Seven world leaders tackle economic ills

Thatcher shares interest concerns

By SALLY JACOBSEN

LONDON — Leaders of seven major industrialized democracies tackled their economic problems at the summit today, with British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher expressing worry that high interest rates might undermine the economic rebound and worsen the debt burden of poorer nations.

"In the world outside our own countries, the level of international debt is a serious and pressing problem," Mrs. Thatcher told her colleagues at the first formal session of the 10th annual economic summit.

"There are no easy or painless solutions" to the these difficulties, said Mrs. Thatcher. But she added that the summit's "first message" must be that the current strategy of ensuring economic expansion without inflation "is the right one — and we intend to stick to it."

President Reagan and the other chiefs of state turned to economic issues at their first formal summit session at Lancaster House after discussions Thursday night about such pressing political concerns as terrorism, arms control and the deep chill in East-West relations.

It appeared likely that the seven leaders would endorse some form of political statement — possibly as early as today — apart from the final economic communique expected at the end of the summit on Saturday.

Although Mrs. Thatcher expressed confidence that the industrial allies of the West and Japan were on the right policy track, she said, "There is still much to be done."

She voiced concern about high unemployment levels and high interest rates "which may put recovery at risk in our own economies and add to the problems of the debtor countries."

Mrs. Thatcher, a close ally of Reagan's, did not single out the United States on the matter of interest rates, but some leaders — notably West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl — have done so. Most foreign officials and private economists say the enormous budget deficits in the United States exert upward pressure on interest rates, but the Reagan administration denies there is any direct link.

Mrs. Thatcher devoted much of her opening remarks to the problems of Third World countries which owe $800 billion in foreign loans. High interest rates are complicating these countries' efforts to repay their debts.

The British prime minister proposed encouraging commercial banks and international financial institutions to reschedule Third World debt payments over a longer period. The debtor nations "can ease their own problems" by undertaking economic reforms, he said.

White optimistic on passage of education reforms

By GARY OTT
City Editor

AUSTIN — Gov. Mark White Thursday expressed "increased optimism" that his education reform package will be approved by the Texas Legislature during the current special session.

Speaking to a group of newspaper editors in Austin, White said there was "a better than 50-50 chance these proposals will pass" during the 30-day special session which began Monday. The governor indicated his program had gained support since the start of the session. "In the past couple of days I've had calls from both liberals and conservatives telling me they are with us," he said, adding that House Speaker Gib Lewis and Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby were also campaigning for the package.

In addition to education reform, White is seeking tax increases to finance the program and a hike in the state motor fuels tax of five cents per gallon to improve Texas highways. All three elements are part of his overall package.

Other proposals being considered to finance education reform include:

— A 1 percent hike in both the general sales tax and the motor vehicle sales and rental tax;

— A 20 percent increase in taxes on liquor, beer, wine and mixed drinks;

— An increase of five cents per pack of cigarettes, with one cent going to cancer research.

"I think these requests are fair and will not harm any Texas citizen." For example, he said if the liquor tax were passed, it would mean a person would pay only 1½ cents more for a six-pack of beer. "If a person can't afford that, then he drinks too much," he said.

White believes his revenue proposal, if passed in full, would generate an estimated $1.3 billion in fiscal year 1985. "My revenue package will enable us to adequately fund my objectives for education and highways while generating just under $1 billion in additional funds to address the projected budgetary shortfall anticipated in the 1986-87 biennium."

He said if his revenue package is approved, no tax increase should be needed during next year's regular session.

Major elements of the education reform package (most of which were recommended by the governor's Select Committee on Public Education, headed by Dallas businessman H. Ross Perot) are:

Midlanders divided on need for increase, what should be taxed

By RHONDA RIGENHAGEN
Staff Writer

Midlanders seem to be evenly split over the issue of a tax increase to finance educational reforms and highway improvements.

Thursday, as state legislators sat in special session to consider the matter, half the 50 Midlanders polled at random outside the main post office said they would not support any tax increase. The other half would approve raising taxes "if it's needed," but were divided as to whether additional revenues should come from sales, gasoline or other taxes.

"From the oil and gas industry, no. From liquor and that, fine. Sock it to them," Helen Krug said.

"If that's what it takes to increase the standards, let's do it," Cliff Chalmers concurred, calling a sales tax increase "fair."

"I don't ever favor a tax increase," Tommy Withrow, 3329 W. Wadley, declared. "They got plenty of money."

"A tax increase right now of any kind I wouldn't support," Rex Worrell agreed.

"I think it's necessary, but I don't particularly like it," County Commissioner Durward Wright said. "I suppose the least objectionable would be a gasoline tax, although it's not very palatable.".

"I don't support a tax increase," Lois Anderson of rural Midland stated. "I think they need to get some people in there who can do their job with less pay, like the rest of us are. Especially the administration."

"If they will improve the highways, I guess I could live with a gas increase," Carolyn Garder said.

But Rod Roberts disagreed. "I would rather see exactly how we spend our money right now. I think there's a lot of waste in administration right now, and I don't think we ought to take up the slack for bad management."

Sikhs in several nations protest assault on Golden Temple

The Associated Press

Hundreds of Sikhs demonstrated in Hong Kong, Thailand, Britain and Canada against the Indian army's assault on the most sacred Sikh shrine — the Golden Temple in the Sikh holy city of Amritsar in India.

In Birmingham, England, police reported attempted firebombings at two Indian businesses.

Sikhs in the United States planned to march to the Indian Embassy in Washington this afternoon to protest the Wednesday storming of the shrine.

Sikh militant leader Jarnail Singh Bhindranwale and 250 of his extremist followers were killed by Indian army troops in the assault, along with at least 59 soldiers. The attack followed weeks of terrorist attacks by Sikhs agitating for political, economic and religious concessions from India's government.

About 300 chanting Sikhs demonstrated today in front of the Indian Commission in Hong Kong. Seventeen Sikhs were allowed to enter the commission office to present a letter to a commission official.

A Sikh spokesman said the letter demanded an independent judicial investigation into the assault, an apology from Prime Minister Indira Gandhi and the return of books seized in the temple.

Indian officials in Hong Kong declined to comment on the protest.

In Bangkok, almost 300 Sikhs tore up Indian flags and pictures of Mrs. Gandhi outside the Indian Embassy today.

Fifteen demonstrators met with Shyamala B. Cowsik, embassy counsellor, and gave her a protest note which she said would be relayed to New Delhi, said Sarjit Singh Kawal, president of the central organization of the Sikhs in Thailand.

Posters on the embassy gate and wall called India "the great bloodsucker" and said "cold-blooded murder of the Sikhs will result in the death of India."

"The Indian government has signed their own death warrant," declared Amolak Singh Gyani, a militant leader of the 300,000-member Sikh community in Britain, India's former colonial ruler.

Scotland Yard said two people were arrested during a Sikh demonstration Thursday near India House, the home of the Indian High Commission, or embassy, in London.

In Birmingham, England, unidentified assailants lobbed a gasoline bomb through the front window of the Hindustan Travel Service, and experts diffused three milk-bottle gasoline bombs in a branch of the Punjabi National Bank, police said. No casualties were reported.

Police said two people were arrested after protesters began throwing rocks at an Indian bank in Birmingham.

The London Times reported that more than 50,000 Sikhs planned to march Sunday to India House.

More than 100 Sikhs demonstrated peacefully Thursday in the southwest Scottish port city of Glasgow.

Crying "blood will be revenged with blood," hundreds of Sikhs demonstrated Thursday in Toronto and Ottawa.

About 150 angry Sikhs protested outside the Indian Embassy in Ottawa.

Dr. Bakhshish Samagh, secretary of the Federation of Sikh Societies of Canada who joined the Ottawa protest, said the storming of the Golden Temple was to Sikhs like an invasion of the Vatican would be to Catholics.

Eggs were thrown over the heads of police who formed a line behind steel barricades around the Indian Embassy building.

Texan floats to safety; Companion missing

The Associated Press

FREEPORT, Texas — A 26-year-old man who says he's not a good swimmer helped rescue two youths and then saved his own life by floating on his back in the Gulf of Mexico until a shrimp boat pulled him to safety.

Abel Garcia, of Freeport, was swept into the Gulf by currents after he formed part of a human chain on Monday that helped to rescue two youths from this beach at the the mouth of the Brazos River.

Another man who was in the human chain, John Wilson, 39, of Redland, also was washed into the Gulf. He has not been found.

Garcia, a chemical company technician, said he managed to float on his back for 40 minutes and credits that — along with some prayer — with saving his life.

"My neck is a little sore, but I think it's because my wife has been hugging me," said Garcia on Wednesday.

Minutes after arriving at the beach last Monday he heard a boy scream for help from the water, Garcia said. He and Wilson raced to the water, arriving first, and were at the front of a human chain formed by linking hands with three other men.

"The next thing I knew (Wilson) and I were holding hands by ourselves," said Garcia. "Then I yelled for help, but our feet couldn't touch the bottom and there wasn't much they could do."

He said he heard someone, in a shout from the beach, urge him to float.

"I'm not a good swimmer, so I did what they said," said Garcia. "I got on my back and started floating and paddling."

Forty minutes later, a shrimp boat came by. Garcia said he was told to keep floating, that the boat would grab Wilson first. But the vessel returned within minutes after the crew failed to find Wilson.

The area where the incident occurred is known to have powerful, unpredictable currents and a sign is posted warning swimmers of the danger.

Two lawmakers betting on lottery

The Associated Press

AUSTIN — Two lawmakers say a state lottery game could produce the right numbers to fund teacher pay raises, but other legislators and Gov. Mark White say the proposal faces long odds.

"I don't think the people of the state would support it," White said Thursday. "The prospect being a big winner in most of those lotteries is something like the prospects of getting struck by lightning seven times in a row."

White is looking for money for teacher pay hikes and other education reforms.

Houston Reps. Ron Wilson and Larry Evans told the House Ways and Means Committee on Thursday that a lottery could bring in much-needed millions through a "voluntary" tax.

Under the proposal — which would require voter approval of a constitutional amendment — the state would run a lottery that would produce revenue for teacher pay and, possibly, other items. Wilson predicted it could mean over $100 million a year for the state.

"We've just about hit that mode where it seems attractive. In other words, we need money," he said.

About 15 states have lotteries. For example, Ohio raised $150.6 million in 1982 through its lottery, which has resulted in multimillion dollar prizes for purchasers of $1 tickets in some games.

Evans said a lottery is "probably the best form of taxation in that it is voluntary." He added that "it does not unduly burden lower income people.

"I don't think anybody would sacrifice the needed items of life to buy a lottery ticket," he said.

But several committee members made it clear they don't want to take a chance on a lottery.

"I think it would be very unfortunate for the state to have to finance itself by encouraging people to lose their money on gambling," said Bruce Gibson, D-Cleburne, and committee vice chairman.

Gibson said he opposes the lottery because it is "a sleazy way to get the money, and it doesn't even give you as good odds as the underground network does."

Rep. Gary Thompson, D-Abilene, said he was "philosophically uncomfortable" with a lottery because it "creates an illusion" of a "painless" tax.

"It seems to me that taxes ought to hurt," he said, calling a lottery "a trip wire that leads into all sorts of other things. The end of the line I see is casino gambling."

Rep. Rollin Khoury, R-Waco, said a lottery could take money from the pockets of those who can afford it least. Evans replied, "You can't protect a fool from his own folly."

Phil Strickland of the Texas Baptist Christian Life Commission later said, "You don't have to exploit that folly ... or make it the basis for state income."

Rep. Stan Schlueter, D-Killeen, chairman of the tax-writing House Ways and Means Committee, neither endorsed nor opposed the lottery idea.

Whatever method the Legislature adopts for raising more money for schools will be unpopular with some lawmakers, he said, and the lottery may appear more attractive than some tax increase alternatives.

James Williamson expressed a similar opinion. "I'm for education, but for highways I think there could be improvements in management of roads. I think a lot of them are being mismanaged, such as our streets here in Midland."

William Watts, 3600 N. Midland Drive, had an original idea for increasing revenues without raising taxes. "I think they ought to increase the speed limit and let people pay for it through the extra gas they use."

"I wouldn't mind paying higher taxes if they would fix the roads," Carla Seidenberger, 4316 Brookdale, said. "But I don't like some of the (educational) reforms they're talking about."

"I would say it (an increase) would be okay. A small one," added Midland High School student Susan Bradley.

"It depends on what kind of reforms they want to make. If it's for teachers' salaries I would support it," Harry Morris said. "The only tax I would be in favor of would be an increase in sales tax."

"Yes, if it's not too much, I would be in favor of raising taxes for education. I think we really need that," agreed Mary Langley, who would favor an increase in "whatever will bring in the most money. We've got to pay for what we get.

"I think teachers need to be paid more," she added, noting her daughter-in-law is a teacher.

"I would support a tax increase," Annette Scott said. "Definitely a sin tax."

"I would for education, but that's all," Joe Nelson said firmly. He recommended a sales tax increase.

"No increase in sales," said one young woman. "I hear on the radio they're considering taxing some things they haven't before, and that sounds all right. There do need to be some reforms in education."

Six persons questioned had no opinion.

WHITE

— Increasing annual base salary for classroom teachers from $11,000 to $15,200, with significant across-the-board raises for all teachers;

— Establishing a statewide career ladder plan to reward and retain outstanding teachers;

— Reducing class sizes so teachers can give more specialized attention to students;

— Increasing equalization funding so poorer school districts "will have the resources to attract and retain the highest quality teachers available, and to ensure equal educational opportunities for all children." He acknowledged such a plan would decrease state funding to richer districts such as Midland;

— Testing teachers for competency, although the type of test to be used has not been determined. "Obviously, we would't give an art teacher a test on trigonometry. We just feel that a person teaching third-grade math should be able to do third-grade math;"

— Establishing a scholarship program and a loan program to attract "the best and brightest" high school students into teaching. He said currently those people are going into private industry because of higher salaries;

— Requiring seven hours of the school day be reserved for academic endeavors. Extracurricular activities would be scheduled after school and on weekends;

— Restructuring the State Board of Education to allow the governor to appoint and the Senate to confirm members. The 27-member board is now elected. White said he wanted a smaller board — no more than 12 members — and a system to ensure geographic and ethnic representation.

The governor acknowledged the Legislature might not approve the total package, but declined to list his top-priority items. He said he prefers to wait and see what he gets before passing judgment.

In an unrelated matter, White urged apparent Democratic presidential nominee Walter Mondale to choose U.S. Sen. Lloyd Bentsen as a running mate. Speculation has centered on Bentsen and White for that position, but most political insiders say Bentsen would be the strongest, especially in Texas where he is popular with both the Democratic establishment and the business community.

Party leaders say the nominee must carry Texas if he hopes to defeat President Reagan in November's general election.

SUMMIT

She also proposed that major industrial powers give international guarantees for private investment in the Third World, and help poorer countries find ways to conserve resources, boost food and energy production and slow population growth.

"That way I believe we can show that the problem is manageable," she said.

Motorcades brought presidents, prime ministers, foreign ministers and finance ministers to Lancaster House, a 19th century mansion in the heart of London, for the first formal summit session in a gilded room decorated in ornate style of Louis XV.

As sunshine broke through an early-morning fog, the leaders posed for pictures on the front steps and then moved to the music room. They sat around an oblong table with floral centerpiece in the mansion near Buckingham Palace where Queen Victoria once heard Chopin play the piano.

As photographers snapped away, Kohl lit a pipe, Reagan joked and Mrs. Thatcher shuffled through papers. They and each of the other leaders from France, Canada, Japan, Italy and the Common Market had one aide in the room. Interpreters sat in nearby glass booths.

Economic issues were to dominate the first meeting, but before the summit ends Saturday the leaders will decide whether to make a statement on troublesome political issues facing the democratic alliance, according to U.S. And other officials who briefed reporters late Thursday.

Mrs. Thatcher, host of the 10th annual gathering, has made it clear she would like a strong political statement to emerge from the summit in addition to an economic communique.

White House spokesman Larry Speakes said there appeared to be "general agreement" among the leaders to issue a statement on democratic values. "There's certainly enough of a consensus that we can assume there will be something."

But he said there was no decision yet on whether to include the more troublesome topics of East-West relations, arms control and terrorism.

A senior U.S. official, speaking anonymously, said that on arms control, the United States wants language stressing the willingness of the allies to negotiate with the Soviet Union and appealing to the Soviets to return to the nuclear arms negotiating table.

On East-West relations, the United States was seeking a reference to the "totalitarian nature of the Eastern bloc" because, the official said, "mentioning one but not mentioning the other would leave the statement flat."

Sources from the British delegation said officials had been instructed Thursday to work into the night to prepare a statement which would be presented today to the chiefs of state today.

If there was agreement on a draft text, it would probably be published Saturday when the summit ends.

A U.S. Official, speaking anonymously, said five possible topics could be included: arms control, the situation in the Persian Gulf, East-West relations, international terrorism, and relations between rich and poor nations.

Mrs. Thatcher was said to be seeking a tough stand on controlling state-sponsored terrorism. French officials, however, made it clear they would oppose any statement on terrorism that would "make international law."

But Michel Vauzelle, a spokesman for Prime Minister Francois Mitterrand, said France would not object to a statement reiterating democratic values.

Some officials here attributed interest in a political statement partly to the emotional ceremonies many of the leaders attended in France on Wednesday, the 40th anniversary of the D-Day landings in Normandy. The Allied invasion on June 6, 1944, marked the beginning of the end of the Nazi Reich.

"From time to time, it's worth reminding ourselves about the kind of society you live in," said a British official, who also spoke on condition he not be identified.

Canadian sources said Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau had offered his own version of a political statement on East-West relations. Trudeau has been waging a personal East-West peace initiative since October.

There also appeared to be interest, at least on the part of President Reagan, in having the allies renew their commitment to cooperate with each other if the Iran-Iraq war disrupts oil supplies.

Reagan told reporters: "We recognize that we can act better together if faced with such a crisis. I think we would all probably mutually share (oil). Other nations have reserves also."

Other foreign officials noted, however, that the industrialized nations have worked out a detailed arrangement for energy sharing through the International Energy Agency.

Speakes was questioned about Japanese reports that Reagan had told Japan's Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone that if oil prices were boosted at the time of emergency, "economic recovery would again be brought back to the situation of two years ago."

Speakes said that increases in oil prices over the past decade contributed to the economic downturn and that "we hope to guard against that."

Iraq claims supply of Soviet weapons

The Associated Press

The Soviet Union has supplied Iraq with sophisticated missiles capable of hitting Iran's main Persian Gulf oil terminal at Kharg Island and targets deep inside Iran, according to a foreign diplomat in Iraq.

The Baghdad-based diplomat said Iraq recently received shipments of Soviet-made AS-4, AS-5 and AS-6 guided missiles, along with shipments of modified surface-to-surface SS-12 missiles.

"The new AS missiles can easily score hits in Kharg Island and, if launched by the supersonic bombers, can reach any vital Iranian economic facility," the diplomat said Thursday, speaking on condition of anonymity.

Iraqi President Saddam Hussein said May 23 that his country would "soon acquire new weapons capable of striking at Iranian economic targets deep inside Iran," but he did not identify the weapons.

Hussein called on his air force officers Thursday to "strike at the enemy's economic targets."

Iraqi officials reached by The Associated Press refused comment on the diplomat's report.

NBC News reported Thursday night that Iraq had ordered 5,000 cluster bombs from Chile. Each 500-pound bomb, made with U.S. parts and technology, explodes into 240 smaller "bomblets" that can spread fire and shrapnel over an area the size of 10 football fields, NBC said.

Communiques issued Thursday by Iran and Iraq said 54 people were killed when the two countries bombed each other's cities Thursday and shelled border regions.

In Taif, Saudi Arabia, oil ministers of the Arab gulf nations were to hold an emergency meeting today to discuss threat of attacks on tankers in the gulf. Both Iran and Iraq have attacked commercial ships in the region.

Iraqi pilots have damaged more than a score of ships in the gulf near Iran in an attempt to halt Iran's oil exports and thus cripple its ability to continue the 45-month war.

Iran also has attacked ships and has threatened to close the Strait of Hormuz, the entrance to the gulf.

An Iraqi communique said four Iranian jetfighters conducted raids against the Iraqi border towns of Jalaula and Kifri on Thursday, and Iraqi air defenses hit "one of the raiding enemy jetfighters."

Ruidoso airport sites studied

WASHINGTON (AP) — The secretary of the U.S. Department of the Interior says he has ordered an environmental impact statement drawn up on possible sites for a new airport at Ruidoso, N.M.

William Clark said Thursday the statement will focus on two sites, including one called Site B and leased by New Mexico State University for range experiments.

The 1,666-acre site is on the 26,000-acre Fort Stanton Experimental Ranch on near Ruidoso. NMSU operates the ranch on Fort Stanton Mesa under a cooperative agreement with the Bureau of Land Management that expires in 1990.

