Heart repair

DALLAS — Scientists working on the frontiers of gene therapy have come up with a possible strategy for repairing the damage of heart attacks by transforming useless scar tissue into healthy muscle. The approach — outlined Tuesday at a meeting of the American Heart Association — is still untested, but it is one of a dozen or more ways in development to cure heart trouble by regulating the body's genes./1B

Rates rise again

The Federal Reserve Board Tuesday boosted interest rates for the sixth time this year. Affected were the federal funds rate, which banks charge each other for overnight loans, and the discount rate, which the Fed charges for its loans to banks.

Fed announces interest rate boost, largest in 13 years

■ Increase, which affects federal funds rate, discount rate, is highest in 13 years.

Associated Press

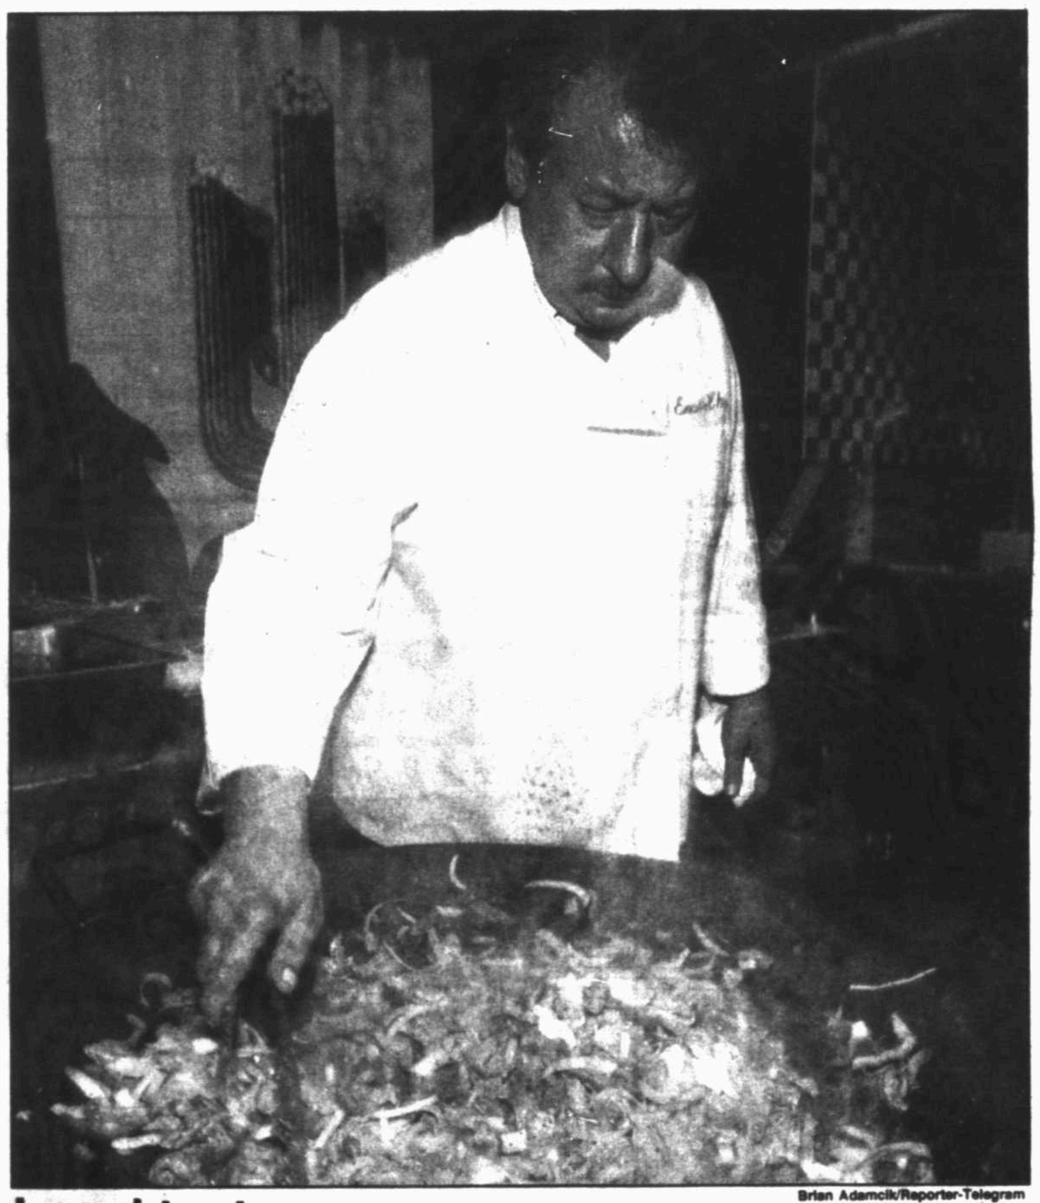

WASHINGTON — The Federal Reserve increased key interest rates three-quarters of a percentage point on Tuesday in its most dramatic move yet to slow the surging economy and prevent a new cycle of inflation.

The Fed's rate increase, the sixth this year and the largest in 13 years, was immediately matched by similar 0.75 percentage point increases in major banks' prime lending rates, meaning that the cost of borrowing for millions of Americans will be going up.

Financial markets had a mixed reaction to the larger-than-expected rate increase. The Dow Jones industrial average finished the day down 3 points. The beleaguered dollar rallied on currency markets and Treasury's benchmark 30-year bond, a sensitive barometer of inflation concerns, posted a slight gain as well.

The Fed increased its target for the federal funds rate, the interest that banks charge each other, from 4.75 percent,

Realtors join to provide broad information base

By Melia McEwen

Midland and Odessa Realtors have banded together to form the Greater West Texas Regional MLS Inc.

The joint corporation — announced Tuesday — was formed by the Midland Association of Realtors and the Odessa Board of Realtors.

Mark Clark, owner of Consolidated Professional Consultants, a real estate and computer consulting firm in Odessa, will serve as the organization's first president.

The joint corporation will replace the multiple listing services separately operated in Midland and Odessa.

The new venture will provide customers a broader base of information, Clark said.

"(Too) you're looking at 400 agents initially with access to every piece of property listed with the new MLS," he said.

The new MLS will serve a 26-county region.

"There's substantial movement between cities in the Permian Basin, such as Andrews to Midland and vice versa. This will facilitate those moves."

The regional MLS, expected to be available in late February, will offer a new state-of-the-art computer system by Realty Information Systems, that allows users faster

Forecasters predict high winds, but hard freeze will have to wait

By Gary Shanks
Staff Writer

Temperatures early this morning may have threatened to break the freezing point, but a hard freeze is not expected in the immediate future, even from a Pacific cold front that will be moving in Thursday, according to a forecaster at the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport.

The main feature of Thursday's front will be winds and not low temperatures, according to the NWS forecaster. The Pacific front is warmer than the Canadian front that moves down through the nation's mid-section and a hard freeze is not expected.

Temperatures this morning were predicted to only skim the freezing mark for a short time.

"It's not going to be a hard freeze," the spokesman said. The average date for the first freeze in Midland is Nov. 9, with Oct. 19 being the earliest in the year a freeze has

Beauty queen faces trial on charges of attempted murder of romantic rival

LEWISBURG, W.Va. (AP) — Tracy Lippard, a statuesque blonde from Virginia, crowned her successor as Miss Williamsburg and sang two songs on stage. Then, with pistol, butcher knife and lighter fluid, the beauty queen drove 250 miles on an alleged mission to snuff out her romantic rival.

The attempt in February was foiled by her target's father, a former Secret Service agent who put her in a headlock and wrestled her to the ground, police said.

Lippard, a 23-year-old dentist's daughter with a dazzling smile, goes on trial today on attempted murder charges.

"I guess she was going to kill us all and burn the house down," said Rodney Weikle, the father of Lippard's rival, Melissa Scott.

At the time of the attack, Mrs. Scott, 24,

Jim Webb was officially sworn in as the City Council's District 3 representative during a Tuesday morning ceremony at the City Council chambers at City Hall.

Before the council and about a dozen attendees, Webb was administered the oath of office by Deputy City Secretary Lyn Miller.

"I'd like to thank the members of City Council for appointing me . . . It's an honor to serve the people of District 3," he said afterward.

The newly appointed council member replaces consulting geologist Ed Vogler, 78, who died Oct. 11 after being elected to the District 3 position in May.

Webb, a 63-year-old independent geologist, was unanimously selected by the City Council last week following public interviews with 10 applicants earlier.

Webb will serve the remainder of the term that expires June 3, 1996.

Summit fulfills dreams, visions; also produces misgivings for some

By Marcus Ellason
Associated Press

JAKARTA, Indonesia — President Clinton saw more jobs for Detroit. Australia's Paul Keating predicted billions of dollars in new earnings. Malaysia's Mahathir Mohamad brooded about an "invasion" of foreign companies.

Tuesday's Pacific rim summit produced heady visions and some discord, but Keating defined the moment for many when he spoke of "the beginning of the Pacific century."

The 18-member Asia-Pacific Economic Cooperation forum, until recently a concept as vague as its name, crowned its second summit by adopting a sweeping resolution to remove trade and investment barriers in the world's fastest-growing region by the year 2020.

Taking into account the differing levels of development in a group that ranges from the United States and Japan to China and Papua New Guinea, the summit decided the rich countries would drop barriers by 2010, giving poorer nations a decade to catch up.

"We have set a course for the future," said President Suharto of Indonesia, who played host to the summit at his summer palace an hour's drive south of Jakarta.

President Clinton, the host of APEC's first summit in Seattle last year, refrained from superlatives, and sought to put the accord in layman's terms.

Even after the tariff-smashing World Trade Organization comes into being next year, he noted, customs on American cars entering some Asian countries will be 30-60 percent, compared with 2.5 percent on Asian cars entering the United States.

"This APEC agreement will knock down Asian tariffs even further, and American autos will therefore be more affordable. That means for an auto worker in Detroit or Toledo, more secure jobs and factories with more workers," he told reporters.

Keating said the agreement would create 70,000 jobs for Australia.

But Mahathir, a frequent critic of APEC, registered formal reservations. He said Malaysia would do its best to meet the later deadline, but "I don't think anybody should force us to open up our country to an invasion by powerful companies from the developed countries."

President Jiang Zemin of China, whose country's economic revolution is helping to fuel Asia's breakneck growth, also struck a cautionary note.

"Liberalization should proceed from reality and should be implemented in a phased and gradual manner. There should be different timetables" for each country to lower barriers, he said.

Judge convicts 'disturbed' teen in child's death

MAASTRICHT, Netherlands (AP) — A 13-year-old boy was convicted Tuesday of drowning a 5-year-old in a neighborhood swimming pool, in a case that has raised questions about the treatment of mentally disturbed youths.

The older boy was on a one-week vacation from a treatment center when he drowned the child in July.

The defendant, whose name was withheld, confessed to repeatedly pushing Ramon Theuniszen underwater during a fight in an outdoor swimming pool in Susteren, 15 miles north of Maastricht, according to newspaper accounts. The child died a day later in a hospital.

Agreeing with expert testimony that the defendant was "in a state of diminished responsibility," the three-judge panel sentenced the youth to indefinite confinement in a treatment center.

Militants threaten peace process unless aid comes, Arafat says

By Claude E. Erbsen
Associated Press

GAZA CITY, Gaza Strip — Islamic militants are using poverty to gain influence and the peace process could collapse if donor nations don't make good on aid pledges, Yasser Arafat said Tuesday.

The Palestinian leader said that less than $40 million, only 6 percent of the money pledged, has come through, while Islamic opponents of the peace process are receiving money from Iran, Arab oil states and private donors in the United States.

In an interview with The Associated Press and APTV, Arafat said failure to meet Gaza's pressing economic needs could result in violence.

"More serious than that — the explosion of the peace process," he said.

Arafat blamed Israel for spurring the cycle of violence.

For example, he said, a suicide bomb attack that killed three Israeli soldiers near a Jewish settlement in Gaza on Friday was in response for the Nov. 2 car bomb assassination of an Islamic fundamentalist leader, Hani Abed.

"Violence has two sides, and the target is the peace of the brave," said Arafat.

The Palestinian leader said it was Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin who nurtured the radical Hamas movement as a rival to Arafat's PLO during the Palestinian uprising that began in December 1987, when Rabin was defense minister.

"It wasn't me who established and gave license to this movement. Israel's government gave them 700 licenses," he said, referring to permits Israel's military authorities issued for private schools, clinics and other social centers.

Rabin said Arafat has not done enough to prevent the spate of suicide attacks on Israelis carried out by Hamas and Islamic Jihad despite a Palestinian crackdown the past few days in the Gaza Strip.

"Continued terrorism by extreme Islamic groups, Hamas and Islamic Jihad, if it continues, can put a question mark over the basis of the agreement between us," Rabin said in a tour of army outposts protecting Jewish settlers in Gaza.

Arafat, who spoke a day after his PLO police stopped a rally by Islamic militants in honor of Abed, said he was doing all he could "to cool things down. But for how long?"

Arafat spoke in his small whitewashed office overlooking the Mediterranean Sea. Members of his Cabinet sat in on the interview while soldiers armed with automatic rifles stood guard outside.

Arafat arrived in a buoyant mood after addressing a rally of about 5,000 cheering supporters to mark Palestinian Independence Day. "God willing, next year we will celebrate independence in Jerusalem, the capital of the Palestinian state," he told the crowd gathered at the Yarmouk Stadium.

He blamed donor nations for dragging their feet in delivering on their promise of $690 million in the first year of autonomy, which began in May.

"Some international sources are behind all of this," said Arafat who appeared to be alluding to the United States.

He said that 58 percent unemployment makes the Gaza Strip an explosive area. "Some fanatic groups," he said, "are using poverty" as a cover for violence.

Arafat said his administration needs more than what has already been pledged to rebuild the infrastructure of the Gaza Strip which he said was destroyed by 27 years of Israeli occupation.

COLD: Front to bring in high winds occurred.

Strong winds could result in blowing sand and dust in the Permian Basin. Increased moisture along the front line likely will cause precipitation north of here, but probably not in the area, he said. The forecast is for a 20 percent chance of showers.

Cloudiness should be decreasing by Thursday afternoon.

Overcast skies are expected to accompany the windy front. Very dry air is expected to follow the initial frontal system.

The extended forecast calls for mostly cloudy skies on Saturday and Sunday with low temperatures in the lower 40s and highs in the lower 60s.

Today calls for increasing cloudiness and breezy with a high around 60 and south winds increasing 15-25 mph and gusty.

Tonight should be mostly cloudy and breezy with a low between 40 and 45.

Thursday calls for decreasing cloudiness during the afternoon with a high between 65-70.

After an overnight low of 36, Tuesday's high reached 60, compared to the record high for that date of 84 set in 1963. The record low was 24 set in 1932.

STATE

Rain yielded to cool but mostly cloudy weather over much of the eastern half of Texas Tuesday.

Skies were partly cloudy over the Panhandle and elsewhere in West Texas.

The clouds and brisk winds of 10-20 mph out of the north kept things cool over much of the state.

Temperatures across the region ranged from the 40s in the West Texas mountains to the mid-50s to low 60s over much of the state. Southeast Texas and the Gulf Coast saw 70s.

Today should be partly cloudy in North Texas, except for mostly cloudy skies from Temple to Tyler. Areas around Palestine could see a slight chance of rain. Highs will be in the 60s. Lows will be in the upper 40s to low 50s.

South Texas should be mostly cloudy with highs in the 60s inland, 70s on the coast. Lows will be in the 50s and 60s.

NATION

Tropical Storm Gordon pounded southern Florida with up to 8 inches of rain and high wind Tuesday, and as much as 3 inches of rain fell on Texas. Wyoming posted a low of 21 degrees below zero.

Gordon crossed the southern tip of Florida and the Florida Keys island chain Tuesday, after being blamed for more than 100 deaths in Haiti.

Rainfall totals averaged 3 to 5 inches, but with spots getting as much as 8 inches, including 8.63 at Homestead.

Wind blew at a sustained speed of about 50 mph around the storm's center.

Showers and thunderstorms broke out along a cold front that extended across the central and eastern parts of the nation, angling from Texas across the middle Mississippi Valley into New England.

BOOST: Fed announces interest rate increase

where it had been since Aug. 16, to 5.50 percent. Since Feb. 4, the federal funds rate, which started the year at 3 percent, has risen by 2.5 percentage points.

The Fed also boosted its discount rate, the interest the central bank charges for direct loans, by three-quarters of a point to 4.75 percent.

It marked the biggest jump in the Fed's discount rate since it was raised a full percentage point in May 1981, a period when the central bank was pushing interest rates to their highest level since the Civil War in an effort to attack double-digit inflation.

The Clinton administration, which since taking office has refrained from criticizing the Fed, was restrained in its comments. Both Treasury Secretary Lloyd Bentsen and White House chief economist Laura D'Andrea Tyson issued statements emphasizing the Fed's independence.

"The administration and the Federal Reserve share a common goal of steady growth with low inflation," said Bentsen. Tyson said, "The news on the economy is very good. The buoyant investment-led expansion continues."

However, Fed critics accused the bank of overkill, saying the Fed's tight-money policies were increasing chances of a recession. They said that with consumer prices rising this year at a modest rate of 2.8 percent, there was no justification for a rate increase of this magnitude.

Congressional Democrats, who are about to relinquish their majority position to Republicans, were the most vociferous in their attacks.

"The Fed has levied a huge new tax on consumers and homeowners in the form of higher consumer loan rates and higher mortgage rates," said House Banking Committee Chairman Henry B. Gonzalez, D-Texas. "Apparently, America's monetary policy is being crafted to profit the barons of Wall Street while taxing those on Main Street."

House Budget Committee Chairman Martin Sabo, D-Minn., said that the Fed's continued rate increases would hurt "working men and women who have not seen their wages keep up with the expanding economy."

Some economists were critical as well.

"The Federal Reserve took another big step toward cutting the legs out from under the economy," said Martin Regalia, chief economist at the U.S. Chamber of Commerce. He said the economy was headed, if not for an outright recession, then for a growth recession in which the unemployment rate will begin to rise.

After more than four hours of closed-door discussions by its key policy-setting Federal Open Market Committee, the central bank announced its decision in a brief statement. It said the action was "necessary to keep inflation contained and thereby foster sustainable economic growth."

The Fed said the increase in the discount rate was taken on a unanimous 7-0 vote of the Fed board.

"These measures were taken against the background of evidence of persistent strength in economic activity and high and rising levels of resource utilization," the Fed said.

The decision came on a day when the government reported that retail sales jumped up by an unexpectedly strong 1.1 percent in October and U.S. industry operated at 84.9 percent of capacity last month, the highest level in nearly 15 years.

Most major banks pushed their prime lending rates from 7.75 percent to 8.5 percent, the highest level for this benchmark rate since early 1991. Many home equity loans and small business loans are tied to changes in the prime rate.

Many economists applauded the Fed's decision. The Fed is trying to engineer a soft landing for the economy, in which growth slows enough to keep prices under control.

Cynthia Latta, an economist at DRI-McGraw Hill Inc., said that without the Fed's efforts, the economy was headed for a boom-bust cycle in which unsustainable rates of growth would have triggered sharp price increases and forced even higher rate increases next year.

Bruce Steinberg, an economist at Merrill Lynch in New York, said the Fed's three-quarter-point increase bought the central bank some breathing room where the markets won't be worried about the next rate increase, at least until late January or early February.

"No one will expect the Fed to do any more until midwinter," Steinberg said. "If the economy has slowed enough by then, it is possible that this will be the last rate hike."

KILL: Former beauty queen to stand trial

was eight months pregnant by a man Lippard had dated. Mrs. Scott and the boyfriend, Todd Scott, 26, married in August.

On the night of Feb. 26, wearing a black sequin dress with her hair swept to one side, the 6-foot Lippard sang the pageant theme song, Whitney Houston's "I'm Every Woman," and also performed Celine Dion's "The Power of Love."

"She was in a very good mood that whole weekend," Kristen Dutton, entry chairman for the pageant, told The Washington Post.

Early the following morning, Lippard left Williamsburg, near her hometown of Newport News, Va., for Lewisburg, where Mrs. Scott lived with her parents.

Along the way to West Virginia, police said, Lippard switched license plates on her red Toyota, putting on stolen New York tags after she received a ticket in Virginia for going 80 mph in a 65 mph zone.

Lippard, "wearing a blazer and looking collegiately dressed," knocked on the door of the Weikle home, saying her car had broken down, Greenbrier County Prosecutor Richard Lorensen said. Weikle told her where a nearby service station was, but she declined the help and said she would try to get the car started, Lorensen said.

Lorensen said she returned to the door several minutes later in an overcoat, concealing a 9mm pistol allegedly stolen from a friend, a knife and a hammer.

Lippard asked to use the telephone and Weikle offered her a glass of water while they waited for the phone to be free, Lorensen said. Weikle led Lippard into the kitchen, where she pulled out the hammer and struck him twice in the head, the prosecutor said.

"Although I hadn't been in that situation for 20 years, it didn't take me long to react," said Weikle, 51, who teaches high school math and coaches baseball. "I twirled her around and put her in a headlock."

Weikle's wife, Carlynn, then walked into the kitchen as Lippard pulled a gun from her coat pocket, Weikle said.

"I got my hand on the gun to turn it away from where my wife was and took her down on the ground with one arm on her neck and one hand on the gun," Weikle said. "My wife got the other hand and we held her on the ground."

Police who arrested Lippard found lighter fluid, matches and the knife with her. They also found a list of questions in her car that she apparently prepared to ask Scott: "Are you in love with Melissa? How long did you date her? If she were not pregnant, would you still be thinking of her?"

Scott said he met Lippard in November 1993 in Newport News, where she had studied political science at Christopher Newport University, and dated her just two or three times.

Lorensen, however, said Scott was a "Don Juan" and Lippard his "weekend girlfriend." Lippard and Scott had a "blow-up argument" 11 days before the attack, Lorensen said.

A week before the attack, Lippard was seen by a neighbor "scouting out" the Weikle house, Lorensen said.

Scott, a construction worker, said he dated Mrs. Scott before meeting Lippard and found out soon after he started seeing Lippard that Mrs. Scott was five months pregnant.

"She knew the facts," Scott said of Lippard. "I talked about the baby all the time."

Scott, who was living in High Point, N.C., at the time, said he called his pregnant girlfriend after the attack. "While I had Melissa on the phone, she mentioned that the woman was about 6-foot-1 and blonde," he said. "I got off the phone and said to myself, 'No way. It couldn't be.'"

The Scotts and their 7-month-old daughter live with the Weikles in Lewisburg.

Lippard, who is free on bond, is charged with three counts of attempted murder, carrying concealed weapons, malicious wounding and other offenses. She faces up to 39 years in prison if convicted of all charges.

access and a display of color photographs of properties. Users will also be able to copy the entire database into their personal computers.

Clark said the new system will allow Realtors to do a better job of locating what their customers are looking for and will give customers a better look at the available properties.

The regional MLS will include not only residential properties but commercial, investment and farm and ranch properties as well.

In addition, the MLS will be able to communicate with the national Realtors Information Network — delivering housing statistics to national headquarters and provide more accurate, definitive reports on such statistics as number of listings and number of properties sold.

U.S. Representative Larry Combest has recognized local Realtors for making use of the Odessa-Midland Metropolitan Statistical Area, which has placed the MSA within the top dozen Texas cities.

"Representing both Midland and Odessa, I am pleased to see their combined strengths used to promote the benefits each city offers," Combest said in a statement.

"When I requested the U.S. Department of Commerce designate this two-city connection for us, I felt that local small businesses in both cities would use this MSA designation to their mutual advantage.

"The Greater West Texas Regional MLS Inc. is a natural outgrowth encouraging this winning combination," Combest said.

The regional MLS will have offices at the Permian Basin Regional Planning Commission Office Complex, 2910 LaForce Blvd., at Midland International Airport.

In addition to Clark, other officers include Kay McDonald of Midland, vice president; Charles Chambers of Odessa, secretary-/treasurer. Directors are Shana McGill, Ludie Warner and Martha Worley of Odessa, Sarah Collins, John Elphick, Patty Frizell and Joel Oldham of Midland.

The counties covered by the MLS are Gaines, Dawson, Borden, Scurry, Andrews, Martin, Howard, Mitchell, Culberson, Loving, Winkler, Ector, Midland, Glasscock, Reeves, Ward, Crane, Upton, Reagan, Crockett, Terrell, Pecos, Jeff Davis, Presidio, Brewster and Val Verde.

The venture is only the third area in Texas to regionalize, following the Fort Worth Metroplex area and Harlingen/McAllen, Clark said.

Hispanic groups urge boycott of California products

AUSTIN (AP) — Two Hispanic groups on Tuesday urged a minority boycott of California-related products and entertainment — including Mickey Mouse — after that state voted to deny education and other services to illegal immigrants.

"If California doesn't want our people, we don't want to do business with California," said state Rep. Roberto Alonzo of Dallas, head of the Mexican American Democrats of Texas, one of two state MAD groups.

Alonzo was joined at a Capitol news conference by Dallas businessman Luis de la Garza, president of the North Texas immigrant-rights organization El Grupo de Apoyo a Immigrantes Latinoamericanos, or GAILA.

De la Garza, who has a radio talk show, and Alonzo said they've received calls of concern since California's Nov. 8 passage of Proposition 187.

"The hysteria ... has already come to Texas," Alonzo said, recounting the story of a woman who was told by a bill collector, "'Ma'am, if you don't pay your bill, now that Proposition 187 has passed, we're going to call the INS (Immigration and Naturalization Service) in to deport you.'"

Alonzo, calling specifically on minority leaders and organizations, said groups shouldn't have their conventions in California and should boycott "anything that's connected to California, even Mickey Mouse. We should stop doing business with California."

Hispanic-Americans in Arizona also have planned action in response to the proposition's passage, including a boycott.

Disneyland spokesman John McClintock said Disney was neutral on Proposition 187 and the park hasn't yet seen an effect on attendance. "It's a free country, and I think people should be able to do what they feel they have to do," McClintock said of the proposed boycott.

Sean Walsh, press secretary for California Gov. Pete Wilson, said, "Boycotts hurt everyone" — including recent, legal immigrants in entry-level service and manufacturing jobs.

SWEAR: Council administers oath of office to new member council members are paid $25 a month.

Webb, a resident of Midland since 1952 and of District 3 for more than 30 years, said he is "looking forward" to serving the city.

"I feel like I have a grasp of what people want," he said.

In serving the people, Webb welcomes input from his constituents.

"If you have an opinion on an issue you'd like to express, I'd like you to write me," he said.

Webb said letters can be addressed to: 1703 Douglas Ave., Midland, 79701.

District 3 — which largely encompasses central Midland — is generally bounded by Wadley Avenue on the north and Big Spring Street on the east. The boundary essentially continues south along Industrial Avenue, up Garfield Street to Illinois Avenue then west to Midkiff Road. The district line continues north on Midkiff Road, then west at Golf Course Road to Midland Drive north to Wadley Avenue.

Webb said he applied for the position because "they needed someone and it gives me an opportunity to serve."

Soldiers rescue Haitians stranded by floods

By Susanne M. Schafer
AP Military Writer

JACMEL, Haiti — U.S. troops in a rubber assault boat plucked Haitians from trees and crumbling houses as flood waters swept through this tiny southern coastal town.

