Tale Of Horror In Storm Area Given By Relief Worker

DEAD BODIES RECOVERED IN BIG NUMBERS

Corpses Stacked in Huge Piles by Searchers For Victims

BURIAL IS DIFFICULT

Identification of Whites and Negroes Remains Impossible

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla., Sept. 20. (AP)—The estimated toll of dead in last Sunday's hurricane was increased late today to between 700 and 800 by Howard Selby, chairman of the Palm Beach County Red Cross committee.

A picture of indescribable horror was drawn of the area by Selby. Relief workers, he said, were unable to distinguish between the bodies of white and negro persons, in some places, because of the advanced stage of decomposition that had set in.

Washed out roads and inability to obtain adequate transportation facilities for the removal of bodies made it necessary to leave them lying in the open. At some places they had been stacked in piles. Many were left singly where they were found.

Sanitary conditions were described as so bad in the approximately 100-mile square area in the everglades district around Pahokee, South Bay and Canal Point, where most of the deaths occurred, that Selby said it might be necessary to evacuate it entirely by quarantine, unless bodies scattered about the region are recovered and buried within 48 hours.

FEAR OF PESTILENCE IN WIDE AREA

WASHINGTON, Sept. 20. (US)—Over a thousand-mile front stretching from Porto Rico along the mainland to the Virginia Capes, an army of relief workers today struggled to alleviate the suffering, privation and misery caused by the most destructive hurricane of modern times.

Meanwhile all that remained of the terrific gale was a cold autumnal rain falling drearily over Pennsylvania and upper New York state.

A vivid picture of the titanic battle being waged to undo the havoc of the storm was contained in reports pouring in here from a dozen points to the American Red Cross and the war and navy departments.

Fear of rioting, fear of pestilence, lack of food and housing and clothing—these were among the discouraging reports received from the inland regions of Porto Rico and the Virgin Islands and the storm-wrecked territory around Lake Okeechobee, Florida.

Death List Grows

Late dispatches still indicated that the death list in Florida will reach 500 or more, with property damage of $30,000,000, about 20,000

Triple Death Party Halted By Moody's Respites

Governor Grants One Week Longer to Live for Each of Three Condemned Texas Prisoners

AUSTIN, Texas, Sept. 20. (AP)—A scheduled triple electrocution at the state penitentiary at Huntsville soon after midnight tonight was called off when Gov. Dan Moody late today granted seven day respites to J. R. "Bob" Silver and two negroes.

The short reprieves were given to enable further investigation. Silver, formerly of Kansas City, was sentenced to death in the holdup and killing of Roscoe Wilson, Fort Worth theater cashier. The negroes scheduled to die, were Tom Ross from Nacogdoches county and O. T. Alexander, from Harris county; convicted of murder.

The governor said that he had not had time to examine the lengthy report of the Silver case presented to him Monday by the pardons board.

To Study Records

He asserted that he desired to study the 30-page report carefully, as well as review all the other records in the case which are several inches thick.

Governor Moody had indicated yesterday that he would grant Silver a brief reprieve but he made no definite announcement until he returned late today from San Antonio where he attended the funeral of George Armistead, veteran political leader.

Tom Ross given a seven day respite in order that the governor might investigate further evidence which two Catholic priests presented him here yesterday. The priests allege discrepancies in the evidence under which Ross was convicted of killing a logging camp paymaster.

New Facts Found

A reprieve was granted O. T. Alexander after E. H. Cavin, Houston attorney, had phoned Governor Moody that he had additional facts to present which would shed new light on the case. Alexander was convicted of slaying his wife.

Silver was sentenced to the electric chair on a charge of robbery with firearms. Wilson was killed in January, 1927.

W. A. Stone, now serving a life term in the penitentiary for participation in the holdup, was reported to have confessed that he killed the theater cashier.

Other evidence was said to have been introduced that Silver did not fire the fatal shot. This was Silver's second respite.

One Look at Al Gives Lie to Lot Of 'Whisperings'

OKLAHOMA CITY, Sept. 20.—This is written by the hand that has shaken the hand of Mrs. Alfred Emanuel Smith and also the hand of Mrs. Smith's daughters.

Mrs. Smith is a fine matronly woman. Just such a one as you would expect to be the mother of a fine family and if she wouldn't grace the white house, then in our opinion mothers just aren't suited for the white house. This hand has not shaken the hand of Governor Smith. Neither has it helped hold him up.

One look at Governor Smith gives the lie to a lot of whisperings. When we saw Governor Smith he was standing on top of a chair telling some hundreds of Texans why he couldn't shake hands with each one of them. He was the picture of a confident man and happy warrior even if he did look a little tired.

The convention hall was filled to capacity by 6:30 and officials were kept busy in trying to keep the aisles clear. "Dixie" and "The Sidewalks of New York" brought the audience to its feet.

When Thomas P. Gore, the blind former senator, was led to the platform, there was cheering and many stood until he was seated. Senator Gore is still a popular leader in Oklahoma. A group of union carpenters occupy a gallery at one side of the stage. At least their gallery bears that label. They can see and hear to fine advantage but it must be awfully hot up there.

Oklahoma Democratic leaders are not confident that they will carry that state but they are ready to make a determined fight. And there are plenty of good Democratic women who are as determined as the men. One of the busiest men in Oklahoma City tonight is O. J. Pickle, manager of the Western Union here. Mr. Pickle was manager of the Wichita Falls office years ago. The wire arrangements for the Smith meeting are comparable to those for a national convention. It is expected that tonight's file will exceed 150,000 words.

AL DECLARES CRITICISM OF FAITH TREASON

Nominee Asserts G. O. P. Countenances Work Of Bigots

ROBERT OWEN RAKED

Smith Also Condemns the Recent Actions of Mrs. Willebrandt

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., Sept. 20. (UP)—Governor Alfred E. Smith struck back at the "whispering campaign" in his second campaign speech here tonight, and was cheered frequently by a huge audience which had gathered from all parts of Oklahoma, a state where the religious issue is admittedly a paramount one.

He denounced the attacks on his religion as "a treasonable attack upon the very foundation of American liberty" and as "un-American" and blamed Republican national leaders for permitting it if not actually "promoting it."

Last Discussion

In closing his address, he told his audience that this was the last time he would discuss the "whispering campaign." Hereafter, he will devote himself to national issues, he said.

"If any Catholic in this country believes that the welfare, the well-being, the prosperity, the growth, and the expansion of the United States is best conserved and best promoted by the election of Hoover, I want him to vote for Hoover and not for me," he declared.

"But on the other hand, I have the right to say that any citizen of this country that believes I can promote its well-being, that I am capable of steering the ship of state safely through the next four years and then votes against me because of my religion he is not a real, pure, genuine American."

"Pour it on them, Al," was shouted at Smith repeatedly from the audience as he attacked those responsible for the "whispering campaign."

The crowd, which swarmed to see "Al" came from all parts of the state, in many sections of which there is bitter hostility to the Democratic candidate, but it was good humored tonight as the meeting began, and orderly.

They Want Al

The crowd first showed its enthusiasm for Governor Smith, before his appearance, when National Committeeman Scott Ferris referred to him as "the next president of the United States" in introducing Governor Henry S. Johnston, of Oklahoma.

Johnston hardly had started on his speech of welcome when the Democratic candidate entered from the side of the stage, carrying his brown derby, and the crowd went wild. It cheered for several minutes, Smith went behind the platform to talk to the crowd which sat there on wooden benches in the automobile shed.

"We want Al," somebody shouted as Johnston resumed and he announced that former Governor Lee Cruce would speak only five minutes in his address of welcome, following him.

Loud cheers interrupted Cruce when he declared, in his speech of introduction, that every man had a right to worship according to the dictates of his own conscience.

"Governor Smith is a Catholic," Cruce said, and the crowd cheered.

Cruce added, "and I'm a Presbyterian."

"Our country will be just as safe in the hands of Governor Smith as president as those of any other man," Cruce said.

The crowd cheered as Smith arose to speak.

"Pour into them, Al," a man in the front row shouted as he began.

Owen Disclaimed

When Smith denounced "un-Democratic and secret propaganda," the cry "pour into them Al," was taken up by several others.

"He ain't ours," came a voice when Smith referred to former Senator Robert L. Owen, of Oklahoma, who bolted to Hoover.

The Democratic candidate charged Owen had abused the franking privilege by having the charges against him inserted in the Congressional Record, in a departure from the speech given out in advance.

Referring to his eight years as governor of New York, Smith said the Republicans, whom he had defeated so often, in New York, are afraid that if he gets into the White House he may stay as long.

He scathingly denounced those responsible for "lying" attacks upon him, singled out the Ku Klux klan, once dominant in the politics of this state, as breathing religious hatred into the "hearts and souls" of its members against his church, and attacked Assistant Attorney General Mrs. Mabel Walker Willebrandt, for a recent speech calling upon

City Physician Warns Against Danger of Dye Poisoning By Shoes

At least four cases of serious poisoning caused by the wearing of dyed shoes too soon after the dye had been applied have been reported in Wichita Falls during the last two weeks, Dr. H. D. Fillmore, city physician, announced Thursday.

"This department wishes to warn the people of the city against this danger," Dr. Fillmore said.

"After shoes have been dyed they should be set aside and allowed to dry for at least a week before being worn.

"Where the shoes are worn too soon after they have been dyed, the dye is absorbed into the blood and causes an alteration in the blood. The skin of the victim usually turns blue in color and it is entirely possible for the poisoning to be fatal."

Dr. Fillmore said that the latest case to be reported was that of Charles Wilson, son of Judge H. R. Wilson, 2007 Lucile street, who was ill Thursday because of dye poisoning.

Four Letters Threatening to Bomb Raskob Home Sent to Leader's Wife

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 20. (INS) Four letters in all were sent Mrs. John J. Raskob, wife of the Democratic leader of Governor Al Smith's campaign, threatening her husband's life, by Frank C. Mooney of this city, police alleged this afternoon as full details of the attempted blackmail plot were made public. Mooney was held in $10,000 bail for court today.

In the first letter mailed two months ago from this city, Mooney threatened to "blow up" the palatial Raskob home at Claymont, Del., if he failed to receive $100,000 in unregistered liberty bonds. In the next three, all mailed to Mrs. Raskob at Centreville, Md., Mr. Raskob's life was threatened and the money demanded in cash. All the missives were signed "Francis X. Watts." The money was to be placed in a "carrying bag" and checked at the Pennsylvania railroad station here and the check mailed to Watts in care of "general delivery, North Philadelphia Postal station."

CATHOLIC HEAD FLAYS AL SMITH

French-American Leader Appeals for Hoover

WOONSOCKET, R. I., Sept. 20. (UP)—Elphege J. Diagnault, leader of the Franco-American Catholic group who recently sought to secure an accounting of parish funds of Bishop William A. Hickey of the Providence diocese, today urged his followers to support Herbert Hoover in the coming presidential election.

Diagnault's appeal, which contained an attack upon Gov. Alfred E. Smith and the Irish race in general, was published editorially today in La Verite, French language organ of the Franco-American group. Diagnault advocated as well the support of Judge Felix Hebert probable Republican senatorial candidate, against Senator Peter G. Gerry of Warwick, who is a candidate for re-election.

"The Irish as a race," the editorial said in part, "for 50 years has never ceased to mock at our rights and trample on our liberties. Let us show the world that there are not only Irish in Rhode Island, but there are more than a handful of Franco-Americans living here, as Bishop Hickey told Rome."

Diagnault, though of Catholic faith, declared that the Democratic nominee's religion was one of the reasons for voting for Hoover.

"Another reason to be against Smith," the editorial said, "is because he is a Catholic. We have always contended that the fight we have staged for many years served the best interests of the church We want to continue and we will make every possible effort to stop the election of a man, who, if elected, would bring the church into politics against her will and to her disadvantage.

"There would not be one act of Smith which would not be interpreted by fanatics as coming from Rome and persecution would follow. We have two striking proofs which we only mentioned and to which we will return: First, the attempted influence exercised by the Knights of Columbus on our government and in Mexico; second, the political maneuvers of the clumsy National Catholic Welfare council which has provoked anti-Catholic hatred which we can see today in our country."

Declaring the election of Smith was "veritable national suicide," Diagnault went on to say that the Democratic candidate sought public support "with a promise of beer and liquor" and that the people should not be "duped with promises he had no power to fulfill."

Fort Worth Judge to Make War on Noise

FORT WORTH, Sept. 20. (UP)—A war on loud mufflers which adorn most cars now, was declared by Corporation Judge Cullen Bailey when he announced that in the future "all fines would come fast and heavy."

"Almost all the new cars now being sold have long exhaust pipes with a butterfly cut-out arrangement on them which can be opened at the driver's will," Judge Bailey said. "They are becoming a nuisance and I intend to enforce the city ordinance in the future, though fines paid so far have not exceeded $5."

Police Chief Henry Lee then issued instruction to all patrolmen to "ticket" violators.

TOURISTS HELPED

6,000 Are Given Aid by Wichita C-C in Four Months

A total of 6,000 tourists have been served in the past four months by the chamber of commerce tourist information bureau, it was learned Thursday from Hubert Harrison, manager of the chamber.

The bureau, which is maintained the year around by the chamber, under the direction of Mrs. Wilma Pearson, has served an average of 50 persons a day since the heavy tourist traffic started the middle of May.

Road maps, road information and similar aids to tourists are available at this bureau which is in the offices of the chamber of commerce.

San Angelo Closes Up for Exposition

SAN ANGELO, Texas, Sept. 20 (AP)—Suspension of business during the afternoon hours boosted the attendance figure of the All West Texas Exposition, in progress here, with indications that a new mark was established today.

Five horse races and finals in the West Texas Polo association tournament between the San Angelo, Copperas and Crooked Hollow clubs were features of the afternoon program.

In the livestock divisions, judges' announcements revealed that D. E. Hughes of San Angelo exhibited both senior and junior champion bulls. C. M. Largent and sons of Merkel won 11 first prizes and John M. Gist of Odessa captured three awards.

July Tire Shipments Gain Third in Year

NEW YORK, Sept. 20. (UP)—July shipments of all types of tires was 5,972,237, a new monthly record and 31.9 per cent above shipments in July, 1927, according to statistics compiled by the Rubber Association of America.

Production of all types of tires in July amounted to 4,919,506 tires against 5,068,086 tires in June and 3,863,325 tires in July, 1927. The decline in production in July was due to the fact that many Akron tire plants were forced to curtail production schedules in July owing to the extreme heat.

NEW TYPE AIR MOTOR TRIED

Packard Official Is Pleased With Performance

DETROIT, Mich., Sept. 20. (US)—Officials of the Packard Motor Car company were enthusiastic today over the performance of a new type aircraft motor, the first Diesel or heavy oil motor to be perfected for use in the air. Flight tests were completed yesterday at the Packard proving grounds near Utica, Col. J. G. Vincent, vice president in charge of engineering, stated. The plane used was a standard Stinson Detroiter monoplane.

"The tests are the result of an experimental program which has been carried on for several years," Colonel Vincent said. "The new Packard Diesel engine is notable for its simplicity, having fewer parts than even the simplest gasoline aircraft engine now in use. The weight of the engine is moderate and there are no spark plugs or carburetors employed. We have reduced the weight of the Diesel engine from 100 pounds per horsepower to less than three pounds per horsepower.

"There are three highly important advantages gained by the application of the Diesel principle to airplane engine usage. First, the danger of accidental fire from gasoline is removed entirely. Second, both the fuel consumption and cost are reduced greatly, resulting in important savings in operating costs and improved cruising ranges.

