Wants Bigger Cut

AUSTIN (AP)-Pat Smith of the Texas Farm Bureau said today his organization supports a bill giving farmers a tax break, but they would like an even bigger break.

Eight witnesses testified before the Senate Economic Development Committee on two proposals to tax farm and ranch land on the basis of productivity rather than market value. One of the bills would also include a tax break for timberland.

Stabbings Probed

VIDOR (AP)-Police hope a 16-year-old passenger can help answer a string of inquiries spawned by the slaying of a truck driver with a history of sex crimes.

Officers plan to interrogate the youth about the activities during the past year of James Davis, 48, of Los Angeles, who was stabbed to death last week near here.

Detective Sam Kittrell said Sunday that Vidor police have received "numerous inquiries" about Davis since the man's record of sex crimes was disclosed.

Teng Concludes Visit

SEATTLE (AP)-Teng Hsiao-ping concludes his visit to the United States today, leaving behind an invitation for U.S. leaders to forsake detente with the Soviet Union and join China in an informal alliance against the Russians. The Chinese vice premier drew friendly crowds in Atlanta, Houston and Seattle. But long after the smiling little man in the gray Mao suit has left, the Carter administration is likely to be wrestling with the choices Teng has presented.

Awaiting Sentence

RAWALPINDI, Pakistan (AP)-The Pakistani Supreme Court may rule this week whether former prime Minister Zulfikar Ali Bhutto must die on the gallows, bringing another turning point in the Moslem nation's turbulent history. Bhutto, the flamboyant, 51-year-old politician who ruled the country of 75 million for most of the 1970s, has been waiting for months in the Rawalpindi Central Jail while the Supreme Court decides on his appeal against a murder conviction and death sentence.

Bakhtiar Warns Foes

TEHRAN, Iran (AP)-Prime Minister Shahpour Bakhtiar has threatened to arrest Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini if the provisional government the opposition chief says he is going to name tries to supplant his government. Bakhtiar also warned his foes he would "answer Molotov cocktail for Molotov cocktail" if they carry out Khomeini's threat to launch a holy war to oust him and install an Islamic republic.

Carter Plan Endorsed

AUSTIN (AP)-The president of the Communications Workers of America, representing 650,000 members nationwide, said today its executive board has endorsed President Carter's proposed wage insurance plan.

Glenn E. Watts, said the board voted last week to support the plan which rewards workers who hold down wage demands at 7 percent by automatically making up for any inflationary rise over that level. If the inflation rate rises above 7 percent, workers could get a one-time tax credit the following year.

The national AFL-CIO has opposed the wage insurance plan, Watts noted. The United Auto Workers endorsed it last week.

Dole Checks Changes

EASTON, Md. (AP)—Sen. Robert J. Dole, the 1976 Republican vice presidential nominee, apparently plans to join other GOP politicians in assessing their chances for the presidential nomination.

Dole said at a weekend GOP conference here that he will announce plans this week to form an "exploratory committee" to work for his candidacy.

Sen. Howard H. Baker, R-Tenn., and Rep. John B. Anderson, R-Ill., said last week they had set up such committees to raise and spend money on behalf of possible presidential races.

Bodies Discovered

McKINNEY (AP)—Authorities said charges would be filed today in connection with the deaths of two persons whose skeletal remains were hauled from an abandoned water well.

Lt. John Thompson of the Collin County sheriff's department said officers recovered a body late Saturday thought to be that of a 75-year-old McKinney man missing since May 3, 1978. And he said early Sunday they recovered another body thought to be a 51-year-old McKinney woman missing since June, 1977.

Area Roads Slippery...

Ice, Snow Return To Close Schools Again

Winter returned to the Snyder area with a vengeance this morning as freezing rain followed by snow created traffic hazards and closed area schools.

City streets and highways throughout the immediate Snyder area were slippery and a number of minor traffic mishaps were reported.

Public schools in Snyder, Ira and Hermleigh called off classes today as roads were considered too slippery for buses to make their runs, and Western Texas College subsequently joined the list of closings.

Dr. Ben Brock, WTC vice president, said that a number of students were unable to get to their classes this morning.

The temperature dropped to a low of 21 degrees in Snyder this morning and snow continued to fall most of the morning. There had been light rainfall during the night prior to the snowfall that left a coating of ice on streets and roads.

Conditions to the north were reported somewhat better, with most of the activity apparently to the south and east of the Caprock.

San Angelo, Abilene and Wichita Falls were reporting sleet, snow or freezing drizzle at dawn, and travelers advisories were issued for the northern half of the state. But North Texas did not have a monolopy on the bad weather.

Fog was so thick in the Corpus Christi area that visibilities in parts of the Coastal Bend area were reduced to zero, and the National Weather Service issued a travelers advisory for motorists in that area too - as well as for ships at sea.

The National Weather Service said even usually sunny El Paso was threatened with the possibility of snow later today.

South of the line of freezing temperatures, widespread rain and fog made for miserable weather throughout the rest of the state.

The outlook was for generally continued cold temperatures and wet or icy weather.

Texas Senate May See Prison Plan

AUSTIN (AP)—An old controversy over locating a new prison in the Lower Rio Grande Valley could come to life again in the Texas Senate this week.

Sen. Bill Moore, D-Bryan, served notice he will try to bring up his bill S.B. 245, enabling the prison system to sell its Blue Ridge farm and spend the money on land elsewhere in the state.

Sen. Raul Longoria, D-Edinburg, said he will attempt by amendment to limit the bill unless he receives assurances from prison officials they would not try again to put a prison close to Edinburg.

Without such assurances, Longoria said Saturday, he will offer an amendment prohibiting construction of a prison in Hildalgo County west of U.S. 281.

Moore's bill would drop a legal requirement that any proceeds from selling the Blue Ridge farm in Harris County be used to buy land within a 75-mile radius of Huntsville. It also would enable the prison system to swap the farm for other land.

The bill would clear away the legal impediments cited by former Attorney General John Hill, an opinion that blocked the $8 million purchase of 6,740 acres near Edinburg last April.

Edinburg city officials opposed purchase of the land, saying they do not want their city to become a prison town.

Longoria said prison board member Joe La Mantia of McAllen, who heads the site selection committee, had "told me they will not recognize any place where the local people don't want a prison."

He said he wants further assurances from W.J. Estelle, director of the Texas Department of Corrections.

An assistant director, Jack Kyle, told the Senate Finance Committee last week the department still wants the Edinburg site.

Lubbock Man Dies In Wreck

GREEN RIVER, Utah (AP)—A Lubbock, Tex., truck driver was killed Sunday morning when the brakes on his Digby Freight Lines truck failed at the top of Spotted Wolf Pass, the Utah Highway Patrol reported.

The victim was identified as 28-year-old Dennis Craig Treece. Authorities said his rig went off the road on Interstate 70 about 14 miles west of Green River.

Passenger William Allen Silvis, 33, Norwalk, Calif., suffered a broken back and was in critical condition Sunday night at LDS Hospital in Salt Lake.

No Petition Here Yet On Liquor Vote

Reports that an application for a petition to call another liquor election here were premature, The Snyder Daily News was advised this morning.

It was reported that a group had considered seeking a petition, but the plans have been shelved for the present.

A proposal to legalize the sale of alcholic beverages here was rejected by voters last May 8. State law prohibits an election on the same issue within a year of the previous election.

The vote last year was for off-premises consumption. A vote on the same issue cannot be called within less than a year of the previous election, unless proponents pay 25 cents per registered voter to take care of the expenses of holding the election.

Angry Farmers Tie Up Traffic In Washington

By BRIAN B. KING
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP)-Thousands of farmers plowed a field of political dissent today as they jammed commuter arteries and blocked bridges in a motorized protest of prices they receive for their crops.

"The Farmers Are Here!" declared banners flapping from tractors and trucks that entered the city at a snail's pace in the chill of dawn, ahead of normal rush-hour traffic.

Five arrests were reported. In one case, police used tear gas to subdue a driver who tried to block an intersection and allegedly resisted arrest.

At least four separate cavalcades, totaling an estimated 1,500 to 2,000 vehicles, edged into the city from staging areas in Virginia and Maryland. The George Washington Memorial Parkway, a principal northsouth route for tens of thousands of commuters from both states, was closed by police to all but the farm traffic.

Meanwhile, a 25-mile-long line of 750 farm vehicles crossed the Potomac River from the south over the city's busiest bridge, emptying into Washington just short of the Agriculture Department and creating a huge traffic jam at the height of rush hour. Police tried to divert commuters to a branch artery that serves Capitol Hill, but the congestion mounted to a complete standstill.

One group of farmers threatened to bar entrance to the Agriculture Department. Three tractors, chained together, were driven within feet of one door to the building, while other vehicles blocked all six lanes of Independence Avenue.

Police offered almost full cooperation to the protesters, giving them priority access to major roadways while blocking some routes to exasperated commuters. "It's the old story of a 900-pound gorilla in a cocktail lounge," said U.S. Park Police spokesman George Berklacy. "You serve the gorilla first."