The school has said it opposes locating the airport on Site B because an airport would damage NMSU's long-term rangeland studies.

An alternative Site A has been ruled out by the Federal Aviation Administrationa and Sen. Pete Domenici, R-N.M., said he did not believe the environmental impact statement would revive Site A as an option.

Supporters of Site B have said Site A no longer is an available because some private landowners plan to develop some of the property proposed for an airport.

Site A is a combination of private, state and federal land about four miles west of Site B.

The Sierra Blanca Airport Commission has been seeking transfer of land on Fort Stanton Mesa from the BLM to the FAA for a new airport.

The commission, which would operate a new airport, contends the airport in Ruidoso is too dangerous.

Domenici told a Ruidoso delegation Thursday he would support their choice of a site for a new airport if they could reach an agreement with NMSU.

"He told us that, until New Mexico State agrees to a compromise with Ruidoso, we won't get our airport," said Rick Evans of Ruidoso.

Domenici said Clark told him he would "do anything that's reasonable" to try to help NMSU move part of its research project to make way for an airport.

But Interior Department Assistant Secretary Leona Power said the agency would not try to convince NMSU to give up its lease on Site B.

Blowing ash may force residents of Texas town to abandon homes

MONTICELLO (AP) — The 60 residents of this East Texas community may have to leave their homes if officials of coal-fired electric plant do not solve pollution problems, the town's mayor says.

City officials say the pollution is caused from smokestacks and from blowing ash from waste disposal sites at the plant, which is owned by Texas Utilities Generating Co.

Company officials, however, say the plant is in compliance with state standards and is not a health hazard.

Residents have complained of sore eyes and respiratory problems. Many have moved away, while others are encouraging the utility to buy their properties so they can afford to leave.

"What are we going to do, all sit here and die?" asked Mayor Harold Smith, 61. "They (Texas Utilities) should clear out a three- or four-mile radius around the plant.

"It's reached the point where we absolutely can't stand it anymore," Smith said. "There's not a one of us that's not stopped up, sinuses bad, and with kids that can't breathe."

Smith said the problem has become so bad that he believes the town's 60 residents will be forced to move.

In April, a state inspector tested the air near Joey Patterson's home and found that blowing dust from the plant's ash disposal site was at levels nearly 15 times the amount considered safe under state law, according to Texas Air Control Board data.

Debbie and Joey Patterson, with son Jason

Another resident, Mike White, who has lived in Monticello since 1976, said his son's asthma has worsened since they moved to the area.

"You can see it pouring out of the stacks every day," said White. "We have special filters on our air conditioner, but it doesn't help much."

White said that the family will be forced to move unless his son shows signs of recovery.

Other families living near the plant say the pollution is damaging their health. Eighteen families have signed a petition asking company officials to buy their properties so they can afford to leave.

Although company officials say they have no evidence that anyone's health is in jeopardy, they have spent $250,000 in recent months to control the blowing dust.

"We feel like we have maintained compliance with applicable standards," plant manager Ned Baker said. "We have continued to do that all along."

Before the tests for blowing ash were conducted, company officials and the Texas Air Control Board had maintained that the 750-megawatt power plant was in compliance with air-quality standards.

After the tests, however, the TACB declared the ash a nuisance and ordered the problem corrected, said Richard Leard, TACB regional director in Tyler.

Leard said that stronger action, including a fine, may be taken later.

The plant's three generating units burn lignite coal, a cheap, dirty fuel strip-mined from more than 15,000 acres leased by the company around the facility.

Only one of the units is equipped with emission control devices. The two older units are exempt from the stricter standards under the Texas Clean Air Act because construction started before 1971.

Local water districts must take lead, official says

LUBBOCK (AP) — Local water districts must take the lead in regulating West Texas' dwindling water supply or face the possibility of state and federal officials doing the job, the state's chief water planner says.

"We can take a regulatory approach, or we can take a consultant approach where someone comes to town, borrows your watch, tells you what time it is and keeps the watch," said Herb Grubb, chief planner for the Texas Department of Water Resources.

Grubb said he would like to see all the ground water regions in the area merged into one, large district.

Grubb made his remarks to scientists and conservationists attending the Ogallala Aquifer Symposium II in Lubbock, which ended Thursday.

After a session Wednesday, Grubb said large water districts that cover entire water formations are the only alternative to state or federal regulation.

"I think those districts would allow the people who use the water to make wise choices without a regulatory barrier," Grubb said. "I think people generally are resistant to regulation, even if regulators are trying to accomplish the same things they are."

State Rep. J.W. "Buck" Buchanan, D-Dumas, introduced a bill during the last regular session of the Texas Legislature calling for just such an organization of water districts. The measure failed, but Grubb said he would like to see the effort pursued.

Once those districts are formed, Gubb said a state agency probably would be created to regulate individual water districts.

Desegregation hindered by 'white shortage'

HOUSTON (AP) — A shortage of white students will make it increasingly more difficult to integrate Houston schools, the district's superintendent says.

Superintendent Billy Reagan testified in federal court Thursday that whites will account for only 12 to 15 percent of all students in his district in another decade.

"Our district boundaries contain fewer and fewer whites," Reagan testified at the close of a four-day desegregation hearing before U.S. District Judge Robert O'Conor Jr.

O'Conor has been supervising the implementation of a desegregation plan for the last three years. The school district contends the supervision should end.

O'Conor recessed the hearing until July 24 to give plaintiffs in the 28-year-old desegregation case a chance to respond.

Reagan said the district also expects the Hispanic population to swell until Hispanic students make up about 70 percent of the total student body in 20 years.

He said the enrollment projections are based on birth rates, land use and migration patterns.

Reagan noted desegregation specialists believe there's a "tipping factor" in schools with less than 35 percent whites.

"In those circumstances, the white population either moves or puts their children in private schools," he said. "The result will be one-race schools."

Total enrollment and enrollment of white students has declined steadily for more than a decade in Houston schools.

Mondale looks to Veep decision

WASHINGTON (AP) — The managers of Walter F. Mondale's presidential campaign are putting up a "Help Wanted" sign and gearing up for the most important decision Mondale must make this year: the selection of a running mate.

Aides at Mondale's headquarters here briefed political reporters Thursday while their boss and his family flew off to Southampton, N.Y., for a week's vacation at the beach.

Mondale, who claimed victory Wednesday after the last of the 60 Democratic primaries and caucuses, planned to call rivals Gary Hart and the Rev. Jesse L. Jackson by today "to talk frankly about what can be done now — before the convention — to have a successful convention," said James A. Johnson, the campaign chairman.

Mondale has 1,982 delegates who have publicly stated their commitment to vote for him on the first ballot in San Francisco, according to The Associated Press delegate survey. He needs 1,967 to win the nomination.

Johnson and campaign manager Bob Beckel may have been putting some subtle pressure on their rivals to throw in the towel.

Johnson said that Mondale has designated attorney John R. Reilly to spearhead his search for a vice president and serve as his principal adviser. "Mondale intends to make this matter his highest personal priority in the weeks ahead," said Johnson.

Johnson says that in the voters' eyes, selection of a running mate will be the most important decision Mondale must make all year. Mondale said Wednesday he would not rule out the possibility of making that choice before the convention.

And Beckel, while calling it "premature" to talk about recruiting Hart and Jackson workers, said he had begun to recruit more help for the fall campaign.

Beckel said the Mondale strategists were also devoting time to review voter registration drives waged by the Democratic National Cmmittee and others, and deciding what states to target for the fall.

Senate wants more spending by allies

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate wants America's European allies to spend more on defense, but refuses to tie the Pentagon's budget to such increases.

A 91-3 vote Thursday asked that President Reagan "insist" that members of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization fulfill a 1977 pledge that each NATO country increase its defense spending by 3 percent a year after inflation.

The non-binding proposal by Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., also calls for "substantial increases" in defense spending by Japan, which is not a NATO member. The Japanese defense budget will increase 4.8 percent this year.

However, the Senate rejected, 76-16, a proposal by Sen. Larry Pressler, R-S.D., which would have stopped the Pentagon from increasing its expenditures beyond the combined increases of the 15 other NATO members.

Pressler argued that American taxpayers are tired of seeing small or no increases in Allied defense budgets when the Pentagon budget is rapidly rising.

The votes came on the first day of what could be a month-long debate over a bill authorizing the Defense Department to spend $291 billion in the 1985 fiscal year, which begins Oct. 1. The bill would increase U.S. defense spending by about 7 percent after inflation.

The House has already passed a $284 billion defense authorization bill and differences between the two versions will be worked out later by a House-Senate conference committee. The authorization bills simply set limits on what may be appropriated. Actual spending comes through appropriation bills passed later.

Only the United States and Luxembourg have consistently met the 3 percent growth target since it was set.

Sen. John Tower, R-Texas, agreed that "they could do more," but he said, "we're not just there to defend them, we're there to defend our interests" against the Soviet Union.

Like Tower, Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., also opposed the amendment, arguing that it would only strengthen the "anti-American, anti-NATO" forces in Europe.

"These forces are younger people who have never been through war" and so they don't recognize the value of a united front, Goldwater said. "I won't argue with the premise that we should tell our allies that we expect them to do as much as we do."

But he said that tying U.S. defense spending to NATO increases will only play into the hands of NATO opponents in Europe who feel the United States already wields too much clout in the Atlantic alliance.

Shortly before the debate began, 40 senators said they would support an amendment directing Reagan to immediately try to reopen U.S.-Soviet talks aimed at a complete ban on nuclear weapons tests. Negotiations have been suspended since 1979.

The proposal also seeks to have Reagan submit to the Senate for ratification two other nuclear test treaties, one a 1974 pact limiting the size of tests and the other a 1976 treaty dealing with tests for peaceful purposes.

A 1963 treaty bans tests in outer space, the atmosphere and in the oceans. But it permits underground atomic tests and both the United States and the Soviets have set off hundreds of such explosions in the past 21 years.

Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., called a comprehensive test ban "an important first step toward a complete freeze on the nuclear arms race."

At a news conference announcing the effort, Kennedy and Sen. Charles McC. Mathias Jr., R-Md., were joined by veterans of U.S. open-air testing conducted in the Nevada during the 1950s.

Mathias is a former Navy officer who was one of the first Americans to enter Hiroshima and Nagasaki after U.S. atomic bombs were dropped on those Japanese cities in August, 1945.

Wall Street Journal settles libel suit

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Wall Street Journal will pay $800,000 to settle a libel suit filed by two former federal prosecutors because it cannot prove parts of a challenged article.

Associate Publisher Peter R. Kann said in a statement Thursday that the decision to settle was "is an exception to, not a change in" the Journal's policy of not settling libel suits.

"In this case, where two important parts of the article turned out to be unproved, we thought it would be unwise for us and our people to undergo the financial and human costs of a long trial," Kann said.

Reporter James A. Drinkhall wrote in 1979 that William M. Kramer and John M. Dowd, two former members of the Justice Department's Organized Crime Strike Force, improperly pressured a federal prisoner to testify against Las Vegas casino owner Morris Shenker.

Drinkhall wrote that Kramer and Dowd planned to have authorities at the McNeil Island Federal Penitentiary in Washington state place Samuel Ray Calabrese in solitary confinement and leak reports that he was cooperating with prosecutors to pressure him to testify.

Kramer and Dowd, now in private practice, denied making statements atrributed to them, said they were libeled and asked for $5 million.

Kann, in a letter to the former prosecutors' attorney, Thomas C. Green, said the article described allegations that "the Strike Force disseminated rumors that caused Calabrese to be assaulted in prison. The article may also have implied that the Strike Force caused Calabrese to be discriminatorily housed at the prison for the same purpose."

"After four years of discovery, in connection with the litigation instituted by your clients, the Journal and its reporter, Jim Drinkhall, have not found evidence proving these events in fact occurred," Kann wrote.

Discovery is the pre-trial process by which lawyers on each side examine the evidence, particularly documents, that the other party has.

The settlement came 10 days before the case was scheduled to go to trial in Washington before U.S. District Judge Harold H. Greene.

Quaalude circulation drops

MIAMI (AP) — Increased cooperation from foreign countries and suspension of production by U.S. pharmaceutical companies has all but eliminated the sedative Quaalude in this country, a federal drug agency spokesman said.

The number of real and counterfeit Quaaludes circulating throughout the country has dropped from a high of about 450 million in 1980 to "virtually none" today, Drug Enforcement Administration spokesman Frank Chellino said Thursday.

Legal production of the drug, which was popular with middle-class youths, was stopped last year. Quaalude is a trademark for methaqualone.

Agents help net conspirators

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A federal agent posing as a millionaire willing to help a small army overthrow the right-wing government of Haiti helped net 13 men who have been indicted for conspiring to launch a military operation against the Caribbean island, authorities said.

Most of those arrested last week and indicted Thursday by a federal grand jury are Haitian citizens living in this country.

The federal agent was promised $1 million and told he could develop businesses in Haiti after the government of Jean Claude "Baby Doc" Duvalier was overthrown, according to the complaint filed last week.

Poultry quarantine partly lifted

COLUMBIA, Pa. (AP) — A poultry quarantine intended to halt the spread of the deadly avian influenza has been partly lifted, more than two months after the last case of the disease was reported.

Federal officials on Thursday lifted the quarantine from a 1,650-square-mile region of the state, but retained it over 3,850 square miles.

Nearly 13 million turkeys and chickens were killed by suffocation since the fall to keep a virulent strain of the flu from spreading.

The state's farmers, and firms from feed companies to banks, have lost up to $150 million, said John Hoffman, president of the Pennsylvania Poultry Federation.

More polar bears killed this year

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — Alaska natives have killed more polar bears this year than in any year since 1972, when a law banning sport hunting of the creatures went into effect, federal officials say.

An estimated 270 bears have been killed this year, and "if the take continues this high, we could be in a critical stage before we know it," Jim Baker, chief of Wildlife Assistance for the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, said Thursday.

In 1983, fewer than 100 bears were killed, Baker said, adding that his staff estimates there are now 3,000 to 5,000 polar bears in Alaska's arctic region, a "healthy population."

Mortgage rates still going up

WASHINGTON (AP) — Mortgage rates are still going up and conventional fixed-rate loans hit 14.34 percent last month, the Federal Home Loan Bank Board reports.

Consumers paid an average of 12.07 percent for adjustable rate mortgages with limits on the amount rates can change, compared with 11.90 percent in April and 11.73 percent in March, the board said Thursday.

For adjustable rate mortgages with unlimited changes, the average rate was 12.44 percent in May. This was up slightly from 12.43 percent in April and 12.23 percent in March.

The new conventional-mortgage rate was up from 14.12 percent in April, the first month that the average mortgage rate for a new home had been above 14 percent since last October. After rates hit 14.08 percent in October, they declined to 13.69 percent in February before starting to rise again.

Jury to unlock secrets of gangs

BELLEVILLE, ILL. (AP) — A grand jury may be able to "find out things that police aren't being told" about six East St. Louis street gangs suspected in three murders and the firebombing of a detective's home, a prosecutor said.

"I think every agency of the government that can should look into the problem of gangs before it gets out of hand," East St. Louis police Detective Ronald Mathews said Thursday as the grand jury agreed to begin investigating the gangs.

Mathews said members of the Black Gangster Disciple Nation gang firebombed his house Feb. 27 in retaliation for his "coming down on them" during an investigation into a number of burglaries.

"They are stepping up their violence. And every year it gets worse," Mathews said.

Officials say gang-related problems worsened last year when four members of the Disciples returned from the St. Charles Reformatory in northern Illinois.

"They leave here, go to St. Charles and come back with a Ph.D. in street crime," said Carl E. Officer, mayor of East St. Louis, an impoverished city of 55,000 across the Mississippi River from St. Louis.

State's Attorney John Baricevic said he asked for the grand jury investigation because he saw the gangs' violence and intimidation as a growing community problem.

The St. Clair County grand jury will hear testimony from police intelligence officers when it convenes on June 21, Baricevic said.

The Disciples, with a membership of about 200, has been identified as the largest gang. Authorities describe its leadership as mostly former convicts, adult parolees and juvenile offenders with connections to a Chicago-based gang. Its leaders protect themselves from police by using young recruits to commit crimes for them, police say.

A second Chicago-based group, the Vice Lords, is about a third the size of the Disciples. Others with fewer members include the 38 Specials, the Scorpions, the Park Avenue Players and the Rat Patrol, authorities said.

Look at the past

Notification that the board of trustees of the Museum of the Southwest has plans to demolish the main Lancaster house and out buildings as the museum moves into Phase II of its expansion program caught a number of Midlanders by surprise. The surprise wasn't pleasant, either.

It's not so much that the museum board's plans aren't logical; after all, the Lancaster house, while being a fine example of the architecture of early-day Midland, isn't even old enough yet to be designated a historical site and, since it was built as a home and not a museum facility, doesn't fit in well with the announced plans of museum growth.

Besides, as board members and museum officials point out, the Lancaster house has been a continual drain on resources and would cost many thousands of dollars to restore to its original grandeur. In that context, the board's move may have been the only option it could see at the moment.

More than that, though, is the manner in which the board made the decision. A letter explaining the plans was sent to museum members on May 25 and, if plans are not altered, demolition of the structure will begin a week from today. The board obviously had been planning the move some time and, frankly, that timetable doesn't allow for much meaningful public input.

Lancaster house has not been designated a Texas historical site and while it is obviously historically significant to a number of Midlanders because of the role it occupied in the city's past, its historical value may be reasonably questioned by some, including those on the museum board.

The Museum of the Southwest is not a governing body accountable to Midland's taxpayers because the museum is not directly tax-supported. Midland County does, however, maintain the grounds and buildings at the complex's Turner house, though, so indirectly the museum board shares a public trust even though the Lancaster grounds and buildings are owned by the museum.

A primary question to be considered in such an instance seems to be: Are the museum's individual financial supporters willing to pay the additional money required to save the Lancaster house and, if not, does the house then have any historic value?

If that question is answered negatively, which appears to be the current situation, there are other alternatives to demolition. The house could be moved to another site and restored with private funds or it could be sold to an individual as was the Hill house. There's even the possibility of interested parties moving and restoring the house for their own artistic fulfillment.

But for any of those possibilities to be considered the public needs to be made aware of the museum's plans. In this instance, that wasn't the case.

While we agree fully with the museum board's decision that the Lancaster property is needed in other ways, we hope an alternative can be found to the demolition of this fine old structure that for many Midlanders represents a part of the city's past that is rapidly slipping away.

Rev. Moon's crime

Was the Rev. Sun Myung Moon railroaded by the Internal Revenue Service and the courts? In the aftermath of the Supreme Court's decision not to review his conviction for tax fraud, that charge has been made, not only by Moon's co-religionists but by several mainstream religious organizations. They claim that Moon's conviction jeopardizes not just the liberty of Moon but religious liberty generally.

That's a serious accusation, but it misreads the facts of the case. The Constitution has long been held to exempt church property from taxation as a way of furthering religious freedom. Such exemptions keep the state out of religious affairs and encourage individuals to form sectarian communities of their own choosing. But clergy are another matter. Their income has always been subject to income taxes — what religious liberty claim justifies personal enrichment? — and, like anyone else, they can go to jail for not paying taxes.

In essence, that's what Moon's case concerns: the non-payment of income taxes on the interest from $1.7 million in bank deposits and $50,000 worth of stock. The evidence introduced during Moon's trial showed that he treated this money as his own, separating it from church funds. Indeed, when he lent money to the church, he designated the funds as personal.

The notoriety that has surrounded Moon's case is largely attributable to the notoriety of the Unification Church, which has been an active — and, in some quarters, an infuriating — force, particularly in recruiting young people. But the unanimous action of the Supreme Court merely confirms an old principle: Render unto Uncle Sam that which is Uncle Sam's — or suffer the legal penalty.

Navy may utilize trained dolphins

WASHINGTON — The Reagan administration was embarrassed earlier this year when it was revealed that the CIA had been directly involved in the mining of Nicaraguan harbors — without adequately informing congressional oversight committees.

Jack Anderson

Now there's a bizarre possibility that the Navy may be planning to take over the CIA's dirty work, using one of its least known weapons: trained dolphins. The hint of dolphin use off Nicaragua was contained in a secret directive sent out by the chief of naval operations. It ordered that "Navy Marine mammal capability" be expanded to include the Atlantic Ocean.

Does this portend flippered forays against Soviet bloc ships carrying munitions to the embattled Sandinista regime in Managua? The Navy won't say.

But dolphins do have certain advantages over CIA hirelings sowing mines from speedboats. They're smarter than a floating mine — and if they're captured, no amount of KGB-style interrogation can make them talk.

My sources suggest that the principal reason for deploying dolphins in the Atlantic, though, is to protect our own ships. The Navy has a substantial flotilla patrolling the Atlantic coast of Nicaragua, keeping an eye on the Sandinistas and on munitions shipments from Cuba and the Soviet Union.