"Third, the successful application of radio communication to aircraft on a broad scale is made possible by the elimination of these interferences caused by the electrical ignition systems used by gasoline engines."

The plane yesterday was piloted by Walter Lees, Packard pilot, and Capt. L. M. Woolson, chief aeronautical engineer at the Packard airport.

Curtis Admonishes Indians on Liquor, Idleness and New Dances

ROSEBUD, C. D., Sept. 20. (UP)—Sioux Indians, gathered here to celebrate the 50th anniversary of the Rosebud reservation, were both praised and admonished today by Senator Charles Curtis, the first of their race ever to attain the political prominence of a vice presidential nominee.

He lauded their war record and peace time progress, but warned them against idleness, liquor and "overindulgence in modern dancing."

"I hope you will accept not only the privilege of citizenship but its responsibilities as well," the senator said. "One of those responsibilities is voting. I should, of course, like to have you vote for me and my party, but I should rather have you against me than not at all."

Curtis' maternal grandmother was a princess of the Kaw tribe and the senator was largely responsible for enactment of a law granting universal Indian suffrage.

Senator McMaster, and E. E. McKean met Curtis this morning at Valentine, Neb., where his private car was sidetracked, and accompanied him to Rosebud Fair grands, now converted into a city of tents for the pow-wow. Senator Norbeck joined them there.

Young Vanderbilt, a Reporter, Can't Write His Greatest Human Story

By SAM LOVE

NEW YORK, Sept. 20. (UP)—Cornelius Vanderbilt Jr., newspaper man, is prevented by motives of delicacy from writing his greatest human-interest story and must leave it to other hands.

It is nothing less than the reception back to the parental bosom of Cornelius Vanderbilt, stern brigadier general and father of Cornelius Vanderbilt, Jr., a prodigal son, who took a share of his inheritance and went forth into the world of journalism.

And the hard days came and the son squandered his gold upon gaudy linotype operators and perfumed rolls of paper and dazzling Hoe presses. And the son was reduced to writing husks for the syndicates, and he was visited by ill health, unhappy affairs of the heart, deceitful friends and every sort of affliction. And he bore it all bravely, but his father hardened his heart against him.

Four years passed, and then Brigadier General Vanderbilt, on a morning as softly fair as only a September morning can be at Newport, R. I., stepped out on the marble stoop of his palace.

A Bride, Too

What could that be approaching afar off? A taxicab? And swinging into the Vanderbilt driveway? Indeed, yes. And from it emerged not only the prodigal son, to be held close to the stern old father's breast, but a companion; in fact, a bride.

These details, it may be said, are purely imaginary. Seen today at Mayfair House, Park avenue and Sixty-fifth street, Cornelius was reticent about filling them in. But the essential facts are true, and the fatted calf was killed with rejoicing and feasting that extended over seven days and nights.

With young Vanderbilt at Mayfair House was his bride, the former Mrs. Mary Weir Logan, whom he married July 3, and a half hour after she had obtained a divorce from Waldo Hancock Logan, a Chicago broker, and nine months after Vanderbilt's divorce from Mrs. Rachel Littleton Vanderbilt.

Vanderbilt seemed happy that the estrangement from his father and mother, resulting from his insistence on being a tabloid newspaper owner, was ended.

Cornelius Happy

"I wish that I had time to talk to you more fully," he said, "but you can say that I'm happier now than I've been in years, that the reconciliation with my parents is complete. And you can also add that they no longer oppose my career as a journalist."

Vanderbilt and his stockholders lost heavily in his tabloid publishing ventures in Los Angeles, Miami, and San Francisco. The Miami and San Francisco papers are now defunct, being forced into bankruptcy, but the Los Angeles Illustrated Daily News was taken over by the stockholders and is being operated successfully. Vanderbilt announced in July of this year that he expected to pay off the claims of the 3,000 stockholders by executing a trust fund from his inheritance.

When asked today if he had received his $3,000,000 inheritance, he replied: "Really I cannot go into details at present. I wish you would excuse me."

Railroads Conserve Supply of Fuel Oil

CLEVELAND, Sept. 20. (AP)—Faced by the approaching exhaustion of the domestic petroleum supply, oil-burning American railroads are doing all in their power to conserve this kind of fuel and to forestall the inevitable return to coal, the fuels division of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers was told today by J. N. Clark, San Francisco, buel supervisor of Southern Pacific lines.

Describing keen competition railroads are encountering in the airplane and the motor vehicle, Clark explained the need of the carriers to improve service and cut the cost of operation.

Quoting Dr. David White, chief geologist of the U. S. Geological survey, who in 1919 estimated the world's supply of oil in the ground at 65 billion barrels, Mr. Clark pointed out that the great production of oil in the United States has left only 3 1-3 billion barrels at home with about 49 1-4 billion barrels in fields outside the United States.

Tarrant County Given $600,000 in Road Aid

AUSTIN, Texas, Sept. 20 (AP)—Tarrant county today was allotted $600,000 in road aid by the state highway commission.

The aid is to be distributed over a period of two and one-half years and is to be used throughout most of the Tarrant county highway system with the exception of the Grapevine and Tarrant-Jack county roads.

Brakes Lock—One Man Killed, Another Hurt

DALLAS, Sept. 20. (AP)—One man was killed and another seriously injured near here today when the brakes on the automobile in which they were riding locked suddenly, throwing one of them through the windshield. The dead man is Aubrey Harwell of Dallas. Paul H. Johnson, also of Dallas, was injured.

Panhandle Road Asks To Execute Mortgage

WASHINGTON, Sept. 20. (US)—The Panhandle and Santa Fe railroad, subsidiary of the Santa Fe system, today asked authority of the Interstate Commerce commission to execute to the Guaranty Trust company of New York a general mortgage on its property and to issue $9,000,000 general mortgage gold bonds maturing July 1, 1953.

Ex-Fire Horse Swims Out of Plight When Gong Sounds

NEW YORK, Sept. 20. (UP)—"Speedy," a blind, 15-year-old, ex-fire horse, fell or was blown from the ancient harness of an ice wagon and into 20 feet of water in Atlantic basin from pier 34, Brooklyn, during the gale which swept New York today.

Effort of a police squad to rescue Speedy with a block and tackle were at first futile. The blind horse swam slowly in circles, unable to locate his rescuers.

Then the horse's present owner had an idea. In a few moments hook and ladder 131, with gong clanging and siren howling rushed out on the pier. Speedy swam straight as an arrow for the sound and was hauled out, dripping and snuffing the air for smoke.

Winkler Grand Jury Irregularity Bared

KERMIT, Texas, Sept. 20. (AP)—Irregularities in the selection of Winkler county grand jurors have been discovered in an investigation conducted by D. J. Chapin, a special prosecutor appointed by District Judge Klapproth to check alleged corrupt conditions here, Chapin stated today.

The special assistant to the district attorney said that two men who were appointed by District Judge Klapproth to draw a grand jury last March served on the jury. Six other selected to act on the investigating body in March were again named to sit on the grand jury in October, contrary to law, he pointed out.

Oil Blaze Threatens Town of Floresville

SAN ANTONIO, Sept. 20. (AP)—An estimate of the damage wrought by flames from 10,000 gallons of gasoline, 650 gallons of kerosene and 20 barrels of lubricating oil, which seriously threatened the town of Floresville today, could not be made by fire officials after the blaze.

The fire, which raged for more than an hour and a half, was brought under control with arrival of San Antonio fire fighters.

Dangers of Flying Over Mountains Described by Baron Von Huenefeld

By BARON GUNTHER VON HUENEFELD
(Copyright, 1928, by The Record News and Universal Service)

ABOARD THE AIRPLANE EUROPA EN ROUTE TO TOKIO (via radio from Angora), Sept. 20.—I got my first thrill in long distance flying by piloting the Europa from Sofia to Angora. Lindner made the start and landing.

More than ever I realized today that a properly functioning motor is the main essential to a successful trans-oceanic flight, for as we flew over barren and mountainous Asiatic landscape between the coast and Angora, which reminded me much of Labrador, we realized that if our motor stopped we had little hope for an emergency landing.

In this land of dried up rivers and thinly populated country there would be little prospect of a rescue.

We had to circle Angora three or four times before we could find a flying ground, and this turned out to be a race course. Not until rockets were sent up from the field did we know whether we could land.

We spent the night in a splendid modern hotel on a newly paved street in this ancient city.

I am sorry that I will be unable to see Kemal Pasha, who is away from Stamboul. I tried to see members of the American Archaeological commission here, but they were away.

The Turkish people are greatly interested in our flight to the Orient, and our plans to span the Pacific ocean. Our next stop will be Bagdad. I hope we will have no trouble in leaving the flying field here, which is so small we may have to break down some fences to get enough running space.

I. C. C. Decides Crude Oil Is Not Farm Product

AUSTIN, Sept. 20. (INS)—Upon his return from St. Louis, where he attended a hearing of the interstate commerce commission, Railroad Commissioner Lon A. Smith stated today that the I. C. C. has decided that crude petroleum was not a farm product, but that petroleum products should be added to that classification.

Smith said that Kansas was added to the southwestern list of states, for participation in the investigation under the Hoke Smith resolution passed by congress some time ago.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Sept. 20. (UP)—John Coolidge, railroad clerk, and his secret service guard, Russell Wood, have left their costly quarters at the Yale Graduate club for modest accommodations in the home of a divinity school professor.

The president's son and Wood have made their home with Prof. Benjamin W. Bacon, professor emeritus at Yale university school and widely known authority on the New Testament.

John's two weeks guest privileges at the Graduate club would have expired this week. He and Wood lived at the club by invitation of Senior Vice President E. G. Buckland of the New Haven railroad, John's employer.

Colquitt Announces He'll Vote for Hoover

DALLAS, Sept. 20. (AP)—Former Gov. O. B. Colquitt, anti-Smith leader of Texas, announced here today that he would cast his vote for Herbert Hoover in November.

"Heretofore I have felt I could not vote for Hoover because he was a Republican," Colquitt said. "However, after the way the anti-Smith Democrats were thrown out of the state convention here I have decided definitely to cast my vote for Herbert Hoover this year."

Doctors Decide Students Don't Know How to Eat After Investigating Rash

COLUMBIA, Mo., Sept. 20. (UP)—A "coke" and a cigaret composed the "breakfast" of at least one student, medical authorities learned today during an investigation of an epidemic of "food rash" among students of the University of Missouri.

"Evidently the modern student doesn't know how to eat," was the comment of one doctor after he investigated several cases of the rash. Pimpled blotches on the body compose the rash.

Irregular eating and living and improper diet are blamed as the cause of the epidemic. Instead of the use of medicated soaps and salves, doctors advise the resumption of a proper diet as a cure.

One student admitted that his "breakfast" consisted of a "coke" and a cigaret. A girl, whose body was completely covered with the rash, admitted she hadn't eaten a full meal in two weeks. Crackers, cookies, tea and soft drinks made up her diet.

Devil Dogs to Storm Dallas for Convention

DALLAS, Sept. 20. (UP)—Dallas will yield without a struggle to the U. S. marine corps when they arrive in a force for their national convention here Nov. 1. The three-day meeting will bring about 1,200 exdevil dogs to Dallas, and all declare their intention of redonning their war-like character for the wild west barbecue, the boxing matches and the general good times that Dallas has planned for them.

No fewer than six brigadier generals are expected to attend the convention. Each of these generals has been active in two wars and will have plenty of "old time" stories to tell at the get-together meetings.

SLAYER JAILED

Ruth Sherrill is going to be either a tight rope walker or an animal trainer in a circus when she grows up. She can climb almost anything now, and she would rather play with cats than eat carrots or spinach.

And she will grow up to be a flapper (though, of course, they won't be called flappers then) over her parents' protest. They hope she will be an average sweet, old-fashioned American girl. You see she has already developed the happy facility of laughing things off, and she has a "meet-me-later" look in her large expressive eyes, and nobody with those traits can be old-fashioned.

Otherwise the child is not at all unusual, her mother says. She cut her teeth just when she should and she learned to do babyish tricks just when other average babies did, etc. But even a pretty baby isn't supposed to have a lot of yellow curls and a pair of big luscious brown eyes, and be sweet almost all the time, and have a taste for things musical. Honors should be passed around better than that.

Ruth is the 13-month-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. N. Sherrill of 1805 Elizabeth street, and possesses as an indulgent grandmother, Mrs. A. D. Terrill of 2000 Elizabeth street.

CHIC CHERIE

(Copyright, 1928, King Features Syn. Inc.)

Latest Fashions

Cherie is having a pleasant time. This nightgown is a new two-piece nightgown and ong wonders why no one ever thought of that before. It's made of crepe de chine trimmed with Alencon lace, has a pleated skirt and is as short as a dress would be. Nothing seems to be disturbing Cherie's tranquil and serene spirit though she is far from home.

But in the meanwhile there is trouble at home. Dina has a telegram from Sue saying, "Come to town for a visit," and Dina is startled out of her wits. But not out of her frock, which is satin trimmed with lace in the places where it will do the most good, and made with a circular flounce each side of the skirt. Cut on princess lines.

It seems that Cherie went to Sue's, which is where she said she was going and the question is now whether she was kidnaped, killed or simply hit on the head. There is a great deal of excitement which refuse to share because we know that nothing permanently awful ever happens to heroines. So with a clear conscience we can tell you that draped hats are smart, too. Drapes are good for everything this season. Emily's hat is a draped turban of two shades of velvet and grosgrain. Sue's is a draped beret lopping down far over one ear. Dina's is draped felt and has the same long line on one side. And Cherie's (in the corner) is even flounced!

Mother Endangers Happiness of Children When She Lives With Them

The Mother Who Thinks to Escape Loneliness by Going to Live With Her Married Children Is Making a Big Mistake, for She Would Be Only an Unwanted Guest Who Would Endanger Her Children's Happiness.

"Why do you think that a mother should never go to live with her children after they are married, unless it is an absolute financial necessity?" asks a correspondent. "Take my own case," she goes on; "I am a widow with one child, a daughter. From the day of her birth I have had no other thought but for her, no other interest except in her. Now she is going to be married, and if I do not go to live with her I will be the loneliest and most forlorn woman on earth. I am not dependent on her financially. I have plenty of money to live on in my own home, but I am spiritually dependent on her to supply me with everything that makes life worth living.

"I have a friend. She, too, was left a widow—a poor widow with a little boy. By incredible labor and sacrifices she supported and educated him, and he was grown up into a fine, successful young man. Like my daughter, he also is going to be married, and he wants his mother to live with him, as he feels he can never repay her for all she has done for him. He feels that he would be an ingrate if he left his mother for his wife.

"Haven't we mothers who have given our lives to our children a right to expect them to give part of their lives to us? Haven't we a right to our places in their homes when they marry?"

Perhaps. But we have so many abstract rights that it is disastrous to try to enforce. Besides, who shall hold the scales even between parents and children and decide just what the children owe to those who thrust the burden of life upon them? However, it is not the obligation on either side that I am considering here, but the expediency of the situation, and my contention is that for mothers to go to live with their married children not only jeopardizes the happiness of the children but wrecks their own.

If, by sacrificing her children to herself, a mother secured her own well-being, she might be selfish enough to do so, but why do a thing that brings misery upon all concerned?

Every woman who has the courage to face the facts knows that a mother-in-law in a house is as dangerous to it as a charge of dynamite under the hearthstone and as likely to blow it to pieces. Every woman who is honest enough to tell the truth will acknowledge that she did not herself want to live with either her husband's mother or her own mother after she was married.

