Sharon found responsible for massacre

JERUSALEM (AP) — A special inquiry commission, in a report that could shatter Israel's leadership, today found Defense Minister Ariel Sharon personally responsible for the Beirut refugee camp massacre and called on him to resign.

The panel said Israeli leaders should have foreseen that allowing Lebanese militiamen into the camps might result in needless bloodshed.

It rebuked Prime Minister Menachem Begin for what it called his "indifference" during last September's slaughter of hundreds of Palestinian refugees by Lebanese Christian militiamen. But the commission, composed of two Supreme Court justices and a retired general, recommended no action against the prime minister.

THE PANEL accused Sharon of "blunders" and said it found "the minister of defense bears personal responsibility. In our opinion it is fitting that the minister of defense draw the appropriate personal conclusions...."

Begin called a Cabinet meeting for this morning, but it was then postponed until 3 p.m. (8 a.m. EST). Israel radio said Sharon was refusing to accept the commission's findings and resign.

Sharon

The panel said that if Sharon refused to step down Begin should fire him. But the state radio reported Begin met privately with Sharon and told him he would not dismiss him. It was not known whether he asked Sharon to voluntarily resign.

The radio reported a furious debate within Begin's multi-party coalition over Sharon, architect of Israel's June 6 Lebanon invasion,.

The commission findings raise the possibility that the entire Begin Cabinet will resign and set an early election. In the past, Begin aides have said the prime minister would step down if any senior Israeli official were blamed in the massacre, but there was no immediate indication whether he stood by this position.

THE REPORT also called for the dismissal of Israel's military intelligence chief, Maj. Gen. Yehoshua Saguy, and harshly chastised Chief of Staff Lt. Gen. Raphael Eytan, Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir and Brig. Gen. Amos Yaron, the Israeli commander in Beirut during the massacre.

An official Lebanese investigation to find the killers of the refugees has made little headway.

The Israeli commission's report, which is not legally binding but will have great moral weight, comes at a time when the Begin government is under increasing U.S. pressure to conclude negotiations for the withdrawal of its forces from Lebanon and to make new concessions in the search for an overall Arab-Israeli peace.

After Begin summoned his Cabinet for an 11 a.m. meeting to consider the report and its recommendations, it was then postponed for four hours.

Israel radio said the 54-year-old Sharon, a popular ex-general and hero of the 1973 Yom Kippur War, had already been offered an alternate post as minister in charge of the occupied West Bank, but was refusing to accept the commission's recommendations and resign.

THE STATE RADIO said the National Religious Party, which is senior partner in Begin's ruling coalition, and the Liberal wing of Begin's own Likud Bloc were insisting Sharon be relieved of the Defense portfolio.

The ultra-orthodox Agudat Israel and right-wing Tehiya factions in the coalition wanted him to stay on, the radio said.

Foreign Minister Shamir, in West Germany today, is to cut short a European tour and return to Israel Wednesday.

The report concluded a four-month investigation into Israel's role in the Sept. 16-18 massacre, a bloodletting that stunned the world and aroused new opposition among Israelis to their army's presence in Lebanon.

Begin at first opposed an Israeli inquiry but he reversed himself after 400,000 of his countrymen staged a demonstration demanding one.

LEBANESE OFFICIALS have said 328 people were confirmed killed in the Sabra and Chatilla camps, and 991 others were missing.

In those camps today, Palestinian survivors of the massacre said the Israeli panel's findings did not go far enough.

"Sharon deserves to be executed because he was responsible to protect the lives of the civilian people," said a Chatilla resident who gave his name only as Mustafa.

The Israeli report firmly blamed the killings on Lebanese militiamen — reportedly mostly members of the right-wing Phalangist group. But it accepted the argument that "it is the duty of the occupier...to do all it can to ensure the public's well-being and security.

The camps were surrounded by Israeli forces at the time of the massacre.

The investigators wrote in the 108-page public section of the report that Sharon was responsible for failing to prevent or reduce the danger of a massacre. "These blunders constitute the non-fulfillment of the duty with which the defense minister was charged," it said.

Rabies roundup

A map at Midland's Animal Control Center pinpoints the six spots where rabid skunks have been found within the city limits.

Sixth rabid skunk found inside city limits

By VINCE GIORGI

Midlanders are once again being encouraged to vaccinate their pets for rabies after animal control officials captured a rabid skunk in the 2100 block of N. Pecos St. Wednesday — the sixth confirmed case of rabies inside city limits during the past 12 months.

Brandy Rininger, Animal Control Center license clerk, said animal control employees will canvass homes within a five-block radius of the Pecos Street location today and Wednesday, encouraging residents to vaccinate their pets.

An animal control worker discovered the skunk — salivating heavily and acting unnaturally friendly — after the animal came in contact with a dog. Although the dog was not bitten, the skunk was destroyed and sent to the state health department in Austin for rabies tests. Ms. Rininger said the tests came back positive Saturday.

She said the dog had received a rabies vaccination within the past year, and was immediately re-vaccinated and quarantined at its owner's home.

During 1982, five rabid skunks were found generally on the city's western fringe. The most recent case — the first this year — puts the rabies problem "right in the middle of town," she said.

"The people in the county have a lot to worry about too. They have more skunks and probably more positive cases, except nobody knows about it."

— Brandy Rininger

"We would really like to see a lot of people vaccinating their animals that aren't already vaccinated," she said.

Ms. Rininger said that although they have no explanation for the increased evidence of rabid skunks within the city, she expects the problem to intensify as the animals emerge from hibernation.

She added that although the skunks seem to be gravitating toward the city, county residents should also keep their animals confined and vaccinated.

"The people in the county have a lot to worry about too," she said. "They have more skunks and probably more positive cases, except nobody knows about it."

A total of eight rabid skunks were reported inside Midland County during 1982, according to Jim Johnson, public health technician with the state health department's Lubbock office.

Dr. Tom Green, a Midland veterinarian, said that for whatever reason, rabid skunks are often found most frequently in December, January and February. Green said the search for food may be driving the animals into populated areas.

He said Midland County is a rabies endemic area, where the threat of a rabies outbreak is constant. He stressed that Midlanders should vaccinate their pets once a year, as required by state law.

During 1982, rabid skunks were found April 28 at 4700 Leisure Drive, Aug. 4 at 4806 Thomason Drive, Oct. 27 at 4721 Cherokee Drive, Dec. 6 at 1218 S. Pratt St. and Dec. 21 at 3401 W. Michigan Ave.

Ms. Rininger said there have been no reported cases of a domestic animal contracting rabies during the past year.

How dry I am: Water level falling in Shell Avenue tank

By VINCE GIORGI
Staff Writer

City officials were scratching their heads and looking for leaks this morning after a million-gallon water tower on Shell Avenue in west Midland mysteriously lost more than half its contents overnight and continued to lose water as late as 9:30 a.m. today.

The tank's water level reportedly began receding at approximately 8:30 p.m. Monday and dropped to about half-full by midnight, according to John Lowe, Midland's utilities director. Lowe said the water level dipped sharply at about 6 a.m. this morning, normally a peak time for water usage.

"We're pumping more water into the system than is normal for this time of year," said Lowe. "They're having trouble maintaining the level on the thing. Why, I don't know."

Don Collier, superintendent of water purification, said city employees searched unsuccessfully for leaks in the city's water distribution system Monday night. At about 9:30 a.m. today, Collier said two pumps were flushing 4,700 gallons of water per minute into the tank, but the water level continued to slowly recede.

"Normally, at this time of year it would hold it...it would gain," said Collier, adding that water in the 28-foot deep tank had dwindled to about 11-12 feet. It had been about two-thirds full.

Collier said the dramatic loss of water is difficult to explain in terms of normal usage by residents. He said such a steep drop in the water level is especially unusual during winter.

Collier said the telltale sign of a pipe break or leak — complaints of low water pressure from residents — had not been received.

"As far as complaints, we haven't gotten any. And that's what's got me buffaloed," he said.

City police and fire departments were informed of the draining tank Monday evening. All city police units were asked to be on the lookout for large amounts of backed-up water. The police bulletin informed the units that "the water tower will blow out if the back-up trouble is not located."

Lowe said he had no idea who supplied the information to the police or fire department, and said there is no danger of the water tower "blowing out."

"It doesn't make any sense to me," said Lowe. "There's no way that tank can blow out."

Collier said the dwindling water supply should not cause an interruption of service to residents.

He said city employees checked the location of a large water line break Jan. 27 on Midkiff Road near Reo Drive, but found no visible leaks.

Giving a "thumbs up" sign as he leaves federal court in Jacksonville, Fla., is Jimmy Chagra.

Chagra's acquittal 'unbelievable'

Related story, Page 2A

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — The attorney for Jamiel "Jimmy" Chagra, found innocent in the slaying of a federal judge though his wife and the actual hit man were convicted earlier, says he "can't believe" that his client was acquitted.

Chagra, a 38-year-old convicted narcotics dealer and former high-stakes Las Vegas gambler, was acquitted Monday of murder in the 1979 assassination of U.S. District Judge John H. Wood Jr. He was convicted on two lesser charges.

The acquittal came although Charles V. Harrelson, whom Chagra was accused of paying $250,000 to kill Wood, already had been convicted of the crime in a separate trial in San Antonio, Texas.

Chagra's wife, Elizabeth, was found guilty at the first trial of conspiring to murder Wood and cover up the crime.

Oscar B. Goodman, Chagra's Las Vegas lawyer, said he figured the odds that Chagra would be convicted were 8-to-5.

"The fact that the jury did what it was supposed to do was incredible in light of the odds," Goodman said. "The verdict speaks more eloquently than anything I could say.... I can't believe it."

The jurors, he said, "were able to face him in the most heinous of charges and do what was right" even though Chagra is serving a 30-year racketeering sentence for narcotics trafficking.

"Thank God for Oscar Goodman," Chagra said as he left the courtroom. "I'm glad I'm in Jacksonville where there are 12 honest citizens."

Assistant U.S. Attorney John Emerson, one of the team of government prosecutors, said, "None of us has any comment."

The jury did convict Chagra of conspiracy to obstruct justice and conspiracy to possess for sale more than 1,000 pounds of marijuana, allegedly to finance an escape from federal prison.

The trial, which began Jan. 10, was moved to Jacksonville because of publicity about the Wood murder in Texas, including the convictions last Dec. 14 of Mrs. Chagra and Harrelson.

Harrelson and Chagra were the first ever to be charged with murdering a federal judge because of his official duties.

The government claimed Chagra, facing serious narcotics charges in 1979, wanted Wood removed from a west Texas narcotics case.

AP Laserphoto Map

The National Weather Service forecasts rain through Wednesday for the Northwest. Most areas will be colder.

March-like warmth, wind give Basin 'spring' feeling for next few days

Typical of a West Texas March, when the temperatures grow warmer, the winds pick up. According to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport, it looks like a little bit of springtime awaits the Tall City for the next few days.

Partly cloudy skies should prevail through Wednesday with temperatures tonight dipping only into the middle 30s and climbing into the middle 60s Wednesday.

Southwesterly winds should whip through the city at 10-15 mph tonight, shifting westerly at 15-20 mph Wednesday.

With no possible rainfall mentioned in the forecast, dirt may kick up and the recorded amount of precipitation for the month should remain at .03 of an inch.

Monday's pleasant high of 64 was almost 20 degrees cooler than 1932's high of 83. The overnight low temperature of 34 hit close to the freezing point; however, it was more tolerable than 1933's record low of minus 11 degrees.

Man using fund-raising ruse sought in connection with burglary of home

A man purporting to represent Midland College is suspected of a burglary that netted $6,650 worth of cash and jewelry from the Brad Bartek home at 4406 Parkhurst sometime Monday afternoon.

A next-door neighbor told police a man came to her home about noon, asking if he could paint her house number on the curb as part of a Midland College project.

The neighbor said he left in the direction of the Bartek residence, which later was discovered to have been broken into after a rear door had been pried open.

Following a similar incident earlier this year, school officials said they have no one going door-to-door on any sort of project.

The man was described as 30 to 35 years old, 6 feet tall, weighing 210 pounds, having shoulder-length hair and wearing blue jeans and a blue windbreaker. He also wore a beeper.

In other burglary complaints, Jack Arvin of 1608 E. Pine Ave. told officers a .357-magnum handgun and stereo equipment worth a total of $2,270 were taken in a break-in at his home Monday.

And jewelry valued at $840 was reported stolen from the Debbie Olguin residence at 3700 Shell sometime Monday.

Fire of undetermined origin destroyed a well house and its contents at the H.F. Brasseal home, County Road 118-West, about a half-mile west of Midkiff Road, shortly after 10 a.m. Monday. Firemen spent about 45 minutes at the scene.

Texas Public Utility Commission hears testimony on rate proceeding rebate

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — A Public Utility Commission hearings examiner heard oral arguments last Wednesday from Southern Union Gas Company, which is seeking to recoup unrecovered gas expenses and rate case expenses from a previous rate proceeding.

The Austin-based gas company is appealing action taken by the the cities of Barstow, Monahans, Pecos City, Pyote, Thortonville, Wickett and Wink, which a PUC spokesman said have not granted the company requested rates. Interim rates have been in effect since last year.

Representatives of Southern Union argued the "reasonableness of rate case expenses and the merit of being able to recoup incurred but unrecovered gas expenses," hearings examiner Jo Campbell said.

The company is seeking to recover legal expenses paid in its rate proceeding case, Campbell said.

The commission will consider the matter for an unspecified length of time before issuing a decision.

Southern Union serves customers in West, Central and Southeast Texas, according to the PUC.

Looking over the final report on the September 1982 Beirut massacre inquiry, published today, are reporters in Jerusalem.

Despite pact, Israeli presence questioned

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Israel helped arrange a tenuous peace pact between warring Lebanese Christian and Druse militias, but its military presence in Lebanon came under intensifying criticism from Beirut and from Washington.

The Druse and Christian fighters signed the truce Monday after Israel offered troops to police it. But new artillery and rocket barrages were reported in the mountains overlooking Beirut as soon as night fell.

Today, the Lebanese government said its 22,000-man army was "ready to move at once" to replace Israeli troops trying to enforce the frayed ceasefire.

On Monday, Israel was accused by Lebanon of setting "impossible conditions" for withdrawing its troops from the country.

President Reagan, in Washington, echoed that criticism, saying Israel has needlessly delayed the withdrawal and neglected the "moral point" of the Beirut government's own wishes. Israel is "technically in the position of an occupying force," Reagan said.

In Israel, the commission that investigated Israel's role in the Beirut massacre issued its findings today and recommended that Defense Minister Ariel Sharon resign. The report said Prime Minister Menachem Begin also bore some responsibility but did not recommend his resignation.

The report, issued after a four-month investigation of the Sept. 16-18 massacre of hundreds of Palestinians, said the Israeli leadership should have forseen the possibility of violence when it allowed Lebanese Christian militiamen into two refugee camps. The findings open the possibility of political upheaval in Israel.

In Lebanon, a report on state television said Christian and Druse militiamen traded artillery and rocket fire in the towns of Souk al-Gharb and Aitat, three to four miles south of Aley.

Addressing a Khalde, Lebanon, news conference on the Druse-Christian peace pact is Brig. Ammon Lifkin, commander of Israeli forces.

Brig. Gen. Amnon Lifkin, commander of the Israeli army in central Lebanon, said earlier that Israeli forces undertook to police the cease-fire and "react" against violators in the Aley and Chouf mountains, where battles have claimed more than 170 lives in two months.

Israel invaded Lebanon June 6 to defeat the Palestine Liberation Organization, and refuses to leave without permission to to man early warning stations to detect the return of any guerrillas. The Lebanese government of Christian President Amin Gemayel refuses to let the Israelis operate the stations.

Although Israel sided with the Christians in the early stages of the invasion, the Gemayel government's stance on the spy station issue reportedly has cooled Israel's desire to suppress the Druse, an Islamic sect which is a minority both in Lebanon and Israel.

Druse fighters captured the Christian sector of Aley on Sunday, driving Christian militiamen from the strategic highway town eight miles southeast of Beirut.

The rightist Christian Phalange Party and the Druse Progressive Socialist Party later issued statements pledging adherence "to the letter and spirit" of the new pact of peaceful coexistence.

The accord called for a cease-fire, removal of roadblocks, dismantling of military positions, withdrawal of gunmen from urban areas and an exchange of dozens of hostages held by both sides.

Lifkin announced the accord before U.S., Israeli and Lebanese negotiators ended the 13th session of the troop withdrawal talks in suburban Khalde. A final communique indicated no major breakthough in sight.

As the Khalde deliberations were under way, Gemayel told a Cabinet session that Israelwas being intractable inOnegotiations for the withdrawal of its invasion army, Cabinet Secretary Shafik Moneimneh said.

"Israel is making impossible conditions and Lebanon is not pvepared to accept them," Moneimneh quoted Gemayel as saying. "I hope Ambassador (Philip C.) Habib will bring with him a new momentum and an essential support to the Lebanese state and its positions in the negotiations."

Reagan said in Washington, "For them not to leave now puts them technically in the position of an occupying force; that they are there by force in this country that has said to them, 'We now want you to depart.'"

Lebanon's state radio said Habib, the U.S. presidential envoy, was expected back in the Middle East within two days after consultations with the Reagan administration on ways to break the stalemate.

In Beirut, a 22-year-old French soldier serving in the multinational peacekeeping force lost his right leg when he stepped on a landmine while patrolling a devastated downtown area.

Sgt. Michel Roulet's leg was amputed below the knee and he was in satisfactory condition, Lt. Col. Jean-Claude Marchais said.

French officials said today they would increase their force from 1,750 to 1,900 men following attacks in the past two weeks that have wounded a total of four soldiers.

Reagan fires aide who wouldn't resign

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rita M. Lavelle, an assistant administrator at the Environmental Protection Agency, wouldn't jump, so President Reagan pushed her.

In an administration known for the president's reluctance to fire anyone, Ms. Lavelle was dismissed Monday in a curt one-sentence statement released after a day of questions about whether she was or was not still working at the EPA.

The dismissal — and the simultaneous firing of two aides — capped a tumultuous dispute within the agency that had spawned two separate congressional investigations of Ms. Lavelle and the posting of guards over her office records and documents Monday afternoon.

"The appointment of Ms. Rita Lavelle as assistant administrator for solid waste and emergency response of the Environmental Protection Agency was terminated today at the direction of the president," the White House statement said.

The statement followed one issued by the EPA on Friday which had announced Ms. Lavelle's resignation, quoting her as saying she had accomplished her goals and "I'm ready to get back to California."

Why fire someone who has resigned?

Ms. Lavelle was not available for comment. Her aides, who would talk only on agreement that they not be named, said their boss never submitted a resignation. They said she was summoned to Mrs. Gorsuch's office late Friday afternoon, ordered to resign and presented with a prepared press release complete with statements attributed to her.

They said Ms. Lavelle never signed a resignation letter and decided over the weekend to fight the dismissal by taking her case to the White House on grounds that only the president can fire a presidential appointee.

Clay Jones, EPA's chief spokesman, said Ms. Lavelle had verbally agreed to resign and had helped in drafting the press release.

Harrleson's lawyer considers options

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — The lawyer for the man convicted of killing a federal judge says he will meet with his client in federal prison today to discuss efforts to get the verdict overturned.

Charles V. Harrelson is in a federal prison in Bastrop awaiting his March 8 sentencing for the slaying of U.S. District Judge John H. Wood Jr.

Tom Sharpe Jr., Harrelson's lawyer, said Monday in a telephone interview from Gunnison, Colo., that he already has filed a motion in federal court to have the case against Harrelson dismissed.

Jurors in San Antonio last year found Harrelson guilty of killing Wood on May 29, 1979, in return for $250,000 allegedly paid him by Jamiel "Jimmy" Chagra.

Jurors in Jacksonville, Fla., however, on Monday found Chagra innocent of murder and conspiracy to murder charges.

Sharpe said he plans to file more motions on Harrelson's behalf in light of the Chagra verdict, and the lawyer for Chagra's wife, Elizabeth Chagra, who was convicted along with Harrelson, said he also will ask for reconsideration of the case against her.

Mrs. Chagra, 28, was convicted conspiracy to murder and to obstruct justice by the San Antonio jurors Dec. 14. Her lawyer, Warren Burnett, reached in Odessa, said the Chagra verdict should help his client.

"It will make it quite difficult for any court — including the trial court — to fail to reconsider her motion to change the venue of the case, her prayer that she not be tried in the John H. Wood memorial courthouse, that she not be tried along with a man (Harrelson) who had been repeatedly identified in the total news media as a convicted hitman," said Burnett.

Judges will consider Gramm election

Clements' ability to call election questioned

AUSTIN (AP) — Three federal judges called a hearing in federal court here today to consider the legality of Saturday's special congressional election.

The election was set by Republican former Gov. Bill Clements after former Democrat and U.S. Rep. Phil Gramm of Bryan resigned Jan. 5 so he could run for the seat as a Republican.

Minority voters from Gramm's 6th congressional district, which runs from Houston to Dallas, filed a lawsuit contending the election was set for an illegal date and was not cleared through the U.S. Justice Department as required by the federal Voting Rights Act.

Texas Rural Legal Aid is representing the voters. The Texas Attorney General's office is representing the state.

