Community Work Is Discussed At Rotary Luncheon

—o—

At the luncheon session of the Slaton Rotary club last Friday, W. H. "Bill" Smith was the principal speaker on the program, discussing the subject, "The Real Function of This Rotary Club in Community Affairs." Impromptu talks were given by Jim W. Hood, Floyd C. Rector and others.

At the club's meeting this week, Roy A. Baldwin, Slaton attorney, is to speak on the subject, " The Problem of Prison Reform in Texas."

Music is to be furnished by the fine arts pupils of Miss Jeannette Ramsey, teacher of piano in Slaton public schools.

Several visitors from the Lubbock club attended the meeting last week.

Wilson Elected C.-C. Secretary for Fifth Year

—o—

L. A. Wilson, secretary of the Slaton Chamber of Commerce and Board of City Development, was elected last week for a fifth year's service with that organization, it was announced by W. H. Smith, president of the body. The action was taken at the regular meeting of the board of directors. Ten members of the board, W. H. Smith, P. G. Stokes, J. H. Brewer, J. A. Elliott, T. E. Roderick, George G. Green, R. D. Hickman, E. R. Legg, A. Kessel, and Dr. M. C. Overton, Jr., were present. Mr. Wilson's election was the unanimous action of the board, Mr. Smith said.

Besides being employed with the Chamber of Commecre and Board of City Development, Mr. Wilson is now president of the Slaton Rotary club, is adjutant of the American Legion Post, here, and also is president of the South Plains Commercial Executives association, the membership of which is composed of the chamber of commerce secretaries of about twenty-five counties of the South Plains section. He also is secretary-manager of the Texas Panhandle-Plains Poultry association.

During the four years of Wilson's service with the Slaton chamber, many important projects for the development of this community and section have been completed successfully. These projects include civic, industrial and commercial work.

An outstanding feature of last year's activities was the completion of the $250,000 modern, fireproof hospital here, which was secured for Slaton after the Chamber of Commerce conducted a successful campaign for a cash bonus of $20,000. The remainder of the investment was made by the Sisters of Mercy, now operating the hospital and serving not only this immediate community, but many other parts of the South Plains.

During the present year, three projects of the Chamber of Commerce stand out as being of leading importance. One is the successful organization of the Texas Panhandle-Plains Poultry association for 54 counties of Northwest Texas, with Slaton being selected as the home of the annual poultry show to be sponsored by the association. Another is the distribution of 1,000 bushels of seed wheat among 100 Slaton farmers for planting pastures to offset the effects of a short feed crop. All wheat was sold on one year's time, farmers' notes do not bear interest and were accepted by the Chamber of Commerce without security being required of the farmers buying the seed. The third outstanding project was the part played by the local chamber in helping to secure $30,000 worth of paving for the city, which was laid last summer by the state and county, on Ninth street from city limit to city limit, in connection with the paving of State Highway No. 7. Cooperating with the Slaton Chamber in making possible this paving were the Slaton City Commission and the County Commissioners' Court, represented in this part of the county by J. T. Pinkston, commissioner of Precinct No. 2.

The Slaton Chamber has set Tuesday night, January 13, as the time for the annual banquet and membership meeting, at which time full reports on the year's work, including many other projects, will be reviewed, a complete financial statement for the past year will be presented, and officers for the coming year will be nominated.

Posey, Union and McClung gins have had fairly good seasons, and their figures are not included in the Slaton total, although most of the cotton received by these gins comes from the Slaton territory.

Abel Returned Hot Checker Sunday

—o—

Chief of Police Tom Abel returned Sunday from Stephenville where he took in custody J. D. Mineye, who is alleged to have forged three "hot" checks in Slaton during July and August.

The checks given amounted to about thirty-eight dollars and were passed at Blackberry Grocery, Mick-Dell Gift Shop and Jones Dry Goods company. The name of H. C. Maxey was forged to two of the checks and the name of B. E. Wilson on the third.

He was placed in the Lubbock county jail awaiting trial.

