Leaders, people join in Humphrey tribute

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) — The powerful with whom Hubert H. Humphrey served so long, and the humble whom he served with such boundless energy, are paying final tribute to the Minnesota senator.

Vice President Walter F. Mondale, a fellow Minnesotan and a Humphrey protege, accompanied the late senator and his family on the return trip to Minnesota for today's funeral.

President Carter, who led the tributes at a memorial service in the U.S. Capitol on Sunday, also planned to fly here for the funeral.

Humphrey lay in state in a flag-draped coffin in the Rotunda of the Minnesota Capitol while, through the night, the people who elected him five times to the Senate slowly walked by. Many wept silently.

The temperature never rose above the mid-teens, and during the night it dropped below zero.

But despite the frigid temperatures, the people waited. They sang "America the Beautiful," "God Bless America" and "We Shall Overcome." They waited for their turn to pay silent farewell to the man who retained his optimism and enthusiasm despite bitter political setbacks, and even through the long agony of a losing fight against cancer.

"He had a little more love for people, for all of us," said one

Hope still dim for energy plan

By TOM RAUM

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congressmen returning to the unfinished task of producing a national energy policy will find natural gas price controls remain the biggest stumbling block to enacting that legislation.

Although President Carter, who favors continuing the controls at higher levels, predicted at a recent news conference that a compromise would be forthcoming, no ready breakthroughs are in sight as Congress begins its 1978 session this week.

The House-Senate conference committee on energy legislation is expected to go back to work next week and pick up where it left off — although no formal meeting has yet been called for the group.

But congressional aides said that despite the fact that some of the principal members of the committee conferred by telephone over the long holiday recess, no specific compromises are now on the drawing board.

Carter has called enactment of his energy legislation, submitted to Congress last April, his No. 1 domestic priority and has expressed hope that lawmakers could complete work on it early in the session.

His program seeks to conserve energy and make the nation less dependent on imported oil through a program of taxing and regulating scarce energy sources, with corresponding incentives and tax breaks for energy-saving steps.

But the congressional conferees working on a compromise bill are stymied between Carter's plan to continue price controls on natural gas and a rival Senate bill to deregulate gas prices after two years.

Senate conferees have been deadlocked nine-to-nine between the two approaches.

New uncertainty was injected into the situation last week with the death of Sen. Lee Metcalf, D-Mont., a conferee who along with Sen. Henry M. Jackson, the Senate energy committee chairman, favors keeping price controls on natural gas.

Gasless town struggling through

CRYSTAL CITY, Texas (AP) — This is a winter of discontent and despair for many of the 8,100 residents of Crystal City.

"I'm getting out of here, maybe to California," says Henry Perales, 67, sawing a log to be burned in a wood stove inside his one-story frame home in this southern Texas ranching and farming community.

Crystal City's natural gas service was terminated last September, when temperatures were in the 80s, after a battle over prices.

Most of the residents are Mexican-Americans, and many, like Perales and Mayor Francisco Benavides, work in the fields surrounding the town. Nearly two-thirds of Crystal City's residents have income below the federal poverty level of $5,050 for a family of four, according to City Manager Raul Flores. The unemployment rate is nearly 20 percent.

When natural gas prices began soaring several years ago, the city-owned utility maintained it would pay only the amount it agreed to in a contract with its gas supplier, LoVaca Gathering Co.

But, the regulatory Texas Railroad Commission allowed LoVaca to pass on to its customers the higher prices it had to pay to get natural gas. And courts upheld the action.

Crystal City officials, saying the town's residents simply could not pay nearly $2 per thousand cubic feet of natural gas, continued paying only the contract price of about 35 cents.

The town's utility eventually accrued an $810,000 debt to LoVaca. After months of litigation and negotiation over the contested debt, LoVaca, through a computer 200 miles away, cut off the pipeline flow of gas to Crystal City on Sept. 23.

The city is using $310,000 in federal funds to supply propane tanks to the poorest of the 1,700 former gas customers. But the propane, at 40 cents to 50 cents a gallon, is about twice as expensive as the natural gas that once was piped into town.

The city provided the first tankful of propane free, but many of the tanks are empty now, and some residents cannot afford refills.

The Zavala County Economic Development Corp., through Civil Defense, is issuing propane-burning stoves, leftovers from the Korean War era that come crated and coated with oil for preservation.

Jesus Salas, overseer of the stove project, says about 200 of the stoves had been issued to needy residents recently. Fifty were issued in one day, depleting the supply on hand. More were ordered.

Many families, despite the chill, still are cooking outdoors.

"It's faster and cheaper than using the electric hot plates," said one woman as she prepared the noon meal. Her family and some friends huddled around a nearby fire as she cooked over glowing coals.

At a local restaurant, customers keep their heavy coats on while they sip hot coffee or cold beer. The restaurant's kitchen has butane for its stoves, but the dining room is unheated.

During January, nighttime temperatures average just under 40 degrees, often dipping into the low 20s.

"We're all sticking together. We knew it would be rough," said Ramon Mata, a city councilman.

The city is continuing its legal battle against LoVaca, and there is some optimism since the Railroad Commission recently ordered the company to refund $1.6 billion in overcharges to customers. That amount is the difference between the contract price the customers agreed to and the amount which LoVaca later charged.

Carter's marks getting lower

WASHINGTON (AP) — As Jimmy Carter reaches the end of his first year in the Oval Office, the American people give his work the lowest marks of his term an Associated Press-NBC News poll shows.

Even Carter's seven-nation foreign tour failed to improve his showing, except for a slight increase in the rating of his foreign policy work.

About 57 percent of those interviewed rated his overall job performance "only fair" or "poor," the poll taken last week showed.

Only 41 percent rated Carter's performance as excellent or good. The remaining 2 percent were undecided.

The telephone survey of 1,604 Americans last Tuesday and Wednesday found the slide in Carter's popularity that started last summer continued into the first weeks of 1978.

The rating of Carter's performance, as measured by NBC News polls, began at a high level in his first weeks in office, only to slide by last April.

Then Carter's trip to England and a summit conference of Western leaders in early May helped boost his positive rating to 61 percent, while 37 percent of those questioned gave him negative marks.

Even Carter's nine-day, seven-nation tour that opened 1978 did not boost his overall rating, as foreign trips often do for American presidents. His January marks were slightly below those registered in an AP-NBC News poll in late November. In that sampling, 43 percent rated his performance excellent or good while 54 percent said his work was only fair or poor.

The seven-nation journey apparently did give a slight boost to Americans' opinion of Carter's performance in the foreign arena, especially his role in the Middle East peace negotiations.

About 55 percent of those questioned rated Carter's foreign policy performance negatively, versus 39 percent who gave him positive marks.

DXing with 'hillbilly' leads to 73 sign-off

Amateur radioman Dewey Baucum was running through the meter bands in search of a fellow radio buff who wanted to exchange some dialogue.

He just wanted to talk and listen.

'Twas a fluke that he made contact with a guy named Paul Vrobel, who was doing some DXing out of West Virginia. (DXing is making long-distance hook-ups, particularly with hams in far-away lands.)

After exchanging call letters, they got to know each other by initially talking about one of mankind's most topical subjects: the weather.

"The weather here is cool," Baucum said over his rig. "We're kind of south of the weather, Paul. We're extremely dry . . . . We're in the semi-arid region of Texas." (The talk was before last night's drizzle.)

They were fast becoming pencil pals via the air waves.

Vrobel, who signs on the air with the identifying call letters W8GMD, said the weather was not so dry up around Morgantown, W. Va.

"Our ground here is sloppy wet," Vroble said. "It's a lot different from your weather there."

The see-saw conversation, which was to last the better part of the noon-time hour, drifted, but with order, from one thing to another.

Vrobel, who's 64 and retired, was making his leisurely day more interesting by establishing some radio contacts. Baucum, who's stuck with the call letters WB5CDD, was doing some "hamming" in his radio shack at home during his lunch hour. He's an agriculture teacher.

They exchanged sketchy personal profiles to let the other know what sort of fellow he was . . . and is.

Whatever the topic, the con-

Israel, Egypt prepare to resume peace talks

JERUSALEM (AP) — The Israeli and Egyptian foreign ministers met informally over lunch today preparing for the formal resumption of peace talks after the two sides worked out a compromise on the agenda's wording of the Palestinian issue.

Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance was flying in from Washington to take part in the next round of negotiations, opening Tuesday after a one-day delay.

Over the weekend, the agenda dispute had threatened to severely set back the peace process. Vance postponed his departure from Washington to put pressure on the two sides, and on Sunday they reached

Mrs. Hood dies in fire

TUCSON, Ariz. — Mrs. H. C. Hood, 62, of Midland, died of smoke inhalation in a fire that struck her home in Skyline Country Club Estates here early this morning.

Mrs. Hood, whose given name was Helen, was the wife of H. C. Hood, an independent oil producer and a member of the board of directors of The Midland National Bank. Their home in Midland was at 2206 Western Drive.

According to reports, Mrs. Hood apparently was able to leave the burning house and run to her car, where she turned on the car lights and sounded the horn, to alert the neighborhood.

Fire officials theorized this morning that she then went back into the house in a futile effort to rescue two small dogs. Her body was found in the living room near the fireplace. The living room was severely damaged by the fire.

The two dogs were found dead, also of smoke inhalation, in another part of the house. There was extensive damage throughout the house.

On learning of his wife's death, Hood left immediately for Tucson. Information concerning services was not available as of noon today.

Job openings evident with fair

Tremendous needs for machinists, welders and mechanics are evident as Midland and Odessa employers pool their openings for the Job Matching Fair planned Saturday.

The fair is scheduled from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. Saturday at the Aquilla Hanger at the Midland Regional Air Terminal.

Other examples of jobs listed as the registration enters the final week are teachers, salesmen, grounds keepers, draftsmen, stenographers, building inspectors, appraisers, sewing machine operators, painters, engineers and janitors.

"We are encouraging people from throughout the state to come to this fair because of the wide variety of jobs that will be available," said E. H. Sheffield, manager of the Community Services Department. "We feel that anyone who needs a job will have an excellent opportunity of finding one here."

Job seekers who wish to attend are urged to preregister by contacting their local Texas Employment Commission to have their qualifications forwarded.

This is the second Job Matching Fair held in the Midland-Odessa area. More than 500 job seekers found employment at the fair held last March.

"We believe this fair will be even more successful than the first one," Sheffield said. "Area employers are more enthusiastic and we have a greater number participating. Most of them took part in the last fair and they know that it is a successful means of filling vacancies."

Working locally with the Industrial Commission to promote the fair are the Midland Chamber of Commerce, the Odessa Chamber of Commerce, the Texas Employment Commission, the Permian Basin Regional Planning Commission and the Regional Texas Association of Business.

Order against church stops sale of bonds

AUSTIN — A cease and desist order against the further sale of bonds has been issued here against Bethel Baptist Church and Bethel Baptist Christian Day School Inc. of Midland, said State Securities Commissioner Richard Latham today.

Latham also issued a cease and desist order against the Grace Baptist Church, in Big Spring.

He said the action followed complaints received by his office that the church organization were not able to pay back bondholders as they tended bonds for redemption.

Bethel Baptist had authority to issue a total of $1,980,000 in bonds, but Latham said he could not say how many of the bonds were outstanding at the time the church became unable to meet the redemption schedules.

Latham said the order does not necessarily mean the doom of the organizations involved. He said in the past this action has united the congregations together and made them more viable, so that eventually the restraining order could be lifted.

"I don't mean for the action to be taken as anything detrimental to the minister or the congregation. It's just a matter of financial difficulty. Nothing that should create a cloud over anyone," Latham said.

Rev. Roy S. Day, pastor of Bethel Baptist Church, could not be reached today for comment.

The cease and desist order against Grace Baptist Church of Big Spring was not connected with current income tax charges against Rev. Roy Honea, pastor of the church, Latham said.

The Rev. Honea is scheduled to go on trial Jan. 25 on two counts of filing false income tax returns.

Border war gets hotter

The Los Angeles Times

BANGKOK, Thailand — The month-long Vietnam-Cambodia border war — which appeared stalemated a few days ago — is growing hotter and potentially more dangerous.

According to Western experts here, the initially defeated Cambodian border divisions have made a surprising recovery. Split into smaller guerrilla-style units, they are on the attack in several areas. Cambodian troops have crossed into Vietnam to attack the town of Ha Tien on the Gulf of Thailand.

The Vietnamese invasion force has made some sizable withdrawals, although it continues to fight aggressively from about eight major fire bases established from five to 10 miles within Cambodian territory.

Vietnamese field commanders are under orders to expand these bridgeheads and "seek and destroy" Cambodian troop units, the Western sources said.

The Cambodian commanders are under orders to attack the Vietnamese whereever they are vulnerable and take no prisoners, these sources said. Some prisoners are known to have been executed. The Vietnamese are known to have captured at least 400 prisoners, probably many more.

Fragmentary but sometimes detailed information from various sources indicates the Vietnames army commanders were surprised by the sudden resurgence of the Cambodians. The original invasion plan has evidently been altered. The armored columns operating deep within the so-called Parrot's Beak area appear to have been pulled back.

At the memorial service in Washington, President Carter summed it up, calling Humphrey "the most beloved of all Americans."

Former Presidents Gerald R. Ford and Richard M. Nixon, and Lady Bird Johnson, widow of President Lyndon B. Johnson, were among the mourners who heard Carter say: "We and our families are here today to testify that Hubert Humphrey may well have blessed our country more than any of us."

Carter and Mondale noted that Humphrey had asked that memorials to him be celebrations rather than mourning.

agreement on the agenda.

Informed sources said Egypt had proposed that the agenda list discussion of "the Palestinian issue." Israel wanted it to read discussion of "the Palestinian Arabs in Judea, Samaria and the Gaza district," Judea and Samaria being the historical Jewish designations of the West Bank of the Jordan River.

An official in Washington said the United States proposed a wording that "doesn't prejudice the positions of either side." One report said it called for discussion of "the West Bank and the Gaza Strip."

An Israeli source said the two sides decided to include two versions of the Palestinian issue on the working agenda: Egyptian wording referring to the "West Bank," and the Israeli version referring to "Judea and Samaria."

Israeli Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan met today with Egypt's Mohammed Ibrahim Kamel over a lunch of trout, beef and an Egyptian rice dish to complete preparations for Tuesday's session.

Briefing Israeli reporters, Dayan said Israel was satisfied with the agenda and had not made major concessions.

Officials involved 'exaggerated'

The Washington Post

SEOUL, South Korea — The preliminary interrogation of Tongsun Park indicates that speculation on the number of officials criminally involved with him in the congressional influence-buying case has been "wildly exaggerated," Assistant Attorney General Benjamin Civiletti said Sunday night.

When questioned about many subjects possibly involved, Park's responses were "totally negative" in the "vast majority" of cases, Civiletti said.

Civiletti also implied that Park's testimony here did not implicate seriously in criminal cases present Members of Congress.

Civiletti said that on the basis of Park's responses so far "with regard to criminal actions there are only a handful of possible criminal charges against former officials and non-officials."

The Justice Department official also deplored leaks to newspapers about persons mentioned in Park's testimony as having accepted large sums of money in the scheme to win support for South Korea in Congress.

He called the leaks "regrettable" and said they might come close to "breaching the spirit" of the joint U.S.-South Korean agreement under which Park is being questioned here.

