OKLAHOMA DRY RAIDER KILLED, AIDE SHOT

Twenty Persons Injured When Two Interurban Cars Wreck At Dallas

Home Town Talk

By B. D. D.

As Christmas approaches sprigs of mistletoe begin to appear over the chandeliers and over doorways about the homes of Wichita Falls, adding a touch of brightness and cheer.

The books tell us that the ancient Druids of England and the tribes of northern Germany used branches of mistletoe in their religious rites and that when they became Christianized they adapted the use of the green branches to the Christian festival.

Whether they adopted the mistletoe from some other religious rite or not it would have been quite natural for these early Christians seeking something to symbolize the brightness and joy of the season to find it in the green boughs growing on the leafless limbs in the forests.

Mistletoe reaches its height of color just at the Christmas season in Northwest Texas when its transparent berries appear. It is found growing on the limbs of many of our native trees. For some reason or other the growth of mistletoe in these parts this year is unusually green and luxuriant. It can be found growing on the trees along almost any creek bed.

Mistletoe is a parasitic growth. Its berries contain a sticky fluid which fastens to the bark of the limbs of trees where the seed germinates and the plant lives and grows upon the sap.

William S. Vare, denied a seat in the United States senate on account of the use of money in his behalf in the primary that nominated him, has announced that he will again be a candidate.

If Mr. Vare had no campaign issues before he now has the issue of vindication and if vindication has as much appeal to Pennsylvanians as it has formerly had to Texans Mr. Vare already has a good start toward victory.

A meeting is held at Electra at which resolutions are adopted calling upon the state of Oklahoma to make all the bridges across Red river free bridges.

This may sound like an ambitious demand all at once. It is ambitious, but so is almost every movement for public imporvement. All such movements have to have a starting place and all have to be pushed aggressively. Nothing was ever accomplished by sitting still and merely wishing.

Early county records of Matagorda county were recently salvaged from a hay barn by J. Evett Haley, collector of research in the social sciences of the University of Texas. Several tons of records had been discarded at the courthouse at Bay City and were stored temporarily in a hay barn belonging to a waste paper dealer.

Matagorda county is one of the oldest counties in Texas and these discarded records contained much data of historical interest, which will now be preserved for future generations.

Fortunately in Wichita county most of the county's records have been preserved and most of them have been indexed and catalogued so that they are available to anyone interested in looking them over.

There is one document of great interest this home town talker has never been able to find, and that is the petition for the election to organize a county government in Wichita county. It would bear the names of pioneers, some of whom are now only indistinctly remembered.

This petition is mentioned in the minutes of the Clay county commissioners court copies in the records of Wichita county and now on file in the county clerk's office here. Mention of it can be found in the original records of Clay county at Henrietta but the petition itself is missing.

We invite the county clerks of both Clay and Wichita counties to search for it and if they find it to make their find known.

Speaking of county records, the cattle brand record of Wichita county is an interesting volume. This record is in a good state of preservation in the county clerk's office, and contains a reproduction of the brands of the cattlemen from the time of the organization of the county. There was a time when this was one of the most important records of the county. There have been few entries in the book in recent years.

Back to that petition for the organization of Wichita county, legend has it there was some difficulty in obtaining a sufficient number of signatures and that when presented to the proper authorities it bore the names of some folks who were only passing through the county and maybe of the names of some favorite horses and hunting dogs.

Childress County Plans Huge Terracing Program

Special to The Record News.

CHILDRESS, Texas, Dec. 10.—More than 20,000 acres of Childress county land will be terraced in 1930 if plans outlined by 40 farmers of this county at a meeting here yesterday are carried out. The farmers met with County Agent Bill Pinson and District Agent John R. Demonds of the extension department.

Seventeen farmers volunteered their services in helping with the terracing when it was found that interest had grown to the extent that the county agent would be unable to handle the situation alone. The farmers will take instruction from Mr. Pinson and go to the aid of their neighbors.

Four Chorines About To Get Break In Movies Die With Six Men In Film Studio Fire

By MORRIS de HAVEN TRACY
United Press Staff Correspondent

NEW YORK, Dec. 10.—Four girls were killed today just as they were within some 10 minutes of attaining the dream of every chorus girl—an appearance in the movies.

With them died six men who had come with them to the Pathe sound-film studios out towards the end of Park avenue, New York, to play the music for their dancing or to grind the cameras and turn out the film which would go to make another Pathe production.

Scene Changes

In just a few ticks of the clock the film was turned, however, from gay comedy with lilting music and light-toed girls dancing merrily, to probably the most tragic disaster in the history of American motion picture production.

Fire, caused perhaps by a spark from some of the complicated electrical apparatus, or maybe by a carelessly tossed cigaret, was responsible. Flames swept through the studio and in less time than it takes to tell it, 10 people were burned to death, 20 were injured, and everything that was in the place excepting a supply of film locked in fireproof safes in the basement was destroyed.

Extra Large Company

The studio is a two-story, brick structure, with a basement used for storage purposes.

On the ground floor is the main sound-studio, a big room with softly padded walls to deaden noise, a stage for the performers, and a mass of wires and conduits leading to kleig lights and sound machines, strung over its walls and floors.

There had gathered this morning an extra large company for the filming of Harry Delmar's miniature review. It included two sets of chorus girls. One was the pony ballet of pretty, petite girls picked from the best of the New York choruses. The other was a group of statuesque show girls, picked with equal care. Eddie Elkins and his dozen piece jazz orchestra were there to play the music. There were about 30 girls and 50 men in all.

Musicians Prepare

The girls had been called from their dressing room and were gathered on the stage, while the musicians gave final toots at their saxophones and tightened the head of the big base drums.

But just then an electrician saw a peculiar flash and one of the dancers on the stage cried "fire."

A stage hand grabbed a fire extinguisher and turned it towards the great, black velvet, back drop from around the edges of which flames were licking out towards the fluffy bands of ruffles and feathers which made up the ballet girls

RALPH FLEAGLE FACES NOOSE

Gray-Haired Bandit Loses Motion for Re-Trial

LAMAR, Colo., Dec. 10. (UP)—Ralph Fleagle, gray-haired leader of the Fleagle bandit pack, was sentenced late today to hang for the murder of President A. N. Parrish of the First National bank here, in a bank holdup in May, 1928.

Motion for a new trial for Fleagle was overruled this afternoon by Judge A. F. Hollenbeck in district court here. The judge then sentenced Fleagle to die on the gallows at the state penitentiary at Canon City some time during the week of March 29 next.

Fleagle, through his attorney, Judge W. L. Cunningham, had attacked the death verdict brought in by the Prowers county jury which tried him several weeks ago. Fleagle had pleaded guilty to the charge of murder after "a bargain" with the prosecution in an effort to escape the gallows. He claimed the state had "promised" him the death sentence would not be imposed.

The jury which tried Fleagle disregarded the alleged "agreement" with the state and fixed Fleagle's penalty at death.

In the motion which Judge Hollenbeck overruled today, Judge Cunningham also attacked the trial court's ruling admitting evidence of murders in Kansas of Dr. W. W. Wineinger and E. A. Kesinger, bank cashier, who were slain by the Fleagle gang shortly after the slaying of the bank president.

Two accomplices of Ralph Fleagle, Howard Royston, and Roy J. Abshier also were tried and sentenced to death for the Lamar slaying.

Lead Car Overturns After Derailment Sends Two Toward Ditch

RESCUERS HAMPERED

Hundreds of Autos Rush to Scene of Crash, Barring Ambulances

DALLAS, Dec. 10. (AP)—At least 20 persons were injured, none fatally, tonight when an interurban car and trailer running from Fort Worth to Dallas left the tracks at Irwindell, three miles west of the Dallas city limits.

The car was manned by John S. Joyce, motorman, and J. S. Rhodes, conductor, both of Handley. Some "obstacle on the track" caused the wreck, it was reported.

Tracks Torn Up

The tracks were torn up for nearly 100 yards from where the leading car, which first left the tracks, dragged the trailer. The trailer, which turned over against an embankment about 50 yards behind the leader, was smashed. The leading car turned completely around when it left the rails.

Nineteen of the injured persons were brought to hospitals here by ambulances which hurriedly answered the call. One woman, only slightly injured, returned to her home in Fort Worth.

Ambulance Barred

The work of rescuing the injured was hampered by long lines of automobiles which rushed to the scene of the accident from Fort Worth and Dallas. Motorists found it impossible to get closer than a mile to the scene less than half an hour after the wreck; and one ambulance never succeeded in getting there.

No serious injuries were reported. It was thought for a time that one man, buried in the wreck, was dead, but he was found to be only slightly injured when finally extricated.

Those who came out of the wreck with bruises declared they did not understand how anyone got out alive. One man said the whole inside of the leading car seemed to be torn to pieces. Until automobiles arrived, rescue work was carried on with only the flickering flames of matches for light.

Relief cars were immediately sent out by the interurban line from Fort Worth and Dallas to take care of all passengers and resume service as quickly as possible.

The injured included: Mrs. Victor P. Arnold, Dallas; Charles J. Fykes, New Orleans; Vera English and baby, no address; Vera Vise, Dallas; Ralph N. Smith, Muskogee, Okla.; E. L. McAllister, Greenville; R. A. Williams, Mrs. J. C. Lyle, N. Eron, W. R. Graycroft, Oberg Peterson, and Mrs. Mary E. Mott, all of Dallas.

Edmund Silverbrand, Detroit, Mich.; O. O. Hacker, S. B. Ruben, L. S. Norwood, S. B. Graham, Henry M. Hobson, all of Dallas; L. S. Turner, Detroit, Texas.

Road Work At Childress Delayed

Special to The Record News.

CHILDRESS, Texas, Dec. 10.—Construction on Childress county highways was delayed another 30 days as a result of the action of the commissioners court here yesterday when that body voted to withhold county funds until after the first of the year. The action came at the request of Senator C. C. Small, representing Kirkland in her attempt to route highway No. 5 over her main street. Small promised the court that if no definite announcement was obtained by that time as to the route to be selected by the state highway department that Kirkland would no longer ask the court to hold up the funds.

The controversy came about when the highway department ordered two surveys of highway No. 5, both to cross Cleveland street in Kirkland, but one to continue to Childress on the south side of the railroad, the other to cross back to the north side. Senator Small contended that the north survey was an attempt on the part of the highway department to evade the letter of the law, which provided in the bond election that the highway should be routed over Cleveland street.

F. D. Roosevelt Sounds Battle Cry In Talk Before Midwest Democrats

G. O. P. BLAMED FOR DEPRESSION

New York Governor Scores Republican Tactics

CHICAGO, Dec. 10. (US)—Sounding what may be the keynote of the next presidential campaign, Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt of New York, addressing a vast Democratic gathering here today, blamed the Republican party for the present condition of agriculture.

Governor Roosevelt stated he believed the people of the nation are "angered and disgusted at a party whose leaders meet ostensibly to relieve the farmer and then proceed to attempt to line their own pockets with an exorbitant tariff."

Brands G. O. P. Conservative

Roosevelt likened the Republican party to a vast machine which he claimed had been built up within the last 20 years and composed of conservatists who fought bitterly against any change.

"The attitude of those who sit at present in the seat of power," he said, "was beautifully expressed by that astute collector of their campaign funds, the distinguished Mr. Grundy. What right," said he in effect, "has the West to attempt to curb the tariff rates demanded by our great protected industries in the East? Why should we, as a prosperous nation, pay any attention to the demands of the backward states?' Backward states was scarcely a tactful phrase to use, for by it he referred to those great agricultural communities sometimes loosely designated as 'the Middle West.'

No Hope at Present

"If they are backward, if they are poor and impoverished, which they are not, who is responsible but Mr. Grundy and his friends? What hope of real relief can there be under the obedient legislative representatives of a party led by men who think like that?

"I hope as a citizen and not as a partisan that the era of such control is drawing to an end; but for the immediate present there is no hope, and what better proof of this could there be than the fact

Norris Goes To Shakespeare For Lobby Oration

WASHINGTON, Dec. 10. (US)—The senate was treated to a dramatic spectacle this afternoon when Senator George W. Norris of Nebraska, paraphrasing Anthony's tribute at Caesar's bier, made an impassioned oration on the "passing" of Joseph R. Grundy, the "grand daddy of all lobbyists."

Waving aloft a yellow woolen jacket, which had been a part of a tariff display on the senate floor, Norris impersonated Shakespeare's cast of Mark Anthony. He cast Grundy into Caesar's role.

"Senators, if you have tears," he began, "prepare to shed them now. This yellow jacket was Grundy's mantle.

"You all remember Grundy's mantle. I remember when first he put it on. It was a pleasant evening in the fall. The day great Hoover won his fight and sent the defeated hordes of Democracy back upon the sidewalks of New York."

