Governor Yields On Interest

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements today backed a proposal for a "floating" interest rate ceiling on home mortgages not to exceed 12 percent.

Clements reversed his earlier position of two weeks ago, when he vowed to veto any bill raising the state's 10 percent limit to 12 percent.

"I can assure you that without Fannie Mae's action I would not have changed my position," the governor told a news conference.

The Federal National Mortgage Association, nicknamed Fannie Mae, said last week it no longer would purchase VA or FHA mortgage loans in Texas if buyers were charged the traditional "points" or special processing fees that exceeded the 10 percent usury limit.

Clements said he had reviewed Sen. Bill Meier's draft proposal of a floating interest rate and added it meets his requirements.

Meier, D-Euless, and Rep. Jerry Donaldson, D-Gatesville, sponsored the original bill for a 12 percent interest cap that Clements blocked two weeks ago. Both legislators were present at Clements' news conference.

The floating rate, the governor explained, would be tied to some federal monetary index rate.

"I believe the 10-year Treasury bond rate is the proper rate," Clements said. "There would be a fixed percentage on top of that and I am suggesting 2 percent."

He added that today the 10-year bond rate is 9.31 percent. If the floating rate were operating today, the cap would be 11.31, Clements said.

However, the actual market selling rate is 10.55 percent, he continued.

"In my opinion, if we were operating under that today, the rate would be slightly less than 10.55 on mortgages," said Clements, who said he had reviewed reams of material on the subject.

Attorney General Mark White informally has decided that a floating interest rate tied to a definite cap would meet constitutional requirements for a usury limit, the governor added.

Although switching positions on a higher interest limit, Clements reiterated that increased interest rates are bad for the public and inflationary.

"There is no question that the public out there, the Texas public, does not want higher interest rates on their mortgages," he said. "That is just like saying, 'Give me a bad case of poison ivy.'"

He blamed the Carter Administration in part and questioned the timing of Fannie Mae's announcement.

"It's certainly a coincidence that all this is taking place here within two or three weeks," he said. "It is a rather strange coincidence, but the situation does exist and I have no other choice."

Clements denied trying to "play safe" by letting Fannie Mae force him into a position on higher rates.

The federal government should come out against increased interest rates, he urged. However, Treasury Secretary Michael Blumenthal does not believe higher interest rates are inflationary, the governor said.

"He is certainly working for and under the control of Mr. Carter," Clements said when asked if the president was trying to force increase interest rates in Texas.

"Fannie Mae is a federal entity of sorts. He (Carter) appoints five directors. And the VA and FHA programs are federal programs," he added.

Ex-Forger Aids Fight On Crime

By JEFF McCASLIN
Avalanche-Journal Staff

The well-dressed, honest-looking young man doesn't appear to be a former inmate in a federal prison who was once known as the "Great Impostor."

In fact, his good looks and sharp wit could allow him to pass for any professional member of society. And he has.

His name is Frank Abagnale Jr. and he has masqueraded as an airline pilot, pediatrician, lawyer and professor while junketing around the world passing forged checks.

Abagnale was the guest speaker this morning at the Business Crimes Symposium in the Lubbock Memorial Civic Center.

His underworld career as con artist and master forger began at the tender age of 16, when he successfully planted himself in the airline industry as an accomplished commercial pilot.

Undaunted, he traveled throughout the world for four years, using false identification to pass worthless checks, then moving on to another place to do it all over again.

At the age of 19, Abagnale passed the bar exam in Louisiana without having attended one day of law school classes.

At 20, he walked into a large Eastern university and began teaching courses as a professor of sociology. He never earned a degree.

By passing as a lawyer from a reputable firm in Houston, he was able to obtain a birth certificate which he used to get bogus identification, and proceeded on a 72-hour spree which netted him $100,000 in cash and merchandise.

Undetected for more than four years, Abagnale was labeled the "Great Impostor" by one New York newspaper in the 1960s. The New York Times called him "this century's greatest con artist."

He was finally apprehended in a small southern French village by several Inter-

Funnels Menace Northern Texas

A-J News Services

A thick line of violent thunderstorms swept across North Central Texas today, producing dozens of twisters and funnel clouds but little damage. Heavy rains, however, collapsed part of the roof of a west Dallas hotel, injuring two persons.

The violent storm that struck Dallas about 11 a.m. pounded the city with more than an hour of rain and hail. Air raid sirens wailed throughout much of the morning hours as funnel clouds were sighted moving menacingly across the city.

Two people were injured at the LeBaron Hotel in western Dallas when a section of roof collapsed during the height of the storm. Witnesses said a large accumulation of water above the hotel's coffee shop apparently caused the collapse.

The victims were rushed to a nearby hospital in indeterminate condition.

Another tornado was reported to have touched down in a residential area just south of Dallas' downtown area. But police surveyed the area and reported no damage.

Heavy rains turned some city streets and freeways into hub-deep rivers and forced many drivers to the roadway shoulders to wait out the storm's passage. The National Weather Service said the rain fell at the rate of 3 inches an hour.

Tornadoes were sighted in Tarrant County west of Fort Worth and in Ellis County, south of Dallas, but none of the storms produced more damage than a few toppled trees and uprooted fences.

However, much of the North Central Texas area remained under a tornado alert and forecasters said the storms would persist throughout the afternoon as the storm system moved southward.

The violent storms were the product of a cold front that returned snow to the Colorado Rockies Wednesday. The front moved deep into Texas, dropping temperatures and stirring up widespread precipitation.

The threat of heavy rains forced the National Weather Service to issue flash flood warnings from the Edwards Plateau in southwest Texas to the Louisiana border.

"The cold front is pushing southward into an area of moist, unstable air which has been feeding northward out of the Gulf of Mexico," an NWS spokesman said. "An upper level storm is moving out of the southern Rockies to provide the trigger mechanism for the onset of widespread precipitation and locally heavy thunderstorms."

Behind the front, temperatures dropped into the lower 30s. Temperature readings ahead of the cold air were mostly in the 70s.

The front brought an unseasonable chill to Northwest Texas, along with showers and thunderstorms. Sleet fell this morning at Dalhart, in the Texas Panhandle, and the mercury dropped into the 30s in the region.

Just before noon, most of the severe weather had moved to the east of the South Plains. Severe thunderstorms roamed Fisher, Stonewall, Haskell and Shackelford counties at mid-day.

Showers and thunderstorms are expected to continue in the Lubbock area, as cold air and a new upper level disturbance continues to blend with moist, warm Gulf air over much of West and North Texas.

Forecasters list a 50 percent chance for rain today and tonight.

The cold front, part of a larger system sweeping out of the southern Rockies, at noon stretched from Pecos to just south of Abilene to near Sherman, in North Central Texas. It will push to the Gulf Coast by Friday morning.

At noon today, showers and thunderstorms covered practically the entire

Gas, Oil Top Price Surge

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sharply higher prices for gasoline and heating oil helped push wholesale prices up 0.9 percent in April, despite the first decline in food prices in eight months, the government said today.

Although the increase in wholesale prices was the lowest in five months, it still showed inflation continuing at above 10 percent at the wholesale level. The April increase represents a compound annual rate of 11.5 percent. Prices had increased 1 percent in March and in February.

Food prices at the wholesale level declined 0.3 percent, the first drop since last August and an indication that the upward spiral in supermarket prices may be about over. Wholesale prices eventually are reflected in the prices consumers pay.

But the Labor Department said prices of goods other than foods increased 1.3 percent in April, the biggest monthly increase since October 1974.

The department said gasoline prices increased 4.4 percent and home heating-oil prices were up 6.7 percent.

The rise in gasoline and heating oil prices reflects a partial shortage of petroleum products resulting from the cutback in Iranian oil production.

President Carter's proposal to decontrol domestic oil prices is certain to push fuel costs even higher in months ahead.

The wholesale price changes were reported in the Labor Department's Producer Price Index for finished goods — those which are ready for sale to the consumer.

The department said the index in April stood at 211.2 percent of the 1967 average of 100, meaning that goods priced at $100 then had increased in price to $211.20 last month.

Wholesale prices had increased 10.3 percent in the 12-month period ending in April.

The increase in prices for goods other than food showed that the nation will continue to have serious problems with inflation even after the upward spiral in food prices eases.

However, administrstion officials expect inflation will begin to ease at all levels by summer and continue to improve during the rest of the year.