Miss Pauline English is visiting her brother, E. B. English and family of this city. Miss English was a member of the senior class of last year and has many friends here.

PANHANDLE-PLAINS POULTRY SHOW OPENS HERE WEDNESDAY

First Annual Event Expected To Bring 1,000 Birds and Hundreds of Visitors To Slaton; Preparations Are All Made

—o—

"Slaton is ready and the entire Panhandle-Plains section of Texas is waiting with much interest the opening of the first annual Texas Panhandle-Plains Poultry show in Slaton on next Wednesday morning," said Taylor White, of Tahoka, president of the organization.

"The show will continue three days, December 10, 11 and 12, and we confidently expect it to be one of the best shows ever staged in the Southwest," Mr. Taylor added.

Entries are being received with every mail, and many poultrymen are predicting that, if weather conditions are favorable for the event, 1,000 or more of the finest chickens and turkeys of the northwestern section of the state will be on display. Exhibitors are urged to send their entries in early and get their birds on display early.

Preparations for the event have been in progress for three months, and no details have been overlooked that would make the exhibition outstanding of its kind, officers of the show said. The show will be held in the building formerly occupied by the Acorn store.

Hatchery operators of the region will hold a group meeting on Wednesday at 3 p. m. and the annual meeting of the association will be observed with a banquet at the Slaton clubhouse on Wednesday night. Officers and directors for the coming year will be elected at this meeting. All exhibitors at the show are invited to attend the banquet as guests of the poultry association.

The committee on nominations for new officers and directors, as announced by President White, consists of W. T. Magee, Levelland; George Samson, Post; R. B. Davis, Plainview; E. E. Young, Ralls; and D. F. Eaton, Lubbock.

Thursday, the second day, will be devoted largely to a one-day poultry short course. The detailed program will be as follows:

10:30 a. m.—"Sanitation and Equipment," address by R. B. Galloway, of Amarillo.

11.00 a. m.—"Selection of Breeding Pens, Mating, Standardization of Flocks." by D. H. Reid, head of the poultry department, Texas A. & M. college, College Station.

2:00 p. m.—"Selecting and Fitting Birds for Show Purposes," by I. L. Bandy, of Godley, Texas.

2:30 p. m.—"Care and Feeding," by R. C. Mowery, associate professor of thea nimal husbandry department of Texas Tech, Lubbock.

3:00 p. m. "Standardization of Poultry and Eggs," D. H. Reid, of Texas A. & M. college.

On Friday, at noon, the vocational agriculture teachers of high schools of the Panhandle-Plains section, of which O. T. Williams, of Floydada, is president, will have a luncheon at the Slaton clubhouse, followed by a business session.

Juding of entries will start at 11 a. m on Wednesday. I. L. Bandy, of Godley, will judge the fancy classes and D. H. Reid, of Texas A. and M. college will make awards in the production department.

The showrooms will be open to visitors throughout the three days, beginning at 11 a. m. Wednesday. According to reports from chambers of commerce, county agents and others over the territory, many visitors will attend the show, coming from virtually every county in the Panhandle-Plains region.

Loving cups for sweepstakes on chickens and turkeys are now on display here. The premium list for chickens, turkeys and boys' and girls' club entries is said to be one of the most elaborate ever offered in a West Texas poultry show. Birds entered in fancy classes will not comepte with those entered in the production classes as separate premium lists for the two groups have been announced.

Special pens for the accommodation of the production birds have been built because these fowls will be entered as flocks, a flock consisting of nine birds, and the regular poultry coop is too small for that many birds. Fifty pens, three feet wide and eight feet long, have been specially constructed in the showrooms, and it is expected that all of these pens will be filled. Definite reports from ten counties have said there will be from three to five flocks entered from each county.

At the hatchery operator's meeting on Wednesday afternoon, it is expected that some of the problems of the Texas Baby Chick association will be considered, and an effort may be made to reach a standard agreement about eggs bought by hatcherymen for hatching purposes and about the quality of chicks they will sell.

