James P. Riva

His defense: He thought he was a vampire

BROCKTON, Mass. (AP) — A man who believed he was a vampire admitted he shot his grandmother to death with gold-tipped bullets and said he tried to drink her blood, his mother testified in his murder trial.

James P. Riva, 24, of Boston said a voice told him he would die if he didn't kill his 74-year-old grandmother, according to testimony for the prosecution given Monday by his mother, Janet Jones.

Riva is charged with murder and arson in the killing of Carmen Lopez in her Marshfield home April 10, 1980.

Mrs. Lopez was shot, stabbed and beaten, and state pathologist Ambrose Keeley said she died either of stab wounds or a head injury.

Assistant district attorney Henry Cashman said Friday in his opening statement that he would prove Riva shot Mrs. Lopez, stabbed her "and in an effort to conceal his crime, he lit her body on fire, as well as the house, and left the area."

Defense lawyer John Spinale told the Brockton Superior Court on Friday he was seeking a verdict of innocent by reason of insanity. He said Riva had been institutionalized frequently since 1975 and told the court he planned to call psychiatrists to testify.

Mrs. Jones, of Middlebury, Vt., said she visited her son in prison in June 1980, two months after the slaying, and he told her "the vampires" told him to drink his grandmother's blood. But he couldn't, "because she was old and all dried up," Mrs. Jones said.

Shortly after Mrs. Lopez was killed, regional medical examiner Dr. John Angley of Pembroke said an autopsy revealed a 1½-inch cut in the victim's heart and a round wound.

Riva said he painted the bullet tips gold because "if they weren't gold, they wouldn't find their mark," Mrs. Jones testified.

"The vampires had told him that in Florida," she added, referring to her son's 1978 visit to Florida.

She said he told her he expected to shoot the woman once with a gold-tipped bullet and kill her. But he had to shoot her three more times, she told the court.

After the killing, Riva went to the North River to kill himself, but didn't because he feared his body would be mutilated, his mother said.

Mrs. Jones testified his idea was to "kill everybody who hated him and come back and be handsome, have a car and girlfriends and his life would be fine."

Under cross-examination by Spinale, Mrs. Jones testified that when her son was 4 he rigged up a hammer on a string over his bedroom door in what she said was an effort to strike his father, whom he accused of stealing from a piggy bank. Mrs. Jones and Riva's father are divorced.

At 5, she said, Riva started drawing "scenes of violence in phenomenal detail, goblins, bats and witches."

"By 13-14, he was drawing vampires who always took one form, a woman with blood dripping out of puncture wounds in the neck."

She said he roamed at night, refusing to wash or care for himself and returning home to cook parts of animals. She said he once had cooked and eaten a whole bird.

School psychologists treated him until 1974 when the family sought outside professional help at the Brockton Multiservice Center, Mrs. Jones said.

Senate Republicans study deficit-cutting tax increase

WASHINGTON (AP) — As Senate Republicans study between $50 billion and $70 billion in tax increases, White House budget director David A. Stockman says the administration is not "making a fetish" out of a balanced budget by 1984.

Sources say the $50 billion to $70 billion figure is included in a memorandum drawn up for Senate Majority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr. and House Republican leader Robert H. Michel and based on private meetings last week among GOP congressional leaders.

The tax increases are part of a strategy GOP leaders hope will lead to paring budget deficits by $115 billion over the next three years.

Baker and Michel are expected to meet with Reagan later this week to discuss the strategy.

But the sources emphasized that House Republicans are not committed to a tax increase of any given size.

Instead, the House Republican leadership promised only to seek higher taxes and more cuts in benefit programs if the budget deficits for the next three years appear to be higher than the estimates contained in the budget outline passed by Congress earlier this year.

According to one source, the Senate Budget Committee has drawn up a list of 24 possible tax increases which the Treasury Department estimates would raise $84.4 billion in revenues in 1983 and 1984.

President Reagan has asked for $22 billion in higher taxes over the next three years as part of his plan to balance the budget by 1984. Of that, $3 billion would come in the current fiscal year.

In recent days, however, administration officials have conceded that much higher tax increases may be necessary to meet Reagan's goal.

One source said tentative GOP plans to trim $115 billion from the deficit over the next three years included about $40 billion in cuts in benefit programs such as government pensions and food stamps, and about $15 billion in cuts in domestic and defense programs.

Reagan still after AWACS sale

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan is zeroing in on a handful of opponents to his AWACS sale to Saudi Arabia with hints that it would draw the Arab kingdom into Middle East peace efforts. On the eve of the Senate showdown, however, the odds are heavily against his saving the deal.

Reagan, who planned to see up to a dozen senators in a final lobbying blitz today and Wednesday, picked up only one vote and lost one Monday, but failed to convert any opponents.

This morning, however, Republican Sen. Robert Dole of Kansas, who has not said how he will vote, indicated he will go with the president.

"I want to vote with the president...I think it's a test of leadership," Dole said in an interview on ABC's "Good Morning America."

"I still haven't made up my mind, but I think I'm going to vote for the sale," he said. Dole noted that the planes would not be delivered for four years, giving the president "plenty of time to pull the plug if something goes awry in the Mideast."

He also said the arms sale "has gotten to the level of presidential leadership...I think it means a great deal with the death of (Egyptian President Anwar) Sadat, with the trouble in Iran, the trouble in Lebanon, for the world to know we support our president's foreign policy."

Following Dole's remarks, the current Associated Press tally shows 53 senators against the sale, plus two others leaning against, 39 favoring the deal or leaning that way, and six uncommitted. A majority of those voting is needed to block the deal.

The $8.5 billion arms package, the biggest in U.S. history, includes five Airborne Warning and Control System radar planes plus 1,177 Sidewinder missiles and fueling to extend the range and firepower of 62 Saudi F-15 jets. The sale already has been rejected by the House and will be vetoed if a majority of the Senate votes it down Wednesday.

Decision expected in discrimination suit

From Staff and Wire Reports

A federal judge is expected to hand down a decision this week in a 10-year-old desegregation suit filed against the Ector County School District.

Testimony in the federal court trial in Midland ended Monday, with attorneys for both sides presenting their final arguments.

The suit, filed in 1970 by the Justice Department and a citizen's group, contends the Odessa school system has discriminated against black and Hispanic students by maintaining segregated schools in violation of the 14th Amendment.

Attorneys for the school district deny the allegations and say the system operates on the "neighborhood school" concept.

Visiting U.S. District Judge Fred Shannon of San Antonio was expected to consider the evidence today and may hand down a decision by Wednesday.

The major issue in the trial has been whether Odessa's segregated schools are the result of discriminatory acts by the school district, said Joseph Rich, a Justice Department attorney.

A school board member testified Monday that parents want equal education while maintaining neighborhood schools.

Shirley Huffaker testified that during public meetings concerning proposed desegregation plans parents opposed having all-minority schools, but disapproved of busing, as well.

A black school administrator testified he did not intend to discriminate against minority students when he recommended busing boudaries.

However, Edward Downing said every time south Odessa bus routes were altered, black and hispanic children were sent to southside schools near their homes.

Commissioners' Court approves new jailers, renovations

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Midland County Sheriff Dallas Smith, who has been effective in winning Commissioners' Court approval for his plan to beef up his manpower and upgrade the jail, on Monday raked up another victory. He was granted four more jailers and the go-ahead to modify the already overcrowded jail.

Just before the commissioners voted on Smith's requests, they and County Judge Bill Ahders had a touring "crash-course" on the jail.

Until recently, the jail reportedly had been a model facility. The jail was built as the fifth floor of the courthouse in the early 1970s. However, the 1975-established Texas Commission on Jail Standards has imposed statewide rules for jailhouse security and on inmate well-being and safety. The jail, as did others throughout the state, fell short of the standards, which have been influenced by court rulings on prisoner comfort, care and rights.

Earlier this year, though, the jail was certified as conforming to the standards. But, as Smith noted, the influx of people into Midland County to partake of the oil boom has caused an increase in jail population.

To bolster his case, the sheriff gave the commissioners and the judge a tour of the steel-encased jail. Reporters tagged along with their notebooks, cameras and tape recorders.

"This is a make-do type of thing for the time being," Smith said of the bull pen, a dayroom-like area once used for storage of staples and as an inmate exercise area. The jail has exceeded its quota of boarders, which now numbers into the high 80s. The overflow retires to the relative spacious bull pen.

Inmates play cards, shuffle dominoes, read books, listen to the radio, watch televison, eat, sleep, daydream and relax while awaiting their court trials, for the bail-bondsman or to be transferred to the Texas Department of Corrections to serve their sentence.

One young woman, relegated to solitary confinement only to keep her out of sight and touch of the men, was reading a paperback book.

A group of male prisoners was in the barred cubicles as the touring group filed down the corridors.

Some prisoners yelled and shouted a few obscenities and suggestions, which seemed to faze no one, and made a few derogatory remarks about the sheriff, who was not rattled.

But when the inmate chatter conflicted with his talking, the cacophony seemed to annoy the sheriff.

"Hold it down!" he yelled harshly again and again.

Smith continued talking about the jail's overcrowded conditions, proposals for putting in partitions to crowd in more offenders, and prospects for expanding the jail.

"I said shut up!" cried the sheriff, who added a few other words to

County attorney named

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

J. Scott Henderson, a 34-year-old ex-cop, has been appointed the Midland County attorney to succeed Robert Rendall, who resigned the $30,000-a-year post to enter the private practice of law.

Henderson, who has been an assistant prosecutor to Rendall since the first of the year, takes over the job Monday.

"I'm very proud of the confidence indicated by the vote of the (Midland County Commissioners') Court," Henderson said Monday after the five-member court unanimously voted Henderson in and rejected three other bidders for the job.

"I think I can prove they (commissioners) didn't made a mistake," he said of his selection to fill out the remaining three years of Rendall's term.

Henderson's appointment comes two weeks after 27-year-old Rendall announced he was bowing out of public office less than an year after he was elected to a four-year term on the Republican ticket. Just prior to the November 1980 general election, Rendall had been appointed county attorney to succeed his boss, County Attorney Les Acker, who had resigned to become a title-abstract lawyer.

Rendall, then Acker's assistant, had vigorously sought the Republican

Police apprehend robbers

ODESSA — Two men were in jail this morning following two unrelated and unsuccessful robbery attempts here during the past 24 hours.

In the first attempted stickup, according to police, a 21-year-old white man entered the Colonial Food Store at 8th Street and Grandview Avenue shortly after 11 p.m. Monday. He produced a screwdriver and demanded money from a clerk.

When the clerk refused, the man then pulled a pocketknife and repeated his demand. By this time, however, a second clerk had called police, who arrested the man inside the store.

The second robbery attempt took place when a Mexican man wearing a blue bandana grabbed a 7-Eleven clerk from behind as she was sweeping the store's parking lot at 2401 E. 8th St. about 1:25 a.m..

The suspect said he had a gun and told the clerk to hand over the store's money. A passing Ector County deputy sheriff spotted the suspect running from the store and arrested him on the parking lot of a nearby car dealership.

An undisclosed amount of money was recovered, but no gun was found on the man, according to police, who said formal charges would be filed against both suspects later today.

County jailer reprimanded

A Midland County jailer has been reprimanded over an incident Sept. 17 that resulted in one jail inmate being treated for minor injuries at Midland Memorial Hospital.

A Sheriff's Department spokesman Monday said Chief Jailer Neil Ford, who was in charge of the jail the night inmate Leroy Jackson was injured by another inmate, would have a letter of reprimand placed in his personnel file, but no suspension or other action would be taken against him.

Jackson, who suffered mouth injuries in the fight, contended he was held by jailers who allowed the other inmate to hit him. The department spokesman, however, said an internal investigation cleared jailers of that allegation.

Instead, said the spokesman, Jackson had created a disturbance by pounding on the bars of his cell and became belligerent when Ford started taking his commissary provisions away from him.

A scuffle ensued between Ford and Jackson, and another inmate who didn't get along with Jackson hit him as jailers were attempting to restrain Jackson. "Our investigation showed there was no intent on the part of officers for Jackson to get hurt," said the spokesman.

Ford's reprimand was based on his failure to follow jail rules and procedures, which dictated that he should have secured other inmates in their cells before confronting Jackson over the disturbance.

Vickie takes stand, tells of abuse

LIBERTY, Texas (AP) — The wife of former Texas House Speaker Price Daniel Jr. says her slain husband was a sexually bizarre tyrant whom she loved, feared and probably killed.

She portrayed him as a hard-drinking, dope-smoking, self-centered, occasionally loving enigma who once forced her to have an abortion.

But, testified Vickie Daniel, she did not intend to shoot the scion of a rich and powerful Texas family nor does she remember firing the fatal shot.

The former Dairy Queen waitress took the witness stand Monday and tearfully told of the events surrounding the Jan. 19 shooting.

"DID YOU PULL the trigger and shoot him, Vickie?" asked defense attorney Jack Zimmermann.

"No," she sobbed, then added: "I don't remember."

Mrs. Daniel returned today for what loomed as a decidedly more hostile cross-examination by Liberty County district attorney Carroll Wilborn.

The state contends the blonde defendant "knowingly and intentionally" shot Daniel, 39, her second husband, during a fierce dispute over their pending divorce.

Not so, said Mrs. Daniel, 34, her face alternately ashen and crimson as she recounted the marital pressures and pitfalls of life in the fast political track.

SHE SAID DANIEL abused her verbally, physically and sexually and it got worse after he was an upset loser in a 1978 race for Texas Attorney General.

She said her husband, the son of former Texas Gov. Price Daniel Sr., returned home the night of Jan. 19 with divorce financial papers he wanted signed.

She refused.

Angered by the refusal, and a spilled drink, Vickie recalled, Price Jr. "slapped me, grabbed me and pushed me down."

Kimberly Moore, then 12, her daughter by an earlier marriage, shoved him off, Mrs. Daniel testified.

She said she ordered Daniel to leave their ranch-style home and when he later demanded to know where his marijuana stash was, she replied: "... I flushed it down the commode."

SHE SAID HE descended the steps from an attic stairwell and "kicked me in the head." She said he told her, "I'll kill you."

She said he beat her and she retreated to a back door, which was locked.

"I reached into the closet and got the gun," she said.

She said she could not see her husband at the time but returned to the stairwell and saw him again in the attic.

"Get out of here!" she recalled telling him. "Please leave."

SHE SAID DANIEL saw the gun, a .22-caliber rifle, and, "He said he was going to stick it up my ass."

"Did you tell him you were going to use the gun?" asked Zimmermann.

"I think I did ... he kind of smiled."

She said she fired a warning shot.

"He started coming down real fast. He said he was going to kill me," she sobbed.

She said she backed away, closed her eyes and expected him to hit her.

"He was mad ... his face was all wrinkled," she said.

WHILE SHE COULD not remember firing the fatal shot, she said, she did recall "a funny sound like when you shoot a bullet through the water."

White rules some elections exempt

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Attorney General Mark White has ruled that a confirmation election, director election or maintenance tax election held in conjunction with the creation of a political subdivision does not have to be held on one of the uniform election dates provided in the Texas Election Code to be valid.

White issued the opinion at the request of State Rep. Tom Craddick, R-Midland, who asked if such elections conducted in conjunction with creation of a political subdivision which furnishes water or sewer services were exempted from the uniform election dates under Senate Bill 776.

White ruled that SB 776, passed during the regular session of the 67th Legislature and signed into law by Gov. Bill Clements June 8, did exempt those elections from having to be held on the uniform election dates.

However, HB 1487, also passed by the 67th Legislature, amended the same provision of the Election Code and could have been construed to repeal SB 776 since HB 1487 was signed into law at a later date.

However, White said that unless the two provisions contained conflicts, they must be "harmonized, if possible."

"In this case," White said, "there is no language suggesting that House Bill 1487 repeals Senate Bill 776. Further, there is no irreconcilable conflict between Senate Bill 776 and House Bill 1487."

White concluded that both measures could be put into effect, "and those elections included in Senate Bill 776 may be held on non-uniform dates."

Chain reaction

nomination to the office in the May primary, when he defeated contender Richard Moore. Moore, former assistant prosecutor to District Attorney Vern Martin, now is district attorney for Hale County (Plainview).

Both Acker and Rendall left public office for more attractive opportunities before their terms expired. Acker, though, was only a few months away from serving out his term and had not sought re-election.

Henderson, who became an assistant to Rendall last Jan. 1, will be the eighth county attorney in more than 20 years. His predecessors have included Leonard Howell, Harrell Moore, Clint Starr, Willie DuBose, Jimmie D. Oglesby, Acker and Rendall.

Henderson was in law enforcement for 2½ years at Kerrville, where he was a deputy sheriff, and at Waco, where he was a policeman. In 1979, he earned a law degree from Baylor University and practiced law in Dallas for a year before he relocated to Midland.

Henderson, though only in the county's attorney office for 10 months, will be the ranking lawyer in the office after this week when Rendall packs up and moves out.

Rendall's chief assistant, Woody Leverett, 28, has tendered his resignation and is entering the more lucrative private sector of law. Leverett has been a county prosecutor for two years and, as did Rendall earlier, was given praise and laurels from the Commissioners' Court for public service.

"He's been an outstanding attorney...competent, conscientious," said County Judge Bill Ahders. "We are unfortunate to lose him."

The exodus leaves the County Attorney's Office with three assistants to help out Henderson: Ruben Bustamante, Mark Dettman and the latest recruit, Karen Carr.

Another aide who is leaving the office is County Attorney's investigator, Charlie Jones, a 25-year veteran of law enforcement. He will become bailiff to 142nd State District Court Judge Pat Baskin and will replace Bill Cornell, one-time chief deputy to long-time Midland County Sheriff Ed "Big Ed" Darnell, who, after 36 years in office, was defeated in 1976 by Sheriff Dallas Smith.

"I think Robert Rendall is one of the finest men I have ever seen," Jones said.

effectively communicate with his lodgers, including one called "Ace."

The sheriff decried some of the prisoners, who complain about being sick or ill once they're locked up.

"None of them is worried about hemorrhoids or rotten teeth until they get in here," Smith said. He said the prisoners wouldn't be complaining about their health if they were out there "thieving, raping and robbing."

Elsewhere in the jail, Smith noted that the kitchen is too small to adequately serve the jail's population.

"Storage is a problem for us, prisoner storage."

Due to that, each prisoner is allowed only one set of clothes — generally what he wears into the jail when he's first booked and locked up.

"The guy who has all of his clothes with him when he's arrested is in a bind," Smith said.

Back in the Commissioners' Courtroom, the sheriff, the judge and the commissioners resumed their discussion.

"The problems are many," said County Judge Bill Ahders, "and it's something that has to be resolved immediately."

The court took action on hiring additional jailhouse deputies and okaying jail modification.

—But jails' overcrowdedness was not resolved in an instant.

"There's no way that we're going to stay within the confines of the fifth floor," the sheriff said.

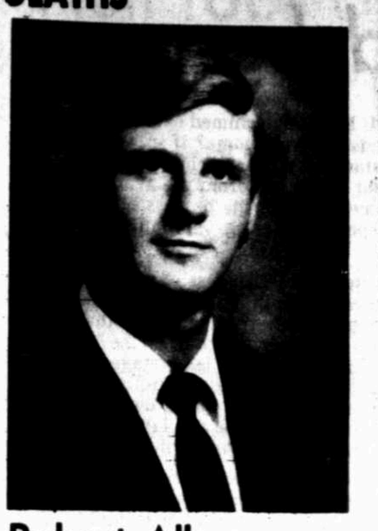
DEATHS



Robert Alley

Services for Robert E. Alley, 18, of 3808 W. Kansas Ave., will be at 11 a.m. Wednesday at the Golf Course Road Church of Christ with Doug Parsons officiating. Burial will follow at the Sterling City Cemetery in Sterling City under the direction of Newnie W. Ellis Funeral Home.

Alley died today in a Midland hospital following an automobile accident early Saturday morning.

