More 'friendly fire'

WASHINGTON — Nearly a quarter of all American soldiers killed in the Persian Gulf War died in accidental attacks by U.S. forces — mostly during the climactic 100-hour land battle in the Iraqi desert, the Pentagon said Tuesday. The figures of 35 soldiers killed and 72 wounded by friendly fire from U.S. forces are far higher than previously acknowledged by the military./5A

9-Mile emergency

OSWEGO, N.Y. — A warning system in the control room of a nuclear power plant failed Tuesday when it lost power, prompting the second highest emergency declaration under federal guidelines. However, the site area emergency declared at the Nine Mile Point 2 power plant required no evacuations of plant workers or local residents, said Robert Burtch, a spokesman for the plant's operator./3A

Smith trial action

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. — The Jupiter woman who said she was raped by William Kennedy Smith has until Friday to say when and why she was last treated by care-givers whose records Smith's attorneys want. The woman's attorneys filed court papers last week to block Smith's attorneys' efforts to examine records from pharmacists, hospitals and physicians, including the woman's gynecologist, obstetrician and dentist. /5A

FDR's son dies

NEWPORT BEACH, Calif. — James Roosevelt, the colorful eldest son of President Franklin D. Roosevelt and head of a Social Security lobby that critics said exploited his father's legacy, died Tuesday at the age of 83. Roosevelt died of natural causes at his Newport Beach home. "He died as he lived — peacefully and with dignity," the family said in a statement issued by H. Delano Roosevelt. Roosevelt's career led him from Hollywood to the House of Representatives, and from companies suspected of bootlegging to securities investigations. His personal life also was dramatic: He was married four times, with one divorce marked by his stabbing.

Legislature OKs $2.7 billion tax, fee increase

■ Spending plan wins final approval in the House; Gov. Ann Richards has 20 days to review.

N.Y. Times News Service

AUSTIN — The 72nd Legislature ended an exhausting special session by approving a record $59 billion state budget to be paid for with 30 different tax increases and the creation of a lottery.

But Gov. Ann Richards is expected to summon lawmakers today to return Monday for a second 30-day special session on congressional redistricting and jail-crowding topics.

The $2.7 billion approved Tuesday in tax and fee increases, averaging more than $150 per Texan, will take effect after Richards signs the measure into law. She has 20 days to review it before it automatically becomes law.

■ More on tax bill/2A

"It is one of the smallest tax bills in recent history," Richards said, adding, "This has not been a perfect session, but none of them are."

Taxes were raised for incorporated businesses and anyone who purchases gasoline, concert tickets and motor boats. Fees were increased for college students, bingo players and lawyers, among others.

The money will pay for a reorganized state government, with large sums poured into higher education and public schools — including $106 million on a con-

Reports point to possible hostage deal

■ U.N., Israelis optimistic about sweeping prisoner exchange.

N.Y. Times News Service

JERUSALEM — Optimism grew Tuesday among U.N. and Israeli officials that a deal could be struck soon for a sweeping exchange of Middle East prisoners that would include freedom for the 10 remaining Western hostages in Lebanon.

There were fresh reports from several capitals in the region giving the outlines of possible settlements. One carried by Iran's official press agency said that later this week, Israel might free a Shiite Muslim cleric, Sheik Abdel Karim Obeid, who has been a pivotal captive for the last two years.

Officials in Jerusalem refused to talk publicly about possible solutions that could end the hostage ordeal, and a senior Foreign Ministry official closely involved in the discussions, Yohanan Bein, said the Iranian report "doesn't make very much sense."

While Israeli officials declined to discuss the specifics of a possible deal, newspapers and Israel radio Tuesday outlined a two-stage plan that is suppos-

Six Soviets arrive to view Texas-style 'privatization'

By Melia McEwen
Staff Writer

Six high-ranking Soviet officials, leaders in the privatization of the Soviet Union, are looking to West Texas for pointers in their nation's economic evolution.

Entrepreneurship is high on their agenda, said Jerry Lee Jones, chairman of the Midland College business studies division, in introducing the six to local media and business leaders Tuesday.

Midland College President David E. Daniel said "what we do here is inextricably tied to economic development. (We face) a global economy, increasingly so, and what we do here at Midland College has a global impact."

Fedor Glebovich Burchak, speaking through an interpreter, told the group, "the Soviet Union is undergoing a transformation that requires the study of international activities. Our aim is to draw on foreign expertise to facilitate the sometimes painful transition to a market economy and engage in privatization."

Burchak is vice president of the USSR Federation of Consumer Societies, editor in chief of the independent publication "Business Herald" and Peoples Deputy and Member of the Municipal Executive Committee of the City of Minsk.

"We are prepared to study every experience if it could be beneficial to our transformation," he added. "Also, we'll be happy to tell people about the current processes in the Soviet Union,

Bed-and-breakfast plan clears 1st hurdle

By Debbie Lincecum
Staff Writer

The Midland City Council opened the door to bed and breakfasts in the community Tuesday, narrowly approving on first reading an amendment to the zoning code.

Bed and breakfasts — facilities for overnight lodging of guests in homes — would be allowed in areas throughout the city, but homeowners would be required to secure a special use permit for each one.

Councilmen J.D. Faircloth, Tom Johnston, Buddy Sipes and Michael DeVaughn supported the amendment. It must pass on second reading Aug. 27 before taking effect.

Marilyn Johnson, the local businesswoman who originated the request for bed and breakfasts in the city, said she is very excited by the support, but is eagerly anticipating final approval and establishment of her business.

"It took me four months to get to the proposal," she said. "How it will go from here one I don't know. I'm very grateful to the councilmen who voted for it. I think we need this for the good of Midland."

Johnson and several homeowners have formed "Bed and Breakfast of Midland," which will cooperatively advertise and operate the facilities in the community. She said the amendment, although not exactly what they had sought, was "workable."

DALLAS (AP) — The flow of beer that Dallas Cowboys owner Jerry Jones wanted so desperately to start at Texas Stadium has begun, along with the potshots some fans are throwing his way.

They say Jones is getting rich at their expense now that he can sell beer but they can no longer bring coolers or food into the stadium.

"At $3 a beer, Jerry Jones is getting rich," said one fan attending Monday night's exhibition game between Dallas and the Los Angeles Raiders.

Jones was the driving force behind a referendum to an Irving ordinance that passed Saturday and allows stadium vendors to sell beer and wine during games.

First American Bankshares Inc., a bank holding company with $11 billion in assets and branches from New York to Florida, announced that Clifford was stepping down as chairman. Clifford's law partner, Robert Altman, also resigned from the company.

Clifford and Altman said in a statement they were leaving to protect First American from the negative publicity surrounding foreign-owned BCCI, at the center of what has been called the biggest fraud in banking history. Last month, a New York grand jury announced an in-

Size of the $2.1 billion state tax bill is in eye of beholder

By Karen Potter
N.Y. Times News Service

AUSTIN — A little more than a week ago, Gov. Ann Richards went on television to tell Texans that lawmakers were facing a choice between a lottery and a huge tax bill.

The Legislature heeded her, approved the lottery and the issue now goes to voters on Nov. 5. So the question is: Is the $2.1 billion plan a "huge" tax bill?

It's all a matter of perspective — pocketbook and political.

Republicans, most of whom opposed the tax increase, said it is huge.

"This is not just a big tax bill, it's a huge tax bill," Rep. John Culberson, R-Houston, said during floor debate before the 100-48 House vote.

The lawmakers who voted for the tax bill, most of them Democrats, and Richards said it wasn't as big as it could have been.

"That's all in the eye of the beholder," said Rep. Troy Fraser, R-Big Spring. "If I asked a man on the street if $2.1 billion is a huge tax bill, I think they're going to tell you that it is, especially when they have been misled into thinking that if they instituted all these cuts ... and we implemented the lottery, that there would be no tax bill."

Most of the tax and fee increases will hit consumers as nickle-and-dime matters. As soon as Richards signs the tax bill, the price of a trip to the gas pump will jump by a nickel a gallon.

Tuition goes from $20 to $24 an hour, not this fall but a year from now. Sales tax will begin to be charged on concert tickets and country club dues, but not car washes, which got a last minute tax reprieve.

But Texans won't face the bite of an income tax, or the daily cost of an across-the-board increase in the sales tax rate, now among the nation's highest.

Richards said the tax bill isn't huge — not compared to others the Texas Legislature has approved in the past, and not compared to what lawmakers thought they were facing when they first confronted the state's budget problems in January.

Not, she said, "when you consider that in January of this year, when the Legislature met, all of the headlines were that the taxpayers of Texas were looking at something like a $5 to $6 to $7 billion tax bill, and that we were that far in the hole."

In her pitch to lawmakers reluctant to approve the tax increase, Richards said that the eventual tax bill was only one-third to one-fifth of the size it could have been, had it not been for Comptroller John Sharp's government reorganization plans.

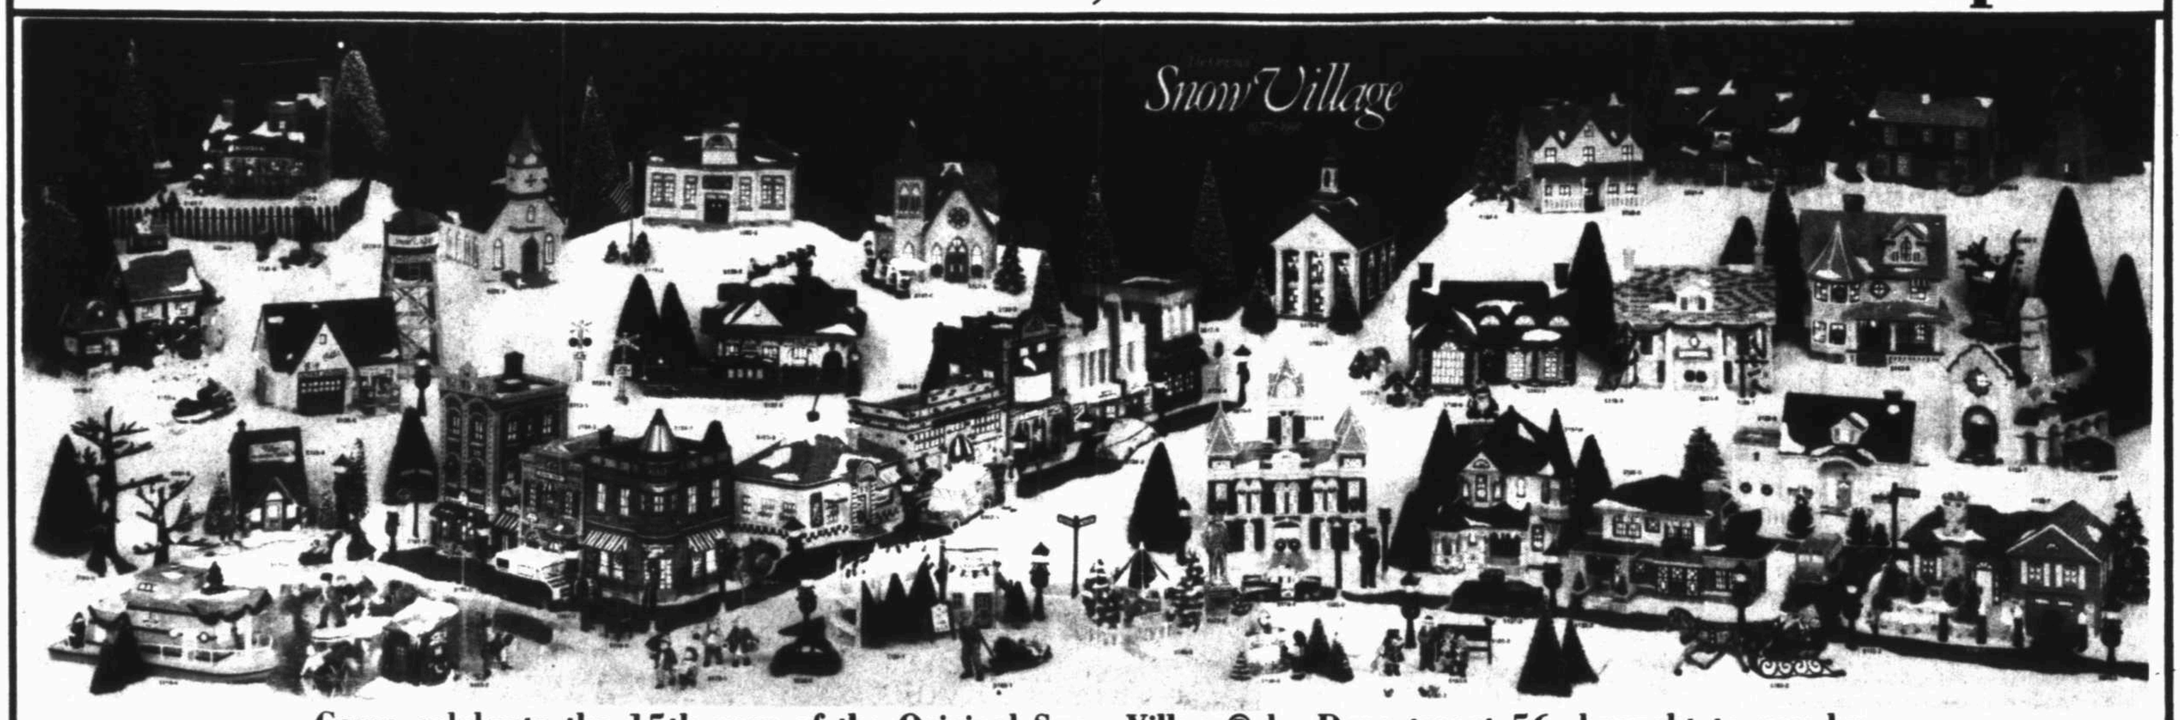

When Richards campaigned for office last year, she said that she foresaw no need of a tax increase. Franchise tax reform, adoption of a lottery, greater government efficiency, plus "natural growth of the economy" would be enough to cover the state's budget needs, she said.

But like other governors before her, Richards came face-to-face with the need for a tax bill. Republican Gov. Bill Clements signed into law a record $5.7 billion tax bill in 1987 during the depths of the state's recession, and in 1990, Clements signed another $500 million tax bill to cover the cost of a school finance law.

"It is one of the smallest tax bills in recent history," Richards told reporters Tuesday. "I must tell you I'm a little impatient with partisan rhetoric. ... If you look at past history, I believe the last bill was at $5 billion and the one before that was something in the similar range, and the fact that we came in with such an enormous deficit and pared it down to this amount is a great relief to everyone."

Not everyone was relieved, however. State Republican Party chairman Fred Meyer declared that the votes on the tax bill and the $59 billion budget should be used against incumbents at election time. The previous two-year state budget was $48 billion.

Swaggart defense draws stern look

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — An attorney defending evangelist Jimmy Swaggart in a $90 million defamation lawsuit drew a stern rebuke from the trial judge Tuesday as he pointedly questioned Swaggart rival Marvin Gorman about his sex life.

Lawyer Wayne Lee's questions drew a grin from Swaggart and audible laughter from the jury box.

Lee first asked Gorman why he had sex with Lynda Savage, a minister's wife Gorman was counseling. Gorman repeated his testimony that he was tempted into intercourse when Savage began kissing him and "grabbed my crotch."

"Didn't you testify that Jane Talbot grabbed you in the crotch?" Lee asked, referring to earlier testimony about another woman who allegedly tempted Gorman.

"I did," Gorman answered.

"How many other women have grabbed your crotch?" asked Lee.

"Only two, other than my wife."

With the jury laughing, Julian Bailes turned to Lee and, in a stern voice, said, "I think you have beat this horse to death. That is enough."

It was Gorman's second day on the witness stand. On Monday he detailed what he said was his only sexual liaison with Savage, denying claims that he had confessed to other sexual dalliances in a 1986 meeting of ministers at Swaggart's home.

In his lawsuit, Gorman accuses Swaggart and others of spreading false rumors about him to ruin his growing television ministry, which later went bankrupt.

In Tuesday morning testimony, Gorman said the rumors of widespread sexual misconduct were bad enough, but the spreading of a story that the devil spoke in his voice during a 1986 exorcism was the worst thing that could happen to him.

Lawyers for Gorman have accused the Rev. Tom Miller, a Swaggart co-defendant, of telling people that the devil spoke in Gorman's voice during an exorcism at an Assemblies of God church in New Orleans. The ceremony involved an unidentified woman and took place about two months after Gorman's acknowledged 1986 confession that he committed adultery with Savage.

"What else can be done to me? Now, I'm the devil," Gorman said when asked by his attorney, Hunter Lundy, how he reacted to the reports.

"There was supposed to be a demon talking (through the woman) in my voice, threatening to destroy all the churches in New Orleans...

Failure prompts nuke alert

OSWEGO, N.Y. (AP) — A power failure knocked out warning lights and other control room instruments at a nuclear energy plant Tuesday, and backup power systems also failed, authorities said. Plant officials declared a site area emergency, the second most serious classification under federal guidelines.

But operators of Nine Mile Point 2 were able shut the reactor down safely.

No radiation was released, no plant workers or local residents were evacuated and no sirens sounded under the site area emergency, said Robert Burtch, spokesman for plant operator Niagara Mohawk Power Corp.

Among the instruments that shut down was a display monitoring the reactor's control rods, said a spokesman for the federal Nuclear Regulatory Commission. But Burtch said operators were able to monitor the reactor's status using other instruments that weren't knocked out.

The reactor shutdown was completed and the emergency declaration was lifted nearly 14 hours after the 6 a.m. power failure, said Steve Brady, another Niagara Mohawk spokesman.

The NRC sent a team of seven inspectors to the 3-year-old, 1,080-megawatt plant on the shore of Lake Ontario, to investigate the incident and operators' response.

"They have five power supplies that were supposed to be non-interruptable and they proved to be interruptable," NRC spokesman Joseph Fouchard said. "There were systems that are important to operators that did not function and we want to find out why.

"We've got a lot of work to do up there," Fouchard said.

Burtch said a preliminary investigation linked the initial power failure to a malfunction in one of the plant's three 25,000-volt transformers, each the size of a two-car garage.

The power loss first knocked out devices called annunciators, warning lights above gauges in the control room, officials said. Backup power sources didn't kick in, and other control room instruments, such as temperature and water-pressure monitors, failed for about 22 minutes, Burtch said.

Plant workers eventually got one backup power source to work, said Niagara Mohawk spokeswoman Debbie Cienava.

WEATHER SUMMARY

Via Associated Press

Some sun, mid-80s on tap

Staff Report

Today's forecast calls for partly sunny skies with a high in the mid-80s, east winds 10 mph or less, and a 30 percent chance of afternoon thunderstorms, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Tonight will be partly cloudy with a low between 65 and 70, and a 20 percent chance of thunderstorms.

Thursday is expected to be partly cloudy and warmer with a high in the lower 90s.

After an overnight low of 67, Tuesday's high was 86 compared with the record high for that date of 105 set in 1946. The record low for today's date was 60 set in 1967.

NATION

Rain fell over the Plains and Gulf Coast states Tuesday, causing minor flooding in places.

As much as 3 inches fell in the Dallas area, swelling the Trinity River through Dallas-Fort Worth. The river was expected to crest at flood stage or a foot over it, the National Weather Service said.

Minor flooding was reported in northwest Florida.

A flood watch was posted near Seward, Alaska, where heavy rain in the mountains combined with glacial melt pushed the Resurrection River to a high level.

At noon CDT, rainshowers and thunderstorms continued over the Gulf Coast states, the western portion of the lower Mississippi Valley, the southern Plains and the southern portion of the Ohio Valley. Showers also were reported in Montana and Northern California.

Heavier rainfall during the 6 hours ending at 1 p.m. CDT included 2½ inches at Fort Worth, just over inch at Childress, Texas, and nearly an inch at Bowling Green, Ky.

Thunderstorms produced half-inch diameter hail near Elkton, Ky.

troversial prekindergarten program for 3-year-olds.

The budget attracts more federal money to human services and highway programs and for the first time spells out goals that each agency and program is expected to accomplish during the two-year budget cycle beginning Sept. 1.

Several crucial issues were not resolved in the unusual session, which was marked by fierce intra-agency turf wars and budget battles and marred by the drug-related death of Rep. Larry Evans, D-Houston.

Also left pending were measures to entice a McDonnell Douglas Corp. manufacturing facility to Fort Worth Alliance Airport, toughen penalties for intoxicated drivers and allow voter-approved liquor sales in Texas Stadium.

Several issues raised by audits of Comptroller John Sharp may be revived when lawmakers return next week. Many of the most controversial concepts were tabled, but 65 percent of the reorganization proposals were enacted, a Sharp aide said.

"I think we accomplished in 30 days what many, many, many legislatures have failed to do in a whole 140-day session," said House Speaker Gib Lewis, D-Fort Worth.

Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock concurred.

"For the first time in the history of Texas we are back in the 20th Century."

which are apparently of interest to you in the United States."

