Daingerfield buries its dead

Rites held for four slain worshipers

DAINGERFIELD, Texas (AP) — A grieving town has paid final tribute to four worshipers cut down by a volley of gunfire during Daingerfield's bloodiest day.

Hundreds of mourners traveled to nearby De Kalb on Tuesday to bury 7-year-old Gina Linam, the youngest of five killed in the Sunday morning attack at the First Baptist Church of Daingerfield.

Meanwhile, grieving friends and family remembered Kenneth Truitt, Thelma Richardson and Gene Gandy at the same sanctuary where the heavily armed gunman directed his lethal fusillade.

Laverne McDaniel, one of 10 parishioners wounded in the attack, was expected to be temporarily released from a Texarkana hospital today to attend the funeral of her husband, James Y. "Red" McDaniel, who died trying to subdue the gunman.

The man charged in the killings, Alvin Lee King III, was in critical condition at John Sealy Hospital in Galveston. King underwent several hours of surgery Monday to repair the frontal lobes of his brain, a spokesman said.

King suffered a self-inflicted gunshot wound after grappling with several men who forced him out of the sanctuary after the shooting erupted, officials said.

Dr. Howard Eisenberg, chief of neurosurgery said no prediction could be made regarding King's prognosis but said he had every reason to believe King would recover.

The Rev. Virgil Fielden, associate pastor of the 900-member Daingerfield church, wept as he eulogized Miss Linam before the crowd of 400 to 500 at the 35-minute service in De Kalb.

"I feel hope.... Death is not the end," he said. "This precious one whom I loved so much has been taken home to Jesus."

During the Daingerfield funerals, there was little evidence to remind mourners that an attack had occurred. The kicked-in door had been repaired and the bloody carpet removed.

"There are no easy answers to what possesses a man to do something like this," said the Rev. Jim Powell, a former minister of the First Baptist Church who returned to officiate the funerals.

Police estimated a third of the town's 2,890 residents turned out to pay their last respects to Truitt, 49.

"He was a genuine martyr just like any martyr of the New Testament," said Powell.

"Sunday, he had the courage to use his body like a shield to protect hundreds of people," said Fielden.

Powell said at the Gandy funeral, attended by 500 people in sweltering 98-degree heat, that the only way he made it through three grilling funerals in one day was that "Gene Gandy, like the others, had accepted the Lord. If he hadn't, this would be a very dark time."

Police say other slaying unrelated

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston police said today they will not re-open the investigation of the December 1979 murder of Stanley Sinclair of Daingerfield.

"No one has brought forward any new evidence, and we made a very extensive investigation at the time of the incident," said Houston police detective W.L. Young.

Sinclair's father, Methodist minister Donald Sinclair, has claimed his son's death is related to the Sunday shootings in the First Baptist Church of Daingerfield, in which a former Daingerfield schoolteacher is accused of killing five.

The elder Sinclair told reporters he believes Alvin Lee King III, charged with killing five and wounding 10 in the incident, put a murder contract out on his son because his son encouraged King's daughter to bring incest charges against King.

Cheryl Linam is helped to her car by friends following the burial of her daughter, Gina, 7, the youngest of the worshippers shot to death in a church in Daingerfield Sunday. Five persons were killed and 11 wounded when Alvin Lee King III, armed with four guns, burst into the First Baptist Church during services and opened fire. (AP Laserphoto)

Carter praises Spain

MADRID, Spain (AP) — President Carter, the first American chief executive to visit Spain since the death of Generalissimo Francisco Franco five years ago, said today "the growth of Spanish democracy has been a tonic for the entire Western world."

Carter, whose Air Force One jet landed at 12:52 p.m. (6:52 a.m. EDT), was greeted at Barajas Airport by King Juan Carlos I, Queen Sophia and Prime Minister Adolfo Suarez. The leaders shook hands on a long, red carpet, and Carter was given a 21-gun salute on the hot, sunny afternoon.

On the eve of Carter's arrival, Basque separatists resumed an anti-government campaign, exploding bombs in two tourist lodgings in Spain's southern Sapin Alicante province about 225 miles southeast of Madrid. No injuries were reported. Carter was not expected anywhere near the area.

After the arrival ceremony, Carter traveled by motorcade in the king's limousine, rather than a Secret Service vehicle, to the royal palace in downtown Madrid and attended a reception and lunch given by the king.

In a toast, Carter, showing U.S. support for the fledgling Spanish democracy expected to seek membership in NATO, said in Spanish:

"The growth of Spanish democracy has been a tonic for the entire Western world. Spain refutes the false contention that the sweep of history is invariably toward authoritarianism — so Spain is a source of hope and inspiration to democrats everywhere."

Carter said he is pleased that Spain has begun negotiations to join the European Common Market.

He also said he hopes Spain will "see its own interests served by participating in the collective defense of the West," referring to the question of Spanish membership in the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

But Carter said he realizes such a move, a cause of controversy in Spain, "is a decision to be taken solely and exclusively by Spain — in its own time and its own way."

By joining the Atlantic alliance, Spain would jeopardize its position in the movement of non-alligned nations, one reason for the controversy here.

At the luncheon, King Juan Carlos toasted the 200th anniversary of the establishment of diplomatic relations between the United States and Spain.

He said that Spain is a country of peace-loving people and condemns "all kinds of violence and intervention in the internal affairs of other states," an apparent reference to the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan.

But the king also said that "we are and we shall continue to be in support of detente and shall contribute our share to a dialogue between East and West ..."

In addition to meetings with the king and prime minister, Carter's schedule called for talks with leaders opposing membership in NATO, including Felipe Gonzalez, head of the country's Socialist Workers Party.

Another topic likely to come up in Carter's talks with the king, Suarez and Gonzalez is renewal of a 1976 treaty allowing the U.S. Navy and Air Force to use Spanish military bases. The treaty expires next year, Spain's target date for applying for NATO membership, and the Spanish government is expected to seek a wider range of cooperation with less emphasis on U.S. arms support and more economic, cultural and technical aid.

Carter also plans to work in a bit of tourism as he has done elsewhere on his European trip.

With his wife, Rosalynn, and their 12-year-old daughter, Amy, Carter is scheduled to visit the famous Prado museum, concentrating on the work of the Spanish masters Goya, El Greco and Velazquez.

No one protests planned rate hike

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

It sounds like a vicious never-ending circle: The more electricity one conserves, the higher the rates go to make up for loss of revenue.

Or, at least, that's what the situation appeared to be when Winston Barclay, Midland manager of Texas Electric Service Co., explained the firm's reasons for a 17.7 percent average rate increase to Midland City Council. A public hearing was held on the increase during the council's regular session Tuesday in City Hall. However, no one showed up to voice objections to the hike.

TESCO filed in May for the hike, which should produce $123 million in revenue. Midland has joined with other cities in the TESCO system in hiring a consultant to study the proposed hike and recommend its own route, usually a lower rate.

Barclay, in explaining TESCO's position, contended costs of the electric company's construction program for lignite and nuclear plants have far exceeded what had been projected.

When the projects were undertaken, construction costs were estimated to be about $50 million per year. In 1979, those costs had risen to $213 million, and in 1980 they should hit $254 million, said Barclay.

Adding air quality control equipment to plants runs up the cost, he said, explaining that such equipment for a lignite plant used to cost $4 per kilowatt hour. It now costs $90.

And without the rate hike, electric prices still will go up come January, according to Barclay. TESCO's contract for natural gas from Old Ocean expires at that time, and the company will have to buy the fuel at open market prices. This means the gas costs will go from 41 cents a barrel to about $2.

Looking at a $40 a month electric bill, this means the charge will go up $5 for a $45 bill.

Going back to the top of the circle, Barclay explained that to reduce dependence upon natural gas, TESCO is building the lignite coal and nuclear plants to provide a cheaper source of fuel in the future. But until those projects are completed, the rates will have to increase to pay for them.

Councilman Tom Sloan, looking at a proposed rate chart, questioned why a $40 bill would go up to $57 a month, considering the $5 extra for fuel costs and another $17 from the rate increase.

"This is a 42.5 percent increase," he added.

Barclay explained that a 17.7 percent "average" increase means that some areas will get a higher rate and others a lower rate.

But because of a rate increase, "we're anticipating more conservation on the part of residents. This means less revenue and we have to increase the rates again," he added.

Because of a rate increase TESCO is anticipating more conservation on the part of Midlanders. "This means less revenue and we have to increase the rates again," the TESCO spokesman said.

"Are you saying," asked City Attorney Joe Nuessle, "that if we conserve by 10 percent, you have to raise the rates 10 percent?"

This type of action, replied Barclay, is called "elasticity."

However, he noted that while the person conserved 10 percent, he also saved that much on fuel costs even though rates for kilowatt hours used went up.

The council took no action on the proposed rate hike. If the city adopts a consultant's recommendation — which in the past has been lower than TESCO's — the case will go to the Public Utilities Commission. The PUC studies both sides and puts into effect its own rate structure.

Permian Basin sizzles in summer's record heat

It looks like it's going to be a long, hot summer, with no end in sight for the record-breaking temperatures reported by Midland and other Permian Basin towns Tuesday.

Midland's high of 104 degrees set a new record for Tuesday's date, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport. The previous record, set in 1953, was a cool 103 degrees. The record low of 57, set in 1940, was not threatened as this morning's low dipped only to 66 degrees.

But it would have been hard to find a spot anywhere in West Texas below 100 yesterday. All area towns reported temperatures reaching the century mark, with Lamesa and Stanton both reporting a scorching 108 degrees.

Temperatures are expected to be around 105 through Thursday, with clear conditions and no chance of rain. Winds will be from the south at 10-20 miles per hour.

Coal conversion package passed

WASHINGTON (AP) — In a move aimed at cutting American dependence on foreign oil, the Senate has passed a $4 billion measure to help utility plants convert from oil to coal. The bill is part of President Carter's national energy package.

The bill, passed 86-7 Tuesday, allows 25 utilities to bill the federal government for up to half the cost of converting 38 plants. It also provides government loans to pay another 25 percent of a plant's conversion price tag.

The 38 plants, with a total of 80 units, would be required to switch to coal by 1985 unless they receive a waiver from the Department of Energy.

"This bill is a rifle shot to aid power plants that need help in burning coal," said Sen. J. Bennett Johnston, D-La., "It is an environmentally and economically sound way of weaning ourselves from OPEC oil and using our own resources."

A similar version of the bill is pending in the House. Upon passage there, the two measures will go to a House-Senate conference committee to iron out differences.

The United States has huge reserves of coal and a number of energy experts said switching power plants from oil to coal would help decrease America's dependence on foreign oil.

While the Senate was approving conversion incentives, the House rejected the advice of its Appropriations Committee and voted 254-151 to add $107.4 million in energy technology money to its $11.8 billion energy and water development appropriations bill for the fiscal year starting Oct. 1.

The money added Tuesday to the Department of Energy includes $49 million for solar energy, $20.8 million for magnetic fusion research and $27.6 million for other energy research.

Overall, the bill recommended by the House Appropriations Committee carried $385.7 million less for the Energy Department than the Carter administration wanted. The panel said the department wastes money.

Although the coal conversion bill won easy Senate approval, it passed only after several air quality amendments were quashed. The amendments expressed Northeastern senators' concern that increased coal use without safeguards could worsen air pollution.

The plants are in 16 states, most of them in the Northeast, where use of once-cheap oil to produce electricity is common. President Carter first proposed federal aid for coal conversion last year as part of his national energy package.

Midland annexes 6½ square miles

By LANA CUNNINGHAM

Persons living north of Bluebird Lane awoke this morning to find themselves in a new status — residents of the city of Midland.

On Tuesday, Midland City Council passed on second reading an ordinance to annex 6.5 square miles north of the city limits between Holiday Hill Road and Lamesa Highway. The action becomes effective immediately and finalizes a process that initially started in October 1979.

Postponed for further study when first mentioned last year, annexation was started again early this year and approved on first reading in April. Changes first had to be made in regulations under the Agriculture-Estate District — which applies to most of the annexed area.

The annexed area brings Midland's total square mileage up to 40.

However, before the council could take action on the ordinance during a regular session in City Hall Tuesday, it considered whether or not to bring the Polo Club grounds into the city.

IN THE ORDINANCE passed in April, those grounds had been included. However, since that time the owners received a new tax valuation which showed the land value had jumped from $5,000 an acre last year to $15,000 an acre this year. Paying taxes on that land valuation would be detrimental to the club, argued one of the owners.

Ed Magruder, associated with the Polo Club, said the group didn't object to being annexed. They only wished for a different type of restrictive zoning which would give them a lower land valuation.

Wayne Kohout, director of parks and recreation, pointed out that in other cities where recreational areas were taxed for potential use they often closed their doors. In Chicago, for example, its major amusement park was turned into an industrial park because of the way it was taxed.

The council was divided on how to treat the Polo Club grounds. A motion to leave out the area on annexation and another one on including it failed on 3-3 votes.

Mayor G. Thane Akins headed up the argument on one side of the fence, saying that with the polo grounds in the city limits, "we (the council) can do something about it" through the Board of Equalization. But Tom

Attorneys renew effort to save Potts

GAINESVILLE, Ga. (AP) — Civil liberties attorneys were returning to the courtroom today to try to save convicted murderer Jack Potts — against his will — from execution next Tuesday.

Potts is facing the electric chair for the second time after being convicted in the kidnapping and murder of Roswell, Ga., mechanic Michael Priest.

Attorneys for the American Civil Liberties Union were to appear before U.S. District Judge William C. O'Kelley today, asking to be allowed to intervene on behalf of Potts.

O'Kelley refused a similar ACLU request on June 4, the day before Potts was last scheduled to die; however, later the same day he signed a stay of execution when Potts requested it. The next week Potts changed his mind and persuaded O'Kelley to dismiss the appeals and the stay.

Laughlin McDonald, ACLU regional director, said the application would be taken quickly to federal appeals courts if denied by O'Kelley.

In addition, Potts' mother raised the possibility that her son would again change his mind and try to save himself.

Carolyn Potts said she was prepared Saturday, with her son's approval, to take steps to prevent the execution.

But she balked after an argument erupted over money when Potts' former girl friend, Diane Nicholson, reportedly offered her a $20 bill — which is contraband in the prison area where they were visiting Potts.

Mrs. Nicholson's husband, Ed, said he believes Potts was indeed "on the verge of asking for a new appeal" Saturday, but he discounted Mrs. Potts' reasoning for refusing to cooperate.

Mrs. Nicholson and Potts' older brother were instrumental in obtaining the condemned man's approval for the eleventh-hour appeal on June 4, after Mrs. Potts had completed what she thought was her last visit with her son and left the prison.

Meanwhile, a federal judge in Macon, Ga., set a hearing on a separate legal action that could stop the execution.

Police blocked off the area around the 3100 block of West Front Street and firemen were asked to stand by around 2:30 p.m. Tuesday when a hopper car derailed and came to a halt only fractions of an inch from a gas meter. Apparently the engineer failed to stop and pushed the hopper car onto Front Street. Police and firemen had a few sticky moments trying to decide how to move the car without causing the meter to explode. Pioneer Natural Gas Co. workers finally disconnected the meter and the car was pulled out of the street with a locomotive. (Staff Photo by Edward McCain)

City of Midland OKs annexation of 6½ square miles north of town

Sloan, on the other side of the fence, contended that the Polo Club was similar to a country club and the city hasn't annexed any of the three country clubs.

The council, apparently deciding to straddle the fence, approved annexing the land but with a more restrictive zoning.

OTHER LAND in the annexed area brought in under other zoning besides A-E included Saddle Club North and Green Tree Country Club Estates.

A problem with getting sprinkler systems installed in some city parks and in getting another park developed came to light when the council looked at advertising for bids on a sprinkler system for the Downtown Park. Sloan wanted to hold off on putting in the sprinkler system on the undeveloped half-block next to Midland Center until projects at other parks were completed.

But Kohout said the company installing sprinkler systems is providing its own labor and the city's employees aren't being taken from other jobs for these projects. The same would apply to the Downtown Park.

And as to Kiwanis Park, which still hasn't been developed in the northwest part of Midland, Kohout referred to it as "Never, Never Land." Work on the piece of land at Haynes and Whitney streets started last winter. But city employees were taken from that to work on the rose garden next to Central Fire Department.

Now, the city department finds itself with insufficient funds to finish Kiwanis Park according to its plan of a restraining wall and berms to separate it from the neighborhood, according to Kohout.

The council decided to go ahead and seek bids on the Downtown Park's sprinkler system.

IN OTHER ACTION, the council accepted the name of Windlands Community Playfield Park for a park planned south of Wadley Avenue and west of A Street, accepted a bid for renting uniforms for MidTran bus drivers, approved a lease for air rights for Wagner & Brown to build a walkway across an alley, purchased a population study from R.L. Polk and rejected a request from Andy Macha for a refund on vacant lots purchased at delinquent tax sales.

Councilmen decided not to make United Way pay pro rata for water lines to a new building for Community Day Nursery to be located on Bunche Elementary School land. That pro rata had been paid when Bunche was constructed about 20 years ago, the council said.

Fred Baker, director of public works, said work on lowering a water line in northwest Midland was completed and the water level was back to normal. "We had good response from the public" in conserving water from Wednesday to Sunday, he added.

Midland council members ready to spice up meeting

The meeting between Midland and Odessa city councils is still a month away, but already the Midland group is building up its energies for the session.

Mayor G. Thane Akins had talked with Odessa Mayor Bob Bryant and the two agreed to a joint meeting at 10 a.m. July 24 in Odessa City Hall's Emergency Operating Center.

When Akins reminded the Midland panel Tuesday of the upcoming meeting, Councilman Tom Sloan wanted to know who was paying for lunch.

"Well," Akins said, "they are. But we have to pay for the next one."

"That's OK," said Sloan. "We don't have to have another meeting."

Akins then queried the council for ideas to put on the agenda and Gordon Marcum II joked, "Midland's planned annexation of Odessa."

The mayor, apparently not making any headway with the discussion, added that he meant possible problems between the two cities that could be discussed. Councilman Steve Davidson interjected, "I didn't know we had any problems."

"We don't have any problems," replied Marcum. "We just don't talk to each other."

Afghan says Soviets pulling, replacing 'unsuited' troops

RAWALPINDI, Pakistan (AP) — The only troops the Soviets are pulling out of Afghanistan are those unsuited for guerrilla warfare, and they are being replaced by elite Russian units and guerrilla warfare experts, a prominent Afghan exile said.

Mohammad Omar Babrakzai, a former judge trying to unite rebels fighting the Marxist regime of Babrak Karmal, said the Soviet troops in Afghanistan include "crack Russian troops brought in recently from East Germany and units specially trained in guerrilla warfare tactics."

He said the reported withdrawal could be similar to a troop rotation carried out in February and March, when Soviet troops from Central Asia where replaced by Russian units.

Babrakzai claimed most of the Central Asians were Moslems who lacked the will to fight their "Islamic brethren." Some defected and others aided the rebels by leaving behind caches of arms and supplies, he said.

Babrakzai said he believed the Soviets were removing defensive weapons such as anti-aircraft and anti-tank rocket launchers, for fear that the weapons could be used against Soviet troops if captured by the guerrillas.

Babrakzai, who fled the Afghan capital of Kabul for Pakistan last year, said his information came from Afghan military sources in the past few days.

Western diplomatic sources in Islamabad, Pakistan, said the Soviets were removing elements of several divisions, including units with surface-to-air rockets and anti-tank weapons that were of little use against the lightly armed and highly mobile guerrillas.

The Kremlin announced Monday it was withdrawing between 7,000 and 14,000 of the 85,000 troops it sent into Afghanistan in December to help crush the Moslem rebellion against the communist Afghan regime.

Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev said the reason for the partial pullout was that the rebels had been dealt a "serious defeat" during their two years of fighting the regime.

In Tokyo, Japanese Foreign Minister Saburo Okita said today that France was at odds with the United States and Britain at the Venice summit on how to respond to the Soviet announcement.

Okita said French President Valery Giscard d'Estaing contended Moscow would need at least 300,000 troops to control Afghanistan, and that the withdrawal indicated Soviet willingness to consider a political solution to the crisis.

The United States and Britain countered that the Soviets might be removing only unnecessary troops and weapons, and called for closer scrutiny of the situation to learn Moscow's true aims, Okita said.

President Carter, on a state visit to Yugoslavia after the summit, reiterated Tuesday that the United States would like to discuss a "transitional arrangement" for an independent and neutral government in Afghanistan.

"We would be prepared to explore a transitional arrangement, to be implemented along with the prompt withdrawal of all Soviet troops from Afghanistan, for the purpose of restoring peace and tranquility in that suffering country," Carter told his host, Yugoslav President Cvijetin Mijatovic during a toast in Belgrade.

