Chisum asks Bush to sign PEDC bill

By LAURA HALEY
Staff Writer

The life of the Pampa Economic Development Corporation could be extended past the year 2001, if a bill introduced by Rep. Warren Chisum (R-Pampa) is signed into law by Gov. George W. Bush.

House Bill 1310 leapt through the Texas House of Representatives May 5 and continued to the governor's desk after approval by the Senate on May 26. The governor has until June 22 to sign the bill into law, but Chisum feels that is not a problem.

"I'm satisfied that he'll do it," said Chisum, who said he asked the governor this past Thursday to sign some of his bills.

The bill is distinctly geared to address the residents of Pampa, which is the only city that established a time limit when passing the 4A sales tax to form the Pampa Economic Development Corporation. A 10-year limit was set, which is due to expire in the year 2001. This new legislation, once passed, gives Pampa's economic district a chance for an extended life.

"It (the bill) will allow the voters of Pampa to determine whether or not to extend the life of the economic development corporation," said Chisum.

If voters choose to extend the life of the economic development corporation, it would give the city of Pampa the ability to compete with other Panhandle towns for economic growth. Other cities have already established a 4A or 4B sales tax without a term limit, which allows them to use a portion of tax dollars for industrial economic development indefinitely.

By giving the city of Pampa the same luxury, Chisum feels the economic development corporation could provide even more growth and jobs in the future.

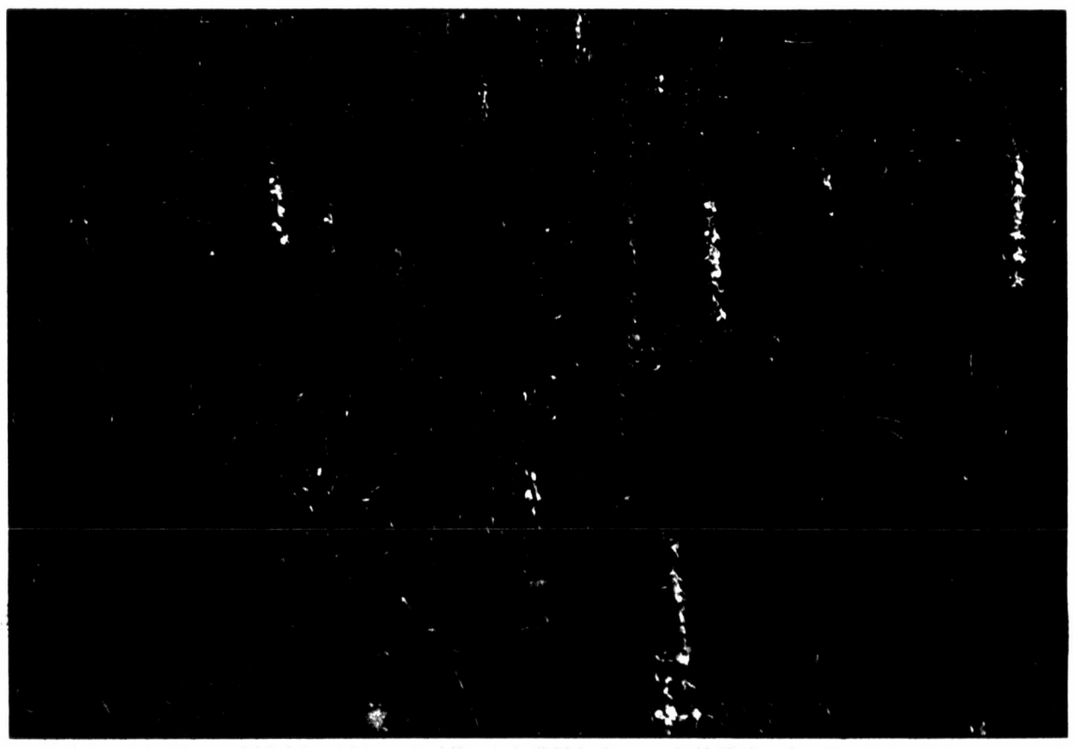

Wayne Stribling, longtime member of the Pampa Economic Development Board, agrees with Chisum.

"For Pampa, it would be very good for our economic development," said Stribling. "And, without economic development, we're not really a player in attracting new businesses to Pampa."

Pampa's economic development corporation was directly responsible for the relocation of U.S. Bus – a Suffern, N.Y., based company – to the city. The company will provide at least 50 jobs and is leaning towards 100 jobs by the end of the year.

Another project in the planning stages is a 213-acre industrial park on the west side of town. Once developed, members of the economic development corporation board of directors are hoping to coax additional industry into Pampa.

No tickets correctly matched all six numbers drawn Saturday night for the twice-weekly Lotto Texas game, state lottery officials said.

The grand prize would have been an estimated $4 million if someone had matched the numbers drawn Saturday night from a field of 50: 6, 9, 22, 35, 39 and 46.

Wednesday night's drawing will be worth an estimated $9 million.

Supreme Court upholds right to ban abortions performed by non-physicians

WASHINGTON (AP) – The Supreme Court today allowed Montana, and perhaps other states as well, to ban abortions performed by licensed physician assistants.

The justices voted 6-3 to reverse a federal appeals court ruling that had blocked enforcement of the law.

In an unsigned opinion, the nation's highest court said its landmark 1992 decision reaffirming women's constitutional right to abortion allowed states to require that all abortions be performed by doctors.

In a separate case, the court rejected Utah's attempt to revive an invalidated law that would bar most abortions for women more than 20 weeks pregnant. The court, without comment, left intact a ruling that the law violates women's constitutional right to end their pregnancies.

In other cases acted on Monday the court:

— Ruled that a 1986 law that made it easier for private citizens to sue federal contractors for allegedly defrauding the government cannot be applied to cases that happened before the law was passed.

— Refused to give a financial break to people who file for bankruptcy protection and are allowed to keep property over creditors' objections. Such people still must pay for property they are allowed to keep. The court said the payment should be the amount it would cost to replace the car or house, not the lower amount the property would bring in a foreclosure sale.

— Agreed to decide whether the Federal Election Commission misinterpreted federal law when it exempted a pro-Israel lobbying group from disclosing its campaign-related spending.

— Turned down an appeal from the convicted killer of nine people at a Buddhist temple near Phoenix. The justices let stand Johnathan Doody's convictions and nine life sentences for the 1991 slayings.

— Rejected the appeal of a man convicted of murder in the 1976 car-bomb slaying of Phoenix newspaper reporter Don Bolles. The court turned away former Phoenix contractor Max Dunlap's argument that prosecutors waited too long to charge him again after a previous murder conviction was thrown out in 1980.

In the Montana abortion case the court said:

"In the course of upholding the physician-only requirement at issue in that case, we emphasized that our cases reflect the fact that the Constitution gives the states broad latitude to decide that particular functions may be performed only by licensed professionals, even if an objective assessment might suggest that those same tasks could be performed by others."

At issue in the Montana case was a 1995 state law that specifically disqualified physician assistants from performing abortions.

For the previous 21 years, the state allowed licensed physician assistants working under the direct supervision of a physician to perform early-term abortions.

The 1995 law actually affected just one person – Susan Cahill who works in Kalispell, Mont., under the supervision of Dr. James Armstrong, is the only non-physician in the state who performs abortions.

Increase forecast for Texas wheat harvest

The Texas Agricultural Statistics Service has released the forecast for the 1997 Texas winter wheat production.

The service estimates 103.6 million bushels will be harvested this year, a 37 percent jump above the 1995 and 1996 yields.

Statewide yield is expected to average 28 bushels per acre, up 2 bushels from last year.

The harvested acreage is expected to take a 28 percent jump over last year's with 3.7 million acres being harvested.