Mrs. R. E. Slater, of the Union community, living eight miles southwest of Slaton, and who has made a most remarkable record this year in canning home-grown food products from her garden projects, was host to many of her friends and nighbors last Thursday night at her home when an informal celebration of her year's achievements was held.

Members of the Union women's home demonstration club, other friends and neighbors, Miss Ruth Stockton, county home demonstration agent, and L. A. Wilson, secretary of the Slaton Chamber of Commerce, were among those present.

Mrs. Slater gave a detailed report on her year's work, after which all the guests inspected Mrs. Slater's pantry, in which she has stored 1,507 quarts of fruits, meats and vegetables which she canned this year, total value of which is $544.10, according to government prices. Her canned fruits and vegetables were produced from an one-half acre garden project.

Refreshments of coffee, hot chocolate and cake were served.

Palace Theatre Has New "Hired Hand"

—o—

This week finds the destines of the Palace theatre in the hands of a new manager in the person of Herschel Crawford, who has taken the place made vacant by the transfer of Dorsey Looney to McCamey.

Mr. Crawford has been in the employ of the local theatre for the past three and a half years in the capacity of operator. Herschel is one of the best picture machine operators on the Plains and he has many friends here who will be glad to learn of his promotion to the position of manager.

Mr. Looney has been here for several months and has made many friends who will hate to have him leave but are glad that his ability has been recognized by placing him in a better position with the company by whom he is employed.

Good luck, Herschel, to you and the Palace theatre.

Tigers Defeat Littlefield Here Thursday 14-7

—o—

The rivalry for leadership in district 2 was the event Thanksgiving Day, on the Slaton field, when the Tigers gave battle to the Littlefield Wildcats, who was the winner in their sub-district and the Tigers with the same standing in this sub-district. It was a battle royal.

While we have no alibi for the Tigers they did well, playing five games in fifteen days against mighty fine teams was somewhat of a gruelling task, and as we do not have supermen, their work against Littlefield was remarkable, in fact, it was far too heavy for any team.

Slaton fans were fully aware of the ardous games the Tigers had been through. They did mighty well to hold the Littlefield Wildcats for they played a wonderful game and are fine sports. The Tigers took the offensive from the kick-off in the first quarter when they worked the ball to the Wildcats 12-yard line when a pass over the line was completed, Rucker to Cannon for the first touchdown after which the pointed was made by a kick. The first quarter ended with the score: Slaton, 7; Littlefield 0.

In the second quarter the Tigers carried the ball to Littlefield's territory when a 20-yard pass was made by Rucker to Nowell for the second Tiger touchdown of the contest. The extra point gave the Tigers a lead of 14 to 0.

In the third quarter, a finely executed play wherein the Wildcats fullback intercepted a beautiful pass and mading a 40-yard dash, with no Tiger present to intercept him, made a touchdown and with the extra point was the only score chalked up by the visiting team.

While the Wildcats took to the air, they did not function.

From this time to the close of the game, neither team could get into scoring position. It was a hard fought game and the Tigers won from a manly bunch and should be proud, for it was a question as to who would be the final winner. We won from a mighty fine team.

While the Tigers chalked up 23 first downs the Wildcats had 4 to their credit. The Wildcats attempted 29 passes only 5 were completed for small gains. The Tigers attempted 14 and were successful with 6 for good gains.

The final score was 14 to 7. In winning this game the Tigers became bearers of first honors in District No. 2. This gives the Tibers and Slaton fans the opportunity of seeing the championship game for bi-district honors of Districts No. 1 and 2 at Lubbock today (Friday) when our own Tigers meet the Dalhart Wolves.

Oh! You fans, gird up your loins. This Friday will see some game as the Dalhart team has not been scored on this season and the season may end by their still keeping their escutcheon clean. The Tibers will have to play a mighty fine game if they win. We are still making no guesses. It will be the best team to win and of course we hope it will be the Tigers, but they must fight from start to finish. We will see you in Lubbock.

It is expected that many fans from these towns will attend.