The short time between Gramm's resignation and the date of the election discriminated against minority candidates and voters, legal aid lawyers contend.

U.S. District Judge H.F. Garcia got the case last Friday after three federal judges in Beaumont ruled it was not within their jurisdiction. On Monday, Garcia decided to defer the case to another panel of three federal judges.

The panel was appointed by Chief 5th U.S. Circuit Court Judge Charles Clark of New Orleans, who named Garcia, U.S. District Judge Fred Shannon of San Antonio and 5th Circuit Judge Thomas Gee of Austin.

Nine Democrats and one Libertarian are running against Gramm. The 40-year-old former Texas A&M economics professor quit Congress after the Democratic Caucus removed him from the House Budget Committee for supporting President Reagan's economic policies.

One Democratic candidate, humorist John Henry Faulk of Austin, said from Alvarado, where he was campaigning, that he was disappointed in the action.

"At this late date, five days before the election, it is unfair to the voters to stop the election," Faulk said. "When the election was first scheduled I said that it was unfair to the voters to have it in such a short time, but at this late date we need to go ahead and have the election. I think the voters are ready to make a decision."

Alcohol, marijuana found in dead man's blood

AUSTIN (AP) — An autopsy shows a man killed during a weekend fire in the Texas Capitol was drunk at the time of his death and had traces of marijuana in his blood, the Travis County medical examiner says.

The cause of the blaze, which gutted the lieutenant governor's three-bedroom apartment and temporarily threatened the entire statehouse, could either have been due to smoking materials or a faulty electrical appliance, fire officials said Monday.

Heat sensors in the apartment did not work properly and Gov. Mark White called for an investigation of the detectors.

"It seemed that that fire was almost fully out of control before there was any apparent alarm," White said. "I think it's important to make an inquiry there."

White asked lawmakers for an emergency $7 million appropriation to repair the damage.

A preliminary autopsy showed the man killed in the fire Sunday, Matt Hansen, 23, a horse trainer from New Caney, Texas, died of smoke inhalation and carbon monoxide poisoning, Medical Examiner Robert J. Bayardo said. Hansen was an overnight guest in Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby's Capitol apartment. Hobby's daughter Kate, 18, and James and Joan Waterman, the couple for whom Hansen worked, also were staying in the apartment but escaped.

"He (Hansen) had twice the legal limit" of alcohol in his bloodstream, Bayardo said, or 0.21 percent, as well as "a little bit of marijuana."

"If he was in a place where there was a lot of (marijuana) smoke, he might have had this low level of marijuana in his blood," Bayardo said.

Investigators believe the fire started in a den where Miss Hobby said Hansen had been watching television, according to Assistant City Fire Marshal Malcolm Light. Hansen's body was found on the floor between two beds in a bedroom behind the den.

White: Capitol restoration especially important now

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Mark White says the state's 150th birthday celebration should include a project to restore the Capitol to its original "dignity and beauty."

The governor Monday called for a "rather dramatic restoration" of the historic statehouse, to be completed in time for the 1986 sesquicentennial party.

White said he wants Texans to donate to a project aimed at restoring the original "dignity and beauty" of the 95-year-old pink granite building, damaged in a Sunday fire.

"The tragedy of yesterday is also an opportunity for us to do a rather dramatic restoration...to make it both architectually correct and also a useable facility for our Legislature," White said.

The governor said he had no estimate on what the project would cost. He said he envisioned something similar to former Gov. Bill Clements' restoration project at the Governor's Mansion.

"I would like to see that same sort of thing undertaken with a first-class architectural restoration. If you have a chance to go through the Capitol building, you'll see what I'm talking about," White said in a speech to the Texas Stock and Bond Dealers Association.

The Capitol has undergone many changes since it opened in 1888. False ceilings put in during renovations proved to be obstacles for firemen battling the weekend blaze.

Other changes have been made to increase office space.

"They built a bigger bureaucracy and squeezed it into the same size room," said White.

"I'm very excited about the prospect of turning what has been a tragedy into an opportunity" to give Texas one of the nation's "most beautiful capitols," the governor said.

Former world champion Mike Lawrence is rapidly becoming one of our most prolific authors. And that is welcome, because he has a lot of interesting things to say. His new book, Dynamic Defense (Devyn Press, 226 pp., paperback, $9.95. Available from Bridge World, 39 West 94th Street, New York, NY 10025, $9.50 postpaid) is sure to be a winner.

You follow the bidding and play as if you were at the table, seeing first your hand only and then dummy, and you have to defend 65 deals of varying difficulty. But each hand also has an extra point of interest. For example, this is the first hand in the book. To appreciate it to the full, cover the West and South hands and decide how you would defend after partner leads the king of spades and continues with the queen. Do you overtake the ace to unblock the suit?

If you did, you gave declarer a present of a spade trick and his contract, so let's assume you made the correct play of a low spade. Partner leads a third spade and you win the ace. What now?

You should know that declarer has the jack of spades, but even so he might not have nine tricks. It is vital to exit safely, and the only suit in which you can accomplish that for certain is in diamonds. Declarer wins in dummy and leads a heart to his king and partner's ace. Later, you score the jack of hearts for the setting trick.

How did you know not to overtake the queen of spades? You'll have to buy the book to find out the answer to that one. It will be $10 well spent.

Rubber bridge clubs throughout the country use the four-deal bridge format. Do they know something you don't? Charles Goren's "Four-Deal Bridge" will teach you the strategies and tactics of this fast-paced action game that provides the cure for unending rubbers. YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: TV newsman Roger Mudd, former Secretary of State Dean Rusk, Mia Farrow, country music's Ernie Tubb and colorfull baseball executive Bill Veeck celebrate birthdays today. Also born on this date: football's Bill Bergey, singer Carmen Miranda and the late actor Ronald Colman. Bend over backwards to help a partner this year. Together, you will accomplish more than you ever dreamed possible. A new product requires a different marketing approach. Be creative. Higher-ups are assessing your leadership abilities. Openhanded and generous, you have many friends. Be sure mate shares your enthusiasm for helping others. Family commitments continue to grow.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Routine tasks hold you back early today, but you eventually get caught up. Working overtime will irritate your family, but leads to business success.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You have a new feeling of optimism after a one-on-one meeting. Your social connections help you uncover job opportunities. Rely on your own efforts.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Compensate someone who helps you solve a business problem. A raise will not be far behind. Member of opposite sex is complicating your life without even knowing it.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A change in your romantic fortunes delights you! Be generous with a loved one who is trying to repair a mistake. Artistic endeavors mean nothing unless they are up to your standards.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Unless you control your emotions, you could blow a once-in-a-lifetime chance. A financial matter needs prompt attention. Be more discriminating where romance is concerned.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A new employee provides fresh ideas. Do not let others convince you that your stance is unreasonable. A matter of principle is involved. Play a waiting game.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Do not follow through with an unusual financial idea until you get clearance from experts. Teamwork will promote a happier domestic atmosphere.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You continue to keep one step ahead of the competition. Seize an opportunity to revamp your work methods. Family affairs will run more smoothly if you make compromises.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Romance has its ups and downs. Do not let a loved one's unpredictable behavior upset you. Your coworkers are unusually cooperative now. Be creative.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Follow your hunches. Turn down a spur-of-the-moment proposition. Friends are a source of vital information. Most business transactions will be successful.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Reduce tension by discussing a problem with partner or higher-up. Postpone signing agreements with those who live far away. Deal face-to-face.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You may have your fingers in too many pies. Consolidate your resources. Secret arrangements and meetings are best avoided. Spend more time with offspring.

An open invitation

There is a certain appealing ring to the call for the United States and its allies to renounce first use of nuclear weapons. Latest to sound off on this is a prestigious group that includes former Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara and 41 Nobel Prize winners.

The plea has a certain idealism. If wars must be fought, why not the old fashioned way without nuclear weapons?

But the Soviets couldn't have said it better: Should the North Atlantic Treaty Organization renounce first use of nuclear weapons it would be an open invitation for the Soviet Union, with its massively superior conventional forces, to conquer Western Europe the old fashioned way. It would be as though law-enforcement officers were pledged never to fire the first shot. Criminals would obviously love that.

Inasmuch as the Warsaw Pact has 385,000 more troops, 16,000 more tanks and 1,700 more tactical aircraft than NATO, nuclear weapons now offer the West the only means to thwart a Soviet invasion.

To be sure, such petitioners as McNamara and the Nobel Prize winners would have NATO renounce the first strike option only after a $100 billion strengthening of its conventional forces.

Tempting as this may seem, the price is prohibitive when the sentiment of the day is for less government spending.

Moreover, the Soviets surely would counter by increasing their conventional forces and we would have a conventional arms race to match the scramble for nuclear weapons.

In our own best interest, we must not renounce the first use of nuclear weapons. We have, however, properly renounced their use for aggression.

As Secretary of Defense Caspar Weinberger has commented, the strategy of the United States is to deter war by having forces "able to respond in a measured and prudent manner to the threat posed by the Soviet Union." In other words, nuclear weapons can deter aggression and prevent war only if they can be used first.

Convertible comeback

Do motorists want more breezes wafting through their hair, the glint of sunbeams on their brow? Are convertible cars really staging a comeback?

Interest at new car showrooms seems to indicate they are.

Chrysler sampled the market by manufacturing 2,500 convertibles and was surprised and delighted by demand. They have upped their production schedules on the convertible line.

In the early '70s, people turned to enclosed cars, substituting air conditioning and stereo for top-down communing with nature. Convertible sales plunged.

Even during the best years, convertibles only counted for 2 percent of total car sales. Automakers considered them more of a pain than an asset. Now, a 2 percent sales boost would be a minor miracle.

There are motorists who hate their cars — who want only to get from here to there without breakdown or hassle. And there are those "get-out-and-get-under" drivers who admire a well-turned fender, a classic bumper, an engine that purrs like a kitten.

It's likely they're the ones bringingback the convertible.

Another View:

Payment for skills

Stripped to its essentials, the college athletic scholarship is simply a form of payment to a talented young person, given in return for helping enhance the school's athletic reputation and its treasury. Some call this the hypocrisy of univeristy sports. They are mistaken. The hypocrisy occurs when colleges don't give full payment for the athletic services rendered to them.

Colleges don't owe their officially amateur athletes what a professional football or basketball team might pay. But they do have the obligation to give their athletes what the rules allow and what the scholarship implies — an education. And too many times they've welshed on the deal.

It's not just that a high percentage of college athletes leave school without earning a degree. It's that many of them are allowed to slide through four years of athletic eligibility without making progress toward a degree, without taking a course of substance and — in the worst cases — without even being able to read or write. The problem crosses color lines, but it seems particularly acute among blacks.

This is the true scandal of college athletics, more serious than recruiting abuses or under-the-table payments or alumni favors. It undermines the academic integrity of the colleges. Worse, it exploits youthful dreams and naivete, leaving many ex-college stars prepared only for a professional sports career that few ever achieve. And, in an imperfectly integrated society, it is the black athlete who may be most victimized if the sudden need arises to take up a non-sports career with inadequately developed skills.

So it is troubling that some who purport to speak for the black athlete have so strongly attacked the stiffer academic eligibility requirements recently imposed on member institutions by the National Collegiate Athletic Association. One may, as Jesse Jackson and some black college presidents have, question the racial neutrality of the standard college entrance tests on which the new rules would rely. And it may be, as they allege, that the effect will be to disqualify a higher proportion of black athletes than white.

But for most student-athletes, black or white, the effect of the new rules will be to assure that colleges live up to their educational obligations. It is high time. College athletics have a useful place. But for the participant they should be a means to an end, not a dead end.

Program deserves annual showing

To The Editor:

We were concerned about the article (Reporter-Telegram Jan. 27) describing the Crime Prevention program at the Midland Park Mall (Jan. 28-29) as it focused on only a small part of the overall "For Safety's Sake" program. Only three groups were listed as participants, the Midland County Sheriff's Department, the County Extension Service and the Rape Crises Center.

After working with Midland Police Department Crime Prevention Officers, Sgt. Lalo Camarillo and Officer Ron Benton, as they conceived and implemented this program in cooperation with the Midland Park Mall, we knew the scope to be much larger than this article indicated.

Of course, the help of these three groups contributed to the success of this program but many other organizations were represented by booths, displays and films and credit needs to be given to these groups: Altrusa (Vial of Life), Midland PTA (Helping Hand), Teen Challenge and PADAP (Chemical Abuse), Midland Crime Prevention Commission (Neighborhood Watch), Midland Fire Department (Safety), Boy Scout Explorer Post 714 (Safety Town), Red Cross (Safety), Midland Police Department Canine (Public Information), Midland Police Department Crime Prevention Department (Home Security), Trobaco (Burglar Alarm Co.) & Network Security (Alarm Company).

We would like to thank all groups who participated but we give our special thanks to Lalo and Ron for their hard work and leadership on the program. Let's hope it becomes an annual event!

Motherly love

To The Editor:

My 3-year-old has fallen asleep. I carry him to his room and place him gently in his bed. I glance at his sweet face as I pull up the covers and tears fill my eyes. I kiss his cheek and turn off the light on my way out. Sweet dreams I whisper, but he doesn't hear me.

In the next room is my 4-month-old bundle of joy. I reach down to pick him up and he smiles and giggles at me as I place him in my arms. I think he's going to look like me. What a lucky woman I am I say to myself as I softly kiss his forehead. And to think I was afraid that I couldn't love another child. But he is here and I love him very much. Did you hear me? I said I love him very much. He looks at me and grins. I think this is his way of telling me he loves me, too.

I feel so sorry, those women and those precious unwanted babies they carried for such a short time will never have these beautiful tender moments together.

I could never have an abortion myself. I just wouldn't have the heart to kill my own flesh and blood.

People make up all kinds of reasons and explanations to justify their actions. They look down on capitol punishment and believe it to be a cruel and inhumane way to deal with criminals. Yet, the life of a 6-week-old fetus is determined in terms that benefit the individual or individuals involved. What is really cruel and inhumane is the fact that an unborn baby is guilty of only one thing: wanting to be loved by two loving parents and being able to love them back.

Flaring gas

To The Editor:

Under the guise of conservation, the Railroad Commission is quite strict in prohibiting independents from venting gas from oil wells. Yet the Texaco P1 Glasscock 'K' Fee, 25 miles southeast of Midland, has been flaring gas for over three months since the potential has been filed.

Is Texaco above the law? Or have they merely been able to circumvent it?

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Report to say Russia used slave labor

WASHINGTON — The Reagan administration is about to release an official report which will indict the Soviet Union for widespread use of slave labor.

Jack Anderson

The report is the result of months of study by experts from the White House, the CIA, the Pentagon and the State and Labor Departments. Their findings will come as no surprise to anyone who has plowed through Alexander Solzhenitsyn's "Gulag Archipelago," but their report will give the U.S. government's imprimatur to disclosures of political and religious persecution throughout Soviet society.

The study was made in response to an inquiry by Sen. William Armstrong, R-Colo. He wanted to know if forced labor was being used to build the natural gas pipeline from Siberia to Western Europe.

As it happened, the intelligence on that specific project was scant, and the experts disagreed over exactly what constituted work on the pipeline, sources told my associate Lucette Lagnado. So the interagency group decided to expand its study to include all Soviet slave labor and put the whole issue on the record.

The experts estimate that there are about four million slave laborers in the workers' paradise, a huge drop from the 20 million historians figure were enslaved by Stalin. Although superficial changes have been made in the past 30 years, forced labor is still an important factor in the Soviet economy, and it is still used as a weapon against political and religious dissidents.

The report illustrates the lawyerly techniques used by the authorities to deny civil rights supposedly guaranteed to all Soviet citizens. Free speech, for example, is obliterated by a law making it a crime to "libel" the Soviet system — a blanket term that includes any form of outspoken dissent.

A particularly useful Catch-22 is the charge of "parasitism," which is used when a dissident is prevented by the authorities from holding a job and then arrested for not working.

The interagency report documents individual cases of Soviet dissenters railroaded into the labor camps on questionable grounds. Here are a few cited in the report:

— Ilya Zviagin was charged with disseminating two documents that allegedly libeled the Soviet system. He was convicted and sentenced to two years' forced labor — even though the documents in question weren't presented as evidence in court.

— Herbert Murd, an Estonian Methodist, was convicted for doing church work among young people. He was released after a year at forced labor, but was soon rearrested for failure to pay alimony — a failure that was due directly to his inability to hold a job because the authorities repeatedly had him fired. He was eventually convicted of "parasitism."

— Georgiy Mikhailov was an amateur art collector sentenced to four years for engaging in a prohibited occupation. He was accused of selling art slides to friends, but his real "crime" was patronizing artists the authorities disapproved of. He was convicted even though the prosecution's expert witness refused to testify that Mikhailov had engaged in prohibited activity.

— Ida Nudel, who was both vociferous and persistent in her criticism of the authorities, recently completed a four-year sentence in Siberia. But she is forbidden to return to her home in Moscow, and is forced to wander around the country looking for places to live — a fate that has befallen other political dissidents who manage to survive their stay in the gulag.

— Alexander Paritskiy was an oceanologist sentenced to three years' forced labor on charges of "slanderous politics." His real offense was trying to emigrate to Israel.

UNDER THE DOME: It's not unheard of for members of Congress to author a book, with or without professional help. But few lawmakers have the virtuosity of Sen. William Cohen, R-Me. In 1978 he published a book of poetry, "Of Sons and Seasons," which sold 10,000 copies and went into a second printing. His 1981 book, "Roll Call," was an anecdotal account of his freshman year in the Senate. His latest book, "How to Get the Most out of Washington," draws on the experience of nine other senators as well as his own. A one-time college basketball star, Cohen continues to write both prose and poetry. His staff says he writes as a way to relax.

— It was pretty obvious that the Democratic ovation which greeted President Reagan's remark in the State of the Union address — "We who are in government must take the lead in restoring the economy" — was far from spontaneous. But it wasn't realized how well-orchestrated it was. House Majority Whip Thomas Foley, D-Wash., spotted the opportunity for embarrassment in his advance copy of the speech and quickly spread the word. With many a chortle, Democratic members scurried around the floor passing along the message to clap. Rep. Al Gore, D-Tenn., said he was given the cue by two or three colleagues.

— Like a catchy commercial whose product slips the mind, Sen. Pete Domenici, R-N.M., has a higher recognition factor than the TV talk shows he appears on. After a recent stint on "Face the Nation," Domenici got mail from more than 20 viewers, congratulating him for his remarks on "Meet the Press" and even "Meet the Nation," as well as the show he was actually on.

INSIDE REPORT

Feldstein's folly didn't amuse Reagan

WASHINGTON — Dr. Martin Feldstein, chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers, on Thursday night confirmed hints in his congressional testimony Wednesday and drafted a memorandum drastically upgrading economic growth estimates and blunting the thrust of President Reagan's budget.

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

The ink was scarcely dry on the president's annual economic report, released just two days earlier, which incorporated Feldstein's gloomy guess that, comparing the fourth quarters of 1982 and 1983, the economy would grow only 3.1 percent. Now, in his memorandum, Feldstein was trashing his own estimate and setting a much healthier 5 percent growth figure. He was committing to paper what he had only hinted at on Capitol Hill.

The good news for the president is that the revised estimate means markedly lower unemployment and lower budget deficits going into the 1984 election year. The bad news is that he is stuck with a budget already out of date that projects massive but meaningless future-year deficits and calls for a politically-masochistic tax increase to reduce them. Reagan's budget has become Feldstein's Folly.

The chief economic adviser's swift turnaround left his colleagues in the administration reeling. Arriving here from the Harvard campus with a steely determination to fill the vacuum as Reagan's economic strongman, Feldstein suggested he would quit rather than moderate his pessimism about economic growth. Some 48 hours before his more realistic, newly optimistic, memo was drafted Feldstein was refusing to change from Dr. Gloom to Dr. Sunshine.

His transformation is explained by the syndrome that so often controls economic forecasters: fear of being wrong. Budding signs of the economic spring are leading some previously-glum administration officials to suggest 6 percent-plus growth in this year's first quarter. "The boys in Wall Street are talking about a roaring recovery," one such official told us.

Actually, government economists — in the Treasury, the Office of Management and Budget (OMB) and the Commerce Department — agreed on moderately-optimistic figures last fall. But Feldstein, intent on maintaining academic integrity in Washington's dismal swamp, insisted on growth figures far below the consensus.

Facing Feldstein's implied threat of a resignation that would have embarrassed the president at a moment of acute political distress, Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan and OMB Director David Stockman capitulated. The abnormally low growth coming out of a recession then automatically produced the extraordinary out-year deficits.

To trim those deficits, the Treasury produced the politically maladroit 5 percent "contingency" surtax for future years and imposed it on Reagan. While stillborn on Capitol Hill, the contingency tax breathed new life into efforts by the bipartisan Washington political establishment to "restore the revenue base" by trimming back the Reagan tax cuts.

Even at the 11th hour as he was about to brief the press on the economic report, Feldstein shrugged off a discreet suggestion from the usually all-powerful White House chief of staff James Baker that he might give a little sheen to his briefing. He replied by citing his responsibilities as a professional and an academician. "What about his responsibilities as a member of this administration?" asked one irritated White House aide.

