Anti-apartheid march held for Mandela

CAPE TOWN, South Africa (AP) — Thousands of anti-apartheid demonstrators of all races defied the law today by mounting marches to demand freedom for Nelson Mandela, the imprisoned black leader of the banned African National Congress.

Police firing tear gas and rubber bullets stopped one of the processions, and riot policemen armed with rubber whips and truncheons disbanded another before it could start.

But a third march from the mostly white University of Cape Town was under way toward President P.W. Botha's official residence early in the afternoon, residents said.

The residents said about 1,000 people of all races were singing freedom songs and marching, but it was not clear whether police knew about it or if Botha was at the residence.

At 10 a.m. (4 a.m. EDT) police broke up a planned march from the mixed-race suburb of Athlone to Pollsmoor Prison, where Mandela is serving a life term following his conviction on charges of plotting sabotage.

One man screaming "Allah akhbar," Arabic for "God is great," was seen being hauled away from the clash that developed moments before the scheduled start of the march.

Some of South Africa's Moslems, classified as Asians under the government's racial separation laws, speak and read Arabic.

Some of the crowd suffered bruises, but it was not clear if there were any serious injuries.

A second crowd of about 2,000 people of all races began marching from the nearby Hewat Teachers College toward Pollsmoor, about 15 miles away.

Fifteen minutes later, riot police blocked their path and ordered them to disperse. The marchers sat down in the road while their clergymen leaders locked arms and stood firm.

The protesters broke into the hymn "Abide With Me," until police waded in with whips and truncheons, arresting the clergymen and firing tear gas and rubber bullets at the fleeing crowd. It was not known how many were wounded.

"It's trying to keep the sea from the beach," said the Rev. Jan de Waal, a white minister of the Dutch Reformed Mission Church, who was trying to negotiate between the police and demonstrators.

"We stand here because we cannot do otherwise. We don't have guns ... We just stand here as people of God to express our complete opposition to the system in this country — mass arrests, the beating of people," he said.

About 15 demonstrators, including a half-dozen clergymen, were taken into custody.

Hours before the marches, police and soldiers sealed off the neighborhood around Athlone Stadium where the demonstrators intended to gather.

Security forces refused to allow anyone near the sports complex. About 300 people sang freedom songs and heckled police from behind a barricade 500 yards away.

One of them, Anglican clergyman Maxwell Malan, told The Associated Press that the protesters planned to march despite the police presence and a government pledge to take "stern action" against them.

"We're going. Not even the police can stop us," said Malan, who is of mixed race.

But 10 minutes before the march was to begin, a senior policeman announced over a bullhorn: "You must leave peacefully in five minutes. Otherwise I will have to take action. Please, people, you will get hurt."

Part of the crowd melted away. But as clergymen negotiated with police in front of the remaining 200 protesters, dozens of riot policemen charged up a sidewalk toward the group's flank.

"Give me five minutes," one of the clergymen said to the police commander. The clergyman could not immediately be identified.

"You don't give me the ... orders," the policeman responded.

"I'm not giving you orders, but those people are peaceful at the moment," the clergyman argued.

Economies in flux, speaker says

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — The economies of the nation, state and Permian Basin are in a state of flux, according to Dallas bank economist Dr. Edward L. McClelland who was guest speaker at the inaugural meeting of the Permian Basin Economics Club Tuesday at Mission Dorado Country Club.

"We're kind of in an interesting period of time," McClelland told about 90 Midland-Odessa business people, economists and chamber of commerce representatives. "We know where we've been, but we just don't know where we're going," he said.

McClelland, a vice president and economist with RepublicBank Corp., said things are uncertain because things are changing. "There are no benchmarks that are familiar to us that we can reach out, grab and use."

"We're kind of in an interesting period of time. We know where we've been, but we just don't know where we're going."
— Dr. Edward L. McClelland, Dallas bank economist

According to Michael E. Williams, RepublicBank First National Midland vice president, and James L. Williams, a partner in the Odessa-based Texas Business Forecasts, formation of the Economics Club has been in the discussion stage for two or three years. The club will meet monthly, with membership open to anyone interested in joining, and present prominent speakers at each meeting.

Concerning the oil industry, McClleland said, "I think drilling is going to be about where its been. It's all going to be shallow oil wells," he predicted and speculated that "there's not going to be any incentive for exploration or wildcatting. We're going for the sure thing," he said.

"It's only going to be the most efficient producers that are going to be making the money," McClelland stated, noting that "profits are going to be hard to come by, they'll be there for some people, but not there for others."

He sees the price of oil moving "unevenly downward to $18 or $20 per barrel by the end of this decade because surplus supply is going to be with us for a long time."

But, he sees the petrochemical industry benefiting from lower energy prices "because that's one of their costs of doing business."

In the Permian Basin, McClelland said he expects agriculture to be weaker than oil and gas and predicts another dismal year because crop estimates have just been revised upward. "The last thing we want is another bale of cotton this year," he said, "But we're certainly going to get it."

Equal access mandated in AT&T decontrol

By MELLA McEWEN
Business/Oil Writer

Back in the old days of B.D. (before decontrol), choosing a telephone service was not nearly so difficult. Customers had only one choice — AT&T. But following the breakup of AT&T's monopoly hold on the industry, a virtual smorgasbord of long distance options have been made available to the customer, and in the process many questions have been generated.

Midlanders have received letters from Southwestern Bell regarding equal access and asking customers to choose a long distance company.

Here are questions that may be of interest to Midland long distance customers in helping them understand the equal access aspect of long distance service and the process of choosing a long distance phone company.

What is equal access?

As of July 1984, a federal court required the local Bell operating companies to move toward "Equal Access" or equal use of any long-distance company.

Since I use another long distance company, how will equal access change my long distance service?

Long distance calls through alternative carriers such as MCI, LDS or others, will be handled exactly like calls made through AT&T by simply dialing a "1," the area code and the seven digit phone number. The calls will automatically be routed to the pre-selected primary long-distance carrier, or the long-distance company you're already using.

How will equal access benefit me?

Currently, to access an alternative carrier, customers must use a touch-tone dialing phone and typically have to dial 13 extra digits - the seven digit local number of the carrier, a six digit authorization code, then the area code and phone number. With equal access, it takes less dialing to make long-distance calls, and they can be made using either a touch-tone or rotary dial telephone.

Also, telephone connections with many of the alternative long-distance companies, in the past, have been somewhat less than average. But with equal access, all companies will be able to use the same phone lines as AT&T, improving transmission quality.

Furthermore, AT&T alone has had "answer supervision," a foolproof method of detecting when the party on the other end picks up the phone. Under equal access, other long-distance companies will also have access to this capability, improving billing accuracy.

Many firms offer Midland their long distance service

By MELLA McEWEN
Business/Oil Writer

No doubt the best-known long-distance company is MCI, thanks to its award-winning advertising. However, commercials alone are not a good basis for choosing a long-distance telephone company.

Here is a summary of the companies, including two Midland-based companies, that are offering their services to Midland telephone customers.

■ CLAYDESTA COMMUNICATIONS CORP.

ClayDesta Communications, the Midland-based company started by Clayton Williams, Jr., has been open since December, 1984.

Customers can receive discounts on calls anywhere in the continental U.S., which includes Alaska, Hawaii, Puerto Rico and the U.S. Virgin Islands. The company offers volume discounts: for calls up to $499, ClayDesta offers a discount 15 percent over AT&T's applicable rate; for $500 to $2,499, a 20 percent discount; over $2,500, a 25 percent discount, according to company officials. There is no monthly fee, minimum charge or installation fee.

Please see SERVICE, Page 2A

Several factors influence choice of phone carrier

From Staff Reports

There are a variety of factors and features to look for in order to intelligently choose a long-distance carrier. Some major points to consider, according to company officials, are:

■ Is there a flat monthly fee or a monthly minimum usage charge? If so, and these rates exceed the usual dollar amount of calls you make each month, this particular service may not be the best value.

■ Does the company have a one time set-up fee? If so, this fee should be calculated into the overall cost of the system for comparison to the other companies.

■ What is the company's cent per minute rate? "Cent per minute" is the actual cost a company charges for long-distance calls. The cent per minute rate is the bottom line for comparison of long-distance carriers.

■ Does the company offer volume discounts? To be able to make a meaningful comparison with those companies who don't offer volume discounts, check the cent per minute rate, taking into account the volume discounts.

■ Can the system be used any time of day, and where can a customer call? In exchange for lower rates or fees, some companies may restrict the calling periods, so check each carrier. After equal access, most companies will offer nationwide transmission, allowing calls anywhere in the United States. Customers need to check individual plans for the ability to call internationally.

SERVICE

ClayDesta has a traveller's card and charges 50 cents per minute when it's used. The user calls a "1-800" number and gives the operator an access number. The operator will complete the call. There is a 24-hour customer service center. The company charges in one-minute increments and bills directly.

■ TRANSAMERICAN TELECOMMUNICATIONS, INC. MIDLAND-ODESSA

TTI Midland-Odessa, like it's sister company in Lubbock, is a home-owned and operated company owned by some Midland and Lubbock lawyers and doctors. The company guarantees 20 percent off AT&T rates, according to a company spokesperson.

The "one-plus" service can be accessed by either a rotary or touch-tone phone. Otherwise, a touch-tone phone is required. There is no minimum, monthly or installation charge. Calls can be made anywhere in the continental U.S.

There is regular follow-up once service begins, and 24-hour customer service. The company bills in six-second increments, and the bill can be broken down to show which phone made what call.

■ SEARS DIAL "1" PHONE SERVICE

A subsidiary of MCI, Sears offers "one-plus" dialing anywhere in the continental U.S., Canada and 28 other countries. According to company spokesperson Ruth Byrd, the company offers up to 35 percent savings over AT&T. There is no monthly or installation fee or minimum charge, and the system is accessible by rotary or touch-tone. The only requirement is a Sears Charge card.

The company also offers the Sears Long Distance Service, which is similar but requires a seven-digit access code, a five digit personal identification code and a touch-tone phone.

Also available is the Sears Long Distance Phone card, which is similar to the AT&T Calling Card, according to Ms. Byrd.

■ US TELECOMMUNICATIONS (US TELEPHONE)

This service is available 24 hours a day to anywhere in the continental U.S., Puerto Rico, the U.S. Virgin Islands, Hawaii and Alaska. There is no monthly or installation fee or minimum charge.

U.S. Tel has 24 hour customer service and directory assistance, which costs 45 cents per call after the first two each month. The company also offers volume discounts and a travel card. The card's surcharge is 50 cents from the originating city, and 90 cents from a nearby, non-originating city.

The firm charges in six-second increments following the first minute. Customers can be billed directly or through American Express, Diner's Club, MasterCard, Visa, Sakowitz, Marshall Field or Bullocks credit cards.

■ GTE SPRINT

According to spokesperson Suzanne Ruhl, the company offers an average 25 percent savings over AT&T when calling within the state of Texas. Calls can be made to anywere in the continental U.S., Canada and 30 other countries, 24 hours a day, seven days a week.

Customer service is available 24 hours a day. There is no monthly or installation fee or minimum charge, but the company requests a 30-day cancellation notice.

Volume discounts are available, as is directory assistance. The company's travel card is free, but requires a touch-tone phone to use. Customers receive an itemized bill, including travel card calls, and comparisons with AT&T rates.

Sprint also offers the Citibank Citiphone.

■ AT&T

According to an AT&T spokesperson, the company is the same long distance company it's always been. It still offers operator service, direct dialing, credit card calls, and immediate credit for wrong or unanswered calls. You can also call anywhere at any time. The company now offers the "Reach Out America" and "Reach Out Texas" plans, which allows the customer to buy an hour of long distance time for the flat rate of $9.45, plus $.13 per minute over that hour.

■ LDS METROMEDIA LONG DISTANCE

LDS spokesperson Connie Flores says the company guarantees savings of 20 to 40 percent over AT&T when you call anywhere in the continental U.S. There is no minimum or maximum use fee or installation charge.

The company offers the Express Calling and the Accounting Package. Express Calling is like an incoming WATS line. For $2 a month, an employee out of town or in the field can reach the home office by calling a "1-800" number and his own access number. This way, the company doesn't have to give out its access code.

The Accounting Package, for $5 a month, offers a six-digit authority code and 99 three-digit codes that itemizes which department or individual made which phone call.

The company also offers volume discounts and directory assistance, which costs $.45 after the first five calls each month.

■ MCI

MCI, according to a company spokesman, offers five to 35 percent savings over AT&T. There is no monthly or minimum charge or installation fee. Customers can call anywhere in the continental U.S. or internationally. The system can be used with either a rotary or touch-tone phone.

The company also has a free travel card that can be used anywhere, even internationally. There is also a 24-hour service center available.

In some areas, MCI will offer a bonus of 60 free minutes calling time for signing up before switchover to equal access.

■ AMERICAN EXPRESS EXPRESSPHONE

The American Express Expressphone service is offered by MCI. Customers receive all the services MCI offers and is billed on the American Express card, according to company officials.

What about billing?

More than likely, the long-distance companies will continue to bill customers directly, since this allows them to market other services and communicate with customers on a regular basis. However, the alternative companies can choose, for a fee, to have the local Bell company bill a customer for primary equal access service.

I've been hearing about LATAs, but I don't understand what that is.

LATA stands for Local Access and Transport Area and is a geographic grouping of telephone exchanges which have common economic, social and communication interests. The AT&T divestiture ruling of January 1984 stipulates that the Bell operating companies will be allowed to offer "1-plus" long-distance telephone service only within a designated area, or LATA, once equal access is in effect.

A long-distance call dialed "1-plus" to another city within a LATA will be handled and billed by the local Bell operating company, such as Southwestern Bell. The United States has been divided into 163 LATAs. Some of the larger states have several LATAs, while many smaller states contain a single LATA. Texas, for example, has 17 LATAs, such as between Houston and Galveston, Dallas and Fort Worth, and San Antonio and Laredo. The December 1984 Southwestern Bell residential phone books contain a map with the LATA divisions in Texas.

Customers can use their primary long-distance carrier to place intra-LATA calls by dialing a carrier-specific five-digit code.This will allow the intra-LATA call to go through the primary carrier at its normal rates.

What if I don't make a choice?

If a long-distance carrier is not chosen within a certain time period, Southwestern Bell will assign one to you.

Do I have to have equal access?

If you decide you don't want equal access, you'll have to notify the Southwestern Bell office by calling the local business office and then call the long-distance companies for their access codes and, if necessary, establish an account. If you don't get Equal Access, you'll have to dial a five digit access code before making a long-distance call.

What if I choose one, then change my mind? Or choose one after the deadline?

Part of the equal access ruling allows for switching from the primary carrier to others for any number of reasons. You have a six month grace period after the change-over to choose another primary long-distance carrier. If, however, you make a choice after six months, or change companies after that time, or more than once, a $5 fee will be charged.

Nor do you have to use that company exclusively. Other carriers can be accessed with their own special five-digit access code before dialing the area code and phone number. This provides a potential for even greater savings since some companies have better rates at certain times of the day or to certain places.

I still have some questions. What do I do now?

Contact the local business office of Southwestern Bell or any of the long-distance companies.

CHOICE

■ What are the day, evening and night and week-end rates? By obtaining literature from the companies under consideration, customers can find out which long-distance carriers have the best rates for their most frequently called numbers.

■ Does the plan have arrangements for calling from other than a home or business phone? Some companies restrict the cities that calls can be placed to or from, charge higher rates for calls made from other locations or charge an extra monthly fee for travel service. Where this is important, customers should check each company's terms carefully.

By obtaining answers to these questions and comparing the information, customers should be better equipped to choose the long-distance service that best fits their needs.

Crying in the arms of a daughter-in-law is Eli Doucet, mother of Jeffrey Doucet. Gary Plauche, who gunned downed Doucet in revenge for the kidnapping and assault of his son, was given a five-year suspended sentence in the case.

Father spared prison sentence

By RAY FORMANEK Jr.

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — A father spared a prison sentence for killing a martial arts instructor accused of kidnapping and sexually assaulting his son says he just wants his life to return to normal.

"I want to thank my family and my friends in Baton Rouge who supported me," Leon Gary Plauche, 39, said after he was sentenced Tuesday to five years of supervised probation, during which he is to undergo treatment for substance abuse and perform 300 hours of community service work.

"I would just like to get on with my life," he said.

Plauche pleaded no contest on May 16 to manslaughter in the death of Jeffrey Doucet, 25, who was shot in the head in the Baton Rouge airport March 16, 1984.

The shooting, filmed by a television crew, occurred as police escorted Doucet in handcuffs after returning from California where FBI agents had arrested him on a charge of kidnapping Plauche's 11-year-old son.

Judge Frank Saia, calling the shooting a tragedy and saying that imprisonment would serve no useful purpose, suspended a sentence of seven years at hard labor. The maximum sentence would have been 21 years in jail.

Saia said therapists who have worked with Plauche said that prison would do little to rehabilitate him. "In fact, prison life might have a devastating effect on him and everything that has been accomplished during the past year and a half," he said.

Plauche was originally indicted on a second-degree murder charge but bargained with prosecutors to plead no contest to manslaughter.

"The victim is from a good family and the defendant is from a good family," Saia said. "In this case, if there is anything that is unusual, it is because both sides are victims. Both sides suffered."

Doucet's mother, Elia Doucet, broke into sobs as the sentence was read and was supported by family members as they left the standing-room-only courtroom.

"They didn't even let me know that my son had been killed. I found out when I saw my son killed on television...," said Mrs. Doucet, her voice trailing off.

Roland Doucet, a brother, made the unusual move of addressing the court before sentencing.

"I believe thou shalt not kill and society says thou shall not kill," he told the court. "I believe that Jeffrey believed that."

"That man took his life from him," Doucet said, pointing at Plauche.

Afterwards, Doucet called the sentence an outrage.

"I don't believe justice was done," he said. "It's just going to show people that if you have political connections you can get away with murder on national TV in Baton Rouge."

The sentence was in line with psychological reports filed in court Monday, and with motions by defense attorney Anthony Marabella, who asked Saia not to imprison Plauche.

"There is virtually no risk that (he) will commit another crime, nor will incarceration serve any useful purpose nor will a probationary sentence deprecate the seriousness of the crime," Marabella wrote.

Two psychological reports included detailed accounts given by both Plauche and the son.

Dr. James L. Brabham reported that the son described how Doucet, the boy's martial arts instructor, had sexually abused him for months prior to the kidnapping.

The boy was abducted Feb. 19, 1984, and was rescued by authorities in California Feb. 29, more than two weeks before the shooting.

The boy suffered from bad dreams after the incident, but he has progressed well and the prognosis for a normal life appears to be good, Brabham wrote.

Dr. Edward P. Uzee examined the father and concluded Plauche could not tell the difference between right and wrong when he shot Doucet.

GAME

MISD Trustees on Tuesday agreed to allow all three local television stations to bid on the game. Local affiliates have until 5 p.m. Friday to submit written proposals. Ector County Independent School District trustees also must agree to the terms of any contract.

According to MISD Superintendent Dr. Joseph P. Baressi, superintendents and athletic directors of both schools met last week with Eddie Clinton, owner of Clinton Video Productions of Dallas and producer of the syndicated Friday Night Magic, a weekly round-up of high school football highlights from across the state.

Clinton proposed a live telecast in the Permian Basin area on Oct. 10, featuring Permian and Lee. He submitted a written proposal offering to pay each school $3,000 for exclusive coverage, MISD President Bill Jackson reported.

Jackson said neither school has agreed to the terms of Clinton's contract. "We said we'll look at your (Clinton's) proposal, but we'll give these other people a chance to bid on it," he said.

Baressi said the District 4-5A Executive Committee approved televised coverage of the game if it isn't played on Friday night. The Texas-Oklahoma game will be televised the following Saturday, leaving Thursday as the only available date.

If the proposed television deal goes through, it would mean some extra money for both the Midland and Odessa teams. Jackson declined to divulge any additional figures until the negotiations are finalized.

In addition, trustees agreed to consider a proposal by KMID-TV to broadcast delayed coverage of all Midland High and Midland Lee home games. Figures from that proposal also were not released.

The Permian-Lee game historically produces sell-out crowds. Lee has sold all of its available season tickets and only student tickets and tickets for Permian's side of the field have not been sold and won't be available until game week.

Actress Ruth Gordon, 88, dies after 70-year career

EDGARTOWN, Mass. (AP) — Actress Ruth Gordon, whose stage and screen career spanned 70 years and included a supporting actress Oscar for "Rosemary's Baby," died today at her Martha's Vineyard summmer home, police said. She was 88.

"She passed away peacefully in her sleep," said state Trooper James Mettaliano.

She was found by her husband of 43 years, Garson Kanin, a producer and author.

Her screen credits include "Inside Daisy Clover," "Where's Poppa," and "Harold and Maude," about the love between a teen-age boy and an old woman, which attracted a devoted cult following. She was the friendly neighbor devil worshipper in "Rosemary's Baby" and she played Clint Eastwood's mother in "Every Which Way But Loose" and "Any Which Way You Can."

She won an Emmy award for an appearance on the TV show "Taxi" in 1979.

She also wrote two books, "Myself Among Others" and "My Side," an autobiography, as well as three plays. With Kanin, she wrote the screenplays for the hit Spencer Tracy-Katharine Hepburn movies "Adam's Rib" and "Pat and Mike."

"I don't want to boast, but I walk through New York and policemen stop and yell, 'We love you, Ruthie. We just love you,' she said in interview with The Associated Press last November.

"I don't care who remembers me, or for what. I love it. I never get over it. I never get used to it," she said.

Miss Gordon was born in Wollaston on Oct. 30, 1896, daughter of a factory foreman, and grew up in Quincy. She left home at 15, riding a train to New York City with a $50 bill pinned to her corset.

"I wasn't pretty, I was 5 feet tall, I didn't know anyone in New York, I didn't have any talent, I didn't have any money," she once wrote. But she told a crowd in her hometown in November, "I wanted to be an actress. I was going to be an actress."

ECONOMY

Indications are livestock should benefit from bumper harvests, but McClelland thinks "there's a structural change in the demand by consumers for fish and away from red meats." He believes this is something ranchers are going to have to learn to live with.

Projections show construction across the state is going to be mixed, he said, "Because we're overbuilt in office buildings and commercial. I think strip shopping centers and single-family housing are going to do quite well."

One of the major areas of construction strength, McClelland added, will continue to be public works projects, particularly streets, highways, bridges and sewers to accommodate population growth.

Nationally, McClelland believes inflation is going to rise a bit, probably next year, from perhaps four to five percent, but he believes purchasing power, after adjustments for inflation, "is going to continue to trend upward.

According to McClelland, RepublicBank forecasts suggest the "100 percent probability of a recession in late 1986 or early 1987."

Noting that the Federal Reserve has maintained a soft money policy to sustain the recovery, McClelland speculated that in the next year the Fed may decide it's policies let the money supply and credit card use grow too fast and might put on the brakes. Reducing the money supply and availibility of credit would heighten the demand for funds and increase interest rates.

McClelland, who spent 12 years with the Federal Reserve as an economist before joining RepublicBank, noted that the prime interest rate is currently 9½ percent and expressed the belief that by next spring the prime rate will rise to 11 percent, then drop back to about 10 percent about year's end.

Referring to the latest statistics on final demand and personal consumption expenditures, each equaling about five percent annually, McClelland asked, "Why is final demand so strong and we're seeing the economy as a whole so weak?" The answer, he said, is imports.

"Consumers are out there, continuing to buy imported, rather than domestically produced, goods," McClelland said. "That's the reason we've seen industrial production virtually flat for the last year. That's why we see the unemployment rate hung on 7.3 percent for most of this year and the outlook is that the domestic economy will be very sluggish," he said.

Concerning the fact that unemployment figures have remained relatively stable, while total workforce figures increase, McClelland indicated this is partially due to the fact our economy is in transition, from heavy emphasis on industrialization to industries offering personal and technical services. The indication is that many of the unemployed are without the skills required to function in a newly evolving workplace.

Correction

A story in Tuesday's Reporter-Telegram concerning the controversy about selling Ector County Animal Shelter animals to the Texas Tech Research Center, incorrectly stated that Midge Erskine of Midland, who appeared before Ector County Commissioners Monday, on behalf of Texas Tech, opposed the use of shelter animals for medical experimentation.

Ms. Erskine says she "uneqivocally favors" the sale of Animal Shelter animals for medical research purposes to the Texas Tech Research Center because the animals are treated humanely and such research promotes human welfare.

She said she does oppose the practice of animals being picked up indiscriminately in neighborhoods by commericial jobbers or dealers and sold for medical research purposes.

The Reporter-Telegram regrets the error.

Shuttle crew foresees 'easier day'

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — After a frantic first day in space that included an unplanned doubleheader satellite launch, Discovery's astronauts took it easy today, checking out electronic gear they will use in a spacecraft salvage effort Saturday.

That rescue-and-repair effort might be complicated, however, because the "elbow" on the shuttle robot arm does not respond to computer directions and must be operated by tedious manual switches. Officials said the ailment should not block the salvage but could turn it into a longer task.

The 50-foot arm will grasp and hold the Syncom 3 satellite steady after space-walkers James van Hoften and Bill Fisher have secured it by hand and have attached a grapple to it.

"Tomorrow will be a very light day for the crew, which is a fairly well deserved light day," said flight director Bill Reeves Tuesday night. "We rewrote the mission today, at least the first day of it, with real-time planning."

Television from the shuttle cabin showed astronauts van Hoften and Fisher as they began testing the two electronic boxes they plan to attach to the disabled Syncom 3 satellite in an attempt to revive it.

The crew reported seeing the lights of the western Australian city of Geraldton. Citizens there switched on their lights and opened their curtains as a salute to the Australian communications satellite launched from Discovery on Tuesday. It was reminisicent of 1962, when the people of Perth, Australia, did the same thing to honor America's first orbiting astronaut, John Glenn.

"It's a mighty pretty little town," commander Joe Engle said of Geraldton.

Mother who said God told her to kill baby committed to mental hospital

STATE

HOUSTON (AP) — A mother who said she stabbed her son after God told her to was ordered to commit to a state mental hospital after being found innocent by reason of insanity.

State District Judge Joseph Guarino returned the verdict Tuesday on a recommendation by the prosecutor and defense attorney in the case, who agreed Terri Ann Spradlin was insane at the time of the March 27 killing.

Mrs. Spradlin, 30, was accused of stabbing her 5-month-old son, Jordan Timothy. Investigators who went to the Spradlin home in La Porte the day of the killing found a 15-inch butcher knife near the infant's body.

The baby had been stabbed four times, investigators said.

Prosecutor Ned Morris and defense attorney Tom Roberson agreed that Mrs. Spradlin, who told police God wanted her to kill her baby, was insane.

"I don't think that anybody who heard the evidence believes she belongs in the penitentiary," Morris said after resting the state's case Monday.

Guarino ordered Mrs. Spradlin committed to Rusk State Hospital for as long as he feels she poses a danger to herself or others.

Roberson called only one witness — Shirley Andrews, Mrs. Spradlin's mother — in presenting the insanity defense Tuesday. Ms. Andrews testified her daughter was one of 16 children and had been sexually abused by her father.

Morris confirmed that Mrs. Spradlin's father is in prison for the sexual abuse of several of his eight daughters.

Earlier in the trial, psychologist Edward Silverman testified that when he examined Mrs. Spradlin in early April, she told him "she had to save her son Jordan from being kidnapped and converted into the Antichrist."

Silverman said the woman was suffering from an illness similar to schizophrenia but shorter in duration.

Psychiatrist John D. Nottingham testified he examined Mrs. Spradlin in April and described her as "the classic case of a mind that begins to go."

La Porte police officer Sherman Moore testified Mrs. Spradlin met him at the door when he arrived at her home the day of the killing.

"She told me that she had just killed the Christ child," Moore testified.

Moore said police found two Bibles in the home. One was marked in the Book of Ecclesiastes, which reads in part, "Do not long for a brood of worthless children and take no pleasure in godless sons."

LBJ honored on date of his birth

Johnson

WASHINGTON (AP) — A red, white and blue flower wreath was laid at the base of a pink slab of Texas granite that stands in tribute to what would have been Lyndon B. Johnson's 77th birthday.

About 70 people gathered at the LBJ Monument on Tuesday to honor the nation's 38th president. The granite monument is in the LBJ Memorial Grove in Lady Bird Johnson Park, across the Potomac from the Lincoln and Jefferson Memorials.

Harry McPherson, a former White House assistant, said Johnson, who died in Texas in 1973, was an underappreciated "consummate government man."

"When activism is wanted again, as one day it will be, the tremendous example of Lyndon Johnson will be its reference point," McPherson said at the dusk ceremony. "When government is seen once more not as the problem but as society's instrument of doing good for the greatest number, LBJ, the consummate man of government, will be remembered with gratitude and admiration. So I believe."

Former U.S. Senator from Kentucky John Sherman Cooper and others, including several officials from the Johnson administration were at the ceremony Tuesday.

After the wreath-laying and McPherson's speech, American Indian singer Pale Moon Rose sang "Amazing Grace." Then the group retired to drink punch and exchanged stories as recorded cowboy music played and jets taking off from National Airport in nearby Virginia roared overhead.

McPherson said the event, sponsored by the Texas State Society in Washington, is held every year, but it was the first time he had taken part.

"I suppose it's to think on him and kind of share our thoughts on him as somebody who was really an enormous force in all our lives," said McPherson, "and who did quite a lot of good for the country in the view of most of the people around here."

Senator wants seat belt law repealed

AUSTIN (AP) — Just days before it goes into effect, a state senator says the new mandatory seat belt law should be repealed.

Sen. Roy Blake, D-Nacogdoches, said the law takes state government too far into Texans' private lives.

"I wear my seat belts and believe that wearing them saves lives, but I believe when government mandates things on individuals that they could by their own choice do, then government has gone too far," Blake said Tuesday.

Blake said he will introduce a bill in the next session of the Legislature to repeal the seat belt law.

The new law takes effect Sunday, making it a traffic offense to ride in the front seat of an automobile or most pickup trucks without wearing a seat belt.

The penalty for violations will be a $25 to $50 fine, but that doesn't take effect until Dec. 1.

The Legislature in May passed the seat belt requirement under pressure from the federal government and automakers. It was signed into law by Gov. Mark White, who since has appeared in television commercials urging Texans to buckle up.

Florida woman becomes 135th victim of Delta Air Lines crash

DALLAS (AP) — Kathleen Wright of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., has become the 135th person to die as a result of the Delta Air Lines jumbo jet crash at Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport 26 days ago, officials said.

"She died at 9:59 p.m. Her family was here," Claude McCain, vice president for administration at Parkland Memorial Hospital, said this morning.

Mrs. Wright, 49, suffered burns and fractures in the crash, and doctors amputated her lower right leg on Aug. 16 to prevent the spread of potentially fatal bacteria, McCain said.

She remained in critical condition since the crash and died Tuesday night after developing pneumonia earlier in the day, McCain said.

The wife of Broward County, Fla., Judge Zedebee Wright, Mrs. Wright was a Nova University professor and a former Broward County School Board member.

She was the first black to win a countywide office and the first and only black on the board during the eight years she served before retiring in 1982. Although she left the board, she remained involved in the activist community.

Bailiff afraid to touch prisoners

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A bailiff afraid of touching two prisoners who said they had AIDS wore cellophane bags on his hands while bringing the men to court.

"It's my idea," said sheriff's deputy Larry Banda. "I don't want to take any chances of getting AIDS."

The two suspects, charged with public lewdness, pleaded guilty Monday and were placed on probation for a year. The men, both 37, also were ordered by County Court-at-Law Judge Michael Peden to undergo screening for acquired immune deficiency syndrome.

"I don't believe they have it," Peden said. "Apparently they told someone in the jail they had AIDS. I think it was just something to say.

"It gets them treatment at the jail they wouldn't have otherwise and people leave them alone if they think they have AIDS," the judge said.

Board bans advertising on buses

AUSTIN (AP) — Advertising and public service messages will be banned on city buses, the Capital Metropolitan Transportation Authority board has decided.

The seven-member board took the unanimous action Monday after representatives of the Austin Peace and Justice Coalition asked at a board meeting several weeks ago to be allowed to put nuclear disarmament posters on city vehicles.

Cynthia Darwin, spokeswoman for the bus system, said the authority needs space inside the buses to display route information and other material.

Musician released in triple slayings

HOUSTON (AP) — A 24-year-old musician was released from Harris County Jail after being questioned for the three slayings and jailed for possession of marijuana, a jail spokeswoman said.

On Tuesday, State District Judge Bill Harmon approved bonds totaling $200 on one charge of possession of marijuana and two charges of theft against the man, who was arrested Aug. 20.

Police said they were questioning him in the Aug. 13 slayings of Delbert L. Ryan, 33; Audelia Davis, 19; and Tammy L. Wright, 22, all of Houston.

Homicide detectives said they began questioning the man, an acquaintance of Ryan's, in the triple slayings after a police search of his apartment turned up three watches that resembled those worn by the victims.

The three victims were found dead in Ryan's north Houston apartment. Each had been shot once in the head, police said.

Ms. Wright's 2-year-old daughter also was found in the apartment, but she was unharmed and was placed in the care of relatives, authorities said.

TDC inmate stabbed by prisoner

BRAZORIA (AP) — A 25-year-old convict became the 182nd attacked so far this year in the Texas prison system, the nation's second largest, authorities say.

Juan Garza, serving six years for a Bexar County vehicle burglary conviction, was stabbed repeatedly in the chest and neck about 6:15 a.m. Tuesday in a hallway at the Texas Department of Corrections' Clemens Unit, prison spokesman Phil Guthrie said.

Garza was flown by helicopter to the TDC hospital in Galveston, where he was in serious but stable condition with eight stab wounds, Guthrie said.

A 20-year-old inmate serving an eight-year sentence for a Bexar County burglary conviction and a 22-year-old convict sentenced to seven years for a Tarrant County robbery conviction were being questioned, Guthrie said.

An 18-inch metal rod and a screwdriver were found, but authorities weren't sure if the weapons were used in the stabbing, Guthrie said.

Springsteen concert set for Sept. 13

DALLAS (AP) — Bruce Springsteen will include Dallas on his record-setting "Born in the U.S.A." concert tour next month, PACE Concerts president Louis Messina confirmed Tuesday.

After weeks of rumors that Springsteen would come to Dallas, Messina announced that "The Boss" will appear in the 80,000-seat Cotton Bowl on Friday, Sept. 13.

Messina, who promoted Springsteen's first Texas shows in the 1970s and who has promoted the regional legs of his tours since, said a second show may be added for Sept. 14.

Ticket-sale details have not been announced, Rainbow Ticketmaster officials said.

CIA negotiated Nicaraguan rebel deals after ban

By BRIAN BARGER
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — CIA officials negotiated two agreements this year on how rival U.S.-backed insurgent groups should divide privately raised funds and military supplies, Nicaraguan Indian rebel leaders say.

The agreements, in February and June, involved the Nicaraguan Democratic Force, or FDN, which has raised millions of dollars on behalf of all rebel factions, and Misura, the main Indian rebel coalition fighting in Nicaragua's isolated Atlantic coast region, the leaders said Tuesday.

The CIA's reported role in the rebel deals came after Congress banned the agency from "supporting, directly or indirectly, military or paramilitary operations in Nicaragua." Congress passed the ban, known as the Boland amendment, last October. It expires at the end of September.

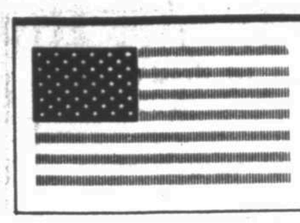

While refusing to comment on the Indian leaders' assertions, CIA spokeswoman Patti Volz said the agency is "complying with congressional obligations and restrictions."

The Indian leaders also contend that despite the agreements, the FDN has failed to live up to the commitments, and has used its control over supplies to wrest control of the Indian movement.

Two congressional panels next month plan to examine whether the Reagan administration complied with the Boland amendment, particularly following reports the National Security Council helped rebels raise money and offered military advice.

Rep. George E. Brown Jr., D-Calif., a member of the House Intelligence Committee, said the panel was aware of "continuing contacts" between the CIA and the rebels, but lacked any "specific knowledge" about the contents of those discussions.

The CIA has "been giving lip service to the Boland amendment, but not fully complying with it," Brown said. "The (administration's) legal eagles are interpreting all of the laws in a way to favor the policies of the president."

The Indian rebel leaders, interviewed Tuesday by The Associated Press, were Teofilo Archibald Wilson, a political director of Misura; Effrain Smith, a member of the Misura military high command and top commander of the Misura-aligned Southern Indigenous Creole Community, or SICC; and Charles Hodgson, an SICC political leader.

They said because the FDN failed to comply with the agreements, the Indians' military campaign against the Sandinista government has been crippled in recent months, and now faces serious shortages of food, uniforms and military equipment.

Bosco Matamoros, the FDN's representative in Washington, denied the charge. "We have always lived up to our obligations," he said. "We have always helped out the other groups when they are in need."

The remarks by the Indian leaders underscore the continuing divisions among the U.S.-backed rebel groups — differences that administration officials complain have weakened the four-year military campaign against the Sandinistas.

The Indian leaders said the first CIA-brokered agreement last February called for providing Misura with 25 percent of the estimated $1 million a month the FDN has raised in the name of all the rebel factions.

"We complained to the Company last February," Wilson said, referring to the Central Intelligence Agency. "We would talk to the Company, and the Company would talk to (FDN leader Adolfo) Calero."

Hodgson and Smith confirmed Wilson's account of the CIA's role in negotiating the agreement.

Wilson and the other leaders said after the agreement was reached, Misura's aid share eventually rose from $2,500 a month to $7,500 a month, but still far short of the agreed amount. He said prior to last year's congressional ban, the CIA in Honduras gave them $80,000 a month.

Wilson also said private donors in the United States supporting his group have used a logistical network set up by the FDN in the United States to funnel the aid, but he complained that the FDN often did not pass on the funds and supplies.

Wilson said subsequent complaints to a U.S. government official in Washington and the CIA in Honduras last June resulted in another agreement.

"They helped us work out a deal for the FDN to give us seven planeloads of supplies," he said, "but so far we have received only two, of ammunition."

"We need boots and uniforms and food and medicine," he said, adding that his men have at times gone days without food. "We don't have any helicopters or airplanes either. The FDN has many, but they won't share anything with us."

Judge sentenced in Chicago's Greylord corruption sweep

CHICAGO (AP) — The highest-ranking judge charged in Operation Greylord, the federal probe of Cook County court corruption, was sentenced Tuesday to 12 years in prison for bribery and case-fixing.

Richard LeFevour, 54, who has been on paid leave from his post as presiding judge of the 1st Municipal District, was automatically stripped of his judgeship upon sentencing.

"The name of Richard LeFevour will be associated with corruption," said U.S. District Judge Charles R. Norgle, who handed down the sentence.

Nineteen court officers and employees have been convicted or pleaded guilty in trials stemming from the 3½-year probe of the nation's largest court system. Three, including one judge, have been acquitted. The remaining six cases have not been resolved.

LeFevour, the third judge found guilty of charges stemming from the investigation, was convicted last month on 59 counts of mail fraud, racketeering and income-tax violations.

During closing arguments at his eight-week trial, prosecutors said the judge peddled justice "like it was apples" and "spent money like a drunken sailor" from 1969 through 1983.

Prosecutors said LeFevour received thousands of dollars in bribes, gifts and the use of automobiles to dismiss parking tickets and fix traffic cases, including drunken driving cases.

Former Cook County Judge Richard LeFevour, walking with his son Rick, left, leaves federal court in Chicago Tuesday after being sentenced to 12 years in prison for taking bribes and fixing traffic cases.

Norgle said the sentence was stiff because most of the counts against LeFevour were directly connected to his position.