Again waving the yellow jacket, so senators could see gaping holes in it, Norris continued:

"In this place, Caraway ran his dagger through;
See what a rent the envious Borah made.
Through this, the son of a wild jackass stabbed and as he drew his cursed steel away.
Mark how the blood of Grundy followed it.

"This was the most unkindest cut of all, for when the noble Grundy saw the jackass stab in gratitude
More strong than traitor's arms, it quite vanquished him,
Then burst his mighty heart
And in this mantle, muffling up his face,
The great Grundy fell."

STATE RACES TAKING SHAPE

Interesting Campaigns Likely in Several Fields

By R. W. BARRY
Associated Press Staff Writer

AUSTIN, Dec. 10.—While the impending gubernatorial campaign with its big field of prospective candidates has been occupying the limelight, the politically ambitious have not been overlooking a few opportunities on the side. There are a number of other state offices which offer splendid opportunity for advancement to be filled.

The lieutenant governorship so far has attracted two avowed candidates, while several are contemplating wetting their feet in the campaign waters. J. D. Parnell of Wichita Falls, formerly state senator, and W. H. Bledsoe of Lubbock, likewise a former member of the senate, have definitely announced their candidacies. Parnell was in the race last time when Lieut. Gov. Barry Miller of Dallas was sent back for his third term.

Other Possibilities

Other likely candidates are Representative Ray Holder of Lancaster, W. S. Barron of Bryan, now speaker of the house of representatives, and Senators Edgar Witt of Waco and Tom Pollard of Tyler.

Senator Witt has been busy the past few weeks as a member of the prison centralization commission, and the word "busy" is used advisedly, because the earnest Waco an probably saw as much and asked as many questions as any member of that commission when it went on its trip of inspection to penitentiaries of a large number of the states of the union.

Considers Candidacy

As a result of his keen interest he was designated to write the majority report for the commission and the task kept him thinking of nothing else for quite a season.

He has been asked by numerous persons to become a candidate for lieutenant-governor and he is seriously considering the matter.

Representative Holder has not definitely made up his mind and

Barber's Wife Is Blamed for Slaying of O. P. Butler At Cushing

HELPER MAY RECOVER

Oklahoma City Operative Given Chance to Live By Physicians

CUSHING, Okla., Dec. 10. (UP)—O. P. Butler, federal prohibition officer, was killed and George S. Donhour, his assistant, critically wounded here late today when the two were fired upon from a barber shop which they attempted to raid.

The shots were believed fired by La Tosca Young, wife of John Young, proprietor of the shop who was under suspicion of bootlegging. Butler, whose home is at Cherryville, Kan., died before other officers arrived.

Donhour is connected with the federal prohibition department at Oklahoma. Physicians said after a preliminary examination that he had a chance for recovery.

Butler and Donhour, working out of Enid, Okla., were terminating a day of liquor raids in small towns near here with that at the Young barber shop, located in the negro section of Cushing. They were accompanied by Sheriff Dave Humphrey of Cayne county and Deputy Kit Adkins. The latter two went to the rear of the shop while the two federal men entered the front door. They fell in the doorway from a volley of pistol shots.

No liquor was found in the barber shop but Higgins said he found Young breaking bottles when he entered.

Donhour regained consciousness momentarily tonight, Sheriff Humphrey said, and murmured: "They both shot me."

The negro woman was in hysterics at the city jail where she was held with Young. She had been mentally deficient for years, it was said.

Ginnings in Northwest Texas and Southern Oklahoma apparently were losing speed Tuesday, several gins reporting much smaller totals for the day than their average daily output. Centralized Cotton Marketing Agency Planned by Leaders

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Dec. 10. (AP)—Preliminary steps for establishment of a centralized cotton market agency, government controlled, were taken here today at a cotton congress, attended by three members of the federal farm board and 150 leading representatives of the cotton industry.

The sessions were executive and the only official work concerning the deliberations was the announcement by Alexander Legge, chairman of the farm board that "it seems our program will go through right away; little or no opposition has been manifested so far."

Sixteen cotton cooperative associations were represented. They spent most of the morning discussing the present marketing ills of the cotton industry and were in a receptive mood to hear the board's outline of the plan which would revolutionize the cotton business.

The proposed organization, patterned after the grain marketing agency, would embrace all local and state cooperatives and would be controlled by the government. The government would be expected to furnish money for establishment of the agency, estimated at amounts varrying from $10,000,000 to $40,000,000. The agency, it was indicated, eventually would be sold to the cotton growers in form of government stock. Its policies would be directed by the farm board.

Besides Mr. Legge, Carl Williams, cotton's representative on the board and James C. Stone, vice chairman of the board, were present. The sessions will be continued tomorrow.

TEN KILLED IN STUDIO FIRE

Scenes of Horror Result in Pathe Disaster

costumes. The girls screamed and drew away. The big curtain bellied out as if reaching for them. Then there was a puff which shook the place, and flames enveloped curtain and much of the stage.

The chorines fled in terror. Cameramen, their cameras already set up, seized their costly machines and ran. Studio hands tried to stop the flames. In a moment there was confusion, screaming and shouting everywhere.

Other Chorus Called

Upstairs the second chorus, awaiting its call to the stage, was gathered in a dressing room rubbing the last touch of color to cheeks and lips and making fast the last flimsy bit of scant costume.

Bernard Mahoney burst into the room.

"Step out, girls," he cried, "and make it lively. Get right busy."

They thought it an ill-tempered way to give them their call and moved slowly towards the door. But when the first girl was out of the room she looked down from a mezzanine floor onto the studio and stage. She saw her sisters in wild flight for the exists as flames snarled from the stage and leaped from section to section of the soft-padded walls. She screamed the alarm. Soon the girls from the dressing room had joined the flight and were fighting, somewhat blindly for their lives.

Carl Edworde, an orchestra leader, had just finished in the projection room an inspection of the music he had prepared for an aesop's fables film.

Jumps for Life

"I started out," he said, "and a sheet of white hot flame met me at the door. So I crawled out a window to a fire escape. But there the fire was licking all around me. I took the only chance there was and jumped for an iron bar which ran from the building down to a fence adjacent. By a miracle I caught hold the bar with both hands."

He went down the bar, hand over hand, until almost at the fence he lost his hold, fell and broke his leg. Police carried him out in a stretcher.

Saul Gusikoas, who plays the cello, saw a girl tramped beneath the slippered feet of her sisters. He tried to save her but couldn't. He was carrying his cello. It was smashed to kindling and he emerged to the street, still holdings its throat and a little cluster of strings, all there was left of his instrument.

Outside the building already a crowd was gathering. Fire apparatus, bells jingling and sirens screaming, came roaring up Park avenue from 25 different fire stations. A fire tug steamed up the ship canal and turned water on the building. Sixty police took charge. Seven ambulances, each with a nurse and interne aboard careened around the corner and drew up at the curb a 100 feet away. Stretcher bearers began bringing out injured men and girls, and soon the ambulances were speeding back to hospitals.

Finally the firemen were able to enter the building. First they brought out the body of a man and laid it, covered by a sheet, upon the sidewalk. A moment later out came the bodies of two girls and a man, found jammed in a doorway, the scanty costumes of the girls burned to a few, featherly cinders. Next came three more bodies, one the form of a beautiful young woman, found not 15 feet from a doorway which would have led to safety. The bodies 10 had been ranged on the sidewalk, [illegible] to carry them away.

Gathered, some almost hysterical, in the street were the 25 or 30 girls who had escaped unhurt. They had left their clothing behind and they stood in the chill of the winter morning, shivering in their tights, or with bare legs and tiny trunks as their only protection. Police gathered them up and took them to the nearest warm office—that of Crane and company, a plumbing supply house a block away. There they were warmed and sent home, still in costume, in taxicabs.

By 11 a. m. the fire was out and the next hour was spent in a systematic search of every corner of the building.

At the morgue people gathered to attempt identification of the dead. The task was difficult for the bodies, which only this morning had been ready to dance so lightly, were now burned almost beyond recognition. It was late afternoon before the last had been identified.

SHOPPING FRAUD

Recover Goods Sent Out On False Telephone Calls

Police Tuesday were assisting several local merchants in running down a Christmas shopping fraud scheme, it was announced.

The scheme, according to Marvin Smith, manager of the W. B. McClurkan store here, has been perpetrated for the last few days by a woman, or a group of women who, over the telephone, gave the names of prominent women of the city in ordering various goods delivered at certain addresses, usually designated as the "home of my dressmaker."

Mr. Smith announced his store had already recovered $35 worth of goods so obtained and that more was expected to be recovered soon.

STATE RACES TAKING SHAPE

offered to surrender all claim to the office if his friend, Speaker Barron, would announce. Speaker Barron thereupon told friends that he might decide to become a candidate, but later he was asked by some to enter the gubernatorial field, and it is problematical what his decision will be. Senator Pollard is reticent about his plans.

There are three candidates for attorney general, not counting Atty.-Gen. Robert Lee Bobbitt, who, if he does not run for governor, is virtually certain to ask re-election following his appointment to the place left vacant by the resignation of Atty.-Gen. Claude Pollard. The trio of aspirants are Representative Cecil Storey of Vernon, J. V. Allred of Wichita Falls, who was runner-up when Pollard was elected three years ago, and Joe Burkett of San Antonio. Burkett was formerly a state senator and a member of the highway commission during the Ferguson regime.

Land Office Race

It seems certain that J. H. Walker, commissioner of the general land office, receiving appointment to the place at the hands of Governor Moody after the death of the veteran commissioner, J. T. Robison, will be returned to that office without opposition.

There are three aspirants for the office of commissioner of agriculture. George B. Terrell, who has held that office for several terms, announced that he would not be a candidate this time. Those who have announced are Representatives A. H. King of Throckmorton, J. J. Olsen of Yoakum and E. L. Covey of Goree.

Ed Christian of San Antonio is the only announced candidate for state treasurer. W. Gregory Hatcher, incumbent, will seek the governorship, being one of the nine candidates for the chief executive's chair now occupied by Dan Moody who may seek a third term. R. B. Walthall, chairman of the board of control, is considering running for treasurer but has not decided, he said.

S. M. N. Marrs has announced his candidacy for re-election to the state superintendency of public instruction. He will likely have some opposition, since he has been opposed almost regularly ever since he entered the office.

Neff May Run

Sam Houston Terrell's friends say he will be a candidate for re-election, and former Gov. Pat M. Neff is expected to be a candidate for the railroad commission, although his name persists in bobbing up in discussions of the governorship. He was appointed to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Clarence E. Gilmore, whose term expires in January, 1931.

Just to keep the data intact for convenience of the voters, the list of gubernatorial candidates (all who have announced formally) follows, in the order of their entrance: Oscar F. Holcombe of Houston, E. G. Senter of Dallas; Thomas B. Love of Dallas; Miss Katie Daffan of Ennis; Barry Miller of Dallas; T. N. Mauritz of Ganado; W. Gregory Hatcher of Dallas; Charlton Brown of Mineral Wells, and James Young of Kaufman.

Municipal Christmas Tree Program Outlined at Luncheon of Ad Club

Discussion of plans for the annual municipal Christmas tree to be given at the Memorial auditorium on Christmas Eve featured the weekly meeting of the Ad club at the Kemp hotel Tuesday noon.

Reporting progress made by the Ad club committee in charge of arrangements, Frank B. Creighton, local Boy Scout executive, declared that more than 800 pounds of candy, with fruit, nuts and toys in the same proportion, will be provided for the party. In order to provide the required number of toys, he said, without direct purchase, more used toys must be supplied for the Boy Scouts to repair.

Pupils of the Pitman Art school will present a 30-minute pageant of Christmas before Santa Claus begins passing out gifts, it was announced. Children will enter to music furnished by the Playground band, and will hear Christmas carols sung by the Camp Fire Girls, as in the past. Children for whom the party is given will be admitted by tickets which are being distributed by service organizations of the city.

Mr. Creighton also discussed advertising from the standpoint of make-up which attracts attention. Radio programs now being given in the interest of the municipal Christmas tree were reported by R. E. Davis, publicity chairman of the club.

ROOSEVELT IN SPIRITED TALK

New York Governor Heard At Chicago

that those of this same party who are real progressives at heart, who realize the dangers of the vast inequalities between the manufacturer and the farmer and feel that they cannot longer keep silent, have been obliged to turn in their hour of need for help to that other party, which stands as the progressive party of the country.

Imposition Averted

"If we have been saved the imposition by that last lamentable session of congress of a tariff which has been denounced by almost every paper in the country, it has been because a handful of liberals in the Republican party itself has turned to the Democratic party in congress in its desperate hour of need, and I am proud that my party has lived up to its traditions and that, working side by side, regardless of mere party lines, this great inquity has been prevented.