Carter was renewing a proposal he advanced without success last February. There was no Soviet immediate reaction to the statement.

The United States hopes the proposal will be taken more seriously now that it is becoming increasingly evident to the Soviet Union that its military forces face a long guerrilla war and won't be able to gain complete control of Afghanistan, administration sources said.

Carter said his goal is to help "establish a truly independent, nonaligned Afganistan with a government acceptable to the Afghan people."

U.S. officials explained that the transition could involve a phased replacement of Soviet troops with neutral United Nations or Moslem forces who would provide security for a peaceful transition from the Soviet-backed Karmal government to a new group of leaders.

Television station may lose cable affiliate

From Staff and Wire Reports

WASHINGTON — The KMID television station and its affilate, Cablevision of Odessa, may have to break their alliance soon because the Federal Communications Commission wants companies that own both a cable system and a TV station in the same city to sell one or the other within a year.

The proposal, adopted here Tuesday by a 5-2 vote, could affect 25 companies or individuals holding major interests in 31 TV stations and cable systems in 19 states.

The KMID station in Midland and the Odessa cable system, both owned by Midessa Television Co. Inc., are one of the 31 systems mentioned in the FCC ruling.

However, Ray Herndon, general manager of KMID, said Midessa Television does not own a controlling interest in the Odessa cable. Rather, he said, it owns a quarter of the station in a joint-venture partnership.

OTHER OWNERS OF the cable he said were Doubleday Broadcasting Inc. of New York; Cable Comm General of Denver; and Hodge Theater Interest of Midland and Odessa. Each, Herndon said, owns a quarter interest in the station.

Bob Witcher, manager of Cablevision of Odessa, said when contacted this morning he had not heard about the ruling and was not sure how the owners would react.

"I know they were concerned about that in the past," he said. "No one has ever known they (the FCC) were actually going to do this."

The commission voted in 1970 to block arrangements in which there would be joint ownership of a TV station and a cable system in the same community. It issued a new rule in 1975 saying the only companies that had to divest one of the holdings were those owning the only cable system as well as the only TV station in a given area.

IF THAT standard were continued, only eight of the 25 companies that now hold crossownerships would be required to divest, the FCC's staff estimated.

"This has been in the courts for 10 years," Herndon said. "Now its going to start all over," he said, adding that Tuesday's proposal is similar to the original proposal made in 1970.

Further, Herndon said, the decision is "kind of undetermined. The proposed order made yesterday can be contested by the (federal) justice department. The federal justice department can upset this whole thing...if they file suit. And they have 60 days in which to do it."

However, the standard for the television-cable system regulation was copied from rules governing newspaper-broadcast combinations, a position under court challenge, and commission attorneys have said a policy is needed to address peculiarities of television and cable competition.

The FCC responded Tuesday by saying all affected companies — including the ones that thought they were safe under the 1975 ruling — would have to divest unless they were granted a waiver under the new policy.

THE FCC SAID it would accept requests for waivers from companies that might be affected and one commissioner predicted a "liberal" policy on granting the waivers.

That waiver policy would consider such things as the size of the TV market, the total audience of the station and cable subscribers, the presence of other mass media in the market and the extent to which divestiture would cause negative economic or programming effects.

Witcher said he thought the KMID-Odessa cable system might be able to get a waiver.

"I would think they would have a chance," he said. "Channel 2 does not just serve Midland and Odessa; it serves a large audience in the West Texas area." Since the ruling was set up to protect against monopolies, Witcher said, KMID might be able to get a waiver against the ruling because "there are two other stations in the area and they (KMID) do serve such a large interest.

"They probably have a good chance for a waiver," he said.

HERNDON SAID he believed Midessa Television would appeal the ruling. "We will now consider, as we did in 1970, to seek a 'grandfather interest' (in the Odessa Cable) because we acquired these interests before there were any regulations."

Midessa Television bought into the Odessa cable system in 1966, four years prior to the first ruling, Herndon said.

Herndon said KMID and the Odessa cable have virtually the same service area, or Grade B coverage. "Grade B coverage," Herndon explained, "is a calculated circle around the broadcast area."

He defined the area of service of the television station as outlined by Hobbs, N.M., on the southwest and Big Lake on the northeast. The Odessa cable, he said, has a broadcast area approximately 30 further west than KMID.

The company does own 50 percent of another station, KFDA in Amarillo, a CBS affiliate. KFDA is co-owned by KMID with a third station in the Wichita Falls area. But, the Amarillo station would not be affected by the ruling, he said.

THE 30 OTHER TV stations said to be owned by companies that also own a cable system in the same area, or whose stockholders have major cross-interests, include KRON in San Francisco; WINK in Fort Myers, Fla.; KID in Idaho Falls, Idaho; WHBF in Rock Island, Ill.; KLOE in Goodland, Kan.; KARD in Wichita, Kan.; WKYH in Hazard, Ky.; WKZO in Kalamazoo, Mich.; WOTV in Grand Rapids, Mich.; WCCO in Minneapolis; WXGN in Glendive, Mont.; KNOP in North Platte, Neb.; WKTV in Utica, N.Y.

Also listed were: KFYR in Bismarck, N.D.; KTEN in Ada, Okla; KSWO in Lawton, Okla; KEZI in Eugene, Ore.; KOBI in Medford, Ore; KOTI in Klamath Falls, Ore; KPIC in Roseburg, Ore.; WSBA in York, Pa.; KOTA in Rapid City, S.D.; KHSD in Lead, S.D.; KELO in Sioux Falls, S.D.; KDLO in Florence, S.D.; KPLO in Reliance, S.D.; KVII in Amarillo, Texas; KTAL in Texarkana, Texas; KSL in Salt Lake City, and KUTV in Salt Lake City.

'Guacamole sinkhole' still nibbling at West Texas dirt

KERMIT (AP) — The huge chasm discovered three weeks ago near the sleepy town of Kermit continues to nibble on West Texas dirt.

"It's slowed down, but it keeps caving on," said Winkler County sheriff's deputy Glenn Vandiver.

The giant sinkhole, a tourist attraction of sorts, is partially filled with "avocado green" water about 70 feet deep, Vandiver said.

"You could call it the guacamole sinkhole now, I guess," he added. At an early point in its short, voracious life, the sinkhole was filled with bubbling black muck.

An analysis of the olive drab liquid conducted by Midland chemical company Petro Lewis showed the water to be "better than what the city of Midland is drinking," a company spokesman said.

Scorching summer heat has not driven off the tourists, who still drive out to view the hole's progress.

"They're still coming, and I tell you, it's hot out," Vandiver said. "The day it was 114 out there, there was a mob of 'em. That's people for you."

Youngsters find withered hand, foot

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — A withered hand and foot have been found in small concrete-filled ice chests resting in a San Antonio creek, sparking a search for the rest of a body, authorities say.

Four youngsters walking along the Salado Creek in northeast San Antonio made the discovery Tuesday afternoon. Each body part was cemented into a small plastic foam ice chest, police said.

"I was walking along with some friends when I spotted the hand," said Tracy Warden, 16. "Man, I was scared."

Rhoads joins medical center staff

ABILENE — Vic Rhoads, son of Mr. and Mrs. H.B. Rhoads of Midland, has been named vice president for human resources at Hendrick Medical Center in Abilene.

Rhoads, executive director for the Tri-Region Health Systems Agency in Abilene, will assume his new post at Hendrick Monday, Joel T. Allison, executive vice president of HMC, announced recently. Rhoad's resignation from HSA became effective June 20.

Rhoads will be the first person to hold this vice presidential post at HMC since the hospital's board of trustees approved its creation last fall during a reorganization of administrative structure. The hospital used a national executive search firm to assist in filling the position.

Job responsibilities for the new vice president will include coordinating and supervising hospital educational programs and the departments of chaplaincy, continuing education, personnel, public relations, social services and volunteer services.

Allison said one of the critical issues for all hospitals during the 1980s will be the development and retention of human resources, and the trustees and hospital administration recognized the need for someone to coordinate and direct the human resources at Hendrick to effectively carry out the hospital's goals and objectives.

Equally as important, Rhoads will assist in developing new and expanded programs to enhance the Christian image of HMC that goes to the Abilene community, hospital patients and their families and to HMC employees.

Speaking of his new job, Rhoads said, "I see the role of vice president of human resources as one that not only is interrelated with duties and responsibilities of all hospital employees, but also reaches out, as Hendrick does, to affect the whole community. I want to work with all employees toward the hospital's stated purpose of Hendrick as an extension of the ministry of healing of Jesus Christ.

"Hendrick's goal, ultimately, is to give patients the best possible total care and to help all people who come in contact with the hospital to grow and use hospital services to achieve a more productive and useful life."

Allison said, "Hendrick Medical Center is pleased and fortunate to have someone as qualified as Vic Rhoads to undertake this very important job responsibility. We look forward to a long relationship of great benefit to Hendrick and the Abilene community."

Rhoads came to HSA as executive director in 1978 after serving four years as health systems development manager at the Permian Basin Regional Planning Commission in Midland. Before that he served one year as regional director of the Texas affiliate of the American Heart Association in Midland.

During his tenure at HSA, Rhoads worked to earn the agency full designation from the Department of Health, Education and Welfare as the official health planning and development agency for Service Area 9.

He has worked on several state and national committees and task forces in health planning.

Rhoads is a 1972 graduate of Hardin-Simmons University with a degree in business administration and is working toward a master of business administration degree at HSU.

Rhoads' wife, Marsha, is a student at HSU. They have two daughters: Amy, 9, and Callie, 6.

$2 million Arizona forest fire now under control

FLAGSTAFF, Ariz. (AP) — A $2 million fire in the Coconino National Forest northwest of Flagstaff has been brought under control, but authorities are still worried about dry conditions throughout the state.

The blaze, which started Saturday night near Kendrick Peak, was contained Monday after consuming 2,300 acres of ponderosa pines and brought under control Tuesday.

Earlier in the day, firefighters contained a 900-acre blaze north of Wickenberg and mopped up a 4,500-acre fire near Bagdad and a 2,200-acre fire near Bisbee. All were in desert brush.

But the state remains very dry with 100-degree temperatures and afternoon winds continuing to create an explosive fire danger, fire officials say. Campfires have been banned on all public land except in extreme northwest and southeast Arizona.

Fire control officer Bill Buck said about 500 firefighters battled the Coconino fire at its peak.

Reagan to woo Democrats, independents, Clements says

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Ronald Reagan's campaign plans for Texas include particular attention to Democrats and independents, says Gov. Bill Clements, Reagan's recently named state chairman.

Clements hinted that former Gov. Allan Shivers might be asked to head a separate campaign organization for Democrats and independents, as he did for Dwight Eisenhower and Richard Nixon.

"You would be surprised at the friends Reagan has among the Democrats," Clements said at a Tuesday news conference.

"I have no doubt that Ronald Reagan will carry Texas and be the next president of the United States," the governor said.

Former Midland Mayor Ernest Angelo, who has been state campaign coordinator and now is deputy state chairman and campaign manager, said Clements was selected at a Monday meeting in Dallas attended by William J. Casey, chairman of the national campaign, and Lin Nofzinger, deputy campaign director and director of communications.

"He was our unanimous choice," Angelo said at the news conference.

Clements said campaign plans still were incomplete, but "we plan to unite all the factions of Texans...we plan to utilize all the volunteer work we can. We expect to have 25,000 to 30,000 volunteers by November. I am very enthusiastic."

He said the campaign expected to raise about $1.5 million within Texas, with another $500,000 coming from national coffers.

Clements said he had not discussed a vice presidential nominee with Reagan and had no opinions on the subject.

"It's solely his decision," Clements said. "As I have said before, I am not running. I don't think any patriotic American or Republican could refuse to serve and be a candidate for vice president if nominated by Gov. Reagan, but I don't anticipate this will happen. My feeling is that it is not going to happen."

On trusting the Soviets

Don't let them fool you. The Soviets didn't agree to a partial withdrawal of their troops from Afghanistan solely because of the United States-instigated boycott of this summer's Olympic Games in Moscow.

Certainly that was a part of the reason for the withdrawal.

There's little doubt that the Soviets are hoping this small gesture will increase participation at the Olympics.

The Russinas, you see, have a rather large stake in this summer's Games. They have invested heavily in buildings, equipment and propaganda to take full advantage of the situation.

Undoubtedly the prospect of a small turnout at the Games unnerved the Soviets. They had only to view the list of nations pledging not to attend the Games in order to get a preview of their impending embarrassment at the Games.

Although that consideration did play a role in the decision of the Soviets to pull one troop division and 108 tanks out of Afghanistan, it was not the only reason for the withdrawal.

News accounts from that blood-stained nation have indicated for quite some time now that Soviet troops have been engaged in frenzied battle with anti-communist Moslem rebels.

Those rebels have made the better trained Soviet forces pay for every inch of ground they've taken. In doing so, the rebels have earned the respect of all freedom loving people.

In viewing the overall scope of the partial troop withdrawal, however, we have to wonder what the Soviets have up their sleeve, so to speak. Perhaps the withdrawal is part of a larger, planned withdrawal. Perhaps they have an ulterior motive.

For the meantime, we believe the United States and other nations of the Free World would do better to bide time and watch the situation in Afghanistan. A little time, perhaps will indicate the Soviets' true colors.

If this partial troop pullout is followed up with a more extensive withdrawal within the next few weeks, it definitely would be a "good will" gesture on the part of the Soviets.

But we're not laying any odds such will take place and, as history has taught us time and time again, we'll believe that such is the finale in Afghanistan only when we see it.

After all, the Summer Games don't last forever.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Wednesday, June 25, the 177th day of 1980. There are 189 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On June 25, 1950, the Korean War began as North Korea invaded the Republic of Korea.

On this date:

In 1815, Napoleon Bonaparte delivered a farewell address before being exiled to the island of St. Helena.

In 1876, troops under the command of Gen. George Armstrong Custer were massacred in the Battle of Little Big Horn in Montana.

In 1976, the Supreme Court ruled that private schools may not exclude black children because of their color.

Ten years ago, following a bitter debate at its convention, the American Medical Association voted to allow doctors to perform abortions for social and economic as well as medical reasons.

Five years ago, President Gerald Ford warned the oil-producing countries against new price increases, saying they could have an adverse impact worldwide.

Last year, the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries opened a Geneva meeting to raise oil prices.

Today's birthdays: Film director Sidney Lumet is 56. Actress June Lockhart is 55. Singer Carly Simon is 35.

Thought for today: We owe to the Middle Ages the two worst inventions of humanity — romantic love and gunpowder — Andre Maurois (1885-1967)

BIBLE VERSE

Now I beseech you, brethren, mark them that are causing the divisions and occasions of stumbling, contrary to the doctrine which ye learned: and turn away from them. For they that are such serve not our Lord Christ, but their own belly; and by their smooth and fair speech they beguile the hearts of the innocent. Rom. 16:17,18.

ART BUCHWALD

Patent-happy engineers protecting little 'blobs'

Art Buchwald

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court has ruled that life forms created in the laboratory by genetic engineering may be patented like any other invention. It was a great victory for those who are trying to develop new micro-organisms for the marketplace.

The case that decided it concerned General Electric, which had asked for a patent on a bug it had developed to eat oil spills.

As soon as the decision was handed down, the offices of patent attorneys in Washington were jammed with genetic engineers trying to protect their creations.

I dropped in on one of the larger law firms. The waiting room was filled with people all holding glass jars on their laps.

"What do you have in the bottle?" I asked one man.

"It's a bacterium that eats condominiums," he said proudly. "It starts in the basement and just keeps eating away until the building collapses. Then it feeds on the rubble until there is nothing left."

"Why would you want to develop a micro-organism to eat condominiums?"

"I didn't start out to invent it. I was working on bacteria that would feed on manhole covers and something went wrong when I spliced a gene. I'm sure someone will have a use for it. But I want to be protected because you never know when another scientist will come up with the same thing."

The man sitting next to him was talking to his jar.

"Now behave yourself or I won't give you any sugared water when we get home."

I couldn't see anything in the bottle, but I assumed a microbe was there.

"What are you planning to patent?" I asked.

He threw his coat over the jar.

"Wouldn't you like to know," he said with great suspicion.

"I swear I won't tell anyone."

He smiled and whispered to me, "It's a microbe that eats the bacteria which feed on oil spills."

"What a breakthrough!" I exclaimed. "How did you ever think of it?"

"I didn't. The Westinghouse people asked me to develop it. They're not going to let GE become No. 1 in the genetic engineering business."

A scientist in the next chair was studying a glass slide under a microscope and taking notes. He was very annoyed when I disturbed him.

"What do you have on the slide?" I asked.

"You sure you want to know?"

I said I was sure.

"Take off your shirt," he said.

I did and handed it to him.

He took an eye dropper and squeezed it onto the collar. I watched in amazement as the collar turned pure white.

"Does it eat dirt?" I asked.

"Only on shirt collars. You won't ever have to use detergent again to stop ring-around-the-collar."

"When did you develop it?"

"Several years ago, but I wasn't about to reveal the results until I could patent it."

The last person I talked to was a man wearing a white mask, rubber gloves and rubber boots.

"And pray tell, sir, what do you have in your jar?"

"I'm not sure," he said. "It can either cure arthritis or wipe out the human race."

"It sounds like it has great possibilities."

"It certainly does. That's why I want to license it before it gets in the public domain."

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Diplomats' feuding disgraces U.S. in Israel

Jack Anderson

WASHINGTON — One reason the Carter administration keeps contradicting itself on the explosive Palestinian question may be the bitter feud that has divided our diplomats in Israel.

Confidential State Department cables hint at a shocking disarray in views between officials in the U.S. Embassy at Tel Aviv and those attached to the consulate at Jerusalem. The cables detail a series of embarrassing incidents that befell a visiting congressional delegation in Jerusalem.

At an evening soiree, the seemingly drunken wife of a consular official accosted a California congressman and his wife and told the legislator in slurred tones that she had "heard all about you," adding: "You're a B.S. artist." The congressman was merely amused at the insulting remark; others at the party were aghast.

But that wasn't the worst of the gaffes. Previously, the visiting congressmen were invited to the home of Consul General Brandon Grove for a briefing. A political officer from the consulate, Thomas Wukitsch, shocked the largely Jewish delegation by pulling a large set of Arabic "worry beads" from his pocket and launching into what one congressman called an "insensitive, pro-Palestinian" lecture.

When Wukitsch suggested that all Israeli settlements on the West Bank were illegal and that U.S. policy dictated that they be dismantled, U.S. Ambassador Samuel Lewis decided he'd had enough. He corrected his subordinate's statement.

Then, as the astonished congressmen looked on, Wukitsch stubbornly insisted his view was the right one. Barely suppressing his anger, the ambassador retorted, "That's not true," witnesses told my associate Jack Mitchell.

More was to come. At a farewell party the following day, the consul general unexpectedly gave the floor to the Arab mayor of occupied Gaza, Rashad al Shawa. According to a secret cable, the mayor loosed "a lengthy and forceful harangue" on the visiting congressmen. He strongly criticized U.S. support of Israel, and "noted that grievances ... result in terrorist attacks."

"We were put in an embarrassing position," recalled one of the shocked legislators who had tried gamely to respond to the surprise attack. Other members of the delegation confided privately that they were appalled by the unprofessional behavior of several foreign service personnel.

Sources say embassy officials feel that those in the Jerusalem consulate are thwarting efforts to present more balanced views to the policymakers in Foggy Bottom.

Footnote: Neither Ambassador Lewis nor Wukitsch returned our overseas phone calls.

BUBBLEGUM TACTICS: The Democratic National Committee's legal drive to keep independent candidate John Anderson off the November ballot may become bubblegum in President Carter's face.

The committee is responding to orders from the White House. This has antagonized several Democrats on Capitol Hill, who feel the committee is putting President Carter's reelection ahead of their own. For the polls show that most voters who favor Anderson would also vote for Democratic congressional candidates.

In those states where the committee succeeds in keeping Anderson's name off the ballot, the disillusioned Anderson supporters may stay home and thus deprive the other Democratic candidates of votes. Then this could result in a Republican capture of Congress.

But what if Anderson wins enough states to throw the election into the House of Representatives? Then the House would be dominated by Republicans who would elect Ronald Reagan as president.

So, conceivably, Carter's campaign to block Anderson might elect a Republican House which, ironically, might block Carter from a second term in the White House.