Abilene Man Has Decorating Plan for Poultry Show

—o—

A. J. Shirley, of Abilene, representing the Texas Flag and Scenic company of Abilene, has been chosen as the official decorator to dress up the city for the three-day poultry show which opens here next Wednesday.

Store fronts will be decorated by those house desiring such decorations and street intersections and the front and interior of the poultry show building will be decorated without extra charge.

The Panhandle Plains show is expected to attract a large number of visitors here next week, and officials of the Chamber of Commerce approved the plan of having the town decorated for the event. Each business firm is left entirely free, however, to decide for themselves whether or not they wish to decorate their place of business.

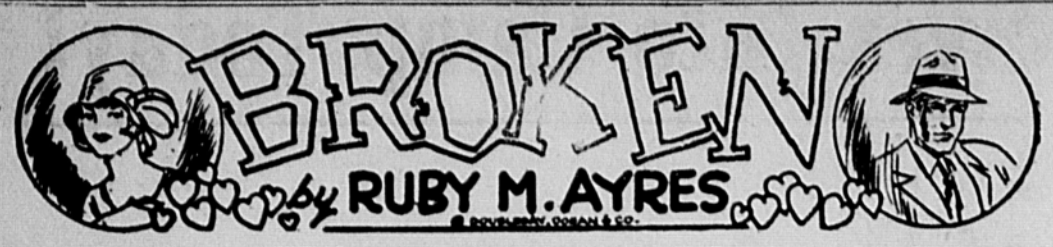

Mr. and Mrs. T. L. Kimmel and daughter, Mae Dean, of Littlefield, attended the Slaton-Littlefield game Thursday and visited with old friends. They were formerly residents of Slaton.

Local Publisher In Press Contest for Texas, 1931

FOURTEENTH INSTALLMENT

Chittenham follows her, but she sends him away and decides she will accept Schofield. She goes to Schofield's hotel. He is out, but she leaves a note for him.

Now Go On With the Story

He took her to a desk and gave her paper and a pen.

Julie wrote a few hurried lines.

"I didn't mean it, Lawrence dear. I want you to come back to me. Please ring me in the morning.—Julie."

It was a relief to have written that, and she half smiled as she thought how unnecessary it was to have added those last words. He would not ring her, he would come around, she was sure, he would come very early, perhaps even tonight if he was back in time, and then in the morning they would go away and make some sort of happiness together.

Julie tried hard not to think beyond tomorrow, but although she was so tired, and felt ready to drop, she could not sleep. She lay awake for hours listening to every sound.

In the early morning Julie dozed off to sleep, only waking when she heard the maid let herself into the flat and move about in the kitchen lighting the fire.

Presently she brought tea and a note. "It was lying on the mat when I came in, Miss."

Julie glanced at the handwriting, then sat up, her pulses jerking. It was from Lawrence Schofield. She was conscious of a warm glow of pleasure.

He loved her—it was something to be happy about in a world that held no real happiness. He must have brought it himself late last night. Perhaps, after all, it had been his footsteps outside which she had heard.

She broke it open, the envelope felt unusually bulky, she drew out its contents—her own note which she had written last night in the hotel lounge, torn across and across into minute pieces. That was all.

* * *

When Giles Chittenham got back to his mother's house she met him in the hall.

"Your wife has been asking for you all the evening. I said I would send you up as soon as you came in."

As he went upstairs he could hear Sadie's voice, high-pitched and hysterical, and he stopped for a moment, his hand clutching the stair rail, a terrible sense of loss and irrevocable fate gripping his heart.

When she heard Chittenham's voice, she turned her head towards the door, and stared at him with her wild, blind eyes.

"So, you've come at last, have you?" she shrilled at him. "I suppose you've no use for me either, now I can't see?"

She beat her hands frantically on the brass rail, and the nurse who had been standing beside her, caught and held them.

Sadie burst into wild sobbing.

"There's no hope for me, I know that I shall never see again as long as I live. I shall just sit here in the darkness till I die—till I die—and nobody cares—it doesn't matter to any one in all the world what becomes of me."