April's 0.3 percent decline in food prices at the wholesale level followed four consecutive months in which those prices had advanced at more than one percent.

The department said there were lower prices for pork, coffee, fresh vegetables and poultry.

Wholesale price changes are included in the Producer Price Index, which reports prices at three levels: the wholesale — or finished goods — level, when goods are ready for sale to the final user; the intermediate level, where they have received some processing; and the crude level, where goods have not yet received any processing.

The department said prices at the intermediate level were up 1.5 percent.

Dallas Drafts Vols' Center

Dallas grabbed a center and Houston traded away its choice in the first round of the pro grid draft today, as four Southwest Conference stars were selected by other NFL clubs.

The Cowboys, picking in the 27th spot, took Tennessee center Robert Shaw, 6-4 and 230, who was All-Southeast Conference.

Houston gave its first-round spot to Kansas City in return for the Chiefs' second-round choices this year and in 1980.

New Orleans took Texas kicker Russell Erxleben, Cleveland picked Houston wide receiver Willis Adams, Chicago drafted Arkansas tackle Dan Hampton and the Pittsburgh Steelers nabbed Baylor running back Greg Hawthorne.

Most Strikers Back On Job

By LISA PAIKOWSKI
Avalanche-Journal Staff

All but about 15 picketers from a striking laborers union local were back on the job today, a spokesman for city building contractors affected by the strike said this morning.

H.R. Bundock said, however, that he could not confirm reports that Laborers Union International had formally ended the month-long work stoppage at about 20 area building sites. Union spokesmen were not available for comment.

Several contractors reported that pickets were down at their constructions sites on Wednesday also.

However, about 15 union members chose not to return to work and gathered to continue picketing the Lubbock County Jail construction site.

Though reports circulated this morning that the strikers at that site were abusive and offensive toward the public, the men denied that there was any trouble.

"We're just trying to get our jobs back from the contractors. We're not here to fight anybody," said striker Alex Olbera, who had worked for Smith and Sweet Masonry before the pickets went up on April 2. He said there would be no point in abusing the public because "the public is our only support."

L.C. Burt of Burt Masonry also said that the picketers were causing no trouble. He said he visited the site this morning and the men were "just hollering and carrying on" telling people who crossed the picket lines not to go back to work.

According to Bundock, who also visited the construction site, only about three of the men there were actually picketing

Honesty Still Found Here

When you think you've lost your house payment and a bank deposit, you tend to get a little edgy, but sometimes — even with all the "meanness" in the world today, things just all work out.

At least that's what Sandy Tewes of 5429 54th St. discovered recently when she experienced the panic of realizing those precious slips of paper were missing, and the pleasure — some two weeks later — of knowing someone took the trouble to send them to their intended destinations.

"I couldn't get over it when I found out someone had gone to all that trouble," said Mrs. Tewes, who reported she probably lost the articles at Albertson's, where she had gone to pick up some diapers for her infant son.

"I wish whoever found the checks would come out of the woodwork, I'd love to thank them personally," she said.

Dustin Hoffman Sues Hotel

NEW YORK (AP) — Actor Dustin Hoffman has filed a negligence suit against a West Indies hotel for injuries he claims he received from a defective electric light switch.

HOFFMAN

Hoffman, a Manhattan resident, said he received a severe electric shock when he turned off a light switch in his room at the La Samanna on Jan. 7. The hotel is located on the island of St. Martin.

The actor asked the U.S. District Court in Manhattan on Wednesday to award him a "reasonable amount" of monetary damages, claiming the hotel was responsible for negligent maintenance.

Butz Raps 'Beefless Wednesday' Idea

IOLA, Kan. (AP) — Former Secretary of Agriculture Earl Butz has criticized a proposal for a "beefless Wednesday," saying the cost of gasoline has increased more than the cost of beef.

BUTZ

"I haven't seen anyone calling for a gasoline-less Wednesday," Butz told a news conference in this southeast Kansas town Wednesday.

He also said the United States should do more to develop markets abroad for its beef, saying Japan especially should be an excellent market for good cuts of beef.

On another import-export problem, Butz said the United States should sell its wheat abroad for whatever it will bring.

"We have announced we aren't going to sell wheat below a certain price and other countries sell their wheat just under that," he said.

Jury Declares Singer Innocent

HACKENSACK, N.J. (AP) — Soul singer Wilson Pickett Jr. has been acquitted of hitting a former band member with a 12-gauge shotgun.

The Bergen County jury deliberated 45 minutes Wednesday before finding Pickett, 38, innocent on a charge of assault with a dangerous weapon. He was charged with hitting Nathaniel Grant, 31, of New York City with a shotgun during a fight at Pickett's Englewood home March 25, 1978.

Authorities said Pickett and Grant were working on a song when the argument erupted. The state contended Pickett fired the weapon at Grant but missed.

"Mustang Sally" and "In the Midnight Hour" were two of Pickett's biggest hits in the late 1960s.

MIT, Harvard To Receive Large Gift

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — Massachusetts Institute of Technology and Harvard will be the co-recipients of an $11.5 million gift to launch a course of study in Islamic architectue.

Te Aga Khan, a graduate of Harvard in 1958 and the spiritual leader of 20 million Ismaili Moslems, issued a statement on Wednesday specifying that the money should be used "to conduct research on the contemporary problems and history of Islamic architecture and to acquaint architects and teachers with the relationships between architecture and the values and traditions of Islamic culture."

Liza Minnelli Target Of Suit

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — A suit has been filed against entertainer Liza Minnelli by the Riviera Hotel here on grounds she failed to live up to a multi-million dollar contract.

MISS MINNELLI

The action asks that Miss Minnelli be prevented from appearing at other resort hotels and seeks damages "in excess of $10,000."

The suit was filed in Clark County District Court and names Miss Minnelli and her agency, Flora Inc. It claims the singer had a contract to appear at the hotel for 24 weeks between Aug. 8, 1973, and Aug. 7, 1977, but alleges she appeared at the club for only 13 weeks during the four-year period.

The contract called for her to be paid $100,000 per week, the suit said.

Zubin Mehta's Contract Extended

NEW YORK (AP) — The New York Philharmonic Orchestra has added five years to Zubin Mehta's contract as conductor.

On Wednesday, one year after Mehta took over from Pierre Boulez, the orchestra said Mehta, originally hired for three years, will lead the orchestra through 1987.

Mehta, former leader of the Los Angeles Philharmonic, said the New York orchesta's "interest, concentration and willingness has been exhilarating to me."

The new season begins Sept. 13.

Silver Linings Replaced By Green

The Lighter Side Of Today's News

Richard C. Dunagan, owner of Aerolite Foam Co. of Fairland, says his firm is a distributor for a new kind of insulation made from shredded American currency that has been taken out of circulation.

The recycled money is treated with a fire-proof material. When glue is added, it can be sprayed onto walls and into attics, he explained.

Dunagan said the average home would require about 65 bags, or a total of about $1.3 million.

Carson To Continue As Host

BURBANK, Calif. (AP) — America's insomniacs can heave a sigh of relief — Johnny Carson says he's going to stay on the "Tonight Show." At least for a while.

"I love doing this show," Carson told a cheering "Tonight" audience that gave him a standing ovation Wednesday night.

"Originally, I had expressed an intent to leave after our 17th year, which would have been Oct. 1 of this year. I intend to stay past that time," he said.

Carson said he was staying "not because of any extreme pressure from NBC. I could make that decision (to leave), but I think I owe something to the show, and I think I owe something to NBC also."

"Besides," he added, "I would probably miss this show terribly and maybe regret walking away from it that quickly."

The 54-year-old Carson returned to "Tonight" after a two-week vacation, a period in which his reported intention to leave the program was a major topic of show business conversation. In patented Carson style, he milked the reports for laughs.

"I've made a new deal with NBC," he quipped. "I won't get a salary but (NBC president) Fred Silverman has agreed to keep my gas tank filled."

Carson denied reports that his relationship with Silverman was strained, saying their meetings always have been amicable.

Carson's request to leave the "Tonight Show" was a blow to NBC, badly beaten in the ratings race this season and not eager to lose its biggest star.

The "Tonight Show" is a big revenue earner for tne network, accounting for about 17 percent of NBC's before-tax profits last year.

After his show-opening monologue, Carson explained the situation.

"I had expressed the desire to NBC to finish the "Tonight Show" earlier than I had originally intended which is 1981 (Carson's current contract runs to the spring of 1981). They, of course, would not like me to leave. I have very ambivalent feelings."