However, he said he does not believe that the news stories would case a legal cloud over any potential prosecution of those named. He said no Justice Department official was involved in the leaks.

Civiletti was interviewed as he prepared for the renewed questioning of Park on Monday morning in the Seoul district prosecutor's office. Park was questioned on a large number of possible recipients of his largesse on Friday and Saturday mornings.

Civiletti said that the renewed interrogation will begin to zero in on details of the alleged scheme to influence Congress. Questions during the first day and a half, he said, comprised a "survey" of the case, apparently intended to measure the scope of involvement by members and past members of Congress and the Executive Branch. Civiletti refused to comment on any specific allegations of bribery or gift-giving.

There have been a variety of reports on the number of persons potentially implicated in the case and the accounts have ranged from gifts of jewelry and small sums of money in some instances to thousands of dollars in others.

Speculation that between 20 and 40 persons might be involved is "absolutely exaggerated" from the standpoint of criminal charges growing out of Park's testimony here, Civiletti said.

"The survey interrogation confirms that speculation about the involvement of great numbers of officials has been wildly exaggerated," he said. "It confirms our view that insofar as serious and careful evaluation with regard to criminal action is confirmed there are only a handful of possible criminal charges against former officials and non-officials."

versation invariably returned to the hams' No. 1 flair — radio talk.

Baucum said he has been into amateur radio really seriously only in the past year. His initial interest, however, was whetted early in the 1970s.

Vrobel said that he has had his ham license since '39.

"It's a good hobby . . . real good for the young and old, especially for shut-ins," he said.

He talked about DXing.

"You've got the world at your fingertips," Vrobel said.

Pretty soon, he was talking about his family — particularly about his son-in-law, a mathematician.

"He's pretty good at math, not because he's my son-in-law, but he's a pretty good cookie," Vrobel said.

Personally speaking, Vrobel said he has developed many interests in life. His avocations include archaeology, astronomy, photography, trout fishing, deer hunting, stamp collecting and so on.

Vrobel said he has given up most of those hobbies, but amateur radio is one that'll last him a lifetime.

". . . I'll stick with ham radio until I hit the 'silent key,'" he said.

They talked a little bit more about their rigs, and soon got around to saying their farewells.

It was past time for Baucum to grab a quick lunch and to get back to work. Vrobel was going to do some more DXing.

"Paul, it's certainly been a pleasure talking with you," Baucum said.

Vrobel reciprocated.

"With that, we'll say 73 (best regards)," Baucum said, "and hope to catch you again . . ."

The 'Happy Warrior'

Sen. Hubert Humphrey is dead .... and the nation mourns the passing of the "happy warrior."

One's political persuasion matters not in this instance. Whether or not one agreed with the senator's political philosophy, one could not help but admire Humphrey's broad smile, his optimism, his flow of words, his ability to overcome disappointment, and his determination to win, even when faced with a situation he knew he could not whip.

He served as the nation's vice president, but he was denied the opportunity of serving as President of the United States, perhaps his greatest disappointment.

Jim Wright of Fort Worth, House majority leader, said Hubert Humphrey "epitomized the virtues of faith, hope and charity," and this perhaps summed up the life of Sen. Humphrey as well as anyone could.

"The world has lost a blithe and ebulent spirit who reveled in the struggle for suffering humanity and never gave up hope in the essential goodness of the human race," Wright continued.

"Hubert Humphrey influenced everyone with whom he came in contact for the better. He perhaps is the only man I know who never allowed defeat to change into defeatism or success to turn spoil into conceit.

"He inspired the nation not only in the things he fought for but in the way he fought for them."

Jim Wright knew the departed senator personally and well, having served as Humphrey's Texas campaign manager in his unsuccessful presidential bid in 1968.

It was the senator's determined come back in his bout with cancer and his desire and willingness to serve as a guinea pig in the use of new drugs and treatments which won him a place in the hearts of Americans everywhere.

He most certainly did inspire the nation, and it is fitting that the nation pause in its fast and furious whirl to pay tribute to a faithful public servant and to say a prayer for his family and for the nation which he loved.

Hubert Humphrey put his imprint on America.

CIA and journalism

The hearings before the House intelligence oversight subcommittee have disclosed the deep involvement of the Central Intelligence Agency in overseas journalism.

American journalists owe an overriding allegiance to their government, but they also have a responsibility to their readers to maintain their independence from the government as collectors and reporters of the news overseas. Balancing these responsibilities may be a delicate matter in many circumstances but except in cases where national security is vitally involved, we must favor the side of journalistic independence.

Perhaps more clear-cut is the issue of covert CIA involvement in journalism, in the planting of news stories, in the publication of newspapers and magazines abroad, and in the publication of books, all for propaganda purposes.

The new charter for the CIA being drawn up by Congress should make clear that prime responsibility for overseas propaganda and information activities of the United States rests with the U.S. Information Agency and the State Department.

By contrast, the prime responsibility of the CIA should be the gathering of intelligence information overseas for use by government officials in this country.

The CIA should spend more time acquiring knowledge about foreign countries and less time muddying the waters of knowledge in the international news, magazine and book publishing business.

At the same time, the CIA has a very definite and most important role as set out by the government and it should not be shackled unnecessarily as some members of Congress and others would do.

CHARLEY REESE:

It's time to reconsider nation's trade policies

By CHARLEY REESE
Sun Belt Syndicate

ORLANDO, Fla. — I rarely agree with old George Meany, president of the AFL-CIO, but the plumber is right when he says it's time to take a look at the trade policies that are flooding America with foreign goods and eliminating American jobs in the process.

In 1977, 21,000 steelworkers lost their jobs as their plants went belly-up.

Being a libertarian, I know all the arguments in favor of free trade and free trade is what we want — if, and it's a big if, everybody plays by the same rules. The trouble is that in the world today, most countries don't.

Japan, for example, sells its steel in America at below cost while absolutely prohibiting American steel imports. European countries, especially the socialist countries, also sell in the U.S. at a lower price thanks to government help.

This is against the present free trade law, but our federal bureaucrats have been reluctant to enforce it. It remains to be seen if they will even enforce the plan just announced by President Carter which involves so-called "trigger prices" for foreign steel imports. The idea is that if foreign steel is sold below these prices, the government will automatically take action.

The free trade proponents argue that we consumers should be satisfied to buy the cheapest product whether it's an import or a domestic product. They argue that tarriffs only protect "inefficient" industries.

Well, like a lot of theories, that one doesn't hold up when measured against reality. How can you compare free men with slave labor which is what you have in Communist countries. The price set on Communist-made products has nothing to do with efficiency. Nor is it fair to compare free men with workers in socialist countries where government-owned industries are not required to make a profit.

But there is still another reason why plain American consumers should be concerned. In the case of steel, we get the cheap imports when the domestic market in Japan is slow. When the Japanese economy picks up, Japanese steel goes to Japanese buyers. In the meantime, these imports have whittled away at American steel-making capacity. Today, we are the only nation on earth unable to supply our own steel needs when the economy is running full throttle.

So, you see, we make ourselves vulnerable to shortages and robber-high prices just as we are now vulnerable to the oil cartel. Once an American factory or mill is shut down because of foreign competition, chances of it ever reopening are practically zip.

A third reason to curb foreign imports is the loss of American jobs. These unemployed Americans are a drain on the public treasury, but they are also our brothers and sisters. Why should we see them stand on the street corner in misery so the Japanese can have full employment?

If you think the Japanese or Europeans are worried about our welfare or our problems, you'd better start a hunt for smart pills. You need to swallow a bunch of them.

The big problem is that a great many people who are in our federal government or who have tremendous influence on the people in our government have a fundamentally internationalist outlook.

Many large corporations, though headquartered here, are fundamentally international.

In effect, we have an economic fifth column in America. Big banks which lent billions to foreign countries have a selfish interest in seeing that they prosper. Multi-national corporations which have extensive holdings in foreign countries tend to go out of their way to see that the U.S. doesn't offend

If the South Koreans had been really smart, they would have done like some of the other countries and just borrowed more than they can possibly pay back from American banks.

I think it's time we elected a Congress that is concerned about American welfare and a president who represents America, instead of some kind of so-called new world order which the multi-national corporations are pushing.

If Meany could see farther than his big nose, he might figure out who his friends are and stop electing international-minded politicians who are cutting the throats of American workers. In the meantime, the rest of us should buy American-made products, what few we can find.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Hair-dye lobb's protests cited

By JACK ANDERSON

WASHINGTON — The multibillion-dollar cosmetics industry is frantically trying to persuade millions of American women that there is no cancer risk in using those highly advertised hair dyes.

So frantically is the industry peddling this propaganda line, in fact, that its Washington lobby has rushed out an erroneous claim and some supect studies.

At issue is the finding by the National Cancer Institute that a major ingredient in most hair dyes, 4-MMPD, has caused cancer in laboratory test animals. The government scientists also discovered that some hair dyes contain derivatives of benzidine; this, too, is a proven carcinogen.

The Cancer Institute issued its alarming findings to alert 33 million women who use hair dyes to the potential danger. A warning was about the only governnent action possible. The Food and Drug Administration is powerless to take any action against hair dyes because of a strange, special exemption provided the industry 40 years ago.

The Cosmetic, Toiletry and Fragrance Association, a sweet-sounding name for a hard-nosed lobby, launched an immediate counterattack. On behalf of its clients, the association ground out a blanket denial that hair dyes are hazardous. Dyes with the benzidine derivatives were no longer being sold to the public, the association added soothingly.

This was quickly proven false. Congressional investigators walked into a Washington drug store and found them on the shelves. Temporary hair dyes made by Roux Laboratories and marketed under alluring brand names such as "Black Rage," "Chocolate Kiss" and "Frivolous Fawn" contained benzidine derivatives.

A spokeswoman for the cosmetics lobby acknowledged she had made a mistake. "I was in a hurry," she explained. A Roux representative told us the firm has now stopped using benzidine derivatives. "We really don't think they cause cancer," he said, "but our customers may get nervous."

In challenging the Cancer Institute's findings, the cosmetics association trotted out industry-subsidized studies claiming hair dyes are safe. But congressional sources point out many of the studies are dubious.

One of them, for example, was conducted by Industrial Bio-Test Laboratories. This outfit is now under investigation for allegedly falsifying test results over a 10-year span.

DEATH IN THE DESERT — On Dec. 18, 1970, an underground nuclear test shot, called Baneberry, was set off 900 feet below the earth's surface. Pentagon scientists miscalculated the force of the explosion, and a radioactive cloud unexpectedly mushroomed 10,000 feet into the Nevada sky.

The cloud drifted over a nearby workers' camp. Thirteen guards, setting aside their own safety, frantically evacuated the camp. Eighty-six persons from the camp showed radiation effects and had to be rushed to a nearby health facility for examination and decontamination.

Three of the 13 heroic guards subsequently died of leukemia, apparently because of their exposure to unsafe amounts of radiation. Two of their widows have sued the government for negligence.

The Justice Department contended, however, that the three dead guards had not been exposed to enough radiation to have caused the leukemia. But now we've learned from Justice Department sources that the government has offered to settle with the widows out of court.

Between 1945 and 1970, more than 170,000 soldiers and civilians attended the nuclear blasts. Hundreds of them were exposed to unsafe amounts of radiation. Over a dozen have contracted leukemia or bone cancer.

Investigators for the Center for Disease Control in Atlanta are quietly investigating whether the large number of leukemia cases among veterans of a 1957 nuclear test, called Smokey, was the result of overexposure.

"We're on the verge of showing that it is a virtual certainty that the leukemia cases were a direct result of the 1957 Smokey blast," one investigator told us. The Veterans Administration, however, has refused to provide compensation to the families of the leukemia victims.

BAGLEY'S BAG — Chairman William Bagley of the Commodities Futures Trading Commission is genial and gregarious. He dresses in suits of conservative cut and color. In every respect, he looks like the prosperous attorney he once was.

In his native California, he learned to play political hardball. He had a reputation in the state assembly as a tough, effective legislator. He also got involved in some conflicts of interest.

We have seen evidence that he sometimes confused his legal and legislative work. He intervened with state officials in behalf of law clients, sometimes writing letters on his official assembly stationery.

We have reviewed the specific cases with Bagley. He acknowledged that he had occasionally tried to help constituents, who also happened to be law clients, with their state problems. This had been merely a routine service for constituents, he said. They had paid his law firm small legal fees for handling other matters.

"I have enjoyed and been very productive in public service," Bagley told us. I have not made money."

INSIDE REPORT:

Here's why President Jimmy Carter 'hip-shoots'

By ROWLAND EVANS And ROBERT NOVAK

Evans

Novak

WASHINGTON — President Carter's embarrassing verbal stumbles in trying to please all sides in the politics of Mideast peacemaking brought an anguished, though private, cry for help from a prominent Democrat to White House counsel Robert Lipshutz.

At a recent small luncheon, this Democrat complained that Mr. Carter's crashing through verbal thickets with one explosive word contradicting another left everyone in the dark as to what U.S. policy really is. Unplanned ambiguity, he said, must cease.

The answer helps explain presidential contortions that switched the President's foreign trip to Egypt at mid-course and generates worry about the future. This was Lipshutz' reply: Jimmy Carter is contemptuous of Richard M. Nixon's careful formulations and insists that his own free-wheeling talk works better.

The President really means it when he says he wants "an open administration," Lipshutz told his luncheon guests. He's going to continue that way; Nixon never said a word that wasn't weighed and tested; there was no such thing as spontaneity in the formulations of his foreign policy; Jimmy is different; he speaks freely and he speaks his mind.

Even if "spontaneity" and the drive to be different from Nixon — not sheer clumsiness — truly explain the President's verbal pitfalls, that does not mitigate the consternation his repeated mistakes have caused in Mideast capitals. His year-end television interview Dec. 28, on the eve of his world trip, was the most recent case in point.

What was so "embarrassing" to President Sadat was not Mr. Carter's often-stated opposition to an independent Palestinian state. It was the thorny offshoot of a new thought: these stateless Palestinian residents under Israeli military control might decide "to be...Israeli citizens...to actually run for the Knesset (the Israeli parliament)."

Such a thought in the real world of Mideast politics was appalling to Sadat and Arab leaders everywhere, revealing presidential misconception of reality never evidenced before.

In his early "homeland" formulation — delivered without forethought in Clinton, Mass., last March 21 — Mr. Carter spoke feelingly: "There has to be a homeland provided for the Palestinian refugees who have suffered for many, many years." No mention there of Palestinians as wards of Israel.

Likewise, when asked at his April 8 press conference, just after Sadat's visit here, if there should be "Jordanian control" of the Palestinian homeland, Mr. Carter jockeyed: "That's a question that I wouldn't want to answer for President Sadat. I will let him make his own statements publicly and I don't intend to repeat what he tells me privately." That had the ring of a good, solid answer.

By July 12, however, Mr. Carter seemed to be feeling pressure from Israel. Asked again about the "homeland," he said his "preference" was for an "entity" that "should be tied in with Jordan and not be independent."

Besides fumbling the "homeland" question on several occasions, Mr. Carter also has shown singular lack of follow-through on the question of Israeli settlements in occupied Arab territory.

Shortly after Israeli Prime Minister Menahem Begin's trip here in July, the President said he had "let (Begin) know very strongly" that any new settlements would cause the U.S. "deep concern."

