

Clements says Reagan has no energy policy

ABILENE, Texas (AP) — Oilmen will suffer if President Reagan dismantles the Department of Energy, leaving them to contend with a maze of federal agencies that have failed to produce a coherent energy policy, says Gov. Bill Clements.

Reagan's proposal to kill the Department of Energy is "crazy," since the department was created to simplify processing of regulatory questions through 37 different federal institutions.

In an interview with the Abilene Reporter-News, Clements said that he told Reagan, "In my judgment, the Reagan administration does not have an energy policy. If you disagree with that, tell me what it is."

He said Reagan did not answer. Clements, a wealthy oilman, said he has watched the progress of every president since Lyndon Johnson. There is no more of an energy policy now than there was "under LBJ in the '60s," he said.

"That's a hell of an indictment," Clements said. The governor said, however, that the Department of Energy could probably become more efficient if it were to cut its manpower by half. He said poor management also is a legitimate complaint.

Clements said the department has failed to give enough support to the federal synfuels corporation, which was created to develop synthetic energy sources. He added that more nuclear power plants should be constructed.

"We let Jane Fonda just stop us dead in our tracks," he said.

Clements also said he agrees with Reagan's concept to transfer social programs to states' responsibility, but wants to see the program in its final form.

"We're a long way from that finished piece of paper on

Mr. Reagan's desk for him to sign," he said.

He predicted that Arkansas would sell surplus floodwaters from the southwest corner of the state to help solve Texas' long-range water needs.

Arkansas Gov. Frank White's press secretary said Monday that the long-standing opposition to selling Arkansas water to Texas has not changed.

"There is no such thing as surplus water in Arkansas," said Barbara Pardue.

Clements was in Abilene to address the West Central Texas Oil and Gas Association.

Reagan sets new skirmish over budget

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, back in Washington after a West Coast mini-vacation, is renewing the campaign for his unpopular 1983 budget plan before an unlikely group of skeptics — 53 Republican senators.

But despite fresh conciliatory statements from presidential aides, congressional and White House officials alike say they don't expect any compromise spending plan to emerge from Reagan's trip to the Capitol today.

The president was meeting first with the Senate GOP leadership and committee chairmen and then with all 53 Republican senators.

Reagan, whose visit to the Senate is described by a spokesman as a "friendly neighborly gesture," repeatedly has invited Congress to make deeper cuts in domestic spending than he recommended.

But so far he has shown little willingness to accept changes in either the 3-year tax cut legislation approved a year ago or his proposed Pentagon buildup.

But spokesman Larry Speakes, talking to reporters Monday, appeared to open the door to at least some reduction in the defense budget.

"If we cut defense, we can't cut it where it would be misused by the Russians, and that's the president's key point," he said.

"Any major cut in defense would send the wrong signal as far as our nation's determination to rebuild our national defense."

And presidential counselor Edwin Meese III told reporters that Reagan has "already indicated that he's pretty flexible on most everything except the two fundamental areas, taxes and defense."

But Meese also specifically declined to "speculate" about the defense budget — apparently leaving the door open to some reduction.

"What's a compromise? Everybody knows that the final budget that is signed will not be the same budget, item for item, that he submitted," Meese said.

In advance of today's session, the Republicans' assistant Senate leader, Ted Stevens of Alaska, predicted that Reagan will agree to compromises "including defense and including revenues and including normally sacrosanct areas such as entitlements."

But Stevens, appearing on the CBS-TV "Morning" program, said he expects there will be "very little" deleted from the president's proposed defense budget.

Speakes, however, said this morning the president "really is firm on no cuts in the defense program."

"He will certainly look at suggestions," Speakes said.

Reagan's 'love affair' with big business going bankrupt

By OWEN ULLMANN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — During its first year in office, the Reagan administration had a non-stop love affair going with big business. Now, budget-deficit worries have taken the bloom off the rose for business and wounded administration officials are reacting like jilted suitors.

Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan — a member of Wall Street's elite before coming to Washington —

reportedly is furious that a prestigious business group has suggested that scheduled tax cuts for individuals this year and next might be eliminated to pare the giant deficits President Reagan is proposing.

The Business Roundtable, whose members include chief executive officers of 200 of the nation's largest corporations, are unwilling, however, to sacrifice any of the massive tax cuts for businesses and wealthy individuals that the administration and Congress gave them last year, Treasury officials grouse. Aides report that Regan, former chairman of brokerage giant Merrill Lynch and Co., has expressed outrage in private that after all the administration has done for his former business world colleagues, they act like fair-weather friends. He complains that as soon as times get rough they're ready to abandon the heart of the president's economic program — the three-stage, 25 percent cut in individual tax rates through 1983.

"Exceeding greedy," is how one

Treasury official described the Business Roundtable's position. "Arrogant," charged another official.

If big business is so worried about future deficits, Regan told some Roundtable members, perhaps the administration should seek a rollback in some of last year's business tax breaks. Or, perhaps the administration should go after the wealthiest individual taxpayers by reversing the reduction in the top income tax bracket from 70 percent to 50 percent, which went into effect Jan. 1.

The Roundtable members didn't like that idea, according to the Treasury officials, who talked only on the condition their names not be used.

Some Regan aides want the Treasury secretary either to lash out publicly against the business group or to try to persuade it to switch its position on the tax issue, which was communicated privately to the White House last week but never formally announced in public.

Roundtable spokesman James Keogh would not comment on administration accounts that leaders of the group suggested a postponement of the 10 percent individual tax cut scheduled for July 1983, and possibly even a deferral of the 10 percent cut due this July.

Keogh said the group was not yet prepared to go beyond a statement it issued last week saying that "it will be necessary to address the revenue side" of the budget.

The Treasury Department, meanwhile, is growing frustrated that business is not using its new tax breaks to invest in new factories and jobs.

'Scuffle' described as testimony begins

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

A longtime friend of Robert James "R.J." Morris Sr. testified in Midland's 238th State District Court on Monday that Morris and a fellow he was shooting craps with on the night of Morris' death last Nov. 14 had gotten in a scuffle after Morris referred to Booker T. "Billy" Green, 42, as a "boy."

Green is charged with murder in the shooting death of Morris, 50.

"Whatever the bet was, R.J. won the bet" and picked up $800 off the table in the gaming room of King's Sandwich Parlor at 301 S. Lee St. in southeast Midland, testified the state's first witness, Yancy Abner Batie.

"He reached across and got the money," said Batie. "He had it in his hand and started talking gambling-shack talk," as was the custom of a winner in a betting match, said Batie, 57.

"We use vulgarly just to make a point," he explained. "The winner always talks."

Batie said Morris, with whom he had gambled and associated for years, apparently wanted to start another dice game. He said about 10 people were around the table.

"He (R.J.) said, 'You boys get your money down, and let's bet. I've got plenty of money, and let's bet.'"

BATIE, WHO was questioned by prosecutor Marian Bentley, said Green reacted to the "you boys" reference by Morris.

"He (Green) told R.J. he wasn't a 'boy.'"

Batie indicated that Morris was proud of his win at dice.

"I've got plenty of money, and I don't have to work for it," he quoted Morris. Earlier testimony noted that Morris, who first moved to Midland about 30 years ago, had advanced from a waiter at the Petroleum Club of Midland and waiter and bartender at other places to a successful businessman in The Flats, the business core of the black community in southeast Midland.

Batie said Green and Morris got into a verbal bout until "Billy (Green) hit R.J. in the jaw." A scuffle ensued but soon was broken up. Morris left the gaming room, as did his son, Robert J. "Bubba" Morris Jr.

In cross-examining Batie, defense attorney H. Thomas Hirsch delved somewhat into R.J. Morris' background. Morris opened the Porters and Waiters Restaurant, now known as R.J.'s Real Pit Bar-B-Q at 2301 E. Kentucky Ave., came into other property, a "lavish" home and other houses, and the M&M Liquor store building where he was felled by one of five shots from a rifle. R.J. Morris' son operated the liquor store.

"Not only was he a gambler, he was a bootlegger," Hirsch asked Batie. "Was he selling whiskey after hours?"

"Yes," responded the witness. Hirsch surmised that R.J. Morris "got money" by "gambling, bootlegging and who knows what."

THE DEFENSE attorney focused his questioning on the night of Nov. 14.

Oil prices may be lowered unless OPEC cuts output

NEW YORK (AP) — Gasoline prices will continue to fall unless OPEC countries, already painfully short of cash because of the world recession, can agree next week on a further oil production cutback of 15 percent, analysts say.

World oil prices have been falling because of weak demand, prompting American oil companies to cut wholesale gasoline prices by up to 8 cents earlier this month and touching off scattered gas wars at the retail level.

Saudi Arabia said it cut production by 1 million barrels a day on March 1. And OPEC's president, Sheik Mana Saeed Oteiba of the United Arab Emirates said last weekend the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries would "defend ... against all pressure attempts aimed at reducing the organization's official prices."

"I don't think they're going far enough to make a big difference for now," said James Bock, an international economist at Standard Oil Co. (Indiana).

Analysts see little chance that prices will stabilize in coming weeks unless Saudi Arabia wins agreement from other members at their March 19 meeting to cut their production as well. That is because demand for oil remains weak due to recession in the industrialized West.

Without more widespread OPEC production cuts, the Saudi action will be diluted by other members seeking to sell more oil to increase their export incomes.

"It's going to take something pretty dramatic to reverse the situation," said

Stephen A. Smith, director of energy services at Data Resources Inc., an economic research firm. He estimates excess oil supplies on world markets at 600 million barrels, far above normal levels.

Smith believes the Saudis will "pull out all stops" to defend the current benchmark price. He said several OPEC members would have to join Saudi Arabia in cutting production by a total of at least 3 million barrels a day from the group's current estimated output of 20 million.

CLEVELAND (AP) — The United Rubber Workers union doesn't intend to make concessions and wants "responsible" wage hikes for its workers, but its president expects successful negotiations with three tire companies now at the bargaining table.

"We're not going in here with the intention of talking about concession," URW President Milan Stone said at the beginning of negotiations Monday. "The companies we are talking about have made reasonable profits."

Talks began Monday in Cleveland with the nation's No. 2 tiremaker, Firestone Tire & Rubber Co., and in Columbus with B.F. Goodrich Co., the No. 4 firm.

Negotiations were to begin today in Dayton with Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co., the No. 1 tiremaker.

Stone, the new chief of the 140,000-member URW, said that nothing less than "responsible" wage hikes, cost of living increases, improved job security and other benefits would be acceptable to the union in a new three-year pact.

He predicted that the talks will go to the April 20 expiration of the current pact but said he expected an agreement. He gave no details on wage demands for the 45,000 workers covered under master pacts with Goodyear, Firestone and Goodrich.

Ralph Elfert, a vice president and top negotiator for Firestone, said it was too early to speculate on what his company will ask in return for any wage hikes.

Elfert said Firestone managers already have talked with URW locals about changes the company feels may be necessary. He declined to elaborate and officials in Cleveland and the other negotiating points clamped what they called a "news blackout" on the talks.

In a climate of slumping auto industry sales, analysts say the talks are likely to be protracted, although both management and labor leaders have said they are aiming to avert a walkout.

If a contract is tentatively agreed upon with one of the three firms, it normally is accepted by the others.

In 1979, however, Uniroyal Inc. agreed to a pact and then reneged on implementation, bringing on a six-week URW walkout that both sides said should not have occurred. In 1976 there was a 141-day URW strike.

Tire workers at the big firms earn an average of $11.50 an hour plus $6 to $8 an hour in benefits.

They come to the bargaining table at a time when the union has lost about 35,000 members from 14 tire plant closings and layoffs during the past three years and when foreign firms have stepped up competition.

General Tire & Rubber Co., the No. 5 firm, begins talks with the URW in April for a pact that would begin May 15.

Uniroyal, the No. 3 tiremaker, negotiated a three-year, $54.9 million package of give-backs from the union last December. In return, the URW gained increased job security, the right to address the company's directors and the right to look at the firm's books.

O'Neill harsh on Japanese automakers

DETROIT (AP) — As the United Auto Workers began drafting a plan to shore up American Motors Corp., House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. took a sharply divergent approach on help for the ailing auto industry and called for an embargo of Japanese imports.

"If I were president...I'd fix the Japanese like they've never been fixed," O'Neill said Monday in an unusually harsh speech. "I would put a moratorium on automobiles, an embargo on automobiles."

The Japanese have voluntarily limited auto exports to the United States, but the U.S. government hasn't restricted imports even though American automakers claim that foreign competition is hurting sales.

Leaders of the United Auto Workers union agreed Monday in Milwaukee to open negotiations with AMC on an updated proposal for the company's hourly workers to lend the ailing automaker $150 million.

In the first direct meeting with company officials since the proposal was offered in November, AMC Chairman W. Paul Tippet Jr. outlined the proposal to a delegation of 50 UAW officials headed by union President Douglas Fraser. The union officials agreed to negotiate with AMC but rejected the company's investment plan.

Union leaders then gathered to draft a counter-proposal, but Fraser said he was not sure when an alternate plan might be ready.

Company spokesman Richard MacCracken said AMC is willing to begin negotiations immediately, adding talks might begin in earnest this week.

Chinese mine cave-in reportedly kills 284

PEKING (AP) — Unsafe mining methods brought a mountain down on the town below it nine months ago, killing 284 people in one of China's worst mine disasters, a weekly newspaper seen in Peking today revealed.

The March 5 issue of the Law News disclosed the disaster in an article calling for stricter safety regulations for the mining industry. The government issued new regulations Sunday and ordered mine officials to make personal underground inspections.

The newspaper said the mining town of Yan Chi, in central Hubei province, was buried by a million cubic meters of rock when the mountain above it collapsed early on the morning of June 3.

The site is near I-Chang, just below the Yangtze

River Gorges, one of the scenic wonders of China.

The Law News gave this account of the tragedy:

"The mountain was being mined for salt and phosphorous and was honeycombed with tunnels.

"Cracks appeared in the mountainside, and the night before the collapse a concerned person telephoned the assistant to a high-ranking mine official

was imminent. "He was told: The old fellow is over 60 years old. We will deal with the problem tomorrow."

Bendix purchase revealed

SOUTHFIELD, Mich. (AP) — The Bendix Corp. said Monday it has purchased at least 5 percent of the voting shares of RCA Corp. and may buy as much as 9.9 percent.

The Southfield-based company said it purchased the RCA shares for investment purposes only and has no plans to acquire, merge or reorganize RCA.

"RCA is basically a fine company with good core strength in its high technology activities," said William M. Agee, Bendix' chairman and chief executive officer. "We are encouraged by the recent statements of management about its plans and directions and believe they could lead the company along a fine future path."

Henry Bechtold, RCA's staff vice president for news and information, said Monday night: "I don't know about it at all."

However, the New York Times in Tuesday's editions quoted an RCA statement as saying: "The purchase of RCA stock by Mr. Agee's Bendix is not welcomed by RCA."

Bendix said it will file a statement with the Securities and Exchange Commission advising that it owns more than 5 percent of RCA Corp.

Cessna announces cutbacks

WICHITA, Kan. (AP) — Citing a slump in retail sales of propjets, the Cessna Aircraft Co. has announced a temporary production shutdown of two plane models and the upcoming layoff of about 1,000 workers.

"We regret having to take this action," Russ Meyer, Cessna chairman and president, said Monday. "But the market for propjet aircraft has deteriorated more rapidly than we anticipated during the last few months."

The production halt March 22 of Conquest and Corsair propjets will involve about 1,000 workers at the company's Wallace Division in Wichita.

'Candy Man' continues to profess his innocence

By JAMES R. KING
Associated Press Writer

HUNTSVILLE, Texas (AP) — Even the hardened convicts on death row, all condemned for murder of one kind or another, were repulsed by Ronald O'Bryan's crime. They taunted him as "the Candy Man" and refused to associate with him when he arrived.

That was 7½ years ago. Today, O'Bryan says he has no trouble getting along with the others, whose memories of the Halloween crime may have faded with time.

Most of the 165 men on death row arrived after O'Bryan was already here, and may not be fully aware of what happened on that rainy Thursday night in Deer Park, Texas, Oct. 31, 1974.

FOR THAT MATTER, no one, except perhaps O'Bryan himself, has all the answers about that night — and if he knows, he intends to take the information to the grave with him. For he insists to this day that he is innocent of fatally poisoning his 8-year-old son, Timothy. He vows he will not change his story at his hour of execution.

"My last words would be no different than what I've said all along — I still maintain my innocence," the slightly overweight, 6-foot-tall convict said in a recent interview at the Ellis Unit of the Texas Department of Corrections where condemned men are housed.

So far, O'Bryan's appeal has gone all the way to the U.S. Supreme Court. Not only was it turned down each step of the way, in one rejection a Texas appeals court judge wrote, "A more calculated and cold-blooded crime...can hardly be imagined."

The jury foreman at O'Bryan's trial said the evidence that the Deer Park optician murdered his son and intended to poison his daughter too in hopes of collecting more than $60,000 in life insurance policies was "overwhelming."

SINCE THEN, O'Bryan has had one execution date, Aug. 8, 1980, but his court-appointed attorneys won a stay to give them time to prepare a new appeal.

O'Bryan, 37, claims he did not know that the "Giant Pixie Styx" he fed his son that night was impregnated with cyanide. Prosecutors said he put the poison there himself.

The chilling story shocked the nation and scarred the Houston suburbs of Pasadena and Deer Park, where it ended the tradition of "trick or treating" for a time. Even today, neighbors say, only newcomers dare let their children knock on strangers' doors on Halloween night.

O'Bryan was at home alone with his kids, Tim and 6-year-old Elizabeth, after having taken them on a trick-or-treat outing that night. O'Bryan's wife was away visiting a friend.

Earlier, O'Bryan had promised his youngsters one piece of Halloween candy each if they behaved. Now they were in their pajamas, ready for bed, and it was time for the payoff.

O'Bryan held the brightly colored plastic straw and watched as the powdered candy poured into the boy's eager mouth. O'Bryan told a detective when the candy stopped coming out, he rolled the straw between his hands to prompt out the last bits. Tim complained the last gulp did not taste good, so O'Bryan gave him some Kool-Aid to wash it down. The little girl, who is now 13, did not eat her Pixie Styx.

TIM GOT SICK at once and collapsed in his father's arms. The cyanide in the candy in the straw swiftly attacked his heart and central nervous system. He fell into a coma and died within an hour after arriving at a hospital.

O'Bryan, who was troubled with mounting financial debts but had recently enhanced life insurance policies on his children, figured he was $31,000 richer.

He says the circumstantial evidence against him was all a coincidence or he was sentenced to death. She told jurors she knew nothing about the $20,000 extra life insurance on the children O'Bryan had bought less than a month before Tim's death.

"She has come (to death row) twice, when I first got down here, with two specific purposes about property. She wanted me to sign property to her. That's all," he said. He said he has not seen his daughter since his arrest.

"She was 6 when this happened. I send her birthday cards, Christmas cards — several cards each year, and I don't even know if she gets them. The initial ones I sent in care of my wife were returned to me," O'Bryan said.

O'Bryan's ex-wife has since disappeared from the public eye to escape the notoriety of her ex-husband.

"I know where she is. She's doing fine, raising her daughter. That's all I want to say about it," said Jim Bates, 40, the neighbor who was with O'Bryan the night the two men chaperoned their children on the fatal trick-or-treat outing along the tree-lined streets of a quiet Pasadena neighborhood.

BATES TESTIFIED it was toward the end of the outing that O'Bryan began handing out the poison-filled candy straws.

Things in the community have not been the same since.

"It's become an entirely different neighborhood, and we date it from that period," said Carolyn Melvin, who still lives in the house on Donerail Drive where O'Bryan said a man with a hairy arm handed him the deadly straws.

Bates said O'Bryan lingered in the shadows of the Melvins' front porch after the children had rung the doorbell, gotten no response and run to the next house. O'Bryan then alighted from the darkened porch holding the straws, Bates testified.

Mrs. Melvin said she was at home at the time, but had run out of candy and had stopped answering the door. Her husband, Eugene, has hairy arms, but he was at work that night at Hobby Airport, as several co-workers testified.

Bates said he harbored private suspicions of O'Bryan at the boy's funeral on Saturday just two days later, but O'Bryan was not arrested until the following Tuesday.

IN THE MEANTIME, "Everyone wanted everyone else in the neighborhood to be guilty," Mrs. Melvin said. "It really caused hard feelings. There are very few of the original families still here."

But the Melvins and the Bates have stayed. They have remained friends through the years, perhaps drawn closer because of the bizarre crime that threatened each of them for a time.

lies told by witnesses who were coerced by detectives anxious to find a "scapegoat" for the sensational crime.

Old dilemma takes on new dimensions

By KATHY BAKER
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Texas Court of Criminal Appeals Judge Truman Roberts has frequently dissented when his colleagues affirmed death sentences. But he said there were times during his career as a trial judge when he could have executed the criminal himself.

"I never had to sentence anybody to death," Roberts said in an interview at his office in the Texas Supreme Court Building.

"But there were several cases, about three — where female children were abducted and brutally raped — I could have pulled the switch on one of those guys and never looked back."

WILL GRAY has spent about 25 years of his life battling capital punishment. Currently, the Houston defense lawyer has more than two dozen clients on death row, cases he took on appeal after the money ran out and earlier lawyers dropped their cases.

"I don't think it's right," Gray said. "Most of them up there on death row can't hire lawyers and had court-appointed lawyers. There's nothing fair about it. I just think it's wrong."

Gray and Roberts are only recent voices of an old dilemma — between society's need to protect itself from brutal criminals who show no hope of reform, and a belief that if society says murder is wrong it should not itself murder in the name of justice.

BUT ARGUMENTS for and against the death penalty easily leave moral ground and head for more practical territory.

The margin of error in our present legal system haunts many attorneys, including Houston defense lawyer

Percy Foreman.

"The law should not take away from any individual anything that the law cannot restore upon proof of error," the 79-year-old attorney said in an interview. "A man once executed is executed for good."

One defense lawyer tried — unsuccessfully — to overturn his client's death sentence on grounds execution would deny him a constitutional right to seek recovery for false conviction.

A question that Bishop Vincent Harris of Austin once posed to a legislative committee has been used by defense attorneys quizzing potential witnesses in capital murder trials — "Wouldn't you rather see a thousand criminals go free than to see one innocent person go to the electric chair?"