No such recognition of those responsibilities accounts for Feldstein's transformation; it was, more likely, the ultimate horror for the economic forecaster of swimming alone. Dr. Alice Rivlin's always-dour Congressional Budget Office came up with a 4 percent growth estimate (compared to Feldstein's 3.1 percent), marking the first time ever that the congressional bureau has been less pessimistic than an administration.

Feldstein's new 5 percent growth brightens the world for Ronald Reagan. Instead of double-digit unemployment leading into a 1984 election debacle, the joblessness rate could drop to 9.4 percent by year's end and 7 percent next year. Even with OMB's caution in relating economic growth to revenue, it squeezes $20 billion to $30 billion out of this year's deficit. A more expansive growth than Feldstein's 5 percent would bring the so-called budget crisis into easily- manageable proportions.

Feldstein's Folly leaves the administration in a fiscal quagmire, strewn with unanswered questions: the size of outyear deficits; what Reagan should say about the contingency tax, now shown to be as unnecessary as it is unpopular; the need for up-to-date versions of the president's budget and economic messages, whose lack of realism placed weapons in the hands of Reagan's enemies.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Tuesday, Feb. 8, the 39th day of 1983. There are 326 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Feb. 8, 1587, Mary Queen of Scots was beheaded after being accused of plotting the murder of England's Queen Elizabeth I.

On this date:

In 1725, Russia's Peter the Great died and was succeeded by his widow, Catherine.

In 1940, the Nazis shot every 10th person in two Polish villages near Warsaw during World War II, in reprisal for the deaths of two German soldiers.

In 1974, three U.S. Skylab astronauts returned to Earth after 84 days in orbit.

In 1980, Iranian President Bani-Sadr took over as head of the Revolutionary Council, but was unable to persuade militants holding 52 Americans to release their hostages.

Today's birthdays: Actress Lana Turner is 63.

Near-normal truck traffic reported nationwide; Acts of violence drop

By The Associated Press

States from Florida to California reported a sharp drop in violence and near-normal truck traffic as the independent truckers strike entered its ninth day, and federal officials said the shutdown was causing only "minimum delays" in shipments of perishable goods.

In Ohio and Pennsylvania, the most trouble-prone states on the heavily traveled Chicago-to-New York corridor, state police said they received no reports of significant violence Monday, although 17 men were charged with rioting after a rock was lobbed at a truck near Youngstown, Ohio.

The Missouri Highway Patrol said early today that although fewer truckers were driving at night, traffic appeared normal during daylight hours.

More than 1,200 acts of violence have been reported in 38 states since the strike began, including one shooting death, at least 63 injuries and 93 arrests, authorities said. The strike was called to protest rising federal gasoline taxes and user fees for truckers.

In Louisiana, a group of independent truckers called Monday for a return of "peace and work," while in Oregon, support for the strike also appeared to be fading.

"Many feel they participated as far as they needed, and that they need to get back to their own jobs, hauling freight," said Abbott Lawrence, president of Jubitz Truck Stop in Portland.

The strike was having a minimal impact on food shipments except in isolated cases, federal officials said Monday.

"There is an adequate supply of trucking capacity and minimum delays in transportation of perishables," said Martin F. Fitzpatrick, an Agriculture Department transportation specialist.

Weigh station operators in fruit- and vegetable-growing areas of Florida reported that "truck volume is just about normal," said Patrick Riordan, a spokesman for Gov. Bob Graham.

Fewer trucks than normal were hauling produce Monday on Florida highways, but Riordan attributed that to "cool and wet conditions in the field." Fewer crops were picked during the weekend, so there was less produce to move, he said.

"We have more people willing to drive than have loads," Riordan said.

At several California Highway Patrol weigh stations, truck traffic was reported about normal for a Monday.

"It's been a little down in the last hour, only 300 trucks, but that could be due to the weather," said Highway Patrol officer Leroy Short at the Castaic station on Interstate 5, near Los Angeles.

Mike Parkhurst, president of the Independent Truckers Association, which called the strike Jan. 31, told Minnesota truckers Monday that six bills favorable to the independents have been introduced since the strike began.

The independents want Congress to repeal highway user fees that increase from $240 to $1,900 a year by 1989 for heavy trucks. They also are protesting federal gasoline taxes that rise by 5 cents a gallon on April 1.

Parkhurst, whose organization claims to represent 30,000 of the nation's 100,000 independent truck drivers, also said his group is making progress in talks with "top" administration officials that could lead to an end of the shutdown.

But Tom Blank, a spokesman for the Department of Transportation, said in Washington that "no one...has any planned meetings with Mr. Parkhurst."

The strike is opposed by trucking companies represented by the American Trucking Association and by the Teamsters union.

While the independents represent less than 15 percent of the nation's truck fleet, they carry most of the fresh food, household goods and half the steel.

Doctor asks court to overturn murder conviction

SHREVEPORT, La. (AP) — Dr. Lewis Graham Jr., former dean and professor at LSU Medical School here has asked the U.S. Supreme Court to overturn his second-degree murder conviction in the 1980 bludgeon slaying of his wife.

Graham's lawyer, Bobby Sutton of Shreveport, said Monday that Graham has exhausted all appeals available through the Louisiana courts.

Sutton would not estimate how long it might take the nation's highest court to decide whether it will consider the appeal.

The prosecution, headed by Caddo Parish DA Paul Carmouche, is expected to file a respnosse to the defense appeals.

Graham was sentenced to life in prison without parole in the sledge hammer killing of his wife, Kathleen, in the bedroom of the family home.

Congress favors Burger's new courts plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — Chief Justice Warren Burger has provided momentum to a push in Congress to create a new federal appeals court, an advocate of the idea says.

"I'm delighted," Sen. Howell Heflin, D-Ala., said of Burger's proposal that a special court be established on a five-year trial basis to help cut the Supreme Court's workload.

"It will provide an impetus to move it through Congress," said Heflin, a Judiciary Committee member who is sponsoring legislation to create a court similar to the one Burger proposed.

Under Burger's plan, judges would be borrowed from other federal courts to resolve cases involving issues that have produced conflicting decisions by the 13 U.S. Circuit Courts of Appeals.

Burger, who says such cases take up much of the Supreme Court's time, has long talked of a new appeals tribunal. But his speech Sunday to the American Bar Association represented his first specific public proposal.

The plan received a generally favorable reaction Monday on Capitol Hill.

Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., chairman of the Judiciary Committee, said the proposal "is an attractive, reasonable and relatively inexpensive means of relieving some of the overload on the Supreme Court without establishing a completely new court on a permanent basis."

"The need is there," said Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan., chairman of the courts subcommittee.

Dole said that he would introduce legislation for the special court on Feb. 14 and chair hearings on the plan later this month.

Rep. Robert Kastenmeier, D-Wis., chairman of the House courts subcommittee, said he is "basically in support of what the chief justice has suggested."

Kastenmeier, who has previously sponsored bills to create an "intercircuit tribunal" in the appeals system, said he plans to hold hearings on the issue this spring with the idea of producing legislation as early as this summer.

House Judiciary Committee Chairman Peter Rodino, D-N.J., did not comment directly on Burger's proposal, but he said work on it must await resolution of the bankruptcy court problem.

Bush: No need to 'sound the alarm'

PARIS (AP) — Vice President George Bush, who has crisscrossed Europe to ease doubts about planned deployment of U.S. medium-range missiles, said today he saw no need to "sound the alarm" on nuclear issues with sympathetic France.

"Today, France, the United States, our NATO allies and the rest of the free world face a great challenge by the Soviet Union, which has aimed a devastating and destabilizing part of its arsenals at the very heart of Western Europe — at the soil on which we are standing right now," Bush said upon arriving for a one-day visit.

"But I haven't come to sound the alarm," he added. "President (Francois) Mitterrand has made France's position eloquently and forcefully clear: to stand with her allies in our determination to confront this threat to the peace we have all worked so hard to preserve."

BUSH WAS greeted by French Foreign Minister Claude Cheysson and American Ambassador Evan Galbraith when he arrived from Italy on the sixth stop on his seven-nation European tour. He is scheduled to meet Mitterrand, Premier Pierre Mauroy, and Cheysson before leaving for London Wednesday morning.

Although Paris and Washington see eye to eye on the question of European missiles, Cheysson has said he plans to confront Bush with what he calls "American aggression" in sales of farm products on the international market.

Cheysson was referring to the Reagan administration's decision to sell flour at subsidized prices at Egypt, which previously had been supplied with flour by the European Common Market.

France has never wavered in its support for basing 572 American cruise and Pershing 2 missiles in Western Europe by the end of the year if no agreement is reached at the Geneva disarmament talks between Washington and Moscow. However, France is not one of the five countries in which the missiles would be based.

Pope John Paul II welcomes Vice President George Bush at a private audience the pontiff granted him in Vatican City Monday. Bush is on a seven-nation tour of Europe to ease doubts about the planned deployment of U.S. medium-range missiles. From Italy he flew to France to meet with officials of the French government.

MITTERRAND'S Socialist government reportedly has urged the Americans to consider any serious Soviet compromise short of the so-called "zero-option" — but only because he feels failure to do so could trigger a European backlash and prevent the installation of any new U.S. missiles.

The "zero option" calls for the Soviets to destroy medium-range nuclear missiles aimed at Europe in exchange for a NATO decision to forego deployment of the Pershing and cruise missiles.

French leaders say balanced nuclear deterrence is the only way to avert war, and that the Soviet SS-20 missiles aimed at Western Europe have disrupted the strategic balance.

Mitterrand has tried to encourage the West German government to stick by the deployment plan in the face of the strong grassroots peace movement that threatens Chancellor Helmut Kohl's re-election on March 6.

ON JAN. 24, Mitterrand told the West German Bundestag: "It is our conviction that nuclear arms, the instrument of deterrence...remain the only guarantee for peace."

The concern in France, which has a very weak peace movement, is not over deployment of the U.S. missiles, but over pressure to include France's independent nuclear force in an eventual European arms reduction deal.

The Soviet Union wants both British and French nuclear forces taken into account at Geneva, and some leaders in Holland and Greece have suggested that French weapons should be included in a broad-based accord.

West German public opinion may also prompt the Kohl government to add to the pressure.

France has rejected such proposals and says the issue is not negotiable. So far, the United States has backed France, and one of Bush's assignments here may be to reassure the French that the U.S. position will not change.

"THE FRENCH WANT to be reassured of American backing about not being included in the Euromissile talks," said foreign policy analyst Dominique Moisi of the French Institute on International Relations.

"It may be that sometime in the future during the Geneva talks, the Americans may find the French an impediment, and the French are keenly aware of that," he said.

U.S. officials: Compromise likely in arms control talks

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. officials, recognizing that President Reagan's plan to eliminate medium-range nuclear missiles from Europe stands little chance with the Soviets, say a more likely outcome of the Geneva arms control talks is a compromise interim solution.

That outcome, openly favored by many West European leaders, would permit the United States to achieve nuclear parity with the Soviets at levels far below those contemplated in the NATO deployment plan.

Thus far, the administration has said little publicly about the interim solution, hoping to keep attention focused on Reagan's zero option plan that would ban all land-based, medium-range weapons from Europe.

The Soviets have rejected the Reagan plan and offered instead to reduce their arsenal to 162 missiles, the combined number held by France and Great Britain.

In the face of what appears to be determined Soviet opposition, the administration has begun to consider alternatives to the zero option. U.S. officials, who were interviewed on the condition they not be identified, outlined some of them.

Under the interim solution plan, the Soviets would reduce their arsenal of more than 600 missiles while the United States would agree to deploy a number matching the reduced Soviet total.

Presumably, the figure would be considerably below the current Soviet deployment level and the 572 cruise and Pershing II missiles the United States plans to deploy in five allied countries starting in December.

Another alternative would give the Soviets the same number of land-based, medium-range nuclear missiles now deployed by France, the only other allied country with such weaponry.

The combined number of French land- and sea-based missiles and British sea-based missiles is 162. If the Soviets reduced their land-based arsenal to 162, they still would have a substantial strategic edge because they, too, have sea-based missiles. Only by reducing their land-based weaponry to 18 could nuclear parity be achieved.

Shultz visits troops in Korea, meets with U.S. ambassadors

HONG KONG (AP) — Secretary of State George P. Shultz, after stopping in South Korea to endorse the American military presence there, arrived in this British colony today for a meeting with U.S. ambassadors to Asian nations.

Shultz, nearing the end of an Asian tour that included visits to Japan and China, had reassured South Korean officials Monday that the United States would honor its defense commitments. He also visited American combat troops in the demilitarized zone between North Korea and South Korea.

"We are proud of you, you have President Reagan's full support," he told the soldiers.

"It's not just game playing up there," he said during the 25-mile helicopter flight back to Seoul. "It's for real."

In his meetings with Korean President Chun Doo-hwan, Shultz tried to ease worries prompted by the congressional decision late last year to cut $70 million from Reagan's $210 million request for military credit sales to South Korea.

U.S. aides said the president will fight for the full amount and try to give Korea easier terms for purchasing the American arms. They said Reagan will ask Congress for authority to extend the grace period to 10 years followed by a 20-year repayment period, instead of a 3-year grace period followed by payment over a 9-year period.

Before arriving in Seoul on Sunday, Shultz spent four days in Peking discussing disagreements between the United States and China.

Bulldogs face decision time

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

With four games left to play in the District 4-5A basketball schedule, Midland High faces the "win now or forever forget it" stance. Seven days of crucial decision time starts today at 8 p.m. at Chaparral Center.

The Bulldogs are tied for third place with San Angelo with a 6-4 district record. Odessa High and Abilene High, both 7-3, share the league lead. Midland High faces all three of those teams in the next week, beginning with Odessa High tonight.

The Bulldogs may not be able to recover from another slip, but MHS coach Jack Stephenson thinks his team is up to the task. "It's going to be very interesting from here on out, but I like our chances. You don't have to worry about our kids being ready to play. They may not win, but this team has a lot of character."

MHS DEFEATED Odessa High on the road in the first half in one of the most physical brawls this league has seen this year. More of the same is expected tonight since the importance of this matchup is clear to see. It's getting near playoff time and slips now are costly. Teams that gain playoff berths win under pressure and that's something this league has had little of this year.

Being a league leader is like owning the "kiss of death." No one has been able to take charge of the league race. Seven of the eight league teams have been in first place at some point in the season. Midland High once owned sole possession of first place in the first half, only to see it escape

With this in mind, the chances for Midland High appear to be dim because it looks like it will take a string of victories for the Bulldogs to vault into the playoffs and there hasn't been many "strings" posted this year by anyone.

This is the first year that two teams from District 4-5A will make the playoffs and it's going to be a tight race for first place, much less second.

Midland Lee will be shooting for its second district win tonight at Odessa Permian. The Rebels defeated Permian in the first half and hope to turn the trick again. But the Panthers have been one of the strongest teams in the second half with victories over Midland High and Abilene High to stay in the race with a 5-5 record.

BIG SPRING, Abilene Cooper and Lee look to be out of the race right now. Lee can't gain the playoffs. Big Spring or Cooper will be eliminated tonight when they face each other.

However, there is another big outing tonight when San Angelo faces Abilene High. Should both MHS and San Angelo win tonight, there will be a four-way tie for first place with three games left to play. The way this district is going, that's probably what will happen when the smoke clears today.

Johnny Pannell continues to lead the Bulldogs in scoring with a 13.5 points per game average. Doug Hixon follows with a 12.5 mark while David McFarland is averaging at a 10.9 clip.

Alvin Henry, a junior, leads the Lee attack with a 9.1 avergae while Tod Brown owns an 8.7 mark. Sylvester Johnson, who has been scoring well as of late, has an 8.0 average.

MHS girls set up showdown

ODESSA — The Midland High girl's baskeball team stayed one step ahead of the District 4-5A pack in the fight for the second state playoff berth with a convincing 68-40 triumph over Odessa High here Monday.

San Angelo and Big Spring (9-4) are one game back of the Bulldogs (10-3) with one game left to play.

San Angelo thumped Abilene High 59-19 and Big Spring handled Abilene Cooper 56-46 to stay within striking distance.

Midland Lee wrapped up the district title, beating Odessa Permian 56-41.

Thursday will be showdown day as MHS plays host to defending district co-champion San Angelo and Big Spring takes on Lee.

"If we win we're in," Bulldog head coach Jane Young said. "If not we play at least one more game." A victory Thursday would give the Midland High girls their first shot at post season play and would give the city of Midland its first district sweep with two teams in the playoffs under the new UIL rule.

Shelia Christian scored half of her game high 20 points in the second quarter as the Bulldogs scorched the nets for 28 while holding the Bronchos to six.

Behind 42-14 at the half, OHS came out in a foul mood. The Bronchos committed 25 infractions, most in the second half, in a vain attempt to catch up.

Midland improved it season record to 18-10 while Odessa fell to 5-23. It was the Bronchos' 12th loss in 13 district games.

Orvetta Johnson and Diedra Knapp canned 11 each for Midland. Seven of Knapp's points came at the charity stripe. Odessa's Pam Allen scored 17 in the losing cause.

In San Angelo the Bobcats humiliated the Abilene Eagles behind Bonnie Smith's 16 points. Monica Bradley had 13 for San Angelo, which improved its season record to 16-9. AHS fell to 0-13 in district play and 3-21 overall.

Shell Rutledge had the hot hand for the Steers in their road win in Abilene. Rutledge scored 24 and Monette Wise added 10 for Big Spring, now 15-11.

Angela Riggins pumped in 18 Cooper, which fell to 4-8 in loop play and 12-14 for the season.

Midland High junior-varsity coach Brenda Mitchell was ill and had to miss the JV game. Volleyball coach Linda Jolly stepped in for the ailing Mitchell and with a little help from Young led the underclassmen to a 52-30 victory.

Lee girls nail down 4-5A crown

By CHAD PUERLING
Sports Writer

Midland Lee won its 11th game in a row and with it the District 4-5A girls basketball title in a tough 56-41 victory over Odessa Permian at Chaparral Center Monday night.

It was fourth time the Shirley Stephenson coached Rebels have won the district title since the inception of girls basketball six years ago.

"The first year we played a half-court game, three-on-three," Stephenson recalled. "One thing that has helped us at Lee is that we got off to a good start by winning that first district title and established a winning tradition."

For the past two years Lee has tied for the district co-championship only to lose the playoff berth in a district playoff game. Both times it was San Angelo that interrupted the Rebel's string of state playoff berths. This year, despite losing starting point-guard Ellen Matson to knee surgery, Lee has compiled a 12-1 loop record and is 23-5 overall.

BUT THE clincher didn't come as easy as the final score indicates. Permian doubled the Reb output in the opening period and led 18-9.

"I really wasn't surprised," Stephenson said. "They have a good team and played very well."

What Permian did was break the Rebel's full-court press. That, combined with a 22 per cent shooting performance from the field, put Lee in what seemed to be a desperate situation.

"And I bet you were worried," Stephenson said jokingly to a congratulatory fan. "I had it planned that way."

One thing Stephenson didn't plan was the ball control of Panther point-guard Debbie Hinds. The left-hander dribbled past Rebel defenders in the full-court press like Phil Mahre weaves through poles in the slalom.

Time and time again Hinds would leave three or four Rebels chasing her then make a timely pass, giving the Panthers an easy basket.

LEE'S INABILITY to put the ball in the basket didn't help matters as the Rebels sunk four of 22 attempts in the first eight minutes of play.

"As long as we have the biggest number on the scoreboard I really don't care how low we shoot," Stephenson said.

At that point the problem was that the scoreboard had bigger numbers for Permian.

But Lee returned the favor, doubling the Panthers score, 18-9, in the second period.

Yshun King hit a short jumper with 4:36 left in the half to tie the game at 18. Felicia Farias gave the Rebels their first lead at 20-18 then put Lee in front to stay at 22-20.

Farias was the game's leading scorer with 24 points and King led all rebounders with 14 carroms.

It was Farias' biggest district game against a team she loves to score on. Her previous high was against Permian in Odessa, when the junior had 23.

THE SECOND half had a different look, and so did Lee's defense.

"We changed our press a little," Stephenson said understatedly.

Sure enough, there wasn't one. Lee fell back to a half-court game, allowing Permian to bring the ball in without any pressure.

It worked. The Panthers scored a mere six points in the third period.

This time Lee tripled the opposition's output and took a commanding 44-31 lead.

"At the half Linda (Caroway) told us how many rebounds we had," Stephenson said.

"I told them how many they didn't have," the junior varsity coach interrupted.

"That's right," Stephenson laughed, "Sometimes they just (the girls) have to be reminded to rebound."

Lee finished the game with 42 rebounds, 27 turnovers, shot 36 percent from the field (24 of 66) and 67 percent (8 of 12) from the line.

Caroway's JV dropped their game 62-53. Brenda Havens had 13 for Lee while Permian's Joan Thummel led all scorers with 17.

Short first half has no effect on Chaps

ROSWELL, N.M. — Despite what may have been the shortest first half in modern day college basketball history, the Midland College Chaparrals managed to dispose of the New Mexico Military Institute Broncos in easy 82-55 fashion.

The scoreboard clock wasn't operating, so the time was kept by a hand held timer — one that didn't stop no matter what. The clock ran through timeouts and breaks in the action.

