SILKEN SPINDLES

BEGIN HERE TODAY

GALE HENDERSON, pretty and 23, works in a silk mill. She and her 19-year-old brother, PHIL, support their invalid father.

STEVE MYERS, who also works in the mill asks Gale to marry him. She promises to give him an answer in a few days.

Gale goes skating, breaks through the ice and is rescued by BRIAN WESTMORE whose father, now dead, built the mill. Brian has come home after two years in Paris to enter the mill. Gale disappears before he learns her name.

VICKY THATCHER, daughter of ROBERT THATCHER, general manager of the mill, schemes to captivate Brian.

Gale, at work in the mill, is summoned to the office of MISS GROVES, personnel director. Miss Groves makes it plain that if Gale will pass on information about her fellow employees it will be to Gale's advantage.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XXV

There was a clock on the bookcase facing the personnel director's desk. It was a small clock with a case of dark, polished wood. The ticking of the clock was the only sound that broke the stillness. It went "tick-tick, tick-tick," and to Gale it seemed to shriek.

She knew Miss Groves was waiting for her answer. Miss Groves was watching her. Gale looked down at her hands, clasped together in her lap, and said, "I couldn't Miss Groves."

"I'm afraid I don't understand you."

"I don't know anything about the meetings you've been talking about," Gale said. "I've never been to any, and I don't know anyone who has. But if I did, I wouldn't want to come and tell about it. It sounds—sneaking to me."

The lines about the older woman's mouth tightened and two sharp spots of color came into her cheeks. "Don't be insolent!" she snapped. "We have ways to cure insolence, too. How dare you suggest that I asked you to do anything sneaking or underhanded?"

"I didn't mean that, Miss Groves. I'm sorry it sounded that way. I only meant—well, that I'd rather not."

"What you meant is that you're an impertinent young woman. You—" The anger died from the woman's voice but in her eyes there was a chilly gleam. "You will report to your foreman at once," she said. "At once!"

"Yes, Miss Groves."

Gale arose and went out into the corridor. She walked down the long hallway with rapidly beating heart. "It's done now," she thought. "I'll lose my job now. Oh, why couldn't I have told her I'd do it? I could have gotten out of it somehow later. I'll lose my job now and what'll I do—?"

There were no harsh words from the foreman as Gale had expected. She did not see him again that afternoon. She went back to work, fingers flying with new energy. She'd work harder, faster, she resolved. She had to keep that job! They couldn't possibly live, she and Phil and her father, on the little Phil made. It was hard enough, skimping to make things come out even on her wages and Phil's together.

Over and over, as Gale jerked bobbins off spindles and clamped them on again she repeated the prayer, "They can't fire me. They can't!"

It was when she was walking home a little later, walking alone because Steve had stayed behind to talk to someone, that Gale remembered his words of the night before. Steve had said, "Brian Westmore was trying to pump you. He was trying to get information so that they could work us harder, grind us down and make more for the company. You'd better watch your step."

Could Brian have been responsible for her interview with Miss Groves? Was it anything she'd said to him that had made them call her into the personnel director's office? Miss Groves had never spoken to her before. Why should she single her out now, just at this time? Gale didn't want to believe Brian was responsible. She told herself it couldn't be true! And yet it was a coincidence—Steve's warning and what had happened this afternoon.

Gale hadn't said anything to Steve about it. She didn't want to tell anyone unless she had to. Unless she lost her job.

"If they're going to fire me," Gale thought, "I ought to know it pretty soon. Maybe tomorrow—"

Vicky Thatcher picked up the long-handled mirror, turned her head slightly, inspecting her reflection. "It's not bad," she said. "Not bad—" The words died away as she tilted the tiny hat more severely.

"It's perfect, Miss Thatcher!" Celeste, proprietor of the shop, clasped her hands together. "So new, so smart! And you're exactly the type to wear it. I knew the minute that hat came in that I wanted you to have it. So many people can't wear the extreme, the really smart hats, but you—oh, it's perfect on you!"

