Agca alleges abuse in Italian jail

ROME (AP) — Turkish terrorist Mehmet Ali Agca today admitted he shot Pope John Paul II, but challenged the right of an Italian court to try him and claimed he had been tortured by his Italian jailers.

On the opening day of his trial, the 23-year-old defendant said his life had been threatened in Italian jails and that he had been subjected to "inhuman" conditions since his arrest for the May 13 shooting of the pope and two American women in St. Peter's Square.

In a statement translated from Turkish to Italian, Agca said: "On May 13, I was inside the confines of the Vatican when I shot the chief of state of the Vatican. I don't agree to be tried by an Italian court."

He said he would refuse to answer any questions put to him by the court, insisting that only the Vatican can try him.

"For me, the trial is over," he said.

Agca addressed the court after the chief judge rejected a defense motion claiming Italy had no jurisdiction in the case.

Earlier, he had shouted from a bulletproof glass booth inside the courtroom that his jailers "have tortured me."

"I have lived for 60 days in inhuman conditions," Agca said in a statement read after a 10-minute recess. "I don't know if I am in a medieval jail or a jail of a democratic country."

Neither Agca's five-minute statement to the court nor transcripts of the prosecutors' interrogations shed any new light on his motives for the attack or gave firm evidence of an international conspiracy.

"I am an international terrorist," he said in one of the transcripts. "I've been helpedd by Bulgarian, Iranian and English terrorists, but I've never been used by anyone."

Sporting a full beard grown in prison, Agca appeared in good health as he was led into the courtroom handcuffed to a police officer.

Before the outburst, he stood impassively as scores of photographers snapped photos and yelled out his name, scuffling with courtroom guards who tried to push them back. The 200 journalists covering the trial had to show special passes and walk through metal detectors.

Agca's fate is in the hands of a jury of two women and four men, but both the prosecution and defense have predicted he will be sentenced to life imprisonment.

Agca's court-appointed lawyer, Pietro D'Ovidio, said he did not plan to plead insanity because there was no evidence to support such a plea.

State prosecutor Nicolo Amato said he would call about 30 witnesses, most of whom were in the square during the shooting.

The ailing pope has not been asked to appear as a witness or to give a deposition, legal sources said. He is hospitalized with a virus doctors say may have been contracted from the massive blood transfusions given him after the shooting.

Ann Odre, 58, of Buffalo, N.Y., one of the two women wounded in the attack, refused to return to Italy to testify.

There was no word whether the other injured woman, Rose Hall, 21, would testify. A former resident of Shirley, Mass. she is now living in West Germany.

The trial is expected to last less than a week. If it is not finished by Aug. 1, it will be recessed until September while the court takes a month-long summer break.

Described by police as a cool, self-disciplined gunman who had ties to right-wing groups in Turkey, Agca insists he acted alone in the May 13 attack.

Prosecutors say they have no evidence of a conspiracy. But police say they are convinced someone helped Agca, perhaps by financing his travels around Europe and North Africa after he escaped from a Turkish jail in 1979.

U.S. urged to open arms control talks

MONTEBELLO, Quebec (AP) — America's principal allies are urging President Reagan to begin arms control talks with the Soviets and to lower U.S. interest rates before they trigger "profound impact" around the globe.

But Reagan, in his first major venture in international summitry, is standing firm on his present policy, challenging the allies to limit their trade ties with the Soviet bloc and saying he hopes to begin arms talks in November or December.

Meeting with leaders of the world's six other richest democracies at a heavily protected forest retreat here, the president defended his foreign and economic policies while expressing optimism that near-record interest rates in the United States might come down soon.

Reagan met today with his counterparts from France, West Germany, Great Britain, Japan, Italy and host Canada. The president's aides said he was telling them that his administration "will be firm and steady in its own economic course" for fighting inflation.

Mounting concern abroad over when U.S. interest rates would recede became a major point of contention Sunday as the seven leaders gathered for a three-day summit at a giant resort constructed of logs in this village, 40 miles east of Ottawa.

Reagan arrived at his first major summit conference on the eve of his six-month anniversary in office. His first two meetings were with his two sternest critics on economic policy — West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt, who has met Reagan once before, and Socialist President Francois Mitterrand of France, who met with the conservative U.S. leader the first time.

Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr., who sat in on the sessions, said both Schmidt and Mitterrand complained that high U.S. interest rates threaten economies in Europe and possibly around the world.

Schmidt, appearing today on CBS' "Morning" program, said he understood the United States could not produce lower interest rates "right now, so we'll have to take our own consequences." He said the impact on the European economies would show up in higher import prices and greater unemployment.

He said he was finding Reagan "a very intelligent man" and that "he is thinking along simple lines and I like this because that makes him a dependable partner."

But Schmidt, asked what he liked least about Reagan's approach to problem-solving, said he had trouble understanding why "it took the new administration so many months until one got the feeling that they were going again" after the inauguration.

Refugees resume paces

BIG SPRING, Texas (AP) — Haitian refugees flown to Texas to relieve overcrowding and health problems at a federal processing center in Florida begin a series of medical screenings and interviews here today while federal officials ponder where to send them next.

The 90 refugees who arrived here Saturday were among 286 Haitians transferred to relieve the congestion at the Miami federal processing center, a Immigration and Naturalization Service official said.

All the Haitians were tested for tuberculosis and placed in the Sunset dormitory, where they are separated from inmates at the minimum security federal prison here, an INS official said.

Assistant Warden Jerome Edwards said Big Spring officials were assured by the INS that the Haitians were "not sentenced prisoners."

"I want to allay the fears of the public," Allman said. "These are not dangerous people. They are not known for violence in their backgrounds."

Four French-speaking Big Spring residents were brought to the prison to communicate with the refugees, who did not appear distressed when they learned they had been taken to a prison, said prison superintendent John Allman.

The Haitians told interpreters they thought they were coming to Texas to find jobs and that they were surprised when they were herded into the federal prison here.

"They thought they (federal authorities) were bringing them here to work — for jobs," said one observer who talked to a refugee. "They didn't understand it was a screening process."

Allman said the Haitians would not be released into the community. But he said he did not know what plans INS officials had for the Haitians after the screening process was completed.

However, Allman said the refugees would be kept under maximum security to ensure they could not wander away from the minimum security facility.

Five additional guards from other Texas and Oklahoma prisons have been assigned to the camp to handle the larger population.

Edwards said Big Spring was chosen because it has space for 250 additional inmates.

"But it will fill us up. And when you are going at a daily basis of 250 (people), we, of course, will have to do additional planning," he said.

Water proposal escapes defeat

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Speaker Bill Clayton's proposal to pump extra state dollars into water projects barely escaped defeat in a Senate committee Monday after Sen. Carl Parker called it "a raid on general revenue."

Parker, D-Port Arthur, also reminded Sen. Roy Blake, "There's an old East Texas saying that the time to kill a snake is when you have the hoe in your hand."

Blake, D-Nacogdoches, joined Sen. Ed Howard, D-Texarkana, as East Texans voting for the Clayton proposal despite historic opposition from that area to any proposal that might channel East Texas water to West Texas.

Clayton, who became rich farming irrigated land northwest of Lubbock, assured the Senate Finance Committee earlier his proposal was not designed to finance pipelines and canals to export East Texas water to West Texas.

Parker and Sen. Ray Farabee, D-Wichita Falls, offered a substitute that would have removed from the Clayton proposal a provision to set aside half of future state treasury surplues for water projects.

The motion failed 5-5, but the committee recessed before a vote was taken on Clayton's original proposed constitutional amendment, which the House approved last Wednesday.

Postal unions' strike still pending

WASHINGTON (AP) — Leaders of two large postal unions declared today there will be a nationwide mail strike at midnight if the Postal Service refuses to "change its attitude" about a new three-year contract covering a half-million workers.

"If the postmaster general persists in instructing his surrogates (at the bargaining table) to continue this course of action they have set, there is no conclusion anyone can reach but that there will a national work stoppage," said Vincent Sombrott9, president of the National Association of Letter Carriers.

Moe Biller, head of the American Postal Workers Union, said the 500,000 union members "are committed to uphold the dignity of postal workers" despite the consequences.

A strike by postal workers is illegal, and Postmaster General William F. Bolger has warned that any people participating in such a walkout would be fired immediately.

Assistant Postmaster General Walter E. Duka said today Postal Service officials "anticipate it will be business as usual on Tuesday" even if there is a strike and said Americans should not put off sending mail.

Postal Service contigency plans include using the military to sort and deliver mail and allowing private companies to deliver letters, which normally is illegal.

Duka disagreed with the union leaders' assessment of the negotiations.

"I think the fact that the talks continue...is a healthy sign." And he said that while no articles of a new contract have been disposed of, the negotiatiors "have narrowed their differences on some."

He added that "It has been our feeling that there is no sentiment for any illegal acion on the part of the vast majority of postal workers.

The current three-year contract between the Postal Service and its unions expires at 12:01 a.m. EDT Tuesday.

Both Biller and Sombrotto reiterated that they would be willing to continue discussions past the deadline — but only if the Postal Service backs away from its demand that workers accept a freeze on general wage increases over the next three years.

The Postal Service is asking to settle for retention of the existing cost-of-living formula, which would give workers approximately $3,000 over the next three years if the current rate of inflation held steady.

The new strike threat came as federal mediators brought representatives of both sides back to the bargaining table following a weekend of negotiations at a hotel here that produced conflicting accounts by the two sides of whether progress was made.

"We will go beyond 12 o'clock only if we are in a negotiating mode that we ascertain will allow us to negotiate an effective contract," Sombrotto said.

"We have not at this late minute ... agreed to one single item," he said. "Last evening, we were still discussing whether letter carriers could wear baseball caps, and we didn't even resolve that."

Sombrotto said that "if they don't give us a new pay package," there is no sense in continuing negotiations.

Biller and Sombrotto, whose unions represent 500,000 of the 600,000 unionized postal workers, said Bolger will be responsible for any nationwide walkout.

"The postmaster general will have called the first nationwide strike," Sombrotto declared. The union leaders said they sent a letter to the Justice Department complaining that Bog3r was trying to provoke a strike.

Sunday's heat sets new record

Scorching temperatures will continue to move the mercury past the century mark after posting another record high Sunday, according to the National Weather Service at the Midland Regional Airport.

The weatherman reported Sunday's mercury reached 105 degrees, a record high temperature for that date. It marked the third consecutive day that a new record high temperature had been recorded.

Tuesday's high is expected to reach 102 degrees after an overnight low in the low 70s.

Winds will be out of the south tonight at 5-10 mph, increasing to 10-15 mph on Tuesday.

The record low for this date was 62 degrees, set in 1959. This morning's low was recorded at 72 degrees.

Odessa shootings leave two men dead, one wounded

ODESSA — Two men were killed and another seriously wounded in three separate shooting incidents over the weekend, according to Odessa police.

According to Lt. K.R. Jones, Jesus Sosa Salinas, 674 Tower Circle, is listed in serious condition in an Odessa hospital following an early morning shooting today at the El Que Que Lounge, 711 W. Clements.

When officers arrived at the scene at 1:54 a.m. they found Salinas on the bar floor with a gunshot wound through the throat, Jones said.

The case is currently under investigation, according to Jones, with no suspects at this time.

In another shooting, Mary Medlock was killed and R.G Green was injured at their residence, 404 E 38th St., Sunday morning.

Upon arrival, officers found Ms. Medlock face-down with gunshot wound to her upper left chest. She was pronounced dead by Justice of Peace Virgil T. Lumpee.

Green was transported to the hospital with a gunshot wound also to the upper left chest. An investigation into the case is under way, according to Jones.

Also, Aurelio Herrera, 26, 2818 Ranchland, was found murdered late Friday night at 307 W. Clements.

According to witnesses, Herrera was shot in the chest after a brief argument with his assailant. Judge Lumpee pronounced Herrera dead and ordered an autopsy.

Police have arrested Robollo Solis, 36, 402 E. 56th St., and charged him with murder. Bond was set at $75,000.

Teenager falls to death at park

DENVER (AP) — A Denver teenager was killed after he stood up in a roller coaster at Lakeside Amusement Park and then fell 25 feet to the ground, authorities said.

Witnesses told police Sunday night the victim, Ronnie Vigil, 19, stood on his seat on the first hill, repeated the stunt on the second hill and then fell.

Vigil was dead on arrival at St. Anthony Hospital.

Jim Pals, a private occupational safety heatlh consultant, said it was the first amusement park death in Denver in at least 11 years.

"People were screaming when they came out on the platform that someone had fallen out" when the roller coaster returned to the platform, Pals said.

The roller coaster was shut down for two hours after the incident while workers crawled over the tracks and inspected all the cars.

Israeli troops raid southern Lebanon

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Israel said it bombed Palestinian targets three times in southern Lebanon today and troops raided a guerrilla base, defying U.S. efforts to halt violence that has killed at least 407 people in Lebanon and five in Israel since July 10.

PLO head Yasser Arafat told a news conference in Beirut that Israel and his guerrillas are in a state of war and that the United States supported Israel's attacks.

"We have to remember that this war has been given a green light by America," he said after the latest assault, the third straight day that Israel's jets have bombed southern Lebanon.

THE PLO SAID IT repulsed the Israelis, set one load of seaborne soldiers afire and shot shells and rockets at six Israeli settlements in northern Galilee.

Israel's military command said its jets blasted Palestinian gunners in ruins of the Crusader-era Beaufort Castle in southern Lebanon a few hours after a 40-year-old mother of three was killed by Palestinian shells at the Israeli border farm of Misgav Am.

Jets also hit a guerrilla camp at the mouth of the Zahrani River on the Mediterranean coast, where Israeli ground troops raided earlier in the day, the military command said.

PRESIDENT REAGAN, at the economic summit in Ottowa, said he would discuss with aides later the shipment of F-16 jets to Israel, which Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. has threatened to further delay if fighting continues.

Pope John Paul, from his Rome hospital bed, discussed the situation with Lebanon's delegate to the Vatican, deploring the violence.

The PLO said Israeli jets also bombed guerrilla positions around the Palestinian-held town of Nabatiyeh. Beaufort Castle and Nabatiyeh are bases for guerrilla attacks on Israel.

Israel said one officer — identified Maj. Josef Tahal, 28 — was killed and seven soldiers wounded in the ground attack. It claimed raiders killed an unspecified number of guerrillas.

SOUTHERN LEBANON'S United Nations peacekeeping force said hundreds of rockets and shells were fired across the border overnight between Palestinian guerrillas and Israeli and pro-Israeli Lebanese Christian gunners.

Today's strikes followed heavy Israeli air attacks Sunday on Palestinian targets in southern Lebanon and a visit by special U.S. envoy Philip C. Habib to Prime Minister Menachem Begin.

Habib, noting Israel's bombing of Beirut Friday which Lebanon said killed 300 people and wounded 800, urged a halt in the air raids. Begin said the raids were needed to stop Palestinian rocket attacks from southern Lebanon.

AP Laserphoto Map

Map shows locations of some of the raids in southern Lebanon Sunday.

"WE WILL NOT CEASE our fire on the civilian population in Lebanon if the terrorists build headquarters or bases near or within civilian populations," Begin told Habib. "We will continue to atack suchheadquarters and bases, and the responsibility for it falls on those who position themselves within civilian areas."

Haig called the situation "tense and worrisome." U.S. presidential counselor Edwin Meese said both sides were building forcesalong the borer, signaling a possible escalation of violence.

"If President Reagan had the kind of problem on the U.S.-Mexican border that we have on our Lebanese border, would he act differently?," Begin was quoted by Israeli radio as saying. "Why is he angry at me for trying to prevent the killing of Jews?"

LIBYAN LEADER Col. Moammar Khadafy today urged Arab nations to reconsider selling oil to the United States to protest "mass atrocities on Palestinians and Lebanese" committed by "America's favorite spoiled child, Israel," Libya's official JANA news agency said.

The official Saudi news agency said King Khaled gave $20 million to the PLO and $20 million to Lebanon's government "to help meet the enemy's aggression."

Syria's state radio said President Hafez Assad, whose forces occupy Lebanon, considered deploying air defense weapons in Beirut to repel future Israeli raids. There was no elaboration.

Jaruzelski warns Poland's strikers

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Communist leader Stanislaw Kania closed a stormy week-long party congress today by urging Poles to go back to work to bring Poland out of its economic crisis.

"The congress has ended. We must go back to work," Kania said. "Outside the door of this hall we shall meet hard reality."

Kania said the precedent-shattering congress should "prove beyond a shadow of a doubt" to Warsaw Pact allies that the country was faithful to the Communist community.

Kania, speaking as new major strikes loomed and serious splits divide the party, described Poland as in a "dramatic situation," and added: "the most acute sign of this is the lack of basic market goods and social disatisfaction."

He said "only the renewal of our work can bring Poland out of the crisis."

EARLIER, PREMIER Wojciech Jaruzelski promised firm action if labor unrest continues, but the independent Solidarity labor federation proceeded with plans for dock and airline strikes this week.

Warning that increased production is the "only way out" of the near-bankrupt Polish economy, Jaruzelski told the congress Sunday, "There is no greater danger than anarchy. ... We cannot permit this. ... There are boundaries which cannot be crossed.

"If necessary," he continued, "the authorities will be forced to execute their constitutional obligations to save the state from decay and the nation from catastrophe."

The premier, a general who is also defense minister, hinted at the possibility of military action. He said the Polish army "kept cohesion and unity" during the labor crisis last summer, and "the party trusts the army."

DESPITE JARUZELSKI'S warning, a spokesman for the 45,000 dockworkers in the Baltic ports said their decision to strike Thursday for higher pay and improved working condition "remains unchanged." But he added: "There's Monday and Tuesday, and if the government is willing to talk, we are ready."

Employees of LOT, the national airline, have called a strike Friday because the government refuses to accept their nominee for director of the airline.

After Jaruzelski's speech, Kania announced the 15 members of a new ruling Politburo, elected by the party Central Committee, in which moderates and liberals were in the majority.

Only four of the 11 members on the previous Politburo were retained. Among the new members are four workers, including the ruling body's first woman member and a hard-line conservative.

The woman member is Zofia Grzyb, a supervisor in a shoe factory. Officials said she is a member of Solidarity.

THE OTHER THREE workers are Jan Labecki, the party leader at the Lenin Shipyard in Gdansk where Solidarity was formed; Jerzy Romanik, a miner from Katowice, and Albin Siwak, a construction foreman and pro-Moscow hardliner who criticized the reform movement in a speech to the party congress Saturday.

Rash of burglaries keep local police busy

A rash of burglaries and thefts were being investigated this morning by Midland police.

About 4:45 a.m. today, burglars shattered a window at Merriman Appliance, 2400 W. Front Ave. and made off with more than $1,600 worth of merchandise.

Taken in that break-in was a video cassette recorder valued at $995 and a 13-inch color television set valued at $395. The window also was valued at $230, police reports indicated.

At 4:15 a.m. today, burglars hurled a cement block through a plate glass window at Morris Caffey TV & Appliance and took a video director valued at $728. The window was valued at $300, boosting the total estimated in that burglary to $1,028.