As the Soviet Union moves from its long tradition of centralization to a decentralized system, Burchak noted that all 15 constituent republics had declared their independence and the soveriegnity of their laws over national laws. He likened the struggle to the U.S. in the years before the Civil War.

"The Soviet Union is undergoing a different change and each republic is trying to protect its rights and the rights of its population. Under such conditions there are cases of rudeness. That's a natural reaction to years of totalitarian rule.

"We are confident the study of foreign experiences as part of our trip here will be beneficial for the transformation period in the Soviet Union, where every republic will have rights of its own, but the nation will be preserved."

Burchak said he believes the transformation will be successful, and that "it is important to overcome selfishness and have a higher vision in mind."

Not only is the Soviet Union trying to develop and modernize its vast oil and gas reserves, but also is looking at such industries as tourism, timber and electronics, he said, and seeking foreign partners.

"The thing is," he said,"large companies are hestitant to step in because they're not sure who to ask — the federation or the republic. At least that's one reason emphasized by people I talk with in the U.S.

Small business will find the Soviet Union a vast market, he said. Because the nation lacks the resources to invest in production, it is pursuing joint ventures with outside investors.

"We want to produce products at level of world standards. Since the ruble is not convertible, such products could be marketed abroad and bring hard currency to foreign partners. We also offer high profits for investors because our workforce is much cheaper," Burchak said.

The visitors said they especially are interested in the American regulatory process as they seek ways to pass rules and regulations to ease the transition yet protect consumer rights, the environment but still encourage small business ownership.

Vladimir Yevgen'yevich Tsapelik said, "One of the major tasks we are faced with is teaching people to do business. We are working on privatization, decentralization and the creation of small business."

Tsapelik is a Scientific Fellow, Institute on Market Issues, USSR Academy of Sciences, and Deputy Chair of the Scientific Council on De-monopolization of the Russian Republic.

"We notice that different areas in the American economy are regulated, and some are regulated heavily. The regulatory process in America is different from the process in the Soviet Union, which until recently was a state monopoly. When we speak to Americans, it is hard for them to realize what we had before and what we're getting now, he said.

Viktor Sergeyevich Budkin, department head of foreign social and economic issues, Ukrainian Acadey of Sciences, said his group represents not only their various republics but industries eager to establish foreign ties.

His native land, the Ukraine, is developing a number of laws regarding international business relations and he expressed interest in U.S. free trade zones. He noted that the Ukraine has a representative at the United Nations in New York who can be contacted by anyone wishing to establish trade ties.

The other three officials visiting Midland are Vladimir Nikolayevich Karyagin, Petr Borisovich Shelishch, and Yerzhan Utembayev.

The Soviets are here as part of the Students In Free Enterprise project, "Competition in a Market Economy: A Single-Country Group Project for the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics."

The six will spend today touring a Tuboscope plant and visiting a Grace Drilling rig. They will leave for Washington, D.C., Thursday morning.

RESIGN: Clifford steps down amid BCCI scandal

(From 1A)

dictment against BCCI, its Pakistani founder and former chief executive officer on charges of fraud, falsifying records and stealing more than $30 million.

Grand juries in New York and Washington are investigating whether Clifford and Altman misled regulators about First American's relationship with BCCI.

"Our position is (the resignations) will make no difference in our pursuit of the investigation," said Michael Cherkasky, chief of the investigation division in the Manhattan district attorney's office.

Clifford, 84, a former secretary of defense and adviser to several Democratic presidents, has said in recent years that First American was owned by Persian Gulf investors. In Tuesday's statement, he repeated his assertion that the U.S. bank has operated independently from BCCI.

First American's chief operating officer, Paul G. Adams III, recently denied a report in a banking industry newspaper that depositors were taking money out of the bank because of its link with BCCI. But he acknowledged that the BCCI scandal has created "a lot of confusion and customer questions."

The resignations followed meetings in recent weeks between Clifford and Altman and federal regulators.

A spokesman for the Federal Reserve, which is seeking a record $200 million fine against BCCI, declined to say whether the two men's departures were the result of pressure from regulators. But the spokesman, Joseph Coyne, said the Fed's discussions with First American management included Clifford and Altman, 44.

LODGING: Council narrowly approves 1st reading

(From 1A)

The amendment would charge $75 per permit application. Applications would require approval of the planning and zoning commission and city council with public hearings at each meeting.

Mayor Carroll Thomas, who opposed the amendment, said it was unnecessary and might cause inconvenience in residential areas. Under the amendment, residents of single-family homes could operate bed and breakfasts, but it does not change the zoning in any neighborhood.

"I'm a real advocate of zoning, especially in residential areas," he said. "I believe there are a number of areas in this community that are properly zoned for bed and breakfast at this time."

Faircloth said he would encourage strict scrutiny of each permit request. The permit would last two years, and would require public hearings before approval.

"I see it as a personal rights issue," Faircloth said. "I don't think we can deprive someone of their rights if there is little opposition in the community."

Some residents of the city's historic district — located southwest of downtown — spoke against the amendment, which might allow a bed and breakfast in their neighborhood. Sherry Parker said the residents wanted no more "institutions" near their homes.

"We are not opposed to progress," she said. "We do not want more institutions, businesses, traffic and noise." Parker said she supported bed and breakfasts in other parts of Midland.

Felicia Rittenhouse, also a resident of the district, said bed and breakfasts would be a positive step toward encouraging preservation in the area.

Members of the Midland County Historical Commission have been among opponents of the bed and breakfast proposal in the historic district.

DEAL: Officials are optimistic about an exchange

edly being considered.

Under it, Israel would first commit itself formally to releasing prisoners in return for word on seven Israeli servicemen missing in Lebanon. The second stage would involve a full exchange of captives — Arab prisoners under Israeli control, surviving Israeli soldiers and the Western hostages, five of them Americans.

The fact that Israeli officials were tight-lipped suggested negotiations had reached a critical stage. Several officials acknowledged they were reluctant to say much in public out of fear a single slip could blow apart delicate arrangements. White House officials said they, too, were trying to avoid stirring the waters at this point.

Bein said the situation "looks quite hopeful" and he added that U.N. Secretary General Javier Perez de Cuellar "believes a solution is at hand, most probably because the countries that are responsible for a solution want it."

Israeli Defense Minister Moshe Arens said the willingness expressed by the hostage takers to talk and the secretary general's personal involvement "allow an opening for hope."

For his part, Perez de Cuellar, who has become the middleman in the hostage bargaining, said in Geneva that he now sees a basis for a broad exchange of captives. The various sides were "not that far apart," he said, adding, "It is not an ocean. I would say a river."

Israeli negotiators, led by veteran diplomat and trouble-shooter Uri Lubrani, prepared to leave Wednesday for Geneva to meet a second time this week with the secretary general, who has also had talks there with a senior Iranian diplomat.

It seemed clear that broad arrangements for any bargain would have Israel release about 375 Arab prisoners.

QUAYLE: Lawyers' group unhappy with message

the system annually?"

The vice president's remarks came as he outlined a Bush administration proposal for streamlining the nation's civil court system and reducing the number of expensive lawsuits.

Quayle's comments drew an immediate response from ABA President John Curtin.

"We think you should reconsider the basic assumption that the lawyers of America are the reason why America is not competing effectively in the world," Curtin said to the vice president, still on the stage.

Attorneys in the audience responded more warmly to Curtin's remarks than those made by Quayle.

"Nobody is talking about eliminating lawyers," replied Quayle, who is chairman of the president's Council on Competitiveness, which is proposing a 50-point package of civil court reforms.

The vice president said the council is proposing:

- Limiting punitive damages in civil court cases.
- Adoption of a modified version of the "English plan" in which the loser in civil cases pays all court costs.
- Limits on discovery proceedings.
- Eliminating contingency fees.

POTSHOTS: Fans criticize Texas Stadium beer sales

(From 1A)

proval from the Texas Legislature, a temporary permit allowed Texas Stadium Corp. to launch the historic sales of liquid spirits.

David McCulley, who drove in from Lubbock with his family, was among the first to feel the pinch of the new regulations.

He was stopped at the turnstile and prevented from entering with a backpack full of cheese crackers and candy.

"We were able to take the bag in to Ranger Stadium last night," he said. "A different city, I guess. Here the man said I had a choice: Carry it back to the car or throw it away."

Jones said the club will be able to provide safer consumption of alcohol during events than in the past. But not everyone agrees with him.

"He's punishing the legitimate fans who come out there with soft drinks in order to have a few people who try to break the rules. I just think it's plain wrong," said Cowboys fan Marty Daneman.

But a bartender at the Corral bar outside the stadium said business did well during the Cowboys' 17-13 loss to the Raiders.

Tommy Hodges, president of Texas Stadium Corp., said despite a few grumpy fans, there were no reports of excessive intoxication.

"We had absolutely no mishaps whatsoever in terms of alcohol," he said Monday night. "It's been very much like all the games we've had before, we didn't notice any changes."

Hodges said he regrets the conflict with non-alcohol drinkers, but said it can't be helped.

"... When you have 65,000 fans coming in with coolers or sacks ... or whatever, it's a logistical nightmare to go through all of it to be sure no alcohol comes in," he said.

"I know that's an inconvenience to a lot of our fans, but it's something ... we just had to do. And incidentally I think every other stadium in the country pretty well does that as well," Hodges added.

The rules will make Texas Stadium one of the most restrictive in the NFL on beer consumption. All sales are conducted in concourse areas and no beer vendors are allowed in seating areas.

Among NFL stadiums, only Sun Devil Stadium in Tempe, Ariz., home of the Phoenix Cardinals, has stricter rules, officials say.

Detroit to open public school for city boys

DETROIT (NYT) — Desperate over the wasted lives of its young black men, Detroit is about to open the nation's first public schools for inner-city boys, unless a court challenge blocks them.

Other large cities have contemplated similar schools but have backed away in the face of political pressure or the fear of lawsuits.

That has left Detroit with the nation's most radical attempt to rescue the next generation of black boys, many of whose troubled older brothers have already been lost to drugs, prison or homicide, by isolating them in classrooms with specially trained teachers and curriculums emphasizing black achievements.

Here, the plan is seen not as a fashionable education theory to be tested, but as an experiment with lives at stake, a last chance to save families and, ultimately, the city itself.

"People here know what it means to bury a young relative or visit one in jail," said Frank Hayden, vice president of the Detroit Board of Education. "We've just got to do something to turn this madness around."

But just three weeks before the schools are to open, the plan has been thrown into question. A lawsuit to force the male academies to admit girls was filed in Federal District Court on Aug. 5, by the American Civil Liberties Union and the National Organization for Women Legal Defense Fund, and Judge George E. Woods will begin hearing testimony on Thursday.

Opponents call the schools a discriminatory throwback. Race is not the issue, because 90 percent of Detroit's public school students are black. But opponents say that in denying girls access the academies are ignoring the serious academic and social problems confronting inner-city girls, like teenage pregnancy and dependence on welfare.

"There is clearly a crisis, but the crisis is all urban school children," said Howard Simon, executive director of the ACLU of Michigan. "These schools may open up a whole new world for these boys. That world should be open to girls, too."

At issue is whether the crisis facing young black men justifies the exclusion of girls from these specialized academies and whether, indeed, single-sex schools are the best setting in which to teach black boys.

Supporters cite statistic after statistic to explain the extraordinary remedy they seek. In a virtually all-black district of 170,000 students, 70 percent are being raised by single mothers. Nearly two out of every three boys entering high school in Detroit do not make it to graduation, as against one out of every three girls. Black boys account for the overwhelming majority of disciplinary problems.

And in a city where in some neighborhoods gunfire is as common as the sound of the ice cream truck, homicide is the leading cause of death among black males over age 10.

The Detroit plan goes much further than that of New York, where political divisions have left a black male school called the Ujamaa Institute on hold, or even Milwaukee, where the idea first gained attention. There, two schools devoted to African-American curriculums, originally planned exclusively for boys, will open to both boys and girls next month.

Detroit's male academies, as they are called, are to provide the regular curriculum, with teaching infused by African-centered instruction and training in what it means to be a man for 560 boys at three grade schools.

Pentagon raises friendly fire casualties

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nearly a quarter of all American soldiers killed in the Persian Gulf War died in accidental attacks by U.S. forces — mostly during the climactic 100-hour land battle in the Iraqi desert, the Pentagon said Tuesday.

The figures of 35 soldiers killed and 72 wounded by friendly fire from U.S. forces are far higher than previously acknowledged by the military, which has been investigating the cases since the war ended Feb. 28.

The Pentagon also said Tuesday that three-quarters of all U.S. combat vehicles that suffered significant battle damage were struck by American weapons, including seven of 10 M1-A1 main battle tanks and 20 of 25 Bradley infantry fighting vehicles.

The single worst case occurred Feb. 27 when an unidentified U.S. ground unit opened fire on another unit inside Iraq, killing six Americans and wounding 25. Five M1-A1 tanks and five Bradley infantry fighting vehicles were destroyed.

Lt. Gen. Martin Brandtner, operations director for the Joint Chiefs of Staff, told a Pentagon news conference that all instances of friendly fire were accidental, although the services are investigating some cases for possible misconduct.

He said no disciplinary action had been taken against any soldier involved in a friendly fire incident "at this juncture."

The 35 soldiers killed by U.S. fire — 21 Army soldiers and 14 members of the Marine Corps — represent 23 percent of the 148 Americans listed as killed in action during the war.

No sailors or Air Force members were killed by friendly fire, the Pentagon said.

Although the government has no official figures on friendly fire casualties in earlier wars, Brandtner said the proportion of U.S. casualties in the Gulf War caused by friendly fire was far higher than in previous American wars.

Rape case requires records

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. — The Jupiter woman who said she was raped by William Kennedy Smith has until Friday to say when and why she was last treated by care-givers whose records Smith's attorneys want.

The woman's attorneys filed court papers last week to block Smith's attorneys' efforts to examine records from pharmacists, hospitals and physicians, including the woman's gynecologist, obstetrician and dentist.

Smith's attorneys argued that the records will show the woman is "suffering from a psychiatric disorder" that could explain why she "made a false accusation against Mr. Smith."

The woman's attorneys declined to comment on Circuit Judge Mary Lupo's ruling Tuesday.

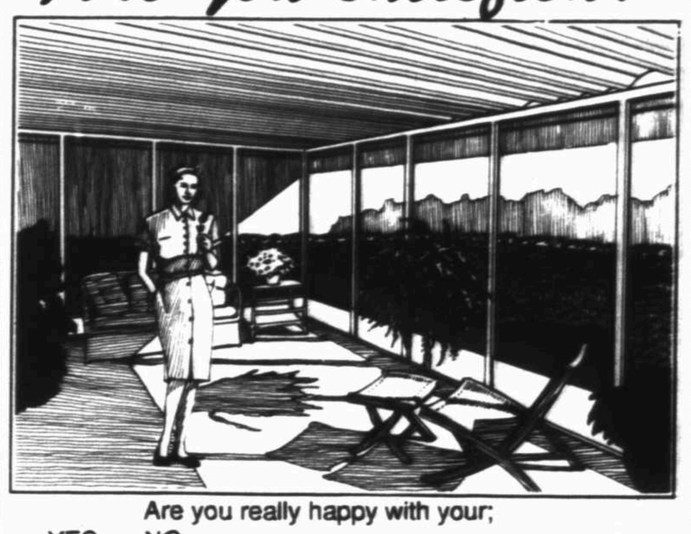

In other action in the case Tuesday:

The judge granted a request by Smith's attorneys to have samples of the woman's hair and particles taken from her dress and underwear examined by an expert at Michigan State University. Lupo granted a similar request for an expert in San Antonio, Texas to test the woman's blood.

Keep heat on Iraq's Hussein

One by one, weapons secrets are being squeezed out of Baghdad.

Recently, after many lies, Iraq finally acknowledged it was conducting a secret biological weapons program and pursuing yet another nuclear weapons program.

Iraq's grudging revelations confirm that Saddam Hussein intended to arm himself with weapons of mass destruction. They also confirm the need to keep the pressure on him to tell all.

International inspectors must continue to seek what he's trying to hide. Stringent economic sanctions have to remain in force to compel Iraq to submit to inspections.

And for long-term security, the United Nations Security Council needs to put in place a tough plan prepared by the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA) to keep Iraq from ever acquiring nuclear arms. Similar arrangements are needed for chemical and biological arms.

Like nuclear age archeologists, the inspectors charged with enforcing the disarmament provisions of the U.N. cease-fire resolution are still trying to reconstruct Iraq's weapons programs. They had previously discovered three methods Iraq was using to enrich uranium so that it could be used in weapons. Iraq has now admitted trying to build the bomb a fourth way, by reprocessing plutonium from spent nuclear fuel at its Tuwaitha reactor.

But the inspectors can never be sure of what they don't know. And even if they learn everything about Iraq's present programs, they will need to keep it from rearming in the future.

Two policies are essential.

One is to keep pressure on Baghdad to comply with the cease-fire resolution. That requires continued economic sanctions despite the Iraqi leader's efforts to get them lifted. No doubt the sanctions hurt ordinary Iraqis more than they hurt Saddam Hussein. But he, not the international community, is the source of their pain. The U.N. dare not let him manipulate his people's misery to escape pressure to comply.

Second, even if he does comply, what's to guarantee that he won't resume arms-making in the future? The IAEA has proposed a tough program to embargo dangerous nuclear exports to Iraq and require advance notice from states that ship other nuclear material and equipment ostensibly intended for nonmilitary use.

The new rules would allow the IAEA uninhibited access to "all locations, all persons and all information" needed to verify compliance with the cease-fire resolution. The agency could conduct on-site inspections on short notice, using its own transportation, communication and inspection equipment to avoid depending on its host.

The proposal makes some U.N. members uneasy because they don't want the precedent applied to them. But it's a serious nonproliferation policy that deserves support. If the allies take the heat off Iraq now, they will be asking for trouble from Iraqi terror weapons in the future.

Conscientious objectors have it tough

WASHINGTON — Marine reservists who invoked conscientious objector status to stay out of the Persian Gulf War believe they are the victims of the mother of all injustices.

To these reservists, the price they paid for principle was persecution and violation of their right to due process by the Marines. To the Marine Corps brass, the 24 reservists being held at Camp Lejeune, N.C., are nothing more than deserters — Marines who failed to show up when their units were activated and thus have to pay the price for their actions.

Anderson

Pfc. Erick Larsen was at one time a Marine's Marine, finishing at the top of the corps' punishing three-month program when he signed on in 1985.

But along the way the diehard Marine turned dovish. By last December he was the gung-ho peacenik who threw his military dog tags at the White House during an anti-war demonstration. The 23-year-old Larsen says his conversion came in college classrooms studying Central American history and the American involvement in the Dominican Republic, Nicaragua and El Salvador. Now his hero is Sophocles, not Stormin' Norman.

Larsen's life changed forever shortly after Iraq invaded Kuwait last August, which prompted his filing for conscientious objector status. While the request was pending, Larsen barnstormed the United States and Europe spreading the gospel of peace and attacking U.S. Persian Gulf policy, drawing wide media attention.

The Marines rejected Larsen's conscientious objector petition, disputing that his motives were not religious, moral or ethical.

Larsen refused to report for active duty when his unit was called up last February, and was charged with desertion in time of war after he turned himself in. The charge carries the possibility of the death sentence. Ironically, Larsen could have evaded the war with a wrist slap had he gone on a drinking binge. In one case reviewed by our reporter Jan Moller a reservist who missed the entire war due to prolonged drunkenness received a sentence of 21 days.

Although Larsen's charges were ultimately reduced to plain desertion, advocates for him and other reservists stationed at Camp Lejeune charge that the Marines are pulling out all the stops to punish these pacifists.

For example, the Marines decided to lump all the reservists together at Camp Lejeune, rather than trying them closer to their home bases where witnesses and other assistance would be more available. Nor is there any precedent for that practice, which they view as an attempt to intimidate the prisoners.

