Soviet official says jet was on spy mission

MOSCOW (AP) — The Kremlin charged today that the South Korean jumbo jet it shot down was on a carefully coordinated spy mission with a U.S. reconnaissance jet, and warned that Soviet defense forces will shoot again if necessary.

In an unprecedented news conference, the Soviet chief of staff, Marshal Nikolai V. Ogarkov, said the decision to bring down the jumbo took 2½ hours during which 10 inteceptors gave chase and 120 warning shots were fired.

"We dragged on our activities for two hours and a half and it was only when we were convinced we were dealing with a reconnaissance airplane totally ignoring our defense forces. What was left to us?" Ogarkov told a Western-style, question-and-answer news conference, a rarity in the Soviet Union.

It was the first time Ogarov had met with foreign reporters, and illustrated Soviet efforts to still the international furor over the shooting down of an unarmed civilian plane with the loss of 269 lives.

He bristled when reporters continued to press him as to why an unarmed commercial plane was shot down even if the circumstances were unusual.

■ Reagan urges allies to sever ties with Aeroflot — Page 2A

"It was a completely different type of plane, not a plane there in error. The Soviet Union honorably and justly fulfilled its obligations," he said.

"Anti-aircraft defense forces attempted to force the plane to land. A complete conviction was achieved that we were dealing with a reconnoitering plane," Ogarkov said.

He insisted the fighter crew and ground command had acted properly and legally, and warned, "In the future, if need be, they will also perform their combat tasks."

The South Korean airliner was shot down Sept. 1 by a Soviet air-to-air missile and all 269 people aboard perished, including 61 Americans. The catastrophe has aroused a worldwide furor and demands for a Soviet explanation.

After a series of government statements providing the Soviet versions of events, the Kremlin today arranged the extraordinary news conference that lasted two hours and was televised live abroad, but not in the Soviet Union. It provided the most detailed argument to date on why the Soviet Union insists it was justified in shooting down the airliner.

In addition to Ogarkov, Deputy Foreign Minister Georgi Kornienko, and Leonid Zamyatim, chief of the Communist Party's Information Department also fielded questions from dozens of correspondents.

Ogarkov said the jumbo had rendezvoused with a U.S. RC-135 spy plane, flew with it for 10 minutes, deliberately entered Soviet airspace then defied four Soviet interceptors over Kamchatka and six over Sakhalin and tried to flee.

He said the plane had flown over at least one "nuclear defense" site and a "very important" defense center near the city of Yuzhno Sakhalinsk on the southern tip of Sakhalin.

Fall fun

The call to "Start the Fall with a Bang" met with a positive response from a number of Midlanders Thursday, when the Pickwick Players presented excerpts from "Snoopy," in the courtyard at First City National Bank. Other acts presented during the noon hour concert included performances by Midland and Lee high schools' drum corps and a visual arts presentation from the Midland Palette Club. Sponsored by the Midland Arts Assembly and First City, Thursday's concert opened the series of four.

Drought drives up food prices, government says

WASHINGTON (AP) — Wholesale prices, driven up by the first food price increase in four months, rose 0.4 percent in August, the government said today.

Food price hikes, largely the product of the summer's devastating drought and heat wave, were posted for vegetables, poultry, eggs and pork. In all, food prices rose 0.4 percent, matching the overall gain.

Experts had been predicting that the devastating weather would send food prices up next year, but the speed with which the increases are being felt shows just how severe the drought and heat have been.

Even with the food price increases, however, many economists say that the Labor Department's wholesale price calculation for all of 1983 may rise at its slowest pace since the mid-1960s.

Indeed, prices for the first eight months of the year were flat. For the year ending in August, prices rose just 1.4 percent, their best 12-month showing since 1967. They had risen 3.7 percent in 1982.

This summer's weather was felt in a number of statistics in today's Producer Price Index for finished goods:

—Vegetable prices, reflecting withering damage to corn, bean and other crops, skyrocketed 16.5 percent, a dramatic turnaround from July's 11.9 percent decline.

—Poultry prices soared 5.1 percent after falling 2 percent in the preceding month. Indeed, million of chickens suffocated in the oppressive heat of July and August.

—Further evidence of the diminished hen population could be seen in egg prices, which rose 4.4 percent after falling 1.4 percent.

—Pork prices rose 0.6 percent after five months of sharp declines, an indication in part of pigs' susceptibility to unrelieved heat because they cannot evaporate moisture through their skin.

On the plus side, fresh fruit prices fell 5.6 percent.

Rockets strike Marine zone again

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — The U.S. Marine zone at the international airport was rocketed twice during the night after President Ronald Reagan pledged "whatever support it takes" to shield American peacekeepers from attacks.

No new casualties were reported.

Another barrage struck close to the international peacekeeping force's French contingent at its mid-city base. A French spokesman denied a local press report that the French aircraft carrier Foch retaliated by shelling artillery positions in the Druse-controlled central mountains.

Associated Press photographer William Foley today said the first rocket barrage came at about midnight and the second about 75 minutes later.

Nine rockets hit in the first attack and three in the second, sending the 1,200 Marines at the airport into bunkers and foxholes on each occasion, Foley reported.

■ Lawmakers threaten to cut off funds for Marines — Page 2A

No further attacks had occurred by dawn, but artillery fire could be heard in the mountains, where Christian and Druse militias have been struggling for control since the Israeli army withdrew to a new defense line further south last Sunday.

The rocketing came a day after the U.S. Navy frigate Bowen fired on and destroyed a Druse militia battery that had shelled the airport, where four Marines have been killed and 28 wounded since late last month.

In a telephone call to the Marines' commander, Col. Tim Garaghty, Reagan offered his condolences Thursday for the casualties and said: "I am determined to see to it that we provide you whatever support it takes to stop the attacks on your positions.

"Tell the Marines the entire nation is proud of you and the outstanding job you are doing under difficult odds," Reagan told Garaghty. The telephone call was reported in Washington by Larry Speakes, the chief White House spokesman.

Rep. Clarence Long, D-Md., said in Washington he would try to get Congress to block funding for the Marine contingent as of Nov. 1 unless Reagan filed a report acknowledging the Marines are in a combat situation and seeking congressional approval for their continued presence.

He contended Reagan had moved the Marine force into a war position without proper congressional approval.

Druse leader Walid Jumblatt's Progressive Socialist Party claimed in a communique issued in Damascus, Syria, today that its forces had captured the ancient Christian town of Beit-Eddin in the Chouf mountains and had laid seige to neighboring Deir Al-Kamar, the largest Christian town in the region.

The Druse forces were braced for "the final assault into Deir Al-Kamar any moment unless the (Christian) Phalangists surrender to avoid bloodshed," the communique said.

It pledged to spare the lives of thousands of Christian refugees who have fled to Deir Al-Kamar from other Chouf and Aley mountain areas overrun by the Druse in the past five days.

Assassination of Chicago mayor allegedly plotted

Harold Washington

CHICAGO (AP) — The chatter of "a loud-mouthed drunk in a bar" led to criminal charges that landed a wealthy real estate broker in jail for allegedly plotting the assassination of Mayor Harold Washington, the broker's attorney claims.

The suspect, Lawrence N. Oberman, 38, was indicted by a Cook County grand jury Thursday on two counts of solicitation to commit murder and one count of possession of cocaine, said Cook County State's Attorney Richard M. Daley.

Oberman was arrested Wednesday night. At a preliminary hearing Thursday, Circuit Court Judge Joseph J. Urso set bond at $4 million.

Daley told a news conference Thursday that Oberman offered to pay an undisclosed sum of money to have Washington, the city's first black mayor, assassinated. Daley declined to say how much money was offered or what was the motive.

Daley said the offer was made to an undercover informant he identified only as Keith Freeman.

George Murtaugh, Oberman's attorney, said in a telephone interview Thursday that his client was set up and that his tape-recorded comments were "light drunken banter." He said Freeman is Oberman's cousin and helped law enforcement agents for his own benefit.

He said the tape recordings are "a parroting of a loud-mouthed drunk in a bar. I'm talking about my client. He's the kind of guy that you walk away from in a bar.

"I'm glad it's tape recorded. When you hear the tapes, you'll see how silly this thing is."

However, said Daley, "Threats of violence must be taken seriously and we do take them seriously whether they involve a public official or a private citizen."

Unnamed sources were quoted in the Chicago Tribune and Chicago Sun-Times as saying that Oberman was recorded offering $1 million for the mayor's assassination because he was concerned about the future of the city under Washington's administration.

Murtaugh said Oberman will plead innocent to the charges at his arraignment, which is scheduled Sept. 29.

Oberman was arrested in front of his home in an affluent lakefront neighborhood on the city's near North Side after allegedly purchasing 1⅛ ounces of cocaine from a government undercover agent, Daley said.

Daley, who lost to Washington in the city's Democratic mayoral primary last February and is the son of the late Mayor Richard J. Daley, said Washington's safety was never in jeopardy. He said the mayor's bodyguards were advised of the investigation when it began Aug. 12. The probe originated with the Federal Drug Enforcement Administration, then was turned over to local officials, he said.

Daley said Oberman had no previous criminal record and described him as "having some wealth...We know Mr. Oberman has a substantial amount of money."

According to the Tribune, Oberman told investigators that he has earned $600,000 this year.

A lifelong Chicago resident, curly-haired and heavyset, Oberman lives in Astor House, a posh 31-story apartment building in the lakefront neighborhood known as the Gold Coast.

"I don't believe it. No way. No. I know that he is not a violent person. He's a very good-hearted soul," Oberman's mother, Esther Oberman of Skokie, said of the charges.

Assistant State's Attorney Jeffrey J. Kent asked Urso for a high bond, saying Oberman has "substantial liquid assets." Oberman could be released by posting $400,000, 10 percent of the bond.

Autumn creeps into West Texas air

Autumn, slowly but surely, is creeping into the West Texas air.

The high Thursday reached only 90, while nighttime temperatures consistently have begun dipping into the 60s.

The National Weather Service expects similar temperatures for tonight and Saturday, as the low should be in the mid 60s and the high Saturday in the low 90s.

Thursday's extremes of 90 and 68 were well off the all-time records for the date of 97 in 1964 and 53 in 1956.

Only a trace of precipitation has been recorded by the Midland NWS station this month, leaving the 1983 total at 2.79 inches.

Reagan wants Aeroflot ties severed

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, trying to cripple worldwide operations of the huge Soviet airline Aeroflot, is urging allies to follow the U.S. lead in severing all business ties with the Russian carrier and formally closing its already dormant ticket offices.

Reagan moved against Aeroflot, which claims to be the world's largest airline, Thursday in a second installment of retaliation against the Kremlin for shooting down an unarmed South Korean jumbo jet with 269 people aboard. Limited sanctions on cultural and other transportation agreements had been announced Monday.

The latest steps failed to satisfy critics who had urged Reagan to be tougher with the Soviets. Terry Dolan, head of the National Conservative Political Action Committee, said few Americans would consider flying Aeroflot in the first place and that Reagan's action "is hardly bold or decisive."

Indeed, the closing of Aeroflot's two offices — effective next Thursday — will have hardly any direct impact because the airline had done little apparent business in the United States since its flights were banned from landing in this country on Jan. 5, 1982, in reaction to the Soviet-backed imposition of martial law in Poland.

The U.S. offices had served only to book flights out of Montreal and other foreign cities and had been shut by the Soviets themselves in recent weeks. The Canadian government ordered the Montreal flights suspended for 60 days in retaliation for the Korean jetliner downing.

Reagan, meanwhile, planned to attend a memorial service for the plane victims today at the Washington Cathedral. Diplomats and members of the Cabinet also were invited.

White House deputy press secretary Larry Speakes said the U.S. action "certainly costs them (Aeroflot) in prestige and it costs them in foreign exchange, to some extent."

"It is our hope that if other nations will step in and do this same thing, then it could have a profound effect on the Soviet airline," said Speakes. "The economic impact (of the U.S. sanctions) is hard to estimate at the present time with any precision."

Aeroflot says its 1,500 planes fly more than 330,000 people a day to places as far-flung as Brazzaville, the Congo, and Kuala Lumpur, Malaysia.

In banning commercial relationships with Aeroflot, the CAB urged American travel agencies to observe the "letter and spirit" of that action and "deny further commercial benefits to Aeroflot." In other words, it asked agents to go a step further and quit booking any business that would use an Aeroflot flight — by a foreign airline connection as well as American.

Speakes acknowledged that Americans still could travel to Moscow through other countries and could book tickets to the Soviet Union through foreign airlines with offices in the United States.

On a 4-0 vote, the CAB approved Reagan's request to:

—Prohibit any U.S. carrier from selling a ticket to a passengers on any overseas flight if the passenger's itinerary includes traveling on the Soviet air carrier.

—Prohibit Aeroflot from selling air transportation in the United States through U.S. carriers.

—Suspend any arrangements U.S. airlines may have to provide travelers from the United States with connecting service with the Soviet air carrier.

—Prohibit any U.S. airlines from accepting any tickets or shipping documents issued by Aeroflot worldwide.

Despite the ban on Aeroflot flights into the United States, U.S. carriers have routinely connected passengers traveling to the Soviet Union with Aeroflot flights in other countries such as Canada, Mexico and France.

The airline industry quickly said it would go along with the prohibitions and a spokesman for a large travel agency trade group said he expected travel agents to comply "almost 100 percent.".

"The airlines pledge full assistance in helping make certain that civilian aircraft are assured peaceful passage through the world's skies," the Air Transport Association said in a statement endorsing Reagan's actions. The association represents most of the large carriers.

Richard Knodt, president of the American Society of Travel Agents, said the organization will "support the president in all ways" and will call upon its 11,000 member agencies to stop all Aeroflot bookings.

But he and other travel agents said the action could mean lost passengers for U.S. carriers flying the North Atlantic routes as passengers bound to or from Moscow shift to the various European airlines that serve the United States.

The U.S. carriers which had connecting flights to Aeroflot include Pan American World Airways, Trans World Airlines, Delta Airlines, Northwest Airlines, People Express and World Airways.

In issuing its order, CAB chairman Dan McKinnon said, "It is in the essential foreign policy interest of the United States to take resolute action against the Soviet carrier Aeroflot."

The order goes into effect Monday, CAB officials said.

Official says jet was on spy mission

The three Soviets at the news conference continued to blame the United States for the catastrophe, and Ogarkov claimed Washington dispatched the plane "completely without taking into account, or perhaps taking into consideration, human losses."

At one point, Kornienko said, "The Americans do not want to admit the truth."

Ogarkov said the plane at one point was headed directly for "a major base of the U.S.S.R.'s strategic nuclear forces," and that the order to shoot was given "only after the Soviet air defense forces had used every warning measure possible under those (night) conditions."

Ogarkov said Soviet fighter pilots tried to contact the Korean crew by radio. He also said the pilots fired two sets of warning shots, including a series of "four bursts" totaling 120 rounds of tracer shells as the plane flew over Sakhalin.

Tapes released by Japan and the United States contained no reference to warning shots or efforts by the Soviet interceptors to talk to the Korean pilot. Zamyatin at one point referred to tapes, saying, "historically we have many examples of what can be done to recorded transcripts...."

Behind the three Soviets was a wall-sized map of the Soviet Far East and the air routes crossing it.

"There is an official statement of the Pentagon representative who said the RC-135 was in the Soviet air space in the vicinity of the Korean plane to monitor the course of the plane," Ogarkov said. "But we know this was certainly not the only goal because as we can see on this flight chart ... Their flights were certainly coordinated so as to make our task more difficult and confuse our air defense forces," the marshal said.

Ogarkov also acknowledged for the first time that the Soviets had shot down the plane with an air-to-air missile, one of two he said were fired. Previously, the Soviets had said only that the flight was "stopped."

Asked by an American reporter why the Soviets couldn't identify a jumbo jet, and why in any event it was shot down, Ogarkov said it was difficult to determine the silhouette of the plane because of the darkness.

"The Soviet air forces made attempts to make it land but the plane evaded, altered course ... all possibilities were exhausted and only then was the order given," he said.

Beginning the news conference, Ogarkov said the South Korean plane's "deviation from the course was already about 500 kilometers (310 miles) and the flight evidently was proceeding at all times under surveillance ... of systems controlled by the Americans," he said.

"That the plane could be lost by American systems must be excluded, as an error. This error should have been seen. Why wasn't it corrected? This question remains unanswered still."

Ogarkov said nearly 12,000 flights proceed regularly along the route he traced on the map with a pointer, and he asked why if the plane was so far off course didn't U.S. and Japanese ground controllers become alarmed.

He said Soviet electronic devices tracked the U.S. RC-135 spy plane in the area for about two hours, and then another plane was detected and the two rendezvoused and flew side by side for about 10 minutes.

The United States has said an RC-135 was in the area — but not in Soviet air space — that it was never closer than 75 miles to the Korean plane.

Marshal's district honored

The United States Marshal's Service for the sprawling federal court system's Western District of Texas has been named the "Distinguished District for the United States Marshal's Service" for 1983, according to U.S. Marshal Bill Jonas of San Antonio.

The district, one of 94 U.S. Marshal's districts in the nation, extends westward from the San Antonio-Austin-Waco area to El Paso and takes in seven divisions: Austin, Waco, San Antonio, Del Rio, Midland, Pecos and El Paso. The district takes in 68 counties and 94,000 square miles.

In winning the nationwide honor, the marshal's force in the district was cited for its "sustained outstanding performance on an individual basis" by William E. Hall, director of the U.S. Marshal's Service.

In turn, Jonas expressed gratitude to the other elements of the federal criminal justice system which service the Western District of Texas.

"I am grateful for the cooperation which we have received from each individual United States district judge and from all of the elements of the federal judicial system in the Western District of Texas," the marshal said.

Chief Judge William S. Sessions of San Antonio recommended the district's marshal force for the award, he said.

The deputy U.S. marshal servicing the Midland-Odessa Division of the district is Gail Boggs of Midland. The division's presiding judge is Lucius D. Bunton.

The U.S. Marshal Service was established by Congress in 1789 to serve the federal courts.

Man reports theft of two dogs

The theft of an Alaskan malemute and a Doberman pinscher were among the complaints lodged with city police during the past 24 hours.

Gary Crabb of 1503 Holloway said the dogs disappeared from his yard sometime Wednesday night or early Thursday morning. They were valued at a total of $645.

In a burglary complaint, Fannin Elementary School Principal Bob Watkins told officers someone broke into the school and took record albums, art supplies and a cassette tape recorder worth a total of $460. Entry was gained by breaking a window.

A.J. Thomason of 2901 Marantha reported that his car was entered while it was parked in his driveway early Thursday morning. Stolen were $800 in change and a First City Bank checkbook in the name of Kenneth W. Thomason.

Marine zone hit again by rockets

U.S. F-14 Tomcat jets from the carrier Eisenhower flew over Deir Al-Kamar Thursday at the request of the Lebanese government to conduct "humanitarian documentation of the refugee situation," Marine spokesman Maj. Robert Jordan disclosed today.

He said U.S. and French jets would conduct such flights from time to time, but "we're not going to announce every time we do it."

The Druse claimed in a statement Thursday that Lebanese troops and Christian militiamen "massacred" 40 people at a Druse religious shrine in Ebey, 7½ miles southeast of Beirut. There was no independent confirmation of the claim, the latest in a series of reports of massacres this week by both Christians and the Syrian-backed Druse.

In the northern port city of Tripoli, a car bomb exploded in front of the office of the Sunni Moslem fundamentalist group "Islamic Union." Hospital officials said seven were killed and 20 were wounded in the blast.

Two ABC television crew members — David Owens, 35, of Wichita, Kan., and Akram Abi Hanna, 23, a native Lebanese — returned safely to Beirut after being reported missing since last weekend.

They said heavy shelling forced them to seek shelter in a mountain cave, where they spent two nights.

Rich man allegedly plots assassination

However, Kent said, "During the course of our de-briefing of Mr. Oberman last night, he expressed some serious concern with regard for his safety were he to be placed on the street."

Grayson Mitchell, Washington's press secretary, said switchboards at city hall lit up after the report about the alleged plot Thursday morning. He said the mayor first learned of the allegations from news reports, but was "unshaken."

"It's not the first threat," Mitchell said. Washington has been the subject of "bomb scares and threats fairly frequently."

Lawmakers threaten to cut off funds for Marines

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congressional critics are threatening to seek a cutoff of money to U.S. troops in Lebanon while President Reagan is pledging his full support to the 1,200-man Marine contingent in the war-torn Mideast nation.

"I am determined to see to it that we provide you whatever support it takes to stop the attacks on your positions," Reagan said Thursday in a telephone call to Marine commander Col. Tim Garaghty in Beirut. "Tell the Marines the entire nation is proud of you and the outstanding job you are doing under difficult odds."

Reagan's phone call preceded a news conference by Rep. Clarence Long, D-Md., to protest the administration's assertion that the Marines are not involved in combat but instead are caught in the middle of hostile fire in their role as a peacekeeping force.

Four Marines have died in recent fighting in Beirut, and a total of five have been killed since the force was sent there a year ago.