But a bit later, on Aug. 5, after Begin continued to approve new settlements and legalize old ones, Mr. Carter told reporters: "I think what he did was in consonance with the desires of the Israeli people." That introduced a new factor in the settlements equation which was manna to Israelis hungry for a show of American sympathy, but it was an unexpected blow to the Arabs.

There has been no presidential response yet to the Israeli decision to send new settlers to the occupied Egyptian Sinai. Considering the ups and downs of Mr. Carter's Mideast verbalisms, that should cause no surprise.

In sum, Mr. Carter's loose lip on issues of life and death to Jews and Arabs of the Mideast have caused anguish to many parties, including some of the President's most stalwart American supporters. So far, there has been no mortal damage to his overall drive for a peaceful settlement, which he has pursued with more intensity than his predecessors in the White House.

What is needed now is less hip-shooting and less effort to contrast Jimmy Carter from Richard Nixon. That is why, when he gave the results of his 45-minute talk with Sadat last Wednesday to resolve his self-created emergency, his decision to read a rare written statement brought sighs of relief. In at least this one case, the ambiguity necessary for both sides was careful and intentional. After all the amateurish impromptu diplomacy it could be a sign of creeping (professionalism.)

Man attacks coeds in sorority, kills 2

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — Frightened sorority sisters clustered together overnight trying to sleep as police searched for a rapist who murdered two Florida State University coeds, and left three others savagely beaten.

Officers had only a few clues today. "We have no suspect," Leon County Sheriff Ken Katsaris said. "We don't even have enough for a composite drawing."

The 21,000-student university had been in the midst of a "security survey" to make its 18 sorority houses safer.

But the program had not yet reached the Chi Omega house, where an intruder slipped through an unlocked side door early Sunday, and crept through the trim, two-story building where 44 women slept.

Margaret Eliza Bowman, 21, of St. Petersburg was beaten, and then strangled — probably never waking from her sleep, Katsaris said.

In the next bedroom, Lisa Levy, 20, also of St. Petersburg was beaten and strangled. Miss Levy died after being taken to a hospital.

Police said one of the girls had been raped.

No one in the house awoke while the two were being strangled, the sheriff said. Both girls had roommates, but they were away for the weekend.

The intruder then moved across the hall to a bedroom shared by Karen Chandler, 21, of Tallahassee and Kathy Kleiner, 20, of Miami. Both of them were beaten.

Miss Chandler was hospitalized in critical condition and Miss Kleiner in fair condition.

As the attacker headed downstairs, Nita Jane Neary returned to the house from a late date.

"I heard footsteps coming down the stairs," Miss Neary was quoted by Francis W. Kenniston, an associate professor. "He had a stocking cap pulled down over his head. He was carrying some type of club. It was wrapped with a sock, but I could see the end sticking out."

The man brushed past her and left about the same time Miss Chandler stumbled from her bedroom crying for help, Katsaris said.

An hour and 43 minutes later, and six blocks away, a neighbor heard noises in the rundown duplex apartment of Cheryl Ann Thomas, a 21-year-old ballet student from Richmond, Va.

She was reported in stable condition after being found severely beaten. Katsaris said a piece of 1-by-2 lumber found at her apartment apparently was the weapon.

The sheriff said "proximity and method of attack" led investigators to consider the attacks the work of the same man.

"I think we have a sick individual on our hands, who is depraved and hopefully would have sought help before he went this far," Katsaris said.

Flaming fabric flunks safety test

DALLAS (AP) — The snowman costume that ignited and burned a Dallas Cowboys fan during the National Football Conference championship game Jan. 1 was made of a fabric that fails to comply with federal safety standards, a federal consumer official said Friday.

Dan Yoder, a 24-year-old Dallas advertising executive wearing the rented costume, suffered second degree burns on the neck and legs when the costume was ignited by a stadium vendor's flaming canned heat.

Amarillo houses plant for nuclear weapons

AMARILLO, Texas (AP) — Just as carburetors, steering wheels, ashtrays and radios move down an assembly line and end up as cars—so detonators, explosive components and plutonium head for Amarillo and become nuclear weapons.

The assembly point is a technological complex, a securityconscious city of its own 17 miles northeast of Amarillo — the Pantex Plant.

At present, Pantex is the only site in the United States where nuclear weapons are assembled.

Should President Carter give the go-ahead for neutron bombs, Pantex will assemble them. Congress has already appropriated funds for the new bomb.

Neutron bombs are designed to leave buildings intact but kill people by spreading massive amounts of radiation.

Mason & Hanger-Silas Mason Co. operates the plant under a contract with the U.S. Department of Energy. A five-year extension of its contract was signed last year.

Visitors may go to the administration building, a squat structure whose garden display consists of three generations of nuclear weapons. Visitors may not go past the administration building to tour the 10,000-acre complex.

Pantex is part of the government's Albuquerque Operations, which includes four other facilities that contribute their products to the Panhandle assembly line.

According to a government report, electrical, electromechanical and mechanical components come from Missouri; detonators and explosive components from Ohio; plutonium from Colorado; and neutrongenerating devices, or nuclear triggers, from Florida.

Plant Manager Ross Dunham said, "When nuclear weapons are shipped out of here to the military, they are ready for use."

In addition to its role as an assembly point, Pantex serves as a place to take assembled nuclear weapons apart. Nuclear weapons maintenance and repair is also handled.

With about 2,000 employees and an annual $30 million payroll, the facility is one of the largest employers in the Panhandle.

A fatal accident occurred for the first time in March, when a chemical explosive detonated during a nonnuclear experiment. Three Pantex employees were killed.

Soth refused the first wo spade tricks but won the third with dummy's ace. South now had nine sure tricks: one spade, two hearts, two diamonds and four clubs.

Seeing no problem, South took the top clubs and gave up a club. East took the queen of clubs and his last spade and then led a heart ot dummy's ace.

Too late, declarer saw that he could not get to his hand for the king of hearts. dummy eventually lost a diamond trick, and South was down one.

"I've never seen you play so well," North remarked silkily. "You must have been taking lessons."

AVOIDS COMPLIMENT

South could avoid this doubtful compliment. After taking the ace of spades he should give up a club immediately. At worst, the defenders can take one club and three spades.

Regardless of the return, South can get to his hand with a high club after taking dummy's ace of hearts. He then cashes the king of hearts and any high club that may remain in his hand, and takes the rest with dummy's high diamonds and good clubs.

DAILY QUESTION

Partner opens with one heart and the next player passes. You hold: S 7 4; H K 9 5 3; D J 6 4 2; C A K 4. What do you say?

ANSWER: Bid three hearts. This forcing raise promises strong trump support of at least four cards with 13 to 16 points, counting distribution as well as high cards. In this case you have 11 points in high cards and 1 point for the doubleton, but you may also count one additional point for the high card in partner's bid suit.

More Americans turning to use of contact lenses

By The Associated Press

Vanity, comfort and convenience are prompting a growing number of Americans to turn to contact lenses to correct vision problems.

There are two major types of contact lenses on the market — hard and soft. Although the soft lenses were not introduced in the United States until 1971, they have grown rapidly in popularity as manufacturers eliminated earlier problems. The American Optometric Association estimates that 42 percent of the contacts prescribed in 1976 were soft lenses.

Each type of lens has its advantages and disadvantages. Some people cannot wear contacts at all.

Hard contact lenses are made of a clear, acryllic plastic which maintains its shape. They are about a third of an inch in diameter and partially cover the cornea — the clear outer covering in front of the colored part of the eye. They are held in place by the surface tension of the eye's natural tear fluid.

Soft contact lenses are slightly larger than hard lenses and many people find them much more comfortable. They are made of liquid-absorbing plastic which, when wet, is flexible and conforms to the surface of the eye. For this reason, soft lenses may not be suitable for treatment of problems like astigmatism which involves an irregularity in the shape of the cornea.

Contact lenses have certain advantages over eyeglasses. They provide more natural and realistic vision, they move with the eye so the wearer is always looking through the center of the lens where vision is best. Contacts do not get spattered with rain or interfere with sports activities. And, except on close examination, they are invisible when worn.

They do, however, require careful care. Wearers have to carry special solutions with them for emergencies. Contacts also require getting used to and there may be some initial discomfort. They are vulnerable to damage — and loss. And they generally cannot be worn for more than 16 or 18 hours at a time.

Research is under way on materials and designs that would be wearable for 24 hours a day, but these experimental lenses have not yet been approved for sale by the Food and Drug Administration.

The initial cost of hard contact lenses, according to the American Optometric Association, is usually between $150 and $225, which includes professional fees, a vision examination, the lenses themselves and a number of follow-up visits to the doctor. For soft lenses, the initial cost is between $250 and $350.

Hard lenses generally last longer. The optometrists' group says they can be worn for 10 years or more, although the average person usually loses at least one lens long before that. The average replacement rate for soft lenses is one lens per wearer per year.

You should go to a specialist for contact lenses. They cannot be made from eyeglass prescriptions. Ask about fees in advance. Find out exactly what the price includes and what sort of refund policy there is if, after a period of time, you decide you cannot or do not want to wear the lenses.

Power utilities without fuel, sue Westinghouse

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — An executive of the Tennessee Valley Authority was scheduled to be called as an adverse witness today in the $2.5 billion damage suit against Westinghouse Electric Corp. for its alleged reneging on uranium supply contracts.

Two utilities which do not have signed fuel agreements with the reactor manufacturer spent six hours Saturday trying to strengthen their claim against the defendant.

In cross examination of Westinghouse's Walter J. Dollard, counsel for Long Island Lighting Co. and Houston Lighting & Power Co. focused specifically on how and when their clients were notified Westinghouse felt it had no obligation to supply uranium.

Ten utilities have sued Westinghouse for reneging on contracts to supply uranium to fuel reactors it had sold them. The case is being heard without a jury by U.S. District Judge Robert R. Merhige Jr.

Besides Long Island and Houston they are Texas Utilities, South Carolina Electric, Florida Power & Light, Alabama Power, Northeast Utilities, Virginia Electric & Power Co. and the TVA.

Alabama Power and Westinghouse agreed early in the trial to an out-of-court settlement that has been approved by U.S. District Judge Robert R. Merhige Jr. Texas Utilities and Westinghouse agreed on a tentative settlement in December which has yet to be approved.

The outcome of the suit could affect 35 million consumers and the future of the huge company. While Merhige consolidated the individual suits into one case for the trial, each utility had its opportunity to present its own testimony.

Dollard, general manager of Westinghouse's nuclear fuel division, took part in drawing up an allocation plan that was shown to the various utilities whose contracts were canceled in September 1975.

Both Lilco and Houston, as agent for the South Texas Project, were included in the plan.

But since the contracts were canceled, Westinghouse has taken the position that because Lilco and Houston agreements never were signed, the two utilities are not entitled to recover damages in the case.

The Saturday session marked Dollard's fourth full day on the witness stand.

When the questioning finally ended, Merhige remarked that Dollard had been in the courtroom so long that seeing him leave was like saying goodbye to a child leaving for camp.

Of the eight utilities continuing to press their cases, Houston and Lilco have two of the three major claims.

The Texas utility has contended its agreement with Westinghouse calls for the delivery of about 14.5 million pounds of uranium. Lilco is fighting for about 9.3 million pounds.

Dollard denied Westinghouse had decided as early as the summer of 1974 it would not sign the uranium contract with the South Texas Project even though it had previously signed an agreement to sell two nuclear steam supply systems for the power plant being constructed 80 miles southwest of Houston.

H. L. Hunt lawsuit continues

SHREVEPORT, La. (AP) — Defense lawyers for the H.L. Hunt estate planned to offer new witnesses today in a suit by a 73-year-old Atlanta woman who claims the late oil billionaire was bigamously married to her for nine years.

There were newspaper reports during the weekend that Frania Tye Lee, who is suing for a share of Hunt's vast estate, was offered $5 million Friday if she would drop her lawsuit.

Attorneys for the Hunt estate denied the reports. Mrs. Lee and her attorneys were unavailable for comment.

Mrs. Lee claims she was married to Hunt from 1925 until 1934, unaware that all the while, Hunt was dividing his time between her and another wife and family in another city.

Ray Hunt, executor of the Hunt estate and a son of H.L. Hunt by a later marriage, testified last Monday that it was family knowledge Mrs. Lee's four children had been fathered by H.L. Hunt.

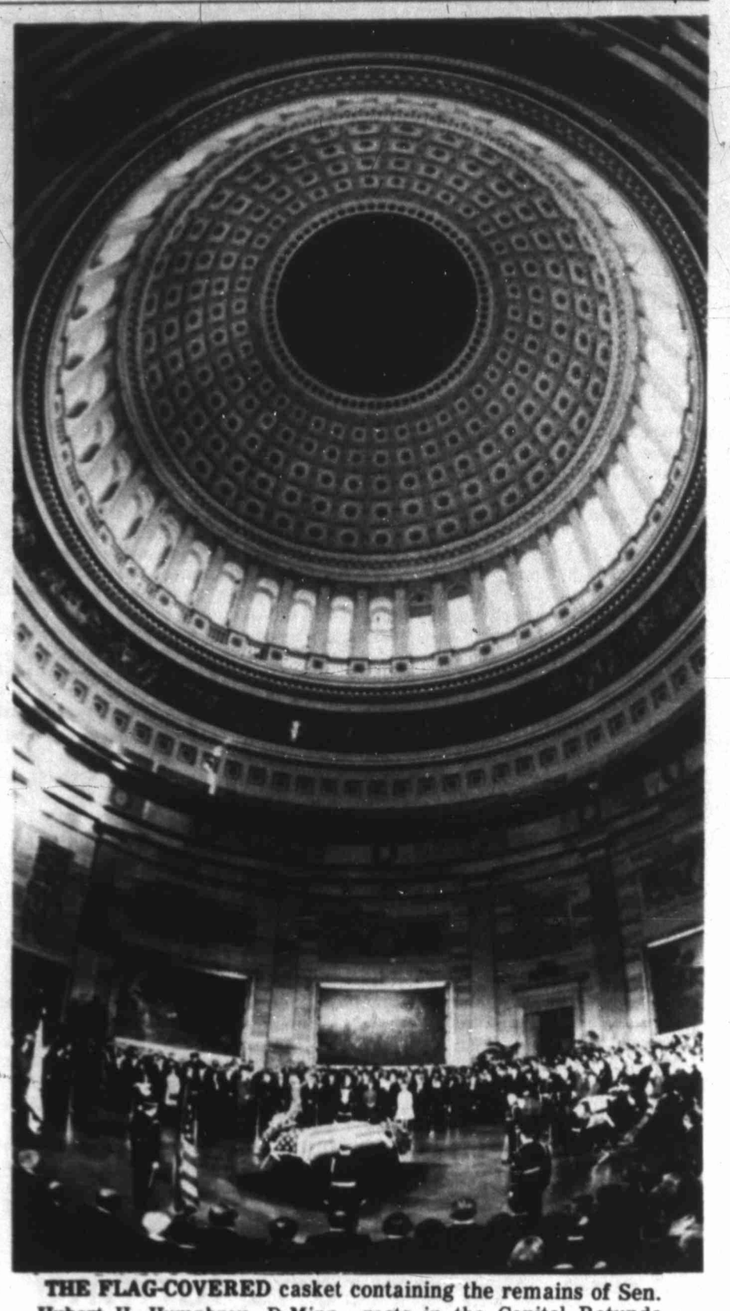

The basic issues in the case have been whether Hunt's marriage to Mrs. Lee was legal and whether she relinquished any further claim to the Hunt fortune in a document she signed in 1942.