Carson said he'd decided "it might be time to pack it in after 17 years, for a couple of reasons."

"I didn't want the show to become boring to the people. I didn't want to get bored with it and I wanted to work at a professional level that I take a certain amount of pride in. Nobody wants to 'dog' a show like this.

"The worst sin is to bore people."

Carson said he and the network are still in negotiations, but he did not say precisely how long he would continue as host of "Tonight."

It seems likely that a compromise will be reached and that Carson will stay with the show until spring of next year.

Rogers, Miss Mandrell Win Awards

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Kenny Rogers, the Oak Ridge Boys and Barbara Mandrell shared top honors as the Academy of Country Music awards went prime time with a star-studded telecast featuring more music than talk.

Rogers, who walked into the Hollywood Paladium with nominations in five categories, emerged with two prestigious prizes — the top male vocalist and entertainer of the year awards.

The silver-bearded singer's hit "The Gambler" already has won the country song of the year Grammy this year. But Rogers, who won four awards from the Academy last year, said the Country Music honors were the most gratifying.

The Oak Ridge Boys, who took away silvery cowboy hat trophies for top vocal group and whose "Ya'll Come Back Saloon" recording was album of the year, also came to country music through a side door — gospel. The Tennessee-based quartet has won four Grammys for their gospel recordings.

Miss Mandrell, who co-hosted the two-hour show with Roy Clark and Dennis Weaver, said her award for top female vocalist caught her completely by surprise.

Don Williams struck a casual note at the otherwise dressy affair, wearing a denim jacket as he accepted a "hat" for single record of the year — "Tulsa Time."

Christy Lane, whose recent string of hits include "I Just Can't Stay Married To You," and "Simple Little Words," was named top new female vocalist.

Top new male vocalist was John Conlee, who wore pink-tinged spectacles — a trademark since his song "Rose Colored Glasses" established him as a top draw.

Anne Murray, whose rendition of "You Needed Me" earned her a Grammy as top female vocalist, was not on hand as the same tune was named song of the year. But composer Randy Goodrum and publisher Bob Milsap collected the award for Miss Murray, who recently gave birth to a second child.

A special award was given to Eddie Dean, the singing cowboy of the 1940s and 1950s whose biggest hit was a 1948 tune, "One Has My Name, The Other Has My Heart."

Another special award went to televi-

THERE OUGHTA BE A LAW

by Whipple and Borth

Aspirin May Prevent Strokes

CHICAGO (UPI) — An aspirin-a-day may prevent heart attacks and strokes caused by plugged blood vessels, a Michael Reese Hospital researcher says.

Previous studies have shown daily aspirin doses can decrease the incidence of recurring heart attacks and strokes. But Dr. Ruth Pick's research, published in the Journal of Clinical Investigation, indicates daily doses may prevent such problems from occuring in the first place.

"It would be nice to be able to prevent heart attacks and strokes by taking an aspirin a day from childhood," the research scientist said. "But we are not there yet."

Her findings were based on a six-month experiment on 11 cynomolgus monkeys. All the monkeys were fed a high-cholesterol diet, which usually causes accumulations, called plaques, to form on the inside wall of arteries. Five of the 11 monkeys were given an orange-flavored child's aspirin each day.

An examination six months later showed the coronary arteries in the hearts of those monkeys not given daily aspirin were about twice as narrow as those of the monkeys who were on the aspirin diet.

Miss Pick said the aspirin contains a substance which makes blood platelets slippery, preventing them from sticking to the vessel wall, to a plaque or to each other.

The plaque normally would attract more platelets to stick to it from circulating blood and result in a thrombus, which can grow and stop up the blood vessel. Then downstream tissues are starved of oxygen and nutrients and die. When the starved tissue is heart muscle, the result is a heart attack; when it is brain tissue, the result is a stroke.

Miss Pick also speculated that because of aspirin's ability to enlarge constricted blood vessels, cigarette smokers may be well advised to take the drug to reduce the possibility of heart problems.

She also plans research to determine the best daily dosage of aspirin. Platelets become slippery only when the correct amount of aspirin is taken.

She may also do experiments combining aspirin and persantine, a drug currently used after bypass surgery which she said might enhance the actions of aspirin.

Problems Add To Shuttle Cost

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The space agency says an accumulation of little problems is adding some $465 million to the cost of the space shuttle development this year and next, with the eventual four-year overrun possibly reaching $865 million.

In addition, National Aeronautics and Space Administrator Robert Frosch told a Senate subcommittee Tuesday that the maiden flight of the space shuttle Columbia probably will be delayed until sometime between January and March next year.

Despite the problems, however, Frosch said the shuttle's major difficulties have been resolved and the entire rocket plane system is sound and "well on the way" to meeting its objectives.

"Our confidence that the system will work and work well is growing daily," he said.

The shuttle, a reusable space machine, is the key to the nation's future in space. It will haul most of America's civilian and military satellites into orbit and can carry as many as seven men and women to and from orbit.

NASA already has requested an additional appropriation of $185 million for the current fiscal year. In addition, Frosch said NASA probably will need $80 million more this year and $200 million extra next year.

The money, he said, probably can come from funds allocated to produce additional shuttles and from an associated project no longer needed.

He said the agency also may need an extra $200 million or more each for fiscal 1981 and 1982 to keep the shuttle program on track.

The shuttle developmental effort was expected to cost $7.6 billion in current dollars, not including the new overruns. About $3 billion has been budgeted for this year and next for the program.

Frosch said NASA would need another six weeks to come up with an accurate date for the maiden orbital flight of the Columbia, and to have a better estimate nor the extra money required to keep the project on that schedule.

Sen. Adlai Stevenson, D-Ill., the subcommittee chairman, reminded Frosch that two months ago he told the panel that, barring major developmental problems, NASA would not need more than the $185 million previously requested.

"What has happened? I'm as concerned about NASA's ability to manage the system at this point as I am about the implications of increased funding," Stevenson said.

"It is simply an accumulation of things that we have finally been able to put together," Frosch replied.

TODAY'S EDITORIAL:

Another Alternate Voice

IN MAKING HIS quest for the Republican Presidential nomination official, George Bush staked out a moderate, middle-ground arena which he hopes will be (1) conservative enough to win the nomination and (2) progressive enough to win the general election.

As the second Texan to be a formally announced candidate for the GOP banner, Bush hopes to pick up strength from the Gerald Ford wing of the party while wooing away Ronald Reagan's less-committed followers.

Right now, former Gov. John Connally is getting rave notices everywhere he goes but Bush knows that the party pros are still suspicious of Connally's Democratic heritage and fearful that his close ties with the Nixon White House would haunt him.

BUSH HIMSELF finds that, in the hardball league of national politics, he will be forced to share with Connally unfair references to Watergate.

Even before he threw his hat officially into the ring, the national media was reminding everyone of Bush's stint as "head of the Republican Party during Watergate," neglecting to point out that Bush did not become party chairman until after the scandalous 1972 election was history.

It was Bush, in fact, who steered the party steadily through the storm of the subsequent media barrage and investigations to emerge in a strong position.

That feat, along with such equally challenging assignments as cleaning up the Central Intelligence Agency after it had been rocked with scandal, provides solid evidence of Bush's unusual abilities.

In fact, the thing that must be of greater concern to the Bush campaign strategists is the knowledge that their man has never won a major election.

A FORMER CONGRESSMAN, the one-time Midland oilman ran for the U.S. Senate in 1970 but lost. Happily for him, though, this ability to get elected can be tested in the party primaries.

A couple of good showings early in the game would establish Bush as a viable candidate.

"As a candidate for President," he said, "I am not promising a New Deal, a New Frontier, a Great Society or a New Foundation. But I do pledge a new candor."

That is what the average American has been saying he wanted after becoming alarmed over the mounting federal deficits and disillusioned over the results of 50 years of ever-expanding government.

Generation Of Diapers

FOR SHAME on the City of Lubbock, offering a mere $2.46 an hour for lifeguards at municipal pools.

In this affluent age, you can't expect a young man to sit around in the hot sun all day looking at pretty, scantily clad girls for such a paltry sum!

★

President Carter says that if food prices don't go down in the future, they'll probably go up. Next question: "Mr. President, have you been into Sen. Kennedy's 'baloney' again?"

★

I GUESS IT'S only to be expected that a generation which believes women should be paid to have babies would object to young men being drafted to protect them.