Mrs. Booker T. Chandler, 1801 S. Oak Ave., reported a theft. The woman said she returned home about 2 a.m. today to find a small window in her back door broken out and several items taken.

Taken in that break-in, police reports indicated, were four silver trays valued at $400, six silver candlestick holders valued at $100, a microwave oven valued at $250 and a combination black and white television and radio valued at $200.

Jenise Hallas of 3100 Sentinel Ave. reported the theft of her purse containing $200 in cash and credit cards. She said the purse was taken from a locked locker room.

Ten Midland firemen spent more than an hour early Sunday morning battling a blaze at the apartment of Gloria Price, 1604 W. Missouri Ave., Apt. 3. The apartment is owned by T.M. Matlock of 805 S. Big Spring St.

Firemen were called to the apartment just after midnight Saturday and fought the blaze until 1:13 a.m. Sunday. A gas leak at a water heater was listed as the probable cause for the fire.

Flames heavily damaged two rooms and the structure's roof. The entire apartment sustained heat and smoke damage.

A large grass fire between U.S. 80 and Interstate 20 west of FM 1369 Sunday morning caused no damage, according to fire department reports.

Firemen responded to the blaze at 8:22 a.m. and extinguished the flames with 600 gallons of water.

The Newspaper BIBLE

BEHOLD THE RUIN FROM ONE ROTTEN RUMOR!

The whole population of the city was electrified by these accusations and a great riot followed. Paul was dragged out of the Temple, and immediately the gates were closed behind him.

As they were killing him, word reached the commander of the Roman garrison that all Jerusalem was in an uproar. He quickly ordered out his soldiers and officers and ran down among the crowd. When the mob saw the troops coming, they quit beating Paul.

The commander arrested him and ordered him bound with double chains. Then he asked the crowd who he was and what he had done. Some shouted one thing and some another. When he couldn't find out anything in all the uproar and confusion, he ordered Paul to be taken to the armory.

As they reached the stairs, the mob grew so violent that the soldiers lifted Paul to their shoulders to protect him, and the crowd surged behind shouting, "Away with him, away with him!"

As Paul was about to be taken inside, he said to the commander, "May I have a word with you?" "Do you know Greek?" the commander asked, surprised. "Aren't you that Egyptian who led a rebellion a few years ago and took 4,000 members of the Assassins with him into the desert?"

"No," Paul replied, "I am a Jew from Tarsus in Cilicia which is no small town. I request permission to talk to these people." The commander agreed.

The start of life on earth: Salk finds a clue

By BOB CORBETT
Copley News Service

How did life begin on Earth?

The continuing creationism vs. evolution debate in the public schools across the nation shows to what extent two competing theories can evoke passion in religious and educational circles.

But the question is also a matter for debate -- albeit a more dispassionate one -- wittin scientific circles where there have long been many competing ideas.

Now researchers at the Salk Institute have found a clue that could show how life got its start 3.5 billion years ago.

The clue involves zinc, one of the four most common minerals and one of the most versatile found on Earth.

And the researchers are pursuing this idea with zest. They have already used certain forms of zinc to create small chains of nucleotides, the basic units of life. These chains make DNA (deoxyribonucleic acid) and RNA (ribonucleic acid), which carry the genetic code.

The scientists, headed by Dr. Leslie Orgel, one of the world's leading experts on just how life began, are excited about their progress.

They are dealing with the very first step which led to the evolution of humans.

It's a knotty problem, this question of how to create life out of totally inert material, to breathe life into clay, and they are not prone to make exaggerated claims.

What they hope to do, they say, is to show what might have occurred under primitive earth conditions that may have resulted in the first molecules of life.

The problem, Orgel explained during a recent interview, is that life as it functions now depends on certain enzymes called polymerases. These enzymes are like biological glue and are needed to assemble the proteins of which all life is made.

On the early Earth no such enzymes existed. That's because the enzymes themselves are proteins and can only be produced by living cells.

If there were no living cells, his argument goes, there could be no enzymes and without the enzymes, no protein. No protein, no life. It's a biological blank wall, a genetic Catch-22.

The situation suggests that there's something else besides the enzymes which got the life process going.

Several years ago, Orgel and his group began to look at the active properties of various metal ions, metallic forms which have had a change in their atomic structure. Such ions,they reasoned, must have been present in large quantities on the early Earth.

The idea of the experiments was to mix the metal ions with performed nucleotide chains and then see if this chemical soup would reproduce the chains. Reproduction, of course, is one of the key features of life.

They tried lead ions and found them to be highly energetic, producing large amounts of very long chains. However, the chains were not reproduced accurately. Also, the chains had little resemblance to modern life structures.

Then, they found that certain zinc ions performed better. Although zinc produced fewer and shorter chains, there was more accuracy and the nucleotide chains conformed better to the real thing.

Apparently, Orgel said, there is something in the geometry of the zinc ions that makes them react to the environment in a way that's suggestive of life.

Zinc products today are used in a wide variety of ways -- as a galvanizing agent to protect steel in storage tanks, pipelines and ship hulls and in the production of automobiles, hardware, electrical appliances, business machines, ceramics, fabrics, cosmetics, drugs and even toys.(more)

There are still many problems.

"It's a modest reaction," Orgel says.

It doesn't seem to work for all four of the amino-acid bases that are seen in DNA. Salk researchers are still trying other methods of making the zinc ion reaction work in these other areas.

Pharmacists may soon substitute cheaper drugs

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — If your druggist refuses to save you money with generic drugs, get another pharmacist, says the dean of the University of Texas College of Pharmacy.

Starting Jan. 1, pharmacists may substitute cheaper drugs — branded or unbranded — for equivilent products named on prescriptions if physicians sign a form giving their OK.

"There is no reason for a pharmacist to respond, 'I only believe in the high-priced brands.' If a pharmacist responds that way, talk to another pharmacy," Dean James Doluisio said in an interview.

Savings can be great, he said, particularly for "those on chronic medication." A recent Florida study showed an average saving of $1.95 per prescription.

"I would not hesitate to take a generic," Doluisio said.

The pharmacy dean said Texas' generic law comes when many drugs discovered during a "golden age of drug development" are entering the competitive generic market.

A pharmaceutical company that patents a drug has an exclusive right to manufacture and sell it for 18 years from the time it submits the drug to the U.S. Food and Drug Administration for approval. Once the patent expires, other companies may produce it and compete with the discoverer for sales.

"Of the top 200 drugs, two-thirds are protected by patent now. By 1985, it is estimated that only about one-third will be protected," Doluisio said.

Drugs that soon will become available generically will include many antibiotics, tranquilizers of the Valium and Librium type and painkillers of the Darvon variety, he said.

Doluisio said Congress is considering extending the life of drug patients beyond 18 years because the research required for FDA approval has increased to between seven and 10 years.

Doluisio advised a committee that produced a compromise among doctors and druggists that resulted in passage of the new Texas law allowing substitution.

He said it will be "very interesting to see" how physicians respond to the new generic drug law.

"What I think will happen is some initial hesitancy, but I would be willing to bet that within a year or so that initial hesitancy will be overcome," Doluisio said.

He said he and other members of the Texas Pharmaceutical Association are uorking with county medical societies to encourage doctors to permit substitution of therapeutically equivalent drugs for those prescribed by brand name.

Doluisio says the only fly in the generic ointment is the marketing of drugs that have not been approved by the FDA as therapeutically equivalent to the original name-brand products whose patents have expired.

Reagan in spotlight

President Reagan makes his international debut Tuesday. He will take his place as the recognized leader of the seventh annual Western economic summit which convenes for two days at Le Chateau Montebello, a huge lodge in wooded isolation 40 miles east of Ottawa. And what he does may better define his foreign policy that critics assert is fogbound.

Fortunately, Mr. Reagan will not be at a disadvantage as a newcomer. Equal strangers to summitry will be President Francois Mitterrand of France and Prime Ministers Zenko Suzuki of Japan and Giovanni Spadolini of Italy. Besides the host, Canadian Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau, only West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt and Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher of Britain are veterans of these meetings.

The leaders will thus be spending so much time getting acquainted they won't have much opportunity for the sort of arguments that rankled their predecessors at previous summits. President Mitterrand, for example, is not disguising his eagerness to seek some common ground between his new socialist government in Paris and the conservative administration in Washington.

Economics being the name of the game at Montebello, the discussions will center on inflation, international trade, protectionism, energy problems and economic aid to poorer Third World nations.

It is an eloquent testimony of how domestic policies influence international affairs, that Mr. Reagan goes to this economic summit holding the highest cards of any U.S. president since the first such gathering at Rambouillet, France, in 1975. Thanks to tough fiscal discipline, the U.S. dollar is the strongest in nearly a decade. It is, for instance, at a five-year high against the West German mark. And gold, ever the haven when the dollar is weak, has plunged from $800 an ounce in early 1980 to less than $400.

The strengthened dollar is requiring other countries to pay out more in their currencies for oil and imports. Moreover, high U.S. interest rates have been attracting rivers of international currency to this country.

Only last year, the Japanese and Europeans were castigating President Carter at the Venice summit because anemic greenbacks were flooding the world and pumping inflation into their economies. Now they are expected to urge President Reagan to stabilize exchange rates which have been moving to U.S. advantage or, putting it differently, they want Washington to support their faltering currencies at the expense of the dollar. Mr. Reagan is likely to resist these international pressures in the same effective, disarming way he has turned aside similar opposition to his policies on the domestic front.

The President's philosophy is also expected to shape the dialogue about Third World aid. His emphasis, as Secretary of State Alexander Haig made clear in the Caribbean aid conference at Nassau, is to offer self-help stimulus through trade incentives and encouragement of private investments. This approach is not likely to find favor with Mr. Trudeau and Mr. Mitterrand, who are pushing what in effect would be larger welfare grants from the industrialized nations to the poorer ones. But if Mr. Reagan holds firm, the circumstances of this summit suggest his views will either prevail or nothing contrary to them will succeed.

For the United States has taken its rightful place again as the true leader of the non-Communist world. That will be the dominating reality at Montebello. And Americans, whatever their domestic differences, can be proud to stand tall in the world once more.

CHARLEY REESE

Independence is worth dying for

I don't like holidays anymore. I would like historical holidays except that almost nobody bothers to notice the historical reasons for any holiday these days. A holiday is just a day off.

Charley Reese

One of the most vile things the Congress of the United States has ever done, and it has done a number of vile things, was to let the tourism lobby and public employee unions talk it into shifting federal holidays to weekends regardless of where the real day actually falls.

You talk about greed desecrating history. To celebrate George Washington's Birthday on Monday when it falls on the other six days as it does regularly is absurd. We ought to stop this pretense and abolish all holidays and simply designate them, Day Off 1, Day Off 2, etc. Why pretend to celebrate Washington's Birthday anymore when many Americans think he is either a bridge or a city?

The appropriate thing for the Fourth of July, for example, is gunfire and explosives. What you are celebrating is the beginning of a revolution, which depended on accurate gunfire and explosives for success. Our forefathers killed British soldiers and Hessian mercenaries for 13 years before the Crown decided the American colonies were too much of a bother.

Of course many Americans today are afraid of guns and explosives and think that revolutions were invented by Marxists. Many Americans think that anyone who believes in the right to overthrow a government by force and violence is a subversive. Actually, the Declaration of Independence is precisely an affirmation of man's right to overthrow governments by force and violence.

What's worse than fear of the Declaration of Independence, many Americans in leadership positions no longer believe in independence. They think it is a threat to peace. More than 100 congressmen signed an odious document in 1976 called the Declaration of Interdependence, a mushy-headed declaration that sovereignty was obsolete. They should have been impeached.

That would be out of character, however, to expect a congressman to live up to his oath of office. A nation which cannot deal with open assaults by terrorists (Iran, the Weathermen, the PLO) certainly shouldn't be expected to be able to deal with subtle treason.

No doubt if there is a war, someone will have to explain it to most American intellectuals in between detonations.

"What did you say it was?"

"A war. W-A-R. It means they are trying to kill you."

"Who? Me? Why? Shouldn't we talk to them about this?"

"Too late."

"But I don't want to fight them. I believe in pluralism."

"They don't."

"But I believe in peaceful resolution of conflict."

"They don't."

"But I don't think anything is worth dying for."

"Doesn't matter. They think some things are worth killing for."

As barbaric as it may sound to modern ears, we shall remain independent and free of coercion only so long as enough of us believe that our liberty is worth killing for. Life, you see, is the highest value and when you are no longer willing to bet it, the other side calls and takes the pot.

Read the bottom line of the Declaration. It says that.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

NCPAC supporting 'rich man's tax dodge'

WASHINGTON — The National Conservative Political Action Committee, the notorious NCPAC of the past election campaign, bombarded liberal candidates with ugly contentions and controversies. Now it has allegedly been transformed from a campaign force to a lobbying operation that has become intimidating to policymaking Washington.

Jack Anderson

Its outspoken young chairman, John T. Dolan, has been invested by nature and circumstance with a unique gift for passive incitement. His views are stridently partisan; he would be the last person you would expect to find straddling a political fence.

Yet he has suddenly become a champion of the "straddle." That's the "commodities straddle," a slick but legal tax dodge used by wealthy individuals to reduce their income taxes.

A bill pushed by Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y., would close this loophole, which costs the Treasury about $1.3 billion a year in lost revenue. He has the full weight of the Reagan administration behind him.

But Dolan has thrown his weight against the legislation. In recent letters to senators, NCPAC called for preserving the straddle loophole. "I am shocked," Dolan wrote, "at the lack of understanding in the Congress of the full ramifications of the proposed legislation."

Some of those ramifications happen to have been spelled out in a study prepared by the staff of the Congressional Joint Committee on Taxation — and Dolan notwithstanding, it's clear what kind of tax-sheltering the legislation would put a stop to.

Straddling is some tricky sleight-of-hand that is hard for the public to follow. It involves simultaneous contracts for future sale and purchase of commodities — soybeans, silver or Treasury bills.

By playing the fluctuations in the market, a shrewd straddler can take a tax-deductible short-term loss from ordinary income in one year, then recoup the following year with a profit taxed as long-term capital gain.

The key to the straddle is the difference in tax rates: 28 percent for capital gains, up to 70 percent for ordinary income. Some of the results were listed in the confidential report after an analysis of tax returns:

— Three individual returns showed an aggregate of more than $11 million in ordinary income that had been sheltered by commodity losses in a straddle operation.

— One individual used $100,000 in straddle losses to offset $60,000 in salary and $40,000 in interest income.

— An executive earning $60,000 in salary, plus $420,000 in commissions and interest, offset the bulk of his income with a $395,000 straddle loss.

In those three examples, the "commodity" used was Treasury bills. "Straddles in Treasury bill futures and options ... now appear the most common commodity shelter," the tax committee staff found.

In other words, thousands of wealthy individuals have made a cozy tax shelter for themselves out of the national debt — which costs the rest of us taxpayers billions of dollars a year in interest alone. So we not only pay them for financing the national debt, but they use the debt structure as a means of avoiding taxes on their other income.

This is the rich man's tax dodge that NCPAC wants to perpetuate — a food stamp program for the silver-spoon set that costs ordinary taxpayers $1.3 billion a year. One recipient of Dolan's letter to senators thought it smacked of lobbying. Since NCPAC has not registered as a lobbyist with the Clerk of the House, the apparent violation has been referred to the Justice Department for review.

Footnote: Dolan refused to talk to my associate Tony Capaccio, because I would not agree to stop calling his ultra-conservative organization ultra-conservative.

WATT LOSES ONE: Interior Secretary James Watt's Puritanic zeal and acerbic style have rubbed the less fanatical members of Congress the wrong way on occasion. One such occasion was his order closing down a little-known but highly effective project called the Office of Aircraft Services.

Set up in 1973 to prevent the increasing number of aircraft accidents in and around wilderness areas, the centralized safety office won rare praise from General Accounting Office watchdogs in a recent confidential report.

"Air safety could be jeopardized" if the office were abolished, the GAO report concluded. It cited savings of as much as 10 times the office's $2 million budget, and said:

"Interior cannot justify its decision to abolish OAS ... (which) has saved over $20 million during the past seven years of operation." A return to the previous decentralized system could bring "high accident rates, obsolete equipment and improper financial management," the GAO auditors warned. They recommended that Watt rescind his order to abolish the office.

The secretary ignored the recommendation, as well as the protests of individual congressmen. So they took action he couldn't ignore: They slapped a rider protecting the safety office onto an Interior appropriations bill.

UNLOADING PISTOLS: Over the next 10 years, the Army will be replacing its standard .45-caliber automatic pistols with 9-millimeter handguns. This will create something of a disposal problem.

Some of the Colt .45s may be loaned to gun clubs enrolled in the Civilian Marksmanship Program. But a spokesman for the director of civilian marksmanship said it's unlikely that any of the phased-out pistols will be sold to individuals, as the old M-1 rifles were. If any are, he said, prospective buyers would have to be U.S. citizens, over 18 and affiliated with a registered gun club.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Monday, July 20th, the 201st day of 1981. There are 164 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On July 20, 1969, American astronauts Neil Armstrong and Edwin Aldrin Jr. became the first men to land on the moon.

On this date:

In 1810, the South American country of Colombia declared its Independence from Spain.

In 1861, the Congress of the Confederacy began holding sessions in Richmond, Va.

In 1944, an attempt was made to assassinate Adolf Hitler in Germany.

And in 1954, an Armistice for Indochina was signed in Geneva, whereby France promised to respect the independence of Cambodia, Laos and Vietnam.

Ten years ago: a large South Vietnamese military force began a drive into Cambodia.

Five years ago: the U.S. spacecraft "Viking 1" landed on Mars after an 11-month flight and began sending back clear pictures of the planet.

INSIDE REPORT:

Weinberger's MX missile decision raises some ugly questions

WASHINGTON — The stunning decision by Secretary of Defense Caspar Weinberger to put the MX missile in a futuristic 1990 airplane, scrapping Jimmy Carter's land-based system, will solve President Reagan's political problems with Western senators but raises disturbing questions about Pentagon decision-making.

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

Although the report to Weinberger by his own committee of experts, headed by Dr. Charles Townes, was deeply divided, it gave Weinberger's airborne choice short shrift. The principal reason: high cost. Weinberger privately claims that the long-endurance aircraft — capable of flying two days without refueling and a week with it — will actually save money in the end.

Motivated partly by political considerations — admittedly very tough ones — Weinberger and Deputy Secretary Frank Carlucci have hinged the most important strategic decision of the Reagan administration on fear of an environmentalist outcry and the personal feelings of senators. Nevada's Paul Laxalt, President Reagan's closest friend in the Senate, and Utah's Jake Garn have led the campaign against Jimmy Carter's land-based system, planned for Nevada and Utah.

"Cap is mainly interested in the politics of the MX basing problem," one insider told us. "That and the budget." When Weinberger, Carlucci and Gen. David Jones, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, briefed Reagan in the White House last month on the MX and other new strategic weapons, Jones was not asked a single question. Consequently, he said nothing.