Vicky turned the other side of her face to the mirror, raised her chin. "Yes," she said, "I think I like it." She tugged at the triangle of black straw that seemed a combination of Watteau shepherdess and urchin's cap. "It's better than any of the others," she said. "How much did you say it is?"

"Thirty-five dollars, Miss Thatcher—no, $37.50. Such a beautiful straw—imported. And of course it's an exclusive model. You won't see another like it. It's absolutely exclusive with us—"

Vicky pushed the silver fox cape she had discarded to one side. There was a muff of the silver fox on the chair beside her. She stood up—a trim figure in a black suit with an unmistakable elegance in the simplicity of its lines. She reached for a handbag that had come from Paris and took out a vanity case. There was a flash of rubies as she opened the jeweled case and took out a powder puff. Vicky powdered her nose slowly and put the case back. "Let me see that brown hat again," she commanded. "The one I thought I liked."

The brown hat was produced—a flat bit of fabric of ecclesiastic austerity until Vicky perched it on her head. On Vicky the hat suddenly became jaunty and flattering.

"I'll take it, too," she announced. "I'm tired of all the hats I have. I suppose I'll be tired of these, too, in a month but I've simply got to have something new. Put them on my account and be sure they're sent out this evening."

"Yes, Miss Thatcher. Now is there anything else—?"

"No. Oh, yes, I need some hose. I want the same shade I had before. You can send a dozen pair—no, you might as well make it two dozen. They don't wear at all, but they are lovely and sheer. Oh, there's something else I want, too. That perfume you carry—'Be Mine'. The ounce size."

"Yes, Miss Thatcher. The ounce size is $30. It's lovely, isn't it?" Celeste's tone implied that $30 for such a treasure was really a trifle. She smiled as she made notations on her sales book. Miss Thatcher was a customer to be cultivated.

Vicky drew the fox cape about her shoulders and picked up her handbag. "You'll send them all out," she said. "And remember I must have them tonight."

"Yes, Miss Thatcher. I know you're going to enjoy your hats—both of them. Come in again soon. We are always getting new things—"

Vicky disappeared through the door. She walked to the curb where a bright green roadster was parked. There was a young man in the car. He wore a gray hat and blue topcoat and he was smoking a cigaret.

Vicky said, "Hello, Greg. Is this a surprise party?"

He nodded. "Saw your car," he said, "and thought you must be somewhere around. I've decided to let you drive me home."

"Isn't that sweet of you?" Vicky smiled.

Greg Harmon got out, held the door open for her, and seated himself beside her. The car moved away from the curb, shifting smoothly through its gears.

"I called you last night and couldn't get you," Greg said abruptly. "I thought you told me you were going to be home?"

"But I was! The operator must have rung the wrong number."

"You're sure you weren't out with Brian Westmore?"

"Greg, how can you?"

"Well—were you?"

"No, of course not. How many times do I have to tell you I don't care anything about Brian Westmore? I have to be nice to him because of father's business relations. I've explained that before."

"You've said it," Greg admitted, "but it doesn't look like that to me. It looks—"

"Greg, are you going to be jealous of every man I speak to? If you are, I don't see what I can do about it. I've told you I don't care anything about Brian. How could I—when I know you? Darling, you're the only man I care about. You ought to know that. Only I don't like to have you getting jealous the way you do. It's so foolish, Greg. You ought to know there's nobody but you—"

"You really mean that, Vicky?"

"Of course I do."

It was two hours later that Vicky, in her bedroom, lifted the ivory telephone and gave a number. A moment later she said, "Brian? Oh, I'm glad I caught you in. There's something I want to ask you."

She listened a moment, then went on. "Well—it's this, Brian. Greg's been making a nuisance of himself again. I had to tell him something so I said I had a date for tomorrow night. Do you suppose you could take me somewhere?"

INSURANCE

GOOD FIRE RECORD CREDIT

will be allowed on policies written in Memphis after March 1, 1935

Because of a good fire record during the past year, the 9% penalty on the fire insurance key rate in Memphis has been dropped. Better still, a 3% credit is now allowed in place of the penalty.

