby, when they invite my husband, doesn't that mean he should bring his wife? How cheap can people be? They know he's married because they have met me several times. I told my husband if I'm not good enough to be invited too, he shouldn't accept. What do you think?

CHEAP FRIENDS

DEAR FRIENDS: The issue is not "cheap friends," it's your husband's lack of consideration for your feelings. If you're not included in the invitation, he should not accept.

• • •

DEAR ABBY: I hope you will find the enclosed piece by Henry Scott Holland worth sharing with your readers.

MARY PIKE, ADRIAN, MICH.

DEAR MARY: I do. Thank you for sending it. Since it's untitled, I'm taking the liberty of calling it "Perspective":

"I am standing on the seashore. A ship spreads her sails to the morning breeze and starts for the ocean. I stand watching her until she fades on the horizon, and someone at my side says, 'She is gone!'

"Gone where? The loss of sight is in me, not in her. Just at the moment when someone says, 'She is gone,' there are others who are watching her coming. Other voices take up the glad shout, 'Here she comes!'

"And that is dying."

Laredo Man Is Killed By Rifle

LAREDO, Texas (AP) — A 20-year-old Laredo man died Friday when a rifle fell from a rack in his truck-mounted hunting stand and discharged.

Tomas Jaime Gonzalez Jr., who was shot once in the back of the head at a hunting lease 25 miles east of Laredo, was pronounced dead at Mercy Hospital in Laredo.

Sir Frederick Banting, the codiscoverer of insulin, and two other people were killed in a bomber crash in Newfoundland in 1941.

Says UT Professor...

Even Space Can't Escape Politics

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — As earthlings venture into outer space, they'll take along with them an invisible but inescapable cargo — politics, says University of Texas Assistant Professor Nathan Goldman.

And Goldman is preparing his students for what he sees as a Brave New World outside the earth's atmosphere with an innovative political science course called "The Politics of Outer Space."

The 31-year-old South Carolina native first taught the course in the spring of 1981. It attracted about 280 students. He's teaching the course again this year, and enrollment is up to about 360 students ready to study space politics as a legitimate science.

"The whole world is being drawn into an international web of interdependence," Goldman said in an interview, "and it's being re-emphasized by space. There is literally space law. There are a half a dozen treaties and a lot of agreements that create a body of law for space."

Goldman said his course outline starts with current policy — or what he considers a lack thereof, covers the increasing efforts of countries other than the United States and Soviet Union to get into space, and then goes on to his projections for the future.

"The first part of the course is really just an American 'government course' that describes the agencies, interest groups and processes of the U.S. space program, Goldman said.

But private industry is wed to the idea of capitalism in outer space, he said, and that creates a crying need for a coherent national space policy.

"It's not just a domestic issue — for instance, what about damages? — but through space treaties, we also have international obligations," Goldman said. "The nation is responsible for the actions in space of its nationals; and there's absolute liability for space damages. So there needs to be some kind of regulation.

"But who's supposed to regulate? FAA? NASA? The State Department? It's not at all clear who's supposed to do it.

"Space is becoming an important policy area, an integral part of national and international power. Right now everything's sort of hit and miss. There's no organized space policy, no overarching goals."

As more humans venture into space, Goldman said, they'll carry with them "the whole worldwide competition, the balance of power, blocs, all of it is going from earth to space as well."

So observance of laws in space will be crucial, Goldman said, and anarchy can't be tolerated. "Space is too crowded for that, ironic as that sounds."

Once Goldman convinces his students that it's only a matter of time before "space politics" becomes a common subject, he moves on to every science fiction buff's favorite subject — the future.

Emphasizing the caveat "if things continue as they are now," Goldman predicted, "the Russians will have a permanent space station by the mid-to-late 80s. And I believe the Russians will be on Mars by the year 2000. Where we will be, there's no way to know, because we don't have a policy."

At a conference called "A Case for Mars" earlier this year, Goldman said, he learned that a manned landing on Mars is not that far-fetched, because of improved technology.

"We were shown some figures that said it would cost less to go to Mars than it cost to go to the Moon. That was shocking."

Goldman said there is yet to be a compelling reason to put people on Mars, though he believes humans will be forced to seek survival in outer space.

"We're running out of food, we're running out of natural resources, we're running out of space — earth space, that is — everything. But space offers most of those things. In the long run, it's the best answer for Earth.

"One reason eventually to go to Mars is that, even though it's kinda cold there — like Antarctica — it's the closest thing to a habitable planet we have in this solar system.

"Looking a bit into the future — beyond my time, I'm afraid — Mars could be made livable. Right now it's inhospitable and nobody in their right mind would want to go there."

But if he could, would a young assistant professor go there?

"Only if they gave me tenure."

Saw Blades In Present

EAST MEADOW, N.Y. (AP) — A potentially footloose jail inmate didn't get his Christmas present because police searched into the sole of his friend.

Authorities in this town on Long Island said they have charged Steven Laganas, 17, with promoting prison contraband after searching a pair of sneakers he brought in as a present for a friend and found that four hacksaw pieces had been imbedded in the sole of one of the shoes.

The shoes were gift-wrapped and meant for David Holmes, who is serving time for an undisclosed offense, authorities said.

Corrections officers said they became suspicious when they smelled a strong odor of glue coming from the present.

In 1867, Johann Strauss conducted the first performance of his most famous composition, "The Blue Danube," in Vienna.

Giants Hoping Momentum A Key As They Test Experienced Eagles

PHILADELPHIA (AP) - There are many who think the New York Giants have the momentum to upset the Philadelphia Eagles Sunday when they meet in the first round of the National Football league playoffs.

The Giants, 9-7, won four of their last five games, including a 13-10 triumph over the Dallas Cowboys, winner of the National Conference East Division.

Meanwhile, the Eagles, 10-6, lost four of their last five, snapping a four-game losing streak with a 38-0 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals in their regular season finale.

Stan Walters, now in his 10th year as an offensive tackle in the NFL, is inclined to discount momentum.

"It's playoff time now and we've been there before," said Walters.

Walters said the Giants may think winning four of their last five give them an advantage.

"There is more to it than that," Walters declared.

The 275-pound Walters said he would take experience over momentum anytime.

"They're just learning what it's like to deal with outside factors like the press all week before a playoff game," Walters said.

The Eagles are in the playoffs for the fourth straight year, and Walters feels their ability to deal with all the flak surrounding a postseason game is an important element.

The Giants and Eagles are meeting for the third time this season. Philadelphia won 24-10 in the season opener and New York won 20-10 in a November game that started Philadelphia on its four-game losing streak.

Most experts predict a low scoring game, with two of the league's best defenses as the key factor. The Giants are last in offense in the NFL, while the Eagles this year, despite the losing streak, produced their second best offense in club history.

Quarterback Ron Jaworski completed 250 of 461 passes for 3,095 yards with 20 interceptions. He threw 23 touchdown passes. Wilbert Montgomery gained 1,402 yards rushing and boosted his five-year career total to 5,095, best in the history of the franchise.

Jaworski throws mainly to wide receiver Harold Carmichael (61 catches for 1,028 yards), Montgomery (49-491) and Charley Smith (38-564). Tony Franklin is 20 for 31 on field goals.

Quarterback Scott Brunner, who replaced the injured Phil Simms five games ago, directs the New York offense. Brunner has connected on 79 of 190 for 978 yards and five TDs. He's had 11 intercepted.

Runners May Highlight AFL Wildcard Playoff

NEW YORK (AP) - The Buffalo Bills have the "name" runner as they head into Sunday's American Football Conference wild-card playoff game in New York. The Jets may not have the names, but they have the yards.

Buffalo's leading ground-gainer this year was Joe Cribbs, fifth in the AFC with 1,097 yards, his second consecutive 1,000-yard season. The closest the Jets got to that individual performance was rookie Freeman McNeil's 623 yards, although injuries did keep McNeil sidelined for virtually half the season.

But behind Cribbs, the rest of the Bills' backs were able to run for just 1,028 yards for a team total of 2,125. But the Jets, with Bruce Harper (393 yards), Scott Dierking (328), Kevin Long (269) Tom Newton (244), etc., wound up with 2,341 net rushing yards, third in the conference.

"They just wear you down," said Bills nose tackle Fred Smerlas, "You've got so many to worry about."

Linebacker Phil Villapinao observed: "The Jets used to be all pass. Now they have all those runners. I don't even know all their names, but they're good."

And defensive end Sherman White referred to "all those running backs who run low and hard."

The Bills, conversely, go into the game with the potent passing tandem of Joe Ferguson and Frank Lewis. Ferguson's 252 completions on 498 passes for 3,625 all were Buffalo records, as were Lewis' 70 receptions for 1,244 yards.

Ferguson was protected better than any quarterback in the league in 1981. The Bills allowed only 16 sacks, three of them by the Jets in the teams' two meetings. In their 15 other games, the JetT rolled up 63 sacks to finish just one below the league record of 67 posted by Oakland in 1967.

The Bills had an opportunity to repeat as the AFC's East Division champions a week ago. But a 16-6 loss in Miami gave the Dolphins the title and dropped Buffalo to third place in the division with a 10-6 record, behind New York's 10-5-1, which gave the Jets the home field edge in this wild-card game.

The teams split their two games this year, each winning at home. Buffalo took the season opener 31-0 and the Jets bounced back six weeks later with a 33-14 victory.

The survivor of Sunday's game will visit Cincinnati Jan. 3 to face the Bengals in the divisional playoffs. The Bengals won the Central Division title with a 12-4 record, the best in the conference. In the other divisional playoff, Jan. 2, Miami plays host to the Western champion San Diego Chargers.

