Smaller units possible...

Prison bid horizon expands

Snyder's prison committee, relaxed after submission of a 116-page proposal for the location of a 2,250-bed facility in Scurry County, was reactivated over the weekend to respond to an addendum issued by the Texas Department of Corrections.

The Economic Development Committee of the Snyder chamber was alerted late Friday that the TDC is considering a change in specifications with regard to two 1,250-bed regional units.

Last Monday, Snyder submitted its proposal for the 2,250-bed facility, and that proposal will stand without change.

Also due last Monday were proposals for the location of two smaller units to be located within 100 miles of either Dallas or Houston.

The TDC addendum drops the geographic requirement, opening itself up to bids from across the state. Instead of two 1,250-bed faclities, the alternate calls for four 1,000-bed units.

The smaller units would each employ 250 persons with an annual payroll of $6.72 million. Land and many other requirements are the same. However, the smaller units do have smaller utility requirements.

The bids on the smaller units are due in Huntsville by 4 p.m. Thursday, and the Snyder committee began working Saturday to prepare one or more additional proposals.

There is no change on the 2,250-man facility, and a decision on that is due Oct. 15 at a special meeting of the TDC board.

Legislative sources said Saturday the elimination of the 100-mile requirement likely is the result of concern expressed by legislators throughout the state.

Last Monday, the TDC received bids from 35 communities for location of the 2,250-bed and two 1,250-bed facilities. "The incentives offered as result of the competitive bidding likely caused the TDC to want to expand its options as well," commented Miller Robinson committee chairman.

"We believe our first proposal on the larger unit is getting favorable review by the TDC staff," said Roy Baze, project coordinator. "The change is an option that previously was not available for Snyder. Despite the short period to respond, we view this as a positive development."

"We're interested in getting our foot in the door with the TDC," said Sheriff Keith Collier. "History tells us that once a prison is located in an area, it will continue to expand."

The Snyder committee has been working on the project for almost two years, viewing the state payroll as a means to not only moderate the economic decline, but as a means to diversify and stablize the local economy.

120 killed in mudslide in Columbia

Workers continue to dig into 20 feet of mud

MEDELLIN, Colombia (AP) — Weary workers dug into 20 feet of red mud this morning after a landslide crashed into Colombia's second-largest city and killed at least 120 people, including 43 children.

Some residents estimated as many as 500 people were missing after tons of mud and rocks entombed the Villa Tina slum district on Sunday. But Mayor William Jaramillo Gomez told the radio chain Todelar it would be impossible to calculate the number of people unaccounted for without taking a census.

At least 43 of the 120 bodies recovered were children, the director of the Medellin morgue, Oscar de Jesus Gomez, said in an interview with radio Todelar. Some of the children who died were attending first Holy Communion parties.

Five children were killed in a party at one shack, Archbishop Alfonso Lopez Trujillo told radio Todelar. Two of 25 children at another first communion party also were killed.

The names of the victims were not made public. About 200 people were injured, Jaramillo Gomez said.

Three more bodies were pulled from the mud this morning, bringing the confirmed death toll to 103, Oscar Jesus de Gomez, director of the Medellin morgue, told radio Todelar.

A few survivors were pulled from the mud Sunday afternoon, but no one was found alive in the mud last night or this morning, the mayor said.

There was another small slide this morning, but no one was injured, Jaramillo Gomez said.

Sunday's mudslide covered more than 60 houses in Villa Tina, a poor neighborhood at the foot of Sugar Loaf Mountain. Up to 10 people live in each shack in the area, which has an estimated total population of 1,000. Houses in the area are made of scrap lumber, tarpaper and old tires.

"We heard the noise that sounded like an explosion and soon afterward a huge mass of rocks and mud descended upon us," said Mary Mosquera, who lost three daughters in the avalanche. "They were trapped by huge rocks and we couldn't do anything to rescue them."

"I thought an airplane had crashed on the side of the mountain," said Alirio Garcia, who helped rescue his wounded neighbors and recovered several bodies. "It was horrible."

The disaster occurred at 2:30 p.m. following several days of heavy rains, the mayor told Radio Caracol, Colombia's largest radio network.

Relatives of the dead and missing wandered through the area this morning looking for their loved ones. Other people tried to find belongings lost in the mudslide.

Hospitals said Sunday they had treated more than 150 people.

WOMAN INJURED — A 40-year-old Kingsland woman, Ozella Adair, apparently fell asleep at the wheel of this 1982 Datsun pickup, seriously injuring herself as the vehicle climbed a guardrail, rolled twice and came to rest in the adjacent ditch. She was headed north on U.S. Hwy. 84 some six miles north of Snyder around 10:51 a.m. Sunday. She was taken by ambulance to Cogdell Memorial Hospital and was being transferred to Methodist Hospital in Lubbock at mid-morning Monday. (SDN Staff Photo)

Prison-related issue on November ballot

Proposition 8 on the November ballot will have special significance for Scurry County residents now in the process of attempting to secure a state prison facility here.

If passed, the amendment would allow the legislature to issue up to $500 million in general obligation bonds to build or repair buildings for the Texas Department of Corrections, Texas Youth Commission and the Texas Department of Health and Mental Retardation.

"Many of the facilities used by these agencies are seriously overcrowded, while others badly need repair or renovation," a supporter said. "The state is under federal court orders to reduce overcrowding and improve conditions at prison, youth correction and mental health and mental retardation facilities."

Budget contraints have left no funds available for such work, spokesmen argue.

