NOBODY'S BUSINESS

BY JULIAN CAPERS JR.

Austin.—Gov. Jimmie Allred's plea to the legislature to get down to business and pass some of the legislation which he submitted to the first called session went unheeded last week, and the defiant legislators, after meeting a month and wasting $100,000 of the people's money in a futile session that did not pass a single one of the four major problems submited, continued its playboy tactics. Neither house mustered a quorum Thursday or Friday, and adjournment was taken until Monday. Legislators are beginning to hear from the folks back home, who are beginning to realize that the governor has done his part, and the blame for continued inaction and waste lies squarely upon the legislators.

This correspondent took advantage of the weekend inaction to visit the opening of the Midland-Co. fair, in the heart of the West Texas cattle and oil country. Here is a progressive little city, rapidly developing into an oil center with 3100 producing wells, and numerous tank farms, pipelines and refineries within its trade area.

Long before Midland was an oil town, it was famed thruout the middle west as the source of fine stock and feeder cattle. It shipped each year thousands of head of fine Herefords to Illinois, Iowa and Kansas feedlots.

This year, notwithstanding the dire predictions of Washington brain trusters, the West Texas cattle country has forgotton about the dusters of last summer, the rains have put the range in splendid condition, and government buying of distressed cattle has culled out the "Model T" cows as the cowmen call them, leaving the herds in the finest condition in years.

Several weeks ago, Clarence Scharbaur, Claude Duffey, Sheriff Oddie Francis, Fred Turner and several others decided to organize a Midland fair, which would provide a suitable annual market for Midland cattle. They raised $45,000 in one week, bought a 110-acre tract adjoining the city, built a grandstand seating 5000 people, a rodeo arena, and a race track and show pens for cattle. as well as an exhibit hall for agricutural products. They sent invitations to big cattle buyers thruout the country, and many responded and advised they would be on hand this week for the cattle sales.

The fair was formally opened by Col. E. O. Thompson, railroad commission chairman, last Saturday, and a rodeo performance featuring many West Texas stars who are called all over the nation to show their skill, was staged. The performers were mostly "home folks" to the spectators here in this cattle country, and boots and spurs wore as common in the grandstand as in the arena.

James H. Goodman, Midland lawyer now, but football star and coach of other days, is an enthusiastic booster for Midland.

"We're in fine shape," Goodman said. "The independent oil men here have been permitted, under the railroad commission's policy, to live and prosper, and the ranches are in the best shape in years."

T. Paul Barron, Midland's newspaper publisher, echoed the same sentiment, altho he was too busy "covering" the fair opening to talk long. His brother, the county judge, talked optimistically, and visitors from many towns around, who came to help Midland celebrate, reported West Texas in fine shape and extremely optimistic over the future.

The state highway commission this week put in another lick for prosperity and employment, letting $2,500,000 worth of highway contracts on Tuesday. The engineering staff is rapidly shaping up plans for additional projects, so that a continuous program of letting may be carried out thruout the fall and winter, putting workers on payrolls as the relief program ends.

Already, rumors of a third special session are heard among members of both houses. The fee officers' salary bill, many legislators claim, can not be passed at the current second session. It is a fact that this measure is subjecting the legislators to a terrific amount of "heat" from county political rings thruout the state. There is no more powerful lobby than the county bosses, who,, while they work quitely, are probably more feared for their political influence, than any other group who "work" on the legislators.

Resignation of Gordon Griffin, chief petroleum engineer for the railroad commission, to accept private employment at a salary nearly twice that paid him by the state, is another example of the difficulty of retaining good men in all departments. The commission has lost seven petroleum engineers via this route in two years. Actually, the state is operating a "training school" for young employes, who, as soon as they become proficient, are grabbed off by private business. Griffin has turned down at least four previous offers of better pay to remain with the state.

Loraine Defeated Sylvester Friday

The Loraine Bulldogs finally defeated the Sylvester Cardinals on the local gridiron Friday afternoon 12 to 6. The first half of the game was scoreless although the Bulldogs got in scoring distance twice but fumbled the ball both times. The first fumble was on Sylvester's 1-yard line, and the second on her 12-yard line. The half was up with Loraine on Sylvester's 5-yard stripe.

Soon after the start of the second half Loraine advanced the ball to Sylvester's 12-yard line but again lost it on a fumble. Sylvester kicked out to the 35 yard line and Mahon took the ball and went the distance for the first marker. His place kick for the extra point was blocked.

Not long after Loraine made her touchdown Slyvester returned a punt from Loraine's 45-yard line for touchdown. The try for extra point was no good.

In the fourth quarter Brown recovered a Sylvester fumble on the 22 yard line. Land made a sweep around left end for 12 yards and first down. Chubby James then took the ball the remaining ten yards for the second touchdown. A pass to Simmons for the extra point was incomplete.

The Loraine boys say that Sylvester has one of the strongest lines they have been against this season. M. Mason, quarterback N. Wallace and T. L. Carter, who held the wing positions for Sylvester, were outstanding players for the visitors.

Loraine made 15 first downs to 5 for Sylvester. Loraine completed two passes out of twelve attempts, and Sylvester completed three out of ten attempts, and had one intercepted.

BOX SUPPER AT CHAMPION FRIDAY NIGHT

A box supper and merchandise sale will be held at South Champion Friday night of this week. The proceeds of the sale will go to a fund to purchase equipment for the school.

Much of the merrhandise to be auctioned off has been donated by Loraine merchants. Merchandise to be auctioned off to the highest bidder includes groceries and dry goods. Free ginning for nine bales of cotton will also be sold to the highest bidder. Cotton growers should be especially interested in this feature.

Everyone is cordially invited to attend.

Mel-Roy's Magical Sensations To Be Here

The Loraine P. T. A. will bring Mel-Roy's Magical Sensations to Loraine on Saturday, November 9, for afternoon and evening performances. The show will probably be held in the Loraine Theatre.

Mel-Roy's Magical Sensations is not to be understood as the ordinary tent show, for it is not. It is a super production of the highest type, presenting to the public the greatest mystery show in the world.

You will see a living woman sliced into four parts, before your very eyes!—You will see a girl's body stretched many feet, while in full sight! . . .you will see a man hanged by his neck!—an illusion which contains both pathos and mystery. . . . .a living person suspended in mid-air, without any means of support! . . . you will see a girl burned at the altar!, an illusion you will remember for the rest of your life. You will see Mel-Roy catch pigeons and gold fish right out of thin air, then vanish them as mysteriously as they were produced. Mel-Roy will be nailed up in a strong box from which he will emerge without assistance.

Now is your chance to see Mel-Roy in person. You have heard him as a mentalist, over all the principal radio stations of the United States and Mexico—now he brings you this tremendous wonder show. The stage settings are second to none; the costumes are beautiful; the lighting effects are unequalled anywhere.

If you miss Mel-Roy's Magical Sensations you will miss an opportunity of a life-time to be entertained, amused and mystified in a high-class way.

MAYOR'S PROCLAMATION

The annual Roll Call for the Mitchell County Chapter of the American Red Cross will begin o nArmistice Day, November 11, and end Thanksgiving Day.

Workers who helped in the Roll Call last year lost no time in turning from their solicitation to carry on the year's program of relief for victims of accident, disaster and disease.

They come to us now to remind us that our memberships which will finance the work of another year are due. Since our Red Cross asks so little from the community, and contributes so much, I urge a speedy response again this year.

The Red Cross is recognized by city officials as a potent factor in meeting present needs, and as an agency of incalculable value in the event of possible emergency.

I, therefore, as Mayor of Loraine hereby set aside the designated period as the time when all past members are asked to renew their memberships and those who have not before been members add their names to the roll of honor in Mitchell County.

J. C. Hall, Mayor.

BAND MASTERS HOLD SWEETWATER MEETING

Band Masters of the western division of the Texas Band Teacher's association were in convention in Sweetwater Sunday. Paul Branom, director of the Loraine High School Band, was in attendance.

Big Spring was selected as the site for the 1936 band contests, to be held on Friday and Saturday, April 24 and 25. Four other invitations were presented by Lubbock, Brownwood, Abilene and Sweetwater. The contests were held this year in Lubbock and last year in Abilene. In addition to selecting the contest site, contest numbers and other plans were discussed.

Contests are held in five classes —A, B, C, D and junior high. Cups are awarded to the winners of each of these and to the winners in 30 to 40 solo events for individuals.

The Loraine High School Band is to enter the contest in the class C division again this year.

Juniors To Present Wallace "Ben Hur'

The Junior class of the Loraine High School will sponsor the presentation of Wallace's "BEN HUR", a tale of Christ, by Rev. B. G. Richbourg, at the high school auditorium on Friday, November 1, at 11 A. M.

Rev. Mr. Richbourg will portray the scenes and episodes in the book "Ben Hur" in a most excellent and impressive manner. Schools where he has appeared have all given him flattering recommendations.

Admission to the program will be 10 and 20 cents and the proceeds will go to the Junior class.

BULLDOGS GO TO SNYDER FRIDAY AFTERNOON

The Loraine Bulldogs will journey to Snyder Friday afternoon of this week for their fourth game in Class B conference this year. Only one more conference game remains to be played by the Bulldogs, which will be played at Rotan on November 22, at night.

The game Friday afternoon should be a thriller since the dope sheet gives both team an even chance to win. Both teams have played Colorado and lost to them by a one-touchdown margin. The Bulldoys have a little edge on Snyder in this regard, however, since they were able to put over a touchdown against the Wolves and Snyder was not.

The Bulldogs need not get the idea, however, that they will have an easy time for the Snyder Tigers are always scrapping and they are never easy to defeat.

The Bulldogs are still sore from the Colorado game and one of their backfield men, Aldin Lee, who has more power in his drives than any other backfield man, is in the hospital having undergone an operation for appendicitis last week. He will probably not be able to play any more this season.