In a recent capital murder trial in Houston, jurors uniformly answered

"yes," then sentenced the attorney's client to die.

BUT FORMER Harris County District Attorney Carol Vance turns that argument on its head. "I would rather save an innocent life by putting somebody guilty to death," he said from his private law office on an upper floor of a Houston skyscraper.

"When a person determines to take another human being's life, where there is no reason — it's not in the heat of emotion, satisfies no reason, it's just pure meanness or lust — when it's under those extreme circumstances, he's really made the decision. He's forfeited his own life," Vance said.

Foreman said it's not that simple. "Life is too precious to be at the disposition of an individual, whether he be vested with some official title or otherwise. The Scripture does not say 'thou shalt not kill, except in groups of 12.' It simply says 'thou shalt not kill.'"

After the U.S. Supreme Court overturned the death penalty in 1972, Texas came up with a new law that applies only to murder and only in five specified types of cases. And after conviction, before recommending a death sentence, jurors must answer "yes" to three "special issues," including whether the defendant is likely to commit a violent crime in the future.

THOSE NEW CONDITIONS satisfied the U.S. Supreme Court, and in 1976 they upheld the law.

But Gray says the law still is not fair. "The procedure in Texas is geared to produce the death penalty in these kinds of cases," he said. "Proportionately more of the people who receive the death penalty are blacks and Mexicans. All these Anglos (jurors) think they're more likely to commit crimes of violence to start with."

"So they've got two strikes against them going in. It practically guarantees the death penalty for anybody who's black or Mexican."

Roberts says he gives jurors more credit than that.

"I think most juries are very, very careful," he said. "They've got to get down in their consciences."

Texas Department of Corrections officials say the present ethnic makeup of death row inmates is 52 percent white, 37 percent black and 11 percent Mexican-American.

BUT THE JUDGE does agree that the "future dangerousness" issue is a touchy one.

"I can't ever see putting a person to death on the basis of some psychiatrist going in and interviewing somebody and testifying that this person is likely to commit crimes of violence in the future," he said.

After the Supreme Court's 1972 decision, many Texas law officers decried the ruling as an invitation to criminals.

"This means amnesty for callous killers now under sentence and a license for future killers to prey upon society with impunity," said then-Fort Bend County Sheriff R.L. "Tiny" Gaston.

He was not quite right. Most of the death row inmates had their sentences commuted to life. Others got new trials, but none was simply released.

"I think it's pitiful," said then-Harris County Sheriff C.V. "Buster" Kern. "It's going to cause crime to increase. A lot of people, if they knew they were facing the electric chair, would think a long time before pulling the trigger."

Cody friend may lose pension

CHICAGO (AP) — Helen Dolan Wilson, a key figure in an inquiry into Cardinal John P. Cody's finances, may lose a pension from the Archdiocese of Chicago if it is proved that documents making her eligible were falsified, an insurance company official says.

The Chicago Sun-Times has reported that Mrs. Wilson, a lifelong friend of Cody, 74, is receiving $300 a month from the archdiocese on the basis of allegedly falsified records.

Donald Alspaugh, vice president of corporate communications for Aetna Life Insurance Co. of Hartford, Conn., said Monday Mrs. Wilson's payments may be cut off if the company determines its contract with the archdiocese was violated. Aetna administers the pension.

Alspaugh said Mrs. Wilson is receiving two church pensions — one from the Archdiocese of St. Louis where she worked from 1944 to 1969, and one from the Chicago archdiocese. The Sun-Times reported that documents were falsified to indicate that Mrs. Wilson worked for the Chicago archdiocese from 1944 to 1968, making her eligible for a pension.

The newspaper also said documents from the Chicago archdiocese indicated Mrs. Wilson had a peak salary of $12,000 a year, more than was paid to all but a few top church officials. As a result, the newspaper said, she receives a pension larger than that due to almost any other retired church employee.

The pension plans for both the Chicago and St. Louis archdioceses were drawn up by Mrs. Wilson's son, David, 47, an insurance agent and broker, the Sun-Times said. The St. Louis plan was set up in 1963, while the Chicago plan was set up in 1966, the newspaper said.

Electric customers save with lamp replacement

An act as simple as replacing fluorescent lamps may save Texas Electric's commercial and industrial customers between 15 and 18 percent in lighting energy without loss of light level, thanks to a new company program begun this month.

Replacing those lamps also can help slow the rate of growth in peak load demand on the company's electric system. This reduces the need for construction of expensive new generating capacity, thereby benefiting all of Texas Electric's customers.

The six-month program provides incentive payments to commercial and industrial customers who replace existing standard fluorescent lamps with specific reduced-wattage lamps.

Customers will receive a payment of 60 cents to $1 from Texas Electric for each program-approved lamp, depending on size, to help offset the higher cost of the new energy-saving models. In addition to saving on the replacement costs, these customers will benefit from the electricity savings during the expected life of the lamps.

For example, it would cost a customer about $400 for 240 of these new lamps. Texas Electric will pay the customer $144 in incentive payments, for a net cost of $256. In one year, the customer would save about $260 in electricity costs — more than paying for the cost of the new lamps. Since the lamps have an average life of about 20,000 hours, the customer would save a total of about $2,000 over the life of the 240 lamps.

While a customer must purchase a minimum of 24 lamps to take advantage of the program, many could replace far more. The customer's savings will increase in direct proportion to the number of lamps that are changed.

Texas Electric also has begun a commercial air conditioning and heat pump program, which offers incentive payments to commercial customers who replace worn-out central electric refrigerated air conditioning units with high energy efficient central air conditioners or heat pumps. This also reduces the rate of growth in demand for electricity and lessens the need for building expensive new generating capacity.

Under this program, Texas Electric will pay commercial customers $150 for each kilowatt the new unit removes from the company's peak summer load.

If, for example, a customer has a five-ton central air conditioning unit that has a 9.5 kilowatt load, and replaces it with a high-efficiency five-ton unit with a 7.5 kilowatt load, Texas Electric will make a $300 incentive payment to help offset the higher cost of the high-efficiency unit.

Payments for the installation of a central heat pump are determined in the same manner, with a $200 payment per kilowatt saved.

Texas Electric also offers incentive payments ranging from $30 to $75, depending on the size of the unit, to commercial customers who install high energy efficiency room air conditioners or room heat pumps. These also reduce the rate of growth for electricity, conserve energy and save on operating costs for customers.

These programs complement similar air conditioning and heat pump programs Texas Electric has for its residential customers. During the past 10 months, the residential program has resulted in a reduction of 7,661 kilowatts in the system's load.

Additional information on all these programs may be obtained by contacting Texas Electric.

Former Nazi dies in California

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — A former German SS captain who voluntarily surrendered his U.S. citizenship last year after a Justice Department probe of his Nazi past has died in a Sacramento hospital.

Otto von Bolschwing, 72, died Sunday at American River Hospital in Sacramento. He had been suffering from "supra nuclear palsy," a rare and incurable brain disease.

Von Bolschwing, who emigrated to the United States in 1954 and became a naturalized citizen in 1959, had claimed he was a double agent during World War II, aiding American Army intelligence units as he held a series of sensitive high-ranking posts in the Sicherheitsdienst, the elite SD foreign intelligence arm of the SS.

Same song, second verse

The international propaganda machine that heralds communist conquests is being cranked up to sweeten American public opinion for the take-over of El Salvador by a Soviet-backed regime.

There are familiar charges, villains, heroes, fantasies. They look familiar because the scenario is being handled by the same slick types that "sold" the United States on communist expansion in Cuba, North Vietnam, Laos, Cambodia and Nicaragua.

The villains are El Salvador's centrist government and national guard, which are resisting the Soviet-backed forces, and the U. S., which is providing aid.

The heroes are the Soviet-backed forces. They are portrayed as nice guys, peasants, decent folk. In truth some are. But there are also the tough, hard-core, Moscow-trained, Kremlin-controlled communist cadres that will bully their way into absolute power as they always do when the time is ripe.

They employ the strategy used by Lenin in the spring, summer and fall of 1918, grabbing the nerve-centers and force-controls, communications, arsenals, food warehouses, transport terminals, media and, most vital, top command of the police and armed forces. That is how minority dictatorship captured the popular Russian revolution in November 1918 and set a pattern used from then on to spread communist totalitarianism.

It was used after World War II to communize Hungary, Romania, Bulgaria, Czechoslovakia and Poland. Nicaragua is seething in the same pot. It awaits El Salvador.

Some officials of the United Nations, a harbor for spies and agents, appear to be a part of the international propaganda fiction-lizing the El Salvador war. They keep accusing government forces of "political killings." But there is a war on. Usually when people are killed in a war they are called "war casualties."

There are no reports of "war casualties" from the partisans filling their stories from El Salvador. It is curious. Here is a long, fierce, bloody war for control of a country and there are absolutely no "war casualties." Why? What propaganda value is there in plain old "war casualties?"

"Political killings" are "human rights violations" and these are sins of which the Salvadoran junta is guilty. Never mind millions upon millions of ongoing human rights violations in Poland, Afghanistan, Cambodia, Laos, Vietnam, Czechoslovakia, Hungary, Romania, Bulgaria, Albania, Latvia, Estonia, Lithuania and the Soviet Union itself.

Never mind the Soviet ground forces, air and naval bases, missiles, arsenals, gulags and aggression-training camps that appear in countries taken over by the Soviets and their surrogates.

If what is being written and said about what is happening in El Salvador sounds familiar, it is because it has all been written and said before for the same reason — as a diversion from an act of Soviet expansion by military force.

Bubble machine stops

Wunnaful, wunnaful. The bubble music of Lawrence Welk has been taped for television for the last time, ending a show biz career that dates back almost 30 years.

There will be reruns, of course. The Lawrence Welk Show will join such goodies but oldies as "M.A.S.H.," "Hogan's Heroes" and "I Love Lucy."

Welk has long been the favorite of the Geritol Set, who knew they could tune him in for good, wholesome entertainment.

When he first made the airwaves, Welk still was playing the accordion, fingering the keyboard and directing the orchestra with "And a-one, and a-two." In recent years he stuck to directing, ending the show each time with a little ballroom dancing.

Born near Strasburg, N.D., Welk left the home of his German parents, knowing little English. He often made mistakes in front of his audiences, choosing the wrong words, but people laughed with him instead of at him.

His music will continue to give pleasure.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Israelis: Khadafy not a madman, but ...

WASHINGTON — There is a tendency in Washington to refer to Libyan dictator Muammar Khadafy glibly as a crazy man. Armchair psychologists justify the label by pointing to his fanatic extremism, his failure to put realistic limits on boastful pronouncements, and his periodic fits of deep depression, when he retreats to the desert and broods in a tent.

But beyond the egomania that afflicts most political leaders, is Khadafy mentally aberrant? Is he truly deranged?

Israeli intelligence is a highly respected group of professionals with a particularly keen interest in the Libyan strongman. Khadafy's oil billions, combined with his implacable hostility toward Israel, make him in many ways the most dangerous of all that beleaguered nation's enemies. It is vital for the Israelis to know whether they are dealing with a madman.

After years of research, picking the brains of medical experts to assess the information gathered by their agents, Israeli intelligence officials have compiled a psychological profile of Khadafy. My associate Indy Badwar has seen a copy.

The Israelis' conclusion is that Khadafy is not crazy. Representing him as mentally ill "is of no help to an understanding of him and does not fit the facts," the secret profile concludes.

Among the juicier suggestions in the various intelligence reports analyzed by the Israelis was that Khadafy's behavioral quirks were the result of brain damage from venereal disease. But the profile says this possibility cannot be verified. "Apart from mental problems that could be associated with syphilis, there is no evidence that Khadafy suffers from symptoms matching the disease."

There have been reports that Khadafy suffers from schizophrenia, paranoia, hysteria and serious psychoneurotic disturbances. But the profile concludes: "Available evidence is insufficient to confirm or deny indefinitely whether he has a mental illness ... There is much information about his strangeness, lack of stability and emotional disturbances ... (and he) does apparently suffer from a psychological disturbance that can be characterized as a character disturbance."

But the analysis points out that Khadafy "has been functioning as the leader of Libya for 12 years, and it is difficult to believe that a man suffering from manic depressive psychosis would be capable of withstanding the pressures that he has been under for such a long time and with such stability, without our being witness to repeated outbreaks of illness."

Khadafy's mercurial temper and bouts of the blues may be partially explained by the man's catalog of painful physical ailments. He had tuberculosis as a child, underwent an appendectomy in 1970, and reportedly suffers from a stomach ulcer, gallstones and kidney colic — enough to make anyone moody and irritable.

It is also quite possible that Khadafy's "strangeness" — to Western eyes at least — is simply the result of his personal background. A shepherd boy who was 16 before he completed the sixth grade, he had a dream of Islamic revolution and pursued it with single-minded zeal.

Khadafy is a Bedouin, born when his father was in his late 60s and the other male offspring in the family were dead. The family lived a nomadic existence, and Muammar was 9 before his father hired an itinerant teacher, who taught the boy to read and write and to recite the Koran by rote.

Young Khadafy's schooling was continually delayed by his duties as a shepherd. But while working his way slowly through high school, the future dictator immersed himself in politics. He studied the works of Michelle Aflaq, Marxist founder of the Baath party, as well as Sun Yat-sen, Kemal Ataturk and Abraham Lincoln.

By the time Khadafy was 16, his charisma and revolutionary fervor had made him a leader. Copying the successful methods of Egypt's pan-Arab revolutionary leader, Gamal Abdel

Nasser, Khadafy sought power through the military. He persuaded his schoolmates to enroll with him in a military officers' school, and they managed to win over successive classes of cadets to their cause. His small and trusted corps of loyalists were pledged to overthrow King Idris and fight for Arab unity.

By 1969, the young rebels were ready to strike. The royal authorities knew the revolution was imminent, and who the leaders were. In fact, orders went out to arrest Khadafy, but the bickering, indecisive officials of the king's government failed to carry out the orders.

The "Free Officers Movement" — the logical culmination of Khadafy's high-school nucleus of revolutionary zealots — overthrew King Idris by an Arabian Night's ruse. They invited the king's police to a party and at the peak of the festivities, took them prisoner. At the age of 27, Muammar Khadafy, the Bedouin shepherd, became ruler of Libya, eager to make his youthful dreams of glory come true.

WHO'S NEWS: Gerard Lougie, a 35-year-old Executive Office mail clerk, suffered a disabling injury in an automobile accident several years ago. But despite his handicap, he is regarded by co-workers as the most dedicated member of the staff. For example, on Jan. 13, when Washington was crippled by a snowstorm, a plane crash and a subway derailment, Lougie spent the night at the office to make sure he'd be on hand for the morning mail delivery. Now the administration budget-cutters have lopped Lougie off the payroll. His colleagues have circulated a petition asking that he be spared.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Tuesday, March 9, the 68th day of 1982. There are 297 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history: In 1661, Cardinal Mazarin died in France — and Louis XIV began personal rule.

On this date: In 1566, David Rizzo — confidential secretary to Mary, Queen of Scots — was murdered.

In 1846, the Treaty of Lahore ended the first Sikh War in India, and Britain gained additional territory.

In 1980, U.S. government auditors concluded that a worldwide computer system built to warn the president of enemy attack was prone to break down under pressure.

Ten years ago: Clifford Irving's purported autobiography of billionaire Howard Hughes was officially discredited as Irving, his wife and his researcher were indicted on criminal charges.

Five years ago: About a dozen armed Hanafi Muslims invaded three buildings in downtown Washington, killing one person, and taking more than 100 people hostage.

One year ago: Convicted murderer Steven Judy was executed in Indiana's electric chair for the 1976 murders of a woman and her three children. Judy had refused to appeal his sentence.

Today's birthday: Mystery writer Mickey Spillane is 64.

Thought for today: Think wrongly, if you please, but in all cases think for yourself. — Gotthold Lessing, German dramatist (1729-1781).

Asner passed line to help U.S. enemies

Some of you may recall that I pointed out U.S. support of El Salvador would afford you an opportunity to watch the Soviet Union activate its net of Communists, leftists and dupes in the United States.

The process is well under way. Ed Asner, the leftist actor who plays Lou Grant on television and is currently president of the Screen Actors' Guild, has launched a fund-raising campaign for a million dollars worth of medical supplies to send to the Marxist guerrillas in El Salvador.

Americans should not tolerate this kind of behavior. If Asner doesn't agree with U.S. policy, he is certainly free to speak out against it, write his congressmen, and send a Mail-gram to the president.

Like Jane Fonda, however, Asner is crossing the line from merely disagreeing with his own government to actively supporting the enemies of freedom.

The guerrillas in El Salvador are openly supported by the Soviet Union, Fidel Castro's government, the Palestine Liberation Organization and the U.S. Communist Party. Those four organizations have never in their entire history supported anybody anywhere who was not Communist. No half-intelligent person could possibly believe the guerrillas in El Salvador are anything but Communist or at least Communist-controlled.

The Communists, of course, are peddling the same line of fertilizer they always peddle to gullible Americans. That the target government is nasty and corrupt and the guerrillas are just poor heroic peasants who desire freedom.

After hearing this line of bull and then seeing what the heroic peasants actually did once they got in power in Cuba, Vietnam, Cambodia, Laos and Nicaragua, you would think no American over six years old would fall for it. P.T. Barnum, however, said there was a sucker born every minute and unfortunately he was talking about America.

Asner is a long-time leftist and working hard to radicalize the Screen Actors' Guild. Apparently the Hollywood southpaw crowd has been so encouraged by the stupid public acceptance of Jane Fonda that they are crawling out of the woodwork and redoing Hollywood in pink and red.

Asner actively supported the air controllers' strike and maneuvered the Screen Actors' Guild into withdrawing an award they had planned to give to President Ronald Reagan, himself a former SAG president.

Asner, like Fonda, is cynically using his celebrityship and capitalist earnings to screw the very people and the very system which have elevated him from an anonymous nobody to a famous face.

When a congressional committee attempted to look into cocaine use among celebrities, Asner led the charge in screaming McCarthyism.

Well, if you let him and others get away with this, you deserve the fate you will receive if Asner and Fonda's friends ever gain control of this country — a labor camp or firing squad.

If you have any sense of self-preservation, you will actively oppose those who cross the line from honest dissent to active support of your enemies.

You can do this in Asner's case by writing CBS Television, 51 W. 52nd St., New York, N.Y., 10019, and telling them you intend to boycott the Lou Grant Show and its sponsors so long as Asner continues to appear on it.

Don't try to separate Asner's talent as an actor from his poison politics. He doesn't, but he's counting on you to be stupid enough to do it, just as millions have been stupid enough to support Jane Fonda, who was saved from an indictment for treason only by the absence of a declaration of war.

INSIDE REPORT:

Reagan quietly cracks down on frivolous travel abroad

WASHINGTON — President Reagan has quietly cracked down on frivolous travel abroad in costly government-owned airplanes by high- and middle-level bureaucrats. His personally-signed order was written with the help of national security adviser William P. Clark.

It reminded touring bureaucrats that "such travel ... is in itself a part of our foreign policy" and must be "for specific reasons which are consistent with our overall national security policy," limited to "as small as possible" a number of officials.

The crack-down is overdue. To police non-essential travel in the future, the president will insist that "with as much advance notice as possible," the itinerary, names of officials, objectives of the trip and list of "events, meetings and appearances" must be given to Clark for advance approval.

Thorne G. Auchter as head of the Occupational Safety and Health Administration (OSHA) unless he rescinded politically-embarrassing job reductions in Rhode Island.

Auchter's plan to downgrade OSHA's Providence office and remove more than half its employees was strenuously opposed by Republican senator John Chafee of Rhode Island, a long-time supporter of the controversial agency. Chafee was outraged. Reagan aides, no friends of OSHA, worried that the rebuff would undermine Chafee's prestige in his re-election bid this year in heavily-Democratic Rhode Island. In the eyes of the White House, that danger was magnified by the increase in OSHA staffing in neighboring Massachusetts, where Sen. Edward M. Kennedy also faces re-election this year.

Auchter refused to change his plans. His boss, Secretary of Labor Raymond Donovan, refused to intervene. It was then that presidential aides told Auchter, a building contractor from Jacksonville, Fla., who is new to politics, that he would be fired unless plans were changed. Auchter promptly restored Rhode Island's OSHA contingent.

NIXON'S ADVICE

Former president Richard M. Nixon has passed this advice to the White House: Send out both Vice President George Bush and Rep. Jack Kemp on nationwide barnstorming tours as twin — and competing — Republican point men for the 1982 campaign.

It is a typically-Nixonian solution to the lack of a Republican tough guy to scourge the Democrats this year, in the mold of Vice President Spiro T. Agnew in 1970 and Vice President

Richard M. Nixon in the 1950s. Bush is a "good guy," clearly not cut out for hatchetman.

So, Nixon told a presidential aide, why not use Kemp (another "good guy") and Bush, potential future rivals for the Republican presidential nomination? The news media could be counted on to join in the contest of determining which one did the best job.

SEEKING A SENATOR

New York state Republican leaders are talking about ex-Treasury secretary William Simon and present Housing and Urban Development secretary Samuel Pierce as possible recruits to take on Democratic senator Daniel Patrick Moynihan this year.

Simon, a New Jersey resident though his office is in Manhattan, is being boosted by Nassau County Chairman Joe Margiotta. Other Republican leaders may ask the White House to prevail on Pierce, a prominent New York City lawyer, to come home and run against Moynihan.

Both Simon and Pierce (who is black) are longshots. The talk about them reflects growing concern in Republican circles. State GOP Chairman George Clark has privately given up trying to talk businessman Lewis Lehrman into running for senator instead of governor. Clark grumbles that the White House and Senate give much lip service to pushing Lehrman into the Senate race but have yet to lift a finger toward that end.

NO HOSTAGE SENATOR

National Republican political operatives have lost interest in recruiting diplomat Bruce Laingen, senior official among the American hostages in Iran, for Senate candidate in Maryland.

"He's just too diffident," one well-placed GOP tactician told us. "Diffidence may be admirable in some fields, but not for a political candidate." The complaint is that Laingen for months had every opportunity to pin down the Republican nomination by announcing his candidacy, but instead has professed self-doubt and displayed timidity.