"Citizens should expect nothing but the best from their public servants," he said, adding that LeFevour had engaged in criminal conduct that was "repeated, consistent and patterned over an extended period of time."

LeFevour could have been sentenced to up to 300 years in prison and fined $103,000. Norgle said mitigating factors in the sentencing were LeFevour's progressive liver disease and the fact that the defendant "has been financially devastated" by the case.

Norgle gave the defendant an opportunity to comment before sentencing, but LeFevour declined, citing the possibility of appeal.

LeFevour, who is to report to prison by Jan. 2, would be eligible for parole in four years, authorities said.

LeFevour's wife, Virginia, as well as his parish priest and two of his sons, both attorneys, pleaded for leniency, saying LeFevour had been a loving father and husband, had contributed greatly to the community and was in ill health.

"I truly love my father," said Mark LeFevour, an assistant Cook County state's attorney. "I've tried, to no avail, to make sense of the last two years (since his father's name surfaced in the case), and I can't."

He said prosecutors calling for a heavy penalty against his father "don't know the good he is capable of and that he has done."

Government's air safety regulations 'too little, too late'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The explosion and fire that destroyed a British jetliner last week, killing 54 people, focused new attention on the frustrating difficulties and slow progress in finding ways to protect passengers against commercial aircraft fires.

"With this latest disaster, they are going to have to face the facts and decide which is more important — money or lives," says Wayne Williams of the National Transportation Safety Association, a private, Florida-based watchdog group.

Says Daniel T. Smith of Dallas, consumer affairs manager of the International Airline Passengers Association: "Recent efforts by the government are commendable, but as usual it's too little, too late."

For its part, the federal government is concentrating on finding ways to reduce the lethal effects of aircraft fires, notably from smoke and toxic fumes, and prevent leaking fuel from bursting into a catastrophic fireball.

The Federal Aviation Administration was ready late last year, in fact, to order use of a fuel additive designed to prevent the sort of rapidly escalating blaze that engulfed the British Airtours twin-jet Boeing 737 on Aug. 22. But the government backed away after the additive failed to perform as expected in a highly publicized test crash in December.

In any event, says FAA spokesman Fred Farrar, "There's not much that can be done to prevent the fires."

The reason is simple.

A jetliner carries thousands of gallons of extremely volatile fuel, akin to ordinary household kerosene. In addition, some aircraft cabin materials — plastics, wool, acrylics and the like — release lethal gases such as carbon monoxide and hydrogen cyanide when they burn intensely.

In the case of the British Airtours jet, which caught fire as it hurtled down a Manchester, England, runway, press reports said the explosion in the plane's left-hand engine was a "chance-in-a-million" incident caused by failure of the only engine part that could easily rupture a fuel tank and start a fire.

Similarly, investigators speculate that a malfunctioning electrical flush motor in the rear lavatory may have been responsible for a fire that erupted in an Air Canada DC-9 during a flight from Dallas to Toronto in June 1983, forcing the plane to make an emergency landing at Cincinnati. The cause has never been established. Twenty-three people died.

Federal experts say 40 percent of the people who die in plane crashes after surviving the initial impact are killed by fire.

Spurred by the Air Canada fire, the FAA ordered airlines last October to outfit seats and cushions with flame-retardant covers within three years and to install special cabin floor lighting within two years.

The "fire-blocking" seat material is intended to slow the rate of burn in the event of a fire, and to delay by as much as 40 seconds the point at which flammable vapors in the cabin burst into a fireball, which is virtually is almost impossible to survive.

The purpose of the floor lighting is to guide passengers to exits in a smoke-filled cabin.

In March, the FAA ordered installation of smoke detectors in aircraft lavatories within 18 months. In addition, the airlines were given two years to install automatic fire extinguishers in lavatory trash receptacles and hand-held extinguishers in other strategic cabin locations.

The agency is close to issuing a final rule requiring more flame-resistant materials for baggage compartment liners, and is seeking to establish new flammability standards for cabin interiors.

The FAA will meet with airline and airplane manufacturing representatives in Seattle next week to discuss ways to improve emergency evacuations. One of the government's longstanding requirements for certifying a plane as airworthy is the ability to evacuate passengers in 90 seconds in semi-darkness, with half the exits blocked.

The government's difficulties in solving the problem of fire safety were dramatized last December with the embarrassing outcome of the test of a new chemical additive, developed by a British firm, intended to prevent fireball explosions of leaking jet fuel.

The so-called anti-misting agent, called Avgard or AMK, is supposed to turn the highly explosive fuel vapor into a non-flammable gel upon impact. But the FAA's $11.8 million demonstration crash of a remote-controlled Boeing 720 in the Mojave Desert at Edwards Air Force Base, Calif., resulted in the very fireball explosion the additive was supposed to prevent.

FAA administrator Donald Engen said a subsequent investigation indicated that the additive "performed perfectly," and may have helped lessen the intensity of the fire.

Propellor cuts fuselage, causes crisis landing

FRESNO, Calif. (AP) — The propeller of a twin-engine commuter plane pierced the cabin Tuesday and caused it to depressurize, forcing an emergency landing that slightly injured two passengers, authorities said.

Wings West Airlines Flight 602, with 17 people aboard, landed at the Fresno Air Terminal on one engine after its right propeller punctured the fuselage a few feet below a window, said Ben Nicholas, a Federal Aviation Administration supervisor.

The 19-seat Fairchild Metro-2A was flying from Los Angeles to the central California cities of Merced and Modesto at 16,000 feet when engine problems were reported, airport and airline officials said.

The gash in the fuselage was 2-3 feet long, said airline spokeswoman Joanne Dowty.

"When you do have depressurization, the normal thing to do it to descend to an altitude which is considered breathable oxygen, 10,000 feet or below," she said.

Some of the 15 passengers received first-aid for minor cuts and bruises, officials said. A spokeswoman at Valley Medical Center said one passenger was released after treatment, and the other underwent X-rays and likely would be released.

The right engine was hanging from its mounts and turned inward, and its metal shroud was missing, said Ralph Tonseth, Fresno airports manager.

Air defense guns scuttled; Army returns to drawing board

WASHINGTON (AP) — Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger won wide congressional praise for scuttling the Army's troubled Sgt. York air defense gun, a costly weapon that worked no better than the system it was designed to replace.

The decision to cancel the gun means the Army will have to go back to the drawing board to come up with a weapon to defend its infantry troops against aerial attack. The service already has missiles and high-speed guns for that purpose, but says a better system is needed.

"The system didn't work well enough," Weinberger told a Pentagon news conference Tuesday. "That's the simple fact."

"The adage about Weinberger is that he's never seen a weapons system he didn't like, but he's now shown that given the right circumstances, he's not against cancelling a program. It's a very important and dramatic decision," said Sen. Dan Quayle, R-Ind.

It is rare for the Pentagon to kill a weapon after production has begun. Eight years ago, President Carter halted the B-1 bomber program, but only four prototypes had been built and production wasn't started. President Reagan resurrected the plane.

Although Congress is in recess, legislators quickly praised Weinberger's decision and said it would help him as he tries to defend Reagan administration defense budget requests before an increasingly reluctant Congress.

AP Graphic

"THIS GIVES Weinberger tremendous credibility on Capitol Hill," said Sen. Warren Rudman, R-N.H., by telephone from his home. Rudman, a frequent critic of the Sgt. York, said, "it certainly was the right decision."

Rep. Denny Smith, R-Ore., the weapon's chief critic in the House, called Weinberger's decision "a gutsy move" and said it "sends a strong signal to contractors to clean up their act."

A frequent Weinberger critic, Sen. David Pryor, D-Ark., said by telephone from Jonesboro, Ark., that "I must say I am pleasantly surprised. I did not ever think I would see the day when Weinberger would turn thumbs down on a weapon when it's been around so long. It was a turkey."

Sen. Charles Grassley, R-Iowa, another critic, said, "I think it shows Weinberger has gotten some wisdom and shows that when we cut down the budget, the Pentagon has to make some tough decisions."

And Sen. Alan J. Dixon, D-Ill., also a critic, said: "I think it's going to improve his standing with the Congress that he had the courage to do this."

The Sgt. York, also known as Divad for division air defense, was designed to chiefly defend against low-flying Soviet helicopters.

The service had planned to buy 518 of the guns from Ford Aerospace for a total cost of $4.8 billion. The Pentagon had already sunk $1.8 billion into the program and had received 65 Divads.

THE WEAPON consisted of two rapid-firing 40-mm cannons mounted on a modified tank chassis and guided by a radar linked to a computer. It was named after the Army's most decorated hero of World War I.

But it has been plagued by problems, particularly in tests, and Congress last year ordered a halt to production until more tests could be done. Weinberger said those results from earlier this summer convinced him to scrap the program.

"The independent operational tests demonstrated that the system's performance does not effectively meet the growing military threat," he said.

"The tests demonstrated also that while there are marginal improvements that can be made to the Divad, these are not significant compared to the capability to current air defense weapons and therefore not worth the additional costs," he said.

Ford Aerospace, which assembled the weapons at Newport Beach, Calif., said the gun met "contractual specification requirements established by the Army."

Current weapons used by the Army include the Vulcan high-speed gun and Chapparal short-range missiles. Those 20-year-old weapons still need to be replaced, Weinberger said.

ALSO AVAILABLE is the Roland, another ground-to-air missile. The Pentagon planned to buy 7,000 missiles, but cut the program three years ago after costs skyrocketed and now has only 600 Roland missiles.

Besides being inaccurate, Weinberger said, the Sgt. York suffered from "a lack of reliability," meaning it broke down too often.

When the Divad program began eight years ago, the need for the weapon was considered so critical that the Pentagon ordered it built with existing technologies, rather taking time to develop an entirely new system, and decided to begin buying the system before it was fully tested.

Shoe industry scuffed by prediction

Reagan won't polish import quota

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — America's shoe industry, battered by imports from three continents, appears to be facing defeat in its fight for quota or tariff help.

Administration sources said President Reagan was expected to announce today he will neither impose quotas limiting shoe imports nor increase the current tariff of 8.8 percent, as recommended by some advisers.

These sources, speaking on condition they not be named, said the president might, however, invoke a law permitting U.S. retaliation against specific unfair trade practices.

George Langstaff, president of Footwear Industries of America, said such action would do little to protect U.S. producers from imports, which last year captured 71 percent of the U.S. market.

The president, however, is a longtime disciple of free trade and, as recently as Saturday, said he wants to press U.S. trading partners for "open markets in all countries" instead of imposing protectionist measures.

Congressional critics of the president's reported stand predicted that refusal to increase the shoe tariff would lend impetus to more than 300 pieces of protectionist legislation awaiting action on Capitol Hill.

The shoe decision, which had to be made by Sunday because of a U.S. International Trade Commission finding that the industry faces serious damage from imports, is believed to be the last major item on the president's agenda before he returns to Washington from his ranch north of here on Monday, ending a three-week vacation.

The Trade Commission, after finding that employment in the U.S. shoe industry dropped by 8 percent and production by 13 percent last year, recommended on June 12 that the administration establish a sliding scale of quotas that would increase over a five-year period and ultimately be phased out.

Industry leaders testified in hearings before the commission in Washington that 105 U.S. shoe manufacturing plants were closed in 1984 alone.

Three out of four pairs of shoes sold in the United States now are made in foreign countries. Taiwan and South Korea are the principal importers, followed by Brazil, Italy and Spain.

Maine leads the United States in shoe production. Other major shoe manufacturing states are Missouri, Pennsylvania, Massachusetts and Tennessee.

Attending to other matters, Reagan issued a statement Tuesday acclaiming a report from the Census Bureau that the nation's poverty rate showed its first significant decline last year since 1976. The president said this was "further proof that the greatest enemy of poverty is the free enterprise system," but added it "does not mean that the battle against poverty in this country is over."

Data details Sgt. York gun system

WASHINGTON (AP) — Here at a glance are some facts about the Sgt. York gun system scuttled by Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger on Tuesday:

— FORMAL NAME: Division Air Defense gun, known as Divad or Sgt. York.

— PURPOSE: An air-defense gun to replace existing weapons that could operate at night and in bad weather.

— CONTRACTOR: Ford Aerospace & Communications Corp.

— HISTORY: Ford won the contract after a competition with General Dynamics Corp. in 1980. First production contract awarded in May 1981.

— COST: $1.8 billion. Weinberger said cancellation will save $3 billion.

— HOW MANY: The Army had hoped to acquire 618 of the guns. Weinberger said the Army would not accept any more than the 65 already delivered.

— DESCRIPTION: Consists of an M48-A5 tank chassis, equipped with a turret containing two 40mm anti-aircraft cannon. Topped by a radar and laser range-finding units on elevated masts.

— CREW: Normally carries a three-man crew — a driver, gunner and squad leader.

— CANNON RANGE: About 2½ miles.

U.S. poverty-rate drop welcome, but not so rosy at second glance

WASHINGTON (AP) — The decline in the nation's poverty rate is being welcomed, but the greetings are tempered by concerns that the improvement isn't reaching all levels of society.

"At first glance, the Census Bureau's findings look good," Rep. Robert Garcia, D-N.Y., said Tuesday. "But if you dig below the surface, it becomes evident that the plight of minorities, especially Hispanics and blacks, has not dramatically improved."

The Census Bureau said the nation's poverty rate fell to 14.4 percent last year from 15.3 percent in 1983 — removing 1.8 million persons from the poverty rolls and including improvements among the elderly and children.

The bureau said 33.7 million persons were living below the poverty line, down from 35.5 million a year earlier. For a typical family of four, poverty level income in 1984 was $10,609.

The decline in poverty "did not reach all groups. Poverty among young black children increased again...while poverty among Hispanic Americans failed to drop," reported the Center on Budget and Policy Priorities, a Washington research group often critical of the administration.

Center director Robert Greenstein had anticipated the overall decline in poverty, announced Tuesday by the Census Bureau, but said that "while the reduction in poverty is welcome, the degree of reduction is disappointing."

"While we are somewhat encouraged by the decline in poverty statistics in 1984, the decrease...must be viewed in the context of a steady six-year increase in poverty numbers which has put over 33 million Americans at risk of hunger and malnutrition today," said Michael R. Lemov, head of the Food Research and Action Center, a Washington public interest group.

For those under age 18 the poverty rate dropped from 22.2 percent to 21.3 percent. But the Census study showed that for black youths the rate remained constant at 46.5 percent and showed a slight increase from 37.9 percent to 39 percent for Hispanic youths.

"The most distressing aspect of the report is that, despite the significant poverty reduction in the population as a whole, there was no progress in reducing poverty among black and Hispanic children," reflected Rep. Charles B. Rangel, D-N.Y. "The administration should not find much consolation in the report."

"Economic recovery in this nation has translated into progress for the very rich and a reduced standard of living for this country's poor," added Rep. Robert Matsui, D-Calif. "That's the bottom line, and it is unfortunate."

The apparent decline of about 500,000 in the number of poor under age 18 comes in the wake of several years when 3 million or more were added to the poverty rolls, observed Paul Smith of the Children's Defense Fund.

"If this is the best we can do, we have to sustain this rate for six years just to get back to where were were" in 1979, Smith said.

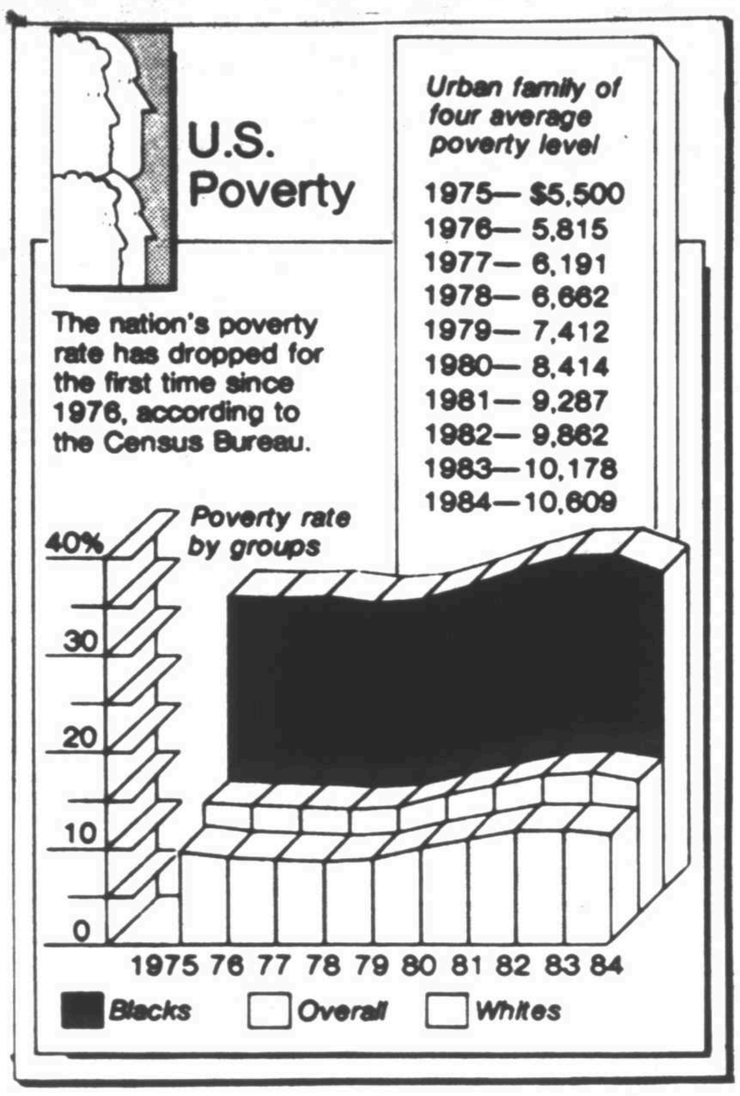

David Liederman, head of the Child Welfare League of America, said that despite the 0.9 percentage point decline in poverty among those under 18, "in the wealthiest country in the world to have 21.1 percent of children living below the poverty line is outrageous and unaccebtable.

"If this is a long term trend and will end up in a significant reduction in the poverty level, we would feel good abouit it. But I can't believe that it is, I don't see the programs that are going to make that happen," he said.

President Reagan said the figures showed that, after a difficult decade, the country was headed in the right direction.

"I believe these numbers are further proof that the greatest enemy of poverty is the free enterprise system," Reagan said in a statement from his Santa Barbara, Calif., ranch.

Kenneth Hoagland of the National Council of Senior Citizens credited cost-of-living increases in Social Security as the reason poverty among the elderly dropped 1.8 percent to 12.4 percent last year.

'Average' civil servant isn't flipping burgers

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — Media reports comparing the "average" pay of government workers with the "average" pay in the private sector always anger some feds, who argue either that the figures are wrong or that the comparisons are irrelevant.

White-collar civil servants in Washington earn an average of $31,187 a year, and the average salary of nonfederal workers is $25,120.

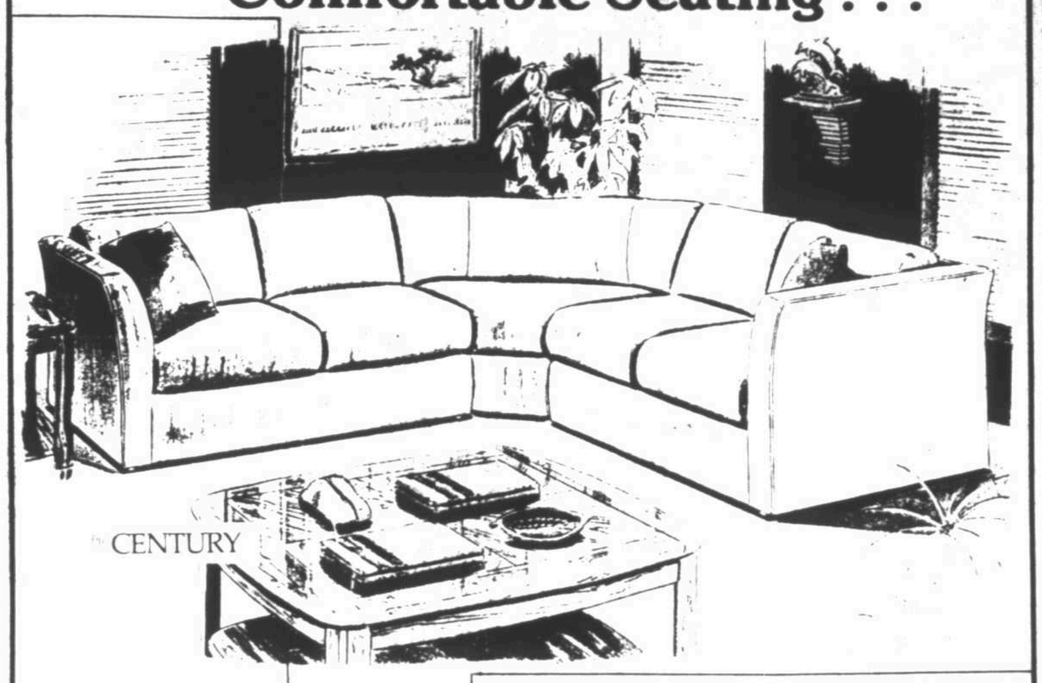

But federal workers who earn less than the average say they don't believe either the Office of Personnel Management's data or the private sector pay information compiled by the Bureau of Labor Statistics.

Feds who earn more than the average say that printing the government-versus-industry pay averages only gives ammunition to people who contend that civil servants are overpaid.

But U.S. government is not private industry.

It does not, for example, have millions of young people earning minimum wages flipping hamburgers at fast food carryouts. Nor does it have Lee Iacoccas or other corporate executives earning the equivalent of a small nation's gross national product.

Senate panel wants to scrub out money launderers, tax havens

By JERRY ESTILL
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The federal government must clamp down on U.S. banks that fail to report large cash deals and then move aggressively against foreign firms that act as tax havens and money launderers, a Senate panel said today.

The report by the Senate Permanent Subcommittee on Investigations came one day after the Treasury Department announced a record $2.25 million fine against Crocker National Bank of San Francisco for unreported currency transactions.

While the 180-page subcommittee document concentrates on problems with offshore banks — mainly in the Caribbean — it also notes that U.S. law enforcement officials are having difficulty tracking millions of dollars in illicit money that flows through domestic banks.

"The United States government must insure that its own house is in order if it is to expect the cooperation of offshore financial institutions and haven governments," the report said.

Even though the Senate panel's report discusses the use of offshore banks as tax havens for money earned legitimately in the United States, the focus is on laundering drug money.

"Realistically, we're talking dope here," said a subcommittee staffer who briefed reporters on condition he not be quoted by name.

"Our government has repeatedly been frustrated in trying to obtain the cooperation of foreign countries to track down the sources of dirty money laundered through offshore banks," subcommittee Chairman William V. Roth Jr., R-Del., said in a statement accompanying the report. "While we should continue to negotiate with those nations which are willing to consider exchanges of information, it's time to get tough with the tax havens that insist on playing Pontius Pilate while the drug pushers and other criminals exploit their banking systems to the detriment of our citizens."

Among possible sanctions, the report suggested:

— Making loans from tax havens reportable as taxable income in the United States.

— Denying federal tax deductions for expenses or losses incurred during transactions involving havens.

— Requiring U.S. corporations to treat haven income the same as U.S. income for tax purposes.

— Requiring U.S. banks to report all financial transactions involving havens.

— Limiting direct airline flights to and from haven countries.

The report discusses conditions in nearly two dozen "principal haven" countries, placing particular emphasis on the Bahamas, the Cayman Islands and Panama.

In the Treasury Department's action against Crocker, the bank was fined under the Bank Secrecy Act, which requires banks to report all cash transactions larger than $10,000.

Department officials said there was no evidence the bank itself deliberately engaged in money laundering. But Assistant Treasury Secretary John M. Walker Jr. said "Crocker's reporting failures were systemic and pervasive."

The department said $3.43 billion of the $3.88 billion not reported by Crocker from 1980 to 1984 had come from six banks in Hong Kong. Other violations involved Crocker branch banks located along the border with Mexico.

NATION IN BRIEF

Three die in plane crash

CONOVER, N.C. (AP) — A commuter plane thought to be carrying three people crashed in a residential area early today, breaking apart and killing all aboard, officials and witnesses said.

"There were no survivors," said Steve Hedrick, director of communications for the Catawba County sheriff's department.

The Sunbird Airlines plane, en route from Hickory to Charlotte, went down at about 1:45 a.m. just south of Interstate 40, he said. It crashed in a wood, snapping branches of trees and clipping power lines.

"It was about 75 feet away from the house. It barely did miss it," said resident Bradley Schronce. He said the plane clipped several power lines and some trees behind his house and left a large crater. He said the tail of the plane was up in a tree.

Commuter train burns

NEW YORK (AP) — Fire broke out today on a commuter train stored in a tunnel beneath Grand Central Terminal, shutting off power and stopping all rush-hour trains from entering or leaving the station, officials said.

John Clinch, an Emergency Medical Services spokesman, said eight people, including two firefighters, were taken to hospitals suffering from smoke inhalation.

According to Fireman Romeo Ingenice, the fire broke out at 5:15 a.m. in a six-car Metro-North passenger train stored in a tunnel beneath the station.

Fire Commissioner Joseph Spinnato said officials found cooking and bedding materials in one of the cars "which could indicate the presence of squatters." He said, however, it was not known if that was the cause of the blaze.

Chemical fumes spread

WEST CHESTER, Pa. (AP) — Federal and state officials today investigated a runaway chemical reaction that spread irritating fumes from a suburban plant 20 miles east into Philadelphia, injuring 27 people and threatening a mass evacuation.

At one point, authorities in a 12-square-mile area stood ready to evacuate up to 40,000 residents, West Chester police officer Robert Gallen said.

The emergency ended at 3 a.m., four hours after about 2,000 gallons of chemicals in a reactor at the Sartomer Co. chemical plant reached a "very, very high temperature" and triggered a safety vent, said company President Nicholas Trainer.

Gallen said the leak was contained by 50 firefighters wearing gas masks who trained water on the overheated reactor for several hours.

FAA to probe engines

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Aviation Administration said today it plans to order airlines to examine engines of the type involved in the explosion and fire of a British charter airliner that killed 54 people.

Last week's accident in Manchester, England, is believed by investigators to have been caused when one of the Boeing 737's engines broke apart, rupturing a fuel tank and causing an explosion as the plane was taking off.

FAA spokesman Richard Stafford said today that no order has yet been issued to examine the engines, the Pratt & Whitney model JT-8D, which is the most widely used jet engine in commercial aviation and is used in about two-thirds of the 3,000 jetliners in U.S.service.

He said an order requiring the inspections "probably will be issued within the next few days" and will be designed not to interfere with airline schedules.

Baby Doe given funeral

REDWOOD CITY, Calif. (AP) — A newborn girl who was found strangled in a trash can was given a funeral by police officers investigating the slaying.

"We figured society is no better than the killer if we just did the usual thing and let the coroner's office dispose of the body," said Redwood City police officer Jim Granucci.

"I never want to go through something like this again in my career," Granucci said after Tuesday's 15-minute service at Redwood Chapel, less than a block from where the baby's body was found on Aug. 16.

The infant had been strangled with a rubber band tightened around her neck. The body was wrapped in a trash bag and dumped into the bin.

Nothing stops Bailey

NEW YORK (AP) — Despite a train crash in Ohio and a lengthy traffic jam on the New Jersey Turnpike, Pearl Bailey made the American Lung Association's 1985 Christmas Seal cermonies in the nick of time, but just after Dolly Parton was asked to appear in her place.

Miss Bailey, the 1985 national Christmas Seal chairman, had a date Tuesday with New York City school children in Central Park, where the association had set up a plaster snowman, a replica of the 1985 seal of a snowman with carrot nose, scarf and holly-bedecked top hat.

But when she failed to arrive as the ceremonies were about to start, the association asked Miss Parton, who happened to be lunching at the nearby Tavern on the Green, to fill in by posing for pictures with the children and snowman. Just as the cameras started clicking, Miss Bailey's car pulled up.

Windmills go to Africa

BEATRICE, Neb. (AP) — Church officials are seeking 11 tons of donated food and other goods to fill out a shipping container carrying five windmills made in this southwest Nebraska town to three African nations.

The windmills, built by Dempster Industries and ordered by Evangelical Baptist Missions of Kokomo, Ind., will be used for long-term self-help projects that include five deep wells equipped with hand and windmill pumps.

Each 12-foot diameter windmill will be the center of 72 gardens and 144 houses in Mali, Niger and Northern Benin, officials say. The windmills will be shipped, disassembled, in a 20-foot container that holds 19 tons.

Because the windmills weigh only 8 tons, the mission board of the First Baptist Church of Beatrice is looking for donations, said Gwen Kennedy, who is heading the drive to get food, tools or other supplies.

Sources: Kohl to fire chief of intelligence

BONN, West Germany (AP) — Chancellor Helmut Kohl will fire the head of West Germany's intelligence agency as a result of the country's spy scandal, high-ranking government sources said today.

The sources, speaking on condition they not be identified, told The Associated Press that Kohl informed Heribert Hellenbroich, the intelligence agency chief, of his decision during a meeting this morning.

Hellenbroich has been in charge of the agency for less than a month. He was formerly in charge of Bonn's counter-espionage service, where Hans Joachim Tiedge worked as a section chief in charge of counter-spy activities against East Germany.

Tiedge defected to East Germany last week, and since then reports of a series of personal problems have surfaced.

Kohl also faces growing pressure to fire the interior minister because of Tiedge's defection.

Opposition Social Democratic leader Hans-Jochen Vogel on Tuesday demanded the resignation of Interior Minister Friedrich Zimmermann, saying: "If a disaster of this scope happens you have to take responsibility and resign."

Zimmermann's ministry deals with interior security matters.

Three other people being investigated for possible espionage activity have disappeared, and are presumed also to have fled to East Germany.

A secretary in President Richard von Weizsaecker's office was arrested last Saturday in connection with the scandal, and authorities have started an espionage investigation against an employee of the Koblenz-based military procurement office.

Vogel said the spy scandal "has shaken the trust of our allies in our capability to operate effectively in the protection of our own interests."

The opposition leader said he would demand a special session of Parliament to discuss Zimmermann's handling of the affair if Kohl does not dismiss Zimmermann soon, or the minister does not resign.

However, the chief government spokesman, Friedhelm Ost, said in an interview with the ARD television network that Zimmermann would not be removed. Vogel spoke at a news conference following a four-hour meeting of the parliamentary control commission during which Zimmermann and other ranking Interior Ministry officials briefed the committee on the progress of the spy investigations.

The control commission oversees West Germany's intelligence agencies.

Kohl's office said the chancellor found it "completely inexplicable" that Tiedge stayed on the job despite a drinking problem and severe family troubles.

Government officials and Tiedge's neighbors have reported that he drank heavily, suffered severe bouts of depression brought upon by the death of his wife three years ago and faced personal debts of up to $83,000.

Nigerian leader pledges reform of economy, review of detainees

ABIDJAN, Ivory Coast (AP) — The Nigerian army's chief of staff, who assumed the presidency in a coup against another military government, pledged to improve the economy, review the cases of prisoners awaiting trial and reform the secret police.

Maj. Gen. Ibrahim Babangida, named president Tuesday night after the West African nation's sixth coup since gaining independence from Britain in 1960, made the pledges in a 14-minute address on Nigerian Radio, monitored in Abidjan.

The new regime accused the 20-month-old military government of Maj. Gen. Muhammadu Buhari of abusing power and failing to revive the country's faltering economy, which has been hobbled by the drop in world oil prices.

The London Times quoted diplomatic sources as saying army officers undertook Tuesday's coup to pre-empt a takeover by junior officers restive over Buhari's failure to solve the economic problem. There were no reports of any violence.

Babangida, a Moslem from northern Nigeria and a respected career soldier in his 40s, declared in his radio address: "Regrettably, it turned out that Maj. Gen. Buhari was too rigid and uncompromising in his attitude to issues of national significance."

"Efforts to make him understand that a diverse (country) like Nigeria requires recognition and appreciation of differences in both cultural and individual perception only served to aggravate his attitude."

Babangida joined the army after leaving high school and is reported to be popular with the nation's soldiers.

He helped engineer the coup on Dec. 31, 1983, that overthrew the civilian government of President Shehu Shagari and put Buhari in power.

Babangida became army chief of staff after the 1983 coup and served on the 14-member Supreme Military Council under Buhari.

He accused Buhari of continuing the mistakes of the civilian government, including mismanagement of the economy, lack of public accountability, insensitivity by the political leadership and a deterioration in living standards.

Babangida promised to overhaul the country's feared secret police, release jailed journalists and review the cases of other detainees awaiting trial. More than 500 people are believed to have been arrested after the 1983 coup and many still await trial.

Some former government officials who were put on trial by Buhari were sentenced to up to 22 years in prison.

The initial announcement of the coup was broadcast on regional radio stations throughout Nigeria.

The coup came immediately after the feast day of Eid el-Kabir, which most members of the large Moslem community celebrate at home. According to Nigeria analysts in London, Buhari himself was at home, away from Lagos, while his second-in-command, Maj. Gen. Tunde Idiagbon, was in Saudi Arabia on a religious pilgrimage.

There was no immediate indication of 42-year-old Buhari's whereabouts. Western news reports said he had been ill recently.

Oil brought an economic boom to Nigeria's 83 million inhabitants in the 1970s, but slumping oil prices led to recession in the 1980s, aggravated by corruption and mismanagement.

Live Aid organizers focus on long-term projects

LONDON (AP) — Organizers of the Live Aid famine-relief concert say they already have bought trucks to help supply food to starving Africas, and that they want to concentrate on other long-term projects to ensure the $58 million they earned is not wasted.

Bob Geldof, lead singer of the Boomtown Rats rock group who had the idea for the July 13 trans-Atlantic concert, said Tuesday he wants to spend money on projects such as well-drilling, orphanages, and developing new crops, tools and technology.

"We have to sit down, assess the situation and spend the money where it is needed," he said.

Money already has been spent on trucks to supply feeding camps, he said.

Geldof spoke at the launch of an official Live Aid book amid criticism of the pace at which aid is reaching Africa.

London's Sunday Express newspaper said Live Aid has $53 million in the bank, but that it has bought no food or medicine.

Philip Rusted, a Live Aid trustee just back from a visit to Sudan to help organize aid distribution, said it was wrong to be impatient. Rusted also said donations totaled $58 million "and more is still coming in."

"The country is very, very big," he said. "There are a lot of problems there, and it would be quite easy to pour $58 million literally down the drain in the Sahara. Without proper organization, proper budgeting and allocation of money, I don't think the trust would be prepared to spend a lot of money and send it straight into the Sahara."

Geldof said he hoped that Nobel Peace Prize-winner Mother Theresa would help to run a chain of orphanages in famine-hit countries, but said she had not yet been asked.

Walesa: Union must cultivate grass roots

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Solidarity leader Lech Walesa has urged the outlawed trade union's supporters to turn from mass protests to rebuilding the labor movement at the local level.

Walesa issued his statement Tuesday, in advance of the Aug. 31 fifth anniversary of agreements with the government that created the Soviet bloc's first free trade union.

Communist authorities will not succeed in their efforts to destroy those "who dream about life in freedom and democracy," he said. The shipyard electrician founded Solidarity in 1980 and won the 1983 Nobel Peace Prize.

The statement was read over the telephone to Western reporters from Walesa's apartment in Gdansk. Walesa works in the Lenin Shipyard, site of the strikes in 1980 that spread across Poland and gave birth to Solidarity.

Solidarity was suspended with the imposition of martial law Dec. 13, 1981, and outlawed the following autumn.

"Five years ago we took a huge gulp of democracy," Walesa said. "I would like to remind those in power that the authorities pass away but the nation remains. No nation, and in particular the Polish nation, will give up freedom for slavery and democracy for dictatorship."

Walesa, 41, said: "Demonstrations and strikes in our country, where big...police forces exist, bring considerable losses among those who take part and...for these reasons we resort to them cautiously."

"We do not need millions of demonstrators fighting against police, but small, wise groups composed of thinking people with broad horizons, building slowly but effectively concrete programs," he said.

Walesa said Solidarity must offer positive solutions to Poland's social and economic problems rather than only opposing government policies.

"These solutions are in particular needed at the lowest levels of the society's structures, in factories and enterprises," he said. "We are for the time being not interested in central or provincial levels."

Soviets mourn Samantha Smith

New York Times News Service

MOSCOW — The death of Samantha Smith in an airplane crash Sunday was widely reported in the Soviet press Tuesday, and the schoolgirl who traveled to the Soviet Union at the invitation of the Soviet leader Yuri V. Andropov was depicted as a child who became a champion of peace after her visit.

Newspapers, television and the Soviet press agency Tass carried emotional accounts of Samantha's death. Komsomolskaya Pravda, the Communist youth newspaper, began its account with the Tass report of the accident, then wrote: "Frightening, scalding news has come across the ocean: Samantha is no more."

Couples probably won't be bored with new board game

BALTIMORE (AP) — Dr. Ruth Westheimer and a Baltimore game manufacturer hope to send countless couples racing along the Arousal Track on their way to Mutual Pleasure.

That journey is the object of a board game called "Dr. Ruth's Game of Good Sex," which will hit the stores in September.

It is based on the radio and television call-in shows featuring the 57-year-old sex therapist, who looks and sounds more like a favorite aunt than someone who gives advice on foreplay.

The game, recommended for players 21 and older, is expected to sell for $24.95.

"It fills a function in an enjoyable way," Dr. Ruth says. "If it can replace one night of TV watching, it might be very nice for interaction."

The game is to be played by two to four couples, who can advance their game piece around the board by correctly answering questions on oral sex, clitoral vs. vaginal orgasms and a wide range of other sexual topics. The Arousal Track covers four areas: Isn't it Romantic?; In the Mood; Preliminaries, and, finally, The Act.

It will have a true-false section called "Ask Dr. Ruth," a multiple choice section called "Sex Clinic," and "Interaction Cards" that will require partners to match each other's answers. The game will contain 600 questions.

These are a couple of the tamer selections from the true-false category:

(1) Sexual partners should never, ever indulge in sexual encounters except in a suitable setting with plenty of foreplay and afterplay.

(2) A good lover is one who will do whatever his or her partner suggests in the way of sexual activity.

Responding "false" to both statements moves a couple a bit closer to Mutual Pleasure.

About the first statement, Dr. Ruth says: "In a good relationship where most sexual encounters involve good foreplay and afterplay in a secure place that sets the mood, a rough-and-tumble, playful quickie now and then adds to the variety so essential for keeping a sexual relationship fresh and stimulated."

Her response to No. 2: "In sexual relations, you can perform well without being prepared for everything in the total catalog of human sexuality."

The game will be manufactured and shipped by Monarch-Avalon Inc., a 25-year-old Baltimore company that is the creator of 300 other games, including the James Bond series and sports games sold with the Sports Illustrated imprint. Victory Games, a New York subsidiary of Monarch-Avalon, has handled the design, research and marketing.

The idea for the game was brought to Victory by the William Morris Agency, which represents Dr. Ruth. Before agreeing that Victory would be the game's designer, Dr. Ruth met with company representatives, said Jerry Glichenhouse, Victory's vice president and director of marketing.

"She insisted on meeting the people," Glichenhouse said from his New York office.

When asked why she chose Victory, Dr. Ruth said, "Their competence on how to do the game, and the chemistry, was right."

All the questions are drawn from "Sexually Speaking," the therapist's radio program, "Good Sex," her cable television program, and from her therapy and teaching experiences.

"It's exactly the way I talk," Dr. Ruth said of the presentation of the material.

The public apparently likes the way she talks. The radio program now reaches listeners over more than 60 stations nationwide, and 3,000 callers try to get through to the cable program each of the six nights a week it's on.

"Ruth is extremely popular and in great demand," Glichenhouse says. "We're going to sell a lot of the game. It's going to cut across all age categories.