HEADLINES AND FOOTNOTES: Anti-Iranian feeling has reached the elementary level. A Riverside, Calif., teacher reports that one of her grade-school pupils carefully cut Iran out of the classroom wall map ... One question CIA employees are invariably asked on their periodic lie-detector tests is whether they've had any "contacts" with members of the press, report our sources at the agency ... Rep. Tennyson Guyer, R-Ohio, was heard to remark recently that "if we had to wait on Congress to resolve emergencies, we just never would." He paused, and added ruefully, "Let's face it. We would make horrible SWAT teams." ... French President Valery Giscard d'Estaing's cool disdain toward the United States is not shared by his countrymen. An American recently returned from France reports that almost every day Frenchmen from every walk of life told him, "I want to take my family to the United States to live."

WATCH ON WASTE: Consulting for Uncle Sam is a notoriously lucrative racket in Washington. But sometimes it gets downright disgraceful. Department of Energy bureaucrats decided they wanted a professional critique of their new publication, the Solar Law Reporter. So they hired a consultant because, as the contract justification stated, "the breadth of his experience ... is unlikely to be found elsewhere at a lower price." The price: a whopping $500 a day for two weeks of critiquing. Later, it developed that someone with his experience could indeed have been found at a lower price — not elsewhere, but right at DOE, where the same expert had been consulting for $250 a day.

MARK RUSSELL SAYS

Another batch of exotic and wondrous CIA nursery rhymes has been released. My only regret is that my children are too old to enjoy them.

Reading the reports of the possibilities of delivering explosives by porpoise or the use of otters in search and destroy missions, you have to suspect that among the technical advisors in those days were Mother Goose and Dr. Seuss.

Oh, furry little otter, where have you been?
Down to Havana and back again.
With your little otter hand grenade,
Were you down there creeping?
To slip it under Castro while he was sleeping?

Was the program very hard training for the Feds?
At the CIA Academy for tiny quadrupeds?
Before you came out of the cold, was it very lonely?
Reading secret messages for otters' eyes only?

Will your book reveal the message,
Now that you're well known,
That there's nothing sadder than an otter
Whose cover has been blown?

NICK THIMMESCH

Palestinian problem must be resolved for Israel's sake

Nick Thimmesch

WASHINGTON — Under the right-wing Begin regime, Israel has few friends except other right-wing regimes and its patient protector, the U.S. The rest of the world feels repugnance for the tough-guy methods Begin uses in repressing West Bank Arabs and in stalling the peace process.

For Israel's sake, it is best to tell it like it is. Israel's true friends know that the aggressive West Bank settlements are wrong, that Israeli society is being corrupted by the increasingly cruel military occupation, causing many dedicated supporters like violinist Issac Stern to warn: "I don't know how long Jews like myself will be able to keep their links with Israel."

Only last week, we had a "Man Bites Dog" story here when Sen. Henry Jackson (D, Wash.) criticized Begin's settlement policy — a historic first for a senator who never says a bad word about Israel. Another first was a Senate move to cut aid to Israel unless that nation stops the illegal settlements.

Begin's Israel is the spoiled child who badly misbehaves, knowing that its indulgent uncle (the U.S.) will provide a generous allowance (from the U.S. taxpayer) no matter what it does. Israel, as Sen. Adlai Stevenson (D, Ill.) courageously pointed out last week, gets 43 percent of the entire $4.8 billion foreign aid package.

Europe, knowing that in an election year most American politicians are too cowardly to make Israel push the peace process (for fear of losing Jewish contributions and votes), launched its own Middle East peace initiative.

It was flawed, but honest, and actually stretched a friendly hand. Begin reacted in the usual paranoid fashion, citing "the German people's heinous, historic crimes against the Jewish people," and lambasting France and Italy for the Vichy and Italian fascist governments of 40 years ago.

When Begin's regime is criticized, he likes to scream "World War II ... the surrender at Munich ... the holocaust," and compare the PLO with Nazi storm troopers.

Such demagogical, guilt-trip irrelevance is disgusting and unworthy of an Israeli prime minister. The vast majority of Europeans were born after Hitler was killed, and had nothing to do with him, except, perhaps, to lose relatives in death camps or in the war (Nazis exterminated millions of non-Jews as well as Jews).

If Begin wants a fresh whiff of fascism, he might look to the Arab West Bank. Israeli, Arab, U.S. and many other documented sources report:

— An escalation of illegal Jewish settlements on Arab lands; confiscation and forced sales of land; a coercive water policy denying it to Palestinian farmers in favor of Jewish settlers, most of whom hold middle-class jobs in Tel Aviv or Jerusalem.

— Stepped-up ugly violence by Israel military against Arabs — shootings, beating and rough-handling. Also, toleration of violence against Arabs by Jewish vigilante gangs who know Israeli authorities won't arrest or prosecute them. Irony: In 1938, Nazi hoodlums mashed windows of Jewish-owned shops — the infamous "krystallnacht." In 1980, Jewish thugs smashed windows in Arab-owned shops and in Arab-owned cars.

— Police state actions of sealing or blowing up houses of Arabs suspected of subversive activity, or whose children are charged with throwing rocks at Israeli police; middle-of-the-night arrests and deportations — the dreaded knock on the door; arresting and jailing people without charges or trial, often imprisoning them for years; employing "collective punishment," i.e., closing universities, schools, stores, and destroying villages or houses while expelling all inhabitants, punishing all for the wrongs of a few.

— Denial of civil liberties by stopping publication of Arabic newspapers; censoring news of foreign correspondents, including Americans; imposing repressive curfews; firing and deporting university profesors and public officials for speaking against the Begin regime; and forcibly halting strikes and coercing shopowners into reopening or having their doors smashed in.

This is only part of it. Increasing numbers of Israelis are disgusted with the West Bank situation. They want security from terrorists and invaders, but they also want to live in peace with the Palestinians. Many are organizing. Simha Flapan, the courageous editor of "New Outlook," is arranging an unprecedented peace dialogue in Israel between Israelis and Palestinians. It was Martin Buber, the Jewish philosopher, who years ago inspired a now famous meeting between Jews and Egyptians.

The Jewish community in the U.S. usually stands clear, but recently writer Milton Viorst brought two deported Palestinian West Bank mayors to Washington's Temple Sinai for dialogue with the congregation. The meeting survived a smoke bomb, a threatening cordon of blue-shirted Jewish Defense League troopers, and constant heckling. Other Jewish intellectuals, like the legendary I.F. Stone, also believe in Israeli-Palestinian dialogue.

When Begin took office, I urged that he be given a chance to work for peace. He has failed. Israel's hope now is its sturdy free press, the substantial body of Israeli thinkers calling for an end to the deplorable West Bank situation; and growing numbers of thoughtful Jews in Europe and the U.S. willing to break silence. The Palestinian problem must be resolved for Israel's sake, and to unburden Uncle Sam of the naughty nephew he is protecting.

Youth in critical condition

Rube Purvis, 18, of 3205 Maxwell St. "is doing much better" and is now listed in serious condition in Midland Memorial Hospital with a broken neck, said a hospital spokesman. Purvis was injured Sunday while diving at Wild River Canyon water amusement park on Holiday Hill Road.

Purvis originally was listed in critical condition, but had improved considerably since undergoing surgery Monday, the spokesman said.

A spokesman for Wild River Canyon said the youth was diving in the swimming lake, where numerous "No Diving" signs are posted.

He also said it was unknown whether Purvis hit the bottom or whether his neck broke when he hit the water. "Apparently, he broke his neck two years ago while diving. That's what we have been led to believe — that this is an aggravation of an old injury," said the spokesman.

Woman arrested on check charge

SAN ANGELO — A Midland woman was arrested in San Angelo Tuesday and charged with felony theft, according to a San Angelo Police Department spokesman.

Patricia Poole, of 302 Waverly Drive in Midland, is accused of writing eight checks totaling $1,694.80 on an insufficient San Angelo bank account, the officer said. Each check was for $211.81, and was passed to a local business.

Ms. Poole allegedly told officials she was starting a new tax business. Police began their investigation when the checks began arriving, and no new company had been established, according to reports.

Bond for the woman was set Tuesday at $10,000 by Tom Green County Peace Justice Ruth Nicholson.

Muskie wants Soviets pressured for withdrawal from Afghanistan

ANKARA, Turkey (AP) — Secretary of State Edmund S. Muskie told NATO foreign ministers today to keep pressuring the Soviet Union for a full withdrawal of troops from Afghanistan.

"The rapid growth of Soviet military forces for well over a decade and their demonstrated willingness to violate the sovereignty of another nation, require an effective allied response — a concerted and sustained allied response," Muskie said.

He made the remarks at the opening public session of a North Atlantic Treaty Organization foreign ministers' meeting expected to be dominated by a search for new ways to pressure the Soviet Union to withdraw all of its armed forces from Afghanistan.

The Soviets poured some 85,000 troops into Afghanistan in December to help crush a Moslem rebellion against the communist regime, and on Monday announced they were pulling out about 10 percent of the men because of battlefield victories against the rebels.

Muskie said the West should keep its lines of communications open to Moscow, but added, "The path to broader cooperation with the Soviet Union, to a lessening of tensions in Europe and elsewhere, is open when Soviet actions follow. We must make unmistakably clear that aggression will be firmly opposed.

In return for Soviet withdrawal from Afghanistan, he said, the West would be willing to renew talks on mutual and balanced force reduction negotiations in Vienna, discuss limits on long-range missiles and give greater weight to Soviet views on European security.

As it stands now, the next security review session, scheduled for November in Madrid, is shaping up as a head-on confrontation between Soviet requests for an expansion of detente and Western requests for full implementation of human rights accords.

Muskie met on Tuesday with Turkish Premier Suleyman Demirel and later with Greek Foreign Minister Constantine Mitsotakis.

Muskie said "all parties" would like Greece to rejoin NATO's military wing, which it quit in 1974 after Turkey invaded Cyprus. France is the other member of the 15-nation alliance outside the military command structure.

Sources said there will be no formal U.S. proposals on Greek re-entry at the NATO meeting, but there have been signs of a renewed dialogue between the two countries in the alliance's southern flank.

Turkey, which has blocked bids to rejoin the military wing, said recently the issue is entirely up to Greece and NATO officials. Greece is seeking acceptable terms for re-entry, notably concessions from Turkey on air space and seabed rights in the Aegean Sea.

Pryor's spirits lifted

SHERMAN OAKS, Calif. (AP) — A growing avalanche of mail, flowers and gifts has inundated the small private hospital where Richard Pryor is recuperating after a skin-graft operation.

Hospital spokesman Gary Swaye said Pryor would resume his treatments, which include a whirlpool bath and a high-pressure oxygen chamber to help the skin heal, today after a two-day hiatus.

The 39-year-old comedian, whose upper body was burned two weeks ago in a freak accident, is preparing to resume a full schedule of therapy after skin-graft surgery on Monday. A team of six doctors operated on Pryor for an hour and a half, taking skin grafts from his thighs and calves and placing them on his shoulders, neck, arms, back and chest.

Swaye, assistant executive director at Sherman Oaks Community Hospital, said Pryor's attitude "seems to be very positive and helpful."

Swaye described Pryor's spirits as "real good" Tuesday, despite constant pain. He said the comedian will remain on the critical list until at least the end of the week while doctors assess the results of the skin grafts.

Pakistan wants action to stop Israel in annexation

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Pakistan, on behalf of the 40-nation Islamic Conference, called on the U.N. Security Council to impose sanctions against Israel if it annexes Arab East Jerusalem. But Israel told the council to turn a deaf ear to Pakistan's "shrill voice of incitement, hatred and fanaticism."

Pakistani Foreign Minister Agha Shahi, opening Tuesday's four-hour debate, said firm and immediate action was needed from the council to block annexation of the eastern sector of the ancient holy city which Israel seized from Jordan in the 1967 Mideast war.

In an obvious reference to the United States, Shahi declared, "The countries which support Israel bear a special responsibility to contain rampant Israeli aggression and not to encourage Israeli intransigence under the shelter of veto, but instead to impress upon their ally a modicum of respect for the norms of international behavior."

The United Nations must impose sanctions against Israel should it "persist in its designs to annex the Holy City and to declare it as its capital," Shahi added.

Israel's U.N. Ambassador Yehuda Blum said he would present his main speech at a later time but spoke briefly to counter what he called the "shrill voice of incitement, hatred and fanaticism" coming from Pakistan.

He suggested the issue of Jerusalem was being used to hide the Islamic countries' concern over the six-month Soviet intervention in Afghanistan. "Is Jerusalem being abused here for the sake of concerns connected with Kabul?" Blum asked. Kabul is the Afghan capital.

Israel made West Jerusalem its capital when the Jewish state was founded in 1948 and since the war 13 years ago, has treated the whole city as its capital. The status has not been confirmed by written law, but a number of government offices are in East Jerusalem and on Sunday it was announced that Prime Minister Menachem Begin was moving his office to the eastern sector.

The council debate was requested following an earlier Israeli government announcement in May that it would back an opposition bill introduced in the Knesset, or Parliament, declaring all of Jerusalem the capital.

The move infuriated Begin's partner in peace, Egyptian President Anwar Sadat, and led to his suspension of year-long negotiations on Palestinian self-rule on the West Bank of the Jordan River and Gaza Strip. Sadat had also sought autonomy for Arabs in East Jerualem.

The issue was raised in Tuesday's debate by Egyptian U.N. Ambassador Nabil A. Elaraby, who said East Jerusalem's Palestinian inhabitants "are definitely entitled to exercise their sacred right to self-determination."

Petty youth crimes keep man from being naturalized

NEW YORK (AP) — Still haunted by the petty crimes of his youth, a 56-year-old man has apparently lost his fight for U.S. citizenship because he stole olives and some tree bark to feed and warm his family in war-torn Sicily.

The 2nd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals on Tuesday told Michele Chiaramonte it sympathized with him but could not overrule the Immigration and Naturalization Service's denial of his citizenship application.

"We are not unmindful of the seeming harshness in turning the petitioner away because of two minor criminal escapades committed in his youth," wrote Judge Thomas J. Meskill.

"The regulation of immigration is a matter entrusted to Congress and we are not free to substitute our judgment for that of the national legislature merely because the statutory scheme dictates a severe or unfortunate result in a particular case."

It was not immediately clear whether Chiaramonte, who has been seeking U.S. citizenship for nine years, could be deported. That would mean saying goodbye to his sprawling family, bidding farewell to his brand new granddaughter.

"His family is all here," Tony Chiaramonte said for his cousin, who speaks no English. "I don't feel like this is right."

Chiaramonte said in his court papers that he was convicted by a court in Partinco, Sicily, of stealing 60 pounds of olives in late 1943. He was jailed for 15 days and fined. He said he stole the olives because his family needed food.

Four months later, he was caught stealing tree bark from private property to produce fuel for his family's oven. He confessed and received a suspended sentence.

The convictions thwarted his first attempt to come to the U.S. in 1970, 20 years after his father and two brothers had emigrated. In 1971, he managed to gain permission to visit his ailing father, now 88.

His application for citizenship was later rejected, but he was undaunted. According to the legal papers, he overstayed his visa and arranged for his wife and two sons to be smuggled into the United States through Canada.

As his case dragged on, he got a job as a porter and settled in the Astoria section of Queens. Down the street was Tony Chiaramonte, nearby were Michele's brothers, father, and two sisters.

Death toll at 2,000 in India

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — The discovery of a mass grave in the village of Athara Card has pushed the death toll in violence between local tribes and immigrant Bengalis in northeastern India to 2,000, the Indian Express newspaper reported today.

Tribesmen surrounded the village, set it on fire and "systematically hacked to death about 1,000 inhabitants," a witness told the Express. The newspaper report orginated in the Tripura state capital of Agartala, located about 250 miles east of Calcutta.

The victims, members of the Hindu Bengali community, emmigrated to India from predominantly Moslem Bangladesh.

Casualties rose today in Thai-Cambodian conflict

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Estimates of civilian casualties rose to between 600 and 1,000 wounded as Vietnamese forces widened their military operations along the Thai-Cambodian border today.

The International Red Cross reported 223 wounded Cambodian refugees at the vast Khao I Dang camp, "several hundred" at the border encampment of Nong Chan, and 350 wounded Thais in Aranyaprathet, 140 miles east of Bangkok.

The Red Cross and the U.N. Children's Fund rushed medical teams and food to several large groups of Cambodians uprooted in the fighting, including 10,000 at Kok Sung, 5,000 at Nong Chan and up to 15,000 in Nong Samet.

Tens of thouands of others were believed to have fled into forested areas or were under Vietnamese control.

The Thai command said more reinforcements were being moved in to sweep away temaining Vietnamese positions inside Thai territory in a 35-mile stretch north of Aranyaprathet.

Most of the Vietnamese troops who struck into Thailand three days ago were back inside Cambodia but apparently dug in along the border and capable of raking Thai positions with small arms fire and artillery.

The Thai command estimated that up to 10,000 Vietnamese troops were deployed along the border inside Cambodia to the north and south of Aranyaprathet.

Program helps deal with death

CHARLESTON, W.Va. (AP) — Jacqueline Johnson can't predict the day or the hour she will die, but she knows it will be soon. And she is ready.

"It's not that I've given up. I just decided I would use what time I had," said the 65-year-old Martinsburg woman, terminally ill with cancer.

As one of four patients involved in a recently created hospice program at City Hospital in Martinsburg, Mrs. Johnson has been given medical care along with the psychological support to choose how she will live her final few months.

Hospice programs, designed to ease the mental and physical pain accompanying terminal illness, stress home care with support from trained and volunteer medical teams.

THE FIRST STEP is acceptance of death.

For Mrs. Johnson, that acceptance came last fall when a doctor confirmed her suspicions with his diagnosis of cancer.

"I knew what was wrong with me before I went to the doctor," explained Mrs. Johnson, a microbiologist who worked in hospitals for 44 years. "I have a tumor in my esophagus. I'm going to die of starvation eventually."

Her physician, Dr. Timothy Bowers, describes Mrs. Johnson as a "remarkable woman."

"Not every patient can accept this kind of program. Some persons cannot accept the fact that they have a terminal disease and are going to die," he said.

"THE ESSENSE OF the hospice program is to make that remaining time as useful as it possibly can be, to concentrate on living, not dying."

Mrs. Johnson said she is putting her remaining time to good use.

"Some people have heart attacks and strokes and don't get a chance to say goodbye," she said. "I've made a will now and I'm working on a little bit of the family history."

While there is life, she said, neither she nor her son, who lives nearby, will mourn death.

"I think I made as a good a choice as there is," she said. "There's no really good solution, and I've made my turn in the road. It's no use looking back, I'm too far gone."

MRS. JOHNSON LOOKS "rather bony, now." She said she's not in pain, but feels "rather blah."

"I was hoping I'd feel really good. I suppose that's expecting too much. But it's not as bleak as it sounds."

The hospice concept is spreading throughout the country, and citizen groups in Charleston, Beckley, Oak Hill and Parkersburg are looking into such programs, according to a West Virginia health agency.

The West Virginia Health Systems Agency is expected to adopt guidelines for hospice programs in the next few months.

Mrs. Johnson said she hopes hospice programs will change people's attitudes toward death:

"IT'S ONLY NATURAL for people to like a happy ending to the story. Most doctors are trained to fight illness and hope to win. They feel much better if their patients get well. Doctors are a little embarrassed when they don't — they feel as if they're on the losing side.

"And it's interesting how other people treat you. When you get ill they shout at you. Everything must be impaired, they think, including your hearing."

A few months ago, Mrs. Johnson helped train some of the hospice program volunteers. "To give them the patient's view," she explained with a laugh. "I tell them the patients just want to manage to die as comfortably as they can."

Bowers said all patients must be referred to the program by a physician. They are given pain killers when they say they need it, and counseling is available for family members after the death, he said.

Mrs. Johnson plans to stay at her home alone "and be independent for as long as possible."

"In some ways it makes it easier when you know it's almost hopeless," Mrs. Johnson said. 'You take what you have and make the most of it."

Get your little foot in 'The Great American Foot' exhibition

LUBBOCK — "Put your little foot, put your little foot, put your little foot right down," and you could prove to have a most unusual foot.

Sunday, The Museum of Texas Tech University wants you to put your best foot forward in contests which will mark the opening of "The Great American Foot" exhibition.

Art, crafts, music and photographs will bring "the foot" right down to West Texas earth.

Contestants will compare their tootsies during judging of the longest, shortest, widest, narrowest and most talented feet. The contests from 2 to 4 p.m. are open to the public.

Entrants also can vie for the longest toes, ugliest tennis shoes, slickest cowboy boots and most original footwear awards. Those interested in competing should call Judy Hunter at 806-742-2499.

The exhibition was organized by the Museum of Contemporary Crafts of the American Crafts Council in New York. The contests were devised by the museum staff at Texas Tech. Arts and crafts by more than 75 U.S. foot and footwear art creators will be displayed through Aug. 3.