"That's the reward of this job. It's not every day you get to be a hero," Maj. Tony Schwalm said of his soldiers-turned-saviors, who spent the early-morning hours Monday rescuing about 100 inhabitants of this town of 16,000.

But many residents, mostly women and small children, were unable to leap into the outstretched arms of the Army Special Forces soldiers as they piloted their inflatable boat — normally used for stealthy assault missions — through the churning waters in the aftermath of Tropical Storm Gordon.

"There were 26 dead that we know of. I'm sure more will surface" as the town begins to dig out from the mud, said Sgt. Charles Lynn, the Fort Bragg, N.C., unit's operations sergeant. "The guys were grabbing kids as the houses they were in just disappeared into the water."

Four of his soldiers went out to help local firefighters deal with the flooding shortly after midnight, but all 36 joined in the rescue effort as it became clear part of the center of town was being swept away in the mud, Schwalm said.

About 100 other soldiers from the 10th Mountain Division, based in Port-au-Prince, were moving into Jacmel on Tuesday to help with the cleanup, he said.

"If we clean out a few logs, that will go a long way towards building goodwill in this town," he said.

Schwalm and Lynn's unit came to Jacmel in September as part of the U.S. mission to restore democracy to Haiti and help train local security forces.

The unit's experts in civil affairs are helping bolster the impoverished area's health and sanitation network and work with private relief organizations to distribute food and other assistance.

"We had short-term plans and we had long-term plans. But we didn't plan on 45 tons of mud coming into town," Schwalm told Ted McNamara, the assistant secretary of state for political-military affairs, who had come by helicopter Tuesday to assess the soldiers' operation.

McNamara said the U.S. effort in Haiti has gone much better than Washington had ever hoped. "Most of the soldiers' energies are devoted to civic action and not basic security problems. I'm impressed with how receptive people are to change, and perhaps that has been a function of lifting that repressive, military regime off their back," McNamara said.

Parts of Haiti were inundated with up to 15 inches of water Sunday, and Jacmel was hit by 13 inches in one 12-hour period, Lynn said. Mudslides poured off the country's hillsides, many stripped of their tree cover over the past decades as residents sought out wood for fuel.

As members of Schwalm's unit took the American visitors out to view the stricken city, women with brooms pushed the ankle-deep mud out the front doors of many of the brightly painted green, blue or red houses along the town's main street.

Men, some knee-deep in water, pitched shovels of mud down ravines where pieces of rock and wood were all that was left of tiny homes.

Irish official asks for peace within parties

DUBLIN, Ireland (AP) — Prime Minister Albert Reynolds pleaded Tuesday for his government's life, urging lawmakers not to jeopardize a historic chance to achieve peace in Northern Ireland.

The government's fate will be decided Wednesday when Reynolds' coalition partners vote on whether to withdraw from the 2-year-old coalition with the prime minister's Fianna Fail party.

In a speech to parliament on Tuesday, Reynolds said the governing coalition should not be allowed to founder after attaining the biggest achievement in Northern Ireland in a quarter-century — the IRA's Sept. 1 truce.

"I believe the national interest requires continuity at this time," he said in a speech to the Dail, the lower house of parliament, broadcast nationwide on radio and television.

"In particular, it is my profound conviction that we have to give the fragile Northern peace process the best possible chance of permanent consolidation."

Reynolds said it would be "a great pity if a government that is achieving rapid economic progress, that has achieved the biggest breakthrough in Northern Ireland in over 25 years, and that has a fine legislative program, should be placed in jeopardy over misunderstandings surrounding a single judicial appointment."

The coalition crisis developed over Reynolds' appointment of a conservative, Attorney General Harry Whelehan, as president of the high court. The move angered coalition partners in the Labor Party, who walked out of a Cabinet meeting on Friday. The opposition Fine Gail Party formally called for a no-confidence vote for Wednesday.

If the Labor Party doesn't back Reynolds in Wednesday's vote, Ireland could face national elections, or a scramble to form a new government with other parties.

Whelehan was criticized for not extraditing a priest charged with sexually abusing children. For seven months, Whelehan's office took no action on the request from Northern Ireland for the Rev. Brendan Smyth, accused of molesting children for more than 20 years.

Smyth returned voluntarily to Northern Ireland last year, where he was convicted and is serving a four-year sentence.

Reynolds admitted that the attorney general's office had failed badly in not responding to the extradition request. But he said Whelehan was not personally responsible for the failure and defended Whelehan's appointment to the senior judicial post.

Bosnian Serbs continue steady advance on government targets

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — Fighting convulsed Bosnia's northwest pocket Tuesday, where dug-in government troops were trying to keep Bosnian Serbs from overrunning an internationally protected safe zone.

Fighting also exploded in the Majevica hills in northeastern Bosnia, site of a Serb-held TV tower, and near Mostar on the southwest front. Serbs claimed gains in both regions, but U.N. officials said the Muslim-led government army appeared to have the upper hand.

In the north, Bosnian Serbs shelled Tuzla, another so-called U.N. "safe area," for a second straight day, killing one resident and wounding three.

NATO was under pressure to respond to the fighting in the Bihac pocket in the northwest and to U.N. accusations that Serbs in neighboring Croatia were helping Bosnian Serbs by providing artillery cover. The Serbs deny it.

The mostly-Muslim Bihac pocket is sandwiched between Bosnian Serb forces to the south and east and Croatian Serb rebels to the north and west.

Croatian government and NATO officials met Tuesday to discuss a possible air response to Croatian Serb interference in Bosnia's war. Paul Risley, a senior U.N. spokesman, said NATO should have "full means" to keep Croatian Serbs in check.

NATO has launched air strikes on Bosnian Serb targets five times because of violations involving U.N.-decreed "safe areas" or attacks on U.N. personnel. The alliance wants to extend its mandate, currently limited to Bosnia, to cover shelling from Croatian Serb land into Bosnia.

Risley said NATO and Croatian officials discussed the "immediate extension of close air support" to Croatian border areas held by Serbs. Close air support can include air strikes.

"We would like to see NATO have the ability to respond by full means to such (cross-border) attacks, should they occur," Risley said in Sarajevo.

Bosnian Serb Gen. Manojlo Milovanovic, in charge of the Bihac assault, shrugged off any NATO threat.

"We are ready for a NATO air strike," he told the Vecernje Novosti daily in Belgrade, Yugoslavia. "We have already prepared a proper response for everyone, including NATO. ... I personally think that the safe areas no longer exist."

According to Bosnian radio, 11 people were killed and 26 wounded in Bosnian government-held territory in Bihac since Monday.

Serbs and government troops in the Bihac region were fighting for control of the Grabez plateau, high ground northeast of Bihac city.

Lt. Col. Tim Spicer, a U.N. spokesman, said close-range fighting was not spilling off the plateau into government-held territory that has been declared a safe area by the United Nations.

"It is unclear who actually is ahead of the game up there at the moment," he said. "There's quite intense fighting going on ... We can't get close to it."

Spicer said there was no indication government forces were retreating, although previous U.N. reports said Bosnian Serb forces had regained most of the territory taken by government troops in a recent offensive.

Bosnian army sources and U.N. reports obtained by The Associated Press on Monday indicated government forces still maintained key defensive positions.

Alija Izetbegovic, Bosnia's Muslim president, was quoted by state radio Tuesday as expressing confidence his troops could hold out.

Rugged terrain stands between the Bosnian Serbs and Bihac city, which the U.N. Security Council declared a safe area in 1993.

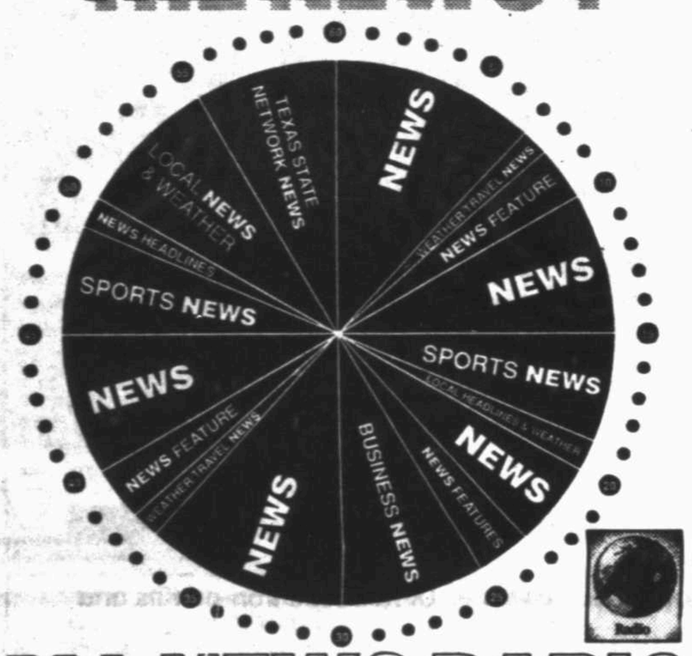

Seven SA-2 surface-to-air missiles were fired late Monday outside the "safe zone," and several hit in and around Cazin, north of Bihac, Risley said. There was no word of casualties.

Gordon sweeps Florida; storm causes 1 death

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — A drenching Tropical Storm Gordon swept the southern tip of Florida on Tuesday, grounding a 566-foot freighter just off the beach and killing a pregnant motorist.

Gordon moved into the Gulf of Mexico off Key West with 50 mph winds and was expected to slow down for a day or so after dumping up to 11½ inches of rain on South Florida.

The storm knocked out power to 397,000 homes and businesses, but by late afternoon Florida Power & Light said only about 26,000 customers were still without power.

At 4 p.m. EST Tuesday, Gordon was 60 miles northwest of Key West and creeping northwest at 8 mph in the Gulf of Mexico.

More than 100 people were killed in Haiti and two each died in Jamaica and Cuba as the deadliest tropical storm of the season spun through the Caribbean.

In Florida, Elena Quicano, 36, of Hialeah was killed Monday when she was thrown from her vehicle in a three-car collision and run over by a pickup at a traffic light broken by the storm, police said. She was seven months pregnant.

Between thundershowers Tuesday, the sight of the grounded Turkish freighter Firat just yards from shore in Fort Lauderdale awed tourists and beachgoers.

"We won't be able to do a whole lot until the weather clears," said Coast Guard spokesman Bill Marks.

The ship, carrying 2,400 tons of steel, ran aground before dawn with a crew of 29 but didn't appear to be in danger of breaking up in the heavy surf, said Coast Guard Petty Officer David French.

Broward County employee Stephen Higgins said the three-day storm had caused worse beach erosion than the fast-moving Hurricane Andrew two years ago.

"This is just chewing it up and taking it offshore," he said. The oceanfront Highway A1A near the grounded ship was lined with sand drifts.

Farmers have Thanksgiving orders to fill, but heavy rain has left standing water across 60,000 acres in the Homestead area, which supplies about half of the nation's winter vegetables. The wind damaged eggplant, squash and peppers.

A damage estimate is days away.

Safety Board extends rules for small planes

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Transportation Safety Board recommended Tuesday that the strict rules governing major airlines be extended to smaller commuter carriers, whose safety record has caused concern in recent years.

"I believe we have largely outgrown the need for separate" regulations for large and smaller airlines, said board member John Lauber.

"We have a safe commuter airline system," added Chairman Jim Hall, but he said the proposed changes will make things "even safer."

The recommendations, following a nine-month investigation of commuter airline safety, go to the Federal Aviation Administration for action.

FAA Administrator David R. Hinson said he agrees with the board: "One level of safety is the top priority of this agency."

That was echoed by Jeff Brundage of the Air Line Pilots Association, who said he was very pleased with the board action.

Regional airlines feeding passengers to major carriers — and often operating under the colors of those carriers — have proliferated in recent years. Several crashes, including in Hibbing, Minn., Columbus, Ohio and most recently in northern Indiana, have focused attention on that segment of the industry.

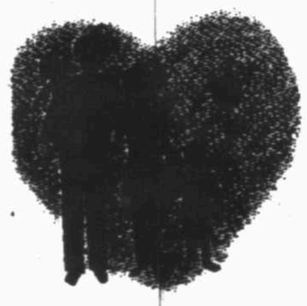

Current rules impose tougher standards on planes with 31 seats or more. The safety board recommended extending those rules to planes with 20 seats or more, and those of 10 to 19 seats "wherever possible."

This would put nearly all scheduled airline flights under the same strict rules, while leaving the less severe standards in effect for air taxis and other unscheduled small planes.

Among other things the changes would tighten safety inspections of aircraft, reduce the number of hours pilots can fly, require dispatchers to assist crew in checking the weather, determining the weight and balance of the plane, planning routes and other ground duty.

The safety board also called for improved training for FAA inspectors, suggested that flight simulators be required for pilot training and urged major airlines to take a hand in improving the safety of commuter operators that fly under their nameplates.

And the board urged the FAA to seek congressional approval to regulate smaller airports where commuter planes land, more than 300 of which do not come under FAA rules.

Balanced budget is high priority on '95 agenda

WASHINGTON (AP) — Republican congressional leaders moved a balanced budget amendment toward the top of their 1995 agenda Tuesday; the Democratic White House challenged them to specify the sacrifices needed to wipe out the red ink.

Rep. Newt Gingrich, due to be installed as the first Republican speaker in four decades, said the House would probably vote on the proposed constitutional amendment Jan. 19, a scant two weeks after the session begins.

He told a receptive audience at the conservative Heritage Foundation that over five to seven years, Republicans could find the cuts needed to balance the budget if they displayed "nerve and firmness."

Gingrich mentioned no specific examples, although he spoke scathingly in his speech of federal programs for welfare, education, public housing and homelessness.

'We have to be very straight with the American people about what programs will have to be cut and what sacrifices will have to be made.'

— Leon Panetta, White House Chief of Staff

In the Senate, GOP leader Bob Dole met privately with several Republicans to discuss a quick start-up for the 104th Congress. Dole indicated he'd move ahead swiftly on the balanced budget amendment, one senator said afterward, and officials hinted that Senate hearings might begin even before the House vote.

In comments that echoed the just-concluded mid-term election campaign, White House Chief of Staff Leon Panetta told reporters that spending cuts totaling as much as $1 trillion over seven years would be needed to finance the GOP plan to simultaneously cut taxes, increase defense spending and wipe out the deficit.

"I'm not saying we shouldn't make the effort," Panetta said after an hour-long meeting with Dole and Gingrich that he described as a post-election courtesy call to explore potential areas of cooperation.

"But if we're going to do it, we have to be very straight with the American people about what programs will have to be cut and what sacrifices will have to be made," he said.

Republicans made a balanced budget amendment the centerpiece of the just-concluded midterm election campaign, and Democrats insisted — to equally persistent Republican denials — the GOP blueprint would lead to unacceptable spending cuts, including Medicare and Social Security.

While the two parties staked out their starting positions on the potentially explosive issue, Republicans pressed ahead with a transition to a GOP majority.

Rep. Jim Nussle of Iowa, a little known second-termer tapped to head the Republican transition team, met with key House officers. Among them, the doorkeeper, the House clerk and the director of non-legislative affairs oversee hundreds of workers that Republicans will be able to replace.

Protesters rally against Proposition 187

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Doctors and nurses at a medical clinic rallied on Tuesday against Proposition 187, the voter-approved initiative that would deny most public services to illegal immigrants.

Enforcement of the law has been suspended pending court challenges, and a hearing was set for today in federal court.

The rally at the Edward Roybal Health Center drew about 100 staff members and 150 patients. Staffers said appointments at the clinic had dropped sharply since the measure was overwhelmingly approved by voters on Nov. 8.

Pat Lopez, a nurse in obstetrics and gynecology, said the rally was organized "to inform the community that nothing has changed yet in regard to their care.

"We don't intend to report them to the immigration service," she said.

Under the measure, illegal immigrants would be denied most public services, including education, welfare and non-emergency medical treatment.

It also would require health and welfare officials and educators to report to immigration authorities anyone suspected of being an illegal immigrant.

In Texas, meanwhile, two Hispanic groups called for a minority boycott of California-related businesses, including the entertainment industry.

"If California doesn't want our people, we don't want to do business with California," said state Rep. Roberto Alonzo of Dallas, head of Mexican American Democrats of Texas.

Endorsing Alonzo's call at an Austin news conference was Dallas businessman Luis de la Garza, president of the North Texas immigrant-rights organization El Grupo de Apoyo a Immigrantes Latinoamericanos, or GAILA.

Summit trade agreements are good, Clinton says

By Jeffrey Hoffman
AP Business Writer

■ CLINTON UPDATE: Call Cityline 560-2400, enter 6201.

Talking free trade is easy, makes good headlines and bears no price tag. Working out the details of market-opening agreements that help boost American exports is likely to prove far more difficult.

President Clinton and Asian leaders, concluding a summit of the 18-member Asia-Pacific Economic Cooperation forum in Jakarta, pledged on Tuesday to eliminate all barriers to commerce among Pacific Rim nations by 2020. That would create the world's largest free-trade area and make NAFTA look puny.

APEC — a loose grouping of nations ranging from economic behemoths like the United States and Japan to newly industrialized Taiwan to impoverished Papua New Guinea — accounts for 40 percent of the world's population, over half of its $12 trillion economy and more than 40 percent of global trade.

For the United States, anything that expands American access to the region's vibrant markets is a plus. China is growing 10 percent a year and other nations are booming, while the U.S. economy increasingly relies on exports for growth.

"This agreement is good news for the countries of this region and especially good news for the United States and its workers," Clinton said.

The deal calls on the largest industrial nations to eliminate trade restrictions by 2010 but gives the rest of the region another decade to do so.

While Clinton said the leaders would work on a "detailed action agenda" for next year's summit in Japan, the agreement is so far little more than an expression of good will. It's likely to be many years before U.S. workers and businesses see any benefits from Pacific free trade.

It took eight years of contentious talks before the 123 nations in the latest round of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade reached a deal, and they were working from GATT foundations built over more than four decades. The fate of that free-trade accord remains in doubt; it is stuck in Congress.

Further, with the United States finding it difficult to come to terms with Japan over such small markets as flat glass and locked in a dispute with Tokyo over automobiles, eliminating all barriers in all sectors among 18 nations looks like a gargantuan task.

"Anybody who assumes that what happened in Jakarta will mean fundamental changes soon is making a big leap of faith," said Lawrence Chimerine, managing director of the Economic Strategy Institute, based in Washington.

"What some of those countries mean by free trade and what we mean is often different," he said. "They don't have any problem restricting investment ... They have all sorts of regulations and other barriers to market access. Even if we were on the same wavelength, they don't always fulfill their promises."

U.S. lets Cuban parents, children move from havens

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Clinton administration is expected to allow U.S. resettlement of up to 8,000 Cubans now being sheltered at the Guantanamo Bay Naval Base and in Panama. All involve parents with minor children.

The decision, which still has not received final approval, would constitute a retreat from President Clinton's pledge last August not to allow any boat people picked up by the U.S. Coast Guard to resettle directly to the United States.

Officials have since decided that policy did not take into account the educational and other needs of Cuban children at the two sites.

The decision could affect about a quarter of the 32,000 Cubans who are receiving sanctuary, but officials stressed that no firm figures are available.

The administration had been planning to grant about 25,000 immigrant visas to Cubans during the fiscal year that began Oct. 1. The new exceptions could raise that figure to more than 30,000.

Last August, hoping to stem the mass exodus of Cuban boat people, Clinton ordered that all Cubans rescued at sea be sent to Guantanamo, and the population there numbers about 24,000. Another 8,000 are being housed at U.S. military facilities in Panama.

The order barring U.S. resettlement was partially eased several weeks ago when 300 sick and elderly Cubans and unaccompanied children were given immigration visas.

Cuban exiles in south Florida have been campaigning for additional exceptions, and the administration has been concerned about exile protests during the hemispheric summit meeting President Clinton will host next month in Miami. Announcement of the new policy is expected to be made prior to the summit.

Asked about administration thinking, State Department spokesman David Johnson noted that Clinton had expressed concern about the fate of the children at Guantanamo and Panama and that the policy was being reviewed.

"The presence of children at the safe havens raises important humanitarian concerns that are being considered," he said. He made specific reference to the absence of formal schooling at the safe havens. Details of the expected policy shift were first disclosed Tuesday in The New York Times.

Cuba agreed to halt the exodus Sept. 9 and only a small number of Cubans have tried to flee since then. Cuban officials have expressed to U.S. officials their deep concern about any exceptions to the policy of barring U.S. resettlement, warning that a new, uncontrolled exodus could be the result.

The new policy is expected to be limited to parents and children. Siblings of parents will not be eligible, a department official said.

The administration had said the only way Cubans at Guantanamo and in Panama can receive immigrant visas is by returning to Cuba proper and applying through normal channels.

Castration bill offers a solution

While we're as wary as anyone of legislation introduced that seeks to profit from sensationalistic approaches to crime or shock value, a bill introduced Monday in the Texas Senate by Sen. Teel Bivins, a Republican from Amarillo whose senatorial district includes Midland, that would permit the surgical voluntary castration of men convicted of repeated sexual offenses with children appears to have merit.

If approved, the measure would permit 36-year-old Paul Gonzales of Midland to be surgically castrated as a means of ensuring he does not repeat his crimes when he is eventually released from prison. In addition to the surgery, Gonzales would undergo extensive psychological counseling.

Although castration as a remedy for repeated sexual offenses may be considered archaic or a "witch doctor" remedy, Bivins notes that in some European countries using castration on sexual offenders the incidence of repeat crimes has been reduced to below 11 percent and in some cases as low as 2 percent. The senator added, "In America, where incarceration, therapy and counseling are used, about half of all sex offenders are re-arrested, but the actual rates are probably higher due to under-reporting by victims."

Another important factor in the Bivins bill is that castration could not be performed unless it was voluntary, which in the instance of Gonzales it is. According to Gonzales' attorney, John Cook of Midland, the convict wants the operation "so that eventually he can get out and not re-offend."

According to Bivins, castration works because the offender is deprived of the male hormone testosterone which, in turn, inhibits their sexual impulses.

The Bivins bill seems to offer a logical approach to a problem that society has confronted for years. If sex offenders truly want to submit to castration as a means of changing their lives so that they can stop committing sexual offenses and lead normal lives, why not?

Cubans, Haitians due basic legal protection

U.S. District Judge C. Clyde Atkins was correct to halt the repatriation of Cuban detainees from Guantanamo until lawyers can advise them of their rights.

By any standard of due process, Haitians detained in a separate Guantanamo camp also deserve the right to legal counsel. Due process also argues that all detainees have the right to request political asylum. ...

It remains to be seen whether Atkins' sensible order will stand up in the 11th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals. In 1991, he ruled that Haitians had constitutional rights, but the 11th Circuit reversed him. The U.S. Supreme Court upheld the reversal.

The circumstances are somewhat different now for both Cubans and Haitians. Both groups are held at a U.S. Navy base. ... Therefore, lawyers for the Cubans argue the detainees are in effect in U.S. territory, and thus have constitutional rights. If this argument is valid for the Cubans, then logically it also applies to the Haitians. ...

Due process is the very foundation of the U.S. Constitution's Bill of Rights. And even if the Bill of Rights is ruled inapplicable here, universal human rights do apply.

CIA's deception, defiencies must be resolved for nation

America's elected leaders will always need good, accurate information in order to make decisions designed to ensure the nation's security. Much of that information comes to U.S. decision makers from intelligence services.

According to those same elected decision makers, America's premier intelligence service, the CIA, has for years been routinely duped by America's enemies and has been too arrogant, lazy and dull-witted to either recognize or correct its own failures.

If the leadership within the Central Intelligence Agency fails to promptly reform the agency's deficiencies to the satisfaction of Congress, then budgets should be slashed and heads should roll. ...

Congress should not the let the matter drop with the issuance of the scathing report, which criticized the agency's failure to dismiss, demote or even suspend anyone now serving with the agency for their failures to prevent the nation's greatest act of treason.

If the agency is unable or unwilling to satisfy Congress that it can admit and correct its culture of self-deception, then Congress should demand resignations and exercise the power of the purse string over the wayward agency.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Wednesday, Nov. 16, the 320th day of 1994. There are 45 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On Nov. 16, 1933, the United States and the Soviet Union established diplomatic relations. President Roosevelt sent a telegram to Soviet leader Maxim Litvinov in which he expressed hope that U.S.-Soviet relations would "forever remain normal and friendly."

Iraq's bomb expert is still dangerous

Anderson

Until recently, these officials — including some from the U.N. Special Commission for the Disarmament of Iraq (UNSCOM) — were combating a rising tide of sentiment among some U.N. member nations to lift the international sanctions against Iraq.

Hussein's arrogance and diplomatic stupidity appear to have silenced the countries that were eager to resume trade and diplomatic relations with Iraq. Most diplomats here are now convinced that sanctions will never be lifted as long as Hussein remains in power.

One of the strongest arguments against lifting sanctions — but one not often heard — is the clout that Dr. Jaffar Dhia Jaffar continues to have in Baghdad. As long as Jaffar remains in Iraq, officials say, Iraq will have the will and the brains to build a nuclear bomb.

Jaffar is the nuclear whiz-kid of Iraq, the Robert Oppenheimer of Hussein's Manhattan Project. Intelligence experts now believe that Jaffar was the mastermind behind a bomb-building effort that spent up to $12 billion and employed some 20,000 people at its peak. Prior to the Gulf War, and the sanctions that followed, the plan's goal was to produce up to 20 nuclear weapons per year.

Although international experts had long suspected that Hussein was harboring nuclear ambitions, it wasn't until after the Gulf War that inspectors learned just how close the Iraqi leader had come to achieving his dream. Most of the program was so secret that, despite President Bush's claim that Hussein's nuclear program had been destroyed, Desert Storm bombers hadn't even touched some of the biggest installations because the allied coalition didn't even know they existed.

UNSCOM officials believe they've now destroyed more than 95 percent of Hussein's nuclear weapons complex. But they readily concede that they can't be absolutely certain.

Until recent years, UNSCOM officials didn't even know about Dr. Jaffar. He first emerged, in dramatic fashion, during a July 1991 meeting between U.N. inspectors and Iraqi nuclear engineers in a Baghdad hotel room. One participant from the Los Alamos National Laboratory recently recalled the meeting for our associate Dale Van Atta:

"They were finally starting to tell us about their secret uranium-enrichment efforts. But they had a couple of junior engineers up there talking. And we kept asking them questions they couldn't answer. Pretty soon, this immaculately dressed guy stood up and said, 'Well, I will answer your questions.'"

The official continued: "He was very articulate and spoke English very well.... Very knowledgeable. He knew exactly what they had done, what had happened. He was technically very qualified. I noticed that all the other Iraqis showed a lot of respect for him. It wasn't fear; it was clearly admiration."

The man wouldn't give his name or title during that meeting, but inspectors soon found out it was Jaffar, a genius physicist who received a Ph.D. from the University of Birmingham in England. But he and other Iraqi officials initially downplayed his importance.

U.N. inspectors continued to hunt for the missing mastermind of Iraq's nuclear program, sometimes with Jaffar at their side assisting where he could.

But the inspectors were finally able to determine that Jaffar was, in fact, the man they'd been looking for. The breakthrough came when they seized a treasure trove of nuclear program personnel records after a dramatic stand-off in a Baghdad parking lot. The cache — more than 25,000 pages worth of material — contained substantial evidence that pointed to Jaffar as the mastermind.