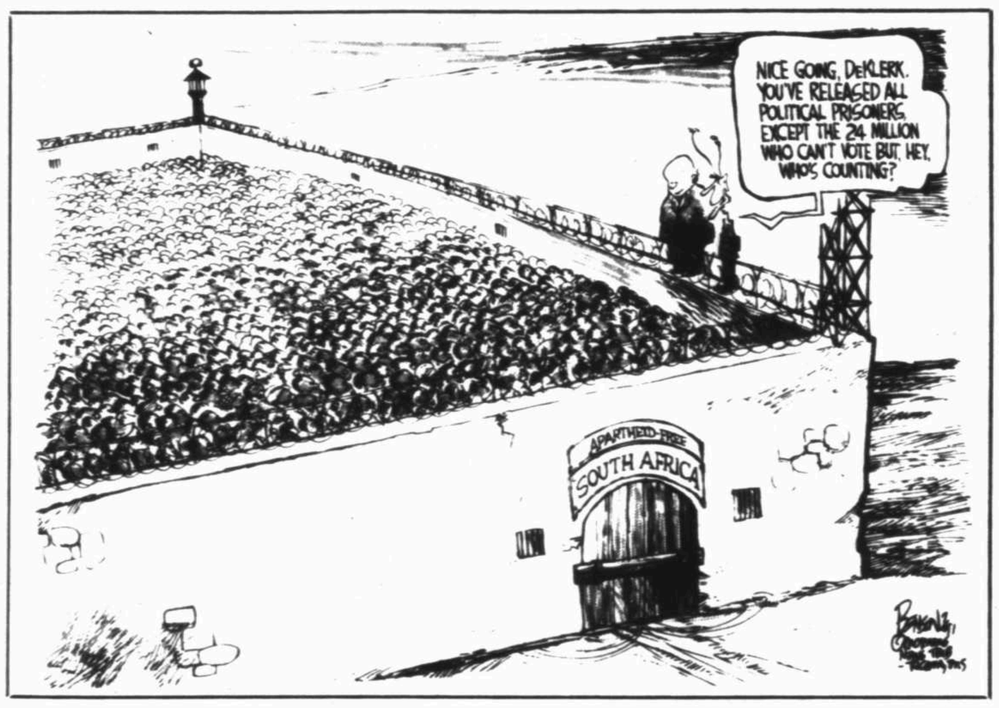

"The Marine Corps declared war on conscientious objectors, and their game plan was to isolate, intimidate and incarcerate," Larsen's attorney told us. There's nothing unusual about grouping all the conscientious objectors together, and the decision was based on consolidating resources, according to the Marines.

In Larsen's case, his attorney was denied a request to produce 39 witnesses for the preliminary hearing held earlier this summer. In addition to denying all defense witnesses, the defense also claims that he was deliberately kept away from the preliminary hearing by scheduling it on a day he had previously indicated he could not attend.

A federal district court judge in San Francisco last May ordered that Larsen get a new and impartial hearing, stating that his due process rights had been violated during an earlier discharge hearing. The new hearing is still pending.

One question that will surface in the new hearing is whether the Marines ignored one of their own regulations. They stipulate that anybody who shows up for a movement with a pending conscientious objector application would not be sent to Saudi Arabia until the results of the application were known. Unfortunately for the Lejeune reservists, the Marines did not make this policy known to the troops for fear of being flooded with bogus applications.

Suits project radical ideas of villainy, power

Lately I have felt bad about my suits. Come to think of it, of course, I have almost always felt bad about my suits. They never seemed to fit quite right. They were always the wrong color. The cut was out of style. The trousers had cuffs when fashion magazines were issuing bulletins that Cary Grant never wore cuffs. What was worse, my cuffed trousers ballooned comically in the seat.

Russell Baker

I never really solved these problems. I did, though, put them in the closet. That is, I pretty much quit wearing suits. I just left them in the closet gathering dust and slowly growing into shapes dictated by clothes hangers.

This was possible because my work had taken me out of board rooms, arenas of commerce and power-lunch hangouts, and had freed me to go around looking pretty much like what used to be called a bum, though may now be called "an income-disadvantaged biped."

All right, the suits have been in the closet, long time hanging, as the song goes ("Where Have All the Suitings Gone?"). Forgotten, except for the occasional gloomy but practical moment when, brooding about death's inevitability, I think, "Well, at least it won't matter that the suit balloons in the seat of the pants."

This habit of planning for life's direst contingencies runs in the family. From earliest childhood beloved elders trained me never to wear socks with holes or dirty underwear because you never know when you'll be terribly mangled in an accident and hauled to a hospital where your shameful sloth will be exposed to the entire staff.

To be prepared for the ultimate contingency, of course, one seemed to need a suit, which was one reason I used to buy a suit now and then as nature changed my contours. Mainly, though, except for the comforting reflection that I was sartorially prepared for the worst, I hadn't thought about suits lately.

With suits out of mind, I was startled a few months ago to notice an ugly new development in suit culture. Ostensibly it is about language more than about suits, but it strikes too close for comfort to my closeted secrets:

People with power — which is to say, people we'd better keep an eye on if we know what's good for us — are now being called "the suits" or sometimes "men in suits."

These curious terms are most often used to suggest something sinister, possibly cruel and nasty, certainly ruthless. Or "pejorative," as all loyal denizens of The Mushmouth Age now say because they'd rather mewl than say "mean and abusive."

What has the poor old suit ever done to become a symbol of villainy? The question concerns everyone who has ever gone suited into the world, even though the evidence may now hang hidden in closets. I have many theories, all of them depressing.

For instance, maybe there is powerful cultural pressure building against dignified funeral wear. Astonishing though it may seem, the most powerful people ("the big suits") often let the tide swamp them at times like this rather than risk scorn and ridicule.

Thus, the U.S. Senate, say, rather than suffer the contempt of being called "the one hundred suits" might start showing up at the Capitol dressed as I now dress; to wit, like income-disadvantaged bipeds. Ridiculous? Not at all.

With just a little gray at the temples, you're old enough to remember when senators showed up in suits the color of vanilla ice cream, swallowtail coats, string ties, galluses, and hair stylings that ranged from gorgeous flowing manes to botched red-dye jobs. All that was abandoned when politics became television. Now every senator looks much like another, and all look like potential "guest hosts" on a TV talk show.

My staff is even now examining the deepest meaning of all this. You may expect a full report soon.

Dahmer murders not parallel to abortion

I am writing in response to gentleman's article last Sunday regarding Jeffrey Dahmer. Somewhere in the author's closed mind, he found a parallel between Dahmer and abortion, and now I am compelled to give not only a woman's point of view, but someone with some sense as well.

Jeffrey Dahmer planned and calculated every one of his grissly encounters. He enjoyed the rituals he undertook and single-handedly destroyed at least 11 people's lives. Whereas, some women do not plan on becoming pregnant, either by ignorance, chance, or sometimes even rape they are suddenly faced with an unwanted pregnancy. Abortion is not always an easy answer for these women and most of the time it is their only alternative.

I am not justifying abortion but, I do see its purpose. Everyday America's welfare system is handing out money to women who have several fatherless children, and this is money our system does not have. Child abuse organizations are flooded with beaten, starved and neglected children that are not wanted and will most likely spend the rest of their lives in limbo. A high percentage of these children will never excel in life, and some will go straight from the foster system to the prison system.

The gentleman also vividly described his knowledge of abortion but not until science further excels will we truly know what the aborted fetus undergoes. The sensationalism of the previous article was merely a tool to shock the readers. True, it is quite disturbing that the fetus is destroyed before given a chance for life, but how upsetting is it to see children that are not wanted being forced to live in a society of abuse, molestation, and neglect?

There is no one that can argue the rights and wrongs of abortion and convince 100 percent of the nation which idea is right. But a person's individual rights should always be defended. If we are forced to relinquish those, we will be growing socially backwards.

If the self-righteous individuals like the gentlemen persist, she will no longer have the freedoms that I now have to live, and men like Jeffrey Dahmer will become a common occurrence in a overpopulated world.

Tiny cracks will cost taxpayers big bucks

They found tiny cracks in the brand-new highly touted Navy attack submarine Seawolf last week. Every country has cracks in its submarines, but since this boat cost $2 billion, it gave a few picky taxpayers another thing to complain about.

We're not talking about just a onetime $2 billion investment. The Navy intends to build 12 at a cost of $33 billion, including spare parts, which makes the Seawolf-class sub the most expensive fish ever to swim in the sea.

Buchwald

The Seawolf was designed and built to run silent and deeper than anything of its kind. It can sneak up on and choke other submarines until they cry "Uncle." On paper, back when we were freezing from the Cold War, it seemed like the perfect weapon to thwart the other side's attack submarines. A teen-ager on a tour of the General Dynamics shipyard called it "awesome."

But two things happened just about the same time. One was that when the Cold War thawed, the Soviets began cutting back on military spending, and then we started finding cracks in the Seawolf, the moral equivalent of finding termites in your cellar..

Granite Thurston, a Pentagon spokesman on submarines costing more than $2 billion, said, "We shouldn't be worried about a $33 billion submarine program. The Pentagon can always find the money for a new defense system. Our concern is that if in the next 10 years the Soviets decide to put their subs in mothballs, we would have nothing for the Seawolf to attack. What we could wind up with is a serious enemy target shortage, which will cause some pro-Air Force senator to ask why we need it."

"It's bad luck about Russia," I said. "If it weren't for their economic problems they would have certainly come up with a nifty response to the Seawolf, and then the Pentagon could probably have raised another $50 billion to meet their challenge. Is there any way we can advance them the money to continue their sub-building program?"

Granite replied, "The Russians are playing hard ball. Gorbachev claims they would rather have the money for their domestic programs, which is shortsighted because you never know when Lithuania is going to build a fleet of attack submarines to make its bid for freedom."

"If the shipbuilders manage to repair the cracks in the Seawolf, why don't we use it to attack Saddam Hussein?"

"We would like nothing more. But as far as we know, Saddam never goes swimming."

"For $2 billion why can't you put wheels on the sub and send it off to Baghdad? If it's as quiet as the Navy says it is, no one would know."

"Don't think we haven't thought of it. Our difficulty is that although we can justify building one for $2 billion on the grounds that it's still cheaper than bailing out an S&L, it's harder to justify a $33 billion program when the joints aren't properly welded."

"If you can't see the cracks with the naked eye, then I don't see what the beef is all about."

"We prefer to be cautious. What we're going to do is tear up the sub and start welding it from scratch so it will be ready by 1996 or 1998."

"That long?"

"It's not as bad as it sounds. By then Hollywood will make 'The Hunt for Red October Part II,' and we'll have the taxpayers begging us for all the Seawolf subs we can make."

Saddam meets Kurdish leader on autonomy issue

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) — Saddam Hussein met Tuesday with rebel Kurdish leader Massoud Barzani, but there was no indication of progress in the stalled 4-month-old negotiations on Kurdish autonomy.

The talks began in April after the Iraqi president crushed rebellions by the Kurds and Shiite Muslims that broke out following Iraq's defeat in the Persian Gulf War.

Tuesday's talks, the first in two weeks, came amid indications of rising tensions in the Kurdish-dominated north and suspicions that Saddam may be stalling.

The official Iraqi News Agency reported Tuesday's meeting, but gave no details of the talks. Iraqi television showed scenes from the discussions, but also reported no details.

Saddam last met in July with Barzani, leader of the Kurdish Democratic Party, and with Jalal Talabani, head of the Patriotic Union of Kurdistan.

The two groups are the dominant movements in a coalition of eight Kurdish parties who for decades have sought an autonomous homeland for Iraq's 3.5 million Kurds in mountainous northern Iraq.

Barzani spent several weeks in Baghdad negotiating a pact in June, but other members of the front, including Talabani, rejected it, saying it gave too little territory to the autonomous region and did not go far enough in democratic reforms.

Saddam's agreement to discuss Kurdish autonomy was widely seen as an effort to divide an opposition coalition to his rule by splitting off the Kurds from the Shiites, who dominate southern Iraq.

Several factors have strengthened the government's hand in recent weeks, indicating Saddam might be trying to delay in hopes that U.N. sanctions imposed after Iraq invaded Kuwait last August may be eased.

If the embargo is significantly relaxed, it would ease the hardships for Iraq's 17 million people and help Saddam consolidate his power.

Western troops have withdrawn from a Kurdish security zone in northwestern Iraq, and Turkish forces last week attacked Turkish Kurds in Iraq under a 1983 accord — putting pressure on the Iraqi Kurds as they try to resolve the impasse over democratic reforms and territory.

In addition, Kurdish sources and travellers report a military buildup in Kirkuk, an oil-producing center in northrn Iraq.

The reports could not be independently verified, but if true they indicate Saddam does not intend to suffer another setback like the Kurdish takeover of the northern cities of Suleimaniya and Erbil.

An Iraqi Kurdish leader said in Ankara on Tuesday that Turkey had agreed to provide humanitarian aid to Iraq's Kurdish population.

Truce praised as two die in new fighting

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — Sporadic ethnic fighting in Croatia left two dead Tuesday, even as the country's federal presidency lauded a shaky week-long truce in the breakaway republic.

The warring Serbs and Croats bolstered the truce by carrying out a delayed exchange of 75 prisoners in Knin, in the rebellious Serbian enclave of Krajina in western Croatia, the official news agency Tanjug said.

Cease-fire commission member Irfan Ajanovic said Monday that more captives had been seized even during the truce, which began Aug. 7.

Fighting has left more than 200 dead since Croatia declared independence June 25. Tuesday's battles took place in central Croatia.

Two Croatian police died fighting Serbian militiamen near the town of Beli Manastir, south of the Hungarian border, Croatian radio said. Two people were wounded, it said.

Five Croatian policemen, and three other people were wounded in fighting in Vukovar, a Croat-held town, and in nearby Borovo Selo, a Serb-dominated village.

At about the same time as the fighting was reported, the eight-man collective presidency issued a statement saying the cease-fire it imposed a week ago had been "generally respected," according to Tanjug.

The presidency met late Tuesday to discuss how to bolster the cease-fire and open planned talks on Yugoslavia's future, Tanjug said. A commission monitoring the cease-fire said earlier that it wouldn't last long without the talks.

Croatia has objected to the terms of the current cease-fire, saying most of the proposed monitors were Serbs or their Montenegrin allies.

Castro keeps hectic pace on birthday

HAVANA (AP) — Fidel Castro, popping up everywhere at the Pan American Games, gave no hint he would comply with Cuba's mandatory retirement age as he turned 65 Tuesday amid small celebrations.

More than 32 years after leading Cuba's revolution, Castro remains a vital figure firmly in control of his country, despite the twin pressures of the U.S. economic embargo and a cutback in Soviet aid and oil.

His aim is to present to Americans and the rest of the hemisphere — via unrestricted television and newspaper coverage — an image of a leader neither threatening nor threatened.

■ Koreans stage rally

SEOUL, South Korea — Riot police surrounded two colleges Wednesday after students hurling firebombs and rocks surged onto the campuses to a banned rally promoting unification of the two Koreas.

Meanwhile, about 1,000 North Koreans shouting "Korea is one!" gathered Tuesday in the heavily fortified Demilitarized Zone between the two Koreas, separated since 1945. It was the largest rally held at the truce village of Panmunjom, witnesses said.

The rallies were staged to mark the 46th anniversary of Korea's liberation from Japanese colonial rule on Aug. 15, 1945. South Korea claims the rallies are inspired by the Communist North. North Korea accused the South of rejecting unification efforts.

In Seoul, thousands of students with firebombs, rocks and iron pipes crashed their way through a police blockade to reach two campuses, Kyunghee and adjacent Hankook University of Foreign Studies.

■ Pope journeys home

KRAKOW, Poland — Putting aside the burdens of office if only briefly, Pope John Paul II made a nostalgic visit home Tuesday, kneeling in prayer at the gray marble graves of his parents and reminiscing about his childhood.

At his initial stop after arriving from Rome, the 71-year-old pontiff made his first visit to his parents' graves since 1979, praying before the tombs for 10 minutes.

Making a rare public comment, John Paul recalled his father, Karol, a non-commissioned army officer, as a "deeply religious" man who was both a "father and a mother" to the family.

■ Airport remains closed

ANTANANARIVO, Madagascar — A general strike called to oust President Didier Ratsiraka was in its third day Tuesday, with most businesses and public services closed to protest the killing of anti-government demonstrators by security forces.

The airport remained closed for the third straight day, diplomatic sources said, and South African Airways announced it would suspend its weekly flights to this Indian Ocean island nation's capital until the end of the month.

Many stores and businesses remained closed Tuesday on the second day of the general strike called by the opposition, although some reopened. Banks and public transportation did not operate.

The strike was called after the killing Saturday of as many as 51 people when government soldiers hurled grenades and fired on protesters calling on Ratsiraka to resign.

Italy steps up effort to halt crisis

BARI, Italy (AP) — President Francesco Cossiga visited Albania on Tuesday as part of Italy's stepped-up efforts to block another exodus of impoverished refugees across the Adriatic Sea.

Cossiga's trip was intended to solidify a new security agreement under which Italy will help Albania patrol its shores, said Vincenzo Scotti, the Italian interior minister.

About 18,000 Albanians sailed to Italy last week to seek jobs and escape Albania's crushing poverty. Many refugees said the exodus occurred because the Albanian military had opened the port at Durres and allowed them to leave.

Scotti said that only about 400 of the Albanians remained Tuesday in the Italian port city of Bari. Italy has adopted a hard-line policy, keeping them under the hot sun with little food and no toilets. Some Albanians seeking to remain in Italy had clashed with police in the southern port of Bari.

Opposition parties, meanwhile, criticized the government for its handling of the crisis.

In Bari, small groups agreed to be repatriated, but others still refused to return to Albania, which is slowly emerging from more than four decades of harsh Communist rule.

"Communism still exists in our country," one of the Albanians, Iledin Pilati, told the Italian news agency ANSA. "Only the names have changed, the politics are the same."

The president of the local doctors' organization, Michele Bellomo, asked the refugees to stay away from garbage and excrement on the dock and in a stadium to avoid "the imminent risk" of epidemics.

Iraqi oil sale plan divides security council

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Worried that U.N. influence in Iraqi affairs is growing intolerable, nonaligned Security Council members have criticized a proposal to allow restricted Iraqi oil sales, diplomats said Tuesday.

But the seven non-aligned nations on the 15-member council were not expected to mount a serious challenge to the draft resolution backed by the five permanent members: the United States, Britain, China, France and the Soviet Union.

The measure — which does not call for permanently lifting or relaxing economic sanctions — could be adopted as early as Friday, diplomats said. It is described as a one-time exception to help Iraq recover from the Persian Gulf War.

Under the proposal, U.N. officials would manage Baghdad's oil sales, approve every purchase, control an escrow account and monitor the distribution of purchased food, medicine and other goods.

Non-aligned diplomats, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the draft resolution gave the United Nations too pervasive a role in Iraq.

City raises airport landing fees

By Debbie Lincecum
Staff Writer

City and airport officials say an increase in landing fees at Midland International Airport will help fund renovation projects and won't harm the facility's chances for development.

The City Council Tuesday approved 6-1 a measure increasing use fees at the facility. The increase would raise fees from 50 cents to 60 cents per thousand pounds.

Assessed each time an airplane lands at the facility, the fee is paid monthly.

Lone dissenter to the measure was Councilman J.D. Faircloth, who argued an increase would be detrimental to Midland's competitive edge.

"We ought to be doing what we can to encourage the airlines," he said, citing competition from Lubbock's airport. Airport director Ken Day disagreed.

Comparing the airports is "not comparing apples to apples," Day said. Lubbock's airport, he said, is supported with tax dollars, while Midland International is self-supporting.

"Midland is a bonanza for airlines," Day said. According to city figures, the airlines had 584,755 enplanements in 1990, which, at a $50 average ticket value, totals $29,237,750 in revenue.

Day said the landing fee increase is necessary to off-set increasing expenses. Part of the expected $90,000 revenue generated by the higher fee will be used as matching funds for a runway renovation project.

City Manager Fred Poe said airlines would pay about 16 cents per passenger and could make up the difference with one additional passenger per year.

"It's a matter of pennies really," Day said. Although approved by the council, the measure will also require consent of the airlines — Southwest and American. It is expected to take effect Jan. 1.

"We've spoken with them, and it looks like there will be no problem," Day said. The increase should have no effect on plans for recruitment of additional airlines, he said.

"On a state level, we are competitive," Day said. "We want to make sure our system is maintained 100 percent."

Six receive diplomas at MISD session

■ Board names new principal for Goddard Junior High School.

Midland Indepedent School District trustees presided over an impromptu graduation ceremony Tuesday night when they honored six graduating seniors.

"This is the first time we have done this," said Ricardo Torres, executive director of secondary education.

The graduates in cap and gown filed into the boardroom to receive their diplomas and congratulatory handshakes from school board trustees.

With the exception of one young man, all the graduates were summer school students.

"It was real special for me," said Midland High School graduate Ronald "Ronnie" Hanks. The graduate — a special education student — didn't receive his diploma during the high school's regular graduation ceremony in May due to an oversight, according to his guardian, Mary Travis.

"There was a mix-up, but it's all worked out now and we're proud," Ms. Travis said. "We have (trustee) Adela Marmolejo to thank for this. She researched the problem and straightened it out for us."

"I live with my guardians in Andrews now," Ronnie said. "I was in school in Midland for eight years and I am glad I graduated. I'm happy."

Other students honored included MHS graduates Kim Davis, Leonard Harris and Mary Lou Valdez; and Lee High School graduates Roshanna Niblett and Sabrina Widner.

Newly appointed MHS Principal Jane Carrens was on hand to congratulate the graduates. Her vacated principalship at Goddard Junior High School will be filled by Karen Wentworth, the former instructional services director at MHS.

In light of the state Legislature's budget adoption Wednesday afternoon, superintendent Joseph Baressi Jr. recommended additional staff appointments.