Hopefully, the anti-draft protesters represent only a small percentage of America's young people but that may be a tragically optimistic hope.

Since the late 1960s, an attitude has prevailed that society owes the good life to every young American, who owes nothing in return.

It is no coincidence, therefore, that the debate over the military draft has peaked in the same week that it has become the law of the land to treat pregnancy as a disability for purposes of collecting something for nothing.

IN THE NAME OF sexual equality, young women and men who get pregnant now have the "right" to draw pay while on maternity leave the same as if they'd fallen and broken their necks.

This refusal to recognize physiological differences as a fact of life under the law carries over into the debate over the military draft.

There, biology has less to do with it than the troublesome recognition that if women are going to get favored treatment under employe insurance programs then they will have to take equal responsibility for defending the homestead.

If men are to be drafted, the argument goes, then women must be drafted in equal numbers.

We thus have the prospect of female draftees spending basic training in the maternity ward and of calling a 15-minute truce on the front lines so they can breastfeed their babies ala the woman firefighter in the Midwest.

The reason that comes across as ludicrous instead of funny is that there's too large a grain of truth in it under today's "liberated" thinking.

THERE'S A GOOD CHANCE, of course, that neither young men nor young women will be drafted in time to save the country.

Congressmen are so intimidated by, and in sympathy with, the anti-draft protesters that the House Military Personnel subcommittee rejected, 5-4, a proposal to draft up to 200,000 men a year into the Army ready reserve.

It did vote, thank heaven, to recommend that registration for the draft be reincarnated after Dec. 31, 1980.

In the 20 months between now and then, the President would recommend whether women should have to sign up for the draft, too.

The danger in both the delay and the debate goes deeper than the nation's vulnerability to attack because of its state of unreadiness.

Kremlin leaders can read the mood of draft-age Americans, too, and they can clearly see in that mood an unwillingness to protect our shores from attack and our people from being conquered.

As our spending for defense systems is diverted more and more into social welfare programs, the Russians will gain a more impressive military superiority.

AT SOME POINT, they will be sorely tempted to conclude that they can reverse their embarrassment over being forced to pull their missiles out of Cuba in 1963.

They can give us the choice of nuclear destruction or of letting Russian troops march in and take over without firing a shot.

If they have misjudged the American mood, nuclear war at that point will be unavoidable. If they have judged correctly that Americans are mentally weak and unprepared for war, as the anti-draft demonstrations would indicate, then we will have become Red instead of Dead.

It's not a pretty prospect. But it's one that needs to be squarely faced by Americans whose brains are not so pickled by the heady euphoria of tingling "trips" to see reality rear its ugly head.

Holmes Alexander:

Bread Cast On Troubled Water

WASHINGTON—"Cast your bread upon the waters!" As every literate Judeo-Christian must know, this Mideast proverb promises that if you sow your grain seasonably and in good faith, the rising tide of the Nile will yield a bounteous crop of many times the original investment.

Does it ever happen in real life? Does trust in divine goodness pay off? The President, some leaders of Congress and some State Department fix-its are intrigued with an idea that should give us all cheer.

If we're lucky and forceful, we may get a Carter Plan under which West Germany, France, Japan and other countries with a stake in Mideast security will actually chip in to pay some of the Camp David costs.

Bread we cast on the troubled waters of the 1940s may conceivably rise up to be a harvest.

I ADMIT to being among the cynical ones back in the distant 40s when Mr. Truman's Sec. of State, Gen. George C. Marshall put forward the plan that bears his name.

To many of us, the idea of rebuilding Europe, having just rescued it at great cost in blood and treasure, not to mention our diplomatic independence, seemed quixotic in the extreme—and for many reasons.

For one, the U.S. under Franklin Roosevelt's New Deal had never recovered from the depression; we had shot ourselves out of that corner by putting the unemployed into uniform and turning our big industries into munitions-plants.

It insulted intelligence, I thought, to add European bad loans to those not yet paid from World War I, and to bankroll the recent enemies, West Germany and Japan, as our competitors in industry.

DISCERNABLE TO many of us, was the certainty that American troops would soon follow U.S. investment abroad.

Sure enough, hot behind the Marshall plan came the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO), inclusive of the Mediterranean mendicants, Greece, Turkey and Italy.

They made extra drain on our resources, and a trapdoor to let in the fascism and Communism which we were trying to exclude.

Despite all the hocus-pocus which has trapped the U.S. into Cold War, that we could have settled long ago without risk of nuclear exchange, and without submitting Europe to a 30-year occupation by the superpowers, the Carter Plan (if it earns that name) could neutralize the Middle East.

It could enormously increase the Gross National Product of the non-communist world. It could repay us in part for the Marshall Plan.

Earlier this April, the Carter Plan was given a sneak preview in a Pittsburgh speech by Alfred Atherton, our ambassador-at-large for Mideast affairs.

The address, as was seemingly the intent, drew little attention because Ambassador Atherton played it out piecemeal before his World Affairs Council audience.

The 18-page text, now before me, is mostly rhetoric on the virtues of peace, but Atherton talks broadly of the multi-billion dollar cost of implementing what was begun at Camp David.

Atherton gives it broad significance by linkage to UN security council resolution 242, "The basis of all peace efforts in the Middle East since 1967," he says.

Thus is the ground prepared for financial contributions from those nations which will prosper by Mideast stability. Strange as it seems, the U.S. may soon be passing the hat instead of holding the bag.

Ten Ways To Thwart Attack By A Mugger

(Second in a series)

I'VE BEEN mugged and had my purse yanked from my arm at one of New York City's fanciest corners: Park Avenue and 51st Street. One result is that I have tried to learn and obey the rules to reduce the chances that I again will be a victim.

And there are 10 valuable rules to protect you in what George King, chairman of Burns Intl. Security Services, Inc., calls "the age of the mugger, the criminal who turns a street robbery into a vicious act of violence."

(1) Where you walk. Always walk near the curb to avoid passing close to dark doorways. Don't take shortcuts—day or night—through alleys, backyards, empty buildings or parking lots. If you are in a dangerous neighborhood or fear you're being followed, walk down the center of the street if possible.

FAMILIARIZE YOURSELF with the areas you walk through frequently, and note which stores, restaurants or gas stations are open late at night. Run to the nearest one if a mugger approaches.

Walk on well-lighted, well-traveled streets, even if it makes your journey longer. Don't stray from the crowd in any public place and don't window-shop at night.

(2) Walking technique. Walk briskly, appear confident, and as though you know exactly where you are going. Don't walk slowly or appear distracted, or walk with your head stuck in a paper or book.

Watch the people who approach you, avoid being confronted. Move out onto the street or step into a store. When you walk at night take a companion or, even better, travel in a group.

(3) KEEP ALERT, make sure you're not being followed when you get off a bus or subway. Be very careful after leaving a bank or store where you've just cashed a check.

Don't be lured to unsafe places by strange sounds; hurry away and alert the police. Always carry enough change for carfare and an emergency phone call.

(4) Caution on subways. Wait for your train near the change booth, not way down platform. Never enter an empty subway car by yourself. Try to sit near a conductor or transit policeman.

(5) Danger in elevators. Be patient, wait for your car. Stairways are notorious hangouts for muggers. If you suspect someone in the car when the door opens, walk away.

DON'T ENTER an elevator with someone who doesn't get off when the car reaches the main floor. Stand by the control panel and, if attacked, hit the alarm and as many buttons as you can so the door will open at the nearest floor.

(6) Safety behind the wheel. In congested areas, drive with your doors locked and your windows raised so no one can reach in. If someone tries to break in at a red light, drive through the light and sound your horn. Always look in your car before getting in.

(7) If you're confronted with a weapon, don't provoke an attack. If only your money is at stake, King urges you to give it up. Keep calm; the robber may be easily excited if he is drunk or drugged.

(8) When to resist. If you are attacked, don't fight back unless you're convinced you have to fight for your life, a decision you must make instinctively.

What you decide will depend upon you personality, age, sex, physical condition, the size of your opponent, whether he is or is not armed. Don't turn a robbery into a fight for life.

(9) If you must fight. If a mugger attacks, despite your cooperation, your best defense, if possible, is to break away and run for safety. But if you must fight, go all the way.

Do anything to hurt the mugger. Attack him where he is most vulnerable—the groin, eyes, throat. Bite, scratch, kick and scream. There are no rules of etiquette in a street fight for your life.