The amazing dolphins, with their built-in sonar, chalked up an impressive record against enemy frogmen during the Vietnam War. From their underwater lairs at Cam Ranh Bay, they would be unleased to find enemy demolition experts, whom they would dispatch with special hypodermic needles attached to carbon dioxide cartridges. The enemy frogmen would be impaled on the needles and literally blown up by the CO2.

Over a 15-month period, dolphins killed about 60 North Vietnamese divers — and two Americans who accidentally got in their way.

Insiders told my associates Donald Goldberg and Dale Van Atta that the use of trained dolphins in Latin America isn't a new idea. According to one CIA whistle blower, who talked to congressional investigators, the agency — which developed dolphin training to a fine art in the 1960s — tried to sell killer dolphins to several Latin American countries several years ago. The prospective purchasers included Mexico, Peru, Brazil and Argentina. Apparently they weren't interested.

As I first reported three years ago, the CIA has been concerned about the possibility of a U.S.-Soviet "dolphin gap." For nearly 20 years the Soviets have been developing their own dolphin program — including "the potential benefits of developing acoustical jamming countermeasures" to U.S. dolphins.

The Soviets' interest apparently was piqued in 1965 by the Navy's well-publicized project involving "Tuffy," a bottlenose dolphin that carried tools and messages to Sea Lab II aquanauts 200 feet down off La Jolla, Calif. A minor mystery of that project is that, while Tuffy's feats were sworn to be authentic, the film footage of his diving released to the public was faked — shot in an indoor studio where the water was clearer.

But the Soviets were quick to detect a weapons gap, and began intensive research on dolphin technology. As a CIA report notes, one important use of trained dolphins is to attach "intelligence collection packages and other devices to enemy submarines." So the Soviets have been concentrating on jamming devices that would thwart U.S. dolphins.

DANGEROUS PLAYPENS: The Consumer Product Safety Commission is considering issuing a civil complaint demanding the recall of thousands of expandable wooden playpens. The agency has declared them safety hazards.

The enclosures, made of criss-crossed wooden slats, are extended versions of the fences used for years to keep toddlers away from stairs or other dangerous areas. From 1980 to 1982 at least three babies are known to have died from strangulation when they were caught in one of the V-shaped angles formed by the wooden slats. Children from 12 to 16 months old are the most vulnerable, and should not be left unattended in the portable playpens, the CPSC staff warned.

In its memo recommending forced recall by the manufacturers, the staff estimated that at least 232,000 of the enclosures were in use at the end of last year. The playpens sell for $20 to $40.

The staff classified the playpens as B-plus under the agency's hazard classification, with A designating products most urgently in need of corrective action.

'Wise heads' say drop Jesse

WASHINGTON — No sooner had Walter F. Mondale clinched the presidential nomination in New Jersey than the wise heads of his party, acting independently, prepared this crucial advice for their new leader: publicly distance yourself from Jesse Jackson.

That message will soon be conveyed to Mondale's closest aides and the candidate himself. They will be told that Mondale need offend neither the Rev. Jackson nor the aspirations of blacks. But to prevent a hemorrhage of white voters, he must explicitly separate himself from Jackson, particularly on Middle East policy. What's more, say the wise heads, separation must come well before the July 16 San Francisco convention — preferably within two weeks.

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

This is no mere tactical ploy. Although key to Mondale's hope of defeating Ronald Reagan, it also addresses the Democratic Party's continued majority status. But what is being asked of Mondale is so alien to his style and personality that it must be seen as a first critical test of his new leadership.

At this moment, nothing is farther from the priorities set by most of Mondale's men than moving him away from Jackson. They concentrate instead on ways to convince Sen. Gary Hart that an active, last-ditch campaign cannot win him the nomination but will do lasting damage to himself, Mondale and the Democratic Party.

But Democratic leaders across the nation, while annoyed by Hart, are frightened by Jackson. They have come to believe that his advent into Democratic politics threatens to alienate more white voters than it can possibly attract newly-registered blacks. The tipping point for Jackson's influence from plus to minus may have been his feckless mission to Mexico City.

Whether wishful thinking or not, Democratic leaders believe Jackson is about to enter a conciliatory phase at San Francisco in which he will lower his voice and reduce his demands. But even if that is correct, they still see a need for Mondale, who became Fighting Fritz in bludgeoning Hart, to stop walking on eggshells in dealing with Jackson.

The soft-gloved handling is viewed as "patronizing" by one Jackson critic and Mondale admirer, New York's Mayor Ed Koch. "He should treat Jackson the way he treats Hart," Koch told us. Many other Democrats, speaking privately to us, made the same point in discussing various Mondale scenarios.

These scenarios are remarkably similar: The nominee, after conferring with Jackson, would make a public statement proclaiming their agreement on a wide range of domestic and foreign policies — especially equal rights. Then Mondale would carefully enumerate "other" issues on which the two disagree, issues divorced from either the economic well-being or civil rights of minority groups.

One "other" issue is Mondale's view that defense spending must be gradually increased (albeit much more slowly than President Reagan wants) while Jackson demands cuts. Another is Mondale's refusal to support Jackson's call for abolition of runoff primaries in the South in order to nominate more black Democrats in majority white constituencies. Emphasizing these differences would help Mondale with defense-oriented moderates and white Southerners — voters trending to Reagan.

But the most important "other" issue the wise heads want Mondale to emphasize is his pro-Israel position in the Middle East, in direct conflict with Jackson's. The Jewish vote is threatening to leave the Democratic coalition, some of its leaders outraged that Democratic National Chairman Charles T. Manatt said on NBC's "Meet the Press" last Sunday that "I don't consider Jesse Jackson to be anti-Jewish in any way."

The impact of Mondale ending his hands-off treatment of Jackson would extend far beyond Jewish voters. To risk Jackson's ire openly and consciously would be welcome counterpoint to the Fritz Mondale who campaigned in North Carolina for tobacco and against smoking.

"I know Fritz should do this, but I don't think he will," one astute senator told us. Indeed, in response to our questions, Mondale's staffers suggest there is plenty on the public record about policy disagreements with Jackson. But Mondale gave the same answer himself four months ago when asked to name his differences with organized labor — a refusal that nearly cost him the nomination.

Mondale's seasoned managers know they must get their house in order by convention time or forget about defeating Reagan. To get that lift for San Francisco, they seek now to subdue Gary Hart. More important is putting healthy distance between Mondale and Jesse Jackson.

Help isn't reaching Indians

He doesn't look like an Indian. He doesn't look like a guerrilla commander. He looks like a graduate student or young scientist, the kind you see on those educational television shows.

Charley Reese

But there sat Steadman Fagoth, "commandante" of the Misura forces, a coalition of Mosquito, Sura and Rama Indians, who are in rebellion against the communist government of Nicaragua. He had one leg sprawled over the arm of a chair in the Clipper Lounge at the Miami International Airport. He was wearing a blue plaid shirt, blue jeans and boots. He's a thin fellow with a thick beard and long hair, but it was the red and white baseball cap that gave him a boyish air. He's a man, though, and a natural leader of men.

"I know Senator Edward Kennedy is playing politics with Mr. Reagan," he said, referring to the Kennedy-led move to cut off aid to the Nicaraguan contras. "But he is also playing with our dignity, with our liberty and with our blood. What would he like me to tell my men who have lost their legs or the children who have no fathers? That we have died and suffered for nothing?"

Fagoth told me how the 160,000 Indians who live on the Atlantic side of Nicaragua came to rebel against the Sandinistas. It only confirmed my long-held belief that anybody who is a Marxist-Leninist is also by definition a blockhead.

These Indians had been ignored for centuries by Nicaraguan governments and they had no quarrel with the Sandinistas. Heck, they even practiced economic communism because all of their property is owned by the community. The Sandinistas didn't have sense enough to leave well enough alone.

The first mistake they made was telling the Indians they had to disband all of their traditional organizations. There would be only one in the country — the Committee to Defend the Revolution. Then they expropriated the Indians assets. The third mistake was to attempt to indoctrinate the children with Marxist-Leninism in that stupid literacy program American liberals think is so nice.

When the Indian leaders protested all this, the Sandanistas clapped them in jail, Fagoth included. The rest of the Indians started demonstrating and then the Sandinistas resorted to attempted bribery. Agree to calm the Indians, they told Fagoth, and then go to Czechoslovakia and we'll finance you to study any subject you want.

After 60 days in jail Fagoth, at the insistence of his wife, pretended to agree and then as soon as they let him out, he hot-footed it over the border to Honduras.

In the meantime the Sandinistas had told the Indians they would get no aid, no food and no medicine unless they agreed to toe the Marxist-Leninist line.

Still, the council of elders did not wish to fight. They sent delegations to the United Nations, to the United States and to Europe. The answer they got when they appealed for someone to consider their human rights was that the Sandinista Revolution was new and sure they'd make a few mistakes but just wait a while.

But in June, 1982, Fagoth and some of the younger men decided that it was time to talk to the Sandinistas in the same language they had been using against the Indians — bullets. Though vastly outgunned by the communists, the Misura forces have blown every bridge on the Atlantic side of Nicaragua save two which are heavily defended round the clock. The Indians lay ambushes and then fade into the heavy forests.

Fagoth told me of atrocities committed by the Sandinistas when they forcibly removed the Indians and this was before the Indians started to fight. He told me of pregnant girls shot down and of people buried alive in a pit.

Fagoth says he could field 10,000 men if he had the arms but the CIA is stingy with its aid. He gets about $35 a month per man and if he begs for 10 rifles he gets two. The truth is the CIA doesn't want the contras to win and it controls them by doling out the aid in small amounts. I'd like to see an audit of how those Ivy League spies from the CIA have spent that $21 million because from evey Nicaraguan I've talked to I hear not much of it is getting to the troops who are doing the fighting.

It breaks my heart the way those fat cat politicians and Ivy League bureaucrats are playing games with these brave people. They are fighting our enemies down there and if we would give them enough aid, they'd run the Sandinistas all the way back to Havana.

Berlin Wall now provides glimpse of Germany's past

BERLIN (AP) — East German authorities have unintentionally provided a glimpse into the Nazi past by altering the Berlin Wall to reveal the grassy hill, partially hidden for 16 years, where Adolf Hitler's bunker lies.

Hitler and his long-time mistress, Eva Braun, committed suicide together in the bunker April 30, 1945, to escape capture by the Soviet army in the final days of the war.

Joseph Goebbels, Hitler's propaganda minister, took his life in the bunker shortly afterward.

The hill was almost blocked from view by part of the Berlin Wall, erected by Communist authorities in 1961.

The wall actually has two parts — a solid barrier directly on the dividing line between East and West Berlin, and a thinner but equally high fence 600 to 900 feet inside East Berlin. Watchtowers, tank traps, fences and border guards on patrol make the area between the walls a no-man's-land.

Recently, East German work crews began to put up a third wall in the no-man's-land near the famous Brandenburg Gate, a Berlin landmark. They also began dismantling a section of the inner wall which hid all but the top of the bunker hill.

At the time, West German officials expressed concern that East Berlin was strengthening border fortifications.

But the East German Foreign Ministry denied that the additional wall was part of the border, saying the work was being done in line with "building projects" in East Berlin.

East German officials have declined to say what they plan to build in an area that once was Germany's main government district. But this reluctance to comment may have a lot to do with the area's Nazi past.

The bunker was built during World War II in the courtyard of the so-called old Reich Chancellery, where Hitler was saluted by his Nazi storm troopers after becoming chancellor Jan. 30, 1933.

In 1938, Hitler ordered his chief architect, Albert Speer, to build a new marble chancellery adjoining the old building.

The new chancellery was completed in 1939 but stood for only six years. It was damaged by bombs during World War II and blown up in 1949 on orders of the Soviet occupation authorities.

Undamaged marble from the structure was transported to East Berlin's Treptow district to be used for a giant Soviet war memorial. Tons of earth covered what remained of the bunker.

Both the old and the new chancelleries were on Berlin's Wilhelmstrasse, the city's prewar equivalent of London's Downing Street and Quai d'Orsay in Paris.

The American and British embassies, the famous Adlon Hotel, the German Foreign Ministry and Goebbels' Propaganda Ministry lined the street before World War II.

Argentina creates unity accord

Isabel Peron, opposition leaders sign

AP Laserphoto

Argentine President Raul Alfonsin, right, watches as former president Isabel Peron signs the unity pact. Waiting to join the national effort is another former president, Arturo Frondizi, left.

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — Isabel Peron and other opposition leaders joined President Raul Alfonsin in signing a "national unity" accord which seeks to combat a $44 billion foreign debt, workers' unrest and triple-digit inflation.

The agreement, signed Thursday in a nationally televised ceremony, listed broad goals but did not specify solutions to Argentina's domestic and international problems.

It stressed the need for "national unity and harmony" and urged that the constitutional order, the republican system and democracy be strengthened. Alfonsin's administration is the nation's first civilian government in more than seven years.

Mrs. Peron, who was ousted from the presidency by the military in 1976, returned here last month from self-exile in Spain to begin political talks with Alfonsin. She is titular head of the labor-based Peronist movement.

The Peronists and Alfonsin's center-left Radical Civic Union are the nation's two largest political parties.

Alfonsin's Radicals won national balloting in October, handing the Peronists their first election loss since the party's founding in the mid-1940s by Juan D. Peron, Mrs. Peron's late husband.

Leading up to the accord were three weeks of talks between Alfonsin's six-month-old administration, the Peronists and some 15 other parties.

"I have seen the unification of all Argentines, which is what the country needed," said Mrs. Peron, who succeeded her husband as president in 1974.

Claiming that the accord was too general, four political parties refused to sign it. They were the Federalists and Democratic Center Union, both center-right, and the leftist Intransigents and the Communists.

The agreement said that efforts to renegotiate the foreign debt should allow Argentina to "meet its obligations without harming the welfare of the workers nor hindering (economic) reactivation and the nation's development."

It urged the "strengthening of real salaries and the subsequent, gradual slowing of inflation," which is running at 568 percent annually.

The accord called for more diplomatic efforts "within the framework of the United Nations" to try to solve the dispute over the Falkland Islands. The document said negotiations must include Argentina's claim of sovereignty over the islands, 250 miles south of Argentina.

Key economic indicators on rise in Brazil

By STAN LEHMAN
Associated Press Writer

SAO PAULO, Brazil — For the first time in four years, key economic indicators are up in Brazil, a nation that owes $100 billion to foreign creditors. But the new numbers have yet to bring any relief to millions of low-paid workers struggling under the worst recession in Brazilian history.

The Sao Paulo Federation of Industries has reported that industrial output rose 2.5 percent during the first quarter of this year and that employment levels increased 2 percent.

"I hear on the radio that things are getting better, but for me things couldn't be worse," bricklayer Cicero Alves Rufino told a reporter. He said he still can't afford milk or bread for his three children.

The 33-year-old laborer added that the most he earns in a month is equivalent to $62 and that "most of the time I make much less" requiring him to seek help from relatives and friends "whenever they can."

The government, in order to qualify for billions of dollars in emergency loans from the International Monetary Fund and private foreign banks, recently adopted a series of austerity measures aimed at putting Brazil's overall finances in order.

As a result, some economic indicators have improved, especially those involving exports. But conditions remain bleak for millions of Brazilians hit by limits on wage-increase and cutbacks in government subsidies that kept food prices down.

Antonio Evaristo Teixeira Lanzana, an economic analyst of the Sao Paulo Federation of Industries, said in an interview that the purchasing power of the average Brazilian worker dropped 8.7 percent in the same quarter that the economic indicators went up.

"This situation will continue for a long time," he said.

Reflecting the reduced purchasing power of average citizens was a 23 percent drop in retail sales in the first quarter.

"This is a clear indication that the recession is very much alive and that the Brazilian consumer is paying the price," said Guilherme Afif Domingos, president of the Sao Paulo Chamber of Commerce.

The food sector, with a 16 percent drop in retail sales, had the worst first-quarter performance, prompting Joao Franco de Camargo Neto, president of tthe Brazilian Food industry Association, to say that "salaried workers in Brazil are eating less."

According to Lanzana, the positive economic indicators — watched closely by Brazil's overseas creditors — occurred despite the recession in the domestic market because of increased exports.

Exports during the first quarter totaled $4.577 billion, compared to the $3.266 billion exported during the first three months of 1983.

The steel, transportation and paper and pulp industries, which export most of what they produce, were the sectors most responsible for the increase in industrial output, Lanzana said.

He added that the industrial sector hired 40,000 workers in the first quarter but that "unemployment is still too high."

Labor Ministry figures show that 24 percent of Brazil's work force of about 50 million is unemployed or "underemployed." Figures compiled by a socio-economic research center funded by labor unions put the figure at 40 percent.

Bulgarian drug trade can't be controlled

WASHINGTON (AP) — A State Department official says there's little the United States can do about illegal drugs reaching this country through Bulgaria because relations between the two nations are at "rock bottom."

Mark Palmer, deputy assistant secretary for European and Canadian affairs, made the statement Thursday after a Drug Enforcement Administration official told a House hearing that one-fourth of all heroin reaching the United States comes through Bulgaria.

Both men testified that the Reagan administration believes that much of the drug traffic through Bulgaria occurs with the toleration and perhaps active cooperation of the communist regime.

Debt summit slated

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — The seven Latin American nations that account for 80 percent of the Western Hemisphere's staggering foreign debt have scheduled an economic conference in an attempt to resolve the debt problem.

Without waiting for the results of the London economic summit, Brazil, Mexico, Argentina, Colombia, Venezuela, Peru and Ecuador agreed Thursday to meet June 21-22 at the Colombian resort of Cartagena to discuss the hemisphere's $350 billion debt.

The Colombian Foreign Ministry, announcing the meeting of foreign and finance ministers, said other Latin American nations struggling to renegotiate foreign debts also were expected to attend the June conference.

Sakharov 'all right'

LONDON (AP) — The Soviets have officially told the United States that Andrei Sakharov, the human rights activist in internal exile, is all right, a Reagan administration official says.

Friends of Sakharov have reported that his health is failing in Gorky, an industrial city which is closed to foreigners. They claim that Sakharov, a nuclear physicist who won the Nobel Peace Prize in 1975, is in the sixth week of a hunger strike aimed at forcing the Kremlin to let his wife get medical treatment abroad.

The Soviet news agency Tass denied Monday that he is fasting. Tass has also vigorously denied reports that Sakharov, 63, had died. But Soviets have produced no evidence that he is alive.

Spaniard blamed

SAN JOSE, Costa Rica (AP) — The bomb that exploded at a Nicaraguan rebel news conference May 30 probably was a "military-type mine" and was set off by a man believed to be a Spaniard, Costa Rican officials say.

The death toll from the blast rose to four Thursday night when Evelio Sequeira, 43, a driver and assistant cameraman for Channel 6 television in San Jose, died of his injuries.

Three people died earlier from wounds received in the explosion, which occurred at a news conference held by rebel leader Eden Pastora in southern Nicaragua. Pastora was among 27 people injured.

Costa Rican authorities confirmed Thursday that their prime suspect in the bombing was a man who claimed to be a Danish journalist and carried a stolen Danish passport, but spoke good Spanish and poor Danish.

Gators drop Cubs again, 7-6

BY TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

Midland's 7-6 loss to Beaumont Thursday was every bit as spectacular as the Cubs 6-5 win Wednesday night on that pinch single in the ninth.

"He really tagged him," said Beaumont Manager Bobby Tolan of the game-ending double play that saw Ricky Baker out at the plate as he tagged up and tried to score after a fly ball. "It was no phantom tag."

"Some of the umpires in this league make every game exciting," Tolan, who had many long and thoughtful debates with J.B. Hance and Sean Kimble during the series, said. Bobby apparently was trying to get the pair straightened out for what's ahead. Tolan, who went 0-for-the-series in arguments-won with the umps, apparently wasn't too confident of his progress.

Although his Gators beat the Midland Cubs four games to two in the concluded Texas League series, Tolan was looking ahead. "We've got the same guys for the next 18 games," Tolan groaned, which means many three hour-plus games ahead.

Rightfielder Mark Gillaspie, who usually torments the Cubs with his bat, saved the game for Beaumont with his defense in the ninth as the Gators protected a precarious one-run lead just as it seemed Midland would force, at worst, extra innings.

Walks to Ricky Baker and Mike Brumley gave Midland hope and Tim Cook, who came out of the bullpen to start the ninth, a quick shower. Pete Kutsukos gave up a fly down the right field line and Gillaspie made a spectacular one handed diving, sliding catch.

"Had it all the way," Gillaspie said later.

However, Baker move to third after the catch. It looked like a tie for sure when Shawon Dunston drove a liner to right. Gillaspie made the catch, but Baker, the fastest of the Cubs, tagged up. Catcher Mark Parent took the throw and tagged Baker as he flashed by standing up.

