Southeast Texas Battling Floods

A-J News Services

Fickle Claudette, a storm that changed intensity and direction several times before plowing inland, today dumped more than 15 inches of rain on Southeast Texas, raking Beaumont and Port Arthur with high winds and heavy rains that snarled traffic, flooded low-lying homes and closed offices.

Beaumont police found a man dead in a car trapped in a flooded underpass. An autopsy was planned to determine whether the man, who was not immediately identified, drowned.

As the storm moved inland, the National Weather Service posted flash flood warnings in far Southeast Texas and flash flood watches for Northeast Texas and northwestern Louisiana.

"It's so disorganized you can't find a center," a National Weather Service spokesman said. "But there's all kinds of weather behind it."

Damage appeared to be mostly wind-raked roofs, downed trees, broken power and telephone lines and flooding.

Four tornadoes, but little resulting damage, were reported around Beaumont, where streets were flooded and the Jefferson County Courthouse and Lamar University summer classes were closed for the day.

At Port Arthur, 15 inches of rain and wind gusts of 60 mph were measured unofficially. Tides were 2 to 3 feet above normal along the coast, where marine advisories kept offshore oil service and fishing vessels close to shore.

"We've had over 14 inches of rain and it's still coming down," said C.R. Nash, city manager at suburban Bridge City. About 28 persons had been evacuated by noon today.

Winds ripped the roof from a service station at Sabine Pass, the storm's first landfall about 2 p.m. Tuesday.

"It took the top off the Gulf station across the street from me. I'm sitting here looking at it flying around," said Albert Westerman of Sportsman's Supply in Sabine Pass, where Claudette made its first landfall about 2 p.m. Tuesday.

Sea Rim State Park, on the coast west of Sabine Pass, was closed Tuesday and campers evacuated. Acting superintendent Bob Fish stayed in the park in his home built on stilts and said wind and rains were heavy but damage slight.

The storms fringe dumped 3.5 inches of rain on Lake Charles, La., to the east, and about an inch on Galveston, Texas to the west. At Cameron, La., where Hurricane Audrey killed several hundred in 1957, officials said residents left shelters and took the flooding and high winds calmly.

Turbulent weather also erupted in Northwest Texas Tuesday night and early today, as a weak frontal system triggered scattered showers and thunderstorms in the Panhandle and over portions of the South Plains.

Heaviest activity near dawn was in eastern Hale County, but the showers later moved on southeastward into the Spur and Dickens area. At midmorning, showers developed near Petersburg and in the Snyder area.

The National Weather Service said the front would drift into the Permian Basin by Thursday, thus continuing the possibility of rainfall in Northwest Texas through Thursday. The probability of precipitation in the Lubbock area was listed at 20 percent today, 40 percent tonight and 30 percent Thursday.

Heavy thunderstorm activity was reported early this morning along the Canadian River to the northwest of Amarillo and in the southeastern Panhandle near Wellington. The storms were reported moving in a southeasterly direction at 20 mph.

At 7 a.m. today, South Plains communities measuring more than one-third of an inch of rain included Floydada, with .46 of an inch; Plainview, .45 of an inch; and Hereford, .42 of an inch. Lubbock reported no rainfall during the 24-hour period.

Volcker May Head Federal Reserve

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter announced today he is nominating Paul A. Volcker, a former Treasury official and now president of the New York Federal Reserve Bank, to be chairman of the Federal Reserve Board.

(Carter News Conference Tonight; Story On Page 4, Sec. B)

In a statement read to reporters by White House Press Secretary Jody Powell, Carter said of his choice to succeed outgoing board Chairman G. William Miller:

"Mr. Volcker has broad economic and financial experience and enjoys an outstanding international reputation. He shares my determination to pursue the battle against inflation at home and insure the strength and stability of the dollar abroad."

The top central bank position fell vacant last week when Carter tagged Miller to succeed the departing W. Michael Blumenthal as Treasury secretary.

Volcker, 51, has been president of the New York Federal Reserve Bank since 1975 and formerly served as undersecretary of the Treasury for monetary affairs.

Volcker also currently is vice chairman of the Fed's Open Market Committee, which makes key decisions on controlling credit.

Because of uncertainties generated in international money markets by Miller's departure from the Fed, Carter had promised to give top priority to the selection of a successor.

The appointments of Volcker and Miller require Senate confirmation.

Initial reaction in Congress to Volcker's selection was positive.

Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., chairman of the Senate Banking committee and a frequent critic of Miller, praised the appointment.

"The president has shown outstanding judgment," said Proxmire, whose committee will handle the confirmation. "Paul Volcker is a man of great intellect and proven leadership ability."

Rep. Henry S. Reuss, chairman of the House Banking Committee said: "Volcker is an excellent choice. International bankers being what they are, his appointment should quiet the dollar by noon today. I have worked with him for years and have found not only that he is able but that he knows there is a Congress."

In fact, both the dollar and stock prices gained ground immediately after the announcement of the Volcker nomination.

"The dollar has picked up a little bit, but nothing dramatic," said one New York foreign exchange trader. "The initial reaction seems to be favorable."

PLO Official Shot Down

CANNES, France (AP) — Zuhair Mohsen, military operations chief of the Palestine Liberation Organization and head of its Syrian-backed Saiqa wing, was in a deep coma and fighting for his life today after a gunman shot him in the head at point-blank range, police sources said. The PLO blamed Israel for the attack.

Mohsen, 43, was shot just before midnight Tuesday as he returned to his rented apartment in a luxury block in this French Riviera resort. The attacker was one of two men waiting for him on a landing, the sources said.

He was taken to St. Roch Hospital in nearby Nice, where sources said he underwent a "delicate operation" and doctors were "very pessimistic" about his condition. Police sources said his condition was extremely critical.

Officially, police would say only that a PLO leader had been shot. They said had strict orders "from very high up" to reveal nothing.

But PLO officials in Europe confirmed the victim was Mohsen.

In Beirut, the PLO blamed the shooting on operatives it said were linked to the office of Israeli Premier Menachem Begin, and called it the start of a campaign of annihilation against Palestinians. It said the Israelis were "enforcing a U.S. resolution to wipe out all Palestinians," and vowed "to punish Israel."

PLO leader Yasser Arafat sent a high-level four-man delegation to Paris to investigate the incident, the Palestinian news agency said.

Mohsen was in Cannes with his wife en route home from leading the PLO delegation to last week's summit of the Organization of African Unity in Monrovia, Liberia.

Sources said French police and the counter-intelligence service, the DST, did not know of Mohsen's presence in the country. He was believed to have arrived last Friday from Monrovia.

The sources said he possessed many passports, including one from Chile, and passed through immigration control unnoticed.

Sources said it appears Mohsen's wife may have witnessed the shooting and although police had difficulty questioning her Wednesday because of her distressed condition, they got an idea of what happened.

The entry doors to the luxury Gray d'Albion building are locked at night but Mrs. Mohsen, in the fourth floor apartment, opened the door for her husband by remote control after indentifying him on closed circuit TV, the sources said. As Mohsen arrived at the floor and walked to the door, which Mrs. Mohsen was opening, a man hidden in a service staircase fired at Mohsen from about six feet away.

The sources said another man apparently kept watch. A night watchman saw two men flee the building.

Farouk Kaddoumi, the PLO political chief of equal ranking with Mohsen, was being received in Paris today by French Foreign Minister Jean Francois-Poncet, a meeting scheduled some days ago. Ministry officials said reporters and photographers would be barred.

The incident was the latest in a series of shootings of PLO members in France. Almost a year ago, on Aug. 3, two Arab gunmen assassinated the Paris PLO representative, Ezzidine Kalak, in his office in the French capital. They claimed they were working for Abu Nidal.

City Jury Rules Guard Innocent

By KAY BELL
Avalanche-Journal Staff

After only 15 minutes of deliberation, a six-man Municipal Court jury today found Russell Sikes innocent of denying a Dallas man entry to Studio One disco June 16.

Sikes acquittal on the charge, one of the first to be filed under the city's public accommodations ordinance that was enacted last November, seemed to strike a heavy blow at the ordinance.

Warren Goss, Sikes' attorney, told the jury during his final argument, "The facts are not really in issue here, but's let's look at what he (Sikes) is charged with."

The charge against Sikes alleged that he denied entrance to the complainant without allowing the man to see a written dress code.

Goss argued that Sikes was employed by management and, under threat of his job, was required to do what they asked.

"Studio One should be on trial here," Goss said. "I don't know why, but it seems Mr. Sikes has got to be put up here and made an example of. Gentlemen of the jury, I am thoroughly confused by this whole situation."

Earlier today, in a surprise move, Goss called prosecutor Jack Chappell to the stand as the defense's first witness in the trial.

The complaint filed by Ollie Dailey against Sikes is one of five filed under the city's Public Accomodations Ordinance. Two more complaints against Sikes are pending, and club owners Roger Freeman and Rodney Holloman already have pleaded guilty to the complaints against them and appealed the cases to county court.

Goss called Chappell to the stand in an effort to "prove the calculated prosecution of this case and that my client is in double jeopardy."

Goss based the double jeopardy contention on the charges already filed against Freeman and Holloman.

After a heated debate among Goss, Chappell and Judge Fred Senter concerning the relevancy of Chappell's testimony, the prosecutor took the stand. However, Chappell objected from the witness stand to Goss's questioning, charging that the defense attorney was "on a fishing expedition."

"What have we got to hide here," Goss shouted. "Why don't you tell them the truth?"

Following the exchange between the two attorneys, Senter ruled Chappell's testimony irrelevant to the charge against Sikes and excused the deputy city attorney from the stand.

Sikes also took the stand this morning, refuting statements made by prosecution witnesses that he threatened Dailey with a can of Mace or a black jack.

The 22-year-old Security Protection Systems employee told the six-man jury managers of the club told him the dress code and said if there were any ques-

Fast Action Helps Save Motorcyclist

By JACK DOUGLAS
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Surgeons at Methodist Hospital were working feverishly this morning to save the leg of a 58-year-old Lubbock man who was injured in a car-motorcycle accident at 21st Street and Avenue P.

While a hospital spokesman said Edward Frank Miller of 3424 Ave. R is in danger of losing a leg, the policeman investigating the 7:30 a.m. mishap said Miller "most likely would have bled to death" if a Lubbock chiropractor had not stopped and given aid.

Miller reportedly was traveling south on Avenue P on a Harley-Davidson motorcycle and Royce Elmer Sikes, 76, of 1605 21st St. was traveling east on 21st Street when the vehicles collided.

Although Miller was lying in the street with one leg mangled, an ambulance was not immediately dispatched because the three persons who reported the accident did not say injuries were involved, police information officer Bill Morgan said.

However, chiropractor Dr. W.B. Lowery, who was going to his office, was on the scene seconds after the collision and began applying a tourniquet to Miller's leg, first using a rag and then a belt.

"I'm sure in my own mind he would

TIME OF SORROW — Dusk settles over the First Baptist Church at Clyde Tuesday night after members ended hours of prayer and mourning for friends and relatives killed in an air crash on the island of St. Croix. West Texans Mourn Dead In Air Crash

CLYDE (AP) — As reports of a Caribean air crash slowly filtered through this small West Texas community, teary-eyed members of First Baptist Church huddled in small groups to offer prayers and to comfort relatives of the victims.

"There were a lot of people upset," said Katrene Davidson. "But I guess it just takes something like this to bring you closer to God."

Members of the 890-member congregation gathered at the church Tuesday morning to wait for word on the fate of 12 members aboard the four-engine commuter plane that crashed on takeoff from a St. Croix airport.

The dead included Mr. and Mrs. J.O. Connel Jr, Stephen Sepaugh and Jack Rosinbaum, all of Clyde. Sharon Geye of Rising Star also was killed. Rev. Riley Fugitt and Caleb Watson of Clyde were critically injured.

"People flocked over here. It was a time of prayer, a time for Christian people to be with other Christian people," said Eunice Chambless.

"We were shocked and dismayed," said one resident. "How could this happen to them. Think of all the good they were doing."

Cattle Feedlot Inventories Total 10.3 Million

WASHINGTON (AP) — Except for a year ago, cattle feedlot inventories on July 1 were the largest in six years, according to the latest Agriculture Department quarterly survey.

The department said recently the number of cattle being fed for the slaughter market totaled 10.3 million head on July 1, a drop of 6 percent from more than 10.9 million a year ago.

However, except for the year-ago mark, the July 1 inventory of feedlot cattle was the most at midyear since 1973 when 12.7 million head were on hand in the 23 major beef states, officials said. Those produce about 95 percent of the nation's beef.

Bob Remmele, a specialist in the department's Economics, Statistics and Cooperatives Service, said a number of factors are involved, including uncertainty about the economy and whether consumer demand will support an expansion in feedlot beef output.

Remmele told a reporter that a year ago — when feedlot inventories were larger — cattle prices were increasing and were headed for further gains. Also, feed costs were less than they are now.

That helped put a bulge in cattle feedlot inventories a year ago.

A heavy export demand for corn and other grain has contributed to higher feed costs this year, along with uncertainties over the 1979 corn crop. Although it appears to be shaping up as a bumper harvest, USDA forecasts so far put it at 6.66 billion bushels, down from the record of 7.1 billion last year.

Also, many farmers and ranchers have been able to put animals on grass pasture this summer instead of selling them to feedlots.

In any case, total beef output by slaughter plants is expected to be down by about 10 percent or so in the last half of this year, reflecting the continued smaller supply of cattle.

Producers have begun to expand breeding herds, but it will take at least several more years before much impact will be felt in the supply of supermarket beef.

The report showed the July 1 feedlot inventory included 3.45 million heifers and heifer calves, a decline of 14 percent from a year ago.

The quarterly report showed that placements of new cattle in feedlots during April-June totaled 6.11 million head, down 7 percent from almost 6.6 million a year earlier.

Sales of "finished" cattle by feedlots in the second quarter also totaled about 6.11 million head, the report said. That was down 8 percent from more than 6.62 million in the same period of last year.

Looking to the third quarter, the report said feeders expect to market about 6.23 million cattle, down 5 percent from more than 6.52 million in July-September of last year.

Cattle prices have dropped from their record levels during the spring — at some points averaging around $77 per 100 pounds for Choice-grade steers on the Omaha, Neb., market — to around $65 or so.

Department experts say "fed" cattle prices may remain fairly stable in coming months, depending on demand, feed costs and the outcome of corn and other crops this fall.

The number of cattle on feed in the seven major producing states — which are reported monthly as well as quarterly — totaled 7.56 million on July 1, down 5 percent from 7.98 million a year ago.

Those seven states account for about three-fourths of the nation's beef that reaches consumers.

The July 1 inventory in the seven states included an increase in one: California 709,000 head, up 3 percent from a year ago.

Declines were reported in the other six: Arizona 363,000 head, down 3 percent; Colorado 880,000 down 3; Iowa 1,180,000 down 9; Kansas 1,290,000 down 7; Nebraska 1,380,000 down 5; and Texas 1,760,000 down 5.

Family Life Called Aid To U.S. Unity

BOSTON (AP) — Rose Kennedy, who just celebrated her 89th birthday, says the strength of family life has helped hold the United States together.

"For my husband, Joe, the family always was the center of life," Mrs. Kennedy said in a letter written for the Boston Herald American. "... No matter how busy he was, he was always ready to drop everything else to talk with the children about schoolwork or sailing or the countless other things on their growing minds."

Her son Jack was like his father, she said.

"Some of the happiest times in my life were the weekends on Cape Cod in the years he was president. He would come up from Washington with his children. ... My husband and I would stand on the lawn at Hyannisport by the flagpole to greet them when they arrived."

A woman who has lost two children in plane crashes and two to assassins' bullets, Mrs. Kennedy said: "Love and joy and happiness, along with worry and sorrow and tragedy, are parts of a larger whole that give vitality to our existence and meaning to the time given us on this earth."

Council Says Poor Need Energy Aid

WASHINGTON (AP) — Poor Americans should be able to get some kind of help, such as fuel stamps, if the nation turns to gasoline rationing during the energy shortage, recommends a national advisory council.

The fuel stamp program, as envisioned by the National Advisory Council on Economic Opportunity, would be similar to the existing food stamp program. Another alternative would be to offer ration coupons, "at affordable rates," so the poor could get to and from work. The council, in a report released this week, also said any such gasoline program should be linked to one providing the poor and the elderly with lower cost fuel oil for home heating.

Junta Issues Sniper Warning

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — The revolutionary junta said it could not guarantee anyone's safety on the streets of Managua after 7 p.m. because of shooting by pro-Somoza gunmen and warned that snipers will be shot.

Alfredo Cesar Aguirre, the junta's chief of staff, said one or two shooting incidents were being reported each night. Interior Minister Tomas Borge claimed they were the work of members of dictator Anastasio Somoza's national guard who were slipping out of the Red Cross refugee center where they were interned.

Led by Borge, Sandinista troops Tuesday night surrounded the national guard refugee center at La Franca, about a mile from the Managua airport.

The interior minister dsignated the compound a prisoner-of-war camp and said all national guardsmen who turned themselves in at other Red Cross refugee centers around the country would be brought there.

The Red Cross has estimated about 4,000 national guardsmen and their families are in its camps. It is making a list of them for the government which will determine those to be brought to trial for alleged war crimes.

Borge said the guardsmen's families could leave the country immediately if they wanted to but the men would have to be cleared before they could go.

The junta took control of the government last Friday, three days after the seven-week uprising by the Sandinista guerrillas drove Somoza from the country. Cesar Aguirre reported water and electricity have been restored to more than three-quarters of Managua.

"We have done in four days what we expected to take 10 days," he said.

He said the junta thought it would be at least two weeks before Managua was under "its physical control but the task was accomplished much sooner. People are already able to go freely from one part of the city to the other."

About a third of the city's public transportation system was operating despite the destruction of many buses during the fighting, he reported. Workers were returning to their jobs, and some factories resumed limited production, he said.

Cesar Aguirre said the first priority was to get a cotton crop planted in the next few weeks. Cotton was Nicaragua's main cash crop before the civil war. He said efforts also would be made to get such essential food crops as rice and beans planted.

Preliminary estimates of damage during the war run as high as $500 million, Cesar Aguirre said. He emphasized the figure could go even higher when damage reports from other cities come in.

The Red Cross estimates that 40,000 to 50,000 Nicaraguans were killed in the past 10 months, beginning with the first Sandinista uprising last September.

Soviets Respond To Chinese Charges

By United Press International

The Soviet Union says a Chinese officer killed by its border troops nine days ago intruded a half-mile into Soviet territory, disputing Chinese claims he was shot inside China.

The Tass news agency report Tuesday night was the first public response to charges carried by the New China News Agency that 20 Soviet troops ambushed and killed a Chinese political officer along China's northeast border July 16.

The Chinese said two civilians — a political officer and a veterinarian — were attacked as they were inspecting pastures in China.

China's foreign ministry delivered a note to the Soviet Embassy in Peking calling the attack a "serious incident of provocation and bloodshed ... wholly prearranged by the Soviet side," the Chinese news agency said.

China said the incident occurred in the Xinjiang Uygur Autonomous Region and that Soviet toops killed Li Baozin, the politicial officer, and wounded Burumbutug, the veterinarian.

It said Li's body and the wounded man were then carried into Soviet territory.

In the Soviet version, Tass said the incident occurred 27 miles southeast of Khabarasu Pass in East Kayakhstan and that four armed Chinese servicemen had intruded a half mile into Soviet territory.

"During a clash with a Soviet border guard detail, one serviceman was killed, one wounded and detained," Tass said. "Documents and arms were captured. The killed intruder turned out to be an officer of Chinese security bodies."

China believes the shooting incident was part of a Soviet attempt to bring pressure against China on two fronts, Western military analysts in Peking said today.

The analysts said Peking fears the first serious border incident in 10 years was linked with a Soviet-aided military buildup in Vietnam.

Tass said the Soviet foreign ministry made a representation on the matter to the Chinese Embassy in Moscow, but the fact that the Soviet Union waited until July 17 to orally protest the incident indicated to diplomats in Peking that Moscow did not want to cripple Sino-Soviet reconciliation talks scheduled to begin in mid-September in the Soviet capital.

The Chinese news agency called the Soviet version "sheer fabrication."

There have been repeated skirmishes along the 4,500-mile border in a dispute over 600,000 square miles of land the Chinese claim was extorted from them by he Russian czars.

The worst clash came in March 1969 when troops battled over a disputed island in the Ussuri River.

Test-Tube Baby Celebrates Birthday

LONDON (AP) — Louise Brown, the world's first authenticated test-tube baby, was a year old today, but the controversy set off by her birth continues.

"She is the perfect baby, pretty, big for her age, and very forward," her 32-year-old mother Lesley told the Daily Mail, which signed an exclusive contract with the Browns before the baby was born.

"She began talking at 10 months, and we think that she's not only going to grow up into a very pretty blonde but a very intelligent one too," Louise's 39-year-old father, John, told the newspaper.

The Mail published a photograph of a chubby blonde toddler and said she managed to get a foot into the chocolate batter of her birthday cake as it was being mixed.

It said the cake had pink and white icing and was crowned with a single pink candle.

Mrs. Brown could not have a baby normally because the fallopian tubes leading to her womb were blocked and the blockage could not be removed surgically, the same problem 40 percent of the infertile women in the world have.

She went to gynecologist Patrick Steptoe and physiologist Robert Edwards, who had been doing pioneer research for 12 years into microsurgical techniques for fertilization in vitro, meaning in glass, and embryo transfer.

The British doctors took an egg from her ovaries, fertilized it with her husband's sperm in a glass dish in Steptoe's laboratory in Oldham, and reimplanted it in Mrs. Brown's womb where it developed normally.

"We found nature could not put an egg and sperm together, so we did it. We do not see anything immoral in doing that," Steptoe said.

Louise was delivered by Caesarean section on July 25, 1978, at Oldham General Hospital. The government Medical Research Council confirmed she was the first test-tube baby on record.

The births of at least two other test-tube babies have been reported since, one, a girl, in Calcutta, India, on Oct. 3, 1978, and the other, a boy, in Glasgow, Scotland, on Jan. 14. Both infants were reported normal and in good health.

But with these and other test-tube births said to be on the way, religious leaders, scientists and many others are still divided over religious, ethical, scientific and legal issues raised.

For women with Mrs. Brown's physiological problem, the technique offers hope of motherhood. But the Roman Catholic Church is opposed in principle to artificial insemination, and a Vatican spokesman said church doctrine holds that fertilization "must be carried out according to nature."

Pakistan's leading Islamic scholar, Ehtishamul Haque Thanva, called test-tube birth "a defiance of the laws of nature." But Rabbi Israel Klavan of the Rabbinical Council of America said it "does not present a large problem, provided that those involved are the husband and wife who want to have a child."

The U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare imposed a moratorium on government funding of test-tube research in 1975. On March 16, a government ethics advisory board took the first step to end the moratorium, saying it had no ethical objections to the procedure if its purpose was to help infertile couples. But HEW delayed action until after mid-August at the earliest to await comment from interested parties and the public.

Sailor Calls Loneliness Trip's Main Drawback

FALMOUTH, England (AP) — The solo sailor from Minnesota's White Bear Lake says loneliness was one of the worst things about his 54-day Atlantic crossing in his homemade, 10-foot sloop.

"I badly missed company and had to pass the time reading books and magazines," said 39-year-old Gerry Spiess after he docked the Yankee Girl here at the southwest tip of England to the cheers of 10,000 Britons.

Spiess hadn't spoken in so long "he sounded as though he needed a drink of water," said his 37-year-old wife, Sally, who flew to England with his parents, Louis and Jeanette Spiess.

The Yankee Girl was the smallest craft ever to cross the Atlantic from west to east, displacing the 12-foot Nonoalca in which American William Verity made a 68-day voyage in 1966 from Florida to Ireland

However, the Guinness Book of World Records says the smallest trans-Atlantic voyager was the April Fool, just under 6 feet, in which Hugo S. Vihlen, another American, made an east-to-west crossing from Morocco to Florida in 1968. His time was 85 days.

Spiess, a former employee of the Minnesota Mining & Manufacturing Co., set out from Virginia Beach, Va., and encountered the usual hazards of a solo ocean crossing in a small boat.

He told a reporter that after one "particularly bad storm the thought crossed my mind that I might have to give up. I felt very despondent during these times, but the boat handled fantastically, beyond my expectations."

"He got pitched overboard after some bad weather when the seas were still rolling," his wife said. "He told me he climbed back so fast he scarcely got wet."

"I did have some bad moments, but I'm absolutely delighted to have made it at last," Spiess told reporters.

Britain's Slow Road Back

THE SLOW PROCESS of rescuing Great Britain from the crippling effects of a generation of experimentation with socialism has been started by the new Conservative government.

Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's administration announced this week it will put up for sale half of Britain's nationalized aerospace industry.

Over the vocal opposition of Labor Party members of Parliament, her ministers also pledged to reduce or phase out state aid to the nation's ailing ship building industry.

Both actions, long overdue, are fraught with dangers.

GREAT BRITAIN'S economy has been struggling along ever since World War II, in sharp contrast with the economies of West Germany and others which didn't overburden industry with state ownership and controls.

In turning out the Labor Party this spring, British voters signaled their disenchantment with the worsening economy and the vise grip in which labor unions have held the country.

But the Welfare State has so permeated the nation's political, economic and social fabric since the 1950s that a slowdown, let alone a turn-around, in the nation's plunge will be traumatic for many of the people.

"The treatment may seem intolerable," Chancellor of the Exchequer Sir Geoffrey Howe warned Monday, however, "but without the treatment our condition could easily become incurable."

"The result can only be horrendous social distress, mass unemployment and a disastrous undermining of the level of industrial activity," protested David Basnett, general secretary of the General and Municipal Workers' Union.

ABOUT HALF OF British Aerospace, with assets of $740.6 million, will be offered for sale before Christmas, Mrs. Thatcher's government said.

Aid to industries in depressed areas will be cut by 38 percent in the next three years, public spending will be cut by $9.2 billion and other actions will be taken, she said, to rescue Britain from the previous Labor administration's "drab, grey world of socialism."

It's a noble undertaking—and one the United States should avoid by stopping its own slide, before it's too late, into the same abyss of a government-planned and owned economy into which it has been following Great Britain.

'D-Day Has Arrived For West'

WASHINGTON—France's President Valery Giscard d'Estaing played as big a role as any of President Carter's advisers in getting him to revamp his energy program and include a major U.S. initiative to undertake a massive project to develop alternative fuels.

Revealed by Vice President Mondale at the governor's conference this month, the proposed new U.S. energy initiative was decided on after the French President bluntly criticized Carter's lack of leadership in the energy crisis.

While the French leader's public remarks that the U.S. hasn't yet begun to economize on the use of oil made the headlines, it was the unpublicized part of his criticism that spurred Carter into action following his return from the Tokyo summit.

AFTER STRESSING that conservation was necessary, the French President told Carter that the world was waiting for the U.S. to take the leadership in launching a crash program of developing alternative fuels for oil.

"For the long-range solution to the growing energy crisis, the West has no place to turn except to the U.S.," Giscard d'Estaing declared. "If the U.S. accepts this obligation, others in the free world will be prepared to follow and help. If the U.S. doesn't accept this leadership role, the Western world will go into a great decline."

In their private conversations, the French President was even blunter. He told Carter that "D-Day has arrived for the West. The U.S. must take the leadership or forfeit it for this Century."

Noting that the oil situation and energy problem have spread fear and pessimism across the Western world, the French President said:

"If the U.S. will lead the way in breaking out of this fog and move quickly to develop other fuels on a massive basis, the fear will quickly give way to courage and confidence."

Carter was told that no other country has the resources or the finances or the know-how to take this leadership role but the U.S.

IN THE SHORT-range, the French President said the oil producing states will come to see that they must provide more oil now or face a freeze out from the energy table of tomorrow.

After listening to this blunt talk, Carter told aides he was impressed. On returning to Washington from Tokyo, he decided to expand his energy proposals and hold his own series of summits with U.S. leaders from all walks of life.

The President was assured of swift action by Congress for his massive program to develop alternative fuels.

House Democratic leaders headed by Rep. Thomas P. O'Neill, D-Mass., the speaker, in their Camp David meeting with the President pointed out that the House had just passed legislation to set up a semi-private corporation to push the development of synthetic fuels.

THE PRESIDENT WAS told that his expanded program could be introduced in the Senate and passed quickly there and that the differences between the House and Senate versions could then be worked out in conference so an alternative fuels program could be passed this year.

The leaders proposed that part of the excess-profits tax on oil, which is now moving through Congress, be earmarked to help finance the massive investment needed in the development of new fuels from coal, shale, tar-sands, and grain.

President Carter indicated that he agreed with this approach but stressed that additional revenues would be needed from other sources if the program was to meet the needs of our times.

ANOTHER REVENUE SOURCE under consideration by the administration is the imposition of a $5 to $10 a barrel oil import surcharge.

Originally considered during the Nixon and Ford administrations but rejected since it would greatly increase the cost of heating oil and gasoline, the controversial oil tax is now being pushed by President Carter's national security adviser, Zbigniew Brzezinski.

How the President decides to finance his bold new initiative is expected to tell us how far he plans to go in assuming the leadership role in trying to solve the growing energy crisis, and the burden he plans to put on the American people.

SALT II--Ashes To Ashes?

WASHINGTON—There is an unreality about it all.

To be sure, the historic Senate Caucus Room maintains its old solidarity as the Foreign Relations Committee lines up at one table, face to face with President Carter's hucksters who are here to sell the Russo-American agreement called SALT II.

