Gls arrive in Saudi Arabia

■ Warning that "a line has been drawn in the sand" with Iraq's "annexation" of Kuwait, U.S. President George Bush launches an expeditionary force to support Saudi Arabia.

Associated Press

By sea and air, American paratroopers, seamen and fighter pilots plunged into the gathering storm of the Middle East on Wednesday to defend the Saudi oil kingdom against any attack by a powerful, expansionist Iraq.

Just six days after invading Kuwait, the Iraqis proclaimed they had annexed that wealthy Persian Gulf nation, and Iraq's President Saddam Hussein sounded unafraid of the U.S. superpower.

"All the fleets and squadrons of aircraft ... will not shake a single palm frond" in Iraq, said a statement by Saddam's ruling council.

In Washington, President Bush warned the Iraqis that "a line has been drawn in the sand" in Saudi Arabia, where the first aircraft and ground forces of a U.S. expeditionary force took up positions Wednesday.

The United States also turned to two of its longtime Middle East adversaries, Syria and Iran, seeking partners to counter Iraq's aggression.

Egypt announced that an emergency Arab summit would convene in Cairo Thursday to discuss the crisis.

The potential for further explosions in the Arabian desert sent new tremors through the Middle East and around the world.

Hundreds of Americans and other foreigners streamed to airports in Saudi Arabia to get out of the country. American officials again expressed concern about more than 3,000 U.S. citizens stranded — and possibly detained — in Iraq and Kuwait. Dozens of oil tankers, their masters fearful of conflict, stood anchored outside the Persian Gulf.

As GIs packed up for the 5,000-mile journey to the Persian Gulf and the uncertain days ahead, Americans wondered whether they were headed into war.

Angela Nelson was to wed an 82nd Airborne Division soldier on Saturday in Michigan, but he was recalled for duty in Saudi Arabia. "It's scary," she said. "Not just for my wedding, but for the country."

Saddam said his 100,000-man invasion force seized Kuwait last week because

Despite lessening tensions between the United States and the Soviet Union, Iraq's recent invasion of Kuwait reaffirms the need for America to remain vigilant against threats from smaller countries, according to disarmament specialist Tom Graham.

"Even though the Cold War has waned, the world is still a dangerous place," said Graham, the general counsel for the United States Arms Control and Disarmament Agency (ACDA).

Graham, who was in Midland Wednesday to talk to the Midland Downtown Lions Club, said, "Despite stabilization between the East and West, the threat of proliferation of nuclear ballistics and chemical weapons from lesser countries is real."

The disarmament specialist said Iraq has used chemical weapons in previous attacks.

Royal showing

Charles

LONDON (AP) — Prince Charles will show 50 of his watercolors and lithographs next month to raise money for repairs to the Salisbury Cathedral spire.

The exhibition will open Sept. 5 in Salisbury, 84 miles from London, Buckingham Palace said Tuesday.

The prince is president of a trust that is trying to raise $12 million for restoration of the 404-foot spire, which is 730 years old.

Unity fight

EAST BERLIN (AP) — East German lawmakers, pressed by a sinking economy, voted on Wednesday to merge with West Germany in less than 10 weeks.

The vote set the stage for a political showdown in West Germany's Parliament over the date of unification.

Under the East German proposal approved Wednesday, the first united German elections in almost 60 years would be held Oct. 14. Formal unity would take place either immediately before or after the balloting.

The West German Parliament would have to approve constitutional changes needed to allow elections to take place that quickly.

Big gig

Jagger

LONDON (AP) — Mick Jagger says the Rolling Stones will perform in Czechoslovakia, and he hinted they'd like a gig in the Soviet Union.

The show in Czechoslovakia, expected to draw 100,000, is scheduled for Aug. 18 at Strahov Stadium in Prague, Jagger said Tuesday.

Proceeds of the Prague concert, which could be more than $467,500, will go to the Czechoslovak Children's Foundation, which benefits handicapped children, Romanian refugees and victims of the nuclear disaster at Chernobyl.

The charity is headed by Olga Havel, wife of Czechoslovak President Vaclav Havel.

Although the above models are wearing trendy clothes, they know they won't meet muster with Midland school district educators. MISD fashions limits for those 'dressed to thrill'

By Myra Lee Salcedo

Staff Writer

Parents, when shopping for back to school clothes, don't let your children talk you into trendy garments.

Students who show up in the hallowed halls of wisdom in mini-skirts, muscle shirts or spandex may make the principal's acquaintance even before they find their homeroom.

Open-toed shoes, slit skirts and midriff-baring or cut-out clothes need to stay in the closet for after school wear, according to Midland Independent School District's dress code. Trousers must not come above the knee. However, children in kindergarten through sixth-grade may wear shorts.

Hats cannot be worn inside school buildings and shirts bearing slogans of questionable taste won't pass muster with MISD administrators.

Secret out, but White 'not in it for the money'

■ A desire to "see the truth come out" is Midlander Ricky Don White's job and Matsu Corp.'s motivation for revealing information linking his father to the assassination of John F. Kennedy, White and representatives of the local firm say.

By Brian Pearson

Staff Writer

Ricky Don White, a 10-year Midland resident who claims his father was a conspirator in the President John F. Kennedy assassination, denied Wednesday that his primary intention is to profit from his story.

"I haven't talked to any publishing companies. I haven't talked to any movie directors," said White, 29, during an interview with the Midland Reporter-Telegram.

White returned here Wednesday with his wife, Tricia, after holding news conferences Monday and Tuesday in Dallas. He told reporters there that his father, Roscoe Anthony White, was one of three Central Intelligence Agency agents involved in the Nov. 22, 1963, shooting of Kennedy.

"We didn't realize it was going to be this big of a boom," White said of the nationwide media publicity following his announcement.

White said he works full time for Matsu Corp., a Midland-based company of seven area businessmen who have paid him $1,800 a month plus expenses since last year to research the story.

"The funding got so big they had to put it into a corporation to fund it," he said. "What I'm doing right now is a full-time job."

Although he hopes to someday write a book about his father, he said Matsu Corp. would receive only marginal, if any, royalties from a book or movie.

"The only thing they wanted out of it was to make their money back," White said.

Gary Baily, Matsu president and owner of a small oil and gas company here, said Matsu's interests have mostly been to "see the truth come out."

"The reason we got into this originally was to help Ricky with his research," Baily said. "It turned out to be more research than we ever thought.

"If some profits are made we do have a chance to make some money, but the White family is going to get most of the profits. Every one of us in this thing really wants to see the truth come out."

White claimed that his father, after joining the Dallas Police Department in September 1963, was ordered by the CIA to assassinate Kennedy. He said his father fired shots at Kennedy from a grassy knoll near the Texas School Book Depository building in Dallas.

Although Lee Harvey Oswald also was involved in the plot, the man whom federal officials said

Comanche Peak shut down again

GLEN ROSE, Texas (AP) — Problems at the Comanche Peak nuclear power plant continued Wednesday when a steam valve malfunctioned, causing the fourth unplanned shutdown since April.

This latest glitch comes on the heels of a two-week shutdown imposed by federal regulators concerned over three "unusual events" at the plant since March.

The Nuclear Regulatory Commission this week gave Comanche Peak the green light and the plant started operating again Tuesday.

Plant engineers had started generating electricity at 4:30 a.m. Wednesday when the plant shut itself down 40 minutes later, said Mark Manroe, spokesman for plant owner TU Electric.

"The reactor was operating at about 6 to 7 percent power and then it shut down at 5:10 a.m. after it reached about 15 percent power," Manroe said. "It shut down because a water valve ... closed."

The valve helps control the amount of water that goes into the steam generators which help the reactors make electricity, Manroe said. When the water inside the generators gets too low, the reactor automatically shuts down, he said.

Comanche Peak has had other unplanned shutdowns on April 22, May 9 and May 27. But Manroe said the shutdowns are not considered emergencies since they do not activate any emergency safety systems.

"We don't like them and we don't set out to have them," Manroe said, "but especially in the early stages they'll happen more often than they will later on down the road."

Manroe said he isn't sure when the plant will stop operating again.

The plant was operating at 3 percent of capacity on Tuesday.

Sunny skies anticipated

Staff Report

National Weather Service forecasters at Midland International Airport are calling for sunny skies today, with a high today in the low 90s and south winds at 10 to 15 mph.

The low tonight will be in the mid-60s under mostly fair skies, and Friday's high should be in the upper 80s under mostly sunny skies.

The high Wednesday was 86, compared with the record for the date of 104 set in 1952. Wednesday's low was 64. The record low for today's date is 56, set in 1989.

STATE

Sunshine was the general rule Wednesday across North Texas.

But numerous showers continued moving west across the lower Rio Grande Valley as the remnants of Hurricane Diana pushed into the mountains of Mexico.

Isolated showers also were detected in the Hill Country near a weak stationary front extending from Eagle Pass to Victoria and into the Gulf of Mexico.

West Texas skies were cloudy with scattered thundershowers.

Variable winds blew over most of North Texas, with calm winds near Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport. Winds near Wichita Falls blew at 9 mph.

Temperatures Wednesday remained in the upper 80s, continuing the trend of below normal daily highs for August. Statewide extremes ranged from 71 degrees at Guadalupe Pass to 95 degrees at Laredo.

Skies will be partly cloudy Thursday and Friday. The highs both days will be in the upper 80s to mid 90s.

In South Texas, the chance for showers and thunderstorms will gradually increase, with lows in the 70s.

Skies in West Texas will be partly cloudy Thursday, with highs in the upper 80s in the Panhandle to upper 80s along the Rio Grande River.

NATION

Thunderstorms spread rain across parts of the East on Wednesday, and a third day of record low temperatures cooled the central part of the nation.

Strong thunderstorms developed in the Southeast in the hot, moist air ahead of a slowly moving cold front. Thunderstorms produced winds gusting to 55 mph in Atlanta, and hail as large as golf balls in Marion County, Fla.

The same cold front produced showers and thunderstorms along much of the Atlantic Coast.

Elsewhere, a few showers and thunderstorms fell over coastal Texas and the southern Appalachians. There were a few showers over parts of Upper Michigan.

Hot weather continued in the West, with temperatures approaching 90 degrees in Washington state by midday, and nearing 100 in the desert Southwest. Fresno, Calif., hit 111 and the temperature reached 120 at Death Valley, Calif.

It was unseasonably cool across the south-central part of the nation Wednesday morning.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

WHITE: Dad just 'following orders'

acted alone fired no shots, White said.

Roscoe White died of burns from a 1971 fire, which Ricky White has said was of suspicious origin.

Meanwhile, federal officials have said White's claims are not credible.

White has been a Midlander since April 14, 1981, two years to the day after he married Tricia, 30, who now works as an executive secretary for an independent oil company here.

White in 1981 started for Great Guns Logging Inc. as an oilfield operator. He worked his way up from there to field engineer and, eventually, salesman.

After Great Guns, which is based in Wichita, Kan., pulled out of Midland, White took a job with Orkin Exterminating Co. Inc. in 1989.

An Orkin manager who asked not to be named said White was a good employee and well-liked by fellow co-workers.

"He's not crazy," she said, adding that Orkin officials were aware of his research into his father's life. "He's really a trustworthy guy."

White said his research began in 1985, when he found his father's diary in in his maternal grandparents' home in Paris, Texas.

That year, after his grandfather died, he said he was looking through belongings in the attic of the house when he found Roscoe White's military footlocker.

In the footlocker he found his father's diary, in which entries had been made since 1957, he said.

But it wasn't until 1985, after about three years of casually reading the diary, that White said he ran across entries made during the time his father joined the Dallas Police Department. "It took me by complete surprise," he recalled.

After reading what his father wrote about his involvement in the Kennedy assassination, White said he showed the diary to his mother, Geneva White Galle, who still lives in Odessa.

"She read it and started crying," he said. "She shut the book and said 'Yes, it had happened.'" His mother encouraged him to research the story, he said.

White said the diary confirmed suspicions he had carried since he was 10 years old. During a fishing trip to Lake Whitney in 1970, his father hinted that he had done something terrible, he said.

"He looked at me and said, 'Sometimes in life you do things you regret and later you learn it's wrong,'" White said.

While in Paris in 1978, his suspicions were aroused after he ran into a friend of his father's. The friend, who he declined to reveal, told him that Roscoe White had been a culprit behind the deaths of Kennedy and Dallas police officer J.D. Tippit. Federal officials said Tippit was killed by Oswald shortly after the Kennedy shooting.

A decade later, armed with the diary and other evidence supporting his claims, he approached Midland County District Attorney Al Schorre, who notified the FBI, White said. The FBI came to Midland and interrogated White for five hours, he said.

Schorre could not be reached for comment Wednesday.

White said it was shortly after the FBI inquiry that he lost the diary. He claimed that an FBI agent came to his home that night and took the diary out of a box while White and Ms. White were in another room, he said. The agent has declined to discuss the alleged incident.

In addition to the diary, White said his claim also is supported by the June finding of three cable messages in the attic of his grandparents' Paris home.

The messages, which alluded to Kennedy's assassination, were found in a steel container, he said. Also inside were Roscoe White's dogtags, he said.

The items found in the container are being held by a private investigator in Houston, he said.

"My father left this stuff behind so the story would be told," White said. "He wanted somebody someday to know the truth about the John Kennedy assassination."

Though he has been researching the story full time for about 1½ years, White said it is far from being concluded. He hinted that more news will be unveiled in the coming weeks.

"There are still things that have to be researched before we can release it," he said.

White said he has never lost his fondness for his father, despite believing that he was partly to blame for one of the worst tragedies in American history.

"It hasn't changed my thoughts and feelings for my father," he said. "He did what he was told to do. I still love him."

ARMS: ACDA counsel visits Lions

(From 1A)

"Unstable countries which have ballistic and chemical weapons technology are the most dangerous," Graham said. "Chemical weapons containing nerve gas can be mounted to warheads. One drop of nerve gas on the skin can kill someone in 10 seconds."

According to Associated Press reports, intelligence sources said the knowledge that Iraqi forces appeared to be loading poison gas munitions aboard combat aircraft was the deciding factor in deploying U.S. troops to Saudi Arabia.

AP reports said Iraq did not hesitate to use chemical weapons during its eight-year war with Iran and against its Kurdish minority.

Although the threat of further expansionist efforts by Iraqi president Saddam Hussein is a concern, Graham said the United States hopes economic sanctions — rather than military force — will drive Iraqi forces out of Kuwait.

"Poison is the poor man's atomic bomb," Graham said. "Combining chemical weapons with 300-mile range ballistic weapons is a tremendous threat."

Graham said Western civilization focused on civil wars for 80 years.

"We had two hot world wars and one cold war. Now we have to be concerned with the spread of nuclear, chemical and ballistic weapons in Third World countries," he said.

Graham said disarmament treaties — and the enforcement of on-site inspections to ensure treaties are being followed — have served to strengthen U.S. and Soviet relations.

"In December 1989, at a meeting in Germany, the Soviet ambassador to Germany said the treaty process — which includes verification of treaties — convinced the Soviet Union it could trust the U.S. enough to withdraw troops from Eastern Europe," he said. "The Soviet Union no longer considers the West a threat to Eastern Europe."

The U.S. has also gleaned a "tremendous amount of knowledge" of the Soviet military from on-site inspections of Soviet weapons storage areas, said Graham.

The disarmament specialist, who is responsible for all legal aspects of arms control policy and weapon development for the ACDA, also consults with President Bush, Cabinet members and members of Congress.

Graham said the goal of the ACDA is to "allow freedom and democracy to remain triumphant." He said the United States must control the spread of dangerous weapons to unstable countries.

He said the United States will seek to limit arms in Europe by signing the Conventional Armed Forces in Europe (CFE) treaty Nov. 19-21 in Paris. Graham will serve as legal advisor to the CFE U.S. Delegation. He is also the U.S. representative on the Treaty Text Working Group which includes 23 nations in the negotiations.

"We have won wars," Graham said. "We must ensure we win peace as well. The most important book in Eastern Europe is the 'United States Constitution.' Peace is important, but we must remain vigilant against threats outside of East/West relations."

He said strides made in bridging the gap between U.S. and Soviet relations are reflected in the fact that both major powers joined forces to employ sanctions — including arms embargoes — against Iraq.

"It's unprecedented," Graham said. "Mandatory sanctions invoked by the Security Council were certainly significant. We are bringing the Cold War to a close through stabilization policies."

the emirate had wronged Iraq — by overproducing oil, driving down world prices and Iraqi revenues, and by demanding repayment of huge loans it made to Iraq. He also reasserted longstanding Iraqi territorial claims on Kuwait.

In announcing the abrupt annexation Wednesday, the Iraqis claimed that "history has proved that Kuwait is a part of Iraq."

But Bush, in a White House address televised to the nation, declared that history had instead proven that "we must resist aggression or it will destroy us."

Saddam disclaims any design on vast Saudi Arabia, which borders both Kuwait and Iraq. Refugees filtering out of Kuwait say the dug-in Iraqi troops are in seemingly defensive positions.

DRESS: Officials expect defiance, creativity

(From 1A)

Before Midland students begin bemoaning their fate, they should take note that Ector County Independent School District has endorsed an even stricter dress code this year.

The code specifies that no hats, caps, sweat bands, visors, head coverings or bandannas may be worn. ECISD also says sunshades and underwear garments worn as outerwear (by Madonna "wannabes") are forbidden.

ECISD guidelines clamp down on "any clothing that advertises or depicts tobacco products, alcoholic beverages, drugs, lewd, offensive, vulgar or obscene writings or pictures, or death and dismemberment."

Does this mean Bart Simpson shirts are out?

"It depends on what the message is on the shirt," said Felipe Alanis, executive director for ECISD secondary education. "Most of the commercial Bart Simpson shirts I've seen would be no problem," he added.

Alanis said said the school district's more detailed guidelines attempt to "avoid inconsistencies between campuses by allowing less room for interpretation."

The revised ECISD dress code was created by a microcosm of Odessans, according to Alanis. "It was a four-month process," Alanis said. "The final dress code was well-received by parents and the school board."

ECISD personnel are prepared to get out their rulers this year to ensure that dresses, skirts and trousers are no more than three inches above the knee.

"We can pretty much gauge if something is too short without measuring it," Alanis said. "Three inches sets a perimeter to go by." He said the three-inch rule will eliminate complaints from boys that girls' skirts are shorter than boys' shorts.

Although some Midland male students wore skirts to school — protesting girls wearing skirts with shorter hemlines than boys' shorts — last year Ricardo Torres, executive director of secondary education for MISD, said MISD personnel are "not going to run around with rulers."

Torres said MISD's dress code was unchanged and shorts must not be worn above the knee. Torres also said educators are wise to the tricks some students employ en route from the classroom to the principal's office. He said some students may wear long shirts with shorts too short to meet compliance. "Then they pull their waistbands down low under the shirt on the way to the office," he said.

Students' hemlines may not be evident when they are sitting down. Therefore, Torres said three or four class periods may go by before a teacher notices high hemlines. "It may not be noticed until a student is seen standing out on the patio at lunchtime," he said.

Students are allowed to call home for appropriate clothes. "Students often will have a change of clothes in their locker," Torres said. "I was once a principal of a freshman school and I know there is a certain amount of defiance involved. It's just the nature of some kids."

ECISD said males may wear earrings. Although the MISD dress code does not address the issue, one Midland Freshman High School student was sent home several times last year for wearing a stud in his ear. MISD cited Policy 15.21, which empowers campus principals to "establish rules, regulations and behavioral requirements necessary for the control, discipline, management, morale and general welfare of the students assigned to the individual school campus."

Some MISD principals said boys wearing earrings could result in such disruptive behavior as name-calling and fights.

Torres said MISD usually has very good compliance with the dress code, as much as 98-99 percent compliance. Of course, there will be violators.

"It's the nature of the beast," Torres said. "We're in the kid business and we expect a little creativity."

Swiss Red Cross worker released in Damascus

DAMASCUS, Syria (AP) — A Swiss Red Cross worker who had been held hostage in Lebanon for 10 months was freed Wednesday and handed over to Swiss authorities, officials and witnesses said.

It was the first release of a Western hostage in more than three months.

Christen

Reliable eyewitnesses said they saw Emanuel Christen being handed to Swiss authorities shortly after midnight in front of the Syrian Foreign Ministry. Syria had said the handover would not occur until later Thursday.

Christen, 33, was kidnapped Oct. 6 along with fellow Red Cross worker Elio Erriquez, 24.

A group calling itself the Palestinian Revolutionary Squads said in a statement released Wednesday he had been freed. The Syrian Foreign Ministry and Red Cross in Geneva confirmed the release.

The witnesses, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said Christen was handed to Swiss Charge d'Affaires Fritz Kuehni. They said Kuehni and Christen were then driven to the Swiss Embassy. The eyewitnesses said they were too far away to tell whether Christen appeared to be in good health.