Similarly, in one significant MX session with outside experts, Weinberger and Carlucci had no Air Force officers present. Under Secretary of Defense Fred Ikle, considered by many the most experienced strategist in the Pentagon, was also absent.

Critics both inside and out of the Pentagon admire Weinberger's own intellectual capacity and his dedication to long hours of hard work, but they insist his lack of experience in the strategic arts could not be overcome in a brief six months as defense chief. Weinberger came to the Pentagon leaning strongly to a submarine-based system to make the MX invulnerable to a surprise Soviet nuclear attack against U.S. missiles. When that proved undoable, he began moving toward an airborne system.

There are also dangerous political problems with NATO in any American decision to safeguard the MX in airplanes (to be fired by remote control after being dropped into the air). The U.S. has been pressuring its European allies hard to move ahead rapidly with a new force of land-based nuclear missiles targeted on the Soviet Union. An airborne option in the U.S. is certain to intensify the public clamor against a new generation of land-based missiles for NATO. That could tighten the political squeeze on West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt and other European leaders.

The decision to base the MX in the air with a plane not yet built or fully designed shocked the Pentagon brass. Word leaked soon after a top Air Force officer was told on Tuesday (July 14) that Weinberger had "made his decision." Weinberger wanted the political spadework started for a selling campaign on Capitol Hill, both for the 1990 aircraft and for a stopgap to protect the MX before the new plane is built.

The secretary's stopgap appears to be the C5A giant cargo plane, a conventional aircraft from an assembly line that stopped running in 1973. Lockheed, the manufacturer, has already been asked to submit detailed information on when the 100 new C5As could be built and how much they would cost.

But the 100 C5As that Weinberger is planning have all the vulnerability problems of the aging B-52 bomber and they could not be built until the mid-'80s. "To fill the gap before 1990," one Pentagon analyst told us, "the C5A is less than a finger in the dike."

The Townes Committee, which is still conferring with Weinberger, has similar anxieties about a stopgap solution that puts the MX in conventional cargo planes. Pressures continue on Weinberger to adopt a sharply cut back mobile land-based system for 100 or fewer MX missiles (compared to Carter's planned 200). Even though the secretary leans strongly toward the cargo plane as a stopgap, insiders believe he may finally approve a small land-based system, perhaps to be scrapped in 1990 when the new long-duration planes are ready.

That would leave Weinberger's basic decision intact, if he can sell it to the President and Congress and if its political implications for NATO's European members prove manageable. But the deeper questions continue to be asked: Will it work and is it truly the best strategic answer to America's growing vulnerability to a surprise Soviet attack? Reagan promised no less.

Investigations, funerals begin in Kansas City

By ROBERT MACY
Associated Press Writer

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — As funerals began, engineers poked through tons of concrete and twisted metal for clues in the collapse of two suspended walkways at the Hyatt Regency Hotel. The death toll stood at 113, with 186 injured.

The first funerals following Friday's tragedy were scheduled today in Topeka, Kan. for four young members of the Mariachi Estrella Band who were at the Hyatt to entertain a Fuller Brush Co. convention.

Meanwhile, the owner of the luxurious hotel said it might be reopened within two weeks, and the sky bridges might be replaced.

There was still no official explanation for the collapse, although investigators were looking into the possibility that it might have been caused by people dancing or swaying on the spans.

THE SIX YOUNG WOMEN in the mariachi band were heading across the crowded Hyatt lobby to a room to change into their costumes Friday night, when the second- and fourth-floor walkways above them collapsed, crushing people in the debris. Four of the band members perished, and Rachel Galvan and Theresa Cuevas were hospitalized.

Miss Galvan was in critical condition at St. Mary's Hospital in Kansas City on Sunday, but Mrs. Cuevas had been released.

A joint funeral was being held today for Connie Alcala, Dolores Carmona, Linda Louis Schurlock and Dolores Galvan, sister of Rachel Galvan.

Of the injured, 90 remained hospitalized Sunday, 23 reportedly in critical condition or in intensive care units. Two of the injured died Sunday, boosting the death toll to 113.

The first investigators — hired by the hotel's architects from Failure Analysis Associates of Palo Alto, Calif. — were on the scene Sunday. Four other investigations also were announced — by the hotel owners, the hotel managers, the contractor and the city.

"WE ARE AT WORK TO find the most qualified team," said Donald Hall, president of Hallmark Cards Inc. "It will be a very thorough investigation." Hall said the company was contacting engineering firms across the country to put together a team of investigators.

Hallmark is the parent of Crown Center Redevelopment Co., which owns the hotel. The hotel is managed by Hyatt Corp.

Among the engineers contacted by Crown Center was James Stratta of Menlo Park, Calif., who was hired by Kansas City to learn the cause of the collapse of the Kemper Arena roof here in 1979.

"The first thing you have to do is determine, did something let go or did something break?" Stratta said. He said it must also be determined whether people dancing or swaying contributed to the ollapse.

Crown Center President James McClune said the hotel might be open for business in a week or two.

"REOPENING DEPENDS on what the engineers tell us," McClune said. "If there has not been any structural damage to the hotel, we can reopen without doing anything about replacing the bridges and we will as soon as it is safe.

"I don't know if we will replace the bridges," McClune added. "It is a design we like. We have to look at what happened, correct it and get back in operation."

Mayor Richard Berkley and his wife, Sandy, spent five hours visiting the injured in three hospitals. He promised the city would investigate because "we have to bend over backwards to make sure there is (public) confidence." City Attorney Aaron Wilson said later, however, that the city's legal authority to probe the collapse was limited because it occurred on private property.

Witnesses differed in accounts of what happened in the seconds before and during the disaster. Some said as many as 300 people were on the second-level walkway watching a dance below in the lobby. Several were seen dancing and swaying to the music from below.

"IT (THE WALKWAY) wasn't swaying. There were people who told us you could see it bouncing," fire department spokesman Harold Knabe said. "The people were swaying on it like they were dancing to the music.

"People who walked across it said you could feel it bouncing and moving up and down. They weren't on it at the time it fell."

Some witnesses said the fourth-story walkway fell first and crashed onto a second-floor span. Knabe said other witnesses believed the second-floor walkway fell first and pulled the top one down.

"From what we've been able to determine, the two sections were suspended together," he said.

Partial list of victims released by police

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Police have released the following partial list of the dead in the collapse of two walkways at the Hyatt Regency Hotel on Friday night:

John J. Adler, 74, Fairway, Kan.
Connie Alcala, 50, Topeka, Kan.

Hotel officials report no increase in cancellations

By The Associated Press

Managers at some of the nation's 59 Hyatt Regency hotels are ordering inspections of walkways and other suspended structures in the wake of the fatal walkway collapse at the Hyatt Regency in Kansas City.

Donald DePorter, regional vice president of the Hyatt Hotels Corp., said Sunday he had orderered an architect to "re-look" a ramp structure suspended by steel beams at Hyatt Regency in Illinois Center in Chicago, where he is general manager.

He said he would expect other inspections to follow, although there have been no official orders from the Hyatt management to do so. "We'll probably have a vice-presidents' meeting Monday or Tuesday and decide what to do," he said.

But so far the guests apparently aren't worried. The hotels Sunday reported no increase in cancellations.

"A lot of people think it's the DC-10, but all Hyatt hotels have different designers," said Brent Christie, executive assistant manager for the Hyatt in Dearborn, Mich.

The crash of a DC-10 jet in Chicago in May 1979 killed 274 people and was blamed in part on faulty maintenance which allowed an engine to fall off. All DC-10s were grounded for thorough inspections.

In Kansas City, 113 people were killed and nearly 200 injured Friday night when two 75-yard-long concrete walkways, suspended from the ceiling by steel cables, collapsed into a lobby where about 1,500 people were dancing. The walkways themselves were crowded with dancers and there was specuation the collapse may have been triggered by the weight or rhythmic vibrations from the dancing, although the cause is under investigation.

The Kansas City hotel, like most Hyatts, imitates the design created by architect John Portman from the Hyatt in Atlanta, where guest rooms open off balconies that line a vast interior courtyard, or atrium. In some hotels, walkways provide access between balconies on opposite sides or from elevators to balconies.

"I would say if there are other like structures or similar structures, we would have an architect look at them. We don't know of of any, however," DePorter said.

Texas representatives debate cut in benefits

By CHARLES RICHARDS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — How could Congress be so cruel as to cut minimum Social Security benefits to 3 million senior citizens who are struggling to survive from day to day?

Rep. Phil Gramm, D-College Station, was blasted a few days ago by a colleague, Rep. Mickey Leland, D-Houston, for blocking an attempt by House Majority Leader Jim Wright of Fort Worth to reinstate the benefits, which both the House and Senate whacked off in their budget bills.

Gramm admits readily that benefits are being cut, but he insists that the only ones hurt are a bunch of freeloaders.

Talking about cuts in Social Security benefits is "an easy issue to demagogue, but they don't have a leg to stand on," Gramm said.

The cuts need to be made and will cut almost $3 billion in abuse from the Social Security program over the next three years, Gramm said. That money will be funneled back to those who really need and deserve it, he added.

The cut was recommended by President Reagan, by the General Accounting Office and by the Social Security Advisory Council, a group appointed by President Carter, Gramm pointed out.

●

Wright sought unanimous approval from the House to introduce a "sense of the House" resolution urging House conferees on a budget bill to try to put the minimum benefits back in.

Leland said Gramm's objection blocked Wright's "compassionate" effort to "correct this cruel action against som 3 millio people currently on the Social Security rolls."

Leland described the victims of the cut as "mostly senior citizens on very low, fixed income" and "senior citizens who are struggling to survive from day to day."

Wright said the truly needy, including 80-year-old widows, would lose their benefits.

"The truly needy?" Gramm asked in amazement. "Of the 3 million people drawing so-called minimum benefits — actually unearned benefits — 74 percent are drawing pensions of more than $900 a month from other sources."

●

Who are the 3 million people who will be affected by the cuts in minimum benefits? Here's Gramm's view.

"Let's start with some background," he says.

"In 1939, we created minimum benefits of $10 a month, so that anybody who paid anything into Social Security, as little as $3 in their entire lifetime, got back at least $10 a month. In 1974, we brought in SSI (Supplemental Security Income), which eliminated the reason for minimum benefits, but it was never taken out.

"As far as anyone needy losing their benefits, that's just not so. Anyone needy automatically qualifies for SSI and gets $255 a month. But under the current law, even if you're not needy, if you've paid as much as $3 into Social Security, you can draw $3,065 a year in minimum benefits. And that's not right."

●

A lot of those who will lose minimum benefits, Gramm said, are people whose jobs didn't require them to pay into Social Security — people like federal government retirees, railroad retirees, and people who worked abroad.

Harrelson on fast?

HOUSTON (AP) — Charles Harrelson, a key target of the investigation into the assassination of a federal judge, will undergo a doctor's examination to determine the validity of his claim to be on a hunger strike, Harris County authorities say.

Joann Starr Harrelson said her husband, who is being held on state firearms and narcotics charges, has refused all food since eating ice cream Wednesday night.

Washington watchers focus on budget cuts

By GARTH JONES
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Texas cities and Texas legislators are watching closely the final negotiations in Washington on budget cuts because the result will affect state-city financial relations.

The Reagan administration wants to revise much of the federal funding pattern by making block grants to the states instead of direct grants to specific agencies and governmental units.

This change, if approved by Congress, means cities and other governmental units will be dealing with the state instead of directly with federal agencies.

It also means there probably will be a second special legislative session, unless Congress reaches a decison before this first special session ends Aug. 11.

Gov. Bill Clements has said he may have to call a second special session just to decide how the state handles block grants from the federal government.

Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby has predicted another special session some time during the winter or early spring.

"Not only will the Legislature be asked to divide up the block grants, but there undoubtedly will be pleas from local government for state money to replace federal funds lost in the budget cuts," said one statewide official.

The regular session of the Legislature tried to prepare for the federal budget changes, but most officials think they did not go far enough.

The regular session proposed a state constitution change that would create a State Finance Managment Committee consisting of the governor, lieutenant governor, House speaker, and chairmen of the House and Senate committees dealing with taxes and appropriations. If approved by voters this November, this committee could exercise limited budget controls over state agencies.

"We are going to need something more definite than what we have so far," says Tom Keel, executive director of the Legislative Budget Board. "There are some safeguards in this amendment and in the appropriations bill, but probably not enough."

Keel said if the block grants apply only to one agency, the money can be handled by the new management committee. However, if a grant is to be distributed among more one agency then the Legislature will have to do the job, in a special session.

"But it can be dealt with," Keel said.

In 1980, Texas' state government funneled $49.9 million in aid to cities. Of this, $29.2 million or 58.6 percent, was federal money passing through the state's hands. The other $20.7 million actually came from the state treasury to the cities.

The 1980 federal money to Texas cities includes $5.3 million for social services. This is the money that cities likely will want the state to replace if it is removed by budget cuts.

Authorities assume drowning victim alien attempting to cross Rio Grande

BROWNSVILLE, Texas (AP) — Authorities say they don't know what killed the man whose bloated and decaying body lay sprawled on the muddy bank of the Rio Grande for three weeks.

Officials assumed he was another of the many illegal aliens who, although unable to swim, gamble their lives and lose in the swirling currents of the river that winds 1,885 miles from the San Juan Mountains in Colorado to the Gulf of Mexico.

Immigration officials consider the river a blessing, saying it serves as a natural boundry that keeps the job of patroling the border within the realm of the possible.

But the Rio Grande is a curse for hundreds of Mexicans who roll up their pants legs and try to wade across the muddy water.

In the 50-mile stretch that snakes from Rancho Viejo to Boca Chica, the river has claimed 20 victims this year. Nine of them have been recovered by authorities in Brownsville.

Soviet pianist finds refuge, success in America

RICHARDSON, Texas (AP) — Eight years ago, Leon Ziligson arrived in the United States with his wife Valentina, a few bucks, a sewing machine and a Czechoslovakian-made piano.

To these he has added the fruits of U.S.-Soviet detente: a comfortable career as a jazz pianist and piano tuner, a rambling house in the fashionable North Dallas suburb of Richardson and — most important of all, he says — freedom from persecution as a Soviet Jew.

Now, there is a baby grand piano in the spacious living room and a newly arrived baby boy in the nursery. The Ziligsons have two other children, girls age 7 and 2½, both born in the United States.

Like many of the Soviet Jews who emigrated to the United States during those early years of detente, the Ziligsons were allowed to bring few of their material possessions with them.

Left behind in his homeland along the Baltic Sea was much of Ziligson's sheet music. He would have had to pay a tax on his musical compositions had he chosen to bring them along, he said. Most of the couple's furniture also remained behind in Latvia.

Latvia is one of the 15 republics that make up the Soviet Union. When Ziligson was born there in 1943, the once-independent nation had been occupied by Soviet troops for three years.

"I wanted more than anything to live in a free country. I knew Latvia had once been free. I wanted to know what it was like," Ziligson said.

The day they arrived in Dallas — a hot, humid September afternoon in 1973 — now seems "so long ago," said Mrs. Ziligson, a Moscow native who worked as a singer in Russia. She met her husband when both joined a traveling orchestra based in Riga, the Latvian capital.

Dallas offered few employment opportunities for a jazz pianist in 1973, Ziligson said. His first job in the United States was as a piano refinisher in a small music store. He said he wasn't good enough then to land a job as a piano tuner. The couple set up housekeeping in a small apartment leased for them by the Jewish agency that sponsored their immigration.

Now Ziligson, 38, tunes the pianos of Dallas' affluent residents by day and entertains them by night at private parties, nightclubs and restaurants.

"There's more of a demand for musicians in Dallas now than there was when we first arrived," he said. "But Dallas is still a big country music town."

"It would be tough to make a living just as a jazz pianist in Dallas. But it's a very good place to raise kids. We like it."

Illinois town evacuated

DUPO, Ill. (AP) — A railroad tank car leaking nitric acid forced the evacuation this morning of the northern half of the town of Dupo in southeastern Illinois, the St. Clair County Sheriff's office said.

Authorities said the evacuation of residents began shortly after 3 a.m. They said officials are trying to transfer the acid to another tank car. The cause of the leak has not been determined.

Dupo is a town of some 2,800 people about 20 miles southeast of St. Louis, Mo.

Cigarette filters trap a substantial part of tars, nicotine

Dear Dr. Solomon: Do filters reduce the danger of the harmful effects of cigarettes? — Mr. C.F.

Dear Mr. C.F.: Yes. Cigarette filters trap a substantial part of tar and nicotine. Today, 85 percent of all cigarettes smoked have filters. Cigarette companies have also reduced tar content of cigarettes by mixing with leaf tobacco the stems and tobacco discards which have lower tar and nicotine levels; also synthetic substances which produce no tar or nicotine. The tar content of the average cigarette now is 50 percent lower than it was 20 years ago; 30 percent lower than 10 years ago. The Federal Trade Commission is constantly testing cigarettes for tar and nicotine content and publishing the results.

Dear Dr. Solomon: Years ago my medicine cabinet held some aspirin, a tin of Band-aids, a thermometer and little else. Today it holds a great deal more. To read some of the magazine advertisements, however, it seems I'm lacking a good deal of basic equipment that is considered necessary for good health. I'm referring to such things as a blood pressure monitor, a cancer testing kit and a stethoscope. How important is it for my and my family's health that we have all this equipment available at home? — Rennie

Dear Rennie: You raise a complicated question that calls for more than a simple answer. On the one hand, the public's increasing concern and willingness to take considerable responsibility for its own health is all to the good. After all, that is essentially what I advocate when I warn against smoking and encourage my patients to adhere to a nutritionally sound, well-balanced diet and to establish a program of regular exercise. The more people realize that in large measure their health is in their own hands, the better off they will be.

On the other hand, do-it-yourself medicine can be carried too far. Individuals who attempt to treat themselves for conditions that require a physician's services are asking for trouble. It is one thing to occasionally check blood pressure at home; it is quite another to juggle the doses of antihypertensive medication in an effort to keep the blood pressure under control. This falls within the physician's area of competence, and a patient should no more take it upon himself to change the dosage of a drug than he would undertake to work with explosives that he knew nothing about.

For many patients, monitoring a medical condition is not a new experience. Over the years many persons with diabetes have been checking the glucose level in their urine, or, more recently, using samples of blood for the same purpose. But the diagnosis and treatment of diabetes are medical responsibilities. While manufacturers may provide testing kits and monitoring devices that may prove helpful in a variety of conditions, they cannot provide that training and knowledge needed to successfully manage the medical problem.

Therefore, while I preach preventive medicine and encourage patients' involvement in their own health care, I would warn that a little knowledge can be a dangerous thing, and that do-it-yourself medicine can be carried too far.

(If you have a medical question, write to Neil Solomon, M.D., 1726 Reisterstown Road, Baltimore, Md. 21208. Dr. Solomon cannot give personal replies but will answer as many questions as possible in his column.)

National Urban League President Vernon Jordan delivers the keynote address during Sunday's session of the organization's annual convention in Washington.