He was born Aug. 7, 1963, in San Angelo. He moved to Midland from Sterling City when he was 6. He attended Midland schools until the time of his death. farm-ranch roundup

Items concern farmers, ranchers

WACO — The passage of two amendments affecting Texas farmers and ranchers will be considered by voters in the Nov. 3 general election, according to Carrol Chaloupka, Texas Farm Bureau president.

Proposition 5 would include livestock and poultry with other farm products already exempted from property taxation.

Proposition 4 would provide new methods of financing water development, conservation, quality and flood control projects within the state.

Passage of Proposition 5 would tend to correct inequities in property taxation. The Texas Constitution reads that "...farm products in the hands of the producer are exempt from all taxation...." But in 1976, Attorney General John Hill ruled that livestock and poultry are not "farm products" and thus could be taxed.

"Passage of this amendment will eliminate the inequity caused by that decision," the TFB president said.

Rains reduce cotton grades, quality

COLLEGE STATION — Unusually drawn-out September and October rains have "reduced cotton grades (and) quality," and has interrupted harvesting, according to the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

In other Far West Texas agriculture, small grains and ranges "look excellent" and calves are "extra heavy," TAEX reported.

Around Lamesa, in the South Plains, cotton is maturing "slowly due to cool, wet conditions."

Farm bill, cotton classing discussed

LUBBOCK — Favorable prospects for an unfavorable 1982-85 farm bill and the classing of cotton by instruments dominated the discussion and actions by the 50-man board of Plains Cotton Growers Inc. of Lubbock on Oct. 21.

What the board considers a far-too-low minimum base cotton loan price of 55 cents per pound and elimination of the disaster-payment program that has been a part of the farm bill since 1973 were two provisions of both Senate and House bills which drew strong objections.

Those objections, plus other parts of the cotton section of the Senate and/or House bill that are not in accord with PCG legislative policy, led to this board resolution:

"...The PCG would support a one-year extension of the current farm program, including continuation of the current disaster program," in lieu of the proposed farm bill.

Associate administrator appointed

COLLEGE STATION — Dr. Denzil O. Clegg, associate director of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service (TAEX) since 1978, has been appointed associate administrator of the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Extension Service.

Dr. Daniel C. Pfannstiel, director of TAEX, noted that Clegg has been a "tremendous asset" to TAEX. "His leadership at the federal level should have a positive effect on Extension educational programs nationwide."

Clegg began his Extension work as a county agent in Nebraska in 1956. He grew up on a farm near Dundy, Neb., was active in 4-H Club work and was top showman at the Nebraska State Fair one year.

Brown encourages ag research

AUSTIN — "Agriculture is the source of strength for America, and research must be continued to keep it strong," Texas Agriculture Commissioner Reagan V. Brown told the Texas Senate Subcommittee on Agriculture.

The subcommittee is holding a series of hearings on agricultural research throughout the state.

"Noting that past agricultural research has paid for itself in terms of higher yields in crops and refinement in raising livestock, Brown cited three areas in dire need of research: water, energy and pests.

But he cautioned that projects should be examined carefully for their impact on priorities, particularly profits, in farming and ranching.

"Steps we can take to reduce the cost of production will help to create profits," he said.

"Farmers in many parts of the state are going back to dryland farming, because the costs of energy for irrigation have tripled.

HAVE YOU EVER determined exactly how much it cost to landscape your home? If so, you probably needed assistance to a nearby chair.

There might be some alternatives available which will help homeowners in the process of developing new landscapes or altering or changing old systems.

One such alternative is the use of native plants in the development of the grounds. Native species are often as much as 50 percent cheaper than other species yet are often over-looked when the landscape is planned. There are many advantages to using natives: Adaptability, low water requirements, few insect and disease problems and a unique, natural beauty. One problem could be availability,but some interest is being shown by nurserymen.

The Extension Landscape Horticulture and Turf Committee recognizes these opportunities and invites you to attend an educational program on "Landscape Design Using Native Plant Species." Dr. L. Austin Stockman, area extension horticulturist, will be discussing such things as species selection, transplanting, cost cutting and budgeting for the home landscape.

The program is set for November 4 at 3 p.m. in the Hogan Park Activities Building near Cub Stadium baseball park.

You might want to mark this date on your calendar and plan to attend.

Extra helpings of turkey available

By DON KENDALL
AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — If consumers want to help turkey farmers, they ought to think about taking extra helpings during holiday dinners, one Agriculture Department expert says. At least, the price will be lower than last year.

"You might think about having two turkeys for Thanksgiving," said Allen Baker of the department's Economic Research Service.

There is a huge supply of turkeys, an abundance that means lower prices for both consumers and growers, who boosted output to a record 168.5 million birds this year, up 2 percent from 164.7 million in 1980.

To reduce the large inventories of frozen turkeys to more normal levels, Americans would have to eat an average of 4.8 pounds each during the fourth quarter of this year, Baker said Monday in a telephone interview.

Per capita turkey consumption in the last three months of 1980 averaged 4.02 pounds. The record for the fourth quarter — when turkey consumption is the greatest — is 4.4 pounds in 1972, Baker said.

For all of 1980, per capita turkey consumption — based on ready-to-cook weights — was a record 10.5 pounds. Consumption of broiler chickens, comparatively, averaged 46.9 pounds per capita last year.

The supply of frozen turkeys held in cold-storage warehouses as of Sept. 30 was a record of 530.8 million pounds, up 33 percent from 398.8 million a year earlier.

During the summer, Agriculture Department economists figured the wholesale price of turkeys this fall would be much higher than they are, despite the record production.

Baker projected in late August that the New York wholesale price of 8-16-pound hen turkeys would average 70-73 cents a pound from October through December. That would be almost as high as the 73 cents a pound the turkeys brought in the fourth quarter of last year.

The large buildup of frozen turkey inventories, however, has depressed prices. Three weeks ago, the wholesale price projections were revised to 60-64 cents a pound in the fourth quarter.

Now, Baker says, it looks as if the average might be closer to 55-57 cents a pound, about 25 percent below the year-ago level.

Baker would not predict what retail prices of turkeys might be, saying the popularity of retail specials during the period makes such projections difficult. But he added, "It's going to be cheaper than last year."

Turkey production is widespread, with the leaders including North Carolina, 26 million birds estimated in 1981; Minnesota, 25.2 million.

Farm income could drop

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department says farmers' net income probably will drop this year from 1980's depressed level.

Cash receipts from the sale of crops and livestock are expected to rise 4 percent to 6 percent from last year, when farmers were hit by sagging prices and drought.

"However, an 8 to 10 percent rise in farm production expenses, led by interest and energy-based inputs, will outstrip cash receipts," the department's Economic Research Service said Monday in a monthly review.

Nun rape suspect returned

NEW YORK (AP) — Brought from Chicago under heavy guard, a second suspect has been ordered held without bail following arraignment on charges of raping a nun in an East Harlem convent.

Police reported that the rapists scratched 27 crosses into the 30-year-old nun's skin during the attack.

Criminal Court Judge Martin Erdmann ordered Harold Wells, 22, held without bail at Rikers Island pending a hearing Oct. 29.

Wells, arrested over the weekend in Chicago, elected not to fight extradition and was whisked away to O'Hare International Airport with a paper bag over his head, for a flight back to New York.

After his arrest Saturday, Wells admitted to authorities that he and Max Lindeman, 23, raped the 30-year-old nun, Chicago police said.

Both are charged with rape, sodomy, assault, robbery and burglary in the Oct. 10 attack.

Lindeman was arraigned Sunday and ordered held without bail after being arrested in Manhattan on Saturday night. Lindeman's next court appearance is scheduled for Wednesday.

Fearing for his personal safety, Lindeman requested an isolated cell and a bullet-proof vest while awaiting trial. There have been persistent reports, unconfirmed by authorities, that other hoodlums intend to kill the pair for attacking the nun.

Hinckley talked about 'relationship'

WASHINGTON (AP) — In the hours after his arrest, John W. Hinckley Jr. spoke of his "one-sided relationship" with actress Jodie Foster but refused to talk about the shooting of President Reagan without a lawyer present, a Secret Service agent says.

In an unmailed letter to Miss Foster, dated the day of the shooting and taken from his hotel room, Hinckley said he would get Reagan to impress the teen-age actress.

Secret Service agent Stephen T. Colo testified at a court hearing Monday that Hinckley told him the day Reagan was shot: "Yes, I have a girlfriend, but it's not really a girlfriend because I have a one-sided relationship."

Colo said Hinckley identified the girlfriend as Miss Foster, the star of the movie "Taxi Driver."

THE HEARING WAS ON A defense motion to bar the use at Hinckley's trial of any statement given to police, the FBI or Secret Service agents after Hinckley said he wanted to consult with an attorney before speaking further.

Arguments on that motion were continuing today before U.S. District Judge Barrington D. Parker.

He also was to hear other defense motions to bar from the trial handwritten notes seized from Hinckley's cell at the federal prison at Butner, N.C. and to suppress a report by Butner psychiatrists.

Throughout Monday's hearing, Hinckley appeared to listen carefully to the testimony. But after Colo finished testifying about the Foster conversation, and while the attorneys huddled with Parker for a short conference, Hinckley closed his eyes. His elbows rested on the defense table, his hands were clasped together and his mouth rested on his thumbs.

COLO SAID HIS conversation with Hinckley about Miss Foster took place on March 30, less than five hours after Reagan, White House press secretary James Brady and two law officers were shot outside the Washington Hilton Hotel.

Colo testified that Hinckley remarked that it was too bad the day's events would affect others.

Saying he wanted to learn who the "others" were, Colo asked Hinckley if he had a girlfriend and told him that a phone number was found in his wallet.

"He said the telephone number in the wallet went to a dorm at Yale University," where Miss Foster is a student, Colo testified. "He said the girl (in the relationship) was Jodie Foster. He said she was an actress or a famous actress."

Published reports have said that Hinckley spoke to Miss Foster on the telephone, calling her at her dormitory.

DEFENSE LAWYERS CONTEND that any statements made by Hinckley after 3:10 p.m., when he told a Washington police detective that he wanted to make no further statements that he wished to make no statements without a lawyer present.

Detective Arthur Edward Myers testified that Hinckley told him he wanted police to contact an attorney used by his father, Joe Bates of Dallas. Myers said he relayed this request to FBI agents when they took custody of Hinckley and took charge of the investigation.

Colo and FBI agent Henry E. Ragle both said that while Hinckley mentioned Bates' name later in the day, he did not demand that Bates or any other attorney be present at that time.

At 7 p.m., both men testified, Hinckley voluntarily provided statements about his family background and his travels the previous year — but ended the conversaiton without mentioning the day's events.

Greece and neutralism

The recent election in Greece produced a Socialist government headed by Andreas Papandreou whose campaign advocated the closing of American bases and withdrawal from NATO's military wing.

Although he now says there will be no abrupt change in the status of U.S. bases, Papandreou has made it clear that his government will reflect a distinct neutralist position, to some extent loosening Greece's ties with Western Europe and seeking a referendum on continued membership in the Common Market.

The Greek vote follows the British Labor Party's announced neutralist stance and the growth of anti-nuclear sentiment in West Germany. Elsewhere in Europe, there have been increasing signs of opposition to the placement of new U.S. nuclear weapons to counter the buildup of the Soviet Union's SS-20 nuclear missiles, whose longer range spans all of Europe. The election in Greece, while it also reflects a desire for change in economic and social directions, contributes to the sense of European neutralism, creating new problems for the Atlantic alliance.

It's understandable, of course, that Europeans living in the shadow of the East-West nuclear arms buildup should be nervous; there have even been increased calls for unilateral dismantling of existing nuclear defenses, and these have produced political difficulties for NATO governments.

What such unilateralists seem to want, however, is the protection of the American strategic nuclear umbrella, in which U.S. and Soviet cities are mutually held hostage, without risk to Europe. They appear to believe that unopposed Soviet nuclear dominance on the continent would not be translated eventually into political dominance. And while West European governments reject that unrealistic view, they nonetheless want Washington to pursue arms control talks with the Russians in order to ease political neutralist pressures.

The Reagan administration has, in fact, agreed to reopen talks next month. Everyone must hope that they will succeed, that an agreement can be reached on mutual reductions of nuclear arms in Europe. Yet the burden cannot rest entirely on Washington to guarantee Western Europe's security and at the same time ignore the Soviet nuclear buildup on its borders. The European unilateralists' course might very well produce isolationist sentiment in the United States, with far-reaching consequences for the Atlantic alliance.

Despite his neutralist campaign rhetoric, Papandreou's stated recognition of the importance of Greece's basic economic and other relations with the West should also compel him to consider the dangers of any course that might unhinge NATO's southern flank and produce new strains on the alliance. Washington must do all it can to hold the alliance together; the task for the Reagan administration is to convince Greece and others that Western unity remains the best path to safety.

Welcome, Mr. Gotlieb

Most Canadians do not know who their ambassador to the United States is. Most people in the United States do not know who their ambassador to Canada is. The neighboring nations who share the longest unfenced border in the world are not all that neighborly.

Every time one of the two countries appoints an ambassador to the other it is hoped that relations will improve. The latest such appointment was made the other day by Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau, who picked Allan E. Gotlieb to be the next ambassador to the United States.

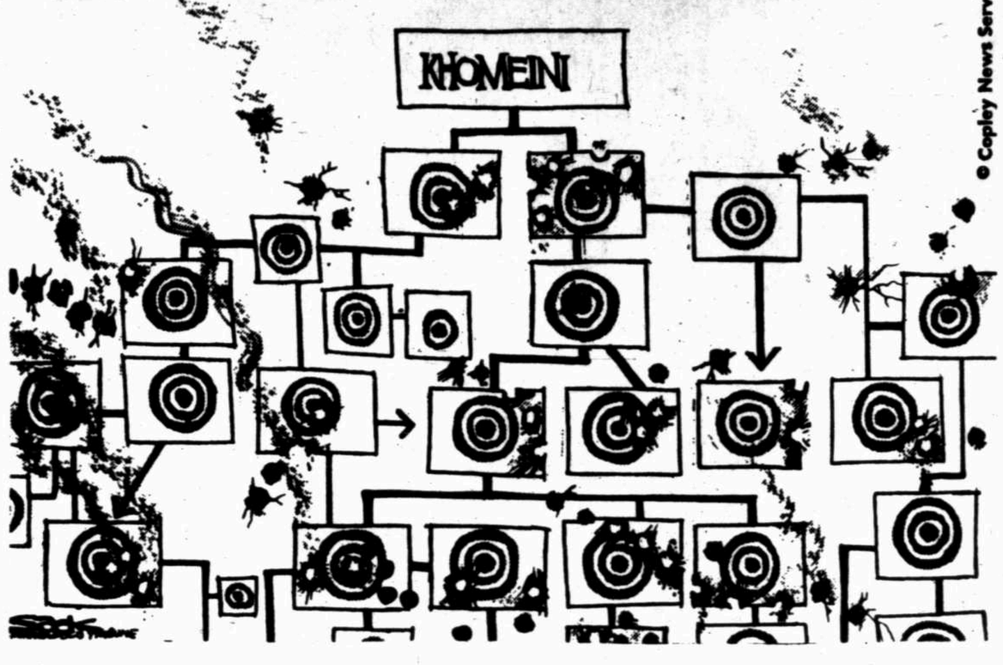
He deserves a warm welcome and best wishes as he prepares to occupy the Canadian Embassy in Washington on Dec. 1.

Ambassador-designate Gotlieb is a career public servant, his position for the past few years being Under-Secretary of State for External Affairs. He is no stranger to his neighbors south of the border, having earned degrees from both the University of California and Harvard.

What may be significant in his background is his experience in the field of communication. In 1968 he was appointed deputy minister of the Department of Communications. He also has been a governor, the Canadian equivalent of our trustee, of Carleton University, the home of Canada's best school of journalism.

With all that behind him, we trust Ambassador Gotlieb will find ways to prod citizens of the United States toward a better understanding of our Canadian friends. Surely he can help Canadians to understand "those Yankees" better.

IRANIAN GOV'T ORGANIZATION CHART:



WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Book contract compromised prosecutor

WASHINGTON — The Senate machinery for grinding down transgressors is humming its inexorable hum. Caught in the wheelworks is Sen. Harrison Williams, D-N.J., the Senate's lone ABSCAM victim, who has been marked for expulsion.

Jack Anderson

Operating the machinery by remote control is Thomas Puccio, the chief ABSCAM prosecutor, who has been funneling "evidence" against Williams into the Senate Ethics Committee. Puccio's confederate on the committee staff, Donald Sanders, has been briefing senators in the backrooms.

Williams has begged for the chance to participate in the briefings and present his side of the case. He has been turned down coldly. The senators want to remove the ABSCAM taint from their institution with as little commotion as possible.

Williams is guilty, all right. He is guilty of consorting with undercover agents who sought to corrupt him while the FBI filmed the scene with hidden cameras. There had been other congressional performers, who had walked off the FBI set, their pockets and briefcases stuffed with $100 bills pressed on them by the undercover men. But Williams refused the bribe, protesting, "No, no, no, no."

Yes, Williams is guilty of appearing on the ABSCAM videotapes in the role of a politician on the make. He is guilty of getting himself tagged with the ABSCAM label, which has become the new buzzword for political corruption. He is guilty of having his face projected on the front pages in the same company with congressmen who took bribes.

Puccio even persuaded a jury that Williams was guilty. Guilty of what? He turned down a $50,000 bribe. He rejected the G-men's suggestion that he illegally hide his interest in a titanium mine. He also refused to have any part of a tax-avoidance scheme.

Then what crime did Williams commit? He boasted of his influence with high government officials. But he was coached by an FBI hireling who assured Williams that the statements would be meaningless — just "b.s." to persuade an Arab sheik to invest $190 million in a titanium mine.

The senator sought no government contracts; in fact, he had no intention of doing so. Essentially, he was convicted of dealing in hot air and empty promises, which are every politician's stock in trade.

My associate Indy Badhwar has spent months investigating the Williams case. He has found more misconduct by the government than by Williams.

For example, vital exculpatory documents were withheld from Williams' attorneys. These were shown after the trial to one of the jurors, Salvatore Ottoviano, who had voted to convict Williams.

Ottoviano swore out an affidavit, under penalty of perjury, that he would have "voted not guilty on all counts and would under no circumstances have changed my vote to guilty" if he had seen the suppressed Justice Department documents.

All it would have taken was one juror to block Williams' conviction. In fact, the other jurors might have joined in acquitting the senator if only the hidden evidence had been made available to the jury.

The real guilt in the Williams case, I believe, should be laid on the prosecution team. Here's the shameful rollcall:

Thomas Puccio, chief prosecutor — He spent 13 months trying to draw Williams into a criminal conspiracy. Yet Puccio could cite nothing in the senator's record that warranted an investigation. Puccio covered up misconduct by the prosecution team and misled the U.S. attorney's office into believing that Williams had a hidden interest in the titanium mine. It was Puccio, in fact, who had the hidden interest. He was an unnamed collaborator in a book about ABSCAM. The sales might be hurt if his biggest fish should escape from the net.

Mel Weinberg, convicted con man and perjurer — He was paid by the FBI to pose as the representative of a phony sheik. He used all the tricks of the con man's trade to lure Williams into the ABSCAM trap. Again and again, the senator refused the bait, but Weinberg kept coming back with something more enticing. Weinberg even produced a forged letter, with Williams' copied signature, in an attempt to incriminate him.

Anthony Amoroso, undercover FBI agent — There is sworn testimony that he "lost his professional judgment ... and began soliciting improper conduct by Williams." He tried to put incriminating statements into the senator's mouth. When Williams refused the $50,000 bribe and tried to explain his ethics, Amoroso rushed into the room and interrupted the exculpatory remarks on the pretext that a long-distance call awaited the phony sheik.

John Good, FBI special agent in charge of the ABSCAM operation — When the U.S. attorney's office became suspicious of Weinberg's coaching and entrapment techniques, Good intervened to protect the con man. Good also provided new bait after Williams repeatedly rejected the criminal bait.