And there's no doubt, as Cyrus Vance, secretary of state declared, that the arsenals of the USSR and the U.S. already hold 14,000 nuclear warheads, the smallest of which is many times more powerful than the Hiroshima A-bomb.

But if you think that such tired old terror-talk is going to weigh much in the Senate's ratification decision, you're mistaken. The very enormity begets unreality. Death in the millions is incalculable. Other matters count for more.

BY DEFINITION, imponderables are unweighable, yet they are already tipping the scales. Nothing, quoted the late Everett Dirksen in a debate of long ago, is more powerful than an idea whose time has come.

In the Caucus Room, in the brains of senators, there are dozens of powerful ideas at large, and these will eventually decide the ratification process. In no particular order, I list some of these fugitive ideas by author.

Frank Church, committee chairman, is obsessed with the notion that he's being hornswaggled. "I don't want any surprises," he said plaintively to Sec. Vance.

Church recalled that with SALT I in 1972, both President Nixon and Sec. Kissinger used hidden ball tricks in order to get the treaty ratified.

ONE RESULT was that, since then, the Soviet strategic power has jumped ahead of ours, left us in the dust, established a momentum that will carry them, unless halted, to irresistible military supremacy.

Here's an imponderable that won't go away; it'll be in the scales throughout the debate.

Sen. Claiborne Pell drew a laugh when he asked the administration witnesses, Vance and Brown, if they believed a Russian "Senate" would okay this complex and ambiguous pact.

The joke, of course, is that the Soviets have no equivalent to the U.S. Senate.

Sec. Brown declined to take the bait, but put it this way: If we ratify SALT II, we will have to spend billions of dollars keeping technological pace with arms-manufacture, but many more billions if we don't ratify it.

What other ideas flitted above our heads in the Caucus Room? Trust Sen. George McGovern for a lulu.

"The main issue in these hearings," he announced, "is whether the SALT process in general and particularly SALT II offers the American people a realistic hope that the arms race can be reversed...(Is) this treaty tolerable in the era of tight budgets and unmet social needs?"

But there are other senators, like the newcomer Gordon Humphrey, R-N.H., whose ideas did not quail at the thought of an arms race—one that the U.S. would surely win.

If this idea catches fire, it may well reduce SALT II to ashes.

By and large, ideology and not military expertise is dominating the early innings of the momentous debate. Conservatives, of which there are more than ever, will never come to trust Russia.

It is only the liberals whose ideas flirt with the vision of world peace between these mighty nations and equally mighty philosophies.

Sylvia Porter:

Jump In Shoe Prices May Top 30 Percent

IT'S HARDLY WORTH a line of precious newsprint to remind you that the great force behind the lofty prices of beef in '79 has been the tight supply of cattle.

But are you also fully aware of what this supply pattern has been doing to the prices of shoes?

Shoe prices are climbing sharply and will increase even more as the fall and winter fashions in shoes reach the stores in coming weeks.

There is no other outlook, say spokesmen for such giants of shoe manufacturing in the U.S. as the St. Louis-headquartered International Shoe Co. and the Brown Shoe Co.

A SPOKESMAN FOR Brown, for instance, notes that the price of hides soared by 124 percent from April '78 to April '79. During this span, the wholesale prices of shoes rose 17.8 percent.

Within the next 12 months, the prices of leather goods to you and me are expected to jump 30 percent.

The grim projections for shoe prices can be traced to the jump in the price of hides, as reported by the American Footwear Industries Association.

In December '78, hide prices were 52.5 percent higher than in the identical period of '77.

By March '79, they were 140 percent higher than in December '77. By April '79, the price gap had widened to 157 percent above the '77 level.

OUR DOMESTIC SUPPLY of hides in 1979 is projected at 34.6 million, a significant drop of 4.9 million hides from the 1978 supply.

In the face of a dwindling supply and soaring leather prices, it is a paradox that we are exporting record totals of our hides.

If '79's exports do not fall below the 24.5 million hides purchased by foreign countries in '78, we will be sending an unprecedented 70.8 percent of our hides abroad this year, the AFIA predicts.

Upshot: domestic buyers may find only about 10 million hides left for their use, a dramatic 42 percent drop from '78.

The hasty "correction" in cattle prices in recent weeks appears to be bottoming out. Industry analysts anticipate the renewal of tight supplies and believe any relief in high beef prices is likely to be temporary.

Higher feed costs plus an unanticipated runup in the prices of grains and soybeans could add even more to the price of cattle in 1980, with the obvious impact on retail prices for beef and shoes.

It might even be said, with more than a touch of irony, that it is becoming almost as expensive to walk as to drive!

* Shoes that cost $30 to $35 last autumn are scheduled to be priced at $40 or more this fall. Comparable quality footwear that sold recently for $40 to $45 will be priced at $55 and up.

* Higher priced men's shoes that sold for $80-plus this past spring will be nearing $100. Styles that retailed for $100 will be up by at least 25 percent.

To maintain established price ranges (or price "points"), producers will be shifting more and more to man-made materials.

International Shoe, for instance, will be putting greater stress on the use of Clarino in uppers. This Japanese-made import compares closely with the qualities of real leather.

Eventually, of course, ranchers will breed more cattle and there should be more leather as well as beef supplies—but this may be at least three years away.

HOW DO WE explain that with only 15 percent of the world's cattlehides, we account for 75 percent of worldwide cattle trade?

Why is it that while our exports have skyrocketed even as the supply of hides has shrunk, such governments as Argentina and Brazil (with 10 percent of the world supply) forbid exports of hides?

With simulated-leather products, often petroleum-based, subject to the price hikes of the oil producers, and leather goods rising, we may be entering an era in which there will be no "low cost" shoes made from any material!

James J. Kilpatrick:

Carter Goes Up Down Staircase

WASHINGTON—Carter's slam-bang energy program rests upon this primary assumption, that our present level of dependency upon foreign oil endangers our national security and imperils our economic survival.

The assumption is sound enough, but Congress will want to do some long, cool thinking about the specific measures Carter proposes to meet the peril.

Mind you, these particular recommendations, or others very much like them, may be the best that can be devised. The President's ideas ought not to be condemned out of hand.

All the same, his program is filled with contradictions and implications that merit reflection.

FOR STARTERS: THE most pressing need is for a dramatic increase in the domestic production of petroleum. In a word, the President wants the oil companies to produce more oil.

Very well. He begins by denying them the capital by which more oil might be produced. This is the direct, immediate consequence of his nearly confiscatory tax upon "windfall profits."

Instead of permitting the private sector to do its job, Carter would transfer the money to the federal treasury in the thought that government can do the job better. If ever a doubtful proposition were advanced, this is it.

Carter thus proposes to create an Energy Security Corporation. Over the next 10 years this independent federal corporation would receive $88 billion that otherwise would have remained with the companies.

The money would go for the development of oil from shale, from coal and from unconventional sources.

The President has other ideas that would require the pervasive involvement of government in the production, conservation and allocation of energy.

He is urging new incentives for development of marginal resources; he would impose sweeping new regulations upon the utilities; he would appropriate $2.4 billion annually to assist low-income families in meeting higher costs of gasoline and home heating; he would invest $16.5 billion over the 10-year period in mass transit.

THERE IS MUCH more, including the presidential decree imposing minimum and maximum temperatures in all public buildings, but these proposals alone will indicate the magnitude of the federal involvement Carter is asking.

He is urging the virtual nationalization of energy. His program, taken as a whole, would leave few significant decisions to be made by the private sector.

True, the proposed Energy Security Corporation would set up some plants that were entirely government-owned and operated, and some that were government-owned but privately operated.

This may be a distinction without a difference. Ultimate control still would lie in a public agency, and because public funds are involved it could hardly be otherwise.

WE HAVE BEEN in the shallow waters of socialism for some time; Carter's program gets us down toward the deep end.

Other worrisome contradictions appear likely. A key part of the package is a three-member Energy Mobilization Board.

Its task is to cut through the jungle of red tape that now slows the building of new energy facilities—pipelines, for example, and shale oil production plants.

The board could override all local, state and federal laws that serve to delay "critical" projects.

But the board could not possibly expedite such projects without running roughshod over environmentalists—and environmentalists are among Carter's most vocal constituents. The President cannot dig his pipelines and stall them too.

Lightly Speaking

Many parents today talk about the younger generation as if they didn't have anything to do with it.

Before 18, you can't wait until tomorrow. After 40, you never quite finish with yesterday.

Many kids in college have given up meat and become vegetarians. At the same time, their parents have become vegetarians because they have kids in college.

The handwriting on the wall means that somebody's mother is about to hit the ceiling.

So They Say...

Seems St. Peter looked down on earth and saw the Americans, 90 percent of whom were busting the 10 commandments left and right—smoking pot, lusting after their neighbors' wives, cheating on their income taxes.

"Still," mused St. Peter to himself, "there's that wonderful 10 percent, those fine people who don't booze it up, don't smoke pot, don't lie, cheat or steal, and let their neighbors' wives alone. I think they're so wonderful, I'm going to sit right down and write them a warm letter of commendation!"

And so he did just that. Know what he said? No? Oh, you didn't get your letter?

Indecision is what makes some of us nervous. Should we worry more about where our next dollar is coming from or where our last dollar went?

Energy Crisis Brings Changes

By JOHN CUNNIFF

NEW YORK (AP) — As energy prices rise and people become conscious of the potential depletion of natural resources, conspicuous consumption has been given an ignominious bum's rush.

It will be resurrected some day, but probably never again in the style of the past 30 years, when automobiles, for example, were rated on their useless horsepower and their parlor-like interiors.

It came to an embarrassing end. It was like the uncle who dressed like a banker but never did a lick of work in his life, and was eventually thrown out of the house. It was designed to impress rather than to perform. It was pride, snobbery, idleness.

It ingratiated itself into our houses, too. Throughout the past 20 years, they grew larger and more elaborate, with extra bedrooms, a family room that might never be used, an extra half bath, a heated garage and a pool.

Any real estate agent will tell you that many such houses were sold on the basis of appearance rather than structural quality, ease of living or suitability. To afford such lavishness meant you had arrived.

Conspicuous consumpton is always associated with such an abundance of something or other that it leaves the owner puzzled about demonstrating it. A bank account shows little; a big house shows a lot.

It was in part the motivation behind the scraggy miner who hit it big and built a castle on the biggest hill in town.

Analysis

Or the mill owner. Or the person who could afford to buy into an overpriced subdivision.

But now, the real estate people say, the size of houses is likely to shrink. So important have operating costs become, they contend, that even the conspicuously rich may have to reconsider.

The extra rooms are being closed off. The heat to the garage is being shut off. And some people with extremely conspicuous manses are selling their homes to institutions and moving to pieds-a-terre in town.

The changes already are observed by the analysts. Advance Mortgage Corp. officials commented this week that henceforth "luxury will be conveyed less by footage and more by quality of finish and amenities."

It and other real estate concerns report a return to considerations of location: nearness to work, stores, schools, churches, transportation. Remoteness, once a symbol of those who could spend big, is out. No longer may it be smart to leave the environment in which a daily living is earned. The new criterion, says Advance Mortgage, "will be nearness to employment centers and to good public transportation."

Soon, of course, conspicuous consumption will return, thanks to the need of buyers to show they are better off than others, and thanks also to American marketing enterprise, which will provide them with the means.

In the meantime, many Americans may begin to treasure their homes for essential virtues rather than as symbols of affluence. It happened with the car: Buyers learned that less could offer them more.

Already in some communities the sticker prices of small, efficient cars are the prices at which you begin to negotiate. Final prices can be a couple of hundred dollars more. Demand supports the premiums.

And you can already observe in the real estate advertisements that the selling terminology for houses is changing. Conspicuous by its presence in a recent ad was the phrase "triply insulated."

Which suggests that there is probably more than one way to waste.

"All Quiet on the Western Front," the anti-war movie based on the novel of the same name, won the Academy Award for best picture in 1930.

DR. LAMB

Restricted Exercise

By LAWRENCE LAMB, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — Please send me The Health Letter number 3-7 on Girth Control: Avoiding the Big Middle. I'd also like to receive the one on the way to lose weight. I'm a 37-year-old overweight female. I'm 5 feet 6 and need to lose between 20 and 30 pounds.

I've been restricted in exercise this past year because of a knee injury I received playing basketball. I'm now having more trouble with my knee as I teach school on the second floor of a junior high school building. My doctor thinks I have an arthritic condition and I am on from 10 to 12 aspirin a day and do not wear heels over one inch. The aspirin has really helped but I need to lose the weight and exercise more.

DEAR READER — I'm glad you recognize that you really can't do much about decreasing your girth measurements unless you get rid of the fat first. Many people don't realize that there's just about as much fat inside the abdominal cavity as there is outside underneath the skin. There's no way you can squeeze down this fat by improving the strength of your abdominal muscles so you do have to get the fat out as well as off.

I am sending you The Health Letter number 3-7 on Girth Control that you requested. Also I am sending you The Health Letter number 4-7, Weight Losing Diet. Other readers who want either one of these issues can send 75 cents for each one along with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for mailing. Send your request to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019.

It's very hard to do a lot of the exercises that use a lot of calories and help a person lose weight when he has knee problems or, for that matter, feet, ankle or hip problems as well. Most of the jogging and running exercises just simply are too hard on injured joints. Of course, the heavier you are, the harder it is on the joints involved. As you know from your own experience, many sports such as basketball require running, an activity that is almost impossible if you have joint problems.

For people who have joint problems, I think one of the best ways to exercise is in the swimming pool. The water will help support your body weight so you're less likely to injure or wear the joints. Of course, if you're a good swimmer that helps a lot.

If you can't swim, you can still exercise in the pool. You can get in the shallow end and bob up and down or hang on the edge of the pool and do kicks and other exercises. The whole point is to work the body while you're in water.

You might be able to use a bicycle. It supports the body weight some and helps to some degree, but I don't think it's nearly as good as doing exercises in water.

I don't expect everybody to have a backyard pool and certainly in winters like the last one we just had, there are many parts of the United States where no one would want to be in an outside pool. However, most communities do have an indoor pool somewhere, either at a health club or a YMCA or YWCA that can be available to use for exercise.

Medical Letter Gives Travelers Suggestions On Immunizations

By AL ROSSITER JR.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — If you're planning to travel abroad, you still have to worry about immunizations, especially for visits to tropical and underdeveloped countries.

Legal requirements for disease protection vary from time to time in different countries, but the Medical Letter, a nonprofit newsletter for doctors, says some reasonable recommendations can be made.

Probably the most important medical advice for travelers is to make sure they are protected against malaria, the Medical Letter said. Other diseases that travelers may need immunization against include tetanus and diphtheria, polio, measles, hepatitis, yellow fever, typhoid, plague, rabies, cholera and smallpox.

The newsletter said adults and children traveling to areas with a high risk of malaria should take anti-malarial medication once a week beginning one week before arrival. The drug chloroquine phosphate was recommended for use before arrival and for six weeks after leaving the malaria area.

The Medical Letter said travelers to areas where the malaria organism is resistant to chloroquine should take pyrimethamine. Pregnant women, however, were advised not to take pyrimethamine.

The chills and fever of malaria can strike down the unwary tourist who travels to most areas of Africa and much of Asia including all of India and areas of the islands in Oceania.

In the Americas, the Medical Letter says many parts of South America and Central America including parts of Mexico have a risk of malaria. In the Caribbean all of Haiti carries a malaria risk as do parts of the Dominican Republic bordering Haiti.

Science Today

In many areas, the chances of contracting malaria are greatest outside large cities and in the areas removed from the usual tourist routes.

For other diseases, the Medical Letter recommends:

Tetanus and diphtheria — everybody, traveling or not, should receive a tetanus-diphtheria booster injection every 10 years.

Polio — travelers not previously immunized against polio should receive polio vaccine.

Measles — people born after 1957 who have not received measles vaccine, and who have not had the disease, probably should receive the vaccine before traveling.

Hepatitis — immunoglobulin to prevent hepatitis should be taken only by travelers to developing countries who are going outside the usual tourist routes, or are planning to stay three months or longer.

Yellow fever — vaccine should be taken for travel to infected areas.

Typhoid — vaccine recomended for travelers to rural areas of tropical countries and for any area where an outbreak is occurring.

Entertainers Protest Tax

LONDON (AP) — Actors and actresses mingled Tuesday with showgirls, ballerinas and impresarios, slowing traffic to a crawl in Piccadilly, as 3,000 British entertainers gathered to protest the theater policies of Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's government.

RICHARDSON

The mile-long procession Tuesday from Hyde Park Corner to the royal opera house at Covent Garden was organized by the actors' union, Equity, to protest cuts in government subsidies and an across-the-board increase in sales tax.

Among the participants was Susan Hampshire, star of the television series "The Forsythe Saga."

"The Scrooge-like cuts by the government will only worsen what is already a critical situation," said Sir Ralph Richardson, 76-year-old stage star and veteran of more than 42 British and Hollywood movies.

Producer Defends Movie

NEW YORK (AP) — The producer of a movie starring Al Pacino as a detective who goes on a psychopathic murder spree after discovering his own homosexuality says "we're not making an anti-gay picture."

PACINO

"All we're doing is making a film called 'Cruising,'" says producer Jerry Weintraub. Gay rights groups contend the film's portrayal of homosexuals harms their cause.

The movie focuses on an undercover police officer, played by Pacino, who is supposed to stop killings of homosexuals in Greenwich Village, where the movie is being made.

However, the detective goes on a psychopathic killing spree when he uncovers his own homosexuality.

Protesters showed up Tuesday during filming. Many called the mayor's Office of Motion Picture and Television to demand a halt to the movie.

Defendant Attacks Lawyer

NEW YORK (AP) — One of the teen-agers accused in the beating last year of former Olympic ice skating champion Dick Button knocked his lawyer to the floor and injured two court officers before he was dragged away from a court appearance.

One officer was hospitalized with a groin injury and another suffered an arm injury in the incident Tuesday.

Kenneth Straw, 19, leaped from his chair when he saw his mother, who was in court, apparently slip and fall to the floor.

While the jury of nine women and three men looked on, Straw rushed toward his mother while screaming obscenities about homosexuals.

Straw and two other youths were on trial in Manhattan's Supreme Court on charges of beating at least four persons on July 5, 1978.

Straw later returned to the court and assured the judge that he would remain calm.

Begin Recovering Slowly

JERUSALEM (AP) — Prime Minister Menachem Begin is recovering slowly after being hospitalized for a blood clot that blocked a small artery in his brain, and his doctors say they will stop issuing daily medical bulletins on his condition.

Dr. Assa Harel of Hadassah Hospital said Tuesday that Begin was continuing to improve gradually as expected, but there were no dramatic changes.

Two family doctors reached by The Associated Press said that from the information released by the hospital they believed Begin had suffered what commonly is called a stroke. Begin's doctors have refused to use the term because it usually indicates paralysis and is not a precise medical word.

Begin was expected to be released next week, and his doctors said he should be able to function normally in office.

Marriage With Twists

HARRINGTON, Del. (AP) — The wedding chapel was a stomach-churning carnival ride, the wedding march was rock music blaring through two loudspeakers, the reception room was a big red-and-blue striped tent and the bridal suite was the floor of a tractor-trailer truck covered with blankets.

The Lighter Side Of Today's News

As for the honeymoon — well, it was non-existent for Bob and Shirley Johnson, who had to get back to work at the Delaware State Fair.

The two, who had been engaged for four years, tied the knot Monday on the Himalaya, a train of silver cars that twirl riders both frontward and backward.

Johnson, 36, and his 35-year-old wife, veterans of more than 40,000 miles across the United States with the James E. Strates shows, were married by Kent County Clerk of the Peace Edith Hemphill, who called the ceremony "probably the most unusual I have ever performed."

"We just always wanted to get married on a ride," said Johnson, who has run the carnival's ape and girlie shows for the past nine years.

U.S. Naval Ships Rescue Vietnamese Boat People

By United Press International

The U.S. Navy today rescued its first Vietnamese refugees under President Carter's new campaign to save the boat people.

A Navy spokesman said the 7th Fleet oiler Wabash picked up 19 Vietnamese in an open boat Tuesday about 100 miles west of the Philippines.

It was the first group to be rescued since Pesident Carter ordered the Navy to be "particularly alert for refugees and to render all possible assistance to vessels in distress." U.S.-owned ships had previously picked up about 1,000 Vietnamese.

In Kuala Lumpur, Malaysia, 261 Vietnamese refugees, including a new-born baby, left a West German cargo ship today on their way to a new life in West Germany. They had been rescued from their sinking vessel.

Two Italian warships and a support vessel left Singapore for the South China Sea in a search and rescue mission. Adm. Sergio Agostinelli said his vessels would provide medical aid and food but would pick up refugees only if necessary to save their lives.

The stepped-up rescue effort by Western nations followed their pledges at the U.N. Refugee conference in Geneva last week to take in more than 260,000 Indochinese refugees for resettlement.

The U.S. Navy spokesman in Manila declined to say how many American ships were in the South China Sea, citing Navy policy not to disclose its ship movements.

Vice President Walter Mondale told the Geneva conference that four more American ships would be dispatched to the area to help provide assistance and transport to refugees.

More than 250,000 Vietnamese are believed to have perished at sea in tattered junks.

In Washington, the State Department said Tuesday it plans to send U.S. consular officers to Vietnam to process refugees there for entry into the United States. Vietnamese authorities have agreed in principle to allow the Americans into Ho Chi Minh City, formerly Saigon.

Despite the Western pledges to accept the Vietnamese, Malaysia said it remains unconvinced and will not lift its naval blockade against the boat people "until we get a firm guarantee that we will not be burdened with the problem forever."

Prime Minister Datuk Hussein Onn also said the mobilization of the U.S. 7th Fleet "does not affect us one way or the other. Their ships will only pick up the boat people who sink their boats at sea."

In addition to the ships, the Navy spokesman said antisubmarine P-3 Orion turbo-prop planes were scouring the sea for refugees. The 7th fleet also set up a command information center at Subic Bay to monitor the rescue operations.

The 261 Vietnamese refugees in Malaysia were plucked from their sinking boat last week off the southeastern coast near the port of Mersing after they were driven out to sea from their makeshift beach camp by Malaysian troops.

A West German ship carrying supplies to an oil rig rescued them and transferred them to another cargo ship. The Bonn government has agreed to accept the refugees, who include one newborn baby, 89 children and several pregnant women.

Refugee Assistance Funds 'Insufficient'

AUSTIN (AP) — State welfare officials say Texas' ability to take care of needy refugees from Vietnam and Cambodia depends on a supplemental appropriation pending in Congress.

Right now, says Richard Gresser, program manager for the Indochina Refugee Program of the Department of Human Resources, almost all federal money is gone. No state money is involved.

"Due to the increased numbers being received in the state the funds (from Health, Education and Welfare) are insufficient and without them we cannot operate," Gresser said Tuesday. "There is no state money furnished."

Gresser said refugee assistance operations for August and September, will depend on a supplemental appropriation to HEW now pending in Washington.

Texas has an estimated Indochina refugee population of 27,000, the second largest in the nation.

Gresser said about 3,000 of these receive financial and medical assistance through state welfare administration. Monthly payments have been about $100,000 a month in Texas or about $30 per person, on the same basis as Assistance to Families of Dependent Children.

Gresser estimated the refugee program will cost about $3 million during this financial year, all federal money..

He said many of Texas' refugees were sent to other states first but moved to Texas because of the climate.

Houston has about half of the refugees receiving assistance, Gresser said, but there are sizeable populations also in the Beaumont, Port Arthur and Dallas areas.

NO SUMMER

The Sturbridge, Mass., museum lists 1816 as "the year in which there was no summer" in New England because 10 inches of snow fell on June 6, and in July and August' a half-inch of ice covered Vermont and New Hampshire.

Five Children Drown After Boat Capsizes

SYLVANIA, Ga. (UPI) — Norman Scurry's three children and two nieces didn't know how to swim. Neither did Scurry.

Scurry and the five children, on a family picnic Tuesday beside a lake off the Savannah River, piled into an 18-foot aluminum boat for a joy ride and when the overloaded craft capsized, they were helpless.

Scurry was strong enough to make it to shore despite his inability to swim, but he was unable to save the children. All five, four girls and a boy ranging in age from 15 to 6, drowned.

The accident happened within sight of the shore, where Scurry's wife and relatives were cooking fish for an afternoon picnic. Police said several family members reported hearing screams and when they looked out into the lake, the boat was sinking.

The bodies of the children were recovered Tuesday afternoon.

"After we ate the watermelon I said I'd take the kids out on a ride," Scurry told UPI in a telephone interview. "We got out there and was going on down the lake when my oldest daughter told me water was coming in the boat.

The water rushed in the front of the boat, Scurry said, sending the children scrambling toward the rear where he was running the small engine.

"I mean it just went right on down ... everyone kept trying to get to me," he said.

"One of them caught me, but I don't know which one it was. I went down three times and I can't swim myself. When I got to the top I couldn't see but one of the little girls. She was paddling trying to save herself, but I couldn't get there.

"It was something terrible seeing all my kids go down like that," Scurry said.

Screven County Sheriff George Bazemore said there were "too many people in that boat. The boat started rocking in the water and when the front went down, it starting taking on water.

A Screven deputy, Mike Kile, said the water was no more than 14 feet deep where the boat sank.

The victims were Scurry's children, Sandra 15, Nicholas, 6, and Sherry, 13; and nieces Felicia Scurry, 9, and Vickie Roberts, 11, of Savannah.

Padded Hangers Hard To Find

By SHARI LEWIS

There are things money can't buy. Then there are things that money can buy — if you can find them.

Here's something that you can easily make for your mother that she probably will love. She could buy one for herself, but they're hard to find.

It's a hanger with a big padded rod. Your Mom will use it to hang a knit dress or a fur stole.

The fabric on the bar will be nubby, so it'll grip the dress or stole and keep it from falling off the hanger. Here's how you make it:

Start with a long cardboard roll from paper toweling. Slit the roll lengthwise, and slip it over the bar of a wire coat hanger. Stuff the roll very well with newspaper, and then tape the slit closed.

Ask your Mom for an old clean towel. Cut the towel so that it is exactly the size of the cardboard roll and, as you place it over the cardboard roll, put a dab of glue here and there to hold it in place. Sew the two ends together under the roll, to keep the covering where it belongs. This seam has to be under the roll, so that it won't make a mark on a thin knit dress.

Knits stretch when they're hung on regular hangers, so your Mom will just lay her dress over the hanger, and it will keep its shape.

Japan's Refugee Policy Criticized

TOKYO (UPI) — "There are few Vietnamese refugees who wish to live in Japan permanently," says Prime Minister Masayoshi Ohira.

There must be more than seven, government critics reply.

Seven is the number of refugees Japan has taken since the communist victories in Vietnam and Cambodia in 1975. The United States has accepted more than 200,000 refugees, France 50,000, Australia 21,000.

Hundreds more "boat people" aboard vessels that made it to Japan rather than Malaysia, Indonesia or Hong Kong are in camps, waiting to go to any other country that will take them. Japan, the wealthiest nation in Asia, won't.

"Even if we are internationally criticized," Ohira told a press conference June 30, one day after the end of the Tokyo Summit, "there is nothing we can do because there are few refugees who desire to live in Japan permanently."

Yet a survey by the head of the Asian Relations Center of Tokyo's Sophia University in December 1977 — before the current exodus of the boat people from Vietnam — reached different conclusions.

"Of the 430 refugees in Japan then, 50 said they wanted to stay in Japan," said the Rev. Isamu Ando, who conducted the survey of refugees awaiting permanent homes.

"We asked those who didn't want to stay, why not? One hundred said, 'We'd like to remain but the Japanese government doesn't want us to, so we have to think about other places.'"

Critics of Japan's refusal to admit more refugees note that the nation made millions of dollars during the Vietnam War, selling equipment to U.S. and South Vietnamese forces. They note its wealth and the help it received in rebuilding after the devastation of World War II.

The Japanese government is respoding to the criticism with a slight increase in its refugee quota and the offer of plenty of money to other countries hat have been forced to take the refugees temporarily.

The government says it will accept 500 refugees — a bit more than the Netherlands already has taken. And it has promised to pay half the expenses of the U.N. High Commission for Refugees in assisting the boat people, which will probably cost Japan about $50 million this year.

But few people here expect the Japanese to allow many refugees to settle in Japan.

Japanese point out the country already is overcrowded: It has 115 million people living in a nation the size of California. On top of that, much of the land is rocky, unfarmable and uninhabitable.

As recently as 120 years ago, Japan shut foreigners out altogether. It has tolerated them only grudgingly since then.

Yet there are other Japanese who disagree with their government's stance on the refugee issue.

"I do not believe that merely contributing money amounts to properly meeting its international responsibilities with respect to the refugee problem," said Shigeo Omori of the Asahi Shibun newspaper.

"Japan is now under pressure not only to open up its economy but also to open the doors of its society to people in desperate need."

Family Needs More Land

OCONOMOWOC, Wis. (UPI) — Phyl and Ken Stiemke thought they had whipped inflation in their fight to feed their 12 children. Then came a picky neighbor and the Waukesha County government.

The Stiemkes for years have been raising chickens, ducks, goats, turkeys and geese on their 1.5 acre homestead. They got eggs, milk and meat and their children were able to learn about caring for animals, Mrs. Stiemke said.

But the Waukesha County Park and Planning Commission has informed them they need at least 4 acres to raise that many animals and said if they do not rent more land they'll have to give them up.

Mrs. Stiemke said neighbors offered the family the use of adjacent land rent free — but that didn't meet the county's zoning requirements.

"It looked like we were going to be able to rent the adjacent land," Mrs. Stiemke said. "But though neighbors were going to let us use their land, not rent it, that wasn't good enough for the county."