Congress concentrates on money

By CARL C. CRAFT
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress, acting on key money measures, is attempting to settle on a compromise package of cuts in federal spending plans, is moving toward a showdown on proposed tax reductions, and is starting to vote on agency appropriation bills for the upcoming fiscal year.

Here is the status of major legislation:

Federal Budget

—Senate-House budget negotiators are seeking to create a congressional compromise version of a package of reductions, as advocated by President Reagan, in plans for federal spending on more than 250 domestic programs.

The negotiators, who began work last week, are attempting to resolve the various differences between similar budget-cutting bills approved last month by the Senate and House.

According to the latest estimates by congressional budget specialists, the Senate-approved measure would cut planned spending by $38.1 billion in the 1982 fiscal year, which opens Oct. 1, compared with $37.3 billion in the House-passed bill.

This massive legislation would make detailed cuts in various laws so the government's spending will be brought into line with totals in the congressional budget resolution, which is supported by the president.

Preliminary figures approved by Congress in May provide for the government to spend a total $695.4 billion in fiscal 1982, with a $37.6 billion deficit. The lawmakers will vote later this year to set firm budget totals.

The Reagan administration, which had urged in March that fiscal 1982 spending be set at $695.3 billion, issued revised figures last week boosting the total to $704.8 billion. The administration's plan now calls for a $42.5 billion deficit for fiscal 1982 instead of the earlier proposal's $45 billion.

For fiscal 1981, which ends Sept. 30, the administration is projecting a deficit of $55.6 billion on total spending of $661.2 billion.

Income Taxes

—The Republican-dominated Senate is likely to make Reagan an opening-round winner in his battle for a 25 percent reduction in personal income tax rates over three years. The major confrontation over the president's proposal is expected later in the Democratic-controlled House.

In working on the tax cut legislation last week, the Senate defeated a proposed one-year alternative to Reagan's plan. In addition, the Senate approved an amendment that eventually would make automatic income tax cuts to offset inflation.

Meanwhile, Reagan's three-year tax cut proposal was rejected by the House Ways and Means Committee, which instead approved a substitute that would make an average 15 percent reduction in individual tax rates over two years.

Money Bills

—The House is taking up the first of the scheduled 13 appropriation bills to finance the operations of federal agencies during fiscal 1982. Thus far, the House Appropriations Committee has approved eight of these money measures, six of which are in line for full House consideration this week.

Among these is one providing $63.3 billion for the Housing and Urban Development Department, and assorted independent agencies, compared with $63.1 billion sought by Reagan.

A $13.2 billion supplemental appropriation and spending revision package, to keep the government operating through fiscal 1981, has been signed into law by Reagan, who originally sought $13.7 billion.

Clean Air

—Congressional compromise legislation signed by Reagan last week allows steel firms to delay compliance with the Clean Air Act for up to three years if the resulting savings are used to modernize plants.

In signing the measure aimed at helping revitalize the steel industry, Reagan termed it a symbol of his administration's attempt "to cast aside the overzealous and unnecessary regulations that have shackled the most productive sources in our economy."

Abortion

—A Senate Judiciary subcommittee is recommending legislation that would define human life as starting at conception. Critics contend the measure would equate abortion with murder. The Supreme Court had legalized abortion in a landmark 1973 decision.

Under legislation approved by Congress and signed by Reagan last month, the most stringent limits ever placed on federal financing of abortions for low-income women will apply through Sept. 30.

Incest and rape were eliminated as grounds for an abortion under Medicaid. That means the government, until Sept. 30, will pay for the operation only where the woman's life is threatened by the pregnancy.

Food Stamps

—An additional $1.7 billion is being provided for the food stamp program to head off any reductions in benefits for the 23 million participants through Sept. 30, under measures approved by Congress and signed by Reagan.

Jordan says Reagan policies 'dangerous' to blacks, poor

WASHINGTON (AP) — As a person, says National Urban League President Vernon E. Jordan, Ronald Reagan is good, courageous and compassionate, but as president he is the first since Herbert Hoover "willing to sacrifice millions of people on the altar of an outmoded ideology."

"The administration's refusal to temper ideology with compassion makes it a clear and present danger to black people and poor people," Jordan said Sunday night in the keynote address for the league's 71st national convention.

Vice President George Bush was to represent the administration today. Reagan, who addressed the annual convention of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People earlier this month in Denver, is in Canada for an economic summit.

Jordan used his keynote speech to urge that the administration support extension of the 1965 Voting Rights Act. Reagan has not announced a position on extending the law, which expires next year, and Jordan said the fact that thre is any question symbolizes "the erosion of black gains."

"We are fighting the fight we fought 16 years ago," he said. "And in some ways we are dealing with basic issues like better race relations that were issues of the 1950s."

Jordan said Reagan's economic program lacked compassion and would spawn a massive transfer of resources from the poor to the rich.

Jordan renewed his criticism of Reagan's proposal to consolidate federal programs into block grants, with few strings attached, letting states decide who should be served and how much should be spent.

Many of the block grants proposed by the administration have been rebuffed in Congress.

Jordan said block grants are "a resurrection of the discredited notion of states' rights, giving back to those who tyrannized us earlier, power and funds."

Death penalty reinstated

DAYTON, Ohio (AP) — Gov. James Rhodes says he has no plans to grant clemency to anyone sentenced to die under the state's new death-penalty law.

"That's old-fashioned for a governor to act as a court of last resort," Rhodes said Sunday as he signed a bill reinstating capital punishment for certain aggravated murders. The signing took place before 250 law officers at a meeting of the Ohio Fraternal Order of Police.

The measure gives the state its first capital punishment law since July 3, 1978, when a previous law was ruled struck down by the Supreme Court.

Pennsylvania election shapes up like dogfight

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Tuesday's special congressional election in Philadelphia to fill the vacancy created by the Abscam resignation of Raymond F. Lederer is strictly a local Democratic dogfight nearly devoid of national issues. Even the Republican is a Democrat.

The two major candidates are divided only by their campaign methods and the blessing of Philadelphia Mayor William Green, who wants a reliable ally in the House.

Perhaps more importantly, the winner of Pennsylvania's 3rd District seat, expected to disappear next year after congressional reapportionment, will have a base to challenge other Philadelphia congressmen in 1982.

David Glancey, the official Democratic candidate, is the younger, Green-endorsed nominee who is spending about $160,000 on television and radio advertising to lure voters to the polls in the middle of a steamy summer heat wave.

Joseph Smith, a 61-year-old Democratic state senator spurned in his bid for the party nomination, is running on both the Republican and Independent ballots.

He is spending most of his $40,000 campaign chest in the traditional manner of a city election — by handing out election-day cash to loyal ward leaders responsible for bringing out the vote.

MONDAY JULY 20, 1981

This bedroom is attractive principally because of its accessories which demand attention and furniture which works effectively to show them off.

Choose furniture wisely to showcase accessories

A dominating feature of the bedroom shown above is its choice of accessories. They demand attention.

The furniture is also well chosen because it works effectively to show them off.

Modular combinations add dimension to the room's faceless space. More than that, the units allow flexible storage and the display of a fascinating collection. African accessories move and dance in tune to the continent's spirit: all things possess life.

Thomasville designer Shelley Weiss has wrapped a bedroom in the boldness of patterns in natural elm woods and pecky-elm veneers. Carpet choice is a saxony plush in a Cafe-au-lait coloration. The mirrored screen has bent bamboo trim.

There is a distinct affinity here, a mutual and intimate need of certain furniture for particular accent pieces. This light group of furniture in clean, contemporary lines is dramatically highlighted with black safari primitive artwork.

A designer tip from Weiss: "Don't accessorize for accessories' sake...if your collection is cherished, it deserves the very best showcase—and vice versa."

Survey shows people doing more at home

MARYSVILLE, Ohio — If you are planning on fixing up the house and grounds this year, or doing more entertaining at home, you are not alone. Whether it's all for pleasure or because of the restraints brought about by inflation, homeowners are showing an increasing preference for activities centered around the house.

Nearly a third of the homeowners questioned recently said they plan to spend more time in home-related activities this year than they did in 1980, according to a nationwide survey of 2,805 homeowners conducted by The Home Testing Institute on behalf of O.M. Scott & Sons, the lawn people.

Hme activities selected, in order of preference, were: interior decorating and home improvement, 53 percent; lawn and garden care, 51 percent; exterior painting and refurbishing, 44 percent; and home entertainment, 39 percent.

Lawn and garden care, which registered third place in order of preference a year ago, has moved up to second place with a jump of 18 percentage points. Interior decorating and home improvement jumped 8 percentage points; exterior painting and refurbishing jumped 10 percentage points; and home entertainment, 20 points.

This year, 39 percent of homeowers who plan to spend more time around the house also plan to spend more money on their lawns. While taking an active interest in lawn care they also showed increasig appreciation for convenience products.

Here's the answer

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

Q. — We would like to cut the noise between two rooms, only one of which is already in place. We have heard that the best way to do this is to place insulation between the walls, Is that all that is necessary?

A. — Insulation between the walls will help considerably, but that is only part of the solution. Sound travels through metal, under baseboards and even through electrical outlets. There are special non-metal connectors and insulation materials that can be used wherever noise might travel. Your best bet is to go to a dealer that sells this kind of sound-absorbent and deadening materials, explain what you plan to do and ask his advice. That's because each situation presents special problems and requires special solutions. Only an expert who knows your specific problems can give you accurate answers.

Q. — I have to replace some broken window panes soon and would like to cut the glass myself. When I have tried this in the past, I always seemed to run into trouble when doing the cutting with a glass cutter. Either the glass cracks while cutting or the line begins to chip or the cutter skips in places and I have to go back over it. Is there something I am doing wrong?

A. — Undoubtedly. Exactly what it is can not be determined from this distance, but a good guess is that you are not applying the proper pressure on the cutter. The pressure must be firm but not too firm. Usually, cracking comes from pressing too hard, skipping from pressing too little. Are you using some kind of straightedge along which to draw the cutter? Practice with pieces of scrap glass again and again. Suddenly, you will find yourself making perfect cuts. You won't be sure exactly why, but you will know then that you have acquired the hang of it.

Q. — From the kitchen of our house at the rear, you have to go down four concrete steps to get to the backyard. There is no problem in the summer, but during the winter, the steps are sometimes covered with ice and very dangerous. We have thought of several solutions and even tried a couple of them, but nothing seems to be foolproof. What advice can you give us?

A. — There probably is no foolproof method that will prevent someone from slipping on such steps forever. You might try something a friend of mine has found helpful. He has built a wooden frame for each step. The frame fits over the step in such a way that it cannot move, but if you can't get it to fit perfectly, use a couple of fasteners to hold it in place. Each frame is placed in position when winter is about to arrive and removed when it has gone. The important thing to do when building the frame is to slant it the tiniest bit to permit water to run off. Of course, water can freeze on wood under certain conditions or can become slippery for other reasons, but so far it has worked for several years. In any case, it most certainly is less likely to become slippery than the present concrete.

Q. — The painted wooden floor in our family room is in excellent condition, with no signs of peeling, blistering or cracking, but there are two spots where most of the paint has worn away. In repainting the entire floor, should thse spots be given special treatment?

A. — Yes. Take a small quantity of the paint and thin it a bit with turpentine or mineral spirits if it is oil paint or water if it is latex paint. Paint the spots with this mixture and allow it to dry for at least a day. Now paint the floor the regular way.

(Kinds of paint, surface preparation, brushes, roller and techniques are among the subjects in Andy Lang's booklet, "Paint Your House Inside and Out," available by sending 50 cents and a long, STAMPED, self-addressed envelope to Know-How, P.O. Box 477, Hungtinton, N.Y. 11743. Questions of general interest will be answered in the column, but individual correspondence cannot be undertaken.)

Silicone sealants long lasting, resistant

By AL CARRELL

One of my favorite sealants is silicone. It is long lasting, resists moisture, shock and vibration. It can take a beating from such household chemicals as bleach, detergents, drain cleaners, disinfectants, and similar products. I'm not the only one who likes this stuff. It's a popular item in the home centers and hardware stores and it also brings forth some good ideas from you readers. Here are a few.

+ + +

Dear Al:
With a house full of youngsters (we have four, and that is a houseful) there is considerable slamming of the screen door as they run in and out. It was about to drive me loco. By the simple addition of several dabs of silicone sealant around the door frame, the screen closes against padded bumpers and is much quieter. — Mother

+ + +

Dear Al: If you ever want to get more mileage out of a metal bucket that has sprung a leak, just put a dab of silicone sealant on the hole. When it sets up, the bucket again holds water. — W.J.

+ + +

Dear Al: Sometimes regular pipe joint compound doesn't seal a plumbing pipe to make threaded connections leakproof. To avoid such a failure, I apply silicone sealant to the threads and complete the fitting. Then I wait for the sealant to cure before subjecting the joint to water. It will not leak. If you ever have to remove the fitting, the seal can be broken with a wrench. — L.W.

+ + +

Dear Super: They say that silicone sealant can't be painted over since paint doesn't adhere to it too well. If you carefully coat the cured sealant with contact cement, the cement will adhere to the sealant, and then paint will adhere to the cement. — F.R.

Another way is to spray the sealant with artists' fixative. This too can be painted over and does adhere to the silicone.

+ + +

Dear Al: The throw rug in our entry hall was a dangerous flying carpet. We made it safer by running a bead of silicone sealant around the bottom edge. When the compound set up, the rug was slip-proof and no longer was a hazard. — H.S.

+ + +

Dear Al: This is really offbeat, but it worked. Our son's shirt tail never stayed in. I knew that my husband's golf slacks had an inner waistband that was a gripper for the shirt tail and was made of rubber. In my husband's workshop, he had some silicone sealant. I experimented with the idea of running a very small bead of this stuff inside the waistband of our son's trousers. It worked on that pair at keeping the shirt tail in reasonably well, and so I applied the stuif to all his slacks. — Mrs. R.D.T.

+ + +

As you can see, there are lots of ways to use the stuff. I find it works best if you snip the tube spout off at about a 45-degree angle. The place where you cut the tapered spout controls the width of the bead. I've also found that you get a better bead if you push the material ahead of the nozzle as it comes out instead of pulling it toward you. Remember to follow the manufacturer's directions for use and give this and any other compound the proper drying and curing time. Goofs can be removed with paint thinner until the stuff starts to dry. Then you best wait until it cures, and cut and peel to remove. A sharp razor blade will slice through the sealant. Maybe you've found a few thousand other great uses for this stuff, and if so, send 'em in so we can "stick" them in the column.

HINTS FROM HELOISE

Salad dressing booklet has helpful hints

DEAR READERS:

Have I got another good booklet for you!

The Association for Dressings and Sauces has put together a super little book with all kinds of information on dressings, mayonnaise, salad dressings, sauces and dips.

It has more than 150 hints and a number of good recipes plus some interesting facts on labeling, caloric content, cholesterol count and additives, which are very important to all of us today.

There is some interesting information on the history of salad dressings and sauces dating all the way back to over 5,000 years ago plus fascinating stuff about how European royal chefs often combined as many as 35 ingredients in one salad, including such exotic greens as rose petals and violets.

In the middle of the booklet is an easy to read chart with three different uses for each of 12 types of salad dressings. Some of them really are unusual and different.

That old tired song about inflation is true and getting to all of us. This book will help you stretch your money by teaching you ways to marinate inexpensive cuts of meats.

The cost of $1 for the booklet may seem high but please remember that the postage alone is 35 cents and that the price of printing a book with colorful pictures is not cheap anymore, not to mention the cost of handling.

This is a book you will put along side your cookbook and use for many years.

If you want to receive this great offer for "Salad Dressings and Sauces... Facts and Fancy Fare" send $1 in cash or a check made payable to Assn. for Dressings and Sauces along with your name, address and zip code (a must) to:

BREADBOX ODOR

Dear Heloise: To eliminate odor or mildew in your wooden breadbox, drill a few holes in the back or on both sides for ventilation.

I was given a beautiful bread box with an offensive smell, but as I'm not one to throw anything away, I had my son drill a few holes in it and within a short time, there was no more odor.

If you look at the metal boxes, you will find they are made with holes in the sides. — R.O.

NO DISAPPEARING ACT

Dear Heloise: While putting elastic in a casing, I discovered putting a safety pin in each end of the elastic prevents the "back" end from slipping too far into the casing and disappearing.

If it should slip through, you have only to take the other end and easily run it back to the opening. — Louise Hensley

Preventive care for feet urged

WASHINGTON (AP) — Feet hurt? You're not alone, according to U.S. Department of Health statistics which indicate that 87 percent of Americans have a foot problem during a lifetime.

And, many are painful. Not only do feet hurt, but a lot of people stoically endure the pain, say foot specialists.

"Foot pain is not a God-given trait," says Dr. Arlene Hoffman, a San Francisco podiatrist. "If we had one-tenth the pain in another part of our body, we'd run to the doctor to find out what's wrong."

Many other foot experts also consider feet to be the most neglected part of the body, she adds. To change that attitude, she and her colleagues at the American Podiatry Association have joined with Scholl to educate Americans about their feet and encourage better preventive foot health across the nation.

Why do people ignore their feet, even when they hurt? The podiatrists generally agree that it's because feet are covered up.

"Out of sight, out of mind," says Dr. William Munsey of Worthington, Ohio. "The fallacy of that, of course, is that the pain shows up in your face. Your fatigue level also increases when your feet hurt."

Fatigue also is cited as a symptom of sore feet by Dr. E. Dalton McGlamry, an Atlanta podiatrist.

"I can go down an assembly line and immediately identify people who tend toward excessive pronation (inward and downward rotation of the arch)," says McGlamry.

The doctor describes the symptoms of pronation: "They (people who pronate) fatigue early, become clock watchers and are more susceptible to injuries. Thirty minutes after they're on the job, their mind is off the job and on their feet. Overpronation is not a killer, but a killjoy."

Fear plays a role in foot neglect, say some experts.

"Young people are afraid a podiatrist will alter the shoes they wear," notes Springfield, Ill., specialist, Dr. Jerry Brant. "But there are many kinds of treatment besides wearing 'old lady' shoes," he emphasizes. And, according to Brant, surgery isn't the only option, either.

Brant, along with other specialists stresses the importance of paying attention to young feet. Some foot problems, such as bunions or hammertoes, can be inherited, and if diagnosed early enough, controlled or prevented, he says.

"Younger people often let a foot problem slide becaue it's not a constant source of pain — yet," says Brant. "But if a foot problem is not properly treated, it will probably get worse as you age.

"When feet start dictating what you can and can't do, then it's time to see a professional, find out what's wrong, and how it can be corrected," Brant adds.

Between check-ups, the podiatry group suggests some basic care tips:

— Good daily hygiene.

— An occasional foot soak.

— A daily shake of foot powder to keep feet dry and comfortable.

— Cushioning and padding on feet and in shoes to protect from daily "blows."

— Shoes, socks or stockings that fit comfortably.

This does not mean that women should toss out all their high heels. Rather, the doctors recommend alternating heel heights to maintain comfort and muscle flexibility in the legs.