Whether stepping first on the moon or a continent, marching for social reforms or war, dancing or running, jumping or kicking, shuffling or stomping, the foot can be found parading through most if not all art forms. Ceramic, wood, glass and fiberglass sculpture and fiber, nylon and leather footcoverings are among the exhibits from the artists.

Fantasy footwear crocheted, beaded, fiber-filled, tie-dyed, cast, hand-built, slab-built, curved, painted, varnished, molded, wet-formed, feathered, glazed and quilted will also be shown.

There will be a pair of boots with 1,600 mother-of-pearl buttons, goat hair, black satin and suede; another pair made of cowhide, clay face, silk and bird's heads.

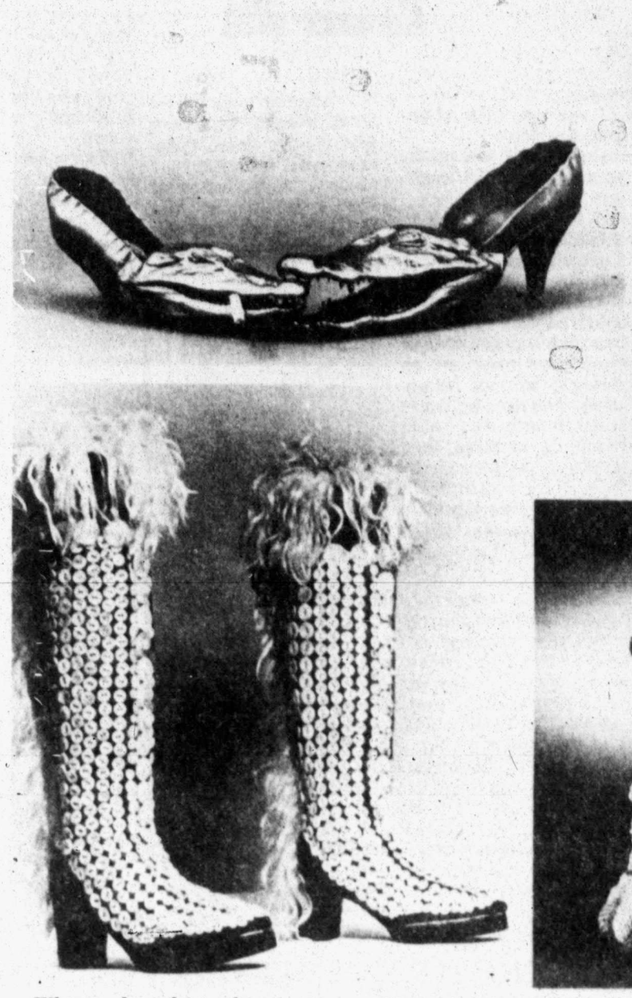
Photographs by Aaron Siskind, Eve Sonneman and Ralph Gibson focus on images wrought by foot and shoe.

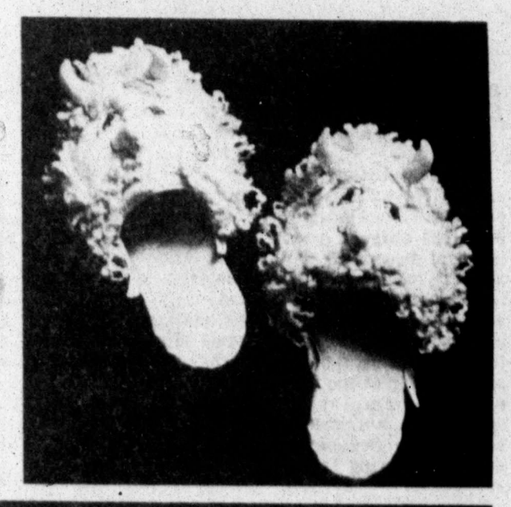
The historical selections reflect America's varied ethnic origins. They include late 19th Century French satin slippers, Afghanistan boots with silk embroidery, Japanese clogs, beaded Sioux Indian moccasins from about 1830, Yugoslavian shoes, Morroccan slippers, a Chinese shoe of satin and ribbons and turn-of-the-century high button shoes. Baby shoes are also in the show.

Among the 20th Century designs are 1938 Ferragamo sandals, 1940 kid pumps by Seymour Troy, 1964 patent leather boots by Pierre Cardin and 1965 stocking boots by Herbert Levine.

Shoes worn by such famous people as Agnes DeMille, Richard Burton, Mary Martin and the rock group Kiss, are shown beside speciality shoes for sports and NASA space shots.

Music accompanies the show with marches and waltzes joining the Charleston and such songs as "Tiptoe Through the Tulips," "These Boots Are Made for Walking" and "Shuffle Off to Buffalo."





Why go barefoot when you can stick your toes between the teeth of two alligators, one of which has a nicotine habit, top left. Or you can wear the devil around the house every day, top right; slip your toes into crocheted foot gloves, bottom right; or you can button up your "high button" knee-length button-and-tassled boots. These and other exhibits are part of "The Great American Foot" show at The Museum of Texas Tech University June 29-Aug. 3.

DEAR ABBY

Don't feel guilty about true feelings

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I are at odds over a family problem. A friend recently asked if he could spend the weekend at our home, as he was coming to town on business. I told him I was sorry but we would not be in town. Then he asked if he could stay at our home anyway. I said, "No, I would be uneasy having anyone in our home during our absence, but perhaps you can make it another weekend when we can all be together."

My husband agreed with my response, as this man wasn't a very close friend. Where we disagreed was with regard to relatives and close friends.

My mother-in-law is coming to town, and she has asked for access to our home in our absence. My husband says that's fine, but, Abby, I am very uncomfortable with the idea (we both don't get along with her as it is), and I think it was presumptuous for her to ask.

I am a very private person, and I don't want anyone in my home when I am not there. If she (or anyone else) is too cheap to spend the night at a motel, I will pay for it. It will be well worth it to me.

I feel this way about my own family and close friends as well. What is your opinion?—NO ABSENTEE HOSTESS

DEAR NO: Some people cheerfully allow friends and relatives to use their homes in their absence, but since you aren't one of them, it's your right to feel as you do. So stick to your guns and don't apologize or feel guilty.

CONFIDENTIAL TO F. B. IN LONGVIEW, TEXAS: Secondhand smoke irritates me, and so does the smoker, but I find that the more I like the smoker, the less the smoke irritates me.

Do you hate to write letters because you don't know what to say? How to write thank-you notes, sympathy letters, congratulations, how to decline and accept invitations and how to write an interesting letter are included in Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for all Occasions." Send $1 and a long, stamped (28 cents), self-addressed envelope to: Abby in care of this newspaper.

Ancient custom brings marriage

TOKYO (AP) — The scene: a Tokyo hotel lobby. A young woman, dressed in a kimono, escorted by an older woman, waits anxiously. A young man approaches, also with escort. The couple exchanges greetings, polite bows, and nervous smiles.

The meeting is called an omiai (pronounced oh-me-eye). These arranged introductions of young women to marriage-minded men have been part of Japanese social life for centuries.

Before World War II, families searched out a suitable spouse for their son or daughter, arranged a formal meeting, and with few exceptions the couple married shortly thereafter.

Most young Japanese now meet and marry in ways similar to Westerners, in so-called "love marriages." But the omiai still accounts for about 30 percent of the 900,000 marriages performed every year, according to government figures.

The omiai process usually begins with a nervous mother.

If her daughter is in her early 20s, and especially if she is approaching the critical, do-or-die age of 25, the mother begins nudging her daughter in the direction of matrimony.

"Why don't we try an omiai?" she might suggest.

If the girl lacks a steady boyfriend interested in marrying, she will probably agree. The omiai begins with a color photograph, accompanied by a written description of the young person's education, age, family background and hobbies.

Artisans and craftsmen may be in financial trouble

ROCK CAVE, W.Va. (AP) — Scottie Wiest lives on a remote, mountaintop farm in central West Virginia and practices a craft that dates back to man's beginnings.

The short, dark-haired woman is a potter. And although she lives with her head in the clouds and her hands in the dirt, so to speak, she says she can see big trouble looming on the horizon for the state's hundreds of artisans and craftsmen.

Mrs. Wiest recently got a taste of what may lie ahead this summer, when the craftsmen take their wares to the various fairs that have sprung up around West Virginia over the past few years.

"I was at a big craft fair in Baltimore," she said. "And, the number of people I saw agonizing over a $5 purchase made me think that the fairs may be in serious trouble because of the economic crunch."

But she said crafts people, at least the ones who make useful, low-priced, everyday items, had a good history of surviving hard times.

"Some of today's crafts people may have to make the decision as to whether they want to pursue 'art' or turn out everyday, useful things," she said. "The way things look now, only rich people will be able to buy the big, expensive pieces."

Mrs. Wiest, who has sold at the State Arts & Crafts Fair at Ripley since 1968, concentrates on practical earthenware items, such as cups, bowls, pitchers and the like. The Upshur County resident is recognized as one of Appalachia's top potters, and is in demand at fairs across the country.

"I'm getting ready right now to go to a show in Dallas," she said, as she sat in the large studio she and her husband, Jim, built several years ago. "On a good, productive day, I'll throw between 50 and 100 pounds of clay."

Living today ...

By SHARON A. HILLIS
County Extension Agent
Home Economics

If those intensified rays of West Texas sunshine are beginning to add not only to your physical discomfort, but also are increasing your internal discomforts that are showing up in the hasty words, short on patience, extreme fatigue, another yell at the kids employee-employer, spouse, etc., it's time for some inner reflections on an item of living known as "stress" — a small word with big significance in our daily lives.

A large amount of research has been devoted to this line item in our American way of life and more is being carried out each day. One established theory defines stress in this way: Any activity or emotion triggers the body's stress-mechanism to some degree. This means laughter, anger, eating, talking, sleeping — anything — creates a certain amount of stress within each of us. The trick is in learning what actions cause us to react to (negative response — refuse to face the situation) or act upon (positive response — dealing with circumstances) any given situation. Knowing more about ourselves creates a sense of accomplishment within the self and more enjoyable living. However, whether the stress is coming from positive or negative experiences, each daily living experience increases our "stress score". To minimize the effects of stress, we can apply some techniques, general principles and preventive measures to our living routines.

PRINCIPLES FOR MINIMIZING THE EFFECTS OF STRESS

1. Get enough sleep.
2. Take care of yourself physically.
3. Allow yourself regular vacations.
4. Attempt to deal with stress realistically.
5. Organize your life.
6. Allow yourself to relax.
7. Try to talk about your problems.
8. Cultivate and utilize your faith and value system.

STRESS MANEUVERS

1. Breathing — under stress, the body is often deprived of oxygen. To improve oxygen intake close your eyes, sit up straight as you inhale slowly and deeply; count silently one, two; hold the air in on three, then let the air seep out; four, five; hold again; six, seven. Breathe this way for 10 minutes. Open eyes.

2. Exercise — walking, jogging and swimming are particularly good exercise. However, desk exercises can also be good. Try to raise your shoulders up to the ears. Hold to a count of four, then drop the shoulders. Repeat as many times as needed. A variation is to rotate both shoulders, then rotate one at a time. Back, arms and neck all respond to rotation exercises.

3. A mind vacation — sit in a chair with both feet on the floor. Close your eyes. Imagine your favorite, most beautiful spot — mountains, the Hill Country, South Padre or the Piney Woods. Relax there — feel the breeze blow, smell the fresh air, hear the birds. Stay on your mind vacation at least 10 minutes.

4. Talk to someone — anything that can be shared is a lesser burden because two now carry the load.

5. Avoid self-medication — overuse of alcohol or drugs makes stress worse. In the long run, you have to get over both the stress and the hangover.

If you're trying to change your high-pressure living conditions, remember that change requires two elements — alternatives and nourishment. Everyone needs a second chance (alternatives) and to be listened to, appreciated and loved; and given a chance to share themselves (nourishment).

Small claims court can help consumers

Copley News Service

Even the most discriminating shoppers and careful consumers will occasionally be taken advantage of by some business. The old adage, "Caveat emptor," let the buyer beware, is still true, despite the advances made in consumer protection. One answer for such problems is small claims court.

There are a few other steps that can be taken before legal action. Local consumer agencies can be helpful in getting your money back or goods replaced. One note of caution in asking for help from agencies — some groups are actually trade associations that may have divided loyalties. Even if the associations' motives are pure, such trade organizations lack the power to coerce their members into any action.

Another possibility is to turn to media consumer aides. Many communities have "Consumer Hot Line" type forums on television or columns in the newspaper that can bring adverse publicity to vendors.

But if these methods fail, consider small claims court.

This court is truly a people's court, and can be used to solve a wide range of consumer woes. No lawyer is needed and the only restriction is the amount of money you must be willing to sue for.

Small claims courts usually limit the amount of the suit to under $500. You can use the small claims court even if your suit is for more than $500. You may forfeit your right to sue for the rest of the amount in civil court. You can sue only for money in this court. In other words, you can't sue to have the plumber fix your sink or other such service. And since you are suing for money, it will be necessary for you to collect all relevant information, receipts and other data that could be used as evidence in the proceedings.

If appropriate, you may wish to call witnesses on your own behalf, and they can be subpoenaed if they are unwilling to testify. Both parties have the right to cross-examine any witnesses. You may be able to present your side of the story without witnesses, and, of course, you can also be cross-examined.

Filing a claim should cost no more than $5 in most areas. The clerk will assign a court date and will issue necessary subpoenas and notices. It is very important for you to have the exact and legal name of the business you intend to sue. Do not use abbreviations or nicknames.

Women not getting fair deal from program

Copley News Service

As Katrina Kilian sees it, lots of women are getting a raw deal from Social Security while men reap more benefits, because federal regulations just aren't keeping up with social changes.

Kilian makes that observation despite being a field representative for the Social Security Administration.

And even though she's a comfortably salaried, fully employed single woman who can expect to receive at her retirement monthly checks parallel to those of any man in a similar economic position.

But there are other women — those who are divorced, those who drop out of the labor market temporarily to bear and raise children, and others — whose retirement benefits are called less than fair.

CRITICS SAY SOCIAL Security sho't-changes many women — including divorcees and women who take time out of their careers to raise a family — because written into the laws is a philosophy that man is the breadwinner and woman the helpmate.

Women working in the home don't count much so far as earned Social Security benefits are concerned, even though housewives perform duties that have financial value.

Now Kilian isn't incensed about all that, because she knows that changes come slowly, that women's lot has already been much improved and that there is a movement afoot to give them more in retirement — and disability — benefits.

According to former Congresswoman Martha Keys, special adviser to the secretary of the Department of Health and Human Services, the Carter administration and lawmakers have been forthright in acknowledging the problems, and new legislation may come in the next session of Congress.

A special two-year study at the highest levels of government has just been completed with suggestions, which, if they become law, could help erase the differences that exist between men and women entitled to Social Security benefits.

JUST WHAT KILIAN and hundreds of thousands of other women have been waiting for.

The study was conducted by the Social Security Administration, members of Congress, the Justice Department's Task Force on Sex Discrimination and the Department of Health and Human Services.

It suggests reforms that, in effect, would take some benefits away from high wage earners and turn them over to lower wage earners and others who are at a disadvantage with existing Social Security regulations.

The readjustment in benefits would not necessarily call for a higher Social Security tax on wage earners.

"Under the present system, women are penalized when they quit their jobs temporarily to raise children," Kilian said.

Ray's brother quizzed in Jordan shooting case

ST. LOUIS (AP) — FBI agents questioned John Larry Ray, brother of the convicted assassin of Martin Luther King Jr., about the sniper shooting last month of civil rights leader Vernon Jordan Jr., the St. Louis Post Dispatch reported Tuesday.

Ray, bother of James Earl Ray, was captured Monday as he walked along a highway near Alton, Ill. He had been sought as a federal escapee after failing to report to a St. Louis halfway house in February to finish his sentence for a previous bank robbery conviction.

He was wanted for questioning in a May 30 bank robbery at Liberty, Ill.

In a copyright story, the Post-Dispatch quoted FBI Director William H. Webster as saying agents wanted to know where John Larry Ray was when Jordan, president of the National Urban League, was wounded May 29 outside a Fort Wayne, Ind., motel.

Although the FBI does not consider Ray a suspect, Webster said there were similarities between the shooting of King and Jordan that warranted the questioning. He said said both men were stalked by their assailants.

He said that a bank robbery financed the King assassination.

King was killed in Memphis, Tenn., in 1968. James Earl Ray is now in prison in that state.

John Larry Ray was re-captured by a former staff investigator for the House Select Committee on Investigations, which had questioned the Ray brothers on the King assassination.

Madison County Deputy Conrad Baetz said he was taking his wife shopping when they drove past John Larry Ray.

Baetz said he called for help, then approached Ray from behind.

"To distract him and confirm his identity, I called him by his nickname 'Jack,'" said Baetz. "When he turned around, that confirmed to me that he was John Larry Ray, so I stuck my gun in his face and told him he was under arrest.

"After he had been patted down and handcuffed, I asked if he remembered me," said Baetz. "He looked at me and said, 'Oh, hi, Conrad..'"

Newborn baby found in leaves

TYLER, Texas (AP) — A baby boy found crying in a pile of leaves near an exclusive neighborhood south of here may have been left to die by the unwed mother who gave birth to the child just two hours earlier, investigators said.

Chief Deputy Jim Collins of the Smith County sheriff's department said the infant was found by construction workers early Tuesday morning and rushed to Tyler's Mother Francis Hospital.

Hospital spokeswoman Beverly Mason said both the nine and a half pound infant and the 16-year-old mother, who officials declined to identify, were listed in good condition Tuesday.

Mrs. Mason said physicians estimated the child was two hours old when it was discovered about 8:30 a.m.

Collins said it appeared that someone had tried to hide the baby in the wooded area behind the affluent home where the young mother lived with her parents.

"It had been left there for some time. Does that sound like someone planned to return to take care of the baby?" asked Collins. He said the incident was still under investigation.

Collins said deputies found "blood and things of that nature" near the spot where the child was found, leading them to believe the baby was born outside.

Kennedy spurned by platform writers

WASHINGTON (AP) — Spurned by Democratic platform writers, Sen. Edward M. Kennedy's supporters vow to carry their version of the party's 1980 gospel to New York for a convention confrontation this August over President Carter's policies.

The Democratic Platform Committee, ending four days of deliberations, produced a document on Tuesday that tightly tailored the party's views to those of the Carter administration and rejected major Kennedy proposals on the economy, energy, social programs and foreign policy.

After the committee adjourned until the party's Aug. 11-14 convention, Kennedy aides said the Massachusetts senator probably will carry six or eight of his key differences with Carter to the convention floor.

In a speech prepared for delivery in New York City today to the Service Employes International Union, Kennedy recounted nearly all the issues around which his campaign is built and said he "will ask the Democratic Party to establish a rule that after the platform is approved, any candidate who wishes to be placed in nomination must state, in writing, in advance, ... any reservations to specific planks."

Vice President Walter F. Mondale said Tuesday that the administration would, in fact, feel obligated to spell out its differences with the platform. "There is nothing in the law that says the president has to agree with every word," Monday told National Public Radio. "We do have a responsibility to say where we disagree ... and we will do so."

Kennedy has until Friday to file his proposed minority planks with the Democratic National Committee.

Kennedy's chief issues adviser, Peter Edelman, said likely candidates for floor fights are Kennedy proposals for specific anti-recession programs, wage price controls, recontrol of oil prices, immediate enactment of comprehensive national health insurance, elimination of oil tax breaks, a slowdown in the development of the MX missile and opposition to a resumption of military draft registration.

Kennedy delegates were outnumbered on the platform committee by about a 2-1 margin and they also are in a minority at the full convention, but Edelman insis ted that Kennedy would continue his quest of both the presidential nomination an d a redirection of the party's platform toward its traditional values.

Throughout the long primary campaign and more recently in the platform committee debate, the Kennedy forces accused the Carter administration of abandoning a 50-year liberal party tradition of placing full employment and federal aid to the needy ahead of the concern to curb inflation.

But the platform committee lined up behind Carter's argument that he remains committed to traditional party goals but that Democrats must face up to the "new realities" of high inflation, energy shortages and international instability in designing specific programs.

If there was osue that cut the deepest between the two camps, it was the jobs vs. inflation debate. Carter supporters said the fight against unemployment and inflation must be waged simultaneously, while the Kennedy camp argued that fighting for jobs must always take priority over fighting inflation.

The debate, carried on in a downdown Washington hotel, was often heated and raucous. At times, tempers flared and emotions spilled out. Occasionally, confus ion reigned as chaotic stacks of amendments and the strain of marathon sessions lasting into the next morning got the better of exhausted delegates. In general, though, cordiality prevailed, with neither side exhibiting the kind of nastiness or bitter division that might preclude a post-convention re-unification.

"It's been loud, it's been angry, it's been contentious," Detroit Mayor Coleman Young, the platform committee chairman, said of the proceedings. "I think it will have a unifying effect."