"But is there any hope that these far-seeing, progressive-minded gentlemen can get control in the next congress of their own party machinery? The attitude of the majority leaders has been, I think, well summed up by the contemptuous remark of Senator Moses, in which he referred to them as 'sons of wild jackasses.' Well, be that as it may, in this connection let me remind the distinguished senator from New Hampshire that it was Balaam's ass that God granted the miraculous gift of sudden speech to warn his master from proceeding further on a path that led to irretrievable destruction!

"It is my conviction, confirmed by letters I have recently received from many sources, that the people of our country today are awake to the problems that confront us and are angered and disgusted at a party whose leaders meet ostensibly to relieve the farmer and then proceed to attempt to line their own pockets with an exorbitant tariff; and it is my firm belief that they are equally convinced that the Democratic party today, while equally interested in the prosperity of the country, while equally desirous of avoiding foolish or ill-considered legislation that will cripple our real prosperity in any way, are, nevertheless, being by nature progressive, are far more likely to meet these problems in the next few years safely, wisely, but vigorously."

IKE WALTONS HOLD BANQUET

Fish and Duck Meal Followed by Talks

Sportsmen of Wichita Falls and her neighbors boasted of past achievements and dreamed of good fishing to come when they assembled Tuesday evening over their own crappie and teal in the annual Izaak Walton league banquet at the Woman's Forum.

More than 100 members and their guests gathered around the informal tables to enjoy a perfect rendering of their favorite fish and game, seasoned with talk of the rod and the gun. The banquet fish and duck was supplied by the members themselves who have been organizing small but effective hunting and fishing parties for the past several days.

After the dinner Ben G. Oneal, president of the Wichita Falls chapter of the league, made his annual report, telling the membership of the progress during the past year and the plans for the future. Mr. Oneal told of the organization of leagues in Olney, Seymour, Vernon, and Graham, and of the projected organization at Electra. He explained that it was the ambition of the organization to encircle the lakes of the region with chapters interested in the enforcement of the game laws and the furtherance of sporting interests throughout the section.

The president told of the success of the bass rearing ponds sponsored by the local chapter and paid tribute to John Crawford, game warden at Lake Kemp, in his efforts to further the project. He suggested that the stocking of the lakes and advertising of the sporting opportunities of the district would bring immediate results to the city and its environs.

He thanked the league in Oklahoma for helping secure the special licensing law which allows Texans to hunt in the Red river bed at a small cost and brings the activities of the two states closer together.

In closing Mr. Oneal introduced M. Koehler, president of the league at Lawton and A. L. Lund, his secretary. Mr. Koehler delighted the group with his promise of a national "fish and game paradise" near Lawton and his invitation to Texans to share in the sport.

Urged to his feet by the president, Mr. Crawford told of the rearing of 11,000 bass, from 3 to 7½ inches in length in the small rearing ponds of the league. The warden declared that five acres of water capable of rearing hundreds of thousands of bass could be impounded now at a very small cost.

"White Collars" To Open Tonight At Little Theater

Wichita Falls' Little Theater will open its three-day December season at its playhouse at Avenue H and Polk streets Wednesday night at 8 o'clock with the initial presentation of "White Collars," a three-act comedy-drama written by Edith Ellis.

Drawing near the end of its first year's work, which has been marked by almost a dozen commendable performances and the provision of a well-equipped workshop, the organization will offer one of the strongest casts and most appealing plays thus far presented.

Dirt Broken For New Methodist Building

The first step toward construction of the new Wilson Memorial Methodist church at Twenty-third and Grace streets was taken Tuesday morning when the first spadeful of earth on the project was turned by Mrs. L. H. McKinley, donor of one of the lots on which the church is to be built. The other lot was given by Mr. and Mrs. Ed Wilson, deceased, who were pioneer residents of this city. The new building is to cost $12,000, and will supplant what is now known as the Sibley-Taylor Methodist church. The Rev. Ben Bell is pastor.

The membership elected Dr. H. P. Ledford vice president, Dr. B. C. Cammack, secretary-treasurer; Dr. George T. Singleton, censor; Dr. W. P. Lowry, delegate, and Dr. H. D. Prichard, alternate.

Committees Appointed

The following committees were appointed: executive, Drs. C. W. Castner, J. W. Powers, and M. H. Glover; finance, Drs. J. D. Hall, L. B. Holland, T. C. McCurdy, T. H. Parmley and I. D. Wolford, and Curtis R. Atkinson.

Dr. Charles H. McCollum, of Fort Worth, was the visiting speaker of the evening, lecturing on periodic health examinations and medical ethics. Te lecturer urged the importance of annual examinations regardless of the condition of health as the surest means of preventing the development of serious diseases.

Dr. C. P. Lanphere, representing the dental society, discussed "Tic Douloureax," a neuralgia of the facial nerve, caused by infected teeth, sinus disorders, and any focal infection. A general discussion followed the two scientific papers.

The joint meeting of the two societies marks the annual culmination of the year's work in both groups and is regarded as one of the most significant gatherings of the year. Around 70 physicians and dentists were in attendance Tuesday evening.

3,000 See Magnificent Show at Auditorium

"Padlocks of 1929," witnessed by an audience of almost 3,000 persons at the Memorial auditorium Tuesday night, left a sensation of myriad scenes of delicate hues blended in artistic confusion with tantalizing feminine forms. The settings were of surprising beauty, the songs and dances of the latest and the forms approaching perfection. The show offered everything from hilarious comedy to unusual beauty. Its ease of movement was outstanding.

Stone flooring in the Boston Public library wore down under the tread of millions of feet until brass inlay work protruded and caused stumbling.

Vernon Youth Hurt In Auto Crash Here

J. B. Clark, Vernon youth, suffered a painful gash on the head about noon Tuesday when the car in which he was riding and another machine collided at the intersection of Broadway street and the Iowa Park road.

The young man was rushed to the Wichita General hospital. He was released after first aid treatment had been administered, attendants said.

E. A. Hicks of Henrietta, driver of the other machine, was unhurt. Damage to the two autmobiles was not considerable, according to the police report of the crash.

Mothers, Mix This At Home for a Bad Cough

You'll be pleasantly surprised when you make up this simple home mixture and try it for a distressing cough or chest cold. It takes but a moment to mix and costs little, but it can be depended upon to give quick and lasting relief.

Get 2½ ounces of Pinex from any druggist. Pour this into a pint bottle; then fill it with plain granulated sugar syrup or strained honey. The full pint thus made costs no more than a small bottle of ready-made medicine, yet it is much more effective. It is pure, keeps perfectly and children love its pleasant taste.

This simple remedy has a remarkable three-fold action. It goes right to the seat of trouble, loosens the germ-laden phlegm, and soothes away the inflammation. Part of the medicine is absorbed into the blood, where it acts directly upon the bronchial tubes and thus helps inwardly to throw off the whole trouble with surprising ease.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway Pine, containing the active agent of creosote, in a refined, palatable form, and known as one of the greatest healing agents for severe coughs, chest colds and bronchial troubles.

Do not accept a substitute for Pinex. It is guaranteed to give prompt relief or money refunded.

Are YOU Getting YOUR MONEY'S WORTH In Entertainment?

The American people pay more generously for entertainment than any nation on earth. Their generosity has enriched the motion picture industry.

Spoken dialog has come to replace the subtitle of the silent picture. Tagging along with the talkie comes Mechanical Music—an economy.

Real Music is being ordered out of many theatres in favor of this new comer, who never dared a theatrical appearance until he gained the protection of the Talking Picture's novelty and the magic word "Synchronized." Now synchronization with a picture does not give Mechanical Music the quality of Real Music.

Banishment of Living Music represents a loss for the theatre patron. Is this loss balanced by the substitution of Mechanical Music?

A very great many theatre-goers will answer:

"NO!"

Then why should the aforementioned American people, who pay so generously for entertainment, be required to take less for their money than they were wont to get?

IN MEMORIAM
Daily Editorial

CENTER MARKET, centenarian and landmark, is about to wave good-bye to its ancient crony, the Capitol.

The eviction papers are already served. And that dingy, red brick barn, which remembers when Washington hadn't a surfaced road, a precedence code, a sewer or a lamp-post, is en route to a wrecker's dump-heap.

The federal government has decided to house the department of justice on the site, thus forging another stately link in the chain of official buildings, rapidly confiscating the lower side of mid-town Pennsylvania avenue.

Center Market gone!

Sentiment has preserved many a less deserving shrine for posterity—and a national ghost-walk.

Celebrity, authority, and loveliness foregathered yonder long before Dolly Madison arrived to choose titbits for the presidential table.

Calhoun's footprints marked its sawdust. The mighty Webster strode there. Lincoln's gnarled hand betimes reached into its chinkapin sacks, and Grant more than once nibbled a "branch" strawberry, au naturel, from some Bennings farmer's stall.

The colonel's cook and the statesman's wife rubbed surah and calico in those democratic aisles and, elbow to elbow, judicially pinched pullet breasts.

Administration gourmets and local dandies personally selected Potomac shad and Chesapeake terrapin at Golden's fish stand.

The Illustrious Wormley, the Immortal Harvey and Chamberlain the Great, were regularly noted in its early-bird throng—often as not toting baskets of special delicacies back to epicurean studios—before whose masterpieces in sauce, deep fat fry, and lineaged vintage, even an Ochiltree, a Pauncefote, and a John Hay were proud to sit in reverence.

WHAT a social melting pot was Center Market!

Midget Koreans from the legation at one corner of Iowa Circle, and chin-whiskered Bishop Hurst from another; woolly-mopped Frank Nichols, deviled crab virtuoso from the Navy Yard, and the eccentric Dunlop, with his painted neck, from Georgetown; Dr. Mary Walker in trousers and top-hat, and the majestic Mrs. Senator Dolph, with her be-buttoned flunky, from Judiciary Square; bandannaed mammies gawping at obese Chinese merchants of the pre-Chop Suey era; that rising young composer, John Philip Sousa, the bandmaster at Marine Barracks; and jovial Frank Ward, soon to die in a brawl in a basement saloon; Center Market met them all.

Behrends, the pumpernickel baker, and Oyster, the butter dealer, knew them. "Yard"-selling crones squatted amidst bundles of sassafras and febrifuges; Gude, the tyro florist from Anacostia, and negro hunters from down Alexandria way, swinging chilled arms, beside heaps of cottontails, quail and mallards, watched them pass.

Arthurs, Clevelands, Harrisons, McKinleys, meanwhile, come and go.

The wagon-tail hucksters on the C street curb, at appointed hours, follow.

The last load of twist tobacco creaks out of Marlboro on an ox wain, and vanishes into the sunset.

The colored magpies, vending samp, sausage cake, eggs and mistletoe under the shabby canopy, weazen, wither and fade from the scene.

William Jennings Bryan, hamper on arm, palm leaf in action, alpacaclad, casts smiles before swine—and onions—then drops from the picture.

Center Market, alone survives, to take its coup de grace from an upstart blueprint, without a spark of veneration in its makeup or a wistful longing for the food that was—and its unrefrigerated ways.

Sic transit omnis gloria.

The melancholy days are here when the papers begin printing the number of shopping days until Christmas.

Scientists still seek the positive zero. Our idea of that would be a copy of Xenophon's Anabasis in a football dressing room.

Dropping the Cave Man

THE EASTERN GENTLEMAN who plunged into the Canadian wilds a couple of months ago to see how far a modern city dweller could get in the primitive cave-man role seems to have come out a poor second in his combat with nature.

He planned, you remember, to go into the wolds naked and unarmed, to clothe and feed himself with his bare hands and with such tools as he could make in the forest.

First he compromised by wearing running pants and an athletic shirt. Then he compromised further by taking an ax. Then he compromised some more by appropriating a moose skin that some Indian had left lying about.

And now, footsore, blistered and underweight from hunger, he comes back to cilivilization. Two months were plenty. The wilderness, it would seem, is too much for the modern city dweller.

This chap, undoubtedly, did as well as any of us could do. We have gone a long way from the period of individual self-sufficiency. Who among us could go out into the forest and find his own food, clothing and shelter? Not one of us. We would either starve or freeze, in short order.

This measure of our helplessness is a striking testimonial to the distance that mankind has advanced. It is not so many generations since no man could live if he could not fight, bare-handed, against nature. Now if a man can tend a simple machine, get on and off of a street car and find his way about a big city he is amply fitted to survive.

Have we grown soft? Undoubtedly. But have we, in the softening process, really lost anything of value? Probably not. There is no reason for this easterner to feel ashamed of his failure in the wilderness. Indeed, the fact that he failed so ingloriously is really an item on the credit side of the ledger.