Lawyers for the Hunt estate contend that in that document, she dropped all claims to his property in return for $100,000 in cash, plus $2,000 a month. She also identified Hunt as father of her four children, but did not refer to a marriage.

Mrs. Lee testified last week that she signed the document under pressure and kept quiet about it in future years rather than embarrass the man she loved.

"That was my contribution to his life," she said.

Hunt, who became one of the world's richest men and was well-known for his espousal of conservative causes, died in 1974 at the age of 85.

Snowfall brings youths' deaths

ELKIN, N.C. (AP) — A town is crying. Five children, playing in the first snowfall of the winter, plunged through a crust of ice and drowned in the frigid waters of a farm pond.

"In terms of emotionalism, of children, I'd say this is about the worst I've ever seen," said Roy Kane of Elkin, a veteran of 40 years with rescue squads.

Kane was there in the darkness Saturday night when the bodies of Lisa Diane Hutson, 14, her sisters Sheila Anne, 12, and Patricia Lynn, 9; and brother and sister Linda Wood, 12, and Brad Wood, 8, were pulled from the icy water.

Funerals for the Wood children will be at 2 p.m. today at a funeral home chapel in nearby Dobson. Services for the Hutson children will be Tuesday afternoon at a Baptist church at the neighboring town of Jonesville.

Cars of friends and relatives clogged the two-lane blacktop in front of the neighboring Hutson and Wood homes Sunday.

While Roger and Patsy Hutson remained inside under sedation, a friend, Nancy Key stood shivering outside the simple brick house and talked about her daughters.

"They were good girls, beautiful girls," she said.

Earlier, she had helped with funeral arrangements.

"If you don't think picking out three caskets at one time can get to you ..." her voice trailed off.

The five children had gone out Saturday afternoon to play near their homes in woods and fields.

Italy forms compromise government

By MICHAEL J. DUFFY

ROME (AP) — Premier Giulio Andreotti announced the resignation of his 17-month-old government today in preparation for an attempt to form another cabinet that would have the support of the Communists but no Communist members.

Andreotti went to the presidential palace to present his resignation to President Giovanni Leone after a half-hour cabinet meeting. The president was expected to have the traditional consultations with the leaders of all parties and then name Andreotti, probably by Thursday, to try to form a new government.

The new political crisis, expected to be a long one, comes amid political violence that has caused four deaths in Italy this year, economic stagnation that has pushed unemployment to about 9 percent and demands from the Communists and Socialists for inclusion of the Communists in the cabinet.

However, Andreotti's Christian Democratic Party still rejects Communist participation in the government, and the U.S. government announced its opposition last week.

If a new government cannot be formed, elections for a new parliament would have to be held. But all parties oppose this. Opinion polls indicate elections would further polarize the country, increasing support for the Christian Democrats and Communists at the expense of the smaller parties.

The Communists got 34.4 percent of the vote in the 1976 election, four percentage points less than the Christian Democrats. Andreotti's all-Christian Democrat, minority cabinet was able to stay in office because the Communists and other parties agreed not to vote against it on major issues, and in turn the Communists were consulted about government policies.

The opposition parties abandoned this policy of tacit support last week and demanded that the Christian Democrat form an emergency, all-party government including the Communists.

Andreotti's government was Italy's 35th since World War II and the third he has headed during 30 years in politics.

Man robs Sheraton Inn

The first aggravated robbery of the year occurred Sunday night at the Sheraton Inn.

Desk clerk David Bowen told police that he had just arrived for duty about 10:30 p.m. Sunday when a man entered the lobby and approached the registration desk.

The man was holding a paper sack in one hand and a .22-caliber pistol in the other, according to Bowen.

The man reportedly handed the sack to Bowen and instructed him to place the money in the sack.

Bowen told police the man fled on foot with approximately $108 in cash.

Woman shot in arm listed as 'guarded'

Ector County Sheriff's men, who are searching for two suspects, said no cash or merchandise was taken in the incident. The attempted robbery took place shortly after 9 p.m. Friday.

Separation forced on Chinese families

By JAY MATHEWS
The Washington Post

HONG KONG — Chang Tu-li and Liu Mei-hua met and fell in love while attending Shanghai's Futan University. They looked forward to a long and happy married life pursuing their careers as engineers.

Then Chang was transferred in 1969 to a commune in Kwangtung Province, 600 miles to the south. He managed to win a short vacation to return to Shanghai and marry Liu, assigned to a factory in that city, but for the next seven years before he finally fled to Hong Kong, Chang never saw his wife for more than a month each year. They only got that much time by exaggerating the seriousness of an old case of hepatitis. Even when the couple produced a son, Chang's appeals to be reassigned to Shanghai fell on deaf ears.

It is an old story in China, illustrating one of the most deep-seated grievances of the family-centered Chinese. Their government has decided to put the interest of the national economy before those of untold thousands of separated married couples. As the Chinese rebel against and adjust to this policy, they reveal interesting things about that one facet of life in China about which foreigners probably want to know the most and yet learn the least — sex.

The forced separations have brought heartbreak, corruption and even some cases of adultery. They have made life nervewracking and sometimes politically dangerous for government personnel officers. Interviews with young officials in China and refugees and sociologists here, along with a close reading of the Chinese press, indicate that the policy has been particularly hard on better-educated young, urban Chinese whose support for the government Peking now says is crucial in turning the country into a modern industrial state.

If there are any signs that the 28-year-old policy on separations, part of a general official callousness toward anything touching on sex, has softened in the post-Mao era, they are not readily apparent.

The system has even affected foreigners. Andrew and Lynn Kirkpatrick a married student couple from Britain, were forbidden to live together when they arrived in Shanghai late last year for study. They slept in separate crowded dormitories. When a European businessman allowed them to spend the night together a few times at his Shanghai home, he was reprimanded by the local public security office.

Having lived with the policy for so long, most Chinese try to cope with it as best they can — and many have accepted the separations willingly as a necessary sacrifice for the revolution. A group of American birth control experts who recently toured China reported that pharmacies were distributing a popular "visiting pill," a powerful contraceptive that women could take during the occasional visits of husbands assigned far away.

Strolling through public squares in Chinese cities, visitors will sometime see small posters marked with horizontal arrows pointed in opposite directions. They have been put up by men assigned to a distant city who seek to rejoin their wives by swapping jobs with someone.

Many separations go back to the 1950s. The newly victorious Communist Party, to disperse crucial industries that might be targets of nuclear attack and to develop the countryside, moved whole factories to remote parts of the country. Husbands or wives assigned to those factories had to go along. Rarely could their spouses arrange a job assignment to the same area. Many of them, preferring city life, would not have wanted to move to the remote places if they could.

The most severely affected marriages are those between college students, who are often given assignments far from their university towns after graduation. Also in recent years, many men with city jobs, unable to find a wife in town, have married rural women, but have been unable to bring them to the city because of severe restrictions on urban growth.

William L. Parish Jr., a University of Chicago sociologist who interviewed Chan Tu-Li (not his real name) and other refugees here, says Chinese couples do not take such separations as hard as Americans might. "But they're not very happy about them."

"The sexual aspect is not so important," he said, for even young Chinese couples permitted to live together find few monents of privacy.

One couple in Canton "lived in a place that had been partitioned off into bedrooms," he said. "But a guy sleeping in the top of a triple bunkbed in the next room could look down into their bed. They put up a sheet to block the view, but the sheet was full of holes."

In China, what you eat, what you wear and what work you do all depend on where you are registered to live. It is a system that leads some spouses to tolerate separation for fear of something worse.

The relatively few million people who are registered in large cities, like Peking, Shanghai or Canton, are guaranteed a steady supply of grain even during bad times when peasants in some drought-stricken communes must dine on roots. Children who grow up in cities are far more likely to get factory jobs, the pinnacle of prestige and job security for most Chinese. The cities provide schools that will better prepare children for the all-important college entrance examination.

Registration passes through the maternal line and families will suffer dislocations to win the advantages of urban life for their children. One refugee here told of an educated Canton woman who was assigned to rural Hainan Island, married there and had a child. She sent her small daughter back to be raised by the child's maternal grandmother in Canton, to avoid the peasant life that she herself could not escape.

Often, rural wives married to urban husbands will leave their communes for two or three days a week to live in the city, but cannot get permission to move their children into town. They take advantage of the liberal leave time given peasant women in China, whose menstrual cycles involve a good deal of inconvenience because of the shortage of disposal sanitary napkins. But they must work some time in the rural commune, or risk losing the grain rations and income they and their children need.

Such situations create all kinds of opportunities for corruption, as a recent article from the Manchurian city of Habrin revealed. A policeman there, raised by his elder sister, came under great family pressure when the younger brother of his sister's husband "fell in love with a girl from the countryside and wanted to bring her to the city."

Although "his sister kept pressuring him to settle the matter," the policeman said, "This was not in keeping with policy and so set it aside. His sister became angry and his mother said he had no feeling for a relative."

Eventually, the broadcast said, the policeman persuaded his relatives they were wrong.

The prominence given the story suggests that other officials have been more compliant.

At times when criticism of officials is encouraged, such as of the late 1960s, these tensions come to the surface. "One refugee who had been a personnel officer during the Cultural Revolution said the people who attacked him the most vehemently were married couples he had had to assign to separate work posts," Parish said.

Some separated couples insist it is all for the best. A woman's association leader in Shanghai told visiting American psychologist Carol Tavris that although she only saw her husband two weeks each year, "we do not regard separation too seriously, as a bad thing. We accept it as necessary for the good of the country. We must think about our whole family, the motherland, rather than our own small interests."

Despite the Communist marriage law reforms of the early 1950s that ended the several forms of sexual bondage then existing in China, the centuries-old puritanism of the Chinese peasantry and the lack of time or privacy in the workaday Chinese world appear to keep sexual activity at a low ebb. Tavris said it was her impression that "Chinese women have moved sexually from 9th-century feudalism to 19th century Victorianism."

Give apartment windows that creative treatment

By CAROLE EICHEN
Copley News Service

One of the problems of apartment living, especially if you move around every so often, is the sameness.

Change neighborhoods or even move to another city and it,s likely that your new apartment layout is pretty similar to the old one.

Individuality is the ingredient that can turn "just another apartment" into a "home," a place that truly looks and feels like your own private nest.

Besides the sterile white walls, many of today's apartments come equipped with draperies that lack any imagination.

If it's not a new apartment chances are the drapes have just been returned from another cleaning and look a little limp and ragged. Yet, the window and the view beyond may be one of the most attractive elements of your apartment.

My advice is to take down the drapes, store them in the back of the closet and do something a little exciting and different to the windows.

If the apartment is atop a high rise and you don't have neighbors peeking in, there is really no need for drapes at all. One idea to dramatize the window is the placement of an etagere in front of it. They come in many styles from bamboo and wicker to chrome, glass and wood. The lighter designs, however, are best for this more airy window treatment.

The etagere shouldn't cover the entire window unless the apartment is extremely light and bright. When you have positioned it, use the etagere to hold a variety of plants and planters in attractive pots or interesting textured baskets.

Other ideas for windows are shades featuring one-inch aluminum slats. They are available in a multitude of colors. These work particularly well in bedrooms and kitchens.

In the woven wood category there are a number of new and interesting designs that can do much to add personality to any windows. A scorched bamboo shade provides a perfect background for wicker or rattan furnishings.

High-gloss bamboo shades that roll up can be used to complement exotic prints and provide a casual atmosphere.

The new and popular mini-blinds also come in a natural-finished basswood in addition to the many shades of colors available in aluminums.

Even the Japanese shoji which has been around since the 12th Century provides a good window treatment for some apartments. It is ideal for windows on the ground level where people are passing by because it lets light in and still provides privacy.

DEAR ABBY

Calls for physician tie up their vacations

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: My husband is a very hard-working physician. Every year when we go on our vacation we run into the same problem, for which there seems to be no solution.

We enjoy group travel, but as soon as the other passengers learn that my husband is an M.D., the "calls" begin. There were 170 people in our last group, and "the doctor" was constantly called to treat stomachaches, sprained ankles, infections—you name it, he had to treat it.

He doesn't want to lie about his profession, nor would he deny his service to anyone in a life-or-death situation, but these calls for "the doctor" tie up our entire vacation.

Don't suggest another type of trip because we love to travel, and except for this one disadvantage, group trips are really our bag.—DOCTOR'S WIFE

DEAR WIFE: Since you find group trips your "bag," periodic calls on your husband's medical "bag" appear inevitable. Why not get three or four of your doctor friends to join your group? The more hands, the lighter the burden.

DEAR ABBY: In reference to the hostess who was upset because some of her guests brought their own "dinners" in a jar:

A HOSTESS' LAMENT
I've cooked a roast
And mashed potatoes,
Baked two pies
And sliced tomatoes.
Polished silver
and set the table.
I only hope that
I am able
To be charming
And keep quiet
If someone says,
"I'm on a diet."—MRS. OLSON IN ST. LOUIS

DEAR MRS. OLSON: Thanks—and I like your coffee, too.

DEAR ABBY: With your permission, I would like to publicly ask a question of those who feel that homosexuals should not be allowed in the teaching profession: Would you deny your child the opportunity to study music with Tchaikovsky? Or study art with Leonardo da Vinci?—TIRED OF BIGOTRY

Tooth decay reaches high numbers

By EARL LANE
Newsday

It is unusual to think of tooth decay as a pandemic disease. But that's what Dr. Louis Ripa calls it, and the facts bear him out. As early as 6 years of age, the average child has three to four teeth with some degree of decay, according to data from the National Center for Health Statistics.

By the end of adolescence, remarkably few Americans are untouched by tooth decay. A recent survey of recruits at the Great Lakes Naval Training Center found tht only three out of every 1,000 recruits were free of cavities.

"Along with the common cold, tooth decay is the most prevalent disease whch afflicts the American population," Ripa said. Ripa, the chairman of the department of children's dentistry at the State University at Stony Brook, N.Y., testified recently before Congress on the magnitude of the tooth decay problem.

The problem is most severe in areas where the drinking water does not contain fluoride.

In fluoride-deficient areas, a national survey has shown, the average 12-year-old has four permanent teeth that are decaying, missing or filled. The average 17-year-old in such areas has eight to nine teeth decaying, missing or filled (As of January, 1976, 49.4 percent of the U.S. population were drinking what dental researchers consider to be optimally fluoridated water.)

Decay rates consistent with the national figures were found by Ripa and his colleague, Gary Leske, when they examined the teeth of about 1,000 children. The two researchers are conducting a cavity-prevention study of a school district on Long Island.

Some 4,600 children are being given a fluoride mouth rinse once a week. They are among 80,000 school children participating in a nationwide pilot project.

"Dental caries (tooth decay) can be prevented," Ripa said recently. "Caries can be controlled by the widespread application of safe and effective procedures." The most obvious step is to cut down sharply on the amount of sugar in the diet. Sugar is the chief culprit in tooth decay. Colonies of bacteria (residing in the mouth in a colorless, sticky film called plaque) can digest the carbohydreates in sugar and produce an acid that attacks tooth enamel.

The destructive effects of sugar on teeth can be seen even in very young children. Dentists routinely see cases of "nursing bottle caries," the result of putting a baby to bed each night with a bottle of milk.

Under such circumstances, the infant will usually fall asleep with a pool of unswallowed milk in its mouth. Lactose, a sugar present in the milk, will be used by cavity-promoting bacteria in the formation of acid.