Opponents say the extensive use of general obligation bonds will eventually cost the state far more than would a regular appropriation from general revenues.

"The Texas tradition of 'pay-as-you-go' has long maintained the state's good credit rating, and it should not be abandoned just because the state has hit transitory bad economic times," an opposition spokesman said.

Just Say 'NO'

(Editor's note: This begins the final week of an information series leading up to a training workshop here Oct. 9-11 sponsored by the Scurry County Council on Alcohol and Drug Abuse. All answers this week will deal with what to do when a parent realizes their child is using drugs or alcohol.)

Q. — What do I do when I know my child is using drugs or alcohol?

A. — Experts recommend parents confront their child with all uses of alcohol or drugs. Failure to do so only increases the risk of added abuse.

Commissioners hear Noah Project update

Scurry County commissioners Monday heard an update on the work of the Noah Project for victims of family violence and then approved a new state Criminal Justice Division grant for the program.

Project director Linda Scalf said the Noah shelter typically has 15 to 18 women and children in residence at a time.

She said the $24,000 grant will be divided with the project office in Brownfwood and that the Scurry County center also serves Fisher, Mitchell and Kent counties.

The grant will be reduced 20 percent each year from the original grant of $30,000 last year, and the remaining revenues to finance the $36,000 budget for 1987-88 will have to be made up by United Way and private contributions, Scalf said.

County Judge Bobby Goodwin reported that work on the main runway in the Winston Field renovation project is expected to be finished by Nov. 1 and that the rest of the recently expanded project will be undertaken after that.

Commissioner C.D. Gray Jr. said the purchase of two walk-in freezers for the Senior Citizens Center, first expected to cost about $13,000, has been accomplished for $3,000 with the purchase of two 13-by-16-foot freezers from Texas Surplus in Lubbock.

Plane crash victim was Panhandle banker

AMARILLO, Texas (AP) — Two dentists and a forensics expert agreed after a four-hour autopsy that the victim of a Nov. 5 crash of a private plane in Kansas was indeed Glen E. Lemon, a banker in the Texas Panhandle town of Booker.

Dr. William A. Bass, a forensic anthropologist specializing in the identification of plane crash victims, said late Sunday, "There's no question about who he is."

Lemon, 54, a former president of the Texas Bankers Association, was chief executive officer and part-owner of his family-run First Bank and Trust of Booker, which was declared insolvent Dec. 18 — about six weeks after the plane crash — because of bad loans in energy and agriculture.

Lemon's remains were exhumed Friday from a cemetery at Booker, flown to Dallas and underwent a four-hour autopsy Saturday.

Before Friday's exhumation at least four companies were balking on paying off Lemon's $12.2 million in life insurance, more than $8 million of which was purchased during the nine months prior to his death. They asked for an exhumation and an autopsy to determine if the remains were Lemon's and if he might have committed suicide.

Lemon's widow, Helaine W. Lemon, agreed Aug. 3 to have his body exhumed in order to "lay at rest forever" allegations by Iowa-based American Mutual Insurance Co. that Lemon's fiery plane crash may have been staged.

The company had filed a motion in U.S. District Court alleging Lemon's plane could have been pre-set to take off and crash without a living person at the controls.

Bass, head of anthropology at the University of Tenneessee, said the identification was made from dental configurations.

Bass said his findings were confirmed by two dentists, one a representative of the Lemon family and the other a representative of the American Mutual Life Insurance Co. which is handling the matter. Bass said both dentists were in complete agreement as to the results of the findings.

"There was a crown on one tooth and a filling on another tooth, both of which were identical to before-death X-rays," Bass said.

The most convincing piece of dental evidence, Bass said, was the lack of a filling in the a molar, known as the six-year molar.

"He had no fillings in it," Bass said, "and for somebody in our culture today to have no fillings in the first molar ... that's a very significant identification point."

Bass said a battery of scientific tests besides the dental examination were performed Saturday in Dallas to try to determine the cause of Lemon's death.

Police chief: fee system to be revised

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — Police Chief John Scagno said he plans to revamp a controversial policy that has allowed El Paso's police officers to receive payment for providing information about traffic accidents.

The fees, now $35 and up, routinely are paid by insurance adjusters, private investigators and lawyers. Written police and sheriff's department policies allow the practice, but it has not been examined or actively regulated for years, the El Paso Times reported.

El Paso's top elected officials previously were unaware that police and sheriff's officers have been charging fees for providing testimony and information about traffic accidents.

The chief said he will not abandon the policy entirely but will revise it to stop officers from receiving fees while also getting on-duty pay, to establish how much officers can be paid for off-duty testimony or interviews, and to have payments routed through the city — eliminating the possibility of unreported income.

"But the freedom to charge whatever the market will bear will end," Scagno said.

Mayor Jonathan Rogers has been in office more than six years but said he didn't know police were authorized to accept such fees. Nor did other members of City Council.

"It just doesn't ring right, and as such it will probably be stopped," Rogers said.

El Paso County Judge Luther Jones and Sheriff Leo Samaniego said they would re-examine the county policy. Jones, like Rogers, said he had never heard of the policy.

Most El Paso adjusters, investigators and lawyers regard the interview and witness fees as the price of doing business with law enforcement officers.

But some say officers have been demanding more and more money.

DOE is moving to acquire land

HEREFORD, Texas (AP) — The U.S. Department of Energy is moving to acquire private farm land in the Texas Panhandle for a nuclear waste dump although the site selection process is under attack in Congress and may be suspended, a Spokane, Wash. newspaper reported Sunday.