For life ought to be something more than a mere fight for existence. To be able to make a fire by rubbing two sticks together is, no doubt, quite an achievement; and, likewise, it is something to be able to catch a deer, eat his flesh and make a pair of breeches out of his hide. Yet the fact that we have become unable to do these things simply indicates that we have managed to get away from the heritage of the ape and tiger. We have taken quite a number of steps upward.

There is no need for us to bewail our helplessness. We ought, rather, to be proud of it. It is an indication that we are progressing.

Where the Power Lies

HENRY FORD raises the wages of some 140,000 men and adds something like $20,000,000 a year to the payroll of the nation; and, in doing so, he crowds President Hoover's address to congress out of the leading position on the front pages of the country's newspapers.

This raises, once more, that highly interesting question—who are the real rulers of this country, anyhow—its elected officials, or its big industrialists?

The answer is rather obvious. Despite the fact that the president of the United States is one of the most powerful national rulers on earth, real power in this country is very largely in the hands of men like Ford. In a very real sense, these men are the controllers of our destiny. This may be all for the best, or it may be rather tragic; but there doesn't seem to be anything we can do about it except put up with it.

Consider, for instance, the power that lies in the hands of Ford alone—reflecting, all the while, that he is only one among a number of industrial giants.

Close to half a million people are directly affected by Ford's wage increase. Uncounted thousands more will be indirectly affected. The entire nation will feel the effects of the thing before we are through with it.

Conversely, when Ford shuts down his plants the effect is nationwide. Detroit takes on a dull and lifeless air. Other cities find their prosperity hard hit. Industries that supply Ford with some of his materials are given a taste of hard times. The whole Middle West feels the shut down very keenly.

What is true of Ford is true of the other giants. General Motors, U. S. Steel, General Electric, the great railroad trunk lines—the men who run these concerns have almost the power of life and death over hundreds of thousands of their fellow citizens. They can affect their lives more surely and directly than the federal government itself, except in time of war.

Maybe this state of affairs is all for the best and maybe it isn't. The point is that it exists. This "industrial civilization" of ours is a reality. Complaints and protests are useless.

All we can do is recognize the fact and make the best of it. Our real rulers are the great industrialists. We might as well admit it.

The Smartest Politicians

SOLOMON LEVITAN, state treasurer of Wisconsin, thinks it only natural that women should be making their mark in American politics.

"Women are the greatest politicans we ever had, and they come by it naturally," he told the club women of Janesville, Wis., the other day.

"They have had to play politics throughout the ages to make it possible to live with Adam. The men think they run the universe, and the women are smart enough to let them think so. So long as the women hold the reins, they do not care who gets credit for good driving."

All of this, of course, is perfectly true. The canniest male politician that ever lived could take lessons from the average mother of a family.

Graduate

You will not hear my pleadings any more,
You will not need to yawn or watch the clock,
No cause to dim the light or bolt the door,
For pride has made a most effective lock.

And if my duty takes me by your house,
I will not stop to note a homing light,
But quietly as a mischievous mouse
Pass quickly through the stillness of the night.

I know I stayed too long—my eyes could see
The words that kindness guarded from your lips,
Quaint lad was I to doubt that ecstasy
Was shifting as the sails of fisher ships.

But I am wise today—and wisdom brings
A cargo fraught with bitter blinding things.

Reportorial Inaccuracy

The Nov. 30 issue of the New-yorker carries in its talkofthetown several paragraphs on Baldy Jack Rose, the surviving principal of the fascinating Rosenthal murder case. Unfortunately, all of the paragraphs are in error.

Instead of dwelling in a Philadelphia suburb, Jack Rose makes his home, as for the past decade or so, in the outskirts of Norwalk, Conn., where he lives with Mrs. Rose and two adopted children. In addition to operating two of the biggest rotisseries along the Post Road, Rose dabbles in real estate and has come to be regarded as a model citizen in the Connecticut community. He New Havens to New York almost daily.

On Thanksgiving day Rose supplied every one of the inmates of Naramake home, the Norwalk poorhouse, with turkey dinner, including all the fixings. A quiet, reticent man, he leads a peaceful existence and is living a new life.

Capsule Criticism

Added to our Crisp Cracks from Critical Cusses dept: "Her songs aroused little appreciation for the audience was as cold as a Rothstein clue," and "the show is as dull as a Scotchman's razor."

Nifty

It was Paul Hyde Bonner, the tome collector, who finally chose the name "Chez Vous" for Mrs. Ruth (New Yorker) Fleishmann's and Margaretta Schuyler's interior decorating shop on East 58th St.

But there are some who think his suggestion was not half so clever as that of Alexander Woollcott, who, when asked by Ruth what to put on the shingle outside of the shoppe, promptly replied: "We fix flats!"

Pun My Soul!

"On Wall street," Izzy Elinson revises, "fools margin where angels fear to trade."

Girl With a Red Hat

A flame-red hat upon your head,
An angel's smile to off-show it;
I close my eyes to that red-flame hat
And seek the red lips below it.

Your unbound love, munificent
If it isn't just that ting of scarlet
That makes you, dear, magnificent.

Old Gold Stuff

Hungry for attention the easily-bruised Michael Gold, who writes difficult-to-appreciate plays, finds some comfort in the columns of the New Masses to express himself about the dramatic critics who do not like his stuff. This is a semi-annual complaint from Mr. Gold, who merely repeats himself every time one of his shows lays an egg, and he frets in this manner: "J. Brooks Atkinson, of the Times, maintains an honesty and dignity of purpose that are worthy of respect. He never descends to the wisecrack, that last refuge of the inferior mind. . . . The rest are timesavers, the sycophantic slaves of a commercial machine. . . . One cannot be too harsh with them; they themselves have no decency or honor in their attitude to playwrights. It is only the large commercial producers, with lots of money for advertising, who are treated respectfully by them. . . . When a small pioneering group attempts to do something they become a lynching party. Ah, what fun! What fun to assassinate the brave, the new, the friendless!"

Ah, nuts!

Ghosts

The moonbeams stroke against the windowpane,
The rustle of the dead leaves make me start.
Oh! could it be a case of nerves and gin,
Or an echo of the old ache in my heart? —JEAN DOUGLAS.

Blunder

Even those of us who put things in the papers stumble now and then by jotting down something that is in poor taste (so he admits it, huh?). But what we started out to report was the boomerang a well-known star hurled at himself in Boston recently. The actor tripped as he came on the stage and after picking himself up he clowned: "Guess I'll have to visit the Malden shrine."

The untimely crack was appropriately met with a thud of silence, but the entertainer's troubles were not over. Every editor in the town immediately assigned a reporter to ask the actor one question: "Just what was your idea in saying that?" And he admitted that it was a feeble and foolish remark.

But the show will shut sooner than supposed. You can't clown with religion or faith, you know.

Marriage for Two--By Arthur Somers Roche

Shortly after an interview in which Helen Wilson tells Larry Tracy that she wishes to break their engagement so that she can marry the wealthy, middle-aged Frank Burton, and Larry swears, in pique, to marry the first girl who will have him, he rescues from a park bench a starved but beautiful girl, Joyce Carroll.

A few days later they are married, agreeing that the marriage shall in reality be nothing more than a friendship.

Of his wife Larry knows nothing, except her name, although a man named Ratty Hogan attempts unsuccessfully to tell him something of her past.

Shortly they sail for Biarritz in order to escape the notoriety their marriage has caused. At a smart restaurant they meet Paul Weedon, whom Joyce dislikes at sight; Billy Valdemagara, a red-headed Spaniard, and Jeanne Mazell, the undisputed social leader of the colony.

At the Casino Joyce gives a woman of the demimonde 40,000 francs and then tells Larry she lost the money at the gambling tables.

Realizing that he is falling in love with her, Larry seeks information about her from the woman at the casino.

That night he and Joyce attend a party given by Valdemagara.

Helen Wilson

The reserve was situated at St. Jean de Luz, 15 or 20 kilometers away from Biarritz, and toward the Spanish border. Through a soft and starry night, with frequent glimpses of a whitely gleaming surf, they raced, until, some time after 9, they arrived at the popular restaurant.

They were among the later arrivals, and groups of people, cocktail glasses in hand, hailed them excitedly. A new beauty—word had gone about the summer colony—had arrived in Biarritz, and every woman appraised Joyce jealously and men fought for presentation. For beauty is a cult abroad, and Americans yield themselves to its sway as readily as the most romantic Latin.

They were hardly within the precincts of the restaurant when Joyce was separated from husband. Billy Valdemegara constituted himself her cavalier.

"You will," he instantly insisted, "be eternally faithful to me?"

"But naturally," said Joyce, "until of course, I meet some one more attractive."

"That," said the Spaniard grandiloquently, "is impossible. Me, I am the sort of man whom women adore. Ah, you smile. But don't you see? You wonder now why women should adore me—wonder and curiosity are the same thing. So you will be curious about me for—oh, forever—still wondering at what there is—to adore in me. You will never learn, and so—"

He was nice. Of course, it was nonsense, trifling nothings, but—nice.

Hiss oddly freckled face assumed great gravity.

"I always prove my friendship at the start," he said. "I would warn you against your husband."

His voice was so serious that she was genuinely startled.

"Why, what do you mean?"

"The man," said the Marquis, "is patently charming. Otherwise how could he have won so beautiful a creature as yourself? Charming men are notoriously faithless, fickle, inwardly cruel—"

"Are you all those things, too?" she interrupted.

He beamed upon her. He turned to the group about them.

"My friends, the Basque country's latest and most lovely arrival has told me that I am charming. I ask you, my faithful and devoted ones, to drink a toast to me, Billy Valdemagara, charming Billy Valdegagara."

It was fun. Oh, maybe childish, but—fun. Only when Weedon drew her apart for a moment, brought his olly countance too close to hers, did fun depart. Few, she suddenly realized, could play at flirtation gracefully. When those unfitted attempted the game, it became sordid and ugly. She despised Weedon with an instinctive and instantaneous contempt.

But the Marquis was in no mood to let any rival monopolize her for more than a moment. He neatly cut her out from Weedon and in a moment she was on the dance floor with him.

"You're in Love With Your Wife"

Larry, engaged in gay controversy with Jeanne Mazell, saw her float by in the arms of Billy. His jaw dropped. He knew that she was graceful, but he had not realized that she was superb in movement. Jeanne laughed.

"I let her have the Marquis—that isn't fair—I couldn't have held Billy. Those redheads love back-haired people—but I didn't debate the matter, and you know I didn't, Larry. Here's the best beau in Biarritz, and I surrendered him without a struggle, and Larry, you know I could defend my own, now don't you?"

"Jeanne," he laughed, withdrawing his gaze from Joyce by a visible effort, "few women could hope to compete with you."

"Thank you, angel," she smiled. "But when I deeded over Billy Valdemagara, it was on the distinct understanding that I was to acquire you in exchange. But you, my simple-souled man, are in love with your wife. Larry Tracy, you annoy me. You've been married a month or so, haven't you? You've had time enough to discover flaws, frailties in perfection and—er—you haven't paid me a compliment in five minutes."

"Jeanne," he began, "only my deep regard for your husband—"

She interrupted him with a laugh. "Go, you poor man, and dance with your wife." She detained him a moment with a light touch. "And I don't blame you. Larry—she's exquisite."

Well, Jeanne Mazell gave affection sparingly to women. The cosmopolitan colony of which Jeanne was leader would take Joyce to their hearts. But, meantime, he would like to hold her against his own heart, dance with her. . .

He cut in on Valemagara. The red-haired Spaniard glared at him.

"My God, has there ever been such gaucherie?" he appealed to all within hearing. "A husband cutting in on his wife! Larry Tracy, there is a touch of the bourgeois about you from which my Castilian blood shrinks." He bowed over Joyce's hand. "Madame, when you tire of this possessive creature, when your soul seeks serenity—I shall be at your side." His glare softened to gayety. "Larry, you lucky dog, from my heart I congratulate you."

Rebuffed

This was their first dance together. On shipboard, when he had suggested it, Joyce had pleaded the motion of the ship. But now she was in his arms, and he was conscious of her as he had not been even this morning when he had strained her to him.

Exquisite, Jeanne Mazell had called her. But the word was not enough. The word connoted fragility, lack of fire . . . and this creature was alive, vital, superb. . . . He relinquished her at last.

"You dance well," she said.

It was her first speech since he had taken her from the Marquis.

"You—you—you're unbelievable," he muttered.

Her eyes grew chill. "Please—not this morning—again," she said.

She read his thoughts before he was aware of them himself. He flushed. The reaction from exaltation was too much for him. He was angered.