The statement from the Palestinian Revolutionary Squads did not explain why only one of the Swiss men was released. It had said in a statement Tuesday night they both would be freed within 24 hours.

That was the first time since the abductions a group had claimed to hold Christen and Erriquez.

Liberian rebel leader frees foreign hostages

MONROVIA, Liberia (AP) — Rebel leader Prince Johnson on Wednesday freed foreign hostages, and Liberia's West African neighbors prepared to send in peacekeeping troops to try to bring a halt to the bloodshed.

Savage street battles raged in the Liberian capital of Monrovia, where rebel armies loyal to Johnson and his rival, Charles Taylor, were fighting each other and soldiers of the beleaguered President Samuel K. Doe.

Johnson seized the hostages Monday and Tuesday in a bid to provoke foreign intervention in Liberia's bloody 7-month-old civil war. Earlier in the week, the rebel leader presented 22 hostages from eight countries to reporters at a news conference.

The British Foreign Office said Johnson released all the remaining hostages Wednesday, but said it had no total number. However, one official in London said four Britons were among those freed.

In Washington, State Department spokesman Richard Boucher said the freed foreigners were back at a hotel. He said they include one American whom he identified only as Chris Mendez. He said the fighting prevented U.S. officials from contacting Mendez.

The other hostages included an Argentinian, a Dutchman, two West Germans and 10 Lebanese.

Diplomats, speaking on condition of anonymity, said Wednesday that 2,000 West African troops were being sent to Monrovia by sea from Freetown, the capital of neighboring Sierra Leone.

They said most of the troops would come from Nigeria, the most powerful West African nation. Nigerian President Ibrahim Babangida said Wednesday the troops would try to impose a truce, and he hoped they would meet no resistance.

He did not say when the force was being dispatched but said it would be "very soon."

In the past, Babangida has been a strong ally of Doe. Taylor claimed earlier this week that the force was being sent to keep Doe and his corrupt administration in power. He had threatened to attack such an army.

Military sources in Freetown said troops of the force were on standby at the Sierra Leonean coastal village of Sulina, 10 miles from the Liberian border.

Reports from the Nigerian capital, Lagos, said troops also might be airlifted into Monrovia.

The five-nation African force was to be led by Lt. Gen. Arnold Quainoo of Ghana, a Cabinet minister who used to command the army, according to Ghana's government.

Barry jurors to view tape

WASHINGTON (AP) — Jurors in Marion Barry's cocaine and perjury trial Wednesday viewed the videotape of the FBI sting operation against the mayor as deliberations in his trial proceeded for a sixth day.

The jurors asked to see the tape of the Jan. 18 sting, in which Barry smoked crack cocaine and was arrested in the hotel room of former model Rasheeda Moore.

U.S. District Court Judge Thomas Penfield Jackson granted the jurors' request after informing prosecutors and Barry's lawyers.

The sting formed the basis of one of the 10 cocaine possession charges against Barry.

The viewing of the videotape came the day after an unusual courtroom scene suggested to Barry's lawyer and other veteran attorneys that things were moving in the mayor's favor.

The jury's announcement Tuesday that it had reached a verdict on the 12th count suggested the panel had "gone past" the first 11 charges in the indictment and was "not able to reach a decision," said one lawyer, Kenneth Robinson.

The first 11 of the 14 counts include the most serious allegations — three felony perjury charges carrying a maximum five-year prison term each.

Budget bid continues

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush said Wednesday he's no longer bound by his vow of silence with the Democrats on the deficit talks, making him "feel like a liberated human being."

Bush, at a news conference on his decision to send U.S. troops and warplanes to Saudi Arabia, did not unburden himself of his feelings on the long sputtering talks. But he left no doubt that he soon will.

"I still think it's absolutely essential to get a budget agreement, and that's going to require a lot of compromise and it's going to require a lot of principle," Bush said.

He said he would like "to tell you exactly how strongly I feel about it, but I don't want to do it here today. I don't want to mix it into this briefing ... dominated by the world concern about the Middle East.

"But I feel like a liberated human being now. I don't feel bound by an agreement that I've told the congressional leaders is no longer in effect," Bush said.

North isn't in running

WASHINGTON (AP) — Oliver North, a major figure in the Iran-Contra arms scandal, says he has no political aspirations — for now.

North told the Loudoun (Va.) Times-Mirror in an interview published Wednesday that he's formed an educational foundation that will deal with politics on a grass-roots level.

But the retired Marine lieutenant colonel told the newspaper, "I have no political aspirations of my own."

He added, however, "My daddy used to tell me, 'Never say never'."

North also is a walking advertisement for one of his companies, Guardian Technologies International Inc., which manufactures bulletproof vests.

No boas on beaches

MADEIRA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Sunbathers wearing a boa that isn't made of feathers are subject to a ticket.

The City Commission passed a law Tuesday prohibiting boa constrictors and all other reptiles on city beaches.

Another ordinance barring animals didn't include cold-blooded creatures such as snakes or lizards.

"We've had several people try to bring boa constrictors to the beach and when they were asked to leave, they argued that a reptile isn't an animal," said Lt. Matthew McShane.

"It's younger guys using snakes as a come-on for girls — a 'look at me' kind of thing," the police officer said.

ABA reverses divisive abortion rights stand

CHICAGO (AP) — A deeply divided American Bar Association rescinded its 6-month-old endorsement of abortion rights Wednesday and leaders immediately called for healing among the organization's members.

The ABA's policy-making House of Delegates voted 200-188 to repeal a resolution that the nationwide lawyers' group had adopted in February by a more than two-to-one margin.

Repeal proponents said Wednesday's about face returned the organization to a neutral position on the explosive issue. But abortion rights forces said the fight was far from over.

"Nobody here has the illusion we're going to put our tails between our legs and go home," said Estelle Rogers of Washington, D.C., who opposed the repeal.

Anthony R. Palermo of Rochester, N.Y., who led the repeal drive, said a continuing feud over abortion rights could hurt the ABA's reputation.

"It would be a grave mistake if we keep dominating each meeting with this issue," he said. ABA conventions are held twice a year.

The House of Delegates, in reversing its earlier policy, heeded a plea from a majority of members who took part in a forum here Monday.

Lawyers at the ABA's Assembly meeting then voted 885-836 in favor of repeal. Both on Monday and Wednesday, abortion opponents joined with forces who supported neutrality.

By reversing its abortion rights stand, the association appears to have headed off the possibility of a referendum on the issue among all 360,000 ABA members nationwide.

After Wednesday's vote, the new president of the ABA and his designated successor — adversaries on the abortion question — stood side by side at a news conference to call for healing. But both agreed the issue is unlikely to go away.

ABA President John J. Curtin Jr. of Boston, who supported repeal, said he hoped there would be no additional resignations from the association. He added, however, "I have no problem with people seeking to assert their position" by again trying to revive the issue.

During debate on the repeal resolution, Curtin said the pro-choice stand "threatens to drive a wedge" between ABA members. "I am forced to ally myself with one set of friends against another," he said.

Curtin had said he would refuse to sign any legal briefs in which the ABA advocated abortion rights.

Sandy D'Alemberte of Tallahassee, Fla., who is to follow Curtin as ABA president, said reversing the February policy sends a message that the organization is abandoning support for "the principle of liberty."

He said the split within the ABA is not likely to disappear.

The issue "is not going to go away. It will come back in one form or another," he said.

The now-rescinded ABA policy essentially endorsed the Supreme Court's 1973 Roe vs. Wade decision that said women have a constitutional privacy right to abortion.

The resolution adopted by the House of Delegates in February said government should not interfere "with the confidential relationship between a pregnant woman and her physician" in deciding on abortions.

It prompted 1,500 ABA members to resign in protest, costing the organization $300,000 in annual dues.

The policy also led to criticism by some, including Attorney General Dick Thornburgh, who said it created an impression the ABA might be biased in deciding whether to support judicial nominees.

ABA officials said regardless of the outcome of the abortion fight the association would continue to evaluate judicial appointees based on competence, integrity and judicial temperament.

Some Americans begin to hear from loved ones in Iraq, Kuwait

By Mary MacVean
Associated Press Writer

Word of Americans stranded in Iraq and Kuwait is trickling out to worried relatives in this country, and while the news that has reached home is good, some families say they have yet to hear from loved ones.

Poor telephone connections and confusion in Baghdad, Iraq, have made contact difficult if not impossible since Iraq invaded Kuwait on Aug. 2. Some Americans said they heard about relatives through employers or the State Department.

The State Department Wednesday estimated there are 400 Americans in Iraq and 3,000 in Kuwait. Department deputy spokesman Richard Boucher said more than 11,000 calls have come in inquiring about the welfare and whereabouts of Americans.

Edwin and Irene Davis of Koran, La., last heard from their daughter in a 4 a.m. telephone call a week ago: "Daddy, don't worry; we're under attack."

"I know what warfare in the cities is like — trigger-happy and nervous. I advised them to stay in the house. I hope that's what they did," said Davis, a retired Baptist minister who now catches every call on the first ring.

Their daughter, Martha; her Kuwaiti-born husband Mahmoud Al-Ghareeb, and their two children, Millie, 18, and Michael, 14, were visiting Al-Ghareeb's parents.

Kevin York of Mount Prospect, Ill., has not talked to his wife, Faye, who was in Iraq to visit friends and family, since before the invasion.

"She called (her sister) Amy at 1 a.m. last Thursday, bawling her eyes out, saying that she was at the airport (in Baghdad) but couldn't get on the plane because the airline wouldn't accept her ticket. Then they closed the airport," he said.

Mrs. York, a 31-year-old naturalized American of Iraqi descent, is two months pregnant with their first child, York said.

"I want her to get out of there and get home, and then President Bush and the rest can deal with it as they see fit. At that point, I don't care," York said.

Bush confirmed Wednesday that U.S. troops were deployed to protect Iraq's neighbor, Saudi Arabia. Also Wednesday, Iraq annexed Kuwait.

Nedra Hanken of Monticello, Iowa, hasn't talked with her daughter, Beth Hanken, 31, since the invasion. Beth married a Kuwaiti man and lives in Kuwait City.

"Certainly we're concerned about her safety. We were assured somewhat that we did get that message, but we see and hear about all that's going on over there. We're on pins and needles wondering what's happening," she said.

Pat Hartman of Grand Island, Neb., received a much-awaited call Tuesday from her son, Mike Nickman, who had been in a desolate area of northern Iraq, helping install irrigation systems for Valmont Industries of Valley, Neb.

Nickman, 36, was at the American Embassy in Baghdad Tuesday, trying to find a way to leave, his mother said.

"He said there's just so much confusion at the embassy that it's hard to find two people with the same story," Mrs. Hartman said.

Valmont has been trying to contact its three employees in Iraq. The others are from Pennsylvania and Yugoslavia, but their identities have not been released.

Boucher said U.S. officials have met with the 39 Americans stranded at the Rashid Hotel in Baghdad. The group is made up of 11 oil workers taken from Kuwait a few days ago, 25 people brought by bus from Kuwait City, and three who were already at the hotel.

"Their status is that they cannot leave the hotel grounds, but they have full use of the facility. There are armed guards located at the hotel, but the Americans have not been threatened," Boucher said.

Among them was a Redmond, Wash., businessman, his family said.

Fred F. Harrington, 59, president of the American Pulp and Paper Co., was among several Americans who arrived Aug. 1 in Kuwait on a business trip, said his son, Vafa Fouroohi.

Bridge is a fascinating game. We wonder how many times a situation such as this has arisen and declarer actually recognized and played for the extra chance. Very rarely, we suspect.

South had a difficult rebid over partner's no trump response. The hand was worth a jump to game, but the spade suit was too poor for a leap to four spades, and the distribution made three no trump unappetizing. South settled for the invitational jump to three spades, which North correctly raised to game on the strength of his ace of trumps and possibly useful queens.

West led a heart, and declarer's problem was simple. Since there was a sure loser in each rounded suit (hearts and clubs), the trump losers would have to be held to one. If trumps were 3-2, declarer would coast home, so South had to worry about the possibility of a 4-1 division.

If either defender had four trumps to the Q J 9 there was no way of avoiding two losers. The same held true if East had a singleton honor. But if East held a singleton nine ...

To cater to that possibility, declarer led the ten of spades at trick two. It would not have helped for West to cover, and when that worthy followed low, declarer ran the ten. When that pinned the nine, all was rosy in the garden.

Had West covered the spade ten with an honor, or followed with the nine, dummy's ace would have been played. If East produced a low card, declarer would then have returned a spade and finessed the eight, to protect against the possibility that East had all the missing trumps.

Davis blames father's government for allowing slaughter of dolphins

NEW YORK (AP) — Patti Davis, a frequent critic of her father's government, blames the Reagan administration for the slaughter of thousands of dolphins.

In a report for the syndicated television series "A Current Affair," Davis traces the slaughter of dolphins — many caught in tuna nets — to among, other things, her father's administration.

"My sense of grief and helplessness increased when I learned that the Reagan administration had allowed 20,500 dolphins a year to be killed, contrary to the intent of the Marine Mammal Protection Act," she said.

Davis, 37, the daughter of Ronald and Nancy Reagan, has been an actress, singer, writer and environmental activist, clashing with her parents on many issues.

The report is to air Friday.

CORTLAND, N.Y. (AP) — Singer Bonnie Raitt donated her concert fee to a group fighting to keep a low-level radioactive waste dump out of western New York, a group official said Wednesday.

Raitt also promised that her road manager would match her $2,000 contribution, said James Weiss, co-chairman of Citizen's Against Radioactive Dumping. Two sites in Cortland County were under consideration for the dump.

Raitt, who won a Grammy last year for her album "Nick of Time," turned over her performance fee from Friday's show at the Finger Lakes Performing Arts Center in Canandaigua.

"Don't ever allow the state to dump radioactive waste in any of your counties," Raitt told an audience of 9,000.

Weiss said the singer spoke with CARD members who had set up a table outside the arts center and gave them a check after the show.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actor William Shatner, the unflappable Capt. James T. Kirk of the Starship Enterprise, says bad reviews shake him up.

Shatner

Critics castigated last year's "Star Trek V," blaming the film's creative and box office failure on Shatner's direction, so he was apprehensive about literary reviews of his first book.

"In this business, we all want to be loved, and when someone says they don't like your work, they're saying, in effect, that they don't like you, so you suffer for it," he said in a recent interview.

Reviews of Shatner's futuristic cop thriller "Tekwar," published late last year with the paperback released a week ago, were generally favorable.

He decided to "throw caution to the wind" and write the book because he was familiar with science fiction and police work, Shatner said. He starred in the "T.J. Hooker" cop series.

"So I took a cop I've played and put him in the future. Then, I took a subject that was in the news, drugs, and put it in the book. Then, to keep costs down in case it's made into a movie, I set most of the action in the forests of Mexico."

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — New York Gov. Mario Cuomo may be a magician with language, but not with linguine.

"Do I cook?" said Cuomo, responding to a television interviewer who inquired Wednesday about the governor's culinary skills. "I eat."

Cuomo

Then Cuomo, known as a deft speaker, said he cooks "occasionally, but very clumsily."

Did he have one favorite dish that he liked to whip up, such as lasagna or meatballs?

"Are you kidding? For me to make lasagna would be a desecration of a great Italian dish," the Democrat said. "I let my mother make lasagna. I let my mother-in-law make lasagna. I let (wife) Matilda make lasagna. I don't mess with sacred things."

The television reporter, from New Jersey station WWOR, said she asked the governor as a lead-in to a segment on food.

PARIS (AP) — Film star Gerard Depardieu was fined $1,800 and his license was suspended for six months for driving while drunk. He was arrested after a car accident that injured two people.

Depardieu, who won best-actor award at the Cannes Film Festival this year for his title role in "Cyrano de Bergerac," also was sentenced Wednesday to a two-month suspended prison sentence.

Depardieu, 41, did not attend the court proceeding in Riom. His lawyer, Serge Teillot, said the actor "fully acknowledged his responsibility" but felt the proceedings would be more calm if he did not attend.

Prosecutors said Depardieu's blood contained twice the legal alcohol limit of 0.08 percent after the July 20 accident, which occurred as the actor drove to a hotel after shooting scenes for a new movie.

His car collided with another on a country road near Puy-de-Dome, slightly injuring the wife and daughter of the other driver.

Depardieu told police he was trying to answer a call on his car telephone and was blinded by the setting sun when the crash occurred.

Iraq power play must be stopped

President George Bush's decision to send U.S. troops to Saudi Arabia as a defensive block against Iraqi troops who overran and annexed neighboring Kuwait Tuesday was a wise move that presents Iraq President Saddam Hussein with a choice: Does he fight or does he back down?

To this point, Hussein has not indicated willingness to talk about anything except his ability to control Arab oil production and, recognizing that to retreat now would constitute dishonor for Hussein, President Bush and other world leaders should expect more aggression from Iraq.

He could send troops further into Saudi Arabia within the next few days (since invading Kuwait, Hussein already has violated the neutral zone). If he were to move against Saudi Arabia, U.S. forces would be the only deterrent to his gaining ultimate control of the world's largest oil reserve.

That would be a disaster of immense proportions, potentially crippling the industrialized world that has bought much of its oil from Arab nations, and as of Wednesday afternoon, numerous nations had initiated arms, assets and trade sanctions against Iraq. In fact, Hussein may have been caught off-guard by some of the nations that approved sanctions against his country, such as the Soviet Union. That nation had been a major arms supplier to Iraq, but approved an arms embargo in the wake of the Kuwait invasion.

The shifting alliances that have developed in the past year as the nations of Eastern Europe moved toward democracy have placed Hussein and other leaders in an uncertain position. That may be one of the best advantages for Bush in countering Hussein's aggression.

Hussein's power play for the Arab store of oil could spark industrial and economic calamity throughout the world. During the past few days, the world has witnessed the desperation in Hussein's actions. In coming days, it may witness more.

Thomas Graham Jr., general counsel for the U.S. Arms Control and Disarmament Agency in Washington, D.C., was visiting in Midland Wednesday and told the Reporter-Telegram that if Hussein is going to invade Saudi Arabia, he will probably do so within the next few days — before all the U.S. troops are in position and ready to counter the attack.

Graham also noted Iraq's use of chemical weapons against Iran in the Iran-Iraq war and speculated that Hussein probably would not hesitate to use those weapons against U.S. troops. If so, President Bush must be ready to counter with even greater force if necessary, said Graham.

We agree. The prospects of a chemical war or even a limited nuclear war are horrifying, but Bush must be willing to use what force is necessary to protect the interests of the U.S. and the free world. Hussein must not be permitted to gain ultimate control of the world's oil supply.

Washington federal building delayed

WASHINGTON — Federal officials have put the brakes on a major boondoggle — a federal office building in downtown Washington, D.C., that would cater more to private businesses than to government and could cost as much as $1.1 billion.

Anderson

In June, we exposed the flaws in a plan to build the lavish edifice, an International Cultural and Trade Center second only in size to the Pentagon. The project is tainted by cost overruns and possible contract steering.

Now, the General Services Administration has wisely decided to put the venture on hold because of its concerns about the financial commitment.

The project was a bad idea in the first place — the brainchild of the Pennsylvania Avenue Development Corp., a presidential commission that has been overseeing the redevelopment of Washington's premier thoroughfare between the White House and the Capitol. The building is to house several federal offices and private businesses.

We have since learned that it also is to include a private club for international business people where the initiation fee would be $1,500 and the monthly dues would be $100.

Congressional sources told our associate Scott Sleek that the project was shaping up into a major disaster. Construction has not yet begun and already the cost estimate has risen from $460 million to well over $800 million. Sources close to the project told us they feared the price could easily go to $1 billion.

Congressional investigators were looking into the way the PADC awarded the development contract. The panel gave the job to Delta Partnership, one of the high bidders, even though many federal and District of Columbia officials said Delta's proposal wasn't up to par because it didn't meet requirements for minority participation, a charge that Delta has denied.

Investigators were also looking into the role played by Washington Mayor Marion Barry, who, as a member of the PADC, voted to give the contract to Delta. Federal procurement laws in many cases prohibit non-federal officials from committing federal funds.

The PADC is not giving up. A spokesman told us the group would answer the financial questions, but had no plans to scale back the project. But knowledgeable sources told us the PADC will have no choice but to make the project more modest if it expects the federal government to lease the building.

GLOBAL PROBLEM — The drug war, of necessity, is a world war fought against users and suppliers all over the globe. But on the international front, the effort is inadequate. Drug abuse in Europe is on the rise as are related deaths and crimes. Cocaine confiscation by police is up, but so are the supplies. In Italy last year there were three times more drug-related deaths than a decade ago. When the 12-nation European Community drops its borders in 1992, things will only get worse. Movement between the countries will be less restricted. Drug experts expect the European market will mushroom to more than 10 times its size when it is no longer hampered by border restrictions. The only way to combat the increase will be to spend hundreds of millions of dollars more on enforcement.