Ask Us

A--The National Football League officials make the selection. Various cities make proposals and factors such as seating capacity, practice facilities and weather are considered. The decision is made each year at the NFL's annual meeting, and sites are selected three years ahead. So far, they have been limited to warmer regions, but reports are that Detroit and Seattle, who have enclosed stadiums, will make bids now. However, they may have a problem providing suitable practice facilities in January. So far, it has been limited to Los Angeles, Miami and New Orleans. Incidentally, the Houston Astrodome doesn't have enough seating capacity to accommodate the game.

Air Dirty But Cleaning Up

WASHINGTON (AP)-Eight years have passed since Congress passed the 1970 Clean Air Act - and America's air is getting cleaner.

But America's air still is not completely safe to breathe.

The Environmental Protection Agency estimates industries and governments have spent $67.4 billion on air pollution controls since 1970.

Council To Call Annual Election

The Snyder City Council is scheduled to set the annual city election and extend for 30 days its consideration of Lone Star Gas Company's request for a rate increase at its meeting tonight.

The meeting is set for 6:30 p.m. in the council room at city hall.

Councilmen whose terms expire this year are Jerry McWilliams, Place 1; Joe Reaves, Place 3, and Rod Waller, Place 5.

The election will be called for April 7.

Also on the agenda for tonight's meeting are a report on the annual audit of city accounts, second reading of an ordinance repealing the city's one percent sales tax on gas and electric utilities, and appointment of a new member to serve as an alternate on the Planning and Zoning Commission.

Bids will be considered for the purchase of a front end loader for a tractor, for rock to be used this summer in street seal-coating, for computer storage and for installation of double doors and other modifications at city hall.

New China Policy Faces Tough Week In Congress

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Carter's new China policy is facing a week of tough scrutiny by Senate Foriegn Relations Committee members who fear Taiwan has been left unprotected from potential military or economic threats from Peking.

Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, the new committee chairman, said in remarks prepared for today's session that the administration's proposals on future relations with Taiwan are "woefully inadequate ... ambiguous in language and uncertain in tone."

Opening the hearings, Church said Congress must assure the 17 million Taiwanese "that we are not abandoning them."

Deputy Secretary of State Warren Christopher, in the Carter administration's defense, was to urge congressional approval of the administration's proposal for a private American Institute providing unofficial ties with the Taiwan government.

He was expected to oppose attempts to specifically require American military aid or a break in the new diplomatic relations with Peking if Taiwan's independence were jeopardized.

The committee has also summoned Leonard Woodcock, Carter's nominee as ambassador to Peking. The appearance of the former United Auto Workers union president is expected to give opponents of Carter's policy another forum for their views.

Church has said the United States must have a policy with "the force of law," under which continued diplomatic ties with Peking would hinge on the absence of a military threat to Taiwan.

Administration officials have reluctantly agreed to accept a resolution drafted by Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., and the Democratic whip, Sen. Alan D. Cranston, D-Calif.

fragile slogans

Quick now - and no reference checking: Which presidential administration brought us the "New Federalism"?

What about the "New Prosperity", not to mention "New Directions"?

Here's an easy one - the "New Frontier".

It can't have escaped the attention of many of us who have lived through any significant portion of the period that catchy slogans - or would-be catchy slogans - have become almost as predictable a feature of the 20th-century presidency as the inaugural ceremony itself.

Not an exception, only a bit slow in the delivery, President Carter has now come up with his own contribution to the genre. His "New Foundation", tossed at us in the State of the Union message marking the midway point of his term, joins a lengthy list of political catchwords distined for the most part not to go down as historic bywords.

Of contemporary chief executives, only Dwight Eisenhower and Gerald Ford did not adopt some slogan for their administrations (unless a point is stretched considerably to qualify the latter's "Whip Inflation Now").

But only Franklin D. Roosevelt's "New Deal" and just possibly John F. Kennedy's "New Frontier" give indications of having much staying power, the former for its associations with a true watershed in American history and a vast body of enduring social legislation and the latter for its evocation of a presidency that made up in color and drama for what it lacked in lasting accomplishments.

At least one is probably best forgotten altogether, the reality of Lyndon Johnson's ambitious "Great Society" having fallen far short of the goal and its most notable momentoes being a disastrous war and an apparently nonstop inflation.

The most prolific slogan coiner was Richard Nixon, who tried out the first three of those mentioned in the quick quiz above, all three surviving in the public consciousness scarcely longer than the speeches in which they were delivered.

Jimmy Carter, in an atypical display of presidential modesty and honesty, foresees something similar for his own contribution. There was no intention of establishing a permanent slogan, he told a post-address news conference - "I doubt if it will survive."

the biennial wait

Local agency tax offices usually find themselves in limbo for several weeks every two years while the state legislature is in session. Changes in tax laws, what is subject to tax and how it is to be collected and applied are factors that seem to require more and more attention and they involve issues that are seldom resolved until the last days of the legislative session.

This session finds taxation even more prominent on the legislative scene. The tax relief amendment approved by voters last November not only has opened up new possibilities, but has handed legislators a mandate to take action in several areas of taxation. Some of these have been in force to a certain degree in the past, but the stage has been set for vast changes in homestead exemptions, special tax relief for elderly persons, valuation of agricultural land for tax purposes and personal property.

So, until action is taken in Austin, the various taxing agencies can only speculate on their ultimate task. One of the real sticky issues involves personal property. Many local agencies have simply omitted this source of taxes in past years, while others have gobbled up every potential piece of property.

At present, the law says that all property shall taxed, yet there is no authority for an agency to levy more taxes than it needs for operation.

The word out of Austin now is that, in compliance with the tax relief amendment, we probably can expect legislation exempting automobiles, intangible property (bank accounts, stocks, bonds, etc.) and possibly other personal property from taxation. Meanwhile, it looks as if local taxing agencies would be treading water at best if they devoted time to preparing rolls on these items prior to action by the legislature.

Don't you love those commercials of a woman propped up in bed who looks up from the novel she is reading and says, "I'm cleaning my oven"? Or how about the one where it shows her snoozing away and a voice from somewhere says, "Joyce's toilet bowl is getting clean as she sleeps"?

Nothing works when I sleep. Whatever is there the night before I climb into bed is there when I wake up.

Not only that, I am forever being accosted by people who implore me to devote just a minute or so a day to a chore that will eventually make my life easier.

I kept count of these offers for one day and came up with the following tally:

My dentist asked me to brush and floss for just three minutes a day.

My minister asked me to pray and meditate for only five minutes a day.

My hairdresser suggested I brush my hair 99 strokes for just six minutes a day.

My doctor advised me to exercise daily by walking for only 30 minutes.

My mother said it would take only four minutes to clean up the splatters in my oven as soon as I made them.

My husband ragged me to death to put aside just two minutes a day to take an iron tablet.

A cosmetic salesman told me to take three minutes out of every day and rub moisturizer into my skin.

My best friend told me to kick off my shoes, elevate my feet and nap for 20 minutes a day and I'd feel wonderful.

Buffing the floor daily for eight minutes cuts down on the big job cleaner at the end of the week.

Spritizing a little air purifier in my kitchen each day keeps germs to a minimum and takes only three minutes.

Just a few drops of vitamins in my dog's bowl and he'll feel better and have a shiny coat. It only takes a minute a day.

I tallied up all my minutes one day and come up with only four hours and 10 minutes for eating and sleeping.

Make that four hours. It takes me 10 minutes a day to keep track of where my time goes.

WASHINGTON (NEA) — Students at Harvard University participated in the program. So did government intelligence officers in Washington, federal prisoners in Atlanta, tourists in San Francisco and drug addicts in Lexington, Ky.

They are among the uncounted thousands of Americans who in recent decades received -- often without their knowledge -- experimental doses of the mind-altering, hallucinogenic dryg lysergic acid diethylamide, commonly known as LSD.

The millions of dollars necessary to covertly support LSD research, as well as far more terrigying experiments designed to manipulate human behavior, came from public funds disbursed by the Central Intelligence Agency.

Although the CIA's involvement in highly classified behavior modification projects has been the subject of sporadic news accounts in recent years, the most comprehensive -- and chilling -- version has just been published as a book.

It's called, "The Search for the 'Manchurian Candidate:' The CIA and Mind Control." Its author is John D. Marks, a highly respected Washington researcher and co-author of the 1974 best-seller, "The CIA and the Cult of Intelligence."

Marks offers a compelling case to demonstrate that LSD (or "acid," as it's known colloquially on the street) was both introduced and popularized in this country not by the youthful "counterculture" of the 1960s but by the CIA in the early 1950s.

But the book goes well beyond LSD, cataloging dozens of ethically questionable experiments in behavior control sponsored and financed by the CIA through secret projects with code names such as - MKULTRA, MKDELTA, MKNAOMI, ARTICHOKE and BLUEBIRD.