The Spokane Chronicle and Spokesman-Review reported Sunday that farmers who live west of Amarillo were notified last week of a draft plan for land acquisition for the controversial nuclear dump site.

The Texas site is the only one that would involve condemnation of private land. The other two finalists are on federal land at the Hanford nuclear reservation and at Yucca Mountain in Nevada.

Critics claim that the Energy Department is moving to acquire private land "to justify its presence in Texas" at a time when Congress has cut off money for exploratory shaft drilling in 1987 and 1988 at all three sites.

Farmer Wayne Richardson told the newspaper that irrigation wells for his multimillion-dollar seed farm business are within the nine square miles of rich agricultural land that the Energy Department wants to lease or buy for site work.

"We feel this move is definitely not in compliance with the intent of Congress, which has withheld funds for the national program," Richardson said.

How can bridge be exciting and frustrating at the same time? Florida expert Bernie Chazen will likely give you today's deal as an example. After North-South had reached five diamonds, West led the 10 of hearts. Chazen, sitting East, won the ace and plotted his next defensive move.

If declarer did not have solid diamonds, he might also be missing the queen of spades. Even with solid diamonds, declarer might just have a hole in the club suit. And if declarer was going to misguess the location of the club queen, it was necessary that the defenders have a spade trick established by that time. So with no assurance that it was right, Bernie Chazen dared to lead a spade right into the teeth of dummy's A-J-9-4 at trick two. That was the excitement — his partner had the spade queen. Now just let declarer play a club to the 10, and West would grab the queen and lead back a spade to set the contract. But then came the frustration.

Since South had not fallen asleep, he had no trouble figuring out what had been going through Bernie's head. Although he did not know who held the club queen, he was certain that East had led away from the spade king. After ruffing a heart and drawing trumps, he played a spade to the nine. East could win the 10, but any return he now made would give declarer his contract.

Witness recants story

NEW YORK (AP) — A prosecutor says he's confident the conviction of a Mafia boss will stand despite a reported recantation by a former hit man who helped convict the mobster in the "Pizza Connection" drug trial.

"There was an overwhelming amount of testimony" against Salvatore Catalano, said U.S. Attorney Rudolph Giuliani, who supervised the prosecution.

The New York Times reported today that the witness, Luigi Ronsisvalle, voluntarily sought out Catalano's lawyer to provide a sworn statement that his trial testimony was untrue.

During the first meeting between Ronsisvalle and the lawyer, Ivan S. Fisher, Ronsisvalle said: "Mr. Fisher, I want you, please, from the bottom of my heart, I want you to accept my apology for what I done to Toto Catalano. I swear to God, I feel so bad, I feel like crying," according to the newspaper.

Fisher said he planned to present the evidence to Giuliani today.

Fisher has also prepared an application asking the trial judge, Pierre N. Laval, for a hearing on granting a new trial on the ground of newly discovered evidence, the Times said.

Senate will again confront president on arms control

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Democrats plan to push again this week for approval of a pair of measures restricting President Reagan's policies on nuclear arms control and the Persian Gulf, despite his threat to veto any bills containing such provisions.

The Democratic-controlled chamber's effort to write a Pentagon budget bill for fiscal 1988, which begins Thursday, is now in its third week, and the two restrictions are the only major unresolved fights.

After two weeks, there were 38 amendments still left, mostly minor changes in the $302 billion spending package. Democratic leaders plan to have all of them done by Tuesday night, when the chamber will turn to the two big fights.

One proposal requires continued U.S. adherence to the unratified SALT II nuclear treaty, the 1979 arms pact that Reagan says will no longer guide his decisions on which atomic weapons to build.

The second restricts Reagan's policy of re-flagging 11 Kuwaiti oil tankers and protecting them with Navy warships as they travel the war-torn Persian Gulf. The amendment would halt the policy 90 days after the law takes effect, unless both the House and Senate vote approval.

Reagan said last week he would veto the bill if the Senate adds the Persian Gulf restriction, a threat that followed his earlier veto promise because of a Democratic-backed amendment that restricts tests of the president's "Star Wars" anti-missile defense.

Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger on Sunday called the proposed congressional restrictions on U.S. activities in the Persian Gulf the "height of absurdity."

The SALT II provision is part of the House version of the Pentagon bill approved by that chamber last May. Reagan also threatened to veto that legislation, in part because of the nuclear arms restriction.

The two bills eventually will have to be reconciled by a House-Senate conference committee. The House also added several other arms control provisions, along with deep cuts in "Star Wars" spending, that are not now part of the Senate legislation.

While the Senate concentrates on defense, the House Ways and Means Committee is expected to begin drafting a tax bill to collect $12 billion in new taxes in 1988, as required by the revised Gramm-Rudman deficit-reduction amendment passed last week.

Reagan said Saturday he would sign the deficit-reduction bill, although it will force him to make the choice between a tax increase or reductions in military spending — or both.

The Gramm-Rudman amendment was attached to urgently needed legislation to increase the Treasury's debt limit.

Unless the Treasury is authorized to resume its borrowing by Thursday, the government could default for the first time in its history.

The revised Gramm-Rudman law would bring back the threat of automatic, across-the-board spending cuts if Congress and the president fail to reduce the deficit. It requires $23 billion in deficit reduction in fiscal 1988.

In other congressional action expected this week:

—The House on Thursday will consider a bill to make permanent the law which authorizes appointment of special prosecutors to investigate allegations of wrongdoing by high-level government officials. The law is scheduled to expire at the end of this year.