"Put Paperwork in Its Place," is written by three farmers' wives who have devised a bookkeeping system to get farmers organized.

Book helps farmers keep their books

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. (AP) — Bookkeeping on the farm: A grain receipt blows out the pickup window, planting data scrawled on an envelope is washed with the bib overalls, and a fertilizer bill disappears in a six-month pile of paper.

These mistakes might have been merely annoying when agriculture was economically healthy. But declining grain sales and rising production costs and interest rates have combined in recent years to depress farm income and land values. The U.S. Agriculture Department says farm income will drop this year more than 24 percent from 1984.

That means lapses in bookkeeping can spell bankruptcy, say three farm wives who have devised a bookkeeping system to get farmers organized.

The Agriculture Department says farm income will drop this year to between $22 billion and $26 billion, down from $34.6 billion in 1984.

Their book, "Put Paperwork in its Place," gives farmers a step-by-step plan for keeping good records — just "paperwork shortcuts," said one of the authors, Ann Jorgensen of Garrison, Iowa.

"It makes you really look at the figures to see if you're making money or losing money so you can react in the proper way," Mrs. Jorgensen said. "We're in an economic time where your banker wants to know your cash flow, profit projection and cost of production — all pencil-pushing activities."

The problem, said Mrs. Jorgensen, is that farmers traditionally have concentrated on raising crops while shunning paperwork.

"They tend to buy a desk, let papers pile up and not know how to file them," she said.

The book outlines basic plans for sorting the "tons of paper that arrive in the mail every day," from farm magazines and tax bills to business letters and junk mail. The book offers a system for creating files for important items "so information flows and doesn't get into a bottleneck. Do a little filing every day and it's a piece of cake."

There are motivational tips, such as put a red dot on a document each time it is handled, and "if it gets measles, you've wasted a lot of time."

Mrs. Jorgensen said farmers often write important field information on a scrap of paper or the back of an envelope, then put in in their pocket.

"It gets washed and your whole history can be wiped out."

Such problems can be solved by carrying a small metal storage box with a clipboard on top. Notes and receipts can be slipped safely inside and taken to the office for filing on a regular basis.

The book, published by Wallace Homestead Book Co. in Lombard, Ill., also urges farmers to get away from the "buy it in the spring and pay for it in the fall" system and to ask suppliers to send monthly bills.

Mrs. Jorgensen said she and co-authors Julianne Anderson of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, and Janice Geiken of Vinton, Iowa, developed an efficient farm office system through "the trial-and-error method — a poor use of time," and decided to write the book to save others that trouble.

Good records allow farmers to create the kind of economic projections bankers seek so they are "comfortable with your business," said Mrs. Jorgensen.

The women also distribute a "Farm Home Offices" catalog in which they offer custom-designed worksheets and other office supplies to make farm bookkeeping easier.

"Farmers are now convinced they need to do this. We just need to show them how — get them over their fear," she said.

Substantial majority of blacks favor sanctions, poll reveals

By R. GREGORY NOKES

WASHINGTON (AP) — A new poll showing that a lopsided majority of South Africa's urban black population favors economic sanctions threatens to erode President Reagan's argument that sanctions shouldn't be imposed because blacks would be hurt by them.

Reagan is clearly leaning to vetoing sanctions, although he won't say for sure. He apparently first wants to be certain lawmakers wouldn't vote to override his veto. Congress is expected to send him a sanctions bill soon after returning from its recess in September.

The bill already has been approved by the House and is awaiting Senate approval, which is seen as certain. It would put curbs on sales of nuclear equipment and computers, ban imports of South African gold coins and bar new loans to the South African government.

In an interview last weekend, Reagan said sanctions would increase unemployment and cause "setbacks in gains that have been made by labor and by the blacks in South Africa." He said "they would hurt the very people we want to help."

The administration argues — and there is evidence to back its claim — that U.S. economic ties provide a vehicle for encouraging fair employment practices for blacks.

But a poll conducted by the Sunday Times of London found that 77 percent of urban blacks in the survey favored economic sanctions anyway as a way of putting pressure on the regime of President P.W. Botha to dismantle apartheid. Many who were polled acknowledged they personally would suffer under sanctions.

Urban blacks often are better off than those outside the cities. They number about 9 million, less than half of the total black population of 24 million, but they are the ones who work in the nation's factories, including U.S.-owned industries, and would be first to suffer if sanctions did hurt South Africa's economy.

The newspaper said its poll marked a reversal of previous polls showing "a slim black majority against sanctions."

One poll that showed the opposite results — an overwhelming black majority against sanctions — was conducted in August 1984 and partly financed by the U.S. State Department. According to that poll, 74 percent of the surveyed blacks said they would be opposed to such an extreme sanctions as withdrawing foreign investment from South Africa.

The State Department has frequently cited that poll as evidence for its view that blacks oppose economic sanctions. The department said it wasn't unusual that the government would help finance such a poll.

The newspaper said the poll was conducted of 400 blacks in a string of South African cities by Markinor, a Gallup-affiliated organization. The newspaper said the survey, done by interviews, was made last week and had a margin of error of plus or minus 5 percentage points.

South Africa's racial turmoil

September, 1984: Prime Minister P.W. Botha becomes state president under new constitution that includes voting rights for Asians and coloreds (people of mixed race), but excludes 24 million blacks.

October: Anglican Bishop Desmond Tutu wins Nobel Peace Prize. In sweeps through riot-torn townships, 340 are arrested.

November: Thousands join general strike against use of army in townships; 22 are killed.

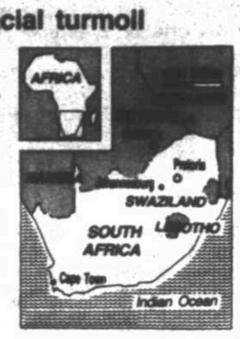

December: Government brings treason charges against 31 activists, including leaders of United Democratic Front, largest anti-apartheid group.

January, 1985: Botha offers to free Nelson Mandela, jailed leader of banned African National Congress [ANC], if he'll renounce violence. Mandela says government must first renounce violence, lift ban and free other imprisoned leaders.

February: Rumors that government plans move of 100,000 squatters from shanty town near Cape Town trigger riots; 18 die.

March: Police shoot into a crowd of black marchers in Uitenhage, killing 20, on the 25th anniversary of 1960 Sharpeville riots.

May: Black trade union leader Andries Raditsela dies of head injuries two days after police detain him. Two other activists later die in similar circumstances.

June: South African troops raid alleged ANC targets in Botswana, killing 12. U.S. recalls its ambassador in protest. Bodies of prominent black activist Matthew Goniwe and three colleagues are found stabbed and burned in eastern Cape Province.

July 20: Botha declares state of emergency in 36 black towns, the first since 1960. Police and soldiers are given sweeping powers to make arrests and impose curfews and censorship beginning July 21.

July 25: In the first five days of the state of emergency, nearly 800 persons had been arrested and 15 have died.

An Analysis

Clerics outspoken opponents of apartheid

By JAMES F. SMITH

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — South Africa's clergymen have assumed a prominent role in the struggle against apartheid, preaching the urgency of change to whites and the hope of peaceful gains to blacks.

Black Anglican Bishop Desmond Tutu is the best known of a half-dozen prominent church leaders who are pressing the government to make concessions before a bloody conflict becomes inevitable. Hundreds more rank-and-file clerics are working quietly in black townships and white suburbs, often a buffer between the haves and have-nots.

"Whether we like it or not, we are right there in the middle of it," said the Rev. Peter Storey, head of the Methodist Church, after he and eight other top church officials met this month with President P.W. Botha. It was the highest-ranking anti-apartheid delegation to see Botha in a year of black unrest that has left more than 600 dead.

The role of the churches has become more critical as opposition activists are detained without charge or put on trial for treason. More than 2,000 people have been held under a state of emergency declared July 21.

In this leadership vacuum, churchmen are more than counselors. Tutu, the 1984 Nobel Peace Prize winner, waded into a crowd of angry black mourners at a funeral for a riot victim last month and saved the life of a suspected informer. It was the third time in three weeks that he personally interceded to defuse a confrontation.

White and black clerics have been arrested, banned and harassed for what the white government regards as political meddling.

On Tuesday, the Rev. Allan Boesak, the mixed-race president of the 70-million member World Alliance of Reform Churches, was jailed without charge.

Salvadoran security forces arrest three implicated in terrorist attack

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Authorities have arrested three men they suspect of being part of the leftist terror squad that sprayed a cafe with gunfire, killing 13 people, including six Americans, President Jose Napoleon Duarte said.

A fourth suspect was wounded in the June 19 attack and died in a hospital, Duarte said Tuesday at a news conference.

He said security forces still were hunting seven other suspects, five of whom have been identified.

A statement issued at the news conference identified all 11 suspects as members of the Central American Revolutionary Worker's Party, which claimed responsibility for the attack.

The guerrilla group is the smallest of the organizations making up the Farabundo Marti National Liberation Front, which has been fighting the U.S.-backed government for the past 5½ years. Known by its Spanish initials PRTC, the group recently has been mounting urban raids.

Duarte's announcement came a day after Attorney General Santiago Mendoza Aguilar said he was reopening the investigation into the 1980 assassination of Archbishop Oscar Arnulfo Romero. No arrests have been made in the case, in which human rights activists claim a rightist death squad was involved.

In the cafe attack, PRTC guerrillas drove a truck to two sidewalk cafes in the capital, jumped off and opened fire with automatic weapons at cafe patrons.

Among those killed were four off-duty U.S. Embassy Marine guards, two American businessmen, one Guatemalan and a Chilean. At least 15 other people were wounded.

The Pentagon identified the Marines as Sgt. Thomas T. Handwork, 24, Beavercreek, Ohio; Cpl. Gregory H. Weber, 22, Cincinnati, Ohio; Sgt. Bobby J. Dickson, 27, Tuscaloosa, Ala., and Cpl. Patrick R. Kwiatkowski, 20, Wausau, Wis.

The American businessmen were George Viney, 48, of Miami; and Robert Alvidrez, 47, of Lexington, Mass. Both worked for Wang Laboratories, a computer company.

El Salvador reopens cases of political killings

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — The new attorney general in San Salvador is dusting off cases of political killings, some involving American victims, after years of little or no activity.

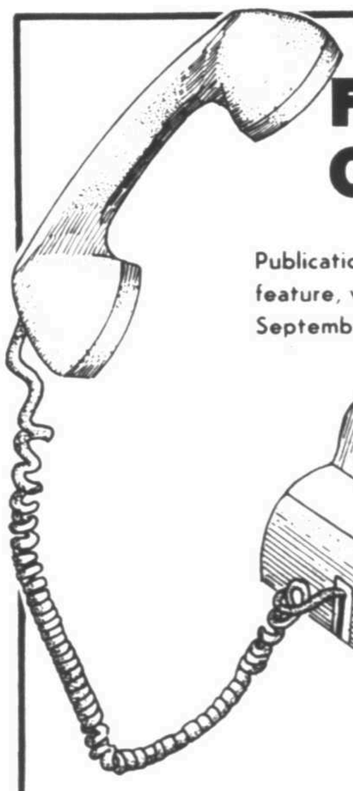

Most of the killings were in the early 1980s, and while none of the cases ever has been closed officially, most have been inactive for lack of new evidence. El Salvador's far right or the military have been implicated in nearly all of the cases.

A lack of action on the cases often has been used by opponents of American aid to El Salvador as examples of human rights problems.

Attorney General Santiago Mendoza Aquilar was appointed after a new moderate-dominated National Assembly fired the old attorney general, Jose Francisco Guerrero. The assembly claimed Guerrero, a member of the rightist Republican Nationalist Alliance, or ARENA, had not actively pursued the cases.

On Monday, Mendoza Aguilar reopened the case of Archbishop Oscar Arnulfo Romero, killed by a gunman on March 24, 1980.

No arrests have been made.

WORLD IN BRIEF

British aviation agency orders checks of engines

LONDON (AP) — The Civil Aviation Authority on Tuesday ordered urgent checks of jet engines similar to one that apparently caused last week's Manchester Airport crash in which 54 people perished.

It said the order was issued following the discovery of "extensive cracking" in the combustion chambers of six Boeing 737 engines.

The order resulted in the grounding of several British commercial aircraft, but it could not be immediately determined how many.

It said a preliminary investigation of Thursday's crash of a British Airtours Boeing 737 at Manchester while taking off "indicates that combustion chamber deterioration could have caused overheating of the combustion chamber outer casing leading to its failure."

The authority said some planes that had flown more than 12,000 hours on modified Pratt and Whitney JT8D engines would have to be grounded until their engines could be stripped down or X-rayed. Others now abroad would have to fly home without passengers.

JAL interim report released

TOKYO (AP) — An "abnormal impact" aboard a Japan Air Lines jumbo jet set off mechanical failures that caused the plane to crash 32 minutes later, killing 520 of the 524 people aboard, the Transport Ministry said Tuesday.

A 60-page interim report noted the pilot said "we'll hit the mountain" and "raise the nose, raise the nose, power," just before the Boeing 747SR crashed Aug. 12 in history's worst single-plane disaster.

The airplane slammed into a remote mountaintop about 70 miles northwest of Tokyo at 6:56 p.m. on a flight from Tokyo to Osaka.

Officials said information in the report was taken mostly from the plane's flight and voice recorders, which were recovered only slightly damaged.

The report by a Transport Ministry investigation committee pinpointed when the mechanical failures began and gave details of how the plane flew wildly for more than 30 minutes.

Brazil minister sworn in BRASILIA, Brazil (AP) — Dilson Funaro became Brazil's finance minister Tuesday. He pledged social justice and "responsible growth" in this South American nation, whose foreign debt of more than $100 billion is the largest in the developing world.

After the swearing-in by President Jose Sarney, former Finance Minister Francisco Dornelles transferred his title to Funaro at a ministry reception.

Dornelles resigned suddenly Monday. He gave no reason, but on Friday the president had fired Dornelles' deputy, Sebastiao Vital, who had criticized government economic policies.

Funaro announced that Fernao Bracher, vice president of the Bradesco group, would be the new central bank president, replacing Antonio Carlos Lemgruber, who also resigned Monday. The Bradesco group is Latin America's largest financial institution, involving banks and other services.

Funaro, 52, said his first priority would be fighting inflation, now running at an annual rate of 217 percent. He also promised "rigorous controls on spending."

Mexicans blockade office

MONTERREY, Mexico (AP) — About 200 workers at Conasupo, a chain of low-price food stores owned by the federal government, pressed demands for wage increases Tuesday by blocking the doors to the Monterrey office, leaving about 70 employees captive inside.

The blockade began Monday during working hours when about 150 employees were inside the building. More than half, mostly women, were released during the afternoon.

The workers, employed in the food chain's rural outlets, came in trucks to this Nuevo Leon state capital from areas in the state and neigboring Coahuila state to demand an 18 percent pay increase and that higher quality products be sold in the stores.

In a list of demands they said they planned to submit to Carlos Chavarria, the regional store manager, the workers also asked for reimbursement for operating costs and immediate negotiations.

Panel travels to Hanoi

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — A U.S. delegation is on its way to Hanoi to resume talks with Vietnamese officials on the fate of nearly 2,500 Americans still missing after the Vietnam War, a U.S. Embassy official said.

The delegation, led by Richard Childress of the National Security Council, is scheduled to arrive in Hanoi today and meet with the Vietnamese today and Thursday, said the official, who spoke on condition he not be identified.

Officials in Washington have stressed the talks would deal with only the "humanitarian" problem of the MIAs, and not with political issues such as normalizing diplomatic relations or Vietnam's military presence in Cambodia.

Although the missing are generally believed to be dead, American officials are expected to discuss reports by Vietnamese refugees that some are still alive in Vietnam. Hanoi vehemently denies those reports.

Talking differences

If the just-ended Middle East mission of U.S. envoy Richard W. Murphy did nothing else, it brought into sharper focus the twists and turns in the quest for a permanent Middle East peace.

Murphy talked with the leaders of Israel, Jordan and Egypt. In Israel, Prime Minister Shimon Peres reiterated that he does not want the Palestine Liberation Organization to become involved in peace negotiations until it recognizes Israel's right to exist as a legitimate state as outlined in United Nations Resolutions 242 and 338.

Jordan's King Hussein is unhappy because the U.S. envoy, who is assistant secretary of state for Near Eastern and South Asian affairs, did not meet with the Jordanian-Palestinian delegation. Hussein has proposed that the U.S. join this group.

Perhaps Murphy's most effective effort was his conversation with Egypt's President Hosni Mubarak. Mubarak is a moderate Arab, like President Anwar el-Sadat before him, who could be the key to renewing friendlier relations with Israel.

The clarifying of differences may not seem like the most productive of diplomatic enterprises, but it can be a help in the conduct of future diplomacy. That future in the Middle East peace picture includes the probability of more high-level negotiations in the fall, here in the United States.

Four Middle Eastern leaders are scheduled to come to New York to attend the anniversary celebrations of the United Nations. They are Israel's Peres, Jordan's Hussein, Egypt's Mubarak and Morocco's King Hassan. Some or all will meet individually with President Reagan.

It's possible Reagan could smooth over some of the differences, and he could score a diplomatic coup if he can persuade Peres and Mubarak to sit down together at the bargaining table, even as Begin and Sadat did five years ago, ultimately bringing forth their historic peace treaty.

Another View: Geneva's approach

The November summit meeting between President Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev was never likely to produce agreement on arms control or other tough issues. The summit was seen, certainly by the U.S. side, as basically a chance for the two leaders to get acquainted and clarify their positions — and perhaps create a mood conducive to substantial progress in the nuclear-arms-reduction talks in Geneva. Even by these modest lights, however, the deteriorating atmosphere in U.S.-Soviet relations in the pre-summit period is disquieting.

Within recent days a cascade of events has seemed to signal bad news for the summit. A Soviet proposal for a moratorium on nuclear tests was rejected by Washington — too flatly and too quickly, we thought. The Soviets quickly added the rejection to its quiver of propaganda darts. Reagan then ordered final tests of a U.S. anti-satellite system, leaving the Kremlin to decide between now and November whether the test is a point-of-no-return or whether the system remains negotiable. Then came the "spy powder" charges by Washington last week. And, finally, there was the downbeat speech by Robert C. McFarlane, Reagan's national-security adviser, warning that "even incremental improvements" in U.S.-Soviet relations will be hard to achieve.

The Soviets clearly are playing to the gallery of America's allies. On the 40th anniversary of the atomic bombing of Hiroshima, they all but called the use of nuclear weapons a war crime. Reagan could have handled the moratorium proposal more deftly, but Moscow must have known that the idea would be unacceptable — offered largely for headlines in the Western alliance. As for the timing of the spy-powder announcement, if the Soviets didn't want to be called on it, why did they use the stuff?

Not satisfied with a summit meeting in which the two leaders could sound one another out on the question of whether serious arms-control talks could reduce tensions, they have acted more like stagehands setting up props for a production of "High Noon," casting themselves as the good guys.

Such one-upmanship is business-as-usual in the context of the Geneva arms-control talks, but it is not the behavior of a nation seriously interested in a productive summit. The problem has been compounded, however, by Washington's digging in its heels and sending out its stagehands to help with the props. America cannot control what the Soviets do by way of posing as peace-maker. It can control the way it reacts to the pose.

Despite the preliminaries, the forecasts of failure at the summit are premature. Three months remain before the Geneva meeting, and that is time enough for Soviet and American self-interest in a passably successful meeting to come into play.

If the Soviet intention all along has been to use the summit purely to embarrass Washington and stir trouble between the United States and its allies, then the outlook is grim indeed. But there is ample reason to question that scenario.

As Gorbachev and his Kremlin colleagues have made publicly clear, they are preoccupied with the dismal state of the Soviet economy — particularly the seeming inability of the system to absorb computer-age technology. The congress of the Soviet Communist Party early next year is expected to concentrate on this question.

While it is conceivable, even likely, that the new Soviet leadership is prepared to continue the present level of defense outlays indefinitely, it is hard to believe that Gorbachev really wants a confrontational summit meeting that would give support to those in the Soviet power structure who favor an even greater tilt toward military spending. If this reading is correct, the outlook for a civilized summit meeting is still very much alive.

It bears repeating, however, that not much more than mood-setting civility should be expected in this first encounter of Gorbachev and Reagan. The differences between our two countries are based not just on contradictory notions of the rights of man, but also on clashes of national interest that are not easily resolved.

But a lot is at stake. The world has a right to expect less posturing by both major powers in the next three months than has been evident of late.

Death squads roaming S. Africa

WASHINGTON — As the death toll in South Africa mounts, disturbing charges have been made by anti-apartheid groups: They claim that many of the killings were not random acts of violence, but the work of "death squads" sanctioned by the white-minority government.

Jack Anderson

The South African government, through its embassy in Washington, has objected "sternly" to the allegations. "All cases of unnatural death in South Africa are investigated with every resource," the embassy stated.

Here is what our associate Vicki Warren has learned, nevertheless, about the alleged death-squad activities:

— The assassination of Victoria Mxenge, defense lawyer for 16 black activists on trial for treason in Pietermartizburg, stirred reports of government-encouraged death squads. Ms. Mxenge was gunned down outside her home by four hooded blacks believed to be policemen. The Lawyers Committee on Civil Rights Under Law has written to Secretary of State George Shultz and to Senate Foreign Relations Committee Chairman Richard Lugar, R-Ind., asking for an investigation into Ms. Mxenge's murder.

In addition, Amnesty International has called on the South African government to conduct an independent inquiry into attacks on black opposition leaders.

— The Detainees' Parents Support Committee, originally formed in 1981 to help the families of jailed dissidents, has now begun to keep track of the number of individuals who are rounded up by the police, and the number of those found dead and believed to have been assassinated. One young leader of the Congress of South African Students, Eddie Maluleke, was taken off the train by police on his way home to the black township of Soweto on May 10. He hasn't been seen since.

— The unexplained deaths of Matthew Goniwe and three other members of a black activist group called the United Democratic Front led to demands for an investigation of their killings.

— In neighboring Namibia, occupied by South African troops, the Bar Council of South West Africa two years ago asked for the appointment of a judicial commission "to consider the problem of security legislation and practices; the abuse of power; deaths in detention and other irregularities and malpractices relating to detention without trial; ways and means of protecting citizens against abuse."

This lawyers' group also disclosed the existence of a death squad called Koevoet, which is Afrikaan for "crowbar." According to judicial proceedings and news reports, Koevoet gunmen tortured and killed presumed opponents and buried the victims in unmarked graves. A leader of the detainees' support group said there is a suspicion that Koevoet was disbanded but that some of its hired guns are now operating in South Africa.

— Acting on reports that victims of official violence were being buried in a cemetery in Zwide Township, members of the United Democratic Front uncovered a mass grave containing the remains of three adults and 47 children. Authorities said the bodies were those of paupers.

— Members of the black opposition group claim to have obtained a death list drawn up by the South African government. According to a source in the detainees' support group, the list includes Nobel Peace Prize winner Bishop Desmond Tutu, as well as United Democratic Front official Terror Lekoga, now being tried for high treason.

Amnesty International has written: "Events have occurred in the context of many allegations that other recent attacks on known opponents of apartheid have been carried out by, or with the knowledge of, the police, and of reports suggesting the existence of death lists."

WATCH ON WASTE: Using federal subsidies, a group called Deaf Independent Residences is paying top dollar and then some for homes in Wicomico County on Maryland's rural Eastern Shore. The homes will be specifically fitted for deaf occupants. The group contracted to buy a four-bedroom home for $89,900, even though the advertised asking price was $87,500. It also has its eye on two other homes priced at $72,000 each. The average price of a home in the county last year was $47,900. The Housing and Urban Development Department is looking into the situation.

CLEANUP CAMPAIGN: Pinup girls have come a long way, baby, since their World War II heyday. Now they're likely to go over the line from titillation to outright pornography. One defense contractor, Avco Aerostructures, has responded to pinups in the work place by banning their display. "Our employees should not be subject to open viewing of lewd, indecent, obscene or disgusting materials of any type," explained the company bulletin. "It is company policy to provide a work place ... and environment free of pornography materials."

MINI-EDITORIAL: It's two years since the Soviets shot down Korean Air Lines flight 007, killing all 269 persons aboard. The Reagan administration has stoutly maintained that the plane was simply off course, not up to any espionage activity. But two researchers bankrolled by the Fund for Constitutional Government have uncovered disturbing evidence suggesting that the U.S. government has not told everything it knows about the tragedy. We don't know what happened to Flight 007; but we have our suspicions. Isn't it time the whole truth came out? Congress should conduct a full-scale investigation.

RUSSELL BAKER
File Form 5500-C — or else!

NEW YORK — Recently I learned about Form 5500-C.

"If you don't fill it out and send it to the IRS," a friend said, "you could be sent to federal prison, or have your pants impounded by the government, or be atom-bombed."

He was kidding, but only slightly, as I found out when I telephoned the IRS to ask why they hadn't bothered to tell me about Form 5500-C.

Russell Baker

"It's so awful we couldn't bear to tell people about it," said the voice on the telephone. "So don't ask if you don't want bad news, OK?"

What is life without its daily bad news? I decided to bite the bullet and phoned an accountant. "Tell me about Form 5500-C and don't pull any punches. I want the truth with the bark off."

"First, the good news," he said. "If you don't have a Keogh Plan, you don't have to file Form 5500-C."

I have a Keogh Plan.

"That's bad news," he said, "because it means you've got to file Form 5500-C, or the feds will impound your pants."

Big deal. I'll file Form 5500-C and they'll leave my pants alone.

"If I were you," he said, "I'd try to get a couple of pair of pants clandestinely deposited in a numbered Swiss bank account, because you could get very cold next January waiting for subways with no pants on."

I hate it when accountants try to talk cute.

"All right," he said, "the really bad news is that Form 5500-C cannot be filed."

He's got to be joking. The IRS would not create a form that can't be filed. The IRS is devoted to the romance of issuing paper which, when filled out, can be filed before midnight so the filer can escape having his pants impounded.

"The key words in that speech," said the accountant, "are 'when filled out.' Form 5500-C is so complicated that nobody can fill it out without the assistance of the board of directors of the financial institution that sold you your particular Keogh Plan."

I could see where, yes, there might be difficulties getting my bank's officials to sit down with me around the dining room table for the five or six weeks it customarily takes to fill out an IRS form. If busy men like them took time to help every customer save his pants from being impounded, when would they get time to make bad loans to bankrupt nations that were hoping to strike oil by rubbing two dictators together?

"What's more," said the accountant, "even if they agreed to drop in and help with the paperwork, they'd leave fast when they saw Mr. Deauville there."

Mr. Deauville is my IRS auditor. He has been living at my house for the past year or so and, because of the nature of his work, might scare off people who don't know how fine he is and what a comfort it is having him always there to come home to.

"Is Deauville still planted at your dining room table immersed in the secret diary of your love life?" asked the accountant.

How can people think things like that about Mr. Deauville? He didn't read my diary for its torrid tales of amour, but just went through it line by line looking for a confession of unreported income. Anyhow, he finished the diary weeks ago and is now excavating in my cellar. Would he have me indicted on charges of morbid curiosity if I asked him why his outfit wants to make people fill out a form that can't be filled out?

That night I broke the news to my wife. She is in charge of filling out IRS forms. Or used to be. Proud of her skill with the forms she was, but all those months of scurrying around whenever Mr. Deauville wanted to know about checks she'd written 30 and 40 years ago — well, it's left her a bit soft in the head.

She has begun to confuse Mr. Deauville with our long-lost twin sons and cannot bear denying him when he asks if he can use a fine-tooth comb to search her hair for unreported cash.

"Bad news, darling," I said. "It's called Form 5500-C, and absolutely must be filled out, but can't possibly be filled out, so it looks like it's going to be curtains for my pants after the impounding begins."

I wonder: If you wear curtains from hip to ankle, will the IRS consider them impoundable pants? Possibly not if they're very light and very, very gauzy.

ART BUCHWALD
TV teaching kids life's disasters!

EDITOR'S NOTE: While Art Buchwald is on vacation we reprint some columns from the past.

Dr. Heinrich Applebaum recently completed a study on the effects of television on children. In his case, though, he wasn't concerned with violence, but how television gives children a false sense of reality.

Art Buchwald

Dr. Applebaum told me, "The greatest danger of television is that it presents a world to children that doesn't exist and raises expectations that can never be fulfilled."

"I don't understand, doctor," I said.

"Well, let me cite one example. Have you ever seen a television show where a person in an automobile doesn't immediately find a parking place on the very first try?"

"Come to think of it," I said, "I haven't."

"Not only is there always a parking spot available but the driver doesn't even have to back into it. There are two parking spaces available whenever someone in a TV show needs one. Children are being led to believe that when they grow up they will always be able to find a parking place when and where they want it. Can you imagine the trauma when they discover that in real life you can drive around a block for three hours and still not find a place to put your car?"

"I never thought of it but it's true. What else do they show on television which gives a distorted picture of the real world?"

"Have you noticed that whenever a character walks out of a restaurant or office building or apartment and says to the doorman, 'Get me a taxi,' the taxi immediately arrives? Millions of children are under the impression that all a doorman has to do is blow his whistle and a taxi will be there. I have never seen a show where the doorman has said, 'I'm sorry. I can't get you a taxi. You better take the bus.'"

"Of course," I said, "I never knew before what bothered me about those TV action programs, but now I do. There is always a yellow taxi waiting offscreen.

"What else have you discovered?"

"Kids have a perverted sense of what emergency wards of hospitals are really like. On TV shows they take a kid to an emergency room and four doctors come rushing down to bandage his leg. In a real-life situation the kid would be sitting on the bench for two hours before he even saw an intern. On TV there always happens to be a hospital bed available when a kid needs it. What the kids in this country don't know is that sometimes you have to wait three days to get a hospital bed, and then you have to put a cash deposit of $700 down before they give it to you."

Applebaum said the cruelest hoax of all is when TV shows a lawyer defending someone innocent of a crime.

"On the screen the lawyer spends day and night digging up the evidence to clear his client. In real life the lawyer says to the defendant, 'Look, I've got 20 minutes. Tell me your story and then I'll plead you guilty and make a deal with the D.A.' In real life the defendant might say, 'But I'm innocent.' The lawyer would say, 'So what? I can't afford to find that out. I'm not Perry Mason.'"

"Then what you're saying, Dr. Applebaum, is that it isn't the violence on TV but the fantasy that is doing harm to children."

"Exactly. Even the commercials are taking their toll. Children are led to believe that when they grow up, if they use a certain mouthwash, they'll find the mate of their dreams. When they don't find him or her after gargling all night, they go into a tailspin, and many of them never come out of it.

"What do you think is the biggest fear little girls have?"

"I have no idea."

"That someday when they get married their husbands will have ring around the collar."

"What about boys?"

"Boys worry that they'll only go around once in life, and they won't have all the gusto out of their beer that they deserve."

Israeli soldiers storm Shiite village in U.N.-patrolled zone in Lebanon

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Israeli soldiers led by tanks and helicopter gunships stormed a Shiite Moslem village in the U.N.-patrolled zone in southern Lebanon before dawn today in their biggest sweep in two months, police and U.N. officials reported.

Senior police sources, who spoke on condition they not be identified, said seven tanks, 20 armored personnel carriers, two gunships and other military vehicles were involved in the raid on Qabrikha in the fringe of Israel's security zone in southern Lebanon.

The Israeli military command in Tel Aviv said it was checking out the report of the raid.

The sources said Gen. Uri Orr, Israel's Northern Front commander, led the operation, the biggest anti-guerrilla sweep since Israeli withdrew most of its forces from southern Lebanon in June after three years of occupation.

The raid was launched as Israeli freed another 113 Lebanese, most of them Shiites, from Atlit prison near Haifa. In recent weeks, the Israelis have freed more than 500 Lebanese, whose release was demanded by Shiite gunmen who hijacked a TWA plane to Beirut on June 14.

U.N. spokesman Timur Goksel said one civilian wounded in the leg during the Israeli raid was evacuated by a U.N. helicopter to the U.N. field hospital in Lebanon's southernmost town of Naqoura.

He said about 70 villagers were rounded up in Qabrikha, which is patrolled by Ghanaian troops of the U.N. Interim Force in Lebanon, and taken in handcuffs to the village school for questioning.

He said the Israelis initially prevented the Ghanaians from entering Qabrikha when the operation began around midnight, but the U.N. force was allowed into the village about nine hours later.

Police sources said Israeli troops conducted a house-to-house search for arms, and interrogated the villagers about guerrilla activities.

There was no immediate word whether any arms were seized or houses were blown up, the usual Israeli punishment against suspected guerrilla collaborators.

The sources said the two helicopter gunships strafed the valley near Qabrikha where guerrillas where believed to have fled when the Israelis stormed in, but no casualties had been reported.

Beirut radio stations said Israeli troops also stormed four other villages in the U.N. zone in addition to Qabrikha.

Israel releases 113 more Arabs; Less than 200 detainees remain

ATLIT, Israel (AP) — A total of 113 Arabs who were among the prisoners whose release was demanded by hijackers of a TWA jet in June left a military prison in northern Israel today for freedom in Lebanon.

The detainees entered Lebanon at the Rosh Hanikra crossing near the Mediterranean Sea after a two-hour bus ride through northern Israel, said a U.N. official at Naqoura in southern Lebanon.

They were expected to be turned over to the International Red Cross and then set free in the southern Lebanese town of Ras Bayada.

The prisoners, wearing blue and white track suits, jogged from the prison compound and boarded three buses with the drawn shades. Once inside, their hands were tied with plastic strips for the trip across the border.

Between 100 and 150 inmates remain at Atlit Prison, 50 miles north of Tel Aviv, Israeli military sources said. Uri Lubrani, Israel's coordinator for southern Lebanon, said on Israel Radio that he hoped the last of the detainees would be freed "very soon."

The detainees released today, mostly Lebanese Shiite Moslems, sat in a circle and held a quiet prayer ceremony in the prison compound before they left, according to a guard who spoke on condition he not be identified.

The detainees' buses left Atlit at 9:25 a.m. (2:25 a.m. EDT) in a 10-vehicle convoy that was led by a police car, and included a military ambulance and jeeps.

Some of the detainees freed from Atlit in the past have complained of mistreatment in the prison. Many have vowed to carry out attacks against Israel.

Gunmen who hijacked a TWA jet to Beirut and Algeria on June 14 and held Americans hostage had demanded that Israel release all of about 700 detainees from Atlit.

Israel refused to give in to the demands but said it would continue a policy of releasing the detainees gradually if calm prevailed in southern Lebanon. A small group of prisoners was freed during the hostage crisis and three other groups have been released since.

Two rockets have been fired from Lebanon into Israel in the last week, and a third rocket landed on the Lebanese side of the border. Despite the rocket attacks, Lubrani said the situation in southern Lebanon was "manageable."

Israel brought 1,200 detainees across the border from Ansar prison camp in southern Lebanon last April shortly before Israeli troops withdrew from that section of Lebanon.

The transfer triggered protests from the International Red Cross and several Arab and Western governments, including the United States, which said it violated Geneva Conventions on treatment of prisoners of war.

Israel maintained that the detainees were not prisoners of war because the two countries were not in a declared state of war. Israeli officials also said that Israel had no secure place to keep the prisoners since it was leaving southern Lebanon.

Israel's Shiite prisoners

☐ The 766 Lebanese prisoners held at Atlit, Israel, were captured in southern Lebanon since November, 1983, when Israel freed about 4,500 Palestinian and Shiite prisoners from its prison camp at Ansar, Lebanon. They were freed in exchange for six Israeli soldiers held by the Palestine Liberation Organization.

☐ In January, 1985, Israel announced a phased withdrawal from southern Lebanon, which it had invaded in June, 1982. The announcement was followed by increasing casualties among Israeli troops.

☐ In February, Israel announced a get-tough policy aimed at Shiites believed responsible for attacks on the remaining Israeli forces. Israeli forces repeatedly raided Shiite villages, arresting and killing guerrilla suspects and blowing up buildings.

☐ From Nov., 1983, to April 2, 1985, Israel seized 1,800 prisoners, some from the 1983 exchange, and held them at Ansar.

☐ As part of the withdrawal, on April 2, 600 prisoners at Ansar were released and 1,200 considered dangerous by the Israeli army were moved to prisons in Israel. The United States and the Red Cross criticized Israel for the action as a violation of the Geneva War Conventions.

☐ Israel has said it would continue to gradually release the prisoners. In May, 271 Palestinians among the 1,200 were part of a prisoner exchange in which 1,150 Palestinians were traded for three Israeli soldiers.

Meir Kahane's anti-Arab policies gaining public support in Israel

By MASHA HAMILTON

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Rabbi Meir Kahane and his political program for expelling all Arabs from Israeli-controlled territory appear to be gaining public support during a year of Arab terrorist attacks on Jews.

The rise of the Brooklyn-born rabbi is reflected in public opinion polls that have shown him gaining strength as Israeli frustration has risen over Arab attacks on Jews, which have claimed 12 lives so far this year.

On Tuesday, the latest poll showed that if an election were held now Kahane's party would emerge as the third-largest in the Israeli Parliament.

The independent Modi'in Ezrachi Agency said that a survey of 1,275 Jewish adults conducted between Aug. 4 and Aug. 11 showed that Kahane's Kach (Thus) Party would get 11 seats in the 120-seat Parliament.

Prime Minister Shimon Peres' Labor Party would get 51 seats, according to the poll, and the Likud bloc would get 24 seats. The poll has a margin of error of plus or minus 2 percent.

Kahane won a single seat in Parliament in 1984, but Tuesday's poll indicated Kahane is picking up most of his support from Likud, the rightist party headed by Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir. Likud won 41 seats in 1984.

In an interview with The Associated Press, Michael Etgar of Modi'in Ezrachi noted that the poll was conducted while Arab-Jewish tensions were high, following the killing in late July of two Israeli teachers from the northern town of Afula.

"Kach has become the national protest party. People think the government is not taking a strong enough hand," he said. "If there are more attacks...then Kahane's support will increase."

Before last year's elections made him a member of Parliament, Kahane was virtually ignored by the Israeli press and political commentators. He had failed three times to win a seat in Parliament and attracted noisy but small crowds as he walked through neighborhoods.

After the election, Kahane and a group of followers marched through the Arab-populated Old City of Jerusalem, pushing aside Arabs, insulting merchants and shouting, "Death to the Arabs!"

New Zealand moves to defuse diplomatic crisis

WELLINGTON, New Zealand (AP) — Prime Minister David Lange today moved to defuse a diplomatic crisis with France over the mining of Greenpeace's flagship, the Rainbow Warrior, in Auckland harbor last month.

Lange's government has implicated French agents in the July 10 incident, which resulted in the death of a member of the international environmental group.

Rainbow Warrior had been scheduled to sail to Mururora in French Polynesia, to lead a protest against French nuclear testing in the South Pacific.

WEATHER SUMMARY

TEMPERATURES: 60s, 70s, 80s, 90s, 100s

PRECIPITATION: Rain, Showers, Snow, Flurries

FRONTS: Cold, Warm, Stationary, Occluded

Conditions forcast for 8 p.m. Wednesday

In North Texas, mostly fair through Thursday with occasional showers and thunderstorms. Highs 94 to 102. Lows tonight 72 to 79.

In West Texas, mostly clear all sections tonight through Thursday with isolated evening and late afternoon thunderstorms. Highs Thursday low 90s north to around 105 along the Rio Grande in the Big Bend and the upper 80s in the mountains. Lows tonight upper 80s north to the mid 70s south and the low 60s mountains.

In South Texas, widely scattered evening thunderstorms Southeast Texas and upper coast. Elsewhere mostly sunny and hot days, fair and mild at night. Highs in the upper 80s to near 90 upper coast, around 105 Rio Grande plains and Edwards Plateau, 90s to around 100 rest of South Texas. Lows in the 70s, low 80s immediate coast.