William Simmons and Junior Baird will take the assignment usually carried by Lee. Either of them will do a good job. They are both fast and shifty but they lack the power Lee has in his line plunges.

If you want to see a real football game the Bulldog-Tiger affair at Snyder Friday afternoon should be the game for you to see. The game is scheduled to start at three o'clock.

P. T. A.

The President and membership chairman called a special meeting of the room representatives, Thursday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Ed Williams for the purpose of arranging for a membership campaign.

We all know for our organization to be efficient it must be self supporting, to do so it must have some one backing it. Therefore we are going to give every home in the Loraine School district an opportunity of placing at least one member in the P. T. A.

It isn't necessary for you to have children in school to be a member, all that is necessary is to be sufficiently interested in our school to want to help make it a better school.

When a representative calls upon you to become a P. T. A. member think 3 times long, longer, longest before you turn her down and then after she is gone think again. "I have refused to help my own child, and all other children of our state and nation to have a better, safer, place in which to prepare themselves for their place in life. After all thats' what we parents are here for, to give our children an opportunity to become better citizens than we ourselves are.

Let's all get into the harness and work from now until Nov. 7, when our campaign closes, the work isn't hard and the membership fee isn't large. surely we can afford 50c per year to help make a good school a better one.

Come on parents lets have the best P. T. A. organization in the county.

Farmers Organize Community Gin Co.

Farmers of the Loraine community met at the high school auditorium last Thursday night for the purpose of discussing the organization of a co-operative gin company. Mr. Daniel, secretary-treasurer of the West Texas Cotton Growers Association, of Abilene was present and gave detail information of the steps to be taken in the organization of such a company. He explained the plan used by many such farmers organizations whereby they borrow 60 per cent of the appraised value of a gin plant from the federal government.

The plan, as explained by Mr. Daniel, is for the farmers to put up their note for $100, to the amount of the appraised value of the gin to be purchased, as security for the federal loan. The notes are to be paid with dividends on a per-bale basis, the farmer getting the difference between the actual cost of the ginning and the price paid. In this manner the farmers buy a gin and pay for it without ever being out any money. His note is canceled and stock issued to him when the gin plant is paid for. Mr. Foster and Mr. Arnett of Anson, who are connected with a gin of this kind at Anson, and Mr. Hunt of Bradshaw, a farmer and banker, were also present and told of their experiences in the co-operative gin business. The Anson gin has been operating since 1927 and was paid for the first season it operated.

Farmers present voted to go into the organization of a gin company and elected seven directors with instructions to apply for a charter and a loan. The seven directors named are E. B. Hale, C. T. Beights, J. W. Sherrell, H. B. Cook, Frank Beights, T. C. Wilson, and F. B. Carlock.

The directors met Saturday afternoon and elected E. B. Hale president, C. T. Beights, vice-president, T. C. Wilson, secretary-treasurer, and H. W. Hallmark, manager. They also sent an application to Austin for a charter and made application for a loan. The organization is to be known as the Loraine Community Gin Company.

The directors made a deal with Mr. Kornegay for his gin plant subject to the approval of the loan. $17,000 was the price agreed upon. The new organization has already taken charge of the gin plant and members of the firm have already started patronizing it.

Directors are working to get every farmer possible into the organization.

WEEKLY COTTON REPORT

The proportions representing the different grades and staple lengths for cotton classed during each of the past several weeks have not changed materially. For the past few weeks, about one-fifth of the samples each week were classed as Strict Middling or better grades (White and Extra White), while about one-half were included in Middling and better grades. To date, the accumlated results for the season show that about 19 per cent was Strict Middling and better, while about 42 per cent was Middling.

For each of the past three weeks the proportion for cotton shorter than 7-8 inch has comprised approximately one-fifth of the samples classed from Texas ginnings. This week the proportion for the short cotton, which is untenderable on futures contracts, is slightly larger than for any previous week—being 22 per cent of the total classed this week. Most of this cotton is received from District 2, the High Plains; District 3, the Red Lands and Plains; District 5, the Cross Timbers; and from District 8, the Sandy Coastal Plains. Relatively small proportions of this short cotton are received from the other districts of the State.

Laval in Uncomfortable Position as Anglo-Italian Relations Grow Worse—Senator Vandenberg "Not a Candidate."

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

© Western Newspaper Union.

PIERRE LAVAL, premier of France, found himself in a tight place because of his efforts to retain the friendship of both Great Britain and Italy and to keep his government from being upset by its foes at home. In the process of trying to find a way to bring about a peaceful settlement of the Italo-Ethiopian war, Laval proposed that Britain withdraw its big home fleet from the Mediterranean to mollify Mussolini. This suggestion was laid before the British cabinet and turned down flatly.

Pierre Laval

The cabinet gave hearty approval to the policy at Geneva of Capt. Anthony Eden and Samuel Hoare, secretary for foreign affairs. Its stand was reported to be substantially this: Mussolini will respect nothing but force. He would interpret any withdrawal of Britain's Mediterranean forces as a sign of weakening. If Mussolini wants to clear the way for Italo-Ethopian peace talks, let him halt his armies in Ethiopia and accept league terms as basis for negotiation as Ethiopia already has done.

Furthermore, the British government called on Laval for a definite reply to its question whether France would cooperate with the British fleet if there were an open break with Italy. The French answers to this query had been too wabbly to suit Downing street. Particularly the English wanted to know if their fleet would be permitted to use the French naval dockyards. It was believed that if Laval could not satisfy the British, the latter would withdraw from active leadership in the League of Nations and refuse to renew the Locarno commitments on which France relies for protection against Germany.

DISPATCHES from the African war front are subjected to so severe a censorship that they are not only unsatisfactory but often quite unreliable. All kinds of sensational stories are circulated and some of them may be true. One such is the report from Djibouti, French Somaliland, that Italians killed a number of British Somaliland subjects near the Ethiopian frontier, some of the victims being members of the camel corps that is a part of the colonial army. British Vice Consul Lowe heard, also, that Italians had gassed and shot a lot of cattle and goats in British Somaliland.

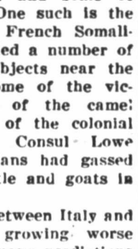

Certainly relations between Italy and Great Britain were growing worse daily and there were many predictions that the two nations would be at each other's throats before long. The British have been in a deadly cold humor ever since they found out that Mussolini's friends had been trying to stir up an anti-British revolt in Egypt. Now the border between Egypt and Italian Libya is the scene of swift concentration of troops on both sides.

ETHIOPIA'S representatives in Geneva were told by delegates of several nations that Mussolini was ready to end the warfare if he were given considerable cessions of territory and certain large economic advantages. This tentative offer was transmitted to Addis Ababa, and the reply of Emperor Haile Selassie was a determined "No." The Italians want virtual control over the entire country, and the emperor is not willing to give up a yard of territory.

The Italians in northern Ethiopia were jubilant over the desertion of Degiac Haile Selassie Gugsa and several thousand warriors. This Gugsa is a son-in-law of the emperor and a descendant of King John who reigned in the last century. The traitor was installed as ras or chieftain of the occupied territory.

Seemingly reliable reports from medical missionaries in the southern sector, the Ogaden zone, said the Italians were making free use of chlorine gas and of dum-dum bullets which for many years have been outlawed in all "civilized" warfare.

SENATOR ARTHUR H. VANDENBERG of Michigan, who has been mentioned frequently as a possible Republican nominee for the Presidency, came back from a summer tour of Europe and declared flatly he is "not a candidate for anything on earth." He did not attempt to predict who would be named by the Republicans, but did say he felt the G. O. P. would win in 1936.

Senator Vandenberg

"I think President Roosevelt wrote his obituary in his first speech in congress in March, 1933," he said, "and historians will show it, when he said 'most liberal governments have been wrecked on the rocks of loose fiscal policies and we must take care to avoid that.'"

Liberal spending by the New Deal was defended by Senator Fletcher of Florida, chairman of the senate banking committee. In an interview he said that "government activities and expenditures have restored about $10,000,000,000 of bank credit lost in the $21,000,000,000 deflation of 1930-33.

"Business is going to get the benefit of that. The money the government is putting out is going to people who are putting it in the banks. It is increasing purchasing power and likewise expanding the credit facilities of the banks."

The senator expressed the belief business was "reviving," declared relief and other emergency expenditures would drop as continued improvement was shown, and predicted many work projects would be of lasting benefit.

IT DOESN'T take much these days to cause the Republicans to rejoice. The latest event hailed by them as a harbinger of victory next year was merely a by-election in Massachusetts to fill a vacancy in the state senate. The district normally is Republican and this time as usual a Republican was elected. The reason for the G. O. P. shouts was found in the decreased vote polled by the Democrats, and the fact that Salem, a mill town and former Democratic stronghold, was captured by the Republicans.

Democratic leaders said that the issues in the election were purely local and that the reverse at most was a rebuff for the administration of Democratic Gov. James Curley. The Republican leaders asserted that the New Deal no less than Curley was involved.

VICE PRESIDENT JOHN GARNER and a large number of senators and representatives sailed from Seattle for Manila to represent the United States at the formal establishment of the Philippines commonwealth and the inauguration of President Manuel Quezon on November 19.

For the first time in history both the President and the Vice President were outside United States territory at the same time. Secretary of State Hull was the ranking official left in Washington and consequently was the temporary head of the government. However, Mr. Roosevelt was in close and continual communication with the capital by wireless throughout his cruise.

IN SOME quarters Col. Theodore Roosevelt is credited with considerable influence among the Republicans of the eastern states, and often he is mentioned as a possible Presidential candidate. Another potential candidate, strong in the West, Senator William E. Borah of Idaho, recently wrote to Colonel Roosevelt proposing that the 1936 Republican campaign be based on a "trust-busting" issue. The colonel turned down the plan. He replied that, while he was in sympathy with the senator's attitude on monopolies, he felt there are many other issues as great or greater. Among these he named "scandalous waste of the people's money, government extravagance, multitudinous taxes, and attempts to subvert our type of government."