A footnote: The principal announced candidate against liberal Democratic senator Paul Sarbanes is Lawrence Hogan, controversial county executive in suburban Prince Georges County, adjoining Washington. Hogan trails Sarbanes but is considered a possible winner because of support, shown in the polls, from conservatives, blue-collar workers and — surprisingly — blacks.

Guatemalan opposition calls rally

GUATEMALA CITY (AP) — With the government's military candidate for president leading by 46,000 votes, two of his civilian opponents called on the public to demonstrate today in Guatemala City's main square to support their charges of vote fraud.

Gen. Angel Anibal Guevara held his lead all day Monday but apparently was not going to get the majority needed for election. The outgoing congress then will decide between the two top candidates, and since it is dominated by the rightist government coalition, Guevara's election appeared certain.

With 578 of 889 polling places reporting, the former defense minister had 176,825 votes, or 37.4 percent, the Electoral Council reported.

Mario Sandoval Alarcon of the ultra-rightist National Liberation Movement was second with 130,043 votes, Alejandro Maldonado Aguirre of the center-right Christian Democratic-National Renovator coalition had 117,544, and Gustavo Anzueto Vielman of the Authentic Nationalist Center was a distant fourth with 48,196.

Sandoval Alarcon and Maldonado Aguirre held a news conference Monday night to air their charges that the voting Sunday was rigged by the military-dominated government. They demanded a new election within 60 days and called on the public to support them with a demonstration late this afternoon.

"We together represent the majority of the Guatemalan people," Leonel Sisniega Otero, Sandoval Alarcon's vice presidential candidate.

He said they expected Anzueto Vielman to join them in their protest.

Guevara, supported by the Institutional Democratic Party that has ruled Guatemala since 1970, the Revolutionary Party and the National Unity Party, said the charges of fraud were the usual complaints of losers.

"Those who lose always speak of fraud ... if they have proof let them present it," he said.

Besides choosing a successor to President Gen. Fernando Romeo Lucas Garcia, who was barred by the constitution from re-election, the voters also balloted for the vice president, 66 members of congress to take office July 1 and municipal officials. No returns from those races were available yet.

It was believed fewer than 1 million of the 2.3 million eligible voters cast their ballots, but there was no indication of the voter turnout.

The leftists boycotted the election, saying their candidates would be killed by right-wing death squads and the voting was a rigged farce to provide a facade of support for the government.

The United States indicated a clean election could influence the resumption of arms aid to the government, which was suspended in 1977 because of the country's human rights record. Church and human rights groups estimate that 300 people a month were killed in 1981 in left-right political violence, and 500 in January 1982.

Hatfield says he prefers talking

By BARRY SCHWEID
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A powerful Senate Republican says he will try to block all U.S. military aid to El Salvador unless there is a "good-faith" effort to negotiate an end to the conflict in the Central American country.

The challenge comes from Mark Hatfield of Oregon who, as chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee, is in a pivotal position to interrupt administration support for the junta in San Salvador.

Hatfield, who takes a skeptical view of weapons sales everywhere, said, "I am trying to avoid unnecessary bloodshed. I am also trying to avoid handing El Salvador over to (Cuban President) Fidel Castro."

Aides said Hatfield would make his move on the Senate floor and also in the Appropriations Committee, which is considering the administration's request for $100 million in military aid for El Salvador for the fiscal year beginning Oct. 1.

"For every gun, helicopter or transport vehicle we send to El Salvador, the insurgents gain another sympathizer," the senator said in a statement Monday night.

Earlier Monday, five House Democrats introduced legislation to prohibit all further military aid to El Salvador and to force withdrawal of U.S. military advisers there.

And in the Senate, Democratic Leader Robert Byrd

of West Virginia introduced legislation to require the president to obtain specific authorization from Congress before sending any U.S. combat forces to El Salvador.

Libyan president meeting Habib

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — U.S. special envoy Philip C. Habib met for 90 minutes today with President Elias Sarkis in another attempt to head off fighting between Israel and the Palestinians of southern Lebanon.

Habib flew to Lebanon from Israel. As is his practice, he said nothing about the progress of his mission.

Lebanon's state radio said the American trouble-shooter will later confer with Prime Minister Shafik Wazzan and Foreign Minister Fuad Butros.

Israeli officials said Monday that Habib appeared confident that there would not be an outbreak of fighting between Israel and the Palestinians, and felt that his mission had been accomplished.

Last July, Habib helped mediate a truce to end two weeks of cross-border fighting between Israel and the guerrillas of the Palestine Liberation Organization. The two sides have been accusing each other of planning renewed attacks, and Habib came on his fifth Mideast shuttle in a year to pacify the situation.

Habib has traveled to Saudi Arabia, Jordan, Syria and Egypt and has made several stops in Israel and Lebanon on his latest tour.

Secret Solidarity meeting revealed

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Solidarity leaders still at large met secretly and called for passive resistance to martial law but offered to negotiate with the Communist government if it allows Lech Walesa and other interned union leaders to join the talks.

Sources whose previous reports have been accurate said the clandestine meeting last week was attended by the few members of the independent union's 107-member national commission who have not been interned.

The sources refused to disclose the exact date of the meeting, its site or the roster of participants. They revealed what was discussed on condition they remain anonymous to protect their safety.

Most Solidarity activists have been interned since Premier Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski declared martial law and suspended the union on Dec. 13.

Justice Minister Sylwester Zawadzki told a news conference Monday that 245 Poles have been sentenced to prison for organizing or leading strikes since the military crackdown.

He also indicated that Walesa might not be allowed to attend the christening of his new daughter on March 21 in Gdansk. Walesa's wife, Danuta, told reporters last week he would be there.

Martial law regulations "do not anticipate christenings or other family events like that," the justice minister said in reply to reporters' questions. "People interned may be released only in cases of death among closest relatives."

Commissioners deny request for TV cable franchise, deals with varied other issues

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

A television cable company was shocked into the reality of free enterprise on Monday in a Midland County Commissioners' Court meeting, a former commissioner was lauded for his library support, a plat was approved in burgeoning Midland County, and a group of landmen were allowed to party at the Midland County Exhibit Building.

Dust Bowl TV Cable Co. was thwarted in its attempt to get a franchise to string TV cable on utility poles in the Greenwood area.

"There's definite need for it out there," William L. Berry, who was representing Dust Bowl, told the commissioners. "We'd like to get a franchise."

County Judge Bill Ahders said that wasn't likely. "We can't give franchises...by law," the judge said. "There's no way," allowed Commissioner Win Brown, "to keep competition out; you're just going to have to work harder than they (other cable companies) do."

On a more elevated plane, the commissioners adopted a resolution praising Charles Fredrick Henderson, a commissioner in the mid-1950s, as "The first friend of the library" and for support of the Midland County Public Library, which was built in 1957.

Henderson, a geologist and independent oil operator, died at age 69 last January.

The resolution was submitted by Joan Baskin, chairman of the library's Advisory Board.

"Mr. Henderson was instrumental in organizing not only the Friends of the Library, but also the Advisory Board, itself," he resolution reads. "The present library owes its very existence to his efforts and determination. His vision, coupled with his optimistic enthusiasm, gave Midland County Library direction and set the standard that the County is pledged to maintain."

In an unrelated matter, the commissioners approved Longview Estates plat north of Midland Regional Airport. "We're going to be asking for drainage set-up here," said Commissioner Win Brown. "We don't want to drop the water off here and create a problem somewhere down the road. We're trying to make sure that one developer doesn't infringe on another."

The commissioners also granted Kline Boyd's request that the Permian Basin Landmen's Association be allowed to rent the Midland County Exhibit Building May 7 for a barbecue and dance for about 400 landmen and guests.

"It's a rowdy bunch," joshed Brown. "I don't know that I should make a motion or renege," he said, "since I'm a landman and am a member of the association."

The court likewise gave Sarah Carreon permission to rent the building on Aug. 28 for a wedding dance.

The court granted a request by the city of Midland to use the county's voting machines April 3 in the joint city-school election.

Effects vs. effectiveness

Dear Dr. Solomon: I was discussing the use of birth control pills with my doctor, and she listed all the possible side effects and the arguments for and against using the pill. When I left her office, I was more confused than ever. If the pill can cause so many bad things, why do so many women continue to use it? — Francie, Duluth, Minn.

Dear Francie: Despite the controversy surrounding them, oral contraceptives continue to be used because they are probably the most effective form of birth control. Their failure rate is about two percent per year.

According to Dr. Ronald L. Young, of the Baylor College of Medicine in Houston, an average of 3.7 women per 100,000 die each year as a result of using the pill. Most of these deaths are due to coronary vascular disease in women over 35 years of age. However, this figure compares with an overall maternal death rate of 20.6 women per 100,000.

Dr. Young believes that oral contraceptives will probably continue to be the best form of birth control in the United States for several decades.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My son wants to try out for varsity sports in high school. Ordinarily, I'd be all for it, but he has diabetes. Would playing on a school team be harmful for him? — Ralph, Rye, N.Y.

Dear Ralph: Assuming your son is in otherwise good health, participating in sports may actually do him a great deal of good. Since this is a very individual matter, however, I suggest that both of you discuss the subject with his physician to determine if there are any limitations on such activity.

Some children benefit from participation in organized athletics by achieving better control of their diabetes and decreasing their need for insulin. In addition, the psychological benefits associated with taking part in school athletics can be tremendously important.

Dr. Thomas Shaffer, chairman of the American Academy of Pediatrics Sports Medicine Committee, emphasizes that patients must be individualized — each has different requirements and different limits. But, he adds, there is no question that exercise is beneficial for most diabetics.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My daughter went to her doctor because she wasn't feeling well. Was she surprised when he told her that she's pregnant. She doesn't know how long she's been pregnant but the doctor says he can tell with ultrasound. Will you explain how this works. — Mrs. D.L., Nashville, Tenn.

Dear Mrs. L.: There are a number of ways that ultrasound can be used to determine the age of the fetus. One way is to measure the length of the femur, or thigh bone. Head and kidney circumferences may also prove helpful in determining gestational age. Recent improvements in ultrasound equipment and techniques make it possible not only to determine the age of the fetus, but to estimate body weight as well.

(If you have a medical question, write to Neil Solomon, M.D., 1726 Reisterstown Road, Baltimore, Md. 21208. Dr. Solomon cannot give personal replies but will answer as many questions as possible in his column.)

Childhood intervention grant given to mental health centers

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN. — The Texas Department of Health has awarded Permian Basin Community Centers for Mental Health-Mental Retardation, Midland, a $71,925 grant to administer early childhood intervention services for young children with handicapping conditions.

The grant was one of 47 grants totaling $3.1 million that were awarded to local organizations for the first year of a new Early Childhood Prevention Program.

The grants were made with funds appropriated under Senate Bill 630, which directs the health department and other agencies to locate and provide treatment for children from birth to age 3 who have handicapping conditions or are developmentally delayed.

The program is aimed at preventing long-term handicapping conditions. It is administered by the health department, but directed cooperatively by TDH, the Texas Department of Mental Health.

Interferon may fight herpes

ATLANTA (AP) — Researchers may be able to use interferon to produce a treatment and vaccine for both oral and genital herpes, a scientist says.

Saul Kit, head of the Division of Biochemical Virology at Baylor College of Medicine, said Monday that animal experiments by his Houston research team have shown that the drug interferon may be useful in treating herpes.

In addition, "hybrid viruses" created by "genetic engineering" techniques may provide a vaccine to prevent the disease, he said.

Senior citizens stay active through the 90 Club

The spark of life never had clearer meaning or a brighter outlook than it does through the members of the 90 Club at Trinity Towers, a residential retirement center.

Composed of active, healthy senior citizens who must be at least 90 years of age, the club's 19 active members do charitable community work, take picnics, attend symphony concerts, conduct regular monthly meetings and a long list of other activities.

The club's president, Elsie Stephenson, attributes all this vitality to friendship. "I know other people need me.

We all love each other and live our daily lives in closeness with each other."

Activities director, Leona Armentrout, works hardest at keeping up with the club. "I really don't decide anything for them. They meet, make their plans and call on me to help arrange activities."

Among Trinity Towers' 174 residents, there is a certain prestige to membership in the 90 Club. "We have one 89-year-old who attempted to join the club prematurely, but we couldn't let that happen," one club member quipped.

The club's members range in age from 90 to 101 years and count among their number former school teachers, engineers, homemakers, artists and farmers. Each continues his or her personal interests and talents in the club's on-going work.

One person who recently became eligible for membership is Lena Mae Wyatt who has an active tutoring schedule helping high school students learn to handle various types of mathematics. "I taught school for 50 years and thought I would retire. But in a community the size of Midland, you are too well-known to retire. So, when a parent I taught as a student asks me to help their child with math, what can I say?"

The 90 Club is the largest and most active of its kind in the nation, according to William Saxton, executive director of Trinity Towers and current president of the Texas Association of Housing for the Aged (TAHA).

"Clubs such as ours are not uncommon in residential retirement centers,"

Saxton explained. "But this one's current active membership is unusual." The median age at Trinity Towers is now 83 years, with a long list of potential 90 Club members.

Members include Mr. and Mrs. Rolla Trumbo, Olive Wheelis, Elsie Stephenson, Lula Martin, Velma Haag, Nena Daniel, Julie LaRoche, Alice McFarland, Eula Echols, Margaret Snow, John Bussey, Jim Neely, Anni Kate Gilbert, Mary Ungerman, Effie Broussard, Alma Chambers, Lena Mae Wyatt and Margaret Gaines.

HINTS FROM HELOISE

Cleaning stainless steel sinks

DEAR HELOISE:

What cleanser do you use to clean stainless steel sinks? I have used regular powdered cleansers and the sink sparkles for awhile — until the faucet is turned on — then it looks as if I hadn't even cleaned it. So, I have to use the cleanser again.

There has to be a better way! — Mrs. B.

According to a leading manufacturer of stainless steel, the secret of keeping your sink bright as new is to wipe the water off with a dry cloth after each use, then you won't need to use the cleanser each time.

When the sink does need cleaning, use a mild liquid detergent, a solution of ammonia and water, or baking soda instead of a regular powdered cleanser. Vinegar also helps to remove water spots. Follow with a thorough rinsing, then dry with a soft cloth.

Gritty, strong, powdered abrasives will mar the finish of your stainless steel sink, so are not recommended for use.

To help minimize streaking, spotting and fingerprints, rub the surface with a cloth dampened with a small amount of mineral or baby oil after cleaning.

As I said in the beginning, the real secret of keeping these sinks presentable is to take a moment after each use (and really, that's all it takes) to wipe off any moisture residue with a soft, dry cloth. A small amount of trouble, perhaps, but it really pays off, appearancewise and carewise, in the long run. — Heloise

SEE-THROUGH

Dear Heloise: I store laces, bias tape, rickrack, etc., in clear plastic shoe boxes so I can see the contents without having to dig through each one. They stack neatly on shelves in my sewing room. — Grace Brown

BACKWARD TOP

Dear Heloise: I have several turtleneck knit tops which have shrunk. They all have back zippers. They are too tight and uncomfortable to wear when zipped.

One day, I turned one of the tops around and put it on so the back was in the front. I was able to leave the zipper open at the throat and could get some wear out of it. — G.B.

HINTS FROM HIM

Dear Heloise: Want to make your home a more pleasant-smelling abode? I'm an older male living alone and have the bad habit of smoking. I don't notice the odor until I return to my apartment.

I had a terrific idea the other evening... I used one of the fabric softener sheets made for dryers as a room deodorizer, tucking one edge inside the vent which supplies the warm air from my furnace.

Surprisingly enough, as the heat comes on, the pleasant aroma permeates the area and, after the furnace goes off, the fresh smell remains for quite some time. — Claude A. Hawk Don't hoard a great hint. Do send it to Heloise, P.O. Box 32000, San Antonio, TX 78216. She can't answer your letter personally but will feature the best tips received in her column.

Boiling under

NEW YORK (AP) — Enough energy to meet the electricity needs of Cleveland, Ohio, for nine years could be saved by six of the nation's largest energy-using industries by improving the efficiency of their industrial boilers, a recent study indicates.

The annual savings projected by the Honeywell Energy Management Information Center could equal 30 million barrels of imported oil annually, enough to heat 1.1 million American homes during that period. Fuel costs for the six industries can be significantly reduced by installing sensors and micro-processor controls for existing industrial boilers, according to the report.

The study shows the chemical industry could save $272.3 million; pulp and paper, $258.3 million; petroleum, $179 million; food processing, $152.2 million; primary metals, $58.3 million, and textiles, $27.6 million.

DEAR ABBY

Boy's 'sole' parent acts like a heel

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: My son, who lives in another state with his father and stepmother, is graduating from high school in June. As the valedictorian of his class, he will be giving a speech. I raised this boy until he was 9, and we have always had a very good relationship. Naturally I am very proud of him and was looking forward to attending his graduation.

A few days ago I received a letter from my ex-husband requesting that I stay away from our son's graduation. He said, and I quote: "My wife and I want to be seen as the boy's sole parents."

Now I don't know what to do. I consider myself very much a part of my son's life. I see him as often as I can and have even agreed to pay for most of his college education. I am deeply hurt by my ex-husband's request that I stay away. What do you make of this, and what should I do? — LEFT OUT

DEAR LEFT OUT: I think your husband is out of line to ask you to stay away. If, as you state, you and your son have a good relationship, and HE wants you to attend his graduation, go! You have every right to be there.

DEAR ABBY: "Perplexed" asked why nobody wants to use those pretty little guest towels people have in their homes. She said, "People choose to dry their hands on toilet paper, the bath towel, bath mats, and even curtains, leaving the guest towels untouched."

I solved that problem over 30 years ago when I wrote the enclosed verse, framed it, and hung it above my guest towels. — MABEL CRADDOCK, VENTURA, CALIF.

The Government's Consideration of the Use of Drugs or Alcohol

June 22, 1979 - Murked has Arlington VA

MW: He don't drink, anyone does he?

AF: Oh, No

MW: Maybe we should give him a marijuana to pep him up.

Sen. Harrison Williams, D-N.J., stands between several charts that he will use in his defense before the U.S. Senate Monday in his expulsion hearing. Williams stated the FBI was going to use drugs, alcohol and a forged letter to help in their case against him.

Williams gaining little support in expulsion hearing

WASHINGTON (AP) — Surrounded by colleagues of many years, Harrison A. Williams slumped in his chair on the Senate floor and heard himself described as a participant in "a cesspool of corruption."

Sen. Malcolm Wallop, R-Utah, also said, "Sen. Williams agreed to sell his office for personal gain, and thereby violated the trust of the people and the integrity of the Senate, as well as the criminal laws."

Wallop, chairman of the Senate Ethics Committee, delivered the rebuttal to the New Jersey Democrat's defense Monday as the Senate considered whether Williams should be expelled for his conviction in the Abscam case.

Williams has steadfastly maintained that his conviction on bribery and conspiracy charges was the result of investigative abuse by the FBI's Abscam team.

Closing out his own case on the third day of Senate hearings, the 62-year-old, bushy-browed Williams delivered "almost an apology that the places I went and the things I did could bring to you, members of the Senate, this problem."

"I am sorry indeed that it came to this," he said politely, almost deferentially, "but I have to live with myself."

"I regret that I have to give you this turmoil, this torture and this ordeal," said Williams, who has been sentenced to serve three years in prison and fined $50,000.

WILLIAMS, A 23-year Senate veteran, repeated his oft-stated contention that his involvement in Abscam meetings over a 10-month period stemmed from his desire to help two close friends with a legitimate private business enterprise. There was no criminal intent, he said.

In an almost conversational tone, Williams denied that he promised to obtain government contracts for a mining venture in exchange for a share in the business, as alleged by government prosecutors and the ethics committee.

Other senators listened impassively to Williams' presentation, but there was little sign the two days the New Jersey senator has spent outlining his position was having much impact.

The debate was to be delayed by a few hours today because of the funeral of former Republican Sen. Clifford Case of New Jersey who died Friday. Williams was scheduled to attend the funeral in New Jersey.

Alan Cranston, D-Calif., the Senate minority whip, planned to formally propose today that Williams be censured, rather than expelled.

No votes on a censure resolution are likely until Wednesday, with an expulsion vote likely to occur Thursday.

CRANSTON HAS SAID Williams should be spared expulsion because of an FBI "abuse of power" in which agents made repeated efforts to obtain evidence against a public official the FBI had no reason to believe would commit federal crimes.

But there were indications Cranston did not have widespread support in his effort to get the Senate to impose the less severe penalty, censure.

"Ten votes would be optimistic," one senior Senate aide familiar with Cranston's attempts said when questioned.

So far, only two senators, Democrats

Russell Long of Louisiana and John Melcher of Montana, have publicly indicated support for Williams, who could become the first senator to be expelled for reasons of financial misconduct.

Only 15 senators have been expelled in U.S. history, most of them alleged to be Confederate sympathizers during the Civil War.

Besides Williams, six House members were convicted on Abscam charges. One was expelled and the rest either did not seek re-election or were defeated at the polls.

ONCE WILLIAMS had completed his defense Monday, Wallop delivered a 40-page rebuttal which sought to answer every challenge to the ethics committee's unanimous recommendation that Williams be expelled for "ethically repugnant" misconduct.

As Wallop addressed the packed Senate, Williams sat low in his chair, chin resting on a clenched fist and occasionally twirled his glasses. Little expression crossed his face.

Compromise on budget expected to take time

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate GOP leaders are considering an array of proposals to modify President Reagan's red-ink-plagued 1983 budget that reportedly includes "every conceivable notion" of how to cut the deficit.

Congressional and White House officials, however, were not expecting an agreement on a compromise spending plan would be reached during Reagan's meeting today with all 53 of his fellow Republicans in the Senate.

The administration's latest projected deficit for fiscal 1983, which begins Oct. 1, totals $96.4 billion. But worried Republicans and Democrats alike are citing Congressional Budget Office figures predicting a $120 billion deficit next year and even larger ones in future years.

According to GOP sources, who asked to remain anonymous, Senate Majority Leader Howard H. Baker of Tennessee and other key Senate Republicans were reviewing a 12-page list of possible budget changes — a list one said consists of "every conceivable notion of everything that's come up in anyone's head."

Possible changes in Social Security and a reduction in defense spending were among those proposals.