Anthem signifies patriotism of many

Bill Grimes may feel that it is all right for the national anthem of our country to be butchered by the likes of Roseanne Barr, for he says it is her First Amendment right to do so. He says the Star-Spangled Banner's words deal too much with war, and we deserve something a lot "lighter in content" such as America.

I for one am getting sick of every disgusting act that happens in America today being hidden behind the First Amendment. Roseanne Barr showed nothing but contempt and vulgarity for our national anthem in her performance at the San Diego game. People can spit, walk, urinate on and burn our flag, and their act is covered by the First Amendment! What will be next?

I have many ancestors who have fought for and served this country proudly, from the War of 1812, to the Alamo, to the Civil War, World War I and World War II. My father and four uncles served in World War II. My father was wounded during action in the South Pacific and one uncle, captured by the Japanese at Corregidor, suffered horrors that only those who lived through that can comprehend. My uncle made it through starvation, filth and torture of prison camp, only to be killed in October 1944 on an unmarked prisoner-of-war ship, bound for the mainland of Japan, which was sunk by one of our submarines. These men were mainly killed by their Japanese captors who stood at the hold openings, shooting our brave men as they tried to escape the sinking ship.

Then my husband was called and served this country in Germany, during the Berlin Crisis. Most recently on Dec. 21, 1989, our son was to head home on leave from the service for Christmas. Instead, we awoke to the news that the 82nd Airborne Division of which he is a member, had sent a large group into Panama that morning. It was quite sometime before we learned that he was among those who jumped in. God watched over our son, and kept him safe, but while Grimes was enjoying a nice, safe, happy Christmas, we spent a Christmas praying God would bring our boy home to us alive.

The next time Grimes hears the words to the Star-Spangled Banner, he should use what the Lord has given him to think with, and instead of complaining about it, thank God he was born in a country where men and women throughout history have been willing to fight and give their lives to keep this country, its Constitution, national song, and symbols free! Maybe then he will realize some things deserve to be treated with respect.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Thursday, Aug. 9, the 221st day of 1990. There are 144 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On Aug. 9, 1969, actress Sharon Tate and four other people were found brutally murdered in the Los Angeles home Tate shared with her husband, movie director Roman Polanski. Cult leader Charles Manson and a group of his young disciples were later convicted of the crime.

On this date:

In 1842, a border dispute between the United States and Canada was resolved with the signing of the Webster-Ashburton Treaty.

In 1848, the Free-Soil Party nominated Martin Van Buren for president at its convention in Buffalo, N.Y.

CHARLEY REESE

Fifth column still out to destroy democracy

Most American politicians learned nothing from the Vietnam War but the Communists learned a lot, and they are applying what they learned to their campaign against El Salvador.

The communist strategy is the soul of simplicity, and thus effective. In the field, you have the guerrillas who do the killing of the soldiers, the mining of villages, the terrorizing of the population, the sabotaging of the economy, and assassination of officials.

Reese

In the United States you have a fifth column that raises money, opposes any effective U.S. government action, slanders and vilifies the existing government of El Salvador, slanders and vilifies any American supporters of it, and attempts to cut off all economic and political support.

It worked in Vietnam. For the first time in U.S. history, American servicemen were vilified and spat upon by their fellow citizens. They had to fight not only the Viet Cong and the North Vietnamese but ultimately the American news media, American entertainers, the U.S. Congress, and much of the nation's religious and university communities. Small wonder they lost the war without ever having been defeated in battle.

The fifth column in America, of course, consists of two layers. Buried down in the bottom are the Communists while the larger, outer layer consists of people who, while not being Communists, for their own reasons consent to support the communist cause.

These sniveling jelly brains, with rare exceptions, have yet to find the courage or decency to apologize to American servicemen, whom they slandered and betrayed, much less to the Vietnamese and Cambodian people whom they helped deliver to the killing fields and the labor camps.

On a smaller scale, the same strategy with the same people is now working to destroy democracy in El Salvador. In the field, you have the Farabundo Marti Liberation Front (FMLN), a communist coalition, which has covered the nation with mines and maimed thousands of children.

Three times the people of El Salvador have had free elections. Three times the guerrillas have tried with violence and threats to thwart the elections. How little support among the Salvadoran people these guerrillas have has been demonstrated time and again by the people's refusal to boycott the elections and their refusal to heed calls for general strikes.

The American fifth column, of course, propagandizes around the clock to hide this truth. In typical communist fashion, there is no virtue to be found either in the Salvadoran government nor in American foreign policy in Central America. A la the Vietnam propaganda, the Salvadoran government is fiendish, undemocratic, vile, corrupt and totally supported by the equally vile fiends in Washington.

The attacks against democracy in El Salvador come from the usual variety of front groups with high-sounding names and utilizing the names of the famous-but-stupid and/or gullible to lend the filthy enterprise a sheen of respectability.

One latest ploy is an attempt to boycott Salvadoran coffee — an example of the cruelty of the communist-helper. Actor Martin Sheen and the National Council of Churches are pushing this.

Here's what the Catholic bishops of El Salvador have to say: "We completely reject the boycott on Salvadoran coffee because it is a measure which injures justice since it harms indiscriminately not only the coffee growers but also the people who live from coffee labor and is a rude blow upon the precarious economy of the country.

"We deem this boycott to be a political stance, not an evangelical one, for the purpose of continuing abroad the war on the economy of the country, whose infrastructure has been systematically destroyed by the FMLN during these ten years of conflict."

That's what the Catholic bishops in El Salvador think of the lying leftists in America who are trying to use the murder of priests to promote the boycott.

WILLIAM SAFIRE

Kuwait grabbed because of its resources

WASHINGTON — Panicky officials at the U.S. Department of Agriculture are racing around to bank regulators to find Iraqi funds; unless they can seize and use offsetting assets, $2 billion in commodity credit guarantees will come out of taxpayers' pockets to pay for Bush's past appeasement of Saddam Hussein.

Safire

Of course, Kuwaitis lost much more. What a refreshingly simple motive for aggression: money.

Saddam did not snatch Kuwait to settle Sunni-Shiite scores, or to counter Zionism, or to provide his nation a place in the sun, or to advance some ideology.

None of the usual reasons for recent wars — of religious or racial or ethnic hatreds, or geopolitics, or pro-anythingism — apply.

This was a stickup. His reason for taking Kuwait was the same as Slick Willie Sutton's for hitting a bank: That's where the money was. Broke from his last war, with a million-man army to pay, Saddam grabbed the gold and oil, wiping out much of his debt by wiping out his creditor.

Who was to stop him? The Saudi king is spineless, and Syria and Egypt are unprepared for war; the Soviets might join an arms embargo for Western opinion's sake but they have as great a stake as Iraq in higher oil prices; and the Israelis have no dog in this fight. Turkey, if provoked, would be trouble.

Would the industrial powers act in unprecedented concert? A cutoff of arms sales means nothing, because Saddam has no money to buy more arms anyway; France, his biggest unpaid supplier, stopped shipments months ago. A boycott of Iraqi-Kuwaiti oil? That would only send the price up, and oil is fungible; in time, greed will find a way.

That leaves the superpower, the U.S. When Saddam poison-gassed 8,000 Kurds, Bush said nothing; when Saddam abused the U.S. banking system in the Lavoro affair, the Bush attorney general dithered; when Saddam corruptly skimmed our grain credit to help pay for his Condor missile, the Bush agriculture secretary hastened to guarantee more grain loans, now in jeopardy.

Saddam probably figured the U.S. would (a) huff and puff about Kuwait, but limit response to economic boycott, and (b) re-declare a vital interest in oil and get the Saudis graciously to permit us to guarantee their sovereignty.

If that were our reaction, he would slip into a moderate phase. He would send out his lick-spittle envoys, the king of Jordan and the boss of the PLO, to benumb his Arab brethren; he would pledge no further territorial demands, Hitler-style; he might even use his new leverage to spring the long-held hostages in Lebanon, and let out thousands of new Western hostages in Kuwait.

Bush's reaction, however — perhaps to compensate for the failure of appeasement — has been more severe. Although his first reaction was "we're not discussing intervention," he soon stiffened: While preparing to base Air Force units in Saudi Arabia, he has announced that the conquest of Kuwait "will not stand."

That phrase, prepared for delivery and repeated, defines the U.S. insistence on a rollback, what diplomats like to call the status quo ante.

Is the president serious? He must know that Saddam, having made his move, is not likely to humiliate himself by pulling out in the face of boycotts or long-distance threats.

If Bush is blustering during an international crisis, he will be the one who "will not stand." If he is serious about not letting the conquest stand, as I believe he is, something interna. or external will have to knock it over.

He hopes it can be induced short of war. U.N. sanctions, followed by a cutoff of the pipelines in Turkey and Saudi Arabia (perhaps covertly, to provide a fig leaf to those governments) might lead to strangulation, economic collapse and a hoped-for coup in Baghdad.

If that won't work quickly, we have to ask ourselves why the stickup — what the hero of Halabja wants the big money for.

Poison gas is his local threat. Of direct concern to us: He is only four years away from production of nuclear bombs. His missiles now have sophisticated French guidance systems, and with time and money he will surely build intercontinental missiles.

Put yourself in the Oval Office in 1994. Saddam moves on Saudi Arabia. The U.S. warns him that means war. Saddam says fine, the first city he will take out is New York. You know he has the means and the will.

Bloodshed now is a terrible thing to contemplate. Nuclear war at a time of Saddam's choosing, against a sociopath already to blame for a million deaths, is worse.

STATE in brief

Spill cleanup to end Friday

HOUSTON (AP) — Salvage crews sopped up remaining pockets of sludge near Houston Point Wednesday as counterparts in Galveston Bay cut through a crippled barge to move it to a scrap yard.

Coast Guard Chief Petty Officer Rich Muller said cleanup in the northernmost portion of Galveston Bay is expected to be completed by Friday.

"We still have some people up there," Muller said of the Houston Point area. "That operation will be shutting down, just because there isn't that much left to do." Muller said he expected cutbacks in the number of salvage workers beginning Thursday.

Salvage crews used blow torches Wednesday to cut through a barge that remained crippled near the Houston Ship Channel. The barge, which was submerged for five days, was one of two ruptured when the Greek tanker Shinoussa rammed into them July 28. The two barges were being towed through the ship channel in Galveston Bay along with a third barge by the tugboat, Chandy N.

The accident, near Redfish Island, caused 700,000 gallons of a catfeed oil, used in petroleum refining, to spill into the bay, which includes sensitive wildlife estuaries. Several birds were oiled by the slick, which at one time stretched for 17 miles through the bay.

Station cancels Geraldo

DALLAS (AP) — A spokesman for controversial talk show host Geraldo Rivera said he was saddened Wednesday that a Dallas television station "would cave in and drop the show" because of one woman's campaign.

"It's certainly not a surprise, because the station has made several announcements over the past few months that it intended to drop the show because of pressure being brought to bear by one viewer," publicist Jeff Erdel said.

Erdel, who is Rivera's official spokesman, said in a telephone interview from his New York City office that the irony of KDFW-TV dropping the show is that for the past seven months the Rivera show "has been the cleanest, most wholesome talk show on television."

"I can assure you that Geraldo will be on the air in the Dallas area on another station, and we hope that viewers will not be inconvenienced," Erdel said.

Erdel said he could not disclose the new station because of contractual obligations. KDFW-TV said its contract for the syndicated program expires at the end of August.

"We judged Geraldo by the same standards we do other programs," said Joe Bell, program manager for KDFW-TV.

Death draws 30 days

AUSTIN (AP) — A 24-year-old man whose boat killed a University of Texas student in a water collision has been sentenced to 30 days in jail and fined $1,000 after pleading no contest to criminally negligent homicide.

John Greenway of Austin was steering a 21-foot motorboat that rear-ended an idle boat on Lake Austin about 11 p.m. June 30, 1989. Deborah Ann Rock, a passenger in the idle boat, was killed.

Greenway was indicted in November on the misdemeanor charge, and accepted a plea bargain approved Tuesday by Travis County Court-At-Law Judge Brenda Kennedy.

Greenway is to serve the jail sentence on weekend and be placed on probation for one year.

Before the sentencing, Ms. Rock's mother, Kay Rock of Plano, told the judge how her daughter's death had affected the family.

"We're still trying very hard to cope with life without Debby," she said. "Our dreams have been cruelly and senselessly taken away from us. It is the last thing we think of at night. It is the first thing we think of in the morning."

Woman claims her sister is subject of conspiracy

FARWELL, Texas (AP) — A Panhandle woman charged with killing four of her six children is the victim of authorities who would do anything to convict her, the woman's sister says.

"All I know is ... it's just stupid. The state of Kansas is trying to get other people to look at the autopsies, and if they have to pay someone to lie for them, they would do it," said Virginia Bribiesca, sister of Diane Lumbrera.

Ms. Lumbrera, 32, a former Bovina resident, is scheduled to be tried in Kansas in September for the smothering death of her 4-year-old son.

She was indicted Tuesday in Texas on three counts of capital murder in the deaths of her daughters: 3-month-old Joanna Lumbrera, 3-year-old Melissa Lumbrera and 2-year-old Melinda Ann Garza, between 1976 and 1982.

Two other sons and a niece also died while under her care. Jose Lionel Garza died at 14 weeks in a Lubbock hospital in 1978, and 5-month-old Christopher Daniel Lumbrera died in 1984. Erica Lenore Aleman was six weeks old when she died in 1980. Grand juries are looking into those deaths.

Bovina's police chief, Gary Coleman, said Ms. Lumbrera told authorities that one of her former mothers-in-law had pronounced an occult curse on her that damned all of her children to early death.

Doctors had ruled the deaths natural and police and child protection authorities apparently did not become suspicious until the May 1 smothering death of Ms. Lumbrera's 4-year-old son, Jose Antonio Lumbrera, in Garden City, Kansas. Ms. Lumbrera had moved to Kansas in 1985.

State levels exceeded in Jonesville wells

■ Results from tests on eight wells in West Odessa showed sulfates and nitrates above state drinking water standards.

By David Morris
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Jonesville residents have suspected for months that their water wells might be contaminated, and Texas Water Commission test results released Wednesday confirmed the fears of eight well owners.

Test results from eight wells in this semirural West Odessa community showed concentrations of sulfates and nitrates above state drinking water standards. Seven of the eight wells showed chloride levels above state standards.

William Lockey, TWC District 10 manager in Odessa, said his office had advised owners of the eight wells tested to not drink the water. Residents also were advised to consult with a physician or health authority about possible effects of using the water, Lockey said.

Sulfate levels in the eight wells ranged from a low of 475 parts per million to 1,420 parts per million, TWC reports show. The state drinking water standard for sulfates is 300 parts per million.

Chloride — which also has a 300-parts-per-million standard — ranged from a low of 181 parts per million to a high of 846 parts per million.

Nitrates, meanwhile, ranged from 10.27 parts per million to 15.92 parts per million, compared to a drinking water standard of 10 parts per million.

Lockey said his office has not determined the source of the Jonesville pollution.

"We're not ruling out possible oilfield contamination," said Lockey. "We don't know — it could be a combination of many things."

He said that dissolved solids in the groundwater may be increasing because the diluting power of the aquifer is being reduced by water consumption. High nitrate levels, meanwhile, might be the result of area septic tanks or a sewage treatment pond — shut down last year at TWC's insistence — at the Jonesville Mobile Home Park.

High sulfate levels may be naturally occurring in the area, Lockey said, citing 1937 tests showing concentrations of sulfates in Jonesville groundwater.

"You generally tend to find high chlorides and sulfates in West Texas," Lockey said. He also suggested that selenium concentrations found in the tested wells might be naturally occurring.

"We didn't find any other metals that exceeded drinking water standards," Lockey said. Selenium levels ranged from 11 to 27 parts per billion in the tested wells; the state standard is 10 parts per billion.

Although the TWC is likely to conduct more well tests in the area, Lockey said there is little his office can do to provide relief for residents whose wells are contaminated.

"I would think that the next recourse for the Jonesville residents would be approaching the water district about serving their area," Lockey said.

Three injured in two-vehicle wreck

Staff Report

A Midland boy was in fair condition Wednesday night at Midland Memorial Hospital following a two-vehicle car accident at the intersection of G Street and Washington Avenue, witnesses at the scene and officials said.

Hospital officials identified the injured boy as 12-year-old Carlos Aranda.

The accident occurred shortly before 8 p.m. when a Chevrolet northbound on Washington struck a station wagon southbound on G Street, police said.

Police said three of the five people in the station wagon were transported to Midland Memorial Hospital. Hospital officials said all but the Aranda boy were expected to be treated and released.

Police said the driver of the northbound car, whose name was unavailable Wednesday night, was cited for failing to yield at a stop sign. He was not injured, police said.

Police said witnesses told them that the Chevrolet's driver stopped at the stop sign but proceeded through the intersection and collided with the station wagon.

GISD likely to be starting fall minus superintendent

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

School will be starting in just a few weeks and Greenwood school district won't have a superintendent.

The current superintendent, Hal Porter, resigned his post July 19. His last day with Greenwood Independent School District was July 31. He returned to Sunray where he will be a principal. Porter cited personal reasons for returning to the school district he left two years ago when accepting the job with GISD.

Don Dulin, GISD middle school principal, is serving in the capacity of principal and interim superintendent.

Vicky Moody, GISD board president, said having Dulin serve as superintendent is an ideal temporary solution since he is "not interested in the job," and is prepared to step down when a superintendent is hired.

As for superintendent prospects, Ms. Moody said, "We are looking for someone who wants to stay in Greenwood — someone who is not moving on or going back somewhere. We haven't named anyone yet."

"No one has their foot in the door," she added.

Task force confiscates $100,000 in marijuana

Staff Report

About 50 pounds of marijuana, with a street value of more than $100,000, was confiscated and three men were arrested about 12:30 a.m. Wednesday, Permian Basin Drug Task Force officials said.

Two of the three remained in jail in Midland Wednesday charged with aggravated possession of marijuana. Justice of the Peace Robert Pine set bonds for Mike Roundtree, 35, of Kermit, at $5,000; and William Khuns, 21, and Dee Wilson, 29, both of Springfield, Mo., at $500,000 each. Roundtree was released after making bond late Wednesday afternoon.

A 1988 Chrevrolet truck, $4,400 in cash, a horse and trailer, and a .22-caliber gun were also confiscated.

The men were arrested on S. Midkiff Road following a three-week investigation that originated from the Springfield, Mo., police

Two charged in burglaries

Staff Report

BIG SPRING — Howard County Sheriff's Office officials here anticipate seeing a sharp drop in rural burglaries following the arrest of two men and the recovery of a large quantity of stolen property Wednesday night.

A 40-year-old Howard County man and a 45-year-old Dawson County man are believed to be responsible for a series of burglaries and thefts in Howard, Dawson, Borden, Scurry and Mitchell counties, Howard County Sheriff A.N. Standard said.

The two are expected to be arraigned today in Howard County on multiple counts of burglary and theft.

Contraband recovered included a large trailer, two small trailers and a pickup truck, all allegedly full of stolen property including electronic equipment and household appliances.

Standard said he estimates the value of the stolen property to be between $20,000 and $30,000, adding that it may be even higher after an inventory is taken of the merchandise.

The two men were arrested while driving within the city limits of Big Spring with some of the merchandise in their possession. The remainder of the property was recovered at a residence, also in Big Spring.

Standard said that the five counties have been recently "plagued by rural burglaries" of homes and barns, and this arrest is expected to solve most of those incidents.

The arrests were a result of a recent investigation.

Education foundation gets first check

■ Mobile Oil then presented the Hispanic chamber with the deed to a lot located on the corner of Francis and Colorado streets.

By Melia McEwen
Staff Writer

Christmas came early to the Midland Hispanic Chamber of Commerce.

At Wednesday's monthly chamber meeting, Permian Distributing presented a check for $1,000 to the chamber's education foundation, the foundation's first donation.

Then Sal Gutierrez, a new board member and representative of Mobil Oil Corp., stepped up and presented the chamber with the deed to a lot located on the southwest corner of Francis and Colorado streets.

"This is great," stated Charlene Romero Wurtz, chamber president. "This is another stepping stone for us to build on."

Mobil, a strong supporter of chamber education programs such as Step Up to Success and Adopt-A-School, was named corporation of the year at the state convention of the Texas Association of Mexican-American Chambers of Commerce (TAMACC).

Joe Sena, the local chamber's member of the year, was also named state member of the year at the convention, held in Victoria. Sena — who has since been transferred to Dallas by his employer — and Mobil will compete for national honors at next month's United States Hispanic Chambers of Commerce convention, to be held in Albuquerque.