Col. Theodore Roosevelt

"I entirely agree," Colonel Roosevelt wrote, "that monopolies are evil, for I am a firm believer in the established American principle of competition. I have stated this over and over again during the last eighteen months.

"I do not agree, however, that this will be the major issue of the campaign."

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT turned his back on the Pacific and began his return voyage on the cruiser Houston. The vessel was started through the Panama canal while the President went to Fort Clayton and other posts to inspect the garrisons, and to the new Madden dam on the Chagres river. He boarded the cruiser at Pedro Miguel locks and, with President Arias of Panama and Mrs. Arias as guests, proceeded to the Atlantic.

MAJ. GEN. WILLIAM L. SIBERT, one of the three men who really built the Panama canal and last surviving member of the canal commission, died at the age of seventy-five at his country home near Bowling Green, Ky. He was buried in Arlington National cemetery with full military honors.

General Sibert's career as engineer and soldier was distinguished. He was made brigadier general by special act of congress for his services in connection with the building of the Panama canal. During the World war he commanded the First division of the A. E. F.

He retired in 1920 to engage in private engineering work and subsequently served as chairman of the Alabama state docks commission in construction of the state docks at Mobile. From 1928 to 1932 he was chairman of the Boulder dam commission, and in 1929 and 1930 was president of the American Association of Port Authorities

No Core, No War
Sloan Sees Light
The Holy City Falls
G. B. Shaw Writes

A small boy, asked for the core of his apple, said: "There ain't going to be no core."

Laval, French premier, tired of dangerous goingson in the Mediterranean, gerous goings on in the Mediterranean, nounces bluntly: "There ain't going to no war," requesting England to remove her battleships from the Mediterranean.

The wise British have known all along that there was to be no war, but thought it well to indulge in virtuous demonstrations.

Britons rarely make diplomatic mistakes: diplomats of other countries are children to them, although France is an exception to that rule.

Washington believes the war will end in 60 days, and has probably been told so by somebody in Europe.

Alfred P. Sloan, Jr., president of General Motors, announces "all signals set for increased automobile sales next year," and no doubt about it.

He approves an automobile show in November, instead of January, as giving the people more time to realize that the important car is the winter car, when the automobile "wears the rubbers" for the whole family.

Capturing Aksum will impress Ethiopians. The holy city, surrendered by the Ethiopians without a shot, contains the tombs of all Ethiopian rulers since the time of Sheba. The Coptic Christian bishop of Aksum voluntarily gave the keys of the city to the Italian Gen. Emilio de Bono, at Aduwa. He accepted the keys, proclaimed Italy's annexation of Aksum, sent a force to surround the city and prevent looting the monasteries and the ancient cathedral of St. Mary Zion.

In that cathedral the original Ark of the Covenant is believed to be preserved. Ethiopian history relates that when Solomon sent the son of his high priest, with other sons of great dignitaries, to accompany Sheba's son after his visit to his father, the son of the high priest took the original Ark of the Covenant with him, substituting an imitation ark, much to the indignation of Solomon and that high priest. In justice to the high priest's son, it must be stated that an angel appeared and gave him instructions about stealing the ark.

George Bernard Shaw discovers that Ethiopia, so-called, is an aggregation of tribes, one ruled fairly well by Haile Selassie, who is called "Emperor," the others doing about as they please.

In some of these tribes, what pleases the natives would seem strange to us. For instance, among the Danakils a lady will not marry a gentleman until he proves that he has killed at least four men. And he must prove it by bringing back the easily identified fragments of four mutilated bodies. Married life with such a lady should never be dull.

Wars come, wars go, Standard Oil goes on forever, working.

Walter Teagle, head of Standard Oil of New Jersey, with oil wells scattered over the world, offers to buy every barrel of oil that Russia exports, many million barrels a year. To avoid ill feeling, Mr. Teagle would let British Royal Dutch-Shell and Anglo-Iranian have part of Russia's surplus.

Your Uncle Sam is very rich now, never had so much gold in his life. The total pile, "an all time high," amounts to more than fifteen billions of dollars.

It wouldn't be such a big pile of gold if the government had not ingeniously raised the price of the gold ounce.

Gold has been coming rapidly from Europe lately, including some gold that frightened Americans sent abroad for its health.

The United States is becoming more and more a gambling nation, and, in consequence, less and less a thinking, working nation. Gambling makes real work seem not worth while. Why work if you can play the horses? Can you imagine Washington, Lincoln or Edison studying "past performances"?

Mr. Damon Runyon writes:

"A few years ago, the Broadway betting men would have sneered at the idea of wagering on college football games. Now it is the biggest betting medium of any sport, with betting brokers issuing regular printed quotations on the various games every week."

At the Methodist Protestant church conference a committee of the Lord's day recommends that churches be lighted like motion picture "cathedrals." The committee complains: "The Church of Christ is in comparative darkness with often but a single light over the door and at the speaker's desk to save expense."

New Jersey justice decides that Hauptmann, convicted of murdering the Lindbergh child, may live a little longer, to take an appeal to the United States Supreme court. The Supreme court may, in its discretion, decline to investigate Hauptmann's conviction. In that case, the curtain falls.

Let Guest Tell of Tribulations as Sports Ed

Ernest L. Meyer, who writes the column "As the Crow Flies," takes over Hugh Bradley's assignment today to discuss his trials and tribulations while acting as sports editor of a family journal a few—quite a few—years back.

By ERNEST L. MEYER

EVERY time I read Hugh Bradley's sparkling department I recall my own and not very scintillating career as sports editor. I recall it without difficulty, but not without pain.

It happened about 18 years ago when I was doing general assignments for the defunct Milwaukee Daily News and could be found most any hour of the day peacefully sleeping on a davenport at the Press club. It seems that our regular sports editor, after ruminating about life all evening at the Schlitz Palm Garden, was seized by a hankering for travel. He left immediately, on the midnight freight with a quart of gin, and never came back. We never heard from him again.

When I drifted into the office the following day with a yarn about the embalmers' convention, the city editor, a ruthless person named Dean Kirk, grabbed me.

"You're sports editor," he said.

"I'm not," I objected. "I don't know a boxing glove from a pneumatic bicycle seat."

"Can't help it. You've got to fill in till we make other arrangements. Dust out to the ball grounds now and phone in the dope for the sports pink."

I dusted, yearning for a nap on my favorite couch at the Press club. The wooden seats in the press box on top of the grand stand were devilishly hard.

I asked Art Schinners, who covered sports for the Evening Wisconsin, how the deuce one writes up a ball game.

"Easy," he said. "Never call a ball a ball or a home run a home run."

I got the idea. A good sports writer in those days would call a baseball a pellet, a horsehide, a globule, a pill or a spheroid. If he called it a baseball his readers wouldn't know what he was talking about.

Somehow, I struggled through a whole month without calling a home run a home run, so my stories were always lucid and readily comprehended. On one occasion, however, Dean Kirk "called" me.

"What," he said, "does this mean?"

He pointed to a sentence in my yarn which read: "Southpaw Master spat into his upholstery, wound his hefty left up like a windmill in a Missouri tornado, and then shot over a redhot Smith Brothers."

"Why that," I explained patiently, "means he threw a drop."

I had never in my life seen a boxing match. But the managers and fighters used to drop in, ask for the sports editor, and hand me large, fat cigars.

Ballet Bouncing Vs. Triphammers

"What chance has my man Wildcat Levinsky got against Kid Cuckoo?" the manager would ask me, as man to man.

And I would lean over and say confidently:

"Listen, Mr. Molloy. The kid won't have a chance once he runs into that right ham of your fighting windmill. The Kid's good at dancing, you understand, but his ballet bouncing won't help him once Wildcat connects with his triphammer."

"Sure, that's just how I got it sized up. It'll be a cinch," the manager would say, and hand me a couple more cigars, greatly pleased at my expert opinion.

Then the manager for Kid Cuckoo would breeze in and say:

"Now about this match Friday night. D'ye think Wildcat Levinsky has a look-in with my bird?"

"Listen, Mr. Solomons," I would reply seriously, "here's what I think. Wildcat won't have a chance once he runs into that right ham of your fighting windmill. Wildcat's good at toe dancing, you understand, but his ballet bouncing won't help him once Kid Cuckoo connects with his triphammer."

"Now you're talking!" Mr. Solomons would shout. Then he'd give me three or four rich, ripe stogies. It was fun being sports editor.

Everything was rosy till the big match came off. I've forgotten the details. All that I remember is that in the third round one of the fighters did make a connection with the triphammer.

I fainted.

Next day one of the fellows on another sheet had a funny feature story with the headline: "Sports Editor Knocked Out in Third."

THINGS the box score never told me:

Persons interested in keeping the Olympics out of Germany should investigate the case of Baron Gottfried von Cramm, the Davis Cup star. Originally it had been arranged that Donald Budge and Gene Mako were to play in the German tennis championships and in return the baron was to come to the United States for the nationals. Then the trade fell through and now it seems that not only will the German star be prevented from coming to this country but also he will be barred from the 1936 trophy team as Dr. Daniel Prenn was this year.

The reason? Could it be that Hitler discovered that the baroness was Jewish and that therefore the baron must be anti-Nazi and unfit to represent his native country in a sports event?

Lester Doctor, betting commissioner for the Whitneys, has handled more money than any man on the racetracks. Payne Whitney was the biggest plunger of the tribe. . . . To make sure that Art Lasky would work himself back into condition Brother-Manager Maurice put the heavyweight on the Los Angeles water works pay roll at $4 a day. . . . In spite of Bill Terry's rule against Giants' talking to Dizzy Dean, Hughie Critz and Allyn Stout still bandy words with the pitcher. Stout once was a teammate of the elder Dean and so naturally cannot be prevented from saying "Howdy" now and then. Critz hits Dizzy so hard, so well and so often that it would be a crime to prevent him from crowing a bit about it. Certainly the dizzy one does more than his share of crowing.