Stiemke said the family has lived in the same spot for 16 years and raised animals for a long time.

Disposable Razors Cut Into Market

By LeROY POPE

NEW YORK (UPI) — A fine razor used to be something a man treasured and handed down to his eldest son. Now, increasingly, it is a little plastic gadget to be thrown away after a number of shaves.

The disposable razors which sell for 20 to 30 cents, depending on whether they are single-edge or two-track blades, have captured 15 to 20 percent of the $425 million-a-year American safety razor blade market.

In Europe the little plastic disposables have grabbed much bigger shares of the market: 40 percent in France and Belgium, 45 percent in Italy, 30 percent in England, 75 percent in Greece, and 50 percent in Austria. They also are making impressive gains in Latin America and Australia.

Bruno Bich, son of France's Baron Marcel Bich, who followed up his huge success with Bic ballpens and disposable cigarette lighters with one of the first disposable razors, predicts they will grab 40 percent of the U.S. market within five years.

Bich has majority shares in the disposable razor market in nearly every country except the United States, where his Bic single-edge razor is running neck and neck with the Gillette Co.'s twin-track Good News razor.

The Japanese Shiseido Co. is tops in Japan and in some other Asian markets. A Brazilian firm appears to be ahead in the Latin American markets.

Gillette, first to appear in the American market, and the Bic Pen Co. of Milford, Conn., are the only two big producers in the United States but Warner-Lambert's Schick division has begun test marketing a disposable twin-track in the Seattle area, selling two for 69 cents, and the Wilkinson Sword Co., maker of stainless steel double-edge conventional blades, is reported preparing to market one.

Gillette is getting ready to sharpen the competition. It is test marketing a single-edge disposable priced to compete with the Bic in three cities.

The Bic disposables sold in the United States are made in America, not in France, and their price has remained stable since they were introduced at four for 79 cents four years ago.

Spokesmen for Gillette and Bic agreed that so far the disposables have made their biggest inroads against injector and band safety razors and heavier twin-track razors with removable blades.

"They are just starting to make headway against the conventional double-edge safety razor blade and the electric shaver," said a Bic spokesman.

"The male beard and stubble vary so much it is utterly impossible to make one razor that suits everybody," the Bic spokesman said.

"The main complaint of those who don't like the disposables is that they are too light for attacking a really tough beard, and a few men say they are too sharp for a very tender skin."

The disposables even are making their way into one of the old-fashioned straight razor's professional precincts — the removing of body hair in preparation for surgical operations. Some hospitals like them because they do away with sterilization.

But the few professional barbers that still shave customers are sticking to the straight razor, and so are the professional hair stylists who use them on sideburns and the hair on the neck.

And there must be a few staunch individualists around who still treasure — and use — an heirloom straight razor, leather strop and shaving mug handed down from father to son.

Railroad Aids Grain Farmers

CHADRON, Neb. (UPI) — A Burlington Northern spokesman says the railroad is committed to helping farmers move their grain and is diverting hopper cars to Kansas and Nebraska, where the harvest is ending.

Spokesman George Rekella said Monday the railroad has been loading about 900 cars of grain daily along the BN system. About one-fourth of the 900 cars are box cars and the rest are much-needed covered hopper cars, he said.

Systemwide, BN has hauled 120,329 cars carrying more than 356.9 million bushels of grain in the last six months, Rekella said. He added the traffic has been heavy in Kansas and Nebraska, where the harvest is about over, and cars are being diverted to those areas.

Rekella said BN's covered hopper car fleet currently stands at 16,334, with about 11,000 conventional box cars suitable for grain also available.

In addition, he said BN has received early approval of a 1980-81 capital spending program that contains an equipment order of $316 million. The 1980 order calls for 1,000 more grain cars, he said, explaining 1,000 covered hoppers also will be added this year.

Rekella said the railroad's capital spending program "certainly should demonstrate a commitment now and in the future to the farmer, whose business we value."

Today is Wednesday July 25, the 206th day of 1979 with 159 to follow.

The moon is new.

The morning stars are Venus and Mars.

The evening stars are Mercury, Jupiter and Saturn.

Those born on this date are under the sign of Leo.

American artist Maxfield Parrish and actor Walter Brennan were born on July 25 — Parrish in 1870 and Brennan in 1894.

On this day in history:

In 1866, Ulysses S. Grant became the first American officer to reach the rank of general in the U.S. Army.

In 1952, Puerto Rico became a self-governing U.S. commonwealth.

In 1972, Democratic vice presidential nominee Thomas Eagleton, a Missouri senator, disclosed he had had psychiatric care for "nervous ailments" in the 1960s. Presidential nominee George McGovern removed Eagleton from the ticket and replaced him with Sargent Shriver.

In 1975, Turkey said it would (and later did) halt all activities at U.S. military installations in that country because of a six-month arms embargo imposed by the United States because of the Turkish invasion of Cyprus.

Lower-Priced Saudi Oil Aids U.S. Companies

NEW YORK (AP) — Four major oil companies may be earning more than their competitors, industry officials say, because they are selling products made from lower-priced Saudi Arabian crude oil for as much as those made from higher-priced crude.

The four companies are Exxon Corp., Mobil Corp., Texaco Inc. and Standard Oil Co. of California, the partners in Arabian American Oil Co. (Aramco), which runs the Saudi oilfields.

While the average price of OPEC crude oil is about $20 a barrel, the four firms are paying $18 a barrel for Saudi oil.

"There certainly is a benefit, and it's good-sized," said E.L. Dow, assistant comptroller for Standard of California, though he added, "I don't think that the huge number is there."

The price of Saudi oil is lower than the average OPEC price because Saudi oil is of lower quality than some other types of oil and because the Saudis have attempted to hold prices down to avoid upsetting the world economy. Nevertheless, the price of Saudi oil has risen 42 percent since the end of last year.

Because the difference between the Saudi price and the average price is about $2 a barrel, the 6.5 million barrels of Saudi oil exported daily by the Aramco companies could be worth an extra $13 million daily, or $4.74 billion annually before taxes — a bit less than the $5.84 billion net income the four companies had last year.

But the effects of the advantage are diluted by a number of factors.

"It's clearly an advantage to these companies, but to quantify it is really a difficult task," said an industry source. "Clearly, it's an advantage to them, but whether it's a bonanza is another thing."

Experts said the advantage is reduced by higher costs of refining lower-quality Saudi oil and by moves made by the Saudis themselves to lessen the advantage. "It gets pretty well watered down," said Dow.

Saudi Arabia recently stiffened its credit terms to Aramco partners, thus effectively making the oil more expensive.

And the Saudis have made their latest price increase — from $14.55 a barrel to $18 a barrel — retroactive to June 1. It was approved at the end of June, and that move cost Exxon about $100 million last quarter.

"If your price goes up $3.50 after the fact, you can't do much about getting that back on oil you've already sold," said Dow. "It certainly soaked up quite a bit."

Price controls also diminish the advantage. In the United States, companies must sell gasoline at a price reflecting crude oil costs, and because companies use oil from several sources, the net difference in gasoline prices between an Aramco company and a non-Aramco company is virtually non-existent, analysts said.

Overseas, however, where price controls are rarer, the companies have been able to reap the benefits of the price advantage, and this has contributed to the large profits on foreign oil operations enjoyed recently by major oil firms, analysts said.

Fuel Shortage Hurts Historic Drake Well

TITUSVILLE, Pa. (UPI) — The gasoline shortage is keeping visitors away from Drake's oil well — the birthplace of the petroleum industry 120 years ago.

"We've had less people because they don't have the gas to get here," bemoaned Vance Packard, son of the widely known author and an archeologist by training who administers the historic site.

Last year, 35,000 tourists paid admittance to the museum about 15 miles north of Oil City in northwest Pennsylvania. Packard estimates a 25 percent drop this summer.

Col. Edwin L. Drake was looking for oil mainly for lighting and heating when he drilled into the sands along Oil Creek in August 1859. He came up with America's first commercially successful well, dug for the now-defunct Seneca Oil Co.

Gasoline, an oil byproduct, was considered by businessmen of the day to be a waste product and a hazardous one at that, because of its explosive nature. But the popularity of the automobile after the turn of the 20th century changed all that.

In honor of Drake's work, a replica of his well and engine house was reconstructed at the original site in 1945. The museum — the second largest run by Pennsylvania — was added later.

"It's a little awesome to think that in the 120 years since then we've developed to almost total dependence on hydrocarbons," Packard said.

The administrator, who took over his post in early July, plans to get the museum's steam generator going again and open up a few demonstration wells on a nearby lease. But to conserve energy, the air conditioning at the museum remains turned off.

Asked if tourists realize the importance of Drake's success, he said, "If we're doing our job, they do when they leave."

The 7,000 residents in Titusville have not escaped the gasoline crunch, but its impact has not been as severe as in major Eastern cities.

"We've had gas lines and we had the panic," said Mayor Bob Rhoades. "It's definitely cut down on the use of the automobile."

Rhoades, a drivers' education teacher in the summer, said he has noticed his students have not been talking about family vacations.

"I know families that have trailers that haven't moved them this year."

Most of the oil drawn from area leases are parafin-based and are refined into greases and lubrication, Rhoades said. Oil drilled in Oklahoma and other areas is refined into gasoline.

Rhoades said he expects foreign oil problems and President Carter's emphasis on domestic production to mean more pumping in the Titusville area.

Texas Gasoline Prices Still Climbing

HOUSTON (AP) — The price of gasoline is still climbing toward $1 a gallon, and this week it increased an average of 1.7 cents per gallon in Texas, the American Automobile Association reports. Last week the average increase was 1.3 cents.

In its weekly survey of 420 Texas service stations, AAA also found slightly fewer service stations are open at night and more are limiting purchases or are out of at least one grade of fuel.

Statewide 23 percent of the stations are open after 8 p.m. weekdays, while 39 percent will be open after 6 p.m. Saturday. Last week, 26 percent were open week nights, with 43 percent open Saturday night.

Talking with service station owners, AAA reports the decrease in night availability is partly caused by stations operating longer during the day. Others say they are closing nights to save gas for Saturday and Sunday.

Although the statewide figure for Sunday fuel availability stayed the same this week -30 percent of the stations expected to be open -several cities, such as Austin, Corpus Christi and Houston show an increase in Sunday availability.

Twenty percent of the staions in Austin, 50 percent in Corpus Christi and 21 percent in Houston say they will be open this Sunday. The corresponding percentages for last week were 14, 45 and 19.

As July fuel allocations begin to run out, 7 percent of the stations surveyed reported that they are out of at least one grade of fuel, compared to 3 percent last week.

Also, 8 percent of the stattions say they are limiting purchases (not counting stations under the odd-even sales plan), compared to 2 percent last week.

AAA reports stations along Interstate highways in small towns and rural areas still have good fuel supplies, and travelers should have few problems finding gas, except at night in big cities.

Panel Hears Testimony Concerning Coal Rates

WASHINGTON (AP) -San Antonio Mayor Lila Cockrell told a congressional hearing Tuesday it may be cheaper to buy Australian coal than bear the rail freight costs for the domestic variety. After the city decided in 1973 to convert its electic generating plant from oil and gas to coal, it found the rail shipping costs from Wyoming to San Antonio rose substantially.

Mrs. Cockrell told the Joint Economic Committee the coal freight rate rose 133 percent between 1973 and 1979 in order to subsidize the railroads' less profitable operations.

"Frankly, our crystal ball just didn't show anything like that escalation," she said. "This certainly is not going to be an incentive for other cities and utilities to convert to coal."

The mayor said she recently started negotiating with the Mitsubishi Corp. of Japan to find if shipping Australian coal by water routes might be more economical than the Wyoming to San Antonio rail route.

"It seems ridiculous to me that there is even a remote possibility that we can better serve our citizens by importing coal from halfway around the world than we can by using our own resources," she said

Norman Lorentzsen, president of Burlington Northern Inc., said the prospect of foreign coal purchases might be a "gimmick" utilities and cities are using to dramatize their claims of excessive rail rates.

"There are no conflicts between the goals of the American rail industry and a sound national energy policy. Without a viable rail industry, this nation simply cannot have an effective energy policy," he told the commiittee.

Solons Back Ration Plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — Citing a wholesale change of mind, congressional leaders said today that House passage now appears assured for a bill giving President Carter standby authority to impose gasoline rationing.

The House rejected a similar rationing proposal last May by a vote of 246 to 150.

Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill attributed the apparent congressional turnaround to the summer gasoline lines, President Carter's energy speeches and constituent anger at Congress for failing to act on the first plan.

As the House convened to take up the rationing bill, Democratic vote counters said reported party support for the measure by a 10-1 margin.

That would guarantee its passage, even without any Republican support.

Under consideration today was a recycled and expanded version of the rejected rationing plan which has become a major piece of Carter's energy program.

The legislation may be the only part of Carter's plan with any chance of getting to the president's desk before Congress takes a month-long recess starting Aug. 3.

Senate leaders told Carter Tuesday that final action on his "windfall profits" tax won't come until the fall. Other parts of the plan now moving through Congress also seem unlikely to be enacted until after the August recess.

O'Neill, expressing rare criticism of the Senate, told reporters that he and Carter were deeply disappointed by the Senate delay. "The Senate should do as we did, take the windfall profits tax and pass it," O'Neill said.

The tax would not take effect until Jan. 1. But O'Neill said fast action on that measure and other parts of Carter's plan would at least assure the country that the government is doing something about the energy crisis.

The bill before the House would let the president invoke rationing if oil or gasoline supplies fell by 20 percent over a 30-day period — or if such a shortage seemed likely. Once invoked, Congress would have 15 days during which either chamber could block the plan.

However, White House lobbyists are unhappy with the 20 percent "trigger" and are encouraging amendments to eliminate or reduce this provision.

House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill predicts the House will approve the rationing bill and says there's a good chance the 20 percent trigger will be trimmed. "It was put in only to get the bill out of committee," he recently confided to several reporters.

However, sponsors of the bill say they may try to keep the 20 percent requirement to ensure that rationing is used only in an emergency of the magnitude of another Arab oil embargo.

The legislation would also enable the president to impose lesser measures — including requiring states to meet federally mandated fuel-conservation goals — for shortages not severe enough to warrant rationing.

"Intermediate conservation steps are needed," said Rep. Toby Moffett, D-Conn., a prime sponsor of the overall bill. "The gas lines can come back at any time."

The president could also mandate federal programs in states failing to meet the specified targets. One such program spelled out in the legislation would require motorists to leave their cars home one day each week.

House Republicans are lining up in opposition to the rationing-conservation bill. "This is no more than a quick fix to give Americans the illusion that Congress and the president are dealing with the energy crisis," claimed Rep. Clarence Brown, R-Ohio.

Since the Senate approved the original Carter rationing proposal, congressional leaders plan to save time by sending the bill — assuming it passes the House — directly to a House-Senate conference committee to work out a compromise version.

The legislation does not spell out how gasoline should be rationed, leaving specifics to the president. This was done to avoid the regional battling that contributed to the earlier defeat.

Two other major parts of Carter's plan — an Energy Mobilization Board to speed government decisions on energy projects and an Energy Security Corporation to help finance development of synthetic fuels — are moving through Congress.

Both the House Interior and Commerce committees were working on this part of the energy program today.

BARRY NOT HAPPY — Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., left, speaks with Gen. David C. Jones before a SALT II treaty hearing by the Senate Armed Services Committee on Capitol Hill Tuesday. Goldwater, regarded as one of the chief foes of the pact, didn't appear to be very happy about the situation while talking to Jones. (AP Laserphoto)

SALT II Pact Endorsed By Former Ambassador

WASHINGTON (AP) — Malcolm Toon, U.S. ambassador to the Soviet Union, today discarded an initial reluctance and endorsed the SALT II treaty, calling it "the best that could have been obtained."

Toon originally had said that concern over the loss of U.S. intelligence listening posts in Iran might cause him to oppose the treaty on grounds that Soviet compliance with its terms could not be adequately verified.

But he said today it was both verifiable and militarily sound.

He said that after receiving the same briefings given President Carter he has concluded that "no militarily significant violations of SALT II could take place without detection."

"I would not be here today to recommend this treaty if I did not believe that," Toon told the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

Toon, who has submitted his resignation, remains as ambassador pending Senate confirmation of former IBM executive Thomas J. Watson Jr., who has been named to succeed him.

A committee member, Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., announced, meantime, that he could not "in good conscience" support ratification of the treaty at this point, but he reserved final judgment pending an administration commitment to increase spending on defense projects.

Nunn's position on SALT is expected to influence some of his colleagues because he is viewed as a serious and astute student of military affairs. He has been publicly uncommitted in the past.

Meanwhile, Helmut Sonnenfeldt, once a State Department deputy to former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger, said he believes it essential that before ratifying the treaty Congress "firmly establish" programs to deploy the mobile MX missile and to remove doubts about the transfer of U.S. cruise missile technology to the European allies.

Toon gave these arguments for Senate ratification:

—"I think it will introduce a substantial element of stability in our relations with the Soviet Union.

—"In my view it is important that the treaty places equal ceilings on the strategic arsenals of both sides, thereby ending a previous numerical imbalance in favor of the Soviet Union.

—"It preserves our options to build the forces we need to maintain the strategic balance.

—"It enhances our ability to monitor Soviet actions and it is adequately verifiable — an essential feature in any agreement with the Soviets since we cannot rely on good will.

—"It leads directly to the next step in controlling nuclear weapons and establishes a basis for further cooperation with the Soviet Union in this important field."

group off when they departed last Sunday.

"It was a very sad situation. They were like members of my family. We were just broken to pieces," she said.

At 2 p.m., music minister Bill Keck stood before the silent gathering to tell them that five of their fellow worshippers were dead.

"It was the hardest moment I've ever spent in my career in the ministry," Keck said.

George Giles, 15, would have been a sophomore classmate of one of the victims, Stephen Sapaugh, this fall.

"You can't imagine. We were cutting up together Sunday night at my house. You just can't imagine," the misty-eyed teen-ager said.

"We don't know what to do. We don't understand," said Mrs. Sturdivant. "I guess God does, though. And that's what counts."

City Council Facing Tax Election Issue

By SYLVIA TEAGUE
Avalanche-Journal Staff

The Lubbock City Council is expected to decide Thursday whether to call a tax limitation election in response to petitions submitted by the Lubbock Property Owners Association.

Although the petitions calling for an election on three proposed charter amendments probably bear the requisite number of valid signatures, City Attorney John Ross has said he may recommend no election be called because of "serious legal questions."

The three amendments would limit the tax rate to the current $1.12 per $100 valuation, freeze the assessment ratio at the present 60 percent of market value and require voter approval for any increase in the rate or ratio.

But Ross questioned whether these amendments are "subject to the initiative process" by which voters can petition the council for a charter amendment election.

Also, Mayor Dirk West has said recently enacted state tax reform legislation which abolishes assessment ratios has rendered such a charter amendment election meaningless.

Ross is expected to present his legal opinion on the amendments and make a recommendation on calling an election at the council meeting.

City Secretary Evelyn Gaffga also will deliver her findings to the council on the number and validity of the signatures on the three petitions.

Also at the meeting, to begin at 9:30 a.m. in City Council chambers, council members will discuss the implementation of that tax reform law which must begin this fall.

At 1:30 p.m. the council will hold a public hearing on the proposed annexation of 740 acres of land between Indiana Avenue and University Avenue between 107th Street and 114th Street.

The Lubbock Property Owners Association has announced its opposition to this and other future annexations, citing an abundance of undeveloped land within the city limits and the cost to taxpayers to provide city services to annexed areas.

Council members also will hear the recommendation of the Tech Terrace Neighborhood Committee that a second barricade be removed from the streets around Tech Terrace Park.

The committee wants the council to remove the barricade at 23rd Street and Flint Avenue and leave the two remaining barricades at 25th Street and Flint Avenue and 25th Street and Gary Avenue until Oct. 15.

The council voted in April to install barricades at four locations around the park for a 90-day trial period in an attempt to prevent the traffic congestion around the popular gathering spot. Later, council members agreed to remove one of the barricades.

The first art grants funded from a portion of the hotel/motel tax may be awarded at the meeting. A representative of the Cultural Affairs Council will recommend the council award grants totaling $26,500 to four Lubbock organizations.

Council members will discuss a draft of a Fair Housing Ordinance which the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development would like the city to adopt.

The ordinance is very similar to federal law prohibiting discrimination against persons in the sale or rental of property, but it is designed to give victims of such discrimination local recourse.

have bled to death (if not for Lowery)," said investigating Cpl. A.L. McMinn, who did not realize anyone was hurt in the accident until he arrived at the scene.

McMinn said the three persons who made separate calls to the police dispatcher about the mishap did not mention that anyone was injured. "I'm sure it was at least 10 minutes after the accident before an ambulance arrived," the corporal added.

A Methodist Hospital spokesman said doctors were performing extensive and lengthy surgery this morning in an attempt to save Miller's leg.

He said that after surgery, the victim would be moved into the intensive care unit where he would be listed in either serious or critical condition.

Sikes was not injured in the accident.

tions, he should refer the problem to the manager.

When he told Dailey his clothing did not meet the dress requirements, Sikes said, he called for the manager to settle the dispute.

"But Mr. Dailey didn't wait for the manager," Sikes said. "He kept getting more offensive and kept coming at the door and I did push him."

Sikes said, however, he did not shove Dailey violently nor did he threaten him with any type of weapon.

During morning prosecution testimony, Sharon Parr and her brother Roy, who were with Dailey the night of the alleged incident, related their stories to the jury.

Tuesday, Dailey told the jury he and the Parrs went to the club about 10 p.m. June 16 but were stopped outside the door by Sikes, who asked to see their identification.

Dailey said he handed Sikes his Texas drivers license and, after looking at the identification, Sikes told Dailey he couldn't enter the club because his clothing, cuffed jeans and a collarless shirt, did not meet Studio One's dress code requirements.

"I asked to see something written down so I'd know what to wear to this club," Dailey testified, "but (Sikes) said, 'We're not going to show you anything. You're trespassing and we're going to have you arrested."

The 23-year-old Dallas man said he thought Sikes was a city police officer because of his uniform and asked for Sikes' badge number.

"Then he shoved me into the street and pulled out a can of Mace," Dailey said.

However, Dailey said, when he returned to Lubbock the following Friday, he was allowed in the club and saw people inside who were wearing attire similar to what he had been told was not suitable.

"We got in the next Friday," Dailey testified under cross-examination from Sikes' attorney, Warren Goss, "and the only reason we can figure that we got in then was we met a white male friend as he was leaving and he went back inside with us.

"That Friday when we went back, the guards were inside (the club entrance) and going in we met a friend we had known at Tech, a white male friend," Dailey said.

"He was leaving, but he stopped and talked and we shook hands in full view of the guards and he (the friend) said let's go back in and he'd buy us a drink."

Dailey said on his second visit to the club he was dressed differently to meet the code requirements, but did not see a dress code posted at that time either. In response to questioning from Goss, Dailey added that on the subsequent visit to Studio One, he did not ask to see a dress code.

Mrs. Harris To Support President

WASHINGTON (AP) — Patricia Robert Harris pledged today that if she is confirmed as secretary of health, education and welfare, she will maintain her independent personal style but will implement President Carter's policies.

The secretary of housing and urban development, tapped by Carter to succeed Joseph A. Califano Jr. as HEW secretary, told the Senate Finance Committee her new assignment would be "a change of faces and persons and personalities" more than a change of policy.

The committee opened hearings today on the Harris nomination, and is supposed to vote Friday morning on whether to recommend her confirmation by the Senate for the HEW post.

Sen. Robert Dole of Kansas, ranking Republican on the committee, predicted Mrs. Harris would be "speedily confirmed," but expressed concern that in the Carter administration "those who have an independent streak are no longer in the positions of authority ..."

This was a pointed reference to Califano's assertion that he was ousted partly because of his independent approach at HEW and his frequent conflicts with White House officials.

Dole noted that Mrs. Harris had a reputation for being independent-minded. He said the committee wanted to be sure "you will be speaking for yourself and not some staff person in the White House."

Mrs. Harris replied that she expected to continuwe operating as she has during her 30 months as HUD secretary.

"Independence is, it seems to me, a virtue," Mrs. Harris said. "But in administration, one works as a representative of the people who have been elected. The people of the United States elected Jimmy Carter to be president."

She added: "Insofar as the president has announced a policy, until such time as he wishes to change it, that is the policy of this administration. The programs of the president of the United States are the programs of this administration and I support them."

Mrs. Harris indicated that she is not likely to differ with Califano's controversial anti-smoking campaign. She said it is the government's duty to inform the public of the health hazards of cigarette smoking.

Califano's dismissal sparked sharp criticism among key members of Congress, who described the ousted official as one of the most effective Cabinet members in dealing with Congress. That view is not shared by some White House officials, who blame Califano for failing to persuade Congress to accept some of the president's major programs.

There has been little or no opposition expressed to Mrs. Harris' nomination.

Civiletti Informs Senate Panel Lozano Decision 'Unanimous'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Deputy Attorney General Benjamin Civiletti today said the Justice Department decision not to prosecute a case where a Mexican-American prisoner died in a Texas jail was a unanimous one.

Civiletti, appearing at his confirmation hearing for his nomination to head the Justice Department, denied reports that U.S. Attorney Jamie Boyd of San Antono had presed for prosecution in the Larry Lozano case and had been overruled by the Civil Rights Division.

After Sen. Dennis DeConcini, D-Ariz., read an article from the San Antonio Express quoting sources who said Boyd and his office pressed for prosecution, Civiletti replied, "That article is cockeyed. It's kind of a recapitulation of the course of activities over nine months."

DeConcini asked Civiletti to make records of the course of events available to his staff or the staff of the Senate Judiciary Committee.

"It concerns me because of the immense brutality in this case," DeConcini said.

Lozano died while in custody of Ector County authorities in Odessa, allegedly after a beating. The Ector County Sheriff's Department said they had to use force to restrain the man.

Hispanic groups are objecting to Civiletti's nomination because they claim the Justice Department is insensitive to police brutality cases, which fall under Civiletti's jurisdiction.

Civiletti said Boyd and other Justice Department attorneys at a March meeting unanimously agreed there was insufficient evidence for a sustainable civil rights case.

Civiletti said he asked for a fourth medical examiner's report even though most of the lawyers recommended the case be closed.

"That was done and it came up countervailing. It did not support prosecution. All of the attorneys again were unanimous in their determination," he said.

Justice Department announced its decision not to prosecute in the Lozano case in June.

"We would have all liked to prosecute the case, the tragic facts of the case," Civiletti said.

A panel of national Hispanic spokesmen outlined their objections to Civiletti's nomination today, the hearing's opening day.

Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., said more detailed objections were scheduled to be delivered Thursday and Civiletti was to have an opportunity to respond Friday.

Civiletti is nominated to succeed Attorney General Griffin Bell, whose resignation was accepted by President Carter during last week's Cabinet shakeup.

Civiletti also testified today he was assured by President Carter that he would have "complete independence" in running the Justice Department.

Civiletti, deputy attorney general for the past 14 months, made the statement in a series of terse answers to questions by Sen. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina, ranking Republican on the Senate Judiciary Committee.

Thurmond asked Civiletti, "Did you meet with the president prior to your appointment?"

"Yes," replied Civiletti.

"Did you make any assurance to him of loyalty to him as president that you feel would interfere with your performance of your duties?"

"No."

"Have you been assured of complete independence in running the department?"

"Yes."

Thurmond said he raised the issue because of statements from White House officials that lack of loyalty to the president led to some of the Cabinet changes announced last week.

Civiletti said Carter brought up the subject of Justice Department independence from political pressure. He said he assured the president he would continue practices and policies instituted by Bell to safeguard that independence.

He said specifically he would continue a policy under which all communications from the White House are to go to the attorney general and his deputy for review before reaching lower-level department lawyers.

CFIT Officer Eyes Pact Coordination

By NANCY ALLEN
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Citizens For Improved Transportation (CFIT) acting treasurer Jane Taylor this morning called for better coordination of CFIT contracts to maintain the group's present cost of transporting elderly and handicapped Lubbockites throughout the city.

"We need to try and get all the agencies to come in (contract with CFIT for transportation) at once, to hold the cost down," she said.

Mrs. Taylor acknowledged that has been an ongoing concern of CFIT's since the formation of the non-profit organization in 1976.

"We started with the hope of all the agencies (which use CFIT transportation) fitting in together. Unfortunately that loaf of bread has never been baked."

CFIT Acting Director Len Spouse announced new contracts with South Plains Area Council of Governments and Llano Estacado youth program. CFIT also serves agencies including Texas Mental Health and Mental Retardation; MBFA, a Baptist federation, and until recently, the City of Lubbock.

In spite of CFIT's problems, Taylor said the Lubbock non-profit organization still is able to transport elderly and handicapped patrons for less than similar groups in other cities.

"We have done a good job of keeping costs down," she commented. A one-way trip on a demand-response lift equipped van in Arlington costs $5, compared to CFIT's cost of $2, Taylor said.

During the past quarter, CFIT transported some 4,500 passengers, including elderly, wheelchair-bound and semi-ambulatory persons, Spouse said. That represents a 92 percent total increase over the previous quarter, according to Spouse.

Mrs. Taylor's informal treasurer's report marked CFIT's assets at some $5,000, which she said would be spent within the quarter on maintenance and insurance.

"We're solid," she commented. "Three years ago we didn't even have the money for a postage stamp."

Health Department Director Dr. Marjorie Orr was present at the meeting to request transportation to burgeoning health department clinics.