Basin still due high temperature

From Staff and Wire Reports

Hot conditions will continue in the Permian Basin area Thursday but temperatures are expected to be slightly cooler than Tuesday's high of 100 which matched the 1982 record, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport.

Forecasters are calling for fair skies through Thursday with a low in the upper 60s tonight warming to a high in the mid-90s Thursday. Tonight's winds will be from the southeast at five to 10 mph, increasing Thursday to less than 20 mph.

This morning's low was nine degrees above the record set in 1970.

STATE

Isolated rainshowers occurred along the middle to upper Texas coast early today, while heavy to very heavy thunderstorms rumbled offshore in the northwest Gulf of Mexico.

Low level clouds associated with the tropical moisture dotted parts of Southeast Texas, the Coastal Plains and the lower Rio Grande Valley.

Elsewhere, mostly fair skies prevailed as high pressure remaind the dominate weather feature across the state.

South to southeast winds were common across most of the state except north to northeast over parts of South Central Texas and the Coastal Plains. Wind speeds were generally in the 5 to 15 mph range.

Overnight temperatures were mostly in the 70s and low 80s across Texas overnight, except for readings in the 60s over the mountainous southwest. Early morning extremes ranged from 61 degrees at Marfa in the Davis Mountains to 83 degrees at the Naval Air Station in Corpus Christi.

The National Weather Service said more showers and thunderstorms could be expected today for much of Texas. Afternoon highs in the upper 80s and 90s were expected, except for readings in the 100s in the Big Bend.

NATION

Thunderstorms rumbled across the Rocky Mountain region and Arizona and pushed into the northern Plains today while the Northeast was clearing.

Thunderstorms also ranged across central Wisconsin and southern Michigan while rain and scattered thunderstorms spread along the southern Atlantic Coast and Gulf Coast.

Midland statistics

Tonight: Fair skies with a low in the middle 60s. Winds from the southeast at five to 10 mph. Thursday: Fair skies with a high in the upper 90s. Southeasterly winds at 10 to 20 mph.

Green Age slips into past

By BRUCE LOWITT
AP Sports Writer

If the 1920s were the "Golden Age" of sports, the 1970s and 1980s will be remembered as the "Green Age," the dawning of million-dollar contracts for athletes and multimillion-dollar pricetags for franchises.

"When I started out in 1962, if a guy was making $15,000, that was a lot. They had no leverage," said lawyer and player agent Bob Woolf.

Then new leagues — the American Basketball Association, the World Hockey Association — started springing up.

"That's when the insanity started," Woolf said. "Nothing wakes people up more than competitive bidding. Teams that wouldn't have given a player a $5,000 raise were giving him $50,000 just to keep him. Derek Sanderson had signed for three years with the Boston Bruins (of the National Hockey League) for $10,000, $12,000 and $14,000. From there he went to close to $500,000 with the (WHA's) Philadelphia Blazers."

THEN BIG money started coming from television.

Starting in 1978, the NFL got $640 million over four years from ABC, CBS and NBC; the current contract will pay more than three times as much, $2.1 billion over five years.

Baseball's television rights went from $250 million for the old five-year contract to $1.1 billion for the current six-year package.

The NBA has just completed four-year contracts that brought in $121 million from CBS and cable systems, up from $74 million the preceding four years.

"That, along with changing the laws like the reserve clause, really exploded everything," Woolf said.

In the past decade, according to various league and union sources, the average salary has risen from $74,234 to $152,000 in the NHL, from $70,000 to $332,000 in the NBA, from $33,000 to $157,819 in the NFL and from $40,839 to $329,408 in major league baseball — increases of 104 percent to 706 percent.

At the same time, the average annual wage of the non-government worker in the American labor force has risen 80 percent, from $8,503 to $15,290, and the consumer price index has increased 93 percent.

It was only a generation or so ago that the $100,000 baseball player arrived. Joe DiMaggio, Stan Musial, Ted Williams, Hank Aaron.

"Nobody begrudged the stars their due," said John Sisk, a senior vice president and director of network broadcasting at the J. Walter Thompson advertising agency. "They were demigods then."

NOW $500,000-a-year men ride the bench, players like Dale Berra of the New York Yankees, John Wathan of Kansas City, Ivan DeJesus of St. Louis and George Hendrick of California.

In 1972, three years after signing a $1.4 million, five-year contract with the NBA Milwaukee Bucks, Kareem Abdul-Jabbar described basketball as "big business ... a money game" and said $250,000 or more a year was not an excessive salary.

The 1980s brought $1 million a year for such stars as Abdul-Jabbar and baseball's Mike Schmidt, Dave Winfield and Ron Guidry. They were just catching up to soccer, which gave Pele an estimated $4.5 million for three years starting in 1975.

Rebels hold rally barbecue

From Staff Reports

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

The third edition of the New Tradition was put before the public Tuesday night as the Midland Lee Rebels held their annual rally-barbecue on the school grounds.

Around 1,000 Lee fans turned out to get an early glimpse of the 1985 edition of the Rebels. It is this group that shoulders the task of keeping what has become known as the "New Tradition" flying high.

After two consecutive playoff berths — one ending in the state finals and one in the quarterfinals — expectations at Lee High have taken to new heights. No longer is there talk of a respectable season. Playoffs is the name of the game and anything less will probably be considered a step down.

In fact, expectations are so high that for the first time in history Lee sold all its available season tickets, a record 2,812. And the Lee-Permian game is in the process of going to television.

So, it is no wonder that this 1985 rally seemed to be a little more spirited than usual. The band sounded in mid-season form, the cheerleaders seemed to jump a little higher and the drill team was spiffy.

Even annual master of ceremonies Scotty Alcorn dispensed with the jokes this year, knowing that he didn't have to be the show any longer. That may have been the one failure of this year's event.

The event was staged on the eve of Lee's intrasquad scrimmage at 7:30 p.m. today at Memorial Stadium. No one wants to scrimmage with Lee, a fact that playoff teams have to deal with. So, they will play against themselves.

"We would like to have a scrimmage, but when we got to looking at it, we realized the colleges work the same amount of time we do before the season starts and they don't scrimmage. We're doing what some of the colleges are doing. We will scrimmage Wednesday night and that will give us ample time to get over all the bumps and bruises," said Lee head football coach Jack Tayrien.

"Right now, we have a big puzzle with a lot of parts still needing to be put together," said Tayrien. "Our kids reported in good shape and have had an excellent attitude. A lot of them have been down this road before and know what it takes. We can't ask any more than what they've given us."

However, all is not roses in the Lee camp. Kicker Bryan Wurster injured a leg in a car accident and is lost for the season.

"We are concerned with our specialty teams with Bryan out. We are looking at three or four kids in the area of extra point kicking and will be looking closely at that before our first game," said Tayrien.

The Chicken gets some help cheering on the Angels from four-year-old Forbes Cone Tuesday at Angels Stadium.

Chicken packs 'em in; Angels take win

By BOB BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

Midland Angel fans were treated to a double dose of excitement Tuesday night as the Angels opened their final five-game series of the season.

First, there was the famed Chicken, a draw that packed the park to the tune of 3,016. Second, the Angels held on to claim a 12-11 victory over the San Antonio Dodgers.

The Chicken kept the crowd's attention from the moment he entered the game in the bottom of the second inning until he was ejected in the bottom of the seventh. He gave the performance millions have paid to see in ball parks from coast to coast.

His routines, which have been displayed to millions more on national TV, were well appreciated, attested to by the tremendous line of people waiting for autographs.

Those who didn't go autograph hunting before games end, were the ones who witnessed the second treat, a rare come-from-behind then hold-on-for-dear-life Angel victory.

The Dodgers started out like they were going to make a mockery of the Chicken's boasted "80 percent victory ratio for home teams when I'm performing." In the first inning, four quick runs were tallied off starter Doug Banning before he could settle down and escape without further damage.

It was a short-lived Dodger lead. In the bottom of the first, the Angels rallied for six runs on five hits, two Mike Cherry wild pitches and two Dodger errors. Phil Stephenson drove home the first two runs on a double to left followed by an RBI single from David Heath and a two RBI double by newly reactivated shortstop Kevin Davis. The sixth run scored on a wild pitch.

THE DODGERS regained the lead in the top of the third with an RBI single from Cecil Espy and two-run homer from Dan Catalino, his ninth of the year. Score, 7-6.

James Randall led off the Angel third with a single, advanced to second on a passed ball, to third when Davis reached on an error and scored on Fernando Villaescusa's sacrifce fly. 7-7.

In the fourth, Midland took a 9-7 lead on a RBI single by Billie Merrifield to end Mike Cherry's stint on the mound. Phil Stephenson followed with a groundout off reliever Bill Scudder to tally another run.

Angel starter Doug Banning came within two outs of a decision in the fifth. With one gone and Gonzales on third — from a walk and two-base pickoff error by Banning — Jon Debus connected for an RBI infield single. Scott Suehr, 2-2, who went on to win, pitched his way out of the inning and allowed only one run before giving way to Todd Fischer in the seventh.

By that time, however, the Angels led 12-9. Fischer received some rough treatment in the eighth, giving up a two-out single and two-run homer by Jeff Hamilton to cut the margin to one, 12-11. He went on to finish the game to collect his 16th save of the year.

Midland manager Joe Maddon called the game "Unbelievable. It was just a matter of who kicked the last field goal. This is a game that Kevin Davis won for us."

The praise to Davis was for a night of flawless 11 assist fielding.

Tornado swirls around talented tailback Williams

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is one of a series of previews on area high school football teams. Today, a look at the Lamesa Tornadoes. Tomorrow, Andrews.

By ERIC SCHURER
Sports Writer

LAMESA — If there is one thing Lamesa's all-purpose tailback Kenneth Williams needs in the 1985 District 2-4A football season it is a strong offensive line to open up some running room for him.

And if there is one thing coach Clyde Noonkester's squad has this season it is bulk up front where the Tornadoes boast four starters over 200 pounds. It would seem to be a perfect combination.

"We do have some good size this season," Noonkester understated, "but we have some inexperienced players.

Area Football

Our young linemen have size, and if we can get some quickness out of them, we'll be all right."

Ray Earnest leads the size brigade at 6-3 and a whopping 280 pounds, lining up next door to Earnest is Shawn Holladay at 250 — both are seniors but have not seen starting duty. Rounding out the front line are junior Bobby Guyer (6-3, 245) and senior Mike Hernandez, a mere 210-pounder. Senior center Jade Froman will squeeze his 162-pound frame in the middle and probably feel dwarfed.

"WITH THIS group we're a lot larger than we were last season but certainly not any quicker," Noonkester said. "We lost a lot of small, quick kids, especially on defense. We do have some spots to fill on defense yet, but we can do it with time."

The linebacking trio of Greg Hogg, Williams and Keith Bryant leads the defense in experience and talent and will make up some of the quickness that the front line will lack.

The same trio paces the Tornadoes offensively at the skill positions as well.

Coming out of the backfield with his 4.6 over 40-yards speed, Williams is likely to gain his yardage no matter who is blocking for him. Last season, Williams was nearly a one-man show for the 5-5 Tornadoes racking up nearly 1,100 yards on the ground to lead the district.

Combining size and speed, Williams is an attractive package for college scouts and another season like 1984 would raise his stock even more.

This season, though he realizes the weapon he possesses in Williams, Noonkester hopes to use his quick tailback less in order to get more effective yardage out of him. And with the returning experience in the backfield, he might get his wish.

Quarterback Bryant, a converted receiver, will direct the show for Lamesa serving up the ball for Williams and fullback Hogg (6-0, 185). The wingback is Danny Brackeen, who is also a fine receiver.

"Hopefully we won't have to use Williams as much as we did last season. I really feel we can be more balanced offensively this year," Noonkester said. "We will throw the ball, but probably not as much as we did last season."

McEnroe forced to limit by 175th

BRUCE LOWITT

NEW YORK (AP) — It would have ranked as one of the greatest upsets in the history of tennis — at the U.S. Open or anywhere else. Instead, John McEnroe's victory over Shlomo Glickstein will be just a footnote, a step on the road to a match with Boris Becker.

Glickstein, Israel's finest tennis player but ranked only 175th in the world heading into this $3 million tournament at the National Tennis Center, took McEnroe to the limit Tuesday. But after squandering four match points, McEnroe, the defending champion, top seed and top-ranked player in the world, survived to play again with a breathtaking 6-1, 6-7, 2-6, 6-3, 7-6 victory, winning the decisive tie-breaker 9-7.

Becker, the 17-year-old Wimbledon champion from West Germany, [illegible]ged off his own center-court [illegible] earlier and swept past Peter Doohan of Australia 6-4, 6-1, 6-2.

Today, the defending women's champion, No. 2-seed Martina Navratilova, was to begin play against Pascale Paradis of France, No. 1 women's seed Chris Evert Lloyd was to face Janine Thompson of Australia, No. 2 men's seed Ivan Lendl of Czechoslovakia was scheduled to play Jay Lapidus and Jimmy Connors, the No. 4 seed, was matched against Gary Muller of South Africa.

After Becker walked off the court to applause, McEnroe walked on to cheers. The fans were his, and they were appropriately appreciative as he serve-and-volleyed Glickstein into submission in the first set.

But as McEnroe's game began to desert him, the crowd in the half-filled, 20,000-seat stadium shifted to Glickstein, subtly at first, then dramatically as he repeatedly scored with a succession of passing shots or lobs to the baseline over the charging McEnroe. They cheered each of Glickstein's winning points, groaned at every loser, booed at close calls that went against the 27-year-old Israeli.

Then, slowly, McEnroe began to reassert himself, and with his gallantry, his support in the stands began to re-emerge until the cheering was loud and lusty no matter who won a point.

McEnroe was winning the points he needed to survive, the mark of a champion. And finally, after Glickstein had fought off four match points in the fifth-set tie-breaker, McEnroe blistered a cross-court backhand that the lunging Glickstein netted.

McEnroe, the winner by the barest of margins in a grinding 3 hours, 51 minutes, raised one arm in a feeble, exhausted salute, then trudged to the net, rested both hands on the cord, hung his head wearily, shook hands with Glickstein and patted him on the shoulder as they walked off the court together.

The tournament, which has another dozen days and nights to run, will have trouble equalling this opener.

"I've been playing the last three or four weeks as well as I've been playing all year," said McEnroe, who defeated Lendl in the finals of his last two tournaments, at Stratton Mountain, Vt., and Montreal, "so it surprised me how flat I was during the match. ... I was amazed how bad I felt considering how good I felt a couple of days ago.

"It was an amazingly bad game. I couldn't have done it worse if I'd tried. It was unbelievable how he jerked me around. I've never been so happy to win a first-round match. ... I went five sets in the first round a couple of years back and wound up losing (to Bill Scanlon) in the round of 16. I hope that isn't going to happen again."

Pros come to Chap Center on Thursday

From Staff Reports

The pros are coming to the Langford Chaparral Center Thursday night when the Bill Williams Tire Center team squares off against the West Texas Stadium Sports at 7:30 p.m. in the Spud Webb Scholarship fund game.

The game brings to West Texas some of the top names from recent college and the National Basketball Association seasons.

NBA veterans like Rolando Blackman and Mark Aguirre will vie with young players seeking to make NBA clubs next month, such as Spud Webb, Karl (Mailman) Malone, Midland's own Herb Johnson, and Joe Dumars.

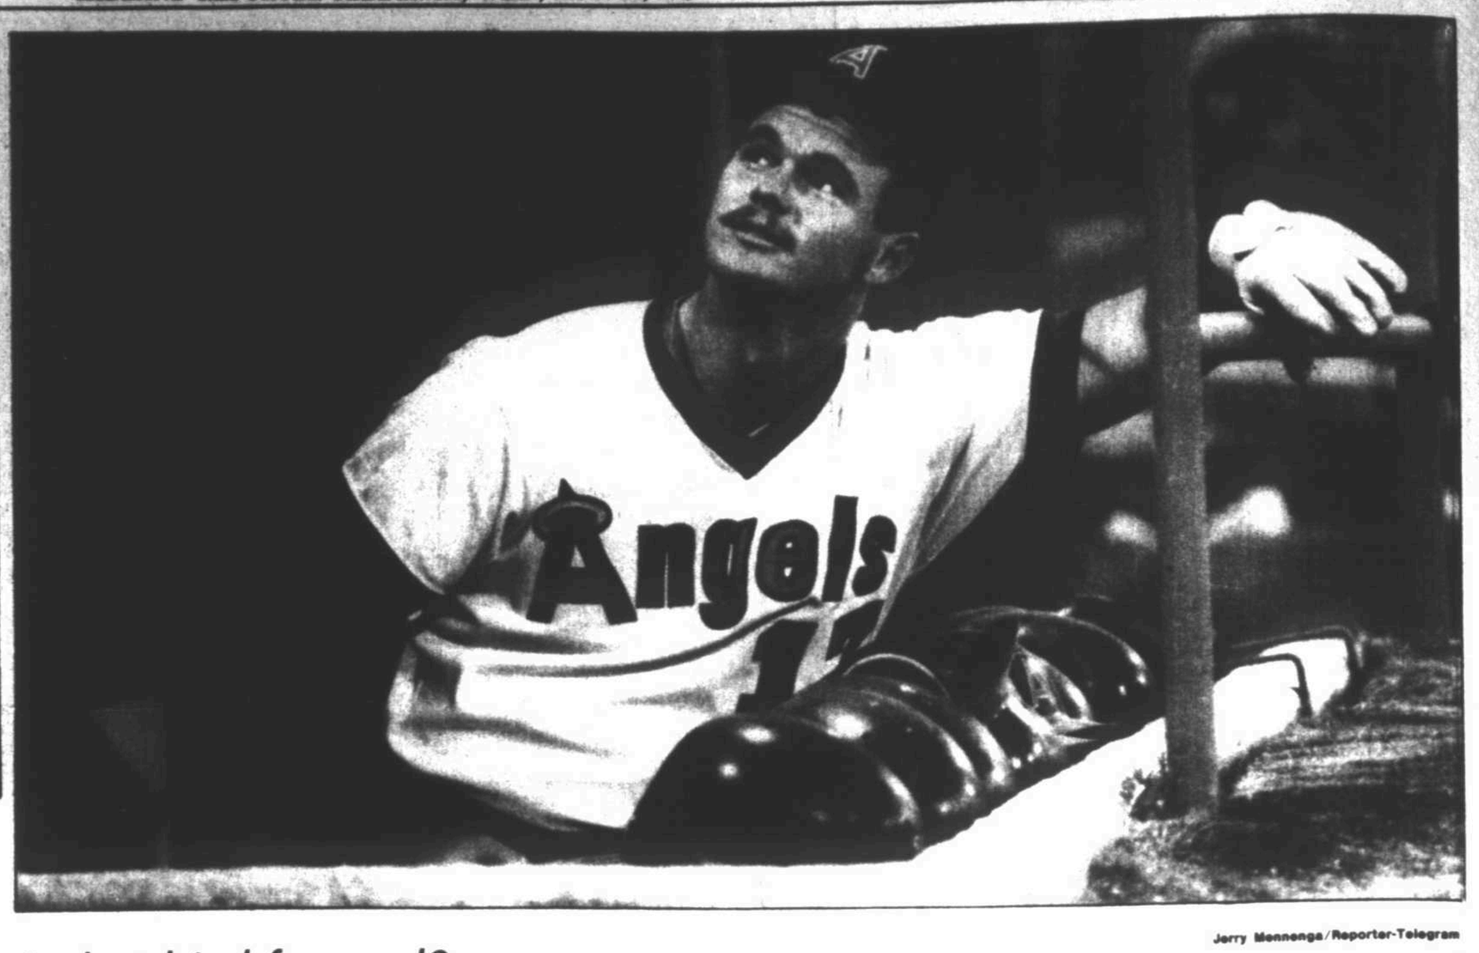

And then, there are the girls, Paula and Pam McGee, the former USC stars who are bidding to become the first females on the Harlem Globe Trotters. Their fate also will be determined next month.

Also coming back to Midland with the 5-7 Webb will be Chester Smith and Puntus Wilson from the 1982 National Junior College Athletic Association champions, the team that won the hearts of Hutchinson, Kan., and still talk about.

The Williams Tire team, coached by Skip Baldwin of KMID-TV, will be composed of Webb, Malone, Aguirre, Pam McGee, Chester Smith, Johnson, Ken Roberson and Mookie Smith, former North Texas player and now coach at Navarro JC.

The underdog Stadium Sports, coached by Ted Battles, will take the floor with Blackman, Clyde Drexler, Wallace Bryant, Paula McGee, Joe Dumars, Jerry Everett, Larry and Debbie Rodman.

Tickets, $7 reserved and $5 general admission, are on sale at the Chap Center box office, Bill Williams Tire Center and Stadium Sports.

Cardinals up lead to three

Associated Press

While the New York Mets are hoping to find the way back to first place on the road, the first-place St. Louis Cardinals are in no particular hurry to go home.

St. Louis, with Willie McGee hitting his league-leading 16th triple, came from behind Tuesday night to beat Cincinnati 6-4 and increase its lead to three games in the National League East thanks to the Los Angeles Dodgers' 2-1 victory over the Mets.

McGee's two-run triple also extended St. Louis' winning streak to seven games, its longest winning streak of the season. The Cards won seven of eight games on their road trip and open up a homestand Friday against Houston.

McGee's triple came came with a lighter bat borrowed from teammate Vince Coleman. "In that situation, I wanted to pull the ball. I wanted to be a little quick," McGee said of the change in bats. "My job is to hit the ball to the right side of the field, either deep in the air or on the ground."

McGee's triple made a loser of Cincinnati reliever Ted Power, 4-4, and a winner of Cardinal reliever Bill Campbell, 4-3. Jeff Lahti got his 16th save.

In New York, Jerry Reuss stopped the Mets, giving up only Darryl Strawberry's 21st homer. The Mets finished the homestand at 4-5 and now head for California.

"We can't panic," Mets catcher Gary Carter said. "Maybe a change of scenery will help. If we panic, we'll get up tight."

Mariano Duncan led the Dodgers, whose lead in the NL West is 7½ games, with a triple, two stolen bases, two runs scored and a fine fielding play that preserved the lead in the sixth inning.

Giants 6, Expos 1

San Francisco's Brad Wellman missed a squeeze sign then keyed a five-run ninth inning with a bases-loaded triple. Wellman cleared the bases when he hit a sinking line drive to the opposite field off Jeff Reardon, 2-6.

Padres 4, Phillies 1

Mark Thurmond struck out a career-high eight batters in 7 2-3 innings as San Diego snapped a three-game losing streak. Thurmond, 6-7, gave up seven hits and walked just two. Roy Lee Jackson got his second save.

Braves 7, Pirates 6

Bob Horner's hit a three-run homer with two outs in the last of the ninth inning to cap a five-run Atlanta rally as the Braves handed Pittsburgh its 16th consecutive road loss. Horner's 21st homer came off reliever Don Robinson, 4-10, who had come on for Rick Rhoden.

Astros 11, Cubs 4

Houston's Bill Doran hit a triple and a double, drove in a career-high five runs and scored the winning run. He had two hits in the seventh inning when the Astros, trailing 4-3, scored eight times.

Indians 6, Red Sox 2

Cleveland's Tony Bernazard had three singles to lead a 16-hit attack and Curt Wardle, 6-5, pitched eight strong innings the Indians won for the sixth time in seven games. Boston lost its fourth straight and 10th in its last 11 games.

White Sox 7, Rangers

Harold Baines and Bryan Little drove in two runs apiece as Chicago won its third straight game. Britt Burns, 14-8, was the winner. Dave Wehrmeister pitched four innings of hitless relief for his first major league save.

Blue Jays 8, Twins 0

Toronto rookie Steve Davis, taking over after starter Tom Filer left the game with a sore elbow, pitched four innings of one-hit relief for the victory. The Blue Jays jumped on Frank Viola, 14-11 and two reliever for 15 hits. Jeff Burroughs drove in three runs.

Brewers 8, Royals 5

Earnest Riles had three singles and drove in two runs to pace a 13-hit Milwaukee attack. The Brewers, trailing 3-2 after the first inning, scored four unearned runs in the second with the help of Kansas City errors by losing pitcher Danny Jackson and third baseman George Brett.

A's 3, Yankees 0

Oakland's 42-year-old Tommy John limited New York to three hits in seven innings for the 259th career victory. Ron Guidry, 16-5, took the loss, which dropped the Yankees five games behind AL East leader Toronto.

Angels 7, Orioles 3

Rookie Jack Howell broke a 1-for-21 slump with two home runs, including a second-inning grand slam, for California. Mike Witt, 12-7, was the winner as the Angels increased their lead in the AL West to 2½ games over Kansas City. Donnie Moore got his 23rd save.

Mariners 3, Tigers 1

Matt Young, 9-14, pitched a five-hitter and Donnie Scott hit a two-run double to cap a three-run sixth inning for Seattle, which snapped a four-game losing streak. The only run off Young was a fifth-inning homer by Chet Lemon, his ninth. Lemon later was injured in the outfield and forced to leave the game.

"That's as good as, not only he can play, but as good as you can expect from any shortstop at any level," said Maddon. "It was a spectacular performance, almost indescribable. He went into the hole, up the middle, came up on the ball and was throwing out fast runners to boot. It was the best game I've ever seen him play and I've seen him many times."

One distressing thought was discussed by Maddon and Coach Aurelio Monteagudo after the game, the inability of Angel pitchers to stop opposing lineups of late. The Angel staff give up 11 runs on eight hits and 11 walks Tuesday. Add those totals to the past few games and its hard to believe Midland won two games.

"We just figured it out," said Maddon. "We've given up 65 runs in the last six games and we can only think of four or five that were unearned."

Randolph crashes Amateur after bold hoist

WEST ORANGE, N.J. (AP) — Less than two hours before the opening round of qualifying for the U.S. Amateur championship, Sam Randolph was 25 miles from the Montclair Golf Club, locked out of the home at which he was staying and looking inside at his clubs.

"The car keys were inside, too," said the 21-year-old Randolph, of Santa Barbara, Calif. "So I broke in one door and the inside door was still locked. The last window I found, I got into, got my sticks and left."

Randolph, runnerup in this event last year, dashed to the course to tee off — and bogeyed two of the first three holes.

"After the bogey on the first hole, I had a feeling it was going to be one of those days," said Randolph, who helped the United States capture the Walker Cup last week in a match against Great Britain and Ireland.

Indeed it was one of those days, but not the kind Randolph feared. He collected himself over the last 15 holes to carve out a 5-under-par 65 and grab a one-shot lead over Peter Baker of England and Kevin Whipple of Duncan, Okla.

Another round of medal play was scheduled today, with the low 64 scorers in the field of 282 advancing into the match-play portion of the tournament, starting Thursday. The 36-hole match-play final is scheduled Sunday.

Randolph saved his round when he birdied the fourth hole and then knocked in a 60-foot eagle with a sand wedge on the fifth. He capped the round by rolling in birdie putts on Nos. 16, 17 and 18, all from between 15 and 20 feet.

In all, the University of Southern California golfer had an eagle and six birdies against three bogeys.

Randolph, who lost this event last year to Scott Verplank 4 and 3, is optimistic about his chances this year.

"This year I have a little more confidence and I feel the possibility of me winning," said Randolph. "I'm definitely putting better, too. Last year, I was striking the ball very well and I was not putting too well."

Randolph's score was even more remarkable because he played on the first and third nines at Montclair. He was five shots better than any other player who played those nines, considered the toughest of the four at the club.

Verplank, the first amateur in three decades to win a professional tournament and the favorite to win this event, had an opening-round 70 and was tied with a large group of golfers, including former Amateur champion Jay Sigel of Berwyn, Pa., and Vinny Giles of Richmond, Va.

"I'm not disappointed," said Verplank, of Dallas, who played the second and fourth nines. "I just never got it going. I putted pretty poorly."

Whipple, a college teammate of Verplank at Oklahoma State, had five birdies and one bogey in recording a 66, also on the second and fourth nines.

"I usually don't start this fast," said Whipple. "I was hitting pretty bad yesterday and I just wanted to get around the golf course."

Baker, 17, of Wolverhampton, England, had six birdies and two bogeys during his early-morning round.

"I didn't play at all yesterday," said Baker.

Giants cut Jennings; Youngblood finished

Associated Press

Jack Youngblood and Reggie McKenzie may have worn National Football League uniforms for the last time, but even the coach who cut another multi-year All-Pro, punter Dave Jennings, believes he'll get another chance.

"I feel certain he'll kick in the league this year," New York Giants Coach Bill Parcells said Tuesday after announcing that Jennings had been waived. "I think he was a great player at his position. He's one of the best who ever kicked."

Sean Landeta, a refugee from the Baltimore Stars of the United States Football League, was chosen by Parcells over Jennings, the Giants' punter for 11 years. Jennings averaged 47.6 yards per punt on five attempts during the preseason, compared to 38.8 yards per punt on five attempts for Landeta, who signed a big contract before training camp opened.

"I think I punted well in camp," said Jennings, a Pro Bowl punter four times. "But it did not surprise me. The most important thing is I have had a good 11 years here."

Youngblood surrendered to back problems by retiring from the Los Angeles Rams, while McKenzie, a sparkplug on the Buffalo Bills' "Electric Company" offensive line, was dropped by Seattle.

"I've had to make some tough decisions in my life, but none as tough as this one," said Youngblood, a 14-year starter for the Rams who holds the team record with 202 consecutive games played. "Football has been my life for as long as I can remember, but it's too important to me to go on if I can't continue to play as I once did."

The 6-foot-5, 245-pound Youngblood, whose iron-man streak ended late last year because of a herniated disc, was an All-Pro performer six times and played in seven Pro Bowls.

Youngblood, 35, had permission to miss all of training camp while he worked out on his own, and was supposed to test his ailing back for the first time Monday in a contact situation. But he didn't attend practice, and the retirement came Tuesday.

McKenzie was cut by the Seahawks along with defensive end Mike Fanning, center John Hill and defensive end Mark Bell.

McKenzie was traded to Seattle in 1983 by Buffalo, where he had become famous as a blocker for O.J. Simpson. The Electric Company, it was said, gave the juice to Simpson.

All NFL teams had to cut their rosters to 50 men by Tuesday and 45 next week before the regular season starts.

In other player moves Tuesday, the Dallas Cowboys traded veteran linebacker Anthony Dickerson to Buffalo for an undisclosed draft choice.

REBELS—

"We're in that time consuming stage. We are better this week at the things we put in this past week. The kids know what to do. It's just a matter of doing it now."

The rally also came just an hour after Tuesday's school board meeting that brought some good news to both Lee and Midland High athletics. The board approved an all-weather track for Lee and restroom facilities that can service fans at baseball and football games at the school. Both were despertately needed. An expansion of the Memorial Stadium field house was also approved by the board, as well as a new tennis facility at Midland High.

The school board also made another step toward allowing the Lee-Permian game to be televised on Thursday, Oct. 10, at Memorial Stadium.

"The board has instructed me to see if there is an interest among the three local TV stations in producing the Lee-Permian game themselves," said Dr. Joseph Baressi, superintendent of schools. "We'll look at what they have to offer and make a decision sometime next week."

Clinton Video Productions out of Dallas has requested rights to the game and has submitted an offer to the two schools involved. However, some interest locally has been shown for doing the game with local TV talent. The Clinton group would like at some time to generate a state-wide package of high school football and the Lee-Permian game is first on the list.

But at the moment, Lee players and coaches are a long way from the Oct. 10 problems. Lee travels to Lubbock Coronado Friday, Sept. 6, to open the season and then there is a road trip to Temple to consider before these Rebels ever face the friendly, but cramped, confines of Memorial Stadium.

The Dead End kid

The hurt shows in Billy Martin. The anger. He's baseball's Dead End Kid. Suspicious, combative, convinced that all life is 8-to-5 against.

You don't get too close to Billy Martin. He praises sparingly, criticizes lashingly. Baseball is not a game to him. Baseball is life. Billy always plays as if life has the bases loaded on him and it's starting to rain.

He doesn't seem to enjoy what he does, but he keeps coming back to it. He seldom smiles, almost never laughs. Something seems to be eating away at Billy. He stays thin and gaunt no matter how much he eats or drinks.

"Somebody took something away from Billy at an early age and he hasn't forgiven the world since," a psychiatrist once guessed. Billy just sneers. Psychiatry doesn't make his lineup.

MARTIN IS a throwback. He belongs to a time when the game was played with high spikes and head pitches. Billy plays the game as if he is walking down Main Street and it's high noon and the enemy is everywhere and everybody – the press, the front office, the umpires, sometimes even his own players. He wears No. 1 on his back for the same reason generals wear braid – so there'll be no confusing who's boss. Martin doesn't want to be popular, just successful.

When he took over the Yankees this year – for the fourth time in his career – replacing the lovable Yogi Berra, Billy was blunt. "Yogi was my friend, too," he said. "I liked Yogi as much as you did. But you didn't play for him. If you played for him, he'd still be here. I don't care whether you like me, or hate me, just play for me."

BILLY regards the Yankees the way priests regard the Vatican. Yankee Stadium is more than a ball park, it's a shrine, the St. Peter's of baseball. All Baseball is like Caesar's Gaul, divided into three parts – the American League, the National League and the Yankees. Everybody else is just a ballplayer but a Yankee is nobility. As for the National League, that's a disease.

Not above a bar-room fight himself, Billy nevertheless insists that a Yankee behave like a lord of baseball – wear a coat and tie at all times and never do anything Lou Gehrig wouldn't do. Show up sockless and in sandals and you take your bare feet to the American Assn.

Billy still solves problems with a punch in the nose but he knows baseball and his record proves it. He thinks Casey Stengel belongs on Mount Rushmore but that didn't stop him from not speaking to Casey for years once when Stengel let him get traded away.

He is complicated, tormented, lonely, even haughty to the world, but there is about him what the Latin poet, Aeneas, once called "a sense of tears." Billy Martin would like to be liked. But not if he has to lose to do it.

He quite obviously knows something about winning baseball games that other managers don't. When a thing happens once it can be luck. Twice, it could be coincidence. When it keeps happening, it's know-how.

MARTIN put Minnesota in the playoffs his first full season as a manager. He put Detroit in two years later. He took the Texas Rangers from last place to second place in one year there, from 48 games won when he took over to 84 games won the next year. He took the Yankees to their first pennant in 12 years, then to their first World Series championship in 15 years. Next, he put Oakland in their first championship series in a decade.

In a dozen years of managing, Martin's teams had won five pennants and been in two World Series. He departed other teams unceremoniously on the eve of victory, once when he called the owner a convict and the star player a liar. Billy goes down swinging.

As emotional as the third act of Carmen himself, Billy's specialty is instilling emotion in a game that is too often played with all the zeal of robot chess.

When he came to the Yankees this year, they were a dispirited bunch of star players, floundering desperately in the caboose of the division, 14 games or so out of the lead. When last seen, they were 3½ back and gaining. "One guy tested me," reported Martin. "And he's gone. He wasn't a Yankee." He was an Omar Moreno.

ON A RECENT swing through Texas, the manager was suffering back spasms. He called in the Rangers' team physician, an old friend, for an injection. Somehow, it went wrong. The needle went in too far and pierced a lung, which collapsed.

Martin was rushed to the hospital. Long, patient bed rest was prescribed. The lung did not re-inflate. "There was, like this big bubble sticking out of my chest," he recalls.

Nevertheless, he called for his clothes. The doctors protested, refusing to sign his release. "I signed myself out of the hospital," he said. "What was I going to do, lie there and read box scores?"

Why did he take a chance and come back on half a lung?

"Why did I come back in the first place?" demands Billy. "I got a five-year contract with the Yankees. I get paid whether I manage or not. I came back because it's one of the greatest honors in the world. Why, this country needs the Yankees! Like hot dogs, apple pie, the flag – and the New York Yankees! You want this country to turn into a National League?"

Downtown Indianapolis is jammed on a fall Sunday these days.

Restaurants and hotels are booked to capacity, parking lots filled with cars.

All around the new Hoosier Dome, activity abounds. The Indianapolis Colts are at home for a National Football League game and fans are pouring thousands of dollars into the city's economic heart.

Eight hundred miles to the east, Memorial Stadium in Baltimore sits empty.

Kids no longer hawk pennants or $2 parking spaces along 33rd Street. It's easy to find a spot at the bar at the Stadium Lounge nearby. From the end of baseball season in October to the start of the next one in April, residents of the city's Waverly section, where the stadium is located, have their quiet neighborhood to themselves.

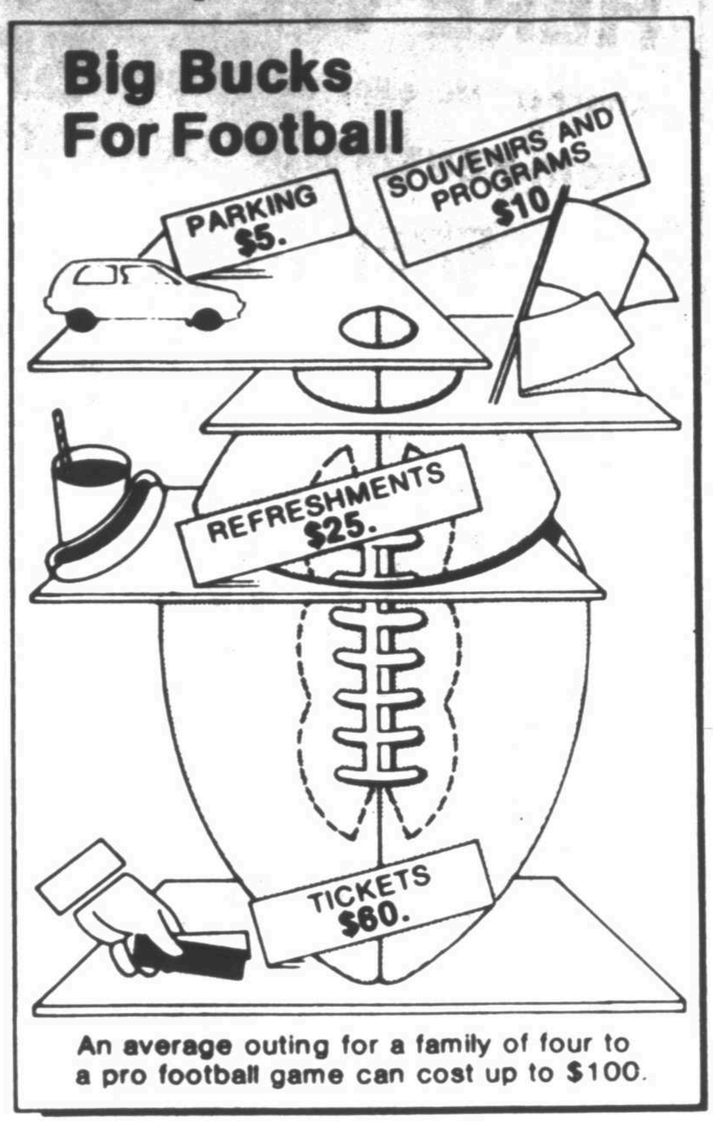

The Baltimore Colts, the team of Unitas, Moore, Ameche, Marchetti and Berry, of sudden death and season tickets willed to survivors, are gone.

When Robert Irsay moved the Colts 1½ years ago, more than the name of the franchise changed hands.

So did money — an estimated $9 million in player and front-office salaries and twice or even three times that much spent on tickets, hotel rooms, restaurant meals, bar tabs, parking fees and other economic fringe benefits that accrue to a major-league city on game day.

"WE FIGURE the direct economic benefit somewhere in the neighborhood of $25 million to $30 million," Indianapolis Mayor William H. Hudnut said. "It may be much larger when you consider the rollover effect of dollars spent."

The arrival of the Coftt created jobs — concessionaires, parking lot attendants, ticket takers and what Hudnut calls "other entry-level positions ... jobs for people who don't have many skills."