American domination of Ryder Cup ended

DUBLIN, Ohio (AP) - The intimidation factor is gone and with it the American domination of the biennial Ryder Cup Matches, golf's premier international team event.

"The significant thing is that they aren't frightened anymore," European captain Tony Jacklin said of his players Sunday after they scored a 15-13 victory. "We know we can win now."

The defeat marked the first time the Americans lost the Ryder Cup in consecutive matches and the first time they were beaten on American soil in the series that began in 1927.

The Americans, 21-5-1 in the series, held the cup for 28 years before the Europeans regained it in England in 1985.

"The difference was the 18th (hole)," American captain Jack Nicklaus said after a last-ditch rally fell just short. "I don't think we won the hole all day. That's where I expected our guys to win it. It didn't work out that way."

But the Americans came close. Down 10½-5½ going into Sunday's 12 singles matches (each worth one point) they needed nine points.

They got 7½, winning six matches and halving three.

Snyder netters whip Pecos, crack Lamesa to go 4-1 now

PECOS -- Coach Charlie Chrane's varsity squad played some of its best tennis of the season here Saturday, stopping powerful Pecos 11-7 and stomping Lamesa 18-0.

"The kids played real good tennis this weekend," said Chrane, whose squad boasts an impressive 4-1 record in District 2-4A team tennis action now.

"They have been working real hard and playing with good determination and intensity."

Snyder was tied 7-7 with the Eagles but won the final four matches to take a key victory.

Michael Rodriguez, Kevin Winter, John Griffin, Deone Farmer and Lori McFarland each won all four of their matches. Kim White won three of her four.

Number 3 girl's singles player Robbye Morales gave a strong performance, "the best she has played," according to Coach Chrane, in defeating Pecos' Nicole Ricketson 5-7, 6-4, 6-3.

The team got some disappointing news Sunday when it was learned that White suffered a broken arm in a horse riding-related accident. She will be out for the season.

"She was doing a real good job for us in that No. 6 girl's singles spot. This was her first year and she was going well," said Chrane.

Also out for the remainder of team tennis play is Brad Gartman, who apparently strained some muscles in his right arm while playing in Sweetwater earlier in the week.

Next action for the Tigers will be Saturday when they bus to Fort Stockton. They will play Andrews at 11:30 a.m. and the Panthers at 2:30 p.m.

Niekro throws final pitch; concludes 23-year career

ATLANTA (AP) - Phil Niekro has thrown his last knuckleball in major league competition, ending a 23-year career the way he always desired - wearing an Atlanta Braves uniform.

"I couldn't think of a better way to retire than with an 'A' on my cap," Niekro said Sunday after pitching into the fourth inning of San Francisco's 15-6 victory over the Braves, a triumph that nailed down at least a share of the National League West title for the Giants.

The 48-year-old Niekro made it official at a packed news conference following the game.

"I'm officially announcing my retirement today," he said. "I've been thinking about this for three or four months, not just the last few days. It wasn't a tough decision to make."

Niekro, one of the most popular sports figures in Atlanta history, received seven standing ovations from a crowd of 26,019, the last a prolonged four-minute salute when he was removed from the game by Manager Chuck Tanner after the first five Giants reached base in the fourth inning.

Pearl Sandow, who has attended every Braves home game since the team arrived in Atlanta in 1966, said, "I'm emotional like everybody else. I'm so glad that he came back, even if it's just for one day."

Niekro had originally turned down an offer from the Braves to pitch one last time in Atlanta but reconsidered and started against the Giants.

Niekro departed with a 5-2 lead and the bases loaded, but reliever Chuck Cary was greeted by Candy Maldonado's pinch grand slam that put the Giants ahead to stay.

Tigers make Sparky proud; Detroit moves in on Toronto

by The Associated Press

Win or lose, Sparky Anderson is proud to be manager of the Detroit Tigers.

"I don't know what will happen now and I don't care," Anderson said after the Tigers pulled within 2½ games of first-place Toronto in the American League East Sunday by beating the Blue Jays 3-2 in 13 innings.

"These men have showed me all I ever want to see."

The Tigers, after losing each of the first three games of the four-game series by one run, came back from a 1-0 deficit in the ninth.

Detroit forced extra innings when Kirk Gibson homered off reliever Tom Henke in the ninth. Detroit, which led 2-1 in the 11th on Darrell Evans' 33rd homer only to see Jesse Barfield's RBI single tie it again, finally won on a bloop single by Gibson.

Doyle Alexander allowed one earned run and six hits in 10 2-3 innings. Mike Henneman, 10-3, pitched 1 2-3 innings for the victory.

In other AL games, Minnesota clinched a tie in the West with an 8-1 victory over Kansas City; and it was California 11, Cleveland 8; Baltimore 9, New York 5; Milwaukee 9, Boston 6; Chicago 5, Oakland 0; and Seattle 5, Texas 3.

Twins 8, Royals 1

Minnesota clinched a least a tie for their first West Division title since 1970 as Bert Blyleven pitched a five-hitter and Kirby Puckett, Gary Gaetti and Kent Hrbek homered in a five-run first inning against Kansas City.

The only run Blyleven, 15-11, allowed was Danny Tartabull's 32nd homer in the fourth.

Royals starter Charlie Leibrandt, 15-11, lasted 19 pitches in the first inning.