The Northern High Plains is expected to produce approximately 41.1 million bushels, a 21 percent increase from 1996.

Nearly half of the Texas wheat crop is planted in the High Plains. The High Plains area planted 2,280 acres. The entire state planted 6,000.

The Northern High Plains will produce approximately 41,100 bushels of the 103,600 expected bushels statewide.

State statistician Dennis Findley said that most fields in the High Plains showed good recovery from the freeze and good moisture content. Harvest was getting way in the Low Plains and Cross Timbers.

The wheat harvest was virtually complete by June 1 in South Texas.

Nationwide, the winter wheat production is forecast at 1.6 billion bushels, up 8 percent from last year. Yield is expected to average 39.3 bushels per acre, up 2.1 bushels from a year ago.

Acreage to be harvested for grain is expected to total 40.8 million acres, 3 percent more than a year ago.

Gramm introduces compensation bill for property owners

Legislation to protect the rights of property owners to use their own land without running afoul of the federal government has been introduced with high hopes of winning approval, says U.S. Sen. Phil Gramm.

"Sadly, with all the talk we hear about rights in America today, the guarantee of freedom to acquire, use and dispose of private property has become a poor relation," Gramm said. "In fact, it has very nearly been drummed out of the family because of the government's relentless assault on private property."

"The courts have been very clear that if the government builds a highway across your property, it must provide you just compensation," he said. "But when the government imposes such stringent controls on the use of private property that its value is eroded or destroyed, the government pays nothing."

As well as assuring compensation for property owners who lose the value of their land to government action, the bill requires that federal agencies analyze the practical cost of regulations before they are imposed.

"It creates a common sense requirement that federal agencies consider the effect of their actions before they act, not after it's too late," Gramm said.

"Nobody who intentionally uses property to pollute or to annoy their neighbors is entitled to compensation," Gramm noted, "but this bill will prevent the government from running roughshod over the rights of honest homeowners, family farmers and small businesses."

In addition, the legislation includes the following provisions:

— Clarifies property right laws and establishes an arbitration procedure to reduce lawsuits.

— Requires that compensation costs be paid from within the budget of the agency which is imposing or enforcing a regulation.

Railroad photographs, artifacts

The White Deer Land Museum "Bison to Boom Town" exhibit's railroad photographs and artifacts exhibit are on loan from Dale and Russell Worley of Amarillo. The exhibit is open to the public Tuesday through Sunday, from 1-4 p.m. According to past records, the development of Texas Panhandle towns changed considerably when the rail system was brought into the state. Between 1889 and 1900 Pampa had a pumping station, one of the largest storage tanks on the line, and the largest and best section house in the area, as well as one of the best stockyards for rapid dispatch of large herds. This information was reported by George Tyng, when putting together information for the Southern Kansas Railway Company. SKRy Company at the time was bringing in a steam engine, boiler and derrick for putting in a well and pumping station in Pampa. The section house was at 315 W. Atchison. By 1901 the facilities improved with additional services, and when M.K. Brown came to the city in 1903, there was a depot on site made of two boxcars. In 1905 the first Pampa Depot was built. The 24 feet by 42 feet building served Wells Fargo Freight Company and the Santa Fe Railway Company.

GAO study: Evidence links Gulf War illness to chemical weapons

WASHINGTON (AP) – Defense Secretary William Cohen today defended his efforts to get to the bottom of the Gulf War illness mystery and refrained from criticizing a new study linking the sicknesses with exposure to chemical agents.

The New York Times reported Sunday that a General Accounting Office study due for release this month criticizes investigations by the Pentagon and a special White House panel of illness complaints by Gulf War veterans.

Asked about the Times report today at a news conference in Kuwait, where he was visiting U.S. troops and meeting Kuwaiti government officials, Cohen said he had not read the GAO report but suggested its criticisms were nothing new.

"I've criticized the Defense Department's handling of this investigation myself on several occasions," Cohen said.

"There obviously is a lack of reliable information ..., a loss of records," he said, adding that more evidence was needed to link the mysterious ailments of Gulf War veterans with exposure to nerve gas or other chemical agents.

He defended his recent decision to put former New Hampshire Sen. Warren Rudman in charge of overseeing the Pentagon's efforts to get conclusive answers to Gulf War illness.

"We think that we're making a very strong good-faith effort to get to the bottom of it," he told reporters. He said the Pentagon has 85 studies under way.

> "We have found a great deal of evidence to show that veterans were exposed to a number of compounds that by themselves or in combination could cause the kinds of illnesses we are seeing."
> —James Tuite of the Gulf War Research Foundation

A veterans' advocate, anticipating the official release of the GAO study, says sick Gulf War veterans need help now and future soldiers must get protection from chemicals weapons.

"There should be no controversy on this issue any more," said James Tuite of the Gulf War Research Foundation.

The study by the GAO says the Defense Department should not rule out the possibility that Iraqi biological weapons caused symptoms experienced by 80,000 Gulf War veterans who sought medical checkups from the government.

The Times said it obtained a draft of the report from an official critical of the Pentagon's response to veterans' illnesses. The official was not identified.

Tuite said that the GAO study follows three others that drew similar conclusions. Tuite began reviewing Gulf War illnesses while preparing a Senate Banking Committee report that investigated U.S. supply of chemicals and technology that helped Iraq develop chemical weapons.

"We have found a great deal of evidence to show that veterans were exposed to a number of compounds that by themselves or in combination could cause the kinds of illnesses we are seeing," Tuite said.

Lt. Cmdr. Karen Jeffries, a Pentagon spokeswoman, said she had not seen the draft GAO report and would not comment on it.

Oldest house on the Bolivar Peninsula threatened

CRYSTAL BEACH (AP) — A historic beachfront house that has withstood the tests of time and tempest is faced by slow death and likely will have to be moved, its owner said.

The Breakers has stood on the Bolivar Peninsula for 113 years, surviving the 1900 Galveston Storm and every other hurricane that came its way to become the oldest house on the sparsely populated sand spit between Galveston and High Island.

Today, years of erosion by the Gulf of Mexico threatens to engulf the 113-year-old house, the oldest on the peninsula between Galveston and High Island.

John B. Gordon's family has owned the house for 93 of those years. Now, after surf from a tropical storm a year ago and heavy winter storms caused serious erosion in front of the Breakers and neighboring cabins, Gordon wants out. And he wants to take his home with him.

Mexican traffickers gaining clout

CIUDAD JUAREZ, Mexico (AP) — Once they were merely "mules" for Colombia's powerful cocaine cartels. Now, Mexico's narcotics traffickers have grown into drug lords in their own right, and the front line of the drug war has shifted from the Andean jungles to America's front door.

Mexican gangs run their own distribution networks in the United States, and they produce most of the methamphetamine used north of the border. They have even bypassed the Colombians several times to buy cocaine directly from producers in Bolivia and Peru.

"These sophisticated drug syndicate groups from Mexico have eclipsed organized crime groups from Colombia as the premier law enforcement threat facing the United States today," Thomas Constantine, director of the U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration, told a congressional committee this year.

Because of the power shift, drug-related violence and corruption regularly spills over the U.S.-Mexico border, threatening historically sensitive bilateral relations.

"They still haven't reached the sophistication of the Colombian networks of old," Errol Chavez, DEA special agent-in-charge in San Diego, told The Associated Press in an interview. "But unless we stop this new threat, we are going to have a big problem next door."

Female golfers call tee times unequal

DALLAS (AP) — When Judy Smith joined a country club a few years ago, she tried to get weekend tee times but was always told none were available.

"Dumb me, I assumed that in the '90s I would get whatever tee time I requested," recalled the former insurance executive, who had joined Prestonwood Country Club through her company.

