Harding prepares

PORTLAND, Ore. — Tonya Harding prepared Monday for her first questioning by the district attorney amid reports that her ex-husband was about to be arrested and that funds from the U.S. Figure Skating Association may have been used to finance the attack on Olympic skating rival Nancy Kerrigan. NBC News reported that authorities have bank and wire transfer records that could tie Jeff Gillooly to the three men already in custody in the alleged conspiracy. NBC also confirmed a report in The Oregonian newspaper that investigators suspect Gillooly paid for the hit with some money donated by Harding's supporters.

Snow shuts valley

As much as 30 inches of snow piled up on a layer of ice and brought parts of the Ohio Valley sliding to a halt Monday, with National Guardsmen mobilized and major highways shut down. Schools were closed from Missouri to Pennsylvania. A new blast of North Pole air was rushing in behind the snowstorm, and Devils Lake, N.D., had a midmorning wind chill of 92 below zero. Without factoring in the wind, Garrison, Minn., was the coldest spot in the Lower 48 states at 32 below zero.

L.A. reels from quake

Temblor snaps freeways; searchers pull bodies

■ More than 200 aftershocks pummel region; death toll rises.

LOS ANGELES — For an interminable 30 seconds, the earth heaved.

A three-story apartment complex collapsed into two floors, trapping body after body inside. Concrete freeways snapped like matchsticks, turning the nation's busiest highway network into a commuter's nightmare. Power and gas lines and water mains broke, shooting fireballs like geysers in flooded streets, consuming scores of homes and leaving thousands of displaced or just-plain-scared residents to sleep outdoors.

'I couldn't stop screaming as I ran out of the house. I looked up and all I could see was darkness coming toward us and it got real windy. I thought it was the sun exploding.'
— Erik Wyler, L.A. resident

At least 27 people were killed, 14 in the apartment building where more victims were feared in the rubble.

It took 30 seconds, shorter than some earthquakes, but exactly twice as long as the devastating 1989 temblor that killed 63 in San

Buckling, collapse of highways raise prospect of traffic chaos for area that burgeons with cars

By Bernard Weinraub
N.Y. Times News Service

LOS ANGELES — The earthquake that struck Los Angeles before dawn Monday crippled key freeways, raising the prospect that the American city most defined by its cars and interlocking highways would be gripped by traffic chaos for months.

The city's freeways and highways, mostly built since World War II, soar and wind like roller coasters, rising on pilings to crisscross one another. The buckling and collapse in an explosion of dust of various portions of elevated stretches of highway Monday raise the prospect of paralysis for a city that burgeons with cars. The result, city officials said, is likely to be the disruption of almost every facet of life for the nine million people in the Los Angeles area for as long as a year.

With nearly 3 million vehicles using 616.3 miles of freeway in Los Angeles during the evening rush hour, the city's residents are extraordinarily dependent on main highway arteries. The city has never confront-

Surprising civility fills beleaguered city

LOS ANGELES — Ventura Boulevard, the main thoroughfare through the devastated San Fernando Valley, was a ghostly place Monday morning, its shops destroyed, its sidewalks littered with broken glass, its traffic signals out and its automatic teller machines useless.

But the stillness of the street was misleading.

Behind a shuttered Thrifty drugstore in the Studio City section, where the aisles were clogged with fallen ceiling tiles, a tangle of toys and broken cosmetic bottles, employees peddled batteries and flashlights to a stunned throng of men and women still shaking from the jolt of a lifetime, which occurred before dawn.

Apartment building takes hardest hit as residents bear brunt of casualties

By Elizabeth Kolbert
N.Y. Times News Service

LOS ANGELES, Calif. — Erik Pearson heard a loud explosion, and felt a jolt like a bomb. Still on their bed, he and his wife then fell 12 feet through the ceiling of the apartment below.

"We were airborne," said Pearson, a 27-year-old nursing student. "I heard the glass break from the glass sliding doors. Our apartment came down and pitched diagonally." The door was jammed shut, the couple said, but they climbed to down to safety off their once third floor, now second floor balcony.

At least 14 other residents of the tan stucco apartment complex, the Northridge Meadows, did not. The three-story building suffered some of the worst damage of Monday's earthquake and its residents bore the brunt of the casualties.

The building, a half a block from California State University at Northridge, housed many college students. An identical building next to it, the Northridge, buckled but did not

High to stay in mid-40s today

Staff Report

Today's forecast calls for sunny skies with a high in the mid-40s and northeast winds at 10-15 mph. Tonight should be clear with a low in the lower 20s, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Wednesday should be sunny with a high in the upper 50s.

After an overnight low of 22, Monday's high reached 56, compared to the record high for that date of 84 set in 1974. The record low was seven set in 1949.

STATE

Several parts of the state were caught under cool, dry air Monday and the moderate temperatures of last week disappeared.

North Texas was under a cold and dry air mass Monday afternoon with clear skies except for a few clouds over parts of the northwest and extreme east.

The cold air blew closer behind winds from the north as fast as 15 mph.

Temperatures rose only into the upper 30s over portions of the Red River, with 40s elsewhere. Wind chill readings were in the 20s and 30s.

Overnight conditions were to be cloudy and cold, with lows in the upper teens west to upper 20s southeast. Similar conditions are to persist today with highs in the 30s to lower 40s with lows in the 20s.

South Texas was cloudy, first from lingering overnight clouds, then by a new batch of clouds from the tropical Pacific.

North winds brought cool dry air into the area, with afternoon temperatures in the 40s on the upper coast and far east. Other areas were in the 50s and 60s.

The forecast calls for partly cloudy skies overnight with decreasing clouds today. Lows overnight will be in the 20s in the north and 40s in the deep south. Highs today will be in the 50s and 60s.

In West Texas, clouds were to move into the east overnight. The west was to be mostly clear with patchy fog after midnight.

NATION

A storm dumped up to 30 inches of snow on the Ohio Valley on Monday, rain and snow spread along the East Coast and a new blast of bitterly cold air surged into the upper Midwest.

Very moist air streamed northward from the Gulf of Mexico, causing showers and thunderstorms in the South, then flowed over much colder air and spread freezing rain, sleet and snow across the Ohio Valley into the Northeast.

Heavy snow fell during the night and early Monday across the Ohio Valley, including 23 inches at Mount Olivet, Ky.; 30 in Ohio's Scioto County; and 24 in West Virginia's Mason County.

In other states, snowfall by early afternoon included 13 inches at Chambersburg, Pa.; 11 inches at Carlos and Frostburg, Md.; 8 inches at Ludlow, Vt.; and 5 inches at Bath, Maine, the National Weather Service said.

Across the southern Appalachians and southern sections of the middle Atlantic states, freezing rain and sleet caused significant ice accumulations on highways. Ice up to an inch thick was reported in the northern foothills and mountains of North Carolina.

Ice also accumulated along the coast into New England, with icy runways at Boston's Logan Airport shutting down flights for a time during the afternoon.

Winter storm warnings remained in effect through the night across much of the Appalachians, much of the middle Atlantic states and all of New England, the National Weather Service said.

As a new wave of cold air surged southward out of Canada, early afternoon temperatures were still well below zero across much of the northern Plains and the upper Mississippi Valley, after morning lows well below zero.

More snow accompanied the cold air as it poured across the Great Lakes and sections of the northern and central Rockies. Six inches of snow accumulated in Michigan at Melstrand and Pine Stump Junction. In Wyoming, 8 inches fell at Sheridan and Bear Lodge, with 6 inches at Dayton.

During this morning, subzero cold is expected in the central Plains, middle Mississippi Valley, western Great Lakes and the lower Ohio Valley, with freezing temperatures reaching the gulf coast.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

REELS: Deadly quake hits Los Angeles area

(From 1A)

Francisco and more jolting than hardened earthquake veterans in Los Angeles could remember.

Monday's quake hit at 6:31 a.m. CST, shattering the sleeping suburbs of the sprawling San Fernando Valley, 20 miles northwest of downtown Los Angeles.

It measured 6.6 on the Richter scale, was felt from San Diego 125 miles to the south to Las Vegas 275 miles to the northeast, and yet still it wasn't the long-predicted, long-dreaded "Big One."

It could have been much worse.

Freeway traffic was minimal in the predawn hours on the holiday honoring the late Martin Luther King. The only traffic fatality was a motorcycle policeman who rode off a fractured freeway as he sped to work.

By sunrise, dozens of homes had been lost to fires that broke out on cracked and flooded streets. By sunset, scores of aftershocks, including one magnitude-5.7, had left residents wary of their own homes.

"The whole street was on fire. Even the tall palm trees were burning. It was a very frightening experience. We lost everything. We have nothing, but nobody was hurt. We're all safe," said Al McNeil, whose home in Granada Hills was destroyed by fire.

In just one of many rescues, searchers spent hours digging through the wreckage of a mall parking garage before finding a maintenance worker alive.

Though the bulk of the structural damage was centered in the San Fernando Valley, power was disrupted as far away as Canada and traffic lights were knocked out in downtown Los Angeles and the San Fernando Valley.

By Monday evening, at least 680,000 customers were still without power in Los Angeles County, and 50,000 were without water. Residents were able to obtain water from trucks at area high schools.

The city Department of Water and Power urged residents to boil drinking water contaminated by broken mains.

Telephone service was erratic as long-distance phone companies routed calls away from the region to prevent communication gridlock.

A freight train carrying sulfuric acid was derailed, and Los Angeles International Airport briefly closed.

Soon after the quake struck, officers patrolled streets in the early morning darkness to guard against looting as police helicopters aimed their spotlights on shattered storefronts below.

Later, quake refugees pitched tents in neighborhood parks. Long lines formed outside hardware stores as residents tried to buy propane or get plywood to repair damaged homes. Without power, many gasoline stations remained closed, and bank teller machines didn't work.

President Clinton declared Southern California a disaster area, making residents eligible for federal aid, and dispatched Federal Emergency Management Agency chief James Lee Witt to California.

"We intend to do everything we possibly can to help the people of Los Angeles and Southern California to deal with the earthquake and its aftermath," Clinton said in Washington, D.C.

Gov. Pete Wilson and Mayor Richard Riordan declared emergencies, and Riordan instituted a dusk-to-dawn curfew in Los Angeles to protect "life and property."

"You begin to wonder how much Angelinos are expected to take," said Wilson, referring to the fall firestorms and 1992 riots.

California National Guard troops were sent in, and the state Office of Emergency Services sent about 300 search-and-rescue teams equipped with fiber-optic sensors and other gear to detect structural flaws and find victims.

At least 14 people were killed when an apartment building collapsed in Northridge. The building housed mostly students at nearby California State University, Northridge.

Other fatalities:

- A man who died of head injuries from falling objects inside his Chatsworth trailer;
- Two people whose home in Sherman Oaks slid down a hillside;
- One person in a fall from a sixth-floor window at a downtown hotel;
- Five people of quake-related heart attacks;
- A Rancho Cucamonga woman who broke her neck when she slipped and hit her head on a baby crib;
- A Los Angeles police officer whose motorcycle sailed off a severed freeway overpass, falling nearly 25 feet to the road below.
- Two people pronounced dead on arrival at Henry Mayo Medical Center in Newhall. Details of their deaths weren't immediately available.

Thousands were treated for injuries.

"We've seen heart attacks, dislocated bones, lacerations. A lot of blood," said Toni Regalado, an emergency room admissions officer at Holy Cross Medical Center in Sylmar.

In Los Angeles, Cedars Sinai Medical Center was receiving "a tidal wave of walking wounded," spokesman Ron Wise said.

In Granada Hills, a new nine-story office building housing a mental health clinic collapsed. Floors three through nine smashed into the second floor, causing the outside walls to buckle and tumble. The Kaiser Permanente Foundation clinic was empty at the time and no one was believed hurt.

Next door, at the Granada Hills Community Hospital, officials set up a makeshift emergency room in the parking lot where nurses treated more than 1,000 patients.

"The hospital has been semi-demolished. The electricity is not working. We're on a generator," said licensed vocational nurse Lisa Bourgeois, a volunteer.

Five interstates and three state highways were closed at several points after the quake, threatening to snarl traffic for millions of drivers for months to come. Traffic was chaotic as traffic signals went out in downtown Los Angeles and the valley.

Among the worst hit highways was Interstate 5, the state's major north-south route.

collapse.

The Meadows, a 164-unit apartment complex near the epicenter of the quake in the San Fernando Valley, looked like a cardboard box that someone had stepped on. In several sections of the building, the first floor no longer existed; it lay crushed beneath the two other floors. Windows had popped out of their frames, balconies dangled at odd angles, and entire walls buckled.

Until 4:31 a.m. on Monday, this sleepy middle-class section of Los Angeles about 20 miles northwest of downtown was known only for its tree-lined branch of the California State University. From now, it will be known as the epicenter of an earthquake.

Simply put, city officials said the building was the site of the largest number of earthquake fatalites in the city's history.

John William, 36, a survivor who lived on the first floor, managed to slither to safety by following a small path of light to a crack in the building's foundation.

"I pushed open the crack in the wall; my fiancee and I were pressed together and we squeezed ourselves free," said William, who had cuts on both hands and arms. "I felt like we were going to lose circulation at any minute.

"I was hearing moans and whining and banging from people pinned in the other apartments. I'm not exaggerating: the second floor is now in the dirt. There is not two inches of room in my apartment."

Residents described a scene of panic in the hours before dawn as people tried to climb from their balconies or pick their way in the dark down staircases that had been torn apart by the quake.

On Monday afternoon, many residents of the complex were still milling around in front of the ruined building, at 9565 Reseda Boulevard, as firefighters, sweaty and exhausted, continued to search for more bodies trapped in the debris. Eight hours after the quake, firefighters held out little hope that those still missing would be found alive but said they were inserting electronic listening devices in the rubble that could pick up sounds as soft as human breathing. Earlier, they brought in dogs trained to find survivors in building rubble.

There was no power in the area, most of the shops were closed, and in an incongruously festive gesture, people up and down the street had taken to eating half-melted ice cream cakes from a nearby Baskin & Robbins.

The force of the tremor ripped apart homes, businesses, roads and utilities, leaving thousands of residents without water, power, or shelter.

Reseda Boulevard, a main thoroughfare, resembled a war zone: ruptured water mains flooded streets and gas permeated the air, touching off numerous fires that were controlled by the late afternoon. Traffic lights were knocked out and accidents occurred throughout the area.

Many of the community's 20,000 residents camped out in front of their damaged apartment buildings and homes, sleeping on blankets and lawn chairs and clinging to whatever items they were able to salvage in their haste to exit.

All afternoon, aftershocks, some quite strong, could be felt throughout the neighborhood. With each one, more people moved into the street to stay clear in case more windows shattered.

Capt. Robert De Feo, of the Los Angeles Fire Department, said the shearing motion of the quake twisted the three-story building, causing the floor to collapse into the parking garage below. In what is perhaps the most stunning evidence of the quake's force here, the building now stands two stories high, surrounded by the other three-story buildings.

CHAOS: Heavy damage to disrupt traffic

(From 1A)

ed, until now, the possibility that many of these freeways would be partially unusable for long periods.

The region's new subway line, the Metro Red Line, which opened in January 1993, is expected to offer little help. It runs only through 4.4 miles of downtown Los Angeles, from Union Station to MacArthur Park.

"It's not going to be easy," said a grim Mayor Richard Riordan Monday afternoon, standing beside Gov. Pete Wilson.

Several motorists were trapped in tons of concrete rubble as the overpasses on three highways buckled, severing Interstate 5, which is California's main north-south highway, and Interstate 10, the Santa Monica Freeway, which is the busiest road in the nation.

During the earthquake, Interstate 10, which slices across the city and ferries hundreds of thousands of commuters daily between the west side of the city and downtown, swayed like a wave at the Fairfax Avenue overpass, which fell feet, to six feet above street level.

Mayor Riordan, noting there had been "major damage" from the quake, said of the damaged portion of the Santa Monica Freeway, "That freeway will be closed for quite a while."

The earthquake also collapsed an arching intersection of two major freeways in the San Fernando Valley — Interstates 5, known as the Golden State, and Highway 14, the Antelope Valley freeway.

Cars could be seen crushed beneath the fallen Interstate 14 overpass, whose Y-shaped support beam, shorn of the span it had helped hold aloft, jutted raggedly skyward. Two automobiles could be seen crunched up against it.

The authorities said a police officer rushing to the scene on his motorcycle was killed early Monday morning.

Charles Kunz, an official of the Los Angeles Police Department, said the officer was unable to stop his motorcycle as it approached a collapsed portion of Interstate 5 and he fell about 20 feet to his death. Authorities believed he had died instantly.

A woman who was six months pregnant was also critically injured in the highway collapse.

Elsewhere, a freeway bridge was damaged on State Route 118, the Simi Valley freeway.

Because Los Angeles residents are so dependent on freeways, the effect of the earthquake was expected to be severe, perhaps devastating, on the way the city's residents move around in their cars.

"It's going to be an absolute nightmare for commuters," said Joe McConnell of Metro Traffic Control, which reports on traffic conditions for local news programs.