"Not again—not ever," he said harshly.

She smiled serenely. "Then we shall get on divinely."

Brunet, an Argentian of French paternity, sleek, too well groomed, bowed before them. She floated away in his arms, and Tracy went sulkily to the bar, to solace himself with another cocktail. Valemagara had found a trumpet somewhere and was summoning his guests to dinner. Tracy swept in with the others, and found himself a dozen places away from Joyce, seated between Jeanne Mazell and a vivacious Swiss, whose sturdy Teutonic countenance belied her irrepressible gayety.

But, thank God, Larry breathed, she had a devoted cavalier on her other side, and he did not need to play up to her. As for Jeanne Mazell, she wickedly ignored him, turning a very lovely and very white shoulder to him most of the time. And when she did relent and address a few words to him, she did so in a scolding manner.

It was all play and all delightful—on any other occasion. But tonight, furtively watching attractive men bid for the favor of his wife's attention, watching Billy's exaggerated—yet sincere—admiration, Tracy felt tired, old, out of it all. Damn it all, why couldn't everything be forgotten? Why couldn't Joyce and himself pretend to each other that their marriage had been the normal result of normal acquaintance and growth of affection.

But when he complimented her, told her that she was incredibly delightful, she shrank from him. He knew what she shrank from. She was of that proud type that wants no passion unbased on love. Or was he not placing her on too high a pedestal? God, considering what he surmised, guessed—no, what he knew—what a fool he was to attribute to her motives whose delicacy made them ridiculous when applied to her!

Then he hated himself for thinking evil of this lovely thing. Then he despised himself for permitting a lovely face and a beautiful body to blind him to patent insincerities—and worse. Well, he was a fool. And what a fool! The music struck up again and the diners left the table. Confetti flew between the tables; feather darts were tossed; the usual banalities of a gala were in full swing. Tonight Larry would have enjoyed these manufactured efforts on the part of the management of a popular restaurant to make it still more popular had Joyce glanced toward him, signaled him to come to her side.

But she didn't, and—well, he wouldn't intrude. Some one claimed Jeanne and some else claimed the gay Swiss, so he was alone, partnerless. He slipped away from the table and stood on the rocks overlooking the shining sea.

The Girl on the Cliff

He had no thoughts, was empty-minded, save for a vague resentment at the world itself. And it was in this mood that Helen Wilson came upon him.

He became vaguely aware that some one else had come out upon the cliff, but didn't turn his head. Perhaps some couple, seeking privacy for the exchange of tender sentiments, had slipped away from the gala. Well, let them slip somewhere else. He had no concern for the loves of others, he who was having difficulties himself.

Then, as the approaching movement ceased, he had that consciousness of being stared at which is inexplicable save on the ground of inherited suspicious instinct. He turned, turned as though forced by the exercise of a will stronger—at the moment at least—than his own.

The moonlight fell full upon the face of the person whose stare had turned him around. It fell gently upon blond curls, upon a sweetly seductive mouth, parted in tender eagerness now, upon blue eyes whose shallowness was concealed by the play of the moon, exactly as moonlight makes the shallowest pool seem of oceanic depth.

The parted lips spoke.

"Larry," they whispered.

"Helen," he said in amazement.

She moved a step toward him. Now he saw that her bosom rose and fell, could even hear the breath as it came from between her lips, could see and sense the agitation that possessed her. He didn't know how or why she was here, she who should have been back in New York with Frank Burton. He only knew that all her old charm was revived. He took a step toward her.

LAMESA, Texas, Dec. 10.—Plans are underway here to build a new Baptist church. The present building, which is wooden, is not large enough to house the present church attendance. Cost and location of the new building have not been decided yet, according to the Rev. E. F. Cole.

The Once Over
By H. I. PHILLIPS

No Nickels, Mr. Rockefeller

John D. Rockefeller, arriving in Florida for his winter divot-digging, distributed nickels instead of dimes to the children there. How can President Hoover reconcile this with his statements that there is no reason to worry?

PHILLIPS

The one mistake made by Mr. Hoover in his conferences on restoring confidence was his failure to invite Mr. Rockefeller to it. John D. probably wouldn't have relished the idea of hanging around golfless Washington, but he should have been handed a mashie-niblick and kept under observation until the sunshine drive ended.

For the oil king to make a 50 per cent cut in his vest-pocket souvenirs at this stage of things was no psychological aid to Mr. Hoover. It looks bad.

Mr. Rockefeller may say everything is lovely and that "My son and I are in the market now buying at these bargain levels," but when he begins passing out nickels instead of the proverbial dimes he throws manna to the skeptics.

John D.'s dime distribution has become the best advertised activity in American history. When you see Rockefeller you think of bright, new shiny dimes and when you see a nice new shiny dime you think of Rockefeller.

To hold out your hand and get a nickel from Ormond Beach's most famous golfer is like opening up the evening paper and discovering your favorite investment trust has passed the dividend.

It is up to President Hoover to get in touch with John D. at once—even if he is on the fifth green about to sink a four-foot putt—and urge him to get back on a 10-cent basis.

When you have to see John D. twice to get as much money as you got last year in one trip it looks suspicious. A drop in the Rockefeller dime market frightens people almost as much as a drop in the stock market.

Come, come, Mr. Rockefeller! Don't rock the boat. Make us all feel that Mr. Hoover is right and that there is nothing wrong with American prosperity.

Put away those nickels!

We want dimes!

You Know the Type

A broker is a funny guy
And when the stocks are very high
He tells you "Now's the time to buy—
They probably will hit the sky."

But when they take an awful flop
And for some bargains you would shop
He urges caution, bids you stop
And says, "I'd wait until they drop."

President Hoover in his latest message to the business men of the country emphasizes "the good old word—work." "Yeah," bawls the man who is at the moment trying to change a tire, help the wife hang pictures, change a typewriter ribbon or set up the storm door.

"Get out of the huddle of conferences and play ball," urges Mr. Julius Klein, assistant secretary of commerce. Not so fast, not so fast! Give the boys a chance to determine whether the next play is to be a punt, a pass or a smash at center.

Stocks are going up so nicely it's almost time the ashman began giving tips again.

PEEPS AT PEOPLE

By MRS. L. N. CASON

We are thinking today—a great stretch—from the Isadora Duncan dancers to Ben Lindsey. And the first thought is the more pleasant.

We never remember seeing more bouyant grace than shown by the dancers. Figures turning in charming, lithe poetry of motion. We say "more," because we never remember seeing more fairylike lightness and loveliness than that of Delphine Baleuwa in "The Opium Dream." It lives like a gossamer vision in our memory.

Then we woke on Tuesday to read that Judge Ben Lindsey was disbarred. A blow at one of our childhood's ideals! Ben Lindsey was born in the same town where we were introduced to the world and one of the first features of our life was written about him, with pictures of him in his "little boy" clothes.

Ben Lindsey said "The judicial reforms I have advocated, would put half the lawyers out of business." And it may be so. But the thing that has interfered with our admiration for the man Lindsey, is his theory of companionate marriage. It seems to us that it would put half the marriages out of business.

Just at random, we wonder why one cannot get a good meal in many of the local cafes without being forced to listen to music. Music?

We know Christmas is just about upon us. We saw three women today, carrying shoestring shopping bags.

The Christmas spirit is alert on the streets. Not only evergreens and Christmas bells and colored lights brought it here. It is more than all else, the children.

The day that Santa came, we saw them with their faces alive with happy expectation. Some people say children should not be deceived, but we believe in leaving the gilt on all the gingerbread until life scrapes it off.

Two years ago at Christmas, the weather was just as balmy as that of today. We saw this morning, beneath bridal wreath bushes that were purple and russet in late autumn colors, a sheltered shrub with leaves as green as if it were spring.

With our autumn colored minds, we would like to shelter the dreams of children; to leave them green as long as life will let them alone.

Girls Should Not Be Forced to Wed By Their Parents

Shall This Girl Divorce the Man She Married Against Her Wish?—Why Modern Chivalry Is a Fifty-Fifty Proposition—Tired of Work.

Dear Miss Dix—Two years ago, under great pressure from my family, and against my own desire, I married a man whom I did not love. My mother insisted that it was the best thing for me to do because I was a poor student at college and I would be unable to earn a living for myself. Also that I might never have another opportunity to marry as I had no great appeal to men. I thought that perhaps I could learn to love my husband, or at least be content, but I find that his personality is such that it repulses me, and I am coming to actually hate him, although he is a good, kind man and I have no real cause of complaint against him. He senses my feelings toward him and also realizes that our marriage is a mistake and would not be made unhappy if I should leave him. I am only 22 and bitterly unhappy. Of course my mother would oppose my leaving my husband, but I think I have taken enough advice from her already, don't you? V. L.

Answer—Certainly your case should be a warning to parents not to interfere in their children's matrimonial affairs, and especially not to force a girl into marriage against her inclinations.

Nothing is more cruel, and nothing more pathetic, that the way in which mothers try to marry off their daughters to men who have money, or who they think will make the girls a good living, irrespective of the girls' feelings in the matter.

Sometimes the mother will know that the man she has selected for her daughter is actually repulsive to her. Often she will know that the girl is in love with some poor chap, yet despite all this she will marry the girl to the man with the longest pocketbook if she can, not because she is careless of her daughter's happiness, but because she believes that the dreams and romance of youth are poor things in comparison with a good home and a shopping ticket and a nice car.

Such a mother would be horrified if you told her that she is nothing but a slave trader who is selling her daughter to the highest bidder, but she is no less than that, because she is bringing an almost irresistible force to bear on the girl. She is trading on her daughter's affection for her, on her habit of obedience, on her childhood belief that her mother knows best, and when she adds to these tears and entreaties, it takes more force of character than most young girls possess to stand up for their inalienable right to marry the men they prefer to the ones mother has picked out for them.

And these mothers who try to marry their daughters off to rich men the infinitely pathetic because their greed is seldom for themselves, they are grasping only for their children. They know how hard life is for the poor woman and they want to save their daughters from the penny-pinching and drudgery they have had to undergo.

Organ Recital Wins Praise of Musicians

One of the outstanding features of the last day's program of the first district annual convention of the Texas Federation of Music clubs was the organ recital given at the First Baptist church by Mrs. F. R. Collard.

A large and very responsive audience attended the rendition of her program, not only the delegates and and board members, but residents of the city.

Mrs. Collard gave a beautiful program, one well chosen for variety, giving many serious numbers and also those in lighter vein. Particularly well balanced, it displayed fully the resources of the organ. She was assisted by Wm. E. Young, who gave two very beautiful vocal numbers, accompanied by Miss Annette Walsh.

Mrs. Collard is known far and wide for her ability as an organist. She studied under two of the foremost American organists, Clarence Eddy and Rollo F. Maitland.

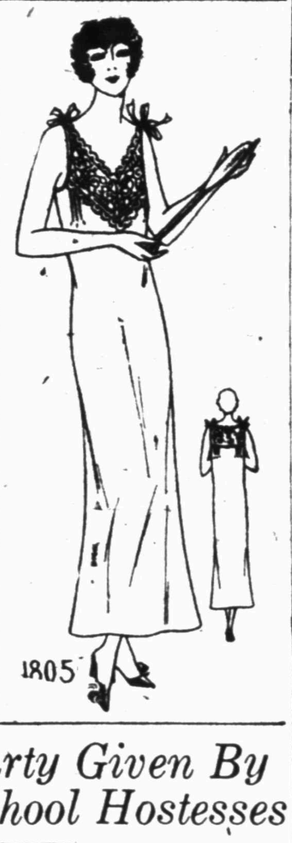

Sometime ago she was invited to broadcast an organ recital from Dallas as one of a series which was being presented by the Texas chapter of the American Guild of organists.

She is invited to be a guest organist of the Euterpean club of Fort Worth after Christmas. Her splendid ability is reported to have won her many admirers and friends during the convention.

Ward's Lecture Today Open To Forum Members

It takes only the white card of 1929-30 membership to damit one to an afternoon of rare pleasure Wednesday when Frederick Ward, the "grand old man of the footlights," will speak to the members of the Woman's Forum.

Mr. Ward's beautiful philosophy of life is "hope." He has written it in a beautiful prose poem called "Yesterday, Today and Tomorrow." "Behind me," he says, "all is clear; —the mountain tops I've scaled, the hills I've climbed, the highways I have trod, the vales that sheltered me. It is the land of yesterday. The sands from whence I gaze,—we call today; and the vast waste of water o'er which I cast my eyes in eager quest is the mystery of tomorrow. —To the unspoken question of my soul, the murmuring surges whisper, Hope!"

Mrs. C. P. Burton will preside during the early part of the Wednesday program, which starts at 2:30 promptly. Several pleasant surprises are in store for forum members.