Marks details the CIA's penchant for amoral dabbling in massive doses of tranquilizers, sophisticated hypnosis, psychosurgery, electroshock and a host of other techniques to advance the state of the art in "depatterning" or "brainwashing."

There is a discussion of "terminal experiments in sensory deprivation," designed to literally wipe clean the minds of human subjects. After all prior memories, values and behavior patterns have been eliminated, the burned-out brains can be "reprogrammed" by those in control of the experiments.

CIA horror stories are hardly a new item for even the most casual reader of contemporary books or news accounts. Marks, however, breaks new ground with his account of the enthusiastic support the CIA received from many of the country's most prestigious behavioral scientists.

Because the CIA lacked the staff capability to conduct the mind control experiments, virtually all of the research was contracted out to academicians and researchers who gladly accepted generous government grants to finance their experiments.

Among those who appear in the new book:

-A former president of the American Neurological Association who offered the CIA his services to conduct studies on everything from isolation and deprivation to "black psychiatry" and torture.

-A former president of the American Psychiatric Association who used a combination of intensive electroshocks and drug-induced sleep "to wipe the human mind totally clean."

-A former president of the American Psychological Association who received more than $190,000 from the CIA to study how various societies use different words and concepts to express similar sentiments and feelings.

The CIA claims it got out of the dirty business in the early 1970s, because the unpredictability of the techniques didn't make them "operationally useful" and because of belated sensitivity to "moral and ethical considerations."

But Marks notes that the agency recently acknowledged that its files contain hundreds of thousands of still-unreleased documents "reasonably expected to contain" material on behavioral modification.

Still unresolved is the question of when - if ever - the CIA terminated its support for mind control experiments. Is there good reason to believe the work is not continuing to this day?

Tell Children What They Can Do

If parents don't want children to do something, they can react with "positive" instructions, points out Jenny Reinhardt, a family life education specialist.

Frustration, resentment, stifled creativity and discipline problems can result if children are continually told "don't," she continues.

Miss Reinhardt is with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System.

Prevention in the "positive" form of planning with the child what he can do is a key to successful parenting.

For example, parents often tell children "don't jump on the bed," "don't run the cars on the furniture," and "don't write on the walls," the specialist says.

Children who have learned to jump, push cars and write enjoy these activities.

However, parents can choose the positive approach and provide "planned" opportunities for children to use these experiences, such as:

--Provide a jumping and bouncing surface for children by obtaining a used about-to-be-discarded spring and mattress for this purpose.

Locate it on the floor in a roomy area.

--A different and exciting way to play with cars is to run them on a smooth, wide board.

Lean the board on a box or other solid surface so it forms an incline.

Have the child place two small cars on the highest part of the board and release them at the same time, then watch the race to the bottom and onto the floor.

--As children learn to write and draw, provide an opportunity to paint pictures.

After a few days, place a new "canvas" up for a new picture.

Oswald: "How about some articles on the acronym 'ARCH'?"

Alan: "Let's remind our readers. A is Analyze the lead. R is Review the bidding. C is Count your winners and losers. H is How can I make or defeat the contract, depending on which side you are."

Oswald: "South reviews the bidding and notes that the odds are greatly in favor of West holding the king of diamonds and he can only afford to lose one diamond trick. He decides to postpone a diamond play as long as he can."

Alan: "He starts by drawing trumps with two leads; then cashes the last high club and leads a spade from dummy. East rises with the ace."

Oswald: "At this point the probability that West will hold the diamond king has risen from a high probability to a certainty. So when East leads back a diamond, South goes right up with his ace and leads a second spade. West wins and continues spades. South ruffs."

Alan: "Now South is home. It doesn't matter how he plays the second diamond because after West takes his king he has to give South a ruff and discard."

Balloons In Quick Trip

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP)-When 8-year-old Melissa Morgan of Houston sent two helium-filled balloons aloft, she enclosed instructions that got right to the point.

"If you find this, send this note back," she wrote before launching the balloons Jan. 25 as part of a project at Houston's Lamkin Elementary School.

Somebody did find it - the U.S. Air Force.

Capt. Roland Raab of the Eastern Test Range here said the balloons apparently made a speedy trip and were discovered at Cape Canaveral one day later.

Females Warned

NEW BRUNSWICK, N.J. (AP)-Female hitchhikers and women strolling alone at night on the Rutgers University campus here may receive this unusual greeting from police:

"If I were a rapist, you would be in trouble."

The warning comes in the form of small printed cards being distributed by patrolmen. Middlesex County Prosecutor Richard Rebeck said he and campus officials hope the warnings will help focus more attention on the school's other rape prevention programs.

Beef For Schools Costs 80% More

WASHINGTON (AP)-Prices paid by the Agriculture Department for ground beef for donation to school cafeterias have gone up 80 percent from a year ago.

In its latest purchases last week, the department paid about $1.30 a pound for more than 2.3 million pounds of ground beef.

For the entire 1977-78 school year, purchases totaled $67.8 million for 93.9 million pounds of ground beef, an average of about 72 cents a pound.

Since this year's buying started last summer, about 71.8 million pounds of ground beef has been bought for a total of $81.7 million, an average price of $1.14 a pound.

This Flummery Means Praise

By Aileen Claire
NEA Food Editor

One definition of flummery may be an empty compliment. However, family and friends will offer genuine praise when you serve a peach flummery to top off a convivial meal.

This type of fruit custard traditionally was thickened with oatmeal or flour boiled with water. A faster and tastier modern version uses quick-cooking tapioca plus fruit. Although the recipes call for fresh or canned peaches, you may substitute your favorite fruits, especially fresh fruits in season.

You will want to serve this make-ahead dessert often.

FRUIT FLUMMERY

2 cans (17 ounces each) sliced peaches
1 cup water
½ cup sugar
¼ cup quick-cooking tapioca

Mash peaches in a saucepan. Add water, sugar and tapioca. Let stand 5 minutes. Bring to a boil, stirring constantly. Remove from heat. Pour into a bowl or individual dessert dishes. Cover surface with plastic wrap. Chill 3 hours. Makes 4½ cups or 8 to 9 servings.

NOTE: You may substitute 2 cans (16 ounces each) pear halves with liquid for peaches and water.

PEACH FLUMMERY

2 pounds ripe peaches
1 cup water
1 cup sugar
¼ cup quick-cooking tapioca.

Peel peaches and cut into quarters. Crush in a bowl, one layer at a time.

Combine fruit, water, sugar and tapioca in a saucepan. Let stand 5 minutes.

Bring to a full boil, stirring constantly. Pour into a bowl. Cover surface with plastic wrap. Chill 3 hours. Makes about 4 cups or 8 servings.

NOTE: Peach quarters may be pureed, 1/3 at a time, in an electric blender.

Says John Connally...

Texas Primary Victory Essential To Candidacy

AUSTIN (AP)—Republican presidential hopeful John Connally says a loss to Ronald Reagan next year in a Texas primary election might end his bid for the nation's top political office.

But the former Texas governor added, "If I beat him (Reagan), it might end his" presidential hopes.

Connally told reporters here he considers a Texas primary victory essential to his candidacy, although he made references to the possibility he won't be the only Texan in the race.

Former CIA director and Texas congressman George Bush also has said he will seek the GOP nomination in 1980.

Bush told an Alabama College audience Thursday night he is convinced he will be the Republican presidential nominee.

Connally said, "I can understand his optimism and exuberance. I share it equally, if not to a greater degree."

Connally said that money is not a problem in his campaign so far.

He said he has already met the criteria for federal matching funds Under Federal Election Commission regulations, a presidential candidate must raise more than $5,000 in each of 20 states. No donation of over $250 is counted, so at least 25 persons must contribute in the state.

Connally said he was not sure of exactly how much his campaign has raised, but that it's approximately $150,000.

Connally announced for the presidency Jan. 24 in Washington and he said his quick qualification for federal funds is "unprecedented in political campaigns - as far as I know - in this country."

Also released at the news conference was a travel schedule for Feb. 21-27 in Texas that includes a birthday celebration for Mrs. Connally Feb. 24 in San Antonio and a birthday party for Connally in Houston Feb. 27. Connally will be 62.

Asked what type of presidential primary he would prefer in Texas, Connally said a wide open primary and winner-take-all "suits me." He said he had no preference as to the date, but it probably should be set apart from the regular party primaries in May.

Although there is no current legal provision for a presidential primary in Texas, the 1979 Legislature is expected to consider bills creating one, possibly to be held in March 1980.

Connally's former affiliation with the Democratic Party should not hurt, Conally indicated Friday, saying, "If we start requiring a third generation pedigree like in registered cattle and quarter horses, we're all dead."

Asked what political issues he thouht would dominate the 1980 race, Connally listed inflation as No. 1 and added - in order - energy, changing the attitude toward business, and building confidence "to encourage the private sector to put more into research and development."