Baressi said the state budget, which awaits Gov. Ann Richard's signature, would provide $1.7 billion to fully fund Senate Bill 351.

The superintendent said that fully funding the school reform bill results in the "best case scenario for Midland Independent School District."

Baressi recommended several appointments, including Ms. Wentworth as principal to Goddard Junior High School. Trustees approved all appointments.

Other appointments included Kerry Hillmon, at-risk dean at Lee Freshman High School; Kitty Gunn, at-risk dean at Midland Freshman School; Sunny Whitsell, Texas Teacher Appraisal System appraiser, Alan W. Sizemore, coordinator of computer technology; and Patricia Stevens, Deborah Tubbs and Jane Rambo, administrative interns.

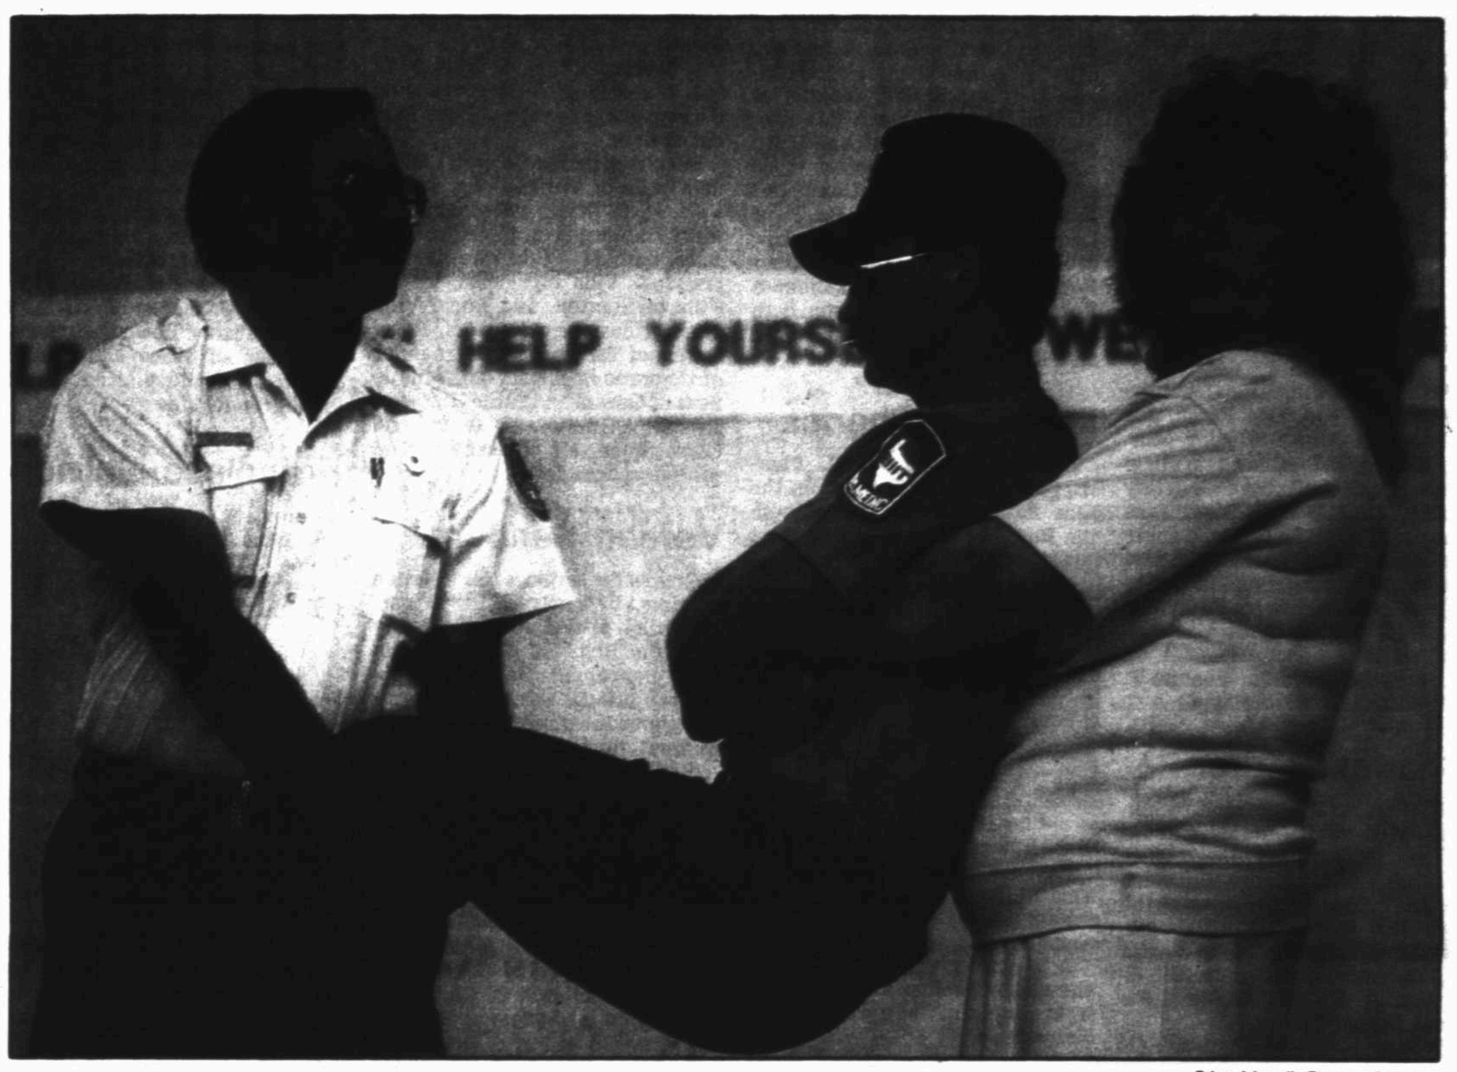

Trustees also approved hiring four Project Think teachers.

Former MISD student and athlete Wally Kleine, encouraged school board trustees to accept a gift of $3,500 worth of landscaping from Alldredge Gardens. Kleine, representing a committee of citizens and MISD faculty, said the low-maintenance landscaping would include seasonal flora planted in the high school colors.

Board trustees accepted the landscaping gift.

In other action, school board trustees voted down a food policy which would have eliminated sell-

Dumas lawmaker suggests Texas Panhandle should secede from state

AUSTIN (AP) — Low crime, clean air and water, free colleges, and no state taxes.

Sound like Utopia?

Not really. It's a Republican lawmaker's vision of "Old Texas," and he filed a bill Tuesday to create such a state out of 26 counties in the Texas Panhandle.

Swinford

Rep. David Swinford, of Dumas, said he doubted the bill would become law, but that he wanted to make the point that, "Texas government is out of control."

House members were to consider a proposed $59.45 billion budget and $2.1 billion tax and fee increase on the last day of the special legislative session.

Swinford said his oil, gas and cattle-rich area was tired of sending taxes to Austin.

"The reason that we call it the Old Texas is because we are not too proud of the taxes in the new Texas," he said. The "New Texas" was a campaign them used by Gov. Ann Richards, a Democrat.

The square-shaped state would have a population of about 372,000. It's 25,000-square mile area would be geographically larger than 10 states.

Swinford, a freshman lawmaker, said there would be no state taxes, and that because of the region's bounty, it could offer free college education.

"We have enough oil and gas production to make Old Texas the richest state per capita in the United States," he said.

The capital would be Amarillo. State lawmakers would be unpaid citizens who would take turns running the government.

"The entire state government would be in one building, and you could come in and holler and somebody would come and help you," he said.

Swinford said the tumbleweed would be an appropriate state flower.

He said "Old Texas" would reflect the way the state was 30 years ago, when he said it was easier for a young person to start a business.

There have been unsuccessful attempts in the past to split the state into one or more states.

The counties that would make up "Old Texas" under his plan are Armstrong, Briscoe, Carson, Castro, Childress, Collingsworth, Dallam, Deaf Smith, Donley, Gray, Hall, Hansford, Hartley, Hemphill, Hutchinson, Lipscomb, Moore, Ochiltree, Oldham, Parmer, Potter, Randall, Roberts, Sherman, Swisher, and Wheeler.

Midland County plans prison lawsuit against state

■ Midland County is facing a heavy financial burden caused by keeping state prisoners.

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

Serving as inn-keeper for up to a hundred state prisoners is saddling Midland county with an unprecedented financial burden, county officials say.

County Attorney Mark H. Dettman is gathering ammunition in preparation of firing off a prison-related lawsuit against the state of Texas.

The county will be seeking reimbursement of expenses for housing state prisoners.

Like other counties throughout Texas, Midland County is being forced to house convicted state criminals due to overcrowded conditions in the Texas penitentiary system.

Texas legislators have been "shirking their responsibilities" by not building enough penitentiary units to relieve those overcrowded conditions, Dettman said.

This year, Midland County is losing about $1.4 million by housing state prisoners because there is no room for them in the Institutional Division of the Texas Department of Criminal Justice.

"The gun is ready," Dettman said Tuesday, as he continued to build a lawsuit against the state. "I am just looking for the ammunition and pulling the trigger."

The Commissioners' Court last month authorized Dettman to investigate suing the state in hopes of can recoup its losses.

"It's costing us probably $1 million to $1.5 million a year at the present rate to house those TDC prisoners," Dettman said on Tuesday.

Of the 316 inmates in the county's two jails on Tuesday, 87 were TDC prisoners. Earlier in the day, the TDC bus had picked up 15 prisoners in its monthly stop in Midland.

But every month, the Midland court system sentences more than that, between 25 and 30, said Sheriff Gary Painter.

"I have to keep them and ... keep them safely under the state constitution," said the sheriff.

As Midland County's TDC population increases, there will be fewer bunks for housing federal prisoners.

Midland County has contracted with the U.S. Marshal's Service to house up to 96 federal prisoners at $40 per day. That contract was conceived by the Commissioners' Court as potential $1.4 million revenue source.

The federal revenue would help pay off the debt incurred in building the new 202-bunk jail and remodeling the courthouse jail, which has 104 bunks.

"The state is not doing its constitutional and statutorily mandated duty to house convicted felons," said Midland County Judge Charles W. "Bro" Seltzer.

Texas lawmakers, in haggling over how to solve penitentiary overcrowding and how to respond to county lawsuits similar to the one Dettman is drafting, had discussed spending $1.1 billion on prison construction to take in 25,000 additional convicts. Additionally, the legislators seem stymied in trying to settle lawsuits brought by 14 counties in whose jails about 10,000 TDC convicts are housed.

Dettman attributed the TDC overcrowding to "misguided interpretation" by Federal Judge William Wayne Justice on prisoners' rights; on failure of the Texas Legislature to "recognize the need for new prisons 20 years ago and to plan accordingly," and on the proliferation of drug-related crimes.

Years ago, W.J. Estelle Jr., former TDC director, had told the Texas Legislature of the need for TDC expansion," Painter noted. The legislators ignored his pleas, the sheriff said.

Not providing adequate space for convicts forces counties to house these prisoners at local taxpayer expense without reimbursement, Seltzer said. "The result is an unreasonable burden on the local taxpayer."

The income loss from not being able to house the 96 federal prisoners and the out-of-pocket expenses are costing Midland County $1.4 million in the current 1991 fiscal year, Seltzer said.

In fiscal 1992, which begins Oct. 1, the cost is projected to be at least $2.5 million.

"That's the single, greatest reason we are in a bind," said Commissioner Durward Wright.

To counter the $2.5- to $2.7-million projected shortfall, the Commissioners' Court will have to cut proposed departmental budgets, including the sheriff's, and will be compelled to raise taxes, Wright said.

Wright noted that the recent "focus by the press and the media" on the conflict the between the Commissioners' Court and the sheriff is really a reflection of budgetary woes.

With specific exceptions, the Commissioners' Court on Monday ordered the sheriff to confine his duties to Midland County and not to engage in extra-jurisdictional criminal investigations and sting operations.

"The real budgetary issue is the state's unwillingness to provide sufficient housing for its convicted felons," Wright said. "Therein lies the real issue."

Goose's plight saves couple

Staff Report

Interest in the plight of a goose at nearby Wadley-Barron Park, may have saved the lives of Midlanders Leslie and Lee Allen Tuesday night.

The couple stayed up past their usual bedtime to see a local television newcast about a goose whose leg had become tangled in fishing line.

About five minutes after they went to bed, they saw a flash in the den of their 604 W. Cuthbert Ave. home, apparently caused by faulty wiring in a wall lamp.

"Had we gone to bed at 9 o'clock we never would have made it," Allen said.

Four firefighting units responded to the blaze about 10:30 p.m., but the small house was gutted.

LOCAL/AREA REPORTS

Man jailed

Staff Report

A 20-year-old man was arrested on felony warrants after trying to run away from police following a traffic stop Monday afternoon, police said.

Scott Robert Harrison remained in jail Tuesday in lieu of two $100,000 bonds set by Justice of the Peace Robert Pine.

Harrison was arrested about 4:40 p.m. near Fairgrounds Road and Highway 80.

He was wanted on felony warrants out of Brownwood for burglary of a building and burglary of a vehicle. Police also charged Harrison with evading arrest.

One arrested

A 45-year-old Midland man was arrested at the scene of an alleged sexual assault early Tuesday morning, police officials said.

Raul Larez Sotello, 45, 1511 S. Jefferson St., remained jailed Tuesday in lieu of a $15,000 bond set by Justice of the Peace Robert Pine.

Sotello was arrested without incident about 3:28 a.m. at the eastside home of a 35-year-old woman who was reportedly sexually assaulted, police said.

Police reports indicated entrance was gained though a bedroom window and the assailant threatened the woman by implying he had a knife.

The woman was not taken to the hospital.

Youth saved

ODESSA — Darrell Henderson, 16, fell in a drainage ditch about 7:25 p.m. Monday near Sixth Street and Santa Rosa Avenue after reportedly testing the current, police said.

The youth was swept downstream to the 2700 block of West Second Street, where he grabbed onto a tree.

Two Odessans, Alex Rodriguez, 20, and Louis Felkins, 31, managed to retrieve the stranded youngster with a tow rope.

Henderson was transported to Medical Center Hospital for observation and was reported in stable condition late Tuesday.

MISD: Six get diplomas

(From 1B)

ing food from vending machines until the last period of the day in junior high schools.

Board trustees opposed the policy 4-3, despite a spirited "cooking" demonstration by Patricia Grillos, dietician and director of food services.

Ms. Grillos filled a glass with salt, sugar and oil (saturated fat) to demonstrate the nutritionally poor ingredients in one soda pop, a bag of a snack chips and a candy bar with nuts.

As she ladled in the appropriate measurements into the glass, Ms. Grillos said the per capita consumption of carbonated drinks is 50 gallons per person.

"We don't know what the long-term results will be for today's teen-agers who have these culprits in their diet — high sugar, high fat and high salt," she said.

Board trustee Gary Willis recommended striking the freshman schools from the policy while Ms. Grillos suggested including the high schools.

Ms. Marmolejo, Jack Hightower, Jackie Hamilton and James Fuller all opposed the motion. The vending machine issue had been debated hotly by teachers and administrators at a prior board meeting.

Teacher salaries and the County Education Districts were also discussed. Baresi noted that the school district's overall tax increase will probably amount to one-third of what was previously anticipated.

"We thought the increase would amount to approximately $18 on an average home of $55,000," he said. "But with the CED, it would roughly increase to $6.60."

The superintendent said, however, that the Andrews-Midland CED's tax rate of 72 cents per $100 valuation, which is required by the state, will probably be increased to 77 cents.

Collections, which will be reduced due to the homestead exemptions passed in the recent election, will be made up by rasing the tax rate.

Baressi presented a "general salary proposal" for MISD faculty.

"We won't have a full-blown proposal presented until the Aug. 27 board meeting, which will be an open forum at Midland High School auditorium," he said.

The proposal will be designed to give teachers the incentive to pursue masters and doctorate degrees.

The Andrews-Midland County Education District Board will meet 7 p.m. Thursday in MISD's 6th floor conference room. The board will canvass the results of Saturday's election and discuss the preliminary estimate of the entity's 1991-92 tax rate.

PRISON: County may sue

(From 1B)

Wright said that in his 23 years on the Commissioners' Court, "I've never seen a budget deficit so great and so completely unmanageable as the one we have before us. And it can almost be entirely traced back to action of the state of Texas."

Midland County's 1992 budget will be around $20 million.

"Unless the legislature of the state does something to correct this (prisoner) problem, the local county budgets (statewide) will be impacted even greater in the next coming years," Wright said.

By forcing Midland County to house TDC prisoners, the state is "arbitrarily mandating that the local taxpayers will be burdened with higher taxes in ever-spiraling proportions until counties virtually have to declare bankruptcy," Wright said. "It's happening."

Three die in plane crash

AMARILLO (AP) — A single-engine plane crashed near a West Texas airport Tuesday afternoon, killing all three men on board, Texas Department of Public Safety officials said.

The 1960 Beechcraft F-33 Bonanza crashed about 3:45 p.m. about a quarter-mile northwest of Dalhart Municipal Airport, said Jerry Hatley, communications operator for the Department of Public Safety's Amarillo office.

Hatley said the pilot, Emmett A. Jones, 62, and one passenger, Steven D. Wilson, 35, were pronounced dead at the scene. Christopher F. Purvis, 26, was pronounced dead on arrival at Coon Memorial Hospital in Dalhart.

All three victims were residents of McCook, Neb., where the flight originated, Hatley said. The plane's destination, he said, was Plainview, about 175 miles southeast of Dalhart.

Hatley said the Federal Aviation Administration's Lubbock office was investigating the cause of the crash.

"It seems as though the aircraft had made one flight past Dalhart Airport when the pilot attempted to land and overshot the runway," Hatley said.

"The plane then possibly stalled and the left wing caught the concrete of an abandoned airstrip, causing the aircraft to go into the runway at an approximate 60-degree angle."

Other witnesses said the plane was upside down when it crashed, with its wing flaps down and no landing gear extended.

Hatley said a flash fire was quickly put out by people nearby who had fire extinguishers in their vehicles.

The weather was foggy and visibility was a quarter-mile.

Poverty affects 1 in 4 in Bexar County

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A report released Tuesday says a quarter of Bexar County's million-plus residents are poor and that most of the poverty-stricken are children and working adults.

"We as a city really have not stopped to look at the fact that we have a working poor population," said Choco Gonzalez Meza, executive director of Partnerhip for Hope.

The non-profit group, funded by the Rockefeller Foundation, compiled "Pride and Poverty: A Report on San Antonio," which details the extent of indigence in the nation's tenth-largest city.

Per capita income in San Antonio in 1988 was $13,436, an amount 19 percent below the national average. More than half of all poor households in the San Antonio area have a family member who works, according to the report.

Twenty-one percent of the city's approximately 1 million residents are poor, and 29 percent of all school-age children in San Antonio are poor, the report said. In Bexar County, about 250,000 people are poor.

The study shows that minorities are impoverished more so than whites. Approximately 24 percent of Hispanic households and 30 percent of black households in San Antonio are poor, the study said.

While many in San Antonio have long known poverty is here, Ms. Meza said, there has been little evidence on its severity and no proposals on how to attack the problem from several angles.

The report discusses problems of the poor in health, education, employment, housing and human services, and suggests specific programs in those areas for dealing with the troubles.

"We strongly urge our elected officials to look closely before reducing programs that provide programs for the poor," Ms. Meza said.

Louis J. Agnese, chairman of the board for Partnership for Hope and president of Incarnate Word College, said poverty is not always apparent to visitors or new residents.

"Many people who visit our city or live in our city never see poverty," said Agnese, recalling that he never saw the most impoverished areas of the city until after he had lived here two years.

To unveil the report, Partnership for Hope held a news conference in the heart of a west side housing project, where organization leaders said income is low and teen pregnancy and infant mortality are high.

Police suspect credit card fraud

DALLAS (AP) — A former University of North Texas professor accused of kidnapping a young woman and holding her captive in his home may have used multiple disguises to hatch a credit card fraud scheme, police said.

Bill Robert Cathey has been indicted on a charge of possessing a counterfeit driver's license. Cathey, 50, taught English last semester at North Texas.

The latest indictment resulted from the Mesquite police's investigation of the kidnapping charge. Authorities said that inquiry led them to a house where they recovered a cache of wigs, fake mustaches and beards which they believe Cathey used in the scheme.

Investigators said they found licenses bearing Cathey's picture but different names, addresses and numbers. On the photographs, Cathey was shown with a beard, a mustache, long hair or a combination of both, police said.

Police also recovered counterfeit checks, credit cards and a replica of a driver's license apparently used to make the forgeries.

"There were several of these licenses and it appeared he had been using them for some time," said Mesquite police Capt. Larry Sprague. "He's pretty good at what he does."

Cathey was arrested June 14 after a 22-year-old woman accused him of keeping her locked in a closet at his home. The woman told police Cathey held her for two weeks and often forced her to chant "I will obey." She said she escaped June 1.