CIVILITY: Virtually no one pushes, shoves

one man in line, as harried clerks dispensed these limited goods from a shopping cart and apologized that nothing else was for sale because the store was knee-deep in ruined merchandise.

Similar bedlam reigned at the Hughes Market, the only open grocery store for miles around, where 10 people at a time were permitted inside to fill their baskets with bottled water, ice cubes, cigarettes and food that required no cooking, since gas and electrical service was not likely to be restored anytime soon here, just 10 miles from Northridge, the epicenter of the powerful earthquake.

The huge plate-glass windows of the market were shattered. The place reeked of spilled vinegar and wine. And the floor was a soggy mess of ketchup, plaster shards and who-knows-what-else, but shoppers had grateful words for the managers for opening.

And they made favorable comparison between Monday's frenzied shopping and the last round of panic buying in Los Angeles, in the aftermath of the 1992 riots.

"The lines are long, things are crazy and people are petrified," said Tobi Oringer, a shopper from nearby Sherman Oaks, where two people were killed Monday when a hillside home collapsed. "But it's better than the last time. This time we're unified, as opposed to separated. It's not a fear-based thing we're doing to each other."

In fact, the mood of the day was civility throughout a region that has experienced more troubles than Job in recent years. Shoppers with no cash because the teller machines were inoperative asked politely if merchants would take checks, and mostly they did.

Virtually no one pushed and shoved in the long lines to buy food, gasoline or newspapers. And people using pay telephones to reassure friends and relatives cut conversations short in deference to others, lent each other quarters and inquired about the well-being of strangers.

Nowhere was that civility more essential than at major intersections, most of them without traffic signals throughout the day because of power failures.

With parts of three major freeways closed because of damage, and others virtually empty because motorists were afraid to use them, the surface streets became the main arteries in the Los Angeles region.

Some of those streets were deserted as far as the eye could see, long asphalt alleys eerily silent in the warm haze. But other streets were thick with traffic.

And it was there that Angelenos showed uncommonly good manners, making their way gingerly through intersections, some of them six lanes wide, using eye contact and hand signals rather than car horns or expletives.

Even when a stalled vehicle blocked Fairfax Avenue in the middle of the city, clogging traffic for blocks, drivers made their way calmly through the mess, commiserating with each other as they listened to updated death tolls and advice from therapists on their car radios.

Civility prevailed, as well, at airports and car rental agencies, as travelers returned to their broken city and others hurried away.

Bosnian Serb leaders threaten to unleash 'all-out war' if talks fail

BIJELJINA, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — Bosnian Serb leaders threatened Monday to unleash "all-out war" against the Muslim-led government if coming peace talks end without agreement.

"This round of negotiations will mark a definite turning point," Radovan Karadzic, leader of the self-proclaimed Serb state in Bosnia-Herzegovina, told a Serb assembly.

"If it becomes clear there will be no peace, we shall have to prepare for all-out war," said Karadzic, adding that the Serbs would launch an offensive to capture about 20 percent of the land now held by the government. The Bosnian Serbs have generally followed through on previous threats.

The heavily armed Serbs currently hold 70 percent of Bosnia after 21 months of war, while the Muslim-led government holds about 15 percent and Croats hold the rest.

Croatian Foreign Minister Mate Granic also claimed on Croatian television that "war will spread" if there is no agreement in talks that open today in Geneva.

The comments came amid signs that the government army, long the underdog in the Bosnian civil war, is becoming a better match for its foes.

The army reportedly fought off a fierce Serb onslaught at Olovo, northeast of Sarajevo. And it continues to score successes against Bosnian Croat forces in central Bosnia, where the two sides have fought for months over land unclaimed by the Serbs.

The recent army successes follow months of intense reorganization, during which renegades were purged from the ranks and top military leaders were replaced.

As Bosnia's Serbs, Croats and the Muslim-led government prepare for the new round of talks, Serb comments at their assembly in Bijeljina reflected deep frustration.

At the last negotiating session in December, the government rejected a Serb-Croat proposal that would have given it control over one third of Bosnia's territory, saying its demands for access to the sea and to the Sava river in the north had not been met.

"We must brace ourselves for the final showdown," said Miroslav Vjestica, a hard-line member of the Serb assembly. "We should only meet with them at the capitulation table."

Nikola Koljevic, the Bosnian Serbs' vice president, said the assembly decided to keep the offer of one-third of Bosnia on the table.

TUESDAY, JANUARY 18, 1994

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Writing and advertising endeavors will increase your popularity and prestige. Someone could confuse friendship with love. Defining your relationship early on will prevent embarrassment. Joint financial enterprises enjoy highly favorable influences next fall. Stress the importance of having an overall strategy. Your talent for organization will make an experimental project a big success!

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: inventor Ray Dolby (Dolby Sound), baseball player Curt Flood, opera singer Evelyn Lear, "Winnie The Pooh" author A.A. Milne, singer Bobby Goldsboro, food columnist Johna Blinn, comedian Danny Kaye, legendary actor Cary Grant, orator Daniel Webster.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Make thorough planning your top priority today. Nobody can hold a candle to you when it comes to predicting the odds and outlasting the competition. Romantic vibes are easy to pick up.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Complete unfinished tasks before embarking on a new project. Competition will inspire you, pumping up your energy level. Participation in a group undertaking has endless possibilities. Handle a loaded situation with kid gloves.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Go with the flow — you are in for smooth sailing. The spotlight is on family life. Spruce up your living quarters. Take the time to build a solid foundation for a new enterprise.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Pay no attention to friends who are more generous with advice than with material support. Life's greatest pleasures are not always those that deplete your bank account! A give-and-take attitude promotes romance.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Curb an impulse to plunge into a risky venture. Logic, not emotion, should dictate a business choice. Events beyond your control work to your advantage. Pamper those dearest to your heart.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): All signs point to possible financial complications. Try not to borrow from or lend money to friends. A household member may be in a touchy mood. Be patient. Offer words of encouragement, not criticism.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Once you master your emotions and let your intellect take over, your chances of success will be much higher. Do what you can to restore domestic harmony. Clarify your priorities to subordinates.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Expand your horizons and give your enterprising spirit free rein. Encourage your children's aspirations even if they are different from your own. Treat their hobbies with respect. A brilliant career could follow.

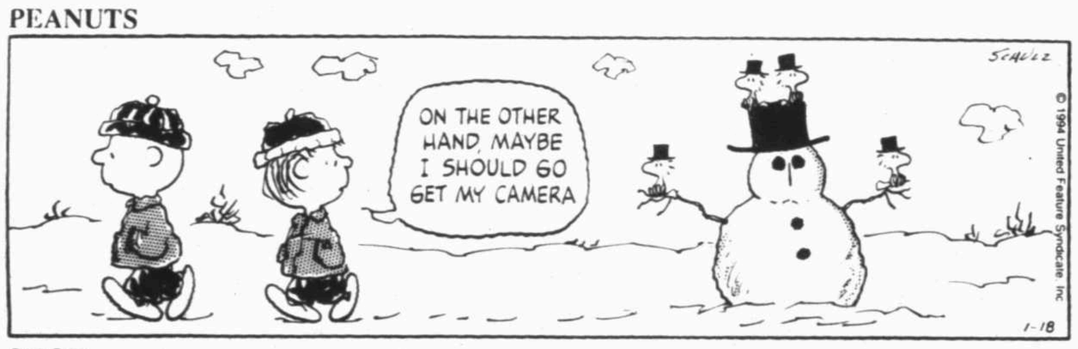

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Take advantage of a lull at work to complete unfinished tasks. You need to make up your mind about a romance that has become overly complicated. Protect a child's happiness.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Establishing better rapport with a family member will work wonders. Avoid discussing your in-laws with outsiders. A new relationship reawakens your senses. Contentment grows. Something is functioning better than you dreamed possible.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Romance keeps you guessing. Try not to be extravagant or gullible. There is no quick way to double your money! Make certain any children left in your charge are in a safe environment.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Unusual circumstances favor your efforts. Heed a creative urge and do something artistic. Travel sounds appealing but could cost more than you can comfortably afford. Save for a vacation in late summer.

"Ladies and Gentlemen of the Jury:

"Three members of East's team are suing for a considerable sum of money. They accuse East of conduct unbecoming a defender. As a result, the team suffered an embarrassing loss in the club championship, which lessened their standing in the bridge community.

"The facts are straightforward enough. At both tables South became declarer at six hearts. The auction shown is at the table where the crime occurred. South judged well to raise over game, denying any side-suit control to cue-bid and by inference confirming good hearts. North had an easy raise to slam.

"At both tables West led the ace of spades and continued the suit. At the other table declarer won the second spade, led a heart to the king and was forced to concede a trump trick and defeat when West showed out.

"At the relevant table, the play to the first two tricks was the same, but at the third trick declarer led the jack of hearts. East 'covered an honor with an honor' and, when West discarded a spade, declarer simply crossed back to dummy and took the marked finesse for the ten of hearts to land the slam. Need we say more?"

"The Court congratulates South on the fine play of the jack of hearts at trick three. Nevertheless, we find East guilty as charged. Since East was looking at the ten of hearts, it should have been obvious that declarer was not attempting a finesse. East should simply have followed with the lowest heart and here, too, the slam would have failed."

Queen Elizabeth takes royal spill from horse, breaks bone

LONDON — Queen Elizabeth II took a royal spill while riding one of her horses, breaking a bone in her left wrist, Buckingham Palace said Monday.

British monarch is injured when her horse trips.

The 67-year-old British monarch was injured Saturday when her horse tripped during a ride at her Sandringham estate, 70 miles north of London, a palace spokesman said.

"She was out riding on Saturday as usual when her horse tripped and fell and the queen fell onto her left wrist," said the spokesman, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

The spokesman said the queen's lower arm would be in a cast for several weeks. The queen is right-handed.

"It is not a serious break, it is just an inconvenient thing. It was thought just to be a bruise to start with and the break was not diagnosed until nearly 24 hours afterward," he said.

NEW YORK — Jennifer Capriati was a tennis star at 13. At 17, she says she'd rather be a high school student.

Capriati has been off the professional tennis tour since August because of bone chips in her elbow. She plans to stay off until after she finishes high school this year, she told The New York Times.

"I need a break from it," she said in the interview published Monday. "And I've decided I want to concentrate on finishing my senior year."

The world's No. 12-ranked women's player turned pro at age 13. At 14 she became the youngest person to make the top 10, to win a match at Wimbledon and to reach a Grand Slam semifinal.

Her parents said they support her decision.

"She's not rebelling; I would not use that strong a word," said her father, Stefano Capriati. "She's testing everybody — me, her mother, her friends. She wants to see how they react to her if she doesn't play tennis. And she's testing herself, too."

Capriati, an honors student at Florida's Pasco County High School, has had recent problems off the court. She faces a juvenile court hearing later this month after being accused of shoplifting jewelry at a Tampa mall last December. She said she walked away from a jewelry stand, forgetting to return an inexpensive ring.

ASHEVILLE, N.C. — Don't mess with fans of country singer Vince Gill.

Tina Wolfe is so determined to be first in line to buy tickets for a Gill concert that she's already camping outside the Asheville Civic Center box office — even though reserved seats don't go on sale until Feb. 12. The concert is March 24.

Through sleet and snow and below-zero cold, the Asheville woman and relatives have been camped in a van outside the arena's front doors since Tuesday. Friends bring food and drink.

"This is not so much for me, as it is for my mama," Wolfe said Sunday.

"I promised mama front-row seats. If I have to sit here a month, then I'll sit here a month."

NEW YORK — Billy Frolick liked best-selling author Robert James Waller's "Bridges of Madison County" so much that he paid Waller the ultimate compliment; he wrote a parody of Waller's book.

"The Ditches of Edison County," written under the pseudonym Ronald Richard Roberts, copies page for page Waller's emotional (some critics might say banal) style. And like "Bridges," "Ditches" describes a love story like the one between Waller's characters Francesca and Kincaid, or in this case Pancetta and Concave.

An excerpt: "'You're making me crazy, Ronald Concave,' Pancetta declared to her soulmate. They then proceeded to make love for five blissful, uninterrupted minutes. For Pancetta, it felt like 10."

Frolick, a Los Angeles writer, said "Bridges" captivated him, but he thinks passages like the one describing the book's hero as "a leopard who came riding on the tail of a comet" left it open to lampooning.

"That made the guy sound like a theme-park ride," he said in an interview in this week's People magazine.

NEW YORK — A former porno star and ex-member of the Italian parliament was told by a judge that she can visit her 14-month-old son, who was snatched from her home in Rome on Christmas Eve and spirited to New York by her estranged husband.

State Supreme Court Justice David Saxe ruled that Ilona Staller may visit her son between 9 a.m. and 5 p.m., provided she surrenders her passport to her lawyer, Rita Warner.

The boy, Ludwig Maximilian Koons, is living in New York City with his father, artist Jeffrey Koons. Koons has filed for divorce and custody of his son. A hearing is scheduled for Jan. 26.

American people can demand action

Ever wonder why when a particular issue attracts the attention of numerous Americans — and many politicians take a stand on it, seemingly embracing the support of their constituents — nothing is done legislatively, thus thwarting the will of the people?

That very point was addressed by U.S. Rep. Larry Combest, R-Texas, at a town hall meeting the other day.

"One of the things we've continuously seen in the nine years I've been in Washington is a lot of 'feel good' issues — people vote on something and they can say they voted on spending reduction," noted the congressman.

"But nothing's enacted. I'm tired of playing this game. We need . . . a workable program that . . . can be enacted."

No one can blame Combest or other members of Congress for feeling the frustration of working toward a solution to mind-boggling problems like deficit spending, the national debt, and the like only to see them always just beyond the point of enactment. Numerous individuals have worked toward those goals for years — and, yet, the problems continue and the unimaginable debt grows ceaselessly, other problems go begging.

The problem is that, apparently, it's next to impossible for any session of Congress to hold the focus on a particular problem, such as the debt, long enough to actually enact legislation that will bring elemental change. So, a small percentage of the congressional delegation is changed every couple of years, but the majority stays intact to go on talking a good game, but not really changing anything. And the nation's "problems" go on unaddressed.

Change occurs ever so infrequently when the American populace becomes so enraged about an issue — for example, congressional pay raises — that it floods congressional offices with mail and telephone calls demanding action. Then the Congress acts, out of the basic instinct for survival.

That's the fury the American public must bring to issues like deficit spending, the national debt, and all the others that have been molly-coddled by the Congress for years.

It's time for the American people to demand proper representation by the Congress.

Bipartisan Whitewater probe could help Clintons

The Whitewater rafting in Washington has hurled the Clintons into a whirlpool from which there is no escape except appointment of an independent special prosecutor.

There will be undertow until Bill and Hillary Rodham Clinton's dealings with their Arkansas friend and S&L honcho James McDougal go through the scrutiny of an investigation conducted outside the partisan sway of Congress, the White House or the president's Justice Department.

For years, this case has been the subject of limited probing under the Resolution Trust Corp.'s mandate in 1989 to follow the lost money from McDougal's failed Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan. Now, it has bubbled to the surface with force.

To get a special prosecutor on the job, Congress has to reauthorize this method of investigating Washington's own. The two most celebrated uses of a special prosecutor have come at Republican political expense, in Watergate and Iran-Contra. Now, Republican criticism of the special prosecutor concept has died quite suddenly.

When the partisan bickering is over, the real issue of a special prosecutor is how to keep perspective. The president needs trust to govern. Whitewater is impeding that trust and must be dealt with independently.

Ruling on condom program puts parents back in process

To combat the spread of AIDS, New York City schools have been passing out condoms on demand to students in public high schools. Critics contended the program would more likely send a tacit message of approval for teen-age sex than curtail a deadly disease. Advocates insisted that since some teens will have sex anyway, they should be as safely protected from AIDS as possible.

Now a state appellate court has come down on the side of the critics, but in a way that puts this whole controversy in its proper perspective. In ruling against the distribution program, the court found that the third party — parents — were left out of the process, violating both their constitutional rights and state health laws that require parental consent for health services to minors.

What a welcome outcome. Despite its worthwhile objective, the New York City program was arrogantly imposed by an administration that believed it was a better surrogate for the system's large adolescent population. A litany of arguments was used in defense of abrogating parental rights.

Those arguments, made in the name of facing reality, never made much sense because they ignored other realities. For one thing, condoms are readily available at the corner drug store. . . . For another, there never was any guarantee that adolescents who intended to engage in sex would seek out condoms at school, or anywhere else. So why not emphasize AIDS education in the classroom, rather than turn schools into condom distribution centers?

WILLIAM MURCHISON

America develops scandal fetish

So now Whitewatergate: its own investigating counsel, its own hearings, its own presidential target. Make that joint target. Unlike Watergate, the present sensation — the word "scandal" seems premature — features the first lady, who is apparently the family's lead businessperson.

Murchison

Other than that — well, it's the same-old same-old. What we do for fun in Washington, and have done virtually without intermission for 20 years, is investigate our national leaders. The media love it and so does the official opposition. As it happens, this is why we investigate: not because the virtuous are suddenly seized of a compulsion to put down the wicked, but because, having integrated investigation into the political process, we can't think of another way to live.