"We've more than doubled our maternity, newborn and venereal disease clinic service in the past year, and we have no transportation service," said Dr. Orr, who also is a CFIT board member. "I don't know how much we would increase if we had transportation."

CFIT, which serves elderly and handicapped, however, was not able to oblige. "I wish I had an answer for you," replied Mrs. Taylor.

Orr later commented she was not surprised at the response "Every time I get the chance, I let it be known we need transportation at the health department," she said.

Convicted Murderer To Fight Execution

BOISE, Idaho (AP) — Convicted murderer David Alan Osborn said today he's changed his mind and will fight to avoid execution because, "I want to see my 5-month-old son grow up."

Osborn, 30, from Slaterville, Utah, had said earlier he would not appeal his sentence to die Aug. 20 by lethal injection. The sentence was stayed last Friday.

Osborn, in an unusual prison news conference, said he would be willing to stay in the Idaho State Penitentiary for 50 years, so long as he could receive visits from his son.

He was sentenced to death June 29 after pleading guilty in the Halloween night shooting death last year of Pocatello waitress Charlotte Carl.

"News of the stay lifted a great burden from my mind," he said.

He said he changed his mind about fighting the death sentence because of visits from his wife, Nena, and son, who are now living in Boise.

At his sentencing, Osborn said he didn't want to appeal the death sentence. "I can't see any sense in sitting on death row waiting and wondering."

Osborn, dressed in a white prison uniform, sat at the news conference with his hands folded on a worn bright yellow chair facing about 30 members of the news media. He would not allow his voice to be recorded but imposed no other restrictions.

"Everyone's got to die," Osborn said, "but knowing the exact date, the time and place, it puts a real strain on your mind."

The appeal process could easily take a year or more.

The stay had the effect of freeing Osborn from solitude, so Warden Ed Dermitt agreed to the news conference.

"I don't care if he talks to the news media or not," Dermitt said. "But it's his right to meet with the news media, and we're just honoring his rights. I've been besieged with interview requests by the news media and I figured this would be the best way to handle them all at once without discriminating against any news media."

Blake requested that the state Supreme Court review the case. "For the record, Mr. Osborn agreed to my action, although by state law a review by the Supreme Court is automatic."

Attorney Sued By Daughter

NEW YORK (UPI) — It's Zimmerman vs. Zimmerman in state Supreme Court in Manhattan.

Adrienne Zimmerman, 21, of Great Neck, N.Y., is suing her father Theodore, an attorney who reportedly earns more than $100,000 a year, for failing to keep his promise to pay her college fees.

In the suit, filed Tuesday, Miss Zimmerman said she was to have entered her senior year at Adelphi University next fall, but was suspended June 12 because her father didn't pay her fees for two years.

"I'm doing this because I want to survive," the coed told Justice Thomas Hughes. "I want a career in life. I'm not going to let him stop me."

Miss Zimmerman's parents are divorced.

Slaton Man Injured In Auto Accident

A 19-year-old Slaton man was undergoing treatment this morning in Methodist Hospital after being injured in a two-car accident about 10:15 a.m.

Jimmy Lee Stewart of Slaton was in undetermined condition late this morning with injuries he suffered in the mishap in Slaton.

The driver of the other car, Clyde Whalen, 76, of Slaton was uninjured in the accident, according to Slaton police.

African Witchdoctors May Offer Psychic Cures

SOWETO, South Africa (AP) — African witchdoctors who apply their Stone Age wisdom to bags of bones and seashells stand as good a chance of curing psychological disorders among urban blacks as does modern medicine, some experts here believe.

"What do you do with a sterile woman who threatens suicide because she thinks she's been bewitched or her spirits are angry?" asked a Western-trained physician who sometimes refers black patients to tribal practitioners. "You can't argue with someone like that."

Most of Soweto's 1.2 million blacks take their physical ills to the township's Baragwanath Hospital, the largest medical facility for blacks in the Southern Hemisphere. But when it comes to the mind and spirit, only a witchdoctor will do.

Credo Mutwa, one of the estimated 1,000 traditional practitioners here, uses the diagnostic tools of his trade — a bag of ivory dice, seashells, and bones from a baboon, hyena, gazelle, lioness and goats.

"The patient must never tell the physician what's wrong," said Mutwa, who wore his sacred red and white robes with a large cross hanging from a heavy copper yoke. "The physician must be sensitive to feel a person's illness."

Mutwa calls out his patient's name, asks him to blow on the bones, then repeatedly throws them onto an animal skin stretched on the floor. Eventually the source of trouble emerges from the patterns formed by the objects.

Critics of traditional practitioners dismiss their alleged phychic powers as hocus-pocus and argue that their herbal concotions often poison patients, sometimes causing death. They also point out that failure to administer proper treatments allows disease to advance.

But Dr. Christo van den Heever, a white administrator at Baragwanath, insists that in many parts of rural Africa where there is no witchdoctor, people are far worse off in terms of disease.

"We (medical doctors) can treat the physical side of disease better than they can, but in psychology, they have as good a chance as we have, if not better," he said.

Van den Heever added that withchdoctors were better able to handle stress victims and phobias than their Western counterparts because of their sound understanding of their own societies. He said they also were skilled in setting fractures and alleviating pain.

"The bones themselves are not important," Mutwa explained. They are "external tools" used to release psychic energies which perform the diagnosis, he said.

He said he referred the seriously ill, such as tuberculosis patients, to hospitals "with the understanding I protect them. When they come back, they return to me for spiritual straightening out."

A witchdoctor's prescriptions obviously vary with the malady, but the range includes herbal concoctions that force vomiting or diarrhea to oust evil spirits, to black magic.

Mabel a 28-year-old unemployed domestic who suffered headaches, was advised by her witchdoctor to slaughter a goat at her home, study to become a witchdoctor, and then kill an ox.

After completing the first step, Mabel said her health was fine and she had several job promises.

Such unquestioned faith in witchdoctor wisdom emanates from the belief that they were chosen by the ancestors to interpret god's will on earth. They serve as physicians, prophets, exorcists, fortune tellers, herbalists, rainmakers, and any combination of those possibilities.

Some earn up to $23,000 a year, almost the income of a white surgeon.

The witchdoctors' hold on the black populations is so powerful that they are sometimes called upon by white employers to settle disputes among workers, stop thefts in factories or solve labor-management problems.

"The witchdoctor has a very real place," Van den Heever said, urging cooperation between Western and traditional medicine in this country.

Zambia and Swaziland, unlike South Africa, have granted the traditional practitioner professional status, and the World Health Organization now includes them in internationally financed national public health plans in Africa.

Artists Picked For Program

WASHINGTON (AP) — Five American artists have been selected for the fourth year of the United States-United Kingdom Bicentennial Exchange Fellowship Program, according to the National Endowment for the Arts.

The two nations will exchange five artists for six to nine months residencies.

The Americans are: Lewis Blatz, a photographer from Sausalito, Calif.; Michael Frimkess, a potter from Venice, Calif.; Jon S. Jost, a filmmaker from New York City; Thomas McGrath, an architect from Beverly Farms, Mass., and Heather R. Miller, a writer from Badin, N.C.

The United Kingdom fellows are jeweller Edward DeLarge, poet-dramatist Tony Harrison, photographer David Hurn, organist Martin Neary, and architect Geoffrey Wigfall.

San Marino claims to be the oldest state in Europe and the oldest republic in the world. It has had a treaty of friendship with Italy since 1862.

Firm Makes HSCH Bid

By KIM COBB
Avalanche-Journal Staff

A fourth management firm is making an eleventh-hour bid for the job of running Health Sciences Center Hospital — Jack Strong, chairman of the board for the county hospital district, is offering the firm very little encouragement.
ment.

The board meets at 7 p.m. today with hopes of signing a contract — or at least a letter of intent — with a management firm to run the hospital until its financial problems are worked out. Three firms — Hospitals of the Southwest Inc., American Healthcare Management and Lifemark — made their presentations to the board earlier.

The fourth firm, Brookwood Health Service Inc. of Birmingham, Ala., contacted the board a few days ago saying they were interested in managing the hospital. Strong said he told the Brookwood representative that three firms had already made offers and that he was confident that a choice could be made from that point.

But Strong did not tell the Brookwood representative not to come and he consequently spent much of Tuesday touring the teaching hospital facility with associate executive director George McGowan.

Representatives from management firms have been swarming over the hospital for the past week, with Lifemark sending 19 persons to check out the facilities this weekend.

Lifemark is apparently a top contender for the job, but Strong said a decision has not been made.

"We were ready to sign with Lifemark then," Strong said of the July 17 meeting of the board of managers. Observers had predicted a decision would be made but the board was stymied when none of the management firms — including Lifemark — came prepared to talk contract.

Lifemark representatives told the board it would be July 30 before they could draft a contract. Strong said he asked the firm to at least be ready to present a letter of intent by tonight's meeting.

Robert Berryman, the Brookwood representative, plans to make a presentation at the meeting. But Strong expects the other firms to be ready to negotiate a contract.

"They all know we're making a decision tomorrow night," Strong said Tuesday.

The board will descuss the management firms in a closed session at the end of the agenda. But the actual vote on a contract — if it comes up — must be done in public session.

In other business, the board will review the last month's financial statements, delayed because the hospital's computer system was down for several weeks. At last official check, Health Sciences had amassed unpaid patient bills totaling more than $7 million.

The board also will hear a progress report on the status of a proposal to buy the county hospital district's Emergency Medical Service. The board has received an offer from a Eugene, Ore., firm which specializes in emergency services.

"We've got to do something about that albatross," Strong said of EMS. The county hospital district is losing money on the emergency venture as well as the hospital.

SPAG Proposes Larger Board

By TOM GRIESS
Avalanche-Journal Staff

A South Plains Association of Governments ad hoc committee recommended Tuesday that the SPAG board of directors be expanded to include minority representation despite sharp opposition from at least one local official.

Lubbock County Judge Rod Shaw said he would "absolutely not" support the recommendation, which will be presented to the SPAG board for consideration at its August meeting. "I'm irrevocably opposed to having any bureaucratic officials in Washington, D.C., telling us what to do and how to staff our board," he said.

The ad hoc committee, composed of SPAG President Medlin Carpenter, Hale County Judge Henry Heck, Dickens County Judge H.L. "Bill" Young and Lubbock County Commissioner Jim Lancaster, voted unanimously for the recommendation after concluding that the 15-county region could not otherwise qualify as an Economic Development District.

Economic Development Administration (EDA) guidelines require that minority representation on an economic development district governing board be "equal to the minority population of the district population up to 25 percent." SPAG officials in recent months sought EDA approval to create a separate, nonprofit corporation to oversee an Economic Development District in the SPAG region, but were told that option was unacceptable, according to Carpenter.

Instead, Carpenter said Tuesday, EDA officials said that if SPAG appoints the required number of minorities to its board of directors, the region will be designated an Economic Development District. "They (EDA officials) said let the minorities elect their own people to the board, and then, if they don't attend the meetings, you can go back and say, 'You wanted to become part of the mainstream and now you're not participating," he said.

Minority representation was provided on the SPAG board several years ago — in a similar effort to qualify as an Economic Development District — but the expanded format failed, with current SPAG members criticizing the minorities for poor attendance. The SPAG board now has no minority members, and compliance with EDA regulations would mean the appointment of eight new members.

The committee proposed that the SPAG bylaws be amended to include

ANCESTOR'S CABIN — Gary Swenson surveyed the afternoon rush-hour traffic in front of his great-great-great-grandfather's, John Neely Bryan, one room cabin in downtown Dallas earlier this week. "He would be thrilled beyond belief. This is exactly what he had in mind," said Swenson, one of 42 living descendants of the frontier lawyer who founded Dallas. "He wanted people to come to this area." (AP Laserphoto)

Dallas Founder's Kin Relives Old Times

DALLAS (AP) — Dressed in buckskin and armed with a Civil War musket held together by string, Gary Swenson prepared to defend the sweltering, one-room log cabin in the same tradition as his ancestor once did.

If only his great-great-great-grandfather John Neely Bryan could see him now, said Swenson, one of 42 living descendants of the frontier lawyer and founder of Dallas.

"He would be thrilled beyond belief," said the 34-year-old Wharton resident who spent Monday night in the rustic dwelling.

Swenson said the idea came to him when he discovered no one had ever written about Bryan's life. That fact prompted him to ask local historical groups for permission to stay overnight in the downtown Dallas cabin that has been preserved as a monument to the city's past.

"Everybody has something he's always wanted to do. For me, this is it," said Swenson, who regularly dons his buckskins for primitive camping in the woods with his family and members of the Texas Muzzle Loading Rifle Association.

Swenson's only protection against whatever forces might try to interfere was the musket. "If anybody wants what I have, they're welcome to it, but I don't have anything," he said.

He said he was "trying to get into the spirit," but later admitted the stay would have been much more comfortable if the Dallas County Historical Commission had not insisted on taking the air conditioner out of the city's first homestead.

Bryan loved Dallas, Swenson said, but he also had "itchy feet" and moved around the rugged frontier country most of his life.

The founding father was born in 1810 in Nashville, Tenn. He completed law school by age 19 and made his first expedition to Texas in 1839 with a Cherokee Indian named Ned.

In 1841, the two men settled into their new home, living in tepees and dugouts cut into the bank of the Trinity River, the historian recalled.

He maintained friendly relations with the Indians in the area, often helping to settle disputes between new settlers and the original residents.

Following the Civil War, Bryan returned to Dallas and began "tending bar on both sides." Alcoholism had wrecked his mind so much that "there were people who said he would try to run through the walls," Swenson added.

Bryan died Sept. 14, 1877, at Austin State Hospital about six months after he was committed.

It is not easy writing about larceny at the bridge table. The reader, looking at all four hands, is not so much inclined to applaud the efforts of the schemer as he is to look upon the victim as "a sap." But try to place yourself in the position of West, who was called upon to make a quick decision under fire.

North's decision to open one diamond on such an emaciated suit has our approval—an opening bid of one spade would have left him awkwardly placed after a two heart response. West could have entered the auction, either by overcalling one no trump or doubling, but with so much strength in the opponents' suits, he decided to await developments. However, he couldn't contain himself any longer over South's leap to game, and we don't blame him for doubling.

West led the king of spades, won by dummy's ace. It seemed likely that declarer would have to lose two diamond tricks and two trumps, so the fate of the contract hinged on limiting his red-suit losers to three—not easy in view of the double. But declarer saw a chance if he could sneak through a trump trick early.

At trick two declarer ruffed a spade in his hand and casually led the seven of hearts. West could see no reason to rush in with one of his trump honors, so he played low. That proved to be fatal.

Declarer cashed the ace of hearts, then finessed the ten of clubs. A spade ruff put declarer in his hand to repeat the club finesse. West's king was topped by the ace, and dummy's last spade was ruffed. Now West was down to nothing but two trumps and three diamonds, and ripe for an end play.

Declarer exited with a trump, and West was hooked. He cashed his two trump tricks and ace of diamonds, but that left declarer with a winning club and the king of diamonds.

Note that, had declarer not extracted one of West's low hearts, he would have been defeated. West would have had a low heart as an exit, and he would have eventually scored two diamond tricks.

At Wit's End...

By ERMA BOMBECK

The other morning I opened the paper to see President Carter's daughter, Amy, trailing behind him at an airport in Tokyo yawning and carrying her violin case.

The President and Mrs. Carter unknowingly are resurrecting a trend in this country that has been dormant for more than a decade. It's called taking the children with you.

Throughout the world at state dinners, high-level hellos at the airport, and motorcades, I have seen Amy trudging along carrying her books, stuffed animals and games.

Not only is the President putting the baby sitter vote in jeopardy, he is creating disharmony among U.S. children who have to stay home with a minimum wage baby sitter, $200 worth of steaks in the freezer and $5,000 worth of toys.

My son said to me the other day, "You never take us anywhere."

"Where would you like to go?"

"I'd like to get out more and meet people like Brezhnev or the Japanese Ambassador to the United States...or maybe just to see a Chinese opera."

"People don't take their children with them anymore."

"Then why does the president do it?"

"Maybe he can't get a sitter. Besides, you'd be bored."

"No I wouldn't. I'd take my skateboard along or my drum set...I'd keep busy. I know some kids whose parents even take them out for dinner once in awhile. I can't remember when you last took me out to dinner."

"I remember. It was when you uttered your first words: 'shrimp cocktail and pressed duck.'"

Maybe I'm overreacting, but my mother tells stories of how she used to travel with us in the '30s B.G. (Before Guilt.)

She tells of how we locked ourselves in a public restroom...pulled over a gumball machine in a crowded grocery store, entwined our bodies around her legs and whined because we couldn't have candy...fell asleep at the fair...threw up on the ferris wheel and argued for 35 miles once on the life span of a centipede with foot problems.

Maybe if we had taken our violin along...things would have been different.

The Slim Gourmet

By Barbara Gibbons

Today's Slim Gourmet recipes are for food adventurers with a taste for the exotic ... but limited time, cash and calories to spend. These recipes borrow inspiration from Indonesian cuisine.

Indonesian food is a veritable garden of spicy delights, but some of the ingredients are as hard to find as black orchids! The techniques can be complicated and time-consuming, and the end result is likely to be high-calorie.

Our recipes are adaptations, not literal translations. We shortcut the time, trouble — and calories — by using lean ingredients, slim and easy cooking techniques, and spices available in most well-stocked supermarkets. The flavor is "authentic" ... but it costs you less!

One easy adaptation we make is using a small amount of dried coconut, instead of the "coconut cream" that's called for in so many authentic recipes. (Coconut cream is made by soaking coconut in boiling water. When it cools, the coconut is squeezed out by the handful and discarded ... along with its fiber. The calorie-rich, high-fat "cream" is then used as a flavoring liquid.) Using a small amount of whole dried shredded coconut — instead of coconut cream — cuts calories while it adds fiber, texture and nutrition. It's easier, too!

2 fresh zucchini, in thick slices

Brown chicken breasts skin-side down in a nonstick electric frypan that has been sprayed with cooking spray for no-fat frying. When skin is crisp and well-rendered of fat, drain and discard fat. Turn chicken breasts skin-side up. Add remaining ingredients, except coconut and zucchini. Heat to boiling. Sprinkle with 2 tablespoons of the coconut. Lower heat to a simmer. Cover and Sprinkle with 2 tablespoons of the coconut. Lower heat to a simmer. Cover and simmer until chicken is tender, about 30 minutes. Uncover. Stir in zucchini slices. Cook, uncovered, until zucchini is tender-crisp and most of the liquid has evaporated into a golden glaze. (Stir occasionally.) Sprinkle with remaining 2 tablespoons coconut before serving. Makes four servings, 240 calories each.

SPICY INDONESIAN
COCONUT STEAK

1 small flank steak, about 1 lb.
2 tbsps. soy sauce
1 tbsp. lemon juice (or lime juice)
1 cup water, divided
1 large onion, peeled, halved, thinly sliced
1 green pepper, seeded,
sliced into strips
1 clove garlic, minced
2 or 3 bay leaves
2 tsps. cumin seeds
(or 1 tsp. ground cumin)
1 tsp. curry powder
4 tbsps. unsweetened,
shredded dried coconut

Put the flank steak on a cutting board. With a sharp knife, score the steak in diagonal shallow crisscross pattern on both sides. Combine soy, lemon juice, ginger and a quarter-cup water. Transfer steak to a shallow plate and spoon on soy mixture. Roll up steak. Cover and refrigerate 1 hour, to allow seasonings to penetrate.

Spray a large nonstick skillet or electric frypan with cooking spray. Brown the steak quickly on both sides, no fat added. Remove to a cutting board and set aside.

Combine remaining ingredients in the skillet, reserving 2 tablespoons of shredded coconut. Cover and simmer 2 minutes. Uncover and continue to cook until most of the liquid has evaporated and onions and pepper are tender-crisp.

Meanwhile, slice the steak against the grain into very thin slices (will be very rare inside, nearly raw). Stir the steak strips into the skillet. Cook and stir until desired doneness is reached. Remove bay leaves. Sprinkle with remaining 2 tablespoons coconut. Serve immediately. Makes four servings, 225 calories each.

Engagements

DUFFY—EISENWINE

AMHERST (Special) — Mr. and Mrs. Cornelius A. Duffy Jr. announce the engagement of a daughter, Elizabeth Ann, to James Ernest Eisenwine, son of Mr. and Mrs. Norman Eisenwine of Pecos.

The couple plans to be married Aug. 18 in Christ The King Catholic Church.

The bride-elect was graduated from Amherst High School, attended West Texas State University and Texas Tech University and plans to attend the University of Texas at Austin School of Pharmacy. The future bridegroom was graduated from Pecos High School, attended the University of Texas at El Paso and Tech and plans to attend UT School of Pharmacy.

Numerous Uses Found For Wax From Candles

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Leftover candle wax and a little ingenuity can solve numerous household problems, according to an authority on candles and their use.

"The trash can isn't always the place for left-over candle wax," says Travis Land. "There are many instances where a small piece of candle wax can do wonders in making something work better."

Windows, sliding doors, latches and even zippers work better after candle wax has been applied to them, he says. Land cautions, however, that in some cases only white candle wax should be used.

"Dye from colored wax can sometimes stain clothing," he warns, "so care should be exercised."

Land suggests these handy uses for leftover candle wax:

— Windows: A light layer of wax applied along the hollows of the slide of the window frame will help the window move easier.

— Sliding doors: A layer of wax rubbed along the door tracks at top and bottom will allow sliding doors to open and close with less effort. The same principle applies to sliding latches on shower doors.

— Zippers: Use white wax to coat the teeth of an uncooperative zipper. Work the zipper up and down a couple of times to loosen.

— Wood screws. Wood screws work much more easily when coated with candle wax. A wood plane also slides better when its sole is coated with a thin layer of wax.

— Snow shovels: A layer of wax helps keep snow from sticking to a shovel.

— Bureau drawers: Wax rubbed along drawer runners makes opening and closing drawers easier.

— Saw blades: A light coating of candle wax often helps saw blades cut more smoothly.

HAIR PREFERENCE

GLASGOW, Scotland (WNS) — Gentlemen may still prefer blonds, but the average businessman in this tight little country feels safer with a brunette as his secretary. "That pattern holds for young women in other office positions, too," said employment specialist Mary Sinclair. "I have dyed my own hair in various colors, and the reactions from males have been amazingly true to the pattern I describe."

DEAR ABBY

DEAR ABBY: I can understand the adopted child's desire to know who his "real" parents were. I'm sure that almost every person who sets out to find his "real" parents imagines that he or she is the product of a beautiful, impetuous love affair between a couple who were forced by circumstances to part.

Such is not always the case. A child can be born as a result of lust, greed, fear, intimidation, blackmail, rape and a number of other ugly situations. Abortions were not always possible, and if they were, many would have refused.

Before a person starts searching for his "roots," I suggest he or she ask this question: Would I be more or less happy if my real mother were to say to me, "I don't know who your father was. You were conceived in a brothel and he had $5."

Or, "I got drunk one night and found out later that I was pregnant. When I told the boy, he took off and I never saw him again."

Or, "Your father forced my car off the road one dark night."

Or, "I was an Army nurse in World War II and your father was a superior officer and I was afraid to report the attack."

Who would want to be the product of an affair between the Jewish girl in Holocaust and the prison guard who promised to keep her young Jewish husband alive in return for her favors?

I think someone should point out that these mothers might well be protecting their illigitimate children from further pain by disclosing the circumstances of their conception.

Speaking For Myself

DEAR ABBY: Our son has been going with the same girl for the last four years. They met in college and have been going steady ever since. We have met her and like her very much.

They are planning to marry this November. Although we live in the same city as the girl's parents, we have never met them. I know of no reason for this except that neither side has ever taken the initiative.

Is there any rule regarding which set of parents is supposed to invite the other first? If the parents of the boy are supposed to make the first move, when and how do we go about it?

His Folks

Dear Folks: It's your move. Telephone the girl's parents and tell them how happy you and your husband are about the engagement. Then invite them to join you as soon as possible for lunch, dinner, cocktails, tea or whichever is mutually convenient.

DEAR ABBY: My daughter thinks she knows everything. She says that if children have the same father but different mothers, they are half-sisters and brothers. But if they have the same mother and different fathers, they are stepsisters and brothers.

I say that when children have the same mother but different fathers or the same father but different mothers they are considered half-sisters and brothers.

And stepchildren are simply "adopted" children. Please straighten this out since we are having some very loud arguments about it.

Proving A Point

Dear Proving: Stepchildren are the children of one's husband or wife by a previous marriage. Half-sisters and half-brothers are sisters and brothers through one parent only.

Carter Says Media Exaggerated Staff Shake-Up

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter, seeking to speak directly to millions of Americans tonight in a rare prime-time broadcast news conference, says the media have exaggerated the extent of his administration shake-up.

The president and his aides say both American and foreign reporters are blowing up the power of Carter's inner circle of faithful Georgians, especially chief of staff Hamilton Jordan.

"The Washington press has grossly exaggerated this," Carter was quoted by a participant as telling about 250 political appointees Tuesday.

A second source, one of the Georgians, quoted the president as saying Cabinet members won't report to Jordan. Carter said there has been "considerable exaggeration in some quarters of Hamilton's role," said this source, who asked not to be identified.

The meeting participant, who took detailed notes, said Carter specifically blamed the Washington press for the exaggeration.

Earlier in the day, two senior aides, reflecting concern by officials over foreign reporters' negative comments, called in five or six European journalists and one Japanese reporter to rebut some of their accounts.

The aides told the reporters the administration shake-up does not represent a constitutional crisis and denied that political advisers such as Jordan, press secretary Jody Powell and media adviser Gerald Rafshoon will be influencing basic economic and foreign policy decisions.

The aides stressed, according to two journalists who attended, that replacing Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal with G. William Miller does not represent any change in U.S. economic policy or support for the dollar.

The dollar has declined on foreign markets since last week's multiple firings, and several foreign news reports have speculated that Jordan and other political aides may advise against politically painful decisions needed to bolster its value.

Also on Tuesday, Carter:

— Summoned members of the Senate Finance Committee to the White House and lectured them on the importance of passing his proposed tax on oil profits, which faces delays and possibly weakening amendments.

— Reportedly narrowed to two the list of names he is considering for appointment as head of the Federal Reserve Board, the "top priority" vacancy created by last week's reshuffling.

It is possible Carter will announce his choice tonight at his news conference, scheduled for 8 p.m. CDT in an attempt to get a bigger audience than his usual 3 p.m. sessions. It is only the second prime-time news conference to be broadcast nationally since Carter took office, and the first to be held in the White House itself rather than the Executive Office Building auditorium.

Sources said the leading candidate for Fed chief was Paul A. Volcker, 51, chairman of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York, followed by Bruce K. MacLaury, president of the Brookings Institution, a private think-tank. The sources asked not to be named.

Carter had hoped for passage by early August of his proposed "windfall profits" tax on oil. The tax would produce an estimated $140 billion over the next 10 years, much of which Carter wants to give to a new government corporation to spend on finding alternatives to imported oil.

Carter, already worried by proposed Senate amendments that would cut as much as $55 billion from the tax's take, was told by congressional leaders Tuesday morning that it probably would be October before the measure passes.

The president quickly invited Senate Finance Committee members to an afternoon meeting in which he strongly urged approval.

Carter said passage is a matter of national security and cautioned against "parochial or partisan positions that could damage the national welfare," according to a White House aide.

But the committee chairman, Russell Long, D-La., said afterward that no commitments were made and the committee still was divided. He predicted passage of a bill Carter would sign, and said he hoped but could not promise that this would happen before the end of October.

At the breakfast meeting, Carter also said he was considering appointing a mayor as his new secretary of housing and urban development.

It was learned that Carter staff members sent him three names Tuesday morning: former New Orleans Mayor Moon Landrieu; Mayor Neil Goldschmidt of Portland, Ore.; and Mayor Tom Bradley of Los Angeles.

Landrieu, who has the backing of Long, was described as "way out in front."

The president is less far along in selecting a new secretary of transportation. One administration official who asked not to be identified said "people are just throwing in names," including those of Rep. James Howard, D-N.J., who heads the House transportation subcommittee; former Rep. Herman Badillo, now deputy mayor of New York City; and Louis J. Gambaccini, New Jersey state transportation commissioner.

There have been reports that White House counsel Robert J. Lipshutz is expected to be the first member of the Carter staff to have his resignation accepted in the administration's continuing shake-up. But one source said he would be surprised if that occurred, in part because Lipshutz "is incredibly loyal."

Hijacker Arrested In Calcutta

CALCUTTA, India (AP) — A hijacker brandishing a knife and a toy pistol commandeered a Bangladesh airliner and forced it to fly to Calcutta today, but was arrested 10 hours later, police said. The 42 hostages he reportedly threatened to kill were released unharmed.

All 42 hostages were unharmed, police said. They included Masahiro Tanaka, 39, of Tokyo, described as an advisor to the Bangladesh government.

The hijacker was identified as Nazrul Islam, a Bangladesh national, police said. Initial reports said there was a trio of hijackers and 40 hostages but authorities later said there was only one hijacker.

Police said Islam dropped his demands for a $1 million ransom and safe passage out of India, pleading exhaustion after 10 hours of negotiations. Police told him to stay on the Biman Airlines plane and release the hostages.

But instead of staying on board, the hijacker mingled among the passengers he released and proceeded to the airport terminal building. He was overpowered by a Calcutta police officer who recognized him from a description given by a person who had delivered food to the plane.

The plane was hijacked 10 minutes after it took off from the Bangladesh garrison town of Jessore, 60 miles from Calcutta, bound for the Bangladesh capital of Dacca.