An average outing for a family of four to a pro football game can cost up to $100.

IN BALTIMORE, city and state officials have been hard-pressed to fill the financial void left by the Colts.

In 1983, the last year the Colts played at Memorial Stadium, the team contributed between $35 million and $40 million to the state's $1.2 billion sports industry, according to Dennis McGee, spokesman for the state Department of Economic and Community Development.

"It worked out to $12 million in direct spending, in salaries and buying hot dogs and parking fees," McGee said. Indirect spending added about $24 million to Maryland's economy.

With a gross state product $52.8 billion in 1982, McGee said $35 million did not really have much impact on Maryland's overall economy.

"But if you live in Baltimore, it's a large chunk of money," McGee said.

THE impact on Indianapolis is not just economic.

"I think it's given a lot of attention to Indianapolis that has stiminulated investor interest," Hudnut said. "That's very hard to calculate, but our image has been enhanced by the many times it has been of the lips of people around the country, due to the Colts and other major sporting events we're involved with.

"Our downtown is revitalized. It's on the move. There's a lot more going on. Some of the hotels that were empty on weekends are now full when the Colts play. Some of the downtown restaurants that were having a tough time are now having a good time."

The Hyatt Regency Hotel sits in the shadow of the $81 million Hoosier Dome, a combination sports arena and extension of the city's convention center.

"We got a lot of transient room business on game weekends. Our Sunday brunch has been very successful, as well as the to-go stations we've set up for food in the lobby," Hyatt manager Steve Janicek said.

There is a carryover effect, too.

"You can't make a business go just on the strength of eight or 10 games," said Van Brown, a consultant-developer for Shaboom's, a restaurant which opened after the Colts came to town and is located a couple of block from the Hoosier Dome. "But the Colts bring people downtown that haven't been there for some time. Some 60,000 people see the downtown, notice improvements and become excited about the development."

"THE professional team goes beyond the recognition factor — that the name Baltimore gets beyond our borders," said Marvin Bond, a spokesman for the Maryland comptroller's office. "The important aspect of any professional team is promoting the state or city, and that's where Baltimore gets its greatest benefit."

People come to downtown Baltimore for reasons other than a football game. The Inner Harbor has been rebuilt in the last decade, going from an area of warehouses and winos to a brick promenade with smart shops and a toney clientele.

REBELS

THE TASK of catching Bryant's tosses will fall primarily on the shoulders of split ends Leonard Woodberry and Bobby Toscano.

Lamesa, whose five wins last season equaled the victory total of previous three seasons, is hoping to step into a contender's role in 1985. And more than one district coach thinks they just might do it.

"We feel we have as good a chance as anybody going in," Noonkester said. "Our kids are more familiar with the program and we have more experience as far as returners go. Depth is our big problem. We just don't have the numbers.

"Sweetwater is probably head-and-shoulders above the rest as the favorite, but I don't see a clear-cut favorite for the second playoff spot. Maybe Monahans would be favored because of their tradition, but it could be anybody.

"We're just looking for the opportunity to compete for that second playoff spot."

The Tornadoes open their season with an improving Levelland team on the road then take on District 3-3A contenders Brownfield and Seminole before entering into the tough district schedule.

Now the upper bracket starts at $2 million a year — Abdul-Jabbar and Larry Bird in basketball; Schmidt, Winfield, Jim Rice and Ozzie Smith in baseball.

Can $3 million be far behind? College Player of the Year Pat Ewing's opening bid to the NBA New York Knicks this summer was $30 million over 10 years.

While salaries escalate, franchises sell for record prices, cities beg for expansion teams and millionaire businessmen finance new leagues.

"We think we can do it better," said John Dikeou who, along with brothers George and Deno, bought baseball's Denver Bears of the American Association, renamed them the Denver Zephyrs and are seeking an expansion franchise. "Obviously we're not going into this to lose $2 million or $4 million. ... I'm not saying, 'Well, I just want to do it and I don't care what it's going to cost.'"

Making money, however, is not always the objective.

"Heaven knows one doesn't like to lose money, but I'll trade the break-even point or a poor marginal return on an investment in a baseball club for the excitement, the enthusiasm, the thrills that one gets in owning a baseball team or any major sports enterprise," said Jack Kent Cooke, who used to own the NBA's Los Angeles Lakers and NHL's Los Angeles Kings, still owns the NFL's Washington Redskins and is seeking an expansion baseball franchise for the nation's capital.

"The profit margin on the Redskins is thinly marginal but, oh boy, what fun it is."

WHEN J. Walter Duncan and Ron Blanding obtained charter franchises in the United States Football League, each had to show a $1.5 million letter of credit. A year later, in 1984, Duncan sold the Generals to Donald Trump for $10 million and Blanding sold the Denver Gold to Doug Spedding for about $11 million.

In 1976, when Tampa Bay and Seattle joined the NFL, an expansion franchise cost $16.5 million. In 1984 the Dallas Cowboys, Denver Broncos and San Diego Chargers were sold for $60 million to $80 million apiece. The New Orleans Saints, who have never had a winning season, were sold to auto dealership magnate Tom Benson Jr. last June 3 for $70.2 million.

"I never have owned a professional football team and never have been interested, but I don't want to see the team leave New Orleans," Benson said at the time.

"The reasons for buying a team go all the way from profits to an expensive ego trip," said Wellington Mara, owner of the New York Giants, whose father, Tim, bought the NFL team in 1925 for $2,500. "A guy that has enough money to buy a team and is looking for a profit would do better buying government bonds.

"But I don't think a football franchise is ever sold for less than it's bought for, so I think they may be thinking at least a little about it as a long-term investment."

When New Orleans was granted a National Basketball Association franchise for the 1974-75 season, it cost $6.15 million. In the past year, the Denver and Milwaukee franchises went for $20 million apiece. And in the NHL, the Kansas City Scouts were sold for $6 million in 1976 and moved to Denver, then were sold again for $9 million in 1982 and moved to New Jersey. St. Louis, the last NHL franchise to change hands, was sold to Harry Ornest for $12 million in 1983.

"I bought the team to make a dream happen," Ornest said. "It sounds corny, but that's what happened. I was born and raised in Edmonton, dreamed of hockey and baseball all my life. ...

"It's losing money, but I don't have an iota of regret nor an ounce of trepidation. You don't go into an NHL club, unless it's in New York, Chicago or Montreal or someplace like that, if you're thinking of investment return only."

In 1975, baseball's Chicago White Sox changed hands for $10 million. Last year the Minnesota Twins were bought by Carl Pohlad for $47 million, the Detroit Tigers by Tom Monaghan for more than $50 million.

When someone gets out, someone else wants in.

Colgate withdrew from the sponsorship of women's golf and Nabisco picked it up. On the men's tour, the Dean Martin Tucson Open Golf Tournament became the NBC Tucson Open, then the Joe Garagiola-Tucson Open, then the Seiko-Tucson Match Play Championship. Other golf and tennis tournaments pick up new sponsors each year. Communities eager to promote themselves stage tournaments and sports festivals.

In the process, tradition gives way to money.

DENNIS Diaz, owner of Kentucky Derby winner Spend a Buck, passed the Preakness and a shot at a possible $432,200 payoff in the second leg of thoroughbred racing's Triple Crown to pick up $2.6 million in the Jersey Derby. Now, the operators of Churchill Downs, Pimlico and Belmont Park are talking about upping the ante to restore the Triple Crown's allure.

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Thursday, August 29, 1985

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Prominent people begin to trust you. The future looks rosy! Build on the reputation you have already established. Movers and shakers obtain the financial backing they need to do great things. A new romantic relationship boosts your morale. A major change in lifestyle is possible. Old friends help out when you need them most. Although you are very loving, you often have difficulty in expressing your emotions. Confide in romantic partner. CELEBRITY BIRTHDATES: director-actor Sir Richard Attenborough ("Gandhi"), Michael Jackson, actress Isabel Sanford, actors Richard Gere and Elliot Gould, the California Angels' Doug DeCinces, auto racing's James Hunt, Ingrid Bergman.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You receive important support from an unexpected quarter this morning. Be on the lookout for a signal. A financial plan will win approval if your facts and figures are accurate.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): In a single moment, you can turn a sensitive situation to your advantage. Look your best at both work and home. There is a new emphasis on physical and mental self-discipline.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Refuse to let a talkative associate distract you from your work. Higher-ups will judge you on your productivity, not your good intentions. Be truthful with romantic partner.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Adding something new to an old tradition could make it even better! The sheer joy a romance brings you makes the relationship worth the effort. Be careful not to spend too much money.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Today could provide an experience you will savor forever. Only you know what really makes you happy. A promise could prove expensive. Choose your words with special care.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You may soon enjoy a prosperity you never expected. Business and financial matters require all of your attention. Let romance simmer for a while. You cannot afford to procrastinate at work.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): A shock could jolt you into doing something that will benefit you for years to come. Romance reaches a new plateau. Accept an invitation to sample a special delicacy.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Worldly wisdom may be thrust upon you today. Make good use of your special talents. Others look to you for leadership. Be strong. Seize a chance to work outdoors. Romance blossoms.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Look beyond the flamboyant exterior of a new acquaintance or place and you will find a real gem. Wearing bright colors boosts your spirits. You are in a position to blaze new trails.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Good things come in small packages now. Financial rewards reach a new high. You draw nearer to achieving a longtime goal. Children play a key role in your success.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Avoid a materialistic associate or you could be drawn into a plan that will neither please nor benefit you. Finalize special negotiations today or abandon them. Signing a note brings good luck.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Give comfort priority over style when buying a vacation wardrobe. Gardening attracts your interest and could lead to extra income. Do not be taken in by a newcomer's soulful expression. Request references.

Yesterday's column featured an unusual safety play by declarer. Here's another rare kind to add to your collection.

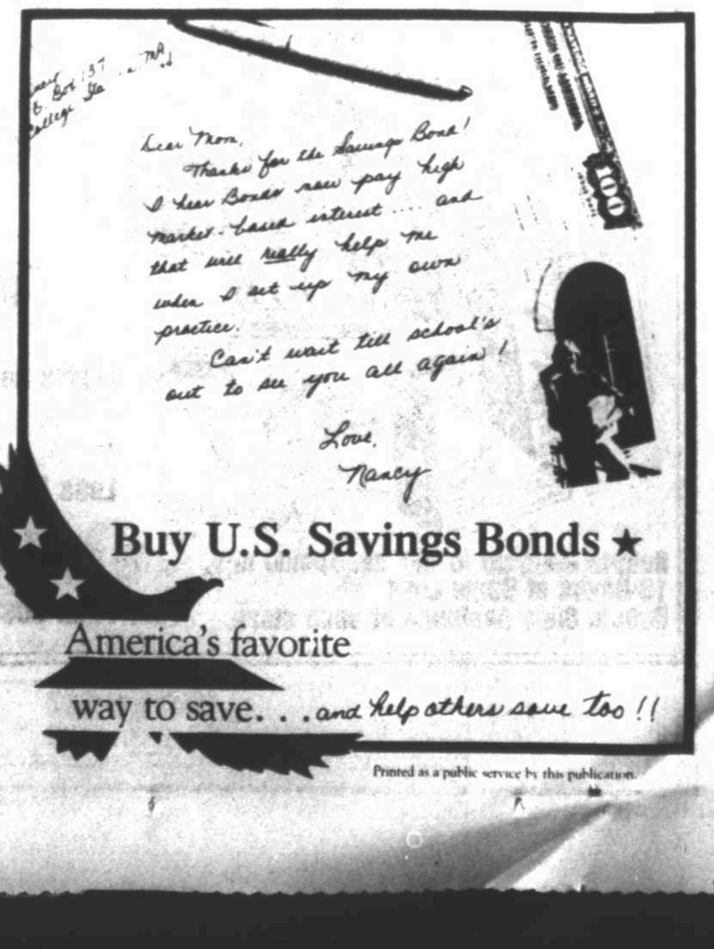

South was an old-fashioned bidder — the modern tendency would be to respond one heart despite the great disparity in suit quality. Had South responded one heart, he would have known that no 4-4 major fit was available. Now he was faced with a rebid problem, and two no trump was a practical solution. North carried on to game.

West led the king of hearts and declarer, of course, won the ace — he had a sure second stopper in the suit. It might seem that declarer had no problem, but he was not blessed with second sight. If he led a diamond to the jack, he would not be able to enjoy the suit should a defender be able to hold up the ace of diamonds for one round. Therefore, it might seem that the percentage play would be to lead a diamond honor from the table to gobble up the jack. However, that would fail should the suit divide 4-1. The defenders would then have a second stopper in the suit and declarer would be an entry short to establish and run the suit.

Declarer found a pretty way to guard against the possibility of West having started with specifically a singleton ace of diamonds. He came to hand with the king of spades and led that jack of diamonds.

Had West followed with a low diamond, declarer would have gone with the odds and overtaken in dummy in the hope that the suit would split 3-2. His care was rewarded, however, when West produced the ace. The defenders could take no more than two heart tricks, for as soon as declarer gained the lead he would cross to dummy with the ace of clubs to take six diamond tricks.

It is true that the odds favor a 3-2 division of five missing cards. But there is no harm in playing for an extra chance.

Tony Award-winning composer says high prices killing Great White Way

ATLANTA (AP) — Tony Award-winning composer Marvin Hamlisch, working on a musical to open later this year, says he is worried that Broadway may die because of high ticket prices.

"There are shows running on Broadway now that are about young people, but young people can't afford to see them," Hamlisch, whose "A Chorus Line" has become the longest-running show on Broadway, said Tuesday.

"The 17-year-old who really loves Broadway and wants to go out on a date and see a show is going to have to spend over $100."

Hamlisch performed with the Atlanta Symphony on Tuesday.

MANCHESTER, England (AP) — Prince Charles and Princess Diana, visiting survivors of last week's jetliner fire, helped cheer up a 13-year-old girl who had lost three members of her family, nurses said.

The royal couple broke off their holiday in Balmoral, Scotland, to visit nine survivors at hospitals in this northern England city Tuesday.

A British Airtours Boeing 737 burst into flames Thursday during takeoff, killing 54 people.

Lindsey Elliott, 13, had been despondent over the loss of her mother, aunt and uncle in the blaze, "was absolutely thrilled" when the couple visited her room in Wythenshawe Hospital, said nurse Janet Edwards.

Johnny Cash

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Country music superstar Johnny Cash, who has been outspoken about his past addiction to prescription pills, says drug dependency is the equivalent of mental prison.

"We must all come to believe in a power bigger than ourselves," Cash, 53, said Monday night at a benefit concert for a new substance abuse program.

As the strains of Cash's famous "Folsom Prison Blues" faded, the singer said, "There are other kinds of prisons, prisons of the mind, prisons of chemical dependency. Thank God those chains can be broken."

Cash spent two months at the Betty Ford Center for Chemical Dependence in Rancho Mirage, Calif. He was released in January 1984.

BOSTON (AP) — Comedian and impressionist Billy Crystal says a "mah-velous" opportunity came along and he won't appear on NBC's "Saturday Night Live" next season.

Crystal, creator of the Latin character Fernando who says everyone looks "simply mah-velous," told WBZ-TV he planned to start shooting a movie called "Running Scared" with Gregory Hines on Sept. 16.

"They didn't know what was going to happen with (the program)," he said in the interview, a transcript of which was released Tuesday. "This movie came up and I really wanted to do it."

Matt Messina, a spokesman for "Saturday Night Live," said Crystal had said before that he probably would not be back. The new director for the series still is assembling the cast.

NEW YORK (AP) — Elie Wiesel, whose books have focused on the mass extermination of Jews by the Nazis, and economist John Kenneth Galbraith will be among recipients of this year's Franklin D. Roosevelt Four Freedoms Medal.

Wiesel, 56, chairman of the National Holocaust Memorial Commission, has spoken for threatened peoples everywhere "so that the lesson of the Holocaust has universal meaning," the award foundation said Tuesday.

Galbraith, 76, professor of economics at Harvard University, was cited for his writings on developing nations and his contributions to economic thought.

Others slated to receive the award in a Sept. 27 ceremony at Bard College in Annandale-on-Hudson are U.S. Rep. Claude Pepper, for his work on behalf of the Social Security system; Kenneth B. Clark, a social scientist; and Isidor Rabi, a nuclear scientist.

ORANGE, Calif. (LAT) — Patricia Ann, the healthiest of three surviving Frustaci septuplets, had been scheduled to be released from Children's Hospital of Orange County Wednesday, but she will have to wait at least another week to go home, a hospital spokeswoman said Tuesday.

"The doctors have decided that she is not gaining weight quickly enough," hospital spokeswoman Laura Johnson said of Patricia, the first of the septuplets born May 21. Ms. Johnson would not comment further on the infant's condition or that of her two surviving brothers.

Three other babies born to Patti and Sam Frustaci died shortly after birth. One other girl was stillborn.

MARIETTA, Ga. (AP) — Former Georgia Gov Lester Maddox says he shows no signs of AIDS despite the virus-tainted blood he received from a controversial Bahamian cancer treatment center.

"Good news, great news, wonderful news, marvelous news," the 69-year-old told reporters Tuesday on the lawn of his suburban Cobb County home.

Thirteen samples of Maddox' blood, analyzed for traces of HTLV-III, the virus scientists believe causes acquired immune deficiency syndrome, showed "no sign of it whatsoever," he said.

Maddox, an ardent segregationist who served as governor from 1967-71, was diagnosed with prostate cancer in 1982. Following a recommendation from the late U.S. Rep. Larry McDonald, a urologist, he sought treatment at Dr. Lawrence Burton's Immunology Researching Center Ltd. in Freeport, Bahamas.

TREASURY BILLS

Yields decline

WASHINGTON (AP) — Yields on short-term Treasury securities fell in Monday's auctions to their lowest levels since mid-July.

The Treasury Department sold $7.2 billion in three-month bills at an average discount rate of 7.07 percent, down from last week's 7.14 percent. Another $7.2 billion was sold in six-month bills at an average discount rate of 7.21 percent, down from 7.28 percent last week.

The rates were the lowest since July 15, when three-month bills averaged 7.06 percent and six-month bills sold for 7.20 percent.

The new Treasury bill discount rates understate the actual return to investors — 7.3 percent for three-month bills and 7.59 percent for six-month bills.

Dollar down

LONDON (AP) — The dollar staged a broad but modest retreat on foreign exchange markets early today. Gold bullion prices rose.

Midmorning dollar rates compared with levels in Europe late Tuesday included:

—2.7745 West German marks, down from 2.7850

—2.2745 Swiss francs, down from 2.2768

—8.4795 French francs, down from 8.4975

—3.1225 Dutch guilders, down from 3.1300

—1,861.50 Italian lire, down from 1,864.15

—1.36105 Canadian dollars, down from 1.3618

London's five biggest bullion houses fixed a recommended midmorning gold price of $339.30 a troy ounce, up from $334.75 late Tuesday.

The metal was bid at $339.75 in Zurich, up from $336.50.

Earlier in Hong Kong, gold closed at a bid of $339.26 up from $335.06.

San Francisco bank penalized $2.25 million

CROCKER BANK

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government announced Tuesday it had imposed a record $2.25 million in penalties against Crocker National Bank of San Francisco for failing to report almost $4 billion in cash transactions as required by law.

Treasury Department officials said the bank, the country's 11th largest, had committed 7,877 reporting violations from 1980 through 1984.

Officials said the violations were uncovered during a routine audit of the bank last October and that the bank's new management had cooperated with the investigation.

Under the Bank Secrecy Act, banks are required by law to report all cash transactions above $10,000. The law is designed to give federal law enforcement officials a tool to investigate cases involving drug deals, corruption and organized crime.

The Crocker case marked the sixth time this year that the government has penalized banks for failure to report. The Bank of Boston on Feb. 7 pleaded guilty to a felony charge of failing to report $1.22 billion in cash transactions with nine foreign banks and agreed to pay a $500,000 fine.

In June, the Treasury Department announced smaller civil penalties against four New York City banks for reporting violations.

Assistant Treasury Secretary John M. Walker Jr. said the civil penalty imposed on Crocker was larger because "the extremely serious nature of Crocker's violations warranted a substantially more severe penalty than in prior cases."

"Although there is no evidence that the bank itself deliberately engaged in money laundering, Crocker's reporting failures were systemic and pervasive," Walker said at a news conference.

Walker said a full investigation would be undertaken by the Internal Revenue Service to see if criminal charges should be filed against the bank or any individual employees.

Harold P. Reichwald, Crocker's general counsel, said the bank had agreed to the settlement even though outside counsel had "strongly advised us that we would win a case against the government in court."

He said the settlement "puts the past behind us and enables us to concentrate our resources on the future."

"It was a mistake, an honest mistake," he said of the violations, blaming them partly on changes in reporting laws several years ago. Reichwald added there have been no disciplinary actions by the bank as a result of the penalty and that none are planned.

Walker said the bank could have faced maximum penalties of $1,000 for each violation for a total of $7.88 million.

He said the amount not reported totaled $3.88 billion and that $3.43 billion of that sum had come from six banks in Hong Kong. This money, in some cases totaling millions of dollars in paper money per shipment, was delivered by couriers from the Hong Kong banks to Crocker's main San Francisco branch where it was deposited and the accounts of the Hong Kong banks were credited.

Since these transactions involved cash of more than $10,000, the bank should have reported each transaction to the government, Walker said.

IPAA head says oil industry not through with Treasury I

By JOHN PAUL PITTS
Business/Oil Editor

Jon Rex Jones, president Independent Petroleum Association of America (IPAA), warned a gathering of Midland oilmen Tuesday that the oil and gas industry should be prepared for a bitter fight on proposed tax reform measures.

Speaking at Texas American Bank's first After-Business-Hours Energy Seminar, Jones said the industry should not think they will be dealing with Treasury II proposals when Congress reconvenes, but starting all over with Treasury I proposals which were much more severe with the oil and gas industry.

He said Dan Rostenkowski (D-Illinois), chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, would take up Treasury I all over again. Treasury I was a stringent administration tax simplification and reform proposal which called for the elimination of percentage depletion and intangible drilling costs. It was replaced by softer proposal (Treasury II) that would have allowed intangible drilling costs to stand.

"Be assured," said Jones, "that Treasury II will not be the basis on which tax reformed is discussed. Rostenkowski has already gone on record as saying that what is done with the oil and gas industry will be the "acid test" for tax reform.

Jon Rex Jones

Jones said it appeared that Rostenkowski had already made up his mind on what should be done "to" the oil industry. "The entire energy industry, solar, coal, and everything combined, got only one day in which to testify before Ways and Means on proposed tax reform. IPAA got only 10 minutes, and Rostenkowski was not even there,"said Jones.

The Albany, Texas oilman said a budget balancing scheme this session would put tax reform in the front and there was a 50 percent chance that a tax reform package would be passed before the end of the year. He said there was a chance that Congress may attempt to tie an oil import fee to the loss of expensing IDC's.

Jones warned that many in Congress were still laboring under the idea that the U.S. should import all the oil it can, living off the oil of others and saving U.S. oil in the ground for a rainy day. He called the notion fallacious.

The outgoing IPAA president, who ends his term in two month, said IPAA was created 55 years ago during the Hoover Administration, as a direct result of such thinking.

"Our imports then were up to 300,000 barrels per day, and Mr. Hoover thought we should use all the foreign oil we could and save ours. IPAA was formed to counter this notion. A group of oilmen organized in Denver and set about to convince Mr. Hoover that a broke and bankrupt oil industry would not be able to deliver oil when it was needed," said Jones.

He said that it was unfortunate that some still think that way. Said Jones: "They should remember that it was our good friend Canada that shut off the import spigot on us first in the Yom Kippur War."

Hodel maintains right to change offshore plan

Los Angeles Times —
Washington Post News Service

SAN FRANCISCO — In a dramatic break with key congressmen, Interior Secretary Donald P. Hodel on Tuesday maintained his right to make major changes in a compromise agreement on oil and gas development off the California coast.

"I certainly never said anything to them (the congressmen) about the number or type of modifications that I contemplated," Hodel told reporters.

Hodel's remarks were the latest in a series that have caused concern among members of the California congressional delegation with whom he reached the preliminary accord in July. The compromise sought to allow offshore development in 150 tracts while exempting large sections of the coast until the year 2000.

Last week, Hodel raised the possibility of changes in the location of the 150 tracts and later said he was reconsidering the moratorium on the exempt sections of coast.

On Tuesday, two leading congressmen who negotiated with Hodel emphasized that they had bargained in good faith and questioned whether the interior secretary was succumbing to pressure from the oil industry.

"I think the secretary needs to know he has an awful lot of credibility on the line with this issue," said Leon E. Panetta, D-Calif. "This agreement was not casually negotiated."

Panetta added that a major retreat by the Interior Dept. would amount to a "Large fraud on the members of the California delegation."

Mel Levine, D-Calif., said he still believed Hodel was acting in good faith but said he was "suprised" by the secretary's remarks and described Hodel as being under "massive pressure" from the oil industry.

"You don't make an agreement contemplating major changes," Levine said.

Hodel said on Tuesday that his view of the agreement is being 'reshaped' in large part by the series of public meetings he has been holding in California to assess public reaction. The plan is strongly opposed by the oil industry and related businesses, who have contended that the most productive tracts were excluded from the agreement.

But, even as Hodel appeared to be emphasizing oil industry concerns, he announced that he was excluding two more environmentally sensitive areas from off-shore development.

He said they were an underwater ridge near the Farallon Islands off the coast of San Francisco known as the Cordell Bank, and an area off Monterey Bay.

He previously has announced that he would exclude Big Sur, the Farallon Islands, San Francisco Bay and Point Reyes. Hodel said his announcement was clearly intended to satisfy environmentalists.

Labor costs help keep inflation down

Associated Press

Moderate labor costs helped keep inflation down in the second quarter, while an improving economy pushed 1.8 million Americans above the poverty level last year, the first significant gains in nearly a decade, the government says.

Meanwhile, the government said Tuesday that the pressure of imports helped spark a second-quarter gain in non-farm business productivity and an automobile industry study warned of dramatic cuts in domestic production over the next decade unless U.S. manufacturers cut costs by 25 percent.

Output in non-farm business rose at an annual 2.2 percent rate in the second quarter compared with the previous period, while hours worked rose 1.2 percent, the Labor Department said. The second-quarter increase represented an upward revision from the 0.5 percent preliminary figure issued last month.

Manufacturing productivity rose at an annual rate of 7.5 percent, due to intense competitive pressure on U.S. industry from imports. Unit labor costs in manufacturing fell 2.5 percent and in non-farm business they rose 2.3 percent from April to June.

Meanwhile, the Census Bureau reported that the improving economy helped 1.8 million Americans climb above the poverty level, the first significant decline in U.S. poverty in nearly a decade last year.

Gordon W. Green Jr., in charge of socioeconomic statistics for the Census Bureau, said the national poverty rate declined nearly 1 percentage point to 14.4 percent, or 33.7 million people living below the poverty line. The poverty rate in 1983 was 15.3 percent, or 35.5 million people.

The poverty threshhold for an urban family of four was $10,609 last year, up from $10,178 a year earlier. The rate is slightly lower for rural families.

At the same time the poverty rate was falling, median family income was growing by 3.3 percent to $26,430 last year.

Nuclear commission ends investigation

BEAUMONT, Texas (AP) — A completed investigation by the Nuclear Regulatory Commission at the River Bend nuclear plant may pave the way for Gulf States Utilities Co. to obtain an operating license at the facility, officials said.

"The investigation has been completed, and GSU has cooperated fully," Clyde Wisner, commission spokesman, said Tuesday. "I think they can proceed further."

"At this point there's not a lot we can say. They (Gulf States) haven't gotten their license yet, but I think they (commission licensing officials) are reviewing that again," Wisner said.

He said the investigation had put the licensing request for the $2.75 billion project in St. Francisville, La. on hold.

Gulf States spokesman Kim McMurray said the company on Tuesday provided the NRC with the records and information they had requested.

"We haven't heard anything official from them, but hopefully that (the records) will satisfy the NRC and we can proceed," Ms. McMurray said.

Gulf States has completed construction of the 940-megawatt plant, 40 miles north of Baton Rouge, and had formally requested the license that would allow crews to load uranium fuel and start the reactor for low-power testing.

NRC officials say they still can't reveal the reason for the probe or the findings.

Gulf States officials said NRC investigators asked them not to discuss the investigation's focus.

Former Southland chief to return to firm after prison

DALLAS (AP) — Southland Corp. Chairman John P. Thompson says that even if the company's convicted chief financial officer fails to win an appeal and ends up in prison, "I look forward to him returning to Southland."

Clark J. Matthews II, 48, was sentenced last month to two months in prison and 22 months probation on a conviction of proxy fraud, which resulted from a five-year federal investigation of an alleged bribe scheme involving Southland, the parent company of 7-Eleven convenience stores.

Matthews has remained free during his appeal and has retained his post as Southland financial officer, senior executive vice president and board member.

In an interview Tuesday, Thompson talked of Matthews' future if he doesn't win the appeal.

"We strongly believe in his innocence," said the chairman and chief executive officer. "We have backed, are backing him, will back him."

Thompson called Matthews an "excellent executive," who is needed "very badly.

"If worse comes to worst, I look forward to him returning to Southland as quickly as he can," he said, referring to the possibility that Matthews will serve time in prison.

Some industry analysts find Southland's loyalty to Matthews somewhat unorthodox.

Monroe Greenstein, senior analyst for Bear Stearns & Co. in New York, and Ed Gagnon, retail analyst for Eppler, Guerin & Turner in Dallas, both recently described Southland's steadfast loyalty to Matthews as "unusual."

"But Southland seems to feel strongly about this. They do generally tend to be loyal to their key employees," Greenstein said.

Both analysts said Matthews' conviction probably has had minimal effect on the company on Wall Street, although some investors might have questions about Southland management because of it.

Thompson said he doesn't know how it might affect the company from an investor standpoint. But he said, "I'd rather have him back and be hurt a little, if indeed we are (hurt)."

Brooks Bar-B-Q expands to new restaurant

By SUSAN LINDSAY
Business/Oil Writer

Brooks Bar-B-Q has opened its second restaurant, SCRATCHES RESTAURANT, at 1024-D Western Park Plaza.

The new restaurant will serve barbecue sandwiches and plates, the "Fat Burger" and Southern Cuisine, such as fried chicken, chicken fried steak, catfish, corn on the cob, fresh black-eyed peas and fried okra. Visitors may dine in or take out.

The restaurant will have a grand opening and specials on September 7. Owners are Julius Brooks and Jean Taylor.

Brooks Bar-B-Q opened in Midland in 1980.

THE BETTER BUSINESS BUREAU is offering the book, How to Protect Your Business, which explains how large and small companies and professional offices can protect themselves from white-collar crimes.

The book is based on case histories reported to the 165 bureaus across the country. It covers such crimes as embezzlement, phony invoice schemes, credit card fraud and computer crime.

The publication may be obtained by contacting Linda Truitt at the Midland BBB.

John Neal of Midland has opened NEAL INVESTIGATIONS, focusing on insurance compensation claims, investigating documents and taking statements from witnesses.

Neal brings over 26 years of law enforcement and investigative experience to the firm. He can be reached at 4401 Crenshaw or 685-4141.

Another new business in Midland is BUDLOW'S RESTAURANT.

The restaurant and bar, located at 117 E. Wall, offers breakfast, lunch and dinner. A free buffet will be served from 4-7 p.m. daily. This will include appetisers and items from the menu, including fajitas, steaks and hamburgers.

John and Hazel Roberts are owners.

DENE KELLY, INC., REALTORS has been appointed as real estate broker and an affiliate of Horseshoe Bay Sales Corp. to represent the properties and homes of Horseshoe Bay North and Applehead.

Horseshoe Bay is a resort community located on Lake LBJ near Austin.

Alice Howard or Faye Baum can be contacted about the resort.

A new store has opened at Midland Park Mall and two more are scheduled to open, said John Wheeler, mall manager.

WONG'S, which opened Monday, is a fast food Chinese restaurant. Toai Nguyen is owner and manager of the store.

KIDS' MART is scheduled to open in September. Manager of the childrens' sportswear store is Melany Sowell.

EXPLORATION HIGHLIGHTS

Field extender flows 1.06 Mmcfd

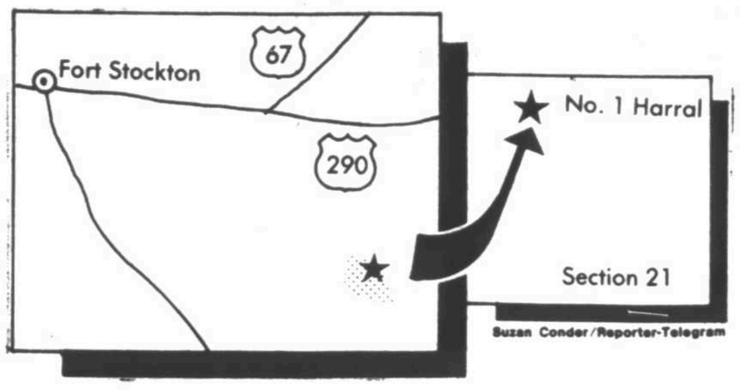

From Staff Reports

Upper Pennsylvanian gas production in the Hokit field of Pecos County was extended with completion of THE PETROLEUM CORP. OF DELAWARE, Dallas, No. 1 Harral, the second well in the field.

The well was potentialed for a calculated absolute open flow of 1.006 Mmcfd through perforations 8,948 to 8,987 ft., natural production.

Total depth was 11,501 ft., where 4 1/2 inch casing was set, and plugged back to 9,045 ft.

Formation tops, on ground elevation of 3,164 ft., include the Rustler at 1,353 ft., Yates at 1,822, Seven Rivers at 1,990, Queen at 2,600, Grayburg at 2,770, San Andres at 2,850, Wolfcamp at 6,570, Strawn at 8,940, Devonian at 9,312, Oil Creek at 10,750, Connell at 11,081, Joiner at 11,152, and the Ellenburger at 11,245 ft.

Location is 660 ft. from north and west lines of Section 21, Block 127, T&STL survey, 20 miles southeast of Fort Stockton.

Concho gas discovery flows 2.8 Mmcf daily

MARIANAS OPERATING CO., Abilene, has completed an unidentified gas discovery, located a half-mile northeast of production in the Red Appaloosa field of Concho County.

The No. 1 Owens "C" was potentialed for a calculated absolute open flow of 2.8 Mmcfd through perforations 3,395 to 3,402 ft. The interval was acidized with 300 gallons of acid. Gas-oil ratio is 1,790,000:1, and condensate gravity is 38 degrees.

Total depth is 3,935 ft., plugged back to 3,444 ft., where 4 1/2 inch casing is set.

On ground elevation of 2,172 ft., formation tops include the Coleman Junction at 1,236 ft., Palo Pinto at 3,286, Strawn at 3,677, and the Cross Cut at 3,695 ft.

Location is 2,495 ft. from north and 467 ft. from west lines of Section 60, Block 8, H&TC survey, 10.5 miles southwest of Eden.

Offshore oil production drops

AUSTIN — State offshore leases produced 145,866 barrels of crude oil during June, down from 154,576 barrels in May, according to the Texas Railroad Commission.

Gas well production from state leases amounted to 8,028,320 Mcf in June, against 7,885,667 Mcf in May.

Casinghead gas production totaled 428,527 Mcf in June, compared to 406,739 Mcf in May. Casinghead gas is natural gas produced from oil wells.

Condensate production from state leases amounted to 31,004 barrels in June, against 33,782 barrels in May. Condensates are liquid hydrocarbons produced from gas wells.

In June, offshore crude porduciton made up about 0.2 percent of total estimated crude production in Texas. Offshore gas well gas production was approximately 2.3 percent of the estimated state total.

Offshore production in state waters was reported in June from 50 oil and 446 gas wells.

TWC to grant brine permits

AUSTIN — The Texas Water Commission has granted applications by Permian Brine Sales for Class III brine permits authorizing the operation of wells in Winkler and Crockett counties in West Texas.

Each permit allows the production of brine from a well on a specified permit area, according to the TWC staff. No surface discharge is authorized from any production or processing areas under the permits.

One of the brine stations is on a 12 acre site near the City of Kermit in Winkler County, and the other is on a five acre site about 22 miles northwest of Ozona in Crockett County.

In other actions, the TWC granted an applicaiton by West Texas Water Systems for a Class III brine permit authorizing the operation of a well in Reeves County which was previously owned by Permian Brine Sales.

NGP seeks to end obligation to buy fuel

LOMBARD, ILL. — Mid-Con Corp. says that its larger interstate transmission subsidiary, Natural Gas Pipeline Co. of America, has filed suit in Illinois and in Washington, D.C., seeking a determination that the company has no obligation to purchase synthetic natural gas after August 1, 1985, from the Great Plains coal gasification plant in North Dakota.

On August 1, the Great Plains partnerhsip terminated its participation in the project after the U.S. Department of Energy refused to approve a Synthetic Fuels Corp. plan to continue government support.

The Great Plains partnership had contracted to sell to Natural 20 percent of the synthetic gas produced by the plant for 25 years.

NNR adds three pipeline projects in West Texas

Northern Natural Resources Company (NNR), a division of HNG/InterNorth has announced commencement of three additonal projects related to their Central Basin Pipeline, currently under construction in West Texas.

The Dollarhide Pipeline will be built as a lateral line from NRR's 143-mile Central Basin Carbon Dioxide pipeline which extends from Denver City to McCamey. The 22-mile, 8-inch lateral Dollarhide line will be located in southwestern Andrews County. This line will supply carbon dioxide to the Dollarhide Devonian enhanced oil recovery (EOR) project operated by Union of California.

The Cordona Lake Pipeline is another lateral from the Central Basin Pipeline. This 8-mile, 6-inch line will be located in southwestern Crane County. The line will supply carbon dioxide to the Cordona Lake EOR project operated by Exxon.

NNR also will build a delivery meter station for the carbon dioxide lateral line being built by Marathon Pipeline Co. and partners to serve the Yates EOR project. The station will be located about two miles east of McCamey.

A construction contract for all three projects has been awarded to Tulsa-Houston, Inc. Construction is scheduled to begin in September. The facilities are planned to be operational later this year.

HNG/InterNorth is headquartered in Omaha, Nebraska, and was formed in July by the combination of InterNorth, Inc. and Houston Natural Gas Corp.

Artist's heart wasn't in teaching

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — Early each morning Danny O'Dowdy unlocks his studio and the feeling of loneliness descends on him. He drinks a cup of coffee. Sometimes he stretches it to two. Then he starts to work "and suddenly, once I get my hands on the wood," he said, "everything is all right."

Last year O'Dowdy was a tenured professor of art at Corpus Christi State University. But he resigned his post and has since been among the small number of local artists who make their living entirely from their art.

O'Dowdy summed up the period since he left CCSU as, despite hard moments like those in the mornings, "good."

Earlier this year he was among the 125 Texas sculptors selected to exhibit in the fifth annual Texas Sculpture Symposium in Dallas.

O'Dowdy, 46, has turned away from teaching several other times in his career but said, "When I quit this time, I felt it was real. So I geared myself. I said I'm not even going back out to the university, and I'm not even going to think about it. And I haven't."

By available accounts O'Dowdy was well-liked by CCSU art students, in large part because he is said to have respected their varied points of view.

"For years while I was at CCSU I was able to keep my own art and my teaching separate," O'Dowdy said. "I didn't talk about my art to the students, and I didn't try to influence their images.

"But after a while it got to the point where I couldn't take my mind off the studio," he said. "It just reached a point where I had to decide one way or the other...Anyone can become dead weight if you don't have your heart in what you're doing."

After getting his B.F.A from Sul Ross University in Alpine, he taught at several West Texas high schools, then acquired a master's in lithography at Texas Tech, and later taught high school again.

