Ten people shot to death in apartment

Death scene

Police stand outside an apartment building, left, in the east section of Brooklyn, N.Y., Sunday where the bodies of 10 people — three women and seven children — were scattered through three rooms of an apartment. Women believed to be relatives of some of the children who were found in the apartment, above, talk to reporters outside the building. The bodies were found by a man believed to be the common-law husband of one of the victims.

NEW YORK (AP) — A baker who followed a screaming neighbor to his apartment found a "massacre" of three women and seven children — all shot in the head and showing no signs of panic — while an unhurt toddler sat crying among the bodies, police said.

It was believed to be the largest mass slaying in the city's history, authorities said.

"Six of the victims, at least, were sitting in chairs," Deputy Police Commissioner Patrick Murphy said Sunday night. "There appear to be no signs of panic. There appears to be no disruption."

Murphy and other police officials said they had not established a motive for the slayings and knew of no suspects. No drugs or signs of forced entry were found, and the 10 victims remained unidentified early today.

"We don't think they were all members of the same family," said Sgt. Eddie LeSchack. "There may have been some people visiting."

Authorities described the victims as three adult women, one teen-age girl and four younger girls and two boys ranging in age from about 3 years to the early teens.

The man who discovered the bodies, described as the common-law husband of one of the victims, voluntarily came to police headquarters for questioning early today but was not considered a suspect, LeSchack said. The man was not identified.

Police today were combing rooftops and searching the neighborhood for other clues, LeSchack added. He also said "quite a few" neighbors had also volunteered information to police.

Two neighbors said they recalled hearing noises that sounded like gunshots around 5:30 p.m. Sunday. Eileen Bell, 30, said she was walking by the house and "I heard a popping sound and it kept repeating, this constant popping. It sounded like a car backfiring." Another neighbor, Lucy Marrero, said she had "heard the shots" at 5:30 p.m.

Police said the victims' bodies were in three different rooms of the first-floor flat, which sits in the middle of a mostly commercial block in a quiet, working-class, predominantly Hispanic neighborhood. The second-floor neighbors were not home when the bodies were found, he said. Neighbors said the victims were Hispanic.

Mayor Edward Koch, who arrived for a brief tour of the house with city Medical Examiner Elliot Gross, appeared grim and shaken when he emerged. "Obviously, it's a massacre," he said.

Gross declined to discuss his preliminary observations, except to say that all 10 people had died of gunshot wounds to the head. He said autopsies were to be conducted today.

Inspector Robert Burke said police were first notified of the deaths Sunday night by Carmine Rossi, owner of the Rossi Bread Bakery next door to the victims' apartment house. Rossi said he was in his bakery when a man went into the two-story brick building and emerged screaming.

Rossi said the man, who said he lived in the house, asked if he was a police officer. He accompanied the man to the house, where "there were bodies all over the place," he said.

"I came to a small bed. A young girl was dead in the bed," Rossi recalled later. "Then I went to the living room. There were about seven people in the living room on couches. All dead, shot in the head. Then in the kitchen, a couple more people, the same way."

The victims probably had been dead for about six hours when they were found, Burke said. Rossi said the man who led him to the bodies told him he had left the house at 1:30 p.m. and had not been back until he found the bodies.

American professor rescued

Frank Reiger

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — A kidnapped American professor rescued by Shiite Moslem militiamen after two months in captivity says he sometimes feared he might lose his sanity during the "terrifying experience."

Frank Regier was flown by helicopter this morning to the U.S. amphibious assault ship Nassau off Beirut for a medical examination, said U.S. Embassy spokesman John Stewart. He was rescued Sunday by members of the Amal militia.

Meanwhile, heavy sniping and shelling attacks today closed "until further notice" the only crossing between Beirut's Christian and Moslem sectors. The mid-city museum crossing is patrolled by 40 French troop observers.

Regier, the 50-year-old head of the electrical engineering department at American University in Beirut, was rescued along with 36-year-old French engineer Christian Joubert.

The two men, unshaven and dressed in red and white pajamas, appeared at a news conference with U.S. Ambassador Reginald Bartholomew an hour after the rescue.

Looking dazed and weary, Regier said he did not know who his captors were and reported he was not mistreated. They "said very little to me, and they asked very little of me. I think they just wanted (to detain) me," Regier said.

He said he had been blindfolded and held captive in several places, but he guessed they were in west Beirut "from the bang bang of the cannon."

"Let me say it was a terrifying experience," he said. "I believed I would get out eventually, but I sometimes questioned whether my sanity would still be intact at that time."

He declined to say how he was freed, reporting only that Amal militiamen had used force to free him and that he heard only one gunshot.

Two U.S. diplomats killed in Namibia

WINDHOEK, South-West Africa (AP) — Two U.S. officials monitoring South Africa's troop withdrawal from Angola were killed Sunday when a bomb blast shattered a gasoline station that has been a past target of guerrillas fighting for independence.

A U.S. diplomatic source, who spoke on the condition he not be identified, said the attack apparently was not aimed at the Americans and that they simply happened to be there at the time. Another U.S. diplomatic source, who also spoke on condition of anonymity, said there were reports the blast was caused by a device attached to a fuel delivery truck or to a fuel pump at the gas station.

However, the Johannesburg Star today quoted unidentified sources as saying the explosive device may have been attached to the diplomats' car with the intent of killing them.

The two Americans, who had been en route to a briefing on troop withdrawal arrangements, were killed 25 miles from the Angolan border when a exploded at the station in Oshakati where they had stopped to service their car.

One civilian from the South African-ruled territory also died and four other bystanders were injured, the South African government said. Earlier reports had said two civilians had been killed.

South African Foreign Minister R.F. Botha identified the Americans as Dennis Keogh, 44, director of the U.S. diplomatic office monitoring the troop withdrawal agreement, and military attache Lt. Col. Ken Crabtree, in his early 40s. The U.S. Embassy said both were married, and that Keough had three children and Crabtree one.

The two men were thought to be the first American victims in the 17 years of bush warfare here.

There was no claim of responsibility for the blast.

The South African administrator-general of the territory, Wille van Niekerk, blamed the explosion on the South-West Africa People's Organization, which has fought a war of independence for 17 years in the territory it calls Namibia. The blast was in an area where SWAPO has been most active.

"At a time when virtually everyone in southern Africa is working toward peace, SWAPO still clings to a barbaric preference for senseless violence," van Niekerk said.

But in London, SWAPO's deputy chief representative Jacob Hannai said, "We didn't kill them. We never have known that there have been diplomats there. Who invited those diplomats to come to Namibia?"

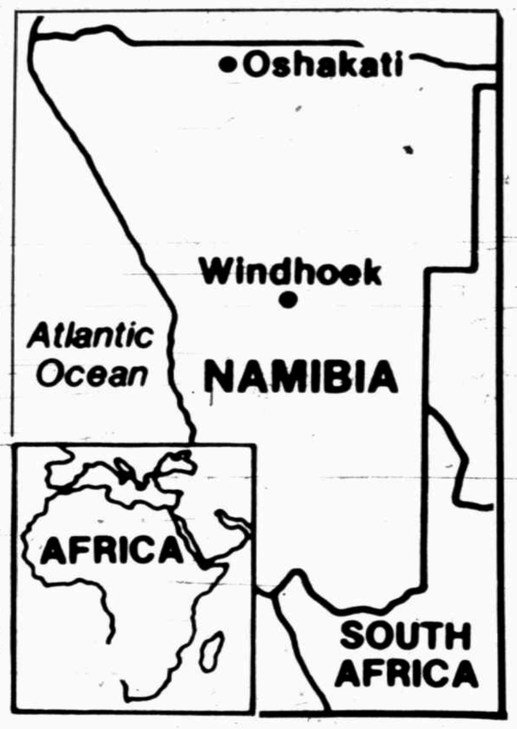

Botha sent a message to U.S. Secretary of State George P. Shultz expressing South Africa's "shock and deep regret" over the deaths of the two Americans.

"It is bitterly ironic that these officers, who were so closely involved in the search for peace in southern Africa, should have become the victims of the very cycle of violence which we are trying to end," Botha said in a message to the families of the victims.

The bodies of Keogh and Crabtree arrived at Waterkloof Air Force Base in Pretoria today in coffins draped with American flags. Five U.S. Marines in dress blues and white hats stood at attention as the caskets were unloaded from a camouflaged twin-engine cargo plane and put aboard an ambulance.

U.S. Ambassador Herman Nickel said in a statement afterward, "May the tragic death of Dennis Keogh and Ken Crabtree result in a redoubling of our efforts to put an end to a war that is nearly 20 years old."

Abandoned girl has family in death

HITCHCOCK (AP) — A 4-day-old girl who died after being abandoned in a roadside ditch found a family in death when 65 strangers showed up for her graveside service.

"We were all her family out there," said the Rev. Robert W. King, pastor of the First Baptist Church of La Marque.

He said there was no lack of names in the section of the guest register reserved for relatives.

"We all signed the book," King said.

The mourners Saturday included 20 La Marque police officers and about 45 other people from all walks of life.

The child's real name is not known, but nurses who worked to save her life called her April Cora — "April" for the month in which she was found, "Cora" from the Latin word for heart.

The infant was discovered beside a road April 9 by a service station worker who was hunting for aluminum cans. She died of cardiac arrest Thursday in the neonatal intensive care unit of the University of Texas Medical Branch at Galveston.

When she was found, April Cora badly needed medical treatment for the insect bites on her back and a sunburn so severe doctors could not determine her race.

"Even though her life lasted only four days, those four days were valuable," said King, who is also chairman of the child abuse prevention committee of the Noon Optimist Club in La Marque.

La Marque police Capt. Larry Crow said scores of people offered to adopt April after she was found.

"I'm not religious, but I prayed for her every day. How could somebody walk away and leave a poor little thing like that? I would've taken her. Who she was, what she was, I don't care. I would have given her a good home."

Houston receptionist

"The baby kind of grabbed the hearts of everybody in the community," Crow said.

One of those who was touched from afar arrived too late for the graveside ceremony, but knelt beside the grave afterward and added her own bouquet to the flower-covered mound of dirt.

"I'm not religious, but I prayed for her every day," said Lyn Banks Nun of Houston, a 48-year-old receptionist. "How could somebody walk away and leave a poor little thing like that? I would've taken her. Who she was, what she was, I don't care. I would have given her a good home."

WEATHER SUMMARY

AP Laserphoto Map

The National Weather Service forecasts rain for Tuesday for the Northwest.

Fair skies, temperatures in 80s forecast for Basin

Skies will be fair tonight and Tuesday, with overnight lows in the mid-40s giving way to high temperatures in the upper 80s, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport.

Winds will be from the south, 5-10 mph tonight and 10-20 mph Tuesday.

Sunday's high temperature of 71 was far below the record of 93 for the date, set in 1963. Today's record low is 34, set in 1947.

STATE

Clear skies prevailed across Texas as forecasters expected sunny conditions and warmer afternoon temperatures for at least a couple of days.

Some high clouds were noted over the Edwards Plateau. There were no reports of rain during the pre-dawn hours. An area of high pressure over the state was suppressing any significant cloud cover.

Temperatures before dawn were a bit lower than normal for this time of the year. Most readings were in the 40s and 50s. Temperatures at 4 a.m. ranged from 39 at Amarillo to 57 at McAllen and Laredo.

Westerly and northwesterly winds at 5 to 10 mph were reported across most of the state.

The forecast called for fair to partly cloudy skies through Tuesday. Afternoon highs were expected to range from the 60s and 70s in North and West Texas to the lower and middle 80s in South Texas.

Along the upper coast, northwesterly winds near 15 knots were expected tonight and Tuesday, along with partly cloudy skies. Mostly fair skies were forecast for the lower coast, along with northwesterly winds near 10 knots.

NATION

Rain dampened sections of the Northeast today, threatening to flood rivers already swollen by heavy weekend rains.

Flash flood watches remained in effect over portions of New England, eastern New York state and the mid-Atlantic coast.

Showers and occasional thundershowers were scattered from North Carolina to Pennsylvania, New Jersey and northern New England, and from the Great Lakes across the lower Ohio River Valley.

Showers and thundershowers also were scattered over Florida, and rain fell widely over the northern Pacific Coast.

Rainfall in the six hours ending at 1 a.m. today was fairly light. Heavier precipitation included almost half an inch at New Bern, N.C.; Allentown, Pa.; Norfolk, Va.; and Martinsburg, W.Va.

For the rest of today, the forecast called for showers and occasional thundershowers from New England to the Great Lakes, extending south over the Carolinas and Tennessee Valley, Florida and inland sections of eastern Gulf Coast states.

Rain was also predicted for the northern Pacific Coast.

Today's high temperatures were expected to be in the 40s and 50s from New England across the Great Lakes and Ohio Valley to much of the upper two-thirds of the Mississippi Valley; near 60 degrees over the northern Pacific Coast; in the low 80s across Southern Florida and southern Texas; and near 100 degrees through the inland Southwest.

Temperatures at 2 a.m. EST ranged from 26 degrees at Cheyenne, Wyo., to 82 degrees at Palm Springs, Calif.

Prison escapee killed in gun battle

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — An Arizona prison escapee was killed in a gun battle as he tried to flee a crowded restaurant, and authorities were trying to determine if a police officer who came on the scene had mistakenly wounded an FBI agent and a woman bystander.

Robert Vance Latimer, a fugitive from an Arizona prison where he was serving 15 years for armed robbery and kidnapping, was also wanted for shooting an FBI agent last month in a Virginia shopping mall where a fellow escapee was wounded.

Ten to 20 shots were fired in the shootout Sunday, and ballistics tests were ordered to determine whether a police officer had mistakenly wounded FBI agent Ben Purser and a woman whose car Latimer tried to commandeer, said Lt. Richard Pope of the suburban Goodlettsville Police Department.

"Frankly, at this point we do not know who shot who," said FBI spokesman Verne Gauby. "We had information that Latimer was in the Nashville area and we were actively seeking him."

Purser, 37, and Susan Wright of Chattanooga underwent surgery at Memorial Hospital in Nashville and were listed in stable condition early today, nursing supervisor Marion Ayers said.

Authorities said the incident began when Latimer, 25, had a meal in a McDonald's restaurant at a shopping mall in Goodlettsville shortly before 1 p.m., after having asked two strangers to drive to a post office and bring him some letters.

He then apparently slipped out a side entrance, eluding a plainclothes FBI agent waiting for him in a car.

"We heard one shot through our speaker in the drivethrough," said restaurant manager Frank Shipley. "The agent was parked behind a customer at the window and after the shot missed the guy, he ran down the street."

As Latimer tried to force his way into a car with Ms. Wright and another, unidentified woman, Purser tackled him and the two scuffled on the highway, said Capt. Sherman Nickens of the Metro Nashville homicide squad.

A Goodlettsville officer who happened on the struggle may have shot Purser by mistake, Nickens said.

"Before any of us can say positively for sure we need to wait for the ballistics reports to come back. There is a possibility that our officer may have shot an agent," Pope said.

"From the start to finish, there was anywhere from 10 to 20 shots probably fired," he added.

On Jan. 23, Latimer and Kenneth J. Lundien, 27, escaped from the Virginia State Prison in Florence, Ariz., where Lundien was also serving time for armed robbery and kidnapping.

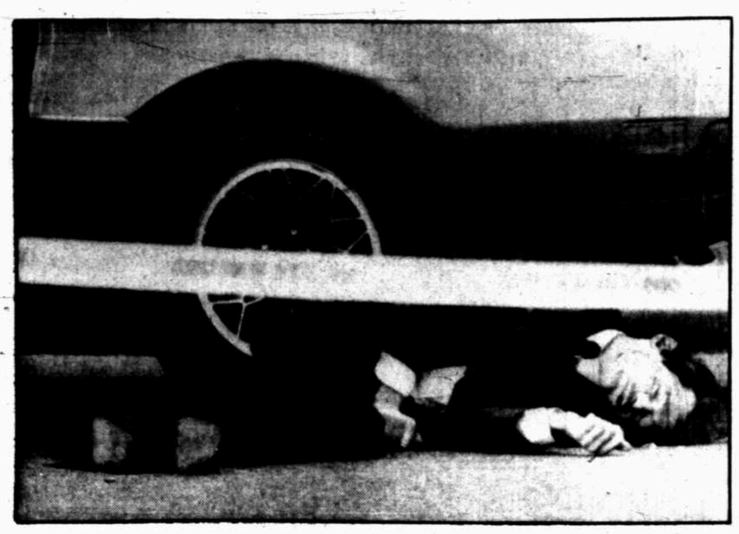

The two were confronted by FBI agents March 8 at the Springfield Mall in Springfield, Va., and a shootout ensued in which FBI agent Carl Swanson and Lundien were wounded.

Both convicts escaped from the shopping center.

Police said Latimer ran from the mall, commandeered a car but was soon caught in snowbound traffic. He then abandoned the vehicle, went to a nearby home and talked his way inside. He tied up the resident and stole his car, police said.

Lundien was arrested March 10 in New York City for carrying a concealed weapon and jumping a subway turnstile. He was being held under an alias until March 20, when authorities learned that an inmate was bragging he had shot an FBI agent.

Ricky Rollins, 18, a senior at Beech High School, said Latimer approached him and a friend at the drive-in window of the McDonald's and asked him for "a favor."

Salvadroran death squads threaten U.S. official

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Rightist death squads planted dynamite in the office of a Salvadoran election official and made death threats against a U.S. election adviser, according to sources here.

The threats, coming three weeks before the May 6 presidential runoff, prompted the Salvadoran to flee the country, the sources said Sunday. The U.S. official also left, but the sources said he was vacationing and would return.

In Nicaragua, the leftist government confirmed that guerrillas have seized the Caribbean port of San Juan del Norte, the first town to come under their control since insurgents launched their fight against the Sandinistas in 1981.

Nicaragua's defense minister, Humberto Ortega, said it would be hard to recapture the town because it is isolated by mountains and jungles. He said it is possible the rebels "will be able to continue operating in the area."

Roberto Meza Delgado, vice president of El Salvador's election council and a member of the Christian Democratic Party, left the country Thursday after sticks of dynamite were found in his private office, said sources in his party.

"We lament that a member of of the Central Election Council had to flee the country apparently because of threats from death squads," San Salvador Archbishop Arturo Rivera y Damas said during his Sunday homily.

John Kelly, an election specialist for the U.S. Agency for International Development who advises the council, received at least two telephoned threats, a source said. The callers reportedly identified themselves as members of a rightist death squad, the Maximiliano Hernandez Martinez Anti-Communist Brigade.

Kelly left El Salvador on a short vacation planned before receiving the threats, but intends to return, said the source, who asked not to be identified for fear of reprisals.

A computer-prepared list used to assign voters to specific polling stations in the March 25 presidential balloting was rejected by the Salvadoran legislative assembly Friday night in a vote carried by four rightist parties. The registry was created with the aid of $3.4 million in U.S. funds.

American professor rescued by Amal militia

Nabih Berri, the lawyer who leads Amal, said only that the group had received a tip about where Regier was being held and had released him.

Security sources who declined to be identified said a group of children who saw the two captives tipped off Amal and that the militia for four days watched the house where they were held.

Regier was last seen Feb. 10 being forced into a black Mercedes Benz by two assailants near the university campus in Moslem west Beirut. He had not been heard from since. No one claimed responsibility for his capture or demanded a ransom.

Joubert, a housing specialist who works for a Sunni Moslem charitable foundation in west Beirut, was kidnapped near the French Embassy on Feb. 15.

Regier said he had not seen the two other Americans still missing: Jeremy Levin, 51, the Beirut bureau chief of Cable News Network, who has been missing since failing to report to work March 7, and William Buckley, a political officer at the U.S. Embassy, who was kidnapped in west Beirut on March 16.

In January, American University President Malcom Kerr was shot to death on campus.

Beirut police said 12 people were wounded in sporadic artillery and gunfire exchanges across several parts of the "green line" between Christian east Beirut and the mostly Moslem west from sundown Sunday to daybreak today.

Two diplomats die in bomb blast in Namibia

U.S. Embassy spokesman Robert Gosende in Pretoria said Nickel would accompany the bodies on a flight to the United States on Tuesday.Gosende said embassy political counsellor Tim Carney would become acting director of the U.S. monitoring office.

Gosende said Keogh, who was political counselor at the U.S. Embassy in South Africa until last summer, died in a nearby hospital after suffering severe burns. He had arrived in Namibia from Washington two weeks ago on a 30-day visit as acting head of the liaison office.

Crabtree, a career Army officer, was killed instantly, Gosende said.

SWAPO guerrillas have relied on land mines and bomb attacks in their war against South African troops. The filling station hit Sunday was built in part with money from a government development corporation overseen by South Africa and had been bombed by guerrillas several times previously.

The blast occurred about 300 miles north of the U.S. office in Windhoek, capital of the disputed territory.

The office was established after a pact was signed Feb. 16 between Angola and South Africa. The United States helped set up that meeting in Zambia.

South Africa, which had staged a number of operations into southern Angola to attack SWAPO bases, agreed to withdraw its troops and Angola agreed to stop aiding the guerrillas.

The pact was seen as a step toward cease-fire in the bush war. SWAPO leader Sam Nujoma said his men would stop launching attacks into Namibia from Angola. But guerrillas inside the territory would continue to fight.

Ten people found shot to death in Brooklyn apartment

Rossi said he found the only survivor, a 2-year-old girl, inside the house and brought her back to the bakery. She was later taken to Baptist Medical Center for examination and then to police headquarters not far from the slaying scene.

Burke, a 28-year police veteran, said the crime was the city's largest mass slaying that he could recall, and other police officials agreed. Six people were shot to death in a Harlem apartment in 1979 in what police said was a drug-related mass murder.

Police sealed off the block where the crime occured, and dozens of onlookers gathered outside to gaze for hours at the cluster of activity around the house. As midnight approached, the crowd remained in a driving, cold rain to see the bodies removed.

Neighbors described the victims as "quiet" people who had moved into the house just two months earlier. They said they knew little else of them, not even their names.

One woman, Eduarda Sanchez, said she had lived in the flat until two months ago, when she moved out and the newcomers moved in. But she said she knew nothing about them.

Pope John Paul celebrates Palm Sunday Mass at Vatican

By The Associated Press

Pope John Paul

Pope John Paul II celebrated Palm Sunday at the Vatican for nearly 300,000 pilgrims, including 73-year-old Nobel Peace Prize winner Mother Teresa, and thousands of Christians from around the world gathered in the holy city of Jerusalem.

At Greenham Common, England, about 1,000 anti-nuclear protesters held a Palm Sunday service at the main gate of the U.S. air base before beginning a week-long, 170-mile march that will end at the Lakenheath U.S. Air Force base in eastern England. Other major peace protests were held Sunday in Denmark, Greece and Australia.

In sunny St. Peter's Square, the crowd waved palm fronds and cheered the pontiff with shouts of "hosanna."

The Sistine Chapel choir sang hymns commemorating the entry of Jesus into Jerusalem over a road covered with palm leaves the week he was crucified.

John Paul accepted gifts of paintings, handicrafts, flower arrangements, cheeses and candles from representatives of the young people, here for the international youth jubilee being celebrated as part of the current Extraordinary Holy Year of Redemption. The jubilee year ends on Easter Sunday.

In Jerusalem, more than 5,000 pilgrims streamed down the winding road from the Mount of Olives, across a narrow valley and up the hill to the old walled city of Jerusalem, following the route taken by Jesus nearly 2,000 years ago.

Mazin Kawwa, a 19-year-old Palestinian from the West Bank town of Nablus, said he joined the procession because "This is the day that Jesus entered Jerusalem. I wanted to see the same things and feel the same feeling that Jesus felt."

The Greenham Common base that was the site of Sunday's mass in England is where NATO began deployment of new medium range missiles last November.

Joan Ruddock, a leader of the Campaign for Nuclear Disarmament, said more than 50,000 protesters turned out Sunday in demonstrations around Britain, but police said they could give no estimates.

In Australia, police estimated that 200,000 people marched in four demonstrations on Sunday demanding abolition of nuclear weapons and an end to Australian exports of uranium, which can be used to make such weapons.

Two similar protests in Denmark drew some 55,000 people.

JPs performing many weddings

HOUSTON (AP) — Two Harris County justices of the peace earned twice as much as their annual $51,000 salaries by performing weddings during business hours for fees of $25 each.

Justice of the Peace Laurence Wayne earned an estimated $102,000 for the 4,109 ceremonies he performed and fellow jurist Ken Pacetti earned almost $99,000 for 3,946 marriages.

Wayne says he and Pacetti perform a public service. "We don't go looking for these people," he said. "They can't get married anywhere else for various reasons."

Rep. Frank Tejeda, D-San Antonio, plans to introduce legislation at the next session to curtail weddings for profit during business hours.

"If they're getting a full-time wage the taxpayer has a right to demand and expect 100 percent," Tejeda said.

Wayne and Pacetti said the wedding ceremonies do not interfere with their judicial responsibilities.

