Final Services Held Friday for Claude McMillin

Funeral services for Claude McMillin, 77, were conducted at the First Christian Church Friday, May 27 at 2 p.m., with Minister Floyd O'Donnell officiating.

Mr. MeMillin died unexpectedly at 11:55 a.m. Wednesday, May 25, a few hours after he entered St. Joseph's Hospital.

The family home is 806 Bowie Street.

It was only after he retired from the grocery business in Allison that Mr. and Mrs. McMillin moved to Wellington, in 1948. By that time he had completed a long career in which he was a vital part of that Wheeler County town, one of the men who carried the responsibility for its community, church, and civic well being.

He was active in all phases of its life, as only a small town business man can be active.

In Wellington he was an active member of the First Christian Church, and in the Men's Brotherhood. Here again he took the responsibility borne by those who care about the spiritual well being of the community.

Mr. McMillin was born Dec. 5, 1888 at Chicota, Lamar County.

He was married July 11, 1907, to Miss Beulah Bohannon at Hugo, Okla.

Surviving Mr. McMillin are his wife, Mrs. Claude McMillin of Wellington; a daughter and son, Mrs. Sandy Parsons, Jr., of Wellington and Donald McMillin of Tulsa, Okla.

A brother and sister also survive: Earl McMillin of Los Angeles, and Mrs. Dessie Monroe of Fort Smith, Ark. There are six grandchildren and nine great grandchildren.

Two sons preceded him in death, Dudley McMillin of Wellington and Jack McMillin, who died during World War II, a prisoner of war of the Japanese.

The first game will start at 6 p.m. each evening, and the nightcap will follow immediately, Wilson said.

Roping Accident Injures Glenn

A Wellington man, knocked unconscious when he was pulled from his horse while roping a calf Thursday, May 26, nevertheless loaded his horse in his pickup and droxe approximately 15 miles before he was found by a friend.

He is Barney Glenn, who received a broken right shoulder blade and rope burns on his right arm in the accident that occurred on the Harald Hill farm in the China Grove community, adjoining Glenn's place. He was alone at the time.

Glenn remembers nothing that happened after he roped the calf that he was trying to get back on his own land, and took up the slack in the rope.

He was found by Horace Small a half mile east of Lutie, his pickup stopped in the road, according to Police Chief Donald Nunnelley, who talked with Glenn at St. Joseph's Hospital.

A CB radio operator reported hearing him call for help once, but could never get another answer to learn what happened or where he was.

He was released from St. Joseph's Saturday but returned Tuesday for additional medical tests, Mrs. Glenn said.

Glenn returned to the accident scene Sunday and after examining scuffs on his saddle believes that when the calf, a 650-pounder, went over a terrace, both horse and rider were flipped over.

People Buy More During The Summer Months Than Most Other Seasons

Many of us are accustomed to speaking of the dull summer months which may have been partially true in another day and a different economy; but the actual facts happen to be the opposite.

Year after year figures released by the United States Department of Commerce show that people buy more during the summer months than almost any other season of the year.