"It was a liner, so I could get behind it, but I had to get rid of it fast to have a chance at Baker. I saw they were motioning him to slide," said Gillaspie.

"It might have been that Parent had the plate blocked and he couldn't slide or maybe he thought he had it made," Tolan theorized.

The double play ended the game.

Tolan has been substituting for Gillaspie in the late innings, but he had already used replacement Steve Murray as a pinch hitter in catching up. "I had no moves. Garcia hasn't played the entire series and Thomas isn't even here. He went home to have an injury checked. So I had no choice."

When you're winning, everything turns out right.

MIDLAND took a 6-5 lead into the ninth, but the Gators took advantage of an error to score two runs off loser Jeff Moscaret before Mike Capel got the third out.

Third baseman Tony Woods, playing his first game since suffering a broken wrist in the season's opener, made the costly error on what appeared to be a ready-made double play ball.

"Woods lobbed the throw to second," Nolan said. "That's what happens when you've been out that long sometimes. You try to be too careful. But better now than later."

Tolan saw enough in the series to predict, "In the second half, Midland will be a factor. Midland has a good offense. They've got to come up with more pitching. As long as George (Enright) keeps them hustling like they are, they'll be all right."

IT WAS one of those 15-14 nights, the way the wind was gusting toward center and then left, so the 7-6 score was a bit of a surprise.

Heading for the showdown ninth, James Steels and Mark Parent homered for Beaumont and first baseman Jeff Jones knocked in four of Midland's runs with a homer and double. He also was cut down twice trying for an extra base, aggressive base running if you win, a grevious error if you lose.

Jones was thrown out at the plate in the eighth by left fielder Steels as he tried to score on a Don Hyman single. It was a good gamble, but Steels' throw was perfect. It was a run Midland needed.

Steve Johnson doubled to plate the tying run and then after Al Newman was walked purposely, to set up the double play, Gillaspie beat out an infield hit short to get the winning run in.

The Cubs travel to San Antonio for six games before returning home for six against El Paso as the first half Texas League race winds to a close. For Enright, the time could be used for spring training, to get Woods back in playing condition, overcome some of those nagging injuries that continue to plague the club. However, the best tonic would be to reduce the walks, which have been predictably followed by game-costing errors.

Teammates square off in WWT

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

Today's finale of the 49th annual Women's West Texas golf championship at Green Tree Country Club will certainly not be a new rendition of "Strangers in the Night." It will probably be a new tune called "Haven't I Seen You Before."

Ann Coombes and Kelle Mobley know each other so well that they could probably write each other's diary. The two not only make Midland home, but they both compete on the same college golf team at New Mexico State and played high school golf together.

Coombes is a senior at NMS while Mobley is a sophomore. The only way this championship batttle could be any more of an "Old Home Week" is if Midlander Janice Littlefield were allowed to join this final round. Littlefield is also a teammate at NMS, but she isn't playing in this edition of the WWT.

TO SAY that this twosome has played a few rounds together is "putting it mildly," according to Coombes.

"Yes, we've played a few times. I've beaten her some and she's beaten me," said Mobley.

"I don't think you could say there is a favorite. You want to flip a coin?" asked Coombes.

The two took different paths to this morning's championship round that was scheduled to tee off at 10:45 a.m.

Coombes won a relative easy 5-4 match against Farwell's Penny Hughes, the 1982 WWT champion. Mobley took a 3-2 match from Odessa's Nancy Swann, completing a sweep of the Odessa family. Wednesday, Mobley defeated Swann's daughter, Judy Bates, by the same margin.

However, neither was overly pleased with Thursday's semifinal round.

"My putting is terrible," said Mobley. "I just hope I can do something about that in the final round. I also hope the wind is calmer. Some of the holes played a lot longer with the wind Thursday."

COOMBES HAD another problem. "I hope I never see any more tall grass. My driving is awful," she noted.

Sounds like some pre-final hype because it's certain that these two will see nothing new from each other.

Both have their share of past honors and either one would appear to be a worthy WWT champion.

Coombes won District 4-5A medalist honors in both 1980 and 1981. She also placed second in the state golf meet in 1981 before heading to Midland College where she was an All-American in her freshman year as the Chaps won a national golf championship.

That was the last year MC fielded a girls golf team, but things worked out for Coombes, who lost her last year at MC because of the decision to drop girls golf.

"I was really upset about Midland College dropping golf at first because I didn't have any place to go," said Coombes. "Then I got a chance to be in on the ground floor at New Mexico State and everything worked out fine. Now we have practically moved Midland High over to New Mexico State."

Mobley was 4-5A runnerup in 1982 and won medalist honors in 1983 in addition to winning Region I medalist honors and placing eighth in the state meet.

"I've really enjoyed playing golf at New Mexico State," said Mobley. "This is a different type of golf than team golf. I'm not sure if the best golfer always wins in a situation like this because you're playing to win a hole instead trying to shoot a good score."

Coombes added, "We're always trying to beat each other, but this is a lot different. In college, we are trying to shoot for the team and good rounds help in that regard. We never see this type of competition in college golf.

The championship consolation should also be a good match between Farwell's Carol Snider and Midland's Juanita Jones. Snider, who lost to Coombes in the first round, is considering turning professional. Later this summer she will try to enter the LPGA school by qualifying in Wichita, Kan. Jones is a veteran golfer on the West Texas amateur circuit.

Perez snows Dodgers

National League

By The Associated Press

Manager Joe Torre held a team meeting with his Atlanta Braves before the game and was smiling afterward.

Manager Tom Lasorda held a team meeting with his Los Angeles Dodgers after the game and was still growling.

Guess who won?

Pascual Perez continued his flashy magic on the mound and Chris Chambliss swung a mean bat Thursday night as the Braves beat the Dodgers 8-1 for their ninth straight victory — all on the road.

Torre said his pre-game meeting was to remind the Braves "that they hadn't won a lot of games" in Los Angeles.

Last year, Atlanta was 3-6 in Dodger Stadium. The year before, the record was 4-5 there.

The pep talk may or may not have helped, but the Braves started quickly, scoring twice in the first inning and twice more in the second against rookie Orel Hershiser, 2-2.

Chambliss homered, doubled and singled and drove in four runs to highlight a 13-hit attack.

The Braves' winning streak on the road is their longest since moving to Atlanta in 1966; the all-time franchise record is 11 by the 1956 Milwaukee Braves.

Even more surprising is that part of the current streak has come without Bob Horner and Claudell Washington, each offensive leaders prior to their recent injuries.

"The other guys are the ones who have been doing it," Torre said. "Gerald Perry, Rafael Ramirez and Glenn Hubbard. These guys have been overshadowed.

"Everyone wants to know about Dale Murphy and Bob Horner. These other guys, it seems, are forgotten about. Maybe that's just as well because they don't have all the pressure."

Perry and Ramirez each contributed three hits in the Braves' victory.

"There was nothing about this game that pleased me," Lasorda said. "I just wanted to talk to the players about it."

Perez scattered seven Dodger hits while striking out eight and walking only one. The right-hander is now 6-1 since being reinstated after his drug conviction.

"In Atlanta, the papers there say I'm a good luck charm," he said. "maybe that's true."

Sox outslug Angels

American League

By The Associated Press

The Chicago White Sox got off the roller coaster with a victory that moved them to within a game of .500, but nobody seemed to enjoy the ride.

"I felt good about winning but that was hard work," said Manager Tony LaRussa, whose White Sox outlasted the California Angels 11-10 at Comiskey Park on Thursday night.

"We'll take 'em whatever way we can get 'em," said Harold Baines, whose two three-run homers helped bring the White Sox back from a seven-run deficit to a four-run lead — a lead they nearly lost.

Fred Lynn smacked two homers for California, the second bringing the Angels back to within one run in the eighth inning.

"We swung the bats pretty well but so did they and they had their big shots with men on base," said Lynn. His second clout was the last of six homers on a night when eight pitchers surrendered 25 hits.

The White Sox used five pitchers, three in the eighth. Ron Reed left with two outs and runners on first and third and the score 11-7. LaRussa summoned Juan Agosto, who promptly gave up a three-run homer to Lynn. Al Jones was quick to follow and he got the final four outs for his fourth save of the season.

Lakers-Celts meet in key game

NBA Finals

BOSTON (AP) — The Los Angeles Lakers, feeling they were mugged on their home court, expect no less from the Celtics with the National Basketball Association Championship Series back in Boston.

"Maybe that is their type of game," said Laker center Swen Nater. "I'm sure we'll see more of that in Boston. There's no doubt it will be a war," when the deadlocked series resumes tonight with Game 5.

Wednesday night in the Forum, the Celtics found the winning tactics — hit their shots, the offensive boards and the Lakers — to cool Los Angeles' blazing fastbreak, and gain a 129-125 overtime victory.

Both Boston victories in the best-of-seven series have been in overtime.

"Some of the fouls were a little brutal, but that was the way we had to play," said Boston forward Cedric Maxwell. "We had lounged around in the sun (in Los Angeles) and we just became too relaxed, too laid back, too Hollywood. I said before that we'd be tougher, more aggressive, and that we'd win the game and the series."

Midway through the third quarter, Kevin McHale stopped a Laker fastbreak with an arm to the neck of Kurt Rambis, who went sprawling as both benches emptied.

"I tried to grab him," McHale said. "I didn't mean to body-slam him. There are other guys on that team I'd like to body-slam but not him. He came up swinging, rightfully so. I just backed off."

About a minute after that incident, Boston's Larry Bird fouled Kareem Abdul-Jabbar while they battled for a rebound. Bird was hit by Abdul-Jabbar's elbow and they traded heated remarks.

Bird, who had 29 points and 21 rebounds, also backed Los Angeles' Michael Cooper into a row of photographers as the Celtic tried to put the ball into play.

"Boston's whole strategy," said Laker James Worthy, "was to throw us off our game by turning it into a rumble-tumble contest ... It affected our concentration."

"We wanted to be physical," said McHale. "We wanted to play good, hard-nosed basketball. This was more our type of game. We really banged the boards."

After being out-rebounded 63-44 Sunday in a 137-104 rout that gave the Lakers a 2-1 advantage, and prompted Bird to call his team sissies, Boston enjoyed a 52-46 edge in that category Wednesday night.

Their 27-12 bulge in offensive rebounds was even more pronounced and helped the Celtics take 26 more field-goal attempts than the Lakers.

Perhaps the most important offensive rebound of the game was by Robert Parish, the center who had been criticized for his subpar play in the championship series.

Trailing 113-108 in the final minute, he followed up Dennis Johnson's miss and missed himself. But he fought off a group of Lakers to get the rebound, score and draw the foul.

His three-point play cut the lead to 113-111 with 39 seconds left in the fourth quarter and set the stage for Bird's game-tying free throws with 16 seconds remaining.

"That was a great play," Maxwell said of Parish's tenacity. "With all the negative stuff going on around him, that just shows you the kind of player he is."

Laker Coach Pat Riley said the play "gave them a life."

Parish also stole a pass with six seconds left in regulation play to keep Los Angeles from a possible tie-breaking play. In overtime, another target of critics for his poor play in Game 3, Johnson, got eight of Boston's 16 points.

Monterey falls in state playoffs

AUSTIN (AP) — Jimmy Pogue was sick when he stepped off the chartered plane that brought the DeSoto Eagles to Austin for the Texas high school state baseball tournament.

But the junior third baseman checked into a clinic, received an intravenous solution for his 24-hour intestinal virus, and was able to start in his team's Class 4A semifinal game Thursday against New Braunfels Canyon.

Pogue, not known as a power hitter, slugged a 350-foot, two-run homer over the left field fence in the second inning to lead the Eagles to a 4-0 victory, earning DeSoto a spot in today's 5 p.m. 4A championship game against Austin Westlake, a 12-2 victor over Everman Thursday.

"He's hit two or three home runs, but nothing like that one. I wouldn't want to go pay cabfare to go get that one," DeSoto coach Benny Jones said.

Pogue played five innings before retiring, but Jones said he expected Pogue to be ready to play today.

Other state title games today at Disch-Falk Field on the University of Texas campus paired Prosper and Runge at 8:30 a.m. in Class A, Ore City and Dripping Springs at 10:30 a.m. in Class 2A, Odem and Lake Worth at 1:30 p.m. in Class 3A, and Cypress-Fairbanks and Brazoswood at 7:30 p.m. in Class 5A.

Prosper defeated Lingleville 12-2 as first baseman Derek Stansel set a Class A record with four hits in four at-bats, including three RBI's and a record-tying two doubles. Runge won its spot in the finals by beating Apple Springs 4-3.

Ore City advanced to the 2A championship game by beating Frisco 4-2, while Dripping Springs defeated Huntington 7-2.

In 3A semifinal matches, Odem won its berth by beating Linden-Kildare 6-4 and Lake Worth by beating Lufkin Hudson 5-1.

Cypress-Fairbanks outlasted Lubbock Monterey 1-0, and Brazoswood defeated Pearland 7-2 in the Class 5A semifinal contests, with strikeouts a key weapon for both winning pitchers.

Cy-Fair pitcher Gary Robertson allowed Monterey only two hits, striking out nine Plainsmen en route to his 14th victory in as many decisions and running his strikeout total for the year to 137 in 105 innings. The senior righthander struck out the side in the fourth and sixth innings.

Bobcat shortstop Greg Williams scored the game's only run in the sixth inning, when he raced home from third on Brian Osterhaus' sacrifice fly.

Brazoswood pitcher Kevin Garner, 11-1, struck out eight Pearland batters, including the final three for the 7-2 win.

Brazoswood trailed 2-1 after five innings, but pushed across four runs in the sixth with the help of a costly Pearland miscue.

After loading the bases with one out, the Bucs scored two runs when Pearland third baseman Roy Sanchez threw into right field while trying to get a runner at second base. When outfielder Virgil Mikeska overran the ball, still another run scored.

Austin Westlake lefthander David Brown, 12-4, had a no-hitter going for 4 1-3 innings and settled for a two-hitter against Everman, which was losing for only the second time in 30 games. Everman hurt its own cause with seven errors.

Westlake scored three runs in the first on a walk and singles by Steve Bethea, Trent Stroth, David Gruber and Steve Spear.

Reds 12, Padres 1

Eric Show retired the first two Cincinnati batters before running into big trouble in San Diego.

With two outs, Duane Walker singled and Dave Parker followed with his third home run of the season. Then Wayne Krenchicki walked and Nick Esasky hit his fourth home run. Then, Show walked Brad Gulden and Tom Foley belted his second homer.

Show, 7-4, left the game after the first inning as the Padres saw their six-game winning streak come to an end.

The Reds, who finished with 16 hits, tacked on five runs in the eighth, keyed by Gulden's bases-loaded triple.

Bruce Berenyi, 3-6, got the victory and Keefe Cato, recalled from Class AAA on Sunday, allowed one hit in the final 4 2-3 innings for his first save.

Expos 2, Cubs 1

Gary Carter says he's been working extra hard on hitting breaking pitches. That work paid off against Dennis Eckersley and visiting Chicago.

Carter drilled a solo home run off an Eckersley breaking ball to snap a 1-1 in the sixth inning to lead Montreal. Eckersley, 0-2, had allowed just four hits before Carter's 10th home run of the season.

Charlie Lea, 10-2, did not allow an earned run in his complete-game victory, although he yielded 10 hits. Lea has surrendered just three earned runs in his last 35 innings.

Lea is tied with Joaquin Andujar of St. Louis for the league lead in victories.

Astros 14, Giants 5

Things continue to get worse for San Francisco, which dropped its seventh straight game, as Houston unleashed a season-high 16-hit attack.

Jerry Mumphrey and Craig Reynolds each homered and drove in three runs while Terry Puhl had four hits for the visiting Astros.

Doubles by Bill Doran and Jose Cruz and Mumphrey's two-run homer got Houston rolling in the first inning against Bill Laskey, 2-4.

Two errors by Giant first baseman Al Oliver paved the way for two unearned runs in the second.

Joel Youngblood and Brad Wellman homered for San Francisco off Joe Niekro, 4-7.

Slapstick comedies on decline

NEW YORK (AP) — Television comedy isn't dead. It's just found in different places: the blooper-and-blunder programs, the lively banter on action-adventure shows, and the homes and taverns of today's modern comedy characters.

The statistics are there to suggest that the old style, mass-appeal, slapstick comedies are in serious decline.

This past season, for the first time, no comedy finished in Mr. Nielsen's Top 10. By comparison, just five seasons ago, when "Laverne and Shirley," "Three's Company" and "Mork and Mindy" were the three highest rated series, nine of the top 10 shows and 15 of the first 20 were comedies.

For the 1983-84 season, comedies averaged a 15.5 rating (percentage of all TV homes), which was almost a million fewer homes than the 16.5 rating for all regular series. In all, 39 comedies were on the three networks as regular series and replacements. Only 14 will return, along with seven new comedies.

But in today's world, you get your chuckles wherever you can, and the networks think they've found new sources, particularly at 8 o'clock, when children and teen-agers have control of the sets.

While kids used to watch physical sitcoms, such as "Mork and Mindy" and "Laverne and Shirley," it's obvious they're now looking for more. Today's sitcoms are "very slow-moving," said Brandon Tartikoff, president of NBC Entertainment.

On "Magnum, P.I." and "The A-Team," viewers can get comedy from Tom Selleck and Mr. T along with heavy doses of dramatic spills and thrills. After flocking to the movie theaters for "Indiana Jones," someone tripping over a chair on TV would seem a tad tame.

Kids and adult males are most taken by action-adventure programming. Top-10 programs for males 18-49 last season included these 8 o'clock shows: "The A-Team" (No. 1), "Hardcastle & McCormick" (No. 5), "Magnum, P.I." (No. 8) and "Knight Rider" (No. 9).

The pratfalls and humiliations of physical sitcoms have been replaced by shows celebrating embarrassing moments, mistakes and practical jokes. "TV's Bloopers and Practical Jokes" and "Foul-Ups, Bleeps and Blunders," both successful as mid-season replacements, will be regular starters in 1984-85.

"As long as people keep making mistakes, we'll be in business," said comedian Robert Klein, a regular on "Bloopers."

The importance of the 8 p.m. leadoff show is that it sets up winning nights. For example, NBC's only victory last season was triggered by "The A-Team" on Tuesdays.

By and large, grand slams are not a great investment. Unless you are pretty sure you are going to make it, you lose the small slam and game bonuses as well if you go down at a seven-bid because of a bad break or some slight miscalculation.

This one, however, was a superb grand slam, and was reached by several pairs in a tournament. Note North's jump shift and subsequent cue-bid in hearts. When North could leap to a small slam without knowing the quality of South's spade suit or that he had first-round control of clubs, South decided to venture the grand.

The opening lead at all tables was the queen of clubs. A few declarers ruffed, drew three rounds of trumps and then cashed the ace-king of hearts. When the queen did not drop, they continued with four rounds of diamonds, discarding a heart from dummy. Next came a heart ruff, but when the suit failed to break, declarer was left with a heart loser. Down one.

Declarer did reasonably well, but he had a far better line available — a dummy reversal. He should ruff the opening lead high, cash a high trump and enter dummy with a trump. Declarer ruffs another club and again gets back to dummy with a trump to ruff the last club. Now declarer crosses to the board with the ace of hearts or a diamond and clears trumps. He can get rid of dummy's losing heart on the fourth diamond.

What declarer has done is to treat dummy as the master hand. In all, he scores seven trump tricks — three by ruffing clubs — and four diamonds, as well as the ace-king of hearts.

Rain washes out half of French Open semi

PARIS (AP) — Defending champion Chris Evert Lloyd cruised into her seventh French Open tennis singles final on the rain-swept clay courts of Roland Garros Stadium Thursday, but it will be another day before she has an opponent.

Minutes after Lloyd's 6-0, 6-0 demolition of unseeded Camille Benjamin, the steady drizzle turned into a driving rain and washed out the second semifinal between top-seeded Martina Navratilova and No. 3 Hana Mandlikova, which was postponed until today.

The rain ensured that for the first time in several years, both the men and women would play the semis on the same day.

Navratilova's eagerly-awaited confrontation with Mandlikova — the only person to have beaten her this year — was scheduled to be the first on Center Court Friday, followed by Czechoslovakia's Ivan Lendl against Mats Wilander of Sweden, then the all-American duel between John McEnroe and Jimmy Connors.

The latter battle will give the United States its first finalist on these slow red clay courts since 1980, when Vitas Gerulaitis lost to Bjorn Borg of Sweden.

Lloyd, bidding for a record sixth women's singles title at the French Open — she is currently tied with five with Australia's Margaret Court Smith — hardly broke into a sweat as her 17-year-old opponent had a nightmare of a debut on Center Court.