And Kansas Republican Bob Dole, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, told reporters the list also includes eliminating the personal income tax cut scheduled to take effect in 1983, and substituting a provision to lower tax rates each year as inflation rises.

BUT REAGAN, WHOSE visit to the Senate was described by a spokesman as a "friendly neighborly gesture," had shown little willingness to accept changes in either the tax cut legislation approved last year or his proposed Pentagon buildup.

The Senate, meanwhile, continued its debate over the fate of Sen. Harrison A. Williams Jr. following the New Jersey Democrat's appeal on Monday not to be expelled.

Williams implored his Senate colleagues to let him retain his office despite "this turmoil, this torture and this ordeal," that his Abscam conviction has caused.

The 62-year-old Williams, found guilty last year by a federal court of conspiracy and bribery in connection with the FBI's Abscam investigation, declared again that he was framed. He is appealing his conviction.

Williams' defenders were hoping to persuade the Senate to censure him instead of expelling him — but his critics maintained he should be ousted because it is his conduct which is at issue, not that of the FBI.

In other congressional business Monday:

—Five Democratic House members introduced legislation to restrict U.S. aid to El Salvador. Republican Sen. Mark O. Hatfield of Oregon also introduced such a proposal, as did Senate Democratic leader Robert C. Byrd of West Virginia.

Hatfield also announced plans to try to halt all U.S. military aid to El Salvador unless its government makes a good-faith effort to negotiate with the leftist opposition or President Reagan can certify the rebels refused to negotiate.

—A study commissioned by the Senate Rules Committee recommended a major rewrite of presidential campaign financing legislation, saying that current election laws have failed to limit campaign spending.

—Agriculture Secretary John Block told the House Education and Labor Committee that the Reagan administration's increase in school lunch prices is not the only reason for the 13 percent decline in the number of children eating the meals. "To tell you the truth, I just think there are more children who just want to eat at McDonald's," he said.

—AFL-CIO PRESIDENT Lane Kirkland told the House Budget Committee that higher income taxes should be imposed on businesses to help pay for Reagan's proposed defense buildup.

—The House Government Operations Committee, in a 40-page report, said top Pentagon officials need to act quickly and decisively to upgrade the computer network that is designed to warn of enemy attack.

Hospital agrees to pay $5.5 million

NEW YORK (AP) — New York Hospital has agreed to pay $5.5 million to an employee whose case of glaucoma was misdiagnosed as flu, the Daily News reported today. The woman went blind after she was sent home from the hospital.

It is believed to be the largest out-of-court settlement in state history.

according to Herbert Horowitz, attorney for Susie Kim.

Miss Kim, 45, a lab analyst, will get $900,000 immediately, then $120,000 a year for life, the News said. In addition, she will receive $1 million paid out in intervals over the next 20 years, the newspaper said.

Rely, TSS association to be allowed in trial

DENVER (AP) — Seven studies of toxic shock syndrome, including three which link the disease specifically to Rely tampons, can be introduced as evidence in a teenager's $25 million lawsuit against the makers of the tampon, a judge has ruled.

The other four studies link the use of tampons in general to the syndrome, said Jon Kidneigh, an attorney for Deletha Dawn Lampshire, who is suing Procter & Gamble Co.

Attorneys for P&G had sought to exclude the studies from the federal court trial, now in its second week. The attorneys had argued that bias was present in each of the studies and that they had no direct bearing on the case.

But U.S. District Judge Sherman Pinesilver ruled Monday the studies could be admitted as evidence, and the jury heard testimony on the first of those studies, from the Utah Bureau of Communicable Disease Control.

Miss Lampshire, 18, of Littleton, contends she suffered toxic shock syndrome two years ago when she used Rely. In her suit, she said she still has psychological problems as a result of the illness.

Attorneys for P&G say Miss Lampshire suffered from the flu, not TSS.

Craig Nichols, director of the Utah bureau, testified that a study by his agency showed that women who used Rely tampons had "a much greater chance of contracting the disease."

"We found an extremely strong association between Rely and TSS," he said.

Under cross examination, Nichols noted some people who suffered TSS had not used any sort of tampon. He said TSS had stricken men, post-menstrual women and women who had not used tampons for months or even years.

He also said Rely had not been proven to be a direct cause of the illness.

"We determined that Rely was a risk factor, but that does not mean there was a causal association," he said.

Bureau scientists in the summer of 1980 contacted 29 women who suffered toxic shock syndrome and found half had used a single brand of tampons, Nichols said. Of those, 63 percent used Rely exclusively.

Nichols said the number of Utah women of child-bearing age who contracted TSS plummeted sharply after P&G withdrew Rely tampons from the market in September 1980.

Helen Behan, a nurse, Dr. David Ju, a New York plastic surgeon, and Nancy Raether, an exercise instructor testified at the murder trial of Claus von Bulow as rebuttal witnesses for the prosecution Monday. Mrs. Behan said she never heard Mrs. von Bulow discuss suicide.

von Bulow case scheduled to go to jury Monday

NEWPORT, R.I. (AP) — A nurse who was the last witness to take the stand in Claus von Bulow's attempted murder trial says she didn't hear Martha von Bulow admit she had tried to kill herself, as a hospital technician testified.

And an exercise teacher at a figure salon testified Monday that a surprise defense witness' reputation for telling the truth was "not very good."

The prosecution's two rebuttal witnesses had the last word Monday before Judge Thomas H. Needham told the Superior Court jury that because of the length of the trial and the bulk of material, he was giving lawyers a day off today and scheduling summations by attorneys Wednesday. The case is to go to the jury Thursday.

The state contends von Bulow was moved by love for another woman and greed for his wife's money to try to kill her with secret injections of insulin during Christmas visits to their Millionaires' Row mansion in 1979 and 1980. Prosecutors contend von Bulow caused Mrs. von Bulow, known as "Sunny," to fall into a coma each time.

Although Mrs. von Bulow recovered from the first episode on Dec. 27, 1979, she remains comatose in a New York City hospital with little hope of recovery after she was discovered sprawled on her bathroom floor Dec. 21, 1980.

The defense contends Mrs. von Bulow, 50, was depressed to the point of being suicidal, knew how to inject herself with a syringe, and considered insulin shots a good way to lose weight while indulging her appetite for sweets.

The prosecution called its rebuttal witnesses in an effort to cast doubt on testimony by two defense witnesses who were discovered by von Bulow's lawyers late in the trial — a former instructor at an exclusive New York City figure salon and a medical technologist from Newport Hospital.

Joy O'Neill, who claimed she was

Mrs. von Bulow's favorite teacher at the Many Kahn Body Rhythm Salon, said last week the heiress told her a year before her first coma that shots of insulin were a good way to lose weight, and shots of the tranquilizer Valium were a good way to control nerves.

C. Robert Huggins testified under subpoena that he took a Dec. 30, 1979, blood sample from Mrs. von Bulow while she was recuperating in Newport Hospital, and the heiress confided her illness was the result of a suicide attempt.

After establishing through hospital records that Huggins actually took the sample a day later, prosecutor Stephen R. Famiglietti called Mrs. Behan, a private nurse.

Mrs. Behan said she was with Mrs. von Bulow during the hours records show Huggins took the blood sample and never heard Mrs. von Bulow say she tried to kill herself.

"If there was a conversation between a lab technician and Martha von Bulow would you recall it," asked Famiglietti.

"I would," she said.

"If Martha von Bulow had said, 'I tried to kill myself,' would you think that was significant?"

"Absolutely," Mrs. Behan answered.

"Did you make a note anywhere that Martha von Bulow said 'I tried to kill myself'?"

"No, I didn't," she said.

Instructor Nancie Raether testified Miss O'Neill had a poor reputation for telling the truth when they worked together at Many Kahn's.

According to records from the salon introduced in evidence, Miss O'Neill, a former principal dancer in the American Ballet Theater, taught Mrs. von Bulow only five times. None of those sessions came in 1978, when Miss O'Neill said the conversation about insulin occurred.

The same records show Miss Raether taught Mrs. von Bulow 255 times from October 1977 through 1979.

Doctor not liable for vasectomy

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — A doctor who performed two unsuccessful vasectomies on a man doesn't have to pay for raising a healthy child the man fathered, the Arkansas Supreme Court has ruled.

"It is a question which meddles with the concept of life and the stability of the family unit," the high court said Monday. "Litigation cannot answer every question; every question cannot be answered in terms of dollars and cents."

The court, ruling in a suit filed by Virgil and Wilma Wilbur against Dr. Robert Kerr, also said, "We are also convinced that the damage to the child will be significant; that being an unwanted or 'emotional bastard,' who will some day learn that its parents did not want it and, in fact, went to court to force someone else to pay for its raising, will be harmful to that child."

"It will undermine society's need for a strong and healthy family relationship," the court said.

Witnesses say Buono introduced cousin as talent scout

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Angelo Buono, charged with the murder of 10 women, introduced confessed Hillside Strangler Kenneth Bianchi as a talent scout who could help young women enter the movie industry, two witnesses testified.

Prosecutors, who opened testimony Monday, are seeking to tie Bianchi closely to his cousin Buono, who faces a possible death sentence if he is convicted. Bianchi is serving a life sentence after confessing to five killings in California and two in Washington. He has implicated his cousin in 10 killings.

Buono, 47, was impassive as witnesses pointed across the courtroom and said, "That's him — Angelo."

The defense has said Bianchi was a lone killer who implicated Buono to save himself.

Kathleen Martin and Marlene Katz Booth, the first witnesses as the prosecution opened its case, testified they were duped by Buono into believing Bianchi was a talent scout for a new movie that would be similar to the box-office smash "Star Wars."

THEY said they had worked as movie extras when they met Bianchi in late 1977 and he said he could help their careers. He sent them letters on Universal Studios stationery and wooed them with flowers, they said.

She said Buono brought Bianchi to the delicatessen she ran and said "that maybe he can help me in the movie industry, that he was scouting."

Mrs. Booth said Buono operated an upholstery shop across the street from the store she ran in 1977 and 1978.

Another woman who linked the two men said she was Bianchi's lover and met Buono 20 times at the house he shared with his cousin.

Sheryl Lynn Kellison, 23, wept as she recalled her two-year romance with Bianchi and later discovery that he had confessed to some of the killings.

MISS Kellison said she met Bianchi in 1976 and began a love affair which continued on and off until 1978, including the period when he was allegedly committing the murders.

During that time, she said, Bianchi told her he was psychologist and once said he had cancer.

"I didn't know what to believe," Miss Kellison said.

Once, she said, Bianchi told her he was a psychologist and gave her cards to distribute advertising a counseling service.

He also told that story to co-workers at a title insurance company, according to witness Gregory Dawley, who worked with Bianchi.

Stock market loses

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices took another sharp drop Monday in selling that carried the Dow Jones industrial average below 800 for the first time in almost two years.

The Dow Jones industrials, up almost 10 points in the first half hour, wound up with an 11.89-point loss at 795.47.

That marked the average's lowest close since it finished at 789.25 on April 23, 1980.

Volume on the New York Stock Exchange totaled 67.33 million shares, against 67.44 million Friday.

Data General, which ran into heavy selling last week on the company's projection of worse-than-expected quarterly earnings, dropped 1% to 27. International Business Machines fell 1% to 57%; Digital Equipment 3% to 74, and Prime Computer 2% to 17%.

Texas Instruments lost 3% to 76%; Motorola 3% to 50; Hewlett-Packard 2% to 36%; and Computervision 2% to 23.

Among leading oil-service issues, Schlumberger was off 2% at 40% and Halliburton dropped 1% to 32%.

Precious-metals stocks slumped as the price of gold fell $5.20 to $328.20 an ounce, and silver lost 28 cents to $7.02 an ounce, on the Commodity Exchange in New York. Homestake Mining dropped 1% to 19%; ASA 1% to 27%; Calhoun Mining 1% to 19, and Dome Mines 1% to 10%.

The daily tally on the Big Board showed two losers for every stock that gained ground, and the exchange's composite index fell 1.11 to 62.03.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Yields on short-term Treasury securities dropped Monday to their lowest level in over two months, averaging just over 12 percent, government officials said.

Average yields, a measure of government borrowing costs, had risen for five straight weeks at the start of the year, climbing above 14 percent before falling by record amounts two weeks ago and then rising slightly last week.

About $4.8 billion in six-month bills were sold Monday at an average discount rate of 12.064 percent, down from the 12.786 percent of last week.

The government also sold about $4.8 billion in three-month bills at an average rate of 12.058 percent, down from 12.45 percent.

Several banks also lowered their prime lending rates one-half point to 16 percent on Monday — the lowest since December — and economists said short-term rates in general should continue declining for a while as the recession keeps credit demand down.

Monday's T-bill yields were the lowest since the Dec. 21 level of 11.838 percent for six-month bills and the Jan. 4 level of 11.658 percent for three-month bills.

Administration officials have forecast a 1982 average yield of 11.7 percent for three-month bills, compared with the 14.1 percent average of last year.

Beginning Tuesday, banks and savings and loans may pay as much as 13.226 percent interest on six-month money market certificates, down from the previous 13.683 percent.

Interest on the $10,000-minimum deposits is limited to one-quarter point above the higher of two figures: Monday's yield on six-month T-bills or the average yield on such bills at the four most recent auctions. In this case the four-week average of 12.976 percent was higher than the Monday yield.

For other private accounts linked to Treasury securities — such as 14.3 percent and commercial banks as much as 14.05 percent interest on 2½-year "small-saver" certificates. That rate will change next Tuesday.

—Tax-exempt, one-year "all-savers" certificates issued before March 20 will pay 10.79 percent interest when held to maturity. The rate will change on March 21 for certificates issued after that date.

The discount rate on the short-term T-bills auctioned Monday understates the actual return because part of the price is refunded at the time of purchase. The actual return, or investment rate, came to an average of 13.03 percent on six-month bills and 12.61 percent on three-month bills.

Deficits not unprecedented measured against budget

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — So full bodied is the balance-the-budget chorus, so representative of all the voice parts, so harmonious in presentation, you have to wonder if there is perhaps a mistake somewhere.

The wonder is that the chorus consists of formerly shrill and scratchy voices, Democrat and Republican alike, voices of those who in other years couldn't hold a tune any more than they could balance checkbooks.

It arouses curiosity: Is it possible that something good or at least neutral can be said about President Reagan's big budget deficits, which the political left and right alike claim can be economically ruinous?

To the defense comes Murray L. Weidenbaum, chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers, who offered his explanation in an address at The Conference Board, a business-supported research organization.

The deficits — $88 billion for fiscal 1982, and edging close to $100 billion for 1983, the next fiscal year — are not unprecedented when measured in context, said Weidenbaum. When measured, for example, "against the size of the economy, or of the budget, or of the pool of private saving that will be available to finance these deficits."

In fiscal 1976, he pointed out, the deficit was 4 percent of gross national product, "compared to our present estimate of 3.2 percent in fiscal 1982 and 2.7 percent for the budget under review, fiscal 1983."

As a percentage of private saving, Weidenbaum continued, the deficit represented 22.5 percent of total private saving in fiscal 1976, "compared to 19.1 percent this year and 14.9 percent in 1983."

Weidenbaum came well prepared. As a percent of total budget outlays, he said, the deficit was 13.9 percent in fiscal 1975 and 18.2 percent in fiscal year 1976. This, the chairman said, contrasts with 13.6 percent in fiscal year 1982 and 12.1 percent in fiscal year 1983.

Argus Research Corp., used widely by securities firms, argues that the budget is "fairly credible," but that the media have made it seem almost incredible, particularly by stressing the size of deficits.

"Some of the claims contain just enough truth to cloak them in a mantle of plausibility," it states. "In fact, however, the garment is full of holes." It uses Weidenbaum's technique to describe hole one:

"As a percentage of GNP, the deficits proposed by the President for fiscal 1982 and 1983 are smaller than the deficit of 1976, a year in which nominal GNP rose 12 percent, real output increased by 6 percent, and interest rates were essentially unchanged."

Argus argues that total federal credit demand as a percentage of credit raised in domestic markets will decline rather than rise under President Reagan's proposals. And it attacks defense critics too.

"Defense outlays as a percentage of GNP would remain below the levels that prevailed between 1952 and 1972 for the remainder of this decade — less than 8 percent of output," say the Argus researchers.

Weidenbaum is aware of another defense, and in fact, referred to it in his address at The Conference Board. Many others, however, have made the same point: Budget deficits as a percent of gross national product are much higher in many European nations and in Japan.

In the latter country, budget deficits have equaled 6 percent of GNP, but inflation and interest rates remain far higher in the single digits, the economy expands and unemployment is almost negligible.

Public debt in the United States has averaged no more than 1 percent of GNP over the past 20 years, although that is mostly because of state and local government surpluses offsetting federal deficits.

Europe does worse. Since 1970, Weidenbaum points out, government deficits have averaged more than 2 percent of output, and have been rising. The percentage reached 3.5 in 1979 and 1980, and 4.4 in 1981.

In making such comparisons, however, Weidenbaum and others risk criticizing their own avowed goals for the United States economy. They have stated repeatedly that deficits in the past have been damaging.

In fact, Weidenbaum concedes that deficits are right now damaging the European economy and putting demands on the international pool of credit. And in Japan, land of big deficits, growth has recently slowed.

CONSUMER TIPS
Law protects consumers from home solicitors

Everyday it seems, the parade gets longer of people who are trying to sell us goods and services at our front doors. We are approached to buy magazines, home improvement gadgets, vacuum cleaners and encyclopedias at a time when we are not prepared to shop and therefore not as cautious. Since it is often hard to say no to a door-to-door salesperson (especially children and teenagers), it is important for you to know your rights concerning door-to-door transactions.

The Texas Home Solicitation Act protects the consumer from an unwise decision involving a home solicitor by allowing him to change his mind if he purchases a product costing $25 or more. To be effective, a written notice of cancellation must be received by the seller no later than midnight of the third business day after the sale.

The law requires the salesperson to provide the consumer with a fully completed receipt or a copy of the contract which must include the date of the transaction and the name and address of the seller. Also, the notice of the right to cancel must be printed in large dark type near that reserved for the buyer's signature.

A written "notice of cancellation" must also be attached to the contract or receipt. As the salesperson is required by law to explain, if this notice is signed and mailed to the seller within the specified time period, the sale will be cancelled and all payments returned within 10 business days. Failure to provide the required notice, according to state law, gives you the right to cancel at any time, even after the three day period.

Preventing Costly Mistakes
Since prevention is the best medicine, by knowing how to deal with home solicitors you should avoid having to exercise these rights. Use these guidelines when dealing with a door-to-door salesperson:

—Your first and best defense, when you have no interest in the product, is your refusal to let the salesperson take your time. Remember, the law only applies to purchases that cost $25 or more. If you spend less, the business is not required to refund your money.

—Demand identification. Most communities, including Midland, Odessa and Big Spring, require (in most cases) home solicitors to be registered with the police department. If you find a door-to-door salesperson that does not have a permit, immediately inform the police. Also, if you are in doubt about the company a person represents, check with the BBB before you let a stranger into your home.

—Never sign an order for merchandise just to get rid of an aggressive

Caputo drops out of Senate race after furor over inaccurate claims

NEW YORK (AP) — Bruce Caputo, who dropped his U.S. Senate campaign in the midst of a furor over his inaccurate claims of having been a Vietnam-era draftee and an Army lieutenant, is "anxious to get back to his life," an aide says.

The former congressman issued a three-paragraph statement Monday through campaign manager John Sheehan, saying he was abandoning the race for the Republican Senate nomination "with deep regret and considerable heartache."

Caputo had been the favorite to capture the Republican, Conservative and Right-to-Life nominations for the Senate in a challenge to Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, a Democrat.

But his support from state GOP and Conservative Party leaders collapsed after he said he had never been drafted or served as an Army lieutenant during the Vietnam war, as he had told reporters.

Caputo, 38, said he spent the war working in a civilian job at the Pentagon, and described the misstatement as an "exaggeration."

Before the controversy flared, Caputo was virtually unopposed in his bid to become Moynihan's Republican challenger.

Moynihan said in a statement released through his Washington office, "One must never take pleasure in another person's pain."

Caputo said in his statement he wished for "the time to present my version of recent events and defend my record and ideas."

But the former U.S. representative from Yonkers said "continuing the campaign would only hurt my family, particularly my parents, the voters who have supported me in the past and the political parties which helped me reach the State Legislature, the Congress and the United Nations. All that, I do not want to do."

He thanked his supporters and staff, and ended the statement by saying, "To those who continue in public life God be with you and with our great country."

Caputo was expected to return to the management consulting firm where he was a partner before beginning his campaign full-time.

"He's anxious to get back to his life, to get this behind him," Sheehan said.

Numerous calls to State Republican Chairman George Clark in Albany and Conservative Party executive director Serphin Maltese in New York for reaction produced no answer. Both attended a Feb. 26 breakfast with Caputo and Conservative Party leader J. Daniel Mahoney where the decision to "suspend" support for Caputo was made.

One of Caputo's possible replacements on the GOP ticket, Rep. Greg Carman, said by phone from his Washington office that he has not decided if he will seek the nomination.

Caputo said Feb. 17 he never received a draft notice nor was inducted into the armed forces, but instead served in the Pentagon during the war.

Caputo claimed that due to his work in the Pentagon, "I consider myself having served 2½ years in the military. More exactly, I had a military occupation rather than a service career, to be technical."

Caputo described himself as a lieutenant and a draftee in interviews and news conferences at least as far back as his 1977-78 term in Congress. One week before he admitted the discrepancy, he told reporters: "I was a lieutenant. I had a 2½-year hitch."

A second misstatement, this one in Caputo's official biography, was discovered one week after the initial error was found. Officials at the Harvard Business School said Caputo received his master's degree from the school but did not receive it "with distinction," as he claimed.

Hunger strike over; Chapman back in jail

MARCY, N.Y. (AP) — Mark David Chapman is back at the Attica state penitentiary, one week after the convicted killer of former Beatle John Lennon gave up his 26-day hunger strike at a psychiatric center here.

Chapman, 26, left the Central New York Psychiatric Center at 1:30 p.m. Monday and arrived at Attica at night under heavy security, said the center's director, Dr. Martin Von Holden.

Attica officials confirmed that Chapman arrived there without incident.

Chapman, who began eating regular three meals a day late last week, was held in the center 28 days — a stay considerably shorter than the average 70 days of treatment at the center, Von Holden said.

