17 SEAPLANES ARE WRECKED DURING GALE

Break From Moorings and Are Strewn Along Beach

WERE FOR PAGEANT

Ships Had Been Moored Preparatory to Celebration Today

BALTIMORE, Md., Oct. 25.—(AP)—Seventeen of 23 United States navy planes here for a navy pageant tomorrow, broke from their moorings near Sollers Point in a 75-mile gale today and were strewn along a five mile stretch of beach tonight. Another plane, moored off Bay Shore park, tore free and disappeared.

Totally Wrecked.

Seven of the derelict planes were total wrecks when found. Hopes were held out that the other ten might be partially salvaged. Commander T. G. Ellison, in charge of the squadron, said only the six which held their anchors would be able to take part in the pageant, which is scheduled to precede the Schneider cup race at Bay Shore Park. Two of three pursuit planes moored at Bay Shore Park rode out the storm and were safe tonight. No report had been received regarding the whereabouts of the third. It pitched out of sight on bay riding a high running sea.

None Occupied.

None of the planes was occupied during the gale. They were moored with 500-pound anchors and tore from their moorings one by one. All of the Sollers Point escapes eventually were deposited on the beach. At Bay Shore there were no boats of sufficient speed or seaworthy enough to pursue the plane which tore free. Boats from the U. S. S. Shawumut, moored here for the Schneider races were rounding up the planes tonight.

Terror-Stricken Masses Fall and Die Exhausted In Fleeing Horrors of War

HEART OF CITY IS INVADED IN DAYLIGHT JOB

Bold, Daring Robbery Work Of Experts, Say Police

CASH WAS HIDDEN

Saturday Receipts Were Deposited in Secret Vault

What is characterized by police as one of the most daring and well executed robberies ever staged in Wichita Falls took place yesterday afternoon between the hours of 1 and 5 o'clock when three office safes in Saul's department store at Seventh and Indiana were broken into and despoiled of their contents. The exact loss is not known, but it is expected to amount to onlya low figure, inasmuch as the entire Saturday receipts and other cash was locked in a secret vault in the store which was not bothered. The safes robbed include a small and a large office safe, and a small safe used in connection with the post office situation there.

The three jobs were exceptionally well executed, and according to police, show the handiwork of professionals. The knobs were knocked off the doors and a shot of nitro-glycerine used to open them.

Mr. Lebenson, proprietor of the store, left the building Sunday afternoon at about 1 o'clock, returning at about 5 to do some work on his books. It was at that time that the broken safes were discovered. Entrance to the building was obtained through cutting a hole some two feet square in the section of concrete wall on the second floor of the building that happened to be of false construction.

After ending a two-hour investigation of the premises last night following his call to the store shortly after 5:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon, Police Chief George Hodgins said the burglars had an exceptionally good knowledge of the layout of the store. He said the fact that the yeggs cut their way into the store through a false wall, was significant. This false wall is of beaver board and stucco construction, being no different in appearance from the rest of the wall on the outside, but discernible behind a clothes rack from the inside of the store.

Has Secret Vault.

That the entire Saturday's receipts were not taken and that no larger sum was obtained by the yeggs is due, it is believed, to the secret location of the vault where cash of any considerable amount is always taken.

Police were working on the case late last night.

White Man Is Held In Jail On Complaint

County Official Details Series of Mysterious Events in Which Strychnine Was Found on Several Occasions

Several attempts to poison food eaten by C. M. McFarland, judge of the county court at law, and his wife and 15-year-old son, Melford, have been made recently, it was learned last night following the arrest of an elderly white man on a charge of administering poison in food. The charge was filed Saturday afternoon on complaint of J. W. McCormick, deputy sheriff and former Texas Ranger, George Anderson, assistant district attorney, announced.

W. W. Philley of Bowie, Texas, contractor who has been engaged in remodeling the home of Judge McFarland at 1508 Burnett Street, was named in the charge. He was arrested at Bowie either late Saturday night or Sunday morning, it was said.

Judge McFarland last night detailed the series of mysterious events which led up to the finding of poison in food in his home. Beginning with the discovery of a peculiar, bitter taste in biscuits on the McFarland dinner table a month ago, p. son has been found on several occasions since.

The biscuits were destroyed and the flour from which they were made was thrown away after the incident, Judge McFarland said. A week later the barn in the rear of the McFarland home was found burning at 5 o'clock on the morning of Oct. 3.

Were Slightly Ill.

"We were in the midst of the remodeling of our home and did not pay much attention to the incident," Judge McFarland said. "We thought that possibly some plaster had fallen from the wall, or had in some way become mixed with the food. The flour and biscuits were thrown away.

"I recall that Mrs. McFarland, our boy, Melford, and I were slightly ill for several days following the incident, but this may have been the result of colds.

"A few days later the boy was in the kitchen where steak was being fried. Boy like, he took a piece of the meat before dinner was served and said, 'Dad, this meat tastes awful bitter.' I found that it did. We threw the meat away.

"Then some eggs were fried and the boy found that these, too, were bitter.

Finds the Poison.

"I examined a tray of flour just above the cooking range and found in it some glittering crystals. I called a doctor to examine them and he estimated that there were about 15 grains of strychnine in the tray. This was on October 12.

"Then we quit eating at home for a few days," Judge McFarland said with a laugh. "We ate in restaurants and bought prepared food downtown.

"After a few days we bought a fresh stock of groceries. The following Sunday morning, I got up early and went about my usual custom of preparing a cup of coffee. I had made the coffee and was ready to sweeten it when the thought struck me that the sugar might not be safe. I put my finger into the bowl and it tasted bitter.

Anonymous Letter.

"Saturday morning I received an anonymous letter, which my boy found on the front porch, in which I was warned. If you want to do well in Wichita Falls you had better get rid of that carpenter,' or words to that effect. Take good advice,' the letter continued, if not, the worst is yet to come.' Well this was too much. I thought the worst already had come! But fortunately, we still are alive."

Judge McFarland also told of two unusual incidents which occurred in front of his home during the last month. Twice on one day, once in the early hours of the morning, and again near midnight of the same day, an automobile parked in front of his home was found on fire, he said. The first blaze was in the seat of the car, Judge McFarland said. The second blaze was in the gasoline tank.

Mrs. McFarland told a Record News reporter that she had missed a lavalier, set with three diamonds, during the last month. She saw it last on her dresser, she said. It was worth about $75, she said, and was a gift to which she attached much sentimental value.

FIRE IN CORSICANA.

CORSICANA Texas, Oct. 25.—(AP)—Fire in the business section of Corsicana Sunday morning did damage estimated at $7,500. The fire originated in the Worth hotel on the second floor of the Noble building. The hotel was completely gutted. Ransom's grocery and R. H. Durham's barber shop suffered heavily from water damage. Origin of the fire is undetermined.

Mysterious Incidents In Poison Case

The following incidents over a month's period preceded the arrest last night of a white man charged with administering poison in food, following finding of poison in food in the home of C. M. McFarland, judge of the county court at law:

Biscuits at dinner table found to have peculiar, bitter taste.

Members of family become slightly ill.

Barn found burning at 3 a. m.

Steak found to have bitter taste.

Fifteen grains of strychnine found in tray of flour.

Strychnine found in sugar bowl.

Judge McFarland receives anonymous letter.

PROHIBITION'S "LONE WOLF" MEETS DEATH

Police Believe Bootlegger Enemies Poisoned Sleuth

CHICAGO, Oct. 25.—(AP)—James Asher, known as the "Lone Wolf" of the prohibition enforcement service, here, died suddenly today under circumstances which led police and enforcement officials suspect that he may have been poisoned by bootleggers whom he had continually harassed during his three years as a federal agent.

FOOTBALL GAME FOR YOUNG AND SPIRITED.

After a glimpse of the New York Giants-Yellow Jackets game at the Polo Grounds Sunday we are inclined to the belief that the ancient Greeks were gifted crystal gazers as well as brilliant orators, formidable fighters and accomplished athletes. The old Olympic games barred an athlete who had attained the age of 35. Athletically, a man of these years was considered "on the sell," unfit for the Homeric efforts demanded by the classic tests of that age.

Since the Olympian renaissance the United States has several times made this hoary Athenian dictum look ridiculous. The McDonalds, the McGraths and the Ryans, for instance. Baseball has seemingly riddled it full of holes with the astonishing exploits of such antique specimens as Ty Cobb, Walter Johnson, Tris Speaker, Babe Adams and some two dozen others. All past 35 and then some. Boxing had its Bob Fitzsommons, at 40 dreaded by all, even to the then mighty champion Jeffries. Jack Britton was a capable welterweight champion on the threshold of 38. Those are only two of scores who could furnish first class fisticuffs at thirty-five and more. Various other sports can make similar claims of athletic efficiency for what the old Greeks deemed the sportive dead line.

But did the picture of strenuous twentieth century American football color the scrying mirrors of classical Greece? It would appear so. For despite the errors they made elsewhere in sports to come, they certainly tagged American football accurately. It is not for the man of thirty-five, not even for the man a few years younger.

THORPE GREATEST PLAYER.

Some fourteen years ago Jim Thorpe was the greatest football player of his day. At this moment few will deny him the distinction of rating as the greatest football player of all time. But fourteen years has brought the illustrious Indian into a dramatic clash with the wisdom of the ancients. And where the McDonalds, the McGraths, the Ryans and the Fitzsimmons rebuked their theory of thirty-five, Thorpe has fallen crushed. He will not admit it verbally, but the telltale reaction of aging bone and sinew speak louder and more truthfully than big Jim's rebellious vocal chords.

Jim Thorpe—greatest athlete of all ages—is through at thirty-nine, as, indeed, he should be. He is not done as a gate attraction, nor in certain few features of gridiron requirements which do not exact bodily clash with the enemy. Thorpe can still draw crowds. But so can the stuffed carcass of the once majestically animated race horse, Roamer. Roamer's padded remains are in the American Museum of Natural history. All the wizardous art of the taxidermist was spent on the job of mounting the noble racer's lifeless skin.

Roamer looks as natural as the day, eleven years ago, he won the Travers before howling thousands at Saratoga. You almost expect him to gallop, but of course he doesn't. That would make it embarrassing to the other specimens who feel they have earned a lifelike rest in wire, clay, powdered arsenic and what not.

Thorpe's football remains are in a sort of museum, too. Professional football might be called the "American Museum of Football History." This despite the fact there are, some pretty live specimens who are not ready, figuratively, for the football taxidermist's nippers and awls. But the once magnificent Carlisle terror is hardly one of them. Sunday's game at the Polo Grounds about proved that.

HIS DAY GONE.