This means an appreciable saving to fire insurance policy holders—a total of 12% as compared to 1934.

Furthermore, the lowered rate opens an avenue of action to those who have felt that fire insurance was beyond their reach. You should have this important protection at all times, regardless of key rates, but now excuses hold less weight than for several years and further delay is unnecessary.

APPEARING ON MEMPHIS SCREENS THIS WEEK

'A Girl of the Limberlost' Shows at Texas

Gene Stratton-Porter's famous story, "A Girl of the Limberlost," comes to the screen of the Texas Theatre today with Louise Dresser, Ralph Morgan, Marian Marsh and H. B. Walthall playing the leading roles.

One of the most famous of American novelists, Mrs. Porter's story is a masterpiece of the genre. It tells the story of a young woman who is brought to the limberlost, a swampy area, and how she survives and thrives there.

Miss Colbert Stars in 'The Gilded Lily'

"The Gilded Lily," the new Claudette Colbert starring vehicle which comes Tuesday and Wednesday to the Ritz Theatre, is a romantic and frothy comedy that boasts a totally new and unconventional approach on the romantic angle.

Assisted by Fred MacMurray and Ray Milland in the principal supporting roles, Miss Colbert is cast as a pretty stenographer who is dead set against marrying a millionaire. Her idea of a romantic bliss is a husband who is poor and struggling, someone whose hardships she can share.

Experience Aids Making of 'Behind The Evidence'

Events that make the world's headlines seldom come any nearer the average person than the morning newspaper.

Geneva Mitchell, comely featured player in Columbia's "Behind the Evidence" which comes Thursday and Friday to the Ritz Theatre, has been in the midst of things headlinish, as is attested by the scar on her lovely right arm.

The scar is a silent reminder of a day when she was seven, playing near her home in Chicago. At that time Joe Colisemo was one of the big men in the town's underworld set.

ROBERT MONTGOMERY AND ANN HARDING TEAMED IN RITZ FILM

Film entertainment of exceptional merit is in store for local moviegoers with the showing today and tomorrow at the Ritz Theatre of "Biography of a Bachelor Girl," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's adaptation of the Theatre Guild success, "Biography," which enjoyed a long run on Broadway with Ina Claire in the starring role.

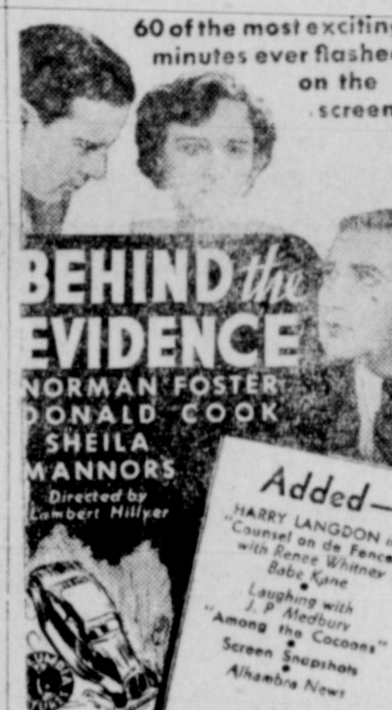

The photoplay version of S. N. Behrman's social comedy brings together for the second time Ann Harding and Robert Montgomery whose joint performances in "When Ladies Meet" made that one of the most delightful of last season's pictures.

The distinctive supporting cast features Edward Everett Horton in the role of a pompous, big-wig politician from a backwoods state; Edward Arnold, whose performance as the drunken millionaire husband in "Sadie McKee" made him Hollywood's most sought-after character actor; Una Merkel, without whom no comedy cast is complete; Charles Richman, who created the role of "Kinnicott" in the original play; Greta Meyer and Willard Robertson.

No better selection than Miss Harding and Montgomery could have been made for the leading roles of the story which concerns a young lady portrait painter slightly down on her luck, and a magazine editor equally anxious to better his fortunes. When these two put their heads together and join their respective careers plenty of action and excitement ensues.