When the half ended, it caught both teams off guard. MC held a 24-21 lead at the time, but it was estimated that only between 11½ and 12½ minutes were actually played in what should have been a 20-minute period.

However, Midlander Jeff Grimes, who was doing the color commentaries for Quad K radio, came to the rescue in the second half when he became the official time keeper after offering a computer wristwatch to be used for timing the game.

When the second half resumed, the Broncos were probably wishing they had the old clock back as the Chaps reeled off a 13-2 scoring spurt against NMMI. The rest was history.

Chester Smith, hitting from inside as well as outside, was a one man scoring machine, as the 6-foot-6 center canned 32 points, hitting on 14 shots from the field and four at the charity line.

Spud Webb, who had one of his best defensive efforts while producing a bundle of Bronco turnovers and steals, had 13 points and Jerome Crowe had 10.

Nate Bufford, the Chaps' leading scorer this year, was held to a mere six points.

Patrick Elmore scored 18 points to pace the Broncos while Randy Raby had 12.

The victory vaulted MC to a 12-1 record in the Western Junior College Athletic Conference race while moving their season mark to an impressive 23-3. NMMI fell to 2-10 in conference play.

However, MC returns to Chaparral Center Thursday for a game with Amarillo College, the team that has dealt the Chaps their only conference loss of the season. MC has won eight games in a row since losing to Amarillo on the road.

After Thursday's 8 p.m. game with Amarillo, MC will have only four regular season games left on the schedule. They travel to Big Spring to face Howard College Monday before returning home against Frank Phillips Feb. 17 and Odessa College Feb. 21.

MC ends regular season action Feb. 24 on the road in Snyder against Western Texas College.

Then comes the drive for a return trip to Hutchinson, Kan., March 15-19, where the national title is decided. To get there, the Chaps first have to win the Region V tournament at Chap Center, March 3-5, and a national tournament play-in game at a time and place still to be decided.

Every other year, the Region V winner has to have a play-in game to the national tournament and this is that year. Last year when the Chaps won the national title, they went straight from the Region V tournament to the national tournament.

Midland College (82): Webb, 5-3-13; Williams, 3-2-8; McCriston, 0-0-0; Dunson, 1-0-2; Crowe, 4-2-10; Bufford, 1-0-6; Robinson, 0-2-2; Smith, 14-4-32; Morret, 1-0-2; Phinnessee, 2-1-5; Emary, 0-0-0; Harris, 1-0-2. Totals: 34-14-82.

New Mexico Military Institute (55): Pruitt, 1-0-2; Brickham, 1-1-3; A. Raby, 1-0-2; R. Raby, 6-0-12; King, 0-1-1; Schoolcy, 4-1-9; Elmore, 8-2-18; Trobert, 3-0-6; Craft, 1-0-2. Totals: 25-5-55.

SWC coaches step into Hall

NEW YORK (AP) — Frank Broyles, Darrell Royal and Woody Hayes, three of the top coaches in college football history, were named today to the National Football Foundation's Hall of Fame.

In 70 years as head coaches, the trio recorded 571 victories against 194 losses and 21 ties and all posted winning percentages of .700 or better. Hayes and Royal each coached two national championship teams.

Although Hayes won his greatest acclaim at Ohio State, Royal at Texas and Broyles at Arkansas, they all began their head coaching careers elsewhere — Hayes at Denison, Royal at Mississippi State and Broyles at Missouri. Hayes also coached at Miami of Ohio, while Royal was head coach at the University of Washington before moving to Texas.

The three coaches, named by the Football Foundation's Honors Court, will be formally inducted into the College Football Hall of Fame at the foundation's annual awards banquet in New York on Dec.6.

Royal coached at Mississippi State for two years, Washington for one and 20 at Texas, where his teams won national championships in 1963 and 1969. His overall record was 184-60-5.

Broyles was the head coach at Missouri in 1957 and spent the next 19 years at Arkansas. He and Royal became close friends and golfing companions, as well as arch-rivals in the Southwest Conference. They retired together following the 1976 season, Broyles stepping down with a mark of 149-62-6.

Shockers gear for shock

College Roundup

By The Associated Press

The Wichita State Shockers have cracked college basketball's Top Twenty for the first time this season, but they may be in for a rude shock when next week's rankings come out.

The Shockers climbed into 16th place in today's Associated Press, but the votes were tabulated before they dropped an 85-73 decision Monday night to ninth-ranked Memphis State.

"The turning point came when it was 69 each and we made three turnovers," said Wichita State Coach Gene Smithson. "Then that little Turner did the rest."

Smithson was referring to Memphis State's "Little General," 5-foot-10, 150-pound freshman Andre Turner, who scored 10 of his 22 points in the final three minutes. Turner made two layups and six free throws down the stretch as Memphis State notched its 18th victory in 20 games. Wichita State is 17-3.

Only three other games involved a member of the Top Twenty and one of them, No. 15 Syracuse, was upset by Pitt 85-74. Meanwhile, eighth-ranked Arkansas trounced Baylor 81-66 and No. 11 Louisville thrashed Florida State 89-63.

Top Ten

Wichita State actually outscored Memphis State from the floor by five baskets, but the winners hit 33 of 37 free throws to Wichita's 11 of 20.

"The free throw line has been our friend this season, but tonight it was our enemy at both ends," Smithson said. "We just put them on the line too much and we did not shoot as well as we should have from the line."

Memphis roared to a 22-8 lead, but Wichita cut the deficit to 45-42 at halftime and tied it 69-69 on Xavier McDaniel's driving layup with 3:45 left. That's when Turner went to work.

"We played well in spurts, but that's not enough," Smithson said. "We didn't play for a full 40 minutes, and that's needed to win against a team like Memphis State."

Memphis Coach Dana Kirk said his Tigers "beat a good basketball team. I thought we did some things real well. We started out shooting the ball. We weren't standing."

Like Turner, Bobby Parks had 22 points for Memphis. Aubrey Sherrod led Wichita with 18, but Antoine Carr, the Shockers' leading scorer, played only 26 minutes because of foul trouble and managed just 11 points.

Second Ten

At Louisville, Scooter McCray pumped in 20 points and brother Rodney added 11 points and 14 rebounds to pace Louisville to a Metro Conference victory over Florida State.The Cardinals trailed most of the first half until Scooter put them on top for good at 24-22.The victory boosted the Cardinals to 7-0 in the conference and 19-3 overall, two games ahead of second-place Memphis State.

At Pittsburgh, Clyde Vaughan's 24 points helped Pitt record its second upset of a nationally ranked Big East Conference team in a week.The Panthers, who defeated St. John's last week, made 35 of 53 foul shots as five Syracuse players fouled out. They also got 17 points from Billy Culbertson and 14 from George Allen, overcoming 24 by Syracuse's Leo Rautins, who also committed 10 of the losers' 25 turnovers.

"Pitt played very well and very aggressively," said Syracuse Coach Jim Boeheim. "We just had too many turnovers to win on the road in this league. This is a tough place to play and we made ourselves look bad."

Elsewhere, the wacky Southeastern Conference race shrank from a six-team tie to just three when Mississippi, Tennessee and Vanderbilt all won.

Carlos Clark scored 23 points and Ole Miss sank 15 free throws in the final three minutes to hand Georgia its second consecutive home floor setback, 76-59, in three days. Brad Pierce's 20-foot shot with 11:20 remaining gave the Rebels the lead for good at 47-45.

At Knoxville, Tenn., Tennessee squandered a 13-point second-half lead, but junior Michael Brooks hit five free throws in the final minute to lift the Volunteers past LSU 66-63, depriving LSU Coach Dale Brown of his 400th coaching victory. Tennessee's Dan Federmann led all scorers with 20 points.

At Nashville, Vanderbilt's Jeff Turner canned a 12-foot jump shot with seven seconds remaining to lift the Commodores to a 61-60 victory over Alabama.

Indiana rebounding is not worth a victory

NBA Roundup

NEW YORK (AP) — New York Knicks Coach Hubie Brown knew that the Indiana Pacers, despite their 15-33 record, have one of the best offensive rebounding teams in the National Basketball Association.

Led by young stars Clark Kellogg and Herb Williams, the Pacers have outrebounded the opposition 751-685, including a 19-6 advantage Monday night against New York. But 58 percent shooting, balanced scoring and a 19-4 second-half streak by the Knicks enabled them to outlast Indiana 105-99 in the only NBA game on the schedule Monday night.

"They hurt us in the three previous games with offensive rebounding and they hurt us again tonight," Brown said. "But in the second half our bench came in and helped build our lead to double figures. In that stretch, they were hitting shots, forcing Indiana to just one shot, causing turnovers and converting them."

Neither team had led by more than six points for the first 2½ quarters of the game, and Indiana led by one point with 3:55 to go in the third period. That was when New York's streak, during which seven players scored, gave the Knicks an 86-72 lead.

"We stuffed them on defense in the third quarter," said Bill Cartwright, who led six Knicks in double figures with 22 points. "They had been giving us — and everyone — trouble with their quick front line."

Arkansas takes 'Heart'

SWC Roundup

WACO, Texas (AP) — Arkansas Coach Eddie Sutton finally got over .500 in spooky Heart O'Texas Coliseum, where his Razorbacks had suffered two consecutive losses until Monday night.

The Razorbacks, shooting their best from the field in Southwest Conference play this year, riddled the Baylor Bears 81-66 to stay close behind Houston in the championship race.

Sophomore center Joe Kleine scored a career-high 25 points, hitting seven of eight field goal attempts and 11 of 13 from the free throw line. He also grabbed nine rebounds.

No. 8 rated Arkansas now is 19-1 and 8-1 in SWC play, a game behind the 9-0 Cougars, who ranked sixth in The Associated Press Top 20 poll released today.

"It was one of our best games of the year," said Sutton, now 5-4 in Heart O' Texas. "It's a tough place to play and we're happy to win here. We played very well. We beat them worse than the final score."

Darrell Walker scored 20 points and Alvin Robertson added 15 for the Razorbacks.

"When Walker, Robertson and Kleine all have good games we are a tough team to beat," Sutton said. "You saw that tonight. Kleine really looked like a big time center out there."

Arkansas had only beaten Baylor 65-60 in Fayetteville.

"Kleine is hard for us to match up with," said Baylor Coach Jim Haller. "Arkansas is much harder for us to deal with than Arkansas teams in the past because of Kleine."

"I know Baylor is struggling," Sutton said, "but rarely have we come here and played this well. I wish we could bottle tonight's performance and have this type of game every night."

Baylor was led by Daryl Baucham, who scored 14 points before he fouled out in the second half.

The Bears trailed only 31-26 at halftime, but Arkansas wore them down in the second half.

"In the second half, we showed a lot of poise," Sutton said. "Our shot selection was good, we shot free throws well and we did a good job on the boards. We played well."

Arkansas shot 63 percent to Baylor's 44 percent from the field, and outrebounded the Bears 29-26.

"It was a solid victory for Arkansas," said Haller. "The best team won."

Arkansas does not play again until Saturday, when it hosts the Texas Aggies.

Wednesday night, Houston is at Southern Methodist, Texas A&M is at Rice and Texas Christian is at Texas Tech.

Richardson joins forces with Nets

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — The New Jersey Nets have the fifth best record in the National Basketball Association, but team owner Joe Taub says a finish high in the standings means little once the playoffs begin.

And Taub says it was with that warning in mind that the Nets traded veteran forward Mickey Johnson and rookie guard Eric "Sleepy" Floyd to the Golden State Warriors Sunday night for guard Michael Ray Richardson.

"I think we'll be a better competitive team if we make the playoffs with Richardson," Taub said Monday during a telephone interview from his East Orange office.

He admits that the Nets, now 31-18, still are not in the same class as the Los Angeles Lakevs, Boston Celtics and Philadelphia 76ers, but he claims the addition of Richardson may have put New Jersey in "one player away from playing with these people."

"The trick is to be competitive to win championships, not to win games. I think we've taken a step in that direction," he said. "It's a step forward to get into the league of the top three or four teams."

TAUB DID add, however, that the loss of Johnson and Floyd may initially hurt the team.

"I think we will suffer in the next few games. It'll disrupt the chemistry some this year," he said. "But we're in a great position to make the playoffs."

Taub also said he knew of Richardson's reputation as a player who does not get along with coaches and management. Richardson, a first-round draft pick of the New York Knicks in 1978 and a three-time All-Star guard with them, has a history of contract problems and tense relationships with head coaches.

He was embroiled in a contract dispute with the Knicks before it was settled by trading him to Golden State this season for forward Bernard King.

Taub, however, says he is not concerned with Richardson's past problems. He is more concerned with the 6-foot-5 player's past performances, which include career averages of 14.2 points, 7.1 assists and 2.5 steals per game.

Bryant may join USFL's Stars

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The Philadelphia Stars of the United States Football League were expected to announce the signing of North Carolina running back Kelvin Bryant and UCLA tackle Irv Eatman.

The Stars also may disclose today that they have enticed wide receiver Scott Fitzkee from the National Football League's San Diego Chargers, and signed Penn State safety Roger Jackson, according to a source close to the team.

Stars president Carl Peterson returned Monday from the team's Deland, Fla., training camp, to participate in a noon news conference originally scheduled by ABC to discuss plans for broadcasting games of the new league.

Everything old seems to be good again

BY SCOTT OSTLER
The Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

There was a time when growing old was hell, especially for an athlete. One day he's losing his cap while chasing flies in the outfield and the next day he's losing his hair while stumbling under routine popups.

But there is a new trend in sports. I am happy to announce that old is in.

Check it out: Arnold Palmer is still charging, Jimmy Connors is winning, Kareem and the Big E and Gaylord and John Riggins are going strong.

The Philadelphia Phillies will enter the long and grueling baseball season with six players — a quarter of their voster — admitting to 38 years old or older. Steve Carlton, one of the six, was baseball's best pitcher last year at 38.

RON CEY, age 35, just signed a five-year contract which could earn him almost $2 million a year when he is 40. Steve Garvey, age 34, jumped to the Padres when they guaranteed him a job when he nears 40.

But even more encouraging than this new awareness that a ballplayer is only beginning to tap his potential at age 35, is the growing movement to recognize that sexiness does not begin to decline at age 17.

I received in the mail recently a copy of a national sports magazine. On the cover was a sleek, long-limbed model, seductively posed in a skimpy swimsuit, a tropical paradise sparkling in the background.

The model is Wilt Chamberlain, who claims to be 46 years old. He is the cover guy and centerfold for Women's Sports magazine's annual swimsuit issue.

Coincidentally, Sports Illustrated comes out with its own swimsuit issue this week, and it is rumored that the cover girl is Cheryl Tiegs, who is 35 years old. Since models, especially swimsuit models, were once said to go over the hill faster than running becks and gymnastics stars, Tiegs' appearance should raise some eyebrows.

It should be noted that Wilt and Cheryl were not necessarily chosen for their sexiness. Chamberlain is more than just a pretty set of kneecaps. He is one of the nation's leading supporters, finangially and otherwise, of female athletes and athletics.

AND CONTRARY to popular belief, Sports Illustrated's annual swimsuit issue is not presented for its cheescake value, but as a reader service, a fashion alert. The magazine editors wish to spare their subscribers the embarrassment of showing up at the seashore next summer wearing (or in the company of a woman who is wearing) a hopelessly outdated bikini. The editors no doubt selected Tiegs, a veteran of many swimsuit seasons, for the aura of fashion credibility she exudes.

Still, it is refreshing to see this new respect for old people.

Jan Stephenson, a 31-year-old golfer, is just now coming into her own as a lingerie model and sex symbol. Over-30 football players, even linemen like John Matuszak, are in demand to pose naked for women's magazines.

Jim Palmer is perhaps the leading symbol of this new trend, the foremost combination of physical appearance and athletic accomplishment. Palmer is not only still winning games for the Baltimore Orioles at age 37, but most women wouldn't recognize him at the ballpark unless he took the mound wearing only a pair of those undershorts he models in magazine ads.

"His ads have made him an overnight sensation in the heroic tradition of Rudolph Valentino, Paul Newman and Burt Reynolds," according to the classicly understated biography the underwear company distributes to promote Palmer's public appearances.

Anyway, you get the picture (or, in Palmer's case, the full-color bikini-brief poster). In our country there blossoms a new, healthy respect and admiration for aging athletes.

UNFORTUNATELY, this creates a major problem for youngsters. With people like Cey and Garvey and the Phillies' Senile Six guaranteed roster spots into their 40s and beyond, there is hardly room for young players to break in. The Angels, for example, are not expected to have any new roster openings for the rest of this century.

And with middle-aged athletes also snapping up most of the cheesecake modeling gigs, there are few opportunities these days for the kids. Increasingly, they will be forced to take jobs in the real world, becoming spectators at games played by people old enough to be their grandparents. And the trend could carry over to other lines of work.

It must be hell being young now. I feel fortunate to be getting out just in time.

Tar Heels remain as nation's top power

By The Associated Press

North Carolina and Virginia, who meet Thursday in an Atlantic Coast Conference showdown, held the first and third spots today in The Associated Press college basketball Top Twenty, while second-ranked Nevada-Las Vegas lost voter support although it remained the only unbeaten team in the nation.

The top-ranked Tar Heels got 44 of 58 first-place votes and 1,116 points from the nationwide panel of sports writers and broadcasters. A week ago, North Carolina, now 20-3, was listed No. 1 by 34 of 56 first-place pollsters.

UNLV, 20-0, had 13 first-place votes a week ago and 10 in the poll released today, with 1,042 points.

Virginia was third again with two first-place votes and 1,039 points. Houston, eighth last week, got the other two No. 1 listings and climbed to sixth place with 820 points, behind No. 4 Indiana with 954 and fifth-ranked UCLA with 898.

Indiana and UCLA, like Houston, jumped two places in today's poll compared to last week as St. John's fell from fifth to Holly Hartley, top, and Nancy Lopez are two of the four leading women golfers featured in leotards in the latest edition of the Ladies Professional Golf Association magazine, "Fairway." Lopez won career victory No. 26 Sunday in the Arden Classic.

Golf tour's leading ladies get physical

NEW YORK (AP) — "Let's Get Physical," say the women of the LPGA golf tour, echoing the lyrics of the pop tune.

"Yes, let's," agrees Ted Haracz, communications director of the Ladies Professional Golf Association, introducing the 1983 edition of the LPGA's official magazine, Fairway.

"Jack LaLanne gave birth to it," he adds. "Richard Simmons refined it. Jane Fonda popularized it. And Olivia Newton John sang about it.

"THE 'IT' is physical fitness, and Americans are slimming and trimming as never before. The importance of staying fit is amplified in the LPGA's playing 30 tournaments a year."

The magazine, which two years ago created an intramural controversy by displaying Jan Stephenson in a slinky white gown and last year featured four players in famous pin-up poses, entitles its latest edition "Let's Get Physical," stressing that exercise can be beautiful.

Four comely ladies of the tour are presented in leotards to exemplify "the look of today's woman."

One of them is Nancy Lopez, who scored her 26th career victory Sunday in the Elizabeth Arden Classic in Miami. Joining her are Cathy Reynolds, Holly Hartley and Terri Luckhurst.

Lopez, who dominated the tour in the mid-1970s, spent two weeks prior to the 1982 season in a health spa shedding 30 pounds.

"The loss has improved my outlook on my game and on my personal life," she says. "I didn't have a waistline for years. Now I have one. That is very important."

LAST OCTOBER, Lopez, whose 1979 marriage to a sportscaster was dissolved, married a second time, this time to baseball player Ray Knight of the Houston Astros.

This is the third straight appearance in Fairway Magazine for Reynolds, a 25-year-old beauty from Springfield, Mo. She was featured in 1981 in the storm-provoking fashion layout with Jan Stephenson and again last year when she posed as Rita Hayworth in the famous bedroom scene from the movie "Gilda."

Also featured were Stephenson, posing as Marilyn Monroe in the skirt-swirling scene from the movie "Seven Year Itch;" Kathy Young as Jane Russell, in the haystack picture from her debut picture, "Outlaw," and Muffin Spencer-Devlin, as Betty Grable in the white bathing suit pose that hung in countless GI lockers in World War II.

For years, the women's golf tour suffered from lack of sex appeal. Adhering to strict rules, they wore slouchy sweaters and skirts or dresses that dropped to the calves of their legs. Culottes and knee-length walking shorts were banned for years.

THERE WAS an abrupt change when Ray Volpe, a public relations and merchandising expert, became commissioner. He immediately set out promoting the good looks of such attractive golfers as Stephenson, Reynolds, Luckhurst, Lopez and the many young college grads joining the tour.

A ripple arose in the ranks in 1981 when Jane Blalock, a former teacher, criticized the Stephenson thigh-exposing pose in the magazine, arguing that the LPGA was trying to sell its product with "pornophotography."

"That's silly," responded Stephenson. "All I'm doing is lying on a bed in a nice white dress, reading a book. The galleries see more of my legs when I play in shorts."

Super Bowl proves to be kickoff to new USFL season

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

Just when you thought the last punt had passed harmlessly overhead and the last quarterback had been sacked in anger, here comes the United States Football League, anxious for action.

The USFL is warming up for its first dip in the pro football ocean and it couldn't have asked for a better introduction than the one supplied the last two Sundays by the good, old, helpful National Football League. Thanks, NFL, for a super Super Bowl and a pulsating Pro Bowl, the kind of exciting games that leave fans looking for more.