"President Reagan, with all good intentions, has ordered our Marines into a war which is the constitutional job of Congress to declare and provide the money for," said Long, chairman of the House Appropriations subcommittee on foreign operations.

The administration acknowledges that U.S. troops are firing on leftist Druse gunners in the mountains outside Beirut, and Long said "any 9-year-old kid can watch TV and see our people in combat, but the president of the United States does not see any combat."

Long said he will introduce legislation to block funds for U.S. troops in Lebanon as of Nov. 1 unless Reagan has filed a report under a section of the War Powers Act that would require him to acknowledge the Marines are in a combat situation.

If Reagan filed such a report, he would have to withdraw the troops after 60 days unless Congress voted to allow them to stay. He could get a 30-day extension by pleading that it was needed to get the Marines out safely.

Sources on Capitol Hill say the administration is trying to get Congress to initiate legislation to allow the troops to remain, but White House chief spokesman Larry Speakes said that "it would be highly premature to indicate the White House was talking about any resolution."

Speakes also said the president had been informed that U.S. troops in Beirut and off the coast of Lebanon are returning fire from leftist Druse-Moslem gunners trying to prevent the Lebanese army from moving into mountains outside the capital.

"We regard it as exactly what we said we'd do," Speakes said.

Drought drives up prices, government says

Fresh price declines were also posted for beef and veal, down 1.3 percent, a sharp cutback, however, from July's 4.8 percent drop.

As for beef and veal prices, which have been moderating as breeders liquidate their herds rather than pay high feed prices, many analysts expect higher prices in the coming months as the liquidation ends and the supply of cattle going to market shrinks.

Further gains are also expected for other food prices as the effects of the drought and heat spread. One economist, Kathleen Cooper of the Security Pacific National Bank in Los Angeles, said that food prices "are starting to take off."

Food prices overall had fallen 0.6 percent in June and, again, in July.

As for other areas of the wholesale price report, the department said energy prices rose a modest 0.3 percent, slightly higher than the 0.2 percent gain of the previous month.

Gasoline prices rose 0.4 percent, less than half the 0.9 percent gain of the month before. Natural gas prices edged downward 0.2 percent after tumbling 1.2 percent. Heating oil prices rose 0.5 percent after falling 0.7 percent.

The energy price calculations reported today were actually for July. That component of the wholesale price measure lags a month because energy companies report their prices too late for inclusion in the most recent index.

The department also reported that:

—Passenger car prices rose a sharp 1.3 percent after holding flat in July. Light truck prices were up 0.3 percent, reversing a 0.3 percent decline.

—Capital equipment costs rose 0.7 percent, their sharpest rise since November 1981. Much of the increase was due to higher motor vehicle prices. Those costs are for machinery and transportation equipment used by business.

All the price changes are adjusted for normal seasonal variations.

In all, the Producer Price Index for finished goods stood at 286.2 in August, meaning that goods costing $10 in 1967 would have cost $28.62 last month.

If last month's 0.4 percent increase held steady for 12 straight months, the yearly advance would be 4.7 percent.

Doctor will address attitudinal healing

Dr. Gerald G. Jampolsky, author of the best-seller, "Love is Letting Go of Fear," will address changing one's life by changing one's mind at Lee High School at 7:30 p.m. today.

Admission is $10 per person and copies of his newest book, "Teach Only Love," are included in the fee.

Arriving in Midland this morning, Jampolsky said his speech will center on attitudinal healing.

"It's not people and conditions that cause you to be upset," Jampolsky said. "It's your thoughts about those people and conditions."

According to Jampolsky, several principles in his new book, scheduled for release next week as well as another printing, will be discussed. Those include health as inner peace and letting go of fear, the essence of being is love, giving and receiving are the same, this instant is the only time there is, forgiveness is the key to true happiness and learning to listen to the inner voice — the voice of peace — before making a decision.

He also said he plans to discuss how to heal relationships, including those with parents, spouses and employers.

"We must choose to experience peace rather than conflict, love rather than fear, find love rather than be a fault-finder, be a love-giver rather than a lover-seeker, and teach love," Jampolsky said.

His experience with attitudinal healing began with a center to help children with catastrophic illnesses to face their fears. Counseling expanded to family members of the children and then to children of parents who were critically or terminally ill.

While at first, the medical profession viewed his teachings with "caution," Jampolsky said it realized the concept of unconditional love helped people face their fears.

A graduate of Stanford Medical School, Jampolsky has appeared on "60 Minutes," "Phil Donahue," "Tomorrow Show" and "The Today Show."

He has spoken at major medical centers and has been featured in one of the American Medical Association's publications.

The 35 autonomous centers for attitudinal healing around the world, including one in Austin, Dallas and Houston, use Jampolsky's principles, he said.

Authorities search for abducted Mexican official

MCALLEN (AP) — Authorities searched today for a high-ranking union official of Mexico's oil monopoly who they say was abducted at gunpoint from his posh house and may have been taken into Mexico.

Two gunmen held three people hostage until Hector Garcia Hernandez, who had been accused of defrauding the union, returned to his home in McAllen, near the Mexican border, early Thursday afternoon, police officer Jesse Colbath said.

Garcia Hernandez, secretary of education and social services for the PEMEX oil union, was then taken away in a dark blue Dodge, Colbath said.

The three hostages, two caretakers of the Garcia Hernandez home and a female friend of the official who was also in the house, were threatened by the gunmen and waited more than an hour before calling police, Colbath said. The identities of the hostages were not immediately available.

Colbath said authorities have received no ransom demands and don't know whether Garcia Hernandez was taken into Mexico or remains in the United States. A bridge crossing the border is just 10 minutes from Garcia Hernandez' home, he added.

"We assume the man is in Mexico, and if he is, there is little we can do. The FBI may be able to do something, through the State Department, of course," Colbath said.

Although no motive has yet been found for the kidnapping, Colbath noted that Garcia Hernandez, 48, has been involved in a highly publicized feud with another PEMEX union official.

Salvador Barragan Camacho, secretary general of the Mexican Oil Workers Union, filed a complaint with the Mexican attorney general's office in August, accusing Garcia Hernandez and his private secretary of defrauding the union of $6.6 million.

Barragan Camacho claims that in 1980 and 1981, Garcia Hernandez took 2 percent on payments.

White creates office

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Mark White has announced creation of a "high-powered, rapid-response team" to mobilize efforts and influence in attracting new industry and investment to Texas.

White told a news conference Thursday the new Office of Economic Development would operate within the governor's office by reassignment of present employees.

He also said it would require no additional funds.

"This will provide a comprehensive, multi-faceted effort that will link our educational institutions, our job training programs, our labor leaders, our private employers, and our state agencies, cities and counties, and financial and marketing institutions into a working partnership," the governor said.

White was asked if the office was not a reflection on the Texas Industrial Commission, the Tourist Development Agency and the Agriculture Department, all of which have the aim of attracting new businesses, investments and workers to Texas.

"I have been very unsatisfied with efforts of these agencies over the past several months and I do not feel like they are focusing as well as they could," White said.

"I think they have been more or less charting the same course they have been charting back in the 1950s when most of these agencies were created and there has been very little change and absolutely no innovative thought given to their efforts," he said.

Later, White amended his comments to say he was "pretty well pleased" with Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower. "He has some very innovative ideas ... the opportunity to bring the producer of agricultural products closer to the consumer is going to be productive with higher prices for the farmer and probably lower prices for the consumer," White said.

Cadet Corp. discrimination is attacked

Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — One of the court actions which the Reagan administration announced with pride Thursday among a list of measures to remove discrimination against women was one involving the Corps of Cadets at Texas A&M University.

Attorney General William French Smith mentioned this in his report to the president and the Cabinet Council on Legal Policy as he sought to justify the Reagan administration's claim that it is working hard to safeguard the legal rights of women.

In the case of Zentgraf and United States against Texas A&M, Smith said this case was brought during the Carter administration but was disposed of under negotiation during this Administration.

"We challenged the University's maintainance of a 'Corps of Cadets' in which women's activities are severely curtailed on account of sex," Smith told the President and eight cabinet members.

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Saturday, September 10, 1983

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Austrian author Franz Werfel, American publisher Isaac Funk and dancer Adele Astaire were born on this date. Also sharing your birthday: "Sunday," TV show host Charles Kuralt, music's Jose Feliciano, Dallas Cowboy Charlie Waters and basketball's Bob Lanier. Follow your intuition in the months ahead and you will make rapid progress. A romance could interest you in a new line of work. Those in the arts get the financial backing they need to realize a dream. Finish whatever you start. Missed opportunities will not return. A young person leaves home to find himself but eventually comes back. Avoid saying "I told you so."

ARIES (March 21-April 19): An old friend introduces you to new pleasures. This is not a good day for negotiating business deals or signing legal contracts. Keep romance alive by reaching out.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): If you feel uncomfortable, follow your instincts. Luck favors those involved in athletic competitions. A young person takes a shine to you. Help a child find the answer to an academic problem.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Attention to detail can spell the difference between profit and loss on a job. Others show you more respect when you treat yourself better. Begin negotiations on a money issue.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You are far more ambitious than you like to admit. Hard work will carry you to almost any goal. Consult loved ones before taking on any new social commitments.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): A busy and productive day lies ahead. A money source appears to be drying up. Be sure a project is a sound investment. An inventive approach will open new doors.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Slow down before you hurt your chances for success. A new approach could resolve a parent-child dispute. You owe it to yourself to take a chance on romance.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Work you did last week enables you to relax this weekend. A family member needs encouragement only you can give. A letter proves just how generous a distant relative is.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A loved one pushes you to something you have been avoiding. Do not postpone the inevitable. A family financial matter needs immediate attention. Romance pursues you everywhere. Speak from the heart.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You feel a rush of creative energy today. Finish that painting or electronics project you have been working on. Rash comments will bring regrets. Take a long walk and cool off.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Romantic conquests may not be as satisfying as you imagined. An older person helps you get better organized. Catch up on your letter-writing. A romance could mystify a young child.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Do not be embarrassed to withdraw from an outing or entertainment venture that is plainly too expensive. Others go all out to show their support for your decision. Hold your head high.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Shop for bargains, but only buy things you will really be happy with. A reconciliation ushers in a wonderful period for romance. Do not let down someone who trusts you.

Updike interview on ARTS

By TOM JORY

NEW YORK (AP) — So how much John Updike, on TV, is enough?

"What Makes Rabbit Run?" last October and again in June and, now, an interview with the author on ARTS, the Hearst-ABC cable network, seem to complement one another rather nicely, and just about fill the bill.

Another show about, or with, Updike might be too much.

The writer, whose 1981 novel "Rabbit is Rich" won a Pulitzer Prize, an American Book Award and a National Book Critics Circle Award, shows up Friday evening on "First Edition," ARTS' recently introduced literary series, for a chat with John Leonard and and Nancy Evans.

And it's just that, a quiet, unhurried conversation in a book-lined study.

"Instead of slowing down," Leonard says by way of introduction, "John Updike seems to be speeding up."

"I guess the artistic life," Updike himself says, a few moments later, "is just a series of itches that the artist feels entitled to scratch."

It sounds awfully bookish, and Leonard, the bearded former literary critic for the New York Times, seems to do what he can to promote that impression. He's wearing a bush jacket for his talk with Updike, and what looks like a flannel shirt for his interview, scheduled for broadcast toward the end of the month, with Joe McGinniss.

Curiously, though, "First Edition" is not at all pretentious. Both Leonard and Ms. Evans, book editor for Glamour magazine, pose questions that might interest the viewer-reader, as well as themselves.

Why, Ms. Evans asks Updike, is Bech, another of his well-known characters, Jewish? For the experience, the writer, a Protestant responds, adding: "I kind of liked being Bech."

Later, she asks Upike which literary form he would like to be remembered for the most.

"A novel that keeps being read, and re-read, is a nice thing," he says, "but I'd love to be a poet of the first rank.... I seem to be a poet sub-minor."

The author characterizes himself "very lucky to make my living writing" but acknowledges the agony and frustration of his chosen work: "Tolstoy is always going to be champ...you can't out-Proust-ify Proust."

And, "I'd say the hardest thing about writing is to be open to what you don't know you know."

It's incisive, often personal stuff.

The show ends with something called "Coda" — the author reading from his writing — some fairly stilted commentary from critic Clifton Fadiman, and a couple of short-order book reports from Leonard and Ms. Evans.

Here's another hand from our new program for home computers, "Charles Goren: Learning Bridge Made Easy." See how you would play the hand in three no trump after a heart opening lead.

North's hand is not suited to declare no trump, since he has no tenaces. Therefore, at his second turn he makes a waiting bid in hearts, and South has enough to bid game in no trump.

West leads the king of hearts. If diamonds split normally, you have nine tricks — two spades, one heart, four diamonds and two clubs. If a defender has five hearts and three diamonds, you will go down regardless of how you play the hand.

In your exuberance you might go about establishing your diamond suit by leading ace-king and another diamond. That will set up two long diamonds in dummy, but you will end up with only eight tricks, for now you have no way to get to the king of clubs in your hand.

Making the contract entails a certain amount of risk — you have to hope that hearts are divided no worse than 4-2. Win the ace of hearts at trick one and lead a low diamond from your hand! The defenders can win and cash their three heart tricks, but you can make the rest.

Assume that West shifts to a spade after cashing his hearts. Win in dummy and cash the ace of clubs. Return to your hand with the king of diamonds and cash the king of clubs and ace of diamonds. Now you can get back to the table with a spade to make your two diamond tricks and your contract.

Zap a Commie

Call it poetic justice, if you will. We think the employers of 21-year-old Thomas Teeter of Austin embodied the mood of most Americans when they had Teeter reprogram three electronic games in their video arcade to give customers a chance to zap Soviet warships for the destruction of a Korean Air Lines jet late last week.

One of the games even urges players to save the human race from the "Communist mutant from outer space, Andropov," referring, obviously, to Soviet President Yuri Andropov.

Following the Soviet attack last week on the jet — an act which resulted in the wanton murder of 269 innocent people, including about 50 Americans — patriotism surged in this country much as it did during the Iranian hostage crisis. Americans were mad and they wanted the Soviets to pay for that stupidly needless loss of life. Once again we had that old "one for all and all for one" attitude that has held Americans together through difficult periods in this nation's history. That patriotic spirit was quickly dampened by the realization, verbalized by President Reagan, that only certain retaliatory steps can be taken that will really punish the Russians for the brutal act.

While recognizing that Mr. Reagan is probably correct in this instance and that proceeding slowly in an attempt to develop worldwide contempt for the Soviet Union likely is the only way to effect punishment, we feel the same frustration other Americans feel in this situation.

At least in Austin, angry Americans can unleash their fury on Soviet warships instead of being reasonable.

Democracy on line

Mexico's fragile experiment with democratic reform is on the line in Baja California.

Unofficial returns in last Sunday's elections indicate opposition candidates may have upset the ruling Institutional Revolutionary Party (PRI) in the Mexicali and Ensenada mayoral contests.

The PRI doesn't like to lose — and rarely has. So the question now is not so much who got the most votes but whether the Mexican government will recognize opposition party winners.

In Ensenada, David Ojeda Ochoa, the Socialist Workers Party candidate, appears to have a 7,000-vote edge. The PRI claims its man won.

Early returns also showed Eugenio Elorduy, the Mexicali mayoral candidate for the National Action Party (PAN), far ahead of the PRI competition.

In what seems to be an attempt to overturn that result, the PRI-controlled State Electoral Commission is accusing the PAN of illegally campaigning on election day.

If the commission wipes out the competition on those grounds, it wouldn't be the first time. In 1968, the PAN won municipal elections in Tijuana and Mexicali. The government nullified the results and imposed PRI councils. Since then, however, Mexico has enacted electoral reforms and has encouraged opposition parties to campaign.

We hope that when official returns are announced Sunday, they will show that the Mexican government respected the will of the voters.

For the PRI, long accustomed to running the show, it is obviously painful to relinquish power, if only a tiny portion of it. But that is the price of moving toward a true democracy.

Another View:

Keep a close watch

Add DRGs to the nation's health-care alphabet soup. This important new ingredient could reduce costs; but if not closely monitored, it also could cause significant problems.

Starting Oct. 1, Medicare patients will be classified into one of 467 categories known as diagnosis-related groups (DRGs). The government will then pay a set price for the treatment of patients who fall into each group. There will be some exceptions, of course.

The system deserves a trial. However, Rep. John D. Dingell, D-Mich., notes: "When Congress enacted the DRG program, it enacted an experiment as national policy. It may work, but flaws are already evident." Dingell was referring to potential problems cited in a study by the congressional Office of Technology Assessment.

The study noted that inherent in any per-case payment system were two incentives: (1) to reduce the cost to the hospital of each admissions, and (2) to increase the number of inpatient admissions. For example, hospitals may try to reduce the cost per patient by using fewer tests and procedures. Or a hospital may turn away the sickest patients while admitting those who need less care.

Thus, as Dingell says, "There are incentives for underprovision of services and inappropriate admissions to hospitals."

With this in mind, the new system needs to be closely monitored to reduce the chance of horror stories about deserving people being denied care — as happened when the federal government reformed the Social Security disability program.

Why bother with DRGs in the first place? Because the nation cannot afford to allow its spending on this health insurance program for the elderly to rise unchecked. Medicare accounts for more than one-third of hospital revenue. The program's yearly tab has increased from $7.5 billion in 1971 to $50 billion in 1982 — in part because Medicare has always paid hospitals for all "reasonable" costs.

In the past, hospitals have concentrated on providing quality care to Medicare patients. Now hospitals will have to continue to strive for good medical care, but they also will have to more heavily emphasize efficiency. Fortunately, the two objectives are not inherently incompatible.

However, the stakes are high. For instance, if overall health-care costs are not reined in, employers could become disinclined to offer health insurance as a benefit — especially to minimum wage earners — and a growing number of people would be out of insurance.

So while efficiency measures must be undertaken with care, they must be attempted.

CHARLEY REESE

Response to savagery a key factor

Many of us who were concerned, not so much about the savage barbarism of the Soviet Union but about the almost insane refusal of so many Americans to believe it, often remarked that it would probably take another Pearl Harbor to wake the country up.

Charley Reese

If the savage murder of 269 innocent people in a civilian airliner does that, then at least their deaths will have contributed to the salvation of their country.

Rep. Larry McDonald, who is among the dead, was one of the most principled men in Congress and the president of the John Birch Society. In dying, he may strike a greater blow against communism than he did while he was alive and he strove mightily to strike many.

There is no excuse for the Soviets' action. Even if the CIA had planted some kind of spy equipment on the plane and deliberately sent it over the Soviet bases, there is no excuse for shooting it down. The Soviets could have easily forced it to land, taken off any spy equipment and greatly embarrassed the United States.

That is all conjecture, of course, because there is no evidence whatsoever that the CIA had anything at all to do with Flight 007. All we know at the present is that it strayed or deliberately flew off course and into Soviet airspace.

Soviet airplanes, including military bombers, have frequently violated our airspace, but we have not shot them down. No civilized nation exacts a death penalty for flying off course in time of peace.

The Soviet Union, however, is not a civilized nation. It is an empire ruled by a gangster government which has utter contempt for human life, let alone other human rights like free speech. Shooting down the Korean Air Lines plane is typical, not atypical, of Soviet behavior.

Why should anyone be surprised that they would kill 269 innocent people when they have already murdered 60 million? That's right. The best scholarly estimates are that the Soviet regime has murdered some 60 million to 70 million people.

Now who but a fool or a knave would pretend that you can sit down with such animals and negotiate any kind of treaty that would be worth the ink it's printed with?

Probably, by the time you read this, the liberals will already be trying to make excuses for the Soviet Union or arguing that even if they are bad, we must nevertheless make deals with them because they are so powerful.

If we allow the cowardly appeasers, the traitors and the greedy to move us back to a position of business as usual with the Communists after this atrocity, then I can assure you America will not survive beyond the 1980s. The Soviet Union will read such behavior as a sign of such fatal weakness that it will be put into a feeding frenzy, like hungry sharks, and will pour on the pressure all over the world.

As Sen. Daniel Moyihan put it so eloquently, "This time we will not forget." This time we must not forget. This time we must finally recognize, as a nation, the true viciousness of the gangsters who rule the Soviet Union and deal with them on that basis.

We should demand an end to all diplomatic negotiations on arms control and human rights, end all trade and credit with the Soviet Union and its East European slave states, ban Soviet airliners and ships from our shores, expel all but key diplomatic personnel and withdraw from all international organizations which lend money to the Soviet Union and its satellites.

The Soviet Union has a powerful lobby in the United States which consists of Communists, socialists, greedy bankers and businessmen, pacifists, and cowards. It is time to show this slimy lobby for what it is: apologists for killers.

There are innocent children in the bottom of the sea. Their corpses should remind you of what fate the Soviet Union has in mind for you and your family.

Whether Americans get scared or angry will be the key factor in the survival of the West.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Intelligence warnings ignored

WASHINGTON — President Reagan should fire the people who have been fashioning his Middle East policy before he gets mired any deeper in the shifting sands.