"I can't describe Mr. Chapman's particular problems, but I think it (the short stay) does say something about his problems compared to those of other patients we've had," the director said.

Chapman's treatment required more than merely convincing him to eat again, Von Holden said, but the director would not give details.

"Obviously, part of the problem was that he was not eating, but that alone is not the reason for putting him here. Attica personnel clearly indicated he was trying to commit suicide. That was one of the issues involved in sending him here," he said.

Chapman will continue psychiatric treatment at a mental health satellite clinic at Attica, Von Holden said. He was sent from Attica to the center on Feb. 10, after he had stopped eating for five days.

Chapman told doctors he was refusing food to draw attention to the plight of the world's starving children. He ended his hunger strike March 1 after state Supreme Court justice John Tenney granted the center permission to force-feed Chapman if necessary.

The order still can be used at Attica should Chapman begin another hunger strike, Von Holden said. Chapman said last week he would appeal Tenney's decision.

Anthony Faga, Chapman's attorney, said Monday night that he was not aware Chapman had been transferred. "The last time I spoke with him, he instructed me to appeal. I haven't spoken to him since. I see no reason to think I would not continue with the appeal."

Snow hits Iowa, causes one traffic death

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — A sneak-attack snowstorm that left 4 inches of snow and glazed the streets of central Iowa caused a rash of traffic accidents and has been blamed for at least one death, officials say.

"We had a little snow burst," said Chuck Bikle, a forecaster for the National Weather Service in Des Moines. The snow left about as quickly as it arrived, but not before slickening streets and highways in central Iowa Monday. Police departments and the Iowa Highway Patrol said there were numerous accidents in the area.

In an accident on Highway 69, Dorothy Hill, 47, of Slater was killed Monday afternoon when her car went out of control and slid head-on into the path of a truck.

Polk County authorities said the road was icy because of blowing snow.

Forecasters had expected only an inch of snow. "Frankly, it was a rather amazing element, I must admit, when I got up this morning and saw that much snow on the ground," Bikle said.

The snowfall limited visibility in central Iowa. At times, it was impossible to see buildings across the street in downtown Des Moines.

"We've had a few minor personal injuries and we've got a whole ton of property damage accidents," said police Sgt. Gary Clark.

Cars were backed up on entrance and exit ramps having even slight inclines. Police and other drivers had to push cars up the ramps one by one.

Pilots may have violated airline's instructions

WASHINGTON (AP) — The pilots of Air Florida Flight 90 apparently violated a number of the airline's instructions for flying in snow or icy weather, according to documents and testimony before a panel of inquiry.

Federal investigators planned to ask Air Florida officials today what training the Flight 90 crew received on severe weather operations and whether they knew about potential control problems with the Boeing 737 aircraft in icy weather.

The testimony from three Air Florida witnesses, including the directors of the airline's training program and operations, was coming on the ninth day of an inquiry into the Jan. 13 crash that killed 78 people.

Evidence produced so far indicates neither the pilot nor the co-pilot had much experience flying in severe ice or snowy conditions as were present the day the plane crashed into the Potomac River moments after take-off.

Documents provided to investigators show the Air Florida operations manual and other instructions warn pilots of the danger posed by icy conditions, alert them to check for ice on wings and engines, remind them to use an engine de-ice system before takeoff if icing problems are possible, and advise against using reverse thrust or maneuvering too close to another plane while awaiting takeoff clearance.

BUT testimony before the National Transportation Safety Board during the last week has shown the Flight 90 pilots may have violated a number of those provisions.

According to a half dozen maintenance workers on the ground, neither the pilot nor the co-pilot left the cockpit to make a visual check of their aircraft, especially the wings and engines, after it was de-iced. The ground supervisor also failed to inspect the plane closely.

The pilot put his plane in reverse thrust in an attempt to get it away from the passenger boarding ramp, causing snow to swirl around the engines and possibly clog a critical sensor that tells the pilot how much power he is getting on takeoff.

The pilot purposely maneuvered close to another aircraft in an attempt to use exhaust heat to force snow off his plane's fuselage and wings, according to cockpit recorder transcripts. The Air Florida manual advised against such a maneuver since the other plane's exhaust may melt dry snow, allowing it to turn to ice. Dry snow would blow off on a take-off roll.

The crew may not have turned on an engine de-icing system, although the airline manual requires them to do so "prior to and during takeoff ... when icing conditions exist or are anticipated."

THE manufacturer of the plane, meanwhile, told the panel Monday that Boeing 737 models like the one that crashed have a tendency to pitch upward or roll after takeoff when ice accumulates on the forward section of the wings. The Boeing Co. received word of at least 23 incidents involving control problems with the 737 when ice is believed to have been on the forward wing section. The manufacturer has issued a half dozen advisories on the subject.

Air Florida officials have told investigators they distributed the latest Boeing bulletin last July, shortly after it came out.

Investigators believe the pitching and rolling problem — and possibly an inability of the crew to deal with it — could account for Flight 90 not gaining altitude even though it had gained enough speed to leave the ground.

The plane hit a bridge and plunged into the Potomac about a mile from National Airport. The wreckage showed that two of the four valves in the defroster were shut and the others were so damaged their position could not be determined.

A Federal Aviation Administration expert on de-icing told the federal panel Monday he saw "several problems" with the way Flight 90 was de-iced.

RICHARD Adams, who heads an FAA study on de-icing, said he believes too weak a solution was sprayed on the plane, two different procedures were used because of a change in operators, and that the aircraft was inadequately inspected after the de-icing.

Adams said his remarks reflected his personal opinion and did not stem from any test results or examination of specific data from the Flight 90 de-icing.

Kite chips in Bay Hill winner

Vindication comes with victory

By BOB GREEN
AP Golf Writer

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — There was a strange sort of vindication for Tom Kite in his playoff victory in the Bay Hill Golf Classic.

"I've played a lot better several times, both last year and this year, and haven't won," Kite said Monday after he'd chipped in for a winning birdie on the first hole of sudden death, beating Jack Nicklaus and young Denis Watson of South Africa.

"But I'm not giving it back. It's awful hard to win a golf tournament," Kite said.

He knows that as well as anyone. He once missed a title by the margin of one stroke. And that was a penalty he called on himself when he and he alone saw his ball move on the green.

He had an incredible 21 finishes of 10th or better last year. And won only once. He lost a playoff earlier this year in a remarkable turnaround when Ed Fiori rolled in a 40-foot birdie putt and Kite missed a 6-footer.

IN THE last two seasons he'd done almost all that could be done in golf — except win. He topped the 1981 money-winners. He led the tour in scoring average. He had one string of 17 consecutive tournaments in which he finished eighth or better. But in all that long string, he didn't win.

And it was becoming very, very frustrating.

"People say I'm a conservative player. I'm not. I'm very aggressive," Kite said. "I think they just say that because they don't know, because they're trying to explain why I don't win and they really don't know."

"Nor do I."

But he won this one, a day late due to a series of storms that disrupted and delayed the event on Arnold Palmer's Bay Hill Club course.

And Kite, who slipped almost unnoticed out of the pack with a last-round 69, was almost embarrassed by it.

"I apologized to Jack and Denis for chipping in on them," he said after his 20-foot effort had found the cup on the first extra hole. "You just don't chip in to win. But, doggone it, they were trying to do the same to me so I'm not apologizing too much."

KITE, NICKLAUS and Watson, a 26-year-old native of Rhodesia now living in South Africa in his second full year of competition on the tour, all finished the regulation 72 holes at 278, 6-under par. All had chances on the playoff hole. Nicklaus missed a 24-foot birdie putt that, Kite said, was "as good a putt as you can hit. I don't know how it stayed out." But it did. And Watson missed a 12-footer that would have extended the playoff.

Nicklaus, generally acknowledged as the game's greatest player, had a one-stroke lead when last round play started in chilly, breezy weather. But he went from trouble to disaster to quandry. He hit in the sand. He three-putted. He got one embedded in a tree. He had to hit two shots left-handed.

But he turned it around with a couple of late birdies that let him reach the playoff with a 4-over-par final round of 75, his highest score of the season.

"That's five straight weeks of frustration," said Nicklaus, who has been in contention in every start this season but has yet to win. "All I had to do to win the golf tournament was play golf today. And I didn't do a very good job of it. One thing seemed to multiply another."

Watson, with a closing 72, had the best tournament of his brief American career.

LANNY WADKINS and Craig Stadler missed the playoff by a single stroke at 279. Stadler, who had a share of the lead until he bogeyed the 18th from a bunker, shot 70 and Wadkins matched par 71.

Ray Floyd, led or shared the lead most of the day but knocked himself out of it with two late double bogeys, the final one from an embedded lie in a hazard on the 17th. He finished with a 76 and was tied at 280 with Fuzzy Zoeller, who had a closing 67.

The victory, only Kite's fourth, was worth $54,000 from the total purse of $300,000 and pushed his earnings for the year to $115,710.

Tom Kite jumps in the air after sinking a birdie chip on the first hole of sudden death to win the Bay Hill Classic in Orlando Monday. Kite finished regulation play with a 6-under-par tied with Jack Nicklaus and Denis Watson.

MHS, Lee to play three games in Lubbock today

Midland High and Midland Lee are in Lubbock today for baseball action with the Bulldogs facing Lubbock Coronado while the Rebels meet Monterey in a doubleheader at 2 p.m. in the resumption of what has been a long and storied rivalry down through the years.

In last week's action, Midland Lee took third place in the District 5-5A preseason tournament at Odessa by beating cross-town rival Midland, 5-0. However, Abilene Cooper emerged as the favorite for the 5-5A title by flogging Abilene High, 12-1, in the championship final.

Today's action will be the final tuneup before the annual Tall City Tournament of Champions at Cuts Stadium Friday and Saturday.

Midland and Lee will host the tournament with Lubbock Monterey, Amarillo Tascosa and Carrollton Newman-Smith completing the field. Action begins at 10 a.m. Friday with Lee and Carrollton playing for the right to meet Monterey in the 3 p.m. game. Midland and Tascosa play at 12:30 p.m. The winners clash at 8 p.m. and the winner of that game draws a bye until 5:30 p.m. when it will play the survivor of the losers' bracket.

In all, there could be as many as 10 games.

Akers announces no spring game

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — There will be no spring game for the Texas Longhorns this year, coach Fred Akers announced as spring training began.

The Longhorns, defending Cotton Bowl champions and Southwest Conference runners-up to Southern Methodist in 1981, began spring drills Monday with Akers looking to rebuild his defense and his offensive line.

Akers returns only six full-time starters from the squad that beat Alabama on Jan. 1, including quarterback Robert Brewer and linebacker Jeff Leiding.

Texas' practices will end April 9, with controlled scrimmages March 13 and 27, Akers said.

Midland Boxing Club Report

Abilas seeking fight victories

Midland amateur boxer Joel Abila, 112 pounds, is looking for a trip to Kansas City, Mo.

The 16-year-old Midland Boxing Club flyweight is the sole Midland representative in the State Golden Gloves competition which gets underway tonight and will conclude Saturday in Fort Worth at Will Rogers Coliseum with the winner of each weight division advancing to the National Golden Gloves in Kansas City on March 29.

Monday night, Abila went through the weigh in process which determines a boxers' division, and for the first time since he won his berth in state, he knows who is opponent will be and when he'll fight.

Abila drew Sam Jones of Beaumont to open his run for the state crown tonight. According to his coach, Rick Fleetwood, Abila has a good shot at winning the state crown saying, "he's got as good a chance as anybody in the state to win his division, and if Conrad Sanchez and Jesse Benevides are in it, it's one of the toughest divisions in the Golden Gloves."

Fleetwood wasn't sure if the two boxers would be in Abila's division or not, but he was familiar with their past accomplishments.

Jesse Benevides is from Corpus Christi and he won the National Golden Gloves and was runner up in the National AAU two years ago and last year won Golden Gloves, AAU and the International Games at 106 pounds. I've heard he can no longer hold that weight and is moving up to 112, Richard's weight.

"Conrad Sanchez was the state champion at 112 pounds last year and was the runner up at nationals, but he may have gone up to 119."

Abila made it to the State Golden Gloves after only one fight in the Regional Tournament held in Odessa two weeks ago. Both he and flyweight Fane Valle of Monahans received byes through the preliminary rounds and met in the championship bout where Abila scored an impressive technical knockout victory in the second round.

WHILE FLEETWOOD is the Midland Boxing Club coach and has handled Abila's training, he will miss Tuesday night's opener against Jones because of another fight scheduled for Wednesday night in Lake Charles, La. with Abila's older brother, Richard.

Richard, a super bantamweight seeking his fourth professional victory in as many bouts, is scheduled to fight on the Don Currie (Fort Worth welterweight) card in Lake Charles against an unknown opponent. The fight card will be televised on ESPN starting at 7 p.m.

"I hate to miss Joel's first fight but Richard has to have someone down there with him," said Fleetwood. "He needs to get his Louisiana license and an eye examination. I've got someone taking care of Joel for me until I can get there. I'll drive down after Richard's fight."

Richard was originally scheduled to fight Tony Ramos of El Paso, but Ramos pulled out of the fight and the promoters are still looking for an opponent for Richard.

That may not be an easy task.

From his first three fights, the elder Abila has posted a 3-0 record, two by technical knockout and one in a six-round unanimous decision. His fight Wednesday will be only his second six-round and Fleetwood says the one after that will go eight.

IN OTHER Midland Boxing Club news, five team members qualified for the State Amateur Boxing Federation Tournament (formerly AAU) in Victoria on March 19-21 from competition in the Regional Tournament in Amarillo over the weekend.

Of the five boxers going to state, only Robert Ochoa at 132 pounds had to win his way. But he did it impressively by posting two RSC's (Ref Stops Contest) in one night.

His first victory came over Victory Cavazos in the second round followed by an RSC in the first round against Jesse Guindalla.

Kevin Taylor, at 156 pounds, lost his bid for the state tournament, but since there were no fighters at 165 pounds, he will represent that weight.

Ruben Tagle won at 178 pounds uncontested.

Joel Abila and Felix Munoz (119) were down with the flu and didn't make the Regional fights, but would have had they been well. Since their opponents failed to show up, they were awarded the slots.

Chaps get two-day break from work

Midland College got a couple days off this week after winning the Region V Junior College basketball championship over Cisco JC in Big Spring Saturday night. Monday was a day for relaxation and reward for earning the trip to next week's nationals at Hutchinson, Kan. MC was idle today because Coach Jerry Stone was off in Seminole, Okla., scouting a possible first-round opponent.

The Chaparrals learned they will play the 7:45 p.m. game opening day Tuesday at Hutchinson. They still don't know who the opponent will be. Westark of Fort Smith, Ark., and Seminole, Okla., meet tonight to decide which will meet Dodge City, Kan., Friday night. The winner of that game will be MC's opening round opponent.

The 16-team double-elimination tournament begins with six games Tuesday, and there will be five Wednesday, six Thursday, five Friday and four Saturday.

"One thing about going to Hutchinson. You know you'll be around a few days to enjoy it," said Stone.

MC will stage its first pretournament workout Wednesday afternoon at Chap Center. Stone will scout Friday's game involving Dodge City.

The Chaps fly from Terminal at 8 a.m. Sunday and arrive at Wichita 10:20 a.m. and will bus to Hutchinson from there. "We are scheduled for a workout at 10:30 a.m. Monday," Stone explained. "So we have to be there early." It will be the Chaps' only workout on the floor of the 8,000-seat coliseum.

BASEBALL ROUNDUP

Brett wants more money

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

Everything's up to date in Kansas City. Now it's George Brett who wants more money.

The Kansas City Star — the newspaper, not the ballplayer — said in a story from the Royals' spring training camp Monday that Brett is seeking a contract similar to those recently signed by George Foster of the New York Mets (five years, $10 million) and Gary Carter of the Montreal Expos (eight years, $15 million).

"The whole situation regarding baseball salaries has changed since I signed my present contract," said the 28-year-old third baseman.

Brett is in the first year of a five-year pact he negotiated two years ago at an estimated annual salary of $900,000, plus a reported $500,000 signing bonus.

"At the time I was negotiating it, my father, (brother) Bobby and I agreed that if I could get to the million-dollar plateau things couldn't get any higher. Now, some guys are getting $2 million who have never hit .300. I've done it six times."

General Manager John Schuerholz said the Royals are willing to listen to Brett — the two have met five times in the last month — but no promises have been made.

"With a player of George's caliber, we're not going to say, 'See you later,'" Schuerholz said. "His is not an unreasonable request. We've never felt there were any threatening overtones, nothing along the lines of 'If you don't do this, I'll do that.' But there is a strong emotional feeling on George's part that he should be categorized with Foster, Carter, (Mike) Schmidt, and players of that caliber."

"We will give the request appropriate consideration to see if something should be done to make him a lifetime Royal."

The Royals' policy has been not to renegotiate contracts, but they have granted extensions at higher salaries.

"I feel I've contributed a lot to this club and I'd like to be paid like some of the other players in baseball," said Brett, a two-time batting champion and the American League's Most Valuable Player in 1980 when he batted .390. "It's a delicate matter. It might take a year to work out. It might take two years. I just wanted them to be aware of my intentions."

THE ROYALS opened their major league exhibition schedule today against the Pittsburgh

Pirates.

In Monday's action, four Atlanta pitchers held Los Angeles to one hit — a seventh-inning double by Ron Cey — and the Braves ran their spring record to 3-0 by blanking the Dodgers 5-0. Jose Alvarez, Larry Bradford, Gene Garber and Al Hrabosky were the pitchers as the Braves continued their sensational mound work — they haven't allowed an earned run in an 'A' game.

But the Braves' 'B' squad lost to the New York Yankees 3-2. The Yankees got RBI singles from Andre Robertson and Lou Piniella in a three-run sixth inning. Both Atlanta runs came against Tommy John.

The Montreal Expos also exhibited some strong pitching. Ray Burris hurled three perfect innings, Scott Sanderson and David Palmer allowed one hit apiece and Woodie Fryman tossed a perfect ninth as the Expos beat the Baltimore Orioles 2-0.

GEORGE BELL'S ninth-inning double gave the Toronto Blue Jays a 4-3 victory over the Chicago White Sox. Bell also drove in the tying run with a seventh-inning single, while rookies Paul Hodgson and Jesse Barfield homered for the Blue Jays.

USC football facing probation

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Southern California's football team could be placed on probation and put out of the bowl picture next year, the Los Angeles Times reported today.

The National Collegiate Athletic Association has been investigating reports that some of the school's football players sold their tickets at inflated prices.

The newspaper quotes a university source as saying the NCAA investigation has verified reports that assistant coach Marv Goux acted as ticket broker for the players, and that his role was more extensive than previously reported.

But the Times said there was no evidence Goux made a profit from the sales.

USC OFFICIALS went before the NCAA infractions committee to defend the football program Feb. 19 in Dallas.

The school had expected to learn the result of the investigation within two weeks. So far no decision has been announced.

Athletes may accept tickets from their school for their personal use, but it is an NCAA violation to sell the tickets for more than their face value.

"Rose Bowl time was good money time," the Times quoted an unnamed former USC athlete — not a football player — as saying. He said his friends in football sold their tickets, and added that he believed the players were given eight tickets with the right to buy eight more.

Asked about Goux's role in the ticket sales, the athlete said, "Certainly I recall the guys speaking of it, taking them (the tickets) into the assistant coach's office ... at practice and getting the money right there."

He said he believes Goux did not make any money in the deal.

"He didn't get anything out of it. He just kept the players happy. A player could get a couple thousand bucks, if you multiply 16 tickets or whatever it was by 100 or 200."

"Every guy who had his eyes and ears open in the old PE building, where the USC locker room used to be, saw it. Or, if you hung around the student union building where the coaches' offices were, you saw it."

GOUX DENIED any role in the ticket sales when questioned by reporters in January, but the Times reported its source said Goux told the NCAA infractions committee of his "activities as a ticket broker."

Such a role could lead to a restriction of his recruitment activities even though the school has said he will not become the scapegoat for any violations.

The Times also said it is believed that some players testified before the committee about the sales.

The Miami News in 1979 reported that Richard Wood, now with the Tampa Bay Buccaneers, said he got up to $500 from Goux for 10 Rose Bowl tickets. Wood later said he was misquoted.

Goux and the school's athletic director, Dick Perry, refused comment on the report.

"I was told by the president of the university that there is nothing I can say or do," Goux said. "When the university says that you can have a news conference with Marv Goux, then I'll do it."

ANOTHER QUESTION addressed by the NCAA was whether the school used some of the ticket money to provide funds for the athletic department. But the Times quoted a university source as saying that was not true.

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Louis O'Neal scored 25 points and Lamaar Edwards added 20 Monday to lead Saginaw Valley State to a 60-48 upset of eighth-seeded Stephen F. Austin in the NAIA basketball tournament.

O'Neal and Edwards got 22 of their points in the first half as the Michigan school bolted to a quick 16-5 lead over poor-shooting Stephen F. Austin en route to a 28-20 halftime advantage.

MHS places second in Lady Bulldog Relays

PLAINVIEW — Led by a strong contingent of sprinters the Midland High girls' track team captured second place at the Lady Bulldog Relays here Saturday. Lubbock Estacado won the ten-team event 111-93 over the Lady Bulldogs with Hereford taking third.

Sophomore sensation Lydia Jackson captured the 100-meter dash in 11.48 while teammate Arlene Adams took first place in the 200 meters with a time of 26.18. The two sprinters then teamed with Penny Griffin and Demetra Fort to win the 800-meter relay in 1:48.62.

In the 400-meter relay Virgie Cooks joined Jackson, Adams and Fort to take first in their heat with a time of 50.65. Due to the freezing temperature compounded by high winds track officials decided to forego the finals and took the best heat times giving Estacado the victory with a 50.34 time.

Track coach Brenda Mitchell was disappointed that her girls didn't get to run against Estacado. "I think we could have beat them (Estacado) if we had run the finals, but it was just too cold," she said.

Griffin and Fort spent almost as much time running between events as they did in competition. Griffin flew 17-6 to place second in the long jump, 34-6 in the triple jump for another second and 4-8 in the high jump, finishing fifth. Fort hopped, skipped and jumped 33-9 for a fourth place finish in the triple jump and finished nine inches behind Griffin to take third in the long jump.