Apple juice and other acidic drinks as well any drinks containing sugar also should be avoided in nighttime bottles. Further, several recent studies have shown that babies who are nursed to the age of 2 or 3 by their mothers also can be susceptible to "nursing bottle caries." If the baby is often allowed to sleep at the mother's breast, the sugar in human milk can do the same damage as that in cow's milk, Ripa said.

Proper diet play a key role in fighting tooth decay. Avoid sugary snacks, particularly sticky candies that can be trapped in the teeth and hard candies that require a long time to suck.

When sugar remains in the mouth for prolonged periods, it feeds the acid attack. Even after a brief sugar snack, the acids formed will attack tooth enamel for at least 20 minutes. Thus, children should avoid frequent snacking. While soft drinks contain sugar and should not be encouraged as a part of the diet, they pass through the mouth quickly and are thought to play a relatively minor role in tooth decay.

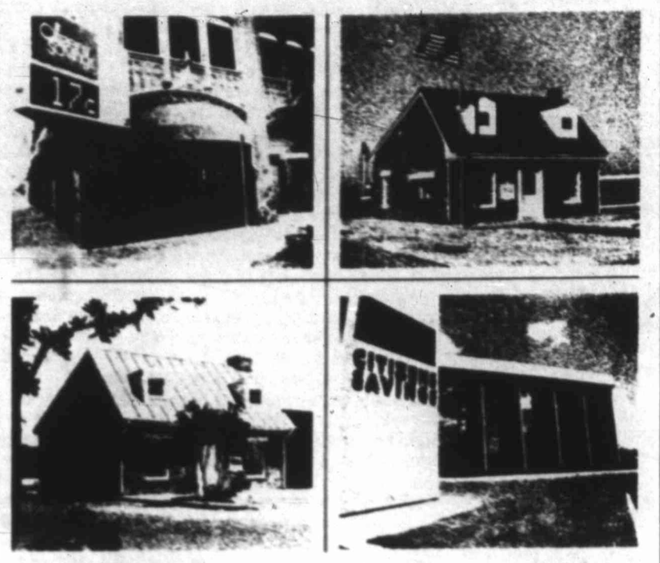

Beyond the proper diet, the principal agent for fighting cavities is fluoride, which makes the enamel surface of teeth less soluble to acid and can also affect the metabolism of the acid-making bacteria in the mouth.

Children who live in communities with fluoridated water routinely experience a 50 percent lower incidence of cavities when compared to those who do not use floridated water. The fluoride is incorporated into the structure of the tooth enamel as it is being formed. The use of flouride supplements and fluoride toothpastes and the application of sealants to the teeth can further reduce cavities.

If your water is not fluoridated, there are other ways for you to ensure that your children receive the chemical (even in areas where there is fluoridation, dentists recommend supplemental doses of the chemical as well as following other practices of chemical as well as following other practices of good dental hygiene).

Ripa said infants should receive a fluoride supplement, either in the form of drops or as part of their regular vitamin supplement. Fluoride drops enter the baby's system and help ward off decay during the critical period of early tooth formation.

The higher you set your thermostat, the higher your energy consumption.

"Try lowering the temperature in your home to 68° this winter. You'll save on your heating bill!"

"A setting of 68° during the winter is the one Texas Electric recommends for both comfort and energy efficiency.

For each degree above 68° the energy used for heating your house is increased by approximately 4% per degree.

As shown by the chart the difference between the recommended thermostat setting and 74° is 24%. At 78° the increase in energy usage is 40% or more.

Clearly, the lower you set your thermostat the lower your heating bill is going to be. And after last winter, one of the coldest on record, we think a lot of people are going to be trying their best to use less energy.

Remember to change the filter in your heating system regularly, too. A dirty filter causes your heating system to work longer and that costs you more. Check the filter at least once each month.

All forms of energy are costing more these days. If you're serious about saving energy and money, request a copy of our energy efficiency tips booklet on the comment portion of your electric service bill."

Carter's inflation plan hinges on old remedies

By R. GREGORY NOKES

WASHINGTON (AP) — The anti-inflation program President Carter is unveiling this week will rely on old remedies to achieve new results under changing circumstances.

The changing circumstances are that Carter appears to have won enough confidence from big business and big labor to avoid suspicions that he's trying to trick them into a wage and price control program.

The administration has gone out of its way repeatedly in the last year to stress its opposition to wage and price controls, and Carter will restate his opposition later this week. In return, the administration expects cooperation from business and labor.

The president's new program will rely heavily on the two to provide advance word of their wage and price plans so that the administration could influence those plans should it choose.

The program will be outlined in Carter's State of the Union address to Congress on Thursday and in a special economic message on Friday, and will include a set of principles he hopes business and labor will follow in their wage and price decisions.

Also this week, Carter will put the final touches on his proposed budget for fiscal 1979. Sources say the budget will call for spending in excess of $500 billion with a deficit of nearly $60 billion.

The budget will be sent to Congress next Monday.

Early reaction to the anti-inflation program, which was outlined privately to business and labor leaders Friday, appears cautious but favorable.

Reginald H. Jones, head of General Electric, said after a White House meeting Friday that "we are willing to give this a try."

Carter also had lunch Friday with George Meany of the AFLCIO. Meany is expected to give the plan a trial run.

The aim is to gradually unwind the rate of inflation, which is now above 6 percent. Prices increased by about 6.5 percent last year, and increases of at least that are expected again in 1978.

Economists in and out of government believe slowing inflation in the years ahead without some action by the government to influence future wage and price behavior. They think it would be a mistake for the country to accept an annual 6 percent rate of inflation as the best that can be achieved.

Since wage and price controls are ruled out for the foreseeable future, the only recourse for the Carter administration is to try to convince labor and business leaders that it is in their long-run best interests to restrain wage and price increases.

Violence, death mark 40-day-old coal strike

By JEFF PRUGH
The Los Angeles Times

PIKEVILLE, Ky. — The town looks like a Christmas engraving by Currier and Ives, with its snowclad hills, icy streets and clumps of glistening, 10-foot-long icicles draped over rocky cliffs.

But beneath its winter-wonderland surface, Pikeville suffers and mutters a four-letter word that in better times meant gold: coal.

Thousands of union miners — many with furrowed faces as tough as anthracite — are out on a 40-day-old nationwide strike. It has been marked by vandalism, violence and death, and there is no end in sight. The non-union mine owners are cursing the pickets for having forced many of them to shut down, too.

And the scathing, zero-degree cold seems to be nature's way of reminding everyone that another phase of America's energy crisis will occur if and when the coal stockpiles are depleted.

Nowhere are winter's hardships more evident than here in Eastern Kentucky's Appalachians, where the economic survival of both the very rich and the very poor hinges almost solely on the region's vast coal resources, which are said to be among the world's richest.

"If they let the union go down, the people will go down with it and this country will be gone," one striking United Mine Workers member said forlornly the other night. "The price of coal will go down because we'll be forced to work for the minimum wage ($2.65 an hour). Who wants to do that? I'll stay out of work three months if I have to — I'm prepared to fight for myself and my family."

Those sentiments, however, are only part of a story that transcends the labor-management dispute. The dispute itself centers on the UMW's opposition to industry demands that costly wildcat strikes, like the one last summer, be outlawed.

Negotiations in Washington have been on-again, off-again with no settlement close ever since 188,000 UMW members in 22 states walked off their jobs Dec. 6.

Poerner to visit

John Poerner, a newly appointed member of the Rilroad Commission of Texas will be in Midland Tuesday.

A public reception will be held at 10:30 a. m.in the Ellenburger Room of the Midland Hilton.

Poerner, a former member of the Texas House of Representatives from Hondon, was sworn in as a member of the commission Jan. 3.

He relplaced Jim Langdon, long-time member who retired to go into private business.

Poerner served in the House in 1969-1975. He was executive director of the Governor's Committee on Aging in 1975 and was then appointed director of Education Resources to concentrate on school finances.

Nation at important point on gas imports

The Los Angles Times

WASHINGTON — "Once you get into the habit of importing gas, you get hooked on it," said David J. Bardin. "It's hard for the country to get off it."

Bardin, administrator of the Economic Regulatory Administration of the U.S. Department of Energy, is one of the key federal officials charged with developing a comprehensive policy for importation of liquefied natural gas.

"From the national point of view, we're at the point of some pretty important federal decisions on importing liquefied natural gas," he said in a recent interview.

Federal LNG policy has fluctuated widely in the past three years, and many gas industry officials as well as consumers are urging the government to establish a policy and stick to it so they can make long-range plans. However, some gas industry executives fear that the federal policy review may be designed to knock the legs from under the infant LNG industry.

To federal officials, the issues are complex: Are expensive LNG imports necessary? If so, how much LNG is desirable? Under what prices, conditions and safeguards should LNG imports be allowed?

Spokesmen for the American Gas Association and other industry organizations insist that the only alternative to imported LNG is insufficient domestic natural gas and additional imported oil.

Gas companies fear that they will have to begin cutting off service in the 1980s, even to high-priority residential and commercial customers, unless the government lets them supplement existing gas supplies by importing large amounts of LNG and Algeria or Indonesia.

"There is absolutely no question but that LNG is required to meet the energy needs in the service territory served by Southern California Gas Co.," William L. Cole, the firm's vice president, testified at a hearing in Washington this month.

The hearing was conducted by the federal interagency task force on LNG Imports, the group of officials charged with development of LNG policy.

California imports no liquid natural gas now, but could become the state most dependent on it, according to a study by the Office of Technology Assessment, a congressional agency.

In this connection, Frederick E. John, director of policy and program development for the California Public Utilities Commission, told the recent LNG hearing that commission studies showed that California could receive as much as 34 percent of its gas supply from LNG by 1985 and 45 percent by 1990.

For the nation as a whole, more than 10 percent of natural gas consumption could come from LNG by 1990, according to gas industry estimates.

Carter administration officials are dubious about whether the United States should become heavily dependent on imported gas.

"The key element here is, do we need all these LNG imports?" Henry P. Santiago, chairman of the federal LNG Task Force and acting director of the Department of Energy's Office of Oil and Gas Policy, said in an interview.

President Carter's energy plan, as submitted to Congress in April, said on this point:

"Due to its extremely high costs and safety problems, LNG is not a long-term secure substitute for domestic natural gas."

This argument is disputed by the U.S. gas industry.

Almost all the natural gas now used in the United States is produced in this country or in Canada and is transported through pipelines. Only about one-tenth of one percent of U.S. gas consumption now comes from LNG.

Gas industry officials, however, are counting on rapidly rising imports of LNG to help fill the gap left by a combination of dwindling U.S. gas supplies and rising demand during the next decade.

As proposed by the industry, LNG would be brought in large tankers from Algeria, Indonesia, Alaska, and possibly from such other countries as Iran, Australia, Nigeria and the Soviet Union.

Through the use of expensive gasification facilities in the exporting country, natural gas would be converted to a liquid about one-six hundredths of its original volume by reducing its temperature to minus 259 degrees Fahrenheit. After the tanker trip, the LNG would be turned back into gas and moved through piplines tro consumers.

Santiago noted that LNG projects calling for the importation of 800 billion cubic feet of natural gas annually had already received final or conditional federal approval and that projects for another 1.25 trillion cubic feet were either awaiting federal approval or were in the planning stage. In sum, these LNG projects could provide about a tenth of the 20 trillion cubic feet of natural gas the country now uses each year.

Carter administration officials fear that the large amounts of capital required for LNG projects and the length of the LNG contracts, often 20 years, will make it much less likely that the nation will develop domestic energy supplies, whether from coal gasification projects, solar energy or alternate energy forms.

"Our most serious single concern about LNG and foreign gas is that it will close the door to development and exploitation of domestic energy sources," the Energy Department's Bardin said.

Some federal officials and consumers wonder whether it is wise to become too dependent on anyone country or countries for long-term gas imports because accident, war or strained relations could disrupt gas supplies.

"And how do you evaluate the reliability of the exporting country? I don't know how the hell to handle that. Today's friend is tomorrow's enemy. Will Iran be our friend 20 years from now?" one Energy Department official said.

Federal policy-makers also must struggle with price. LNG is very expensive, compared to U.S. and Canadian gas. For example, the price in California of proposed LNG imports from Indonesia will begin at $3.42 per thousand cubic feet, more than twice the current price of new domestic gas in interstate commerce. It is more difficult to bargain to keep down the prices of new domestic gas and of gas imported by pipeline from Canada or Mexico if the nation is willing to pay high prices for LNG.

1977 best 12 months for drilling since '60

DENVER, Colo. — Wells drilled for oil and gas in the United States and completed in 1977 totalled 44,619, reports Petroleum Information Corp., a Denver-based concern.

The annual well completion total is the highest since 1960 when it was almost exactly the same as last year's, PI said.

The statistics cited cover all U.S. activity through Dec. 30.

The total for 1977 was 10.4 percent or 4,144 wells greater than in 1976. Predictions at the end of 1976 called for an increase of eight percent.

A larger-than-predicted increase was apparently due to accelerated expansion of the nation's total of drilling rigs and to the emphasis on exploration for and development of natural gas projects, where intrastate gas prices, not subject to regulation, provided significant economic incentive.

Suring the Year, an average of 2,003 rotary rigs were active on a month-to-month basis.

Last year, 10,506 new gas wells were completed, 18.5 percent more than in 1976 and 44 percent more than the 7,320 completed in 1975.

Last year's drilling total included 18,831 wells completed as producing oil wells. This compares to 16,927 completed in 1976, a gain of 15 percent.

And, 14,692 wells drilled in 1977 found no production and were abandoned. But the percentage of failures wasn't as high last year as in 1976 — in fact, failures decreased by almost two percent.

Pure exploration — wells looking for new fields — increased by 1.5 percent, reversing a decline in new field wildcats in 1975 and 1976. And, 18.5 percent of new field wildcats resulted in some sort of discovery. This was slightly higher than the 1976 success ratio of 18.1 percent. A total of 582 new field oil discoveries and 598 gas discoveries resulted from 6,387 new field wildcats drilled.

Altogether, 1977 drilling accounted for 203.85 million feet of hole, up from 185.30 feet in 1976. The gain, just over 10 percent, was slightly less than the gain in total completions. Consequently, the average total depth of wells drilled last year was slightly less than the average for 1976.

The decline was 16.7 feet per well to an average for the year of 4,630.9 feet. However, average depth of new field wildcats increased slightly.

The average total depth decline was accounted for by increased activity in states such as Pennsylvania and Ohio where shallow drilling is characteristic.

Among the states, Texas was again the leader, with 15,122 completions representing an increase of 7.6 percent. Oklahoma, Kansas, Louisiana, California and Ohio followed in that order.

Biggest percentage gain in completions came in Pennsylvanian, where 1,357 completions represented and increase of 66.9 percent over 1976.

New Mexico gained 31.7 percent, Wyoming 30.6 percent, and Oklahoma 19.3 percent as compared to the 1976 completion record.

Tax-exempt property may show inequality in tax system

EDITORS' NOTE — The property tax is the lifeblood of local goverement. But more and more landowners—many of them rich and powerful—pay little or no property tax. Here, in the first of a three-part series, is a look at the scope of the problem.

By LEE MITGANG
AP Urban Affairs Writer

American taxpayers pay $15 billion a year in extra property taxes—averaging about $300 a family—because a growing number of their neighbors pay none.