It started naturally with Watergate, the daddy of all "gates" — Lancegate, Billygate, Iran-/Contragate and so on. (There were trial runs in 1969 and 1970, involving two Nixon appointees to the Supreme Court, Clement Haynsworth and G. Harrold Carwell, and what was left of their reputations after anti-Nixonians had their say.)

Watergate was the great liberal and Democratic catharsis after Vietnam and the '60s — the great take-that-wise-guy for all the frustration liberals had suffered since the Great Society fell apart. Mrs. Clinton needs no reminders of the Watergate period: On graduating from Yale Law School, she became a counsel to the House Judiciary Committee that was inquiring into Richard Nixon's possible impeachment.

Nixon, a keenly intelligent man who made the episode worse, and grimier, than it absolutely had to be, was the anointed fall guy. The nation, in the end, suffered worse than Nixon. The energy crisis, the downfall of South Vietnam, recession, soaring inflation, national decline, a doomsday sultriness in the atmosphere stemmed from Watergate as much as from anything else.

Watergate also deeply affected the way Americans practice politics. Watergate showed you needn't depend on elections to vanquish your adversaries. You can show them up before the American people, on television. All that's needed is a suspicion, well or poorly grounded, that can be theatrically exploited.

From sideshow to sideshow we've flitted: Bert Lance's finances, Richard Allen's wristwatches, Anne Gorsuch Burford at the Environmental Protection Agency, James Watt at the Interior Department, Ollie North and the seven-year Iran/contra blowout, Robert Bork, Judge Douglas Ginsburg, Clarence Thomas and Anita Hill. Pasts and pastimes butchered to make a Roman holiday.

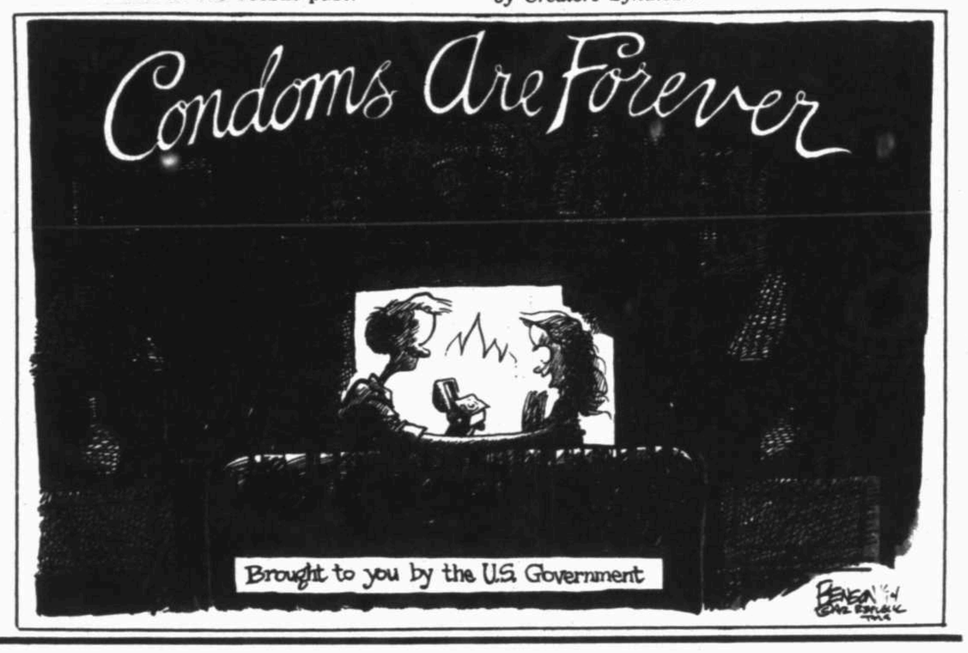

Now Whitewatergate: concerning which the Clintons are furious. How dare we look over their shoulders! I have news for them: We dare because the Democrats looked over so many other shoulders in the recent past.

Is Whitewatergate the payback for Watergate, Borkgate, Olliegate and so on? I wouldn't say so. It's in part the consequence of questionable behavior by the Clintons, in part the product of the new spirit of suspicion that Democrats have done so much to foster.

Whitewatergate produces contradictory feelings. On the one hand, it may undercut the Clintons' hypercostly plan for socialized medicine in drag. On the other hand, it commences a long national argument; an argument whose consequences, as with Watergate, we can't begin to foresee.

We have to do this because the Clintons did something that looks funny and because the inquisitorial spirit is upon us as a people. But surely that doesn't make us yearn less for the days when inquisitors were folk one heard of only in history: wearing robes and long beards, shaking fanatical fingers.

CHARLEY REESE

Politicos offer miraculous easy answers

Well, let's see what the folks in Washington are all excited about these days.

They want people to use condoms. They want to ban semiautomatic guns and cigarette smoking. Well, by golly, this country must be in pretty great shape if all it needs is the proliferation of one inanimate object and the elimination of two others.

Reese

Shame on me. I thought we had a lot of problems, like budget deficits, inefficient government, lousy trade policies, a crumbling infrastructure, systematic loss of good paying jobs, chronic unemployment, rising rates of illegitimacy, a fraudulent and ineffective war on drugs, single-parent families, children who won't study, public corruption, public stupidity, a confused and/or nonexistent foreign policy, a decaying environment, uncontrolled immigration, the return of TB and an AIDS epidemic.

It just goes to show you how wrong you can be when you don't have faith in the politicians.

Why, the president and his wife have told us that they can provide portable, affordable health care to people who don't have it at no extra cost and no loss of freedom to choose.

Heck, we must not have had a real health-care problem if it's that easy to solve. I am continuously amazed at the miracles produced by politicians and by their easy answers.

Take, for example, Treasury Secretary Lloyd Bentsen, that worthy millionaire gentleman who sucks up agricultural subsidies like a frog eats flies and who once charged lobbyists $10,000 for the privilege of eating breakfast with him. (Sir, I have known worthy statesmen, and you, Mr. Bentsen, are no worthy statesman.)

He said just the other day how awful it is that federal gun licenses don't cost more money. Well, since the government of which he is a part sets the fees, that ought to be easy enough to remedy. Of course, there is no real reason for the federal government to license businesses dealing in firearms in the first place. That nonsense was created in 1968 by the Gun Control Act, which was patterned after Nazi law.

And if Bentsen has forgotten, the fees were low because the purpose of the act at that time was not to keep people out of the gun business, but to set up a backdoor system of national registration of firearms and firearms owners. Dealers were already licensed by state and local governments, which had tougher requirements than the federal law. Having accomplished the registration scheme, however, the feds are now ready to eliminate small businesses that deal in firearms.

Naturally, Bentsen doesn't mention any of this, but talks as if eliminating federally licensed, federally regulated and federally inspected gun dealers — who must maintain detailed records of every firearm acquired or sold — is going to make a huge dent in crime.

Frankly, a law or a new license fee is about as likely to change the behavior of a criminal psychopath as the Clintons are to provide a decent health care system at no additional cost or loss of quality.

As a matter of fact, I have noticed that despite the government's ban on cocaine, marijuana and heroin, all three continue to be available in fairly copious quantities. I doubt seriously that a ban on smoking and semiautomatics will cause either to disappear.

But there I go again. Oh me of little faith. I keep forgetting that these elitist blowhards know better than the rest of us what is good for us. I keep forgetting that we are supposed to put aside the sorry message of their personal behavior, hypocrisy and low character and accept their words as if they came form the mouth of a wise angel.

WILLIAM SAFIRE

What 'terrible secret' made Foster do it?

WASHINGTON — What terrible secret drove Vincent Foster, the Clintons' personal lawyer, to put a bullet through his head?

When that question was posed in this space last summer ("Was dread of further scandal a triggering cause of the apparent suicide?") Clinton aides blamed Foster's state of mind on the cruel, mean-spirited Washington press corps, with its focus on "travelgate."

Safire

Questions about a lawyer with a guilty conscience were denounced as ghoulish, the product of a conspiratorial mindset.

We subsequently learned that there was indeed a scandal brewing that involved the Clintons, a go-go banker crony who financed their Whitewater real estate deal and an S&L failure, now under criminal investigation, that cost taxpayers $60 million.

Vince Foster improperly kept the potentially damaging records of that deal in his White House office. Surely crossing his mind after the furor over the abuse of power in travel office patronage was the potential of far greater disgrace or prosecution in a money-and-influence scandal.

From the moment Foster's body was found, White House Counsel Bernard Nussbaum acted to keep those Whitewater files away from prying eyes.

The investigation was confined to the Keystone-Kop Park Police; Clinton lawyers refused to let them or the FBI see papers that might have revealed the suicide motive; and then — secretly — the files were spirited away from the White House to the President's personal lawyer.

When the existence of the hidden file came to light, the Clintons stonewalled. Hillary Rodham Clinton, attorney for the rotted-out S&L while her husband was responsible for its regulation, professed not to understand why anybody would be interested in a deal that lost them $60,000. But curiously, the Clintons never took that loss, if it existed, off their income taxes; more strangely, they wrongly took other deductions, and the lawyer who worked with Hillary on these returns was Vincent Foster.

During the '92 campaign, to cover up the messy record, Foster arranged for a lawyer to hire a Denver accountant to whitewash Whitewater; the Patten, McCarthy report omitted the largest transaction undertaken by Clinton's partnership — a half-million-dollar land purchase from a paper company to which Governor Clinton granted tax breaks.

After the mean, insensitive press raised a ruckus to produce the Whitewater files, President Clinton was forced to agree to "cooperate" with the investigation of the bank's taxpayer ripoff. He directed his personal lawyer to turn the Whitewater files over to the Justice Department — a far cry from public disclosure.

But a curious lassitude overtook Clinton Justice. The files were not turned over forthwith; instead we were told they were being "catalogued," which the White House said would take "a couple of weeks."

Only Wednesday, as this and other denunciations were being written, did one box containing Foster's files, and four boxes of backup to the accountants' whitewash, begin to get delivered.

Were the files so voluminous to require "cataloguing"? Can we be sure the documents did not get the treatment given the so-called suicide note, which appeared belatedly in 27 pieces, not one with a fingerprint, and with the signature space missing?

If I were Louis Freeh, the new FBI director chosen by Nussbaum and known as "Bernie's Good Deed," I would follow up by searching for a Foster safety deposit box or home strongbox, and would demand that Justice seek subpoenas to force the Clintons and their former law partners and accountants to produce all other relevant papers.

What could explain the Clintons' document shell game that has been going on since the discovery of Foster's body?

Actions taken by lawyer-investor Hillary Clinton in 1988, when she requested power of attorney to "manage and conduct all matters related to Whitewater Development Corp." may soon come under the statute of limitations.

Special in-house counsel? Not unless it's Robert Morgenthau; better to use this pressure for House passage of the Independent Counsel Act.

No politician is so stupid as to try to hide something when there is nothing to hide. The Clintons' pattern of behavior in Whitewatergate is that of wheeler-dealers with something serious to hide. Let's hope it's only politically embarrassing.

East grapples with record snows, icy temperatures

By Roger Petterson
Associated Press

Up to 30 inches of snow piled up on a layer of ice and brought parts of the Ohio Valley sliding to a halt Monday, with National Guardsmen mobilized and major highways shut down. Schools were closed from Missouri to Pennsylvania.

"Nobody's moving," said Willie Duley, co-owner of a service station in Morgantown, W.Va. "It's pretty bad."

A new blast of North Pole air was rushing in behind the snowstorm, and Devils Lake, N.D., had a midmorning wind chill of 92 below zero. Without factoring in the wind, Garrison, Minn., was the coldest spot in the Lower 48 states at 32 below zero, the National Weather Service said.

At least 18 deaths were blamed on snow, ice and cold during the holiday weekend.

Schools not already closed for the Martin Luther King Jr. holiday were shut because of snow- and ice-covered roads in parts of Missouri, South Dakota Minnesota, Illinois, Indiana, Michigan, Ohio, Kentucky, West Virginia, Virginia, northern Georgia and Pennsylvania. Many businesses and some shopping malls also closed.

Minnesota and Indiana also canceled public school classes on Tuesday.

By midday Monday, lighter snow and freezing rain extended into New England. A frozen water main broke at the Capitol in Hartford, Conn., flooding the basement and forcing the evacuation of the few people who had gone to work on the holiday.

State government offices were ordered closed in 15 South Carolina counties and western Maryland because of ice-covered highways. The West Virginia Legislature cut back its Monday session and the Pennsylvania House canceled sessions for the week.

Ohio Gov. George Voinovich, West Virginia Gov. Gaston Caperton and Kentucky Gov. Brereton Jones declared emergencies to mobilize National Guard troops and equipment. It was the second such emergency in West Virginia in two weeks.

Louisville, Ky., Mayor Jerry Abramson also declared a state of emergency after 16 inches of snow fell, the most in the city's history. About 20,000 people in the Louisville area were without power, and utility officials said it might take as long as three days to restore electricity.

Traffic was at a standstill throughout most of the Louisville area and even some snowplows were stuck. National Guard troops used four-wheel-drive vehicles to rescue stranded motorists.

Second week of Bobbitt sex mutilation trial to begin today

MANASSAS, Va. (AP) — The Lorena Bobbitt trial begins its second week with promises of more sordid details of events leading up to the night she sliced off her husband's penis.

Last week's testimony portrayed Mrs. Bobbitt as both afraid of her husband and afraid to leave him. Friends, neighbors and co-workers described seeing domestic abuse or evidence of it.

The trial was scheduled to resume today with further testimony from Mrs. Bobbitt's psychiatrist. Dr. Susan Fiester testified Friday that she believes Mrs. Bobbitt was a battered wife who suffered from depression.

Mrs. Bobbitt, 24, is charged with malicious wounding in the June 23, 1993, attack on her husband. Her lawyers claim she was temporarily insane.

Mrs. Bobbitt tearfully testified over two days that the polite man she married quickly turned into a quick-tempered, jealous husband who needed little provocation to belittle and beat her.

Bobbitt took the stand last week and denied he ever beat or raped his wife during their four years of marriage.

While cross-examining Mrs. Bobbitt last week, Assistant Commonwealth's Attorney Mary Grace O'Brien hinted there may be a witness who will testify that Mrs. Bobbitt vowed to cut off her husband's penis if she caught him having an affair.

DEAR ABBY

Writer describes dilemma of childless couple

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR READERS: An anonymous reader sent me this piece (which I've slightly edited) I think you will appreciate. I hope the author will identify himself (or herself) and claim the credit — or blame, depending on the way you interpret it.

Van Buren

THE CHILDLESS COUPLE

There is nothing sadder than a childless couple. It breaks my heart to see them relaxing around swimming pools in Florida, sitting all suntanned and miserable on the decks of their boats — trotting off to Europe like lonesome fools. It's an empty life. Nothing but money to spend, more time to enjoy, and a whole lot less to worry about.

The poor childless couple are so wrapped in themselves, you have to feel sorry for them. They don't fight over the child's discipline, don't blame each other for the child's most obnoxious characteristics, and they miss all the fun of doing without for the child's sake. They just go along, doing what they want, buying what they want, and liking each other. It's a pretty pathetic picture.

Everyone should have children. No one should be allowed to escape the wonderful experience that accompanies each stage in the development of the young — the happy memories of sleepless nights, coughing spells, tantrums, diaper rash, debts, "dipso" baby sitters, saturated mattresses, emergencies and never-ending crises.

The real fulfillment comes as the child grows like a little acorn into a real nut. The wonder of watching your overweight ballerina make a fool of herself in a leotard. The warm smile of a small lad with the sun glittering on 500 bucks worth of braces ruined on peanut brittle.

How dismal is the peaceful home without the constant childish problems that make for a well-rounded life and an early breakdown; the tender, thoughtful discussions when the report card reveals the progeny to be one step below a moron; the end-of-the-day reunions with all the joyful happenings recited like well-placed blows to the temple.

Children are worth it all. Every moment of anxiety, every sacrifice, every complete collapse pays off as a fine, sturdy adolescense is reached. The feeling of reward the first time you took the boy hunting — he didn't mean to shoot you; the lad was excited. Remember how he cried? How sorry he was? And how much better you felt after the blood transfusion? These are the times a man with a growing son treasures — memories that are captured forever in the heart and the limp.

Think back to the night of romantic adventure when your budding daughter eloped with the village idiot. What childless couple ever shared in the stark realism of that drama? Aren't you a better man for having lived richly, fully, acquiring that tic in your left eye? Could a woman without children touch the strength and heroism of your wife as she tried to fling herself out of the bedroom window?

The childless couple live in a vacuum. They fill their lonely days with golf, vacation trips, dinner dates, civic affairs, tranquility, leisure and entertainment. There is a terrifying emptiness without children, but the childless couple are too comfortable to know it.

You just have to look at them to see what the years have done: He looks boyish, unlined and rested; she's slim, well-groomed and youthful. It isn't natural. If they had had kids, they'd look like the rest of us — worn out, wrinkled and exhausted.

Texans adjust to earthquake in S. California

Several Texas businesses faced difficulties in the wake of the California earthquake that devastated the Los Angeles-area.

American Airlines canceled about 20 flights into and 20 flights out of Los Angeles International Airport Monday following the early morning earthquake that measured 6.6 on the Richter scale and killed at least two dozen people.