"I talked to a few of the other women members and they told me, 'You'll never get a tee time on Saturday or Sunday because that's when the good ol' boys play,' " Ms. Smith, who is now president of the Dallas Women Executives' Golf Association, told The Dallas Morning News.

Although many country clubs have admitted minorities as members, some still bar women from prime tee times and grills and either deny them admittance or offer "secondary" memberships.

Two of the most expensive and traditional clubs, Dallas' Northwood Club and Brook Hollow Country Club, offer full memberships only to men. Women may join with husbands or other male family members.

The most expensive club in town, Dallas' Preston Trail Golf Club, with a $75,000 initiation fee, admits men only.

Tobacco accord exptected this week

DALLAS (AP) — Both sides in the tobacco settlement talks say they expect to send President Clinton a proposed deal by the end of this week, The Dallas Morning News reported today.

Unidentified sources told the newspaper that only a few details remain, and they hope to present a proposed settlement to Clinton by Wednesday.

Negotiations were scheduled to resume Monday in Washington, D.C., to resolve differences remaining over punitive-damage limits for individual lawsuits and total dollar amounts. Both sides say the issues will be overcome easily, the newspaper said.

"We're trying to bring this thing to a final resolution this week. It's going to happen," said Mississippi Attorney General Mike Moore, who has led the negotiations for Texas, 36 other states and 17 class-action cases.

The newspaper said optimism returned to the talks after cigarette makers this weekend conceded regulatory authority over tobacco to the federal Food and Drug Administration.

Members of the St. Vincent de Paul Catholic Youth ministry sort and arrange piles of clothing, blankets, shoes and assorted household goods they will be taking with them on their mission trip to Arizona. Members who will be attending the mission are Katherine Zemanek, Jessica Morrison, Eric Chavez, Jay Gerber, Drew Morrison, Richard Leger, Windy Wagner, Natalie McVay and Nena Velasquez. They will be visiting a traditional mission near the Hopi Indian reservation later this month.

School official to be indicted in two cities

BULLARD, Texas (AP) – To his new friends in Snook, Frank Cook was a respected school superintendent, a loving family man who sang in the church choir and attended Bible study with his wife and teenage son.

But a prosecutor says that at home, Cook showed a different side, one that preyed on his wife's mental illness and taunted her with "psychological warfare."

And when Janet Cook, 38, shot herself in the chest with a shotgun last summer, her husband drove her to it, claims Charles Sebesta, district attorney for Burleson and Washington counties.

Pushing someone to suicide isn't a crime, Sebesta says, but lying about life insurance benefits is.

Cook was indicted last fall on a felony charge of aggravated perjury. Cook told a grand jury he would collect $250,000 in life insurance from his wife's death. But Sebesta contends he's found additional policies totaling more than $2 million.

"Our theory is – and this is a unique theory – that these insurance policies were purchased, he played upon her emotions and drove her to kill herself," the prosecutor said.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Take time to enjoy the view

Sherry Cromartie

Pampa News staff writer

Unless I am writing a personal letter to my daughter and son-in-law and the two grandsons, Jeri, Jim, Justin and Johnathan, I seldom take time to share my thoughts with anyone else. Since I write to them every other month or so, it seems that to be writing a column for a newspaper – once should be enough!

Picking a topic to not offend anyone, (my father made that suggestion), I decided to mention a pleasant activity that I enjoy, and I believe there are many others who like it, too: traveling and driving in the Texas Panhandle. In fact, I envy the Dairy Queen guy. Bob Phillips' travels in order to film and publish his stories for his Country Reporter television show every Sunday.

In less than four years, I have driven more than 92,000 miles, and have been nowhere to speak of, except for one quick trip to the Colorado mountains two years ago. Most of my traveling every day is across the rural route between Gray County and Hall County, crossing in and out of not more than four counties in a day, usually; however, sometimes I venture further into territories north or south. These short trips are necessary to my work, but I thoroughly enjoy the time and the scenery once I get the motor running.

Although the upper Panhandle seems flat to newcomers, and is composed of approximately 28 to 32 counties, with about 40 plus small communities, it is really beautiful countryside to see.

Driving over the rural county roads and Texas highways can give one a thoroughly relaxing feeling, and one forgets that perhaps he or she is "going nowhere."

With all of the Texas Panhandle experiencing multiple rains, there is an abundance of wild flowers growing along the highways, creating an artist's palet of colors. Have you taken time to notice? The floral growth, plus wild plums, trees and tall grasses, gives added protection for the wild prairie animals, doves, quails, turkeys and small varieties of birds, too, and they are frolicking freely over the land and across the horizon. Did you see that deer jutting out, and then, quickly turning back into the brush?

Watching these scenes pop up unexpectedly may take my eyes from the road for a moment, but it is an exciting treat. With my music plugged into the tape deck, driving makes for pleasant moments for me to enjoy, and I seem to find contentment for the duration of the trip – until arriving back into the world of reality, either at work or back at the house.

Opinion

Feds encroach on programming

A significant threat to the First Amendment right to freedom of speech was passed by the Senate Commerce Committee, by a lopsided bipartisan vote of 19-1. Senate Bill 363 probably will be taken-up and voted on by the full Senate before the end of the month.

Sponsored by Democratic Sen. Fritz Hollings of South Carolina, SB #363's censorship component is clear from the bill's introduction: "To amend the Communications Act of 1934 to require that violent video programming is limited to broadcast after the hours when children are reasonably likely to comprise a substantial portion of the audience."

An exception is made if a program "is specifically rated on the basis of its violent content so that it is blockable by electronic means specifically on the basis of that content."

This is a dangerous leap from existing law, which already requires TV makers to install the so-called "V-Chip" in all sets sold in the United States beginning in 1998. The chip allows parents to "block" particular shows from children's viewing.

The bill leaves to the Federal Communications Commission – a politicized federal bureaucracy – the power to "define" what "violent video programming" means and when children's hours take place.

SB 363 would substantially change the current system, based on the 1996 Telecommunications Act, in which TV networks rate their own shows on a voluntary basis.

"The reason we're concerned is that SB 363 asks the government to start dictating what programming is on television," Missi Tessier told us; she's communications director of the First Amendment Rights Working Group, a watchdog organization. "Regardless of what people feel about what's on TV, we don't think anyone wants the government determining program content. The language in the bill is sufficiently vague to make Schindler's List, The Ten Commandments and (Shakespeare's) Henry V unsuitable for viewing on TV."

Although presented as a means of protecting children, SB 363 actually violates parental rights to determine what their children see. If parents don't like a program, for whatever reason, they can change the channel, pull the plug – or get rid of the TV altogether.

The First Amendment right to free speech is the most important issue involved here, but since this is politics it's also worth considering the money factor, too.

According to the Center for Responsive Politics, which tracks campaign expenditures, Hollings last year received $2,000 from the National Association of Broadcasters and $1,500 from broadcast TV sources, whose content would be censored. Total: $3,500.

He received much bigger contributions from cable TV companies that would be exempt under the bill: $7,000 from Turner Broadcasting, $5,000 from Time Warner, $4,000 from the National Cable Television Association, and $9,000 from four others for a total of $25,000. And that's just for 1996.

Is it a coincidence that Hollings' actions foliowed the big money donations?

TV rating clash at Cato Institute

L. Brent Bozell

Late last month, Washington's Cato Institute hosted a debate on television's parental-guidance ratings. Cato's own Lawrence Gasman served as moderator. Rick Cotton, an executive vice president at NBC, Robert Corn-Revere, former counsel to FCC commissioner James Quello and yours truly tackled the issue.