Stuart Eizenstat, Carter's chief domestic adviser, said the platform debate "is a step that has taken us to unification rather than a step backward to divisiveness."

Eizenstat said the differences that separate the two candidates pale in comparison to the goals they share in common. "The real differences are between the Democratic Party and an extremely conservative Republican, Ronald Reagan," he said.

Carter forces prevailed on every platform committee vote, but they did so in some cases only by agreeing to compromises in the face of an embarrassing defeat of an administration policy. On Monday, for example, the administration accepted a plank to phase out nuclear power plants despite Carter's support of continu ed nuclear power, and went along with a stronger pro-abortion plank.

Approval of registration funds expected today

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nearing the end of a long and heated battle over peacetime draft registration, Congress is preparing to give President Carter enough money to sign up an estimated 4 million young men in the weeks ahead.

The House was expected to give final congressional approval today to a measure appropriating $13.3 million to take the Selective Service System out of "deep standby" and conduct registration for the first time since 1975.

Even opponents conceded it would be passed and sent to the White House for Carter's signature. The only remaining step then would be for Carter to issue an executive order directing men born in 1960 and 1961 to register, and telling them when to report, perhaps as early as late July.

Selective Service officials have said they will start the program four to five weeks after the money is received.

Young men will be required to go to a local post office to sign a registration form. The program will be spread out over two weeks, with young men born in 1960 registering the first week and teen-agers born in 1961 registering the second week.

Failure to register is a felony carrying a maximum penalty of five years in prison and a $10,000 fine.

While the president has authority to order registration, he would have to win approval from Congress to bring back an actual draft.

Women are not required to register. Despite Carter's initial request to include women in the program, Congress made it clear it would not go along with that and the administration did not push the matter.

The American Civil Liberties Union has promised to file suit challenging the constitutionality of an all-male program.

Registration opponents vowed to conduct nation-wide demonstrations that could tie up the post offices during the program, and also to protest at the Republican and Democratic national conventions this summer.

Opponents, led by the Committee Against Registration and the Draft, said they would distribute gummed labels to attach to registration forms, saying, "I am registering under protest."

They also are organizing a campaign to "register against the draft" — inviting Americans to print the words "I am registering against the draft" on a post card and to send it to the organization in Washington.

Carter and his allies argued registration would save 90 to 100 days in mobilizing recruits in an emergency.

But critics of the plan noted that a Selective Service report said registration would save only seven days. Selective Service officials disavowed the report's conclusions after Carter endorsed registration.

Modern 'Swiss Family Robinson'

PERTH, Australia (AP) — Four children and three adults shipwrecked on a remote island off western Australia survived five days by drinking seawater distilled in a pressure cooker, eating fish caught with shark bait from an improvised hook and staying warm with fires started with a binocular lens.

The techniques they learned in scouting, and one of the survivors said the experience reminded him of "Swiss Family Robinson."

The seven were rescued Tuesday when a trawler sighted a makeshift flag they had made out of their sunken yacht's mast and a sail which they placed on a high cliff.

The seven were the yacht's skipper-owner, David Foreman, 37, a former Boy Scout; Dennis Vlasschaert, 37, a Boy Scout leader; his wife, Susan, a 36-year-old Cub Scout leader, and the couple's four children, all with scout training — Simon, 16; Nicola, 15; Timothy, 11 and Robin, 10.

Exhausted, hungry and suffering from mild exposure but otherwise unhurt, the group was taken to Carnarvon, where they had set out last Wednesday on a fishing expedition.

The boat carrying Foreman and the Vlasschaerts, from Safety Bay, 30 miles south of here, crashed early Thursday at the base of a rock cliff on Dorrie Island, 29 miles from Carnarvon. The town is 600 miles north of Perth.

Foreman said Mrs. Vlasschaert "picked up rocks, built a low rock wall as a barrier against the cold winds and rain because we were all shivering." They were dressed only in pajamas, jeans or shorts, he said.

"When we had no fire for two days, she took the lens of a set of binoculars and used the sunlight to start a fire."

Foreman said he remembered from his scouting days that a pressure cooker retrieved from the yacht could be used to distill drinking water from the sea.

"Everyone was assigned to some tasks, including one which involved watching for debris floating ashore from the wreckage. We picked up a mattress, wooden shelving, a cupboard and decking." They used a sailcloth as a makeshift tent.

Vlasschaert said he had borrowed a large hook from a friend before going out and that one of his sons placed it on a fishing line tossed in the sea before going to bed Wednesday night.

"The next day when we were diving on the wreck, I found the line and pulled it towards me. I nearly jumped backwards when I saw a shark hooked to it." The group used the shark meat for bait and caught Red Snapper with gear salvaged from the wreck, he said, adding that the only other food was a can of tinned fruit from the yacht.

Sharp food price increase forecast

WASHINGTON (AP) — Reduced supplies of beef, pork and poultry are likely to cause overall food prices to rise more sharply in 1981 than this year, says a top government economist.

Food prices are expected to increase about 8.5 percent this year, down from a 10.9 percent jump in 1979, Agriculture Department official J.B. Penn told reporters Tuesday.

Asked if 1981 food prices are likely to go up faster than this year, Penn gave a tentative "yes" response.

"We haven't (made an official estimate) because we don't even know what the size of this year's crop is going to be, there's so much uncertainty," he said. "But, if we have what one would expect is a pretty normal crop this year and nothing major happens in 1981, I'd say the answer is yes, that you could look for that, just given where we are in the cattle cycle, what's happening to pork, what's happening to poultry."

Recent surveys indicate hog and poultry producers plan to respond to declining prices by significantly reducing the size of their breeding herds and flocks in the months ahead.

'Oh, what a feeling' as Chrysler gets first loan

By GUY DARST

DETROIT (AP) — There's a car advertisement whose catch line is "Oh, what a feeling!"

The ad is not Chrysler's, but it probably expresses the No.3 automaker's sentiment after its 12-month campaign to stay in business was fulfilled Tuesday.

The company received a desperately needed $500 million infusion Tuesday as part of a federally guaranteed loan program and restructuring of its $4.4 billion debt.

Chrysler officials say the money will go toward paying its 19,000 suppliers — whose $175 million in bills has gone unpaid this month — and launching the new "K-car" compacts this fall.

Tuesday's ceremony saved Chrysler from tottering into bankruptcy, officials said. It also concluded two weeks of frantic work by company and government officials trying to get about 20 reluctant banks to join in the fiscal rescue plan. The congressionally approved plan for Chrysler requires lenders, suppliers, labor unions and governmental agencies to join the effort.

And after the Chrysler Loan Guarantee Board gave its OK in Washington, there was still another nerve-wracking period before the final check-passing. A fire in a New York office building Monday night occurred where lawyers had been handling some of the Chrysler agreement's paperwork and the signing was delayed 90 minutes.

"What else can go wrong?" a Chrysler executive wondered to a caller during the delay.

Nothing else did, however, and Chrysler's quest ended with the passing of a check by the investment banking firm of Salomon Brothers to Chrysler Treasurer William C. McGagh for $496.75 million. The sum represented the proceeds of the sale of $500 million in 10-year notes at an interest rate of 10.35 percent, less fees of $3.25 million for the underwriting syndicate that sold the notes to the public.

Government officials originally estimated Chrysler would have to pay 15 percent interest, but rates dropped drastically in recent weeks. The lower rate means a savings to Chrysler of $23.25 million a year in the early years the notes are outstanding.

The notes were almost all sold during the afternoon, Salomon Brothers said.

Deputy Treasury Secretary Robert Carswell acknowledged that the loan "has some real chance of not working out."

"Chrysler's eventual return to pre-eminence in the auto industry will require continued imagination, hard work and dedication," he said in a statement issued after the board's action.

Chrysler lost $1.1 billion last year and by some estimates could lose almost as much this year. The company says it expects to draw another $300 million in guaranteed loans this year, probably in July.

Final approval of the guarantees frees funds earlier approved by states committed to helping Chrysler — $5 million by Delaware and $20 million by Indiana.

Some of the money from the notes will be used in launching Chrysler's new front-wheel drive "K-car" compacts scheduled for introduction this fall.

Big Brother

Gary Coleman (left), as pint-sized Arnold, gets some self-defense pointers from big brother Willis (Todd Bridges) when a confrontation with a bully seems imminent in the "Diff'rent Strokes" episode, "Return of the Gooch," Wednesday, June 25, on NBC.

"Diff'rent Strokes" is about a white New York millionaire who adopts two orphaned black brothers and gives them a new Park Avenue life style. Conrad Bain stars as Phillip Drummond, a concerned and tender man who promised his dying housekeeper that he would raise her two young sons, Arnold and Willis, played by Gary Coleman and Todd Bridges.

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Thursday, June 26, 1980

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Those born on this date usually know exactly how to direct their energies to achieve what they desire. You are highly emotional and may have to curb an impulse to confide in others during the next few months. Certain career or business negotiations must be kept absolutely secret! In the next few months, you gain new respect and responsibilities because of your leadership qualities. Some travel is indicated in the fall, and by Thanksgiving, you have found a new love!

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Excellent day to finalize business deals. Accept terms in negotiations only if completely satisfied. Plan concerning home or property may have to be put on back burner for a while.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Move ahead with enthusiasm and confidence. Show others what swift and decisive action can accomplish! Luck is on your side. Distant affairs will prove more lucrative in near future.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): The promise of more money may not be the main factor in the acceptance of an employment offer. A gamble could pay off big now. Older individual's advice is right on target.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Not a good day to ask for favors. Be independent. Assess your strengths before counting your weaknesses. Be careful not to underestimate yourself!

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Take pride in doing a good job but avoid acting arrogant. Be a better listener. Welcome suggestions from younger associate. Financial matters show signs of improvement.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Use tact and others will cooperate. Going out with new friends tonight can be quite an experience. Take along some extra cash, but watch your spending. Putting on a show to impress others could backfire.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Give more thought to family responsibilities. Curb extravagance. A spirit of mischief could cause romantic problems. Show more affection towards loved ones.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Good day to get things done. If in charge of production, make sure quota is reached. Try to meet a deadline ahead of time. Someone with a sad story could attempt to pull a fast one on you!

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Work will have its regular ups and downs. Rely only on yourself. Associate may be distracted by personal concerns. Money matters require care scrutiny.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Contact business allies who can give you sound advice regarding career affairs. Constancy is one of your best qualities. Reliability impresses those in management positions and endears you to your friends.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Get out of a rut! Be willing to try new things, meet new people. Attitude of associate can be puzzling at times. Play waiting game. Make amends for your recent neglect of someone special.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Emphasis is on constructive change. Offer of higher paying position is tempting, but you might do better to stay put. Seek advice from an expert in this area.

If you asked B. Jay Becker for a good hand, he would probably reply: "I don't have one!" Mr. Becker, as he is called by even his closest friends, has a reputation for steady and error-free technique rather than the flashy plays that are more easily remembered. Here is your opportunity to study the fine dummy play of this master.

Sitting South, Mr. Becker chose to repond one spade since he intended bidding both major suits. North jump shifted to show his distributional powerhouse, then jumped in spades to allay his partner's fears about the solidity of the trump suit.

West led his fourth-best diamond, and when dummy came down, it appeared that declarer would need either the heart or the club finesse to bring home his contract. However, Mr. Becker saw at once that if clubs were 3-2 and West held the queen, neither finesse was necessary. That gave him an extra chance, which he was quick to seize.

He won the opening lead, cashed the ace and king of trumps, then ruffed a diamond with a high trump. After drawing the last trump, he led a club to the king and a club back, but instead of finessing, he rose with the ace. When the queen dropped, Mr. Becker could take the heart finesse for an overtrick.

Note that if the queen of clubs did not drop on the second round, the slam would still be cold if West started with three clubs to the queen. West would be thrown on lead with the lady and he would have to either yield a ruff-and-sluff by exiting with a diamond, or lead a heart away from the king into declarer's ace-queen.

What if East had begun with three clubs to the queen? Then declarer would have lost a club anyway by taking the normal finesse, and he would have to fall back on the heart finesse for his contract. But he would then be no worse off than if he had taken, and lost, the club finesse.

Your play to the first trick could decide the fate of the contract! A writer once remarked: "There's no such thing as a blind opening lead, only deaf opening leaders!" A gnome by any other name is just as impish

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN
AP Special Correspondent

ZURICH, Switzerland (AP) — The first thing I did when the schnellzug — the express — pulled into the Zurich station was to look around for a gnome.

Having lived in England for eight years and listened to the lamentations of a succession of Labor Party politicians, I knew the gnomes of Zurich for what they were: mischievous malevolent money manipulators responsible for most of the world's monetary problems.

Lord George Brown couldn't have said it better. For it was he who popularized the term "Gnomes of Zurich," which afterwards fell so easily from the lips of Prime Ministers Harold Wilson and Jim Callaghan.

According to William Safire's "Political Dictionary," George Brown, as British foreign secretary in 1964, accused the "gnomes of Zurich" of making a killing on the revalued pound sterling when currency speculators who downgraded Britain's credit standing forced the Labor Government to adopt another austerity budget.

A gnome, especially a neutral, non-aligned Swiss one, was a handy bogeyman for any politician to have around at election time to beat with the stick of his oratory. Gnome flogging was a standard feature of every paid party political broadcast during my tenure in the British Isles.

"The word gnome," Safire writes, "was coined by Philippus Aureolus Paracelsus, a 16th century Swiss alchemist and physician, while investigating the mechanics of mining and the diseases of miners."

He says the word gnome "is from the Greek ge-nomos, earth dweller, and originally meant a misshapen being who guarded the mines and quarries of the inner earth.... The mining derivation made Brown's phrase especially apt: in Zurich, the gnomes deal in gold, a metal that was the quest of the alchemists."

Another authority, the Rev. E. Cobham Brewer in his "Dictionary of Phrase and Fable," says gnome is from the Greek word gnoma "meaning the knowing one or wise one." He agrees, however, that they were "elemental sprites of the earth" whose main job is guarding gold and silver mines.

Wil Huygen's best selling "Gnomes" book of a few years back puts the average height (without cap) of a full grown gnome in the prime of life (about 275 years of age) at 15 centimeters, or just under six inches, which would make him knee high to a bank cuspidor. But these were forest gnomes: the wrinkle-faced bearded chaps in the pointy red hats, belted blue tunics, brown green breeches and deer fur boots.

The gnomes of Zurich are much taller — mostly normal human size, having moved to the city and experienced upward elf mobility among the species. There was no trouble finding them. They were hurrying in and out of banks all over town with an attache case in one hand and three newspapers in three different languages tucked under the other arm. There was an ageless quality about them too.

The male of the species invariably wears expensive Italian loafers dangling a gold tassle, a severely cut German suit with lapels sticking out like Japanese fans and shoulders that seem to conceal the coathangers from his last three hotels. He wears gold-framed tinted eyeglasses, chomps on a Davidoff cigar and carries his garishly visa-ed passport in a handsomely tooled Florentine leather wallet.

The female gnome favors slit-skirted tailored suits in somber business stripes, medium high heeled shoes of expensive Italian design and a blouse and scarf flaunting the name or monogram of some chic designer.

In their attache cases, gnomes carry a minicalculator, a fold-up umbrella, several financial magazines in several languages, a Swiss chocolate bar (the gnome quick lunch, for they are notoriously parsimonious with their time and money) and a plastic bottle of mineral water (gnomes are suspicious of everything, especially the local water).

Gnomes are secretive: they look at their digital watches by curling a hand over the dial, preventing non-gnomes from sneaking a free look.

Gnome conversation is a gazetteer of pesos, baht, zelotes, drachmas, rubles, krone, rupees, escudos, cruzeiros, yuan, dong, piasters and other global tender. They talk pretty much in numbers.

Ask a gnome, "How's things?" — and he or she will counter-ask if you want the computation in yen, marks or dollars.

Gnomes are easy to identify getting on a train or a street car. They always race for the window seat — or on the Trans-European Express, the seats in the vista dome car — then promptly bury their eyes in a newspaper or stack of reports. Gnomes favor expensive but conservative European cars, a Mercedes, Rover or Citroen, and invariably wear driving gloves and a state trooper-sized sun glasses behind the wheel. In general, they are stolid, almost stumpy in build, like Swiss medieval church architecture.

THE NEWSPAPER BIBLE

Stand for the right . . . . regardless

Don't just pretend that you love others: really love them. Hate what is wrong. Stand on the side of the good.

Love each other with brotherly affection and take delight in honoring each other.

Never be lazy in your work but serve the Lord enthusiastically.

Be glad for all God is planning for you. Be patient in trouble; and prayerful always.

When God's children are in need, you be the one to help them out. And get into the habit of inviting guests home for dinner or, if they need lodging, for the night.

If someone mistreats you because you are a Christian, don't curse him; pray that God will bless him.

When others are happy, be happy with them. If they are sad, share their sorrow.

Work happily together. Don't try to act big. Don't try to get into the good graces of important people, but enjoy the company of ordinary folks. And don't think you know it all!

Never pay back evil for evil. Do things in such a way that everyone can see you are honest clear through.

Don't quarrel with anyone. Be at peace with everyone, just as much as possible.

Dear friends, never avenge yourselves. Leave that to God, for He has said that He will repay those who deserve it. [Don't take the law into your own hands.]

Instead, feed your enemy if he is hungry. If he is thirsty give him something to drink and you will be "heaping coals of fire on his head." In other words, he will feel ashamed of himself for what he has done to you.

Don't let evil get the upper hand but conquer evil by doing good.

Billy D Rorick, son of Mr. and Mrs. Leroy W. Rorick of Big Spring, recently enrolled in the Army's Delayed Entry Program.

This program is designed to allow the individual to take up to one year before actually entering active duty. Additionally, this delay ensures that the individual will be able to select the training and location of assignment upon entry.

Upon entering the active Army, the individual will undertake basic traininglearning skills such as drill and ceremonies, marksmanship, map reading, tactics, military courtesy, military justice, first aid, and Army history and traditions.

After graduation, the individual will be assigned for training in a specialty field. Rorick has met the qualifications and elected to receive training as a material supply specialist.

Air National Guard Staff Sgt. David M. Balkus, whose wife, Evette, is the daughter of Julian Fisher of Big Spring, is a member of the Nebraska Air National Guard which recently returned from the annual North Atlantic Treaty Organization exercise "Dawn Patrol '80."

The exercise involved photo reconnaissance missions over central and eastern sections of the Mediterranean Sea. The exercise is designed to promote improved coordination and cooperation of multi-national forces and to demonstrate readiness to deter aggression along the southern flank of NATO influences.

Pvt. Richard J. Coleman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard J. Coleman of Big Spring, is attending basic training at Fort Leonard Wood, Mo.

During the training, students receive instruction in drill and ceremonies, weapons, map reading, tactics, military courtesy, military justice, first aid and Army history and traditions.

Pvt. Larry D. Payne, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jack H. Payne Sr. of Big Spring, recently was assigned as an infantryman with the 9th Infantry in Korea.

Senior Airman John N. Floyd, son of John N. Floyd of Midland, has arrived for duty at El Segundo, Calif., Los Angeles Air Force Station.

Airman Floyd, an administration specialist, was previously assigned at RAF Upper Heyford, England.

Oldest active policeman in Louisiana dies at 105

LAKE PROVIDENCE, La. (AP) — "I have a little age on me but I'll be here for a long time," Fagan "Pop" Gibson once said. After some 70 years on this small community's police force, Gibson has died — at age 105.

He was the oldest active duty policeman in Louisiana, and perhaps the nation, at the time of his death Monday.

"We kept him on because the man knew his job," said Police Chief Stewart Marshall.

In an interview last year, Marshall said of Gibson, "Some of the worst joints you go into, the crooks will look up and see him and stop whatever they're doing. They like him.

"His experience is invaluable. I use him with me a lot," Marshall said.

He said Gibson, whose parents were slaves, worked mainly in his later years as a school crossing guard and at school functions until he became ill last October.

Navratilova doesn't 'feel unbeatable', but...

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Defending champion Martina Navratilova raced to a 6-3, 6-0 first round victory over South African Ilana Kloss Tuesday and declared herself in great shape to win Wimbledon for the third straight year.

"I don't feel unbeatable," she said, "but I think it's right that I am the favorite."

The top seed took just 33 minutes to defeat Kloss.

Navratilova has had very little grass court match play, losing in the third round at Eastbourne last week, but said she felt "match tough."

"People say that I have not had enough match play on grass, but I feel fine," she said. "I think I am the best judge.

"I got in lots of grass court practice after losing at Eastbourne and I felt confident today and was hitting the ball sharply. I don't think one or two matches makes much difference."