She wanted her own home in which she was supreme, and in which she could have the kind of wall paper and curtains and furniture that she desired, and use her best dishes every day if she felt like it. Above all, she wanted to be alone with her husband, with no third party around listening to every word they said and commenting on everything they did, and proffering an unsolicited stream of advice and suggestions.

That's one of the things that every woman knows and every mother knows that no matter how good a face her children put upon it they do not really want her to live with them, and that they would stand a better chance of happiness if she didn't. Every woman knows that she puts a terrific strain on her children when she forces Mary to be continually explaining and apologizing to her husband for mother's little ways, or when John has continually to keep the peace between mother and his wife.

When mother intends it or not her presence in the house separates a young couple. The husband does not wish to discuss all of his affairs before a stranger. He puts off saying the little intimate things to his wife that make a couple really one in thought and purpose until they can be alone together, but when that time comes the mood and the moment of confidence have passed and he keeps silent, so they do not grow together as they would if they had been alone.

And when John and Mary are forced to become partisans and take mother's side against husband or wife, everything is over but the divorce decree. Mother being a witness to it, turns the inevitable little spat of two people adjusting themselves to each other into a serious quarrel. If they had been by themselves, the matter would have ended by the bride weeping and the bridegroom calling himself a brute, and they would have kissed and made up with no harm done.

But with mother looking on, and perhaps championing her own, one's pride has to be considered. The bride has to show that she will not be tyrannized over, and the young husband assert his authority as head of the house, and it is the beginning of the little rift between them that ends in permanent estrangement.

All of this happens when the mother-in-law is at her best, when she honestly tries to get along with her in-laws and keeps her fingers out of her children's pies. When she is otherwise, when she is nagging and interfering and bossy, as she often is, she is the champion home-wrecker of the universe.

But in urging mothers not to go and live with their children when they get married, I am considering the mothers themselves as much as I am the children. For mother herself finds no happiness in being an unwanted guest in her children's homes. She who has been busy all of her life lacks occupation and is bored to death. She who has been at the head of a house for thirty years or more cannot subside gracefully into playing second fiddle in another woman's house. She who has had her old friends and her place in society is a misfit in the young crowd that her daughter and daughter-in-law go with.

I have known many women who broke up their homes to go to live with their children, but I have never seen one who did it who was happy and contented. I have seen many women who went to live with their children because they thought they would be lonely without them, but I have never seen such loneliness as that of the mothers who were pushed aside in their children's homes and made to realise that they were in the way.

So it seems to me that the part of wisdom is for mothers to realise that when their children marry they must let them go, and not try to hang on to them any longer. In doing this they really keep them, for they avoid the friction that daily life would engender and they save themselves from being burdens on their children.

The mothers themselves would be happier keeping their own homes and their own independence, living among their old friends, free to indulge themselves in their own little ways, instead of trying to adapt themselves to the ways of others. They would even be happier earning their own livings than existing as parasites, and they would be far less lonely in hotels and boarding houses than tagging along after their in-laws, knowing they were de trop in every party.

The best advice ever given to mothers was that contained in a recent play: "Have 'em. Love 'em. And let 'em be."

RIVALRY MAY END RACKETS

Greed Threatens Growth of Gangs

Editor's Note: This is the twelfth of a series of articles on racketeering in large cities by James P. Kirby. Today, Kirby takes up the story of New York.

By JAMES P. KIRBY
NEA Service Writer

NEW YORK, Sept. 20.—With all its undisputed claims to distinction, its firsts in everything, New York nevertheless stands second today in one respect. It remains but a province in the realm ruled by America's underworld king, "Scarface Al" Capone of Chicago, whose minions are engaged in the hazardous but lucrative pursuit of exacting tribute under threats of violence.

True, it was in Brooklyn, where Al Capone "trained" as a youthful member of the old "Navy Street Gang." But New York's gangsters, traditional in fiction for their ferocity, today appear as the quaint relics of another era as compared with the methods and daring of Capone's "mob."

The old gangs of New York—the "Monk Eastmans" and the "Hudson Dusters"—and scores of others which provided material for many a melodrama have passed. In their place there has arisen a new type of gangs—with new leadership—and with a new technique.

Capone Dominates All

And dominating it all, ruling with a firmness and finality never fancied by gang leaders of the past, is "Scarface Al" Capone.

Capone stands out today unique in the history of American crime. For never before has there arisen a figure to challenge law not only of his own but a half dozen other cities. New York, Detroit, Philadelphia, St. Louis—all pay tribute to the man who has established crime as "big business" and on a scale comparable to that of commerce and industry.

And therein lies the hope of the downfall of racketeering; already the game is growing so big, so many agents are necessary for its far-flung activities that it may topple of its own weight as envy, rivalry and greed take the upper hand. A monster organization cannot be controlled like a small gang of desperadoes.

The judgments passed by Capone are far more irrevocable than those of the law, for when Capone decrees death, there are no technicalities, no courts of appeal and no reprieves.

Thus it was that Frankie Yale of Brooklyn, long the friend and associate of Capone, died when he challenged the rule of Scarface Al.

Years ago, when the Navy street gang was at the height of its power, there were few who saw in the juvenile Capone, a hanger-on on the fringe of the gang, the mighty figure who today challenges the ingenuity of the best detectives.

The exact date of Capone's removal to Chicago is still a matter of conjecture here. But it is known that he frequently returns to the old stamping ground.

Capone is known to have been in a cafe in Brooklyn on Christmas, 1926, when "Peg Leg" Lonergan, powerful figure in the old "Coney Island Gang," and two others were killed on Twentieth street in Brooklyn. Capone was brought in by the police, with scores of others, but released when it was impossible to directly connect him with the crime.

"Big Bill" Lovvett and Frankie Healy, other gang leaders in lower Manhattan and lower Brooklyn, were killed when it is said Capone was in the immediate neighborhood.

After Capone moved to Chicago Frankie Yale is known to have made numerous trips to that city. It is declared by Detective Inspector James J. Sullivan of Brooklyn, who knew both well in their days here, that Yale's trips were on the summons of Capone when the latter wanted certain jobs done, for which Yale was peculiarly fitted by training and temperament.

Capone had another intimate friend in the Navy Street gang over which, eventually, Frankie Yale, became the boss. This was Ralph de Amato, who is said to have been a brother-in-law of Diamond Joe Esposito of Chicago.

De Amato, Yale and Capone were friends of long standing. Not so long ago their friendship was stayed by Capone himself, who presented each with a four-karat diamond ring, each valued at $3,000, and which adorned the finger of each until his death.

Yale's collections on gambling, on the long-known Italian "policy game," a form of lottery well established in Brooklyn, on alcohol, wet wash laundries and the various other rackets in which he was engaged, are known to have included certain amounts which went to Capone. There is the story here that even after the presentation of the rings Capone suspected Yale of holding out, and set De Amato to spy on Yale.

When Yale found out he was being double-crossed by De Amato, he ordered him killed, it is said. At any rate, on July 7, 1927, De Amato was killed.

A year to the day, July 7, 1928, the anniversary of De Amato's death, Frankie Yale, while riding in his automobile, fell beneath the bullets of assassins. Inspector Sullivan and District Attorney Charles J. Dodd of Brooklyn are convinced that Yale was killed on orders of Capone, to avenge the killing of De Amato.

Yale is known to have resented the system which compelled him to pay part of his own income to Capone, and at times is credited with having aspired to Capone's high place.

Retaliation Flames

Retaliation for Yale's killing was not long in coming, and even more definitely widens the breach between the Yale "mob" in Brooklyn and the Capone "mob" in Chicago.

Just recently Tony Lombardo, lieutenant of Capone, was murdered on the streets of Chicago. The killing is credited to friends of Yale, who thus avenged his death.

The war is on. Capone's rule has been challenged by none other than those with whom he started on his career. Their methods are well known to each other, and Capone's bodyguard has been doubled. Capone knows, as Yale knew, and as all the members of their respective mobs know, that no killing in the underworld in which they move goes unavenged.

Tomororw: Where the machine gun rules.

'King Al'

Few photographs of "Scarface Al" Capone of Chicago have ever been taken as the noted racketeer chieftain is camera-shy, but here is a hitherto unpublished picture. Capone is said to direct racketeer activities in many cities from his headquarters in Chicago.

IOWA PARK IS PLANNING FAIR

Community Exhibit to Be Held Oct. 4-6

Special to The Record News.

IOWA PARK, Sept. 20.—Plans are rapidly taking form for Iowa Park's community fair which is to be held October 4-6. The officers of the fair are well pleased with the co-operation that is being given by the citizens of Iowa Park and community, and G. C. McGown, county agent, says that with the number of people who are devoting their time to the fair, and the interest that is being shown in the exhibits, indications are for the best fair ever held here.

Arrangements are going forward rapidly for the housing of the displays. The educational displays and the woman's department exhibits will be given space in the buildings already on the grounds. A tent will be set up Monday to house the agricultural exhibits, and the stock pens, pig pens and cages for the poultry will be secured from the Texas-Oklahoma fair grounds at Wichita Falls. A grand stand is to be erected on the south side of the grounds for the pageant and coronation of the queen, whose identity is to be kept a secret until the coronation.

Only pure bred cattle, registered or subject to registration, will be allowed on exhibition. Any standard breed of poultry may be entered. A small charge is to be made for each entry.

The boys' pig clubs and the girls' poultry club are to be given a place in the exhibitions. Their exhibits will not compete with the other swine and poultry displays, but will be placed on a different basis of competition.

The premium lists have been completed and will be published in pamphlet form.

Diversified Farming Wins in South Texas

SAN ANTONIO, Sept. 20. (UP)—Netting $250 profit in one month from 20 cows, while pigs, sheep, poultry and nine varieties of crops were being raised, T. F. Evins, farmer, living in Peaceful Valley, 16 miles from here, has given an outstanding demonstration that intense diversified farming pays in Texas.

The Lone Oak poultry farm, also in Peaceful Valley, has made another demonstration of the same fact. Last November the farm started under the management of A. A. Leet with 700 Buff Leghorns. The flock now numbers 17,000 fowls.

To further prove that diversified farming is worth while in Texas, W. M. Bridgett, former Danville, Ill., agricultural expert, is directing the division of 1,000 acres into 30 and 50-acre tracts. These will be used to develop farming methods already established in those localities.

Amarillo Dresses Up For Tri-State Fair

AMARILLO, Sept. 20. (UP)—Amarillo will wear a gala dress this fall for the Amarillo Tri-State exposition, Sept. 22 to 29, if plans being worked out by fair officials and others materialize.

It is believed that one of the best advertisements for the fair and for the city is a gala appearance during the exposition. Thousands of visitors attracted by the free gate at the fair and interested in the development of this country will attend, it is believed. Officials believe that a good impression must be made and this impression can be aided greatly by a beautiful Amarillo and one that is highly decorated.

Officials estimate that 250,000 persons will visit the Tri-State fair.

JUDGE IS TOLD HE IS BIASED

State Official Testifies in Seminole Hearing

OKLAHOMA CITY, Sept. 20. (UP)—District Judge George W. Crump is prejudiced against Homer M. Bishop, Seminole county attorney, in the opinion of W. C. Lewis, assistant attorney general.

Lewis testified at a mandamus hearing Thursday on the question of the supreme court disqualifying Crump from conducting a grand jury investigation of Bishop's office.

Lewis, who was attorney for the grand jury in the recent investigation in Seminole county, told Judge Crump in answer to a question from Crump:

"Judge Crump, I belive you are an honest man, but I believe you are prejudiced against Bishop and that you are as mean as hell when you want to be and that you don't like me."

Following Lewis' testimony, P. E. Chappell, supreme court referee, continued the hearing until Tuesday when it will be transfered to Wewoka.

The hearing was ordered by the supreme court after Bishop filed a mandamus action late Wednesday to force Crump to disqualify himself from accepting the grand jury investigation.

Convening of the grand jury called for Monday has been postponed until Oct. 22.

SHERMAN C. OF C. HONORED TODAY

Delegation of 20 to Tour Industries

Twenty business men of Sherman, headed by Lee Simmons of the Sherman Chamber of Commerce, will arrive in Wichita Falls at 10 o'clock Friday morning to be the guests of the local chamber for the day and to be the guests of honor at the Friday noon meeting of the business council at the Kemp hotel.

The business council meeting will be turned over to the Sherman men, whose speakers will be invited to tell of the Sherman industrial system.

Hubert M. Harrison, manager of the Wichita Falls Chamber of Commerce, said Thursday that officials of the chamber were particularly anxious to get a large crowd at the Friday noon meeting to welcome the Sherman men, as Sherman entertained Wichita Falls royally when the Wichitans were guests of Sherman recently.

The visitors will be taken for a ride over the city and an inspection of Wichita Falls industries. They will leave for Sherman in their cars about 4 o'clock in the afternoon.

The Day Book of a New Yorker

By GRANT DIXON

NEW YORK, Sept. 20.—He had heard somebody say that if you stand at a New York corner where traffic is heavy for half an hour you'll meet an old acquaintance.

So one day a native of the Hoosier state who had decided to launch his career in New York after leaving law school, took up his stand at Forty-third street and Broadway. Surely, he thought, any of the folks from back home who had come to New York to see the sights would pass that corner if there was a corner in New York that would attract sightseers.

For 25 minutes or so it was just the usual two-way procession. It looked as if the theory wasn't going to work out. There seemed to be millions passing that corner but they were just people. Not a face that looked familiar had gone by. Just as it appeared that the test was to end in failure a voice with a Hoosier accent called out. "Well, hello, Mr. Jones, what are you doing here?" Then came the identification that opened common ground beneath them.

"Oh, yes. I remember you. You used to work in Pettee's drug store. I remember you very well. Of course, I've been away a good while but I recall that you've served me sodas lots of times. Still working there? No? Going to have a saxophone act in vaudeville, hey? Fine. Here's my card. Come up and see me some time and we'll talk over the old days at home."

The saying had come true. Half an hour at a busy New York street corner makes the world seem small. There was no longer any question about it. It proved to be a comforting thought the rest of that day and for several days to come, until, one day, the former soda jerker from the old home town was announced to the Hoosier lawyer by his stenographer.

Yes, lots of things had happened back home in the last five or six years. Some of the old-timers had died and quite a few children had been born, the Baptists had built a new church and the road to Vincennes was paved all the way now. There'd been considerable building going on and you'd hardly know the old town.

By the way, would it be possible to get some help in cashing a check on the old home town bank for $50? You see the act hadn't been signed up yet and you can go in debt in New York but it was only a matter of a few days before everything would be lovely and having been in the city such a short time it was hard to find anybody who'd cash a check right offhand.

"Well, of course, we don't make a practice of cashing checks or indorsing them but being a home town boy it's all right this once." So that was that.

About two weeks later Mr. Jones, the Hoosier who had come to New York to establish himself in a career, received notice from his bank that a certain fifty dollar item on a certain Indiana bank had been protested. And that was that.

The Quality of Genius

A GENIUS, says Dr. John B. Watson, New York's eminent psychologist, is made and not born.

Elaborating this theme in the current issue of Cosmopolitan magazine, Dr. Watson asserts that any normal infant, given proper training and shielded from unfortunate occurrences, can be molded into a Lindbergh, an Edison, a J. P. Morgan or any other big personality you can think of. Environment, he says, is everything; heredity, nothing.

This may all be very true. Dr. Watson is a very famous psychologist.

Yet this effort to reduce everything in life to a simple algebraic equation has been overdone just a little. There is an indefinable something, born into some human spirits, that will forever elude the professors who like to explain everything, from the Sermon on the Mount to the Eroica symphony, in terms of mechanics.