Jury selection begins in inmate's trial

EDINBURG (AP) — Attorneys expect to pick a jury by the end of today to hear testimony in the murder trial of former inmate Eroy Brown in the April 1981 death of a Texas Department of Corrections farm manager.

Brown was tried twice before on capital murder charges in the death of TDC Ellis Unit warden Wallace Pack. The first trial ended without a verdict because the jury could not reach a unanimous decision. Brown was acquitted by a second Galveston jury in November 1982.

Brown had also been charged with capital murder in Moore's death, but the charge was reduced to murder.

Brown's court-appointed attorney, state Sen. Craig Washington of Houston, and Walker County District Attorney Frank Blazek both said they expecteded jury selection to take only a day or so, since potential jurors won't have to be questioned about the death penalty.

The 33-year-old inmate was granted a parole last September on the 12-year armed robbery sentence he had been serving. He has since remained jailed awaiting trial in Moore's death.

Brown has said that he killed the two men, but that it was in self-defense because he believed they were going to torture him.

The trial was moved to Edinburg on a change of venue.

Blazek has said he has "new, scientific evidence" that was not available at Brown's previous trials, but he has declined to give any details. He said the new evidence "shows the defendant's guilt."

In December, State District Judge Darrell Hester threatened to throw out the murder charge if the state did not come up with the money to pay for Brown's defense.

Under state law, the government must pay the cost of defending indigent inmates accused of committing a crime while incarcerated.

Court case could affect handicapped children in schools

IRVING (AP) — Attorneys say the U.S. Supreme Court's decision in Amber Tatro's case could affect handicapped children in public schools throughout the United States.

The high court was scheduled to hear oral arguments today in the controversy over whether the Irving Independent School District must provide catheterization for the 8-year-old girl, who was born with spina bifida and cannot empty her bladder normally.

Instead, Amber must be catheterized, which involves inserting a steel tube into her bladder.

Since 1979, when Amber's mother, Mary Tatro, first tried to enroll Amber in public school, the Irving school district has maintained it has no legal responsibility to provide catheterization for the child.

The school district argued the service would burden it and that it would face possible lawsuits if the catheterization were performed improperly.

Lower courts have ruled against the school district, which has been providing Amber with catheterization since 1981.

Amber's attorneys, citing a 1975 federal law requiring schools to provide "supportive services" to handicapped students, contend the school district has to provide catheterization because Amber cannot attend public school without it.

Mrs. Tatro said that Amber, now a second-grader at Thomas Haley Elementary School, recently learned to catheterize herself, but still needs supervision.

"The nurse still helps her with her hygiene. That's very important because of the risk of infection," Mrs. Tatro said.

Janet Stotland, who has filed a friend-of-the-court brief on behalf of the Spina Bifida Association and 20 other groups, said the court's decision will have far-reaching impact on handicapped children attending public schools.

"It's not just the spina bifida kids, who have the same problems as Amber does," she said. "It will also affect epileptics, children with cerebral palsy — a lot of moderately health-impaired youngsters who need certain kinds of accommodations."

Freed professor sick, plans to return to U.S.

HOUSTON (AP) — An American professor freed from Lebanese terrorists after two months in captivity is sick but planning to come to the United States soon, his son says.

Chris Regier, 19, said he was glad but not surprised Sunday to learn of the release of his father, Frank Regier, 50. The electrical engineering professor at Beirut's American University was abducted from his home Feb. 10 by three armed men.

"Wow — that's good," the younger Regier, a student at Rice University, said upon learning from an Associated Press reporter his father had been freed. His father appeared at a news conference at the home of Nabih Berri, leader of the Shiite Moslem militia Amal.

The elder Regier gave no details of his release, saying only that Amal fighters had freed him from his captors by force.

Chris Regier said his brother, Terry, of Mountainview, Calif., had reached their parents by telephone and learned that their father is ill.

"Apparently all I can tell you is my dad has a fever and is resting," he said. He said he believed the illness was "minor" and said his father had spent much of his captivity "tied to a bed."

He also said his father is planning to come to the United States "in a couple of weeks," probably for the summer.

"I can't say that I blame him," he said.

He said he had remained optimistic.

"There've been all sorts of rumors, none of them bad," he said. "I'm not really surprised that he's free. I am glad, of course."

Regier said that during his father's captivity, his mother, Mary, a native of Lebanon who also teaches at American University, had "talked to some bigwig in the militia who said he heard he (Regier) was fine and somewhere out in the Bekaa (Valley). But you can't really put too much faith in that."

In fact, the elder Regier said at the news conference that although he was blindfolded for much of his captivity, he believed he was held in west Beirut because he could hear weapons fire.

Houston firm aiding IRS in tracking delinquent taxpayers

HOUSTON (AP) — A Houston-based collection company is helping the Internal Revenue Service try to recover some of the estimated $27 billion American taxpayers have been keeping from the federal government.

GC Services Corp., which aided New York City's collection of millions of dollars in unpaid traffic tickets, has developed an automated collection system which the IRS is installing in its regional centers around the country.

The computer program, part of a $107 million six-year contract the firm has with the IRS, began with a pilot test late last year in Kansas City and Memphis, Tenn.

The tests went so well that IRS regional centers in Holtsville, N.Y. and Fresno, Calif., went on line with it last month and centers in Dallas, Houston and Atlanta became operational this month.

The entire program is unique because it's the first time the IRS has contracted with an outside company to create a collection system from start to finish.

"We saw and identified a good bit of what the IRS was looking for and recognized part of it was what research and development in our own firm was pursuing," William I. Davis, executive vice president and general manager of GC Services' Systems Division, says.

Some 2,000 IRS employes are being trained in how to use the new computer program, says Davis, a product of the University of Texas Business School and the brains behind the new system.

The goal of the program is to contact the highest priority tax deadbeat, do it by computer and do it with a minimum amount of paper.

"The softwear we developed for them does not select the individual," Davis says. "It does select the highest priority case — the case in the most need of attention. It could be anything from the one most likely to pay to the oldest or the biggest balances."

An operator at a computer terminal punches one button to call the telephone number of the delinquent account.

"If the line is busy, the system will remember and will keep going after that account until it gets a ring," Davis says. "Or you could set it up to call every five minutes or every hour."

The computer adjusts for time zone differences so people don't get called before 8 a.m. or after 8 p.m.

If the taxpayer is speaking with the IRS and needs to provide further information at a later date, the computer will "remember" that later date and contact the taxpayer at that time.

"The IRS is making a very concerted effort to get themselves into a paperless system as much as possible in the collection system," Davis says. "We've pretty much given them a paperless system. Everything is handled via CRT, including telephone calls."

The program is used for both individual and corporate accounts.

GC Services won the IRS contract in the usual competitive bidding process. "We feel real proud of this because we competed with the largest computer manufacturers," Davis says.

So far, IRS statistics show productivity is up more than 50 percent from the old manual system and the cost of closing delinquent accounts has dropped from $45 to $29. Compliance with requests for payments has doubled, Davis says.

GC Services, which has been in business since 1957, performs collection services for many of the Fortune 500 companies, ranging from bank credit cards and oil companies to hospitals and airlines.

It's no stranger to government work. The firm has helped collect more than $27 million in delinquent federal-backed student loans. It also is tracking down missing parents for the Aid to Dependent Children Program.

Panhandler held in connection with fire

NACOGDOCHES (AP) — A panhandler who was asked to leave a shopping mall in downtown Nacogdoches shortly before a major fire broke out was being held for questioning in the blaze, police said.

"We are holding a dude in our jail that is a suspect," police Lt. Pete Winder said Sunday. He said police were awaiting the outcome of an investigation by the fire marshal's office.

"They might decide it wasn't even arson," Winder said.

Joe Adams, assistant fire marshal for Nacogdoches County, said two antique stores in the mall, Stripling's Drug Store, the Commercial National Bank and Boyett's Jewelry Store were damaged by the fire.

No serious injuries were reported, fire department officials said.

Adams said arson was suspected, but he declined to say whether it appeared an accelerant such as gasoline had been used to start the blaze.

The fire started about 6:30 p.m. in the Colony Mall, a renovated, two-story building erected about the turn of the century which now houses small shops, fire department shift Capt. Jimmy Marshall said.

Marshall said the worst of the blaze was under control by 10:30 p.m. Saturday, but that firefighters continued to cool hot spots Sunday morning.

Renovation work which had dropped the mall's original high ceilings led to some trouble for firefighters, who were at first unable to find the blaze in the open space between the two ceilings, Marshall said.

"That gave us a lot of trouble," he said. "All the fire travel was within the ceilings. The only thing that kept it from getting any more of the buildings was the fire walls."

Adams said 25 mph winds helped spread the flames.

Marshall said some fire walls had been rendered ineffective because they had been breached by gas pipes, air conditioning conduits and electrical work.

A fire wall did keep the blaze from reaching money and documents in a new addition onto the bank, Marshall said.

He estimated between 100 and 125 firefighters were called to the blaze, many of them from volunteer departments around the county and from Lufkin, 20 miles to the south.

Firefighters from other departments also manned substations in Nacogdoches during the downtown fire, Marshall said.

Couple takes in homeless, abused animals

DICKINSON (AP) — Ernestine Bailey says her collection of more than 200 animals started when she brought home cats from an animal shelter in an attempt to kill off the rats and mice on her farm.

Mrs. Bailey and her husband, Jim, are now a tradition with the Galveston County Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, and most of the 96 farm animals the agency seized last year spent some time recuperating with the Baileys.

"For the longest time I only bought black cats from the SPCA," Mrs. Bailey said. "I figured that way my husband would never know how many we had. One time he said, 'Do you realize we have 20 or so cats on this farm?' and I told him that can't be right — he must have counted some of them twice."

The Baileys took on their first large animal as a favor to a friend.

"An old cow by the name of Beulah started it," Mrs. Bailey said. "A neighbor didn't have any place to put her so we took her. The rest is history. We take animals that no one else wants. That's the reason we're broke and we both work."

Among the recent arrivals are eight horses seized from a Friendswood ranch, where they were found feeding on the wood in their stalls and drinking from puddles of urine.

The Baileys said the animals have gained weight and the sores some of them had developed are healing.

"These horses were in bad shape but I've seen them worse," Bailey said.

Teen-ager leads police on chase in stolen car

DALLAS (AP) — A 19-year-old man who allegedly stole a car in which an infant had been left asleep led police on a chase that ended when he ran the vehicle into a telephone pole, authorities said.

The 1-year-old boy was abandoned before the chase Sunday and later found sexually assaulted, police said.

An officer was injured in the chase when his car hit a traffic signal post, police said. Gary L. Opry was in fair condition at Baylor University Medical Center with a neck injury, authorities said.

The infant was found by a passerby about five blocks from where he was abandoned, police said. The boy had a bloody nose and bruises on his neck and doctors at Parkland Memorial Hospital told investigators that the infant had been sexually assaulted, police said.

Injured teen-ager provided police with vital data on Wilder

PENN YAN, N.Y. (AP) — Despite near-fatal stab wounds, a 16-year-old girl provided "very thorough" information that was crucial to cornering Christopher Wilder, whose nationwide spree of terror ended with his shooting death in a scuffle with police, a sheriff says.

Within two hours of Dawnette Sue Wilt's arrival at Soldiers and Sailors Hospital here, "we were sure Wilder was the man we were looking for," Yates County Sheriff Jan S. Scofield said Sunday.

Miss Wilt, of Dyer, Ind., was found walking along a road Thursday after being abducted from an Indiana shopping mall, driven across country, then stabbed and left for dead.

"She described him," Scofield said at a news conference. "She described a vehicle that was involved within a relatively short period of time, and through working very closely with the FBI, we had confirmed that it was Wilder that we were looking for."

Wilder, a former race car driver and millionaire electrical contractor from Boynton Beach, Fla., shot himself to death Friday during a struggle with police in northern New Hampshire.

The FBI says he was responsible for an eight-week cross-country spree of rape, torture and murder in which 11 women were abducted. Four were killed, four are missing and three escaped.

Scofield praised Miss Wilt's composure in the face of her ordeal.

"It was unbelievable how a 16-year-old girl could go through what she had gone through, and as soon as the hospital personnel had done what they had to do to reassure she wasn't going to succumb, she was very, very concise, very thorough with all her descriptions," he said.

"If we hadn't had the break with her in this case, I firmly believe that Mr. Wilder would still be alive," Scofield said.

Miss Wilt, abducted April 10 from a Merrillville, Ind., shopping mall, was described by her father, David, as "progressing quite nicely." The hospital listed her in stable condition.

Wilder's body will be returned to Boynton Beach on Tuesday or Wednesday at the request of his younger brother, Steven, said Robert Moore, owner of the Newman Funeral Home in Colebrook, N.H.

Wilder died when two bullets from his own .357-Magnum revolver ripped through his heart during a struggle with a state trooper, who was wounded. Although official records list Wilder's death as "accidental," authorities say they may never know whether he intended to shoot himself or the trooper, or whether the gun went off by mistake.

"We don't have any conclusions yet. But we think the evidence is mounting that he drew that gun to try to kill the trooper," said New Hampshire Assistant Attorney General Michael Pignatelli.

Meanwhile, Wilder's sister-in-law told an Australian newspaper today that his parents have gone through "living hell" as their son was hunted for the string of killings and attacks.

"At least now the nightmare is over. We still have to live with the people who wonder what sort of family could have produced someone like Christopher," said Valerie Wilder, Steven's wife. "The last three weeks have been living hell."

Wilder was born in Sydney, Australia, in 1945, moved to the United States with his family when he was 9, then returned to Australia.

He returned to the United States 16 years ago and became a successful businessman and American citizen, Mrs. Wilder said. "It was always work, work, work...I think maybe it all became too much and that may have been why he cracked," she said.

In California, a psychiatrist said that Tina Marie Risico, whom Wilder drove across the country and then freed in New York, may have been released because "she did not meet his need to murder and destroy."

Miss Risico, who was offered $100 to pose for photographs for Wilder before he pulled a gun on her April 4 in Torrance, Calif., was put on a plane in Boston on Thursday night by the fugitive.

Jury acquits Klansmen, Nazis in civil rights trial

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — Grand Dragon Virgil Griffin thrust two thumbs in the air and said he'd attend a Ku Klux Klan rally after he and eight others were acquitted of violating the civil rights of five communists shot dead during a 1979 anti-Klan rally.

"Man, I think I died and went to heaven," Griffin said after Sunday's verdict, adding that he planned to celebrate with "three beers tonight...and a Klan rally next Saturday in Louisburg."

An all-white jury concluded Sunday that the nine defendants did not plot to provoke the violence that erupted at a Greensboro housing project after a caravan of Klansmen and Nazis challenged participants in a "Death to the Klan" rally.

Attorneys for the Greensboro Civil Rights Fund contended that the government had drawn too tight a conspiracy indictment and left a "back door" for the defendants.

Dr. Paul Bermanzohn of New York, a Communist Workers Party member who was seriously injured in the Nov. 3, 1979 confrontation, agreed.

"They're on videotape killing people," he said. "The government charged them on the wrong charges and let them off."

But the jury evidently concluded that members of the Communist Workers Party provoked the violence, defense attorney Thomas Keith said after the federal jury handed down 25 acquittals in the 14-week federal trial.

The defendants were Grffin; ex-Klansman and former Greensboro police informant Edward W. Dawson; Klansman David Wayne Matthews; ex-Nazi Roland Wayne Wood; ex-Klansman Jerry Paul Smith; ex-Nazi Jack Wilson Fowler Jr.; ex-Klansman Roy C. Toney; ex-Klansman Coleman B. Pridmore; and ex-Nazi Raeford Milano Caudle.

William Sampson, Dr. James Waller, Cesar Cauce, Dr. Michael Nathan and Sandra Smith, all Communist Workers Party members, were shot to death and six supporters were wounded in the rally. One Klansman and a television cameraman were wounded.

"I'm shocked and outraged," said a weeping Dale Sampson, William Sampson's wife. "The overwhelming evidence for over four years was that they should have been found guilty. This just gives the go-ahead for Klansmen and Nazis to kill people — black people and anyone who's an activist."

Five of the defendants had previously been acquitted of murder in a 1980 state trial. The nine were charged with federal civil rights violations after civil rights and church groups blasted the earlier acquittals.

Prosecutors contended the defendants conspired to provoke a fight at the rally because it was integrated.

Ku Klux Klan leader Virgil L. Griffin, left, and his wife leave U.S. District Court in Winston-Salem, N.C., Sunday. Griffin, along with eight other defendants, was found innocent of conspiring to disrupt a 1979 anti-Klan rally in Greensboro, N.C.

Strike against Vegas casinos enters third week

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — A strike by 17,000 workers against 32 casino hotels enters its third week Monday amid growing confrontations between police and strikers and no signs of a settlement.

Police arrested more than 100 strikers in three nights of confrontations over the weekend at the MGM Grand and the Barbary Coast hotels. A total of 370 people have been arrested in the first two weeks of the strike, called by unions representing culinary workers, bartenders, stagehands and musicians.

On Sunday night outside the Barbary Coast, which is not being struck, police arrested 18 people for refusing to disperse from an unlawful assembly, said Sgt. Larry Irvine. About 200 tourists watched the arrests, which came amid cat-calls.

Those arrests followed demonstrations on the previous two nights at the MGM Grand, where officials angered union members by reopening the stage show "Jubilee" Friday night.

Stagehands president Dennis Kist vowed to picket the MGM each night.

Kist and 13 others were arrested Friday night. He and 71 others were arrested Saturday night in a major confrontation that was witnessed by hundreds of tourists and bottle-throwing pickets who gathered at Flamingo Road and the Strip — the city's busiest intersection.

A score of police cars, each carrying four helmeted officers, arrived at the scene just after dusk accompanied by two huge police buses used to haul prisoners. A school bus was also pressed into service.

Pickets booed police as they arrested Robert F. Harbrant, 41, of Washington, D.C., president of the AFL-CIO Food and Allied Service Trades Department.

Some of the 72 people arrested Saturday night were cited for criminal contempt and destruction of county property after some windows in a police bus were broken.

At the height of the weekend demonstrations, police blocked off Flamingo Road — a major east-west street in this city of 600,000. The intersection is flanked by the MGM, Dunes, Flamingo, Barbary Coast and Caesars Palace hotels. The Dunes and Barbary Coast are among 20 hotels that already have signed contracts with the four unions.

On Monday the walkout will match a 15-day strike in 1976, when four unions walked out and closed 11 major resorts. That walkout cost the city's economy an estimated $131 million.

The number of arrests in this year's strike exceeds by seven times the number recorded during the 1976 standoff.

The powerful Nevada Resort Association vowed this year to defy the unions by remaining open and simply reducing some services.

The defiance angered union members and led to two marches down the Strip, including one Saturday morning that drew an estimated 4,000 participants.

U.S. Hispanic population grows to almost 16 million

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's Spanish-heritage population grew to nearly 16 million last year, giving the United States the fifth-largest concentration of Hispanics in the Western Hemisphere, the Census Bureau says.

The bureau estimated in a report issued Sunday that there were 15.9 million Hispanics in the United States as of March 1983, up from the 9 million registered in the 1970 census and 14.8 million in the 1980 national headcount.

The only Hispanic populations in the hemisphere outnumbering that of the United States were Mexico, with 67 million people; Argentina, 28 million; Colombia, 21 million; and Peru, 17 million.

Hispanics in the United States tend to be younger than the population in general and are concentrated in cities in only a few states, the report said.

Their rapid growth has increased the Hispanic share of the U.S. population from 4.5 percent in 1970 to 6.4 percent in 1980, the report said.

That rate of increase has led to speculation that Hispanics could become the nation's largest minority in a few years.

The Population Reference Bureau, an independent Washington-based research group, estimated last year that Hispanics would increase to 47 million by 1990, surpassing blacks.

Reagan signs directive authorizing preemptive strikes against terrorists

LOS ANGELES (AP) — President Reagan has signed a policy directive that would authorize preemptive strikes and reprisal raids against terrorists as well as offering large rewards for information on terrorists at home and abroad, the Los Angeles Times reported.

The new policy was triggered by the truck-bomb deaths of 241 U.S. servicemen last October in Beirut and is in line with Secretary of State George P. Shultz's call for "active defense against terrorism," the newspaper said in its Sunday editions.

As part of a shift in anti-terrorism tactics, the White House will ask Congress for new laws, including one to permit the payment of huge rewards — $500,000 has been suggested — for information on domestic or foreign terrorists, the newspaper said.

Moynihan resigns committee position to protest administration's tactics

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Daniel P. Moynihan says resigning as vice chairman of the Senate Intelligence Committee is "the most emphatic way" to protest what he calls an administration failure to brief the panel on U.S. involvement in the mining of Nicaraguan harbors.

"I'm telling you, I resign," the New York Democrat said Sunday in an interview on ABC News' "This Week With David Brinkley."

Moynihan later said in a statement that resigning the position was "the most emphatic way I can express my view that the Senate committee was not properly briefed on the mining of Nicaraguan harbors with American mines from an American ship under American command."

"If this action was important enough for the president to have approved it in February, it was important enough for the committee to have been informed in February," Moynihan said in the statement issued by his office.

Moynihan announced his resignation on the interview program. He also said that if the administration had briefed the Intelligence Committee on the matter, the panel would not have approved the harbor mining.

"We tried so hard to insist that what we did were things that could be defensible under law, particularly under the charter of the Organization of American States," Moynihan said.

Another Intelligence Committee member, Sen. Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., said on the Brinkley show that senators were told of the action but not at length. ABC News reported the mining was described in 27 words as part of two hours of testimony on CIA activities.

Leahy said a number of senators knew of the mining before they voted 79 to 16 early this month to spend $21 million on covert military aid to Nicaraguan rebels. He said many of the same senators voted last week 84 to 12 to prohibit the mining operations. He said some "were soley influenced by public opinion" after the mining was disclosed in the news media.

CIA spokesman Dale Peterson said Tuesday, in response to complaints that the agency did not fully inform congressional committees about the mining, that its legal responsibilities are to keep the panels "fully and currently informed of agency activities." He said reports that the CIA did not are "untrue.".

Jeane J. Kirkpatrick, U.S. ambassador to the United Nations, also on the show, said the mining operation was legal under the U.N. charter as a joint defense by El Salvador and the United States against Nicaraguan aggression.

Mrs. Kirkpatrick said the controversy evidently stemmed from the impact of U.S. efforts on the flow of arms to Salvadoran guerrillas.

"Part of the outcry is from people who have consistenly opposed any action by the United States or anyone else which brings pressure on the government of Nicaragua," she said. "A lot of the outcries (are) from just those people who have never wanted to do anything that was threatening to Nicaragua, no matter how threatening Nicaragua is to its neighbors."

Mrs. Kirkpatrick called Moynihan's resignation "a way of avoiding a lot of the toughest questions and the toughest problems."

Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., chairman of the Intelligence Committee, expressed regret over Moynihan's action but said he disagreed with it.

"I respect his right to do as he sees fit and I will miss him badly," Goldwater said while on a three-day visit to Taiwan.

Meanwhile, CIA Director William Casey said he thinks Americans are more worried about the wave of immigration that would follow new Soviet-Cuban gains in Central America than his agency's involvement in the harbor mining.

"If we have another Cuba in Central America, Mexico will have a big problem and we're going to have a massive wave of immigration," Casey said in an interview in this week's issue of U.S. News and World Report. "The effort to prevent this from happening is not going to excite Americans as much as the threat they would face if things go wrong."

British prime minister, coal miners at odds over industry's future

LONDON (AP) — Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher is locked in her toughest bout yet with organized labor in the form of a five-week-old coal miners' strike that now threatens to shut down the industry completely.

With the government determined to close unprofitable mines and the union refusing to yield, both sides are settling in for a long siege.

At stake for the Conservative prime minister is the momentum of her efforts to streamline Britain's state-run industries.

At stake for the miners is the future of one of Britain's traditional heavy industries and also the direction of a national trade union movement traditionally spearheaded by miners.

"The stage is now set for the most decisive test of Mrs. Thatcher's second administration," said The Sunday Times of London in an editorial.

The final elements of the confrontation fell into place last week.

On Thursday, with the strike already in its fifth week and three-quarters of Britain's 176 mines idle, leaders of the National Union of Mineworkers rejected calls by moderate miners for a ballot of the 183,000 miners.

Instead, militant union president Arthur Scargill won a call for a conference to amend the union by-laws to cut the majority needed on a strike vote from 55 percent to 50 percent. The move virtually guaranteed him an all-out stoppage.

With the initiative swinging to Scargill's radicals, a poll taken for Independent Television showed 55 percent of miners backing a strike compared with 33 against and the rest unsure. A poll in The Sunday Times showed even more widespread support: 68 percent in favor, 26 percent against and 6 percent undecided.

The plan to close between 20 and 25 mines and eliminate 20,000 jobs was developed by Ian MacGregor, a Scottish-born American industrialist appointed by Mrs. Thatcher to head the state-owned National Coal Board.

MacGregor says the jobs would be eliminated through retirement, transfer and voluntary acceptance of generous severance pay. But the plan is troubling to an industry whose workforce has already shrunk by some 60,000 from its 1979 level of 232,500 miners.