When the big Indian walked out on the grounds and took his position in the backfield he looked almost as natural as in the days when he ripped through the lines of the best college teams of the country. As Quarterback Hendrian called signals for the first onslaught Thorpe dipped forward in the familiar menacing crouch which once churned up fear in the hearts of the opposition. Roamer at the museum looks lifelike until you call on him for a gallop. And so it was with Thorpe. Tensed on tip-toes, balanced by the fingers of his right hand, Thorpe looked capable of one of his ancient galloping raids around end or a battering ram smite through the line.

But Hendrian knew, and the crowd soon learned, that Thorpe was merely another Roamer—a colorful, important specimen of professional football taxidermy. The horse is stuffed with clay and held together by thread and wire. Thorpe is principally bolstered with courage and an ambitious spirit which his bone and sinew cannot meet. Thorpe ran a few times with the ball, but chiefly they used him for kicking. Some of his punts sailed down the field in the grand manner of Carlisle days. Others flivvered, half done, for a comparatively few yards. On the whole, his kicking was reasonably good, were you merciful enough to forget his booting deeds of the past.

It was in the scrimmages and defensive play that Thorpe "went into the museum," so to speak. Like Roamer, he can no longer gallop; the stamina-sapping of tackling, blocking, even the energies required for recoveries, were him ragged. Once Thorpe was within a few feet of a loose ball. Jim staggered to clutch it, but a nimble Yellow Jacket dashed from the rear and beat him to it. Thorpe hesitated a moment and then wearily piled on top of him. More than a decade of the wear and tear of football and all-around athletic conflict has been too much for him. Near the end of the first half Thorpe went down with a crash after tackling heavily near his own goal line. He arose, groped for his headguard and then limped leaden-hoofed to the line of formation. His face looked like a marathon runner's who has pinched every ounce of resistance from his system.

A few moments later he trudged slowly and heavily to the sidelines. He had lasted just twenty-seven minutes—the once animal of iron who could battle an hour and still lust victriously for more at its conclusion.

Thorpe flopped on a tarpaulin, stretching out his bulky figure at full length. A handler considerately shrouded him a blanket. There he lay for a full five minutes before moving. I crept alongside, and Jim, sensing a newspaperman, called on his pride. He propped himself on an elbow, explaining, "Twisted my knee practising yesterday. Funny how you can throw it out doing nothing. That's why I couldn't move around fast out there."

"How old are you, Jim?" I asked, suddenly.

"Me! I'm thirty-nine!

"Excuse the foolish question, but you're not quite what you once were, are you! That is, it's a pretty rough game for a fellow your age, isn't it?"

"Oh, it's hard, sure. But I'm as good as ever, about. I can still go a whole game. It was my knee that backed me out! Jim's abdomen was still heaving.

"Who was the player you most feared in the old days, Jim, or didn't you fear any one?"

"Sure; I feared a lot of 'em. But Eddie Mahan was the best player I ever saw. He was a wonder. Yes, I could run a hundred in ten. Did it twice."

Then Thorpe asked one—just one:

"How many head of people here?"

"About 18,000," I answered.

His one curiosity satisfied, Thorpe drew the blanket around him and the Roamer of American football retied over on his stomach.

Lions' Pre-Game Stock Soars To Heights After Victory Over Electrans

Baggett Will Send Full Strength Against Wichita Falls—Injured Athletes Back in Lineup

VERNON, Oct. 25.—Lion stock is soaring here somewhat since Baggett's crippled club shaded Electra Saturday. At present, it appears that the Lions will have their full strength when they meet Wichita Falls here next Saturday in the game that is to decide the winner of the eastern end of district one of class A of the Interscholastic League. A survey of the team following the Electra game shows that Castleberry was the only Lion player injured in the fray. His shoulder was thrown out of place.

Victory Saturday in Vernon by the Coyotes over Baggett's Lions would be little short of the miraculous, close followers of the grid game in this section who really know football will tell you.

An enthusiastic young sports writer Sunday declared the dope points to a victory for Wichita Falls. The statement does an injustice to Bud McCallum's injury-beset squad, belittling as it were the magnitude of the task before the Wichita Falls lads.

For there is little doubt but that Vernon's Lions in full strength are stronger than Wichita Falls' Coyotes in full strength. And Saturday, Baggett will be in a position to send his strongest array of the season into the affray, whereas the Wichita Falls squad is in poor plight at the present writing because of numerous injuries.

Should Wichita Falls win it will be only through sheer fighting ability abetted by the kindest breaks of the game registered in many a day.

Coach McCallum today has no plan of action with which to start the week's preparation for the contest. Because the squad is so shot to pieces he will be forced first to put the lads through a sort of inspection in effort to determine the extent of their injuries before he can decide on his method of practice. It is certain the Coyotes will go through only a light workout this afternoon.

Wilks Dobson, for one, at tackle may not see service in the game. Fact is, he's been unable to do any good since the Electra tiff week before last because of a bad ankle.

Bell probably will start at center. Penney, regular midway position player, has a damaged knee.

Coyal Francis, back, may be able to participate, but he has been under the weather due to injuries received in scrimmage.

Dempsey Moore, fullback, was crippled up so much after the Grandfield game Friday that he couldn't walk. It is not a certainty he will be in as much as fair shape by time of the Vernon conflict.

Tank Horton, end and halfback, probably will be out because of an injured hip.

Clarence Adams, who looked exceedingly good at the quarterback position in the Grandfield affair, also is now hampered with a bad hip.

Fact of the matter, the Pack seemed plagued with an epidemic of massed up hip muscles, for it is questionable whether or not Zeke Taylor, lineman, can get into the game due to a mistreated hip, and if he can make the grade be in a position to give a good account of himself.

Buck Steed, halfback, has been bothered with a charley horse for two weeks, and instead of improving has hurt it more.

McCallum has this handicap confronting him as he endeavors to whip his eleven into shape to say nothing of the fact that his squad is green, very green comparatively speaking.

The Coyotes may win, but confidence "the dope favors them" won't aid in doing so.

Both Ryan and Crouch will be in the lineup when the Lions face the Coyotes next Saturday, physicians reports indicate. Ryan, although he had been out of bed little more than a day, went into the Lion-Tiger fray at Electra at the beginning of the second half. He came out uninjured, and is expected to be in excellent condition by this week-end. Crouch was not able to go into Saturday's game, but came out for practice during the latter part of last week, and will probably be going strong by the end of the week.

Club 50 Per Cent Better.

With both Ryan and Crouch in Saturday's lineup, Baggett's organization will be about 50 per cent stronger than that placed on the field in the Electra tilt. In addition to this pair's stellar broken-field running, they carry the greater part of the Lion's threat as a passing club. The Ryan-to-Crouch combination has proved to be the most consistent aerial combination that Baggett has displayed this year.

With a ful string of regulars back in the lineup this week, Baggett should be able to drill his squad on something more than fundamentals during the practice sessions. Because he has been forced to drill new men since the game with Sayre two weeks ago, Baggett has given his proteges nothing but fundamentals in that time. The club has not scrimmaged more than two afternoons in the two weeks, and all fake formations were abandoned. This was in evidence in the Electra game, when the Lions depended entirely on straight off-tackle plays, with an occasional attempt to pass from regular formations.

Forward Wall Intact.

Baggett's forward wall line-up will also be intact for Saturday's game, according to present indications. Both ends, Hollar and T. Key, played the full game Saturday in spite of injuries and came out unscathed, and are in excellent condition for the coming week.

Coaches here are giving the Coyotes the edge in the coming game in spite of the fact that Vernon downed the Tigers after Wichita had played the club to a scoreless tie. The Lions mentors point out that Wichita made eleven first downs against the Tigers, while Vernon recorded only five. With the coaches drilling this into the players, over-confidence appears to have little chance to handicap the Lions.

TIGERS COME OUT OF TILT ALL TO OKEH

Reese and Coke Prepare For Embroglio With Quanah

ELECTRA, Oct. 25.—The Tigers came out of the Saturday scrap with the Vernon Lions in the best of physical condition with the exception of the usual minor bruises. Pug Sanderlin injured his left shoulder but it is not expected to be serious. Although eliminated from the conference race, all of the local fans and Coaches Reese and Coke are more than well pleased with the showing of the team as the wise dopesters predicted a walk away for the visitors but the Tigers turned the tables and battled the highly touted Lions on even terms for the most of the game until the "break" came in the last few minutes of play when the visitors turned an apparent five-yard loss into a gain of near 50 yards in the form of a pass from Ryan to Williams which placed the ball on the 12-yard and paved the way for the only touchdown of the game.

Work for Next Year.

Eliminated from the title running, the Tiger mentors will probably spend a great part of the remainder of the season in uncoveinrg talent to replace the seven first string men who are playing the last year on the Tiger squad. Toots Gilger, Dell Cooledge, Vincent Trammill, Ralph Turner, Bob Moore, Pug Sanderlin and Brewer Smith are the first stringers who will be absent next fall when the call is issued for candidates. Willis Canahan, Roy Cooledge, Johnie Lebus, Buzzy Smith, John Louie Wright, Clayton Ruen and Big Oren Sargent will probably be back next fall and are expected to develop into real stars, along with number of others who have been showing up well in the Tiger camp.

Team Improving.

The Tigers have failed to score a victory thus far this season but "they are getting better every game" is the way Head Coach Jim Reese terms it and they are expected to make an enviable record this season before the curtain falls. The Quanah Indians invade the Bengals lair Saturday and the Tigers will go into this fray with all they have to score the season's initial win. A number of likely looking youngsters will probably see action in this game who have failed to play in a game to date.

CAREY IN HOSPITAL

PITTSBURGH, Oct. 25.—(AP)—Captain Max Carey of the world champion Pittsburgh Pirates was taken to a hospital Sunday, suffering from pleurisy and complications, all of which are traced to his collision with Stanley Harris in the fifth game of the world series at Washington. Carey's ribs were injured at the time and since he has never felt right. For the past two or three days he had been confined to his bed at home, but he was quickly rushed to the hospital when a turn for the worse manifested itself.

The Classified Columns of The Record News always appealed to me as being satisfactory.

IT'S STEERS VS. FARMERS FOR GRID RAG

Week - End Performances Put Varsity and A. & M. Out Front

DALLAS, Texas, Oct. 25.—(AP)—The Southwest conference grid championshpi may be decided at College Station Thanksgiving day, when the Texas Aggies will entertain the Texas Longhorns on Kyle field. This possibility was impressed upon many of the spectators who Saturday saw the Longhorns crush the Rice Owls, 27-6.

There remains a number of high barriers for each team to surmount before Thanksgiving day, but there is no denying that to date Coach Bible's Farmers and Coach Stewarts Steers have been most impressive in their play.

For many years the Longhorns and Aggies had a monopoly on the conference title, with the annual turkey day clash settling the question of superiority. In 1921 the Texas Aggies won the popular championship when they held the Longhorns to a scoreless tie on Kyle filed. The Farmers that season played more conference games than did the Longhorns, and on this basis was awarded the title by most neutral fans, though the championship was never formally awarded.