From all reports, no expense was spared in equipping this picture.

HITLER GOES AFTER THE CASH

AT last we seem to have discovered which way Herr Hitler, who might say, "I am Germany", is headed, and most likely where he will end. He probably is sending Germany into one of its worst crises and himself—well, it all depends on whether they catch him after he starts running!

He climaxed his career as German dictator when he issued a law that allows the Finance Minister a free hand to conscript the nation's cash. He said, in effect, "Get money where you can—I shall back you up."

His new law allows "the finance chief wide powers to secure funds through credits and is limited only by der Feuhrer's personal estimate of the extent to which he should strip liquid assets from those who have them."

The finance minister may go to banks and demand loans—they cannot refuse him. He may go to private firms and individuals and demand of them any amount of cash he might desire—they cannot refuse to pay. To do so is to commit a terrible crime, invoking severe punishment.

There is belief the government may call upon Germans who still have bank accounts and securities abroad to convert these into cash and turn it over to the government.

And what do they get in return? Government securities, in Reichsmarks, which, as soon as Hitler is overthrown, won't be worth a cent.

How far does Hitler expect to get with this sort of oppression? People have never been known to stand for such long at a time. Sooner or later they will rise up—and Germany will have a new leader, probably no better than the predecessor. But that is the way it goes until the voice of the common people finally is heard. Even then it is not certain they will be any better off.

Come what may, Hitler cannot continue along the present plan of government in Germany—nor can anyone else who attempts to crush the people under the burdens they cannot carry and will not permit.

TEARS, LAUGHTER IN WORLD OF NEWS

IF you have tears to spare, shed a few for the Long Island gentleman who got religion at a street corner revival meeting and, as a result, went straight to jail.

Moved by the spirit, this man addressed the crowd and told how he had, in his unregenerate past, stolen two valuable bronze candlesticks from a church in Brooklyn. It was just his luck that a detective who was working on that case happened to be in the crowd. Now the repentant convert is in jail on a charge of burglary.

By such odd twists does the news of the day move. We find, for instance, in White Plains, N. Y., a man remarrying his divorced wife because she is the only bridge partner he ever had who could be counted on not to trump his aces. The discovery came less than six months after his divorce.

A Philadelphia widow sues a motion picture operator for $10,000 for breaking her heart, and the jury agrees that something ought to be done about it, but marks the damages down to one dollar.

A French aviator, meanwhile, returns from Russia with the news that the Russians are finishing new fighting planes at the rate of one every two days, and Russia's effort to pay off old debts in the United States by incurring new ones falls flat.