The Sunnyvale professor has maintained the woman was always free to leave his home.

College bond proposal fails again

AUSTIN (AP) — The Senate Tuesday approved a college bond proposal that voters had rejected over the weekend, but the measure died when the House failed to act on it.

The proposed constitutional amendment, which cleared the Legislature in the regular session ending May 27, failed by 5,220 votes out of 880,522 cast in a statewide election Saturday.

But Sen. Gonzalo Barrientos, D-Austin, reintroduced the measure in the current special session, and won quick passage Tuesday, 25-2. It would have put the proposal before voters on Nov. 5.

The House, however, failed to act on the proposal before adjourning the special session, which killed it. The measure could be brought up in yet another special session.

"Had we not been in session, I know several senators, governor and many other people — students — would be all over the state campaigning" for the first election, Barrientos said.

"I truly believe that the people cannot turn down some 20,000 or 30,000 students who will not be able to go to college unless they get a loan. I'm going at it again," he said.

The proposal that failed Saturday would have allowed the state to sell up to $300 million in general obligation bonds to finance the loan program, which provides low-interest loans to students from middle- and low-income families.

The proposal that failed Saturday would have allowed the state to sell up to $300 million in general obligation bonds to finance the loan program.

Officials said the bonds were needed because of a dramatic increase in the number of students seeking loans, which rose from 6,000 in 1988 to the current 30,000.

Barrientos said the program not only benefits the needy.

"There are kids in the middle class — so often we forget about the middle class — they need help also. They don't want a handout. They say, 'Give me a loan. I'm going to pay it back,'" he said.

House OKs lottery bill

AUSTIN (AP) — A bill to establish a Texas lottery if voters approve the game in the Nov. 5 election was sent to Gov. Ann Richards by the House on Tuesday.

House members voted 74-68 for the bill, forwarding it to Richards for her signature or veto. The Senate had OK'd it Monday.

Lawmakers last week passed a proposed amendment to the Texas Constitution that would let voters decide whether to start the lottery.

Richards has pushed for a lottery, saying that voters will have a choice between the game and a "huge" tax bill. Budget experts have said the lottery would provide up to $475 million for the 1992-93 budget period.

The lottery "will be run with complete integrity and will be a great benefit to this state," said Rep. Ron Wilson, bill sponsor.

But some continued to express concern about the game.

"The lottery will be directed at those who can least afford to pay," said Rep. Glenn Repp, R-Duncanville.

GOP lambasts budget bills

AUSTIN (AP) — Moments after spending and tax bills won final legislative approval, Texas Republicans said they were looking for opponents to run against Democratic lawmakers who voted for the measures.

"I call on the citizens of Texas to join with the Republican Party in recruiting candidates who will work to put government on a budget like the rest of us," GOP Chairman Fred Meyer said.

The record $59.45 billion budget and $2.7 billion tax increase package was sent Tuesday to Gov. Ann Richards for her signature or veto.

"This budget represents a 22 percent increase in the size of state government — an increase that is totally unacceptable and inexcusable," Meyer said.

"Gov. Richards presided over a complete breach of faith with the citizens of Texas. She tried to talk like a Republican but ended up acting like a Democrat in lobbying for these huge tax and spending increases," Meyer said.

Asked about the GOP criticism, Richards said the tax hike was one of the smallest in recent years.

Fred Friedrichs checks his chicken coop for eggs and snakes. He has killed over 70 snakes this summer.

Giant snakes invade pair's chicken coop

NAVASOTA (AP) — Fred Friedrichs and his wife, Pat, never go outdoors now without packing a gun.

The Grimes County couple's small ranch near Navasota has been invaded by dozens of poisonous snakes up to 7 feet long that have devoured eggs, pigeons and even chicks.

"It's an everyday occurrence," Mrs. Friedrichs says. "I don't guess you ever get used to it. The thing is, when you walk into the barn you just don't walk in. You look around. As long as you're cautious... Anybody fool enough to just go walking in and not pay attention could get hurt."

Friedrichs, 68, is a rancher and retired real estate agent whose lung and heart problems require him to use a small four-wheel motorized scooter to get around outdoors. In addition to the ever-present oxygen bottle, he carries a .22-caliber rifle.

He's had the 40 acres of land since 1937 and has had a house here for 30 years. And while he may have a snake or two each year to deal with, it's nothing like the past several weeks.

"It's unusual. It's very very unusual," he said Tuesday. "I quit counting the other day when I got to 30. It was 18 or 19 days by then. Then I killed 26 in 15 days. Previous to that, I had killed 30 or 35."

The snakes are described as a cross between a chicken snake and the poisonous water moccasin, also known as a cottonmouth.

Baptists may end Baylor dispute

DALLAS (AP) — A Baptist General Convention of Texas committee Tuesday endorsed a proposal that could settle the convention's dispute with Baylor University over control of the Waco school.

The committee ratified an informal agreement worked out last month by Baptist leaders that would allow the convention to elect 25 percent of Baylor's governing board. The university's regents would elect the remaining 75 percent.

The proposal is similar to one offered earlier by Baylor, but rejected by convention leaders.

"The committee just seemed to feel ... that this was the best deal they could make with Baylor and was worth trying," said committee chairman Robert E. Naylor, president emeritus of the Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary in Fort Worth.

Also Tuesday, the committee recommended that the convention consider freeing some $1 million in funds earmarked for the university. The BGCT escrowed the funds after Baylor's regents voted last year to insulate the school from convention control.

If approved by the BGCT Executive Board, Baylor regents and messengers to the annual state convention meeting in November, the agreement would heal a rift opened last September.

Family, friends bid farewell to Evans

HOUSTON (HNS) — Friends and supporters of state Rep. Larry Evans joined his wife and family in bidding farewell to the man they remembered as an untiring and intensely dedicated champion of the underprivileged.

Evans, 42, was found dead in his Austin apartment last Wednesday from an adverse reaction to crack cocaine.

Despite the circumstances of his death, those in attendance — including city, state and federal officials — clearly wanted to forgive and forget.

"All of us are human," said state Rep. Sylvester Turner, chairman of the Harris County legislative delegation and candidate for Houston mayor. "All of us will die. All of us are susceptible to the same ending. I'm not going to pass any judgment on Larry," Turner said outside the church.

Evans' wife, Charlene, and their two sons — Larry, 11, and Jon Alan, 8 — sat in the front row, where speakers and friends stopped to pay their respects. Also present was his mother, Ida.

The funeral Monday at Good Hope Missionary Baptist Church in Houston drew a nearly capacity crowd that included U.S. Rep. Craig Washington, D-Houston; Houston Mayor Kathy Whitmire, Texas Attorney General Dan Morales, House Speaker Gib Lewis, state Rep. Fred Blair of Dallas, members of Houston City Council and local judges.

Couple to get baby back

EL PASO (AP) — A baby taken from a California couple after authorities suspected the pair was trying to smuggle the infant across the border will be back in their arms this week.

The 2-month-old girl, who is being kept in a child protection agency shelter in Ciudad Juarez, Mexico, will be flown to Zacatecas, Mexico where the California couple will be able to legally adopt her.

Maria Sotelo Roman, 37, and Jose Roman, 54, of Wilmington, Calif., are free on bail in Jalpa, Mexico, where they face charges of falsifying documents and making false statements to authorities, the El Paso Times reported Tuesday.

The Romans were stopped at the Paso del Norte Bridge on July 25 when inspectors became suspicious of the paperwork the couple had for the baby. They surrendered to Mexican authorities, hoping they might be able to adopt the baby legally.

The Romans told authorities they had paid 1.6 million pesos, or about $500, for the child. However, Maria del Refugio Rodriguez Macias of Tabasco, Zacatecas, told Mexican authorities she gave her daughter to the Romans because she is extremely poor and couldn't afford to support her. Ms. Rodriguez said the couple only paid for her medical expenses, said Javier Martinez of the Child Protection Agency in Juarez.

"That cleared the couple of the most serious charges — child trafficking — and opened the door for them to adopt the baby legally," Martinez said.

Mrs. Roman said her sister, who lives in Tabasco, told her about the baby when she overheard Ms. Rodriguez talking about offering her for adoption.

Man who walked world backward wants cash for feet

CLUTE, Texas (AP) — Plennie L. Wingo has had plenty to talk about throughout his long life. After all, he walked around the world backwards.

Now the 96-year-old is looking to cash in on his feats and his feet.

If Wingo's wishes come true, the feet on which he has journeyed will end up in a museum after he dies.

"I've been wondering how I could ever get any money out of walking backwards around the world," he said. "I would be willing to sell the rights to use my feet after I die to anyone that would want them. Maybe some museum would want them."

Born Jan. 24, 1895, Wingo is named in the Guinness Book of World Records and is honored with a life-size wax figure in the Ripley's Believe It or Not Museum in San Francisco.

The Wichita Falls man answered the Depression of the 1930s with his acclaimed back-stepping strolls.

His most famous journey took him more than 18 months to complete. The 8,000-mile trek across the United States and Europe in 1931 and 1932 began in Santa Monica, Calif., and ended in Istanbul, Turkey.

Wingo sold 25-cent post cards along the way to support himself and to purchase the ticket to cross the Atlantic Ocean by ship.

"That's all that anybody ever wants to talk to me about. That trip," he said during a recent interview.

As Wingo explains in his autobiographical paperback, "The Restless Texan Who Walked Around The World Backwards," millionaires were reading the stock market reports and jumping out of skyscrapers, and able men were selling apples on the street corners.

"With the whole world going backwards maybe the only way to see it was to turn around," he wrote. "By walking backwards you see it right side too. Certainly the people who kept on walking the old way weren't doing any better."

Wingo reemerged during the nation's bicentennial when he made a 452-mile walk across California, requested of him by Ripley's Believe It Or Not.

The journey landed Wingo on "The Tonight Show" where Johnny Carson was tricked into paying $1 for one of Wingo's post cards (Ed McMahon had to spring for Carson, who had no money in his pocket).

A former chef, Wingo said he needs to take care of his own needs and the needs of his wife, Juanita, 63, who has heart problems.

"I am willing to sell my feet so that I can live it up the rest of my life," he said.

CONSUMING INTERESTS

Frozen entree is too much of good thing

By Linda Anderson

For a long time now, I've been hearing about Marie Callender's restaurants and how good they are. Now Marie Callender's is producing frozen foods for supermarkets, and naturally I had to see if the food was a good as its reputation. I realize that restaurant food and frozen food are two different things (even if the name is the same), but this was as close as I could get to the "real thing."

Anderson

Marie Callender's has a whole line of frozen foods, including chicken parmigiana with linguini; fettucini primavera with tortellini, as well as fettucini alfredo; turkey, chicken, beef, and chicken and broccoli pot pies; apple, cherry, peach and berry cobblers; spaghetti with meat sauce and garlic bread or with marinara sauce and French bread pizza; turkey with gravy and dressing; and chili with cornbread. I decided to sample a chicken pot pie for taste, price and advertising accuracy.

Price for the pie was $2.99, which I thought was pretty steep until I realized that this and many other Marie Callender's frozen foods will actually feed two — the pie was 17 ounces instead of the 8 ounces for most other frozen pot pies.

Label advertising claimed "A golden flaky crust surrounds chunks of white chicken meat, carrots, peas, celery and sliced mushrooms in a creamy sauce." Then it went on to describe the business's life history: "Our story begins in 1948, when we decided to bake pies for restaurants. Inspired by Marie's love for good home cooking, we opened our first restaurant in 1963. We felt that if we served people good food, and plenty of it, they'd come back and visit us again and again. And they have for over twenty five years.

"We are now offering you the same, time tested dishes through the supermarkets. In keeping with the Marie Callender tradition, we will prepare only the highest quality products, based upon the same recipes used in our restaurants. Our tradition of providing a great value will continue with our retail products. As usual, you can expect good food and plenty of it!

"Please enjoy these dishes and send any comments, with proof of purchase from side panel imprinted with code numbers, to the address below. We thank you for your patronage." It's signed, Don and Kate Callender. (I still don't know who Marie Callender is, only that she loves "good home cooking.")

OK, so far so good. Now for the taste test. Since my young taste-testers aren't too fond of pie (unless it has a graham-cracker crust), I got to do this one all by myself.

And, like the label says, the pie did contain chunks of chicken, slices of carrots and mushrooms, and, of course, peas, in a creamy sauce. It also contained the thickest pot-pie crust I've ever seen. Don't get me wrong, I'm partial to pot pies, but believe me when I say this crust was thick. Too thick. The crust almost overwhelmed the filling. It was a big pie, too, so there were leftovers. A lot of leftovers.

I'm not sure the tastiness of the chunks of chicken, etc., really make up for the massive crust. Maybe I'll stick with other frozen pot pies for a while, and then try the Marie Callender's again. Just not yet. I'm still full.

Price listed is from a local supermarket. Prices at other locations may vary.

East Texas family farm specializes in watermelon

GRAPELAND (AP) — Fifty years ago, a round-faced teen-ager looked out on his fields and saw the future.

In so doing, young Wade Pennington doomed himself to spending his summers hoisting the world's heaviest harvest from the fields to market-bound trucks.

"That was at the time when I got out of school," said Pennington, still round-faced at 68 but now leather-skinned from a half-century of raising summer's favorite fruit — the watermelon. "The melons were the up-and-coming thing for this area."

They sure were, and still are, with 18-wheelers lining up daily to each haul 2,400 melons approaching 50,000 pounds across Texas and beyond.

A rarity, Pennington's operation is one of the dying breed of the family farm. His three sons, Glynn, Stanley and Troy, work beside their father daily and with him form Wade Pennington & Sons Melons.

"I don't know," Pennington mused. "We must've been doing something right to keep them together all these years. It could be that good meal their mother put on the table. Yeah, she deserves a lot of the credit."

ARBAY PENNINGTON'S good cooking aside, the three sons now are joined by a third generation. Eight-year-olds Ross and Ryan already work in the fields. And 10-year-old Aaron can be found most days in downtown Grapeland manning "Aaron's Produce," where he sells the fruit of his family's labors.

"I like it a lot," a familiarly round-faced Aaron says. "I make a lot of money from it — some for myself and the rest goes to Wade Pennington & Sons."

In this 50th season, the elder Pennington can leave most of the hoisting to his sons, and to 33 hands hired chiefly from the Grapeland Sandies varsity football team. Senior tight end Greg Whitt says the work makes for good off-season training.

"When we get ready for two-a-days, we'll already be strong," Whitt pointed out.

Wade Pennington & Sons Melons historically has hired its labor from the varsity squad, including the 1974 team that son Stanley helped win the state championship.

"Nine out of 10 thank me," Pennington said of the area's men who'll never forget hitting the fields at 5 a.m. "They thank me for showing them there's more to life than working in a watermelon field. But, it taught them to work and the value of a dollar."

On the family's vast acreage — business manager LaWanda Pennington, wife of Troy, says they've "never put a pen to it" — melons are the most important crop, but not the only crop by far.

AP Laserphoto

Thomas Wood of Tulsa, Okla., 8 months old, puts the watermelon where his mouth is.

More than 800 acres of peanuts are in the ground, registered angus cattle roam, hay is grown and baled and Pennington recently posed with his 12-foot corn stalks for the Grapeland Messenger.

PENNINGTON CALLED this season's 320 acres of mirage, jubilee and allsweet melons an "above average" crop. So is he planning a blowout golden anniversary celebration?

"Naw," he dismissed the notion, just like he dismisses the concept of retirement: "Yeah, when they put me in a casket. No, I have no intention of retiring as long as I can get around, 'cause if I didn't do something I don't think I'd last six months."

The family is similarly stubborn to keep the patriarch on the job.

"He's not going to retire," LaWanda says. "We're not going to let him either."

Brochettes offer alternative meat cut

Backyard barbecuist enjoys variety of flavor with meat marinades, side dishes

By Pierre Franey
N.Y. Times News Service

Barbecuing a slab of steak requires constant vigilance, carving and serving. An alternative is brochettes of beef with vegetables.

Brochettes not only cook much faster, they also are more forgiving to a backyard chef who wanders from the fire. It's OK to overcook a brochette or two, but not the entire steak.

This recipe calls for a marinade of lemon juice, coriander seed, fresh garlic, red pepper flakes, cumin, thyme, red wine, honey and fresh coriander. Since the meat is lean beef fillet or sirloin, both tender cuts, marination need be only 15 minutes.

Any longer, and the meat could begin to break down in the acidic liquid. Reserve the marinade for basting during the cooking.

Brochettes are filled with meat, onions and red pepper chunks. If you do not have a barbecue grill, this recipe works fine under a broiler at 500 degrees. In both cases about four minutes' cooking should leave them rare.

A simple, tasty side dish is rice with peas and parsley. I add a bit of Tabasco sauce to liven things up, but that is optional. This recipe has many variations, especially in summer when so much fresh produce is available.

To the rice, you could add okra, cubed beets, green beans, zucchini, sweet peppers, artichokes, tomatoes, fava beans, broccoli and more.

BEEF BROCHETTES WITH RED PEPPERS AND CORIANDER

1½ pounds lean beef, like fillet or sirloin
2 red onions, about ½ pound
2 medium-size red peppers
2 tablespoons fresh lemon juice
2 tablespoons coriander seeds
1 teaspoon chopped garlic
¼ teaspoon red pepper flakes
½ teaspoon cumin
4 sprigs fresh thyme, or 1 teaspoon dried
¼ cup dry red wine
2 tablespoons honey
2 tablespoons olive oil
4 tablespoons coarsely chopped fresh coriander
Salt and freshly ground pepper to taste

Preheat a charcoal grill to high or an oven broiler to 500 degrees. If wooden skewers are used, soak them in cold water until ready to use.

Cut the beef into 1-inch cubes. There should be 24 cubes.

Peel and cut the onions into 24 1-inch cubes. Reserve the remaining onion for another use. Set the cubes aside until ready to cook.

Cut away and discard the pepper cores, veins and seeds. Cut the peppers into 24 equal-size pieces and set aside until ready to cook.

Combine the meat and remaining ingredients in a mixing bowl. Blend well and marinate 15 minutes.

Drain the meat and arrange equal portions of meat, onions and peppers on skewers. Reserve the marinade for basting.

If the brochettes are to be cooked under the broiler, arrange them on a rack about 4 inches from the source of heat, leaving the door slightly ajar. Cook about 4 minutes for rare, basting with the reserved marinade and turning often. If the brochettes are to be cooked on a grill, place them on the grill and cook 4 minutes for rare, basting often with the reserved marinade while turning.

Yield: 4 servings.

RICE WITH PEAS AND PARSLEY

3 tablespoons butter
4 tablespoons chopped onion
1 cup converted rice
1½ cups water
1 bay leaf
Salt and freshly ground pepper to taste
4 drops Tabasco sauce or to taste
1 cup frozen peas
4 tablespoons finely chopped parsley

Heat 2 tablespoons of the butter in a saucepan and add the onion. Cook until wilted. Add the rice and stir briefly.

Add the water, bay leaf, salt, pepper and Tabasco. Bring to a boil, cover tightly and simmer 17 minutes.

Meanwhile, combine the peas with the remaining 1 tablespoon of butter in a saucepan with salt and pepper. Heat, shaking the saucepan to redistribute the peas so they cook evenly, about 1 minute.

Add the peas and parsley to the rice and stir with a fork to blend. Remove the bay leaf and serve.

Yield: 4 servings.

Easy Cordon Bleu casserole contains just seven ingredients

By Nancy Byal
Associated Press

Hats off to this casserole that offers homemade taste, make-ahead directions, and convenience — all in one! Layer and chill this seven-ingredient dish one night; cook it in your microwave oven the next. You'll have dinner on the table within 20 minutes.

CORDON BLEU CASSEROLE

1 10-ounce package frozen cut broccoli
4 slices rye or whole-wheat bread
1 2½-ounce package thinly sliced smoked chicken
1 6-ounce package sliced fully cooked ham
¼ teaspoon onion powder
1 10¾-ounce can ready-to-eat chunky creamy mushroom soup
½ of a 6-ounce package shredded Swiss cheese

Rinse broccoli under water to thaw and separate; pat dry. Line the bottom of an 8x8x2-inch microwave-safe baking dish with bread. Top with chicken, ham and broccoli. Stir onion powder into soup; pour over all. Sprinkle with cheese. Cover with microwave-safe clear plastic wrap; chill overnight, if desired.

Before cooking, fold back one corner of plastic wrap to vent steam. Cook on 50 percent power (medium) until heated through, allowing 13 to 15 minutes for unchilled casserole or 18 to 20 minutes for chilled casserole. During cooking, give the dish a half-turn once.

Apple pie spice enhances flavor of chicken

By Nancy Byal
Associated Press

Apple pie lovers, this stuffed chicken breast, filled with chopped apple and apple pie spice, is for you. Prosciutto (proh-SHOO-toh), the meat in the stuffing, is an Italian salt-cured ham. Should prosciutto be unavailable, you can substitute thin slices of boiled ham. Serve the chicken with apple slices, Italian-cut green beans and rice.