In 1922, Coach Frank Bridges broke up the monopoly with his Baylor Bears; the S. M. U. Mustangs won the title in 1923 and Bridges captured the honors in 1924. Both Aggie and Longhorn partisans feel that it is about time for their teams to "come back."

Although not forced to show all they have on the offensive against the Owls, the Longhorns displayed an attack powerful and versatile enough to cause scouts of rival conference teams to take many pages of notes. Coach Dana Bible of the Aggies was one of the most interested spectators.

Steer Backs Versatile.

The Longhorns, not only have a dangerous running and plunging attack, but they have an aerial offensive the equal of any in the conference. The backs and ends are fast and clever in getting into the open, and in Captain Wright, Fred Thompson, Rufus King, Joe King and Stallter, the Steers have five accurate pigskin heavers. Any eleven that draws its backs in close to stop the running attack of Stewart's gridsters will be taking a big chance.

No other school in the conference has as many capable halfbacks as does Texas. It was significant that three backs who are regarded as "second stringers" were in the line-up when the Steers looked best against the Owls. Johnny Estes, the offensive star, looked much better than did Mack Saxon, the man he relieved, though in justice to Saxon it must be admitted he was not in condition to play because of injuries. Fred Thompson gained more yardage at bucking the line than did Rufus King, regarded as the premier line smasher of the eleven; while Joe King, who relieved Captain Wright at quarter, used better judgment in calling the plays.

The fact that Captain "Heap" Underwood and Ed Herting, offensive and defensive stars of the Owls, were not in the game in the third period, unquestionably had something to do with the fine showing of the second string backs, though they must be given full credit for splendid play.

Couldn't Halt 'Em.

Spectators were divided as to whether Captain Underwood of the Owls or "Heinie" Pfannkuche of the Steers showed to better advantage in the contest for all-conference center honors. Underwood showed to great advantage the first half, not only playing a stellar game on defense, but doing the punting and much of the passing. He wore himself out by his tremendous exertions, and was unable to answer the call for the second half. He went back into the fracas the fourth quarter, but his valiant efforts could not turn back the powerful onslaughts of the Longhorn forwards, who bore back their opponents almost at will.

The Farmers galloped at will through the Houston defense which had held the Rice Owls to a 7-0 margin. The hard charging forwards tore into shreds the fairly heavy Sam Houston Normal line, and the red and white backs sped long gains, almost every time they were called.

Bayer-A. and M.

Saturday, the Bible men will need all their drive and speed, for oh that day they will play the Baylor Bruins, who for the past three years have been proving a stumbling block for the Farmers.

Winning over the Aggies in 1922 and 1924, and holding them to a scoreless tie in 1923. If the Aggies can win Saturday, they should go into the turkey day test with a clean state.

The versatile attack of the Oklahoma Aggies proved too good for the T. C. U. Horned Toads. The victory must have been sweet indeed for Coach Johnny Maulbetsch, for last season the Horned Toads ruined championship hopes of a powerful Oklahoma Aggie team, that figured to go far in the Southwest conference race. The Aggies have withdrawn from the Southwest conference, but the defeat counted against T. C. U.'s conference record, nevertheless.

Baylor, 1924 Southwest conference champion, in winning over the Howard Payne Yellow Jackets, 1924 T. I. A. A. title winner, indicated it has at last found its stride. Winning of the conference title by the Bridgemen would not be considered a major upset by many enthusiasts, despite the fact that the Bears tied the Horned Toads, and fell before the Trinity Tigers.

Watch Bruins.

"Red" Jones, calling the signals for the first time, showed he knows something about grid stategy, while his defensive work was little short of marvelous. This Baylor star scored six of his team's points, kicking two field goals, one from the 40-yard line, and the other from the 32-yard marker, despite a muddy ball.

Benny Strickland also showed to advantage in the back field for the Bruins, while Riley, Harizog, and Captain "Bear" Walker were stars among the forwards.

McAlester, a veteran back, gained most yardage for Coach "Dad" Aims' Yellow Jackets.

By winning 9-3 from Austin college, Coach "Lefty" Edens' Southwestern Pirates indicated they will give the Trinity Tigers and Simmons College Cowboys plenty of competition for the championship of the T. I. A. A. Blackburn's splendid punting and the wonderful play of Carl Reynolds, one of the best tackles in the south, enabled the Pirates to win over Pete Cawthon's men.

Michigan and Iowa Big Ten Contenders

CHICAGO, Oct. 25.—(AP)—Michigan, its goal line uncrossed, is driving toward the championship of the western conference with Iowa snapping at its heels, threatening to wreck the situation any Saturday. Chicago and Minnesota are in the running, but all indications point to the Hawkeyes and Wolverines as the foremost contenders.

Michigan, Iowa and Chicago are undefeated in the title race, although Chicago has a tie against its record. Minnesota has not lost to a conference team, but its downfall before Notre Deme doe, not speak well for its chances in coming games with Iowa and Michigan. In fact, the Gophers may be chased out of the running by Wisconsin next Saturday.

Iowa's 15 to 0 victory over Ohio wrecked what ever title hopes the Buckeyes had, and placed the Hawkeyes seriously in the running. They will not meet Chicago or Michigan and have only to defeat Wisconsin and Minnesota to have a clean record in Big Ten competition.

The PASSING HOUR

~ by Wm. B. Ruggles ~

"Of all sad words of tongue or pen,
The saddest are, 'it might have been'."

So warbles Whittier, but John G.
Forgot some things we daily see:

After the fatal hand is played,
The loser's conversation's stayed.

Post-mortems bore the folks about—
Another hand is dealing out.

At bridge—the ball game—golf—the net—
The loser would be talking yet.

But he can find no listening ear,
The wherefore that he lost to hear.

The saddest thing in life, we squak—
They will not listen to us talk.

No chance to satisfy our yen
To tell just why "it might have been."

KNUTE ROCKNE is hard on the dope slingers. He tells the truth on his team.

IF KNUTE was a jockey, the wiseheimers would have it that he pulled his horse. D'jever stop to think that intercollegiate football is about the only sport left without much suspicion that they throw games?

Mr. Cawthon's Honor.

SHOULD the Southwestern conference title rest either in Austin or Dallas this year—and don't count anybody out because of one defeat—one T. I. A. A. coach will have his finger in the pie's baking. For neither Texas nor S. M. U. can come through without an important part of the winning depending upon young men who got their collegiate grid baptism under Pete Cawthon up at Austin college.

S. M. U. has Vaughn and Key. "Ox" Key was a star end at Sherman in 1922, Cawthon's first year there, transferred to S. M. U. in 1923 but could never make himself scholastically eligible last year. This season he has gotten the necessary class credits. Eventually he should play the football of which he is capable but admittedly has not been doing much so far. Vaughn, the other Kangaroo now at S. M. U., transferred last year. He is already repeating his T. I. A. A. record as one of the greatest linemen of the season.

Texas fell heir to Mack Saxon, the young man woh has proved the most amazing back in the conference this fall.

Austin college has been turning out fine football teams and star players ever since the old inhabitants can remember. It was here that Cecil Griggs, Friar Tuck, and Pep Brown began their sensational grid careers—and that was as far back as 1909.

THE historian of the future, says Mr. Brisbane, will look in newspaper files and read history, not imagination. What if he lights on the sport pages?

Concerning Hired Hands.

FLEM HALL, who had an experience last Saturday with an enthusiastic grid fan minus a sense of humor, philosophizes on the jest of the admirer who says his team cost $2,500 less than other conference entries.

Here is another story, vouched for by a faculty member of a conference college. He was watching his college team play a Missouri Valley squad a couple of years back.

"In front of me," he says, "were a prominent town business man and a stranger. Our team was not doing so well. The stranger was not pleased and commented upon the same.

"'Listen!' said the town business man, 'that team out there is a good football team. It is the highest paid team in the Southwestern conference'."

F'instance.

In old 2025, he'll search the files each day—
He'll note the forecast on the games,
the sport ed's daily bray,
And turn next day to find those games
did not turn out that way.

A Good Word for S. M. U.

LOGAN STOLLENWERCK, who quarterbacked S. M. U. through its three greatest football seasons, including the 1923 and 1924 campaigns when it went undefeated (not counting that post-season argument), is of the opinion that this year's Mustang team is the best the school has had.

"Stolly" not only regards the line as great but is of the opinion that Mann and Cortemeglia this year match the fine football play logically expected from Wade and Bishop, in the backfield. Visor does not seem to have come through.

This Mann, incidentally, is not the sensational stripling who starred at Forest high in Dallas. That Mann is on the squad but not the team.

Stollenwerck, not given to panegyrics, thinks Cortemeglia is a changed football player. The former S. M. U. captain says that the Wop has learned a lot about defensive play and is as hard hitting a power of offense as he was last year.

It is going to be interesting to watch Messrs. Cortemeglia, Pfannkuche and Saxon meet.

Ludgate Gives Burk Strong Grid Machine

Herby Ludgate, Burkburnett football mentor, has brought to the Oil City the best football eleven it has boasted in many years, and has hopes of making this club the district B champions. The Bulldogs will invade Seymour Wednesday afternoon to meet the club that recently played them a 0 to 0 tie.

After meeting Seymour the winner plays Graham, the last of the threatening clubs left in the race. If Burkburnett can defeat Seymour they hope to erase Graham from the running.

Burkburnett has been going at a fast clip all year and have showed that it will take a fast club to stop them. Blacky Warren, Mitchell Wolfe and Gene Buckner form a powerful trio in the backfield for the Bulldogs. They have a hard hitting line and one that is good on the defense.

Iowa State Tied With Missouri For Valley Leadership

KANSAS CITY, Oct. 25.—(AP)—Missouri and Iowa State will fight it out for the leadership for the Missouri valley conference next Saturday.

Tied at the top of the list each with two victories and no defeats, the two teams wil clash at Columbia, with Missouri fighting deeperately to retain the valley title.

QUINTET OF FOUR-ROUND TILTS BILLED

Elmer Lighter, But Faster Than in Last Battle With Duke

Duke Trammel, Fort Worth welter, and Elmer McMullen, Dodge City, Kan., are all set for their ten-round clash tonight at the Majestic Theater on the American Legion mitt program, according to Matchmaker Don Wofford Sunday evening.

Both boys are said to be in the best of condition. McMullen is a bit lighter than he was on his last appearance in a Wichita Falls ring several months back when he dropped a close decision to Trammel. He declares he's speedier. The Kansan believes fully that he will atone for that defeat, a decision which didn't sit very well with all of the fans.

Trammel appears to be in the greatest shape of his career. It is opinion he will beat McMullen, probably via the knockout route.

Wofford has lined up a string of four-rounders to precede the McMullen-Trammel mill.

Young Murdock of Sulphur meets Redcap Martin, Wichita Falls bantam, in the feature four-round bout.