About one-third of America's real estate is tax-exempt. And that property is worth more than $800 billion, according to the Advisory Commission on Intergovernmental Relations.

Local governments determine how much property tax should be collected each year and then divide that burden among available property owners. What one property owner is excused from paying, someone else must.

Exemptions are granted for churches and non-profit cemeteries in all 50 states and Washington, D.C. Thirty-nine states exempt parsonages and university dorms, 34 exempt YMCA's, 31 exempt veteran organizations, 24 exempt fraternal organizations like the Elks and the Eagles, and 10 states exempt labor and professional organizations—to name just a few groups that most commonly receive favored treatment.

Many states also give whole or partial exemptions to property-owning senior citizens, veterans and welfare recipients, hospitals, and certain businesses and their inventories.

"I don't think there's a public awareness of just how much property escapes taxation," says John Coleman, who surveys exemptions every five years for the U.S. Census Bureau.

The reason people don't know, simply, is that less than half the states keep records on the amount of property that is untaxed. Even fewer keep annual accounts. And the Census Bureau says it gets usable information from only 18 states and Washington, D.C., in its effort to track tax exemptions, and even those figures are considered very rough.

An Associated Press survey of all 50 states was able to add only three more states with partial statistics to that total.

The census figures, combined with responses to the AP survey, showed that tax exempt rolls are climbing rapidly everywhere—in many states even faster than the growth of the value of all real property.

The tax exempt problem is most acute in aging, highly taxed Northeastern states, the survey shows.

Alfred Balk, author of the book "The Free List," surmised that about two-thirds of the value of exempt property is owned by governments, and the rest by private groups or persons.

Charitable and welfare groups probably own less property than the estimated $110 billion religious organizations, but are believed to be the fastest growing exempt category. However, the 1976 census statistics for 18 states suggest that educational organizations hold first place among private taxexempt organizations. But no one has compiled reliable figures.

In some places, including Hartford, Conn., and the State of Minnesota, church-owned property is the largest category of exempt property, outside of government-held real estate.

A high percentage of tax-exempt property isn't necessarily a problem, nor is a low percentage a sign that trouble doesn't exist.

Among the many variables that can tip the balance toward trouble include how much free service a city has to provide to the tax-free property and, on the other hand, how much economic activity the tax-exempt organization generates.

Some states, such as Louisiana, Wyoming and Alaska, contain vast amounts of federal land, which is constitutionally exempt from local taxes. But some federally owned facilities, such as military bases, pay their way by generating local employment. And the federal government disburses about $1 billion a year to local governments on land and buildings worth more than $450 billion.

Some states, among them Maine, North Dakota and Wyoming, have high percentages of tax-exempt religious, charitable and educational property but also have relatively low tax burdens, so citizens don't feel it.

Some cities including Denver, Milwaukee and Pittsburgh have worked out arrangements with tax exempt organizations providing for annual payments, service charges or special taxes that make up for some of the lost taxes.

And some universities with vast tax-exempt real estate holdings, such as Harvard University in Cambridge, Mass., Northwestern University in Evanston, Ill., each have agreed to make voluntary annual payments to local government.

Thirty-six state governments either make some form of inlieu payments to local governments for state-owned land or buildings, or else allow cities to tax state property. The remaining 14 states forbid either.

The State of New Jersey, for instance, this year began to pay Trenton, Newark and other cities $10.9 million a year to replace taxes lost on state property in those cities.

But the ACIR's John Shannon says payments by state governments or private tax-exempt organizations to local governments often amount to small handouts that don't begin to solve local tax-exempt problems.

"We really don't know of any state that has an absolutely comprehensive system of inlieu payments," he said.

The trouble with tax exemptions starts in cities or states that have high taxes and high concentrations of tax-exempt property.

An AP survey of some of the largest U.S. cities showed Los Angeles and Houston relatively free of problems, while the older industrial cities, such as St. Louis, Philadelphia, Boston, and—most of all—New York have has relatively rapid growth of exemptions in recent years.

Tax-exempt property is most abundant in these urban areas—and thus may pose the biggest problems there—for several reasons. The poor, sick and elderly tend to live in cities, and thus many kinds of tax-exempt organizaions like hospitals and veterans organizations are also located in urban areas.

Finally, some suburban communities have recognized the harm large amounts of tax-free property can do to their tax bases and have zoned them out.

Cowboys turn Orange Crush into Slush

By BRUCE LOWITT

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Craig Morton, who used to stand on the sideline marveling at Dallas' Doomsday Defense, got a close-up look at it Sunday. He got so many close looks, in fact, that he wound up on the sideline again.

The idea, Denver Coach Red Miller said after the Cowboys had defeated his Broncos 27-10 in Super Bowl XII, had been for Morton to establish the rush.

He did — just by standing in the Broncos' backfield. The rush came from Harvey Martin and Randy White and just about anybody else who wanted a piece of the retread quarterback who spent the first 9½ of his 13 pro seasons in a Dallas uniform.

So fierce was the onslaught from the men in silver and blue that the Broncos were busted long before Roger Staubach and Robert Newhouse threw passes for Dallas' last two touchdowns.

IN FACT, it came even before Tony Dorsett ran three yards for Dallas' first touchdown in the first period and before Efren Herrera kicked two first-half field goals that gave the Cowboys a 13-0 halftime lead and all the points they'd need in the game.

It came on Denver's very first possession with less than five minutes played.

The National Football League's official play-by-play told it all in three successive plays:

"Armstrong runs left side, gets 1."

"Morton passes right incomplete, deflected behind line."

"Morton back to pass, sacked by R. White, loses 11."

That said it all. When the Broncos tried to run, they went virtually nowhere, gaining 121 yards on 29 attempts with Rob Lytle finishing with 35 yards and Otis Armstrong winding up with 27.

And when the Broncos tried to pass, Martin, White & Co. were on Morton like wolves, sacking him, rattling him, chasing him. Unofficially he and Norris Weese were sacked only four times — as though "only" belonged in there. Martin got each of them once for 19 yards in losses; White and D.D. Lewis each got a sack for another 16 yards.

BUT WHEN they didn't officially fling Morton to the rock-hard artificial turf, they had him scrampering across it like a scared rabbit, throwing passes more out of self-preservation than anything else. He got rid of the ball 15 times. He completed eight of the passes — four to his teammates and four to Dallas defenders. The quartet of interceptions was a Super Bowl record.

The Cowboys might have picked off a few more were it not for their overanxiousness, trying to roar off into the wide open spaces before they actually had the ball.

When Morton hit Dallas defensive end Ed "Too Tall" Jones right in the numbers midway in the third period with the Cowboys leading 20-3, Morton's number was up. Miller unceremoniously yanked him and sent in young Weese.

"We had made the decision to switch long before that," Miller said, ineffectively trying to smooth some balm on Morton's wounds. "The plan was for Craig to come out on second down no matter what he did. Even if he'd thrown a completion for a lot of yards, Norris would have gone in."

THAT'S NOT the way Morton saw it — but he didn't mind all that much, either.

"When I was taken out, it didn't make me feel good. But I'm not going to play my life over because of it," he said.

Morton was almost in awe of the Doomsday II defense that so thoroughly slammed the door on Denver's dream of a Super Bowl victory in its very first playoff. "They seemd to know almost every play we were calling. I tried to audible (change plays at the line), but they even read some of them."

They could have read the label on Morton's undershirt if they'd wanted to. They were that close that often.

"Our plan was rush, rush, rush; pressure, pressure, pressure," said Martin, the Defensive Player of the Year and, along with White, the Super Bowl's Most Valuable Player. "We were coming, coming, coming. We wanted to force Craig out of the pocket and we did. We wanted to rattle him. We wanted to unsettle him early and get him mixed up."

Miller, too, said the biggest factor in the game, the one upon which other factors like interceptions and fumbles and busted plays were created, was the Dallas pass rush. "I'd said during the week that the game was going to be decided in the pits, in the play of their lines and ours, and it was. Their pass rush was too much for us to handle. It was as simple as that."

And who was Tom Landry to disagree?

"YEAH, I guess you could say this was one of our better passrushing days," the Cowboys' coach understated. "In fact, I was kind of surprised Craig threw the interceptions. I thought he'd take the sacks, just like he did all year."

Morton was intercepted only eight times all season, his first with Denver after those 9½ years with Dallas and 2½ with the New York Giants. But his panic-stricken passing, usually with Cowboys draped on him or thundering within arm's length, doomed Denver to defeat in its first Super Bowl appearance.

The first time Denver had the ball he was belted, sacked and generally mugged. The second time, the first cracks appeared. With White and Charlie Waters waylaying him, he tried to dump the ball off. He did — right into safety Randy Hughes' lap.

It was Dallas ball on the Denver 25, and then on the Denver 12 after Staubach hit Billy Joe DuPree on a swing pass to the right side, an area that was invitingly open all game. Four plays later — the last of them a fourth-and-inches play — Dorsett whizzed off left tackle for three of his 66 yards and the opening touchdown.

Then things got out of hand. The only problem was the Cowboys couldn't get a grip on the opportunities Denver kept throwing their way.

TWO PLAYS after Dorsett's TD, Morton was intercepted again, this time by Aaron Kyle, and it was first down on the Broncos' 35. Dorsett sprinted 18 yards, then the Cowboys' offense collapsed and Herrera made it 10-0 with a 35-field goal.

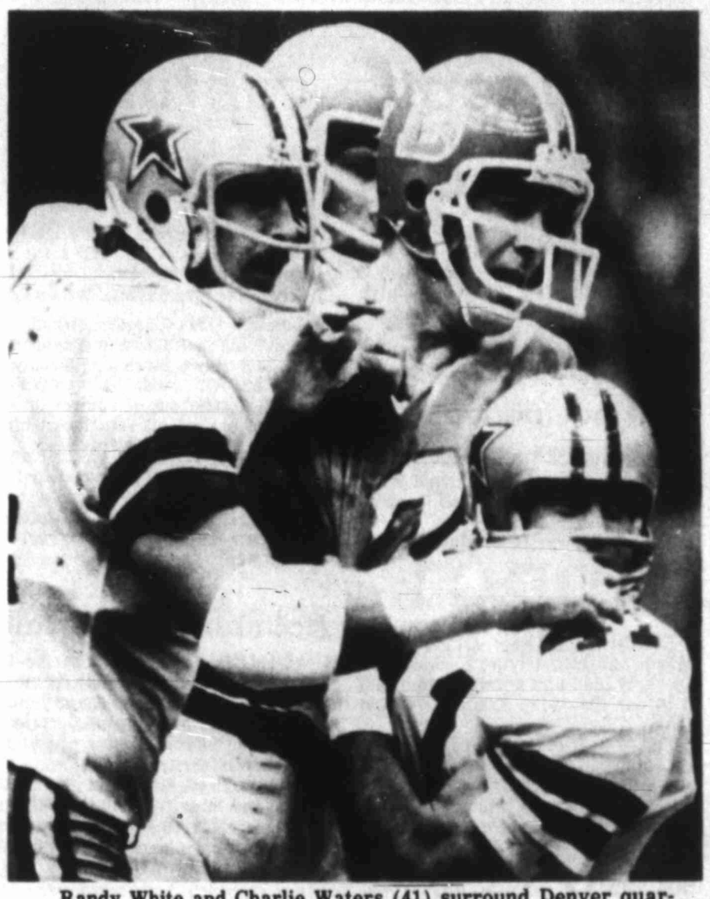

Once more Denver gave up the ball — this time with a more conventional method, a punt — and at the start of the second period the Cowboys reeled off another mini-march, this one from their 43 to the Denver 25. And Herrera kicked a 43-yarder that made it 13-0.

Back came Denver-for two plays. The second was a long pass, right to Dallas cornerback Benny Barnes. Dallas went nowhere but the Broncos were gracious enough to let them keep the ball by fumbling the punt. Eventually Herrera came on again and missed another 43-yard try, sailing it wide to the left of the uprights.

Back came Denver-for five plays. Then Jack Dolbin fumble a Morton pass and Hughes pounced on it. On came Herrera, this time for a 32-yarder. Wide right.

Backcame Denver-for one play, Morton's pass to Riley Odoms. He fumbled. Hughes recovered. Staubach passed to DuPree and he fumbled to Denver's Tom Jackson. So Morton passed-to Dallas cornerback

Most points, fewest casualties survives

By JIM MURRAY
Los Angeles Times

NEW ORLEANS — They played the one dozenth Super Bowl on this rockpile with a carpet on it Sunday. Like a World War, there were no winners, only survivors.

The Dallas Cowboys ended up with the most points and the fewest stretcher cases but there were more limpoffs than Indianapolis. The score was 27-10. It wasn't that good.

The game ended up with backup quarterbacks running the teams, with a punter playing quarterback and specialty team members playing whatever positions were open and with a halfback throwing the key touchdown pass.

A kicker missed three straight field goals, the Dallas Cowboys broke the record for penalties, Craig Morton tied the record for the most interceptions by the first half.

It had all the style and finesse of a walk-on bout at St. Nick's Arena. These guys made more mistakes than the boss at the office Christmas party. There were 10 fumbles, 4 interceptions, 20 penalties. And some people paid $200 a seat to see this thing.

If Denver ever gets in the Super Bowl again, they better put handles on the football. They dropped so many it looked as if it were leaking footballs.

DALLAS LOST their best player early in the third quarter when the Denver coach took him out of the game. Craig Morton had just narrowly missed throwing his fifth interception of the game. Dallas Cowboy Tackle Too Tall Jones couldn't hold onto it because his fingers were taped together. Morton had trouble all day separating friend from foe with his passes. He completed four for Denver — and four for Dallas. Craig just threw to whoever was open.

Denver got 35 yards passing — not counting the completions Morton made to Dallas. If you put them all together, he had a good day.

Robert Newhouse is a stumpy halfback who will never remind anyone of Slinging Sammy Baugh or John Unitas. But he threw a 29-yard touchdown pass in this game. It was not only his first touchdown pass of the season, it was his first pass, period. When a Dallas running back almost outgains the entire Denver quarterback corps, you have some idea of why some people thought the real Denver Broncos were locked in a room someplace and the Brown University varsity showed up for the

Broncos' fairy tale comes to end

NEW ORLEANS — Fairy tales must have been written a long time ago, because in today's stark world of reality Cinderella loses her glass slipper and gets punched in the face to boot.

The Denver Broncos, this year's Cinderella Story of the National Football League, did everything right, except the ending here Sunday before 76,400 viewers in the Superdome and before 150 million viewers across the world. Super Bowl XII was supposed to be where the prince finds the humble maid to adorn her with riches she had only dreamed of, but she ended up with Doomsday II and a possible trip to oblivion.

DOOMSDAY'S DALLAS Cowboys "Mortonized" the Broncos, 27-10, behind the savage rush of Harvey Mertin, Randy White and Ed "Too Tall" Jones while secondary members Randy Hughes, Aaron Kyle, Bennie Barnes and Mark Washington helped Denver quarterback Craig Morton set a new Super Bowl record for interceptions before five minutes had elapsed in the third period.

It was the second time Morton has failed to win the "Big Game'. His other try was for Dallas against Baltimore, and many say that is the game that started Morton's decline as a Dallas Cowboy.

Dallas battered Morton in an all out assault. He completed only four of 15 passes for 39 yards, had four interceptions due mainly to unceasing charges of Dallas' "Too Mean' line and was sacked twice before being

Official defends close call

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Referee Jim Tunney defended his decision in calling Dallas quarterback Roger Staubach out of bounds on a play that preceded a Cowboy field goal in the second quarter of the Super Bowl Sunday.