Orioles 9, Yankees 5

Baltimore finished with a 31-51 home record, worst in the majors, by rallying for five runs in the seventh inning against New York.

Pat Clements, 3-3 was the loser.

Brewers 9, Red Sox 6

Milwaukee came back from a 6-1 deficit to defeat Boston as Robin Yount capped a four-run sixth inning with a two-run single.

The Red Sox, behind Jody Reed's two-run double and RBI single, took a 6-3 advantage into the sixth inning, but reliever Wes Gardner walked the bases loaded and was replaced by Bob Stanley, 4-15.

The victory went to Milwaukee reliever Ray Burris, 2-2, who took over in the fifth for starter Teddy Higuera.

White Sox 5, Athletics 0

Dave LaPoint, 5-3, pitched a two-hitter for his first shutout since 1985 and Ivan Calderon hit two homers as the White Sox completed a four-game sweep of Oakland.

Donnie Hill and Carlton Fisk also homered for the White Sox.

Mariners 5, Rangers 3

Seattle swept a three-game series on pinch-hitter Dave Hengel's three-run homer in the eighth inning off Mitch Williams, 8-5.

Mike Trujillo, 4-4, who walked Jerry Browne with the bases loaded to give Texas a 3-2 lead in the eighth, was the winner despite pitching only one-third of an inning.

Mickey Brantley went 4-for-4, including his 13th homer, a triple and two singles, for the Mariners.

Expos ready for Cardinals

The four-game series the Montreal Expos have been thinking about for weeks is one day away. They will meet the Cardinals in St. Louis with first-place on the line.

The Cardinals gave the third-place Expos with a chance in the National League East Sunday by dropping a 7-3 decision to Chicago while Montreal beat Philadelphia 5-3 to move within three games.

The second-place New York Mets start a three-game series in Philadelphia tonight, trailing the Cards by 2½ games. The Mets and Cardinals finish the season with three games in St. Louis, and the Expos close out the year with three games against Chicago at home.

NFL strike enters 7th day

NEW YORK (AP) - The NFL strike will claim its 14th game tonight when the Denver Broncos won't play the Browns in Cleveland, and a top NFL executive says it's unlikely any of the games will be made up.

While picketing lost steam over the weekend, striking players for many teams expected to return to the lines this morning when the strike enters its seventh day.

Some players attending a West Coast meeting with NFL Players Association executive director Gene Upshaw said they expected a long strike.

Owners said they planned to prepare for replacement games, using non-striking rookies and free agents. These games will begin Sunday and will count in the standings, the NFL said.

"We will proceed with these games, and they must count," Pittsburgh Steelers President Dan Rooney said. "We've told everybody they will count, and they will."

CBS has committed to televise the replacement games. NBC and ABC have not confirmed their plans.

In Tampa, Fla., Buccaneers President Hugh Culverhouse, chairman of the NFL's executive committee, said chances were remote that any of the missed games from Sunday or tonight would be rescheduled. The executive committee meets in New York Tuesday to decide the issue.

Upshaw met for 2½ hours Sunday in Los Angeles with representatives from the Los Angeles Rams and Raiders, San Francisco 49ers, San Diego Chargers, Seattle Seahawks and Denver Broncos.

Similar regional meetings were scheduled in Chicago today and in Atlanta and East Rutherford, N.J., later in the week.

The Daily Breeze of Torrance, Calif., reported Sunday that four to six Raiders may join other players in crossing picket lines today. Upshaw said he didn't believe the report.

Raiders backup quarterback Marc Wilson crossed picket lines last Tuesday along with three injured-reserve linemen, Mickey Marvin, Chris Riehm and Curt Marsh.

In San Francisco, 49ers starting quarterback Joe Montana, who was critical of the 1982 players strike, also indicated he might consider crossing picket lines.

Some union players hinted there could be a price to pay for defying the strike.

Coach Don Shula of the Miami Dolphins, meanwhile, admitted the replacement teams will not be "as sophisticated" as the regular teams.

Chicago Bears running back Walter Payton was asked on CBS-TV what would happen if the striking players scrimmaged against non-strikers. He said "... they'd have to use a lot of body bags."

"We've got some players who just missed making our team," Shula said. "These should be high caliber players. But we have others who are not in the best shape and others who are not good enough to play in the NFL. Certainly, we're going to have to gear down."

Broncos player rep Ricky Hunley, at the meeting with Upshaw, said he didn't think management believes the union is serious about sustaining a strike.

"It's sad," Hunley said. "They're going to test us."

The union and management have not negotiated since Friday, and the NFL Management Council said it did not expect talks to resume before Thursday, if then. Management has characterized free agency as the lone remaining stumbling block, while the union says other issues are just as important.

Arkansas embarrassed, 51-7; SWC begins regular feuding

by The Associated Press

The Southwest Conference puts its bruised ego aside this weekend for fullscale family feudin' as the regular season race heats up.

Arkansas, the preseason SWC favorite, must shake off a 51-7 slaughter by Miami to travel to Fort Worth and battle the rested Texas Christian Horned Frogs.

TCU beat Brigham Young 33-12 two weeks ago, then took a week off.

Arkansas had been the lone unblemished conference team, and Miami gave the Razorbacks their worst whipping since Rice flogged them 47-0 in 1953.

Baylor leads the league race, defeating Texas Tech 36-22 in the conference opener on Saturday in Waco.

Arkansas and TCU meet at 7:30 p.m. in Amon Carter Stadium.

Texas A&M is at Texas Tech in a noon (Raycom) matchup, Baylor plays a night game in the Astrodome against Houston, and Rice is at Texas in a 7 p.m. game.