Dizzy Dean.

George Throws Out Ball Players, Too

Forty-seven baseballs, with a wholesale value of $58.75, were lost in the crowd during a St. Louis-Cincinnati night game this summer. . . . The Yankees, because the stands are so convenient that 60 balls often have disappeared during one game, spend from $10,000 to $11,000 for baseballs each season. . . . This is the biggest bill in the American league, the other clubs averaging about $7,000. . . . George Moriarty says that he throws out more baseballs during a season than any other umpire. That is largely because he figures, quite correctly, that when an overhand pitcher sails the ball there must be something wrong with it. . . . He recalls one Boston game where he had to throw out only four balls, though, and Nick Altrock will tell you that he used only one ball while pitching a game for the White Sox back in 1906 or 1907.

Could it be that the Hearst charities and Jack Curley, the wrestling promoter, are planning to go in for professional tennis? Or could it be those youthful reporters who have been left out in the cold on the prize fight promoting end of the newspaper business were merely kidding when they spoke of big dough while tempting Fred Perry to perform at Yankee stadium after the national championships?

The tip-off on U. S. C.'s football prospects may be found in the fact that the Trojans have booked a game with Hawaii university at Honolulu for New Year's day. . . . Although he breeds saddle horses that win blue ribbons at national shows and although he is a trotting race devotee, Bill Brown, the boxing commissioner, never has been inside any park where the thoroughbreds run for money.

Are the Yankees sure that Joe Di Maggio, the outfielder who will come from San Francisco Seals in the spring, is not another of those athletes with trick knees a la Steve Hamas? . . . The daughter of Steve O'Neill, Cleveland manager, won a prize this year for being the best all-around athlete at a girls' school. . . . The most reckless of all fighters when driving an automobile is Paulino Uzcudun. He doesn't think he is moving unless he is doing 75 miles per hour. . . . Danno O'Mahoney, the wrestling champion, has a brother named, of all names, Florence.

Signs posted over the Saratoga racetrack call attention to section 968 of the New York penal code concerning bookmaking and pool selling. This is the first time that the signs have appeared and it is a reminder that the game still is not quite legal here. . . . Also it may be that there is considerable tension between the Jockey club and the Racing commission, the latter group taking too much for granted by building betting booths, forbidden in the law.

K. O. Christner now operates one of Akron's most prosperous tobacco shops. . . . Shufflin' Phil Douglas is pitching semi-pro ball around Chicago. He twirls for the Mills team, which has produced such celebrated south side athletes as Jocko Conlan of the White Sox and Johnny McCarthy of the Dodgers.

Al Vanderbilt (some people call him Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt) is one of the few wealthy owners who get up early to watch their horses train.

FEAR: REAL AND UNREAL; LATTER IS MOST DEADLY

There are, of course, two sorts of fear. One is immediate anxiety—for the next meal; for the safety of some one close and beloved; for the job; for the rent money. These are bad fears, but they have one advantage. They can be faced, and they can indicate direct action. There is something to be done, something which has to be done. One can take these fears out and look them over. The wolf is at the door, but perhaps he can be kept out; and there is always the hope that he is only a coyote after all.

The other fear is far more deadly because it deals with the spirit and feeds on the imagination. It senses about it some hostile force, but does not know precisely what the danger is. There is no more defense against this fear than against a ghost. It comes through the keyhole and hangs over the bed; and men kill themselves to escape it, or retire into asylums and sit huddled in dark corners.

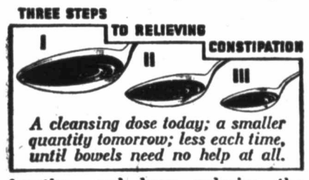

It is a psychosis—if that is the word. It has no actual reality. Each of us either builds it for himself or lays himself open to it. It destroys but never builds. It can take the strong and turn them into old men with shaking hands. It is more destructive than any fact. We can face hunger better, for hunger is a real thing. And the only way to fight it is to know it for what it is; sheer apprehension, despondency, funk, without reality except in the human mind.—Mary Roberts Rinehart in Cosmopolitan.

SYNOPSIS

As Alan Garth, prospector, is preparing to leave for his mining claim in the Far North, a plane lands at the airways emergency station. In it are Burton Ramill, millionaire mining magnate; his daughter, Lilith; and Vivian Huxby, pilot and mining engineer. Believing him to be only an ignorant prospector, the men offer to make an air trip to Garth's claim, although they refer to his samples of platinum-bearing ore as nearly "worthless." Lilith Ramill, product of the jazz age, plainly shows contempt for Garth. Through Garth's guidance the plane soon reaches the claim site. Huxby and Ramill, after making several tests, assure Garth his claim is nearly valueless, but to "encourage" young prospectors they are willing to take a chance in investing a small amount. Sensing treachery ahead, Garth secretly removes a part from the motor of the plane. Huxby and Lilith taunt Garth, but their tone soon changes when they try to start the plane. Returning to shore they try to force Garth to give up the missing part. Garth manages to set the monoplane adrift and the current carries it over the falls. He points out that he is their only hope in guiding them out of the wilderness. Garth begins the work of preparing for the long journey. He insists that the others help. Ramill and his daughter must be hardened for the hardships ahead in their trek to the outpost on the Mackenzie. Garth experiences difficulties in getting his companions into line.

Though Garth had no pad, he stood up with the moose quarter on his back and lifted his end of the pole to his shoulder. But he was accustomed to packing. He bore the meat on his pack-board and his half of the two quarters on the pole with as little difficulty as Huxby toted the other end of the pole.

When they reached the camp Miss Ramill and her father were out gathering wood. At one end of the fire, thick smoke was rising from green sticks and leaves; at the other end, the pan of sliced muffle was boiling hard After he and Huxby had lifted the moose quarters upon the rack, Garth brought water in the aluminum pot and cooled down the stew to simmering heat. Miss Ramill had much to learn about the culinary art.

After the meal Garth glanced at the red after-glow of sunset.

"Mr. Ramill, the leanto and blanket are for you and your daughter. Huxby can take the lee side of the fire. I'll keep it going. Turn in whenever you please."

A yawn surprised Lilith Ramill into a mocking laugh. She turned to her swollen-faced fiance.

"What a howling farce, Vivian! Can you imagine me going to roost at sunset, instead of sunrise?"

Huxby forced a smile and felt at a particular sore cluster of bites on the back of his neck. Mr. Ramill cast a wistful glance towards the leanto.

"I presume, Lilith, you will prefer not to share the hut with me. Perhaps I can manage out here beside the fire, like Vivian."

"No," Garth differed. "You'll sleep under that blanket until you have hardened into shape, and you'll turn in now. It's been a big day for you."

The girl bridled. "How about my wishes—and the proprieties?"

"We'll leave that to you," Garth replied. "If you consider it improper to share the blanket with your father, you're welcome to sit up and help me grain these moosehides."

Huxby stiffened. "None of your insolence! You'll treat Miss Ramill with utmost respect."

"The lady shall receive from me all the respect to which she shows herself entitled," Garth said. "Why not make it mutual, all around?"

Lilith Ramill was no less completely outmaneuvered than the engineer. She spoke to her father: "Well, I must say, Dad, if you're letting him order you around, I refuse to stay up and slave all night. Come on."

He crept after her into the brush leanto. Garth at once set to making more catgut. Huxby had gathered a thin padding of spruce tips and moss at the far side of the fire and lay down. Like the girl and her father, he soon fell asleep.

After finishing his first task, Garth tended the fire and added water to the simmering muffle stew. He next began graining the hair from the moose bull hide. He could have stretched out and gone to sleep no less readily than had the chechahcos. On the other hand, he was able to keep awake as long as he wished. He scraped steadily at the coarse moose hair, the while his ears drank in the voices of the Wild.

By the time the sun glared over the jagged crests on the northeast wall of the valley, Garth had the hair grained from both the moose hides. As he started to cut into the larger skin, Miss Ramill crawled from the leanto.

She blinked and yawned, straightened her rumpled sports skirt, and sat down to lace her boots. He gave her a friendly good morning.

"Good? Pah!" she scoffed. "I feel like the morning after. Here I am flat. Not a drop of anything for a bracer; no bath; no clothes or face cream or lotions; no make-up! Not even a cigarette! Yet you have the face to gibe me about it!"

At that, he could not resist giving her the old quip: "Cheer up; the worst is yet to come."

She ignored it to point at the simmering muffle in the gold pan. "Look at that filthy mess; half full of ashes. If you had a spark of decency, you'd throw it out and warm me a pan of water for my face and hands."

He finished the cutting of a moccasin piece before he replied: "In the first place, I'm too busy performing needed work to act as lady's maid. In the second place, that muffle is not filthy. You'll say it's the most delicious aspic you ever tasted. About the rest, douse your head in the rill. That will give you a combined wash and bracer. If you wish a smoke, there's the fire. For cosmetics, I'll soon be making up a batch of grease and pitch mosquito dope. My final dose of frogite went on too thin to last long."

She looked her disgust. "Grease and pitch! When I have a headner?"

"Soon as we start traveling through brush it's a question which will go first, your net or your stockings. Dope doesn't snag on branches, and you'll find it a better cosmetic than rouge and powder."

"Ugh! If I use your nasty dope at all, it will be on my legs."

"No go. You'll be scraping against rocks and running upon snags. Won't have any knees left if you try the Highland style. How about those lynx skins for leggings, along with moose moccasins?"

For the first time since they had met, the girl gave him a genuinely friendly smile. "That's decent of you, Alan. How soon can you make them?"