Giles crossed the room and touched her shoulder. "Sadie—"

She checked her sobbing with a sharp breath, and raised her face with pathetic eagerness to hear what he had to say. She tore her hands from the nurse's grasp, and groped in front of her till she touched Chittenham's coat, then she clutched it feverishly, and began sobbing once more.

"Don't leave me, Giles—be kind to me—after all, I am your wife—"

Chittenham looked at the nurse.

"Please leave us."

When she had gone, he sat down beside his wife and put an arm round her.

"Sadie—you must try and be brave and listen to reason. Everything possible is being done and will be done, you know that."

Sadie was sobbing again.

"You don't really care for me—nobody cares for me. Though I can't see you I know by the feel of your arm that you're just trying to be kind, while all the time you're impatient and want to get away—"

"Don't leave me alone, Giles. You don't know what it's like to be left alone in this hideous darkness. I shall go mad if you leave me. I've often felt impatient with blind people—it's bored me to have to talk to them and try and be nice to them, but I know what it's like now, and I wish I'd been kinder. I suppose it's my punishment—and yet why should I be punished? I've never done any one any harm—"

There was a little silence, which Sadie broke pitifully.

"There! I'm not crying any more, am I? I'm quite quiet now—please kiss me, Giles."

He kissed her affectionately enough, his heart torn with pity.

"You didn't kiss my lips," Sadie said—then she laughed brokenly, "Never mind! I suppose it's all I deserve."

She took her hands away from him and folded them in her lap to hide their trembling.

"Well—" she said after a moment as he did not speak. "What am I going to do? Or what are you going to do with me? I can't stay here, can I?"

Giles explained as gently as he could.

"In the morning I will take you away."

She interrupted quickly:

"Where will you take me? To live with you."

"Not at once. To a nursing home. I have arranged with a specialist to see you—"

She interrupted him again:

"It will be of no use. I know. I'm finished."

"Don't say that, Sadie."

She shuddered from head to foot.

"Well, go on—and afterwards? What then?"

"Then we must see. We must make arrangements."

"Arrangements! for what? For me to be led about by a nurse or a dog for the rest of my life?" Her terrible, hysterical sobbing began afresh.

Chittenham felt that he could hear no more. He called to the nurse and made his escape. His nerves were shaking as he went anything so tragic as this last half hour.

He paced up and down the library, at his wit's end to know what to do. It was long past eleven and he had all the night to drag through.

If there was indeed no hope of Sadie ever being able to see again, how could he possibly leave her?

It would be inhuman, impossible, and yet to live with her—

Another knock at the door.

Chittenham turned impatiently.

Oh, come in, come in."

"A gentleman to see you, Sir. I said you were very much engaged and could see no one, but he insisted, Sir, and says he will wait if he has to wait all night. The gentleman is Mr. Schofield, sir."

"Schofield!" The color rushed to Chittenham's drawn face.

Schofield! the man whom Julie had said she would marry.

Chittenham was across the room in a stride.

"Is there anything the matter—Miss Farrow—"

In his desperate anxiety Giles forgot that this man in all probability knew nothing of his relations with Julie—and when he did not immediately reply, he broke out again hoarsely.

"If there is anything wrong—"

"That all depends what you mean by 'wrong'," Schofield answered slowly.

"Yesterday evening I had the doubtful honor of a visit from a man named Lombard. I have met him before—usually, I believe, in your company. I think I am right in assuming that he is a friend of yours?"

"He was—yes."

"Yes," he said, still in that level, unnatural voice— "I believe there has been a little upset between you—over a question of money—or should we call it the price of a woman's honor?"

There was a tragic silence. Chittenham's hands were clenched behind his back—and his face was grim.

"Perhaps you would like me to explain, Mr. Chittenham," Schofield went on, and now every sneering word was a studied insult, "or will it be sufficient if I just call you the cad and the blackguard which I know you to be?"

"I can only conclude that you are drunk," said Giles, sharply, "and that being so, the kindest thing I can do is to ring and have you shown out of the house."