"I loved those games," said USFL Commissioner Chet Simmons. "We were just delighted with them."

Did somebody say the pro football season was wrapped up when Washington whipped Miami on Super Sunday and the National Conference edged the Americans a week later in the Pro Bowl?

"Well," said J. Walter Duncan, the oil tycoon who owns the USFL's New Jersey franchise,"we're going to unwrap it,"

You want more football? Say hello to the USFL.

The new league's training camps opened the day after the Super Bowl, giving football fans an off-season of, oh, about 18 hours. Who needs more than that?

The USFL coaches are familiar — George Allen in Chicago, Chuck Fairbanks in New Jersey, Red Miller in Denver, among them. All ex-NFL names. In fact, they may even be more familiar to fans than some of the newly-appointed NFL coaches like Dan Henning in Atlanta, Kay Stephenson in Buffalo and John Mackovic in Kansas City, all of whom stepped up last week from the ranks of assistants to head jobs.

There are a host of ex-NFL players on USFL rosters. The most intriguing has to be combination linebacker-labor leader Stan White of the Chicago Blitz, the first NFL player to jump to the new league. As a reward for that distinction, White got all of about three weeks off between finishing the NFL season with Detroit and reporting to USFL training camp with the Blitz. Who needs more than that?

Now we know you have been down this path before with rival leagues. The World Football League, the American Football League and the All America Conference have all previously challenged the NFL monopoly. You may also remember that each of those entities — except the poorly-financed WFL — have wound up as partners under the banner of NFL.

Don't worry about USFL finances. Duncan owns oil wells. The other franchise owners are equally substantial citizens. Before the league had purchased its first football much less signed its first player, it had a $20 million television contract with ABC.

"They are well-financed," noted ABC Sports Vice President Jim Spence. "A little better financed after our rights commitment, but well-financed even before that."

The NFL provides football in autumn and winter. The USFL will supply it in spring and summer.

That makes 12 months a year of pro football. Who needs more than that?

NC's Bryant aimed for USFL's Stars

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The Philadelphia Stars of the United States Football League were expected to announce the signing of North Carolina running back Kelvin Bryant and UCLA tackle Irv Eatman.

The Stars also may disclose today that they have enticed wide receiver Scott Fitzkee from the National Football League's San Diego Chargers, and signed Penn State safety Roger Jackson, according to a source close to the team.

Stars president Carl Peterson returned Monday from the team's Deland, Fla., training camp, to participate in a noon news conference originally scheduled by ABC to discuss plans for broadcasting games of the new league.

The Stars asked ABC if they could use the conference to make some personnel announcements, according to a network source. The network obliged.

Bryant, a 1,000-yard-or-better rusher the last three seasons, and Eatman, a 270-pound tackle from UCLA, would be major acquisitions for the fledgling Stars.

Fitzkee, a one-time Penn State star who began his pro career with the Philadelphia Eagles, apparently is unhappy with his playing time at San Diego.

Jackson, a member of the 1982 Penn State national champions, has been described by Penn State Coach Joe Paterno as the best safety in college football last season.

Bryant, who recently visited Philadelphia with his agent, Perry Deering of Dallas, reportedly would earn $350,000 per season over three years. Eatman's terms are believed to be in the area of $150,000 for each of four seasons. The Stars got the right to negotiate with Bryant as a territorial choice, while Eatman was their No.1 pick in the first USFL draft.

Bryant amassed close to 3,500 yards at North Carolina, and, along with Eatman, has been projected as a first-round selection in the spring NFL draft. It is believed the two decided to become pioneers in the new league because they can command more money and be assured of starting jobs.

Peterson's main selling points in negotiations with top players has been that they have the opportunity to make more money now, start instead of being an NFL backup, and participate in the challenge of starting a new league.

The Stars received negotiating rights to Bryant under the league format that gives each team certain territorial rights. Philadelphia has the rights to players from Penn State, North Carolina, Temple, Delaware and Lehigh.

The Stars apparently have given up on trying to sign Penn State running back Curt Warner. Warner' demands are too high for the Stars, and Warner wants to play in the NFL.

Jim Thorpe's family at odds over medals

NEW YORK (AP) — Jim Thorpe's 1912 Olympic medals have been returned to his family, but his children are at odds over what to do with them.

The medals are locked in the vault of a New York City bank until the family reaches a decision. Charlotte Thorpe, one of Thorpe's seven children, isn't sure that will happen soon.

"When the seven of us are together there are always arguments," she said. "There has always been a competitive spirit among us regarding our father's name — in sports, in memorabilia, in everything. There is a feeling of jealousy. Families are like that."

After a long fight by the Oklahoma-born Thorpe's family, the International Olympic Committee returned the medals last month for his victories in the decathlon and pentathlon after restoring his amateur status. Thorpe was stripped of the medals when it was disclosed that he had played semipro baseball before the Games.

Gail, Grace and Charlotte Thorpe are full sisters from Thorpe's first marriage. Carl, Bill, Dick and Jack Thorpe are full brothers from his second marriage. The IOC presented the pentathlon medal to the oldest daughter, Gail, and the decathlon medal to the oldest son, Bill.

"Had they been presented to me," Charlotte Thorpe said, "they would have gone to the Olympic Hall of Fame. That's where I feel they belong."

But Grace Thorpe talks of establishing a Thorpe Memorial Center in Yale, Okla., and displaying the medals there. Charlotte opposes that idea.

"I felt the state of Oklahoma sat on its hands all these years," she said. "Once the medals were restored, they jumped on the bandwagon."

BUSINESS BRIEFS

The Internal Revenue Service will conduct a self-help seminar for those Midlanders who only look at tax forms and shake their heads in confusion.

The free "Outreach" program will begin at 1 p.m. Saturday at Midland Center, 105 N. Main St.

According to Tony Hill, representative of the IRS in Dallas, persons may bring the new 10-40 EZ, the regular 10-40 A or the 10-40 with schedules A and B (the long form) to the seminar where IRS representatives will help fill out the forms.

Persons also should bring W-2 forms and any statements showing interest or dividends received to the seminar, which will be conducted in a classroom situation, according to Hill.

For more information, contact Tom Moore, director of Midland Center, at 682-6234.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Starting today, the interest rate that commercial banks may pay on six-month savings certificates goes up to 8.595 percent. The rate at savings institutions rises to 8.845 percent.

Banks had been paying 8.475 percent last week and savings institutions 8.725 percent.

The new rates are the result of Monday's government auction of new six-month Treasury bills. The yields on those bills rose for the third straight week.

For the three-month savings certificates sold by banks and savings institutions, the rate goes up to 8.252 percent today from last week's 8.122 percent.

A minimum deposit of $2,500 is required for the three-and six-month certificates.

DETROIT (AP) — General Motors Corp. says its fourth-quarter 1982 earnings rose 49 percent, to $145 million, or 45 cents a share, from $97 million, or 31 cents a share, a year earlier.

For the full year the nation's largest automaker earned $963 million, or $3.09 a share, nearly triple its year-earlier results of $333 million, or $1.07 a share.

GM said Monday it sold 6.2 million vehicles last year compared with 6.8 million in 1981. Dollar sales for 1982 were $60 billion, down 4 percent from 1981's $62.8 billion.

In 1982, GM took advantage of $252.2 million worth of income tax credits, versus $123.1 million in 1981.

GM also got about $339 million more last year from its subsidiaries, including its profitable financing unit, General Motors Acceptance Corp. The total income from subsidiaries was $687.7 million in 1982 compared with $348.4 million in 1981.

The company also said its directors voted to pay a 60 cent dividend for this year's first quarter.

Other automakers' earnings are due out in the next few weeks.

NEW YORK (AP) — The American Iron and Steel Institute says domestic steel production rose to 1.358 million tons in the week ended Feb. 5, an increase of 5.2 percent from the previous week's 1.291 million tons.

The industry's production amounted to 46.8 percent of capacity during the week, compared with 44.5 percent in the previous week, the trade group said Monday.

Estimated figures for the year to date showed production at 6.478 million net tons, a decrease of 27 percent from the 8.871 million net tons in the previous year.

Production so far this year used 43.5 percent of capacity, compared with 58.6 percent a year earlier.

Net tonnage by district for the week ended Feb. 5: Northeast Coast 163,000; Buffalo 34,000; Pittsburgh 166,000; Youngstown 89,000; Cleveland 90,000; Detroit 119,000; Chicago 393,000; Cincinnati 74,000; St. Louis 56,000; Southern 113,000; and Western 61,000.

LONDON (AP) — The U.S. dollar fell sharply in early foreign trading Tuesday amid speculation of lower American interest rates. Gold bullion prices rose.

West German traders attributed the dollar's drop to spreading market rumors that the Federal Reserve Board would cut the 8½ percent U.S. discount rate.

The discount rate — what the Fed charges large commercial banks to borrow money — is a key indicator of overall trends in interest rates, which affect investor interest in the dollar.

The dollar began the day weaker in Tokyo, where it closed at 237.95 Japanese yen, down from 240.30 Monday.

Later in London, the British pound improved nearly one cent, trading at $1.5382, from $1.5285 late Monday.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Job prospects for teen-agers would brighten considerably if Congress authorizes employers to pay young people less than the minimum wage, a new report concludes.

A study by the General Accounting Office agrees with the Reagan administration's assertion that the existing $3.35-an-hour minimum wage discourages employers from hiring inexperienced teen-agers who lack job skills.

"The evidence does indicate a high probability that the minimum wage is a substantial obstacle to employment among teen-agers," said the report released Monday.

President Reagan will ask Congress to amend the Fair Labor Standards Act to permit payment of a "sub-minimum" wage of $2.50 an hour — 85 cents below the minimum — to young people through the age of 21 who seek summer jobs.

The GAO study said that while a sub-minimum wage would help teen-agers find work, "This incentive might be so attractive that gains in teen-age unemployment could come at the expense of adult unemployment."

The study, however, was dated Jan. 28, shortly before Reagan sent his fiscal 1984 budget message and legislative goals to Congress. In that message, Reagan said the sub-minimum wage would apply only to summertime work.

HOUSTON (AP) — A car being driven too slowly led to the arrests made in an alleged plot to extort $15 million from Gulf Oil Chemical Co., a FBI special agent has testified in federal court here.

Special agent Douglas Hopkins of the Phoenix, Ariz., FBI office said two men were arrested after agents noticed a car creeping down a street near where extortionists had been making phone calls.

The agents moved in after the car stopped at a phone booth and one man made a call, Hopkins said Monday. One of the agents picked up the phone and found himself talking to Robert J. Quintana, a Gulf security officer who said he had been talking to the extortionists, Hopkins said.

Hopkins' testimony came during a hearing before U.S. District Judge Gabrielle McDonald, who is taking testimony on more than 40 pretrial motions.

Four men and a woman from the Durango, Colo., area are charged with demanding $15 million from Gulf Oil Chemical Co. in September and threatening to blow up Gulf's Cedar Bayou chemical refinery 30 miles east of here.

TOKYO (AP) — An aide to former Prime Minister Kakuei Tanaka acknowledged on nationwide television today that he accepted a $2.1 million "political contribution" for his former boss that may have come from the Lockheed Corp.

Toshio Enomoto, 56, told a T.V. Asahi interviewer that in 1972 and 1973 he received several cardboard boxes stuffed with cash from Hiroshi Ito, a former executive of Marubeni Corp trading company.

In a 1980 court appearance, Enomoto had denied receiving such payments.

Out of work for the rest of his life?

FLAT World Economy — Second in a series

EDITOR'S NOTE — The world economic slump has hit Western Europe's declining old industrial cities especially hard. In the past year alone, the unemployment rolls have grown by 2.5 million, to more than 16 million people. This is the second of a five-part series on the global recession.

By MAUREEN JOHNSON
Associated Press Writer

LIVERPOOL, England (AP) — Stephen Sanderson watches television, helps his wife around the house and occasionally visits a pub. His last job was two years ago, and he believes he will be out of work the rest of his life. He is 24 years old.

Sanderson, sitting at home in a bleak state housing project outside Liverpool, is not alone.

In Birmingham, Glasgow, Leeds and dozens of other industrial cities across Britain, 3 million men and women are unemployed. Beyond the English Channel, a mighty nation of jobless — 13 million Europeans — populates Spanish mill towns, German steel centers, Swedish ports.

They are casualties of a world recession that has devastated Western Europe's aging industry, a slump that in this decaying old city translates into despair.

"It's a shame really to bring kids into the world," Sanderson reflects of his dark-haired daughter, Michelle, 6, and son, Stephen, 3, as they gaze silently at a flickering TV set.

"They're just scabs on the arse of the welfare state."

His hopelessness is echoed in high places.

"The longer slow growth continues in Europe, the greater the risk that it will become self-perpetuating," the economists of the 24-nation Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development warn. They predict Western Europe's average unemployment rate, 10 percent in 1982, will rise to 12 percent by mid-1984. Though the United States and Japan may inch forward this year, Europe will not, they say.

The recession grew in large part from strict controls on money supply and high interest rates. British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher has been a champion of such "tight-money" policies, and she has succeeded in her chief goal, lowering inflation. Prices are now rising at a 5 percent annual rate, compared with 22 percent in mid-1980.

But British industry — strapped for cash — has shriveled. Manufacturing output is 17 percent less than it was four years ago. In the birthplace of the Industrial Revolution, automobile factories, steel plants and other heavy industry have shut down.

In this northwestern England port, the body blows were the shutdown of two plants — owned by the money-losing, state-owned British Leyland automaker and by Dunlop tires. These helped set off a chain of smaller shutdowns.

Left behind in Liverpool, whose population has fallen by one-sixth to a half-million in the past 10 years, are the unemployed.

They range from middle-aged semi-skilled workers to most of the 30,000 youngsters who leave the city's schools each summer with, at best, a year's reprieve from the welfare rolls through a state-funded job-creation program.

That usually means 25 pounds (the equivalent of $38) a week on a Youth Opportunities Program, sometimes with training, as anything from a hairdresser's assistant to a metal worker.

In Liverpool, joblessness is officially almost 19 percent — 89,000 people seeking work and drawing welfare. That is well above the record national average of 13.3 percent. But city officials estimate Liverpool's real jobless figure is well over 20 percent.

In working-class districts, unemployment runs around 40 percent. For the young, it is almost total.

Sanderson, who has no skills, last worked as a store clerk. He now gets the equivalent of $81 a week in welfare, and is exempted from paying rent on their three-bedroom row house in the inappropriately named housing development, Cantril Farm. Normally, the subsidized rent would be $38 a week.

Sanderson quit school at 16 and joined the army, leaving after eight months when his factory-worker father went off with another woman. He came home to his mother, three younger brothers and sister, and got married at 17. His siblings have all left school, and all but one, who is in the British army in West Germany, are on welfare.

There are similar stories up and down the street — young people who left school without a job and are now raising families, still without a job.

The Sandersons meander through each long day. They have enough food and heat, and the house is neatly kept. But that is about it.

Said June Sanderson, 24: "He gets on my nerves being 'round the house all day. The arguments are always about money — there never is any — about what we need and can't afford."

The Sandersons are still paying off the living room carpet. Their main debt is $151 borrowed last fall for an abortive job-hunting trip by Sanderson to West Germany, where unemployment is now rising faster than in Britain.

Some work would be less lucrative than welfare for Sanderson.

"I could sometimes get jobs as a casual laborer. They offer 60 pounds ($91) a week. We'd be worse off than we are now."

Average earnings for British male manual workers — women earn more than one-third less — are $202 a week. Sanderson estimates he would need $181 to match welfare.

"Actually, June would be better off if I just left her," he said. "She'd only get about five pounds ($8) a week less."

The Department of Health and Social Security works out everything from the family's weekly check to a $26 handout for a duffle coat when Michelle started school last fall. Welfare brings with it automatic entitlements, such as free milk, school lunches and drug prescriptions, that would lapse or have to be applied for each time if Sanderson took a job.

Several years ago this young Briton participated in a three-month general engineering course sponsored by the government, a shorter version of today's programs for jobless teen-agers.

"I came out of that with high hopes," he recalls. "But I'll not get anything now. I wish I'd stayed in the army, but I can't get back. I don't think I'll ever work again."

Few governments would concede it openly, but many economists would agree with Sanderson — that some Europeans will be out of work not until things get better, but forever.

"Unemployment seems to have stabilized at a high level," noted a December report by the European Common Market Commission.

Reagan aide knows oil patch is angry

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — It won't be difficult for Reagan administration official Wayne H. Valis to tell the president that people from the "oil patch" are angry — Valis found out about it first-hand in a meeting with royalty owners.

Among those trading angry barbs with Valis at a meeting Monday were Rep. Wes Watkins, D-Okla.; Sen. Don Nickles, R-Okla., and many Oklahomans who are members of the National Association of Royalty Owners, it was reported here.

Following the meeting, former Sen. Carl T. Curtis, R-Neb., now chief Washington counsel for the royalty owners group, said, "No one likes to carry bad news to the president."

"But if Valis returns to the White House and tells about an angry bunch of people from the oil patch, well, it's better than if he goes back and says everybody is happy," Short said.

Valis, special assistant to the president for public liason, met in Washington with the royalty owners to discuss the Reagan administration's energy policies.

The members are concerned about several current energy issues, including a move to cancel out the new windfall profits tax exemption for "stripper" well oil that took effect this year.

He disclosed to the group that Energy Secretary Donald P. Hodel will make recommendations on natural gas policy to a cabinet council today.

Sen. Don Nickles, R-Okla., told the group that he would work to stop the Reagan administration's proposed $5-a-barrel standby tax on imported and domestic oil.

"Don't believe" the administration's promise that the tax would become effective only in certain contingencies, he said.

Valis told the group that the administration had reversed some "fundamental government policies" that had brought on economic crisis.

The economy is on the mend, he declared.

"I hope you folks will support us on our budget cuts," Valis said. "If so, we will not have to send up contingency tax legislation. ... All kinds of bad things can happen to the oil and gas industry when an administration opens the door to contingency tax legislation."

Watkins questioned Valis on a statement by Secretary of the Treasury Donald Regan that a price decrease in oil from $30 to $25 a barrel led by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries "would be good" for the economy.

"Would it be good for the oil industry?" Watkins asked Valis.

"I don't speak for the administration," responded Valis.

Watkins challenged what he said was a Regan statement that oil men can make a profit at $25 a barrel.

He said a price drop of $1 a barrel would shut down 1,000 stripper wells in Oklahoma, take $17 million out of the pockets of royalty owners in Oklahoma and cost small producers in Oklahoma $143 million.

Valis said he wasn't sure what he could do about OPEC oil prices, which are sagging under a glut of world petroleum.

"Are you suggesting we prop up the world price of oil?" he flared back at Watkins.

No, the congressman said. He just thought the administration committed some "unspecified errors" in 1981.

Furthermore, pressed Watkins, "nowhere (in the administration) do I see anything about repeal of the windfall profits tax."

Richard T. Short, an oil investor from Virginia Beach, Va., also addressed Valis.

"You (the administration) are going to kill an industry," he said.

New tax forms distributed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Millions of taxpayers are about to get acquainted with a new federal tax form. It's called a W-6 and if you're eligible, it will prevent withholding of taxes from your savings account.

The Internal Revenue Service has begun distributing the forms, well in advance of July 1, when banks, credit unions and other financial institutions are due to begin withholding for the government 10 percent of most interest and dividend payments. The institutions are supposed to begin accepting and processing the withholding certificates now to avoid a crush later this year.

The savings industry is waging a full-scale campaign for Congress to repeal withholding before it starts. There is strong support in Congress for repeal, but House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill, asked Monday what chance of success repeal advocates have, replied, "They have none."

The new W-6 form is similar to the W-2, on which workers claim allowances that prevents withholding from a portion of their wages. But unlike withholding on wages, there's no automatic allowance to exempt a share of interest and dividends.

However:

—If your total federal income tax liability in 1982 (the returns that are being filed about now) was less than $600, or less than $1,000 for a couple filing a joint return, you are eligible for an exemption from withholding on your savings.

This could exempt millions of accounts set up for minors.

—If you are 65 or older, or if your spouse is 65 or more and you file a joint return, you may claim an exemption if your 1982 income tax is less than $1,500, or less than $2,500 for a couple. On the average, a person 65 or older could be exempt from withholding if total income from all sources in 1982 was under $14,450, or under about $24,200 for a couple.

—Banks and other payors may elect not to withhold taxes from accounts that would earn less than $150 on an annual basis. IRS offers this example: "If a bank pays interest on savings account at the end of each calendar quarter, the bank could elect for those accounts to withhold only on payments of interest that exceed $37.50."

So what's to prevent a person from splitting his $20,000 savings among a dozen separate accounts to avoid withholding? Nothing at the moment. But the IRS has cautioned that if such practices become widespread, it may change the rules.

Workers recalled

DETROIT (AP) — Chrysler Corp. has called back to work 565 autoworkers in five states because of plans to boost car and truck production.

In a statement Monday, Chrysler said the callbacks affected plants at Huntsville, Ala.; Kokomo, Ind.; Detroit; Sterling Heights and Warren, Mich.; Van Wert, Dayton and Twinsburg, Ohio, and Hartford, Wis.