But even with the sanctions, Iraq remains a 'threat as long as Jaffar remains.

Smoker vs. nonsmoker: battle continues

I am one of those people who believes that the tobacco companies should advertise in newspapers to get their message of brotherhood across. The reason for this is that cigarette manufacturers are spending more money than Macy's in newspaper advertising begging smokers and nonsmokers to love each other.

Buchwald

Their plea is to keep government from regulating what we put in our mouths and to stop the police from using tear gas when they discover cigarette smoke coming out of somebody's window. Their slogan is, "Together we can work it out." The obvious question is, "Are they out of their blinkin' minds?"

The tobacco companies' appeal just won't work. I was in a restaurant the other day in what is known in eating places as "no man's land." I was seated at one of the tables that adjoin the smoking section.

A woman lit up a cigarette, and the person at the next table said, "Would you mind putting that piece of filth out?"

The smoker, who had been trained by someone from the Philip Morris School of Remedial Puffing, responded, "I have rights, too."

The nonsmoker said, "So do I. If you don't extinguish that cigarette right now, I'll dump this tomato ketchup all over your nice white dress."

The husband of the smoker smiled and said, "Can't we work this out?"

The husband of the nonsmoker said, "What's there to work out? Your wife is smoking and we're forced to inhale it. You have no right to make my wife ill when I'm paying $20 for her charcoal-grilled tuna."

The smoking patron declared, "You nonsmokers are all alike. You don't care about someone else's pleasure. My husband and I worked all our lives so that we could afford Parliaments. Is there any other reason you don't want me to smoke besides the fact that it makes you sick?"

"How about this? You seem like a very nice woman and I don't want you to die."

The smoker had tears in her eyes. "That's what my children tell me, but they're being corrupted by their teachers. If smoking wasn't safe, tennis players wouldn't play in Virginia Slims tournaments."

The smoker's husband said, "Now you have Auriel all upset and she's shredded her charcoal filter. There is obviously no point in us reasoning together. The next time we come here we're going to bring a semiautomatic weapon because the only thing that nonsmokers understand is force."

WILLIAM SAFIRE

President can blame no one except himself

WASHINGTON — Bill Clinton remains president of the United States for foreign affairs, but the center of power in domestic affairs — both in voting strength and intellectual energy — has shifted from the White House to the putative speaker of the House, Newt Gingrich.

Safire

Our first elected half-term president has only himself, his wife and their political advisers to blame for this unprecedented power division.

When Gingrich sought to nationalize local elections by submitting a platform of clear, conservative promises, Clinton foolishly agreed to escalate the mid-term elections into a stark choice between Reaganism and Clintonism.

He publicized Gingrich's "Contract With America," warred happily against it on the campaign trail, nuked it by misleading the elderly into fearing for their Social Security, and laid his leadership on the line. As a result, as the Chinese say, he lost the Mandate of Heaven.

Keeper of the voters' mandate is now Gingrich. Since the election, the future-shocking history teacher from Georgia has been forthright, at times eloquent, in articulating his policy goals to a much wider audience.

Counterproductively, he added a few ungracious and dated shots at the "counterculture" and media elite, which gave losers not still shell-shocked their chance to demonize him.

But consider why some of us think of him as Newt the Beaut. Not so long ago, our 435 House members were served by a staff of 3,000; today, aides and hangers-on have ballooned to 20,000, and are an integral part of the government-intrusion problem (the Congress makes regulations for idle hands).

He has pledged to cut staff by one-third, and as speaker, he will have the power to deliver; that example should induce the Senate to do the same.

He'll also deliver in the House on term limits and a balanced-budget amendment, too, along with the line-item veto that will give the president greater power to break up costly legislative package deals; we'll see how many Democrats join Sen. Robert Byrd, prince of pork, to thwart the will of the people.

That element of Newt's First 100 Days will be aimed at restraining and disciplining the way Washington does political business. What about the way the federal government then helps the average family cope with modern social and economic life?

The trick, according to Newtonomics, is to let people keep more of what they earn to spend the way they want. But that's selfish, say liberals; what about compassion for the poor?

That takes us past the easy stuff, like health-insurance reform and tax fixes to encourage marriage and parents' support of children, to the hard part: welfare reform and — want a new long word? — disentitlementarianism.

The Clinton notion of welfare reform — a make-work requirement after a couple of years — is a far cry from what Gingrich and Sen. Phil Gramm have in mind. They can show how welfare to the able-bodied has bred dependency, and believe the only way to discourage unemployed single mothers from having more children is to make it unprofitable.

Does this mean we're going to let little kids starve to provide a disincentive? That's where Newt starts muttering about orphanages, as if the nation is going to allow Oliver Twisting in the wind. No; draconian threats may be needed to break the old patterns, but cooperation can find a way — none dare call it compromise — to quickly transform welfare to workfare.

Libertarian conservatives like me recoil at the intrusiveness in Newt's call for a "voluntary" school prayer amendment. He's being inconsistent on his bedrock principle of individual responsibility: If parents want to imbue their children with spiritual values — as more should — the parents should take the kids by the hand to Sunday School and not fob off that family duty on educators employed by local government.

But we don't have to agree with Newt down the line to admire the boldness of his futurism, the energy with which he mobilizes his forces and the joy he takes in upsetting the apple cart of power in the nation's capital.

The transfer is only temporary, of course. One of these days, a president will offer a competing vision of public support for personal freedom. Could even be Clinton; but for now, the Congress proposes and the Congress disposes.

Bishops call for 'moral revolution'

By David Briggs
AP Religion Writer

WASHINGTON — American Catholics should reject the "false choices" of jail or jobs, family values or a welfare state, a group of U.S. Catholic bishops is saying.

After a mean political season that divided control of the presidency and Congress, the bishops are asking the church's 59 million members to forget about attack politics and simple slogans.

In their own proposed contract with America, the bishops said the church wants to work with Americans of all faiths to oppose both euthanasia and the death penalty, economic inequality and the proliferation of assault weapons, abortion and violent protests at abortion clinics.

"In the face of so much violence, fear and polarization in our land, we call for a moral revolution, which begins with a fundamental respect for human life, which recovers a sense of right and wrong, rejects vengeance in the face of violence and which calls the nation to move beyond the tired prescriptions of both right and left," said Bishop John H. Ricard of Baltimore.

The proposed pastoral message from the bishops' Domestic Policy Committee is scheduled to be voted on Wednesday by the full National Conference of Catholic Bishops.

In analyzing the election results, bishops and Catholic conference officials said the rising Republican tide in Congress bears mixed tidings for the implementation of church social policy.

For example, Richard Doerflinger, associate director of the Secretariat for Pro-Life Activities, said the addition of five senators and up to 50 representatives opposed to abortion might help restore some federal funding restrictions lifted by President Clinton. Church officials also noted GOP support for education vouchers and tax credits for children.

'We call for a moral revolution, which begins with a fundamental respect for human life, which recovers a sense of right and wrong, ... and which calls the nation to move beyond the tired prescriptions of both right and left.'

— Bishop John H. Ricard

But some at the bishops' annual meeting have criticized Republican calls for sharp cuts in welfare and other social spending, particularly a proposal by Rep. Newt Gingrich of Georgia, the incoming House speaker, to consider cutting benefits after 60 days and turning more care of the poor over to charities and orphanages.

"More budget cuts are going to exacerbate the cauldron in our cities," Auxiliary Bishop Peter Rosazza of Hartford said Tuesday.

Cardinal Roger Mahony of Los Angeles said he plans to meet with the new Republican leaders, and encourage them to go beyond the "mean-spirited lead" evident in this year's campaigns to help people again take responsibility for their neighborhoods and communities.

"It just can't be welfare bashing. That simply isn't going to solve anything," Mahony said.

In their statement on violence, the bishops call for a new civility in public policy debates that replaces attack politics and "war rooms" with concern for the common good.

"Fundamentally, our society needs a moral revolution to replace a culture of violence with a renewed ethic of justice, responsibility and community," the bishops said.

They said they support stronger gun control measures and community policing efforts, while at the same time calling on Catholics to address "the slow-motion violence of discrimination and poverty, hunger and hopelessness, addiction and self-destructive behavior."

The bishops specifically reject what they call "bumper-sticker solutions" to welfare reform, such as "two years and you're off" or "one more child and your benefits are cut."

John Carr, secretary of the bishops' Social Development and World Peace office, said Tuesday the bishops will testify before Congress on protecting poor children and families from "inflexible rules" governing welfare reform. He noted that the church has supported President Clinton's proposals for better education and job training programs, but opposed administration proposals to place caps on welfare spending.

"We think people ought to be held accountable for their behavior, but not at the expense of children and those who can't fend for themselves," Ricard said Tuesday.

Jury prospects want no part in Simpson trial

By Linda Deutsch
AP Special Correspondent

LOS ANGELES — People quizzed as possible alternate jurors in the O.J. Simpson's murder trial Tuesday agreed on one point: they want no part of it.

"I just don't want to be here," said a 72-year-old widow.

"I really don't want to do this," said a retired probation officer. "If I have to do it, it's a civic duty."

■ SIMPSON UPDATE: Call Cityline 560-2400, enter 6202.

The widow said she thought Simpson was guilty of murdering his ex-wife and her friend.

"As it stands right now, he seems to be a guilty man," said the woman, who is white. "But the defense has not put on its case."

She laughed when defense attorney Johnnie Cochran Jr. asked if she understood that Simpson is "cloaked in the presumption of innocence."

A 59-year-old black man said Simpson is among his favorite football players and is "more likely innocent than guilty."

He also wasn't thrilled about being on the panel, but said he might change his mind.

Prosecutors challenged the man for bias after he said he believed DNA evidence in the case "was not handled properly" and that some key witnesses at the preliminary hearing couldn't get their stories straight.

The 54-year-old retired probation officer, who is white, said he believed Simpson was "more likely guilty than not guilty," but said he could consider the case fairly.

"It could be Adolf Hitler or Jesus Christ sitting there," he said, pointing to where Simpson sat across the courtroom. "If the facts support a conclusion, I'm going to go with that."

Superior Court Judge Lance Ito, who is seeking 15 alternate jurors to accompany 12 jurors already selected, told that man and other prospects they were excused because of their strong opinions.

Zachary Jareb Broadway

Zachary: Remembered by God. Jareb: Lively Son. This brave 10 year old breathed his last at 2:23am on Sunday morning, November 13, 1994 after a year long battle with brain cancer. In Zachary we saw a protector of the downtrodden; mercy shown to those who perhaps do not deserve mercy; the hands of an artist; the heart of a musician; the feet of one who runs from evil and toward THE truth; and a burning desire for the inner workings of things. When we think of you, we see David the shepherd boy who would be king; a boy not chosen by those around him, but chosen by God; a boy with a heart on fire for God, but having only the clothes and job of a shepherd.

Second born of four, on July 16, 1984. You took your own sweet time in getting here, and you were never in a rush to do anything. Even in dying, you stretched your time to the very end. With the strength of 100 men and the determination of a warrior, you fought the good fight, and we are proud of you. You studied rocks with a passion and character with intuition. You loved piano and voice, and your harmony will be missed in our nightly family worship. And above all we will remember you for your fierce love for God!

When the cancer and 3 operations took most of your sight, your ability to translate written words to spoken, to run and to ride your bike, and finally to walk and to communicate, you were a valiant man. You accepted your losses and seemed to say: "I can live with that!" We will strive to follow your example.

Zachary is survived by his parents, Mac & Diane; his sisters Krista and Hadassah; and, his brother Jacob, all of Austin. His surviving grandparents are Jack and Claire Johnson of Midland, and Jake and Dave Broadway of Blossom. His surviving great-grand parents are Roy and Flo Johnson of Odessa, Q.B. and Naomi Culpepper of Orange, Naomi Broadway of Paris and Carolyn McGahan of Paris.

Memorial services will be held 3:00 P.M. Wednesday, November 16, 1994 at Bannockburn Baptist Church in Austin. There will be a private burial.

In lieu of flowers, please send memorial contributions to the Zachary Broadway College Scholarship Fund, c/o Christian Home Education Association (CHEA) of Austin, P.O. Box 142032, Austin, Tx 78714-2032. Prayer comment draws fire from Dems, liberal groups

By John King
AP Political Writer

WASHINGTON — School prayer is one thing he could talk about with the Republicans, President Clinton said Tuesday. A liberal group quickly accused him of "an instant cave-in" because of last week's election results.

A proposed constitutional amendment allowing voluntary prayer in schools is among the items high on the House Republicans' agenda. After they take charge of Congress in January, House GOP leaders plan hearings on the subject, and they expect a House vote by early July.

Liberal groups long have argued against the amendment, on the grounds it violates the constitutional separation of church and state.

But Clinton, asked about the GOP proposal during a news conference in Indonesia, where he is attending a trade meeting, said he did not believe that separation necessarily would be violated by voluntary school prayer.

"What I think the country needs and what I think the schools need is a sense that there are certain basic values of citizenship, including valuing the right of people to have and express their faith," Clinton said.

Mistaken identity causes man's police beating

By Richard Cole
Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO — A homeless man shot while struggling with a crazed gunman shouted a warning to arriving officers, only to be beaten later by police who mistook him for a suspect, he said Tuesday.

"One officer put his foot on my throat — he kept grinding my face into the concrete," said Robert Pinckney, pointing to about 20 stitches.

"I told him, 'I'm not the suspect, I'm the victim.' They just told me to shut up."

The real gunman, a drifter named Vic Lee Boutwell, was killed by police Sunday after a 25-minute shootout during which he killed a police officer and wounded another policeman, Pinckney and a paramedic. He fired an estimated 100 rounds from an assault rifle and three automatic pistols.

Pinckney was taken to San Francisco General Hospital in handcuffs where he underwent surgery.

Officer Howard Weathersby, a police spokesman, said the department could not comment because the case was under investigation. For a while Sunday, police thought there were two gunmen.

Pinckney, 35, said he was about to have a beer with a friend when he heard shots and ran around a corner, where he saw Boutwell.

"I actually went up and asked him if he was OK because I was hearing pops, pops, and I wanted to know if he was the victim," Pinckney said Tuesday from his hospital bed.

Boutwell asked Pinckney and his friend to help move a person from one car to the other, but when Pinckney looked in the vehicle, he saw only belts and clips of ammunition. Boutwell ordered him to move it and pulled out a gun. Pinckney's friend ran.

"I struggled with him with the .45 — it hit the ground and then I started to turn," Pinckney said. "I saw the muzzle of a rifle and that's when he hit me in the leg."

Pinckney ducked between two parked cars only a few feet from Boutwell.

"He didn't say nothing. He just started shooting off the weapons," Pincney said. "I could hear him loading and unloading his weapons. I kept praying, 'Hey, police, take this guy out.'"

He said he tried to warn the first officer to arrive, James Guelff, who was shot to death.

"I told him, 'Watch out, he's got weapons, he's got guns," Pinckney said.

"Later on I could hear this moaning down the street. I guess it was him."

As Pinckney looked out from between the car, he took another bullet in the arm.

When the shooting finally ended, Pinckney said he screamed for help, but in the dark, officers thought he was a suspect. He was handcuffed and pushed face down on the pavement, which was strewn with glass.

The arm wound may have caused nerve damage and Pinckney needs more surgery before it can be determined if he'll walk normally, said Dr. Nicolas Nelken.

Sleep disorder causes murder of man's wife, lawyers claim

BUTLER, Pa. (AP) — Michael Ricksgers admits he shot his wife to death in bed but says a rare sleep disorder caused him to do it as he slept.

Ricksgers was suffering from sleep apnea, which cuts off oxygen to the brain and causes abnormal behavior, defense attorney Lou Ceraso told jurors during opening statements Tuesday at the 37-year-old welder's murder trial.

"It's a little like sleepwalking, or talking in your sleep, in which you do involuntary things but in a much more exaggerated form," the lawyer said.

Assistant District Attorney David Hepting didn't address the sleep apnea issue in his opening statement. But he said there was no doubt Ricksgers deliberately killed his wife as she slept the morning after Christmas.

He said that Janet Ricksgers once consulted a divorce attorney and that police found a note to Ricksgers in her purse in which she said she was leaving him forever. She signed it, "Bye."

Both sides said they would call experts to testify about sleep apnea, in which a person's breathing can stop for as long as a minute.

A study in the New England Journal of Medicine last year found that 4 percent of women and 9 percent of men in their working years experience spells of apnea at least 15 times an hour while asleep.

A Canadian man who stabbed his mother-in-law to death and seriously wounded his father-in-law in 1987 was acquitted after sleep-disorder experts testified the acts had occurred during a sleepwalking episode.

Administration reiterates policy for arms sales

N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — Making explicit a policy that has existed in practice for three years, the Clinton administration is preparing new guidelines that will consider the health of the nation's military contractors when reviewing arms sales to foreign customers.

Such sales require approval from the U.S. government, which has ruled on such deals in the past based on whether they bolster American foreign policy goals and strengthen regional alliances. Under a plan now before the president, a sale's benefit to the nation's shrinking military industry would also be considered.

With Pentagon orders rapidly declining, foreign sales now account for about 20 percent of American military contractors' business. Foreign sales are single-handedly keeping alive the M1-A2 tank line of General Dynamics in Ohio and the F-15 fighter plane lines of McDonnell-Douglas in Missouri.

Beginning with the Bush administration, the government has played an increasingly active role in lobbying foreign capitals on the behalf of cash-strapped American contractors.

Washington pays some costs to field American weaponry at international trade shows. Embassy officials, who once were forbidden to promote United States arms, now hawk American-made military wares as aggressively as any other product stamped "Made in the U.S.A." President Clinton is poised to make the domestic economic consideration a formal part of the arms-sales review.

The new policy was first reported Tuesday in The Los Angeles Times. White House and Pentagon officials emphasized Tuesday that foreign policy goals will still be paramount in guiding foreign sales.

Bust hits library's oil section

■ County library needs donations to upgrade its Petroleum-Technical Department.

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

A library is a mother lode of knowledge, facts, and opinion.

It can be a gusher and a productive field.

And that's exactly the state, as well as the aspiration, of the Midland County Public Library's Petroleum-Technical Department. The collection caters to geologists, petroleum engineers, landmen, scouts, drillers, investors and others, including those who are purely curious about the revelations from the inner Earth wherein formations may hold fortunes or the disheartening "dry hole."

About 20 percent of the library's 262,000 items, including books, magazines, maps, microfilm, and microfiche, are devoted to the Earth's geology, aspects of petroleum exploration and recovery, and attention to the environment.

The Petroleum-Technical Department was established in 1935 when the West Texas Geological Society voted to sponsor a technical library at the county library, which then was in the basement of the Midland County Courthouse.

Since then, the department has grown in the boom-bust cycles. Today, however, the department is somewhat depressed in paralleling the oil-and-gas industry.

"We are digging into our reserves," noted library Director Sandra Wegner. "And at the rate we are going, it will be gone. Of course, I would like to see some money roll in."

Today, the money intake to support the Petroleum-Technical Department is down substantially from the mid-1980s when the boom was slipping away.

"The Petroleum Department thrives solely through donations," Ms. Wegner said. Funds come from petroleum associations, societies, companies, individuals, and the Friends of the Library, a volunteer fund-raising group.

While Midland County government underwrites the library's $1 million budget for staff salaries and library upkeep, the Petroleum-Technical Department depends on donations of technical books, journals, and maps and the contributions of funds to purchase additional books, journals, maps, and computer software, including GeoRef compact discs.

"We are not going to shut it down," Ms. Wegner said. "We want to keep it up-to-date and useful" even while retaining century-old "U.S. Geological Survey" volumes, which technically detail the country's land mass.

"We have always been proud of this (petroleum) collection," Ms. Wegner said. "We know how unique it is among public libraries. It still reflects how this town does its business."

The library's petroleum collection "enjoys a good

WEDNESDAY DAY WATCH

Minister killed

MONAHANS — A Baptist minister was shot to death Tuesday at a Monahans home, according to police. The Rev. Marion Eugene Stevens was reportedly shot while trying to counsel the home's resident, police said. Stevens, 68, was found shot in the head at 206 W. 14 St. at 1:53 p.m., they said. He was pronounced dead at the scene. "The preacher went over to a residence to extend some help — we're guessing that he went over there to counsel this man — and the next thing we know we had a 911 call," police dispatcher Whitney Williams told the Associated Press. No formal charges have been brought in the incident, but the 74-year-old man whom the minister was apparently counseling was arrested and was being held Tuesday night in the Ward County Jail, according to officials. Stevens was a minister at the Southside Baptist Church in Monahans, which is located about midway between Pecos and Odessa.

Community's philanthropists are recognized

Staff Report

The Permian Basin chapter of the National Society of Fund Raising Executives honored six individuals and organizations for their philanthropic efforts at a luncheon Tuesday at Mission Dorado Country Club.

The Philanthrophy Day Luncheon was a first for the organization.

The 1994 Outstanding Philanthropist award was presented to Nancy Anguish, who has served as president of the Petroleum Museum and established the Rodman Educational Endowment Fund. She has also served as fund-raising chairwoman for many organizations.

The Outstanding Volunteer Fund Raiser for 1994 was awarded to Mary Ann Majors for her service to the Museum of the Southwest. Ms. Majors serves on the museum's board of trustess and has served as chairman of the auction for 1994, which raised $275,000.

The Junior League of Odessa received the Outstanding Philanthropic Organization for its fund-raising efforts that have benefited self-esteem enhancement and reading programs for children, free immunization clinics and lecture series for schools.

The 1994 Outstanding Corporation award was presented to Texaco Inc., for its contributions to more than 100 non-profit organizations, included the Texaco Star Academic Challenge program, community and senior services and Keep Midland Beautiful.

Abell-Hanger Foundation received the Outstanding Foundation for 1994. The foundation was established in 1954 by George Thomas Abell and his wife Gladys Hanger Abell.

The 1994 Outstanding Professional Fund Raising Executive award was presented to Cynthia Benson, assistant director of the Permian Basin Center for Battered Women and Their Children.

Best students take risks, survey shows

LAKE FOREST, Ill. — Straight A's don't always mean straitlaced. According to a recent Who's Who survey, a disturbing number of the nation's best and brightest high school juniors indicate they are willing to take risks with drugs, alcohol and sexual behavior.

"No parents can afford to be lulled into believing their kids are safe. In the suburbs, in the city, and even at the top of the class, guns, violence, suicide, and sexual assaults are all to familiar to every student," said Paul Krouse, publisher of Who's Who Among American High School Students.

Krouse announced the results of his recent study Tuesday which surveyed 3,177 high-achieving students, age 16 and 17.

The survey indicated more than 30 percent of the respondents have access to a gun, 21 percent admit to driving after drinking, 30 percent have considered suicide, 80 percent believe they can have unprotected sex with little risk of contracting AIDS or another sexually transmitted disease, and 49 percent of male respondents said they would "have sex with a reasonably attractive stranger in exchange for money or a dream come true."

The good news is that 68 percent of the students responding said their home life is "happy and close most of the time," 80 percent believe hard work is the primary result people are successful, and 72 percent found their school curriculum challenging.

A well-known problem in Midland, the easy accessibility of alcohol to minors, is indicated as a national problem with 81 percent of students saying alcohol is easy to obtain.

Krouse said that of approximately 750,000 students featured in the 1993 Who's Who annual, 8,000 were sent surveys in a random demographic selection. Only 3,1777 students returned their surveys. "It's still the largest independent sample taken of outstanding high school students,"

Doctors study gene therapy as method to treat damaged hearts

DALLAS (AP) — Scientists working on the frontiers of gene therapy have come up with a possible strategy for repairing the damage of heart attacks by transforming useless scar tissue into healthy muscle.

The approach — outlined Tuesday at a meeting of the American Heart Association — is still untested, but it is one of a dozen or more ways in development to cure heart trouble by regulating the body's genes.

Some of these strategies are moving rapidly from lab animals to people. Experts predict some of them will be tried on heart patients within a year or two.

"There has been tremendous progress in this approach in just two years. The roadblocks that stand in the way have been identified," said Dr. R. Sanders Williams of the University of Texas Southwest-

Atypical family gives adopted children place to thrive, dream

By Denise Gamino
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN — It sits on a dead-end street in Northeast Austin, but the unusual house is filled with young lives that have been given open-ended futures.

Gabriel, 20; Adrienne, 12; Nicholas, 9; Alexandra, 3; Robyn, 3; and Ishan, 1, are linked not by common blood, but by uncommon bonds.

The bonds were forged by Shawn Michaud, 47, and Becky Bell, 30, adoptive mothers who brought their six children to live together for economic and philosophical reasons. Two of the children have been adopted by Ms. Bell. Three have been adopted by Ms. Michaud, who also has legal custody of another child whose birth parents have not terminated their parental rights.

Ms. Michaud and Ms. Bell, who met while working at an Austin preschool, also care for a foster child who is 10 months old.

"It started out as a relationship for convenience," Ms. Michaud said. "I needed the support, and she was needing a place to live. We are two individuals who care about children and want to have a place for them to grow up in a healthy, happy environment."

All six children had been abused or neglected. Four have disabilities.

State officials say the joint household set up by Ms. Michaud and Ms. Bell is atypical of the permanent arrangements made for children adopted through the state Child Protective Services system. But they praise the home and say that a creatively formed household may be just what the state needs.

"More and more, we're finding that the traditional two-parent, 2.5 kids family doesn't exist for anyone anymore. And those families certainly don't exist for the kinds of children we're trying to find families for," said Belinda Hare, the foster home recruiter for the regional office of Children's Protective Services, a division of the Texas Department of Protective and Regulatory Services.

Statewide, 1,200 to 1,500 children, some with severe disabilities, are awaiting adoption. Children with disabilities sometimes end up in geriatric nursing homes if families cannot be found.

Texas adoption policies long have allowed single people to adopt children in state custody. Interracial adoptions also are allowed if officials determine such arrangements are in the best interests of the children. Legislation passed in 1993 prohibits the state from denying adoptions based solely on the race or ethnicity of the child or parent.

Ms. Michaud and Ms. Bell became acquainted when Ms. Michaud was director of the Open Door infant and toddler center in 1989. She supervised Ms. Bell, who was a preschool teacher.

At the time, Ms. Michaud, who is divorced, already had adopted several children. The two quickly recognized their shared interest in caring for disabled children and bought a house together after Ms. Bell decided to adopt Nicholas. By sharing their families, they decided, they could save money and spread the child-rearing workload.

Ms. Michaud and Ms. Bell are both stay-home mothers by choice. They said they gave up professional child-care jobs to live frugally on part-time work, adoption subsidies and disability payments because they did not want to place the severely disabled children in day care.

Between them, they receive about $2,000 a month, including $475 in federal adoption subsidies for several of the children, $600 Ms. Michaud earns by providing Medicaid-financed attendant care to Nicholas and some federal disability payments.

"It's not a way to make money," Ms. Bell said. "We have seven kids with $2,000 a month. It's not making money."

When they are caring for an additional foster child for the state, they receive an additional $500 to $1,000 a month. That helps buy food, diapers and other necessities.

For transportation, the women rely on a 1973 Volkswagon beetle that has three shades of paint and sometimes breaks down. One state program would cover the cost of a wheelchair lift for a van, but the family has no money to buy a van.

"There's certainly nothing in the savings account, I can tell you that," Ms. Michaud said.