Nellie Connally Released From Austin Hospital

AUSTIN (AP)-Nellie Connally, wife of Republican presidential candidate John Connally, has been released from an Austin hospital following her Saturday night collapse.

Mrs. Connally, 59, was discharged from Brackenridge Hospital Sunday morning after an overnight stay for observation.

Davis' Accuser Living In Fear

DALLAS (AP)-David McCrory, the state's key witness in the Cullen Davis murder-for-hire trial, said he is a prisoner in the solitude of his own fear.

McCrory, 40, exchanged his testimony for federal protection, relocation and a new identity under terms of the Federal Witness Protection program.

"The price has been too damned high," McCrory told the Dallas Times Herald in a telephone interview.

Davis is free on $30,000 bond after jurors in his murder solicitation trial in Houston failed to reach a verdict.

But McCrory said he is confined by his fear and restricted to his new hometown by provisions of the witness protection program.

"All I try to do is stay alive," said McCrory, who added he inspects his car each time he gets in it, checking under the hood before trips to the grocery store.

"I'm constantly looking over my shoulder," the former Davis employee said.

"I know he'll (Davis) try to have me killed sooner or later. Somebody with that kind of money can buy information to find where I am. Sooner or later somebody will make a mistake. I have to stay hid real well."

Davis' defense lawyer Richard "Racehorse" Haynes said McCrory's allegations that Davis has spent $100,000 looking for him are "absolutely, unequivocably wrong."

"We've not spent one dime looking for him," said Haynes.

"I just feel sorry for the folks of the community in which he is residing."

McCrory branded the Houston mistrial as absurd. But said "Haynes may be the most brilliant person I have ever met.

"I can understand the jurors not believing me. I thing he (Haynes) could put anyone on the stand in the country and make the jury believe what he wants them to believe. Their defense case was nothing but a pack of lies, though, made up by people expecting to get paid by giving false testimony."

McCrory said a U.S. attorney from Fort Worth suggested the witness protection program.

"He thought I had no protection at the house, and thought it was ridiculous. He told me I wouldn't live 15 minutes."

Assistant U.S. Attorney John W. Sweeney Jr., reached at his home in Fort Worth, said he would not comment Sunday night on the witness protection program and McCrory.

The protection program provides rent and sustenance money, McCrory would not specify how much, but also places restrictions on his life. Neither he nor his wife are allowed to work or leave the city where he is relocated.

"When you fear somebody is trying to have you killed and you're worried about your family and your name's been changed, it's probably one of the worst things that could happen to a person other than death," said McCrory.

AUTOMAKERS ARE expected to soon be beating a path to Transportation Secretary Brock Adams' door in an effort to persuade him to relax proposed fuel-economy standards for 1985 models. Adams says he now plans to hold Detroit to the 27.5-mile-a-gallon standard that some industry officials have called misguided. But, Adams adds, "I will listen; my mind is open."

Trying to become pregnant

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I am trying to become pregnant and there seems to be a problem. My husband and I are both 31. We have one daughter 7 years old and I lost a baby at birth five years ago, so I know I can get pregnant. We've been trying for over three years and I am going through many days of depression and having arguments with my husband over whose fault it is.

He did go to a urologist three years ago and his examination showed he had a sperm count of 44 million, which I understand is OK but is only one-third of the normal.

He refuses to be re-examined, saying it is embarrassing and there isn't any need for it. That's why we are arguing. I feel he is not doing everything he should.

I have RH negative blood and had a Cesarean section with my last pregnancy. Does this have any bearing on a conception? When does the doctor prescribe fertility pills to women? Is this to regulate their menstrual cycles or does it help them to get pregnant?

I feel I've given nature every chance to take its course and I want a family before I get much older and it's too late.

DEAR READER — Science is making very rapid strides but it still takes two to produce a baby, even if it's a test-tube baby. That means that when a couple has a problem in fertility, both partners need to be examined.

A lot can happen in three years, and since it's during this period of time that you have been trying to get pregnant, there would be nothing wrong with your husband having another examination.

It would be good if the two of you could go to a fertility clinic. That way, more information could be obtained on you.

Daily temperature curves might point out whether you are ovulating regularly or not. If you are not, then your doctor might wish to prescribe a fertility pill. They are not used to regulate menstrual cycles but rather to stimulate the ovaries to release ova.

When the stimulation has been too successful and released a lot of ova simultaneously, a number of women have had multiple births. Regulating the dosage and the medicine used helps to minimize that possibility.

Your husband might be greatly surprised to learn that in some men with low sperm counts the fertility pill that is used to cause ovaries to release ova can also stimulate the man to produce more sperm, thereby increasing his fertility. If the man's fertility can be improved in these situations, there isn't any reason why it shouldn't be done.

A number of causes can contribute to infertility in both the male and the female. It is true that in some instances a woman may develop an immune or sort of allergic reaction to the husband's sperm cells. When this proves to be the case, then methods can be devised to minimize the reaction and help promote the probability of pregnancy.

It won't help to fight with your husband and it is really not a question of whose fault it is. The important point is what will work best for the two of you to enable you to have another pregnancy if that is what you want. It takes two to tango and two to produce a baby. Either one is more fun than fighting.

The Health Letter number 5-12, Menopause, includes some basic information on the normal cycle and female hormones, so I am sending it to you. Others who want this issue can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Send your request to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

Midwest May Face Floods In Spring

WASHINGTON (AP)-Midwesterners struggling with heavy winter snows might have new troubles when spring finally arrives, the National Weather Service says. A lot of snow now can mean floods later.

Things could change in the next month or so, but "it looks like there is a potential for a snowmelt flood in the spring based upon present conditions," said Allen Flanders of the weather service. Herman Mondschein, who directs the service's River Forecast Center, said this weekend the area with greatest flood potential includes extreme lower Michigan, northern Indiana and Illinois, southeastern Wisconsin, eastern Iowa, northern Missouri and northeastern Kansas.

Airliner Runs Off Runway

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn. (AP)-Chattanooga's Lovell Field was closed for about five hours after a Delta Air Lines Boeing 727 with 126 passengers aboard ran off a runway and bogged down in mud, an airline spokesman said.

Delta's Dennis Morgan said no one on board the aircraft was injured. However, the airport was closed to commercial traffic until about 8:15 p.m. Friday while ground crews using a tractor struggled to free the jet. Morgan said Flight 541 from Atlanta to Chicago had landed without incident and was turning onto a taxiway when its right landing gear ran off the concrete and became stuck.

Gold is mentioned more than 400 times in the Bible.

Superman Fan In Good Condition

NEW YORK (AP)—Four-year-old Charles Green was reported in good condition at a New York hospital after an unsuccessful attempt to fly - from his family's seventh-floor apartment, hospital officials said.

The boy recently saw the movie "Superman" and began dreaming of flying, his family said.

He sustained multiple injuries Friday when he hung by his fingers from the ledge of the family's Brooklyn apartment, then dropped, said police Sgt. James Murphy.

Pressey Injured; Sprain To Keep Him Benched

Paul Pressey, WTC Westerner leading scorer, suffered an injury in practice over the weekend which may sideline him for several games.

Pressey, who averages 14.7 points per outing, apparently came down with a rebound and landed on a teammate's foot or leg, twisting his own ankle.

The injury was at first feared to be a fracture, however, doctors this morning could find no evidence of a break.

"He couldn't walk on it at all this morning, and that has us worried," said Coach Nolan Richardson prior to hearing the doctor's report. "Usually if someone sprains an ankle he can sort of hobble around. Paul wasn't able to walk."

In addition to serving as the Westerner's leading scorer, Pressey is "among the top three in every category, assists, rebounds...everything," said the coach. "This may be a big blow right before the stretch," he added, speaking of the final eight regular season games remaining on the schedule. "Hopefully we've got enough talent to fill in for him."

The 6-5, high school All-American from Richmond, Va. will miss several games, depending on the length of recovery.

"We've got him on crutches to stay off of it (the ankle) and we'll see that he gets treatment every day," noted Richardson.

"He'll miss tonight's game and the rest of this week. We hope he might be ready to play by Amarillo (Feb. 15), but we'll just wait and see."

The Westerners, 8-2 in conference play and ranked No. 8 nationally, were to host Odessa College at 8 tonight in the coliseum, weather permitting.

INJURED--Paul Pressey (above), 6-5 freshman, was injured in WTC Westerner workouts over the weekend and will be out for several games at least with a severly sprained ankle. The Westerners - and Dusters - were to host Odessa beginning at 6 tonight in the coliseum, weather permitting. (SDN STAFF PHOTO)

SHS Games Cancelled

EDITOR'S NOTE: Continued reports of adverse weather conditions across the area have forced cancellation or postponement of all Snyder High School and junior high games scheduled tonight. Snyder girls (see story below) will play Sweetwater at 6 and 8 p.m. Thursday.

Felines Try Mustangs

SWEETWATER—Weather permitting, Snyder varsity girls basketball team was to resume search for its first district win of the season here tonight, taking on the Mustangs at 8 o'clock.