"Cut me a steak off that nearest leg of moose. While you're cooking it, I'll see what can be done."

When she returned the knife and started to broil the great slab of meat she had sliced off, he laid out the pair of lynx skins. A few knife strokes cut off the great hair-padded paws and slit the legs into thongs. When the girl brought him his broiled moose steak, he showed her how to wrap a skin around each leg like a high-topped legging, tying it with the crossed thongs.

"There you are, Miss Ramill. It's a pair of leggings such as our ancestors wore when they pirated the high seas in viking ships and sailed up the Thames with Henghist and Horsa."

Huxby sat up, blinking. The thin shake-down of moss and spruce tips had done little to soften the stony ground. He rubbed his stiffened back and hips. "Confound those rocks!"

The engineer looked at the partly eaten steak in Garth's hand. "How about breakfast?"

"Help yourself to all you want. Along with your own, you might broil steaks for Miss Ramill and her father. Miss Ramill is about to take a lesson in sewing. She will soon need a pair of moccasins."

The last remark checked the girl's intended refusal. While Huxby sullenly cut the three steaks and started to cook them, she carried out Garth's suggestion to grease her lynx skins with a chunk of fat.

When Garth finished his meal, he threaded a needle with smoked catgut and showed the girl how to sew the thick moosehide. Holes punched with the awl made the work fairly easy. Within a few minutes she caught the knack of handling the awl and needle. Though her stitches were irregular, they promised to hold. He cut out the mate of the first moccasin, and another pair smaller in size.

Mr. Ramill crawled from the leanto, stiff, hungry and irritable. But sleep and the open air had whetted all appetites. As with the broiled liver, the three chechahcos—millionaire, mining engineer and fastidious heiress—went at the hot meat with fingers and teeth. They were down to bedrock—to the fundamentals of living. All the elegancies of civilized eating were absent, even the supposed necessities—forks, plates, seasonings. Yet the essentials remained. They were hungry, and here was food. It was neither as tender nor as savory as had been the liver. None the less, it was food.

At the end of the meal, Garth said that the first need was to fetch in the forelegs of moose. Miss Ramill rose with her father and Huxby.

"Sorry," Garth told her. "Your father needs all the walking he can get. Someone must stay to mind the fire. I might mention there's a shallow rock pool a little way along the bank, beyond those alders. You'd find the water pleasantly warm for a dip."

"Really? That's not so bad."

"Yes. Only be sure to keep the fire going. It will hold off the wolves and wolverines."

Huxby took Ramill's arm and started off with him after Garth. They kept in the rear all the way to the muskeg swamp.

This time, instead of lynx mates, a family of wolves were feasting on the moose meat. As sight of the men, the whole family bristled and growled but started a slow retreat.

"Shoot, Garth!" urged Mr. Ramill. "They're making off."

"Quite all right," Garth replied. "Good thing they're gorged. I might have had to waste cartridges to get rid of them. What I'd like to know is why they chose this solid meat, instead of the offal."

As if in answer to the question, a snarling growl far deeper than that of the wolves came from the border of the muskeg where Garth had killed the bull moose. Up out of the thicket reared a huge gray head. Massive forelegs stroked apart the willow stems with chisel-like claws eight inches or more long.

It was a grizzly—a full-grown ursus horribilis. Garth believed the beast to be as large as those monsters of the same breed that ruled over the southern Rockies and the Sierras in the early days when Indians still were armed only with bows, and the few white hunters carried only muzzle-loading flintlocks.

The ears of the great she-bear were flattened back. Her little pig eyes glared red. The monstrous jaws gaped to let out a roar of defiance that shook the solid ground.

"Good G—d!" Mr. Ramill gasped. "A—a bear!"

Huxby gripped Garth's shoulder. "Shoot, d—n you! Shoot, or give me that rifle!"

"Shut up," Garth ordered him. "That roar is only a warning. She'll not charge if we mind our own affairs. You and Mr. Ramill take hold of that nearest untorn leg and start off, quietly. Don't hurry and don't run."

The cool certainty of Garth's tone compelled belief and obedience even from Huxby. Mr. Ramill was already reaching up for one of the two moose legs that had not been pulled down by the wolves. The engineer hastily turned to help him. As they started off, Garth took the other unmangled leg on his shoulder and sauntered after them.

The grizzly mother had not repeated her roar. Had they run or given any sign of hostility, she would have charged. As it was, she stood, an enormous quivering mass of curiosity, watching their quiet retreat. Her jaws had closed their ferocious yaw, and her ears were no longer flattened back.

Garth's gray eyes twinkled as he glanced back over his shoulder at the huge beast. He could not have asked for a better bugaboo to make his companions behave. Safe out of her sight, he told the two to halt and get the moose leg on a tote-pole. Huxby at once started to curse him for not shooting.

"Go try it yourself," Garth replied, and when Huxby drew away from the offered rifle, he nodded approval. "You are wise not to attack a she-grizzly with cubs."

Spurred on no doubt by the knowledge of that gray monster behind him, Mr. Ramill managed to hold up his end of the tote-pole all the way to camp. There he sank down, purple-faced, wheezing that the exertion had killed him.

His daughter sat by the fire brooding. Though refreshed by her bath in the warm pool, she had begun to feel the craving for drink and tobacco. She had done little stitching on the moccasins. But she livened to horrified alertness when Huxby told about the grizzly.

Garth forestalled an outburst of hysterics. "Keep cool. The old lady will let us alone of we keep clear of her cubs. Keep up the fire, and she will shy clear of you. She doesn't fancy fire. Burnt her paws trying to rob me of a roasting porcupine."

A look at the gold pan showed Garth that the moose muffle had begun to dissolve. He cooled some of the gelatinous broth in the small pot. Mr. Ramill not only gulped down the drink. He smacked his lips and asked for more. At that, both Huxby and the girl were stirred to try the rich drink.

Garth was glad to have all three take their fill of the savory, highly nourishing dish. He knew what was coming. He asked only that the pan be refilled to dissolve more of the muffle.

The three were accustomed to the free drinking of their kind. They had already begun to feel the lack of the usual cocktails, mealtime wines and between-meals whisky. This was aggravated by the lack of tobacco. To ease them as much as possible, he broiled lynx meat on a grating of willow stems, basting it with moose fat. The tender meat kept them occupied until the muffle broth soothed their jangled nerves.

There was a limit, however, to eating, and once its effect began to pass, their craving returned more intense than before. First Miss Ramill, then Huxby, and last of all Mr. Ramill began to make ironical remarks aimed at Garth. He ignored them for some time. The remarks become more offensively witty and sarcastic. He dropped the moccasin upon which he had been sewing, and picked up his rifle.

"I've had enough bitters and sour berries, thank you all. Feed them to yourselves for a while. I'll go get the sleep I missed last night while acting as guardian angel of your sweet slumbers."

CHAPTER V

Mate Woman.

Far up the tundra slope, above the trough of his platinum placer, Garth found a dry moss-bedded nook on the sunny side of a boulder. He lay down, pulled his hatbrim over his eyes, and let himself fall asleep.

A full eight hours later the sun swung around its wide circle until the shadow of the rock fell upon Garth. Roused by the passing of the warm rays, he pushed back his hat and sat up. He came down to the camp. Mr. Ramill sat beside the fire between his daughter and Huxby. Two of three pouches that Garth had hidden under the moss in the leanto lay open before the men.

Miss Ramill was emptying the last contents of the sugar pouch into a pot of thick tea. She was first to see Garth's noiseless approach.

"Hail to the chief," she mocked. "My dear Mr. Garth, you are most fashionably late to dinner. Will you not join us in a cup of tea?"

Her father turned to eye the uninvited guest with a shade of uneasiness. "You see we found what you were holding out on us, Garth. It's the only trick you failed to put over."

Huxby said nothing. He tensed ready to spring up and fight.

Finland's National Bath Is Worth Talking About

In some country districts of Finland, both sexes frequently share the same vapor bath, for preparing the "sauna," as it is called, is an arduous task and the steam for one is enough for several people, according to a correspondent in the Detroit News.

All afternoon the housewife is kept busy heating great stones in the bath house oven. Then when the bather—or bathers, as the case may be—is ready, she throws water over the rocks, so causing the room to fill with clouds of hot steam.

Wishing to make the most of opportunity, Finnish bathers stay on a platform near the roof, where the hottest steam collects. Once perspiration sets in, someone rubs the bather's back with a branch of birch leaves. The aroma from these is quite pleasant and fills the bath house.

After they have steamed well, the bathers like to cool off by taking a dip in one of Finland's many lakes. If there is none nearby, they must be satisfied with a cold shower, or in winter a hurried roll in a snow bank.

The Finns are so fond of their steam baths that farmers often build their bath houses before constructing their home, and all the large cities have public bath houses.

Drowning Persons

It is a common belief that drowning persons rise three times, but according to the United States public health service, it has no scientific basis. Many drowning persons do not come to the surface at all after their first submergence. When a person finds himself drowning he naturally makes a frantic struggle to save his life. In doing so he draws water into his windpipe, which causes him to cough and expel air from his lungs. He then sinks. If all the air is expelled from his lungs he will not rise to the surface at all, especially if he is fully clothed. On the other hand, a drowning person who has some control over himself may sink and rise more than three times before his strength fails completely.

Pheasants Poor Mothers

While the incubator is a satisfactory method of hatching pheasants, the hen has many advantages in caring for the little ones. As mothers, pheasants in captivity leave much to be desired. Instead of worrying with a home and family, the real mothers spend their summer roaming in a large field and "looking pretty."

OVERWORKED

What poets frequently overlook is that you can't make a good poem out of a stale idea; and the subjects of "spring," "summer," "autumn" and "winter" are dripping with stale ideas.

Few things keep them back like a lack of this protective food element.