Other scorers included Rochele Gill, who placed third in the high jump with a leap of 4-10, Paula Simmons with a sixth place finish in the discus and Sandy Rodriguez who ran a 6:05.85 for a sixth place finish in the 1600 meters.

Mitchell was pleased with the teams performance in their premier meet. "We had some excellent times for this early in the season, and it was 16 degrees at 9 a.m. the day of the meet," the second year coach said, "but then everyone had to run in those conditions."

The MHS tracksters travel back to the Panhandle to compete in the Amarillo Invitational this weekend.

Lee JV rips Monahans to win 18-5

The Midland Lee junior varsity baseball team upped its record to 3-0 by handily Monahans JV an 18-5 loss Monday.

Rene Payan, 1-0, went three innings for the Rebels for the victory and was relieved by John Denton in the fourth who was relieved by Bryan Willis in the sixth. Payan gave up all five runs.

Steve Woodlee led the Rebel offense with a three-for-five performance including a double for six RBI's. Rob Walker connected on two-of-five for two RBI's and Steve Nichols was perfect in two trips to the plate for one RBI.

On Thursday, the Rebels will open play in the Pecos Junior Varsity Tournament with a 2 p.m. rematch with Monahans.

DETROIT (AP) — A showdown between undisputed world middle-weight champion Marvin Hagler and Detroit challenger Thomas Hearns is "all set" for May 24 at the Pontiac Silverdome, according to a published report.

From tiny butterfly picks to large custom designed skylights, Midland Stained Glass Center offers variety and creativity in glass. The center, 4313-A West Illinois, also sponsors classes and workshops to help you make your own stained glass treasures.

Stained glass pieces make charming gifts

Charming stained glass gifts are appropriate for any gift-giving occasion: Butterfly picks to insert in gift plants or planters, (there are also bees, small parrots, hummingbirds); a colorful bouquet of stained glass balloons, perhaps personalized with a child's name, as an unusual gift to the new baby or to the birthday child; a hand-painted butterfly, outlined in 24 carat gold, and framed, to present to Mother, your favorite aunt or this spring's bride; and, the custom designed skylight, an impressive gift to anyone, at anytime!

Midland Stained Glass Center will be happy to accept orders for stained glass pieces. They do encourage you to act promptly if you want your order as an Easter or Mother's Day gift. Other popular gift suggestions in these categories include the little keepsake box and a stained glass planter, (a "frame" to hold a hanging plant.) Mary Richardson, center owner, welcomes consultations and always has lots of good ideas.

How about making your own stained glass gifts for spring? Midland Stained Glass Center has several new books complete with patterns.

A series of spring classes will begin soon at the center, for those who would like instruction. Call 687-0322 to inquire about times for the Beginners' Class. For anyone wanting to take the popular Lampshade Construction Class in April, it is important to enroll in a Beginners' Class this month. The center is also offering Copper Foiling to those who have learned the fundamentals of lead construction.

An etching class will begin soon and should attract a number of hobbyists. For the amount of time spent, glass etching is one of the most rewarding things you can get into. The process is quite simple, and has lovely results.

Midland Stained Glass Center, 4313-A W. Illinois in the Chaparral Plaza, has all kinds of glass and supplies for the artist. It is open Tuesday evenings until 9 p.m. for those who need to use the center's facilities to complete their projects. Commission work is accepted for doors, windows, mirrors, skylights, planters, lamps and any other stained glass needs you may have.

Vos Custom Framing will frame anything

Lil and Bill Vos have returned to Midland and opened a fine new shop, Vos Custom Framing and Gallery, at 8 Meta Drive, in the Village (next door to Whites Home and Auto Store.) Their logo — The place to have framing done — bespeaks some thirty years in the business.

Vos Custom Framing will frame anything! All traditional and modern techniques, mirrors, shadowboxes for your treasures or for fun, needle work, china, antique items, posters, maps and cross sections for oil companies; these are just a few of the many framing needs to which Mr. and Mrs. Vos have applied their special skills.

In addition to the more than 400 frame styles stocked for custom work, Vos Custom Framing features ready-made frames from the Carr Collection in sizes from small up to 30 inches by 40 inches. They are especially adept at grooved and inlaid work for precision framing.

Artists represented in the gallery include G. Harvey, James Boren, Donald Vann, Janie Linney, Bob Dean, Thompson Crow, Robert Pummill, George Boutwell and others. Some Dalhart Windberg prints will be added shortly. Prominent in the collection are old fashioned Western and oil well scenes, wildlife, landscapes and some Indian art. You can view several fine oils waiting to be stretched and framed.

Vos has created several miniature wooden buildings, along old Western town lines. These are "replicas" of our local banks, the Midland Reporter-Telegram, and so on. Many include working clocks, and all are charming.

Vos Custom Framing not only assists individuals and corporations in their framing requirements, but are also working with decorators. Mr. and Mrs. Vos will be very happy to show you the many possibilities of any framing job and discuss it with you.

Princess Di, Liz finally meet following 'Little Foxes' show

LONDON (AP) — Princess Diana had a wish come true when she met actress Elizabeth Taylor after a charity performance of "The Little Foxes" at London's Victoria Palace theater.

Royal aides said the 20-year-old princess of Wales had long wanted to meet Miss Taylor, but at the actress' request the conversation was kept secret.

"The princess was charming, gracious and beautiful," Miss Taylor told reporters after meeting the princess Monday night. "I was more than thrilled to meet her. But I never discuss private conversations with royalty."

The princess clearly enjoyed the special charity performance and applauded enthusiastically when Miss Taylor and the cast took their curtain calls. Lillian Hellman's drama opens to the public Thursday.

She laughed uproariously when a Welsh Guardsman in scarlet tunic went on stage to present Miss Taylor with a bouquet, and the curtain was lowered on him by mistake.

Earlier, Princess Diana missed a cue of her own at the theater.

As she dithered at the doorway to the royal box, the state trumpeters began their fanfare and the spotlight fell on an empty seat.

NEW YORK (AP) — Singer Kenny Rogers says he has endowed a $1 million "World Hunger Award" for journalists who "bring attention to the issues of world hunger."

Rogers announced Monday that he and his wife, Marianne, felt "although one million dollars is a substantial sum of money, it would have little impact by itself on the war against hunger."

Rogers said he conceived of the award after asking the late singer Harry Chapin, who founded the World Hunger Organization, what he would do with $1 million.

Rogers said he and his wife "found recent reports pinpoint public education as the major key to the elimination of hunger."

"This awards program provided us with the opportunity to effectively encourage, honor and reward those journalists and other people, professional and nonprofessional, who contribute substantially each year to the education of the public about the issue and its elimination," he said.

The awards, which will be given in 10 categories and carry "substantial cash prizes," are to be given each year on the day after Thanksgiving at a luncheon in Los Angeles, Rogers said. The first awards will cover a one-year period to June 30, 1982.

NEW YORK (AP) — NBC correspondent Chris Wallace says while he was interviewing and videotaping Col. Moammar Khadafy in Libya, the Libyan leader's aides were taping him.

Wallace, a Washington-based correspondent who normally questions politicians in studios, said his interview with Khadafy, conducted Saturday night in a sandy tent in the middle of his military compound in Tripoli, was "surreal."

"Khadafy seems to like meeting foreign visitors there," Wallace said by telephone from Rome, where he had finished editing the interview for Monday's "Today" segment. "Inside the tent, there were beautiful Arabian rugs on the sand, along with videotape machines and TV sets. While we were interviewing them, they were taping us."

Wallace said he had requested the interview, using his Arab contacts in Washington as intermediaries, two months ago. "I sense that the interview was the first part of a media campaign to improve his image," he said.

Wallace said he was struck by the unpredictability of the Libyan leader. "His aides said he would not speak English, but when we said the American people would like to hear him directly, he complied. I think that surprised his aides," Wallace said.

MOSCOW (AP) — Leonid M. Zamyatin, a leading foreign policy spokesman for Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev, has been awarded the Soviet Union's highest decoration on his 60th birthday, the official Soviet news agency Tass said.

Zamyatin, who headed Tass from 1970 to 1978, was given his second Order of Lenin "in recognition of his services to the Communist Party and the Soviet state," Tass said Monday. He won his first Order of Lenin in 1971.

In 1978 Zamyatin was named chief of the newly created department of international information of the Communist Party's policy since 1976.

Zamyatin acted as party spokesman to the foreign press during the party's 26th congress in February 1981, and frequently handles media questions when Brezhnev travels abroad.

Houston firm thinking Hawaii as possible rocket launch site

HOUSTON (AP) — A Houston company looking for a place from which it can safely launch rockets into an orbit around the Earth's poles is surveying Hawaiian land for a potential launch site, a spokesman said.

Executives of Space Services Inc. view 50-100 acres near South Point, Hawaii, as "ideal for placing satellites into low earth polar orbit," company spokesman Walt Pennino said Monday.

He said a real estate representative would speak to the city council of Hilo, Hawaii, this week about the possibility of leasing the land.

He said Space Services needs a location from which a north-south flight would cross very little land. The firm hopes to launch an orbital flight by the end of 1983, he said.

"I looked at the property in December," Pennino said. "It's an area of lava flows coming down from the big mountains."

It's really not suitable for much else."

The company hopes to conduct its first successful launch of a test rocket this August from Matagorda Island, off the Texas coast, Pennino said. Space Services' first rocket exploded during a trial launch at that site last summer.

African playwright finds Yale home

By SCOTT M. BUSHNELL
Associated Press Writer

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP) — South Africa's best-known dramatist has found a home for his work at the Yale Repertory Theater.

But Athol Fugard, whose play "Master Harold...and the Boys" opens for previews March 9, is emphatic that he will not become an exile from his native land.

"I am going back to Port Elizabeth as soon as I'm sure this new play is going well," said the 50-year-old writer, a white whose anti-apartheid statements resulted in revocation of his passport by the South African government from 1965 to 1971.

THE NEW Haven premiere brings Fugard back to the scene of the start of his most significant success. It also marks a break with his past traditions.

It was at the Yale Repertory Theater that "A Lesson From Aloes" — which subsequently moved to Broadway, won the 1980 Drama Critics Circle Award and was nominated for a Tony — was first staged.

In an interview this week, Fugard praised Yale Repertory's artistic director, Lloyd Richards, for "making it a writer's theater."

Yet, "Master Harold...and the Boys" also represents a departure from Fugard's past practices. It is the first of his plays to be given its debut outside of South Africa.

"There are elements in the play that I knew would not get past the very ruthless censorship of my country," Fugard said.

"There is a question of language and certain elements would be regarded as blasphemous."

The play concerns a white, 17-year-old boy, Harold — or Hally, as he is nicknamed — and two black men, Sam and Willie, who work for his parents in a Port Elizabeth tea room. The drama is a poignant look at a young man's attempt to deal with growing up.

"I get very nervous when the autobiographical element comes up," said Fugard, who was a young boy in Port Elizabeth. "There are personal biographical elements in everything that you write."

"In my youth, I did have a very important relationship with two black men who worked for my family. They taught me many things," he said, including ballroom dancing, which is a central theme to the play.

IN THE play, the two men are preparing for a ballroom dance competition and Fugard makes the image applicable to the characters' lives and to South Africa and the world.

"To be one of those finalists on that dance floor is like, like being in a dream world in which accidents don't happen," the character named Sam tells Hally.

To which the playwright added this week, "A dream of a world without collisions. South Africa needs a dream like that."

Fugard is confident that "Master Harold...and the Boys" is a good play.

Uniforms disappear

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Poland's state-run television said today it is doing away with one of the country's most visible reminders of martial law — military uniforms for newscasters.

Announcers were in civilian clothes on Monday's late news show for the first time since the military crackdown Dec. 13, a spokeswoman for Polish television confirmed. She said newscasters will be in civilian dress on the main evening news show at 7:30 p.m. starting today.

It will be "just like before Dec. 13," she said. She offered no explanation for the change in dress.

Clements says Reagan has no energy policy

ABILENE, Texas (AP) — Oilmen will suffer if President Reagan dismantles the Department of Energy, leaving them to contend with a maze of federal agencies that have failed to produce a coherent energy policy, says Gov. Bill Clements.

Reagan's proposal to kill the Department of Energy is "crazy," since the department was created to simplify processing of regulatory questions through 37 different federal institutions.

In an interview with the Abilene Reporter-News, Clements said that he told Reagan, "In my judgment, the Reagan administration does not have an energy policy. If you disagree with that, tell me what it is."

He said Reagan did not answer. Clements, a wealthy oilman, said he has watched the progress of every president since Lyndon Johnson. There is no more of an energy policy now than there was "under LBJ in the '60s," he said.

"That's a hell of an indictment," Clements said. The governor said, however, that the Department of Energy could probably become more efficient if it were to cut its manpower by half. He said poor management also is a legitimate complaint.

Clements said the department has failed to give enough support to the federal synfuels corporation, which was created to develop synthetic energy sources. He added that more nuclear power plants should be constructed.

"We let Jane Fonda just stop us dead in our tracks," he said.

Clements also said he agrees with Reagan's concept to transfer social programs to states' responsibility, but wants to see the program in its final form.

"We're a long way from that finished piece of paper on

Mr. Reagan's desk for him to sign," he said.

He predicted that Arkansas would sell surplus floodwaters from the southwest corner of the state to help solve Texas' long-range water needs.

Arkansas Gov. Frank White's press secretary said Monday that the long-standing opposition to selling Arkansas water to Texas has not changed.

"There is no such thing as surplus water in Arkansas," said Barbara Pardue.

Clements was in Abilene to address the West Central Texas Oil and Gas Association.

Reagan sets new skirmish over budget

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, back in Washington after a West Coast mini-vacation, is renewing the campaign for his unpopular 1983 budget plan before an unlikely group of skeptics — 53 Republican senators.

But despite fresh conciliatory statements from presidential aides, congressional and White House officials alike say they don't expect any compromise spending plan to emerge from Reagan's trip to the Capitol today.

The president was meeting first with the Senate GOP leadership and committee chairmen and then with all 53 Republican senators.

Reagan, whose visit to the Senate is described by a spokesman as a "friendly neighborly gesture," repeatedly has invited Congress to make deeper cuts in domestic spending than he recommended.

But so far he has shown little willingness to accept changes in either the 3-year tax cut legislation approved a year ago or his proposed Pentagon buildup.

But spokesman Larry Speakes, talking to reporters Monday, appeared to open the door to at least some reduction in the defense budget.

"If we cut defense, we can't cut it where it would be misused by the Russians, and that's the president's key point," he said.

"Any major cut in defense would send the wrong signal as far as our nation's determination to rebuild our national defense."

And presidential counselor Edwin Meese III told reporters that Reagan has "already indicated that he's pretty flexible on most everything except the two fundamental areas, taxes and defense."

But Meese also specifically declined to "speculate" about the defense budget — apparently leaving the door open to some reduction.

"What's a compromise? Everybody knows that the final budget that is signed will not be the same budget, item for item, that he submitted," Meese said.

In advance of today's session, the Republicans' assistant Senate leader, Ted Stevens of Alaska, predicted that Reagan will agree to compromises "including defense and including revenues and including normally sacrosanct areas such as entitlements."

But Stevens, appearing on the CBS-TV "Morning" program, said he expects there will be "very little" deleted from the president's proposed defense budget.

Speakes, however, said this morning the president "really is firm on no cuts in the defense program."

"He will certainly look at suggestions," Speakes said.

Reagan's 'love affair' with big business going bankrupt

By OWEN ULLMANN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — During its first year in office, the Reagan administration had a non-stop love affair going with big business. Now, budget-deficit worries have taken the bloom off the rose for business and wounded administration officials are reacting like jilted suitors.

Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan — a member of Wall Street's elite before coming to Washington —

reportedly is furious that a prestigious business group has suggested that scheduled tax cuts for individuals this year and next might be eliminated to pare the giant deficits President Reagan is proposing.

The Business Roundtable, whose members include chief executive officers of 200 of the nation's largest corporations, are unwilling, however, to sacrifice any of the massive tax cuts for businesses and wealthy individuals that the administration and Congress gave them last year, Treasury officials grouse.

Aides report that Regan, former chairman of brokerage giant Merrill Lynch and Co., has expressed outrage in private that after all the administration has done for his former business world colleagues, they act like fair-weather friends. He complains that as soon as times get rough they're ready to abandon the heart of the president's economic program — the three-stage, 25 percent cut in individual tax rates through 1983.

"Exceeding greedy," is how one

Treasury official described the Business Roundtable's position. "Arrogant," charged another official.

If big business is so worried about future deficits, Regan told some Roundtable members, perhaps the administration should seek a rollback in some of last year's business tax breaks. Or, perhaps the administration should go after the wealthiest individual taxpayers by reversing the reduction in the top income tax bracket from 70 percent to 50 percent, which went into effect Jan. 1.

The Roundtable members didn't like that idea, according to the Treasury officials, who talked only on the condition their names not be used.

Some Regan aides want the Treasury secretary either to lash out publicly against the business group or to try to persuade it to switch its position on the tax issue, which was communicated privately to the White House last week but never formally announced in public.

Roundtable spokesman James Keogh would not comment on administration

accounts that leaders of the group suggested a postponement of the 10 percent individual tax cut scheduled for July 1983, and possibly even a deferral of the 10 percent cut due this July.

Keogh said the group was not yet prepared to go beyond a statement it issued last week saying that "it will be necessary to address the revenue side" of the budget.

The Treasury Department, meanwhile, is growing frustrated that business is not using its new tax breaks to invest in new factories and jobs.

'Scuffle' described as testimony begins

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

A longtime friend of Robert James "R.J." Morris Sr. testified in Midland's 238th State District Court on Monday that Morris and a fellow he was shooting craps with on the night of Morris' death last Nov. 14 had gotten in a scuffle after Morris referred to Booker T. "Bilby" Green, 42, as a "boy."

Green is charged with murder in the shooting death of Morris, 50. "Whatever the bet was, R.J. won the bet" and picked up $800 off the table in the gaming room of King's Sandwich Parlor at 301 S. Lee St. in southeast Midland, testified the state's first witness, Yancy Abner Batie.

"He reached across and got the money," said Batie. "He had it in his hand and started talking gambling-shack talk," as was the custom of a winner in a betting match, said Batie, 57.

"We use vulgarly just to make a point," he explained. "The winner always talks."

Batie said Morris, with whom he had gambled and associated for years, apparently wanted to start another dice game. He said about 10 people were around the table.

"He (R.J.) said, 'You boys get your money down, and let's bet. I've got plenty of money, and let's bet.'"

BATIE, WHO was questioned by prosecutor Marian Bentley, said Green reacted to the "you boys" reference by Morris.

"He (Green) told R.J. he wasn't a 'boy.'"

Batie indicated that Morris was proud of his win at dice.

"I've got plenty of money, and I don't have to work for it," he quoted Morris. Earlier testimony noted that Morris, who first moved to Midland about 30 years ago, had advanced from a waiter at the Petroleum Club of Midland and waiter and bartender at other places to a successful businessman in The Flats, the business core of the black community in southeast Midland.

Batie said Green and Morris got into a verbal bout until "Bilby (Green) hit R.J. in the jaw." A scuffle ensued but soon was broken up. Morris left the gaming room, as did his son, Robert J. "Bubba" Morris Jr.

In cross-examining Batie, defense attorney H. Thomas Hirsch delved somewhat into R.J. Morris' background. Morris opened the Porters and Waiters Restaurant, now known as R.J.'s Real Pit Bar-B-Q at 2301 E. Kentucky Ave., came into other property, a "lavish" home and other houses, and the M&M Liquor store building where he was felled by one of five shots from a rifle. R.J. Morris' son operated the liquor store.

"Not only was he a gambler, he was a bootlegger?" Hirsch asked Batie. "Was he selling whiskey after hours?"

"Yes," responded the witness. Hirsch surmised that R.J. Morris "got money" by "gambling, bootlegging and who knows what."

THE DEFENSE attorney focused his questioning on the night of Nov. 14.

Oil prices may be lowered unless OPEC cuts output

NEW YORK (AP) — Gasoline prices will continue to fall unless OPEC countries, already painfully short of cash because of the world recession, can agree next week on a further oil production cutback of 15 percent, analysts say.

World oil prices have been falling because of weak demand, prompting American oil companies to cut wholesale gasoline prices by up to 8 cents earlier this month and touching off scattered gas wars at the retail level.

Saudi Arabia said it cut production by 1 million barrels a day on March 1. And OPEC's president, Sheikh Mana Saeed Oteiba of the United Arab Emirates said last weekend the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries would "defend ... against all pressure attempts aimed at reducing the organization's official prices."

"I don't think they're going far enough to make a big difference for now," said James Bock, an international economist at Standard Oil Co. (Indiana).

Analysts see little chance that prices will stabilize in coming weeks unless Saudi Arabia wins agreement from other members at their March 19 meeting to cut their production as well. That is because demand for oil remains weak due to recession in the industrialized West.

Without more widespread OPEC production cuts, the Saudi action will be diluted by other members seeking to sell more oil to increase their export incomes.

"It's going to take something pretty dramatic to reverse the situation," said

Stephen A. Smith, director of energy services at Data Resources Inc., an economic research firm. He estimates excess oil supplies on world markets at 600 million barrels, far above normal levels.

Smith believes the Saudis will "pull out all stops" to defend the current benchmark price. He said several OPEC members would have to join. Saudi Arabia in cutting production by a total of at least 3 million barrels a day from the group's current estimated output of 20 million.

Former German SS captain dies in California

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — A former German SS captain who voluntarily surrendered his U.S. citizenship last year after a Justice Department probe of his Nazi past has died in a Sacramento hospital.

Otto von Bolschwing, 72, died Sunday at American River Hospital in Sacramento. He had been suffering from "supra nuclear palsy," a rare and incurable brain disease.

Von Bolschwing, who emigrated to the United States in 1954 and became a naturalized citizen in 1959, had claimed he was a double agent during World War II, aiding American Army intelligence units as he held a series of sensitive high ranking posts in the Sicherheitsdienst, the elite SD foreign intelligence arm of the SS.

Von Bolschwing's connection with American intelligence forces has never been acknowledged directly by the United States government.

However, the Central Intelligence Agency sent two agents to sit in on an interrogation of von Bolschwing last year by Justice Department officials, and the government obtained a court order sealing the transcript of von Bolschwing's remarks at that time.