Staubach, scrambling to escape Denver's pass rush, was ruled to have stepped out of bounds just before unloading an interception to Bronco safety Bill Thompson in the end zone.

Television replays of the play were inconclusive.

"IT WAS my call," Tunney told a pool reporter after the Cowboys' 27-10 victory. "My responsiblity is the quarterback and I felt that he had touched the line and then threw. The ball was still in his hand when he touched the line. I saw no reason to doubt myself. I saw the line and saw the touch. All he has to do is touch it."

Because of the call, the interception was nullified and Staubach absorbed a 6-yard loss to the Denver 25. Efren Herrera booted a 43-yard field goal on the next play for a 13-0 Cowboy lead.

UT hands Hogs first setback

By GREG THOMPSON
AP Sports Writer

Texas Coach Abe Lemons says he is just as surprised as anybody else by his Longhorns, who already hold a victory over third-ranked Arkansas and the early-season lead in the Southwest Conference.

"We just baffle me," said Lemons after unranked Texas stunned unbeaten Arkansas 75- 69 Saturday night in Austin before a SWC-record crowd of 16,288. "We're not very big, but we play hard."

Crafty junior guard John Moore — fronting an airtight Texas zone defense — forced the weary, sluggish Razorbacks into repeated mistakes and pumped in 20 points as Texas snapped Arkansas' record of 19 consecutive SWC victories.

THE RAZORBACKS strolled through the SWC last year with a 16-0 record in regular season and Lemons claimed they would do it again this year.

"Yeah, I said they couldn't be beaten, but you can't always believe what I say," quipped Lemons. "Some of the things I say are true and some of them are not true."

"We can't let them walk through the conference two straight years," Moore said of Arkansas. "No matter if you're ranked third in the country, you have still got to go out and play the game."

The loss dropped the Hogs to 2-1 in the SWC and third place behind Texas Tech, which fed on anemic TCU, Baylor and Rice last week to fatten its SWC mark to 3-1.

"IF I had it to do over again, when we were leading 33-27 in the first half, I would have pulled them (Texas) out of their zone," said Arkansas Coach Eddie Sutton, whose Hogs dropped to 14-1 for the season.

"This was our fourth game in eight days and we should have conserved our energy and slowed things down a little," added Sutton, who used only one substitute against Texas.

The Razorbacks had staggered through three games last week, while Texas, now 12-2 for the season and 4-0 in the SWC, brushed off Houston 100-89 on Tuesday and rested until Saturday night.

"I saw them play the other night and I thought they looked sluggish," said Lemons. "We felt we had a chance to deflect some of their passes if we could keep our hands up.

THE LONGHORNS forced the Hogs into 19 turnovers — marring a sensational shooting performance by the Hogs, who hit all seven free throws and 58.5 percent of their field goals.

Sidney Moncrief, hitting all of his free throws and nine of 11 field goals, paced the Razorbacks with 24 points.

In other SWC action Saturday: Texas Tech, behind Mike Russell's 30 points, blistered Rice 75-63; Houston, with Charles Thompson and Cecile Rose combining for 43 points, pounded Texas Christian 79-63, and Texas A&M, with Karl Godine and Willie Foreman keying a furious second-half rally, trimmed Southern Methodist 78- 71.

Tuesday night's schedule finds Houston entertaining Baylor, SMU traaveling to Texas Tech, Arkansas hosting Texas A&M and Rice traveling to Texas. TCU is idle.

SPORTS IN BRIEF

Goolagong captures 25th match in row

HOLLYWOOD, Fla. — Evonne Goolagong of Australia defeated countrywoman Wendy Turnbull 6-2, 6-3 to capture her 25th consecutive match and win a women's tennis tournament.

Goolagong took only 49 minutes to win the $20,000 first prize.

Golf postponed

PHOENIX — Rain forced the postponement of the final round of the $200,000 Phoenix Open Golf Tournament.

The round was rescheduled for today.

Andretti wins

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina — Mario Andretti, driving a Lotus, took an early lead and never relinquished it to win the 53-lap Argentine Grand Prix.

The 37-year-old native of Nazareth, Pa., roared from his pole positon and never looked back, as he averaged 119 miles per hour in winning this inaugural competition for the Formula One season.

Defending Formula One champion Niki Lauda of Austria was second while Partick Depailler of France was third.

Waltrip is honored

ATLANTA — Darrell Waltrip, winner of six stock car races during the 1977 season, was named the Motorsports Press Association's Driver of the Year.

The Franklin, Tenn., driver, who claimed four triumphs in superspeedway events, edged veteran Cale Yarborough by two votes in the balloting by MPA members.

RIVERSIDE, Calif. — Veteran stock car race driver Sonny Easley, 39, of Van Nuys, Calif. and a racing mechanic were killed in an accident at Riverside International Raceway.

Easley's 1968 Camaro, which he was driving in practice to prepare for next Saturday's Stock Car Products 300 NASCAR modified sportsman race here, slid out of control into a group of parked pit vehicles at high speed.

The other victim was identified as Douglas B. Gruntz, 37, of La Crescenta, Calif. Officials said he was pinned between a truck and a van struck by the race car.

Holman nips Certain

ALAMEDA, Calif. — A strike by Marshall Holman in the 10th frame of the championship game gave him a 221-218 victory over Jimmy Certain in a $90,000 Professional Bowlers Association tournament.

Certain fired strikes in the ninth frame and three times in the 10th but Holman, a six-time PBA champion, threw the strike he needed to win the $12,000 top prize.

Canadian triumphs

STOWE, Vt. — Canadian Jim Hunter skied a phenomenal second run to score a come-from-behind victory in the $40,000 professional downhill race, the third stop on this year's World Pro Skiing Circuit.

After the first run down the 1¼-mile-long course, Hunter trailed Engelhard Pargaetzi of Switzerland by .471 seconds. However, he beat Paragaetzi in the second run by nearly one full second to claim the $5,400 first place prize.

Cowboys 'Mortonize' Denver for 27-10 Super win

faced with the humiliation of being pulled from the game with 6:37 still left in the third period.

THE CINDERELLA comeback of Craig Morton went down the drain with the Broncos. It was the real symbol of the Super Bowl.

The Dallas defense battered him and Morton left as second best' almost as if destiny intended it that way.

" I really hated to see Craig pulled out of the game like that," Martin, who shared MVP honors with White, said after the game. "He did all he could, but the Cowboy defense was ready. Things really went bad for him out there, and maybe he got his head down a little bit. We were at our top form. I don't think we made too many mistakes on defense."

Morton's replacement, Norris Weese, a refugee from the World Football League, led Denver to a field goal and a touchdown, but he completed only four of 10 passes with his longest a nine-yard sortie.

HE ONLY had to move the team 6 yards for Denver's third period score after Ricky Upchurch returned a kickoff 67 yards. He moved the team only 30 yards before Jim Turner booted a 47-yard field, one yard shy of the Super Bowl record. In short, it was a day of frustration for the Denver offense.

Doomsday is the end.

"I was disappointed I didn't play better in the big game," Morton said. "I still want to thank the Lord for getting us here. We came a long way in a short time. Dallas just beat us at our own game. They got us into predictable pass situations. I didn't handle the pressure very well either."

THE DALLAS offense was not particularly a thing of beauty in itself, but it did come up with the big plays and that was the difference.

Dallas fumbled six times, but lost only two. One of the four that was recovered saved a touchdown by Denver when Tony Hill dropped on a fumbled punt by Bucky Dilts at the one-yard line.

Dallas got 13 points in the first half after Hughes' interception of a Morton misfire setup a three-yard TD by Tony "Last Time Rookie" Dorsett and another interception by Kyle set up one of two field goals by Efren Herrera. Herrera, however, missed other field goal tries in the first half of 43, 32 and 44 yards.

But when Denver tried to make a game of it in the third quarter with Turner's field goal, Staubach dug in his spurs and fired a 45-yard scoring bomb to a diving Butch Johnson in the end zone.

Johnson fumbled the ball on impact, but had already crossed the plane of the goal.

" Roger just told me to run a strong post pattern and he said he would lead me," Johnson explained. 'It was a good pass. That's the way it was intended because Denver was covering real close. I knew I had a touchdown, but I hurt my thumb in the second quarter and I knew I wouldn't be able to hold the ball if I landed on that hand, and that's exactly what happened."

Denver came right back with a touchdown on the heroics of Upchurch's return, but then a stubby and unlikely hero for Dallas emerged when fullback Robert Newhouse put the game out of reach with an option pass for a 19-yard touchdown to Golden Richards. It had a perfect spiral.

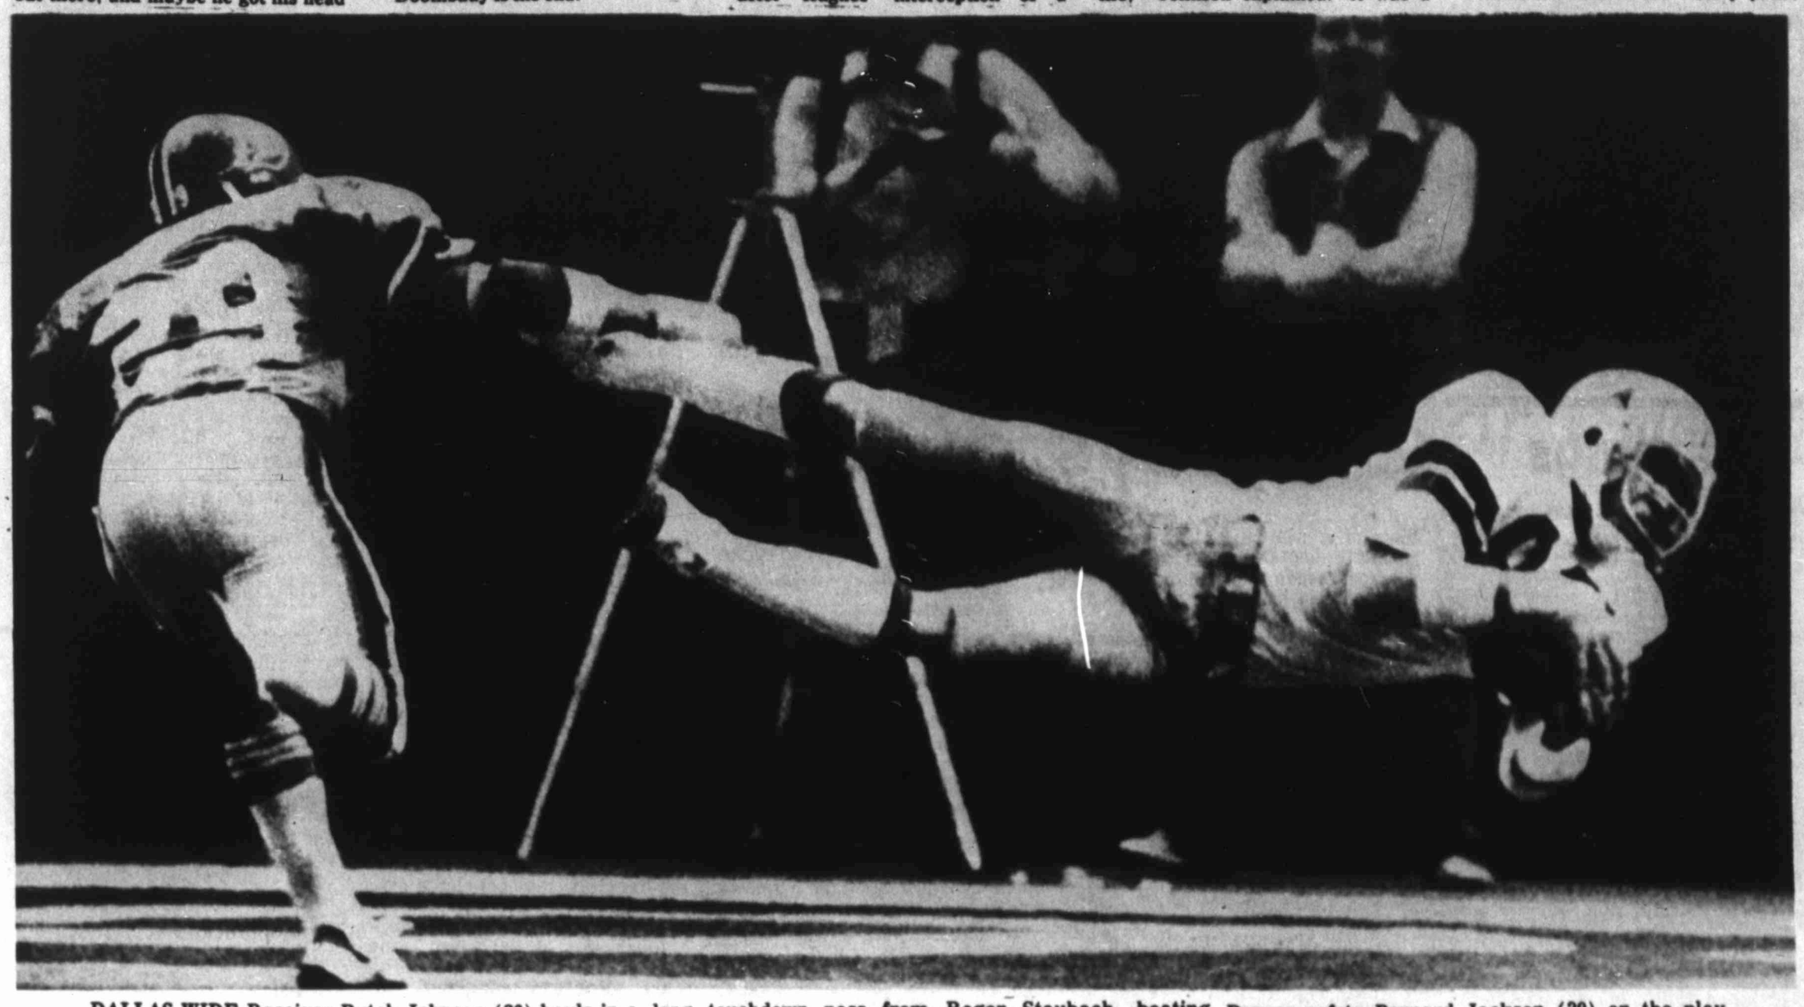

"There's really nothing to it when I do it," a modest, but jubiliant Newhouse said in the victory press room, "I've been working on that play every day this week and I thought for a while we weren't going to use it. We used that play once for a completion two years ago on a Monday night game against Detroit. They don't let me throw very often, but I get the job done."

"It was a pretty good pass, wasn't it?"

Dallas Coach Tom Landry, enjoying his second Super Bowl victory, came right to the point, "When you have a good pass rush, you usually win. I think we did a pretty good job in that department. We made some costly turnovers, but I thought we were playing well. Our mistakes were of the heart, not of the mind."

LANDRY WAS asked if he was more emotional during this game after the press had termed Dallas as an unemotional team this week. Landry responded. "No, I was pretty level out there."

And that's the way it was. The business like precision of Doomsday won a victory over the emotional Orange Crush. Quit smiling, you might like it.

DALLAS WIDE Receiver Butch Johnson (86) hauls in a long touchdown pass from Roger Staubach, beating Denver safety Bernard Jackson (29) on the play.