French Open

Benjamin, who previously had never gotten beyond the third round of a Grand Slam tournament, eliminated No. 13 seed Lisa Bonder on her way to the semis, but could not find the same inspiration when she faced Lloyd. Whatever she tried failed, and all Lloyd had to do was stay back and return the ball, letting Benjamin make all the errors.

"I didn't do anything right. I could not have played much worse," a dejected Benjamin said afterwards. "Chris didn't make many mistakes, and when you play Chris, you can't make the kind of unforced errors I made."

The straight-A high school student from Bakersfield, Calif., constantly missed the lines or netted the ball, winning only 16 points in the one-sided, 39-minute match.

Three times Lloyd, the defending title-holder, was stretched to three sets on her way to the semis, prompting her to say: "They certainly have helped my preparation. But if I'd had another one today, it would have put doubts in my mind about my form."

Lloyd has won a record 51 singles matches at Roland Garros, two more than the mark set by Borg in June 1981 when he won his sixth French Open crown.

Before this year, the previous record by a woman was 49 by Margaret Smith.

Asked who she expected to face her in Saturday's women's final, Lloyd said:

"I definitely give Hana a chance. She has the game and the equipment, and if she is inspired, she will give Martina a tough match."

But Navratilova's incentive of winning the Grand Slam — consecutive Wimbledon, U.S., Australian and French titles — was likely to swing in her favor, Lloyd said.

And, if she completes the feat, Navratilova will join an elite band of four Grand Slam winners — Don Budge, Rod Laver (twice), Maureen Connolly and Margaret Court Smith.

"If I play Martina, I would not play just to stop her winning the Slam," Lloyd said. "I need a big win right now."

Whitakers chase Olympic dream

FORT WORTH (AP) — Pernell Whitaker, a world champion, knocked down Clifford Gray three times and stopped him in the third round of a 132-pound match Thursday night in the quarterfinals of the U.S. Olympic Boxing Trials.

It was the third straight victory for Whitaker, of Norfolk, Va., over Gray, of Boynton, Beach, Fla., whose brother Bernard will participate in the 125-pound class Friday night at the Tarrant County Convention Center.

Whitaker scored 3-2 and 4-1 decisions over Gray in the Pan American Games Trials and Box-off last year. Whitaker is a Pan Am champion.

Thursday night, Whitaker dominated. The left-handed champion knocked down Gray with a left to the head in the second round. In the third, Whitaker scored a knockdown with a left to the side of the head. Then he knocked down Gray with a right to the head and left to the stomach, and the referee stopped the bout at 2:04.

"He's a good fighter," said Whitaker. "I knew it was going to be hard, and I trained extra hard. This is my Olympics."

Gray will fight in the semifinals Saturday night against Anthony Haskins of the U.S. Army, the last man to beat Gray, on a decision in 1982.

Haskins scored a 4-1 decision over a much shorter Marvin Chambers.

Steve McCrory, a former world champion, advanced in the 112-pound class with a 5-0 decision over Les Fabri, the 1984 National Golden Gloves champion from Detroit.

McCrory, who lost the world title when stopped in the second round by Pedro Reyes of Cuba last April 13, had too much poise and accuracy for Fabri. But Fabri did shake McCrory when he caught him coming in with a right-left to the head in the second round.

"I have a lot of short-term goals," said McCrory, who is the younger brother of Milton McCrory, the World Boxing Council welterweight champion.

"Right now I just want to win here at the U.S. Olympic Boxing Trials, and then I want to win the 1984 Olympic Gold medal. Then I plan to go professional. I have God-given boxing ability, and I have got to use it."

Longhorns remain only CWS unbeaten in 8-4 win

OMAHA (AP) — First baseman Rusty Richards rapped four of Texas's 15 singles and Greg Swindell pitched a complete game as the Longhorns beat Arizona State 8-4 in their College World Series game Thursday night.

The defending national champions, 60-12, collected 16 hits against five Sun Devil pitchers in the contest, which pitted the series' only two remaining unbeaten teams.

Swindell, a freshman left-hander, was touched for 10 hits but went the distance to improve his record to 14-1. Swindell struck out six, walked one and didn't allow a run in the final five innings.

A crowd of 12,469 watched Texas take the lead for good when its first four batters in the fifth inning scored. David Wrzesinski's two-run double off the left-field wall put the Longhorns ahead 5-4. Bill Bates and Doug Hodo followed with RBI singles.

Jose Rodiles, the third pitcher in the inning, then entered with the bases loaded and ended the uprising with two strikeouts and a groundout.

The Sun Devils scored a pair of early runs, but three singles in the second inning resulted in a run for Texas as Jamie Doughty's RBI single knocked out Arizona State starter Mike Thorpe.

Dennis Cook's two-out RBI single in the third tied the score, 2-2.

Arizona State, 55-19, bunched four singles to score twice in the fourth. Oddiby McDowell drove in the second run with a two-out single.

Both teams will be in action again Friday. Arizona State will play Cal State Fullerton, 63-20, at 4:10 P.M., CDT. Texas will meet Oklahoma State, 60-14, at 7:10 P.M., CDT. All teams but Texas have one loss in the double elimination event.

Chicago starter Richard Dotson, who entered the game with a 7-3 record and a 2.49 earned run average, was ripped for seven runs in 2 2-3 innings as the Angels took a 7-0 lead. Two of the first three men he faced, Gary Pettis and Lynn, homered.

"Dotson picked up our club earlier (this season)," said LaRussa. "It was nice that we could pick him up tonight."

The White Sox, now 27-28, climbed to within 1½ games of the first-place Angels on the American League West.

Bert Roberge, 2-0, was the winner for Chicago in relief of Dotson. Tommy John, 3-4, took the loss.

Dave Stegman opened the Chicago third with a single and scored on singles by Julio Cruz and Jerry Dybzinski. After a double steal, Greg Luzinski singled in two more runs and Ron Kittle also singled before Baines' first homer cut the California lead to 7-6.

Tom Paciorek singled with one out in the fifth and, with a 2-0 count on Luzinski, Frank LaCorte replaced John and completed the walk. Kittle popped out but Baines followed with his second homer to make the score 9-7.

Paciorek and Kittle hit the game's other two homers in the seventh inning to give the White Sox their 11-7 lead.

"You have to put this kind of a game out of your mind," said California Manager John McNamara.

Twins 5, Rangers 4

Kent Hrbek's seventh-inning single drove in Tim Teufel with the tie-breaking run and capped a two-run Minnesota rally in the Metrodome.

With the Twins trailing 4-3, Kirby Puckett singled with one out in the seventh and scored the tying run on Teufel's double. Hrbek then singled home Teufel.

Ron Davis worked the final three innings to raise his record to 3-4 despite allowing three baserunners to score after starter Ken Schrom loaded the bases. Davis struck out Billy Sample, but Mickey Rivers singled in two runs and Buddy Bell hit a sacrifice fly to send Texas ahead 4-3.

Sample led off the game with his second homer of the year to give the Rangers a 1-0 lead.

Tigers 5, Blue Jays 3

In Detroit, Ruppert Jones, recalled only two days earlier from the minor leagues, keyed a four-run Detroit sixth inning with a three-run homer and Jack Morris pitched a seven-hitter as Tigers gained a split of their four-game series with Toronto.

Morris, who walked one and struck out four, improved his major league-leading record to 11-2. It was Morris' eighth complete game, tying him with Boston's Bruce Hurst for the league lead.

Lance Parrish started the Detroit sixth with a single, Darrell Evans walked, and both rode home when Jones hit a 1-0 pitch from Jim Clancy into the upper deck in right field. Howard Johnson singled, stole second and scored on a single by Lou Whitaker, chasing Clancy, 4-6.

The victory improved Detroit's record to 40-13, best in the majors, and enabled the Tigers to move 4½ games ahead of Toronto in the AL East.

Brewers 6, Red Sox 3

The Brewers unleashed a 19-hit attack and emergency starter Bob McClure allowed only one unearned run and five hits in six innings in Milwaukee.

Robin Yount, Cecil Cooper, Ben Oglivie and Ted Simmons had three hits apiece for the Brewers, who were swept by Boston in a three-game series in Milwaukee last weekend.

Mike Easler drove in all three Boston runs, two with his ninth home run of the season, a two-run shot off reliever Pete Ladd in the eighth.

Rollie Fingers worked the ninth to pick up his 10th save.

Royals 9, Mariners 8

In Kansas City, Frank White clubbed a three-run homer in the seventh inning and the Royals rallied from a seven-run deficit, scoring five in the fifth and four in the seventh.

And the band played on...

Battling the elements isn't usually part of a musician's job, but for bassist Matt Neithamer, far right photo, and other members of the West Texas Youth Orchestra, Thursday's high winds turned their outdoor performance at RepublicBank First National Plaza into an impromptu Wagnerian opera, with the forces of nature pitted against the resourcefulness of the orchestra. Much of the sound was drowned out by the wind, but violinist Billy Prescott, above, and his fellow musicians played on, inspired perhaps by that band on the Titanic which kept playing even while the ship was going down. With their music held in place by clothespins, right, and their music stands secured by friends, the orchestra members leaned into the wind and continued their performance.

Midlanders voice concerns over Lancaster House

By GEORGIA TEMPLE
Entertainment Writer

Jody Gilles stood under the shadow of a tree at Haley Park Thursday night. He was addressing a loosely organized group of about 100 concerned citizens who were responding to a call to "save the Lancaster House."

A longtime Midland resident, Naomi Lancaster was instrumental in helping establish Midland Community Theatre, the Midland-Odessa Symphony & Chorale, Midland Arts Association and the Museum of the Southwest. Her home, built in 1938, and property were given to the Museum of the Southwest in 1970.

But the museum board has scheduled demolition of the home to begin June 15.

Members of the museum were notified of this decision by the museum's board of trustees in a letter mailed to the membership May 25. The public announcement came last week.

Gillis was looking directly at Lancaster House as he spoke.

"We're merely asking for time in which we can do something; we as members of the community, be it members of the neighborhood directly around the museum, or members of the community of Midland itself. Some of us were not aware that the problem was at this stage of a crisis.

"I know the board has wrestled with it for a considerable length of time, and I think we're here to offer our help...to determine a feasible alternative that lets the Lancaster House be not only a part of our immediate neighborhood but the museum complex and of benefit to the city as a whole."

At least seven members of the board of trustees of the Museum of the Southwest as well as the museum director, Jerry Porter, were present.

The open forum lasted a little more than an hour and consisted largely of board members answering questions directed at them by the crowd.

Most questions centered around three subjects: the museum's lack of maintenance of Lancaster House; the feasibility of utilizing Lancaster House as part of the museum complex; and the short notice regarding the board's decision to tear down the house.

A limited amount of money which could be spent on Lancaster House was given as the reason for the lack of maintenance. The Lancaster House and property have no endowment fund to provide the money necessary to maintain them.

Three outside consultants have reported that restoring the Lancaster House to its original condition would run about $350,000, board members said, and to make it workable for museum facilities could cost $700,000.

One board member said, "If we spend the $500,000 on the house, we still have the same thing we have in preserving the Turner House — small rooms, low ceilings."

Several board members pointed out that until the museum has the proper facilities — buildings with high (12 foot) ceilings, large rooms and properly built-in security measures — the museum will not be able to display certain major exhibits.

Although the people in the crowd listened to the explanations, they weren't swayed from their singular plea, stated again and again — "Let us have some time."

Board member Michael Collins replied, "Bring a request to the board for an extension of time. We meet next Wednesday as a board. We as individuals cannot make that decision, but we could certainly hear a request and deliberate as an entire board next Wednesday. I see no reason why that wouldn't be done. I'm speaking as an individual now. I cannot speak for the board."

Midland needs list of minority businesses

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

Minorities and women who own businesses are being sought by city officials because of what they do. The city of Midland needs them to compile a list, which is required by the Department of Transportation.

Assistant City Manager Mike McGregor said the city needs the list so these businesses can be contacted when the city is seeking bids on construction, supplies and services. The list fulfills a requirement for the Minority Business Enterprise Program. It will be given to all general contractors, who can contact these businesses for subcontract work.

The city operates MidTran, a public transportation system that receives an operating subsidy from the Urban Mass Transportation Administration, a division of DOT, said McGregor. One requirement to continue receiving funding is the compilation of a list of businesses owned by minorities and women. Under the rule, disadvantaged businesses must get 10 percent and women-owned businesses 2 percent of the contract amount in the bids.

"What we're looking for is someone who can bid on fuel, oil and lubricants for the buses," said McGregor. They also need office supply companies and janitorial supply firms.

The city started trying to put together its list in February. But to date only 14 firms are in the book.

"We contacted the Texas Economic Development Commission for a directory of minority business enterprises in this area," he said. "But a lot are not in the type of business where we can purchase things for MidTran."

City's sales tax rebates increase over 1983 figures

From Staff Reports

Midland's sales tax rebate check for sales made during April was written for a larger amount than a year ago.

Midland's payment, received this month, was for $503,131.41, compared to $376,579.41 in 1983. For the calendar year to date, Midland has reported a 5.93 percent increase in the sales tax rebate with $3,870,540.94. Last year the figure was $3,653,927.29.

Odessa also recorded an increase in sales as its rebate check was written for $482,886.23, compared to $456,915.79 last year. However, the total for this calendar year still falls slightly short of last year — $3,660,164.45 over $3,726,659.96.

Midland's finance director Troy Gifford was out of the office today and unavailable for comment. He had explained previously that the monthly amounts should be slightly higher than last year simply due to a change in the reporting procedures to the State Comptroller's Office. Whereas some businesses were allowed to turn in the sales tax once every three months, they now are required to do it monthly.

The rebate reflects a one-cent tax collected on certain items each month along with the state's four-cent charge. The Legislature is considering raising that tax, and State Comptroller Bob Bullock also has noted numerous items which are exempted from the tax. "Right now, we're exempting from the sales tax about twice as much as we're collecting. We collect about $4 billion a year and exempt about another $7.6 billion more."

Odessa mayor forms cable TV task force

By LAWRENCE BUDD
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Mayor John Minor announced the formation of his second citizen task force Thursday afternoon, this one expected to focus on the much maligned cable television franchise operating in the city.

Community Cablevision of Odessa has been the object of considerable criticism from subscribers upset with the product provided by the firm. The company was called before the City Council in February to atone for what several council members called shoddy service.

Community Cablevision promised to provide better service at the February meeting. Since that time, the city's franchise has drawn little attention, and General Manager Terry Arnold, the parent company's troubleshooter, has left for other problem areas.

But Minor, following through with his campaign promise to encourage citizen input, has formed a task force to study the cable franchise.

"This group will have the specific charge of examining Odessa cable television service, measuring it against the service of other cable companies, hearing citizen suggestions and complaints, working with cable officials toward a better understanding by all parties of specific concerns and needs," said Minor in a press release.

Unlike his task force on crime and law enforcement, which has created considerable controversy and some bad feelings with the police department, this task force follows a trend in city government to form citizen boards to monitor the local franchises.

Engineer Gary Harris explains the proposed water-sewer project in Windowpane II in southeast Midland. The project was proposed after Midland County officials expressed concern about the sanitation in the area and the health and safety of the residents.

Proposed annexation stirs controversy

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

The proposed annexation of Windowpane II in southeast Midland set off a tug of war Thursday night. After annexation the city would install water and sewer services in that impoverished neighborhood

"I'm afraid they (the city) might condemn my wells and make me take the (city) water," said a concerned J.L. Pardue.

"I'm for it (the improvements)," he said. "However, I'm afraid they're going to try to make me do away with my wells. I'm for the sewer. I need it. I wouldn't kick against the sewer.

"Fact of the business," he said, "my water is better than the city's water...They have all that chlorine in it. Mine tastes better."

Pardue said the city had considered annexing the area in the 1950s but rejected the notion because of the lack of a substantial tax base.

Pardue, 66, was among the 33 people who showed up for a public hearing on the pros and cons of the proposed project.

Midland County is making application for $500,000 in federal funds through the Texas Department of Community Affairs.

The county is one of several governmental entities in a 17-county West Texas area seeking the federal grants. For that area, approximately $1.38 million is available but grant applications total $1.8 million, said Gary Harris, a professional engineer who is preparing Midland County's application for the funds.

"THERE'S MORE people asking for the money than there is money they'll give," he said. "There's nothing for sure; we've got a pretty good chance."

Further, Harris said even if the county gets the funding, "There's not enough money to get everybody water and sewer on this (west) side in the first go-around."

If the county gets the initial $500,000, next year it would apply for a second $500,000 grant to complete the water and sewer project. The area is bounded by Gist, Baird, Terrell and the unnamed block south of Longview.

The first phase of the 12-block project would take in that west six-block area extending to Fort Worth Street, which runs north and south in dividing the area into two six-block divisions.

If the grant is approved, construction of the water and sewer lines would not get under way until mid-1985, Harris said.

"Some of us want it; some of us don't want it," said Ray DeLeon, who hosted the public hearing in his home in the southwest corner of the neighborhood. He operates a salvage yard.

DeLeon said he was in favor of the project.

WHILE THE COUNTY is seeking the funding, the city of Midland is making a preliminary study on the annexation of the area, which would be platted prior to annexation.

"There's no intention of damaging anybody's property," Harris said of the platting process. "Nobody lost any property in the other (windowpane) area."

Bill Price, who has lived in the area more than 20 years, is opposed to the project and, particularly, to annexation by the city.

MINORITIES

Dan Truex, in the city planning department, said the city had placed ads in area newspapers, including publications for minorities.

The city is looking for a small business concern at least 51 percent owned by one or more socially and economically disadvantaged individuals. In the case of any publicly owned business, at least 51 percent of the stock must be owned by one or more socially and economically disadvantaged individuals. In addition, the management and daily business operations are controlled by one or more of the socially and economically disadvantaged individuals who own it.

The same rules apply to women who own or operate businesses, according to guidelines set up by the federal government.

Following these rules, the city of Lubbock compiled an extensive directory, said Truex, flipping through the pages of businesses ranging from nightclubs to attorneys. "They have a wide range of businesses here," he said.

"Any business that wants to be in the directory, we'll put them in there if they fit the guidelines. This is a continuing thing. We'll continue to update the directory," Truex said.

Business owners interested in finding out more about the directory may contact McGregor or Truex at City Hall, 683-4281.

Once the system of using the directory on bid items for MidTran is in place, the city is required to send an annual report to DOT outlining how closely Midland has followed DOT's goals, said Truex.

"It (taxes) will go up 40 percent more when the city gets it," said Price. He said he moved into the rural area because of its rustic setting and doesn't want to lose any country flavor he has developed on his acreage. He has his own water well and septic tank systems. Most people in the area use cesspools, which are illegal in Texas.

Augustine Bennett said he was upset with the city, which, he said, cut his daughter's water off after she failed to put in a concrete driveway on her mobile home lot.

"They shut the water off to my daughter," he complained. "Why did the city do that? My daughter, she cried."

Some others were concerned about losing their rights to own livestock — pigs, chickens, horses, cows — once the city annexes the area.

"I don't think they're allowed (by the city)," Harris said.

Coy Anthony, who supports the improvements to the neighborhood, said she has to import water into her mobile home, since she cannot afford to pay the cost of drilling a water well.

"It's a constant hassle one way or another," she said.

"SOME CAN afford it, and some can't," DeLeon said of digging water wells.

Price's wife, Joretta, suggested that Ms. Anthony should have ascertained if the property she now owns had a water well before she bought the property.

Price again expressed displeasure with the proposed program.

"I don't want it; I want to know how to stop you from doing it," he said.

"I don't think you can stop it," said DeLeon, who suggested he wanted water and sewer for his rent houses.

"I would say call your commissioner," said Jerrie Ann Westmoreland, coordinator of the three-year, $1.68 million Windowpane I project in south central Midland.

"That's a joke," said Price.

Said DeLeon: "We all want to be upgraded a little. Some can afford it; some can't."

This one differs in that Minor has picked the chairman and several of the members himself, while others around the state have been appointed by the City Council. Minor said he had not consulted other council members about the cable task force.

Police Chief Alan Stewart has called Minor's first task force a "head-hunting group for the most part." But the mayor said during the press conference that the cable task force, like his initial creation, was "intended to be in a very positive light."

The cable company's new general manager, Mike Brommer, was named as a member of the task force and attended the meeting.

Like the crime task force, the new group will present their final findings to the City Council, said Minor. The first group has been holding meetings closed to the media, but has scheduled town hall meetings to release its findings before reporting to the council.

Two teen-agers held in burglary attempt at school

From Staff Reports

Two teen-agers were jailed after being caught trying to burglarize the South Elementary School at 200 W. Dakota early this morning.

Police responding to an alarm at 2:18 a.m. said entry to the building had been gained through a bathroom window. The suspects are 16 and 17 years old. One is from San Angelo; the other gave a Garden City Highway address.