Department of Justice officials refused comment Monday on why that record remains sealed.

Because of von Bolschwing's deteriorating health, the Justice Department agreed to allow him to remain in the United States after he surrendered his U.S. citizenship last December.

At that time, the Justice Department alleged that von Bolschwing had played an active role in the persecution of Jews in Germany, serving as chief of the SD in Bucharest during 1940 and 1941 and acting as an adviser to the Gestapo and to Adolf Eichmann, the architect of Germany's mass killing program.

Von Bolschwing "worked with the SD's Office of Jewish Affairs and advised that office, and in particular Wright was born Feb. 18, 1908, in Lampkin. He married the former Mary Jo Van Dyke. He was a barber. He served in the Army in World War II, in both the European and Pacific Theaters. He had been a resident of Midland for the past two years. He was a member of the Asbury United Methodist Church in Midland.

Survivors include his wife, Mary Jo Wright of Amarillo; a son, Howard Wright of Midland; two daughters, Betty Neal of Amarillo and Joyce Read of Sonoma, Calif.; a brother, Johnnie Wright of Markham; two sisters, Maple Hubbard of California and Edna Mae Baggett of Brownfield; five grandchildren and five great-grandchildren.

Adolf Eichmann, in planning programs of persecution and forced emigration of Jews from areas under the control of the Nazi government of Germany," the Justice Department alleged in a May 27, 1981, news release announcing a motion to revoke von Bolschwing's citizenship.

Von Bolschwing denied all Justice Department allegations except his membership in the Nazi party, SS and SD, facts that he had concealed in his application for U.S. citizenship.

Although the transcript of von Bolschwing's statements to the Justice Department remains sealed, related transcripts which are not sealed include testimony:

—That the Gestapo threw von Bolschwing out of the SS and placed him in a Gestapo prison in mid-1942.

—That he was on a "liquidation list" of the Gestapo after marrying a woman in Vienna whose mother was Jewish.

—That he "assisted U.S. forces (risking) his own life in capturing SS officers and other Nazi officials" and received an award from the Tyrolian Underground for his assistance near the end of the war.

Same song, second verse

The international propaganda machine that heralds communist conquests is being cranked up to sweeten American public opinion for the take-over of El Salvador by a Soviet-backed regime.

There are familiar charges, villains, heroes, fantasies. They look familiar because the scenario is being handled by the same slick types that "sold" the United States on communist expansion in Cuba, North Vietnam, Laos, Cambodia and Nicaragua.

The villains are El Salvador's centrist government and national guard, which are resisting the Soviet-backed forces, and the U.S., which is providing aid.

The heroes are the Soviet-backed forces. They are portrayed as nice guys, peasants, decent folk. In truth some are. But there are also the tough, hard-core, Moscow-trained, Kremlin-controlled communist cadres that will bully their way into absolute power as they always do when the time is ripe.

They employ the strategy used by Lenin in the spring, summer and fall of 1918, grabbing the nerve-centers and force-controls, communications, arsenals, food warehouses, transport terminals, media and, most vital, top command of the police and armed forces. That is how minority dictatorship captured the popular Russian revolution in November 1918 and set a pattern used from then on to spread communist totalitarianism.

It was used after World War II to communize Hungary, Romania, Bulgaria, Czechoslovakia and Poland. Nicaragua is seething in the same pot. It awaits El Salvador.

Some officials of the United Nations, a harbor for spies and agents, appear to be a part of the international propaganda fiction, the El Salvador war. They keep accusing government forces of "political killings." But there is a war on. Usually when people are killed in a war they are called "war casualties."

There are no reports of "war casualties" from the partisans filing their stories from El Salvador. It is curious. Here is a long, fierce, bloody war for control of a country and there are absolutely no "war casualties." Why? What propaganda value is there in plain old "war casualties?"

"Political killings" are "human rights violations" and these are sins of which the Salvadoran junta is guilty. Never mind millions upon millions of ongoing human rights violations in Poland, Afghanistan, Cambodia, Laos, Vietnam, Czechoslovakia, Hungary, Romania, Bulgaria, Albania, Latvia, Estonia, Lithuania and the Soviet Union itself.

Never mind the Soviet ground forces, air and naval bases, missiles, arsenals, gulags and aggression-training camps that appear in countries taken over by the Soviets and their surrogates.

If what is being written and said about what is happening in El Salvador sounds familiar, it is because it has all been written and said before for the same reason — as a diversion from an act of Soviet expansion by military force.

Bubble machine stops

Wunnaful, wunnaful. The bubble music of Lawrence Welk has been taped for television for the last time, ending a show biz career that dates back almost 30 years.

There will be reruns, of course. The Lawrence Welk Show will join such goodies but oldies as "M.A.S.H.," "Hogan's Heroes" and "I Love Lucy."

Welk has long been the favorite of the Geritol Set, who knew they could tune him in for good, wholesome entertainment.

When he first made the airwaves, Welk still was playing the accordion, fingering the keyboard and directing the orchestra with "And a-one, and a-two." In recent years he stuck to directing, ending the show each time with a little ballroom dancing.

Born near Strasburg, N.D., Welk left the home of his German parents, knowing little English. He often made mistakes in front of his audiences, choosing the wrong words, but people laughed with him instead of at him.

His music will continue to give pleasure.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Israelis: Khadafy not a madman, but ...

WASHINGTON — There is a tendency in Washington to refer to Libyan dictator Muammar Khadafy glibly as a crazy man. Armchair psychologists justify the label by pointing to his fanatic extremism, his failure to put realistic limits on boastful pronouncements, and his periodic fits of deep depression, when he retreats to the desert and broods in a tent.

But beyond the egomania that afflicts most political leaders, is Khadafy mentally aberrant? Is he truly deranged?

Israeli intelligence is a highly respected group of professionals with a particularly keen interest in the Libyan strongman. Khadafy's oil billions, combined with his implacable hostility toward Israel, make him in many ways the most dangerous of all that beleaguered nation's enemies. It is vital for the Israelis to know whether they are dealing with a madman.

After years of research, picking the brains of medical experts to assess the information gathered by their agents, Israeli intelligence officials have compiled a psychological profile of Khadafy. My associate Indy Badwar has seen a copy.

The Israelis' conclusion is that Khadafy is not crazy. Representing him as mentally ill "is of no help to an understanding of him and does not fit the facts," the secret profile concludes.

Among the juicier suggestions in the various intelligence reports analyzed by the Israelis was that Khadafy's behavioral quirks were the result of brain damage from venereal disease. But the profile says this possibility cannot be verified. "Apart from mental problems that could be associated with syphilis, there is no evidence that Khadafy suffers from symptoms matching the disease."

There have been reports that Khadafy suffers from schizophrenia, paranoia, hysteria and serious psychoneurotic disturbances. But the profile concludes: "Available evidence is insufficient to confirm or deny indefinitely whether he has a mental illness ... There is much information about his strangeness, lack of stability and emotional disturbances ... (and he) does apparently suffer from a psychological disturbance that can be characterized as a character disturbance."

But the analysis points out that Khadafy "has been functioning as the leader of Libya for 12 years, and it is difficult to believe that a man suffering from manic depressive psychosis would be capable of withstanding the pressures that he has been under for such a long time and with such stability, without our being witness to repeated outbreaks of illness."

Khadafy's mercurial temper and bouts of the blues may be partially explained by the man's catalog of painful physical ailments. He had tuberculosis as a child, underwent an appendectomy in 1970, and reportedly suffers from a stomach ulcer, gallstones and kidney colic — enough to make anyone moody and irritable.

It is also quite possible that Khadafy's "strangeness" — to Western eyes at least — is simply the result of his personal background. A shepherd boy who was 16 before he completed the sixth grade, he had a dream of Islamic revolution and pursued it with single-minded zeal.

Khadafy is a Bedouin, born when his father was in his late 60s and the other male offspring in the family were dead. The family lived a nomadic existence, and Muammar was 9 before his father hired an itinerant teacher, who taught the boy to read and write and to recite the Koran by rote.

Young Khadafy's schooling was continually delayed by his duties as a shepherd. But while working his way slowly through high school, the future dictator immersed himself in politics. He studied the works of Michelle Aflaq, Marxist founder of the Baath party, as well as Sun Yat-sen, Kemal Ataturk and Abraham Lincoln.

By the time Khadafy was 16, his charisma and revolutionary fervor had made him a leader. Copying the successful methods of Egypt's pan-Arab revolutionary leader, Gamal Abdel

Nasser, Khadafy sought power through the military. He persuaded his schoolmates to enroll with him in a military officers' school, and they managed to win over successive classes of cadets to their cause. His small and trusted corps of loyalists were pledged to overthrow King Idris and fight for Arab unity.

By 1969, the young rebels were ready to strike. The royal authorities knew the revolution was imminent, and who the leaders were. In fact, orders went out to arrest Khadafy, but the bickering, indecisive officials of the king's government failed to carry out the orders.

The "Free Officers Movement" — the logical culmination of Khadafy's high-school nucleus of revolutionary zealots — overthrew King Idris by an Arabian Night's ruse. They invited the king's police to a party and at the peak of the festivities, took them prisoner. At the age of 27, Muammar Khadafy, the Bedouin shepherd, became ruler of Libya, eager to make his youthful dreams of glory come true.

WHO'S NEWS: Gerard Lougie, a 35-year-old Executive Office mail clerk, suffered a disabling injury in an automobile accident several years ago. But despite his handicap, he is regarded by co-workers as the most dedicated member of the staff. For example, on Jan. 13, when Washington was crippled by a snowstorm, a plane crash and a subway derailment, Lougie spent the night at the office to make sure he'd be on hand for the morning mail delivery. Now the administration budget-cutters have lopped Lougie off the payroll. His colleagues have circulated a petition asking that he be spared.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Tuesday, March 9, the 68th day of 1982. There are 297 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history: In 1661, Cardinal Mazarin died in France — and Louis XIV began personal rule.

On this date: In 1566, David Rizzo — confidential secretary to Mary, Queen of Scots — was murdered.

In 1846, the Treaty of Lahore ended the first Sikh War in India, and Britain gained additional territory.

In 1980, U.S. government auditors concluded that a worldwide computer system built to warn the president of enemy attack was prone to break down under pressure.

Ten years ago: Clifford Irving's purported autobiography of billionaire Howard Hughes was officially discredited as Irving, his wife and his researcher were indicted on criminal charges.

Five years ago: About a dozen armed Hanafi Muslims invaded three buildings in downtown Washington, killing one person, and taking more than 100 people hostage.

One year ago: Convicted murderer Steven Judy was executed in Indiana's electric chair for the 1976 murders of a woman and her three children. Judy had refused to appeal his sentence.

Today's birthday: Mystery writer Mickey Spillane is 64.

Thought for today: Think wrongly, if you please, but in all cases think for yourself. — Gotthold Lessing, German dramatist (1729-1781).

Asner passed line to help U.S. enemies

Some of you may recall that I pointed out U.S. support of El Salvador would afford you an opportunity to watch the Soviet Union activate its net of Communists, leftists and dupes in the United States.

The process is well under way. Ed Asner, the leftist actor who plays Lou Grant on television and is currently president of the Screen Actors' Guild, has launched a fund-raising campaign for a million dollars worth of medical supplies to send to the Marxist guerrillas in El Salvador.

Americans should not tolerate this kind of behavior. If Asner doesn't agree with U.S. policy, he is certainly free to speak out against it, write his congressmen, and send a Mail-gram to the president.

Like Jane Fonda, however, Asner is crossing the line from merely disagreeing with his own government to actively supporting the enemies of freedom.

The guerrillas in El Salvador are openly supported by the Soviet Union, Fidel Castro's government, the Palestine Liberation Organization and the U.S. Communist Party. Those four organizations have never in their entire history supported anybody anywhere who was not Communist. No half-intelligent person could possibly believe the guerrillas in El Salvador are anything but Communist or at least Communist-controlled.

The Communists, of course, are peddling the same line of fertilizer they always peddle to gullible Americans: That the target government is nasty and corrupt and the guerrillas are just poor heroic peasants who desire freedom.

After hearing this line of bull and then seeing what the heroic peasants actually did once they got in power in Cuba, Vietnam, Cambodia, Laos and Nicaragua, you would think no American over six years old would fall for it. P.T. Barnum, however, said there was a sucker born every minute and unfortunately he was talking about America.

Asner is a long-time leftist and working hard to radicalize the Screen Actors' Guild. Apparently the Hollywood southpaw crowd has been so encouraged by the stupid public acceptance of Jane Fonda that they are crawling out of the woodwork and re-doing Hollywood in pink and red.

Asner actively supported the air controllers' strike and maneuvered the Screen Actors' Guild into withdrawing an award they had planned to give to President Ronald Reagan, himself a former SAG president.

Asner, like Fonda, is cynically using his celebrityship and capitalist earnings to screw the very people and the very system which have elevated him from an anonymous nobody to a famous face.

When a congressional committee attempted to look into cocaine use among celebrities, Asner led the charge in screaming McCarthyism.

Well, if you let him and others get away with this, you deserve the fate you will receive if Asner and Fonda's friends ever gain control of this country — a labor camp or firing squad.

If you have any sense of self-preservation, you will actively oppose those who cross the line from honest dissent to active support of your enemies.

You can do this in Asner's case by writing CBS Television, 51 W. 52nd St., New York, N.Y., 10019, and telling them you intend to boycott the Lou Grant Show and its sponsors so long as Asner continues to appear on it.

Don't try to separate Asner's talent as an actor from his poison politics. He doesn't, but he's counting on you to be stupid enough to do it, just as millions have been stupid enough to support Jane Fonda, who was saved from an indictment for treason only by the absence of a declaration of war.

The Country Parson

"Some folks like to expect disaster — it makes them feel better when it doesn't happen."

INSIDE REPORT:

Reagan quietly cracks down on frivolous travel abroad

WASHINGTON — President Reagan has quietly cracked down on frivolous travel abroad in costly government-owned airplanes by high- and middle-level bureaucrats. His personally signed order was written with the help of national security adviser William P. Clark.

It reminded touring bureaucrats that "such travel ... is in itself a part of our foreign policy" and must be "for specific reasons which are consistent with our overall national security policy," limited to "as small as possible" a number of officials.

The crack-down is overdue. To police non-essential travel in the future, the president will insist that "with as much advance notice as possible," the itinerary, names of officials, objectives of the trip and list of "events, meetings and appearances" must be given to Clark for advance approval.

WHITE HOUSE HARDNOSE

As a sign of the political muscle it intends to wield in the 1982 campaign, the White House threatened to fire

Thorne G. Auchter as head of the Occupational Safety and Health Administration (OSHA) unless he rescinded politically-embarrassing job reductions in Rhode Island.

Auchter's plan to downsize OSHA's Providence office and remove more than half its employees was strenuously opposed by Republican senator John Chafee of Rhode Island, a long-time supporter of the controversial agency. Chafee was outraged. Reagan aides, no friends of OSHA, worried that the rebuff would undermine Chafee's prestige in his re-election bid this year in heavily-Democratic Rhode Island. In the eyes of the White House, that danger was magnified by the increase in OSHA staffing in neighboring Massachusetts, where Sen. Edward M. Kennedy also faces re-election this year.

Auchter refused to change his plans. His boss, Secretary of Labor Raymond Donovan, refused to intervene. It was then that presidential aides told Auchter, a building contractor from Jacksonville, Fla., who is new to politics, that he would be fired unless plans were changed. Auchter promptly restored Rhode Island's OSHA contingent.

NIXON'S ADVICE

Former president Richard M. Nixon has passed this advice to the White House: Send out both Vice President George Bush and Rep. Jack Kemp on nationwide barnstorming tours as twin — and competing — Republican point men for the 1982 campaign.

It is a typically-Nixonian solution to the lack of a Republican tough guy to scourge the Democrats this year, in the mold of Vice President Spiro T. Agnew in 1970 and Vice President

Richard M. Nixon in the 1950s. Bush is a "good guy," clearly not cut out for hatchetman.

So, Nixon told a presidential aide, why not use Kemp (another "good guy") and Bush, potential future rivals for the Republican presidential nomination? The news media could be counted on to join in the contest of determining which one did the best job.

SEEKING A SENATOR

New York state Republican leaders are talking about ex-Treasury secretary William Simon and present Housing and Urban Development secretary Samuel Pierce as possible recruits to take on Democratic senator Daniel Patrick Moynihan this year.

Simon, a New Jersey resident though his office is in Manhattan, is being boosted by Nassau County Chairman Joe Margiotta. Other Republican leaders may ask the White House to prevail on Pierce, a prominent New York City lawyer, to come home and run against Moynihan.

Both Simon and Pierce (who is black) are longshots. The talk about them reflects growing concern in Republican circles. State GOP Chairman George Clark has privately given up trying to talk businessman Lewis Lehrman into running for senator instead of governor. Clark grumbles that the White House and Senate give much lip service to pushing Lehrman into the Senate race but have yet to lift a finger toward that end.

Guatemalan opposition calls rally

GUATEMALA CITY (AP) — With the government's military candidate for president leading by 46,000 votes, two of his civilian opponents called on the public to demonstrate today in Guatemala City's main square to support their charges of vote fraud.

Gen. Angel Anibal Guevara held his lead all day Monday but apparently was not going to get the majority needed for election. The outgoing congress then will decide between the two top candidates, and since it is dominated by the rightist government coalition, Guevara's election appeared certain.

With 578 of 889 polling places reporting, the former defense minister had 176,825 votes, or 37.4 percent, the Electoral Council reported.

Mario Sandoval Alarcon of the ultra-rightist National Liberation Movement was second with 130,043 votes, Alejandro Maldonado Aguirre of the center-right Christian Democratic-National Renovator coalition had 117,544, and Gustavo Anzueto Vielman of the Authentic Nationalist Center was a distant fourth with 48,196.

Sandoval Alarcon and Maldonado Aguirre held a news conference Monday night to air their charges that the voting Sunday was rigged by the military-dominated government. They demanded a new election within 60 days and called on the public to support them with a demonstration late this afternoon.

"We together represent the majority of the Guatemalan people," Leonel Sisiniega Otero, Sandoval Alarcon's vice presidential candidate.

He said they expected Anzueto Vielman to join them in their protest.

Guevara, supported by the Institutional Democratic Party that has ruled Guatemala since 1970, the Revolutionary Party and the National Unity Party, said the charges of fraud were the usual complaints of losers.

"Those who lose always speak of fraud ... if they have proof let them present it," he said.

Besides choosing a successor to President Gen. Fernando Romeo Lucas Garcia, who was barred by the constitution from re-election, the voters also balloted for the vice president, 66 members of congress to take office July 1 and municipal officials. No returns from those races were available yet.

It was believed fewer than 1 million of the 2.3 million eligible voters cast their ballots, but there was no indication of the voter turnout.

The leftists boycotted the election, saying their candidates would be killed by right-wing death squads and the voting was a rigged farce to provide a facade of support for the government.

The United States indicated a clean election could influence the resumption of arms aid to the government, which was suspended in 1977 because of the country's human rights record. Church and human rights groups estimate that 300 people a month were killed in 1981 in left-right political violence, and 500 in January 1982.

Hatfield says he prefers talking

By BARRY SCHWEID
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A powerful Senate Republican says he will try to block all U.S. military aid to El Salvador unless there is a "good-faith" effort to negotiate an end to the conflict in the Central American country.

The challenge comes from Mark Hatfield of Oregon who, as chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee, is in a pivotal position to interrupt administration support for the junta in San Salvador.

Hatfield, who takes a skeptical view of weapons sales everywhere, said, "I am trying to avoid unnecessary bloodshed. I am also trying to avoid handing El Salvador over to (Cuban President) Fidel Castro."

Aides said Hatfield would make his move on the Senate floor and also in the Appropriations Committee, which is considering the administration's request for $100 million in military aid for El Salvador for the fiscal year beginning Oct. 1.

"For every gun, helicopter or transport vehicle we send to El Salvador, the insurgents gain another sympathizer," the senator said in a statement Monday night.

Earlier Monday, five House Democrats introduced legislation to prohibit all further military aid to El Salvador and to force withdrawal of U.S. military advisers there.

And in the Senate, Democratic Leader Robert Byrd

of West Virginia introduced legislation to require the president to obtain specific authorization from Congress before sending any U.S. combat forces to El Salvador.

Libyan president meeting Habib

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — U.S. special envoy Philip C. Habib met for 90 minutes today with President Elias Sarkis in another attempt to head off fighting between Israel and the Palestinians of southern Lebanon.

Habib flew to Lebanon from Israel. As is his practice, he said nothing about the progress of his mission.

Lebanon's state radio said the American trouble-shooter will later confer with Prime Minister Shafik Wazzan and Foreign Minister Fuad Butros.

Israeli officials said Monday that Habib appeared confident that there would not be an outbreak of fighting between Israel and the Palestinians, and felt that his mission had been accomplished.

Last July, Habib helped mediate a truce to end two weeks of cross-border fighting between Israel and the guerrillas of the Palestine Liberation Organization. The two sides have been accusing each other of planning renewed attacks, and Habib came on his fifth Mideast shuttle in a year to pacify the situation.

Habib has traveled to Saudi Arabia, Jordan, Syria and Egypt and has made several stops in Israel and Lebanon on his latest tour.

Secret Solidarity meeting revealed

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Solidarity leaders still at large met secretly and called for passive resistance to martial law but offered to negotiate with the Communist government if it allows Lech Walesa and other interned union leaders to join the talks.

Sources whose previous reports have been accurate said the clandestine meeting last week was attended by the few members of the independent union's 107-member national commission who have not been interned.

The sources refused to disclose the exact date of the meeting, its site or the roster of participants. They revealed what was discussed on condition they remain anonymous to protect their safety.

Most Solidarity activists have been interned since Premier Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski declared martial law and suspended the union on Dec. 13.

Justice Minister Sylwester Zawadzki told a news conference Monday that 245 Poles have been sentenced to prison for organizing or leading strikes since the military crackdown.

He also indicated that Walesa might not be allowed to attend the christening of his new daughter on March 21 in Gdansk. Walesa's wife, Danuta, told reporters last week he would be there.

Martial law regulations "do not anticipate christenings or other family events like that," the justice minister said in reply to reporters' questions. "People interned may be released only in cases of death among closest relatives."