Foot specialists caution diabetics and people with poor blood circulation to be especially careful about their feet. People with these conditions should see a physician or podiatrist about even the simplest foot problem.

DEAR ABBY

Graduation gifts require diplomatic acceptance

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Please help settle a disagreement we are having in our family. My grandson sent out his high-school graduation announcements before he knew that he didn't have enough credits to graduate.

He received many lovely graduation gifts, including some nice checks from relatives. I say all the gifts (and of course the checks) should be returned because he didn't really graduate. His mother (my daughter) insists that he is entitled to keep the gifts because he completed 12 years of schooling.

Do you think my daughter is right, and I should butt out? — ILLINOIS GRANNY

DEAR GRANNY: Your grandson should keep the gifts and send thank-you notes explaining that he did not graduate with his class, but he plans to make up the deficient credits and earn his diploma eventually — if indeed he intends to do so. Otherwise, he should return the gifts.

DEAR ABBY: My son, Allen, who is 18, has been going with Anna Marie for three years. She's also 18. They have been engaged since last Christmas, but no wedding date has been set. Allen lives at home and just started working at a bank. Anna Marie works there too. This bank has a great benefit package, which includes a $50,000 life insurance policy. Allen told me he made Anna Marie his beneficiary. I was very hurt. I told him that after they are married, Anna Marie should be the beneficiary, but until then, if, God forbid, something should happen to him, I should be the beneficiary of his policy.

He said no, that if something should happen to him tomorrow, he'd want his girlfriend to collect on his policy. What is your opinion? — ALLEN'S MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: I'm with you. Until Allen and Anna Marie are married (unless, God forbid, she's pregnant), Allen's beneficiary should be his mother.

DEAR ABBY: You had a letter in your column a while back from a woman who said that every time she got pregnant, her husband started drinking. My problem is just the opposite. Every time my husband starts drinking, I get pregnant.

I love kids, but we've got just about all we can handle right now..

Don't tell me to use birth control. I've tried several methods, and they don't work for me.

You keep saying that a wife shouldn't turn her husband away when he wants sex because that gives him and excuse to find another woman. So what do you recommend? — ENOUGH KIDS

DEAR ENOUGH: Planned Parenthood for you, alcoholics Anonymous for him and self-control for both of you!

DEAR ABBY: My husband has this friend who is always dropping in around suppertime. Of course we have to ask him to stay for supper, but that's not the half of it. He sits around until 1:00 or 2:00 in the morning.

We've had to change our plans because of his unexpected visits. Sometimes he even brings his girlfriend along.

We have hinted that he should please let us know when he's coming, but it hasn't done any good. What should we do? We don't want to hurt his feelings, as he's a very sensitive man. — NEEDS HELP

DEAR NEEDS: Sensitive? No way! Quit hinting. That's like using a BB gun when you need a cannon. Tell him what you've told me. And if you don't get him to respect your wishes, you deserve the inconvenience he's causing you.

DEAR ABBY: Is my husband crazy, or am I? He has worn glasses for years, and says when he takes his glasses off, he can't hear. Do you think he should have his head examined? — MOLLY IN GREELEY

DEAR MOLLY: Not necessarily. But it wouldn't hurt to have his EARS examined.

DEAR ABBY: I've seen a lot of letters in your column from people who have no children but they're very content. I have one child and I'm satisfied to keep it that way.

My problem is relatives and close friends who keep coming up with stupid remarks like, "You have to have another one so Johnny will have someone to play with."

My sister, who has never been married and has no kids, is always on my case about the selfishness of raising one child. Worse yet, she keeps prodding my son, "Tell your mom you want a little sister." Now my son asks me every day when his sister is coming.

Abby, I am at the end of my rope with these people. I've tried long speeches on why I want only one child, and I've even told them I'm doing my part to curb the population explosion, but nothing helps.

Can you give me a good answer the next time a person asks, "When are you going to have another one?" — ONE'S ENOUGH IN WORCESTER, MASS.

DEAR ONE'S ENOUGH: You don't have to answer a question simply because someone had the nerve to ask it. And you need not apologize for refusing to answer.

DEAR ABBY: I cried when I read about the poor 11-year-old kid who still wets the bed, so his parents made him wear a diaper and put him out in the front yard where all his friends could see him.

Instead of writing to you about it, that neighbor should have called the proper authorities and had those parents arrested for child abuse!

They may not know it now, but they have lost their son. He will never forgive them to his dying day. — SICK AT HEART AND MOTHER OF FOUR

Understanding various lumber yard terms

By AL CARRELL

Not too long ago, I talked about the terms used in lumber yards to determine the total amount of lumber in a quantity of various sized boards. The term was, and still is, "board feet." If you don't remember, a board foot is a piece of lumber that is a foot wide by a foot long by an inch thick. You may also remember that the foot long part was the only one of those measurements that was actually a true measurement. The other parts were only the nominal measurements. The piece would be referred to as a "1x12," but the "one" would actually be only ¾ of an inch, and the "twelve" would actually only be 11¼.

You may also remember that when a board is, say a 1x4, it would take a 3-feet-long piece to render one board foot. We also ended up by telling you that most sellers of lumber for the do-it-yourselfer sell by the linear foot, so you can order whatever sizes are needed and know what it is going to cost per foot.

The folks in the lumber business also have some other terms you should know about. The term "board" does not apply to everything that you see in the lumber yard or home center. "Boards" are pieces that are less than the nominal 2 inches thick, and more than 3 inches wide. Here are nominal and actual sizes for boards:

Nominal Actual
1x4 ¾ x 3½
1x6 ¾ x 5½
1x8 ¾ x 7¼
1x10 ¾ x 9¼
1x12 ¾ x 11¼

Boards are used for things like flooring, subflooring, shelving, sheathing, paneling, decking, fencing and similar uses.

Smaller pieces that are less than 2 inches thick and are 3 inches or less in width are called "furring" or "strips." The two common sizes are 1x2 and 1x3. Their actual sizes are ¾ x 1½ and ¾ x 2½. They are, of course, used for furring plus as battens, stakes, lattice and other light applications.

The term for lumber larger than boards is "dimension lumber." This category includes pieces that are nominally 2 inches thick and are 2 or more inches wide. The 2x3s, 2x4s and 2x6s are also called "studs." Those wider than 6 inches are called "planks." Dimension lumber is mostly used for structural framing. It can also be used for decks, forms, stairs and the like. The nominal and actual sizes of dimension lumber are as follows:

Nominal Actual
2x2 1½x1½
2x3 1½x2½
2x4 1½x3½
2x6 1½x5½
2x8 1½x7¼
2x10 1½x9¼
2x12 1½x11¼

Pieces that are square in cross-section, such as a 4x4 or a 6x6, are termed "posts." Their actual size is a half inch less than the nominal size. They are, of course, used as posts, but also are used for structural framing and other support chores as well as for decking support.

The last general term for regular lumber is "timbers." This applies to pieces that are 5 inches or larger in the smallest dimension. In other words, a 6x10 would be a timber. These big timbers would be used in heavy duty structural framing. The actual size would be a half inch less than the nominal.

After you have mastered the terminology, you'll want to learn more about the various species of wood. Different woods are better for different uses. There are "softwoods" and "hardwoods." This has nothing to do with the actual hardness of the woods. Softwoods are from coniferous (cone-bearing) trees, such as pine, cedar, fir, redwood and spruce. Hardwoods are from deciduous or leaf-bearing trees and include such trees as oak, maple, walnut, mahogany, birch and so forth.

Many lumber dealers will have charts telling the major uses for the more popular species of wood. You'd do well to get the wood suggested in such charts. There are also books available with color photos of the various species of wood so you can learn to tell what wood is which by just looking. Actual hands-on contact is the best way to learn though.

Make-at-home tofu puffs

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

As a collector of books on food and drink, I have carefully assembled those written by Trade Vic Bergeron. Years ago I first encountered his New York restaurant and later, his books. Ever since, like many other cooks, I have been aware of his interesting contributions to American cuisine. I've thoroughly enjoyed his interpretations of Oriental, Polynesian, Caribbean and Mexican food and have been influenced by them.

To say nothing about his amusing drinks — a wonderful combination of imagination and frippery. Recently, even though a strawberry daiquiri — a delightful cocktail not widely enough served — wasn't listed on the menu of his New York City restaurant, I ordered it anyway and got the best of its kind.

Nowadays Trader Vic's four children have taken over the bulk of the responsibilities for his international chain of restaurants, but the Trader is ever alert to new food combinations. A few months ago I was offered his version of Chicken and Tofu Puffs and tried the recipe in my test kitchen. The Puffs are easy to make and if you prepare them for your family and guests, I think you'll enjoy serving them as much as I did. I offered them with duck sauce and hot mustard, but you may want to use some less mundane condiments.

TRADER VIC'S CHICKEN AND TOFU PUFFS

8 ounces boneless skinless raw chicken breast
12 ounces fresh bean curd (tofu)
1 small onion (2 scant ounces)
2 medium scallions
2 large eggs
2 tablespoons medium sherry
1 cup (generous) fine dry regular bread-crumbs (made from decrusted dried sliced white bread)
¾ cup (about) Japanese bread crumbs (panko), see Note

In a food processor with the metal blade, process together the chicken, bean curd, onion and scallion until finely ground. Add 1 egg and the sherry and process until blended. Remove to a medium bowl; gradually stir in enough fine dry regular bread crumbs to make mixture just stiff enough to handle. Using 2 tablespoons for each, shape into balls. Beat the remaining egg until yolk and white are combined; dip each ball in the egg and then roll in the Japanese bread crumbs. Deep-fat fry at 350 degrees until cooked through and golden brown — 2 minutes. Drain on brown paper. Makes 30 large balls that are crisp on the outside and have a spongy interior.

Note: Japanese bread crumbs (panko) are made from wheat flour, yeast, glucose, paprika and annatto extract, come in packages in several sizes and are available in some specialty food shops where Oriental foods (especially Japanese) are sold.

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Tuesday, July 21, 1981

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: "Mork" and "Popeye" star Robin Williams shares this birthday with you. Also born on this day: famous American novelist Ernest Hemingway and the late great English film star C. Aubrey Smith. In the months ahead, you will find greater satisfaction and success than in the recent past.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Partnerships produce good results now. Watch your step if embarking on a new romance, however. Count on family members to help you balance the household budget.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You would be wise to control spending even more closely than usual. This does not mean you should be miserly, just cautious. Working behind the scenes produces some unusual benefits now.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You may want to have an open exchange of ideas with a select group of your associates later today. Play your cards close to your chest until you hear what others have in mind.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Co-workers may not be as cooperative today. Tackle projects you can handle by yourself. Someone who seeks the same goals as you may show resentment. Careful money management is essential now.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Be careful not to get in over your head today. A reckless move could cost you both cash and prestige. Be prepared to face the ultimate romantic question.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You may be more successful now in gaining attention for an original idea. The atmosphere at home appears to be returning to normal. Suprise loved one with a small token of your affection.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) Your financial prospects should be looking brighter now. Loosen your purse strings a little. Observe al safety rules.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov 21): Much can be accomplished today if teamwork is emphasized. You may be affected by changes among family members. Contact with people from foreign shores can boost your income.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Your personal affairs can cause some delays now. Make a list of priorities with mate or partner to eliminate conflict. Delegate more responsibilities to younger family members.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Creative endeavors will progress more smoothly if you seek cooperation from others. Give credit where it is due. Home decorating project could cost more than anticipated.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Turn a deaf ear to requests for loans. Check bookkeeping records, bank books for possible errors. Do not get carried away by someone's romantic overtures.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): The key word today is "caution." Comparison shopping will save you money. Someone who is inquisitive may ask too many personal questions. Keep your distance.

GOREN BRIDGE

Q.1—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AQ10943 ♡KJ92 ◇543
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	1 NT	Dble.	3 ♠
Pass	Pass	Dbls.	Pass

What action do you take?
A.—By now, you are probably regretting your decision to open the bidding on a hand that is relatively deficient in defensive prospects, for you are treading in dangerous waters. The worst has happened—partner has doubled the opponents in a partscore and it's unlikely you will defeat them. For this reason, we would introduce our heart suit and hope for the best. If partner doesn't have too much in clubs, you may escape unscathed.

Q.2—East-West vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠K87 ♡5 ◇KJ9542 ♣AQ7
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	Pass	1 ◇	Pass
1 NT	Pass	?

What do you bid now?
A.—You must take some strong action, but there is no clear-cut bid available. It is quite likely that partner has only four clubs, so a jump to three clubs with only three-card support is unappetizing. While a jump to three diamonds on such a porous suit should be avoided if possible, there is no better bid available. If partner bids three no trump, pass; if he shows heart strength, convert to three no trump. And should partner show spade strength, bid four clubs.

Q.3—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠K106 ♡KQJ5 ◇J7643 ♣7
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
Pass	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
1 ◇	Pass	1 NT	Pass

What action do you take?
A.—Now that partner has shown a minimum, the hand has no future—especially since his auction has denied four hearts. Pass—it is unlikely that you have a better spot than one no trump.

Q.4—East-West vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠J65 ♡5 ◇KQ105 ♣K8742
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
4 ♠	Pass	Pass	4 NT
Pass	5 ◇	?

What action do you take?
A.—What has happened to the heart suit? At the moment, the opponents are hardly likely to be in their best spot. Pass quickly. If you double, someone might just try to improve the contract.

Q.5—As South, vulnerable you hold:
♠A65 ♡J76 ◇AKQJ72 ♣A
The bidding has proceeded:

East	South	West	North
1 ♡	Dble.	Pass	1 ♠
Pass	?

What action do you take?
A.—You have an extremely powerful hand, and you must convey that to partner. The simplest way is to follow your takeout double with a jump shift to three diamonds. That is not forcing—if you wanted to force partner you would have to cue-bid the enemy suit. But it does show a tremendous hand—about an ace better than a double followed by a new suit—so partner will bid again on the slightest excuse.

Q.6—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AK10 ♡AQ965 ◇763 ♣Q8
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♡	Pass	2 ♠	Pass

What do you bid now?
A.—You have the values and the shape to rebid two no trump, but you should avoid making that bid with one suit unstopped. If the hand belongs in no trump, partner should probably be the declarer. All you can do for the moment is rebid two hearts and wait to see what action your partner takes.

First lady chooses gift, attends Broadway show

NEW YORK (AP) — A cut-glass bowl will be America's official wedding gift to Prince Charles and Lady Diana.

A spokeswoman for the Steuben glass company, who was not identified, told New York magazine a bowl that was supposed to cost $75,000 was sold to first lady Nancy Reagan for a mere $8,000 as the gift for the couple, who are to wed July 29.

"We offer handsome discounts to the government," the spokeswoman said.

The bowl will be engraved with a king, nobles and crusaders before being offered to the couple, the magazine said.

Mrs. Reagan, meanwhile, was in New York Sunday to attend the Broadway show of Duke Ellington's "Sophisticated Ladies" with her son Ron and daughter-in-law Doria.

About half a dozen Secret Service men and city policemen were on hand, but they did not attempt to hold back the 100 people who gathered around.

One spectator said, "Hi, Nancy." The first lady waved to the crowd and walked into the theater without a word.

Mandel

ANNAPOLIS, Md. (AP) — Marvin Mandel was back in his old booth at Chic & Ruth's Delly in Annapolis after spending more than a year at a federal prison in Florida.

The former governor returned to Maryland Saturday on a five-day furlough from the prison at Eglin Air Force Base near Pensacola, Fla., where he is serving a three-year term for mail fraud and racketeering.

A prison official said the furlough — Mandel's first since he began his sentence in May of last year — was routine.

Mandel, his wife Jeanne and stepson Paul paid a breakfast visit Sunday to Chic & Ruth's, where a booth Mandel used to frequent is known as the "Governor's Office."

"It was like he was never gone," said Ted Levitt, who helps run the delicatessen.

Michael Aun, a spokesman for the Bureau of Prisons, said Mandel must return to the lockup by Wednesday night.

●

Cunningham

Agee

DETROIT (AP) — Mary Cunningham, whose meteoric climb into Bendix Corp.'s executive suite caused a highly publicized scandal, may marry her old boss, a Detroit newspaper reported.

The Detroit Free Press quoted "someone who has always been right about them before" as saying Ms. Cunningham plans to wed Chairman William Agee.

Ms. Cunningham, who could not be reached for comment after the Saturday report, resigned from Bendix last year after news reports linked her appointment as vice president to her relationship with Agee. She now is vice president for Seagram's Inc. in New York.

At the time, she denied her relationship with Agee was anything more than just a friendship and said it had nothing to do with her rapid climb in the company.

Agee had no comment, Bendix spokesman David Taylor said.

Township to honor Annie Oakley

Marker to be dedicated at birthplace

GREENVILLE, Ohio (AP) — On Nov. 3, 1926, a 66-year-old wisp of a woman left crippled by train and auto accidents died in her sleep near her Darke County birthplace.

It was Annie Oakley's last bow to a world she had captivated with her sharpshooting feats and charmed with her grace. The feminists' answer to the rifle-toting frontiersman, she was 98 pounds of pluck on a 5-foot frame.

On Tuesday in Patterson Township, a marker will be dedicated at the location of her birth.

Lester J. Shultz, chairman of the Annie Oakley Birthplace Committee, said that until last year, when documentation proved the location of her birth, there had been much dispute over the spot.

Every year, Oakley enthusiasts gather at her graveside in Brock Cemetery. This will be the first time for an observance at her birthplace marker.

Despite her gun-handling, Annie Oakley "was surprisingly feminine," said Walter Havighurst, Oakley biographer and professor emeritus of English at Miami University. "She was by tradition a Quaker. She was very soft-spoken and a rather modest woman who became a world celebrity."

Her skill entranced the great Indian Chief Sitting Bull. He called her his adopted daughter, Little Miss Sureshot.

"She had a natural gift of timing and a fabulous coordination of eyesight and skill with her hands," Havighurst said. "Some of her most remarkable shots were made with a shotgun."

Annie was born Phoebe Anne Moses in a log cabin on Aug. 13, 1860. Her father died when she was 5, leaving seven orphans, the oldest only 15.

At 8, she taught herself to shoot with her father's old 40-inch cap-and-ball Kentucky rifle. Her targets became family meals — rabbit, squirrel, quail and other game.

She also sold the game to Cincinnati hotels and restaurants, boring the animals neatly through the heads and leaving no shot in the meat.

As a teen-ager at the German resort of Shooter's Hill, she challenged and defeated Frank Butler, billed as the world's greatest marksman. And she captured his heart along with his title. They married.

Butler realized that a pretty girl who could tattoo six tossed balls before they hit the ground was a bigger attraction than he. So he gave up his career and assisted her when she performed on tour, eventually becoming one of the major attractions of Buffalo Bill's Wild West Show.

Tragedy struck Annie in 1901, when her show train collided with another train. She injured her spine when she was thrown from her bed, and the nerve shock totally whitened her hair in 17 hours.

Then in 1922, she broke her hip and ankle in a car accident in Daytona Beach, Fla.

After that accident, Annie believed she had only a short time to live. Thinking no one would want her shooting medals, she had them melted down and sold the gold for a little more than $100, which she gave to a children's hospital.