One wonders, for example, in just what way Abraham Lincoln's environment proved so advantageous that he towered above his fellows like a giant. Did his long years of young manhood on the great Illinois prairies mold his spirit to the great proportions it finally assumed? Possibly; yet one may suspect that the things Lincoln imbibed in those early days along the Sangamon were not things that could be easily defined in a text book of psychology.

To be sure, the saying that "we are products of our times" is perfectly true up to a certain point. Twentieth century America could not produce a St. Augustine, any more than fourth century Rome could produce a Henry Ford. But, after all, that is something like saying that a boy raised in the Sahara desert will not be as good a swimmer as a native of Hawaii.

The thing that we call greatness is indefinable, and we cannot explain it. We cannot tell, for instance, where Frederick the Great got the moral force that made him pause before a row of thundering cannon and snarl at his faltering soldiers, "Scoundrels! Would ye live forever?" We do not know where Danton got the cool poise that made him stand on the platform of the guillotine and remark to the executioner, "You will show my head to the mob—it will be worth seeing." We are still mystified by the strength that took Washington unshaken through the long winter at Valley Forge, when even his own countrymen were turning against him.

But we feel, instinctively, that this sort of greatness is not born of the earth and cannot be explained in glib terms of environment and early training. It comes from some place beyond our ken. It has the same inexplicable splendor of a flaming sunset, or a child's smile, or a chorus of violins. Trying to reduce it to a matter of a plus b plus c is like trying to build a rope of sea foam and sand.

A Glance at the Record

SAMUEL G. BLYTHE tells the readers of the Saturday Evening Post that a president should have a rare business training and many achievements along business lines to his credit. Well, take a glance at the record.

Samuel J. Tilden was elected president in 1876 and counted out by the Republicans. He was an eminent lawyer. He wasn't a business man. That is, he was not engaged in commerce or trade. He was elected governor of New York and made a great governor. His party elected him president of the United States but he was kept out of the White House by a Republican high joint commission.

Grover Cleveland was a lawyer. He was not engaged in commerce or trade. He was elected sheriff of Erie county, New York. He made a great sheriff. His city needed a mayor and the voters of Buffalo placed him in that office. He made a great mayor. In the nation his party needed a chieftain. He was nominated for the presidency and elected to that high office by the Democrats and independent voters of the United States.

He was defeated at the end of his first term and re-elected for a second term after four years in private life. History makes note of the fact that Grover Cleveland was one of the most masterful chief executives this republic has known.

Woodrow Wilson was a teacher and a lawyer. He never engaged in commerce or trade. He was the head of Princeton university when he was drafted by the Democrats as their candidate for governor of New Jersey. He made a great governor. He served two terms. He gave the people of New Jersey a people's government and they were satisfied.

Then what happened? He became president of the United States. His achievements as president made him an immortal. He piloted his country through the greatest war in history, and the historians of today and the historians of the future will rank him as one of the most capable and patriotic of all the presidents of the republic.

Tilden and Cleveland and Wilson led the party of Jefferson to victory in the nation. They were not business men, in a commercial sense. They were masterful minds, masterful administrators, masterful followers of Jefferson and leaders of the plain people.

Samuel G. Blythe gets his wires crossed. He should read history. He should go back to the record that tells of the career and achievements of Tilden, of Cleveland and Wilson. Tilden was not a traveler. He never ventured far away from home. When nominated for president Cleveland had never been as far west as Chicago. He had never visited the city of Washington. Yes, Samuel G, should read up a bit. It pays to be accurate.

PREVENT UNION OF CHURCH AND STATE

As it appears now, our only hope to prevent the union of church and state in this country is to turn political affairs over to the church. Until that is done the lion and lamb will not be able to browse in the same pasture.

HOLLIS FACES HOUSING PROBLEM

Despite the building operations that have been going on in Hollis for the past three years, and which are still going on, there is still a shortage of housing capacity that is becoming more serious as fall arrives. Perhaps there is nothing that could be done about it in the absence of any form of organization to care for such a problem. People cannot be forced to build more houses.

The FORBIDDEN DOOR — by Herman Landon

The Blinking Eyes

Hannan looked about the room. There were no windows, yet the air was fresh and fragrant. There must be a hidden ventilator somewhere, but doubtless it was too small to offer a way of escape.

"We have twenty minutes," Viola murmured. "Hold me close, dear, I am a little afraid."

He wound his arm around her. She gave a small, hysterical laugh.

"Remember the time in the taxi, Hannan? I thought I was doing something very clever, but you were cleverer. I think that's when I began to like you. Or maybe it began earlier. I don't know, it seems so long ago. Dear me, where's my handkerchief?"

Hannan scarcely listened. Her hysterical patter fell emptily on his ears. He was trying desperately to find a way out.

"Guess what I was doing, Hannan. I was helping Mr. Curry, only he didn't know it."

"You were helping him, and he didn't know it?" He gave her a blank look. "That's a bit deep."

"Oh, no—very simple. I told you my brother is a detective, didn't I? Mr. Curry had had a suspicion for some time that here was something curious about Maxwell Martenet's disappearance. He had no facts to go on, but he wanted to look into the matter."

"Yes," said Hannan dazedly, knowing she was speaking only in order to silence thought, "he told me something about an investigation he was making."

"So Mr. Curry commissioned my brother to find out what had happened to your father. My brother didn't have much success. One day I asked him to let me try. You see, he had told me about the case, and I was interested. He laughed and told me to go ahead, but warned me I mustn't do anything reckless. I tried all sorts of foolish stunts, but without success. Then you arrived in New York. I knew Mr. Curry would deliver certain papers to you. I couldn't know what they were, but I had a wild suspicion that they might throw some light on your father's case. That's why I filched the blue envelope. Despicable, wasn't it?"

Absently Hannan pressed her hand. His eyes were on the clock again. A shudder passed through the slight shoulder leaning against his own.

"Fifteen minutes," said Viola, and drew closer to him. "Let's decide what to do, and then we'll try to forget it until—until our time is up." She trembled violently. "When we hear Traycore at the door, then—then—"

"Yes, dear?"

"Then"—a fresh shudder shook her—"you press the pistol to my temple and—that will be the quickest way, won't it?"

"Viola!" Hannan jerked back violently. "You don't think I could do that?"

"But you must. There is no other way I know. Traycore told me all about it."

"When?"

"This morning. He gave me all the awful details. He seemed to enjoy terrifying me, to be proud of his horrid ideas. He's a dreadful man, dear, and we are helpless against him. You must do as he said."

"Never!" Hannan stroked her quivering shoulder. "Never!"

"But—"

"Traycore is a fiend, and half crazy besides. His sufferings and his disappointments have twisted his brain. He's a monomaniac, and monomaniacs are shrewd and dangerous. But don't worry. We'll win yet."

"How, dear?"

Hannan racked his brain. The palpitant figure beside him made it difficult to think.

"There are others in the house—Speck and Runty, for instance. We ought to be able to do something."

"But how will you get in touch with them?"

Hannan groaned aloud. Again the ticking of the clock fell ominously on his ears. His eyes turned downward, to the bronze figure that acted as a support for the timepiece. There was something curious about that figure. The head was crudely molded, but the longer he looked at it the stronger grew the resemblance to Old Winthrop.

Old Winthrop again. Even this room was dominated by his spirit. Hannan felt the eddy penetrating personality of his grandfather, virile and commanding even in death. Nor was that all. The bronze head seemed to possess a sort of life.

"Look!" he said pointing.

"Yes, I've been watching it. Curious, isn't it?"

Hannan continued staring at the bronze head. It could not be that his eyes were deceiving him, for Viola had noticed the same thing. Now and then, at regular intervals, the eyes in the bronze face grew together in a blink. It was strange, this symptom of life in a face carved out of metal.

"Another of Old Winthrop's little conceits," said Hannan. "My grandfather must have had a lot of fun in his idle moments."

Viola gazed pensively at the bronze face.

"When I look at it, I feel just as if he were with us in the flesh."

"Well, he is with us in spirit, anyhow, Queer, isn't it? I can almost feel him."

For a time they sat gazing intently at the blinking eyes. Hannan reached out and touched the table. It appeared to be firmly rooted to the floor. He ran his fingers over the bronze figure, but could find nothing that explained the movements of the eyelids.

"Wonder what makes the eyes blink," he murmured, talking against the hopeless dread he felt. "Maybe the bronze figure is connected with the clock over the iron door. That would explain why the eyelids move so regularly."

"If that's so, then the eyes will go on blinking for ever and ever."

"Or until the clock over the iron door stops."

"If it ever does."

They fell silent, their heads close together. Again, with a sharp inward wrench, Hannan look at the clock. Only 10 minutes remained. Viola's hand quivered within his own. He felt himself wedged between a vision of loveliness and a prospect of terror.

"Cheer up, little heroine," he whispered, but his heart was not in his voice. "You will have a chance to use that pearl-handled pistol yet."

She smiled wanly.

"Anyhow," he talked on, "things are never so black as they seem. The doctor hates you because you are beautiful. He hates me because I love you. Love and beauty affect him as a red flag does a bull. But we'll fool him—just see if we don't."

"Oh, but I fear it is hopeless. You must do as he told you, dear. Sudden death isn't so bad. The other thing would be awful."

Hannan picked up the little pistol Traycore had handed him. He opened the chamber. As the doctor had said, there was only one bullet. He gazed intently at the little metal cap protruding from the clip. Suddenly he started.

"One bullet!" He gripped Viola's arm. "Traycore is coming back in a few minutes. He will open the door and look in to see if I have obeyed orders. When he does—"

He gave a hard laugh and pointed the weapon toward the door. In an instant Viola saw the meaning of the pantomime. She jerked up her brown head and stared at him. A gleam of hope shone in her eyes. Then her face clouded.

"No, it's too simple, dear. The doctor is too crafty not to have foreseen such a thing. And he is probably listening behind the door this very moment. If he hears no shot, then he knows you haven't done as he told you."

Hannan nodded dully, a fearful agony wrenching at his heart. Viola was right; Traycore was too clever not to anticipate such a simple expedient. Well, he could at least try.

The clock ticked blithely on. The eyes in the bronze head continued blinking. Viola wound her arms about his neck and held him close. Three minutes—two minutes. Her hold tightened, as if she were determined never to let him go. One minute—

"Kiss me again, Hannan, and then—then do it quick!"

Hannan kissed her. Her lips had the added sweetness of an ecstasy that is fleeting and therefore doubly precious. Something drew his eyes to the bronze face. Did he imagine it, or was Old Winthrop smiling encouragement?

A convulsive shudder agitated the arm wound about his neck. There was a sound at the door. He sprang up and held the pistol leveled.

"Oh, dear! He's coming! You must—!"

Hannan heard nothing more. There were flashes before his eyes; his brain was burning. Behind him sounded Viola's quickened breathing; and then, of a sudden, she seemed to be breathing no more.

His hand was shaking; he exerted all his will power to steady it. Still the clock ticked on, still the eyes blinked. The crawling moments seemed to be charged with the omens of destiny, the tangled currents of life and love and death. And there was something else besides, something that pervaded the whole scene with its dynamics of terror and dread—the lingering, watchful wraith of Old Winthrop.

The door started to open. His hand was steady now, but he waited until the hateful face was in full view. A grim, savage exultation coursed through his veins. He did not look back, but he knew Viola had risen and stood behind him, holding her breath.

A vision of pale loveliness, and behind it the shadowy countenance of Old Winthrop, swam before his eyes as he took aim and pressed the trigger.

A crack of thunder came, then a blank, delirious interval. Traycore's mocking laugh broke shrilly on his dazed senses.

"It was only an empty shell, Hannan."

With a crushing sense of defeat Hannan looked down at the pistol in his hand. Viola was pressing close to him. Again Traycore spoke:

"I didn't mean you should kill her. I have other intentions. But it was an interesting test. You are nothing but a romantic fool, Hannan."

In a convulsion of tenderness and despair Hannan hugged the girl to him. A vision came to him, a picture of rose petals scattered and crushed.

"I'm in no hurry," said Traycore. "Take your time. These scenes amuse me."

He chuckled with faint malevolence. His eyes smiled with cold hate as he watched them.

"A kiss or two is in order on such a solemn occasion. It is your last chance." He made a slight gesture with the automatic.

In cold horror Hannan stared into his face. He knew Traycore hated them both with all the intensity of frustrated desires. Traycore, with a face that made people recoil in abhorrence, could never again know a woman's love. The ache, the wanting, had turned into malignity.

Hannan looked aside. He could no longer endure the sight of the doctor's face, far more horrible at this moment than at their first meeting. He looked at the useless little pistol in his hand. A groan escaped him. Life, the glamorous thing he had loved, was a matter of moments only. But there was still a chance, though a despairingly slight one. At least he could go down fighting.

For a moment his eyes fixed on the bronze face. He felt a strange attraction, a powerful urge running through his bruised body. Never before had the lingering spell of Old Winthrop seemed so vital, so close. But Old Winthrop could not help him now.

"Another of Old Winthrop's little toys," Traycore murmured ironically, noticing the direction of Hannan's gaze. "I trust you appreciate it, Hannan. The eyes will keep blinking just as long as the clock over the iron door keeps running. The same mechanism—"

He stopped on a note of bafflement. Hannan gave him a quick glance, then looked at the clock.

His eyes widened in astonishment. A gasp of surprise sounded in the stillness.

The eyes in the bronze face were no longer blinking! The clock over the iron door must have stopped at last!

"Queer!" Traycore's voice had a dull, faraway sound. He looked as if he were witnessing something incredible.

"The avalanche—" he stammered. "A part of the mechanism must have broken down under the continuous strain. I didn't expect it. Not so soon—"

The words dwindled away in a whisper.

Hannan shook off a load of dread. Traycore's eyes were still fixed in a stricken stare on the bronze face. He stood stonily still, scarcely breathing, his face like a mask designed by some evil genius. For the moment all his faculties were centered on the still eyes in the bronze face.

"That means the end for me. My promise—Oh, well— But I'll crush one more beautiful thing in the dust first."

He turned and looked at Viola, a smile of murderous glee on his lips. For an instant the sight of her seemed to hold him in a trance.

And an instant was all Hannan needed.

A wild thrill ran through him. His fingers tightened about the weapon containing the empty shell. His arm swung back, then described a swift forward curve. The pistol darted through the air and crashed against the doctor's temple.

The doctor uttered a hoarse, choking cry. He swayed, steadied himself, grinned abominably, and aimed the weapon he held. Hannan leaped, and their bodies crashed. They went reeling to the floor, rolled over and over.

Viola screamed. The air was full of muffled groans and the creak of straining muscles. Splotches of crimson flashed before her eyes. At length Traycore lay still, stunned.

Hannan rose and came limply toward her. He looked down at the little pistol he had hurled at Traycore's head.

"Look!" he cried giddily. "It's a pearl-handled one!"

Then silence fell over the room. They stood spell-bound. Then, in a dazed, glad voice, Viola cried:

"Hannan—darling—we're safe—Oh, my dear!"

Hannan's arm went around her. He fixed an awed, wondering gaze on the bronze face.

"Yes, safe—thanks to Old Winthrop!"

THE END.

FISH TALES

Whene'er I reach the pearly gates,
And knock both loud and bold,
I do not think that He will count
The fish tales I have told.

A noble, fine, and gallant trait
Is man's veracity,
But when I'm telling tales of fish,
Expect no truth from me.

I'm resting easy; if my tales
Should bar the gates up There,
Pray tell me, though his tale be true,
Just how will Jonah fare?