During Mrs. Bernard Martin's absence in Austin, Mrs. Ed Howard, 1710 Huff, is in charge of the membership cards and will issue them to anyone who wishes to pay dues, with the new yearbook. New cards may be obtained at the desk in the foyer of the clubhouse Wednesday also, it is announced.

STATE HIGH SCHOOL GRID SEMI-FINALS SLATED SATURDAY

The Sportlight

By GRANTLAND RICE

On the Mexican Gridiron

It may interest a number of the few million football fans now blocking traffic in the United States that football got away to a running start—also to a kicking and passing start—in the land south of the Rio Grande.

The team from the University of Mexico made amazing progress in a short time and there is every indication this progress will be increased next fall with the foundation already laid. The following comment from an observer in Mexico City is worth recording:

"This year, as you know, football crossed the Rio Grande. International intercollegiate football got under way. There were two games with college teams from the United States—the first with Louisiana college, Oct. 5, and the second with Mississippi college, Nov. 20. The scores of these two games tell little. The chief result was that these international games established a significant contact between American and Mexican universities—all the more significant because it was based on (and in) football. Here you have such men as President Emilio Portes Gil. Dr. Cottingham, president of Louisiana college, and Dr. Provine, president of Mississippi college, agreeing that these games were probably contributing more profoundly to international amity than any other agencies working to that end. The importance of international intercollegiate football games may be taken for granted. Is not this aspect of such contests worth mentioning in any review of the season?

Fine Sportsmanship

"The two games were played with singular sportsmanship. Dr. Charles C. Stroud of Louisiana State Normal, who refereed the Louisiana college-University of Mexico game—a referee of 25 years' experience—said to me he had never refereed a more sportsmanlike contest. Professor Metzenchin, of the University of Texas, who refereed the Mississippi college-University of Mexico game voiced similar praise of the ethical side of football in Mexico. Reginald D. Root, of Yale, was, as you probably know, the coach of the University of Mexico team this year. The team developed amazingly. Here was the most extraordinary triumph of its season—it completed 23 out of 28 forward passes in the game Nov. 20 with Mississippi college. Is this not a record in American football?

"Another feature, this I submit, which merits mention in any review of the football season. Roman, halfback, did the passing, Landa, Elorduy and Miranda received the passes. Root, of course, gave the team the plays. A Latin professor at Yale, I understand, evolved the pass formation that succeeded repeatedly against Mississippi.

"I hope you will be able to mention especially Roman and Landa. Roman threw with extraordinary accuracy and coolness. Landa is 6 feet 3 inches tall. He plays center on the university basket ball team. He plays right end on the football team. He has many of the qualities of an unusual end. He is the fiercest tackler on the university eleven. In the Louisiana game, covering a punt, he dropped Harkness, the Louisiana quarter (a back far above the average) for a three-yard loss—dropped him flat on his back with a flying tackle.

Star End

"If you could mention Landa among the better ends of the season you would not only give a fine player his due, but give football in Mexico a big impetus.

"Another splendid player on the eleven was Estanol, the center. He outplayed his Louisiana opponent; he gave Captain Murphree, of Mississippi, reputedly one of the best centers in the South, a fine battle. Murphree praised him highly to me.

"You will be pleased, I know, to learn that in 1930 the University of Mexico eleven will go to the United States. It will play Mississippi college, at Jackson, about Nov. 20, and Spring Hill college at Mobile, Ala., a week later. It will also play three games here with American colleges, including one Louisiana college."

It would be a doubly interesting phase of the all-American situation if a few years from now the final selections would have to be labeled—"All-America and All-Mexican Football Team for 1935." From the fine spirit Mexican players have shown in their first year this is far from being an impossible turn.

BRECK FAVORED TO BEAT WACO

Coaches Are Long-Time Rivals

By GAYLE TALBOT JR.
Associated Press Sports Writer

DALLAS, Dec. 10 (AP)—The Breckenridge Buckaroos, a lean, rawboned band of scrappers from the oil belt, stood out today as favorites to capture the 1929 state high school football title.

Coach P. E. Shotwell's green-jerseyed eleven has the unusual distinction of being a favorite to defeat Waco this week at Breckenridge. The victor in that battle was favored to defeat the winner of the Port Arthur-Denton game at Port Arthur.

More than 10,000 fans are expected to witness each of the semi-final battles.

Observers Pick Breck

A majority of observers have picked Breckenridge to win from the long victorious Waco Tigers for two reasons. First, the Buckaroos vanquished a great high school team, the Amarillo Sanstorm, last week, 13 to 0. Secondly, the game is to be played at Breckenridge. If they were to meet Waco at Waco the outcome would be a toss up, despite the apparent superiority of the West Texas champions. It sounds silly, but he Tigers have about convinced the state in general that they cannot be beaten at the Cotton Palace.

Jackets Also Favored

Port Arthur likewise is a favorite largely because it will be playing on its home field. There was no real method of comparing the fighting Yellowjackets with their next adversaries, the Denton Broncos. Their respective districts are far apart and they have not met the same teams. Port Arthur barely able to win out in its district, surprised the state's gridiron followers by nosing out the powerful Brownsville Eagles, 13 to 12, last Saturday. Denton came from behind to defeat Marshall, 20 to 14.

Port Arthur Veterans

Port Arthur has almost the same team that went to the finals last year and was overwhelmed by the Abilene Eagles. Those who have seen Coach Tom Dennis' eleven in action say it is stronger than last season, but scarcely as stout as either Breckenridge or Waco.

The tussle at Breckenridge will mark the third important meeting of the rival coaches since the interscolastic league was organized. Coach Shotwell of Breckenridge was at Abilene in 1922 and 1923 when the Eagles played Waco in the finals of the state race. Paul Tyson, wily Waco mentor, broke even with Shotwell in those two engagements. Most of the credit for Waco's present status in the state race is due to Tyson's coaching genius. His material, critics have agreed, was only ordinary.

INTRAMURAL BALL

Reagan Youngsters to Play Grid Game Friday

The first intramural football game ever played in Wichita Falls will be reeled off Friday afternoon at 3 o'clock when the teams of the seventh and eighth grades of the Reagan Junior high school clash at Wilson field. Some 50 youngsters in the seventh and eighth grades have been practicing every day for the last two weeks in preparation for the coming tilt. All those players who did not earn letters on the regular Reagan team are eligible for participation in this game.

Captain Cossey of the Reagan regulars was assisted by Coach Beck to tutor the seventh grade with Bob Decker as his assistant, while Henry Berry was appointed as the mentor of the eighth grade with Harry Williams as his assistant. Both teams are under the supervision of Coach Beck and are responsible to him.

The purpose of this intramural football competition, as related by Coach Beck, is to stimulate interest in the game and give the boys early training and better fit them for play on the high school team when they reach that age.

Major League Big Shots Spend Day In Quiet of Hotel

NEW YORK, Dec. 10. (UP)—Major league magnates of the American and National leagues spent a quiet day at their separate meetings at the hotel Commodore.

About nothing of importance was done. The league presidents, John Heydler of the National and E. S. Barnard of the American, reported that they were working on the 1930 schedule, with a view to opening on April 15 and closing on Sept. 28.

The National league discussed the "lively ball," and the majority agreed that it was "fast, perhaps too fast."

Both leagues discussed the "chain store system" of ownership of ball clubs. The proposed new rule calling for every club to file the agreements to purchases of another club with Commissioner Landis, Secretary John Farrell of the National association and the two league preisdent was discussed favorably. It will be passed on at the joint meeting of the leagues Thursday. Heretofore, there has been no record of the purchase of one club by another club.

President Barnard said he thought the solution to the "chain store system" was the universal draft.

Hughie Critz, Cincinnati second baseman, has been placed on the trading block, but Manager Dan Howley is understood to be asking too much for the Red's infielder.

NEW YORK, Dec. 10.—No two ways about it, the manly art of legalized assault has lost a lot of its zingo since Tunney turned patrician and Dempsey turned smart. They unfortunately did this almost simultaneously, with the result that there is nothing left for boxing these days except a few Humpty Dumpties who neither interest you in the ring nor out of it. This last is important.

Tunney, simply as Tunney, never would have made a million and married into an unlisted telephone number. As a fighter, he was only moderately interesting. As a human being, he was and is the most amazing of men, an individualist with a passion for doing and saying extraordinary things. He had a genius for making people mad and usually the nicer he tried to be to them, the madder they got. Tunney was a master irritant.

Permanent Reactions

Some liked him instantly and permanently; many didn't—and their reaction was also permanent. But say what you would about him, he left no doubt in your mind concerning one thing: Popularity, he did lack; importance, never. They had to accept him at his own valuation because he made them do it and, with this much achieved, the rest was simple. Tunney, as the heavyweight champion of the world was a real personality.

And Dempsey? He was another rare personality, essentially different from the effete Tunney but, somehow, more compelling in spite of the fact that he didn't have Tunney's force of character. Dempsey represented an idea rather than a fact.

The idea had to do, on one hand, with the open road and romance, come to flower. On the other, it expressed itself in the universal obeisance to the man-killer, the puncher who hit them once and left them writhing at his feet. Dempsey made a business of doing the thing that every man does in his dreams. Under these circumstances, he could have been a leper and still retained the fixed attention of his public. A man like that is irresistible.

At first, of course, he was impelling as a character without being popular. Tunney changed all that. It was the only thing this young man ever did for Dempsey.

Public Reserves

He changed it by whipping Dempsey that rainy night in Philadelphia, the public reacting to this circumstance by taking the loser to its heart. Just why it did so, nobody can plausibly say. It is sufficient that it did make a hero out of Dempsey, where before he merely had been an object of respectful awe. The second Tunney-Dempsey fight and the $2,600,000 gate at Chicago was the result.

Tunney always has maintained that he had something to do with the amassing of that staggering sum of money. He is right. For, indirectly and purely from a negative angle, Tunney was important, too. He had become important as a man Dempsey couldn't beat.

However, Tunney got ambition and Dempsey got smart, and, with their departure into the silence, boxing has reverted to what it was before romance and adventure entered its life—an unedifying, none too ethical enterprise that is liable to bore you silly at least one evening out of the average three.

CHARITY SURVEY

LAMESA, Texas, Dec. 10.—A survey of Lamesa for people who are poor and needy is being conducted by the Mutual Aid association here. Churches in Lamesa are cooperating in the survey with committees designated to work in certain sections.

SPORT Loose Ends

By W. G. CHAMBLESS

This race for the state high school football championship will get into the home stretch Saturday when four teams, Waco vs. Breckenridge and Denton vs. Port Arthur tangle in the semi-finals of Texas interscholastic football competition. On the following week-end the winners in the semi-finals will meet in the finals to settle the question of the state championship.

The game Saturday at Breckenridge between the Tigers and the Buckaroos is commanding the major share of the interest of fandom. Both elevens have that rather mysterious something called "color" and their meeting should provide the fans some of the choicest football thrills of the year. The wiry Buckaroos are nothing if they're not a rough, tough, scrapping collection of football players. They distinguished themselves in their 13-0 victory over the Amarillo Sandies principally by their fighting spirit. The team is also a fairly well trained outfit, coached this year by the able P. E. Shotwell. There are several outstanding players on the team, Boyce Magness, for example, being probably the best of the lot. D. Graham makes a good running mate with Magness. Wohlford, tackle, and G. Carey are the bulwarks of a line so strong that the Amarillo backs could not pierce it. In fact the unyielding stamina of the Buckaroo forward wall is probably the team's best asset.

Any Waco team always attracts a wide interest and following. The Tigers are the perennial finalist in the state high school fight. This year they are not as strong as they have been in other years but the fact that they are Waco and are coached by Paul Tyson makes them a big drawing card. Waco has been set up as the underdogs against the Buckaroos but are rated a sporting chance to win. The Tigers have a strong defensive team but are a trifle weak on tackle plays and a consistent running attack. And these are just the weapons that are needed to whip the Buckaroos. On the other hand the Tigers have what is called a smart team. No team tutored by the wily Tyson has proved anything but a tricky, dangerous eleven on the alert to take advantage of the breaks of the game and turn them into good account. It is just this thing about the Tigers that makes them never fail to pack 'em in. Jim Phipps, fullback, is the Tigers' best ball lugger with Seley, Coleman and Krizan assisting him.

The rival coaches of the Buckaroos and the Tigers is another reason for the more than usual interest attaching to the game Saturday. Coach Paul Tyson and P. E. Shotwell are two of the best-known mentors in the state. Both have led their teams to the finals of the state grid championship more than once and they are something like friendly enemies. In 1922 Shotwell coached the Abilene Eagles and saw his team lose the state championship against the Tyson-coached Tigers by a close 13-10 count. The next year Shotwell took his team to Fair Park stadium in Dallas and beat Tyson's Tigers by 3 to 0.