The Justice Department isn't supposed to enforce the law by creating crimes and entrapping people into committing them. For the sake of justice, the Senate should look beyond the Williams case into the methods used to nail him.

A CHANGING WORLD

Back in the USSR: Faces still express pain of Soviet life

LENINGRAD — "It's terrible living in Russia," Ivan said in a surprisingly frank outburst addressed to his American taxi customer. "You ought to be glad you're an American."

John Pinkerman

Ivan is not this Soviet citizen of the Republic of Russia's true name, of course; it would be dangerous for him to be identified. Why he spoke out so freely, in English, to a stranger is difficult to comprehend but perhaps he was merely giving vent to frustrations that seem evident in the solemn — or grim - expressions manifested by most Soviets seen by this reporter during a two-week visit to Moscow, Leningrad, Kiev and Yalta.

"Look what they've just done," Ivan said. "They've doubled the price of gasoline from 20 kopeks a litre to 40 (this comes out at about $2.80 a gallon). How can I survive? I get only 160 rubles a month (about $215).

'They tell me that under this Communist system that I own the country. I don't own anything. My 86-year-old father tells me it was better under the czars. And, I'll never be able to leave here."

Ivan's seemingly risky denunciation of the Red powers-that-be was the most dramatic example of what appears to be a fairly obvious spartan life for most of the USSR's 265 million citizens. However, there were some exceptions, and it would be unfair not to mention them.

While there were very few smiles seen in 12 hours a day of mixing with the Soviet people, it must be noted that 95 percent of the women seen on the streets were remarkably well dressed. Their attire, almost always skirts and dresses, rarely slacks, had a certain style about it even though not up to high Paris fashions. Their hair was well taken care of and many, while hefty, were quite attractive. But, rarely was a smile seen, facial expressions ranging from stern to grim.

Food lines were many, particularly in Moscow, Kiev and Leningrad (they were fewer in Yalta where life generally seemed less oppressive). There were lines for bananas, for grapes, for watermelon, for meat, for fish, for bread. These lines did not necessarily mean that shopping housewives were destitute; they meant that such items were in short supply and it was the alert wife who got to the watermelon line in time.

There is almost no unemployment in the Soviet Union, but many workers get only two or three days work a week. Seventy to 80-year-old women, most of them World War II widows of the 7.5 million men killed, toil at all manner of jobs. Bent over their short-handled brooms made of tree twigs, they sweep the sidewalks and the gutters. They work as guards at the many museums in major cities. They are hotel maids and floor attendants. They sell vegetables at some of the public markets. It is saddening to see some of them, the broom-pushers, as they labor relentlessly in the streets and parks.

On the other hand, Moscow's famous GUM (pronounced goom) department store was packed with mostly women each of the four times I visited it. Most important, these housewives were not just window-shopping. They were buying. They also were in lines. There were show lines and the biggest line I saw was for brassieres. I was told that a supply had arrived from Paris, far superior to the Soviet product, and the word had gotten around.

A privately owned automobile is a luxury out of reach of most Soviets. Almost all cars are owned by the government and their drivers delight in scaring the daylights out of pedestrians, from slow-moving, overweight American reporters to even their own elderly.

While there are few private cars and traffic jams are rare, there is excellent public transportation — buses, trolley buses, boats and the marvelous Moscow Metro (subway) with clean cars, fast and frequent service and stations replete with famous paintings and sculptures.

A Pravda editorial recently called on the people to conserve bread, and this reflected the extremely tight situation regarding another bad grain harvest. The 170-million-ton harvest fell 25 percent below the forecast and even a non-expert flying over the Ukraine could see the many bare spots in vast grain fields. Meat already is in short supply throughout the nation, and this situation will be worse during the next year.

Even the music tells a visitor about the mood of the Soviet people. Russian music and Ukranian music has a tradition of being some of the most spirited in the world, but the current songs played and sung bespeak sadness, disappointment and pessimism. Perhaps the liveliest reaction noted among Soviets is when a bar's tape machine comes forth with something like "Hello Dolly."

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Tuesday, Oct. 27, the 300th day of 1981. There are 65 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Oct. 27, 1978, Egyptian President Anwar Sadat and Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin were awarded the Nobel Peace Prize.

On this date:

In 1651, Limerick, Ireland, surrendered to the British after a lengthy siege.

In 1806, France's Napoleon Bonaparte occupied Berlin.

In 1966, the U.N. General Assembly proclaimed the termination of South Africa's mandate over South-West Africa.

And in 1973, a U.N. peacekeeping force arrived in Cairo to attempt to set up a lasting ceasefire between Israeli and Arab forces.

Five years ago: U.S. Army investigations found South Korea condoned, if not controlled, collusive bidding by South Korean contractors that cost U.S. military units about $20 million a year.

One year ago: In a prison in Northern Ireland, seven Irish nationalist guerrillas launched a hunger strike, trying to pressure Britain into concessions amounting to political prisoner status.

Today's birthdays: Former Deputy Secretary of State Warren Christopher is 56. Actress Ruby Dee is 57. And actress Teresa Wright is 62.

Thought for today: The silence often of pure innocence persuades when teaching fails. — William Shakespeare, English playwright and poet (1564-1616).

CHARLEY REESE

Complaints stem from people failure

Across my desk and over my telephone flow a river of complaints — about doctors, lawyers, judges; politicians, policemen, newspapermen, and you name it. You would think nobody is left alive on the planet who is satisfied with anybody or with any institution.

Charley Reese

But I am not unique. Most any person who deals with the public could tell you the same story. For one thing, satisfied people rarely get emotional enough to sit down and write letters or pick up the telephone to tell the world they are happy. Most people who are satisfied keep their mouths shut and go on about their business. They may smile.

That is not to say all of the complaints are unfounded. A high percentage of complainers have a just gripe. There are a lot of things not going well in our republic today and the mistakes and blunders and malfeasance and misfeasance receive plenty of publicity.

The point is that after years of looking into what went wrong with this and that, I have arrived at a generalization — that wonderfully sweeping conclusion without which politicians and editorial writers would be sorely handicapped if not put out of business altogether.

I would say that in 97 percent of the cases, the problem is a failure in the individuals, not in the system. Whether we are talking about public education, criminal justice, government in general, the press, medicine or any other field, most of what people complain about, when you get to the core of the problem, results from a failure on the part of a person or persons.

A professional poverty fighter I interviewed once in his mahogany paneled office made a pretty speech about the failure of institutions. Blaming problems on institutions is a cop-out. It's like blaming road slaughter on mechanical failures. Sure, mechanical failures cause about three percent of the accidents, but 97 percent are caused by driver failure.

One of the reasons we haven't made much progress in fixing things is that we have focused on institutions and systems. We keep trying government reorganization and legislation, both of which are modern America's equivalent of Seneca Bill's Snake Oil. We have so many laws now nobody even knows them all much less can enforce them.

Dishonesty (both moral and intellectual), greed, incompetence, and lack of integrity cause most of our problems and these are all traits of individuals, not of systems or institutions. Furthermore, you can't devise a system, design an institution, or draft legislation which will protect you from people who are greedy, dishonest, incompetent and lack integrity. The best you can do is devise a system to punish them after the fact. The entire criminal and civil justice systems deal with after-the-fact situations and are concerned only with retribution and restitution and hopefully, by example only, a tiny bit of deterrence.

But which would you rather have: an iron-tight consumer protection law, or an honest, competent mechanic? A new constitution or public officials who are honest, competent, and have integrity?

A new juvenile justice system or kids who knock on your door to sell you cookies for a fund-raising project instead of breaking your window or your head?

The great irony is that while the politicians, the press, the bureaucrats, and the academics keep the public's eyes focused on institutions and systems, the priests, preachers, rabbis, and philosophers have had the answers all the time. Social problems and individual human being problems that have to be solved by dealing with the individual as an individual, not as a member of a class or a group, and by changing his or her ethical beliefs.

Unfortunately, legislating and researching pays more these days than preaching and teaching, plus the atheists and agnostics have done a pretty thorough job of discrediting religion and with it, ethics. Consequently we are bombarded with pompous tomes of analyses and commission studies when what we need to be told is simply, "Love your neighbor and obey the Ten Commandments."

'Life is keeping busy,' Sadat's widow says

LONDON (AP) — In an interview a few weeks before the assassination of Egyptian President Anwar Sadat, Jihan Sadat said she always feared her husband would be killed and she "would never remarry" if it happened.

Sadat

"But life is not only a man. Life is keeping busy, enjoying your time, then you will never be lonely," Mrs. Sadat said to a British magazine, Woman's Own, which published the interview today.

"At the beginning, after the 1952 revolution, we were put in so many difficult situations," Mrs. Sadat said.

"I was always worried that my husband would be killed, that something would happen to us and I would lose him."

Mrs. Sadat, who saw her husband fatally wounded on a Cairo parade ground Oct. 6, said: "It was as if I had planted in myself that you must feel secure until anything happens. Then, whenever it happens, it will be all right."

CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP) — Singer B.J. Thomas is getting an honorary doctor of humanities degree at Baptist College for his contribution to Christian music.

Thomas' biggest hit is "Raindrops Keep Falling on My Head," but he's also known as a gospel singer.

"I'm not a Christian entertainer," he once said. "I'm an entertainer who is a Christian."

Thomas, who has won four Grammys since 1975, was to receive the degree today at groundbreaking ceremonies for construction of a chapel and auditorium at the religious school.

SHIPLEY, England (AP) — Pamela Mason, ex-wife of actor James Mason, and her son, a special adviser to President Reagan, have been ousted from the board of directors of the textile manufacturing group Mrs. Mason's father founded.

Mason

Loud cheers and applause rang out as shareholders of Illingworth Morris voted Monday to oust Mrs. Mason, a former talk-show hostess, and her son, Morgan Mason.

The ouster of 65-year-old Mrs. Mason and her 31-year-old son at an extraordinary general meeting of shareholders at the company's headquarters followed a bitter two-year boardroom battle.

Neither Mrs. Mason nor her son were present at the meeting. They were represented by attorney Gerard Gent, who said afterwards: "Mrs. Mason will be disappointed at the result."

Mrs. Mason, who lives in Los Angeles, joined the board on the death of her father, Isadore Ostrer in 1976. She holds 46 percent of the voting shares of the company, described by The Financial Times as "one of the leading wool textile companies in the world."

The row was over moves initiated by Mrs. Mason to fire Chairman Donald Hanson and chief executive Peter Hardy. She was angry at company losses, which last year reached $4.32 million.

Hanson and Hardy countered by proposing that Mrs. Mason and her son should be removed from the board.

Mrs. Mason was the former Hollywood actress Pamela Kellino. She married Mason in 1941 but they divorced in 1965. Mason, now 72, starred in many movies including "Lolita."

NEW YORK (AP) — What kind of a person would buy a theater ticket and then resell it at a big profit just before the performance?

A future governor, for one.

Colorado Gov. Richard Lamm, in town to promote the Colorado ski industry, paid a call Monday on Mayor Edward Koch and reminisced about the summer of 1956, when he lived in New York City.

Lamm said he worked as a $45-a-week runner on the New York Stock Exchange, but $45 didn't go very far, even in those days, so Lamm said he picked up some extra money by scalping tickets for Broadway shows, including "My Fair Lady."

MONTPELIER, Vt. (AP) — British actor Oliver Reed, ever the tough guy on the screen, wants to make amends to the small ski resort town where he was arrested earlier this month after a barroom brawl.

Reed, 43, who has played swashbuckling rogues in "The Four Musketeers," "Lion of the Desert" and "Oliver!" will change his original innocent plea to no contest today and pay a $1,200 fine, lawyers said — if a Vermont District Court judge agrees to the deal worked out by defense and prosecuting attorneys.

Reed also suggested he make a $1,000 donation to the Stowe Rescue Squad, an all-volunteer ambulance operation.

"He likes the idea of a nice gesture, something that will help provide some service to the community," said Reed's lawyer, Alan Thorndike. "He'd rather leave a better impression than the incident might have left."

In "the incident," Reed was hauled out of The Pub by police after he challenged patrons first to armwrestling matches and then fistfights, allegedly breaking furniture and bottles in the process.

Bar owner Richard Hughes, also an Englishman, said the actor agreed to pay him $250 in restitution.

Rockefeller puts money, prestige on line for new highway system

By WAYNE M. DAVIS
Associated Press Writer

CHARLESTON, W.Va. (AP) — Jay Rockefeller, West Virginia's wealthy and ambitious governor, is putting his prestige on the line to persuade voters that doubling the state debt is a small price to pay for new highways.

Rockefeller is bucking the influence of Reagan economics as well as interest rates near 13 percent in his attempt to win approval Nov. 3 of a $750 million bond issue to finance highway construction.

His proposal also comes with the state Highway Department still squeezed for operating money, despite a virtual halt in maintenance of existing roads and the firing of 1,500 highway workers earlier this year.

This fiscal year, the Legislature appropriated $5 million for repaving jobs, only enough to cover 135 miles of highway.

In a state where roads must wind around steep, rugged mountains, few things are dearer to West Virginians' hearts than a good highway. And few state politicians have gotten more of what they wanted in recent years than Jay Rockefeller. The 44-year-old two-term Democrat, who is being mentioned as a presidential candidate in 1984, picked up nearly the entire tab for his $11 million re-election campaign last year.

Business groups, led by coal operators and the construction industry, have been quick to endorse the bond issue. The proposal is opposed by an unusual coalition of fiscal conservatives and human services advocates worried about the state's $1.45 billion debt.

No spending figures have been released on the road bond campaign, but having the great-grandson of John D. Rockefeller on your side can't hurt.

David Hardesty, co-chairman of the "Roads for Jobs and Progress Committee," a private group sponsoring the proponents' campaign, has declined all comment on the group's expenditures, saying they will be shown in a spending report due out later this week.

Bond opponents, who have relied mainly on inexpensive press releases, have predicted their total expenses at about $10,000; supporters say they expect to spend at least $300,000, much of that going into television and radio advertisements.

Six other road bond issues have been proposed since 1920, and all have been approved. But despite substantial progress eliminating the pervasive poverty of 20 years before, many parts of West Virginia remain underdeveloped and isolated by mountainous terrain.

The proposed amendment specifically calls for $100 million to build new bridges or renovate existing bridges; $100 million to match federal highway money; $100 million for Appalachian highway projects and $100 million to upgrade U.S. 52 and W.Va. 10, two main arteries in the southern part of the state.

In a recent interview, Rockefeller said the bond issue was essential to the "long-term building of West Virginia." He said approval will have a ripple effect, creating construction jobs and encouraging overall economic development.

By his own calculation of an average 8½ percent interest rate over the 10-year sale period, the state would pay back about two dollars for every one it borrows. Rockefeller says economic growth will provide enough new revenue to pay off the bonds without more taxes.

Kate Long of the West Virginia Citizens Action Group said Monday that the state shouldn't be building new roads when it can't maintain the ones it already has.

"The debt payment on earlier bond issues has eaten gigantic holes in our money for human services each year," she said. "If this bond issue goes through, it will take even bigger bites."

And Ms. Long says there's no guarantee the state will receive all of the federal matching money it expects.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Certain blood pressure pill not associated with cancer

Dear Dr. Solomon: Some time ago there was a scare in the newspapers about the possibility that a certain blood pressure pill might cause cancer. At the time I was particularly worried about breast cancer because an aunt of mine had recently died from it. My doctor recommended I continue with the drug because my blood pressure was really high. Is there any more information about the subject? — Clara, Montreal

Dear Clara: As you indicated, there were reports a couple of years ago that an antihypertensive drug called reserpine was associated with breast cancer; however, later evidence seems to indicate that this is not the case.

Dr. J. David Curb, of the Baylor College of Medicine in Houston, has reported on a study of more than a thousand women who were given reserpine for an average of almost two years. Over a five-year period, there was no significant difference in the incidence of breast cancer between his group and another group of women who did not get reserpine.

Dr. Curb says it is still not possible to come to the absolute conclusion that reserpine is not associated with breast cancer, but the evidence seems to be against it.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My granddaughter has rheumatoid arthritis. Now that she is pregnant, it doesn't bother her as much. I say it's because she's happy that she's going to have a child, and doesn't think about the arthritis so much. She thinks it's more than that, that there's something going on in her body that is making her feel better. Have other women said they feel better during the time they are pregnant in relation to arthritis? — Mrs. A.B.

Dear Mrs. B.: As many as 75 percent of women with rheumatoid arthritis do experience a remission of the disease during the time they are pregnant. Some scientists have suggested that a substance produced in the body during pregnancy may account for the improvement.

Researchers at the University of Texas Health Science Center now believe they may have discovered what that substance is. A protein has been found in the blood of patients with rheumatoid arthritis while they were pregnant; however, the material disappeared from their blood after they gave birth. The hope is that the substance can eventually be used as a treatment for rheumatoid arthritis.

Dear Dr. Solomon: You have frequently cited statistics about the number of smokers who suffer from lung cancer. But what about people who don't smoke? Don't they get lung cancer too? — Charlie, Towson, Md.

Dear Charlie: Although it is true that nonsmokers are not immune to cancer of the lung, it is not a major cause of death for them. Recent studies indicated that the death rate for lung cancer among men who smoke is about nine times higher than that for nonsmoking men; among women, the rate is about 2.5 times higher for smokers than for nonsmokers.

(If you have a medical question, write to Neil Solomon, M.D., 1726 Reisterstown Road, Baltimore, Md. 21208. Dr. Solomon cannot give personal replies but will answer as many questions as possible in his column.)

Good luck, work result in arrest of slaying suspects

DALLAS (AP) — Authorities say "luck and good police work" resulted in the Houston arrests of two suspects in connection with the slaying of a Dallas city executive who also served as a volunteer police chaplain.

Warrants for two Louisiana men were issued in Dallas Monday after their arrest in Houston for minor traffic offenses.

Municipal Court Judge R.L. Middleton issued the warrants for Sherman Lyons, 18, of New Orleans, and Robert Wayne Paulus, 19, of Metairie, La. The warrants seek the return of the two men to face capital murder charges. Middleton set bond at $15,000 each.

J.C. Bristo, 57, was found shot to death in his apartment Sunday after a newspaper carrier discovered the door ajar.

His 1979 Oldsmobile station wagon was missing and police said robbery may have been a motive.

Dallas police spokesman Bob Shaw said the two men were arrested Monday by Houston authorities as a result of "luck and good police work."

Bristo had been shot once in the forehead, investigators said. He last was seen by co-workers Friday afternoon. A Dallas County medical examiner's spokesman said Bristo appeared to have been dead since Friday night.

He had been manager of Redbird Airport since 1977 and a city employee for 12 years, said Ken Kenvin, assistant director of the city's aviation department.

Bristo was a former Church of Christ minister and for 11 years had served as a volunteer chaplain for the Dallas Police Department's northwest division.

Voyage of Haitian refugees ends in tragedy

By DAVID CHANDLER
Associated Press Writer

MIAMI (AP) — Survivors of the deadly wreck of a rickety sailboat carrying Haitian refugees say the vessel's crew abandoned them about an hour before the boat capsized.

Meanwhile, a medical examiner said autopsies on the 33 people whose bodies washed ashore indicate the refugees had been loaded into the boat from a mother ship a short time before.

The refugees were fed a variety of refrigerated meals about one hour before their open-hulled, 25-foot boat broke up on a reef, Dr. Ronald Wright, the Broward County medical examiner, said Monday night in a telephone interview from his Fort Lauderdale office.

At least 30 more Haitians swam to safety at Hillsboro Beach in the pre-dawn incident Monday. The survivors claimed they had sailed from Haiti to Florida by way of the Bahamas in the mud-caulked, square-rigged boat.

They were taken into custody by the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service and transferred to the Krome Refugee Camp near Miami, 30 miles to the south.

It was the worst such accident since heavy influxes of Caribbean refugees arriving by boat began more than three years ago.

Wright said that as far as he was concerned, the death toll was 35. "There were two ladies pregnant with near-term babies," he said. "We got them born. Then we issued them death certificates."