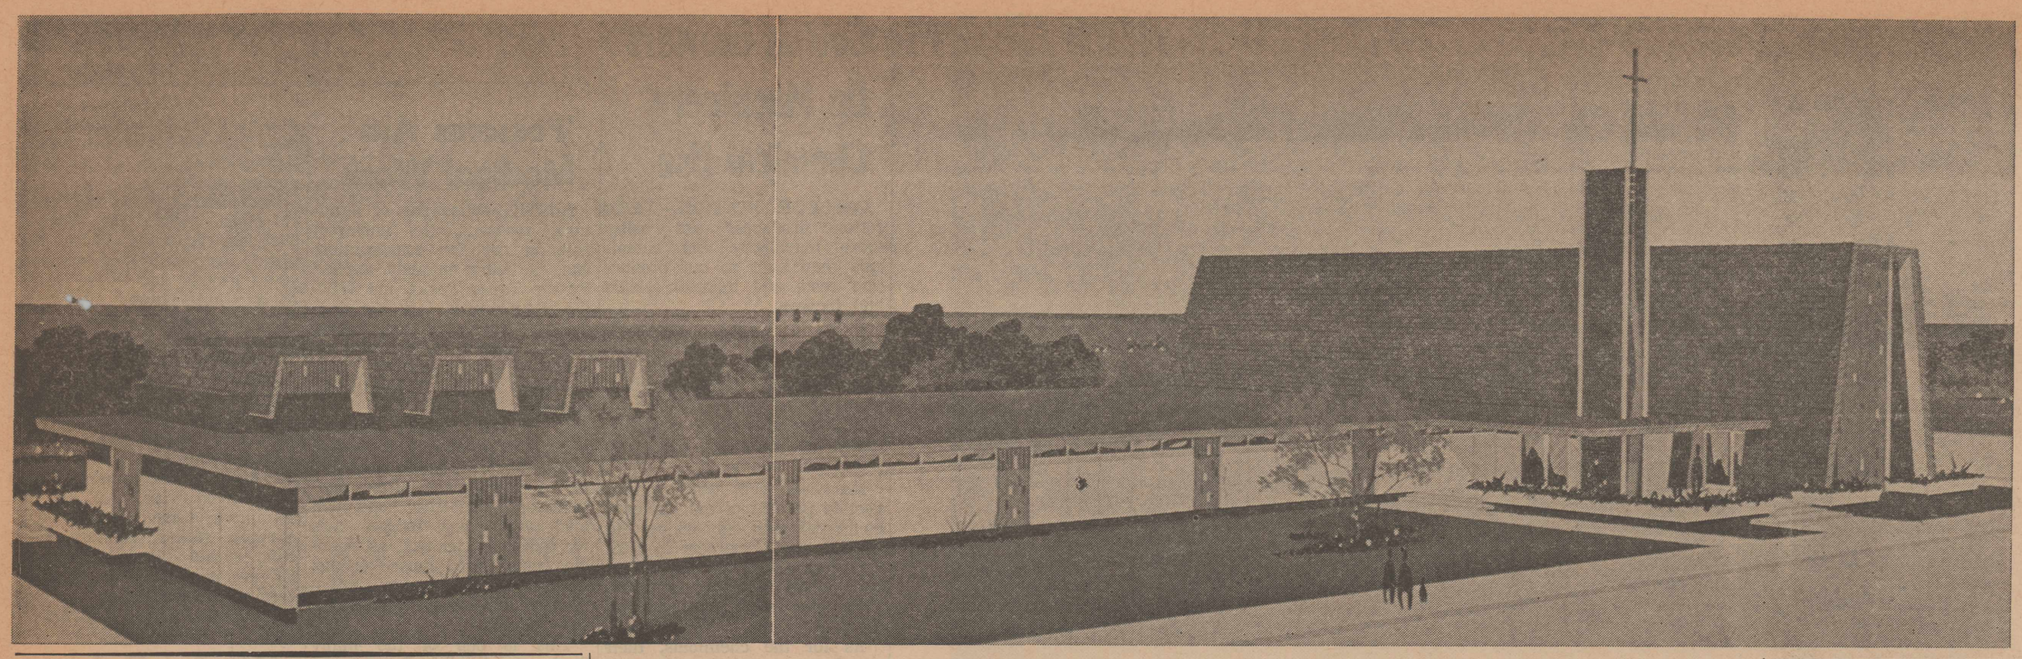

They are buying clothes for travel, luggage for travel and hundreds of other items connected with vacations and summer; but they are also buying items for recreation at home during the long interesting days of summer.

They are buying air conditioners, refrigerators, cook out appliances, lawn and garden supplies and hundreds of other items that are a part of home living during the summer months.

In fact if it were not for the tremendous sales that start in late November and continue through December, the summer months would exceed any other season.

Knowing these facts, forward looking merchants plan their sales promotions in advance and on a stepped up scale at the very beginning of summer. Let us help you in building advertisements that will increase your summer sales.

Cotton Insect Survey Teams Ready to Work

The Rolling Plains Cotton Insect Survey will begin June 1 and continue through Aug. 31. Collingsworth County is one of the participating counties.

The survey is a part of the overall effort of the Rolling Plains Cotton Growers effort to achieve control and possible eradication of the boll weevil from the Rolling Plains of Texas. The cost of the survey is estimated at $30,000. Funds are provided on a matching basis by the Rolling Plains Cotton Growers and the Texas Department of Agriculture. The survey will be conducted by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service with Emory Boring, area entomologist, as coordinator. County agents in each of the 31 counties involved are responsible for local survey coordination.

Ten 2-man teams will be involved. The teams are composed of agriculture students from Texas A and M, Texas Tech and Sul Ross. Each of the 20 boys has had some entomology courses and all have been thoroughly trained to conduct the insect counts. Each team will check 34 fields per week, checking the same field at approximately the same time each week.

The team members have been instructed not to make insecticide recommendations. Farmers with questions regarding the advisability of spraying are urged to contact their local county agent.

The number of fields checked in each county is based on the cotton allotment within the county. Throughout the Rolling Plains one field will be checked per 2,300 acres of cotton. In counties where small acreages are concerned, Wilbur Gruben, field advisor and entomologist with the RPCG will be assisting with local insect counting. Gruben will also work closely with Hot Spot areas when they occur, and with counties that have organized for early season control.

It is hoped that farmers will quickly learn the fields being surveyed so they can keep up with the insect situation in their community this summer. Regular reports will be issued by the county agent and farmers are urged to contact him.

The Insect Survey is a fine example of what can be accomplished when farmers band together and the results will be one long step toward control of the boll weevil in the Rolling Plains.

Helpful Aids Set for Main Play Regions

AUSTIN.—The Texas Parks and Wildlife Department announced its warden force is ready for the seasonal skyrocketing of pleasure watercraft which, under a new state law, is entitled to protective patrolling by state agencies.

The Department stated that within the available facilities, motorboat-mounted wardens are helping enforce the statute that became effective last Sept. 1.

It added that during the quiet winter period since enactment of the regulatory measure, the warden force has been preparing for the statewide assignment.

Seminars have been held for the field force as well as for law enforcement chiefs and an extra two weeks training had been added to the curricula for the special warden school at Texas A&M University.

Meanwhile, an extensive statewide educational program has concentrated on news media as well as direct contact. More than 35,000 copies of the official regulations have been distributed.

On the public waterways, wardens have been handling enforcement routine with advisory emphasis, personally cautioning water recreationists that the new code was established by the Legislature for the protection and general benefit of the rapidly mounting number of aquatic sports enthusiasts.

The Department stressed that the usual land-based law enforcement patrol will be maintained throughout the state.

The Department noted that even in the so-called quiet months a substantial number of tickets have been issued for the more common infractions such as lacking life preservers, skiing in forbidden areas, boating in a reckless manner as to endanger human life and dangerous speed.

The latest arrest report shows that more than 75 tickets were issued by wardens for assorted infractions.