HEREFORD GETS SET FOR OLNEY

Entire Citizenship Is Behind Team

Special to The Record News

HEREFORD, Texas, Dec. 10.—Business in Hereford during the coming week will remain at a standstill. All this is occasioned by the approaching four-district championship football game which will be played on the local gridiron next Friday at 3 p. m. between the Hereford Whitefaces, winners of championship honors in districts one and two, and the heavy hitting Olney team, who were victorious in capturing a similar title in districts three and four.

Loyalty of Citizens

The Hereford citizenship has loyally supported its two-year winners in practically every tilt, yet the former efforts pall into insignificance when compared to the arrangements being made to handle the several thousand eager fans which will attend this important game. Never before his class B football honors been carried so far in this part of the state, and the winner of this game can unquestionably lay claim to the championship of virtually the whole of West Texas.

Reports emanating from Olney indicate that the Whitefaces will have their hands full every minute of the one-hour affair, and Coach McCollum is using every hour instilling into his men the importance of putting forth everything in the coming conflict.

Team in Good Shape

Hereford players came out of the Lamesa game Saturday in good condition, and reports from Olney are to the effect that the team there is in unusually good condition. Each of the competing teams are two successive year winners of district honors, and a comparative strength in the kind of football played down state and in the Panhandle, should be solved in the meeting of these two champion teams. That Olney has heard of the prowess of Hereford's backfield star, Babe Russell, and his feat in winning the hundred yards at Austin, is a well-known fact here, and no doubt Coach McCollum is planning to give the Olney boys the surprise of their lives.

Olney Special

A special train from Olney, which is being planned, will culminate the festivities which will prevail all this week in anticipation of the game, and Hereford's reputation in welcoming her visitors assures the Young county delegation a warm welcome. Local committees of ardent fans are handling every detail of making the large crowd comfortable, and the large guarantee which was given the Olney team has already been underwritten by interested citizens. Reports have it that Olney will send some fans to the game via airplane, which was done by several Hereford citizens in viewing the Lamesa game. Large delegations are looked for from practically every Panhandle town, as well as Wichita Falls and many of the Fort Worth and Denver towns and cities.

Iowa Park Basket Ball Team Plays on Friday

Special to The Record News.

IOWA PARK, Texas, Dec. 10.—The Iowa Park Hawks play their first basket ball game of the season on their home court Friday night. Although practice has been in progress only a week the boys show that they have had much strenuous work the past few days.

This pre-season game promises to be a good one, and the school promises much loyal support, both to the boys and the volley ball girls, who are scheduled to play two games with their most outstanding foes of '28 and contenders for the championship of the present season. A theater party was enjoyed by the members of the Iowa Park football and volley ball teams given by Mr. and Mrs. George Belcher, proprietors and owners of the Pick Wick theater, and one of the ardent supporters of the home team, Monday night. Mr. Belcher entertained with one of the biggest productions of the year, and a show that has been shown very few times. The "Thirteenth Hour" was the name of the show which was enjoyed by about 40 members of the athletic association.

A Further Study of Deafness
(Second Article of Series)

The acuteness of hearing is generally stronger in youth. A child will hear a pin drop when an older person will miss the sound. Too much coffee, tea, quinine or alcohol is thought to lessen the acuteness of hearing.

The reason we do not hear when we are swallowing or yawning is that the eustachian tube which comes from the mouth to the middle ear is temporarily blocked during the yawn or the swallow. Because of this tube, we have the rule to open the mouth when blowing the nose hard, as blowing the nose against the mouth closed may alter the pressure of the eustachian tube and cause a temporary deafness.

Very loud or grating noises are hazards to hearing. Soldiers and sailors exposed to the noise of artillery maneuvers may be affected frequently, or those who work in boiler factories, or steel riveters of buildings who often find that the sense of hearing is lessened as the days go by. When there is a sudden loud noise such as a shot or dynamite going off close to the ear the ear-drum may be punctured, especially if the mouth is closed at the time of the explosion. When the noise is not so violent but more continuous, so that the sense of hearing becomes fatigued, that kind of deafness may result known as the "boiler-makers deafness."

The symptoms of approaching deafness are, first, a gradual loss of ability to hear fine sounds; second, ringing in the ears; third, dizziness. Contrary to popular opinion, swimming does not harm the ear by letting water get into it if the eardrum is still whole. If the drum is ruptured there is some danger, as water may enter the middle ear and cause infection.

In taking care of your ears, the old-fashioned rule is a good one—to never stick anything into the ear smaller than the elbow. Many people destroy their ear drums or cause an infection by attempting to clear out the ear-wax with such objects as tooth-picks and hairpins.

A common cause of ordinary deafness is the accumulation of hardened ear-wax against the ear drum, but the wisest plan for one so affected is to leave the ear strictly alone and consult a physician who can syringe the wax out without endangering the ear drum.

Besides being the means of hearing, the ear has several other important posts in the body. It is also your balancer or your means of recognizing if you are in a state of equilibrium. It is the inner ear that lets you know whether you are standing on your head, turning around, or lying on your side.

Deafened people do not do so well in high diving into water or those possessing the normal hearing sense. This is because their balancing canals are also likely to be affected, and once under water they may not know which is the way to the top. They do have an advantage over most of us in that it is very difficult for them to feel dizzy or seasick. In seasickness it is thought that the equilibrium finders of the inner ear become tired out in trying to send messages while the body is subject to the sudden and perpetual symptoms due to the veers of the boat. Since deafened people do not have such a sensitive equilibrium, they do not became fatigued as readily, and do not have to have two or three days for their "sea legs" to arrive.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Bright's Disease

Question—E. J. P. asks: "Is Bright's disease fatal, or do people with it live as long as the average person? What are the symptoms?"

Answer—Many people who discover they have Bright's Disease adopt better habits of living to cure it or, in any case, often live a good many years after this disease is discovered. Incipient Bright's Disease is very difficult to diagnose and almost impossible for the patient to ever diagnose. It requires a very complete physical examination, including an examination of the blood pressure, urinalysis, etc.

Lime

Question—H. F. M. asks: "What foods contain lime, and of what use is lime in the human body?"

Answer—Lime is one of the most valuable minerals in the body and goes to make up a large part of the bony structure. All vegetables contain some lime, the non-starchy vegetables being particularly rich in this element.

Dirt-Eating

Question—Mother writes: "I have a child two years old who eats clay or other dirt at every opportunity. What makes a child do this, and how may I stop him?"

Answer—This dirt-eating practice is probably only a habit which the child gets into because he is not kept sufficiently interested in healthful playing. Some claim that it is because the child craves certain foods containing minerals, and not getting enough of these foods gives him the instinctive desire to eat dirt. My observation is that this is not true, but that the dirt-eating habit or the habit of putting objects into the mouth is simply a bad habit of a poorly trained child.

HOLIDAY FRUIT SALES HEAVY

Big Shipments Received by Dealers Here

Fruit for stockings, fruit for salads, fruit for fruit baskets and fruit cake—all kinds of fruit for the enormous demands occasioned annually by the coming Christmas is arriving daily in Wichita Falls in great quantities, according to a survey of local produce houses Tuesday afternoon.

Apples appeared to be in the lead, numerically, with several carloads of Delicious brand already on hand in transit. Winesaps and Jonathans are running a close second in popularity. Oranges follow apples in point of numbers, and are being received in large shipments from California and Florida. Grapes, bananas, lemons and vast amounts of mixed nuts also are included in Christmas stores which are being distributed almost as rapidly as they arrive.

Estimates given Tuesday by local produce dealers indicated that the shipment of turkeys from this point will supply practically the same number of birds for the Christmas trade as were provided at Thanksgiving time. Buying of turkeys for freight shipment to the East will discontinue about noon Thursday, it was said, in order to allow time for dressing and packing before Friday, which is the last shipping day.

Approximately 17 carloads of dressed turkeys will be shipped by Armour creameries from the local plant, it was said, this stock including birds from the South Plains and other contributing points. Grandfield and Graham plants of the same concern make direct pack and shipment from their respective territories. Six cars will represent the volume of Christmas turkeys packed and shipped by the People's Produce company, it was stated. This firm shipped seven cars to the Thanksgiving market.

Wichita county's total cotton ginnings crept up to 21,170 bales Tuesday with 169 more reported from the various ginning centers. Burkburnett passed the 6,000 mark Tuesday, turning out 54 to make a total of 6021 bales.

NEW YORK COTTON

NEW YORK, Dec. 10. (AP)—Cotton more than recovered its losses of yesterday during today's trading. Offerings were light and a slight early decline was followed by advances on trade buying and covering. January sold up from 17.03 to 17.28 or 19 points net higher and closed at 17.23 with the general market closing steady at net advances of 13 to 19 points.

The opening was steady at a decline of 4 points to an advance of 1 point and the active positions sold about 3 to 8 points net lower during the early trading under December liquidation promoted by the circulation of notices estimated at about 5,000 bales. After the early offerings had been absorbed, the market turned firmer. The best prices of the day were reached in the late trading when covering was more active with December selling up from the early low level of 16.94 to 17.17 while March advanced from 17.32 to 17.59 and May from 17.59 to 17.84. Closing quotations were a few points off from the best under realizing.

The buying was attributed largely to covering by shorts, but there was some trade buying.

Liverpool cables reported local liquidation and increased hedging in that market and said that cloth buyers were cautious owing to expectations of lower prices. Port receipts today 83,907. U. S. port stocks 2,610,321. Exports 28,018, making 3,643,804 so far this season.

NEW ORLEANS COTTON

NEW ORLEANS, Dec. 10. (AP)—Reports that the federal farm board would increase the basis of loans to farmers was reflected in a late advance in cotton today after values had fluctuated widely without definite trend most of the session. January contracts which had dropped to 16.97 traded up to 17.28 on the late bulge and closed at 17.18, or 16 points net higher. The general market closed steady at a net advance of 15 to 18 points.

The market opened irregular on relatively unchanged Liverpool cables. Initial transactions showed no change to 3 points decline and the market continued to recede under selling promoted by textile statistics issued after the close yesterday. January traded down to 16.97, March 17.23 and May 17.48, or 5 to 6 points below yesterday's close.

Trade buying developed later as well as short covering. The technical position of the market was considered strengthened and under pressure of the demand March rallied to 17.41 with active positions 17 to 18 points above the lows.

In the late trading the market bulged sharply on the farm loan report. January trading to 17.24 and March to 17.52, or 17 to 19 points above the lows. Realizing cut final prices 6 to 8 points.

Receipts 78,234; for week 163,459; for year 6,126,467; last year 6,353,034. Exports 28,018; for week 97,967; for year 3,552,920; last year, 3,945,813. Stocks 2,641,955; last year 2,420,563. Short Covering Brings Recovery In Late Hours of Irregular Market

By BROADAN WALL

NEW YORK, Dec. 10. (US)—Short covering influenced recovery toward the close of a quieter but generally irregular market today. Radio was the outstanding feature in the active stocks in the final flurry jumping 5⅞ as a result of outlining of possible expansion plans before the senate committee. Steel finished 1½ higher, Can gained 1¾, General Electric 8¼, Westinghouse 3½, Anaconda 2½, Simmons 3, Western Union 7¾, Columbia Graphaphone 2⅜, United Aircraft 2⅝ and Columbia Carbon 5 points. New York Central gained a point in a firmer rail department while Standard Oil and other petroleum shares dropped about a point on the average. Turnover fell off to 3,600,000 shares. Call money remained at 4½ per cent throughout.

Bears are trying to make ammunition of the tightening in time money. Reports spread around endeavor to raise the opinion that it indicates a less favorable credit situation than generally realized. The fact is that the slight advance in time money rates is more bullish than bearish. It results from a better retail trade demand than was expected only a few weeks ago. If retail or so-called holiday trade increases over the next few weeks it would be no surprise if even further tightening in money resulted. It will be a temporary condition, however, that will be relieved immediately after the huge Jan. 1 interest and dividend payments are made. In as much as it reflects improved sentiment on the part of the public buyer it gives some reason for hope that Christmas buying will hold up to the level of previous years. If so it may give sufficient stimulus to offset part of the damage done to business confidence by the stock market cataclysm.

There has been some quiet buying of the Copper shares influenced by report from the trade that indicates some big orders for the metal must be placed soon. One Utility organization in particular is said to have been pursuing a hand to mouth policy in buying the red metal and now is in a position where it really should buy close to 100,000,000 pounds. When such organizations purchase they usually get some concession from the quoted market price. This company with others has held off from placing orders hoping for break in the market quotation but leading producers show no sign of weakening at the minute.