Navratilova's victory was watched by her entire family, who has now been granted exit visas by the Czechoslovak government and plans to settle in Dallas.

"It's a good job that I've won Wimbledon and get extra tickets, otherwise I would have had a problem," she joked.

Navratilova, who has lost six pounds to come down to 144 — her lowest weight in seven years — said her desire to win Wimbledon seemed to increase every year.

"Of course you want to keep winning," she said. "But my desire to in this tournament seems to be getting greater. Once you know what it feels like you want to carry on."

Navratilova is seeded to meet 17-year-old Tracy Austin in the women's singles final and said she felt both players had improved this year.

"Sure Tracy has got bigger and better," said Martina, "but I've also got better. I have to feel this way.

"I feel I can do more with the ball than last year, but so can Tracy. I just hope I've stayed ahead.

"I have been working a lot on my topspin backhand and on my second serve, which is better, deeper and more forceful now. I also think I'm moving better. I certainly feel quicker on my feet.

"Despite that I don't feel over-confident.

"I know if somebody catches me when I'm not playing well I could lose. You have to be realistic. Sure, grass suits my game but it is also a great equalizer if you get some bad bounces and maybe some wind."

Martina said the pressure on her increased each year.

"When you've never won, people don't expect anything from you," she remarked. "As defending champion I find people expect a bit more."

She refused to accept the opinion that the title would be won by either herself or Austin.

"Trachhas had the best results, but Chris (Evert-Lloyd) is coming back strongly and you never know what Evonne (Cawley) will do. Also, I have to meet Billie Jean King if I get to the quarters and she is a tough competitor."

Navratilova was one of the few players to beat the English weather, which wrecked the program Tuesday for the second straight day.

Austin cruised to a 6-1, 6-2 victory over another Californian, Alycia Moulton, but only a handful of other matches were completed.

Tenth-seeded Kathy Jordan scored a 6-1, 6-1 victory over Kim Sands, while eighth-seeded Australian Dianne Fromholtz ousted American Roberta McCallum 7-5, 6-3.

Wojtek Fibak of Poland, seeded No.13 in the men's singles, came from behind to defeat Mark Edmondson of Australia in a match that was spread over more than 24 hours.

Edmondson led 5-1 in the fourth set Monday night and squandered three match points. Fibak took the set and then took Tuesday's final set 10-8 to win 5-7, 6-4, 3-6, 7-6, 10-8.

Roscoe Tanner, seeded fifth, cruised to a 6-2, 6-0, 6-4 victory over Jiri Hrebec of Czechoslovakia.

The tournament committee faced a huge backlog of almost 100 matches from the first two days and faced a difficult task in drawing up Wednesday's order of play.

Perlman blanks El Paso again

EL PASO—Jon Perlman, who shutout El Paso 9-0 in his previous start at Midland, made it two in a row Wednesday night by whitewashing the Diablos, 7-0, on an eight-hitter to square the current Dudley Field series at 1-1.

Perlman was simply overpowering, inducing the Diablos to hit 25 ground balls, which was even better than the 16 he forced at Cubs Stadium. Perhaps the magnitude of Perlman's Dudley Field feat can be gleaned by the fact that it was the first shutout here since the El Paso-Jackson championship game two years ago.

"I've never done it before," the righthander who was the Chicago Cubs' No. 1 draft choice out of Baylor University last June, said. "El Paso has a great hitting club and I have a lot of respect for them, but I guess my stuff was just working."

Perlman, now 7-6 with six complete games, also halted an 11-game hitting streak by Diablos' centerfielder Tom Burnansky.

Gary Krug and Dave Stockstill hit solo home runs for Midland in the seventh and ninth, but Perlman got enough runs to win in the first when an error by second baseman Jamie Hamilton set up a run-scoring single by Krug and a run-scoring double by Stockstill.

In the second inning, J.W. Mitchell walked, George Enright singled and Chico Alfaro plated both with a single. Midland's fifth inning run came when Krug doubled, moved to third on a grounder and scored on a passed ball.

The Cubs and Diablos resume their series tonight and conclude with games Thursday and Friday.

Gardenhire's slam lifts Mets

By The Associated Press

Ron Gardenhire had a grand slam home run and three of his Jackson Mets teammates had homers in a 13-5 Texas League victory over the Shreveport Captains in the first game of a doubleheader Tuesday night.

Shreveport rebounded for a 5-1 victory in the nightcap.

In other Texas League action, Amarillo took 10 innings to edge San Antonio, 4-3, and Arkansas beat Tulsa, 8-2.

In addition to Gardenhire's grand slam, Tom Winterfeldt had two solo homers and Archie Amerson and Brian Giles each had a solo roundtripper for the Mets.

Mike Lowry, 3-0, was the winning pitcher. The loss was charged to Glen Fisher, 5-6.

Brian Greer walked with the bases loaded in the 10th inning to give the Amarillo Gold Sox a 4-3 victory over the San Antonio Dodgers.

Cedeno shrugs off big 5-for-5 day

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston center fielder Cesar Cedeno couldn't understand all the attention he was getting.

Cedeno figured it was all in a day's work to get five hits, drive in two runs and score the winning run in the 12th inning of Tuesday night's 5-4 victory over Los Angeles.

"I just got five hits, that's all," Cedeno said. "I really feel I've gotten off to my best start ever. It's just been those injuries. I've missed 15 games. Everytime I started getting in the groove, I'd get hurt."

The Dodgers did the hurting Tuesday night, finally succumbing in the 12th inning when Cedeno led off with a double to left field, his fifth hit of the game, and scored the winning run when relief pitcher Joe Beckwith threw the ball into left field after fielding Craig Reynolds' bunt.

"Cesar is the type of player that can carry a ball club for a week or two when he gets hot," said Joe Morgan, who tied the score at 4-4 in the ninth with his first homer of the year in the Astrodome. "There aren't many guys in the league who can carry a team."

It took a "hot" Cedeno performance to break the Dodgers' spell.

Los Angeles took a 3-0 lead after two innings off Houston starter Nolan Ryan. Steve Garvey drove in one run in the first inning with a single and Ryan's throwing error and Davy's Lopes' single netted two more runs in the second.

The Astros got one run back in the second when Cedeno got his first hit, a single to left, stole second base, went to third on a single and scored on Alan Ashby's single.

Houston got another run in the third when Jose Cruz reached base on Ron Cey's error, stole second and scored on Cedeno's single. Cedeno's fifth-inning double scored Terry Puhl for a 3-3 deadlock.

The score remained tied until the eighth when Dusty Baker reached base on Astros shortstop Rafael Landestoy's throwing error. A run-scoring single by pinch-hitter Reggie Smith put the Dodgers ahead.

The Dodgers appeared headed for their second straight victory in the three-game series until Morgan led off the ninth with his homer.

The score remained deadlocked again until the 12th when Cedeno doubled and dashed home with the winning run on Reynolds' bunt.

"We hit the ball hard enough, it just went to the wrong places," Dodgers Manager Tommy Lasorda said.

Frank LaCorte, 4-0, the last of three Astros pitchers, got the victory. Beckwith, 3-1, was the loser.

Baltimore, Detroit get good pitching

By The Associated Press

Weaver saw some pretty good pitching Tuesday night. Weaver did some pretty good pitching, too.

"The kid can pitch, that's all I can say," Earl Weaver, Baltimore's manager, said after 26-year-old lefthander Scott McGregor baffled Toronto with a four-hitter, facing just two more than the minimum of 27 batters in the Orioles' 1-0 victory over the Blue Jays.

Another "kid," 25-year-old righthanded reliever Roger Weaver of Detroit, silenced Cleveland for 3⅓ innings to pick up his first major league victory as the Tigers stretched their winning streak to six games by belting the Indians 9-4.

"When you fall into a good rhythm, everything seems to go well," said McGregor. "They had a lot of lefthanders in the lineup and that helps. They also hit a lot of 'at 'em' balls right at people."

"If you were grading his pitches," Earl Weaver said, his fastball would be the worst. But it's still effective because the other pitches complement the fastball. The batters can't look for anything special."

Garth Iorg was looking for something special when he came to bat with two outs in the ninth and the tying run on second base. "I was looking for a fastball and he threw me three breaking balls," Iorg said after striking out to end the game.

The Orioles started the game by getting the only run McGregor needed when Al Bumbry and Rich Dauer hit consecutive doubles off Dave Stieb. The Blue Jays' starter allowed just three more hits after that.

Tigers 9, Indians 4

Weaver, who has pitched nine innings of major league ball since being called up from the minors and has yet to allow a run, replaced Detroit starter Dan Petry in the third inning. "At first I was a little cold," he said. "I was a little concerned, but when Dan got in trouble early, I was hoping it would be me. I was afraid I was going to get stale from not working. You never like to go into the game so early, because it means the starting pitcher is in trouble.

"Towards the end I felt I was getting a little sharper." And, of his first victory, he said simply: "It's the best!"

The Tigers' big bat man was Richie Hebner. He drove in six runs, one with a grounder in the first inning, three with a double in the seventh and two with a single in the eighth.

"He's always been that way. His career has always been one of getting big base hits," said Tigers Manager Sparky Anderson.

"The guys up in front of me have been getting on base," added Hebner. "I've always liked hitting with people on base ... It's more fun to hit with men on base. I like to knock in runs and win ball games."

Yankees 10, Red Sox 5

Reggie Jackson is supposed to hit mammoth home runs and he did, a three-run shot in the eighth inning deep into the right-center field stands in cavernous Yankee Stadium.

Rick Cerone is not supposed to hit home runs — of any kind — but he put one in the stands, too. And it was the big shot of the night, a third-inning "clout" that erased Boston's 5-3 lead.

Cerone's homer, which matched the career high of seven he set last year with Toronto, was a lazy opposite-field fly ball that barely made it over the 310-foot sign at the base of the right field foul pole. "I never hit a home run that way before," he grinned. "Never! And you can go way back to Little League. Up until three years ago I never hit a ball to the right side of the infield."

Brewers 5, A's 3

Ben Oglivie picked up his 50th RBI with a sacrifice fly that broke a sixth-inning tie while Sixto Lezcano and Mark Brouhard slugged solo homers in Milwaukee's victory over the A's. Tony Armas had a two-run homer in the ninth for Oakland.

White Sox 2, Angels 1

For the Angels, there's no place like home — thank goodness! They've lost 20 of their last 23 home games. They helped Chicago break its own six-game losing streak on a bases-loaded walk to Greg Pryor in the second inning and Thad Bosley's RBI single in the fourth.

Twins 2-2, Royals 1-4

Roy Smalley's RBI single in the ninth inning gave Minnesota its first-game triumph, then Amos Otis drove in two runs with a pair of singles in the Royals' nightcap victory that made it a split.

Cromartie helps Expos add to lead

By The Associated Press

Someone asked Warren Cromartie how many game-winning hits he had had this season. Quite a few, right?

"I don't count them," said Cromartie. "Maybe (Pete) Rose does. I don't keep tabs on that stuff. I just go out and play baseball."

Cromartie, who has hit in eight straight games and is batting .317, singled home the winning Montreal run in the 10th inning Tuesday night, giving the Expos a 7-6 victory over Philadelphia and a 2½-game lead over the Phils in the National League East.

Ron LeFlore started the 10th for Montreal with a single and advanced to second on an infield out. With first base open and lefty reliever Tug McGraw, 0-3, on the mound, Philadelphia Manager Dallas Green ordered the right-handed swinging Gary Carter to be walked. That brought Cromartie, a lefty, to bat.

"The percentage was just as high with Tug out there against both guys in that situation," Green said. "But the way Carter has handled our pitching, I felt it was best to go left-hander against left-hander."

Cromartie said the itentional walk "perked" him up. "It's always a challenge," he said. "That's the percentage, left-hand pitcher against left-hand hitter, and Tug McGraw has always been tough on me. He just threw me a good fastball, and I saw it."

The Expos built a 4-0 lead after five innings on RBI hits by Chris Speier in the second, Andre Dawson in the third, LeFlore in the fourth and rookie Brad Mills in the fifth. Dawson's was a homer, his ninth.

Mets 6, Cubs 5

New York got home runs from Claudell Washington, his fourth in two days, Mike Jorgensen and Elliott Maddox to outgun the Cubs. Washington's was a three-run blast in the fifth that capped a four-run inning.

Reds 8, Braves 2

Dave Concepcion drove in a pair of runs, one with a solo homer in the first inning, and Charlie Leibrandt tossed a three-hitter to help Cincinnati continue its domination this season of the Braves.

Cards 3, Pirates 2

Bobby Bonds bounced back from an 0-for-27 hitting slump with a double and a home run to pace St. Louis over the sliding Pirates, who have lost eight of their past nine.

Bonds doubled and scored in the first inning and homered in the third to break a 2-2 deadlock.

Padres 5, Giants 3

Aurelio Rodriguez cracked a two-run homer with two out in the bottom of the eighth off Giants starter Bob Knepper to snap a 3-3 tie and give the Padres their win over San Francisco. The homer was the first for San Diego sice June 9.

John D'Acquisto, 1-1, picked up the victory in relief of Eric Rasmussen. He worked the last five innings without giving up a hit.

Al Oliver teaches Johnson a lesson

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Al Oliver says if Seattle manager Darrell Johnson had seen him hit this year, he might not have had southpaw reliever Shane Rawley walk switch-hitting Bump Wills intentionally to get to Oliver with two out in the ninth inning Tuesday night.

Oliver, a left-handed batter hitting .311, lashed Rawley's first pitch down the left field line, where it landed fair by two feet, scoring Mickey Rivers from second base with the winning run in a 5-4 victory for the Texas Rangers over the Mariners.

"Obviously, most clubs would rather face Bump, but this was a case of percentages, and I did not hit this club well at all last year. I think Darrell had to have this in the back of his mind," said Oliver, whose game-winning RBI was his 10th of the season, tops in the American League.

"We didn't start out to walk Wills intentionally," Johnson said. "It was only after the count got to 3-and-0 that we threw the fourth ball intentionally. Our intention not to walk Wills was based on Oliver. He's a damn good hitter."

"Oliver hit a fastball right down the middle. What can I say?" said Rawley, who until the ninth had allowed only two hits after Rusty Staub's bases-loaded single off Seattle starter Glenn Abbott gave Texas a 4-2 lead in the sixth.

Abbott gave up half of his eight hits in the sixth, and Johnson attributed the letdown to the sweltering temperature, which reached 106 during the afternoon and cooled by only three degrees by game time.

Buddy Bell, Texas' third baseman, singled three times in his first appearance since pulling a rib muscle June 3 and going onto the disabled list.

One of them, a sacrifice bunt attempt that caught third baseman Ted Cox protecting the bag instead of fielding the ball, loaded the bases after singles by Wills and Oliver in the sixth against Abbott.

The Rangers were trailing, 2-1, but Staub hit a sharp single that scored Wills and Oliver, and Bell crossed the plate when right fielder Leon Roberts' throw to the plate went all the way to the screen.

Successive doubles by Staub and Richie Zisk gave Texas a 1-0 advantage in the second. But Seattle claimed the lead in the third when Larry Milbourne tripled, Juan Beniquez doubled and Bruce Bochte singled.

Milbourne walked to lead off the eighth, and Beniquez' second double of the evening scored a run and drove starter Doc Medich from the game.

Dan Meyer's infield single against reliever Sparky Lyle pushed Beniquez to third, and Beniquez scored the tying run when Meyer tied the Rangers up in a rundown after Tom Paciorek's pop fly to second baseman Wills in shallow right field.

Cowens will go to Chicago

CLEVELAND (AP) — Detroit outfielder Al Cowens says he intends to travel with the Tigers to Chicago in late August, even though there is a warrent out there for his arrest.

"I'm paid to go with the team, to travel where the team goes, and that's what I'm going to do," Cowens said Tuesday after rejoining the team for practice.

Cowens can workout with the Tigers but cannot be in the dugout during games because he is serving a seven-game suspension handed down by American League President Lee MacPhail after his fight last week with White Sox pitcher Ed Farmer.

White Sox owner Bill Veeck was so angered by the bench-clearing incident that he filed assault charges against the 28-year-old outfielder.

"I don't know if they can arrest me if I'm with the team," Cowens said. "As far as I'm concerned, it's all done. The commissioner saw to that. It's all settled, and all I want to do is get ready to play again."

Cowens said he has no regrets about slugging Farmer in the 11th inning of the Tigers' game Saturday night in Chicago.

Mid City, Eastern take wins

Mid City's Pioneer Natural Gas Angels survived a loser's bracket contest and the Eastern First Savings & Loan Cubs won their second game in as many days as the second round of the American Little League city championship playoff tournament closed at Henderson Field Tuesday.

The Cubs handed the Tower Drilco Gold squad its first defeat in the double elimination, but they did it in convincing fashion. The Cubs exploded for 14 runs in the top of the fifth inning to break open a close 2-1 game.

Anthony Dickens and Rodney Sims combined for a one-hitter against the Gold as Wally Burrow's sixth inning single was the only hit of the game for the losers. Marty Mattlin absorbed the loss.

The Cubs also had plenty of offensive firepower as Sims hit two doubles and Dickens had a solo homer. Terry Young, George Matta, Eddie Riley and Raul Pena also had doubles in the game.

The Angels pulled out a heart throbbing 4-3 win over the North Central Tipperary Braves. The loss eliminated the Braves from the tournament with their second loss.

The Angels won the contest when Craig Crawford scored the winning run in the final sixth frame. Steve Pruitt got the win in relief and Greg Johnson took the loss.

North Central got a solo homer from Paul Colwell and a double from Brian Marczynski, but it was not enough to pull out the victory. The Angels had no extra base hits.

Action continues today as Eastern takes on Western at 6 p.m. in a battle of unbeatens while Tower faces Mid City in a survival battle. The loser of the Tower-Mid City contest will be eliminated from the tournament.

NHL ignores realignment

LOS ANGELES (AP) — National Hockey League teams will continue to play in their present divisions next season under the same balanced schedule as last year despite pressure for realignment.

The 21-member board of governors listened to several realignment proposals Tuesday at the windup of their two-day annual meeting, but opted to remain in the same alignment for the 1980-81 season despite suggested changes on grounds of geography and rivalries.

"Personally, I'm in favor of realignment and the unbalanced schedule," said board chairman Bill Wirtz of the Chicago Black Hawks. "But those are very, very difficult things to accomplish.

"We gave it a gallant try, we came close, but that wasn't enough."

Sources indicated the closest the governors came to approving divisional changes was a 15-6 vote on two separate proposals. Next year only a three-quarters majority will be necessary. The league put a two-year, 100-per-cent vote on realignment and schedule changes when accepting four clubs from the former World Hockey Association last year.

"A couple of the proposals would have passed had they been proposed a year from now," said NHL president John Ziegler. "Some proposals encompassed geographic realignment within divisions and conferences.

Rulings shake Olympic trials

EUGENE, Ore. (AP) — Renaldo Nehemiah and Craig Virgin were among the record breakers at the U.S. Olympic Track and Field Trials Tuesday but their performances were overshadowed by rulings from judges in a pair of Oregon courtrooms.

As a result of the two rulings, pole vaulter Steve Smith and shot putter Brian Oldfield apparently will be eligible to compete in today's qualifying competition.

The two were among seven former members of a professional track circuit that operated briefly in the mid-1970s. The seven have had their amateur status reinstated for all competition except the Olympics.

The Athletics Congress (TAC) and the U.S. Olympic Committee would not allow the seven to compete in the Trials — even though the United States is boycotting the Moscow Games.

In Portland, U.S. District Judge Helen Frye ruled that Smith should be allowed to compete, agreeing with Smith's contention that he should be allowed to participate because the U.S. team will not be going to Moscow.

A few hours later in Eugene, Lane County District Judge George Cottrell issued a ruling saying that what applies to Smith applies to all the former professionals.

However, only Smith and Oldfield will benefit from the ruling. Two of the others can't compete because their event already has been completed and the rest did not meet the Trials' qualifying standards.

"Where do I sign up," Oldfield said as he handed a copy of Cottrell's ruling to meet director Bob Newland.

"This means they will be able to compete," Newland said of the court action, which was sought by five Eugene men including former Olympic Coach Bill Bowerman.

The USOC and TAC did not comment on the ruling until after Tuesday's competition. Richard Hollander, a Richmond, Va., attorney and chairman of the TAC international competition committee, said the Eugene ruling apparently means Oldfield will be able to compete.

Jimmy Carnes, the Olympic team's head coach and president of the TAC, refused to meet with reporters Tuesday.

On the field, Nehemiah and Virgin snapped Trials' records in the 110-meter hurdles and 10,000-meters, respectively. In other competition, 32-year-old Madeline Manning just missed breaking her own American record in the women's 800-meters, winning in a Trials' record time of 1:58.3. And Karin Smith fired the javelin 208 feet, 5 inches to edge Kate Schmidt.