But the women say their dividends come not in dollar signs but in the small achievements the children make as they grow up in a safe and stable environment.

Nine-year-old Nicholas, who has cerebral palsy and uses a wheelchair, now has dreams he never dared to have before Ms. Bell adopted him.

Before his adoption, Nicholas had been considered mentally retarded, and he was unable to feed himself. Within months of his adoption, Ms. Bell said, "he was doing everything."

Now, he has career goals. He wants to be a ventriloquist or a voice behind cartoon characters.

"That is just wonderful, with a kid who can hardly speak," said Sylvia Tarver, the adoption unit supervisor in the regional protective services office. "He seems to have the self-esteem to think he can accomplish anything he sets out to do, and that's a wonderful gift."

Gabriel, the eldest, said he appreciates belonging to a large family, although he doesn't like to change the little ones' diapers.

"I've always liked being around kids. And having a mom working at a day care, I've been around kids all my life," he said. "So I enjoy it. It's one, extended family."

Ms. Michaud and Ms. Bell say people often question why they have chosen to adopt so many children with special needs.

"They say, 'You must be crazy,' and I say, 'Yeah, crazy in love,'" Ms. Bell said.

Ms. Michaud said, "People say, 'They're lucky to have you,' and I say, 'I'm lucky to have them, too.' It's not a one-way street."

POLICE REPORTS

Aggravated robbery

Midland police are looking for the suspect in connection with an aggravated robbery Tuesday at the 7-Eleven convenience store at 806 S. Terrell St.

The store clerk told police that a man entered the store while the clerk was in the freezer. When the clerk returned to the front of the store, the subject put his hand in his pocket as if he had a weapon and demanded money out of the register, according to a police report.

The clerk gave the subject an undetermined amount of money and was forced to lie on the floor as the subject left the store, according to the report.

The subject is described as a black male, 30-40 years of age, 6 feet tall, wearing a white shirt and blue jacket.

Police find boy, arrest kidnapping suspect

HOUSTON (AP) — A 4-year-old boy missing since last week was found Tuesday night and police arrested the man accused of kidnapping him, the FBI said.

A Houston patrolman arrested Michael Blake Screws, 36, after spotting the kidnapping suspect's car in Houston, FBI spokesman Jim Conway said.

The boy, Joshua Proulx, was found in the car and was doing fine, but Houston police did not immediately have any other details.

Proulx's family last saw the boy Thursday night as he was watching television at his family's north Houston home with Screws.

Screws, who lives in the Salt Lake City area, was charged with federal kidnapping Monday night, Conway said.

The two were spotted in El Paso, Tucson, Ariz., Provo, Utah and Salt Lake City. Until Tuesday's arrest, the two had not been seen since Sunday night, when Screws and the boy visited a friend in Salt Lake City, Conway said.

Family members and friends said Screws came to visit the boy's family last week after attending his great uncle's funeral in Conroe, a suburban town north of Houston.

Authorities so far did not have a motive for the kidnapping.

Women confront one another in baby-snatching case

MATAMOROS, Mexico (AP) — Laura Lugo and Paulyna Botello, the accuser and the accused in a bizarre baby-snatching case, traded harsh glares and called each other liars Tuesday in a chaotic scene before a judge.

"If what I am saying is false, I want her to tell me where HER son is? Where is the boy that, according to her, she had?" said Ms. Lugo, who recently won custody of a 2-year-old boy raised by Ms. Botello. "I have mine."

Ms. Lugo accuses Ms. Botello of snatching the baby from a Matamoros clinic in September 1992 and raising him has her own.

Ms. Botello, 33, who is charged in Tamaulipas state Judicial District No. 2 with trafficking of a minor, insisted that U.S. courts were wrong to grant custody to Ms. Lugo.

"What happened in the United States was done illegally. When I go to the United States, we're going to fix it. Right now we're dealing with what is right here," said Ms. Botello, pointing to documents filed in the Mexican criminal case against her.

Judge Marcelino Padron Benavides said he called the "careo" — a confrontation between witnesses — to clarify the discrepancies between the two women's stories.

Reporters, friends and family members of the two women crowded noisily around the women and the judge, straining to hear over typewriters and voices echoing in the concrete-walled judge's office.

Ms. Lugo, 28, a resident of Brownsville, Texas, claims that Ms. Botello and her sister, Rosa Botello, tricked her into going to what she believed would be a routine prenatal exam at a Matamoros clinic on Sept. 1, 1992.

Instead, Ms. Lugo says, a doctor drugged her and delivered her infant boy by Caesarean section 14 days before her due date.

Paulyna Botello's attorneys have since argued that Ms. Lugo initially agreed to give up her child to Rosa Botello for financial reasons.

GENE: Doctors present research on studies with damaged hearts

(From 1B)

ern Medical Center in Dallas.

More than 40 reports on gene therapy are being presented at this week's heart meeting.

One of the more creative strategies was outlined by Dr. Laurence H. Kedes of the University of Southern California. About six years ago, scientists discovered a gene called Myo D that can turn almost any cell in the body into a muscle cell.

Working with dogs and rats, Kedes transferred this gene into the scar tissue that forms when a heart attack kills heart muscle. He found that the gene indeed transformed some of this tissue into muscle cells.

Whether these cells will actually work like normal heart muscle remains to be seen, however. The cells made so far are skeletal muscle, not heart muscle, and Kedes is unsure whether it will conduct electricity and beat like the muscle it is meant to replace.

Until these hurdles can be worked out, Kedes said, "this is far removed from potential human application."

The form of gene therapy that is probably closest to human use is intended to overcome one of the greatest shortcomings of cardiology — the failure of angioplasty.

More than 300,000 Americans undergo this procedure annually, which involves inflating a tiny balloon to squeeze open clogged heart arteries. However, the arteries close shut again within a few months in about 40 percent of patients.

One reason is the body's tendency to produce new muscle cells in the spot damaged by the balloon. The new strategy, which doctors say could undergo human testing within a year, involves temporarily programming these muscle cells not to divide.

Doctors have identified a gene that can turn off muscle cell growth. One strategy is to insert this gene into cold viruses. The viruses would carry the gene into muscle cells during the angioplasty and keep them from dividing.

reputation" in the petroleum community, said Norma Thurman, special-collections librarian. She oversees the petroleum and geneology collections in the refurbished and expanded library.

"I try to keep current and relevant information on all aspects of the petroleum industry," including legal, land, drilling, exploration, production, refining, pipelines, and financial and investment aspects of the petroleum industry, Ms. Thurman said. "It's really a fabulous collection."

The technical library has changed somewhat throughout the years. The collection expanded to a science-technological department that was broader than strictly petroleum information.

"As the collection expanded," Ms. Thurman recalled, "space became critical, and the emphasis was placed on petroleum exploration," which continued through the boom years.

In the expanded library, Ms. Thurman said, there again has been a "broadening of the scope" of the library's petroleum collection to include more environmental, waste management, hydrology, hydrogeology, and technological materials.

The department's publications include those of the American Association of Petroleum Geologists, Geological Society of America, Society of Economic Paleontologists and Mineralogists, Society of Petroleum Engineers, the U.S. Bureau of Mines, American Geological Institute, and the Texas Railroad Commission. Journals include the "Journal of Petroleum Technology," "World Oil," and the "Oil and Gas Journal."

From its inception, the petroleum collection has been "invaluable to the petroleum community," Ms. Thurman said. The Petroleum-Technical Department is hailed as "one of the best petroleum-technical libraries in existence."

WHO'S: High-achieving students admit in survey to taking risks

(From 1B)

Krouse said.

Of interest to Texans is the fact that only 7 percent of the respondents were from the region including New Mexico, Oklahoma and Texas, and only a handful of Texans responded, according to Allison McGee of Who's Who.

About 27 percent of the students blamed parental apathy as most affecting violence at their school.

Other interesting results from the Who's Who survey follow:

- Sexually active teens who wish they'd remained virgins: 44 percent.
- For sexual trysts, teens now prefer to have sex in their own homes instead of the back seat of a car. About 79 percent of students having sex said they did so in their partner's parents' house, 70 percent had sex in their own parents' house, 43 percent in parked cars, 21 percent in other people's houses during parties, and 17 pecent in motel rooms.
- Teens who say Michael Jackson is "out": 93 percent.
- Teens who say Madonna is "out:" 84 percent.
- Students who will raise their children the same way their parents raised them: 93 percent.
- Students who are more than 10 pounds overweight: 31 percent.
- More than 52 percent of the nation's top achievers study only an hour a day or less while one in four said they spend eight hours or more a week involved in athletic activities.

"The lack of time allocated to study apparently takes it toll," Krouse said, noting that 78 percent of respondents said they have copied someone else's homework and 44 percent admitted cheating on a quiz or test.

Almost 40 percent of the students surveyed picked the decline of the family as the top crisis facing the nation. Crime on the streets was a close second choice.

Parental influence rated high with 81 percent of students indicating they have "a great deal of confidence" in their parents; this is well above their level of trust in any other individual or institution.

"As proud as the parents of these bright youngsters deserve to be, they need to know that the moment their offspring reach the top of the academic heap is no time to relax," Krouse said. "The strongest guarantee that these kids will live up to their potential is to have parents they can turn to."

Toilet crushing among events staged on Texas Recycles Day

AUSTIN (AP) — The state encouraged citizens, businesses and local governments to recycle on Tuesday with a variety of examples, including the crushing of 1,000 old toilets for use in a San Antonio roadway project.

"People probably have a funny image of toilets being crushed," said Howard Cochran, a general services director for the Texas Department of Transportation. "That's the initial reaction anyway. But it's really a very good use. It's a durable material that serves well in roadway. It meets one of our big objectives of keeping materials out of the landfills."

The toilet crushing was one of a number of events staged around the state in observance of Texas Recycles Day, declared by Gov. Ann Richards.

In Austin, John Hall, chairman of the Texas Natural Resource Conservation Commission, and Land Commissioner Garry Mauro held a news conference amid recycling bins.

In Dallas, city officials had a downtown street fair featuring recycled products. There was a recycling rally at a local store in Fort Stockton as well as a compost training demonstration in Sweetwater.

Ms. Richards and other state leaders said the day was meant to challenge residents and businesses to improve the environment and economy by pledging to recycle products such as paper, glass, aluminum and plastic.

Hall said the Legislature in 1991 set a goal to improve the state's recycling of its waste to 40 percent from the current 14 percent.

He called on businesses to take the lead.

"About half of the waste stream in this state is generated by businesses," Hall said. "And about two-thirds of what businesses generate is paper. So if every business in the state would simply start a paper recycling program, that would reduce the waste stream significantly."

Cuts could save $4.6 billion over next 5 years, Sharp says

AUSTIN (AP) — State Comptroller John Sharp on Tuesday released a review of state government containing some 400 recommendations that he said could save $4.6 billion over the next five years.

Among the big-ticket items, Sharp has proposed cutting 11,700 state jobs within two years, reducing the state contribution to state government employees' and teachers' pension funds, and capping government job growth.

"Our aim is to halt the runaway growth of the state bureaucracy, which has ballooned at twice the rate of the private sector in the past five years," Sharp said.

Gov.-elect George W. Bush's spokeswoman Karen Hughes said Bush applauded the report, but opposes reducing the state contribution to the teachers' pension fund.

"During the campaign he (Bush) said he felt that the state contribution should be maintained at the current level," Ms. Hughes said.

Sharp defended lowering the state contribution from 7.31 percent of an employee's salary to the constitutional minimum of 6 percent.

"There are some people who have been told this is going to cut teacher benefits. That is not the case," he said.

Proposals in the 685-page performance review would streamline government, improve job training, and offer parents choices to send their children to better schools, Sharp said.

The report, entitled "Gaining Ground," will be given to lawmakers to consider when the Legislature convenes Jan. 10.

Similar government performance reviews in 1991 and 1993 resulted in $6.2 billion of savings, Sharp said.

Sharp said the growth of the state work force — 22 percent since 1988 — has gotten out of hand. He said about 11,700 jobs could be eliminated through attrition.

Combined with a job cap on all state employment, except frontline public safety workers, the savings could reach $3.5 billion by the end of the century, he said.

The report also calls for consolidation of job-training programs. There are 9,000 employees administering 30 separate job-training programs that are overseen by 14 separate agencies, he said.

Sharp also said private job-training schools should be required to notify trainees of their success rate.

"If you haven't got somebody a job since Noah's flood, students need to know that," he said.

On the education front, Sharp said public school students should be allowed to go to other schools in their district if their school has been deemed a poor performer.

"If you've got a school . . . that is lousy, why should you subject that child to that?" he asked.

For higher education, he proposed a plan in which families could deposit money in a state investment fund when their children are young to pay for their college tuition later.

To make government more efficient, Sharp recommended abolishing the state treasury department and cutting 80 employees at the Railroad Commission who are associated with trucking regulation.

State Treasurer Martha Whitehead just won re-election on a campaign promise to try and abolish the treasury — a move that would require two-thirds passage in the Legislature and voter approval.

"I have never seen a treasurer in my office doing anything other than drinking coffee," Sharp said.

Tips On Writing EFFECTIVE Classified Ads
➧ STICK TO THE FACTS
Prospective buyers need to know details, like the condition of the item for sale, the size, brand name, color and any other relevant information that would help them make a decision.
➧ BE HONEST
Aside from being unethical, exaggerating or misinforming potential buyers won't help you make a sale, and may only serve to lose a prospective buyers' trust. Even if they come to look at what you have to sell, they'll be less likely to buy the item or trust you once they see they've been mislead.
➧ SPELL IT OUT
Abbreviations are not easily understood by many people and may even confuse a reader. It only takes them a second to pass over an ad because it doesn't seem clear, why let it be yours because you abbreviated a description?
➧ THE BOTTOM LINE
State the price. You'll save yourself the hassle of having to answer calls from prospects who, upon learning the price, are not really interested. Price is the first thing they'll look for when reading your ad, and when prospects know the price, you'll know you have a serious buyer on the line.
➧ BE THERE
List the best hours to call and make sure you're at home. If you don't list a specific time, you could be flooded with calls any time of the day or night. And when you're not at home to take calls, most likely, they won't call back.
➧ ASK US
If you aren't sure how to word your ad or what features to include, why not ask us? Our professionals on staff know how to create an effective ad that sells, they're always willing to help, and there's no charge!

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 16, 1994

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Lessons learned in the past can help you make intelligent choices now. Gladly take on extra work if the compensation will be good. Mixed trends are seen early in 1995. Avoid gambling and risk-taking. Your talents will receive new attention next spring. Do not be shy about using your personal contacts to advance your career. Who you know can be as important as what you know!

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: figure skater Oksana Baiul, actress Lisa Bonet, tennis player Zina Garrison Jackson, "father of the blues" W.C. Handy.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): By consulting those in authority, you could obtain leads that will improve your chances for career advancement. Be certain to follow up. Pursue your destiny and seek success in the world of fine arts.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Beware of gimmicks and untried methods, whether you are working at home or somewhere else. Loved ones will offer useful suggestions. Be patient if romance is not everything you hoped.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): The letdown that often follows an extraordinary event will affect some of you today. Take things nice and slow. Associates may be on the unpredictable side. Be more diplomatic when asking for their cooperation.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Taking an unnecessary risk will only aggravate any already-unhappy situation. Put your faith in a higher power; it will help. Others begin to see you as a well-respected leader with considerable clout.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Contain your enthusiasm for a project until all the necessary checks have been made. A cautious approach prevents complications. Do not neglect your domestic obligations. Any sort of excess will make you feel uncomfortable.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Cash could be in short supply, making it essential for some of you to reconsider certain projects. You will find it a relief to work alone if that can be arranged.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): There are some things you are not ready to reveal. Certain events related to your private life should never be made public. The purchase or sale of property should be considered if the terms are right.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Higher-ups are keeping a close watch while deciding who should move up. Good work habits pay off handsomely. A professional appearance is important to customers. Dress to impress. Promote greater harmony at home.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Your romantic partner's concerns should be weighed before you reach a final decision. Acting in haste could backfire. A light shines through, pointing the way to the results you want to obtain. Forge ahead!

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Sudden changes of mind can leave your associates feeling at sea or unable to function efficiently. When you vacillate, little gets done. Make a firm decision, then plan your next move. Set certain financial limits.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): If you already feel tense or emotional, steer clear of troublesome people and tricky situations. Better days lie just ahead. Be willing to try a new approach for managing your finances. Reduce daily expenditures.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Get squarely behind the plans you have drawn up and see that they are carried out. You cannot afford to waste your energy and money. Give loved ones more T.L.C. Their response will delight you.

The bidding:

NORTH	EAST	SOUTH	WEST
3♠	Pass	3NT	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Five of ♠

It is a natural reaction to win a trick as cheaply as possible. More often than not, that's the right thing to do. Once in a while, though, circumstances dictate otherwise.

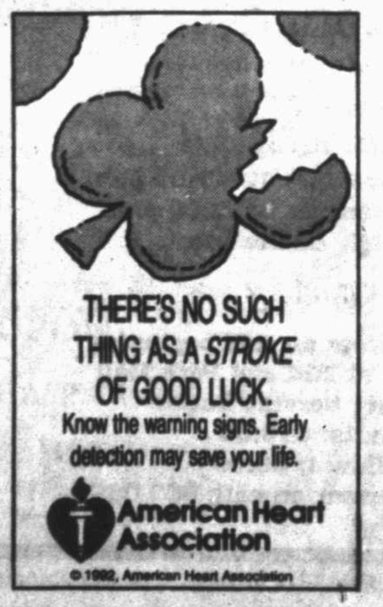

Holding a singleton club honor, we would have bid five clubs with the South hand; that contract needs no more than the spade finesse to succeed even if diamonds break badly. Change a low diamond to a low club, and we would clearly opt for three no trump.

West led a low spade, won in the closed hand with the nine. Declarer placed the king of clubs on the table, and East routinely held up the ace. Now declarer was an entry short to set up and run dummy's long suit (note the difference had declarer held another club). The limit of the hand was now seven tricks.

Declarer went wrong at the very first trick. Logic alone should have indicated the necessity for two dummy entries, and that the spade suit was the only place to obtain them. Declarer should win the first trick with the ace, then later the jack and king would have been entries with the help of a spade finesse.

What if the queen of spades was with East? Once East played the eight to the first trick, it could not be! The Rule of Eleven discloses that there are six cards higher than the five-spot in the other three hands. East has produced one, dummy holds two and declarer is looking at three, thus accounting for all of them. Barring some eccentric opening lead, the queen of spades had to be with West.

Grodin to bring 'no experience' to CNBC as new talk show host

NEW YORK — What qualifications does Charles Grodin bring as host of a talk show? None, he says, but why he should be different from others?

"I have no qualifications at all, and we're very excited about that," said Grodin, who announced Tuesday he is replacing Tom Snyder as host of the CNBC talk show seen weeknights at 10 p.m. EST.

Snyder is moving to CBS as host of a 12:30 a.m. show following "Late Show With David Letterman."

Grodin, who frequently displays his deadpan wit as a guest on other talk shows, is a perfect replacement, said CNBC President Roger Ailes. Grodin "understands the talk-show genre and genuinely enjoys talking to people," Ailes said.

Grodon signed a two-year deal. The star of "Beethoven" and other movies said he won't miss the time away from films.

"I think this is the best job in television," said Grodin, who will do the show live from the cable station's Fort Lee, N.J., headquarters. "You come to work for two hours a day, you sit down, you talk to America. It's certainly better than working 14 hours a day in the movies."

NEW YORK — Ignore those rumors that Lyle Lovett and Julia Roberts are headed for Splitsville. That was them holding hands as they walked to a restaurant after Lovett's New York City concert the other night.

Julia Roberts

Lovett didn't tell the audience Roberts was at Sunday's show. But in introducing the song "That's No Lady, That's My Wife," the country star was careful to note he wrote it before his marriage 17 months ago.

LOS ANGELES — Roseanne has two dates to look forward to: one in December, when she divorces Tom Arnold, and another in February, when she marries her bodyguard, Ben Thomas.

The "Roseanne" star plans a Valentine's Day wedding, her publicist, Kevin Campbell, said Tuesday. The location hasn't been decided on.

Roseanne said last week she expects her divorce to become final in December, with the couple dividing property from their four-year marriage afterward, either by settlement or trial.

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina — Twelve years after he fought Argentina in the Falklands War, Britain's Prince Andrew arrived Tuesday on a fence-mending mission.

The prince, a helicopter pilot in the 10-week war that Britain won, was met by an honor guard, Foreign Minister Guido di Tella and other officials. He was to meet President Carlos Menem later.

"This will strengthen ties with Britain," Menem said. "If there is no dialogue between the two sides, then we have no chance of recovering the islands."

Argentina still claims sovereignty over the South Atlantic island chain Britain has controlled since 1833 and hopes to recover them through diplomatic channels.

Among other things, Andrew is to meet with Argentine veterans, some of whom are still angry.

"As long as we and the families of those who died recall the crimes committed by the British troops in 1982, friendship pacts are of no use," the Federation of Argentine War Veterans said Tuesday.

LOS ANGELES — Sheena Easton is the proud adoptive mother of a baby boy, her first child.

"She didn't want to give out any other information. It's a private occasion, but she wanted people to know she adopted a baby," Angee Jenkins of MCA Records said Monday.

The 35-year-old singer is known for the songs "For Your Eyes Only," "Morning Train" and "Modern Girl."

CHARLESTON, W.Va. — The property Nick Nolte and his ex-wife once planned to turn into a housing tract called Down and Out in South Hills failed to draw a single bid at a tax auction.

The couple, who split up earlier this year, owed $2,161 in taxes on the house and four-acre lot, which were valued at $425,000. It was one of 3,000 properties put up for bid Monday at a county tax sale.

Before their divorce, the Noltes had proposed turning the property into a 10-lot subdivision, but local planners rejected the idea after neighbors complained.

The neighbors were particularly offended by the proposed development's name, a takeoff on Nolte's 1986 movie "Down and Out in Beverly Hills."

With no one buying the property, the Noltes now have 18 months to pay the back taxes.

Armey can sell his political ideas to liberals

By Matt Yancey
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — His acerbic one-liners sometimes grate on friend and foe alike. But the man in line to be the next House majority leader, conservative Rep. Richard Armey, knows how to do a deal, even with liberals.

Speaker-to-be Newt Gingrich's announcement Monday was largely a formality: The Texas lawmaker will be the GOP floor leader when Republicans take control of the House for the first time in four decades.

The 54-year-old former economics professor became the designated heir two years ago for his party's No. 2 job in the House when he challenged and unseated moderate Rep. Jerry Lewis, R-Calif., as chairman of the House Republican Conference.

Lewis, in the view of Armey and most of the 47 freshmen Republicans elected in 1992, just wasn't conservative and confrontational enough. The Californian had supported President Bush's tax increase in 1990 but opposed Bush's plan to give parents government vouchers to send their kids to private schools.

As one of the authors of the school-choice measure, Armey is now in a much better position to make it happen.

"In the final analysis," he said Monday, Americans want "a smaller government financed by lower taxes that engages the American people with greater respect and greater freedom to conduct their own affairs."

Along with Gingrich and Sen. Phil Gramm of Texas, Armey is among the new breed of conservatives who earned their ideological credentials in academia before transferring to politics.

And, like Gingrich and Gramm, Armey can occasionally hurl a barb at an opponent, only to see it come back as a boomerang.

Last year he called President Clinton's ill-fated health-care plan "the Dr. Kevorkian prescription for the jobs of American working men and women," referring to the controversial Michigan physician who has assisted patients in their suicides.

At a hearing later on the health-care plan, Armey promised to make it an exciting event.

"I'm sure you'll do that, Mr. Armey, you and Dr. (Jack) Kevorkian," cracked the hearing's main witness and author of the plan, first lady Hillary Rodham Clinton.

Armey's face turned red. "I have been told about your charm and wit," he responded to Mrs. Clinton. "Reports on your charm are overstated. Reports on your wit are understated."

Earlier, Armey admitted he had "crossed the line" in "spoofing" a speech by Mrs. Clinton when he said her thoughts "sound a lot like Karl Marx. She hangs around a lot of Marxists. All her friends are Marxists."

Despite the occasional gaffe, Armey's political instincts are well honed, and he knows how to sell some of his ideas to people who are normally ideological foes. In 1987 he thought up the idea of having a non-political commission make the decisions on which military bases should be closed. Within two years, he had persuaded both the Pentagon and Congress to give up that power.

In 1990 he teamed with liberal Democratic Rep. Charles Schumer of New York to launch a wholesale assault on farm subsidies, saying they encouraged inefficiencies of Soviet proportions. That effort failed, but parts of it are likely to resurface when House Republicans start looking for concrete measures to pay for their tax-reducing, deficit-reducing "Contract With America."

Armey pledged Monday to get most elements of that contract to the House floor within 100 days, even if it means working "seven days a week, 20 hours a day."

Pilot drops rolls of toilet paper

INDEPENDENCE, Kan. (AP) — The ammunition was squeezably soft, but authorities weren't laughing after a pilot buzzed downtown rooftops and dropped several rolls of toilet paper from his plane.

The pilot, a 37-year-old Independence man, was arrested when he landed his plane around 2:30 a.m. Tuesday. He was being held in the county jail on $100,000 bond on suspicion of flying an airplane while under the influence and littering.

Montgomery County Sheriff Jack Daniels said the pilot, who hadn't been formally charged by late Tuesday afternoon, was drinking with friends when he bragged he could hit Main Street from his plane with a roll of toilet paper.

He purchased a generic four-pack of toilet paper at a convenience store and then swooped over town, dropping several rolls, Daniels said.

"He missed Main Street," said RexAnn Davidson, a city police dispatcher. "He didn't have a very good map, apparently."

Residents who heard and saw the airplane called authorities. One witness said the pilot nearly hit a 500-foot cable television tower.

Authorities said the man is a pipeline patrol pilot for Pipeline Services Corp. of Dallas and was flying a rented, single-engine Piper.

Rape victim campaigns to keep attacker behind bars

HOUSTON (AP) — A psychotherapist raped in 1986 is fighting back with a one-woman campaign to keep her attacker in prison.

Susan Cotellesse began soliciting letters from people pleading with the Texas Board of Pardons and Paroles not to release Jack Walton, now 29 and serving the eighth year of his 40-year sentence.

Ms. Cotellesse said even strangers have joined her campaign to prolong Walton's stay at the prison system's Michael Unit in Anderson County.

Ms. Cotellesse said she believes her support comes from the public's frustration with a criminal justice system that encourages plea bargaining to clear court dockets, then paroles criminals to ease prison overcrowding.

"These people are saying, 'It feels good for me to do something,'" she said. "People are thanking me for the chance to do this. The rest is up to the parole board."

No date has been set for the parole board to hear Walton's case, but the woman has been told this will happen within the next four months.

Walton is suspected in about 20 assaults in southwest Houston and the Astrodome area in 1986, police say.

State prison system officials would not say whether Walton had entered the prison system's sex offender program, but Ms. Cotellesse doubts that the program would have had much impact on an "anger rapist."

"I'm a psychotherapist and I know what it takes to change someone like Jack Walton," she said. "There has to be a significant therapeutic intervention, and the person has to want to change."

Small prairie town becomes unlikely way station for refugees

By Matt Truell
Associated Press

GARDEN CITY, Kan. — For many Indochina refugees, this windy town on the Kansas prairie has been a way station in their journey to a new home.