Good news in bad news for Mexico

Copley News Service

WASHINGTON — Even Mexico, standing to lose a billion dollars a year for every $2 drop in the price of oil, would see its losses trimmed if lower crude prices triggered a renewal of world economic growth, economist Otto Eckstein indicated Monday.

Eckstein, chairman of Data Resources Inc., an economic forecasting firm, noted that "Mexico, Venezuela, perhaps the domestic energy producers and some financial institutions" may suffer from a sharp oil price drop, but "the problems of Brazil, Poland, Romania, and other debtor countries would be reduced if their oil bills were cut.

Roger Brinner, a DRI chief economist, reported in a study Eckstein released that "the macroeconomic impacts of a moderate price decline would be beneficial."

The advanced countries would benefit from lower inflation which, in turn, would make possible somewhat higher real output and lower unemployment.

"There would, of course, be losing as well as winning sectors, regions and nations. ... For every 'Mexico' (which is now the United States' principal oil supplier) one could worry about, there is a 'Brazil' (which imports most of its oil) about which to be encouraged."

Brinner added, though, that "even Mexico has fewer problems than might be assumed. Lower interest rates, a more competitively priced peso for traditional industries, expanding foreign markets, and generally greater global liquidity are all significant benefits."

A study prepared by Sara Johnson, another DRI economist, estimated that "an immediate $5 per barrel cut in oil prices would boost real (U.S.) GNP by 0.8 percent by the end of 1983, while reducing the consumer price index by 1 percent."

"A sharp drop in oil prices would give new momentum to the fight against inflation," Johnson said.

"The benefits to our industrial trading partners and the non-oil developing countries overshadow the short-term losses to OPEC, Mexico, and other oil exporters," she said. Johnson also suggested that lower inflation would ease the debt servicing problems of Mexico, Venezuela, Nigeria and other developing countries.

Account

Nobody pays you a higher rate for a similar investment.

No brokerage account. No other bank. No savings and loan.

Nobody.

And high interest is only one of the advantages you get with ClayDesta's Insured Money Market Account.

- Your investment is insured to $100,000 by the FDIC. No brokerage account can give you that security.
- You enjoy easy access to your money. You can make unlimited personal transfers to and from your Insured Money Market Account. And you can write up to three checks per month, or arrange for three pre-authorized drafts or phone transfers.
- You can open an Insured Money Market Account with a minimum deposit of only $5,000. Some similar accounts require an initial deposit of $20,000.

High yield. High liquidity. Accessibility. Security. ClayDesta's Insured Money Market Account gives you the best of everything.

But then, isn't that what you're used to?

To find out more about the ClayDesta Insured Money Market Account, call Pam Harkins at 683-2265.

Local oil agent charged in suit claiming fallacy

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

A Carson City, Nev., investor who bought working interest in an oil syndicate but who suspects he lost his investment due to "improper administration" has filed a lawsuit in federal court in Midland against Hydrocarbon Energies Inc. and its agent, Midland oil producer Robert Lambert.

The plaintiff, Phillip H. McCary, is alleging that Hydrocarbon and Lambert violated the federal Securities Act by misrepresenting West Central Texas drilling ventures in which McCary invested $65,000 in purchasing 13 percent interests in three wells, paid an additional $25,071.80 for "alleged drilling costs" and was deprived of $31,427.14 in funds from production runs.

McCary is seeking more than $220,000 in actual and exemplary damages.

The Hydrocarbon wells in which McCary invested funds were identified as the East McIntire Prospect No. 3 in Stephens County and the Lutzenberger and Morris Prospects No. 2 and No. 3 in Callahan and Eastland counties.

McCary, who says he paid $5,000 for each 1 percent interest in the "common enterprise," contends he was "led to expect profits solely from the efforts" of Hydrocarbon and Lambert.

False representations allegedly made by the defendants were:

—No combining of drilling monies from other programs, and no monies from this program would be used on other programs.

—A recordable assignment of McCary's interest would be obtained.

—Good and proper management and workmanlike administrative duties and drilling operations would occur.

—Title to the wells was in the name of Hydrocarbon and Lambert and would be vested in McCary and other investors.

—Hydrocarbon and Lambert would act as fiduciary agents for McCary and other investors.

—Provisions of a syndicate agreement would be completed.

In addition to purportedly violating the Securities Act, Hydrocarbon and Lambert were accused of breaching a contract, committing civil fraud and violating state civil statutes, which the McCary petition identified as the "Texas Blue Sky" laws.

Representing McCary in the suit is the Odessa law firm of Shafer, Gilliland, Davis, McCollum & Ashley.

Midlanders who have complained there's nothing to do, especially during the dog days of summer, will have to gnaw on their words in June.

On June 4, the city Parks and Recreation Department is jumping in wholehog on the national "Life. Be In It." Day with a list of activities so meaty that no one person could possibly taste them all, according to Em Carnett, director of recreation.

To get it organized properly, however, she noted, the department is starting now. And to get a wide variety of activities, Ms. Carnett is asking any organization to submit ideas for the day. Also needed are sponsors to offset costs, she said.

This is the first year that Midland will be running the show from sunup to past sundown.

Objectives of the national "Life. Be In It." Day are to provide a national focus which will increase awareness and interest and raise public consciousness of the campaign; to create a program which will foster participation in all kinds of recreation activities by Americans on an ongoing basis; and to increase visibility of the local recreation and park system and its ability to provide leisure experiences as well a counsel for individual activities.

Promoting the day will be an NBC special during the "Real People" segment to be aired May 25.

Already the preliminary list of events here includes something for everyone.

One event is Splash Day to be held at Doug Russell Pool on North Midland Drive from 2 to 4 p.m. Fee will be reduced to 25 cents per person and free soft drinks will be served while KCRS radio holds a live broadcast.

Sedentary dogs who have dreamed of athletic prowess can try the mini-mini triathlon. "This is designed for people who have always dreamed about participating in an athletic event," said Ms. Carnett with a laugh.

First of the three-part affair is a 100-yard swim at the City of Midland pool. "It's a very easy swim; you can even walk it."

National "Life. Be in it." Day
June 4, 1983

Next comes a bicycle "tour" of Clay-Desta Plaza. And to end it is a trip around the Petro Parcourse on foot. That can range from a slow waddle to a fast gait.

"Take as long as you want" to complete this event, she said. "It's just the idea that you completed it. We want to keep it low key and just have fun doing it."

Boy Scouts Council has thrown its paddle into the ring by offering its canoes for a race in Wadley-Barron Park Lake on North A Street. "Anyone who wants to can try this" event, which calls for rowing a canoe up and down the lake. Someone will be timing each canoer — not to determine who has the fastest time but to put it on the Certificate of Participation, she said.

After the "races," Boy Scouts will take anyone for a ride. Lifejackets will be provided, Ms. Carnett added.

The city's Senior Citizen Center is whirling up some ideas that may include bridge, pool and dominoes contests, she noted.

Tennis players may meet their match in the Infinity Tennis Match, which encourages partners to work together and keep the ball in play as long as possible.

The big evening event will settle down in Hogan Park. "We encourage people to enjoy an evening of fun with the whole family at Hogan Park. We want to change the image of Hogan Park."

Ms. Carnett suggested the family begin by spreading out a picnic supper, and free soft drinks will be available. "We're thinking of having an ice cream freezer contest. People would bring a freezer of ice cream, let it be judged and then sell it to the people."

The city's Showmobile will be set up for a local talent presentation and later a country-western band that will play for dancing or listening.

"We want to encourage anyone with talent to call us so we can set it up. We're open to anything," she said, noting this local talent show will take place in the hour preceding the country-western band.

"We're working with other ideas as to what we can do within reason," she said of activities, tossing out the possibility of a drama group putting on a mini-musical or a musical presentation at the Gazebo in Wadley-Barron Park.

"Midlanders are always saying there's nothing to do in Midland," she said, recalling that oft-heard complaint. "There is no way you can do all of this in that one day."

Midlanders with ideas are asked to call Ms. Carnett, 683-4281, extension 318 or 319.

"Midlanders are always saying there's nothing to do in Midland. There is no way you can do all of this in that one day."

Suits filed

Defective pipe sold?

Two Denver, Colo., companies which claim they were sold defective pipe by Midland's Stucks Pipe and Equipment Yard are suing Stucks in federal court for the cash value of the pipe or for replacement or re-threading of the defective pipe.

The plaintiffs, Axem Resources Inc. and Jerry Chambers Exploration Co., say that they paid Stucks $356,663.10 for the pipe in 1981, but that some of the pipe had threads which did not match up to American Petroleum Institute standards and was "defective in other ways."

The Colorado companies retained the non-defective pipe, valued at $238,277.33, the petition says, and Stucks agreed to pay for the re-threading of the pipe which fell short of API standards.

However, Amex and Chambers claim that Stucks owes them $118,385.77, which represents the difference between payments which they made to Stucks for the pipe and the difference in the value of the pipe which they retained.

Breach charged

Midland's Estoril Producing Corp., which in late 1981 paid Tyra Drilling Co. of Midland $497,900 to drill a well on a Schleicher County lease owned by Estoril, says that the well was spudded about Jan. 15, 1982, but was plugged and abandoned about March 1 of that year.

And in a breach-of-agreement suit filed in Midland's 238th State District Court, Estoril claims that it paid out $179,992, which Tyra was obligated to pay, to companies which furnished materials and services for the well, Blaylock No. 1, south of San Angelo.

Hospital receives donation of land

By GAIL BURKE
Staff Writer

With less than 24 hours to meet a state-required deadline, Midland County Hospital District board of directors accepted a land donation and secured interim financing for its drug/alcohol treatment center in a special meeting Monday.

Today is the deadline — set by the Texas Health Facilities Commission in Austin — for the hospital to "show intent" to begin construction of the facility.

According to THFC rules, 15 days after approval of a certificate of need application, the applicant has 180 days to "commence development," including interim financing, or the application is forfeited.

Legal entanglements have left MMH in a state of limbo concerning the THFC's deadline. MMH was joined along with two private hospitals — Midland's Parkview Hospital and West Plains Hospital, owned by an Arlington corporation — at the THFC hearing in April 1982. All three applicants offered drug/alcohol treatment services. Although the THFC approved applications by MMH and West Plains, it denied Parkview's application. Parkview's owner, American Medical Corporation, has filed suit in Travis County court to reverse the West Plains approval.

Because MMH has been named in the lawsuit, hospital officials have not known if they must comply with the THFC "commence development" rules. MMH has filed a "Declaratory Ruling" requesting the THFC interpret its rules. Although a THFC hearing was to be scheduled later this month to resolve the commence development rules, MMH and Parkview attorneys "are in negotiation trying to work it out," John Neel, general counsel at the THFC, said this morning.

Meanwhile, the hospital's governing boards have assumed the clock has been running.

Even though MMH's state-approved certificate of need application included a land option in northwest Midland in the Fairmont Addition (northeast corner of Wadley Avenue and Whittle Way) for the facility, the option lapsed in June 1982, leaving MMH without a site on which to build the center. The option was offered by an MMH trustee, Eugene Abbott.

But on Monday, Ed Magruder, MMH director, made a motion to approve a 10-acre site donated by Scharbauer Brothers & Co. to Midland Memorial Hospital for the $3.4 million chemical dependency unit. Apparently, Magruder, on behalf of the hospital, discussed the possible land donation with Doug Scharbauer, a member of the MMH board of trustees and partner in Scharbauer Brothers & Co. Past contributions to the hospital from the Scharbauer family have included funds for a hospital wing.

The 10-acre site, located one-fourth to one-half mile west of Loop 250 where Loop 250 and Thomason Drive intersect, is within a 40-acre medical center proposed by Scharbauer Brothers & Co.

Because the new land site has changed the original certificate of need application, the THFC must approve the amended application before construction can begin. According to Neel, "if there are no problems, and it (the amendment) is not contested, the approval could take about 45 days. However, if it becomes problematic, it could take twice that much or more."

Ace Pickens, attorney for Parkview, said this morning he did not know at this time whether or not action would be taken.

In other action Monday, the MMH directors also formally secured interim financing for the center. Bill Franklin, president of First City National Bank of Midland, approved the hospital's request for interim financing until permanent financing can be arranged. Interim financing will be used during construction until the directors decide to finance the chemical dependency center through general obligation bonds, requiring an election, or revenue bonds, which do not require voter approval.

Scharbauer Brothers & Co. has donated a 10-acre parcel of land within a 40-acre proposed medical center, located one-fourth to one-half of a mile from Loop 250, where Thomason Drive and Loop 250 intersect. The Scharbauer Co. donated the land Monday to Midland Memorial Hospital for its $3.4 million chemcial dependency facility.

One-year-old Jordan Iglehart cries in the arms of neighbor Charlotte Lusk, 22, following a fire which swept through a house at 1202 E. Dormard this morning. The house was occupied by Jordan, his grandmother Alberta Tate, 51, and Steve Livingston, 3, whom Ms. Iglehart was babysitting at the time. Jordan was transported to Midland Memorial Hospital where he was receiving treatment at press time for minor injuries to the face and hands. The other two occupants were not injured. A fireman, left, hauls clothes from a back room where the fire is believed to have started about 9:30 a.m. today.

Learn CPR, folk dancing at MC classes

Five more classes will be offered by the Midland College Department of Community Services beginning the week of Feb. 14. Included will be Cardiopulmonary Resuscitation (CPR), Introduction to Folk Dance, Jewelry Making (Metal Casting), Speedwriting I and Stained Glass I.

Carodiopulmonary Resuscitation is a three-week class meeting from 7 to 10 p.m. Mondays, Tuesdays and Wednesdays through Feb. 21. CPR is a basic life-support procedure for a victim whose heart and lungs have ceased to function. After completing the American Heart Association-approved course, the student will be able to perform one-person rescue, two-person rescue, infant resuscitation and the procedure for clearing an obstructed airway. The class is limited to 16 students and the fee is $15.

Harriet Horton will teach Introduction to Folk Dance from 7:30 to 9 p.m. Mondays and Wednesdays for five weeks. Several simple folk dances from different countries are presented in the context of their ethnic origins. Through instruction, observation and practice, the student will develop an appreciation of the folk dances as an art form, while acquiring a basic performing ability. Dances include Highland Schottische, Irish Long Dance, Gustav's Skoal, La Cucuracha, Syrtos, Hassapikos, Rhumba and Tango. Fee for the class is $23.

Jewelry Making (Metal Casting), taught by Larry Gilbert, will meet from 7 to 9 p.m. on Mondays for eight weeks. Students will build wax models and transform the wax design into finished metal products. Because students will be working with a selection of various metals, the cost of supplies will vary according to each project. Fee for the class is $28.

Maxine Jarnagin will teach Speedwriting I from 7 to 9 p.m. Mondays and Wednesdays for four weeks. Speedwriting is a system of shorthand based on longhand for those who want to learn to take dictation in four weeks. Students may purchase books at the MC Bookstore. The class is limited to 25 students and the fee is $24.

Denise Grace will teach Stained Glass I from 7 to 9 p.m. Mondays for six weeks. The class will include instruction on the design and construction of a leaded glass panel, a copper foil panel and three-dimensional construction. The background and some history of stained glass will be informally introduced. Supplies and equipment will cost about $100. The class is limited to 16 students and the fee is $20.

Ballroom Dancing, taught by Ellen Gonzales, still has openings for students on Tuesday evenings from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. Dances include the Cha Cha, Fox Trot, Waltz, Swing, Rhumba, Mambo, Tango, Samba and the Merenque. Fee for the class is $27 and the class is scheduled to begin tonight.

Further information may be obtained by contacting the Midland College Department of Community Services, 684-7851, extension 216 or 147.

Ann Richards

Richards to speak

ODESSA — State Treasurer Ann Richards, D-Austin, will address members of the Permian Basin Women's Political Caucus at 7:30 p.m. Thursday. The meeting, open to the public at no charge, will be held in the Student Union Building at the University of Texas of the Permian Basin.

Ms. Richards won the state treasurer's race in November and became the first woman to win such a high state office.

She taught in public schools before being elected to the Travis County Commissioners' Court at Austin.

Instead, Estoril made the payments subsequent to the plugging of the well.

Before that, however, Estoril by letter "demanded that" Tyra pay its bills. But in a letter to Estoril, Tyra noted that the money was "used to pay for other things."

Designer brightens fading jeans fad

Dyes revived by Marciano

By The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

LOS ANGELES — Last year was not the best to enter the jeans business in America. In fact, some said French immigrant Georges Marciano was crazy to invest $150,000 in demin at a time when designer jeans had faded and the whole economy was pale.

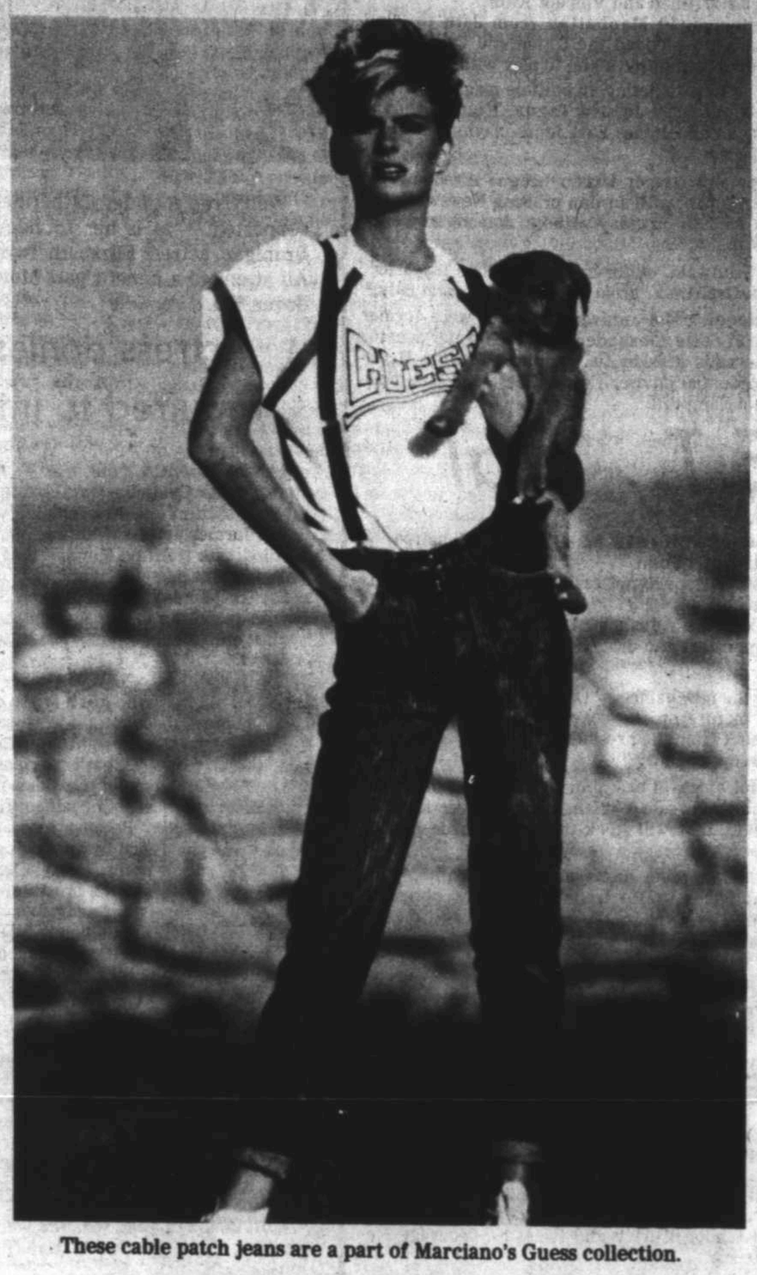
But Marciano, 35, was not deterred. He had learned the garment trade from relatives in France. And though he was not from the "streets are paved with gold" wave of immigrants, he had formed enough illusions growing up in Marseilles to believe that anything is possible in the New World.

So Marciano dreamed the impossible dream: "I wanted to do a million dollars my first year in business," he recalls.

He exceeded his goal — by about $14 million. It is a figure that even Marciano finds difficult to believe, one that leaves him stammering unfinished sentences that begin with, "Only in America . . . ." Meanwhile, some of the trendiest females in the country are paying up to $80 for a pair of Marciano's tight-legged, fanny-hugging, oddly colored "Guess" jeans, and wondering what on earth he will come up with next.

MARCIANO DOES not know. He grossed his first $15 million, he says, "by designing very tight pants with zippers at the ankles." The pants were of stone-washed denim (blue denim that has been washed with special soap and rubbed with volcanic stones to make the fabric look worn). Buyers who first saw his "new look" laughed him right out of their offices. "They said the jeans were too tight and too sexy and looked like they'd been used. They didn't trust me," he recalls.

Then, Bloomingdale's New York store ordered three pairs of the sexy, Marilyn Monroe-style pants, and all sold the first day. The store ordered 12 more pairs, immediately sold them, ordered 24 more pairs, and sold out again. Then they ordered 300 pieces, then 1,200 pieces. By that time, Marciano was beginning to smell success. He also was beginning to sense the wolves at his heels. "It seemed like people copied me overnight," he says, "and suddenly I was seeing very tight stone-washed jeans with zippers on both coasts. But the prices of the copies were much, much lower than mine. I was very sad. That was something nobody had ever told me about America. You can't stand still for a minute."