Buckshot Peoples, Wichita Falls welter, scraps Johnny Walker, also of Wichita Falls.

There is to be a four-round curtain raiser, says the matchmaker.

'Bama and Virginia Top Southern Grid

NEW ORLEANS, Oct. 25.—(AP)—Alabama and Virginia are tied in the standing of the Southern conference with three victories each. The Crimson, however, has a more impressive record thus far than the Cavaliers. Alabama's statement of assets is larger than that of the old dominion team and the champions have no liabilities with three games behind them. Alabama has scored 76 points and has not been scored on by an opponent. Virginia has counted 31 and has been nicked for 16 points by the opposition. Alabama has defeated Louisiana State, Sewanee and Georgia Tech. Virginia has won from Georgia, V. M. I. and Maryland.

Both leaders were forced to extend themselves to win by a single touchdown Saturday, Alabama stopping Tech 7 to 0, while Virginia scored a 6 to 0 victory over Maryland.

COYOTE PUPS IMPROVE WITH SPEED AS THEY PRIME FOR TILT AT IOWA PARK FRIDAY

The Coyote Pups will enter on their last week of practice today before their big yearly game with R. E. Brewster's Iowa Park Hawks. The Hawks are doped to win, but a continual improvement in the Pups has been noticed, and if the eleven can stay at this gait through this week of practice it should be able to give the Hawks a fight Friday.

The man who will be watched in the practice is Clyde Fly, the Tennessee school boy, and the one who Coach Montgomery hopes to develop into a triple threat man. Fly is a nice ball carrier, passer and punter. His booting has been the feature of the Pups' play all year.

Montgomery is working hard to form a line that will not only hold back the other club, but will tear openings for the backs to go through. The line is light and green, but has plenty of fight and is willing to learn.

"Fat" Tandy and Bill Stevens are both expected back in practice today.

Pete Powell, guard, and Bill Mix, tackle, are being watched by the fans, and much is expected of this pair when the club gets going on the right trail. Bains and Berry have been showing well in the line at tackles position.

Montgomery has his strongest position at end. Leroy and Floyd Herndon, Haskell Giles and Bill Stevens are all hard working wingmen. Babe Anderson, former quarterback, has been shifted to wing position and is making great progress in this role.

In the keystone position of the forward defense Montgomery has Red Nichols. Nichols is a smooth working youngster who has proved a bullwark in the line all season.

In the backfield Montgomery has several able performers who thus far have been held back somewhat by the light line. But with the improvement in the forward wall these backs have been making better gains.

Captain "Hunky" Farris is fast as well as husky. The Pups' leader has been able to gain all year where the others have failed. Roy Brackett is another hard hitting back who has been rattling off his full share of the advances. Dale Carter was held back by low grades at the first of the year but since making them up has been back as strong as he was last year.

"Shoestring" Dulaney, working at quarterback, has done very little ball carrying through the line of scrimmage, but on returning punts he has shown well. His main play, however, is his defensive work as safety man.

HOLLIDAY IS SEEKING HIGH SCHOOL RATING

Will Seek Classification and Affiliation This Year

HOLLIDAY, Oct. 25.—Classification according to state requirements as a second grade high school and affiliation with the university is the goal of Holliday high school this year, according to Superintendent B. L. Bradford, serving his first year in Holliday. All requirements as to equipment and size of classes have been met, according to superintendent Bradford and little difficulty is expected in obtaining classification although affiliation is going to come a little harder.

Enrollment of 223.

The Holliday public schools this year have an enrollment of about 223 of which 26 are in the high school and five in the senior class. But ten grades are taught. A new eight-room brick building was constructed for the use of the schools in 1924 at a cost of about $15,00 and in the last few months an additional $1,500 has been spent on laboratory equipment and library additions.

The faculty of the Holliday publicv schools contains nine members, B. L. Bradford, superintendent, A. F. Ligon, principal, Eva Jones, English, D. L. Ligon, Spanish, and Esther Miles, Loraine Russell, Mrs. B. L. Bradford, Miss Clo Ramsey and Miss Hazel Speer.

Holliday high school has made no attempt this year to put out a high school football team but already has its basket ball squads out and working and is scheduled for a game with Iowa Park. D. L. Ligon coaches the boys' team.

Grow in Three Years.

The Holliday schools have shown a considerable growth over the period of the last three years, there being but three teachers employed in 1922, as against nine and new equipment and new building now.

Under the supervision of the Holliday schools there is also a school on the Phillips Petroleum company's lease north of Archer City with an enrollment of about 55. Primary and intermediate grades are taught. The work there is in charge of F. G. Goassage.

HOSPITAL

negroes were reported killed and several persons injured.

In the Oak Grove neighborhood Noah Griffin's home was destroyed and Mr. Griffin, his wife and one child seriously injured. Two children escaped unhurt.

At Orian on the Montgomery-Troy road the home and store of Walter Kelly was demolished. Mr. Kelly and his family all escaped injury while a brother was slightly hurt.

Trail of Wreckage.

In the path of the storm which came up from the west and passed out toward the northeast, a trail of wreckage was left, homes demolished, barns blown down, cattle and other livestock wandering aimlessly about, household goods strewn along the highways and through the fields and timber laid low and farm crops ruined.

In one neighborhood, Good Hope, five people were killed and one whole family of nine almost wiped out. Fifteen houses were destroyed. Noah Griffin, one of the seriously injured, was hit on the head by a heavy piece of timber which was blown through the window of his home just before the tornado picked up the house and scattered it to pieces.

The residents near the path of the storm were aroused by the terrific wind and the cries of the injured, and worked in a heavy downpour of rain and vivid clashes of lightning for hours rendering aid to the stricken and searching for the missing. The dead and injured were scattered along the roads, in the fields and around the demolished homes.

Aid to Injured

An emergency call was sent to Troy for aid and the ambulance was sent to bring the injured to the Masonic hospital for attention. The Carroll Mercantile company ambulance was pressed into service and assisted bringing the injured to the hospital. Doctors of Troy are using every means of relieving the suffering and a committee headed by Dr. McKinnon is raising funds to relieve immediate distress of the needy.

According to reports reaching Troy, much damage was done at Brantley, Glenwood and Goshen. Reports from these places are meager, but no loss of life is reported from either place. The tornado followed intense heat and threatening weather Saturday night and was accompanied by a severe electrical storm.

For the purpose of taking care of immediate needs, a mass meeting was called this afternoon in the Methodist church by Mayor John G. Gamble. About five hundred attended the meeting and $2,000 raised.

WEEKLY BOND REVIEW

NEW YORK, Oct. 25.—(AP).—A firm undertone prevailed in last week's bond market, which was featured by a moderate expansion in the volume of business. Firmer time money rates restricted investment buying but a revival of speculative operations enlivened dealings in many sections o fthe list.

Most of the trading activity centered in foreign obligations, which were responsive to both favorable and adverse developments. After the first wave of buying, influenced by the satisfactory outcome of the Locarno conference had subsided Wall street turned its attention to specific news coming from the various European countries, with highly conflicting price movements resulting.

A reaction in French bonds, coincident with a fall in the franc to the lowest level of the year, developed as the French cabinet found itself facing another crisis over the unsettled financial and debt funding situations.

The debt situation appeared to be more muddled than ever. Opposition to the provisional plan carried back by Finance Minister Caillaux indicated that negotiations would have to be reopened here or France would be completely deprived of the private financial support upon which it has always relied. Leading New York bankers intimated that no further loans would be granted to France until a definite debt settlement was reached.

The strength of German bonds provided a striking contrast to the heaviness of the French issues. All developments pertaining to Germany were favorable from an investment standpoint, including prospects that the present visit of the head of the reichs bank would stimulate the flow of American capital into productive German industries. Within the next few months, it is believed, that approximately $200,000,000 will be borrowed here for that purpose.

Modification of the Mexican debt agreement, providing for the resumption of payments on Mexico's $500,000,000 external debt in 1926, was one of the most constructive developments of the week. Interest payment of $37,500,000 which have been in arrears for the past two years, will be funded over an eight-year period beginning in 1928. The revision of the debt pact was accompanied by a brisk rally in Mexican bonds.

The outlook for further tax reduction at the coming session of congress attracted increasing attention in bond circles. Some of the liquidation of liberty bonds was attributed to agitation to stop the issuance of tax free securities, which would deprive these obligations of one of their most attractive features. Proposed changes in the maximum surtax, it was held, also would influence investors to look with greater favor upon corporation issues.

COTTON REVIEW

NEW ORLEANS, Oct. 25.—(AP).—During the past week the cotton market was more or less under the shadow of the next government report due at 10 o'clock Monday morning. Fear that the estimate would indicate a production of more than fifteen million bales restricted loading and brought the price levels back almost to the low level reached immediately after the last report, when a yield of 14,759,000 bales was predicted.

This responsible for the small influence on prices, of the killing frost in the northern part of the belt at the beginning of the week. Prices were somewhat supported by trade buying on the scale down as well as by widening of the discount on the lower grades under the higher, but neither could prevent a gradual shrinkage of prices to the low level reached Friday.

Some private estimates during the week showed smaller figures than the last estimate of the government but these were not convincing. The average of the 10 private estimates issued in advance of the government report for the half 10,690,000 bales, while the average estimate of members of the New York cotton exchange is 14,770,000 bales.

'LORD' ONLY A SWINDLER, SAYS WOMAN

Arden Lover Married, Telling Bride of Regal Blood

WASHINGTON, Oct. 25.—(AP)—The wealthy Washington woman who yesterday turned over to the police jewelry and wearing apparel valued at $43,500 and which were immediately identified by Mrs. Rose Berken of New York as having been stolen from her by a man now under arrest in St. Louis under the name of John W. Weidemeire, has disclosed her identity as Mrs. irginia M. Beaverbrook.

Mrs. Beaverbrook identified Weidemeire as the man she married as "Lord Beaverbrook" in Rockville, near here, last June. She turned over the articles to the police through her attorney. They were gifts from Weidemeire, she said.

Mrs. Beaverbrook, who prefers to be called Mrs. Martin, has resided in Washington for five years, since she came here from Canton, Miss. When the man, whom she described as an ardent lover and of pronounced intellectual attainments, left her several months ago she said he took $40,000 of he rcash which she has not seen since.

TRICKED SIX WOMEN.

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 25.—(AP)—Accused of tricking or swindling six women whom he met under various aliases, John V. Weidemeire failed to appear in court of criminal correction here today to answer charges in connection with the Chicago inquiry into his career. His $5,000 bond was ordered forfeited.

WEEKLY BUSINESS REVIEW.

NEW YORK, Oct. 25.—(AP)—Evidence accumulated last week that operatitons were slowly but definitely being speeded up in all important productive and distributive lines of industry foreshadowing a greater volume of business lasting through the remainder of the year and well into 1926.