After the plan was announced in February, militant miners in Yorkshire, in northern England, and Scotland struck. They then began shutting down the rest of the country through the time-honored — and illegal — British method of sending out "flying pickets" to other coal fields.

War has indirect effect on life in Baghdad

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) — People rushed to rooftops instead of cellars the last time air raid sirens wailed in the night here — a sign of how little Baghdad is directly affected by the nation's 3½-year-old war with Iran.

When the alarm ended 10 minutes later, Suleiman Mahmoud climbed down from a roof in the middle-class al-Mansour neighborhood and said he was "diappointed because there were no planes in the sky."

"We like to see Iranian planes shot down but they haven't appeared in Baghdad's sky for a long time. A very long time," the 47-year-old cab driver said.

The indirect effects of the fighting are many, however, for the Iraqi capital's 4 million people.

Mahmoud, for instance, drives his cab only in the afternoons and evenings. "In the morning I am at the camp," he said, referring to one of the numerous "People's Army" reserve force camps scattered across the country.

All Iraqi men 18 and older contribute to the country's "battle of honor" — as the war is officially called — by serving at least six months with the 650,000-strong force commanded by Deputy Premier Taha Yassin Ramadan.

Because of the morning training sessions, many shops and businesses are shut until the afternoon, when life returns normal in the streets and markets of Baghdad.

Through the day, it is common to see pharmacists, mechanics and shopkeepers attired in green battle fatigues. Government ministers and ranking civil servants have dressed in military uniforms since the outbreak of the war in September 1980.

The fighting along a 730-mile front well east of Baghdad has affected the availability of food and other consumer goods. All regions of this oil-rich nation suffer from what one Arab diplomat called "non-consistent supplies."

Eggs, powdered milk, cooking oil and frozen meat sometimes cannot be found. When they are available, most Iraqis and foreign residents take to stockpiling.

"Here, you do not go shopping when you need supplies," the diplomat, who asked not to be identified, advised a new arrival. "You should go out shopping whenever you have time, whether you need anything in particular or not, just buy and stockpile."

"You must buy whatever item you do not have at home because when you need it, it might not be available in the market."

Runaway roller coaster car kills one, injures 13

HAMBURG, West Germany (AP) — A roller coaster car jumped the track at a festival and careened into a group of people waiting to board the next ride, killing one and injuring 13, police report.

They said a 34-year-old man was crushed by the car Sunday and the other victims suffered broken bones, bruises or shock.

Thousands of people were attending the traditional spring fair in front of St. Michael's Cathedral in downtown Hamburg. Police said they had not determined why the car broke loose from the track.

Rebels reportedly killed

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Afghanistan's official Kabul Radio says 41 anti-communist rebels were slain and 13 captured in a battle with government forces in northwestern Afghanistan.

The fighting occurred Sunday in Andhhoi district near the border with the Soviet Union, the broadcast said. It did not say if any Soviet troops were involved in the battle. The Soviet Union sent some 100,000 soldiers into Afghanistan in December 1979 to help the Marxist government fight the rebels.

In another development Sunday, special U.N. envoy Diego Cordovez ended a 13-day shuttle mission that attempted to breathe fresh life into negotiations for a political settlement of the Afghan war.

Cordovez, U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar's personal representative for Afghanistan, gave no indication about progress on his visits to Kabul and Islamabad, the capitals of Afghanistan and Pakistan, but said "some very hard and good work has been done."

Nelson's flagship damaged

PORTSMOUTH, England (AP) — Admiral Horatio Nelson's flagship Victory was slightly damaged by two separate fires in its drydock berth at Portsmouth early today but opened as usual for tourists, the Defense Ministry said.

Detectives were investigating possible arson, a spokesman said.

A dockyard spokesman said the wooden ship suffered some minor charring of timbers in the blazes in the hold and on the lower gundeck.

The city fire brigade said it was called to the 2,164-ton wooden man o' war at 1:30 a.m. and put out a fire on the lower deck. One hour later, the brigade was recalled to tackle another blaze.

Victory was launched in 1765. Nelson was on board when he defeated the combined fleets of Napoleonic France and Spain at the Battle of Trafalgar on Oct. 21, 1805. He died on board from a musket shot as the fight was ending.

U.S. will be represented at World Court

THE HAGUE, Netherlands (AP) — The United States has appointed a World Court representative to handle a complaint filed by Nicaragua, despite American rejection of the court's jurisdiction in Central American disputes, a court spokesman said today.

Davis R. Robinson, a State Department legal adviser currently representing the United States at the World Court in a continental shelf dispute with Canada, was named late last week to act as a U.S. agent for preliminary hearings in the Nicaragua case, the spokesman said.

Nicaragua filed the complaint a week ago to seek a halt to what it termed the "killing, wounding and kidnapping of Nicaraguan citizens" by the United States.

The World Court, judicial arm of the United Nations, has not yet decided when it will hear arguments in the case, said the court spokesman, who declined to be identified.

"Apparently, the United States has some intention to appear before the court," the spokesman said, but he added it was "possible that the American agent will argue why the World Court has no jurisdiction in this case."

A day before Nicaragua filed its complaint, the Reagan administration announced it would not accept the court's jurisdiction in Central American disputes for a two-year period to prevent the court from being used for a "propaganda campaign."

Vietnamese attack sends refugees fleeing

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Vietnamese troops overran a major Cambodian resistance base after heavy shelling, extending an offensive that has driven some 75,000 refugees into Thailand or to camps along the border, Thai military officials report.

The Ampil camp, overrun Sunday after an eight-hour barrage, is headquarters of the Khmer People's National Liberaton Front. The guerrillas are part of a coalition contesting the Vietnamese occupation of Cambodia.

The camp, about 220 miles east of Bangkok, contained about 4,000 guerrilla fighters, according to resistance estimates.

The Vietnamese attack was part of a recent intensification of the Cambodian war which has seen fierce battles in 10 Cambodian provinces.

Ampil's 32,000 civilians were evacuated during Sunday's attack and are being cared for by the U.N. Border Relief Operation, the International Committee of the Red Cross and Thai authorities, officials said.

Other evacuations included 32,000 civilians from another camp about 60 miles northeast of Ampil, 7,500 civilians from camps along the southern sector of the border and 4,000 refugees from a Khmer Rouge camp in the northern border zone, said one official from the U.N. organization.

In addition, 1,800 refugees who fled a Khmer Rouge camp in the southern zone last week remained on Thai soil, the official said.

"If we have more people coming, we may face a problem," said the official, who declined to be identified.

Some 600 Vietnamese troops were involved in the attack on the Ampil camp, said Deputy Army Secretary Col. Anusorn Krisanasareni.

He said military intelligence reports indicated the guerrillas were grouping about 2 miles away from the camp, but little information was available on Sunday night's fighting because of heavy rain in the area.

Hance, Gramm

Texas voters will have a number of candidates to choose from May 5 in the races for the nominations for U.S. Senator in the Democratic and Republican parties. The Reporter-Telegram believes voters in the Democratic Primary should cast their ballots for U.S. Rep. Kent Hance. In the Republican Party primary, our choice is U.S. Rep. Phil Gramm.

Hance

To most West Texans, Hance is no stranger. A former Lubbock lawyer, Hance earned his political wings as a state senator who worked diligently for anti-crime and health care legislation. Then in 1978 he was elected to the U.S. House of Representatives, filling the powerful void left by the retirement of elderly statesman George Mahon.

Hance has filled those shoes in extraordinary fashion. He has been a strong supporter of national defense, supporting the MX missile program and the B-1 bomber program. And he has been an outspoken supporter of both oil and agricultural interests so vital to this region and the entire nation.

But undisputably Hance's strongest influence has come on economic matters. He was co-author of the Hance-Conable tax bill which brought the largest tax reduction in the nation's history. That measure was part of a reversal of long-standing Congressional spending policy still being implemented. It has made a difference in American life, judging from the drop in the inflation rate from double digits to just 3.3 percent last year.

More than that, though, it is Hance's philosophy of the role of government that makes him the choice in the Democratic Primary. He believes in government extending a helping hand to those citizens who need it, but not a handout. He opposes big-government bureaucracy and attempts to make government as effective as possible. He is a Texas-style Democat — conservative, yet sensible.

Hance's style of leadership makes him the obvious choice among the Democratic candidates for the nomination for U.S. Senator.

Gramm

While Hance was busy pushing fiscal responsibility via tax cuts, Phil Gramm wasseeking the same outcome through spending cuts. The College Station representative is well known as the conservative Democrat who in 1983 fell out of favor with the House Democratic leadership for co-authoring President Reagan's economic program, resigned from that body after being stripped of his seat on the House Budget Committee and in a special election was overwhelmingly re-elected as a Republican by the voters of the Sixth Congressional District.

What Gramm truly should be remembered for, though, is his co-authorship of the Gramm-Latta budget which mandated $143 billion in spending reductions in fiscal years 1983-84 and the subsequent Gramm-Latta II Omnibus Reconciliation Act which changed existing law to reduce the level of expenditures for 250 federal programs. That act lowered federal outlays by $131 billion in 1982 through 1984.

His experience and expertise on fiscal matters has well served not only his constituents in the past few years, but all Americans. It places Gramm well ahead of the other candidates in the Republican Party primary.

Both men have outstanding records of achievement on economic matters facing the nation as well as other crucial topics. We encourage voters to cast their ballots for Hance or Gramm in the respective primary in which they are voting.

Another View:
Shades of '1984'

Unless something is done to stop it, coordinated snooping on Americans by federal and private agencies could soon reach a level reminiscent of the omnipresent telescreen that spied on citizens in George Orwell's novel, "1984."

Arrangements now are being made under which direct electronic links will be set up among about 100 federal agencies and seven major credit reporting companies that keep computerized records on more than 100 million individuals and companies. The links will enable agency personnel to examine, almost instantaneously, the current status of bank loans, liens, divorce records, and department store, oil company and credit card accounts.

Under the sharing contracts, the government will not only receive a wide range of personal information on Americans from the private credit reporting companies but will also give the companies details about government loans made to individuals or companies — thus making possible even more widespread dissemination of the information, since the credit reporting firms sell their data to merchants, banks and other lenders.

Although government agencies have collected credit information in the past, the development of the new computerized links (under federal budget office guidelines) will enormously increase the potential for invasion of privacy. And the potential for abuse will be greatly heightened by such widespread access to personal information and by the laxness of credit reporting firms in maintaining accurate information.

The prospect is made all the more shocking by the claim that the computer links and the sharing were authorized by 1968 and 1982 laws. Congress should impose curbs on such tools for snooping.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Monday, April 16, the 107th day of 1984. There are 259 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On April 16, 1789, President-elect George Washington left Mount Vernon for New York for his inauguration.

On this date:

In 1862, President Abraham Lincoln signed a bill ending slavery in the District of Columbia.

In 1867, aviator Wilbur Wright was born in Millville, Ind.

In 1889, comedian Charlie Chaplin was born in London.

And in 1940, Bob Feller of the Cleveland Indians pitched an opening day no-hitter against the White Sox in Chicago.

Today's birthdays: Actor Barry Nelson is 64 years old. Actor Peter Ustinov is 63. Conductor-composer Henry Mancini is 60. Actress-singer Edie Adams is 55. Singer Bobby Vinton is 49. And singer Dusty Springfield is 45.

Thought for today: "'Yes' and 'no' are the simplest words, but they require the most thought." — Pythagoras, Greek philosopher and mathematician.

JACK ANDERSON
Swedes fighting high-tech thieves

WASHINGTON — The KGB and Swedish counterintelligence are engaged in a secret war over Western high-technology items. The Soviets keep trying to steal them, using Sweden as a transit point.

Jack Anderson

The major battlefield in this underground war is Goteborg, an industrial center and seaport on Sweden's west coast — equally handy to Soviet-bloc countries and Western sources of high-tech equipment.

Possibly in an effort to keep the Swedes' feet to the fire, the U.S. government earlier this month filed criminal charges against a Swedish company for the 1978 sale to the Soviets of a radar system containing U.S. parts. It was the first time charges of U.S. export law violations have been filed against a foreign company. In this case the firm, Datasaab, was half-owned by the Swedish government at the time of the disputed sale.

Ironically, Sweden — determined to maintain its 170-year-old tradition of neutrality — has been far better about preventing illegal high-tech diversions to the Soviets than perhaps half a dozen other countries. The 1978 sale was something of an aberration for the Swedes.

CIA and State Department sources have given my associates Dale Van Atta and Michael Binstein top-secret details of increased Swedish efforts to foil the KGB's high-tech thieves.

The sources pointed out that the 1978 radar sale to the Soviets by Datasaab was a serious matter. The TERCAS radar system — Terminal and End Route Control System — was supposedly for civilian use at the Moscow airport. But U.S. intelligence believes the Soviets have now integrated it into their military defense network to track incoming bombers and fighters.

But the sources emphasized that Sweden, unlike such other neutral countries as Austria and Switzerland, has shown a clear inclination to keep sensitive military technology out of Soviet hands. Last fall, for example, Sweden seized seven containers of U.S. computer equipment on their way to Leningrad and returned them to the American manufacturer.

And in January, the Swedes delivered a confidential aide-memoire to the State Department that read: "The Swedish government has declared its determination not to let Swedish territory become a transitional area for illegally obtained restricted technology."

As far as the CIA has been able to determine, Sweden has not contributed significantly to the Warsaw Pact nations' military capability. The Soviet bloc has been able to buy laser range finders and fire-control systems from Sweden, but not some of the sophisticated air-defense radar and anti-aircraft guns they want.

One yardstick of the Swedes' determination is the number of Soviet spies they've kicked out — 12 in little over a year. In fact, the last Soviet consul in Goteborg was sent packing for espionage activities, as was the Goteborg-based representative of the Soviet register of shipping.

Swedish intelligence is keeping a close watch on Soviet diplomats, who are believed to include about a dozen KGB agents, and possibly twice that number. The Swedes believe these agents' primary mission is industrial espionage.

This is especially true, the Swedes feel, of the Soviet consular staff in Goteborg. Of the nearly 30 Soviets attached to the consulate, several have been classified by the Swedes as suspected KGB agents specializing in science and technology.

The Soviets have two main targets in Goteborg: L.M. Ericsson, the giant electronics firm that took over Datasaab, and Saab Scania, which makes Sweden's combat aircraft and has a marine electronics division in Goteborg. Among the advanced naval equipment the Soviets lust after is Saab Scania's automatic system for piloting ships without personnel on the bridge.

HART BEAT: When Sen. Gary Hart, D-Colo., withdrew his campaign funds from the Arab-controlled First American Bank of Washington about 10 days before the New York primary, critics charged that he was pandering to the Jewish vote. Though the bank's Arab connection had been public knowledge for years, Ken Guido, special counsel to the Hart campaign, issued a statement saying he got Hart out of the bank as soon as he learned of the Arab control.

But when the campaign's general counsel, Jack Quinn, was questioned, he said, "The reason the account was removed was because a better deal was offered to us by another bank."

— One thing has remained constant in the shifting sands of the Hart campaign: No money from political action committees is accepted. When an envelope arrives at the Hart campaign with a PAC's return address, it is marked "Refused — Return to Sender." When envelopes from PACs either have no return address or are opened by mistake, the contributions are mailed back with an explanatory note. Some $16,000 has been returned so far.

• • • WATCH ON WASTE: The Grace Commission on government waste decried extravagant water projects — the pork-barrel spending that brings federal megabucks into legislators' home districts. President Reagan came up with a plan that would save billions. He wanted local jurisdictions to share the costs with the federal government.

But his campaign manager, Sen. Paul Laxalt, R-Nev., persuaded him to back off the idea of fixed cost-sharing and press instead for line-item veto power. This would permit the president to determine whether costs should be shared on a case-by-case basis.

It would also leave the political game intact and preserve pork-barrel profligacy.

EVANS & NOVAK
Support for Contras threatened

WASHINGTON — A blunder by the State Department's recently appointed chief lobbyist seriously endangered continued Senate support for the anti-Sandinista "Contras" in Nicaragua by offending two senior Republican senators.

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

W. Tapley Bennett, the new assistant secretary of state for legislative affairs, is a veteran diplomat but a neophyte when it comes to Capitol Hill. He proved it by failing to inform key senators in advance of the U.S. decision not to recognize World Court jurisdiction on the mining of Nicaragua's harbors.

Sens. Charles H. Percy, chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, and Barry Goldwater, chairman of the Intelligence Committee, were equally enraged over the rebuff. Percy went so far as to promise that his days of support for the Contra program probably were over.

REAGAN'S CHINA LUCK

Ronald Reagan's fabled luck figures to rebut the Kremlin's planned election-year assault on him by accidentally putting him in a favored place to respond: China.

Reagan's Kremlinologists have informed him that the new Soviet leadership will "make a series of tough runs" against him between now and the Nov. 6 election in an effort to weaken him. But the fact he will be in Peking this month to meet these attacks will be viewed in Moscow as a U.S. warning of closer Washington-Beijing relations.

That was not intended. The timing is purely by chance, but the president is no longer prepared to say anything in Beijing that might disabuse Moscow of concern over Reagan's Chinese connection.

SPEEDIER FOR MEESE?

Strategists for attorney general-designate Edwin Meese III are hoping that independent counsel Jacob Stein may complete his deliberations by May and permit the confirmation process to go forward.

That would be a far speedier handling of the widely scattered charges against Meese than is generally considered likely. Based on the recent experience of special prosecutors, Justice Department officials expect Stein to be sifting the charges against Meese well into autumn.

But Meese's advisers believe that so much evidence has come out of the Senate confirmation hearings that the independent counsel can move swiftly. If the process drags on past Labor Day, however, President Reagan and his choice for attorney general will have to reconsider whether Meese's nomination must be withdrawn.

HART'S BAD ADVICE

Sen. Gary Hart's mistake of switching his position in the New York primary on the question of whether to move the U.S. Embassy in Israel can be traced partly to his unexpected endorsement a month earlier by the potent Los Angeles Democratic organization headed by Reps. Henry Waxman, Howard Berman and Mel Levine.

When they stunned California politics by backing Hart shortly after his New Hampshire upset, it was widely suspected that there were some secret commitments. One actually turned out to be a promise from the senator that Waxman would be granted a policy voice in the campaign.

Waxman's first advice was his insistence, against the candidate's own wishes, that Hart drop his opposition to moving the U.S. Embassy from Tel Aviv to Jerusalem. That switch by Hart is regarded by insiders in his campaign as undercutting his claim to be new and different.

PERCY'S PERIL

National Republican operatives believe Sen. Charles H. Percy is looking like an endangered species for re-election in Illinois and have warned him he cannot expect to win a fourth term by putting together his usual center-left coalition of voters.

Percy, a liberal Republican, always has combined a respectable showing among Chicago's blacks with the traditional Republican base in downstate Illinois. But no Republican, Percy included, can count on black votes this year. At the same time, his Democratic foe, Rep. Paul Simon, is a downstater who should run well there.

Political experts in Washington believe that to survive, Percy must cut into conservative Democratic ethnic voters against the liberal Simon. To do that, he will have to be more Reaganite as a campaigner than he has been as Foreign Relations Committee chairman.

CHARLEY REESE
Americans expect what never was

If the United States is to be saved from destruction, there are three things we must all do. One is love it. Two, is understand it. And three is get off our backsides and personally take it upon ourselves to preserve and protect the land.

Charley Reese

If you vote every two and four years and pay your taxes once a year, you have not paid your civic dues. Even a Soviet spy, posing as an American citizen, does that. We have to do more.

A wise man once said that the opposite of love is not hate but apathy. Since time equals life and since life is our most valuable personal possession what we spend our time on reveals what we actually love. If we spend the majority of our time making money and thinking about money, then money is what we love. If we spend the majority of our time and our resources satisfying our own physical senses, then pleasure is what we love.

To love America is to be willing to spend time and resources on America and it takes an investment of time in order to understand what is going on in our country.

"If a nation expects to be ignorant and free, in a state of civilization, it expects what never was and never will be," Thomas Jefferson wrote to a friend in 1816. Yet we have college graduates who have never read the Federalist Papers, can't name their state's own senators, and couldn't give you a definition of capitalism if their lives depended on it.

I met a man once who was running for Congress and thought Vietnam was located somewhere off the coast of South America. I have been around men in high public office who, if they couldn't talk about themselves, could not carry on an intelligent conversation for more than two minutes.

Children come into the world with blank slates. A baby does not know if it is an Ameican or a Russian. Children have to be taught to love their country and if they are not, they won't. That's why what goes on in the classroom is critically important. If children are taught only the negative aspects of the country's history or if they are taught that they are global citizens, rather than American citizens, then they aren't likely to develop a love of their country.

To remedy the problems in public education, we must forcefully assert our rights as parents and citizens. Our children belong to us, not to the state, and the public schools belong to us, not to the professional educators. We have not only the right to know and to control what is going on in the classrooms, we have a duty to control it.

It is absurd, for example, for us to tolerate university administrations which hire Marxists to poison the minds of students. You do not need a Marxist in order to teach students Marxist theory. On the contrary, no Marxist can teach Marxism objectively for if he is a Marxist he is by definition a revolutionary who is bound to preach and convert, not teach. Yet, in the United States today, there are 10,000 Marxists holding faculty positions in colleges and universities.

Those citizens who have children could perform no greater service for the nation as a whole than to become activists in the matter of public education. I do not mean for you to become a puppet of the educational bureaucracy which prefers your involvement to consist of holding cookie sales to raise money for projects they wish to fund. I mean for you to find out what is going on, what legislation is being proposed, what textbooks are being used. I mean for you to preserve the rights of parents which includes the right to teach their children at home if they so choose or to send their children to the private school of their choice. I mean for you to get involved, run for a school board if need be, demonstrate, lobby, organize your neighborhood — in short to exercise your freedom as an American citizen until your public schools reflect your nation's traditional values.

America became a free nation because of a revolution. Our forefathers were people who did not fear controversy, who were not intimidated by the Establishment, who were not afraid to assert their own values and to fight for them.

Unless we show the same qualities in the near future, we are going to lose our freedom as certainly as the sun sets in the West. To paraphrase Jefferson, a nation which expects to be passive and free expects what never was and never will be.

Great Britain's Prince Andrew holds a Los Angeles Olympic Committee cap which was presented to him upon his arrival at the Beverly Wilshire Hotel Sunday. He begins a five-day stay in southern California for the benefit of the British Olympic team.

Prince visits U.S. to benefit team

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Britain's Prince Andrew was presented with a surfboard and an official Olympic hat upon his arrival for a five-day Southern California tour to benefit the British Olympic team.

Among those who greeted Queen Elizabeth II's middle son at the Beverly Wilshire Hotel on Sunday were Occidental Petroleum Co. chairman Dr. Armand Hammer and Tony Thompson, chairman of the British Olympic Committee-USA, which sponsored his trip., hotel spokeswoman Victoria Yust said.

During his trip, the 24-year-old navy helicopter pilot plans to tour the McDonnell Douglas aircraft plant in Long Beach, the Aerospace Museum in San Diego and the U.S. Naval Air Station in San Diego, where he will fly a British-made helicopter, said John Houlton, a spokesman for the British Consulate in Los Angeles.

He also will visit Metro Goldwyn Mayer-United Artists studios in Culver City and watch the filming of "2010," the science-fiction movie sequel to "2001: A Space Odyssey."

A fund-raising dinner on behalf of the British Olympic Association is planned for Wednesday, with a guest list that includes actors Michael Caine, Dudley Moore, Cary Grant, Sean Connery and Julie Andrews, along with singers Sheena Easton and Cleo Laine, Houlton said.

Benny Goodman

NEW YORK (AP) — Henry Mancini and Neil Diamond were among nine composers inducted into the Songwriters Hall of Fame of the National Academy of Popular Music, which honored clarinetist-band leader Benny Goodman with a lifetime achievement award.

Diamond, who wrote "Song Sung Blue" and "You Don't Send Me Flowers," and Mancini, known for "Moon River" and "Days of Wine and Roses," were inducted Sunday at the academy's annual fund-raising dinner.

Another composer active since 1950 and inducted Sunday was Norman Gimbel, who wrote lyrics for such songs as "Canadian Sunset" and "I Will Wait for You."

Inducted from among composers and songwriters active before 1950 were Richard Adler, composer of Broadway's "Pajama Game" and "Damn Yankees," and Bennie Benjamin and George David Weiss, who together wrote "Wheel of Fortune" and "Oh! What It Seemed To Be."

Inducted posthumously were Billy Strayhorn (1915-1967), composer of "Take the 'A' Train" and "Lush Life"; Al Hoffman (1902-1960), co-writer of "Allegheny Moon" and "Mairzy Doats"; and Maceo Pinkard (1897-1962), co-writer of "Them There Eyes" and "Sweet Georgia Brown."

Billy Martin

CORONA DEL MAR, Calif. (AP) — Former New York Yankee manager Billy Martin spent four hours in a public drunk tank after being arrested following a shouting match with a woman on the front lawn of a home, police said.