(10) WEAPONS. LAW enforcement officers advise you not to rely on lethal weapons—guns and knives—to defend yourself. They're too easily taken away and used against you.

Other "weapons," however, may help. A police-type whistle or compressed air siren is good to have. A hat pin, ballpoint pen, key ring in the fist, nail file or umbrella also can hurt, shock and scare away a potential mugger—and perhaps save your life.

Hats Off To Shana Alexander

SAN FRANCISCO—Most of California, it is reliably reported, is just as normal as anywhere else, and doubtless this is so.

But California's great cities—San Francisco and Los Angeles—have not only a star quality but a super-star quality. Only super-stars can tackle them on equal terms.

I thought about this last week in flying around the West Coast. In my saddle bag was Shana Alexander's new book from Viking, "Anyone's Daughter." It tells the story of the trial of Patty Hearst.

This is a superlative work, the product of a super-star in our craft. I count it the finest court reporting since Rebecca West covered the Nuremberg trials.

THE HEARST case sprang from the very loins of San Francisco.

Something in the air, perhaps, breeds the flaky, far-out apostles of a hundred giddy obsessions. The sidewalks teem with bald bell-ringers in saffron robes.

Turn your wheels to the curb! First you go up; then you go down. It is the dizziest roller coaster ever devised.

Only San Francisco could have bred a Symbionese Liberation Army, a Black Guerrilla Family, the August 7 movement.

Out of this fertile culture came Hearst the old lord of San Simeon, Tania the brain-washed revolutionary, the whole cast of characters that summoned a gold rush of reporters to Patty's trial.

SHANA ALEXANDER was part of the journalistic swarm. When the story of the Hearst kidnapping first broke in 1974, she recognized it instantly as her story; Patty's subsequent trial for bank robbery was her trial.

"Anyone's Daughter" is Shana's book and Patty's book wrapped into one.

If there is a better writer-reporter at work in America today than Shana Alexander, I have not read his stuff.

Patty herself is "the pale face with the charcoal smudge eyes." Her five pink and perfectly enameled fingers "flutter like the frilly fin of a Siamese fighting fish."

Again, those fingers gesture rapidly "as if she were doing a newscast for the deaf." Patty pours water for her lawyers as primly as "a hostess at a sorority tea."

As the trial ends, the judge "reads his instructions so badly he seems to throw the law at the jurors like rice upon honeymooners."

This is not a sob sister's gushy defense of Patty Hearst. Shana began covering the trial with a pro-Patty prejudice. She cooled considerably as the case went on.

IN HER VIEW, Bailey made a botch of the defense: "This case needed empathy, and Mr. Bailey doesn't have much of that."

If the jurors could have heard evidence that had been ruled inadmissible, Patty might well have been acquitted; but "as the judge read them the law it is hard to see how they could have come up with any other verdict but guilty."

The Hearst trial cannot be ranked as "the" trial of the century. It lacked the echoing overtones of Sacco-Vanzetti, Scopes, and Alger Hiss.

As Shana herself acknowledges, "the Hearst case was an interesting story about a fundamentally uninteresting girl."

But out of the strands of wealth and sex and violence and fanaticism that tangled together in California, my friend Shana has woven a beautiful fabric of beautiful reporting.

DEREGULATION REQUESTED

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Association of Broadcasters is urging the Federal Communications Commission to deregulate small-market radio stations, saying fears are unfounded that deregulation would result in less public service. John A. Summers, NAB executive vice president, said it appears the FCC may try to exclude small-market radio stations from any deregulation plan for fear it would hurt public service programming. However, Summers said, FCC files show that small-market stations far exceed commission standards for non-entertainment programming.

Industry Can Find Historical Parallels

By ARNOLD SAWISLAK

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The energy industry might look to transportation for a historical parallel to the struggle now swirling around it.

Starting about the middle of the last century, transportation — first railroad and then automotive — was at the center of domestic economic and political conflict.

It began with government doing everything it could to aid the industry — immense land grants to the railroads for rights of way, billions of dollars to develop highways for motor vehicles.

The political price to the industry — not only for the favored position it occupied but for the abuses it permitted to grow — was increasing government regulation. Some observers claim this was one of the main factors in effectively destroying the once proud U.S. rail system and that it now threatens to cripple the automotive industry.

Whether it was government or the industry itself that got transportation into trouble, the fact is that the day of the imperious railroad baron and the swashbuckling auto magnate has passed. The rails have been described as the most regulated enterprise in the nation and the auto manufacturers are squirming under federal environmental, safety and energy conservation restrictions.

How did this happen? The Marxists claim it is in the nature of capitalism to dominate government. But they obviously are wrong; in countries where the ditchdigger's vote counts the same as the boss', private enterprise can and has been brought to heel when it offends public opinion.

Washington Window

That is what the owners and managers of the energy business ought to remember.

They may say they have operated without government largess, but plenty of people would contend the oil depletion allowance and other tax benefits are as valuable a subsidy as the gift of tend was to the railroads a century ago.

And right or wrong, the industry has become saddled with an image of greed projected by reports of huge profit increases and utility demands that its customers pay for company errors in operating nuclear power plants.

The answer that more profits are needed to pay for the search for more oil or to develop alternative energy sources probably has a hollow ring for the motorist or homeowner who has seen only fuel price increases for the last five years. The argument that ratepayers must bear the cost of nuclear accidents because it would bankrupt utilities to do so probably makes little sense to the small businessman who has no one but himself to pay for his mistakes.

Now fly air midwest direct to Wichita.

Quack Arthritis Devices

By LAWRENCE E. LAMB, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — Please read the enclosed articles and give me your opinion about whether these people really know something about arthritis or are just selling books. Do you know something about so-called night shades and will they really help?

DEAR READER — Regardless of what value the books described in the folder you sent me might have from a horticultural point of view, I don't believe that these will be of any help at all for arthritis.

The night shades as the folder mentioned include such diverse plants as potatoes, tomatoes and peppers, as well as eggplant. These foods do not cause arthritis.

Unfortunately, there are multiple quack devices to obtain money from sufferers of arthritis. I wish we had more effective means of protecting the public from misinformation but we don't. The presence of a free press makes it very difficult to do this and, of course, having a free press is an important and precious freedom for all of us.

Unfortunately, many good things in life, including freedom of the press, can be abused by people who are inclined to do so.

As a general rule, to people with arthritis I would say do not buy or subscribe to any treatment that's offered to you through the mail or by someone coming to your door. Don't buy devices or so-called magic medicine. Don't buy products that are advertised to cure your arthritis in public magazines.

Do consult your family doctor and if you have a severe problem with arthritis, see a rheumatoid specialist. We do not have any magic cures for arthritis yet but there are a lot of things which can be done to relieve the problem and enable a person to live more comfortably and remain functional.

Your doctor is the person who can help you obtain the best services that are available and meaningful.

I am returning your publication to you and I will send you The Health Letter number 4-10, Osteoarthritis: Degenerative Or Wear And Tear Arthritis. Other readers who want this issue can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Send your request to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

DEAR DR. LAMB — Would you please write something about Bell's palsy? What is the cause of it and is there any medication for it?

DEAR READER — Bell's palsy causes one side of the facial muscles to become paralyzed. Sometimes it's confused with a stroke but the doctor can usually clear up that concern. There are changes in the nerves to the facial muscles. To avoid marked changes, early treatment is important. A common approach is to give Prednisone, one of the cortisone medications, that seems to combat the inflammation that's occurring in the nerve fibers. Such treatment is most effective if it is given in the first 72 to 96 hours of the illness.

Complete recovery of the facial muscles usually occurs in about 80 percent of the patients with this problem and usually within four months. In a small number of cases residual paralysis and other problems persist and some of these may even require surgical therapy.

In many instances we never know what caused the disease and it disappears on it's own, but it's better to get early treatment to minimize any changes that you can.

Panel To Investigate Road Oil Allegations

PORT ARTHUR (AP) — A congressional subcommittee will investigate allegations of dangerous chemicals being mixed with oil sludge use to surface rural roads in East Texas, according to U.S. Rep. Charles Wilson, D-Texas.

The Lufkin Democrat said Wednesday that the subcommittee will begin looking into the allegations within the next 30 days.

"If they're dumping in East Texas, they've picked the wrong district. I'll wear them out," he told the Port Arthur News, which broke the story last week.

The contaminated road oil was discovered in Corrigan, in Wilson's congressional district.