Auction helps pack rat turn his collection into treasure

TARZAN — The Little Dutchman has sold out. Sold out just about everything but his soul, his religion and his community.

Todd

"Cleaned out my antique store," sort of lamented the Dutchman, J.B. Shewmake, a Baptist minister up the road at the Lenorah farming community and a merchant at Tarzan, another farming community northeast of Midland.

Shewmake, by inclination, has been a pack rat for much of his 56 years and even set up a shop to sell antiques and such. But the place, which has been shut down for years, only was collecting dust and rain drops when it showered.

His store, too, was a Fibber McGee's closet.

"It's kind of sad," he said of the recent auction. "I sold my antique-book collection. I worked 35 years on that."

But, the preacher "got tired of taking care of (worldly) stuff. It's like (comedian) George Carlin says, 'Americans have too much stuff.' "

Shewmake had just about anything you might find in a remote country store, in some drug stores, and on the farms: barbed wire, a corn-sheller, crocks, antique bottles, Toledo scales, time clocks, Coca-Cola box, shop tools, cafe equipment from days before the oil bust, pots and pans, bales of hay, and an electric fanny reducer. "My collectibles sold real good.

"I had six storage rooms full," he said. "Now, I've got them all cleaned out, swept out. Makes me feel better."

He didn't need the money. "The money was not a necessity, but I found a use for it." He cleared $12,000, less the 20 percent commission the Big Spring auctioneer charged for handling the sale.

"Now, all I've got to take care of is my bank account."

He managed to cut into that.

Shewmake, who has been widowed since 1987, bought himself a sky-blue American station wagon and bought his 13-year-old husky son, Toby, a Japanese four-wheeler.

The decision to sell his antiques, collectibles and "stuff" wasn't an impulsive act. It was a difficult decision.

"Everything has value, one way or the other," he figured. The sale reflected that. Everything went.

"Toby and I talked about it. I had stuff pushed around, packed, tucked away. We thought it was going to avalanche."

Shewmake and son just about bared their pantry.

"We kept what we needed," Shewmake said. All the rest went to the sale, which gave him much relief.

Shewmake understands relief.

The son of a fundamentalist Baptist minister, Shewmake grew up in rural Texas and, like his 10 brothers and sisters, learned to pull cotton and to move around, as some ministers were and are prone to do, sometimes at the congregation's behest.

"The girls worked as hard as the boys ever worked, maybe harder," he reflected on his youth. After work in the cotton patch was done, his sisters were in the kitchen helping their mother fix supper.

And J.B. Shewmake, who was the youngest of the lot, got the breaks. "I was spoiled rotten. I worked the least."

Much later, he got into preaching. "My Dad always said, 'If you are going to be a Baptist preacher, you've got to have a hide as thick as an alligator's, keep one bag packed, and keep travel money under your pillow,' and he lived by that."

A preacher's son, J.B. Shewmake has moved around much less than did his father in the years of the Great Depression.

And, short of swearing, he has pretty well sworn off of being a pack rat again. He has reformed.

When he and his son drive into town and wander into a store, they look at the goods and think things through.

"If we buy it, we'll have to take care of it," Shewmake said. "And we walk out. We have learned our lesson in that respect.

HOW THEY VOTED

Congressional Quarterly

WASHINGTON — Votes of area members of Congress on key issues during the week ending August 3, 1990.

KEY SENATE VOTE

Before passing campaign finance legislation, the Senate Aug. 1 passed 59-41 an amendment that prohibits the use of federal funds for Senate races, unless at least $100 million was appropriated for programs to care for pregnant and postpartum mothers and their drug-addicted babies.

Later that day, the Senate easily passed the Campaign Finance Reform Act of 1990, which establishes a voluntary system of spending limits and partial public financing of Senate election campaigns.

Supporters of the amendment argued that funding programs to help drug-dependent babies far outweighs the importance of spending tax dollars on their own re-election campaigns.

"What the bill provides ... with this amendment is that before we spend any tax dollars to elect senators or anyone else, we will first appropriate enough money to begin to deal with a far more pressing need than the re-election of any member of this body," said Pete Wilson, R-Calif., sponsor of the amendment.

Opponents countered that the amendment would not have an effect on the Appropriations Committee's action and that allocations in excess of $100 million have already been recommended.

"I do not support amendments of this kind which set floors on appropriations items," said Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., chairman of the committee. "The Appropriations Committee has the responsibility to set priorities and to report those priorities to the Senate."

Voting for the amendment:
Gramm (R).
Voting against:
Bentsen (D).

SCHOOL: District seeks someone who wants to stay in Greenwood

(From 1B)

1989-90. Average daily attendance was 1,287.

Greenwood is primarily an agricultural community with limited oilfield activity. Many Greenwood residents work in Midland, according to information from GISD. The district encompasses 122 square miles. It has a kindergarten through 12th-grade configuration.

The district operates one primary, elementary, middle and high school. The primary school consists of kindergarten through third grade; the elementary school, grades four and five; middle school, grades six through eight; and high school with grades nine through twelve.

The school district staff is comprised of 141 persons, which includes 85 instructors and 47 support staff personnel.

The 1989-90 operating budget was $4,446,066. Assessed values were $169,354,000.

Ms. Moody said the board is looking for applicants with proven experience as superintendents, with emphasis on management and leadership skills. Knowledge of curriculum and school finance is also required.

Ms. Moody said, "We will go forward to get the best man or woman in the state to fill the position." She said the board hopes to make a decision on a superintendent Sept. 13. Deadline to apply is Aug. 27.

that the chamber received profits of $20,305.87 from last month's Mex-Tex Menudo Cookoff, and that between 18,000 and 23,000 persons visited the three-day festival. She added that plans are already being made for the 1991 cookoff.

Rick Menchaca and Angelina Davis of the Neighborhood Housing Authority urged members to attend an Aug. 25 meeting at the Northeast YMCA where board members will be elected. The board overseeing the project will consist of seven members from the targeted neighborhoods, six members from the bank pool, and one representative of the City of Midland.

According to Menchaca, the members of the bank pool met recently and were able to arrange a below-market interest rate of 85 percent of the prime rate, or about 8.5 percent. Davis said, however, that she hopes to lower that even more for low-income borrowers by using a blend of bank and foundation money.

The Neighborhood Housing Authority will offer low-interest or no-interest loans to low-income applicants interested in buying, renovating or building a home.

In other action:

■ Members were introduced to Vincent Nieto of Spain, in town to put together a children's project entitled "Bubbles, Bubbles, Soap." It will be held Sept. 1. ■ Project Blueprint, a United Way project aimed at equipping minorities to head or be board members of assistance programs, will graduate its sixth class on Aug. 20 at Midland Community Theater. The next class will begin in late October.

■ Jim Slayton of the Midland Procurement Center said he and his staff have worked with 81 interested companies, and have 15 with active bids. Currently the center has helped arrange $500,000 in contracts.

■ The third annual Women's Conference has been set for Sept. 29 at the Holiday Inn Country Villa and will feature speakers from such cities as Austin and El Paso.

Abductor kills teen-age girl, self

PARIS, Texas (AP) — A man shot himself once in the head Wednesday as officers stormed his home, where they found a 13-year-old girl bludgeoned to death apparently by a baseball bat, police said.

Authorities were alerted to the scene after a woman called from a rural residence saying she and her daughter had been beaten and abducted from their Paris home by her ex-husband, Ed Sugg, said Police Chief Karl Louis.

The standoff, which began midmorning ended about 5:15 p.m. when a tactical unit stormed the home.

Sugg, age unknown, was taken to L.P. McCuistion Hospital in Paris, where he was listed in critical condition, hospital officials said.

The woman, whose name was not released, also was transported to the hospital, and was listed in stable condition.

TESTS: Results from eight wells exceed state approved standards

(From 1B)

Jonesville resident John H. Patterson said he and neighbor Linda Young have been working for several months to have Jonesville incorporated into the Ector County Utility District.

Incorporation, however, will cost more money than Jonesville — which Patterson said covers about two square miles and has about 170 households — can likely afford.

"The only way that we can come up with that kind of money is through a grant," said Patterson, an off-and-on resident of Jonesville since 1970. "And there are several different places that we could get a grant, and we're checking into those. We're getting some more information on a lot of public and private grants around the country."

A utility district spokeswoman, who asked that her name not be used, confirmed that engineers employed by the district have estimated the cost of incorporating Jonesville at $350,000.

"They (residents) would have to pay for the construction" of water lines to the area, she said.

Incorporation would require approval of utility district members, the city of Odessa and a majority of Jonesville taxpayers, the spokeswoman said.

Patterson said that Jonesville is worth saving and that he and his neighbors are willing to put forth the effort necessary to achieve incorporated status.

"The way things stand right now, this land is not worth a dime," he said. "If you haven't got water, you haven't got anything. The biggest thing for all of us right now (is) looking for water. I'd hate to see Jonesville turn into a ghost town."

Patterson said Jonesville's water causes skin rashes on bathers and burns the leaves of plants.

"With those nitrates in the water, it's like putting fertilizer on the garden every time you water it," he said. "If you get it on the foliage, you can just plow it under because it'll be deader than a doornail."

He said his family quit drinking well water about three months ago, when he and Ms. Young first approached the utility district about incorporation.

"I figured anything in the water that would cause you to break out in a rash, it's probably not good for you to drink it, either," he said.

Ms. Young was out of town and could not be reached for comment

Lockey said testing in the area occurred in June at Ms. Young's request. She had complained to the water commission in March about her water quality and asked for a second round of testing in the area after her own well was tested in March, Lockey said.

Officials believe the marijuana came into the United States near the El Paso/Juarez, Mexico border and was intended for to Springfield.

The two Springfield men arrived at Midland International Airport about 11:10 p.m. Tuesday, and joined Roundtree. They subsequently were apprended by the task force and Midland County Sheriff's Office deputies, officials said.

The marijuana was discovered stuffed into a spare tire and in the engine compartment of the truck.

The Winkler and Ector county sheriffs' offices, and the Ector County District Attorney's office also participated in the investigation that led to the bust.

No more arrests related to the incident are anticipated, officials said.

Sitting on crude

The Norwegian tanker Thoraas sits in anchorage on the Neches River at Port Neches, Texas, with 471,000 barrels of Iraqi crude. Customs officials seized the cargo Saturday because the oil trading company, Bay Oil Co., paid for it after President Bush ordered an embargo on Iraqi oil coming into the U.S.

Mattox calls for audit of state Medicaid contract

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas Attorney General Jim Mattox on Wednesday called for an audit of the state's contract with National Heritage Insurance Co., which cut off Medicaid payments to doctors and hospitals because welfare department funds ran out.

"I am wondering why (the Texas Department of Human Services) is paying millions of dollars in premiums to NHIC if NHIC can simply pass through all of the liability for actual claims to the department," Mattox said in a letter o DHS Board Chairman Robert Mosbacher and Commissioner Ron Lindsey.

The insurance company says payments won't be made for services "on or after" July 25

Groups win Rio Grande brush issue

BROWNSVILLE, Texas (AP) — Endangered cats and other wildlife gained a little more habitat along the lower Rio Grande with an agreement in which the International Boundary and Water Commission at least temporarily will reduce its brush-clearing on the river's edge.

The Sierra Club, National Audubon Society and Frontera Audubon Society sued the IBWC last November, alleging that the IBWC's routine brush clearing destroyed the habitat for numerous plant and animal species unique to the area.

Of particular concern were the endangered ocelots and jaguarundis, two species of cat that are nearly extinct in Texas. More than 95 percent of the brush land the cats need for survival has been cleared for agriculture, industry and cities in the Lower Rio Grande Valley.

"In some areas, those little strips along the river are the only habitat that's left," said Rose Farmer, manager of Audubon's Sabal Palm Grove Sanctuary, a 172-acre wildlife refuge on the Rio Grande near Brownsville. "They call it mowing, but it's really bulldozing, if you see what they (IBWC) do."

The IBWC, in a settlement reached last week in U.S. District Court in Washington, D.C., has agreed to conduct environmental impact studies and consult with the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service on the potential effect of brush clearing on endangered species.

The consent decree "means that without the court having found them guilty of what we allege, they (IBWC) voluntarily agreed to what we sought in our lawsuit," said Lori Potter, the attorney for the Sierra Club Legal Defense Fund, who filed the lawsuit. "IBWC submits to the jurisdiction of the Fish and Wildlife Service" in deciding whether and where to clear vegetation, she said.

IBWC was sued for alleged violations of the National Environmental Policy Act and the Endangered Species Act.

"Our position was the IBWC could do substantially less clearing and with no effect on flooding," Ms. Potter said.

Robert Ybarra, secretary of the U.S. Section of the IBWC, said the mowing is necessary to prevent flooding of the river and its floodways, under an agreement with Mexico. He declined comment, however, on the lawsuit settlement.

The agreement covers a 34-mile stretch of the river, primarily downstream from Brownsville, as well as a floodway and the Arroyo Colorado.

Part of the agreement requires the IBWC to conduct hydrology studies to determine whether the mowing actually prevents floods.

Ms. Potter said the agreement will cause the U.S. Section of the IBWC "to find out whether there are reasonable, safe alternatives to its current practices."

The environmental impact and hydrology studies and consultation with the Fish and Wildlife Service will take about three years, Ms. Potter said.

Colorectal cancer may be linked to animal fat

By Jean Carper

There's strong new evidence that eating animal fat, especially if you are inactive, may predispose you to colorectal cancer, the second leading cause of cancer deaths in the United States.

Carper

Dr. Alice Whittemore, Stanford University, found that Chinese-American men, with a typical diet of 35 percent of calories from fat, had four to seven times the chances of colorectal cancer as Chinese men living in Shanghai who eat 20 percent of their calories in fat.

Particularly vulnerable were Chinese-Americans who ate saturated animal-type fat and had a sedentary lifestyle. Dr. Whittemore says that a mere 10 grams of saturated fat daily (which accounts for 90 calories), particularly combined with inactivity, might account for 60 percent of the colorectal cancers in Chinese-American men and 40 percent of such cancers in Chinese-American women.

There are more than 90 calories worth of saturated fat in 2 cups of whole milk, a couple of hot dogs, a 5-ounce hamburger or a couple of ounces of Cheddar cheese.

Vitamins against disease

You can help protect yourself from various diseases by taking specific vitamin and mineral supplements.

That's what an increasing number of scientists are saying, including Dr. Andrew Weil, the University of Arizona Medical School and author of a new book, "Natural Health, Natural Medicine."

The reason: Certain vitamins and minerals act not only as nutrients but also as antioxidants that may help counteract dangerous chemicals called "free radicals" that promote all kinds of chronic diseases, including heart disease, cancer, arthritis, Parkinson's disease, even aging itself.

Such antioxidant vitamins and minerals have been shown in studies to thwart disease processes, notably those that clog arteries and cause cancers.

Here's what Dr. Weil recommends as a daily antioxidant formula that "may safeguard your immune system and retard aging while giving you protection from cancer": 25,000 IU of beta carotene or 15 mg; 400 IU of vitamin E; at least 1,000 mg twice a day of vitamin C; 50 to 100 micrograms of the mineral selenium.

Cheers for canola oil

Several readers have asked about the health properties of canola oil which is fairly new in the United States.

This oil indeed looks very good from the health standpoint. It's made from the seeds of a plant in the cabbage family and is known as rapeseed oil in India and parts of China where it has long been used in cooking.

For one thing, canola oil is the lowest in saturated fat of all vegetable oils — the type that's most likely to clog arteries. It is also highest of all oils — except olive oil — in monounsaturated fat which appears to help ward off heart disease in several ways. About 60 percent of the fat in canola oil is monounsaturated, compared with 77 percent in olive oil, 24 percent in soybean oil and 13 percent in safflower oil.

But perhaps even more important, canola oil has high levels of beneficial omega-3 fatty acids — the same type many scientists rave about in seafood — and low levels of omega-6 fatty acids. This is critical, say some researchers, in protecting body cells from assaults leading to numerous chronic diseases.

Lung drug OK'd for use in preemies

By Jayne Garrison
Hearst News Service

The federal government has approved a new drug that could save thousands of premature babies from lung failure, the most common killer of tiny newborns.

The drug, a synthetic lung surfactant, is a sudsy liquid that coats the lungs and prevents them from collapsing when babies exhale. Approved Monday by the Food and Drug Administration, the drug substitutes for the natural liquid that full-term babies produce in their final five to 10 weeks of gestation.

Without surfactant, about 50,000 of the nation's 280,000 premature babies born each year develop respiratory distress syndrome. And 5,000 of them die because the simple task of breathing is too strenuous for their fragile bodies. Their lungs collapse after each breath.

"This is going to mean a major reduction in neonatal mortality," said Dr. Roderic Phibbs, professor of pediatrics at the University of California in San Francisco. "For some groups of infants it's going to substantially shorten hospital stays, too."

Phibbs said studies of the drug indicate it could save the lives of one-third to one-half of the babies who die of respiratory distress syndrome. It also promises to reduce lifelong complications, such as lung scarring, from treating premature babies with mechanical ventilators.

The drug is being marketed by Burroughs Wellcome Co. under the name Exosurf Neonatal. It was developed by UCSF biochemist Dr. John Clements, who discovered the human body's natural surfactant in the 1950s. UCSF holds the patent on the synthetic formula; Burroughs Wellcome developed the formula under an "orphan drug" license because of its narrow use.

Clements was a young Army doctor researching the effect of nerve gas on lungs when he found the soapy liquid that coats healthy lungs. He discovered that the liquid, by keeping the lungs pliable, allows them to inflate and deflate easily. Stiff lungs, by contrast, require intense pressure to inflate.

The difference is similar to the first puff of air forced into a new balloon, compared with subsequent puffs that quickly inflate the balloon, Clements said.

Clements and colleagues at UCSF began working on the synthetic surfactant 10 years ago. Its main ingredient is lecithin, a compound used to suspend fats in water.

The formula has been studied in humans since 1986, and has been used on nearly 15,000 premature infants since then under an experimental treatment permit from the FDA.

In the experiments, newborns barely heavier than a loaf of bread — 1.1 pounds to 3 pounds — had the synthetic surfactant squirted through a tube into their lungs shortly after birth. Another group of babies was given standard treatment, that is, put on breathing machines.

Fifty percent more of the babies put on mechanical ventilators died of respiratory distress syndrome, according to Burroughs Wellcome. Moreover, at the end of one year, there were 33 percent fewer deaths from all causes among the babies treated with surfactant.

But the drug brings with it renewed ethical debate over when doctors should intervene — often at a cost of $100,000 or more — and when they should simply let a tiny newborn die.

Surfactant will definitely save the lives and cut hospital costs for larger premature babies, those 2 to 3 pounds, Phibbs said. But it will also raise the possibility of costly treatment for the tiniest newborns — 1 pound — who face daunting risks of mental retardation, blindness and other complications, even if they survive respiratory distress syndrome, he said.

"It's going to cut treatment costs for larger babies. But it's going to increase the costs for the smallest babies, who would have died on the day they were born without the drug," Phibbs said. "We keep pushing back the limit."

Another surfactant, made from the liquid in cow's lungs, is being developed by Abbott Laboratories. That formula is already being used on infants in Japan, Germany, Sweden and England, and is nearing final approval in the United States.

Misuse of antihistamines dangerous

Associated Press

People who take antihistamines for their side effects rather than for their intended purpose are following a potentially dangerous path.

More than a billion doses of medications containing antihistamines are consumed in the United States each year. They are sold as cold remedies, sleep aids, allergy relievers and tranquilizers.

"Most antihistamines are used safely and effectively to relieve the symptoms of colds and allergies," said Samuel Uretsky, a pharmacist at New York University Medical Center. "However, some people misuse them in an attempt to achieve a variety of responses, and some people become confused because of the way the products are marketed. Either way, you can get into trouble."

Because of legal restrictions on the sale of almost all sedatives and stimulants, some people turn to antihistamines for their side effects.

"Cold remedies are readily available legal drugs that cause central nervous system sedation or stimulation. They can be and are misused," Uretsky said.

In order to achieve a desired degree of sedation, people must often take larger doses of antihistamines than are generally considered safe, Uretsky said. In a single overdose, antihistamines can cause nausea, dizziness, and impaired reaction and muscular coordination.

Although serious side effects are rare, antihistamines have been associated with urinary retention, blurred vision and anemia. The drugs may be particularly dangerous in people with glaucoma, peptic ulcer or enlarged prostate.

Generally, antihistamines are meant to be taken for seven to 10 days, not indefinitely: if symptoms do not respond in that time, an underlying cause may be responsible and evaluation may be needed.

The placebo effect is also a factor. Given a placebo — an ineffective agent, such as a sugar pill — about 10 percent of the population will show an expected subjective response, like drowsiness. "Drugs tend to live up to the expectations held of them," Uretsky said.