Sprinkled about here and there during that time were several periods when he left teaching: Once, to work in an advertising agency, another, to operate his own art studio.

In 1976 he was a visiting professor of art at Texas A&I in Kingsville, then joined CCSU the following year.

O'Dowdy got a late start in art. The son of West Texas wrestler Paddy O'Dowdy, he played football through high school "and you just didn't take art and play football in West Texas in those days."

He took a turn in the Navy after high school, briefly went to college on a boxing scholarship, then dropped out.

O'Dowdy was 22 years old and working as a draftsman in California the day he idly picked up some colored pens and began drawing a bowl of fruit. His drawing led him to Sul Ross. But it wasn't until he was long out of graduate school that he "knew" he was an artist.

"I can remember almost to the day when I realized it," he said. "Being an artist doesn't mean being equated with some school of thought or team, but being able to find where you fit, how you relate to everything else. (That day) I felt what I saw in front of me was about me and it was honest..."

Somewhere along about the same time, he made another discovery: trash.

The piece O'Dowdy exhibited at the Texas Sculpture Symposium is called "Divan" and is an old couch he altered by fitting it out with a lamp, mirrors and other items. Scattered around his downtown studio at 309 Kinney near the U&I Restaurant are varius battered furnishings and other assorted junk, all waiting their turn for the artist's attention.

The O'Dowdy fondness for other people's castoffs was born while he was teaching in one of those little West Texas towns located near the site of old Indian encampments. O'Dowdy began to walk the grounds looking for artifacts, but soon began coming home with bits of glass and other oddments.

O'Dowdy's memories of those forays and of workdays staring at rows of brace-equipped student teeth found a home recently in one of the pieces in his studio. It includes an old vinyl pillow, a battered houseshoe and the grinning skull of a dog — fitted out with braces on its teeth.

A bit of the former professor shows up in O'Dowdy when he starts trying to explain his affinity for junk. He says things like, "There are four types of creativity, you know, and one of those is 'boundary-pushing.' That's like when you use something for a different purpose than the one it was designed for, like using a coat hanger to tie up a muffler."

O'Dowdy's ideas come from many sources and often unexpectedly. He enters his studio about 7:30 a.m. each day and one morning while switching on a series of lights he noticed how each light affected a drawing in progress. He plans a series of drawing of a subject in different lights.

These events also are finding their way into his work: Driving across the Nueces Bay Causeway "in a hurry to get somewhere and smashing into about a hundred yellow butterflies and wondering about some of the things we do"; picking up his son's severed finger after an accident in the studio and rushing it and the boy to the hospital; learning that the cardboard box atop the steeple of a Mexican church contained a statue of a "shamed" saint — who would remain shamed until the flock donated enough money to paint the flaking church.

Income comes from sales and commissions. A work in progress is a piece commissioned to fit in the corner of a local home. The "corner piece" features two corner-windowlike perspective drawings. It grew out of theories of Frank Lloyd Wright having to do with corner windows being "anti-Fascist" in that they break up the rigid tyranny of the rectangle, O'Dowdy said.

And of course there is O'Dowdy's famous '61 Cadillac, which sits in a corner of the studio. The Caddy may be pulled out now and again for exhibit, but it never seems to be finished. O'Dowdy began working on it in 1976, and it now bears a wondrous array of ornaments including such features as jagged fragments of glass after the fashion of Mexican rooftops and courtyard walls. Planned: A combination fishbowl and birdbath for the interior.

Potato artwork rotten exhibit

BRUNSWICK, Maine (AP) — A summer art exhibit at Bowdoin College opened to mixed reviews, but by the time it closed even the exhibit's creators had to admit the work was rotten.

The show, called The Potatoes Act Out A Paradigm Shift, turned into 2,000 pounds of rotten Maine spuds and the college's Museum of Art had to fumigate its gallery.

Officials blame last week's humid weather for hastening the art's demise.

'Hee-Haw's' Lindsey says he, Goober never really grew up

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — George Lindsey, the jovial Goober of "The Andy Griffth Show" and now a regular on "Hee Haw," figures he has raised a generation of television viewers without ever growing up himself.

"There may be more Goober in me than I'm willing to admit," says Lindsey. "I may be Goober disguised as George Lindsey.

"He and I both missed adulthood. I've never worn a snap brim felt hat."

Lindsey was on the Griffith show and its successor, "Mayberry RFD," from 1964 to 1971, and on "Hee Haw" ever since.

"I've been on TV every week for 21 years," he says with a big Goober grin. "America has grown up with me. Goober is Everyman; everyone finds something to like about ol' Goober."

There was a time, though, when Lindsey was sick of Goober — sick of his mother introducing him as Goober and his daughter calling him "Goober Daddy." Even now, it's an unwritten rule on the "Hee Haw" set that he's always called George, and he signs autographs as just plain George Lindsey.

Being identified with one character "can be an albatross as far as your career growing," he says. "You get locked into that character. Producers won't hire you for other things. But I wouldn't have done it any other way."

Lindsey, who gives his age only as "ancient," joined the 4-year-old "Andy Griffith Show" in 1964 as Goober Pyle after Jim Nabors took his Gomer Pyle character to his own show.

George Lindsey

The Griffith show was popular, Lindsey says, because "it was honest and simple."

"At that time, we were the best acting ensemble on TV. The scripts were terrific. Andy is the best script constructionist I've ever been involved with. And you have to lift your acting level up to his; he's awfully good.

"The show's still as popular today as ever and this is its 25th year."

His favorite episode was "The Talking Dog" in which Opie and his buddies put a tiny speaker under a dog's collar.

"Goober thought he had a talking dog. It revealed Goober's childlike qualities; it made you laugh and cry."

Lindsey says Griffith has often described Goober "as the kind of guy who would go into a restaurant and say, 'Hey, this is great salt.' "

Despite 21 years of steady TV work, he yearns to be the star of his own show. Or maybe land a juicy dramatic role in a movie.

"There's a role out there for me that I can win an Academy award for, maybe about a retarded person or a pathos role," he said. "I dream about that and what I would say in my acceptance speech."

He does have movie experience, having appeared in "Cannonball Run II" and "Take This Job and Shove It." His voice was used in three animated Walt Disney features: "The Aristocats," "The Rescuers" and "Robin Hood."

Early in his career, he often was a heavy and once shot Matt Dillon on "Gunsmoke."

A resident of Los Angeles, Lindsey makes about 200 personal appearances a year. He says he's visited 166 truck stops since 1984 and can sign 800 pictures an hour "if you don't look up."

He does standup comedy in Nevada nightspots and later this year will do a two-hour TV movie "Return to Mayberry" with the old Griffith gang.

Rambo was to commit suicide

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Once upon a time, there was a final scene in "Rambo, First Blood," that guaranteed no sequel would ever be produced.

An anguished John Rambo, weary from a battle in which he used his Vietnam fighting techniques to demolish a small Oregon town, was to have killed himself by grabbing the handgun of his former commanding officer, who was unable to do the job himself.

But the producers of that first Rambo movie decided to let their hero live because the content of the script demanded that Rambo survive. Producer Andy Vajna of Tri-Star Productions said no one had considered a sequel for the 1982 movie.

"We felt if we were going to let the audience root for this guy for an hour and a half, we should spare him," said Vajna.

But letting the Rambo character, played by Sylvester Stallone, survive the first movie has brought Tri-Star a golden summer. While "First Blood" grossed $120 million from worldwide receipts, Vajna notes that the sequel has already taken in more than that in U.S. box-office receipts alone.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — Linda Bessette admits she's been using her air conditioner more than usual, but she still thinks an electric bill of $914.88 — more than nine times the average month — is a little much.

Arkansas Power & Light says she and others with similar complaints got the large bills because overzealous employees estimated use too high when meter readers couldn't get into customer houses for exact figures.

The utility told them to set their sights a little lower.

Weaver doesn't like characters for actresses

LONDON (AP) — Actress Sigourney Weaver says the female characters she sees in scripts are either "intelligent and cold" or "sexual and stupid."

But in her latest movie, "Half Moon Street," she's found the best character she's ever read: Lauren, an American working in London whose sexual excapades enmesh her in a terrorist plot.

"She's a brilliant scholar and very savvy, very sensual," Ms. Weaver said. "She has a good time."

Ms. Weaver plays opposite Michael Caine in the movie directed by Bob Swaim and now shooting in London.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A stand-in for actress Jennifer Beals did the wildly gyrating dance sequences in the 1983 movie "Flashdance." In her current film, "The Bride," it's someone else's nude body seen descending a staircase.

Columbia Pictures said Miss Beals is not the unclothed actress who sides up to co-star Sting in the remake of "The Bride of Frankenstein."

However, the studio would not identify the stand-in.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The singing dolphins in the opening sequence of "Cocoon" are not the genuine article. Smart as they are, the swimming mammals are not good choral singers.

Enter special effects master Bob Short, who made Daryl Hannah's believably functional fin in the mermaid movie "Splash." Short was hired by the producers of "Cocoon" to whip up some mechanical dolphins for the chirp-a-long.

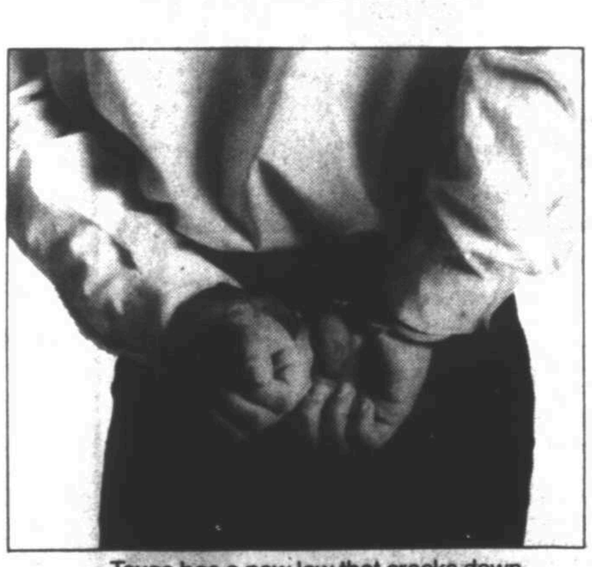

Executives of 20th Century-Fox asked Short to keep his concoction a secret, but word eventually leaked and with "Cocoon's" profits trailing off, Short confirmed that the dolphins were in fact robots.

SMOKED TURKEY--A REAL OUTDOOR COMFORTER

This season, why not add a tasty twist to your outdoor entertainment menu by combining a delicious new cooking method — hot smoke cooking — with some old-time favorite foods. This uncommon combination of traditional fare laced with a smooth smokey flavor will be the perfect enhancement to any get together with family and friends.

Cooking in a water-smoker is a hot smoking process which means the finished food will be cooked as well as smoked. It differs from the old-fashioned cold smoking method, which is done at a low temperature for long periods of time. Cold smoked foods need further cooking before eating.

In the days before refrigeration, this latter method used to be an important means of food preservation. Today we smoke-cook foods for fun and a flavor that is hard to resist. There is no need to tend, turn, or baste foods while they are being smoke- cooked.

Hot smoke-cooking requires a low temperature heat source to cook slowly enough to allow smoke enough time to penetrate the food. Soaked wood chunks added to hot coals smoulder and produce smoke. A pan of water or other liquid is the humidity source to keep the food in the cooker moist. Hickory, oak, mesquite, or alder woods produce equally good smoke flavors. Each wood imparts a different flavor — try them individually or combine two woods for a new flavor sensation. The woods add flavor without adding calories. For additional flavor, add spices, seasonings, fruit juice or wine to the water in pan.

Southern Comfort was first created more than a century ago in New Orleans. And still today its secret ingredients can be blended with a variety of beverages and dishes to create refreshing punches, like the Patio Punch shown here, and easy seasonal dishes like Comfort Barbecue Sauce and Comfort Garden Salad.

While the oven roast and barbecue methods are preferred for holidays, a smoked Butterball turkey presents a delicious new taste in other seasons of the year. Butterball smoke-cooked turkeys are most attractive with an even, dark red-brown exterior. The typical rose color under the skin and throughout the meat that is characteristic of charcoal-cooked poultry is present in turkey. The tender and juicy white and dark meat has an intriguing smoke flavor without harshness that is heavier at the surface and milder in the interior. Butterball turkey and breast of turkey are equally good smoked turkey products to put on the menu. Prepare them both and smoke-cook at the same time but slice and freeze one to serve at another time.

Water-smoked meats add a special flavor to any event. Match the flavor goodness with an equally good punch and salad. An invitation to participate in this new backyard cooking event will be eagerly anticipated by guests. They will be very curious so be prepared to share information about this new method of cooking for old-fashioned favorites. After they have tasted your fabulous new fare, there will be no leftovers making clean up breezy and easy.

TURKEY

To Prepare Turkey:

Prepare frozen or fresh Butterball turkey for water-smoker the same as for conventional oven roasting. Thaw frozen turkey according to package directions — do not thaw at room temperature. Brush the skin with oil or shortening. Insert meat thermometer deep into the thigh or into the thickest portion of turkey breast, not touching the bone.

To Smoke-Cook Turkey:

Place turkey on upper or lower rack. Put cover on the water-smoker, leaving vents partially opened. For food safety, turkey must pass through the critical range of 40°F to 140°F in 4 hours or less. When smoker temperatures are 300°F or more at the beginning of the cook and then maintained at 250°F until the turkey reaches 140°F, the turkey will safely pass through the critical temperature range. An oven thermometer on the top rack to monitor the smoker temperature and a meat thermometer in the thigh or breast to monitor internal temperatures are absolutely essential to food safety. Smoke-cook times may vary greatly depending upon the weather, wind, altitude and quality of briquettes. Briquettes must be replenished every 1-1/2 hours or the cooker temperature may fall too low to complete cooking in a reasonable length of time. Total time to smoke-cook turkey may range from 4 to 14 hours depending upon the weight of turkey products, wind and weather variables, and how constant the smoker temperatures are maintained.

When done, the thigh should be 180°F to 185°F and the breasts 170°F to 175°F. A rosy color in the cooked meat is typical of charcoal cooking and should not be confused with pink of underdone meat.

PATIO PUNCH

1 750-milliliters bottle Southern Comfort
16 ounces grapefruit juice
8 ounces fresh lime juice
1-2 liter bottle lemon-lime soft drink or ginger ale

Mix ingredients and add ice. Serve from punch bowl or pitchers. (First 3 ingredients can be mixed in advance and refrigerated. Add lemon-lime soft drink or ginger ale and ice when ready to serve.)

COMFORT BARBECUE SAUCE

1 medium onion, finely chopped
4 tablespoons bacon grease or 3 slices finely chopped bacon
1/2 cup Southern Comfort
1 pint catsup
Juice 1 lemon
1/3 cup brown sugar
1 teaspoon salt
1-1/2 teaspoon chili powder

Lightly brown onion in bacon grease or cook with chopped bacon. Remove from heat. Add catsup and Southern Comfort; stir. Add remaining ingredients and simmer slowly for 10 minutes.

COMFORT GARDEN SALAD

1 bunch broccoli, cleaned, peeled and cut into bite-size pieces (about 4 cups)
1 head cauliflower, cleaned and cut into bite-size pieces (about 4 cups)
4 scallions, thinly sliced
1/2 cup ripe, pitted olives, chopped
2 cups shredded sharp Cheddar cheese

Mix all dressing ingredients together with a wire whisk. Mix salad ingredients together in a large bowl. Toss with dressing. Cover tightly and refrigerate for one day before serving. Serves 8.

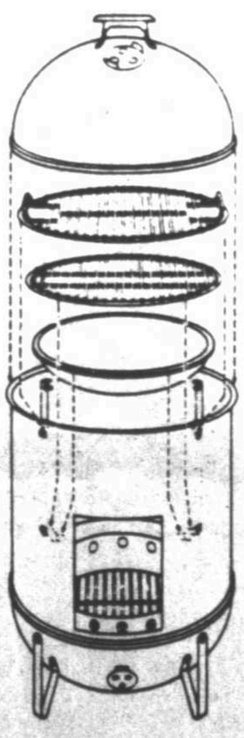

DRESSING

1 cup salad dressing (not mayonnaise)
3 tablespoons Southern Comfort
1 teaspoon celery seed
1 teaspoon dill weed

Mix all ingredients together with wire whisk. Use as dressing with Comfort Garden Salad.

HELPFUL HINTS

- Always cook with the cover on your smoker.
- Use tongs for turning meats to avoid piercing meat and losing natural juices.
- Resist the temptation to look at the foods during cooking time — every time the lid is lifted it will be necessary to add 15 minutes to the cooking time.
- Use a meat thermometer to determine the internal temperature of meat — it should be inserted in the thickest part of the meat and should not touch fat or bone.
- Lining the water pan with aluminum foil will greatly aid the cleanup chore.
- Charcoal should be stored in a dry place — damp charcoal will not burn well.
- Always use barbecue mitts or hot pads to protect your hands.
- Adjust vents as indicated for each method of cooking in your smoker.
  Smoking - all vents partially closed
  Barbecuing - all vents wide open
  Steaming - top vent closed - bottom vents open
- All vents should be wide open when preparing the fire.

PREPARING THE SMOKER FOR COOKING

- Remove top and center ring before starting the fire.
- Open all vents.
- Fill charcoal chamber with enough charcoal to make it two layers deep when spread out.
- Heap charcoal in center of grill.
- Ignite the charcoal.
- When the coals have a light coating of gray ash (about 30 minutes) spread them evenly across the inside of the charcoal chamber.
- Place the water pan in position on the lower bracket of the center ring. Fill pan with hot tap water.
- Put the lower cooking grill in place on bracket above water pan. The 18-1/2" cooking grill should be positioned on the top bracket.
- Carefully set the center ring in place on top of the bottom section of the smoker.
- Arrange food in a single layer on the cooking grills leaving space between each piece of food. (Both grills may be used for food.)
- Open door on front of smoker to place wet wood chunks on top of the hot coals.
- Partially close all vents while smoke-cooking ... use barbecue mitts to protect your hands while adjusting the vents.

Beef abundant in market place

By MERLE ELLIS

For beef, it is the best of times and it is the worst of times. It may not be evident when you go to the supermarket to pick up a steak, but beef is cheap. There is more beef on the marketright now than there has been at any time since 1978. Feedlots around the country are full of it, and the quality is better than it has been for years.

Mother Nature has been kind to cattlemen. There have been no droughts, the winter was mild, the grass has been good, there has been enough water, but not too much. There have been no major floods. The grain crop was good so feed has been cheap. That always helps to make a good year.

It's been a bad year, too. Cattle prices are lower than they have been in years. They've been going for right at or just under 50 cents a pound, live weight, recently. Why? It's been a good year.

No business in the world is as directly tied to the law of supply and demand and to the whims of Mother Nature as is agriculture. When things go well, there is an abundance and prices drop for the producer. That's what has happened this year.

According to the "beef price survey," conducted monthly by the National Cattlemen's Association, "the national average retail prices of certain cuts of beef dropped in July to their lowest levels in more than six years. Reporting on its monthly 19-city survey of supermarket beef prices, NCA noted that the national average price of ground beef, round steak and chuck roast was lower in July than in any month since December of 1978.

Prices for the more tender steak cuts, however, did not reflect the fact that beef is cheap and cattlemen are losing money. The average price of sirloin steak and T-bone, according to the recent NCA survey, rose during the past month. I have recently seen rib eye steaks going for $5.29 per pound in the same meat case where chuck roasts were selling for 89 cents a pound. The reason? Supply and demand!

Not many people want chuck pot roast for dinner on a hot summer day, so the demand for chuck is light. Instead, folks fancy steaks on the grill, so the demand for the tender premium cuts is high. Unfortunately, even though the supply of beef is high, the supply of steaks on a carcass is low. There are, for example, only about 10 pounds of T-bone steaks on a carcass, while there are about 135 pounds of chuck meat. So how do you, as a consumer, make a good year for yourself out of a bad year for the beef industry? Go with the law of supply and demand.

Stay away from steaks, particularly the premium cuts from the loin and rib -the T-bones, Porterhouse, sirloins and rib-eye steaks. Go, instead, with cuts from the chuck and round that are abundant and cheaper. It even is possible to find some good tender steaks in the chuck and round if you know what to look for.

When selecting chuck steaks, look for those labeled "first cut blade chuck." They are the ones that come off the carcass the thickness of a knife blade from the tender (and considerably more expensive) primal rib. They contain a large continuation of that same tender rib-eye muscle that I saw selling in one market for $5.29 a pound. In that same market, first-cut chucks were selling for 89 cents a pound. That's a rather substantial savings. Take advantage of savings like that!

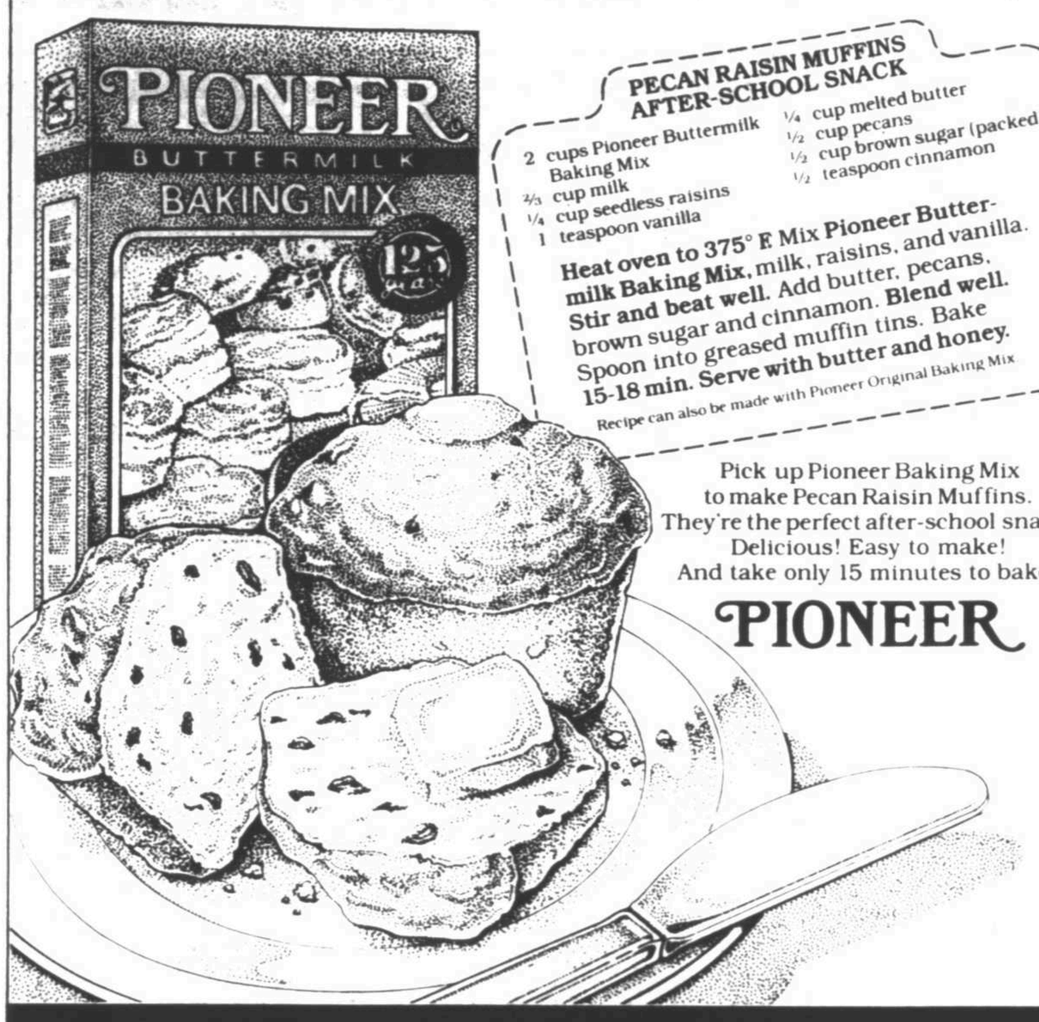

As far as the beef round is concerned, the best part for a steak for the grill is a good thick slice of the top round. The "top" is the inside muscle of the leg; it doesn't do as much work in the process of moving, so it stays more tender than other leg parts. Should you find top round on special during these beef industry bad times, stock up.

Not only are cattle prices down but the quality of beef on the market is generally up a little this year. When beef prices are down, a lot of cattlemen keep their herds on feed a little longer than they otherwise would, waiting and hoping for prices to go up. Those few extra days in the feedlot can add a lot of quality to a carcass. You might even find some Prime beef on the market this year.

Things are bound to turn arund. They always do. When the current glut of beef is gone, there will be a shortage. There always is. It's the other side of the cattle cycle coin. Prices will go up, cattlemen will have a good year and you'll be complaining. So now is a good time to stock up while beef is cheap.

Catering business not as easy as looks

Hearst News Service

There's a widespread belief that if you can read, you can cook, and if you can cook, you can cater. But New York caterer Jane Wilson says this may explain that extraordinarily high failure rate in the catering field. Wilson says cooking is only one of the skills necessary for the caterer.

The typical caterer starts as Wilson did, "in my apartment, with a freezer in the bedroom." Though this practice is illegal in most states (few home kitchens meet requirements for food-service health permits), Wilson said it's the only way most people can afford to begin.

Though she didn't have sufficient resources when she started, Wilson was luckier than most. In 1967, her Party Box catering company received favorable mention in several New York publications. Writers were intrigued with her unusual marketing tactic — delivering gourmet picnic foods and hors d'oeuvres in decorated boxes. After the write-ups, she said, "I just looked up one day and there were all these people."

Thus came the first challenge the new catering business has to face: success. She almost went under trying too hard to satisfy the demand. Now she tells others, "You can't agree to what everyone asks you to do. You must tell them what you know how to do best and make that work for them."

Wilson, who just sold her Party Box business, has numerous words of hard-earned wisdom for women entrepreneurs in general and caterers in particular. She says her firm — and perhaps her sanity — were saved when she started exchanging information with other women business owners.

Here are some of her ideas for would-be caterers:

• Learn quantity cooking. "It's one thing to cook for 80; it's another to cook for 800," she said.

• Get business training. "The people who make it become professional." Wilson said she started out thinking, "I created this. I hope you like it. I hope you like me." But she soon learned that however much people liked her work, "You don't matter to them, they have other things in their lives. That's why your work must matter to you. You have to realize that now you're getting into the dynamics of running a business."

• Practice portion control. On the list of caterer's sins, second only to running out of supplies is ordering too much. "There goes your profit!"

• Learn when to "sweat the small stuff." While quality is the caterer's stock-in-trade ("Sara Lee makes a great cheesecake for less"), Wilson says the business owner has to know when to fuss and when to "get out of the way."

• Don't try to do it all. Wilson said women have a particular talent for heading multifaceted businesses like catering firms if they'll quit trying to "be perfect. Women are used to being interrupted in their traditional roles and wearing many hats — mother, wife, chauffeur, cook."

• If you have employees, write down what you want from them. "Nobody can produce from systems that are in your head," Wilson said.

American eating habits changing with lifestyles

By MARIAN BURROS
New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — A new survey of American eating habits finds that people all over the country are purchasing elaborate ready-made dishes, having food delivered and grazing instead of eating three square meals a day. It also shows that trends that began on the East and West Coasts are moving inexorably inland even as they are losing favor where they began.

The telephone poll of 2,000 men and women was conducted in March by the Gallup Organization for the National Restaurant Association. Based on the demographics and the preference of the respondents, the research department of the association has drawn certain conclusions.

The department says that even as many New Yorkers and Californians have had their fill of sushi, croissants, mesquite grilling and pasta, the midlands are welcoming them with open arms.

The study also indicates that all over America, as more women go to work, they are cooking less and looking for alternatives. If they and their families don't eat out, they eat in as long as someone else does the cooking. Extrapolating from the survey, more than 70 million Americans, for example, had pizza delivered in the first three months of 1985, while 74 million others either ate Oriental fast food or gourmet takeout.

Pizza and Oriental cooking have become as ordinary as hamburgers, according to the poll, and Americans are also willing to try foods that are new to them. Somewhere in the neighborhood of 25 million Americans ate Cajun food during the period of the survey and, according to the study, there are 25 million others who would be willing to give it a try. Half that number either have gone to a restaurant serving sushi and sashimi or would be willing to try those dishes.

American regional cuisine, the darling of the food establishment, has been sampled by 63 million Americans, or 36 percent of those surveyed, and there are 30 million others who said they are likely to try it.

According to the restaurant association, these newer eating concepts were developed in response to the children born in the baby boom of the late 1940s, 50s and 60s, but the president of the association says the industry may have been aiming at the wrong audience. It is not the older baby boomers but "their younger brothers and sisters who are significantly more likely to patronize these new types of restaurants," said the president, Ted J. Balestreri. In other words, it is not those who have been termed Yuppies, but the 18-to-24-year-olds who are in the forefront of the trends. They are buying gourmet takeout and Oriental fast food, trying pasta and barbecue.

There are only three kinds of specialty foods out of the 15 included in the survey in which this younger group is not the leader: Cajun-style cooking, mesquite grilling and diet or light menu items.

Fajitas heading northward 'like a runaway longhorn'

By WANDA A. ADAMS
Hearst News Service

A Tex-Mex specialty unknown outside the Southwest just a few years ago is blazing its way north like a runaway longhorn. Fajitas — roll-your-own burritos made with marinated beef — are as popular these days as mesquite at a Texas barbecue.

Just about every Mexican-style chain restaurant has introduced fajitas, and restaurateurs say Yankee customers are taking to the new experience like Yuppies to Perrier. There's also evidence that fajitas are lighting fires in home kitchens.

A fajita is more than the sum of its parts, but those parts have to be assembled first: Strips of marinated and quickly grilled meat, a mound of spicy, chopped vegetable relish, some fresh, hot tortillas. "Extras" such as salsa, guacamole, sour cream, beans or stir-fried peppers are served separately.

Then comes the "art." Drizzle lime juice over the meat, palm a tortilla, fork some meat into it, add the condiments, roll and enjoy. Those who have experimented with moo-shoo pork or Peking duck will recognize the technique.

There are disagreements about the history of fajitas. Butcher-columnist Merle Ellis favors the story that fajitas were invented by Mexican cowboys on the famed King Ranch in Texas. But the account given by the Oregon Beef Council, which introduced fajitas to 25,000 restaurateurs last April, is more universally accepted.

It seems the vaqueros (cowboys) who rode up from Mexico to work in Texas were paid in part in the tougher cuts of beef. One of these was the beef skirt, the thin muscle surrounding the ribs (thus the name fajita, meaning "little belt or girdle"). Rather than breaking their teeth, the resourceful cowboys marinated the strips of meat in lime juice to break down the tissues. The strips were then grilled over mesquite fires, which weren't trendy then, just practical, since mesquite is a nuisance weed to ranchers.

The cowboys no doubt spread them with a simple relish of chopped onions, tomatoes and other vegetables, lemon juice, oil and fresh coriander. That relish is the source of another dispute. It's the same one served with fajitas in restaurants and homes today, but restaurants have taken to calling it pico de gallo, although quite incorrectly. According to several Mexican cookbooks, true pico de gallo (pee-ko day GUY-yo) is a blend of jicama, oranges, fresh vegetables and spices, served sometimes as a relish and sometimes as a salad. The name means "rooster's beak."

There are as many recipes for fajitas as there are stories about the origins of this Mexican-style sandwich. In Mexican restaurants, the compulsory ingredients are beef strips marinated in citrus juice and served with a chunky, fresh tomato sauce and tortillas. Beyond that, anything goes. The beef may be skirt steak or any other strip cut of beef. Some restaurants even use slivers of chicken breast or large shrimp.

Most restaurants grill the fajitas meat over coals. Restaurateurs say the citrus juice for the marinade may be lemon or lime, but it may also contain beer, soy sauce and spices ranging from cilantro to cinnamon. In Texas, tequila often finds its way into the recipe.

The accompanying relish is based on red onions and fresh tomatoes, but there the absolutes end. In addition to the relish, accompaniments range from guacamole and sour cream to refried beans, sauteed peppers and sprigs of cilantro — and the inevitable section of lime.

It's vital to butterfly the steak, splitting it in two horizontally, working with the grain. Then lightly score it across the grain. Marinate the steak overnight, then grill it very quickly — three to seven minutes a side, depending on thickness and desired doneness.

FAJITAS

1 beef skirt steak, about 1-1/2 pounds
½ cup fresh lime juice
⅓ cup Tequila or Mexican beer (optional)
⅓ cup salad or olive oil
4 cloves garlic, minced
1 serrano chili, minced (or other hot green chili)
A handful of finely-chopped fresh cilantro (or 2 teaspoons ground cumin)
Salt and fresh-ground pepper to taste

Prepare skirt steak as described above. Marinate in glass or ceramic container (not aluminum) overnight, then drain. At this point, you may rub more lime, garlic and cumin over the meat, if desired. Grill over hot coals, broil in oven or saute quickly over high heat, basting with marinade. Serve hot with fresh tortillas, salsa and desired condiments, allowing guests to make their own fajita burritos.

SALSA

This fresh salsa recipe is from Diana Kennedy's "The Tortilla Book." By doctoring it with traditional fajita-style ingredients — lime juice, chilies and chopped vegetables such as cucumber or green pepper — it can be made to approximate those tasted in restaurants.

1 medium tomato, skin left on
⅓ medium onion
6 sprigs cilantro (coriander leaves, Chinese parsley)
3 serrano chili or other hot green chili
½ teaspoon salt, or to taste
⅓ cup cold water

Chop the tomato, onion, cilantro and serranos finely. Mix the salt with the water, add to the sauce and allow sauce to season for one-half hour.

Sparkling waters flavored

New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — Never mind old Coke, new Coke, Cherry Coke and Diet Coke. Forget about Diet Pepsi with NutraSweet, with caffeine or without caffeine. There is another revolution going on in the beverage industry, and so far no one is paying much attention to it, perhaps because it has just begun.

The labels on bottles of Perrier — or more specifically, Perrier With a Twist — come in different colors, and the labels on bottles of Vintage seltzer have also changed. Sparkling waters are no longer just sparkling waters. There is a new category called flavored waters making its way eastward from California, and most often the flavors, like those for Perrier, are orange, lemon and lime.

According to Jesse Meyers, the publisher of Beverage Digest, a trade journal, the flavored waters are still just a blip on sales charts. "It's not a big speck on the beverage spectrum," Meyers said. But even so it is nothing to sneeze at. Meyers said that business for flavored sparkling waters had tripled in the last three years, and "it looks like it may triple again in the next three."

Perrier introduced its flavored waters last spring, and according to Barbara Long, director of marketing for the Perrier Group, there has been a "50 percent increase in sales in three months."

According to Meyers, Canada Dry has flavored club soda in four or five markets, and Schweppes and Seagram's are marketing flavored club sodas. And some of the soft-drink companies, like Royal Crown and Pepsi, are entering the market.

Unlike soft drinks, however, flavored waters contain no sweetening agent, though they may seem to be sweeter than plain sparkling water. They contain no artificial colors and none of the other chemicals usually found in soft drinks. In other words they fit right in with the popular image of natural and healthful foods. And because their image may be more sophisticated than that of soft drinks, they can be an appropriate alternative to spirits. While Coke hardly seems to go with grilled tuna in beurre blanc, lemon-flavored seltzer doesn't sound so bad. The rise in popularity of the flavored waters also coincides with — or is a product of — increased concerns about alcohol consumption.

Barbara Long of Perrier said the flavored waters also provide a convenience: "According to our surveys 85 percent of those who drink Perrier have it with a wedge of lemon or lime. Now they don't have to carry the lime and knife around with them."

Lowly snails turned into haute escargot

PETALUMA, Calif. (AP) — To say business is slow at Enfant Riant Escargot of California is putting it mildly. It truly moves at a snail's pace.

America's only commercial escargot company is on the move, and owners Mike Beyries and Tracy Brash hope more palates will grow sophisticated enough to appreciate their product.

Two million snails slither through two greenhouses in Petaluma every year en route to restaurants and gourmet food stores in 26 states. The snails are packed in water in 7½-ounce cans retailing for $6-$7, including a mini-cookbook.

While Beyries and Brash are serious about their 2-year-old business, they're not above joking. Beyries insists his little mollusks have great intelligence and are trainable.

Holding one in the palm of his hand, he orders it to "Stay! Sit! Play Dead!" The little critter complies.

"You have got to have a sense of humor to be in the snail business," Beyries said. His background as a professional stand-up comic on the club circuit in Los Angeles has definitely come in handy.

Beyries, however, was teaching at San Francisco State University when Brash suggested starting an escargot company. Brash had been trying to do a story on a Santa Rosa man raising snails commercially, but found he had moved to Texas, leaving behind a bookon raising snails.

"It started just as a lark," Beyries said. "Tracy is an epicurean and gourmet who has traveled throughout Europe."

Brash soon was raising snails at his Tiburon home. Enter Beyries, his boyhood chum.

"We sat down and started to talk about it one night and were still talking when the sun came up the next morning," Beyries said.

Lots of research followed, including a check of governmental regulations.

"They couldn't decide if we were a farm or a ranch," Beyries said. "Our insurance company lists us as a feed lot."

The company buys snails by the ton from farmers happy to unload the pests attacking their plants.

After delivery to Petaluma, the snails are fed a mixture of soymeal, bran flakes and trace minerals. Several weeks later, they've been fattened to eating size and are fed only water for three days to cleanse the digestive system.

"We think of ourselves like a small winery; we like to keep control," Beyries said.

Herb vinegar preserves tastes of summer

By BETTY WILSON
Hearst News Service

Herb vinegar is easy to make and a good way to preserve the flavors of summer. It's also economical. Use it often to season meats and vegetables.

White vinegar most often is the base ingredient of herb vinegar. Cider vinegar and white or red table wine may be substituted for all or part of the white vinegar. Recipes are flexible. Find a combination to suit one's personal preference.

Fresh herbs are plentiful throughout the summer. Choose any of the following: horseradish, basil, chive blossoms, dill, fennel, garlic, lavender, lemon balm, mint, oregano, rosemary, sage, salad burnet, summer savory, French tarragon, thyme blossoms and nettles. If a combination is used, it is wise to mix strong herbs such as basil, sage and rosemary with milder flavored ones.

To prepare the herbs, wash and air-dry. Remove woody stems and roots. Crush the soft stems, foliage and flower buds. Place all in a large, wide-mouth container and add until two-thirds full. Bring wine or vinegar to a boil. Pour slowly over the prepared herbs. Cover and let stand at room temperature two weeks.

Strain into clean bottles, discarding the residue. Seal and label.

TARRAGON WINE VINEGAR
1½ cups white or red table wine
2 cups fresh tarragon leaves
1½ cups cider vinegar

Place the tarragon in a quart wide-mouth canning jar. Bring wine and vinegar to a boil. Pour slowly over tarragon. Cover and store two weeks. Strain and discard residue. Pour into small bottles, adding a few fresh tarragon leaves if desired. Use to season red meats and mild flavored vegetables. Makes 3 cups.

GARLIC-BASIL VINEGAR
½ cup fresh basil
1 clove garlic
2 cups white vinegar

Place slightly crushed basil and whole garlic in wide-mouth canning jar. Bring vinegar to a boil and slowly pour over mixture. Cover and let stand two weeks. Strain, discarding residue. Pour into clean pint bottle and add sprig of fresh basil, if desired. Good as seasoning for tomatoes. Makes 2 cups.

RASPBERRY VINEGAR
3 quarts raspberries
1 pint white vinegar
Sugar

In a stainless-steel or ceramic bowl, cover raspberries with vinegar. Let stand 20 hours. Strain. Measure strained liquid and add equal measure of sugar. Place in a saucepan and bring to boil. Simmer 10 minutes. Cool and store in a covered bottle. Makes 3 cups.