He took a step toward the bell, but Schofield was too quick for him—

"That won't do," he said thickly, "I've seen that trick tried before. I'm not drunk and you damn well know I'm not. You're a younger man than I am, Chittenham, but I spoilt Lombard's beauty for him last night—he won't show his face amongst decent people again for some time to come, and I'll spoil yours if I—"

Chittenham caught his upraised arm and held it in a grip of steel.

"Don't be a damned fool," he said roughly, "you're no match for me, and you know you're not. If you've got anything to say, say it and be done. As far as Lombard goes, if you have given him a threshing I'm in your debt, I owe him one myself—"

He released Schofield's arm, at the same time giving him a little push away from him, and for a moment the two men glared ot one another silently, then Schofield broke down. He groped towards a chair and fell into it hiding his face against his clenched hands. Giles watched him for a moment without speaking then he fetched whiskey and soda from a side table.

"Help yourself," he said. "If you've got anything against me, let's talk it out sensibly, instead of flying at one another's thoats like wild beasts. I know what Lombard has told you—he tried his blackmailing games on me, and when he found it was no use he threatened to go to you. Good God, Schofield, what sort of a fool are you to believe a lying hound like that?"

Schofield raised his haggard face.

"What reason have I to disbelieve it?" he asked sullenly.

Giles shrugged his shoulders.

"Isn't your knowledge of Miss Farrow the best of all reasons?"

Schofield rose to his feet and began pacing up and down.

"Lombard was so sure—he had got every detail of the story—that you and Julie spent the night together at the St. Benard Hotel—"

"So we did. It was impossible to get home. If all such unforeseen situations are given the same vile interpretations as you have given to this—"

Schofield's face flamed suddenly crimson.

"But I believe it!" he shouted. "I've always known that Julie was unhappy. She has hinted at trouble again and again. The reckless way she talks—all that pretended gaiety. It's never really deceived me, though for her sake I've let her think it has—Lombard had the whole story pat. He even spoke of your brother's relations with Julie's cousin—and of his suicide—he said that you mistook Julie for her cousin—he said that you intended punishing her for the way she treated your brother—he said that when you came back from St. Benard you boasted to him of the easy conquest you had made—"

He never finished his sentence—for Chittenham's hands were at his throat, shaking him like a rat, almost choking him—

"By God—you dare say that to me—you talk of Lombard! how much better are you? Believing the first foul lies that come to you about a woman you're supposed to care for! You are not worth a thrashing—get out, that's all I've got to say to you—"

Still keeping one hand on Schofield, Chittenham dragged his to the door and flung it open—shouting to one of the servants: "James show this gentleman out, and if he refuses to go send for the police."

He released Schofield so violently that he almost fell. He waited a moment—then went back into the library shutting the door behind him.

He was shaking from head to foot with uncontrollable passion, and his face and head were burning.

That any man should dare to accuse him of such a thing—and to Julie of all people—the woman he adored!

And again Chittenham lost himself in the thought of the night on St. Benard—when they had been shut in on all sides by the storm and snow and tempest and he had held Julie in his arms.

In a revulsion of feeling he wished passionately that he had made true the almost unspeakable accusation which Schofield had brought against him.

Julie would have been his then for ever—body and soul, and nothing could ever have altered it.

Amarillo Lady of 73 Glad To Endorse Konjola, the New and Different Medicine

—o—

MRS. NANNIE BRYANT

"For eight years I suffered from a complication of ailments and I tried many medicines and treatments, but never did I see anything like Konjola," said Mrs. Nannie Bryant, 616 East Eleventh street, Amarillo. 'I had rheumatism in my right arm and shoulder. The pain was terrible. I had stomach trouble was constipated, and was always taking something to produce bowel action.

"A friend urged me to try Konjola and I did. I began to improve in every way and soon the rheumatic pains began to leave. Today, I am feeling better than in ten years. I have regained normal weight and am doing my own housework. I can even walk uptown. I am certainly thankful for Konjola."

Thus does Konjola work, yet sufferers are urged to use a complete treatment of from six to eight bottles for best results.