Florida Getting Ready For Gators 'N' Oranges

by The Associated Press

College football teams preparing in Florida for their holiday season bowl games spent a quiet Christmas Day in balmy temperatures.

The North Carolina Tar Heels held their fifth practice Christmas Day in preparation of Monday night's Gator Bowl matchup with Arkansas.

North Carolina, 9-2, worked out for an hour and a half Friday in Daytona Beach, then left for Jacksonville. They will hold regular practices today and Sunday.

"We had another good workout," said North Carolina coach Dick Crum. "We continue to get better each day."

Crum said balance will be the key to the confrontation with the 8-3 Razorbacks.

"We're going to have to play a very balanced game against Arkansas because they're very balanced," Crum said. "They proved that by beating Texas 42-7. Anybody that can handle Texas like that has to be a pretty good football team."

And in Miami, Orange Bowl oldtimers say No.1-ranked Clemson will have double trouble keeping its eyes on the Cornhuskers' twin I-backs.

Some say the success of No.4-ranked Nebraska's I-backs in recent years rivals that of Southern California tailbacks.

Roger Craig and Mike Rozier, the current I-backs, are a continuation of the line of successful backs which in recent years has included Jeff Kinney, Rick Berns, I.M. Hipp and Jarvis Redwine.

Craig, a 6-foot-2, 216-pound junior, has gained 1,060 yards, while averaging 6.1 yards per carry. Rozier, a 5-11, 205-pound sophomore, has gained 943 yards for an average of 6.3 yards per carry.

Together, they accounted for 182 of the Huskers' 333 yards rushing per game.

"It's not a quick offense," Craig said Christmas Day. "You can't take off like in the Wishbone or the Veer. There are no quick bursts, but a lot of reading. You really have to discipline yourself to take your time and be patient."

Craig was a high school hurdler and runs out of the backfield as a high-stepper. But Rozier has no such distinctive mannerism. "Call it a glide, call it whatever you want. I just run."

Both say they'll be more than ready to defend that tradition of running and winning at the New Year's Orange Bowl game.

Meanwhile, Arkansas Coach Lou Holtz says he plans to start freshman quarterback Brad Taylor against North Carolina.

Blue Takes Gray, 21-9

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) - Add the name of Joe Morris to the list of big, bruising running backs who have come out of Syracuse to terrorize linebackers and defensive backs in the open field.

Morris big? Not like former Syracuse stars Jim Brown, Ernie Davis and Larry Csonka. Morris falls five inches short of being a six-footer and weighs only 182 pounds.

Morris bruising? Yes. And he proved it here Christmas Day in helping to lead his Blue squad to a 21-9 victory over the Gray in the 44th annual Blue-

Robert Reid Putting His Life In Perspective

HOUSTON (AP) - Houston Rocket forward Robert Reid, a devout member of the Pentecostal Church and a professional basketball player all wrapped in the same body, must traverse two worlds.

The trips back and forth posed a dilemma so great that Reid walked away from his professional life for 11 days earlier this month to find out if he could co-exist in both worlds.

"When you go through a championship season ... and then start looking for the next season it got to the point that I was sort of putting Jesus behind basketball," Reid said. "Basketball was starting to go first and I wasn't happy with that."

The nomadic life of a National Basketball Association player has its distractions on the road and the taste of victory, like the Rockets' Western Division crown last season, can confuse a player about his priorities. It makes him thirst for more glory.

"It was like a balloon building up with more and more air and I finally had to get away before that balloon burst," Reid said.

In his religious world, Reid adheres to the strict fundamentalist beliefs of the Pentecostal Church, where an older member might admonish Reid for a lack of modesty by wearing the short pants required by his profession.

And above all, one's occupation does not rate higher than one's God.

"It wasn't so much that it was a conflict that basketball and religion don't mix," Reid said. "It was a concept of Robert Reid and his religion had to get on the right track and I honestly believe that I've done that."

While Reid feels he can balance his religion and career, other members of his family aren't so convinced.

Reid's mother Blondell Reid and his grandmother, Cora Cato, both Pentecostal ministers, were opposed to Reid returning to basketball.

"They said they wanted me to get even closer to Jesus but that the final decision was up to me," Reid said. "It (decision to return) came on me kind of slow. I had been gone two weeks and I said 'hey, you've got to make a decision.'

"I think I can have a ministry and a teaching in the NBA with all the kids that I come across. I felt if I could become an example, a light that kids can put their eyes on ... then I could help."

Reid said he spent his 11 days away from the team praying, fasting and an intense study of the Bible. He took several days to just drive around the Texas and then ended up at his Mother Cato's house in Miami, Fla.

"All in all, I think I've found peace with myself and this makes me feel real good, now I can come back and play ball," Reid said. "The time off made me realize how at one time before I left, how lightly I was taking Jesus."

Reid's rededication has not caused problems with his teammates. He doesn't plan to lecture them and accepts their good natured teasing as acceptance of his convictions.

"They will tease me in a good natured way, like 'here comes Brother Reid, don't be saying those things,'" Reid said. "But it's in a good natured way. They give me that respect."

The players' good natured kidding of Reid extended to the teams' Christmas party earlier this week. Trainer Dick Vandervoort drew Reid's name and came up with the perfect gift - a life-sized cardboard statue of Brother Dominic.

Blue

Gray All-Star Football Classic.

Morris rushed for 49 yards in 11 attempts and pulled in seven passes for 69 yards and one touchdown, earning him the game's Most Valuable Player award.

Named the most outstanding offensive performer for the Blue squad was San Diego State quarterback Matt Kofler, who passed for one touchdown and ran for another.

Kofler, who hit 13 of 23 passes for 122 yards and only one interception, said he didn't know whether he deserved the offensive award.

Blue offensive coach Mike White of Illinois praised Kofler and Michigan State's Bryan Clark, who shared the quarterbacking chores.

"The quarterbacks did a real nice job with ball control-type passing," he said. "We used a variety of passes and the execution was good."

Clark, who gained 116 yards in the air on 12 completions, engineered an insurance touchdown for the Blue late in the fourth quarter, hitting Morris on an eight-yard scoring strike.

Kofler gave the Blue squad a 14-3 lead in the third quarter by sneaking over from the one-yard line, capping a drive that began on his own 30.

The first score of the game occurred in the second quarter when Kofler lobbed a pass from four yards out, hitting Curt Grieve of Yale in the corner of the end zone.

"It's Easier To Do It Right Than To Explain Why You Did It Wrong"

There's One Thing Big Brothers Do Not Know

YAKIMA, Wash. (AP) — We laugh together now as equals, grown men across the dinner table, tossing barbs back and forth like pingpong balls.

We're men now, my brother and I, both of us well into middle age, both with adult responsibilities, both with as much understanding about death as about life.

But looking at his dark eyes, and hearing his laugh, the years melt away, and my older brother becomes a young man again, and I a child.

Instantly I am not an adult, but a youngster again, getting his V-mail from New Guinea, fingering those flimsy wartime sheets that exuded a strange odor and reading stories I could barely understand.

I am in the town library, rifling through the atlas, searching for a tiny island named Biak and committing his serial number to memory.

Thirty-odd years later, the number remains — 19025199.

He can't know all this, for however prescient older brothers are, they know nothing about being a little brother.

He can't know, for instance, the surging excitement an 8-year-old feels as he picks out the familiar gait among thousands of khaki-clad soldiers at a train station.

He can't realize the breathless thrill that comes from running pell-mell down the hill and into his brother's arms after V-J Day.

Because he's never been a little brother.

He always did know, however, how to be a big brother.

He somehow knew what little boys wanted and knew his role in seeing that they got them.

Like the coveted bayonet from the Army-Navy store. It might have been stupid to want such a thing, but he knew it, and he saw that I got it.

He knew about such things.

He doesn't know that his gift of a California Bears football jersey, now 32 years old, remains safely tucked away. Or why.

Big brothers wouldn't understand. Big brothers know a great many things, but they don't know about having one.

Fisher Suspect Arrested Here

Scurry County Sheriff's deputies arrested a suspect on a warrant from the Fisher County Sheriff's office.

The suspect was wanted on charges of attempted murder with a motor vehicle. Charges against the man stemmed from a Christmas eve incident in Rotan where he reportedly ran over a pedistrian outside of a local store.

Christmas Busy For City Police

Five thefts and eight traffic mishaps filled a busy Christmas for Snyder police officers.

At 6:50 a.m., Thursday morning, Keith Ainsworth called police and reported the burglary of a vehicle owned by H. D. Hines Construction of Snyder.

Robbers took a C. B. radio and damaged the interior of the truck. No value was set for the missing radio and damage to the truck.

Thursday afternoon, Robin Harlin, an employee of Anthony's, told officers that someone had stolen her purse. The theft occurred while she was in the store and she listed personal papers and an undetermined amount of cash as missing.

Around 7 p.m. Christmas eve, a woman, identified as Ms. Wood, told police that burglars had entered her residence at 1109 14th St. and stolen all of the Christmas presents from under the tree.

After apparently taking a holiday for Christmas, thieves were back at work early Saturday morning.

At 2:30 a.m. Saturday, Brenda Gaddis of 1911 Coleman reported the theft of a pair of stereo speakers from her car. Value of the stolen speakers was listed at $70.

Later, around 4:30 a.m., local officers on routine patrol discovered broken windows in the cafeteria at East Elementary school.

Investigation revealed that bandits had gained entry through the open windows and taken an undermined of cash from the school. Investigation into all of these holiday thefts is continuing.