The note of cheerfulness was nowhere more pronounced than in the steel trade, where the week's developments were especially favorable. Most of independent companies reported earnings for the third quarter which were considered more than satisfactory in view of the curtailment of operations during the summer months. Mill activities were reported to be on the increase with prices following an upward trend.

Leaders in the industry, gathering for the semi-annual meeting of the American Iron & Steel institute, were told by E. H. Gary, head of the U. S. Steel corporation, that the country is on the eve of another period of great prosperity and that by next spring the steel manufacturers would be forced to turn away business. Present operations, he said, are averaging between 80 and 85 per cent of the industry's capacity, which incidentally has more than doubled in the last ten or fifteen years. Other steel executives were unanimous in predicting an average winter in the industry.

Banking opinion at the same time was encouraging, the latest surveys of the business situation by large New York institutions reflecting a spirit of optimism unequalled since early in the year.

The aggregate volume of banking accommodation outstanding has now reached levels not heretofore approached, the national bank of commerce reported, and this has occurred with a very limited use of the reserve banks and with no strain whatever on money rates. This expansion the bank found, had not served as a basis for inflation of commerce and industry. One of the earliest indicatitons of inflationary tendencies, it was pointed out, lies in increased forward buying and it s well known that the policy of "hand to mouth" buying has been one of the most striking features of the business situation.

Excellent conditions in retail trade throughout the nation, steady and rapid movement of most crops from primary points to central markets, less hesitancy in jobbing and wholesale lines, generally well sustained commodity prices, easy credit conditions, fewer failures, a somewhat larger volume of employment conditions, fewer failures, a somewhat larger volume of employment," said the Irving Bank-Columbia Trust company, "are conditions which go far to substantiate the sustained cheerfulness of speculative opinions."

The flow of gold to this country has again reached such impressive proportions that a continued ease of money conditions seemed assured—a factor which should have a constructive influence of business expansion and the maintenance of high security prices.

SEEK CUT IN BAIL.

Fort Sam Houston Soldier and Gillespie Man Make Appeal.

AUSTIN, Texas, Oct. 25.—(AP)—Neal Anglin, Fort Sam Houston soldier, and Manuel Castillo of Gillespie county, have made application for reduction of bail in the court of criminal appeals. Submission was set for October 28. Anglin, held for theft of an automobile under $1,500 bond claims he can make a $500 bond but is unable to make $1,500, as does Castillo, held on a liquor charge, pending trial in the district court at Fredericksburg.

Add Webster's To Libraries At Court House Here

Webster's unabridge has been added as a necessary adjunct to local law libraries.

A jury in the seventy-eighth district court was wrestling with weighty questions and pondering over a charge delivered by the court and which had its full share of legal phraseology.

Loud and argumentitive voices came from the jury room and finally a knock sounded on the inner side of the door.

The bailiff opened it and the 12 men filed into their box.

"Your Honor," they told Judge Guy Rogers, "we'd like to have a dictionary if we may."

The judge hurriedly ransacked his shelves, found a big edition of Websters and took it in to them.

The noisy arguing straightway ceased, but at a late hour last night the jury was still deliberating.

DUNDEE SCHOOL COMING RIGHT UP THE GRADE

Attempt Being Made This Year to Secure Classification

DUNDEE, Oct. 26.—Dundee high school should end the current school year classified by the state as a second grade high school, according to G. C. Haralson, superintendent of schools here. Accredited affiliation with the university in one or more subjects taught in the school here can not be obtained until after classification has been reached.

There are sixty enrolled in the Dundee public schools this year, according to Haralson, with fifteen in the high school and four in the senior class. The schools offer ten grades. There are three teachers, G. C. Haralson, a Baylor university man, Miss Hattie Warren of Denton, a Denton Normal product and Miss Ruth Gley of Iowa Park.

Although Dundee high is making no attempt to put out a football team considerable attention is being paid to this year's basketball squads, both boys and girls, and there are prospects for good teams. Miss Gley will have charge of the basketball for the girls and Mr. Haralson for the boys.

Dundee has a well equipped school building set on top of a hill overlooking the town. It is of stone construction and dates back to 1909.

YOU CAN'T OVERWORK YOUR MIND

Sir Arthur Keith, great scientist, put his foot through another popular and absurd supersition, in a speech at Oxford university, in England, the other day.

There is no such thing as a mental breakdown caused by brain overwork, he declared.

Resorting to an American nicety of speech, he said, "Overstndy? It's the bunk."

The ordinary man could use his brain ten times as much, without danger of injuring it.

There is a hundred times as much danger of using the brain too little, as too much.

"Intellectual force," said William Ellery Channing, "is a principal element of the soul's life, and should be proposed by every man as a principal end of his being."

Thought, THOUGHT, is the fundamental distinction of mind, and the great work of life.

All that a man does outwardly is but the expression and completion of his inward thought.

No man can be greater than his thoughts.

Thought, intelligence, is the dignity of man, and no man is rising but in proportion as he is learning to think CLEARLY and FORCIBLY.

Uncommon Sense

It does not cost much to get a bad habit.

But maintenance is what counts.

I am not speaking of the so-called vices, like drinking and smoking.

People who overdo these have to consult their doctor sooner or later.

Their effects are physical, and when a man gets in bad health a doctor can scare him into moderation.

But there are many habits which are very expensive.

Some of them cost the self satisfaction that comes from making one's way in the world.

Some of the cost really great achievement.

If the dilatory man, who has one of the worst habits—procrastination, could figure at the end of the year what it had actually cost him he would be dismayed.

If the average lazy man could know how expensive had been his laziness, he would perhaps take a little pains to get rid of it the next year.

If the man who falls into the habit of being crabbed and illnatured could see how many friends, how many opportunities and with them how much money he had lost through that habit, he would probably begin reading the sunshine books, and buy copies of the songs that tell you to Smile All the while.

And bad habits run into money, and none of them are worth it.

But we never know how much they really cost us, and consequently we go on thinking little about them, and permitting them to get "set" and to grow all the time.

I know of a man who went to a distant city to place an important contract with a factory which was just establishing a name for good work.

When he got there the manager was out of town, and his assistant, who felt that he needed a day off, had run over to a neighboring town to play a little golf.

There was no one in the office to make an estimate.

The man with the contract, disgusted, got the work done elsewhere.

That habit of idleness cost the assistant manager his job. And he never got another as good, for the factory soon became very prosperous, and the manager became its president.

His assistant would have taken his place, but for that one unnecessary day off taken out of his employer's time.

Cases of this kind are frequent in business, as every business man knows.

They are more frequent among employes, particularly among those who put off work they ought to do until it is too late to do it well.

Every man would be far better than he is, far abler and far more prosperous were it not for his bad habits.

Fortunately these can be got rid of, and replaced with good ones, even compartitively late in life.

And they must be got rid of if their possessors expect to attain any degree of success in the world.

For there are thousands of trained young men going into business all the time, and among them there are a few hundreds who will not be procrastinators or idlers but who will figure the upkeep of these habits and decide to do without them.

They will get the big pay, and hold the big positions.

Hugh Nugent Fiizgerald

Mr. Fitzgerald is writing a series of articles for The Record News on Port Arthur, Texas, popularly known as the place toward which all the oil flows.

By HUGE NUGENT FITZGERALD
Record News Staff

PORT, ARTHUR, Oct. 25.—Manufacturing cities are the wealth making cities of the world. Tide water cities, or the sea ports of the seven seas, are the cities which send the manufactured products to all parts of the globe and place them on the bargain counters of all the people of the universe. Port Arthur is the great petroleum refining and exporting city of the republic, but Port Arthur has commercial and economical advantages which should attract the attention of the textile manufacturers of the world.

Fitzgerald

Port Arthur is close to the timbered wealth of this country. Port Arthur has the fuel and the power which is necessary to operate the mills and the factories of the present. Port Arthur is close to the great sugar cane producing belts of Louisiana. Port Arthur is in touch with the great cotton producing fields of the south. Port Arthur has all the advantages of water rates, cheap fuel, an adequate and never failing supply of pure water and is able at all times to draw upon reservoirs of labor which is native and intelligent and adaptable to all kinds of factory work.

Texas is facing the dawn of a great awakening. Texas has been furnishing the mills of New England and old England with cotton and wool for many decades. Now the cotton mill is coming to the section where the cotton blossom blooms and the cotton stalk grows. This is no flight of imagination and old England knows it. Why shouldn't Port Arthur become one of the great textile manufacturing centers of America as the city has become one of the foremost manufacture of all the products of petroleum.

There is timbered wealth everywhere, almost in speaking distance of the city. There is an unrivaled supply of all the raw materials which are so necessary for the needs of mankind. Prosperity reigns in the Port Arthur country this year. Lumber men are coming into their own. Sugar planters are coming into their own. Rice planters are coming into their own. According to recent advices from Japan, the rice crop of that country is a million tons short this year. This may be sad news for the Japs but it will not cause the Jefferson county rice growers to shed many tears.

Speaking of rice, a great asset, if not the chief asset, of the people of Jefferson and adjacent territory, is the fertile soil and the possibilities of agricultural wealth as well as the wealth which comes from the cultivation of the fig and other fruits which tickle the palate of man. There are thusands of acres of land which with the proper drainage would be as productive as the valley of the Nile and yield large returns to the farmer, the orchardist and the berry grower.

There are facts which are well known to those who realize that scientific farming and fruit growing would return large dividends to those who know how to tickle the soil and make large returns as rewards for the labor of man. It is a well known fact that the soil of Jefferson county, removed from the salt marshes, quickly responds to the magic touch of the plow or the hoe. It is a well known fact that cotton and corn and all the vegetables of the temperate zone can or could be produced in great abundance. It is a well known fact that for years and years large tracts of this valuable land has been used as the grazing ground or pastures for the herds of the wealthy ranch or plantation owners of this section of Texas.