So give everyone Quaker Oats every morning. Because in addition to its generous supply of Vitamin B for keeping fit,* it furnishes food-energy, muscle and body-building ingredients. For about ½c per dish.

Start serving it tomorrow for a 2-weeks test. Quaker Oats has a wholesome, nut-like, luscious appeal to the appetite. Flavory, surpassingly good. All grocers supply it.

The Loraine Bulldogs have made an impressive record this year for their first appearance in Class B competition. They have not done bad at all, one tie game and two losses thus far.

We have wondered how they could do as well as they have against the heavy odds. Football spirit in the school seems to be sadly lacking. No pep squad has ever made its appearance at any conference game. The band was taken to Roscoe but aside from that no assistance from the student body has been offered the football team.

The Bulldogs will have a better spirit to play the gam if they knou the student body is squarely behind them in their efforts to bring glory to the school. The school should organize a pep squad that will really pep things up at the games, and the band should be taken to every game.

We are sure we all want to see the Bulldogs win. We could help them a lot with our yells and music. Lets get behind them.

They will go to Snyder Friday afternoon of this week for their fourth conference game and they really have a good chance to win the game. They will need our support. Lets all go to Snyder and help them win.

There is quite a lot of discussion pro and con these days about the 18-year rule to be in effect next year in regard to football players in high schools of Texas.

If the rule goes into effect boys who are more than 18 years of age who are attending high school will not be eligible to play football.

There are some arguments, good and bad, on both sides of the question. If the rule goes into effect many schools will almost be without a football team. On the other hand, players in the game will be nearer the same age than they are at present, which might prove to be an advantage to the smaller schools.

Personally this editor is not in favor of the 18-year rule. We believe that a boy who has been delayed in his education for various reasons should not be barred from playing football because he has reached the age of 18. If the rule goes into effect many boys will stop school before they finish if they are not permitted to play football. We believe a boy should be entitled to play football as long as he is in high school if he meets the requirements. There is a rule now, you know, that will not permit a boy to play more than 8 semesters, or during four years of his high school career. We believe that rule is sufficient to take care of the things the 18-year rule is trying to accomplish if properly applied. Schools and coaches who will not regard the 8 semester rule would not regard the 18-year rule either.

Mrs. W. H. Tartt was called to the bedside of her daughter, Mrs. Oscar Mustin, in Snyder last week end. Mr. Tartt and Mrs. Lee went to Snyder after her Sunday.

Loraine Wins From Sylvester

The Loraine Bulldogs defeated the Sylvester Cardinals Friday 12 to 6. The first quarter went scorless then in the second the first touchdown came when Mahon returned a punt. Soon after that Sylvester made a touch down the same way by returning a punt. The third and last touchdown came in the 4th quarter when James run the ball across from the ten yard line making the score 12 to 6.

The Loraine bulldogs go to Snyder Friday Oct 25, for a conference game. This will be a hard game and the team would appreciate it very much if you will go to Snyder with them. They will need all the help they can to win this game.

"Well Begun's Half Done" When Making Your House Frock

There was never a truer phrase than that, and how well it applies here! For before you know it your dress is cut and ready to stitch. This pattern is so easy to follow. There's everything new about the lines of this fetching house frock, with its contrasting surplice facing and doesn't it look like a different dress when buttoned up to the neck see small sketch—with those enormous buttons? When household chores are finished, button up the deep pointed surplice and wear the frock to market. It's smart enough. Try it in colorful novelty cotton or gingham.

Pattern 9614 may be ordered only in sizes 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44 and 46. Size 36 requires 4 yards 36 inch fabric and ¾ yard contrasting. Complete diagrammed sew chart included.

The lady customer entered the store and headed straight for the proprietor.

"You sold me some rotten apples yesterday," she said, "and I'm bringing them back to you."

"That's all right, lady," hastily apologized the merchant. "You needn't have taken the trouble to bring them back. Your word's just as good as the apples."

A Hard Job

"Yes," said the doctor, "you're worrying too much about yourself. The thing to do is to sink yourself in your work."

"Oh," groaned the visitor. "I'm a cement worker!"

National Topics Interpreted

By WILLIAM BRUCKART

NATIONAL PRESS BLDG. WASHINGTON, D. C.

Washington.—It may be, and possibly is, true that the bulk of our people pay little attention to the fact that gold is pouring into the United States in an unprecedented volume. I can understand how the wheat farmer of the plains country or the cotton farmer of the South or any other type of farmer can fail to become excited over the influx of gold in the last five or six months. It appears to be a far cry from the grain fields or the cotton fields or the quarries or the small town to the heavy concentration of yellow metal to which the United States has been subjected. But the link nevertheless exists. It exists as surely and as definitely as night follows day and, therefore, it becomes a subject in which all of us are vitally interested.

Gold Is Pouring In

Since the beginning of September a widespread flight of capital from Europe has manifested itself in the shape of gold exports to the United States. Three or four hundred millions of dollars in gold have landed here in that time. They bring the net inflow of gold for the year well above $1,000,000,000. And, going a bit further, this addition plus another $1,000,000,000 places our gold stocks in excess of $9,400,000,000, or roughly $2,000,000,000 more than was held here when the dollar was devalued under President Roosevelt's instructions.

It seems impossible to attribute this heavy and prolonged inflow to any single cause. Immediately after devaluation of the dollar, there was a steady stream of yellow metal headed for the United States which was due almost entirely to a desire of American holders of gold, temporarily stored abroad, to repatriate. But even in that case, there was a contributory factor to be considered. Monetary manipulation by the American government had a temporary effect on our exports, increasing them to some extent and it was increasing the balance of payments due to this country. So, we find our policies—that is, policies of the Roosevelt administration—responsible for the start of the inflow.

Later, another influence developed. Under the pressure of American monetary policies, foreign powers found their allegiance to the gold standard severely strained. Silver purchases by the treasury had an effect. The combination was primarily responsible for the second rush of gold.

Subsequently, the Italian-Ethiopian controversy began to take serious form and a new flood of gold to America developed. This was different than that which had immediately preceded it because this movement was related to international conditions of a political nature whereas the previous movement had resulted without relation to international strife in a military way but centered wholly upon American monetary policies and their effect upon economic conditions abroad.

Now, let us consider what can happen. Those acquainted with finance recognize in the existence of a gigantic stock of gold—the largest in American history and approximately 45 per cent of the entire world stock—the existence of a potential, if indeed it is not a probable, base for inflation. There is so much gold held by the American government, which holds virtually all of the gold stocks in this country, that no end of paper money can be issued against it. Those who believe in that type of currency policies say that it would be perfectly safe; that the government could pay off dollar for dollar or even more than a dollar for every paper dollar outstanding from the gold it holds. This school of thought contends that there is actually a shortage of money in circulation and insists that this is one reason why the country has not recovered from the depression more rapidly than conditions show. Of course, a cold appraisal of that argument catalogues it as the same old demand for inflation of the currency and everyone knows what inflation will do in the way of wrecking the person who works for wages or whose sole income consists of a compensation delivered to him in the form of weekly, semi-monthly, or monthly pay checks. The size of that check never has and never will catch up with the increase in prices which that individual must pay to live.

What Can Happen

Then, there is another potential danger in this tremendous horde of gold. It is in many ways similar to that which I have just related. It is, however, more of a psychological condition than the first. I refer to the attitude usually adopted by those who pull for inflation when they see a government possessed of vast stores of precious metals.

• • •

In this instance, the tangent of inflationist sentiment is joined with the sponsors of the silver buying program. They see all of this gold and silver and they simply cannot resist the opportunity for continued howling. Their speeches and their conversations are almost like a college yell: "We want more money," the more money which they desire being nothing more nor less than currency run off in the printing presses of the great bureau of engraving and printing in Washington.

'We Want More Money'

Whether it is the first or the second type of inflation that is demanded, weather it is the printing press money or the money issued against gold as security, the results are the same. It is to be remembered in this connection that none of us can obtain gold from the treasury. The Roosevelt administration demanded of and obtained from congress legislation which definitely prohibited payment of gold for monetary use by the treasury under any circumstances except for the settlement of balances owed foreign nations. But that fact has not deterred demands by inflationists. They are calling and will continue to call for more paper money, and with every call the prices you pay for commodities are bound to increase—that is, they will increase until or unless there is a release of gold again for circulation as money.

So, it is quite apparent that as long as this influx of gold continues and as long as other nations are harassed by monetary manipulation in the United States, we are continually threatened with a "business boom" which is nothing less than inflation of credit. The real danger confronting this country, then, lies in that direction. Summarized, the threat is this: If that inflationist "business boom" gets started, no power on earth is able or will be able to stop it. The next and final step after that is complete destruction of our currency, and medium of exchange.

Stirred by Hoover

Political developments in the last few weeks have been completely dominated by the splurge of activity on the part of former President Herbert Hoover. His pot shots at the New Deal in several speeches have agitated the Democrats much more than they are willing to admit and, notwithstanding assertions of satisfaction, they have thrown a new fear into the laps of the Roosevelt New Dealers.

But, if the Hoover speeches have excited the New Dealers and the conservative Democrats, they have almost precipitated a riot among the Republicans of whom he must be said to be, at least, the titular leader. The bulk of the Republicans look upon Mr. Hoover, because of these recent speeches, as a potential Republican nominee for the Presidency against Mr. Roosevelt next year. They look upon him, further, as an individual who is likely to disrupt plans that contemplate reconciliation, a love feast, among the various factions of the Republican party. They have been struggling to lay a base for this love feast and because of the intense hatred that some of their number have for Mr. Hoover, his activity has opened this breach again, made it a blood-red wound.

Political observers and commentators have shown all manner of excitement because Mr. Hoover has made no statement whether he will or will not be a candidate for the Republican nomination. In plain words, they have been trying valiantly to conduct a campaign that will smoke out Mr. Hoover and make him say whether he is or is not a candidate.