APPLE-PROSCIUTTO CHICKEN

2 whole large chicken breasts, skinned, boned and halved lengthwise
½ cup finely chopped apple
⅛ teaspoon apple pie spice
4 slices prosciutto or boiled ham
Apple pie spice
2 tablespoons finely chopped green onion
1 tablespoon margarine or butter
1 tablespoon all-purpose flour
Dash pepper
½ cup milk
½ cup shredded provolone cheese (2 ounces)
Hot cooked rice (optional)

Rinse chicken; pat dry. Place one chicken breast half, boned side up, between 2 pieces of clear plastic wrap. Working from center to edges, pound lightly with the flat side of a meat mallet to form a rectangle about ¼ inch thick. Remove plastic wrap. Repeat with remaining chicken. In a small bowl combine the chopped apple and the ⅛ teaspoon apple pie spice.

For filling, place one prosciutto or boiled ham slice on top of each chicken breast half. Spoon one-fourth of the apple mixture over each prosciutto slice. Fold in sides and roll up each breast half, starting from a narrow end. Secure with wooden toothpicks or non-metal skewers.

Arrange chicken rolls, seam side down, in an 8-inch round microwave-safe baking dish. Sprinkle with additional apple pie spice. Cover with microwave-safe clear plastic wrap. Turn back one corner to vent steam.

Cook on 100 percent power (high) for 6 to 8 minutes (low-wattage ovens: 7 to 9 minutes) or until chicken is tender and no pink remains, giving the dish a half-turn and rearranging the rolls after 4 minutes. Remove toothpicks. Cover to keep warm.

For sauce, in a 2-cup glass measure combine green onion and margarine or butter. Cook, uncovered, on high for 30 to 40 seconds or until margarine is melted. Stir in flour and pepper. Stir in milk. Cook, uncovered, on high for 2 to 3 minutes or until thickened and bubbly, stirring after every minute until sauce starts to thicken, then stirring every 30 seconds. Stir in cheese; cook, uncovered, on high about 30 seconds or until heated through, stirring once. Serve sauce over chicken and rice. Makes 4 servings.

Conventional Directions: Pound and stuff chicken breasts as directed. Place, seam side down, in a 10x6x2-inch baking dish. Bake, uncovered, in a 350-degree F oven for 25 to 30 minutes or until tender and no pink remains. Remove toothpicks. Meanwhile, in a small saucepan cook green onion in margarine or butter until tender but not brown. Stir in flour and pepper. Add 2-3rds cup milk all at once. Cook and stir until thickened and bubbly; cook and stir for 1 minute more. Stir in cheese until melted. Serve as directed.

Nutrition information per serving: 315 cal. (34 percent calories from fat), 43 g pro., 6 g carbo., 12 g fat, 116 mg chol., 427 mg sodium, 425 mg potassium, 1 g dietary fiber. U.S. RDA: 15 percent thiamine, 16 percent riboflavin, 81 percent niacin, 17 percent calcium.

Cooks are asked to submit their 'Best of Texas' original recipes

Staff Report

Texas cooks are invited to submit their favorite original Texas recipes in a new contest announced by Golden West Publication.

DEAR ABBY

Sometimes, cause of death is cause for public concern

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: How tragically ironic that your column advocating concealing the cause of death to spare the feelings of the survivors appeared in the same issue of the Los Angeles Times as the obituary of the famous actor, James Franciscus, dead of emphysema at 57. I am happy to report that Burt Folkart's fine obituary plainly stated that Franciscus was a heavy smoker!

Van Buren

I tend to agree with your position — with one glaring exception: When a prominent person dies of lung cancer, emphysema, pneumonia, or any other smoking-related disease — (Ed Murrow, Steve McQueen, Yul Brynner, Nat Cole, Harry James, Lucille Ball, John Wayne, Zeppo Marx, Humphrey Bogart, Bette Davis, Sammy Davis, et al — the list is endless), to suppress the fact that the deceased was a nicotine addict (as they almost always are), is to play into the hands of the cigarette manufacturers.

By the same token, juvenile criminals should always be identified, no matter how young. Perpetrators of adult crimes should be treated like adults, not coddled by the news media.

Incidentally, I am a retired dentist who has always told my smoking patients to worry less about the ugly brown stain on their teeth and more about the possibility of premature tobacco-caused death. — MARVIN H. LEAF, D.D.S., LOS ANGELES

DEAR DR. LEAF: You said a mouthful.

DEAR ABBY: My fiance, "Jack," agreed to be the best man at the upcoming wedding of his friend, "Alan."

Alan and I are acquainted, and he knows that Jack and I have been engaged for over a year. The problem is that I did not get an invitation to the wedding. Some mutual friends got their invitation a couple of weeks ago, so I know the invitations have already been sent out.

It is my understanding that the members of the wedding party should also be sent invitations as a matter of courtesy — but Alan and his bride-to-be have not done this.

Jack says that they probably just assume that I will also attend, because he will be the best man.

Abby, I would feel uncomfortable going to a wedding and reception to which I was not invited.

Also, I'm not sure it was an innocent oversight, because Alan has tried to set Jack up with other women in the past, knowing full well he is engaged to me.

What should I do, if anything? — SNUBBED

DEAR SNUBBED: Tell Jack that you are offended at having been "overlooked" — and you'd feel more welcome if you were to receive an invitation. And since the bride sends the invitations, she should be reminded. But whether you receive a formal invitation or not, you'd be foolish to sit home while your fiance is dancing at the wedding!

"How to Be Popular" is an excellent guide to becoming a better conversationalist and a more attractive person. To order, send a long, business-size, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Popularity Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. (Postage is included.)

Judges prefer cookbooks with personal touch

Staff Report

The more personal a cookbook is, the better the judges like it, according to the panel of culinary experts who judge the annual Tabasco Community Cookbook Awards.

Books don't have to be elaborate or expensive, but the more information about the group, the community, the cause, the donors, the recipes, the better. This especially applies to recipes, according to Jan Longone, a culinary historian and one of the panel of judges. "How interesting it would be to know who Aunt Ella of Anut Ella's Brownies is/was; etc.," she pointed out.

Before starting a book, think through the theme and how it will apply to the various sections. Try to provide an original cover design and book title reflective of the area or intent of the book. Name, complete address of the organization, and date of publication should appear on the title page.

Other points made by the panel:

- Avoid using stock recipes and filler material.
- Include a table of contents page as well as a back-of-the-book index of all recipes. An alphabetical listing of recipe titles within categories is also helpful.
- Urge contributors to follow the standards of good recipe writing such as listing ingredients in order of use, carefully measuring amounts of ingredients, providing specific cookware sizes, range-top heat levels, oven temperatrues and cooking times (preparation time in also helpful); and starting action steps by first indicating appropriate bowl or cookware.
- Be clear about procedures: do not merely combine ingredients, but "stir," "sift," "beat," or whatever most graphically describes the action. Make sure you have accounted for all ingredients in the procedure steps.
- Always include yield (number of servings).
- Eliminate duplications of recipes: avoid printing more than one version of recipes which vary by only one or two ingredients. Don't try to include all recipes submitted, but carefully select the most interesting ones. Many groups test recipes two or three times to make sure they warrant inclusion in the book and the ingredient amounts and procedures are correct.
- Assign a team of two or three people to proofread the copy and the recipes, checking for omissions, spelling errors, duplication and consistancy in presentation (recipes should all follow same format).

Deadline for entries in the Tabasco Community Cookbook Awards and the Walter S. McIlhenny Hall of Fame is Oct. 1. The Community Cookbook Awards are open to all cookbooks published by non-profit organizations in the past two years. Previously published community cookbooks, which have sold over 100,000 copies, may submitted for the Hall of Fame. Tabasco Award winners will recieve contributions to designated charities, plaques for their organizations, and certificates for committee members. Stickers for cookbooks will be sent to all winners and Hall of Fame honorees.

The panel judging the competition will again be chaired by Jan Turner Hazard, food editor of Ladies Home Journal. Other judges will be Meryle Evans, culinary historian; Ann H. Harvey, executive editor, Oxmoor House; Jan Longone, Wine and Food Library; William Rice, Chicago Tribune columnist; Tommy Simmons, food editor, Baton Rouge Morning Advocate; and Nahum Waxman, Kitchen Arts and Letters.

For an entry form and contest rules, write to Tabasco Community Cookbook Awards, c/o Hunter MacKenzie, Inc., 41 Madison Ave., New York, N.Y., 10010.

Midland BBQ teams compete

Staff Report

Three Midland barbecue teams — Armadillo Express, Jerry King and Insurance Concepts — have accepted invitations to participate in The National Championship Barbecue Cookoff Aug. 24 in Meridian.

Armadillo Express team members are Chief Cook Bill Kelly, and JoAnn Kelly, Teena McCabe, Teddy Bisbee and Sherry Bisbee. Jerry King is chief cook and sole member of his team. Members of Insurance Concepts team are Chief Cook Edward E. Kelley and Jeanette R. Kelley.

The teams will compete for more than $11,000 in prize money and trophies in six catetories: beef brisket, pork ribs, chicken breast, pinto beans, showmanship and best rig. Proceeds from the cookoff will benefit Camp John Marc Myers, Special Camps for Special Kids, located a few miles east of Meridian. The camp provides specialized camping facilities for physically impaired, or chronically or terminally ill children.

Other events taking place during cookoff weekend include an auction and dance Aug. 23 and a parade 10 a.m. Aug. 24. Entertainment will be provided during the day from the central stage. Horse shoe tournament, celebrity cookoff, arts and crafts booths, and food booths will be included in the event.

Rhonda Rene' Morrison, the new Miss Texas, will be a special guest at the cookoff.

Daly won't kick

ANDERSON, Ind. (AP) — Scratch PGA champion John Daly from the Indianapolis Colts' roster.

Colts' general manager Jim Irsay vetoed plans for professional golf's longest hitter to try his toe at placekicking during an exhibition game with New Orleans on Saturday night.

"I don't think it's a good idea to take the future Jack Nicklaus and open him up to possible injury," Irsay said Tuesday.

Daly set school records for most consecutive extra points (24) and most field goals (five) in a season when he was a senior at Jefferson City Helias High School in 1983.

He was invited by Indianapolis coach Ron Meyer to join the Colts if he doesn't make the cut at The International tournament at Castle Rock, Colo., this week.

Celts sign Hunt

BOSTON (AP) — Anderson Hunt, the only starter from UNLV who wasn't taken in last June's NBA draft, has signed with the Boston Celtics.

Terms of the contract were not disclosed in the Celtics' announcement on Monday.

The 6-foot-2, 175-pound Hunt signed after attending the Celtics' rookie summer camp and impressing senior executive vice president Dave Gavitt as a member of Boston's team in the Los Angeles summer league where he averaged 8.2 points in 23.6 minutes per game.

Gibbs races

CARLISLE, Pa. (AP) — Washington coach Joe Gibbs, winner of two Super Bowls in 11 years with the Redskins, unveiled plans Tuesday to make his mark in another pressure sport — NASCAR racing.

Gibbs, the fourth winningest active NFL coach, formally announced the formation of a Joe Gibbs Racing Team complete with driver, crew chief, four cars and a number of corporate sponsors.

"This is the thrill of my life," Gibbs, 50, gushed to reporters.

His car, a green and black Chevrolet Lumina, is expected to make its debut on the NASCAR circuit at the Daytona 500 next February with driver Dale Jarrett.

Dallas offense seeks punch

■ Cowboy coach Jimmy Johnson blames touchdownless performance on typical preseason mistakes.

Associated Press

IRVING — The Dallas Cowboys went back to their training camp in Austin on Tuesday in search of their lost offense.

Four field goals by Ken Willis was the best the new Norv Turner offense could generate in a 17-12 NFL exhibition loss to the Los Angeles Raiders on Monday night.

"We were playing so many young people that we are going to make mistakes," said Dallas coach Jimmy Johnson. "We had a problem getting into the end zone.

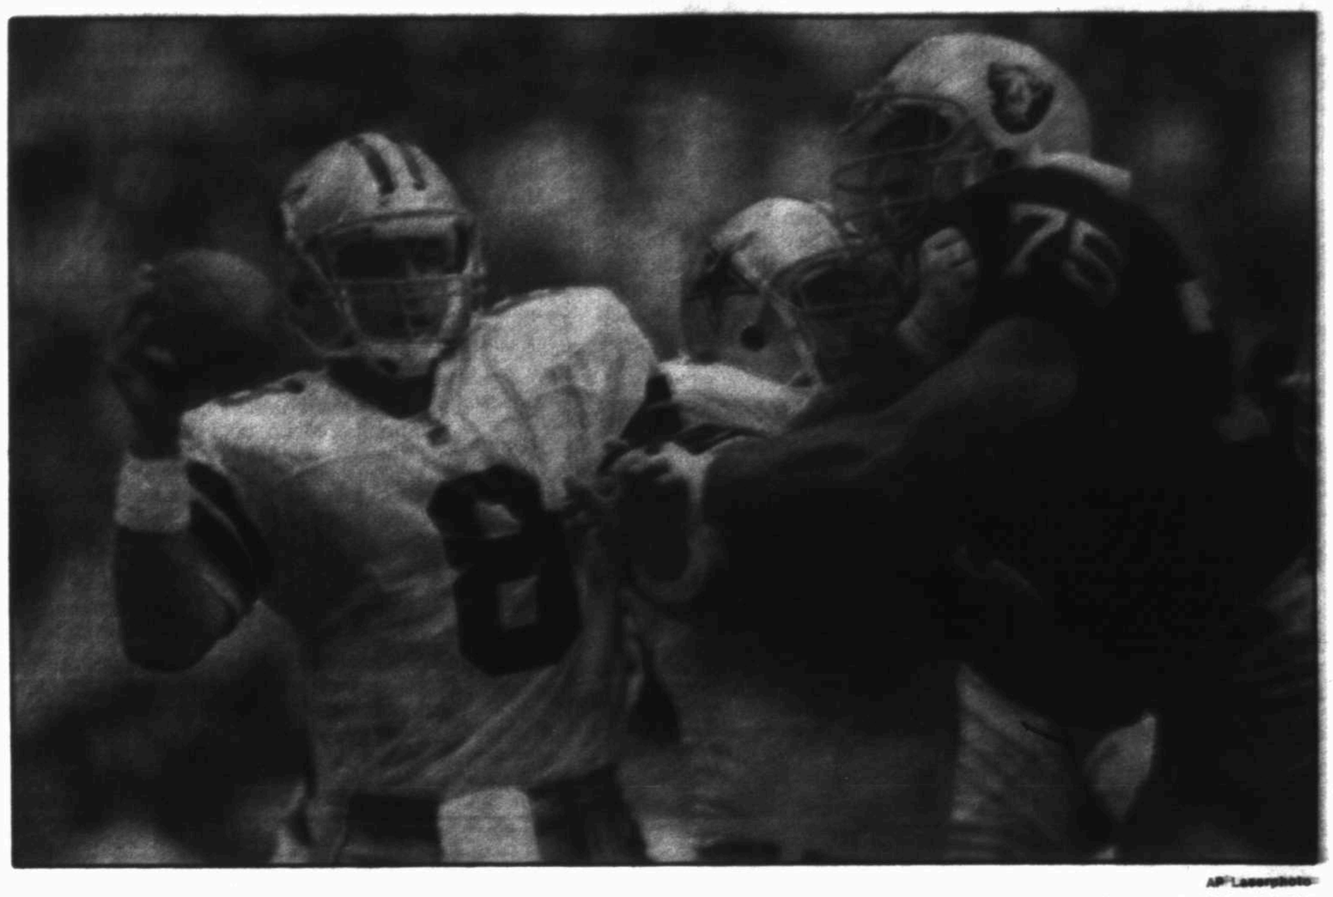

"We had three big mistakes that hurt us. One was an alignment problem; we had a dropped ball; and we missed on a throw."

Johnson also got a scare as the Cowboys preseason record dropped to 1-1.

Running back Emmitt Smith came limping back to the sidelines but only got a skinned leg.

"Emmitt wasn't supposed to be playing anymore, but we had a substitution problem," Johnson said. "Emmitt saw that we needed a tailback. And he went into the game. That's him. He wants to play. I don't even know if he had his pads in Dorsey Tierney celebrates her gold medal after breaking her own Pan Am Games record in the 200 breaststroke in a time of 2:28.69.

Tierney breaststrokes to 200 record twice

■ Dorsey Tierney, a cousin of Indy car racer Danny Sullivan, shatters a Pan Am Games record twice in the same day.

Associated Press

HAVANA — On land and in the water, speed runs in Dorsey Tierney's family.

The cousin of former Indy 500 champion Danny Sullivan, Tierney shattered the Pan American Games record in the women's 200-meter breaststroke twice Tuesday as U.S. swimmers captured four more golds and three silvers.

The only race Americans haven't won among 10 in two days of competition was the men's 100 butterfly, the specialty of Olympic and Pan Am champion Anthony Nesty of Surinam.

Nesty, who trains at the University of Florida, broke his own Pan Am record to win in 53.45 seconds, well ahead of silver medalist Mike Merrell, 18, of Charlotte, N.C., who is headed for Southern Cal.

Tierney, of Louisville, Ky., leaped out of the water and pumped her fist when she saw her time of 2:28.69, nearly seven seconds faster than the record she cracked earlier in the day when she swam 2:32.33. The old Pan Am record of 2:35.53, also was beaten in an earlier heat by Canada's Chantal Dubois, who won the silver.

"I put the blinders on. I tried not to think of anything else," said Tierney, the NCAA champion, whose winning time was the second best ever by an American and second fastest in the world this year to 14-year-old Anita Nall's 2:27.08.

"When I saw the time I was shocked," said Tierney, the U.S. women's team captain. "My coach kept telling me I should go that fast, and I had a real good summer. I changed my stroke a little bit. My coaches have helped me get a little more distance out of my stroke and have helped me get stronger.

"Mentally I'm much stronger. I'm older. I'm 21. A lot of people think maybe it's a little too old to drop a lot of time in swimming, but it can be done."

Alex Kostich and Jody Braden swam to a gold-silver finish in the men's 400 freestyle. Kostich, a senior at Stanford, led throughout the race to win in 4:23.96. Braden came back from a distant fourth after 300 meters to finish second ahead of Canada's Jasen Pratt.

Americans also swam to a gold and silver in the women's 200 freestyle as Lisa Jacob, 17, of Mission Viejo, Calif., won by a body length over Barbara Metz of Stanford in 2:02.06.

The fourth U.S. gold of the night, and ninth of the games, came in the men's 800 freestyle relay, as the American team clocked 7:23.39, a tenth of a second off the Pan Am mark.

Rose says Cosell lied in his book

Associated Press

BOCA RATON, Fla. — Pete Rose, wanting to close certain chapters of his life, spoke out about the allegations of a book on Tuesday.

Rose

Rose called Howard Cosell "a liar," denying the inferences in the former ABC-TV announcer's book that he bet on baseball and caused the death of baseball commissioner A. Bartlett Giamatti.

Cosell concludes in "What's Wrong With Sports" that the Rose case led directly to Giamatti's massive heart attack, which killed him two years ago, just two weeks after he banished Rose from baseball.

"He said I killed Giamatti," Rose said. "Giamatti didn't go through half the stress that I went through, may God rest his soul. I liked him. We both cared about the game, loved the game and worried about it. Cosell's no authority."

Rose has admitted betting on football and basketball, but still vehemently denies ever betting on baseball, an admission that would all but seal any hopes of him being voted into the Hall of Fame.

Rose made the comments as he outlined plans for his future at a news conference at Stonebridge Country Club in Boca Raton where he purchased a home 11 months ago.

Rose said he rarely has the urge to gamble anymore and if he does he calls his "gambling doctor," Dr. James Hillard, head of the psychiatric department at the University of Cincinnati, for advice.

"I'm trying to put these chapters behind me and go on to the next chapters and the next ones," Rose said. "I'll just keep doing the right things, get my life in order, see my doctor on a regular basis, watch my associations, and don't bet."

The all-time leader in hits (4,256), at bats (14,053), and games played (3,562) becomes eligible for induction into the Hall of Fame next year on the condition he is granted reinstatement by Commissioner Vincent.

"He said I killed Giamatti. Giamatti didn't go through half the stress that I went through, may God rest his soul ... Cosell's no authority."

— Pete Rose

"I'll obviously apply someday ... The ultimate goal to have as a ballplayer is to go to the Hall of Fame," Rose said. "I don't think Faye Vincent will be an unfair man in my situation, but I can be wrong. I'm not going to say I'm betting on it."

Rose said he stays in touch with baseball through his morning radio show in Cincinnati and wouldn't rule out a return to the diamond.

"Baseball is still in my blood," Rose said. "You can't take it out of me. It's not a burning desire to return to managing but if somebody called me to manage a team I would seriously consider it."

Rose pleaded guilty in 1989 to reporting false income tax returns and later served five months in a Marion, Ill. jail and three months in a halfway house in Cincinnati before being released in April.