"We canceled some flights and put people on later flights," said John Hotard, a spokesman for Fort Worth-based American. "We haven't had anybody left at the airport who wanted to come out of LA. It may not have been at the hour they wanted, but at least they got out of there."

The LA airport, the country's fourth busiest, was closed for part of the morning, canceling flights while inspectors examined runways.

The shutdown and other problems forced the cancellation of only six Continental Airlines flights.

"We operate over 2,000 flights daily, so six earthquake cancellations didn't have much of an affect on our system," said Ned Walker, a spokesman for Houston-based Continental Airlines.

Many Texans had difficulty trying to reach friends and family in California by telephone as lines were either down or jammed by heavy use.

"Several switching offices are operating on back-up generators due to the loss of commercial power in many locations," said a statement from Irving-based GTE Telephone Operations. "Some communities are unavailable for incoming or outgoing long distance service, but we are working to restore this service as quickly as possible."

Upcoming 63-acre park in east Midland to feature T-ball fields

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

Developments planned this year for a 63-acre park in east Midland — midway from completion — will include T-ball fields, a park road, planting trees and parking improvements.

"Currently, we are going into the third year of what is a five-year development plan," said Chuck Swallow, assistant director of community services.

The Reyes-Mashburn-Nelms Park is situated just south of the intersection of Fairgrounds and Golf Course roads.

"The location is within five minutes drive time for the entire southeast community," Swallow said.

Reyes-Mashburn-Nelms is a much-needed park and will be the only multi-use one in that part of the city, he said.

"It is something we can use on this side of town," said Juluis Brooks, District 2 representative. "I think the kids are going to benefit."

The park is one of four community parks — one in each quadrant of the city — slated in the city's master plan, Swallow said.

Manning thinks court should run like top company

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

Marvin Manning, who proposes to manage Midland County government "like a business," is campaigning for the Democratic Party nomination for Precinct 2 commissioner on the five-member Commissioners' Court.

Manning

"I don't think the county commissioners are running the county like a business," Manning, 58, said. "I think they are wasting a lot of taxpayers' money."

Since he is "living in the county and having a business in town," Manning said he feels he "can work with the people out in the county and in town."

Manning and a friend, James Brooks, a farmer-businessman in the Greenwood community, are seeking the Democratic Party nomination for the post in the March 8 primary elections.

"We are friends, and we will be friends after this is over," said Brooks, 54.

Manning agreed.

Winner of the Manning-Brooks race will go up against the victor of the Republican Party primary election for commissioner in the Nov. 8 general election.

Authorities drop homicide charge against senior

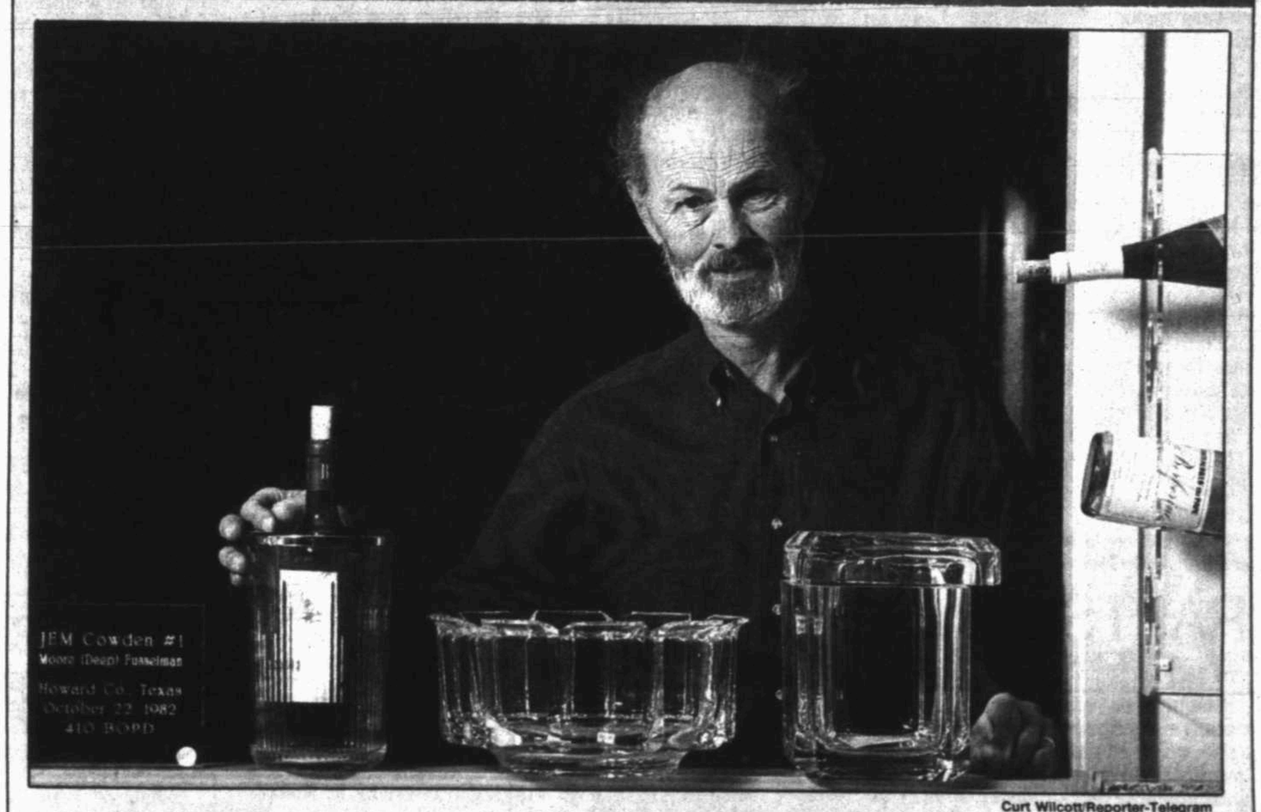

By Gary Shanks
Staff Writer

Murder charges were dropped last week in the case of a 91-year-old Odessa woman who was alleged to have killed her husband by striking him in the head with a walking cane in early 1991.

The indictment of Fay Irene Bradley states that on March 15, 1991, Mrs. Bradley "intentionally and knowingly" caused the death of her husband, William Bradley, by striking him with the cane. She was not charged and arrested until June 17 of that year.

Mrs. Bradley had been caring for her husband of 67 years, who reportedly suffered from Alzheimer's Disease or a similar mentally-degenerative condition, according to Abner Burnett, attorney for Mrs. Bradley.

Acrylic art reflects light, genius

■ Sculptor's gleaming works can be found in oil barons' living rooms, fancy Dallas bars.

On first glance, a North Midland shop has tables laden with crystal and sparkling glassware. But a second look reveals that every platter, plaque and pencil box is made of acrylic.

And the craftsman behind the transparent acrylic products has fashioned everything from a 16-foot, 6,600-pound sculpture for the Dallas' Loews Anatole Hotel to plaques displaying tubes of petroleum from producing oil fields in West Texas.

"Independent oil operators put samples of oil in the plaques, to give to investors," said Reu Richards, a Midlander since 1969, who creates his products in a workshop fronted by a gift shop at Acrylic Image, 1007 Pueblo.

CRAFTSMAN: Sculptor cites patience

(From 1B)

ards, became a 40-year vocation.

His craftsmanship caught the eye of Sign Business magazine, which featured Richards as the cover story for November. Billed as having a national reputation for "incomparable workmanship in acrylic fabrication," Richards said his vocation is "labor intensive."

"For example, I spent 15 hours making, sanding and buffing that pedestal," he said, pointing to a four-foot high pedestal, held together seamlessly by an invisible cement glue.

"The quality pieces have bubble-free joints. It means there are no bubbles in the glue," said JoAnne Richards, Reu's wife of 36 years. She is a longtime Midland real estate agent and she now operates the acrylic gift shop.

"Light comes through the edges and bubbles reflect the light, and are very visible," Richards said.

He said working with acrylic requires a steady hand, keen eye and patience. "And when you consider the expense (acrylic ranges from $7.06 per square foot for ¼-inch thick to $185 for 4-inch thick sheets) you have to be careful. Like Ross Perot says: 'Measure twice, cut once,'" he said.

His fastidious attention to detail, which results in flawless pieces, has made his handiwork popular with private collectors, decorators and museums across the country.

In a videotape on his techniques, produced to aid budding craftsmen and college students, Richards notes acrylic is gaining in popularity because it is strong, lightweight (about 50 percent lighter than glass), durable and easy to form and contour into various shapes.

His largest project, designed by sculptor Mike Cunningham, is the centerpiece in the Dallas Loews Anatole bar. Appearing like a massive twisted 16-foot tower of glistening ice, the 6,600-pound piece was made in Midland and shipped to Dallas in halves.

"It was made with 4-inch pieces of acrylic, the thickest made," Richards said. He painstakingly sanded and buffed the sculpture to its high glossy sheen.

Some of his bases for artwork also have the appearance of wet, carved ice, a sheen obtained by sanding, buffing, or "polishing" the acrylic with flame (in the case of small pieces).

Richards said a frosted finish, popular in sculptures, is achieved through sandblasting.

A technical wizard, and former aircraft mechanic, Richards also designs, modifies and maintains his shop tools. When not working in the shop, he relaxes by building car models.

He explains his tricks of the trade on the videotape "Techniques of Acrylic Fabrication" which is used at museums and educational institutions.

While much of his work is crafted by hand, modern technology — in the form of a digital computer — is used to monogram and etch graphic designs into pieces.

"From keychains, to clipboards, to boat windshields, to picture frames, to glass cases, to ice buckets, to walking canes, to pedestals, to paperweights to oil field apparatus, we've got it," Mrs. Richards said.

For one West Texan, the pedestal of his choice, was shaped to artfully display his saddle.

Decorators often call on the craftsman to make furniture. The Richards' dining room boasts a clear, graceful acrylic table and dining chairs.

The Kimball Art Museum in Dallas has frames and display cases made by Richards, and businesses in the Permian Basin also have brass letters cut and sautered by the craftsman.

The pieces last ages, when cared for properly. "Like the paint finish on your car, you have to treat acrylic carefully," Richards said.

He takes great pains in using razor-sharp blades, clean working surfaces, control in cutting, heating and cementing.

His technique of using fine filament line, clamps and a hypodermic needle to squeeze ultra thin lines of bubbleless cement onto seams is an art in itself.

An artist at heart, he said he gets bored with the "run of the mill pieces."

He allows there are few acrylic artisans. "Like stained glass, there is a limited field of people in this," he said.

While his skills are lauded by architects and artists nationwide, Richards said there is no mystique to working in acrylic. "You don't have to be a magician," he said.

Recreation: Officials talk about new park

(From 1B)

The park will be second in size only to Hogan Park.

The city purchased the property for the Reyes-Mashburn-Nelms park in 1990 for approximately $65,000.

Work on the park so far has included: development of Cuthbert Avenue into a main arterial leading into the park, irrigation of about 30 of the 63 acres of the park, a water well drilled to reduce by 30 percent the cost of irrigation, construction of two teen-age baseball fields and a concessions/restroom-/storage building.

In addition, $20,000 in trees were planted.

The city also is planning a park road and bids will be accepted soon.

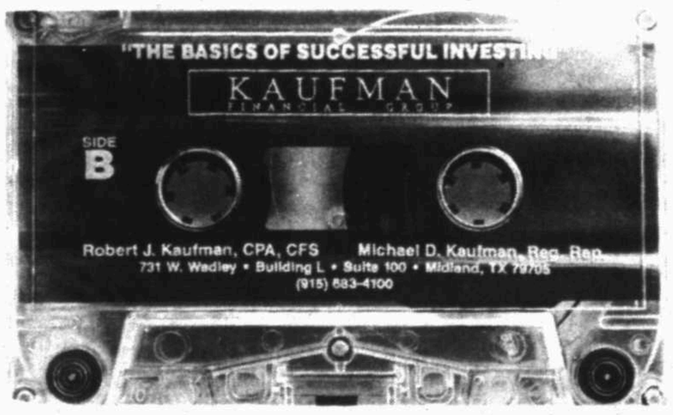

And construction of a five-field T-ball complex will start this fall and should be ready for public use in the spring of 1995.

Next year the city will work on "passive-use areas" which will include picnic shelters, public restrooms, hiking and biking trails, open space area, and playgrounds.

The park is due for completion by January 1997.

CANDIDATE: Manning cites his experience

(From 1B)

In the three-way race for the Republican Party nomination for commissioner are the incumbent, Commissioner Guy McCrary, and rivals Pat Bostick, a Midland County deputy sheriff, and Audie Porter, a salesman.

Manning has been in the automotive sales business in Midland for the past 25 years and manages real-estate property.

"I feel that the county commissioners and the Sheriff's Department should get along instead of fighting all of the time," he said.

In part, Manning was referring to a dispute, now resolved in the judicial system, over the sheriff's out-of-county jurisdiction.

"I got awfully aggravated about that deal," Manning said of the Commissioners' Court's ordering the sheriff to cease his out-of-county and out-of-state drug-related operations.

A Texas district-court judge had upheld the Commissioners' Court's policy on restricting the sheriff to county-wide law-enforcement matters but allowed the sheriff and his deputies the latitude permitted by law to travel outside Midland County on official business.

"I think if the Sheriff's Department needs to go across the world to pick up a criminal, they should be allowed to do so," Manning said.

Manning said the 1994 campaign is his first bid for a public office.

"I'm not a politician," he said. One job which he would like to have is overseeing the building and repairing of county roads in Precinct 2.

"I see all of the (rural county roads) deteriorating that need to be repaired," Manning said.

Manning said he used to be in the road-construction business as well as a tool-dresser in the oil business.

"If you do it right the first time," he said of road work, "you don't have to do them over."

"I fully intend to see after Precinct 2," which takes in much of northeast and central Midland and northeast, east and southeast Midland County, Manning said. "I will be available for everybody and anyone in Precinct 2. I fully intend to work."

Manning said that he has "worked all of my life for what I've got. I know where dollars come from."

Manning grew up on a farm near Roscoe in Nolan County.

"I've hoed enough cotton, pulled enough cotton, milked cows, fed chickens, headed maize, fed hogs, gathered eggs, and cleaned out chicken houses," he said. "I've done it all on the farm."

REMINISCE: Senior likes cars

Born Jan. 16, 1894, in Okalona, Ark., Mrs. Coppinger moved to Dunlap, N.M. when still a little girl.

Although raised on a ranch, Mrs. Coppinger said she was never an accomplished equestrian. "I was as helpless as could be on a horse," she said.

Although she had managed to master the horse and buggy, Mrs. Coppinger was glad to watch as the automobile replaced the horse as the preferred means of transportation. "Oh, that was a happy day in my life," she said of the day she traded a horse for a motor vehicle.

One thing Mrs. Coppinger has always loved is children. After graduating from Roswell High School and garnering a master's degree in Silver City and Las Vegas, N.M., she began a career of teaching.

She taught first grade for most of her teaching career, retiring at age 65. Following retirement, however, Mrs. Coppinger owned and operated a kindergarten in her home at Artesia, N.M.

"You couldn't teach as long as I did and not love children," Mrs. Coppinger explained. "My daughter used to get jealous of my children," she added.

Mrs. Coppinger taught in cities in New Mexico such as Fort Sumner before moving to Oregon where she married Sam Coppinger, a rancher and farmer, in 1924.

After teaching in Indian Mission and Gibbon, Ore., she returned to New Mexico following the death of her husband in 1948. She spent the remainder of her career teaching at Loco Hills and Artesia.

After leaving the kindergarten, Mrs. Coppinger came to Midland to be near her only child, Katherine Coppinger Chandler.

Mrs. Coppinger is a member of the Eastern Star & White Shrine, the American Association of University Women, Altrusa and the First United Methodist Church.

The Problem: Small red blood vessels on the nose & cheeks
The Solution: Laser Surgery

Laser surgery can be an effective way to remove small varicosities (veins) on the nose & cheeks. These veins occur as a result of sun damage and other factors. Laser surgery offers a superior way to remove these with little to no evidence of surgery. No down time, fast healing, and excellent results are common.

Nintendo World Class Service®

According to recent statistics published by Nintendo of America Inc., one out of every three households in the United States currently owns at least one Nintendo electronic game such as the Nintendo Entertainment System®, Super Nintendo Entertainment System® and the Nintendo Gameboy®.

This extremely large number of video games means that there has to be a highly trained and qualified support service available to do the routine maintenance and servicing.

Don Baker, one of the technicians at Delta Electronics says that, "Nintendo computer games are as complicated as small personal computers, they are packed full of integrated circuits and micro chips which are relatively delicate."

Couple this with the fact that children are notoriously bad at looking after their toys, (even grown-up children subject the games to a great deal of abuse), and it is easy to see why Delta Electronics has sent Baker and Ed Huwa of San Angelo to Nintendo's headquarters in Seattle. Washington to receive detailed training in the repair and care of these complex machines.

The games may look sleek and uncluttered from the outside, but inside they are highly sophisticated units full of advanced circuitry. Repairing them is not for the untrained, which is why Baker and Huwa (already very experienced technicians) spent a week learning the finer points of game repair.