In burglary complaints to city police during the past 24 hours, Kurt Lauvstad, 2303 Siesta, said a $1,000 Smith & Wesson .357 caliber handgun was taken from a car parked in his garage sometime Tuesday. The garage had been left open, according to police.

And Bruce Moore, 215 Peach, told officers that furniture and a weight bench worth a total of $975 were stolen from a J-Bar self-storage unit at Andrews Highway and Loop 250 sometime in the past two weeks. A hasp had pried off the door to gain entry.

Arson is suspected in a fire that damaged the bathroom and hall of a vacant apartment at the Autumn Woods complex, 2438 Whitmire, about 8 p.m. Thursday.

Lighter fluid was used to start the blaze, according to firemen, who said the door to the apartment had been broken down prior to their arrival.

Another apartment door also was broken, but no fire occurred in that apartment. Firemen remained on the scene about an hour.

Midland schools could lose funds under proposal

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Midland County schools could lose more than $3.7 million in additional state funding under a school financing plan offered by two state senators, while a Texas Education Agency plan would provide the county with more than $2.9 million in new funds.

Senate Bill 4, filed by Sens. Ray Farabee, D-Wichita Falls, and Grant Jones, D-Abilene, would implement recommendations approved by the governor's Select Committee on Public Education.

Midland County Independent School District would lose $4,129,000 in additonal state revenue for education reforms if the measure is approved. Greenwood ISD would gain $378,900 in extra funds. TEA's proposal would provide $2,776,200 in new funds to MISD and $200,900 in new funds to GISD.

"These are both just proposals," said Craig Foster, executive director of the Equity Center, an Austin-based education group which supports the SCOPE plan engineered by Dallas businessman H. Ross Perot. "But they give you a good comparison to current law."

Gov. Mark White said Thursday he prefers the SCOPE plan over others he has seen.

Trailways to offer bus rides to runaways

DALLAS (AP) — Trailways will give free bus rides home to runaway children under "Operation: Home Free," a program established with the International Association of Police Chiefs, the police organization said.

Any child confirmed as a runaway by one of the IACP's 15,000 member departments will be given a free trip home by Trailways, Norman Darwick, IACP executive director, said Thursday.

Officers will escort the runaways to the terminals, he said.

Odessa police probe alleged attack

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — Police are continuing investigation of an alleged attempted capital murder in which a 64-year-old Odessa man was robbed and beaten Tuesday night.

Lewie Davis, 64, of Odessa, told police he had been at his home about 11:30 p.m., Tuesday when a man knocked at the front door, claiming to be his cousin and that he was having car trouble.

When Davis opened the door, the man struck him repeatedly in the face with a pistol, according to the report. Then two other men reportedly entered, one knocking Davis onto his bed; his hands and feet were then tied with coat hanger wire.

Odessa Police Lt. Rusty Baker said the offense had been changed to attempted capital murder because the report indicated the attackers had held a pillow over Davis' face and left it there when the victim quit struggling.

A color TV, toaster oven, watch, food and clothing were taken in the robbery. Police are looking for three black men in connection with the reported robbery and attack.

The report did not indicate Davis had been taken to a hospital after the attack and Medical Center Hospital in Odessa had no record of Davis being admitted Tuesday night.

Former client sues senator for damages

HOUSTON (AP) — A client has accused Sen. Craig Washington and his law associates with professional negligence and deceptive trade practices.

Anthony B. McCloud sued Washington and associates Sarnie A. Randle Jr., Melvin L. Lampley and Sidney J. Braquet in state court Thursday, charging the firm cost him an interest in his father's estate by failing to file the necessary papers .

Powder-keg bands made into cents

Some of the Early American coins, the Fugio cents, first minted in 1787, were made from copper salvaged from bands around powder kegs sent over from France.

On one side were 13 circles linked around the legend, "We are one." On the other were "Fugio" ("I fly"), a meridian sun, a sundial and the legend, "Mind your business." These cents are very valuable today.

White: Bentsen good candidate

AUSTIN (AP) — Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, would be a good Democratic vice presidential candidate, Gov. Mark White says, but adds that he wouldn't be interested in Bentsen's job should the senator be nominated and elected.

White, whose name has appeared on some lists of possible vice presidential candidates being considered by Democratic front-runner Walter Mondale, said Thursday he hasn't talked with the Mondale campaign about it.

"I have another candidate in mind. I think Sen. Bentsen would make a great vice president," White said.

Two Hispanics settle class-action suit over arrests

AMARILLO (AP) — Two Hispanics who say they were jailed because they couldn't prove their citizenship have settled a class-action suit with the Texas Department of Public Safety and Deaf Smith County.

The settlement requires the DPS to pay $8,000 in damages to plaintiff Pedro Cervantes and $2,000 to Juan Lozano, the other plaintiff.

The settlement also requires the DPS to pay $1,000 each to class members "subjected to improper immigration enforcement by the DPS."

U.S. District Judge Mary Lou Robinson, who approved settlement of the suit against Deaf Smith County on Monday, still must approve the agreement with the DPS.

The settlement provides that state and local officers may not arrest people on immigration charges nor may they attempt to enforce the immigration laws by questioning persons about their nationality, birthplace or right to be in the United States.

"The result is that persons of Hispanic descent, including U.S. citizens, are unlawfully arrested, detained and even jailed solely on the basis of their Hispanic appearance or their inability to speak English."

— Edward J. Tuddenham, Texas Rural Legal Aid attorney

Cervantez claimed in a January 1979 suit that he was arrested by DPS troopers in Hereford and charged with being an undocumented worker solely because he did not speak English and could not show officers a birth certificate.

Cervantez, who was turned over to Deaf Smith County authorities, was in custody for four days while his family tried to gain his release.

According to the suit, his family presented authorities a baptismal certificate, which under federal law constitutes proof of citizenship, but Deaf Smith County sheriff's deputies rejected it.

"The federal immigration laws are quite complex," said Edward J. Tuddenham, an attorney with the Texas Rural Legal Aid who represented the plaintiffs. "The basic problem has been that state and local police simply do not have the training and expertise to accurately determine who is an undocumented alien and who is not.

"The result is that persons of Hispanic descent, including U.S. citizens, are unlawfully arrested, detained and even jailed solely on the basis of their Hispanic appearance or their inability to speak English," he added.

But DPS spokesman David Wells said troopers who make a traffic or criminal arrest, and suspect the person might be an illegal alien, have the "option" of notifying the Immigration and Naturalization Service.

"This settlement does not make any change in the policy we've followed for the past several years," Wells said.

Also, Deaf Smith County and former Sheriff Travis McPherson have agreed to pay $11,000 in retroactive restitution to any Hispanic jailed because they were suspected of violating immigration laws, whether or not they were charged with any other traffic or criminal charge at the same time.

Persons qualifying for restitution will receive $500 for each day they were jailed.

Settlement terms require McPherson to pay the first $2,750 in claims and the county to pay the remaining $8,250. In addition, the county and McPherson also are responsible for paying $19,700 in legal fees.

Recount 'drawn-out process'

AUSTIN (AP) — Democratic Party officials across the state are recounting the votes from Saturday's runoff U.S. Senate primary, and aides to Lloyd Doggett and Kent Hance said the numbers were fluctuating but the outcomoe hadn't changed.

The recount requested in all 254 counties by Hance is "going to be a long, drawn-out process," said Doggett press secretary Rich Paul. "You pick up some here and you lose some there. It's really too early to tell."

Doggett won the Saturday run-off by just 467 votes, 489,927 to 489,460. Hance requested a recount in all 254 counties, and representatives of both were watching as that process was being carried out.

Camille Burger, director of primaries for the Texas Democratic Party, said most of the recounts would take place today and Saturday, and that the process should be completed by next week.

Hance, in an interview with the Lubbock Avalanche-Journal, said he would contest 238 votes reported in Duval County this week for Doggett, adding that 112 more Hance votes were found in South Texas.

Woman jogger gives 'nerd' big surprise

AUSTIN (AP) — A 5-foot-10 woman jogger gave chase when a 5-foot-8 man who she said looked "like a nerd" confronted her with a knife, authorities say.

"By chasing him, she was able to get a better description of him. I also believe she would have hurt him if she had caught him," said Curtis Weeks, spokesman for the Travis County sheriff's office.

Weeks said Thursday that the 29-year-old runner was jogging on a road west of Austin about 9:15 p.m. Wednesday when she noticed a parked black car which earlier had passed her several times.

A man was standing further down the road, Weeks said.

"She thought he had car trouble and started toward him. When she got to him, she saw he had a knife in his hand," he said.

Parents claim hospital refused to treat baby who choked to death

WALLISVILLE, Texas (AP) — The Chambers County sheriff's department is investigating a family's claim that a toddler choked to death on a navy bean after officials at Chambers Memorial Hospital demanded cash payment before treating the child.

The 14-month-old girl died Sunday en route to a Galveston hospital.

Sheriff C.E. Morris said his department still is gathering facts.

"Then we'll talk with the district attorney, who will decide whether to have a grand jury review," Morris said. "It's difficult to prove criminal negligence. Something like this may have to be settled in civil court."

A hospital administrator says the couple left "of their own free will" after talking with a nurse's aide.

The baby, Carrie Ann Banks, died on the way to John Sealy Hospital in Galveston. The girl's funeral was scheduled today in Wallisville.

"They did me dirty," said the child's father, Elva Banks, 65. "The nurse said we needed to have cash money, and I told her we didn't have enough. So she said, 'I'm sorry, but that's all we can do.'"

Hospital Administrator Dean Boebinger denied that the child, who was not examined by a nurse or a doctor, was refused treatment. He said the nurse's aide, Helen Heiman, was only stating the hospital policy.

"There was never a statement made that, 'If you don't pay, we won't treat you,'" Boebinger said.

Had a doctor determined it was an emergency, the child would have been treated immediately no matter what the family's financial status, Boebinger said.

Justice of the Peace John McAdams, who ordered an autopsy, said he was told by a medical examiner that the bean could have been in the girl's throat as long as a day and a half.

Moisture may have caused the bean to swell, blocking the throat, he said.

"He (the examiner) said if anybody would have even looked down her throat they would have seen it," McAdams said.

The child was playing with her 2-year-old brother Sunday when she suddenly ran out of the room, choking and gagging, Banks said. Banks said his daughter apparently found the bean in a drawer.

Banks said he rushed his daughter to Chambers Memorial, only a few miles away, where a nurse's aide told him nothing was wrong.

"She argued with me and told me the baby hadn't swallowed nothing. But there lay my baby, coughing and crying and sounding hoarse," he said.

"She said they couldn't do nothing for us. So we left," said the child's mother, Mary Frances Banks, 32.

White sticks to proposal to raise sales tax

AUSTIN (AP) — Although many lawmakers say they prefer something other than a one-cent general increase in the sales tax to fund education reform, Gov. Mark White is sticking to that proposal.

White said Thursday he believes raising the sales tax from four cents on the dollar to five cents is a better approach than taxing some services which now are exempt.

"I just say my plan is one that I believe to be acceptable on the standards of fairness," White said.

Some lawmakers say the current 4 percent sales tax should be extended to such services as legal fees, entertainment costs, recreation and industrial utilities rather than raising the current tax.

White said that might unfairly penalize some people.

"For those people who will have exemptions removed, it amounts to a 5 (percent), in some cases 6 percent increase in their taxes," he said.

White said he might be willing to compromise on his $4.8 billion, three-year tax increase plan, which includes a doubling of the 5-cent-per-gallon gasoline tax, plus increases in the motor vehicle sales tax and cigarette and liquor taxes.

"My proposal is one I think would be hopefully easiest for the Legislature to deal with and one that has the least impact on any individual, any business. I think there are alternatives, certainly. I'm not going to foreclose some other suggestions," the governor said.

However, White said, he won't bend on the principles he sees as mandatory for education reform.

"There should be no compromise on the principles that we're seeking," he said, although there may be "room for differences in achieving those goals."

White has proposed higher pay for teachers, competency testing for teachers and students, a lengthy list of other reforms and an appointed state board of education to oversee the changes.

Coach says activities add to education

AUSTIN (AP) — Almost all of the honor roll students at Brownwood High School participate in extracurricular activities, according to a longtime football coach who says the special programs enrich education.

"I think the problems with the schools is in other areas," said Gordon Wood, who has coached seven state champions in his 24 years at Brownwood.

Sports and other extracurricular activities have been a favorite target for H. Ross Perot, chairman of the Select Committee on Public Education. Perot says the activities steal learning time.

Wood told the House Public Education Committee on Thursday that he has seen students benefit from extracurricular activities.

"Ninety-four percent of our students who made the honor roll at mid-term are in extracurricular activities, and I (believe) we should be trying to get more people interested in it," Wood said.

"Frankly, I think we ought to be trying to get more and more people interested (in such activities). I honestly feel sorry for people that the only interest they have in school is to go to school, nothing else," he testified.

He said Perot's attacks are misguided.

"You know if (students) don't learn to read in the first six grades the chances are they are not going to be able to learn to read thereafter. Actually, there isn't any athletic program below the sixth grade that I know of," said Wood.

The veteran coach said he opposes proposals to require students to pass four courses, instead of three, to participate in extracurricular activities. The University Interscholastic League, which governs many high school competitions, has approved the tougher requirement.

Wood said the more stringent requirement might steer students into easier courses. He also said tougher grade requirements would be harder on "the socially poor, the black and the Mexican-American."

"There's no question about it, a lot of them have a tough time scholastically because of their social background, no doubt about it," Wood said.

IBM cuts PC prices by up to 23 percent

NEW YORK (AP) — Denying that slumping sales were to blame, International Business Machines Corp. said it will slash prices on its personal computers, home computers and related equipment by up to 23 percent.

IBM's move fulfilled the predictions of some Wall Street analysts, who earlier this week said price cuts were imminent because demand for IBM's personal-computer line was beginning to lag.

But IBM spokesman Rick Scott said Thursday that "with the exception of the PCjr (the home version), demand remains strong" for IBM's personal computers — which many consider the industry standard for business and professional desktop data processors.

IBM has said that the PCjr, which arrived on the market early this year, was not meeting sales expectations.

Asked if the price cuts on the machines other than PCjr were in response to poor demand, Scott said "abolutely not," adding that the actions reflected "business as usual."

There are two main versions of IBM's desktop machines for business: the Personal Computer and the more-powerful PC-XT.

IBM said that beginning in July, it will offer a Personal Computer with 256,000 characters, or 256K, of internal memory and a disk drive with an additional 360K of memory for $1,995.

Previously, a similar computer with only 64K of internal memory and the same disk-drive capability had cost $2,104. That machine is now being cut to $1,815.

Likewise, a PC-XT with 256K of internal memory is being introduced for $4,395. An earlier version with only 128K had cost $4,995. That machine's price will be cut to $4,275.

As for the PCjr, the price of the entry-level model with 64K of internal memory was cut to $599 from $699 and the 128K version with a 360K disk drive was cut to $999 from $1,269.

Prices also were reduced by up to 23 percent on all other IBM personal-computer units — including its recently unveiled portable. And prices were cut on a host of options available for the main Personal Computer.

Nurses strike over job security

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Nearly 6,500 registered nurses staging the largest nurses' strike in the nation's history are battling for job security — an issue "that will ripple across the country" if it is not resolved, says the national nurses' union leader.

Nearly 6,000 nurses struck 15 hospitals in the Minneapolis-St. Paul area June 1; three days later, another area hospital negotiating separately with the Minnesota Nurses Association was struck by its 300 contract nurses.

The two sides came close to a strike two years ago when the issue was money, a minor issue this year. No talks have been held since the strike began. On Thursday, a federal mediator scheduled a meeting with the two sides for Tuesday.

The struck hospitals have limited admissions and are operating at what spokesmen said wase one-fourth to one-third of normal capacity. Emergency room services have not been reduced and no critical care has been withheld, hospital officials said, but much elective surgery has been postponed.

"The issues involved in Minnesota are issues that concern nurses across the country," said Eunice Cole, president of the American Nurses Association, the nation's largest union for registered nurses. About 165,000 of 1.3 million working registered nurses belong to the ANA.

Striking nurses say job security is the major reason they're walking the picket line. The union wants increased protection against layoffs and cuts in workweeks, and it wants required re-training of up to three months for laid-off nurses.

The hospitals now offer two weeks of re-training when a nurse's job is phased out, and have offered to increase that to three weeks. More re-training would be too expensive, said Mike Phillips, a spokesman for Health Employers Inc., which negotiates for the hospitals.

"Hospitals need the flexibility to use the best nurses available where they need them," said Scott Anderson, president and administrator of North Memorial Medical Center, where nurses struck June 1.

But Donna Loughry, a striker who has been a registered nurse for 22 years and has worked at North Memorial for 3½ years, said the policy of moving nurses to fill staffing shortages can lead to poor patient care.

Mrs. Loughry, who works nights on a floor with ear, nose and throat surgery patients, said: "It's our licenses that are on the line when we are told we have to work intensive care, for instance, with no orientation. We're dealing with patients' lives."

Mrs. Loughry said she understood hospitals' need to reduce costs, but said nursing care shouldn't be cut. "Maintenance isn't being cut; dietary isn't being cut," she said.

"We didn't make this decision to strike lightly," she said. "Nurses are very caring people. We aren't militant. We aren't violent.

"Hopefully, we'll have an impact on nursing. We are fighting for nursing not only in Minnesota, but nationwide."

"These are issues that will ripple across the country if they are not resolved here favorably," Ms. Cole, the national union president, said during a visit to the Twin Cities. The strike here is the largest since 4,500 Seattle nurses struck eight years ago.

Wages are a minor issue. The union has asked for a 6 percent increase in eaach year of a two-year contract. The hospitals have offered a 4 percent increase in the first year and a 3.5 percent increase in the second year. Salaries for nurses at the struck hospitals range from $19,776 a year for a starting general-duty nurse to $30,624 for a head nurse with more than 12 years' experience.

Other area hospitals unaffected by the strike are taking on additional patients, but no shortages of beds have been reported.

Supervisory nurses, many of them working 12-hour shifts, are caring for patients at the struck hospitals, Anderson said.

Dollar improves; Gold dips

LONDON (AP) — The dollar gained against key currencies in early trading today, continuing an upswing despite a dip in U.S. interest rates. Gold prices slipped.

Dealers reported that the Federal Reserve Board's announcement Thursday of an unexpectedly big drop of $2.4 billion in the U.S. M1 money supply put the U.S. currency under pressure.

The lower money supply figures eased pressure on the Fed to tighten credit to curb inflation, pushing the Federal Fund rate down from 11 percent to 10 7-8 percent.

U.S. interest rates, however, generally remained high, making the dollar more attractive to investors, to the dismay of America's European allies.

The dollar was still bolstered by alarm over Persian Gulf tensions and fading hopes of a settlement in West Germany's metal workers' strike.

Justice to count more foreign imports in assessing mergers

WASHINGTON (AP) — In a move that might settle an internal Reagan administration dispute, antitrust chief J. Paul McGrath plans to count more foreign imports when deciding whether to challenge business mergers in this country.

McGrath, the assistant attorney general in charge of the Justice Department's antitrust division, has been criticized by businessmen and administration officials led by Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige.

Baldrige accused McGrath of making a "world class mistake" in temporarily blocking a steel merger earlier this year.

In a speech Thursday to the New York Roundtable, a business group, McGrath discussed the merger guidelines he plans to issue next week. His text was released in Washington and he amplified on it later in a telephone interview.

Although a number of his changes, including those on imports, move in the direction that Baldrige advocated, McGrath denied he was motivated by Baldrige's criticism.

In his speech, McGrath said the merger guidelines issued by his predecessor, William F. Baxter, in 1982 "give no real guidance as to how the department will treat imports and foreign capacity in specific circumstances, especially where imports are subject to quotas and other types of trade restraints."

McGrath said his "revisions explain that, generally, the department will include existing imports in defining markets and calculating (how concentrated the industry's ownership is) ... and will consider the effects of such trade restraints as a separate factor in interpreting the significance of market concentration and market share data."

Under Baxter's guidelines, foreign producers were not counted in merger analyses in any cases where they would be prevented by distance, lack of excess capacity or trade quotas from significantly increasing sales in this country if the domestic price rose by 5 percent.

Baxter said the purpose of a merger analysis was to see whether any producer could help prevent anti-competitive conduct like secret agreements on price increases.

If domestic producers could collude on a price increase but a quota would prevent a foreign producer increasing shipments while holding the line on prices and thus taking a larger share of the market away from the price-fixers, then that foreign producer could not help drive the price back down to competitive levels and so was not counted in the market evaluation.

Beleagured airline to show quarterly profit

HOUSTON (AP) — Continental Airlines, which entered bankruptcy proceedings and drastically cut its flight schedule and salaries last September, will show a profit this quarter, the company's chairman says.