Rose, whose Florida roots date back to 1961 when he played for the Tampa Tarpons in the minor leagues, said he is selling his home in Plant City and may build a new home in Lake Worth next year.

Already the co-owner of two restaurants in Cincinnati with Bengals quarterback Boomer Esiason and former receiver Cris Collinsworth, he plans to open Pete Rose's Precinct, a posh steak house in Boca Raton this winter.

He also wants to host a syndicated television and radio sports show and is building a marina in Boynton Beach.

Phil streak over at 13

NL Roundup

Associated Press

PHILADELPHIA — The ingredients in the Philadelphia Phillies' record-tying 13-game winning streak — strong pitching and timely hitting — are those usually associated with a winning recipe.

But what makes the whole concoction difficult to believe is that the Phillies are doing the cooking.

They came into Tuesday night's game at Pittsburgh trying to set a team record. The winning streak matches one from 1977 as the team's longest this century.

Thirteen turned out to be the operative number Tuesday night. The Pirates snapped the 13-game run with a 4-3 victory, Pittsburgh's 13th consecutive victory over the Phillies.

How did a last-place team on a seven-game losing skid go the next two weeks without another loss?

Angels widen gap again

Staff Report

EL PASO — The Midland Angels widened their first-place lead to two games with a 5-2 win at El Paso Tuesday night.

First baseman Don Barbara singled to rightfield to drive in Mark Howie and Tim Salmon in the top of the 10th to ice the win for the Angels. Marcus Lawton then doubled to drive in Damion Easley for the final three-run margin of victory.

Howie doubled on the first pitch of the 10th, marking the Angels' first extra-base hit of the night.

The Diablos — 59-4 this season in games in which they led after the seventh inning — dropped three of the five games to the Angels in Midland's final series at Cohen Stadium this regular season.

For the Angels, it was another come-backer for a team which seems bound and determined to make the Texas League playoffs.

Trailing by a run in the eighth, Walt McConnell singled in Easley to tie the game at 2-2.

El Paso scored its only two runs of the game on a two-run homer by John Jaha, his 23rd of the season, which gives him the Texas League lead.

Reliever Doug Robertson got the win for Midland, running his record to 2-2; Hector Berrios picked up his first save of the season. Mark Chapman fell to 3-3 with the loss for El Paso.

Midland leads both the Diablos and San Antonio by two games. Wichita falls four games off the pace. Only 20 games remain in the 1991 Texas League season.

In the East, where Shreveport dominated the first half and appeared to be about to do the same in the second, now owns just a ½-game lead over Jackson.

The Angels open a five-game road trip in San Antonio now. The last time they traveled to the Alamo City, the Angels took four of six games from the Missions. Midland owns a better record against San Antonio than any other West Division team.

COWBOYS: Smith's good deed won't happen again

(From 1C)

when he went back in the game. But he's OK. He said he wouldn't do it again."

Smith, who was supposed to play only in the first half, went into the game when running back Curvin Richards was injured.

"I thought I'd do a good deed," Smith said. "I didn't see anyone in there and they were calling for a back."

The Cowboys kicking game also broke down. Once punter Mike Saxon passed (incomplete) instead of punting. He got a royal chewing out from Johnson.

"I knew I should have kicked the ball," Saxon said. "I deserve what I got on the sideline. It was a good pre-season chewing out."

Johnson said "I told Saxon I didn't want him to do that again, ever."

The Cowboys play their next exhibition game at Houston on Sunday night in another nationally televised game. They then have their final preseason warmup at home on Friday, Aug. 23 against the Atlanta Falcons.

Dallas opens the regular season Sept. 1 at Cleveland.

Pistons dump Edwards, gain Denver's Woolridge

AUBURN HILLS, Mich. (AP) — The Detroit Pistons traded center James Edwards and acquired forward Orlando Woolridge in separate deals with the Denver Nuggets and Los Angeles Clippers on Tuesday.

The 7-foot-1 Edwards goes to the Clippers in return for 6-6 guard Jeff Martin and the Clippers second-round draft pick in 1995.

The Pistons also traded Scott Hastings, a 6-11 reserve center-forward, and their 1992 second-round pick to the Nuggets for the 6-9 Woolridge.

"We're looking for a little more speed and scoring ability," Pistons general manager Jack McCloskey said. "I think getting Orlando helps us but at the same time we lose a guy who has been very valuable to us in James Edwards."

Edwards, 35, averaged 13.6 points and 3.8 rebounds last season. The Los Angeles Lakers' third-round pick in 1977, Edwards played in Los Angeles, Indiana, Cleveland and Phoenix before joining Detroit midway through the 1988-89 season.

Woolridge, 31, averaged 25.1 points and 6.8 rebounds last season, playing in only 53 games due to a detached retina.

He was drafted in the first round by Chicago in 1981 and also has played for New Jersey and the Los Angeles Lakers, averaging 16.3 points and 4.4 rebounds in nine seasons before joining Denver last year.

Martin, a third-year player, averaged 7.1 points in 77 games for the Clippers in 1990-91.

Figures as of 8/8/91

☐ High Current Yields
☐ 100% Government Guaranteed
☐ "AAA" Rating
☐ Suitable for IRAs, Keoghs, SEPs, Pension & Profit Sharing & other Qualified Retirement Plans

*The Estimated Current Return is computed by multiplying the Estimated Net Annual Interest Rate per 1,000 Units by $1,000 and dividing the result by the Public Offering Price per 1,000 Units. The Estimated Net Annual Interest Rate per Unit will vary with changes in fees and expenses of the Trustee, Sponsor and Evaluator and with the principal prepayment, redemption, maturity, exchange or sale of Securities while the Public Offering Price will vary with changes in the offering price of the underlying Securities; therefore, there is no assurance that the present Estimated Current Return indicated above will be realized in the future. The Estimated Long-Term Return is calculated using a formula which (1) takes into consideration, and determines and factors in the relative weightings of, the market values, yields, (which takes into account the amortization of premiums and the accretion of discounts) and estimated average life of all of the Securities in the Series and (2) takes into account the expenses and sales charge associated with each Unit of such Series. Since the market values and estimated average lives of the Securities and the expenses of the Trust will change, there is no assurance that the present Estimated Long-Term Return as indicated above will be realized in the future. The Estimated Current Return and Estimated Long-Term Return are expected to differ because the calculation of the Estimated Long-Term Return reflects the date and estimated amount of principal returned while the Estimated Current Return calculation includes only the Net Annual Interest Rate and Public Offering Price. Neither rate reflects the true return to Unit holders which is lower because neither includes the effect of the delay in the first payment to Unit holders and because Estimated Long-Term Return includes an internal compounding rate that takes into account the premium coupon rate of the Securities.

The estimated average life was calculated using an estimated prepayment rate for Ginnie Maes as determined from the sophisticated computer model of a primary market maker of Ginnie Maes. As changes to the data used in the computer model occur, the estimated average life will change. The actual life of the Securities is likely to be different from the estimated average life used herein.

Scheduled payments of principal and interest on the Securities in the Trust are guaranteed by the Government National Mortgage Association, but the units are not government backed. The market value of the units will fluctuate with changes in market conditions.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 14, 1991

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Important gains will come through the trips you take and the contacts you make. Self-promotion will work like a charm in early October. Those in publishing and communications make larger profits in December. Discuss any financial concerns with your loved ones next January and revise your personal budget and spending habits. Romance looks especially lucky for you in March and April of 1992. Attending a reunion next June could turn your whole life around.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actress Susan St. James, basketball great Earvin "Magic" Johnson, jockey Robyn Smith, actor Steve Martin.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You identify strongly with your work and tend to worry a great deal. Refuse to panic over a deadline or schedule. You will do just fine! Wear your heart on your sleeve in romance.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Extra record-checking could win you important points with those in authority. An economic decision is best postponed until later in the week. Check your calendar. Forgetting an important date could cause trouble.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You are eager to help a close friend escape from self-imposed bondage. Postpone a meeting until tomorrow when more information will be available. You need to have the latest facts and figures.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Keep your mind focused on essential tasks even while pondering mysterious happenings. Remain calm when people act selfishly at work. Direct confrontations are best avoided. Speak your mind with your loved ones.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): The spotlight is on groups and friends who can help you accomplish your goals. Specialized knowledge gives you a big advantage over the competition. Spend money on travel or further schooling.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Influential people seek the special knowledge you alone may possess. Show loyalty to your employer. Be patient with a loved one's quirks. A close friend needs emotional support. Listen attentively.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): The spotlight is on your job or career plans. You have what it takes to succeed. Travel is both uplifting and enlightening. Go ahead and make some interesting purchases. Ordinary souvenirs are not your style.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Shared pleasures make an intimate relationship even more thrilling. Indulge your love for drama and glamour. Striking a better balance between work and play will help you avoid a domestic upheaval.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Try to untangle a confusing situation without getting upset. Make allowances for a possible misunderstanding. A candid but constructive conversation proves helpful. You will also benefit from meditating in a quiet setting.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Problems with friends can be solved if you stay calm and collected. Be realistic about loved one's shortcomings. A work associate will help you get along with a newcomer. Romance is sublime!

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Uniting for the common good is essential now. Someone you like suggests the two of you travel together. Friends may act mysterious. Avoid asking questions. A nice surprise may be in the works!

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Certain plans could turn sour. You will enjoy helping people who have trouble expressing themselves. Relaxing at home with your mate is great. A loved one shares an important confidence. Keep secrets.

TODAY'S CHILDREN have so much faith in logic that they tend to discount their intuitive feelings. Wise parents will encourage these perceptive Leos to trust their hunches! Although these children realize that their perfectionist streak drives their loved ones crazy, they cannot make themselves relax. Luckily, these Leos are diplomatic and good-natured. They phrase their many suggestions with great tact.

Opening lead: King of ♣ Great Britain won the European Championships held in Killarney, Ireland, some six weeks ago and qualified to lead that continent's four-team contingent to the 1991 World Team Championships, to be held in October in Japan. The award for the best defense went to Ireland's Pat Walshe for his sparkling effort on this hand.

The Polish North-South were using a highly artificial bidding system. North's two-diamond opening bid promised either a red or a black two-suiter, and South's jump to three spades was invitational, showing a one-suited hand of 6-10 points. We find North's raise to game incomprehensible.

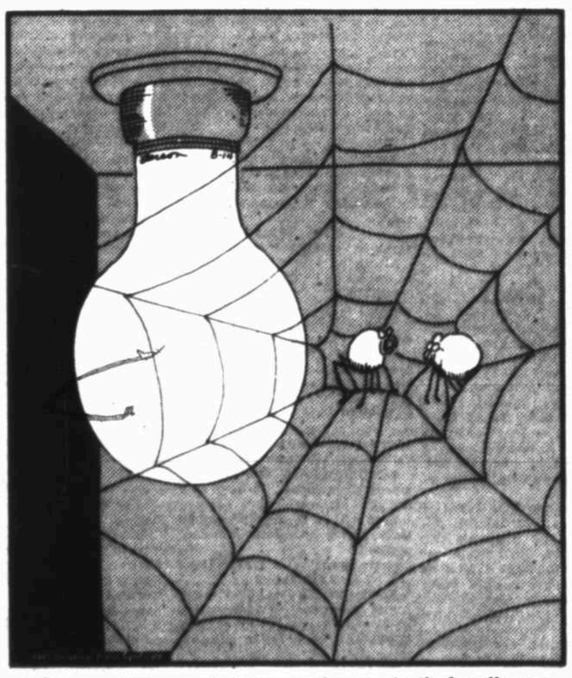

Walshe, West, led the king of clubs. Declarer won in dummy and tried the spade finesse, losing to the king. Can you spot how Walshe defeated the contract?

West found the only card to force declarer to concede—he shifted to the king of hearts! Declarer won that in dummy, but now had no way to return to hand to draw the remaining trumps. Declarer did as well as possible by leading a diamond toward the jack in the closed hand, but East was able to win and reach West with a club. Another heart allowed East to ruff for a one-trick set.

Looking at all four hands, it is easy to see that declarer could have avoided defeat by playing ace and queen of spades. But we are blessed with the knowledge that the heart finesse will work—information not available to declarer. Instead, let's credit Walshe with a brilliant defense for realizing that it was essential to shift to the king of hearts, and that a low heart would have made declarer's life easy.

Andrew Dice Clay demands 2 tons of muscle protection

SALT LAKE CITY — Two tons of muscle will protect Andrew Dice Clay during the comedian's upcoming performance at Symphony Hall.

"Although this is a comedy show, we have found that it tends to take on a rock-concert atmosphere," wrote Evening Star Productions in an addendum to the company's contract for the Dice Living Legend Tour show Aug. 29.

The new contract asks Salt Lake County's Fine Arts Division for 25 security guards with a combined weight of at least 4,000 pounds. Promoters will pay the bill.

Clay

"The need for tight security to deal with the anticipated mania must not be underestimated," the addendum said.

Why 4,000 pounds? "For humor," said Dan Zelisko, president of Evening Star.

"I think most people either love him or hate him," fine arts division manager Marian Iwasaki said. Clay, star of the 1990 detective comedy "The Adventures of Ford Fairlane," has generated controversy for jokes directed at women and homosexuals.

By Monday, more than 1,600 tickets had sold for the 2,800-seat hall, Iwasaki said.

COLUMBIA, S.C. — Two-time Emmy winner Larry Drake, who plays mentally retarded office worker Benny Stulwicz on "L.A. Law," will portray a lawyer himself in a CBS movie being filmed near here.

"How did I prepare for this role? By watching the other guys on 'L.A. Law'," he quipped recently.

But the 42-year-old actor said he has mixed feelings about being just Benny to millions of people.

"I'm so associated with this character that it's difficult to use me in other projects," he said. "I don't want to end up like Mr. Whipple — identified with one thing. There's more to me than that."

In the last two years, Drake has done only two roles besides Benny on NBC's television show.

Last summer he played a crime lord in "Darkman." He's currently filming "Murder in New Hampshire," a drama based on the trial of Pamela Smart, a high school media coordinator found guilty of inciting her teen-age lover to kill her husband. Drake portray's Smart's attorney.

Drake won Emmys in 1988 and 1989 for best supporting actor in a drama series for his portrayal of Benny.

CHICAGO — Rock 'n' roller Taras Petyrenko said many Americans won't understand his lyrics sung in Ukrainian but will recognize the message he brings from youngsters suffering after the Chernobyl nuclear disaster.

His Ukrainian pop-rock band, Grono, is touring the United States and Canada to raise money for medical supplies for a new children's hospital in Petyrenko's hometown of Kiev.

"Thousands of Ukrainian children are afflicted by blood disorders, radiation poisoning or some kind of a cancer . . . They are just ill and nobody knows what they have," Petyrenko said Monday through an interpreter.

The April 26, 1986, explosion at the nuclear power plant in the Ukraine spewed radiation over a wide area. Soviet and Western researchers assert that at least 500 and possibly as many as 7,000 people have died of cancer and other illnesses caused by the accident.

Petyrenko, Grono's lead singer, was diagnosed last year with radiation poisoning. Another musician has leukemia and is undergoing a bone marrow transplant.

PHILADELPHIA — Gary Martin flew from Dallas just to compete — not for money or a trophy — but for a chance to perform with one of the world's greatest opera singers.

Friends of the 32-year-old amateur baritone paid his fare so he could have the opportunity to perform with tenor Luciano Pavarotti.

Martin joined 19 other singers Monday in the preliminary rounds of a 26-month international voice competition, which is holding a segment of auditions in Philadelphia through Wednesday.

Pavrotti

About 100 singers have tried out since auditions began Monday.

"This competition is not to give just first prize or an amount of money and say to all the others, 'Now you can go on with your careers,'" said Edoardo Muller, one of the judges and a guest conductor at opera houses worldwide.

The competition exists to develop young talent and in its later stages will include coaching by Pavarotti himself, Muller said. The winners will get a chance to perform with Pavarotti in the spring of 1993.

AMERICAN STOCK EXCHANGE

ANALYSIS

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices climbed today, boosted by computerized trading and a rally in the bond market.

The Commerce Department reported this morning that retail sales rose 0.5 percent in July.

The news initially caused Treasury bond prices to drop, which sent interest rates higher and depressed stock prices as well. Signs of economic improvement are bad for the bond market since they make it less likely the Federal Reserve will lower interest rates.

But bond prices recovered and stock prices followed suit, continuing their upward momentum from Monday.

Prices lower

NEW YORK (AP) — Gasoline futures tumbled Tuesday after a series of sharp rises over the past week, but other petroleum prices held their ground in relatively quiet trading.

West Texas Intermediate for delivery in September settled at $21.58 per barrel, down 11 cents, on the New York Mercantile Exchange. Unleaded gasoline for delivery in September settled at 68.23 cents a gallon, down 1.46 cents.

Natural gas prices were mostly lower, with contracts for delivery in September settling at $1.287 per 1,000 cubic feet, down .2 cent.

After the market closed for the day, the American Petroleum Institute reported that the nation's supply of gasoline dropped for the week ending Friday, while crude and heating oil stockpiles and refining operations all showed an increase.

Mutual unit sold

TRENTON, N.J. (AP) — A plan to sell a profitable division of the financially troubled Mutual Benefit Life Insurance Co. for $500 million was approved by the potential buyer's European parent companies.

The agreement announced Tuesday to sell Mutual Benefit's group life, accident and health division to the New York-based AMEV Holdings Inc. is part of a state plan to rehabilitate the insurer.

State regulators seized the nation's 18th largest life insurer last month to avert a run on its cash.

Bush nominates FDIC chairman

■ William Taylor, chief bank regulator at the Federal Reserve, is the president's choice to succeed William Seidman as head of the agency that guarantees deposits in banks and S&Ls.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — William Taylor, President Bush's choice to head the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp., would face a mountain of bank failures on taking office and the challenge of regulating a rapidly changing industry.

Taylor

Bush, vacationing in Kennebunkport, Maine, announced the long-expected nomination of the 52-year-old career regulator on Tuesday.

If confirmed by the Senate, Taylor will leave the important but relatively low-profile position of chief bank regulator at the Federal Reserve for the high-profile FDIC job at a time when both the banking and savings and loan industries have been rocked by financial problems.

"This is one of the most visible and important jobs in government right now. ... The president has a lot at stake here," said William Isaac, who served as FDIC chairman from 1982 to 1985. "A decade ago, not too many people knew what the FDIC did. Today, not too many people don't."

In addition to leading the agency that guarantees deposits in banks and S&Ls, Taylor also would serve, at least for a while, as chairman of the Resolution Trust Corp., the agency conducting the S&L bailout.

The administration is searching for a chief executive to run the trust corporation separately and Congress is considering legislation that would sever the ties between the two agencies.

At the FDIC, Taylor would succeed L. William Seidman, 70, who told the White House last week he will stay on the job until his six-year term ends Oct. 16.

"I'm very honored and it's a delight," Taylor said of the nomination, declining further comment until his confirmation hearings.

Banking analysts and trade group officials say the job has been and will be anything but a delight.

Seidman dealt with more than 1,000 bank failures during his tenure, first as the farm crisis hurt rural banks and later as the collapse of oil prices toppled banks in Texas and Oklahoma.

One thousand banks are still listed as troubled. Four hundred are projected to fail this year and next. Only now, on average, they are larger than the banks that failed earlier.

Deciding how to handle them will be an even more politically and economically delicate problem than before.

For most of the decade the FDIC has struggled with the so-called too-big-to-fail problem. Legally, deposits are guaranteed only to $100,000 per account. In almost every instance, however, the FDIC has protected uninsured deposits, fearing to shake public confidence in the banking system.

Legislation before Congress would curtail that expensive practice after 1994. In the meantime, the FDIC chairman will be left to wrestle with it, said Robert Dugger, chief economist of the American Bankers Association.

The pressure will be even more intense after this year if Congress, as expected, authorizes the FDIC to borrow up to $70 billion, guaranteed by the taxpayer. The FDIC is financed by insurance premiums paid by banks. After the legislation passes, taxpayers will be directly liable for losses if the premiums prove inadequate to repay the borrowing.

Banking groups are particularly anxious that the new FDIC chairman not force the industry to pay off the borrowing faster than it can manage without weakening further.

In his first six months in office, Taylor likely would have to consider raising banks' insurance premiums, which have nearly tripled since 1989.

Consumer spending up by ½ percent

WASHINGTON (AP) — Consumers continued spending cautiously in July, pushing retail sales up 0.5 percent and posting the first three-month string of increases in nearly a year, the government said Tuesday.

But analysts, noting that the spending was far from robust, supported the view that the recovery would be much weaker than the average since World War II. It also failed to dispel concerns about whether the economy could avoid a "double-dip" recession in which it turns down after a period of growth.

"The bottom line is that there is a bit of a pickup, but some real question about whether it is sustainable," said economist David Jones of Aubrey G. Lanston & Co., a New York government securities dealer.