Ohio Methodist ministers to campaign against him.

Great Disaster

"I can think of no greater disaster to this country than to have the voters of it divided upon religious lines," he declared.

"It is contrary to the spirit, not only of the Declaration of Independence but of the constitution itself."

The "whispering campaign against him," the Democratic candidate declared, "discloses such activity" on the part of those promoting it "as to constitute in my opinion a menace not alone to the party but to the country itself."

"There is abundant reason," he said, "for believing that Republicans high in the councils of the party have countenanced a large part of this form of campaign if they have not actually promoted it.

"A sin of omission is sometimes as grievous as a sin of commission. They may, through official spokesmen, disclaim as much as they please responsibility for dragging into a national campaign the question of religion, something that, according to our constitution, our history and traditions has no part in any campaign for public office."

G. O. P. Keeps Silent

They have at least remained silent, he added, on "the exhibition that Mrs. Willebrandt made of herself before the Ohio conference of the Methodist Episcopal church." Her appeal to the 2,000 ministers to swing their 600,000 members against him, he declared, "is dishonest campaigning."

"It is un-American. It is out of line with the whole tradition and history of this government, and, to my way of thinking, is in itself sufficient to hold us up to the scorn of the thinking people of other nations."

Explaining that he is not the first public man "who has been made the object of such baseless slanders" as numerous cases he singled out, the Democratic candidate declared:

"But as to me, the wicked motive of religious intolerance has driven bigots to attempt to inject these slanders into a national campaign.

"I here and now drag them into the open and denounce them as a treasonable attack upon the very foundation of American liberty."

Smith referred to a circular which he said had been shown him by a member of the Masonic order which charged members of his faith were seeking to get votes for him because "of my Catholicism."

"I here emphatically declare that I do not wish any member of my faith in any part of the United States to vote for me on any religious grounds. I want them to vote for me only when in their hearts and consciences they have become convinced that my election will promote the best interests of our country.

"The absolute separation of church and state is part of the fundamental basis of our constitution. I believe in that separation and in all that it implies. That belief must be a part of the federal faith of every true American."

Smith also devoted attention to the attack upon him by former Senator Robert L. Owen of this state on the ground of his Tammany affiliations. Owen bolted to Herbert Hoover. Smith first recited his public record in detail and cited commendation of it by such Republican leaders as Charles Evans Hughes and Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia university, and by numerous others whom he named.

"Do Senator Owen and the forces behind him know more about my record than these distinguished men and women who have watched and studied it?" he asked.

"But Senator Owen is not sincere. They know that this Tammany cry is an attempt to drag a red herring across the trail.

"I know what lies behind all this and I shall tell you. I specifically refer to the question of my religion.

"Ordinarily that word should never be used in a political campaign. The necessity for using it if forced on me by Senator Owen and his kind, and I feel that at least once in this campaign, I, as the candidate of the Democratic party, owe it to the people of this country to discuss frankly and openly with them this attempt of Senator Owen and the forces behind him to inject bigotry, hatred, intolerance and un-American sectarian division into a campaign which should be an intelligent debate of the important issues which confront the American people."

Smith asked the people of the country to take the stand upon issues of himself and Herbert Hoover the Republican candidate, and decide the election on that basis.

Following is the text of Gov. Alfred E. Smith's address as given out in advance of delivery here tonight:

"Our country has achieved its great growth and become a model for the nations of the world under a system of party government. It would be difficult to predict what might be the evil consequences if that system were changed. If it is to survive, campaigns for the presidency must be fought out on issues really affecting the welfare and well-being and future growth of the country. In a presidential campaign there should be but two considerations before the electorate: The platform of the party, and the ability of the candidate to make it effective.

"In this campaign an effort has been made to distract the attention of the electorate from these two considerations and to fasten it on malicious and un-American propaganda.

"I shall tonight discuss and denounce that wicked attempt. I shall speak openly on the things about which people have been whispering to you.

"A former senator from your own state, a member of my own party, has deserted the party which honored him, upon the pretense, as he states it, that because I am a member of Tammany hall I am not entitled to your support for the high office to which I have been nominated. Here tonight I challenge both the truth and the sincerity of that pretense. I brand it as false in fact. I denounce it as a subterfuge to cover treason to the fundamentals of Jeffersonian democracy and of American liberty. What Mr. Owen personally thinks is of no account in this campaign. He has, however, raised an issue with respect to my record with which I shall deal tonight without mincing words. I know what lies behind this pretense of Senator Owen and his kind and I shall take that up later.

Ready to Meet Issue

"What he says, however, has been seized upon by the enemies of the Democratic party and the foes of progressive government. They have thus made my record an issue in this campaign. I do not hesitate to meet that issue. My record is one of which I am justly proud and it needs no defense. It is one upon which I am justified in asking your support. For the present, let us examine the record upon which has beaten the light of pitiless publicity for a quarter of a century. I am willing to submit it to you and to the people of this country with complete confidence.

"Twenty-five years ago I began my active public career. I was then elected to the assembly, representing the neighborhood in New York City where I was born, where my wife was born, where my five children were born and where my father and mother were born. I represented that district continuously for 12 years, until 1915, when I was elected sheriff of New York county.

"Two years later I was elected to the position of president of the board of aldermen, which is really that of vice mayor of the city of New York.

"In 1918 I was selected by the delegates to the state convention as the candidate of the Democratic party for governor, and was elected.

Beaten in 1920

"Running for re-election in 1920, I was defeated in the Harding landslide. However, while Mr. Harding carried the state of New York by more than 1,100,000 plurality, I was defeated only by some 70,000 votes.

"After this defeat I returned to private life, keeping up my interest in public affairs, and accepted appointment to an important state body at the hands of the man who had defeated me.

"In 1922 the Democratic convention, by unanimous vote, renominated me for the third time for governor. I was elected by the record plurality of 387,000 and this in a state which had been normally Republican.

"In 1924, at the earnest solicitation of the Democratic presidential candidate, I accepted renomination. The state of New York was carried by President Coolidge by close to 700,000 plurality but I was elected governor. On the morning after election I found myself the only Democrat elected on the state ticket, with both houses of the legislature overwhelmingly Republican.

"Renominated by the unanimous vote of the convention of 1926 I made my fifth state-wide run for the governorship and was again elected the Democratic governor by a normally Republican state.

"Consequently, I am in a position to come before you tonight as the governor of New York finishing out his fourth term.

"The record of accomplishment under my four administrations recommended me to the Democratic party of the nation, and I was nominated for the presidency at the Houston convention on the first ballot.

Tells Achievements

"To put the picture before you completely, it was necessary for me to refer briefly to this record of accomplishment.

"In the face of bitter Republican opposition, I succeeded in bringing about a reorganization of the government of the state of New York, consolidating 80 or more scattered boards, bureaus and commissions into 19 major departments, and bringing about efficiency, economy and a thorough-going co-ordination of all the state's activities.

"Under it was set up for the first time the cabinet of the governor.

"A drastic reform was secured in the manner and method of appropriating the public money, commonly referred to as the executive budget.

"During my legislative career, as well as during my governorship, I sponsored and secured the enactment of the most forward-looking, progressive, humanitarian legislation ever passed in the history of the state. I appointed the first commission on child welfare while speaker of the assembly, as far back as 1913.

"I had a large part in the enactment of the workmen's compensation law and the re-writing of the factory code, which went as far as government possibly could to promote the welfare, the health and the comfort of the workers in the industrial establishments of our state.

"I have stood behind the department of education with all the force and all the strength I could bring to my command. The present commissioner of education is a Republican. Any one in Oklahoma, or in any other part of the United States, may write to Frank P. Graves, department of education, Albany, New York, and ask him the blunt question: What governor of any state rendered the greatest service to the cause of public education? and I am confident he will write back a letter with my name on it—figures sometimes speak louder than words. In 1919, my first year in office, the state appropriated to the localities for the promotion of public education 11 and one-half million dollars. Last year for the same purpose I signed bills totaling $86,000,000—an increase in appropriations for public education of 74 and one-half million dollars during the period of my governorship.

Health Efforts

"I have given my time, my energy and my labor without stint, to placing the department of public health upon the highest level of efficiency and usefulness, to bettering the conditions, for the poor, the sick and the afflicted; and to the development, over the opposition of a hostile legislature, of a comprehensive, unified park system, having in mind not only present requirements, but the needs of the welfare of the generations to come.

"For 10 years I battled against bitter Republican opposition to retain for the people of the state of New York the control of their water power, their greatest God-given resources and have prevented their alienation and preserved them for our people and for our posterity.

"I sponsored legislation which brought about reform of the ballot, the passage of direct primary laws and provisions against corrupt practices in elections.

"The first bill for a bonus by the state of New York to the world war veterans, was signed during my administration.

"Although a city man, I can say to you without fear of contradiction, that I did more for agriculture and for its promotion in the state of New York than any governor in recent history. Co-operative marketing was encouraged. New impetus was given to the construction of state highways. State aid was furnished to towns and counties to bring the farm nearer to the city. During my terms of office, there was appropriated in excess of $15,000,000 for the eradication of bovine tuberculosis.

"The business of the state of New York was handled in a strictly business way. The number of place holders was cut down. Appointments and promotions were made on a strictly merit basis. In consequence there was effected a reduction in taxes to the farmer and the small home owner from 1923 to 1928 of from two mills to one-half mill of the state's levy upon real property, together with substantial reduction in the income tax.

Public Improvements

"Public improvements in the state, long neglected under Republican rule, are being carried out at a rate unprecedented in all its history.

"Bear in mind that all this has been accomplished without the co-operation of the legislature because during my entire career as governor both branches of the legislature have been Republican except for a period of two years, when one branch of the senate was Democratic. It was brought about because I took the issues to the people directly and brought the force of public opinion, regardless of party affiliation, to the support of these constructive measures.

"During my governorship I have made appointments of scores of men to public office requiring the confirmation of the senate, and while the senate was in control of my party in only two out of the eight years I have been governor, not a single appointment of mine was ever rejected.

"The reason for this was that I made my appointments to public office in the state of New York without regard to politics, religion or any other consideration except the ability, the integrity and the fitness of the appointee and his capacity properly to serve the state.

"Contrast this with the rejection of major appointments made by the president of the United States by a senate of his own party.

"I read in the press only recently that a Republican congress passed four bills over the veto of the Republican president in one single day. During my entire eight years in the legislature, never was a bill passed over my veto.

"Has there been one flaw in my record, or one scandal of any kind connected with my administration that gives any meaning to this cry of Tammany rule, a cry which thousands of independent and Republican citizens of my own state treat with ridicule and contempt?

"The Republican party will leave no stone unturned to defeat me. I have reduced their organization in the state of New York to an empty shell. At the present time sixty millions of dollars of public improvements are in progress in my state. If there was anything wrong or out of the way, does it not strike you, as men and women of common sense, that the Republican party in New York would leave no stone unturned to bring it to light? The fact is they have searched and searched in vain for the slightest evidence of improper partisanship of conduct. They found no such thing; they could find no such thing; it did not exist. And in the face of this Senator Owen and his kind have the nerve and the effrontery not to charge but merely to insinuate some evil which they are pleased to call Tammany rule.

"One scandal connected with my administration would do more to help the Republican national committee in its campaign against me than all the millions of dollars now being spent by them in malicious propaganda. Unfortunately for them they cannot find it, because the truth is it is not there. I challenge Senator Owen and all his kind to point to one single flaw upon which they might rest their case. But they won't find it, they won't try to find it, because I know what lies behind all this and I will tell you before I sit down tonight.

"I confess I take a just pride in this record. It represents years of earnest labor, conscientious effort and complete self-sacrifice to the public good in some endeavor to show my appreciation and gratitude to the people who have so signally honored me.

"Don't you think that I am entitled to ask the people of this country to believe that I would carry into the service of the nation this same devotion and energy and sacrifice which I have given in service to the state? Don't you think my party is entitled to make this argument to the American people, because it is not only the record itself that speaks in unmistakable language for me, it is the expressed approval of the leading fellow-citizens of my state who have never had the slightest affiliation with Tammany hall, and many of whom have been its political opponents?

"My election to the governorship four times has not been accomplished merely by Democratic votes, because New York is normally a Republican state. I have been elected by the votes of the Democrats together with the votes of tens of thousands of patriotic, intelligent citizens of all forms of political belief who have placed the welfare of the state above party consideration.

Quotes Hughes

"Take the statement of a man who has not supported me for the governorship, Charles Evans Hughes, a statement not made for political purposes but in presenting me to the bar association of New York City. He described me as one who represents to us the expert in government and I might say a master in the science of politics.

"He said of me, 'the title that he holds is the proudest title that any American can hold, because it is a title to the esteem and affection of his fellow citizens.'

"Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia university, in conferring upon me an honorary degree, stated that I was 'alert, effective, public-spirited and courageous, constantly speaking the true voice of the people.'

"The very Reverend Howard C. Robbins, dean of the Episcopal cathedral of St. John, the Divine, stated that I had shown myself 'singularly well-balanced, capable and forceful executive.' He added: 'He has been independent and fearless. He has had the interest of all the people of the state at heart and his sincerity and courage have won for him nation-wide recognition.'

"Robert Lansing, secretary of state under President Wilson, said of me, 'His public career is convincing proof that he possesses the true spirit of public service and is eminently fitted to fill with distinction and ability any office for which he might be chosen candidate.'

"Virginia G. Gildersleeve, dean of Barnard college, stated that I had 'made an excellent governor and shown a knowledge of state affairs which very few of our governors have ever possessed.'

"A group of distinguished educators, headed by Prof. John Dewey of Columbia university, said of my record on public education: 'His whole attitude on education has been one of foresight and progress.'

"I could tax your patience for the rest of this evening with similar expressions from men and women who are the leaders of thought and affairs in the state of New York, independents in politics, most of them never affiliated with any political organization.

"Do Senator Owen and the forces behind him know more about my record than these distinguished men and women who have watched it and studied it? But Senator Owen and his kind are not sincere. They know that this Tammany cry is an attempt to drag a red herring across the trail. I know what lies behind all this and I shall tell you. I specifically refer to the question of my religion. Ordinarily that word should never be used in a political campaign. The necessity for using it is forced on me by Senator Owen and his kind, and I feel that, at least once in this campaign, I, as the candidate of the Democratic party, owe it to the people of this country to discuss frankly and openly with them this attempt of Senator Owen and the forces behind him to inject bigotry, hatred, intolerance and un-American sectarian division into a campaign which should be an intelligent debate of the important issues which confront the American people.

Contrary to Constitution

"I can think of no greater disaster to this country than to have the voters of it divide upon religious lines. It is contrary to the spirit, not only of the declaration of independence, but of the constitution itself. During all of our national life we have prided ourselves throughout the world on the declaration of the fundamental American truth that all men are created equal. Our forefathers in their wisdom, seeing the danger to the country of a division on religious issues, wrote into the constitution of the United States in no uncertain words the declaration that no religious test shall ever be applied for public office; and it is a sad thing in 1928, in view of the countless billions of dollars that we have poured into the cause of public education, to see some American citizens proclaiming themselves 100 per cent American and in the document that makes that proclamation suggesting that I be defeated for the presidency because of my religious belief.

"The grand dragon of the realm of Arkansas, writing to a citizen of that state, urges my defeat because I am a Catholic and in the letter suggests to the man, who happened to be a delegate to the Democratic convention, that by voting against me he was upholding American ideals and institutions as established by our forefathers.