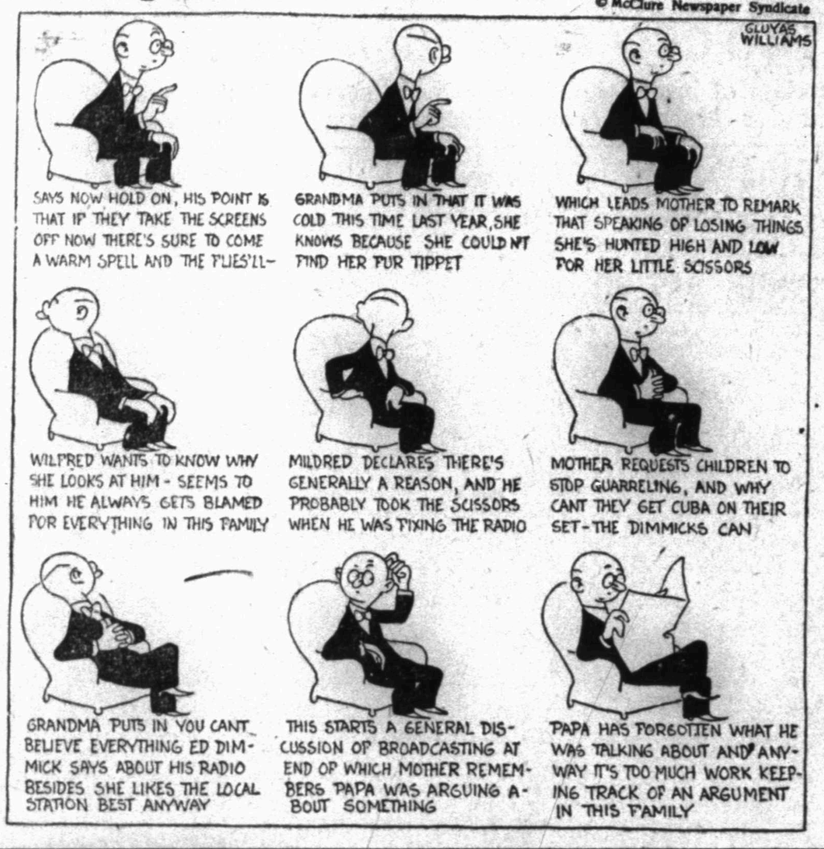

There appears to be no great ambition on the part of the proud Caucasian to till the soil or add to the wealth of the nation by the constant employment of the plow and the hoe. Tiling the soil does not appeal to him, but the day will come when truck farming and berry growing will be just as profitable in this section of Texas as it is in the magic valley or anywhere along the gulf of Mexico coast. A man does not have to be an inspired prophet to make this prediction. It is certain to come true in the not far distant future.

Rapid growth of cities opens local markets for the products of the soil which are raised for the table, and the cities in the entire gulf coast country are growing just as rapidly if not more so than they are in any other section of the state and the nation. Some day the intercoastal canal will be a reality. It will not be a dream of practical dreamers.

Some day the tide water cities will be the great manufacturing cities of America. Some day the ships that are now carrying petroleum products to the markets of the world will be carrying the output of textile mills and factories to all the buyers of earth. Never overlook the commercial and economic importance of this city which Arthur E. Stilwell and John W. Gates had two hands and two active brains in its early making.

WHAT TODAY MEANS TO YOU

By MARY BLAKE

Scorpio.

Today's planteary aspects are, during the morning and until noon quite propitious, and indicate that there will be a decided zest sensed in any work or task that may be undertaken. The signs denote, however, that there is a strong probability of over confidence attributal to the more than ordinarily stmulating vibrations that will prevail. This must be guarded against, as excessive assurance or exaggerated optimism is a danger nearly as great as undue pessimism or lack of self-reliability. Later on the aspects become gloomy and forbidding. Reactionary sentiment will rule and a tendency to become dissatisfied with conditions will be evidenced. This transitory influence must be combatted and poise established. In the home especially there will be felt an urge to go off at a tangent. Peace and consideration for others demand that your impulses must be curbed.

Children born today will not during Infancy develop strength and vigor which is desired. In order to assist them to achieve a normally physical maturity, great care must be taken and well regulated nutrition given them, during the entire period prior to adolescence. Temperamentally, they will be more gushing than sincere. They will be self-seekers, but still will have consideration for the feelings and desires of others. It is quite within the realm of probability that they will attain material success. Their friends will resepct and admire them.

If today is your birthday you are open-handed, big-hearted and generous to a fault. Where a friend's interests are concerned, you never give a thought to your own. Incapable of deceit or unfaithfulness, you never suspect it in others. Your ability is marked. Your industry unquestioned. You are very companionable, have a keen sense of humor and can always appreciate a good joke even if it be on yourself.

Your success in business is dubious and if you are engaged in any occupation of a sedentary nature, your whole nature unconsicously rebels at the confinement involved and yearns for the "Great Out of Doors."

In your home life you are radiantly happy and try to make others happy with you. Disappointments can not clog your spirits and misfortune is always met with a smile.

SUB ROSA BY MIMI

A Male Protest.

E. K. writes in part: "I agree with the recent article you wrote about breaking off a love affair when it has become tiresome wherein you tell members of the fair sex how to end things with their sheiks when the latter have become boring. I agree that the best and quickest way is to write a short note. But look at it from our angle, when we want to break things off we encounter tears, hysterics and dire threats of self-destruction. Does the girl have to go through all this when she wants to give a fellow the air? No! He gets himself another girl and it's all in the day's work with him. Why not give us men a little dope on how to give a burnt out flame the gate, gracefully and without the theatricals usually attending this performance? E. K.

In the first place, E. K. there is no such tning as a clean break. One party or another always provides the tears and hysterics.

There isn't any known recipe for avoiding this sort of thing when it comes time to break things off.

But don't for a moment believe that the girls are the only ones who delight in great emotional scenes.

Any girl who has tried to ease out quietly with a brief friendly note can tell you just how difficult it is.

She sends her short apology, hoping that the recipient will have the good sense to take the hint and depart forever.

Five minutes after the "turned-down" suitor gets his dismissal, he is on the phone talking eternly to his faithless sweetheart: "Oh look here, Jean, you can't really mean that. You're just nervous and tired and don't know what you're saying. I know what it is—you're sore because I flirted witn Peggy the other night. Well, honestly she doesn't mean a thing to me," etc. etc.

As soon as his business hours permit he tears down to the poor girl's home to straighten things up. He believes that a few comforting words will put everything right.

He nearly wears her nerves out talking—talking to her, to her family, to her friends—to everyone who will listen and finally after five weeks of arguing, he demands incredulously: "Do you mean to say you don't want to see me any more?"

Oh no, you can't get away with tne statement that girls have no trouble in ending everything.

It is true that the fair sex does a good deal of emoting when the erstwhile suitor shows a desire to fade away. But the determined male is just as much of a nuisance when he finds himself minus a sweetheart.

The best way to end things as I've said before is by means of a short note—and then after you've sent it the only thing to do is to sit tight and pray that tne jilted party will have the good sense to know when she or he is beaten.

HOW IT STARTED

THE "PILLORY" OF SHAME

"In my town they'd pillory you for that"—this and a similar reference to being "pilloried" as a figurative mode of punishment are quite common in modern speech. We are all familiar with the expression "the pillory of shame."

The reference is to a method of punishment much in vogue with the early English colonists. Its history can be traced back as far as the Twelfth century when it was a familiar adjunct of the public square and the market place in England and on the Continent. It was with the colonists from these parts that it found its way to our shores and by our Puritan forefathers who looked upon punishment as the only deterrent to crime, that it was given its familiar place in the history of New England.

Consisting of an upright board against which the culprit had to stand, with a hole in which the head was locked and held fast and two openings, usually, for the hands, the pillory was considered the "essence" of punishment, for it subjected the offender to the worst form of humiliation, public ridicule. In the words of a contemporary, it prevented its victim "even hiding his head from shame." And so when people speak today of someone being "pilloried," it is this element of shame of public humiliation preserved in the term, that is intended to be conveyed.

SYNOPSIS

Connemara Moore, disguised as a nun, had slipped out of Aunt Celimena's house in Connecticut, hailed David Lacy as he was driving past, and, strangers though they were, climbed in the car with him. Now these two are crossing Long Island Sound on a ferry. A big, burly stranger has just approached them and announced, "I'm Pooch." Back home is a worried company. Connie was to announce her engagement tonight—to Bing Carrington or Salt Adams—but she didn't.

Until tonight he had considered these as adventures. Now he realized that they were not adventures but incidents—unicellular episodes after which one was assured of a warm bath and clean clothes.

Here, however, was a situation which began nowhere and ended in approximately the same position. Indeed, instead of ending, it seemed to accumulate bulk and impetus as a rolling stone dislodged from a Swiss mountainside will multiply in its course, thundering through great forests and erasing villages until, having changed the topography of a country, it ceases as unexpectedly as it began. Yes, this was his first adventure.

Another difference between this and any previous experience was that heretofore he had always played the principal role. Tonight his function appeared to be merely that of stage manager. As long as he furnished transportation to the troupe he was allowed to tag along, but no one thought of consulting his desires in the development of the plot. As a matter of fact, he did not know yet how many persons there were in the cast. The thought pleased him. He would carry on and, if the cast grew too large, he would abandon the Isotta and hire a sightseeing bus somewhere.

"Why th' mask? I hardly knowed you at foist."

A voice in his ear returned him to the Greenwich ferry. "Didje come right up from the works?"

"As fast as I could get here."

"Y' had us guessin'. We thought you might come on the other ferry. Some o' Swede's gang is up there watchin' of y'. If they missed you they was to beat it on back to the boat an' have her ready fer us, so it's all right either way."

Connemara started. Since Pooch's appearance she had been groping blindly, frantically for some logical explanation to illogical events. Never for one moment, however, had she doubted the frank good looking man beside her with whom she had spent a lifetime in less than two hours. She would as soon have suspected Aunt Celimena of being a professional second-story worker. The finding of the papers in the car and the artistic identification of Mr. Pooch had been the work of some unseen force over which neither she nor her travelling companion had control.

Now for the first time a little devil of doubt hopped over the hood of the car and sat grinning at her through the windshield. Could it be that the "we-ness" of things was not so firmly established as she had supposed. A dawning consciousness that it might be rash to hop into the cars of strange men in the middle of night sent its chill down her back.

There was a movement in the back seat, and Mr. Pooch's phosphorescent countenance glowed between them like a Chinese lantern.

"S-a-a-y, sister, I get y' now. That's good, that is! I ben tryin' t' get y' since I hopped in. I got y' now, though. I was only expectin' one, an' it trun me off a mile when I seen two on y', as th' fella says when he got th' D. T.'s. S-a-a-y, you're good, you are. I seen everythin' pulled, I guess, but I ain't never seen th' nun gag worked before. Say, this business ain't no profession no more. It's an art. But looka, Sister. Why th' mask? I hardly knowed you at foist. What's all the Ku Klux over y'r best friend? There ain't no nuns in Toikey."

Then spoke Sister Connemara words soft and assured which exploded in Lacy's ears like a giant cracker, "I put it on, Pooch, 'cause I thought I saw somebody I knew."

Great Heavens, was this girl connected in some way with that caricature of a hairless Mexican on the back seat? Or was he possibly going crazy? Had he hit a telegraph pole after leaving Stamford, and was he now lying broken in some ditch while his brain danced a crazy reel with death? That sounded like a movie title. Had someone slipped him a drink of bad Scotch?

Pooch glanced through the back window of the car. "So-o-o." He snapped his fingers in thoughtful imitation of castanets. "Guess we might's well give this ol' seagoin' hack the once-over before we beach. Good now's never." He climbed out and disappeared around the back of the car.