The time of the Houston-Baylor game will be determined on how quickly the Houston Astros complete a scheduled afternoon National League game.

"I hate not knowing when the kickoff is," said Baylor Coach Grant Teaff. "What if the baseball game goes extra innings?"

The 10th-ranked Hogs were so humiliated on national television that Miami players were shown playing tic-tac-toe on a sideline chalkboard in the fourth period.

Miami free safety Bennie Blades rubbed it in, saying "If that's the best the Southwest Conference has to offer, bring on the Big Ten."

The Hogs were originally scheduled to play Wichita State but the Shockers dropped football.

The bad news is that Arkansas has to travel to Miami for another game next year.

It was the SWC's fifth loss in six games against teams in The Associated Press Top Ten.

The SWC did climb over the .500 mark with four victories against weak opposition.

The SWC was four of five against outside competition over the weekend.

Texas A&M, which upset seventh-ranked Washington two weeks ago, rolled to a 27-14 victory over Southern Mississippi; Texas gave Coach David McWilliams his first Longhorn victory with a 61-16 rout of Oregon State; Houston outlasted Sam Houston State 38-34, and Rice nudged Southwest Texas State 38-28.

The SWC is now 13-11 against outside competition.

Arkansas was supposed to have its finest team under Coach Ken Hatfield but the Hogs never had a chance.

"Fifty-one points is hard to believe," said Arkansas noseguard Tony Cherico. "But I saw it happen. We look up at the scoreboard and it was 0-0. Then all of a sudden it's 28-0."

Hatfield said "I was shocked. They were on a different level, an ozone level."

Miami Coach Jimmy Johnson, a former teammate of Hatfield's at Arkansas, said "I hated to see this happen. I played all 60 players we brought."

Baylor was paced by the two interceptions of cornerback Robert Blackmon.

Teaff said "This was a big, big victory for us. We have a good chance now to be right in the thick of the conference race."

Tech lost its 15th game in 19 starts in Waco. The Red Raiders gave away seven turnovers, including two fumbles on kickoffs that helped Baylor build an early 17-0 lead.

"We made it pretty easy for the Bears," said Tech Coach Spike Dykes.

Texas A&M's talented freshmen starred in the victory over the Golden Eagles. Bucky Richardson, a freshman quarterback from Baton Rouge, La., dashed 82 yards for a score, third longest in school history.

"I didn't think I would get by their linebackers but I kind of popped through," Richardson said.

"A lot of young people made a lot of good things happen," A&M Coach Jackie Sherrill said.

Freshman halfback Darren Lewis ran 77 yards for a touchdown, and Lance Pavlas started at quarterback and threw a 69-yard scoring pass to fullback Matt Gurley.

Texas' Eric Metcalf ran for 145 yards on 20 carries to give McWilliams cause to celebrate.

"This was a game we had to win," McWilliams said. "We needed a morale booster and a confidence builder, and this is what we got."

The ball disappeared into the cup at the 18th hole, putting an abrupt end to a classic Sunday afternoon shootout and securing the 26-year-old Californian the championship of the $400,000 Southwest Golf Classic.

Pate's closing 5-under-par 65 gave him a 15-under-par total of 273 and his first victory since joining the tour in the fall of 1984. He earned his biggest paycheck ever, $72,000.

Four challengers finished a stroke back at 274, including Mark O'Meara, whose 8-foot birdie putt at the final green slid past the cup, and David Edwards, whose 35-footer hung on the lip of the cup.

Said O'Meara: "It was one of those putts you just wish you didn't have to hit...It's been a frustrating year."

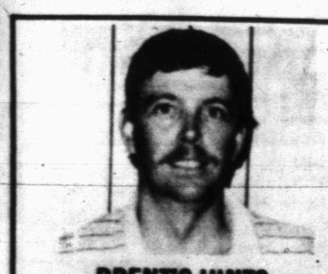

O'Meara finished with a 69 while Edwards, the third-round leader, closed with a par 72 on the windswept 7,189-yard Fairway Oaks course.

They shared second place money of $26,400 with Bob Eastwood, who shot a 71, and Dan Halldorson, who carded a final 70.

Stock purchases can be completed

WILMINGTON, Del. (AP) — A British company trying to help Newmont Mining Corp. defeat a hostile takeover by T. Boone Pickens can complete its recent purchases of 15.8 million shares of Newmont stock but must hold them inactive at least until a hearing later this week, a Delaware judge ruled today.

Chancery Court Vice Chancellor Jack B. Jacobs ordered Newmont's ally Consolidated Gold Fields PLC either to place in escrow or hold separately the $1.5 billion worth of shares it scooped up in a "market sweep" last week, which prevented the Texas oilman from proceeding with his bid for control.

Jacobs said "those shares shall not be voted or otherwise used to alter the status quo."

The ruling came in the form of a written amendment to a temporary restraining order Jacobs had issued last week at Pickens' request, which blocked Consolidated from buying any more Newmont shares.

Jacobs said the fate of the already-purchased 15.8 million shares, which would give Consolidated a 49.7 percent stake in Newmont, would be addressed further at a hearing on a preliminary injunction this Thursday.

In his ruling today, the judge appeared to agree with arguments in support of Consolidated and Newmont that undoing the massive purchases would be unprecedented and probably undermine market confidence.

He directed attorneys in the battle to further consider how to resolve the question, including the possibility of allowing Pickens and Consolidated to bid competitively for the separately held stock.