Here, they begin their earning lives in America. Here, their children learn English and arithmetic and discover the lure of television. And here, they find acceptance from the town's 24,000 longtime residents, including the Hispanics who've been an integral part of Garden City for decades.

"Our community has grown to accept diversity because we're used to it," state Rep. David Heinemann says.

Officials estimate as many as 3,000 Asian refugees — Vietnamese, Cambodian, Laotian and Hmong — could be living in Garden City, located about 200 miles west of Wichita, enticed by what one calls the "refugee rumor network."

Because of the Iowa Beef Packing and Monfort packing plants, which employ a total of about 4,000 people, the town has had a sizable Asian refugee population since the early 1980s. They join the approximately 6,000 Hispanics who arrived decades ago for railroad and field work.

"Tough job, big pay," Roger Vilaysing, executive director of the Southeast Asian Mutual Assistance Association, says of the packing plants, where starting wages are $6.80 an hour.

Many Asian families stay for three to five years, until they've saved some money, and then move on, often to Texas, Louisiana and California, places with climates similar to Southeast Asia. But some depart for climates as cold as Kansas, if there's the promise of jobs.

Others, like Georg Anh Nguyen, owner of the Kim Nhung Market, put down roots here.

"I love this job," Nguyen says as he loads his freezer with fish.

Nguyen worked in a packing plant for four years in the mid-1980s before opening the store, which sells a variety of Asian products, from rice noodles and canned quail eggs to tea sets and Chinese soap.

"The refugee numbers have declined over the years," says Levita Rohlman of the Catholic Refugee Services, noting that there are fewer refugees leaving Indochina. "(But) we still have a basic refugee community here. We have people constantly coming and people constantly moving out."

> 'The refugee numbers have declined over the years. (But) we still have a basic refugee community here. We have people constantly coming and people constantly moving out.'
> — Levita Rohlman, of the Catholic Refugee Services

Vilaysing, a former Laotian bomber pilot, says many among the newest wave of Asians don't come directly from overseas refugee camps but from other resettlement areas, such as California, where jobs for the unskilled are few.

Many are veterans of the prison camps, sometimes called re-education camps, that opened after the fall of Saigon in 1975.

Suong Nguyen and his wife, Nuong, have settled into a sparsely furnished mobile home they share with another couple. They have a television and a VCR and watch Vietnamese movies, or Chinese movies translated into Vietnamese, rented from the Kim Nhung Market.

Nguyen, educated in French schools, served as a captain in the Vietnamese army before the fall of Saigon and spent six years in a prison camp. His wife was an elementary schoolteacher until 1993, when they left Vietnam.

Now, both are employed at the IBP plant, where workers wearing hardhats, earplugs, stainless steel mesh gloves and chain-mail aprons slaughter, skin, gut and trim cattle.

It's one of the most dangerous jobs in Kansas, and the industry long has relied on immigrant labor, from as far back as the 1906 publication of Upton Sinclair's novel "The Jungle," about Polish and Lithuanian workers at Chicago packing plants.

Mrs. Nguyen says through a translator that she'd like to learn enough English to give up her job and become a teacher's aide.

She and her husband study every morning at the adult education center before going to work, and dream of buying a house some day.

In downtown Garden City, at the adult education class, Jessie Palacios paces around the room, giving dictation to about 20 students — mostly Asian — ranging in age from 17 to 65.

Refugees will take three years to learn what she calls "survival English," and five years before being able to converse without prompting.

"They struggle with it. I know these people are tired," Palacios says.

In the school district, which is almost half-minority, with Hispanic students outnumbering Asians, children work just as hard.

At 7 a.m., students at Victor Ornelas Elementary start crowding through the doors to eat breakfast or sit on the floor and talk. They speak English, Spanish, Vietnamese, Cambodian, Laotian or Thai. A few speak Hmong, the language of the mountain people in Laos.

Police put brakes on city's most-wanted driver

By Tom Hays
Associated Press

NEW YORK — The traffic violation — an illegal U-turn — was routine stuff. But when police pulled over Leroy Linen, they soon discovered he was no ordinary motorist.

It took nearly two hours to print out his list of traffic violations, which had resulted in 633 license suspensions in the last five years.

He was the city's most-wanted driver.

New York's No. 1 scofflaw was charged with aggravated unlicensed operation of a vehicle and driving without a license. The 40-year-old scrap-metal dealer was jailed without bail.

He pleaded innocent Monday and a hearing was set for Friday.

After a series of fatal accidents involving unlicensed drivers, state lawmakers last year made it a felony to drive with 10 or more suspensions, punishable by up to four years in prison. Under the old law, the maximum sentence was one year in jail.

In one accident last May, Abraham Meyers, 55, a drunken driver with 22 license suspensions, killed a mother and her two daughters as the family tried to cross the street after a party in the Queens borough, authorities say.

Since then, the Police Department has kept a list of drivers with 100 or more suspensions, about 340 names, topped by Linen's. Officers also are under orders to make more computer checks on drivers stopped for traffic offenses.

Despite the crackdown, officials estimate that as many as 15 percent of the city's 2.8 million motorists may have suspended licenses.

Linen, like many of the worst scofflaws, amassed his record with a plethora of moving violations. He avoided arrest mainly by avoiding accidents and by giving police false names and addresses, police said.

In New York, each citation given to a driver is counted as a suspension. In addition, each failure to appear in court becomes the basis for another suspension.

"This guy just ignored the system," said police spokesman Sgt. John Clifford.

On Saturday night, Linen was driving with a friend in a late-model Oldsmobile when he made an illegal U-turn in the Bronx, police said. A hand-lettered, cardboard license plate in the rear window also caught the eye of the officers, who pulled Linen over, Clifford said.

This time, Linen slipped up by giving his real name, police said. He begged the officers to let him go, explaining that the car belonged to his friend and that he was going to see his mother, Clifford said.

After their police car's computer malfunctioned, the officers took Linen to the stationhouse. Another computer needed an hour and 45 minutes and 205 pages to spit out his record.

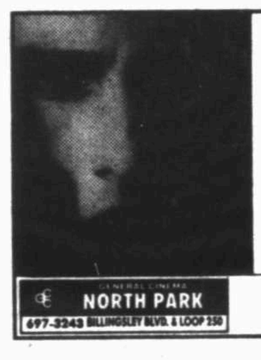

The car was returned to Linen's friend after the man produced the proper paperwork.

Meanwhile, Linen didn't understand what all the fuss was about, one of the arresting officers, Larry Edwards, told The New York Times.

"In fact, when we picked him up he said to me that he'd never been in an accident, that we should be out arresting drug dealers," the officer said.

Male guppies choose company carefully in search for mate

By Natalie Angier
N.Y. Times News Service

Researchers have discovered a new twist to the struts and frets of animal courtship. They have found that a male will preferentially congregate with other males who have proved to be lousy Lotharios, the better to appear himself as a comely alternative — or at least the lesser of two evils.

Gentlemen! Ask yourselves the following question. If you were hoping to attract the woman of your fantasies over to your table in a bar, would you rather be sitting next to a guy who looks like Mel Gibson, or like Jerry Lewis in "The Nutty Professor"? Against which backdrop are you likelier to shine, or even appear visible at all? Think carefully and realistically — the future of your chromosomes may depend upon it.

Scientists have devoted thousands of hours studying the details of how female animals choose their mates and how that pickiness drives the evolution of male finery and flamboyance. They have also looked at how males fight one another for access to those females, engaging in ritualistic displays of sound and fury known among biologists as male-male competition.

Now researchers have discovered a new twist to the struts and frets of animal courtship. They have found that a male will preferentially congregate with other males who have proved to be lousy Lotharios, the better to appear himself as a comely alternative — or at least the lesser of two evils.

Studying the behavior of guppies, colorful little fish that have made sizable contributions to evolutionary science, Dr. Lee Alan Dugatkin of the University of Missouri in Columbia and Dr. Robert Craig Sargent of the University of Kentucky in Lexington have determined that males will observe the performance of their competitors, to see which the females prefer and which they avoid. When given a choice to swim beside a loser at love or a winner, the observing males overwhelmingly opt to situate themselves cheek by gill with the chump.

The latest results, which appear in the current issue of the journal Behavioral Ecology and Sociobiology, not only demonstrate that males will go to any length to appear good to females, but that even fish with brains as small as pinheads are capable of surprisingly sophisticated social behavior.

"This kind of behavior requires an if-then sequence of thought," said Dugatkin. "If I see a particular outcome with another male, then I behave accordingly. It's not the sort of ability you normally expect from a guppy."

Dr. David Sloan Wilson, a professor of biology at the State University of New York at Binghamton, said of the research, "The message that comes out of all these stories is that we have to revise upwards our estimates of the cognitive abilities of nonhuman animals."

Dugatkin had earlier shown that female fish often make their choice of a mate through imitation, observing which male their peers prefer and then picking the same male. The latest research suggests that males, too, act on their assessments of their peers, though to very different ends.

In the experiments, the scientists rigged up a tank with various partitions to place fish closer together or farther apart. They allowed a male to observe a female swimming in a tank with another male that either was permitted to be close to her or was kept away from her by an invisible partition. The distance between the female and the male under observation served as a controllable proxy for her preference. In general, the closer a female guppy stays to a male, the more she fancies him.

The observing male was then put in a tank with both the faux winner and faux loser in the battle for the female's affections. In 24 out of 30 independent trials with 30 different sets of guppies, the observing male swam right over to the part of the tank where the loser was kept, and lingered there as though he just happened to like his company.

To assure that the observing male was not merely responding to indirect cues from the victorious male, whose recent proximity to a female could in theory have aroused him and made him more aggressive and unapproachable, the scientists also did the same experiments without letting male No. 1 observe the interactions between the two males and the female. When the male had no clue who had been beside the female and who had been kept away, he chose to swim beside one or another with equal frequency.

Dugatkin admits that the experiment was performed under artificial laboratory conditions. He hopes soon to observe the guppies in their native Trinidad to see if they perform similarly in the wild.

Nevertheless, he proposes the results are meaningful in their surprising consistency. Among guppies, which aggregate in loose schools of 15 to 100 fish, males cannot monopolize territories or harems and therefore have trouble making themselves stand out to potential mates.

Finding a less attractive foil to underscore one's graces may be a male's easiest route to reproductive success. Dugatkin also suggests that such a strategy of conquest by contrast is not likely to be limited to guppies, but may apply to other social animals like birds, dolphins or primates, in which individuals are perpetually assessing the strengths and weaknesses of their neighbors.

"I wouldn't hesitate to say the same things may be going on with humans," Dugatkin said. He is hoping to do experiments shortly to see if people, like guppies, choose their cruising companions in part to make themselves appear the choicest catch of the sea.

LSU's Hallman fired

BATON ROUGE, La. — LSU coach Curley Hallman was fired today but will be allowed to coach the Tigers' final two games of the season.

Hallman

Hallman, under fire as the Tigers headed for their sixth straight losing season, will coach LSU (2-7) on Saturday against Tulane and Nov. 26 at Arkansas. In four years, Hallman's record at LSU is 14-28.

"It has become apparent we have leveled out in our rebuilding program; while progress is being made, it's time to move on to the next level, so it is with regret that I announce that Coach Hallman will not return in 1995," LSU athletic director Joe Dean said at a news conference today.

Dean said he told Hallman on Monday of the school's decision after conferring with LSU Chancellor Bud Davis.

"I am disappointed. We will be hiring the seventh football coach in 15 years," Dean said. "At some time, stability must come."

Hallman will be paid through 1995 and assistants will be paid until June 30 unless they find new jobs before then.

Davis denied reports that Baylor coach Chuck Reedy had been contacted about the job and said it would be impossible to set a timetable for choosing Hallman's replacement.

Manley in court

HOUSTON — Former Pro Bowl defensive end Dexter Manley, who was banned from the NFL for violating the league's drug policy, appeared in court Tuesday following a crack cocaine arrest.

Manley, 36, was arrested Sunday night and was released Monday after posting $5,000 bail.

On Tuesday, he made an initial appearance in court with his attorney, Paula Asher.

"He is anxious to get this matter resolved," Ms. Asher said, declining further comment on her client's case.

A Dec. 6 arraignment has been scheduled.

Unable to read until 1986, Manley had been an inspiration and also a frustration to the fans who followed his turbulent career.

Chaps tan Bahama All-Stars, 109-76

■ Midland overcomes slow start to race past Bahama All-Star team 109-76.

By Bill Petitt
Staff Writer

When one thinks of the Bahamas, sunny skies, dred locks, calypso music and Dick Gregory health shakes come to mind, not basketball.

Midland College finished off the ban of all-stars from a Bahamian league 109-76 Tuesday night at the Chap Center.

The piecemeal team was put together three weeks before the trip to the United States. It's not the country's national team that plays only Division I basketball teams. They are in the middle of a seven-game in nine-day tour which climaxes this weekend in Levelland against South Plains College.

But they bring an entertaining brand of hoops to the floor. Behind the back passes, double clutch slam dunks.

They also bring a lack of fundamental skills, and with such little time to prepare for the tour, they lack conditioning.

"Already we are terribly banged up," said the Bahamas coach Chadwick Williamson. "Everyone of our guys has some ailment and we are icing all of them down after every game. But one thing is that they played with guts tonight. One thing was evident, they are older and our conditioning was not as good as Midland's was."

It forced Bahama to play in a zone defense early and kept Midland off balanced as the Bahama team built a 17-15 lead with 11:29 to play in the firs half on a follow shot by 16-year-old Randy Kelly.

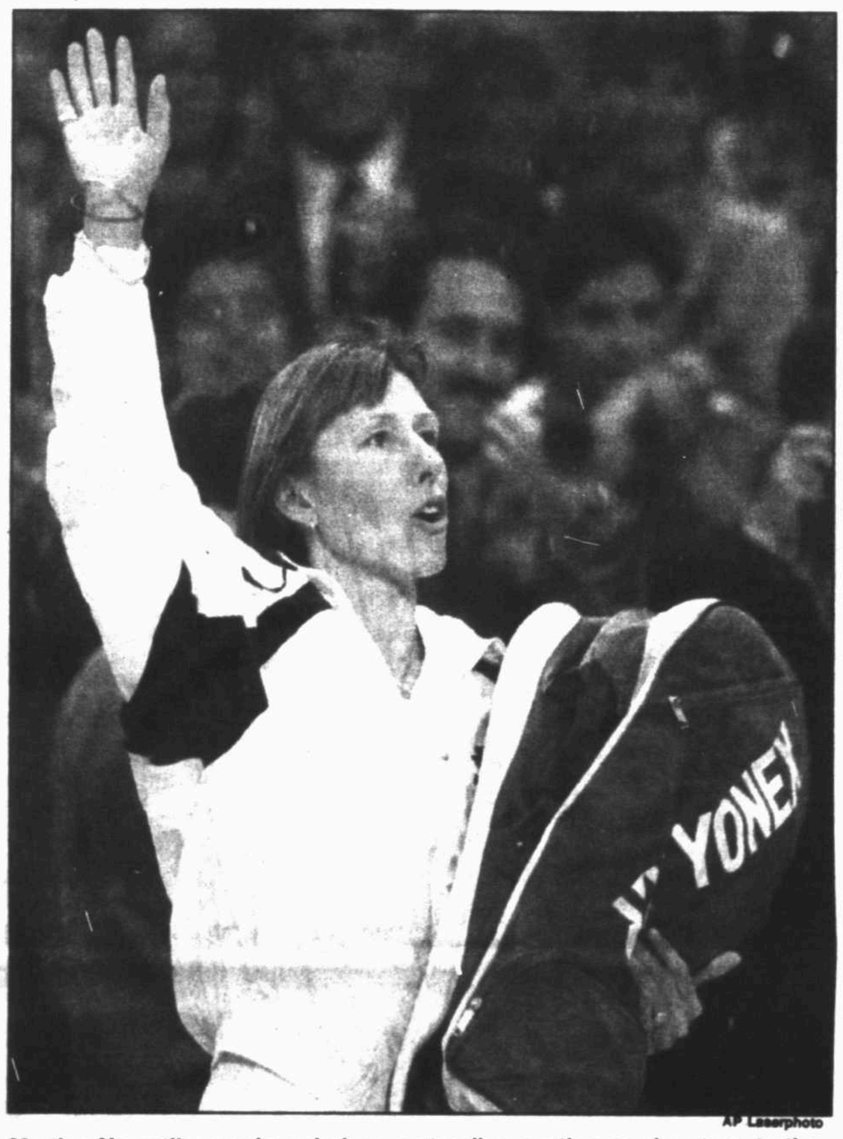

Following a timeout, Midland College turned up the defensive pressure and went on a 17-4 run over the next 6:04. MC forced 21 turnovers in the first half by Bahama.

"I can't repeat what I said to them," said Midland College coach Pat Rafferty. "We just are not coming out and playing with the intensity we need.

"We start the game throwing the ball in the locker rooms and then almost hit the mascot with a pass. We are playing immature. We are too busy looking pretty, stylin' and making no-look passes. We have got to outgrow that."

Freshman D'Juan Baker turned in his best game as a Chap with 24 points, 17 in the first half when the game was in doubt. Baker, from Arlington Martin, canned a basket with 7:56 to play in the first half to Martina Navratilova acknowledges a standing ovation as she steps to the court at New York's Madison Square Garden Tuesday before playing the last match of her storied tennis career. Navratilova lost to Gabriela Sabatini 6-4, 6-2, at the Virginia Slims Championships.

Game, set, career for Navratilova

■ Martina Navratilova bows to Gabriela Sabatini Tuesday to end one of tennis' most brilliant careers.

By Robin Finn
N.Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK — She wore her heart on her sleeve, and for 22 years she jammed her backhand volley — one that won't be replicated and was rarely returned — down the throats of any and all opponents who weren't savvy enough to get out of harm's way.

On Tuesday night in the opening round of the Virginia Slims Championships at Madison Square Garden, Martina Navratilova, the tennis dynamo generally regarded as the finest woman athlete to grace her sport, played her last-ever singles match under the same prestigious roof where she'd earned a record 18 titles.

Pitted against one of the strapping young women whose demolition-style ground strokes had lately become the bane of her competitive existence, Navratilova was defeated, 6-4, 6-2, by Gabriela Sabatini. Navratilova, who waved a white towel in appreciation of the standing ovation the crowd of 17,131 gave her as she strolled onto the court, gradually threw in the towel in resignation on Tuesday night.

Between Sabatini's brassy top-spin ground strokes, devilish backhand lobs and the searing passing shots she delivered with a rollicking twist of her body, Navratilova could barely get a shot in edgewise.

"I don't know whether I should cry or laugh," said Navratilova, who owned a 15-5 career record against Sabatini before Tuesday night, when the Argentine's adrenaline and unretiring demeanor proved superior to her own. "I got blown off the court, but if I had to lose my last match, I'd probably rather lose it to Gabriela Sabatini than anyone else," she said of the gracious victor, who embraced her and apologized to her as they met at the net for the ritual handshake.

"I couldn't wait to finish this match, to have it be over," said Sabatini, who called Navratilova the "best volleyer" ever. "She's so talented, she can do anything, and she's almost 40, and for tennis, that's a lot of years."

After the defeat, Navratilova, whose finest moment this year came at Wimbledon, where she fought her way to the final of the grand slam she'd won a re-

Opponents run down Dallas rushing attack

■ The Cowboys' loss to San Francisco accentuates their dropoff in run production this year.

By Denne H. Freeman
AP Sports Writer

IRVING — Emmitt Smith's production is down, proving the Dallas Cowboys are vulnerable in their bid to win an unprecedented three consecutive Super Bowls.

Smith's average per carry has dropped from last year's 5.3 to 4.0. Opponents also are doing a better job against him on pass defense, cutting his gain per catch from 7.3 yards to 5.6.

Coach Barry Switzer is worried.

"We're a rushing football team and we've got to be able to run," Switzer said. "Everything comes off the run. You've got to run the football to have success in the passing game. We can't be in second-and-8 or third-and-8 all day. We've got to get it down where it's third down and 5 yards or less."

Smith gained only 78 yards rushing in Sunday's 21-14 loss to the San Francisco 49ers. Dallas is 32-2 when Smith gains at least 100 yards rushing.

Coogs could leave early

Associated Press

HOUSTON — The University of Houston, abandoned by its parent Southwest Conference, may be leaving the league early.

UH may join its new conference, which still has no name, in time for the 1995-96 basketball season, according to the Houston Chronicle's Tuesday editions.

All eight SWC schools agreed earlier to compete in all sports through May 1996. After that, Texas, Texas A&M, Baylor and Texas Tech head to the new Big 12. Rice, Texas Christian and Southern Methodist go to the Western Athletic Conference.

TERRY WILLIAMSON

Dunson dons pads, but will it help?

It was easy to tell Midland Lee running back Melvin Dunson from the rest of the Rebels at practice Monday afternoon.

Williamson

Not because of his well known slashing runs, but because he was the one with the clean practice duds — the shining warrior without a speck of dirt.

Dunson, a senior, hasn't played a game since he broke his shoulder blade some seven weeks ago against Midland High. In four games, Dunson had compiled 559 yards rushing in only 79 carries, averaging 7.1 yards every time he touched the ball. He was on the path toward a 1,400-yard year over 10 games if he hadn't been injured.

And with that 559 yards rushing, Dunson still is the leading rusher for the Rebels. Junior Alex Strambler, who replaced Dunson in the lineup, now has 553 yards rushing, still six yards shy of the Dunson numbers for four games. Fullback Theo Macklin has 501 yards rushing.

So it's easy to see why the Lee faithful this week have been treating the Dunson return like some kind of Second Coming. And the question to ask is that an unrealistic expectation?

"We have him (Dunson) out there working, but we don't know what he can do," said Lee offensive coordinator Mike Quimby. "I don't realistically expect that he can do that much right now. He will have been out a full eight weeks by the time we play (our area round playoff against El Paso Riverside) Saturday. This is a wait and see kind of thing."

Lee head football coach Earl Miller said, "We don't know if he can take a hit, or how he will react to that. I wouldn't think he could help us much this week since he's been out so long, but he might be able to help us out the next week if we get that far. We'll see."

Last week Miller said, "I think Melvin could step in rather quickly, but we don't know that. His legs weren't injured and he's been able to run. He's an athlete. We'll just have to see how he can handle the contact."

At least Dunson is ready for the challenge.

"This is what I've been waiting for," Dunson said. "I told them they better beat Amarillo High so I could play again. I can still be the leading rusher on the team. I plan to get the numbers if they let me play."

Dunson also believes he can take a hit.

"The shoulder is fine," Dunson said last week prior to the Amarillo High game. "I fell down here last week and it didn't hurt. I know I can play. I just hope I get a chance."

It's almost a bet that the Lee coaches won't throw Dunson into a starting role this week. Expect that he might get into the game with Riverside Saturday for a brief test and that playing time will probably be determined on how well he can perform when he is in there.

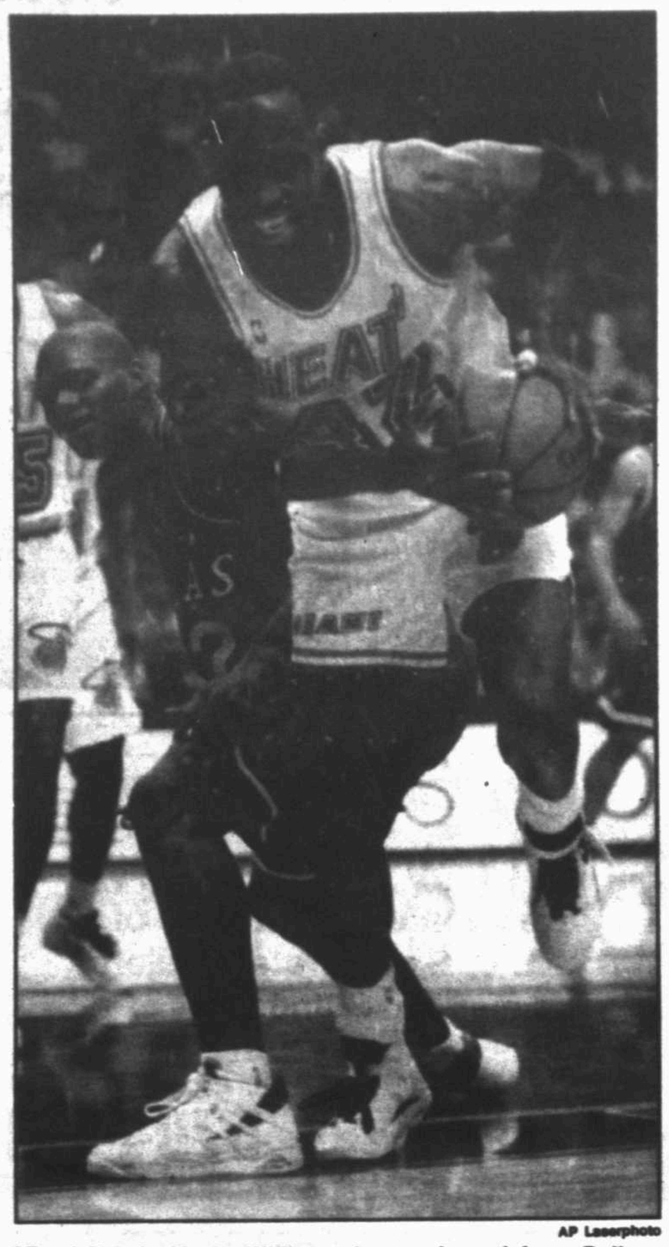

Still, the idea that Dunson is back on the field seems to be a positive factor to the Lee players.

Lee defensive back Kevin Jordan said, "One of the other good things about getting past Amarillo High was the fact that Dunson could come back and play. I think everyone on the team wanted him to have that chance."

Lee got some more good news this week. Macklin, who missed most of the second half against Amarillo High with what was feared to be a pulled hamstring, may be ready to play again by Saturday. Macklin is responding to treatment and may only have a strained hamstring.

Miami Heat's Kevin Willis grabs a rebound from Dallas Maverick Jamal Mashburn Tuesday in Miami.

Miami takes first vs. Mavs

■ NBA Roundup

MIAMI — The Miami Heat, behind Harold Miner's 23 points, earned their first victory of the season Tuesday night, beating Dallas 115-102.

The victory came after an 0-4 start, Miami's worst since its inaugural season in 1988.

Miner, settling into a starting role in a lineup revamped by two recent trades, had just 23 points in the first four games.

Kevin Willis matched his season high with 24 points for Miami. Glen Rice added 16.

Jamal Mashburn, who scored 50 points Saturday against the Chicago Bulls, had to settle for 24 against Miami. Jim Jackson had 25 for the Mavericks.

Rockets 105, Kings 99

HOUSTON — Hakeem Olajuwon scored 28 points, helping the Houston Rockets hold off Sacramento for a victory, extending their season-opening winning streak to seven games.

The Kings, who lost for the 23rd time in their last 24 games in The Summit, didn't go down easy, although they lost for the ninth straight time to the Rockets.

The Rockets, who opened last season with an NBA record-tying 15 straight wins, had led at the end of the first quarter in every game this season. But the Kings recovered from a slow start to take a 23-22 lead at the end of the first quarter.

Nuggets 112, Spurs 99

DENVER — Robert Pack scored a career-high 30 points and the Denver Nuggets held off a rally by the San Antonio Spurs to win their fourth straight.