A blanket of silence fell over the front seat. The lights of Bayville were pricked out of the blackness ahead. In another ten minutes they would be committed to the hands of an unknown destiny, who might turn out to be a policeman. Lacy's heart was heavy with suspicion and disillusionment, but his old passion for adventure, handed down through the generations from some gentleman buccaneer in the queen's service, was flaming high. Without knowing where the dawn might find him, he cared less. Only one thing was clear and definite in the midst of all this uncertainty. He would look upon the face of this woman who dressed like a nun, spoke like an angel, scented herself like an April flower, and associated with the flotsam of dime museums.

Connemara on her side of the front seat was having her own troubles. Unwelcome, but ever-growing, distrust formed the motif, and a rapidly increasing panic played hide and seek around and through it. One good scream would break the spell and bring her back to the world of ordinary people who spoke and acted in expected ways. She opened her mouth and took a deep breath in preparation for a drum-rocking yell. Then she saw the headlines in the morning papers: "Popular debutante denounces joy riders. Season's bud disguised as nun declares companions thugs on Greenwich ferry."

No, no! That was too grotesque. She closed her mouth and let out her breath.

The motor of the truck ahead backfired several times, filling the passage with a cloud of evil-smelling smoke. Chains clanked in the bow.

"There's a Pierce on the other side," observed Mr. Pooch, climbin. "We'll be off foist, though. Rather have 'em behind us. If they folly along, I guess this baby c'n dust 'em." Wherewith he struck a match with his thumb, set fire to the exploded cigar, and proceeded to offer his contribution to the general atmosphere of carbon monoxide.

The cars were moving off. "Stick close behind that bambino," Pooch waved his incense burner at the truck ahead. "Our feller's waiting at the end of the dock. You're t' folly him along behind."

They were creeping off the boat, the powerful motor whirring with eagerness for the open road. Out of the darkness at the end of the short dock their headlights picked up the nose of a green Packard touring car. Pooch sprang from the back seat, ran ahead of the lumbering truck, and spoke to the driver of the green car. It pushed forward into the line, and Pooch stepped upon the running board of Lacy's car as it passed.

"Get 'round th' damn' ol' ark in front an' behind them guys I spoke to. They'll take us over th' quickest way. Step on her. Keep right on their tail." He stood up and surveyed the cars behind, then satisfied with the inspection, settled into the corner of the rear seat and set about relighting his faithful companion.

More Truth Than Poetry

BOX FIGHTING

Perhaps we are shy of the instinct
That's the mark of the genuine sport,
But never we find that we much are inclined
To the sawdusted square to resort,
We now and then glance at the columns
In which champs of the future are picked,
But while scanning the dope we indulge in the hope
That both the contestants get licked.

We cannot get wildly excited
When we think of the fistic career
Of a man with a nose deeply dented with blows,
Which have also impinged on his ear,
He may be quite nice to his mother
He may be a sweet gentle soul,
But we hope, in each bout, he is handed a clout
Which will knock him at least for a goal.

Our desk-mates continually chatter
Of the chances of this chap or that—
With a wallop or swing which, when used in the ring,
Will batter the other man flat.
We try to take sides in the matter,
But we never can get the right slant,
We try to chip in and say "Mike oughta win,
We think he's a bear!" but we can't.

We may do these persons injustice,
There must be some thrill in a game,
Which will make a great crowd shout their plaudits aloud
And welcome each blow with acclaim.
We are not a prude or a dead-one,
We are not especially strict,
But our only delight in this kind of a fight
Would be when both parties got licked.

Through a Woman's Eyes

"MERRY WIDDOW."

A man dying recently, left in his will the stipulation that his widow is to lose her home if she is seen in the company of other men. This is what he said:

"That if my wife after my death remarries, or is seen in the company of men other than members of my family or hers, she shall lose all title to the aforementioned house."

In that event, he subsequently provided the property is to revert to the couple's nine children.

We need be told nothing more about this man to imagine his character, to know with reasonable certainty what kind of a husband he was and the life this woman must have led with him who, after bringing up nine children, is left her home only with the provision that she be not seen in the company of a man!

Can't you picture him, in the early years, sitting someone to spy on his wife, while he was away during the day, to be sure that in her leisure hours after the nine children were washed, dressed, fed and sent to school, the house cleaned, the marketing, cooking and mending done, and before the nine children returned with their few trifling demands on their mother's time—that in those hours of dangeroun leisuse she did not get into mischief and besmirch his name!

Can you imagine tolerance, broadness, kindliness, fairness, on the part of a man who from his grave would insult his wife and forbid the woman who has worked by his side and mothered his nine children to be seen in the company of a man? Or do you smart with the consciousness of what her life must have been?

One can hardly resist the comment that after her experience she would probably have no desire ever to know another man. However, some people are great in taking punishment; and if the contrary should be true, if the children, who were doubtless her reason for a life of such submission being grown, there is still alive the throb to break the shackles—all womanhood would rejoice to see her cheat that grave of its tyranny and say, "Take your house!" For once the world would understand and condone the expression 'merry widow.'

THIMBLE THEATRE BY SEGAR

KAY ADVISES ABOUT MONEY AND RELIGION

"Love of Money Is the Root of Evil," Says Judge

"Whenever religion gets in the way of your money-making, why, the money that you are making is not good money," Judge John C. Kay told his Sunday school class at the Strand theatre Sunday morning when he talked on the golden text of the lesson, "The love of money is the root of all kinds of evils."

"I believe if you get too much money, you will lose out somewhere else, and that all things are evened up. That if you excel in one thing, you are weak in another thing. That's my doctrine."

His lecture to the class follows:

The lesson this morning is about some fellows that suffered a disaster. That is to say, religion got in the way of making some money. Whenever religion gets in the way of your money-making, why, the money that you are making is not good money.

These fellows lived at Ephesus, where they had a great temple to a heathen goddess and they were selling little images, and Paul preached there a long time and was about to break up their business. So, they went down to the temple, and had a big meeting, had a speech or two, and they had a great slogan: "Great is Diana of the Ephesians."

You know, there are a lot of these slogans that are frothy. The French people have been hollering for 120 years—"Liberty, Equality and Fraternity," and never for a minute, yet, have they had either one of the three. A great many times, there is not much in a slogan. I mean by that, there is not much in some of my slogans, and some of yours. We are all that way. Our slogan is generally a thing that flows a profit to us, or we think it does.

And, the lawyers, like myself, they like to blow about the law. It hasn't been anything to brag about, within the last few years. And, the preachers like to praise the kind of religion that we profess and practice in this country, but most anybody could see where it might have important amendments.

You can't live on a slogan: A political party cant', except, perhaps, for a temporary success; nor any line of business; nor any walk of life.

These fellows over there in Ephesus had the world coming to see them, coming in ships, riding camels across the desert and, they said: "Great is Diana."

Now, Diana wasn't great. Of all the heathen philosophies and all the heathen religions, that of Diana was one of the poorest. So, when you say that "I am doing fine," "I am a good citizen"—in the old days when we used to have drunk men, did you ever notice that the drunk man had a slogan-? He always said, "I am a law-abiding citizen." Was Diana great? With all the elaborate temple, and the paintings, and the sculpture, with all the kneeling worshippers, and all the hosts that gathered about her, there was no good came of it. So, if you say you are a good citizen—what are you good for?

Notwithstanding the great worship of Diana, there was not, in that country, a schoolhouse, there was not a hospital, there was no care for the insane, there was not an almshouse for the beggar; and, when they said that "Diana is great," they had the practicing of infanticide. When they said that "Diana is great," they required the widow in Asia, upon the death of the husband, to be burned on a funeral pile. When they said that "Diana is great," there was nothing but ignorance and caste, and the doctrine that if a man was born to one kind of situation in life, he had to stay there for aye. Then it becomes true that Diana was not great.

Now, who was it thought she was great? Who was advertising? The fellow that was making money out of it. If ever I go out here to put over some great political program, or some great church program or whatever that I might undertake, I want to be sure that there is no penny of profit comes to me out of my propaganda. That sin of covetousness, that thing of wanting some money, is one of the most dangerous of all the passions of man. When you get to wanting money too bad, you become dangerous and ugly, and become a bad citizen. There was old Uncle Johnnie I said: "Uncle Johnnie, we haven't raised enough money for the preacher here. I want some more money out of you." "Why," he said, "I have given you twenty-five dollars, and I wish I had part of that back." And, if I had been able to do it, at that, I would have given it back to him.

So that they make the Golden Text here, that "The love of money is a root o fall kinds of evil.

You know, a bad man, an unbelieving college professor, a scientist, or just a common sinner, can't quote the scripture correctly. You read these big philosohers who write in the magazines, when they quote scripture, they mix it all up You see this fellow down on the sreet here, the unbeliever, whether he is ignorant or intelligent, he always quotes that "Money is the root of all evil." Paul didn't say that. He said that the love of it, the desire to get it and keep it.

Now, do you know, I believe that rich men are not illiberal, some of them. It isn't that. He would give away three-fourths of all he has got, if it wasn't for one thing. He just don't like to break the stock. "If I take this little bit off here, and this little bit off there, it won't grow like it was growing." Of course, a great many rich men are very liberal. A great many rich men are consecrated. I don't hold it a crime to be rich. I have felt like I wouldn't mind suffering with that affliction myself, on occasions. There is no virtue in being rich, and there is no virtue in being poor, either. A fellow came up to an old friend of mine and said: "I am awful poor." He said "Well, you have got a right to be poor." And you have. And, you have got a right to be rich, too, if it is a consecrated wealth that is obtained fairly and honestly.

I will tell you the kind of money that is dangerous. I am not talking to these heathens in Asia, either. I am talking to you. The kind of money that is dangerous, is when you get a little "rake-down," just a little bit on the side, that four or five of your associates don't know about. I don't suppose that has happened in Wichita Falls but I am just saying that in order that it may not happen. Just to warn you.

I sort of believe in the law of compensation that Emerson wrote about. I believe that if you get too much money, you will lose out somewhere else, and that all things are evened up. That if you excel in one thing, you are weak in another thing. That's my doctrine. I don't know whether it is true or not.

Now, when we say we are a great people in Wichita Falls—you know, that is all these people could say down there in Ephesus. They couldn't preach like Paul. They couldn't make an argument, but they just said: "Great is Diana," just get up and holler that for three hours Now, that won't do in Wichita Falls. It won't do for us to just get up here and say that Wichita Falls is a great city. It won't do for us to get up here and say that Wichita Falls has got a great people, because, some hard-headed fellow is going to come along and say: "What is it that makes your city great?" "What makes your people great" "Where is the fruit that grows on this tree that you have described" And, then, you can point out whatever of good there is among our people, and whatever is great among our institutions.

Now, I think our people have done well. We have done a great deal for the schools, a great deal for the churches, a great deal for the city. We have got a liberal people. Our people don't mind spending money. I don't think that covetousness is our worst sin. But the thing that will make Wichita Falls great is a consecrated people; a man whose word is good and whose word is clean.