All of the efforts to find out what Mr. Hoover proposes to do have failed and will continue to fail, even with the underground work of the New Deal, to bring from him a statement as to his purposes. He will announce them in his own good time and his statement will be definite when it is made.

Personally, from all of the information I have been able to assemble, I do not believe that Mr. Hoover has any intention of seeking the nomination. I am convinced his purpose is directed wholly and completely to one end: he fears the New Deal and he is trying with all of the power that he possesses to acquaint the country with his views which are obviously in opposition to the theories and policies and experiments of the New Deal. From sources which I consider to be faithful, because they always have been accurate heretofore, it is apparent to me that Mr. Hoover desires to lend his help in acquainting the country with the things in the New Deal which he regards as dangerous to our nation's well being and that beyond such a purpose he is content to enjoy life as a fisherman and vacationist.

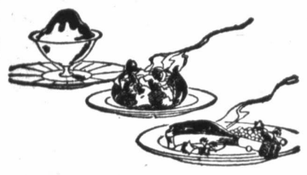

But there is another phase of this situation which seems to me to warrant consideration. While some of the anti-Hooverites have been denouncing him, even calling him names under their breath, Mr. Hoover has done the Republican party a big favor. By his attacks on the New Deal; by his condemnation of the things in it which he regards as certain to be destructive; in short, by his activity which many construe as a campaign for the nomination, he has made the Republicans conscious of the job they have to do. He has awakened them and has put fight into them which three or four short months ago did not exist.

Forgotten Hospital, Complete, Is Found

Forgotten for half a century, a hospital has been found on the seacoast of Denmark, and government officials are considering what to do with it. It was built in 1879 for cholera patients, there having been a cholera epidemic in Europe and a recurrence was expected. Soon after the opening a sailor believed to have had the dread disease, was admitted. He proved to have nothing worse than measles. No other patients came, and the place was closed and forgotten.

A young journalist found the hospital, with everything complete, from beds ready to use, to medicines and salt cellars containing salt put there 54 years ago. The discoverer has suggested that it be converted into a vacation resort for poor children of Copenhagen.—Montreal Herald.

Get Rid of Poisons
Produced by Constipation

A cleansing laxative—purely vegetable Black-Draught—is the first thought of thousands of men and women who have found that by restoring the downward movement of the bowels many disagreeable symptoms of constipation promptly can be relieved. Mr. J. P. Mahaffey, of Clinton, S. C., writes: "I have found that Black-Draught is very effective in the cleansing of the system. When affected by the dull headache, the drowsiness and lassitude caused by constipation, I take Black-Draught." A natural purely vegetable laxative.

Watch Your Kidneys!

Be Sure They Properly Cleanse the Blood

YOUR kidneys are constantly filtering waste matter from the blood stream. But kidneys sometimes lag in their work—do not act as nature intended—fail to remove impurities that poison the system when retained.

Then you may suffer nagging backache, dizziness, scanty or too frequent urination, getting up at night, swollen limbs; feel nervous, miserable—all upset.

Don't delay! Use Doan's Pills. Doan's are especially for poorly functioning kidneys. They are recommended by grateful users the country over. Get them from any druggist.

what Irvin S. Cobb thinks about:

Gray Ghosts.

SANTA BARBARA, CALIF.—Wearing uniforms of weathered gray, the shades of several ancestors came to me as I slept and wanted to know if it was true that practically all the old-line Republicans in New England were ready to spring to arms against the New Dealers in defense of the sacred doctrine of states' rights.

I said such was indeed the case, and they said if those d—n Yankees had only seen the light a heap sooner, the Cobb family would've been saved a lot of bother, in 1861 and wouldn't have gone busted in 1865.

Irvin S. Cobb

I told them there had been no noticeable change since '65—the Cobb family was still busted. So they faded away.

I thought it might have been a dream, but when I woke up there still lingered the faint ghostly aromas of bourbon toddies and fried ham.

The President's Proclamation.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT started something with his proclamation warning United States citizens off ships belonging to the warring nations, following the one against selling to either of them munitions or deadly arms. The second order disappoints the thousands of tourists, especially those from the southern states, who'd arranged for winter cruises aboard Ethiopian boats, and the earlier one was a serious blow to those American producers who'd counted on selling Italy increased stocks of her favorite weapon. I refer to our garlic growers.

Think of all that stuff piling up in the warehouses over here and not nearly enough gas masks to go around! And, with the supply cut off, think of the defenseless populace over there! The last time I was in Naples, about every other person I met either had eaten too much garlic or not enough. And when I moved on to Rome, I appreciated the old saying, "When in Rome be an aroma." Still I must admit that I now feel toward garlic as I do toward our celebrated California climate—I like it, but not to excess.

Uncle Sam and Sanctions.

ALL we have to go by are the dispatches, which may be wrong; but if I were an Italian out in Ethiopia and a fortune teller had said to me lately, "I seem to see you going on a long journey where you'll meet some dark stranger who will be very antagonistic," I know I'd be homesick and I reckon probably I'd start doing a little serious thinking.

And if I were Mussolini, I'd be saying to myself that maybe I made a mistake by not considering the example of another great champion, John L. Sullivan. Any time the prospect was for a close fight, John L. drew the color-line.

And if I were Uncle Sam—as indeed, in our small ways, we all are part of him—I'd answer those mashnotes which will be pouring in pretty soon, bearing foreign postmarks, by stating that I positively was not going into the "sanctions" business. The name may be new, but the smell is both reminiscent and suspicious. In fact, it's the same old smell.

The Head That Wears a Crown.

WHAT with one of the leading movie families having what delicately is known out here as a rift, the dispatches from Greece just did make the front pages of some of the papers. This is the center of the rifting industry, and the daily quotations are eagerly followed.

The news must've created a stir, though, in Europe, which is dotted with many an "ex," marking the spot when a bounced monarch landed. Any revival in the king business, which for years was so sluggish, will be welcomed by interested parties. I seem to hear Wilhelm telling the hired girl to get the crown off the parlor whatnot and give it a wipe.

Still, King George might do well to book return passage before heading for Athens to remount the skittish throne that bucked him off once. Except when running restaurants, the Greeks are great hands for switching around.

A Pocketful of Change.

MR. HOOVER says that, at the end of this administration, our unpaid government obligations will exceed thirty-five billions, whereupon Senate Leader Robinson indignantly shrieks that, on June 30, 1936, the total national debt will approximate only thirty billions, seven hundred and twenty-four millions and some odd change.

But to any orthodox member of the last congress, what's a mere bagatelle of four or five billions? The boys toss those trifles off the same as Detroit batting in runs in the ninth inning of a world's series game. And anyhow, doesn't it still give us six full months next year to overtake the Hoover estimate? Why, it'll be like taking candy from a taxpayer.

Lesson for October 27

BELSHAZZAR'S FEAST
(Temperance Lesson.)

LESSON TEXT—Daniel 5:1-31.

GOLDEN TEXT—Wine is a mocker, strong drink is raging; and whosoever is deceived thereby is not wise. Proverbs 20:1.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Daniel Solves a Riddle.

JUNIOR TOPIC—At the Feast of Belshazzar.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—What Drink Leads To.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Facts About Alcohol.

I. Belshazzar's Impious Feast (vv. 1-4).

1. Those in attendance (vv. 1, 2). Those present were Belshazzer, his wife and concubines, and one thousand of his lords.

2. Their behavior (vv. 3, 4).

a. They drank wine and engaged in drunken revelry.

b. They committed sacrilege. They drank wine from the sacred vessels taken out of the temple at Jerusalem.

c. They worshiped idols.

II. The Handwriting on the Wall (vv. 5-16).

1. The time of (v. 5). It occurred "in the same hour" in which they were engaged in their drunken debauchery.

2. The effect upon the king (v. 6). "The joints of his loins were loosed, and his knees smote one against another."

3. The king's behavior (vv. 7-16).

a. He called for the astrologers and soothsayers, offering them rewards of gold and of position (vv. 7-9).

b. Daniel brought in at the suggestion of the queen (vv. 10-16). The queen was perhaps the wife of Nebuchadnezzar who remembered Daniel's service in interpreting the dream of her husband.

III. Daniel Interprets the Writing (vv. 17-28).

1. Daniel's address to the king (vv. 17-24).

a. He brushes aside his promised gifts (v. 17). He would not have his speech limited by the king's gift.

b. He reviewed before Belshazzar the history of Nebuchadnezzar (vv. 18-24). He showed clearly that Belshazzar should have profited by the experiences of his father.

2. The interpretation of the writing (vv. 25-28).

a. "Mene" means "numbered" (v. 26). "God hath numbered thy kingdom and finished it."

b. "Tekel" means "weighed" (v. 27). "Thou art weighed in the balances and art found wanting."

c. "Peres" means "divided" (v. 28). "Thy kingdom is divided, and given to the Medes and Persians."

IV. The Judgment Executed (vv. 29-31).

So rapidly did the divine judgment fall that Belshazzar was slain and Darius the Median took the kingdom that same night. The Chaldean dynasty ended with Belshazzar. We may, therefore, interpret this whole scene as pointing to the conditions at the close of the time of the Gentiles, and as adumbrating their prevailing conditions. Let us note

1. The stupidity of men. Belshazzar, like people today, did not learn by example. Nebuchadnezzar's fate should have deterred Belshazzar.

2. The magnificent splendor. This great feast was characterized by pomp, display and parade. How characteristic of our own age!

3. Luxury. The famous hanging gardens of Babylon were a noteworthy example. Signs of luxury abound today on every hand.

4. The licentiousness of the king with his many wives and concubines. Licentiousness is likewise notoriously prevalent today.