The State Department of Water Resources has now found 15 sites in Southeast Texas where possibly contaminated sludge was spread on roadbeds. The road oil was given to whoever asked, mostly subdivision developers. But the News said some was also given to Tyler and Jasper counties.

The waste sludge came from Browning-Ferris of Houston, which is investigating the problem along with state and federal agencies.

David Nelson, a staffer on the House subcommittee on investigations, said preliminary research into the reports has already begun.

"Our interest is that it is part of an ongoing probe into the problems of hazardous waste disposal," Nelson said, noting that investigations are already focused on Louisiana, Michigan, California and Tennessee.

Wilson will make an on-site inspection at Corrigan Saturday.

Fire Forces Students To Flee Dormitory

NEW BRITAIN, Conn. (AP) — Several hundred residents of a seven-story dormitory at Central Connecticut State College had to scramble out of their beds to escape an early morning fire.

No one was injured Wednesday but officials estimated the fire did about $35,000 damage to the dormitory. Firemen said they didn't know how the fire started. The blaze forced 379 students, clad in everything from pajamas to blue jeans, to flee.

Professor Warns Of Dwindling Water Supply

EL PASO (UPI) — A professor at the University of Texas-El Paso fears in the next generation a rapidly growing population in West Texas and Eastern New Mexico will have to give up green lawns, golf courses and air conditioning if someone doesn't pay attention to a dwindling water supply.

"Unfortunately, it appears our grandchildren will inherit dust and dry wells unless we change our way of living," warns El Howard Applegate, a professor of civil engineering.

Applegate, sounding the alarm the city needs to begin looking at conservation measures and new sources of water, said El Paso city officials so far, "simply have their heads in the sand," although the drinking water supply may be gone in 40 years.

Applegate predicts by the year 2020, the population of El Paso and neighboring Hudspeth County will increase from 361,883 in 1970 to 742,630, the nearby New Mexico Counties of Dona Ana (Las Cruces) and Sierra will grow from 76,962 to 120,300 population and the fast-growing Juarez, Mexico, population will jump from 600,000 to 2 million.

Unfortunately, the water carried through the area by the Rio Grande will not increase, he said, and the Hueco Bolson underground reservoir — the area's only drinkable water — is being steadily depleted. Meanwhile "slop coolers," evaporative air conditioners used in this dry climate, waste millions of gallons of water each year through runoff and evaporation, Applegate said.

"It is not a question of whether the water in the Hueco Bolson will run out, but rather when it will run out," the professor said.

He said the El Paso-Juarez metropolitan area pumped 593,050 acre feet out of the reservoir during the last five years, while rain runoff and other sources recharged only 5,640 acre feet. He said the Hueco Bolson now contains about 10,500,000 acre feet of drinkable water.

El Paso also has been diverting more and more water out of the river, which at the height of summer barely amounts to a trickle through the arid city, Applegate said, drawing 269,955 acre feet from the river in a five-year period ending in 1977.

During the same period Juarez consumed 53,159 acre feet of river water, second in amount only to the 57,720 acre feet the Mexican city used between 1958 and 1962.

While conceding that the South Plains around Lubbock "is in a lot worse shape than we are, but it's essentially the same thing. We're simply using water more quickly than it's being recharged."

In the Lubbock area, the Ogallal Pliocene formation is predicted to go dry by the turn of the century, but that city already imports drinking water from the Canadian River and the Sand Hills Formation near Muleshoe.

But there is no place close to El Paso to import water, Applegate said, because the Big Bend area of Texas "has less water than we do," and New Mexico has a law on the books preventing the export of water from that state.

Applegate said he did not foresee any importing of water to El Paso-Juarez-Las Cruces, N.M., anytime soon, and recycling of sewage would offer only a partial solution.

Criticizing city officials, the professor said, "They're trying to keep it from becoming an alarm situation. The city has simply said we have all the water we need for the foreseeable future, which is simply not true.

"I think they'd just rather not face up to the situation. They simply have their heads in the sand. Our mayor-elect (Tom Westfall) has said he is going to import water from another basin, but he hasn't said what basin he's going to import it from."

Czechoslovakia is the world's biggest beer-drinking country with an annual per capita consumption of about 152 liters.

Senator Amending Park Land Acquisition Bill

A-J News Services

Legislation which City of Lubbock officials say could bring park land acquisition here to a screeching halt is being amended by its sponsor to quell opposition to the bill.

Sponsored by Sen. Chet Brooks of Pasadena, the bill would prevent cities from requiring developers to dedicate parts of new subdivisions as park land or pay fees in lieu of the dedication.

Lubbock developers are required to dedicate 70 percent of property under the high water mark in new subdivisions as park land, parks director John Alford said.

Since 1973 when that requirement was enacted, Alford said the city has received 74 percent of its park land through dedication.

Following a 30-minute hearing this morning before the Senate Intergovernmental Relations Committee, Brooks asked that no action be taken on the bill so it can be amended.

"We just don't think it's right for any government agency to take property without paying for it," insisted De Witt Hale, a lobbyist for the Texas Association of Builders.

But city officials from Lubbock, Corpus Christi, Fort Worth and Austin all testified that it was just as fair to require dedication of park land as to require dedication of land for streets and utilities.

"The land dedication concept has been a highly effective and appropriate mechanism for guaranteeing that parks go where the people go," said Mary Lou Huffman, chairman of the Corpus Christi Parks and Recreation Board.

Lubbock Director of Planning Jim Bertram told committee members that the proposed law would have an adverse effect on a successful program supported by Lubbock developers.

Reqiring the dedication of land below the high water mark "has helped the bargaining position of developers who were having to pay fair market value for the unusable land," he said.

"Now they have a bargaining chip because they can argue that the land is going to be dedicated to the city," Bertram explained.

Since the dedication began, the city has built at least six community parks, ranging in size from five to eight acres, he said.

The practice of requiring developers to dedicate park land began in Corpus Christi and spread to other cities, Brooks said. However, he complained cities in many instances have abused their authority "by blackmailing or shaking down developers" for fees in lieu of the dedicated lands.

Brooks also complained that many cities acquire the land, but lack the money to develop the pakrs. "The land becomes vacant lots in the middle of subdivisions, places where people go to dump their trash," he said.

Faced with unexpectedly strong opposition from cities, Brooks asked committee members to leave the bill as pending business so he could attempt to work out a compromise.

"What I'm interested in is stopping the abuses, ending the blackmail and shakedowns," said Brooks, who was unable to cite a specific example.

But, Hale insisted that the obligatory nature of the current practice was the main problem. "If the city wants land, it should have to buy it," he said.

"I didn't call it blackmail, or a shakedown, but what would you call it?" he asked.

Without benefit of the "playa lakes ordinance," Alford said funds now being used for development of parks would have to be used to purchase park land.

"It's going to be real detrimental," Alford said. "Obviously we get most of our property (through dedication) and our plans for the future very much rely on the dedication of park properties through the playa lakes ordinance," he said.

With two exceptions, there are no long-range plans to purchase any park land, he said.

"If we have to start purchasing land, there will be less money for development and development (of parks) will be slowed down," Alford said.

"It's absolutely necessary land be purchased, otherwise subdivisions develop and there are no possible park properties left," he said.

Once an area develops, acquisition of land is "more costly," Alford said, largely because relocation expenses must be paid.

Alford and Bertram agreed the dedication of high water land is a benefit both to the city and to developers.

The land dedicated to the city is "more a headache" to developers, Bertram said. Once the land becomes a city park "it becomes a selling point for houses and gets rid of a maintenance problem," he said.

Most developers are "glad to get rid of" the land dedicated to the city, Alford said, adding the half-dozen playa lakes which don't belong to the city are "weed-infested dumpgrounds" which are health and safety hazards.

Bertram said the legislation may be in response to cities which require developers to pay the city in lieu of dedicating land if the city has no need for park land at certain locations.

However, the bill would "throw the baby out with the bath water" when in comes to Lubbock's ordinance, Bertram said.

Developers are telling legislators the required dedications are a "great burden," Bertram said, but "like other development expenses, those costs are passed onto the home buyers."

With the "Proposition 13 mentality" in most cities now, Bertram said the legislation "for all practical purposes would send Lubbock's park land acquisition down the tube."

"Because of the tough squeeze on tax funds, we may have to start doing without neighborhood parks," he said. When parks compete for funds with the health department, streets or water and sewer, Bertram said, some people consider the parks "not necessary and something we can do without."