My fellow panelists deserve credit for representing their constituencies well. Cotton is a mouthpiece for the television industry. Corn-Revere, a hardened libertarian, comes from the so-what camp that dismisses the television ratings debate as trite political posturing. Together, these gentlemen advanced a flurry of arguments dismissing the need for a serious ratings system, and proved just the opposite in the process.

1. The public already knows what's on television. Popular series, Cotton said, are "watched ... by tens of millions ... week after week after week. Those viewers understand the sensibility of each of those programs."

There are over 90 different series on network (non-cable) prime-time TV alone. Show me a person who understands "the sensibility of ... those programs." And programs vary from week to week. Quick: Tell me what objectionable content will be found on next week's Wings. You can't. The only way for a viewer – a parent attempting to monitor his child's viewing habits – to ascertain a show's content is for the network to warn him about it with a content-based ratings system.

2. Censorship! That, warned Cotton, "is what this discussion is really about. While some ... may back off and say, 'No, no, that's not what we meant,' that is what is at stake."

It was a half-hearted accusation – or at least it appeared so – simply because it is so silly. Yes, some in government are prepared to legislate a content-based system if the industry refuses to do so on its own, and yes, it's probably an unconstitutional move. What is "at stake," however, is the cultural rot the entertainment industry is offering the public, especially the impressionable young. If the networks were to focus on that problem – and implement a voluntary content-based system as a preventative measure – they'd have nothing to fear, would they?

3. Parents should be more responsible and, stated Cotton, "not simply assume that (PG-rated programs) are appropriate for their children ... (PG) stands for 'parental guidance suggested.' "

Another smoke screen. Actually, it's the industry itself that promotes the vagueness of the PG rating. According to the guidelines, PG shows "may contain some material that some parents would find unsuitable for younger children." In other words, PG-rated programs are acceptable most of the time for most parents of younger children – and they're just fine for older kids. With that in mind, how can Cotton's own network slap a PG on raunchy programs like NewsRadio, Men Behaving Badly, Mad About You, and, lest we forget, Friends – and then demand parents show more responsibility?

4. It isn't necessary. Corn-Revere took a different approach, dismissing the proposed content-based system altogether: "I'm always astounded when I hear descriptions of what's on television. ... Even when I try to, I don't find unmarried people jumping in and out of each others beds." How does one respond? One rolls one's eyes, that's all.

5. There's (yet) another agenda here. "We're really talking about the cultural agenda of the people who would like to roll back television to when it was a positive force in American life," was Corn-Revere's bombshell. And I proudly proclaim myself guilty as charged.

6. Television is beyond repair: "The idea that you can sanitize television, even for a block of time, and make everybody watch what you've decided is the good stuff, is beyond ludicrous in today's world," opined Corn-Revere. If you did, and offered quality programming in the process, you'd simply be doing what Hollywood did for 50 years. And maybe the millions of viewers who have left the networks in the past ten years might come back, too.

7. McCarthyism! "We have the spectacle of people on Capitol Hill giving us a show-by-show breakdown of ... the television schedule. Doesn't that strike anybody as odd?" wondered Corn-Revere. "We used to focus on issues like crime, war, and pollution. (Now) we live in a time of cultural McCarthyism, where any demagogue can find a ready audience."

My guess is that the Corn-Reveres sense their own irrelevance, know they're losing the debate. Name-calling is a last resort, when the ammunition is spent and one can only toss stones. The excuse well is dry. Time for the industry to come through with a real ratings system.

Churches: AWOL from the cultural wars

William Murchison

Whaddaya know? The publishers of the New International Version of the Bible canceled a revision that would have pruned offensive he-man words, replacing them with nicely neutered, spiffily spayed formulations. "People" for "mankind," and such like; "we" for "he."

What happened? The Southern Baptists, heavy consumers of the NIV raised a howl over the Scriptures' being tampered with. The NIV's publishers came to wish they were in some more salubrious venue – like the Congo.

What shocks is the decision to call off the enterprise entirely. This sort of thing almost never happens. Whenever the feminist lobby crooks its finger, persons of the cloth normally come arunning. Yes'm, yes'm, what can we do for you? Sure there isn't something else? This summer, the Episcopal General Convention will pass a canon relegating to the back of the church bus all priests and bishops (as well as lay leaders) with lingering doubts about the validity of ordaining women as priests. The putative victims won't go along with such silliness, but hey, when the feminists want it ... !

Time was when the churches believed their primary job was to proclaim the Gospel: "God so loved the world (to quote the NIV) that he gave his one and only Son, that whoever believes in him should not perish but have eternal life."

This was until the gentle dominies – fearful possibly that God's much-loved world was ignoring them – wrapped themselves in politics and sociology, commonly of a drab, humorless, left-wing variety.

The Big Three causes with the National Council of Churches crowd are anti-racism, feminism and gay rights. The last, though lagging behind the other two in broad approval, is coming along nicely. (Avante-garde Episcopal bishops started ordaining practicing gays a few years ago.)

Even if racism and feminism aren't especially hot issues these days, the liberal churches sweat copiously lest it be imagined they aren't on the Right (meaning Left) Side. Last year's media-concocted hoax about a white conspiracy to burn down black churches restored to the dominies their public relations leverage. Hands were wrung. Yes, it was terrible that black and white churches were being burned at about the customary rate for church arson! It would have been worse had there been an actual conspiracy. Investigation proved there hadn't been.

Nothing escapes the churches' social vigilance – except the biggest thing going on, the culture wars. The what? The culture wars: the assaults on enduring touchstones that churches used to care about, such as holy matrimony, the value of human life and conduct rooted in heavenly, not earthly, standards. In the culture wars, whose front lines they should be manning (personning?), the churches are disarmed.

The churches care about evils such as "sexist" lingo. Fie, fie, no more of this "humanity" talk, lest Karen De Crow get ticked! What many churches care less about is the junking of marriage and the burgeoning of illegitimacy; the siphoning-off of children into crime and drug abuse and barbarism; sex and carnality at the center of everything; desire as the diesel fuel of life.

What's to make us think the churches care? We don't see them mounting a counterattack, do we? Don't see them asserting Christian standards in opposition to the secular world's? Preaching chastity over incontinence? Restraint over passing pleasure? Sacrifice over gratification? Well, yes, we do see them. Here and there, now and again. "Points of light" – W.H. Auden's phrase before it was George Bush's – do pierce the cultural darkness.

Otherwise, an ungodly number of churches are AWOL in the culture wars, on whose outcome our civilization, if you still call it civilization, depends. Why no counterattack (save by the Baptists and Catholics) against abortion and Kevorkianism? Why no crusade against sex-ed and easy divorce, pornography and rap music?

Ah, well. They nearly frightened "humanity" out of the NIV, didn't they? Wait'll next time. Just you wait.

French departure met with increased fighting

BRAZZAVILLE, Republic of Congo (AP) — The Republic of Congo's warring sides tried to arrange a peace summit today while French troops began to depart from the capital, saying their job of rescuing foreigners was over.

France's announcement Sunday that it would pull its forces out was followed by some of the fiercest fighting in days between forces of President Pascal Lissouba and his rival, Gen. Denis Sassou-Nguesso.

The two factions were believed to be jockeying for position to capture the airport, now controlled by French troops. Mortar and automatic rifle fire were heard overnight, and into this morning.

Pol Pot could be killed within days, co-premier says

PHNOM PENH, Cambodia (AP) — Notorious Khmer Rouge leader Pol Pot is surrounded by armed rivals and could be captured or killed within days, First Prime Minister Prince Norodom Ranariddh said today.

Ranariddh, one of Cambodia's two premiers, spoke to reporters at a rural school inauguration as speculation mounted over the fate of Pol Pot, who led a ruthless regime from 1975 to 1979 that killed as many as two million Cambodians.