Cheddar cheese flavors casserole

By TOM HOGE
AP Wine and Food Writer

When Andrew Jackson was inaugurated as president, a group of admirers presented him with a 1,400-pound Cheddar cheese, which he displayed in the White House vestibule for nearly two years while it ripened.

Then the president held open house and the cheese disappeared in two hours.

Cheddar cheese has long been one of America's favorites, eaten in sandwiches and with apple pie, plus being used as a key ingredient in soufflés, soups and omelets, to name a few dishes.

Cheddar cheese has been made in England for centuries and for many years American farmers made their own, according to the English formula.

The first American factory for making Cheddar went into production in 1851 in the state of New York.

A good luncheon dish featuring Cheddar is this recipe for a casserole.

CHEDDAR CHEESE CASSEROLE
2 tablespoons butter or margarine
¼ cup finely chopped onion
2 cups water
½ teaspoon salt
½ cup quick grits
½ teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
Dash Tabasco
Black pepper to taste
1¾ cups grated sharp Cheddar cheese
3 tablespoons soft butter
2 egg whites

In small skillet melt 2 tablespoons butter over moderate heat. When foam subsides, add the onion and cook 4 or 5 minutes until translucent but not brown. Bring 2 cups water to boil in 1-quart pan. Add salt and slowly pour in grits, without allowing water to stop boiling. Boil 1 minute, stirring constantly. Reduce heat to medium and cook 2 minutes. Add the onions, Worcestershire and Tabasco, a little black pepper and 1½ cups grated Cheddar combined with 3 tablespoons soft butter.

Preheat oven to 400 degrees. Grease 1-quart casserole. With wire whisk or rotary beater, beat egg whites until they form stiff peaks on beater when it is lifted from bowl. With rubber spatula, thoroughly fold egg whites into grits mixture. Pour into casserole and sprinkle the top with remaining grated cheese. Bake in middle of oven about half an hour, until mixture has puffed and browned. Serve 4 to 6.

Dairy products most important source of calcium

By BETTY WILSON
Hearst News Service

Milk products are our main source of calcium, the most abundant mineral in the body. Dairy products also furnish protein, B vitamins and energy.

About 99 percent of the calcium in the body is found in the bones and the teeth. The calcium of bone is not "fixed" for life. It is constantly changing. For this reason everyone needs a daily supply of calcium. Calcium also aids in the proper funtioning of the heart muscles and nerves. It helps the blood coagulate during bleeding.

Two 8-ounce glasses of milk provide 75 percent of the daily recommended adult calcium requirement. Include three or more glasses of milk for children and four or more for teens during their rapid growth period.

TO SAVE MONEY and calories, rely on fresh fluid milk and nonfat dry milk as their best sources of calcium. To equal the calcium in one 8-ounce glass of milk, one needs to eat 1⅛ ounces of Colby cheese, 1⅓ ounces process cheese, 2 cups creamed cottage cheese, 1⅔ cups ice cream, 1½ cups hardened ice milk or 1 cup soft serve ice milk or yogurt.

The calcium and protein content of all types of milk is similar. Fat content varies. Choose from 3.2 percent butterfat whole milk with 150 calories in an 8-ounce serving and 2 percent with 121 calories. Or pick 1 percent low-fat with 102 calories in an equal serving or 0.5 percent skim with 86 calories.

Fluid milk is a popular beverage at every meal and good for a snack. Take advantage of its high mutritional quality in cream soups, casseroles, sauces and desserts.

Nonfat dry milk is economical and convenient to have on hand. It is skim milk from which the water has been removed. A cup serving of nonfat milk reconstituted according to package directons contains the same nutrients as fluid skim milk.

Nonfat dry milk may be used to boost the calcium content of many foods. Add some to fluid milk, meatloaf, puddings and hot cocoa. For a quick microwave white sauce, try combining hot tap water and nonfat dry milk. Dry milk is convenient to carry on a camping trip.

Fresh milk tastes best and keeps longer when it is stored at 40 degrees or lower.

MEDIUM WHITE SAUCE

2 tablespoons margarine, melted
2 tablespoons flour
½ teaspoon salt
Dash pepper
1 cup hot tap water, stock or bouillon
½ cup instant nonfat dry milk

Top of stove method: Combine the first four ingredients in a saucepan. Stir. Gradually stir hot liquid into the mixture. Add milk granules and stir. Cook over medium heat, stirring constantly until the sauce thickens. Makes 1 cup.

To cook in microwave oven: Melt margarine in a 2-cup glass measure. Add flour, salt and pepper. Stir well to mix. Gradually stir in hot liquid. Add dry milk granules. Stir. Cook 30 seconds on high power. Stir well, checking for any lumps. Cook 1 minute on high power. Stir. If not beginning to thicken, cook an additional 30 seconds. Makes 1 cup.

Use medium white sauce with leftover cooked meat, vegetables, canned fish or add shredded cheese. It's a good substitute for can of cream of mushroom soup.

BASIC CREAM SOUP

2 tablespoons margarine
1 tablespoon flour
½ teaspon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
2 cups milk
⅔ cup purred leftover vegetable
1 teaspoon onion, grated

Melt margarine in a saucepan. Add flour and seasonings. Stir well until blended. Slowly add milk, stirring constantly. Cook, stirring constantly, until the mixture begins to bubble. Add vegetables. Cook over low heat 5 minutes. (Strained babyfood vegetables may be substituted for leftover pureed vegetables.)

Serves 4.

BAKED HONEY CUSTARD

2 cups milk
¼ cup honey
3 eggs
¼ teaspoon salt
Sprinkle of nutmeg

Scald the milk. Add the honey. Beat the eggs and salt together. Slowly add hot milk while stirring. Pour the mixture into 6 custard cups and sprinkle with nutmeg. Set cups in a pan of hot water and bake at 375 degrees for 30 to 40 minutes. To test, insert knife in center. If it comes out dry, custard is done.

Serves 6.

ORANGE MARMALADE BAVARIAN

2¼ cups milk
3 egg yolks, slightly beaten
2 tablespoons sugar
¼ teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon unflavored gelatin
½ cup orange marmalade
1 teaspoon vanilla
¼ teaspoon almond extract
1 tablespoon margarine
½ cup flaked coconut

Scald the milk. Combine the egg yolks, sugar and salt in a small bowl. Add the gelatin and stir. When the gelatin is softened add ½ cup scalded milk and stir. Transfer the egg mixture to the hot milk and cook over medium heat, stirring constantly until the mixture coats a spoon. Add marmalade and extracts. Stir and pour into 5 individual serving dishes. Chill until thickened.

At serving time, melt the margarine. Add coconut and saute until golden brown. Cool and garnish each dish. Serves 5.

Ice cream school teaches scooper's art

Associated Press

When Greg Jensen decided to trade in his wire cutters for an ice cream scooper he had no idea he would end up back in school.

How hard can it be to master the S-shaped scoop or the half-circle scoop, Jensen, a former Minneapolis electrician, remembers wondering.

But like many others before him, Jensen discovered that returning to school was essential in his quest to become a successful Baskin-Robbins ice cream franchisee.

"I questioned going back to school to learn how to scoop an ice cream cone, but it was really challenging and I learned a great deal," says Jensen, who along with his wife, Mary Jo, recently became franchisees in Tucson, Ariz.

The Jensens went to school at Baskin-Robbins National Training Center in Burbank, Calif., a few miles from the company's headquarters in Glendale. Jensen was one of more than 400 prospective franchisees who go through the 17-day business management education program each year.

"We teach potential franchisees how to run a business. It's more than scooping," says Paul Fischer, director of training services. "This is a business, and the prospective franchisee needs to know about such things as advertising, employee relations and financial control."

Jensen says it had been a long time since he had done any math.

"My index finger and thumb were sore — not to mention my mind — at the end of the day," he recalls. "But it was worth it."

During the training period, Fischer explains, the Baskin-Robbins student receives 144 hours of fast-paced training, from actual hands-on experience in a company-owned store to cake decorating.

"In some ways, the cake decoration made me feel as if I were back in grade school," says franchisee Bob Wichtowski, who runs a store in Sebastopol, Calif., a small community in the northern part of the state. "It was like finger painting. At times I felt like I had three thumbs."

WE'RE HURTING.

Saving lives can be very expensive. The costs of our disaster relief and other humanitarian programs keep mounting. And we can't afford to come up short.

Please help.

Sparkling wines have 'Strong' competition

By DAN BERGER
Copley News Service

If you listen to producers of sparkling wine, eventually you will be convinced that making fine quality sparkling wine is more difficult than making a wine that doesn't have bubbles.

First, they will tell you that harvesting the grapes for sparkling wine is far more critical than for still wine, that if you leave grapes on the vine for an extra few days, dry red or white wine will be OK, but champagne doesn't cotton to imprecision.

Then they will say that blending the various lots into a final sparkling wine cuvee, which doesn't figure much in the production of still wine, is a key step.

Finally, they will tell you that the second fermentation — the one that produces the bubbles — is a step the maker of table wines never has to suffer through.

THEN, ON THE OTHER hand, there is Rodney Strong — former choreographer and dancer in New York (Broadway) and Paris (the Lido), bon vivant, wordsmith/poet and world-class charmer — who will tell you that making great sparkling wine is a matter of two elements.

First there is dedication (which also involves skill, hard work, etc.). Then there is money.

Strong is the man who directs the team making the sparkling wines of Piper Sonoma, the joint venture between the French house of Piper-Heidsieck and California's Sonoma Vineyards. It is a venture that in the five years since it was announced and in the three years since the first wine was released has made some marvelous sparkling wine.

Recently I had a chance to ask Strong a question I long had wondered about:

"What exactly did Piper bring to Sonoma? I mean, you made some very good sparkling wine before this. What sort of French expertise do you get from this joint venture?"

STRONG SMILED the kind of enigmatic smile for which he is noted and spoke candidly, "Not much. They don't tell me much. In fact, they don't tell me anything. Basically, they brought in money — money for the equipment I needed. That helps a great deal."

The winery now has state-of-the-art mechanical equipment for handling every sort of detail, from crushing to pressing to bottling. The results are spectacular. Piper Sonoma's sparkling wines are now recognized as some of the best made in California.

I evaluated the three new releases from Piper Sonoma twice and both times I found the wines excellent. The best of them to my taste was the 1982 Blanc de Noirs ($15), a fresh, youthful, round and complex wine perfectly displaying the Pinot Noir characteristics in a white wine.

I ALSO LIKED the 1981 Tete du Cuvee ($30), which exhibits unusual characteristics such as a slight toasty aroma in a smoother, richer, fleshier base.

Clean as a whistle and fresh is the 1982 Piper Sonoma Brut ($13), a leaner, more delicate wine than the others that Strong said "goes in a flash," referring to its ephemeral charms.

Strong pointed out that making these wines was a matter of adapting to the vines of Sonoma County, identifying those that would make fine sparkling wine, and then keeping his hands off the Chardonnay grapes.

"The flavor of Chardonnay is so driving, it's like a truck," said Strong. "I never use more than 50 percent Chardonnay in any of the sparkling wines. If I want a more intense flavor, I step on the gas — I add Chardonnay."

He said his sparkling wines were intended as an homage to the French, who invented the methode champenoise that is used to make fine sparkling wine, and that he never intended to steal their thunder. If he has, it is entirely unintentional.

PIPER SONOMA is not alone in making fine sparkling wine these days. It is a buyer's market for the bubbly, what with the gray market importers bringing in some premium-label wines at lower costs than ever before (because of oversupply) as well as the ever-growing number of new California producers.

NOW THERE'S MORE competition. I recently tasted five wines I had not tried before, and found all to be excellent. Here are tasting notes:

- 1978 Chateau Ste. Michelle Blanc de Noir Brut ($20): For those who like a toasty, rich, full taste, this wine will be impressive. The full, round finish is a bit heavy for food, but the taste is excellent.
- Non-vintage Le Clerc-Briant Brut ($15): This exceptional wine from a long-established Epernay house has the perfect Pinot Noir nose, complexity and a fine balance — a marvelous wine to match with food.
- Non-vintage Joseph Perrier Cuvee Royale Brut ($15): Straightforward, attractive flavors and a fine smooth finish.
- 1979 Joseph Perrier Cuvee Royale Brut ($24) is amazingly fresh and complex.
- Non-vintage Joseph Perrier Brut Rose ($26) is full, dry and crisp, a perfect match for food.
- The Joseph Perrier and Le Clerc-Briant wines are newly imported to this country so may not be familiar to you, but both producers make fine products, and both are well-priced.

So although Rod Strong continues to charm the maximum out of California's soil and grapes, his competition is getting stronger.

And trying to make sense out of the current wave of fine sparkling wines is my misfortune: I have to try them all. Well, as the man said, someone has to do it.

Handbook explains appliances

By DESIREE VIVEA
Copley News Service

Looking for a general, easy-to-understand guide to the major cooking appliances in your kitchen? Look no more: Maytag has published a 192-page paperback that's brimming with information about gas, electric, convection and, of course, microwave ovens.

Maytag's "Handbook of Good Cooking" begins with a brief outline of the history of cooking, from Paleolithic times to the present. With chapters on Range-Top, Oven, Microwave and Complementary Cooking, the book will answer many of your questions about the various methods you can use to prepare your family's meals.

For example, the Range-Top section describes the benefits of grilling, wok cooking, griddle and slow cooking, and offers a sampling of recipes for each method. Also included are tips on utensils and accessories.

The Microwave Cooking chapter discusses techniques, cookware and accessories and factors affecting cooking time. Included is a handy "Utensil Test," to help you determine if a utensil is microwave safe.

For a copy of Maytag's "Handbook of Good Cooking," send check or money order for $3.95, which includes postage and handling, to: Consumer Information Center, Department 8 PR-C, The Maytag Co., Newton, IA 50208. (Today's recipes from Maytag's "Handbook of Good Cooking.")

SUPERSCRAMBLE

¼ lb. bulk pork sausage
1 (8¾ oz.) can whole kernel golden corn, drained
¼ cup chopped green onion
6 eggs
⅓ cup milk
½ tsp. salt
⅛ tsp. pepper

Put double thickness of paper toweling on bottom of microwave-safe 9x9x2-inch baking dish. Crumble sausage onto paper toweling in dish. Cook in microwave oven 2½ to 3 minutes at HIGH (100 percent power).

Slip out paper toweling. Stir in corn and onion, spreading evenly in dish. Cook in microwave oven 1 minute at HIGH.

Beat eggs, milk and seasonings with fork. Pour egg mixture over sausage mixture. Cover with plastic wrap.

Cook in microwave oven 5 minutes at HIGH, stir after 3 minutes to move cooked portions from edges to center. Let stand covered 1 to 2 minutes before serving. (Remove scrambled eggs from oven when they are slightly underdone; heat retained in eggs completes cooking.)

Serves 4.

ONION-STUFFED FISH ROLLS

2 tbsps. butter or margarine
1 medium sweet Spanish onion, chopped
½ lb. fresh mushrooms, cleaned and chopped
¼ tsp. salt
¼ tsp. dried thyme leaves, crushed
4-5 white fish fillets (about 1½ lbs.)
Salt and pepper
1 (10¾ oz.) can cream of mushroom soup
⅓ cup dry white wine or milk
2 tbsps. chopped parsley

Melt butter in 1-quart glass measuring pitcher in microwave oven 30 to 40 seconds at HIGH (100 percent power). Stir in onion and mushrooms. Cook 4 to 5 minutes at HIGH, or until tender.

Season with ¼ teaspoon salt and thyme. Sprinkle fillets lightly with salt and pepper. Spoon onion mixture onto fillets. Roll each one up carefully; secure with picks. Place fish rolls in circle in 8-inch round glass cake dish.

Combine undiluted soup, wine and parsley. Spoon over fish. Cover with plastic wrap.

Cook in microwave oven 10 to 12 minutes at HIGH, or until fish is done, rotating dish every 5 minutes.

Serves 4 to 5.

BLUSHING RICE TOMATO CUPS

6 large firm ripe tomatoes
Salt and pepper
2 tbsps. butter or margarine
½ cup chopped onion
½ cup chopped green pepper
1 (4 oz.) can sliced mushrooms, drained
1 (8 oz.) can whole kernel golden corn, drained
3 cups cooked rice
1 tsp. salt
¼ tsp. pepper
½ cup diced cheddar cheese, divided
Paprika

Wash tomatoes; cut slices from top of each tomato. Cut out center pulp and reserve. Sprinkle tomato shells with salt and pepper. Turn upside down to drain.

Melt butter in shallow 2-quart microwave-safe dish in microwave oven 1 to 1½ minutes at HIGH (100 percent power). Add onion and green pepper. Cook 1 to 2 minutes at HIGH, or until crisp-tender.

Stir in mushrooms, corn, rice, reserved tomato pulp, 1 teaspoon salt and ¼ teaspoon pepper. Cook 3 to 4 minutes at HIGH. Mix in ¼ cup cheese.

Spoon ½ cup of mixture into each tomato shell. Top filled shells with remaining ¼ cup cheese. Sprinkle with paprika.

Spread remaining filling in 2-quart glass baking dish. Place filled tomatoes on top of mixture in dish. Cook in microwave oven 6 to 7 minutes at HIGH, rotating dish one-quarter turn after 3 minutes. Let stand 2 to 3 minutes before serving.

Serves 6.

DEAR ABBY

Object of women's charms objects to their attentions

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I have a problem I suppose most men would sell their souls to have, but I would sell mine to be rid of it. Women chase after me. I have just begun a new job, and four of the 11 secretaries here are after me — one is married. They are not even subtle; they come right out and tell me what they have in mind. One actually started putting her hands where they didn't belong, and when I sternly rebuked her, she continued to pursue me.

I am not interested in any of these women because I am gay. This is no secret, but it doesn't seem to dampen their enthusiasm — they want me anyway. I have had this problem all my adult life, but now it's reached the breaking point.

I once asked four women why they thought women fell for me knowing I was gay, and I got four different answers.

Believe me, if I ever find out what it is, I am going to change it! Please rush me some advice. I'm at the end of my rope. — RELUCTANT SEX OBJECT IN OHIO

DEAR OBJECT: You should know there is nothing more tempting than forbidden fruit! Tell these predatory females that you aren't interested, just as you'd tell a man in whom you had no interest.

DEAR READERS: Even though selling or serving alcoholic beverages to persons of high school age is illegal in most states, studies reveal that 93 percent of high school students have consumed alcoholic beverages at least once — with 72 percent drinking in the past month.

The need for dealing realistically with teen-age drinking is supported by drinking and driving statistics, and the growth of treatment facilities for adolescent alcoholics.

I have just read a booklet that I think should be in every home where there are children from 10 to 18 years old. It's for children and parents to read. It's titled, "Let's Talk About Drinking."

It can be obtained by writing to: Family, P.O. Box 57008, Washington, D.C. 20037.

The booklet is free. And the postage is paid, too. Send for your booklet today.

DEAR ABBY: I've lived in this home for 25 years and have always used gas to heat it. Last year my next-door neighbors decided to switch to wood. The wood burning continues for 24 hours a day all winter long and the inside of my house constantly smells of burning wood. My eyes burn, my nose is stuffy and my sinuses hurt.

Wood burning is allowed in this township, so I was advised to speak to my neighbors about this annoyance. I even offered to pay them $500 a winter not to burn wood, but they told me they didn't want the money. I tried to seal my house up to keep the odor out, but it creeps in anyway.

I can't afford to move, and I'm uncomfortable with things as they are, so what do you advise? DREADING WINTER

DEAR DREADING: Because an activity is permitted by law does not make it moral, ethical or acceptable. One's conduct should be guided by consideration for others and a sense of fairness.

Obviously if you can't afford to move, you can't afford to sue your neighbors for imposing noxious fumes on you. Pity. It appears that you are at the mercy of selfish and unfeeling neighbors.

If anyone out there has a suggestion, please send it to me, and I'll pass it along.

(Problems? Write to Abby. For a personal, unpublished reply, send a self-addressed, stamped envelope to Abby, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038. All correspondence is confidential.)

Make peach butter this season

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

For several years I made fruit butters (that old-time preserve) but I finally gave up preparing them. They took hours of slow cooking and, to keep them from scorching, continuous stirring toward the end of the cooking. Then a friend introduced me to the oven method of making fruit butters which need stirring only a few times. This oven method is fine as long as the day is cool.

This year a California cook came up with a method — new to me — of making peach butter quickly and easily. In trying her recipe, we sliced the peaches in a food processor, boiled the slices for 5 minutes and then pureed them in the processor. (Even though the peaches were unpeeled, the puree was beautifully smooth.) After that, comparatively brief cooking did the job.

SMALL BATCH PEACH BUTTER

4 to 5 large fresh peaches
½ cup water
2½ cups sugar

Halve and pit peaches; do not peel. Using the medium slicing disc in a food processor, slice the peaches — there should be 4 to 6 cups. (Volume of fruit varies according to ripeness.) In a broad heavy saucepan bring peaches and water to a boil. Cover and simmer until tender — about 5 minutes. Process in a food processor with the metal blade until a smooth puree results.

Return puree to clean dry saucepan, add sugar and bring to a boil, stirring to dissolve sugar. Boil gently until mixture darkens in color and begins to thicken on the bottom — about 15 minutes; it will be thicker when it is cold. Store in the refrigerator.

Makes about 3 to 4 cups.

School lunches aid two generations

Copley News Service

Two generations of American schoolchildren have enjoyed the benefits of free and reduced-price school lunches made possible through the National School Lunch Program. It's administered by the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Food and Nutrition Service.

Operating in nearly 98 percent of the nation's public school districts, the program serves 23.3 million students in 91,000 schools daily.

In an evaluation of the effects of school nutrition programs on 7,000 schoolchildren and their parents, researchers found that pupils who eat school lunches intake more nutrients and have more energy than students who do not.

Keep school lunch season nutritious, safe

WASHINGTON (AP) — The youngsters are about to head back to school and that means the start of another season of early-morning lunch making for millions of parents.

Shiny new lunchboxes will be sported by many children, while the traditional brown bag will do for others.

Either way, parents need to make sure that the food is not only nutritious but safe.

Bacteria thrive in warm temperatures, and if given a few hours they can multiply to the point of causing food poisoning, with attendant nausea, dizziness, abdominal cramps and diarrhea, according to the Food Safety and Inspection Service of the Department of Agriculture.

The simplest way to avoid problems is to keep hot foods hot, and cold foods cold, the department says, and that isn't as hard as it may seem.

Vacuum bottles or other insulated containers will keep foods like soup or chili piping hot for hours.

Those containers can hold cold items such as fruit, also.

Commercial freezer gel, usually sold in the picnic section of markets, can also be effective in keeping food cold in the lunchbox or bag. Another alternative is a plastic bag with ice cubes, but be wary of leaks.

Cold helps protect perishable items like meat and poultry sandwiches.

Another way to handle such items is to freeze them ahead of time. A frozen sandwich placed in a bag or lunchbox in the morning will thaw by lunchtime.

However, the department food experts urge cutting down on butter and mayonnaise if freezing sandwiches, because they can make bread soggy.

Food safety experts say they have no preference between bags and lunchboxes. Both do equally well at keeping food hot or cold, although the box does offer more protection from crushing.

Just remember to clean lunchboxes after use, they say, or use a fresh bag each time, since used bags may contain bacteria.

Here are some other lunch safety tips for the youngsters:

- Keep lunch bags and boxes closed until it's time to eat. This is especially important to keep meat and poultry clean and cool.
- Don't store your lunch in a warm place at school, such as on a radiator or in direct sunlight.
- Don't trade lunches. There's no way to know if the food you get from someone else was properly prepared and safely stored. Ask your parents if you can help plan your lunches, so you get what you like and won't have to trade.

Rainy day picnics enjoyable

Associated Press

A wicker hamper, an umbrella for rain, a damask tablecloth and napkins to match: with these items as clues, any Englishman would be able to tell you that an English picnic is in the offing.

According to Tim Hansell, of Fortnum & Mason, the formal picnic is still very much a part of the scene in England, where open air activities such as a day at the races or a night at the opera in summer bring out hordes of well-dressed folk who take a meal on the grass.

With a well-deserved reputation for rainy summers, England is not a place where the weather is allowed to stop a picnic. The English go to a picnic regardless of the weather, so they try to choose a place where there is some cover. Nevertheless, notes Hansell, an umbrella is always taken along. In fact, added the manager of the corporate business division for the English department store, he went to a rainy day picnic himself in Kensington Square shortly before leaving for an American business trip.

ENGLISH PICNICS feature cold, but elegant, foods. A typical starter might be foie gras, smoked salmon or ham with melon or fresh figs. Next comes a fish course — perhaps half a lobster in aspic, then meat such as game pie, cold roast chicken or ham — or all three. With this course, add two or three salads like tomato, green salad and cold vegetables.

For dessert, raspberries and cream, a savory course of cheese and crackers and then chocolates would round off the meal.

With the food, three wines would probably be served — Champagne, a dry white or red wine and a sweet dessert wine.

According to Hansell, it was the relative poverty of restaurant choices which led the English to develop a healthy picnicking tradition. During the 18th and 19th centuries, obtaining a good meal away from home required bringing it along oneself, he said.

His research had led him to conclude that the 19th century was the heyday of English picnics. In 1802, the Picnic Club was established by Regency fashionables, including the Duke of Queensberry, Lady Jersey, Lord Carlisle and Lady Buckinghamshire as well as the then Prince of Wales. The events focused on charades, theatricals and picnic suppers provided by a local tavern.

BUT FOR REASONS that are not quite clear, the Picnic Club got a bad reputation as being a bit too racy, and it was dissolved in 1803.

This setback did nothing to halt the development of picnics to heights of unparalleled grandeur in the decades which followed. Hansell credits the growth of the empire with its great riches and leisure, the introduction of spices and exotic foodstuffs and the English love of pomp and circumstance with helping to stimulate the picnicking habit.

If anything, picnicking became more elegant in Edwardian times, and up to World War I it was strictly the province of the gentry.

Even in the 1920s and 1930s when large household staffs were the rule, picnics followed tradition. There were (and still are) nursery picnics, wedding picnics, birthday picnics and boating, hunt and beach picnics.

If menus have changed little over the years, neither have the variety and and number of table accessories considered essential. Fortnum's, which caters many picnics, advises that a properly packed English picnic hamper should include: fish plates, dinner plates and dessert plates; if cold soup is contemplated, add bouillon cups. Glassware that is necessary (crystal if possible) should include champagne, wine and dessert wine glasses.

UTENSILS REQUIRED include fish, salad and dinner fork, knife and spoon. And it is suggested that besides a tablecloth and napkins, a picnic rug and ground cloth should be taken. If you prefer, pack a folding table and chairs.

Add to the basics the salt and pepper shakers, corkscrew, butter dish, wine cooler, coolant packs (a 20th-century addition), a thermos for cold soup and a separate hamper for food and condiments, and you begin to see just how much trouble the English are willing to go to for an outdoor meal.

On the other hand, the bill of fare printed in "Mrs. Beeton's Book of Household Management" in 1861 makes it clear that today's elaborate picnic is rather a meek affair when compared to Victorian excess.

Mrs. Beeton's suggestions for a picnic for 40 persons includes, in part: a joint of cold roast beef, a joint of cold boiled beef, two ribs of lamb, two shoulders of lamb, four roast fowls, two roast ducks, one ham, one tongue, two veal and ham pies, two pigeon pies, six medium-sized lobsters, 18 lettuces and six baskets of salad.

The menu goes on to suggest stewed fruit "well-sweetened," a variety of pastries, cakes and tarts, dinner rolls and bread and — believe it or not — six pounds of butter.

1 pint orange sherbet
1 pint mixed cup-up fresh fruit

Into a 1-quart melon mold tightly pack ice cream, then sherbet. Cover and freeze. At serving time unmold on a serving plate. Surround with fruit — orange sections, seedless grapes, sliced peaches or nectarines and berries make a delightful combination. Makes 8 servings. —(AP)

Church will be allowed to run day nursery

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

A specific use permit to allow a day nursery to operate out of a house adjacent to Christian Church of Midland was approved Tuesday by Midland City Council during an unprecedented second hearing in two months on the request.

During a July 9 meeting, the council rejected the church's application for a specific use permit to allow Heritage School to operate in the house, instead of its location in the church building. The rejection was based on neighborhood objection.

But on Aug. 13, the council voted to reconsider the application after being informed by City Attorney David Reagan that neighborhood objection can't be the sole reason for turning down a permit. The case must be considered on how it would affect the neighborhood, including such factors as traffic. "The specific use permit recognizes there are certain activities which aren't offensive to a neighborhood if sufficient controls are placed on them. If they can't put sufficient controls on them, then it should be be denied," he said.

The permit was granted with certain conditions including:

— Hours of operation be 9 to 11:30 a.m. Monday through Friday.

— Maximum number of children allowed is 22 on those days.

— Maximum number of children in the play area be limited to 12.

— No signs in front to advertise the nursery.

— The certificate of occupancy be obtained prior to opening and the specific use permit apply only to the church. If the property changes hands, the permit will be discontinued and the zoning retained as a single family district.

SOME NEIGHBORS objected to the permit on the contention it would be a commercial venture in a residential area. John Oschner, 2214 Huntington, said the day nursery isn't part of the church. If it were, the city wouldn't have to issue a specific use permit, he said.

Oschner said he attended a neighborhood meeting called by the church on short notice. "We didn't exchange much meaningful dialogue. The day nursery is a commercial venture. I've heard they're a profit-making business," and he said the school should be getting about $3,300 a month from the 3- and 4-year-old students.

Council approves budget, tax rate

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

Midlanders will see a 3 percent tax increase on their property to help fund a $61 million budget after the City Council on Tuesday approved the tax rate and budget for fiscal year 1985-86.

The budget also will include $25,000 for the Human Relations Council, an item that was added during Tuesday's meeting in City Council Chambers. But the council first had to defend the increase in the tax rate and budget to several citizens who charged city employees aren't doing their job and that citizens aren't getting enough services for their money.

The new tax rate will be 39.88 cents per $100 valuation, up from the 39 cents paid this year.

The budget is about 7 percent higher than for 1984-85 and even with the tax increase the council will have to take about $1 million from its Fund Balance to balance the budget next year.

Linda Bynum, speaking for the HRC, said the council had allotted that agency $25,000 last year and eliminated the item from its budget for 1985-86. She requested $30,000 for the next fiscal year, contending the multi-ethnic agency designed to identify and solve major problems in the community is a necessary agency.

Questioned by Councilwoman Oralia Corrales about duplicating services with other agencies, HRC Executive Director Rita Jimenez replied that other groups feel more people's needs are being met with HRC.

However, Ralph Holder, 2301 Culpepper, told the council the city government could learn to get by on less money, the same action other people have had to take in the past two years.

"I'm not seeing better services. It does gripe me when governing bodies keep picking more fruit off the tree," he said.

Holder said from instances he's observed, the city has too many employees. He cited the time eight city employees were standing on the street in front of his shop with only one man working. Mayor G. Thane Akins, however, questioned why Holder hadn't called City Hall to report the men not working.

Holder continued to complain about the increasing taxes when Councilman David Godfrey pointed out he "pays several thousand dollars a year in taxes," and gets $25 a month for serving on the City Council.

"How much side benefits do you get?" asked Holder. "I can't feature a man that civic minded to do it for nothing. If there's not some side benefits there, there's some crazy people on there (City Council)," he said, and then implied he'd been asked for money by city employees. But he refused to elaborate to the council nor would he accompany Godfrey to the district attorney's office to file suit against the person.

Sammie Broach, 100 S. Carver, said if the city was raising the tax rate then why couldn't some streets be repaired. "They're all cracked up. I had to get out in the street — y'all owe me — and chop the weeds in the cracks. We're paying taxes to have this done. I'm a widow woman on a fixed income. Used to they'd cut the weeds and put asphalt in the cracks," she said.

Godfrey said she needed to call City Hall and report the problem, or to call him. "Well, I'm giving it to you now," said Mrs. Broach.

The council was questioned about the city's sealcoating program with one citizen charging the "city needs to find a better way of paving its streets."

"The sealcoating program is the best way of maintaining the streets," said Councilman Steve Davidson. "It extends the life of the street five to seven years."

Sealcoating is a process of covering a street with a layer of asphalt and caliche to seal the cracks, and it is done during the summer. Public Works Director Fred Baker said Illinois Avenue was 52 years old when it was rebuilt and he attributed its extended life to the sealcoating program. "The normal life of a street is 25 years," he said.

Some residents from east and south Midland questioned why their streets hadn't been included in the sealcoating program this year. Baker said Midland is divided into five areas, with one area sealcoated each summer. Each area is sealcoated once every five years.

Council OKs CD funds outline

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

In a divided effort, ethnic groups lobbied the Midland City Council one last time Tuesday evening for their share of $899,000 in federal Community Development Block Grant monies before a final budget was allocated about 8:30 p.m. That budget, or outline, for spending the money must be in the Fort Worth office of the Department of Housing and Urban Development by Sept. 1.

The final outline was approved as follows:

— $75,000, housing rehabilitation.

— $318,000, public works, which includes street paving.

— $146,000, code enforcement.

— $116,300, administration costs.

— $60,000, Tolbert Park phase I development.

— $5,000, Taylor Park Child Care Center.

— $20,000, Freewill Foster Home.

— $10,000, sidewalks for Langtry Village, a low-income housing project for elderly and/or handicapped citizens.

— $35,000, Eastside Economic Development Task Force.

ARGUMENTS BETWEEN the groups during the three-hour public hearing centered on eastside vs. southside, penetration paving vs. streets with curbs and gutters, a housing project vs. a multi-use facility in south Midland, administrative costs vs. indirect costs. There were representatives from Hispanic Chamber of Commerce and its task force for eastside development, the recently formed Citizens Governing Board and citizens speaking for themselves.

The Citizens Governing board, consisting of several members of League of United Latin American Citizens and Black Advisory Council, requested $50,000 for a housing study and asked that all street paving be done with curbs and gutters. The penetration paving that has been done in the

'Hoffy' honored by Purple Sage Chapter of 99s

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Hoffy is 99.

And in celebration of the rare number of her years and to recognize her contribution to aviation, the Purple Sage Chapter of The Ninety-Nines (99s), an international association of women pilots, made Midlander Virginia "Hoffy" Hoffman an honorary 99'er.

"Won't my son (Norman) be proud of this," she almost cried, as Priscilla Barbee, chairman of the Purple Sage 99 chapter, presented her the certificate. "I think this is wonderful. Women pilots (are) wonderful. I can't believe it."

"You almost believe you're a pilot," said her daughter, Virginia Rachal. "You're flying now."

Indeed, she was and has.

Mrs. Hoffman's involvement in aviation came in the late 1940s and into 1950s when she was office manager for West Texas Flying Service, a Midland-based fixed-based operation (FBO) which later became Mooney Southwest, Aquila and, finally, Memphis Aero. Her son-in-law, Midland lawyer-rancher Hal Rachal, now 73, her daughter, Virginia, 69, and son, Norman, 67, co-owned the flying service, which they sold in 1975. "She was a very vital part of the organization," Rachal said later.

Joining Mrs. Hoffman in her celebration were 99'ers Ms. Barbee and Mary Alice Tidwell and 66'er Paula Gauthier, who at 32 soloed last week. A 66'er is a student pilot who will be righted to a 99'er once she's a licensed pilot.

Though she's not a licensed pilot, Mrs. Hoffman said she has flown an airplane while her son, a Dallas jet-aircraft broker, was in command.

"I flew the plane," she said, "so you don't have to say I'm not a pilot."

"She's not a licensed pilot, but she's a pilot," said Ms. Barbee. "She's 99 years old, and this is The Ninety-Nines."

"Won't my son (Norman) be proud of this. "I think this is wonderful. Women pilots (are) wonderful. I can't believe it."

— Virginia Hoffman

Mrs. Hoffman will be 99 next Feb. 14.

"I'll be 100 next Valentine's Day," Mrs. Hoffman said, "and it's up to the doctor to keep me alive."

Rachal said his mother-in-law will be setting a family record when she enters into her 100th year.

"Longevity doesn't run in the family. She's the only longevity we have." Rachal said "Hoffy" was "quite active" up to her 95th birthday. "In the last four years, she has slowed to a walk," he said, but part of the slow-down is due to medication.

Rachal said he expects the honorary 99'er to enter her 100th year.

"The way she's going, I'll give odds she'll make it. I'll give 10-to-1 odds. When people ask me her age, I'll say 'She's a 100 minus one.'"

He indicated that he and his wife were delighted with "Hoffy's" honorary membership in The Ninety-Nine Club, which was founded in 1929 and was named after the number of charter members who organized the flying organization. Famed aviatrix Amelia Earhart was the first president of the club, which today has 6,000 members worldwide.

"We're just proud of her period," Rachal said.

And "Hoffy" was pleased over the fanfare accorded her.

"I think you girls are wonderful to come and see me," Mrs. Hoffman said. "Any time you have five minutes you don't know what to do with, come by and and I'll let you in."

Ron Jeap/Reporter-Telegram

Virginia "Hoffy" Hoffman, 99, beams over a certificate which names her an honorary member of The Ninety-Nines, an international organization of women pilots. Presenting her the award is Priscilla Barbee, chairman of the Purple Sage 99 chapter, and looking on is fellow 99 pilot Mary Alice Tidwell.

Midland man charged, held in two rapes

From Staff Reports

A 23-year-old Midland man suspected in two brutal rapes in two northwest Midland apartment complexes was being held in city jail this morning on bonds totalling $215,000.

Gary Randall Prentice, 3417 N. Midland, was arrested at his home in the Sierra Paseo Apartments about 1 a.m. Tuesday by Midland Police Lt. Gayle Reeves and Sgt. Alan Inman, according to reports. He is accused

Defendant claims charges 'trumped up'

By MARK LEWIS
Staff Writer

A 41-year-old Midland man accused of impersonating a police officer testified Tuesday that charges against him were trumped up "because the police do not like me."

"Why am I up here for two-to-10 (years) when it should be a misdemeanor?" asked Jerry Ray Murphy Sr. from the witness stand.

Prosecutors, reportedly concerned about the strength of their case, had agreed last month to let Murphy plead guilty to a misdemeanor and serve 90 days in county jail, but 142nd District Judge Pat Baskin ordered that Murphy be tried on the felony indictment. If found guilty by the jury today, he faces a penalty range of two-to-10 years in prison and up to a $5,000 fine.

According to police, Murphy is the leader of a gang of motorcycle-riding outlaws. According to Murphy, he's a simple auto mechanic hounded by police because of his appearance and lifestyle.

"Everywhere I go, it's not what I do, it's the way I look," the long-haired, tatooed defendant said during a recess. "I did a lot of bad things — but not too bad."

Murphy denied charges that he joined another man in harassing four teen-age boys at a carnival in West Midland on April 13. But his testimony turned into a rambling monologue on his relationship with Midland's law-enforcement agencies, until First Assistant District Attorney David Rosado finally objected on grounds of relevance.

Defense attorney Vern Martin responded that Murphy's testimony "shows that this person is a human being."

"His humanity's not in question," said Baskin, who ordered that Murphy's testimony be continued on a question-and-answer basis.

But Martin and Murphy were clearly concerned that the defendant's humanity might be questioned by the eight-woman, four-man jury.

"I can almost guarantee you that none of you people who serve on this jury are going to want to take Jerry Murphy home for dinner or have him marry your daughter," said Martin during jury selection, as his client laughed.

Testimony from 18-year-old Donnie Vaughn, 16-year-old Johnny Stuard, his 15-year-old brother Damon Stuard and Vaughn's 15-year-old brother David Busby, all of rural Midland, indicated the youths were leaving the carnival about 10 p.m. when they were accosted by Murphy and another man, later identifed as Shannon Day.

MISD board OKs increased tax rate

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

Midland property owners will pay higher taxes in 1985-86 to compensate for a nearly $1.2 million loss in state aid coupled with the addition of new state mandated programs for public education.