He described the remainder of the dead as young adults.

"They had just eaten the type of meals that come from a really good refrigerator," he said. "Some people had had rice and chicken. Others, potatoes and pork, some vegetables, salad. They were well-fed."

The survivors told immigration officials that four other Haitians, identified as boat captain Charles Joseph and his three mates, anchored the boat just offshore about 5:30 a.m. EST.

"The captian and crew swam ashore, telling everyone to stay put," while they arranged transportation to the beach, said Leonard Rowland, an immigration official in Miami.

"About an hour later, two or three big waves came along and overturned them. Those who could swim made it. Those who couldn't, didn't," Rowland said.

A police search turned up no sign of the four.

The serene beach where early morning strollers normally pick up seashells was strewn with bodies and debris from the sailboat which wrecked just 50 feet offshore.

Residents Ed and Mary Lou Shea found the corpses of eight thin Haitians lying just outside their oceanfront condominium.

"It was the most ghastly thing I have ever seen," Mrs. Shea said. "Usually we have such a beautiful view. Today is a nightmare."

Elderly residents in the town of 2,400 provided sheets to soggy survivors and covered some of the dead. Bulldozers scooped up the corpses for transfer to vans bound for the county morgue.

"You come so close. Half of them made it, half off them didn't. It's so sad," said Police Sgt. Dan Hynes, his voice breaking with emotion.

All of the survivors seemed to be in good shape, police said. They were treated for exposure and saltwater inhalation by police and paramedics, then put on a bus that took them to the detention camp.

The survivors told authorities they left Haiti on Aug. 26, spent a month in the Bahamas, then sailed for Florida five to seven days ago.

The breakup of the sailboat came less than 12 hours after the Coast Guard cutter Chase halted the first boatload of Haitians to be stopped under a new U.S. interdiction policy.

The 56 passengers aboard that sailboat were returned to Haiti on Monday afternoon.

Broward County (Florida) officials remove the bodies of several Haitian refugees from the beach off Hillsboro Inlet north of Fort Lauderdale Monday morning after 33 Haitians drowned when the overloaded boat they were in capsized just off shore. Thirty other refugees swam to shore and survived the ordeal.

New plan calls for joining Midland and Ector counties

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Midland County would be joined with a portion of Ector County under a legislative redistricting plan unveiled Monday by Speaker Bill Clayton, while another plan by Comptroller Bob Bullock would place Midland County with counties to the west.

Both proposals were to be considered at 1:30 p.m. today when the Legislative Redistricting Board returns to vote.

Under Clayton's proposal, the bulk of Ector County, including Odessa, would be placed in District 75.

District 76 would be composed of Midland County and the remainder of Ector County.

Howard, Glasscock, Reagan, Upton, Crane, Ward, Winkler, Reeves, Jeff Davis, Culberson and Hudspeth counties would comprise District 69.

Cochran, Hockley, Yoakum, Terry, Gaines, Dawson, Andrews and Martin counties would make up District 77.

Mitchell, Sterling, Coke and Tom Green counties would constitute District 66.

Crockett, Irion, Schleicher and counties to the east would be in District 67.

Under Bullock's plan, Midland, Glasscock, Sterling, Upton, Reagan and Irion counties would constitute District 133.

Odessa would constitute District 134.

The remainder of Ector County would be placed in District 135, along with Hudspeth, Culberson, Jeff Davis, Presidio, Brewster, Terrell, Pecos, Reeves, Loving, Ward, Crane and Winkler counties.

Hockley, Yoakum, Terry, Lynn, Gaines, Dawson and Andrews counties would be in District 136.

Martin, Howard, Borden, Scurry, Fisher, Nolan and Jones counties would make up District 137, with Mitchell, Coke and Tom Green counties making up District 132.

Crockett, Schleicher, Sutton, Val Verde, Edwards, Kinney, Maverick and Zavala counties would comprise District 131.

Pruett extradited to Mississsipi

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — Marion Albert Pruett is now being held in the Jackson City Jail after his extradition from Amarillo, Texas.

Pruett arrived on a private flight Monday night and was escorted under heavy security to the jail, where reporters waited behind barricades.

He is charged with the Sept. 17 robbery of a Unifirst Federal Savings and Loan branch in Jackson in which Peggy Lowe, 43, of Brandon was abducted. Mrs. Lowe has not been seen since.

Shackled hands to waist and ankle to ankle, Pruett hobbled from a car driven by federal marshalls into the jail in a flood of camera lights in the basement garage.

The unshaven convict, clad in khakis and wearing slippers, did not gesture or make a sound as he was escorted into the jail.

Pruett is sought in connection with crimes in eight states and had been held under $150,000 bond on the Mississippi warrant since his arrest in Texas on Oct. 17.

Just moments before Pruett's arrival, Jackson Police Chief Jim Black told reporters not to shout questions at Pruett.

Black, who called reporters earlier Monday and told them not to go to the airport for pictures, said, "We don't want any antagonism of this man, because he's got something we need."

He was taken directly to a single-man cell on the fourth floor where he will be held until his trial, according to Sgt. Chip Pippin.

Pruett was paroled from prison in 1979 under the Federal Witness Protection Program after serving time for bank robbery and attempted escape in North Carolina.

Published reports have said he joined the program after testifying about the stabbing death of his cellmate in the Atlanta Federal Penitentiary.

Judges to decide if PATCO can represent striking controllers

WASHINGTON (AP) — A panel of federal judges is to decide, probably this week, whether the Professional Air Traffic Controllers Organization can continue representing controllers while it appeals a decertification order.

The Federal Aviation Administration, telling the U.S. Court of Appeals it is in the public interest to strip PATCO of its right to represent air controllers, filed a motion Monday opposing a federal court's temporary hold on the decertification order.

The order was issued Friday by the Federal Labor Relations Authority, which said the union no longer represents working controllers. But within hours the order was blocked temporarily by a federal court panel at the request of the union.

While union lawyers argue the stay does not harm the public interest, the FAA says it does because it prevents the agency from moving quickly enough to rebuild the air traffic control system.

Approximately 11,500 PATCO members were fired by President Reagan after they went on strike Aug. 3 in what the administration called an illegal walkout.

Daring fashions from the Stone Age and 21st Century

By ILONA ROSS
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Carol Horn's spring collection features deep, clear jewel tones but the designs seem better suited to those two 1960s TV cartoon families, the Jetsons and the Flintstones, than to today's young woman.

Some tops at her show Monday featured huge shoulders with oversized collars that look like upside-down triangles or caps over exaggerated shoulders — like an astronaut's gear from the 21st century Jetsons' wardrobe.

Other outfits lacked detail, except for some limp ruffles, and revealed few human outlines other than legs exposed by short skirts. Some of them were too unconstructed, hanging limply like the simple fashions of the Stone Age Flintstones characters.

But the price is right for today's young consumer, said a buyer from a leading department store, who declined to be identified. She added that the silhouette was right for today's contemporary woman.

There may have been room for debate over the shape, but there was consensus that Miss Horn's colors were full of life.

With the exception of a rather lackluster amber, her keynote group of jewel tones such as emerald and ruby was clear and vibrant.

Less successful were attempts at more subtle blues and greens, identified in the press handout as lapis and jade, which looked washed out compared with the sapphires and turquoises that predominated elsewhere.

Like other designers this season, Carol Horn is leaving hemlines to the consumer, offering lengths from mini to knee-grazing to mid-calf. Her pants ranged from shorts to mid-calf culottes.

Some of her nicer touches were cotton sweaters a la football or rugby with large horizontal stripes on the bodice and thinner stripes in different colors on the sleeves.

Also wearable was a pretty collection of linen suits with vertically striped culottes or shorts banded at the hem in the same print in a horizontal direction. The jackets have puffed sleeves which narrow toward the wrists and were shown with mandarin neck blouses with tucks down the front.

There was plenty of suede, in those beautiful magentas and sapphires, especially nice in mid-calf flared skirts with double ruffles at the hem. Their matching T-shirts, also in suede, with ruffles at the sleeve and neck, and belted with a twisted rope for a peplum effect, weren't as lively.

One outfit that managed to look modern while leaving space to the astronauts was an Oriental look consisting of long vest sashed over a knee-length tunic worn over pants.

The models wore sheer hose that either was white or picked up one of the colors in the outfit, and shoes were flat and the toes pointed.

Except for the occasional rope belt, there were no accessories. Nor should there be, with such attention-getting outfits that for the most part can be worn only by the very young or very daring.

Models display Carol Horn fashions during a showing in New York Monday. At left: a cotton sweater shirt with Lurex worn off the shoulder. At right: a suit with puffed sleeves which narrow towards the waist. The shirt is belted for a peplum effect.

Group seeks truer picture of Japan

By DEBORAH SMITH
Associated Press Writer

TOKYO (AP) — While much of the world quakes in the wake of Japan's export onslaughts, a government-backed educational organization is concerned that foreign schoolchildren are still taught to regard Japan as a land of kimono, paper houses and lovers' leaps into smoldering volcanoes.

For the past 23 years the International Society for Education Information (ISEI) has been reading foreign textbooks and encouraging textbook publishers around the world to depict Japan more accurately.

Often the mistakes involve misconceptions about Japanese society because of outdated or insufficient information, Executive Director Michiko Kaya said.

The tendency to portray Japan as a quaint Oriental land of willowy geisha and wizened rice growers was quite common in textbooks 20 years ago, and these images still persist in some publications, Miss Kaya said. But the trend today is to represent Japan as an overcrowded, industrial giant where people wear masks to fend off the polluted air, she said.

Face masks can still be seen on city streets today, but wearers are usually more concerned about transmitting cold or flu germs than inhaling pollutants.

Miss Kaya, whose late father was a member of the imperial family, said ISEI had been created in 1958, with half its funding from the Japanese Foreign Ministry and the remainder from companies and individuals. Today the society receives only one-third of its budget from the government and conducts its activities without government "interference," she said.

"Children usually can't come to Japan to see it firsthand for themselves, so that's why we decided to do this service since students remember what they learn from textbooks," she said.

More than 200 bilingual experts and university professors read foreign textbooks, pointing out incorrect passages and providing new information.

The concern about how foreigners view Japan reflects a basic perception among many Japanese that they are misunderstood by people in other countries, leading to strains in bilateral issues, notably in trade.

Among the most frequent mistakes are descriptions of daily life and social customs, often based on prewar family structure, dress, diet and housing.

For example, a U.S. social studies book, published in 1972, said "grandfathers, grandmothers, aunts and uncles live together with the rest of the family in one house. In farm villages this is necessary so that everyone can help with the work."

The society's comment was that even in rural areas the prewar extended family pattern is giving way to the nuclear family and "it is no longer true that the whole family is needed to help with farm work."

The same book said farmers and fishermen "live much as their fathers and grandfathers lived," hardly accurate considering the color television, two-car families and modern equipment seen in rural areas.

It also said rural houses were commonly constructed of wood with thatched roofs, in actuality a fairly uncommon sight with today's preference for houses made of steel-reinforced concrete as found in cities.

Here's the answer

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

Q. — We have just moved into a house where the kitchen walls have what has been described to us as alligator cracks. The walls are of old-fashioned plaster. We would like to remove the old paint and apply new. Would it be all right to put on paint remover and then scrape off the cracked paint? Also, what caused the cracking?

A. — Yes. When the paint has softened, do the scraping while the blade is held almost horizontal. If you hold it upright, you are move likely to dig into the plaster. Cracking of this sort can be caused by a variety of things. Some or all of these reasons may be responsible — too thick a coat, failure to remove gloss, painting over grease, putting on a second coat before the first was thoroughly dry, too many coats over the years without proper surface preparation.

Q. — I want to apply a penetrating wood sealer to our living-room floor to make it glossy. Do I have to take off the old finish, which probably is varnish although it doesn't have a shine?

A. — Penetrating wood sealer does not have a natural gloss. It sinks into the wood, therefore should not be applied to a floor which has an old finish on it. Are you sure you don't already have a penetrating sealer on the floor, since it has no shine? However, the gloss could have worn out over the years. Varnish sets atop a surface, wood sealer does not. If the old finish is varnish, you have to remove it before putting on the sealer. If the old finish is a sealer, clean the floor and apply the new sealer.

DEAR ABBY

Name game takes a tricky turn

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I have enjoyed many a chuckle from your column over the years. Yesterday I thought one letter was particularly funny, so I read it to my wife. She saw absolutely no humor in it. The letter was from a woman who said her best friend, Alice, suspected that her husband, Ray, was fooling around with the girls at the office. The friend said she knew Ray was fooling around, but she didn't know whether to tell Alice.

Well, my wife's name is Alice and my name is Ray, and my wife thought it was too much of a coincidence.

I tried to tell her that your column is in over a thousand newspapers, and it could be any Alice and Ray.

My wife is very active in the symphony, Junior League and civic projects, and I am well-known in business circles, Chamber of Commerce, etc. I suppose we will both be in for a lot of good-natured ribbing.

I still think its funny, but you would be doing me a big favor if you'd drop my wife a few lines and let her know that I'm not the Ray you wrote about. — RHODE ISLAND RAY

DEAR RAY: Will do. "Alice" and "Ray" were pseudonyms. Coincidentally, I heard from another Alice-and-Ray team. They live in Dallas. He's 79 and she's 81. They thought it was hilarious. In fact, Ray thanked me!

DEAR ABBY: For some time my husband and I have been seeing a family therapist, both separately and together. I have trouble trying to understand what our therapist hopes to accomplish by some of the things he does. For example, at the start of each session he spends about ten minutes standing in front of the window, stretching and describing what he sees, talking in a singsong voice about the weather and things that have absolutely nothing to do with us or our problems. My husband can't understand this either. Is this usual in therapy?

We are afraid to ask him because we don't want to question his methods. What is family therapy, anyway? — MILWAUKEE SENTINEL READER

DEAR READER: Family therapy is counseling the family members individually, and also as a group. You have the right to ask your therapist any question that comes to you mind. And if you're not satisfied with the answers, there are other therapists.

Children's eating habits

By ERMA BOMBECK

One of the first concerns of new mothers is the eating habits of children.

I can make you an authority in 400 words or less.

The more teeth a child has, the less he chews.

He or she will never eat anything that is good for him/gives him strong bones or teeth/makes him feel better.

He will never eat anything that is green.

His first words will be "a la carte."

He will never eat the same cereal twice.

A child inherently feels that the dog gets better food than he does.

When a mother pretends to love the white lumpy stuff in the spoon that smells, a child has absolutely no reason to trust her.

A child will never eat anything in a sack with his name on it.

Knowing this, I cannot imagine why there is flak every year somewhere regarding school lunches. The school lunch has always been designed to give children the nutritional balance and vitamins necessary for growth and development that a child is put to bed early for not eating at home.

Some children have been known to enter high school believing in their hearts that broccoli is something you plant on Arbor Day for shade. Yet every year someone insists upon converting them to nutrition despite the fact that nutrition is what gets thrown out.

This year, at a school in New York, a realistic administrator has declared, "Let 'em eat pizza" . . . a phrase that ranks right up there with "Don't turn your back on a two-year-old."

He has rationalized that pizza has all the basic standards to get students through the day and wants it on the menu every day. I say, let the man speak. He obviously knows children. Once pizza has the sanction of school and parents, I fully expect a rebellion among them to protest they are being fed junk food and will demand string beans, Harvard beets and okra.

Until then, the award for ingenuity goes to a school in the Midwest which announced that the price of a school lunch will go up to $1.35 this year.

If exorbitant prices don't get children flocking to the cafeteria, then I've been a mother 25 years for nothing.

Not all overeaters are emotionally ill

By SHIRLEY BRIGHT BOODY
Copley News Service

Dear Shirley: In the paper you gave the woman whose husband is an alcoholic kind advice, but you use a different tone for a woman who had a heart attack in 1979.

Although this woman who overeats is scared and asks your advice, you are cold. You tell her, "No one is forcing you to eat or cook desserts, breads and big meals. You are doing it to yourself." Yes, I suppose she is and so are thousands of others in the United States and elsewhere.

What gets me is that you understand that alcoholism is an emotional problem and you suggest the AA. Overeating, being overweight is also an emotional problem (a cry for help, we might say) often resulting from childhood experiences or a number of other ones such as fear, feelings of inadequacy, etc.

And then there is the food "junkie" who, like the alcoholic or drug user, has to have his or her pill, shot, the doughnut, the cake, the sugar and the too large meal.

I would hope that you will be able to send the lady who had asked you to help her to an organization similar to that of the local AA, where she receives encouragement, counseling and nutrition information.

Also, many overeaters need the above-mentioned program at a price they can afford.

Please print my letter. — Mrs. M.G.

Dear Mrs. M.G.: You are absolutely right. I have often suggested Overeaters Anonymous (OA) or Take Off Pounds Sensibly (TOPS) as well as AA to many people and have written again to this lady, advising her to try some meetings to see if they help her.

Let me point out that not all overweight people are emotionally ill. Unlike alcoholics and drug abusers, the overweight person is not unable to function mentally. Emotional problems usually underlie any destructive behavior and the bottom line of good therapy is to relieve the distress and to make the individual recognize and take responsibility for his own behavior.

Destructive habits and behavior can be gradually changed to healthy ones, but only when the individual realizes that he must do it himself. Groups often help in supportive ways in the changing process.

Dear Shirley: I have been hearing about the "new wonder foods" of the future.

What kinds of foods will they be? Do you know anything about them or how I could I get more information? I am going into the restaurant business. — Mr. K.G.

Dear Mr. K.G.: You must be referring to the new genetically engineered food plants that have never been grown before. The U.S. Department of Agriculture can give you more information on them. A new high-protein gene from a bean seed was transferred to a sunflower cell, creating a new entity, the "sunbean."

Scientists are developing plants that will have the same high-quality protein as animal foods, but will be significantly lower in cost. They will be resistant to pests such as fruit flies, fertilize themselves, grow in drought areas and arid terrain and enrich soils.

Since these new foods are still in the development stage, no one knows when they will be available commercially, but their future sounds exciting. The FDA must approve them first.

Dear Shirley: I have had the low blood sugar problem periodically and have to be careful what I eat.

I was told by a nutritionisht that I could use Tupelo honey as a good sweetener; that's what she recommends for diabetics. I have watched for this same advice from others and so far have never seen it. What can you tell me about Tupelo honey? — C.B.

Dear. C.B.: No qualified nutritionist would recommend honey of any kind as a sweetener for diabetics or people with low blood sugar. Such poor advice could cause a real disaster. "Tupelo" is any genus of mostly North American trees that have simple, alternative leaves and small greenish flowers.

Information on my excellent, proven home weight control program may be obtained by sending a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Shirley Bright Boody, Copley News Service, in care of this newspaper.

Girl Scouts update traditional thinking, group's president says

AP Laserphoto

Jane Freeman, wife of former Agriculture Secretary Orville Freeman and president of the Girl Scouts, talks about some of the changes her organization has had to make to keep up with the times.

HOUSTON (AP) — The Girl Scouts still hold to most of their traditional values, despite the current atmosphere of increasing permissiveness, but new modes of thinking were necessary to help the organization increase its membership this year, the group's president says.

The 1981 membership increase reversed more than a decade of declines, said President Jane Freeman, in Houston for the scouts' national convention.

She said some of the new challenges facing Girl Scout leaders include careers for women, minority recruiting and boys.

"Young girls never get together that they don't talk about things like what you do when you're talking to a boy — even at age 6. We teach the girls, 'You are responsible for your actions,'" Mrs. Freeman said.

The opening of the Girl Scout convention attracted about 5,000 delegates and visitors to the Albert Thomas Exhibit Hall. Most of the participants are adult scouting leaders — only 141 Girl Scout delegates attended. The Girl Scout convention is held every three years.

Mrs. Freeman said Girl Scouts have added an emphasis on careers to the group's traditional goals — "to be good homemakers, good parents, good community citizens."

"The majority of young women growing up today will work at least part of their lives outside the home for pay, so were trying to get them to think about that early in life," said Mrs. Freeman.