The first minor accident of the holiday period occurred around 11 a.m. Thursday. Involved in the mishap, in the 3800 block of College Ave, were a 1978 Chevrolet driven by Maria Ruiz and a 1981 Honda car driven by Sherri Major.

Only minor damages were reported to both vehicles.

Later, around 5 p.m., the 1900 block of 43rd St. was the scene of another two car collision. In this incident, a 1979 Fiat driven by Mark McCormick was in collision with a 1978 GMC pickup operated by Katrina York.

There were no injuries and only minor damages reported in this mishap.

At 7:54 p.m. Thursday, a 1973 Dodge operated by Jose Tabullo was in collision with a city owned trash dumpster. Only minor damages were reported to both the dumpster and the car.

The last Christmas eve accident occurred shortly before midnight at the intersection of El Paso and 30th St. Involved in this mishap were a 1975 Ford pickup driven by Armando DeLeon and a 1976 Ford pickup operated by Loomis Allen. Only minor damages were reported to both of these vehicles.

After a quiet Christmas Day, local drivers began bending more fenders around 7 p.m. Friday.

The 4200 block of College Ave. was the scene of a three car accident at 7:06 p.m. Friday. Involved in this mishap were a 1977 Chevrolet driven by Richard Murry, a 1979 Cadillac operated by Dorothy Owens, and a 1977 Ford driven by Keith Ward.

Although no injuries were reported in this mishap, the Cadillac sustained extensive damage and the Murry vehicle also had to be towed from the scene.

Two hit and run mishaps finished out the evening for local officers.

Around 10:30 p.m., police received a report of a hit and run in the 300 block of College Ave. An unidentified vehicle was in collision with a sign owned by the Texas Highway Department. Damage to the sign was pegged at $50.

The parking lot of the Latin American Center was the scene of another hit and run incident around 11 p.m. A parked 1977 Ford owned by Lor Hermisillo was struck by a vehicle which fled the scene. Damages to the Hermisillo vehicle were listed as minor.

In other holiday activity, police made three arrests for DWI and six for public intoxication. Two of the subjects arrested for PI were also charged with resisting arrest.

U.S. Air Force Is Looking For Some Good Dogs

By MACK SISK
Associated Press Writer

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — All four branches of the military service reached their manpower recruiting goals during the last fiscal year, but Uncle Sam is still looking for a few hundred good dogs.

That is why an Air Force recruiting team is traveling the country this winter telling people that Uncle Sam needs their dogs.

Recruiters recently visited Boston and Riverside, Calif., and will be in Atlanta next month looking for dogs that resemble German Shepherds and have the right physical and psychological characteristics.

Military recruiters appeal to people's patriotism to donate dogs to the cause, but they also are willing to pay up to $250. The dogs are flown to San Antonio at government expense, then returned to their owners, if rejected. Should the owner not want the dog back, the Air Force will adopt it out to a local family from its "giveaway pool."

Not just any old hounddog will do, either, because animals recruited by the Department of Defense Dog Center are an elite corps in the tradition of the great Nemo, a German Shepherd credited with saving his master's life and warding off a surprise attack by the Viet Cong against Tan Son Nhut Air Base on Dec. 4, 1966.

Nemo, who was shot through the right eye and wounded along with handler Airman 2nd Class Robert A. Throneburg, was recognized for his bravery on the Ed Sullivan and Tonight Shows on television.

Both Nemo and Throneburg were graduates of the DOD Dog Center at Lackland Air Force Base and their pictures hang there.

The center recruits and trains dogs for the Air Force, Navy, Marines and Army, the Secret Service, FBI, Federal Aviation Administration, Drug Enforcement Administration and other government agencies.

Chopper, a U.S. Customs dog credited with making some of the largest contraband finds at San Diego, Calif., also studied at the dog school.

The Secret Service dogs used to check for explosives during presidential visits were trained at the center, officials said.

The center has trained more than 2,000 canine patrols to guard U.S. military installations throughout the world against terrorism.

But officials say a stronger demand for dual-purpose dogs — those who can pull guard duty and also sniff out narcotics — have put a strain on the supply of animals at the center, which has a very high wash-out rate.

Richard Grossenbacher, program manager, said the center received 802 new dogs last year, and only 332 of those, or 42 percent, made the grade. Temperment disqualified 171 of the animals and another 296 were rejected for medical reasons, he said.

The basic requirements for dog recruits are that they must be 1 to 3 years old, must weight at least 60 pounds and be 23 inches high at the shoulders, and have "the general characteristics" of a German Shepherd, Grossenbacher said.

As a tour among rows and rows of yelping trainees will attest, the trainers will bend the German Shepherd look requirement somewhat if the animal exhibits good aggressive qualities. Some of the animals are black, some gray, some all white, and others mottled.

"They've seen some of the strangest German Shepherds you've ever seen," Grossenback said.

The recruiters stress that the name given the dog by its master will be retained, so that a donor will know if his canine goes on to become a hero.

When a dog finishes the program, Master Sgt. Michael E. Brown, kennelmaster, said, he will be ferocious enough when on duty to gnarl an enemy's right arm on command, while at the same time gentle enough for a child to tease.

"We're not looking for killers. You see all kinds of dispositions," said Staff Sgt. Roger Martin, a trainer at the center which has 45 military and 11 civilian staff members. "We want a dog that will be aggressive when you want it to be aggressive, but at the same time can be petted by a child in the commissary."

Besides increasing recognition of the dogs as valuable members of the military, Secret Service and other agencies, officials here said demand for canine recruits is increasing because of a new method for screening dogs and reduction of the training course from 10 to six weeks.

Heretofore, Grossenbacher said, "green" recruits and dogs have been trained together, but beginning next year new dogs will be put with trained handlers, and trained dogs will be put with green handlers. The result will be that dogs and handlers will not be career teams as in the past, but can change partners.

"Now we're going to have to have more dogs. We've got this super big requirement." Grossenbacher said.

Because of the increased demand for dogs, especially those capable of both sniffing narcotics and standing guard, a dog psychologist at the center has drawn up a "tighter profile" for canine recruits to reduce the number of washouts.

"He feels he can predict with at least 90 percent accuracy the dogs that can make it," Grossenbacher said.

Currently, the main reasons for rejection are that some dogs are gun shy, not aggressive enough, or have an hereditary arthritic condition of the hip common among large dogs.

Of those accepted into the program, only one in 10 will go on to become "detector" dogs for sniffing out drugs and explosives, Grossenbacher said.

Hudnall, Parham Wed In Evening Rites

MRS. JACK DANIEL PARHAM

Suzanne Hudnall and Jack Daniel Parham were united in marriage on December 19 at seven in the evening at the Anderson Mill Baptist Church.

The bride is the daughter of Reverend and Mrs. Billy Hudnall of Austin and the groom is the son of Reverend and Mrs. Robert Parham of Duncanville.

The fathers of the bride and groom officiated the double ring candlelight ceremony.

As the bride entered the sanctuary escorted by her father, she presented a single-stem, red rose to her mother and after the ceremony she presented a red rose to her new mother-in-law. The mothers of the couple lit the unity candle which was set on a brass candle holder with candles on each side.

The altar was decorated with a fifteen-branch arch candelabrum flanked by two matching seven-branch candelabra, two spiral candelabra, and a kneeling bench. The candelbra were entwined with baby's breath, greenery and satin bows.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown of white slipper satin, silk French Chantilly lace and tulle ruffles which extended over the chapel train. Her fitted lace bodice, which featured a portrait neckline with natural lace scallops, was trimmed with seed pearls and fastened down the back with tiny satin-covered buttons. The long fitted sleeves tapered to points at the wrist and were fastened with tiny satin-covered buttons. The fingertip tulle matilla veil was edged in Chantilly lace. She carried a cascade bouquet of white carnations, lilies of the valley, stephanotis, and baby's breath atop a white Bible. Mrs. George McDonald and Mrs. Clyde Brown, great-aunts of the bride, designed and made the gown.

In keeping with tradition, for something old, the bride wore her grandmother's engagement ring and carried a linen handkerchief which belonged to her great-grandmother. Something new was her veil which was made by her great-aunt, Mrs. George McDonald. She borrowed her dress from her aunt, Mrs. Joe Rhodes. Her blue garter was made by a great-aunt, Mrs. Alton Sumruld.

Jeana Rhodes, cousin of the bride, lit the candles to the music of "Edelweiss." Miss Michelle Fannin of Houston accompanied Miss Gigi Minner of Austin, who sang "He Has Chosen You For Me" and "Make Us One, Father God." The unity candle was lit while she sang "We Are One in the Bond of Love." Mr. Warner Hickman of Austin sang "The Lord's Prayer."

Miss Janna Rhodes of San Antonio was her cousin's maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Misses Kay Lea Reynolds and Dee Ann Cobb of Austin, Meg Palmer of Houston, Elizabeth Asbury of Abilene, and Cindy Parham, sister of the groom, from Duncanville. They each wore a formal length gown of captain blue qiana with accordion pleated skirt. The fitted bodice crossed in front and continued to form a drape in back. They carried miniature cascades of white carnations and baby's breath enhanced with ribbons. Flower girl, Jamie Harvey of Austin, wore a dress of the same material as the bride's attendants.