Frank Lorenzo told the carrier's annual shareholders meeting Thursday that Continental will show a net profit in the second quarter of 1984, the first such results since the third quarter of 1982.

The $4.9 million profit in the 1982 period involved about $5.2 million in several special items, such as the sale of airport gate leases, re-evaluation of foreign debt, income tax credits and other unusual factors, spokesman Bruce Hicks said.

The profit would be the airline's first in the second quarter since 1979. Continental reported a net loss of $26 million in the second quarter of 1983.

Lorenzo declined to predict the amount of the profit, saying "the comment about a profit for Continental is significant in itself."

Continental lost $218 million last year.

Continental, once the nation's eighth-largest carrier, filed for protection from its creditors under Chapter 11 of the federal bankruptcy laws in September and temporarily suspended domestic flights.

The airline put its planes back in the air two days later, with its routes slashed by more than two-thirds and the workforce cut by 65 percent. It also announced a new salary schedule which cut in half the amount of money paid to pilots and flight attendants.

Those workers walked off the job within a week, claiming the airline was abusing federal bankruptcy laws in an effort to abrogate union contracts.

Pilots' and flight attendants' unions asked a bankruptcy judge to dismiss the Chapter 11 petiton, but the request was denied. A ruling is pending on Continental's request to throw out union contracts.

In a letter to shareholders in the carrier's annual report, Lorenzo said that 1983 was probably the most difficult year in the airline's history.

"Groundwork has been laid for a potentially profitable future" through the reorganization filing, Lorenzo said.

Continental President Phil Bakes admitted the strike is costing the company a lot of money for security expenses, publicity and legal fees. Bakes estimated the company was paying about $1.5 million a month for legal fees.

Lorenzo also told shareholders Continental's cost per available seat mile has declined to 6½ cents.

By December, Lorenzo predicted, the cost will be down to 6 cents per available seat mile. That figure would be 25 percent less than Continental's cost at the same time last year, he said.

Lorenzo also said the airline does not anticipate any major fare increases.

Mobil Oil Corp. names Murray as new president

By the Los Angeles Times
Washington Post News Service

Mobil Corp. said Wednesday that Allen E. Murray will become president and chief operating officer in November upon the previously announced retirement of William P. Tavoulareas.

Mobil hinted more than a year ago that Murray would succeed Tavoulareas when Murray, 55, was named president of Mobil Oil Corp., Mobil's largest subsidiary.

Mobil said that Tavoulareas will retire Nov. 1, eight days before his 65th birthday, but will remain a director of the company and a member of its executive committee. He also will continue to act as an adviser to top management, particularly regarding its operations in the Middle East.

During his 15 years running the company, Tavoulareas has formed close personal ties to Saudi Arabia's royal family, which has helped assure Mobil of ready access to Mideast oil supplies.

His view that the company should increase its affiliation with the Saudis, coupled with his candid, unorthodox personal style, has made him something of a maverick in the U.S. oil industry. However, analysts don't expect many changes in the company's course when Murray takes the post of president.

Murray, trained as an accountant, came to Mobil in 1952 and spent several years in financial and planning positions in the Middle East department. He became head of the company's refining and marketing division in 1979 and president of Mobil Oil in January 1983, a post previously held by Tavoulareas.

Allen E. Murray

Earlier this year, Murray helped engineer Mobil's $5.7 billion purchase of Superior Oil Co., a move designed to increase the company's domestic oil and gas reserves.

Although Murray has previously expressed concern about Mobil's dependence on Mideast oil supplies, analysts do not expect him pull back from that region.

Reservations for lunch should be made through the WTGS office, 683-1573. Cost is $6.50.

People Express starts cheap flights to LA

NEW YORK (AP) — People Express has announced it will start no-frills flights between the New York City area and Los Angeles, with one-way fares as low as $119.

The previous low fare on the route had been $199 for an advance purchase, and a customer had to buy a round-trip ticket. The regular, no-restrictions fare has been about $350 each way.

People said it will start a daily round trip from Newark (N.J.) International Airport on June 16 and add a second flight on June 25. It said the nighttime fare will be $119 and daytime fare $149.

The airline began taking reservations Thursday for Los Angeles flights through Sept. 4, said spokesman Russell Marchetta.

He said advance bookings were "very good," but had no figures.

Reaction was varied from the other airlines serving the route.

United Airlines said it would match People's fares on its two daily Newark-Los Angeles flights, but only for a limited number of seats on each flight and requiring advance purchase.

American Airlines, which is beginning Newark-Los Angeles service next month, was studying the development, spokesman John Hotard said at company headquarters in Fort Worth.

Trans World Airlines, which flies to California only from Kennedy, said it would not match the People fare. World Airways announced it would cut its overnight fare to $149 and drop its daytime fare to $179 from $190.

MONEY FUND TABLE COMMENTARY: Assets of the 256 taxable money funds as reported by Donoghue's Money Fund Report (R) of Holliston, Mass. 01746 decreased by $410 million to $169.2 billion for the week ended June 6, 1984. The taxable funds' 7-day average yield increased to 9.74% from 9.60%. The taxable funds' 30-day average yield increased to 9.61% from 9.52%. The taxable funds' average maturity held at 38 days for the third consecutive week.

William E. Donoghue says, "This week's asset outflow was due to a decrease in the assets of the institution-only money funds. High rates available to large investors in the short-term money market caused the asset decrease in institution-only money funds. Government-only money fund assets increased this week in what may be a reflection of a mini flight to quality by individual investors." The spread between the Donoghue's 7-day average yield and the average MMDA rate of 8.98% reported by Bank Rate Monitor continues to widen. OIL & GAS DIGEST

Firm acquires interest in area properties

Flag-Redfern Oil Co. has recently acquired royalty interests of Grace P. Adams Trust in over 100 producing properties in Andrews, Ector, Gaines, Winkler and Yoakum Counties, Texas, Glenn S. Brant, President of Flag-Redfern has announced.

The company also reported first quarter 1984 oil and gas gross sales revenue of $10,385,000 compared to $9,142,000 received during the same period of 1983. Quarterly net income amounted to $3,360,000 compared to $2,412,000. Net production was 2,448 barrels of oil per day and 16,165 Mcf per day.

Penn Central to buy Mesa subsidiary

GREENWICH, Conn. — The Penn Central Corp. and Mesa Petroleum Co. have anounced that they have agreed in principle to a transaction in which Mesa would repurchase the Mesa securities sold to Penn Central earlier this year and Penn Central would acquire the outstanding stock of Mesa Offshore Co., the Mesa subsidiary which owns 14.469 million shares of Gulf Corp. common stock.

The purchase price for the Mesa Offshore stock would be paid by delivery to Mesa of subordinated notes, preferred stock and warrants of Mesa, which were previously acquired by Penn Central for $300 million, plus a 5-year note of a newly formed Penn central subsidiary for approximately $811 million.

Atlantic Richfield cancels credit facility

LOS ANGELES — Atlantic Richfield Co. has anounced that it has canceled the $12 billion credit facility assembled to support its earlier, unsuccessful bid for Gulf Corp.

In a statement, William F. Kieschnick, president and chief executive officer, said: "Our bid for Gulf was invited and reflected our view that at a certain price, Gulf offered an unusual opportunity to bring incremental earnings and cash flow to our shareholders. Since our bid was unsuccessful, and since we have no active plan to purchase another large oil company, there is no reason to maintain the banks' commitments."

Goodyear to continue pipeline project

AKRON, Ohio — Goodyear directors have authorized the continued development during 1984 of its previously announced west to east crude oil pipeline project. This will include acquisition of rights-of-way and commitments for materials and services for the project, which has been extended 400 miles to the Texas Gulf Coast.

The newly expanded project contemplates the construction of a 30-inch heated pipeline to transport heavy crude oil from offshore California 1,600 miles to existing refineries on the Gulf Coast. The project is expected to cost approximately $840 million, plus capitalized interest.

Providing all required approvals and permits are received, construction could begin in late 1984 or early 1985, with the expectation that the pipeline would be operational in 1987.

Rowan official says record offshore drilling tied to OCS

HOUSTON — Paul L. Kelly, vice president of Rowan Companies Inc., the Houston-based contractor of offshore drilling rigs and helicopters, told a group of educators recently that a record 193 mobile rigs are currently operating in the Gulf of Mexico. Kelly said that accelerated drilling in the Gulf is directly tied to the Reagan administration's areawide outer continental shelf leasing policies. "There are 69 mobile rigs already drilling on acreage awarded in last year's federal OCS areawide sales, 41 in the Central Gulf and 28 in the Western Gulf," he reported.

A member of Interior Secretary William Clark's OCS Policy Committee and a Texas representative on the Interstate Oil Compact Commission, Kelly was the lead-off speaker at the University of Houston's 27th Annual Petroleum Institute for Educators sponsored by the Texas Mid-Continent Oil & Gas Association. About 100 teachers from across Texas are attending the graduate level Institute which runs until June 22.

The Rowan vice president said that there has been a dramatic increase in drilling activity offshore Texas. A record 63 rigs are working in these waters today compared to 31 at year end. "This doubling of activity in less than six months is prompting some oil patch observers to predict that the upcoming Western Gulf lease sale, scheduled for July 18, will be outstanding in terms of both money exposed and the number of bids. Obviously many of these offshore Texas wells are being drilled to obtain information for the July sale," Kelly added.

The Rowan executive said that growing interest in geological trends offshore Texas has prompted the U.S. Interior Department to hold a sale in Houston for the first time under its five-year OCS leasing schedule. Gulf of Mexico lease sales are usually held in New Orleans where the regional office of the Interior Department's Minerals Management Service is headquartered. "The July 18 sale will be an important first for Texas and for Houston," Kelly stated.

During the past year the Federal Government has leased almost nine million acres in the Gulf, said Kelly. "The Government's areawide leasing policies are obviously working to encourage creative thinking on the part og geologists with large and small oil companies. The three most recent Gulf lease sales have each brought out over one hundred bidders, including a record number of independents. The ideas of this diverse group of companies are now being tested by the drill bit," he commented.

Home seeks to aid victims of rare ailment

MINNETONKA, Minn. (AP) — Without careful watching and a locked kitchen, the 15 young men and women who live at Oakwood Residence would eat themselves into an early grave.

Oakwood is the largest home in the world designed exclusively for people with Prader-Willi syndrome, a birth defect whose victims suffer a constant desire for food.

Other characteristics of the syndrome, first described in 1956 by Swiss doctors Andrea Prader, Alexis Labhart and Heinrich Willi, include mental retardation, rigid personality, short stature, underdeveloped genitals, a diminished sense of pain and lack of muscle tone, coordination and strength.

The uncontrollable desire for food, however, is what makes special homes necessary for Prader-Willi victims, according to Dorothy Thompson, whose first experience with the syndrome came when she was director of a Minneapolis home for the mentally retarded. The reason for the food craving isn't known.

Ms. Thompson, president of the Minnesota chapter of the Prader-Willi Syndrome Association, helped set up Oakwood, which opened Sept. 1, 1981.

Six or eight other states have smaller homes, Ms. Thompson said. There are no Prader-Willi homes outside the United States, she added.

At Oakwood, there are no between-meal or bedtime snacks and visitors are warned not to bring food.

"Food three times a day and that's it. The residents aren't allowed in the kitchen at all," said Ms. Thompson. The diets are developed by a physician and a dietician.

"Since the home opened, the 15 people we have had here have lost 812½ pounds," she said.

One young man has lost 143½ pounds. When he entered the home, the 5-foot-tall resident weighed 270 pounds. He has weighed 126½ pounds for the last eight months, she said.

"It is not possible to train these people to control their appetites," Ms. Thompson said. "Unless they live in an environment where they cannot get food, they will eat."

The food-control problem, coupled with temper tantrums and stubbornness typical of Prader-Willi victims, makes it very difficult for families to keep people with the syndrome at home, said Marge Wett of Edina, whose 19-year-old daughter, Lisa, lives at Oakwood Residence.

Mrs. Wett, who is executive director of the national Prader-Willi Syndrome Association, was a driving force behind establishment of Oakwood. She realized that locks on the cupboards and refrigerator in their home were not enough to keep Lisa away from food, and the strain was too much for her and her husband, Richard, and their six other children.

"You get on a guilt trip about whether you're denying the rest of your family and you feel that they (the Prader-Willi children) aren't getting everything they should be out of life either because there are other demands on your time," Mrs. Wett said.

"There comes a time when you burn out. Then you either give up or you look for alternatives," she said.

Lisa said she is happy at Oakwood.

"I like the activities. There are nice things. We go to movies," Lisa said.

The home has a recreation room with a television set and video recorder and a pool table for the residents to use. There also is an exercise room with bicycles and a weight-lifting bench.

Individual programs are developed for each resident, with time alloted each day for exercise, school or developmental programs at facilities outside of Oakwood and recreational time.

Lisa has her own television set with video games in her room. Her bed is covered with stuffed animals and her craft work is displayed on the walls.

Lisa goes home for a visit about once a month. It still isn't easy for the family, but it's better than it was before, Mrs. Wett said.

"She's pretty good when she comes home now. I leave food around. But when she is overly tempted she'll eat it. Before she would take anything she could get. Now she's more selective; she'll go for the cookies," Mrs. Wett said.

Oakwood is the only home in the Midwest exclusively for Prader-Willi residents. It takes only Minnesota residents and has 30 people on the waiting list, Ms. Thompson said.

Oakwood has a staff of 14 trained to work directly with residents, plus a full-time cook, a half-time nurse and two half-time office employees.

About one in every 10,000 to 25,000 births is a Prader-Willi child, according to estimates by doctors, Ms. Thompson said, "but they're only guessing because of the lack of diagnosis."

The Prader-Willi Syndrome Association is studying establishing a national home with about 50 beds in Minnesota so more people can be helped.

"These people are literally dying in other states. The parents give up and the children keep gaining weight," Ms. Thompson said. "There is a girl in Wisconsin now who is up to 350 pounds and is hospitalized because there was no home in her county and the county wouldn't pay to place her in a home outside the county."

Ten women to overeat in name of science

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Ten women will be paid $800 each to live in seclusion for a month and gorge themselves with twice as much food as they normally eat.

The gluttony is part of a study to determine whether overeating affects women in the same way as men, said Gilbert Forbes, a professor of pediatrics at the University of Rochester Medical Center.

One thing is fairly certain, he said: "We expect them to gain weight."

The women will be allowed out a few hours a day as long as they promise not to eat or drink anything, Forbes said.

The rest of the time they will undergo daily tests of their blood, hormones, urine, metabolic rate and weight while eating nutritionally balanced — and oversized — meals.

"We'll try to arrange their diet so it's palatable to them. We won't feed them just asparagus or anchovies," Forbes said.

If they can't eat the entire meal at one sitting, they will be allowed to eat extra meals, he said.

Men have been found to gain an average of a pound for every 3,600 excess calories they eat, although there is a wide variation among individuals. Forbes said his study, to be conducted over the next year, is the first rigorously controlled experiment on women.

Only three volunteers have been selected, and recruiting has not been easy, Forbes said. Many women were unwilling to put on weight, despite the promise of help to lose it after the experiment, he said. Moreover, the volunteers must live at the medical center.

Fat-loss claims hit fire

Copley News Service

For the overweight, the full-page newspaper advertisement is especially compelling.

"Sleep Away Fat," the ad proclaims in large, bold type. "Amazing new formula lets you lose fat while you snooze."

It goes on to promise that this "special synergistic combination of amino acids and vitamins" will help burn up body fat and help develop more lean muscle tissue by stimulating the release of growth hormone in the body. "It Really Works!"

The ad, which has run in newspapers nationwide for the past few weeks, is a promotion by the Great Earth Vitamins Co. for its "GHR Formula-P.M.

Available in 60-tablet bottles at $12.99 at Great Earth Vitamins stores, the pills each contain three amino acids (500 milligrams of L-ornithine, 167 milligrams of L-tryptophane, and 667 milligrams of glycine) and two vitamins (15 milligrams of B-6 and 40 milligrams of niacinimide).

The trouble is, some scientists say, the formula is simply ineffective.

Even a spokeswoman for Great Earth concedes that the claims contained in its newspaper advertisements for the product "stretch the truth."

The theory behind the GHR Formula-P.M. is simple, said Trish Downing, marketing director for the Los Angeles-based firm, during a telephone interview.

"The amino acids in the formula stimulate the secretion in the pituitary gland of growth hormone which, in turn, causes a decrease in body fat and an increase in muscle tissue," she said, adding that the product is based on studies publicized by health faddists Durk Pearson and Sandy Shaw in their book "Life Extension."

"Technically, it works while you sleep," she said, "because the pituitary gland releases growth hormones about 90 minutes after you fall asleep."

She referred to numerous academic studies conducted throughout the world that have shown various amino acids to be effective in stimulating the pituitary gland to produce growth hormone.

However, she knew of no study establishing a correlation between the use of amino acids to stimulate the production of growth hormones in the body, causing a subsequent decrease in body fat.

"No studies support that premise," she said.

Downing stressed that the formula is not designed to help people lose weight.

In fact, "you may actually gain weight because of an increase in muscle tissue, but you'll have a better physique," she said.

When asked if the newspaper advertisements for GHR Formula-P.M. did not imply that a person taking the pills would lose weight, Downing conceded that the ads "are not fraudulent, but probably stretch the truth."

She nevertheless insisted that the product is effective.

"We have dozens of unsolicited testimonials from satisfied customers," Downing said.

But two scientists interviewed by phone who have conducted numerous studies on the effects of various weight-loss regimens said that, while they have not tested this particular formula, there is no evidence — "theoretical, scientific, or otherwise" — linking an increase in growth hormone in the body with a subsequent loss of body fat.

"It's sheer nonsense to make those claims. Pure science fiction," said Sorell Schwartz, a pharmacology professor at the Georgetown University School of Medicine. "If the pituitary gland is being stimulated so much by these amino acids, why aren't the people taking this formula growing larger? That's what you'd expect."

Schwartz, who stressed that the ingredients in the formula are not dangerous, said that the secretion of growth hormone in the body is under the control of the hyperthalamus in the brain, which uses an intricate feedback mechanism to control the pituitary gland.

"For one thing, there is no evidence — theoretical, scientific, or otherwise — linking amino acids and vitamins with secretion of growth hormone," he said. "If they were effective in doing that, the result would be a threat to health. And there is no evidence that increasing the level of growth hormone in the body would cause the reduction of body fat anyway."

Consumers should not expect guidance from the government when considering the use of GHR Formula-P.M.

A spokesman for the Food and Drug Administration in Washington, D.C., said the formula does not fall under the agency's purview because "it does not contain what we consider to be active ingredients."

Scientists question limited cholesterol study's value

BOSTON (AP) — If 1,906 middle-age men take a foul-tasting medicine for a rare condition called hypercholesterolemia, do the results have any bearing on what ordinary people should eat for breakfast?

The question is the nub of a disagreement among scientists about using the frailties of a few to judge the living habits of many.

In this case, they are debating if a careful but limited study of people with a rare cholesterol condition can be used to make dietary recommendations for millions of Americans. The same arguments are heard in many branches of medicine as researchers attempt to squeeze the most insightful nuggets from their labors.

The whole idea of experiments, of course, is to apply the results to more than the 10 or 100 or 1,000 individuals studied. The arguments begin when sticklers ask whether those individuals really mirror the ways and workings of a larger part of the population.

AT ISSUE this time is the interpretation of one of the biggest medical stories of the year. When it was released last January, the $150 million federal study — called the Lipid Research Clinics Coronary Primary Prevention Trial — seemed to confirm what many Americans had already accepted as fact: Lowering cholesterol saves lives.

News articles were enthusiastic. "Cholesterol is proved deadly, and our diet may never be the same again," one headline announced.

Yet there is uneasiness among some — though not all — heart specialists and nutritionists that the study has been used to make a point that it does not prove, to wit, that otherwise ordinary people with higher-than-average cholesterol levels should go on cholesterol-lowering diets.

In a still-unpublished critique, Dr. Joseph Vitale and Robert N. Ross of Boston University Medical School called the affair "an impressive example of misconstrued and misunderstood research results."

IN THE view of like-thinking scientists, the results were "overinterpreted" — a polite way of saying blown out of proportion.

However, Dr. Robert I. Levy, who launched the project while head of the National Heart, Lung and Blood Institute, asserts, "I don't think that the data have been overinterpreted."

Many scientists seem to have mixed feelings about how the research has been presented. They are bothered by what they view as overzealous interpretations. Yet if that convinces people to eat better, then maybe it doesn't matter.

"As a scientist, I don't like to see a piece of data extrapolated all over the place and great, sweeping conclusions made," said Dr. Mary Malloy, who experiments with cholesterol-reducing drugs at the University of California at San Francisco. "On the other hand, as a clinician, this study reinforces my personal beliefs that we need to put people on diets to keep everybody's cholesterol levels as low as we can."