Jack Anderson

It's not that the policy makers received bad intelligence; the secret warnings were clear and cogent. The dismaying truth is that the warnings were routinely ignored.

I have had regular access to intelligence reports on the Middle East crisis. Here are examples of the warnings that went unheeded:

— President Reagan promised Lebanon's Amin Gemayel that the U.S. Marines would remain on the scene until the Lebanese army could take over. The White House put out the cheery assessment that this should be no more than a year. But a full year ago, top-secret intelligence reports warned that the Lebanese army was in far worse shape than anyone had imagined and that it would have to be reconstituted from top to bottom.

— Reagan assured Congress formally that the Marines would not become involved in hostilities. Yet he was forewarned a year ago that the Marines could not avoid casualties. Citing intelligence reports, I wrote on Oct. 10, 1982: "Sooner or later during an extended peacekeeping mission, Marines are going to be shot at by one faction or another."

— As far back as March 6, 1981, a top-secret CIA analysis warned that Israeli incursions into Lebanon were "inevitable" and that a large-scale invasion was likely.

— Once the Israelis crossed into Lebanon, strategists advised the president to let them clean out the PLO underground and to install a stable Lebanese government. Only the Israelis had the military power, he was told, to maintain the peace in Lebanon. Instead, Reagan listened to the word of advisers who warned, in the language of one top-secret analysis, that the United States would "forfeit all influence" in Lebanon if the Lebanese "remain solely dependent on Israeli support."

— When President Reagan offered his "peace initiative" for the Middle East last year, he counted on the crucial support of Jordan's King Hussein. He went ahead with the plan despite intelligence warnings that the king would decline the honor.

— The president also misjudged Syria's Hafez Assad, who was expected to end his long occupation of eastern Lebanon if the Israelis could be persuaded to withdraw.

— At the same time that Reagan's advisers were telling him what a reasonable ruler Assad was, intelligence reports warned that he was conspiring with Arab extremists and Soviet suppliers. The Soviets were trying to precipitate a Syrian-Israeli military clash which could catch the U.S. Marines in the cross fire, a February 1983 report added. Now even the White House acknowledges that these reports were true.

— A Jan. 4, 1983, secret dispatch from Damascus, seen by my associate Lucette Lagnado, reported that "U.S. intelligence community believes Syria is preparing at least two sites for surface-to-air missiles of type SA-5." These top-of-the-line missiles, never before deployed outside Russia, have now been installed in Syria. They have an impressive, 150-mile range, which is close enough to sweep the Lebanese skies.

— Assad's conniving with the most radical elements of the PLO has been known to U.S. intelligence for at least a year. He plotted against the moderate PLO leader, Yassir Arafat, even while courting him. I was able to report on Nov. 10, 1982, that Assad "has long wanted to oust Arafat and replace him with a full-blown radical." The plot is now out in the open.

— U.S. intelligence agencies received warnings a month in advance that Iranian-backed terrorists, apparently with Syrian connivance, planned to bomb the American Embassy in Beirut. Yet nothing was done to beef up security at the building where 17 Americans were killed last April.

What are the latest intelligence warnings from Lebanon? The assessment is that Assad now believes he can drive the dispirited Americans and Israelis out of Lebanon merely by inflicting a few casualties. He is expected, therefore, to continue encouraging the sneak attacks upon U.S. and Israeli positions.

As pressure mounts on the Americans and Israelis to leave Lebanon, this analysis predicts, Amin Gemayel's government will fall and will be replaced eventually by a pro-Syrian, pro-Soviet government.

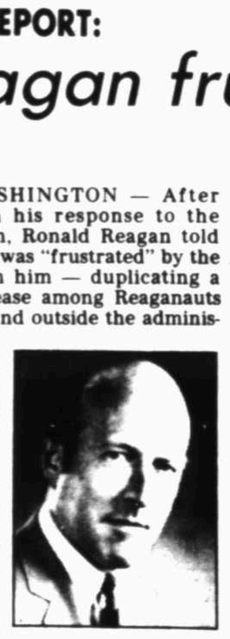
INSIDE REPORT:

Reagan frustrated with response

WASHINGTON — After deciding on his response to the Soviet Union, Ronald Reagan told intimates he was "frustrated" by the restraints on him — duplicating a sense of unease among Reaganauts both inside and outside the administration.



Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

Emotions from many hard-line national security officials in middle and upper-middle slots surpassed frustration, ranging from melancholy to anger. Yet, the Soviet atrocity and President Reagan's response to it has restored the initiative to the president on arms control and defense spending and presumably outflanked the Democrats on the war-and-peace issue.

So ironic a coincidence of political benefits with low morale by its recipients suggests the administration's response to the disaster of KAL 007 marked Reagan's final transformation from idealistic campaigner to workaday incumbent. Even if it protected the president's national security program in Congress and made his re-election more likely, slapping the Kremlin's wrist was government-as-usual, not the Reagan Revolution.

That fit prolonged efforts by pragmatist aides James Baker and Michael Deaver to show the world that Reagan is not Genghis Khan. But for once, the president's caution was not predicated on public opinion surveys. No pollster is needed to know that this time the president would have the American people behind any retaliatory moves.

That there was never any real chance that this mandate would be followed testifies to how much the Reagan administration has changed in office. From the moment it became clear what had happened over the Sea of Japan, counsels of caution from the State Department dominated.

Reaganaut hard-liners scattered through the administration never really fought back. They understood that cancellation of the Soviet grain deal was politically impossible, and nobody had the stomach to renew the battle over technology transfer.

The one meaningful response open to Reagan was actually proposed by the Defense Department: suspend ongoing arms control negotiations with Moscow, just as Lyndon Johnson delayed SALT I negotiations after the Soviet Union's 1968 invasion of Czechoslovakia. Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger embraced this option, but how vigorously he pursued it in the National Security Council debate is unclear and subject to varying reports.

Even if Weinberger did battle fiercely, the anti-arms-control option was stillborn. Secretary of State George Shultz argued that bringing this nation's allies along on any anti-Soviet sanctions was essential, and that meant continuing arms control talks. National security adviser William P. Clark was not prepared to challenge expert diplomatic opinion, and neither was the president. Thus was derived the decision to punish Moscow by closing down Aeroflot operations around the world, a modest sanction that most of America's allies predictably are resisting.

A few Reaganauts, while heartsick over the passive response, believe the soft-line was probably necessary to mobilize anti-Soviet opinion worldwide. But most hard-liners, in the administration and on Capitol Hill, are outraged. Passivity, they believe, will encourage Soviet misbehavior while not sustaining world indignation for more than two or three months. Words used to us by a variety of such national security experts include "atrocious," "disastrous," "embarrassing," "demeaning" and "chicken-bleep."

In their despair, Reaganauts say that the president has blundered politically by misreading the public mood. But that analysis fails to comprehend what one Soviet missile did to the left wing of the Democratic Party and its call for detente and nuclear freeze. Demands for dialogue with the Kremlin have become so reflexive that front-running presidential candidate Walter F. Mondale reacted to the Kremlin's behavior by declaring that as president, "I'd get on the telephone right now to Mr. Andropov and ask him what happened."

Mondale's principal rival, Sen. John Glenn, was more circumspect with purposely watery rhetoric that showed he has no intention of trying to get on Reagan's right as he approaches Democratic primaries against Mondale. Secure from any threat of being outflanked himself, the president outflanks his critics on the left by having been "statesmanlike" in the face of bloody provocation.

Nor does he risk serious revolt from his own conservative base; important Reaganauts are not going public with the harsh words said to us. What has happened in the last week is at once less immediately menacing to Reagan's political prospects and more profoundly disturbing to his presidency.

Whether or not the president can continue to spreadeagle the field, his internal critics believe he has missed a chance to demonstrate to the Soviet Union that superpower terrorism will not be tolerated by the United States, even if it must stand alone without allies. Conversely, they feel Reagan has signaled the Kremlin that no Soviet excess will pull the West from the negotiating table. Reagan himself may be "frustrated," but for many devoted followers the prevailing emotion is disillusionment.

Lawsuits, less vodka, candles mark protests

By DEBORAH ZABARENKO
Associated Press Writer

A crowd of 1,000 people dragged a burning effigy of Soviet President Yuri Andropov through a San Francisco street, the Russian vodka supply dried up in Arkansas, and more relatives of victims of a downed Korean jet prepared million-dollar lawsuits.

Outrage over the Soviet attack on Korean Air Lines Flight 007 continued Thursday, one week after the commercial jumbo jet was shot down over the Sea of Japan, killing all 269 people aboard.

Carrying candles and shouting "murderer," a crowd of people in their 20s and 30s swirled around the Soviet consulate in the toney Pacific Heights section of San Francisco on Thursday evening, listening to speeches delivered over an amplified microphone.

A floppy 6-foot dummy made to look like Andropov fell through a police barricade in front of the consulate. When it was returned, protesters set it ablaze and dragged it through the crowd.

"I think they (the Soviets) did a stupid thing," said John Dokko, 33, who shouted epithets at the consulate. "I think they were human beings and I think the Soviets did something that was not human."

The entrance to the six-story brick consulate was guarded by about two dozen riot-helmeted police, as protesters threw bottles and spotlights from the crowd scanned the side of the building.

An elderly Korean woman who declined to give her name dabbed at her eyes and carried a sign: "My Heart Is Bleeding."

"Oh, no, I don't wish to speak about it," she said. "We have all lost a loved one — a piece of humanity."

No arrests or injuries were reported in the demonstration, one day after a similar protest at the Soviet mission to the United Nations in New York left one protester bloodied.

Two men were arrested in Lincoln, Neb., Thursday on charges of disturbing the peace after a Soviet flag was burned, officials said.

Lt. Allen Soukup identified the men as David Payer, 30, and Peter Nagle, 25, both of Lincoln. Payer is the local director of the International One World Crusade of the Unification Church of America.

Longshoreman balked for the second day at unloading lumber and vodka from a Soviet freighter docked in Los Angeles Harbor, and protesters planned to blockade workers' entrances to the berth today and hand out leaflets to the longshoremen.

"There's been a lot of pressure on the longshoremen to force them to go to work ...," said Bob Zirgulis, a spokesman for the ad-hoc Anti-Soviet League, adding that the leafletting is geared to reach "any longshoremen who mght think of working."

The freighter Novokuibyshevsk remained docked today after the Local 13 International Longshoremen's & Warehousemen's union boycotted work on the ship to protest the downing of the Korean airliner.

The freighter must leave its berth by Saturday to make room for another ship, port officials say.

Dock worker Charles Sullivan, 53, said individuals were imposing their own "sanctions" on the Soviets, deeming the President Reagan's stand too weak.

"Let Reagan come down here and unload it," Sullivan said.

Barrett Hamilton, Inc., Arkansas's sole supplier of the Russian vodka Stolichnaya refused Thursday to sell any Russian products "until the Arkansas people and the people of the United States are satisfied with the proper resolution" of the Koren jet tragedy.

The Arkansas firm joined a Russian vodka boycott that has spread to eight states: Alabama, Connecticut, Iowa, Mississippi, Montana, New Hampshire, Ohio and Virginia.

A $4 million damage suit was being filed today in U.S. District Court in Detroit on behalf of Michael Jones, son of Flight 007 passenger Margaret Zarif, said Gerald Thurswell, Jones' attorney.

The suit against KAL claims the airline's employees were negligent in programming the plane's navigational system, thereby taking the aircraft off course and into Soviet airspace.

Attorney Melvin Belli has filed a $99 million class action suit against the Soviet Union for the families of victims and a $1 million suit against the airline for Dr. Michael Kole of Albany, N.Y., whose wife, Muriel died in the attack.

Short flights may banish smoking

By the Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — A ban on smoking on short airline flights — possibly those lasting as long as two hours — has been tentatively approved by the Civil Aeronautics Board and could be in effect by the year's end, a CAB spokesman said Thursday.

The board voted 4 to 0 Wednesday in favor of a proposed rule that would forbid smoking on commercial flights lasting an hour or less, according to spokesman Wallace Stefany, but it left open the option of extending the ban to two-hour flights if this approach wins enough backing.

The decision on time will depend on the consensus of comments the CAB will solicit when it advertises the proposed rule change in the Federal Register, probably within the next two weeks, Stefany said.

Interested parties would be allowed 45 days for formal written comments. Another 20 days would be set aside for written responses, with additional time to be allowed for oral arguments after all briefs are filed. Under this schedule, action on a final rule can be expected by late December.

The proposal is expected to generate a vigorous debate.

"The CAB has come a long way for an agency that earlier this year rejected out of hand such a proposed ban and threw out three other rules protecting non-smokers," said John Banzhaf, executive director of Action on Smoking and Health (ASH).

Banzhaf's organization won an action in the U.S. Court of Appeals in January that forced the CAB to reconsider its rejection of anti-smoking regulations proposed by ASH, including a ban on smoking on short flights.

Soviets could 'clear way' in arms talks

MADRID, Spain (AP) — West Germany's foreign minister today said the Soviet Union has indicated a willingness to adjust its attitude toward British and French nuclear forces that could "clear the way" for progress in Geneva arms reductions talks.

Hans-Dietrich Genscher told a news conference that Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko told him Thursday that the British and French forces had "two faces" — one strategic and one medium-range.

Genscher called the statement "remarkable in a positive sense."

But he said the test of possible new Soviet intentions will come in the medium-range missile negotiations in Geneva.

The talks, begun in 1981, recently became blocked, largely because of Soviet insistence that the French and British weapons be included in the medium-range category.

Britain and France, supported by their allies, have refused to accept the Soviet position, claiming their weapons are strategic or long-range.

Gromyko flew to Paris from Madrid today for a 24-hour "working session" that included meetings with French Foreign Minister Claude Cheysson and President Francois Mitterrand.

Soviet President Yuri V. Andropov late last year said the Soviet Union was willing to reduce its medium-range missile forces, largely SS-20 triple headed rockets, to the levels maintained by Britain and France, claiming these forces were of medium range and had to be included in the Geneva talks.

Andropov contended that there already exists a rough balance of nuclear forces in Western and Eastern Europe, taking into account the British and French systems.

But the Western allies claim that the Soviets have a large advantage and that the British and French "strategic" forces must not be counted in the Geneva medium-range missile talks.

The United States and its NATO allies plan to begin deploying 572 medium- range cruise and Pershing 2 missiles in five Western European countries starting by the end of this year unless there is a breakthrough in the bogged-down Geneva talks.

Addressing the Madrid Conference on European Security and Cooperation today, U.S. Secretary of State George P. Shultz said the Reagan administration was willing to pursue a verifiable agreement with Moscow to make the deployment unnecessary.

But he said the Soviets already have created a weapons imbalance by deploying more than 350 of their sophisticated SS-20 missiles.

Brazil plans to pay the last cent

Copley News Service

WASHINGTON — Brazil plans to pay off its $90 billion foreign debt, the highest in the world, Brazilian Congressman Rubem Medina said here Thursday.

"In that respect, I have not the slightest doubt," Medina, a member of the Social Democratic party which supports the Figueiredo government, said.

"We are indeed going to pay the very last cent, if people give us time and conditions for so doing," said Medina, 41, who was the youngest man ever elected to the Brazilian Congress when he won the first of his five terms in the mid-1960s.

Speaking in Portuguese, Medina told an audience at Johns Hopkins University that his was "not the official statement of a representative of the Brazilian government." Rather he characterized it as "a dialogue between a Brazilian citizen and American citizens."

Banking circles, though, regarded Medina's address as the start of an effort to convince the United States and other members of the International Monetary Fund to ease IMF demands for greater austerity in Brazil.

Medina likened the drama facing Brazil today with the depression in the United States following the crash of 1929.

"The Brazilian crisis is so immense and complex that it forms a part of an even greater crisis that involves the whole world," he said. It might "turn into a political crisis capable of overthrowing ... the greatest democracy in the Latin world," by which he meant Brazil.

He painted a bleak picture of Brazil today, not only burdened by a foreign debt estimated at $90 billion, triple-digit inflation, and vast unemployment, but also suffering from a five-year-long drought in the nine-state Northeast area and disastrous floods in the south.

"The distance to social convulsion and political retraction is but a short one," Medina said.

The decision "whether or not Brazil is entitled to have a future at all ... implies a series of short- and long-term measures that are not going to be solved with a calculating machine," Medina declared.

Hundreds jailed in demonstrations

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — Thousands of Chileans defied tear gas, riot dogs and club-swinging police to march in anti-government demonstrations that left at least two dead, scores hurt and hundreds jailed.

"He's going to fall! He's going to fall!," hundreds of young slum dwellers screamed Thursday night as Santiago streets filled with the acrid smoke of tear gas and bonfires in the the fifth monthly "Day of National Protest" against President Gen. Augusto Pinochet's military government.

But the demonstrations and the response by security forces appeared less violent than in the previous protests, in which witnesses said police fired randomly at marchers and in some cases machine-gunned them in their homes.

A coalition of labor groups and opposition political parties has organized the demonstrations each month since May to vent anger over the severe economic recession and Pinochet's political restrictions.

Pinochet, who seized power from an elected Marxist government 10 years ago, has granted some concessions to appease the protesters. But he also has denounced them as subversives and rejected their demands that he resign.

Thousands of police in cities nationwide chased demonstrators with dogs, waded into marchers with clubs and lobbed tear-gas grenades as Chileans paraded in the streets during the day and banged on pots and pans for an hour at night. The pot banging has symbolized the protest movement.

The two deaths reported Thursday pushed to 41 the number of people killed in the five protests. Police said 10 people received gunshot wounds and more than 600 were arrested.

The government said a policeman accidentally shot a woman to death in the port of Valparaiso and a man was shot dead in the Santiago slum of La Victoria.

The Interior Ministry said the man was killed by unidentified people who fired from a passing car, although witnesses said the fatal bullet came from a police weapon.

Among those detained and then released were Rodolfo Seguel, leader of the miners union, and former Senate President Patricio Aylwin, both affiliated with the five-party Democratic Alliance which endorsed the protest.

Gabriel Valdes, an ex-foreign minister who is president of the alliance, was tear-gassed and doused by a police water cannon as he participated in a sit-in at the Plaza Italia on one of Santiago's main avenues.

Valdes accused police of wantonly attacking peaceful protesters and said the alliance might scrap further talks with Interior Minister Serio Onofre Jarpa aimed at setting a timetable for restoring democracy in Chile.

"It is inconceivable to try to maintain a dialogue if the participants are beaten, mistreated and detained at the same time," Valdes said.

Jarpa said in a statement that the government "is ready to continue the dialogue with the opposition."

Jarpa, who took charge of security forces last month, said police would use only enough force to maintain order.

Police cracked down hard on the sit-in, tear-gassing and beating people. Reporters saw demonstrators and bystanders dragged onto police buses, forced to lie down in the aisles and trampled under the heels of the policemen's boots.

But the regime kept the army off the streets Thursday and police made only occasional forays into the slums at night, mostly firing tear gas at people gathered around burning tires and debris at intersections.

There was isolated violence in the city between rock-throwing youths and helmeted police armed with clubs and tear gas, but generally the police left people alone Thursday night while they banged on pots and pans.

Rebels bring state ranking to Memorial

By ROBERT BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

Today's 8 p.m. Midland Lee-Monahans football clash at Memorial Stadium is like the fabled meeting of David and Goliath: Big against little.

The Rebels not only hail from a larger school — 5A against 4A — they also have a decided size advantage among one-on-one player matchups. Lee has four offensive linemen in the 200-plus range and two on defense. Monahans has only one starter on either side of the ball that breaks the magical mark.

"We're relatively small," said Monahans coach Gary Gains. "We don't match up very well in size with Midland Lee. We're not as quick as we would like to be either. I'd say our quickness is average."

LEE, ON the other hand, has vaulted into the Top 10 rankings in the state after a 38-7 win over Lubbock Coronado. Lee is ranked 10th by The Associated Press and sixth in the Harris Ratings.

Still, the little guys from Monahans are coming off a 16-12 victory over 5A's El Paso Eastwood and that in itself is enough to impress Rebel coach Spike Dykes.

"They play good solid defense," said Dykes. "Any time you can hold El Paso Eastwood to 12 points you're doing a good job. They forced a lot of turnovers — I don't know how many — and they have several starters back on defense from last year.

"Offensively they throw the ball a great deal with consistancy," continued Dykes,. "They have a good passing attack with a good passer in Ryan Roark. They've got a great receiver in Torri Walker and Anthony Scurlark is a fine fullback. They've got a well-balanced offense."

Despite impressing Dykes with their passing game, the Loboes don't consider themselves a throwing team.

"We like to mix it up," said Gains. "Our ground game was almost nonexistant against Eastwood. About the only way we were able to move the football was through the air and that's not our favorite way of doing it. Our first priority is to establish a rushing game and then take what they give us as far as passing is concerned. Of course that's pretty difficlut against a defense of the calibre of Midland Lee."

GAINS IS also impressed with Lee's offensive capabilities.

"They've got three great running backs (Walter Jones, Tyrone Thurman and Isaac Garnett)," said Gains. "All of them carry the ball a lot and all are great threats. Lee's got great speed outside (Jones and Thurman) and power up the middle (Garnett). It'll be a burden on our defense to try and contain them. They're going to score some points, there's no doubt about that. We're going to try and keep them from breaking the long ones. I don't think there's a way to completely shut down an offense as potent as theirs is."