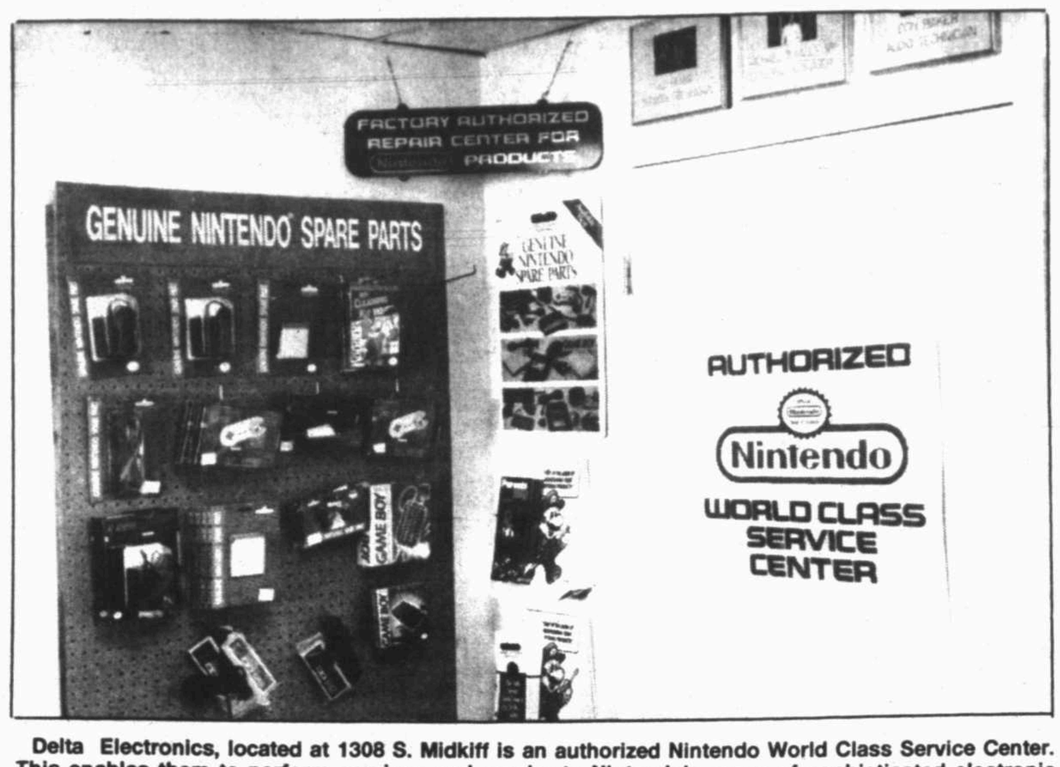

Delta Electronics is perhaps better known in the Midland area for its reliable, high quality repairs on general household electronics such as televisions, stereo systems, video cassette recorders, microwave ovens and camcorders. Now Delta has received certification as a Nintendo World Class Service Technical Team.

Because Delta works to Nintendo's own rigorous quality standards, every game unit that is brought in undergoes highly detailed testing by computer both before and after repair. Diagnostic testing programs can quickly identify any problem, enabling a fast turn around of repairs.

Each unit is then tested for up to eight hours with another program to double check all of the systems. All machines must be functioning as new before they are returned to their owners.

This kind of attention to detail comes naturally to Delta's team of of electronic technicians who have a real understanding of a subject few people know anything about.

If as piece of your electronic equipment breaks down, or if it needs servicing, be it a video camera or an electronic game, call Delta Electronics at 683-3582, or take the equipment to their service center at 1308 S. Midkiff St. Suite 303 and let them take a look.

Delta Electronics, located at 1308 S. Midkiff is an authorized Nintendo World Class Service Center. This enables them to perform services and repairs to Nintendo's range of sophisticated electronic games in addition to repairing household appliances such as video recorders, stereos and televisions.

Flag down a sign at Imperial Flag and Banner

George Leech, the owner of Imperial Flag & Banner has developed a new way of organizing his store to make it easier for customers to find advertising materials for their companies.

He has done this by arranging separate booths according to the needs of different advertisers.

For example; all of the signs, banners and flags which relate to the car business are located in the same area.

This system is also in effect for other types of business such as realtors, furniture and appliance dealers, and general advertisers.

This result of this re-organization is that companies now have even faster access to common and unusual advertising media.

Imperial Flag & Banner stocks a wide variety of signs, decals, numerals and safety warning equipment such as vests and flags in a multitude of different styles.

It is this wide range of stock which has made Imperial Flag & Banner the most unusual flag store in the State of Texas.

Although he has reworked the appearance of the store to make shopping easier for his customers, Mr Leech has retained the whole range of high quality services which have made him well known throughout the area.

In addition to the large stock of ready made items, Imperial Flag & Banner has the capacity to custom make virtually any type or size of sign, flag or banner.

George Leech, the owner of Imperial Flag & Banner displays some of the advertising materials in the Car-Dealership booth. He has re-organized his store by profession to make shopping easier.

Whether it is for a company presentation, a school band's fund-raiser or a garage sale: if it isn't in stock George Leech can make it.

The design possibilities are virtually endless: company and corporate logos, school names and mascots are all easy to turn into colorful and effective advertisements.

In addition to carrying all US State and Federal flags, Imperial Flag & Banner also carries the flags of almost every other country in the world, this opens up even more possibilities.

Stop by today at 1613 S. Main St in Midland to see how Imperial Flag & Banner large inventory can help your organization sell itself.

Cactus Motors: Serving the working people in the Permian Basin

Over the years used-car dealerships have had an inaccurate stereotype thrust upon them.

From the unscrupulous behavior of a minority has evolved the unfair image of "you pay your money and you take your chances."

Since the middle of September 1993, Cactus Motor Co. has been dispelling these myths which have surrounded pre-owned car dealerships for many years.

They are doing this a variety of ways, but the end result is that people in the Permian Basin now have a good, reliable source of pre-owned vehicles at very reasonable prices.

The staff at Cactus Motor Co. all have certain things in common, but the most important are that: between the four of them, they have over 60-years of experience in the local car business--most of it here in Midland, and they all want to provide the best possible service to their customers.

To this end they provide two things which many used car dealerships do not: a large inventory and guarantees on everything sold.

The wide inventory of over 60 vehicles covers the whole spectrum of major name brands, types of vehicles, (from large trucks to small family cars) and prices.

The end result is that Cactus Motor Co. has a vehicle and a price to suit just about everyone.

Cactus Motor Co. is able to offer a comprehensive range of guarantees on its vehicles because, as Bernie Jennings of Cactus Motor Co. puts it: "Before any vehicle is sold, it has undergone a comprehensive and thorough check of its mechanical systems and appearance."

There are many advantages of buying a pre-owned vehicle these days, one saves the new-car depreciation, insurance rates can often be lower and because prices are lower, it is easier to get bank-rate financing.

All in all, because there is very little difference between a brand new car and a pre-owned one in good condition, it is possible to save a tremendous amount of money.

For more information about Cactus Motor Co.'s inventory and financial services call Bernie Jennings, Tommy Hawkins, Refugio Arellano and Denny Cordova at 1-800 434 CARS (or 520-2277) or stop by the Cactus Motor Co. located at 3805 West Wall in Midland.

NFL 'Final Four' set

■ Final Four produces some intriguing possibilities for Super Bowl.

By Dave Goldberg
AP Football Writer

With the Super Bowl sweepstakes down to four teams, there are a couple of intriguing possibilities for the NFL championship in Atlanta on Jan. 30.

1) Kansas City vs. San Francisco, Joe Montana vs. Steve Young. Montana is still the Bay Area's favorite, Young the upstart who took the job of the man who won four NFL titles there.

2) Dallas vs. Buffalo, a rematch of last year's Super Bowl blowout, withthe Bills going for a record fourth straight loss. Last year, the Cowboys won 52-17 and it would have been worse if not for one of those Leon Lett gaffes, which seem to occur annually.

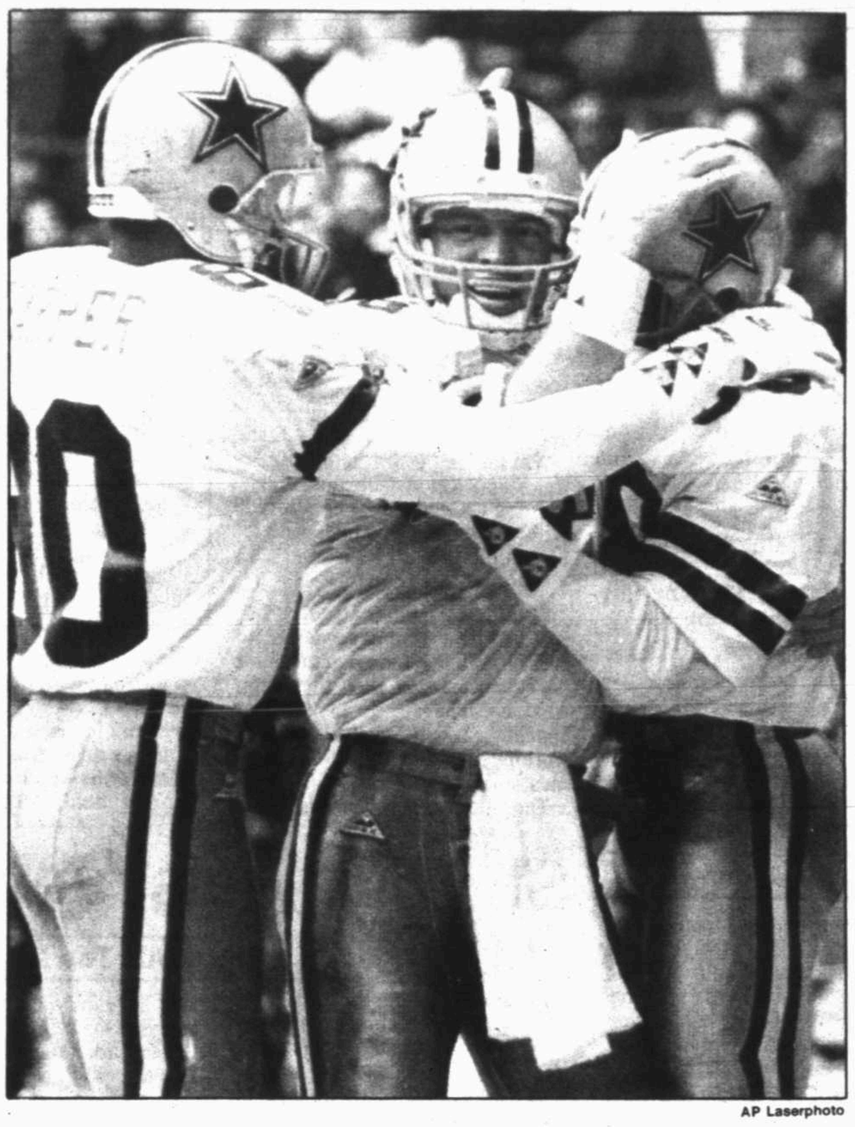

The Bills and Chiefs will meet in Buffalo next Sunday for the AFC championship, while the 49ers and Cowboys will play in Dallas for the NFC title.

It's almost as predicted — Kansas City's win in Houston on Sunday was the weekend's only upset. And it brings us four quarterbacks — Montana, Young, Jim Kelly and Troy Aikman — who have eight Super Bowl starts, four Super Bowl MVP trophies and three league MVP awards among them.

But gone with the weekend are some of the other fun possibilities — like Houston-Dallas for the championship of Texas first, then the rest of the world; Giants-Bills between Dan Reeves and Marv Levy to determine the first coaches to lose four Super Bowls; and Giants-Raiders — Phil Simms vs. Jeff Hostetler on the field instead of in the New York media.

Dallas players Troy Aikman, center, Alvin Harper, left, and Michael Irvin celebrate another Cowboy playoff victory against Green Bay Sunday.

By Denne H. Freeman

IRVING, Texas — The Dallas Cowboys have a week to cure what ails them. If they don't, they won't be defending their Super Bowl championship in Atlanta.

"We have to play smarter, harder and better," said wide receiver Michael Irvin. "If we don't, we won't be going anywhere."

The Cowboys suffered interceptions, fumbles, penalties, and kicking game breakdowns but still managed to defeat Green Bay 27-17 Sunday in the divisional playoffs.

The victory set up the NFC championship game the Cowboys wanted. They'll host the San Francisco 49ers on Sunday in a rematch of last year's title game won by the Cowboys 30-20. Dallas also defeated San Francisco 26-17 in October when Irvin caught 12 passes for 168 yards.

"The 49ers are a better team now than the one we beat back in October," said Dallas quarterback Troy Aikman. "A veteran team that has played in a lot of big games can be very dangerous."

It will be the first time the Cowboys have hosted the NFC championship game in 16 years.

They had to play at San Francisco last January and the big worry was over the condition of the field.

"At least we won't have a field as bad as that one," Irvin said. "It helps to play at home. The 49ers will have to travel and listen to all that noise on their snap counts."

Velarde signs

NEW YORK — Former Midland Lee star Randy Velarde and the New York Yankees avoided salary arbitration when they agreed Monday on a one-year contract for $1,125,000.

Velarde, 31, got a raise of $75,000. He hit .301 with seven home runs and 24 RBIs last season. He played 50 games in the outfield, 26 games at shortstop and 16 games at third base.

Velarde was on the disabled list from June 6 to July 30 with a fractured left pelvis, hurt in a collision with Hensley Meulens.

A&M on defense

COLLEGE STATION — Texas A&M football coach R.C. Slocum on Monday named University of Miami defensive coordinator Tommy Tuberville to take over the Aggies' defense.

Tuberville, 39, replaces Bob Davie, who left Texas A&M last week to become defensive coordinator at Notre Dame.

In eight seasons under Jimmy Johnson and Dennis Erickson at Miami, Tuberville was part of three national championships.

He worked mainly with the Hurricanes' defensive line and linebackers, but was promoted to defensive coordinator before the 1993 season.

Oilers' famine continues

■ Houston joins the playoff homeless for the seventh consecutive year.

By Michael A. Lutz
AP Sports Writer

HOUSTON — Houston Oilers players slipped out of their practice facility early Monday, toting off large plastic bags of personal items from their lockers.

They had become the playoff homeless for the seventh year in a row, kicked out this time by Joe Montana and the Kansas City Chiefs, 28-20, on Sunday.

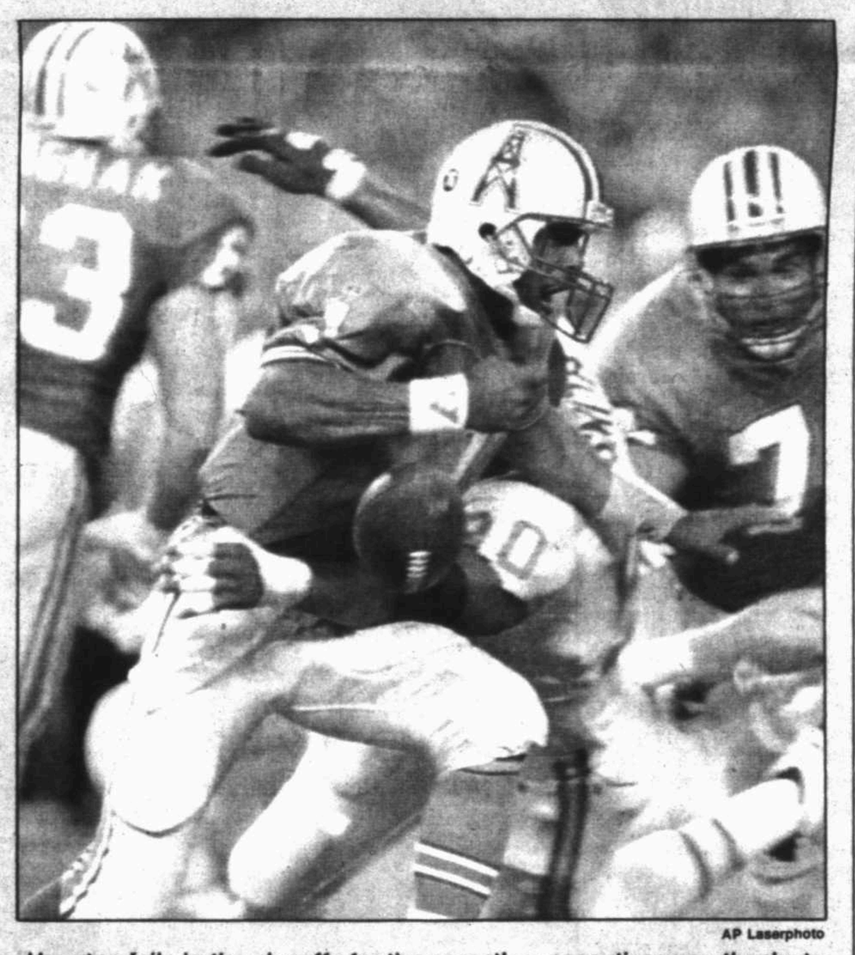

They were familiar with the depressing day-after process and they were anxious to slink into the offseason without further comment. They talked briefly and reluctantly.