Heretofore, game wardens have been authorized to check only on availability of life preservers with the exception of a few water areas where special state laws empowered the wardens to provide general patrol routine.

Under the new law, wardens are authorized to make arrests for persons piloting a motorboat while under the influence of alcohol or drugs or other hazardous operations.

Here is a partial work sheet, past and present, showing the guide lines incidental to Department preparation for the new law enforcement assignment:

House Bill 69, 59th Legislature, R.S., 1965, included in its provisions that game wardens were to be added as enforcement officers in all public waters of the state as per Article 1722-a (The Texas Water Safety Act). Prior to this time, the enforcement authority of game wardens was limited to 5 lakes in North and Northeast Texas.

The Department's approach to this responsibility has begun with an effort to acquaint the public with the requirements of the law and to train Departmental personnel in the procedures and techniques of administering the law.

Even before the law became effective, the first of a series of meetings was held by Departmental staff members with staff personnel from the Motor Vehicle Division, Texas Highway Department, to discuss regulations.

Contact with the Coast Guard has been established and they have supplied the Department with copies of "Inland Rules of the Road."

Two supervisory personnel of this Department were assigned to attend the Coast Guard Boarding Officers Instructor's School at Coast Guard School, Yorktown, Va., Nov. 28 through Dec. 3 last year.

Eight In-Service Training Sessions were held for all Game Wardens.

Coastal wardens attended the Coast Guard Boating Officers Schools at Coast Guard stations at Corpus Christi, Galveston, Brownsville and Sabine.

The Department has become a member of the South Central States Boating Law Administrators Association and representatives attended conferences in Galveston and in Wichita, Kan. States comprising this Association are Colorado, Arkansas, Kansas, Louisiana, Nebraska, New Mexico, Oklahoma and Texas.

The Department now has 203 game wardens in the field and 20 men are in training. There are five regional enforcement supervisors and 20 district chiefs. One hundred men are assigned to areas that contain 67 large bodies of inland or coastal water within their assigned districts. Additional men will be detailed as they are available from other duties to assist in working these water areas.

Suitable equipment to supplement the boats and motors now on hand has been requisitioned. Trailers will permit flexibility in the use of this equipment and will allow assignment from lake to lake as conditions require.

The unusual camouflage consists of a highly reflective black paint on the underside of the bomber and on the vertical fin. The rest of the plane is painted in the normal camouflage pattern.

TREES ARE BIG DEAL

Texas Tree Farms provide forest products, employment, payrolls, taxes, recreation, watershed protection, food and shelter for wildlife.

A calorie is the unit of heat necessary to raise the temperature of a kilogram of water one degree Centigrade.

Cotton Growers Up Machinery, Chemical Use

COLLEGE STATION.—Texas cotton producers are using more machinery and chemicals than ever to cut production costs and increase yields and income.

Fred C. Elliott, Extension cotton specialist at Texas A&M University, has released figures obtained from county agents in the state's cotton producing counties which show the extent machines and chemicals were used last year.

Machines were used to harvest 94 percent of the 1965 crop compared with only 58 percent in 1960 and 24 percent in 1955. Last year 6.498 spindle pickers and 45,232 machine strippers were used in the harvest, Elliott said.

As for the chemicals, their use began with planting and continued through the growing season and got extensive use in preparing the crop for harvest in 167 counties. Almost a half-million acres were treated with pre-emergence chemicals for grass and weed control and over a half-million acres received post-emergence treatments. These chemicals, Elliott said, plus the use of more than 51,000 rotary hoe equipped tractors, helped farmers replace the fast disappearing hoe hands of yesterday.

Lateral oiling for grass and weed control was used on more than 208,000 acres and Johnson grass was controlled on 281,000 acres with spot oiling and dalapon, Elliott said. Flame cultivators, 3,876 in 72 counties, were also used for weed control.

In order to speed harvesting, chemical desiccants or defoliants were used on 145,620 farms to remove leaves and stop plant growth. This practice, Elliott said, means earlier machine harvesting and a better grade.

In conducting the educational programs needed to keep cotton farmers informed on the latest recommended practices from research, 7-Step Cotton Committees were active in 134 different counties, the specialist said. They sponsored in cooperation with county program building committees, meetings, tours, demonstrations and many other activities which brought producers together.

'Possoms Aid Medical Work

AUSTIN.—Wise use of a natural resource, the universal rallying cry for conservationists, is being uniquely applied by the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department into an area leading from the now muted wildlife harvest locale into intense medical research with unusually strong humanitarian overtones.

It is the annual female opossum roundup in a limited North Texas "possum heaven" for a highly specialized project that scientists hope will lead to the long awaited cure for leukemia, as well as possible relief from muscular distrophy, cerebral palsy, poliomyelitis and other crippling human blights.

This is one of the many Parks and Wildlife Department activities foreign to a once popular conception that the Department primarily stresses "selling game and fish licenses and arresting violators."

Over the years, the Department has been a leader in other fringe area resource-use movements such as helping salvage otherwise unwanted deer skins and divert them into hospital therapeutic channels and on to marketable tanned skin products.

Thus, now one of nature's least conspicuous animals, the lowly opossum, itself a veritable scavenger, already has advanced studies that could mean life for many persons and the sparing of countless others from hideous crippling. Authorities say a break-through in this field could be the century's greatest gain in relieving human misery.

Until March 1, in the dead of night, when the Animal Kingdom generally is on the prowl, cooperating sportsmen, youth groups and others guided by Game Warden Hill Lawrence in catching, without the aid of dogs or traps, at least 100 pregnant possums.