'Some people misuse antihistamines in an attempt to achieve a variety of responses, and some people become confused because of the way the products are marketed. Either way, you can get into trouble.'

— Samuel Uretsky, pharmacist, New York University Medical Center

Although there is no physical dependence associated with the use of antihistamines, a psychological dependence can lead to habitual use.

Antihistamines counteract the effects of histamine, a body chemical involved in allergic reactions.

Antihistamines can be effective in helping to relieve such cold and allergy symptoms as runny nose, itchy eyes and sneezing.

Many cold remedies are combinations of antihistamines and decongestants, which relieve nasal stuffiness. Decongestants cause a narrowing of blood vessels and relaxation of bronchial passages.

The pharmacist noted that decongestants are similar in chemical structure to amphetamines. Like them, decongestants can raise blood pressure and cause sleeplessness, agitation and reduced appetite.

They should not be used by people with high blood pressure, some heart ailments, diabetes, thyroid conditions or glaucoma.

NOTICE OF PUBLIC HEARING ON TAX INCREASE

The Greenwood ISD will hold a public hearing on a proposal to increase total tax revenues from properties on the tax roll in 1990 by 4.9% percent. Your individual taxes may increase at a greater or lesser rate, or even decrease, depending on the change in the taxable value of your property in relation to the change in taxable value of all other property.

The public hearing will be held on Aug. 16 - 7:30 pm at GISD Adm. Bldg.

FOR the proposal: James Brooks, James Mashburn, Vicky Moody, Don Morgan, Price Robinson, John Underwood, Johnny Womack.

AGAINST the proposal: NONE

PRESENT and not voting: NONE

ABSENT: NONE

The statement above shows the percentage increase the proposed rate represents over the effective tax rate that the unit published on Saturday, August 4, 1990. The following table compares taxes on an average home in this taxing unit last year to taxes proposed on the average home this year. Again, your individual taxes may be higher or lower, depending on the taxable value of your property.

	Last Year	This Year
Average home value	$53,190	$51,920
General exemptions available (amount available on the average home, not including senior citizen's or disabled person's exemptions)	$15,640	$15,380
Average taxable value	$37,550	$36,540
Tax rate	$1.7076/$100	1.733 (proposed)
Tax	$641.20	$633.24 (proposed)

Under this proposal taxes on the average home would decrease by $7.96 or 1.24% percent compared with last year's taxes.

Comparing tax rates without adjusting for changes in property value, the tax rate would increase by $ .0254 per $100 of taxable value or 1.4657% percent compared to last year's tax rate. These tax rate figures are not adjusted for changes in the taxable value of property.

Parents, teens suffer pain of growing up

By Erma Bombeck

To thousands of families across the country, this is the summer of their discontent. Especially those with teen-agers who just graduated from high school or college and are ready to move on.

Bombeck

There are emotions in the air that don't have a name. Hostilities are afloat that don't have rationale. Actions are exercised that don't make sense.

The family that played together, prayed together and were raised together, now get on each another's nerves. What's the matter with everybody?

A letter from Melissa, a graduating high school senior in Denver, offers an explanation. "My mother returned to working after being a housewife for 17 years. I was unprepared for this shock and didn't take it very well. For 17 years I had someone there to give me aspirin if I was sick, make sure I ate right, and did my laundry. Then she was gone.

"Lately, we have been having a lot of arguments. I now realize, after reading your book, why we have been arguing. When I was little all I wanted to do was grow up, and my mother thought I was growing too fast. Now all I want is to be 7 years old and have my bicycle back, and my mother is ready for me to grow up."

Melissa said it pretty well.

What we're talking about here is panic. Panic of parents who have just been fired from a job they thought would go on forever and panic from children who thought parents loved them so much they would never abandon them.

Everyone is running around trying to act cool so no one can see how scared they are.

The parents are questioning if they spent enough time with their children, taught them the right things, loved them enough. The kids are wondering if they can make it outside of the cocoon and where they will fit in. And what happens to them if they don't?

Everyone responds with the old standby — anger. "Just wait till you get out there in the 'real world,' mister. You'll get your eyes opened."

"I'll be glad when I'm outa this house and won't have you on my back all the time telling me what to do."

Wouldn't it be wonderful if parents could look at their teen-agers and say, "I want you to stay, but you can't."

Wouldn't it be wonderful if teen-agers could look at their parents and say, "I don't want to leave, but I must."

It's so much better to close the door gently on childhood ... than to slam it.

Some clothes pack well, go anywhere

By Bernadine Morris
New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — Though the approaches to resort collections change dramatically from designer to designer, a strong theme pervades them all: practicality.

"It is not a time for fashion statements," said Carolyne Roehm, who with other Seventh Avenue designers will show her new collection this week. The majority of the resort collections are divided among play and party fare, with a sprinkling of serious daytime garb.

Resort is the time to offer women "new styles that fit into their lives, to lift their spirits when they are getting bored with their fall clothes," said Ms. Roehm, in a definition that most designers would endorse. The clothes will be in stores in November.

Some collections are geared to women planning winter vacations, while others are meant to be worn at home. None offer any wild new fashion directions. Still, each designer uses the resort season as a chance to test new ideas for spring, summer and beyond.

For Ms. Roehm, long associated with skinny, linear clothes, there are signs of a loosening of the silhouette, evident in floating tunics and gentle tentlike dresses and full-skirted chiffons. "I'm actually getting a tiny bit tired of tight dresses," she said.

PRACTICALITY GOVERNS her choice of fabrics, mainly double-faced woolens that are light as gauze and wrinkle-resistant, and colors, mainly navy "because it goes anywhere and if you travel you only have to take one pair of shoes," she said. Her clothes are getting "plainer and plainer," because that is the direction she believes fashion is traveling .

Curvy suits are the backbone of the Bill Blass collection of about 80 styles, almost twice as many as he usually produces for the resort season. Jackets slope in at the waist and arch over the hips, while skirts are gently rounded in this most feminine assortment.

Still, within this framework there are wide mood swings. Linen shorts instead of skirts add a kicky note to brocade jackets. Some suits are in sugary flower prints, others in raucous abstract patterns.

Graphic black and white stripes and dots are arresting in the curvy suits as well as in dresses, which include bouffant skirts as well as skinny strapless styles. Mr. Blass sees the narrow styles doubling as sun dresses and dinner clothes.

His evening wear focuses on long dresses with full skirts in colors strong enough to hold their own against tropical foliage. Parka-type jackets and cashmere sweaters keep the Blass franchise for evening clothes with a sporty feeling.

LOUIS DELL'OLIO divides his collection for Anne Klein into two parts, which he calls "Take Away" and "Wear Now." The first, for warm, sunny climates, consists mostly of white or navy cotton-knit styles that include shift dresses, shorts, sweaters and blazers. Open backs filled in with fishnet and fishnet T-shirts lend excitement to shifts and shirts.

The idea for the cotton-knit group came to Dell'Olio when he vacationed in Antigua and "all the attractive women were into T-shirt dressing," he said. The second part of the collection consists of classic separates in earth colors; these are clothes to wear to work.

Marc Jacobs has kept his resort styles for Perry Ellis as concise as possible. He uses three colors (red, white and royal blue), two patterns (polka dots and awning stripes) and offers only about 20 styles.

"Everything goes with everything else," he said. "You can't make a mistake."

The pieces that work together include blazers, chemise dresses, sequined tops and big, patterned sweaters. A few carefully chosen pieces will cover a lot of fashion ground, from sports to evening.

Even in such a well thought-out assemblage, there is room for experimentation. For Jacobs it takes the form of a bouffant shirt dress in awning-striped silk. "I just love dresses," he said. "I'll do more of them for spring."

THE LYRICAL STYLE of Stephen Burrow takes a simpler tack in his resort collection, if you can call colors like cerise and orange simple. However, he mixes fewer of these shocking shades in the same outfit than he used to. Some of his best styles are in solid black or solid white. His shapes are graceful and fluid, less chopped up than in the past.

His best new silhouette has a shapely long torso and a flounced hem dipping to the back like a fishtail. It appears in hot colors and black. The best beach coverup is a long slinky orange knit with a draped hood and sleeves long enough to cover the fingertips.

Jackets tend to have zipper closings and some are short enough to bare the midriff. Everything has an individual slant, for the woman who has the courage to look different.

A shirtwaist dress in pink organdy, printed all over with big black-and white-striped bows, is an eye catcher among the glittery flower prints and bouffant ball gowns at Scaasi Boutique.

"It's refreshing, isn't it?" Arnold Scaasi said of the organdy dress. The easy shape "gives a casual look to the dressy fabric," the designer said, and he is so fond of it he plans to show more shirtwaist dresses in his couture collection.

Everything in the boutique collection is for late day and evening, including other short dresses. Among them is a loose but narrow one-shoulder toga style cut to show the lines of the body underneath.

About a third of the clothes are lace, from crunchy raffia to re-embroidered guipure. There is even a flower-printed lace dress with a harem skirt paired with a printed satin jacket. Flowers throughout are poppies, peonies, lilacs and hibiscus.

Pandelli, mosquitoes head highlights of McFadden's show

N.Y. Times News Service

To all the discomforts of fashion shows, add mosquitoes.

While a full moon shone down on the dunes off Southampton's swank Meadow Lane on Long Island Saturday night, 300 guests assembled for cocktails, dinner and a fashion show given by Mary McFadden.

The show featured the designs of McFadden's protege, Emo Pandelli.

The invitations specified "summer whites," and the fashionable young crowd squeezed into their tightest Liza Bruce and Isaia minidresses, exposing acres of thin, tanned flesh.

The mosquitoes, smelling blood, buzzed and struck without mercy.

As the crowd waited for the models, who moved in slow motion down a runway above a swimming pool, there was a great deal of slapping, which could be mistaken for smatterings of applause. (The blows, however, were carefully aimed — dead bugs look bloody awful on white.)

Pandelli, a young New York-based designer who started out selling T-shirts on the street, showed about 15 styles, including a series of trapeze capes, tops and dresses in colorful bengaline fabric.

McFadden then showed her latestcollection.

For the finale, the models came out in white beaded dresses clutching live doves.

From the dunes, McFadden emerged in a wedding gown of metallic chiffon, with a train of gold roses, and presented Pandelli with an award from Cointreau, the French liqueur-maker, which sponsored the event.

It was a crystal cube of some sort.

Everyone laughed — and scratched.

DEAR ABBY

Worker judged by boss for serving on jury

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I recently received a "summons" in the mail telling me I had been chosen for jury duty. More than 300 people were questioned by the judge, defense and prosecutor. I was picked for a trial that is expected to last 10 days.

Van Buren

I now find that my boss, who initially told me, "There are ways of getting out of this," is infuriated with me for missing work because I "allowed" myself to be picked. For the record, I've used one sick day in almost four years.

Abby, this is not a "vacation." Someone has been accused of a serious crime, and it is up to a jury to determine this person's innocence or guilt. Doesn't anyone remember the principles on which this country was founded? If everyone in America dodged jury duty, where would we be? I feel proud, honored and obligated to be a part of this process.

Abby, some of my fellow jurors are experiencing the same thing. Please print this and explain to every boss out there how important this process is. — PROUD TO PARTICIPATE IN NEW YORK

DEAR PROUD: Your sentiments are commendable. Our Constitution guarantees its citizens a trial by a jury of their peers. Therefore, it's unfair, unpatriotic and possibly illegal for an employer to suggest, encourage, pressure or demand that an employee evade jury duty. The labor board in your community will attest to that.

DEAR ABBY: I drive a bus for a living. On occasion, I am called on to take groups of people on charters to places like New York City. The people, for the most part, are great, but I don't think they know that it's OK to tip the driver and/or their tour guide.

It always amazes me that these tourists cheer, applaud and praise my driving abilities, then get off the bus after 12 to 15 hours, shake my hand and say, "Thank you for a safe trip!" Then they walk away.

Just for the record, folks, I do these charters for $7 an hour. (Most people wouldn't drive a bus in New York or Boston for three times that!)

A tip is a "gratuity." If you are as grateful as you say you are, punctuate it with a dollar or two. — UPSTATE BUS DRIVER

DEAR BUS DRIVER: Thanks for the tip — I'll pass it along. Readers, unless you are advised to the contrary, you may safely assume that people who perform services such as waiting on tables, hotel bellmen, taxi drivers, limo drivers, doormen, hotel and motel maids, as well as tour drivers, are paid the "minimum" — and depend on "tips" to make ends meet.

DEAR ABBY: There's a woman in our office who is going to be married for the fourth time. She's only 33; husband No. 4 is 30, and this is his first marriage.

She has three children by two different husbands. She's having a church wedding and got mad at the minister because he told her she shouldn't wear white. Can you imagine? In between marriages, she's had a lot of lovers. She is kind of the office tramp.

The entire office has received invitations to her wedding. She has picked out china and crystal patterns, but I just don't feel right about getting her a gift. I'm not the only one here who feels this way. What do you think we should do? — NOT A FAN OF THE BRIDE

DEAR NOT A FAN: I think you should very politely decline the invitation and send the bride a lovely card with your best wishes for a happy marriage.

Oil plunges

The price of oil dropped more than $2 a barrel on Wednesday, and the price of gasoline fell more than 6 cents a gallon, following reports that members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries would increase their production to mitigate a feared oil shortage.

In trading Wednesday, the price of West Texas Intermediate crude for delivery in September dropped by $2.35, to $25.96 a barrel, on the New York Mercantile Exchange.

And even though President Bush's decision to send American troops to Saudi Arabia could lead to a military conflict with Iraq, traders said the decision helped lower oil prices because the American forces would give Saudi Arabia the protection it needed to pump more oil to help ease the shortage.

But no analysts were ready to say that Wednesday's decline in oil and gasoline prices was the start of a new trend. Given the confrontation with Iraq, the next news bulletin from the Middle East could send prices back up again.

And there is still uncertainty about whether oil production is really being increased, especially because OPEC members are leery of saying what they are doing for fear of annoying Iraq and other members.

Dollar higher

NEW YORK (AP) — The dollar ended higher Wednesday against all major currencies except the Japanese yen and Canadian dollar, boosted by the rising tensions in the Middle East.

In Tokyo, where the global trading day begins, the dollar fell to a closing 150.00 Japanese yen from 150.60 yen Tuesday. The dollar was stronger against the British pound compared to Tuesday.

Dollar rates in New York: 1.5920 German marks; 1.3380 Swiss francs; 5.3365 French francs; 1,165.00 Italian lire; and 1.14785 Canadian dollars.

Gold fell in London to $382.25 an ounce from $383.25 late Tuesday.

Silver prices slipped. On New York's Comex, silver bullion for current delivery settled at $4.843 a troy ounce, down from $4.857 Tuesday.

Mileage standard

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Middle East crisis is focusing attention on a bitterly contested effort that would require cars to have a fuel efficiency of 40 miles-per-gallon by 2001, industry and consumer advocates say.

"We have been reminded that we squandered the breathing space of the 1980s — not using that period of low prices constructively to lessen our dependence on foreign oil," Sen Richard Bryan said.

Bryan, D-Nev., introduced the bill that would mandate significant fuel economy improvement.

Automakers oppose the bill, saying its goals are technologically unrealistic and would require drastic reductions in automobile weight.

Failed thrift's owner pleads innocent

■ Former owner of Lamar Savings Association, Stanley E. Adams Jr., says he is innocent of criminal charges in connection with the failure of the S&L.

By Michael Holmes

AUSTIN (AP) — The former owner of the now-defunct Lamar Savings Association, Stanley E. Adams Jr., said Wednesday he is innocent of federal criminal charges in the failure of the $2 billion thrift.

Adams said he did nothing wrong or different than many other S&L executives.

"If I am to be indicted and tried for my actions, then every banker and savings and loan official in Texas during the past decade should be indicted and brought to trial," said Adams, whose S&L once applied to open a branch on the moon.

Adams, an unsuccessful Democratic gubernatorial candidate this year; three other ex-Lamar officers; and two borrowers were named late Tuesday in a 14-count indictment alleging misapplication of $121.1 million in S&L funds.

It accused Adams and the other officers of trying to hide Lamar Savings' poor financial condition from the Federal Home Loan Bank Board and of arranging "sham" loans to fund purchases of repossessed real estate from the troubled thrift's portfolio.

"The blame for this tragedy should be laid where it belongs — at the doorstep of the Reagan administration" which deregulated S&Ls, Adams said in a written statement. "These indictments against me are part of what has become a political issue and little more."

In Washington, Attorney General Richard Thornburgh called Lamar "one of the most notorious failures in the Southwest and among the top 100 S&L fraud cases" being investigated.

Adams' lawyer contended the former thrift executive is the victim of a double standard under which the government allowed certain S&L business practices in the early 1980s, but now calls them fraud.

Lawyer Henry Novak said Lamar's transactions were legitimate. But prosecutors now are applying new "theories of criminality" to what once was standard S&L practice, he said.

"It was business as usual in the savings and loan industry in 1983, '84 and '85. But now Bush administration — since the entire industry has collapsed — what you're doing is, taking the position that that was fraud, that that was wrongdoing," Novak said.

Novak, who is defending Adams in a $100 million civil suit filed by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp., said government regulators long were out to get Adams because he was an innovative maverick in a staid business.

"Stanley Adams had been the target for quite some time of bad feelings on the part of the regulators. He was an innovator. He was different. He was a maverick in an industry in which conformity was a very important thing," Novak

American raises fares 10 percent

■ American Airlines will raise fares 10 percent and blames rising fuel costs.

Associated Press

FORT WORTH, Texas — American Airlines said today it will increase its fares by 10 percent because of what it called the skyrocketing cost of fuel brought about by Iraq's invasion of Kuwait.

Michael W. Gunn, the airline's senior vice president for marketing, said the increase will go into effect Friday for flights in the continental United States, Hawaii and the Caribbean and on Aug. 15 for international flights.

In recent days, Pan American World Airways and Northwest Airlines said they would raise their fares because of soaring fuel costs.

"We regret the recent events in the Middle East have caused an increase in the costs of fuel, leading to an increase in our fare price. American Airlines wants to be fair and we are especially sorry to do this, because higher fares will create hardships," Gunn said.

Fuel costs make up 15 percent of American Airlines' total budget, "but at the higher prices, we estimate it will be at least 20 percent," American Airlines spokesman Tim Smith said.

"Even with the higher fares, we expect to recover only a portion of the increased fuel costs, since we have already sold half of our seats for the next two months at old prices," Smith said.

The higher fares apply only to tickets that are bought after the increase goes into effect, Smith said.

On July 1, American Airlines was paying an average of 57 cents per gallon for its fuel, Smith said.

"By today, the system average had risen to 68 cents. But the spot market is already at 85 cents, and the spot is what our market is based upon," Smith added.

American Airlines uses 2.4 billion gallons of fuel a year.

Texas prices up as Arco freezes gasoline prices

Associated Press

Texans are paying 12 cents more for a gallon of gas since Iraq's invasion of Kuwait. But Texas' neighbors are paying more.

The American Automobile Association says that statewide, the average price of a gallon of self-serve unleaded regular gas increased from $1.04 on July 4 to $1.16 on Aug. 6.

Prices in western Oklahoma jumped by 17 cents, from $1.11 to $1.28. New Mexico's increase was 18 cents, from $1.10 to $1.28.

Meanwhile, Atlantic Richfield Co. Wednesday froze wholesale fuel prices for one week, becoming the first U.S. oil company to heed a request by President Bush to control prices during the Middle East crisis.

Arco, based in Los Angeles, said prices of gasoline, diesel and jet fuel would remain at today's level.

"We hope the market will stabilize during this time, but if at the end the week our position is out of line with world market prices we will have to recognize that fact," George Babikian, president Arco Products Co., the company's refining and marketing division, said in a statement.

"We will not raise our prices even then unless we are substantially below the general market," he said. "Otherwise, if we remain below the market we risk a run on our stations which could drain our supply and create a panic buying situation in the marketplace."

Crayola retires eight 'classic' colors

By Kelly P. Kissel

EASTON, Pa. (AP) — A handful of protesters took "umber-age," but it's out with the old and in with the new inside 64-color boxes of Crayola Crayons, the flip-top package that was the first status symbol for Baby Boomers.

Crayola maker Binney & Smith created eight brighter colors and given them names like jungle green, wild strawberry and vivid tangerine.

To make room, the company decided to ax eight classic but ho-hum colors so that the traditional sharpener-equipped boxes could be preserved, said spokesman Brad Drexler.

A ceremony this morning inducting the "retired" colors into the newly established "Crayola Hall of Fame" was picketed by about a dozen people who said they would miss maize, raw umber, lemon yellow, blue gray, violet blue, green blue, orange red and orange yellow.