In 1926, an exhausted Annie Oakley took a train from her New Jersey residence back to Darke County, where she died within the year. Butler, who was ill at his sister's home in Ferndale, Mich., died 18 days later. Both are buried here in Brock Cemetery.

Clergymen may have lost money

DALLAS (AP) — Ministers and church employees who paid into a retirement trust fund that has become "hopelessly insolvent" could be stuck with more than $300,000 in unpaid medical claims, state officials say.

State Board of Insurance officials told The Dallas Morning News that the board is investigating claims that as many as 400 to 500 clergymen nationwide lost money through the Ministers Benefit Trust program established in 1978 by "born-again" businessman Robert Browning.

Browning has participated in million-dollar, church-related real estate deals since 1961. The financial base of his Browning Corporation International was built primarily around insurance for missionaries serving overseas.

The Hurst businessman administered the trust that was designed to provide comprehensive health insurance for clergymen ranging from country ministers to evangelist Jerry Falwell, their families and church employees.

But the trust ran into financial difficulty and officials said so far more than 250 ministers have presented the insurance commission with unpaid medical claims totaling about $350,000. The officials also predicted 150 to 200 more clergymen will complain before the claims deadline at the end of the year.

Problems first surfaced when the U.S. Labor Department ruled in July of 1980 that it was not legal under the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974.

A few months later, the State Insurance Board told an Austin district court judge that the trust had become financially insolvent and a "hazard to the public."

The judge suspended the trust from doing business in Texas and ordered it into receivership last fall.

The Rev. A. Alvis Edmonson, an Arlington Baptist minister who chaired the trust's benefits committee, said the problems stem from a $25,000 liability assumed from a previous private trust.

Edmonson said unexpected delinquent claims pushed the assumed debt to more than $250,000 within six months.

"Instead of bankrupting the old group, the new trust went along and paid those claims," said Edmonson.

"In my judgment, one of the reasons it eventually went under was because individual churches failed to pay their premiums," Edmonson added.

Browning estimated the non-payment rate among the trust's 1,200 ministers and churches averaged 15 percent.

He said the trust nearly died in 1978 when about 500 Methodist ministers withdrew. But Falwell and about 500 employees enrolled in the trust in July 1979 under an agreement that stipulated the employees would not suffer because of the assumed debt.

Browning said althought the Lynchburg, Va., minister's group paid only a fraction of its premiums in the first four months it was enrolled, its claims were paid ahead of others because of the stipulation.

"What was happening was we were paying claims for Falwell's employees but we were not collecting premiums," said Browning.

DeWitt Braud, chief executive officer and chairman of the board of Falwell's "Old Time Gospel Hour," said if there was any delay in premium payments, it was because his accounting department "didn't have the information" it needed.

But Browning said because of his experience, he has recently stopped contributing to the Falwell mission.

"I don't think God's getting his money's worth," Browning said.

Schools take state to court

By NANCY BENAC
Associated Press Writer

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — Two tiny church schools have quietly taken the state of Michigan to court in a legal battle that could help decide how much control states wield over parochial schools.

The lawsuit was filed eight months ago after the Michigan Department of Education threatened to close schools operated by the Sheridan Road Baptist Church of Saginaw and the First Baptist Church of nearby Bridgeport for refusing to file government forms on enrollment, curriculum and cleanliness.

About 100 of Michigan's 1,008 parochial schools refused last year to provide the data required by the state, up from the 37 that refused to cooperate just three years before. But the state singled out only the two schools for administrative action.

The rebel schools claimed state regulation of non-public education violates constitutional guarantees of religious freedom and a separated church and state.

"The educational ministry of the church is just that. It's a church ministry," said Michael Thomas, lawyer for the church schools. "We're extending our educational ministry into a daily program. The state is trying to control a religious function."

But Ralph Turnbull, the Department of Education's private school licensure consultant, said a 1921 law mandates the state to supervise schooling of all Michigan youth. It must have enrollment data and information about teachers, courses and sanitary conditions in the church schools to do that, he said.

"I don't think we're asking anything unreasonable," Turnbull said.

The state began procedures required to close down the two schools in December, but the schools won a court injunction to remain open until the issue is decided in the courts.

"They (the schools) think they answer to God and nobody else," said Richard Gartner, an assistant attorney general who will argue the state's side in Ingham County Circuit Court in November.

"They say the state has no control over their Sunday school, so why should it have control over their Monday through Friday school," Gartner said. "The state needs to know how many students are out there. They need to know the needs of Michigan education."

Bogus tickets scalped

HOUSTON (AP) — Several hundred rock fans trying to attend the Fourth Annual Texxas Jam during the weekend paid scalpers $20 to $50 for tickets that got them to the front door and no farther, the show's promoters said Sunday.

One concert worker, who said he was afraid he would lose his job if he was identified, said "500 or more" bogus tickets were scalped. The Saturday night affair drew more than 60,000 people to the Astrodome to hear groups including REO Speedwagon, Foghat and Blue Oyster Cult.

Louis Messina, president of Pace Concerts, said the scam was "no big deal" and that fewer than 200 fake tickets were spotted.

A dragline operator at Texas Utilities Generating Company's Big Brown strip mine in Fairfield, scoops up a giant shovel of overburden, exposing a seam of Texas lignite coal. The gargantuan shovel can scoop up up to 95 cubic yards of dirt at a time.

Oil companies prepare for Gulf Coast coal boom

FAIRFIELD, Texas (AP) — In a region better known for oil wells than strip mines, some of the nation's biggest oil and energy companies are quietly acquiring leases on millions of acres of farm and ranchlands.

The heavy investment in six Gulf Coast states comes as companies such as Phillips Coal Co., a subsidiary of Phillips Petroleum, Exxon and 10 other energy concerns anticipate a coal boom that could forever change power use patterns in this oil-rich region.

Lignite — soft brown coal somewhat denser and richer in carbon than the peat burned in some countries — underlies a vast section of the region.

With the long-term availability of natural gas in question and prices for domestic and imported gas rising, the area's estimated 35 billion tons of lignite figure prominently in several proposals for developing synthetic fuels, state and industry officials say.

In eastern Texas, where salt water is seeping into the famous oil fields, some of the state's 23.4 million tons of lignite are already being dug from three strip mines operated by a consortium of Texas electric utilities. Eight generating plants located right at the mouths of the consortium's mines last year produced enough electricity to meet the needs of a city of 2 million.

Phillips Coal, founded in Dallas six years ago, now holds leases on more than a million acres, while a dozen other major oil and coal companies own lignite rights on an additional 3.4 million acres in Texas, Louisiana, Arkansas, Tennessee, Mississippi and Alabama.

A recent study by the the Texas Bureau of economic Geology estimates the region's lignite reserves have the energy content of more than double its proven oil and natural gas reserves combined.

As a result, lignite mining along the burgeoning Gulf Coast is projected to soar from 30 million tons last year to as much as 138 million tons by 1990. Barely a decade ago, only 2 million tons a year were being mined in the six-state region, the bureau said.

James Van Reenan, vice president for marketing of Phillips Coal, said lignite is fast becoming the fuel of choice for the region's utility companies and heavy industries.

As a fuel, Gulf Coast lignite is only slightly less efficient than Western coal and transportation costs are almost non-existent because the plants are near the mines, Van Reenan said. And it's easier to reclaim strip-mined land along the flat, verdant Gulf Coast than in the arid coal fields of Wyoming and North Dakota, he added.

The soft, chunky lignite resembles topsoil in appearance and texture and owes its existence to the same geological process that produced the Texas oilfields. The process began 70 million years ago when silt covered a thick layer of plant matter along the Gulf Coast.

The fossilized remains of the vegetation are lignite, which lies 15 to 200 feet below the surface in a giant black blanket spread from the Texas-Mexico border to Alabama and Kentucky. Older deposits of organic materials became pockets of oil and natural gas.

Exxon is designing a proposed $4 billion synthetic fuels plant to process Texas lignite into a synthetic crude petroleum which, in turn, could be used to produce synthetic gas.

If the company goes ahead with the plant, lignite mining would begin near Troup, Texas, in 1986. About 600 million tons of lignite would be mined during the life of the plant.

Phillips, which also is thinking about building a synfuels plant along the Gulf Coast, has already signed contracts to supply several mine-mouth power plants in Louisiana with lignite.

Beginning in 1984, Phillips will charge Cajun Electric Power Cooperative $18 a ton for lignite delivered to Cajun's proposed power plants 40 miles south of Shreveport. In comparison, lignite delivered to Houston from North Dakota costs about $33 a ton, which includes rail costs of more than $20 a ton, Van Reenan said.

Although the Gulf Coast deposit is the second largest in the United States — North Dakota's is the largest at 550 billion tons — only one of the region's six states, Texas, is now burning lignite to light homes and factories.

Texas Utilities Generating Co. operates eight electrical generating units at three lignite mines. Together, the plants produce 5,300 megawatts of power — enough to serve a community larger than Houston or Dallas. Six other utilities say they plan to operate lignite-fired plants in Texas by 1989.

Lignite development isn't new to Texas, says state geologist William Kaiser. In 1929, 60 percent of all electricity produced in Texas came from coal-fired plants. But as oil and natural gas deposits were discovered, lignite fell into disfavor because of mining costs and lower energy efficiency.

In 1980, the three utilities that make up Texas Utilities Generating Co. satisfied one-sixth of Texas' total energy demands by burning lignite.

IMF is pessimistic about world economy

WASHINGTON (AP) — Inflation, unemployment and slow economic growth, coupled with high energy costs, are continuing to squeeze industrial and developing nations, according to the International Monetary Fund.

"Inflation must still be characterized as a severe worldwide problem," according to a report issued Sunday by the IMF, which makes loans to its 141 member nations.

Slow — or possibly no — economic growth also is expected to be a "key feature" of world's economies in the next few years, said the report, which added that there are encouraging signs.

"The restraining influence of financial policies, together with the passing of the upsurge in oil prices, has led to some slowing of inflation in the industrial world," it said.

It reported that economies adjusted better to 1978-80 oil price increases than they did in 1973-74; major industrial nations have been tightened control over money supplies; and wage increases have been more restrained.

It also noted that oil consumption has declined in industrial nations because they are finding alternative sources of energy.

"Although these positive factors are significant from the standpoint of contributing to a balanced assessment, the current picture of the world economy does not afford cause for complacency," the IMF warned.

It also cautioned against trade restrictions and expessed concern about the large amount of money developing countries borrow from foreign sources.

The report noted that a combination of restrictive monetary policies and high inflation has led to big jumps in interest rates.

"A striking element of the general picture has been the rapid rise (and sharp fluctuation) of interest rates in the United States," said the report.

Five wildcats staked by area operators in District 8, 8-A Five wildcats have been staked in District 8 and 8-A. Also a discovery filed in Runnels.

LOVING WILDCAT

Hillin Production Co., Odessa, has redesignated its Johnson "76" A-1, the No. 1 Johnson "76" A. The well will be a stepout from the Wheat Cherry Canyon Field. The drillsite is 4.35 miles east of Mentone. Total depth is projected to 7,000 feet.

Location is staked about 1/2-mile northwest of the dual-completed Delaware discovery well, Hillin No. 1 Johnson, which has a total depth of 6,447 feet, and is about 1 1/4 mile southof the Wheat Cherry Canyon discovery well.

Drillsite is 467 feet from the north, and 1,980 feet from the west line of section 76, block 1 of the W&NW Ry survey.

TERRY WILDCAT

Ladd Petroleum Corp. Denver, plans the No. 1 Jordan as a 13,175 wildcat, 17 miles west of Brownfield.

The drillsite is about 2 1/8 miles southeast of the 12,564 foot dry hole, Humble No. 1 Beasley, abandoned December 21, 1960.

Location is 2,154 feet from the north, and 2,173 feet from the east line of section 83, block D-11, C&MRR survey.

DAWSON PROSPECTOR

Hilliard Oil & Gas Inc. Midland, will wildcat a site 2 miles northwest of Patricia. Planned total depth of the No. 1 F.J. Vogel is 12,200 feet.

The drillsite is about 1/3 mile northeast of the 12,140-foot dry hole, Texas Crude No. 1 Carson Echols, which was abandoned April 7, 1961.

The stake was driven 9,911 feet from the south, and 2,117 feet from the east lines of league 268 (in labor 10) of the Moore CSL survey.

ECTOR REENTRY

United Petrosearch, Inc., Fort Worth, will reenter the No. 1 Mobil-Millard Eidson, 4 miles north of Penwell, and test the Bob (Penn.) and Grayburg/San Andres. Planned total depth is 8,500 feet. The well was an 8,453-foot dry hole, abandoned March 25, 1969.

Because of the Grayburg test, the well has wildcat status. The company refers to the Grayburg as, "a possible salvage zone." The Grayburg lays at 4,150 feet.

Drillsite is 1,707 feet from the north, and 933 feet from the west line of section 26, block 45, Township 2-south of the TPRR survey.

GAINES EXPLORER

Tomlinson Oil Co., Inc., Midland, will sink a 10,000-foot wildcat, No. 1 Moore et. al., 12 miles southwest of Seminole.

The drillsite is about 1/2 mile southeast of the 9,942-foot dry hole (Devonian at 9,922), Texas American No. 1 Carswell, which was abandoned December 7, 1950.

Location is 2,173 feet from the south, and 1,200 feet from the east line of section 23, block A-25, PSL survey.

RUNNELS DISCOVERY

Pyramid Producing Co., Coleman, completed its No. 1 J.B. McCord, a Dog Bend discovery in Runnels County, three miles south of Crews.

Finaled to pump 10 barrels of 40 gravity oil per day plus one barrels, production was gained from perforations at 3,360-3,375 which had been washed with 250 gallons of mud acid and acidized with 2,000 gallons.

It was drilled to 4,600 feet, with 4 1/2 inch casing set at 3,907 feet and plugged back to 3,750 feet.

Location is 2,400 feet from the north and 467 feet from the west lines of the A.S. Clayton No. 126 survey.

TOM GREEN PROSPECT

IMC Exploration Co.. Shreveport, La. will drill the No. 1 Robbins, a 6,300-foot wildcat in Tom Green County, five miles northwest of Christoval.

Location is 2,000 feet from the south line and 5,000 feet from the west line of the M.Robbins No,94.

FISHER WILDCAT

Terrell Operating Co., Hamlin, will drill the No. 1 Ardell C. Floyd, a 6,500-foot wildcat, seven miles south of Sylvester in Fisher County.

Location is 1,003.83 feet from the south and 467 feet from the east lines of section 6, block K of the T&P survey.

NOLAN TEST

Gage & Co., Fort Worth, will drill the No. 1 Arledge "A", a 7,500-foot wildcat in Nolan County, eight miles southwest of Maryneal.

Location is 2,187 feet from the west south line and 467 feet from the west line of section 13, block 1-A of the H&TC survey.

The site is 3/4 mile north of the C.L. Norsworthy No. 1 Leeper, abandoned March 19, 1959 at 7,410 feet.

Occidental, Tenneco plan to join 1982 World's Fair

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Tenneco Inc. and Occidental Petroleum Corp. will share an exhibit at the 1982 World's Fair to display their development of shale oil reserves in northwestern Colorado, officials said today.

The international energy exposition is to open its doors to tourists May 1 until October 1982 in a 70-acre valley between downtown Knoxville and the University of Tennessee campus.

"It is our perception that few people know about oil shale and the technology for extracting oil from it," Occidental chairman Armand Hammer said in a statement released today in Knoxville. "It is our purpose in participating in this exhibit to better inform the public and government about this domestic resource and our nation's need to utilize it."

Subsidiaries of each corporation are involved in a joint development of oil shale from which they hope to produce 94,000 barrels of oil daily by the 1990s. Corporate officials estimate they can extract 1.1 billion barrels of oil from the site of their joint effort, 5,094 acres 70 miles north of Grand Junction, Colo.

With commissioning flags flying, the fast attack nuclear submarine USS Dallas lies at its berth at the U.S. Navy Submarine Base, Groton, Conn., Saturday. The Dallas, the 13th Los Angeles Class sub to join the fleet, was commissioned Saturday with Texas Gov. Bill Clements as the main speaker.

USS Dallas dedicated by Texas Gov. Clements

GROTON, Conn. (AP) — At commissioning ceremonies for the nuclear-powered submarine USS Dallas, Texas Gov. William Clements, a Republican and former deputy defense secretary, called national security "the most important issue before us in America."

But Clements also drew a laugh when he told the crowd that he is pleased to see the "U.S.-Texas Navy" growing.

The Navy has named two other submarines after cities in the state, the Houston and the Corpus Christi.

"I only hope the Navy will have good judgment and add the San Antonio, El Paso and Fort Worth," he said during Saturday's ceremony.

Clements stressed that he is confident the Reagan administration will maintain a strong military as its top priority.

The Dallas and the Navy's other Angeles-class fast-attack submarines are primarily anti-submarine weapons. They have four torpedo tubes capable of launching submarine rockets and Mark 48 torpedoes against surface ships and other submarines.

The Dallas is the third fast-attack submarine to be turned over to the Navy in nine weeks by Electric Boat Division of General Dynamics Corp.

Electric Boat General Manager P. Takis Veliotis called that record an unprecedented accomplishment and had a warning for the Navy.

"Contracts must be awarded in a timely manner," Veliotis said, referring to the government's recent withholding of work from EB.

The Navy and the shipyard have had a long-running dispute over cost overruns and delays in the construction of nuclear-powered submarines. In March, Navy Secretary John Lehman awarded contracts for three 688-class submarines like the Dallas to EB's only competitor. EB has subsequently laid off 1,000 workers.

"We are committed and determined to providing six fast-attack submarines by the end of the year," Veliotis told the 500 people attending the ceremony in the bright sunshine at the Navy's submarine base in Groton.

The EB official added that the nation's first ballistic missile-firing Trident submarine, the USS Ohio, has returned from its second sea trials that he called "totally successful." Veliotis said EB would turn the Ohio over to the Navy this fall.

But if EB is to maintain the production schedule it wants to, "it is imperative that its work force be fully utilized" through the regular awarding of Navy contracts.

The Dallas, which is the 13th of its class to join the fleet, was nearly five years in the making at the Electric Boat shipyard.

The keel of the 360-foot long Dallas was laid Oct. 9, 1976 with its launching nearly three years later, April 28, 1969.

Fate of 22-year-old Tommy the bear rests with Illinois Court of Appeals

MOUNT VERNON, Ill. (AP) — The fate of a 22-year-old brown bear which bit a boy rests with a state appeliate court, which has been asked to order it killed so it can be tested for rabies.

A hearing was scheduled before the Illinois Court of Appeals today on a request from the parents of 11-year-old Scott Burrelsman that the mascot of Camp Ondessonk near Ozark be killed.

A St. Clair County Circuit judge had ordered the bear destroyed Thursday, but the order was blocked the next day when Johnson County Circuit Judge Donald Lowrey issued a restraining order. Some 500 children gathered around the bear's cage late last week to protest the possibility that he would be killed.