Reserve forward Tom Hammonds scored 22 points, including 12 in the fourth quarter. He hit his first six shots in the final period after the Spurs had drawn within two points, 81-79, on Terry Cummings' 16-footer barely a minute into the quarter.

Cavaliers 89, Hornets 86, OT

CLEVELAND — Chris Mills hit a desperate 3-pointer at the buzzer in regulation and Tyrone Hill sank the go-ahead jumper in overtime as the Cleveland Cavaliers beat the Charlotte Hornets.

The Hornets have dropped all 14 of their road games against Cleveland, the previous 13 at the Richfield Coliseum and now one at Gund Arena.

Bucks 82, Pacers 81

MILWAUKEE — Glenn Robinson had his best night as a pro, scoring 18 points as Milwaukee survived a second-half collapse to edge Indiana.

Hawks 110, Celtics 94

ATLANTA — Stacey Augmon scored 27 points and Ken Norman added 19 as the Atlanta Hawks routed the Boston Celtics and former teammate Dominique Wilkins.

Pistons 99, 76ers 98

AUBURN HILLS, Mich. — Joe Dumars scored seven of his 20 points in the final five minutes, and the Detroit Pistons hung on for a win over the Philadelphia 76ers.

Nets 112, SuperSonics 106

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Derrick Coleman broke out of a slump by hitting seven of his first eight shots and scoring 16 of his 25 points in the first quarter to lead the New Jersey Nets to a victory over the Seattle SuperSonics.

Magic 122, Bullets 102

ORLANDO, Fla. — Shaquille O'Neal dominated at both ends of the court, getting 29 points and 13 rebounds as the Orlando Magic beat the Washington Bullets.

Suns 96, Trail Blazers 93

PORTLAND, Ore. — Danny Manning scored 10 points in the fourth quarter and Elliott Perry four in the final 44 seconds as the injury-depleted Phoenix Suns came from 15 points down in the second half.

Resolve deepens in NHL dispute

TORONTO (AP) — NHL commissioner Gary Bettman says hockey owners likely will cancel the season if they can't reach a labor agreement in time to salvage a 50-game schedule.

Bettman refused Tuesday to set an absolute deadline, saying only, "Obviously, the time is coming short."

There has been speculation among team officials that mid-December might be the date, but Bettman's comments were the strongest statement yet from the league.

"We're not there yet," Bettman said after induction ceremonies for the Hockey Hall of Fame. "But it's coming. We wouldn't like to have a season with less than 50 games. And we'd like to have one with more."

Bettman also said the league office has laid off 15 to 20 employees, with everyone else, "top to bottom," taking a 10 percent pay cut. Bettman, who is believed to make $1 million, will lose $100,000.

Lionel Conacher, a defenseman in the 1920s and '30s, and Harry Watson, who played in the '40s and '50s, were to be inducted into the Hockey Hall of Fame on Tuesday night along with longtime NHL officer Brian O'Neill.

In his acceptance speech, O'Neill said he was confident the stewards of the game will find a solution to "this current nuisance."

Bettman met with the league's general managers earlier in the day to update them on negotiations to end hockey's longest work stoppage, which has lasted through 46 days and 253 games. Officially, the league has cut 14 games from each teams' schedule. More cuts are expected any day.

Union head Bob Goodenow, also at the induction ceremony, said he expects to meet with Bettman later in the week. He would not say whether he was expecting a counter-offer to the player proposal owners quickly rejected last week.

"It only took two seconds to discuss their offer," Buffalo Sabres coach and general manager John Muckler said. He said there was no movement from ownership during the meeting of general managers.

"We will do everything possible to work out a settlement," he said. "The ownership and management is very strong. I guess the players' association will tell you the same thing."

On that, they can agree.

"They really think we're going to fold our tent," said Troy Loney, the Islanders' player representative. "It isn't in the cards at all. Gary has come from a position of power in the NBA, but I don't think he quite understands the hockey mentality."

Loney said he had hoped the player concessions on rookie contracts would stimulate discussion.

"At worst, this proposal will get the owners to talk," he said. "The owners really haven't given us anything" in the contract negotiations.

The Canadian Press reported that the NHL's counter-proposal will center on entry-level salaries and salary arbitration, but will not address the focal issue of a payroll tax. But some league officials were pessimistic.

"I have not seen any rays of hope," Boston Bruins general manager Harry Sinden said. "I haven't really. I have not seen anybody show any optimism."

"Talking with some of our players," Vancouver general manager Pat Quinn said, "I can tell we are a long way away from resolving anything."

CHAPS: MC forces Bahamians into 36 turnovers

(From 1C)

give the Chaps a lead they would never surrender, 21-19.

"They went to the zone and we knew we had to hit a couple from outside," said Baker, who hit three three-pointers in the game. "After that timeout in the first half we jumping out to the ball more and tried to pressure them more.

"Coach got on us pretty good (during the timeout) telling us that we have to come out better, and he's right, we can't come out slow against the good teams."

The pressure defense forced the Bahamas starting backcourt of Michael Bain and Troy Clark to pick up four personal fouls each in the first half. The two combined for 29 points in a 101-70 loss to New Mexico Junior College on Monday night, but scored just 17 points on Tuesday night.

"(Traditionally) Bahama players are quite as patient as American players are," Williamson said. "We usually have a very quick team and play a lot of one-on-one defense. Bain and Troy we taking it in a little to deep and not passing off in the first half. Right now, we're not executing, we're a little tentative. We did not have a chance to scrimmage prior to coming here and I think that has a lot to do with it."

William Sims scored 17 points off the bench while Rob Foster and Kevin Rice added 13 and 12 points. Foster led the Chaps with nine assists.

The Bahama team continues its swing through the WJCAC as they face Odessa College tonight. Midland returns to action on Friday in the Clarendon College Tournament against Altus (Okla.) Air Force Base at 6 p.m.

Projected money increase slight

■ Management committee figures show money payed to baseball players would have gone up only three percent this year.

By Ronald Blum
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK — The amount of money paid to players would have gone up less than 3 percent this year without a strike, according to figures compiled by management's player relations committee.

The payrolls of the 28 clubs, absent a strike, would have been $908,477,950, according to the figures. That's up from $905,104,594 last year.

If the season had been completed, the payroll total would have increased by about $20 million more because of performance bonuses. Players earned $9.38 million in performance bonuses this year, down from $23.90 million in 1993. The percentage of performance bonuses earned fell from 60 percent to 19 percent.

The report was distributed Tuesday to general managers during their meetings in Phoenix. A copy was obtained by The Associated Press.

According to management figures, the average player salary — which doesn't take the strike into account — rose 8.5 percent to $1,153,343, up from $1,062,780. That's the second-lowest increase since 1988 and the fourth-lowest rise since the free agent era began following the 1976 season.

But the dollar increase, even without a strike, was smaller because fewer players were in the majors this year on Aug. 31, 19 days after the players struck.

Despite the strike, rosters expanded to 40 after Aug. 31, the date used for annual salary studies. There were 761 players on Aug. 31 rosters, 55 fewer than last year.

The final average will increase slightly when bonuses for Gold Gloves and Silver Slugger awards are counted. The players' association, which will release its salary study next month, usually has an average about $15,000 higher because of a different method used to account for signing bonuses.

The New York Yankees had the highest payroll at $47.51 million, followed by Atlanta at $44.03 million, Toronto at $42.17 million and San Francisco at $42.16 million. The Blue Jays had the top 1993 payroll at $51.91 million.

San Diego once again had the lowest payroll, even though it rose to $13.72 million from $12.84 million. Montreal remained in 27th place, rising to $18.77 million from $17.62 million.

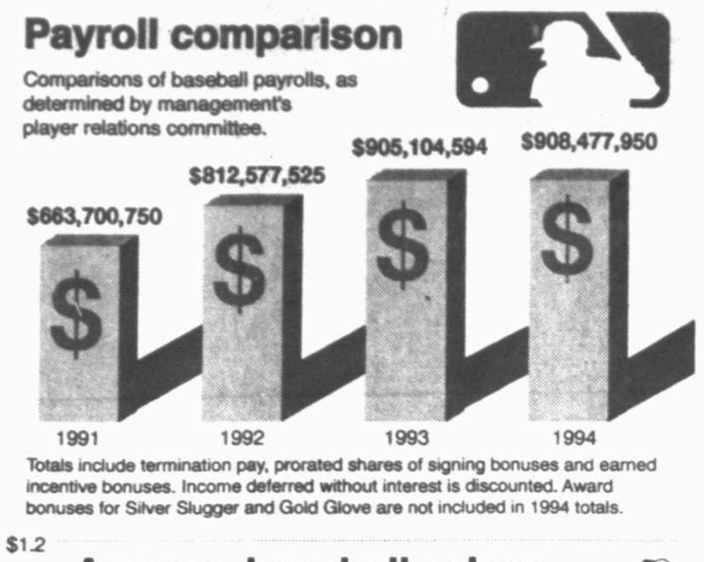

Boston dropped from fourth at $46.16 million to 11th at $36.34 million. The Chicago White Sox dropped from fifth at $42.12 million to eighth at $40.09 million, and the New York Mets dropped from seventh at $40.82 million to 18th at $30.9 million.

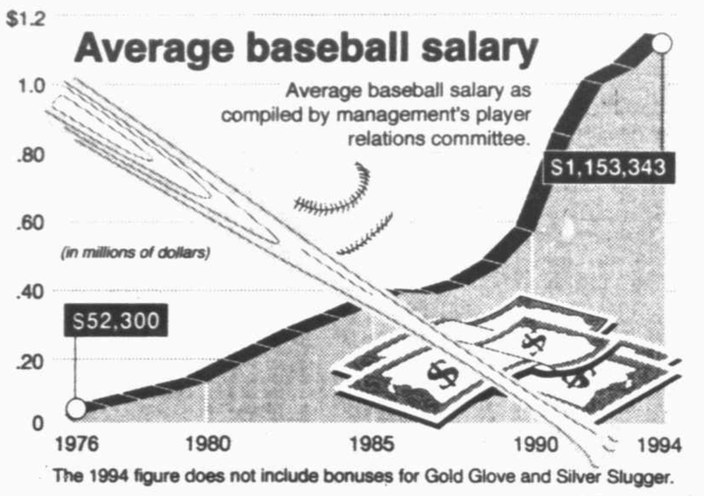

Cleveland, which moved into Jacobs Field, nearly doubled its payroll. The Indians rose from 26th at $16.69 million to 16th at $31.56 million.

San Francisco rose from 10th at $36.34 million to fourth at $42.16 million, and the Los Angeles Dodgers rose from 13th at $33.53 million to ninth at $38.84 million. Baltimore rose from 17th at $29.25 million to 10th at $38.71 million.

The Dodgers led the majors in termination pay at $5.59 million, including a $5.5 million settlement with outfielder Darryl Strawberry. The California Angels were second at $3,491,885, including $3 million to third baseman Gary Gaetti, whom they released in 1993.

Payrolls included prorated shares of signing bonuses and other guaranteed income. Money deferred without interest is discounted to present-day value.

Red Sox CEO says owners to shun cap

NEW YORK (AP) — Baseball owners could have made a new labor proposal to players months ago. They discussed different strategies and came up with alternate plans.

All the while, though, they stuck with their coveted salary cap. It was a strategy that didn't work, and a strategy that will change Thursday.

The owners' new head negotiator, Red Sox chief executive officer John Harrington, says the owners will back off their salary cap proposal for the time being and make the players a new offer when talks resume in Herndon, Va., outside Washington.

"We've been discussing some alternative proposals we've had in mind for months, deciding which one to put on the table," Harrington said.

The new buzzword is "tax."

"It's not a salary cap in the strictest terms," Harrington said Monday night from his home in Massachusetts. "A tax concept can look like a salary cap, and any tax plan is meant to put some controls on labor costs.

"All payrolls would be taxed at a low percentage. All clubs would be affected above a certain level."

Harrington would not discuss proposed tax rates. Others on the management team wouldn't even comment on the shift in offers.

The union took a wait-and-see attitude.

"There's no proposal — yet," union executive Mark Belanger said.

"I wouldn't get overly optimistic about movement off the cap because there are tax programs that are worse than a salary cap and tax programs that are better," union lawyer Gene Orza said.

"It doesn't make me more pessimistic or optimistic. I just want to see it."

Yankee mates take Gold Glove awards

Associated Press

Don Mattingly won his record ninth Gold Glove at first base and New York Yankees teammate Wade Boggs earned his first-ever at third base in AL awards announced Tuesday.

Ken Griffey Jr. of Seattle became the first AL outfielder to win five straight Gold Gloves and California pitcher Mark Langston won his sixth overall.

Toronto second baseman Roberto Alomar, Cleveland shortstop Omar Vizquel, outfielders Devon White of Toronto and Kenny Lofton of Cleveland and Texas catcher Ivan Rodriguez all were repeat winners from last season.

The Gold Gloves have been presented by Rawlings since 1957 after a vote by major league managers and coaches. This year, the vote was moved up and conducted shortly before the players' strike began Aug. 12.

Mattingly's ninth award, and fourth in a row, moved him past George Scott for the most in the AL at first base. Keith Hernandez holds the NL record with 11 at the position.

"I pride myself on defense and felt this year that we were strong as a team defensively," Mattingly said.

Mattingly led the majors with a fielding percentage of .998 this season, committing only two errors.

Boggs, known much more as a hitter than a fielder since he broke into the majors with Boston in 1982, had a .962 fielding percentage this year. He has worked hard on his defense during the years, often making sure to take 100 grounders in practice before games.

"I really thought I would never win a Rawlings Gold Glove," he said. "I credit this award to a lot of patience and perseverence. With five batting titles, I wanted to prove that I could play defense."

Griffey won his fifth straight Gold Glove while Alomar, Langston and White each won their fourth in a row. White has earned six overall; the record for an outfielder is 12 by Willie Mays and Roberto Clemente.

"My goal is to get 10," White said. "I work to keep my legs in shape. I'm a better defensive player now than when I won my first Gold Glove in 1988 because of my knowledge of the hitters."

White committed six errors and had a .978 fielding percentage. Lofton led AL outfielders with 13 assists and had a .993 fielding percentage in winning his second straight award.

"Baseball was known as more of a power game, but it has started to come around and fans are enjoying defense and appreciating its importance," siad Lofton, one of the best leadoff hitters in baseball.

Griffey had 12 assists and a fielding percentage of .983. Rodriguez, only 22, led AL catchers in games started (96) and fielded .992.

Langston started 18 games and had 27 putouts. He won Gold Gloves with Seattle in 1987-88 and has earned four straight with California.

"I want to dedicate this to the memory of Jimmie Reese because he had a great deal to do with my fielding success, as well as the defensive skills of my teammates," Langston said.

Reese, a former roommate of Babe Ruth on the Yankees and a longtime coach for the Angels, died this year at age 92 after 78 years in pro ball.

Agassi routs Berasategui

FRANKFURT, Germany (AP) — Andre Agassi seemed in a hurry to make up for all the lost time.

Agassi took just 45 minutes to rout Alberto Berasategui 6-2, 6-0 for his opening victory at the $3-million IBM/ATP Tour World Championship on Tuesday.

Boris Becker and Sergi Bruguera also won on the first day of round-robin play in the event that involves the top eight players in the world.

But Becker and Bruguera had to battle much harder.

Becker survived 26 aces by Goran Ivanisevic before prevailing in one hour, 53 minutes, 6-3, 3-6, 7-6. Bruguera edged Michael Chang 7-6 (7-1), 7-5.

The losers were not eliminated because players in this tournament are split into two round-robin groups, with the top two advancing to the semifinals.

Pete Sampras, No. 1 in the rankings, and Stefan Edberg, grouped with Becker and Ivanisevic, were off Tuesday.

Agassi came into the tour-ending finale as the hottest player on the tour and he was blazing Tuesday.

"I am impressed," he said of his victory over Berasategui, a Spaniard who is purely a clay-court specialist and who is making his first appearance in Frankfurt.

"I'm hitting the ball very strong, I'm very confident. When I hit like this I'd feel very confident against anyone."

A year ago, things looked much different for Agassi, the champion in the first tournament here in 1990, and a Wimbledon champion who just never seemed to be realizing his full potential.

He had wrist surgery in December and dropped to No. 32 in the rankings.

But then he found a new coach, Brad Gilbert, and a new dedication to the game.

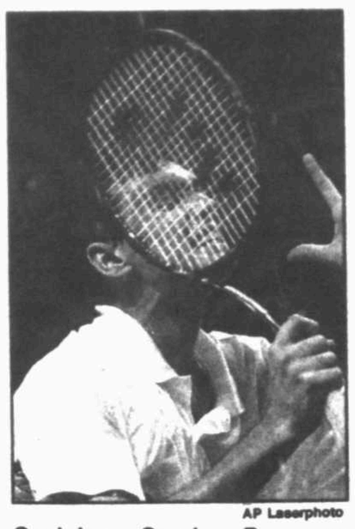

Eleven months after the surgery, he is No. 2 in the world, winner of five titles this year, including the U.S. Open. He has won 20 of his last 21 matches.

Agassi was never in trouble against Berasategui. He broke twice for a 4-0 lead and then picked the Spaniard apart with sizzling winners from all over the court.

"His surface is clay, I think he was a bit uncomfortable, but I still had to hit well to win," Agassi said.

While saying Berasategui deserved to be here, Agassi also criticized the ATP for its ranking system, in which the players are ranked according to the performances in their 14 best tournaments in a season.

"I don't think you should be able to go play 35 minor clay-court tournaments and take your best 14. every time you step on a court should count, you have to play on all surfaces to be able to come here," Agassi said.

Spain's Sergi Bruguera winces during his match with Michael Chang Tuesday.

Becker is one player who thrives indoors. He won this event in 1992 but failed to qualify last year.

He is also on a comeback. After having dropped out of the top 10, he back at No. 5.

Ivanisevic, No. 4, also lost to Becker in a decisive tiebreak in the 1992 semifinals here and suggested that Becker was a better player on big points. The German agreed.

MARTINA: Sabatini ousts legend

nine times, was party to another piece of history. A commemorative banner, the first tribute of its kind to any non-Knick or Ranger, was raised to the Garden's rafters, and on a less somber note, she jumped for joy as Virginia Slims, her sport's longtime sponsor, gave her a Harley-Davidson motorcycle.

Navratilova collected a record 167 titles over a tennis lifetime that spanned, and often transcended, three generations. She accumulated 19 grand slam singles crowns, the first at Wimbledon in 1978 and the last, back on the lawn she most cherished, at Wimbledon in 1990.

She held the No. 1 ranking on nine separate occasions, dominated the circuit with her record 74-match unbeaten streak in 1984 and, as accomplished in doubles as she was as a soloist, she and Pam Shriver captured 20 grand slam titles and a record 109 titles over all.

But this year, closing in on her 38th birthday, and tired, despite her tenacious grip on a Top Five ranking, of the emotional and physical strains that inevitably accompany any champion, Navratilova decided to call it quits while the call was still hers to make.

This loss effectively brought closure to an epic career, and it also removed the last and only pure serve-and-volleyer from a game that is, according to Navratilova, in danger of turning generic.

Navratilova, who kept her composure before, during and after this last and long-awaited hurrah, said it was far too early for her to feel relief about finally achieving release from the competitive crucible.

"I wanted this week to last," she said. "I'm upset about the match — she just ran me over — and now the career's finished as well. There's a lot of emotion going on in my head and my heart, but during the match I was too busy backpedalling to get emotional about anything else. And then, at match point, I thought, 'O.K., this is the last point I'll ever play.'"

Using lobs and passing shots to prevent Navratilova from establishing herself at the net, Sabatini got the first break of the match in the 5th game and took a 3-2 lead. But with a forehand drive of her own, Navratilova broke right back for 3-3 with a sideline-skimming shot she punctuated with a one-word complement, "Yes!"

Her charge proved shortlived, though, and Sabatini, playing on instincts oblivious to the tensions inherent in this encounter, broke her again for a 4-3 lead. This time it was a crosscourt backhand that passed Navratilova by and nearly severed her sneakertips in the process of putting her back into deficit position.

Sabatini kept Navratilova pinned to the baseline and held serve for 5-3, and after Navratilova, amid a stream of self-castigation, held for 5-4, the 9th-ranked Argentine used a service winner to complete a set she'd begun with a pair of doublefaults.

Navratilova got off to a 2-0 lead in the second set, but Sabatini soon corrected that.

Lee opens season with win

BIG SPRING — Senior Post Krissy Woodard helped start Midland Lee's year with a win here Tuesday as she scored 26 points in the Lady Rebels 47-30 basketball win over Big Spring. Woodard also had 15 rebounds and six blocked shots.

"The kids did a great job on defense," Lee coach Elise Kail said. "We completely shut down their big girl we were real patient on offense."

Lee had 37 total rebound and 13 assists. The Lady Rebels next play at the Tall City Tournament at the Chaparral Center Thursday.

The only other Lady Rebel besides Woodard to score in double figures was Jamie Rhoads with 10. Lee held Big Spring's Lady Steers to single digits in all but the fourth quarter when Big Spring scored 10.

Diamonds place first in tourney

The Midland Diamond Soccer Club (under-13) posted a 5-0 record enroute to a first place finish in the recent Turkey Shootout.

The Diamonds displayed a balanced, quick-striking offense as eight different players netted goals. The defense recorded four shutouts and gave up only one goal on a penalty kick.

The Diamonds play this weekend in the Competitive Cup in San Angelo.

COM hosts Texas All-Star swim meet

The City of Midland Swim Team is hosting the Texas All-Star swimming meet Sunday from noon to 3 p.m. at the Mabee Aquatic Swim Center.

The best of the North Texas All-Stars will be competing against the best of the South All-Stars.

This is the first time this statewide meet has been held west of Interstate 35. Midland's new aquatic center is responsible for bringing this meet to Midland.

In addition, COM will be well represented on the North squad. COM members Greg Brink, Stephanie Brown, Susie Carnett, Scott Strauss and Monica Stroman are all members of the North team.

Compiled from Reporter-Telegram staff reports.

Michigan-Ohio St. loser to play Holiday Bowl

SAN DIEGO — The loser of Saturday's game between No. 15 Michigan and No. 22 Ohio State will be invited to the Holiday Bowl to play the Western Athletic Conference champion.

The Holiday Bowl is obligated to pick a Big Ten team that finishes no lower than fourth place. Michigan (7-3 overall) and Ohio State (8-3) are tied for second place at 5-2, and the winner of Saturday's game at Columbus, Ohio, will go to the Citrus Bowl.

No. 2 Penn State clinched the Big Ten championship and Rose Bowl berth with a 35-31 comeback win at Illinois last Saturday.

No. 10 Colorado State (9-1) has the inside track for its first WAC title and Holiday Bowl berth.

Record lands UT's Brown SWC honor

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas quarterback James Brown says he's rusty.

But don't tell that to the Houston Cougars.

Brown was 22-of-27 for 320 yards passing, including a school-record tying four touchdown throws as the Longhorns defeated Houston 48-13 on Saturday.

For his effort, Brown has been named Southwest Conference Offensive Player of the Week by The Associated Press.

Baylor linebacker LaCurtis Jones, who had 17 tackles, including two stops that helped seal a 19-14 victory against Rice, is the AP's SWC Defensive Player of the Week.

Brown, a redshirt freshman, has helped Texas (6-4) defeat Oklahoma, Southern Methodist and now Houston. He started both the OU and Houston games because sophomore starter Shea Morenz was injured. But he had been splitting time at quarterback over the second half of the season even while Morenz was healthy.

People on campus track him down for autographs and some Longhorns fans on radio call-in shows say he should start ahead of Morenz.

He opened the Houston game 8-of-9 through the air, including touchdown throws of 3 and 24 yards as Texas raced to a 14-0 lead midway through the first quarter.

But still there is this talk about being rusty. That conclusion isn't based on being able to read defenses as much as it's based on Brown being hit by them.

"I still feel I am a little rusty because I get hit too much," said Brown, a product of Beaumont Westbrook. "I am tired of getting tackled. When I played in high school I never really got hit hard, but out here I am just getting blasted.

"I watched some of my high school films trying to see what I was doing. Maybe I was just a little faster, 20 pounds lighter or something."

Brown, who said he didn't expect to play much this season, agonized over whether he would be ready to play after redshirting last year.

"I didn't know if I would be good enough to play because I hadn't played in a game in so long," Brown said.

But he has answered those questions against Oklahoma, a game in which he also earned player of the week honors from the AP.

"James gets better every game," said Texas coach John Mackovic. "He had a terrific game against Houston. He took advantage of everything that unfolded before him."

In Baylor's victory against Rice, Jones had 14 unassisted tackles, including three for losses of 9 yards. But it was two stops for no gain that likely sealed the victory and kept the Bears' Cotton Bowl hopes alive.

With Rice driving for a go-ahead score with under three minutes remaining, Jones stopped the Owls' Jimmy Lee for no gain on third-and-2 at the Rice 39.

On the next play, Jones reached through a mob of blockers and stopped fullback Pat Callahan for no gain on fourth-and-2. Baylor (7-3) then ran out the clock and celebrated before a national television audience.

"I really don't know how we got to him (Callahan)," said Jones, a junior from Waco. "I was on the ground and just was lucky enough to grab his legs and make the tackle. When I watched the film, it looked like he was behind his blocks but just took too long to find the open spot."

Jones added, "I like to try to play my best on TV because we are in front of a big crowd."

By The Associated Press

Here's a preview of Saturday's games involving Southwest Conference teams:

HOUSTON (1-8, 1-4 SWC) vs. TEXAS TECH (5-4, 3-2 SWC) at San Antonio Alamo Dome, 12 Noon (CST).

The two final additions to the SWC (Tech in 1960, UH in 1976 for football) have had some battles royal in recent campaigns. In the last four meetings a grand total of 328 composite points has been scored between them. UH's most recent triumph over the Raiders came in 1990 on ESPN in Lubbock 51-35. Saturday's tilt marks the close of a two-year agreement by the teams to play in San Antonio. The coaches: UH's Kim Helton is 2-17-1 (second season, both at Houston) overall, 2-9-1 in SWC action; 0-1 against T-Tech, and 0-0 in bowl encounters as a head coach. Tech's Spike Dykes is 46-41-1 (sixth year, all in Raider Country) overall, 32-24-1 in SWC games, 3-3-1 vs. the Cougars, and 1-2 in bowl matchups. Helton has been associated with SEC bowl contender Florida, Miami (Fla.) as irrebuilt under Howard Schnellenberger and numerous NFL team "projects." Dykes, since starting his head coaching career at Coahoma (Texas) HS in 1964, is 134-82-2 (all levels) in his 20th year as a staff chief. The teams: As both teams head down the stretch, the Cougars can have a direct impact on the SWC title with games against Tech and Rice. The Red Raiders have a chance at their best finish since the 1989 All-American Bowl champions closed 9-3. Key individuals: Cougars' QBs (starting since Chuck Clements broke his hand) Chad O'Shea and Clay Helton have been a combined 96-of-171 for 1,097 yards and five TDs over the past five weeks. LB Mike Parker (82 tackles, 52 unaided) is bidding for SWC Freshman of the Year laurels while DT Mike Meux (three sacks) has provided some pass rush. Rad Raiders' OLB Shawn Banks (84 stops) joins LB Zach Thomas (100 hits) to make Tech's defense outstanding. WR Sheldon Bass (29 catches, 361 yards) and TE Scott Aylor are crucial on offense.