"The grand dragon that thus advised a delegate to the national convention to vote against me because of my religion is a member of an order known as the Ku Klux Klan, who have the effrontery to refer to themselves as 100 per cent Americans. Yet, totally ignorant of the history and tradition of this country and its institutions and, in the name of Americanism, they breathe into the hearts and souls of their members hatred of millions of their fellow-countrymen because of their religious belief. Nothing could be so out of line with the spirit of America. Nothing could be so foreign to the teachings of our divine Lord himself. The world knows no greater mockery than the use of the blazing cross, the cross upon which Christ died, as a symbol to instill into the hearts of men a hatred of their brethren, while Christ preached and died for the love and brotherhood of man.

Menace to Country

"I fully appreciate that here and there, in a great country like ours, there are to be found some ignorant or misguided people and, under ordinary circumstances, it might be well to be charitable and make full and due allowance for them. But this campaign, so far advanced, discloses such activity on their part as to constitute, in my opinion, a menace—not alone to the party but to the country itself.

"I would have no objection to anybody finding fault with my public record circularising the whole United States, providing he would tell the truth. But no decent, right-minded, upstanding American citizen can for a moment countenance the shower of lying statements, with no basis in fact, that have been reduced to printed matter and sent broadcast through the mails of this country.

"One lie widely circulated, particularly through the southern part of the country, is that during my governorship I appointed practically nobody to office but members of my own church?

"What are the facts? On investigation I find that in the cabinet of the governor all 14 men. Three of the 14 are Catholics, 10 Protestants, and one of Jewish faith. In the various bureaus and divisions of the cabinet officers the governor appointed 26 people. Twelve of them are Catholics and 14 of them are Protestants. Various other state officials, making up boards and commissions, and appointed by the governor, make a total of 187 appointments, of which 38 were Catholics, 108 were Protestants, 12 were Jewish and four I could not find out about.

"I have appointed a large number of judges of all our courts, as well as a large number of county officers, for the purpose of filling vacancies. They total in number 177, of which 64 were Catholics, 90 were Protestants, 11 were Jewish, and 12 of the officials I was unable to find anything about so far as their religion was concerned. This is a complete answer to the false, misleading, and, if I may be permitted the use of a harsher word, lying statements that have found their way through a large part of this country in the form of printed matter.

"If the American people are willing to sit silently by and see large amounts of money secretly poured into false and misleading propaganda for political purposes, I repeat that I see in this not only a danger to the party but a danger to the country. To such depths has this insidious manner of campaign sunk that the little children in our public schools are being made the vehicles for the carrying of false and misleading propaganda. At Cedar Rapids, Iowa, the public prints tell us that a number of school girls asked their parents if it were true that there would be another war if Smith was elected."

4 City and 4 Invaders Survive Tourney Here

By LARRY DAILEY.
Record News Sports Editor.

A man who is said to be the cousin of the farmer who, seeing a giraffe for the first time, ejaculated, "Heck, there ain't no sech animal," was seen slinking away from the Wichita Falls Golf and Country club yesterday. He was mumbling in his whiskers that the guy who invented this golf was neither a gentleman nor a scholar, a remark doubtless due to pique resulting from the failure of stars to play the game as they should play it.

Never before—and it probably will be a long time since—have there been such upsets as marked play yesterday in the first annual invitation tournament of the Wichita Falls Golf and Country club. The rout of the stars by so-called lesser lights involved a former state amateur champion and the present club titleholder.

The downfall of the experts began with the defeat of Tommy Cochran, twice a state amateur champion. That defeat was no less decisive than unexpected, and it was inflicted by L. T. (Bobby) Burns by a score of 5 and 4. It was in the second round in the afternoon, when Cochran, after disposing of R. D. Lee, 5 and 4 in the morning, fell by the same count. Cochran, medalist in the tourney with a 73, was far off his game in his match with Burns, while Bobby was at his best and the result of the match was never in doubt soon after it was under way.

Second only to the amazing defeat of Cochran was the elimination from the tournament of I. R. Sheldon, club champion, who also was defeated in the second round. Like the Burns-Cochran contest, the favorite Sheldon was somewhat off his game, while he encountered an adversary, Ed Stewart, from Dallas, who is capable of playing scintillating golf, and who, for that matter, exhibited such a superb expertness with all the sticks in his bags to beat Sheldon, 2 up.

Four Home Stars Win

Six other victories were scored in the championship flight yesterday to send the winners into the quarter-final this morning. Four of the survivors are homeguard stars and a like number are invaders from other towns.

Jack Hale, who disposed of M. T. Johnson of Amarillo, 1 up, after a gruelling battle; E. W. Marriott, victor over Joe Greenwood, the Houston crack, also after a nip-and-tuck struggle that was settled on the eighteenth and last green, 1 up, and D. S. Golding, who put out E. P. Bass, 1 up, after an uncertain struggle, remain with Burns to defend the honor of the home club.

One of the few favorites of the tournament to survive the two rounds of match play was Dennis Lavender, the 20-year-old star from Stamford. This young gentleman, runner-up for medal honors with 75, came through two trying tests in defeating R. E. Alexander and Stayton Bonner in his two rounds yesterday. Lavender scored a 70, two under par, in beating Alexander in the first round in the morning, and while his game wasn't up to that superb score in the afternoon, it was good enough to enable him to withstand the threat of Stayton Bonner, one of the Wichita Falls stars, but only after a spectacular and brilliant match, 2 and 1.

Gus Moreland, the 17-year-old schoolboy from the Cedar Crest club, Dallas, and youngest participant in the tournament, came through both rounds like the excellent kid golfer he is. Moreland eliminated J. D. Bright, 2 up, in the morning and went on in the afternoon to beat Charles Keirsey, 3 and 2.

Quarter-Final Pairings

In quarter-final play this morning, Burns meets Stewart at 9:30 o'clock. Hale meets Pope at 9:35. Marriott and Golding have an all-local battle starting at 9:40 and the youngsters Moreland and Lavender start their duel at 9:45. Semi-final play, which like the quarter-final round will be for 18 holes, is to start after luncheon.

Burns took the lead at the first hole in his match with Cochran and was never headed. Their cards follow:

| | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| Cochran—Out | 444 | 353 | 545—41 | |
| Burns—Out | 454 | 443 | 454—39 | |
| Cochran—In | 355 | 56 | | |
| Burns—In | 334 | 45 | | |

Lavender took an early lead in his match with Bonner and led 3 up at five holes. Stayton cut down that margin and was only 1 down at the nine-hole turn. Bonner squared the match at the tenth and, after halving the eleventh, Lavender took the twelfth, only to drop the thirteenth and leave the match square again. They halved the fourteenth and fifteenth.

Dennis took the sixteenth and seventeenth with par 4s to win the match.

Following are results of first flight matches:

First Round

Tommy Cochran defeated R. D. Lee, 5 and 4; Ed Stewart defeated Frank LeBus, 5 and 4; I. R. Sheldon defeated Roscoe Davis, 2 and 1; M. T. Johnson defeated L. D. (Chick) Nolen, 3 and 1; H. A. Schaefer defeated Paul Harding, 4 and 3; C. R. Pope defeated H. N. Beevers, 5 and 4; E. P. Bass defeated J. L. Mayfield, 1 up; Dudley Golding defeated E. C. Whatley, 7 and 6; Joe Greenwood defeated H. F. Weldon, 2 up; Gus Moreland defeated J. D. Bright, 2 up; Stayton Bonner defeated John Marriott, 4 and 3; L. T. Burns defeated Budley Raines, 2 and 1; Jack Hale defeated R. A. King, 1 up, 20 holes; E. W. Marriott defeated T. P. Jamieson, 4 and 2; Charles Keirsey defeated L. S. Reid, 2 up; Dennis Lavender defeated R. E. Alexander, 5 and 4.

Second Round

Burns defeated Cochran, 5 and 4; Stewart defeated Sheldon, 2 up; Hale defeated Johnson, 1 up; Pope defeated Schaefer, 2 and 1; Marriott defeated Greenwood, 1 up; Golding defeated Bass, 1 up; Moreland defeated Keirsey, 3 and 1; Lavender defeated Bonner, 2 and 1.

Raines Defeats Lee

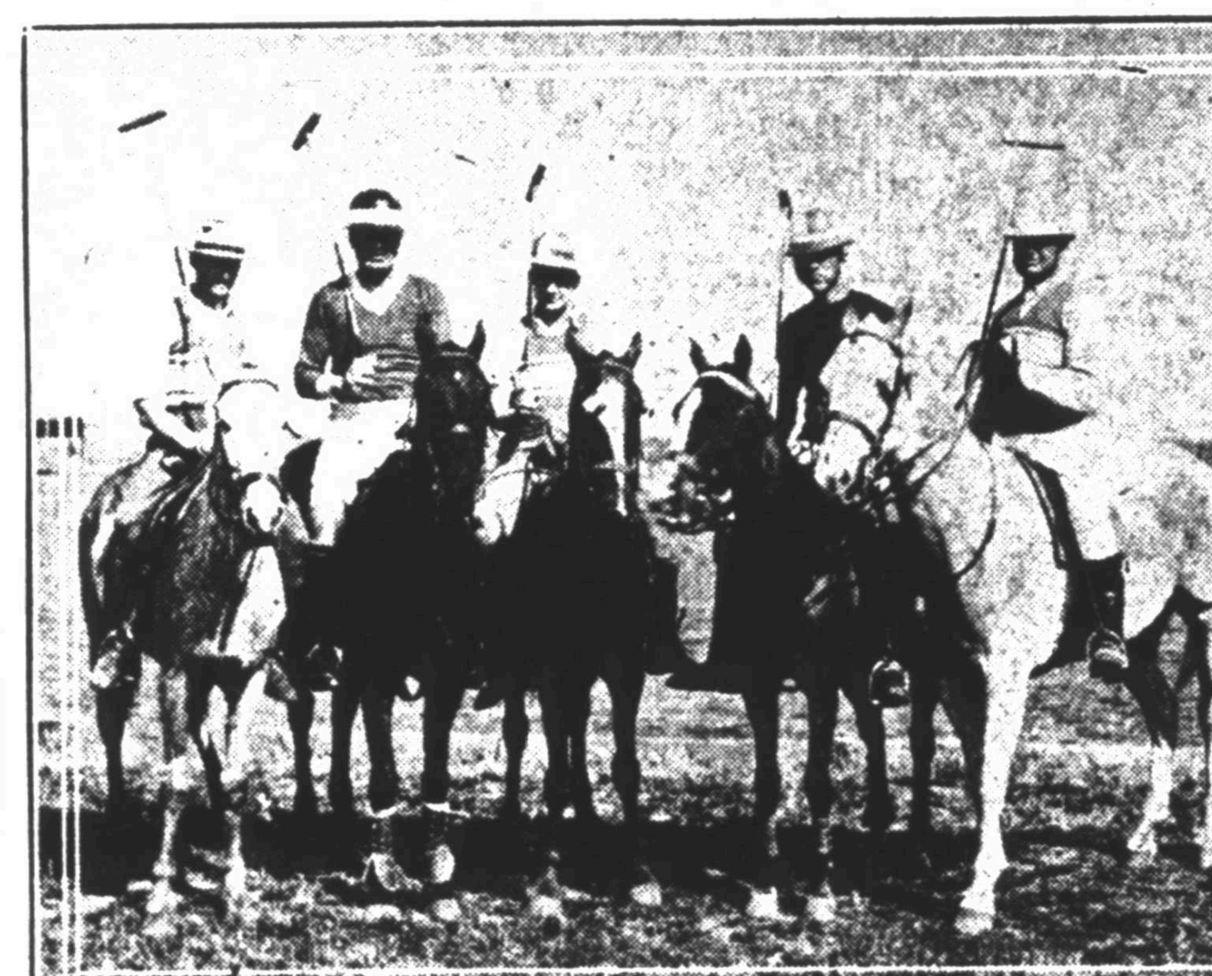
They Win More Honors in 'Most Thrilling Sport'



Further honors have been won by the Wichita Falls polo team. Participating in a tournament recently at Fort Reno, in which foremost poloists of the Southwest were entered, the Wichita Falls team emerged victor, defeating the Ponca City four in the finals. The score was 10 to 5, and Ponca City was given a handicap of two goals.

Members of the Wichita Falls team, left to right: John Barnard, C. H. Featherstone, Walter Nelson, Horrace Robbins and John Fastnow, also included Jim Minnick, who is not in the above picture. Team and individual trophies were won by Wichita Falls adherents of "the most thrilling sport," in their triumphs at Fort Reno.

COYOTES TAKE LAWTON JAUNT

Pack Crippled for Clash Today With Sooners

By GORDON FULCHER

After almost a month of preliminary training the Wichita Falls high school Coyotes play their first football game of the season this afternoon with Lawton high school at Lawton, Okla.

The sick and injured list of the Coyotes carries four of the best prospects on the squad. The are Kenneth Mills, all-district fullback last year; Dale Davis, star halfback; Jack West, first-string tackle, and Jack Carstarphen, a promising young end.

The team, should, however, be able to put up a good game against the Oklahomans despite their crippled condition, in view of the wealth of material out and the long training session that it has had.

Line Seems Weak

So far the weakest spot in Coach Bud McCallum's aggregation is the line. The forward wall is made up of husky youngsters, but handicapped by the lack of experience. The backfield which will start today's game is made up chiefly of lettermen, though the hard line plunges of Mills takes considerable strength from it.

There will be plenty of reserve material on hand and Coach McCallum asserted Thursday night that he intended to give as many of them as possible a chance to get into the contest this afternoon.

Monk Hodgkiss, who is showing up exceptionally well at center, is almost sure to share duty with Tom Beaty before the game is very far advanced.

Newcomers to Play

L. Carr, a flashy half from Waurika, Okla., who has recently joined the pack; Morris Lee, quarterback; Ed Bell, end; John Harrell, guard, and Harlan Ray, half, will also see considerable service today, the Coyote coaches said.

The team will leave Wichita Falls at 8 o'clock this morning, traveling in automobiles, and will return Friday night after the game. Thirty-eight players are scheduled to make the trip. The probable starting line-up is as follows: Scott, left end; Holden, left tackle; Jud Bell, left guard; Beaty, center; Dixon, right guard; R. Saye, right tackle; Bains, right end; Black, left half; Hambrick, right half; Powell, fullback; Elliott, quarterback.

DAILY DOPE

By LARRY DAILEY

THE INVITATION tournament of the Wichita Falls Golf and Country club is a fixture in important state golfing events. This was apparent yesterday after the second day in the first annual event of the local club. The class of golf and the manner in which the tournament now in progress is conducted assures its permanent place as an important affair in Texas links events. This first tournament has attracted a very representative and excellent out-of-town entry, all of whom are highly pleased with the condition of the course, the facilities of the clubhouse, and the good fellowship emanating therefrom, and when they pass the word around that one can play as good golf with as good fellows in Wichita Falls as elsewhere, the results will be a greatly increased interest.

◆ ◆ ◆

PLANS FOR AN even more ambitious tournament next year than this one are in a tentative state. While they are indefinite now, of course it may be said that the Wichita Falls tournament next season will equal any in the southwest in attractiveness in every respect.

◆ ◆ ◆

I think a great deal of the success of this first tourney is due to the officials and members of the club. I have "covered" many golf tournaments and confess that at some of them the spirit of good fellowship and sportsmanship, which are the essence of the game, was nothing to write pieces in the paper about. But out at the Golf and Country club here they make you feel that you are welcome.