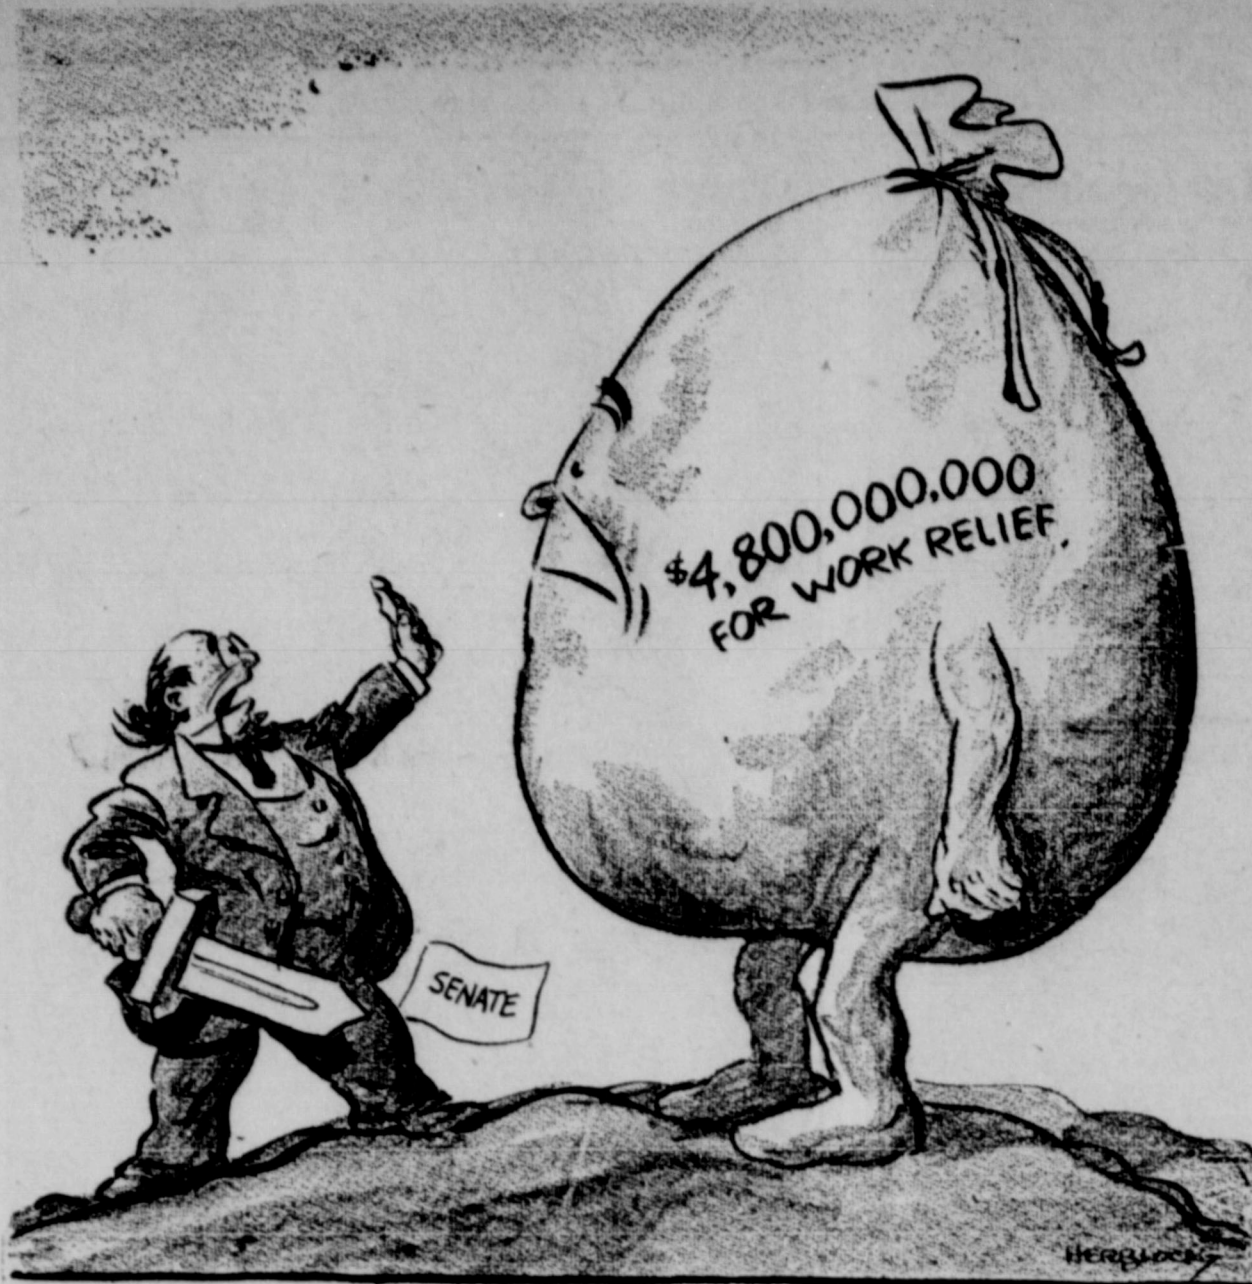

Two English airmen finally finish their part of the England-to-Melbourne race four months late, but console themselves with the thought that they knocked four months off their own previous record for the flight, anyway.