The Midland Independent School District Board of Trustees on Tuesday adopted a total 1985-86 budget of $58,236,356 — up $4,154,535 or 7.68 percent from 1984-85. To fund the budget, trustees also approved a 76.8 cent effective tax rate (per $100 valuation) or an increase of 5.8 cents (per $100 valuation) over 1984-85.

Translated into dollars, the tax rate change would mean an increase of $28.42 on a $60,000 house, $36.25 on a $75,000 house and $49.30 on a $100,000 residence including a 10 percent homestead exemption and a $5,000 state exemption. School taxes also are frozen on residences owned by taxpayers who are 65 years of age or older.

Trustee Mike Conaway defended the tax hike. "Our local sources had to go up in order to offset the loss in state sources," he said.

"We don't like it," board president Bill Jackson said of the increased taxes. "But if we're going to provide the education that this community requires, we've got to do it."

The largest MISD budgetary increase comes in the way of payroll costs which rose an annual $3,252,043 or 8 percent over 1984-85. The increase includes 42 new teaching positions, 15 additional support staff members, career ladder allocations, local contributions to teacher retirement, tutorial payments and annuity contributions, according to MISD business manager Donald Furgeson.

Furgeson said teacher salaries rose an average 4.82 percent, about 24 percent above the state base.

State mandates requiring additional staff include those which limit the class size to 22 in grades K-2, computer literacy and study skills courses for all eighth grade students and a new ninth grade biology course. The estimated cost of implementing House Bill 72 programs is $3.4 million.

The Legislature also created a state insurance program for retired teachers requiring districts to pay a portion of teacher retirement benefits for those earning more than 20 percent over state base. The figures represent about $214,000 of the total MISD budget.

In addition, trustees approved an increase in its matching annuity program, contributing up to 3 percent of each participating employee's annual salary. During 1984-85, MISD contributed 2.5 percent.

MISD teachers also must follow a stricter criteria to remain on Level II of the district's Career Ladder.

Trustees unanimously agreed to raise its maintenance standards requiring a teacher maintain an overall performance rating of 4.0 or higher on his or her official summative performance appraisal for consecutive years. In addition, no teacher shall earn less than a "satisfactory" rating on any part of the previous year's summative performance appraisal.

Failure to comply with the requirements will result in the teacher being removed from Career Ladder Level II, effective with the beginning of the next school year, MISD Superintendent Dr. Joseph P. Baressi said.

Construction to begin on psychiatric center

From Staff Reports

Construction on Glenwood Hospital, a new psychiatric treatment center, may begin "within 60 to 90 days," according to a spokesman for Healthcare International, Inc., an Austin-based health care corporation.

The hospital, a 60-bed facility to be located on a 10 acre site west of Midland Regional Air Terminal, at the northwest corner of FM 1788 and Highway 80, will be on the site of the formerly planned West Plains Hospital, a center planned by Southwest Health of Midland/Odessa Inc. Healthcare International was selected to manage and develop the facility until last year, when the company took over the project from Southwest.

"We bought the property a year ago and acquired the rights to build the hospital from Southwest," said Elliott Weir, executive vice president for Healthcare. "We hope to begin construction soon, with an official groundbreaking scheduled within the next 60 to 90 days," he said.

The project is estimated to cost $3.9 million, according to a Healthcare report and when fully-staffed, will employ 100 people.

Separate trust funds have been set up for two boys

From Staff Reports

Dominguez

Separate trust funds have been established at local banks for two 13-year-old Midland youths, said spokesmen for the banks.

A trust fund has been set up for Michael Corbin, 13, 3208 Thomas, who was critically injured June 18 when he fell out of the back of a pickup truck.

Corbin, who was standing up while holding a large piece of plywood paneling was thrown out of the truck when a gust of wind caught the paneling in the 3900 block of Holiday Hill Road. The truck was driven by Corbin's cousin, Donald Cole.

Corbin, according to Pat Brantley of Western Bank, was living with his uncle and aunt, Ben and Jo Ann Malone, who were in the process of adopting him when the accident occurred. The boy's mother died recently, he indicated.

"He's in a Denver hospital in a coma and has never regained consciousness," said Brantley. "The expenses are really mounting up."

Donors should contact Brantley or Tricia Towery at Western Bank, 694-6651.

Another trust fund has been set up at Texas American Bank for Paul Dominguez, son of Hilario and Eva Dominguez, 303 Cloud.

Dominguez will undergo open-heart surgery at Fort Worth Children's Hospital, according to a spokesman for the bank.

Interested doners should contact Argelia Terrazas at Texas American Bank, 683-5281.

HRC, Heart Association will co-sponsor talk

From Staff Reports

The Human Relations Council of Midland will sponsor an informational talk on "Facts Pertaining to the Heart" at 2 p.m. Thursday at Hillcrest Manor's Community Room, 700 W. Scharbauer Dr.

The meeting, which is free to the public, is being co-sponsored by the American Heart Association.

HUD targeted areas primarily has been penetration paving without curbs and gutters. The group also asked that a proposed bridge at Scharbauer Drive and Butternut Lane be constructed with bond money and not federal funds, and that minority contractors be given priority on city contracts.

With the $318,000 allocated for street paving, six to 12 blocks could be paved with curbs and gutters vs. 60 blocks with penetration paving. The cost is $2,200 to $2,500 a block on penetration paving and $22,000 to $25,000 a block with curbs and gutters, according to Public Works Director Fred Baker.

When it rains, children have a difficult time walking to school on streets with penetration paving, according to Edia Hernandez, a member of CGB.

BUT COUNCILWOMAN Oralia Corrales, who represents the target area on the council, said the residents she had contacted said they wanted penetration paving. "A lot of people have no paving at all. They'd prefer to have penetration paving."

Charlie Jackson, another member of CGB, countered: "People we talked to said they wanted curb and gutter. People said the penetration paving is being eaten away when it rains. I don't know if we're visiting different residents."

Councilman David Godfrey suggested a list of blocks — six with curb and gutter vs. 60 with penetration paving, or a mixture of the two — be drawn up and a series of neighborhood meetings held to gather the residents' ideas.

Joanne DeWitt, another CGB member, and Jackson questioned the administrative costs, saying one employee reportedly was scheduled to get a 10 percent increase and another a 16 percent hike.

"Neither of those employees got more than a 3 percent salary increase," said Deputy City Manager Fred Poe. CD Coordinator Susan Howell is slated to receive a salary of $31,085 with benefits totaling $6,838 for 1985-86. Expenditures are budgeted at $9,050, including $6,000 for a HUD audit fee. Indirect costs are budgeted at $70,628. Part of these indirect costs can be recouped from HUD and later reallocated for other projects, she said.

"It still represents an increase in administrative costs and we consider it excessive," said Ms. DeWitt.

The Eastside Economic Development Task Force was initiated by the Hispanic Chamber of Commerce to develop plans for revitalizing east Midland. Jackson contended that residents in south Midland "pay a large amount of tax dollars. There's a need for economic development in south Midland, not just east." He contended the same amount allocated to the eastside group — $35,000 — should also go to the Citizens Governing Board.

"South and east Midland have been deprived. Be fair to both," Jackson said.

Councilman Bart Hotchkiss asked if CGB had a budget and plan for using that $35,000 — the same requirements given to the Eastside Economic Development group for getting the money.

"I SEE EXCESS money in administrative costs. I know the money is there. Both areas could be allocated $35,000," Jackson replied.

Mayor G. Thane Akins noted that he had never heard of the Citizens Governing Board until he received a memo from the group earlier in August. "We need more information than just a request. This wasn't in your Aug. 19 letter. We've been working several weeks with the Eastside Task Force and they're committed to doing something. But I never heard of this Citizens Governing Board until recently. I don't know who's on the board."

The Hispanic Chamber, according to its president Roger Robles, consists of members of all races. The "east side," he said, extends to Interstate 20. The Task Force selected an area in east Midland to target its first efforts. "You can't eat an apple without taking one bite at a time. We thought we would start with one bite. We don't want to neglect the black community in any way."

The Task Force, said member Manuel Carrasco, has never left out the southside. "We had to start somewhere."

Mrs. Corrales pointed out that after hearing charges of a conflict of interest that she owned property in the area targeted by the task force for development she had resigned her membership on the task force. "I do not own any empty lots," she said.

MS. DEWITT also requested $50,000 for a housing study which would be conducted by an Austin group, Henneberger, Paup & Associates. Godfrey questioned the need for building low-cost housing in Midland. "There's housing all over Midland as cheap as it's been in the last 10 years. You can buy housing cheaper than you can build it," he said.

Mrs. Corrales said the problem she had with the request is that Ms. DeWitt is the only one who has brought up the issue. "The people's concern over and over has been the paving. Unless you can find proof of people wanting this" she wouldn't vote for the request.

The money wasn't given for the proposal. However, Godfrey said he was willing to listen to John Henneberger if he would come to Midland and explain his program of allowing people to rent a place for two years and then apply the rent money as a down payment for buying the unit.

Barbara Harris asked the council to consider allocating money for a multi-purpose facility in south Midland. "Rather than blacks divide themselves from the Hispanics, maybe we can come together and talk about this multi-purpose center." Instead, the council said Ms. Howell had some ideas concerning the center and no money was allocated.

CHURCH

"We'd welcome Heritage School if they didn't charge for it. It would be a mission then," Oschner said.

Spokesman for Heritage School was Steve Vaughan. After the meeting, he said the school operates on two sessions: Monday, Wednesday, Friday with a charge of $75 per student; and Tuesday and Thursday at a fee of $60 per student. The most money obtained in one month is $3,000, he said. "The church pays for some of these kids to go to this school."

Christian Church of Midland has operated Heritage School four years and ran into the zoning problems when it purchased a house at 2602 Neely and decided to use it for some Sunday School classes and the day nursery. Vaughan described Heritage School as a "missionary effort" with a Christian curriculum equivalent to that approved by the state. It is not a baby-sitting service, he said.

THE ZONING code changed in 1983 to call a facility a school if it had 100 students and was located on a two-acre tract, according to Vaughan. Heritage School fell into the day care center category.

Because of problems involving some people who have operated day care centers and which have been shut down by the state for alleged criminal acts against some of the children, Vaughan said he supports stricter guidelines on the centers. "There should be a license and a fee required of day care centers and pre-schools every year. We're teaching young people and it shouldn't be taken lightly."

Councilwoman Oralia Corrales moved to deny the specific use permit on the basis of the neighborhood objection. But that motion failed to draw the council's majority vote.

Councilman Steve Davidson noted the application should be judged on its own merits and not the fact that a church is involved. He also suggested some of the problems should have been worked out between the church and the neighbors before the issue was taken to the council.

"The church needs to do some mending in their relationship with their neighbors," added Councilman Gordon Marcum II. "I heard of lot of innuendoes against the neighbors. It's imperative the church be the best neighbor it can. We have churches all over the neighborhoods. I'd hate to see the day when a church can't go into a neighborhood."

Mayor G. Thane Akins pointed out the school has been operating in the church the past four years "and there have been no complaints. Even those against it (the permit) said if it was moved back to the church building they saw no objection. It says they're more concerned about the building it's in and not the use. It boils down to is it a compatible use in the neighborhood."

THE MOTION to approve the permit passed with the only dissenting vote coming from Mrs. Corrales.

In other action, the council approved new parking areas at Midland Regional Airport and a master plan for the proposed Midland Air Park. A 60-second parking limit was set for the lane in front of the Terminal Building. That lane is for people loading or unloading passengers.

The plat for Alpha Industrial Park, located north of Interstate 20 between Market Street and South Midland Drive, was passed by the council. Don Hellinghausen with the park said he had a possible tenant willing to locate a facility in that park. The company, an oilfield-related firm, will hire a maximum of 50 to 60 people and spend up to $2.5 million in the area.

Domino's Pizza delivery man robbed at knifepoint

From Staff Reports

A Domino's Pizza delivery man was robbed at knifepoint Tuesday night by two suspects who apparently ordered a pizza delivered to an apartment in the Peppertree complex, 2700 Midland, according to police reports.

Richard Wright, 4301 Raleigh, told police the two men got away with about $30. The incident was reported about 11:54 p.m., reports said.

In other reports from law-enforcement agencies, a Midland man reported the theft Monday of a $6,000 drilling bit which he had left on the sidewalk in front of his mobile home.

Steve Carey, space 233, Airline Mobile Home Park, told sheriff's deputies he left the bit on the sidewalk two weeks ago. He didn't think anyone would be able to carry off the 195-pound bit, reports said.

Lawrence Alfred Coleman, 1211 E. Magnolia, reported the loss of about $1,250 worth of items in a Tuesday burglary of his home. Among the missing items were a $450 diamond ring and a $350 revolver, reports said.

Allen Rollwitz, 1400 S. Connell, reported the loss of a $450 air compressor and a $200 weed eater in a Tuesday burglary, reports said.

A $750 oven and a $600 washer-dryer set were reported stolen by J.R. Berry, 3211 Haynes, from a home he owns near county roads 1213 South and 180 West. The burglary occurred sometime between Friday and Tuesday, reports said.

From another home near the same intersection, an $850 1983 Yamaha dirt bike was found missing Tuesday by Dave Hubbard, Star Route B, Box 303. Two suspects were seen leaving the area, reports said.

Jody Schlabs, 3609 Caldera, remains listed in critical condition in Midland Memorial Hospital this morning, an MMH spokeswoman said. Ms. Schlabs was injured early Monday morning in an accident on West Highway 80.

Released from MMH Tuesday were Lorie Davis, 4415 Northcrest, injured Sunday morning in a one-car accident on Loop 250, and Mary Martinez, 404 E. Estes, shot in the upper chest at her home Aug. 16.

RAPE

of the Saturday night rape of a 51-year-old Midland woman who lives in the same apartment complex, and has also been charged with the July 3 rape of a 24-year-old woman at the Quail Hollow Apartments, 3001 N. Midland.

Justice of the Peace Robert H. Pine set bonds of $25,000 for a charge of aggravated assault, $40,000 for a charge of sexual assault and $150,000 for a charge of aggravated sexual assault.

According to police, both rapes were particularly vicious and brutal.

"We're glad to have him off the streets," Chief of Police Wayne Gideon said today.

Prentice gained entry in both cases by asking to use a telephone to call someone with jumper cables to recharge his car's battery, according to police.

TRIAL

"They grabbed Johnny Stuard and threw him up against the car," Vaughn testified. "They said they were police officers."

But Vaughn later conceded Murphy wasn't the one who frisked Stuard, and Day's girlfriend Stephanie Long testified that Day acted on his own.

"It was just a prank is what it was," said Murphy of Day's actions. "I can do a lot of things but I can't impersonate no policeman."

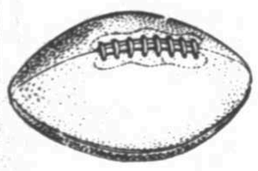

Day was not indicted in the incident because he was recently convicted of burglary and is serving a sentence in the Texas Department of Corrections, according to District Attorny Al Schorre.

Martin, who was Schorre's predecessor as district attorney, said he tried to subpoena Day, but he couldn't be brought to Midland in time for the trial.

Gays plan to protest ruling that reinstates sodomy law

DALLAS (AP) — A federal appeals court ruling that reinstates Texas' sodomy law won't force homosexuals back into the closet, gay leaders said Tuesday while vowing to take their fight to the nation's highest court.

"We're not shook, we're angry," said Bill Nelson, head of the Dallas Gay Alliance and a director of the Texas Human Rights Foundation. "We plan to protest the ridiculous decision that came out of New Orleans."

The 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, in a 9-7 decision Monday, upheld the 1974 Texas sodomy law "in view of the strong objection to homosexual conduct, which has prevailed in Western culture for the past seven centuries."

The decision reversed the 1979 ruling of a three-judge 5th Circuit panel and of a Dallas federal judge, who said the law was unconstitutional. The statute forbids sexual intercourse between homosexuals.

"There's a lot of expectation that gay people will hide or go back into the closet and that's absolutely not the case," Nelson said. "We plan to reaffirm our gay dignity in a very public and visible way.

"For example, Anita Bryant did the gay community a big favor by articulating the ignorance that oppressed us. The 5th Circuit has done exacty the same thing in Texas. We now have a rallying point and people should expect an increased amount of gay activity," he said.

Nelson said rallies are scheduled for Monday at the Dallas City Hall and in other cities around Texas.

The legal fight over the constitutionality of the controversial Texas law started in 1979 when Donald F. Baker, of Dallas, a homosexual, began waging a battle to have the statute overturned.

In 1982, U.S. District Judge Jerry Buchmeyer struck down the law, ruling in favor of Baker, who had sued on behalf of 700,000 Texas homosexuals who claimed the law deprived them of privacy and equal protection. Last year, a three-judge panel of the 5th Circuit agreed.

"We will appeal to the U.S. Supreme Court," Baker said Tuesday.

Baker said the court decision would be "an obvious setback to the research into the AIDS crisis by criminalizing the homosexual community." He said if gays go back into the closet, it would be more difficult to find a cure "for this deadly disease."

Acquired immune deficiency syndrome, a deadly disease whose victims most often have been homosexuals, was not part of the original case. Both sides made it an issue in the appeal, but the 5th Circuit judges did not address it in their written opinions.

"There is no question we will make an appeal as expeditiously as possible," Baker said while calling the ruling a temporary setback.

"The decision, especially when considering the reasoning that this it is based on so many centuries of morality, clearly demonstrates the enormous amount of ignorance that pervades our society about homosexuality; that there is this belief that one has a choice of being of a certain orientation," Baker said.

The "majority" of scientific and medical research has shown otherwise, he said.

Gay leaders said as any as 1 million homosexuals in Texas would be affected by the decision.

"A million Texans are now criminals again," said Tom Coleman, an attorney and president of the Texas Human Rights Foundation, which organized and financed the legal challenge to the sodomy law.

But an official of the group that kept the long-running lawsuit alive said Monday's ruling was "the right decision based on Judeo-Christian law."

"I think it's a real turning in our courts," said Keith Thornton, a dentist and official of Dallas Doctors Against AIDS, a group that includes 46 doctors and dentists.

But Judge Irving Goldberg, a member of the three-judge panel that ruled last year, said in the main dissent Monday: "If ever there was a constitutional right to privacy, Texas has violated it by blatantly intruding into the private sex lives of fully consenting adults."

That decision was appealed by Potter County District Attorney Danny Hill and later supported by the Doctors Against AIDS.

Elna Christopher, spokeswoman for Texas Attorney General Jim Mattox, said that Mattox would have no response to the 5th Circuit ruling until he has a chance to read it.

Would-be heirs hope records prove ancestry

CHARLESTON, W.Va. (AP) — Hundreds of would-be heirs to a Texas oil baron's supposedly unclaimed fortune are besieging county offices across southern West Virginia, searching for ancestral records they hope will make them instant millionaires.

It was enough Tuesday to prompt deputy Summers County clerk Rachel Adkins to wish that reclusive tycoon James Meadows had never been born.

"Right now, I do, I really do," Ms. Adkins said. "It's really been a circus here. Our vaults are packed with people looking through documents. There's been 50 to 60 people here a day, asking for birth certificates and land records."

Ms. Adkins said her office has sold more than $3,000 worth of birth and death certificate copies so far this month.

"I sold one lady yesterday $102 worth of certificates at $1.50 each," she said. "There's a lady standing here right now that wants more than that. It'll cost her more than $200 for what she wants."

"I sold one lady yesterday $102 worth of certificates at $1.50 each. There's a lady standing here right now that wants more than that. It'll cost her more than $200 for what she wants."

Rachel Adkins, Summers County clerk

The fortune-seekers recount tales of Meadows dying forgotten and alone in a mental hospital in Texas in 1939, leaving behind an unclaimed estate worth billions. He also left behind a vague family tree that includes some of the largest clans in West Virginia and Kentucky.

But Richard Ferris, a Pittsburgh lawyer handling a suit for about 160 purported heirs, said Tuesday that Meadows died in 1939 in Pittsburgh.

A growing number of would-be heirs are claiming a share of the take in federal court in Beaumont, Texas. Officials there are skeptical, and earlier this year U.S. District Judge Joe Fisher threw out one of three cases seeking a share of Meadows' estate.

The oil developer's estate reportedly included a one-eighth interest in the famed Spindletop oil field, and the promise of instant wealth has spread like wildfire through West Virginia's unemployment-plagued hills.

Ferris said the first step in any claim is to establish that Meadows indeed owned a share in the oil field, something that has yet to be accepted by a court. He said no one knows how much the man was really worth.

"All these people have gone crazy," he said. "I'm up to my eyeballs in rumors."

Ms. Adkins said county document books are falling apart from overuse, and her office has had to hire an additional worker to do nothing but make out duplicate birth certificates.

"I think I'm the only one in Summers County who isn't trying to trace myself back to this man," Ms. Adkins said.

Local officials say determining ancestry is especially complicated because the tycoon's forebears alternately spelled their name Meador, Meadors, Meadow and Meadows, and some also married into the Lilly clan, one of southern West Virginia's biggest families.

"All of a sudden there are a million relatives of the Meador family — and we are getting most of them in our office," Mercer County clerk Rudolph Jennings lamented.

The Lillys alone would fill any probate courtroom. Several thousand attend the family reunion each year in Beckley.

Beckley nurse May Lilly is spending her week's vacation poring through geneological records, and said she spent $60 getting copies of the family tree.

'Hot-check queen' wanted on more than 40 warrants

DALLAS (AP) — A woman who allegedly picked her aliases from cemetery tombstones remained in jail today in lieu of $375,000 bond on more than 40 outstanding warrants, authorities said.

Sherta Lynn, who gave her age as 21, was wanted on 31 outstanding felony and misdemeanor warrants from Dallas County that alleged she wrote $43,600 in bad checks under 10 different names over the past 3½ years, said Gary F. Lachman, an investigator for the Dallas County Sheriff's Department.

She, or one of her aliases, also is named in 13 warrants outside Dallas and the state of Texas, Lachman said.

"We've called her the queen of the hot check-writers," Lachman said. "It's one of the biggest I've seen for checks."

Ms. Lynn was arraigned Friday before Dallas County Justice of the Peace Boyd Patterson on multiple charges, including theft, forgery and prostitution.

She was found Friday huddled in a closet at her parents' Dallas home, Lachman said.

Diet drinks may ruin diet, doctor believes

Diet drinks' sweet taste may cause you to forsake your diet. Artificial sweeteners in them encourage a taste for sugar, says obesity specialist Dr. Dennis Remington, director of the eating-disorder clinic at Brigham Young University in Provo, Utah.

And that, he says, may make you pass up such nutritious foods as vegetables, fruits and grains and eat a candy bar instead.

Land bank preserves Nantucket's undeveloped land

NANTUCKET, Mass. (AP) — One day five years ago, while William Klein was admiring Nantucket's misty, rugged seaside heaths, an elderly man dressed in full Scottish garb and playing a bagpipe rambled by.

Klein, the island's planning commissioner, had never seen the man before, but the image stayed with him. He decided soon afterward that Nantucket urgently needed to protect its pristine, rapidly diminishing open spaces.

Today, Klein oversees the Nantucket Island Land Bank, a costly but successful program that allows the island to purchase undeveloped dunes, beaches and heaths at market value with money collected through a 2 percent tax paid by real estate buyers.

Klein and state officials say the program is the first of its kind in the country and has prompted other communities to consider similar actions.

"There's no place like Nantucket. It's magic," Klein said. "We had to save it from the slash-and-burn fate of resorts like Miami Beach and Atlantic City, which built and built until there was no more beauty.

"The land we buy will be forever wild. No one's going to alter it except Mother Nature."

Since it began in February 1984, the Nantucket Island Land Bank, governed by an elected five-member commission, has spent $9 million to buy 340 acres of this 50-square-mile island 30 miles south of Cape Cod.

More than 500,000 tourists a year visit Nantucket's 70 miles of clean white beaches, cobblestone streets and charming 19th century cottages covered with wild pink roses.

The commission plans to spend $30 million over the next five years to buy 15 percent of Nantucket. Since private preservation groups already own 30 percent of the island, if the land bank achieves its goal, 45 percent of the island will remain undeveloped.

Recently, the land bank borrowed $11 million using revenue bonds to refinance its acquisition of moors and beachfront and to buy more property threatened by development.

William Klein

Klein, a Long Island native who moved to Nantucket in 1974, said he came up with the idea of a land bank two years ago after an island-sponsored conference called "Nantucket in the Year 2002" brought together development experts from around the country.

Even though Nantucket has laws that forbid neon lights and control everything from the color of shingles to the kind of pitch homeowners can use on their roofs, the experts warned the regulations were not enough to control the island's growth, which runs about 300 new homes a year.

After Klein and Nantucket officials hammered out the details of the land bank, they brought the idea to an April 1983 town meeting, where residents embraced it by a 446-1 vote.

Even real estate agents, developers and construction firms supported the plan.

"I suppose a part of it was sincere, that they cared about the island," said Klein. "But, it's easy to realize that the less land in development, the more it's going be worth. There were gains for everyone."

Because the land bank involved a new tax, the project required a special act of the Massachusetts Legislature. Supporters expected a long fight, but the bill zipped through with little debate and no opposition from the builders' lobby or Citizens For Limited Taxation, a powerful group which ususally fights new taxes.

"It was a very innovative concept," said state Sen. Paul Doane, who ushered the bill through the Legislature. "We caught people off guard by it. To some extent, the possible opponents didn't have the time or inclination to get involved with it."

"But most critical I think was the distance of Nantucket. It's viewed as a unique place that can do its own thing," Doane added. "Plus, many legislators are aware of the beauty of the island. They appreciate it."

The Nantucket Island Land Bank Act was signed into law by Gov. Michael S. Dukakis in December 1983.

Doane said he was worried at first that the land bank would be abused, either by the commission in charge of purchases or by real estate buyers trying to take advantage of the 13 exemptions to the 2 percent tax.

But, he said, "there hasn't been a single example" of abuse. "I think that shows people are really behind it."

Islanders have voiced dissatisfaction with the land bank on one occasion, when it spent $2.5 million for 64 acres that had cost the owner $700,000 the year before. Some complained the commission had agreed to spend too much without a fight.

Last month the bank reached a verbal agreement to purchase 11 acres of prime beachfront property for $125,000. Two days later, four developers bought the land for $150,000.

The land bank is challenging the purchase in court, but Klein admitted that the program's attorneys were too trusting for the wheeling-and-dealing of high-stakes real estate.

'Violent dieting' grows from casual weight loss

By LEE SIEGEL
AP Science Writer

LOS ANGELES — Slender women trying to lose a few pounds might end up hating their bodies in a complex mental process that can lead to self-induced vomiting and other "violent dieting" methods, a study suggests.

If further study proves that casual dieting can trigger severe eating disorders, "it may be appropriate to give (slim women) the warning: caution, dieting may be hazardous to your health," psychologist Susan Wooley said Tuesday at the American Psychological Association's annual meeting.

Wooley's study sought to "deal with the mystery of why some women who have the most socially acceptable bodies end up with a negative body image."

Researchers previously found that hatred of one's own body, known as poor body image, can prompt obese women to engage in self-induced vomiting, starvation or other crash diets and abuse of diet pills and laxatives.

In its most extreme form, food binging followed by self-induced vomiting is called bulimia. Extreme self-starvation is known as anorexia. Experts say up to 5 percent of Americans, mainly young women, suffer bulimia or anorexia, both of which can be fatal.

Wooley and her husband, Orland, co-directors of the Eating Disorders Clinic at the University of Cincinnati College of Medicine, based their findings on an analysis of the responses from 5,000 of the 33,000 women who answered a survey conducted by Glamour magazine in 1983.

They measured a number of psychological factors, including how much the women's concern about weight intruded on daily life, the extent to which moods triggered overeating or dieting and the degree to which women's feelings about their bodies were affected by people's remarks or other events.

The analysis revealed that, unlike obese women, slender women tend to start hating their bodies only after they begin to diet, casually at first and then violently.

"They end up with more dissatisfaction with their bodies than when they started," said Wooley, adding that the slender women develop a poor body image because the repeated loss and gain of weight is itself disturbing.

"Feelings of being fat change too often and too rapidly so the body does not feel familiar or comfortable," she said.

Their dissatisfaction then may progress to anorexia or bulimia, she said.

The Wooleys' initial findings, published by Glamour last year, were that 75 percent of the women felt they were too fat although only 25 percent actually exceeded their desirable weights in standard height-weight tables.

Joanne Ikeda, a nutritionist at the University of California at Berkeley, disagreed with the Wooleys' conclusions, saying slender women who develop eating disorders start out with hatred of their own bodies.

"Otherwise, why would they bother to try to lose weight?" Ikeda asked.

Wooley insisted that slender women do not start out unhappy with their bodies but "often talked about dieting in a casual way: 'I think I'll lose 3 or 4 pounds to get down one jean size.'"

Ikeda said she would not go as far as Wooley in warning against casual dieting to lose a few pounds, but instead would caution slim women to be careful "about becoming obsessed about your weight."

Wooley's warning did not differ very much. She said that if slender women find their casual dieting "is rapidly becoming a preoccupation — that a low reading on the scale makes their day and eating a piece of cherry pie ruins it — it's time to back off."

Housewives, too, fight stress

By LEE SIEGEL
AP Science Writer

LOS ANGELES — Housewives with driven personalities feel the same stress, fear and dissatisfaction as associated with career men and women with the so-called Type A personality, according to a recent study.

Type A homemakers probably have the same elevated risk of heart disease as is seen among aggressive, competitive men and women working outside the home, University of Kansas psychologist B. Kent Houston said Tuesday.

"Type A housewives are very much like Type A employed women and Type A men," Houston said at the American Psychological Association's annual meeting.

"They have hectic work situations. They have less satisfying marital relationships and they report more health problems" than more easy-going, or Type B, women, he said.

APA spokesman Dan Mezibov said the study shows "there are such people as Type A housewives, which no one ever looked at before."

UCLA psychologist Marie Morell said Houston's study demonstrated "you can structure your own home environment so it's as stressful as some work environments."

Type A people are defined as those who are more hard-driven, competitive, aggressive, impatient and who feel greater time urgency and hostility than the more easy-going Type B personalities.

Since the 1950s, various researchers and studies have suggested Type A people are more prone to heart disease than Type B people, although a series of recent studies cast doubt on the theory.

Houston argued that studies disputing the heart disease-personality link focused on people who already were ill or at risk of heart disease, not healthy people.

He administered standard tests to divide 95 middle-class housewives according to whether they were Type A or Type B. About 60 percent were Type A, although he said the study didn't address whether the same percentage applied to all homemakers.

Houston gave the women a battery of psychological tests and found that compared with easy-going housewives, the Type A homemakers found housework more taxing, reported less satisfaction in their marriages and felt more stress and tension. The hard-driven housewives also reported getting sick more frequently, feeling lower self-esteem and suffering greater fear of failure.

Houston said the traits found among the Type A housewives, especially the tendency to find work taxing and to have less marriage satisfaction, are the same traits other studies found among men and career women with the same competitive personality.

The typical Type A homemaker "felt unappreciated for the things she did" and that her skills were underused, he said. "Perhaps feeling frustrated and unrewarded led to some abrasion in the marital relationship."

He said he wasn't sure why the Type A homemakers reported poorer physical health, but said it may be that the arousal of the body caused by stress has short-term health effects as well as long-term effects on heart disease risk.

Type A housewives also may take poorer care of themselves by smoking more or getting less exercise, or simply may pay less attention to fatigue or early symptoms of illness, he said.

Margaret Chesney, a psychologist at the Stanford Research Institute, said hard-driven homemakers can reduce their stress and other symptoms by scheduling their time more realistically, getting more exercise, learning to relax or meditate and trying to find more time to themselves.

She said her own study of 942 career women and homemakers found those with Type A personalities tended to smoke more, exercise less, be slightly more overweight, consume more caffeine, feel anger more often and get less sleep than Type B women.

Electrical heart pump tested

By JANE SEAGRAVE

BOSTON (AP) — An electrically driven pump now being perfected could provide an alternative for the 100,000 cardiac patients who compete each year for the 1,500 to 2,000 human hearts available for transplant, researchers say.

The device, which assists rather than replaces the heart, also could substantially reduce the need for artificial hearts like the Jarvik-7 beating in the chests of implant patients William Schroeder and Murray Haydon, and eliminate the bulky air-pressured pumps used to power them.

"It's a technique that is coming of age and everyone is racing to get there first," said Victor L. Poirier, vice president of Thermedics, a Woburn, Mass., medical technology firm that has been working on the device for 12 years.

John Ball, a security analyst for Paine Webber Mitchell Hutchins in New York, estimated the market for the device at around $100 million a year.

Thermedics' version includes a fist-sized pump that is implanted in the body and connected to the left ventricle of the heart. The pump is powered by a four-pound electric battery that is worn like a holster under the arm and can be used for about 10 hours without recharging.

"I could have one under my clothes and you wouldn't even know it. They are not very large and not very obtrusive," said Poirier.

Unlike the Jarvik-7, there are no tubes penetrating the body, he said. Instead, a coil attached to the battery and strapped to the patient's stomach transmits an electrical current through the skin to a similar coil inside.

A one-inch microchip monitors the heart beat and synchronizes the heart pump with it. A back-up battery implanted inside the body will let the patient remove the battery pack for short periods to bathe or swim, he said.

The device offers far more freedom of movement than the Jarvik-7, with which the patient remains attached at all times by two tubes to a 375-pound console or a suitcase-sized portable unit, Poirier said.

Thomas Loarie, president of Novacor Medical Corp. of Oakland, Calif., which has developed a similar device called the Pulsemaker, said the absence of tubes or wires on the outside of the body reduces the risk of infection.

In addition, the device allows a patient to keep his natural heart, which he said has psychological as well as medical benefits.

Researchers, who predicted that heart-assist systems will be in use by the end of the decade, estimated the price at that time will fall between $20,000 and $50,000. Abiomed of Danvers, Mass., and Nimbus of Rancho Cordova, Calif., are developing similar systems, Poirier said.

"It is felt by most of the experts in the area that it will handle the needs of up to 60 or 70 percent of those people who are suffering from congestive heart failure," said Loarie. Artificial hearts will continue to be needed by between 15 percent and 20 percent of heart patients, he said.

Poirier said the device is about two years away from being approved for permanent use by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration.

But both Novacor and Thermedics have FDA authorization to use the devices experimentally to keep gravely ill heart patients alive for up to several weeks while they await transplants, company officials say.

Since Novacor received FDA approval in July, the device has been used on two patients at Stanford University Medical Center, Loarie said.

Thermedics, which just received FDA approval for Tampa General Hospital in Florida and the Texas Heart Institute has not used it yet on a patient.

Shoppers steered to healthy hearts

By MALCOLM RITTER
AP Science Writer

NEW YORK — Customers at a Washington, D.C., grocery store will get tape-recorded guided tours as part of a nationwide effort to inform 90 million shoppers about eating less cholesterol and fat to fight heart disease.

More than 8,000 grocery stores will participate in the "American Heart's Food Festival" Sept. 8-14, said Dr. Antonio Gotto, immediate past president of the American Heart Association.

While portable tape recorders at the Washington store relay nutrition information about foods sold there, other stores will offer recipes, lists of recommended foods, taste tests and other promotions for "heart-healthy" eating, the association announced Tuesday.

Gotto said the project is meant to increase public awareness about cutting back on cholesterol and fat to reduce the risks of hardened arteries and heart attacks.

Levels of cholesterol and saturated fat in the diet affect the amount of cholesterol in the bloodstream, where it can accumulate in the arteries that carry blood to the heart muscle. The buildup progressively narrows the passageway for blood, and finally a blood clot can stop the flow and bring on a heart attack, Gotto said.

The heart association recommends eating less than 300 milligrams of cholesterol a day, which is about the amount in a large egg yolk. The average American man consumes about 500 milligrams per day and the average woman about 320 milligrams, Gotto said.

The successful Bidder must furnish a Performance Bond and Payment Bond on the forms provided in the amount of 100% of the total contract price from a Surety Company holding a permit from the State of Texas to act as Surety, or other Surety or Sureties acceptable to the Owner.
All lump sum and unit prices must be stated in both script and figures. The Owner reserves the right to reject any or all bids and to waive formalities, and to accept the bid which seems most advantageous to the City's interest. In case of ambiguity or lack of clearness instating the prices in the bids, the Owner reserves the right to consider the most advantageous construction thereof, or to reject the bid. Attention is called to the provisions of the Acts of the 43rd Legislature of the State of Texas, page 91, Chapter 45, (Article 5159A Civil Statutes 1925) concerning the wage scale and payment of prevailing rates of wages as established by the Owner. Said scale or prevailing minimum rates of wages is set forth in the specifications.
Information for Bidders, proposal forms, and specifications are on file in the office of the Director of Public Works, City Hall, 300 N. Loraine, Midland, Texas, 79701 and in the office of Parkhill, Smith & Cooper, Inc., Consulting Engineers, 5214 Thomason Drive, Midland, Texas, 79703, phone (915) 697-1447.
Copies of the plans and specifications may be secured at the office of Parkhill, Smith & Cooper, Inc., Consulting Engineers, 5214 Thomason Drive, Midland, Texas 79703, (915) 697-1447, upon receipt of a $50.00 deposit as a guarantee of the safe return of the plans and specifications. The full amount of the deposit will be returned if a bona fide bid is submitted and the Plans and Specifications are returned within ten (10) days after receipt of bids, or in case no bid is submitted, if Plans and Specifications are returned on or before date of receipt of bids; otherwise, the deposit will be forfeited.
THE CITY OF MIDLAND, TEXAS
By: B. C. Clanton, City Secretary
August 16, 23, 28, 1985

Project No. S 141-85
Sealed proposals, addressed to the Mayor and City Council of the City of Midland, Texas, for the furnishing of materials and labor and the construction of 2800 L.F. 12" PVC Sanitary Sewers and eleven (11) manholes; will be received at the office of the City Secretary, City Hall, Midland, Texas, until 3:00 p. m. on the 3rd day of September, 1985. Bids will be publicly opened and read aloud at that time. Any bid received after closing time as stated above will be returned unopened.
Bid envelopes shall be plainly marked "Proposal for Project No. S 141-85 Garfield Relief Outfall Sewer."
Information for bidders, proposal forms, specifications and plans are on file in the office of the City Engineer, Fifth floor of the City Hall, 300 North Loraine, Midland, Texas, and may be secured upon a deposit for FIFTY DOLLARS ($50) for each set as a guaranty of safe return of the plans and specifications. The full amount of the deposit will be returned to the contractor on submission of bid on the work, with such plans and specifications; or upon return of the plans and specifications immediately after the examination of same and advising the City Engineer that no bid will be submitted; otherwise the deposit for same shall be forfeited.
A bid bond or proposal guaranty is to accompany the bid, thereby guaranteeing the good faith of the bidder and that the bidder will enter into the written contract. The guaranty is to amount to five percent (5%) of the total bid and must be in the form of cash or certified check, issued by a bank satisfactory to the City of Midland, or a bid bond. If in the form of cash or certified check, it is expressly understood and agreed that the City of Midland is given the right to retain such as liquidated damages if such bidder withdraws its bid anytime after such bid is opened and before official rejection of such bid, or if successful in securing the award thereof, such bidder fails to enter into the contract and furnish satisfactory performance and payment bonds. If a bid bond is submitted, it shall be executed on forms contained in these contract documents by a corporate surety authorized to do business in the State of Texas, and acceptable to the City of Midland.
The City of Midland, Texas, reserves the right to accept or reject any or all proposals or bids, to waive technicalities, and to make any investigation deemed necessary concerning the bidder's ability to perform the work covered by the plans and specifications, to award this bid by items and to accept what in the judgment of the Mayor and City Council is the most advantageous bid.