Wounded Suspect In Critical Condition

A Dallas man, shot Wednesday afternoon while he allegedly held a Lubbock pharmacist hostage during an attempted armed robbery, remained in critical condition this morning at Health Sciences Center Hospital.

Joe Allen Disheroon, 34, was shot twice in the chest by off-duty Lubbock police Cpl. Ron Sowell about 4 p.m. behind Chris' Rexall Drugs, 332 N. University Ave.

Disheroon allegedly had robbed the business and was attempting to escape with pharmacy owner F.B. "Chris" Christensen as a hostage when he was wounded.

Disheroon, who Lubbock police say is wanted in Dallas on two felony warrants, each for aggravated robbery, was charged Wednesday night with aggravated robbery and aggravated kidnapping in connection with Wednesday's incident.

A bond of $250,000 for each charge was set by Justice of the Peace L.J. Blalack.

Police Wednesday also arrested two other Dallas residents, both of whom are friends of Disheroon.

Lubbock Det. Ted Daniels said a 24-year-old Dallas man was arrested about noon Wednesday at his Clovis Road motel room and booked into county jail on a burglary charge. Police learned the man had called Disheroon and told him to come to Lubbock.

Wednesday night, a 37-year-old Dallas woman, who reportedly arrived here with Disheroon, was arrested at her motel room on Avenue Q. She was preparing to leave the city when she was taken into custody, according to Daniels.

The woman was being held in the county jail today as a material witness and also on a charge of possession of a dangerous drug, a third degree felony.

The incident Wednesday began shortly after 4 p.m. as Christensen, 56, stepped outside his business in the Town and County shopping center.

A white male, wearing a red jacket "walked in, pushed a gun into my stomach and said, 'Give me your narcotics,'" Christensen said.

Christensen said he began sacking up morphine, dilaudad and other drugs, while two other employees, Newt Logan, 54, and Vicki Gordon, 24, hid behind stock shelves and activated the police alarm.

The pharmacy owner handed the bag to the robber, who said, "Okay, who's got a car here?"

Christensen said no one volunteered a car, so the man told him, "Okay, we're taking your car."

The pharmacist told the robber the battery in his car was dead. After a short protest, the robber demanded the keys to Logan's car, grabbed Christensen and said, "You're coming with me."

Two off duty Lubbock police officers, Cpl. Ron Sowell and officer Roger Hearron, were in separate police cars near the intersection of Fourth Street and University Avenue when they heard the alarm call. "We both were at the store in less than 45 seconds," Sowell said.

Logan said he told the officers as they entered the store, "He's got a big gun on Chris," and pointed at the back door.

Behind the store, Disheroon was forcing Christensen into the driver's side of Logan's car.

"We peeked out the back door, and I knew he hadn't seen us," Sowell said. "I came around the front of the black Blazer (parked between the door and Logan's car) and Officer Hearron went around behind it."

"The guy was just getting into the passenger seat," Hearron said, "And his door was open about six inches. I snuck up from the rear, pointed my gun at him and yelled 'Freeze.'"

But the man didn't freeze, officers said. Instead, he spun around in the seat and allegedly pointed his gun at Hearron. "I saw him whip around with that gun cocked, and I ducked," Hearron said. "Just as I did, I heard two shots and I knew Sowell had got him."

Of the shooting Sowell said, "It was a split second thing. I just didn't have time to think about it."

The two bullets shattered the passenger window glass and struck Disheroon in the chest. Police recovered a cocked .357 revolver from the car, said police information officer Bill Morgan.

Christensen, sitting next to Disheroon during the shooting, was not injured. "There wasn't time to do anything but just sit there," he said.

Fleet Plan Aided Capture

"Cease the personal use of all city-owned vehicles immediately," was the cry by local tax revolters last November. That demand was not heeded, and no one can be more glad than pharmacist F.B. "Chris" Christensen.

Christensen went through a harrowing experience shortly after 4 p.m. Wednesday when a bandit robbed his business and was attempting to the flee the scene with the owner as a hostage.

City police Cpl. Ron Sowell and officer Roger Hearron happened to be off duty and traveling in their city-owned patrol cars near Chris' Rexall Drugs, 322 N. University Ave., when they heard the reported robbery dispatched over their radios. "We both were at the store in less than 45 seconds," Sowell said.

The bandit had led Christensen at gunpoint into a car parked behind the business and was getting into the vehicle when the off-duty officers arrived. Hearron ordered the man to "freeze." Instead, he displayed a .357 revolver, and was shot by Sowell.

The suspect was in critical condition early today at Methodist Hospital, but the pharmacist was uninjured.

Mrs. DeHart's death was the sixth of the year and the second since last Thursday, when a Lubbock man died after a motorcycle-truck collision in the city.

Mrs. DeHart was killed when the car in which she was a passenger ran off the road into a muddy shoulder. The driver lost control of the car, which skidded back across the road, jumped a median and wrapped around a light pole, police said.

Mrs. DeHart was pinned in the 1979 Ford Granada for almost an hour before Lubbock firemen freed her.

Appeals Court Rules Suspension Justified

By BOB CAMPBELL
Avalanche-Journal Staff

The reinstatment of a Lubbock police officer suspended in 1976 has been reversed by the Seventh Court of Civil Appeals in Amarillo.

Judge Thomas L. Clinton of the 99th District Court ordered former policeman Robert Estrello reinstated in January 1978, but Chief Justice Mary Lou Robinson of the appeals court ruled this week that the suspension of Estrello for using a "blue box" to make a telephone call while on duty June 1, 1976, was justified.

"The scope of judicial review by the district court is limited by the substantial evidence rule" Judge Robinson said. "In applying the substantial evidence rule, the court considers all the evidence and may evaluate such evidence but does not pass upon the preponderance of the evidence.

"The standard to be applied is whether reasonable men might, from the evidence, reach the conclusion which the agency reached," she wrote, referring to the June 25, 1976, suspension by the Lubbock Civil Service Commission.

" The decision of the administrative agency should be accepted unless there is no substantial evidence on the record as a whole to support it," Judge Robinson said.

" After reviewing the entire record, we are of the opinion that a finding by the Civil Service Commission that Estrello committed the alleged acts is supported by substantial evidence."

Attorney Bill Wischkaemper, representing Estrello, said today that the case will now be appealed to the Texas Supreme Court.

Estrello was accused of using the telephone test set by hooking it up to a terminal box outside a 1912 19th St. business about 3:30 a.m. June 1, 1976, while on duty.

A police sergeant testified in the Civil Service hearing that he saw Estrello talk into a receiver while he was seated in the patrol car.

Estrello told commission members he was calling a restaurant so that his order would be ready when he arrived, but that he got a busy signal and never completed the call.

Estrello remains on suspension pending outcome of the appeals process.

Charges Filed In Accident

Involuntary manslaughter charges have been filed against a 42-year-old man in connection with a fatal traffic accident Sunday on U.S. 84 about a half mile south of the city, according to the Lubbock District Attorney's Office.

The charges were filed Wednesday against Roosevelt Benson of 9203 Boston Ave. Benson allegedly was driving while intoxicated when his vehicle was in a head-on collision with a car driven by Elmer Earl Shanks, 49, of Lubbock County.

Shanks was pronounced dead at the scene by Slaton Justice of the Peace Arvin Stafford.

Benson was on the critical list at Methodist Hospital following the 7:40 p.m. mishap, but he was termed in satisfactory condition today, according to a hospital spokesman.

Lubbock Justice of the Peace Wayne LeCroy has set Benson's bond at $7,500.

According to the Department of Public Safety, Shanks was driving his car west on the highway and Benson, driving a pickup truck, was traveling east in the westbound lane of the highway when the two vehicles collided.

Computer Revolution May Reshape Education

By PATRICIA McCORMACK
United Press International Writer

Every kid who's a "Star Trek" freak and those turned on by "2001" or "Star Wars" loves computers — seeing what computers pull off in science fiction.

For one example: Captain Kirk in "Star Trek" couldn't beam himself from here to there by molucular rearrangement without a computer assist. That molecular rearrangement bit is pure sci-fi but a lot about computers — well, it's coming true.

For practical reasons today's students, full of computer worship, are going to get more of computers in school from kindergarten to grade 12. The practical reason: the computer has come of age and is going to be part of most everything in their life.

They've got to learn how to use this technology.