The contest will be preceded by a 6 p.m. junior varsity game.

Snyder holds an 0-2 mark going into the contest, while Sweetwater is 1-2 in the San Angelo Lake View dominated conference.

The Lake View Maidens whipped the Mustangs 56-39 last week, boosting their record to 3-0 with only three games remaining on the slate.

Snyder, meanwhile, desperately needs a win tonight to remain alive in the running. Sweetwater popped the Tigers 50-47 in the team's only meeting this year.

Carew Goes To Angels

MINNEAPOLIS (AP)—The Angels are elated, the Yankees haughty, the Twins dazed, and Rod Carew silent following the trade which sent the 33-year old first baseman from Minnesota to California Saturday.

In return for Carew, a seven-time American League batting champion who grew disenchanted with the tight-fisted ways of Twins' owner Calvin Griffith, Minnesota received outfielder Ken Landreaux, pitchers Paul Hartzell and Brad Havvens, and catcher-third baseman Dave Engle.

Shootout Or Shutdown? Andrews To Host Cats

ANDREWS - Swirling snow and icy roads - coupled with more important matters on the agenda - may dispell what otherwise promises to be a pretty interesting shootout of ranked teams here Tuesday.

The action is scheduled to begin at 8 p.m. as No. 4 ranked Snyder and No. 6 ranked Andrews, both from Class AAA, meet at Mustang Gym.

But if adverse weather doesn't postpone or cancell the game, thoughts of upcoming battles may mar the intensity somewhat.

Both Andrews and Snyder - despite their lofty state rankings, have been upset in district play, and may have other more important things to dwell on.

Snyder needs district wins over Sweetwater and San Angelo Lake View to wrap up a second-round title and face Lamesa in post-season playoffs. Andrews, who slipped to Odessa Ector earlier in the district season, thus losing the first round, has already fallen again in round-two. The Mustangs will need straight victories - and perhaps a little help from its foes - to notch a playoff berth.

But it is possible that Tuesday's meeting will help take the tightness out of the clubs, who only on occasion have played up to their capabilities in loop play. Otherwise, it looks as if the teams will be going through the motions, with minds on more crucial meetings in the future.

In an earlier meeting in Snyder, the Tigers defeated Andrews 76-69. The teams could conceivably meet in regional play again.

Odessa Vaults Local Gymsters

ODESSA—Odessa High School dominated an optional gymnastics meet held here against Snyder over the weekend.

Odessa boys out-pointed Snyder 110.15 to 70.80, while the girls took a 104.39 to 77.90 decision.

Snyder is scheduled to host Midland in a compulsory meet Friday at Travis Gym. An exact time has not yet been released.

Pam Blankenship, one of the most experienced girls on the Snyder team, suffered an injury in practice and was unable to compete in all-around competition here, cutting the Tigers' chances considerably.

"Odessa is very tough," remarked Tiger Coach Doug Fitzjarrell. "Their girls won state two years ago and were second last year. They still have the top two all-arounds in the state. Hopefully, we'll be able to bring up our score (girls) some with Pam at full strength."

Blankenship, who bruised a foot, is expected to back in good form "in two weeks at the most," noted Fitzjarrell, who added she might be in good shape for Friday's meet with Midland.

In action here over the weekend, Rita Black took third in the all-around with a 24.90. Sara Youngkin was fourth with a score of 22.80.

Boy's competition saw Bobby Overhulser take second on the still rings and third on the high bar and pommel horse. Hunter Crawford was second on pommel horse.

Overhulser, the senior member of Snyder's gymnastics team this year, took third in all-around, while Crawford took fourth.

Hinkle Wins Crosby Pro-Am

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. (AP)—Lon Hinkle, despite shooting a 5-over-par 77, won the $300,000 Bing Crosby National Pro-Am Golf Tournament in a three-way sudden death playoff against Mark Hayes and Andy Bean by firing his only birdie of the day on the third extra hole.

Bean had a closing 69, while Hayes had a par-72 despite a four-putt, triple-bogey seven on the 15th. Hinkle earned $54,000.

WTC Entertains Odessa In Twinbill Tonight

Tonight will be Father & Son night at Scurry County Coliseum as Western Texas College basketball teams host Odessa College in a double header beginning at 6 o'clock.

No admission will be charged to fathers and their sons, who come to the twinbill together. Prices for moms and daughters will be $2 for adults and $1 for students.

A Mother & Daughter Night has been planned for the near future.

Coach Joe Cushing's Dusters will be trying to avenge a 67-50 loss to Odessa in the opener tonight. Odessa, 17-2 on the season, comes into the clash with straight victories over South Plains, Clarendon, Amarillo and Frank Phillips, giving the visitors a commanding 6-1 conference record to date.

The Dusters, 16-9 for the season, have won 10 of their last 11 ball games - losing only to major college power Baylor University.

Tonight's battle will be for first place in the WJCAC as Odessa and WTC are the only two conference teams with one loss apiece. WTC is 4-1, having played fewer loop games than its opponent.

Others in the women's conference are Howard County College (4-2), Amarillo College (4-4), Clarendon College (3-4), South Plains College (1-4) and Frank Phillips College (0-6).

In the second game, beginning at 8 o'clock, the WTC Westerners fight to stay on top of the men's conference race. At 8-2, WTC holds a one-game lead over Midland, New Mexico Junior College and New Mexico Military; all with 7-2 marks.

Odessa, 16-6 for the season, is a half game back, at 6-3. Odessa will be coming off wins over Amarillo and Frank Phillips.

The Westerners, 20-3 for the season and ranked No. 8 in the nation, defeated Howard College last week, 97-66.

Both Western Texas College teams take to the road after tonight's affair, making the games even more crucial for each. The men will travel to Clarendon on the 8th, host NMJC on the 12th and hit a two-game road trip. The Dusters play at Clarendon on the 8th and Amarillo there on the 15th before hosting South Plains on Feb. 17.

Gold Nabs Consolation

SWEETWATER--Snyder ninth grade Gold boys team took consolation at the Sweetwater Tournament here Saturday.

Robbie Davenport, who scored 18 points in the consolation finals as Snyder defeated Merkel 60-52, was named to the all-tournament team.

Mark Shaw added 14 points to help gear the effort while Ricky Escobedo and Danny Ramos noted 8 each. Also scoring for Snyder were Joe Garcia with 4, and Raymond Jeffery, Tommy Gressett, Gary Don Edminson and Randy Burrus 2 each.

Snyder fell to Sweetwater Red in Thursday's round-one game, 54-42. Danny Ramos paced with 9 points. A bye on Friday led the Tigers into Saturday's consolation championship.

Brownwood Takes Meet; Snyder Grabs Second

Brownwood placed first in Snyder Team Tennis Tournament play held last weekend with 27 points, followed by Snyder with 23, Seminole with 22, Brownfield 20, Sweetwater 17 and Pampa 10.

Bright spots for Snyder were its wins over two-district foes, Brownfield and Sweetwater.

Neal Paige of Snyder won the No. 1 Boys Singles title, taking five matches, and the local No. 1 Girls Doubles team composed of Connie Weber and Donna McGee won five matches to claim that championship.

Good weather helped the tournament run smoothly. Snyder Coach Bill Boles extends his appreciation to Valerie Wilson and Pam Smith for their assistance, and to Western Texas College, Scurry County and Sac-Roc for the use of their tennis courts.

Next action for Snyder's varsity team will be the first district match played Feb. 6 on local courts against Sweetwater.

Play is expected to begin at 2:30 p.m. Everyone is invited to attend, "and back the Tiger tennis team in its first bid for the district championship," urged Coach Boles.

Snyder Black Snares Tournament Title

SWEETWATER--Snyder eighth grade Black team took its second straight tournament victory over the weekend here, nailing down the Sweetwater Tourney championship with a 50-38 win over the Big Spring Brahmas.

Earlier in the season, a week ago, Snyder won the Roscoe Tournament.

Leading scorer Curtis Gafford made the all-tournament team here, basketing 20 points in the process Saturday night. Glenn Parham scored 12, followed by Britt Vincent 5, Whit Parks and Ken Kitching 4 each, Kirk Herrley 3 and David Gee 2.

It was Snyder's game all the way. The Tiger Cubs took a 34-14 lead and coasted in the remainder of the way.

Coach Dale Byrd praised the efforts of his team, now 13-1 for the year, noting, "I've never seen a better defensive effort from a group of junior high kids. Our press was just super."

The Black team - along with Snyder ninth grade Black - was to play in Colorado City tonight. Adverse weather was likely to cancel the game, however.

Gold Enables South Africa To Avert Fuel Crisis

By JOHN EDLIN
Associated Press Writer

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) South African promises of gold for oil are reportedly keeping open vital supplies cut this month by the country's traditional oil supplier, Iran.

South African salesmen-diplomats have been conferring secretly with oil producing nations and multinational marketing giants in a bid to replace 40 percent of the fuel imports previously supplied by Iran.