The Fokker F-27, a twin-engine propjet that carried 43 persons, landed in Calcutta at 8:45 a.m. and was quickly surrounded on one side of Dum-Dum airport by security police.

Several hours after its arrival, three hostages — an ill passenger, a woman and her 2½-month-old child — were released, leaving 40 persons, including the hijacker and a four-member crew, on board, officials said.

One of the freed hostages, Mafuja Khatun, said the hijacker was a man in his 20s.

Citizens Dissolve Nuclear Advisory Panel

WASHINGTON (AP) — A citizens' panel created to advise the president's commission investigating the Three Mile Island nuclear power plant accident has dissolved in a dispute over its function.

The panel's 10 members resigned en masse Tuesday after the commission turned down their requests for investigative data on the March 28 accident near Harrisburg, Pa.

Their major request sought information on personal radiation exposures during the accident.

The commission issued a statement expressing regret about "this misunderstanding."

In its statement, the commission noted it wanted the citizens' panel's advice as a counterweight to another advisory group representing the nuclear power industry.

But it said it felt "the active participation by any outside group in the internal workings of the investigation is inappropriate to the commission's commitment to a completely independent and objective investigation."

Meanwhile, federal regulators are drawing up new directives aimed at making atomic power plant operators, as well as state and local officials, better prepared for crises like the Three Mile Island mishap.

The directives call for better instruments for monitoring radiation on and off plant sites, permanent emergency operation centers at all plants, assurance by utilities that state and local emergency plans are adequate, and periodic plant testing.

Staff technicians of the Nuclear Regulatory Commission advised NRC commissioners of the planned directives this week. Details will be given to operators of the country's 70 commercial reactors at a meeting next Wednesday, officials said.

Part Of Kidnapper's Ransom Found

PATERSON, N.J. (AP) — City police today recovered at least part of the ransom believed stashed in a garbage container by suspects in the abduction of banker's wife Joan Dedrick.

Detective George Brejack received a telephone call from an anonymous source with a heavy Spanish accent about 2:20 a.m. who said the loot was in a garbage bin at Martin Luther King High School, police said.

Brejack and his partner John Serafin went to the school and searched two large trash disposal containers filled with garbage bags.

"One of the garbage bags had a lot of green," said Detective Lt. Peter Ventimiglia. "We have the cash here."

The money was counted by the FBI, which declined to say if the entire $217,000 ransom was recovered.

Federal law enforcement officials had been conducting a house-to-house search of entire neighborhoods in this North Jersey city in an attempt to locate the money cache.

FBI agents also backtracked along the route believed to have been used by the suspects in Friday's abduction of the wife of William Dedrick, who is executive vice president of the Franklin Bank here.

Mrs. Dedrick was kidnapped Friday morning from her West Milford home and released about 40 hours later in Teaneck after her husband delivered the ransom. Her abductors had demanded $300,000.

Authorities said they followed two suspects from the ransom drop to a clump of bushes in Fort Lee, about 15 miles from Paterson.

Charged in the case are Guillermo Jesus Caceres, 22; Angel Humberto Cedano, 22; Salvatore Lacognata, 23; and Gaetano Alesandrello, 23; all of the same East Side neighborhood in this Passaic County city.

Families Judged Legally Separable

A-J Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The relationship between parent and child has "constitutional dimensions" and can be legally severed, the Texas Supreme Court ruled today in a case from Lubbock.

Without further comment, the state's highest court let stand rulings from a Lubbock trial court and the Amarillo Court of Civil Appeals, placing two unidentified youngsters in the custody of Lubbock County Children's Protective Service as managing conservator.

The mother of the two children was not identified in the court opinion, also to protect the youngsters' identities.

The separation was complete, final and irrevocable, the lower court said, "except for the child's right to inherit."

According to the charges, the Department of Human Resources proceeded to remove the two young girls from their mother's custody, alleging she had "knowingly allowed the children to be in certain surroundings which endangered their physical and emotional well-being."

The oldest child, identified only as G.M., was allegedly sexually abused by her stepfather and brother for approximately one to two years.

The other girl, B.G.C., was said to have been in the same room when G.M. was sexually abused.

In a case first filed in Scurry County, the Supreme Court also rejected legal malpractice charges against attorney W. James Rosser.

The suit was brought by Walter E. Cox, who alleged Rosser was negligent by failing to include a deed from Cox to a third party in an express lien. Also, Cox alleged Rosser should have included a third party in a foreclosure to a deed of trust.

Both a Scurry County trial court and the Eastland appeals court had earlier rejected Cox's contention.

Illness Delays Murder Trial

CROSBYTON (Special) — The scheduled murder trial of a 57-year-old Lorenzo woman in the shooting deaths of an elderly Lorenzo couple last October today was postponed because of the inability of Crosby County Sheriff Fred Owen, who has been ill, to take part in the trial.

District Judge Denzil Bevers of Lubbock continued the 72nd District Court trial without setting another trial date for defendant Paula Bruce.

The woman first was charged with capital murder in the Oct. 2, 1978, deaths of Valton Gandy, 73, and his wife, 68-year-old Cora, who were found shot to death in the driveway outside their rural home a mile north of Lorenzo.

The charge was reduced to murder after co-defendant John Thomas Carter, 34, of Lubbock was found shot to death in his cell March 7 after the opening of his capital murder trial in Crosbyton. The death was ruled a suicide.

Guilty Plea Given By Tax Evaders

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Three men have pleaded guilty to federal charges for the smuggling of contraband cigarettes into Pennsylvania and avoiding payment of $7.5 million in state taxes.

Charles Nelson Snipes, 38, and William Seymour, 46, both of Goldsboro, N.C., pleaded guilty in U.S. District Court Monday to wire fraud. Robert Breggar, 32, of Exton, pleaded guilty to wire fraud and conspiracy.

The pleas were entered as part of a plea-bargaining agreement with prosecutors in which related charges against the trio were dropped. They were scheduled for sentencing Sept. 18.

Tomorrow's Horoscope

By Bernice Bede Osol

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) The good things in life still appeal to you, but tomorrow you will let practicality and common sense take precedence over those luxurious goodies you're normally drawn to.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You will be at your best tomorrow when you take charge of what needs to get done. Use your initiative. Don't take a back seat to anyone else.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Better find a corner you can call your own tomorrow. Noisy people or hectic activities will annoy you. You'll need solitude to recharge yourself.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) The friends you'll feel most at ease with tomorrow will be those who share the same practical interests you do. Other types will offer you little.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Usually you go after things with a come-what-may attitude. Tomorrow, however, you'll not take any chances with an important goal. You'll attack in an organized manner.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Don't forget to be philosophical as well as practical in your dealings tomorrow. This combination will steer you through neatly.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Take time to evaluate your assets tomorrow. Much to your surprise, you'll discover you have a lot more going for you than you thought.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) You'll be an asset in any situation that calls for team effort tomorrow, because you will pull your weight without hindering the forward progress of others.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) You don't always have the patience to fuss with detail work, but tomorrow you will. Take advantage of this. Get those neglected chores out of the way.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) It isn't that you won't want to be friendly tomorrow, it's just that you'll be looking to spend your time productively even when socializing. You'll walk away from idle chatter.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Although you're generally not much of a homebody, tomorrow the domestic scene will appeal to you. Center your activities around the family and their needs.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Mental work will be easy for you tomorrow. It would be a good time to catch up on your correspondence, do paperwork or organize any clutter.

French Women Cross U.S. In Covered Wagon

WATERTOWN, N.Y. (UPI) — The gas crisis may slow many travelers this summer, but it probably won't bother two Frenchwomen who are trying to realize a "childhood dream" of traveling across the continent in a covered wagon.

The "dream" began in Montreal about three weeks ago, when Chantal Herbe, 24, and 21-year-old Isabelle Briande bought a horse and the bright red wagon with money they had earned by working odd jobs, the pair said last week as they passed through this Jefferson County city.

The two women, who were both office workers in France, met in that country several years ago while exploring caves.

"We realized that we wanted to live another way of life and wanted to go to America," Miss Herbe said. "We just wanted to realize a childhood dream."

The two said they left their jobs and traveled to Montreal, where they worked for several months before beginning their covered-wagon journey.

In the past three weeks, they said they have averaged about 14 miles per day as they traveled from Montreal, through Ontario and into the North Country of New York.

The pair said their U.S. destination is Texas, which they hope to reach by February when their travel visas will expire.

If they accomplish that, the two said they hoped to travel to Mexico, and then possibly to Panama.

"It's a different way to see the country," Miss Briande said, "We can stop at farms, see people and learn lots of things."

The pair said so far that had been taken in by farm familes along their journey, who have given them free meals, free lodging and free food for their horse and Doberman Pinscher. At one stop, they said, they even received a pair of horseshoes at no charge.

It's the "best way to talk with people and know people," Miss Herbe said.

The city of Munich was founded in 1158. It first was called Munichen, meaning home of the monks, because it traced its origins to a Benedictine monastery at Tegernsee. It became the capital of Bavaria in 1255.

Police Arrest Burglary Victim

A Lubbock man who reported a burglary early this morning was arrested because, police said, the intruders apparently overlooked taking one thing — marijuana seeds.

Officers asked the 25-year-old man's name after entering his apartment and finding the seeds, reports state. The reply was, "None of your ——business."

The man, after being told it was against the law to refuse to identify himself to peace officers, was again asked his name and the reply once more was, "None of your ——business."

Police said they had to wrestle with the man before handcuffing him and taking him to the county jail. He was booked on suspicion of failing to give his identity, using loud and profane language, possession of marijuana and resisting arrest.

In other activity, a 25-year-old Lubbock secretary said a man who had come to her house about 9 p.m. Tuesday to watch television attempted to rape her.

The woman said the suspect, a 32-year-old white man, began making advances toward her and took her clothes off despite her resistance. She said, however, that the assailant fled her residence about 1:15 a.m. today before completing the rape.

The victim ran to a neighbor's house where police were called.

Police went to Health Sciences Center Hospital about 9:30 p.m. Tuesday and were told by a 22-year-old man that he was stabbed in the right shoulder with a fork and bitten on the other shoulder.

The man, who was treated and released, said his attacker's first name was "Ricky." However, reports indicate the man refused to give further details and said he would not file charges.

Two men who apparently got into a fight on 34th Street shortly after midnight today filed separate reports with police, each naming the other as a suspect.

One man, age 19, said the altercation resulted in his getting hit in the eye with a beer bottle. He was treated and released at Methodist Hospital.

The other subject, also 19, suffered a cut over an eye and also was treated and released at a hospital. No arrests had been made by early today.

Gary Lynn Blackmer, a chemistry professor at Texas Tech University, told police about 11:15 p.m. Tuesday that his car had been burglarized in front of his 5301 11th St. residence and $1,180 in property stolen, including camping gear and baseball equipment.

A 17-year-old Lubbock youth walking home early Tuesday narrowly escaped injury after he was shot at by two gunmen in a passing car.

Morgan Autry Vaughn of 512 Ave. E told police that two persons shot at him while he was walking home from a truck stop at 5 a.m. He told authorities the two fired at him from their car near the corner of Seventh Street and Avenue A.

Vaughn told police he fled the scene on foot, running toward a water plant at Fourth Street and Avenue A. He said he jumped the fence surrounding the plant, and the gunmen fired two more shots at him.

An 8-year-old boy was treated at Methodist Hospital for stab wounds after he apparently was attacked by several other children in the 2600 block of East Baylor Street.

The boy told police he was riding his bike on a sidewalk near his home when another youth hit him. He tried to hit back, but instead ran over his assailant with his bicycle.

The other youth left to find his sister, who returned with another person, police reports show. The girl then hit the 8-year-old with a comb.

The boy was treated and released from Methodist Hospital for comb stabs to his left hand and shoulder.

After waiting six weeks, Linday Masso reported to police the theft of about $2,300 in jewelry.

Masso said the jewelry was taken during a pool party at the victim's home at 4515 63rd St. The jewelry was in a plastic box in a room where guests were changing clothes.

Masso told police he had been looking for a person he suspected in the theft for the past six weeks.

The stolen property included a man's yellow gold ring with a seven-diamond cluster, a watch with a gold and diamond band, gold earrings, two gold chains and a gold, pearl and diamond ankle bracelet.

Hunt Family Named In Illinois Land Suit

CHICAGO (UPI) — Illinois Attorney General William J. Scott has filed a $20 million class action suit accusing a firm owned by the wealthy Hunt family of Texas of conducting a massive land fraud scheme.

"Over 3,500 Illinois residents have lost anywhere from $2,000 to $20,000 each" in purchasing land from Colorado City Development Co. Inc., Scott said at a news conference after he filed the suit Tuesday in U.S. District Court.

It was the largest consumer fraud suit ever filed on behalf of Illinois residents.

"The original developers misrepresented the condition of the property and the subsequent purchasers of the development concealed the true state of the area to the persons who had purchased lots," Scott charged.

The suit accuses the defendants — including the Hunt International Resources Corp. of Dallas — of misleading buyers into purchasing nearly worthless land.

It said they failed to tell lot purchasers they could not improve their properties because there were no water or sewage facilities, and that their lots had been steadily declining in value. The defendants continued to mislead lot owners by using brochures, newspapers, letters and telephone calls to conceal the actual state of their properties, the suit charged.

The suit asks that each purchaser be allowed to recover his or her total damages and that all payments currently being collected from purchasers be held in escrow until the case is resolved.

It also requests that the court bar the defendants from conducting business in Illinois and that civil penalties of $50,000 be assessed against each defendant.

Other defendants named in the suit were wealthy Dallas businessmen Nelson Bunker Hunt and W.H. Hunt; Great Western United Corp., Great Western United Properties Inc., Great Western Cities Inc., and Great Western Cities Realty Co. Inc., all of Los Angeles; Colorado City Development Co. Inc., and Colorado City Realty Co. Inc., both of Colorado City, Colo.; Nathan Mendohlson; William J. White; and Thomas Maney.

Tuesday's action amends a suit filed by Scott in January which named as defendants the Colorado City Lot Owners & Taxpayers Association, Mark P. Binstein of Oradel, N.J., and Myron R. Lucyshyn of Chicago.

Scott charged the defendants defrauded consumers by claiming the association planned to represent the interests of lot owners in the development scheme.

PUC Hears Phone Book Manager

AUSTIN (AP) — Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. has news for phone book users — the directories are not address books.

"We feel the purpose of the telephone directory is to properly list phone numbers," Jan Morrision, Bell's phone book production manager for Texas, said Tuesday. "The postal service will be glad to answer questions about a zip code."

Mrs. Morrision told a Public Utility Commission hearing the phone company has been asked several times to list zip codes with addresses but decided against it.

"Zip codes can easily be confused with telephone numbers," she told commission lawyer Allen King. A general map showing zip code zones is included in directories of larger communities, she added.

"But isn't it a fact the telephone book really is an address book?" King asked.

The company doesn't think so, she replied.

Mrs. Morrison testified at a hearing on several changes Bell wants to make in phone books.

The company wants to add a "blue pages" section listing government agencies and community service phone numbers. White pages would be divided between residential and business numbers.

Separate surnames in the white pages would be listed once, with given names, addresses and numbers indented underneath.

Yellow pages would not change.

King said he thought the pruposed changes could go farther, such as adding zip codes. No one opposed the new format.

The phone company would save printing costs with the new books because more names could be listed on a page, Mrs. Morrison said. She added that fewer people would need operator assistance to find phone numbers with the new format.

Phone books in Boston, Sacramento, Calif., and Dayton, Ohio, follow the three-color format, she said.

If the commission approves, directories for Austin, Dallas, Fort Worth, Houston and San Antonio would gain a blue-pages section plus the new white pages format.

Another eight cities — Abilene, Arlington, Corpus Christi, Lubbock, Pasadena, Tyler, Waco and Wichita Falls — would use phone books with residential and business phones listed separately but without a blue section.

Youth Center Groundbreaking Held

Lubbock County and area county government officials Tuesday took part in an event that was, if not earth-shattering, certainly ground-breaking.

They and other persons involved in dealing with area juvenile delinquency took turns turning up shovels of dirt on the site of the new $1.1 million Lubbock County Youth Center.

An estimated 75 persons attended the 1:30 p.m. groundbreaking at University Avenue and North Loop 289, where County Judge Rodrick Shaw told the first group of shovelers, "It's understood that if anybody turns up an arrowhead, cover it up quickly. We don't want any historical artifacts to delay the construction."

County judges and commissioners from Lubbock County and area counties, Lubbock County district judges, juvenile probation officials and representatives of the Texas Youth Council and the Texas Division of Criminal Justice took part in the ceremony.

Page & Wirtz Construction Co. of Lubbock had the low bid for construction of the 21,000-square-foot center a few weeks ago and is scheduled to begin work soon. The contract calls for completion within 365 calendar days.

Lloyd Watts, county juvenile probation director, has been signing agreements with area counties to send juvenile delinquents to the center and has most of the available rooms contracted for, he said.

Lubbock County is reserving 18 of them, and area counties have been signing for one to three apiece.

The rooms, some long-term and some short-term, are each costing the counties $5,100 per year.

The center is being constructed with a $500,000 state grant and with Lubbock County federal revenue sharing funds.

Interested Citizens Invited To Review

Films and other instructional materials provided for public schools through the Lubbock-based Region XVII Education Service Center will be shown to interested citizens during a quarterly review session Friday.

The open house is set for 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. at the Media Division of the service center, 1218 14th St.

The service center, one of 20 in the state, is funded by federal, state and local funds and provides optional services to public schools in a 20-county area.

Requests to review certain materials may be made by calling the Media Division, 763-5014.

Lubbock Parks Board To Co-Sponsor Fiesta

The Parks and Recreation Board voted Tuesday to co-sponsor the Mexican-American community's fiesta celebration, which this year will be held in the Memorial Civic Center.

Parks Director John Alford said he and staff members have been working closely with fiesta committee members to insure that this year's celebration goes smoothly. Last year an unexpectedly large turnout caused more than $10,000 in damage to grass and sprinkler systems in the Aztlan Area of the Canyon Lakes.

The festivities will be held in the Civic Center this year, Alford told board members. He said three city departments will be working with the fiesta committee to provide more services.

A proposal which would allow the consumption of alcoholic beverages in the Yellowhouse Canyon project by special permit or concession has been set aside for study by the board.

The board reviewed a proposal which pointed out that many citizen groups do not use the park because of the city ordinance forbidding alcoholic beverages and examined economic advantages of operating a city-owned liquor enterprise.

The board recommended that city staff and lawyers look into the feasibility of selling alcohol in Yellowhouse Canyon.

Also Tuesday, the board approved a petition by the South Plains Obedience Training Club of Lubbock to charge an entry fee for the "Doggie Olympics" and to operate a concession stand in a city park on Aug. 26.

The contest, which will feature competition for the ugliest, prettiest and smartest dogs, along with an owner-dog, look-alike division, will be held in Maxey, A.B. Davis or Mahon Parks.

Oil Slick Drifts Closer To Texas Coast

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — Scientists gathered here to trap the northerly meandering of a Mexican oil slick are predicting portions of the slick could drift into U.S. waters within 10 days.

But Coast Guard Cmdr. Joel Sipes, leader of the multi-agency effort, warned that precise tracking of the slick is impossible.

Dr. Jerry Galt, a National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration scientist, predicted the bulk of the thick slick probably will remain south of the border. But he added, "The problem for us is to try to figure out how the patches will move."

Galt said several patches have split off from the main slick. The oil has been gushing since June 3 from an exploratory well drilled in the Bay of Campeche by the Mexican national petroleum industry.

The northernmost patch was located 220 nautical miles south of Brownsville.

Officials have said as much as 30,000 barrels of crude are escaping daily.

Sipes reluctantly acknowledged that the team's task is similar to recent attempts to predict where the ill-fated Skylab would fall.

The scientists said some of the patches are as much as 10 miles wide.

A South Carolina scientist hired to study the Texas Coast, said, "The trick is to keep the oil out of the bays."

Iowa Bans Sale Of Farm Land To Foreigners

By PETER ARNETT

LENNOX, Iowa (AP) — "James Bond just bought the Askelsen place," the Fayette County real estate agent told fellow brokers at a recent state meeting. British actor Sean Connery and some other investors paid $1.5 million for the 680-acre farm.

A Taylor County real estate agent told how a well-dressed West German recently walked into his storefront office and said he would pay up to $500,000 in cash for land.

"The first farmers we talked to quickly sent us on our way. They didn't believe anyone had that kind of cash to spend on property," he said. The visitor managed to spend $345,000 on 400 acres within a few days.

And there was that matter of a Husein Seperhri and an Ahmad Alshasa who had just filed papers for the purchase of 457 acres of pasture land in Ringgold County. The realtors speculated on whether they might be the first Arab nationals to buy land in Iowa.

Business chatter like this has a special poignancy for real estate brokers in Iowa these days. It is about to end.

This Midwest state that for well over a century has sold its gently rolling plains to waves of arriving foreigners has now prohibited any more of them from buying land to farm. They are allowed to buy land in limited amounts for industrial purposes.

The sponsor of the successful legislation, state Rep. Horace Daggett, a farmer himself, said, "I realize that many of us here were foreigners at one time. But times have changed."

The changing times have brought fears to Iowa farmers that a foreign investment binge might victimize them by driving up prices and further endangering the small farm.

Iowa has fallen in line with 25 other states that restrict foreign land purchases in some form, but its provisions are the toughest in the country. Iowa had previously restricted foreign farmland ownership to 640 acres per person.

"It is best for Iowa farmers to own Iowa land," Daggett said. "We have interests in the schools, the churches and the economy of the state."

The tough legislation was approved almost unanimously in June, to take effect next January, even though two years of investigation disclose that only about 15,000 acres of Iowa land is foreign-owned, a small percentage of the 36 million acres of farmland in the state.

Throughout America, foreigners are estimated by the U.S. Department of Agriculture to own less than 1 percent of slightly more than 1 billion acres of private land.

"We closed the barn door before the horse escaped," said Daggett, a Republican whose political career began 20 years ago when, as a reluctant candidate for the school board, he was elected even though he and his wife voted against his own candidacy. He was elected to state office in 1972, and continued to farm several hundred acres near Lennox in southern Iowa.

"What it all comes down to is competition for land. We have Indiana and Illinois farmers here who sold their own farms and purchased similar ones here for half the price. And then we saw that Bert Lance was selling his bank to the Arabs, and that foreigners are moving into other concerns. We figured it would be better to stop anything like this happening to Iowa farmland before it even started," Daggett said.

Second In A Series

In assembling information to support the bill last year, farmers were encouraged to report their suspicions of possible foreign ownership of neighboring farms to the state assessors.

"People were pouring all over state and county records trying to figure out where all the foreigners were," said one state government official, who asked that he not be identified. "In one case they fingered an Arab but he turned out to be a U.S. citizen."

Reflecting a popular sentiment in Iowa, bumper stickers were reading, "Dear Arab, grain is my oil," an acknowledgement of the state's power in the grain exporting business.

While Iowa's tough foreign buying bill passed easily through the Legislature, opposition was not difficult to find during a recent visit.

Husky Raymond Bissell, who has been farming his 380 acres near Creston since 1936, said, "When I eventually sell, I don't care whose money it is. I don't like the new law. I don't believe foreigners hurt our land anymore than local farmers. Foreigners own grain elevators in north Iowa and no one's squawking about them."

A former Des Moines Register-Tribune editorial writer, Lauren Soth, said Iowa's economy is tied into and integrated into a foreign market in corn and soybeans, "and it doesn't make sense for an international trading community to project hatred to foreigners."

"Most of us here come from first or second generation German, Swedish or Norwegian stock," said Soth. "Germans are doing most of the buying of land here. It is strange that we're now restricting them."

A prominent Iowa real estate agent, Duane Sandage, from Ames, said, "Most people thought there was much more foreign investment in farms than there really was. They thought their land was being stolen away. Actually, 60 percent of all farmland bought each year is by farmers adding on to their own properties. That helps to account for the decline of the small farmer. I don't think there is even a potential threat by foreigners."

Supporters of Iowa's bill point to national investment trends to justify their stance. Kurt Sorteberg of the Iowa Farmers Union charged that foreigners were buying up to 18 percent of Iowa land coming up for sale. The Agricultural Department reported that foreign interests bought an estimated 54 out of every 1,000 acres of U.S. farmland that changed hands in 1978.

Almost half of foreign-owned land in America was purchased in the past two years, according to National Farmers Union testimony at a Senate hearing. Sen. Birch Bayh, D-Ind., has termed the trend "obvious and disturbing."

Some legal experts doubt the tough Iowa bill can stand a federal court test. Says its sponsor, Daggett, "No doubt there are some treaties that we will run afoul of. But my idea was that we should pass it first, and find out what we can and cannot do afterwards. And that's just what we did."

Foreign Investments In America Listed

By The Associated Press

Here is a list of major foreign investments in American businesses, banks and corporations in 1978 and 1979:

—Britain's National Westminster Bank paid $249 million in cash for all the stock of the National Bank of North America, the 10th largest bank in New York and the 37th largest in the nation.

—A $260 million takeover bid by Hong Kong and Shanghai Banking Corp., the largest Asian bank outside Japan, of the Marine Midland Bank, based in Buffalo, N.Y. Midland is the nation's 12th largest bank with assets of $14,225 million. Federal authorities have approved the takeover, but New York banking officials are holding it up.

—Barclays Bank of New York, a subsidiary of Britains largest bank, Barclays Bank Ltd., plans to purchase 32 branchees of Bankers Trust with $330 million in deposits.

—A major supermarket chain, the West German Tenglemann Group, bought a 42 percent interest in the Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Company.

—A majority interest in Korvettes, a large department store chain, was purchased by Agache Willot, a French group.

—Philipp Holzmann A.G., the largest contractor in West Germany, paid an estimated $75 million in cash for the 16th largest contractor in the U.S., the J.A. Jones Construction Co., of Charlotte, N.C.

—The Frankfurt-based construction company Bilfinger and Berger Bauaktienge-sellshaft, purchased a 50 percent interest in Fru-Con Corp., the St. Louis holding company of Fruin-Colnon Corp and several other U.S. engineering and construction firms.

—Grand Union Company, an American subsidiary of Cavenham, Ltd., a Britisb food processor, bought Colonial Stores, a Southern chain with 366 outlets.

—McKee Corp., high on the list of the top 400 U.S. contractors with $1.5 billion in 1978 construction contracts, sold 95 percent of its stock to England's Davy Corp.

—Dominion Bridge Co. Ltd., of Calgary, Canada, paid $66 million for Amtel, Inc., an engineering and construction firm based in Providence, R.I.

—The Japanese firm Mitsui Fudosan has agreed to purchase the Crocker Bank's headquarters building in Los Angeles in one of the biggest office transactions ever in California.

—Miami's biggest office building, One Biscayne Tower, was purchased by Saudi financier Abdul Lateef Jameel and his sons for $49.1 million.

—The tiny Persian Gulf sheikdom of Abu Dhabi purchased 4 percent of Eastern Airlines, part of $900 million invested in the United States by the tiny country through the Morgan Guaranty Co.

—The Saudi Arabian Research and Development Corp. headed by Ghaith R. Paroan purchased 38 percent of the stock in Sam Wallace Co., a construction-related firm in Texas.

—Houston general contractor Spaw-Glass's single largest shareholder is Societeauxiliaire d'Entreprises, Paris, with 20 percent.

—The Canadian conglomerate Genstar Ltd., has spent $250 million on U.S. acquisitions, including 8,600 acres of land in San Diego for which it paid $93 million.

—Another Canadian firm, Nu-West Development Corp., a homebuilder based in Calgary, Canada, paid about $4 million for an 80 percent interest in Hallcraft Homes, Inc., Phoenix, Ariz.

—The principal owner of the downtown Hilton Hotel in Baltimore is a nephew of Kuwait's ruler and a son of that oil-rich country's prime minister. Nassar Al-Ahmad reportedly invested $20 million for 65 percent of Baltimore's largest hotel.

Stock Mart Stages Strong Rally

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market staged a broad advance today in response to President Carter's nomination of Paul Volcker for the chairmanship of the Federal Reserve Board.

The noon Dow Jones average of 30 industrials was up 5.89 at 835.67.

Gainers outnumbered losers by a 3-1 margin in the mid-day tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

The White House announced the selection this morning of Volcker, currently president of the New York Federal Reserve Bank, to succeed G. William Miller as chairman of the Fed.

Analysts said investors were pleased with the choice of Volcker because of his experience in domestic and international economic matters and his reputation as a conservative on monetary affairs.

Larry Wachtel at Bache Halsey Stuart Shields said Carter "could have made a political choice, but he didn't. He chose the right man."

Miller was named last week to become Treasury secretary. Since then, weakness in the dollar in foreign exchange markets has been attributed partly to uncertainty over the future direction of the Fed's monetary policy.

Monetary policy, which regulates the supply and cost of money and credit, is regarded by many economists as a key factor in determining the course of inflation and interest rates.

Bethlehem Steel was up ⅝ at 22⅛. The company posted higher second quarter earnings and raised its dividend.

The NYSE's composite common-stock index rose .38 to 58.36. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up 119 at 19.66.

Volume on the Big Board totaled 14.26 million shares at noontime, up from 12.81 million at the same point Tuesday.

Fuel Costs No Hurdle For Southwest Airlines

By JOHNNY HOLMES
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Rising jet fuel costs will make plane tickets more expensive but that shouldn't prevent South Plains air travelers from playing an ever-increasing role in the continuing growth of Southwest Airlines, said its president Howard Putnam here Tuesday.