The groom wore a silver tuxedo with tailed coated complimented by a white shirt, wing collar, a silver ascot, and a stephanotis boutonniere. The best man and groomsmen wore silver tuxedos. The groom's brother, Robert Parham of Waco, served as best man. Groomsmen were Samuel Parham of Abilene and Terry Parham of Duncanville, brothers of the groom, Roger Daniel of Duncanville, Casey Risinger of Terrell, and Tim Hudnall of Austin, brother of the bride. Charlie Risinger of Lubbock served as usher along with some of the groomsmen.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held in the fellowship hall of the church.

The bride's table was laid with a white cloth on which silver appointments were used. The three-tiered Italian cream cake was topped with fresh flowers.

The groom's table was draped with ecru lace over a blue cloth. The table featured a gold coffee service and a red velvet cake decorated with an outline of Nigeria.

Members of the house party were Chris Cunningham, Kym Thompson, Dana Hill, Kimberly Smith, Sharon Smith, Joanna Robbins, Betsy Nunn Parham, and Kathy Parham.

The bride wore a powder blue sweater dress with a corsage of red roses for going away. After a wedding trip to San Antonio the couple will make their home in Duncanville.

The bride, a 1978 graduate of Round Rock High School, was a member of the National Honor Society. She recently received a secondary education degree from Baylor University. She is a member of Kappa Delta Pi and Gamma Beta Phi.

The groom graduated from Duncanville High School and is seeking a B.B.A. degree in business management from Dallas Baptist College. He is employed in church construction.

The bride is the granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Wall of Snyder.

Hypothermia Is Threat To Elderly

COLLEGE STATION—Older adults, beware of hypothermia — it doesn't have to be freezing for the disorder to occur.

Hypothermia occurs when the body cannot produce enough body heat, and body temperature drops lower than it should, says Judith L. Warren, a family life education specialist in aging.

Persons with impaired circulation, specific diseases of veins and arteries, hypothyrodism or those taking phenothiazines (used to treat anxiety, depression and nausea) should be particularly cautious, the specialist warns.

Temperatures can be as high as 60-65° for hypothermia to occur, and anyone can be affected, she continues. Warren is on the home economics staff of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System.

SIGNS TO WATCH FOR

If a family member possibly has stayed too long in the cold and has become sick, look for the following signs:

*Skin is pale and waxy, face may be puffy and swollen.

*Chills often occur or parts of the body tremble.

*Person may say he feels warm.

*He may speak and breathe slowly and have difficulty saying words.

*He may seem confused, forgetful and cannot understand what you ask him.

*He may become tired and cannot get up even after resting.

IMMEDIATE ACTION

If the family member or friend shows any sign of hypothermia, do the following things:

1) Put him in a warm bed and cover him with layers of blankets.

2) Take off any heavy outer layer of clothes and lie close to the person to pass your body heat to him.

3) Fill hot water bottles with warm water, wrap towels around them and place them on the victim's chest, ankles and feet.

4) Electric blankets may be used, but be sure not to set them on high or they may cause burns.

5) Elevate the person's feet higher than his head – this will help force blood to the head.

6) Keep the person quiet.

7) Give him warm water or warm milk.

8) Do not allow him to drink any alcoholic drinks or take tranquilizers or sleeping pills.

9) Call a doctor as soon as possible.

Anniversary Celebration Is Planned

Mr. and Mrs. John R. Covey Jr. will celebrate their fortieth wedding anniversary December 27. The couple's children and their families will honor them with a reception at First Presbyterian Church between the hours of two and four in the afternoon. Their children are Bob Covey of Houston, Bill Covey of San Antonio and Chris Covey of Lake Charles, Louisiana.

John and Mable were married December 31, 1941 in Fort Worth and settled in Snyder that same year.

John is a retired employee of the Texas Highway Department and Mable is owner of the Highland Beauty Shop.

Costume Jewelry Can Accent The Positive

NEW YORK (AP) — You can play up your strong points with jewelry, which can be a woman's best friend, says Nan Wigger, fashion consultant for a fashion jewelry company.

"A woman can make the most of what she's got by understanding balance, proportion and her own individual style," says Ms. Wigger of Trifari. "The right type of necklace or earring can draw attention to what's good about your body and keep the eye away from what isn't.

"Once you understand the ABCs of accessorizing, you'll find lots of ways to improve upon your looks," adds Ms. Wigger, who offers these tips on making the most effective use of fashion jewelry:

—Widen a long, thin face with round earrings and short, statement-making necklaces. The larger and rounder the beads, the more width is suggested. A lapel pin, worn high on a jacket or dress, will also give the illusion of a fuller face.

—You can shorten a long nose and make it appear smaller by wearing large earrings with the hair pulled back away from the face. However, don't wear earrings so large that it makes the eyes seem smaller.

—If your arms and hands are heavy, wear bracelets and rings that have moderate to wide designs. Large rings or several small bands will make your fingers appear smaller. Conversely, a woman with thin arms and wrists should choose jewelry on the delicate side in order to play down their smallness. A heavy bracelet on a thin arm will make it appear even thinner.

—If your face is round or if you're slightly overweight, think long. A round face will appear thinner if earrings are narrow, oval or pointed in design. Avoid bulbous, button shapes. The longer the beads, the more oval your face will appear. A chain or necklace should fall below the base of the throat forming an oval.

—If you have a strong jaw line, it can be balanced with heavy jewelry. Wear a fair amount of good-size jewelry to offset the lean look that is usually present with this type of face. Dramatic earrings with pendants are one example.

—If your face is perfectly oval, wear medium-size earrings and a flat close-to-the-ear design that will emphasize the perfect shape of the ear lobe.

—If you are large-busted, wear less conspicuous pieces of jewelry around your neck and avoid pieces that will draw attention. Never wear a clip or a pin at the depth of a V-neckline.

—You can lengthen a short neck with earrings that fit close to the ear. Avoid making the neck appear even wider by wearing a tight choker or a heavy necklace. Instead, choose a chain or necklace of medium length (16-18 inches) to give breathing space between chin and jewelry, giving the illusion of a long neck.

—If you want your neck to seem wider, choose oval or round beads or pearls as in a choker, or wear a wide ribbon band.

—Choose jewelry with an eye toward your body scale. A tall woman can wear longer necklaces, wider bracelets and larger pins than a shorter woman, whose best choice is delicate, lighter pieces.

—Try your jewelry on in front of a full-length mirror. Study your facial structure in a three-way mirror to discover the side of your face that is more attractive. Usually it's the left side. Whichever is true for you, wear your accent piece on the best side.

Ms. Wigger suggests experimenting with jewelry to update last year's suit or dress. "Nothing is easier to spark up a costume than using a new chain, bracelet or pair of earrings."

Glittering stones, pearls and nature-leaf motifs are the leading fashion jewelry accents to go with this season's fashions, says Ms. Wigger. The natural looking materials like golden-tone metals, oriental looking jade, pearls and the look of semiprecious stones give women a variety of accents to choose from.

Word Game

NORMAN, Okla. (AP) - Kathy Switzer, the 12-year-old daughter of Coach Barry Switzer, was explaining the intricate game of football to a girl friend at an Oklahoma game this fall.

When a substitute carried the ball for the Sooners, Kathy said he played in the secondary. But when the regular running back, Buster Rhymes, ran with the ball for a good gain, Kathy confided in her friend that he played in the "firstdary."

Dress up

One way to fight a case of those blues we all get sometimes is to dress up — even if you aren't going anywhere special. Wear your frilliest underwear — it will make you feel good, all over. Bright colors like crimson, yellow and fuscia will also perk you up. Another good way to lose the blues is to go on a shopping spree — be a little extravagant and buy yourself something new.

No collection of hands by a British writer would be complete unless it included one featuring the late Adam Meredith. Adam was a law unto himself. He arrived at hopeless contracts on his own style of bidding only to pull a rabbit out of the hat and bring them home.

Not that we can blame him much for getting to six spades. He was allergic to pre-empts and after East's four diamond pre-empt Adam bid what to him had to be a conservative six spades.

He put dummy's ace of clubs on West's king. East chucked a diamond and Adam knew that East had been dealt 13 red cards. Thus, West was marked with six spades and Adam was going to have to play the hand in no-trump since he had to pull all of West's teeth.

Even then it was essential that East have exactly four hearts and nine diamonds and that West's three hearts include both queen and 10.

Now Adam was ready to operate. He ran off all six trumps and carefully discarded the ace of diamonds and four clubs from dummy.

Now he led a heart to dummy's jack, cashed the king and led the five of diamonds. East took his king, but Adam made the last three tricks with the queen of diamonds and the ace-nine of hearts.

Albert Dormer is best known as a writer, but in 1952 when he was just a young bridge player, he played a most instructive hand.

Derek Rimington describes it with the comment, "Half an end play is better than no end play at all."

West opened the ace of diamonds against Albert's four heart contract and continued with the nine in spite of getting the discouraging deuce from his partner. It was obvious to Albert that West wanted a diamond ruff and that if East held the heart ace there would be no way to prevent it.

No loser-on-loser play was available, but Albert found that half an end play.

He cashed dummy's ace and king of clubs and ruffed a club. Now he led a trump. East took his ace and gave his partner that desired diamond ruff, but the half end play had developed.

West had been dealt six spades, two hearts, two diamonds and three clubs so he was left with nothing but spades and had to lead away from his king.

Note that East could have led a spade to spoil the end play, but in that case there would be no diamond ruff.

MR. AND MRS. KIT JAKE BANKS

Burk, Banks United In Double Ring Ceremony

Ginger Burk became the bride of Kit Jake Banks December 5 at six in the evening in the First Christian Church. Roy Burk, father of the bride, officiated the double ring ceremony.

Mr. and Mrs. Roy N. Burk of 2302 40th Street are parents of the bride and the groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. James L. Banks of Sand Springs.