Economist Sandra Shaber of the Futures Group in Washington suggested the spending pace could be maintained "only if we have improvements in the job market and in earnings. Judging by recent trends, that hasn't happened yet."

The Commerce Department said sales totaled a seasonally adjusted $153.7 billion, up from $152.9 billion in June. It also revised its initial estimate for June to a 0.1 percent gain from a 0.2 percent decline.

Even May's revised 1.2 percent increase was stronger than the 1 percent first estimated. It was the first time sales had risen for three consecutive months since July-September 1990.

Most analysts believe the economy resumed growing during the second quarter. But they note that any recovery would quickly falter without consumer participation.

Retail sales account for half of overall consumer spending, which itself represents two-thirds of the nation's economic activity.

Sales of durable goods — usually expensive items, such as cars, that are expected to last more than three months — increased 0.7 percent following a 0.3 percent gain a month earlier.

Customers boosted purchases of furniture and other home furnishings by 1.9 percent, more than erasing a 0.8 percent drop in June. But they continued to avoid building material outlets, whose sales fell 0.8 percent after declining 0.3 percent a month earlier.

Sales of non-durable goods such as food and fuel advanced 0.4 percent on top of a 0.1 percent gain a month earlier.

Department store sales jumped 2.8 percent, wiping out a 2 percent decline in June. Apparel sales inched up 0.1 percent after a 0.6 percent drop a month earlier. Drug store sales posted a 0.7 percent gain after a 1.1 percent increase the previous month.

Sales at restaurants and bars held steady after posting a 1.1 percent gain a month earlier. But grocery store sales were off 0.3 percent after increasing 0.6 percent in June.

Oil well fire

U.S. oil well firefighters use a crane to clear "coke" — a hardened material from incomplete burning of molten sand, salt and hydrocarbons — from around a burning wellhead Tuesday in the Ahmadi Oil Field. The coke has to be cleared away before the fire can be contained.

J.C. Penney reports drop in earnings

DALLAS (AP) — J.C. Penney Co., the nation's fourth-largest retailer, reported a 63 percent drop in its second-quarter profits Tuesday but said sales of back-to-school and other fall items were looking up.

J.C. Penney has been hit hard during the recession, posting lower sales in comparable stores for 12 consecutive months.

Earlier this month, the company and some analysts forecast a 75 percent decline in second-quarter profit.

But the fall wasn't that steep. J.C. Penney earned $31 million, 19 cents a share, on revenue of $3.73 billion during the 13 weeks that ended July 27. A year ago, the company earned $83 million, 62 cents a share, on revenue of $3.83 billion.

"While home furnishings sales in both stores and catalog have been disappointing, we are encouraged by the strengthening in apparel sales, particularly the sales of back-to-school merchandise," said company chairman William Howell.

He said fall catalog sales were also doing well.

The nation's economic slump has prevented the company from turning the corner on a year of lower sales. J.C. Penney last posted a sales increase in July 1990.

Sales in comparable stores — those open at least a year — were down 5.3 percent from February to July, the first half of the current fiscal year. March and June lagged the most compared to 1990.

The company's gross margin, as a percentage of retail sales, was 32.0 percent in the second quarter, compared with 33.2 percent in the same period last year.

J.C. Penney tightened its belt in the quarter by reducing selling, general and administrative expenses 1.3 percent compared with last year. But interest expense rose 7.5 percent due to higher borrowing levels and the company paid a higher tax rate due to expiration of benefits on installment sales.

For the first half of the year, J.C. Penney earned $111 million, 80 cents a share, on revenue of $7.44 billion. That is a 53 percent decline from the $237 million profit, $1.77 a share, that came on revenue of $7.64 billion during the first six months of 1990.

BUSINESS SCENE

Bayou Wadley serving cajun cuisine

By Mella McEwen

Open for business is BAYOU WADLEY, located in the former Bourbon Street location in Plaza Center.

McEwen

Michael Trost, owner of the business, says Bayou Wadley offers authentic cajun cuisine and homemade desserts prepared by chef Betsy Sennard. Sennard also has a certificate from the Cordon Bleu in Paris and she and Trost plan to add French dishes to the menu soon.

Currently the restaurant is open from 11 a.m. to 9 p.m. Monday through Friday for lunch and dinner, with separate lunch and dinner menus available. Catering is also available.

The restaurant will have its grand opening in September, when a Sunday champagne brunch will most likely be added, Trost noted. He also plans to add live entertainment, offering different types on different nights, such as Big Bands on the weekend, jazz, comedy and 50s and 60s rock and roll on other nights.

Trost, an active member of the arts community, added that he plans to cooperate with the Midland Arts Assembly to help support the local arts through donations and service to customers planning to attend various performances.

Also just opened — Monday, as a matter of fact, is BASKETS & MORE in Courtyard across from Midland Park Mall at Midkiff and Loop 250.

Owner Lisa Kilpatrick can create munchie baskets, fruit baskets, potpourri baskets, baskets for newborns and the new mother. Customers can provide special gifts or wine or other items for her to package, she said.

She also offers delivery, for a small fee.

Baskets can cost anywhere from $15 up, depending on what the customer wants, she said. And she takes cash, Mastercard or Visa.

Hours are 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday through Saturday.

On the move is TEMPORARY RESOURCES, which has moved to a larger location at 1601 W. Texas.

President Patricia de Little said the new facility will expand her company's in-house training division which offers free Word Processing tutorials on many systems, including Word Perfect, Displaywrite IV, and Lotus 1-2-3. Temporary Resources also offers a payroll service.

Ms. de Little founded the company 11 years ago with one staff member. She currently employs seven full-time employees and over 100 temporaries.

A Midland video production company has added two new titles to its library of educational videtapes..

"Safety on the School Bus" teaches safety rules for riding on the school bus and offers guidelines for drivers as well as passengers. "Texas Business" features 10 Texans active in different business enterprises and emphasize the fact that the state's economy is more than cattle and oil. Both tapes are available from Mockingbird Hill, a trade name of Larson McBrine Inc.

Larson-McBride produces and markets a variety of educational videos and related products and is owned by Marilyn Culp of Midland. She is also a consultant for interactive video disc software and hardware as well as laser imagesetting equipment.

FURR'S/BISHOP CAFETERIAS L.P., with a location in Midland at Midkiff and Cuthbert, has begun honoring the American Express Card.

CON-WAY SOUTHWEST EXPRESS, a Fort Worth-based regional trucking company, has established a service center in Midland at 1912 W. New Jersey. The new center is managed by Christine S. King.

The new Midland center will serve businesses in Midland and more than a dozen surrounding communities.

Memphis Belle pilot survived war, romance didn't

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — It was one of the most public romances of World War II, a fairy tale story of a brave, young bomber pilot and the Memphis belle who won his heart.

"I'll return to make you happy forever," the pilot wrote between bombing missions over German-occupied Europe.

He survived the war, but the fairy tale didn't. The romance died amid the glare of a public relations campaign cranked up to sell war bonds.

Now all that's left are three crumbling scrapbooks stuffed with love letters and news clippings, crushed flowers and an aging "Do Not Disturb" sign for a hotel room door.

The story of love and heartbreak are told in the mementos of Margaret Polk, whose leggy likeness graced the nose of one of America's most famous bombers, the Memphis Belle, the B-17 that pilot Robert Morgan named for his sweetheart.

Miss Polk died last year at age 67 and left her scrapbooks to Memphis State University.

"She was a young girl of 19 and she put everything in the scrapbooks," said Michelle Fagan, a library curator at the university.

Morgan and his crew took the Belle on a nationwide bond-selling tour, and the plane was featured in a wartime documentary by filmmaker William Wyler. A commercial movie named "Memphis Belle" — co-produced by Wyler's daughter, Catherine — was released last year by Warner Bros.

The returning warriors, fresh from the horrors and loneliness of war, drew crowds of admiring young women.

Morgan and Miss Polk planned to marry after the war, sending War Department publicists into high gear. They never explained the breakup, but both blamed the strain of the tour and the public spotlight.

"I am made a hero when all I want is you," Morgan wrote while trying to rekindle the affair.

Miss Polk said in an interview with a university researcher that she called Morgan on the tour and a woman she didn't know answered the phone in his hotel room.

"Something went on that I didn't particularly like ... and that was it," she said.

"We all make mistakes," Morgan wrote in one of the letters dating up to the late 1940s, several years after the breakup. "I have forgiven people. Can't you?"

They met in Walla Walla, Wash., in 1942 while Miss Polk was on vacation and Morgan was in flight training.

Morgan, who left the Army as a major, married twice and fathered four children. Miss Polk married briefly in the 1950s but resumed her maiden name and lived most of her life single in Memphis.

Her mementos are devoted almost entirely to her romance with Morgan.

She waged a lifelong battle with alcoholism and began working in the 1960s as a volunteer with Alcoholics Anonymous.

"The idea is to give of yourself, which creates a void in yourself and makes room for goodness to come in," she said in an interview three years ago.

Miss Polk and Morgan took part in dedication ceremonies in 1987 for the Memphis Belle, which is on display at a park beside the Mississippi River.

"We remained friends right up until the time she died," Morgan, 71, said from his home in Asheville, N.C. "My wife and I went over and stayed with her several times in her home."

Miss Polk was supported by an inheritance and spent much time with her pet dogs and gardening.

Noriega officers remain in legal limbo

PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP) — Thirty-two military officers remain in prison, still awaiting trial 20 months after a U.S. invasion deposed their commander, Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega.

While the slow wheels of Panamanian justice turn, they pass the time at Renacer Prison, a special jungle camp near the Panama Canal, playing soccer and baseball or making handicrafts. Visits are normally restricted to lawyers and close relatives.

The prisoners ranged in rank from sergeant to colonel in Noriega's Panamanian Defense Forces, now disbanded. They were captured or surrendered during the invasion of December 1989 and later turned over to Panamanian authorities.

Noriega was taken to the United States, where he awaits trial on charges of drug trafficking and money laundering.

Hundreds responded when the government asked people with complaints against the prisoners to come forward. Newspapers printed unconfirmed reports of crimes ranging from embezzlement to murder.

Many complaints were dismissed and there is little evidence for some of the others.

According to the Attorney General's Office, the trials have been delayed because the charges still are being investigated.

Ramiro Fonseca, a defense lawyer, said the government doesn't want to prosecute because the cases are weak, but cannot free the men for fear of adverse public reaction.

"They don't have Noriega," he said, "so they have to take it out on those who worked under him. The military know they have to pay for Noriega."

Public sentiment against the military and Noriega is so strong that, for more than a year, Panama would not allow associates of the former dictator to leave the embassies of Mexico, Cuba and Peru, where they had taken refuge.

Corn causes questions on Broadway

NEW YORK — Someone, working with obvious devotion and care, has raised a small crop of corn on Broadway at 153rd Street — 131 stalks, some nearly 6 feet tall, capped with tassels and sprouting cigar-sized ears. The questions remains: Who?

"I first noticed it a few weeks ago," Mildred Duran, district manager of Community Board 9, said Monday. "I said, 'Oh, my God, corn on upper Broadway!' I don't know who planted it, but it seems to be planted well. It just makes you curious."

Up and down Broadway, neighbors in the working-class community of Jamaicans, Dominicans and other immigrants seem a bit bewildered. Many unseemly things happen early in the morning and late at night in Washington Heights, they say, but farming, evidently, is not among them.

"That's corn?" Tina Forsythe, 17, said Monday, her eyes straining in the sun as she looked at the surreptitious crop across the street. Yes, indeed, her mother, Sonia, said. "We know it in Jamaica. It's very pretty."

A group of young men at a fruit stand selling guavas, papayas and pineapple not more than 20 feet from the corn denied any knowledge of it. "What corn?" one said, declining to give his name.

"What do I know?" shrugged Abdul Taha, a Palestinian mechanic at the Mobil station at 155th Street and Broadway. "I am not a corn farmer. I am a gas station man."

Workshop becomes decade-old 'point of light'

By Tad Bartimus
AP Special Correspondent

FORT BRAGG, Calif. — Long before George Bush called for a thousand "points of light" to help needy Americans, a handful of folks in a tiny northern California town offered a glimmer of hope to developmentally disabled citizens who wanted jobs.

The decade-old Cypress Street Center now employs 30 handicapped adult workers through its commercial bakery and its bustling mail-order redwood lawn furniture business, which markets Adirondack-style handcrafted chairs, swings and love seats in magazines such as Smithsonian, Yankee and the New Yorker.

All the enterprises at the sheltered workshop, including a fledgling plant nursery, are staffed by mentally handicapped people who put in five-day work weeks and earn about $2 an hour, depending on their production. The work ethic taught by a staff of seven also aims to train qualified workers for mainstream jobs.

"I guess we were a point of light long before we knew what a point of light was," said George Griffith, executive director of Parents and Friends Inc., a non-profit organization that oversees Cypress Street Center as well as a residential housing program, a living skills program and a job placement service.

The "points of light" term, which also is the title of a current Randy Travis country song, was first used by Bush in August 1988 when he accepted the Republican presidential nomination. He defined America as a nation of voluntary organizations — "a brilliant diversity spread like the stars, like a thousand points of light in a broad and peaceful sky."

So far, Bush hasn't called the Cypress Street Center a "point of light." But in this isolated town of 5,500 about 150 miles north of San Francisco, the sheltered workshop is hailed as a success.

"IT'S VERY UNIQUE in that they have a marketable product. It is a small business that is efficiently run by people who just happen to be developmentally disabled," said Coemella Cronin of the Redwood Coast Regional Center, an agency contracted by the state to oversee placement of disabled people.

"They are very well supported by people in this community and we are all very proud of the center," she said.

Founded in 1955 as a school, PFI initiated Mendocino County's first special education program. But as public agencies took up the slack in social services for developmentally disabled children, the group shifted its assistance to adults afflicted with Downs syndrome, cerebral palsy and other developmental problems.

At first the handicapped workers were employed making trinkets, crafts and picture frames at an "activities center." When Griffith took over as executive director in 1975, he immediately began looking for more fulfilling projects that would bring in more money.

'It's very unique in that they have a marketable product. It is a small business that is efficiently run by people who just happen to be developmentally disabled.'

— Coemella Cronin

One day six years later, his bookkeeper brought an old chair from home.

"It was an old Adirondack chair, like the ones that were popular at Eastern resorts years ago," recalled Griffith. "I remembered seeing an article about building your own modified Adirondack chair in Sunset magazine in 1981, and I hired a fine woodworker to make a prototype for us.

"THE FIRST YEAR, we sold 20 chairs. The next, we sold 200," Griffith said. "At first, we didn't have enough work and then we were a year behind and going like crazy to catch up."

Without realizing it at the time, the center was in the middle of a catalogue boom. Cypress Street considers its competition such mail-order giants as L.L. Bean, Smith & Hawkin and Orvis.

"Ten years ago, you couldn't get anyone to charge more than $15 for a mail-order product. Our average order now is $300," Griffith said.

Sales jumped from $1,500 a year in 1981 to about $150,000 last year, and the workshop's toll-free telephone number now receives 10,000 inquiries annually.

Success has allowed the operation to upgrade the bakery, which supplies customers up and down the Mendocino coast, especially hotels and bed-and-breakfast inns, as well as to launch the nursery, expand office space and build a patio deck to display the furniture.

Workers receive less than the minimum wage because they are paid according to a California Department of Labor schedule for sheltered workshops that reduces Cypress Street's basic $5.80 per hour rate according to each person's productivity.

ONLY RECENTLY DID Griffith and the center's board decide to tell customers, via the catalogue, that the furniture is made by handicapped people.

"For the first few years, we wanted the furniture to stand on its own, and a lot of people still have no idea it is made by disabled workers," Griffith said.

Lawsuit fuels controversy over IQ tests

N.Y. Times News Service

A lawsuit by a group of black parents demanding that their children be given IQ tests has fueled the controversy surrounding the use of intelligence tests.

The lawsuit is in response to a landmark court ruling that declared it illegal to use the test to screen slow-learning black students into special education classes in California schools.

The suit has prompted educators to take a closer look at these tests, which have been criticized as culturally biased and measuring only a small portion of a child's abilities. If anything, the lawsuit could hasten the demise of IQ tests in California.

"It's raised the issue of whether we should be using these tests for any kids," California Superintendent of Public Instruction Bill Honig said in reference to the lawsuit.

Honig, along with a growing number of educators around the nation, contend that the best measurement of a student's potential is to look at actual performance in or out of the classroom.

"IQ tests are not particularly useful or necessary," said Honig. "The broader point is that we shouldn't be doing high-priced diagnoses of a students potential, we should be looking at how kids learn and what we are going to do about it."

California is now investigating a relatively new way of measuring a child's ability, called curriculum-based assessment, which is being used in several states, including Pennsylvania, Louisiana and Connecticut. The approach looks at how a child is performing in class, rather than on a standardized test designed to come up with a score of a child's intellectual ability.

"IQ test is still the assessment of choice in most states, but it is losing ground rapidly," said James Tucker, director of special education in the Pennsylvania Department of Education.

"In the 1930s and '40s there was hardly a workplace or a school that did not reflexively turn to the IQ test, and that is not the case now," said Howard Gardiner, a professor of psychology at Harvard Univyce Pina's son Terrence, who is black, experienced difficulties at Lakeshore Elementary School in San Francisco. His teachers recommended that he repeat kindergarten because he was "immature." Pina suspected that her child might have learning disabilities. So she had him tested at a private testing agency. The results, partially based on IQ tests, showed that he suffered a language handicap that made him eligible for special education classes.

She was shocked when the psychologist at Terrence's school rejected the test results, saying that they could not be used because they were based on IQ tests. Her son was eventually admitted to a class for students with language disabilities, but only after he spent an extra year in kindergarten.

Pina maintains that Terrence, now 11, wasted a year in school. "The decision should be with the parent and not with the board of education," she said.

She then joined a 1987 lawsuit, which was filed by the Landmark Legal Foundation, a conservative public interest law firm in Kansas City.

'It's condescending and demeaning to black children to say that because you're black you can't do something, and that you're not equipped to make a decision that your child can take this test,' said attorney Pete Hutchison.

Three weeks ago, Judge Peckham backed down on his earlier ruling, issuing a preliminary ruling allowing two of the plaintiffs to take the test.

Researchers make skim milk taste like whole

N.Y. Times News Service

All that the scientists at the Electric Power Research Institute were trying to do was find a way to conserve power in the dairy industry. But, inadvertently, they may have developed a process that makes skim milk taste like whole milk.

Instead of heating milk to drive off water to produce concentrate or powder, as is usually done, institute researchers and representatives of the Dairy Research Foundation chilled it. Some of the water formed ice crystals, which were filtered out. The resulting concentrate was reconstituted by adding water.

The researchers were surprised to find that the resulting skim milk tasted better than normal skim milk.

"We put the water back in, and it tasted like whole milk," said Robert D. Jeffress, a program manager at the Palo Alto, Calif., institute, which is supported by electric utilities.

"We are not sure why that is, but we have blindfolded taste tests that say so," he added.

The difference could be that the milk proteins are preserved when frozen, but partly broken down when heated, changing the taste, he said.

Other advantages of freeze-concentrated milk include less volume, so it is cheaper to ship, and a longer shelf life in stores or home freezers. To test the economics of the process, the institute is backing a commercial-scale operation for removing 700 pounds of water an hour at Galloway West Co. in Fond du Lac, Wis., starting in the fall.

According to officials of the institute, freezing is a more energy-efficient means of concentrating milk and other dairy products than heat evaporation. The most common type of evaporator requires 118 kilowatt-hours to remove one metric ton, or 2,204 pounds, of water, compared with 65 kilowatt-hours for freezing.

MOONLIGHTING!

The Midland Reporter-Telegram has several distributorships which need to be filled with responsible individuals.

OFTEN ASKED QUESTIONS:

Is it worthwhile for adults also?

Yes! Our current distributor force is already 90% adult and 10% youth. Morning newspaper routes are attractive for:

- ADULTS who have full-time jobs, yet want to supplement their income with a steady part-time job.
- MOTHERS who can't justify a small job and daycare, because as a distributor, you do not need daycare!
- COLLEGE STUDENTS needing a part-time job which will work with classes!
- SENIOR CITIZENS wanting regular exercise, added income, or just want to work with people, neighbors, and friends.

How much money can I make as a distributor?

Depending on the size of the distributorship from $300 to $700 monthly! Some make even more!

How long does it take?

The actually delivery takes 1 - 2 hours Monday - Saturday, and 2 - 3 hours on Sunday, again depending on the size of the distributorship. Also, a few hours a month are needed to collect from subscribers. Many distributors choose to handle some of this by putting envelopes in subscribers' papers. Collecting in person will be necessary though!

When do papers have to be delivered by?

6 a.m. Monday - Friday and 7 a.m. on Saturday, Sunday and holidays.

Do I ever get a day off?

The job requires a 7-day a week commitment. However, distributors do take days off by finding a friend or family member to substitute for them!

RESERVE YOUR DISTRIBUTORSHIP NOW!