All Pro guard Mike Munchak, who may have played his final season because of chronically injured knees, spoke what the rest of the team felt.

"We should have been still playing," Munchak said. "It's hard to come over here today. This is when it starts to sink in what has happened."

This was the year they were supposed to be more than just playoff also-rans. The Oilers, after overcoming a 1-4 start, were favorites to reach the big show.

Instead, for the third straight year, they blew an early lead and lost after teasing their fans once again with visions of advancing farther than the second round of the playoffs.

Houston fails in the playoffs for the seventh consecutive year, thanks to fumbling around like quarterback Warren Moon on this play.

They took little consolation in their streak of seven straight playoff appearances that is the longest in the NFL. For all their playoff visits, they've never stayed past the second round.

MHS girls find home at Chap

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

After three girl-boy doubleheaders at Chaparral Center and sole possession of first place in the District 4-5A basketball race, Midland High girls coach Jim Raughton is beginning to feel right at home on the Chap parquet.

He's feeling so much at home, in fact, that he has moved tonight's scheduled MHS gym contest with San Angelo out to the Chap for an 8 p.m. meeting with the Lady Bobcats, who are in the thick of the playoff race with a 4-2 district reading.

"I really like to play our games out here (the Chap)," Raughton said. "I'd really like to play all our games out here. I think we have a distinct advantage playing at Chaparral Center because it's hard to shoot in here if you aren't used to shooting at those suspended rims.

"Our girls feel comfortable out there and like playing at the Chap."

The MHS girls are also coming off a 49-41 Chap win over Odessa High that finally gave the Lady Bulldogs sole possession of first place at 6-0. It was a game in which 2,000 fans showed up to watch the girls, which may be the largest crowd ever to see a district girls game from start to finish.

Tennis player Jim Courier ...winning the hard way

First round produces excitement

■ Bryan Shelton troubles defending champion Jim Courier for nearly five hours before falling.

By Rob Gloster
AP Sports Writer

MELBOURNE, Australia — Just when tennis was being dismissed by critics and some of its own players as a bore, Jim Courier and Bryan Shelton provided a taste of how compelling the sport can be.

Lunging and leaping, grunting and groaning, the two Americans gave an intriguing display of power tennis as Shelton provided the perfect counterpunch to Courier's strong serve and forehand.

Courier, seeking to win a third straight Australian Open title, rallied to avoid a first-round ouster Monday. He repeatedly battled from behind, and had to capture five of the final six games to win the 4 hour, 42-minute match.

Courier's 4-6, 6-1, 6-7 (4-7), 6-2, 6-4 victory wasn't always pretty tennis, but it was exciting.

It was an answer to those who complain that men's tennis has turned into a boring battle of big servers. In recent days, players such as Ivan Lendl and Thomas Muster have said they would not pay to see today's type of tennis.

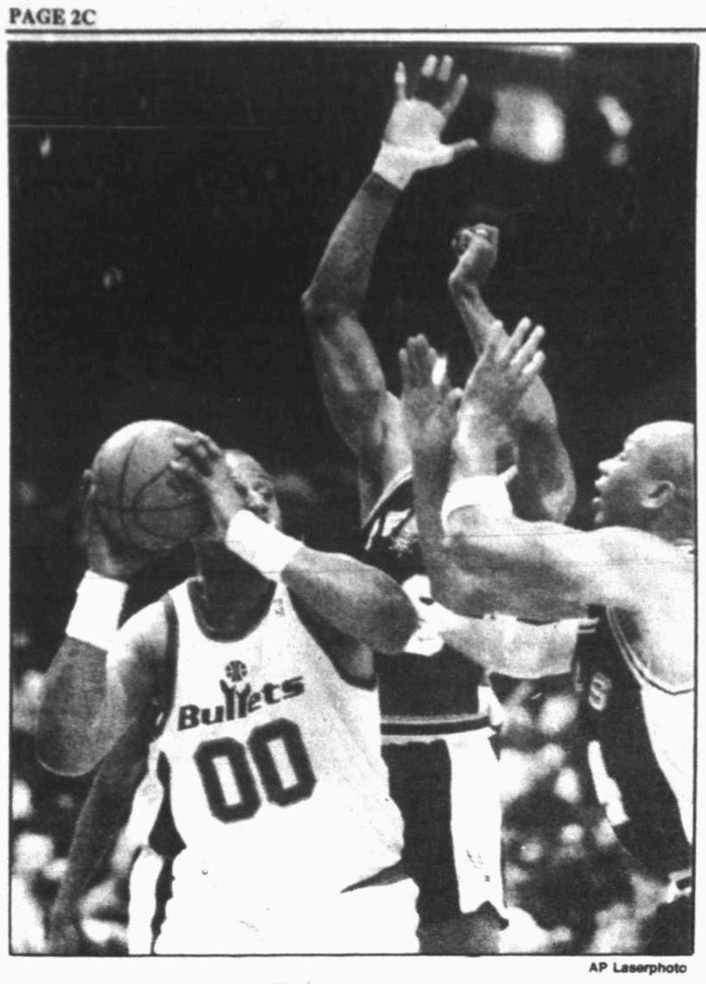

The crowd gasped as Courier and Shelton traded shots, then gestured to themselves with their rackets — sort of shadowboxing in the midday sun.

"I think they enjoyed it, because I was having fun out there," Shelton said. "I thoroughly enjoyed the experience, and I think they saw that in my face."

Top seed Pete Sampras won easily, blasting 23 aces in a 6-4, 6-0, 7-6 (7-5) defeat of Australian Joshua Eagle.

Also winning first-round matches were fifth seed Goran Ivanisevic, who delighted several hundred flag-waving Cro-

Spurs bite Bullets without Robinson

Associated Press

LANDOVER, Md. — Dale Ellis scored 16 of his 20 points before halftime as the San Antonio Spurs took control late in the first half on the way to a 100-87 win Monday over the Washington Bullets.

The Spurs (26-12) have won six in a row, matching their longest streak of the season. Washington (12-23) had a three-game winning streak broken.

The Spurs played without center David Robinson, whose string of 119 consecutive games came to an end. Robinson, the NBA's second-leading scorer (27.8 ppg) sat out the game after suffering soreness in his right knee associated with offseason surgery.

The problem did not appear to be serious, according to Spurs' spokesman Dave Senko.

Meanwhile, Washington's leading scorer Rex Chapman (18.9 ppg) suffered a dislocated right ankle with 1:04 remaining in the first quarter and was taken to a hospital for further examination. There was no word on how long he might be out of the lineup.

San Antonio led 30-24 after the first quarter, then opened a 50-40 lead at intermission. That lead grew to 68-51 on a layup by Lloyd Daniels with 4:18 remaining in the third quarter, before Tom Gugliotta hit a pair of free throws with 28 seconds left in the period to pull the Bullets within 72-61.

However, San Antonio built the lead back to 16 points with a little more than eight minutes to play, and the Bullets never came closer than 10 points.

Terry Cummings led the Spurs with 21 points, Negele Knight added 19 points and Willie Anderson 15.

Gugliotta paced Washington with 17 points, Don MacLean scored 16 and Calbert Cheaney added 14 points.

Hawks 102, Bucks 98

ATLANTA — Dominique Wilkins matched his season-high with 38 points, including 16 in the third period, as Atlanta beat Milwaukee to improve its home record to an NBA-best 17-1.

The victory was Atlanta's seventh in eight games and gave them a slight edge over Seattle (16-1) for best homecourt record. Milwaukee, which had an 11-point lead just before halftime, lost its sixth in a row.

Wilkins scored Atlanta's last four points of the first half to get the Hawks within seven, 51-44, at intermission. He then scored 11 more points as Atlanta outscored Milwaukee 17-2 in the first 3:38 of the third quarter for a 61-53 lead.

Former Midland College star Mookie Blaylock added 17 points and 13 assists for the Hawks. Tracey Augmon had 16 points and Kevin Willis had 11 points and 16 rebounds.

Knicks 106, Timberwolves 94

NEW YORK — Patrick Ewing scored 34 points and became the first New York player with 15,000 for his career as the Knicks won their fifth consecutive game.

Ewing, who earlier this season passed Walt Frazier as the Knicks' career scoring leader, had 13 points in the fourth quarter, stifling the Timberwolves' rally from a 20-point halftime deficit. The late flurry gave him 30 or more points in five of the last six games.

New York appeared set to hold an opponent under 90 points for a club-record fifth straight time when it took a 56-36 halftime lead. But the Timberwolves, who had won four of their six previous games, found the range in the second half, closing within four points four times in the fourth quarter.

■ NBA Roundup

Bulls 121, 76ers 91

CHICAGO — Scottie Pippen and B.J. Armstrong sparked a third-quarter spurt with 11 points apiece and Chicago routed Philadelphia for its 14th straight victory at home.

The Bulls, with 16 wins in their last 19 games, led by 12 at the half and broke away in the third, outscoring the Sixers 33-19 to open up a 92-66 lead.

Chicago played without forward Horace Grant, who was resting a sore knee. Corie Blount started in his place and scored a career-high 14.

The Bulls are now 24-11, compared to 25-10 through 35 games a year ago with Michael Jordan when they captured their third straight NBA title.

Cavaliers 114, Magic 107

RICHFIELD, Ohio — Gerald Wilkins scored all of his 26 points in the second half and Mark Price sank a tie-breaking 3-pointer with a minute left.

The Cavaliers blew all of a 14-point fourth-quarter lead before rallying in the final 60 seconds. Shaquille O'Neal, hampered by early foul trouble, got Orlando back in it by scoring 28 of his 31 points in the second half.

Price had 25 points and 12 assists, and Brad Daugherty had 18 points and 16 rebounds for Cleveland, which has won four straight. Anfernee Hardaway had 23 points, nine assists and seven rebounds for the Magic.

Jazz 109, Pistons 94

AUBURN HILLS, Mich. — Karl Malone had 25 points and 11 rebounds and was one assist short of a triple-double as Utah beat staggering Detroit.

The loss was Detroit's 13th straight, just one short of the franchise's single-season record. It was the Pistons' eighth straight home loss.

Utah led 60-42 at the half, and continued to score at will against the Pistons defense, getting 35 points in the third quarter to lead 95-65 with 12 minutes to play.

The Jazz led by as many as 33 in the fourth before a meaningless Detroit rally closed the gap.

Karl Malone and Jeff Malone both finished with 25 points for Utah, while John Crotty added 14 off the bench. The Pistons' lone bright spot was Greg Anderson, who finished with season-highs in points (23) and rebounds (16).

Utah was playing its fourth game in five days, but showed no signs of fatigue.

Warriors 104, Suns 99

OAKLAND, Calif. — Latrell Sprewell made two free throws with 11.8 seconds left and Dan Majerle shot an airball from 3-point range five seconds later as Golden State beat Phoenix.

Golden State won its fourth straight and ended a six-game losing streak to the Suns dating to Nov. 28, 1992.

The Warriors have won six of their last seven.

4-5A: MHS boys can tie Lee for second place

(From 1C)

gym are coming to see us play at the Chap," Raughton said. "The community has really gotten behind this team and some of them are beginning to realize that girls can play basketball."

Raughton also sees this game as an important outing for his 22-3 girls.

"All the games are big, but this is a really big game for San Angelo," Raughton notes. "If they beat us, they are right back in the race and if we wi it pretty much puts San Angelo out of the championship r e, and we need to do that so we can secure o lace as quickly as possible. hat makes ou next three games really big."

Meanwhile, the Midland High boys travel to San Angelo to face a Bobcat team at 8 p.m. that has some scoring punch.

The Bobcats own a 1-3 league record, beating Odessa High last week for its first district win in two seasons. San Angelo scored 100 points against Abilene High Friday and still lost by 36 points.

This is a potential rut in the road for MHS, but the Bulldogs have plenty of motivation since a win would give the Purple Pack a second place tie with idle Midland Lee at 4-1.

"Our kids know what is expected of them and I expect a good game against San Angelo," said MHS coach Jack Stephenson. "You have to win these games if you want to be in the race.

"We have the opportunity to end the first half with a 5-1 record if we can beat San Angelo and Abilene High in the next two games, and that's our goal. We feel like if we can be 5-1 anything can happen since we have Lee at Chaparral Center and then Abilene High and Cooper at our place (MHS gym) in the second half."

Both the Lee boys and girls have the open date tonight, and it couldn't come at a better time. The Lee boys will host Abilene Cooper (4-0) at Chaparral Center Friday with a chance to claim a share of the district lead. The Lee girls had an 0-6 first half start and it started with a loss to Cooper at home. The Lee girls now face the task of beating Cooper on the road Friday.

OILERS: Pardee sees no problems with staff

(From 1C)

Jack Pardee said. "We've blown our chances so far, but if we can get there enough, we will make it."

As the mood slowly sank in that the Oilers were once again out of the playoffs, the questions returned.

Will feuding coordinators Buddy Ryan and Kevin Gilbride return? Will the run-and-shoot be altered? Will Warren Moon be back with his $4.2 million salary?

Will his staff return?

"I think so," Pardee said. "This was the first year we worked together and the more chances we have to work together the better we'll be. The key is to get good coaches. I don't see a problem working together and getting the most out of everybody."

The run-and-shoot had another year among the top offenses in the league and it also had its detractors.

"I can't imagine anyone wanting to change an offense that's been as effective as the run-and-shoot," Gilbride said. "There's always room for improvement but I see no reach for wholesale changes."

Moon, who survived the first benching in his 10-year NFL career, wasn't trying to figure anything out on Monday.

"A lot of people are asking about my future, even my kids," Moon said. "I'm still under contract. At this point, I'm just going to take a few days off and then get ready for the Pro Bowl."

Ryan, completing a tumultuous first year as defensive coordinator, expects to return, unless a head coaching opportunity arises.

Asked about his future, he replied "Future? I've got a great future."

Ryan's defense was the biggest improvement in the overall team this season but it didn't help in the fourth quarter on Sunday when Monday directed the Chiefs to two touchdowns in a 54-second span.

"Our defense played super," Ryan said. "But that other team is a playoff team and Montana is one of the best quarterbacks in the league. What happened was, they were fortunate and we were unfortunate."

Dear Buddy Ryan, there is still Dallas

IRVING, Texas (AP) — Don't despair if you're fired by the Houston Oilers, Buddy Ryan. You have a buddy at Valley Ranch.

Dallas coach Jimmy Johnson said on Monday he would consider hiring the controversial defensive coordinator of the Oilers if he got the axe from Houston owner Bud Adams.

"I would consider it in all seriousness," Johnson said. "I think he could help a team. He's a talented coach."

Johnson and Ryan have exchanged insults since Ryan was the head coach of the Philadelphia Eagles.

Johnson said, "Oh, maybe my ego couldn't handle Buddy having competing press conferences."

Someone mentioned Johnson had a press conference rival in owner Jerry Jones.

"The only thing is he (Jones) signs my check," Johnson said.

St. Louis gets ranked; No. 1 Kansas stubs toe

■ AP Top 25

ST. LOUIS (AP) — St. Louis broke into the Associated Press Top 25 for the first time since the 1960s on Monday, but coach Charlie Spoonhour insisted it was no big deal.

"I never follow the polls. You see so many," Spoonhour said Monday at his weekly media luncheon. "At best, they're an inexact science. We're only halfway through the season. If it were at the end of the season, it would be really nice."

The Billikens (14-0), one of only two remaining undefeated Division I teams, entered Monday's poll at No. 23, the first time St. Louis made the rankings since the 1964-65 season when it got as high as fourth.

Kansas was back as the No. 1 team, 364 days after last moving into the top spot. UCLA, the only other undefeated team (11-0), was second. However, Kansas lost to unranked state rival Kansas State Monday night, 68-64, and the Jayhawks may not be in the No. 1 slot much longer.

Anthony Beane hit a floating, one-hander from the lane with 12 seconds left Monday night, lifting Kansas State past No. 1 Kansas barely 12 hours after the Jayhawks ascended to the top ranking.

Beane broke a 64-64 tie with the basket, penetrating the defense and pulling up for the shot. He then sank two free throws with 1.9 seconds to play to send Kansas State past its bitterest rival and end a 12-game winning streak for the Jayhawks (16-2, 2-1 Big Eight).

St. Louis finally started receiving national attention with its last three victories — at Arizona State, decisively over Memphis State at home and at DePaul. The Billikens came from a 12-point second half deficit to beat DePaul 80-71 Saturday.

"Being ranked is exciting for everyone in our program, but anyone who's seen us play knows that we aren't quite ready to get too enamored with ourselves just yet," Spoonhour said.

Spoonhour said he didn't talk about the ranking with his players when they practiced Monday morning.

DALLAS: 'Boys rated 5½-point favorites

(From 1C)

There is still private concern over the condition of Emmitt Smith's shoulder although he says he is fine. Smith reinjured the shoulder on Sunday trying to block Tony Bennett.

"It stung me pretty good," said Smith, who rushed for 60 yards before he left the game early in the second half.

Smith seemed more concerned over the way the team was playing than his shoulder problems.

"The way we played there was no way possible we could have beaten San Francisco," Smith said.

Former 49er Charles Haley said he was going to have no problem getting psyched for the game.