The altar was decorated with a 15-branch candelabrum flanked by seven-branch candelabra with lighted tapers. Red votive candles surrounded by Christmas foliage decorated each window of the church. Also adding a holiday effect was a large lighted Christmas tree. Red satin bows marked family pews.

The bride entered the church as Mrs. Earl Watts, organist, played "Trumpets Voluntary in D Major" by Purcell. Cary Banks, brother of the groom, sang and played "Til Forever," an original composition. At the close of the ceremony, Sheryl and Donald Burk, sister and brother of the bride sang "The Lord's Prayer." "Ode to Joy" was the recessional.

Given in marriage by her brother, David Burk, the bride wore a formal gown of candlelight satin with a fitted bodice, long fitted sleeves, and featuring a Queen Anne neckline in front which dipped to a keyhole effect in the back. Neck, sleeves, skirt front, and the long cathedral train were trimmed with scrolls of Alencon lace encrusted with seed pearls. She wore a Juliet cap of lace and seed pearls from which fell a double waltz-length veil of silk illusion. Her only jewelry was a tiny gold chain necklace, a gift from the groom, and a gold heart pendant which had belonged to the bride's late aunt. She carried a cascade arrangement of white roses and glamelias.

For something old, the bride wore her grandmother's wedding ring. Something new was her dress and something borrowed and blue was a garter belonging to Mrs. Donald Burk.

Sheryl Diane Burk of Lubbock was maid of honor. Matron of honor was Kathi Ash of Bronte and bridesmaids were Joy Pettigrew, cousin of the groom, of Big Spring and Toya Jean Banks, sister of the groom, of Lubbock. They wore gowns of hunter green crepe back satin with draped necklines, cap sleeves and long slim skirts. Each carried a single long-stemmed red rose with baby's breath, ming fern, and streamers.

Rusty Banks, brother of the groom, of Midland was best man and Cary Banks, brother of the groom, of Lubbock, Donald Burk, brother of the bride, and Russell Ash of Bronte were groomsmen. Monte Angel of Plainview and Rusty Adams of Midland seated the guests. They wore beige tuxedos with brown velvet trim. The groom wore an ivory tuxedo and ruffled shirt.

A reception was held following the ceremony in the fellowship hall of the church.

The bride's table was covered with a white lace cloth with white liner and a white organdy skirt. The centerpiece was a silver candelabrum with three tall green tapers and red carnations mixed with ming and leatherleaf fern. The three-tiered white wedding cake was decorated with fresh red flowers. Red punch was served from a crystal bowl. Other appointments were in crystal. Cherise Felty and Becky Kaelin, both of Lubbock, presided.

An ecru, hand-crocheted lace cloth over brown covered the groom's table. The chocolate cake was made in the shape of a "dome" house. Coffee was served from a silver coffee service. Melanie Peak of Lubbock and Marlinda Schmickle, cousin of the bride, of San Angelo presided.

Darlene Burk, sister-in-law of the bride registered guests as they arrived.

Julie and Jamie Dulaney of Fort Stockton, cousins of the groom, passed out rice bags.

The bride is a graduate of Snyder High School and has been employed in Lubbock as a legal secretary.

The groom is a graduate of Coahoma High School and West Texas State University. He is a self employed builder and owner of B&B Homes.

Other members of the house party were Mrs. Charles Masters and Mrs. Jay Newsome of Snyder; Toni Merriott, Tericia Loran, and Julie Nelson of Lubbock; and Mrs. Morris McFadden of San Angelo.

Guests attended from San Angelo, Abilene, Lubbock, Midland, Plainview, Fort Stockton, Bronte, Alvarado, Floydada, Big Spring, Sand Springs, Coahoma, Post, and Denver, Colorado.

What is an encounter group? What could it do for me? It provides an atmosphere for relationships, which are close and real; in which feelings and emotions can be spontaneously expressed without first being carefully censored or bottled up; where deep experiences—disappointments and joys—can be shared; where new ways of behaving can be risked and tried out; where in a word, we can approach a state where all is known, and all accepted and thus further growth and joy becomes possible.

Good Deal Needs A Proper Pilot

BOULDER, Colo. (AP) — If you are a communist pilot willing to fly to the West from Afghanistan, Laos or Cambodia with a cargo of deadly biological weapons — Robert K. Brown has a deal for you.

In the January issue of Soldier of Fortune, Brown, the magazine's 49-year-old editor and publisher, is offering a $100,000 reward, payable in gold or any other currency, to a willing defector.

Brown says it's his way of getting the United Nations to "admit that communist forces have employed lethal chemical and-or biological weapons" in Southeast Asia.

The bounty is just the latest of the controversial magazine's forays on the dark side ofadvocacy journalism.

Two years ago, Soldier of Fortune offered $10,000 for information leading to the capture of deposed Ugandan President Idi Amin. It also started an "Afghan Freedom Fighters Fund" for the anti-Soviet resistance in that country.

"We see ourselves as more than journalists," said Brown, twisting the tiger's tooth hanging from his neck. "We do more than simply report what occurs. We get involved. We want to help the West in any way we can."

Brown makes no bones about which side he's on. His magazine is unabashedly devoted to "the professional adventurer," a phrase critics translate as armed mercenaries.

Soldier of Fortune has been targeted by a Colorado citizen's group for allegedly violating federal law by illegally recruiting mercenaries to fight in foreign countries — an offense punishable by a $1,000 fine, a 3-year prison term or both.

But the Justice Department said it investigated the charge and could find nothing wrong.

"Unsubstantiated allegations — balderdash!" says Brown. "I don't agree with the law (against recruiting mercenaries), but I'm not going to (violate it and get) free room and board at prison."

Yet Brown doesn't deny having distributed information on how to join a foreign force — such as that of the Sultan of Oman or the Rhodesian security forces — nor having referred numerous inquiries about "merc" employment to known recruiters in the United States and abroad.

"I'm of the theory that, well, better dead than red," he says in admitting sympathy for a variety of mercenary causes. "One man's terrorist — or mercenary — is another man's freedom fighter."

Advertisements in the magazine tout the latest in do-it-yourself plastic explosives, automatic weapons and Italian stilettos. Invitations to "high-risk employment" and from individuals who claim they'll do "anything for the right price" fill the classified section.

"Those ads appear in other publications," says Brown, shrugging his muscular shoulders. He says Soldier Of Fortune has rejected ads from Neo-Nazi groups and the Irish Republican Army.

A typical magazine cover features a photograph of human skulls, in this case those of Cambodian communists.

Brown's leathery face wrinkles into a half smile: "They were on the wrong side."

The cover of the current issue features Brown himself, dressed in combat fatigues, squatting on the Laotian landscape with a Chinese assault rifle in his hands. Behind him, standing with rifles at the ready, are three anti-communist guerrillas.

It seems to work.

Once a basement operation, Soldier of Fortune, founded in 1975, is now a slick, professional-looking magazine with a readership of 200,000, most of them in their 20s and 30s, male, of above-average income, and gun-owners.

"We're obviously looking at the macho male," says Brown, who has a rugged look with gray, closely cropped hair and a broad moustache that still holds a hint of red.

Sitting in an office cluttered with badges, books and posters attesting to his extensive paramilitary and military background, Brown is at ease fielding questions, but a trifle embarrassed when his mother, who lives in town, interrupts the interview to place a bag of chocolate chip cookies on his cluttered desk.

His magazine — for all its fascination with guns and violence — apparently is taken seriously by some.

The official Soviet news agency Tass criticized it for "openly patronizing hired assassins and their recruiting agents," while a radio station in Botswana hinted that the magazine was somehow behind the recent failed coup attempt in the Seychelles Islands.

Brown dismisses the Seychelles allegation. "If it had been us," he says, "we wouldn't have failed."

In the meantime, the magazine says it has obtained three samples of deadly toxins at a Thai refugee camp and turned them over to Rep. Jim Leach, R-Iowa, who gave them to the Defense Department for testing.

Brown claims the toxins were dropped by a Soviet bomber in April. The United Nations was interested, but found the evidence "inconclusive."

Nevertheless, earlier this month, the U.S. House unanimously passed an amendment to the 1982 Foreign Aid Bill introduced by Leach that condemns the use of biochemical weapons by Soviet-backed Communist forces in Indochina and Afghanistan.

In 1971, Britain switched to decimal currency after 1,200 years of dealings based on 12-penny shillings.

'Good Time' Rule Puts Prisoners Out Rapidly

HOUSTON (AP) — District Attorney John C. Holmes is well acquainted with the anger he says jurors feel when they find out what a small fraction of "hard time" most convicts end up serving after they are sentenced to prison.

But even Holmes was astonished to see Prentiss Noel Ellard walking the streets a free man.

"I tried him back in 1972 for burglary and he got seven years," said Holmes. "While he was out on appeal bond he committed assault to murder and he got 12 more years for that.

"The judge cumulated the sentences to a total of 19 years," but Holmes said Ellard was out in less than five and "came sashaying into my office just to say hello in 1976. It wasn't so much the time that he got but the early release thing that frankly shocked me."

Ellard took advantage of the Texas Department of Corrections' "good time" rule which allows convicts who behave to get up to double credit, and the state's parole law, which makes a prisoner eligible for freedom after he has served one-third of his sentence.

Holmes said in practice, it means inmates can seek early release after serving one-fifth or less of their sentences. In 1980, the average Texas prisoner was released after serving less than 4½ years — an average of 18 percent of his sentence.