The rift is a familiar one among scientists. Purists insist that each study stand on its own, that it never be construed to show more than it really does. But that kind of idealism is usually tempered by a more practical point of view.

MOST OF the scientists talking about the cholesterol study actually believe, in fact, that too much dietary cholesterol is bad. Even though they are sensitive about overinterpretation, they have to make workaday decisions that they hope will preserve health and save lives.

"From a purely scientific point of view, you like to be right down to the letter of the law, never claiming more than is proven beyond a reasonable doubt," says Dr. William Stasson of the Harvard School of Public Health. "Usually we make decisions in life based on a lot less evidence than that."

Despite overwhelming evidence that high levels of cholesterol in the blood causes heart disease, one central question remained: Will people live longer if they eat less cholesterol and saturated fat?

Cholesterol is a major ingredient of the plaques that form on artery walls. This condition is known as hardening of the arteries or atherosclerosis, and it leads to heart attack and stroke.

PEOPLE TAKE in cholesterol in two ways — through cholesterol-rich food, mainly eggs, and saturated fat, which is converted into cholesterol in the body. However, about 70 or 80 percent of blood cholesterol is manufactured in the liver independently of diet.

There is plenty of circumstantial evidence that folks can reduce their chances of atherosclerosis by cutting down on dietary cholesterol, but the issue has not been settled beyond a whisper of doubt.

Answering the diet-heart question directly would be a huge, probably impossible undertaking. It would mean following the health of thousands of people eating and living outside the laboratory. A federal task force estimated 13 years ago that such a study would cost between $500 million and $1 billion.

So the federal researchers did something simpler. They studied the effects of a cholesterol-lowering drug on people with very high cholesterol levels.

FIRST, THEY examined 480,000 men between the ages of 35 and 59 and singled out those with hypercholesterolemia, an inherited disorder that results in extremely high cholesterol levels. Only 5 percent of the population have this much blood cholesterol.

Next, these men were put on cholesterol-lowering diets. If the diets worked, they were excluded from the study. Finally, the researchers were left with 3,806 men whose high cholesterol levels were independent of diet. For an average of 7.4 years, half of them took a cholesterol-lowering drug called cholestyramine, and half took dummy placebos.

When it was over, 9.8 percent of the comparison group had suffered heart-related disease or death, compared with 8.1 percent of the drug patients.

"They studied a very small proportion of the population, and a very small proportion of them had anything bad happen, and the change in that was very small," said Dr. Donald Berwick of the Harvard Community Health Plan. "A lot was made of it, much more than the actual evidence warranted."

THE STUDY is significant, because it is the first to show that lowering cholesterol in the bloodstream will reduce the risk of heart disease. But does this happen in more than 5 percent of the population?

The federal researchers said their findings can reasonably be extended to people who were not studied: to women, to younger men and to people with lower but still elevated cholesterol levels. And they said the data support the view that lowering cholesteral by diet is also beneficial.

Levy says he thinks the data can be interpreted to say that anyone with higher-than-average cholesterol levels should be considered for cholesterol-lowering diets or drugs.

Dr. Jan Breslow of Rockefeller University says the study dealt only with people with very high cholesterol levels, and "from a cautious scientific point of view, I think that's where you should stop."

An editorial in the British Medical Journal also cautioned that "we should be wary against overinterpretation" by applying the results to diet or people with lower cholesterol.

Adds Stasson: "The weight of evidence is growing that lowering cholesterol by whatever means is beneficial. But I don't believe you can make a conclusive statement to that effect based on the results of a study such as this."

CONTENDING THAT the results apply only to those studied represents nothing more than "tunnel vision," Levy says.

"We didn't do this study to show the benefit of cholestyramine, and we didn't do this study to talk about the upper 5 percent of the population," he says. "We did this study because the last piece of evidence was lacking — direct, clinical trial evidence in man showing that lowering cholesterol would prevent heart disease."

How widely held is the concern among heart researchers that the study was overblown?

"My feeling for the consensus is that about one out of 10 are nitpickers, two out of 10 are neutral and seven out of 10 feel that the study has been correctly interpreted," says Dr. David Blenkenhorn of the University of Southern California.

Fitness guru teaches fat people how to think thin

Hearst Feature Service

For 20 years, Bob Schwartz put women at his chain of health spas on diets. "I became a multimillionaire putting people on diets," he says. "Now I'm doing penance."

The author of "Diets Don't Work!" now eschews every diet plan imaginable and is fast becoming a guru to those obsessed with their failure to stay trim. He travels the country giving $250 seminars that aim to teach fat people how to think thin. That's the ticket to staying svelte without actually dieting, he claims.

Schwartz routinely quotes statistics from an article he once saw in the Washington Post indicating that only 10 of every 200 dieters actually knock off all the pounds they set out to lose. And nine of those 10 typically gain all their weight back, says Schwartz.

"If I were a swimming instructor with 200 pupils and 199 of them drowned, could I convince you that all but one drowned because of a lack of willpower?" Schwartz asks. "Yet I always noticed that when people would lose weight and gain it all back, they'd always blame themselves. They'd never blame the diet or those of us at the health spas."

That's when he started talking to slender people to find out how they differed from their chunkier counterparts. Skinny people, he discovered, eat only when they're hungry.

"Thin people are stupid," says Schwartz. "They can't count calories. They say dumb things like, 'I forgot to eat today.' If thin people want chocolate, they'll eat chocolate for breakfast. But the difference is that they listen to their bodies in a way that's accurate, they only eat when they're hungry and they only eat exactly what their bodies want.

The rest of us are so busy eating for all sorts of other reasons that we don't ever come close to getting hungry."

He found that thin folks love food more than fat folks do. A thin person thinks about that scrumptious mouthful of food while it's being consumed, according to Schwartz. Not so for the overweight person.

"People who are overweight don't even taste what's in the mouth. They're thinking about that next forkful. Usually, they can't remember anything about what they've eaten, either," he says. "What I do is teach them how thin people eat things like pizza and brownies without gaining weight. The secret is that they enjoy them. They taste them."

Overeating is a learned behavior that begins when we're kids, Schwartz maintains.

Middle age might be crisis — but not memorable one

By ERMA BOMBECK

An article I read the other day said there is absolutely no reason to regard the middle years as a period of crisis.

Although your friends are dying, your health is deteriorating, your ambitions are unfulfilled, the decisions made years ago are causing limited current options, you're lonely, depressed and neurotic, there is a bright spot to this period.

Your memory is gone. That IS good news!

Frankly, I was worried. I used to be so good at remembering what's-her-name (you'd think I'd remember the woman who gave birth to me, wouldn't you?), but now everything is a struggle. I used to envy older women who married younger men. After all, a younger man in my life would tell me what I am doing standing in front of the refrigerator with the door open. He would supply missing words to my sentences like Ed Asner, croissant, James Michener and artichoke. Every time I would pause searching for a word and say, "You know" . . . he would.

I tried for awhile to regard the loss of memory as a . . . not bonus, but it means the same thing . . . but the mind was so selective. I couldn't remember to buy salt when I'd been out of it for two solid weeks, but I could recall every rotten thing the kids ever did, book, chapter and verse. I was the only guest on "The Tonight Show" who had to write the name of the book she was promoting on her fingernail. Yet I could remember the phone number in our first apartment.

My husband said my mind was on overload, but that's not true. I purposely cleared it of things I didn't want to remember, like where the fusebox is located, what weight of oil goes into the car, and how I'm supposed to record checks in the checkbook, but it didn't help much.

I think the problem of being blessed with a faltering memory is how to convince everyone else how lucky you are. Somehow they don't see it as a . . . what in the world IS that word that means the same as bonus . . . oh, well. When I don't remember to bring the salad out of the refrigerator until we're eating dessert or I spend half of my life looking for my glasses, all I see is pity in their eyes.

The other day, for example, I went crazy trying to remember the name of Gene Hackman. When I remembered it, I couldn't remember what I wanted with it. Like I told my husband, "I'm going through a very good period of my . . ."

"Life," he said.

DEAR ABBY

Military wife shares secrets of family on the march

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: The letter from "Unhappy in Minnesota," the woman who was so upset about the moving required by her husband's job, really struck a nerve with me. It's a good thing she didn't marry a career Army man (or Navy, Air Force or Marine, for that matter)!

My husband is a career soldier. I've always joked that we've stayed married so long because he was never home long enough to fight with.

In 15 years, we've moved 11 times. Four of these moves were trans-Atlantic moves, and he was around to help with only one of them. Our daughter went to three different kindergartens, four elementary schools, two middle schools, and she will attend at least two different high schools. (Not unusual for Army families.)

While I'm never thrilled with the thought of another move, I've learned a lot from all the moves we've made. I turned the negatives into positives.

Rule 1: Laugh a lot. No humorist could possibly invent stories as funny as the ones we've experienced. Besides, moving a lot keeps your closets cleaned out.

Rule 2: Don't view it as "leaving," view it as "going to." We have a lifetime filled with friends and experiences we never would have accumulated had we stayed put.

Rule 3: Don't wait for a new community to provide you with what you want. Get out and find it. If it's not there, create it. No job in the community? Start your own business — a nursery school or baby-sitting service. And don't turn your nose up at volunteer work. How about the shelter for battered women, the PTA, a political party, church work or even a car pool? It's a good way to be accepted and welcome in a new community.

Rule 4: Remember, "home" is an attitude. Wherever we are together is "home." My attitude sets the tone of every move. If I am enthusiastic, my family will be. A positive attitude is not always easy to assume, but it's a must.

How are my children doing? Both are straight-A students, our house overflows with their friends, and a list of their combined activities would fill another page.

My marriage? Terrific!

So tell "Unhappy" to get it together. She's not alone. Nobody claims that moving a lot is easy, but it can be fantastically rewarding. — NANCY E., ARMY WIFE, FORT HOOD, TEXAS

DEAR NANCY: Thanks for a wonderful letter. Your husband is lucky, and so are your children.

CONFIDENTIAL TO ONLY ONE PERSON IN WORCESTER, MASS.: I am reminded of a short but meaningful poem from the play, "For Heaven's Sake" by Helen Kromer:

One man awake
Can awaken another.
The second can waken his next-door brother.
The three awake can rouse the town,
By turning the whole place upside down.
And the many awake, make such a fuss,
They finally awaken the rest of us.
One man up with the dawn in his eyes — multiplies.

Movie makes actor real Tiger fan

Roy Scheider

DETROIT (AP) — Actor Roy Scheider says filming "Tiger Town" made him a Detroit Tigers fan, so he returned to Tiger Stadium to root on the team and promote the movie's big-screen debut.

Scheider tossed out the first ball Thursday in the Tigers' 5-3 victory over the Toronto Blue Jays.

"Tiger Town," filmed in Detroit last summer, was shown in October on the 800,000-subscriber Disney Channel cable network and opens tonight in three Detroit-area theaters.

In the film, Scheider plays Billy Young, "sort of an aging right-fielder in the line of (former Tiger great Al) Kaline and (ex-Boston Red Sox star Carl) Yastrzemski, and he's playing with a club that's never won the pennant," the actor said at a news conference.

"I always thought the Tigers were a classy-looking team," he added.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — King Juan Carlos of Spain, who attended Harvard University but never graduated, was awarded an honorary doctor of laws degree by the school at its 333rd commencement.

Juan Carlos, 46, delivered the commencement address Thursday to 25,000 graduates, alumni and family members at the ceremony.

The degree lauded the monarch with the citation: "Through democratic institutions he brings new hope to an ancient land."

"I feel deep humility and pride. My humility, of course, is due to the scholarly distinction conferred upon me by Harvard, an honor that I did not earn after years of study in its halls," said Juan Carlos, whose ascent to the throne in 1976 marked the return of democracy to Spain.

Among others receiving honorary degrees were musician Benny Goodman; Theodore Kollek, mayor of Jerusalem; Pulitzer Prize-winning historian Barbara Tuchman; Nobel Prize-winning economist Sir William Arthur Lewis; Nobel Prize-winning physiologist Sir Andrew Fielding Huxley; and surgeon Dr. Robert E. Gross.

NEW YORK (AP) — Frank Sinatra brought his taste and charisma to Carnegie Hall on Wednesday night and the audience loved it.

Sinatra's concert was mellow, without strain. It was upbeat, no "drinking, my friend, to the end of a brief love affair" songs. Radiating a kind of warm glow, he seems like "the natural" among singers.

The 68-year-old Sinatra's voice had some rasp and roughness. Sometimes, as in "Here's That Rainy Day," he used it to advantage.

Jimmy Snyder

DENVER (AP) — The AMC Cancer Research Center is considering whether to withhold sports gambling expert Jimmy "The Greek" Snyder's fee for a speech that the center's president described as "revolting."

The center has sent out letters apologizing for Snyder's behavior at the fund-raising dinner, calling his remarks "about three minutes of verbal abuse, insults and bigotry."

Snyder spoke May 17 to about 500 people who paid $550 apiece.

Prince speaks out about money

COPENHAGEN, Denmark (AP) — After more than 17 years as Denmark's prince consort, the former Count Henri Andre Marie Jean de Laborde de Monpezat still figures large sums in French, small ones in Danish.

But he now dreams "almost exclusively" in Danish, and he's stirred up some Danes by dreaming publicly about a paycheck of his own.

The Frenchman who abandoned a diplomatic career to become the husband of Queen Margrethe II of Denmark brought up the issue in newspaper interviews in advance of his 50th birthday on June 11.

Prince Henrik said he simply couldn't understand why, in a modern society that hails equality of the sexes, a consort should be "in about the same postion as Arab womez whose suppression isconsidered so outrageous."

An easygoing man, Henrik said it with a laugh. But he obviously had given the matter serious thought after a long struggle to come to terms with Danish mentality and an informal yet dignified monarchical style that came naturally to Margrethe.

The 17 years have been anything but smooth sailing for the former third secretary of the French Embassy in London. He's been criticized for everything from "delusions of grandeur" to "reactionary and typically French" views that spanking is good for children.

Now, however, opinion polls give Henrik high marks for doing "a good job." An admiral in the navy and an army and air force general who has flown the F-16 supersonic fighter, he founded and is president of the Danish branch of the World Wildlife Fund and is a volunteer worker for the Danish Red Cross. Danish industrialists praise him for his export-promoting missions abroad.

Also available for less prestigious jobs, Henrik recently inargurated a new monkey cage for the Copenhagen Zoo.

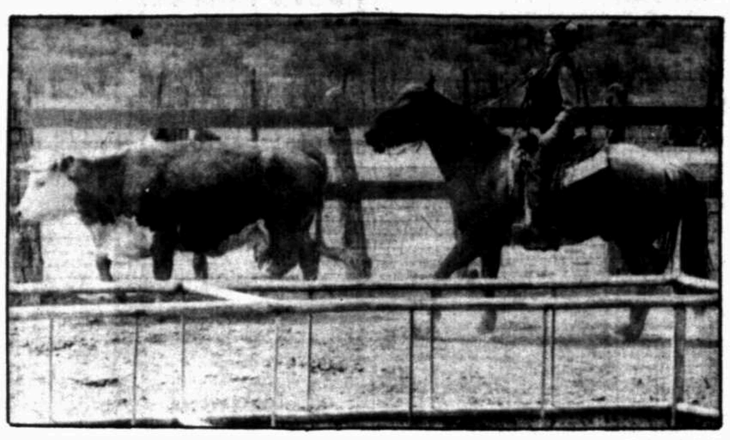
Woman foreman involved in all areas of ranching

SPUR, Texas (AP) — Alice Roby is in charge of load-out when her boss, Weldon Edwards, holds the annual bull auction or a cow dispersion sale at his Clyde Ranch headquarters.

"In 1980, we sold 1,500 head of cattle in a three days," Edwards said. "At any time she could tell you where any animal was, and we had about 30 pens." Her system of keeping talley is one she devised but the secret of her success, Mrs. Roby insists, is "I don't let anybody else have the books."

Back at the ranch, Edwards' 17,000-acre spread near Spur, her job is not always so specialized. She's manager and foreman on the registered Hereford cow-and-calf operation with the full-time help of a couple who live on the ranch and one other man. She has part-time help from local cowboys hired for specific tasks. And she's involved in every area of the work.



AP Laserphoto

Alice Roby is foreman at the 17,000 acre spread near Spur, Texas, belonging to Weldon Edwards. Mrs. Roby took over the job, held by her husband until his death in 1976.

MRS. ROBY grew up on a ranch in Uvalde County, a steer operation, and after her marriage to E.G. Roby, she continued to be involved in ranching. The Robys moved to the Spur ranch in 1972, where he took over as foreman and she kept the books and worked alongside him on the acreage that had once been a part of the huge and historic Swenson Ranch.

After Roby died in 1976, Edwards offered the foreman's job to his widow. She accepted, but only for six months to see how it would work out. Edwards said he never had any doubts that it would.

And he has not changed his mind about his foreman's abilities.

"I'll say this," he said, "I don't think there's a woman anywhere equal to her as far as knowledge of cattle and handling personnel are concerned.

"We tag our cows' ears with numbers and tatoo them with the same number, and it's uncanny how she can look across the pasture at a cow and tell you her number, what kind of calf she had and the sire. There's not any part of ranching she can't do. She's small, but when she gets into a pen of cattle, people are amazed at how quick she can turn a cow around. She knows what that cow is going to do. I've cautioned her to be more careful, and she does get kicked once in awhile, but she's not afraid of anything.

"And she can do it all."

THE RANCH, which runs from 500 to 1,500 cows and calves combined, is an artificial insemination operation, and the responsibility for that process is Mrs. Roby's.

"I finally broke down, when I was past 55 — I'm 60 now — and went to AI school in Lubbock," Mrs. Roby said.

Mrs. Roby also discovered that knowledge and skills were not quite enough, so she started on a program with barbells to strengthen her arms for the strenuous task.

Mrs. Roby begins artificially inseminating the animals Nov. 20 and the process continues to Aug. 1. Calving begins by Sept. 1 and lasted this year through the end of May, she said. Cows that do not respond to artificial procedures are bred naturally.

Alice Roby's day begins when she gets up at 5 a.m., makes coffee and goes back to bed to drink two cups. Then she's up to saddle her horse, Cherokee, load him into a trailer and take off with the others at 7 o'clock for a busy day. The artificial insemination cows are checked, the appropriate ones bred and the group moves to another of the four pastures for a check and head count of every cow and calf. Cows in the artificial insemination program are fed every day and "everything on the ranch" is fed every other day.

ON A ROUTINE day Mrs. Roby is back at the rock ranch house by 11 a.m. for breakfast. On days when there's work for extra cowboys, she has lunch cooking when she leaves, and it's ready except for a few finishing touches when they return around noon or 1 p.m. The menu usually includes ranch-grown beef.

"And cowboys always have to have beans," she said. Someone once asked her if, being a woman, she had trouble hiring cowboys.

"No," she said, "I'm a good cook."

Non-daily, but routine, events include brucelosis testing, the various vaccinations, putting insecticide and fly tags in ears, spraying for lice and ticks about three times a year and for grubs once a year, giving the various shots including vitamins and taking other cattle health precautions.

SOMETIMES intuition prompts a search that turns up the second of twin baby calves. Very young calves sleep a lot, Mrs. Roby said, and sometimes only one calf will follow the mother as she grazes and she will not go back to the other. The foreman has been especially watchful this year since already five sets of twins have been born, each set by a different sire.

Predators, especially coyotes, are still a threat, but the problem is not nearly as bad as in years past. She kills about a dozen rattlesnakes a year, Mrs. Roby guesses.

Last winter's extended cold spell posed lots of problems, Mrs. Roby said. The cattle are usually left to take care of themselves, but calves born during such weather have to be taken to shelter.

"We put the calf in a pickup and drive slowly while the mother follows," she said. She lost a few calves, and others had their ears frozen off. Miles of water line buried 18 inches deep froze and burst in several places keeping the ranch crew busy for days. Ice was 14 inches deep on watering troughs.

But spring follows winter, and there's the fascination of changing seasons.

"And when I get restless, I go down to the brakes," Mrs. Roby said. "It's beautiful down there."

KEEP THAT GREAT GM FEELING WITH GENUINE GM PARTS

We leave you few options.

The Honda Accord LX 4-Door Sedan is so loaded with standard equipment that it's hard to list any options. In fact, almost the only one is a 4-speed automatic transmission. Practically everything else comes standard.

So you have no choice but to enjoy its cruise control, AM/FM stereo with cassette, air conditioning and Michelin steel-belted radials. Along with engineering features like front-wheel drive, 4-wheel independent suspension, power-assisted self-adjusting front disc brakes and a powerful new 12-valve engine.

More power to you: there's variable-assist power steering, power windows, power door locks and a power antenna.

The 1984 Honda Accord LX 4-Door Sedan. For people who are choosy about their options.