She said now, one out of ever nine girls aged 6 to 17 in the United States is a Girl Scout, and during the 12 months ending Sept. 30, membership rose by 45,100 to 2,829,458 after 10 years of decline.

"All youth services organization were showing a decline in membership" over the past 10 years, she said. "The population growth of that age group was decreasing, and I think frankly we needed to do a lot of direct work on recruiting."

Mrs. Freeman, whose husband, Orville Freeman, served two terms as governor of Minnesota and was secretary of agriculture under Presidents John Kennedy and Lyndon Johnson, said recruiting of blacks, Hispanics, and other ethnic minorities has also been stepped up.

"Our neighborhood groups have concentrated on trying to reach the the minority groups, those who have not been served other youth service organizations," she said.

Mrs. Freeman said the number of minority members in Girl Scouts rose from 10.5 percent of total membership in 1980 to 11.3 percent in 1981.

Toys are more than just playthings

ST. LOUIS (AP) — For the holiday season, consider giving toys and games that contribute to children's vision development, suggests the American Optometric Association.

The visions skills developed during infancy and the preschool years are the same skills a child will need to learn to read, to participate in sports, to learn in school, to drive a car and to perform virtually any task at work or home throughout life, the AOA points out.

The national association of 22,000 practicing optometrists in the United States offers gift ideas for babies through 5 months of age that help stimulate an infant's sense of sight.

Those suggested for older age groups will help develop a child's general movement skills, including the eye-hand coordination skills required for writing and participation in sports; shape and discrimination skills needed for reading and visualization and visual memory skills needed for comprehension and for the ability to interpret concepts.

The AOA suggests these toys that work for children as well as amuse them:

—Birth to 5 months: crib mobiles; sturdy, bright, large rattles; large, bright balls; bright rubber squeak toys.

These toys develop eye-hand coordination, teach shape concepts and encourage both eyes to work as a team.

—Six months to 18 months: large balls and blocks; wooden blocks; toys requiring sorting of shapes and sizes; large puzzles; riding toys pushed with feet, not pedaled.

These toys teach visualization, develop orientation, general coordination and directionality.

—Eighteen months to 3 years: toys requiring hammering of pegs; beanbag or ring-toss games; toys requiring sorting of shapes and sizes; large puzzles; wooden blocks; toys encouraging crawling; tricycle; rocking horse; large balls.

A tricycle helps develop two-sided coordination of eyes and body. Sorting objects encourages use of both hands, as well as visualization.

—Three to 6 years: building toys with large components that snap together; stringing beads; puzzles; chalkboard; crayons; finger paints; modeling clay; simple sewing cards; large balls; toys calling for matching up parts; peg boards.

Painting, coloring and clay help develop more sophisticated eye-hand coordination. Puzzles encourage shape and form recognition, understanding of units and wholes.

—Seven years and over: basketball; football; softball-baseball with bats and gloves; ping pong; badminton; jump ropes; pogo sticks; roller skates; plastic discs for tossing between players; follow-the-dot games.

These toys develop vision skills at highly sophisticated levels.

Before purchasing toys, examine them to be sure they are well made. It is also important to consider how appropriate an intended selection is for a particular child. Manufacturers often give suggested ages for a toy but it is wise to keep the individual child in mind because children develop at different rates.

If a gift falls into the category of a "toy that isn't really a toy," such as a chemistry set, minibike, sled or skis, the AOA cautions that a pair of safety glasses be included.

These glasses should meet the American National Standards Institute standards and parents should encourage their use whenever these potentially hazardous gifts are used. If the child needs a prescription for good vision, an optometrist can prescribe it for use in safety eyewear.

To keep bills down, remember that many homemade toys can serve the same purpose as purchased items. Homemade items will provide the same holiday pleasure and are just as effective as purchased toys in helping children develop and improve their vision skills, the AOA points out.

On the house: Save money by building own home

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

Could one of the answers to the high cost of buying a house be to build it yourself?

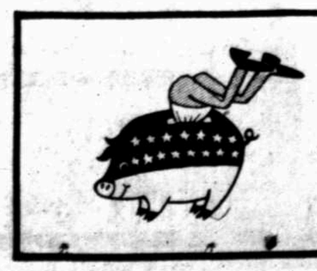
Not necessarily building it every step of the way. Not even as much as 50 percent of it. But some of it, because the more perspiration the owner-builder puts into the project, the more money he will save. Even assuming that no actual physical work is performed, a considerable cost reduction can be achieved by taking over the planning, management and control of the construction.

At least one authority feels that building a house — in this case, actually contributing "sweat equity" — is not a task limited to a privileged caste of talented craftspeople. Jack McLaughlin says in his book, "The Housebuilding Experience," that those who build their own houses are "for the most part, quite ordinary citizens from all occupations, from all economic classes, with the same diversity of interests and backgrounds found in any cross-section of the population."

A teacher at Clemson University in South Carolina, Mc Laughlin not only built his own house from foundation to rooftop, he interviewed hundreds of owner-builders from every section of the country about their experiences. Out of his accumulated knowledge came a term to describe this kind of behavior. He calls it "terpitecture," a word derived from the Indo-European root, "terp," meaning to "please oneself," since the muse Terpsichore danced for sheer delight, and the Greek "tektonikos," meaning "a good builder." Thus, a terpitect builds his or her own shelter for pleasure.

Is it really practical to "build" your own house? For most people, probably no. But if you get the notion to do so and think you have enough skill and stick-to-it-iveness to attempt it, listen to this advice from McLaughlin:

"Don't build houses that are too complex. An owner-builder's design objective might well be to weigh the value of increased space and complexity of building systems against what can realistically be completed in a reasonable amount of time and at a comfortable cost. Follow the Optimum Value Engineering System developed by the National Association of Home Builders' Research Foundation in cooperation with the U. S. Department of Housing and Urban Development, a system that says to design a rectangular house, if at all possible. This shape provides for the most economical use of floor and wall areas, limits the plan to four straight walls and simple roof structures, and still allows design flexibility."



Into piggy banks?

HINTS FROM HELOISE

Keeping cheese mold-free

DEAR HELOISE:

Wonder if you could tell me how to keep cheese from molding.

Of course I keep it refrigerated, but we just can't use it up fast enough. — Charlene Lee

+ + +

Personally, I like to grate it into a plastic bag and store it in the freezer, using as much at a time as needed. It'll keep a long time that way.

But, if you'll dip a piece of cheese cloth in white vinegar, squeeze it out and wrap the chunk of cheese in the cloth, the vinegar will retard any mold that threatens to form.

Sometimes, just wiping the cheese off with a paper towel dampened with vinegar as soon as you bring the cheese home from the store will keep the cheese mold-free. — Heloise

SOMETHING EXTRA

Dear Heloise: Including stamps for postage when giving a gift of stationery makes the gift a little more thoughtful. — Rita Cameron

+ + +

The way postage keeps going up, that's a very thoughtful idea. — Heloise

LETTER OF THOUGHT

Dear Heloise: I get my energy, motivation and enthusiasm by liking myself and liking my neighbors.

When a new family moves into the neighborhood, I have a get-acquainted coffee hour for them. Introductions and household tips are exchanged. For a fun thing that's helpful, we prepare a map of our street with the names and addresses filled in.

The guests add their home telephone number, names of family members, etc. The map is then kept by the newcomer's phone for easy reference.

By knowing your neighbors you can help each other by watching each other's property during vacations and by feeling free to call in an emergency. — Dorothee Trowbridge

TYING SHOELACES

Dear Heloise: As a grandmother, I know this works — I've had to do it too many times.

Dampen a child's shoestrings with a wet cloth before you tie them and they will remain tied to stay. — Varda Westergard

+ + +

The moms and teachers of the world thank you! — Heloise

RE-THREADING

Dear Heloise: When the cord on my traverse rod was nearly worn in two, I purchased a new cord.

To make sure it was replaced right, I took the old cord and cut it. Then I attached the new cord securely to the old one and pulled it through the rod until the new cord was in place and the old one was completely removed.

Worked beautifully and I was assured the new cord was properly placed. — Ellen Murphrey

CHIPPED CHIPS

Dear Heloise: When you make chocolate chip cookies for the youngsters and find yourself using less chips because of the high price, cut the chocolate chips with a knife or food chopper.

This way, it seems like there are more chocolate chips in the cookies. It also helps distribute them more evenly in the cookies. — Mrs. Robert Ergenbright

HEARTS 'N' FLOWERS

Dear Heloise: A fresh flower makes an excellent birthday card. The cost is nearly equal to a card, and the joy is unsurpassed. — Vi Parker

+ + +

Share a thoughtful notion by sending it to Heloise. P.O. Box 32000, San Antonio, Tx. 78216. She can't reply to your letter personally but she'll pass along the nicest ideas received by printing them in her column.

Aspirin may stop gallstones from forming

By JOANN RODGERS
Science Writer
Hearst Feature Service

SAN FRANCISCO — Ordinary aspirin has stopped the formation of cholesterol gallstones in experiments with animals that develop the stones much the way humans do.

Surgeons at the University of California, Los Angeles, say their investigation is a first step toward prevention of a disorder that strikes 10 percent of the American adult population, particularly the obese and those with bowel disease.

An estimated 250,000 people undergo surgical removal of the gallbladder to stop the severe pain that often accompanies movement of the stones.

Dr. Larry DenBesten, chief of gastrointestinal surgery at UCLA, and his team, previously found that a slowdown in the emptying of bile from the gallbladder, due to a build-up of mucus was a key link in gallstone formation.

Cholesterol gallstones, the most common type, are believed to form when bile acids from the liver combine with cholesterol.

"We thought that if we could break that mucus link and let the gallbladder empty, it would be an effective way to prevent gallstones from forming," DenBesten told the American College of Surgeons here Monday.

Salicylate, the main ingredient in aspirin, was a likely candidate for the job, the surgeon said, because it counteracts chemicals, called prostaglandins, that slow down gallbladder activity.

Together with Drs. Stephen Kuchenbecker, Jeffrey Doty and Henry Pitt, DenBesten fed high cholersterol, stone-forming diets to 12 male prairie dogs an gave half the animals huge daily doses of an aspirin product — much larger than humans could safely take.

Tests showed that gallbladder action in the non-aspirin group was much lower than normal and a later look at the gallbladders revealed that none of the aspirin-taking animals developed stones. Four of the six other animals had developed them.

Prairie dogs are a perfect model for human gallstone disease, said DenBesten, who discovered their susceptibility to the disease in the 1960's.

A colony of the animals in an Iowa park were dying. As a favor to the colony's donors, he autopsied them and found death due to gallbladder disease.

"It didn't take a genius to figure out that these prairie animals were suddenly being fed buttered popcorn and other cholesterol-rich foods by the park patrons. Later studies revealed they form stones along lines very similar to that in humans," DenBesten noted.

Before their work can be applied to humans, the surgeons warned, drugs must be found that are safer than the huge doses of aspirin they used on their test animals. There are several aspirin-like agents currently being tested.

In addition, plans are underway to study patients with heart disease and arthritis, who take large amounts of aspirin to see if they have less gallstone disease than is usual in the American population.

West Germany, Egypt sign nuclear research pact

BONN, West Germany (AP) — West German and Egyptian officials signed a treaty Monday on cooperative research and development of nuclear energy, officials said.

The agreement opens the way for German participation in the construction of two nuclear power plants with a capacity of around 2,000 megawatts, said a spokesman for West German Minister of Research Adreas von Buelow.

Buelow signed the pact with Egypt's minister for electricity and energy, Mohmed Maher Abaza, the spokesman said.

He said Egypt has signed similar agreements on the peaceful uses of nuclear energy with France and the United States.

Renovation of Sam Houston's Huntsville home is at a standstill

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Regents of the Texas State University System must get a permit from the Texas Antiquities Comittee before completing renovation work on the Sam Houston home in Huntsville, the attorney general said Monday.

The board of regents let a contract in 1980 for extensive renovation of the historic home. Then in 1981 the Texas Antiquities Commitee designated the home a "landmark," by authority of a bill passed by the 1981 Legislature.

Under terms of the legislative measure a "landmark" may not be altered, salvaged or excavated without a permit from the Texas Antiquities Committee.

Moving day is at hand for the House of Arts & Crafts. Formerly located in the Imperial Shopping Center, the popular headquarters for Permian Basin craftsmen,opens its new doors one block west on Wadley in La Villita next week.

House of Arts and Crafts moves

The House of Arts & Crafts is relocating to La Villita Shopping Center this week. La Villita is in the 3300 block of Wadley just west of Garfield and directly across from the Graves Station Post Office.

Owners Bill and Marlene Juren are adding a permanent work shop area to the House of Arts & Crafts. Classes in stained glass, tole painting, cake decorating, the making and arranging of silk flowers, and many other subjects of interest to the hobbyist will be offered. Manager Eleanor Robertson suggests you check with her after moving day to obtain a schedule of classes.

The new shop is stocking a more comolete line of stained glass supplies. There is also an increased inventory of picture frames.

The greatest expansion at House of Arts & Crafts comes in the area of general office supplies. In addition to drafting supplies and equipment, the store carries the nitty gritty of everyday office life — staples, paper clips, binders, pads, folders, etc. All are now available at the House of Arts & Crafts.

Of course, there continues to be a complete selection of painting and calligraphy goods, as well as materials for macrame, stained glass, silk flowers, latch hook rugs, Christmas decorations of all kinds, and wooden items. Craft books on all subjects are also available.

Remember the new House of Arts & Crafts, "The Permian Basin's most complete art, craft and office supply. Make yourself at home at our house"...in La Villita

Former Army Capty. Lyle T. Bouck Jr. of St. Louis and Col. Don Phillips, Commander of Troops (Old Guard) review an honor guard Monday at Fort Meyer, Va., during a medal awards ceremnoy for 18 World War II soldiers for their courageous last ditch effort during the Battle of the Bulge in 1944. Bouck was the group's platoon leader.

Defendant in milk case testifies in court

BROWNSVILLE, Texas (AP) — At least one defendant in the Mission school milk case, an assistant superintendent, will testify in the federal court trial.

Robert Harold Wicks will take the stand, defense lawyer Frank Maloney said Monday as the trial opened its second week.

Wicks and three others are charged with conspiring to falsify milk delivery invoices and to wrongly claim federal reimbursement for $486,000 in school lunch funds from 1975 to 1980.

U.S. District Judge James DeAnda acquitted a fifth defendant, former school truck driver Edelmiro Garcia, after prosecutors finished presenting evidence. DeAnda said the government failed to present enough evidence for the jury to convict Garcia.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Eddie Medrano told DeAnda that the FBI agent who interviewed Garcia had lost his notes of the conversation.

"Well, that's too bad," the judge said. Turning to Garcia, he said, "This ordeal is over for you."

The judge also dismissed a 12-count indictment accusing Wicks and food services director Michael McCarthy of claiming too much reimbursement for meals served during a summer program.

None of the defendants are charged with pocketing any government funds. Others on trial are former food services secretary Jane Alice Cook and head cook supervisor Gerardo Cortez. Two original trial defendants have pleaded guilty outside the presence of the jury.

U.S. Army unit finally awarded for WWII

WASHINGTON (AP) — After a 15-year effort by its commanding officer, a small band of soldiers that faced a desperate attack by German troops in World War II's Battle of the Bulge is now one of the nation's most decorated Army units.

In the closing days of the war in Europe, the reconnaisance and intelligence platoon of the 394th Infantry Regiment, 99th Infantry Division, was ordered to hold at all costs when the Germans launched their last desperate attack Dec. 16, 1944.

The platoon held out for 18 hours against three waves of German attackers at Lanzerath, Belgium. The Americans finally ran out of ammunition and were taken prisoner.

For their actions, 18 members of the platoon were decorated Monday by Army Secretary John O. Marsh Jr.

Dr. Lyle J. Bouck Jr., of St. Louis, who was commander of the platoon during the attack, learned in 1966 that no one in the unit had been decorated. Because of his efforts, Rep. Richard J. Ottinger, D-N.Y., sponsored legislation lifting the time limit on such awards and before leaving office President Carter awarded the platoon a unit citation.

Bouck was the first honored in colorful cermemonies at nearby Fort Myer, Va., receiving the Distinguished Service Cross, the nation's second highest decoration for heroism in combat.

Also receiving the DSC were William L. Slape of Shreveport, La., and Risto Milosevich of El Toro, Calif. William James of Port Chester, N.Y., was awarded the DSC posthumously.

Other members of the platoon were awarded Silver Star medals and Bronze Stars with a 'V' for valor.

They shouldn't be forgotten

By LAWRENCE L. KNUTSON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ralph Rundquist cannot forget.

It was April 29, 1945, that Rundquist, then a radioman with Company LL of the 222nd Infantry, helped liberate the German death camp at Dachau.

"We were taken aback," he says. "The people who came in after us didn't have as much experience and they were bawling and crying. Suddenly we all understood what we had been fighting for."

Rundquist, who has twice taken his family to Dachau, was standing in a State Department lobby Monday in the midst of a throng of people, all with memories of the death camps, all with a message: The Holocaust was real. It shouldn't be forgotten.

They are attending the first international conference to honor members of the allied armies who liberated the concentration camps in Germany, France, Austria, Czechoslovakia, Yugoslavia, Poland and Latvia in the spring of 1945.

"We were all hardened troops and when we went into Dachau it was completely unexpected," said Rundquist, a middle-aged banker from Assaria, Kan.

"There were 50 boxcars that had recently brought prisoners to Dachau," Rundquist said. "Of all those people there was only one alive.

"But those that were alive were in pretty good spirits," he said. "One of them yelled that he wanted spearmint gum. We were the first people to get there. We didnt have any supplies. The only thing we could do is show them that they were free."

He stepped away and then came back with another memory.

'When we entered Dachau, the crematories were still operating. I saw piles of bodies as high as this ceiling. So they kept the crematories going. They kept this going night and day. The bodies that they were cremating were just skin and bones.

"It was certainly true," Rundquist said. "Some people say there was no Holocaust. They are wrong."

Francis Arzt of Baltimore, Md., then "a buck private" with the 59th Evacuation Hospital, arrived at Dachau three days after Rundquist.

A few years ago, he said, his daughter told him that many of her college friends didn't believe there was a Holocaust.

"I had forgoten about all of this for 30 years," he said. "But I dug out these old photographs to show them it did happen. I was glad I had forgotten. I was sorry it came up.

The photographs, "taken by my friend in the X-ray unit," show emaciated prisoners, piles of bodies, a view from a guard tower, the open doors of the ovens.

"They can't say this was some made-up Hollywood production," Arzt said.

His wife points to a photograph taken in the camp crematorium and says, "See, they are still burning."

"We had a very difficult problem because the survivors couldn't eat, they couldn't eat solid food," Arzt said. "We were trying to feed them. The hardest thing was getting some food into them without killing them."

Helen Luksenberg, of Silver Spring, Md., survived a camp in Poland, a tributary of Auschwitz.

She tells her story in short stacato sentences:

"I was 13 years old (living in a small town in Poland) when the war broke out.

"They put us in ghettoes. They arrested my father. They made us wear the yellow star arm band, They were shooting Jews on the street.

"My father was liquidated. I was in a concentration camp for three years. I was liberated by the Russians. I wanted to come back to Poland. Three of us were given transportation in a Russian truck. It was so painful. Every stone reminded me of some thing."

Mrs. Luksenberg and her husband, also a survivor of the camps, emigrated to the United States in 1947.

"People say there was no Holocaust," she said. "It isn't true. Where is all my family. Where is everybody?"

"It has to be remembered," she said. "Things like that can happen again. I feel it is my duty and responsibility to talk to people because in 20 years my generation will be gone and there will be no one to tell the young people what happened."

Irani prime minister nominee is former newspaper editor

By SHEHEREZADE FARAMARZI
Associated Press Writer

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Iran's President Ali Khamenei today nominated Foreign Minister Mir Hossein Musavi for prime minister and asked legislators to give him a vote of confidence, a Parliament spokesman said.