◆ ◆ ◆

PRESIDENT E. W. Marriott, a great golfer and a great host; J. D. "Dad" Bright, always looking around to help a visitor feel at home; the genial, witty Judge H. F. Weldon; the Robbins, Horrace and Walter; L. T. (Bobby) Burns, another genius in combining skill on the course with hospitality in the clubhouse; Stayton Bonner, good golfer, good loser and good fellow—oh, there are a host of them to whom credit is due for "putting over" the tournament.

◆ ◆ ◆

I'M ADDING a meed and a big one, of praise for Bill Strachan, the club professional and A. A. (Dick) Dickerson, the manager. Under Bill's direction the tournament has gone off without a hitch. He has handled the multiplicity of duties connected with that job, with an efficiency and smiling geniality that has endeared him to every golfer and gallery follower. Dickson is not a coldly mathematical machine, as I have found some of these managers. He's a sportsman himself, who finds time from his many and arduous duties of handling business affairs of the club to mingle with members and guests. They like and respect him a lot for it, too. Human contact, warm-blooded friendliness, that's the thing that makes for success in a golf tournament. Hence, it is reiterated, the gentlemen from other towns are going to pass the word around when they leave here that "a good time was had by all."

A'S GAIN GAME AS YANKS LOSE

Faber Reduces Yanks' Lead To One Game

CHICAGO, Sept. 20. (AP)—The margin of leadership over the Athletics was reduced to one game here today when the White Sox nosed out the champions by 4 to 3 in 12 innings after the Mackmen had won from Detroit by 6 to 1.

Urban Faber, the veteran spitballer and Yankee jinx extraordinary, went the route for the home team, giving the champions only eight hits and three scattered runs. He thus won his fourth victory over the House of Huggins this season, and in winning it continued Babe Ruth's batting slump for one additional day. The Babe got nothing in five attempts, while Gehrig got one out of three. Score:

GIANTS, CARDS SPLIT 2 GAMES

Harper Hits Three Homers In First Contest

POLO GROUNDS, NEW YORK, Sept. 20. (AP)—Big Frank Hogan's, stepping into his role like the best of dime novel heroes, saved what little remains of the New York Giants pennant hopes today, just as it seemed the St. Louis Cardinals were about to dash off with a double victory and all but clinch the National league flag on the spot.

With two out and the bases filled in the eighth inning of the second game, Hogan, the herculean catcher of the McGraw clan, smashed one of old Pete Alexander's curves into the left field stands for a home run. This resounding wallop enabled the Giants to come from behind in spectacular fashion to win the second game, 7 to 4, after the Cardinals had bombarded Larry Benton and captured the first game, 8 to 5, chiefly through a trio of home run drives by George Harper.

A crowd of close to 50,000 fans, on hand at the start of this crucial conflict, saw Hogan deliver the cleanup clout that kept the Cardinals from jumping into a four game lead that would just about have settled the pennant tussle. As it was, by dividing the day's spoils in two bitterly contested games, the St. Louis club kept a lead of two games over the Giants. The rivals meet again Saturday, but with only nine games remaining for each club it appeared tonight anything but a promising chase for the fighting young men of McGraw.

Defeat in the second game was a heart breaker for the old campaigner Alexander, who was outpitching his youthful rival, Carl Hubbell, and seemingly headed for victory until a crack in the Cardinals' defense paved the way for the big Giant rally in the eighth. First game. Score:

The second baseman will be the subject of tomorrow's article.)

(These figures include all games played up to and including Thursday, Sept. 6, 1928).

By LOUIS A. DOUGHER

NEW YORK, Sept. 20. (US)—Buster Lou Gehrig, the Yankees' first sacker, stands out prominently among those guardians of the initial gate who may take part in the approaching world series of 1928.

Despite his size, he covers plenty of ground. He is really fast on his feet for a big man. He also has a fine fighting spirit, something of value in a struggle for the blue ribbon title of the diamond.

It is at the bat that the Yankee looks most formidable of them all. He is the second hardest batsman in the American league at this writing, with a mark of .376, and he has driven in 126 runs, topping all the first sackers for efficiency in that line.

There is little comparison between Gehrig and young Jimmy Foxx of the A's. The latter is a youngster of real promise but he is no first baseman. He is a hard, timely batsman, and, if kept at the position, may develop into a good firstsacker in a few years.

Stars in National

The National league offers some high-class first basemen. Jimmy Bottomley of the Cardinals, is the class of the league, though Bill Terry of the Giants, and George Grantham of the Pirates, are not so far behind him.

The St. Louis club has a smooth-working infield and Bottomley aids greatly by his sureness on taking throws—high, low or wide. They're all alike to him. He has been handicapped this season by illness, yet his hitting mark of .338 is most respectable.

Like Bottomley, Grantham has been out of the game because of illness and injuries, yet he is hitting for .337 and is expected to be in good condition if called upon to appear in the world series. He is a cat on his feet, and has a fine arm and doesn't blow up in the pinches.

Terry, the Giants' veteran, is one of those dependable gents all managers like to have around. He may not be as flashy as Bottomley or Grantham, but he is good to lean upon in tough spots. He has a way of coming through in the pinches.

Reds Have Two Vets

The Cincinnati Reds have two former New York heroes. George Kelly from the Giants and Wally Pipp from the Yankees. They are skilled veterans but hardly up to the caliber of the first three named.

Charlie Grimm of the Chicago Cubs, knows all the ins and outs of first-base play, but his hitting is not as formidable as it might be. As a fielder he is as good as the others and is a peppery player who heartens his team at all times.

Looking over the accompanying dope, one is tempted to say that there is small difference between the leagues as the world series approaches. The younger league is sure to be represented by either New York or Philadelphia, but there are five teams battling in the older organization.

Gehrig has been through a world series tumult before now. So have Bottomley, Grantham, Terry, Pipp and Kelly. Only Jimmy Foxx is lacking this experience. Opposing the A's, any one of the National league teams would have the advantage. Opposing the Yanks, it would be different. Indeed, Gehrig's terrific hitting would swing the balance in favor of the American league entry.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Sept. 19. (UP)—Manager Nemo Leibold of the Columbus Senators signed a contract today to manage the Columbus team for another year. The signing of the contract ended rumors that officials of the Cincinnati Reds, owners of the Columbus team, had decided not to retain him.

BARONS BEAT CHICKS, 10 TO 4

Roy Pitches Birmingham to Second Victory

BIRMINGHAM, Sept. 20. (AP)—Luther Roy pitched the Birmingham Barons to their second consecutive victory over Memphis in the playoff for the Southern association championship today, the Chicks coming out on the short end of a 10 to 4 count. It was Roy's sixteenth consecutive victory of the season on the home lot.

The Bat of Elliott "Sandy" Bigelow again was active in aiding the Barons to pile up their impressive margin of victory. The Martin loop's leading hitter turned out three doubles and a home run although he was allowed but three bases on the latter because of ground rules.

The Chicks used three pitchers, Griffin, Shepherd and Piercy in a vain effort to stem the tide of hits flowing from the Barons' bats. Score:

A Black Eye

A black eye, to a person who has not a sense of humor, is an unfortunate affliction, and is apt to be a subject of jest at the hands of friends. The best thing to do under these circumstances is to grin and admit the worst.

Doctors have termed this condition "ecchymosis palpebrae," which means a discoloration of the skin of the eyelids by a bruise, which allows the escape of blood from the small blood vessels into the tissues of the eyelids.

The tissues about the eye are particularly susceptible to bruising, since they are very soft and have hard bones of the cheek and the ridge bone of the eye socket just beneath. Anything that strikes this area crushes the flesh and causes a severe bruise. Individuals having high cheek bones are more apt to receive a black eye from a blow than those without the prominent bony ridge formation.

A black eye usually requires from one to two weeks for the absorption of most of the blood, and usually some discoloration remains from three weeks to a month longer, but there is much difference between individuals. Those having a good circulation do not suffer much from puffiness and the discoloration does not last long. Others, with poorer circulations, may have badly swollen eyelids that remain discolored for a much longer time.

When you are first struck in the eye by the "doorknob" or "golf ball," it is advisable to apply cold compresses immediately and continue to do so for at least an hour. Ice water is the most satisfactory, since it will greatly retard the flow of blood into the tissues. The good old-fashioned remedy of applying raw steak to the eye had its virtue largely in the fact that it was cool and moist.

After two or three days, when all danger of increasing the hemorrhage of the blood under the skin is over, you may begin a gentle massage about the eye to assist in the absorption of the blood. Warm applications and gently rubbing in cold cream are also helpful. I do not advise puncturing the skin to drain away the blood unless the case is very severe, and then it should be performed by a doctor, as otherwise a serious infection might result.

If you are a lady, and do not wish your husband to be accused of beating you up, you can apply a flesh-colored theatrical makeup stick to the bruised eye. When this is powdered it will almost completely hide the discoloration. You can buy this theatrical preparation at almost any drug store. If you are a man, the best thing to do is to broadly grin and say, "You should have seen the other fellow."

Questions and Answers

Question—Mrs. W. R. writes: "Three years ago my little girl had infantile paralysis, which left her right arm quite useless. She can, with a struggle, move some of the fingers. A specialist wants to operate and graft muscle into the arm. I would like your advise about this."

Answer—Your child's arm can be developed through proper treatments with electro-therapy. Certain currents can be applied to the arm muscles which will bring about a normal development. She has all of the muscle cells which are necessary to move the arm if they are only developed. This treatment is far superior to any surgical attempt to graft on another muscle.

Question—Miss D. M. writes: "I have been drinking milk to gain weight, a pint for breakfast, a pint at 10 o'clock, at 3 o'clock and before retiring. Have been drinking it this way for two months, but do not seem to gain much. Do I drink enough? Do I drink it at the right hours?"

Answer—If you take your milk along with other foods you will only bring on some disorder because of this over-feeding. If you want to try to gain weight through taking the milk diet it is necessary to give up all other foods. Then take a glass of milk every half hour during the day, which will give you about six quarts daily. If you can drink this much you are bound to gain weight, but it might not be good weight, and may leave you after you have stopped taking the milk as fast as you put it on during the milk diet.

"Louise Fazenda" is Louise Fazenda's real name. She was born on a farm near Lafayette, Ind. Her father ran the general store. Louise is now one of the outstanding custard-pie throwers of Hollywood.

Louise Fazenda

The Fazendas moved to Los Angeles while Louise was still in her pig-tail days. About this time Louise's comic bent began asserting itself, and she was kicked out of high school one day when caught doing an impersonation of the teacher. She was afraid to go home with the sad news, so she boarded a street car and rode out to Hollywood. Her screen career from then on is too well known to mention.

"This favorite joke of mine," Miss Fazenda told me, "actually happened right here in Hollywood a while back. I was at a dinner party at the house of a well-known director. The director's nephew, a timid, retiring sort of a fellow, was there on a visit.

"We were introduced, and after a brief and awkward silence he ventured,

"'I understand, Miss Fazenda,' he said, 'that you originally came from the Middle West?'

"'Yes, from Indiana.' Then I added, 'Hoosier girl!'

"He started and flushed deeply. 'Why-er-really,' he stammered, 'I-I don't know—that is, I haven't quite decided yet!'"

NEW YORK COTTON

NEW YORK, Sept. 20. (AP)—Reports of crop damage by the recent eastern belt storm and of smaller offerings from the South, were reflected in advances from an opening decline in the cotton market today. December sold up from 17.54 to 17.78 or 11 points net higher but lost a good part of the gain, closing at 17.68, under a renewal of southern selling and realizing. The general market closed barely steady, net 4 points lower to 5 points higher.

The market opened steady at a decline of 5 to 12 points and showed net losses of about 10 to 16 points in early trading under southern selling and liquidation, while there may have been some selling on better weather reports. October eased off to 17.52 and March to 17.49 before the decline was checked, but hedging tapered off after the first hour and rather a steadier undertone developed during the afternoon on talk of a more active mill demand for forward shipment, combined with the reports that the tropical storm had caused heavy damage to cotton in parts of Georgia and the Carolinas. There was also some bullish comment on the comparatively low temperatures shown in central belt sections on the advance which extended to 17.77 for October and 17.73 for March, or about 9 to 13 points net higher. The demand which was attributed partly to the trade, but more largely to covering, tapered off around these figures, however, and the market lost 8 or 10 points of its gains in late trading.

There was extensive selling of October contracts by trade interests during the day, believed to be in liquidation of long accounts and the relatively easy ruling of the near month, had rather an unsettling effect on the later deliveries. October closed 4 points under December compared with a premium of 1 point at the close previous day.

NEW ORLEANS COTTON

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 20. (AP)—Reports of considerable damage to crops in the Atlantic coast states by the tropical hurricane caused cotton prices to rally in late trading here today after an earlier decline and final prices showed gains of 4 to 9 points.

The market advanced 6 to 9 points soon after the opening in sympathy with Liverpool cables, declined 16 to 17 points, rallied 23 to 24 points and at the end lost 7 to 9 points on realizing.

Liverpool was 2 to 4 points better than due and first trades here were 3 to 7 points up and quickly advanced to 16.96 for October, 17.10 for December and 17.10 for January, 6 to 9 points above the previous close.

Hedge selling was attracted and prices declined 16 to 17 points from the highs. The drop was aided also by speculative selling by ring traders based on prospects for favorable weather and offerings of spots at a lower basis in interior markets.

After midsession the market became firmer and trading was more active on reports of cotton damage in the eastern belt by the storm. The demand, particularly from shorts covering, carried October to 17.04, December to 17.17 and January to 17.16, 23 to 24 points up from the lows and 16 to 17 points above the previous close.

In final trading some realizing and straddle selling caused prices to ease off 7 to 9 points from the highs and the close was steady with October at 16.96, December and January at 17.09.

General Motors Sustains Stock Market Despite Calling of Loans

By BROADAN WALL
Universal Service Financial Expert

NEW YORK, Sept. 20.—General Motors sustained the stock market today in the face of calling of $30,000,000 more loans and resulting advance in the call rate from renewal of 7½ to 9 per cent. Motors was taken at a steadily advancing price as orders poured in from here and abroad so that it closed at the new high record price of 212¼ for a gain of 4½ points for the day.

A few specialties here and there scored good gains but Can, Steel and other standard industrials failed to follow the gain in Motors but received support and held to a narrow price range throughout.

The strength in motors not alone offset worry about further increase in brokers' loans and the tighter money that has resulted from the mid-September operations, but also counteracted the effect of fear that the rediscount rate might be raised. Rails, oils and coppers were quieter and a shade lower. Timidity of many traders in advance of the reserve bank meeting kept trading down to the 4,000,000 share level.

Sloan to Sail

President Sloan of General Motors could not have picked a better time to go abroad insofar as those interested in the market are concerned. As the outstanding figure in the motor industry, he will be queried before sailing. From the character of buying in the stock, it is evident that he is expected to express keen satisfaction with current business and the outlook.

Not alone were traders here jumping into Motors heavily but there was strong evidence that Durant brokers were getting a substantial amount of business from abroad. Should Mr. Sloan prove as optimistic as thought, the last shadow of doubt concerning the cutting of a melon at the November meeting of directors will be dispelled.

Other automobile stocks benefited from the performance of General Motors, with increased demand exhibited for Yellow Truck. The recent additional purchase of Yellow preferred stock by General Motors, it was thought, would give basis for Mr. Sloan to touch upon the plans of his corporation for expanding in the truck and bus field.

There was further absorption of Westinghouse evidenced as the deal with Baldwin is believed to be near consummation. Westinghouse is not the only company the Baldwin interests want to put their organization in a place of industrial leadership as they desire. It is pointed out in this connection that Baldwin would benefit from taking in such companies as Steel Foundries and Pressed Steel Car.