Officials claim that Pol Pot, 69, is being defended by 200 loyalists against 1,000 fighters who turned against him after he ordered the execution of Son Sen, his one-time defense minister.

Gen. Nhek Bunchhay, deputy army chief of staff, claims that the guerrillas opposed to Pol Pot have defected to the government. Nhek Bunchhay is trying to send ammunition to them despite opposition from Second Prime Minister Hun Sen, who wants the rebels to destroy each other.

EU leaders struggle to write new treaty

AMSTERDAM, Netherlands (AP) — European leaders, fighting to save plans for a single currency and prepare the European Union for expansion, opened what could be a bruising summit today with the union's future at stake.

The hottest item on the agenda is keeping the euro, the new currency, on track for its launch in 1999. The summit has to deal with France's new Socialist-led EU leaders are meeting at the Dutch Central Bank here to conclude an ambitious rewriting of the EU's treaty so that the group can function effectively after it expands from 15 to 25 or more members in coming years.

But as Dutch Prime Minister Wim Kok greeted his 14 colleagues today at the bank's glass-and-steel building, negotiators worked behind-the-scenes on the currency dispute that has overshadowed other issues.

Riots and resignations plague Boulder community

BOULDER, Colo. (AP) – It has nothing to do with JonBenet. It has everything to do with JonBenet.

This college town at the foot of the Rockies, long known for a certain flakiness and its live-and-let-live tolerance, appears to be coming apart at its tie-dyed seams.

In the 5 1/2 months since six-year-old JonBenet Ramsey was found strangled in her family's basement, the city has been beset – by political resignation, student rioting, rebellious police and, always, the bewildering lack of progress in the Ramsey murder investigation.

Then, five weeks ago, in the city's first homicide since JonBenet's death, a professor retrieving belongings from his home was shot dead, allegedly by his estranged wife, as police stood nearby.

"We're not dying of boredom," Mayor Leslie Durgin dryly informed a reporter last week.

While few of the subsequent events are directly related to the Ramsey case, virtually all of the turbulence involves Boulder's beleaguered police force, whose reputation for competence and efficiency has steadily unraveled with passing months and no arrests in the child's murder.

Similarly, few of the events would previously have provoked attention beyond the state line, but all are now receiving national scrutiny because of intense news coverage given the murder. In addition, legions of restless reporters have been camped out since March in Denver, just 25 miles away, to cover the Oklahoma City bombing trial.

> "People know the name and say, 'Ah, it's happening in Boulder again.' "
> —Mayor Leslie Durgin

"People know the name and say, 'Ah, it's happening in Boulder again,' " Durgin said.

In the last six weeks:

—The night after rowdy University of Colorado students lit a bonfire in the street and tossed bottles at police, Chief Tom Koby sent his officers back to the scene in riot gear. The idea was to head off further violence, but the plan backfired; students rioted and smashed shop windows. Over three days, police arrested 46 people.

—Not long after, the police officers' union issued a 2-to-1 vote of no-confidence in Koby. Union spokesmen denied the vote stemmed from Koby's handling of the Ramsey investigation, citing instead morale problems and safety concerns from the university rioting.

—Koby later exacerbated tensions by publicly saying his officers would have been justified in shooting the unruly students.

—Koby's supervisor, and one of his biggest supporters, City Manager Tim Honey, resigned his post of six years after failing to resolve differences with the City Council. One disagreement concerned Honey's avid support for spending $800,000 to assemble a hand-carved teahouse from Dushanbe, Boulder's sister city in Tajikistan.

—John Eller, the lead detective in the Ramsey investigation, is shopping his resume around to other police departments. Meantime, he is about to be sued by patrol Sgt. Larry Mason, who was taken off the murder case and alleges Eller falsely accused him of leaking inside information.

Speedway ravaged by country music fans

FORT WORTH (AP) – After what was billed as the biggest country music concert ever, Texas Motor Speedway security supervisor Robert Langley surveyed the infield of the massive two-month-old facility.

Strewn with ankle deep garbage, from beer bottles to watermelon rinds, it looked more like a landfill than a race track.

"In all the times I've worked out here for racing, I've never seen it this dirty," Langley said.

You can't expect a tea party when tens of thousands of hot, humidified country music fans gather to watch stars such as Hank Williams Jr., Wynonna, Vince Gill and hometown teen-age sensation LeAnn Rimes.

Concert officials said Saturday's show that extended into Sunday morning attracted an estimated 260,000 people. That was more than twice the number who watched the NASCAR Winston Cup Interstate Batteries 500, described as the largest sporting event ever held in Texas, during the speedway's debut weekend in April.

The figure approaches the estimated 300,000 who attended the 1987 mass celebrated by Pope John Paul II in a field near San Antonio, apparently the largest Texas gathering ever.

An unidentified city official told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram that the 300,000-seat speedway was never more than one-third full at any time as fans came and went throughout the show.

Next weekend, the speedway expects to draw even more people to RockFest '97, featuring Bush, Jewel and No Doubt.

"I think it will bring more people out to not only to the races, but the facility itself," Langley said. "Now they are going to see what we actually have out here."

Not only was CountryFest '97 crowded, it was hot – really hot. The graveled speedway turned griddle-like as heat and humidity made it feel like 105 degrees in the shade.

About 1,600 people were treated for heat-related symptoms, a Fort Worth official said. About 42 fans were sent to nearby hospitals. None was in serious condition.

Runaway Hotline calls increase during summer

AUSTIN – The number of calls to the Texas Runaway Hotline's toll-free telephone number, 1-888-580-HELP, typically increases during the summer months, according to Jay Smith, director of the hotline.

"We are projecting an average 3,700 calls per month this summer," Smith said. "That is a 25 percent increase over this year's current monthly average of 2,966 calls."

"Many youths have extra time on their hands and are in need of community service that provide youth employment opportunities and recreational activities," Smith explained. "Services such as local Community Youth Development programs and recreation centers will be among the many referrals offered to youths and families over the summer."

Smith also stated that youths call the 24-hour crisis hotline to find food, shelter or simply to hear a caring voice. Some call the hotline to find a free ride home or to utilize the confidential message service that is available to promote communication between runaways and parents.

"We also encourage family members and friends to contact the hotline if someone they care for has run away or is thinking about running," Smith said. "Hotline telephone counselors will discuss the situation and refer callers to their local S.T.A.R. (Services to At-Risk Youth) program or other social service agencies if further crisis intervention or counseling is necessary."

Man Carrying Torch Fears He Is Playing With Fire

Abigail Van Buren

SYNDICATED COLUMNIST

DEAR ABBY: A woman I have known for some time recently moved back to town and we have run into each other on several occasions. We're both in our mid-20s and neither of us is involved with anyone right now.

A few years ago I began to develop feelings for her that I never had the courage to express. I don't remember when they started, but since her return I realize I still have them, and now when I am around her I can think of little else. I don't know if she thinks of me as any more than a friend.

I've been infatuated before, but I don't think what I've been feeling for these last few years is infatuation. I believe it is love. I want to tell her how I feel, but I fear damaging our friendship.

If I tell her and she does not share my feelings, I don't know how I will get past the awkwardness of seeing her in social situations in the future. Our social circle is tight, and chance meetings would be unavoidable if I want to keep my friends.

What do you think, Abby? Should I take a chance and tell her how I feel? I have everything to gain, but it looks like so much to lose.

LOVESICK AND LOSING IT

DEAR LOVESICK: There is something that's in between ignoring your feelings and confessing all. It's called a date. Ask the young woman to have dinner with you. Take her to a restaurant where the noise level is low and you can talk. During dinner you'll have an opportunity to steer the conversation in a personal direction. Be attentive to her responses, and you'll come away with a good sense of where your relationship may or may not go. Good luck!