THOUGH BOTH teams came away with opening night victories, each coach sees areas where he'd like to see improvement tonight.

"I think we've got to improve on third down conversions," said Dykes. "That's probably the weakest thing we did.

"Offensively there were severl mistates we have to eliminate, penalties and we've got to get a little bit more coheasive in our execution. We need more consistancy in our kicking game. We made some big plays but missed an extra point and we can't afford to do that."

"We made a lot of mistakes, especially offensively," said Gains. "I thought the best thing we did was the effort the kids gave. I thought they played awfully hard and that was very encouraging to us."

And, both coaches like what the other does.

"Coach Dykes has done a great job with his team," said Gains. he's got a good group, he really does."

"I think that Monahans has got a good tradition as a very good football team," said Dykes. "Certainly this year is no exception. They're going to come to town to win the game and it's going to take a heck of a football game to keep them from doing it."

ONE THING Lee has in its favor going into the game is few injuries. Only three players are scheduled to miss the game and only one is a starter: tight end Kevin Marburger.

Marburger, who is out with a bruised knee, will be replaced in the lineup by John Blair, a 175-pound senior.

The other two on the sidelines this week are: senior defensive end Jerry Morales with a pulled hamstring and Pool Webb who received stitches in his head this week from an automobile accident.

Lendl's climb is difficult, but stays on Open trail

NEW YORK (AP) — Ivan Lendl's methodical march through the United States Open Tennis Championship clearly is becoming more difficult.

Through his first four victories in this richest of all Grand Slam tournaments, Lendl lost just one service game. In Thursday's quarter-finals, however, Sweden's Mats Wilander broke the cool Czech's booming serves three different times.

It hardly mattered, of course, since the second-seeded Lendl continued to destroy his side of the draw with a 6-4, 6-4, 7-6 wipeout of No. 5 Wilander.

That thrust him into Saturday's semifinals against underdog Jimmy Arias, the No. 9 seed who staged a major upset by eliminating fourth-seeded Yannick Noah of France, 7-6, 4-6, 6-3, 1-6, 7-5.

It was the second straight five-set marathon for Arias. That is not Lendl's style. The next set he loses in this tournament will be the first set he loses. Until Wilander, no one has even threatened to win one from Ivan the Wonderful.

WILANDER APPRECIATED the fact that he had given Lendl a tougher match than anyone else in the tournament. "I think I'm the closest one to take a set from him and I'm satisfied with that," he said.

"This was a very good test," decided Lendl. "It was a difficult match. He keeps the ball in play and he's very difficult to beat."

Wilander proved that three weeks before this tournament, when he defeated Lendl and other top pros in Cincinnati on a Decoturf II court, the same surface as the one used in the Open.

But after the first round here, the 19-year-old announced he could not win the Open. Lendl, however, didn't put much in that declaration.

"He didn't expect to win the French Open last year," Lendl said. "It didn't work out that way. You don't pay attention to what guys are saying."

So Lendl ignored Wilander's poormouth routine and did his usual systematic job, winning in — what else? — straight sets.

Why was he able to whip Wilander here after losing to him on the same surface last month?

"I made one big mistake in Cincinnati and couldn't get out of it," he said. "I tried to pace myself, start slowly and get into the match. I never did get into the match."

Lendl learned his lesson. He has not held back in any match at the Open. There has been no pacing here. He has been going at full speed.

"From the very beginning to the very end," he said.

Wilander said he thought Lendl had elevated the level of his game from last year, in fact, from last month.

"In Cincinnati, I played the same, but Lendl didn't play as good. He didn't serve very well (there). I think he's serving much better than I am now. I think he has a good chance to win, a very good chance, a better chance this year than last year."

As for himself, Wilander said his loss proved his pre-tournament prediction that he was not ready to win the Open. "I know I have to serve better, I have to come to the net a little bit more, I have to hit my backhand and forehand better. I have to be a better tennis player."

But it wasn't all bad for the young Swede.

"I made the quarter-finals," he said. "That's one more round than last year. Next year, maybe it's one more round than this year."

Arias, who turned 19 last month, became the youngest semifinalist in the Open era, which began in 1968. He played a memorable match filled with spectacular, often acrobatic shots, against Noah, the French Open champion. The way it started, though, it seemed like it would be a quick exit for the kid from Grand Island, N.Y..

Noah won the first three games of the first set, taking 12 of the match's first 13 points. Arias, who said before the match that he did not think he could beat Noah, was up agaist textbook tennis.

"The whole first set, he was on top of his game, holding service at love," said Arias. "I thought to myself that I had no chance in this match."

WITH THE score 5-2, Arias staged a comeback and forced a tiebreaker. Then, trailing 4-1, he reeled off six straight points to win the set that had seemed lost.

They split the next two sets and when Noah won the first three games of the fourth set, Arias prepared himself for his second straight five-set match.

"In the fourth set, when I was down 3-0, I threw it away to run him," he said. "I acknowledged we were going to play a fifth set. If he hit the ball too far away, I didn't give it a 100 percent shot running after it. I was going for the corners to keep him running. He doesn't get too tired, but it saved me."

In the fifth set, both players held service until the last game when Arias broke Noah to win the set and the match.

As his prize, Arias gets to play Lendl next. How will he handle the assignment?

"Please," he said, "let me be happy one night."

49ers strike down Vikings, 48-17

San Francisco intercepts five Tommy Kramer passes

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Interceptions helped decide the game, including one that wasn't caught.

The San Francisco 49ers intercepted five passes and wreaked havoc on the Minnesota passing game all night. But 49ers quarterback Joe Montana said one of his passes should have been intercepted on the first series of the game and that made the difference when it wasn't caught.

"That was the breaking point. When they didn't intercept that pass in the end zone. Things turned our way after that," said Montana, who threw a career- high four touchdown passes in the first half and combined with his defensive secondary to lead a 48-17 blitz of the Vikings Thursday night. It was the most points scored against the Vikings since 1963.

IT WAS safety John Turner standing in the end zone with the ball bouncing off his hands on that play. Montana was laying on the ground, wincing in pain from a groin injury. But the ball hit the turf and Ray Wershing kicked a 38-yard field goal.

The Vikings failed to move the ball and a rejeunvenated Montana threw a 21-yard touchdown pass to Dwight Clark on the next series and the 49ers had a 10-0 lead.

Minnesota came back with a touchdown on a 1-yard run by Ted Brown but Wershing added another field goal and San Francisco was up 13-7 after one period.

"The injury bothered me but after the field goal the adrenalin was flowing and you don't think about it," Montana said.

Then came the fateful second period.

"What happened? It's tough to say," said Montana, who completed 17 of 24 passes for 216 yards. "When the momentum starts going one way, it's tough to stop."

It was impossible for the Vikings to stop Thursday.

In other NFL action this weekend, it's Dallas at St. Louis, Pittsburgh at Green Bay, Tampa Bay at Chicago, Washington at Philadelphia, Buffalo at Cincinnati and Cleveland at Detroit.

Also, it's the New York Giants at Atlanta, Seattle at the New York Jets, Houston at the Los Angeles Raiders, New Orleans at the Los Angeles Rams, New England at Miami and Denver at Baltimore.

Kansas City will host San Diego in Monday night's game.

A LITTLE more than four minutes into the second period, San Francisco had put three touchdowns on the board and added another for good measure five minutes later.

A fumble of a handoff between Viking quarterback Tommy Kramer and running back Darrin Nelson with 19 seconds left in the first period set up the first touchdown. Safety Dwight Hicks recovered on the Minnesota 21 and six plays later Montana threw his second touchdown pass of the game, to Earl Cooper, 2 yards over the middle.

Twenty-three seconds later, the 49ers struck again. San Francisco conerback Eric Wright intercepted his first of three passes and ran unobstructed 60 yards into the end zone.

"I just hoped if I gambled wrong, the safety was back there to back me up," Wright said.

It took only 29 seconds for San Francisco to get the ball back. This time cornerback Ronnie Lott intercepted a Kramer pass and returned it 22 yards to the Viking 14. Three plays later, Montana found Freddie Solomon in the end zone from 14 yards out.

A strange turn of events set up the 49ers fourth touchdown of the period and sealed the Vikings' fate. After being stopped at their own 22, the 49ers were forced to punt. But after a bad snap, punter Tom Orosz was forced to pick up the ball and run. He picked up 23 yards and gave San Francisco new life. Montana came right back with a 49-yard bomb to Mike Wilson and 6-yard scoring pass to Tyler, who rushed for 107 yards, gave the 49ers a 41-7 lead.

"It was Murphy's law out there tonight," Minnesota Coach Bud Grant said. "Whatever can go wrong will go wrong. You could drive yourself crazy looking for a reason why we got beat tonight. We got beat, clobbered. You name it.

"But their execution was flawless."

"We had an excellent game and Minnesota was off," 49er Coach Bill Walsh said. "We got good field position, so we could attack."

WEST TEXAS SPORTS

Run for Fun scheduled for Saturday

Midland's Third Annual Lite Beer Run For Fun breaks from the starting gate Saturday morning as one of the initial events in this year's Septemberfest.

The Run For Fun, sponsored Miller Lite, J.E. Borron Clothing, and the Midland Jaycees, will help the Jaycees provide a range of services in the coming year, according to Director Roger Gose.

The Jaycees sponsor such programs as the Boy Scouts, Christmas benefits, and the like.

The Run itself will consist of two different events, a 2-mile run and a 10k test. The competition is open to all ages and both sexes. The top three finishers will be awarded trophies, and all runners competing will receive an event T-shirt. In addition, a new pair of running shoes will go to the overall top male and female finishers.

The race begins at 8 a.m. Entries are $7 per person before Saturday, and $9 then. Entry forms are available at J.E. Borron, where the race itself gets underway and finishes in the downtown event.

Contestants in the Run For Fun will get into Septemberfest activities free. The 15th Fest, held at the Museum of the Southwest at 1705 W. Missouri, is sponsored by Las Manos. Lite Beer commercial star and former rodeo great Jim Shoulders will attend, accompanied by his 2,000 pound Brahma Bull, Buford T. Lite.

Buford T. is "like a big puppy dog," according to Miller representative Woody Woodman. Shoulders, the first cowboy to become a member of the Madison Square Garden Hall of Fame, began his rodeo career over 40 years ago and won a record 16 World Professional Rodeo Cowboys Championships.

His TV spot with New York Yankee manager Billy Martin ("I didn't punch that dogie") elevated Shoulder's fame even more in the popular Lite advertisements. Consequently the demand for Lite commercial stars is great. Marvelous Marv Throneberry was the Lite rep at the Septemberfest the previous two years.

Foursome wins title

The team of Richard Blanco, Bill Russell, Paul Femmer and Rusty Collins shot a 63 to take first place in the annual Chamber of Commerce scramble golf tournament at Hogan Park.

Perry Connell, Jim Spires, Gerald Gotcher and Wayne Richardson shot 64 and won a playoff for second from the team of David Hastings, Bill Schammel, Bill Cannon and John Epley.

Class D softball tourney

MONAHANS—The Burrito Shop will hold a 20-team Class D softball tournament Sept. 17-18. Entry fee is $90. Contact 943 3795.

Roping contest set

DEL RIO—The third annual Jim Bob Altizer Invitational Roping contest, for the benefit of the West Texas Boys Ranch, will be held Oct. 1-2 and feature a special matching roping test between Mack Altizer and Guy Allen.

Gators win title

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — Bill Long scattered three hits Thursday night as he pitched Beaumont's Golden Gators to a 4-1 victory over the Jackson Mets, giving Beaumont the Texas League title with a three-game playoff sweep.

The Gators, who went on a 12-hit rampage, gave Long all the support he needed in the first inning. Jeff Ronk scored on an infield out by Mark Gillaspie and John Kruk scored on a double by James Steels.

Long had a no-hitter through four innings and the Mets got their only run in the fifth as Rick Powe scored on a sacrifice fly by Mike Howard.

However, Beaumont added two insurance runs in the eighth when Kruk scored on a double by Gillaspie and Gillaspie scored on a sacrifice fly by Steels.

Bob Patterson, who relieved Long in the 7th, got the save, his 12th of the season.

Scraggly Braves will keep victory

Baseball Roundup

By The Associated Press

For the Atlanta Braves, the victory was a little like a scraggly fish. It wasn't pretty, but they sure weren't about to throw it back.

The Braves, who open a crucial three-game series tonight in Los Angeles, stayed two games behind the National League West-leading Dodgers Thursday night by outlasting the San Francisco Giants 12-9.

Atlanta did it after handing the Giants six unearned runs in the first inning and trailing 7-3 after two. They got clutch relief pitching from Gene Garber and mounted a 20-hit attack that included two home runs and four RBI by Dale Murphy and five hits and three RBI by Rafael Ramirez.

"At this time of year, all games are important," Brave Manager Joe Torre said after a game that left him exhausted and drained in the locker room. "But there's no question this win tonight was big. It was important because we came from behind to win after losing a tough one Wednesday night."

The Atlanta-San Francisco game took three hours, 28 minutes, meaning that the Braves knew early they would have win to keep pace with the Dodgers, who topped the Cincinnati Reds 5-2. Bob Welch won his sixth straight game and Mike Marshall had a three-run homer to lead Los Angeles.

The Braves, who dropped a 2-1 decision in San Francisco Wednesday night, got off well Thursday as Murphy cracked a three-run homer. But the Giants came back with their six unearned runs in the bottom of the inning as errors by Glenn Hubbard and Chris Chambliss opened the gates.

The Giants picked up another in the second, but the Braves came back with four in the third, two on a homer by Claudell Washington, to tie it at 7-7. Garber, 3-4, shut off a Giant rally that tied it at 9-9 after six, then Murphy blasted a solo home run with two out in the seventh off loser Greg Minton, 6-10, to put the Braves ahead for good.

That left Torre to think about going to Los Angeles, where Phil Niekro will face Alejandro Pena tonight.

"We always talk about winning one game at a time, but we've got to go into Los Angeles thinking sweep," Torre said.

Dodgers 5, Reds 2

Marshall, one of the Dodgers' highly touted youngsters, was a disappointment earlier in the year. But with help from hitting instructor Manny Mota, he has broken out recently and now has 16 homers and 58 RBI.

Seven of those RBI have come in the last two games. His 10th-inning grand slam gave Los Angeles a victory Wednesday night, and on Thursday his three-run shot was the difference.

"Before I was leaving a lot of runners in scoring position," he said after Thursday's performance. "Manny stuck with me when a lot of other people would have quit. I just kept working."

Welch, 14-11, pitched eight innings in the Dodger victory, allowing only one run — which he balked home — and four hits. Tom Niedenfuer surrendered one run and three hits in the ninth before Steve Howe came on to retire Cesar Cedeno and post his 17th save.

Astros 3, Padres 2

Denny Walling drove in George Bjorkman with a tenth inning pinch-hit double that gave Houston the victory that ended its four-game losing streak. The Astros remain on the fringe of contention, seven games behind the Dodgers.

"We have to do a lot of things right to win since we don't have a game breaker," said Walling, who now has eight hits in his last 13 pinch-hitting appearances, including a double, two triples and two home runs. "We play sound fundamental baseball and that's what keeps us in the game."

The Astros may not have a game breaker, but Manager Bob Lillis thinks Walling comes close as a pinch-hitter. "That's his role all the way," said Lillis. "I wish we had a whole bench full of guys like him."

White Sox 8, Angels 5

Chicago White Sox pitcher Rich Dotson ran his season record to 17-10, giving up only four hits in eight innings.

Dotson said that despite a strong offensive effort — including consecutive home runs by Harold Baines and Greg Luzinski during a five-run third inning — the main reason Chicago won was because of several sharp defensive plays.

One of those plays came from center fielder Rudy Law, who made a diving catch of a sharply hit line drive by Fred Lynn. Another came from first baseman Greg Walker, who robbed a sure hit from Bobby Clark with a leaping grab of another liner.

Yankees 6, Brewers 5

Don Baylor and Bert Campaneris knocked in two runs apiece to stake starter Bob Shirley and New York to a 6-2 lead, and then three relievers hung on to preserve the victory in Milwaukee.

Singles by Roy Smalley, Don Mattingly and Campaneris broke a 2-2 in the third inning and Baylor's two-run double and Smalley's RBI single made it 6-2 in the fourth against Mike Caldwell, 11-10.

But the Brewers, who were outhit 15-8, rallied for three runs in the eighth against George Frazier and Rich Gossage. Robin Yount and Cecil Cooper each singled home one run and Ted Simmons' sacrifice fly drove in the third.

Arguello faces Pryor in 'music' bid

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Alexis Arguello intends to "play the music" tonight in a bid to make boxing history in his rematch with Aaron Pryor for the World Boxing Assoication junior welterweight championship.

But if the former three-time world champion is to set the tempo he probably will have to survive a rock-and-roll first round.

"He's my type of guy as a fighter," said Emanuel Steward, who took over as Pryor's trainer Aug. 20. "I love a thoroughbred, guys who will leave it all in the ring."

Pryor likes to get out of the gate fast, swarming over an opponent from the opening bell.

The champion almost overwhelmed Arguello in the first round when Arguello first attempted to become the only man to win titles in four weight classes last Nov. 12 at the Orange Bowl in Miami.

But Arguello hung tough and was very much in the fight when Pryor battered him into submission with a lightning barrage in the 14th round.

In the 13th, Arguello, who had shaken Pryor on several occasions, staggered the champion with a thunderous right hand.

"What happened," Arguello thought when Pryor didn't go down. "The guy must be built of iron or something."

Astros move training site

KISSIMMEE, Fla. (AP) — The Houston Astros made it official Thursday: They will leave Cocoa and transfer their spring training operations to this Central Florida community near Disney World beginning in 1985.

Officials of the Houston Sports Association, which owns the National League baseball team, signed a long-term agreement with Osceola County officials which calls for the county to build a 7,500-seat stadium and three lighted practice fields.

The $3.3 million facility will be situated between Kissimmee and St. Cloud off U.S. Highway 192-441.

The Astros now train at a city-owned stadium in Cocoa.

Unhappy with the facilities there, the club attempted to buy the stadium but failed to reach agreement with the city. The Astros then said they would move to Stuart, in Martin County, but voters there recently turned down a resort-tax referendum which would have financed a stadium.

The complex in Osceola County, south of Orlando, is to be built with resort-tax revenues.

Redshirt Raiders eye Air Force

AIR FORCE ACADEMY, Colo. (AP) — Few teams in the nation have engaged in such an extensive redshirting program as Texas Tech, which held out 19 players in 1981 and 32 last season.

The object of redshirting is to stockpile talent, giving players, especially freshmen who aren't likely to help you right away, an extra year of eligibility, thus providing more depth and upgrading the overall talent of the squad in the future — usually at the expense of the present.

Jerry Moore sacrificed the present when he arrived at Tech in 1981. A former assistant at Nebraska, where redshirting was a way of life, Moore immediately began building for the future.

His first team was a dismal 1-9-1, but last year the Red Raiders climbed to 4-7 and lost heartbreakers to Washington and SMU, which were ranked No. 1 and No. 2 in the country at the time.

Although Tech has been highly regarded by most pre-season prognosticators this year, Moore believes his team may still be a year away from reaping the full benefits of redshirting.

"We really expect our redshirt program to begin paying dividends next year and the year after that," said Moore. "I think we're a year away from being a pretty good football team."

The Red Raiders figure to get a good reading about the quality of this year's team when they open the 1983 campaign at Air Force on Saturday in a regionally televised game. Kickoff is at 2:20 p.m. CDT.

They play with a high intensity level, and they don't seem tomake mistakes. They look to me to be a lot like what SMU was last year. I think Air Force would be right at the top of our league (Southwest Conference)."

Tech is 0-2 in its season openers under Moore. "We haven't played well in either of our openers, but maybe it's been a case of just opening against good teams," said Moore.

Midlanders compete in LA

Two Midland girls, Jamelia Lott and Ethel Edwards, recently competed nationally in the Arco Jesse Owens Games in Los Angeles.

Both brought back fourth place medals from the coast, Lott in the 100 meters and Edwards in the 400 meters. The meet featured young track enthusiasts from all over the United States.

Lott, 11, and Edwards, 15, also had plenty to do on their visit besides compete. After arriving from Dallas, the girls and their Dallas counterparts checked into their rooms on the UCLA campus and a nig introductory barbecue.

After a practice at the Los Angeles Coliseum, where the Games were held and principal site of the 1984 summer Olympics, the contestants spent a day at Disneyland. Saturday, August 13 was the actual competition followed by a reception for all involved, and then the teams went their seperate ways.

Arco got a team together "by advertising in the newspaper, we had a sign up booth at the mall, and we went to the junior high schools and talked to kids there," said Judy Roper, an Arco spokesman involved with the Games. Roper anticipates an even better turnout for next year's team.

For all the effort put into recruiting, however, word of mouth did some work also. Lott got interested in the Games after Edwards told her about them.