Focus: Ten blessings to every one problem

By Scott Burns

Readers send perspective as well as questions. G.A. of Dallas sent this quote from master investor John Templeton:

Burns

"When future generations are studying history, they will learn that there were great historical turning points in the years 1066, 1492, and in the year 1989. I think we will look back at the current time as one of the remarkable points in human history... Granted there is a wide variety of problems today. But if you focus only on the problems, you will see the wrong picture. Today, for every problem we have, we have ten blessings. Few people realize what an enormous blessing it is to be alive today."

Something to remember as we puzzle over interest rates, worries about banks, unsold real estate, the federal deficit and the day to day worries we all face.

Q. I am trying to obtain a MasterCard, Visa or American Express credit card. I want to put up cash as collateral instead of an institution running a credit report. Can you furnish me a list of banks that would approve a credit card for me using this method of approval? — J.M., Dallas, Texas.

A. You won't be able to get an American Express card by putting up collateral but you CAN get a Visa or Mastercard. According to RAM Research, a Frederick, Maryland firm that reports on bank credit cards, there are now five banks offering secured cards nationally. Here are their names and telephone numbers (The figure in parentheses is their minimum deposit):

- First Trade Union ($500) 800-242-0274
- First Consumers ($400) 800-876-3262
- Savings Industrial ($500) 800-779-8472
- Home Trust Savings ($380) 605-692-9555
- American National ($250) 800-234-8472

Another strategy, if you have assets, is to open a brokerage account that has an attached debit card. When you use these cards your purchase is automatically debited against a money market account. You lose the "float" of not having to pay for 25 or 30 days but your collateral will be earning at full money market rates. The rates offered on the secured credit cards are generally lower. With a debit card your credit line is only limited by the assets you have in your account.

That's the good news. The other side of the deal is that you usually need to have an account with a minimum value over $5,000.

Q. I was approached recently concerning investment in rare coins. The salesperson claimed that these coins have long-term appreciation potential and high returns. This company purportedly only sells high grade investment coins. He insisted that "it was the only way for the small investor to build a decent nest egg for the future." I was skeptical of the claims and the high return promised. Is there any truth to any of this? — P.V., Dallas, Texas.

A. It is true that coins have provided excellent returns. It is also true that many investors have never experienced those returns. The problem is buying the right coins and obtaining coins that are actually the grade you pay for. My advice: unless you have a genuine interest in rare coins, tell the salesman to go away. Be particularly wary of people who claim their investment is the "only way" to do anything. We are in the midst of global speculation in fine arts, baseball cards, and collector cars. The problem with such markets is that today's "sure thing" can easily become tomorrow's unsaleable dog.

Fact of Life: It is always easier to buy something than to sell it. The only thing we can be sure of is that when Hell has frozen over, a salesmen will be telling residents there never has been a better time to buy icemakers.

ANALYSIS

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market rebounded Wednesday as investors hunted for bargains among the issues battered during Wall Street's recent weak spell.

A retreat in oil prices eased inflation anxieties, contributing to an improved attitude toward stocks.

Also, a perception that tensions in the Middle East might be diffused without prolonged difficulty helped stabilize shaky investor confidence and encouraged renewed buying.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials snapped a string of six straight losing sessions and advanced 24.26 to 2,734.90.

Advancing issues outnumbered declining ones by better than 5 to 3 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed stocks, with 1,015 up, 601 down and 406 unchanged.

Trading activity slowed from the brisk pace of recent days. Volume on the floor of the Big Board came to 190.40 million shares, down from 231.58 million in the previous session.

Nationwide, consolidated volume in NYSE-listed issues, including trades in those stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, totaled 237.91 million shares.

Some buying enthusiasm was suppressed by concerns that financial markets still are vulnerable to shocks from the Middle East.

The full economic implications of the turmoil caused by Iraq's invasion and subsequent occupation of Kuwait are unknown. There has been speculation, however, that the struggling U.S. economy could be pushed into recession.

Market analysts said the U.S. decision to send troops to Saudi Arabia, in what President Bush emphasized was a defensive role, deterred speculation that the crisis would worsen.

The slide in petroleum prices sparked a selloff in energy stocks. The contract for September delivery of West Texas Intermediate, the benchmark grade of U.S. crude oil, pulled back by $2.35 to $25.96 abarrel on the New York Mercantile Exchange.

Among the blue chip oil stocks, Chevron dropped 1⅞ to 76⅞, Exxon tumbled 1⅝ to 51¾ and Texaco fell 1¾ to 62¾.

The retreat in oil prices gave a lift to transportation stocks, particularly airline issues. The Dow Jones transportation average rose 26.64 to 991.42, posting its first gain since July 25.

Standard & Poor's industrial index went up 3.86 to 398.96, and S&P's 500-stock composite index ended at 338.35, up 3.52.

The NASDAQ composite index for the over-the-counter market increased 5.65 to 407.73. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index closed at 340.03, up 0.19.

UPR has 15 mmcfd Gulf strike

Staff Report

Union Pacific Resources Co. of Fort Worth has completed a well in the Gulf of Mexico for 15 million cubic feet of gas and 72 barrels of condensate.

The well, located on South Timbalier Block 214 South Addition offshore Louisiana, was tested on a 19/64 in. choke with 6,750 psi flowing tubing pressure. Union Pacific Resources is the operator and has a 25 percent interest in the well. Other partners are Pogo Producing Co., Oryx Energy Co., Wolverine Exploration and Ensco Resources Co.

To date six wells in the South Timbalier field show a capacity to produce 83 mmcf of gas and 360 barrels of condensate per day when the production platform is installed in late August.

CRAYOLA: Colors retired

ber-age," said one sign. "Indians call it maize, we call it gone," said another.

The 5-foot-10 models of the retired colors stand in plastic tubes in front of Crayola's production center. Each has a plaque extolling the color's virtues.

"We'll all miss these retired colors. That's why we started the Hall of Fame, so people can come by and see them whenever they want to," said Tom Muller, general manager of Binney & Smith's Crayola division.

Joining the list of new colors aimed at a fresh generation of children are dandelion, fuchsia, teal blue, royal purple and cerulean, a darker version of Crayola's sky blue.

Thousands who grew up with the old colors and some youngsters using them now called or wrote Binney & Smith to complain, but the change was prompted by child surveys in the first place, so the company went forward with the plan.

For members of the Baby Boom generation, the flip-top crayon box with all the colors and the built-in sharpener was a childhood status symbol akin to today's designer sneakers and Nintendo video game sets.

SAVINGS: Adams a target by government regulators

said.

Adams was principal owner of Lamar Savings from 1973 to December 1985. Government regulators shut it down in May 1988. It was the biggest thrift failure in central Texas, and officials have estimated the cost to the government at $1 billion.

The colorful Adams, 56, unsuccessfully ran for governor in this year's primary. When filing for the Democratic nomination, Adams listed his occupation as "alleged white-collar racketeer" and complained about the lengthy investigation of him and Lamar.

Federal authorities said Tuesday's indictment followed a three-year investigation.

Several years ago, Lamar applied to federal regulators to open a branch office on the moon, naming a crater where the National Aeronautics and Space Administration proposed to build a space station. No action ever was taken.

At a news conference Wednesday, publicist Garry Entress released the statement from Adams and one from a second defendant, former Lamar senior vice president Reuben Coleman.

Coleman, of Austin, said he was innocent and also protested what he called political interference.

"The current climate in Washington — what I would describe as a feeding frenzy of vindictiveness — played a role in this action," Coleman said.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Stagger CDs so they mature each month

By Bill Doyle

Q. I will have $35,000 to $40,000 available soon and want to invest it for the safest and highest interest. I also want some of my money to be available on a monthly or other periodic basis.

My idea is to put $5,000 in a one-month certificate of deposit, $5,000 in a three-month CD, $10,000 in a six-month CD and $15,000 in a one-year CD. I would roll over each CD as it matures.

Does this sound reasonable?

A. It sounds reasonably complicated. My advice is to simplify your planning.

Doyle

With your plan, after its initial maturity period and two roll-overs, your one-month CD would come due at the same time as your three-month CD. Then, assuming continued roll-overs, those two CDs and your six-month CD would mature three months later. Six months after that, those three CDs and your one-year CD would mature.

Rather than spreading your money evenly so that part of it would be available monthly, you would be bunching it, with the biggest chunk coming due annually.

Here is a much easier way. Simply open 12 $3,000 CDs, with maturities of one, two, three, four, five, six, seven, eight, nine, 10, 11 and 12 months. As each CD comes due, put that money into a 12-month CD.

This way, one of the CDs will mature every month, making $3,000 and a year's interest available to you.

Q. It comes as a surprise to read about CDs with strange maturities, such as one month, three months, nine months, etc., in your column. At the bank as which I worked before retiring, CDs were available only for one, three and eight years, although 182-day CDs were available in the early 1980s.

Since when have CDs with odd maturities been available?

A. "Always" may be too strong a word, but CDs with what you consider strange maturities have been around for years and years. Although many banks followed policies similar to those at the bank where you formerly worked, others offered CDs with various maturities.

It stands to reason that, if a customer of your bank had a bundle of money he or she would not need for, say, three months and 12 days and wanted to put that cash into a CD for that period of time, your bank would accommodate the customer by issuing a three-month, 12-day CD.

That practice has become much more common in this era of banking deregulation. These days, many banks, savings and loan associations and credit unions advertise the fact that they will issue CDs for any and all maturities their present depositors and potential customers choose.

Innovative teaching methods help children learn faster and more efficiently. Here, a teacher coaches a young pupil through the Writing to Read program, which allows students to learn at their own pace.

New for the Nineties:

The 'basics' now march to a different drummer

By Lisa Castiglione
Copley News Service

In the 1960s, the race for space spawned an increase in homework demands as U.S. educators felt that American students were lagging behind Soviet schoolchildren.

Homework took a backseat to concerns over physical and mental health in the '70s and the workload was decreased.

The '80s trend toward conservatism brought fears of whether American children were as culturally literate as their overseas counterparts.

Today, schools are getting back to the basics.

But the one thing that hasn't changed is the battle between parents and children over getting the homework done. Children dread hours of pencil pushing at the kitchen table; parents dislike arguments over the subject and the frustrations they bring.

Child experts are recognizing that parents' participation in their child's education, from understanding homework to communicating with teachers, is important to his success in school.

THE VALUE OF HOMEWORK

Homework is valuable to your child because it teaches decision making, exercises judgment, improves reading skills and encourages self-discipline and responsibility.

The work is most useful to the student when it supplements classroom activity. But it can only help if the student does his homework promptly and the teacher reviews and returns it promptly, according to Melitta Cutright in her book "How to Get the Best Education for Your Child" (Doubleday), from The National PTA Talks to Parents series.

In addition, the best homework assignments consider the individual, honor learning and development styles, connect family and community, teach accuracy, precision and perseverance, teach thinking skills, show context, give feedback other than grades and involve all of the senses.

There are no set limits on the amount of homework teachers are allowed to assign students. In general, teachers give assignments based on the age of the child.

Younger students, kindergarten through third grade, are required to do very little. Practicing printing or reading for about 20 minutes each night is the average, Cutright says. Children in the upper grades should expect about two hours of studying each night.

A PARENT'S ROLE

Homework can be valuable to parents, too. Beside the benefits of encouraging self-discipline and responsibility, homework provides an opportunity for parents to keep in touch with their children.

Discussing your child's day in school can give insight into peer pressure, problems and new trends. Cutright suggests parents ask to see assignments after they have been returned in order to talk about problems and praise the child's efforts.

Just reminding your child each night to do her homework is often not enough — for you or her. She may need help in organizing her assignments. But don't fall into the trap that some parents do and end up doing the work yourself in an effort to just get it over with.

Child magazine suggests several success strategies for parents and children at homework time:

Provide a well-lit study area. A desk or table in a quiet place, supplied with a dictionary, pencils and paper, is conducive to studying.

Develop a regular study routine. Homework right after school is best for some children, others may need a snack and play time before tackling the books. Whatever the schedule, enforce it.

Help — if your child asks you. Your child should be told that homework is ultimately his responsibility.

Be positive and success-oriented. Compliment your child on her successes and her efforts. Stay away from criticism that is not constructive.

Reinforce homework with outside activities. Show how math problems or science assignments relate to the outside world.

SIX-WEEK PLAN

Do you need a more stuctured and concrete plan of attack?

A team of authors has come up with a method to "turn homework from drudgery into a genuine learning experience for both parent and child" — in six weeks.

In the book "Hassle-Free Homework: A Six-Week Plan for Parents and Children to Take the Pain Out of Homework" (Doubleday), authors Faith Clark and Cecil Clark say that parents' enthusiastic and non-judgmental participation can strongly affect learning.

"School," they write, "amounts to only about 13 percent of the student's waking hours in the first 18 years of life, leaving 87 percent of the children's time under nominal control or influence by the parents."

Further, a recent University of Illinois study shows that as much as half of the difference in student grades and test scores is attributable to parental participation in school-related activities at home, the Clarks report.

The book begins with a "homework-brain user's guide" and offers a practical rather than anatomical view of the way the brain works. It explains how the learning process works with each of the brain's three parts, as the Clarks call them: the "thinking brain," the "feeling brain" and the "doing brain."

From there, the six-week plan is mapped out. Each week has its own goal: organization, adjusting homework to the child's developmental stage, recognizing the child's style of learning, motivation, concentration and memory. The authors also recommend the amount of time children in different grade levels should spend on homework, from a half-hour for second graders to four hours for high school students.

The authors, founders of the National Learning Laboratory and the Human Development Clinic in Washington, D.C., state that their approach is unorthodox and based on mind/brain research used in their clinic. Their methods are not designed for learning-disabled students and can be used by parents, principals, teachers and other educators.

TEAM EFFORT

The most effective team, say the Clarks, is the three-way team: the child, the parents and the teacher, all working toward the success of the child.

Get to know your child's teacher. Let him know you are interested in your child's progress.

Tell the teacher about your child and your family. What are your child's achievements and interests? Does she have any particular difficulty with any one subject? The Clarks also say that letting the teacher know your family is going through rough times can be helpful.

In addition, find out the school's homework policy: How often is homework assigned? What kind of motivation or penalties does the school use? To what extent does the teacher ensure the students have the correct assignment?

MISD issues guidelines for reduced-price meals

The Midland Independent School District has issued its guidelines to qualify for reduced-price and free lunches.

Families receiving Aid to Families with Dependent Children or federal Food Stamps, need only apply through the MISD Food Service office, which can confirm eligibility through the welfare office.

Other households can qualify for free lunches, if the following criteria are met:

- A one-person family that earns less than $8,164 annually, $681 per month or $157 per week;
- A two-person family earning less than $10,946 a year, $913 per month or $211 weekly;
- A three-person family earning less than $13,728 a year, $1,144 per month or $264 weekly;
- A four-person family earning less than $16,510 a year, $1,376 per month, or $318 weekly;
- A five-person family earning less than $19,292 a year, $1,608 per month or $371weekly;
- A six-person family earning less than $22,074 a year, $1,840 per month or $425 weekly;
- A seven-person family earning less than $24,856 a year, $2,072 per month or $478 weekly;
- An eight-person family earning less than $27,638 a year, $2,304 per month or $532 weekly.

Add $2,782 per year, $232 per month or $54 per week to guideline amount for each additional family member.

7,300 students ride bus daily

The district's transportation services provide 7,300 students with a ride to school each day of the school year, covering more than 1.7 million miles a year by the system's 149 buses.

Two frequently asked questions are:

1). Are Midland's buses and bus drivers safe?

Each bus undergoes extensive and regular maintenance. Replacement of older vehicles is done according to an industry accepted schedule. The Texas Education Agency has very strict rules about the licensing of bus drivers. Beyond the required license, bus drivers are required to pass a physical examination and be active in annual training.

■ Bus schedule/7

2).Couldn't we save money by cutting out desegregation busing?

No, funding for busing is categorical money. That is, the only use allowed for transportation funds is busing. If busing, for desegregation or other reasons, does not occur, the district cannot use the money for other purposes. Unused transportation funds must be returned to the state.

The "bust" cost the district over $1 billion in taxable value, over 20 percent of its tax base

200 employees involved in preparation of lunches

School lunches are better than ever, in taste and nutrition and definitely are the best prepared food buy in town. More than 200 employees arrive each school day to prepare fresh foods for students and staff.

Lunch meals provide one-third the minimum requirements of essential nutrients for young bodies. The food service continually strives to reduce salt and fat intake in all meals served.

Well-rounded meals are offered at costs far below comparable meals at other food establishments. The new price for elementary school lunches is $1.25 and the new price for secondary lunches is $1.35.

A good start for the school day is provided with low-cost breakfast meals at all of the district's campuses, 20 minutes before the beginning of the school day. The new price for breakfast is $.65.

Parents are welcomed and encouraged to join students during their lunch break. Visitors can eat for $2.00.

In order to prepare the proper number of meals, adults are asked to notify the campus of their intent to visit. Employees lunches are $1.75.

With fall semester, a new TAASk replaces state TEAMSwork

The spring 1990 administration of the Texas Educational Assessment of Minimum Skills, TEAMS, will be the last. In October, students will begin participating in the Texas Assessment of Academic Skills (TAAS).

Like TEAMS, students in the odd numbered grades — 3,5,7,9 and 11 — will take the test. The purpose of the two tests also is similar — to provide a measurement of academic achievement.

Yet, the new test differs significantly in content and format. TAAS will contain three sections — writing, reading, and mathematics.

The composition portion of the writing section basically follows the lead of TEAMS, but the grammar section has been altered significantly.

In the language arts section, reading selections are longer in the TAAS. The selections are followed by as many as 10 response questions as opposed to the four questions following the shorter reading selections in the TEAMS.

TAAS may result in some initial confusion over student scores.

Since standards for mastery will be new and tentative, the first round of scores may be very low or very high. As with any new testing instrument, adjustments and modifications will be necessary. A true measurement of student achievement will probably not be in place until the second or third administration of the test.

Also, the October test date has generated concern over "summer regression." Retention of material learned is never 100 percent, especially after a three-month break. Students will need extensive review of concepts learned during the previous school year.

On the other hand, some educators welcome the early test date. TEAMS' spring test dates have raised criticism that curriculum and instruction have become "TEAMS driven," meaning that teachers and teaching are guided by this test and its content.

Midland College's autumn term to begin August 27

More than half the projected 4,000 students already are registered for 1990 fall semester classes at Midland College.

An early registration period ended last week, but ample opportunity remains for persons wishing to register.

Currently underway through Aug. 16 is issuance of time permits for a special registration on Aug. 22 for those who cannot register now.

Classes begin Aug. 27. Time permits are given out at the Student Services Office, located in the Administration Building. Hours are 7 a.m.-5 p.m. Monday through Thursday.

Those receiving time permits will have 15-minute time slots to come for registration. Walk-in registration without a permit is permitted only during the final two hours on Aug. 22.

"Because of the number of students already registered, as well as new state requirements regarding pre-enrollment testing and transcripts, we strongly urge persons to come in next week register early, talk with counselors, and learn what is required for first-time and transfer students," said Dr. Don Cates, associate dean of students and registrar.

Information regarding registration, financial aid, class offerings and schedules, and fees is included in the fall course bulletin.

The bulletin is available at the Registrar's office, at Midland banks, or the Midland County Library. Some information also is available by calling 685-4501.

Big trends forecast for fall fashion

Brilliant color continues to be a major message. Russian red is the leader. Vivid brights work tonally or contrast and accent dramatic dark hues. Focus on:

- Red
- Byzantine prints
- Tweeded effects and color flecks
- Russian folk patterns
- Islamic scrolls
- Plush or textural fabrications in simple shapes
- Color blocks and geometric patterning
- Textural/sweater/rib knits
- Tassel prints

Look for dulled and softened midtones for both head to toe color statements and multi mixes. Often used to lift the new neutrals or accent the berry and russet tones.