And, according to government and industry sources, South Africa has averted an immediate fuel crisis by securing guarantees of oil shipments from undisclosed sources - among them virulent critics of the white-minority government's race segregationist policies.

Officially, the government refuses to say where its oil is flowing from. But Western diplomats here believe that gold-for-fuel deals were struck with Saudi Arabia and other conservative Middle East states at a high premium.

South Africa produces more than two thirds of the world's gold.

The replacement oil supplies come at higher than world prices.

Still, a special government commission set up this month to recommend ways of saving fuel and seeking fresh supplies seems likely to fall short of recommending fuel rationing.

Instead, according to industry sources, the commission is expected to urge voluntary conservation through reduced gas station hours, speed limits and industrial switches to other energy sources.

"Rationing would be a blow to morale, already at a low ebb," a South African newspaper editor who would not be identified said. He was referring to United Nations threats to impose economic boycotts on Africa's richest and most industrialized nation.

Such boycotts would inevitably include oil.

The oil bill is expected to burgeon this year, fueled by the latest oil producers' price increase, the extra "blackmail" prices South Africa says it must now pay on spot markets, and the country's desire to stockpile for emergencies provoked by the U.N. threat.

Third World and Communist nations in the U.N. have stepped up their demands for economic sanctions against South Africa because of its apartheid policies, decreeing racial separation.

Iran earlier this month heeded the call, announcing a halt of all oil shipments to South Africa at the same time as it said shipments to Israel would end. But while South Africa had traditionally imported most of its crude oil from Iran, it had already become accustomed to curtailed Iranian supplies during three months of strikes and civil unrest in that country. Already, tankers were arriving in South African ports from other countries.

As long as crude oil fetches such a high price you will always have international jobbers," the independent daily Johannesburg Star said recently, referring to producers and marketing multinational that might sell to the highest bidders.

Meanwhile, South Africa has stepped up its so-far fruitless search for offshore oil, hiring a second rig from the North Sea fields.

Figures for imports, reserves and expenditures for fuel are kept secret, but authoritative estimates of imports range from 350,000 to 400,000 barrels per day, at a total annual cost of $1.5 to $2.2 billion a year. South Africa is also known to have at least 18 months' worth of reserves stored in played-out mines.

But the country produces only about 10 percent of its oil needs - fuel converted from coal at a state-owned plant near Johannesburg.

Now the government plans two more such plants, and experts say that such plans can produce a third of the country's needs by 1984.

South African leaders are not so much worried that they won't be able to maintain supplies from abroad, as they are concerned that the cost will prune balance of payments surpluses, braking the economy.

But many South Africans like to point out that any major oil crisis would bring suffering to more people than the 4.3 million whites who wield political power over the voteless 19 million blacks.

They say critical shortages would disrupt foreign-owned business and industries, toss hundreds of thousands of South African blacks and migrant black workers from poor neighboring countries out of jobs, and damage the economies of landlocked Botswana, Lesotho, Swaziland, and Zambia which rely on South Africa for fuel shipments.

"If we come under pressure, one oil company executive said, "we'd be fools not to pass those pressures on to client states."

Embattled Rhodesia, South Africa's northern neighbor, would also suffer. "Oil is the Achilles heel of Southern Africa," white Prime Minister Ian D. Smith said recently, following renewed U.N. demands for South Africa to stop sending fuel to that country. Rhodesia gets all of its oil from South Africa.

In addition to the oil, South Africa is losing large export sales to Iran.

$115 million dollars worth last year. South African exporters, alarmed at the Tehran government's apparently hostile attitude, have lately halted shipments including 3,000 German-designed BMW cars worth $35 million, 1,500 tons of frozen chickens worth $1 million and a shipload of flour and grain.

South Africa has one hold over Iran, whose traditional strong economic ties with South Africa date back to World War II, when the Iranian royal family stayed in exile here.

Iran has a 17.5 percent stake, worth millions of dollars, in a state-owned refinery for Iranian crude oil. And South Africa, which boasts it has never nationalized or seized shares in foreign-owned interests, has yet to decide the fate of the Iranian stake.

Exports Of Dry Beans Increase

WASHINGTON (AP)-Exports of dry beans rose sharply last year, says the Agriculture Department.

A total of 202,564 metric tons was exported in the 1977-78 marketing year, up 12 percent from the previous year, says the department's Foreign Agricultural Service.

The shipments were the second largest on record, exceeded only by 232,169 metric tons exported in 1974-75, the agency said in an annual report.

Navy or pea peans produced in Michigan, Minnesota and North Dakota "benfited by a short Ontario, Canada, crop" during the year, the report said.

Overall, the United Kingdom accounted for the largest volume of U.S. bean exports, followed by the Netherlands, Algeria and Canada.

Found No Rabbits

HOUSTON (AP)-Alan Bean, an astronaut went to the moon, gave a new explanation of his lunar explorations during the visit to Houston by Cho Lin, wife of Chinese Vice Premier Teng Hsiao-ping.

"How long were you on the moon?" Madame Cho, a bit wide-eyed, asked Bean at NASA's Johnson Space Center on Friday.

"Two days," he replied. "We looked around for rabbits, but we didn't find any."

Foreigners Will Have To Report Farm Holdings

WASHINGTON (AP)- The Agriculture Department has adopted regulations to put into effect a law passed by Congress last year to require foreigners to report their holdings of U.S. farmland.

Officials said Friday "aliens who own or have a financial interest in more than one acre of U.S. farmland or who gross more than $1,000 from any plot of U.S. land" will be affected.

The regulations require foreigners who owned land before Feb. 6, 1978 to report their ownership by Aug. 6. Those acquiring land after Feb. 6 must report the transfer within 90 days.

Reports will be made at county offices of the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service "in the county where the land is located," the department said. "Failure to report could result in a fine of up to 25 percent of the property's assessed value."

For purposes of reporting, agricultural land will be considered as "any tract of more than one acre now in agricultural, forestry or timber production. This generally excludes small plots, such as household gardens."

A financial interest in farmland by foreigners "means any portion of ownership in farmland, such as partnership, trust or shares in a corporation that owns farmland," officials said.

Reporting forms soon will be available in all of the approximately 2,780 offices of the agency in the 50 states and Puerto Rico, they said.

"Real estate dealers, farm managers, banks, holding companies or other institutions can report in behalf of foreign clients," the department said.

Krenek Publishes Magazine Article

Harry Krenek, professor of history at Western Texas College, is the author of an article titled "The Early Days of Bastrop" appearing in the new edition of the Lower Colorado River Review magazine.

Krenek had previously written an article titled "A Crossing on the Colorado" for Texas Highways magazine. His research on that river crossing provided the starting point for the new article since the city of Bastrop developed at the crossing.

The Bastrop area has a special interest for Krenek. He grew up in nearby Elgin and his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Harry O. Krenek, and grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. S.N. Cottle, still live there.

The Colorado River has its origin at the edge of the Llano Estacado not too far west of Snyder, and flows southeast for more than 800 miles before joining the Gulf of Mexico at Matagorda Bay. It has been called the Colorado for 150 years, Krenek writes, but to the Tonkawa Indians who made their home along its banks in Central Texas in the days before the arrival of the European it was known as "Pashohono."

"No one knows how long the Tonkawa had lived along the river before the arrival of a Spanish expedition at the Colorado in June of 1691," Krenek continues. "When the leader of the expedition, Domingo Teran de los Rios, saw the river, he renamed it "The River of Saint Peter and Saint Paul," and for more than a month the 50 soldiers and 10 priests in the expedition camped on the river at the crossing where Zebulon Pike was to encounter the Tonkawa 116 years later."

Opposition to Mexican rule began among the settlers along the Colorado in later years, and on May 8, 1835 the residents of Bastrop held a meeting to discuss the growing discontent with the Mexican dictator, General Antonio Lopez de Santa Anna. Bastrop was the first municipality in Texas to organize in preparation for resistance to Mexico, and other towns soon followed the example.

To crush the growing rebellion, Santa Anna moved into Texas at the head of a large Mexican army. The Texas army, under Sam Houston retreated, and on March 17, 1836, the Mexican army forded the Colorado River at the San Antonio crossing. Bastrop provided the invaders with their first opportunity to gather the spoils of war, and the soldiers collected and stored everything they considered to be of value, expecting to return at some later date to carry away the valuables.

Photographs and a map were borrowed from the Bastrop County Historical Society to supplement Krenek's article. The Lower Colorado River Review is published quarterly by the Lower Colorado River Authority in Austin.

Applying For a Job? Bring Your Lawyer!

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1979 by Chicago Tribune-N Y News Synd Inc

DEAR ABBY: Your answer to K in Pontiac had to be your biggest blunder of 1978. K, a young married woman, was asked during a job interview, "Do you plan to start a family in the near future?" K was flabbergasted. She then asked you, Dear Abby, the great oracle, "Is that a proper question to ask a female applicant, or am I getting all shook up about a legitimate request for information?"