"I am definitely back," said Nehemiah, who was clocked in 13.26, the fastest in the world this year. "On a wet track and a bad day, that's not bad at all."

Nehemiah, 21, had left the University of Maryland track team this spring after a dispute with his coach. Then, on May 11, he finished a disappointing fourth to Greg Foster in the UCLA Invitational and was injured in the process. He didn't compete again until the TAC championships, where he won in a relatively slow 13.49.

Nehemiah, who holds the world record at 13.0, was deprived of a showdown with Foster at the Trials when Foster came down with tonsilitis.

"I've said all year that I don't need Greg Foster or anyone else to run my race," said Nehemiah, who edged Dedy Cooper in Tuesday's final.

"I'm going to go home and train like a wild man," said the man who ran the four fastest 110-meter hurdle races in history in 1979. "And I hope by August to be a dominating force again."

Virgin swept to victory in the 10,000-meters in 27:45.61, breaking Frank Shorter's old Trials' record by 10 seconds.

Greg Fredericks was second in 28:03.14 and Alberto Salazar finished third at 28:10.42.

"I knew going into the race I was the favorite," said Virgin, "but in my own mind I knew I was beatable. So I ran scared out there. I didn't take anything for granted."

"I've done a lot of training this year but I haven't had a lot of races. In fact, this was really only my second race of the season and I was a little bit rusty. I wasn't sure what to expect from myself."

Manning, who qualified for the U.S. Olympic team for the fourth consecutive time, said the secret of her long career was the fact she started competing late, when she was 17.

"Then I took some time off," she said. "It relaxed my mind."

Trevino eyes title

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Lee Trevino, currently playing some of the best golf of his life, looms as the key figure in the $300,000 Danny Thomas-Memphis Classic.

The 72-hole chase for a $54,000 first prize begins Thursday on the hilly, 7,249 yard, par 72 Colonial Country Club course with Trevino the probable favorite in the 156-man field.

"I've been playing good all year," Trevino said. "I'm just not making the putts like I used to.

"When you start get to that 40 (year old) mark, the putts get harder, the short ones get longer. But I've got a little something worked out in my putting. At least I'm getting the ball going where I'm looking. Sometimes I have a little trouble reading the greens, but I'm getting it where I want to.

"And I'll tell you thing. I'm not complaining. If I never make another putt in my life, I'm ahead. I've made my share, made more than my share."

He's made enough for the No. 2 position on the all- money-winning list and holds the same position on this year's roster. He's won twice in Memphis.

The all-time leader in this tournament, however, is Dave Hill. He took this title four times, the last in 1973. And he could be a contender again.

Although he's been in a deep slump for three years, Hill, now 43, has made a mild comeback this season.

He's won $33,000, more than his three previous seasons combined, and has been "striking the ball better than I have in five years.

USAC stunned by Speedway move

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — The U.S. Auto Club, stunned by the prospect it might lose its quarter-century sanction of the Indianapolis 500-mile race, has called a meeting of its full 21-man board of directors for next week.

USAC spokesman Paul Reinhard, declining to elaborate, said president Dick King "received a letter (from Speedway President John Cooper) and has sent out mailgrams to call a board meeting next Monday."

The USAC call to its board members went out Tuesday, a day after Cooper's stunning announcement which hinted a change in sanctioning groups for the 1981 Indy 500.

Cooper said the Speedway would welcome interest in sanctioning the 1981 Indy 500 by USAC or any of the other four groups affiliated with the Automobile Competition Committee of the United States.

The most prominently mentioned possibility is the National Association for Stock Car Racing (NASCAR), Cooper's former employer. He is still close with NASCAR President Bill France and reportedly is negotiating to bring a NASCAR race to the Speedway next summer.

"I'm not surprised by this," car owner Roger Penske told the Associated Press in a telephone interview from his office at Piscataway, N.J.

"There was a letter six weeks ago to Dick King from John Cooper, that said the Speedway didn't want USAC to apply for an international date for 1981, and that the Speedway would make up its mind at a later date if they would use USAC as the sanctioning body for the race," said Penske, a member of the six-man Championship Racing League board of governors that currently controls the sport.

"Any track has that prerogative," Penske continued. "They can say who they want to sanction any event. I know that as a director, I'm going to make sure that we do as much as we can to make sure they know they'd be much better with USAC. After all, the relationship between the Speedway and USAC goes back about 25 years, and it's been good for both sides."

The new Championship Racing League represents a compromise between USAC and Championship Auto Racing Teams, which battled for 18 months for control of champ car racing. Under the new setup, three of the members are car owners who were aligned with CART, Penske, Pat Patrick and Midland's Jim Hall. Two others, who sided with USAC, are car owner Rolla Vollstedt and owner-driver A.J. Foyt. The sixth is King.

Cooper originally wanted a seven-man board, made up of no more than three car owners, and he said part of the reason for Monday's announcement was that racing has become dominated by a group of "selected car owners."

"That's certainly false," Penske said, disputing Cooper's contention. "The makeup of the board is such that it just happened that the U.S. Auto Club representatives were car owners. They could name anybody as board members.

"There's still going to be an Indy 500," Penske continued. "I don't think the fans are concerned who sanctions it. They want to see the drivers and the cars."

Whisenant moves up to Round Two

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — Former University of New Mexico assistant basketball Coach John Whisenant says now that Round One in his legal battle is over, it's time to move on to Round Two.

The U.S. government announced Tuesday it was dropping charges of four counts of mail fraud against Whisenant because of the acquittal of former UNM basketball Coach Norm Ellenberger on the same charges.

But Whisenant and Ellenberger, as well, still face trial on state charges of fraud and making false public vouchers.

"There's still another one to go we must win," Whisenant said Tuesday. "I feel strongly we will show as in this case we are innocent."

He said he believed the U.S. attorney's office decided to drop the charges against him because "they knew they couldn't win." And he added, "I could have told them that months ago."

U.S. Attorney R.E. Thompson told reporters of his decision to drop the federal charges at a brief meeting in which he read a prepared statement.

"The recent acquittal of Norman Ellenberger makes it unlikely that the federal prosecution of Mr. Whisenant would result in a conviction. For that reason, I have concluded that the federal charges against John Whisenant should be terminated at this time," he said.

Walter Payton, running back of the Chicago Bears, traded his football gear recently for a full Indian dress during a skit to spoof The Village People. Over 30 athletes staged the show as part of a celebrity tennis tournament. (AP Laserphoto)

Is Cooper's bomb a power play?

An AP Sports Analysis
By MIKE HARRIS

It appears to be a rule of thumb in auto racing that something controversial always is waiting right around the next turn.

The latest blowup in championship car racing is only the most recent example.

After 18 months of bitter talk, financial reversals and forecasts of extinction of the sport, the U.S. Auto Club kissed and made up with the dissident Championship Auto Racing Teams in March.

PEACE CAME reluctantly for some, but by last weekend's Pocono 500 it was considered fait accompli by nearly everyone.

The Championship Racing League, the new ruling body of the Indy car sport, hammered out in the compromise peace plan by USAC and CART — ended months of speculation by announcing at Pocono a set of rules governing engine size and skirts for the next three years.

The rules give relatively inexpensive stock block engines a chance to be competitive with the ultra-expensive turbocharged engines that now dominate the sport. But even the most vociferous opponents of that plan — led by some of the big-money teams — accepted the CRL board of governor's decision.

It was even reported that Roger Penske, who builds some of the best cars on the circuit and puts superstars Bobby Unser, Mario Andretti and Rick Mears behind the wheel, voted with the majority on the rules decision and has already started preparing several Chevrolet stock block engines for next year.

SWEET HARMONEY and cooperation were singing in the air at Pocono above the deep-throated sounds of engines.

That was Sunday. Everyone should have realized it was just too good to last.

The bombshell, dropped by Indianapolis Motor Speedway President John Cooper, hit on Monday.

The Indianapolis Motor Speedway — the citadel of speed, the crown jewel of champ car racing — threatened to take the job of sanctioning the $1 million Indianapolis 500 away from USAC.

Cooper announced that the Speedway is going to choose its new partner from among the five sanctioning bodies represented in the Auto Competition Committee of the United States.

ACCUS is the American representative of the Paris-based International Automobile Federation, or FIA, which sets up the international calendar of racing and oversees the world of speed.

INCLUDED IN its U.S. arm are the National Association for Stock Car Auto Racing, the Sports Car Club of America, the International Motor Sports Association, the National Hot Rod Association and USAC.

That, of course, leaves the door at least slightly ajar for the Indianapolis-based USAC to continue its 25-year association with the Speedway. But the question remains, why did Cooper and the other Speedway moguls pick this moment of peace and brotherhood in champ car racing to make their move?

The answer is not obvious. But it does appear to be founded in the fact that Cooper and the Speedway, which is also operating the Pocono racetrack this year, have been left out of the power structure in the new CRL.

Cooper, whose calm guidance and common sense approach played a strong part in the CART-USAC peace agreement, apparently wants direct imput into the future of champ car racing and the races the Speedway puts on.

If he doesn't get it, Cooper may just take his ball and find another game.

Reggie Jackson rides to rescue

NEW YORK (AP) — He wasn't riding a white horse or wearing a red cape, but baseball star Reggie Jackson came charging to the rescue Tuesday.

Jackson was innocently strolling along a busy Manhattan street with his agent, Matt Merola, when another pedestrian, Mrs. Ingrid Rachingler of Nuetinger, Germany, was struck by a car and knocked to the pavement, suffering a shoulder injury.

"I didn't see it happen, but I heard the screech and I ran to help," Jackson said Tuesday night after his three-run homer, his 18th of the season, put him in a tie for the American League lead and helped the first-place New York Yankees defeat the Boston Red Sox 10-5.

Jackson told Merola to call an ambulance and asked a bystander to get a wet towel. Meanwhile, he asked the crowd that gathered to stand back and give the woman some air.

"I'm in the middle of it no matter what it is," said Jackson, who has rarely been out of the spotlight since joining the Yankees four years ago.

Dickie Noles suspended

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Philadelphia pitcher Dickie Noles has been suspended for three days and fined $500 for throwing a bat.

Noles learned of the action Tuesday in a telegram from National League President Charles Feeney.

Noles tossed the bat out of the dugout in protest of a decision by umpire Joe West June 17 in a game against the Los Angeles Dodgers.

In addition to Feeney's action, the Phillies assessed their pitcher $250 for conduct unbecoming a professional.

Noles has appealed the decision through baseball's Players' Association, and so was able to start Tuesday night against Montreal. He fell behind 4-0 and left for a pinch-hitter in the fifth.

Maybe he should have accepted the suspension.

"Considering what I'm making (salary), I learned my lesson," said Noles, who draws in the area of $30,000 a season. "I'll never do anything like that again."

Phillies' Manager Dallas Geen didn't think the punishment fit the crime.

"Suspending Dickie Noles is like putting somebody in jail who goes through a red light," said Green.

Green insisted he knew nothing of the appeal, that it was a Players Association move, and not an effort to forestall the suspension at a time when the Phillies are in desperate need of pitching help.

"I don't think what happened was a suspendable item," Green said. "I never did, especially when he (Noles) did it for the first time."

Where is that little Tracy?

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Whatever happened to little Tracy Austin?

She grew up, that's what, and now it seems that all of Merry England is pulling for the more sophisticated 17-year-old high school senior from Rolling Hills, Calif., to win the women's tennis championship at Wimbledon.

"A tenner on Tracy," screams one London tabloid, suggesting that readers run down to Ladbroke's right away and put a brown 10-pound note on Tracy at 2-1 to dethrone the powerful Martina Navratilova.

"Goodbye, Martina," says another headline.

One can't pick up an English newspaper — and there are loads of them — without seeing lauditory references and brash predictions regarding the intent, disciplined miss they first saw as a 14-year-old in pony tails in 1977.

The pony tails are still there, bobbing on her shoulders every time she leans into one of those devastating two-fisted backhands.

But there the corollary ends. Gone are those fluffy pinafores that fell to her knees, the teeth braces that glistened when she smiled. She no longer is shy and sheltered, so frail-looking that one wondered why she did not fly away with the racket when she swung so viciously.

Still only 5 feet, 4 inches tall but a more mature and filled-out 115 pounds, she isn't a child anymore but a young woman. She handles a difficult news conference with the ease and assurance of a Billie Jean King. She plays tennis like a Bjorn Borg in skirts.

Someone asked her if she patterned herself after Chris Evert, now Mrs. John Lloyd, another "Miss Metronome," and if she ever saw herself in the fast-rising Andrea Jaeger, 15, who is being touted as the game's future superstar.

"I don't remember watching Chris much," Tracy replied, "but our games are very similar." As for Jaeger, she added, "there is a difference in being 14 and 17. They were my growing-up years."

Tracy let everybody understand that she was now a woman.

"Is this the first time you have felt you could win the championship?" She was asked.

"Yes," she replied, not blinking an eyelash. "I feel I am ready to win."

Since losing to Navratilova in last year's semifinals here, Tracy has beaten the left-hander in the U.S. Open and Avon Championships but still trails in career meetings 13-9. She holds an 8-5 edge over Chris.

In the last year, Tracy has matured in other ways, becoming the mistress of her destiny in business dealings which have made her a millionairess before she is through with algebra.

"What a future — her potentiality defies the imagination," says her personal manager, Donald Dell of Washington, D.C.

Less than a week ago, Tracy, through Dell's office, signed shoe and equipment contracts said to exceed $1-million. She does commercials for dairy interests in California, plugs a worldwide cosmetics and fragrances line and has a clothing contract with a company in Paris.

While American and French clothiers are battling for her endorsements, she has chosen Ted Tinling to design her wardrobe. She has brought nine outfits for Wimbledon.

Tuesday she wore a white dress with lace trim and blue underpants while scoring a rain-interrupted 6-1, 6-2 victory over collegian Alycia Moulton.

"I am not superstitious about dresses," she said. "I always want to look feminine."

AL stars are on disabled list

NEW YORK (AP) — Four potential starters on the American League All-Star team are on the disabled list — but it's possible at least one of them will be in the lineup for the July 8 game in Los Angeles.

Shortstop Bucky Dent of the New York Yankees has a spike wound on his left wrist sustained 10 days ago in Oakland. He is expected to be back in action some time this weekend.

Second baseman Paul Molitor of the Milwaukee Brewers, the AL's leading hitter with a .358 average, was placed on the disabled list Tuesday, suffering with a pulled rib cage muscle suffered June 6.

George Brett, the Kansas City Royals' third baseman and a starter in the last four All-Star games, has been out of action since tearing a ligament in his ankle while sliding into second base on June 10.

And Jim Rice, the Boston Red Sox's left fielder has a cracked bone in his wrist, the result of being hit with a pitch last Saturday.

Two MSU stars flunk out

EAST LANSING, Mich. (AP) — Two starting Michigan State football players — wide receiver Samson Howard and defensive back James Burroughs — have flunked out of school and will not play for the Spartans this fall, according to school officials.

According to officials, both were counted on heavily in Coach Muddy Waters' first year at the helm.

Burroughs emerged as the Spartans' top defensive back last year, tying for the team lead in interceptions with three. A junior, he also blocked three kicks.

Howard was hampered by injuries last year, his sophomore season. He was held to five receptions.

Wimbledon is depressing

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — "It's damp, dreary and depressing."

So mused America's Brian Teacher from the players' restaurant as he stared up at yet another huge threatening black cloud overhead.

Whatever else you can say about the start of this year's Wimbledon, one thing is certain: It has been very wet. Downright soggy.

Fits of downpours, light drizzles and overcast skies have been wreaking havoc with the schedule of matches. Players walk onto the grass and exchange a few volleys, maybe even finish a set, before they are forced to seek cover again because of rain.

Martina Navratilova, the defending champion, found the Center Court so slippery during her interrupted match against South Africa's Ilana Kloss Tuesday that she feared an injury from all that sliding around.

"I have no reason to take any chances. I was very careful," she said later. "But you can't really play according to the conditions.

"You can't really hurry up or slow down."

Since 1887, Wimbledon has played the last week in June and the first week of July, a period thought to provide the best weather Britain can muster.

There's even a saying among Britons here that to "have Wimbledon weather" means blue skies and sunshine. But in recent years the championships have been losing more and more days to rain.

Monday's damp afternoon at Wimbledon's opening left half the men's singles unplayed. The women shared "Ladies Day" Tuesday with the men, but even that didn't help. Delays and more delays plagued the day.

It hasn't been until 6 p.m. or 7 p.m. that the players have really gotten going. The rest of the time they spend dozing in their dressing rooms, sipping sodas in the restaurant or just complaining.

The 2,200-strong maintenance staff at the All England Lawn Tennis and Croquet Club have been working overtime to protect their courts dragging tarpaulins on, dragging them off, on, off, over and over.

Even Tracy Austin seemed demoralized. Her match suspended against Alycia Moulton for several hours, Tracy poked her head out of the women's dressing room to plead for the clouds to go away.

But the clouds — and Wimbledon's crowds — stayed put.

While Wimbledon itself has changed little over the years, hallowed by tradition, its crowds are younger, more boisterous and more idol-crazy than ever. And when it rains, they are almost impossible.

With no tennis to watch, hordes of schoolchildren roam the pavements, making it necessary for three policemen to accompany Bjorn Borg if he is to arrive safe and untrampled at his dressing room.

But it's not just the men players who are hunted. Just as many pre-teens pursue Tracy, Chris Evert-Lloyd and Navratilova on a wild flight around the courts.

It all seems a bit vulgar to Lance Tingay, tennis correspondent for Britain's Daily Telegraph who has covered every Wimbledon since 1932. He remembers when it used to be a "rather snooty affair," when the top people went to see and be seen. Now tennis — and its millionaire stars — are the chief attraction for the masses.

This year Wimbledon boats the first-ever automatic line-watching device ever used in a major championship. This is done by a box that sits beside the court and bleeps when a service is long. Romania's Ilie Nastase had a good deal of fun with it Monday, even climbing down on all fours to fix it with one of his infamous "Nasty" stares.

It means a little less work for the 220 umpires employed, and the magical aura that surrounds the Center Court is safely intact.

"The Center Court has an atmosphere of its own and seems to make everyone play well," said Nastase after beating John Feaver of Britain, 6-2, 6-3,7-6 Monday.

In keeping with tradition, the Center Court is still used only for the Wimbledon championships.

Forty-eight hours before opening day, four ladies are invited to "bruise" the grass that head groundsman Jack Yardley and his staff have carefully nurtured all year. After the finals, the chairman of the All England Club plays one last game on the following Monday.

And no one is allowed to hit another ball there until next year.

Boxing ticket prices soar

DETROIT (AP) — Boxing fans will have to pay $500 for a ringside seat for the World Boxing Association welterweight title fight Aug. 2 between Thomas Hearns and Jose "Pipino" Cuevas.

That's the most ever asked for a professional fight ticket in Detroit.

Miami soccer team is sold

MIAMI (AP) — Miami's American Soccer League team has been sold to two investors for an undisclosed purchase price, officials said.

Investors Stan Noah and Archie Olivier purchased the Miami Americans in a sale that "involved a substantial new infusion of capital," said a statement issued by the club.

Noah and Olivier will assume an active role in club management and operations immediately, the statement said.

The Miami Herald reported Noah is an agent for a group in the South African country of Zimbabwe.

Dempsey gets surprise

NEW YORK (AP) — The waiters rolled a cart carrying a huge birthday cake around the tables to the front of the room, and the people sang "Happy Birthday."

Jack Dempsey, who had been sitting impassively for the better part of an hour listening to a roll call of "the all-time greatest 125 athletes" and descriptions of their feats, broke into a wide grin.

Tuesday was the 85th birthday of this legendary heavyweight boxing champion, and though the news conference and luncheon had not been called for that purpose, it turned into a party to honor him.

"Come on up, Jack," the master of ceremonies invited.

"Oh, no," said Dempsey's wife, who has been serving as a buffer between her aging husband and the ever-present demands of the media and sports fans.

Dempsey, his face wrinkled and tanned, moved back his chair, laboriously lifted himself out of it, and with the help of a heavy wooden cane moved to the front of the restaurant dining room.

Photographers rushed to capture the scene as Dempsey posed over the cake surrounded by retired baseball stars Hank Aaron and Frank Robinson, former pro football player Dick Butkus, Houston Oilers running back Earl Campbell and former tennis star Don Budge.

Born June 24, 1895 in Manassa, Colo., Dempsey had outlived most of his comtemporaries and virtually all of his opponents. He remains a living monument to a time called the Golden Age of Boxing.

"I just want to say, how happy I am to say hello and goodbye to them," was Dempsey's birthday messae to the sports fans of the world.