A policeman who was dropped from the force at Columbus, O., on charges of gambling announces his candidacy for mayor, and an English milkman is inspired by the maternal clatter of his bottles and pots to become a highbrow musical composer.

A world's record for fertility in pigdom is set in an English farmyard, where 25 little pigs are born in one fell swoop. Simultaneously, a relief official in Dallas, Tex., reports that 64 per cent of all the babies born in Dallas last year were born to parents who were on relief.

And then—just to cap the climax of news oddities—a beaver sneaks into the house of an up-state New York hermit and gnaws off the man's wooden leg!

HEALTH

By DR. MORRIS FISHEEN
Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygeia, the Health Magazine

The most common cause for fever in children is an infection, such as in the common cold or sore throat. All infectious diseases, as measles, diphtheria, scarlet fever, mumps, etc., begin with varying degrees of fever.

One of the simplest ways to lower temperature is a sponge bath with warm water. The water may be between 85 and 90 degrees or even slightly warmer.

A sponge bath should never be given in a cold room. The exposure may be more dangerous than the fever. Fever, after all, is one of the signs that the body is reacting against the disease condition.

Older children may be given a bath in bed by putting a rubber sheet under the child and then washing it thoroughly by the use of a clean cloth wet with warm water. It is well under such circumstances to keep those parts of the body covered that are not being washed.

After any part is washed, it is thoroughly dried, then the blanket is used to cover that part while another part is washed. Sponging the body in this manner for five to ten minutes will lower the temperature anywhere from one to two degrees.

After a young child has had a fever and the temperature has returned to normal, it is well to keep the child in bed an extra day to be certain that the tissues are recovered before the child is allowed to get up.

Whenever there is a fever, the body must be supplied with plenty of water. During a fever more water is evaporated from the surface of the body.

If the child will not take ordinary water, it may sometimes be encouraged to do so if the water is slightly flavored with a fruit juice, or a little sugar may be added. A fever also burns tissues of the body and the provision of extra sugar may save some of the destruction of the tissues.

There used to be a superstition which advised to "starve a fever and feed a cold." More scientific study of the way in which the body uses food has indicated the fallacy of this notion.

Besides control of fever by use of the sponge bath, there is the possibility of prescribing suitable drugs known to have this effect.

They should never be taken except under advice of a physician and should not be long continued unless the doctor orders. This ap-

Stories in STAMPS

THE 1-cent and 2-cent stamps of the U. S. Columbian Exposition issue in 1893 provide stamp collectors with one of their brightest jokes.

The lower value carries a copy of a painting showing a young, clean-shaven Columbus on the deck of his flagship, Santa Maria, as he comes in sight of land.

But look at the 2-cent stamp, representing the landing of Columbus only a few hours later. There you see the great navigator appearing much older and with a full-grown beard!

BEHIND THE SCENES IN WASHINGTON

—BY RODNEY DUTCHER—

Huey's Onslaught on Farley Portends New "Battle of Century" . . . Smooth play by FDR on Code Vote . . . Labor Doesn't Get Fat Share of Shipbuilding Cost.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 23.—You can get a bet here, either way, as to whether Huey Long will win his campaign to "get" Jim Farley.

The lowdown on this is that the administration takes Huey darned seriously—but hopes none of the rest of us will.

Long's fight for investigation of the postmaster-general and political boss of the Democratic party is more than a one-man gesture. It is Huey's major offense to date against an administration he hates.

He is being secretly aided by certain persons who dislike Farley and certain Republicans who hope they can defeat Roosevelt in 1936.

Roosevelt is keenly alive to the possibilities. He can't well afford to have Farley smeared and he realizes there is at least some substance in the threat that a Huey Long third party might lure away many Democratic votes a year from November.

If the administration has any method of clamping down on the Kingfish which it hasn't yet tried, you can expect to see that method attempted in the near future.

Tough Either Way

The party powers faced two problems which there seemed to be no chance to duck or sidestep when the Senate called on Secretary Ickes to furnish it with all information concerning any investigation of Farley and the building or contracting firms with which he may be connected in New York.