"Our fuel costs are up 60 percent and we've already had to raise our fares about $2 this year," Putnam told a special luncheon gathering of local civic leaders at Lubbock International Airport. "But we're impressed with what Lubbock has to offer and hope to include your city more and more as we continue expanding."

Putnam, who joined Southwest last summer after 23 years with United Airlines, and Tom Volz, Southwest's new vice president of marketing, were honored as special guests of the city during the luncheon sponsored by the City Council and Chamber of Commerce.

"The fuel situation has caused us to up our planned fuel expenses from $25 to $37 million this year," Putnam told the crowd. "We didn't plan a fare increase at all this year until that happened, and we're hoping we don't have to raise fares again this year."

In an interview following the meeting, Putnam told The Avalanche-Journal he envisioned more and better airline service for the city. "Lubbock needs more service, especially to Dallas," he said, noting that 67 percent of Southwest's passengers boarding in Lubbock list their final destination as Dallas.

"On Fridays and Sundays it's almost impossible to get between these two cities because our flights are so full," he continued. The statistics bear him out — Ernie Reese, Southwest's Lubbock manager revealed that every seat on every Southwest flight leaving Lubbock last Sunday was occupied.

"Any new service will come after we get more planes," Putnam said. "We probably have the highest plane utilization rate of any airline. We don't have any planes sitting on the ground. We fly all we have all the time, up to 12 hours a day."

That increase in flights, not only between Lubbock and Dallas but also perhaps between Lubbock and Austin, may be in the offing soon. Southwest takes possession of three new Boeing 737's this fall, and three more in March 1980, boosting its fleet from the current 15 to 21 aircraft. Putnam hopes to raise that number to 30 — twice the size of the current fleet — by mid-1982.

Should Southwest continue its burgeoning expansion, it could be serving cities like Oklahoma City, Kansas City, St. Louis and Chicago. Putnam said his airline is planning a route from Houston to Chicago through St. Louis, but has not yet received permission by the Civil Aeronautics Board. Although mention of expansion into other Texas cities including Waco, College Station and Longview have been rumored, no further expansion in Texas is planned.

Chamber of Commerce president John Logan presented Putnam with an idea for Southwest to employ Lubbock International Airport as a gateway to the north and west as the airline expands in those directions, and Putnam said he would consider the possibilities. "We plan our expansion through the airports where we can best utilize our services," he said. "Right now, Dallas and Houston are our centers but we very likely could be looking toward Lubbock and other cities in the future."

The lone cloud hanging over Southwest's head now is a major one. The carrier is thickly involved in a legal battle with several other airlines which disapprove of Southwest flying in and out of Dallas' Love Field. Until the conflict is resolved, Southwest stands little chance of major expansion.

"In a nutshell, all the airlines serving Dallas when Dallas-Fort Worth Airport was conceived, signed a contract to move all their operations out there," Putnam explained. "But we weren't even in existence when this happened, so we never signed anything, and technically we're under no legal obligation to move out there.

"Since we were an intrastate carrier, we didn't have much of a problem, but then along came deregulation," he continued. "The CAB allows every airline one free route a year, and we chose New Orleans, and here we go again."

The CAB law judges have twice ruled in favor of Southwest, and the U.S. Supreme Court has refused to hear the case, so in essence, Southwest has won twice. Yet, the battle continues.

"I think the people in the area are being inspired by the opposition," Putnam said. "U.S. Rep. Jim Wright (of Fort Worth, the House majority leader) is among those fighting us tooth and nail. We feel our argument is pretty sound though, and we hope to have this taken care of by the end of the summer."

Putnam summed up the discussion of competition by giving his and Southwest's views of the head-to-head battles: "Some of the big guys need to learn how to compete with us, espcially on some of the shorter routes. By abdicating their routes, they're just cutting off their own feet."

Panel Makes SPAG Recommendations

eight minority members and increase the size of the board from 28 to 36 members. Also the committee recommended that the bylaws be amended to stipulate that two minority members be appointed from the city of Lubbock, two from Lubbock County and four others from the 14 surrounding counties according to geographic and population considerations.

Despite the concern over past minority attendance, however, the committee members expressed more alarm over excessive federal government controls and their effect on local elected officials.

"I'm pretty sure the other four members of the Lubbock County Commissioners Court oppose the mandatory makeup of this board," Lancaster told

Shaw, who indicated his resentment of federal restrictions on the SPAG board membership at a July 10 board meeting, said Tuesday, "I'm elected to represent 100 percent of the people. You can't say that any segment of the population is not represented. That is denying the concept of representational government."

Asked whether he might support the committee recommendation if there were sufficient elected minority officials in the region to constitute the minority representation on the SPAG board, Shaw said, "That's wishful thinking because there are not those numbers available."

Glenda Robinson, acting SPAG executive director, said she estimates the current number of elected minority officials in the 15-county region to be between "five and 10."

Lancaster said he supports an expanded board because an Economic De the committee. "I think it's going to be hard to change their minds."

velopment District designation will mean long range economic benefits for the region. But he added, "I think all factions (in Lubbock County) oppose Washington, D.C., telling us what to do on the local level."

Asked if the Lubbock County commissioners would endorse an expanded SPAG board composed of elected minority officials, Lancaster said, "I don't think there is any question that if we outfit the board with elected minorities, they will support it."

The endorsement of the respective counties is essential because EDA guidelines require that "at least three-fourths of the counties within the proposed (economic development) district boundaries" submit documentation of support for having such a district.

Lubbock County earlier endorsed SPAG seeking designation as an Economic Development District, but the support was conditional upon the creation of a separate body to oversee the district. At the committee meeting, Mrs. Robinson said SPAG had received firm endorsements for a district in the region from seven counties, and during the meeting a staff spokesman said two more verbal commitments had been received over the telephone.

Endorsements are needed from 12 of the 15 counties in the region to meet EDA regulations.

The SPAG board of directors is expected to consider the recommendation at its August meeting. Any decision to amend the organization's bylaws to expand the board to include minorities must be made by the SPAG general assembly, which is scheduled to meet in September.

Trustees To Ponder Delinquent Taxes

By LISA PAIKOWSKI
Avalanche-Journal Staff

A crackdown on delinquent taxes that reduce school district revenue will be discussed by disgruntled school trustees at a board meeting Thursday.

Board members expressed concern during budget work sessions last week over the amount of delinquent tax money the district could lose this year and next year.

A possible loss of $1.4 million in back taxes was projected for the school district for this year's and next year's budgets.

Trustees and administrators also are worried about a decline in the overall tax collection rate. Although budgets are based on a 97 percent collection rate with a further 2 or 3 percent allowance made for delinquent taxes, the school district's auditor last week estimated the actual rate at about 91 percent this year.

Much of the problem lies in the collection of automobile taxes — the target of a computerized tax collection drive initiated last fall. However, problems have plagued the get-tough tax collection project.

An in-house computer system was authorized by the city and schools at the tax office to facilitate the automatic printing of lawsuits over unpaid overdue taxes. Notices of the suits were sent to the defendants who had 10 days to settle the accounts before the sheriff's department would serve legal papers.

John Brooks, tax assessor-collector for the city and schools, said the computer system worked fine for about two months and then "the computer started cratering."

Brooks said there were computer program problems that slowed down the tax collection drive, and that the man who wrote the program is no longer with the offfice.

Add to that, said Brooks, the passage of the new tax laws this year which forced him to "shift priorities as far as data processing is concerned. I had to make a decision in re-establishing priorities and I decided to shift it (tax drive) to a back burner."

He added, "We hope in the near future to get back on schedule in getting the number of suits out as we originally intended."

Brooks said about $310,000 in delinquent taxes had been collected in the 10 months from September 1978 to June 1979. That reduced the delinquent tax roll from $6 million in September to $5.7 million in June.

He said that collection of current taxes so far this year is down about 1.5 percent from that during the same period last year, and that delinqent tax collection is down about 1 percent.

The tax-assessor-collector said, "Percentage-wise we're not that far off, but they're (school officials) straining for every dollar they can get."

The school board will meet at 7:15 a.m. Thursday in the assembly room of the Administration Building, 1629 19th St.

Appointees Named To Crime Council

AUSTIN (AP) — Irving R. Stone of Dallas and John H. Green of Odessa were named Tueday to serve one-year terms on the Texas Organized Crime Prevention Council.

The two were appointed earlier by Gov. Bill Clements to the Criminal Justice Division Advisory Board and will represent the board on the council. The council is charged with developing and executing a plan involving law enforcement and prosecutors for the supervision of organized crime.

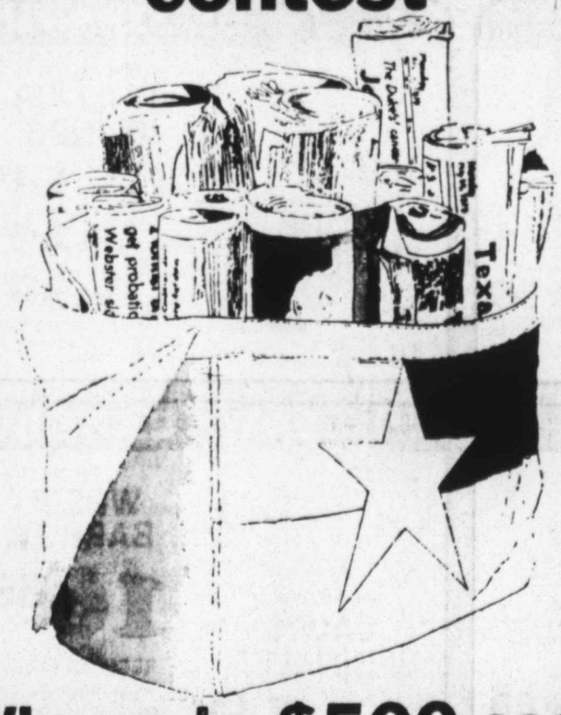
Stone, 48, is chief of the physical evidence section of the Dallas County Crime Laboratory.

Green, 40, is Ector County district attorney.

Clements also announced the appointment of Claude J. Kelle Jr. of Fredericksburg to the Texas Prosecutors Coordinating Council. He replaces William C. Donnell Sr. of Marathon, who resigned.

There were 779 local and long-distance calls for each man, woman and child in the United States in 1970.

Texas newspapers present "Carrier of the Year" contest



Win up to $500 cash

Every year, Texas daily newspapers choose nine outstanding state carriers from winners of local "Carrier of the Year" programs. The chosen nine state winners will each receive a prize of $500 cash.

With an ever-growing number of hard-to-reach apartment dwellers, both collections and delivery are not as easy for the carrier as they used to be. But today's carriers - men, women and youngsters of all ages - are meeting the special challenges of delivering the paper with increased professionalism and continued, polite customer-relations.

For more information on the "Carrier of the Year" contest, contact your distributor or district manager and perhaps you can win up to $500 cash.

Carriers, the eyes of the Texas daily newspapers are upon you, thanking you for your service!

Director Of Museum 'Ruthlessly' Pursues Art

FORT WORTH (UPI) — He moves in a "cloak and dagger" world, covering his tracks as he hops planes to the far corners of the world and secretly plots his ruthless pursuit — of art.

Sometimes he snares his quarry and other times, Dr. Richard F. Brown returns to the Kimbell Museum to wait, sometimes years, for the prize to surface again.

As he sits behind a desk in his sunlit office in the $6.5 million masterpiece of architect Louis I. Kahn, it is difficult to imagine the bearded, genial museum director as ruthless.

"All's fair in love, war and art acquisition," he says sternly, his eyes twinkling.

And that, he explains, is why he cannot disclose the object of his current pursuit of "what may be the best and the last of its kind." He will only say he is going to London on a few days notice if the doctor monitoring his cancer will allow it and he has "to go, look, feel and smell" his quarry.

In explaining why he cannot reveal the prize, he tells of a time he saw a piece of Oriental art in New York while on his way to Washington for a meeting. When he arrived at the meeting, he asked an Oriental art expert's opinion of the piece.

"By the time I got back to New York the next day, it had been purchased," he said, explaining his Oriental friend had represented the eventual buyer.

"That's what can happen."

Still, the 62-year-old Brown relies on a network of friends and associates to inform him when a particular art treasure surfaces that would fit well in the Kimbell's collection of European, Far Eastern, African and Pre-Columbian art.

When he gets the word, off he goes to see the object for himself, to assess its condition and try to judge whether it is what it is purported to be.

"Every case, every object — whether it's a painting, sculpture, whatever it is — is an individual case and somewhat different. It has its own life. That's what makes it desirable. Its history makes it unique, its relationship to its owner."

While Brown has considerable expertise in many areas of art, he acknowleges there are some periods and areas where he must rely on expert friends, considerable research and chemical testing to determine whether the object is what the seller alleges.

"I don't pretend to have the infallibility of the god Apollo of the arts and expert knowledge of every field," he laughs.

But there are times, he admits, when he knows instantly the art object is what he is seeking.

With rapid gestures and verbal punctuation, he tells the story of the Monet painting that had been "lost" for 100 years — "Pointe de la Heve at Low Tide." The painting had been described and illustrated after the French painter exhibited it a century ago at La Salon, an annual Paris art show.

"It didn't win the prize, but it got recognition. Then it dropped from sight," he says. "A century later it surfaced in a private collection.

"The minute I looked at it, I knew it was the one. I didn't have to do much research. It was in perfect condition."

Brown says the painting, which is one of two Monets hanging in the Kimbell's series of self-supporting vaults of concrete sheathed in travertine, was acquired more than 10 years ago but if bought today, would be worth more than $1 million.

But before Brown can even begin offering money for an art object, he must confirm it is not classified as a "national treasure" and been removed illegally from its country of origin.

"That national treasure bit is the biggest problem in acquisition for American musuem directors," he says, "because our State Department and U.S. Customs have an unrealistic view of a real world situation."

Brown said the American Museum Directors Association has agreed not to knowingly purchase art that has been stolen or exported illegally, and the federal government is very sensitive about the latter part of the agreement even though it means another country most likely will acquire the "treasure" anyway.

"There have been numerous occasions where we have found art, mostly from Third World countries, that they now say are national treasures. We don't buy it, but another country does."

Brown said the "national treasure" situation is a worldwide problem, citing the example of a major European musuem which had finished its collection "by the time the 20th century began" but returned the art objects to some Third World countries who claimed them as national treasures.

"And they're now on the open market," Brown said ruefully, citing other stories of returned "national treasures" now on the world art market and untouchable by American museums.

He says Congress is now considerng a bill that would add to the problems of museum directors by ordering all "national treasures" acquired before 1934 to be returned to their countries of origin.,

"All other art-importing, developed and wealthy countries will have nothing to do with this," he contends.

Brown says government action regarding "national treasures" of other governments is more political than ethical.

"The State Department wants to crack down so America looks like a great, big benefactor and brother to small developing countries.

"They are willing to use art and cultural objects as a chip in their pile when what they're really after is an additional chip to use on problems that to them are greater problems — drug problems, drug traffic, stolen cars, illegal aliens.

"Unfortunately the decent and culturally interested, that part of the population with a certain ethnic heritage, has been repeatedly denied."

Brown says "open, honest trade" would be much better than forcing U.S. museums to abide by regulations other countries do not honor, and denying U.S. residents the opportunity to view art reflectng their ethnic heritage. Of course, once an art object has passed all the necessary "tests," the next step is the actual sale of the piece. And the Kimbell, with a multimillion-dollar private endowment, is able to compete with the world's major museums.

Brown will not disclose the amount of the museum's acquisition fund nor the prices paid for any art objects, calling it "an absolute perversion of everything we stand for."

"It is something to be resisted. All of our society appeals to the lowest common demoninator — murder, rape, mayhem, sex, big bucks. What great art is all about is exactly the opposite of that — human content and its profound and special nature so we recognize what we are."

Brown was asked if revealing the value of its 70 gifts and 200 acquired abjects might attract more publicity for the museum, well-known through the art world but relatively little recognized by the residents of the city in which it is located. Brown conceded that might be true but observed, "the money figure can be blinding," and obscure the intrinsic value of the art.

And it is that "intrinsic" value that sends a man like Brown traveling four months of every year in search of art objects to fulfill the directive of self-made millionaire Kay Kimbell's will — "to build a museum of the first class."

New Military Retirement System Urged

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration is suggesting that Congress adopt a new military retirement system calculated to cut costs by about 25 percent and make military service more attractive at the same time.

But Defense Secretary Harold Brown, who outlined the proposal recently at a news conference, said the savings wouldn't start for about 20 years.

That would be in the unlikely event Congress moved swiftly to replace the present 30-year-old system, which will cost about $10 billion this year.

All 2 million men and women now in uniform could elect to stay covered by the present system, which permits retirement after 20 years on half-pay for life.

Under the new system, each service man or woman would get a cash payment after 10 years service and could get out then with the prospect of reduced pension benefits at age 60 or re-enlist and accumulate additional benefits.

Brown said the combination of factors under the new plan and the fact that probably half those eligible would stay under the existing plan would work to delay any significant savings until some 20 years after new plan goes into effect, if it ever does.

The new plan is the product of about two years of study, prompted by rising concern that military retirement costs under the present system will rise steeply in the years ahead unless curbed.

Brown said President Carter has approved the complex new plan, which is based on the recommendations of a special presidential commission.

Officials were unable to estimate how much the actual savings would amount to after the year 2000 because they said they are unable to predict the course of inflation and the degree of pay increases over the next 20 years.

If the system were in effect today, they said, it would cut about $2.5 billion from this year's $10 billion cost.

The plan makes no change in basic military pay levels, but would allow the defense secretary to distribute annual across-the-board pay increases at differing levels among the various ranks and job descriptions.

MILK-VETCH ENDANGERED

SEATTLE (AP) — The Fish and Wildlife Service has recommended listing the milk-vetch under the Endangered Species Act. The milk-vetch, a member of the pea family, once was found on slopes above Priest Rapids on the Columbia River, an area subsequently flooded b the consruction of the Priest Rapids Dam. In 1976 botanists found a few survivors — one colony on the edge of the Army's Yakima Firing Range and another on the Hanford nuclear reservation.

Lubbock School Suit Not Affected By Vote

By LISA PAIKOWSKI
Avalanche-Journal Staff

The House defeat of an anti-busing amendment will not affect the outcome of Lubbock's desegregation case, say supporters and foes of the local busing plan.

By a vote of 216 to 209, the House turned down a proposed constitutional amendment aimed at eliminating busing as a tool to achieve desegregation in schools. The amendment needed a two-thirds majority to survive, but failed to win even a majority endorsement.

The vote was the first time that either the House or the Senate has taken a stand on busing as a constitutional issue. If the amendment had won in the House and then in the Senate, it would have been submitted to the states for approval.

U.S. Rep. Kent Hance, who voted for the amendment, said the issue of anti-busing legislation now "is a moot question until the next House session." But, he added, a turnover in representatives next session could result in a different vote should similar legislation be brought up again.

The Lubbock legislator noted, however, that the House vote "certainly doesn't weaken the decision" made by the Supreme Court in the Columbus and Dayton, Ohio, desegregation cases. The high court earlier this month upheld systemwide integration plans in both cities, striking down in Dayton a busing plan similar to Lubbock's.

Lubbock currently is awaiting a decision of the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals on its limited desegregation plan earlier approved by U.S. District Judge Halbert O. Woodward.

Parties involved in the case believe the appeals court was awaiting the Supreme Court's Ohio decision before handing down its ruling.

Local school officials, anti-busing supporters and desegregation backers reacted differently to the House vote Tuesday, but agreed that Lubbock's case will be decided independently of that vote.

"I think we're just in the same position we were in prior to the House vote," said Dr. E.C. Leslie, assistant superintendent for administration in the district. He said he has not lost hope that Woodward's decision will be upheld and added, "I think the courts will look at every (desegregation) case on its own merit."

He said he was disappointed the amendment did not pass because "it's the only possible way we have to let Americans make a decision on this issue."

Trustee Brad Crawford, who notified Hance of the board's support of the bill said, "This means that what the Supreme Court said in Columbus and Dayton will still be law," but added he also believes court cases will be decided "on their own merits" independent of a congressional decision on busing.

Crawford, Hance and Dan Seale, the head of the local anti-busing movement, all noted the amount of fuel gobbled up by buses at a time when the country is in the midst of an energy shortage. Crawford said President Carter's opposition to the amendment "seems to be at odds with his position on the conservation of energy."

Bill Crouch, one of the leaders of a pro-systmewide integration group called CASS (Citizen's Alliance for Successful Schools) is pleased with the House vote. But, he added, "it will have no effect on the Lubbock situation. We're still waiting to hear what the Fifth Circuit has to say."

Seale, president of the local anti-busing group NANS (National Association for Neighborhood Schools), said, "We are disappointed but not discouraged."

Seale said the members will work on a nationwide basis to defeat busing advocates in the next election and will continue to work for current legislation that would allow congressional review of court-ordered desegregation decisions. That legislation, called the McDonald Bill, is co-sponsored by Hance. It currently is in the Judiciary Committee and has less support than the constitutional amendment proposal, Hance said.

Seale said his group "feels sure the Fifth Circuit will order systemwide integration in Lubbock," but added that NANS members will continue to fight busing "on a local and national scale."

House Rejects Anti-Busing Amendment

Follow-Up

WASHINGTON (AP) — House opponents of a proposed constitutional amendment to ban busing as a desegregation tactic say its defeat Tuesday was a victory for "basic human rights." But supporters vow the issue will come back to haunt its detractors in upcoming elections.

"I recommend that we dispose of it by soundly defeating this constitutional amendment and demonstrating to the world that the United States is not going to turn the clock back on basic human rights," said opposition member Rep. Mendel Davis, D-S.C.

Supporter Rep. Robert Dornan, R-Calif., predicted 10 to 15 House members will not return to Congress in 1980 because they voted against the measure.

"Seats will definitely change," he said, adding that anti-busing amendments will be brought up for a vote at every opportunity.

The amendment, proposed by Rep. Ronald Mottl, D-Ohio, and originally endorsed by a majority of House members, failed on a 216-209 vote. A two-thirds majority was required for passage.

"I think it's real dead now," said Rep. Louis Stokes, D-Ohio, an opponent who expressed surprise at the strength of the rejection vote. "Our count was not that high. We thought, at best, we would be up around 185."

Mottl's amendment would have prohibited the busing of any public school student to a school other than the one nearest the child's home. Mottl says busing causes "white flight" and actually makes public schools more segregated.

Dornan concedes the measure is dead for this congressional session. House rules prohibit the revival of an amendment brought before the body in the unusual manner used Tuesday. The issue reached the floor through a discharge petition, bypassing the Judiciary Committee.

But Dornan promised the issue would come up again.

Opponents of the amendment said it had not been considered thoroughly enough to be considered as a potential addition to the Constitution.

Rep. Parren Mitchell, D-Md., said if the amendment were passed, "We're going to unleash some forces in this country that God knows should not be unleashed again. The best and the worst of America came out during the civil rights movement and the best prevailed."

Texas Solons' Busing Vote

WASHINGTON (AP) — Here is how Texans voted in the 216-209 roll call Tuesday by which the House killed a proposed constitutional amendment which would have prohibited the use of busing to end racial segregation in schools.

A "yes" vote was a vote in favor of the amendment. There were 209 "yes" votes, including 16 in the Texas delegation.

A "no" vote was a vote against the amendment. There were 216 "no" votes, including 8 in the Texas delegation.

Approval of the amendment required a two-thirds majority in favor of it. Thus, the amendment fell 75 votes short of the necessary two-thirds majority needed for approval.

Voting "yes" were 95 Democrats—including 12 Texans — and 114 Republicans, including all four from Texas.

Voting "no" were 176 Democrats — including eight Texans — and 40 Republicans.

Democrats — Brooks, no; de la Garza, yes; Eckhardt, no; Frost, no; Gonzalez, no; Gramm, yes; Hall, yes; Hance, yes; Hightower, yes; Kazen, yes; Leath, yes; Leland, no; Mattox, no; Pickle, yes; Roberts, yes; Stenholm, yes; White, yes; Wilson, no; Wright, no; Wyatt, yes.

Republicans — Archer, yes; Collins, yes; Loeffler, yes; Paul, yes.

Congress Appears Set To Trim Amtrak Trains

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House appears set to trim Amtrak's passenger rail network, but some of the trains that President Carter marked for the ax are likely to be saved.

On a 214-197 vote Tuesday, the House rejected a proposed one-year moratorium on the administration's plan to slash Amtrak's deficit-ridden rail service by 43 percent.

However, the House then adopted an amendment intended to reduce the president's cutbacks by about half. House action on the Amtrak bill is expected to be completed today. The Senate also must consider the legislation.

The president had recommended saving $1.4 billion over the next five years by eliminating lightly traveled routes covering 12,000 of Amtrak's 27,500 miles of rail service.

By voice vote Tuesday, the House adopted an amendment proposed by Rep. Robert Duncan, D-Ore., that would save short-distance routes serving at least 80 passengers and losing no more than 9 cents per passenger mile.

THREE REASONS TO CALL
and Find Out For Yourself Why You Should Become An Owner/ Operator with northAmerican Van Lines
1. Initial Investment Reduced $1,600
2. Compensation Increases With Rising Fuel Costs
3. Still the Best Way To Go Into Business For Yourself With a Big Business Behind You.

But, just don't take our word for it, ask a northAmerican Owner/Operator.
He'll tell you that since January he has received compensation increases that average out to approximately 50 cents per gallon of fuel used.
What's more he'll tell you that, as an owner/operator with northAmerican, he has a lot of freedom in running his own business, yet he has a big business behind him when he needs it.
Also, be sure to ask us about the cost of becoming an owner/operator with northAmerican. It used to be the cost was $4,600, now it's $3,000...and that includes the downpayment on a new tractor and interim living expenses during training, if you need it.
If you're 21 or over, and qualify, you can take advantage of this special opportunity. Call Toll Free 800-348-2191....

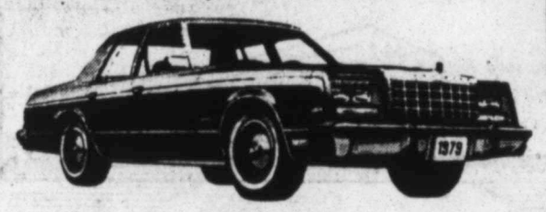
483 MILES Cordoba

483 MILES Chrysler New Yorker



Chrysler Newport 483 MILES

LeBaron 4-Door Sedan 448 MILES

Volare 4-Door Sedan 488 MILES

416 to 515 safe, comfortable Highway miles on a tank of gas!

EPA ratings show you can drive from 416 to 515 miles away from Lubbock in one of our many models of Chryslers and Plymouths.

A 4-door Horizon with TorqueFlite transmission will get you to Bryan ... and a 2-door Arrow with standard transmission will get you to the suburbs of Houston or to Laredo ... or to Shreveport, Louisiana.

Cruise leisurely to Texarkana, Tyler, Tulsa, Oklahoma, Wichita, Kansas, Gallup, New Mexico or Colorado Springs, Colorado in either of these cars: Cordoba, New Yorker, Newport and Volare, each equipped with TorqueFlite transmission. The EPA rating for the LeBaron is 448 miles.

You can get good gas mileage from Chrysler/Plymouth without sacrificing selection as the chart below explains. We welcome your early visit.

Grain Futures

CHICAGO (AP) — Wheat and corn futures fell Tuesday on the Chicago Board of Trade as parts of the Midwest received rains that improved crop conditions.

Prices in corn plunged by as much as the 10-cent-a-bushel daily trading limit within a half hour of the close but recovered from the day's lows.

Soybean futures were lower for much of the session, but recovered late on buying by professional traders that spurred covering of shortpositions or obligations to deliver soybeans not yet owned. Traders cited no particular outside news to account for the recovery.

Rains were forecast for nearly all important grain-producing areas, erasing much of the price gain of last week that came on predictions of dry weather for at least a week. The weather overshadowed reports of record corn export shipments last week at 61.4 million bushels.

At the close, soybeans were 3 to 7 cents higher, August $7.63; wheat was unchanged to 10 cents lower, September $4.30½; corn was 4 to 7½ cents lower, September $3.02¾; and oats were 3 to 5¼ cents lower, September $1.53¼.

Houston Keeps Winning In 'Dome, Sweet Dome'

A-J News Services

There should be a framed picture on the wall of the Houston Astros' locker room with the caption: "Dome Sweet Dome."

Because it is there, in the cavernous but friendly confines of the Astrodome, that the tenant of 15 years has settled in this season to become a serious pennant contender.

Timely singles, good pitching and solid defense — similar to what the Astros displayed in a 6-1 win over the Chicago Cubs Tuesday — have allowed them to win 32 of 48 games played indoors this season.

"I love to play here," Astros infielder Enos Cabell said, "but other teams hate it. They say they can't see the ball as well as when they play at night outdoors. They say the ball doesn't carry as well in here."

Cubs hitters collected four hits off Ken Forsch Tuesday and only a pinch-hit home run by Ken Henderson in the eighth inning ruined Forsch's bid for a shutout. Henderson hit his home run on the first pitch.

"We were leading by five runs," Forsch said. "I figured I wanted to jump ahead of him on the count but I didn't pop my fast ball."

The victory was Houston's third straight and kept them five games in front of second-place Cincinnati. In the three wins, the team that does not boast one .300 hitter has collected 36 hits.

Julio Gonzalez' two-out, two-run double in the fourth inning off starter and loser Dennis Lamp, 7-6, was the big hit in the game and increased Houston's lead to 4-0.

"He (Lamp) got me out twice before on an inside sinker, so I expected him to throw it again," Gonzalez said. The pitch was just where Gonzalez expected it to be, and the Astros' temporary lead-off hitter pulled it down the left field line.