Martin, 55, was booked for investigation of public drunkenness and disorderly conduct and released on $100 bail at about 4 a.m. Saturday, police said.

Responding to calls from neighbors, police found Martin on the lawn, "obviously intoxicated, screaming and hollering at a female," traffic investigator Gary Bruton said.

Bruton said Martin and a female companion, identified as Jill Guiver, apparently were arguing about travel arrangements for a horse he had bought for her. Martin flew to New York after Ms. Guiver bailed him out, he said.

Martin, who was fired last year as Yankee manager, is currently a Yankee scout. The Yankees had no comment.

One of Martin's attorneys, Eddie Sapir of New Orleans, said in a telephone interview Saturday he had no details of the arrest, but said he was "relieved" Martin had not hit anyone.

LBJ's protege: Broke but not broken

WASHINGTON (AP) — Long-exiled from the heady days when his ability to count votes and money made him a millionaire and a powerful Senate insider, Bobby Baker says he is broke but not broken.

"I've found out there's a lot more to life than money," he says. "If you go to bed feeling good and wake up feeling good, that's 90 percent of the battle of life."

The onetime protege of Lyndon Johnson has mellowed at 55, 41 years after he arrived in Washington to become a Senate page.

"I laugh more now than I ever before did before because I see the human foibles of life," Baker said.

By most standards, he hasn't had a lot to chuckle about in the last two decades.

Literally growing up in the Senate, Baker combined hard work, ambition, intelligence and political smarts to become clerk to the Senate Democrats in the 1950s when Johnson was majority leader.

With his Pickens, S.C., drawl, he could cajole and threaten with the best, helping put together vote packages for Johnson and collecting what he says were political contributions from businessmen — $500,000 every two years — for getting bills killed or passed.

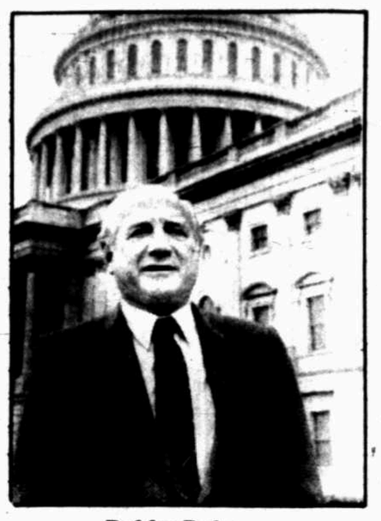

Baker's Senate salary was $19,600 in 1963, the year he resigned his post after his backstage wheeling and dealing became public. He estimated his net worth then at $2 million. Today, he says, "I'm cleaned out."

After Senate investigators finished exposing him, federal prosecutors started proceedings that led to his 1967 conviction for stealing nearly $100,000 in purported campaign contributions and evading income taxes in 1962 and 1963.

Baker, who served 16 months in prison following unsuccessful appeals that reached the Supreme Court, still insists he is innocent. Fighting to clear his name, he says, has helped land him in bankrupcy court.

"It has cost me...probably half a million dollars in out-of-pocket expenses between accountants and lawyers, in lost business enterprises. If I had just kept those businesses that I had prior to my resignation, I could show (a net worth) beyond $100 million. I am a net loser, if money's your guide."

In recent years, 20-year-old documents have emerged from government files that Baker says would have acquitted him had they been available in 1967. Last year, a federal appeals court reviewed them and ordered the trial judge to reconsider Baker's plea for a new trial. That decision is pending.

Bobby Baker

Baker, citing debts of $384,955 and no income, filed for bankruptcy in 1982. Divorced, he lives with a girlfriend in suburban Maryland, drives her Mercedes and says he hasn't lost his interest in either business or politics.

He says he travels around arranging deals and giving free advice.

"Those are the kinds of things I do best," he says. "Other than their paying my expenses, I will not take a fee. I'm sort of hanging on until I get out of bankruptcy. That's not income. When I go to California, I stay in the best hotels and eat in the best restaurants...

"I still have my brain, I know how to make money and I will."

Baker, who observes Washington "willfully" from the outside, says the post-Watergate ethics reforms haven't changed a system of cronyism and big-bucks he once exploited.

"This is the way it works...It will never change...Politicians look for easy money," he says.

Baker says political action committees, virtually created by campaign disclosure laws, have replaced the type of slush fund he and Johnson used to collect and distribute to cooperative senators.

"It's still going on, and it will never change until we find a way to buy" the media advertising needed to put across a political campaign, Baker said.

Little Arkansas town with curious name is right out of the past

SNOWBALL, Ark. (AP) — On a day when the sun finally banishes the last winter chills from the hollows, a village name can make a motorist follow curiosity right off a highway and into the past.

As U.S. 65 meanders through Searcy County's Ozark Mountains, it fetches up on a sign for Snowball. Arkansas 74 bridges Bear Creek, climbs a hill, crooks a finger. Snowball again.

Seven miles of macadam farther, the byway breaks through a cedar-crested bank. There below, in the sun, sits Snowball.

Calf Creek browses down a rocky bed past the frame houses and fieldstone buildings. The twinkling water bends toward the Buffalo River beyond a string of stoop-shouldered hills. A buzzard wings high above.

"I've lived about all my life around here," Gertha Griffin said. "I know it is dead to some folks, but to us it is not. It has been a thrilling and thriving little community."

Mrs. Griffin, 66, lives on a farm homesteaded when Rutherford B. Hayes was president. She married Fred Griffin 50 years ago this July. Their daughter, Janice McDaniel, 48, lives in a white house with two chimneys, one raised by slaves.

Next door is McDaniel's Grocery, the only store left. Five bewhiskered men in overalls sit on wooden chairs in a semicircle around a cast iron stove drinking pop from glass bottles. Their voices fall quietly on the cool, rock-dust damp.

Grandpa Smith built the store in the '30s or '40s, Mrs. Griffin said. "And he wouldn't tell anybody what he was building. He was just that kind. He had a droll sense of humor. He told some folks it was a bank. He's done gone on. He's down there in the cemetery."

Beside a red dirt road, a path climbs through a rusting, wrought-iron arch into a hillside burial ground. Fabric flowers grace every grave. Mrs. Griffin and the Snowball Cemetery Association see to that the fourth Sunday of every August.

In the Hodge family plot, three miniature stone coffins perch on two-stepped stone slabs raised in the 1880s. E.S. Hamm's obelisk has cast its shadow like a sundial across his wife's remains for 88 years.

But most of the monuments in this old section are simpler. Some are of concrete, sprinkled with bits of broken, colored glass, the names scratched in by hand before they set. Farther back stands a short, wooden cross.

"You can see we have not been a dead place all these years," Mrs. Griffin said. "This little town has burned down twice. We used to have a cotton gin. We had two cotton gins at one time. It burned down in the '40s and then it burned down again a few years ago.

"And we used to have two grist mills. And you could buy anything; just anything. On Saturday nights people would bring in the grain, and that little old place would be working alive up there. There would just be people everywhere.

"My husband's grandfather blew up in one of those mills. The boiler blew up and it killed four men at one time. They just picked up the pieces and carried them away in winding sheets. One of them is buried up here in the cemetery."

In the fields, grazing cattle guard naked hearths and chimneys that once warmed homes huddled around Snowball.

Leader surprised over song's copyright

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — Prime Minister Bob Hawke says he was surprised to learn an American company has a copyright on the Australian song "Waltzing Matilda," and he plans to take the matter up directly with President Reagan.

It was learned that the New York firm of Carl Fisher Inc. has a North American copyright on the song after several Australian film companies used the song in films.

California town learns to live with threat of quakes

PARKFIELD, Calif. (AP) — Children played outside a one-room school as oak trees rustled in the warm spring breeze, which wafted lazily through this quiet valley hamlet tucked away in central California's Coast Range.

On the surface, a tranquil scene. Yet just beneath the ground, only yards away, destructive forces were building along one of the most dreaded seismic faults in the world — the San Andreas.

"Yes, we have earthquake drills here," said teacher Duane Hamann. An instant later, he bellowed the command to his 16 students:

"Drop!"

The children abruptly fell to their knees, bowed forward in the sun-drenched grass and put their hands over their heads.

Hamann, 42, was preparing his students for the day when, once again, the fault will break as it has every two decades since settlers first kept records of temblors in the Cholame Valley.

Valley dwellers have heard the rumble of approaching quakes and watched the ground roll and the limbs of trees sway. They have seen clouds of dust rise in the moonlight as quakes set off landslides in nearby hills. And they have rebuilt their chimneys and replaced smashed dishes, then continued with their lives.

Scientists say that within three to nine years, the next severe quake, measuring 5 to 6 on the Richter scale of ground motion, will strike the valley. And they say that someday a Parkfield temblor might "run away" and trigger a great quake measuring 8 or more in the Los Angeles area, 200 miles south, which could cause tremendous damage.

So they have set up an array of monitoring equipment to make the Parkfield section of the San Andreas the mostly closely watched segment of any earthquake fault in the world, said Bill Bakun, a geophysicist with the U.S. Geological Survey in Menlo Park.

Researchers from the USGS and California's Division of Mines and Geology have converged on the valley because the earthquakes here are amazingly similar. Moderate temblors occur like clockwork about every 22 years, have nearly identical magnitudes, share the same epicenter and are preceded by similar foreshocks.

That makes the Cholame Valley an ideal place for geologists to study the events leading to quakes in an effort to predict them elsewhere in the world, Bakun said.

Scientists rarely know in advance where a quake will be centered, so Parkfield's next quake also will provide an unusual opportunity to learn more about strong ground motion close to a fault. A fault is a fracture in the earth's crust which causes the layers of rock underneath the surface to become displaced and movable.

Such knowledge "could make future design of dams, bridges, buildings, power plants earthquake-resistant...It's a very life-saving sort of science," said state geologist Richard McJunkin.

Signs abound that the Cholame Valley is earthquake country. Bent guardrails and girders on a bridge into Parkfield betray movement of the fault below.

Barbed-wire fences jog slightly where they traverse the San Andreas. Ponds have formed where ground collapsed on the fault.

Fiberglass boxes covering monitoring equipment are seen in pastures throughout the valley.

Bakun recently predicted that the next 5- to 6-magnitude Parkfield quake is likely to occur in 1987 or 1988, and almost certainly no later than 1993.

Yet people "don't lie awake thinking about it," said teacher Hamann. "...My relatives have lived out here for 100 years, and the worst they had to do was put their chimneys up."

Former basketball player uses full court press in re-election bid

By ALAN FRAM

An Analysis

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Bill Bradley, D-N.J., is taking no chances, though he appears unstoppable in his campaign for re-election.

The man he defeated for the Senate in 1978 and the woman he is likely to oppose this fall acknowledge that the former basketball player is extremely popular at home, but Bradley is acting as though he were an overmatched, frail defender assigned to guard former basketball great Wilt Chamberlain.

He is laying the groundwork for a strong organization, building up a huge reserve of money, and taking care to say the right things.

"I've never been one to get out there and make big predictions," Bradley, 40, says when asked to assess his chances of winning his first re-election race. "I think you go out there and you work every day. Every day is another day and things tend to build."

Such is the cautious nature of Bill Bradley, whose persistence can be dated in lore back to the days when, as a youngster in Crystal City, Mo., he would forgo dinner until he made 25 straight basketball free throws.

Even today, one of his aides says privately, "You know Bill. He wouldn't even cross the street without a crossing guard."

The Bradley campaign, gearing up slowly, has already raised about $2.9 million out of a target of about $4.2 million, says Doug Berman, his campaign manager. The senator has been talking openly about seeking re-election for months — and pointedly denying that he would consider being a vice-presidential candidate this fall — but he won't make his official announcement until mid-April.

"Bill has a record this time," says Berman about the theme the campaign is likely to take. "We're no longer just anticipating a situation where Bill is saying what he'd like to accomplish. Now, he's got six years worth of solid achievement."

Asked what those achievements are, Bradley says he classifies his efforts into three categories: "fighting for New Jersey, listening to people responding to their frustrations and hopes, and taking a longer term view of the needs of America."

Bradley is probably best known here for the Fair Tax Act he has sponsored with Rep. Richard Gephardt, D-Mo., a measure that would create a flat tax rate for individuals and corporations and do away with many loopholes.

It is a bill that has gone nowhere in two years, but Bradley insists that it will become more popular next year when "the deficits will continue to mushroom."

Bradley's record wins him high grades from liberal organizations, despite his vote for the first round of President Reagan's 1981 budget cuts, his consistent support for tuition tax credits for parents of private school students, and his vote for the death penalty for certain federal crimes.

Bradley himself refuses to discuss his political philosophy.

"It boils down to labels," he said. "I'm someone who thinks life is more complex than labels. And your record is really a mosaic of all of your service and all your actions."

No serious primary opposition to Bradley has emerged. The state's most prominent Republicans have shied away from challenging him, fearing a match with the man considered one of the most popular politicians in New Jersey.

The candidate considered most likely to win the GOP's June 5 primary is Mary Mochary, the little-known mayor of Montclair, N.J., who has the backing of GOP Gov. Thomas Kean and other key Republicans.

Mrs. Mochary, 41, says she likes the senator but considers him "out of step" with New Jersey residents.

"He stands for increased expenditures, higher taxes and a weak defense," she says.

English professor trying to save favorite soap

AMHERST, Mass. (AP) — An English professor at Amherst College can't bear the thought of parting with one of his favorite classics — so he's leading a letter-writing campaign to save the television soap opera "Search For Tomorrow."

William Pritchard, who has taught at Amherst since 1958, hopes to persuade the local NBC affiliate that it shouldn't have dropped the show, which had been on the air for more than 30 years before being dropped recently in favor of a locally produced talk show.

"I think if I had died, he might have been almost as distraught," said Pritchard's wife, Marietta.

Pritchard said he has been watching "Search" five days a week for seven years.

Students find his addiction "a little strange," Pritchard said Thursday, but "they don't understand that when you spend your mornings reading Plato and Byron, when you live in a wordy world, how wonderful it is to sit in rapt silence for half an hour."

But despite Pritchard's zeal, WWLP has received only half a dozen letters and some two dozen phone calls about the change, said William Pepin, vice president and general manager of the Springfield-based station.

"'Search For Tomorrow' has been on the skids for a long time," Pepin said.

Pritchard said he has been "suffering a bit" since being deprived of his longtime afternoon activity, and has tried taking naps and going to the dentist to fill the void.

Canadian hosts 'put on the dog' for guests

ST. JOHN'S, Newfoundland (AP) — A pack of hairy, slack-jawed German tourists has arrived in St. John's for a week's visit, and their Canadian hosts are really putting on the dog.

The tourists are 32 prize Newfoundland dogs, who arrived Thursday accompanied by 86 owners and members of the Allgeimer Deutsche Klub fuer Neufundlaenders — the Amalgamated German Club for Newfoundlanders, Frankfurt branch.

The well-behaved and impeccably coiffed Newfoundlanders were met at the airport by red-coated Mounties, Tourism Minister Neil Windsor and representatives of the Newfoundland Dog Club.

Matyastik, Crawford claim USPTA title

Service breaks not factor until third set tiebreaker

By BRUCE CASTLEBERRY
Sports Writer

Throughout the finals of the United States Professional Tennis Association's Love Doubles National Championships Sunday at Ranchland Hills Country Club, one thing kept cropping up: Service breaks.

Not that there were a lot of them. When top seeded Bill Matyastik and Randy Crawford and second seeds Steve Wedderburn and Brian Lusson entered the third and final set deadlocked, only once had either team suffered a service break.

AND WHEN the set went to a tiebreaker, the whole shooting match boiled down to service breaks. Crawford-Matyastik got more of them - breaking Lusson twice, Wedderburn once, with Matyastik losing one. Matyastik smashed home a soft return to win the tiebreaker 7-3, and the match 3-6, 6-3, 7-6.

He and teammate Crawford get to divvy up the first place prize money of $3,000, while Lusson and Wedderburn share second place earnings of $1,500.

IT WAS a tough, tense match, and the lack of breakers in the first three sets evidenced the intensity. The first two breaks of the match underscored the finish.

Both had been crucial. Leading 4-3 in the opening set, Wedderburn-Lusson got the game's first big advantage. Matyastik double-faulted at 30-love to open the door, then had trouble on two returns to surrender the first break.

Lusson and Wedderburn smelled the win, and tore through Lusson's ensuing service without allowing a point.

The atmosphere was tight, but Lusson and Wedderburn's court theatrics helped keep matters looser. Lusson laughed after Crawford successfully dropped a short shot in for one point, and Wedderburn's self-chastising gained some sentimental crowd support from a throng of around 350.

Lusson lost his sense of humor moments later, however. Down 3-2 in the middle set, Lusson began to struggle a bit with his serve. Crawford hit a passing shot for the first point, then Lusson double-faulted. He scored on a forehand winner to make it 30-15, then wasted the opportunity with another double-fault.

Lusson then couldn't return a Matyastik shot, and the top seeds had re-gained their lost break.

Matyastik flirted with disaster immediately afterwards, but served up an ace at deuce point to set up Crawford's backhand winner for the game.

That made it 5-2, and although Wedderburn held service, Crawford did, too.

IN THE third set, Wedderburn and Lusson again seemed to be in control, but they could never polish off Matyastik and Crawford. Wedderburn double-faulted three times in the third game of the third set with the count 1-1, but still they held service.

Like heavyweights slugging to the finish, the teams exchanged blows in the form of games. Each side won out until it was 6-6, and a 12-point tiebreaker began.

The sore-armed Wedderburn and Lusson couldn't muster up enough for a strong final charge. Matyastik and Crawford, playing solidly, worked for an edge. They got it when Wedderburn missed wide a return after Crawford had aced home the third point.

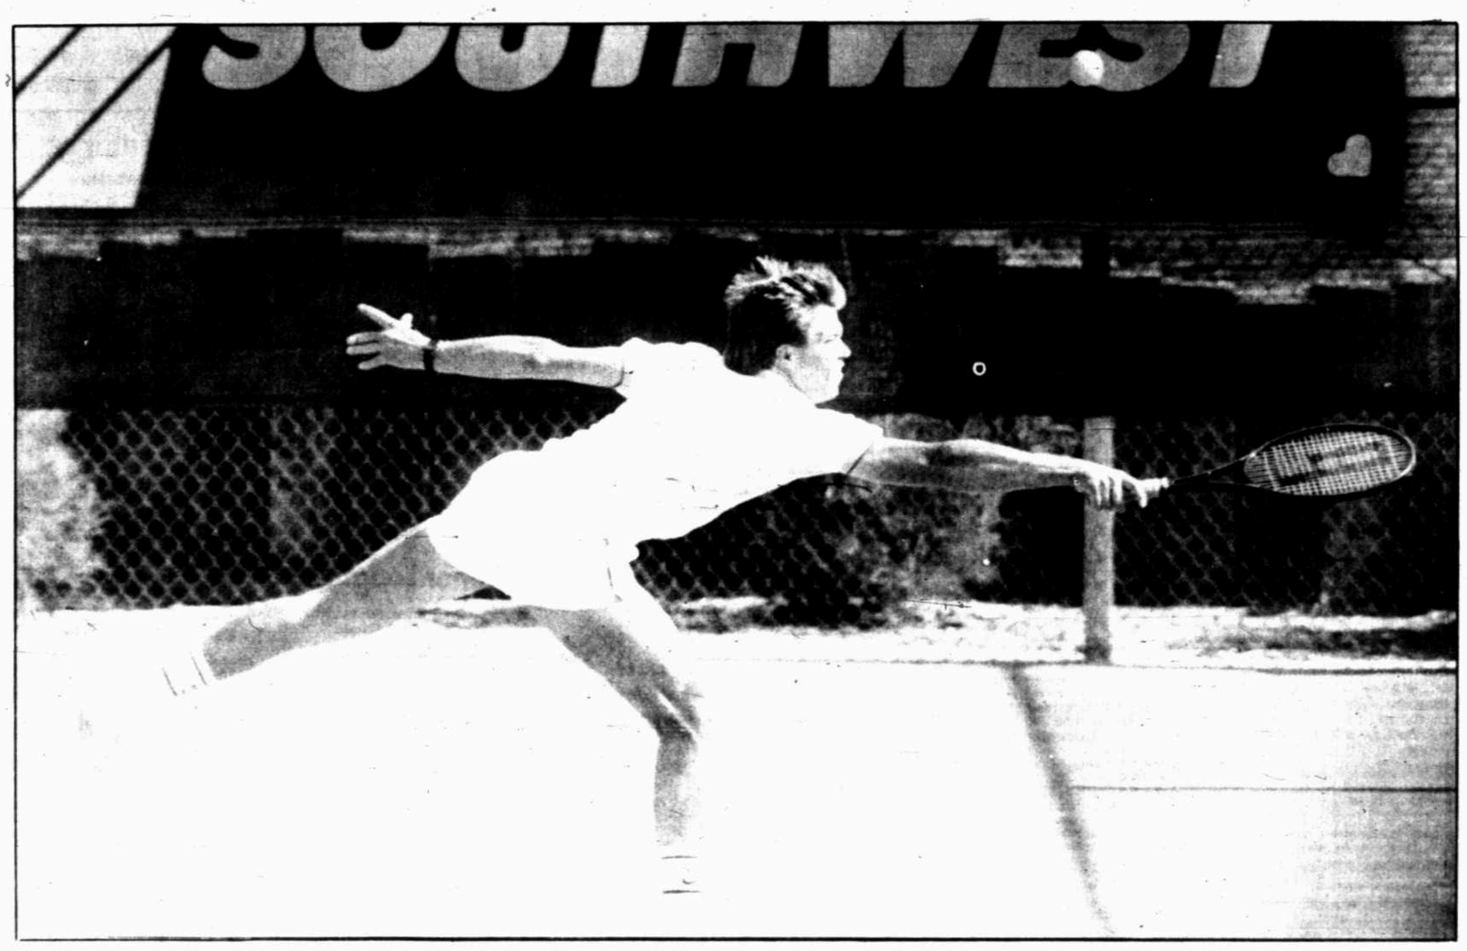

Wedderburn returned with an ace of his own, making it 3-2. Lusson made a great return of Matyastik's serve to even the count at 3-3, but on Lusson's service he lost them both.

"Holding our serve and getting some breaks were what we relied on the whole tournament," said Crawford. For Matyastik, formerly of Midland, it was a sweet return. "I knew it was going to be tight. What made the difference was making the returns in the tiebreaker."

Wedderburn's plans for a trip to Australia were only partially dashed by the runner-up finish. "I geuss I'll only get halfway. The plane will have to stop in the Pacific Ocean."

"When I lost my serve, I just didn't concentrate very well," Lusson said. "But we still lost in the tiebreaker against a good team. At that point it's just a matter of who can make the shots. They're too good to make errors in the tiebreaker."

In addition to the success of Ranchland's first professional tennis excursion, Tournament Director and RHCC pro Terry Bobbitt awarded a partial check for $3,000 to representatives of the American Heart Association. The figure will be even larger once Sunday's reciepts are added.

El Paso holds on to claim 3-2 victory over Cubs

This wasn't an ordinary game as each teams collected only five hits

By TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

Nobody will believe this, but El Paso and Midland played a 3-2 game in which each team managed only five hits.

The Diablos won it, but that was almost incidental to the fact that the Cubs and Brewers didn't wind up 10-7 or 20-16, standard scores for meetings between these teams.

One old-time fan claims the last time anything like that happened was when Frank Tanana was pitching for El Paso. Tanana usually had the Cubs looking like pretzels after a night's work. Once Midland beat the southpaw 1-0...in 10 innings.

And now this.

BRYAN Clutterbuck, from the first through the sixth inning, faced a minimum 18 batters. Nobody really got that excited. For one thing, it was cold again. And for another, Ricky Baker robbed the feat of its suspense by opening the game with a single up the middle. Clutterbuck, who was 11-7 in the Texas League last year at El Paso, then did his abbreviated imitation of Don Larsen.

He had a 3-0 lead going into the seventh when Gary Varsho walked and Shawon Dunston singled to left for Midland's second hit of the game. For a brief instant, Danny Norman, who hit a grand slam Friday and didn't hit a three-run homer Saturday, had the frozen folks in the stands thinking tie with a long fly ball that drove Jim Paciorek almost to the warning track in left. When Jim Auten delivered a run scoring single, Clutterbuck was finished.

Relief pitcher Chuck Crim uncorked a wild pitch that enabled Midland to score again, but that was it.

MIKE CAPEL, 0-2 for the Cubs, pitched five-hit ball through seven innings. And the way he lost this one will keep him awake at night until his next start. In the sixth, Dale Sveum reached first on catcher's interference by ex-Diablo Joe Henderson. Sveum stole second and then came home on two wild pitches.

El Paso's other two runs came in the third when Juan Castillo, another returnee from last year along with Paciorek, tripled into the right field corner. Paciorek, who had three hits, walked, and Steve Michael singling in one run and the other scoring on a fast ball.