Warden Lawrence has perfected a harmless device, strongly resembling a fish net reinforced with tough nylon, for capturing the varmints in the open, placing them in secure cages with care not to be bitten since possums are possible rabies carriers like other warm blooded animals, for air shipment to the University of Colorado Medical Research Center in Denver.

Westex Rain Helps Hatch

SAN ANGELO.—Two to five inches of rainfall around San Angelo boosted lake water reserves and assured at least partial fish hatchery operations according to A. E. Pettitt, superintendent of the local Texas Parks and Wildlife Department hatchery.

Both San Angelo hatcheries now have sufficient water for operation, but rain came too late for full bass production.

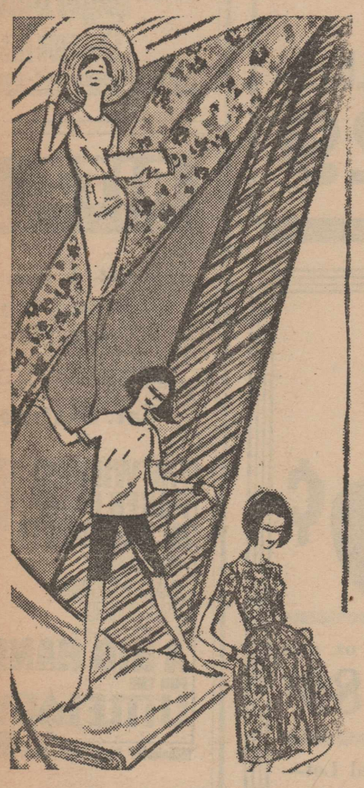

Despite a late start, eight of sixteen bass ponds are stocked and should produce between two and four million bass this summer, said Pettit.

Catfish prospects are much brighter since all catfish ponds are expected to produce 3/4 million baby catfish.

If all goes well, an additional 1/2 million sunfish and a limited number of crappie will also be reared this summer in San Angelo hatcheries.

Huey Long, shot while in the Louisiana capitol, died Sept. 10, 1935.

Nothing to Do This Summer? Look Around, Something's There

Let one say there is nothing to do here in the summertime. Already enough organized activity is planned to keep a large number of people, from six years old up, busy. For adults, this is after the working day.

Vacation Bible Schools are followed by youth baseball and the summer reading program at elementary school; Scouts and Camp Fire Girls are active; and the 4-H Horse club appeals to youthful western blood. One or more Youth Rodeos will be held.

Teen-agers will have summer jobs, or the girls their homemaking projects.

Farming speaks for itself. The service clubs continue their activities. The Chamber of Commerce, Builders Club and other business men are working toward one or more industries. It is not time to make public announcements, but this county is probably closer to acquiring industry than it ever has been.

The churches take no vacation.

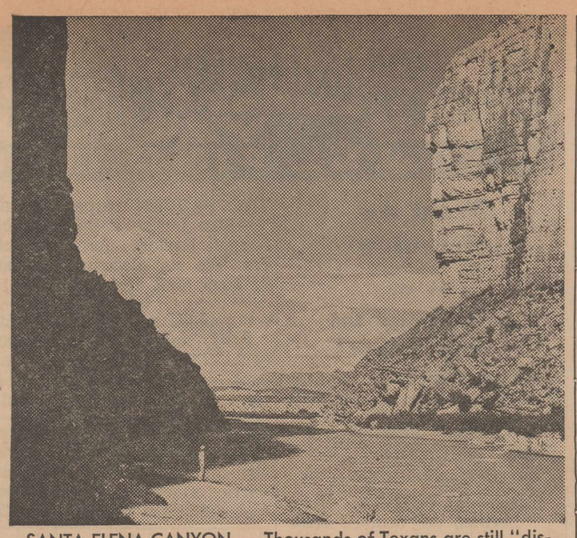

There is swimming for everyone who likes the feel of water and golf for the hardy.

When all this is done, a man can take his family to fish in one of the small lakes of the county, for example. And not the least of pleasures, all of us can come out from under air conditioners and relax out-of-doors in the long summer Collingsworth evenings, usually comfortable, always a thing of beauty.

BABSON'S POINT OF VIEW:

MAKING USE OF PRODUCT GUARANTEES

By Roger W. Babson

When you buy almost any standard article — from a wrist watch to a yacht — there is an implied guarantee that the product is a represented. That is a basic fact of purchasing overseen by the Federal Trade Commission. But usually a new, or even a more costly second-hand product brings with it a specific guarantee or warranty not only to help clinch your sale but to specify what you can do about it if anything goes wrong.

Keep Your Guarantee and Sales Slip

Even though the liability of a company or store for any defectiveness in the goods bought may spur a buyer to complete the purchase, he is as likely as not to forget the guarantee almost before he gets home. The certificate may kick around his desk for a while, then be thrown out with the old newspapers. Or a housewife may keep her guarantee on the kitchen shelf, intending to hold onto it for the year or whatever its length of duration. But often, if she does need it some time later, it's gone, nobody knows where or when.

So, the first thing to do when you are given a guarantee or warranty on any article is to put it—with the accompanying sales slip—in one spot specifically assigned for such papers. A manila folder in a desk drawer or on an out-of-the-way shelf is probably the safest and best place. Legally, a warranty is considered to be a manufacturer's statement of liability for his product and how far it goes. A guarantee, on the other hand, may be issued by somebody else along the line — such as the assembler, distributor or retailer — who must answer for any lapse on the part of the maker.