The spokesman, who requested anonymity, told The Associated Press in Beirut by telephone from Tehran that Musavi's nomination was read at an open Parliament session by Speaker Ali-Akbar Hashemi Rafsanjani, but Khamenei and Musavi were not present. The vote could come Thursday, the spokesman said.

Musavi, 35, is a French-educated, high-ranking member of Khamenei's clergy-led Islamic Republican Party and former editor of the party newspaper Jomhouri Islami. He was appointed foreign minister Aug. 15.

Although a layman and engineer, Musavi is considered among the staunchest supporters of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's fundamentalist Moslem regime. If appointed, he would be the youngest prime minister to serve since the 1979 revolution that ousted the late Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi.

Musavi is Khamenei's second choice. The first, U.S.-trained pediatrician Ali-Akbar Velayati, was rejected by Parliament last Thursday.

Khamenei won the presidency by a 95 percent vote Oct. 2, replacing Mohammad Ali Rajai, who was killed Aug. 30 along with Prime Minister Javad Bahonar in a bombing blamed on the Mujahedeen Khalq, largest of the leftist insurgent groups fighting the Khomeini regime.

More than 1,400 Khomeini opponents have been executed since liberal ex-President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr was ousted June 22. During the same period, urban guerrillas have assassinated about 1,000 prominent officials and religious figures.

Musavi served as foreign minister under Rajai and Bahonar.

While studying engineering in France in 1976, he founded the Iranian Moslem Movement and later joined Khomeini's campaign-in-exile in France against the shah. After the revolution, he was in the development office in rebellious Kurdistan province in the northwest and then managed the state steelworks in Ahvaz, capital of the southwest oil province of Khuzestan.

As foreign minister he attended the U.N. General Assembly in New York early this month. In a policy speech there, he called for abolition of the veto held by the United States and the other four permanent members of U.N. Security Council and for the transfer of U.N. headquarters to a Third World nation.

French National Assembly votes to nationalize

PARIS (AP) — The Socialist-dominated National Assembly, after 118 hours of debate in 13 days, passed President Francois Mitterrand's nationalization bill providing for state control of five industrial groups, 36 banks and two other financial institutions.

The final vote late Monday was 332-154. The bill now goes before the Senate, a largely consultative body which can amend but has no power to reject legislation.

The bill would nationalize the Rhone-Poulenc chemical group, Pechiney-Ugine-Kuhlmann, an aluminum manufacturer, the electronic firms Thomson-Brandt and Compagnie Generale d'Electricite, and Saint-Gobain-Pont-a-Mousson, a diversified conglomerate.

The financial institutions are Compagnie Financiere de l'Indochine et de Suez, known as Indosuez, and Paribas.

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Wednesday, October 28

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Costume designer Edith Head, who has won more Academy Awards than anyone besides the late Walt Disney, celebrates her birthday today. Also born on this date: Dr. Jonas Salk, author Evelyn Waugh and runner Jim Beatty. Financial affairs require the utmost care, but play your cards right and you will be making many happy trips to the bank! The outlook for business shows marked improvement. Avoid taking needless risks. Enjoy the races without trying to get rich at the betting window. You now recognize some employment opportunities that you previously overlooked. The next few months are especially good for developing, strengthening romantic ties.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You err if you put mate on a pedestal. See loved one in realistic light and you will both be happier. You can still expect great things of each other.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): An important principle needs defending and you make the right decision. Some uncertainties conveyed in a letter can be corrected in a phone call.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You should be able to attain your desires by working a bit harder. Look ahead; the odds are definitely turning in your favor. You could be in for a happy romantic surprise.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Concentrate on projects you can handle alone. An older relative may need some advice. Look for ways to reduce household expenses. You can relax and unwind tonight.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): A good day for conducting business in faraway places. Influential person may be hard to please. Be prepared for last-minute changes. Complete old projects before embarking on new ones.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A former associate could approach you about forming a new business or partnership. Do not forget a special anniversary or birthday. Others may blame you for late delivery of goods.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Involvement in a romantic triangle could cause embarrassment. Keep your personal and professional life separate. Neighbor's pet may be a nuisance. A quiet talk could iron things out.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Do not reach any conclusions until all the facts are known. Time is on your side. Creative and artistic endeavors progress smoothly. Do not use your resources to back risky financial schemes.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): An upsurge in energy is indicated. You should be able to acquire some assistance that will reduce financial worries. Keep a close eye on spending.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You can make up the ground that you recently lost by getting an early start today. A promise of financial support arrives from an unexpected source. Romance becomes more meaningful.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb.18): If you feel that the pace is getting to be too much for you, slow down! Do not be lured into making risky investments. You need security for your savings.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You find it easier to communicate with your coworkers now. Good news could arrive by mail or phone. Express your feelings openly and romance will become more rewarding.

The bidding:

Opening lead: Jack of ♡.

It is not easy to see where declarer can develop an extra chance at his three no trump contract. But there was one, and by unearthing it, South landed a game that seemed destined for defeat.

The auction was straightforward. South's jump to two no trump showed 19-20 points, and North's five-card suit and good intermediates were just enough to sway him to raise to game.

West led the jack of hearts, and when dummy came down declarer could count four tricks in the major suits, plus the ace of clubs. Therefore, he had to develop four more in the minor suits to make his contract. That would be a simple matter if the club finesse succeeded. But what if it failed?

In that case, the defenders would knock out the remaining heart stopper before declarer could establish a diamond for his ninth trick. Whichever defender won the ace of diamonds would then be able to continue hearts, enabling the defenders to cash their tricks to defeat the contract.

Declarer, therefore, decided to play on diamonds first. However, after winning the first heart trick it would not have done to lead a diamond from the closed hand. East would win and force out the ace of hearts, and declarer would still have to concede a club trick and with it the contract.

Declarer found the superior play of crossing to the king of spades and leading a low diamond from the table. East perforce rose with the ace, so declarer was able to bring in the diamond suit, with the help of a marked finesse, after winning the ace of hearts.

Note that, had East played low and had the king of diamonds won the trick, declarer would abandon diamonds and play on clubs – four club tricks would then be enough. And if the king of diamonds lost to the ace, declarer would have the queen as an entry to the table to take the club finesse for his contract.

Rubber bridge clubs throughout the country use the four-deal bridge format. Do they know something you don't? Charles Goren's "Four-Deal Bridge" will teach you the strategies and tactics of this fast-paced action game that provides the cure for unending rubbers. The drillsite is 12,000 feet southeast of 3,804-foot Swastika production in the LaPaloma field.

WARD EXTENDERS
O.H. Berry, Midland, will drill eight extenders to the current eight-well Byrd field in Ward County, approximately seven miles northwest of Royalty.

All of the projects are located in section 33, block 34, H&TC survey.

The No. 1A Pearce "A" is located 860 feet from the southeast, and 1,780 feet from the southwest line of the section.

The Byrd field produces at an average depth of 2,700 feet.

Discoveries finaled

WARD DISCOVERY
Leede Oil & Gas Inc., Midland, has completed its No. 1 University "30" as a Wolfcamp discovery, eight miles northwest of Pyote.

The well flowed seven barrels of 43.8 gravity oil, and 11 barrels of water through an unreported size choke and perforations between 10,866 feet and 11,266 feet, which had been acidized with 3,000 gallons and fractured with 24,000 gallons and 18,000 pounds. Gas to oil ratio is 2,143 to 1.

The total depth is 17,100 feet, with 9 5/8 inch casing set at 11,783 feet and plugged back to 11,266 feet.

The wellsite is in section 20, block 18, University Lands survey.

ROOSEVELT FIND
Energy Reserves Group, Inc., has completed an excellent gas producer in the Cisco Algal Trend of Roosevelt County, N.M.

The No. 1 Crume was tested at a rated of 3,331,000 cubic feet of gas per day through a 16/64 inch choke with a flowing tubing pressure of 1,715 pounds per square inch from perforations between 7,542 and 7,567 feet in the Cisco formation.

Calculated absolute open flow potential was 26,956,000 cubic feet of gas per day.

The No. 1 Crume is an offset to the No. 1 Miller, a new pool discovery completed in April, 1981, with a calculated absolute open flow potential of 12,700,000 cubic feet of gas per day from the same formation.

Energy Resereves Group has a 100 percent working interest in the No. 1 Crume and a 96.875 percent working interest in the No. 1 Miller.

Records placed off-limits because of oil boom

By JACK KEEVER
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The recent Texas oil boom has forced the Railroad Commission to revise a generous but risky policy of allowing the industry and others to check out original documents from commission files for business.

The demand for the valuable documents — some possibly leading to oil and gas fortunes — has become so great that on Nov. 1 the commission will start to phase in a program to prohibit the removal of original records.

"People are coming in here by the tons," said Railroad Commissioner Mack Wallace.

Applications for permits to drill, known as W-1s, are most in demand and will be the first original documents placed off-limits.

Instead of allowing people to check out drilling permits and return them the same day, the commission will offer a subscription service to copies of W-1s that would cost as much as $12,624 a year.

"New permits are an indication of where people are willing to gamble their money ...," said David Garlick, assistant director of planning and administration. "It's the first indication there may be oil somewhere near.

"Land men are interested (in drilling permits) in terms of acquiring leases, industry people are interested in terms of are they falling behind in their competitive posture, and landowners are interested in it to see where the rig's going in."

As many as 50,000 drilling permits could be filed this year — "that's up dramatically," Garlick said.

"In places like Abilene, for example, you can almost drill an oil well with a water well rig," he said.

For years only three consulting firms removed papers for copying, Garlick said in an interview, but "with the recent boom just the demand for our information from the public has skyrocketed to the point now that we have over 60 people on our list to check out original documents."

Consultants claim private individuals who come in to check on their "mom and pop" wells have clogged the process, often knowing nothing more about the location of a well than "it's right over there behind a barn."

"What do you want?" the commission staff might ask.

"I want everything," often is the reply.

Garlick says, "The Austin Chalk formation is close by, and quite a few from the Giddings area come in and want to see their well on a map, or want to see their lease or want to see their production figures and, of course, they are as entitled to it as anybody else."

Garlick said some consultants have been so frantic to get file folders that they have pulled them out of the hands of commission employees. He recalled one folder being returned so late that it was merely shoved under the door after the records office had closed.

As he stated in a Sept. 25 letter, "old mechanisms for distributing this information have been stressed to the point of collapse," and these methods in some cases "inadvertently grant a competitive advantage to one firm over another."

He also mentioned what gives the commission nightmares — the possibility of losing records out of the office in fires, car accidents or by theft.

Asked if the old method had resulted in the loss of documents, Garlick said, "I've never come across a concrete situation ..." He added, however, consultants had told of checking out a record and finding something missing when they rechecked it.

"Nobody has run off with anything," insists Wallace. "There's no flim-flam or whim-wham."

Meeting with consultants, Garlick stated, "If you say you must have an original document, I'm afraid in the future the answer will have to be no."

"It's a reasonable solution based on the means we have to correct the problem," said Wallace.

Steelers slam door on Houston Oilers again

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The Pittsburgh Steelers shut down Earl Campbell, turned back a fourth-quarter rally and beat the Houston Oilers 26-13 Monday night to regain a share of the lead in pro football's tightest division race.

"We went after them. We were attacking," said Steeler quarterback Terry Bradshaw, who drilled a tie-breaking, six-yard touchdown pass to John Stallworth with 3:41 left in a National Football League game played in a steady drizzle.

"NEEDLESS TO say, this win is a big one for our football team," rain-soaked Coach Chuck Noll said after the 5-3 Steelers moved back into a tie with Cincinnati in the American Conference Central Division.

The Steelers, pounded 34-7 the week before in Cincinnati, played minus injured defensive starters Joe Greene, L.C. Greenwood and Don Shell. But they limited Campbell to 56 yards on 23 carries, and knocked loose a pair of costly fumbles by the Houston fullback in Pittsburgh territory.

Despite the loss, the 4-4 Oilers are tied for second place with Cleveland in the AFC Central, just a game off the pace.

"This team ain't gonna fall apart. We're in the thing," said Houston wide receiver Ken Burrough.

Noll summed up the Steelers' situation: "We're halfway through and I think we've met the challenge. We begin the second half of the season in what I think is a good frame of mind."

TRAILING 13-10 midway in the final quarter, the Oilers used a 31-yard fake-punt pass from Cliff Parsley to Adger Armstrong to keep alive a drive that ended with Toni Fritsch's 44-yard field goal with 5:53 to play.

Earlier in the fourth quarter, Oiler quarterback Ken Stabler combined with tight end Dave Casper on a 52-yard touchdown pass play. Casper caught the pass at the Pittsburgh 35 and broke tackles by Jack Ham and Jack Lambert on his way to the end zone to cut the Pittsburgh lead to 13-10.

After Fritsch's game-tying field goal, Steeler fullback Franco Harris broke loose on a 35-yard run, and an out-of-bounds by Oiler linebacker Ted Washington drew a 15-yard penalty that moved Pittsburgh to the Houston 19.

With 3:59 remaining, Bradshaw threw an apparent 14-yard touchdown pass to Jim Smith, who had caught a 46-yard touchdown bomb in the first period. But the play was nullified by offsetting penalties.

On the next play, Bradshaw scrambled eight yards to the Houston six. He rifled a pass to Stallworth between a pair of defenders on the next play for the winning score.

DAVE TROUT, who kicked two first-half field goals for Pittsburgh, missed the extra point after Stallworth's score.

The Oilers' ensuing drive was halted by a pass interception by Steeler safety Ron Johnson, who returned the ball eight yards to the visitor's 12-yard line. Four plays later, Franco Harris plunged one yard for a touchdown with two minutes to play for the Steelers' final score.

On the opening drive of the game, the Steelers marched from their own 34-yard line to the Houston 2, where they had first and goal. But an incomplete pass and two runs by Frank Pollard netted no yards and the Steelers settled for a 19-yard field goal by Trout.

A series later, Bradshaw lofted a 46-yard bomb to Smith, who beat cotnerback J.C, Wilson for the goal-line grab with 26 seconds left in the first quarter.

In the second period, the Oilers penetrated to the Pittsburgh 33-yard line, but Campbell lost a fumble on a third down play and linebacker Jack Ham recovered.

In the scoreless third quarter, Stabler's 42-yard pass to Mike Renfro gave Houston a first down at the Pittsburgh 38. On the next play, Campbell had intentions of throwing an option pass. But he reversed his field, tried to run, and had the ball knocked from his grasp by lienbacker Robin Cole. Defensive end Bob Kohrs recovered.

Houston Oiler running back Earl Campbell (34) is stacked up by the Steeler defense, Tom Beasley (65), John Goodman (95) and Mel Blount (47) for no gain in the first half of Monday night's game in Pittsburgh.

Bulldog 5-5A title aspirations in ruin

When Midland High lost by a narrow 17-10 margin to Odessa Permian, there were high hopes that the Bulldogs could still manage a strong 5-5A title run with a three-week schedule of Big Spring, Abilene High and San Angelo on the horizon.

THE BULLDOGS added fuel to that thinking with a very impressive victory over Big Spring the following week, but then ended up losing on consecutive weekends to Abilene High, 21-0, and San Angelo, 17-14. As a result, their district hopes lie in the ashes of destruction with no hope left. They can't even record a winning record this season. Those pre-season goals are shattered like so many pieces of brittle clay.

As things turned out, Abilene High is much improved over last year and is still in the thick of the 5-5A race with only one loss to its record. And San Angelo has turned things around from an 0-10 winless season of a year ago to a 4-3 mark this season. In fact, San Angelo has won two straight district games after tough losses to Abilene Cooper and Midland Lee to open the campaign and may now be as good as any team in the district on that old given night theory.

Midland High went into the San Angelo game with one arm tied behind its back. Coach Pat Culpepper decided to limit the duties of tailback Wesley Williams since the senior had missed some practice last week without telling anyone. Williams, the leading rusher in 5-5A heading into the San Angelo game, had only 14 yards rushing on seven carries in the three-point loss. He was probably the difference between losing and winning Friday.

"I THINK we are a better team than San Angelo with Wesley in the game," Culpepper said. "But he missed some practice without telling anyone and we had kids who were hurt and were at practice. I just didn't feel it was fair to the kids to play Wesley a lot. Football players are a lot like women playing bridge. They are all waiting to see what is being said and what's being done.

"Wesley was here Monday morning with a good attitude. I think it was a real waste to hold him out of most of the game against San Angelo, but I had to do what I felt was right for everyone concerned. There is no doubt that the score could have been different with Wesley in the game all the time, but no matter how you look at it, it was still a three-point loss."

TERRY WILLIAMSON

So now the Bulldogs stand at 2-5 on the season with three games left to play. They face Odessa High, Cooper and Lee in order and all on the home field, but it is no secret that the Dogs need something good to happen.

"When the season starts, everyone has basically the same goals and you can find all sorts of books on how to set your goals," Culpepper said. "But I think someone ought to write a book on how to re-set your goals when things turn for the worse. We have three games against good teams left and could have a big say in how the district turns out, but we can't have a winning season now. Still, I think the fact that we have the opportunity to beat some good football teams should be enough."

THE BULLDOGS' best chance of winning in the next three weeks would appear to be Friday against Odessa High. The Bronchos have run onto some hard times themselves and own an 0-3-1 district record. However, OHS is always ready to face a Midland team on even terms and their tie came against powerful Cooper. It may not turn out to be an easy game for the beleagured Bulldogs.

Cooper follows and the Cougars have the material to beat anyone in the state. No one knows how the Cougars will react, however, after losing to Permian last week. Then comes the Rebels of Lee and that contest could be for a possible Reb championship if Lee can upend defending champion Permian Friday. Lee would not be in a mood to lose to anyone on that night if that is the case.

But as bad as things have gone, Midland High has been in every district ball game and the Bulldogs are not the team that has a chance to finish 2-8 on the year. But life in a much improved District 5-5A can be brutal if fanatical efforts are not turned in week after week.

And fanatical is the way the Bulldogs better end the season because it's a long wait until next September.

Dodgers looking to end World Series

Yank hopes riding on arm of Tommy John

NEW YORK (AP) — Looking like a bloodied but unbowed patriot right out of a Revolutionary War portrait, owner George Steinbrenner leads the New York Yankees into tonight's sixth game of the 1981 World Series against the Los Angeles Dodgers.

Will Team Turmoil rally around its battered and bandaged boss, who says he was injured defending their honor in a hotel brawl?

Or will the Dodgers, baseball's huggingest team, nail down their first world championship in 16 years?

STAY TUNED for the next exciting chapter in this thrilling soap opera. It arrives tonight with Tommy John trying to keep the Yankees alive against the Dodgers' Burt Hooton.

Steinbrenner promises tgat his team will rebound in a topsy turvy World Series that has had a little bit of everything so far.

"We'll win it in New York," he stormed after the Yankees had dropped three straight games in California to slip perilously near the brink of elimination.

When two men got into a heated debate with Steinbrenner following Sunday's 2-1 loss, one thing led to another and the Yankee owner emerged with a cast on his hand. It's a good thing he wasn't scheduled to be in the lineup tonight. He'd have trouble holding a bat.

But outfielder Jerry Mumphrey, benched for the fourth and fifth games after getting just two hits in 10 at-bats earlier, will get that chance. Yankee Manager Bob Lemon was expected to restore Mumphrey to the lineup and return him to center field.

The Dodgers hoped to have third baseman Ron Cey in their starting lineup. Cey suffered a slight concussion when he was hit in the helmet by one of Goose Gossage's 94-mile per hour fastballs in the eighth inning Sunday. He was x-rayed and stayed in Los Angeles overnight before flying to New York Monday to join his teammates.

DODGER MANAGER Tommy Lasorda said he would use Cey as long as the third baseman had no dizziness or aftereffects of the beaning.

Hooton and John were the starters in Game Two of the Series won by the Yankees 3-0. Hooton has not worked since and will have five days of rest for tonight's assignment. Jogn volunteered to go to the Yankee bullpen Saturday and ptched two innings in an 8-7 Dodger victory that deadlocked the Series at 2-2.