Lott's only complaint about LA was "It's too hot." But she did enjoy the Coliseum, Disneyland and a dance for the entrants. She also took part in the Games' opening torch ceremony.

Lott says she'll continue to pursue athletic careers in track and in basketball when she enters Goddard Junior High this fall.

This team was Arco's first Midland representative. Roper says the Games were organized on the basis of Owens' "idea to promote interest in track among young people."

SWC season begins

DALLAS (AP) — Here are thumbnail sketches, prepared by the Southwest Conference, of each college football game this weekend involving SWC teams.

TULSA at ARKANSAS

The Hurricane will be seeking revenge for 38-0 loss last year that ruined a perfect season en route to Missouri Valley championship. Tulsa opened the 1983 season last week with 34-9 breeze past San Diego State. The Hurricane offense was led by freshman quarterback Steve Gage, who ran 40 yards for one touchdown and passed for another, and senior Michael Gunter, who ran for 100 yards and two touchdowns. The Razorbacks will open the school's 90th football season after a 28-24 victory over Florida in the 1982 Bluebonnet Bowl. Arkansas last year won its first seven games before suffering two losses and a tie in final four games of regular season. Veteran quarterback Brad Taylor is back and the defense has good potential built around end Ron Faurot, linebacker Bert Zinamon and end Robert Brannon, a basketball convert. The Razorbacks are 42-15-3 against Tulsa.

TEXAS TECH at AIR FORCE

The Red Raiders go into their 58th season with a record of 39-16-3 in openers. But recent seasons have been tough — Tech's only opening-game victory in last five years was a 35-7 win over Texas-El Paso in 1980. Last year, Tech beat the Falcons 31-30 in Lubbock. Tech was last in SWC offense in 1982 with only 16 touchdowns and an average of 276 yards per game. Quarterback Jim Hart and I-back Robert Lewis hold the promise of greatly-improved offense. The Air Force offense showed power and speed in 34-13 victory over Colorado State last week. Mike Brown and John Kershner paced a ground game that accounted for 397 yards. The SWC has a 7-3-1 all-time advantage over the Falcons.

MINNESOTA at RICE

Minnesota won its first three starts last year, but failed to win again. The Owls displayed a sporadic running game in a 45-14 opening loss to Houston, and couldn't contain the Cougars' speed. The Gophers averaged 45 points per game in three opening victories last year. An SWC game is rare for Minnesota. The Gophers are 0-3 against the conference with losses to Texas, SMU and TCU. Rice is 2-3 against the Big Ten. The last Rice start against a Big Ten team was a 50-6 romp over Northwestern in 1967. Phillip Money and Doug Johnson split the quarterback chores against Houston.

MIAMI (Fla.) at HOUSTON

Both teams have a game under their belts — Houston a 45-14 SWC victory over Rice and the Hurricane a 28-3 loss to intra-state rival Florida. The Cougars lead the SWC in four of six team categories after the first week: 464 yards total offense, 333 yards rushing, 221 yards total defense and 104 yards passing defense. Donald Jordan leads the SWC in rushing with 138 yards and 9.9-yard-per-carry average, following touchdown runs of 47 and 45 yards against Rice. Quarterback Lionel Wilson averaged 7.6 yards per passing attempt to give the Cougars promise of another productive offensive year. Miami has won last three meetings to tie series at 7-7. The SWC trails Miami overall, 13-11.

BRIGHAM YOUNG at BAYLOR

Baylor opens its 82nd season with an unsettled offense going against one of most unsettling offenses in college football. BYU had usual season last year, scoring 30-plus points six times and gaining a Holiday Bowl invitation. The Cougars have averaged exactly 10 victories a season over the last seven years, while winning seven straight Western Athletic Conference titles. BYU handed New Mexico its only loss of the 1982 season, a 40-12 trouncing en route to averaging 32-plus points per game. The best defensive showing against Cougars in all of last year was Georgia's 17-14 victory. Baylor counters with an attack built around versatile Alfred Anderson and a capable offensive line. But sophomore Tom Muecke and freshman Cody Carlson hadn't settled the quarterback job at midweek. The Bears are 52-25-4 in openers, but the recent trend toward starting against top competition has contributed to a 4-11 opener record in last 15 years. It will be the first game between schools, while Baylor is 1-1 against the WAC and BYU has won both starts against SWC in last-second thrillers — a 18-17 decision over Texas A&M in 1979 and a 46-45 win over Southern Methodist in the 1980 Holiday Bowl.

SMU against GRAMBLING at Shreveport

The Mustangs go for an unprecedented third straight SWC title. SMU leads the nation with 17 straight undefeated starts, dating to 9-7 loss to Texas on Oct. 24, 1980. The Ponies also lead the SWC with 12 straight opening victories following 24-6 victory over Louisville last Saturday. It will be the second meeting for the schools. SMU scored a 59-27 victory in 1981 in the only meeting between the Tigers and an SWC member. The Tigers were 8-3 last year in Eddie Robinson's 40th year of coaching, giving him a record of 305-101-13. SMU runners Reggie Dupard and Gary Hashaway combined for 171 yards last week against the Cardinals. The Mustangs are second to Houston in SWC offense, rushing and defense, and lead the conference in rushing defense. Quarterback Lance McIlhenny has started 25 SMU victories, eight behind all-time SWC winning-quarterback mark of 33 by Bobby Layne in 1940s. SMU is 1-0 in Shreveport after 35-31 win over Arkansas in 1976.

KANSAS at TCU

The Frogs open their 87th season with TCU's 27th head coach as Jim Wacker makes his SWC debut. KU coach Mike Gottfried also is in his first year after coaching at Cincinnati. A late Northern Illinois field goal spoiled the Jayhawks' opener, 37-34, in Lawrence last week. The 23-year-old series was interrupted in 1964, but was resumed last season. KU handed TCU its first 1982 loss, 30-19. KU hasn't played at Fort Worth in 20 years, since the Frogs won in '63, 10-6. TCU owns a 15-5-3 series lead, with a 6-1-1 advantage in Fort Worth. The Frogs suffered through a seven-year drought in season openers until a 24-9 win over Utah State last year. TCU still holds a winning opener mark of 52-26-8 overall and 33-11-4 at home. The Jayhawk offense is steered by veteran quarterback Frank Seurer, who went 17-for-31 for 172 yards passing last week, and will be aided by the return of standout running back Kerwin Bell. Bell missed 10 games last year. The Frog offense has been reworked with quarterback Anthony Gulley and running backs Kenneth Davis and Egypt Allen leading the attack.

Winless veterans share Bank of Boston lead

SUTTON, Mass. (AP) — Veterans J.C. Snead and John Mahaffey, PGA tour millionaires but winless for two years, fired 6-under par 65s for a share of the first-round lead Thursday in the $350,000 Bank of Boston Golf Classic.

Snead, who will be 42 next month, pulled into a tie with a late afternoon birdie spree as the 72-hole test got under way in ideal weather at Pleasant Valley Country Club.

Mahaffey, a mid-morning starter in the field of 156, "played well, a pretty solid round" as he carded seven birdies and one bogey for a 34-31—65 and a one-stroke lead.

However, Snead, who started on the 10th tee in the afternoon, recovered quickly from an erratic start and closed within three strokes with four birdies and a bogey on his first nine holes.

Then, playing sound golf, he pulled into a tie with birdies on his 11th, 13th and 14th holes.

Ray Perkins to defeat Auburn in Alabama debut

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

The last time anyone other than Paul "Bear" Bryant was Alabama's head coach, the Crimson Tide lost to Auburn 40-0...in the final game of the 1957 season.

The coach was the immortal J.B. "Ears" Whitworth.

Saturday, Alabama will have a coach other than Bryant for the first time since that 1957 finale. In the spotlight and on the hot seat will be Ray Perkins.

"I expect them to keep on winning," said a hard-to-please alumnus (class of '67) from Petal, Miss., named Walter R. (for Ray) Perkins.

That's just fine with Coach W. Ray Perkins.

"They should expect to keep on winning," said Perkins. "I do, too. I went to school here. I played ball here. I'm one of them."

Alabama, ranked No. 14 nationally, is an 18-point favorite for Perkins' Crimson Tide debut Saturday against Georgia Tech. The pick is Alabama...35-14.

The opening week of the season produced a modest record of 20 right and 13 wrong for a percentage of .606. Against the spread, it was only 2-6 for .250.

No. 18 Florida at No. 9 Southern California (favored by 7): The Gators won last year 17-9 and the Trojans will be out for revenge in Ted Tollner's debut as head coach. Upset Special of the Week...Florida 21-17.

No. 12 Florida State at No. 13 LSU (6): The Seminoles may have been thinking of revenge for last year's 55-21 pasting by LSU when they squeaked past East Carolina 47-46 last week. This could be another shootout...Florida State 31-28.

Wyoming at No. 1 Nebraska (no line): Except for UCLA in two weeks, the Cornhuskers may not be truly tested until the Oklahoma game in late November...Nebraska 49-14.

No. 2 Oklahoma (10½) at Stanford: John Elway passed the Sooners into submission in 1980 and West Virginia's Jeff Hostetler did it last year. A must game for...Oklahoma 34-17.

College Picks

Southern Mississippi at No. 4 Auburn (10½): The War Eagles don't want to get caught looking ahead to Texas, especially after last year's 21-19 scare with Southern Miss...Auburn 21-14.

No. 5 Notre Dame (8) at Purdue: Will Coach Gerry Faust finally find the luck of the Irish? The Boilermakers traditionally give ND fits. Second Upset Special...Purdue 24-17.

Washington State at No. 6 Michigan (15): Michigan's three September opponents are Washington State, Washington and Wisconsin. That's W as in Wolverines and winning...Michigan 28-10.

Oregon at No. 7 Ohio State (24): The Buckeyes have two big games in September, but this isn't one of them...Ohio State 34-13.

Memphis State at No. 8 North Carolina (no line): The Tar Heels should breeze into next month's Atlantic Coast Conference schedule with an unblemished record...North Carolina 28-7.

Utah at No. 11 Arizona (no line): A second straight romp for the Wildcats...Arizona 35-7.

No. 16 Iowa (6) at Iowa State: A rude debut for Iowa State Coach Jim Criner...Iowa 24-14.

No. 17 Maryland (1) at Vanderbilt: It's pass-happy Boomer Esiason against Vandy's pass-thieving "Men of Steal"...Maryland 27-17.

No. 19 Washington (15) at Northwestern: Now we'll find out just how far Northwestern's program has come...Washington 28-21.

Isao Aoki captures European Open lead

INZAI, Japan (AP) — Japan's Isao Aoki, winner of the European Open last Sunday, fired a 5-under-par 67 Friday and took a two-stroke lead over Australia's Terry Gale after two rounds of the $204,000 Suntory Open golf tournament.

Aoki, who also won the Hawaiian Open earlier this year, moved ahead of first-day leader Fujio Kobayashi with a round that included six birdies and one bogey over the par-72 7,179-yard Narashino Country Club course in Inzai, east of Tokyo.

Rebs take two wins

Midland Lee's football future is looking brighter all the time after a double sweep by the junior varsity and sophomore teams Thursday.

The Rebel JV won a 38-0 victory in Andrews while the sophomores took a 49-0 win over Abilene Cooper at the Lee Field. The Lee JVs are now 2-0 and unscored on this year. They have outscored opponents 82-0. The sophomores are also 2-0 and have outscored opponents 62-0.

J.B. Brown scored on runs of 55 and 35 yards to key the victory over Andrews, a game in which the Rebs jumped to a 26-0 halftime lead. Lonnie Dixon scored from 42 yards out and Kevin Witt from 30 yards out. Tuey Rankin had a 25-yard TD and Lawrence Medlock had a 16-yard run.

The sophomores were paced by Novart Morales and Ron Pertile, each with two touchdowns.

The Lee JV will face Midland High on Saturday, Sept. 17, at 10 a.m. at Memorial Stadium while the sophomores will host Odessa Permian at the same time at the Lee Field.

MC strong in tourney

HOBBS, N.M. — New Mexico Junior College's first day 292 was tops in the NMJC Invitational golf tournament here Thursday, but Midland College Gold is only three strokes off the pace with a 295.

NMMI has a 298 for third while Odessa White and South Plains Orange both stand at 299.

Drew Ragland led the MC effort with a 71 while Ed Barnes shot a 74. Danny Kloza, David Hicks and Jeff Cranford all had 75s.

The Midland College Green team posted a 306 total Thursday with Chris Gomez leading the way with a 73. Other Green team members were Rob Marburger 76, Jim Vollmer 78, Jeff Pinkston 79 and Craig Bagley 84. MC's Raymond Cole, playing as an individual, had an 81 round.

Action contiunes today with another round of 18 holes.

Conference play begins next week for the Chaps, so this tournament is important in the preparation process.

USSR tour is still on

By The AP

The scheduled tour of the United States by the Soviet Union basketball team still is on, Bill Wall, executive director of the Amateur Basketball Association United States of America, said Thursday.

But two universities have canceled exhibition games by a Soviet team in the wake of the Soviets downing a Korean airliner last week. ABAUSA is the governing body of amateur basketball in the United States.

Vanderbilt also canceled its Nov. 17 game against the Soviets.

Missouri dry spell rough as a cob

By The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON, Mo. — A drought as extensive as this year's sends ripples all through the economy, even into the last place one might expect: a stark turn-of-the-century red brick factory building on the banks of the Missouri River southwest of St. Louis.

The drought in the Midwest means poor corn. Poor corn means undersized or undeveloped cobs. And poor cobs mean trouble for Missouri Meerschaum Co., the world's largest maker of corncob pipes.

Missouri Meerschaum keeps its pipe production figures a deep, dark secret. But the company uses between 7 million and 9 million corncobs a year, grown on contract by area farmers to company specifications, using a large cob, small kernel hybrid developed years ago by University of Missouri scientists.

But the one thing that farmers and science can't control is the weather, and this year Mother Nature has made things, well, rough as a cob for them. The heat and lack of rain have devastated the corn crop, and the folks at Missouri Meerschaum are more than a little edgy about the situation.

"Our yield won't be as good as in some other years," said Bill Deering, the company's day-to-day manager and director of marketing. "The main question is: will we have the quantity we need? Three weeks ago there was deep concern."

EARL HOLTGREIWE, the plant manager, added, "It will be touch and go with the cobs this year. ... You know, a corncob is a corncob, and there's not that much you can do with it."

Holtgreiwe isn't just blowing smoke when he says that. The corncob pipe has come to hold a special romantic spot in American country lore and it has varied only slightly in shape and content since it was invented here in 1869 by Henry Tibbe, a Dutch immigrant woodworker.

Mark Twain, a Missourian who knew his pipes, sized it up pretty well. He said, "If you grow wheat just to get the chaff, you're crazy, but if you grow corn to get the cob, you're smart."

Before there was a Henry Tibbe, farmers and frontiersmen were hollowing out corncobs and using them for pipes. Tibbe took it a step further, coating the cob with a plaster of Paris goo to fill holes left by the kernels, and he had an instant hit on his hands.

Tibbe named his product the Missouri Meerschaum, after the mineral used in making meerschaum pipes, and the name endured. When Tibbe's patent expired other firms got into the business, and by the 1920s this somnolent town of 9,000 was a center of the industry, with a dozen or more companies making cob pipes.

TODAY, IT'S DOWN to Missouri Meerschaum and a lone competitor just up the hill, the Buescher Pipe Co., vying for the smoker's favor. Missouri Meerschaum seems to go out of its way to perpetuate itself as a purveyor of Americana.

An air of must and dust pervades Tibbe's ancient brick factory. Old photos, sales posters and exposition certificates hang at off-center angles. Popeye, Gen. Douglas MacArthur, Norman Rockwell and faded advertising placards share honor spots on the dingy walls. Some file cabinets seem to have been there before Tibbe.

The files contain letters from MacArthur and former President Herbert Hoover, with special orders for Missouri Meerschaums. In fact, the company still makes limited numbers of a long-stemmed, deep-bowled model known affectionately as "the Mac" — after the general, naturally.

While there's not all that much to making a pipe (a cob, the plaster, a wooden stem and a plastic mouthpiece), Deering's company is finicky about the way things are done. Farmers who grow the corn, for example, must use special shelling machines provided by the company to avoid scarring the cobs.

And the only real concession to modernity is that the pipe stems are made from New England wood, unlike Tibbe's originals, which used cob stems and reeds pulled from marshes along the Missouri.

"Wood actually performs better than a cob stem," Deering said, "but the fact is, it's very expensive to make a cob stem anymore.

"It's a fun product, an American product, and we take pride in it," said Deering. "... We make a quality product, an honest product. We are not thought of as a stepchild in the pipe industry. Fact is, in terms of units produced, this is one of the biggest pipe factories in the world."

NO ONE WILL say so, but Missouri Meerschaum is producing at least 1 million pipes a year, ranging from tiny novelty models to sophisticated, fancy pipes that sell for $14. That continues to amaze Holtgreiwe, who came to work here in 1960.

"To tell the truth, I don't know where all those pipes go. After I was here a couple years, I figured the market for pipes was saturated. But we just keep making and selling them," he said.

Making and selling them, that is, as long as there's a steady flow of top-quality cobs. The company keeps a two-year supply on hand, but the drought of 1983 still is bad news for Missouri Meerschaum. Already they're thinking of increasing their cob-corn plantings next year for insurance.

Administration lobbies for decontrol

By SARAH MCCLENDON
Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON – Spokesmen for the Reagan administration continue to lobby for decontrol of natural gas.

Recently, Clive Benedict, deputy assistant secretary, Deptment of Energy, spoke before the National Association of Manufacturers (NAM). The former repesentative from West Virginia said "We think it's going to result in lower prices to the consumer."

NAM Energy Director Bob Kiernan agreed decontrol will lead to lower gas prices. But many consumer and labor groups think otherwise. They have launched a grass-roots campaign to mobilize opposition to the Reagan gas decontrol bill

Many state regulatory commissions and gas distribution companies also oppose decontrol of so-called "old" gas although they do endorse decontrol of new gas in order to provide an incentive for exploration and development of new supplies of gas.

The American Gas association (AGA) has defined its position on gas legislation as follows:

AGA will work for —

—Reduction in take-or-pay clauses in existing gas purchase contracts.

—A ban on most favored nations clauses.

—Repeal of laws that currently restrict marketing of natural gas for certain end uses.

—Defeat of mandatory contract carrier or common carrier proposals.

—And AGA continues its opposition to decontrol of "old" gas.

Washington Analysis Corporation, a research-consulting firm, has reported it believes the natural gas decontrol legislation has only one chance in four of being passed by Congress this year.

President Reagan has been using up political credits in gaining congrssional support for his policies in Central America, Western Europe and the Middle East. He may decide that a nasty political battle over natural gas issues would be counterproductive, especially in a presidential election year.

The Reagan sponsored gas decontrol bill was debated in both Senate and House committees for months after public hearings. The bill was reported out by the Senate Energy committee by two votes but "without recommendation".

The House Energy sub-committee on Fossil and Synthetic Fuels reported an amended bill out by only one vote, to the full House Energy committee which is chaired by Rep. John Dingell, D—Mich. Dingell has been quoted as saying that decontrol of "old" gas would pass "over my dead body". After the full House committee completes its work of rewriting the subcommitee's bill, natural gas producers may be reluctant to support the legislation.

The House subcommittee has a membership that is narrowly tilted in favor of gas decontrol but the full committee is tilted in favor of consumer interests and therefore against acceleration of decontrol of all gas prices.

Even the conservative Oil and Gas Journal, whose editorial policy is strongly pro-decontrol, concedes the outlook for passage of the bill is a toss-up.

Bell reports revenues down

Bell Petroleum Services Inc. (NASDAQ: BPSI) Thursday reported revenues of $2,824,000 for the first quarter ended July 31, 1983, down 38.7 percent from the same period a year earlier. The Company also reported a loss of $341,000, or $.14 per share, for the quarter, compared with a loss of $32,000, or $.01 per share, for the year-earlier period.

Operating losses declined from $937,000 in the fourth quarter of fiscal 1983 to $579,000 during the first quarter of 1984, as the number of jobs performed and products sold continued to increase. However, the persistent slump in the oil and gas industry continued to affect both earnings and revenues as a price competition among oilfield service companies remained intense, eroding gross margins.

During the quarter, the Company's balance sheet was further strengthened by the sale of 360,000 shares of common stock to a major institutional holder.

Bell Petroleum Services Inc., is an oilfield service and manu-facturing company headquartered in Midland. It manufactures and sells oilfield rubber products, as well as electrical wireline tools and equipment. Its services include electrical wireline logging and completion services, oil and gas analyses and H2S safety services.

'Intellectual property' may get Congress' attention

By The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — The recent Appeals Court decision extending copyright protection to computer software is expected to increase congressional attention on the broader concern of protecting high-technology "intellectual property" such as computer chip designs, according to Capitol Hill sources and industry lobbyists.

"A lot of people are concerned that Congress has really failed to anticipate the pace of technological change," said a staffer on the Senate subcommittee on patents, copyrights and trademarks. "But it's an enormously complex subject. It's not an area where decisions should be made quickly."