Konjola is sold in Slaton, Texas, at the Red Cross Pharmacy, and by all the best druggists in all towns thruout this entire section.

BIGGER AND BETTER

THE NEW CHEVROLET SIX

Strikingly beautiful, fleet and smart —a masterpiece of Fisher styling

CHEVROLET

In the entire field of modern coachcraft no symbol has come to mean more to the buyer of a motor car than Body by Fisher. And never has Fisher's superiority been more strikingly exemplified than in the beautiful new bodies of the Bigger and Better Chevrolet Six!

Front view of the new Chevrolet Sport Coupe

Working with the added advantage of a lengthened wheelbase, Fisher designers have been able to achieve in the new Chevrolet a degree of smartness, comfort and impressiveness hitherto considered exclusive to cars far higher in price.

Inside and out, you will discover scores of refinements that stamp this car as a masterpiece of modern coachwork. Radiator, headlamps and tie-bar have been artistically grouped to create an unusually attractive and distinctive ensemble. Mouldings sweep back from the graceful new radiator in an unbroken line to blend with the smart new body contours. And new colors, in carefully devised combinations, lend a new individuality.

Interiors, too, are exceptional in every way. The new mohair and broadcloth upholstery is tailored with exceptional smartness. Seats are wider and deeper and more luxuriously cushioned. A deeper windshield and wider windows give better vision for both driver and passengers. And beautiful new hardware, of modern design, lends a final note of charm.

The greater quality and beauty of the new Chevrolet-Fisher bodies have a counterpart in the many improvements which have been provided in the chassis of this Bigger and Better Six. Among these improvements are a longer, deeper, stronger frame; easier steering; a more durable clutch; a quieter, smoother-shifting transmission; and engine refinements which make the new Chevrolet a car you will be happy to drive—as well as proud to own.

The Bigger and Better Chevrolet Six is now on display in our showrooms. See it today—drive it—and learn for yourself that it is the Great American Value!

PAUL P. MURRAY ANSWERS THE CALL

—o—

Another wonderful character leaves the physical world and goes to his reward. Captain Paul P. Murray, as he went in and out among us during his stay in Slaton, was noted for his courtesy, friendship and toleration for his friends and neighbors. He was truly a gentleman of the old school, polished and indeed a friend to mankind.

He was a man of much travel, and very interesting were his narratives. It was our pleasure to have formed an attachment for Captain Paul, and many moments of delight was afforded through this association in the discussion of various phases of life.

That he was held in high esteem by the people of Slaton was fully evinced by the large gathering of Jew, Catholic and Protestants that paid tribute to his memory. Captain Murray was a member of St. Joseph's Catholic church and never can it be said that he was obtrusive with his religious views.

Reverend Father Thomas D. O'Brien, priest in charge of St. Joseph's parish, delivered a fine address, consoling to the bereaved widow and friends, as well.

Reverend O'Brien, taking for his theme Christ's raising of Lazarus from the dead, calling particular attention to Martha's exclamation, "Lord, if thou hadst been here my brother had not died." "Jesus saith unto her, Thy brother shall rise again. Martha saith unto him, I know that he shall rise again in the resurrection at the last day.

Jesus said unto her, "I am the resurrection, and the life: he that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live. And whosoever liveth and believeth in me shall never die. Believest thou this?" Martha answered, "Yea, Lord: I believe that thou art the Christ." Rev. O'Brien asked that all have faith and walk with Jesus. That faith that accompanied Mary and Martha should be our daily prayer that we too might receive, abiding by his commandment, "That yea love one another."

A large concourse accompanied the remains to Englewood cemetery where Rev. O'Brien offered prayers for the repose of the remains of Captain Paul P. Murray, awaiting the call of the resurrection, and that his soul may rest in peace is the earnest prayer.

Miss Ramsey who has been teaching piano in the Slaton schools for the past twelve years, needs no introduction to the public. She is head of the department and also prominently connected with music socities of the South Plains.