CUB-ICLES—Jeff Fruge, 0-1, goes for the Cubs in tonight's 7 p.m. game while Ted Higuera, 0-0, will pitch for the Diablos...Rich Buoantony, who was with Midland part of last season, is now a Diablo...Ricky Felder didn't see action Sunday, but he is back with the club along with Garrett Nago...One of the pitchers Midland will see is Bill Weyman, 16-5 with a 1.30 ERA and 15 complete games in the California League last year...

Crenshaw finally wins a big one

AP Laserphoto

Ben Crenshaw celebrates his victory in the Masters Golf Championship.

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — Ben Crenshaw knew he had the first major championship of his golf career sewed up — and so did the massive gallery surrounding the 18th green at Augusta National.

The thunderous ovation came in waves as the popular Texan prepared to put the finishing touches on a closing 68 that left him with an 11-under-par 277 total and the coveted Masters title.

"I honestly didn't know where I was," Crenshaw said.

"Coming up 18 I had so much support. It was incredible. I just didn't want to let those people down."

They had been with him all the way on the treacherous back side of this famous course built by Bobby Jones.

The cheers started at the 10th hole where he rolled in a monstrous, breaking 60-foot putt for his third straight birdie — one that gave him a three-shot lead.

He bogeyed the 11th, but then came back with a 12-foot birdie putt on the 155-yard, par-3 12th — a hole that took out the only two players with a realistic chance.

LARRY NELSON, the U.S. Open champion who had closed the gap to one with a birdie on 11, knocked his tee shot in the water and took a double bogey.

Tom Kite, the third-round leader who was two back at the time, also found the water, and made triple bogey.

There was a sense that this tournament was over, that the only person who could beat Crenshaw was Crenshaw.

He didn't let it happen.

He saved par with a 20-footer on No. 14 and then applied the clincher, a 15-foot birdie putt on the 15th that built the lead to four shots.

The ovations at each hole continued to grow.

They were the type that had been reserved for two legends in Masters lore — for the popularity of Arnold Palmer during his heyday and for the respect for the brilliant play of Jack Nicklaus, the only five-time winner of this prestigious event.

Tom Watson, a two-time Masters winner, made two birdies over the last three holes to claim second place at 69-279, but he really never was in the title chase.

David Edwards and Gil Morgan shared the low round of the final day with 67s, and were deadlocked in third place at 280.

Enright isn't ready to push panic button yet

Midland is 1-5 going into the second game of its' series with El Paso tonight and the tragedy of it is that the Cubs have been getting good pitching, good enough to win with normal Cubs Stadium batting support.

Soothsayers claim any time you can hold a team to five or six runs in wind-swept West Texas, you are pitching well enough to win. And Midland pitchers have been doing that.

The Cubs just haven't been getting any hits and as a result, mistakes that might normally be glossed over with a more robust batting attack, have been fatal.

Manager George Enright isn't pushing the panic button. "We're just struggling at the plate and if I didn't know what some of these guys are capable of and have done in the past, I might be upset."

Jim Autin, Gary Varsho and Jeff Rutledge have all played for Enright before. Auten is swinging the hottest bat of the bunch with three hits in 15 trips. That translates into .200. Varsho is three-for-22 and Rutledge is 1-for-15. Mike Anicich, a streak home run hitter, is 1-for-20, but that's the way he started last year.

"Varsho hit about .190 the first couple of months last season," relates Enright, "then he went crazy and wound up batting .270, which meant he was hitting .333 or so the last half of the season."

DESPITE THE traumatic start, Enright is keeping his perspective.

In the series final against San Antonio, with a runner on first and one out in a 5-3 game, he decided to have Tandy Charley, a lefty, walk Mariano Duncan, who was 7-for-23 against Midland in the series.

With Stu Pedersen and Gilberto Reyes coming up, it was suggested, he might just as well have intentionally walked them as well, considering all the trouble they caused the Cubs in the series. Pedersen was batting .450 and Reyes .333.

"I wanted Pedersen to face Charley's change up. He's never seen a change up like Charley's got. He even gave the major leaguers trouble with it in spring training, even though they knew it was coming."

"Besides, I was playing the percentages...I knew Pedersen was no .450 hitter."

As it turned out, Pedersen hit a fly into the hole in right-center. It looked liked three bases, but Ricky Baker caught up with it and made it look routine.

VANCE LOVELACE, who started Saturday's game, once pitched for Enright when he was a Cub. "He's got the arm. The only question has been his control. Lovelace and outfielder Dan Cataline went to the Dodgers in the Ron Cey trade...

Another day or two and infielder Tony Woods will be back in the line up. "I don't want to rush that wrist and get it sprained again. But having Tony back will give us more flexibility and we need his bat," says Enright...

The Cubs and Diablos are using the DH, since El Paso is an American League farm. The only other time it is scheduled for use in the TL is against Tulsa, a Texas Rangers' farm...

Fingers comes in to get second straight save

By The Associated Press

It was a classic confrontation of pitchers, not starters, but between relievers — one at the top of his game, the other struggling to get back.

It was Dan Quisenberry vs. Rollie Fingers. The single-season save king vs. the all-time save leader.

Quisenberry, who set a major league record with 45 saves in 1983, had earned a save in each of his previous four appearances with the Kansas City Royals this season. He relieved rookie Bret Saberhagen on Sunday to start the eighth inning.

Fingers, who came into the season with the all-time save record of 301, had earned his first save in nearly two years for Milwaukee the night before. Apparently on the road back from arm surgery, Fingers took over from Mike Caldwell with one out in the eighth inning.

When Fingers came to the mound, the Brewers had a 3-2 lead, and he made it stand up with 1⅔ innings of one-hit relief, striking out three of the six batters he faced. He hadn't had a save since Aug. 27, 1982. Now, he had two in two days.

Angels 10, A's 8

California scored nine of its runs with four homers, including a grand slam by Brian Downing, and the Angels led 10-0 after a seven-run second inning. Reggie Jackson, who has 10 RBI and three homers in 10 games, and Juan Beniquez hit two-run homers, and Rob Wilfong hit a solo shot after Downing's slam in the second. Doug Corbett, making his first appearance of the season, pitched 3⅓ innings of hitless relief to earn the save. He entered the game in the bottom of the sixth with the score already 10-8.

American League

Orioles 6, Indians 5

Wayne Gross' two-run double with the bases loaded in the top of the ninth inning capped a three-run rally that broke a 3-3 tie, and the Orioles held on to win for only the second time in eight games. Ken Singleton's ninth-inning single broke the tie. Sammy Stewart worked the final two innings for the victory.

Yankees 2, White Sox 1

Ken Griffey hit a two-out, bases-loaded single in the 10th inning to help the Yankees end the White Sox's three-game winning streak. Griffey's hit looked like a routine out until it fell over the head of Chicago left fielder Ron Kittle, who was playing shallow against the left-handed hitter.

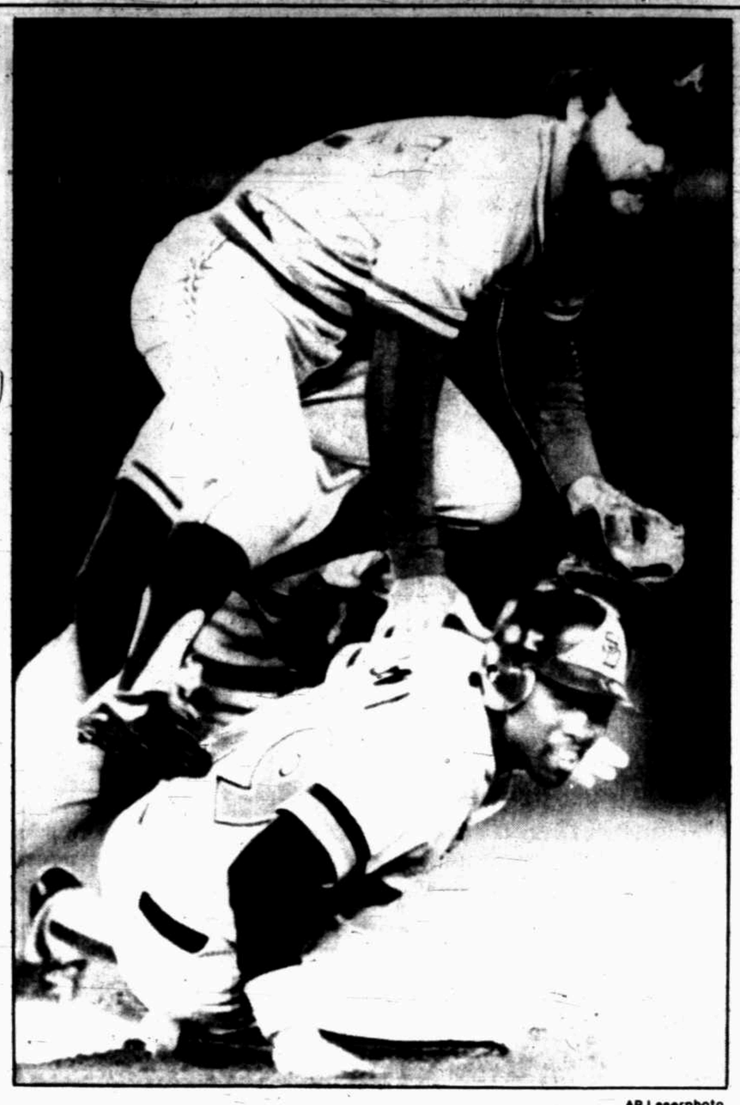

Blue Jays 2, Rangers 1

Willie Upshaw and Cliff Johnson hit consecutive home runs in the top of the ninth inning as Toronto came back to beat Texas.

Luis Leal of the Blue Jays and Dave Stewart of the Rangers were locked in a scoreless duel until George Wright's RBI-single with two out gave Texas a 1-0 lead in the bottom of the eighth inning.

Mariners 5, Twins 4

Bob Kearney drove in two runs, including one with a double in Seattle's four-run seventh inning, and the Mariners rallied to beat Minnesota. The Twins led 3-0 after three innings. But Seattle reliever Roy Thomas checked Minnesota on three hits for five innings, and Dave Beard held the Twins scoreless until Kent Hrbek's RBI-single in the ninth.

San Diego hits road with lofty 9-2 record

By The Associated Press

The San Diego Padres, with a cast that includes a couple of Broadway characters, two young hoofers and a pair of newcomers starring in lead roles, have gotten their act together and are ready to take it on the road.

Off to the fastest start in their history, the Padres beat the Atlanta Braves 6-4 Sunday to wrap up their long-running, season-opening homestand with a lofty 9-2 record.

That mark puts the Padres, who have never finished in the first division since being formed in 1969, in a position they have never enjoyed prior to this year — 3½ games ahead of the pack in the National League West.

"I would have hated to think we wouldn't play good baseball," said San Diego Manager Dick Williams. "But I didn't think we would win nine of the 11 games."

San Diego rallied for three runs in the third inning, aided by an Atlanta error, to overcome a 4-3 deficit. With runners on first and second and one out, Carmelo Martinez lined a single to left, and both runners scored and Martinez reached third when the ball skipped by outfielder Gerald Perry.

Kevin McReynolds then hit a sacrifice fly off reliever Rick Mahler, who had relieved Craig McMurtry, 1-2.

Winner Sid Monge, 2-0, is one of six San Diego pitchers with a victory this season.

Claudell Washington drove in all four Atlanta runs with a three-run homer, his third of the year, and an RBI single.

National League

Giants 8, Dodgers 6

Pinch hitter Joel Youngblood's one-out single in the 11th inning sent San Francisco ahead for good in the four-hour seesaw contest at Los Angeles.

The Giants had scored twice in the top of the ninth against reliever Burt Hooton to take a 6-4 lead. Dusty Baker, whom San Francisco claimed on waivers from the Dodgers this year, drove in those two runs with a pinch single.

Los Angeles rallied in the bottom of the ninth against reliever Greg Minton to tie it on sacrifice flies by Steve Sax and Ken Landreaux.

Cardinals 1, Pirates 0

St. Louis scored in the bottom of the first inning and Cardinal starter Bob Forsch and three relievers made the run stand up.

Forsch departed with strained back muscles with one out in the fifth. Dave Rucker, 1-0, left in favor of Jeff Lahti with one out in the seventh, and Bruce Sutter came on with one out in the eighth for his fourth save.

Astros 6, Reds 5

Houston scored four runs in the bottom of the eighth to make it 5-5 and then won it in the ninth on Phil Garner's one-out single with the bases loaded.

Garner's hit, through the left side of a drawn-in infield, came after the Astros loaded the bases on two walks and Enos Cabell's single off Tom Hume, 0-1.

ee, Cooper in good shape

By BOB BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

Playoff hopes for Midland Lee and Abilene Cooper are looking good after Saturday's results in District 4-5A baseball.

The Rebels and Cougars are in a tie for first place at 8-2 and hold a two-game lead over Midland High and Odessa High, tied for third at 6-4. With only four games left on the schedule, Odessa Permian, Abilene High and San Angelo are all but mathematically eliminated from the race with 4-6 records. Big Spring, at 0-10, has been out of the running for some time.

As it stands now, the Bulldogs and Broncbos can afford no more set backs and need some help from the rest of the league if they're to entertain any post-season play. However, the two play each other Tuesday in a 4 p.m. game at OHS with the loser almost assured of elimination.

Midland Lee, needing a combination of wins or MHS and OHS losses totaling three to clinch the playoffs, hosts erratic Permian while Abilene Cooper has Big Spring at home and Abilene High is at San Angelo.

THE REBELS didn't get a pretty victory over Abilene High Saturday, but they did win. There were a few problems on defense and a lack of consistant hitting. So, what else is new? It's been that way all year long but Lee keeps on winning.

Bryan Willis, who pitched his way to his fifth 4-5A victory of the year against one loss, isn't likely to get the starting call Tuesday even though he's one of the league's leading pitchers with a 1.96 earned run average.

Coach Ernie Johnson is waiting until after today's practice to make a choice for the starting role, but if things get really tight, Willis could come in to relieve. One way or the other, Johnson will have his senior right-hander in the game, probably in the outfield. Right now Willis is leading in hitting with a .464 average, producing eight runs and 11 RBIs.

Steve Woodlee still leads the team in runs scored, but dropped into second place in hitting with .433 and has 10 RBIs. Jimmy Phillips, who hit his first district home run against AHS (only Lee's second), is hitting at a .387 click while Rob Walker has a .313 average and has scored 10 runs. As a team, Lee is hitting .266.

TIM WHALEN'S Bulldogs are looking at a long hill to climb after their 9-0 loss to Cooper on Saturday. Most important, they have to put the game behind them and concentrate on Odessa High, a team that has proven it can score runs in bunches.

The Bulldogs have two pitchers that have known success this season in Mike Timlin, 4-2, and Steve Wootan, 1-1. However, since Timlin went the distance against Cooper, it's likely Wootan will get the call against OHS. In 21 innings of duty, Wootan has a 3.00 ERA.

If not on the mound, Timlin and his team-leading .467 batting average will probably be in the outfield while Wootan and his No. 2 mark of .400 will be at third. Chris Herbert has been steadily increasing his average which stands at .387 and Mike Stanton follows with a .308.

OU would play Mars

NORMAN, Okla. (AP) — Basketball coach Billy Tubbs of Oklahoma likes to take his team to faraway places for games.

"We'd like to be the first team in history to play the University of Mars," he said. "We'd even go up there and play as long as they'd guarantee us a return game here in Norman."

Tubbs, a basketball zealot, was accused by his wife of loving the game more than he did her. "I had to hedge on that one," he added, "but I did tell her I loved her more than track."

Stallions chalk up seventh straight

By The Associated Press

USFL Roundup

Cliff Stoudt's appearance at the Pontiac Silverdome as quarterback of the Birmingham Stallions was quite a contrast to his last previous visit as a member of the Pittsburgh Steelers.

Stoudt had a miserable game last Thanksgiving as the Steelers lost 45-3 to the Detroit Lions, but on Sunday he helped the Stallions win their seventh straight game, 28-17 over Michigan, the defending United States Football League champions.

"My trip to Detroit last time was pretty low," said Stoudt, who completed 15 of 24 passes for 133 yards and two touchdowns in the victory over the Panthers. "It was a rotten way to spend a holiday. But that's in the past now."

STOUDT GOT plenty of help from former Buffalo Bill Joe Cribbs, who caught one of the TD passes for seven yards, rushed three yards for another score and finished with 116 yards on 20 carries.

"Cribbs is the key to our offense," Stoudt said. "He takes the pressure off us. He just does a lot of things well. He's an All-Pro player. He has the ability to break it any time."

Despite Birmingham's lofty 7-1 record under Coach Rollie Dotsch, Stoudt's statistics are undistinguished. He has completed less than 52 percent of his passes, has thrown for an average of only 144 yards per game and has only seven touchdown passes in eight outings.

"Rollie's system doesn't need a quarterback to throw for 300 yards every week," Stoudt said. "We want to play the way Green Bay and Miami did (in the 1960s and '70s). You play hard, possess the football and win."

Michigan, 6-2, playing without star receiver Anthony Carter, who has a broken left arm, took a 7-0 lead before a home crowd of 42,665 on a 38-yard pass play from quarterback Bobby Hebert to Derek Holloway. But Cribbs' two touchdowns before halftime put Birmingham ahead for good.

Stoudt added a 17-yard TD pass to Jim Smith in the third quarter.

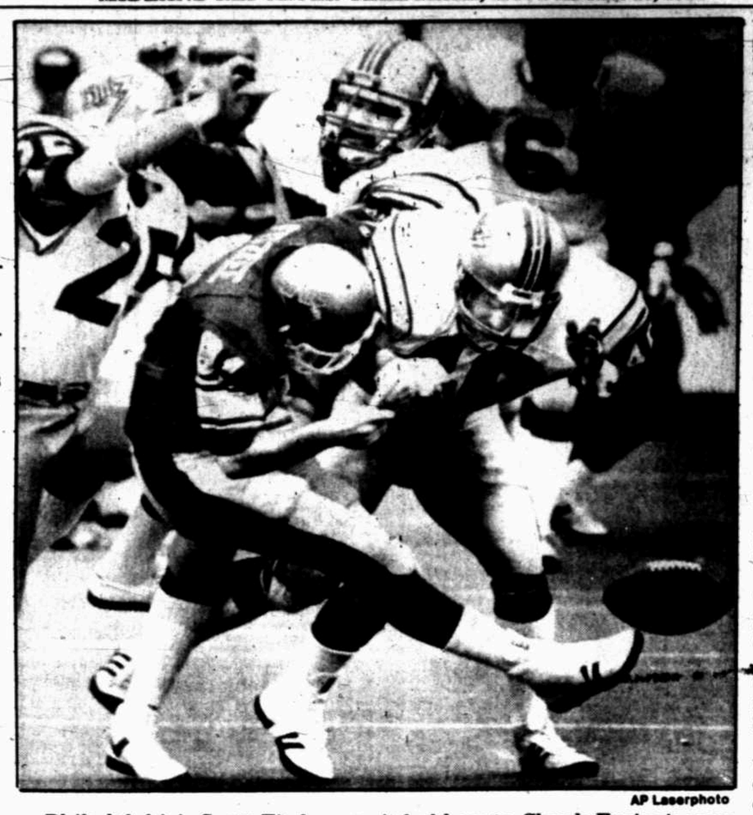

On Saturday, Oklahoma edged Washington 20-16, Los Angles beat Memphis 23-17 in overtime, Denver topped Pittsburgh 31-21 and San Antonio blanked Jacksonville 20-0.

Houston will play at Oakland and Tampa Bay will be at New Orleans in tonight's games.

Wranglers 20, Generals 3

Kevin Long, who used to play for the New York Jets when they were coached by Walt Michaels, rushed for 123 yards and two touchdowns in leading the Arizona over Michaels' current team, New Jersey.

The loss before a crowd of 31,917 at Giants Stadium dropped the Generals to 6-2 and out of a first-place tie in the Atlantic Division with Philadelphia.

Philadelphia's Scott Fitzkee can't hold on to Chuck Fusina's pass as if falls incomplete under pressure from Chicago defenders Tommy Wilcox (25), Bob Knapton and Doug Plank (46).

In addition to his hard running, Long set up his 2-yard touchdown run early in the fourth quarter when took a short pass from Greg Landry and raced 40 yards. Long later scored on a 9-yard run.

Stars 41, Blitz 7

Philadelphia won easily at home before 17,417 fans, scoring four touchdowns before the game was nine minutes old and 31 points in the first period.

Linebacker Sam Mills set up two touchdowns and a field goal with two interceptions and a fumble recovery, and the Stars also intercepted two other passes and recovered another fumble, the latter being returned 35 yards for a touchdown by defensive back Scott Woerner.

The Stars are 7-1, while the Blitz fell to 2-6.

Kite shoots 75 to fall into four-way at 282

Nelson was next at 70-281 and Kite had a 75, falling into a four-way tie at 282 with Ronnie Black, 68, Australian David Graham, 73, and Mark Lye, the colorful 36-hole leader who closed with a 74.

"I haven't been through this before," Crenshaw said. "It's a feeling of relief more than anything. There's no question I've put pressure on myself to win the important tournaments."

He narrowly missed a major title in 1981 when he lost the PGA championship in a playoff with Graham.

"Today was just my day," he said. "I was determined. I tried to hit the fairways and the greens, and I did a darn good job of it."

It was the 10th victory of a career that began with a triumph in his first professional start — the 1973 San Antonio-Texas Open.

He was fresh off the campus of the University of Texas, where he claimed three individual NCAA crowns.

The golf world expected great things from him. So did Crenshaw.

Asked if it were better to win his first major now, rather than in the early stages of his career, he said:

"It means more now. There have been disappointments, but this is a sweet, sweet thing. I don't think there'll ever be a sweeter moment."

It wasn't a day to remember for Kite, Crenshaw's former college teammate who has come close, but never won a major title.

Asked if he knew what might be going through Crenshaw's mind, Kite replied, "No, but I can guarantee he knows what's going through mine. It's sure not jubilation."

"He has got to feel sick," Crenshaw said of Kite.

"Believe me, he's hurting," Crenshaw added. "He played well up to one hole. If you don't think golf's tough, ask him."

Watson, who has been in a slump, called it "one of those days I never got close enough to the lead to put any pressure on Ben. I was just too far behind to catch up. I had to have some mistakes, and Ben just didn't make any."

Goalies key teams to victories

NHL Roundup

Who was that masked man? In St. Louis, he was Mike Liut. In Landover, Md., it was Billy Smith. At Montreal, it was Steve Penney. In Calgary, it was Grant Fuhr.

Goaltending often makes the difference in Stanley Cup play and that was particularly evident Sunday night. Liut was the key to the Blues' 3-1 victory over Minnesota as he made 24 saves. Smith, who has backstopped the New York Islanders to four consecutive National Hockey League crowns, foiled the Washington Capitals 32 times in another 3-1 decision. Penney, a rookie who was 0-4 in his regular-season appearances for the Canadiens, faced only 17 shots as Montreal edged Quebec 2-1. Fuhr foiled 35 shots as Edmonton beat Calgary 3-2.

Each winner now holds a 2-1 edge in their best-of-seven series, which resume at the same sites tonight.

Blues 3, North Stars 1

The Blues got goals from Bernie Federko, Doug Wickenheiser and Dave Pichette to subdue the North Stars. Liut, playing in his 35th straight postseason game for the Blues, lost his shutout when scored on a power play with 2:25 left.

"He represents the finest type of goaltending you can get," said North Stars Coach Bill Mahoney. "I thought we got our offense going in the second period, but Mike Liut stood up big every time we had a chance."

Islanders 3, Capitals 1

The Islanders still aren't playing like a team on a mission — tying the NHL record of five straight Stanley Cups set from 1956-60 by Montreal. But they continued to show the killer instinct that has made them champions.

Trailing 1-0 on a goal by Washington's Alan Haworth, the Islanders rallied. Rookie Pat Flatley took a pass from Greg Gilbert and fired a wrist shot over the shoulder of Caps goalie Pat Riggin to tie the game in the second period. Gilbert then set up Brent Sutter's winner and Bryan Trottier's empty-net goal in the final session.

Gilbert intercepted a clearing pass by Larry Murphy and fed in front to Sutter for a short shot to make it 2-1. He outraced the Capitals' defense to the puck in the last minute and sent it from the right wing corner to Trottier in front for an easy tap-in to clinch it.

Oilers 3, Flames 2

Jaroslav Pouzar, one of Edmonton's few defense-minded forwards, made his 1984 playoff debut. He took a pass from Jari Kurri and beat goalie Reggie Lemelin on a breakaway at 3:13 of the third period.

Paul Coffey had the other two goals for the Oilers and was the main subject of post-game discussion.

"Paul Coffey is to us what Bobby Orr was to the Bruins," said Wayne Gretzky, who is playing with a sore left arm. "As far as I'm concerned he won that game. People criticize him for his defense but tonight he was blocking shots, taking out his man . . . he dominated the game."

Canadiens 2, Nordiques 1

Montreal's tight checking made it easy for Penney. Bobby Smith and Ryan Walter connected on power plays for the Canadiens, while Pat Price got the only Quebec tally.