Find Out Just How You Are Covered

If you are completing a purchase of any article supplied with a warranty or guarantee, take the time to go over it with your retailer and find out just how you are covered. Ask questions. Who is responsible in case of failure, the manufacturer or the place of purchase? How long are you protected against product default? If a lifetime proviso is given, does it mean your lifetime, or the usual lifetime of such an article, or specifically what? If a retailer hesitates to answer such questions, take your business somewhere else.

If you are required to send in a filled-in blank at the time of purchase, do so at once—then place the stub with date and other related information in your chosen file. If there is a breakdown or malfunction in any product that you may have bought relatively recently, check right off whether that particular item is under guarantee, and for how long. To hesitate or put it off may mean that the expiration date will have passed while you wait.

You May Save a Lot of Money

If you build a new home or do a big renovation job on your old one, be sure to add all the warranties and guarantees to your file. New stoves, refrigerators, washing machines, hot water heaters, electric dish washers, and a multitude of other household items come with liability certificates. These appliances can go on the blink, and sometimes they do. If you know just what your protection is, you can save a lot of money.

A soap dispenser in an electric dish washer can jam. If you don't know the terms of your guarantee or don't bother about its duration, you may end up paying $15 or $20 for a home visit, plus the cost of labor and parts. Your guarantee would have covered it all. A color tube in a TV set has been known to blow out short of the usual year's warranty. This can mean as much as $150 out of your own pocket if you haven't your certificate date on hand. An auto guarantee may run for two to five years or 24,000 to 50,000 miles, whichever is sooner. Many a man has simply forgotten that he might still have coverage, and he has laid out large sums for repairs or replacement.

Manufacturers and reputable outlets give such certificates because they believe in the quality and durability of their products. If something goes wrong, it is their fault, not yours. And they are usually prompt to see that the wrong is righted. Take full advantage of this way of assuring top value for your outlay.

CROSSROADS REPORT

Dear Editor:

I see where a young lady in New York City got thrown in jail because she used a dime-store tear gas squirter on a man who was molesting her.

My hyperspsycho neighbor says this had ought to be a warning to women folks learning judo or karate with the idea of defending themselves. They muss up some mugger's hairdo and they are in trouble.

Violent hampering of some deprived citizen's pursuit of happiness is apt to bring down upon them the wrath of the Great Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Criminals.

News is that tax spenders belonging to the New Economics cult are hollering for higher taxes, which they say will stop inflation and make prices go down.

But some outworn minds have a lot of trouble understanding such complex things as the New Economics and the New Math and how they work.

My Old Doubtful neighbor says if it turns out that higher taxes really do make prices go down, he aims to try out the principle himself by putting on ten more pounds of pot and seeing if it makes his weight go down.

The news is that a Harvard scientist has discovered a youth hormone which works on insects to keep them from growing up.

My self-feeder neighbor says mankind has also got a youth hormone, called "unearned money", which tends to inhibit maturity in children when administered in big doses.

And the same stuff given to older people, in the form of government handouts, causes reversion to suckling-like dependency, and produces screams and spiteful voting if the dosage gets reduced or withheld.

My out-gone neighbor says the federal push into outer space is just a program to put an Internal Revenue branch office in Heaven, so folks can't escape taxes by going there.

And there's another deal, called Project Mohole, to dig an extra deep hole in the crust of the earth, which could be a sneaky plan to set up a tax office down below.

Some Congressmen also seem suspicious about Mohole's real purpose, because they are threatening to cut off its funds. Could be they don't want to find Internal Revenuers waiting where they're going too.

D. E. SCOTT.

Duck Egg Foils Coon

AUSTIN.—Blending the domestic with the wildlife version of earthly creatures at times confuses people, including Bob Moore—most of the time.

The inevitable conflict with Homo sapiens hasn't helped any in the last case involving Moore's home on Lake Austin.

Now retired, Moore has accumulated from various sources a half dozen plain white quackless ducks. They are good company, keep the place rid of pill bugs and other ground insect undesirables and fraternize entertainingly with the perch and nutria at sundown feeding time.

The human element naturally interfered when some ghoulish fisherman tried to catch one of the three hens, and succeeded in losing a hook, snagged securely in the duck's breast.

But the fowl recovered and laid seven eggs in a nest alongside Moore's pump house. A prowling coon feasted on six of those one night. Next night Moore baited a live trap with the remaining egg. But the cunning varmint stole the egg without springing the trap.

Moore, pondering new strategy, left the trap "armed." And next night caught the coon—without even baiting the thing. And became mightily unhappy at the excavations made by the intruder's pals in vainly trying to rescue the duck-egg addict.

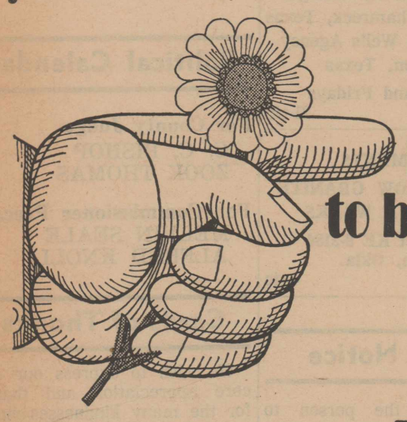

Moore likes all the birds and beasts but hasn't yet determined how to maintain peace and quiet, especially with playful anglers swishing a casting hook at anything that moves above or below the surface.