Los Angeles then used consecutive seventh-inning home runs by Pedro Guerrero and Steve Yeager to beat Ron Guidry Sunday and move within one victory of the world championship.

To nail it down, the Dodgers must break a six-game losing streak in Yankee Stadium. Los Angeles has not won a game in New York since the second game of the 1977 World Series. Hooton was the winning pitcher in that one and the Dodgers hope he can repeat that tonight. If he can, it will complete a perfect turnaround from the 1978 Series when Los Angeles won the first two games at home only to lose the next three in New York and Game Six and the Series in Los Angeles.

Hooton remembers.

"I tell everybody I don't think back to the last Series we played in," he said. "But the same thing happened in '78. We won the first two and the Yankees won the next four. We'll have our work cut out Tuesday."

While the Dodgers battled their Yankee Stadium hex, the Yankees had World Series history working against them.

Since the present 2-3-2 Series scheduling system was adopted in 1924, no team has captured the championship by gaining all four required victories at home and none on the road. If the Yankees are to take the crown, they will become the first club to achieve it that way.

AP Laserphoto

Tommy John

BUT SERIES history also seemed to dictate that this showdown would stretch into a decisive seventh game. Of the 46 times a team has held a 3-2 advantage in games, it has won Game Six and the Series only 17 times.

Still the Dodgers were delighted to win the pivotal fifth game at home. "We go into the Stadium with just one game to win before we know we're champions," said Dusty Baker. "That's a lot different than going in there one game down."

If the Dodgers fail tonight, they would turn to rookie sensation Fernando Valenzuela for Game Seven. Valenzuela struggled to a 5-4 victory in Game Three, triggering the Los Angeles recovery. The Yankees would use Dave Righetti, also a rookie, who was knocked out early in Game Three against Valenzuela.

Both teams had scheduled workouts at the Stadium canceled by rain Monday. And tonight's forecast was bleak with showers predicted. This already is the latest World series in history because of the player strike and the extended playoff schedule. The Dodgers hope it lasts just one more day, but the Yankees aren't ready to end the season quite yet.

Penn State defies jinx; stays on top of grid poll

By The Associated Press

Penn State is only the second team in seven weeks not to fumble away the No.1 spot in The Associated Press college football poll, while intrastate rival Pittsburgh has held on again for the second spot.

The Nittany Lions avoided the upset jinx that had knocked Michigan, Notre Dame, Southern California and Texas off the top perch over a six-week period. Only Southern Cal was voted No.1 for two straight weeks until Penn State did it in the poll released Monday.

Clemson climbed into third place, but its Atlantic Coast Conference rival, North Carolina, slipped from third to ninth after suffering its first defeat of the season, 31-13 to South Carolina.

Penn State defeated West Virginia 30-7 and received 45 first-place votes and 1,259 of a possible 1,280 points from a nationwide panel of sports writers and sportscasters.

Pitt turned back Syracuse 23-10 and received the other 19 first-place ballots and 1,235 points. Last week, Penn State led Pitt 1,283½-1,277½ in total points and 36½-26½ in first-place votes.

Clemson jumped from fourth place to third with 1,105 points following a 17-7 victory over North Carolina State and Southern Cal rose from fifth to fourth with 1,079 points following a 14-7 triumph over Notre Dame.

Georgia's defending national champions moved up from seventh to fifth with 990 points after blanking Kentucky 21-0 and Texas, which skidded from No.1 to No.10 a week ago, skipped back to sixth with 893 points after a 9-7 decision over previously unbeaten Southern Methodist. The loss dropped the Mustangs from eighth to 13th.

Iowa, last week's No.6 team, also fell out of the Top Ten, slipping to 16th after losing to Minnesota 12-10.

Mississippi State went up from ninth to seventh with 796 points for a 21-17 victory over Auburn, Alabama jumped from 11th to eighth with 730 points for a 31-7 triumph over Rutgers, North Carolina was ninth with 630 points and Arizona State cracked the Top Ten for the first time this season, climbing from 17th to 10th thanks to a 62-36 victory over Stanford.

Iowa State, Nebraska, SMU, Washington State, Michigan, Iowa, Florida State, Washington, Oklahoma and Arkansas make up the Second Ten.

Last week, it was Alabama, Arkansas, Brigham Young, Iowa State, Nebraska, Washington State, Arizona State, Michigan, Missouri and Florida State.

Brigham Young fell out of the Top Twenty after losing to Wyoming 33-20 and Missouri dropped out following its second consecutive loss, a 6-0 setback at the hands of Nebraska.

Washington defeated Texas Tech 14-7 and returned to the rankings after a three-week absence, while Oklahoma made it back after a two-week lapse following a 42-3 trouncing of Oregon State.

Arkansas fell from 12th to 20th as it lost 20-17 to Houston.

Dallas Cowboys rookie corner back Everson Walls (24) heads up field with one of his two pass interceptions which helped the Cowboys defeat the Miami Dolphins 28-27 in Texas Stadium Sunday. Walls broke Mel Renfro's Cowboys record for interceptions in a season by a rookie and now leads the NFL with a total of eight.

Dallas' Walls is great or terrible

DALLAS (AP) — Everson Walls keeps breaking even.

The rookie Dallas cornerback leads the National Football League in being burned and returning the favor with interceptions.

He was victimized for over 200 yards, including a 69-yard touchdown pass by Miami quarterback David Woodley Sunday.

Then he returned the favor with two interceptions, including one in the last minute at the Dallas 4-yard line which preserved the Cowboys' 28-27 National Football League victory.

Walls, a free agent from Grambling, leads the NFL with eight interceptions.

"It was an up-and-down day just like my whole season has been," said Walls, who broke Mel Renfro's club rookie record of seven interceptions.

"I got beat at least five times out there," said Walls. "I stopped counting after that"

Dallas Coach Tom Landry said, "Walls usually breaks even — the ones they catch, the ones he catches ... We're never sure what's going to happen with our young secondary ... but as long as they make big plays you can live with them until they get enough experience."

Strong safety Charlie Waters, an 11-year veteran, has found Walls a fascinating player to watch.

"I am amazed with him," Waters said. "You live and die with him."

Dallas quarterback Danny White threw two touchdown passes in 31 seconds late in the fourth quarter to produce a "Roger Staubach" style victory for the Cowboys.

The victory gave Dallas a 6-2 record over the first half of the season and positioned it a game behind National Conference Eastern Division leader Philadelphia. The two teams meet Sunday in Philadelphia.

Miami dropped to 5-2-1, a half game ahead of Buffalo in the American Conference East.

"I've always watched the Cowboys come back like that," said Walls of suburban Richardson. "I feel so good to be part of it ... it's like watching yourself on TV."

Hearing set

LOS ANGELES (AP) — U.S. District Judge Harry Pregerson, still trying for an out-of-court settlement of the anti-trust suit of the Oakland Raiders and the National Football League, has set a Nov. 6 date for another so-called status meeting.

The first anti-trust trial of the Raiders and Los Angeles Coliseum against the NFL ended in an 8-2 mistrial last Aug. 12 with eight of the 10 jurors ruling the Raiders could move from Oakland to the Los Angeles Coliseum. A unanimous vote was required for the verdict to stand.

Top ranked teams in N.M. find perch rough

A beer commercial currently making the rounds on television concludes with a former major leaguer delivering the punch line, "I knew this was a bad idea."

Coaches of some of the state's best high school football teams may be starting to get similar feelings about seeing their teams ranked atop the weekly Associated Press polls.

For the third straight week, the top-ranked team in Class AAA was upset, when Socorro pinned an 18-7 defeat on Albuquerque St. Pius last week. Thus, the Sartans joined Artesia and Ruidoso as former No. 1 ranked teams that lost the same week they were ranked at the top of the AP poll.

Things aren't much better for Class AAAA teams.

Albuquerque Highland was ranked No. 1 for two straight weeks, but was upset by Alamogordo, 27-22, last week. Earlier this month Clovis met a similar fate while holding the top ranking, and the Wildcats haven't recovered yet, having lost three straight games.

All of which makes for a new set of leading characters in this week's poll released Monday.

In Class AAA, the Portales Rams moved from No. 3 last week into the No. 1 spot this week. The Rams beat No. 2 Artesia, 26-0, and coupled with St. Pius' loss, had no trouble moving into the No. 1 spot.

"I just hope the trend doesn't continue," said Portales Coach Tommy Gruber, referring to the ranked now, lose later syndrome. "I hope being ranked No. 1 isn't a bad luck charm."

Gruber said while he believes the Rams deserve to be ranked first, it will do little to help his team's chances earn a playoff berth from District 4AAA.

"We are more concerned with being there at the end of the year, rather than right now," Gruber said. "It's just means we'll have to work harder."

Portales captured 18 of 19 first place votes cast by sports writers and sportscasters around the state for a total of 180 points. St. Pius dropped to second wih one first place vote and 142 points with Tularosa climbing to third with 141 total points.

In Class AAAA, streaking Hobbs also leaped into the No. 1 spot on the strength of the Eagles' 28-14 win over Carlsbad last week and Highland's loss to Alamogordo.

Hobbs, ranked third a week ago, went to the top spot for the first time this year by picking up 18 first place votes and a total of 198 points.

Carlsbad retained the No. 2 spot, edging out Gallup, which climbed two places and picked up two first place votes. The Bengals are the only unbeaten AAAA team left. Roswell jumped four places to No. 4 while Highland dropped all the way to fifth.

Things remained unchanged in the smaller schools' polls. Moriarty, 8-0, again was the unanimous choice in AA, while Texico, 7-0, edged Reserve, 8-0, for the top ranking in Class A.

Andrews takes control in 2-AAAA

By MIKE CRUVER
Sports Writer

The District 2-AAAA king is still alive — barely. Andrews took advantage of some early Monahans' errors to put 21 quick points on the board then the defending champions hung on to post a 21-14 win over the Lobos in Monahans Friday night.

Andrews picked off two Monte McGuire passes and recovered a fumble and also took advantage of a roughing-the-kicker penalty to record its eighth straight win of the year, 6-0 in loop play. Monahans falls to 6-1, 5-1 in league warfare.

Mustang quarterback Keith Brooks had another big evening. He rushed for 106 yards on 20 carries and scored on a nifty 14-yard run. Brooks attempted only two passes but completed both for 92 yards and each aerial went for six points. He threw a 62-yard scoring strike to Lloyd Cornejo and a 30-yarder to Scott Sears to take a 21-0 lead into the lockerroom at half.

The Lobos came back in the second half behind the passing of Monte McGuire and the running of Ricky Boysaw. McGuire finished the evening with 14 of 28 for 168 yards while Boysaw rushed for 92 yards on 20 tries.

McGuire scored Monahans' touchdowns on 2 and 1-yard runs.

Stanton's football team is the Rodney Dangerfield of District 5-AA — it just can't get any respect.

Through the late '70s Stanton came up with several excellent football teams but could never defeat Seagraves. Now the Buffs have beaten the Eagles the last two years but have found a new hurdle they can't get over.

Plains is Stanton's latest pain in the neck. Last year, the Buffs splipped by Seagraves but played Plains to a scoreless tie and the Cowboys won the district crown and advanced to the state playoffs on the strength of one more first down.

Friday night Plains pounced on its only opportunity of the game to score a 7-3 win over the frustrated Buffs to become the team to beat in the district race.

Plains is now 7-0 for the year and 3-0 in the league while Stanton falls to 5-3 and 3-1.

Plains' big break came when they recovered a fumble at its own 48 iwth 6:51 left in the game and less than two minutes after Scott Church's 32-yard field goal put Stanton ahead 3-0.

It was only the second time the Cowboys had started outside their own 26. And they were quick to take advantage as they put together a 52-yard drive with quarterback James McElroy turning the left end on a third and goal from the five for the touchdown with 3:28 left. Martin Huerta added the PAT.

Stanton watched opportunity after opportunity slip away. Tracy Spinks recovered a Plains funble at the Cowboys 38 on the game's first series but a missed field goal ruined that possession. On the following series, end Marizo Iaquaniello pounded on a fumble also on the Cowboy 38 but the Buffs were forced to punt.

In the second half, McElroy picked off a Wally Hazelwood pass at the five and linebacker Roger Bagwell stole another Buff near the goal line to blunt Stanton scoring threats.

Stanton's three points came after Spinks recovered a fumbled at the Plains 18 and Church nailed the field goal — one out of three for the evening.

Tailback Kevin Newman was Stanton's leading rusher with 91 yards on 31 carries.

Reagan County scored in the last 27 seconds Friday night to nip Wall 13-7 to run their Distirct 9-AA record to 2-1, 5-2 overall while Wall is 2-5-1 and 1-3.

With only 27 second left in the game, Wall's John Sefcik went back to punt from his own 29 on a fourth and one. The ball was bobbled and Sefcik's desperation punt went into the hands of Brad Armstrong who returned the punt 18 yards for the touchdown to give the Owls the win.

Lamesa's long football season just keeps getting longer and longer. Firday night San Angelo Lake View scored in the second and final periods for a 16-0 District 2-AAAA win over the Golden Tornadoes.

Lake View (5-2, 4-1) held the Tors (0-8, 0-6) to 64 yards rushing and 32 yards passing. The Chiefs grounded out 259 yards on the ground and added 81 yards through the air ways.

Homer Lopez tallied twice on the ground and Larry Dickerson ran for a score and caught an 18-yard scoring strike from Kyle Longley to pace Greenwood to a 42-0 thrashing of Balmorhea Friday night in a District 6-A encounter.

The victory keeps the Rangers right on the heels of Wink in the league race. Greenwood has shut out all four district opponents, has a 6-1 record and owns a six-game winning streak. In their seven games, the Rangers have outscored their foes 197-55.

In another District 6-A battle, Rankin ran its season record to 5-1-1 overall and 3-1 in loop play as the Red Devils pounded Sanderson 35-6.

Dennis Black was the offensive hero as he rushed for 155 yards on 17 carries and two touchdowns plus throwing a 31-yard scoring strike to Terry Turner and catching a 39-yard scoring pass from Bo Rose. Turner enjoyed a fine night too as he recorded two six-pointers on the ground while rushing for 112 yards on 15 attempts.

Crane's latest junket against a highly-regarded foe resulted in the Golden Bird's seventh straight loss. Friday night it was state-ranked Alpine (6-1) who administered a 48-0 thumping.

This was the final non-district game for both Alpine and Crane.

Midland Christian's season record fell to 4-3 following a 38-28 defeat at the hands of Brooks Smith Friday night at Blackwell.

McCamey (5-1-1) took the night before opening the District 6-AA race this weekend.

McEnroe win in net tourney

TOKYO (AP) — Top-seeded John McEnroe beat fellow American John Sadri 6-2, 6-22 and No. 3 Jose Luis Clerc of Argentina eliminated American Paul McNamee 6-2, 6-4 Tuesday night and advanced to the second round of the $300,000 Seiko Super Tennis Classic.

The 23-year-old McEnroe scored five aces in the first set and six more in the second in the match at Yoyogi, site of the 1964 Tokyo Olympics.

McEnore will meet Tsuyoshi Fukui, Japan's No. 1 singles player, in the second round Thursday. Fukui eliminated Shozo Shiraishi 6-4, 6-2 in the first match of the day.

Earlier Tuesday, two seeded players, who were gunning for the first prize money of $55,000 dollars, were beaten.

In an American matchup, No. 4 seed Eliot Tetlscher was upset by Bruce Manson 3-6, 3-6, while No. 7 Balazs Taroczy of Hungary, was eliminated by Heinz Gunhardt of Switzerland 6-4, 3-6, 4-6. Last Sunday, Taroczy won the Japan-Asian singles title by defeating Teltscher in the final.

Sweden's Bjorn Borg, No. 2 seed in the 32-man Seiko tournament, will play Ramesh Krishnan of India in a first-round match Wednesday.

In other first round matches, Chris Lewis of the United States beat countryman Terry Moor 6-4, 7-5; American Bill Scanlon beat Ricardo Cano of Argentina, 6-1, 6-4; Mark Edmondson, United States beat Tom Gullikson, United States, 6-3, 6-3; Peter Rennert, United States, defeated Rod Frawley, Australia, 4-6, 6-3, 6-4; No. 6 Wjotek Fibak, Poland, ousted Mel Purcell, United States, 7-6, 3-6, 6-3, and Vincent Van Patten, United States, beat John Fitzgerald 6-2, 6-4.

Lee, MHS try for victories

Midland High has meet Abilene Cooper twice on volleyball courts and has yet to win a game against the Cougars. Tonight the Bulldogs will get their final chance of 1981 when they host the Cougars in a District 5-5A volleyball game at the MHS gym.

MHS coach Linda Jolly has her Purple Pack playing good volleyball in the second half of the district race. The Bulldogs stand 15-11 overall and 3-2 in league play heading into tonight's clash.

Across town, the Lee Rebels are on the road to Abilene to face the Abilene High Eagles in a key game for the Rebs. Lee, 19-10, 4-1, still has an outside shot at the district title should San Angelo Central stumble in its last two games.

Starting time is 6 p.m. for the junior varsities with the varsity tilts slated to get underway at 7 p.m. in the Midland High gym and in Abilene.

The regular season ends Thursday when Lee and Midland High square off on the Lee court.

Sims selected defensive star of the week

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Texas tackle Kenneth Sims is a Halloween baby who has been terrifying offenses ever since he lined up on defense.

The 6-foot-6, 270-pound senior will celebrate his 22nd birthday Saturday doing what he likes best — charging into opponents' backfields.

"You hear words like 'awesome,' 'super,' 'dominating' — he's all those," says Texas Coach Fred Akers.

Akers, who coached running back Earl Campbell when he led the nation in rushing and won the Heisman Trophy at Texas in 1977, says, "I don't think I've ever seen a player play his position better than Kenneth plays his."

Although he missed some workouts last week with groin and calf injuries, Sims had 15 tackles — including six quarterback sacks — as Texas held Southern Methodist's 40-point-a-game offense to 205 yards total offense in a 9-7 Texas victory Saturday.

"You have to give credit to the finest defensive team in the country," SMU Coach Ron Meyer said of the Longhorn defenders. Sims anchored a defensive effort that held SMU to 205 yards total offense.

"He played pretty good, didn't he?" SMU running back Craig James commented after Sims' performance. "It seemed like he was around a lot — No. 77 popped up quite a few times."

Sims also caused a fumble, recovered a fumble and blocked a pass. His coaches named him the Longhorns' most valuable defensive player against SMU and, for his performance, he was named the Associated Press defensive player of the week in the Southwest Conference.

"He didn't leave anything on the field," Akers said of Sims' inspired defensive effort.

"Everyone else had a fine day (on defense)," Akers said. "Kenneth had a great one."

Lauda is considering McLaren and Williams

MILAN, Italy (AP) - Niki Lauda, who recently announced his intended comeback to Formula I racing said Tuesday he was considering bids by McLaren and Williams for the next season.

THE AUSTRAIN driver, a former world champion, let it understood that his transfer to Williams was subject to the retirement of Alan Jones, the Australian seems to have had second thoughts after announcing his retirement last month.

Lauda, who travelled to Milan for the publishing of a book about his life and career, said both McLaren and Williams offered the same amounts to have him on their Formula I teams for the 1982 season.

However, Lauda did not disclose any figure.

THE AUSTRAIN, a former driver for Ferrari and Brabham who was badly burned in a crash in 1976 and retired in 1979, reaffirmed he will be sponsored by the Italian Parmalat commercial team next year. Parmalat is a dairy company.

He once again said he will neet a lot of training to recover technical and physical efficiency after a two-year absence.

Jim Zorn has lost his golden glitter

An AP Sports Analysis
By BRUCE LOWITT
AP Sports Writer

Only a few years ago, Jim Zorn was the Golden Boy of the National Football League. He was typecast as a young, left-handed Fran Tarkenton. He was everything but a cover boy.

Today, halfway through his sixth season, is was just another quarterback, trying very hard to keep the Seattle Seahawks afloat.