Belleville lawyer Thomas Keefe Jr. said the Burrelsman's family doctor had recommended the bear be killed so its brain tissue can be tested for rabies. The doctor said the only alternative was a series of rabies' shots for the boy, who was bitten July 7.

Scott already has received the first in a series of rabies' shots and was due for another today pending the outcome of the hearing.

But Johnson County rabies control officer Dr. Harold James said the animal, dubbed Tommy by the camp children, would be dead if it was rabid. He obtained the order that prevented the bear's death.

James and other physieians said research has shown bears are poor hosts to rabies and argued that Tommy should be spared.

Dr. Gary McKibben said he is so certain the bear does not have rabies that "if it were my child, I would not allow him to take the rabies' shots. The critical time has passed, and there's no reason for the boy to take the shots or for the bear to be destroyed."

Keefe criticized the camp for Uhe handling of the incident and said telephone callers who favor the bear over the boy are causing problems for the parents.

Officials at the camp, which is run by the Belleville Catholic Diocese, said they tried to reach the Burrelsman family immediately after the boy was bitten. They said a staff member had warned children at the camp to stay away from the bear, which was being fed at the time the Burrelsman youth was bitten.

The Rev. Robert Vonnahmen, director of the camp, said it a statement that the camp regrd "the injury to this boy, but it did not seem unwarranted, as the boy reached through an open gate after being told explicitly not to do so by the staff member leaving the cage.

"Although we regret deeply the anguish of those who feel the child was endangered, we disagree with them. We regret also this action of killing this magnificent animal. However, since we would never place the welfare of an animal above that of a human being, we submit to the action of the court."

Vonnahmen said the bear has been a mascot since he was given to the camp 17 years ago by a man who won him in a poker game in Belleville.

Minnesota workers picketing capitol

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) — Workers began picketing the capitol, state hospitals, office buildings and parks today after 11th-hour negotiations failed to avert Minnesota's first border-to-border strike by state employees.

Gov. Al Quie issued a statement assuring the public that essential services will continue with minimal disruptions using managers and supervisors. The state hired a uniformed crew of private guards to patrol the capitol grounds.

"I regret that a strike has occurred," Quie said early today. "The state has made a fair and reasonable offer....However, this is a legal strike, and striking employees are within their rights."

Quie canceled a trip to the Republican Governors Conference in St. Charles, Ill.

The 15,000-member Council 6 of the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Workers called the strike after voting to reject an 8 percent pay increase offer.

State mediator Kenneth Boxell had shuttled between the sides for about two hours Sunday but announced at 4 p.m.: "This session is over."

Boxell said he would in frequent contact with the two sides.

The strike was allowed under a 1980 law designed to make public labor laws similar to those in the private sector.

AFSCME represents about 60 percent of the state workforce, including blue-collar workers, clerical employees and state hospital workers except registered nurses.

The approximately 12,000 state workers represented by other unions are forbidden by law from honoring the AFSCME picket lines and must work, and some state employees — such as supervisors and prison guards — are prohibited from striking.

The walkout is the largest public employees strike in Minnesota — previous strikes have been regional — and would be the third recent strike by state workers, following those in New Hampshire and Massachusetts. And 110 Terre Haute, Ind. police ended their 5-day strike Saturday night, winning $400-a-year pay raises in the first year of a two-year contract. The contract will increase base pay from the current $11,131 to $12,600 by the end of the second year

Terre Hute firefighters, who had threatened a job action, accepted a similar two-year contract, a fire official said Sunday.

James Geissner, negotiatior for the state of Minnesota, said, "We think our offer is fair and reasonable — it's super-reasonable," Geissner said. It would have cost the state $85 million, about $50 million less than the union was asking, he said.

Bob Currie, executive director of Council 6, said the state had offered to reshuffle its money proposal but would not put any more money on the bargaining table.

Senate to take up property tax bill

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Since the 1979 Property Tax Code took effect, small cities have ganged up on big ones and taxpayers have complained about extravagances by some appraisal district offices.

The Senate takes up a bill today designed to correct some of the problems.

Features of the bill also include a requirement that property appraisal notices say don't blame the Legislature if your taxes go up.

Sen. Grant Jones, D-Abilene, is asking senators to pass a bill that is different from what his Senate Finance Committee approved last week.

Jones's substitute tries to eliminate everything that could cause problems with the House, including an attempt to change the method for calculating property taxes on farm and ranch land.

"The floor substitute is about as non-controversial as a bill can be," Jones said in an interview.

The senator, a co-author of the Property Tax Code or "Peveto Bill," said he would introduce a bill today containing all the controversial provisions that resulted in a deadlocked conference committee during the regular session.

A major issue was the Senate's insistence on allowing agricultural use valuations to be based on what a farm or ranch will bring in rent. Appraisers generally are limited now to yield estimates prepared by Texas A&M. In some cases, the estimates result in zero valuation of land for taxation.

The bill before the Senate:

— Modifies the three-fourths rule. Normally, an appraisal district board of directors has five members, elected by officers of the taxing units served by the district.

Votes are weighted according to the volume of property taxes levied by the government units. But three-fourths of the taxing jurisdictions can get together and change the size of the board and the method of selecting the directors.

Cubs weave 9th inning magic for 4-3 victory

Fancy fielding saves 3rd win

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Sports Writer

The Arkansas Travelers threw up two ninth inning red flags in the faces of the Midland Cubs Sunday at Cubs Stadium, but got gored both times by Midland's unforgiving Texas League Bruins.

The Cubs won the game 4-3, for a 3-1 edge in the five game series, but it took some fancy dan doing in the ninth inning to turn the trick.

The Cubs had led the game by a 4-3 margin since the sixth inning, but as has been the case of this entire series, it was the ninth where the Cubs won this one — on the field instead of at the plate.

ARKANSAS' RAFAEL Santana greeted winning pitcher Craig Lefferts with a booming triple to right center to open the ninth, but with the infield in, Luis Roman hit a two hopper to second baseman Javier Fierro, who nailed Santana at the plate. One red flag was down.

"I think they were running on any ground ball, but it turned out to be a mistake when the ball was hit to Fierro," Lefferts said.

"The play at the plate would have been closer if he (Santana) hadn't hesitated before breaking for home. I saw him stop out of the corner of my eye and almost went to first base, but when he came on to the plate, I knew we had him," Fierro said.

Lefferts, who won his second straight decision to even his record at 9-9, was then lifted in favor of Jon Perlman, who pitched 4⅓ innings two nights before in a starting role. Perlman got Peachy Gutierrez on a pop to first for the second out.

Then with two outs and Roman at first, the Travs threw up their second red flag in the form of Jorge Aranzamendi, who came to the plate with seven consecutive hits over the last four games. He was 4-for-4 against Lefferts, but Perlman got him on a harmless pop to third.

"I didn't realize he had that kind of streak going and maybe it's better off that I didn't," Perlman stated. "I know I worked two nights ago, but we don't play again until Friday and I was glad to get the work. I'm not a relief pitcher and I'm in the rotation."

LEFFERTS APPEARED strong throughout the contest, but gave credit to his teammates for the victory. "I didn't feel very good out there tonight, but I had some luck and some great plays behind me. This team is playing very well together right now and I think that is the biggest thing."

Since Lefferts gave up only two earned runs in his near distance going performance, the Cubs hope he is not feeling well the rest of the season.

The Cubs actually won it in the sixth inning with a two-run burst. Of course, it was J.W. Mitchell who got what proved to be the game winning hit. It's getting to be a habit for Mitchell. His ninth inning double won it for the Cubs Saturday and on Friday he hit a solo homer in the ninth to bring the Cubs to within one run in a 12-11 loss.

"It's about time I started getting the key hits," Mitchell said. "The last two nights the count has been 3-2 and the pitchers have had to come over the plate with a strike."

Mitchell's hit plated Fritz Connally and the other run came when Jack Upton scored from third on a double play ball by Carmello Martinez, who had a 10-game hitting streak ended.

Arkansas starter Jim Gott (3-6) controlled the Cubs through four innings with a 1-0 lead. Gott was pulled after singles by Upton and Connally to open the sixth. Jeff Keener came in and got the double play before giving up Mitchell's key single.

The Travs took the 1-0 lead in the first when Gutierrez doubled to center and then scored on a single by Aranzamendi and an error by Martinez in left.

The Travs upped the lead to 3-0 in the fifth when Dennis Delany hit his first homer of the year to left and Roman later scored on another single by Aranzamendi.

Fierro, who was flawless at second for the Cubs with two great defensive plays, knocked in two runs with a key single in the fifth to narrow the margin to 3-2. Mitchell gave the Cubs the lead in the sixth and the rest was history.

Cub Paws: The Sunday crowd of 647 put the Cubs over the 80,000 mark in paid attendance, the earliest date in histroy for that mark to be passed. The Cubs drew a record 95,820 last season, but appear to have an easy shot at passing the 100,000 mark for the first time this year...Buddy Bradford, Chicago's minor league batting instructor, and Jim Napier, the roving pitching coach, were on hand for Sunday's game...The Cubs have won seven of nine games on the current homestand which ends tonight at 7:30 in another game with the Travelers...Tonight's game will be the last chance to see the Cubs until Aug. 4 when they return home in a key series against San Antonio...The Texas League All-Star game will be held in Tulsa Wednesday and all teams will be idle until Friday with the star break. Cubs GM Bill Schamel will be in Tulsa Wednesday and he will make a bid to hold the 1982 Texas League All-Star game in Midland...

Will Uncle Sam speed up end to strike

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

The baseball strike probably will end within a matter of hours, now that Uncle Sam has thrown his big club into the fray, but there will be little reason for rejoicing.

It's been an ugly mess.

The scars and animosities that have grown from it will fester for years. Edward Bennett Williams, the distinguished Washington, D.C. attorney who now owns the Baltimore franchise, is right in comparing its negative impact to the Black Sox scandal.

TAKE A look at the wreckage strewn in the wake of the mid-summer shutdown:

—The fans, recognized by both players and owners as the lifeblood of their enterprise, have been turned off completely, some perhaps beyond redemption. Their angry howl: "a plague on both your houses."

The commissioner has been bared as a tissue paper regent — a clerkish functionary without power to deal with severe crises, such as the current strike. The players got out from under his umbrella years ago. Bowie Kuhn's clout was further demeaned when owners stood up in court and said, "The commissioner doesn't speak for us."

—Reputations have been sullied. Marvin Miller, director of the Players Association, and Ray Grebey, chief negotiator for the owners, have been pictured as tough bargainers with massive egos, more intent on scoring a personal victory than getting the game back on track. Grebey, because of a tough stance dictated by his employers, has been publicly villified as a "liar" and a "snake."

—OWNERS, PUBLICLY professing solidarity have been at each other's throats behind the scenes, a mad mixture of militants, moderates and liberals. It is hard to visualize that they could ever get together well enough to mind a store.

—Newspaper critics themselves have formed feuding rival camps, the hard hats insisting that the affluent players should fold "for the good of the game" while the other side attacks the owners as greedy men anxious to return players to the slavish conditions of the reserve clause.

Through all of this maize, the average fan is left confused, embittered and bored.

The words that are flung out every day — "quality player," "credited time," "binding arbitration" — mean little to the man who just wants to take his kids out to the ballpark, buy a few bags of popcorn and yell, "Kill the umpire!"

THE STRIKE is now going into its 40th day. We count the days and the games as we once reported another national crisis — the Iranian hostage situation.

But these games can never be restored. Neither can baseball's lost credibility.

The issues should never have been allowed to reach this state.

Yet the season was allowed to start. Pete Rose was permitted to get within a single hit of breaking Stan Musial's record. The Dodgers' Fernando Valenzuela was given a chance to electrify the game with his strikeout pitching. The races were hot, the crowds big, excitement high.

Then, poof! No baseball.

If Labor Secretary Raymond Donovan can call negotiators to Washington, D.C., put them in a room and tell them not to come out until they've settled their differences, why couldn't Commissioner Kuhn, whose job it is to preserve the best interests of baseball, have done the same thing long before this?

The danger signals were up for all to see. But no. Hardline owners decided it was time to get back some of the privileges which the players, after nearly 100 years of serfdom, had won barely in arbitration and the courts.

THE PLAYERS hung tough. Contrary to public opinion, money wasn't a factor. It was a question of the right given virtually every other American, as a free soul, to work for whom and for whatever he pleased.

Vindictiveness surfaced among the owners. They declined to plead financial hardship. Instead they virtually said their aim was to get back some of the power they had owned under the old restrictive reserve clause.

Our prediction is that the owners will break ranks, compromise and make poor Ray Grebey their scapegoat.

Bill Rogers is all smiles as he holds the victory cup following his win in the British Open golf tournament.

Rogers stays cool to ice British title

SANDWICH, England (AP) — Bill Rogers, once teetering on the brink of collapse, righted himself with critical consecutive birdies and quick-stepped his way to a final-round 71 and a four-stroke victory Sunday in the 110th British Open Golf Championship.

THE SKINNY, 29-year-old from Texarkana, Texas, claimed the first major title of his seven-year pro career with a 276 total, four shots under par on the 6,829-yard Royal St. George's Golf Club links.

Rogers, runner-up in the U.S. Open last month, had a commanding, five-stroke lead when the final round started, but watched in stone-faced dismay as it dwindled to a single shot only seven holes deep into the round.

Most of the troubles were of his own making. And most of them came on the 529-yard, par-5 seventh.

Normally one of golf's most accurate players, Rogers had played shakily in the early going, missing two greens and two fairways over the first six holes.

On the seventh, he drove into the rough, put his second on the bank of a bunker, hit his third shot far to the right of the green, over the heads of gallery, was short with his pitch from the deep rough, chipped to four feet, and missed it.

It was a double bogey-7.

AND IT chopped his once-impressive margin to a single stroke over young Bernhard Langer of West Germany, with dangerous Ray Floyd only two back.

It was, really, the only major drama of the final round. Rogers seemed to be collapsing with the others poised to pounce.

But the challenge seemed to be the spur Rogers needed.

He scored a routine par on the next hole, then birdied the next two. He was in command again, and the man inevitably dubbed "Buck" by his fellow pros on the American tour, was in control the rest of the way.

Instead of collapsing, he recovered. And the challengers — Langer, Floyd and Mark James — began to back away themselves, making Rogers' task easier over the last few holes of this, the most ancient of all the world's golf events.

THE VICTORY was worth $50,000 from the total purse of $400,000, but, perhaps more importantly to Rogers, it placed his name on the same list of winners with such legends as Vardon, Jones, Hagen, Hogan, Palmer and Nicklaus.

Langer, the 24-year-old son of a Munich bricklayer, took second with a par-70 final round and a 280 total, also even par. It was the best finish ever recorded by a German in one of the world's four major tests of golfing greatness.

James, a laconic British regular on the European tour, and Floyd shared third at 83. James shot a 73 and Floyd, winner of three U.S. Tour events this season and enjoying the best year of his career at age 38, matched par 70 in the chilly, breezy weather.

Sam Torrance of Scotland, benefitting from a hole-in-one on the 16th, managed to get in at par 70 despite a double bogey on the last hole and was alone at 284.

Bruce Lietzke, Rogers' college roommate at the University of Houston, and Manuel Pinero of Spain were next at 285. Lietzke, also a three-time winner this season, shot a closing 69 and Pinero had a 70.

Disappointed Ben Crenshaw, who blew his chances at the title he so longingly seeks with a poor performance in the third round, Howard Clark of Great Britain and Brian Jones of Australia were at 286. Clark had a closing 68, Crenshaw and Jones 71s.

ALTHOUGH ROGERS won it, it was one of the poorest overall performances in a decade by the Americans, who placed only four men in the top 10.

At least part of that can be attributed to the failure of the United States' two biggest guns, the incomparably Jack Nicklaus and Tom Watson, currently the outstanding player in the game.

Nicklaus, holder of a record 17 major professional titles, simply couldn't recover from an opening round of 83, the worst of his career. And Watson, the defending champion, took himself out of it with a 75 in the third round.

They finished in a tie for 17th at 290 — 10 over par. Also at that figure was their immediate predecessor as world golf's No.1 performer, 51-year-old Arnold Palmer.

Nicklaus had a par-70 in the final round, including 16 pars, a birdie and a bogey. Watson shot 73 and Palmer, who won the U.S. Seniors title only last Monday, fought his way to a 71.

Caponi enjoys win; looking forward to next stop

JERICHO, N.Y. (AP) — Donna Caponi, the winningest golfer on this year's LPGA tour as a result of her victory in $125,000 Wetern Union International Classic Sunday, heads for the next stop — the U.S. Women's Open — with a special twinkle in her eyes.

It was in the 1969 Open that Caponi scored her first victory as a pro, and the following year she became only the second player to score successive victories in the event.

SINCE THEN, however, the 35-year-old Caponi, a 17-year veteran of the women's tour, has not won that cherished title. She will be going into the 1981 edition, starting Thursday in LaGrange, Ill., with her fourth victory of the year, No.23 of her career. Her 72-hole total of 282 in the WUI Classic was 6 under par, good for a two-stroke victory over unknown Julie Stanger.

Each closed out the four-day event on the par 72, 6,347-yard Meadow Brook Club with a 73.

Caponi enjoyed a five-stroke advantage heading into the back nine. A double bogey on the par-4 14th hole cut her lead to one as the 25-year-old Stanger, who had never finished higher than fourth previously, birdied the same hole.

However, Stanger, who will be married on August 1 to Bob Pyle, a student at the Dallas Theological Seminary, dropped back to two with a bogey on the par-4 16th and that killed any chances she had of overtaking Caponi.

"I'm glad I had that mediocre round today," smiled Caponi after accepting her first-prize check of $18,750 that pushed her to third place on this year's money list with $132,033. "It will make me work harder for the U.S. Open."

"It takes a rare person to win that championship. The U.S. Golf Association is tricky in setting up its courses. They are tough. When you've won, you've played a great tournament.

"Right now I'm thinking better, but I don't know if I'm playing better. Winning the U.S. Open in 1970 was my greatest thrill, but winning this time would be the best because I know a lot more now."

Despite Sunday's double bogey on the No.14, Caponi explained, "Call it confidence, or a gut feeling, or experience, I thought I was OK. There's a time to be aggressive and there's a time to be passive. Julie was aggressive at the wrong time."

STANGER, THREE-time Arizona amateur titlist, said: "I really felt that the tournament didn't start until the final nine holes. I couldn't seem to get the putts to go. No.14 was the turning point, but the 16th was the difference.

"I threw away so many on the front nine, but I'm psyched going into the Open. I can't wait to get there to start my practice and chipping."

Beth Daniel, the 1980 Player of the Year, finished third with a 285 thanks to a final day 68, her only sub-par round of the tournament.

Kathy Martin closed out with a 77 after setting a course record with a 66 Saturday and settled for fourth place at 286. Hollis Stacy, a two-time U.S. Open champ, matched Martin's record Sunday to tie Betsy King, who wound up with a 69, at 287 for fifth place.

Sally Little, the defending WUI champion, who has three triumphs on this year's tour, posted a second consecutive 74 and was far off the pace at 291.