LOOKING AHEAD

by Dr. George S. Benson

TO HALT THE NEW PAGANISM

The mid-years of the 20th Century in which we now live may well be recorded in history as the Bewildering Era. And the most awesome and incredible of the happenings of these times is the apparent flight away from faith in God.

In spite of widely advertised, high church membership and record attendance at church services, the decade of the 60s is witnessing a massive attack upon the Bible, an almost unbelievable prohibition of prayer in the very places where examples of faith are most needed, a growing, spreading, militant atheism among thought-leaders.

The present undermining operation upon religion can scarcely be exaggerated.

There is indeed a grave question whether the American people will succumb to a newly arisen paganism which is being widely infused throughout the population under many labels and in various movements.

The outlawing of prayer by the U.S. Supreme Court (the edict already has spread its tentacles from the schools out through much of our public life), and the reluctance of our Congress to excoriate the court and undo its mischief have brought on far-reaching consequences.

The high court's decision against prayer poses a challenge that can only be overcome by a massive grass-roots protest of citizens all through our nation.

Such a movement has been conceived by citizens of two neighboring Michigan communities, Three Rivers and Holland. If worried people all over America would join in the crusade they have begun, not only could the notorious prayer decision be overturned, but the downward push upon the nation's moral and spiritual life could be halted, and history made!

Mrs. Paul Wheeler of Three Rivers, and Mrs. William Westrate and Mrs. Howard Graves of Holland joined in launching what they hope will become a nationwide mobilization of citizens to re-establish voluntary prayer and Bible reading in the schools. It began when Michigan's Attorney General last September interpreted the Supreme Court's decision in such a manner that many Michigan schools and colleges cancelled their traditional baccalaureate services.

The three mothers met several times; and last February with the cooperation of Three Rivers' Mayor Ralph Vandenberg, school authorities and church leaders, a mass meeting was held. More than 500 signatures on a petition were obtained.

The organization was named: Restore School Voluntary Prayer (RSVP). The Michigan press has given it good publicity. It is spreading.

Mayor Vandenberg mailed letters to 1,000 mayors across the nation, enclosing a petition form. The petition: "We, the undersigned citizens of the State of .... request our Congressman to initiate or to support a constitutional amendment which would clarify the First Amendment and thereby restore voluntary prayer and Bible reading in public schools, during the school hours, within public school buildings."

Three Rivers and Holland teenagers are organizing their own teenage RSVP auxiliary and pushing it nationwide. A letter addressed to Mayor Vandenberg will bring "Goals and Guidelines" of RSVP to any citizen, anywhere. Mrs. Wheeler told me: "RSVP is nonsectarian and non-partisan. Its membership believes that the home and church should assume the main responsibility for teaching religion, but since the Bible is the basic foundation for the structure of our Republic, religious observances in school must be maintained if our country is to survive."

Yes, if our country is to survive, the flight away from faith in God must be halted and the acclamation of that faith wherever people come together in public or in private must again become widespread.

Millions of tourists who visit Rome each year see the ruins of a lost civilization. The ancient Coliseum, where paganism flourished as a world symbol and Christians were fed to lions 2,000 years ago, stands today a barren, crumbled, lifeless hulk, in the midst of Rome's famed antiquity. A few hundred feet from its gaping entrance stands another symbol, the Arch of Constantine. It was built, surrounded by Pagan rites, to advertise Christianity.

Paganism nevertheless left Rome prostrate and miserable through 1,000 years of the Dark Ages.

We must work together to prevent its rise here in America. We must not be fooled by its disguises, nor weakened in our faith by old disproved dogmas dressed in "fashionable" clothes.

Balconies were originally built for purposes of defense.

Every year . . . at great expense in time, money and love . . . we turn out another fine crop of young men and women . . . trained and schooled and ready to take their places in the adult world. And every year the big cities get most of them . . . because we haven't enough jobs for them to do.

- It's very generous of us to go to all of this trouble and expense to furnish high grade personnel for city use.
- Of course, we'd like very much to keep them here near us because we love them. And we could use nearly all of them if we should develop a real selfish streak some day and decide to wean the big cities we have been helping to support.
- The money we spend out of town every year, if most of it was spent here, would provide many more job and business opportunities for our young people.
- It would make the grass a good deal greener for most of us older citizens, too.

Three Collingsworth County men received degrees at Texas Tech's commencement exercises May 28. They were Harold Houston Pigg and Granvel Keith Killian of Wellington and Albert (Pete) Smith of Samnorwood.

Dr. James M. Moudy, Chancellor of Texas Christian University, gave the principal address at the 8 p.m. exercises in Lubbock Municipal Coliseum.

Killian

Killian received his bachelor of science degree from the School of Agriculture with a major in animal science.

The son of Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Killian, he completed his work at mid-term and took graduate work the second semester.

He was a member of Block and Bridle, Alpha Zeta, an honorary for ag majors, and Phi Kappa Phi, an honorary for Tech students based on grades.

He worked in the college's meats laboratory as head of the Labs classes. Killian received a Sears scholarship one year and a fellowship this year.

This summer he will continue graduate studies at Tech, then he plans to enter the school of veterinary medicine.

Pigg

Pigg received a bachelor of business administration degree from the School of Business Administration.

The son of Mr. and Mrs. Kelly Pigg, he attended North Texas State University at Denton two years before transferring to Tech. He was a member of the North Texas State U. Band one year and the Tech Stage Band one year.

He also held membership in the Tech Finance Association and Phi Kappa Phi and Beta Gamma Sigma, both academic honoraries. Pigg was secretary-treasurer of Wells Hall.