Cowboys survive

game instead. In fact, both of these teams should try to get in the Ivy League. Denver should try Harvard in the next Super Bowl.

THE DENVER team is as emotional as the third act of Traviata. Dallas is like their coach. They are about as emotional as a Swiss bank. The poker faces won.

The Denvers came out hand-holding and hugging. If it had been a dance, boy, would they have been ready! The only thing they forgot was the football. Maybe it's easier to hold onto at 5000 feet.

There are lots of guys in sports who are snakebit in their big moments. Sam Snead never won the Open. Ernie Banks never played in a World Series. And Craig Morton never won a Super Bowl. Craig's trouble is, he gets in them. He waits till every football fan in the country is watching before he hits the step with the roller skate on it.

The Dallas game plan was to chase Craig clear up to Shreveport on most plays. Craig looked like Liza fleeing across the ice most of the game. The way Dallas went after him, they should have had bloodhounds.

THEIR GAME plan was to run Morton out of the game by the third quarter but, the way he was moving THEIR, the Cowboy offense, they might have had second thoughts about it. It was a mistake, like running a rich kid with a bad backswing out of the golf foursome or a guy who drew for inside straights out of the poker hand.

The Denver coach, Red Miller, got the gong out when Craig began completing passes to tackles — or almost. You can't even complete a pass to your own tackle.

Craig could be pardoned for thinking Ed "Too Tall" Jones was on his team, anyway. Too Tall spent the day in the Denver backfield. He was able to do this because the guy guarding him couldn't see up that high.

TOO TALL is so tall that he has to get up slowly in the morning otherwise he gets a nosebleed. With a little luck, he could be a tree.

He was in on 5 tackles, batted down 2 passes but, mostly, Too Tall's function was to jam up the outside and the middle. He did this usually by rolling up the guy trying to block him into this little ball and throwing him at the ball-carrier.

"We knew Craig Morton and we knew if we gave him time to stand there and throw he might be trouble," Too Tall explained after the game as he stood there unrolling enough tape to embalm 8 Pharaohs.

Too Tall is so big he should be illegal. When Dallas got a penalty for having 12 men on the field, some people thought they meant Too Tall and the other 10.

Dallas already had a Super Bowl team before they went out and got Tony Dorsett. If Ed Jones is "Too Tall" and Harvey Martin is "Too Mean Martin, then, Dorsett is "Too Fast" T. D. Giving Dallas Dorsett is like giving a lion horns or a shark tusks. It's overkill.

Cowboys take win in stride

By DENNE H. FREEMAN

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Tex Schramm scanned a happy but relatively subdued Dallas Cowboy dressing room Sunday night and proclaimed: "The National Football Conference has returned."

With Dallas' 27-10 victory over the Denver Broncos in Super Bowl XII Sunday, the Cowboys presented the NFC with its first champion since the last time Dallas pulled the trick — a 24-3 triumph over Miami in Super Bowl VI.

Schramm, club president and one of the prime movers in the merger of the old American Football League into the National Football League, said, "The NFC will be 2-0 for 1978 after we win the Pro Bowl, too."

DALLAS COACH Tom Landry said: "We made a lot of NFC people happy. We're better than most people think. We don't claim to have a dynasty ourselves. You don't have dynasties in the NFL anymore because there are just too many good teams."

Landry, who has put Dallas into the playoffs in 11 of the past 12 years, added, "Our team should improve next year. Our defense is strong and should get stronge. Tony Dorsett will be better if he stays healthy. But you've got to keep working in this business."

Dallas' two Super Bowl victories ties it with Green Bay, Miami and Pittsburgh for the most National Football League titles. Dallas is now 21-6 against AFC teams.

New Orleans is the city of dreams for the Cowboys because that's where they defeated Miami six years ago.

Dorsett may like it best.

"It's unbelievable," said Dorsett. "A year ago, I was here in the Superdome with Pitt playing Georgia for the National Championship, and now I was here playing with the Cowboys for the World Championship. Maybe we should play all our games here."

Defensive end Harvey Martin, the Associated Press' NFL Defensive Player of the Year, said "I guess we shocked a lot of people. I knew they couldn't run on us."

THE COWBOYS intercepted former teammate Craig Morton four times.

"We didn't go in to hurt Craig," said Martin. "We went in to put pressure on him because when you put pressure on Craig he either throws it up or throws it away."

Landry said his game plan offensively was to come out smoking.

"We played it wide open because we knew if we got conservative we'd have a lot of trouble," said Landry. "I probably shouldn't have called that reverse on first down, though. We were a little tight to open up that quick."

Quarterback Roger Staubach said, "Winning two Super Bowl games is fantastic ... right now it is just ecstacy. Offensively, we were not a great team. The defense deserves the credit.

"Our front four is as good as any in football. Maybe Denver was just too emotional. All those turnovers really hurt them badly."

Concerning the Pro Bowl, which he will miss due to a broken finger that sidelined him for part of the fourth quarter, Staubach said, "I was really looking forward to going to the Pro Bowl. I am sorry I'll have to miss it."

THERE WAS no champagne in the Cowboys locker room, little shouting and a lot of tired smiles.

A big party was planned for later in the evening.

"It should be a great party," said Dallas defensie tackle Randy White, who swarmed Denver quarterbacks with his sidekick Martin.

"We had a lot of pressure on us because we were favorites," said White. "I think I still have a lot of room to improve through expeience. I think all of us, like Aaron Kyle, Bob Breunig and Thomas Henderson (new defensive starters) have room to improve. I think we can get really good."

Two Cowboy players, Staubach and wide receiver Butch Johnson, couldn't do any handclapping at the party. Staubach suffered the broken finger and Johnson, who caught a 45-yard touchdown bomb from Staubach, suffered a possible fractured thumb.

"We have unlimited potential," said safety Cliff Harris. "We should be good for a long time. The reason is the Landry system.

"HE MOVES people in and moves people out. It's a system that wins. It's a machine."

Landry also proved again he makes good decisions. In 1971, he had to choose between Morton and Staubach as his No. 1 quarterback. He took Staubach because of the mobility factor.

Phoenix finish threatened

PHOENIX (AP) — A rare desert rain forced a postponement of the final round of the $200,000 Phoenix Open Golf Tournament, raised the distinct possibility of an outright cancellation and put leader George Knudson in something of a dilemma.

If the tournament is washed out entirely, Knudson will receive a $30,000 first prize (three-quarters of the announced purse) and go in the record books as the winner. But it will be an unofficial victory and will not necessarily provide him with winners' benefits which include a year's exemption from qualifying, entry to the Tournament of Champions and Masters.

ON THE other hand, if the round is played, he faces the possibility of losing his 1-stroke lead and not winning at all.

"I hope we play it," the Canadian veteran said Sunday after a steady, overnight rain had left the Phoenix Country Club course in an unplayable condition and forced a postponement until Monday of the final 18 holes of the scheduled 72-hole event.

"I'd much rather win at 72 holes and get the winners' benefits, make it an official win."

He wasn't alone in his sentiments.

"I'd hate to see it washed out," said 48-year-old Arnold Palmer. "I want to play. I haven't been in a position like this in years."

Through 54 holes, Palmer was only 5 shots out of the lead at 208. That's 5 shots under par and represents his best standing in any American tournament in recent history.

Chaps play key road contests

After two road defeats last week, the Midland College Chaparrals face another crucial week on the road, traveling to Clarendon tonight and then Levelland to play South Plains College on Thursday.

The Chaps, 11-8, for the season, need victories in both games to creep back to the .500 level, a virtual necessity if Coach Jerry Stone's young club is to remain in the running for a regional playoff berth.

After this week, the Chaps play eight of their final 11 games at the MC gym and the road-runners can't wait to get home.

ODESSA COLLEGE and Western Texas College, running among the Western Junior College Conference leaders, both inflicted setbacks on the Chaps last week, snapping a five game winning streak that began before the Christmas break and included a first place finish in the Laredo JC Tournament.

Last year the Chaps made the Region Tournament with a 12-6 WJCC record and a second-place finish in the league. This year shapes up as the same type of race, and five losses quite probably would be good enough to win the title again.

Cullen Mayfield, the 5-9 guard from Dallas South Oak Cliff, leads the Chaps in scoring with 252 points while 6-6 Ricky Hudgins, the sophomore from Fort Worth, has 219 points and has hit 61 per cent of his shots from the field.

RON JONES, the outside marksman from Stillwater, Okla., is the only other Chap over 200, scoring 201.

Richard Holland, with 20 of 24, is the top free throw shooter at 83 per cent, but Mayfield isn't far behind with 80 per cent accuracy.

Hudgins is the rebound leader with 55 off the offensive boards and 62 defensive caroms. In assists, it's Mayfield with 72 and Jones with 60 while Alvin Mayes has 48. Mayfield also leads the team in steals with 24 with Mayes next with 12.

Bid for SF Giants is not 'bona fide'

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A reported $11 million bid by the Emil Bernard investment group to buy the San Francisco Giants baseball team "is not a bona fide offer," according to Giants co-owner Bud Herseth.

Contacted at his home in Phoenix, Ariz., Sunday, Herseth said, "Bernard had until (Saturday) night to come up with the money, and he didn't do it."

The San Francisco Chronicle said today that reports indicated Rocky Aoki, multi-millionaire owner of the Benihana restaurant chain, reportedly had joined Bernard's New York based-group, which proposed to move the Giants to Washington, D.C.

But Herseth, echoing previous statements by his partner, Bob Lurie, said, "All this Bernard stuff is a lot of junk. He just isn't very reliable."

DALLAS' RANDY White puts heat on Denver quarterback Craig Morton, forcing an interception that led to Dallas' first Super Bowl touchdown.

Lee, MHS risk perfect marks

Midland Lee and Midland High head down the homestretch of the first half of the District 5-4A girls basketball race in a dead heat for first place and if both teams can win tonight's assignments, they'll settle the title Thursday night at the MHS gym.

Midland Lee takes a 5-0 district record into tonight's 8 p.m. game against Abilene at the Lee High gym and the Rebels have been devastating in their last two starts.

Lee demolished Big Spring, 54-14, and Permian, 74-17, last week to raise its season's record to 16-7.

MIDLAND HIGH, also 5-0 in district, travels to Abilene Cooper tonight where the Bulldogs will be seeking their 18th win of the season in 24 games.

Last week, the Purple Pack took San Angelo, 37-26, and Odessa, 26-15.

The first half winner will play the second half winner for the championship, unless the second half winner is the same team that wins the first half or half winner ties or wins outright in the second half.

Cowboys turn Crush into Slush

Mark Washington. On came Herrera. His 44-yardtry was no god, off to the left.

Mercifully, the half ended.

After Denver took the secondhalf kickoff and marched smartly into range for Jim Turner's 47-yard field goal, the Broncos' fans were ready for another miracle.

No such luck.

MIDWAY IN the period, Staubach cranked up and unloaded a pass in the general direction of the goal line. He'd tried the same play moments earlier but overthrew Golden Richards. This time Butch Johnson was his target. He overthrew Johnson, too, but somehow Johnson launched himself horizontally, grabbed the ball while airborne and sailed into the end zone with it. Touchdown. Dallas led 20-3.

LA Rams are still looking

ANGELES (AP) — Carroll Rosenbloom, owner of the Los Angeles Rams, denies he's about to name a new coach for his National Football League team. And right now, he's not answering questions about any of the names mentioned as leading contenders for the job.

Amidst speculation that Stanford Coach Bill Walsh will take — or has taken — the Rams' coaching position, Rosenbloom says it will take at least "two or three weeks" to replace Coach Chuck Knox.

"My hiring practices have been well documented many times," said Rosenbloom Saturday night. "I don't talk to a man just once before I hire him. We have said for publication that it will take two or three weeks to make a decision — if we make one that soon."

Among those thought of as possible successors to Knox, who signed a six-year contract as coach of the Buffalo Bills last week, are Walsh, Washington Redskins Coach George Allen, Rams' assistant coach Ray Malavasi and St. Louis Cardinals Coach Don Coryell.

Cardinals' coaches contacted

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Assistants Ray Willsey and Joe Gibbs say they've been contacted for possible new jobs in light of the St. Louis Cardinals' unsettled coaching picture.

Confirmation from the two came Sunday following the hiring of Chuck Weber, the National Football League team's defensive backfield coach, for a similar position with the Cleveland Browns.

"It's going to be hard to leave," said Weber, 47, who served the past two seasons under Don Coryell, St. Louis' head coach. "My wife and I have enjoyed living here, my children are happy with the schools, but ..."

Cowboys overcome 'self-destruct'

TED BATTLES

BATTLE SCENE

For a while it looked like a good thing that Seattle or Tampa Bay wasn't the opposition, that is until the sidelines began to resemble a Gettysburg field hospital in the second half.

In the first half, the Cowboys were on their way to being the "worst" looking Super Bowl winner of all time.

Dallas managed only 13 points out of seven first-half Denver turnovers.

Dallas won 27-10, but should have been ahead 40-0 at half.

Things were so bad early in the game that anyone of a suspicious nature might bet the fix was on...both ways.

DALLAS PLAYED the first half like a guy pointing a pistol at his own temple. Luckily the cylinders kept clicking blank.

On the game's first play Butch Johnson butchered a flea flicker play, then Thomas Henderson creamed an innocent punt-returner before the ball arrived, the kind of thing that helped make the Broncos 14-2 this season.

If that wasn't bad enough, Tony Hill tried to catch a punt on his one, fumbled and no one is quite sure how, but Dallas wound up in possession.

The Cowboys finally scored a touchdown off a fumble recovery, but then tight end Billy Joe Dupree looked like a guy trying to chew gum and run a pattern at the same time and found it too challenging. Result, he fell down wide open in the end zone and Roger Staubach's pass sailed over his head.

LET'S NOT even mention the record number of penalties that would have embarrassed a team in its first exhibition out of summer camp.

If the Cowboys looked like they were trying to give it away, the Bronchos were just as determined to give it back, courtesy of Craig Morton, who predictably was pressured into mistakes that resulted in turnovers which were supposed to be cashed in for points and not frustration.

One sideline shot showed Dallas Coach Tom Landry checking a sheet of paper and TV commentator Tom Brookshier quipped, "He must be checking the bus schedule." As bad as the Cowboys were gumming up their offense, a fast getaway could have been desirable.

The Cowboys weren't through trying to give it away in the second half. Denver mounted its best drive at the start of the third period and Aaron Kyle buried it when he smeared a fourth-down gamble by punter Bucky Dilts at midfield. Dallas had 12 men on the field. The oversight kept the drive alive long enough for Jim Turner to boot a 47-yard field goal.

Dallas' kickoff coverage, as it was in the Minnesota game, was a paradise and Rick Upchurch returned a kickoff to the Cowboys' 27 to set up the Norris Weese-Jim Jensen engineered touchdown late in the third period.

AFTER EFREN Herrera blew three first half field goal attempts that would have sent Dallas into intermission with a 22-0 lead, Pat Summerall observed, "It will be a lonely halftime for Efren."

Brookshier amended, "Depending on which dressing room he goes into."

Potential disaster was averted by the Dallas defense (Too Tall, Randy and Harvey) that stood like a rock in the face of adversity and offensive frustration and finally the Cowboys behaved like the Cowboys to win the world championship in style.

So it wasn't nifty, like Cowboys' fans have become accustomed to expect. Better a sloppy winner than a pretty loser, but then the way both sides were popping fibulas, it was a bit difficult to look good.