A three-judge panel in the United States Court of Appeals in Philadelphia decided that Franklin Computer Corp., a maker of Apple-compatible computers, had violated copyright law by copying the Apple computer's "operating system" — the software enabling the machine to run other programs.

The court ruled in favor of Apple Computer's argument that computer software is protected by copyright even if it is a physical part of a computer chip rather than a separate set of operating instructions.

Opponents of copyright protection have argued that a computer program contained on a chip is really part of a machine and thus entitled only to patent protection. Another line of attack was author John Hersey's assertion in the report of the Commission on the New Technological Uses of Copyright (CONTU) that copyrights should protect only communications intended for human consumption and not computer processing.

Franklin said it is considering an appeal to the U.S. Supreme Court. Many people in the computer industry view the decision, which overturns a lower court's ruling allowing Franklin to continue offering the Apple-compatible competitive computer, as an important step in protecting software companies from "programming plagiarism."

"This is a very positive development," said Ron Palenski, associate counsel for the Association of Data Processing Service Organizations (ADAPSO). "The court essentially said that programs and programs on chips are copyrightable, and that's what we wanted."

Last year, ADAPSO sought to introduce a bill in the House extending copyright protection to all forms of expression of computer programs. Palenski said that the organization will try again this year.

After Congress rewrote the Copyright Act in 1976, it created CONTU, a special commission, to examine the computer software question.

Donoghue's Money Fund Average (Averages for all 248 taxable funds)		36	8.78	8.74

MONEY FUND TABLE COMMENTARY: Assets of the 248 taxable money funds reported by Donoghue's MONEY FUND REPORT of Holliston, MA 01746 increased $117 million to $162 billion for the week ended September 6, 1983.

The taxable money funds' 7-day average yield increased to 8.78% from 8.70%. The taxable money funds' 30-day average yield increased to 8.74% from 8.68%.

The taxable funds' average maturity shortened to 36 days after three weeks at 37 days.

William E. Donoghue says, "Money fund yields resumed their climb this week. The 7-day average yield of taxable money funds hit a ten-month high of 8.78%. This is the fifth consecutive week that average yields on all taxable money funds have outperformed average rates on bank and thrift MMDAs.

Some of the increase in money fund assets this week can be attributed to investors choosing the higher returns offered by money funds."

Yields represent annualized total return to shareholders for past seven- and thirty-day period. Past returns are not necessarily indicative of future yields. Investment quality and maturity may vary among funds. x - average term to next rate adjustment date, g - one time sales charge, r - restricted availability. Bible Belting

Dr. W.A. Criswell, chancellor of Criswell Center for Biblical Studies (CCBS) and pastor of Dallas' First Baptist Church, has his Bible in hand as he leaves the Midland Hilton for a speaking engagement at Green Tree Country Club. With him are, from the left, Dr. Paige Patterson, CCBS president; Charles Shelby, CCBS vice president for development, and Gary W. Boyd, CCBS student.

HRC may close doors because of lack of funds

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

Its function was to solve problems and heal relationships. But the Human Relations Council couldn't overcome its own difficulties and will be closing its doors Oct. 31, partly a product of the local recession.

The action won't be made official until the HRC board meets Oct. 10. However, the board president and another member see no option but to abolish the council while two former directors are regretting the action to be taken.

Lack of funds was cited by Board President Edia Hernandez as the reason for shutting down the agency that has been aiding Midlanders since 1971. "The primary factor is the economic situation of the community," she noted. The City Council allotted $25,000 this next fiscal year for the agency. And a few other organizations also gave.

"But it wasn't enough for a full staff and office. We could have kept it but it would have been one person and that couldn't serve the community," Ms. Hernandez added.

The HRC board tried a fund-raising project, but the money didn't come. They tried surveying organizations, such as Lions and Kiwanis, for their opinion of the agency with results showing 98 percent felt HRC should continue.

"But we also need people who have the money to support it," she said. "Unfortunately, the office and staff people need to get paid."

GROUPS WHICH gave money have been informed of the upcoming board vote and probable results, she said, "because many of them are working on budgets right now."

On Wednesday, the City Council was informed and the $25,000 was placed into another area.

Dan O'Grady, former president and ex-officio board member, said the agency has enough money to continue through the end of October. "Normally, another grant comes in December. But if things hadn't changed, we would have been reduced to half staff."

He agreed with Ms. Hernandez about Midland's recession contributing to HRC's demise, tacking on an increased cost of doing business. But that's not the only reason, he said, and looked back to some rocky months since January. That is when internal problems surfaced and the agency stood on the edge of shutting down.

In one year, the agency had three directors and was housed in three offices, the current one being at 2101 W. Wall St.

GLORIA ELLIS, who is on vacation, inherited the director's job after Marion Clee resigned in January. Ms. Clee contended then the agency had lost its function and was no longer needed.

Before Ms. Clee took the job, her predecessor had been Michael Mitchell of California, who never really took the reins before leaving.

About January 1983, Midland County Commissioners asked the council to find other offices. HRC had been housed in the County Annex.

It moved to an office on North Weatherford Street for several months before the last move to Wall Street.

It may not be just the lack of money and recent internal confusion leading to HRC's termination, but a different makeup of the board and a change in its attitude toward spending and programs since some of the earlier boards, offered one observer.

The council began as an outgrowth of concern by community leaders over busing and desegregation in the late 1960s. When Goals for the '70s were formulated, an idea for such a council was among those. A meeting was held about 1970 and the council formed in 1971.

TWO FORMER directors — Susan Edwards who served from June 1976 to June 1979, and Kimberly Modisett who served from 1979 to 1981 — pointed to accomplishments during their years and said they view the council's abolishment with remorse.

"In its sphere of purpose, the Human Relations Council has acted responsibly, appropriately and commendably as a liaison between numerous factions within Midland's communities for many years," said Ms. Edwards.

"Their ability to coordinate differences of opinions has often put them in the midst of adversity and to their credit they were able to moderate these confrontations to a peaceful, mutually acceptable end. Their influence in regard to the establishment and maintenance of many city-wide programs, such as MidTran, housing and community development, Christmas in April, Child Welfare Board and MISD desegregation, will remain — long after the council is disbanded."

Seeing HRC closed is like "losing an old friend, and I believe its work is not yet completed," Ms. Edwards added.

Ms. Modisett believes, "You can always find something to do. I feel like there will always be room for a Human Relations Council. Part of its function is to grow and expand with the city as it grows and expands."

During Ms. Modisett's years as director, the council took the fledgling Christmas in April program under its wing and nurtured it. Two years ago, the housing rehabilitation program for low-income persons separated from HRC and now stands on its own.

"The growth of CIA was one of our best programs," said Ms. Modisett. She then pointed to coordinating harmony of integration with the school system in its busing program, resolving a football league crisis that involved racial problems and working as a mediator between the City Council and County Commissioners on the problem of Midland Draw and effluent water.

A SPARK program drawing in volunteers from the community to help in the school district was started by the Human Relations Council. In 1979, said Ms. Modisett, SPARK did 25 programs in the school district. In 1982, it handled 150 programs. "We more than tripled in one school year."

HRC TOOK ON a weatherization program that involved work on more than 100 homes and also the federal cheese give-away. "And we visited the elderly on a monthly basis when we were making rounds in the community," Ms. Modisett added.

And recently the council was taking applications for the city's federally-funded housing rehabilitation program and was involved with the food bank and a training seminar with Casa de Amigos, according to Ms. Hernandez.

The needs have not diminished, even though HRC will be disappearing.

"Personally, I think it's unfortunate," said O'Grady of the closing. "No day goes by without a number of people going by the office or calling for help; people needing help with rental assistance, utilities, clothing, the basic human needs." Under Ms. Ellis' leadership, HRC was instrumental in getting the Black Advisory Council organized and in getting some neighborhood beautification work planted, he said.

"Human Relations Council was originally established as a means of reducing tensions and promoting harmony between racial groups. The general feeling about HRC is we don't have a racial problem and we don't have discrimination in Midland," said O'Grady. "You can look around and see that discrimination will always be with us. In that way, there is a need for the Human Relations Council.

"It's a common ground to get together and promote better relationships. That's not something readily visible."

But, Ms. Edwards added, "Maybe the lack of a Human Relations Council will force each of us to accept individual responsibility for improved communications and cooperation between all neighborhoods and races in Midland."

Baptist 'under-shepherd' still going strong at 73

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Dr. W.A. Criswell, "under-shepherd" of The First Baptist Church of Dallas since 1944, at 73 is a dynamic and forceful pastor who leads the nation's largest Southern Baptist congregation.

"He's a very forceful individual," said Dr. Paige Patterson, president of the Criswell Center for Biblical Studies in Dallas. Criswell, a man of "dynamics" and stamina, "still preaches three times on Sunday," said Patterson. "He's still as brilliant as he ever was."

Though not speaking in Criswell's stead, Patterson, in a press conference at the Midland Hilton late Thursday afternoon, offered some insights into Criswell the man, into his ministry and into his 1970-founded Criswell Center for Biblical Studies.

Criswell was in Midland to promote the CCBS and to give thanks to Midlanders who support the center. However, he did not attend Thursday's press conference here.

"He does not go anywhere where he meets a stranger," said Patterson, 40. "He's a very out-going, gregarious individual."

Criswell ministers the 24,000-member congregation of the First Baptist Church, which operates on an $8 million annual budget, and is chancellor of the CCBS.

Though Criswell will celebrate his 40th year at the church in 1984, his predecessor, Dr. George W. Truett, pastored the church for 47 years until his death in 1944.

The "great church" reflects the Criswell ministry, Patterson said.

"It just takes awhile for a church to begin to assume the personality of the pastor," he said of the benefits Criswell's longevity has had a the church.

Criswell, he said, is a superb minister.

"Like all great preachers, he is the master of pathos," Patterson said. "He's a great storyteller" who laces his sermons with insights into the Biblical language and with quotations from notable writers and poets, such as Shakespeare and Longfellow.

"He blends the intellectual and illustrative material that makes for great preaching...You're laughing one minute and crying the next."

The Criswell Center today has an enrollment of 400 full-time students and has a 23 full-time faculty members. "Each faculty member has an earned Ph.D. in hand," said Patterson, who also is associate pastor of the church which Criswell pastors. When he became the center's president in 1975, it had 12 full-time students and four full-time faculty members.

"The Lord has been gracious to us."

The CCBS is "very tightly tied" to the First Baptist Church, is governed by a board of trustees, said Patterson, and is termed a "center for Biblical studies" rather than a seminary because "We thought that sounded too much like a cemetery," Patterson said. Under the "umbrella" of the CCBS are the Criswell Bible College, the Criswell Graduate School of Bible, KCBI-FM radio and the "Shophar," a quarterly publication.

The CCBS offers the bachelor's and master's degrees and is "very fundamental" in its teachings. "It's a very difficult school," he said, and, due to the Criswell influence, places "very strong emphasis on linguistics." Students, for example, are required to be able to read the Hebrew of the Old Testament and Greek of the New Testament. He said Criswell sought "top-flight" biblical instruction and an intellectual approach to biblical studies.

Medicare changes play havoc with hospitals

Fred Dement

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

The name of the game is efficiency, but the first play is a stall, according to Parkview Hospital's new controller, Fred Dement.

Looking down the court at the government's proposed Medicare changes, effective Oct. 1, Dement said the game will be played in various stages — and he's pretty sure there will be substitutions to the rules throughout the period.

"It's hurry up and wait," Dement said. "It's been rush, rush, rush to get all these good things done. Now it's supposed to start in October and they're just now coming around with the DRGs (diagnosis-related groups)."

The government decided there were too many diagnoses and surgical procedures — more than 10,000, Dement said. A team was hired from Yale University, but the reduction to 4,000 different procedures wasn't enough. With the new Medicare reimbursement system, there now are about 470 groups.

Each Medicare patient, when admitted into a hospital, will be classified in one of the categories. Each category will be assigned a weight factor, determined by such items as average length of time a patient stays in the hospital, their age and sex, Dement said.

In addition, hospitals will receive two Medicare payment limits. The Section 223 limit sets a ceiling on the amount of reimbursements a hospital can receive for Medicare patients and a target rate. The target rate is computed from a formula using the hospital's total operating costs, less payments for hospital-based physicians, income tax, malpractice insurance and phone expenses, plus 25 percent as a break for the first year.

THE COST per case is derived from dividing the year's total allowable Medicare patient costs by the number of Medicare discharges, rather than covering average routine costs according to the number of days of care provided to Medicare patients.

Hospitals will be paid depending on how the actual cost relates to the target rate, with no payment allowed above the Section 223 limit.

"It can help some hospitals, or it can hurt them," Dement said. "What it boils down to, is if you're an efficient hospital, you're not going to be hurt by this."

Twenty-five percent of the hospital's reimbursements will be based on prospective reimbursements and 75 percent on target rates the first fiscal year of implementation. For Parkview, it begins April 1, 1984.

In the second year, prospective reimbursements will make up 50 percent of reimbursements, 75 percent in the third year and 100 percent thereafter, Dement said.

Man pleads not guilty to first degree felony

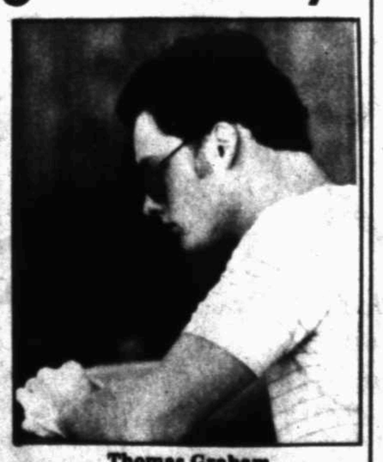
By PATRICK DEAREN
Staff Writer

RANKIN — Thomas Alan Graham, 18, of McCamey pleaded not guilty in 83rd District Court here Thursday on a charge stemming from a July 15 McCamey hardware store break-in during which an Upton County deputy was slain.

William H. Earney of Marfa, 83rd District Judge, set a trial date of Nov. 14 in San Angelo after accepting court-appointed defense attorney Lawrence Barber's motion for change of venue from Upton County.

The decision was reached in a chambers conference between Judge Earney, Barber and District Attorney Aubrey Edwards of Big Lake upon Graham's arraignment on a charge of committing a burglary during which a murder occurred. A conviction on the first degree felony carries with it a sentence of 5-99 years.

Graham also has indictments against him of capital murder and murder in connection with the death of 45-year-old Charles A. "Chuck" Renfro, a 4½-year sheriff's department veteran who died from a shotgun blast while responding to a silent alarm inside the McCamey hardware store of Eugene Covell.



Thomas Graham

Graham was wounded and his father, 40-year-old Richard Lee Graham, killed July 17 at a gas plant near Bakersfield by a supervisor who claimed the pair was trying to steal a pickup. The younger Graham was "blinded for life" during the incident, according to Barber.

Board considers landfill options

Consideration of alternatives regarding Midland's collection of fees for those disposing of refuse at the city's landfill operation was referred to the municipal committee of Clean Midland, Inc., during that group's Thursday board of directors meeting.

That step was taken after municipal committee chairman Fred Baker, who is the city's director of Public Works, explained to the board guidelines under which the city must operate the landfill and costs of operating the landfill. Baker provided that information to the board in a continuation of the topic from last month's meeting because questions from some board members had been unresolved.

Baker told the board Thursday that the city collects between $36,000 and $50,000 in fees at the landfill site each year and that if those fees were not charged, the city would have to make up the lost revenue through higher charges on Midland residents' monthly garbage collection fee.

He also said the landfill fees are charged on a sliding scale so that those carrying trash to the landfill operation pay only for the use of the landfill. He said a landfill operation has been determined to be a utility and that fees for the landfill operation are based on making the city sanitation department self-supporting.

The possibility of asking the city to suspend fees charged at the landfill had been raised in last month's meeting by board member Susie Hitchcock. She had noted that the fees may be a contributing factor to Midland's problem with illegal refuse dumping.

Texas Commission on the Arts holds fall meeting in Midland

By GEORGIA TEMPLE
Entertainment Writer

Since 1980, Midland arts groups have received monies and performances totaling $63,800 from the Texas Commission on the Arts.

In addition, the Midland-based Thouvenel String Quartet was listed on the commission's touring arts program in 1981 and 1982.

Local performances, such as the Midland-Odessa Symphony's Pops series, Midland College's presentation, on two occasions, of the Texas Opera Theatre, Renwood Inc.'s performance of the Texas Little Symphony and Permian Civic Ballet's hosting of the Dallas Ballet, were made possible in part by grants from TCA.

DEATHS

C. Williams Sr.

FORT STOCKTON — Clayton Williams Sr., Texas historian, rancher, author on Texana, and father of Clayton Williams Jr. and Janet Pollard, both of Midland, died early today at his home in Fort Stockton. He was 88.

Services will be at 4 p.m. Sunday in the First United Methodist Church of Fort Stockton. Burial will be in Fort Stockton under direction of Fort Stockton Funeral Home.

Williams, who had worked as a rancher, engineer and landman, edited the book "Animal Tales of the West," published in 1974, and authored the trilogy "Never Again," published in 1969, which included the works "Texas B.C. 1821," "Texas 1821-1848" and "Texas 1848-1861," and wrote "Texas' Last Frontier: Fort Stockton and Trans Pecos, 1861-1895," published in 1982.

"This book ("Texas' Last Frontiers") pulls in my horns a little bit and confines to a smaller area," he said in a 1982 interview.

Williams was born April 15, 1895, in Fort Stockton in an old fort house. His father was county judge.

He started cowboying at age 9. "I had my own horse," he recalled in the interview, "and I'd charge them 75 cents a day when I rode my own horse and 50 cents a day when I rode their horse."

In 1915, he graduated from Texas A&M University, where he earned a degree in engineering, and served in the armed forces in World War I.

In the 1920s, while he was working for Frank Pickrell and the Group No. 1 Oil Corp., he recommended drilling on the site of what became the deepest Ellenburger Formation oil well of that time. "I became a petroleum engineer by necessity before they had any such courses in petroleum engineering," he said.

He was a Pecos County commissioner for 18 years and, with his brother, ranched from the early 1930s to the middle 1950s.

Williams did road and highway engineering work for West Texas counties. "I saved the counties dollars...," he recalled.

"I went generally where the action was," he said. "Before World War I, the action was at the copper mines, Chino Copper Co. in New Mexico. When I came back from the war, the action was in the oil fields of Eastland, Ranger. I always looked for more pay, like anybody would."

"My family has always been on the frontier," Williams said. He said that frontiersman Kit Carson came west with his great-grandfather, Richard Gott Williams.

His father was an early surveyor in Fort Stockton. "He and two or three other men were the only men I ever knew who survived a buffalo stampede."

His interest in West Texas history had been influenced by his being president of the Fort Stockton, Permian Basin, and West Texas Historical Societies and by his serving on the executive committee of the Texas State Historical Society.

Other survivors include his wife, Chicora; nine grandchildren and a great-grandchild.

M.R. Tolliver

Services for M.R. Tolliver, 50, of 308 McDonald, will be at 2 p.m. Sunday at the Ellis Funeral Home chapel with the Rev. Reed Gibson officiating. Burial will be in Cooperas Cove.

Tolliver died Thursday afternoon in a Midland hospital following a lengthy illness.

He was born Jan. 26, 1933, in Prestonville, Ky., where he grew up. He received a degree in business from the College of the Southwest in Hobbs, N.M. He married Juanita Joiner Oct. 20 1953. He served in the U.S. Army in Korea. He was associated with Shell Oil for 18 years and was a senior construction inspector at the time of his death. He moved to Midland six years ago.

Survivors include his wife of Midland; a son, Timothy Royce Tolliver of Duncanville; three daughters, Karen Elaine Tolliver of Lewisville, Candance Dawn Richardson and Nita Ann Burton, both of Midland; a brother, Joe Tolliver of Carrollton; a sister, Opal Robbins of Carrollton; and three grandchildren.

J.J. Menefee

McCAMEY — Services for Jackson Jerry Menefee, 38, of McCamey were to be at 3 p.m. today in the First Baptist Church of McCamey. Burial was to be in in McCamey Cemetery under direction of Dennis James Funeral Home.

Menefee died Wednesday in an automobile accident in Pecos County.

He was born July 27, 1945, in McCamey, was graduated from McCamey High School in 1964 and received the bachelor's degree from North Texas State University. He served in the Vietnam War, was a 32nd degree Scottish Rite Mason and was employed by Halliburton Services.

Survivors include his wife, Elizabeth Ann; a son, Jason Jerry; a daughter, Arianne Michelle; his parents, John and Velma Menefee of McCamey; a brother, Calvin L. Menefee, and a sister, Dr. Marjorie Menefee of Austin.

R.H. Price

CRANE — Services for R.H. "Blackie" Price, 74, of Crane were to be at 10:30 a.m. today in the First Assembly of God Church in Crane. Graveside services were to be at 4 p.m. today in the City of Levelland Cemetery under direction of Richard W. Box Funeral Home.

Price, a Crane resident since 1968, was a retired truck driver. He died at his home Wednesday.