Miss Head came to Slaton at the opening of school this year from Stephenville, where she was a student assistant. As well as violin instructor, she is also public school music teacher in the Junior High school. Miss H is a sister to Vernon Head, a known architect, who has made home in Slaton for a number of ye

Miss Forrester, teacher of exp sion, received her training in th Curry's School of Expression at Bos ton, Massachusett. Her parents reside in the Wilson community.

Mrs. Butler has made her home in Slaton for the past three years, as teacher of piano and voice. She has made many friends here and is president of the South Plains Music Teachers association this year.

The program by these instructors will be greatly enjoyed and Slaton is indeed proud to have such a department with such capable instructors, as a part of the public schools.

Indigestion Gone Has a Fine Appetite Since Taking Agrotane—Feels Splendid

—o—

"I am certainly glad to say a good word for Argotane," said Mr. J. L. Towell, retired business man who was formerly in the real estate and oil business who resides at 1500 Burnett.

"I am enjoying better health than I have in years since I have taken two bottles of Argotane," he continued.

"For the last ten or twenty years I have suffered dreadfully from stomach trouble and indigestion. I've had several pains in my right side and I had no appetite at all and I would bloat up and gas formed on my stomach after eating. Gas crowded my heart and caused me to have smothering spells, and I thought I had heart trouble. My nerves were so badly upset for months and months I couldn't get any rest and would not get to sleep until about 3:30 o'clock in the morning.

"When I saw Argotane advertised I began taking it. I had not finished my first bottle when I noticed I was getting better. My appetite is simply enormous and I eat anything I want without being troubled afterwards. I never have a headache and the gas that used to form around my heart has left me and I know now that it was not heart trouble. My nerves are in good condition and I sleep like a log every night. In fact, my whole system has been relieved and Argotane has done wonders for me and I am glad to recommend it."

Genuine Argotane may be bought in Slaton at Teagues Drug store.

SLATON PIONEER BURIED HERE MONDAY AFTERNOON

—o—

Paul P. Murray, aged 78 years, succumbed to a brief illness Saturday evening, November 29th at the family home in south Slaton.

Captain Murray, as he was well known became a victim of asthma last spring following a severe case of the flu, from which he could never completely overcome. Several days previous to his death, after exposure during a football game, he contracted pnuemonia, which he could not combat, on account of his age and a weakened condition.

Mr. Murray was born in Gaulway, Ireland, on June 29th, 1852. He was brought to America by his parents when two years of age and the family settled in Beloit, Wisconsin, where he spent his early boyhood days. When fourteen years of age he joined a minstrel and a year later he made his first trip to Europe with a minstrel. He later made another trip to Europe as a member of a band and minstrel.

As one of the most well remembered and distinguished happenings of Captain Murray's life was the fact that he played with Sousa's band at the inauguration of Grover Cleverland in 1884.

Mr. Murray came to Slaton in 1911, being here when the town was laid out. He was in Chicago and through a railroad official became aware of the fact that a little city would be located here with a railroad connection, so immediately came to what is now known as Slaton.

The deceased was prominently connected with the public life of this city, having served as chief of police and later as justice of peace.

In 1916, he was married to Mrs. Murry in Albuquerque, New Mexico, bringing his bride to this city and making their home in the south part of Slaton, where at the time of his death he owned a lovely home built by himself.

Funeral services for Mr. Murray were conducted from the St. Joseph's Catholic church Monday afternoon, December 1st, at three o'clock with the Rev. Father Thomas O'Brien officiating. With interment following in the Englewood cemetery.

Mr. Murray was loved by all who knew him, he was always kind and sympathetic with his fellowmen in the different walks of life. His friends were numbered by the thousands and he was never too busy to stop and speak a kind word of encouragement to each and everyone as he would meet them on the streets.

Surviving is his widow and her brother, Coy Roberts, of Kansas City, who came for the funeral services.

Pallbearers included R. A. Baldwin, J. A. Klasner, R. G. Shankle, T. A. Worley, Sr., T. J. Abel, George Marriott, S. C. Marrs, J. H. Teague, Sr., W. P. Florence, M. A. Pember, W. A. Tucker, and A. C. Benton.