Smith

Smith received the bachelor of science degree in electrical engineering, completing in four years a course that usually requires five.

He was on the dean's honor roll every semester except one and he held membership in Phi Kappa Phi; Tau Beta Phi, a national honorary for engineers; Eta Kappa Nu, national honorary for electrical engineers.

This year he was the only student selected to prepare a paper for the publication of the IEEE, a professional electrical engineers organization.

Smith is the son of Mrs. Allen I. Smith.

He began work June 1 with Southwestern Public Service Company in Amarillo as an engineer designing controls for generating stations.

His wife, the former Darlene Rainey of Lutie, will attend West Texas State University next year. The couple lives at 2008 Austin, Amarillo.

CROP RESIDUE USE

Utilization of crop residues, while conserving the moisture, is also very important as an economical, dependable and easily initiated protection against wind erosion. Crop residue use may be defined as the leaving of plant residues on the surface of the soil during that part of the year when wind erosion is most critical.

People who live on and work with the soil should never pass up a chance to investigate the results of the conservation practices used on the land. Some investigations which are simple and graphically illustrate the benefits of crop residue use only require the use of one's eyes and in some cases, an implement as readily available as a spade or grubbing hoe.

It doesn't take much effort this time of the year to drive over the county and see the difference between protected and unprotected crop land. In certain places over the country 12-14 inches of top soil has been deposited in furrows and around farmsteads — covering up tools and implements and settling on window sills and in the wife's kitchen cabinets.

Frequently we see two fields side by side with the same soil type, with both being subjected to the same punishment from the elements, yet one with only a small amount of protection will receive no damage while the other with no protection contributes significantly to our dust storms.

Moreover this is frequently true when some expenditure has been made, using mechanical methods, to protect the plot where there are no residues. With operating expenses on farm machinery what they are and labor as expensive as it is, proper use of residues could be the answer to lower production costs.

With a spade one can quickly ascertain the benefits of crop residues as a conserver of moisture. We will find that moisture is always present in greater quantities closer to the surface of the soil at any time of the year. This is true for two reasons: one—the residues lower soil temperature, preventing moisture from "cooking out" of the soil; two—residues also reduce run-off from rainfall, allowing more of it to enter the soil.

Residues cushion the impact of raindrops upon the soil and prevent soil from "splashing" into solution and flowing down slope into streams, stock tanks or municipal water storage reservoirs.

The foregoing indicates the possibility that residues properly used may produce higher yields on cropland. Does it not seem possible that if costs are reduced and yields increased, more profits would result?

The Soil Conservation Service has on hand for the use of farmers technical information concerning crop residue use—how much residue is necessary, how to estimate pounds of residue, etc., which is available at our office at the courthouse. Dissemination of this information to interested people is one of the services rendered by the Soil Conservation Service assisting the Salt Fork Soil Conservation District. We are anxious to be of service to all landowners and others interested in the welfare of the county. Please let us know if we can help you.

BERMDA GRASS PASTURES

Unusually high forage production is possible in certain cases, from Midland Bermuda grass pastures when intensive management practices are used.

Midland Bermuda grass has a high growth rate due to what is called Hybrid vigor. Midland is a Hybrid similar in nature to Hybrid cotton, milo or corn. And like these crops must be well cared for in order to realize a profit due to the high initial cost.

For more efficient production of Midland Bermuda grass forage, there are several prerequisites. Some of these are water, proper use, and fertilization. Normal rainfall in this area must be supplemented either by irrigation, outside run-off or a high water table. If any of these are available it is possible that Midland may be efficiently grown.

Fertilization will definitely pay dividends when used on Bermuda grass that is irrigated. The amounts of fertilizer used should be regulated by local farmers' experience or soil tests. In any event applications must meet the needs of the plants.

Proper use of Bermuda grass is very important. Sufficient top growth must be left when grazing or harvesting so that forage manufacturing parts of the plants are not handicapped. Bermuda grass should never be cut less than six inches tall when it is being used for forage production.

Not more than 5 percent of the air dry weight of forage comes from the soil. The other 95 percent is taken from the air by the leaves, in the form of carbon dioxide, and changed by them, into the sugars and proteins which make up the grass plant.

It should not be hard to see that when more than a given amount of the leaves are removed, this process might be seriously impaired. In the case of well managed Bermuda grass about 50 percent of the air dry weight will be above the six inch level of a mature plant, thus to prevent impairment of the forage producing portion of the plant, we should "take half—leave half."

The Salt Fork Soil Conservation District recommends Midland Bermuda grass as an outstanding forage producer when the above prerequisites are met, and the Soil Conservation Service furnishing technical assistance to the district and its cooperators, has cost share available from the Department of Agriculture. Anyone desiring further information on this subject may contact the Soil Conservation Service at the courthouse.

HONOR STUDENT

Laura Whitson, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. S. Whitson, was the first scholastic member of the Samnorwood eighth grade this year.

Custom Equipment May Be Cheaper

How many hours or days per year should a tractor be used in order to justify its cost?

Oklahoma State University economists believe tractors should be operated at least 500 hours annually, or about two months steady operation each year, to reduce hourly overhead to an economical level.

For plows, planters, harvesters and other machinery, 100 hours or 10 days per year, is about the minimum usage for economical operation.

One way farmers can reduce farm machinery costs, the OSU specialists point out, is thru use of custom equipment.

For medium to small farms, where some kinds of equipment will be used only two or three days in the year, the use of custom equipment is especially recommended.