Gladys Sanders

Services for Mrs. Sam (Gladys) Sanders, 65, of Fort Stockton were to be at 4 p.m. today in Ellis Chapel with the Rev. Bob Porterfield officiating.

Burial was to be in Resthaven Memorial Park under direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

She died at St. John's Hospital in San Angelo Wednesday after an extended illness.

Pallbearers were to be Cliff Schooley, Jimmy Martin, David Bradley, Ray Williams, Kenneth Tietz and Bill Barnett. Honorary pallbearers were to be Jerry Browne and Ivan Browne.

The machine was purchased with money received from a donation of $45,000 from Exxon Company, U.S.A., for replacement and purchase of equipment in the radiology department. Mendell, manager of Exxon's Midcontinent Production Division in Midland, said the company also donated $15,000 to Temple's Scott and White Memorial Hospital for construction and equipment of a trauma room and the relocation of the emergency room.

Medicare changes confuse hospitals

Although the government first wanted to enter the system based on 100 percent prospective reimbursements beginning this October, Dement said the American Medical Association pointed out many hospitals would be forced to close their doors if the plan was implemented at full scale that early.

TEACHING AND psychiatric hospitals will be exempt until 1987, Dement said. At that time, physicians also will be required to go under the prospective payment system.

However, hospital-based physicians will begin the new system Oct. 1, he said.

"They're putting ceilings on what a physician can or cannot make. An emergency room physician may make $85,000 per year, but he'll have to keep up with the time spent in the hospital. Say a pathologist may make $112,000 per year if he spends eight hours a day in the hospital. If he spends only 50 percent of his time there, he'll get only half (of his salary)."

While the government probably won't allow appeals on amounts designated per DRG, Dement said other factors in the system may be forced to change.

"I think the concept is good if it's run correctly," he said. "But under the old Medicare regulations, they were constantly changing due to appeals."

Hospitals are grouped according to bed size and location in rural or urban areas, but by 1987, the government expects one rate to be applied to all hospitals.

"There is no way possible that can work," he said. "Take a hospital in New York City, or California — it can't afford to get the same rate as a hospital in Topeka, Kan."

PATIENT COSTS may be higher in larger urban areas because of more specialized services, but supplies may be more costly in remote rural areas because of transportation distances, he said.

Using a bell curve, Dement explained a hospital will be reimbursed the same amount for patients who are discharged early as it will for those who remain in the hospital longer than expected. The difference in the costs to the hospital and the reimbursement it receives, a loss or a gain, will not be billed to the patient. If the hospital realizes income from one patient, it probably will be consumed in expenses for another, he said.

Government and health care officials agree the five percent of patients discharged early will happen more often than the five percent of those discharged later, causing extra expense to the hospital, according to Dement.

"We'll eat it," he said.

Hospital officials have another concern, Dement said: If a patient is admitted to a hospital and is later transferred for specialized care to another hospital, the hospital that discharges the patient will receive the reimbursements.

Most likely an agreement will be worked out between the two hospitals allowing the initial hospital to receive a portion of the reimbursment, he said.

"BUT IT'S another headache," Dement said. "The government is saying you'll have to work out the agreement with the receiving hospital. That will increase the (initial) hospital's cost because they'll have to have someone to keep up with it. And some hospitals might not want to do it."

Also, if a patient is admitted into a hospital for foot surgery and has a heart attack while on the operating table, the primary diagnosis is still foot surgery, Dement said. The heart attack would be a secondary diagnosis.

"There is going to be some formula — they haven't come out with it yet. You still won't get paid for both diagnoses, but you will get paid for more than just foot surgery," Dement said.

Because payments will take into account a patient's age, with reimbursements for older patients higher, Dement said hospital officials argued with the government that it usually is more complicated and expensive to heal a young person with a heart attack than an older patient.

"The government has deaf ears," he said.

It also has a Peer Review Organization that will check medical records of Medicare patients to make sure the hospital is abiding by the rules, providing quality care and appropriately admitting patients.

THE PRO program, "or the watch dogs" may come into a hospital and look at Medicare patients' medical files at random, Dement said.

"You don't have any idea whose file they're going to pull," so all must be in order, he said, adding the AHA is already protesting as are intermediaries, usually insurance companies that have contracts with the federal government to take care of Medicare claims and reimbursements.

"It's gotten so complicated running hospitals that you can't put just anybody up there to run it," Dement said.

Deaf protest CBS policies

National Association of the Deaf, assisted by the local organization, will be sponsoring demonstrations Sept. 28 at CBS television station affiliates to show their disappointment and frustration at CBS' refusal to provide captioning for persons with hearing impairments.

The Midessa Association of the Deaf, Inc., will put on a demonstration that day from 11 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. at the CBS affiliate in Odessa, KOSA-TV, with 35 to 50 persons participating. The group also is requesting TV viewers to turn the channels to something other than CBS that day.

"We are being denied the right to television access that other people take for granted," said Charles R. Archer, secretary of the Midessa Association of the Deaf, Inc. "CBS alone, of all the major networks, has consistently refused to provide television access for deaf people.

"While CBS has done some experiments with a method called 'Teletext,' there is no guarantee that they will use it for the benefit of deaf people, and no promise of when it will be available. Five or 10 years is too long to wait for television access. We are asking everyone to turn off CBS programs on Sept. 28."

Other than Odessa, demonstrations are planned at Austin and other Texas cities, said Archer.

Arts commission meets in Midland

Mrs. J.H. Herd

Today, the commission is holding its fall meeting here. This is the second time in its almost 20-year history that the commission has met in Midland.

Created by the Texas Legislature in 1965, TCA's 18 commissioners are appointed by the governor for 6-year terms and represent all fields of the arts throughout the state.

"It's the third most sought after appointment, according to what we've been told," Richard Huff, TCA's executive director, said during a Thursday reception for the commissioners. The two which precede TCA are The University of Texas Board of Regents and Texas A&M Board of Regents.

"I think people are interested in the arts," Huff said, explaining the high drawing power of this commission. "Since the federal government got involved, there is a growing realization that generous support makes the arts available to more of our citizens and that it's exciting to play a role in providing opportunities for not only observation, but 'hands on' experience with the arts.

"It plays an economic role in our communities," Huff said, citing the Dallas Arts District as an example. Prices on houses jumped from "$45 a square foot before the district to over $125 a square foot after the district."

The commissioners are from Houston, Dallas, Waco, Fort Worth, Galveston, Amarillo, Brenham, San Antonio, Austin and Midland. Mrs. J. Harvey Herd is the commisioner from Midland. This year marks her 6th on the commission.

"Up until the appropriations approved and signed into law by the governor for the fiscal year '84 and '85, Texas ranked 47th out of the 50 states in state appropriations," Mrs. Herd said.

"Our standing has improved considerably since the state increase over the previous biennium was 149 percent. The grand totals for fiscal year '84 is $4,286,848 and for fiscal year '85 is $4,575,040."

TCA also receives funds from other sources, including the National Endowment for the arts, an independent agency of the federal government created in 1965 to encourage and support American arts and artists.

The commission states its purposes as:

— To serve as a catalyst for the development of quality arts throughout the state with support from the public and private sectors.

— To ensure public access to quality arts regardless of geographic isolation, race, income, age, handicap or social barrier.

— To promote the creation and presentation of quality arts programs throughout Texas by supporting arts organizations, community organizations, institutions, Statewide Partners, local arts agencies and individual artists.

— To involve Texans of all ages in arts education and arts activities by supporting organizations involved in these activities.

"There are nine Advisory Panels who review grant applications, consisting of at least 12 members who are experts or professionals in their respective fields. Two members of the commission sit on each panel," said Mrs. Herd.

"They (the experts or professionals) may be nominated by an interested person or organization to serve a three-year term."

The nine panels cover the following fields: community arts, dance, education, literature, media, music/theater, and touring and visual arts/architecture.

"Funds granted must always be matched on a local basis so that cities are encouraged to support their own art programs," Mrs Herd said. "Matching must be all cash, not 'in kind.'"

Board considers landfill options

She also noted that with only one landfill located on Midland's east side, residents who have to drive all the way across town to dispose of refuse — and then are charged for doing so — may elect to dump the trash elsewhere illegally. She had offered a possible alternative — another landfill on the city's west side and, perhaps, suspending landfill charges if possible.

Baker told the board the city is studying the possibility of putting a trash compactor at a location inside the city that would give residents an opportunity to dispose of refuse, and then could be hauled to the landfill operation. He noted that getting another landfill operation, as suggested, would be both time-consuming and costly because of legal requirements. It costs $300,000 to $400,000 a year for the city to operate a landfill, he said, and the landfill has to meet State Health Department requirements.

Board chairman Jim Everett referred the matter to Clean Midland's municipal committee and named Ms. Hitchcock to that committee.

In other action, it was noted that Clean Midland board members and volunteers will be manning a booth at Septemberfest this weekend and trash receptacles there will bear "Pitch In" posters provided by the organization.

Compost pile largest in world

The world's largest compost pile, owned by a Dutch company at Wijster, The Netherlands, receives a million tons of refuse a year. Some 125,000 tons of compost it produces yearly are sold for farm and garden uses.

Man pleads not guilty to first degree felony

The state will decide at a later date which of the three indictments to try him on, said Edwards.

Graham, adorned in dark glasses and bearing the scars of shotgun pellets on the right side of his face and neck, sat stoically with his hands folded at his chin as Judge Earney explained his decision to accept the change of venue motion.

"San Angelo has good motel facilities, they've remodeled the courtroom, it has good acoustics, and I think it's sufficiently far enough from McCamey and Rankin that you won't have people over there who've heard about it like they have here," said Judge Earney. "I'm from a small town and I know that everybody knows what all's going on in the town, and sometimes, what's not going on. I think a fair trial can be given by the people in San Angelo."

Privately, Judge Earney agreed that extensive Midland-Odessa media coverage of the deputy's death was a primary factor in his decision to move the trial out of the 83rd District.

"Ordinarily, you'd move it somewhere else in the district," he noted, "but we wouldn't gain anything by moving it somewhere else in this district."

Neither the district attorney nor the defense lawyer objected to the selection of San Angelo. Edwards previously had indicated he would like to see the trial held at that site, while Barber indicated that the city "is fine with me...Because I'm from Odessa, I'd like to have had it in Odessa. But Judge Earney is a good judge and I think we'll have a fair trial down there."

Earney will serve as trial judge and Edwards as district attorney even though the trial will be held outside their district.

Barber, a former Monahans district attorney who resides outside the 83rd District, was appointed as Graham's defense attorney because of a dearth of qualified lawyers in that district, explained Judge Earney.

"I've got to appoint someone who knows what they're doing," he said. "We don't have enough attorneys to handle criminal cases, so we have to go to Odessa or San Angelo to find someone."

Graham, out on two personal recognizance bonds of $10,000 each, is in the custody of his mother in McCamey.

The plant supervisor who wounded Graham and killed Graham's father was not indicted in connection with the shootings.

Mattox investigation may end by October

AUSTIN (AP) — Attorney General Jim Mattox has now testified three times before a Travis County grand jury that has been investigating him for the past two months, but the probe is not over yet.

District Attorney Ronnie Earle said it will continue next week with more witnesses. He said he hopes the matter can be wrapped up by the end of the month, when the grand jury's term expires.

So far 20 people have been summoned before the secret panel, including some called more than once.

Mattox, making his third appearance on Thursday, was ordered to produce a tape recording of a key telephone conversation, which grand jurors sought apparently in hopes it could shed light on an accusation that Mattox threatened a law firm.

The accusation was made in July by lawyer Thomas McDade of the Fulbright & Jaworski law firm. McDade said Mattox became angry over a personal matter and threatened to use the power of the state to put the Houston law firm out of the public bond business.

Mattox has strongly denied making any such threat. "I never threatened anyone. I warned them what their own conduct would bring about," he said Thursday.

However, Mattox would not acknowledge to news reporters the existence of any tape recordings, which were referred to in a letter he wrote on Wednesday authorizing their release. The letter was published Thursday by The Dallas Times Herald.

As a possible backup, grand jurors also sought the tape from Arthur Mitchell, who works in Mattox's office as the legal counsel.

Mattox and Mitchell, the only two witnesses during Thursday's session, arrived at the courthouse about 1:30 p.m. Mitchell, carrying a large satchel, entered the grand jury room saying he had no comment.

Mattox addressed reporters briefly before entering the room, saying, "I told you I had the means to substantiate my account of the matter. I tried to explain."

In previous interviews with reporters, Mattox has said he did not record the conversation which included the alleged threat. However, a source said Mattox revealed the existence of the tape to grand jurors during a previous appearance Aug. 30.

"The contents of these tapes will conclusively establish the falsity of any testimony before the grand jury that I threatened to 'put the law firm of Fulbright & Jaworski out of the bond business,'" Mattox said in the letter, according to the Times Herald.

The letter was addressed to Robert O. Smith, Mitchell's personal attorney. Mitchell apparently had personal possession of the recording.

Extraterrestrials likely to be bacteria, not little green men

AUSTIN (AP) — A University of Texas professor who teaches a course on extraterrestrial life says if any "E.T.s" were found on a planet similar to Earth they would be more likely to resemble bacteria than little green men.

The reason, said Dr. Neal Evans, is that for "over three-quarters of the history of the Earth, there was nothing but bacteria."

Evans said inside our solar system "there's a chance that life might exist on Mars."

He said ravines on that planet which resemble dried river beds might be indicate that Mars once had life-supporting water.

"If there was water on Mars earlier, life there might have adapted to dry land or it might be dormant," Evans said. "Soil experiments from the Viking spacecraft which landed on Mars in 1976 had ambiguous results. But if life were there, it would be sparse."

Crew leaders should pay

AMARILLO (AP) — Sen. Bill Sarpalius said Thursday the "simplest solution" to obtaining insurance for farm workers would be to require crew leaders to pay for the insurance.

"Farm workers would be covered, but by the crew leaders and not the farmers," said Sarpalius. "If that crew leader does not provide adequate coverage, then the farmer would be liable."

Sarpalius, D-Canyon, made his suggestion to the Joint Committee on Farmworker Insurance.

Bingo games net $16 million

AUSTIN (AP) — Charities sponsoring bingo games have made almost $16 million during the past year, Comptroller Bob Bullock said Thursday.

The comptroller sent checks worth $718,723 to 50 Texas counties and 36 cities that have legalized bingo and at the same time levied the 2-percent local tax. The payment completed the first year since bingo for charity was legalized in August 1982.

"That means that Texans are calling the numbers on bingo games worth at least $100 million a year," Bullock said.

Residents evicted from subdivision

BAYTOWN — About 300 families will have to leave their homes in the fashionable Brownwood subdivision because of a new city ordinance barring anyone from ever again living in the flood-prone and hurricane-ravaged area.

"Our attachment to our sticks and stones is not realistic. Brownwood is gone. It is no more," Gene Shepherd, president of the Brownwood Civic Association, said before the council voted Thursday night.

Brownwood homeowners can sell their land to the federal government, which has $1.5 million available to buy the property. Under the ordinance, the federal government will give the land to the city of Baytown to keep as an "open green space."

Homeowners who choose to keep their land may do so, city officials said, but no fences or buildings may be put there.

Brownwood residents' reaction to the eviction was mixed and emotional.

"I've never heard such impassioned debate in my life of covering some 300 disasters in 10 years," said William Hansbury, an official with the Federal Emergency Management Agency.

The subdivision, which was the first location in the state to qualify for federal flood insurance, was pummeled Aug. 18 by Hurricane Alicia's 10-foot tides. It is about 30 miles east of Houston.

A third of the homes in the area, which lies on a peninsula that fronts two bays, were reduced to slabs. Most of the rest are little more than studs and roofs.

Dorothy Edmundson, who has lived in the subdivision since 1954, said she would be glad to get out.

Strike talks recessed

HOUSTON (AP) — Talks between representatives of Continental Airlines and a striking machinists' union have been recessed indefinitely, officials said.

Airline and union officials met for 4½ hours Thursday with a federal mediator, but failed for the fourth time to reach an agreement to end the almost four-week walkout, federal mediator Robert Brown said in a statement.

Brown and Continental spokesman Bruce Hicks declined further comment on Thursday's talks.

The parties also met, without success, three times in August.

The International Association of Machinists and Aerospace Workers struck the nation's 8th-largest airline Aug. 12 in a dispute over wages and work rules.

The machinists rejected Continental's offer to raise mechanics' pay from $13.45 to $16 an hour.

The airline, which is operating at 99 percent of its schedule despite the strike, recently has discussed cost-reduction proposals with employee groups, Hicks said.

Airline officials have met with employee groups, including the Air Line Pilots Association, to discuss proposals for reducing costs, Hicks said.

"We are not going to go into the details of what they are," Hicks said. He declined to say whether the airline was considering pay cuts, although he observed that labor accounts for 35 percent of Continental's costs.

Men indicted for sex charges

LONDON (AP) - Three members of an organization advocating sexual relations between adults and children were ordered to appear in court today on seven charges, Scotland Yard announced.

The metropolitan police headquarters said the charges include inciting people to have unlawful sexual intercourse with a girl under age 16, and inciting people to commit an act of gross indecency with a child under 14.

There are also charges of publishing an obscene article and sending it through the mails, the statement said.

Two of the men were identifed as Steven Adrian Smith, 29, and David Peter Bremner, 44. The third man was not immediately identified.

The Yard said the three, arrested Thursday, are members of the Pedophile Information Exchange, which seeks to legalize sex between children and adults.

Union members attack women

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — The president of the Mothers of the Plaza de Mayo say "union goons" attacked a dozen women after they had an angry meeting with leaders of Argentina's largest labor organization.

Hebe Bonafini said six men attacked the women Thursday outside the headquarters of the General Confederation of Labor, throwing them to the ground and kicking and punching them.

During the meeting, she said, the women charged that the labor group was doing nothing to back their efforts to make the military government provide information about thousands of people who disappeared during the armed forces' anti-guerrilla campaign in the late 1970s.

Members of the Mothers of the Plaza de Mayo have staged vigils and other demonstrations in the downtown plaza for six years, demanding that the government account for suspected leftists who disappeared after being seized by government agents.The government said recently it had ended its investigation into the disappearances, and it presumed most of those missing were dead.

Party supports protesters

BONN, West Germany (AP) — The anti-nuclear Greens Party is urging protesters to occupy U.S. military bases and damage property to dramatize opposition to deploying new American nuclear missiles in West Germany.

Greens Party Secretary Lukas Beckmann criticized last week's peaceful demonstration outside a U.S. Army base at Mutlangen, saying protesters should have scaled the fence and occupied the base instead of sitting outside and singing songs.

"The peace movement must learn ... that violence-free actions such as blockades should not be allowed to run into emptiness and therefore lose their symbolic character," Beckmann said Thursday.

Beckmann said he was not calling on protesters to be violent but rather to be willing to break laws.

North Atlantic Treaty Organization countries intend to begin deploying 572 U.S.-built missiles in Western Europe beginning in December if no agreement is reached in U.S.-Soviet talks on reducing medium-range missiles.

Woman gets money for abuse

MANCHESTER, England (AP) — An industrial tribunal has awarded $3,380 in damages to a woman who was fired after pouring beer on a company director she said sexually harassed her.

Elfrieda Walsh, 21, told the tribunal she lost her job with Management Holdings Ltd., after a party last October at a nightclub.

She said she was pestered by the firm's accountant, Jim Devine, a company director.Then Devine offered Miss Walsh a glass of beer, she said, and "I took the glass off him and poured it over him. Mr. Devine then said: 'As a director and shareholder, as from an hour ago you are dismissed.'"

Typhoon kills six

HONG KONG (AP) — Typhoon Ellen killed at least six people and injured 180 others as it battered Hong Kong today with winds up to 140 miles an hour, spawning deadly mudslides and tearing freighters from their moorings.

By mid-afternoon, the storm's center had moved past the British colony of 5 million people, leaving communications and public services paralyzed as it moved toward China's southern coastal province of Guangdong.

Hospital officials reported treating at least 180 people, most of them injured by street signs or other objects torn loose by the fierce winds.

Twenty-two vessels were blown aground, including a 21,000-ton Chinese freighter that was reported listing dangerously.

Units on alert after Managua bombing

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — Anti-aircraft units were on "maximum alert" today after rebel exiles in two small planes bombed Managua, destroying part of the capital's airport and wounding three soldiers and a civilian.

In neighboring Honduras, Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger attended the graduation of a U.S.-trained Salvadoran battalion at a new regional military training center and visited the center of U.S.-Honduran military exercises.

Eden Pastora, commander of rebels fighting in southern Nicaragua for the Democratic Revolutionary Alliance, claimed responsibility for Thursday's bombings in Managua and threatened more such raids.

He said the propeller-driven planes took off from secret airfields in Nicaragua, adding: "Future actions will also originate in thse same airfields."

Nicaraguan leaders and their Cuban allies blamed the United States for the attacks, although Pastora has said his group receives no U.S. assistance.

"This bombardment by the Somocista counterrevolution on two points of the capital is impressive proof of the aggressive policy of the North American administration against Nicaragua," said Daniel Ortega, coordinator of the governing leftist Sandinista junta.