Implantable drug pump OK'd

WASHINGTON (AP) — A new type of drug pump, the first that can be implanted inside a patient's body, offers hope of longer lives to liver cancer victims and thousands suffering from other problems, says the Food and Drug Administration.

The FDA, which approved the new device Monday, says it can add more than two years to the life expectancy of liver cancer patients and prevent blood clots in victims of phlebitis and other ailments.

The agency also is studying the pump as a way to dispense drugs to treat brain tumors or insulin for diabetics.

FDA Commissioner Arthur Hull Hayes Jr. noted that 9,400 people who might otherwise die of liver cancer each year could be helped by the drug pump, as could the 745,000 who suffer from phlebitis and the 50,000 whose deaths are linked with pulmonary embolisms.

The drug pump, which provides continuous drug therapy, can be inserted in the chest or abdomen. Previous such devices had to be worn outside the body.

The new pump, made of stainless steel, titanium and silicon rubber, was invented by Dr. Henry Buchwald of the University of Minnesota. Infusaid Corp. of Sharon, Mass., manufactures the device, which weighs 6.3 ounces and is 3.5 inches across and one inch thick.

Dr. William Ensminger, associate director of the University of Michigan's Clinical Research Center, said the pump "enables us to extend life expectancy from about four to six months to beyond two years" for liver cancer patients.

Experimental work with the pump revealed an 85 percent remission rate for liver cancer patients, said Ensminger.

Implantation of a drug pump will lessen the need for hospitalization and, in the case of patients with clotting problems, the need for a painful and expensive series of injections. It can be refilled by a family physician using a hypodermic needle.

Liver cancer patients who were given drug pumps experienced fewer side effects than with other cancer treatments because the pump delivers the drug treatment directly to the cancer site without significant deposits in other parts of the body, the FDA said. Those side effects include nausea, vomiting and a lowered blood cell count.

For patients with clotting problems such as phlebitis and pulmonary embolisms, the drug pump with few exceptions helped free them of pain and enabled them to carry on active lives.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Effects vs. effectiveness

Dear Dr. Solomon: I was discussing the use of birth control pills with my doctor, and she listed all the possible side effects and the arguments for and against using the pill. When I left her office, I was more confused than ever. If the pill can cause so many bad things, why do so many women continue to use it? — Francie, Duluth, Minn.

Dear Francie: Despite the controversy surrounding them, oral contraceptives continue to be used because they are probably the most effective form of birth control. Their failure rate is about two percent per year.

According to Dr. Ronald L. Young, of the Baylor College of Medicine in Houston, an average of 3.7 women per 100,000 die each year as a result of using the pill. Most of these deaths are due to coronary vascular disease in women over 35 years of age. However, this figure compares with an overall maternal death rate of 20.6 women per 100,000.

Dr. Young believes that oral contraceptives will probably continue to be the best form of birth control in the United States for several decades.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My son wants to try out for varsity sports in high school. Ordinarily, I'd be all for it, but he has diabetes. Would playing on a school team be harmful for him? — Ralph, Rye, N.Y.

Dear Ralph: Assuming your son is in otherwise good health, participating in sports may actually do him a great deal of good. Since this is a very individual matter, however, I suggest that both of you discuss the subject with his physician to determine if there are any limitations on such activity.

Some children benefit from participation in organized athletics by achieving better control of their diabetes and decreasing their need for insulin. In addition, the psychological benefits associated with taking part in school athletics can be tremendously important.

Dr. Thomas Shaffer, chairman of the American Academy of Pediatrics Sports Medicine Committee, emphasizes that patients must be individualized — each has different requirements and different limits. But, he adds, there is no question that exercise is beneficial for most diabetics.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My daughter went to her doctor because she wasn't feeling well. Was she surprised when he told her that she's pregnant. She doesn't know how long she's been pregnant but the doctor says he can tell with ultrasound. Will you explain how this works. — Mrs. D.L., Nashville, Tenn.

Dear Mrs. L.: There are a number of ways that ultrasound can be used to determine the age of the fetus. One way is to measure the length of the femur, or thigh bone. Head and kidney circumferences may also prove helpful in determining gestational age. Recent improvements in ultrasound equipment and techniques make it possible not only to determine the age of the fetus, but to estimate body weight as well.

(If you have a medical question, write to Neil Solomon, M.D., 1726 Reisterstown Road, Baltimore, Md. 21208. Dr. Solomon cannot give personal replies but will answer as many questions as possible in his column.)

Childhood intervention grant given to mental health centers

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The Texas Department of Health has awarded Permian Basin Community Centers for Mental Health-Mental Retardation, Midland, a $71,925 grant to administer early childhood intervention services for young children with handicapping conditions.

The grant was one of 47 grants totaling $3.1 million that were awarded to local organizations for the first year of a new Early Childhood Prevention Program.

The grants were made with funds appropriated under Senate Bill 630, which directs the health department and other agencies to locate and provide treatment for children from birth to age 3 who have handicapping conditions or are developmentally delayed.

The program is aimed at preventing long-term handicapping conditions. It is administered by the health department, but directed cooperatively by TDH, the Texas Department of Mental Health.

Interferon may fight herpes

ATLANTA (AP) — Researchers may be able to use interferon to produce a treatment and vaccine for both oral and genital herpes, a scientist says.

Saul Kit, head of the Division of Biochemical Virology at Baylor College of Medicine, said Monday that animal experiments by his Houston research team have shown that the drug interferon may be useful in treating herpes.

In addition, "hybrid viruses" created by "genetic engineering" techniques may provide a vaccine to prevent the disease, he said.

Mental Retardation, Texas Department of Human Resources and the Texas Education Agency.

An ECI council, composed of representatives of each of the grantees and a public member appointed by the govern-nor, will direct the program activities.

The grants will fund operation of the local programs from March 1 to Aug. 31. Second-year funding will begin Sept. 1, with grant applications due this summer.

Rand: Selfishness is virtuous

By SCOTT KRAFT
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — She was a small woman with an iron spine and a keen mind, a Russian immigrant who became an exultant and tireless advocate of rational selfishness, godlessness and pure capitalism.

Now Ayn Rand is dead at age 77.

But her controversial heroes are immortal — fictional characters such as Howard Roark in "The Fountainhead" and Dagny Taggart in "Atlas Shrugged." And her followers vow to keep her philosophy alive.

"She challenged the philosophic tradition of over 2,000 years on all its essential points and provided an alternative," Leonard Peikoff, her long-time associate, said Monday. Her alternative included "reason as opposed to any kind of mysticism, including religion, and selfishness as opposed to any form of altruism or self-sacrifice."

One day, he predicted, her ideas "will change the direction of the world and create a new renaissance. In what period of time, I don't know." Peikoff, 48, also said that he had assured Miss Rand that he would continue her work.

BEFORE HER death Saturday, she made two requests: that her favorite music — gay, turn-of-the-century tunes — be played when friends gather at the funeral home, and that the poem "If" by Rudyard Kipling be read at her burial today.

Miss Rand labeled her philosophy "objectivism." Its thesis was that only individual ability and effort account for real achievement and that laissez-faire capitalism provides the optimal environment for talent.

She despised altruism as personal weakness and believed it responsible for much of the world's misery. Selfishness was a virtue, she believed.

Her views spilled from the mouths of her characters — always a stubborn, proud, talented, atheistic man or woman whose "own happiness was the moral purpose of his life, with productive achievement as his noblest activity and reason as his only absolute."

There was Howard Roark, the architect in "The Fountainhead" who destroyed his own construction project because others had altered its design. "The Fountainhead" was rejected by 12 publishers, some of whom told Miss Rand it was too intellectual, too controversial and had no audience — a fact Miss Rand noted in her introduction to a 25th anniversary printing of the book.

"She challenged the philosophic tradition of over 2,000 years on all its essential points and provided an alternative. (Her alternative included) reason as opposed to any kind of mysticism, including religion, and selfishness as opposed to any form of altruism or self-sacrifice."

AFTER THE BOOK was published in 1943, Miss Rand wrote the screenplay and Hollywood agreed to cast her choice for the lead — Gary Cooper, who friends say bore a striking resemblance to her husband, Frank O'Connor.

In 1957, in the middle of her career, she wrote "Atlas Shrugged," a brilliant and bitter tale of how men and women of selfish integrity escape a world falling to pieces. Her haunting phrase — "Who is John Galt?" — represented the hopelessness of the masses and the vision of a few.

She once said that "The Fountainhead" was an overture to "Atlas Shrugged," and she concentrated on nonfiction from then on. When she died, she was writing a television mini-series based on "Atlas Shrugged," which Peikoff hopes to finish.

Ayn Rand

The purpose of her writing, she once said, was "the projection of an ideal man. The portrayal of a moral ideal, as my ultimate literary goal, as an end in itself."

From the mouth of Howard Roark came this version of her philosophy:

"I DO NOT recognize anyone's right to one minute of my life. Nor to any part of my energy. Nor to any achievement of mine. I am a man who does not exist for others. I recognize no obligations toward men except one: to respect their freedom...."

In her own life, Miss Rand was most like Dagny Taggart, the heroine in "Atlas Shrugged." She wrote in longhand on a blue pad in her East Side luxury apartment, and spent many hours with her stamp collection. She liked Agatha Christie mysteries, reading them over and over.

She was an admirer of television because she considered it potentially an intellectual medium. However, she made sure she had absolute control over the mini-series she was writing.

Yet she was a fan of "Charlie's Angels" in its first few years, "she thought the girls had a nice spirit," Peikoff says. And whenever one of the original Perry Mason shows came on late at night, she stayed up for it.

Politicians rarely drew her compliments. She disliked Ronald Reagan who she said was tying religion to politics and "any opponent of abortion cannot be a defender of any rights."

MISS RAND was born Feb. 2, 1905, in St. Petersburg, now Leningrad, and graduated from the University of Leningrad in 1924. Two years later she came to Hollywood and worked as a movie extra and junior screenwriter.

In 1937, she went to work without pay as a typist for a New York architect to research "The Fountainhead." From 1951 until her death, she worked full time as a writer and lecturer.

Her husband died in 1979, shortly after their 50th wedding anniversary, and friends say she never quite recovered. She had been ill since December, but "she had her strength and tenacity to the very end," Peikoff said.

Two days before she died, she approved a news release announcing her last book, a collection of essays called "Philosophy: Who Needs It," which will be published in November.

Grand jury to investigate 1979 anti-Klan rally

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — The Communist Workers Party says it is pleased by a planned federal grand jury inquiry into a violent 1979 anti-Ku Klux Klan rally, but will watch carefully to make sure the investigation doesn't become a "witch hunt against the victims."

The Justice Department announced Monday that the grand jury would investigate the Nov. 3, 1979, shootout that left five CWP members dead after a "Death to the Klan" rally in Greensboro.

CWP members will "cooperate with any genuine attempt to bring the perpetrators to justice," said Signe Waller, a spokeswoman for the party.

"But we would be wary of any process which might be used as a witch hunt against the victims," she said. "The danger we see is that in some manner this will be used to continue the cover-up" of the shooting and subsequent police investigation of the shootout.

Nine other demonstrators were wounded in the confrontation. Four members of the Klan and two members of the American Nazi Party were accused by the state of murder and felonious rioting in the incident but were acquitted in a 96-day trial.

The defendants claimed they acted in self-defense and said the demonstrators fired the first shot.

Martha Nathan, a spokeswoman for the Greensboro Justice Fund which is handling a civil suit filed by the CWP in the case, said cooperation from CWP members probably will depend on the kind of questions the jury asks.

"Will it investigate, expose and indict government wrongdoing as well as Klan-Nazi participants, or will it be a continuation of the coverup that has been going on since Nov. 3, 1979?" she asked.

She also called Monday's announcement "a victory."

"We have been calling for a grand jury, along with several coalitions throughout the United States," she said. "There have been petitions, rallies and demonstrations, and this is a response to that public pressure."

In the past, the CWP members who saw the shooting have said they will not cooperate with the government's investigation of the incident, claiming the government is biased against them.

Tom Clark, who was wounded in the shootout, already has served 30 days in jail in August 1980 for refusing to testify at the trial.

Seven Midland students win in vocational club contest

Eight high school students from Midland were among more than 800 students competing in the district Vocational and Industrial Club of America (VICA) contest in Abilene this weekend.

The students were accompanied by Joe Smith, instructor of welding at Midland College.

House panel report says attack warning system is deficient

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. missile attack warning system is plagued by "severe and potentially catastrophic deficiencies," warns a report by the House Government Operations Committee.

The panel, which filed its 40-page report Monday with House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill, D-Mass., urged that Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger give his "urgent attention" to the computer network designed to warn of enemy attack.

The committee, chaired by Texas Democrat Jack Brooks, also said Weinberger should "take decisive action to ensure that NORAD (the North American Aerospace Defense Command) receives the highest priority within the department in its modernization plan."

The report was prepared after the panel held hearings last May at which Richard DeLauer, undersecretary of defense for research and engineering, acknowledged failings over the years in the Pentagon's procurement of computer equipment.

"The severe and potentially catastrophic deficiencies found in the nation's missile attack warning system are a result of significant and long-time management failures by the Air Force and the Joint Chiefs of Staff," said the report.

"Continued inability to correct these failings by the highest levels within the Department of Defense will continue to perpetuate past mistakes and will undermine any chance that an effective attack warning or command and communications system can be installed by 1990," it added.

The strategic modernization plan announced last Oct. 3 includes a major upgrading of command, control and communications facilities, including improvements in the survivability, performance and coverage of radars and satellites.

The Government Operations study said a NORAD upgrade program that began in 1966 is six years behind schedule and $150 million over budget. "Due to the failure of this program, NORAD has obsolete computer systems which, at best, offer the same capability as the 1966 system," it added.

The report acknowledged that solutions cannot come overnight. Even if NORAD got modern technology now, it could not put it into use for at least two years, the committee said.

Last year's hearings were prompted in part by false alarms of an enemy attack put out by computers at NORAD's Cheyenne Mountain center near Colorado Springs, Colo.

Coroner refuses to comment on cause of Belushi's death

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Los Angeles County Coroner's office, under fire for its conduct of investigations into the deaths of celebrities, has refused to comment on reports that comedian John Belushi's death was drug-related.

The Los Angeles Times reported today that a source in the coroner's office, who asked not to be identified, said the comedian died after an overdose of cocaine which may have caused respiratory failure and perhaps a heart attack.

ABC News, also quoting sources close to the investigation, said the inquiry is expected to show death due to heart and respiratory failure induced by an overdose of narcotics, probably cocaine.

An autopsy Saturday failed to pinpoint the cause of death, and officials said more toxicological and tissue tests were necessary.

Belushi's body was flown to Martha's Vineyard for burial today. The 33-year-old movie and television star owned a summer house on the island off the coast of Cape Cod.

He was found dead Friday, lying nude in his bungalow at a Sunset Strip hotel. Los Angeles County Coroner Thomas Noguchi told a Monday news conference he had refused a county request that he resign, but said he alone would issue future statements on Belushi's death.

Coroner's officials had previously said that heart failure had not been ruled out as the cause of death, and Noguchi could not be reached for comment on the drug-related reports.

A man who answered the telephone at the coroner's office told The Associated Press "We have no comment" when asked about the reports, then hung up after being asked his name. Repeated telephone calls elicited no further comment.

ABC said it had also learned that "a fair amount of white powder" believed to be cocaine was found in the nightstand of Belushi's bungalow at the Chateau Marmont hotel.

Belushi — a heavy smoker — was also believed to be suffering from some form of respiratory disease when he died, ABC said.

Princess Di, Liz finally meet following 'Little Foxes' show

LONDON (AP) — Princess Diana had a wish come true when she met actress Elizabeth Taylor after a charity performance of "The Little Foxes" at London's Victoria Palace theater.

Royal aides said the 20-year-old princess of Wales had long wanted to meet Miss Taylor, but at the actress' request the conversation was kept secret.

"The princess was charming, gracious and beautiful," Miss Taylor told reporters after meeting the princess Monday night. "I was more than thrilled to meet her. But I never discuss private conversations with royalty."

The princess clearly enjoyed the special charity performance and applauded enthusiastically when Miss Taylor and the cast took their curtain calls. Lillian Hellman's drama opens to the public Thursday.

She laughed uproariously when a Welsh Guardsman in scarlet tunic went on stage to present Miss Taylor with a bouquet, and the curtain was lowered on him by mistake.

Earlier, Princess Diana missed a cue of her own at the theater. As she dithered at the doorway to the royal box, the state trumpeters began their fanfare and the spotlight fell on an empty seat.

NEW YORK (AP) — Singer Kenny Rogers says he has endowed a $1 million "World Hunger Award" for journalists who "bring attention to the issues of world hunger."

Rogers announced Monday that he and his wife, Marianne, felt "although one million dollars is a substantial sum of money, it would have little impact by itself on the war against hunger."

Rogers said he conceived of the award after asking the late singer Harry Chapin, who founded the World Hunger Organization, what he would do with $1 million.

Rogers said he and his wife "found recent reports pinpoint public education as the major key to the elimination of hunger."

"This awards program provided us with the opportunity to effectively encourage, honor and reward those journalists and other people, professional and nonprofessional, who contribute substantially each year to the education of the public about the issue and its elimination," he said.

The awards, which will be given in 10 categories and carry "substantial cash prizes," are to be given each year on the day after Thanksgiving at a luncheon in Los Angeles, Rogers said. The first awards will cover a one-year period to June 30, 1982.

NEW YORK (AP) — NBC correspondent Chris Wallace says while he was interviewing and videotaping Col. Moammar Khadafy in Libya, the Libyan leader's aides were taping him.

Wallace, a Washington-based correspondent who normally questions politicians in studios, said his interview with Khadafy, conducted Saturday night in a sandy tent in the middle of his military compound in Tripoli, was "surreal."

"Khadafy seems to like meeting foreign visitors there," Wallace said by telephone from Rome, where he had finished editing the interview for Monday's "Today" segment. "Inside the tent, there were beautiful Arabian rugs on the sand, along with videotape machines and TV sets. While we were interviewing them, they were taping us."

Wallace said he had requested the interview, using his Arab contacts in Washington as intermediaries, two months ago. "I sense that the interview was the first part of a media campaign to improve his image," he said.

Wallace said he was struck by the unpredictability of the Libyan leader. "His aides said he would not speak English, but when we said the American people would like to hear him directly, he complied. I think that surprised his aides," Wallace said.

MOSCOW (AP) — Leonid M. Zamyatin, a leading foreign policy spokesman for Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev, has been awarded the Soviet Union's highest decoration on his 60th birthday, the official Soviet news agency Tass said.

Zamyatin, who headed Tass from 1970 to 1978, was given his second Order of Lenin "in recognition of his services to the Communist Party and the Soviet state," Tass said Monday. He won his first Order of Lenin in 1971.

In 1978 Zamyatin was named chief of the newly created department of international information of the Communist Party's policy since 1976.

Zamyatin acted as party spokesman to the foreign press during the party's 26th congress in February 1981, and frequently handles media questions when Brezhnev travels abroad.

Houston firm thinking Hawaii as possible rocket launch site

HOUSTON (AP) — A Houston company looking for a place from which it can safely launch rockets into an orbit around the Earth's poles is surveying Hawaiian land for a potential launch site, a spokesman said.

Executives of Space Services Inc. view 50-100 acres near South Point, Hawaii, as "ideal for placing satellites into low earth polar orbit," company spokesman Walt Pennino said Monday.

He said a real estate representative would speak to the city council of Hilo, Hawaii, this week about the possibility of leasing the land.

He said Space Services needs a location from which a north-south flight would cross very little land. The firm hopes to launch an orbital flight by the end of 1983, he said.

"I looked at the property in December," Pennino said. "It's an area of lava flows coming down from the big mountains."

African playwright finds Yale home

By SCOTT M. BUSHNELL
Associated Press Writer

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP) — South Africa's best-known dramatist has found a home for his work at the Yale Repertory Theater.

But Athol Fugard, whose play "Master Harold...and the Boys" opens for previews March 9, is emphatic that he will not become an exile from his native land.

"I am going back to Port Elizabeth as soon as I'm sure this new play is going well," said the 50-year-old writer, a white whose anti-apartheid statements resulted in revocation of his passport by the South African government from 1965 to 1971.

THE NEW Haven premiere brings Fugard back to the scene of the start of his most significant success. It also marks a break with his past traditions.

It was at the Yale Repertory Theater that "A Lesson From Aloes" — which subsequently moved to Broadway, won the 1980 Drama Critics Circle Award and was nominated for a Tony — was first staged.

In an interview this week, Fugard praised Yale Repertory's artistic director, Lloyd Richards, for "making it a writer's theater."

Yet, "Master Harold...and the Boys" also represents a departure from Fugard's past practices. It is the first of his plays to be given its debut outside of South Africa.

"There are elements in the play that I knew would not get past the

Uniforms disappear

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Poland's state-run television said today it is doing away with one of the country's most visible reminders of martial law — military uniforms for newscasters.

Announcers were in civilian clothes on Monday's late news show for the first time since the military crackdown Dec. 13, a spokeswoman for Polish television confirmed. She said newscasters will be in civilian dress on the main evening news show at 7:30 p.m. starting today.

It will be "just like before Dec. 13," she said.

She offered no explanation for the change in dress.

very ruthless censorship of my country," Fugard said.

"There is a question of language and certain elements would be regarded as blasphemous."

The play concerns a white, 17-year-old boy, Harold — or Hally, as he is nicknamed — and two black men, Sam and Willie, who work for his parents in a Port Elizabeth tea room. The drama is a poignant look at a young man's attempt to deal with growing up.

"I get very nervous when the autobiographical element comes up," said Fugard, who was a young boy in Port Elizabeth. "There are personal biographical elements in everything that you write."

"In my youth, I did have a very important relationship with two black men who worked for my family. They taught me many things," he said, including ballroom dancing, which is a central theme to the play.

IN THE play, the two men are preparing for a ballroom dance competition and Fugard makes the image applicable to the characters' lives and to South Africa and the world.

"To be one of those finalists on that dance floor is like, like being in a dream world in which accidents don't happen," the character named Sam tells Hally.

To which the playwright added this week, "A dream of a world without collisions. South Africa needs a dream like that."

Fugard is confident that "Master Harold...and the Boys" is a good play.