Westinghouse and Western Union were mentioned again as planning splitups but the Western Union people maintained they would take no such action for quite a while. Some buying of National Cash Register resulted from announcement that dividend increase was planned. Continued quiet absorption of Eastman Kodak is evidenced. Those who bought the stock a few months ago in expectation of special developments never had a chance to unload. Plans and dreams of the radio bulls were further evidenced in statement of Mr. Young that International Telephone would take over communications services of radio "if laws permit." There is considerable doubt that laws will permit.

There was some disappointment that the finance committee of the Steel corporation did only "routine business" at meeting today. "Routine business" for that committee can mean anything. It should be remembered that the policy of the triumvirate of management of the corporation is to keep it in such position as to be "a stabilizing influence to the community." Under such policy there is nothing to stop the finance committee nor the directors from meeting at any time and deciding on such action. That decision was not reached now would indicate that those controlling Steel do not believe it necessary.

BOSTON WOOL MARKET

BOSTON, Dec. 10. (AP)—Some houses are receiving a number of inquiries for wool, but the demand does not appear urgent. Low bids are not generally being accepted. Buyers are asking for January dating on their purchases in order to avoid increasing the volume of raw material on inventory at the end of the year.

TEXAS CASH PRICES

FORT WORTH, Dec. 10. (AP)—Wheat showed a little strength on the cash grain market today, and prices closed ½c higher on the day with good demand for ordinary hard and protein wheat fairly well taken. Other grains showed little change.

Estimated receipts for the day: Wheat 3 cars; corn 8; oats 4; barley 1; sorghums 13; cane seed 1; hay 6; snapped corn 3.

Bids and offers, basis carlots delivered, freight paid to Texas common points:

Wheat—No. 1 ordinary hard milling $1.31@1.32. No. 1 hard 13 per cent protein $1.33@1.34; 14 per cent $1.37@1.38; 15 per cent $1.41@1.42; 16 per cent $1.45@1.46.

Corn—No. 2 mixed $1.04@1.05; No. 2 white $1.07@1.08; No. 2 yellow $1.06@1.07.

Oats—No. 2 red oats 59@60c; No. 3 white delivered Texas group one points 55½@56c.

Barley—No. 2 barley nominal, 77@78c.

Sorghums—No. 2 milo per hundred pounds $1.58@1.60; No. 2 kaffir $1.35@1.36.

CHICAGO, Dec. 10. (AP)—Despite sharp setbacks in prices at times today, the wheat market here averaged higher. Domestic hard winter wheat brought the topmost premium which exporters have paid yet this season, as compared with future deliveries.

Chicago closing prices on wheat were ¼@⅜c per bushel above yesterday's finish. Corn closed ⅛c off to 1c up, oats ¼@⅜c advanced, and provisions unchanged to a setback of 12c.

Buying power in the Chicago wheat market today was at its best during the final hour, but top prices did not hold in the face of enlarged speculative selling.

Authoritative reports today from European sources were to the effect that although the amount of wheat afloat for transatlantic countries is 30,000,000 bushels less than the total of a year ago, European importers as a rule are satisfied to allow surplus wheat to remain in exporting countries for the present. Argentine dispatches today told of stormy weather and of considerable fresh damage to crops.

Anxiety on the part of traders who are short of corn needed to fill December contracts here did much to give the corn market a strong undertone today. Oats offerings were light and cash demand good.

Provisions sagged on account of liquidating sales of the December delivery of lard and because of some hedging in the January delivery.

Former U. S. Prisoner Jailed by Officers Here

Dewey Ross, recently released from his third term in the United States penitentiary, was re-arrested Tuesday afternoon by Charlie Gant and Warren Belcher, deputy sheriffs, and turned over to federal authorities on new charges of violating the anti-narcotic laws.

Fourteen tubes of morphine and a small quantity of cocaine were seized, the officers declared. The prisoner's record here shows two jail breaks, the last one upon the occasion of Tom Shook's spectacular break for freedom.

LOWDEN TELLS FARMER'S ILLS

Former Governor Hints Fee Plan Still Possible

CHICAGO, Dec. 10. (INS)—"Agriculture—the industry that feeds the nation—is broke."

Painting a gloomy picture of present-day conditions, Frank O. Lowden, former governor of Illinois, today before 5,000 members of the American Farm Bureau Federation, hinted that the equalization fee over which there has been such congressional strife, may yet be invoked.

While he made no direct reference to the fee, the former governor said:

"If it should be found later that it is necessary to adopt some plan by which non-member producers of any community may be made to share equitably with members the expenses of the cooperative organization, then we shall keep striving until we secure the adoption of such a plan."

Lowden made a strong plea to "lift the unjust burden from the farmers' shoulders," criticizing the general property tax.

"There is no way of concealing the fact that the industry which feeds the nation and leads all others in capital invested and in value of product—is broke," Lowden said. "And it has been broke every year since the war.

"Within the last few weeks, however, statements have been made by responsible persons to lead the public to think that the troubles of the farmer are largely a thing of the past. If there is any substantial change for the better in the general farm situation since last year, it has escaped my notice.

"In my opinion it is very unfortunate for this opinion to go abroad. We have fought vigorously for the past eight years to secure recognition of the fact that agriculture is in a serious plight."

Lowden described efforts of the federal farm board to bring about cooperative marketing and raised the question of what would be done with the farmer who refused to join the cooperative group. It was then he hinted about the equalization fee.

L. N. Duncan, director of the farm bureau extension for the state of Alabama, and George L. Cooley of Dover Township, Ohio, were awarded distinguished service medals by the federation.

Old Claim Against Cuba Is Revived

WASHINGTON, Dec. 10. (AP)—The claims of Joseph Barlow against the Cuban government, heard for years in official circles in Washington and Havana, were mentioned again today before the senate lobby committee as it resumed hearings after a recess.

H. C. Lakin, president of the Cuba company of New York, sugar importers, said he had recently returned from Cuba where he had inquired into the claims. Lakin testified he was accompanied by John H. Carroll, Washington attorney, Edwin P. Shattuck of the United States Sugar association and Hicklin Yates, until recently an employe of the lobby committee.

Carroll, in previous testimony before the lobby committee, said he had been employed by the Cuba company to work toward a better understanding between the United States and Cuba. He said claims by Barlow against the Cuban government and other charges had led to the fear on the part of sugar interests that there might be intervention in Cuba or disturbances that would result in losses to them.

Yates was employed by Carroll, Lakin testified, to investigate the title to Havana property claimed by Barlow. Chairman Caraway said Yates had left the committee without notice.

Lakin testified he had a brief conference with President Machado of Cuba but the tariff was not discussed.

COURT ORDER FREES STOUT

Other Theft Cases Dropped By State

Ladonia Stout was acquitted upon the instruction of the court and similar indictments against three other defendants were dismissed at the instance of the district attorney Tuesday morning after the state closed its case charging Stout with the theft of more than a ton of copper wire.

Judge Allan D. Montgomery instructed a verdict of not guilty on the grounds that the testimony of Ernest Bacon, an accomplice, was uncorroborated. Bacon, in a second statement which contradicted his first testimony, had said that both himself and Stout were involved in the crime. In announcing his instruction to the jury, Judge Montgomery praised the work of Sam Spence, district attorney, and of George W. Anderson and Mike Anglin, assistants, in the conduct of the case.

"I do not pass upon the innocence or guilt of any defendant when I follow the law in ruling upon this technical situation," the judge declared.

Mr. Spence moved at once to dismiss similar charges against D. M. and Mozell Barker and against Bacon, all arrested in connection with the same offense.

The verdict followed a second surprise in the testimony of Bacon, who Monday afternoon repudiated an earlier confession and assumed all blame for the theft. Tuesday morning, at his own request, Bacon came back to the stand and denied all the testimony he had given the afternoon before. The second statement, given Tuesday morning, repeated the details of the written confession and involved Stout.

Bacon said he had made the first statement Monday afternoon out of fear of Stout and because his lawyer had promised him a suspended sentence if he would "take the fall" for the offense. Stout was represented by E. F. Fruechte.

Abilene Decorator Willing to Make Affidavit, He Says

Took Scores of Treatments Without Result—Gained 14 Pounds On Orgatone

"Yes, sir, I would go before a notary any time and testify to the wonderful benefits I have received from Orgatone," said W. W. Woods, well known decorator who resides at 849 Cypress street, Abilene, Texas, a few days ago.

"My health has been badly broken for the past six years," Mr. Woods continued, "and I have suffered from some ailment or other all the time. I had headaches continually, my kidneys were out of order, my back hurt and I was nervous, weak and dizzy. I was so dizzy at times I could hardly walk straight and my back and head would nearly kill me. My stomach was in such an awful condition I would vomit up my food and was hardly able to retain enough on my stomach to barely keep me alive. My stomach was in such a bad condition that I was told I would never get over it."

"I reckon I took at least 50 different kinds of medicines trying to get relief but nothing did me any good and no one can realize what terrible feelings I had unless they had the same troubles. Several of my friends recommended Orgatone to me so highly that I decided to try it and I am certainly very grateful for the results, for I'm now feeling fine. I have gained around 14 pounds and am enjoying about as good health as anybody. My suffering is gone, my appetite is splendid and my stomach troubles seem to be a thing of the past. Things are quite different with me now and I feel that I wouldn't be doing the right thing not to tell others about the medicine I have reaped so much benefit from."

4,000 Fir Trees Arrive Here in One Shipment

Ohio avenue in the 1000 block Tuesday afternoon presented the appearance of a small forest from the Pacific coast foothills having moved into Wichita Falls by Mac-Duffian magic.

Four thousand small Washington fir trees, ranging from two to 18 feet in height, cut from the slopes of the Rocky mountains near Yakima, Wash., arrived in this city Tuesday morning, and were unloaded during the afternoon at the Texas Produce company's warehouse at 1009-11 Ohio. Standing erect in formation, the baby firs effected a complete transformation of the landscape on that part of the street.

Before the afternoon was over hundreds of the new arrivals were being moved out to this city and surrounding territory for use as Christmas trees two weeks hence.

WICHITA CLUB TO HEAR WARD

Veteran of Stage to Speak At 8 o'Clock

Members of the Wichita club and their guests will be privileged on Thursday night, Dec. 12, at 8 o'clock, to hear Frederick Ward, veteran of more than 50 years on the English and American stage, in his lecture, "Sixty Years Before the Footlights."

Mr. Ward's lecture consists chiefly of reminiscent accounts of his associations with great actors of the past 60 years, including such celebrites as Charlotte Cushman; Adelaide Neilson, Edwin Booth, Henry Irving, Lawrence Barrett and several others.

The "grand old man of the footlights," as he is styled by the members of his profession, is an authority on Shakespeare, and is particularly fond of that famous playwright's work. Discussion of Shakesperean actors, in anecdotal form, will comprise one of the features of his address.

No charge will be made for Mr. Ward's lecture, which will be given in the Wichita club, it was announced by Charles W. Nolen, chairman of the entertainment committee.

$27,500 Auto Damage Suit Goes to Trial

Trial of a $27,500 suit, in which Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Hudson seek to recover damages from the Murray company of Dallas, and the Magnolia Petroleum company for alleged injuries to their eight-year-old son in an automobile accident last April, was begun before a jury in the 89th district court Tuesday afternoon.

The petition filed by the parents asserts that the little boy was given a ride in a Magnolia truck on his way home from school along the Electra road last April. As he alighted from the truck and started across the road to his home, he was struck by an automobile owned by the Murray company, the papers assert.

SPENCE DELAYS HOTEL WRIT

New Management Promised In Padlock Plea

Upon the promise that the present management of the Moro hotel at 501-503 Eighth street, will be ousted within 24 hours, Sam Spence, district attorney, agreed Tuesday to a temporary and provisional continuance of padlocking proceedings filed Monday and set for hearing Tuesday.

Unless definite evidences of an immediate cleanup can be seen at noon Wednesday, the continued injunction application with its plea that the establishment must be closed for a year, will be brought up for a hearing before Judge Allan D. Montgomery in the 89th district court Wednesday afternoon, Mr. Spence declared.

The petition filed Monday also asked an order restraining alleged gambling, vice, and liquor selling within the hotel.

State Asks Rehearing On Liquor Reversal

Sam Spence, district attorney, announced Tuesday that the state will file a motion for a re-hearing in the case of Frank Reynolds, charged with transportation of whisky, who was granted a new trial by the court of criminal appeals at Austin last Wednesday. Reynolds was found guilty and sentenced to two years in the penitentiary in his original trial here. The reversal of the higher courts was based upon the failure of the trial judge to charge the jury on the question of a suspended sentence, according to a copy of the opinion in the hands of the district attorney.