Auto Lite met good buying coincident with further reports of increasing business that indicated more favorable dividend action eventually. Savage became more prominent in the afternoon, also, as group work was resumed following the taking up of a block of 10,000 shares of stock that has been hanging over the market. Savage business is reported running at a new high post-war rate.

Metals Quiet

Skyrocketing of American Zinc was reputed to be covering of shorts but it was learned that some of those active in the stock were planning to pass on their holdings. Other metal shares were quiet, but steady, with the best absorption evidenced in Anaconda. Sinclair added more than a point to its gain while other oils remained dull. There were further reports of a new pool being formed to work in Sinclair preparatory to a merger with other companies and change in name. Briggs climbed to a new high with the pool therein continuing aggressive operations under the stimulus of expected good news from General Motors.

The increase of $85,000,000 in brokers loans, while larger than generally expected, is not likely to exert material influence as the rediscount rate was left unchanged. Loans now, however, are very close to the peak figure and it will not be long before western bankers who were most responsible for the corrective measures of the reserve bank again take action if the volume of money used in stock speculation continues to expand.

Bankers believe that further loans may be called tomorrow and that the call rate will remain high over the week-end. Thereafter a short period of comparative ease should be enjoyed prior to preparations for the Oct. 1 dividend and interest disbursements.

MIDWESTERN REVIEW

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Sept. 20. (AP)—(United States Department of Agriculture.)—Liberal receipts of sheep around the 11-market circuit failed to slow up the fat lamb trade; packers displayed an active interest in fat lambs at steady to 25 cents higher prices; some strength also was apparent on aged stock; range lambs in Chicago reached $14.15 while at Kansas City $13.90 was paid; the supply approximated 119,000 against 94,419 a week ago and 71,879 the same day last year.

Grain

CHICAGO REVIEW

By THOMAS TEMPLE HOYNE

CHICAGO, Sept. 20. (US) — Grains continued the slow process of building up strength today and all of the futures closed higher with rye taking the lead. The markets looked strong at the end, but the public and many professionals with bullish proclivities are still waiting for more convincing evidence before buying for a pre-election bull market.

At the end wheat was ⅜c to ½c higher; corn was up ½c to 1⅜c; oats were ⅛c to ⅜c better; rye was up ½c to 2⅛c.

The steady accumulation of wheat is apparently going on without interruption. On Wednesday the open interest increased more than 1,000,000 bushels and is now only a shade under 20,000,000 bushels.

How important in the market sense this increase is should be recognized. The wheat it represents has been bought at or below the present level. As the market rises, therefore, it is apt to work more and more into an oversold position as the losses of shorts grow on paper.

It may be some time yet before the market really gets under way on the upside. Small declines may temporarily shake the confidence of weak longs and inspire bears to greater efforts, but to this writer it looks as if any protracted downward movement is unlikely at present.

Any increase in outside buying, which seems likely to set in if the market begins to go forward more rapidly, should be regarded as a symptom of developing strength.

The fluctuations at present are so narrow that the scalping trade is greatly reduced and this gives the impression that the general trade is very light. But the fact that the open interest is constantly growing larger shows that the kind of transactions that count most in laying the foundation for an upturn are not at all light. These purchases stick in distinction to the buying of scalpers.

MARKET REVIEW

R. O. Harvey & Co., rooms 630-34 Harvey-Snider building, received the following Thursday on cotton, grain and stocks from their New York and Chicago connections:

Closing Stock Letter

NEW YORK, Sept. 20.—In the early part of today's session it appeared as if leaders on the bull side were disposed to ignore tighter money conditions, but when the banks again called loans in large volume and the supply dwindled, buying became less aggressive. When in the afternoon the call rate went to nine per cent it looked as if groups operating on the long side were stepping away from the market for the time being in order to better gauge the effect of high money upon the general trading sentiment. While nine per cent money did not break the market it did in most directions put an end tot aggressive efforts to advance prices and as the result an irregular decline occurred. Volume, however, did not increase and it was difficult to say that much liquidation was coming in. The leading industrials like General Motors and U. S. Steel were relatively steady and as a matter of record, General Motors was put to a new high around midday, a demonstration which in some quarters was said to mark the beginning of an aggressive advance in anticipation of favorable developments at the November meeting of the board of directors. Packard also developed strength, inspired in part by reports of a successful test by the company of an oil burning Diesel type motor for airplanes. Sinclair Oil was turned over in huge volume in the afternoon, the stock managing to cross 30. Toward the end of the session it was reported nine per cent money was attracting a large supply of funds. Total sales 4,-098,000.

Cotton

NEW YORK, Sept. 20.—Cotton has ruled very steady to this writing, due chiefly to absence of pressure of consequence from the South and scattered covering because of the price and an idea that the next government may be bullish. Buying by Wall street and the West was a feature in the afternoon around 17.75 for December and local traders bought on the weather details showing minimum temperatures in the 40's in parts of the northern section of the belt. Sentiment has become less bearish and unless hedge selling is renewed in volume the market may not react downward materially from present levels.

Grain

CHICAGO, Sept. 20.—Wheat prices averaged higher as a result of strength and on a lack of pressure early, but around $1.15 for December. There was plenty for sale and with a light trade the upturn was checked with a reaction later. Selling against offers was a factor in checking the bulge. Despite large receipts in the American and Canadian northwest hedging pressure was not very heavy while outside interest was very light in some parts of American northwest farmers were said to be storing 80 per cent of wheat, they delivered at interior points. Liverpool closed ⅛ to 1c higher, with some buying on dry weather in Australia. Rains were forecast for that country, however, and there were showers in Argentine. Export demand remains slow, with sales of 250,000 bushels in all positions.

Corn averaged higher, with September leading. Shorts were persistent buyers in small lots. But on bulge there appeared to be plenty for sale. Spot basis was steady and country offerings to arrive light. Official reports showed that 66 per cent of Nebraska, 58 per cent of Iowa, 75 to 100 per cent of Kansas and 58 to 68 per cent of Indiana corn was safe from frost. Latter is expected tonight in western Nebraska and the Dakotas if sky clears. Trade in deferred deliveries was light.

Oats averaged higher on a fair class of buying. But best figures were not maintained due to profit taking.

Rye higher, with commission houses fair buyers.

This was a sharp drop from the preceding week when 26 wells were completed having total daily potential yield of 260,910 barrels, yet still was more than 25,-000 barrels in excess of the total daily potential output of 11 producers completed during the week ending Sept. 1.

TAX ON TRUCK PROFITS URGED

Senator Wirtz to Support Levy Measure

Special to The Record News.

AUSTIN, Sept. 20.—Senator A. J. Wirtz of Seguin has announced he will support a measure levying a two per cent gross receipts tax on operation of commercial freight trucks and passenger buses over Texas highways.

"This measure would put some of the burden of highway building and maintenance on those who use the public highways for profit, and I consider it a just and reasonable measure," Senator Wirtz declared.

He declared the highways "constitute the principal capital of many of these people engaged in commercial hauling by truck."

The gasoline tax, he declared, does not prorate the burden equally, since private owners of cars must pay the rate for their own use of the highways as the individuals and companies engaged in the business of hauling for profit.

A two per cent gross receipts tax would be in line with many taxes now levied in which the resources of the state are involved, such as the oil and sulphur taxes, he declared.

Senator Wirtz pointed out the measure, being a revenue-producing bill, will have to originate in the house, rather than the senate, but he pledged his support of the measure if it reaches the senate.

This bill would bring in considerable revenues, he said. After it was determined what this revenue would amount to, then the legislature could decide whether to increase the gasoline sales tax, which applies equally on the farmer and private car owner.

Legislation to curb the use of highways in such manner as to damage or destroy them, which Senator Wirtz said was common on the part of the truckers of cotton and other heavy commodities, was suggested by the senator

G. A. R. Selects New Chieftain

DENVER, Colo., Sept. 20. (UP)—John Rees, Broken Bow, Neb., was elected commander-in-chief of the Grand Army of the Republic here late today.

Rees' victory over Samuel P. Town, Philadelphia, came as a surprise to observers of the convention. Town appeared certain of the post up to the time of the election.

Belief that the west and middle west should be given more recognition in the higher councils of the organization possibly accounted for the shift in Rees' favor.

Portland, Maine, was picked for the 1929 encampment of the G. A. R. over Sacramento, Calif., by a vote of 366 to 250.

James E. Jewell of Fort Morgan, Colo., was named senior vice commander.

Rees received 421 votes, Samuel P. Town of Philadelphia 140, and R. H. McWhorter of Coffeyville, Kan., 38. The election of Rees then was made unanimous.

H. J. Kearney of New York was elected junior vice commander, receiving 323 votes to 271 for Jacob C. Secret of Cincinnati, Ohio.

ROSS CAPTURED BY OFFICERS

Escaped Prisoner Back In Wichita Jail

Dewey Ross, one of the six prisoners in the Tom Shook jail break here several weeks ago, was captured in For Worth Thursday and returned to Wichita Falls without resistance.

Ross, whose home is in Fort Worth, was a federal prisoner in the county jail when he escaped. Fort Worth officers watched for him. Finally he returned to his home, and at 1:20 o'clock Thursday afternoon he surrendered to them.

The sheriff's office here was notified, and Charlie Gant, deputy sheriff, immediately went to Fort Worth. Gant left here at 4 o'clock and was back in the city with his prisoner shortly before midnight.

Tale of Horror In Storm Area

homeless, and a list of injured and sick running into the thousands.

Added to this was the toll of about 300 deaths taken by the storm in Porto Rico, about 600 estimated dead on the French Island of Guadeloupe, at least four dead in the Carolinas, and three or four fatalities due to the wind gale which whipped the Atlantic coast from Norfolk to Atlantic City all day yesterday.

In a telegraph report to national headquarters here, Dr. A. T. Eide, a Red Cross worker, declared that the devastated town of Pahokee in the Lake Okeechobee section had asked for military aid to quell the rioting of half-starved negroes who were among the 2,500 inhabitants of that little town of 3,000 souls rendered penniless by the storm. About 600 residents, he said, were being housed in the local school building.

Bodies in Heaps

As the result of a survey along the east side of the lake from Okeechobee City to the Miami Locks, Dr. Eide estimated that there are 250 dead in that section alone, the bodies of 47 having been piled in a heap at one point on the road. He added that the loss of life below Miami Locks, around Kramers Island, could only be guessed at and might total several hundred.

The area around West Palm Beach, where the hurricane first vented its destructive wrath as it blew in from the Caribbean, took on the appearance of a beleaguered country today as refugee camps, tent colonies and emegrency hospitals were being operated to care for the sick and wounded.

Refugees Aided

A. L. Schafer, Red Cross director of disaster relief, reported to headquarters here that 500 people were being cared for in a refugee camp at Miami, 1,000 at the Pompano race track, while thousands of others were being housed in 12 refugee centers established in the city of West Palm Beach and 18 others within the county limits.

The fear of pestilence was revealed by Schafer who told of "increasingly serious" sanitary conditions in the western half of Palm Beach county where partially decomposed bodies were constantly coming to the surface of Lake Okeechobee. In many cases the dead were being buried immediately without identification to guard against a possible epidemic of communicable diseases.

Rescue crews were reported evacuated the survivors from the towns and cities along the lake front to the refugee camps at Miami and other places. It became necessary to establish a new negro cemetery about 16 miles west of Loxahatchie to provide burial places for the hurricane victims.

Rapid progress was also reported from Porto Rico where the task of relief has been taken over for the most part by American relief agencies. Two motor caravans of food supplies today were pushing their way inland to the stricken inhabitants of small towns and cities a great portion of whom have been without nourishment practically since the hurricane swept through there a week ago.

More Than 300 Circus Tickets Given In "Scrambled" Animal Puzzle

"Jeanie," the baby elephant of the 101 Ranch Wild West herd, dreamed that she and five other animals (all of different species) became "scrambled." For instance, she had her own head and forelegs, another animal's body and a third animal's hind legs.

Six outline pictures will be printed of six such "scrambled" animals. Children pasting the parts of the six pictures properly together; that is, as the animals appear in real life, will be given tickets to the 101 Ranch show, according to the following rules:

Any boy or girl 10 years of age or under can enter the contest. Only one set of pictures to be entered in contest from each child. Contestants will be judged by the following: First, animals must be correct; second neatness; third, attractiveness. Be sure to keep all six of the pictures as they appear in this newspaper, then when all of them are printed, cut them up and properly arrange them as they should be.

List of prizes follow:

Capital prize, six adult reserved seat tickets. Second prize, three adult reserved seat tickets. Third prize, two adult reserved seat tickets. Three hundred children's tickets (for children 10 years of age or under), one to each kiddie.

By The Record News Critic.

The second of the all-talking motion pictures, "The Terror," is the most thrilling shock of all mystery plays since "The Monster."

This notable show, which will formally open at the Strand theater Friday, was previewed by a select group of Wichitans and pronounced great amusement at the midnight matinee Thursday. The editor of one of the newspapers in the city said that he felt so spooky after the show that he was afraid he would have to look under the bed when he got home.

A far better mystery play than "The Monster," "The Terror" is its equal in every way in the pure shock it delivers to your nervous system.

Edgar Wallace, the author, started the play at a rather slow rhythm, and took his own sweet time in setting the background for the real action. When the action came, it was with a rush. Things happen, after they start happening, with subway-like speed.

Edward Everett Horton, whose name had appeared in this column before, does far better work than he did in "The Nervous Wreck" on the legitimate stage in a sort of a comedy-boob part that gave him his greatest prominence. May McAvoy registers like a million in the talkies and should be even a greater star in the future than she was in the past.

Louise Fazenda, for years a great actress, makes a fair role into a high spot in the show. Alfred Katman, playing opposite her, comes close to spoiling a good part by putting too much of Alfred and too little acting into his role. Holmes Herbert in an unsympathetic role as Henry Goodman, Alec B. Francis as Dr. Redmayne and a number of others are seen, but Horton, McAvoy and Fazenda carry the show.

For entertainment, "The Terror" is rated high, and is one of the two of its kind (all-talkie movies) in the world. Therefore, it has the advantage of being unusual. The story told is a good mystery story.

Kiwanis Club Presents Wading Pool to City in Ceremony Here

Dedication services for the children's wading pool built at Scotland park by the Kiwanis club were held Thursday evening with Dr. R. H. Peterson in charge of the dedication program.

Dr. Floyd Allan Bash, pastor of the First Christian church, gave the presentation speech, while Roy E. Carter, city commissioner, accepted the pool in behalf of the city. Other numbers on the program were: Three selections by the boys' band of the Lions club; anthem by the Boy Scouts; invocation by the Rev. William D. Bratton, pastor of the Episcopal church.

The wading pool is built of reinforced concrete and is 60 by 20 feet with a four-foot concrete walk surrounded by a dirt walk. A fence is to be built around the pool before it is put into use next summer. At that time an instructor will have charge of it.

The depth is graduated and ranges from 18 inches to three feet. Approximate cost of the pool is $1,000. It was built in Scotland park in order to reach more children in need of such recreation.

Preceding the dedication services, children from the Day nursery enjoyed a party about the pool.

Many Wichitans have the opportunity for the first time in history of opening their Wichita Falls telephone books and looking up the names and numbers of their friends in Henrietta.

All the new telephone directories have arrived and they are being distributed as rapidly as possible.

Iowa Park and Burkburnett numbers, which were listed in the last directory, are listed in the new book which is slightly larger than the old one. The Wichita Falls section contains 300 more numbers than the last directory.