- Suitings — tweeded effects, checks, plaids, texture weaves
- Knit dressing — crochet and pointelle accents, cable, rib knits and sweater knits
- Denim — color washes and accents
- Recolored tapestry and carpet patterns
- Suede and leather
- Western, Navajo and blanket patterns

Neutrals create head-to-toe tonal mixes or team with Autumn Leaves and Misty Midtones in prints, plaids, checks, tweeds effects and heathers. Black and white continue; grey and camel make a comeback; head to toe tonal white is the new star, along with metallic bronze or pewter accents. Focus on:

- Male mode — slouchy, oversize menswear styling, "Boyfriend" jackets
- Savvy suitings — curved jackets with short slim/narrow pants-/winter shorts
- Trapeze shape — tops, jackets and dresses
- Textural knits — tunics sweaters, layered mixes, sweater/rib knits
- Military moves - soldier chic, historical and Russian military or work styling
- Stretch - Leggy looks in velour, velvet, corduroy, twill, jersey, knit, denim and satin.
- The Power Dress — tailored or architectural
- Suede and Leather — jacket, vest, tunic

Autumn Leaves are rich gradations of yellow-cast greens, golds, rust, orange, brown and berry, with trends such as:

- Medieval tapestry and stained glass patterns
- Rich Eastern ethnic and Islamic prints
- Tweeds, plaids, checks
- Rustic textures, heather weaves, pebble weaves
- Velvet, panne, velour, chenille
- Bronzed metallic accents and metallic gold prints
- Corduroy
- Brocade, taffeta, chiffon
- Stretch — velour, denim, panne, lycra, hi-tech blends
- Synthetics — nylon, acetate, blends
- Satin finishes and shine
- Brushed and sanded finishes
- Quilting, pleating, embroidery

Los Angeles is the land of the street-driven trend and the street is signaling that matched trend is "out" and cross-trend is "in." An eclectic collage or color, texture and trend that creates new "item" merchandising mixes. The mixes are:

Stretch and slouch — short skirts, stirrup pants, knit tights-/leggings with tunic sweaters, trapeze-shaped big tops, oversize menswear, wrap, cocoon, cardigan and parka jackets.

Shine and matte — metallics, brocade, sequins, beading, taffeta, iridescense with wool, denim, twill, jersey, knits.

Tough and tender — leather with lace, chiffon with military, folkloric with survival, Western-/Navajo with peasant or gypsy.

FASHION: Color, motifs offer stylish statements

(From 4)

Another popular look is the mix of tartan and Anorak for an international and historical play on soldier chic with a fun twist. Military ideas include historical and Russian, military decorations, buckles, bars, medals, trims and braids, Russian stars, camouflage print accents and accessories and Eisenhower jackets.

Tartan fashions include conventional colorations in styling, fringed wrap skirts, buckle details, shawls, sexy p.m. dressir and leggings. Anorak ideas involve parka styling, quilting and ski synthetics.

A parade of brocade, beading, metallics, sequins, bronzed gold trims, satin finishes and wet look synthetics catch the night lights and give a decorative edge by day.

Overdone and elaborate embellishment is replaced by single focus decoration or detail. Focus on metallic brocade, bronze and pewter, Byzantine patterns and motifs, satin finishes, sequins, iridescence, filigree tips and buttons, beading, golden pageantry trims and vinyl.

Are you wanting to spruce up your existing wardrobe? Re-design or design with the following fall fashion elements: Rounded styling and jacket fronts, fur trims, capelet styling, outerwear-/wilderness influence, printed velvet trims, antique gold buttons and blanket stitching.

Also, draped necklines, neoprene, upholstery fringe, the parka, corduroy — solid and printed, melton, quilting, wide and higher lapels, carpet patterns, bathrobe wraps, gold filigree tips and buttons, brocade trims and flap pockets.

Other elements include folk-country motifs, Ukranian folk patterns, scarf necklines, head-to-toe white, wraps and side closures, stars and hearts, Asian patterns, pointelle and crochet stitchery, patched/inset/tipped denim, Hermes patterns, the color red, tunic sweaters, knit leggings, stirrup pants, Jodhpurs and winter shorts.

Also, "hip-slung" styling and belting, patterned leggings and tights, trapeze and architectural shape, Aquarius vests, sundial motif, tunic shape, Woodstock prints, large buckles, fake fur.

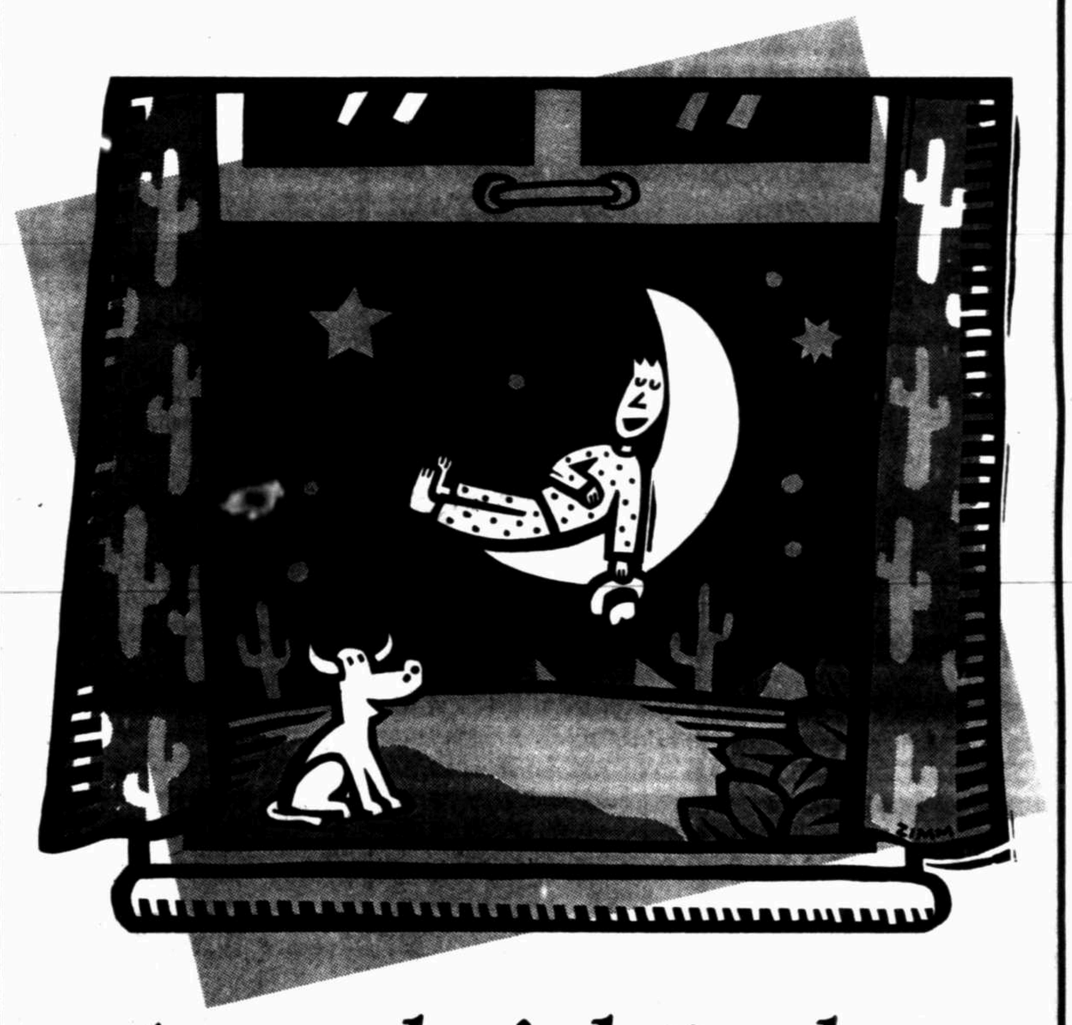
Now AmWest can give you something few banks can...



A good night's sleep.

Now AmWest has "DreamSaver"—a savings program designed to bring peace of mind to all those who worry about saving money.

Here's how it works: You tell AmWest how much you want to save every month, (as little as $25 if you like) and they'll deduct it automatically from a free checking account (that's right, free checking) and put it into a CD account. Keep your money there for a full 12 months and it will earn a high-interest CD rate. Take it out early, and you'll get a penalty — three months interest or $50.

So "DreamSaver" not only helps you save money on a regular monthly basis — it helps you keep your hands off it too. And with a little money in savings — a good night's sleep will come a whole lot easier.

Put Your Money on Texas.

Schools require certain immunizations

Texas state law, rules and regulations require all students to be immunized against diphtheria, tetanus, poliomyelistis, measles, rubella and mumps. Requirements are based on recommendations of the American Academy of Pediatrics and the Advisory Committee on Immunization Practices.

The following immunization requirements are those which must be met by students in their respective age groups.

1. Diphtheria-Tetanus-Pertussis-/Tetanus-Diphtheria (DTP/Td): (All students) at least three doses of vaccine, including one on/or after the fourth birthday. A booster dose is required every 10 years.

2. Polio (OPV): (All students under 18 years of age) at least three doses of vaccine, including one on/or after the fourth birthday. A booster dose is required every 10 years.

3. Measles: (All students) at least one dose of vaccine on/or after the first birthday and since Jan. 1, 1968, or a physician-validated history of illness.

4. Rubella: (All students under 12 years of age) at least one dose of vaccine.

5. Mumps: (All students under 16 years of age) at least one dose of vaccine, or a physician-validated history of illness.

Exceptions to these requirements are allowed on an individual basis.

Immunizations and the resulting prevention of disease provide several benefits, including reduced student and teacher absenteeism; reduced medical cost; and, most importantly, reduced mortality.

Total cost-saving factors cannot be accurately assessed, but they are significant.

Fine arts programs offered at all levels

Students in Midland public schools are offered a comprehensive program of fine arts.

Fine arts instruction is incorporated into regular classroom activities in grades K-3. Beginning in the fourth grade, students receive daily instruction in the arts. These classes are taught by music, art and theater specialists.

At the fifth-grade level, students can enroll for instruction in stringed instruments.

In the seventh grade, students may choose from a wide variety of electives — art, orchestra, band, speech and drama, and choir. Such choices extend up to 12th grade. On each secondary campus, instruction is led by certified teachers.

Approximately 76 percent of Midland Independent School District students receive fine arts instruction each year.

Not only are students afforded the opportunity of taking classes in the arts, they also can participate in various competitive opportunities.

Art students, elementary and secondary, participate each year in community contests — the Fire Prevention Poster Contest, PTA Cultural Arts competition, MISD Student Art Festival, Scholastic Art competition as well as numerous local, state and national competitions selected as appropriate by the individual instructors.

Additionally, the creations of visual arts students are frequently exhibited in the district's central administration building.

The two senior high schools feature art and music in their annual spring Midland High School "Showcase" and Lee High's "Rebels in Review" extravaganzas. Secondary music students compete in a number of contests — solo, ensemble concert, ensemble, All-Region and All-State auditions, and musical meets throughout the state and nation.

Drama students compete in invitational tournaments, University Interscholastic League competition provides students with enriching experiences, evaluative feedback and sportsmanship.

Each year hundreds of school students present programs to Midland civic organizations, serve in seasonal promotions such as the Shriners' Christmas Parade, and perform free and low cost concerts and exhibitions to the gener-

Player files suit

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — A player who suffered a heat stroke during preseason football drills last year has sued Louisville coach Howard Schnellenberger, charging him with negligence.

The suit by Tom Sedam, who was a freshman recruit from Troy, Ohio, claims that on or about Aug. 11, 1989, Schnellenberger "negligently and carelessly failed to properly supervise ... and furnish all necessary supplies and materials, including sufficient amounts of water, so as to cause plaintiff to be injured when he collapsed from a heat stroke."

The lawsuit, filed Tuesday in Jefferson Circuit Court, seeks unspecified damages.

Sedam, who signed a full scholarship with Louisville in February 1989, was listed on a freshman player chart as 6-foot-5 and 266 pounds.

Rose in jail

MARION, Ill. (AP) — Pete Rose, baseball's all-time hits leader, arrived at a federal work camp today to begin serving a five-month sentence for cheating on his taxes.

The former Cincinnati Reds manager arrived at the Southern Illinois prison camp shortly after noon, two days before the court-ordered deadline to turn himself in, according to a statement released by warden John Clark.

"Mr. Rose will have all the rights and obligations as all prisoners and will receive no special privileges," Clark said. "We will have his term pass as uneventfully as possible for him and the other prisoners."

The statement said Rose did not want to talk to reporters and that the prison will respect his request for privacy.

Faldo after yet another major

■ Jack Nicklaus, who knows about winning big events, says the PGA Championship is within NicK Faldo's reach.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — Nick Faldo is The Man in professional golf.

Jack Nicklaus, who held that title so many years, tacitly acknowledged the designation when, during a practice session for the PGA Championship, he told Faldo: "If you believe you can do it, you will. It's that simple."

And Faldo appeared confident he could add a fourth major title in an 17-month period in the tournament that begins Thursday at Shoal Creek.

The tall Englishman put himself at the top of world golf last month when he added the British Open championship to his victories in the last two Masters.

He will attempt to become the first man in 37 years — since Ben Hogan in 1953 — to win three of golf's Big Four titles in a single season in the PGA.

Faldo very nearly had a shot at the unaccomplished Grand Slam, a one-year sweep of all four. He lipped out a 72nd hole putt that would have put him in a playoff for the U.S. Open at Medinah.

"You wonder what might have been," he said. "I gave it a good attempt. It didn't come off. What the heck."

Some of his leading challengers suggest the deep rough and narrow fairways of Shoal Creek play into Faldo's steady hands this week.

"It's a very, very good course for him," said Tom Kite, who last week became golf's first $6 million winner with a victory in Memphis. "He's very long and very, very straight."

Those, the players agree, will be the critical factors.

"You better keep it on the short stuff. No question about it. If you miss a fairway you're going to make bogey 80 percent of the time," Australian Greg Norman said.

"You have no option," defending champion Payne Stewart said. "You hit it in the rough, you chop it back to the fairway and take it from there."

The tangled bermuda rough was cut to 3½ inches, but many of the 150 pros said it is much deeper.

"It must have grown a couple of inches in the last hour," Nicklaus said.

"About like that," Stewart said, and held his hands 8-10 inches apart.

"The most severe I've seen in some time," Faldo said.

The conditions, Norman said, favor a player with a more conservative approach. Faldo's methodical, almost mechanical play has won him a reputation as one of the game's more conservative players.

"Conservative?" Faldo repeated. "I just think it's playing the percentages. You want to be conservative off the tee, aggressive with the irons. That's the key this week."

Whether it's conservative or not, keeping it in the fairway is critical, Kite said.

"The people who have a good week will be the people who put the ball in the fairway," he said, and included himself in the list of those who do just that.

Among the other more noted straight hitters are Paul Azinger, Curtis Strange, U.S. Open title-holder Hale Irwin, Larry Mize and Mike Reid, who let the 1989 PGA title slip through his fingers on the last three holes.

"This should be a good course for Lanny (Wadkins). I expect (Lee) Trevino to have a good week," Nicklaus said.

And, of course, there's Faldo.

"Off what he's done in the majors, there's no question that he's the best player in the world this year," said Norman, who still holds the lead in one widely circulated world ranking system.

"I'm slowly moving my way up the ladder," Faldo admitted.

Soccer as it was intended

■ Thai native Mana Ratanasavetavadhana has been a leader in Midland soccer since 1974.

By Bill Grimes
Staff Writer

You might not be able to pronounce his last name, but you can't deny his impact on local soccer.

While many other people have helped make youth soccer one of Midland's most popular pastimes, Mana Ratanasavetavadhana (RA-ta-na-so-wet-ta-wat) is arguably one of the founding fathers of youth and adult soccer in Midland.

Bringing a love of the game from his Thai homeland, Ratanasavetavadhana helped organize Midland's first youth soccer clinic in 1974, along with then-YMCA official John McVicker and local sports enthusiast Aubrey Linne.

Ratanasavetavadhana then helped form the Midland Soccer Association in 1977 to capture the burgeoning soccer interest, and was also a founder of the Permian Basin (adult) Soccer Association.

Not only does Ratanasavetavadhana still play on a PBSA team, but he also coaches the Fighting Irish youth team, which joined the select ranks this season after dominating MSA recreational leagues for several years.

Linne, a former professional football player who embraced soccer when living in the Dallas area in the 1960s, said Ratanasavetavadhana provided a level of expertise unprecedented in this area.

"He's one of the major reasons that soccer got going," Linne said. "In the early days, anybody that knew anything about soccer was a plus."

But sometimes Mana was guilty of knowing too much, Linne said.

"He was frustrated, because he was a purist and we were playing an Americanized version of the sport. When he first started working with us, he didn't realize how 'retarded' we were.

"He would be trying to get kids to dribble, when they first needed to kick the ball," Linne added.

Ratanasavetavadhana, 39, learned how to play soccer the way it was meant to be played when he was growing up in Thailand, advancing to high-school caliber competition in his hometown of Bangkok. Like many other Thai, he originally came to the United States to attend college.

After one year in college at Los Angeles, Ratanasavetavadhana transferred to Odessa College in 1969.

Talk about culture shock.

"In 1969, there was nothing between Midland and Odessa," Ratanasavetavadhana said. "I got off my plane and thought to myself, 'what kind of place is this.'

"I said I would give myself two days and then I would go back to L.A," he added.

The two days has become 21 years.

In the interim, Ratanasavetavadhana has built a career as an engineering technician with several oil companies — most recently Marathon, and has built a family with wife Betty, a teacher at Quanah Parker Elementary School, that includes son Michael and daughter Ann.

Despite the usual period of adjustment, Mana has become an American citizen.

"I had to get used to eating different food, and the cost of living is relatively high, but this country gives you anything if you work for it," Ratanasavetavadhana said.

"In Thailand, you have your freedom, but the money you make is not ever enough."

Still, Ratanasavetavadhana retains ties to his homeland and family with periodic visits — five times in the past 20 years, including a two-

Oilers, Lions to duel with run-and-shoot

Associated Press

HOUSTON — The Houston Oilers and Detroit Lions open their NFL exhibition schedules in the Astrodome Thursday night, but it will be the space-age run-and-shoot offense that will be on display.

Both teams make exclusive use of the pass-oriented offense.

There will be ceremonies honoring Oilers coach Jack Pardee, Heisman Trophy winner Andre Ware, the Lions' unsigned No. 1 pick, and Oilers No. 1 pick Lamar Lathon. They all performed at the University of Houston last season.

The Oilers will contribute $2 from each ticket sold to the University of Houston.

"Playing against their run-and-shoot or the Silver Stretch, it's not that much different," Pardee said. "It's not that easy to prepare for. I don't think we're easy to prepare for, either."

The Oilers beat the Lions 35-31 in the Astrodome last season.

"We haven't spent training camp preparing go for the run-and-shoot," Pardee said. "We don't have much time to get ready."

Lions coach Wayne Fontes with his offensive coaches Mouse Davis and June Jones became the first NFL club to use run-and-shoot fulltime last season.

The offense got off to a slow start but the Lions won their last five regular season games, finishing with a 7-9 record.

The Oilers used a four-wide receiver formation called the Red Gun last season but also employed a two-back set.

Pardee replaced Jerry Glanville this season and brought the run-and-shoot with him.

Fontes will start Rodney Peete at quarterback instead of Bob Gagliano, who missed the first week of camp as a contract holdout.

"It's just a preseason game but I'm excited about it," Peete said. "I know everyone is ready to line up and play against somebody else."

SOCCER: Irish become select

Ratanasavetavadhana started working on soccer skills with son Michael before the son's third birthday. According to the proud dad, Michael was the youngest-ever MSA player, debuting at three.

"At a real young age, Michael learned everything from me," Ratanasavetavadhana said. The youngster learned so much, in fact, that he overwhelmed the coach of his five-year-old team.

The Fighting Irish were born in 1985, when Michael was seven. The Irish, dubbed as such because of their green jerseys, started out as a neighborhood team in the Fannin Elementary School district.

They remained a neighborhood team until going select this year, but they weren't just any neighborhood team.

By last fall, the Irish were so dominant that Ratanasavetavadhana put his team into the 14-and-under age group for league competition, even though the boys were only 11-year-olds. Despite spotting opponents age and size, the Irish lost a playoff for the division championships last year.

All the while, the Irish have excelled in tournament play. In a two-tournament stretch this summer, the Irish outscored foes 69-2.

Ratanasavetavadhana said the switch to select competition was inevitable, however.

"We didn't have much choice," he said. "It would be bad for us to stay recreational, because we couldn't compete in open and select divisions as a recreational team."

The final decision was made after the Irish lost to a Ciudad Juarez team in El Paso this summer.

"We could see at that point that to make a better team, we had to (go select)."

Soccer-bashing has been in vogue ever since the U.S. team bombed in the World Cup, but you'll find none of that in the Ratanasavetavadhana household.

"Soccer is a special game," Ratanasavetavadhana said. "Everybody can play — it doesn't matter how big and fast you are."

Soccer offers its young players some additional benefits, too. "If a child can develop coordination, he can develop his mind, too.

"Quite a few of our players are in the gifted student program (of the Midland Independent School District)."

"Front Row Seat" is a regular feature of your morning Reporter-Telegram, appearing each Thursday.

Midland falls 9-4

Staff Report

WICHITA, Kan. — Midland lost for the 10th time in 11 games this season here, as the host Wichita Wranglers downed the Angels 9-4 in Texas league baseball play.

The game started with Midland taking the early lead when Wiley Lee scored on a one-out groundout by Johnny Monell to go up 1-0. The Angels added another run in the second to go up 2-0.

But the Wranglers came back with a pair in the fifth to tie the game, and broke the it open with five more in the sixth. Midland tried a comeback of its own in the top of the ninth, but the rally fell short after he Haloes scored two additional runs.