Ingle's diving grab helps lift Cougars past Hogs

SWC Baseball

HOUSTON (AP) — Mike Ingle's diving catch of a hard hit ball helped snuff out an eighth inning rally Sunday and allowed the Houston Cougars to slip past the Arkansas Razorbacks, 4-3, in a Southwest Conference baseball game.

A three-run homer by designated hitter Guy Garibay in the first inning helped boost the Cougars to a 4-1 lead at end of the second inning.

Houston starter Stuart Sauffacher, 3-2, was cruising along with a 4-1 lead until the fifth inning when Brett Harrison walked and scored on a double by Jeff King. King then moved to third on a groundout and scored on a ground ball to shortstop to pull the Razorbacks to within striking distance at 4-3.

Greg Brinkman relieved Stauffacher in the eighth inning and picked up the save when Ingle's diving catch and a groundout stopped the late Arkansas rally.

Houston is 27-20 for the season and 3-12 in SWC action.

Rice beats TCU, 8-2

HOUSTON (AP) — Mark Machalec's three-run home run gave Rice an 8-2 win over Texas Christian in SWC baseball Sunday.

Machalec's homer, his fourth game-winning hit of the season, led off a six-run Rice sixth. With the score tied 1-1, Machalec slugged a 1-1 pitch over the left-field fence with Eric Gräff and Curtis Fox on base.

Machalec had not been expected to play because of a broken bone in his left wrist suffered April 6 against Baylor. With his appearances in both games Saturday, he broke a school record for games played with 199.

Rice swept the three-game series with TCU and holds on to third place in the conference standings.

David Hinnrichs, 7-0, went the distance for Rice, scattering five hits, striking out five and walking two. TCU starter Kight Higgins, 2-3, took the loss.

Rice is now 32-8 on the season and 10-5 in the SWC. TCU falls to 20-17 and 4-11.

Arroyo stops Brown, wins lightweight title

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Harry Arroyo of Youngstown, Ohio, became the new International Boxing Federation lightweight champion, stopping Philadelphia's Charlie "Choo Choo" Brown in the 14th round of a sheduled 15-round bout Sunday at the Sands Casino Hotel

Referee Larry Hazzard stopped the fight at 2:07 of the round after the 26-year-old Arroyo, 24-0 with 17 knockouts, staggered Brown with two rights to the head and landed several more while Brown was trapped against his corner. Brown, 25, had his record dropped to 23-3-1 with 16 knockouts.

McCrory keeps crown

DETROIT (AP) — Milton McCrory successfully defended his World Boxing Council welterweight title Sunday, stopping Gilles Elbilia of France at 1:08 of the sixth round.

Elbilia, the European champion, protested the stopping of the fight by referee Carlos Padilla. Speaking through an interpreter, the French fighter said he intended to file a formal protest with the WBC.

However, Stuart Kirschenbaum, chairman of Michigan's Athletic Board of Control, said he concurred with the referee's decision.

Waltrip wins TranSouth 500

DARLINGTON, S.C. — Darrell Waltrip coasted home two seconds ahead of fellow Chevrolet driver Terry Labonte to win Sunday's 28th annual TranSouth 500-mile stock car race at Darlington Raceway.

Bill Elliott's Ford suffered engine failure on the final lap and placed third. Cale Yarborough's Chevy, stymied by a mid-race tire problem, was a lap down in fourth, and Dale Earnhardt's fifth-place Chevy was 1½ laps further back.

Waltrip scored his fourth TranSouth victory and his 59th career triumph at an average speed of 119.926 miles per hour as nine caution flags slowed the pace for 69 laps.

The Franklin, Tenn., resident was one of 11 drivers who swapped first place 11 times during the 367-lap scramble on a treacherous 1.366-mile oval. He led five times for 251 laps, including the final 64, and collected $39,450.

Waltrip, who won the Valleydale 500 two weeks ago at Bristol, Tenn., Sunday became the first repeat winner on NAS-CAR's Grand National circuit in 11 races, dating to the a 500-miler at Charlotte, N.C., Motor Speedway in October 1983.

Harry Gant was more than a lap behind in sixth place, followed by Richard Petty, Phil Parsons, Ricky Rudd and Neil Bonnett.

Benny Parsons, who started first after qualifying at 156.328 mph, fell from contention after brushing the concrete retaining wall in the second turn on the first lap.

Conrail's future looks much brighter than it's past

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Conrail, once a massive drain on the taxpayer, now rolls along the rails a money-maker. While hitches remain in the government's plan to sell the sprawling freight railroad, Conrail's success has piqued the interest of prospective buyers.

Last Tuesday, Alleghany Corp. of New York made an offer worth at least $2 billion for the government's 85 percent interest in the rail giant, whose routes run 14,200 miles in 15 states in the Northeast and the Midwest.

The bid by Alleghany, which was founded as a railroad holding company but does no current rail business, was the second for Conrail since the government began its aggressive campaign to sell the system.

Last June, a coalition of Conrail employees proposed buying the railroad in a package that unions said amounted to $500 million in cash and concessions worth $1.5 billion.

The employees expect to make a new bid worth more money within four to six weeks, said Brian Freeman, a consultant for unions representing 39,000 Conrail employees. Details of the sweetened offer are still being developed, he said.

Three major railroads have also publicly expressed interest in Conrail, according to Federal Railroad Administrator John Riley, the government's chief negotiator in the sale. They are Norfolk Southern Corp., CSX Corp. and Santa Fe Industries Inc. None, however, has made an offer.

Alleghany's offer sparked debate on Capitol Hill over the holding company's involvement with Penn Central, Conrail's disastrous predecessor. Conrail was created in 1976 from the bankrupt shells of the Penn Central and five other rail lines. According to the Federal Railroad Administration, the government spent $2.8 billion for the predecessor railroads, $3.28 billion for Conrail securities and $580 million for employees who lost jobs or pay in the transaction.

Alleghany owned some stock in Penn Central and a controlling interest in one of its predecessors, New York Central. Alleghany's current chairman, Fred Kirby, was on the board of Penn Central before its demise.

"I've made the observation that there would be a certain irony in having this railroad turned over to individuals associated with predecessor railroads that were run into the ground," said Rep. James Florio, D-N.J., chairman of the House subcommittee that oversees rail matters.

In fact, the New York Central made money in all but two years Alleghany controlled it, according to Kirby, including earning more than $50 million in 1965, the year before the merger with the Pennsylvania and the New Haven, the latter a long-faltering New England line the Interstate Commerce Commission had forced on the two larger railroads as a merger condition.

After the merger, Kirby said Alleghany owned less than 1 percent of Penn Central stock. "Allegheny never owned or controlled Penn Central in any way," he said.

Rumors of takeover buzz about Disney Productions

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Rumors of an impending takeover attempt are buzzing about Walt Disney Productions, the late film visionary's tattered legacy that has had problems finding firm financial footing in the past few years.

Speculation has been fueled by heavy trading of Disney stock on the New York Stock Exchange since early March, by the growing stakes owned by two of the largest shareholders and by defensive financial maneuvering by Disney management.

But analysts note that the price would be high — estimates have placed it at nearly $3 billion — and the deck is stacked in favor of the company by a corporate rule that would require a successful suitor to win over 80 percent of the 34.7 million outstanding shares.

But Disney's considerable assets are eye-catching:

—Disney's rich library of films, most of which never have never appeared on television or pay-cable, is valued at $300 million to $500 million.

—The company's extensive land holdings in Florida and California could be worth hundreds of millions.

—Two recent Disney films, "Never Cry Wolf" and "Splash," might turn around the company's faltering film division.

—Earnings, down 30 percent since 1980, may have caused undervaluation of the company's stock.

Disney executives are saying publicly they aren't worried about a takeover attempt. At the same time, however, they have armed themselves with a $1.3 billion line of credit they could use to fend off even the most ardent of suitors.

One of those suitors may be New York financier Saul Steinberg, whose Reliance Financial Services Inc. has scooped up 9.3 percent of Disney's stock in the past month at a cost of $200 million. But so far, Steinberg has said he is buying Disney stock for investment purposes only.

Another possible swain could be Roy E. Disney, look-a-like nephew of Walt, who also announced another purchase this past week, which increased his family's holdings to 4 percent of Disney's 34.7 million shares.

Aides of Steinberg and Roy Disney say neither man nor their representatives have held any meetings.

Rumors persist that Roy, who resigned abruptly from the Disney board of directors March 9 and has been at odds with Disney President-Chief Executive Officer Ron Miller, may be planning a takeover attempt.

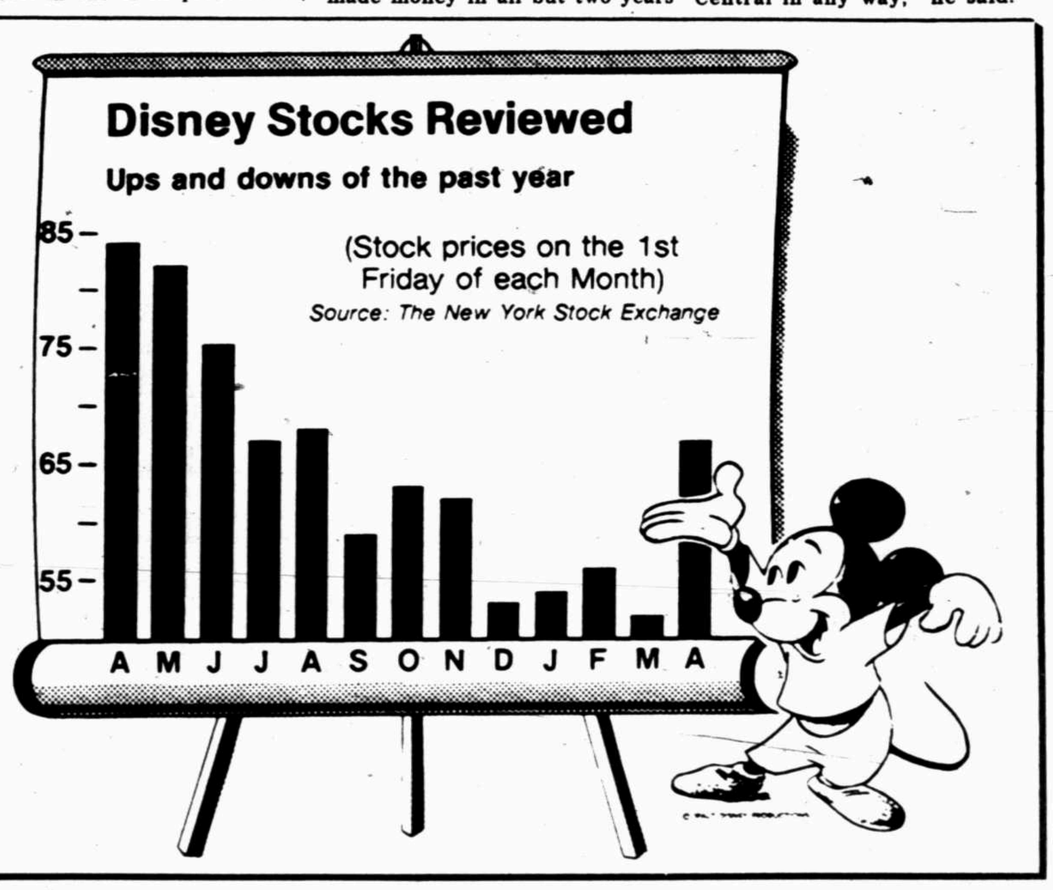

Roy Disney also has not said publicly what his intentions are.

Analysts point out that anyone attempting a takeover would need a lot of wherewithal. Some estimate that Disney stock, which has been trading around $66 a share, could reach $85 a share in a takeover attempt.

"Nothing is ever prohibitive, but it's awfully hard to make a cogent case for a takeover given the run-up in the (stock) price versus the earnings," says R. Joseph Fuchs of Kidder, Peabody & Co. Inc. in New York.

Disney's earnings have been slipping. In the first quarter, which ended Dec. 31, revenue rose 12 percent to $302 million, but net income fell 48 percent to $8.9 million. And earnings declined each of the three previous years. For the fiscal year ended Sept. 30, 1983, income fell 7 percent to $93 million after a 16 percent drop in fiscal 1982.

Disney bylaws require that 80 percent of voting shareholders must approve a sale, merger or change of management and 80 percent are needed to change that bylaw, Disney spokesman Erwin Okun said. Disney family members other than Roy E. Disney own an estimated 15 percent of the company's stock.

Utilities put off paying $6.3 billion in federal taxes

WASHINGTON (AP) — Electric utilities used investment tax credits and other business tax deferrals to put off paying some $6.3 billion in 1983 federal income taxes that it collected from consumers in power bills last year.

According to figures from the industry's Edison Electric Institute, those deferrals — amounting to about $28 per household — would more than have offset the nearly $5.4 billion in electric rate increases had they been passed on to consumers.

Over the past three decades, those deferred taxes have accumulated into a pool "somewhat above $34 billion" that critics contend is being used to build unneeded power plants.

Last year, the pool rose by $5.1 billion and in 1981 by $3.7 billion, according to figures from the Environmental Action Foundation, a Washington-based group frequently critical of the utility industry.

The electric institute, an arm of the nation's 169 investor-owned power companies, released the 1983 figures last week amid a new effort in Congress to effectively exempt utilities from the growth-aimed corporate tax incentives.

The House Energy conservation and power subcommittee set a hearing for June 12 on a bill by Rep. Tom Harkin, D-Iowa, that would permit state utility commissions to make power companies immediately pass on any tax breaks to their customers.

"As long as a utility continues to grow, it can postpone much of its tax bill indefinitely," Richard Morgan, an economist for Environmental Action, said Sunday.

"If utility officials want to finance a new power plant, they should have to convince Wall Street that is a prudent investment," Morgan said. "They shouldn't be able to demand an involuntary loan from ratepayers."

Industry officials acknowledge that the deferrals amount to interest-free construction loans that are not repaid until several years later. But they charge that Harkin's bill would defeat the economy-stimulating purpose of the credits and ultimately result in even higher electric bills.

"If these temporary loans from the Treasury were not available, the financing cost to the customer of this $34 billion would have been about $6 billion in 1983," said Lowell Klosky, the electric institute's financial manager.

The taxes are collected and acknowledged as owed but payment to the IRS is deferred through an accounting practice called "normalization" by its supporters and labeled "phantom taxes" by critics.

Dollar rises sharply; Gold drifts

LONDON (AP) — The dollar rose sharply against all major currencies in early trading today, propelled by the strength of the American economy. Gold prices drifted downward.

Dealers said the U.S. currency's gains followed a rise in New York last Friday spurred by indications that the U.S. economy's rapid growth had continued through March.

The unexpectedly sharp rises in March U.S. industrial production and producer prices and February business inventories led some market observers to speculate that U.S. interest rates could be on a long-term upward trend through 1985.

Higher U.S. interest rates make the dollar more attractive as an investment.

In Tokyo, where trading ends as Europe's business day begins, the dollar rose more than one Japanese yen to finish at 225.00 yen compared with 223.95 yen last Friday.

In London, the dollar rose against the pound. It cost $1.4230 to buy one pound sterling this morning compared with $1.4270 late Friday.

Other dollar rates in Europe at midmorning Monday compared with late Friday:

—2.1872 Swiss francs, up from 2.1788.

—8.11375 French francs, up from 8.0850.

—2.9755 Dutch guilders, up from 2.9665.

—1.2855 Canadian dollars, up from 1.27855.

Gold trading was very quiet in Europe.

In London, gold opened at a bid price of $380 an ounce, down from late Friday's close of $380.50. The city's five major bullion houses set the morning fixing price at $380, unchanged from the opening.

In Zurich, gold was trading at a bid $379.40 an ounce, down from $379.75 dollars late Friday.

Stock market loses

NEW YORK (AP) — Stocks were mostly lower through morning trading today although they rebounded from steeper declines posted early in the session.

Retail, steel, telephone and oil-service issues were numerous among the losers, while some auto and drug stocks advanced.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, off 7.01 on Friday, slipped another 1.57 to 1,148.56 after two hours of trading today. The measure had been off more than 5 points shortly after the opening bell, however.

Declines maintained a 7-5 lead over advances on the New York Stock Exchange, whose composite index fell 0.16 to 90.35.

Big Board volume slowed to 27.99 million shares at noon EST, compared with 55.68 million at that hour Friday.

Stocks received a temporary boost last week after government reports signaled a moderating economic expansion. Investors hope slower economic growth will reduce the upward pressure on interest rates.

But Wall Street analysts said the massive U.S. budget deficits, and their contribution to higher rates, continue to worry both the stock and bond markets.

Indeed, the stock market's lower opening came after the bond market opened weaker; with prices of some long-term government bonds falling nearly ½ point, or $5 for each $1,000 in face value.

On the NYSE's active list, Chrysler rose ⅛ to 24⅞, American Telephone & Telegraph lost ⅛ to 15¾ and Deere fell ⅜ to 33⅛.

Johnson & Johnson, up 1⅜ to 38½, said it plans to buy up to 2 million of its shares.

At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index fell 0.09 to 206.48.

BUSINESS MIRROR

Uncle Sam's day of reckoning spurs thoughts on tax reform

By CHET CURRIER
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK — Americans come to the annual day of reckoning with Uncle Sam amid more than the usual amount of confusion this year.

After numerous efforts at "reform" in the past decade, the national system for collecting taxes remains under siege.

The symptoms of the problem are numerous and, by most experts' diagnosis, severe. For one, there is the much-publicized federal budget deficit.

For another, even with a recent drive to crack down on deadbeats, the amount of income taxes that is legally owed but doesn't get paid keeps growing. By official calculations, it is close to $100 billion. By unofficial estimates, it is much more that that.

Tax-shelters — legitimate, abusive, or somewhere in between — continue to proliferate at a time when government policy is supposed to be encouraging investments that yield productivity gains, not tax writeoffs.

There was a 1981 tax bill, a 1982 tax bill, and a 1983 tax bill. Congress is partway through the job of producing a 1984 tax bill, and analysts are already busy trying to assess what a 1985 tax bill will probably contain.

As numerous commentators have observed, the problem is not that Americans have developed a sudden aversion to paying taxes. The typical citizen was never fond of parting with the money.

Rather, some say, it is that people have lost respect for the tax system itself, viewing it as hopelessly convoluted, unfair and impossible to enforce.

"The tax code is too complicated, has too many loopholes, is too hard to administer, and, most seriously, raises too many doubts about whether everybody is carrying his or her proper share of the tax burden," Business Week magazine declared in an editorial.

The government has been working to develop more sophisticated methods of assuring compliance with the existing rules. But it is hard to find anyone in the private sector who thinks the answer to the underlying problems lies solely in mustering up a tougher force of tax police.

Instead, many people think the country is ready to get serious about bona fide tax reform — adopting a simpler system that commands respect and is easy to comply with and enforce.

Numerous plans to make that vision a reality are already in the legislative hoppers in Washington. Much more talk doubtless will be heard about tax reform in the remainder of the current political campaign, and after the election is settled.

But as flawed as the present system may be, the politics of changing it radically still promise to be complex and difficult. One of the main reasons for the many intricacies of the tax code is that the government has chosen in the past to use tax incentives and special tax rules as instruments of social policy.

Are they really ready to eliminate, or even significantly reduce, this practice? And what about all the people who made business and investment commitments in the past based on the existence of these incentives?

There are provisions in the laws deliberately set up to encourage investment in housing, contributions to charity, exploration for new domestic energy sources and conservation of existing energy supplies, just to cite a few. In a simpler tax system, presumably at least some of these will have to go.

Furthermore, if any new system is going to generate federal revenues at least as large as current receipts, it's evident that "reform" for some of the population will mean a tax increase. This is likely to be a divisive part of the question.

The tax industry itself has become a big business, for lawyers, accountants, investment experts, tax preparers and their employees. It cannot be expected to meekly retire from the battlefield.

As great as the appetite or even the need for tax reform may be, making it happen remains a formidable challenge.

Chet Currier is business analyst for the Associated Press.

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

Private insurance of bond-funds has been adequate — so far

By BILL DOYLE

Q. Some municipal bond mutual funds and municipal bond unit trusts are "insured" by private companies. Is this insurance adequate? Does it make investments in those mutual funds and unit trusts risk free?

A. To date, that insurance has been adequate. That private insurance guarantees that if any of the bonds held by the insured mutual fund or unit trust defaults, the insurer will meet the bonds' interest payments and pay off the face values of the bonds at maturity.

Doyle

So far, there have been no problems with that type of insurance. I'll go far enough on the limb to say it's unlikely there will be any in the near- to medium-term future. But I won't go out to the end of the branch and say there never will be any problems.

That type of insurance does not remove "market risk" from insured municipal bond mutual funds and municipal bond unit trusts. Because the bonds held by such funds and trusts go up or down in value, you might get more or less than the amount you invest, if you redeem your shares.

* * *

Q. A brokerage firm recommends we invest in a municipal bond unit trust. Reading the trust's prospectus, the costs involved seem awfully high. Are there any no-load investments of this nature?

A. There aren't any no-load unit trusts. The typical municipal bond unit trust levies a commission charge in the range of 3 or 4 percent at the time you invest.

However, there are lots of no-load municipal bond mutual funds on which there is no commission charge. There are also lots of load municipal bond mutual funds. A wise investment shopper goes the no-load route.

Bill Doyle is a syndicated columnist for King Features. He welcomes written questions, but will be able to provide answers only through the column.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Stress can make person more prone to illness

Dear Dr. Solomon: I have read that if a person is under stress, his immunity may go down and this means that he has a better chance of getting sick. But some people will feel stress over something that other people would laugh at. When doctors say that stress can affect a person's immunity, what kind of stress do they mean? — Randy, Durham, N.C.

Dear Randy: The results of research on the effects of stress have shown that even concern over school examinations or sleep deprivation may alter an individual's immunity and make the person more prone to illness.

Of course studies can be conducted on animals that would never be attempted with humans. Such studies indicated that immunity may be suppressed by such stimuli as loud noises, lights, and electric shocks.

An important factor in the degree to which stress affects a person's immunity is the degree of hopelessness experienced. Those who feel they have it within their power to control their situation do better than those who feel helpless to cope with the stressful event.

Dear Dr. Solomon: Should a high school boy with diabetes be permitted to take part in the school's sports program? What kinds of conditions would be serious enough to keep a youngster from participation in competitive high school athletic activities? — Mr. T.O'R., Philadelphia, Pa.

Dear Mr. O'R.: According to Dr. Andrew D. Dick, a sports medicine physician who is in private practice in Indianapolis, Ind., diabetes is not a condition that warrants excluding a student from participating in high school sports. Neither are asthma, epilepsy, or scoliosis.

Conditions that do warrant exclusion include an enlarged spleen, hemophilia, and severe neck injury. An athlete who has suffered two concussions during the same year should also be disqualified from continued participation.

Of course individual variations between athletes may occasionally suggest some deviation from these recommendations.

Dear Dr. Solomon: Is there anything I can buy in a drugstore that I can use to take away warts? Or do I have to go to a doctor? — Anne, Houston, Texas

Dear Ann: According to the Food and Drug Administration, common (vulgaris) warts and plantar warts (those found on the soles of the feet) can be treated with nonprescription drugs. These warts are considered to be similar to corns and calluses; that is, they involve superficial conditions of the skin and require the same type of treatment.

Over-the-counter medications that contain salicylic acid are recommended for the treatment of common or plantar warts. Even without treatment, however, warts will eventually disappear.

Dear Dr. Solomon: What kinds of cancer does the Pap test show? — Ms. W.L., Denver, Colo.

Dear Ms. L.: The purpose of the Pap smear is to detect cancer of the cervix. It does not show the presence of cancer in any of the other organs of the reproductive system.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I have been running regularly for several years but I still sometimes get cramps in my legs. What causes that? I thought that after so many years I wouldn't be bothered with it. — Tony, Phoenix, Ariz.

Dear Tony: A cramp results when the fibers in a muscle contract and then do not relax. There are a number of causes, including a decreased blood supply to the muscle or a potassium deficiency.

This trusty Labrador Retriever seems content with his newly-bandaged paw.

Animal Hospital

A Doberman pup, with tongue hanging out, agrees dog's life isn't all it's cut out to be.

Dr. Greg Adkins is assisted by animal technicians in deciding how to wire the jaw of an older Yorkshire Terrier after the pet's jaw was broken and two teeth were yanked out in a dog-fight.

In the waiting room, an animal technician with a black long-haired cat around her neck asks the owner about another pet.

In a back room, a bright light beams intensely on a 9-year-old brown and black Yorkshire Terrier lying on the gleaming operating table. Dr. Greg Adkins and another technician bend over the dog, remove blood-soaked gauze from his mouth and discuss how to wire the jaw, broken during a dog fight.

Barbara Rowland, carrying a two-year-old black Schnauzer named Baroness, comes in with purse in hand. Two pairs of black button-eyes peek over the sides of the purse, wide-open and amazed at the activity around them. Dr. Morgan Brown chuckles as he pulls the healthy two-month old pups from the purse.