These cable patch jeans are a part of Marciano's Guess collection.

Marciano had to do something in a hurry if he was to keep his racer's edge. So he overdyed his blue denim pants with shades like turquoise, fuchsia, and yellow — a process that gave them an interesting glow. By that time, he was trusted. Not only Bloomingdale's but also stores such as Neiman-Marcus, Saks Fifth Avenue, Bergdorf Goodman and Macy's were phoning Los Angeles to place orders for his un-blue jeans. And the "forgers" were copying his colors as fast as he could mint them.

A FEW MONTHS into his new business venture, Marciano says, he was shipping $1.7 million worth of denim jeans and tops per month. And switching his colors as quickly as he saw them reproduced by coy-cats. "Now I don't make blue, turquoise or fuchsia. I make pink, ice green, lilac. I make new shapes and styles as quickly as I can design them. I always try to be a step or two ahead." (His projected winner for 1983, he says, is a baggy pant with lots of pockets.)

One step ahead, which he took in December 1982, was the launch of Guess jeans for children. "I hoped to book $1 million in my first year, but I booked $1 million in the first month," Marciano says, incredulously. The secret of his success? "I simply adapted my grown-up styles for kids."

Another secret is that his overhead is relatively low. He has only three salesmen on his payroll (two in the East, one in the West). His brother, Maurice, is his business partner and is also "a genius" at garment production, Marciano claims. Another brother, Armand, is in charge of shipping. Marciano says he invests money only to achieve greater quality for his product, rather than for superfluous items like big ad campaigns.

EVEN WITHOUT the ads, Guess is a name that is on lots of consumers' lips. And Marciano says he made it up himself. "I simply imagined my label on the bottoms of millions of women. I imagined other women asking them who designed their jeans. The answer was always "Guess?" (Many businesses nowadays spend thousands or even millions of dollars hiring advertising agencies to come up with new product names.)

There are those who say Marciano himself is a copycat. "Stone-wash jeans were selling in Paris 10 years ago. He simply brought them here to the United States," says Marvin Chanin, owner of the Champs stores.

Marciano retorts, "So what?" He does not claim that he invented the stone-wash process. And he is proud that he was among the first to realize that it could succeed here. "When I came here, I felt that stone wash could make it big if I worked hard. But even now I cannot believe this story. Only in America can you build something so big so fast. I could have worked in France for 10 years and not come close to this.

AT WIT'S END

Skiers? No!

By ERMA BOMBECK

Everyone talks about joggers being fanatics about their sport, but beside skiers they almost seem lucid.

Skiers are really weird people. Who else would pick a pastime where you select the most inaccessible place in the country which is going through the worst weather in its history, spend two treacherous days getting there, strap two planks of slippery wood on your feet, ride to the top of a mountain and try to get down without the help of the ambulance at the bottom of the hill?

Money is exchanged for this.

Before I select a doctor, attorney or accountant, I ask them if they are skiers. I don't care if they have 15 diplomas on the wall and graduated at 16. I'm not going to entrust any part of my future to a person who thinks the ground is softer if it is covered with snow.

There may have been a time when skiing was a seasonal sport. When the snow fell, everyone strapped the two tree trunks to their feet and took off. That is no longer true. Skiing is every bit as daily and demanding as jogging.

When snow is falling nowhere in the United States, enthusiasts ski in their living rooms with warm-ups and exercises that keep their legs in shape. (Note: If you're going to marry a skier, marry tall, as you have a man or woman who will walk with knees bent 11 months out the year.)

Then they start on Vitamin A which gives them the breath of a thousand camels who have just eaten tainted sardines. This keeps them from going blind.

As soon as the furnace is turned on they start to get their equipment into shape . . . waxing the skis and checking the bindings on their boots. This is followed by the vigil of the snow. Where is it falling and how can they get there when it does?

I am married to a ski person who has astounded me with his ambivalence. He will ski for eight hours until his feet are numb, his mind is confused and the hairs in his nose break off, only to come back to the lodge and complain to the manager there is no heat in his room.

I have seen them all . . . their cars in ditches unable to move, hobbling around on crutches and sporting a cast like a Medal of Honor, and crazies getting in one last run before the blizzard closes the chair lift.

Recently in California, skiers were told there was the possibility of an active volcano under the slopes. The reply was, "Hey, we'll take our chances. Where else can you get a 55-inch base?"

I'll be honest with you. I wouldn't want my daughter to marry one.

Pacific University students get taste of home cooking

FOREST GROVE, Ore. (AP) — Take mom's recipe and increase it to serve 100 or more. That's not exactly mom's home cooking but it does spice up the campus food service at Pacific University.

With this in mind, Peter DePaoli, housing director and assistant in the Dean of Students office, initiated a program to give students a taste of favorite dishes from home.

He sent a request to the parents of freshmen asking for a favorite recipe of their son or daughter for possible use in the commons in Washburne University Center.

"We're a small school and pride ourselves on the personal touch," he says. "The recipe plan involves the food service in a more personal way and gives parents opportunity for another contact with the campus. The students seem to really enjoy it."

Some 24 recipes arrived, and Fran Meyer, food service director, is selecting at least one a month to feature for dinner in the commons. "But I have to be sure the recipe is applicable to increasing to 100 or more servings and that it is not too costly," she says.

The potato casserole of Linda Hawk of Weaverville, Calif., was the first "Recipe From Home" served. Mrs. Hawk's son is David Martin, a Pacific freshman, who was "surprised and honored with the whole thing."

"The whole thing" includes a little more than just using the recipes from home. Miss Meyer has added several touches, including "The Red Plate," a tradition that flourished among early American families.

DEAR ABBY

Phony number may be real

DEAR ABBY: "Disgusted With Egomaniacs" wrote to say that she always gave a phony name or telephone number to strange men who came on too strong.

Thanks, Abby, for saying, "What's wrong with looking them straight in the eye and saying, 'No, you may not have my name or phone number because I really don't care to see you again'?"

I wonder if it ever occurs to the person who gives a phony number that the "phony" number may actually be someone's REAL number?

I have had to change my phone number because apparently some woman had given it out as her own. For weeks I was pestered by the same man at all hours of the day and night. He even called me from another state -- collect! I refused the call while he kept trying to convince the operator that I was the party he wanted. (This was at 6 a.m. on a Sunday morning!)

Changing numbers is an expensive procedure. It's also time-consuming and a nuisance. So, Miss Van Buren, please inform people who make up phony numbers that they may be giving someone the right to harass an innocent party. – PESTERED IN L.A.

DEAR PESTERED: Read on for another view:

DEAR ABBY: Your advice to "Disgusted With Egomaniacs" was totally wrong. When a man is told that he may not have a woman's phone number because she doesn't care to see him again, it only adds to the challenge and heightens his interest. And since most of these contests take place in a drinking atmosphere, the scene can get ugly.

Before I grew up, in my tomcatting days, after one such joust with a woman, I finally talked her into giving me her number and felt that I had scored a victory.

When I tried to call her the next day, I got a recorded message informing me of the weekly bus schedule.

Do you think she was trying to tell me something? – BENCHED IN FLAGSTAFF

DEAR BENCHED: Yes. "Hit the road, wise guy!"

DEAR ABBY: Every year at Christmas, my in-laws give my husband and me separate gifts of money.

My husband gets $150 and I get $25. During the holidays I try to forget about it, but after the celebrating is over, I feel very hurt and insulted.

I'm on very good terms with my in-laws, and they know that I manage money well, so I don't know why they do this.

I feel like telling them how much it upsets me, since the same feelings linger every year. What do you suggest? – HURT

DEAR HURT: Your husband should suggest that his parents lump together their cash Christmas gifts and address a single gift to BOTH of you. That should avoid the "hurt" without mentioning it.

DEAR ABBY: "Ms. Living Alone" resented your suggestion to invite someone who's living alone over for leftovers. She said, "If they can't invite me over for the real thing, they can give their leftovers to the dog!"

Since when is good food not the "real thing"?

She should live in countries where they don't give leftovers to the dog. They eat the dog! – APPRECIATES LEFTOVERS

SALT-BAKED CHICKEN

4¼-pound roasting chicken
4 small carrots, peeled
1 teaspoon dried tarragon
Clay Dough, see below

Pat chicken dry. Place carrots and tarragon in body cavity. Tie legs together. Make Clay Dough and turn out on a pastry cloth; knead until smooth. With a stockinet-covered rolling pin, roll out to slightly less than ½-inch thick. Place chicken, breast-side up, in center.

Mold Clay Dough around chicken, covering completely and as evenly as possible; with moistened fingers smooth seams. Bake in a foil-lined shallow pan in a 475-degree oven (not preheated) for 1 hour; place a sheet of foil over top and continue baking for 1 hour more. Let stand at room temperature for 10 minutes.

Remove to cutting board; cover with several thicknesses of paper towels. With a meat mallet or hammer, crack top and sides; remove dough. Cut up chicken and serve with carrots. (Juices will be too salty to serve.) Makes 4 servings with strong salt flavor. The skin covering the wings will be too salty to serve.

Clay Dough: In a large bowl stir together 4 cups all-purpose flour and 2 cups salt; gradually stir in enough water (about 2½ cups) to hold the mixture together. Use at once as directed.

Pets Are Popular And Good For The Whole Family

Researchers have also found that, in addition to being popular, pets are good for the whole family's physical and mental health because they:

- promote family interaction and strengthen relationships;
- lower blood pressure of busy parents and help relieve the stresses of growing children;
- encourage exercise and other healthful activities for everyone in the family;
- benefit child development by helping teach kids responsibility and respect for other living creatures;

More and more, families are coming to the realization that dogs and cats are an important part of family life.

Newsmakers attend Newsweek party

NEW YORK (AP) — Newsweek magazine celebrated its 50th anniversary with a gala bash at Lincoln Center that attracted "newsmakers" ranging from first lady Nancy Reagan and former President Carter to actress Mary Tyler Moore.

An estimated 1,600 celebrities shared conversation over cocktails at Monday night's gala. They included feminist Betty Friedan, the Rev. Jerry Falwell, artist Andy Warhol and former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger.

The guests dined at Avery Fisher Hall and the New York State Theater across the center's plaza. They watched a show depicting 50 years of history reported by Newsweek and attended a dance.

Carter joined Mrs. Reagan and Katherine Graham, chairman of the board of the Washington Post Co., which owns Newsweek, at the State Theater reception.

Carter's wife, Rosalynn, remained at Avery Fisher Hall for a sumultaneous dinner with about 800 guests.

Among those who dined with Mrs. Reagan was former California Gov. Jerry Brown, who escorted Mrs. Graham's daughter, Lally Weymouth, a writer for New York magazine.

Mrs. Graham wore the bright red that Mrs. Reagan often wears, decorated with sequins, and Mrs. Reagam wore a loose black crepe shift adorned with a pearl choker.

After dinner, Carter and Mrs. Carter got together again in the first tier of the State Theater and spent about 15 minutes chatting and whispering with friends before they were joined by Mrs. Reagan.

Mrs. Carter wore a pink blouse with bouffant sleeves and a mid-calf skirt.

Among those in attendance were, from left, Henry Kissinger, Katharine Graham and Nancy Reagan.

Opening the anniversary show was a slide series of Newsweek covers from 1933 to the present on which Mrs. Reagan, Kissinger, Carter and many others in the audience appeared.

Columnist Art Buchwald gave a counterfeit history of the magazine which brought roars of laughter from the crowd.

Buchwald said that in its early days, Newsweek "was wallowing in red ink and was saved by two polo players, Averell Harriman and Vincent Astor.

"Averell pledged Manhattan from 34th to 92nd Street and Astor pledged the Union and Pacific Railroad which his father gave him to play with."

A stage setting depicting an oldtime magazine office was rolled out with Jessica Tandy, Hume Cronyn, Lauren Bacall and James Earl Jones playing the roles of journalists.

Kissinger and former Urban League director Vernon Jordan spoke, with Jordan praising Newsweek for "reaching its 50th birthday without showing any middle-aged flab."

Henry Grunwald, editor-in-chief of Time magazine, called Mrs. Graham a "great publisher and great lady."

Also attending the anniversary party were former Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig, former senator and Democratic presidential candidate George McGovern, presidential adviser Edwin Meese and jazz musician Lionel Hampton.

Firms toying with Pac-Man, E.T., 'Val'

By SCOTT KRAFT
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK — Pac-Man has a new life as a squirt gun. The Valley Girl is saying things like "barf me out" to total strangers. Brooke Shields has a new smile. And E.T. simply refuses to go home.

Welcome to the world of toys — 1983.

The 80th American Toy Fair, the country's largest toy trade show, opened Monday with the usual stuffed bears, soccer balls and train sets. And with E.T., wildly popular last Christmas, in every shape imaginable.

There's a talking E.T. with a six-sentence vocabulary: "Be good," "Elliott," "Home," "Thank you," "E.T., E.T., E.T.," and, of course, "E.T. phone home."

E.T. has his own stickers, the Sniff-Ums, which come in a variety of fragrances. There's an E.T. & Elliott Bicycle, an E.T. Spaceship Launcher and, for $25, an E.T. Spaceship playset with secret storage compartments, a moving walkway, a botanical laboratory and handles on the back so kids can pretend it's flying.

E.T. will collide on toy shelves with some familiar and some unknown film characters. Buttons, jewelry, wallets and other baubles show characters from "Return of the Jedi," the latest in the "Star Wars" series opening this spring.

The Valley Girl Talking Doll is "totally awesome," a salesman explained. When you pull its string, it says things like: "I'm a Val," "grody to the max," and "gag me with a spoon."

The Brooke Shields Doll, one million of which sold last year, has a new smile, a new wardrobe and longer hair.

"We've added glamour to her," says Harry Moorhouse, director of marketing for LJN Toys Ltd. Prom Party Brooke comes with a rose-scented corsage.

Pac-Man, the popular video game, has spawned Pac-Man sunglasses, a Pac-Man-shaped SQuirt-Um squirt gun and Pac-Man Putty, which glows in the dark.

The toy industry posted about $9 billion in sales in 1982, according to Richard Grey, chairman of the Toy Manufacturers of America Inc., a trade group. Licensing of popular names and characters, a dominant factor in last year's increase, may rival the influence of video games this year, he added.

Most of the buyers at Monday's opening relied on their instincts to guess what American kids will want next Christmas. But Ronald Walton, of Mammoth Mills in Manchester, N.H., had his grinning, red-haired, 8-year-old daughter Julie.

"People her age are not easily fooled," Walton said. "I listen to her."

Julie liked the Advanced Dungeons and Dragons fighters, monsters and dragons, and the dungeon playset.

Among the new games is "Opportunist," with Ronald Reagan's picture on the cover. The game carries an endorsement from the president: "I will play this game at the first opportunity."

"We think this will be big in 1984," during the presidential campaign, said William E. Hill Jr., president of the company that will stock the British-made Invicta toys.

National Lampoon has a new board game, "Sell Out," that pokes fun at traditional games' obsession with acquisitions, money and property. Land on the Underworld Connection square in "Sell Out" and you "proceed to the fast lane, get $250,000 in cash and two 'political influence' cards." Land on another square, In Litigation, and you get a choice: pay $100,000 or miss three turns.

Black students' reading ability increases in 1970s

NEW YORK (AP) — A federally-funded survey of student performance during the 1970s concludes that black youngsters were the decade's educational winners, making big strides in reading ability.

At the same time, the report, a "National Report Card on Education during the 1970s," further documents a decline in math and science performance that was most severe among high achievers regardless of race.

The study by the Denver-based National Assessment of Educational Progress was released Monday. It found that students with poor academic track records — those who scored in the bottom 25 percent on standardized tests — made large reading gains. Performance of black low achievers in the 4th grade rose 8.4 percent during the decade, and white low achievers in the same grade scored 4.6 percent better.

Likewise, black low achievers at the 4th, 8th and 11th grades — the three grade levels tested in the federal study — all showed improvement in math performance.

The report said gains by low achieving youngsters in elementary school may be due to federally-funded programs aimed at boosting basic skills of disadvantaged students. But it said the decade-long decline in performance by high achievers "could be due to overemphasis on facts and drill, with little carryover to application and problem-solving."

Scholastic performance by high achievers of both races — those who scored in the top 25 percent on standardized tests — generally worsened in the 1970s, however, especially at the high school level. High achieving white 11th graders scored 4.2 percent lower in science, 4.3 percent lower in math, and held their own in reading. Black high achievers slipped 5.5 percent in math, and 3.9 percent in science, and also held their own in reading.

Science education was "not particularly emphasized" in the 1970s, the report said. "The public had been keenly aware of its importance during the early days of space exploration but that general awareness faded."

Federal funds to bolster math and science instructions became scarcer during the decade, and states and local school districts did little to encourage students' interest.

"Science fairs disappeared; budgets for science supplies and supplemental materials dwindled; and graduation requirements for science were eased," the report said.

The report compared data from reading surveys conducted in 1980 and 1975, mathematics surveys in 1978 and 1973, and science assessments in 1977 and 1973. Between 50,000 and 90,000 students across the country participated in each survey.

The National Assessment is funded by the National Institute of Education, the research arm of the U.S. Department of Education, and is administered by the Denver-based Education Commission of the States.

Heart pacemakers can be used in teen-agers

Dear Dr. Solomon: Can a pacemaker be used in a teen-ager? — Patty, Philadelphia

Dear Patty: Pacemakers have been used successfully in teen-agers, often permitting them to live active, nearly normal lives.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I have a very small chin and I get teased about it a lot. Is there any operation that I could get to improve the contour of my chin? — Mr. T.S., Little Rock, Ark.

Dear Mr. T.S.: Mentoplasty is aesthetic surgery to reshape the chin (usually to enlarge a receding chin). This can be done using bone or plastic material, or a cartilage graft, introduced either through the mouth or via a small incision beneath the chin.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I was interested in reading in one of your columns about the use of an acid to dissolve gallstones. But I remember you wrote a long time ago about using shock treatments to get rid of kidney stones. How does this work? And is there anything new on this? — Stu, New York City

Dear Stu: The use of shock waves to destroy kidney stones has been sucessfully performed in a number of patients. And, according to Dr. Christian Chaussy, of the Ludwig-Maximilian Universito of Munich, West Germany, the technique did not result in any complications.

The shock waves are generated under water and the stones are later passed in the urine. The procedure lasts from about 30 to 45 minutes.

Although the results of this study seem promising, it is still too early to tell what role the procedure eventually will play in the treatment of patients with kidney stones.

Dear Dr. Solomon: When I was a freshman in college, I remember taking a course in mental health in which we discussed whether schizophrenia was inherited or acquired. What promoted this letter is that I have just finished reading an article that indicates that the controversy has still not been settled. Is this so? — Mr. K.E., Norfolk, Va.

Dear Mr. E.: You can still find arguments for and against the proposition that schizophrenia is inherited. One reason for the continuing controversy is that it is often very difficult to separate environmental from genetic factors when trying to determine the cause of the illness in a particular individual.

In one of the more recent studies of the subject, a researcher from Washington University in St. Louis, Mo., concludes that the disorder is often inherited. The risk of a person in the general population suffering from schizophrenia is about 1 percent. In the case of identical twins, however, if one is diagnosed as schizophrenic, the risk for the other jumps to 46 percent. Since indentical twins share the same genes, it is concluded that some people may be born with a predisposition to schizophrenia, but that it seems to require some environmental factor to trigger it. You can rest assured, however, that this particular study is not the last word on the subject.

Dear Dr. Solomon: At my last regular physical examination, I was told I had a mild high blood pressure and my doctor told me I should reduce my use of alcohol. I usually have a drink at lunch and a couple of drinks when I come home in the evening. Is there any proof that drinking makes the blood pressure go up? — Raymond, Atlanta, Ga.

Dear Raymond: There is evidence that systolic blood pressure (pressure due to the contraction of the heart) does rise with an increase in the consumption of alcohol; conversely, high blood pressure may be prevented in some cases if people simply cut back on their intake of alcohol.

In one Australian study of almost 500 men, the average systolic blood pressure was found to be higher even for light drinkers as compared with those who do not drink at all. The good news is that the effects of alcohol on blood pressure appear to be reversible. Men who had been heavy drinkers but then had stopped drinking entirely had blood pressures that were similar to those of men who had never used alcohol at all.

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — Erin Fleming, returning to the witness stand in the Groucho Marx estate trial, denied issuing orders forbidding anyone to interview the comedian without getting her permission first.

The former actress, who was Marx's companion for several years before he died, also testified Monday that she never expected him to pay her for serving as his personal manager.

Earlier Monday, Santa Monica Superior Court Judge Jacqueline Weiss barred television cameras from the courtroom and warned Miss Fleming against emotional outbursts like several she had last week.

Kennedy

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP) — Edward M. Kennedy Jr., who lost a leg to cancer when he was 13, says the athletic contest that restored his confidence was a sack race he won right after the amputation.

"That experience for me was very important," said the son of the Massachusetts senator. "It helped me develop a sense of self-confidence, determination and freedom."

Because he was used to moving on one leg, Kennedy said he hopped over the finish line far ahead of his opponents. The Wesleyan University junior now skis with the aid of a prosthesis.