RICE (4-5, 3-3 SWC) at NAVY (2-7), 12:30 p.m. (CST) —

Navy's most recent match with the SWC came in a 42-13 setback at the hands of SMU last season in Annapolis. The coaches: RU's Ken Hatfield is 118-64-3 (16th year) overall, 4-5 (first year) at Rice, 39-13 in SWC trials, 4-2 vs. the Middies, and 4-6 in bowl faceoffs. Navy's George Chaump is 69-73-2 (13th season) overall, 13-40 (fifth campaign) at USNA, 0-3 against SWC foes, 0-1 vs. the Owls, and 4-2 in NCAA Division I-AA postseason play while serving as head coach at Marshall. Hatfield was 3-2 against Navy while he guided the Air Force program and 1-0 against the Midshipmen while he presided over Arkansas football. Chaump brought Marshall back into the NCAA I-AA perennial powerhouse mode before moving to his post at Annapolis. The teams: The Owls are in contention for their first bowl berth since the 1961 Bluebonnet Bowl. Hatfield's swarming defense and ball-control offense have kept the Owls in every contest. Navy counters with traditional service academy tenacity up front and better than 200 passing yards per game. Key individuals: Owls' multi-purpose RB Byron Coston brings in 55 carries for 316 yards rushing and a 5.7 average. QB Josh LaRocca (65-of-129 passing for 806 yards, nine TDs) also has 328 net yards rushing — second among the Owls. DB Aaron Stanley (10 PBUs) jumpstarts the defense along big-play "meister" DB Warrick Franklin (12 PBUs, 47 stops). Navy looks to QB Jim Kubiak (1,598 yards of total offense) and WR Damon Dixon (38 catches, 423 yards) to challenge the Owls' defense.

TCU (6-3, 3-2 SWC) at TEXAS A&M (9-0-1, 5-0-1 SWC), 1 p.m. (CST) —

This marks the first time that the Aggies have finished a regular season worksheet with anyone besides Texas since 1977 when the Aggies downed Houston 27-7 en route to the Astro-Bluebonnet Bowl against Southern Cal. The Horned Frogs have concluded the campaign in 15 of the last 16 years, a pattern broken only by 1991's 49-45 thriller by the Horned Frogs over Houston in Fort Worth. TCU finishes regulation play on Nov. 25 against Texas Tech. The coaches: TCU's Pat Sullivan is 12-18-1 (third year, all with the Frogs) overall, 6-13 in SWC meetings, 0-2 against the Aggies, and 0-0 in bowl games as the lead staffer. A&M's R.C. Slocum is 58-12-2 (sixth year, all with the Aggies) overall, 39-4-2 in SWC tests, 5-0 vs. the Horned Frogs, and 1-4 in postseason contests. Sullivan has guided TCU to its most wins since the 1991 team closed 7-4. He also has made two-win improvement (2-4-6 from 1992-94) in the win column each year since his initial season. Slocum trails only Nebraska's Tom Osborne among NCAA Division I-A coaches (minimum five years) in winning percentage at .819. He's the all-time SWC leader in conference-only success at .889. The teams: It's another case Saturday of pinpoint passers squaring off in the persons of TCU's Max Knake and A&M's Corey Pullig. They have 70 career TD tosses between them, the most by any SWC passing pair in the same game since Texas Tech's Robert Hall and Houston's Jimmy Klingler opposed one another with 80-plus career TD tosses in '93. Key individuals: Knake (159-of-265 passing for 2,147 yards, already a season-best for yards in his TCU career with 2,147 and school-record 22 TD aerials) has 38 all-time TD pitches while Pullig (24th-most SWC career passing yards with 4,517 and 32 TD passes for 19th place in conference annals) are artists. Frogs' RB Andre Davis (SWC-most 1,268 rushing yards in '94) lines up opposite A&M standout RB Rodney Thomas (SWC's fifth-highest career TD total with 44 and 20th-place 2,980 rushing yards). Thomas needs one TD to tie the Aggies' Darren Lewis for all-time school TD leadership with 45.

HOUSTON: Depaul expected to join

(From 1C)

On Monday, Marquette, St. Louis and Alabama-Birmingham announced they would join Houston, Cincinnati, Louisville, Memphis, Southern Mississippi and Tulane in the new conference. DePaul was expected to announce Tuesday it'll become the 10th member.

SWC commissioner Steve Hatchell said he sees no reason Houston could not leave the SWC after the 1995 basketball season.

"Houston has not informed us of it. Obviously, they can (leave) if they want to," said Hatchell. "There is nothing that prevents them from playing next football season and then saying, 'We're leaving.'"

UH President James Pickering made no mention of the earlier start date, but Louisville officials said competition would begin in the 1995-96 season in all sports except football.

Houston athletic director Bill Carr said most athletic directors in the new league want to start next basketball season, although there are details to be worked out.

"I do believe we will be able to come up with a television package by then," he said. "The networks tell us it can be possible. It is an institutional decision, not just an athletics decision."

The next UH regents meeting is in mid-February, but a special meeting can be called with 10 days' public notice of the agenda.

Some SWC sources suggest UH will jeopardize its share of the "residue" when the conference office shuts down. That money, estimated at several million dollars, apparently would be divided among the schools that stay through the end.

"It doesn't totally please me, I assure you," Texas A&M athletic director Wally Groff said of UH's possible early exit. "I would not be surprised, but they were begging us six months ago to wait as long as we could and not leave them dangling."

Dallas-Ft. Worth considered speedway site

FORT WORTH (AP) — Stock car enthusiast Bruton Smith is considering St. Louis and Dallas-Fort Worth as locations for a proposed $70 million speedway.

At a recent news conference in St. Louis, Smith said he has been impressed with the volume of mail from people urging him to locate the track there.

Kevin Triplett, a spokesman for NASCAR, the group that sanctions stock car racing, said the preponderance of major sports could work both for and against Dallas-Fort Worth.

Dallas-Fort Worth is attractive because it has professional franchises in the four major sports of football, baseball, basketball and hockey, which indicates the region is capable of supporting major league sports, Triplett said.

At the same time, since St. Louis has only major league baseball now, "they're certainly more sports starved," Triplett said.

Smith has said he is considering seven sites in the Dallas-Fort Worth area for the speedway.

Smith already operates major race tracks in Charlotte, N.C., and Atlanta.

Atlanta Motor Speedway attracted almost 500,000 visitors last year, producing a direct economic impact of $65 million, according to the Georgia Department of Industry, Trade and Tours.

Smith is expected to visit the Dallas-Fort Worth area this weekend and has indicated he could decide on a site in the next two weeks.

Ryan, Gilbride trade barbs again

HOUSTON (AP) — Kevin Gilbride and Buddy Ryan are at it again, but this time they're 1,000 miles apart and not slugging each other.

Gilbride, known for his sideline fight with Ryan when the two were Oilers assistants last season, called Ryan disruptive and the least liked coach in the NFL.

That was in response to what Ryan, the Arizona Cardinals coach, said about Gilbride after the offensive coordinator and coach Jack Pardee were fired by Houston on Monday .

"I predicted that he'd be selling insurance in two years," Ryan said. "It was a year early."

On Tuesday, it was Gilbride's turn.

"Isn't that not typical, it's vintage Buddy," Gilbride said. "That's probably the reason he's the least liked coach in our profession. I think he feels he's in charge of both franchises and he's going to do the very best he can to ruin both of them."

Gilbride, who lost a kidney to cancer in 1992, even compared his stormy relationship with Ryan to his illness.

"... I had two bouts with cancer, unfortunately one of them was inoperable," Gilbride said.

Gilbride, credited with perfecting Houston's run-and-shoot, said Ryan was partly to blame for the Oilers' problems. Houston (1-9) will finish the season with its first losing record since 1986.

"From the day he was hired here, he did everything he could to undermine the unity between the offense and the defense," Gilbride said. "He had his own personal agenda. Where he was trying to go, I don't know. We could all speculate what it was."

And some Oilers bought into Ryan's philosophy, he said.

"The thing that was disappointing is that some of the players were not mature enough, smart enough to appreciate the professionalism, the restraint that we showed on our side of the ball," Gilbride said.

Gilbride said the Oilers will be able to overcome Ryan's influence, in time.

"No question," he said. "Just as the Philadelphia Eagles (where Ryan was coach) took a few years to get through some problems, they are a team in the truest sense of the word. I think the Oilers will become that way."

On his firing, Gilbride said: "Your emotions run the gamut, not that it wasn't going to happen but not after we scored 31 points and had our best offensive performance of the season. Then reality settled in. I'm just disappointed that we weren't more successful this year."

Webber agents talk trade

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Agents for Chris Webber say they are discussing trades with four NBA teams, but the holdout forward prefers to stay with the Golden State Warriors.

Falassha Erwin, Webber's attorney and co-agent, said Tuesday one of the four teams is the Washington Bullets, despite a report in the Oakland Tribune that the Warriors had rejected the Bullets' offer of forward Tom Gugliotta and a first-round draft choice.

"We've got to try to talk to the Warriors and see if we can reach a resolution," Erwin said by telephone from Detroit.

More Sports/12C

"That is his No. 1 priority, to be a Warrior.

"We're walking a tightrope, negotiating with the Warriors, seeing if we can make any headway, talking to other teams (about a trade), also trying to keep our options open to see if teams have slots open for an offer sheet."

The three other teams were not disclosed, although Minneapolis area newspapers reported the Timberwolves are interested.

RUN: Smith slows down

(From 1C)

His last nine carries got him only 10 yards. In the third quarter, Smith lost one yard on three carries with the Cowboys' best play, the lead draw.

Against the 49ers, Dallas faced third-and-5 or more 11 times. San Francisco had good luck guessing the Cowboys were going to run to the 49ers right.

"San Francisco played pretty good run defense," Switzer said. "They did a good job of stopping us in the second half."

There are several factors at play in the Cowboys' declining rush yardage. Dallas lost its best offensive lineman, Erik Williams, in a car accident. Most of the other linemen are nursing injuries.

Smith has been playing hurt. He's battled a nagging hamstring injury and sore shoulders.

There is no competent backup to Smith to give him rest. Lincoln Coleman has proved ineffective and worries coaches with his fumbles. Derrick Lassic, injured in training camp, probably won't be back this year.

"Emmitt hasn't been at his full, 100 percent potential this year," Switzer said. "His shoulder bothers him and that concerns me. We need to get him into battering ram shape for the last half of the season."

Switzer said Lassic hadn't progressed much in his rehabilitation.

"We don't think he'll return this season," Switzer said.

The Washington Redskins, who have trouble stopping the run, appear to be coming along on the Dallas schedule just in time.

Smith has averaged 5.1 yards and scored nine touchdowns in eight games against the Redskins. He's had five 100-yard days. Smith also has caught 25 passes for 111 yards against them.

Smith, seeking a fourth consecutive rushing title, has 989 yards and is second behind Detroit's Barry Sanders, who has 1,319 yards. Smith is the NFL leader in touchdowns with 13.

"We've got to get our running game cranking," Switzer said. "We win when we can run."

Jones defends Aikman 'call'

IRVING, Texas (AP) — Dallas owner Jerry Jones said on Tuesday the Cowboys "made the right call" by not immediately reporting quarterback Troy Aikman's thumb injury to the NFL.

The NFL is reviewing whether the Cowboys violated policy in not reporting the injury that occurred last Friday in a closed workout. Aikman missed the last two plays of practice.

Aikman played against the 49ers with a swollen and bruised thumb on his passing hand and threw three interceptions. Aikman said the thumb bothered him on some throws but not on the interceptions.

Jones said the club wasn't trying to hide the injury. He said X-rays were negative.

"We had no reason to think he might not play because of the thumb injury so we weren't obligated to report it," Jones said. "We didn't want it distorted."

Aikman, who suffered a broken nose in the game, said, "The thumb bothered me on some throws. It didn't come into play on the interceptions."

The NFL mandates that teams provide a status report on injured players on Wednesday and Thursday. Teams also must report subsequent player injuries. The Cowboys never informed the league, the 49ers, or the local media.

Dallas is subject to a fine by commissioner Paul Tagliabue.

Prices recover

Crude futures prices were higher Tuesday, recovering from Monday's sharp drop on the New York Mercantile Exchange.

West Texas Intermediate for December delivery rose 11 cents to $17.58 a barrel.

Local crude purchasers raised their posted price 25 cents to $16 a barrel.

Home affordability

WASHINGTON — Rising mortgage rates reduced Americans' power to purchase a home during the third quarter.

The National Association of Realtors said Tuesday its composite Housing Affordability Index registered 127.8 during the July-September period, down from 131.3 in the second quarter and 135.9 during the third quarter of 1993.

The index, which measures affordability factors for all home buyers, peaked at 141.9 during the final three months of 1993.

Dollar surges

NEW YORK — The dollar rallied Tuesday to a two-month high against the German mark and rose against other currencies after the Federal Reserve Board raised short-term interest rates for a sixth time this year.

Gold prices rose. On the Commodity Exchange in New York, gold for current delivery rose $2.20 a troy ounce to $386.70.

The dollar surged against the mark in New York, closing at 1.5557, up from 1.5444 late Monday. It was the dollar's highest level against the mark since Sept. 8, when it closed at 1.5564.

The dollar also rose against the Japanese yen. In New York, the dollar fetched 98.76 yen, up from 98.31 yen Monday and at its highest level vs. the yen in more than four weeks.

Other dollar rates in New York compared to Monday: 1.3095 Swiss francs, up from 1.2975; 1.3639 Canadian dollars, up from 1.3590; 5.3410 French francs, up from 5.3050; 1,593 Italian lire, up from 1,584.

The British pound fetched $1.5710 in New York, down from $1.5868.

On the New York Comex, silver closed at $5.209, up from $5.163 on Monday.

Stocks mixed

NEW YORK — Two warring camps with different economic theories fought it out on Wall Street Tuesday, sending stocks into wild swings. The battle ended in a draw, however, as the market finished just about where it started.

In the end, the index of 30 blue chip stocks closed 3.37 points lower at 3,826.36.

Broader indexes were mixed and the number of advancing and declining issues on the New York Stock Exchange was nearly identical: 1,127 up, 1,103 down and 697 unchanged.

■ Factory production, retail buying post strong gains for October.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Factory production and retail buying posted strong gains in October in the latest signs the economy continues to grow even as the Federal Reserve pushes interest rates higher.

After declining in September for the first time in 17 months, industrial production was back on track last month as it rose 0.7 percent, the government said Tuesday.

The Federal Reserve also said the advance was accompanied by the highest operating rate in nearly 15 years at the nation's mines, factories and utilities.

Led by factories, industries were operating at 84.9 percent of capacity in October — the highest rate since 85.1 percent in February 1980. Analysts say an operating rate of around 85 percent can signal the start of bottlenecks and rising prices.

The Commerce Department reported that retail sales surged 1.1 percent in October, a fifth straight advance, with car and truck buying leading the way.

"These data are telling us we have a strong economy. There was no letup in momentum going into the fourth quarter," said economist Carl Palash of MCM Moneywatch, a New York City forecasting firm. "Consumption started the quarter strong, and the manufacturing sector is still on a solid uptrend."

The Fed's policy-making Federal Open Market Committee, worried that economic growth will lead to higher inflation, raised short-term interest rates for the sixth time this year.

The increase of 0.75 percentage point in the discount rate the Fed charges member banks was the largest since May 1981. The widely anticipated boost came after the October data were announced.

The October gain in industrial production took place despite the fourth straight drop in output at the nation's utilities. Utility production, down 0.7 percent in September, slipped 0.5 percent in October as much of the nation continued to experience unseasonably warm weather.

Overall production declined 0.1 percent in September, the first dip since May 1993. Output rose 0.8 percent in August.

Led by production of business equipment, factory output rose 0.9 percent in October after remaining unchanged the previous month. Mining output slipped 0.2 percent after easing 0.1 percent in September.

The production figures were in line with analysts' predictions. But retail sales, which represent about half of consumer spending, exceeded expectations as they totaled a seasonally adjusted $191.2 billion in October, up from $189 billion.

Sales were up a moderate 0.5 percent in September after soaring 1.4 percent in August and have risen every month since May, when they were unchanged. They are 7.5 percent higher than a year ago.

Sales of cars and light trucks increased 2.9 percent in October after rising 0.6 percent in September and 3 percent in August.

By John Paul Pitts
Business/Oil Editor

Pennzoil is a quality blend of motor oil. But Pennzoil Corp. is a quality blend of Pennsylvania and West Texas oil expertise that has caused the company to fare well for more than three decades.

That's why it was fitting that the top executives of Pennzoil, including Chairman James L. Pate, were honored Tuesday at a reception sponsored by the Midland Wildcatters Committee.

With roots that go back to the late 1880s and the discovery of oil in Pennsylvania, the company also has a strong Midland connection.

The connection is J. Hugh Liedtke, retired Pennzoil chairman and former Midland oilman. It was Liedtke who helped move Pennzoil from a manufacturer and seller of quality lubrication oil into a major international oil and gas producer.

After beginning his oil career in Midland in 1949, Liedtke, along with his brother William C., former president George Bush and John Overby formed Zapata Petroleum in 1953, never suspecting that one day the offshore exploration company would connect with one of the oldest and most respected names in the oil industry.

The name Pennzoil traces its origins to Bradford, Pennsylvania and the discovery of oil. It was the South Penn Oil Co., founded in 1889, that helped discover the Bradford field, which became the world's first billion-barrel field.

Oil from the field was a high quality crude that was ideal for lubrication, and the South Penn Oil Co. began to refine a high-grade lubrication oil known as Pennzoil, a brand that first appeared in 1916.

For years the South Penn Oil Co. remained the producing arm of the lube oil company, then in 1962 it formed an association, with a group of former Midlanders that was to eventually change the direction of the company.

Officials reject GM's request, plan to conduct safety hearing

DETROIT (AP) — Rejecting a request from General Motors Corp., the Transportation Department said Tuesday it will go ahead with a public hearing on whether millions of GM pickup trucks should be recalled as fire-prone.

GM, which has vowed to fight a recall, had asked that the hearing be canceled so that the automaker could take the issue straight to court.

The Dec. 6 hearing promises to be a public relations disaster for GM, with appearances by families of crash victims and survivors of fiery crashes.

In a letter Tuesday to GM, the Transportation Department's general counsel said such hearings are important to find out the additional information the government needs before deciding on a recall.

GM responded in a statement that the hearing would be a waste of time and an "orchestrated talk show" in which plaintiffs' lawyers and industry critics will vie for the microphone.

Transportation Secretary Federico Pena scheduled the session last month and declared that 1973-87 GM pickups present an "unreasonable risk" of fire or explosion in side collisions because their gas tanks are mounted outside the frame. He blamed the sidesaddle design for 150 deaths.

GM insists the trucks are safer than most vehicles on the road.

Pena has acknowledged that the trucks met federal safety standards, but he said the law requires that they be safe in "real world conditions" as well.

The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration has been investigating the trucks since 1992, when consumer groups petitioned for a recall. The agency last year asked GM to recall the trucks voluntarily, but the automaker refused.

About 9 million of the trucks were built. GM changed the gas-tank design beginning with 1988 models. The company believes about 6 million of the 1973-87 pickups are still in use.

First State Bank opens branch in Wal-Mart

By Mella McEwen

The Midland area has its first seven-day-a-week banking facility with the opening of the FIRST STATE BANK branch in the Wal-Mart Superstore at 4517 N. Midland Drive.

The in-store branch offers shoppers a full line of services, including checking and savings accounts, an in-store automated teller machine, consumer loans and Visa and Mastercard credit cards.

Six Midlanders have been hired to staff the branch, Austin-based First State's 15th full-service branch and fourth to be located in a retail store.

Hours will be from 9 a.m. to 7 p.m. Monday through Friday, 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturday and 1 to 6 p.m. Sunday.

A grand opening celebration is scheduled for Friday, featuring the cutting of a ribbon of cash totaling $500 to be given as a scholarship to Midland College and registration for a $1,000 Wal-Mart shopping spree and two $250 savings bonds.

Though Thanksgiving is still eight days away, MIDLAND PARK MALL is gearing up for Christmas.

Santa Claus will arrive Friday at 6 p.m. amid a parade and lighting ceremony. The Jolly Old Elf will arrive at the parking lot near Sears and lead the parade to the Center Court Entrance. He can then be visited in Center Court through Christmas.

The Giving Tree Project also gets underway Friday. Shoppers will find a Christmas tree covered with angels listing the needs and wants of abused and neglected children, which they can choose and fulfill. The project ends December 21. And SANTA's WAREHOUSE, offing gifts, decor and gift accessories such as paper and bows, will open Friday next to Lerner's.

On Saturday, Hall Racing Inc. is sponsoring a marrow donor drive in the mall parking lot from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., with the drive benefiting leukemia patient Sonja Carroll. Also Saturday, a POG tournament will be held from 3 to 5 p.m. in the Sears Court.

Just opened in San Miguel Square between Frames and Things and Gentlemen's Agreement is BABY BIZ.

Owner Laurie Sargent, mother of a four-month-old, says her store carries furniture, bedding (with 60 bedding companies to choose from), clothing, toys and miscellaneous baby items. Also available is a baby shower gift registry.

Hours are 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday through Friday and 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday.

On the move is HEATHER'S WESTERN FASHIONS, formerly known as Sammie's Western Wear.

Heather's is now located at 4410 N. Midkiff in the Courtyard shopping center, across from Taco Villa.

Owned by Sammie McLemore, Heather's carries fashions and accessories for women and men and will be increasing its line of boots in the near future.

Hours are 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday through Saturday.

Found in a new location is PIONEER MORTGAGE CO., in Midland for 12 years. The company has moved from La Villita shopping center to the Woodhill Building, 3000 N. Garfield.

Pioneer offers numerous financing arrangements for homes, including conventional, FHA, VA and Texas Veteran Loans, ranging from 10 to 30 years. Both fixed and adjustable rates are available, as are portfolio loans and refinancing services. Preapprovals can be done on request.

CORLEY PAPER & BOX CO., 5120 Andrews Highway, now has a wide selection of Christmas wraps and ribbon, available to wholesale and retail customers.

Hours are 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday. The company will be open all day the Friday after Thanksgiving.

Long-time Odessa business RED DOOR ANTIQUES, which enjoyed a wide Midland customer base, will be closing the doors in mid-February 1995 after 36 years in business.

Owner Delora Kirby has decided to close the retail store, located at 2818 W. Yukon, and semi-retire. She will still be available for appraisals, consulting and to manage estate sales.

Midessa Wireless Cable Television has changes its name to HEARTLAND WIRELESS OF MIDLAND-ODESSA.

General Manager Mario Contreras explained that the change was made to coincide with the parent company, Heartland Wireless Communications Inc. of Durant, Okla.

Hog leads preseason selections

Associated Press

Corliss Williamson, one of the five starters returning to defending national champion Arkansas, led the AP preseason All-America team Tuesday, missing out on being a unanimous selection by one vote.

The 6-foot-7 junior was selected as the Southeastern Conference player of the year last season and capped his great sophomore campaign by being selected the Most Outstanding Player of the Final Four.

Williamson was named on 65 ballots from a 66-member national media panel and was joined on the preseason team by Joe Smith of Maryland, the second-leading vote-getter with 41, Michael Finley of Wisconsin, 39, Damon Stoudamire of Arizona, 37, and Shawn Respert of Michigan State, 32.

Randolph Childress of Wake Forest was the next-highest vote-getter with 22 votes.

Williamson led the top-ranked Razorbacks in scoring and rebounding last season with averages of 20.4 and 7.7. He shot 63 percent from the field and was selected a second-team All-American after last season.

Known for his strength and quickness, Williamson was described by coach Nolan Richardson as "pound for pound, the strongest player in the world."

Smith burst onto the national scene last season as the center for a young team and led the Terrapins to the NCAA West Regional semifinals where they lost to Michigan. He averaged 19.4 points and 10.7 rebounds and was just the third freshman to ever be selected a first-team All-Atlantic Coast Conference pick.

Finley is considered one of the more versatile players in the country. The 6-6 swingman averaged 20.4 points and 6.7 rebounds last season as he led the Badgers to their first NCAA tournament berth in 47 years. He shot 36.3 percent from 3-point range, opening things up inside for himself and center Rashard Griffith.

Stoudamire, one of the quickest players in the country, was part of what was considered last season's best backcourt as the Wildcats reached the Final Four. Khalid Reeves has graduated and 'that leaves Stoudamire a chance to improve on his averages of 18.3 points, 5.9 assists, 4.5 rebounds and 1.6 steals per game.

Michigan State fans spent the offseason hoping Respert would decide to return for his senior year, the last as well for coach Jud Heathcote who has announced his retirement. The only returning first-team All-Big Ten selection, Respert averaged 24.3 points per game, shooting 48 percent from the field and 45 percent from 3-point range. Respert has a chance to finish as the Big Ten's career scoring leader.

Last year's preseason All-America also had a leading vote-getter miss being a unanimous selection by one vote: Eric Montross of North Carolina.

None of the All-Americans from last season returned to school with Hill graduating and underclassmen Robinson, the player of the year, Jason Kidd of California, Donyell Marshall of Connecticut and Clifford Rozier of Louisville all opting to enter the NBA draft.

Abdul-Jabbar may coach Southern Cal

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, the career scoring leader in the NBA, may become Southern Cal basketball coach after this season, a newspaper reported Tuesday.

USC athletic director Mike Garrett had discussed the possibility of hiring Abdul-Jabbar for the 1994-95 season, when it appeared George Raveling was going to leave for Seton Hall. Raveling decided to stay, but he retired Monday to concentrate on recovery from severe injuries suffered in an auto accident.

Charlie Parker, an assistant under Raveling the past six years for the Trojans, was named interim coach.

"USC discussed the job with me a few months ago and I would have seriously considered taking it had Coach Raveling gone to Seton Hall," Abdul-Jabbar told the Outlook of Santa Monica.

Skin cancer vitamins

It's the most common cancer among white Americans — a skin cancer called basal cell carcinoma. Over half a million cases are diagnosed every year.

Yet, simply taking vitamins regularly might prevent nearly 70 percent of the cancers, according to Johns Hopkins University researchers.

In a study of those who said they did or did not take vitamin supplements, investigators found that taking any type vitamin reduced the risk of basal cell carcinoma. But vitamins A, C and E appeared most powerful.

Such skin cancers usually come from too much exposure to ultraviolet sunlight and occur most frequently in those with fair skin and a family history of the cancer.

The finding that supplements, especially vitamins E and A, might block skin cancer was not surprising. These two vitamins have also halted the cancer in laboratory animals. And vitamin A and related compounds have been used to treat skin cancer.

Preventing skin cancer may be one more reason to take supplements regularly. Caution: Overdosing on vitamin A can be toxic. Beta carotene, that converts into vitamin A, is safer.

Smokers' alert

If you're a smoker, you should do what Popeye did — eat a lot of spinach. It might help save you from cancer.

So suggests new research at the University of Alabama in Birmingham. Investigators found that smokers have low levels of folic acid, a B vitamin found in spinach and other green leafy vegetables. In fact, smokers had 42 percent less folic acid in their blood than nonsmokers although both ate the same amount. Smokers had to eat three times more folic acid — at least 600 micrograms a day — to achieve the blood levels of nonsmokers.