"I'm going to go home and put on my old uniform so I can get ticked off," Haley said.

Dallas coach Jimmy Johnson said Smith will start Sunday's game and added, "We anticipate he will be a lot better. The big problem Emmitt will have is blocking on pass protection."

Johnson did admit that Smith isn't 100 per cent.

"Emmitt looks OK and OK is not real good for Emmitt," Johnson said.

Defensive lineman Russell Maryland, who was inactive against the Packers because of a sprained ankle, jogged on his sore leg and could be ready for Sunday's game.

Oddsmakers made the Cowboys early 5½-point favorites.

"It's to our advantage to be playing home," Johnson said. "Our guys play better here and we won't have to worry about the condition of the field."

FOUR: One shoulder key for SF-Dallas tilt

(From 1C)

would have added Jimmy Johnson to the mix of old Buddy Ryan enemies. Remember the "Bounty Bowl," when Johnson claimed that Ryan, then head coach in Philadelphia, had put a bounty on kicker Luis Zendejas, who had been cut by the Eagles a few weeks earlier?

But we have what we have and this is what it looks like:

Chiefs (13-5) at Bills (13-4)

The Chiefs won 23-7 on Nov. 28, but that was in Kansas City, not in the arctic wasteland that Rich Stadium becomes every January. The Bills are 7-0 in playoff games there, although not all have been easy, including Saturday's 29-23 win over the Raiders.

The key may be the Kansas City defense, which came alive against Houston with nine sacks. Montana's magic helped — two touchdown passes in 54 seconds of the fourth quarter — but the second was set up by Derrick Thomas' sack that forced a Warren Moon fumble at the Houston 12.

Still, Montana threw for 299 yards, his high as a Chief, and would have had more if he hadn't had some drops in the first half.

Kelly also had his best game this season for the Bills on Saturday, 27 of 37 for 287 yards.

"I've seen him in tune to what's going on, but he was unbelievable," said center Kent Hull. "He had so many things to think about because of the different fronts they threw at us."

This one probably comes down to turnovers. The Bills forced 45 this season to lead the league; the Chiefs got four on Sunday against the Oilers in their best defensive performance of the seasons since ... Nov. 28, when they beat Buffalo and intercepted Kelly three times.

49ers (11-6) at Cowboys (13-4)

A rematch of last season's NFC title game, won by the Cowboys in San Francisco 30-20.

The teams also met Oct. 17 in Dallas and the Cowboys won 26-17, but it was a one-point game until Marc Logan fumbled just as the Niners seemed poised to take the lead. Tom Rathman, whom Logan was replacing, is now back at fullback.

One key: Emmitt Smith's separated left shoulder. He played little in the second half of Sunday's 27-17 win over Green Bay and finished with 60 yards on 13 carries. The Cowboys seemed to play with little intensity and lost a fumble and two interceptions.

"The way we played today, there's no way we can beat San Francisco," Smith said.

Intensity is what the 49ers had against the Giants. After losing three of their last four games — all the losses were essentially meaningless — the Niners blew New York out of Candlestick 44-3, sending Lawrence Taylor into retirement following the worst defeat of his career.

This came after two weeks of uncharacteristic tirades by the usually soft-spoken George Seifert, and it worked. The Niners, considered a laid-back team even in their best years, played with a ferocity they normally disdain.

Can they get it back Sunday?

It probably depends on the health of Smith's shoulder. If he can get his normal 100 yards, it opens up the passing game for Michael Irvin, who is at his best in big games.

Dorsett enters College Hall

LARCHMONT, N.Y. (AP) — Tony Dorsett, the Heisman Trophy winner from Pittsburgh whose 6,082 career rushing yards is the most in NCAA Division I-A, joined the College Football Hall of Fame on Monday along with 13 others.

Vince Dooley, whose Georgia team won the national title in 1980, was one of two coaches and 12 All-American players to enter the hall. Induction is scheduled for Dec. 6.

Others players chosen by the National Football Foundation were Bob Babich of Miami of Ohio, Steve Eisenhauer of Navy, Larry Elkins of Baylor, Pete Elliott of Michigan, Tucker Frederickson of Auburn, Jerry Groom of Notre Dame, John Hadl of Kansas, Gifford Nielsen of Brigham Young, Ozzie Newsome of Alabama, Marvin Powell of Southern Cal and Randy White of Maryland.

The other coach was the late John Merritt of Jackson State and Tennessee State.

In 1973, Dorsett became the first freshman in 29 years to be named to the All-America team. He is the only major college runner with three 1,500-yard seasons.

Dorsett, who also is on the ballot this year for the Pro Football Hall of Fame after a brilliant career with the Dallas Cowboys, holds 18 NCAA records.

Blockbuster expands Virgin alliance

■ Fort Lauderdale, Fla.-based video rental company buys 20 percent stake; sale offers both parents potential for cross-marketing.

Associated Press

MIAMI — Blockbuster Entertainment Corp., awaiting a merger with Viacom Inc., said Monday it is expanding its alliance with the Virgin airline and entertainment empire run by British entrepreneur Richard Branson.

Blockbuster issued $30 million worth of new stock to buy a 20 percent stake in Virgin Interactive Entertainment PLC, which develops and publishes video games for the Nintendo and Sega game systems.

The sale offers both parents the potential for cross-marketing. The Fort Lauderdale, Fla.-based video rental company will be able to profit by licensing new products through its Spelling and Republic studio holdings. And Virgin, based in England, will get access to Blockbuster stores for sale and rental of its games.

Virgin also would benefit if the bid for Paramount Communications Inc. made by Blockbuster and cable TV network owner Viacom Inc. succeeds over a competing offer from cable shopping company QVC Network Inc.

Blockbuster announced earlier this month it had agreed to be taken over by Viacom, which in turn is trying to buy Paramount. Viacom has been locked in a four-month bidding war with QVC for the entertainment and publishing conglomerate.

The overlapping Viacom merger and Virgin deal were coincidental, said VIE spokesman Simon Hill. "As you know all these things take time to plan, and it wasn't planned to coincide with this," he said.

With the Viacom merger pending, Blockbuster is pursuing its own business, said spokesman Wally Knief.

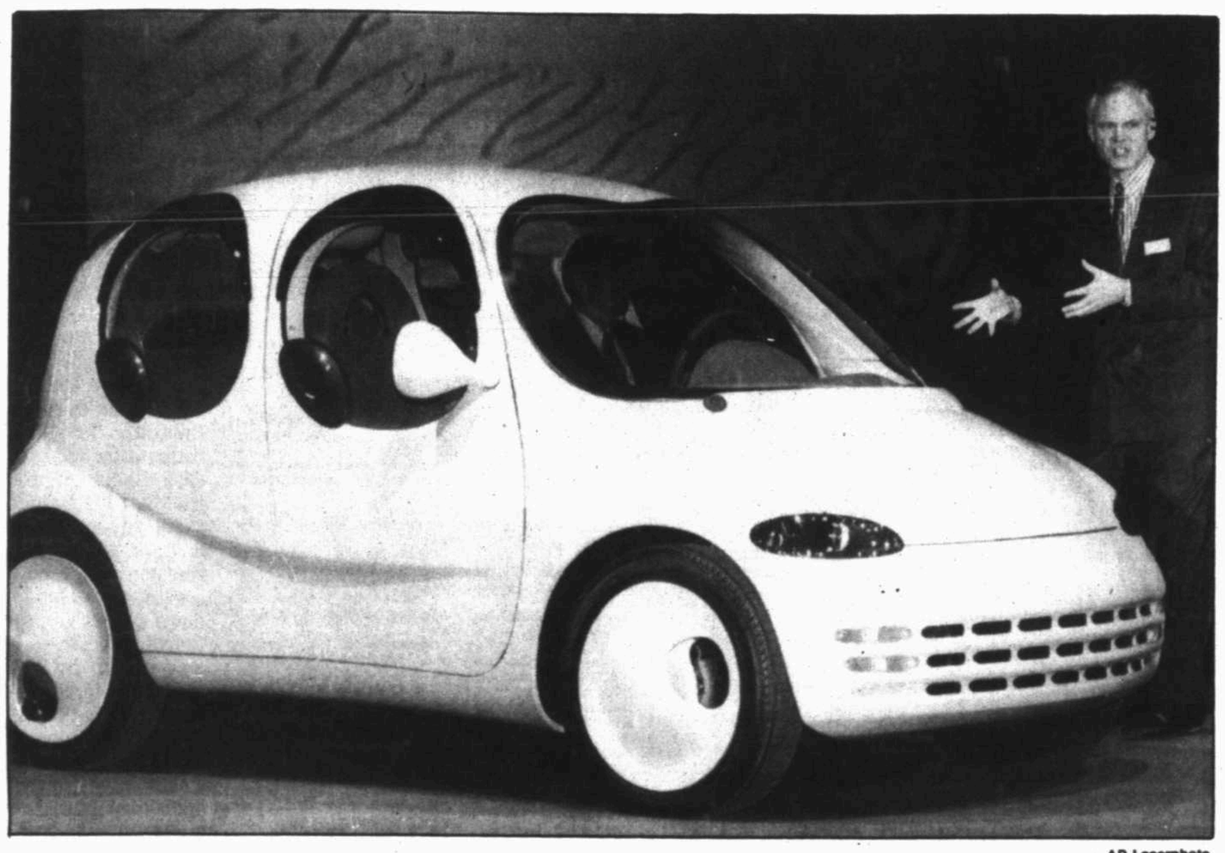

"We're not slowing down on our growth plans," he said. "Their capabilities will be helpful to our growth regardless."

Toymaker Hasbro Inc. bought 16 percent of VIE last August, and Branson's family trust owns the rest. Blockbuster has also received an option to purchase more VIE shares.

Under their existing relationship, Blockbuster and Virgin co-own 20 music megastores under the Virgin name in the United States and seven other countries.

The 11-year-old VIE had sales of $99 million in the 1993 fiscal year, which ended in July. Blockbuster's sales were $1.2 billion in 1992, the latest year available.

The 90 software titles owned by VIE, a subsidiary of Virgin Communications, have sold 13 million copies. New releases include "Aladdin" and "Robocop vs. Terminator," and best-selling titles include "The 7th Guest" and "Monopoly Deluxe."

Kerrigan wins on ads, sports marketers say

By Stefan Fatsis
Associated Press

NEW YORK — It seems obvious: Nancy Kerrigan will win America's hearts —and pitch its products — while Tonya Harding will wear scarlet even if she brings home Olympic gold.

Sports marketers say the advertising outcome of the Kerrigan-Harding saga is a no-brainer. But the clubbing attack on Kerrigan could guarantee her commercial stardom even if she isn't a 1994 Olympic figure skating champion.

"Whether she wins or not, she will be the Olympian to dominate," David Burns, who matches celebrities with advertisers, said Monday. "All this kind of press is what gets people in commercials."

Beyond her wholesome, polite image and cover-girl looks, Kerrigan has become a sympathetic figure in an increasingly competitive world of amateur athletics. She also will benefit from a growing advertising market for women athletes.

Kerrigan, who won a bronze medal at the 1992 Olympics, already has contracts with Seiko Corp. of America, Campbell Soup Co., Evian water and Northwest Airlines. She is scheduled to shoot a TV commercial for shoemaker Reebok International Ltd. to air during next month's Olmpics.

The filming was rescheduled for this weekend to allow Kerrigan time to recuperate. It had been planned for before the Jan. 6 attack at the national championships in Detroit.

The window of opportunity for Olympic stars is small, although several Olympic champions have done well. Gold medal-winning figure skaters Peggy Fleming (1968) and Dorothy Hamill (1976) are still pitching products, and gymnast Mary Lou Retton (1984) has been estimated to have made $5 million in advertising deals.

But relatively few Olympic athletes get big commercial endorsements, and the assault on Kerrigan should help her appeal.

"She will be earning easily five times what she had been earning two weeks ago," said Burns, who predicted Kerrigan will gain several endorsement deals of about $150,000 each.

Since the attack, CBS has planned a one-hour special on Kerrigan.

Breadmaking machines invade U.S. homes, star at shows

By Paul A. Driscoll
Associated Press

CHICAGO — The Romans were the first to free cooks from the daily chore of baking bread, and the Japanese are the latest to advance the cause.

The Romans did it by creating the first commercial bakeries two centuries before Christ. Now, more than 2,000 years later, the Japanese have given us bread-making machines.

The breadmaker is the latest necessity in millions of kitchens and a star at the International Housewares Show this week.

Sales of breadmakers have about doubled each year after the appliance's modest introduction in 1988, reaching an estimated 2 million units last year. Manufacturers say sales could double again this year, helped by prices that have fallen as low as $100.

"The thing is like the coffee machine, people have to have fresh coffee in the morning," said Tom Lacalamita, spokesman for Welbilt Appliance Inc., of New Hyde Park, N.Y., the nation's dominant maker of bread machines.

"This is the same principle, people have to have fresh bread in the morning," he said.

And there's nothing to it: Dump in all the ingredients, set the timer and step back — or go to bed.

At the appointed time the machine mixes, kneads, shapes and bakes the bread — white, rye, wheat or just about any specialty flavor. The machine can also mix pizza dough, then stop before the baking step.

For people allergic to wheat, there are recipes for bread made with rice flour or tapioca flour.

Some visitors to the show expressed reservations about the flavor of machine-made bread. One said she detected a metallic taste. Others said the bread they tasted was better than that from supermarket bakeries, but not as good as handmade at home or from a neighborhood bakery.

But others were enthusiastic.

"The taste is definitely comparable with handmade bread if you use the right ingredients," said Richard Cusick, a baking instructor at the Cooking and Hospitality Institute of Chicago Inc.

For people with a busy schedule and an interest in eating more grain and fiber without additives, the bread machine can be a blessing, Cusick said.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Paying off credit card debt is smart move

By Bill Doyle

Q: I have more than $3,800 in credit card debts.

Card One: $1,435 at 11.5 percent interest.

Card Two: $1,541 at 12.9 percent.

Card Three: $883 at 8.9 percent.

Doyle

I have also managed to save more than $7,000, which is currently invested in stocks and an income mutual fund. Right now, I save only $60 a month.

Would it be wise for me to sell some of the stocks or fund shares, pay off the credit card debt and restart my savings program?

A: Indeed it would. Paying off that credit card debt — and staying out of hock in the future — would be one of the smartest financial moves you would ever make.

A quick run with my handy calculator indicates the credit card debt is costing you $37 a month interest. That steady drain hurts your present finances and your plans for the future.

Once you are out from under that debt load, you will be able to save and invest for your present and future enjoyment. Add the $37 saving in interest to the $60 you currently are socking away and your nest egg will grow and grow.

Some people will tell you the interest you are paying on those credit cards is much lower that it was not long ago. That's true. But that interest you are paying is higher than the return you are getting on your investments. That makes you a loser.

Q: I plan to buy a new automobile in the near future and will keep it for at least six years. I am trying to decide whether to purchase the car with an auto loan, through a home equity loan or by paying cash with money from my savings account.

Which way would be most financially beneficial?

A: Paying cash! By doing that, you will save all the interest you otherwise would pay on either the auto loan or the home equity loan. That interest would be money out the window — never to return.

It's certain that the interest you are receiving on your savings account is lower than the interest you would have to pay on either of those loans.

When you must borrow, a home equity loan is preferable to a car loan or other types of borrowing. That's because interest paid on a home equity loan can be taken as an itemized deduction when you file your income tax return.

Depending on your income tax bracket, that deduction reduces your tax by either 15, 28, 31, 36 or 39.6 percent. Meanwhile, you pay out 100 percent of the interest. You can save that 100 percent by steering clear of borrowing and paying cash.

Q: I am looking for an investment in which I could place an amount equal to the purchase price of a new car — an investment where that principal would be protected and which would yield $200 a month in interest or dividends.

Is such an investment available at this time?

A: NO!

$200 a month equals $2,400 a year. Let's say the automobile you have in mind costs $20,000. On $20,000, a $2,400 annual interest or dividend return works out to 12 percent. That's sky high these days. Even if you could locate such a deal, that high return would indicate it is mighty risky — not a place where the principal would be protected.

Q: Why do risky investments pay higher interest or dividends than safe investments?

A: Think it through and you should realize why. Investors and savers naturally want higher yields from risky investments. So they don't bid up the market prices of risky investments. That keeps a risky investment's current yield — annual interest or dividend divided by market price — high.

Capriati to hit books

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Teen-ager Jennifer Capriati has decided to hit the books instead of tennis balls, trading the courts for the classroom until she finishes her senior year of high school this spring, her agent said Monday.

"This isn't a retirement," New York-based Barbara Perry told The Associated Press.

Capriati, 17, should graduate in June from a Tampa-area high school.

"We don't know the exact date she'll come back," Perry said. "It depends on her work load. It's her final semester in school."

Among the tournaments the world's 12th-ranked player will miss during her sabbatical are the Australian Open, the Lipton Players Championships, and tour stops at Delray Beach and Amelia Island.

"I think she was forced to take time off for an injury which she had most of 1993," Perry said. "Having time off the tour, she decided she wants to concentrate on school until after graduation, then come back."