Houston's hitters acted as if coming home for the opener in a 13-game home stand appealed to them. Jeff Leonard singled three times. Gonzalez, Craig Reynolds, Jose Cruz and Art Howe each got two hits.

Howe said he does not see a pitched ball as well in the Astrodome as he does during a night game outdoors, but he "can feel everybody is more confident in here."

"In Pittsburgh, where the Pirates hit six home runs, only (Phil) Garner's home run would have left the Dome. The Dome is our great equalizer. It takes power away from the powerful teams. We're a line-drive hitting team, so the large outfield just gives our hits more room to roll."

The Cubs seemed uncomfortable, as they committed two errors, threw to the wrong base, failed to cover first base and missed converting two potential double plays.

A fielding error by shortstop Ivan DeJesus in the fourth inning with the score 1-0, one out and runners on first and third gave Houston its second run. Gonzalez' two-run double came later in the inning.

Forsch's performance was his best since he returned to the lineup June 27 from a 35-day layoff due to shoulder tendinitis.

"I feel it only when I warm up," he said. "I have to go through a period of pain when I warm up. It's not really a sharp pain; it's just stiffness."

He did not strike out a batter but credited his performance to "getting

Vacancies Remain In Rainbow Field

More than half of the possible 288 entries have already been fillled for Saturday's Rainbow Classic benefit golf tournament which will be held at the Treasure Island Golf Course, reported host pro Wilson Swinney.

The entry fee is $15, and all profits from the tournament will go to the Arthritis Foundation. The tournament is being sponsored by the Avalanche-Journal and the Arthritis Foundation.

Tee-off times for Saturday are at 9 a.m., noon, 3 p.m.and 6 p.m. All competitors will be grouped in one of four flights for prizes.

Activities Saturday include a putting contest, a closest-to-the-hole contest and the presentation of an ounce of gold for the player who can hit a hole-in-one at the 100-yard 18th hole.

KMCC-TV will televise the action at the 18th hole, Swinney reported.

Perryton Cager Enjoying Camp

FORT WORTH — David Reynolds wasn't left speechless because he was THAT impressed with the Tarrant County Convention Center. The place is nice, all right, but a Taj Mahal it ain't.

Reynolds was unable to carry on much of a conversation because of a few dozen windsprints and an hour-long scrimmage his North basketball all-stars had just been through. Those things tend to take away some folks' desire for anything besides rest and a shower, Reynolds sighed — especially if that person is a might out of shape.

"Can you believe it?" questioned Reynolds, obviously talking about the session in general, and the concluding windsprints (10 or so), particularly.

The answer was no.

"I thought we were going to have to work hard, but I never expected anything like that," he continued. "It'd be hard to get us in shape in just a week."

Nevertheless, Reynolds is still glad he's here with the Texas High School Coaches Association all-star basketball team instead of in Perryton harvesting grain or whatever people in the Panhandle town do this time of the year (which Reynolds says "isn't much").

"I'm really excited about this game," said the Texas Tech-bound cager. "They tell me there's going to be quite a crowd here. I'm really excited about that."

After finishing the sentence, the 6-7 forward who bears a striking resemblance to Indiana State all-America Larry Bird looked around the Convention Center and remarked, "I never played in anything like this at home. I think the largest crowd I ever played in front of was about 4,000. I'll bet there'll be more than that here."

Reynolds, the man who helped the Rangers to a pair of district championships — one on the Class AAA level and the other last season in the AA ranks — is expected to be used primarily as a forward on the Charles Boynton-coached team. And that suits him fine, since that position is where he's played since — well, ever.

"I think playing forward will give me a chance to shoot the ball," said Reynolds. "I'd like to be able to score a few points. But, so would everybody else."

points. But, so would everybody else."

Reynolds averaged just over 20 points an outing as a senior, hitting almost 60 percent of his shots. And that came on a team, he said, that played very "unselfish" offense. "Everybody took turns shooting. We'd all try to shoot it 20 times, if we could."

Even if Reynolds doesn't get his 20 points Friday, he said that's fine. What's important is that he got to play in the game, something only 20 of the high school seniors in the state can claim.

"Just being associated with these guys has been an experience I'll remember. But. . ."

But,what?

"Well, I just wish they'd let us out at night a little more often. It's lights-out at 9:30 tonight. And there's a cheerleader camp at TCU."

NOTES: South football coach Bob McQueen has already picked his starters for Saturday's game. They are quarter back Mark James, running back Eric Dickerson, fullback Craig James, wingback Ernest Jackson, tight end Van Hughes, tackles Randy Ellis and Jeff Wright, guards Matt Harlien and Jimmy Jones, center Bert Boyd, and split end Willis Ray Mackey offensively. The defensive unit has ends Gregg Gandy and Travis Smith, tackles Mike Chapman and Casey Smith, middle guard Craig McGallion, linebackers Larry Twardowski and Greg Chafin and backs Elroy Marshall, Reggie Vonner, Anthony Johnson and Ernest Pennington. . . James, Hughes, Harlien and Chafin are Tech recruits. . .

North football coach Frank Bevers lauded Estacado tight end Dewey Turn-(Turner) is looking real good. . . he's doing everything well." . . Bevers will pick his starters today.

Yastrzemski's 400th Proves Winner

By The Associated Press

Mike Morgan wasn't even born when Carl Yastrzemski broke into professional baseball, but he became part of the Yaz legend Tuesday night.

Morgan, who won't turn 20 until Oct. 10, was on the mound in the seventh inning of a tie game when Yastrzemski, who will be 40 on Aug. 22, unloaded his 400th career home run, the 18th player in history to reach that mark.

"I figured I had waited long enough," Yastrzemski, who hadn't homered in 19 games, said after his two-run shot sparked the Boston Red Sox to a 7-3 victory over Oakland. The drive landed in the rear of the A's bullpen in right-center near the 380-foot mark.

"It was a fast ball and I hit it good," said Yaz. "Yeah, I watched it and I felt if that one didn't go out, then I didn't know when I'd hit another one."

In other American League action, the Baltimore Orioles took a doubleheader from the Seattle Mariners 7-6 and 11-3, the New York Yankees edged the California Angels 6-5, the Milwaukee Brewers nipped the Detroit Tigers 5-4, the Cleveland Indians defeated the Minnesota Twins 4-2 and the Kansas City Royals spanked the Chicago White Sox 11-6. Texas and Toronto were not scheduled.

With the score tied 3-3, Yastrzemski got to bat in the seventh as a result of a two-out error by Oakland first baseman Dave Revering. He didn't waste any time, drilling Morgan's first pitch for his 17th homer and seventh game-winning hit of the year.

"Here we were fighting for our lives in a tie game and Yaz comes through for us just as he has so often over the years," said Manager Don Zimmer. "The game situation made it even a greater thrill for me. I was so emotional that I had to fight back tears. He killed the ball, just killed it."

"The big thing to me is that I hit it here in Boston for the home fans," said Yaz. "Now I hope I'll get my 3,000th hit here at home. I don't have any plans for retiring right now. My next goal is 3,000 hits. I'd also like to win a World Series before I retire."

Yastrzemski, who singled home a run in the first inning, moved within 39 hits of becoming the first player in AL history to get 400 homers and 3,000 hits. Only Stan Musial, Willie Mays and Hank Aaron have accomplished that feat.

Orioles 7-11, Mariners 6-3

Baltimore left fielder Gary Roenicke's leaping catch in the eighth inning robbed Seattle's Bobby Valentine of a grand slam to preserve the first-game victory, then John Lowenstein hit a grand slam of his own and drove in six runs in the nightcap. The Orioles, who have won seven games in a row, extended their lead in the AL East to five games over Boston.

Bruce Bochte's three-run homer chased winner Dennis Martinez in the eighth inning of the opener. The Mariners then loaded the bases with two out against Don Stanhouse before Roenicke reached above the fence to haul down Valentine's drive. Ken Singleton drove in three first-game runs while hitting his 23rd homer and had two more RBI in the nightcap.

Yankees 6, Angels 5

Pinch-hitter Lou Piniella singled home the winning run off Dave LaRoche with two out in the seventh after a walk to Jerry Narron and Chris Chambliss' single. Ron Davis, 9-1, was the winner, allowing just one hit in four innings after starter Luis Tiant was tagged for long home runs by Willie Aikens, Rod Carew and Dan Ford. Willie Randolph drove in two runs for New York with an infield hit and a double. The loss was the fifth in seven games for the Angels since the All-Star break, but they remained two games ahead of Minnesota in the AL West.

"I never thought I'd be 9-1 or 1-1 or anything when I sat down in spring training and looked at the pitching staff," said Davis, who began the season in the minors. In the spring, Jim Beattie, who won a game in last year's World Series, was sent down, "so I didn't feel too bad. But I got called back before him when (Rich) Gossage got hurt."

Brewers 5, Tigers 4

Gorman Thomas and Buck Martinez homered and Paul Molitor and Dick Davis hit RBI triples as the Brewers recorded their 11th victory in 12 games and handed rookie sensation Pat Underwood his first major league defeat in six decisions. Lance Parrish belted two solo homers for Detroit while Tom Brookens hit his first major league homer.

Indians 4, Twins 2

Cliff Johnson slammed a tie-breaking two-run homer in the top of the ninth and Rick Wise won his seventh straight decision with a seven-hitter. Mike Hargrove singled before Johnson's 437-foot blast over the center field fence off Jerry Koosman. The Twins took a 2-0 lead in the first inning on Roy Smalley's 18th homer. Cleveland's Andre Thornton tied it with a two-run homer in the fourth.

Royals 11, White Sox 6

Jamie Quirk's two-run pinch triple keyed a seven-run eighth-inning rally as Kansas City won its third game in a row and climbed within 7½ games of first place in the AL West. Trailing 6-4, the Royals tied the score on singles by George Brett, Al Cowens and Darrell Porter and a passed ball before Quirk delivered his tie-breaking triple and then scored on a squeeze bunt by Frank White. Another run scored on a fielder's choice and Brett closed the big inning with an RBI triple.

Simmons' Return Aids Cardinal Flag Quest

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Clearly, with a tough string of games away from home just ahead, it would have been difficult for Ted Simmons to pick a much better time to return.

Simmons, the All-Star catcher of the St. Louis Cardinals, was back behind the plate Tuesday night for the first time in a month. And, as if a wand had been waved, hope sprang anew in the breast of the National League club.

Any fears that Simmons would be rusty from 30 days of inactivity were quickly allayed when he doubled and singled to help the Cards triumph 7-3 over the Atlanta Braves.

But equally important, if less discernible, was his steadying influence on Pete Vuckovich, a gifted if sometimes erratic battery mate.

Vuckovich, visited at the mound by his catcher, responded by digging out of a jam in the third inning when Atlanta put runners at second and third with none out.

Afterward it was clear sailing for the Cards until the ninth, when Bob Horner homered. And Vuckovich, a perspiring figure, let it be known where he considered much of the credit lay.

"He knows me like a book," Vuckovich said of Simmons, whose pitch selection resulted in eight strikeouts. "I don't have to think out there. I just worry about my mechanics."

St. Louis Manager Ken Boyer also spoke of what the reinstallment of Simmons as cleanup hitter meant to an attack which, in recent weeks, had dwindled.

"When you lose your best hitter, it's going to have an effect," Boyer said. "Hitting is contagious. Sometimes, if the pitcher looks two or three batters ahead, he can pitch around a player to get himself out of an inning."

To stay in shape during convalescence from a broken bone in his left wrist, Simmons had done running and lifted weights as part of his daily rehabilitative routine.

He spent an extended period in the batting cage the night preceding his return. And his only discomfort when he rejoined the lineup was stiffness which resulted. "I didn't have any difficulty catching," he said.

Earlier this year, as Simmons was putting together his most successful of 10 major league campaigns, the Cards inched ahead in in National League East standings with a 32-21 record on June 11. Now, they're 46-45 and seven games back.

A 15-game trip to the parks of all five division rivals begins Friday night. It could hold the key to St. Louis' hopes.

Oakwood Wins State Crown

Oakwood Baptist Church of Lubbock defeated Christians of Midland 11-8 to win the Texas State Church Open Slow-Pitch Softball Tournament last weekend in Midland.

Oakwood Baptist will now advance to the U.S. Regional Tournament Aug. 10-11 at Corpus Christi, with the first-and second-place finishers advancing to the national finals in Orlando, Fla., Aug. 31-Sept. 3.

Oakwood Baptist was one of two Lubbock teams participating in the state tournament. Cumberland Presbyterian Church was the other local team.

Oakwood advanced to the tournament finals with wins over three Odessa teams, First Church of God, Calvary Baptist and First Presbyterian.

Oakwood's Carl Beyer hit a grand-slam homer against Midland with the score tied at 7 to lift the local team to its victory.

Oakwood players named to the all-state team were Donnie Combs, Vince Barron, Dave Williams, Kim Killian, Mike Bewley and Ray Patterson.

Dixie Captures Tournament

The Dixie All-Stars won the District 2 championship Tuesday by defeating the Northwest All-Stars 8-1 at Buster Long field.

With the triumph, Dixie will advance to the bidistict tournament against the Abilene district winner in a game to be played next Saturday in Snyder.

In Tuesday's consolation game, Shallowater defeated Cooper 11-0.

Kyle Gayler was the winning pitcher in the finals, striking out nine. He also went 2-for-3 at the plate.

Greg Baker and Todd Hunt also went 2-for-3 for Dixie. Baker had 3 RBIs, and Hunt hammered out two doubles. Baker doubled in a pair of runs in the third inning.

Frank Tello was the losing pitcher. Charles Rios was Northwest's leading hitter. He went 2-for-2.

In the third-place game, Rodney Silvis was the winning pitcher as well as helping the Shallowater cause with a 3-run homer. Teammate Greg Cowart went 4-for-4 and scored 4 runs.

Bobby Mendez was charged with the loss for Cooper.

Hillcrest Golf Tourney Closing Entries Today

By CHUCK McDONALD
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

The way Mark Jarrett has it figured, Mark Jarrett seems like a natural choice for the favorite's role in the upcoming Men's City Golf Championship at Meadowbrook this weekend.

After all, he was part of the championship team at the Pinehills Summer Partnership last month and just last weekend he teamed with Guy Conine to capture the Hillcrest Country Club Men's Partnership.

Jarrett has competed individually only once this summer — two weeks ago in the New Mexico Invitational at Clovis — and he won that tourney also.

But Jarrett will have plenty of competition when the action begins on Saturday morning at Meadowbrook. Lubbock's finest golfers will be entered, including defending champion Ben Wallace. Golfers still interested in signing up for the affair, though, had better move fast.

Entries will be accepted until 6:30 p.m. today at Meadowbrook or until the field, limited to 240, is full. Entry fee is $25.

"I've been playing real well these last three weeks," said Jarrett. "And the way things have been going, I expect to finish in the top three. It could come down to John Farquhar, Rex Robertson, John McClure and me in the end."

McClure, son of Meadowbrook pro Jay McClure, played out of town last weekend, but Robertson and Farquhar competed in the Hillcrest Partnership.

And a glance at the results from that tournament gives a good indication of how tough things could be this weekend at Meadowbrook. Jarrett, Farquhar and Robertson were all on teams that finished tied for first in the championship run with two-day scores of 133.

"We were real fortunate to win that playoff," admitted Jarrett. "In fact we were lucky just to make the playoff."

Pirates Lose Argument, Game To Reds

ahead of the hitters, making a good pitch and having them hit it to somebody."

Reds 6, Pirates 5

Pittsburgh ost a 35-minute argument to the umpires and a 6-5 decision to Cincinnati.

Then Chuck Tanner lost his cool.

"The umpires changed the whole game," said the angry Pirate manager after the controversial loss. "Maybe we'd get beat anyway, but you don't know."

Tanner filed an official protest after a freak fourth-inning call short-circuited a Pirate rally.

Here's what happened: With Pittsburgh losing 4-3, Phil Garner was at third base and Lee Lacy at first as Cincinnati left-hander Fred Norman fired a 3-1 pitch to Omar Moreno. Lacy took off for second as Norman delivered. Moreno took the pitch, and catcher Johnny Bench fired the ball to shortstop Dave Concepcion.

"I didn't hear the call," said Bench. "I just had to make some kind of throw."

Concepcion tagged Lacy at second and second base umpire Dick Stello made an emphatic 'out' call. So Lacy got up and headed toward the dugout.

But then both sides realized that plate umpire Dave Pallone had called ball four on the pitch to Moreno. Lacy tried to dive back to second, but Concepcion tagged him again.

The umpires ruled Lacy out a second time, and the Reds left the field. But Tanner, his coaches and assorted players spent the next 35 minutes speaking their piece to the umpires.

"He (Stello) should have watched the play. He should have looked into home plate," Lacy said calmly after the loss.

"Instead of saying I was out, he should have said ball four."

But Stello and umpiring crew chief Bob Engel said the burden in that moment of confusion was on the baserunner.

"When Bench comes up throwing, I'm not looking to see if it was a strike or a ball," said Stello. "I can't lie. I called a man out and it was ball four, so it's got to be a mistake on my part, inadvertently... but there isn't anything in the rulebook in that situation that rectifies an umpire's mistake, if it is a mistake."

In other National League games, the St. Louis Cardinals downed the Atlanta Braves 7-3; the Los Angeles Dodgers routed the Philadelphia Phillies 15-3; the New York Mets edged the San Francisco Giants 6-5 in 12 innings and the San Diego Padres stopped the Montreal Expos 4-3 in 14.

Ken Griffey smashed a two-run homer among his three hits to lead Cincinnati's victory. In addition to the two-run blast in the seventh inning, Griffey had two singles, one of which helped Cincinnati to a 4-0 lead in the opening inning off Pirate pitcher Bruce Kison, 6-5.

Norman raised his record to 7-8 with late relief help from Doug Bair, who gained his 14th save.

Cardinals 7, Braves 3

Garry Templeton hit two doubles and a triple, collected two RBI and scored twice, leading St. Louis over Atlanta behind Pete Vuckovich's six-hitter.

The contest marked the return to the St. Louis lineup of catcher Ted Simmons for the first time in a month. Simmons doubled home the Cards' second run and later singled.

Bob Horner drove in two of Atlanta's runs, with a double in the first off Vuckovich, and a homer in the ninth. Vuckovich struck out eight.

"Vuckovich was the whole game," said Atlanta Manager Bobby Cox. "He's outstanding. He's one of the best pitchers in the game, as far as I'm concerned."

Dodgers 15, Phillies 3

Dusty Baker slugged a grand slam homer and Ron Cey hit a three-run shot as Los Angeles routed Philadelphia with a season-high 22-hit attack.

Winner Burt Hooton gave up Greg Luzinski's 10th home run, a three-run shot in the first inning for the Phillies' runs.

The Dodgers came back with three runs in the bottom of the second and then scored five in the bottom of the third, highlighted by Cey's 18th home run. Baker's slam keyed a five-run sixth.

Mets 6, Giants 5

Alex Trevino's two-out single in the 12th inning drove in the tie-breaking run, leading New York over San Francisco.

Joel Youngblood started the winning rally off Pedro Borbon with a single. Frank Taveras sacrificed and, after Steve Henderson grounded out, Trevino lined his tie-breaking hit to right. John Stearns later capped the rally with an RBI single for the eventual winning run. Reliever Wayne Twitchell was the winner with last-inning relief help from Tom Hausman, who gave up a run-scoring bouncer to Darrell Evans.

Expos 4, Padres 3

Paul Dade singled home Ozzie Smith from second base with one out in the 14th inning to give San Diego its victory over Montreal.

David Palmer walked Smith and Dave Winfield to set the stage for Dade's game-winning hit. Steve Mura, the fifth Padre pitcher of the night, pitched the last inning to gain the victory.

Mazzilli Reported In Good Condition

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — New York Mets outfielder Lee Mazzilli, injured in a collision Monday night in a game at Dodger Stadium, was reported in good condition Tuesday.

Mazzilli was knocked out when he and temmate Dan Norman collided while chasing a drive by Davey Lopes that went for an inside-the-park homer.

The hero of last week's All-Star game when he hit a homer and walked in the winning run, Mazzilli was unconscious 10 minutes before being taken from the field by ambulance.

Shepard Announces OU Move

NORMAN, Okla. (UPI) — Darrell Shepard, a highly sought prep quarterback two years ago, is transferring from Houston to Oklahoma, it was announced Tuesday.

Shepard, of Odessa, said he wanted to play in bowl games and to join his brother, Woodie Shepard, on the Sooner team.

The NCAA ruled Darrell Shepard ineligible for postseason contests after a controversy over his acquisition of a new sports car shortly after he signed with Houston in 1977.

The NCAA said he could play in bowl games if he went outside the Southwest Conference.

"I decided last week to come to OU. It was because I couldn't play in bowl games and the fact that I had a chance to play with my brother," Shepard said.

Woodie Shepard played for OU in 1976, quit in 1977 and returned this spring. He threw a 49-yard pass to spark the winning touchdown drive in the 1976 OU victory over Nebraska.

Shepard said he realized OU had a crowded quarterback field, including J.C. Watts, Kelly Phelps and Rod Pegues.

But he said he would benefit if OU started passing more and using the I-formation. He was a highly praised I-formation quarterback in high school.

Head coach Barry Switzer said Shepard would begin working at quarterback and might also be considered for kickoff returns and punt returns.

Local Team Needs Help

A local softball team will represent Texas in the National Modified Fast-Pitch Tournament Aug. 23-26 in Binghamton, N.Y. — if it can raise enough money to make the trip, or approximately $6,000.

The team, sponsored by Perry Harrison Construction of Lubbock, and is coached by Dean Hudson.

According to Hudson, the team has raised about $2,500 for the trip and will have about a month to raise the rest of the money. The team plans to leave Aug. 22 for Binghamton.

Hudson said that since there are no modified fast-pitch leagues in Texas, the team had to ask permission from the Texas Amateur Softball Association (ASA) to represent Texas at the tournament.

"With the help of Rusty Black (Lubbock Parks & Recreation), we were able to secure permission from W.W. Kethan, head of the state ASA," Hudson said.

Hudson said that with the help of local and state ASA officials, and with information obtained from the national tournament, a local modified fast-pitch league could be organized.

Modified fast-pitch has basically the same rules as fast-pitch softball, Hudson explained, except that the pitcher must modify his pitches in order to deliver the ball slower than in the regular fast-pitch game.

Hudson said a pitcher cannot "break" his elbow or wrist during a pitch, thus preventing curveballs, screwball and sinkers, all illegal pitches in modified fast-pitch.

"No windups are allowed and a pitcher can't raise his arm above his shoulder," Hudson explained. "The pitching rules cut the speed down in half of what a regular fast-pitch would be."

Hudson said that fast-pitch softball recently has been overtaken in popularity by the slow-pitch game, but that modified fast-pitch could be an alternative to the other types of softball.

"Some of our players play both fast and slow-pitch," Hudson said. He added that the team is basically a base-hitting, speed team, with limited — but potential — power.

He believes Harrison Construction can compete in the tournament, but said the teams from the East — especially Florida — will probably be favored in the tournament, because "The sports is much more popular in the East," said Hudson.

Mariano, of Miami Beach, Fla. won the national title last year.

Before the team can compete, though, it must have enough financial support just to make the trip. That is why Hudson hopes area softball fans can contribute to his team's cause.

For those wishing to support the team, contact Hudson at 799-6355 or 747-2611. Contributions can be sent to Hudson, 3609 Elkhart St. in Lubbock.

"We're not only representing Texas, but Lubbock as well," Hudson said.

ALABAMA CAGERS WIN

KYOTO, Japan (AP) — The unbeaten Alabama University basketball team wound up its Japan tour by beating the Japanese national team 86-69 for its seventh consecutive victory Tuesday night. Sparked by Robert Scott's 19 points, Alabama led 43-38 at halftime. Other scoring leaders for the winners were Ken Johnson and Eddie Phillips with 15 each, Reggie King with 10 and Carl Mitchell and Joe Hancock with 9 each.

Cousineau Living It Up As Montreal Alouette

MONTREAL (AP) — Next to bone-crunching tackles, Tom Cousineau, the newest member of the Montreal Alouettes, has a passion for food.

"I love to eat," said the 22-year-old linebacker who was the first pick of Buffalo Bills in the National Football League draft last May but spurned their offer to sign a three-year, $1 million contract with the Alouettes last week.

As he spoke, Cousineau attacked a rack of spare ribs, a half chicken, french fries, bread, gravy and rice — a generous snack to whet the ferocious appetite that goes with his 6-foot-3, 227-pound frame.

The former All-American from Ohio State has had an active first week in Montreal — from dancing at downtown discos to intense practice sessions at Olympic Stadium in preparation for the Alouettes game tonight against the Calgary Stampeders.

All eyes are expected to be fixed upon the Canadian Football League's latest pearl and no one is more aware of it than the man himself.

"The Calgary team is probably going to test me," Cousineau said. "See what I can and can't do. I'm going to make mistakes. I'm going to get knocked down. I might get beat in a passing situation. The fans will have to understand this."

In spite of injecting that note of pessimism Cousinea doesn't lack for confidence in his approach to the new brand of football.

"Basically, football is a child's game," he said. "I've been playing football since grade three. The only difference now is that I'm getting paid for it."

From all reports, Cousineau is being paid handsomely for his efforts, but Robert Berger, vice-president of the Alouette Football Club, insists the investment is worthwhile.

"I think Cousineau will pay for himself over the next few years," he said. "He's going to be a box office attraction not just in Montreal but wherever we play across the country."

The Alouettes executive estimated that ticket sales were up by about 2,000 as a result of Cousineau's presence in the lineup against Calgary.

Among the additional fans will be Cousineau's father, who was to have arrived Tuesday night for his son's debut.

"Physically, I'm ready for the game against Calgary," said the younger Cousineau. "I'm in good condition but I wish I had a few more days practice.

"I studied the films of the Calgary players and saw that they have some excellent running backs. They use the width of the field a lot.

"I hope to be able to block some of them, hit them hard, let them know I'm there."

If Cousineau can duplicate his figures at Ohio State last season — 140 solo tackles and 104 assists to bring his career total to 647 tackles — the Alouettes might be inclined to treat him to a banquet spread.

WETHERSFIELD, Conn. (AP) — Fuzzy Zoeller, Rod Curl, Lou Graham and Bruce Devlin will play in this year's Sammy Davis Jr.-Greater Hartford Open, Tournament Chairman Larry Baldyga said Tuesday.

Ex-Buff In NCAA Probe

CORVALLIS, Ore. (AP) — A football tailback who decided to attend Oregon State after becoming disenchanted at Colorado says he has been contacted by an NCAA investigator concerning recruiting practices in the Buffalos' football program.

Darryl Minor said an NCAA official came to Corvallis to talk with him about possible violations in Colorado's recruitment program.

"The man from the NCAA came right to my house and asked me a lot of questions," Minor said. "When he was leaving he told me if I had stayed at Colorado, I probably would have lost my eligibility and my scholarship."

Minor said he did not remember the name of the NCAA investigator. A representative of the NCAA's Enforcement Division would neither confirm nor deny that Colorado was being investigated.

Gary Cabe, an assistant coach at Colorado and the man who most often had contact with Minor, said he thought the NCAA's interview with Minor was routine.

"I know the NCAA planned to check with a lot of the top players recruited nationwide," Cabe said, "and I think Darryl was one of them. I don't think we're under investigation."

Minor, a heavily recruited fullback who rushed for nearly 2,700 yards in two seasons at College of the Sequoias in California, is bitter about his Colorado experience.

"Colorado was the place I wanted to go. They promised me an apartment and a job. My wife and I got there and there was no apartment. There was no job either. They took us to a hotel and led me to believe the charges would be taken care of. We were there three days and nothing happened. Then I found out I was going to have to pay the hotel bill."

Minor said when he arrived at Colorado, the school's winter term had already begun.

He said he finally became fed up and decided to leave. He chose Oregon State as his next destination.

Cardinal Death Still Mystery

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Until further laboratory tests are complete, the startling death of St. Louis Cardinal veteran J.V. Cain falls into the vague category of an unexplained stoppage of the heart, or "sudden death," doctors say.

Cain, having reached his 28th birthday on Sunday, collapsed during a Cardinals practice session that evening and died shortly afterward. Teammates and others said he had been a virtual model of physical health and conditioning.

An autopsy performed Monday failed to indicate what caused Cain's heart to stop. Doctors ruled out heart attack in its conventional meaning: a blood clot that led to the death of heart tissue.

"Sudden death" is the term doctors use for the phenomenon of an apparently healthy person's heart stopping with no obvious underlying disease or trauma. It occurs "with no good anatomical explanation" in one of five cases in which there are cardiac symptoms, said Dr. George E. Gantner Jr., nationally known medical examiner for St. Louis and St. Louis County.

Spartacade Experiences Helping U.S. Moscow Olympics Planning

A-J News Services

MOSCOW — They're calling it the Great Banana War.

U.S. 100-meter hurdler Deby LaPlante of La Mesa, Calif., is fed up with having no fruits or vegetables at the meals in her Moscow hotel. So she and her teammates have taken to stealing bananas.

"Your body gets used to taking in nutrition dy after dy," she said. "With no vitamins, a lot of us are having hamstring troubles, feeling tight and getting leg cramps."

The 26-year-old blonde, a gold medal winner at the Pan American Games in Puerto Rico, won her qualifying heat with a good 13:21 at Spartacade Tuesday which put her into the semifinal on Wednesday. But she was worried, because her hamstring muscle was stiffening up and might be strained.

The waitresses at the Hotel Rossiya, where the U.S. women's track team is staying, are allowing the athletes only one banana every two days. No other fruit is available at the meals.