This is no trivial matter, for research has shown that smokers with a deficiency of folic acid in cells of the lungs are particularly vulnerable to lung cancer.

It's thought the exposure of lung tissue to cigarette smoke destroys folic acid. This deficiency then promotes cell changes leading to cancer.

Best advice: Quit smoking. But if you don't, at least eat much more folic acid in food and/or take a supplement of folic acid, say researchers. Other foods rich in folic acid: dried beans, almonds, liver, fortified cereals.

Fish question

Codfish, perch and haddock are low-fat fish. Does that make them better for you than higher-fat fish?

No. You should not choose a fish for its low fat. Just the opposite. The truth is that fattier fish, such as salmon, tuna, mackerel and sardines, contain a unique type oil, known as omega-3 fatty acids, that can do wonders for your health. Research shows that eating even a little fish high in omega-3s can slash your risk of heart disease in half.

In one British study, heart attack victims who ate fatty fish, such as salmon, two or three times a week were one-third less apt to have a future heart attack or die of any cause.

Many authorities warn that Americans eat far too little fish oil and that the deficiency is tied to many chronic diseases, including cancer, diabetes and rheumatoid arthritis.

This does not mean, however, you should heap extra fat on fish. Adding high-fat butter, cream sauces and mayonnaise, as well as frying in oil, counteracts the benefits of the good fish fat and gives you needless calories.

Fish in its pure form is one food in which more fat is better. Even so, fish is comparatively low in calories and fat.

Disease discovery

Researchers have taken the first step in identifying a gene that causes Bardet-Biedle syndrome, a rare disease causing mental retardation and physical deformities.

Scientists at Baylor College of Medicine in Houston and the University of Utah Medical Center have identified the location of the chromosome (11q) where the gene is believed to exist.

Features of Bardet-Biedle syndrome include retinitis pigmentosa, extra fingers or toes, mental retardation, obesity, underdeveloped male genitalia and delayed female puberty.

Researchers suggest limits for heart patients

By Ira Dreyfuss

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sports that are fun and healthful for some people with heart problems can sicken or kill others.

So cardiologists and exercise physiologists have updated their guidelines on who can play hard, who should play easy and who should watch from the stands.

The recommendations are published in the Journal of the American College of Cardiology and in the American College of Sports Medicine's journal, Medicine and Science in Sports and Exercise. The 1994 recommendations update guidelines published in 1985.

The recommendations were designed with the competitive athlete in mind. But they also can be applied to noncompetitive athletes and to people whose jobs require strenous exertion, said conference cochairmen Barry J. Maron of the Minneapolis Heart Institute Foundation and Jere H. Mitchell of the University of Texas Southwestern Medical Center at Dallas.

Doctors Maron and Mitchell emphasize that cardiovascular disease is rare in young athletes, and that relatively few people of any age die during exercise.

The times when exercise can be dangerous vary depending on the type and severity of the medical problem, the conference reports noted.

High blood pressure is a case in point. The report termed this "the most common cardiovascular problem observed in competitive athetes."

Some athletes with severe hypertension could have heart attacks and die, and so should stay away from sports that put a high pressure load on the heart, the report said. Among these events are rock climbing and weight lifting.

On the other hand, people with mild or moderate hypertension needn't worry about these limitations, the report said. In fact, regular exercise can improve their cardiovascular system by lowering their blood pressure. So doctors might instead encourage them to take part, but should check their blood pressure every two to four months, the report said.

The task force on coronary artery disease faced a similar issue. People who have heart attacks and die during exercise are often found on autopsy to have had severely narrowed arteries or an advanced lesion in an artery, the report said. The risk is rare in people under 30, but rises as the athlete ages, it said.

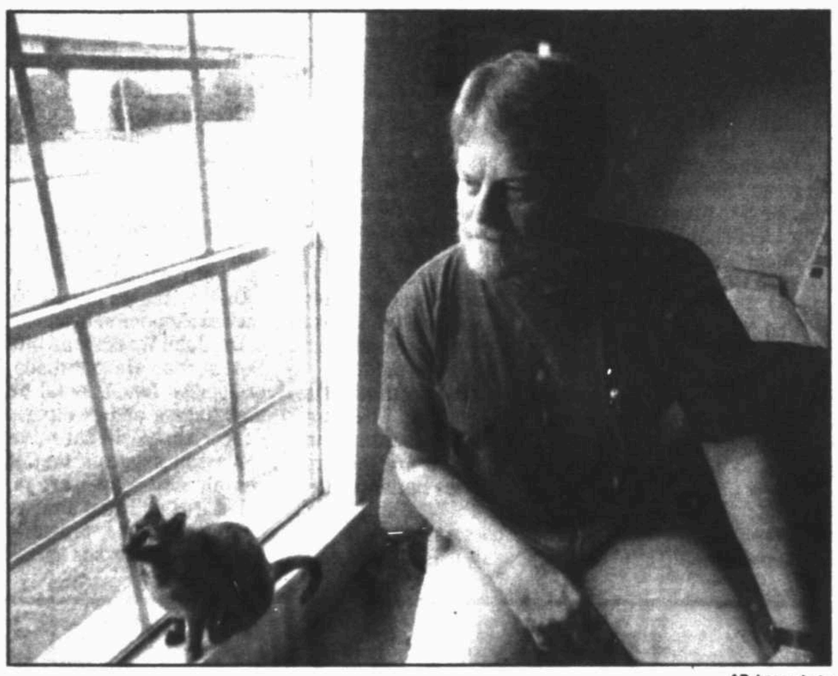

Athletes with known coronary artery disease should be tested to determine the state of their cardiovascular systems and the maximum amount of exercise they are capable of, the report said.

Those with mildly higher risks of a cardiac event should avoid intense competition but can participate in some activities, such as baseball, softball, doubles tennis and golf, the report said. But some in this group might take part in more intense activity if their overall profile suggests very low risk, and the patient is willing to take the chance, it said.

Those with substantially higher risks should stick with low-intensity sports such as billiards, bowling and golf, the task force said. And even this may be too intense for the worst off in this group, it said.

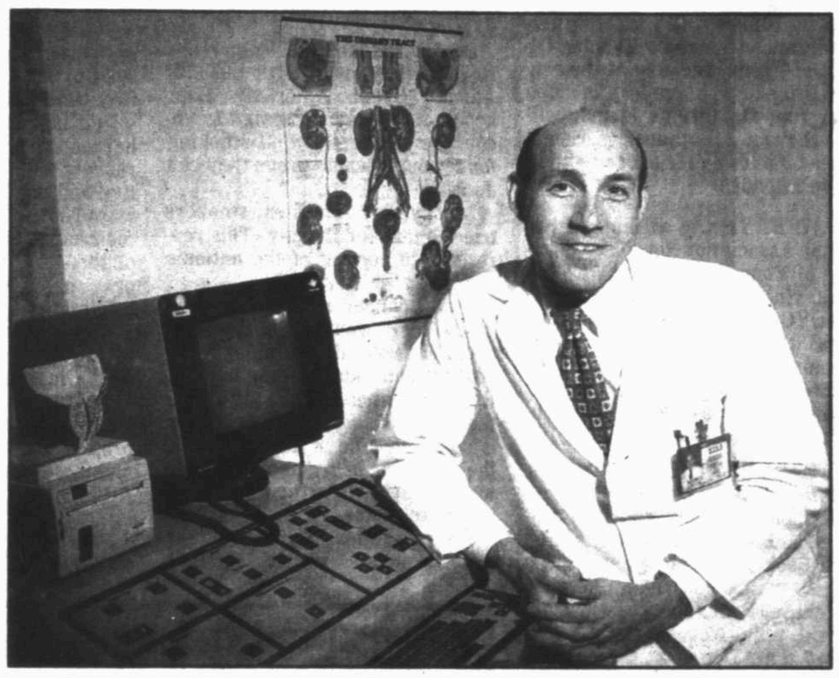

The report concedes that there are no solid studies to prove that keeping an at-risk athlete from competing will substantially prolong the athlete's life. The paper also says it's hard to tell exactly how much stress a given activity will cause in an athlete. But it notes that intense competition can create severe strain.

So the report advises doctors to err on the side of excluding athletes who could compete safely, rather than encouraging athletes to take a potentially dangerous chance.

Fred Mills looks out a window at his home with his cat, Murphy, in Houston. Mills, who has prostate cancer, underwent radical prostatectomy. However, the cancer had already spread.

Dr. Mark Litwin, a urologist and expert on prostate cancer, poses with an ultrasound machine in an examining room at University of California, Los Angeles Medical Center. Ultrasound is used during prostate biopsies.

Screening, treatment yield murky benefits

By Daniel Q. Haney
Associated press

When they heard about their prostate cancer, Edmond Olive and Fred Mills did the sensible thing, or so they thought at the time.

Both men decided to have their prostate glands cut out. Radical prostatectomy, the operation is called. Doctors assured them it was their best chance of beating the cancer.

Their stories could hardly be more common. After all, prostate cancer is the most frequent major malignancy among American males. About 200,000 men, most in their 60s, 70s and beyond, will hear the bad news this year. And like Olive and Mills, about 80,000 will have their prostates taken out.

So common, too, is what happened later.

Like thousands of others, Olive and Mills came to wish they had never had the surgery. The operations did them no good. In both their cases, the cancer already had escaped their prostates and spread. Taking out the glands did nothing to slow it down.

Futile cancer surgery is nothing new, of course, in this or any other kind of tumor. What makes their experiences so unsettling is the harm they suffered. Both men lost two of their most basic bodily functions — their ability to control their bladders and to have sex.

"Radical prostatectomy should be outlawed," said Olive, a 63-year-old retired engineer in Phoenix who had his prostate out three years ago.

The surgery is increasing at a daunting rate — sixfold in the past five years — yet there is no evidence at all that finding prostate cancer and treating it saves lives.

How did this major surgery, so well-intentioned but of such questionable effectiveness, become the vogue operation of the '90s?

The answer is the PSA test.

Until 1986, the only way to detect prostate cancer early was the digital rectal exam — both inaccurate and unpleasant. PSA, short for prostate-specific antigen, changed that. For $60 or $80, the blood test can detect prostate cancer with reasonable assurance. During routine visits, doctors can, and often do, check it off on lab test forms without asking men if they would like to know whether they have prostate cancer.

Why wouldn't a man want to know? Because prostate cancer is so common that most who have it will die of something else first.

In the view of PSA skeptics, if the cancer is not a threat, there is simply no need to know about it.

Still, for a minority of those who get it, prostate cancer is a killer. It will claim 38,000 American men this year, second only to lung cancer. Surely, some of these men could be saved by early diagnosis and treatment. But there is simply no way to identify which ones they are.

Despite the uncertainty about whom to check for prostate cancer — and what to do with the test results — the PSA has quickly become a fixture of elderly care. Industry sources estimate that perhaps one-third of U.S. men over the age of 50 will get a PSA test this year.

Certainly, many of these men are glad to know their cancer has been found and removed, regardless of side effects. (Sen. Bob Dole, for instance, has become such an advocate of prostate screening since his own 1991 operation that he calls himself "the prostate pinup boy.") They believe a timely operation saved them from cancer.

But others are bitter. A recent survey for the American Foundation for Urologic Disease found that 16 percent of prostatectomy patients would not choose the treatment again.

Luckily for surgeons, few become so distraught as the man in San Diego last February who shot his doctor in the groin after prostate surgery left him impotent. Many more, like Olive and Mills, speak quietly about a decision they wish they could make over.

Like perhaps 90 percent of men after the surgery, Olive cannot get a firm enough erection to have intercourse; his sex life is ruined. Like 40 percent, he cannot always control his bladder, so he has to wear pads in his underwear.

Fred Mills, 53, a state aviation planner in Houston, also has been impotent and partially incontinent since his operation three years ago.

And, like Olive, he wishes he had taken more time before surgery, looking into the risks and alternatives.

"I wish I could have made a more educated decision less driven by fear," Mills said. "Most of us jump on that table way too soon."

Often, surgeons are reluctant to operate on prostate cancer patients who are beyond their mid-70s, since the men are unlikely to live long enough to benefit. For this reason, many see a harm in willy-nilly PSA testing of the elderly, since it burdens them with the knowledge they have a tumor they cannot — and should not — do anything about.

Dr. Mark Litwin, a urologist at the University of California, Los Angeles, tells of a 78-year-old man he saw recently who had gone to his family doctor complaining of anxiety. The physician ordered routine blood tests, including a PSA. It came back positive.

Litwin told the man he probably would suffer more from the complications of treatment than he ever would from the slow-growing tumor. So the man opted

SMART program offers jobs, education

Staff Report

HOUSTON — College undergraduates interested in biomedical careers can experience scientific research as a summer job.

The Graduate School of Baylor College of Medicine in Houston sponsors the 10-week Summer Medical and Research Training (SMART) Program. Undergraduates from throughout the U.S. get first-hand experience in laboratory settings. Participants also attend daily research seminars and other educational activities.

Acceptance is highly competitive. More than 700 applicants typically vie for 100 positions.

Inquiries should be directed to Dr. Gayle R. Slaughter, Graduate School of Biomedical Sciences, Baylor College of Medicine, One Baylor Plaza, Houston, Texas 77030. The telephone number is (713) 798-5915. Deadline is Feb. 1, 1995.

If you have a cold, wash your hands

Staff Report

HOUSTON — If you catch a cold, remember to wash your hands a lot to lessen the chance of sharing it with others.

Although most colds are conracted by breathing virus-filled droplets, many colds result from rubbing the eyes or nose with fingers that have picked up a virus from hand-to-hand contact, said Dr. Jane Corboy of Baylor College of Medicine in Houston.

"When people with colds cough or sneeze into their hands and then touch objects at home, work or school," Corboy said, "they leave cold-causing virus behind."

In addition to frequent hand-washing, tissues and handkerchiefs can lessen or even prevent the passing of colds to others.

Gene-scanning technique sheds new light on diabetes

NEW YORK (AP) — A new technique for scanning human genes shows that a single gene cluster appears to be the main genetic cause of the most severe kind of diabetes, researchers say.

At least three other genes appear to exert a smaller influence in combination with this main culprit, called the HLA region, which normally plays a role in the disease-fighting immune system, researchers said.

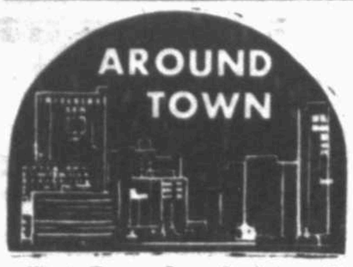

The work dealt with type 1 diabetes, in which people must inject themselves daily with insulin to survive. It was reported in the Sept. 8 issue of the journal Nature by John Todd of Oxford University in England, and other scientists.

Besides confirming some prior research, the work found evidence of two or three new apparent diabetes genes that have not yet been identified, Todd said.

Todd said the scanning technique should prove valuable for studying other illnesses with multiple genetic causes, such as heart disease, rheumatoid arthritis and asthma.

Genes lie along strands called chromosomes, and the new technique lets scientists quickly find small pieces of chromosomes that appear to contain disease genes. By using a computer and a laser to analyze DNA samples from families, scientists can look for chromosome pieces that appear to be inherited along with disease.

DEAR ABBY

Smokeout time to toss all 'if, onlys and butts'

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: For all your help in the fight against cancer, thank you! Every year, you generously devote a column to encourage readers to participate in the American Cancer Society's Great American Smokeout. Your support has helped millions of people nationwide make the effort to quit smoking — at least for the day.

Van Buren

More Americans try to quit smoking during the Smokeout than any other day — even New Year's Day. With the support of their families, friends and neighbors, millions of smokers use this vehicle to attempt to "kick the habit." Won't you please alert your readers again this year? — PATRICIA DAVIS SANDERSON, AMERICAN CANCER SOCIETY, ILLINOIS

DEAR MS. SANDERSON: Yes!

DEAR READERS: Tomorrow, Nov. 17, 1994, will mark the 18th Annual Great American Smokeout, a one-day campaign to encourage smokers to quit smoking for 24 hours, just to prove they can do it.

Last year, 9 million smokers tried to quit for the day. This represents 20 percent of the nation's 46 million smokers.

Breast cancer used to be the biggest killer of women. But the No. 1 cause of cancer death among women and men today is lung cancer. Because women are not quitting at the same rate as men, lung cancer is on the decline in men — but on the increase in women. It's estimated that early in the next century, more women will die of lung cancer than men. Tobacco claims one life every 13 seconds. An estimated 153,000 will die of lung cancer in 1994.

And now a word about smoking-related diseases — emphysema, chronic bronchitis and heart disease: This year, an estimated 419,000 will die from one of these.

According to a congressional study, health costs from the adverse effects of smoking have reached a new high of $100 billion a year in increased medical bills and lost productivity. The loss in death and disability cannot be measured.

What about secondhand smoke? Is it damaging to non-smokers to be in the presence of those who are smoking? Oh, yes. A 1993 report on secondhand smoke issued by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency categorizes secondhand smoke as a class A carcinogen on a par with asbestos and radon. And studies reveal that the children of smokers are more prone to lung problems and allergies than are children of non-smokers.

For years I have begged my young readers, "If you smoke, quit now. If you don't smoke, don't start!" Yet cigarette companies sell $1 billion of cigarettes to children every year, and an estimated 3,000 to 5,000 kids light up for the first time every day.

Quitting "cold turkey" is the hardest way to quit — but my readers tell me it's the most effective and, in the long run, the best way. Those who need help to break their habit: Call your local chapter of the American Cancer Society, or call 1-800-227-2345 for information.

If you're hooked and have been telling yourself, "One of these days I'm going to quit," why not start tomorrow? It won't be easy, but it will be the best Thanksgiving present you can give yourself — and those who love you. — LOVE, ABBY

GLAND: Condition common

for "watchful waiting," doctors' euphemism for doing nothing. But knowing he had cancer made him more anxious than ever before.

"I would argue he was ultimately harmed by that PSA," Litwin said. "Even though he is living with it, he knows that cancer is there."

Worry about the use of prostate screening and treatment is hardly limited to the support groups and computer bulletin boards where patients trade complaints and advice. Among doctors, there are few bigger controversies in medicine right now.

What makes prostate cancer so difficult is that it affects so many but, relatively speaking, kills so few. Most die with it, not of it.

A 50-year-old man with a life expectancy of 25 years has a 42 percent chance of carrying microscopically detectable prostate cancer when he dies. There is only a 10 percent chance it produced any signs, however, and a 3 percent chance it will have killed him.

Annual PSA screening for men over age 50 is recommended by both the American Cancer Society and the American Urological Association. Other major health organizations, including the National Cancer Institute, do not endorse it.

The skeptics contend there should be some proof that screening actually saves lives before it becomes part of every man's physical.

"It is quite possible that men beyond the age of 65 shouldn't be screened," said Dr. Willett Whitmore of Memorial Sloan-Kettering Cancer Center in New York, a prominent prostate surgeon. "In fact, it is arguable whether anybody should be screened, until and unless a reduction in prostatic cancer has been demonstrated."

Most of the nation's urologists, though, would disagree. These are the surgeons who do prostate surgery, and they often are the first specialists to advise patients after they get bad PSA results from their family doctors.

Urologists say it is simply common sense that finding cancer early and then getting rid of it will save lives.

Prostate cancer is a bad way to die. "It is not swift and sudden. It's awful and miserable," said Dr. Peter Scardino of the Baylor College of Medicine. "How can anybody argue that not detecting and treating it is the right thing to do?"

The cancer society's screening guidelines contain one important caveat. Only those with a life expectancy of at least 10 years should get the PSA. This is because prostate cancer is so slow-growing that it takes at least 10 years to see an advantage of treatment, if there is one.

To most, this means PSA testing should not be done beyond about age 70, when men have a 10-year life expectancy. But evidence is mounting that the test is routinely given to men who are older — often much older.

Dr. Peter Albertsen of the University of Connecticut found this year that the median age of men with newly diagnosed prostate cancer in Hartford is 70. This means that half of the men are beyond age 70 when they learn of their disease. Probably three-quarters are detected with PSA.

But what about younger men, those with potentially 20 or 30 years ahead of them? Should they routinely be tested, as the cancer society recommends?

One recent analysis by doctors from the University of Toronto concludes that screening men aged 50 to 70 might add one or two days to their average life spans. But this benefit would be more than canceled out by the side effects of treatment.

One of the country's most outspoken skeptics of broad screening is Dr. John Wassan, an internist at Dartmouth. He questions one of urologists' fundamental beliefs — that finding and treating prostate cancer early will save lives.

Wassan suggests that this cancer already may start to spread when it is still tiny and seemingly confined to the prostate gland. Once the cancer has spread, there is no reason to take out the prostate.

"The issue we are talking about here is huge," he said. "We really don't know what we are doing in the treatment of prostate cancer. Patients should be told that."

On the other hand, urologists argue that the PSA gives them a unique chance that should not be missed. This cancer cannot be cured once it escapes the prostate. With early detection and surgery, they believe they have the first opportunity to stop this major killer.

"I think we will see a change in mortality within the next five years," as figures start to show a drop in the death rate, predicted Dr. Gerald Murphy of the Pacific Northwest Research Foundation in Seattle.

The Dartmouth team doubts this. They produced a study suggesting treatment provides little benefit for men between the ages of 60 and 75. At best, it adds less than an extra year when quality of life is factored in. And for those with the slowest-growing tumors, treatment actually may do more harm than good.

Urologists dismiss such studies as overly simplistic and based on shaky assumptions. There is no proof that screening and surgery work, they say, because no studies have been done that could prove this.

Even if treatment works, the benefits for the patient are somewhere in the future. The side effects are now.

When surgeons talk to patients about the risk of the surgery, they often cite the statistics of the world's top prostate centers, such as Johns Hopkins University and Washington University. There, doctors are highly adept at preserving the nerves and other tissue necessary for erections and bladder control, and they operate on relatively young patients who have the best chance of full recovery.

At these places, less than 10 percent of patients are incontinent after surgery, and about a quarter are impotent.

Graham crackers good in chocolate too

By Linda Anderson

One of the things I like the most in life is a challenge — another of my favorite things is chocolate. When I find both combined in one product, I've got to try it.

Anderson

Nabisco's Honey Maid Grahams now come in chocolate. The advertising on the front of the box claimed the chocolate graham crackers contain "35 percent reduced fat vs. Other Chocolate Grahams."

My first reaction to this claim was "What other chocolate grahams?" I knew it would be a challenge to figure out that statement. Of course, this didn't stop me from buying a box of chocolate graham crackers and checking them out for taste, price and advertising accuracy.

A one-pound box (that's the regular size) of Honey Maid Chocolate Grahams cost $2.39, which is about the same price as other graham crackers in boxes of the same size.

In addition to the label advertising already mentioned, advertising claims that the chocolate grahams contain "No Cholesterol" and are made from "Wholesome wheat flour and deliciously pure honey baked into every graham. Try them all!" That last statement refers to the fact that, in addition to chocolate, Honey Maid graham crackers come in honey (that's regular) and cinnamon flavors.

Nutrition information shows that each serving (eight crackers, size 1¼x2½ inches each, which means the company is counting each serving as being two of the four-sectioned crackers as they are packaged) contains about 120 calories (or about 15 per cracker), with 25 of those calories from fat.

The taste-test was very pleasant. I've always liked graham crackers anyway, and chocolate ones are just as good as the others. Chocolate grahams, which have a light dusting of sugar on the top, which makes them more like a cookie than a cracker, probably taste wonderful dunked in milk.

If you like chocolate cookies and are trying to watch your fat and calorie intake, chocolate graham crackers might be a good alternative. They are worth a try.

Oh and the challenge of figuring out the opening advertising statement about "other chocolate grahams?" One of the young taste-testers pointed out that those little graham cookies (the ones that look like animal crackers and are about the same size) come in chocolate flavor too, and maybe those are the chocolate grahams the label refers to. She could be right, but it seems a stretch to compare full-sized graham crackers to itty-bitty graham cookies. But who ever said advertising was always logical?

Price listed is from a local supermarket. Prices at other locations may vary.

PERMIAN BASIN REGIONAL PLANNING COMMISSION

LEGAL NOTICE

The Permian Basin Regional Planning Commission serving as the Metropolitan Planning Organization for the Midland-Odessa Regional Transportation Study (MORTS), will conduct a public hearing to discuss the updated Metropolitan Transportation Plan for the Midland-Odessa Urbanized Area. The Metropolitan Transportation Plan is based on a target year of 2020 and will be updated at least every five years. The Plan includes long-range and short-range strategies/actions that will lead to the development of an integrated intermodal transportation system that will facilitate the efficient movement of people and goods. Included is a financial plan that notes funding sources that can reasonably be expected to be available for transportation uses.

The public hearing will be held on Monday, November 21, 1994 at the Permian Basin Regional Planning Commission offices located at 2910 La Force Boulevard, Midland International Airport. The hearing will begin at 2:00 PM.

A ten-day review and comment period will permit interested persons to submit written comments to Mr. Ernie Crawford, Executive Director, Permian Basin Regional Planning Commission, 2910 La Force Boulevard, P.O. Box 60660, Midland, Texas 79711-0660 (Fax# 563-1728).

The Metropolitan Transportation Plan can be reviewed during business hours beginning Thursday, November 17, 1994 at the Permian Basin Regional Planning Commission, 2910 La Force Boulevard, Midland International Airport; the District Office of the Texas Department of Transportation, 3901 East U.S. Highway 80 (BI 20E) Odessa; the Ector County Library, 321 West 5th Street, Odessa; and the Midland County Public Library, 301 West Missouri, Midland.

For additional information, interested persons should contact Jerry Tschauner at 915/563-1061.

HOW TO PLACE A PEOPLE MEETING PEOPLE AD

TO PLACE a FREE print ad you must have a touchtone telephone. Call 1-800-618-0738 to place your ad. You will receive a 20 word print ad and private voice mailbox. Your ad will appear for 4 weeks in the Midland Reporter-Telegram. You may fill out the People Meeting People coupon and mail it, or fax the coupon to place your FREE ad. See the coupon below for complete information.

IN ADDITION to your FREE mailbox, you get an 800 number for
- FREE message retrieval (Limit one call per day.)
- Unlimited message check
- Recording your greeting

Once you have setup your mailbox, and your greeting has been screened and approved, you may check and/or retrieve your messages.

NOTE: By placing an ad the advertiser agrees to record a greeting.

WHEN RECORDING your greeting leave your first name, mailbox number and repeat the highlights from your print ad. You have 2 minutes, so elaborate about yourself and the type of person you would like to meet. Speak clearly and loudly. Don't include your last name, address or telephone number.

HIGH SKY AREA
OR A STEADY PART TIME JOB.....
Does a Weekly and Monthly Income Sound Appealing????

The Midland Reporter-Telegram has an opening on one of its "Special Allowance" routes. This route receives a regular income from rack sales, $250 per month gas allowance in addition to the regular monthly route profits.

As with all newspaper distributorships, this opportunity requires a P/T, a 7 day a week commitment (when you go out of town, you must arrange a substitute for yourself) and it is early morning work which allows for time to go to your "regular job".

Newspaper distributorships can provide great supplemental income for housewives and/or mothers, senior citizens, college students or any other adult wanting to "moonlight".