"They came in in a hatbox for the first two visits," Ms. Rowland said, smiling. "I carried Baroness around in the bag until she was almost two. She'd just hear the car keys and go for the purse."

Like other local veterinarian clinics, the Shannon Animal Hospital on North Big Spring Street sees all phases of people and their pets.

THERE ARE the usual puppy shots, heartworm checks and tick and flea dips.

The receptionists laugh when they remember the client who called to make an appointment for a checkup for his cat. The "cat" was a cougar.

And then there was the time when a client turned from the desk after paying a bill and stared right into another client, who was patiently standing behind her with his 8-foot-long boa constrictor in hand.

"We about lost her," Camille Komyathy said, laughing. Behind him, the warning concerning entrance of only leashed, caged or confined animals in the waiting room, hung uselessly on the door.

Five-year-old twins came in with their six-month old puppy. While their mother was filling out a form, the small boy gazed at a poster of a dog with glasses, oblivious to the fact that his playful pup had wound the leash around his legs.

NOT ALL moments are happy times of frisky ferrots, inquisitive racoons and protective mothers of new litters.

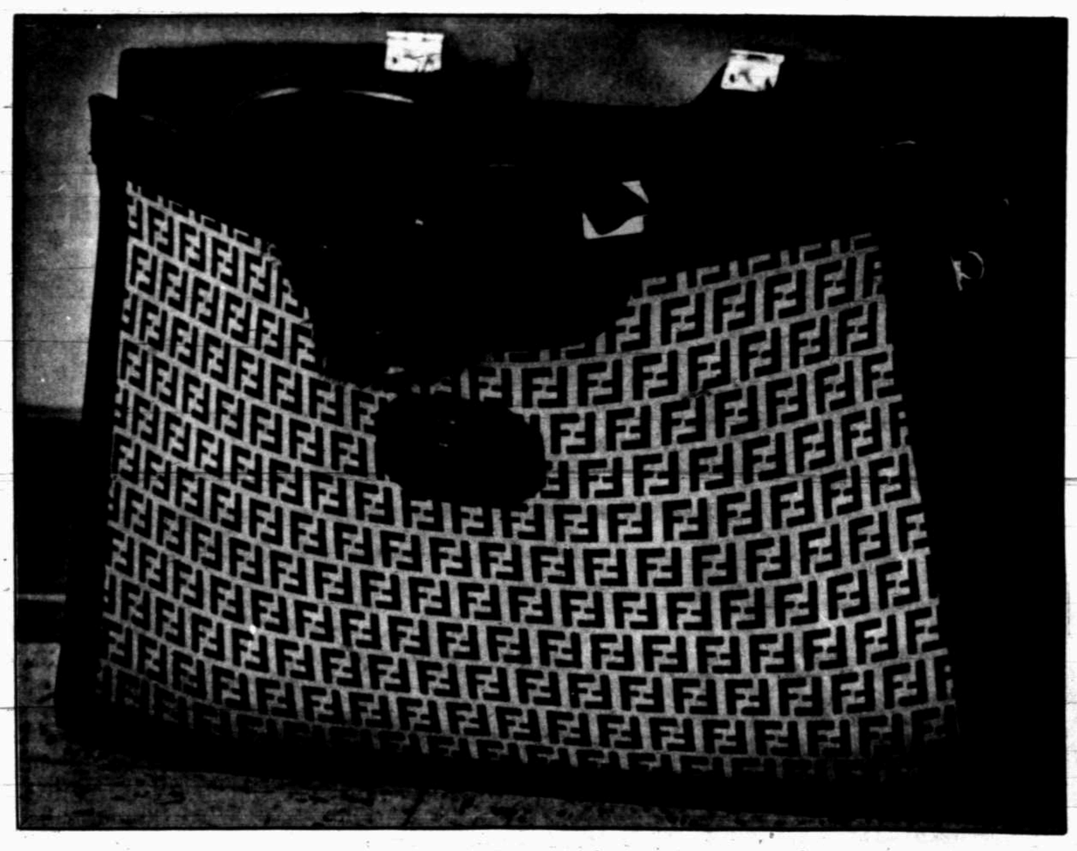

There are those concerned clients, the ones who wait anxiously for the prognosis of their beloved, four-legged family member.

Sue Patten remembered the little girl who sat in the waiting room crying, "It's my fault," while her dog was put to sleep after his neck was broken during playful wrestling with the child and her siblings.

The scene contrasted another etched in the receptionists' minds: that of an elderly couple who, calm and steadfast, brought their aging and sick cat in to be put to sleep. The husband went out to the car to cry. When his wife joined him, the receptionists watched silently through the window as he put the car in reverse, only to stop a few times when his eyes were too blurred with tears to drive. It took awhile for the couple to quietly back out of the parking lot and return to their empty home.

JUST THE night before, Adkins had tended to a dog that had jumped up only in time to suffer a blow to the head while his master and friends were playing a neighborhood game of baseball. The dog couldn't be saved.

(See VETERINARY, Page 2C)

Peering through the handles of a purse, this two-month-old Schnauzer is wide-eyed at his third visit to the veterinarian.

Pallbearers were to be Dale Sumrall, Lee Johnson, W.B. "Red" Roberts, Kip Wood, Jerrell Marburger and Jay Reynolds.

Two sites eliminated as low-level radioactive waste disposal locales

By LAWRENCE BUDD
Staff Writer

AUSTIN — Two Hudspeth County tracts under consideration as locations for Texas' low-level radioactive waste disposal site were eliminated Saturday by the Texas Low-Level Radioactive Waste Authority.

The sites, owned by the University of Texas, had been two of the three definite sites — leaving a Dimmit County location owned privately as the lone location. Efforts to find other sites will continue, said Tom Blackburn of the TLLRWA.

Blackburn said this morning that a letter was sent to the university's general counsel Saturday withdrawing the authority's applications for the two sites. Research done by a geologist on the citizen's advisory panel aiding the site selection process determined $5-$7 million would need to be spent to make engineering modifications and prove that the sites could accommodate the state's low-level radioactive wastes.

The authority is talking with owners of property in Garza and Borden counties and is looking at land in Brewster, Pecos, Presidio and Jeff Davis counties, but no sites have been identified yet, said Blackburn. The Brewster County site is also state owned.

The UT Board of Regents, expected to make a decision during meetings last week, took no action after hearing a consultants' report Friday in San Antonio. The two UT consultants had reported last month that a disposal site at the Hudspeth County sites would endanger the ground water supplies used by area farms and towns.

"We had put the whole process to work quite a while before the Regents meeting," explained Blackburn. "We had known for a while that it was going to be expensive and difficult to prove the adequacy of the site."

Additional barriers would have been needed to keep the waste from leaking into the environment at the Hudspeth sites, about 100 miles southeast of El Paso.

The letter identified the area's "complex geology" and natural conditions that "did not provide the degree of assurance" needed to get the site approved, said Blackburn.

He set a tentative deadline for site selection as the end of August. Heavy opposition has come from residents of all the counties under consideration for sites. Hudspeth residents hired consultants to prove the potential dangers a site in their area would have presented.

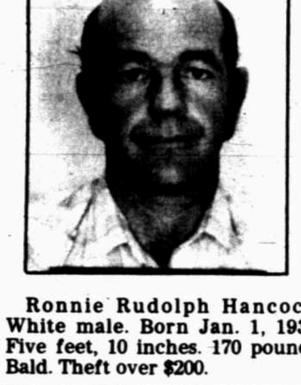

Two sites must be identified before one can be chosen, according to the state law which formed the authority and set a 1986 deadline for the state to have picked its own site.

A federal law passed in 1980 ordered states to form regional compacts or develop individual sites in which to dump the low-level radioactive wastes now being disposed of at sites in Barnwell, S.C.; Richland, Wash.; and Beatty, Nev.

Midland man injured in crash in serious condition

From Staff Reports

A 50-year-man Midland man who was injured in a truck-pickup truck crash Saturday night was listed in serious condition today in Midland Memorial Hospital.

The man, William Snell of 3709 Monty Drive, was injured when the pickup truck he was driving crashed into the rear of a tractor-trailer, driven by Harold McIntosh, 39, of Big Spring, on Texas Highway 137 about 8½ miles north of Stanton, according to the Texas Department of Public Safety.

The DPS reported McIntosh had stopped his southbound truck at an intersection and was waiting for traffic to pass before making a left-hand turn when the southbound Snell pickup truck rammed into his tractor trailer.

Snell, a painter, suffered head and shoulder injuries. McIntosh was not injured.

DPS Trooper Wayne Turner of Stanton investigated the mishap.

Dimmitt investor plans to reopen Lubbock bank

LUBBOCK (AP) — A Dimmitt investor planned today to reopen the Security National Bank, which federal officials closed after citing a bad loan portfolio for the bank's insolvency.

Bill Loyd, whose family's $3.45 million bid for the bank was accepted Friday afternoon by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp., said the bank would reopen as City Bank and business would remain substantially the same.

However, the new owners did not purchase any of Security National's commerical loans or new construction, which are now controlled by the FDIC.

The bank was ordered closed Friday by acting U.S. Comptroller of Currency H. Joe Selby, who appointed the FDIC as receiver to liquidate the bank's assets.

The new owners will be taking over the bank's deposits and assets, including the present building, furniture, fixtures, equipment, cash, bonds and consumer installment loans, Loyd said.

FDIC senior liquidation specialist Arthur Lorentzen, who spent the weekend supervising the ownership transaction, estimated the bank's deposits at $52 million.

Selby said Friday the bank had experienced substantial deterioration in the quality of its loan portfolio over the past few years and was unable to remedy its problems.

The bank's losses finally exhausted its capital funds, causing its insolvency, Selby said.

Some of the bad loans were commercial loans for energy projects, Loyd said.

Loyd, who will serve as board chairman and president, said commercial loans will be reviewed for possible purchase from the FDIC and the owners later may negotiate for a new building that Security National had planned to move into, Loyd said.

Mike Klein, general contractor for the new complex, said he finished construction on Feb. 27 and did not know anything else about the plans for the building.

Loyd said he had no plans to change any of the bank's personnel. Douglas Boren, who had been president of Security National, will be employed as a consultant, Loyd said.

Sam Spikes resigned as president of Security National last September after a meeting of the board of directors in which the board was told the bank was facing a heavy loss.

Spikes was replaced by Boren, who said at that time that the bank was one of about 200 banks considered "problem banks" by federal banking authorities.

More than 1,000 people at memorial's dedication

DALLAS (AP) — Tears rolled down the cheeks of some Nazi concentration camp survivors as they walked through the black iron gates into a memorial for those who did not survive the Holocaust.

Some balked as they approached a railroad boxcar used to transport Jews to the death camps that forms the entryway into the Memorial Center for Holocaust Studies. Some refused to walk through the door, using a side door instead.

More than 1,000 people came to the Jewish Community Center on Sunday for the memorial center's dedication ceremony. The 5,500-square-foot center in the community center's basement contains a memorial to the six million Jews who died in the death camps and a library of books and films.

One wall of the central memorial room has marble plaques dedicated to the memory of the Jews who died. The opposite wall has plaques remembering the non-Jews who also died in the camps.

The project was begin in 1979 by the Holocaust Survivors in Dallas Inc. The group's president, Mike Jacobs, said the center is important for keeping the memories of the Holocaust alive.

Almost 100 survivors who attended the ceremony resurrected personal memories of the horror of the camps.

"It's very hard to go through the boxcar," said Ala Danzinger, barely able to get her voice above a whisper. "I was transported in a boxcar like that. I was screaming. I was crying. I was 9 years old."

Two men in intensive care after inhaling sulfide gas

From Staff Reports

ANDREWS — Two men remained under intensive care this morning suffering the effects of sulfide gas inhaled Saturday night at an oil rig near Andrews.

Two men died in the incident, which occurred when a leak that had been discovered several days ago, but was controlled, again began to leak Saturday sometime after 9 p.m, said Andrews police.

Roy Aguilar, 38, Seminole, and Donny Stroud, 27, Seminole, remained in intensive care at Permian General Hospital this morning. The third worker surviving exposure to the poisonous gas, Claude Quisenberry, 46, Seminole, had been moved from the intensive care unit and was listed in stable condition today.

The two Andrews police officers, Terry Neil, 29, and James Victor, 36, who rescued the men from the rig about 28 miles north of Odessa had not returned to work, but had left the hospital this morning. They were home with congestion caused by inhalation of the poison gas, which clogs the respiratory system by coating the lungs with mucus.

Dead at the scene was Orbie Gene Gatewood, 44, Pecos. Billy Wayne Quisenberry, 44, Seminole, was dead upon arrival at the hospital.

Gatewood was a mud engineer taking a sample when he was struck down by the gas. Quisenberry was one of the workers that attempted to rescue Gatewood from the pit area into which the gas was escaping, said Andrews Police Chief Doug Gaines. Reportedly a "pocket" of the dangerous gas was struck during drilling several days ago.

Veterinary clinic sees all phases

Inside another room, Brown finishes taping up a black Labrador Retriever who had been hit by a car the day before. The dog's paw had been cut deeply, probably from a fender, exposing the bone. About 40 stitches were required.

Under a slight pain killer, the dog looked up at the sympathetic humans around him and laid his head on the wrapped paw. With his tired eyes, he seemed to ask wearily, "Is everyone quite finished here?"

Midlander in critial condition

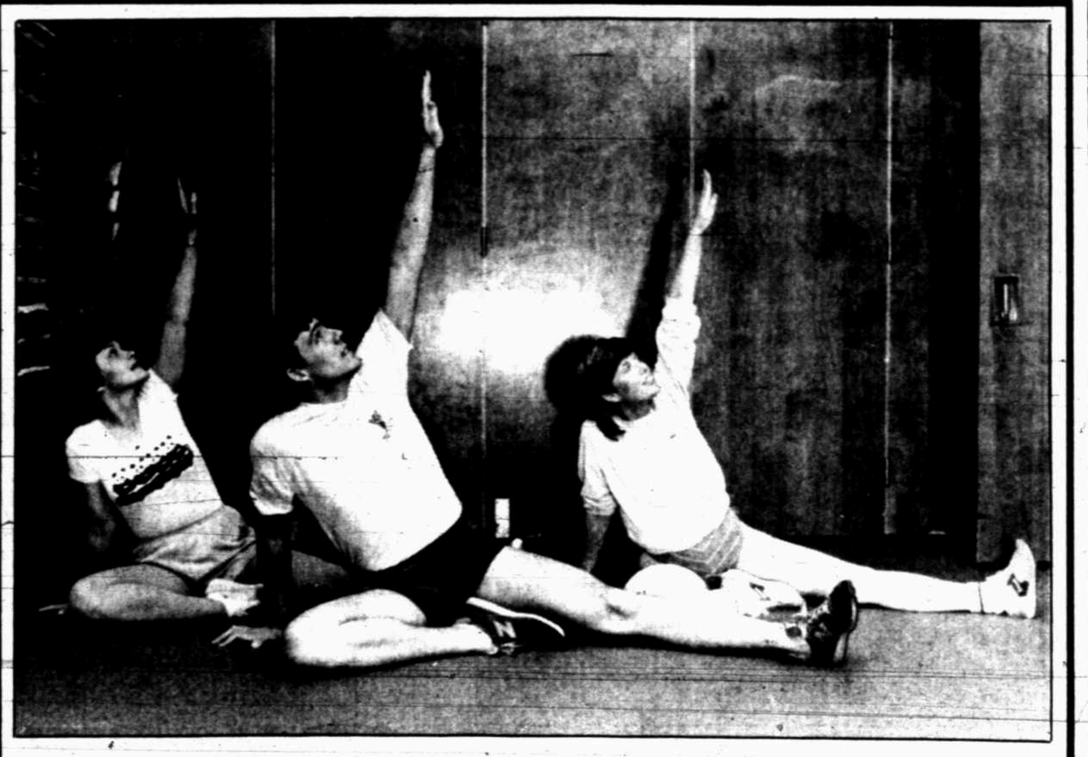

From Staff Reports

A 28-year-old Midland man who was shot in the abdomen Sunday night was listed in critical condition this morning in Midland Memorial Hospital's intensive care unit.

The man, Ronnie Carnes, was shot in his Windscape Apartments unit, 3609 Caldera Blvd. off North Loop 250, at 10:24 p.m. Sunday, according to Detective Capt. Billy Ray of the Midland Police Department.

The gunshot wound was made with a .38-caliber or larger bullet, he said, and there are no suspects in the case.

No additional details on the shootig were available this morning.

Skeptical Inquirer combats 'nonsense'

By The Los Angeles Times — Washington Post News Service

LAT Photo

Kendrick Frazier in his Albuquerque, N.M. home where he edits the Skeptical Inquirer.

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. — There are strong grounds to believe there is no such thing as a psychic," instead Kendrick Frazier, 40, editor of Skeptical Inquirer, a quarterly that evaluates fringe-science claims from a responsible, scientific point of view.

"Of course, there are many who call themselves psychics. But neither I nor my colleagues know of anyone who, when subjected to good scientific observations under controlled conditions, has been able to demonstrate paranormal abilities," said Frazier, author of two books and a full-time science writer for Scandia National Lab in Albuquerque who edits the journal from his home.

The Skeptical Inquirer has been published since 1976 by the Buffalo, N.Y.-based Committee for the Scientific Investigation of Claims of the Paranormal, whose stated purpose is "to combat the nonsense published by the National Enquirer, the Globe, the Star and similar publications in the widespread paranormal craze that has swept the country in recent years."

Topics covered include perpetual motion, the occult, Bigfoot, evolution versus creationism, ESP, conjurers, dowsing, TV pseudo documentaries, transcendental meditation, clairvoyance, astrology, telekinesis (use of mental power to make objects move), biorhythms, UFOs, telepathy, the Bermuda and other triangles, pyramid power, faith healing, mind reading, levitation, palmistry, poltergeists and automatic writing.

The committee and the Skeptical Inquirer grew out of a statement disavowing astrology published in 1975 by Paul Kurtz, professor of philosophy at the University of New York State, Buffalo, and 191 other leading scientists, including 19 Nobel Prize winners, Frazier said.

The panel's 100 members include many of America's most distinguished scientists, psychologists, philosophers, investigative journalists and magicians.

Among them are astronomers Carl Sagan, George Abell of University of California at Los Angeles and Edwin C. Krupp, director of the Griffith Park Observatory; Isaac Asimov, author and chemist; Harvard University zoologist Stephen Jay Gould; Harvard psychologist B. F. Skinner; anthropologist Laurie Godfrey; Scientific American columnist Martin Gardner and magician James Randi.

The Skeptical Inquirer is "a labor of love. No one was paid for writing the articles," said Frazier, who worked for United Press International, the National Academy of Science Newsletter and Science News Magazine before becoming editor of the publication.

He emphasized that "everyone is involved out of a sense of intellectual integrity and having great faith in the public's ability to make right decisions if they have correct information available."

Science attracts teens

WASHINGTON (AP) — There won't be a shortfall of scientists either on earth or in outer space in the next century, a survey of some of the nation's most promising future scientists — the 40 national winners in the 43rd annual Westinghouse Science Talent Search — indicates.

The high school seniors from 19 states, ranging in age from 16 to 18, all plan to pursue scientific careers after college. They met here recently to share $89,500 in scholarships and cash awards in the competition administered by Science Service and funded by the Westinghouse Electric Corp.

Nearly 60 percent agreed that science education is getting better. Many expressed the belief that an increasing number of students would turn to scientific careers because of expanding employment opportunities, changing high school curricula and greater cooperation and encouragement from educators and working scientists.

Young enough and talented enough to consider future scientific careers either on earth or in outer space, what are their preferences?

While admitting that the idea of working and living in space was "tempting" and "challenging," 35 percent want to remain earthbound.

In contrast, 27.5 percent opted for outer space and an additional 15 percent are eager to divide their careers between earth and outer space; 12.5 percent were uncertain and the remaining 10 percent said it didn't matter as long as they could do their "thing."

A desire to help those here on earth and enjoyment of its beauties makes a career on earth preferable for some, such as Margaret Meng, 17, Columbia, Md. She echoed the views of several others when she said, "Only on earth would I be able to actually see the immediate and future problems of society and help improve living conditions in the world."

Her winning project in biochemistry related to cardiovascular disease and earned her a $500 cash award. After graduation from Centennial High School in Ellicott City, Ms. Meng plans to study electrical engineering at Stanford University.

"We ought to straighten things out here before we fly misguided into another universe," said Christopher Montanaro, the winner of the top $12,000 scholarship for a project in molecular genetics.

A student at Oxford Hills High School in South Paris, Maine, Montanaro has won several math awards and is also an outstanding jazz musician. He plans to continue studying molecular biology and mathematics at either Brown University or Haverford College.

It's strictly a career on earth, too, for Mark Hamburg, 17, Midland, Mich., who said, "I happen to be quite fond of the natural environment."

DEAR ABBY

Boy's tragic accident now overcome

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR READERS: This letter appeared in my column on July 28, 1975:

DEAR ABBY: I am a physician. About 72 hours ago, a previously healthy, beautiful, 16-month-old child was brought to our department with obvious burns around his lips and mouth.

Only a few hours before, while visiting his grandparents, he discovered a bottle of lye and injested only one mouthful. Fourteen doctors and dozens of nurses and operating personnel have been involved in the three operations that this child has already undergone.

The boy is now in our intensive-care unit, his eyes held shut with plastic tape, his breathing controlled by a machine and his life supported by tubes placed in his neck, chest, abdomen, penis, arms and legs.

All of his esophagus and most of his stomach were destroyed by the lye and had to be surgically removed. If he lives, he will have to be fed through a hole in his abdomen for months.

Abby, please ask your readers to inspect their kitchens, bathrooms, basements and garages, and to place all dangerous chemicals outside the reach of small children. And ask them to pass the word on to their friends and neighbors who may not have children but who occasionally have young visitors.

This type of needless suffering and death to small children can be stopped today without spending one penny for research or donations.

I hope you will consider this worthy of your column, which is probably read by more people than any other. — ARNOLD E. KATZ, M.D., IOWA CITY, IOWA

DEAR DR. KATZ: Worthy? If only one letter makes my column today, this will be it.

Readers, please place all detergents, bleaches, cleaning fluid, paint, polish, rat poison, drain cleaner and pills (including aspirin and iodine) under lock and key today!

And today, I received this one:

DEAR ABBY: Do you remember the letter you printed in 1975 about a 16-month-old boy who had swallowed a mouthful of lye? Dr. Arnold E. Katz sent it to you hoping you would publish it as a warning to all who may have a child in their care.

Well, the boy's name is Michael, and I am his mother. I wrote to you a year later to tell you that our son had survived but we were still facing a long hard battle.

Michael is 10 years old now, and he's had so many operations we've almost lost count. He's doing fourth-grade work but had to be taught at home.

On Jan. 10, Michael was in surgery again for 10 hours. Dr. William Panje and his team of doctors at the University Hospital in Iowa City did a super job. Eight days later my husband and I brought Michael home. No one knew if the operation would be successful, but we were all hoping. You see, since his accident, Michael had been unable to swallow. He had to be fed through a tube in his stomach.

On Feb. 27, Michael took a gulp of soda pop, and it actually went down his throat and into his stomach!

He said, "Mom, it's gone! It's gone!" I told him to take a smaller sip to see if he could swallow again, and sure enough he could.

It's been a long 8 1/2 years, Abby, but as of today Michael is actually eating and swallowing food. We can hardly believe it.

The tube through which he had been fed was removed from his stomach yesterday, and I wanted you to be one of the first to know that our son is normal again! This fall he will be able to ride the bus and go to school for the first time in his life.

I am enclosing a picture of Michael. Thank you for caring, Abby. — BETTY (MRS. EUGENE) STRIEGEL, LISBON, IOWA

DEAR MRS. STRIEGEL: Thank you from the bottom of my heart for wanting to share your joy with me. I know that my readers will rejoice with me on learning the wonderful news.

How I wish I could publish Michael's picture. His large blue eyes, pink cheeks and warm smile reveal an exceptionally beautiful and courageous child. May he and his family know only good fortune from this day on.

(Problems? What's bugging you? Unload on Abby, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038. For a personal reply, please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.)

THE BETTER HALF

"I'm staying home because I'm very SICK! Sick of work, sick of my boss, sick of my co-workers . . .!"

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Tuesday, April 17, 1984

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: American novelist Thornton Wilder, Soviet leader Nikita Khrushchev, baseball great Cap Anson and financier J.P. Morgan were born on this date. Also sharing your birthday: "60 Minutes" correspondent and commentator Harry Reasoner and actor Lon McCallister. Protect long-term alliances and investments by being very careful in your choice of any new partners. Real estate sales will be best in August. Look forward to big financial gains late in the year. First impressions matter more than you think.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Your concentration is excellent today, enabling you to wade through mountains of paperwork. If single, you could be forced to choose between your independence and deep emotional bond. Know your own heart.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Not a good day to lend or borrow money. Private career talks lead to a raise or promotion. A close relationship is under review. Good financial news from afar increases your security.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Your job performance is being evaluated. Give work your best shot. A recent investment promises substantial profits. Your co-workers and relatives are unusually supportive. Home life is happier than in the past.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A personal project or financial deal gets the green light. Expect criticism from some family members if you have been burning the midnight oil. Intimate relationships need t.l.c. Be more attentive.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Information obtained from someone behind the scenes puts you in line for a promotion or raise. A move to another city is possible. Discuss this new opportunity with family members before saying "yes."