Your naive response: "When a new employee is hired, the employer makes an investment in time and training; and therefore has the right to know if the applicant plans to have a family or not – and, if so, when."

Abby, that question was not only improper, it was ILLEGAL. Please set the record straight.

DEAR J.: I did set the record straight in my column of Jan 15, but I'm still being assaulted by a hail of mail! There's a lesson to be learned here: that which is logical is not always legal.

Read on:

DEAR ABBY: Concerning the woman who was asked in a job interview if she planned to have a baby in the future: It is unlawful for a job interviewer to ask that question. The following are some do's and don'ts for questions during employment interviews. Bear in mind that some questions may not be asked prior to hiring because the law forbids them. Other questions, while not forbidden by law, might later be the basis for legal action.

Questions that should not be asked:

What is your age?
What is your date of birth?
Do you have children? If so, how old are they?
What is your race?
What church do you attend?
Are you married, divorced, separated, widowed or single?
Have you ever been arrested?
What kind of military discharge do you have?
What clubs or organizations do you belong to?
Do you rent or own your own home?
What does your wife (husband) do?
Who lives in your household?
Have your wages ever been attached or garnisheed?
What was your maiden name (in interviews with female applicants)?

Questions that may be asked?

How many years experience do you have?
(To a housewife) Why do you want to return to work?
What are your career goals?
Who have been your prior employers?
Why did you leave your previous job?
Are you a veteran? Did the military provide you with job related experience?
If you have no phone, where can we reach you?
What languages do you speak fluently?
Can you do extensive traveling?
Who recommended you to us?
What did you like, or dislike, about your previous jobs?
What is your educational background? What schools did you attend?
What do you think are your strong points? Weaknesses?
Do you have any objection if we check with your former employer for references?

Abby, please print this. I am sure many of your readers will find it helpful.

Savings Bond Changes Announced

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

Are you one of the million of Americans who own U.S. Savings Bonds? If so, you should be prepared to review your investment with an eye to some changes.

The Treasury Department has announced a major over-haul of the familiar program. Series E and H bonds will be discontinued and replaced by Series EE and HH. The $25 bond will disappear.

The changes, designed to cut costs for the government will be made gradually. Here, to help you get ready, are some questions and answers about the way the Savings Bond program will work:

Q. What kind of bonds are sold today?

A. Series E and Series H. Series E bonds are sold at a discount and can be redeemed for the face value any time after maturity. They are available in denominations from $25 to $10,000. Series E bonds have a maturity of five years, with a guaranteed 10-year extension during which interest continues to accumulate. Additional extensions issued in the past mean that all outstanding Series E bonds are still earning interest. Interest on Series E bonds is calculated to produce a yield of 6 percent if the bonds are held to maturity.

Series H bonds, in denominations from $500 to $10,000, are sold at face value. Interest is paid semi-annually on a graduated scale designed to produce a 6 percent yield if the bonds are held to their 10-year maturity. They can be redeemed for face value at any time six months after the issue date. Like Series E bonds, all outstanding Series H bonds are still earning interest due to extensions.

Series E and Series H bonds will be sold through Dec. 31, 1979.

Q. What happens next?

A. On Jan. 2, 1980, the government will start selling Series EE and Series HH bonds. Series EE bonds will be sold in denominations from $50 to $10,000 and will cost half their face value. They will mature in 11 years and nine months. The interest rate, for the present at least, will remain the same as that paid on Series E bonds.

Series HH bonds will be sold in denominations from $500 to $10,000. Interest will be paid at a level 6 percent.

Q. Will my old bonds become worthless?

A. Not at all. The maturity on the earliest outstanding Series E bonds bought between 1941 and April 1952 has been extended, in 10-year increments, to 40 years; they will keep earning interest until they fall due between 1981 and April 1992. They will stop earning interest after that, but they can be cashed in for their face value.

All outstanding E bonds bought after April 1952 receive a new 10-year extension during which they will continue to earn interest. After that, no further extensions are expected for bonds purchased between April 1952 and November 1965; no decision has been made on extensions for E bonds bought after November 1965.

Gregg County Probe Expands

LONGVIEW, Texas (AP)—Federal investigators apparently have widened their already sweeping investigation into allegations of gambling, prostitution, drug trafficking and official corruption in Gregg County.

Two newspapers reported Sunday that federal investigators are also looking into possible civil rights violations and the alleged misuse of county funds and equipment.

The Longview Morning-Journal reported Sunday that the financial records of more than 20 prominent residents and elected officials of the East Texas county have been subpoenaed. Longview is the Gregg County seat.

And the Dallas Morning News reported in its Sunday editions that indictments are expected to be returned against some prominent county residents.

Authorities expect as many as 250 persons to testify before a federal grand jury during the investigation that could take up to six months. The grand jury is scheduled to convene Feb. 21 in Tyler.

"We're not seeking indictments. We're investigating. Once that grand jury starts returning indictments, we can't use it to investigate anymore," said William L. Hinshaw, supervisory special agent of the Tyler FBI office.

The probe has mushroomed since 28 Dallas and Tyler FBI agents raided two suspected gambling operations near Longview.

No Increase In Postage Anticipated Until 1981

By JEFFREY MILLS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - The cost of mailing a letter probably won't rise for two years, unless inflation plays havoc with the Postal Service budget, the postmaster general says.

William F. Bolger, head of the U.S. Mail, says the Postal Service's finances are in good shape and no rate increases appear needed until the spring of 1981.

But there is a string attached - inflation. Most of the cost of handling mail is in salaries for workers, who get automatic cost-of-living pay increases tied to the inflation rate. Inflation pushes up Postal Service expenses and, consequently, postal rates.

"For every $200 million in additional expenses we incur, the next rate increase will have to be about one month sooner," Bolger said in an interview.

He also predicted that the current fiscal year that ends Sept. 30 will show a $180 million surplus, the first 12-month surplus since the postal reorganization of the early 1970s.

"Inflation is giving us the same problem that everyone else has, but I still think we can have the surplus because the volume of mail continues to go up," Bolger said.

When Congress voted in 1970 to replace the Post Office Department with the Postal Service, one of the major goals was a mail system that would break even financially.

The new agency was organized like a private corporation in the hope that "business-like" management could make it work more efficiently than its politics-laden predecessor.

The last postage increase for a first-class letter - from 13 cents to 15 cents - came May 29. Increases were also posted for other mail.

Asked how much the next increase will be, Bolger said, "I have no idea. We haven't even started to put together the documentation for that."

Bolger, who began as a postal clerk in 1941 and, after many promotions, became postmaster general last March, also said mail delivery on Saturdays will continue indefinitely. At one time, its elimination was considered to save money.

Soviets Campaign For Vodka-To-Beer Switch

By JIM BOARDMAN
Associated Press Writer

WILDER, Idaho (AP) - The Soviet Union, best known in drinking circles for vodka consumption, is suddenly importing enough American hops to make more than a billion gallons of beer a year.

The chairman of the Idaho Hops Commission, Ray Obendorf, said Sunday that the Soviet purchases have turned the hops-farming industry around. He said he doesn't know why hops are suddenly popular in the U.S.S.R., but authorities there have been campaigning recently for a switch from vodka to beer and wine, apparently in an attempt to combat drunkenness.

Posters in Moscow have depicted vodka drinkers laying in gutters while portraying wine and beer drinkers as wise sophisticates. The official press has called for efforts to improve Russian beer, which is considered inferior even to that of Eastern Europe.

Hops are a basic ingredient of beer, primarily responsible for flavor. They are the flowers of a twining vine in the mulberry family.

A few years ago the Soviets didn't buy any U.S. hops, but between September 1977 and September 1978 they bought 3.7 million pounds and the rate has more than tripled since then, Obendorf said.

The purchases were enough to rank the Soviet Union second, behind Brazil, in imports during the September-to-September year used by the industry. Mexico was third.

This year, "I think Russia will be first," Obendorf said.

It takes one pound of hops to produce about five 31-gallon barrels of typical American beer.

The proportion of hops in [illegible] declines as brewers make their product lighter.

A few years ago, hops growers - concentrated in Washington, Oregon, California and Idaho - were struggling. Now that Russia is importing, many growers are increasing their acreage, Obendorf said.

Hops growers sell to brokers, primarily in Washington and New York, he said. They, in turn, sell to brewers. Obendorf said half of the hops grown in this country are sold abroad.

American growers compete on the hops market with those in Europe, most of them in West Germany. Last year, West Germany had a poor hops crop, Obendorf said, another reason why hops growers here are beginning to show profits after several years of low prices.

Hops growers are plagued by increasing costs of production, particularly for energy, Obendorf said. He said hops growers use "enormous" amounts of diesel oil to dry their crop and "there's a tremendous amount of hand labor," the cost for which went up when the minimum wage was boosted from $265 to $2.90 an hour.