Now, why am I saying that? It is because the hope of the city rests in our children, and in our children's children. That is the hope of our people. Then, are you the kind of a Wichita Falls citizen who can train up a little child in the way that it should go? I don't know whether I am. I am trying to do it. I have never said that I could do it. Are you the kind o fa Wichita Falls citizen that can get along with your wife, and your children, and your neighbors, and your friends? If Diana is great, in what are you great? In other words, what these Ephesians needed was to take stock of themselves; what they needed was to examine their great cry that "Diana is great" and to ask themselves the further question, "in what is Diana great?" And, if you say that "I am a good man," then ask yourself the further question, "In what am I a good man What have I done for my fellowmen, and for the city, for for religion, and for good citizenship, for good order for decency, and for sobriety, and right living" Somebody,—somebody in Wichita Falls has got to stand up for law, and order, and decency, or we are going to perish. Somebody has got to quit dreaming about money, and about the thriving of his business, and stop and say to the criminal that "This crime, and this wrong, in this city, has got to stop." Somebody has got to have enough manhood on the grand jury, and on the petit jury, and on the bench, to respect the law, and to compel other men to respect it. If we are all just going to get rich, and disregard citizenship, and disregard religion the end of our civilization is not far off.

You know, these jack snipes, and cranes, and bitterns are flying today over the swamps of the city of Ephesus, where Diana once reigned Ephesus is gone,—gone,—because Diana was not, in fact, great.

DOROTHY DIX ADVICE

When Both Husband and Wife Are Wage-Earners Both Should Contribute Toward Home Expenses in Proportion to Their Earnings, but Each Should Have a Separate and Personal Bank Account

Undoubtedly, matrimony has many more complications in these parlous, equal-rights-of-the-sexes times than in the obsolete old days when a wife was a chattel who stayed put wherever her husband set her down.

And among the greatest of these complications is the problem of how the woman who continues to work after she is married and her husband should adjust their finances and their individual rights and privileges. For, curiously enough, while meeting modern conditions in one way, in the other way, they have been unable to free themselves from the thralldom of old traditions.

By this I mean that while the man is willing for his wife to be a money earner, he feels that, as a husband, he has entire right to carry the pocketbook and that she should give him all she makes. And the woman, while desiring to follow a gainful occupation outside of her home, still feels that, as a wife, her husband should support her.

In a word, both want to have their cake and eat it, too. And the attempt to accomplish this gastronomic feat gives rise to endless bickerings and quarrelings.

This difficulty is going to increase, rather than decrease, because, for one thing, the high cost of living has made it virtually impossible for the average young man to get married, unless he marries a girl who has a dowery or who continues to be a money-earner after marriage. And, for another thing, nearly every girl nowadays has been trained to some profession or trade and has made her own living before she was married, and very few women who have known the joy of having their own pocketbooks are ever satisfied to give them up and become financially dependent again.

We have, then, thousands of young couples in which the wife keeps on with her job after marriage and who superimposes upon that the labor of the housewife, for she makes a home for her husband just as much as does the purely domestic woman.

Offhand, an outsider would say that any man who had got that sort of paragon as a wife—one who could help provide the dinner and cook it, too—should be only too happy to make good on his marriage vow, "With all my worldly goods I thee endow," but such seems to be far from the case.

In innumerable instances the men who have married these go-getter wives turn slackers and let Sally do it. In many other cases, the husbands demand that their wives turn over their entire pay envelopes to them, and they dole out to the women who have earned them such pennies as they see fit. In other cases, the wives are the grafters, and feel that they should not be called upon to contribute to the upkeep of the home, but have a right to use all the money they make in gratifying their extravagant personal tastes.

When the husband and wife are both money-earners, I think that the fair way to settle the matter is for them both to contribute toward running the home in proportion to their earnings.

The idea that a man should support his home and his wife entirely was based on the theory that she gave all of her time and labor to her family, and when she goes outside of the home to work she forfeits the right to be supported. On the other hand, the woman who does her housework, in addition to her other work, contributes at least the wages of a maid and housekeeper to the communal good, and that should be taken into consideration in adjusting the household financial budget.

Such a couple might well establish a joint bank account, a savings account preferably, for the common good, but beyond that I think it makes for happiness and peace in a family for both the husband and wife to have some money that they can do with as they please and without any interference from the other.

Of course, it is a noble gesture for each to say, "All that I have is yours," but somehow this seldom works out satisfactorily in actual practice. At least, so far as women are concerned. For a wife finds out that while she has a technical claim on her husband's purse, it is one that she cannot enforce and that she only gets out of it what he chooses to give her.

That is why women are wise, in the great majority of cases, in hanging on to their own money with a death grip, whether they inherit it or whether they earn it. Their husbands don't often mean to cheat them out of it; but once a man gets possession of his wife's money, he regards it as absolutely his own, and he feels that he is being just as generous in giving her a few dollars of it as if it had come out of his own pocket.

Certainly, it is going to be difficult for the husband of the future to reconcile himself to the thought of a wife being financially independent of him and having a right to the money she earns, and it is going to be difficult for a woman to realize that she can't be both a parasite and a wage-getter. But all that is needed to smoot out the situation is a little common sense and justice.

Sentimentalists might say that there should be no question about money between a husband and wife who love each other, but there always has been and always will be. It is at the bottom of nine-tenths of the friction in every household, and it will be lessened, not increased, when it is settled as a frankly business proposition, instead of by chicanery, and jollying, and panhandling, and petty larceny, as wives have mostly had to settle it in the past.

LEGISLATIVE CALL WILL BE FORCED, CLAIM

Satterwhite Says Public Sentiment Demands Special Session

Houston, Texas, Oct. 25.—(AP)—The desire of the public to know the facts inevitably will force a special session of the legislature as the climax to the present state highway investigation, in the opinion of Lee Satterwhite, speaker of the house, who was in Houston on Sunday for a conference with members of the legislature resident here.

Speaks Reluctantly.

Speaker Satterwhite was reluctant to discuss current political questions, giving as his reason his absence from the state for some days during which time "developments came too swiftly for me to keep conversant with them."

It is Mr. Satterwhite's belief that Governor Ferguson will see for herself the necessity of a special session of th elegislature at the conclusion of disclosures now being made by Attorney General Dan Moody, who is conducting an exhaustive inquisition into every phase of the highway question.

On Way to Austin.

Mr. Satterwhite declined to go further into the matter, saying that he preferred to defer any statement until after he has been in Austin a few days familiarizing himself with recent developments.

Mr. Satterwhite left Sunday evening for Austin.

at his hotel managed to keep him alive for an hour and a half. He pronounced death due immediately to cerebral hemorrhage.

Administrator Yellowley, summoned at once, was the first to advance the poisoning theory. Asher was associated with him in the east for some time before the agent came here.

"Undercover" Man.

During the last few weeks Asher has been working as an "undercover" man and it was upon his complaints and warrants that several federal injunctions were issued. One of the injunctions closed the place owned by a man called "Sawed off," who thus signed an "open letter" recently written to President Coolidge, defying him to enforce the dry law here.

Asher gained considerable notice when he cleaned up Peoria, which was called by prohibition officials the wettest town in Illinois. After raids there conducted by out of town agents under Asher's direction, he was accused of ruthlessness and wanton destruction of property, of saloons and soft drink parlors. Asher was 44 years old and has a son in the prohibition service in an eastern city, Yellowley said.

WAR RAGES ON EVE OF PEACE MEET IN PARIS

Fighting Continues in Bulgaria; League Meets Today

PARIS, Oct. 25.—(AP)—Fighting continued on the Bulgarian front today at the very moment members of the League of Nations council were hastening to Paris for an extraordinary meeting calculated to extinguish the new Balkan flame.

From Sofia came word that two Bulgar towns hitherto untouched—Pipernitza and Petrovo—had during the day been subjected to a bombardment by Greek troops.

On the other hand the aggression was not confined to the Greeks, if all reports are to be believed. An official Greek statement issued at Athens declared that the Bulgars had occupied Greek territory in the neighborhood of Demirkawour (Demirkapu) refusing to retire.

Admiral Sadjakikrakos, acting foreign minister, in a telegram to the secretariat of the league promised that the Greek forces would retire "when the last Bulgarian soldier is withdrawn from Greek soil."

While contradictory statements are coming out of Sofia and Athens with consistent rapidity, the neighboring states display considerable alarm and also a determination in no case to be drawn into the row. Rumania and Czecho Slovakia both have announced their neutrality and Belgrade has given the strictest orders to prevent invasion of its territory by the belligerents where the three states meet.

EXPECT MORE DEVELOPMENTS IN ROAD CASE

Highway Commission to Be In Session In Austin Two Days

AUSTIN, Texas, Oct. 25—(AP)—With the Travis county grand jury expected to report on its investigation of the state highway department, the highway commission in session Monday and Tuesday, and a hearing Saturday on a permanent injunction suit against the commission—interesting developments are expected in the highway situation. Some capitol observers believe the climax was reached last week, when the breach between the governor's office and the attorney general's apparently became an impassable gulf. Others feel that even more surprising developments and more torrid statements will be forthcoming this week.

Statements Conflict.

Attorney General Dan Moody, officials of the American Road company, a representative of the Ferguson forum and Nathaneil Jacks, state representative from Dallas, are among those who went into the grand jury room during the past 10 days. The attorney general had been credited with taking the initiative before the grand jury in probing highway department transactions; but he said last week he had gone before the grand jury only upon request of that body.

Whether any comment will be made Monday or Tuesday by members of the highway commission regarding conflicting statements issued by Commissioner Joe Burkett and Highway Engineer R. J. Hank is considered problematical. Mr. Burkett said last week he relied on Mr. Hank's advice in agreeing to accede to Chairman Frank Lanham's view and fix at 30 cents a square yard the price for asphalt topping on 1,300 miles of state highways. The American Road company was awarded contract for 1,000 miles and the Hoffman Construction company the contract for 300 miles.

Gets $8.000 a Year.

When shown Mr. Burkett's statement, Mr. Hank denied he had approved the contracts, and said he had advised asking for competitive bids on the work. Mr. Hank is the highest salaried state employe, drawing $8,000 a year, and by law is termed the executive head of the highway department.

Mortality Rate In U. S. on Increase

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 25.—(AP)—A slight increase in the mortality rate for the week ending October 17 against the corresponding week last year is indicated in returns to the United States department of commerce from 66 cities in the country with a total population of 29,000,000. The rate for the week this year was 11.9 as compared with 11.3 in 1924.

The highest rate (18.8) appears for Memphis, Tenn., and the lowest (6.4), for Flint, Mich. The highest infant mortality rate (136) appears for Erie, Pa., and Wilmington, Del., and the lowest for Duluth, Minn., which reported no infant mortality.

Rates of mortality in several Texas cities follow:

Dallas 12.1.