If it had not taken action for an inquiry, Long could have issued daily blasts for the rest of the session. Hurling rumors and ammunition provided by Farley's foes, he could have devoted himself to the idea that the administration had whitewashed some terrible scandals.

And if the administration had invited an inquiry of Farley, it would have been a risk. Anyone who knows politics and the way it is played knows that the exposure of activities of a man in Jim's position can usually be made to assume unsavory aspects.

Furthermore, Huey has been told that certain sensational documents exist in certain places. One of his major aims is to have these documents (they may or may not exist) produced for publication.

Three Hall County Calves To Be Shown

On Texas Farms

Minnie Fisher Cunningham Extension Service Editor

Report comes from Jones County that at the training school held for the pantry demonstrators of the county home demonstration clubs 75 people learned how to make and lay tile for garden sub-irrigation. These citizens will in turn teach their neighbors in their own communities to make tile so that gardens may prosper and fruit trees flourish come rain or no.

In Dickens County every home demonstration club member is a "cooperator" in the yard improvement work being undertaken by these club women. Goals for co-operators are very definite—each one is to "remove all rubbish, repair fences, lay a flagstone walk, learn to recognize and locate for transplanting five native shrubs and report to the demonstrator." Demonstrators, by the way, undertake the complete landscaping of their premises.

Three home orchards of one acre each were set out at three profits which he has piled up for his club work was made: $1,124.70 in cotton demonstrations; $430.14 in corn demonstrations; $874.60 in potato demonstrations; $15.39 in swine demonstrations; $303.59 in dairy demonstrations; and $901.64 in poultry demonstrations. Thelme was the first poultry flock owner in Cameron county to trim his sails to the head winds of low prices by changing his feeding ration from mash and grain to grain, milk and green feed to reduce the cost of production. Results of his demonstration have shown the way to other poultrymen in that region.

cream and handles it properly is drawing a premium because of that fact; he also knows that his good cream is not being mixed with someone else's bad cream in the station, because the cream is being graded and segregated by the station operator.

The stations and plants are also being controlled through regulatory measures as to their general cleanliness and sanitation thereby assuring the good producer that his cream will not become contaminated while holding in the station for shipment to the plant.

The primary intent of this program is to see that the product is bought on a quality basis to insure those who want to market a high quality product, a premium for their extra time and labor and to see that those who do not want to market a high quality product receive a price which is in line with the kind of product which they market.

Swine Demonstration Returns $300 Profit

FORT WORTH, Feb. 23.—A net profit of $300.64 was made this year on a swine demonstration conducted by Lee Lillard, Tarrant county 4-H club boy, according to M. C. Counts, farm demonstration agent. Lee started with six Hampshire barrows weighing 190 pounds and valued at $12, and later bought six more barrows and two gilts. During the year he exhibited in four stock shows and his show money amounted to $224. His total expenses were $190.83 and his total receipts $491.47, making his profit $300.64. He kept one duroc and one hamshire gilt, selling the others.

RURAL LIVING CONDITIONS IMPROVE

Permanent Advance-ment Result on AAA Programs

COLLEGE STATION, Feb. 23.—Of the 6,283,548 acres of Texas land under crop adjustment contracts in 1934, 3,558,564 were planted in feed crops for home use according to the annual reports of county agents assembled here.

Only 1,178,554 acres were allowed to remain idle, and the drought last year was a factor which H. H. Williamson, State Agent and Vice Director of the Extension Service, estimates had a great deal to do with that, as nearly half a million acres of the total was wheat land lying in the region of least rainfall.

Food for home use claimed 295,917 acres; soil improvement crops were planted on 221,358 acres; while with pasture crops for home use, 617,296 acres headed toward the goal of more grass-land to replace that so disastrously put to the plow in the past 25 years.

The remaining acreage was in temporary pastures and miscellaneous crops for home use. "Emphasis is often publicly placed on the emergency and temporary nature of some of the work of the county agents during the past 18 months," Williamson pointed out, "but if there can be a greater permanent improvement on Texas farms and ranches than will come from the use of these acres released by the government from corn and cotton and wheat to be used for food and feed crops, I do not know what it is."