Money Problems

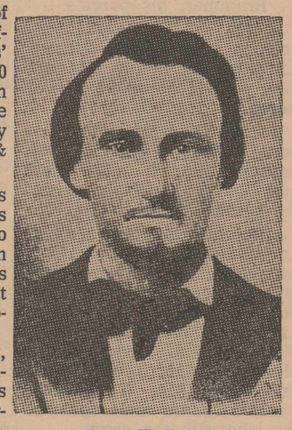

New Book Describes 100 Years of Texas Oil

DALLAS.—The problems of raising money to make a profitable enterprise out of Texas' first oil well — drilled 100 years ago — are revealed in a biographical booklet on Lyne T. Barret published Saturday by Texas Mid-Continent Oil & Gas Association.

Publication of the booklet is one of a number of projects slated by the Association to honor the pioneer oil man whom petroleum historians credit with drilling the first Texas oil well near Nacogdoches in 1866.

Written by Frank X. Tolbert, Dallas historian and newspaperman, the story which is based on some of Barret's correspondence and business papers, discloses the great optimism and disappointments surrounding this first attempt to create a Texas oil company.

Barret obtained some $5,000 worth of machinery from operators in the then-young Pennsylvania oil industry to develop the oil leases he held. However, following a second well, which failed to produce, his source of capital dried up. Correspondence indicates that Barret attempted to swap Texas land to the Pennsylvanians for further assistance, but they were not interested. Mrs. Barret was reported to have inherited a great deal of land.

Lyne T. Barrett

Tolbert wrote that after trips north for additional financing failed, Barret apparently never drilled another well, although he did live to see the development of great fields at Beaumont and other places in the southeastern section of the state. He had written letters prior to the drilling of his own well near Nacogdoches describing a venture planned in Hardin County. Phrases from the letter indicate his optimism: "The great excitement of the age is oil . . . This region of Texas will be wild upon the subject in a few months . . . a man and the money have already gone north to buy the necessary machinery to search the bowels of the earth for oil . . . None doubt that oil will be found . . . What is the use of toiling and struggling with aching brains and weary hands for bread when gold so temptingly invites you to reach out and clutch it?"

Unfortunately for Barret, according to the Tolbert account, the man who drilled the first oil well in Texas was unable to "clutch it."

"After he gave up his oil operations," Tolbert wrote, "Barret ran a mercantile store at Melrose and managed his wife's farms."

April Bond Sales $17,340

April Series E and H Savings Bond sales increased 9% both in Texas and throughout the nation, compared to April 1965, John T. Forbis, chairman of the Collingsworth County Savings Bond committee, announced this week.

Sales in Collingsworth County during the first four months of 1966 totaled $38,237 which represents 29% of the 1966 sales goal. April sales in the county were $17,340.

Series E and H Bond sales in Texas during the month of April totaled $13,464,565.

"A $10,000 increase in the recent purchase limit for U.S. Savings Bonds will further boost sales in the county during 1966. Buyers can now double annual purchases of E Bonds as the Treasury Department has raised the recent limitation from $10,000 to $20,000 (face amount). H Bonds formerly had a calendar year limit of $20,000 and this has been increased to $30,000. The new high limitations were set in view of the increasingly important role that U.S. Savings Bonds are playing in helping contain inflationary pressures and provide sound management of the public debt," said Chairman Forbis.

The announcement of a state water plan, much of which will be down state, does not lessen the importance of doing something for ourselves in retaining the water on all of our streams. When the dam on Salt Fork becomes a reality we should have plans for Elm Creek, Buck Creek and the small stream north of Wellington that runs into Salt Fork.

Last Sunday they were harvesting wheat in the Quanah-Vernon area at a rapid pace and the combining is expected to move to the Wellington area by next week. In fact it is expected that the first wheat will be brought to town by the end of this week. Farmers and grain dealers say that this area has some very good wheat. Our acreage is not large, but the harvest comes at a time when it provides an appreciated stimulus to our economy. The wheat around Quanah is very good. Unfortunately that around Pampa and Amarillo is practically nonexistent with the exception of the irrigated land.

You read about doctors transplanting new hearts into afflicted patients. There are also transplants of kidneys and liver. This seems wonderful for a child with a diseased vital organ for it would enable them to live a normal and useful life. The advances that have been made in prolonging human life are as startling as our trips through space.

Election week has arrived again and we will go to the polls again next Saturday. The ballots for most of the county will contain only four names involving two races, while the ballots for Precinct 2 will contain six names. I believe this is the shortest county ballot ever submitted to the people—at least the shortest since 1924.

Besides being election day Saturday is also the time of the full moon in June. The morning stars are Venus and Saturn and the evening star is Jupiter. All of these together make for interesting gazing both in the early morning and in the evening.

Cattlemen are becoming more and more interested in the freeze branding method by which the branding iron is cooled far below freezing by dry ice and alcohol. It leaves a pure white brand without damaging the skin which detracts from the value of the hide. It works to perfection on all cattle except white cattle such as the Charolaise and Charbray.

CASH CHECKS SLOWLY

Here are 25 Good Reasons Why!!!

1—Don't let yourself be hurried when cashing checks.

2—Check-passers try to work fast—you take your time.

3—All strangers are not crooks — but most crooks are strangers.

4—Always have check endorsed in your presence.

5—Know your endorser—or be prepared to pay if the check bounces.

6—Insist on positive identification.

7—Printed checks can be forgeries; they can also have been stolen and then forged.

8—Government checks also can be stolen and forged.

9—Remember — credentials also can be forged.