While the Eric Hipples, Joe Montanas and David Woodleys are hailed as the new rising stars, Zorn's star has all but vanished beyond the horizon. He is ranked 16th among the NFL's passers. He has thrown more interceptions (8) than touchdowns (7). And he is on a team which needs a miracle just to break even this year.

The deeply religious 28-year-old Zorn seems to view his job as just a small part of his life. Amateur boxing, speed skating, mountain climbing, playing the viola with the Seattle Symphony and disc-jockeying on a local radio station all have made up a part of the mosaic.

So has forthrightness.

Better quarterbacks than he have scrambled out back doors of locker rooms, hidden in training rooms or otherwise turned their backs on the people paid to write about them — and thus on the people who pay to see them play.

But that's not Zorn.

"I couldn't see me clamming up now anymore than I could see myself saying, 'this is it, guys. I've arrived. C'mon and talk to me, baby!' when things were going good," he says. "I don't live and die by whether we've won or lost. I hate to disappoint you, but I'm still me, the same guy I was when we were winning."

That was in 1978 when the Seahawks, in just their third year of existence, finished 9-7 and failed by just one overtime loss to Denver to win a division title. Seattle also was 9-7 in 1979 before crashing to 4-12 last year.

"He's been around about five years now, hasn't he?" former San Francisco quarterback John Brodie said not too long ago. "Well, if Jim doesn't start coming through in a big way, the fans will turn on him. They always do. It's part of paying your dues. The quarterback is the one the fans see, so you get the credit when it's going good and the blame when it isn't — and sometimes you don't deserve either. It comes with the job. You laugh a little and you squirm a lot."

But Zorn is not squirming.

Former player faces fraud charges

BALTIMORE (AP) — A one-time National Football League player is accused of fraud for claiming league pension benefits for "total disability" while working as a sheriff's deputy, serving in the military, and playing semi-pro football.

As the trial opened Monday in federal court, Donald F. Wade, 32, sat stiffly in the uniform of an Army PFC to answer an 11-count indictment charging that he has been receiving as much as $2,100 a month in allegedly undue benefits.

IT WAS in a New England Patriots' uniform in 1971, Wade's lawyer told the jury, that his client broke his neck while "not showing a lot of expertise on a tackling dummy" during preseason practice.

However, a government prosecutor said Wade understood when he received a retroactive disability pension in 1973 that he was eligible for benefits only "as long as he was unable to work."

Assistant U.S. Attorney Steven Allen said Wade had held several jobs and once, in April 1980, boxed in a "Tough Man" competition in West Virginia.

THE FORMER Miami of Ohio running back repeatedly underwent examinations by doctors, sometimes appearing in "arm braces" and complaining of "not being able to walk more than six or seven steps," Allen told the jury of five men and seven women.

The prosecutor added that if Wade had told the trustees of the Bert Bell NFL Player Retirement Plan of his jobs "he would have been cut off" from benefits.

Paul Spence, Wade's lawyer, conceded that his client had "attempted to work," noting that he had served in the Marine Corps for only a few days. The indictment noted that Wade played in only one game with the semi-professional Frederick Falcons football team in western Maryland.

Spence said Wade would testify concerning "his misunderstandings" about the disability plan.

WADE WAS drafted by the Baltimore Colts in 1970 but was cut from training camp. He signed with the Patriots in the following year, received a "compression fracture" of the neck in July 1971 and remained on the Patriots' "injured reserve" list throughout the season.

He received an NFL pension for "total and permanent disability" from the month after his injury through this summer, when he was indicted, according to the administrator of the Baltimore-based fund, Myrna Logsdon.

Originally, he received $95 per month, but that was raised to $1,100 monthly in July 1974 and raised again in February 1979 to $2,100, Mrs. Logsdon testified.

ALLEN SAID Wade served briefly on active duty in the Marines in 1974, served in the Army in 1977 — and when he left "it had nothing to do with" medical problems.

For two months in 1979, Wade worked as a sheriff's deputy in Frederick County, Md., Allen said. In 1981, Wade rejoined the Army and has been stationed at Fort Knox, Ky.

If convicted, Wade could receive up to five years in prison and a $1,000 fine on each of 11 mail fraud counts, Allen said.

Cagers leave NSU program

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — Two more players have quit the Norfolk State basketball team, bringing to four the number of defectors from embattled Coach Lucias Mitchell's squad since practice began.

Billy Walker and Kenny Haynes joined center Louis Thomas, last season's captain, and junior forward Tim Allen in leaving the team.

Experience experience.

Texas football prep poll leaders maintain leads

By Associated Press

All of the top ranked teams in The Associated Press Schoolboy Football Poll remained in command in the latest tabulations but a pair of runnersup in Classes 2A and A gave the leaders major scares.

Forney held onto the lead in Class 2A by a mere 184-181 margin in points but had a commanding 13-4 lead in first place votes following last week's 12-6 victory over Crandall.

Wink, the highest scoring team in the state with 378 points scored and only three yielded, made another run at No. 1 ranked Motley County in Class A, but remained No. 2 by a 200-181 total.

Motley County, 8-0 and a 48-0 victor over Lazbuddie last week, polled 16 of 22 first place votes.

Port Arthur Jefferson in 5A, Huntsville in 4A, and Refugio in 3A also retained their top rankings.

Lewisville, 7-0, was the lone newcomer in 5A, replacing No. 9 Fort Bend Dulles, which exited after only one week in the rankings. Gonzales, 7-0, was the lone new face in Class 4A, replacing Georgetown, which dropped off the list after its second defeat.

Wylie, 7-0, leaped from 10th last week to sixth this week following a 12-3 victory over No. 5 Allen, a former No. 1 ranked team. Allen disappeared and was replaced by Cameron as the No. 10 team.

In Class 2A, Nixon dropped from the rankings after a 14-8 loss to Poth and was replace by Eastland, 6-1, which returned to the top 10 in the No. 10 position.

Rankin, 5-1-1, replaced High Island on the Class A list as the No. 10 team.

While Port Arthur Jefferson and San Antonio Holmes remained 1-2 on the 5A list, No. 3 Odessa Permian, the defending state champion, continued to roll unbeaten with annother outstanding defensive unit.

The Panthers have scored 133 points this season while holding the opposition to 36 and recording three shutout victories. They scored an impressive 16-6 victory over Abilene Cooper last week.

Other teams receiving voter consideration included: Class 5A, Sherman, and Angleton 21 each, Brazoswood, 9; 4A, Fort Worth Brewer 21 including one first place vote, Jasper 15, Beeville 12; 3A, Manor 21 including one first place vote, Barbers Hill, 19, McGregor 10, Waco LaVega 9, 2A, Plains 10 and A, High Island 17, Rule 15.

Willie is 50 but can still play

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Willie Mays is 50 years old and claims to be five or six pounds overweight, but it appears as if he could trot out to centerfield, glide effortlessly under a fly ball and make one of those patented basket catches.

For 22 years, he was one of the game's most exciting stars. And his statistics — 3,283 hits, 2,062 runs, 1,903 RBI, 660 home runs, 338 stolen bases and a .302 lifetime batting average — earned him a spot in baseball's Hall of Fame in 1979.

It's been 30 years since he broke into the major leagues and played in his first World Series and eight years since he last donned a uniform as a player.

He is watching the World Series on television, but only in brief, half-inning spurts. He says he has trouble watching a game when he can't play and, as a result, saw only two games in person this season.

Phil sale is near

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Unless owner Ruly Carpenter changes his mind, it appears the Philadelphia Phillies will be sold shortly to a group headed by the club's executive vice president, Bill Giles, for more than $25 million.

If Giles gets the club, his first big step will be to hire former Texas Manager Pat Corrales as successor to Dallas Green.

Giles's group apparently has made what might be the only bonafide offer for the team, placed on the market last spring by the Carpenter family. The 47-year-old Giles is the son of the late Warren Giles, former president of the National League.

Giles joined the Phillies in October, 1969, as vice president of business operations, just before the club moved from old Connie Mack Stadium to Veterans Stadium.

Some three years later Giles was promoted by Carpenter to executive vice president. He was the chief administrator of the team, acting for Carpenter in the owner's absence.

Giles, a native of Rochester, N.Y., moved to Cincinnati when his father became general manager of the Cincinnati Reds.

Bucks may open without Marques

An AP Sports Analysis
By GARY MYERS
AP Sports Writer

A message to Marques Johnson — the Milwaukee Bucks need you, desperately.

A message to the Milwaukee Bucks — the National Basketball Association season is going to start Friday without Marques Johnson unless you guys get together on a new contract.

"I just don't know what's going to happen," said Bucks Coach Don Nelson, who doubles as general manager. "As a team, our philosophy is the same with or without Marques. We're running the same plays."

But, obviously, not as well.

Johnson is one of the best small forwards in the NBA. He's also one of the league's best kept secrets playing in Milwaukee and, Johnson thinks, one of the league's mot underpaid superstars.

Johnson signed a six-year contract after the Bucks made him the third pick in the 1977 college draft. His first-year salary was in the $150,000 neighborhood escalating to about $225,000 for this season, the fifth year of the deal. After averaging 25.6 points in his second year, Johnson decided a new deal was in order.

He sat out all but the final game of the preseason that year, but returned with the understanding the Bucks would renegotiate prior to the 1981-82 season. The two sides began talking over the summer but Milwaukee management and Johnson are not even close to a new deal, according to Nelson. Johnson is reportedly asking Julius Erving and Magic Johnson-type numbers while the Bucks are not willing to approach the seven-figure stratosphere.

Johnson has told Nelson to pay him or trade him. He listed the New York Knicks, New Jersey Nets and Los Angeles Lakers as the three teams he would be willing to go to.

"No, I'm not listening to offers," Nelson said.

It's apparent the Bucks will not be a very good without Johnson, the heart of the team. The Bucks had perhaps their best shot at the championship last year before losing to Philadelphia by one point in the seventh game of the conference semifinals. Whether center Bob Lanier can push his tired body around for another season was questionable even before Johnson didn't show up. Now, without Marques around, Lanier's incentive is even further diminished.

Johnson has dropped out of sight since late August, leaving the public speaking to his father, Jeff. Last week, Jeff Johnson was quoted as saying the two sides were very close, a point quickly refuted by Nelson. The Bucks are taking a hard line with their best player and Johnson has shown no signs of budging from his position.

A trade?

Milwaukee would want at least rookie power forward Buck Williams from the Nets, and Coach Larry Brown won't go for that. A Knicks' official said, "We won't be paying $1 million for that guy," and the Lakers' payroll is already quite hefty. This has developed into a good old-fashioned stalemate. Who will win? Does Johnson need the money more than the Bucks need Johnson? Or vice versa?

The Bucks' players want Marques back but are approaching Friday's season opener in Detroit not expecting to see him there.

"It's not really our business, it's between Marques and management," guard Brian Winters said. "We can win a lot of games without Marques. Whether we can be as good as last year without him, remains to be seen. We realize in this business you have to get what you can. There's a limited amount of time to play this game.

"He's not here now so we have to go out and play without him. If he comes back, he'll fit in."

"If he doesn't come back," forward Mickey Johnson said, "we'll have to work with what we got."

With Marques Johnson, the Bucks have a legitimate shot at the title. Without him, they are just another team.

The season hasn't started and already the injuries are piling up.

Walter Davis of the Phoenix Suns is out two months after fracturing his left elbow Friday night. Davis was enjoying a fine preseason in his second year at guard after three years as an All-Star forward.

Atlanta, which suffered through an injury plagued 1980-81 season, is at it again. Guard Wes Matthews is out six weeks with a broken foot, forward John Drew has a stress fracture of his foot and rookie Al Wood's chronically sore shoulder is giving him lots of problems. Drew and Wood are daily question marks. Plus, the Hawks are not counting on Eddie Johnson after his latest emotional problems. All of which makes Kevin Loughery a very unhappy coach.

Other injuries: Washington guard Kevin Porter (torn Achilles) is out for the year; New York center Bill Cartwright (knee) is out for six weeks; New Jersey rookie forward Albert King (knee) hasn't practiced yet; Boston's Chris Ford (leg) and M.L. Carr (leg) missed the entire preseason but are expected back this week.

SFA cans grid coach

NACOGDOCHES, Texas (AP) — Officials at Stephen F. Austin College say they fired athletic director and head football coach Charles Simmons "in the best interests" of the school's athletic program.

Simmons will leave at the end of this football season.

Simmons accumulated a 19-41-1 career record in his six years at the helm. A 1957 graduate of SFA, Simmons was Lone Star Conference Coach of the Year in 1979 when the Lumberjacks went 8-3 and tied for second in the league.

A new coach and athletic director should be named about Nov. 23, a school spokesman said Monday.

Salazar lashes out at governing body

NEW YORK (AP) — Alberto Salazar, the world record holder in the marathon, lashed out at the nation's track and field governing body Monday, calling The Athletics Congress "thieves" and hypocrites."

Salazar, the 23-year-old from Eugene, Ore., who set the record Sunday in the New York City Marathon with a clocking of 2 hours, 8 minutes, 13 seconds, unleashed his bitter attack against TAC because of the long-standing battle over financial payments for runners.

The present policy calls for the athletes not to accept prize money from professional races, such as those under the auspices of the Association of Road Racing Athletes.

That rule almost cost New Zealander Allison Roe the opportunity to compete in the New York City race — and a chance to break the women's record. Roe, who cracked the women's mark with a 2:25:29 clocking, had earned $4,000 for her second-place finish in the ARRA's first race, the Cascade Run-Off at Portland, Ore., June 28.

She was immediately suspended, but after agreeing to deposit her winnings in a trust fund supervised by the New Zealand Federation, she was cleared to run in New York.

Meanwhile, other athletes, such as Herb Lindsay of the United States and Rod Dixon, a native New Zealander now living in the United States, have agreed to put their prize money from ARRA races into escrow accounts.

"Those accounts are between the athletes and us," said a TAC spokesman.

"If the IAAF (International Amateur Athletic Federation, the world governing body for the sport), decides at its meeting in Rome Dec.12-13 that the money can be used for training purposes, then the money will be put into a trust fund," added the spokesman.

"Why should TAC have control of my money?" asked Salazar. "They want to be like our agents. Why does TAC insist on this?

"I think TAC is scared to lose its power. They want to have control over the athletes. They have no right to. They're just a bunch of hypocrites and thieves."

At the same time, the IAAF and TAC have virtually closed their eyes to under-the-table payments, such as the $14,000 Salazar reportedlu received and the $10,000 allegedly given to Roe for winning the New York City Marathon.

"TAC knows it can't stop under-the-table payments," said Salazar.

The usually soft-spoken long-distance star, adding, "I'm not usually not one for taking pot shots," nevertheless continued to hit hard at the national organization.

"The public knows what's going on, the athletes know it, everybody knows it," he said.

Salazar also charged that TAC does nothing for young athletes.

"They don't help the progress of runners," he said. "Did they help Bill Rodgers when his wife was supporting him, or when Billy Squires (Rodgers' coach) had to lend him money to buy a quart of milk?"

Salazar answered his own question.

"No," he said. "But when he (Rodgers) makes a lot of money, then they (TAC) wants it."

Salazar said the "papers always are full of stories about athletes asking for $3 million contracts or signing $25 million contracts, and no one says anything about it. But when Bill Rodgers wants $5,000 for running a race, everybody makes a big stink about it."

Rodgers, winner of the New York City and Boston marathons four times each, and the American record holder before Salazar's smashing record victory, withdrew from Sunday's race late Saturday night when he was unable to come to an agreement with one of the two sponsors that had wanted to back him in the 26-mile, 385-yard event.

"I don't have too much respect for the TAC,," continued the suddenly fiery Salazar. "I don't care what they think."

Texas mayors endorse water fund as critical

By MACK SISK
Associated Press Writer

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Delegates planned to end the 69th Texas Municipal League Convention today by officially endorsing two constitutional amendments appearing on the Nov. 3 Texas ballot.

The TML's resolutions committee was to present for a vote measures backing Proposition 1, designed to stimulate investment in urban areas through a tax incentive plan, and Proposition 4, which would establish a dedicated fund for water projects from state budget surpluses.

Austin Mayor Carole Keeton McClellan, outgoing president of the organization, and Lubbock Mayor Pro Tem Alan Henry of Lubbock, president-elect, joined 99 other Texas mayors Monday in endorsing the water fund as critical to maintaing healthy water and sewerage facilities in Texas towns and cities.

San Antonio Mayor Henry Cisneros and 19 other mayors were to appear at a news conference today to speak in behalf of the urban investment amendment prior to the afternoon vote on resolutions.

Mrs. McClellan termed "absolute nonsense" a statement by the Texas State Teachers Association in Austin earlier Monday that passage of the water fund could set education back 100 years in Texas.

"And I say that as a former teacher. If education had not had the same kind of dedicated funds (as sought in the water amendment), it would not be where it is today in Texas," she said.

TSTA President Brunham Robinson said in Austin that Proposition 4 would authorize the spending of an amount of money that could equal $350 a year for every man, woman and child in Texas for the next 25 years."

But Mrs. McClellan said it would save localities money by allowing them to sell bonds at lower rates of interest, and that the legislature could "interrrupt" the flow of state funds at any time another priority arises.

"The way to raise taxes, the surest way to do it is not to plan now — put it off as long as possible," Mrs. McClellan said. "A few vocal figures are sticking their oars in the water issue and talking a lot of nonsense."

Sen. Lloyd M. Bentsen Jr., D-Texas, who spoke to the opening general session Monday, pledged to the Texas city officials that he would fight efforts by Frostbelt states to deny Sunbelt states their fair share of a shrinking federal budget.

"...When you're slicing up a smaller pie, it becomes important to see that it is fairly divided," Bentsen said. "We must make an extra effort to end the petty, grasping regionalism that has become a part of life in Washington these days."

Bentsen said Frostbelt states of the Northeast and Midwest have banded together in a coalition, with a paid staff, to try and win a greater share of federal expenditures for their aras by changing to their advantage the formulas for allocating federal funds.

"I don't think a state like Texas should be penalized for its prosperity. But in any respects, we're down at the bottom. We received less than $24 per resident in Revenue Sharing funds, while the national average is $27. There is only one state in the nation — Indiana — that collected less than Texas in total federal aid during 1980," Bentsen said.

"So, no one can honestly suggest that Texas is benefitting unfairly from federal spending programs. And we're certainly not going to sit back and let other regions drain off our prosperity by changing allocation formulas."

At a news conference after his speech, Bentsen said that his Republican opponents, Rep. Jim Collins of Dallas and State Sen. Walter Mengden of Houston, were distorting his voting record in a futile attempt to portray him as a "wild-eyed liberal."

"That's obviously not true and a total exaggeration of my record," Bentsen said when asked about Collins' allegation that Bentsen voted for more spending appropriations bils than George McGovern.

He's been growing them ever since for "just for the fun of growing something large."

Administration is committed to nuclear weapons deployment

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration, contending that the anti-nuclear movement in Europe does not represent the majority view, says it remains committed to NATO plans for deployment of modern nuclear weapons on the continent.

The danger to peace is the Soviet buildup not U.S. nuclear weapons in Europe, Vice President George Bush said Monday in response to last weekend's anti-nuclear demonstrations in London, Rome, Paris and Brussels.

"I don't question the idealism of the people who have been protesting the deployment of medium-range nuclear missiles in Western Europe," Bush told a group of European and American investors at the White House. "But I do question their sense of perspectives."

Bush emphasized, however, that the Reagan administration intends "to work for a meaningful, verifiable reduction of nuclear forces throughout the world.

White House deputy press secretary Larry Speakes, meanwhile, said in a prepared statement that although the protests "are obvious expressions of concern by a free people, they do not represent a widespread view of West European citizens."

Speakes said President Reagan discussed the weekend protests with his top advisers Monday.

European fears of a possible nuclear confrontation between the superpowers on their territory were fueled a week and a half ago when Reagan said during an interview, "I could see where you could have the exchange of tactical weapons against troops in the field without it bringing either one of the major powers to pushing the button."