Capriati, who has been out of action with bone chips in her elbow since a first-round loss at the U.S. Open last August, has a career match record of 149-45 and earned $1.5 million in prize money.

The past two years, however, she has become increasingly more uncomfortable with her celebrity status and hinted as early as last winter that she might step away from the game if the 1993 season mirrored the year she had in 1992.

"I need a break from it," Capriati told the New York Times in Monday's editions. "It's unfortunate that I had an injury, especially one that required such a long recuperation, but I feel I've made the most of my break from the tour."

Rutgers sets cage history

PISCATAWAY, N.J. (AP) — Rutgers defeated No. 1 Tennessee 87-77 Monday night, becoming the first unranked team in NCAA women's basketball history to defeat the top-ranked team.

Senior forward Caroline DeRoose scored a career-high 35 points and Rutgers (9-3) built a 19-point first half lead before holding off a late Tennessee (14-1) rally. Rutgers never trailed in the game.

DeRoose, a 6-foot native of Ghent, Belgium, made 10-of-13 shots from the field, including 5-of-5 from 3-point range, and was 10-of-11 from the foul line while playing the whole game.

Her 35 points tied the school scoring record set by Patty Delehanty against Pittsburgh on Feb. 23, 1980 and Sue Wicks against Penn State on March 11, 1988.

"We've beaten No. 1 before," Rutgers coach Theresa Grentz said, referring to an 84-70 victory over Penn State on Jan. 12, 1991, when Rutgers was ranked 10th. "It was a big win and I am happy for the kids."

OPEN: One seed falls

(From 1C)

atian fans with a straight-sets win over Alex O'Brien, and No. 11 Marc Rosset of Switzerland, No. 14 Karel Novacek of the Czech Republic and No. 15 Lendl.

The only men's seed defeated Monday was No. 7 Cedric Pioline of France.

Top women's seed Steffi Graf, the overwhelming favorite in the absence of three-time champion Monica Seles, needed just 23 minutes to win 6-1, 2-0 over Kimberly Po, who retired with a strained stomach muscle.

Seles had hoped to make her comeback in the tournament, but still has not recovered from being stabbed in the back by a spectator during a match in Germany last April.

Seventh seed Anke Huber of Germany, No. 8 Manuela Maleeva-Fragniere of Switzerland, No. 12 Amanda Coetzer of South Africa, No. 13 Helena Sukova of the Czech Republic, and No. 16 Lindsay Davenport of the United States advanced. But 11th seed Zina Garrison Jackson lost in straight sets

No. 15 Nathalie Tauziat of France also was upset.

Two former champions — Mats Wilander and Tracy Austin — made successful comebacks. It was Austin's first Grand Slam appearance in 11 years.

The Courier-Shelton match was an interesting contrast in styles. While Courier stood on the baseline and blistered groundstrokes all over the court, Shelton sped to the net as often as possible for volleys.

Shelton came to the net 153 times, compared to just 33 for Courier, and had 81 winners. But he also had 90 unforced errors, nearly three times as many as Courier, as he constantly took risks.

Shelton, ranked 99th in the world, had 20 aces and 20 double-faults. Third seed Courier continued to struggle with his serve — he had five aces and 14 double-faults.

QUAKE ROCKS SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA

Clinton OKs federal assistance

By David Morris
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Less than 10 hours after an earthquake caused major damage in Los Angeles, President Clinton signed a declaration declaring the area a disaster zone eligible for federal aid.

"Our hearts and prayers go out to the people of California," Clinton said. "All of us should be very sensitive to what they are going through now."

Clinton pledged his administration would do "everything we possibly can to help."

The president hinted he might go to Los Angeles later, but said for now, "I don't want to get in the way." He noted that traffic already was snarled because of the collapsed freeways and a presidential visit could make things worse.

"I basically would like to have a firsthand view of this," he said, "but it's got to be constructive."

Clinton suggested he was willing to work with Congress on possible additional emergency assistance. He said it was too early to tell how much federal aid the city might need.

Asked if he would consider sending Army troops to help, the president said, "If we need to do it, we can."

Twelve search-and-rescue teams and four medical teams were sent to the quake zone by the Federal Emergency Management Agency, Director James Lee Witt said before he himself left for California.

The 56-member search teams use dogs, sensitive listening devices and tunneling equipment to look for survivors in collapsed buildings.

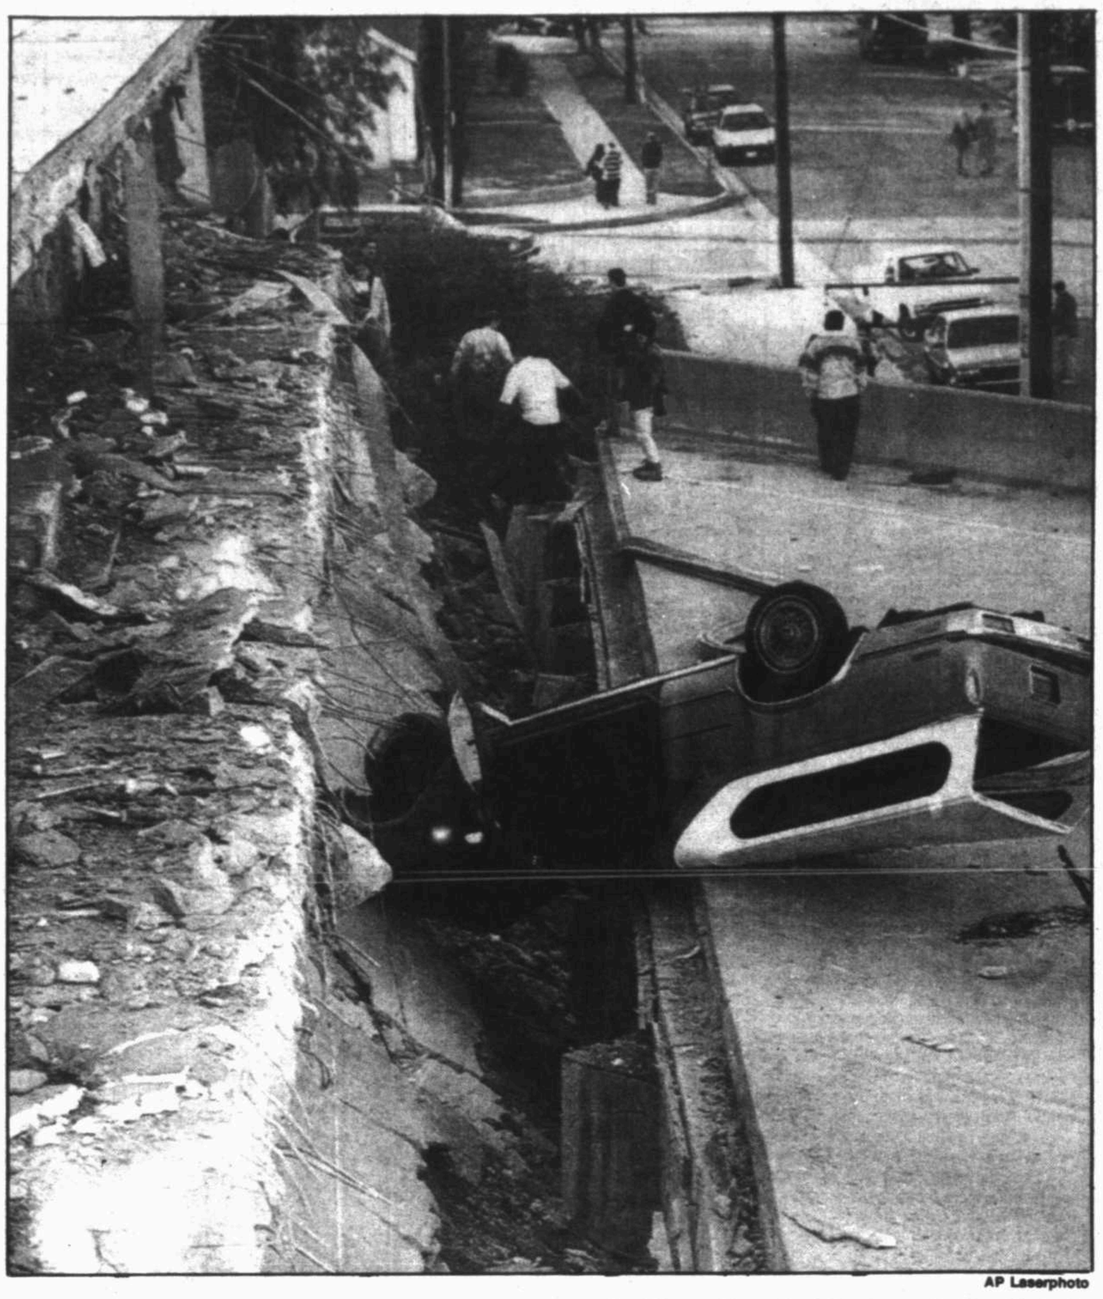

The agency also sent portable generators to the Los Angeles area and was ready to ship water filtration systems.

The disaster declaration, requested by Gov. Pete Wilson, makes disaster grants of $12,200 available to low-income residents.

Others would be eligible for low-interest loans from the Small Business Administration, temporary housing, rent assistance and disaster crisis counseling.

In addition to Witt, Clinton sent Housing and Urban Development Secretary Henry Cisneros, Transportation Secretary Federico Pena and Federal Highway Administrator Rodney Slater to Los Angeles.

The emergency management agency, criticized for slow responses to hurricanes in Florida and Hawaii several years ago, reacted quickly to the earthquake. Witt said the search teams, including eight in California and four from neighboring states, were activated as soon as federal officials learned that buildings and overpasses fell.

How you can help

N.Y. Times News Service

Interaction, a voluntary relief assistance group supported by the federal government, has issued this list of agencies to which money may be sent to assist earthquake victims:

■ American Red Cross Disaster Relief Fund, P.O. Box 37243, Washington, D.C. 20013. Telephone: (800) 842-2200. Local Red Cross chapters can provide additional information.

■ Americares Foundation, 161 Cherry Street, New Canaan, Conn. 06840. Telephone: (800) 486-4357.

■ American Jewish World Service, 15 West 26th Street, New York, N.Y. 10010. Telephone: (212) 683-1161.

■ World Relief, P.O. Box WRC, Dept. 3. Wheaton, Ill. 60189. Telephone: (800) 535-5433.

■ United Way Earthquake Fund, P.O. Box 010790, Miami, Fla. 33101. Telephone: (305) 579-2200.

■ The Christian Reformed World Relief Committee, CRWRC-LA Earthquake, 2850 Kalamazoo Ave. S.E., Grand Rapids, Mich. 49560. Telephone: (616) 246-0740.

Donations are also being collected by:

■ Feed the Children, P.O. Box 36, Oklahoma City, Okla. 73101-0036. Telephone: (800) 627-4556.

He said 26 other federal agencies are ready to supplement state and local disaster programs.

"As we get the information from the mayor of Los Angeles and other officials, we will see what other resources they need," Witt said.

Richard Krimm, the associate director for response and recovery, said more than 1,000 FEMA workers would end up in California.

Federal response to the 1989 Loma Prieta earthquake south of San Francisco cost about $900 million. After floods in the Midwest and wildfires near Los Angeles last year, FEMA has about $1 billion left in its current budget. Krimm said he expected Congress to allocate more money if the agency needs it.

'Big One' still out there, experts warn

By Michael Fleeman
Associated Press Writer

PASADENA, Calif. — The earthquake that struck California on Monday wasn't the Big One. And that's the problem.

The quake, which measured 6.6 on the Richter scale, proved that Southern California can suffer significant damage without the dreaded 8.0 or stronger earthquake that scientists say could hit the region within the next 30 years.

Freeways and buildings crumbled after Monday's quake, gas mains caught fire and utility service was disrupted as far away as Canada.

But the quake was believed to have done nothing to ease pressure on the dreaded San Andreas Fault. That's where the Big One would occur, possibly causing cataclysmic damage and widespread death and injury.

The only consolation for nervous Southern Californians was that Monday's quake didn't put any pressure on the San Andreas, 20 miles away from the epicenter in the Los Angeles suburb of Northridge.

"It could not be a trigger" for a San Andreas quake, said Lucy Jones, a seismologist at the California Institute of Technology in Pasadena.

Scientists said the quake was caused by the constant movement of Southern California toward San Francisco, which places enormous stress on the Los Angeles Basin.

A quake of magnitude 5.5 or higher shakes Southern California an average of once every five years, scientists say. A 7.5 quake hit Landers and a 6.6 quake hit Big Bear in 1992, a 5.9 quake hit Whittier Narrows in 1987 and a 6.4 quake hit Sylmar in 1971.

The Richter scale is a measure of ground motion as recorded on seismographs. Every increase of one number means a tenfold increase in magnitude. Thus a reading of 7.5 reflects an earthquake 10 times stronger than one of 6.5.

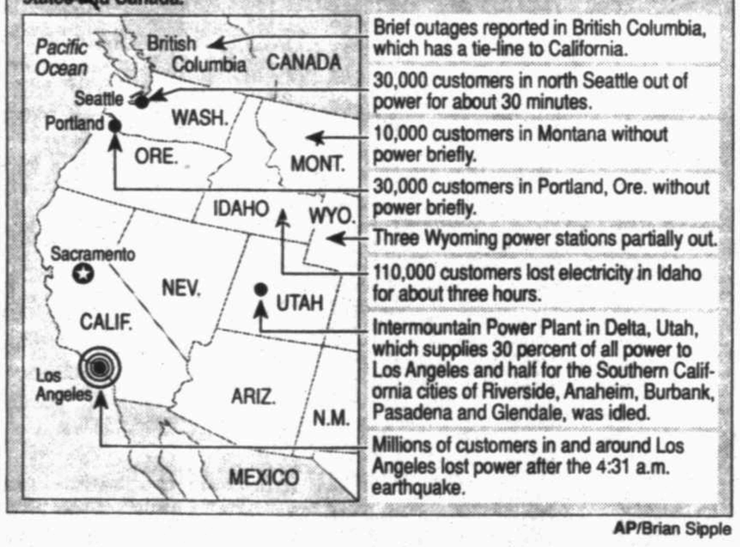

Scientists said Monday's quake may have occurred along part of the same fault system that caused the Whittier Narrows earthquake.

But unlike the much stronger Landers quake, Monday's quake was located much closer to a heavily populated area. Landers is about 90 miles east of downtown Los Angeles; Monday's was centered in Northridge, only 20 miles to the northwest.

Scientists said Monday's quake showed that timing and location as important as magnitude.

California Quake leaves much of West in the dark

The earthquake that shattered Southern California snapped parts of the electrical web bringing power not only to Los Angeles, but also to parts of six other Western states and Canada.

Major Quakes

Some major earthquakes in California:

June 28, 1992: A 7.5-magnitude earthquake in Landers and a 6.6 aftershock at Big Bear Lake kill one toddler.

Oct. 17, 1989: A 7.1 quake in the San Francisco Bay area kills 63 people.

Oct. 1, 1987: A 5.9 quake in Whittier and a 5.3 aftershock kill eight people.

Jan. 24, 1980: A 5.8 quake in the Livermore area east of San Francisco damages a nuclear weapons laboratory.

Feb. 9, 1971: A 6.5 quake in the Sylmar-San Fernando area leaves 65 people dead.

July 21, 1952: A 7.7 quake in the Tehachapi-Bakersfield area 50 miles north of Los Angeles kills 12 people.

March 10, 1933: A 6.3 quake in Long Beach kills 115 people.

April 18-19, 1906: Earthquake and fires level San Francisco, killing 700 people, a disputed number some historians argue is much higher. Scientists reckoning in retrospect estimate it would have registered 8.3 on the Richter scale, which was adopted in 1935.

Insurance companies: Many victims lack coverage

NEW YORK (AP) — Many victims of the Southern California earthquake may face staggering repair bills since they lack insurance that will pay for fixing their homes.

People will be able to claim fire damage under standard homeowner policies, insurance experts said. But many residents will not be covered if their homes collapsed or had other structural damage due to the quake.

Even those who bought special earthquake insurance may face steep bills, because such policies typically require customers to cover 5 percent to 10 percent of the damage themselves.

Therefore, a couple with a $150,000 home and quake insurance might have to pay for the first $15,000 of damage out of their own pockets.

"I think there's quite a number of people who don't have the coverage," said Rock Jenkins, a spokesman for State Farm Insurance, the biggest provider of homeowners' insurance in California.

"It's an expense a lot of people don't want to pay for."

The Insurance Information Institute estimates that 25 percent of all California homeowners have earthquake coverage. However, the percentage in the area struck Monday is more like 40 percent, since it's a quake-prone zone, said Jim Snyder, president of the Personal Insurance Federation of California.

Insurance doesn't come cheap. In California, getting earthquake coverage means paying an average $150-$300 annually on top of average homeowners' insurance costs of $500-$600, said Jeanne Salvatore, a spokeswoman for the Insurance Information Institute, a trade group.

For earthquake-prone areas, it can cost more. Jenkins said State Farm charged about $409 for earthquake insurance with a 5 percent deductible for a $300,000 home in the area hit Monday. The same policy with a 10-percent deductible would cost $327, he said.