***

DEAR ABBY: After reading the letter in your column signed "Sad Widow in Illinois," I had to respond.

My father died in 1965. My mother was devastated by his unexpected death and was inconsolable. The following May was their anniversary, and I wondered what I should do. Sending Mother a card might cause more sadness, but I just couldn't ignore that very special day.

A friend told me that when her mother's first anniversary had come up after her father's death, she and her siblings did not do anything by way of remembering it. Later, her mother made the remark, "You would think it never happened." And my friend said to me, "Send your mother a card."

So I did as "Sad Widow" suggested. I bought a "thinking of you" card and wrote a letter to my mother, expressing understanding that this was not a happy anniversary, but their marriage was still something to be celebrated.

My mother was deeply appreciative. She called it her "empty anniversary," and thanked me for remembering. My mother died nine days later.

Abby, please remind your readers to remember the surviving spouse on his or her wedding anniversary. It is still a meaningful occasion.

GRATEFUL JEANNE

DEAR JEANNE: Thank you for your compassionate insight. I wholeheartedly agree with you.

***

DEAR ABBY: I hope it's not too late for me to respond to your question, "What is a great lover?"

Abby, there's no such thing as "a" great lover. They only come in pairs.

JOHN WEHRLE, CHARLESTON, W.VA.

Horoscope

Tuesday, June 17, 1997

A number of impressive opportunities might come to you in the year ahead in a sequential manner. Treat each one separately, however, for the best maximum results.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) You will be in an ambitious frame of mind today. This has its advantages, provided that you don't establish an unrealistic agenda that proves to be more than you can handle. Trying to patch up a broken romance? CANCER (June 21-July 22) Occasionally we can win others over with generous treatment. Today, however, associates might see this as a sign of weakness and take advantage of you.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Disagreements between you and your mate should not be discussed in front of others today, especially relatives. Keep the clan out of your affairs.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) It might be best not to ask others to do things for you that you can manage yourself. Dependency and manipulation could ruin your image.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) There is a strong streak of extravagance in you today. Keep this in mind if you go where credit cards receive a warm welcome from merchants.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Try not to be ambivalent when managing youngsters today. They won't know how to react if you're loving them one moment and being harsh the next.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Any gossip told to you by a friend today should be taken with a grain of salt. His or her tale and the real truth could vary considerably.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) A close friend who often spends beyond his or her means might be looking to you today to help make up the deficit. Stay out of arm's reach.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Let the real you come out today instead of behaving in a manner you hope will impress others. Unfortunately, affectations won't work at this time.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) There is a possibility your evaluations might be distorted by unwarranted optimism today. Continue to have high expectations, but remain logical.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) It could stir up resentment today if you attempt to pry into a private matter a friend is trying to keep secret. Keep your curiosity in check.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You might be tempted to make an identical promise to two valued companions today. Trouble could come later when you cross lines, hoping to deliver.

FOOTBALL

CHILDRESS—Shallowater quarterback Shaun Cody's 8-yard pass to C.J. Kubacek of Hereford was the only touchdown of the game as the South defeated the North, 7-0, Saturday night in the 48th annual Greenbelt Bowl.

There was 5:48 remaining in the first half when Cody and Kubacek hooked up for the score. Chris Morgan kicked the extra point.

BASEBALL

AMARILLO — The Lubbock Crickets edged the Amarillo Dillas, 8-7, in a Texas-Louisiana League game Sunday at Memorial Stadium.

Tim Howard and Jeff Cook led the Dillas with two hits each.

Lubbock is 11-12 for the season while Amarillo is 14-9.

AUTO RACING

BROOKLYN, Mich. (AP) — They were all in this thrilling chase for a while, the old suspects racing nose-to-tail like old times.

"Awesome" Bill Elliott was awesome again, and Dale Earnhardt was intimidating as ever.

In the end, Ernie Irvan fought off all the former champions and the haunting reminders of his near-fatal crash to win the Miller 400 Sunday.

"The thoughts of what's happened at this race track were going through my mind," said Irvan, who was left in a coma with massive head injuries after the 1994 crash at Michigan Speedway. "It's probably not the best thing to do, because I was getting a little teary-eyed. It's pretty hard to drive a race car with tears in your eyes."

Dizzied by the second turn, where tragedy had struck, Irvan gripped the wheel and willed himself to hold on.

"The last five laps, my mind was going in all kind of circles," Irvan said. "I kept going through turn two and was like, 'Man, this is where the wreck happened.'"

Irvan, who underwent 14 months of grueling rehabilitation to get back behind the wheel, has no recollection of the crash. Instead, on the way to victory, he was left only with a mysterious feeling that danger lurked here.

"I don't remember anything from that day," Irvan said. "There's no TV footage of the wreck, and I'm glad. I think I'm better off not knowing."

Irvan, Elliott, Mark Martin and Ted Musgrave pulled away in a phalanx of Fords during the final half of the race. With 37 laps to go, Irvan charged past Elliott, the 1988 Winston Cup champion, in a bold move that evoked memories of the "Swervin' Irvan" of old.

On the two-mile, high-banked oval where fuel mileage is usually decisive, the leaders started entering the pits with about 25 laps left.

Musgrave, seeking his first Winston Cup victory, took gas only on the last stop, while Irvan took gas and tires. When it was all sorted out, Irvan was in front with 20 laps to go and never lost the lead.

"That last pit stop was a phenomenal thing," Irvan said.

Elliott, who held a five-second lead nearing the halfway point in a bid to recapture his own past glory, was second, nearly three seconds back, for his best finish since his April 1996 crash at Talladega.

Martin was third and Musgrave completed Ford's sweep of the top four spots.

Jeff Gordon, forced to start at the rear of the field in a backup car due to a crash in practice Saturday, moved all the way up to fifth. Polesitter Dale Jarrett, Irvan's Robert Yates Racing teammate, was sixth.

In an outstanding race with 26 lead changes, Gordon and seven-time Winston Cup champion Dale Earnhardt provided some of the best battles — but not for the lead.

Els wins second U.S. Open championship

BETHESDA, Md. (AP) — The cast of characters was the same, and so was the outcome — shock for Tom Lehman, tears for Colin Montgomerie and another U.S. Open championship for Ernie Els.

Just when it seemed that Lehman would have something to show for taking a lead into the final round of the U.S. Open, the shot that sets up perfectly suddenly becomes too far left.

Just when Montgomerie seems poised to break through with his first major at the tournament that suits his game to a tee, a crucial putt slides over the lip of the cup.

And just like that, the world gets a reminder that greatness comes in all sorts of stripes.

Els, the 27-year-old South African with a rhythmic swing and a knack for rising to the occasion, won his second U.S. Open in four years that ended talk of Tiger Woods winning the Grand Slam.

Els shot a 1-under-par 69 at Congressional Country Club under intense pressure brought on by four players — all of them in the last two groups — jockeying for the lead over the final 12 holes.

His 4-under 276 was one stroke better than Montgomerie, whose chances perished when his 5-foot par putt on No. 17 grazed the ridge edge of the hole. Lehman, with bogeys on the 16th and 17th hole, was another stroke back. Jeff Maggert shot a 40 on the back and finished at 1-over 281.

Els becomes the first foreign player to win the U.S. Open twice, and he is the youngest player on the PGA Tour with two major championships.

"You're going to a different class now," Els said. "A lot of guys have won one major. I've won two now. And I'm sure Tiger will probably win a couple before he's 25 still. But at least I've got two now, and I'm looking for more."

Montgomerie is still looking for his first. The Scotsman lost to Els in a three-way playoff at the 1994 U.S. Open in Oakmont, two years after finishing third behind Tom Kite at Pebble Beach in 1992.