The trick comes in combining the two systems — using "good time" credit to accumulate the one-third of the sentence needed for a chance at the parole board.

Some prisoners can get out even sooner. For instance, trusties earn two days of credit against their sentence for every one day served. A trusty serving a 30-year sentence could thus build up his 10 years needed for parole consideration in only five years, getting out after serving one-sixth of his sentence.

"Being eligible for parole doesn't mean he's going to get it," said TDC spokesman Rick Hartley. "It just means he will be considered."

That's true, said Texas Board of Pardons and Parole Chairman Ruben Torres, but an inmate accused of a property crime such as burglary or theft who has a clean disciplinary record has a "pretty good" chance to win release on his first time up.

For a convict imprisoned for rape, murder or other crimes against people, the chances are "not very good" the first time, Torres said. "It all depends on the nature and seriousness of the crime."

Also, a 1977 law prohibits certain violent criminals — those who used deadly weapons or injured their victims — from applying "good time" credit to reach the one-third of their sentences needed to qualify for parole.

These prisoners have to serve out one-third of their sentences in "flat time," but even so, the maximum time any inmate has to serve to win parole consideration is 20 years.

In Huntsville, TDC officials swear by the "good-time rule" and say without it they'd have to hire a lot more guards to keep order in the 19-unit prison system.

"Everybody's got to have an incentive, something to work for," said Assistant Warden D.V. McKaskle. "It's sort of like a stick-and-carrot deal."

New prisoners earn 50 days credit for every 30 days served from the moment they reach the state penitentiary. From that point, the extra credit is increased or reduced according to how they behave.

Only the "Class III" prisoners — those with the worst disciplinary records — get no extra credit at all. "They're doing flat time, day for day," said McKaskle.

Holmes does not contest the prison's "stick and carrot" argument, but he feels juries should be told how it works before they pass sentence. At present, state law prohibits the judge from explaining the good time and parole rules to juries.

Susan Anthony, the pioneer woman suffragette, was born in Adams, Mass., in 1820.

Insurance FACTS by Tom Deffebach

YOUR Independent Insurance Agent

As a policy holder, you have a certain amount of responsibility to your insurance company in addition to the obvious, on-time payment of premiums. Most important is that all claimable accidents, incidents or occurances be reported as soon as possible. This will usually expedite claim processing in a more satisfactory manner. The adjuster will be able to determine the value of the damaged or stolen property more quickly and usually, more accurately. If you expect prompt service from your company, you must help. Also, it is important to report all changes of address immediately.

Your needs are important to us. For complete insurance service stop by at THE DEFFECBACH AGENCY, College Heights Shopping Center, 3201 College Avenue, 573-5611. On the first of January the Compulsory Automobile Public Liability law goes into effect. In case of an accident every owner and-or operator of a vehicle in Texas must furnish, on request, information concerning evidence of financial responsibility to a law enforcement officer or another person involved in an accident. Failure to comply is a Class C misdemeanor (fine not less than $75.00) Subsequent offenses are Class B misdemeanors (fine not less than $200.00). Our best wishes for a happy, healthy New Year.

Nadine The Cop Opposes Criminals In Paris

PARIS (AP) — Nadine Joly's life story is the stuff of which television police series are made. At age 28, she is bright, witty, attractive, an expert marksman and the top woman cop in France.

She wears no uniform and has never had to use the gun she carries. It is in conservative business clothes and armed with a law degree that she executes her duties as the No. 1 opponent to the criminals who lurk beneath the streets of Paris.

Since November, police commander Joly has headed security operations for the Paris Metro, the city's extensive subway system that carries 4 million passengers a day along with an untold number of pickpockets and petty criminals.

From her office wedged in between the Seine River and a Metro line, Miss Joly directs a staff of 430 administrators and patrolmen who are out to stop the rising metro crime rate. All but two of her subordinates are men.

"The first reaction by most of the men was just to observe me to see if I was competent," she said during a recent interview. "I really can't say we've had any problems because of my being a woman."

The rarity of the situation, however, has not escaped Miss Joly's sense of humor. A recruiting poster she placed on her office door shows two virile cops and a German shepherd in a woodsy outdoor scene with the caption: The National Police — A Man's Job.

"That's not true anymore," the police commander laughed. "It's an old poster." But not that old.

Until 1975, women were not admitted to the Ecole Nationale Superior de Police — France's prestigious two-year police academy that graduates only about 100 police commanders a year. It is from their ranks that the police leaders of France generally emerge.

On the other side of the French police hierarchy are the "gardiens de la paix" — the uniformed patrolmen who were without female colleagues in their training programs until only four years ago.

There are less than 150 women among France's 80,000 uniformed policemen. Among the nation's 1,800 police commanders, 43 are women.

Miss Joly says it was only by chance that she applied for admission to the police academy's class of 1977.

"I had just finished my master's in law and I saw a notice at school that applications were being accepted for the Ecole Nationale Superior de Police," the 5-foot-3 policewoman recalled. "The timing just seemed right. It was the first time I ever thought about entering the police profession."

The daughter of a wine grower from the Champagne region, Miss Joly and about 200 other women applied to the academy that year.

Eight women and 102 men were admitted.

"I've never belonged to any women's liberation movement. I find them rather extremist," she said. "But feminists have made positive contributions. I might have found it impossible to enter the Ecole Nationale when I did if the woman's movement hadn't been around."

After her graduation from the academy, Miss Joly went to work in the administrative sections of various police districts in Paris.

She was the deputy to a district chief when she was appointed head of security for the 353-station subway system.

"Crime on the metro has been on the rise in the past few years," Miss Joly said. "The worst problem is with robberies."

The policewoman stood up and pointed to charts behind her desk. For the month of September alone, the charts showed there were 259 robberies — a 72 percent increase from the year before and a whopping 123 percent higher than the September rate two years ago.

"To fight the increase, we've beefed up police patrols in the metro during the hours when the highest proportion of crimes are committed," she said. "We're also trying to get the public to cooperate more when a crime's been committed, but you know there are a lot of people out there who don't want to get involved."

There were 803 violent crimes in the Paris Metro last year. By comparison, the New York subway system, which handles about 3 million fares a day, recorded 13,675 major crimes, including 20 murders, last year, New York Transit Authority officials say.

"We rarely have a murder on the Metro," Miss Joly said. "It's never been more than three or four a year. Perhaps it's because we have gun-control laws in France."

Convert Gives Up Alcohol, Drugs

GRAND PRAIRIE, Texas (AP) — Liniece Wyatt belted out rock'n'roll lyrics in a local band. She also, she recalls, got drunk, smoked pot and took "speed" regularly.

But that was a year ago.

Now, the 19-year-old Miss Wyatt quietly works and lives at home with her parents in Balch Springs, a Dallas suburb.

Miss Wyatt is a convert to evangelist Alton Garrison's crusade, and Garrison preaches the seductive danger of rock'n'roll's lyrics and lifestyles.

Garrison culminates his fiery rails against rock with bonfires, where Christian kids fan the flames with their 45s and record albums, rock posters and rock T-shirts.

"We're not attacking the beat," the 34-year-old evangelist said. "We're just concerned about the lyrics and the lifestyle that are a part of rock music."

Miss Wyatt agreed, saying she had pitched 87 of her once-treasured rock records.

"People think I'm crazy, giving away all my albums," she said. "but I was supporting all their (musicians') lifestyles. They don't understand it, but the music doesn't glorify Christ. The message in the music is wrong."

Garrison's record-burnings have not been confined to Texas — which some call the buckle on the Bible Belt — where fundamental Baptists constitute a large and vocal congregation. He hopscotches throughout the country, preaching to those who will listen and bewildered by those who jeer.

"We don't say all rock music is bad. But we're there to point out what we call X-rated lyrics," he said. "What used to be an innuendo is now a statement."

The Beaumont native speaks only in specifics, punctuating his point with a myriad of rock lyrics ranging from the Beatles to the Plasmatics.

Album covers featuring nudity and occult overtones are stuffed in his scuffed leather briefcase, graphics he pulls out to illustrate his sermon against rock.

"People really don't understand what we're doing — perhaps don't even want to," Garrison said. "We're not going to get a sledgehammer and go into a record store.

"People compare us to Nazis. But we burn by choice — not force. One guy burned $8,000 worth of records. Do you think I could make him do that?"

However, Garrison conceded that even a teenager with a liberal weekly allowance might feel a slight twinge turning a $6.98 album into a molten wax pancake.

This evangelist practices what he preaches, with his musical tastes running more toward "Rock of Ages" than "Rock Around the Clock."

Comparisons to the Moral Majority, whose members have attacked television shows and politicians they label immoral, are inevitable. But Garrison said he's not a member of the conservative Christian group.

"I merely make a public statement of a private commitment," he said. "It's obvious I can't live my life in a cocoon. There are some bad things in opera. But I doubt 16-year-olds listen to 'Faust' as much as they do AC-DC."

Garrison's duel with rock music started eight years ago when he was working in a Christian youth camp. He said the music the kids listened to appalled him. He wanted to make them aware of the trio of inherent evils he saw in the music form's format.

"The three things we dislike about rock music are its drug advocacy, immorality and preoccupation with the occult," he said.

"Parents just don't know what their kids are listening to. And the Christian kids either don't know or just don't want to know. The repetition is the dangerous thing. You hear it enough and you start to believe it. Anyone in advertising could tell you that."

Garrison believes the music is not just symptomatic of a permissive, violent society, but an impacting factor adding to the modern chaos that spills into everyone's life.

"It's definitely a reflection of society. You'd have to be a fool to deny that. But the repetition leads to acceptance," he said.