Newmont stock jumped $2.75 a share to $97.75 on the New York Stock Exchange, apparently reflecting investors' belief that the judge's order means the takeover battle is far from over.

A ruling that resolved the matter at least temporarily was needed by today because Consolidated's purchase of shares are to close today and Tuesday.

Lawyers for Newmont and Consolidated told Jacobs last Friday that the frenzied stock purchases earlier in the week by Consolidated were made legally and properly.

Woodward defends deathbed interview

WASHINGTON (AP) — Journalist Bob Woodward stands by his claim that former CIA Director William J. Casey admitted in a deathbed interview he knew of the diversion of Iran arms sale money to the Nicaraguan Contras even though Casey's widow says such an interview could not have taken place.

Writing in his new book, "VEIL: The Secret Wars of the CIA, 1981-1987," Woodward said Casey nodded affirmatively when asked if he knew about the funds diversion at a time when Congress had banned U.S. aid to the rebels.

But Sophia Casey took issue Sunday with the depiction of Casey's views of President Reagan and Woodward's contention that he eluded security at the hospital and met with the dying Casey.

In an interview with CBS-TV's "60 Minutes" on Sunday evening, Woodward, an assistant managing editor at The Washington Post, reasserted his story while acknowledging there were no witnesses to the meeting. He said the four-minute interview occurred a few days after he had been ejected from the hospital by guards, and that the meeting was arranged with the help of a source he would not identify.

"He was dying. It was not the Casey I knew physically," Woodward said. "And so I got one question, and ... that question was: 'You knew about the diversion, didn't you?' ... And he nodded. ... And I said 'Why?' And he said, 'I believed.'"

Asked what Casey "believed," Woodward answered, "That we can change the world. That we can reshape it. That we can support the Contras, and we can do what he used to call 'these things' — covert action."

In the book, Woodward says, "To this day I do not know why" Casey agreed to speak to him. Woodward describes a Dec. 3, 1986, phone call in which he quotes Casey as saying, "I don't know why I take your calls."

Casey died May 6 of complications after being diagnosed as having a malignant brain tumor.

Mrs. Casey told The Associated Press in a telephone interview Sunday from her Long Island home that Woodward "was never in the hospital."

She said family members were with Casey constantly when he was hospitalized in Washington and on Long Island and that Secret Service security officers were posted at his room door and the elevator door around the clock.

The book also came under attack Sunday from the Saudi government, which Woodward alleged provided money and help to Casey for his private covert operations, and from Sheik Mohammed Hussein Fadlallah, leader of the militant Hezbollah faction in Lebanon, whom the book alleged had accepted a $2 million payoff to stop attacks against Americans and U.S. facilities.

Excerpts of Woodward's book appeared in today's and Sunday's editions of the Post.

Medication is the best bet

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT — Please give me some information about the medication given to a woman to dry up her milk if she is not going to breast-feed her baby. Does it increase the chances of breast cancer? Is there a way of making the milk dry up naturally?

DEAR READER — Parlodel (bromocriptine) is a prescription drug that blocks the secretion of prolactin, the milk-producing hormone that is formed in the pituitary gland. When given under medical supervision, it is a safe way to dry up a women's breasts after she has delivered. Although Parlodel has not been reported to cause breast cancer, it can cause low blood pressure, nausea, headache, dizziness, fatigue and lightheadedness.

In the past, before the use of medicines for this purpose, women who wanted to stop lactating had to stop nursing, bind their breasts and limit fluid intake. This was uncomfortable and often led to mastitis (breast infection). All in all, the modern drug inhibition of lactation is superior to the older, "natural" method.

DEAR DR. GOTT — I am a respectable, middle-class, 69-year-old widow, and I am ashamed to say I think I have head or body lice. The only place I think I could have gotten them is at the beauty shop. They use the same rollers on everyone without sterilizing them. What can I do to get rid of these nasty, distasteful things?

DEAR READER — Having lice does not mean a person is unclean or disreputable; it means simply that you picked up the lice from another person. The beauty shop is a possibility.

Ask your doctor for a prescription for Kwell shampoo. When used according to directions, it will eliminate the lice. By all means, share your concerns with the beauty-shop operators. They will surely want to tighten up their hygienic practices.

DEAR DR. GOTT — Is it true that every time one sneezes, the heart skips a beat? If this is true, that unfortunate girl in Miami who sneezed consecutively for a year must have been near death.

DEAR READER — Sneezing does not usually cause the heart to skip a beat. However, the vagus nerve — which slows the heart rate — can be stimulated by straining or sneezing. Therefore, a person with an overactive vagus reflex might detect a slowing of the heart during repeated sneezing.

I'm not aware of the Florida girl who sneezed for a year; certainly her problems with sleeping and eating must have superseded any slow pulse that she may have experienced.

Volunteers scout color during season

JAY, Vt. (AP) — George Buzzell describes Vermont's foliage with spirit. He sometimes says the colors are "Monet-like" and viewing on some days "makes me thirst for a glass of fresh cider."

He is one of Vermont's 20 volunteer foliage reporters, whose forecasts influence the trips of many of the 3 million leaf-peepers who come to the not-so-Green Mountain State in the fall.

For Buzzell, a county forester in the Northeast Kingdom, a mountain resort area just south of the Canadian border, the job is no work at all.

"A foliage reporter is so fortunate because it reminds us to watch," he said one day last week on a walk up Jay Peak, which had leaves the color of raspberry. "We are forced to enjoy things. We are so busy in our everyday lives that otherwise we would probably just drive by and not notice."