"It's getting me down now, this major business," Montgomerie said after a 69. "The more I'm in contention in these majors, there will be a little bit more pressure. But if I knock on the door enough, as I seem to be doing, especially in this tournament, the door will open one day."

Montgomerie also lost in a playoff to Steve Elkington at the 1995 PGA Championship with birdies on the last three holes of regulation, but the one in the playoff refusing to fall.

Lehman seems to be around the leaderboard in just about every major these days. Sunday was the sixth time he had played in the final pairing of a major championship since the 1993 Masters.

And he has led or shared the lead going into the final round of the U.S. Open. The closest he came to winning was last year at Oakland Hills. Needing a par on the last hole, his drive took an extra bounce left and wound up in a bunker, leaving him no shot to the green. He finished second by one stroke behind Steve Jones.

"Losing three years in a row," he said, pausing to consider the possibilities. "This is probably the toughest one. I really felt like I had everything going my way."

Woods never got anything going. He bogeyed three straight holes on the front and wound up with a 72 for 286, 10 strokes back but still in the top 20.

Els has finished 12th or better in 11 major championships, and he got into contention Sunday by making three birdies on five holes to complete the storm-suspended third round.

Lehman was 5-under through three rounds, two strokes ahead of Els and Jeff Maggert and three up on Montgomerie. But he bogeyed No. 3 from the rough and No. 4 from the rough collar around the green.

"I saw Tom make a bogey on 3, and I knew the game was on," Els said. "I was in the same position as Tom a couple of years ago. I had a two-shot lead going into the final round, playing in the final group."

DALLAS (AP) — Damian Alvarez had an assist in the 48th minute and scored the go-ahead goal in the 62nd minute Sunday as the Dallas Burn beat the New York/New Jersey MetroStars 3-1 in Major League Soccer.

Alvarez sent a corner kick into the box for Dante Washington to break a scoreless tie.

The MetroStars' Miles Joseph tied the game 1-1 six minutes later with his first goal of the season.

Alvarez's goal, on a left-footer, came off Daniel Peinado's free kick into the box from 23 yards out. Alvarez chested the ball down on the run before shooting from 6 yards out.

Jason Kreis wrapped up the scoring for Dallas (8-6) with a penalty kick in the 74th minute.

The MetroStars fell to 5-9.

Softball action

First baseman Alfred Medrano of Texas Northwest Railroad Company of Dumas reaches down to make a catch during the Coors Light Silver Bullet Shoot Out over the weekend at Recreation Park. Much of the tournament was rained out and has been rescheduled for Saturday. There are six teams in the mixed division and 12 teams in the men's division who were unable to complete their games.

A lesson learned

BETHESDA, Md. (AP) — By the end of the week, Tiger Woods sounded like any other 21-year-old who tried his luck at winning the U.S. Open.

"I learned a lot. I made some mental mistakes out there that I will rectify so I'll never make them again," said Woods, who began the tournament as the favorite and finished as merely one of many golfers humbled by the imposing 7,213-yard Congressional Country Club.

Woods shot a 2-over par 72 Sunday and finished in a 19th-place tie at 6-over 286. He broke par on only one of the four days and never really threatened to win his second straight major tournament and keep his Grand Slam hopes alive.

Woods didn't have his A-game on a course that demands nothing less.

"I didn't press at all because I knew my game wasn't quite there," he said. "I wasn't hitting the ball as well as I would have liked, so I couldn't attack."

His putting was awful, too. Any remote chance he might have had to stage a run Sunday faded when he made three straight bogeys.

Holmes Sporting Goods hold off Cree Oil

By MATT HUTCHISON
Sports Writer

PAMPA — Holmes defeated Cree Oil Friday night by a score of 7 to 3 to remain unbeaten so far in the 1997 Babe Ruth season. Cree, standing steady in second place, looked to hand the league leaders their first loss of the season but fell just short in the full seven inning contest.

The game remained scoreless throughout the first two full innings of play. Holmes pitcher Greg Lindsey allowed only one hit during the span, a single to Cree first baseman Travis Lancaster.

He also struck out four and walked one.

Cree pitcher Kaleb Snelgrooes struck out one and allowed two hits, a single to Lindsey and a double to catcher Kyle McCullough.

In the top of the third Holmes offense broke the deadlock, posting five runs in their half of the inning.

Jeremy Hall got the inning started by reaching safely on an error, and later stole second base.

Casey Owens followed Hall to the plate and drove in the runner with an RBI single. Greg Lindsey advanced the runner with a single, and Matt Driscoll followed with a walk to load the bases. McCullough followed Driscoll to the plate and made good on a Snelgrooes pitch, driving in a runner with the single and advancing to second on the impending overthrow while Lindsey rounded third and headed for home plate to score the second run of the inning. Driscoll, who ended up on third after Lindsey scored, eventually crossed home plate on an error. Shawn Strate drove in the final Holmes run of the inning with a fielder's choice that scored McCullough.

Cree was unable to answer with any runs in the bottom of the third, but after a pitching change to Russell Robben and a scoreless top of the fourth for Holmes, Cree scored some much needed runs in the bottom of the fourth.

Cree took advantage of sloppy defensive plays by Holmes to score two runs in their half of the inning. Lancaster drew a base on balls, and catcher Justin Barnes followed with another walk. a wild pitch advanced both runners, Lancaster moved to third while Barnes advanced to second. A following wild pitch scored Lancaster, and on the ensuing overthrow to the pitcher, Barnes sprinted home for Cree's second run of the game.

Holmes added their final two runs of the contest in the top of the fifth inning. Josh Larkin led the inning off with a walk, and later alertly stole second. Strate advanced the runner with a single and eventually both runners scored on errors, with Strate sprinting home on an error by the catcher.

A pitching change to Justin Barnes in the sixth by Cree kept Holmes from scoring and more runs, and Cree added their final run in the bottom of the sixth.

Barnes drew a base on balls and slowly stole his way around the bases to eventually score on yet another wild pitch by a Holmes pitcher.

Holmes remains atop the Babe Ruth standings undefeated, while the loss forces Cree into a tie with Triangle for second place.

Witt ends three-game losing streak as Rangers down Padres

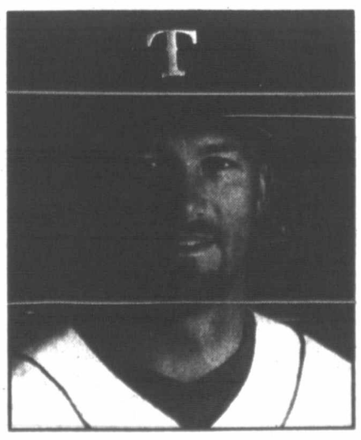

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Bobby Witt almost didn't get a chance to end his three-game losing streak.

Texas Rangers manager Johnny Oates considered pulling the right-hander before the fifth inning Sunday, even though he was leading the San Diego Padres by one. Oates had decided if anyone got a hit, Witt would be gone.

Although Tony Gwynn led off by reaching on an error, Oates gave Witt another chance. Witt didn't allow Gwynn or anyone else past first for the next three innings and Texas held on for a 7-4 victory.

The Rangers ended their first weekend of interleague play going 3-1, while the Padres went 1-3. Texas has its first three-game winning streak since taking four straight May 9-12.

Both teams are off today for the last time until the All-Star break.

Bobby Witt

Witt (8-3) won for the first time since May 20, giving up eight hits and four runs, only two earned, in seven innings. He struck out five and walked one.

"I got the ball up early a little bit," said Witt, who gave up all his runs in the third and fourth innings. "In about the fourth inning, I started to get command of my stuff."