Examples of Garrison's disgust with rock?

The Rolling Stones wailing "(I Can't Get No) Satisfaction," "When the Whip Comes Down," "Beast of Burden," "Sister Morphine." The Beatles saying they get "high" with a little help from their friends. Alice Cooper singing, "I Love the Dead." Debbie Harry of Blondie being quoted as philosophizing, "Rock'n'roll is all sex."

"I can only let the lyrics speak for themselves," Garrison said. "If it's only fun and games, hasn't it gone too far?"

Garrison's detractors — and he has many — argue that Alice Cooper singing about necrophilia won't make a teenager want to get romantic with a corpse.

But Garrison repeats his theory of the dangers of repetition and adds, "We have a rating system for movies, but not for rock'n'roll. If a kid walks into a record store, he can plunk down his money and buy whatever he wants.

"The more we speak out against this, the more under attack we'll be," he said. "We just don't have the funds or manpower to fight it. But I'd say the same things even if Mick Jagger was sitting across the table."

Best Wishes Arrive 56 Years Early

BABYLON, N.Y. (AP) — The White House often sends congratulations to people who reach their 100th birthday, but a Suffolk County legislator got his 56 years ahead of time.

"Maybe the president knows something I don't," Anthony Noto said. "I'm happy to know he expects me to reach such an advanced age."

Last week, Noto received a letter signed by Ronald and Nancy Reagan, which said they "congratulate you as you celebrate your 100th birthday. We are delighted to share the joy of this happy occasion."

The note was dated Dec. 14 — Noto's 44th birthday.

But apparently that was just a coincidence.

Noto called U.S. Rep. Gregory Carman's office Nov. 30, asking that Reagan send a letter marking the 100th anniversary of the Babylon Village Fire Department. The letter was to be used in a celebration Dec. 5.

"I was a little concerned when the letter didn't arrive on time, but I told the chief that a letter was on the way," Noto said.

Then came the birthday letter.

A spokesman for Carman, John Palafoutas, said the congressman's office normally writes to ask for congratulatory letters, but telephoned this time because of the short notice.

"That's where the mistake was probably made," he said.

a time to retrench

Our elected representatives in Washinton, D. C., are paid about $61,000 each per year. That works out to about $32.6 million in Congressional salaries.

But it is our unelected representatives who really run up the tab on the taxpayers. According to a report by the secretary of the Senate, there are 181 Senate employees who are paid more than $50,000 per year. Add another $9 million to that salary figure. And that's only for 181 of the Senate's 7,000 employees. Data on their salaries is expected within a few weeks.

For most Americans, the salary information will only confirm the belief that government "of, by and for the people" has become government of, by and for the government. Where else but in Washington's corriders of power can a director of parking make $43,500 per year? Where else could someone earn $47,000 as "keeper of the stationery?"

Six Senate stenographers earn more than $50,000 per year. In their defense, they must listen to and write down everything that is said on the Senate floor, and anyone who has to listen to all that deserves extra compensation. But $50,000?

The Reagam Administration came into power with the announced intention of putting a cap on federal employees. The administration has not been able to accomplish that goal. The Defense Department, for example, has 22,000 more employees than its limit.

That's not much of an example for Congress. It's time someone in Washington got the message that folks back home are tired of footing the bill for an exorbitant government payroll. If we can't cut the number of employees, let's trim those salaries. Accomplishing that second goal might help accomplish the first.

The feller on Deep Creek says, "Hope you're having a wonderful holiday."

The first business day after Christmas generally is a busy one for merchants. If they have not started the traditional sales, stores have plenty to do with exchanges.

Some say it is amazing how we men can live with a gal for 20 or more years and not realize that she is a size 8 rather than a size 10.

Surely we know her favorite color, don't we. (The color blind excuse is always a good one.) Everybody knows the little lady's ring size, right?

Men once found a solution for gifting, but as most men can testify, it is not a good solution on special occasions. The logic of giving money is there, but for some reason it's just not special enough. It's the right size and the right color, but it's just not special.

We've not seen a survey, but we suspect that the family that buys a total of 30 gifts, 29 of them are purchased by the wife, often on behalf of the male spouse.

The man buys one gift, and it is usually done at the final moment. We know why that is though, the poor fellow is working day and night trying to cover those 29 checks.

What do you buy that person who has everything. All of us have that type person on our list. The famous department store in Dallas has come up with unique suggestions year after year.

We saw another one the other day, and sure enough, we didn't receive it this year. It's sort of a reverse of buy now and pay later. That is unique.

The idea is to buy now, stay later and pay never. A resort hotel developer is offering two "free" weeks of vaction at his hotel for each of the next seven years to folks who lend him $3,000--interest free--for that same duration.

The developer hopes to get 1,000 people to sign up. That would mean $3 million in contributions, from which he expects to earn $450,000 a year in interest. With that, he hopes to borrow the $2 million he needs to build an indoor sports center and a second 18-hole golf course.

The return is 98 vacation days which the owner calculates to be worth about $1,272 a year, or a 40 percent return on investment.

Remember those simple Christmases of days past, when some candy and fruit in the stocking produced unsurpassed excitement?

Have a good new year!

Houses Get Sun Cells

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn. (AP) — Cells that convert sunlight to electricity will be installed for a test in four Chattanooga homes by spring, a Department of Energy official says.

Officials hope production of photovoltaics will become cheap enough to compete with utility-generated electricity, Mort Prince said Monday.

Photovoltaics cells, already in limited commercial use, are made of silicon crystals that transform sunlight to direct current, Prince said. A converter changes it to the alternating current home appliances use.

LAFF-A-DAY

"I think I'm experiencing separation anxiety. I just broke off a 28-year love affair with food."

paul harvey

Daily, my desk receives mail from individuals who are convinced they have seen visions, ghosts, flying saucers, abominable snowmen. I can't run down all these reports.

For years, for example, I have heard sensitive persons try to describe a phenomenon they concede is "indescribable." Some artists tried to capture the sight on canvas. I saw their canvasses, yet remained unimpressed.

Then I heard a minister from somewhere in Texas broadcasting that he had seen it, and I listened. His name is Dr. John W. Drakeford. I have since learned that he is a respected man and a responsible witness.

His account of the event exceeds the limits of my own imagination, but I am now determined to journey to wherever necessary to witness this sight for myself the next time the astronomers anticipate it and the weather is right for observation. It has been seen from the forests in East Texas, from the highlands of Montana, best from several points in Kansas.

First, so that you will not be unduly frightened, I should mention that this is what scientists call "a natural phenomenon." They cannot explain it, but they are confident it is not "supernatural."

Here is the way Dr. Drakeford and other men of unquestioned veracity describe the miracle.

You will be out of doors. You will awaken while it is yet night.

The horizon line, illumined only by reflected starlight, will be barely visible.

You will then see, according to witnesses, an apparent rim of radiance separating the two shades of dark.

Some say that at this instant you also "feel" something. Others say you "hear" something.

At any event, there is this electric glow which begins gradually to backdrop the stars as if some mystic incandescence were seeking to exinguish them, one by one. The luminescence glows brighter: purples become wine red—then there leaps from the epicenter of all this arc of blazing gases—like half of a huge fiery pinwheel.

This is not a volcanic eruption, so far as is known. But the color which begins to spew forth from the inverted vortex appears both electrical and geometrical—like an illumined magnetic field.

Then, for all your anticipation and preparation, when "it" appears from the edge of the earth you quake—as you might shake from a sudden crack of thunder.

The sky is stabbed deeper and deeper by more and more tongues of yellow flame...

And here adjectives lose their descriptive adequacy.

You are seeing a peacock's tail of fire as wide as the sky. A color-blend no mortal's brush can duplicate.

If you are in a rural area, roosters begin to crow, the breeze begins to blow, leaves whisper excitedly among themselves...

Your own eyes widen until the colors fade. Then...a yellow explosion on the horizon, and you must turn away, unable to watch the a-borning day.

No human can any longer fix his naked eyes on the brilliance of the sun's rise.

The sight which you and I would travel so far to see—if, indeed, it really were a rarity—is called—"Daybreak."

at wits end

by erma bombeck

A lot of mothers I know are downright meddling when it comes to their children's selection of a boyfriend or a girlfriend.

They want to know how old, how tall, what their father does, where they live, the scope of their education, what their plans are for the future, and how they feel about children.

I don't care about any of those things. All I want to know is, "Is he or she a local call or a toll?"

I don't remember names or faces of old flames. All I remember is their area code. One of my sons once dated an area code 513 for six months. It was marriage by Ma Bell. I figured we were spending $35 a month to share such insights as:

"What are you doing?"

"Nothing, what are you doing?"

"I don't want to interrupt you if you're doing someting."

"I told you I wasn't doing anything."

"You sure?"

"I'm sure."

"So, what's new?"

Another one of my kids showed an interest in a lovely girl who lived just a few miles from us. It was great. I didn't have to worry about a deep involvement because they were never off the phone. He set his alarm to call her in the morning. at night I used to go in and remove the phone from his ear as he slept. It was like hanging up an umbilical cord. As soon as they left one another at school in the afternoon they would shout, "I'll call you when I get home." I offered to feed him intravenously.

The suggestion by my husband to put a timer by the phone with sand running through was ridiculous. However, I did slip a calendar under his door and circle the month.

Panic didn't set in until one day when I was standing near and saw him dial "1."

"Who are you calling?" I asked.

"You know," he said. "The same person I've been talking with for the last month."

"But I thought she was a local call."