So Obendorf and other growers don't care why the Soviets are jumping into the market-place. They're just glad it's so.

After years of "not getting any return on the dollar, of trying to hold our own, we've got the thing turned around," Obendorf said.

If He Behaves...

14 Year-Old Will Be Freed When He Is 46

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — Robert Earl May Jr. pleaded guilty to armed robbery and was sentenced to 58 years in jail - with no chance of parole. If he behaves, he can be free at age 46, authorities say. He's now 14.

Prison officials, who were besieged with angry calls Friday after a television station reported the boy's imprisonment, said the sentence was unusual for such a young offender.

"We don't get many 14-year-olds at the penitentiary," said Tom Gregory, spokesman for the state Department of Corrections. He told callers: "Our hands are tied. We just do what the court tells us."

May, who is 4-foot-7 and weighs 75 pounds, has been assigned to the prison hospital to isolate him from older inmates, he said. May was imprisoned Monday.

The State Penitentiary at Parchman is Mississippi's main prison. May and three others - ages 17, 18, and 24 - were sent there after they pleaded guilty to armed robbery charges.

"He wasn't just whisked into the court one day and then railroaded off to Parchman," said District Attorney Jack Kitchens. "We're talking about a serious crime.

"When someone is looking down a gun barrel in an armed robbery, it makes no difference whether they (the gunman) are 40 years old or 14 - they're still strong enough to pull the trigger."

Circuit Judge Joe N. Piggott, who sentenced the boy - reportedly without a pre-sentence evaluation - was not available for comment.

A consideration in the sentence, Kitchens said, was fear that the boy might pose a threat to youths in a juvenile facility. May spent four months in a training school for vandalism as a 13-year-old.

"We feel the parents of the kids in juvenile detention centers have a right to have their children protected too," Kitchens said.

The maximum sentence for armed robbery in Mississippi is life. Under the law, Gregory said, May is not eligible for parole, but could be released in 32 years with time off for good behavior.

May and his companions were accused of holding up three firecracker stands and a convenience store near Brookhaven, Miss., during the Christmas season. May carried a gun in one holdup, authorities said.

A woman clerk was beaten in one of the robberies. Gregory said he did not know if the boy was accused of taking part in the assault.

Two of the men, Bob Terrell and Ernest Tolliver, also received four consecutive 12-year terms. The fourth man, Lawrence Williams, was sentenced to three 12-year terms.

State Reps. Fred Banks Jr., Doug Anderson and Horace Buckley, all of Jackson, conferred Friday with Gov. Cliff Finch and corrections officials about the matter.

Banks said the legislators plan to visit the penitentiary today, and will offer a bill to change the state law that prohibits May from receiving parole.

The first report came in at 12:10 p.m. Saturday in the 1300 block of College Ave. There, according to reports, a 1969 AMC driven by Raymond Woodrow Girard and a 1977 Mercury driven by Mark Lynn Duke collided.

The next collision was at 4 p.m. in the 900 block of 37th St. Reports show that a 1971 Ford driven by Douglas Carroll Sawyer was in collision with a guard rail.

The Sonic Drive-In parking lot was the scene of a minor two-car accident Saturday at 9:10 p.m. Involved in it were a parked 1977 Ford owned by Jimmy Williams and a 1973 Buick driven by Alfred Carl Simmons of Rotan.

At 10 p.m., two cars collided in the 2400 block of 25th St. It involved a parked 1969 Chevrolet owned by Frank Ortegon and a 1970 Chevrolet driven by Ricky Dean Harlan.

The Smorgasbord was the site of a two-vehicle collision Sunday about 2 p.m. There, a parked 1977 Toyota owned by Lola Smart was struck by a 1968 Chevrolet driven by Cody Ray Harkins.

A fence owned by the First Baptist Church was drawn into a collision involving a 1965 Buick driven by Rhonda Lynn Gohlike and 1975 Chevrolet driven by Lamoine Knight Lacy Sunday at 2:30 p.m. The wreck took place in the 1700 block of 26th St. Damage to the fence was set at $50.

This morning, a 1978 Pontiac driven by Pamela Crump Hester and a 1966 Ford driven by Gene Landis Dulaney were in collision about 8 a.m. The wreck occurred in the 1900 block of 30th St.

At 9 a.m., a 1975 Ford pickup driven by William Penball, a 1974 Buick driven by Kay Chandler, and a 1974 Mercury were involved in a collision at 30th St. and College Ave.

At 9:20 a.m., a 1978 GMC pickup driven by Winifred Proctor and a 1976 Pontiac driven by Michael Graves collided. That collision, too, was at 30th and College.

Also at 9:20 a.m. today, a 1975 Ford driven by Claudia Dixon struck a dumpster in the 2200 block of 37th St.

Stenholm On Agriculture Sub Panels

WASHINGTON, D.C.—Congressman Charles W. Stenholm has been appointed to the following Subcommittees of the Agriculture Committee: Livestock and Grains; Cotton; Oilseeds and Rice; and dairy and Poultry. The Congressman sought membership on these Subcommittees as he feels these assignments will be particularly important to his representation of the diverse interests of the 17th District of Texas.

The Congressman noted that the 17th District includes twelve of the top seventy cotton-producing counties of Texas, three of the top five peanut counties, two of the three leading milk-producing counties, in addition to the extensive livestock and grain production in all counties throughout the District.

Stenholm went on to say "the 17th District of Texas is one of only twenty four agricultural districts in the Congress today. I feel most fortunate to have this opportunity to work on the problems in agriculture and to speak out on the needs not only the farmers and ranchers but the entire economy of the 17th District of Texas."

Worker For Census Sought

The Texas Employment Commission is still seeking one census enumerator to work on the 1980 census in Snyder.

Anyone interested may call the Texas Employment Commission office at Sweetwater, 235-8418, and ask for Mrs. Oatman.

Dr. Thomas Cooley, medical missionary to Vietnam, died in 1961.

High School Group Invited To McMurry

ABILENE -- High school students from the Snyder area are invited to attend a student weekend at McMurry College Friday and Saturday, Feb. 9 and 10 or March 2 and 3.

A full schedule of events is set for each of the two-day weekends, to give Big Country high school juniors and seniors a chance to become acquainted with the McMurry campus, academic programs and extra-curricular activities.

Hosted by the McMurry College admissions department, the student weekends will feature a performance by Phoenix, an on-campus pop singing group; a McMurry Gong Show, a comical display of campus talent; and a dance in the McMurry Social Hall.

On Saturday, visiting students will have the chance to tour the campus and talk with McMurry professors from all the departments.

Additionally, on Saturday, Feb. 10, vistors will be special guests at a basketball game between the McMurry Indians and Trinity University; and on Saturday, March 3, they will be invited to attend the McMurry drama production "Thieves Carnivall."

Visitors need to bring a bed roll and will be housed in one of the dormitories along with McMurry students. Meals will be provided on Friday evening, Saturday morning and Saturday noon.

Cases Go To Grand Jury

No fewer than three cases were scheduled for presentation this morning before a Scurry County grand jury to determine if indictments are warranted. The cases involve allegations of theft and driving while intoxicated.

Charged with theft are Ray Dean Shaver, 21, and Robert Emmett Moore, 19. The two are alleged to have stolen about $3,700 worth of oilfield equipment from Mabee Petroleum Co. of Ira about Jan. 24. The merchandise was recovered two days later, said sheriff's deputies who investigated the incident.

The other case known to be presented before the grand jury was a driving while intoxicated charge against Vicente R. Olivarez.

Farm Workers On March To Austin

En route from Muleshoe to Austin, a group of Texas farmworkers is scheduled to pass by Snyder along U.S. Highway 84 either Tuesday afternoon or Wednesday morning, said two of the group's spokesmen.

Jesue Moya, an organizer for the Texas Farmworkers Union, board of directors, said they hope their 632-mile trip to the state capital will give an added boost to legislation that, if passed, will give farmworkers the right to collectively bargain.

"Our main objective, basically, is to pass a law that will give farmworkers the right to collective bargaining," said the Spanish-speaking Ramirez through Moya.

The right to collective bargaining, said Moya, "is the basic difference between farm workers and industrial workers."

Because the farmworkers union has no money for a lobbyist, the two men said, they hope their walk will draw attention to their cause. They left Muleshoe Jan. 27, and hope to arrive in Austin March 10.

"It is that walk," Moya said, "that we can bring to the attention of the public the plight of the farmworkers."

The group coming by Snyder is about 20 persons strong. They walk during the day, and spend nights in churches that give them aid.

Man's Voice Heard In Ladies' Room

MADISON, Wis. (AP)—When a woman insisted that a man was praying in the ladies room at the State Capitol, guards found out he was praying in the men's room as well.

Assembly Speaker Ed Jackamonis said what the woman heard was the morning prayer of the Assembly, piped into the restroom.

Jackamonis said he ordered speakers installed in restrooms near the chambers last month so representatives could keep track of legislative debate when away from the floor.