He made hoarse, brief replies to the inevitable questions about comparisons about the fighters of his day and the present.

Today's fighters were: "Good but they were better in my time."

The fighters of his era were: "better because we were hungrier."

Muhammad Ali was good, but "a couple could have taken him" back in the old days.

Dempsey said he was disappointed in the result of last Friday night's World Boxing Council welterweight championship fight in which Roberto Duran won a unanimous decision over Sugar Ray Leonard.

"Lack of experience" cost Leonard the fight, according to Dempsey, and while he still felt Leonard was among the best of the current crop, he doubted that a rematch would bring a different result.

"I feel wonderful, great," he said as he cut and recut into the birthday cake topped by two confectionery replicas of boxing gloves.

Dempsey finished tied for 34th on the list of 125 athletes selected in a poll of 137 sports writers and broadcasters conducted by a brewer to mark its 125th anniversary.

The poll was conducted by the Miller Brewing Co.

Babe Ruth finished first, followed Ali, former football star Jimmy Brown, golfer Jack Nicklaus and all-around athlete Jim Thorpe.

Moscow beefs up security

MOSCOW (AP) — Reinforced street patrols, teams of police dogs and hundreds of watchful civilian volunteers are among the massive security force being marshalled for next month's Summer Olympics.

Though the numerical size of Moscow's police force is secret, it has been reported unofficially it could triple during the Games, scheduled July 19-Aug. 3.

With the Olympics only weeks away, there already have been reports of increasing strictness by Moscow traffic police and widening difficulties of Soviet citizens getting to Moscow. The number of trains running to Moscow reportedly has been decreased and tickets on those trains reportedly are being sold only to people who can prove they live in Moscow or have legitimate business in the capital.

Authorities fear that some of the hundreds of citizens and foreign visitors may be spies or provacateurs, and the threat of terrorism — a problem at any Olympics — also looms.

As early as 1978, a Soviet security officer visited the base of West Germany's GSG-9 anti-terrorist force to plan security for the Moscow Games. The Soviet Union reportedly has approached the United States as well, seeking intelligence information on terrorists who might disrupt the Games.

At the Olympic Village, where athletes and officials will live, workmen have been seen installing what appear to be infra-red alarm devices on both sides of the Village's eight-foot-high steel fence.

Meanwhile, Moscow's main shopping street, Kalinin Prospekt, is now patrolled by scores of gray-uniformed police and civilian volunteers with red armbands. Other parts of the city, including railroad stations, also have strongly reinforced patrols — including some accompanied by guard dogs, a rare sight here.

Some American correspondents have reported increased surveillance by police agents in advance of the Olympics, although most newsmen have been let alone. Anne Garrels, Moscow bureau chief of the ABC television network, said police have barred her from filming ordinary Moscow sights on "nine out of 10 occasions" in recent weeks.

But apparently, policemen brought to Moscow from out of town were given poor briefings. One police officer was unable to tell a visitor how to get to a major tourist hotel while two other policemen, puzzling over a street map in their jeep, asked a passing American news correspondent for directions.

Cards give Boyer job

ST. LOUIS (AP) — The St. Louis Cardinals announced Tuesday that Ken Boyer has accepted a front-office job with the National League club.

Boyer had been fired as manager two weeks ago and replaced with former Kansas City Royals' Manager Whitey Herzog.

The former All-Star third baseman will be given special assignments under General Manager John Claiborne, according to Cardinals' President August A. Busch, Jr. The assignments will involve team development and administration, Busch said.

"We are delighted that Kenny has chosen to stay with the club," Busch said. "We hope to keep Kenny in a Cardinal uniform for a long time.

Claiborne said Boyer's knowledge of the league, the players and the game would be an asset to the team.

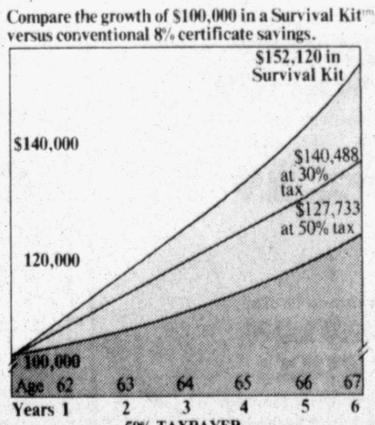
You need your own Survival Kit™ in this changing financial world.

Compare the growth of $100,000 in a Survival Kit™ versus conventional 8% certificate savings.



50% TAXPAYER

$24,387 greater increase in savings over an ordinary savings plan for a person in a 50% tax bracket.

30% TAXPAYER

$11,632 greater increase even at a 30% tax bracket. That's what would happen for a saver, age 61, who deposits $100,000 at 8% and saves to age 67 in the example above.

Inflation and taxes go hand in hand to damage many people's plans for financial independence and a comfortable retirement.

Inflation puts you in a higher tax bracket without increasing your buying power. And those higher taxes eat into the growth of your savings.

One answer is the Survival Kit. It defers federal and state income taxes on the interest your savings earn. The dollars that otherwise would go for tax stay in place to earn interest on themselves. Depending on your tax bracket, your savings can grow twice as fast.

The Survival Kit can offer you this lifesaving advantage in growth because it is a group annuity plan underwritten by American Life and Casualty Insurance Company. But it is nothing like the traditional annuity which holds funds at a low, fixed rate of return.

Instead, it combines the advantages of modern, high-return certificate savings, with the advantages made possible by this annuity plan. In addition to the crucial deferral of taxes, you gain surprising withdrawal privileges, a variety of valuable estate planning benefits, and the option of choosing between lifetime retirement income payments or any other form of withdrawal that meets your needs.

Call us today for full information on all the ways the Survival Kit can help you plan your future in this changing financial world.

Your Survival Kit™ outperforms ordinary savings after retirement

When $10,000 a year is withdrawn from each of the 6-year totals shown in the first chart, the Survival Kit's tax-deferral feature continues to pay extra benefits.

Spendable income: Total after 10 years of $10,000 withdrawals	Balance remaining after 10 years of $10,000 withdrawals
$100,000 net from Survival Kit at any tax rate*	$173,806 in Survival Kit
$62,498 net from account taxed at 30%	$165,495 in account taxed at 30%
$45,311 net from account taxed at 50%	$137,111 in account taxed at 50%

*Generally, withdrawals from a Survival Kit are not subject to tax until the full amount of the original deposit has been withdrawn. Meanwhile, the earnings continue to accumulate on a tax-deferred basis. In ordinary savings plans, interest is taxed as it is earned, whether withdrawn or not.

Come in now for the Survival Kit you need to meet the changing financial realities of today.

Look ahead! Don't watch glasses

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — Steve Crudi says his secret is to keep looking ahead, rather than watch the four brimming champagne glasses perched on his serving tray.

Crudi's style — and a waiter's career that included work in the dining room of an ocean liner — helped him breeze to victory Sunday in a race among waiters and waitresses from Connecticut and Rhode Island. The object: to see who could carry the glasses over a two-block course in the fastest time and spill the least champagne.

Crudi clinched the title for the third straight year, winning the final heat in a brisk 2 minutes and 4.9 seconds and ending up with 18 ounces in his four glasses. He had started the race with 22 ounces.

The waitresses division winner was Karen Sibrinsz with a time of 2 minutes, 32 seconds. She had 16.5 ounces left in her four glasses. Mrs. Sibrinsz, 25, edged out her mother, Frances Banaeige, who came in second.

Crudi, 35, a waiter at a Hartford hotel, wore a black tuxedo as he battled gusty winds to defend his title.

"If you look down, you lose your concentration and you slow down," he said.

NEIL SOLOMON

Nutritional balance attainable without breaking diet rules

Dear Dr. Solomon: How do protein, carbohydrate and fat compare in caloric content, and how much of each of these nutrients is contained in skim milk — Rose.

Dear Rose: All fats contain nine calories per gram, while both protein and carbohydrates supply four calories per gram. A one-cup serving of skim milk has eight grams of protein (32 calories), 11 grams of carbohydrate (44 calories) and one gram of fat (nine calories).

Dear Dr. Solomon: My husband has reluctantly agreed to have me serve vegetables more often at dinner since they have no cholesterol. However, he insists I add a blob of butter when I prepare them because he doesn't like the taste otherwise. I try to tell him he's defeating the purpose for which I'm serving vegetables, but so far my arguments have done no good. Do you have any suggestions? — Mrs. F.I.

Dear Mrs. I.: Various items that frequently are added to vegetables, such as butter, egg yolks and many cheeses, are indeed high in saturated fats and cholesterol. However, there are recipes that call for egg whites, skim or nonfat dry milk and low-fat cheeses such as cottage cheese. These products help keep fat and cholesterol levels low, while saving you money as well.

Dear Dr. Solomon: In an effort to reduce my intake of fats I have begun paying more attention to the nutritional labels on food products. Fresh meats, however, do not carry such labels. Is there any way to estimate the amount of fat in a serving of meat? — Gil.

Dear Gil: One way to limit your intake of fats is to eat only very lean meats. The leanest cuts of beef and lamb contain approximately three grams of fat per ounce of cooked meat. On the other hand, chicken without the skin, fish and veal contain from one and one-half to two grams of fat per ounce when cooked. In addition, the fat in chicken, fish and veal is less saturated than that in beef and lamb and should be used more frequently by anyone interested in a fat-controlled diet.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I am engaged to a man whose father is an alcoholic. What are the chances that my furure husband will show the same tendencies.? — Cora.

Dear Cora: Recent research indicates that there may indeed be a genetic factor in alcoholism, but the evidence is not clear-cut. Almost every study on the subject shows a higher rate of alcoholism among relatives of alcoholics than among the general population. However, while it is true that more children of alcoholics have drinking problems than would be expected, the fact remains that children of people who do not drink at all also may become alcoholics.

Bear in mind, too, that just because a person may have a predicposition to a disease does not necessarily mean he will get the disease.

(If you have a medical problem, see your doctor. If you have a medical question, write to Neil Solomon, M.D., 1726 Reisterstown Road, Baltimore, Md. 21208. Dr. Solomon cannot give personal replies but will answer as many questions as possible in his column.)

Miami voodoo cult evidence found

MIAMI (AP) — An assistant Dade County medical examiner says he has found evidence that a primitive, voodoo-like cult is flourishing in the heart of Miami's Cuban community.

Dr. Charles Wetli said the remains of a human were found packed with the skeletons of a chicken and a turkey in a cemetery in Little Havana.

Welti, a self-taught expert in the voodoo-like cult of santeria, thinks the find clearly suggests that the cult, which combines some elements of primitive African beliefs with Catholicism, once was active in the area.

"The animal remains were probably being used for white magic," said Wetli. "They were probably used to help somebody going to trial who wanted a good verdict or somebody who was really sick and dying.

"But the human bones are generally used by practitioners of black magic, who believe they have the power to harm or kill someone."

"They had obviously been buried for a long time," said Dr. Donna Brown, another medical examiner. "It seems clear they were being used in some kind of ritualistic practices."

In the cemetery, researchers found the crumbling bones of a woman and a skull encrusted with candle wax, streaked with rust and packed in a burlap bag.

They also discovered freshly slaughtered remains of a sheep, three goats, a guinea hen and several chickens packed in crates that were left on a roadside in Miami Beach.

The findings were made over a period of three days. Some of the remains were six miles apart from each other.

The human remains were found at Graceland Memorial Park, packed with the chicken and turkey skeletons. The skull was that of a woman in her 30s or 40s, said Dr. Brown.

Also in the bag was a skeleton that may have belonged to the same woman or another one in her 20s. None of the bones bore marks of violence, Dr. Brown said.

The bones probably were buried in an iron cauldron for a decade or more by a santero, or priest, who believed they were the source of his power, said Wetli. They may have been uncovered as part of a ceremony to rejuvenate that power or, more likely, they were cast away because their owner had died.

The medical examiner's office can do little to determine how she died, but an expert in dental records will try to identify the woman. Also a mystery is how the bones came to be in the possession of the santero.

"It could have been a grave robbing, it could have been a murder or it could have been a completely legal sale of the bones," Wetli said.

Wetli said the cult, which originated in Cuba centuries ago, has a large following in South Florida.

"I don't think there's any real way of knowing how many people are involved," in some form of santeria, Wetli said. "All I can say is it's very widespread."

Cooper attends APTA conference

PHOENIX, Ariz. — Jean Cooper, LPT, director of physical therapy of Midland County Hospital District, was among the 3,000 members of the American Physical Therapy Association (APTA) who met recently at the Hyatt Regency in Phoenix, Ariz. The Association's 56th Annual Conference has the largest program in APTA's history, featuring more than 170 speakers.

Physical therapy is a growing profession in America's health care field. The aims of physical therapy are to prevent disability and pain, restore impaired movements and activities, promote healing, relieve pain and teach adaptation to permanent disability.

APTA members convened for scientific sessions and association business. The group's representative legislative body will meet to elect new officers and to consider a wide range of issues facing the profession.

The wide variety of scientific sessions offered during APTA's conference reflects the expanding field of physical therapy. Some of the programs that will be included are the dynamic changes of aging, treatment of low back pain, treatment of burn patients, emergency care of the athlete, prevention of jogging injuries and physical fitness through aerobic dancing.

Physical therapy is considered a vital part of the total care for people who have problems of temporary or permanent disability, or pain, due to injury, disease, birth defect, or loss of limb.

Qualifications to practice physical therapy are established by law in each state and include attainment of at least a bachelor's degree, graduation from an accredited program and successful eompletion of a licensure examination.

French fired nuclear bomb

WELLINGTON, New Zealand (AP) — The French appear to have exploded an underground nuclear bomb June 17 on Mururoa Atoll near Tahiti, New Zealand government officials said.

The explosion report came from a recording station operated by the New Zealand Department of Industrial and Scientific Research at Rarotonga in the Cook Islands. There was no immediate comment from French officials.

The Rarotonga readings indicated a test of around 20 kilotons, regarded by the department as a medium-sized bomb.

Financing school budget may require tax increase

By DAVID CAMPBELL
Staff Writer

Trustees got a peek at the 1980-81 school budget of $33,197,334 presented at Tuesday's school board meeting. And Midlanders can expect a possible tax increase to foot the bill.

Compared to this year's school budget of $28,421,651, increases in the budget will come from raises in school employees salaries — which makes up about 80 percent of the budget — and the $3 million repairs and renovation bond issue passed by Midland voters April 5, said Don Furgeson, business manager for the Midland Independent School District.

Taxpayers will be spending $2,457 per student, according to budget figures. This makes MISD among the top 10 school districts in the state regarding money spent to educate children, trustees noted.

This year the amount spent per child was $2,086, 1979-80 figures revealed.

Final approval for the 1980-81 budget will come Aug. 26 when the school tax rate will be set.

IN ANOTHER action, trustees approved a progress report on the district's five-year plan which is required by the Texas Education Agency for accreditation.

Overall, trustees said they were pleased with the district's accomplishments in meeting reading and math objectives established in 1977. The only exception was sixth grade reading.

The reading objective established for March 1980 stated that less than 47 percent of Midland's sixth graders should score below the national norm, 50th percentile, in the California Achievement Test (CAT). Less than 18 percent should score below the 25th national percentile and more than 28 percent should score on or above the 75th national percentile.

However, CAT results showed that 48.7 percent scored below the 50th national percentile and 22.9 percent scored below the 25th percentile with 23.9 percent scoring on or above the 75th percentile.

It was noted in the report the low scores for sixth graders did not represent a district-wide trend. But, trustees continued to express concern for the sixth graders' low scores and asked that reading improvements for next year's seventh graders be emphasized.

ALSO, THE foreign language curriculum guide was approved with the recommendation that efforts be directed toward making the program financially feasible.

Presently, the district's foreign language program is one of 50 sucessful programs in the United States, reported Dr. Robert Carter, coordinator of foreign languages.

Because of declining enrollments in the program, several ideas including combining high schools' language programs, were discussed as means to make the programs cost effective.

After much discussion, Rose and Sons Inc. was awarded the bid for repair and renovation work at Midland High School at a cost of $497,200.

Rose and Sons Inc., a Midland-Abilene based construction company, presented the lowest of three bids with an estimated 175-210 days for completion. Work will begin in early July.

At the end of that period, the company said there would be a penalty clause of $100 per day taken off the bill should it not complete the work within the estimated time.

Trustee Johnny Warren noted that since the company was willing to have a penalty clause there should be a bonus of $100 for each day the work was completed before the December deadline.

HOWEVER, TRUSTEE Ron Britton thought the bonus would be changing the bid and the other two bidders should have been presented the same offer. When a vote on the issue was taken, the bid of Rose and Sons Area Builders was accepted by a 4-to-1 vote with Britton dissenting. Trustees Parker Humes and Marshall McCrea were absent from the meeting for vacation and business reasons.

In other bids, Boyd's Carpet of Midland was awarded the carpeting contract for five Midland schools at the price of $44,875.61.

Originally, Boyd's Carpet received only two of the bids and the other three work projects went to Moffat Carpet of Midland. But, it was discovered that Moffat's bid did not meet the district's specifications and trustees awarded the whole deal to Boyd's Carpet.

All Electric of Odessa was chosento install 2,602 lighting fixtures in 17 Midland schools at a cost of $161,996. Anthony Mechanical of Midland got the contract to replace air-conditioning equipment at two high school pools for $228,800.

TO DATE, contracts for the $3 million repair and renovation bond issue passed in April are about $279,000 under the projected amount of $2,039,623.52.

Other bids were approved for a boiler at Milam Elementary and band blazers at Lee Freshman High School.

Trustees announced an informal meeting scheduled for 7 p.m. Tuesday to receive and discuss input from the public regarding discipline in the schools, minimum competency graduation requirements, coordination of school district objectives with Objectives for Midland and another possible bond issue.

No formal action regarding the issues will be taken in the meeting except for personnel appointments.

J.R. Ewing, star of television series "Dallas", is shown leaving hospital while recovering from shooting incident. Ewing, played by Larry Hagman, is surrounded by other members of the cast in this scene. J.R. lives to sin again

DALLAS (AP) — It has long been said that only the good die young. Well, J.R. Ewing, the dastardly wheeler-dealer of CBS's "Dallas," is alive and kicking.

Larry Hagman, who portrays the sinister oil and cattle baron, rejoined the 10-member cast of the television series Tuesday on location here, said Lorimar Productions publicist Earl Wingard.

J.R., probably the world's favorite TV heavy, was shot in the series' closing episode last year. No one knew then if he would survive — and it has not been revealed yet who pulled the trigger.

Almost every character in the weekly, hour-long prime time soap opera is a suspect. And Lorimar executives are determined to keep the mystery a secret until the show airs Sept. 19.

Hagman flew from London to Texas on Sunday, almost two weeks after filming of the fall series began, and on Monday reached agreement with Lorimar in their lengthy contract dispute.

Industry spokesmen speculated Hagman had demanded as much as $100,000 per episode to return to the show. The settlement reportedly makes Hagman one of the highest paid actors on television.

On Tuesday, J.R. was rolled in a wheelchair from the fictitious Dallas General Hospital.

"I was supposed to have guards 24 hours a day," cried J.R. "What burns me is how they got in the office in the first place ... They're just trying to drag more money out of me, that's what they're trying to do."

"Dallas" police already have arrested Cliff Barnes, played by Ken Kercheval, the brother of J.R.'s sister-in-law, and attorney Alan Beam, depicted by Raymond Powell.

Authorities planned to arrest J.R.'s wife, Sue Ellen, today, Wingard said.

Sue Ellen Ewing, played by Linda Gray, was to be arrested and taken to police headquarters for questioning in the shooting of her husband.

But, Wingard insists, "Nobody really knows who did it."

"That decision will be made after several shots (of nothing the suspect) are made," he said. "One will be stripped in right before air time."

Tax will support doctor

FORT COBB, Okla. (AP) — For the past 16 years, as Bruce Mackey grew up and went off to medical school, the 750 townspeople of Fort Cobb have been driving 11 miles to Carnegie to see a doctor. Today they vote on a penny tax that would bring Bruce back home — as Dr. Mackey.

The one-cent sales tax would help pay for Mackey's education at the University of Oklahoma College of Medicine. In return, Mackey, 23, says he would agree to practice in this central Oklahoma town for five to seven years.

"It's something Colleen (his wife) and I have been thinking and talking about for a long time," said the second-year student. "She's studying medicine, too. But I'd be the one to sign on the dotted line."

Floyd Ratliff, Chamber of Commerce president, said Fort Cobb would raise $15,000 for half of Mackey's schooling. The rest would come from the Government Manpower Division, he said.

Ratliff is convinced the tax, which he said would be limited to one year, will be passed.

"Everybody says they're against taxes — rarely do they know where their money ends up. But we'll know where every penny of this goes," Ratliff said.