5. Blasphemous sacrilege. The sacrilege of this day may be in excess of that of Belshazzar's day and expresses itself in a. A profession of religion for pecuniary gain, social and political preferment.

b. The use of the pulpit of the Christian ministry for notoriety and even for the propagation of false doctrine.

c. Uniting with the church and attendance at the Lord's table so as to cover up secret sins.

d. The use of the Word of God to give point to a joke.

e. Denying that the Bible is God's Word, making it a book of errors, myths, and legends.

f. Sneering at the virgin birth, repudiating Christ's deity and setting aside his vicarious atonement.

6. Drunken carousals. The handwriting is on the wall. His judgments shall eventually fall. Conditions in the world indicate that the time is drawing near. Are you ready?

Flourished 4000 B. C.

The people who lived on the mound Iepe Gawra—14 miles from the Biblical city of Nineveh—flourished at about 4000 B. C., in the dim twilight of history, says the Philadelphia Record. At the time they were making their painted pottery and carving obsidian, the ancestors of the Greeks were crouched in caves during their own Stone age and only savages were living in the Americas. It was 800 years before the Egyptians would begin to think of piling stone on stone to form pyramids.

Records of Bible Confirmed

Scientific Research, Aided by Spades of Explorers, Afford Positive Proof of Truth of Events Chronicled in Sacred Writings.

A. B. COOPER, in the London (Eng.) Magazine, Answers.

The essential truth of the Bible is not dependent upon the accuracy of its history, and there are many passages in the Sacred Writings which must be interpreted in a symbolic rather than a literal sense.

It is remarkable, however, how Old Testament history, after being labeled as "legendary," or, at best, "exaggerated," has recently been confirmed as a result of independent research.

For instance, a little while ago, destructive critics simply laughed at the story of the Flood, and at such incidents as the crossing of Jordan dryshod and the collapse of the walls of Jericho. But today excavations on ancient sites in Palestine, Egypt, Mesopotamia, and elsewhere have vindicated the Bible narrative completely, even on the points most seriously challenged.

To take an example, it used to be urged that Abraham must have been merely a nomad, quite unlettered, and utterly incapable of the acts and words and vision attributed to him.

We now know, from discoveries at Ur of the Chaldees, that, as a youth in that city, he was a member of a community enjoying a high degree of civilization. The land of Ur had great cities, settled laws, a state religion, a thriving commerce, schools and monasteries and libraries.

Springing as he did from an influential family, Abraham would partake of the culture and learning of Ur. In short, the circumstances of place and time as we now know them, are not opposed to the Bible narrative.

But let us see what modern methods of investigation have revealed about specific incidents. Take the Flood, upon which so much scorn has been cast. During the winter of 1928-9, the excavators of Ur in Babylonia came upon a stratum of alluvial deposit which made a clear break in the succession of civilizations occupying that site. They came to the conclusion that it could only be explained by a flood of great extent and duration, occurring about 3000 B. C. or earlier.

So, quite apart from the account in Genesis, and the one on the Babylonian tablets in the British museum, it would appear that the account of a great flood, which destroyed cities and people over a vast region, is not legend but history.

The very existence of Sodom and Gomorrah, which the Bible tells us were destroyed in Abraham's time, has been doubted, yet, only last year, an airman flying over the Dead sea saw through the crystalline water what appeared to be extensive ruins. Further investigation is to be made. But other ruins have been found, covered with ashes, in the neighborhood of the Dead sea.

We learn from the Bible that Lot, Abraham's nephew, chose the valley of Sodom because of its extreme fertility. Today there is, perhaps, no more desolate region.

What happened to it? In the heavily bituminous soil there probably occurred one of those terrible explosions and conflagrations which have been noted in the similar geological formations of the oil districts of North America.

In such soil vast reservoirs of oil and accumulations of gas occur. These may suddenly be released either by their own pressure or by earthquake. The gas explodes and flings up masses of oil which return in a fiery rain which will go on blazing even when it falls on water.

Saline mud may also be ejected, and these things combined render a fertile land utterly barren. Such a phenomenon would account for all the statements in the graphic Bible narrative.

Now turn to Joshua 3:14-17 in the Revised Version, in which is related how Israel crossed the Jordan dryshod. Moffatt translates: "The waters that flow down stopped and were dammed up at a distance at Adam, while the waters that flow to the Salt sea were cut off and failed." Adam was a city 14 miles upstream.

Here there is a ford now known as Jisr ed-Damieh, and during the earthquake period of 1927 the west bank of this ford collapsed, and part of the cliff so dammed the Jordan that no water flowed down its bed for 21 hours!

On three occasions during comparatively recent times a similar result has ensued from great falls of rock and earth. It seems likely that some similar event took place when Israel crossed the river on their way to Jericho.

There followed immediately the much-discussed and often ridiculed collapse of the walls of Jericho. Professor Garstang, who is still occupied on this site, says: "There remains no doubt that the walls of the city fell outward so completely that the attackers were able to clamber up, and over, the ruins into the city." He suggests an earthquake as the possible cause, and earthquakes have occurred in this region recently.

Readers of the Bible know that, although the Israelites had large initial successes in their invasion of Canaan, they failed to subjugate the whole land, and the Jebusite city, which was later known as Jerusalem, held out until the time of David. It was exceedingly small compared with the modern city, occupying the summit of a great rock called Ophel, the area being not more than some ten acres.

When David invested it, the inhabitants felt so secure that they said the blind and lame could hold it against him. David said: "Whosoever smiteth the Jebusites let him go up the watercourse" (A. V. gutter).

It used to be understood thus: Whoever smites the Jebusites let him hurl into the watercourse (i. e., down the precipice) the lame and blind.

Then excavation takes place and makes the whole thing simple. "Warren's shaft," named after the excavator who discovered it, provided the key to the city.

This "shaft" had been constructed to form a safe, sheltered way down to the "Virgin's Well," from which water was drawn during a siege. So what David said in effect was this: "What we have to do is to climb into the city by way of the water shaft."

The appearance of Joab and his companions took the garrison completely by surprise, the city fell, and became the nucleus of Jerusalem, the City of David.

These examples suffice to show how notably the Bible narrative is being confirmed by records long hid in the depths of the earth and now being revealed by modern research.

Disreputable Starling Enemy of Jap Beetles

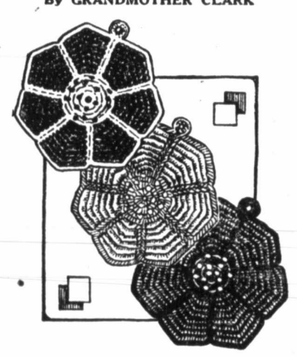

The aggressive European starling may be an undesirable alien because it befouls buildings and parked automobiles, but it is a first-class fighter against the destructive Japanese beetle, according to the biological survey, United States Department of Agriculture.

Food-habit experts of the bureau have found the starling one of the most effective of the bird enemies of this pest of early ripening fruit, corn, and truck crops. In one locality 14 out of 23 starlings collected had fed on Japanese beetles. In some instances nearly all the birds' food was from this source. In certain limited localities starlings are known to have reduced the population of grubs of the beetle from 100 per square foot to 5 or 6.

The starling, however, says the biological survey, is only one of 17 bird species in whose stomachs Japanese beetles are found. The other birds are the ring-necked pheasant, bobwhite, eastern kingbird, crested flycatcher, common crow, catbird, brown thrasher, robin, wood thrush, English sparrow, meadow lark, red-winged blackbird, purple grackle, cardinal, vesper sparrow, and song sparrow.

CROCHETED FLOWERS FOR POT HOLDERS

By GRANDMOTHER CLARK

Pot holders crocheted with heavy string are very practical and when made in flower forms are really lovely. They are heavy enough to protect the hands without requiring padding. These three pot holders are crocheted in the same manner but in different combinations of red, yellow and green. The petals are crocheted separately of one color and then slip stitched together and finished in contrasting colors. Size when finished about six inches.

Instruction sheet No. 731 with illustrations and instructions how to crochet these holders, also how to arrange the colors, will be mailed to you for 10 cents. Material can also be bought from this department. Information and price are given when mailing instructions.

Pretty Brave

Sol. J. Lupoff, a passenger on the liner Dixie, which stranded on a reef off the coast of Florida, went back to New York with mingled feelings about women. What puzzled Lupoff was that the women were scared as they wore awkward life belts and braced themselves against slipping furniture, but they continued to dab their noses with powder and apply lipstick.

How Calotabs Help Nature To Throw Off a Bad Cold

Millions have found in Calotabs a most valuable aid in the treatment of colds. They take one or two tablets the first night and repeat the third or fifth night if needed.

How do Calotabs help Nature throw off a cold? First, Calotabs is one of the most thorough and dependable of all intestinal eliminants, thus cleansing the intestinal tract of the germ-laden mucus and toxines. Second, Calotabs are diuretic to the kidneys, promoting the elimination of cold poisons from the system. Thus Calotabs serve the double purpose of a purgative and diuretic, both of which are needed in the treatment of colds.

Calotabs are quite economical; only twenty-five cents for the family package, ten cents for the trial package. (Adv.)

And Wait

A woman's promise to be on time carries a lot of wait.

Nature an Artist

When nature beautifies the face she puts the color in the right place.

If you feel tired, run-down, nervous and out of sorts

—there is usually a definite reason for this

Now let's reason sensibly.

Don't try to get well in a day . . . this is asking too much of Nature. Remember, she has certain natural processes that just cannot be hurried.

But there is a certain scientific way you can assist by starting those digestive juices in the stomach to flowing more freely and at the same time supply a balanced mineral deficiency the body needs.

Therefore, if you are pale, tired and run-down . . . a frequent sign that your blood-cells are weak—then do try in the simple, easy way so many millions approve — by starting a course of S.S.S. Blood Tonic.

Much more could be said—a trial will thoroughly convince you that this way, in the absence of any organic trouble, will start you on the road of feeling like yourself again.