"That vast new acreage of pasture and feed crops for home use

Looking toward home orchards in Rannels County the county agricultural council appointed an orchard committee to secure bids from nurserymen and asked each community agricultural association to canvass and list the persons wanting fruit trees and vines. More than 700 trees were ordered.

Mrs. Ora Montgomery, yard improvement demonstrator of Collin County, has a rule that no shrub is to be planted in ground that has not been especially prepared for it. If the ground is tight and waxy it has to be loosened up by working in barnyard manure and cotton waste from the gin before this home beautifier will approve risking the life of one of her plants.

Cold weather in Llano County was the signal for more pecan budding work there. On the ranch of F. H. Westerman, farmers, ranchmen and 4-H club boys gathered to take part in the pecan budding demonstration when Glen Patton, R. H. Nelson, and D. D. Steele, farm demonstration agent, "showed 'em how." Westerman plans to increase the number of top worked trees on his ranch gradually until he has the banks of the San Fernando bordered with fine pecans.

Hardy shrubs proved their worth in the recent freeze according to the report of Miss Effie McClane, home demonstration agent, on the yard improvement work being carried on by rural women in Kleberg county. Plants that were acclimated by nature stood the cold as they stand the long dry spells, while tender though beloved shrubs lost out completely. These probably will be replaced by more hardy varieties to insure no future loss, Miss McClane says.

4-H Club Girl Is Successful With 1 1-2 Acre Garden

PARIS, Feb. 23.—From a one and-half acre garden planted to 21 varieties, Mary Preston of the Midway 4-H Club in Lamar county, sold $47.50 worth of vegetables, canned $51.96 worth, used $34.35 worth fresh, and stored $7.20 worth, according to Miss Beulah Blackwell, home demonstration agent. Her whole expense consisted of $2.45 worth of seed she bought and 35 cents worth grown at home.

Her family of 13 was supplied with vegetables throughout the year, and she and her mother canned 114 quarts of vegetables in the spring and 162 quarts of tomatoes in the fall. She also canned 76 quarts of fruit valued at $11.40.

means more meat of a better quality on the family table and a nearer approach to the amount of milk the children need to make them strong and well than Texas has ever before provided. And more over they saved the situation, in so far as it was saved, when the drought cut the normal feed crops.

"Those acres planted to soil improvement crops, taken with the enormously increased interest in terracing, represent a turning of rural public opinion in Texas to soil conservation from which the State will be benefiting more years than I dare to prophesy," Williamson said.

Chiseled Ground Holds Moisture For Wheat Sand

FIRST COTTON CHECKS ARE EXPECTED

$10 Pool Advance Will Amount to $208,506.60

Checks from the certificate pool on the $10 per bale advance payment made by the pool are expected to arrive in Hall County any day.

Figures based on news dispatches from Washington indicate that 64.4 per cent of certificates in the pool have been sold. This would amount to a total payment of somewhat better than $12.50 per bale for all the certificates placed in the pool. Based on $12.50 per bale the returns to Hall County would amount to $260,632.60. The first $10 advance will amount to $208,506.60.

It is expected that these checks will arrive in the order in which the certificates were placed in the pool, that is if you placed your certificates in the pool early, say in the first part of October you would be among the first to receive your check; however, if you placed your certificates in the pool in the latter part of November, just before the pool closed, your check would be perhaps 20 or 30 days behind the first man to receive his check.

continued growth, according to Dewey Reed, farm demonstration agent.

Other land just across the road which was cultivated in the manner common to wheat growing sections did not hold enough moisture to produce a good stand of wheat, and what wheat came up has been destroyed because of the blowing of the soil.

Mr. Walker used chisels to make furrows from 10 to 18 inches deep and 42 inches apart, breaking the hard soil underneath the finely pulverized top soil. This subsoil was cracked from furrow to furrow thus enabling the soil to hold the moisture.