Padres starter Andy Ashby (2-3) also struggled, but it was his first start since going on the disabled list May 20 with a strained right elbow.

He gave up seven runs, six earned, and 10 hits in five innings. It was the first time he went more than one inning since May 11.

"It's frustrating," said Ashby, adding poor location — not pain — was his biggest problem. "I was glad to at least get into the sixth, but I wish I would've kept it closer. I was hyped up because I hadn't been out there in awhile. I need to get sharper."

Every Texas starter but Ivan Rodriguez had at least one hit and Rodriguez still managed to drive in a run. The most productive players were No. 8 hitter Damon Buford (3-for-4), No. 9 Bill Ripken (2-for-4) and No. 1 Mark McLemore (2-for-3).

But the hottest Ranger of all is Rusty Greer, who went 1-for-3 and was hit by a pitch, making him 9-for-12 against NL pitching with two doubles, two homers and four walks.

"We knew he was hot, we just couldn't get him out," said San Diego manager Bruce Bochy.

Greer struck out after a long at-bat in the first inning to end a streak of getting on base in nine straight plate appearances, but he's reached base in 17 of his last 20 tries since Wednesday.

Texas closer John Wetteland also is on a roll. He pitched the ninth for his 15th save Sunday, picked up No. 14 in Saturday night's 8-6 victory over the Padres and was the winner Friday night when Greer's ninth-inning homer gave Texas a 6-5 victory over San Francisco.

"These wins are a product of a lot of guys clicking at the right time," Wetteland said. "It's good to see everybody playing well, together."

Notes: Don't expect to see Tony Gwynn playing designated hitter too often. He did it Sunday and didn't like it, despite going 1-for-4. and tying Max Carey for 53rd on the all-time hit list with 2,665. "From my personal perspective, I don't see how anybody could do that." ... Quilvio Veras had three hits Sunday, making him 8-for-14 in interleague play. ... Will Clark ended a 13-game drought without an RBI in the third inning. ... Rickey Henderson has hit safely in 11 of his last 12 games and is 6-for-18 in interleague play. ... The first-ever regular-season meeting between the previous season's MVPs didn't live up to the hype. Texas' Juan Gonzalez was 1-for-8 over the two games and San Diego's Ken Caminiti went 0-for-4, playing only on Saturday.

Hit or error? Score it a standup triple for interleague play

By BEN WALKER
AP Baseball Writer

This interleague stuff is kind of fun, isn't it?

That little scene between Albert Belle, Marge Schott and her dog in Cincinnati. Those fans playfully booing Joe Carter in Philadelphia, then giving him a standing ovation. The sight of Dwight Gooden pitching to nephew Gary Sheffield.

All because of interleague play. And all without ruining the game or its century-old tradition a single bit.

So what if the Orioles swept the Braves? If they see each other in the World Series, it won't be wrecked — their three-day set in June will merely set up what might happen in October.

Honestly, were the NBA Finals diminished because the Jazz and Bulls met during the regular season?

Instead, we saw neat matchups, like Mark McGwire vs. Hideo Nomo and Andres Galarraga vs. Randy Johnson.

Tonight, it gets even better. The Subway Series returns to New York, where Yankee Stadium is sold out for all three games against the Mets, and the White Sox and Cubs meet in a meaningful game in Chicago for the first time since 1906.

And in a sport that prides itself on its past, we talked about memorable moments — seeing Mookie Wilson coaching first base for the Mets against Boston brought back visions of that grounder to Bill Buckner in '86.

Most of all, interleague play works because it's still baseball.

This is not the DH, which changed how the game was played and created a huge split that still exists. Nor is it the wild card, which allowed second-place teams to make the playoffs.

Instead, this is even more interesting than expected — no matter how much traditionalists insist on turning up their noses and turning off their TV sets.

Fans seemed to like it. Several ballparks had their biggest crowds of the season this weekend. OK, not every game was a winner, but is anyone clamoring for Milwaukee vs. Minnesota in September?

Did this weekend prove anything about who's better? Of course not. Instead, the AL's early 27-19 edge just gives fans something more to talk about.

AL pitchers, however, proved they would not embarrass themselves at the plate. They wound up with eight hits on this first weekend of interleague play, compared to the seven hits by NL pitchers.

Over and over, there was this attraction — the differences between the AL and NL were highlighted.

In Texas, Darryl Hamilton led off the first game Thursday night with a single and San Francisco's next batter bluffed a bunt. That's how they do it in the NL.

In Seattle, the Dodgers scored on a suicide-squeeze bunt by Brett Butler, not exactly an AL play.

"That must be a dinosaur," Mariners manager Lou Piniella said.

Critics claim interleague play will eventually rob the leagues of their styles. Then again, more than a quarter-century after Joe Namath led the New York Jets over the Baltimore Colts, no one confuses the NFC and AFC teams in the Super Bowl.

Helpful Boy Scouts

(Special Photo)

Boy Scout Pack 407 set out marigolds and and other colorful blossoms in the flower boxes around St. Vincent De Paul Church this past week. Webelos Cub Scouts Tim McEwen Jr., Ben Ponce, Kevin Brown and Wolf Cub Scout Brandon Smith took time to give something back to the church, which has provided them with a meeting place and so many opportunities to practice the ideas of scouting.

Liberal activist involvement in Teamsters election imbroglio dims reformer's luster

By KEVIN GALVIN
Associated Press Writer

Michael Ansara was featured in his hometown newspaper last year as a successful liberal activist, a businessman with a conscience. When he reappeared in the news recently, the aura around him had dimmed.

Ansara agreed to plead guilty in a conspiracy to funnel illegal contributions to Teamster President Ron Carey's re-election campaign, laying out a scheme that implicated a group he helped found, Citizen Action.

It was a painful moment for Ansara, who apologized for violating "the principles that have guided me." For the liberal activist group, it was the latest in a string of problems that have bewildered its supporters.

"It's certainly alarming to us to see Citizen Action's name, which is also our name, involved in some way in this," said Sandy Buchanan, head of Ohio Citizen Action, which split from the national group. Buchanan said internal controls were lacking at Washington headquarters. "There was a lot of money floating around."

It has been a tough six months for Citizens Action. Like Buchanan's group, the Indiana affiliate broke away from the federation in January, charging that the national organization had accepted money from tobacco and utility interests.

Oregon officials charged that a state Citizen Action affiliate violated the law in selling credit card insurance over the telephone.

Another founder of the national group resigned from the Illinois affiliate after the FBI began investigating whether its $1 million overdraft was part of a check-kiting scheme.

"The organization is still a strong organization," asserted Ed Rothschild, spokesman for Citizen Action, which claims two million members and operations in 30 states.

Rothschild said Citizen Action was cooperating with federal investigators probing the Teamsters election. He denied the group had softened its positions on utility deregulation after receiving questionable contributions.

"We have gotten no money from the nuclear industry, we've gotten no money from the tobacco industry," he said.

Still, some wonder how a group which tried to set such a high moral standard got mixed up in any of this.

Liberal groups in five states – Massachusetts, Oregon, Ohio, Connecticut and Illinois – came together to form Citizen Action in 1979. The founders' roots were in the antiwar and civil rights movements of the 1960s.

Ansara was a student organizer at Harvard before founding Mass Fair Share, which was a national model for grass-roots organizing. Ira Arlook, who now leads Citizen Action's national organization, was a veteran of consumer battles with utilities in Ohio. Robert Creamer was known as an astute political strategist in Illinois.

"For me, they were like THE generation of activists," said Chris Williams, head of Citizen Action in Indiana, who attended the national group's founding convention in Chicago. "They were the leaders."

By coming together, the groups hoped to share organizing strategies and information on common foes. Door-to-door canvassing was a key fund-raising and recruiting tool.