The official Cuban news agency, Prensa Latina, quoted a Foreign Ministry official as saying the United States was to blame because of the Reagan administration's support for rebels fighting in northern Nicaragua and the "intimidating character" of American military maneuvers in Honduras.

The Reagan administration aids the Nicaraguan Democratic Force, based in the north and includes members of late strongman Anastasio Somoza's national guard.

Pastora's Costa-Rica based alliance is composed mainly of disenchanted Sandinitas. He was a hero in the revolution that toppled Somoza in 1979.

There were conflicting reports on the weapons used in the attack. A Nicaraguan Defense Ministry statement late Thursday said the two twin-engine planes dropped 500-pound bombs while others, including rebel sources in Costa Rica, said they weighed 150 pounds. Earlier, Deputy Interior Minister Luis Carrion said the planes fired rockets.

The state of "maximum alert" was declared after anti-aircraft gunners shot down the Cessna 402 that bombed the airport's main terminal, killing its two pilots. The Defense Ministry communique said one of the pilots, Agustin Roman, carried U.S. immigration and naturalization papers.

Another attack, near the home of Foreign Minister Miguel D'Escoto, missed its target and caused little damage before the plane flew off, Carrion said.

Suspects held under guard

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — Two top Provisional Irish Republican Army commanders and 15 other guerrilla suspects were held under heavy guard today after a colleague betrayed them to police, security sources said.

An authoritative security source who asked not to be identified named the two commanders as Ivor Malachy Bell, 47, the Provisional IRA's alleged chief of staff, and Eddie Carmichael, the purported guerrilla leader of the Provos' Belfast Brigade.

The source said they were among 14 men and three women betrayed by IRA informer Robert Lean

Effect of rubella vaccinations during pregnancy studied

ATLANTA (AP) — The national Centers for Disease Control has found no evidence that rubella vaccine causes serious complications to unborn children if administered to their mothers during pregnancy.

But the CDC said the "theoretical, albeit small" risks of administering the vaccine to pregnant women remain high enough to advise against it.

The CDC, in its Morbidity and Mortality Weekly Report, released data Thursday from 959 pregnant women who received rubella vaccine within either three months before or after conception between 1971 and 1982.

None of their children was reported born with congenital rubella syndrome, characterized by symptoms including cataracts and glaucoma, heart disease, hearing loss, jaundice, retardation and bone disease.

The CDC reiterated that precautions should be taken to avoid vaccinating pregnant women — but said that if vaccination occurs, it should not be considered grounds for terminating pregnancy.

"There's always that theoretical concern with live virus vaccine," said Sandra Doster, an immunization researcher.

Herb growing hobby becomes sprouting business

DELAWARE, Ohio (AP) — Eating the geraniums is not a far-fetched idea to Marny Dilts. But just eat the leaves, not the blooms.

Several varieties of geraniums are among more than 200 species of herbs she grows among flowers, shrubs and vegetables on her 11-acre farm.

"We love the geraniums," she said. "The small greenhouse is full ... the flavor, the fragrance. You can make teas with them. They have a nice scent if you want to dry the leaves and put them in pillows.

"You can make plain geranium tea. You can make apple tea from the apple-scented leaves or lemon tea from the lemon-scented leaves or you can add it to other tea. Whichever way, fresh is best in anything, any of the herb family. But if you have an abundance of the leaves and want to dry them for winter use that works well too."

Talk of geraniums is one small part of an enthusiasm for all things herbal by this red-haired grandmother. Growing herbs at her Chalet Lodge Herb Farm in Delaware County seems to be her life.

"I've grown plants all my life," she said. "We've lived here 10 years, and I brought plants with me when I came and have sought out plants everywhere.

"And we specialize in alpine plants, the mountain plants which will grow well in rocks."

Another favorite is an eglantine rose she propagates and which can be used for apple flavoring of tea.

What started as an herb garden just for the family has grown into a business without advertising. She never gave any thought to success because it wasn't intended as a business.

"At first we just wanted to live here and grow things but people were so curious. They kept calling and wanted to bring their friends and we just finally said 'yes' to everybody."

Aside from a chalet-style house where the Dilts raised four children, the farm consists of a greenhouse, a couple of small outbuildings, one with a lean-to greenhouse nailed to its side, and several different garden plots, from patio size to a quarter-acre. An assortment of sheep, chickens, geese, cats and a dog have free run of the place and seldom bother the herbs.

Geranium

Robert Dilts, an Ohio National Guard colonel, makes flower boxes and other accessories that are sold along with the herbs. The informality of the business is apparent everywhere. Small metal boxes on shelves in the various buildings substitute for a cash register. Every potted plant in sight has the plant name written on a wood stick imbedded in its soil.

At least once a week Mrs. Dilts conducts classes on herbs and their uses, flower arranging, dried flower techniques and basket weaving. Her prepared lecture on herbs is one of her favorites. She has designed a desk-top-size chart of more than 200 herbs, describing what each looks like, how best to grow it and how best to use it.

Mrs. Dilts, whose Swiss grandfather taught her to love plants, has never counted the varieties of herbs she grows. But she knows where every one is planted because she personally put it in the ground.

The Dilts moved to that rural area because they saw it as a great place to raise children and herbs. Now with four grown children, she is delighted that her four grandchildren are learning the names of the plants.

Several garden plots are surrounded by light green bushes atop thin stalks. She identified them as camphor-scented southernwood.

"It's a hedge plant and it's an insect deterrent," she said. "It's not 100 percent effective but it suggests to the insects that they would rather be somewhere else.

"And that is true of all the fragrant herbs."

She considers herbs more as an accent to vegetables and drinks than a main course but said that may be due more to custom than need.

"French sorrel, for example," she pointed out. "You can use leaves of French sorrel for salad, and you don't have to have lettuce with it. Just put a little oil and vinegar on it and it's delightful.

"It's like a lettuce leaf only it has a different taste. And if you want to throw in a little parsley and chive, burnet and lovage, you can have a really tasty green salad."

Photos portray 'things'

By SANDY COLTON
AP Newsfeatures

Jacques Kaplan, 59, shot his first picture nearly two years ago and still claims to know nothing about the finer points of technique.

"I am a complete amateur," he says, noting that he takes his film to a drug store for processing.

Yet, Kaplan's prints are selling for $100 and up and he has seven exhibits scheduled next year, in three countries.

He is a witty man who smiles readily and is highly articulate when it comes to explaining what it is he does and why.

"Some photographers do landscapes," he said in an interview. "I do 'thingscapes'."

While his thingscapes are in New York City, where he lives, they might be found anywhere. They're photos of peeling posters, storefronts, security gates, advertisements on the side of a truck, fruit stands and even garbage cans!

"There's beauty in everything if you look for it," he says. "The advantage of thingscapes is that every city and town has them. They are there for all of us to see and photograph. Anyone can do it."

What distinguishes Kaplan's approach to what many of us might regard as trash is his ability to isolate amusing or graphically stunning parts of the whole. He dissects scenes.

"I look at the trees and not the forest," he says.

The combination of Kaplan's approach and subject matter makes many of his photos highly abstract. Many resemble, not unintentionally, the paintings of such famous modernists as Jasper Johns and Robert Rauschenburg.

"It's a case of life imitating art," Kaplan says, smiling.

Kaplan literally walked his way into photography. A retired fur designer with heart problems, he started walking 5 to 10 miles a day two years ago for his health.

"It was really boring, so I bought a camera thinking that it would give me something to do instead of just putting one foot in front of the other."

Kaplan's first camera was an automatic focus Canon Sure Shot. "Remember, I didn't know a thing about cameras and that camera promised to do everything for me automatically. Before automatic cameras, I wouldn't have had a chance."

By the time he had shot his first 10 rolls, Kaplan knew he had a "passion." Several of these early shots are among those that will be exhibited over the next several months.

One exhibit, called "Walking for my Heart," has a special place in Kaplan's heart. It's a fundraiser for the American Heart Association for which he has donated more than 100 prints.

When he shoots, Kaplan works fast. He rarely takes more than a minute to compose and expose.

DEAR ABBY

Son's beer drinking must stop

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: My 13-year-old son goes to his friend's house to drink beer every Saturday and Sunday afternoon. His friend is 15, and I don't know if his parents are home at this time or not.

Should I let my son go on doing this and bury my head in the sand like an ostrich? I can't tie him up in his room for the next five years.

I don't want him to turn into an alcoholic by the time he is 18. He has come home from his friend's house so drunk he can hardly talk or walk straight. He keeps promising not to do it again, but it's the same story the next weekend. Please help me. — DISTURBED MOM IN LODI, OHIO

DEAR MOM: If you love your son (and I'm sure you do or you wouldn't have written to me), you will forbid him to visit his beer-drinking friend again. Allowing him to spend his weekends getting drunk makes you guilty of child abuse! Please call Alcoholics Anonymous and ask for its help. Your son is possibly an alcoholic already. I beg you not to put this off. It's the most important thing you have to do today.

DEAR ABBY: I was supposed to get married in July of '82, so my co-workers gave me a shower. I postponed my wedding because my fiance said he wasn't ready for marriage, but he promised we'd get married at a later date. My co-workers insisted I keep the gifts, thinking we would eventually marry. Now, 14 months later, my fiance tells me he thinks we should call it quits — that we are not "right" for each other.

I am so embarrassed about those shower gifts. Should I just haul them back to the office and go up and down the hall giving out presents like a department store Santa Claus? Or should I mail each gift back individually?

My friends and relatives have offered to return all the gifts for me while I'm away on my vacation. I don't think this is proper, although it would be easier for me. When I tried to return the gifts last year, everyone insisted I keep them, but now I know they must be returned.

What is the best way to handle this? — EMBARRASSED

DEAR EMBARRASSED: Feeling as you do, you should return them yourself. Start by telling a few of your closest co-workers that your engagement is off; therefore, you are returning all the shower gifts next week.

You aren't the first girl this has happened to, so don't be embarrassed. You are to be commended for insisting on returning those shower gifts. Many do not.

DEAR ABBY: My husband, "George," and I enjoy cruises and tours. We are both in our late 60s. The problem: George always finds a pretty young girl he wants his picture taken with, so he hands his camera to someone and says, "Would you please take our picture?"

He always manages to put his arm around the girl's waist or shoulder to give the impression that they're more than strangers.

When the trip is over and the snapshots have been developed, he carries them to his hangout, the coffee shop in our small town, and proudly shows them around as though being with a young lady is a great accomplishment.

When I tell him this irritates me, he says I'm a poor sport to object to his harmless picture taking.

What do you think, Abby? — ANNOYED

DEAR ANNOYED: By this time, the folks at the coffee shop must know George for the harmless, fun-loving shutterbug he is, so don't rain on his parade. Just be glad you have each other and are able to travel for pleasure.

Tricks make walking into wind easier

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Biking or walking into the wind can tire you, but there's a trick to make it easier, says Dr. Albert B. Craig, a professor of physiology at the University of Rochester Medical Center.

Decrease the surface of your frontal area, Craig says. Your frontal area is that side of your body the wind is hitting. You can decrease wind resistance by bending at the waist and knifing into the wind, thus reducing the surface of your frontal area.

If strong winds are at your back you can straighten your back, thus creating a bigger mass and more resistance to the wind.

Research gives CPR guidelines

By DANIEL Q. HANEY
AP Science Writer

BOSTON — Doctors deciding when to use heart-lung resuscitation in hospitals will benefit from a study showing that victims of pneumonia, cancer or kidney failure who have little chance of surviving may go home after they are revived, a researcher says.

Overall, according to the report, only 14 percent of patients who are given the resuscitation in a hospital survive to be discharged.

"I think nothing like that has been offered before," said Dr. Susanna E. Bedell, who directed the research. "It's a first attempt at objective guidelines that will help people when they must make decisions that are still going to be very difficult."

Cardiopulmonary resuscitation, or CPR, is routinely administered to people whose hearts stop beating in the hospital, even though they may be terminally ill with other diseases. At Boston's Beth Israel Hospital, where the latest study was conducted, doctors perform CPR on three of every 10 patients who die.

The study, published in the New England Journal of Medicine, reviews the cases of all 294 patients who received CPR at Beth Israel during an 18-month period.

Among the findings:

— 44 percent of the patients survived the initial resuscitation, 33 percent lived at least 24 hours, 14 percent were discharged from the hospital and 11 percent were still alive six months later.

— Nobody survived who also had pneumonia, septic blood infection or severe stroke. The death rate was over 95 percent among people with cancer, kidney failure or low blood pressure.

— Most patients who were going to die did so within the first few days after CPR, and "long-lingering death" is unusual.

— No one lived when the resuscitation efforts them took longer than half an hour.

— Most who survive have all their mental faculties, and Ms. Bedell said, "If you live, things look good. The outcome is really excellent."

— Several patients who lived remembered a "look of terror in the eyes of the doctors and nurses," and they recalled hearing physicians telling people to "get out of the room."

— Patients' ages had no bearing on the chances of surviving cardiac arrest.

"I don't think it offers any absolute guidelines," Ms. Bedell said of the study.

AT WIT'S END
No fashion plate here

By ERMA BOMBECK

Ben Franklin didn't know it, but he wrote my fashion horoscope: "Be not the first to try the new nor the last to discard the old."

In chicness, I'm somewhere between Bette Midler and Minnie Pearl. I like it that way. I have a horror of walking into a room and having conversation stop. Unlike most women, I want to look like everyone else. The condition has a name. It's called Acute Insecurity.

I had a friend once who went to a formal dinner party dressed in a nightgown slit up to her knees, sans bra. If I had worn it, someone would have yawned and said, "I had no idea it was so late. Just toddle off and I'll put out the lights as soon as I finish my drink."

Some women dress from their husband's closets and are considered pace-setters. I read where a woman in Chicago wears her husband's boxer shorts to cocktail parties and picnics. I tried wearing my husband's shorts one day behind a locked bathroom door and looked like the runner bringing up the rear in "Chariots of Fire."

I've always admired the woman who is the only one in the room wearing a hat with a veil. Have you any idea the uncommon amount of guts it takes to sieve chip dip through a veil strainer?

Face it, I'm a fashion wimp. In 50 years of dressing myself, I have never taken a firm stand on hemlines. The ones in my closet go from Marlo Thomas in "That Girl" to Diane Keaton in "Annie Hall." Every year I say I am not going to be dictated to by a group of couturiers. But then, every year I promise myself to learn how to pronounce "couturiers" and I've never done that either.

If being conservative has any redeeming advantages, it's that we never throw away anything; ergo, we are always on the fringe of style. Remember that big T-shirt I bought the year we went camping that faded when I washed it with the sleeping bags? All I have to do is rip the shoulder and I'd look like the lead in "Flashdance." But I can't do it.

And I've got all the apparel I saw recently on a girl at the shopping center. She had her jeans and a pair of leg warmers that went all the way up to her hips stuffed into her boots. I could do that. It's just that I don't know where I'd put my legs.

On the few occasions I've dressed a little extreme, I worry about it. Like a couple of Sundays ago, I put a large fake flower in my lapel and wore a wide polka-dotted belt around my skirt. I said to my husband, "This isn't too much, is it?"

He shook his head. "I wouldn't worry. That woman over there is wearing the same outfit."

I was worried. The woman was Sister Monica.

AT WORK
Career frozen?

By DR. ADELE SCHEELE

Q — I have been working in the same department for my company for 18 months. I have some seniority and know my job well.

My problem is every time I apply for a job within the company I am turned down. For instance, recently I had an interview for another job and the interviewer told me I was a strong candidate. When I called the personnel department a few days later, the job was filled. I asked for the reason and they said I wasn't qualified.

This sounded fishy to me, so I did some research on my own and found that every time I applied for a job, my manager would freeze my present position until after the job was filled. Then things would be as usual until I applied for another job, when it would happen again.

I don't think this is fair, as this gives me a big disadvantage when applying for jobs in my own company. Please help!

A — You certainly have a problem with your manager. If I were you, I would talk to him in private, and I would start the session by telling him the tasks that you have enjoyed working on, and all that you have learned from him.

And then you could say, "I'm faced with a dilemma. I want now to develop more and learn another facet of this business. I need your help. How would you advise me?" And then let him talk.

If he denies it, then you can say directly, "The personnel department told me that you froze my position. Is it true? How can you help me the next time?" If he says that it indeed is true and you're too valuable to let go, then you can try, "I appreciate that and I'm flattered by it. What I will do is help you find a replacement for me and train that person myself. Now will you help me?"

If, however, he refuses to talk to you at all, then I would find some way to meet with his boss and ask for some advice. Tell him the situation, starting with the fact that you really enjoy working for the company. Then ask if he has any suggestions about how to deal with the matter.

Also, I'd go to the one in personnel who told you this in the first place and ask how other people have dealt with the same situation. Ask if you can talk to them.

nation in brief

McDonald's widow may run in election for husband's seat

ATLANTA (AP) — The widow of U.S. Rep. Larry McDonald who was aboard the Korean jetliner shot down by Soviet fighters last week will announce next week whether she will run in an Oct. 18 election for her late husband's congressional seat.

Gov. Joe Frank Harris on Thursday ordered the special, non-partisan vote. He said a runoff will be held Nov. 8, if necessary, to fill the seat held by the conservative Democrat.

Kathryn McDonald will not announce her plans until after memorial services next week, said an aide to the late congressman. Former Gov. Lester Maddox has said he will run if Mrs. McDonald does not.

Inmate slated to be executed

STARKE, Fla. (AP) — James David Raulerson, who had been scheduled to be executed today for killing a policeman, says his latest reprieve makes him "believe in the American due process system."

The 11th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals on Thursday blocked the execution until it can hear more arguments in about two months.

Raulerson, 33, was to have gone to the electric chair Wednesday morning, but a federal judge stayed the order until today so that lawyers could appeal to the circuit court.

He was sentenced in 1980 to die for the killing of a Jacksonville police officer during a 1975 restaurant robbery.

Airlines may have won battle

HOUSTON (AP) — Continental Airlines "maybe won a battle" by replacing mechanics who walked off the job last month over wages, but the strikers are not ready to give up, a union spokesman says.

Representatives of the airline and the International Association of Machinists and Aerospace Workers met Thursday for 4½ hours but failed to reach a pact. It was the fourth session since the union struck Aug. 12 after rejecting the airline's offer to raise mechanics' pay from $13.45 to $16 an hour.

Jim Conley, a union spokesman, said Thursday that Continental has "not won the war.

Note passing may violate rights

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — Administrators at a junior high school stumbled into constitutional territory when they tried to curb classroom note-passing by banning all notes passed among students, a state panel ruled.

A hearing panel from the state Department of Public Instruction said the rule violated the students' right to free speech because it was applied regardless of where notes were passed or what they said.

Film's label violates amendment

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — The U.S. government's attempt to label as "political propaganda" three Canadian films on nuclear disarmamaent and acid rain is unconstitutional, a federal judge has declared.

The disclaimer required by the Justice Department violated First Amendment guarantees on freedom of speech, said U.S. District Judge Raul A. Ramirez in an opinion released Thursay.

"To characterize a particular expression of political ideas as 'propaganda' is to denigrate those ideas," Ramirez wrote.

AN UPROAR arose in February with the disclosure that the Justice Department required the disclaimer for "If You Love This Planet," about the medical consequences of nuclear war, and "Acid From Heaven" and "Acid Rain: Requiem or Recovery."

"If You Love This Planet" won an Academy Award in April for best short subject. All three films were produced by the National Film Board of Canada.

Ramirez, given national jurisdiction in the case, already had issued a preliminary injunction in May stripping the disclaimer from the films. He said it unfairly stigmatized the films and identified those who exhibited them as distributors of distorted information on behalf of a foreign government.

The disclaimer, authorized by Congress in 1942 in an amendment to the Foreign Agents Registration Act of 1938, says the work was prepared by a registered foreign agent and its contents are not necessarily approved by the U.S. government. Distributors must report the names of theaters and television stations so labeled.

ATTORNEY John G. Donhoff, who argued the suit which was filed by state Sen. Barry Keene, said Ramirez' ruling "means that the First Amendment does not apply just to materials produced within this country."

He said the opinion "focuses on the phrase 'political propaganda' so as to almost preclude the government from using it again."

The Justice Department has 60 days to appeal the ruling, Donhoff said. In the meantime, the three films may be shown anywhere without restriction.

"'Political propaganda' is ordinarily and commonly understood to mean material that contains half-truths, distortions and omissions. Congress did, in fact, intend to denigrate the affected materials by the use of the term 'political propaganda,'" the ruling said.

Mom goes on strike

SOUTH SALT LAKE, Utah (AP) — Instead of hugs and kisses when they returned home from school, three children found their mother outside carrying picket signs demanding they behave better.

Susan Davis says she won't cook or clean until her children — Jamie, 9, Missy, 8 and Steven, 6 — accept more responsibility and demonstrate better behavior around the house.

"The kids will have to make their own meals and do their own laundry until they decide to shape up and accept my demands," Mrs. Davis said Thursday. "It may take two or three days, but I am determined to hold out."

Her demands: less complaining from the children, more help with chores and cheerful attitudes.