Kathy Whitworth, who needed at least a fourth-place finish to become the LPGA's first millionaire, had to be satisfied with seventh place despite carding her second straight 70 that gave her a 288. The 41-year-old golfer is now $1,031 short of the coveted goal.

Reutemann reluctant to admit title looks near

SILVERSTONE, England (AP) — Carlos Reutemann is reluctant to admit it, but he is looking increasingly like the next World Drivers Champion.

At 39, the Argentinian has raced in more Grands Prix and scored more points than any other active driver, and he has placed third three times in the World Championship.

To his experience, Reutemann has added impressive consistency and an incisive approach. He set a record in 1980-1981 of finishing in the points in 15 straight races, matching the immaculate preparation of the Williams team with immaculate driving.

HIS STEADY, controlled driving brought him to second behind the McLaren of Britain's John Watson in Saturday's British Grand Prix.

It increased his lead in the 1981 title race to 17 points over Brazil's Nelson Piquet, who injured his left ankle in a crash, and to 19 over his team leader, World Champion Alan Jones, eliminated in an early three-car crash.

Reutemann admitted he was "very lucky to have been second." He did not overtake anyone and inherited the place as cars ahead crashed or blew up, driving a steady, controlled race.

He refused to speculate on his title chances. "There are still six races to go. It's a long way, and anything could happen," said the man who has seen such hopes fade in the past.

Watson's win, only his second in 116 starts, also was the lucky result of the two turbocharged Renaults ahead of him blowing their engines.

"IT'S FIVE years since I won, four years since the team won, and four years since a British driver won a race. It's great for all of us," Watson said. The public certainly thought so, cheering him throughout the closing laps, for "Wattie," the quiet driver from Northern Ireland, is a great favorite.

Though the McLaren is being refined into a Williams-type car — the greatest compliment that can be paid now to a Ford Cosworth engined Grand Prix car — Watson, 35, must still be a rank outsider in the title race, in sixth with 19 points.

The coming races are again on very fast circuits which favor the turbocharged Renaults and Ferraris, despite their poor showing here, and the new Brabbam-BMW turbo, which had an encouraging first outing in practice driven by Piquet.

Injury knocks Percy out of all-star game

DALLAS (AP) — Andrews schoolboy football standout Van Percy has withdrawn from next weekend's high school all-star game because of an aggravated knee injury, a spokesman for the Texas High School Coaches Association said.

PERCY, WHO signed a letter of intent with Notre Dame, injured his knee during the long jump competetion at the class 4A state track meet and apparently aggravated the injury last week.

He will be replaced on the roster by Rusty Roark, a 6-2, 180 pound quarterback and safety from Monahans. Roark has accepted a scholarship to play football at Texas Tech.

The spokesman said there also are two changes in the all-star basketball roster.

DWIGHT PHILLIPS, a 6-foot-9, center from Levelland has been named to replace Canyon's Ken Walling, who withdrew for personal reasons. Phillips averaged 18.1 points a game and 17.4 rebounds for Levelland. He will attend Texas Tech.

Stefon Johnson of Longview has been named to replace Kelly Blaine of Austin, who did not graduate in time to qualify for the game. Johnson, a 6-foot-8 center, averaged 18 points and 15 rebounds a game at Longview. He will attend Louisiana State.

Barr best of 5 in eight extra holes

COAL VALLEY, Ill. (AP) — In this case, David Barr's conservative approach to golf playoffs was the right one.

"I wasn't going for the pins. I was shooting for the center of the greens. I didn't want to get too bold," said the 29-year-old Canadian, savoring his first American tour victory in four years.

BARR SANK a 3-foot putt for par on the eighth sudden death hole to beat Woody Blackburn for the $200,000 Quad Cities Open crown. Blackburn's playoff philosophy differed from Barr.

"You have to be aggressive. You can't wait on the other guy to make a mistake," he said.

It was a mistake by Blackburn that cost him his first individual title. He won the 1976 Disney team event with Bill Kratzert.

He hit a 5-iron into a bunker at the eighth green. From a buried lie, he blasted 20 feet past the pin, missing his bid to save par.

Blackburn was stunned that his approach shot went so sour, saying, "I thought it was right dead on the pin. I was licking my chops when it was in flight."

Barr and Blackburn had matched pars for six straight holes after they eliminated Victor Regalado, Don Halldorson and former tennis pro Frank Conner with birdies on the first sudden death hole at Oakwood Country Club.

Regalado, Halldorson and Conner parred that hole while Barr and Blackburn carded birdies.

The five-way playoff equaled the largest ever in PGA Tour history. The eight holes of sudden death was the second longest of all-time, three short of the record.

THE FIVE leaders had tied after 72 holes with 270, 10-under-par over this cozy 6,514-yard layout.

Barr closed with a 66, Blackburn 67, Halldorson and Conner 69 and Regalado 71.

Towns looks good

SAN ANGELO, Texas (AP) — New head coach Ed Biles was delighted when fifth-year offensive tackle Mo Towns reported to the Houston Oilers training camp Sunday weighing 256, a far cry from the flabby physique he's sported some previous years.

"HE LOOKS super," Biles said. "It's a tribute to his off-season workout program." The Oilers were expecting Towns to report at 275.

Angelo Fields survived Sunday's single workout, after the heat forced him to drop out of one Saturday.

"I think Angelo has learned his lesson," Biles said. "In future years I bet he'll lose his weight a little sooner."

BILES PLANNED to make the first cut of the season before Monday morning's workout.

Ruffast scores convincing win

RUIDOSO DOWNS (AP) — Ruffast took another step toward horse-of-the-meet honors with a convincing victory in Sunday's running of the featured Billy The Kid Handicap at Ruidoso Downs.

The five-year-old mare, ridden by Richard Bickel, stayed in third place during most of the race. At the turn for home, Ruffast overtook early leader Draconic's Loom and tough Banquero.

With Draconic's Loom fading to third, Banquero tried to hold off Ruffast but the mare managed to hit the finish line a neck in front in the seven furlong race.

The win was the third major stakes victory for Ruffast at Ruidoso Downs this season. Earlier in the summer she won the Barlaris Handicap at 5½ furlongs and the Governor's Handicap over 6½ furlongs.

In eight starts this season, Ruffast has won six times and finished second in her other two outings.

As the favorite, Ruffast paid $3.40, $3.00 and $2.40. Banquero paid $5.60 and $3.20, while Draconic's Loom returned $3.20 for show.

The results of all races:

SPORTS IN BRIEF

Cowan wins tourney

Cowan Equipment of Odessa nipped Stadium Sports of Midland to capture first place in the ASA District 26 Qualifying Men's Slow Pitch tournament played over the weekend at Hogan Park.

Despite the loss, Stadium Sports joins Cowan Equipment as qualifiers for the Class A State Tournament to be played in Midand Aug. 7-9. Also qualifying for the state tournament were the teams of Blakely of Midland and HNG Oil of Midland. Blakely finished third and HNG was fourth in the qualifying tournament.

The other 12 teams in the tournament qualified for the Class B State Tournament being held in Aiblene Aug. 21-23.

Tall city teams eligible to make the trip to the Abilene tournament are Gardendale A-1, Stanley Exxon, Mida Crude, Lupe's Day Care, Midland Electric Motor, Cowboys, Dominquez, Davis and Hicks and the Misfits.

Odessa teams that can go to Abilene are Country Burger, Chickaree and the Gladiators.

Tournament champion Cowan led the all-tournament team with four selections plus the most valuable player choice. Choosen as most valuable player was Ed Wardlow. Named to all-tournament berths from Cowan were Larry Feeler, Eddie Gregory, Gary Sims and Roger Bell.

Stadium Sports had John White, Don Smith and Gary Doan named to the dream team while Blakely had Gary Salgado and Craig Eschberger picked for all-star berths.

Greg Harless from HNG Oil rounded out the all-tournament team.

BOWLING

WINDSOR, Ontario (AP) — Pete McCordic of Houston held a 36-pin lead over fellow Texan Steve Ray entering today's rounds of the $100,000 Canadian Open bowling tournament.

McCordic was 5-2-1 after his first eight games in match play Sunday night. The only right-hander in the top five, McCordic averaged 209 in match play and had a total pinfall of 5,817 for 26 games to lead the tournament.

Ray, of Fort Worth, Texas, averaged 219 in the fourth round to move up from fourth place to second. He won four games and lost four for a total of 5,781.

Veteran Paul Moser of Somerset, Mass., was third, 63 pins back, followed by Steve Preston of Kokomo, Ind., 65 pins off the pace. Jim Mee of Fredonia, N.Y., rounded out the top five 70 pins back.

BROOKLINE, Mass. (AP) — Hans Gildemeister of Chile, the No.13 seed, rolled to a 6-3, 6-1 semifinal victory over Bernard Fritz of France at the U.S. Pro Tennis Championships and advanced to the title match against top-seeded Jose-Luis Clerc.

STUTTGART, West Germany (AP) — Sweden's Bjorn Borg and overpowered Ivan Lendl of Czechoslovakia 1-6, 7-6, 6-2, 6-4 to win the $75,000 Grand Prix tennis tournament.

CHICAGO (AP) — Chris Evert Lloyd crushed Sue Barker 6-3, 6-0 to extend the American streak to six straight matches over Great Britian in the 53rd Wightman Cup championship series.

West sweeps East in TL play

By The Associated Press

Jeff Pyburn's dramatic three-run homer with two outs in the eighth inning gave Amarillo a 7-4 win over the Jackson Mets, as Western Division teams swept the day in Sunday's Texas League action.

San Antonio conked Tulsa 10-2 and Midland nudged Arkansas 4-3 to complete the rout of the East; while El Paso and Shreveport were idle.

Pyburn's blow backed a strong pitching performance by Gold Sox starter Dave Dravecky, 9-4, who logged eight strikeouts and did not allow a hit until the fifth inning. Tom Miller, 1-3, took the loss for Jackson, which sagged deeper into the division cellar.

The Dodgers blasted four home runs in clubbing Tulsa, giving them 10 round-trippers in four games against the Drillers this series. Greg Brock had a pair of two-run Dodger homers, joining Myron White and Mike Zorous in the home run derby. Rusty McDonald, 3-3, benefitted from the scoring outburst, most of it inflicted on losser Walt Terrell, 9-7.

Agriculture officials gear up for Texas medfly quarantine

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — Texas agriculture authorities say they will halt shipments of California produce today that have not been certified free of infestation by the destructive Mediterranean fruit fly.

But lawyers for a group of California growers said they would ask a federal court in Dallas today for an injunction that would prohibit Texas from imposing the quarantine.

Texas was one of five Southern states that announced it would begin a quarantine today of California produce that could host the fast-breeding medfly. The other states are Florida, Mississippi, Alabama and South Carolina.

California Attorney General George Deukmejian contended Friday that the states were interfering in federal jurisdiction and the state quarantines should be declared invalid. He said that, if necessary, he'd ask the U.S. Supreme Court on Tuesday for a temporary injunction.

BUT TEXAS AGRICULTURE officials said Sunday they would not soften their certification demands on California produce.

"We are planning to go ahead full steam (with the quarantine) tomorrow at 12 noon," state agriculture inspector Gery Henderson said Sunday.

Texas Deputy Agriculture Commissioner Bobby Champion said only trucks with the proper certification would be allowed to unload in Texas or travel through the state without being fumigated at the state line.

But he said any truck containing cargo from one of the three California counties — Alameda, Santa Clara and San Mateo — quarantined by the U.S. Department of Agriculture must be "fumigated at the point of origin or would be turned back."

"We will not fumigate any trucks from those three counties," said Champion.

He said trucks could unload their cargo in Texas or be sealed and allowed to travel through the state if the driver had the proper certification.

CHAMPION SAID DRIVERS would have to show a fumigation certificate or documents from a county commissioner that certified the produce was not infested and came from a county that had had at a minimum of five fruit fly traps set up per square mile for at least 30 days.

He said if the load came from any but the three quarantined California counties and the driver lacked complete certification, the truck would have to be fumigated in El Paso before it would be allowed to continue.

State vows daytime fly spraying

LOS GATOS, Calif. (AP) — Frustrated officials vowed to start daytime spraying to fight a fruit fly infestation as five Southern states imposed a strict quarantine today to prevent contaminated California produce from crossing their borders.

Meanwhile, a coalition of California growers' associations said it would file suit in U.S. District Court in Dallas this week, probably today, to fight the five-state blockade.

State and federal officials also announced they would challenge the quarantine by Texas, Florida, South Carolina, Mississippi and Alabama in U.S. Supreme Court on Tuesday.

THE FEDERAL GOVERNMENT already has placed a limited quarantine on fruit and vegetables from the three San Francisco Bay-area counties infested with the fast-breeding Mediterranean fruit fly.

But the five Southern states imposed their own stringent quarantine against all California produce in efforts to prevent the pest from coming into their own growing areas. Four other Southern states have announced limited measures against California's $14 billion produce industry.

The new quarantine threat comes at the height of California's growing season as hundreds of tons of precious fruit and vegetables were being readied for shipment.

"Nobody can remember a crisis like this," said Steve George, chief of packing operations at George Brothers, a $7 million-a-year concern. "Things are in a state of turmoil."

HE SAID HIS COMPANY was building a $40,000 fumigation chamber to comply with the quarantines, which would allow fumigated produce to cross borders.

Officials, meanwhile, announced plans to spray the pesticide malathion from the air in daylight hours for the first time today over rolling, wooded land dotted with hillside homes.

They said the daylight helicopter spraying is necessary because continuing fog over Portola Valley's hilly terrain has made it nearly impossible to treat the area in the dark. All other areas infested with the fruit fly have been sprayed at night since last week to lessen residents' exposure.

By Sunday morning, 92 percent of the 175 square miles scheduled to be sprayed had been treated. The second of six rounds of spraying probably will begin Wednesday, said Tim O'Laughlin of the medfly project.

THE COST OF FIGHTING the tiny insect has been placed at $53 million.

U.S. Secretary of Agriculture John Block, who Sunday criticized Gov. Edmund Brown Jr. for failing to order aerial spraying of malathion sooner, said the federal government would share in the cost of the aerial effort — about $6 million so far.

Block also criticized the Southern states imposing the expanded quarantine. "This is our jurisdiction, not theirs," he said.

The USDA quarantine on Alameda, Santa Clara and San Mateo counties orders that only produce that has been fumigated can leave the area.

The Southern states quarantine would require all California growers to show their produce is medfly-free, either with data from medfly traps in their fields or through certificates of fumigation.

The embargo applies to more than 200 varieties of produce vulnerable to the medfly, including peppers, peaches, plums, nectarines, grapes and tomatoes.

A STEADY FLOW OF TRUCKS carrying California produce streamed across the border into Florida on Sunday at a rate about 15 percent above normal, beating the midnight deadline, officials said.

Gery Henderson, one of three state agriculture inspectors in El Paso, Texas said the state was "planning to go full steam" with the quarantine at noon today. Texas said it will charge truckers $50 to $55 to fumigate each truckload of produce without medfly-free certificates.

The first medflies were discovered in backyard fruit trees in Santa Clara County a year ago. In January, a house-to-house fruit tree-stripping and ground-spraying program began. Millions of sterile flies also were released.

But more maggots were discovered last month, and the governor reluctantly ordered aerial spraying two weeks ago after Block threatened a statewide quarantine.

Haig says jet shipment could be further delayed by fighting

WASHINGTON (AP) — Delivery of American-made F-16 jets to Israel could be delayed further if intense fighting between Israel and the Palestine Liberation Organization continues, Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. says.

"The important aspect of the problem is to get a moderation of the current levels of tension and a reduction of the violence," Haig said Sunday on ABC's "Issues and Answers."

While insisting that the F-16s and the battling in Israel and Lebanon are not directly linked, he acknowledged they are "broadly interrelated in the context of events."

"We must address this issue from a standpoint of whether or not it contributes to more moderate policies on the part of the two protagonists in this particular situation," Haig said.

He said Israel's raid which killed more than 100 persons in Beirut on Friday had nothing to do with President Reagan's decision not to announce a resumption of F-16 deliveries to Israel.

Rather, he continued, the administration concluded that arms agreements with Israel specified Tuesday, not last Friday as widely believed, as a deadline for deciding whether to deliver six jets.

The shipment of four other F-16s was specifically suspended by the administration after Israel destroyed Iraq's nuclear reactor in a bombing raid June 7.

Concerning Israel's attacks into Lebanon and their impact on U.S. policy in the Middle East, Haig said "it is awfully important that we not succumb to tensions of the moment" in formulating policy.

Reagan will make a decision "very, very shortly" — at least by Tuesday, Haig said, adding that the president was not waiting for anything specific to occur in the Middle East.

Haig said he believes a cease-fire may be possible.

Later in Canada, where Reagan is attending a seven-nation economic summit, Haig said special Mideast envoy Philip C. Habib met twice with Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin and reported that "the situation remains tense and worrisome."

In the television interview, Haig for the first time indicated the nature of the understanding between the United States and Israel on any resumption of F-16 deliveries.

He said the United States had not sought to make a judgment on whether Israel misused U.S.-supplied aircraft in the Iraqi bombing.

"We want them to consider our interests in these matters as well as their own, and I think there has been a clearing of the air with respect to the issue," Haig said.

"We didn't make that judgment in the context of the Iraqi raid," he said. "The problem with respect to the Iraqi raid is that we felt available diplomatic steps" were not followed by Israel.

Asked whether the attack on Beirut was consistent with the understanding, Haig replied: "Well, that's a judgment that's yet to be made."

Four Marines perish in helicopter crash on ship

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — Four Marine reservists from Pennsylvania have been killed in a helicopter crash aboard the amphibious helicopter ship Guam, the Navy reports.

The CH53 Sea Stallion helicopter crashed and burned on the Guam's flight deck late Sunday afternoon about 35 miles southeast of Morehead City, N.C.

Atlantic Fleet headquarters in Norfolk said four Marines were injured and seven Navy personnel suffered minor injuries. Two other helicopters were destroyed. A Navy spokeswoman said the 5:25 p.m. crash caused a fire that was extinguished within five minutes.

The Navy identified none of the victims pending notification of kin. The dead were listed as members of Marine Reserve Helicopter Squadron 772 out of Willow Grove, Pa. Four of the injured were flown to a hospital on the Marine Corps base at Camp Lejeune, N.C., the spokeswoman said.

Wyoming Oil Leases To Be Awarded in August

CARSON CITY, NV — Hundreds of average citizens will acquire oil lease rights in upcoming public awards conducted by the State of Wyoming. Some may achieve overnight wealth by selling their rights to oil companies and retaining lifelong royalties on any oil or gas production.

Incredibly, most will risk no more than $25 and a minimal filing fee to enter the little-known program that offers every American the opportunity to compete on an equal basis with giant oil companies for leases of public lands.

Information and entry details are available from The H. Kirk Sanders Co., Public Lands Division, 607 E. Spear St., Carson City, Nevada 89701. Enclose $1 for postage and handling.

Official entry cards will be rushed by return mail to permit the timely filing of entries before cut-off date.