"So you gotta steal more," chimed in Louise Ritter, 21, the American high jump record holder from Denton.

Miss Ritter arrived a day earlier in Moscow than Miss LaPlante and quickly found out the food score. Then she talked her friend into going around the restaurant swiping extra bananas when the waitresses weren't looking.

But they were. Suddenly the Russians were all over the hurdler, screaming "Nyet, nyet (no, no)."

Since then, the waitresses have started to guard the bananas, the two athletes said.

"They carried them off all the tables," Miss LaPlante noted. "All we'd like is a decent meal and we'd leave them alone."

Because of such incidents, the U.S. track and field team at next summer's Moscow Olympics will be spending as little time as possible in Russia and American athletes will be flown into the Soviet Union just a few days before their events.

Jimmy Carnes, track and field coach for the U.S. team at the Spartacade Soviet summer games, said track coaches Stan Huntsman and Jim Santos will leave Moscow next Monday to scour Europe for a suitable place to set up an Olympic training camp for the Americans.

"They have an itinerary and they know what they are looking for," said Carnes, a dour, grits-loving Georgian who now lives in Gainesville, Fla.

"They'll be going to Helsinki in Finland, then on to Oslo and then down to West Germany — Munich, Stuttgart and Dortmund."

The news that they will not have to spend a full three weeks in the capital of world communism probably will be most welcome to the athletes themselves.

Americans competing in the 87-nation Spartacade have complained there is nothing to do in Moscow when they are not actually competing and they can't understand the films or the television. And some of them have caught minor stomach ailments from drinking the water.

Misses LaPlante and Ritter and their sidekick, Cathy Sulinski, 21, of San Francisco, a bronze medal winner at the Pan Am Games in the javelin, complained about the lack of fresh milk, orange juice and other foods common to Westerners.

Some generous teammates had been passing around American candy bars. Others brought in peanut butter, and their team manager packed away raisins and wheat crackers.

It might be that the American women's complaints about bananas amount to sour grapes because they were not doing as well as they had hoped to. Many were exhausted after a trip straight from the Pan Am Games.

The Soviet capital's nightlife cannot be blamed for the women's track and field performances because there is none.

"We have a wild card game every night in room 282," Miss LaPlante said.

To help them through the long evening hours they will have to spend — like it or not — in Moscow, the U.S. Olympic Committee is thinking of bringing in American films for projection in the Olympic village, Carnes said.

"We plan to fly the athletes into Moscow just a few days before their events — say three days — to let them settle down," he said. "That should be enough." Carnes denied that Moscow's facilities — or lack of them — had anything to do with the decision to shun the Soviet capital until the last possible moment.

But despite his denials, the American decision is likely to offend the Russians, who are anxious to prove they can organize the Olympic games as well as anyone else and to squeeze the maximum propaganda out of the games.

"I would recommend doing this wherever the Olympics were," Carnes said. "When you come into something like this, there's always so much going on that it's difficult to get your team together as a group. You get broken up and you become just a bunch of individuals."

He said it was decided to have the training camp in Europe instead of the United States "to get rid of the jet lag."

Carnes did acknowledge Moscow has some problems, however, mainly it is difficult to find things out — anything.

"Until today, our athletes didn't even know who they were running against until they got out onto the track," he said. "I think we've cracked the system now, though. We've got a person permanently stationed in the stadium's central information center and now we get start lists a couple of hours ahead of time.

"We can also get our results a bit faster now," he added.

To help get around problems like that, Carnes said the Americans are planning to bring a batch of walkie-talkies to next year's Olympics, so that start lists, results and other information can be quickly relayed to team officials and athletes around the main track and field complex.

Things may pick up for the Moscow Olympics next year. The Olympic Village should provide plenty of comrades for the U.S. team, and word is that the Americans will have a special chef preparing all the meals for the athletes.

For now, the U.S. embassy here has offered to provide some basic foods that the athletes feel lost without. And the coaches are trying to scrounge up some vitamin pills.

Russian Track Hero Humiliated

MOSCOW (AP) — Valery Borzov is three months short of 30 and his legs are scarred from two operations. Yet after suffering one of his most painful defeats he still talked of competing in the sprints at his third Olympic games next year.

"I believe I can still keep running competitively," the great Russian athlete said.

"I can't train too much on artificial tracks because it causes small pains. But I still feel I have a 50-50 chance of making the Moscow Olympics."

A silent Russian crowd watched Borzov beaten into sixth place in his heat of the 200 meters in the Spartacade Sports Festival at Moscow's Lenin Stadium Tuesday. He looked overweight and was short of breath.

Yet the spirit of the man who won two gold medals at the 1972 Olympics at Munich was not broken.

"I am disappointed, but not depressed," Borzov said. "Although I had to have surgery on leg tendons, I never considered quitting.

"I will try to find the most acceptable barrier, considering my age and the injuries I have suffered. If I find it, I will fight for an Olympic medal."

Borzov has already made Olympic history by winning medals in the sprints at two Olympics. After his double triumph at Munich he won the bronze in the 100 meters at Montreal in 1976.

Borzov said his tendons were damaged by too much training on artificial tracks. He does most of his training these days in the forest near Kiev, where he lives with his wife, Olympic gymnast Ludmilla Trescheva, and their small daughter Tatyana.

Although Americans and other foreign athletes are competing this year, the Spartacade is primarily the sports festival of the 15 republics of the USSR.

Borzov was running for the Ukrainian team. But he is a national hero, and the crowd cheered him warmly when he went on to the track. He left sadly and in silence.

The Russian fans had plenty to cheer about. Their athletes — from one republic or another — won three of the four track and field finals Tuesday. The Americans had a bad day. Sharon Dabney of Philadelphia was the only American in the finals and ran last in her heat of the 400 meters.

Americans were impressive in heats, however. Two clocked the fastest times in the 200 meters and qualified for the final — Don Coleman in 20.79 and Wardell Gilbreath in 20.97.

Deby LaPlante of La Mesa, Calif., the AAU champion, won her heat of the women's 100-meter hurdles in 13.21.

The Russian winners were Alexander Puchkov in the 110-meters hurdles with a time of 13.68, Maria Kulchova in the women's 400 meters with 49.77, and a Ukrainian quartet in a non-Olympic event, the women's 4 x 800 meters relay. Kulchova set a Soviet record for the second time in the meet.

Michel Detlef of East Germany won the men's javelin with a toss of 286 feet, 11¾ inches.

Americans failed, too, in gymnastics and rowing.

Scott Barclay, 22 of Arizona State University, and Donald Dembrow, 22 of West Haven, Conn., both missed making the finals in the all-around gymnastics qualifications. But Barclay, 15th, was only one place and a fraction of a point short.

Elizabeth Kent and Mary Ann Welsh, who train in Philadelphia, placed fourth in the women's pairs without coxswain in the rowing and were eliminated. They blamed their failure to qualify on a bad start in a nasty cross wind.

The outlook looked brighter for the American team Wednesday, with good chances of four gold medals.

Coleman and Gilbreath were to run in the 200 meters — the semifinals in the morning and the final in the evening.

Carl Lewis of Willingboro, N.J., was a likely prospect in the long jump and John Powell of Cupertino, Calif., who arrived in Moscow Tuesday, was expected to make a strong bid for the discus title.

Miss LaPlante faced the final of the 100 meters hurdles.

The U.S. basketball team was in Lithuania, hundreds of miles from Moscow, preparing for a match against the Moscow team later this week. Squads from the cities of Moscow and Leningrad compete in Spartacade along with teams from the 15 Soviet republics.

Vernon Beats Lubbock

GRAHAM (Special) — The Lubbock Babe Ruth All-Stars were defeated by Vernon 3-2 here Tuesday in the second round of the Region I Babe Ruth Tournament.

Wayne Dotson was the losing pitcher, although he allowed only two hits and struck out 13 Vernon batters. Dotson was also Lubbock's leading hitter, as he went 2-for-3 with drove in a run.

Eli Ramirez helped the Lubbock cause as he stroked a home run and scored another run.

Lubbock will play today at 6 p.m. against the winner of the Brownfield game against Top-Of-Texas.

Lubbock Skate Unit Rates World Games

FT SMITH, Ark. (Special) — The Rolling Ghosts of Lubbock won the Gold Division National Roller Hockey championship here Tuesday. The team won the right to participate in the World Games in February at Cuba.

The team, coached by Bickie Sissom, will now travel to Colorado Springs, Colo., to participate in the Olympic Festival.

Loftis Guilty Of Mailing Bomb

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A Tennessee physician, who had been embroiled in a stormy divorce case, has been convicted in federal court here of mailing a letter bomb last month to his ex-wife in Kerrville.

Jurors took less than half an hour Tuesday to return the guilty verdict against Dr. M. Dean Loftis, 28, of Rockwood, Tenn. The doctor, who faces up to 20 years in prison, is scheduled to be sentenced Aug. 13.

"This man who deals in life and death chose that Mrs. Francisca Loftis should die," Assistant U.S. Attorney Wayne Speck told the jury in final arguments.

Mrs. Loftis, divorced from Loftis last November, had testified that she received the package June 13 at Sid Peterson Memorial Hospital in Kerrville, where she worked as a nurse. She said she stopped trying to open it when she spotted some protruding wires.

A police bomb squad called from San Antonio 55 miles away successfully disarmed the bomb, which a police expert said was triggered to detonate if opened from any side.

The bomb included a "booster" stick of dynamite and could have killed whoever handled it, San Antonio Police Detective Robert Ellis had testified.

"This was not a simple little terroristic act to frighten somebody. That bomb was armed to kill somebody," Speck said.

Speck told the jury that Loftis wanted to escape paying $1,800 per month in alimony and child support payments to his former wife, who had won custody of the couple's two children. Testimony showed he was more than $9,000 behind in the payments at the time Mrs. Loftis received the bomb.

Defense attorney Kemper Whitney of Nashville, Tenn., argued that the prosecution had presented no real proof that Loftis had mailed the bomb.

Loftis' father, the doctor's girlfriend and her brother testified Tuesday to account for the doctor's whereabouts during the several day period in which the package was believed to have been mailed from Knoxville, Tenn., where Loftis then was living.

Linda Kay Bruner testified she was with Loftis constantly for several days before the package arrived at the Kerrville hospital.

Loftis was indicted June 26 and has been jailed in lieu of $100,000 bond.

Bundy Convicted Of Sorority Murders

MIAMI (AP) — Theodore Bundy, a quiet law student who never forgot Mother's Day, waved at the courtroom crowd after a clerk read the verdict — guilty of murdering two women and trying to kill three others at Florida State University.

Bundy's mother slumped backward and his lawyer paled at the verdicts late Tuesday, but Bundy waved and smiled, and later told a friend he was simply perplexed.

Prosecutors promised to ask for the death penalty. The same 12-member jury that convicted the 32-year-old Tacoma, Wash., resident will remain sequestered to hear arguments for sentencing Saturday and Monday. A majority vote is needed to recommend life or death. Judge Edward D. Cowart can overrule the jury.

The jury deliberated six hours to end the 4½-week trial in which Bundy often acted as his own attorney and argued bitterly with his lawyers. One attorney quit the case after the defense presentation was under way. Another tried to walk out.

Bundy was found guilty of first-degree murder in the deaths of Lisa Levy, 20, and Margaret Bowman, 21, both of St. Petersburg, Fla.

They were beaten with a crude oak club as they slept in a Chi Omega sorority house Jan. 15, 1978. Both were garroted with pantyhose.

Bundy also was convicted of attempting to murder Kathy Kleiner DeShields, 20, of Boca Raton, Fla., and Karen Chandler, 21, of Marietta, Ga., both Chi Omega members, and Cheryl Thomas, 22, a student from Richmond, Va., who was attacked in her apartment.

In addition, Bundy was found guilty of two counts of burglary.

State prosecutors argued that Bundy's crooked teeth left a crude wound on Miss Levy's body, eyewitness Nita Neary said she saw Bundy leave the sorority house and hair similar to Bundy's was found in a pantyhose mask in Miss Thomas' duplex.

The defense argued the case was built on shoddy police work and shaky dental evidence.

Bundy's 54-year-old mother, Louise, fell against the back of her courtroom seat as the verdicts were pronounced. She has called Bundy "the kind of son who never forgets Mother's Day."

"I can't believe it," she said. "This isn't the end. There will be appeal upon appeal ... I know and the family knows that he isn't guilty and that he didn't do those terrible things."

She sobbed as she walked down the hallway and out of the courthouse.

Said prosecutor Larry Simpson: "It was a common-sense jury and they used their common sense. We certainly will ask for the death penalty."

Sirhan Receives Life Sentence Reduction

SOLEDAD, Calif. (AP) — Sirhan Bishara Sirhan, the convicted assassin of Sen. Robert F. Kennedy who says he has been offered asylum in Libya, has been given a four-month prison sentence reduction for good behavior.

As a result of Tuesday's routine parole board review, Sirhan's tentative parole date is now Nov. 1, 1984. By California's determinate sentencing law, his life sentence originally carried a parole date of March 1, 1985.

Sirhan, thin and appearing nervous, took issue with the board about whether he shot up to five bullets that struck Kennedy and bystanders in the kitchen of Los Angeles' Ambassador Hotel June 5, 1968.

"My hands were grabbed and held very forcefully by some monster-sized men ...," Sirhan said. "I don't remember the actual happening. A melee followed ... I don't feel myself to be responsible beyond that first shot."

Both Sirhan, a Palestinian refugee born in Jordan, and his lawyer reported Libya's offer and said the Arab-American Committee had offered to feed and house him if he is released. Sirhan said he was told similar offers will be made by Iraq and Jordan.

The parole board, which has the option of granting a reduction of four months per year in Sirhan's sentence, rejected his personal plea for retroactive reductions and immediate release. According to the board, Sirhan, 34, had made no attempt to rehabilitate himself until this year, when he began taking prison courses and scoring high grades.

Board member Frank Coronado asked Sirhan whether he did not give the same appearance of adjustment just before he murdered Kennedy.

"That's the whole damn problem, sir," Sirhan exclaimed. "I was drunk at the time. I had no control of my faculties. I'll bet if the same evidence was presented a jury now, a first-degree conviction would not be obtained, considering the time lapse and the emotions at the time."

Noted Lawyer Testifies In Libel Trial

NORRISTOWN, Pa. — Criminal lawyer F. Lee Bailey abandoned his customary spot at the defense table and stood in the witness box for more than two hours, defending himself in a $3 million libel suit.

Facing him was Philadelphia lawyer Morris Passon, who contends that Bailey libeled him more than a decade ago while trying to win a new trial for a client convicted of having murdered her wealthy husband.

At Tuesday's hearing, Bailey denied repeatedly that he had accused Passon of commiting the murder.

Passon argues Bailey planted news stories in an attempt to win a new trial for Ethel Kravitz and unlock her husband's estate.

Passon, Mrs. Kravitz' brother-in-law, was with her when the bullet-riddled body of her husband, Max, a real estate broker, was discovered in the couple's suburban Philadelphia home in 1958.

Bailey said that in the motions for a new trial, he had stated that Passon "had the motive and the opportunity. It does not say you committed the murder. That is an inference that a reasonable man could draw."

Bailey said Mrs. Kravitz had undergone lie-detector tests and that as a result of the tests he believed in her innocence. "The polygraph test showed that Ethel Kravitz did not cause the death of Max Kravitz," Bailey told Passon. "She didn't kill Max Kravitz, and you did a lot to indicate you might have."

Mrs. Kravitz, who served more than seven years at the state Correctional Institution at Muncy for the murder, hired Bailey two years after her release, contending that Passon was responsible for her husband's death.

Prosecutors Offer Witness For Case

BROWNSVILLE (AP) — Prosecutors in the attempted murder trial of S.J. Wilburn offered several witnesses Tuesday who testified they heard a gun shot and then saw a customized Cadillac with trap doors in the trunk speed away from the scene.

Wilburn is accused in connection with the February shooting of John Hensley, a witness in a kidnapping trial.

The state claims Hensley, 40, was ambushed in the parking lot of his South Padre Island apartment. Hensley survived the attack but was left blind.

Jury Recommends 30 Years For Juvenile Slayer

BELTON (UPI) — A jury has recommended a 16-year-old girl, who admitted to participating in the January slayings of her mother and her mother's lesbian lover, be sentenced to two 15-year prison terms.

Zina Denker of Harker Heights was convicted of the slayings late Monday by the same jury that Tuesday recommended the 15-year prison terms. Judge C.W. Duncan set formal sentencing for Aug. 8, when he said he would decide whether the sentences should be served consecutively.

The teen-ager admitted she was involved in the Jan. 30 shotgun slaying of her 38-year-old mother, Sgt. Judith A. Hyatt of Fort Hood, and the death of Mrs. Hyatt's 30-year-old lover, Sheila K. Jackson, but said she was affected by drugs at the time and feared her two accomplices.

Standley David Boysen, 16, of Austin earlier pleaded guilty to the deaths and received two 40-year prison sentences, while Michael Allan White, 17, also of Austin was sentenced to 15 years in prison in another plea-bargaining agreement.

The bodies of the two women were found floating in Stillhouse Hollow Reservoir, located in Bell County just outside Harker Heights. Mrs. Hyatt had been shot in the back while Mrs. Johnson drowned after being left in the water with a shotgun wound to the head, officials said.

Testimony during Miss Denker's trial showed the two victims had been married in a ceremony at a party a year ago.

Boysen, who testified during the girl's trial that she used sex to persuade him to participate in the slayings, two weeks ago made an unsuccessful attempt to escape from the Belton County Jail. Sheriff's deputies said Boysen told them he was breaking out to kill Miss Zenker and White.

FUTURE FUSION — While atomic energy plants at present generate power by nuclear fission, this device from General Atomic uses magnetic positioning and pressure as well as neutral beam injection to achieve fusion of atomic nuclei. Pittsburgh-based Allegheny Ludlum Steel Corp. produced the silicon steels for the core of the fusion device. Fusion takes place at temperatures of 100 million degrees Celsius — six times hotter than the interior of the sun. Scientists eventually hope to use the technology as a clean, nearly inexhaustible power source for generating electricity. (AP Laserphoto)

Actress Content Not To Be Star

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Ann Doran made her debut at age 11 in a scene with Douglas Fairbanks and Wallace Beery in the silent 1922 version of "Robin Hood" and has been acting ever since.

In the past 57 years Ann has played more than 600 roles in hundreds of movies and TV shows without ever seeing her name in lights, much less above the title.

She was a foil for Charlie Chase, Andy Clyde, Harry Langdon, the Three Stooges and Edgar (slow burn) Kennedy while under contract to Columbia Pictures.

Ann worked with Loretta Young, Katharine Hepburn, Joan Crawford, Gary Cooper, Spencer Tracy, Rosalind Russell and Errol Flynn. She helped Kirk Douglas and Victor Mature make their first screen tests.

While others went on to considerable fame and great fortunes, Ann remained all but anonymous.

Evidently she was born a character actress, the daughter of actress Rose Allen who played glamor girls in the ancient Bobby Vernon two-reelers.

"I was on the set one day watching my mother work when a beautiful lady asked if I would like to play in another movie being made on the same lot," Ann recalled. "Mother agreed because it would keep me out of mischief.

"The next day I found myself, a knobby-kneed, Dutch-bobbed blonde kid playing a page to the king in 'Robin Hood.' The king was Wallace Beery who scared me because he was bigger, louder and more profane than my father.

"The lady who got me involved was Mary Pickford. I saw the old picture not long ago and couldn't tell myself from the eight other little pages."

Today Ann, 68, looks back on a unique career in movies and TV which has seldom seen her unemployed, although there were the usual actor's dry spells.

An energetic woman with a keen wit and boundless energy, Ann looks younger than her years. Ann lives alone in the heart of Hollywood in a home she has occupied for the past 27 years.

Her specialty over the years has been maiden aunts, nurses, mothers and mothers-in-law and, surprisingly, judges. Those parts, of course, came along in later zears.

"When I was a kid, I was put in westerns, usually playing orphans," she recalled. "I was always being rescued from terrible predicaments — caught in barbed wire, endangered by stampeding cattle or tied to a windmill.

"I left the business during that horrible pimply adolescence to go to high school in San Bernardino. But, when Dad died in 1933, I went back to work in 'Zoo in Budapest' with Loretta Young and Gene Raymond. It was my first talkie. Again, I ws playing an orphan."

There followed her contract years at Columbia and then Paramount. Her roles were medium-sized in "C" action pictures, smaller in "B" potboilers and infintesimal in big budgeted "A" films.

Ann, however, did appear in some biggies — "Rebel Without a Cause," "The High and The Mighty" and in four of director Fank Capra's very best films.

"I never starred in a single picture," Ann said, smiling. "It bothered me for a time that I was only a supporting player until Mr. Capra, who spent as much time with character players as he did the stars, had a talk with me.

"He told me the star is the top of a table and wouldn't be worth anything without the underpinning legs of the character actors to support it. I never felt like a table leg but I guess that's what I've been for all these years.

"I made a very good living and as time passed I decided I really didn't want to be a star. The burden was more than I wanted to take on."

In television, as in movies, Ann is content with being a supporting player. She played mothers in "Jesse James," "Hey, Landlord" and "National Velvet."

In the "Longstreet" series Ann took on another role that frequently comes her way, a housekeeper. She plays yet another housekeeper in the new NBC-TV "Shirley" series, starring Shirley Jones, which makes its debut this fall.

"I've never been married and I have no kids, which I think is very circumspect," Ann said. "But on Mother's Day I get tons of cards from all kinds of people whose mother I played in movies and TV.

"My days have been filled with activities in the industry. I hold card No. 37 in the Screen Actors Guild. I joined when it was a very secretive, unpoputar thing in Hollywood.

"Since then I've been a board member of the Motion Picture and TV fund for 30 years. I've also spent 30 years on the Permanent Charities Committee. I was secretary and vice president of SAG and a member of the board for 20 years. I'm an ex-president of the Pension and Welfare Fund.

"When I was 65 I applied for Social Security. But that didn't last long. I'm still working and loving every minute of it."

Hepatitis Outbreak Claims Third Life

NEW BERN, N.C. (AP) — An outbreak of hepatitis in eastern North Carolina has claimed a third victim and authorities have tentatively diagnosed three new cases.

Craven county hospital officials said this week two persons were in critical condition in the intensive care unit and another was in stable condition.

The hospital reported early Sunday the death of Bobby Cates, 21, of New Bern. Two others, Craig Gaskins, 19, and John C. Davis, 18, died last week. Health officials are investigating.

Islanders Approve New Constitution

NEW YORK (AP) — Voters in the U.S.-administered islands of Palau have approved a constitution that would sharply restrict nuclear weapons and U.S. military bases in the Pacific islands.

With most of the votes in the July 9 referendum counted, 4,062 voted for the constitution, 353 voted against and 83 ballots were voided.

Palau is part of the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands, more than 2,000 islands that were seized from Japan in World War II and are now administered under a United Nations trusteeship.

HY GARDNER HAS THE ANSWER:

Glad You Asked That!

Q: We were surprised to see a full page ad in the New York Times headed, "A Love Letter from John & Yoko to People Who Ask Us What, When and Why?" What was the purpose of the announcement? And how much did it cost the couple? — Terry M., San Mateo, Calif.

A: Since the same message ran in Tokyo and elsewhere, the publicity ploy cost the couple more than $18,000. However it's tax-deductible and gave them a chance to say what they had on their minds without being (if you'll pardon the expression!) misquoted.

Q: I see where Mickey Rooney has another sideline — publishing an advice column to gamblers. Confirm please — with some facts! — Leonard Levy, Beverly Hills, Calif.

A: Confirmed. Mickey, with his six or seven wives (we lost count) now has more sidelines than comedy lines. His newest notion is a racing tip gimmick he calls "Mickey Rooney's Win Side Up." He says, "It combines the fate of Lady Luck together with an ingenious betting selector device. I'll see you at the cashier's window," Mickey Promises.

Q: We heard that our Naval Academy chooses an Anchorman each graduating class. Who usually wins that high honor? — J. Paterno, M. Murphy, Newburgh, New York.

A: Unlike a TV anchorman, in Naval Academy parlance such a reference is not very flattering. An "anchorman" at Annapolis is the student with the lowest score, in marks: in his graduating class.

Q: Funnyman Jackie Mason was real hot entertaining in Florida last winter. What's he up to now? — Sonny Sherman, Coral Gables, Fla.

A: You'll find out next Christmas when you see Jackie starring with Steve Martin in a Universal-Carl Reiner comedy film titled "The Jerk." Mason was "discovered" and signed for this feature when he played the same hotel club for nine weeks after signing for only two. The multi-talented comedian has been waiting in line for such a break longer than a guy with an empty tank waiting for a fill-up.

Column Item: Linda Ronstadt and her favorite feller, Jerry Brown, turned down free seats for a new stage musical by the composers of the "Jesus Christ Superstar" success: Tim Rice and Andrew Lloyd Weber. Brown insisted he wanted to buy balcony seats, explaining (with no political motivation: no doubt) "We want to sit with the people!"

Q: What was Zsa Zsa Gabor's comment when the late Jean Paul Getty (then in his early 80s) told a reporter that if he moved from Europe to California, she could be his hostess? — Louise Spilka, Queens, New York.

A: "I should love to be his hostess," Zsa Zsa acknowledged. "We have a lot of things in common. He's as crazy as I am about animals!"

Send your questions to Hy Gardner, "Glad You Asked That," care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 11748, Chicago, Ill. 60611. Marilyn and Hy Gardner will answer as many questions as they can in their column, but the volume of mail makes personal replies impossible.

NBC Censors Block Showing Of Film; Theatrical Release Planned

By PETER J. BOYER

LOS ANGELES (AP) — NBC's censors have made a movie for theaters ... sort of. Actually, they've caused a movie to be made.

It happened this way:

NBC wanted a way to keep audience momentum going during the summer for its popular "Saturday Night Live" series. The network asked "Saturday Night" producer Lorne Michaels to do eight late-night specials, featuring many of the "Saturday Night" crew and carrying a "Saturday Night" flavor, to be aired during the summer.

The first few went just fine, Then Michaels was attracted to an idea by Michael O'Donoghue, "Saturday Night" writer and sometimes performer.

O'Donoghue's idea was to do a TV parody of the verite "Mondo" movies of the '60s. O'Donoghue's piece was called "Mr. Mike's 'Mondo Video," featured Bill Murray and Dan Aykroyd, and was, by all accounts, wonderfully deranged.

NBC's censors step in. O'Donoghue's 90-minute special, they found, was "unacceptable to network broadcast standards." The network would not air the show.

But a bit of good luck saved O'Donoghue's work. Paul Klein, who stepped down as NBC's chief programmer just six months ago, had seen "Mondo Video," and loved it.

"I thought it was brilliant," Klein says. "After I left NBC and heard they weren't going to air it, I said (to O'Donoghue), 'If NBC doesn't want to play it, let's buy it back from them and release it theatrically.'"

NBC's "holders of TV mores," as Klein refers to the network broadcast standards departments, had handed Klein a hot property.

On tape, and with space for commercials, "Mondo Video " wasn't quite ready for theatrical release. "So, we added some stuff to it and we're going to transfer it to 35 milimeter film."

It will be ready for release in early September.

"It's a hot thing," Klein says, "Bill Murray, who's hot now with 'Meatballs,' and Dan Aykroyd, plus Gilda Radner makes an appearance. It has a great piece wth the late Sid Vicious (bass player for the Sex Pistols)."

NBC would only say that "Mondo Video" did not meet broadcast standards.

O'Donoghue and Klein have such faith in "Mondo Video" that they've entered it at the New York Film Festival. "We'll try to win that," Klein says. "It really is a work of art."

You and the Law

Presented by the State Bar of Texas

Q: I am serving time in a Texas prison. Shortly after I arrived here, I was served a summons for speeding and failure to appear. I have written an explanation to both the issuing judge and the DPS. They have denied me the right of a "fast and speedy" trial. Can you advise me of what I can do?

A: See your attorney there at the Texas Dept. of Corrections to file the proper motion for speedy trial. In many cases the charges will be dismissed when they involve an inmate already incarcerated.

Q: I have been married to a veteran for 24 years. He receives benefits from both the VA and Social Security. We recently separated. Am I entitled to anything from the benefits he receives? He's 58 and I'm 41.

A: Under Texas state law, the wife or husband's entitlement to the other spouse's retirement benefits or other pension benefits depends upon whether and how much of those benefits were earned during the marriage. A wife or husband is entitled to a one-half interest in the percentage of the total benefits earned during the marriage. However, if the husband was already receiving the retirement benefits at the time of the marriage, a wife would not be entitled as a matter of law to a portion of those future benefits upon divorce.

Q: My ex-husband did not support me and our little boy while we were married and has not paid any child support since I filed for divorce. That was eleven months ago. He owes more than $2,200 in back support. I don't know where he is or how to contact him. In the meantime, I have remarried. Can my present husband adopt my little boy at this time? If not, when can he?

A: Yes, your present husband can initiate proceedings to formally adopt your son. The Texas Family Code has provisions that allow adoption after certain strict procedures have been followed to show that one parent is absent and cannot be found. If the court is satisfied that all requirements have been met, the rights of the natural father may be terminated and the adoption may be allowed to proceed.

Q: I'd like to know if parents can give their minor children liquor to drink in a public place or at home. My mother says they can't. I say they can as long as it is the parents who offer the drinks. What do you say?

A: According to the Texas Alcohol and Beverage Commission, the answer is "Yes." A parent of a minor can give the child a drink of liquor in a public place. There is, however, one stipulation. The parent and the child must remain in the presence of each other during the time the child is drinking.