Buzzell describes with spirit the colors that come out on different trees: "Red and soft maples, very red. Sugar maples, anything from yellow and orange and ranging to varying degrees of reds, including oxygen-rich reds. White ashes, they have yellows but they turn into purplish colors or what some people call turkey-blood red. Birches are more yellow. Aspens, beautiful yellow."

Vermont tourism officials depend on the volunteers to call in twice a week during the six-week season to describe the degree of color in the trees and list roads with the best views.

"They are a very, very loyal bunch," said Donald Lyons, state travel director, of the foliage reporters. "They take their job seriously, and that is the important thing. We don't need the promoter-type person out there."

The state used to have local chambers of commerce report on foliage, but switched to county foresters about a quarter-century ago.

"Sometimes in their enthusiasm, some of the chambers' reports were a little exaggerated," Lyons said.

Buzzell, 47, and other foliage reporters develop their own systems to determine the percentage of peak color. Some have favorite trees, some drive the same roads every year and keep notes.

Not all foliage reporters are foresters. Maude Shattuck, 83, of Huntington Center was asked to report on the leaves 10 years ago after the state learned she was a weather observer for the National Weather Service.

"I'm always looking at the colors," she said. "The first thing I do when I get up in the morning, I look up to see if they have changed any."

Foliage reporting provides semicelebrity status. Shattuck has been quoted in several major newspapers and appeared two years ago on "The CBS Evening News."

Absent heavy rains and winds, the foliage reporters say colors will peak this week in the Northeast Kingdom and in higher elevations north and east of Rutland and east of Bennington. In the Champlain Valley, where Shattuck lives, the changing of the leaves will be in its early to middle stage.

While it is peak color in his area now, Buzzell said his favorite part of the season comes when the leaves fall.

"The character of the land begins to poke through. We get to look at the rocks and the ledges. There's so much integrity to the old Green Mountains," he said.

Dear Abby

Tobacco-Chewing Ball Players Strike Out as Good Examples

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1987 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: You will probably receive letters from both doctors and TV cameramen on this one. I happen to be one of the former.

"Disgusted Ex-Fan" complained about baseball players who chew tobacco and disgust TV viewers by spitting on the field. You explained that the players chew tobacco to keep their mouths moist and to relieve tension. "Don't chew out the players," you said. "Blame the cameramen who bring it into our living rooms. Spitting is not only unsightly, it's a health hazard."

Abby, spitting is much less a health hazard than chewing tobacco. "Smokeless tobacco," including snuff and chewing tobacco, is a major cause of cancer of the mouth and tongue. Unfortunately, our young people admire the ball players they see on TV and tend to imitate them. Also, there are better ways to keep one's mouth moist and relieve tension.

As for the cameramen, their job is to televise the ball game. They're not allowed to limit their shots only to the non-chewing and the non-spitting players.

So go ahead and chew out the players, Abby. They could do better by our kids.

DANIEL S. BLUMENTHAL, M.D., ATLANTA

DEAR DR. BLUMENTHAL: Forgive my bloomin' error. You're absolutely right. I was off base on this one. Send me a bill. I have Medicare.

DEAR ABBY: There is a young woman in our office (I'll call Maggie) who orders merchandise from catalogs with the understanding that the merchandise can be returned if the customer is not completely satisfied within a certain number of days.

Maggie wears an outfit once and then returns it, and everyone at the office wonders how she can have such an extensive wardrobe on a working girl's salary. Then it was discovered she had been ordering clothes on approval, wearing them once and returning them!

If there is nothing illegal, immoral or unethical in such a practice, please let us know, since the rest of us would like to be "fashion plates," too.

OLD DUDS IN OKLAHOMA

DEAR OLD DUDS: This practice is not new, and everyone in the clothing business is aware of it. It is indeed illegal, immoral and unethical, and the cheaters seldom get away with it for very long.

DEAR ABBY: I have a problem that may seem trivial to some, but it has become a source of irritation to all concerned.

My husband's brother and his family come to our home quite frequently, and I always love to see them, but before I let them in, I ask them (especially their children) to please check their shoes, and if they're dirty, to please remove them, as we have light-colored carpets throughout our house. We have lots of animals and muddy areas around our house.

This family always put their feet up on my furniture with their shoes on. I don't mind if they put their feet up, as I do it myself, but I ask that they remove their shoes before doing so.

Although they have never been refused admission, it is quite obvious by the irritated expressions on their faces that they think I am being too picky. I feel that by now they should know that I don't want my carpets soiled and I shouldn't have to remind them every time they come over.

Tell me, am I rude to ask them to check their shoes? Or are they rude to act irritated and imposed upon when I ask them?

DON'T TREAD ON ME

DEAR DON'T: There's nothing rude about asking guests to please check their shoes — if you ask them in the proper tone. This family should know by now what's expected of them, so if they act irritated and imposed upon, THEY'RE rude.

Gore, Dukakis clash during debate

DES. MOINES, Iowa (AP) — Sen. Albert Gore Jr. is trying to turn the heat up in the Democratic presidential race and separate himself from his rivals by branding as "wildly unrealistic" their proposals on defense and foreign policy.

During a debate Sunday sponsored by an arms control group, Gore clashed with Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis and Rep. Richard Gephardt of Missouri.

"Get your facts straight," snapped Dukakis when Gore said the governor had called for removing U.S. troops from Korea and stationing them in Japan.