Kennedy spoke at Yale University on Sunday to launch the university's Disabilities Awareness Week.

Kennedy said he felt "very much alone" when he first became disabled. But now he says he feels thankful he's healthy and has a family and friends "who never let me feel disabled."

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Although he was 100 miles away, comedian Danny Thomas stole the show — and the quorum — in the Missouri Senate.

Thomas was in St. Louis on Monday to do a benefit performance at the Fox Theater for hospitals in Lebanon that have been damaged during recent fighting. Simultaneously, the state Senate was scheduled to take up a flood insurance bill but had to adjourn when only about 15 of the state's 34 senators showed up.

Most of the missing senators were in St. Louis to meet Thomas, explained Senate Majority Leader Harry Wiggins.

Wiggins said the full Senate would be back in session on Tuesday, again to consider the flood insurance measure.

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — Drummer and bandleader Buddy Rich, who was discharged from the hospital after coronary bypass surgery, plans to return to performing.

The 65-year-old entertainer, who was reported in good condition, left University of Michigan Hospitals on Monday.

Rich suffered a heart attack in his hotel room Jan. 28, hours before he was scheduled to be the featured attraction at a "big band" concert at Hill Auditorium.

After being taken to the hospital, he under went four hours of emergency bypass surgery.

HOUSTON (AP) — Comedian Jerry Lewis has been admitted to Methodist Hospital, six weeks after undergoing double bypass heart surgery, a hospital spokeswoman says.

Lewis, 56, checked into the hospital Monday as a patient of noted surgeon Dr. Michael DeBakey, but hospital spokeswoman Nan Bush refused to disclose why the entertainer was admitted or how long he would be hospitalized.

NEW YORK (AP) — Eubie Blake has made a lot of friends in a century and many of them filled Shubert Theater for a birthday party for the famed ragtime pianist, who got best wishes from President Reagan, James Cagney and the New York Philharmonic.

Blake, who turned 100 on Monday, was recovering at his home from pneumonia and could not attend.

A special telephone hookup was made from the theater's mikes to a loudspeaker in Blake's Brooklyn living room, so the centenarian was able to hear the 2½-hour invitation-only show, devoted almost entirely to his compositions — of which there are about 2,000.

British soldier holds man hostage at London Royal Air Force base

LONDON (AP) — A young airman claiming to be armed with explosives and two handguns held an officer hostage for seven hours at a Royal Air Force base before surrendering to police early today, authorities said. No one was hurt.

The incident began when the airman walked into the guardroom at the entrance of the RAF base near London's Heathrow Airport and asked to speak to the duty officer.

When the officer arrived, the two men went into a private office and the airman later telephoned an orderly sergeant demanding cash and transportation, police said.

He warned that the hostage — who holds the RAF rank of flying officer — would be "harmed" if the demands were not met. At one point, police said, the airman was believed to be holding a gun to the officer's head.

Police at first said the airman, a man in his early 20s whom they described as "disturbed," was thought to be armed with an automatic pistol and a revolver. The airman also claimed to have explosive devices.

But police and Air Force officials later refused comment on the weapons, and Press Association, the British domestic news agency, reported the guns were imitations.

Eight staff members were on duty in the guardroom and adjacent security office when the siege began. Two policemen later arrived to conduct negotiations, and the airman gave himself up "by agreement with police" at dawn Monday, a spokesman said.

U.S. scientist expelled from Poland

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — An American mathematician has been expelled from Poland for working with opponents of the Communist government, the government television service reports.

A spokesman for the U.S. Embassy confirmed that Garret Sobczyk, an American citizen who had lived in Poland for several years, was deported during the weekend but said he had no other information on the man.

The TV report Monday evening said Sobczyk, 39, was a lecturer at the polytechnical university in the southern city of Wroclaw until the end of 1981, after martial law was declared, and also worked with the institute of theoretical physics at Wroclaw University.

"It has been established that Sobczyk maintained contacts with many activists of the Wroclaw political underground," the report said.

"He took part in the distribution of illegal publications and personally participated in anti-state demonstrations throughout the duration of martial law," which was suspended on Dec. 31.

Court convicts couple of spying

BERLIN (AP) — Prison sentences have been imposed by an East Berlin military court on a West German couple convicted of spying for the United States, according to East Germany's official ADN news agency.

The agency said Monday that Heinz Jonsek was sentenced to life in prison and and his wife Lore received a six-year sentence after conviction on charges of working for an unnamed U.S. intelligence service.

The ADN report said Jonsek, code-named Wolfgang, carried out espionage activities involving the border security system and non-military movements in East Germany. It said he also passed sensitive information to a U.S. intelligence service operating out of Stuttgart, West Germany.

Parliament hears from prisoner

LONDON (AP) — For the first time in more than a century, a prison inmate was brought to Parliament to give evidence at a committee hearing.

Flanked by plainclothes prison guards and House of Commons security officers, the inmate testified before a Commons committee reviewing prison education standards. He is serving a life prison term, but his name and offenses were not disclosed in accordance with government rules.

The last time a prisoner appeared in public at Parliament was in May 1878, when a convict was called to give evidence to a royal commission on penal servitude, Commons officials said.

The prisoner from London's Wormwood Scrubs jail joined 32-year-old Dorothy Doyle, an ex-inmate at London's Holloway prison for women, in urging improvements in prison education.

"It is something for me to get my teeth into and stabilize my life inside," said the inmate, who was referred to as "Mr. Smith."

Iraq wants help in war with Iran

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Iraq asked the United Nations, Arab organizations and foreign governments for help in the face of Iran's attempted "final offensive" in the 28-month-old war between the two oil-rich Persian Gulf nations.

An Iranian military communique issued today claimed advancing troops had "liberated" 120 square miles of Iraqi-occupied territory since the attack began Sunday night.

Baghdad radio reported Monday that President Saddam Hussein told other Arab leaders that Iraq's front-line position was "sound" and that his country was capable of repulsing the attack, which Iran described as its biggest to date.

But at the same time, Arab ambassadors in the Iraqi capital were summoned to the Foreign Ministry and handed messages requesting that their governments take "the appropriate position in accordance with the resolutions of the United Nations, the Arab League and the Fez Arab summit conference in Morocco last September."

The action was seen as a plea for assistance. The Fez summit resolutions — primarily dealing with the aftermath of Israel's June 6 invasion of Lebanon — considered an attack on any Arab country as an attack against all Arabs and promised joint counteraction.

Iranian military communiques claimed Iran, in addition to retaking 120 square miles of Iranian territory and three Iranian border posts, seized three Iraqi border posts in an assault described as its "final offensive."

The communiques from Iran said 800 Iraqi soldiers were killed or wounded since the operation started late Sunday and that Iraqi prisoners were taken. The aim of the offensive appeared to be cutting the Baghdad-Basra highway by taking Al-Amara, 40 miles west of Fakeh.

Iraq confirmed the offensive, but said its forces completely destroyed two Iranian divisions that crossed into Iraq at Fakeh, about 180 miles southeast of Baghdad and 100 miles north of Basra. Military communiques from Baghdad claimed its forces killed 6,894 Iranians and took large numbers of prisoners.

There was no way to independently confirm the claims because journalists do not have free access to the 300-mile battlefront.

Lebanese probe bogged down

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — The official Lebanese inquiry into last September's Sabra and Chatilla camp massacre has plodded along for months with little sign of progress.

Although an Israeli commission today issued a report saying Defense Minister Ariel Sharon and other Israelis bore some responsibility for the slaughter, the Beirut investigators have yet to make specific accusations in the killings, which according to overwhelming eyewitness testimony were carried out by right-wing Lebanese militiamen.

The man in charge of the Lebanese government's investigation, military prosecutor Assad Germanos, has said he hopes to complete his work by March or April, and insists there will be no cover-up. But other officials say privately they doubt the results will ever be made public.

Fixing the blame for the murders of hundreds of Palestinians is an explosive political matter in a country where the legitimate government has little authority and where many of the dominant Christians are strongly anti-Palestinian.

"If the Germanos report singles out any particular group as the killers and the government publishes this report, Germanos could be shot the next day," one Lebanese close to the inquiry said recently.

Germanos said in an interview last month his investigators have turned up conflicting testimony from the handful of massacre survivors willing to testify.

Some, like Israel's official inquiry, blamed the Phalange militiamen, most of whom belong to the same Maronite Christian sect as President Amin Gemayel and Germanos himself. Others blamed the south Lebanon militia of Israeli-backed renegade Lebanese army major Saad Haddad, a Greek Catholic whose men include Shiite Moslems and a variety of Christian sects.

Germanos in recent weeks has refused to comment on how many people he believes died in the massacre. In October, he said 328 were confirmed killed and 991 were missing as a result of the Sept. 16-18 bloodshed.

In numerous interviews with reporters over the past 4½ months, some Sabra and Chatilla residents have variously blamed the killings on the Phalange, Haddad's men or both. But others said only that the men wore green uniforms — which both the Phalange and Haddad's militia wear — and they had no idea who they were.

"How should I know?" an elderly Palestinian woman said recently.

Maj. Gen. Yeheshua Saguy, the head of Israeli army intelligence, came under fire today in Jerusalem when the judicial inquiry probing into the Beirut massacre recommended his dismissal for his actions during the slaughter of hundreds of Palestinians in two Beirut refugee camps last September.

Sharon's political career may be massacre victim

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Ariel Sharon, who crossed the Suez in one of Israel's most heroic moments, may now find his goal of becoming prime minister buried in the debris of one of this country's bleakest times.

The special commission of inquiry on Israel's role in last September's massacre of Palestinian civilians in Beirut recommended today that Sharon resign or be fired as defense minister because he bears "personal responsibility" in the deaths.

The commission said Sharon, in allowing Lebanese Christian militiamen into two Palestinian refugee camps, disregarded an obvious danger of bloodshed. The militiamen killed hundreds of Palestinians.

The 54-year-old ex-general has never been far from controversy throughout a brilliant and stormy military and political career, which has marked him with the reputation for rushing headlong into the fray in defiance of his superiors' orders.

As a commander of a paratroop brigade in the 1956 Sinai campaign, Sharon defied orders and attacked an Egyptian bastion, losing 38 men. Many of his comrades, now senior politicians, never forgave him, and the blunder scuttled his hope of becoming Israeli chief of staff.

In the 1967 and 1973 wars, he commanded armored divisions in the Sinai that played an instrumental role in defeating the Egyptians.

He was the hero of the 1973 war, commanding an armored division that crossed the Suez Canal and entrapped most of Egypt's attacking forces.

Sharon campaigned with Begin in the 1977 elections and, with his considerable following, was instrumental in sweeping the conservative coalition into office. But mindful of Sharon's reputation for excesses, Begin gave him the agriculture portfolio and not the Defense Ministry, which he had sought. Only after Begin's re-election in 1981 by a narrow majority did the prime minister give Sharon the defense job.

Sharon masterminded Israel's invasion of Lebanon last June 6.

Men of commission respected, non-partisan

JERUSALEM (AP) — The three men who conducted the probe of the Beirut massacre and published their findings today are among the most respected non-political figures in the country.

The head of the commission, Supreme Court President Yitzhak Kahan, is a veteran jurist and himself a victim of Arab-Israeli wars. His son was killed in the 1967 war.

Polish-born Kahan, 70, joined the Supreme Court in 1970 and became chief justice last year.

Kahan asked the most probing, detailed questions of the witnesses and served as the low-keyed counterweight to his younger co-panelist, Aharon Barak, 47, also a Supreme Court justice and fierce champion of the letter of the law.

Barak won fame in the mid-70's as the state attorney general, handing down verdicts that led to the downfall of several senior government officials in corruption cases. His rulings forced the resignation of then-Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin over an illegal U.S. bank account held by his wife.

Bespectacled, black-haired Barak, who was born in Palestine, coined the most ringing phrase heard during the inquiry when he asked why "no red lights went on" when the Israelis decided to send the Lebanese Christian militiamen into the camps of their most hated enemy, the Palestinians.

Bringing up the military side of the investigation was retired Maj. Gen. Yona Efrat, 57, a veteran army officer and later a business executive. Efrat's knowledge and judgment of military matters is widely respected and he has served on past inquiries into army misconduct.

The staff aiding the panel was headed by Alex Ish-Shalom, a top police investigator.

Everyone wants their photos processed as quickly as possible, and that's where Fast Photo Service shines. But according to manager Aaron Salton, there's more to their service than just one-hour processing on color prints. "We give fast and personal attention to our customers," he says. "We have control over the quality of the print because all processing is done right here. That means if a print needs to be redone, we can take care of it quickly."

When you're thinking about something personal for Valentine's day, don't forget that a photograph is something not only personal, but will last forever. Unlike flowers which wilt and die; candy which is consumed in a few days or a card which might be thrown away, a photograph can be your personal statement to the ones you love. Even if you've waited until the last minute to take your photographs, you can be sure and have it ready with Fast Photo's one hour service.

Fast Photo stocks all types of Kodak and Fuji films, and if you've bought a VIP card, you can save money on replacement film in sizes 110, 126, 135, color slide film and black & white film. Ask about obtaining a VIP card whenever you come in. It really can save you money.

Fast Photo Service has several other convenient services, such as one-day service on black and white photos for reproduction purposes; studio passport photos made while you wait; and if you're in a hurry, there's a drive-in window on the east side of the store. Fast Photo also features a "night drop" located at the front of the store for those who want to leave film after hours.

Fast Photo Service is conveniently located at Midkiff and Cuthbert in the Town & Country Shopping Center. Their hours are Monday through Friday from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. and on Saturday from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. For both fast and personal film processing service, come by Fast Photo today and have your photos ready in just an hour.

Roberts has complete auto care capabilities

Roberts Auto Supply and Machine Shop is justifiably proud of their machine shop facilities; parts can be machined, bored, or rebuilt using their machine shop and experienced machinists. Hastings may resume hearing cases

MIAMI (AP) — U.S. District Judge Alcee Hastings, acquitted of conspiring to receive a $150,000 bribe, is back at work and says he feels he is "starting all over again."

He arrived at the federal courthouse Monday morning and met with Chief Judge Joe Eaton, who said Hastings may resume hearing cases next week.

Hastings, the first sitting federal judge ever to face criminal trial, voluntarily stopped hearing cases when a friend, William Borders, was accused of soliciting the bribe for Hastings in exchange for judicial favors, but the judge continued to draw his annual $73,100 salary.

Borders, convicted in March 1982, was sentenced to five years in prison.

Emergency room may close weekends

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — The University of South Alabama Medical Center may temporarily shut its emergency room on weekends to cut financial losses brought on by caring for the poor, the state Supreme Court says.

The ruling, by a 6-3 margin, came Monday on a suit filed by Attorney General Charles Graddick, who challenged the closing because it would leave Mobile County without adequate emergency facilities on weekends and would "result in unnecessary loss of human lives."

The court said it would rule soon on whether the hospital may close its emergency room on weekends indefinitely. The hospital said it lost $19.9 million in 1982 caring for indigent patients.

17-year-old faces murder charges

BOISE, Idaho (AP) — A 17-year-old has pleaded guilty to second-degree murder for the torture slaying of a fellow teen-age inmate who was jailed for failing to pay $73 in traffic fines and court costs.

Randall McKeown had been scheduled to go on trial Monday on first-degree murder charges, but he was allowed to plead to the lesser count in a plea bargain and faces 10 years to life in prison. Two other boys face trial on the stiffer charge.

The three were charged in the slaying of Christopher Peterman, 17, who was beaten to death over a 14-hour period during the 1982 Memorial Day weekend. All four were cellmates in the Ada County Jail.

Siblings abduct sister for ransom

PIKEVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Eight people were being held on $500,000 bond each after being charged in the abduction of the daughter-in-law of a wealthy coal mine operator.

The defendants, including three brothers and a sister of the victim, are accused of kidnapping Kathy Osborne Niece, 23, and holding her for three days, saying they would kill her if her father-in-law, Wilfrid Niece, did not pay a $500,000 ransom. All eight pleaded innocent Monday to the federal charges.

Mrs. Niece, abducted Jan. 18, was gagged, bound and kept in a closet in the trailer where one of her brothers lives, the FBI said. She was released, shaken but unharmed, after offering $50,000 to two of her captors, agents said.

Elderly residents evacuate building

CHELSEA, Mass. (AP) — A smoky fire in a housing project forced the evacuation of about 200 elderly residents, some in wheelchairs and on stretchers, during a snowstorm, officials say.

The fire Monday was contained to the third-floor apartment in the seven-story project, and fire officials said some residents would be able to return home soon. Except for the apartment where the fire started, damage was limited to a heavy coating of soot, authorities said.

CIA won't be used in program

WASHINGTON (AP) — The CIA will not be involved in President Reagan's proposed $65 million program to promote democracy around the world, Undersecretary of State Lawrence S. Eagleburger says.

Eagleburger said the administration, at its senior levels, discussed but rejected the possibility of including covert CIA activities in the program.

"There will be no CIA involvement," Eagleburger said. "Anything done under this program will be done in full view of the public and will be submitted to the Congress for approval."

President Reagan unveiled the program in a speech to the British Parliament last June. He said it would reflect a commitment by the United States to engage more vigorously in a peaceful "competition of ideas and values" with the Soviet Union.

He said another false impression is that some of the $65 million would be used for a public relations campaign to try to promote installation of U.S.-made nuclear missiles in Western Europe.

Not only is that a wrong impression, said Eagleburger, but the program isn't aimed at Western Europe. He said its primary aim would be to strengthen democratic institutions where such institutions are now weak, or threatened.

The kinds of activities the program envisions, Eagleburger said, include: support for free labor movements, exchange of information, visitor exchanges, regional meetings and conferences, and support for groups such as the Asia Foundation which promote good relations between the United States and other regions.

19 Business Opportunities

ATTENTION!

American Diet Counselors Inc. have decided to expand and place a franchise in the Midland area. We are looking for a person or persons who want to buy and own their own business, with a moderate investment. At American Diet Counselors we have a wholistic program that includes exercise and counseling to maintain good health, along with a diet that guarantees a 18 to 25 pound weight loss in 6 weeks or clients money is refunded. If you are energetic, ambitious, can relate to people, and have empathy for those with an over weight problem YOU QUALIFY.. We also want people who are honest and of good character to own this profitable business that has a continual increase in the value. Anyone interested with a weight problem themselves need not worry. Our program will help get you into shape too. Upon purchase of the franchise we will send you to Salt Lake City for a week of special training, ALL EXPENSES PAID. Upon your request a representative will come and help you set up to insure you a good start in your new business. For more information call JEANNIE RIGBY in Lake Havasu City, AZ. collect, office number 602-453-6212 after 7:30pm call 602-453-7252.

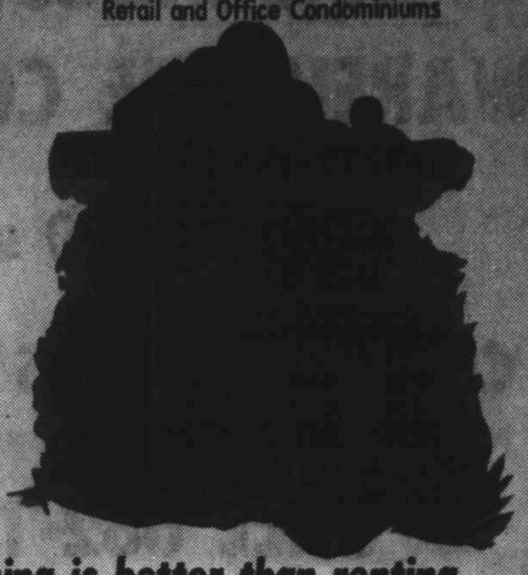
Introducing...

Mission Square Plaza

Retail and Office Condominiums



Owning is better than renting.

If you're presently renting retail or office space, you already know some of the disadvantages-frequent cost-of-living rent increases, leases that give the landlord all the advantages, costly sales overrides on your retail sales. In short, you're not in control.

From a pure economic standpoint, ownership beats renting. Consider these advantages:

- You mortgage payments are fixed and not subject to escalation or overrides to a landlord.
- You receive tax deductions for interest and tax payments.
- You get a tax deduction for depreciation over the next 15 years.
- You have control over your space, and no one can cancel your lease.
- You can buy enough space to meet your future growth plans and lease the expansion area until it's needed.
- All maintenance and upkeep is furnished through the Owner's Association.
- Your real estate investment gains value.

In addition to all this, Mission Square is strategically located in one of the city's fastest growing areas; North Big Spring and Loop 250, just northeast of ClayDesta Plaza.

Mission Square is an ideal location for professionals, service businesses, and a variety of retail stores. Contact our office now, for a full color brochure and further details.

HAPGOOD PECAN FARM
This beautiful, long sought after 247 acre farm nestled in the bend of the Colorado River near San Saba, Texas is now being placed on the market by the Hapgood daughters. These trees were planted in the 30's and 40's with space available for more. A large home overlooking the orchard, field, building and surrounding valley extends the farm as well as a creek, the river and large ponds. Deer, wild turkey, ducks, squirrels, bass and catfish are prolific. An area within 100 yards of the home would make an excellent landing strip. Mineral and royalty rights negotiable. Will consider owner financing and income trade. By owner, call 915-751-1494 or 505-258-3439.