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Home renovations will increase family members' comfort and the value of your property. Romance flourishes during the next few days. A Leo could play havoc with another relationship, however. Be on guard.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Your willingness to travel could affect your earnings. A creative idea you come up with today will be a winner. You may be tempted to switch careers. Mate is supportive.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Catch up on odd jobs before starting a new project. Someone you have relied on in the past will come through again. Keep your property in good shape.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): A lucrative business arrangement is part of the picture. Play your hunches! You could make an excellent new investment. Someone influential is very helpful. Group activities are favored over one-on-one encounters.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): An old friend offers you a wonderful opportunity. Be careful not to alienate someone important with your quick tongue. Steer clear of secret romances. Staying home is more enjoyable than going out tonight.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Your close associates will cooperate if you take the lead now. A long-time debt is paid. A great evening to visit your former haunts. Renew an old friendship.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): A great day for reaching agreements. Sign contracts only after reading the fine print. Snap decisions are apt to be the right ones! A business trip is successful.

'Kate & Allie' wear New York labels

By FRED ROTHENBERG

NEW YORK (AP) — As the only prime-time entertainment series that wears a "Made-in-New York" label, CBS' "Kate & Allie" shopped in West Side boutiques for its wardrobe, hunted out-of-the way bargains for its set and fought midtown traffic snarls to meet its production deadlines.

Like native New Yorkers who love the big city, in spite of its agonies and anxieties, "Kate & Allie" is proving that entertainment programs not only can be produced here, they can also be successful.

After a two-week hiatus because of college basketball and last Monday's Academy Awards show, "Kate & Allie," starring Jane Curtin and Susan Saint James, returns tonight with another splendid episode. The first two broadcasts, March 19 and March 26, finished fourth and eighth in the weekly ratings.

"We feel some burden to succeed to demonstrate what can be done here," said Josh Kane, CBS' vice president for program development in New York. "It could inspire more shows in New York and alter the perception that you can't staff a show in the East."

The last successful entertainment program done here was NBC's "Love, Sidney," but that was a carpetbagger production. Star Tony Randall insisted he stay in New York, so the writing and production staff was flown in from Los Angeles and put up in hotels.

"Our show is different. It was created here, developed here, and the production company is based here," said Michael Ogiens, CBS' vice president for programs in New York. "Many of the people arrive on buses and subways from their homes."

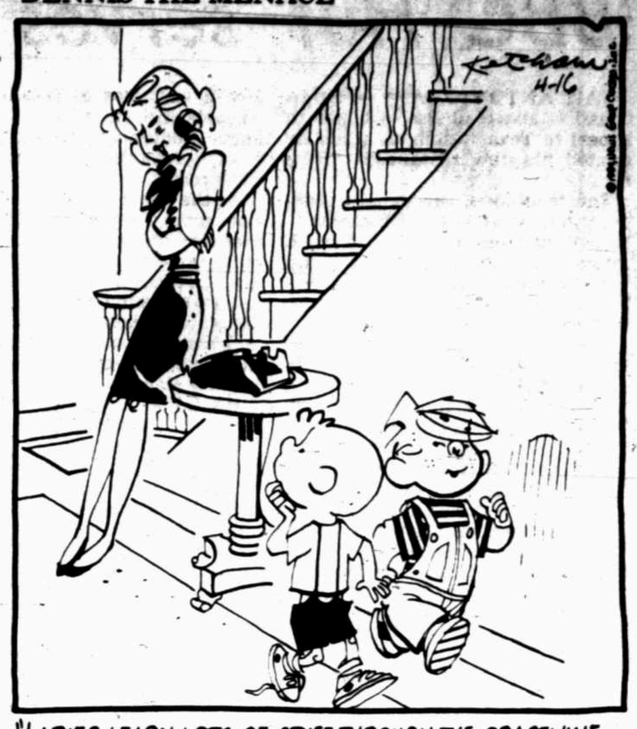

Director Bill Persky said that means "writers who don't normally get involved in TV are bringing their distinctive sounds and attitudes to the show." Bob Randall, who wrote the play "6 Rms Riv Vu," is the producer.

"There's a rhythm here that's different," said Persky. "You pick up by osmosis the city's vitality and energy. The deliveries are faster, so our page counts are 25 percent higher. The whole production is tighter and more clipped."

Kane and Ogiens won't say New York is a better place than Hollywood for TV; just different. "The concept would have been the same — two divorced women, both single parents, living together," said Kane. "We would just have different people, that's all."

Miss Curtin and Miss Saint James, who both live in Connecticut, say they would not have done shows in Hollywood.

ANSWERS TO BRIDGE QUIZ

BY CHARLES GOREN AND OMAR SHARIF

Q.1—East-West vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠A94 ♡A1093 ◇4 ♣K10843
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♣	Pass	3 ♣	Dble
Rdble	3 ◇	?

What action do you take?

A.—You described your hand when you jump raised partner's suit at your first turn. Now, you don't know what to do. You could have a slam in clubs, or no more than a partscore — it might even be right to double the vulnerable opponents. Pass, and leave the decision to partner.

Q.2—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠K983 ♡Q932 ◇AKJ9 ♣10
Partner opens the bidding with one club. What do you respond?

A.—There is no reason to depart from the general principle that, as responder, you should bid your suits up the line. Respond one diamond. If partner has a four-card major suit, he will be able to show it at the one-level and the fit will be uncovered.

Q.3—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠K983 ♡Q932 ◇AKJ9 ♣10
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♣	Pass	1 ◇	Pass
2 ♣	Pass	?

What do you bid now?

A.—Not only has partner denied a four-card major suit with his club rebid, he almost surely has a six-card suit in this sequence — with any other distribution, he would either have been able to raise diamonds or bid one no trump. There is no future in this hand beyond game. Bid three no trump.

Q.4—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AKJ73 ♡K1087 ♣K752
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	2 ♠	Pass

What action do you take?

A.—You could easily have game if partner has the right cards — the fate of the hand depends on how little he has in diamonds. You are worth a try for game, and we recommend three clubs. If partner returns to three spades or bids three diamonds, be content with a partscore.

Q.5—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠KQJ97632 ♡6 ◇9654
What is your opening bid?

A.—This is simply a question of hand valuation. When you have a seven-card or longer suit, you should count any side four-card suit, no matter how weak, as being worth one playing trick. Your hand, therefore, is worth eight playing tricks and, at this vulnerability, merits an opening bid of four spades according to the Rule of Two and Three.

Q.6—East-West vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠Q ♡AKQJ862 ◇KQ ♣QJ8
Your right-hand opponent opens the bidding with one spade. What action do you take?

A.—We think your hand is a bit too strong, defensively or offensively, for any bid in hearts, even four hearts. We suggest you start with a takeout double and then jump in hearts at your next turn.

How do you choose the best opening lead? Charles Goren has the answer. For a copy of "Winning Opening Leads," send $1.85 to "Goren-Leads," care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 259, Norwood, N.J. 07648. Make checks payable to Newspaperbooks.

'BBQ Hut' serves continental cuisine

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Hugo Grassl — above all else — hoped to appeal to Texas tastebuds when he named his new restaurant "BBQ Hut."

The trouble is, the name hardly describes what is on the menu — everything from fresh-baked French croissants to homemade east and west European cuisine, south of the border fare and, almost as an afterthought, barbecue.

"I wanted it to be a little bit different," says Grassl, speaking with a distinct German accent. "Isn't it a nice surprise to come to a barbecue restaurant and find everything else, including barbecue?"

Perhaps. But isn't the menu a little gourmet for a restaurant with the name "bar-be-cue hut"?

"I don't think so," Grassl said. "It's interesting. The trend today is a broader menu. Look at McDonald's and Wendy's."

Of course, McDonald's and Wendy's don't serve 18 varieties of domestic and imported beer or wine. Nor do their menus include seven varieties of freshly baked French croissants. And they don't serve homemade Hungarian goulash, gazpacho or sausage with mushrooms.

As the name implies, the BBQ Hut does serve a variety of barbecue specialities, including brisket, short ribs, sausage and chicken. And it also carries a few traditional Mexican favorites including pinto beans, tacos and enchiladas.

Grassl, with son Herbert, a partner in the venture, opened the BBQ Hut in early March.

His initial investment of $175,000 included a kitchen, a spacious restaurant with seating for 150 people, and a bakery for preparing Vie de France pastries.

He also installed special cooking equipment for preparing tender hickory-smoked meat, and he decorated the dining area with prints and beer cans collected by his son.

Grassl, 63, is not your typical Texan. In fact, he's not a Texan at all. He doesn't own a pair of pointy-toed boots, a cowboy hat or a gun. But he does speak five languages and knows much about food.

Born in Vienna, Austria, the only son of a banker, Grassl came to San Antonio 3½ years ago after working as a food consultant in Mexico for nearly five years.

His experience in food engineering and technology spans 32 years and nearly the entire globe, including Japan, South America and the Soviet Union, where he worked "from one end of Russia to the other" as a prisoner of war for 12 years after the end of World War II.

Grassl recalls that when the Russians released him in 1956, he returned to Vienna to find his home destroyed and his parents moved to Buffalo, N.Y.

"I remember my mother fainted when she heard my voice on the phone," he said. "She thought I was dead."

Grassl was granted permission to come to the United States in 1958 through the intercession of Richard Nixon, then vice president.

He studied food engineering at schools in Vienna and at Cornell and Buffalo universities in New York. He met his wife, a German refugee, in Buffalo and "we lived happily ever after," he said.

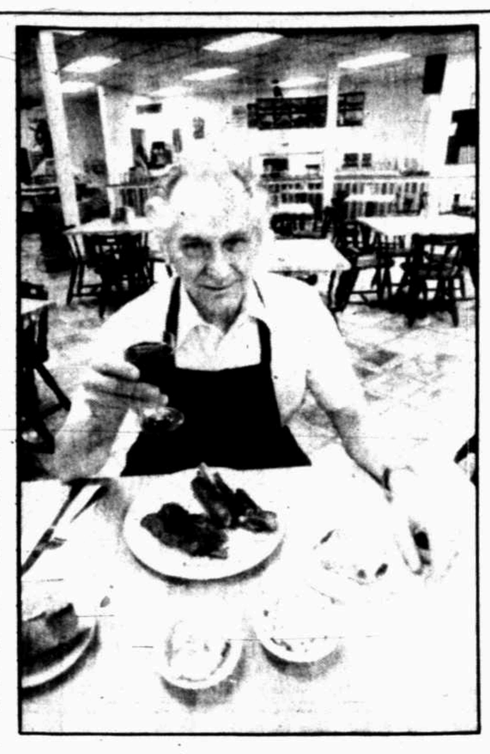

Grassl, who also is president of the international consulting firm of Grassl & Associates, hasn't lost any of his European charm, even after 25 years in the United States.

He still believes in so-called old-fashioned manners and traditions, like greeting his patrons when he's not too busy behind the scenes.

During one recent luncheon gathering that drew about 50 people, he strolled through the restaurant, a red apron slung around his neck, stopping at individual tables to chat with diners and see that they were satisfied.

He later recalled good-naturedly one Texan's impression of the food.

"He told me thought the barbecue was 'Yankee barbecue," Grassl said. "I told him I don't know what 'Yankee barbecue' is, even though I've lived in Chicago and New York."

Hugo Grassl shows off the delicacies he serves at his BBQ Hut in San Antonio. But Grassl's restaurant isn't your typical Texas barbecue place, what with its crepes, domestic and imported wines and croissants.

Sunshine Foundation aids families, children during their 'special time'

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — In the seven years since he took out a loan to grant the wishes of 14 dying children, ex-policeman Bill Sample has built his Sunshine Foundation into a citizen-supported charity that by now has helped 1,800 youngsters.

There are no telethons, no handicapped children paraded before the public to attract money for Sample's labor of love, even though such tactics would produce more donations.

"It's a special time in their lives," the 48-year-old father of two says of the children and their families. "We don't want to infringe."

But for him, his wife and the five women who work with them there are the pictures, displayed against a backdrop of mismatched donated furniture and worn orange carpeting at the six-room northeast Philadelphia house that serves as the foundation's headquarters.

The snapshots show joyful children hugging Mickey Mouse at Disneyworld, riding shiny new bicycles, playing at the beach in Ocean City, N.J., where the foundation rents a home each summer.

Next to each picture is the child's name, disease, date the wish was granted and the date of death.

Last year, donations added up to $600,000 the foundation used to send children to Disney World in Florida and buy motorized toys for 812 youngsters from as far away as Chile, among other things.

"We're growing by leaps and bounds," said Sample, who retired three months ago from the Philadelphia Police Department and plans this year to take a salary for the first time.

"We're a new kid on the block as far as charities go. We don't get any federal aid, we don't have any corporate benefactors."

The money mostly comes from people who heard of the work through word of mouth or newspaper stories about home-town children, he said.

"The hardest thing is trying to sell a product and not have a product," said Sample. "We don't exploit the kids. We don't bring them on a stage in a wheelchair and try to get money."

Sample's project grew from the compassion he felt for terminally ill youngsters he grew to love while on duty at a children's hospital in 1977. He remembers many of the children his foundation has helped.

A 14-year-old girl nicknamed Missie got the piano she had always wanted; she played it only once, dying several days later from cancer.

A 10-year-old cancer victim traveled to Tulsa, Okla., to pray with evangelist Oral Roberts. Another youngster received a new bedroom suite, and one took a trip on the Pacific Princess, better known as television's "Love Boat."

Texas' zoo's Siberian Tigers retiring in Toluca, Mexico

BROWNSVILLE (AP) — A quartet of aging Siberian Tigers are retiring to Toluca, Mexico and giving their home to a young tiger couple as part of an American plan to rescue the endangered species.

The four 14-year-old tigers — Kolima, Batu-Khan, Shirpini and Shama — were transferred from Brownsville's Gladys Porter Zoo to Mexico recently to make room for younger tigers zoo curators hope to breed.

Zoo experts said there were enough offspring from the Brownsville family and it was time for another, younger blood-line to begin producing babies.

Captive Siberian Tigers, whose home is the frozen, rocky steppes of Manchuria, Siberia and North Korea, are part of a national genetic management plan called the Species Survival Program.

SSP animals are some of the most endangered species — like black rhinos and gorillas — which zoologists treat like the irreplaceable life forms they are, carefully monitoring their location and breeding.

Siberian Tigers, the world's largest cats, roam wide territories. Their numbers have dwindled as their land has been taken by man. Less than a thousand of the orange, black and white tigers still live in the wild.

"We hope there will be a place for the tiger someday, an area created large enough for tigers to survive," said Pat Burchfield of the Gladys Porter Zoo.

"The animals may have to become extinct in the wild before people will realize what they've lost. Then, maybe, we can reintroduce what we've preserved. Meanwhile we try and safeguard the genetic integrity of the population in our care and hope there will always be tigers in the world."

Burchfield said reintroduction of an exterminated species has already been successful in the case of the Arabian Oryx.

Experts say they need 250 animals to retain a genetically strong species. Currently about 200 Siberian Tigers reside in American zoos.

SSP committee members try to keep gender ratios in balance and monitor the percentage of each genetic line represented in the captive population to avoid in-breeding.

Zoo mammal curator Jerry Stones said the SSP decided after his tigers had produced 29 offspring they had bred enough, so a couple of years ago he put his female tigers on birth control pills.

LA CREME WHIPPED TOPPING NOW AVAILABLE IN 12-OUNCE SIZE

A new 12-ounce size La Creme whipped topping with real cream has been introduced by Kraft. The product line also includes an 8-ounce package. Distributed nationally since 1982, La Creme whipped topping is now the nation's best selling frozen dairy based topping.

The new larger package contains about 4-1/2 cups product and offers consumers greater economy.

The 12-ounce size La Creme topping is ideal for use in fast and festive party-size molded gelatin or frozen fruit salads, frozen layered desserts and tortes, as a La Creme Crust or as a dessert topping. La Creme topping also adds a touch of elegance to hot chocolate and coffee drinks and blends to a creamy froth in holiday drinks such as Brandy Alexanders or Grasshoppers.

La Creme whipped tapping has the taste of real cream-but has only 12 calories per tablespoon--compared to unsweetened whipped cream which has 26 calories per tablespoon. It's quick and easy to use and may be thawed and refrozen several times without affecting quality.

Both the new 12-ounce La Creme frozen whipped topping and the 8-ounce package are now available in supermarket freezer cases nationally.

Archeologists to look for bodies of Custer's men

Five to 15 troopers never accounted for

HELENA, Mont. (AP) — The bodies of five to 15 troopers never accounted for after the Battle of the Little Bighorn might be buried in a ravine below the hill where Lt. Col. George Armstrong Custer made his famous "last stand," a Park Service historian says.

Archeologists hoping to solve the more than 100-year-old mystery will look for the bodies in Grey Horse Ravine at the Custer Battlefield National Monument starting May 7, Park Service historian Neil Magnum said.

"We want to satisfy the question of were there any bodies down there, and if not, where did the missing soldiers fall and where are they buried," Magnum said.

The missing troopers were among the estimated 210 U.S. soldiers and civilians attached to five companies of the 7th Cavalry who were wiped out on June 25, 1876, by 4,000 to 5,000 Sioux and Cheyenne Indians.

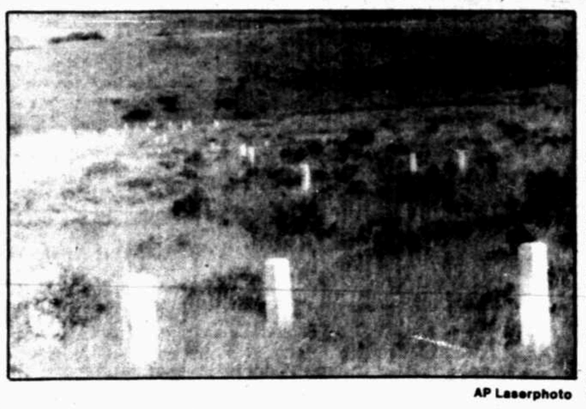

Magnum said the search was inspired by a prairie fire last August that exposed what appeared to be burial mounds in the ravine.

While most of Custer's troopers are buried in a mass grave at the top of a hill in the 600-acre park in southeastern Montana, some bodies never were found. The exact number of dead is unknown because troop rosters were lost in the battle, Magnum said.

The missing include enlisted men and three officers: Lt. James Sturgis of Albuquerque, N.M.; Lt. Henry Harrison of Albion, N.Y.; and Lt. James Porter of Strong, Maine.

Eyewitness accounts of the battle said some soldiers of E Company were killed in the ravine, Mangum said.

"Speculation is that those bodies in the ravine were never taken out of there," Magnum said. "There are indications that dirt was kicked down from the top of the ridge onto the bodies because the stench and decomposition was so bad."

These marble stones mark the spot where I Company of Lt. Col. George A. Custer's 7th Calvary died in 1876. Archeologists will search this summer for the bodies of some of the troopers who were never found after the Battle of Little Bighorn.

Historians have speculated that E Company either may have tried to escape to the nearby Little Bighorn River or that Custer sent them to protect his flank as he prepared for a retreat he never made.

The confusion after the battle may be one reason the bodies were never found, Magnum said, adding that most of Custer's dead troopers were hastily buried three days after the battle in shallow graves.

The Army returned in 1877 to dig deeper graves and to put up makeshift markers, Magnum said, but most of the dead weren't identified.

What historians believe was Custer's body was exhumed and buried at the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, N.Y.

The other bodies were exhumed in 1881 and moved to a mass grave at the top of a treeless hill where the Custer Monument was built.

In 1890, the government placed marble markers at the spot where they guessed each trooper died, Magnum said.

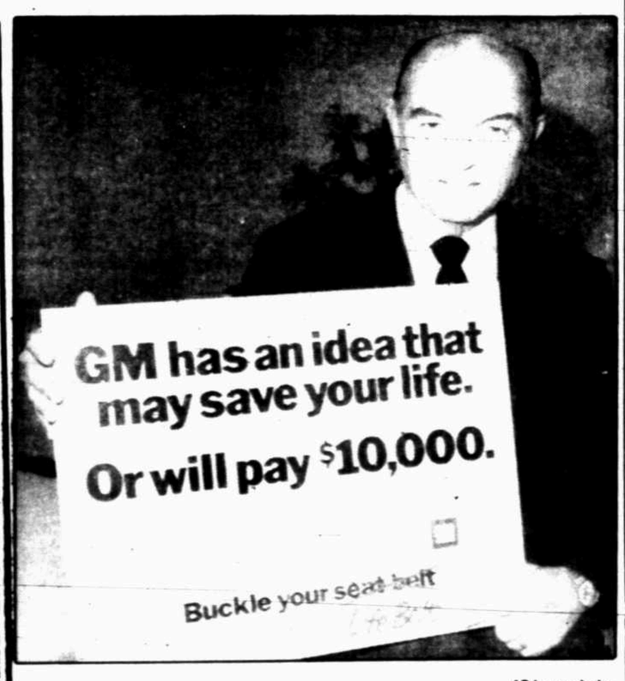

No markers were erected for the Indian dead because the bodies of the estimated 100 Sioux and Cheyenne killed were immediately removed by their kin, the historian said.

The excavation of the Grey Horse Ravine will continue past June only if something is found, Magnum said. Searchers probably will find just bits and pieces of skeletons, if anything, he added.

Magnum said archeologists also will conduct the first inch-by-inch mapping of the entire battlefield this spring, using equipment they hope will reveal any unmarked graves.

"We might surprise ourselves and find another skirmish line and shed more light on the battle," Magnum said. "We want to find out exactly what evidence of the battle we have to possibly reconstruct more of it."

General Motors F. James McDonald shows off the new ad GM will be using starting today. The automaker is trying to stimulate seat-belt usage, by offering a $10,000 insurance certificate, to be paid to the estate of any person who is killed while wearing a GM seat belt.

Insurance indicates GM trusts seat belts

DETROIT (AP) — General Motors Corp. will insure for $10,000 each the lives of everyone wearing seat belts in new GM cars and light trucks, the automaker announced today.

The insurance on each occupant will pay $10,000 to the estate of anyone fatally injured while wearing a seat belt in new GM vehicles during the first year of ownership, GM President F. James McDonald said in a statement.

Insurance certificates will be included at no cost with every new GM car and light truck sold in the United States and Canada as of today, McDonald said.

"This innovative action underscores...the faith we have in the protection offered by seat belts if occupants use them," McDonald said.

The carmaker's announcement, which McDonald said was an industry first, came as the Highway Users Federation claimed that even sporadic use of seat belts would prevent more than 2,000 deaths every year.

"Experts estimate that almost half of all automobile occupant fatalities and many serious injuries could be avoided if people wore seat belts," McDonald said. "It is a national tragedy that in the United States, seat belt usage is only about 15 percent."

He said usage is much higher in Canada, where seven of the 10 provinces have legislation requiring the wearing of seat belts.

The Highway Users Federation, a national business and industry coalition promoting highway safety, said in a report that if every state mandated the use of seat belts, more than 12,200 lives would be saved each year.

Additionally, it said, there would be 330,700 fewer disabling injuries and a savings of more than $5.2 billion a year in medical, legal and other related costs.

"When the first state adopts a seat belt law, we believe its lifesaving benefits will be so dramatic that other states will soon follow suit," said Robert M. Calvin, the federation's manager of highway safety programs and author of the seat belt report.

He said a state-by-state estimate of the number of lives saved and injuries forestalled each year ranged from a high of almost 1,300 lives and 34,700 injuries in California to a low of about 10 lives and 300 injuries in Washington.

Doctors say autism may be caused by brain defect

BOSTON (AP) — Two Boston scientists say that autism, a severe personality disorder, may stem from a brain defect that occurs early in fetal development rather than from emotional deprivation, as was previously believed.

The scientists, Drs. Margaret Bauman and Thomas L. Kemper, based their theory on data they compiled from an autopsy on the brain of a 29-year-old autistic man who had drowned off Cape Cod in 1977.

In their research, the doctors sliced the victim's brain into more than 3,000 sections, each only one-twentieth the thickness of a human hair. They then compared every 20th section with the corresponding section from the brain of a normal man about the same age who had died of a heart attack.

Emotional deprivation had been the leading theory about the cause of autism until the mid-1970s. Since then, organic causes have been investigated as possible causes.

Symptoms of autism start appearing in early childhood and include withdrawal from social contact, inability to acquire language and often engaging in mechanical and sometimes self-abusive behavior.

Kemper and Ms. Bauman said they found the autism defects in two areas of the brain — the so-called limbic brain, which is involved in control of emotions and processing of memory, and the cerebellum, a structure in the brain stem that controls balance and coordination.