The Angels and Wranglers play here again tonight with a 7:30 p.m. start. The third and fourth games of the six-game series will be played as a Friday doubleheader, with the first game beginning at 5:15 p.m.

Fans make the call

AUSTIN (AP) — NBC-TV affiliate KXAN has decided to let fans decide whether the Dallas Cowboys or Houston Oilers football game on Sept. 9 will be televised locally.

NBC has the rights to both games, and KXAN-TV, Channel 36, decided rather than choosing itself to let viewers pick the game that will be shown.

Kosar greets Infante during Browns drills

Associated Press

It was just like old times for Bernie Kosar and Lindy Infante.

Infante and Kosar were together in Cleveland during the 1986 and 1987 seasons, when Infante, now head coach of the Green Bay Packers, was offensive coordinator.

They were reunited Wednesday when the Browns practiced at Green Bay, Wis., for Saturday's exhibition game against the Packers.

"How you doing?" Kosar said, moving over and extending his hand to Infante, who had been greeting old friends for 15 minutes.

"Good to see you Bernie," Infante said. "I'll talk to you later. You're in drills, aren't you? I don't want you to miss anything."

Kosar said Infante's attention to detail is one reason his offenses are so successful. Kosar passed for a career-high 3,854 yards in 1986 and had 3,033 yards and a career-high 22 touchdowns in 1987.

"If I didn't have two good years in Cleveland, I wouldn't be here," Infante said. "Bernie is probably the reason I have the job."

Redskins

Washington defensive end Markus Koch reported to camp prepared to sign a contract. Koch, a fifth-year player who once walked out of training camp and said he would take up carpentry, ended a seven-day holdout.

NFL

Defensive tackle Darryl Grant and linebacker Ravin Caldwell are the only players still not in camp.

The Redskins are one of three or four teams talking trade with Cleveland about Frank Minnifield, a Pro Bowl cornerback who is holding out for about $1.2 million.

Dolphins

Receiver Scott Schwedes, whose roster spot is in jeopardy, ended his contract holdout and joined the team. That leaves the Dolphins with five unsigned players.

Running back George Swarn, bothered by an ankle injury, was waived and placed on injured reserve. Defensive end John Bosa also was placed on injured reserve.

Coach Don Shula said rookie fullback Leroy Holt's neck injury, at first thought not to be serious, could sideline him for the season.

Falcons

Defensive lineman Tony Casillas said he will sit out the 1990 season if the Falcons don't pay him what he thinks he is worth.

SWC, Big Eight confer

Associated Press

OKLAHOMA CITY — Officials from 12 schools in the Big Eight and Southwest conferences met Wednesday to talk about issues facing the two leagues and to lay the groundwork for possible future meetings.

The closed-door meeting — the first ever between the leagues — resulted in nothing concrete, which came as no surprise to the athletic directors and conference commissioners present.

"It was a great opportunity just to exchange ideas and I think it was beneficial to all of us," said Carl James, Big Eight commissioner.

"There's not a sense of urgency," said Frank Windegger, athletic director at Texas Christian. "It was really what we thought going in — an exchange of dialogue between conferences."

Those in attendance touched on topics ranging from drug testing to the possibility of a regional television package in the future.

"Two things are the primary focuses on our minds," said Dan Gibbens of Oklahoma, chairman of the Big Eight faculty representatives. "One is the fact there have been some shifts in other conference alliances and it's recognized that might present some additional opportunities, possibilities and concerns.

The other thing is the nature of the television — football television in particular — situation."

He added, however, that the two leagues are not moving toward an alliance or merger at this time. "We're exploring common grounds," he said.

Oklahoma athletic director Donnie Duncan said the constant talk of schools jumping conferences or thinking about jumping is "almost athletic hysteria."

"It's senseless for rational people to get into that mode, and we're not in that mode," he said.

Seven of the teams in the Big Eight were represented at the 4½-hour meeting. Five teams from the Southwest Conference were represented, although one of those without a representative was Texas.

Volvo awards MC for tennis rankings

Staff Report

Midland College tennis coach Joe Williams has accepted $2,000 for the MC tennis programs from the Volvo Tennis/Varsity Awards Program.

The announcement was made Tuesday by the Intercollegiate Tennis Coaches Association, which administers the program. The awards were $1,500 for the MC women's program, which was ranked first nationally, and $500 for the MC men's program that ranked fourth.

This was the first year of the unique awards of more than $60,000 presented by Volvo North America to recognize coaches who documented their successful efforts to publicize their tennis programs and contributed community service on behalf of tennis.

"We are grateful for the Volvo/ITCA awards, and for the support which we receive from the community," Williams said. "The funds will be used to help offset the cost of travel by our teams during the coming year."

Williams was cited for his work in development of tennis at the junior high and high school level in the community. He and his varsity squads also presented a salute to tennis in Midland last spring at the Chaparral Center.

Volvo announced that it would continue the Varsity Awards Program for the 1990-91 season. For 1990, a maximum of five awards was given in each women's and men's Division I region and small college division (II, III, NAIA, and junior college), with first through fifth place determined by a team's position in the Volvo ITCA rankings relative to other schools that entered. Wild card awards were available to unranked teams.

In the junior college men, the ranked teams in order included Tyler Junior College; Abraham Baldwin, Ga.; West Valley, Calif.; MC; and Long Beach, Calif. The women's rankings were: MC; Cooke County; Tyler; San Jacinto; and Paris.

The coach of one of those teams, Brenda Burgess of Paris, is a former varsity tennis player at MC.

Baltimore rookie conquers Athletics

Associated Press

American

Orioles 4, Athletics 1

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Rookie Ben McDonald became the first Baltimore pitcher to win his first four major league starts and Oakland hit into its first triple play since 1977 Wednesday in Baltimore's 4-1 victory over the Athletics.

McDonald (4-0) gave up four hits in 5⅓ innings, his shortest start of the season. Relievers Mark Williamson, Jeff Ballard and Gregg Olson held the Athletics to one hit the rest of the way.

Olson worked the last 1 2-3 for his 26th save. A double by Jose Canseco in the eighth was just the second hit Oakland has in 33 at-bats against Olson.

Baltimore was aided by a two-on, none out triple play in the seventh inning.

Trailing 4-1, Oakland had Walt Weiss at first and Terry Steinbach at second as Ballard faced Willie Randolph. On a hit-and-run play, Randolph lined out to Ballard, who threw to shortstop Cal Ripken at second, and Ripken threw uncontested to Sam Horn at first for the triple play.

Indians 5, Rangers 3

Chris James had his fifth straight two-hit game, including a single that started a string of five consecutive hits in the fourth inning, and the Cleveland Indians beat Texas.

Rookie Jeff Shaw (2-2) got his second major-league victory, both over Texas. He allowed two runs on five hits in 5⅔ innings. Doug Jones, the third Cleveland pitcher, worked the ninth for his 29th save, allowing Harold Baines' 12th homer.

The Indians scored four runs on six hits in the fourth against Jamie Moyer (1-4).

Blue Jays 8, Tigers 3

Pat Borders had a homer among three hits, drove in three runs and scored three to lead Toronto over Detroit.

Borders, with his 13th, and Glenallen Hill, with his 11th, homered consecutively in the seventh inning as the Blue Jays sent the Tigers to their fourth loss in five games. David Wells (8-3) went the first five innings for Toronto, allowing two runs on eight hits.

Fred McGriff led off a three-run Toronto second against Walt Terrill (0-1) with his 25th home run.

Royals 5, White Sox 1

Kevin Seitzer tied a Kansas City team record with three doubles and Tom Gordon pitched a four-hitter as the Royals beat Chicago despite Carlton Fisk's history-making home run.

Fisk, a 19-year veteran, hit a 1-2 pitch from Gordon over the left-field fence in the seventh inning, tying Johnny Bench for the all-time homer lead among catchers with 327. Fisk was the only Chicago player to reach second base.

Twins 4, Brewers 2

Rookie Scott Erickson allowed five hits in seven innings and hot-hitting Randy Bush had his second homer in as many games as Minnesota beat Milwaukee.

The Twins had lost four in a row and seven of their last eight. The Brewers had won two in a row after an eight-game losing streak.

Bush, who is 17-for-44 since coming off a two-month stint on the disabled list on July 19, hit a two-run homer off Mark Knudson (8-6).

Yankees 6, Mariners 4

Jesse Barfield, batting for Mel Hall, who had homered earlier, hit a two-run shot to lead the New York Yankees to their fourth straight victory.

Trailing 4-3 in the seventh inning, the Yankees tied the score on a leadoff single by Alvaro Espinoza off Brian Holman and a two-out RBI double by Oscar Azocar off reliever Keith Comstock.

Dawson's RBI beats Cards in 15th

Associated Press

National

It doesn't take long to get into bad habits, but Andre Dawson got over his in time to single home the winning run in the 15th inning Wednesday, leading the Chicago Cubs to a 4-3 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals.

Dawson singled with two outs and the bases loaded to give the Cubs their fifth straight victory and their 17th in 22 games. It also lifted them into fourth place in the NL East with a .4818 percentage, .0003 ahead of the Philadelphia Phillies, who lost to the New York Mets 8-4.

"The last two days I've been overanxious and swinging at borderline pitches," Dawson said. "The worst thing you can do is to try to make things happen instead of letting the opposition come to you."

Dawson singled home Joe Girardi from third on a 1-2 pitch from Scott Terry.

"It was a slider going away," Dawson said. "I stayed back on it."

Bill Long (5-0), the fifth Chicago pitcher, pitched one inning and was the winner.

Giants 8, Astros 4

Greg Litton's tie-breaking, two-run pinch double sparked San Francisco's three-run eighth inning as the Giants beat Houston, snapping the Astros' six-game winning streak.

Trevor Wilson (8-3) pitched seven innings, giving up four runs and seven hits, to help the Giants snap a three-game losing streak. Mark Thurmond pitched two innings for his fourth save.

With the score 4-4, Juan Agosto (5-7) walked pinch-hitter Bill Bathe and then hit Brett Butler with a pitch. Litton, hitting for Mike Kingery, doubled into the right-center field gap scoring pinch-runner Scott Garrelts and Butler.

Mets 8, Phillies 4

Gregg Jefferies and Darryl Strawberry each drove in three runs and David Cone won for the seventh time in eight decisions as New York beat Philadelphia to end a four-game losing streak.

Cone (8-5) allowed five hits and two runs in 7⅔ innings and struck out five. Wally Whitehurst finished with one-hit relief.

Carman (5-1) made his first start since Sept. 17 and gave up six runs, 10 hits and six walks in four innings. He had won six straight decisions.

Dodgers 4, Reds 2

Mike Scioscia went 4-for-4 and drove in two runs Wednesday night to back Fernando Valenzuela's seven-hitter and lead Los Angeles Dodgers over struggling Cincinnati.

The Reds' 12th loss in 16 games allowed San Francisco to move within five games in the National League West. The Giants beat Houston 8-4 earlier Wednesday.

Valenzuela (9-9) earned only his third victory in nine decisions on the road this season. The left-hander entered the game with an 0-4 record and a 7.78 earned run average on artificial turf.

Valenzuela struck out four and walked one in his fourth complete game in 23 starts.

Expos 6, Pirates 2

Tim Raines broke out of an 0-for-18 slump with two run-scoring doubles to back Dennis Martinez's six-hitter as Montreal beat Pittsburgh.

The Expos stopped their own season-high six-game losing streak with only their second victory in 11 games while cutting Pittsburgh's lead over New York to 1½ games.

Martinez (8-8), rocked for 20 hits and 12 runs in 12⅔ innings in his previous two starts, improved to 7-2 lifetime against Pittsburgh. He walked one and struck out five in pitching his fifth complete game of the season.

Braves 7, Padres 1

Dave Justice hit two homers for the second straight game as the Atlanta Braves snapped a seven-game losing streak with a victory over San Diego.

After Joe Carter put the Padres ahead with his 19th home run, a solo shot leading off the second, Justice hit his 12th, a two-run blast off Dennis Rasmussen (8-10) in the bottom of the inning following Greg Olson's single, for a 2-1 lead.

Spurs extend Cummings' existing pact

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Veteran forward Terry Cummings and the San Antonio Spurs have agreed to extend Cummings' existing contract by four years.

Team executives and Cummings announced the agreement Wednesday after weeks of sporadic negotiations. At one point Cummings, who has two years remaining on his current $1.7 million per season contract, said he was considering leaving basketball to pursue private business interests.

Cummings has said he would like to retire in San Antonio. He said he's looking forward to the upcoming season and is glad the agreement was reached.

"We got a lot taken care of," Cummings said. "I really love this city and the team, and I'm looking forward to winning a championship."

Families of soldiers begin wait

Associated Press

Soldiers packed and shipped out to the Middle East on Wednesday, leaving behind frightened civilians and tearful wives and fiancees. Others rode the rumor mill wondering if they would be the next to be mobilized.

"They're going. They are definitely going. There is no doubt in my mind that this is another war," said Effie Parsons, 23, a clerk at a convenience store near Fort Bragg, N.C., home of the 82nd Airborne Division.

President Bush ordered U.S. forces to Saudi Arabia to help it repel a potential attack by Iraq, which invaded neighboring Kuwait last week.

Bush specifically mentioned the 82nd. Pentagon sources, speaking on condition of anonymity, said they also expected deployment of the 24th Division (Mechanized) from Fort Stewart, Ga. and the 101st Airborne Division from Fort Campbell, Ky. Elements of those three units would be deployed with the 18th Airborne Corps, a control unit at Fort Bragg that directs the combat divisions, the sources said.

A soldier at Fort Bragg, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said about 2,000 soldiers from there were to go to Saudi Arabia and that some of that force had left Tuesday night.

On Wednesday, truckloads of soldiers and supplies were seen driving toward Pope Air Force Base, which adjoins Fort Bragg.

Early in the week, convenience store clerks said sales of chewing tobacco, batteries and insect repellent were brisk as soldiers hurriedly stocked up.

"A lot of fathers are coming in with their kids, holding them real tight" and many wives are in tears as they make their purchases, said Ms. Parsons.

But by Wednesday there was a tremendous dropoff in business, said assistant store manager Wade Felman.

Felman, comparing this deployment with the Panamanian deployment of December 1989, said the atmosphere now is much more tense and wives coming in are more nervous.

"The Panamanian thing, I guess, seemed so small to them," he said. "I think this thing is a little more worrisome."

One of the 82nd's soldiers, Pfc. Mark Ohmer, was to marry Angela Nelson, 19, in suburban Detroit this Saturday. The $6,000 wedding was postponed when he was called back to base.

"It happened so fast. I'm so upset," Nelson said. "Iraq does a lot of chemical warfare, and Mark's job is to deactivate chemical weapons and deactivate contamination of soldiers. He also was taught to dismantle bombs."

While the Pentagon sources said the 101st Airborne also was going, spokesmen for the 14,000-soldier division at Fort Campbell continued to deny that Wednesday.

That didn't convince people just outside the post gates in Clarksville, Tenn., and Fort Campbell, Ky.

"Everybody's a little nervous; you never know what can happen," said Tammy Bradford, whose husband Mike is a 101st infantryman.

U.S. to block any Iraqi push into Saudi Arabia

By Susanne M. Schafer
AP Military Writer

WASHINGTON — U.S. warplanes and combat troops, backed by an armada of Navy ships, have taken up defensive positions in and near Saudi Arabia, U.S. military officials said Wednesday. At least one National Guard unit was called up for active duty.

Defense Secretary Dick Cheney described the deployment as "a major commitment of U.S. forces" that included elements of the 82nd Airborne Division and F-15 fighter jets. He declined to provide specifics, citing security concerns.

Terming the military situation "uncertain" after Iraq President Saddam Hussein's "act of infamy" in invading Kuwait, Cheney indicated American forces could be in the region for months.

About 5,000 ground troops and more than 100 F-15 fighter planes were ordered to the region, congressional and Pentagon sources reported. Nearly 40 warships and escort vessels — some armed with sophisticated cruise missiles programmed to destroy specific Iraqi targets — will be in Mideast waters by next week, the sources said.

What was announced in Washington was evidently only part of the story, and reports of other troop movements arrived throughout the day.

Gov. Jim Florio of New Jersey announced in Trenton that the 170th Air Refueling Group of his state's Air National Guard had been called up.Details were classified, the governor said.

Rep. John Spratt, D-S.C., said A-10 air-to-ground attack jets from Myrtle Beach Air Force Base had left for Saudi Arabia. Unlike the F-15, an "air superiority" fighter designed to tangle with other planes, the A-10 was designed to attack ground targets, and its six-barrelled 30mm anti-tank cannon has been described as the best anti-tank weapon in the world.

Diplomatic sources in Saudi Arabia said 4,000 U.S. Marines had been deployed at Khafji, a Saudi oil-terminal town on the border with Kuwait.

One of the diplomatic sources said the U.S. ground commitment would be 30,000.

The movement of troops, ships and planes will take "several days at least," said one Pentagon source early Wednesday evening.

This source, speaking on condition of anonymity, noted that most of the 82nd Airborne Division was still in the United States. He did not, however, say how much of the division would be moved to Saudi Arabia.

The build-up appeared to be going well without major difficulties, the source said.

At present, two aircraft carriers bristling with 80 to 90 aircraft each are within striking distance of Iraqi targets. Another is on the way.

"Our purpose ... is to deter any further Iraqi aggression," Cheney said. He said he expected other nations to join the military effort but declined to name any except Britain.

"The mission of the armed forces is to take up defensive positions," said Gen. Colin Powell, the chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

Powell expressed confidence American sailors, soldiers and airmen were prepared for battle in the hostile, desert environment if called upon.

"We've trained for it, we've exercised in it," he said.

And while Iraq's million-man army has been hardened by its eight-year war with Iran, he said, "They are not invincible. They are not ten feet tall."

Cheney and Powell briefed a packed room of reporters in the Pentagon, standing in front of a map of the Saudi region that identified some of the major U.S. units that had been deployed, but not all of them.

Asked for information on U.S. troop movements or the size of the sudden deployment, Powell replied simply: "You can be sure that for the mission we have been given we will put in adequate forces."

Cheney and Powell said the aircraft carrier USS Independence and its support ships have taken up positions just outside the Persian Gulf and the carrier USS Eisenhower is in the Red Sea — not far from the end point of an Iraqi oil pipeline and within range for the carrier's aircraft and other weapons to engage Iraqi forces.

Powell said the troops brought with them protective clothing and medical supplies to be used in the event Iraq uses chemical weapons against the American forces.

The briefing came after President Bush delivered a nationally televised address announcing his decision to send U.S. forces into the tense Persian Gulf region.

Morocco, Egypt won't take part

LONDON (AP) — Britain pledged military backing Wednesday for a U.S.-led multinational force to deter Iraqi aggression. West Germany, Italy and Spain offered bases, but Egypt and Morocco — considered the likeliest Arab participants — refused to join.

Secretary of State James A. Baker III made a surprise announcement that the United States also is turning to Syria and Iran as potential partners to rein in Iraq, though U.S. relations with both have long been hostile.

The enmity between Syria and Iraq is possibly surpassed only by that between Iran and Iraq.

En route to Turkey, Baker told reporters he was sending an envoy to Syria and confirmed the United States has been in touch with Iran through "third party contacts."

British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, responding to a direct appeal from Saudi Arabia's King Fahd as well as U.S. requests, was the only leader to offer ships and planes for the multinational force.

Despite leaks by U.S. sources at the Pentagon that Egypt and Morocco were potential members, both countries denied any agreement to participate.

President Hosni Mubarak of Egypt spurned the U.S.-led multinational force, whose first troops and aircraft landed in Saudi Arabia on Wednesday. But he said Egypt would consider committing troops to an Arab force that would act as a buffer between Iraq and Kuwait.

Mubarak will act as host at an emergency Arab summit on Thursday in Cairo to discuss the crisis sparked by Iraqi President Saddam Hussein's invasion of Kuwait last Thursday. Saddam proclaimed Wednesday he had annexed Kuwait.

Mubarak spokesman Mohammed Abdel-Monein on Wednesday listed the countries that would attend as Saudi Arabia, Syria, Algeria, Djibouti, the United Arab Emirates, Yemen, Libya and Qatar. Egypt's Middle East News Agency also listed Morocco and Jordan.

Libyan leader Col. Moammar Gadhafi arrived in Egypt Wednesday night.

The Kuwaiti news agency Kuna said it was told by Sheikh Sabah Al-Ahmed Al Jaber, deputy prime minister and foreign minister in the exiled Kuwaiti government, that the exiled administration accepted an invitation to attend.

Kuna quoted exiled government sources as saying Crown Prince Sheikh Saad Al-Abdullah Alsalim, prime minister in exile, would lead the delegation.