"Don't worry," he said. "It only costs about eight cents a minute. Besides, this isn't just some silly kid infatuation. This is a person I genuinely care for and want to spend the rest of my life with. She's important to me. She's special and there isn't anything I wouldn't do for her."

"I'm glad to hear you say that," I said, "because according to the phone bill you owe us $36.86 in long distance charges."

I learned something that day. When toll charges enter the room...love goes right out the window.

Squabble Over Street Name

PITTSBURG, Kan. (AP) — The managers of two fried chicken restaurants got their feathers ruffled over what to name a city street, but in the end, it turned out to be much cock-a-doodle-ado about nothing.

The dispute between the relatives of Mary Zerngast, operator of Chicken Mary's, and the relatives of Ann Pichler, owner of Chicken Annie's, centered over whether the street that runs in front of both restaurants should be named Chicken Annie's Road or Chicken Mary's Road.

Annie's son-in-law, Louis Lipoglav, managed to get his proposal — that the road be named Chicken Annie's, of course — on the agenda of the Crawford County Commission last week.

That sparked squawks from the Chicken Mary's group, so the commissioners tabled the issue until Tuesday's meeting, hoping the two groups would come up with an agreeable compromse.

They didn't. So the commissioners decided Tuesday the road should remain nameless.

"When we start naming roads after businesses, that's when we get in trouble," said Pete Murry, commission chairman.

Libraries Can't Have Census Files

WASHINGTON (AP) — Microfilmed Census Bureau records no longer are being lent to the nation's libraries, where people could use them to trace their familiy histories.

The loan program was halted Dec. 10 in a Reagan administration budget-cutting move. An official of the National Archives, storehouse of federal records, said it would save the government $250,000 and eliminate the equivalent of 17 full-time jobs.

Before the cutback, amateur geneaologists could ask any of 4,000 local libraries to borrow the Census Bureau's house-to-house surveys from the National Archives, the storehouse of federal records. The government charged nothing for making them available.

Brazil's 1980 agricultural output grew by about 6.8 percent as a result of incentives to agricultural production and good weather, according to the InterAmerican Development Bank. But despite a recovery in agricultural production, imports of food by Brazil increased because of greater demand.

WORLD FAMOUS SPURS—These silver-mounted spurs, made by Czechoslovakian-Texan Adolph Bayers, are an example of Old World craftmanship preserved by ethnic cultures in the state. The spurs are among family heirlooms, costumes and photographs in the exhibit "The Last Migration: European Folk Islands in Northwest Texas," on display through Jan. 31 at the Museum of Texas Tech University.

British Travel Expert Overcomes Late Start

By HEIDI NOLTE

NEW YORK (AP) — John Mason didn't take his first long trip until he was 14 years old. But the 73-year-old British travel expert has more than made up for his late start, having been in the travel business for the past 54 years.

He now serves as archivist for the Thomas Cook Travel Co., which is celebrating its 150th anniversary this year.

Vast changes have taken place in the industry since the first organized tour — to a Temperance Rally in Britain — was arranged in 1841, Mason pointed out on a recent visit to New York.

John Mason Cook, the son of the man who founded the company in England, was "the pioneer of organized vacation travel," Mason said. "He always had the vision of people, the masses, going by the new railways. He tried to bring reality to dreams and fancies, to send people at prices they could afford to places they'd only read about."

And vacation travel in its early stages did just that, he added. The artisan class, the manual laborers, did most of the local leisure traveling, their trips affordable because excursions in Britain were only for short distances.

"But at the same time horizons were widening for the better educated and the class with more money to do these things," to travel outside of Britain to places such as Switzerland, he explained.

Jemima Morrell was once such upper-class traveler. Together with her brother and six friends, she joined 130 others in 1863 in what was known as the Junior Alpine Club.

"That was the very first organized trip to Switzerland from Britain," Mason said. And the interesting thing about them was the way that they dressed for the hazardous and lengthy tour — in petticoats, he pointed out.

There were more women than men on the early excurions, he noted. Climbing windy, snow-laden trails through the Alps, scaling pyramid walls on the Nile, disguising portable lavatories in bonnet boxes on the rail cars, "Never put them off for a bit," Mason said.

"Then in 1880, there was the Palestine tour where everyone had to go on horseback and sleep in tents," he said. "These trips could last anywhere from two weeks to two months" and were rather extravagant.

"They had red carpets, bedsteads and a dining tent made quite comfortable with white tablecloth, silver ware and pewter candles. All this had to be dismantled every night and put on the backs of mules," he added. "So a party of 20 would have about 25 riding horses and 30 mules."

And the early trips were as dangerous as they were extravagant. "Of course security was a great thing, especially if you were going to be in tents for months at a time," Mason said. "The escort was fairly heavily armed through the Holy Land because the tourists had to go through the territories of various sheiks — and this could be awkward."

The first organized trip from Europe to the United States took place in 1866, according to Mason.

"John Mason Cook had come over with an international party of about 30, and they went from New York to Philadelphia to Baltimore," he related. "Then by steamer they went down the East Coast and up the James River. They were particularly interested in the Civil War battle sites."

Other points of interest on early U.S. tours were the Mammoth Cave in Kentucky and Niagara Falls, he said.

Long-distance air travel started replacing steamship travel in the 1950s, but it wasn't until 1955 that there was a sudden boost in airplane transportation, Mason explained. "The planes were getting bigger and chartering a plane could produce a cheap fare just as Thomas Cook had produced a cheap fare for chartering a train.

"People take shorter, more frequent holidays nowadays. It's not uncommon to take off for two days," explained Mason. "The main thing people are looking for is relief from the pressures of modern life. A vacation should be a change of atmosphere, a change of scene, as well as a mental change. Now this is the great trend that we've seen."

And the travel agency is keeping up with trends in vacation travel yet to come. "Now we are planning another first — the space flight. You can already register for this Thomas Cook space tour, which we hope will take place in about 20 years' time," Mason said.

Some seats have already been reserved, and John Mason's is among the reservations for the ultimate in vacation travel.

Plans Unique Charity Ploy

BATESVILLE, Ind. (AP) — Lynn Helms doesn't think spaghetti will be her favorite food anymore after she finishes 66 hours of sitting in a tub of it as a charity fundraiser.

The 21-year-old sports director of radio station WRBI has been sitting in a cast-iron tub in a furniture store window since 8 p.m. Friday.

She is raising money for New Horizons, which works to rehabilitate the handicapped in southeastern Indiana.

The tub in the front panel of the Walsman Co. was filled with about 160 pounds of dry spaghetti, then soaked. "Wet, it weighs about 400 pounds," she said Sunday.

Miss Helms, who was to climb out at 4 p.m. today, said the idea for the project sprang from the fact that "spaghetti was my favorite thing to eat," and that she had heard about a New York disc jockey who sat in a tub of spaghetti for 43½ hours to earn a place in the Guiness Book of World Records.

"I sleep here and everything," Miss Helms said, adding she gets up every few hours to walk around.

"I change my clothes every several hours if they get real gross," she said. She expected to go through seven changes of clothes before stepping out of the tub for good.

Lucrative Business Is Started By Ambitious Wheelchair Users

LANTANA, Fla. (AP) — Two wheelchair-users in Lantana have started a $200,000-a-year business in which being in a wheelchair is actually an asset instead of a handicap.

"We've used wheelchairs all our lives. That's why we understand the special needs of our disabled customers," says Donna Batelaan.

Two years ago, Mrs. Batelaan, 33, and her husband, Dave, 36, a computer programmer, opened Action Mobility Products and Services Inc., a firm specializing in equipment for the disabled.

Sales for 1981 are expected to reach $200,000 — triple the previous year — and Action Mobility will move from its 1,000-square-foot storefront in Lantana into a 9,000-square-foot building in Lake Worth in June.

The firm supplies lifts and vans for wheelchair users. "That's how we got started," said Mrs. Batelaan. "But our racing and recreation chairs brought us a reputation."

The couple met at a wheelchair basketball game. A champion swimmer, wheelchair racers and basketball player, Batelaan started playing basketball from a 55-pound chair, awkward to maneuver and pedal. Now, a 29-pound chair is normal for sports. The firm sells sleek 18-pound recreational chairs for racing.

Mrs. Batelaan became involved in the business through a personal dilemma. Although she used to have a specially equipped car, it couldn't carry a wheelchair. She could travel, but when she reached her destination she lost her mobility. So she purchased a van equipped with a lift. But she said the lift broke down so often, she would arrive someplace and not be able to get out of the van.

A friend, a representative of another firm, had a better lift rig, and suggested that the Batelaans take over a dealership for the area.

Their first customer had a car he could drive, but he was unable to load his wheelchair without help. His order was rushed so he could drive to the airport alone and pick up his grandchildren for a visit.

"We have no desire to be a sickroom supply store. We want our products to be rehabilitative, to make people independent," said Mrs. Batelaan.

"Too many handicapped people are sold products they can't use. Wheelchairs, motorized or hand-operated, can be adjusted to individual needs. Like my own vehicle, adjustments allow my stronger hand and foot to operate the vehicle," she added.

In 1861, Jefferson Davis was inaugurated as president of the Confederate States of America in ceremonies in Montgomery, Ala.

HERE'S A TOUGH CASE FOR LEASING

When you're out to get a job done, you need the right equipment. And now, more than ever, leasing it from Case makes good sense.

With a low capital investment, you enjoy the same benefits as ownership, the same factory warranty, you retain continuous possession while building equity, and realize reduced tax liabilities.

Best of all, it puts a Case on your job while freeing up cash.

How's that for a tough case?