Robert Taylor, adjunct assistant professor of education at Teachers College, Columbia University, thinks there's a good chance computers will be used throughout curriculums in most of the nation's grade and high schools in about 10 years.

He's on an Association for Computing Machinery subcommittee on computers in elementary and secondary schools. But Taylor's credentials go further than that.

He is helping the Scarsdale, N.Y., school system put computers into the entire system — all schools, all grades and including kindergarten.

The Scarsdale Board of Education project is believed to be the first in the nation that in 3-to-5 years will have computers in use, kindergarten to grade 12.

Ten micro-processor computers already have been purchased and installed, and 100 teachers have been studying computers since January. The others will plug into the instruction.

This computer terminal is something like the home computers that futurists claim will be as common as television sets before long. They cost from $800 up to $3,500.

It's a deck about 2 feet by 2 feet and 5 inches thick.

There is a keyboard with letters, numbers, instruction or command buttons.

This unit is hooked into a television set, preferably color — for more excitement.

The "deck", while less complicated than the "Star Trek" command deck made famous by Captain Kirk and his crew, does have flashing lights and can obey commands to emit noise — machine sounds, buzzes, even music. Computer-speak? Why not?

Using computers, anyone can see would hype learning of all kinds anc that's another practical reason for put ting them in the classrooms.

Once the Scarsdale teachers are trainec they will train the students as computer are installed — one in every school b September, and one in every classroon within five years.

Here are some ways Taylor envision schools using computers:

—As a tool: Storage of statistical dat and editing of manuscripts, student pap ers as well as instructional materials pre pared by teachers. Students would still need to know grammar, for the programmer directs the computer — and not vice-versa — what editorial changes to make.

—As a tutor: The computer would offer "an interactive form of instruction," testing students while they study a lesson programmed into the computer.

—As a "tutee" (which Taylor defines "as a device to be tutored"): The computer would encourage students to think out the problem at hand, whether the subject be mathematics, literature or social studies.

The computer revolution in the classroom would not be possible without the microprocessing computers now on the market in large numbers. They are 1-10th to 1-100th the cost of computers on the market just 10 years.

Scarsdale teachers aren't the only ones helping make the computer revolution come true in their schools. Taylor said parents and community members are actively involved in planning the project with Superintendent of Schools Thomas Sobol.

The community, a "bedroom town" for commuting New York executives, is near White Plains, where seeds of the computer first fell to earth — headquarters of International Business Machines, IBM.

Will computers in the classrooms raise declining Scholastic Aptitude Test scores, the so-called SATs? No one will guess that just yet, including Taylor.

However, some critics claim the decline in SAT scores isn't due to kids being less learned than those of a previois generation — but to the test, because putting pencil to paper is too old-fashioned for today's television and space age kids.

If the test were given on a computer terminal and the kids punched buttons, is one theory, the results would show how much the kids really know.

But before that can happen, the people who make and market the bells will need to catch up with the computer revolution in education.

Investigator Gets Ticket

GLEN BURNIE, Md. (UPI) — The chief investigator for the Maryland Motor Vehicle Administration soon must face his agency's Alcohol Unit for driving while intoxicated.

But the head of the unit, Geraldine R. Phillips, may find it hard to be impartial.

Investigator John J. Satterfield, 58, of Glen Burnie, was arrested this week after he allegedly slammed into two parked cars. One of the cars belonged to Mrs. Phillips.

Satterfield was charged with driving while intoxicated and failing to drive in a single lane, police said.

Tax On Pope's Visit To Poland Brings Protests

By BARRY JAMES

BRUSSELS, Belgium (UPI) — The Polish government's decision to impose an "accreditation fee" on journalists covering Pope John Paul's visit to his homeland in June has stirred protest around the world.

But Polish authorities seem unlikely to back off, and the Vatican has not publicly contested the measure.

A $350 fee covers only accreditation and access to press centers, where closed circuit television has been promised.

Other costs — translators, rental automobiles, hotels and communications — will be payable at far more than the going rate, and in hard currency.

Polish authorities justify the accreditation payment by saying it will cover costs of telephone and telex communications, setting up a press center and providing information material.

The state Interpress agency, which is in charge of the arrangements, calculates the extra facilities will cost $14 million, and one senior Polish official said the Pope's visit "will not bring any profit, but rather a deficit."

If 2,000 journalists cover the visit, as the Poles anticipate, the accreditation payments will raise $700,000. But payments for hotels, communications and other facilties are likely to raise millions of dollars in scarce hard currency — while all the expense to the Poles will be in non-convertible zloties.

To many, the Polish measure seems aimed at discouraging coverage of the potentially embarrassing visit rather than at raising money to pay for facilities that many other nations make available in their stride.

The accreditation payment is a heavy burden both to small religious newspapers with tight budgets and for large news organizations that will send in teams of journalists and technicians.

But the question of the payments is more ethical than financial.

Hodding Carter, the U.S. State Department spokesman, said the fee is "excessive" and "an unwarranted obstacle" that was not in the spirit of the Helsinki agreement on European security.

As part of that agreement, Poland and 34 other countries pledged "improvement of the circulation of, access to and exchange of information."

The American Newspaper Publishers Association called the fee "a tax on information."

Similar protests have been made by journalists' associations in several countries.

The Washington Post said the "Pole tax" opened up all sorts of possibilities.

"If a pope's visit to Poland is pegged at at $350, what might be the value of, say, a president's trip to Philadelphia?" it asked.

In fact, the Polish government charged a $20 "accreditation fee" to cover President Carter's visit to Warsaw in December 1977.

What may come as a disappointment, though hardly a surprise, to journalists who regularly follow the papacy is the failure of the Vatican to insist on as open news coverage as possible.

The Vatican acquiesced in the Polish government's making and charging for the press arrangements. In Mexico, the church itself looked after the media. The Vatican sent a spokesman, but he confined himself to handing out official texts.

Pope John Paul and his predecessors have frequently acknowledged the vital role that "social communications" — the media — can play in helping the church to put across its message. Yet the Vatican's own press office is either uninformative or unhelpful even on the most routine occasions.

Trade Fair In Canton Called Mess

HONG KONG (UPI) — This spring's Canton Trade Fair is a logistic nightmare and may be a commercial flop as well.

Traders and businessmen emerging from Canton at the half-way point in the month-long fair say the Chinese were overwhelmed by thousands of foreigners descending on the southern Chinese city to buy and sell.

"It gets worse every time and this year it was an absolute mess," lamented a British chemical company executive.

Businessmen have been sleeping in conference rooms, paying exorbitant prices for mediocre food, unable to find local transportation.

In addition they have found the Chinese prices high and some of the most sought after products such as textiles already sold out.

It is too early to call the fair a flop — it doesn't end until May 15 — but the signs are doubly disappointing to American merchants who expected a record volume of business in the first fair since diplomatic ties were established between Peking and Washington.

"As far as business is concerned, it doesn't seem to be as good as we had anticipated. We are buying at a slower pace than we had expected," said John Kamm, Hong Kong representative for the National Council for U.S.-China Trade. "But a lot depends on the final two weeks."

China's leadership has attempted to decentralize its decision making apparatus so various agencies in the country's vast bureaucracy could better respond to the goal of modernization. At the Canton Trade Fair that has resulted in the left hand not knowing what the right hand is doing.

Fair officials must have known of the the impending influx of 12,000 to 15,000 businessmen, but it was obvious from the chaos that Canton Railway Station did not, and customs and immigration officers didn't.

Hundreds of foreign visitors with reservations at the Tung Fang Hotel fought for six vacant rooms. At the Biayun Hotel across town, more than 12,000 predominantly Japanese businessmen were crammed into space that normally accommodates 1,100.

Although the logistical nightmare has eased since the April 15 fair opening, the Chinese lack of organization continues to discourage sales.

In their apparent enthusiam for doing business with the West, trade authorities allowed a larger number of Chinese agencies and organizations to participate in the fair.

Traders say some officials from Inner Mongolia appeared, but were woefully unprepared to do business.

The most persistent complaint of Western businessmen was the shortage of goods and high prices. Traders said they believed the Chinese raised prices to conceal short supplies.

"The most popular items are sold out for 1979," H.P. Liu, a trader for Swire and MacLaine said.

From the Chinese point of view, the sharp rise of oil prices in the West has driven up the cost of American and British petrochemical products, discouraging Chinese purchases.

Whatever the final verdict on the 45th Canton Trade Fair, trade officials believe its frustrations will have repercussions.

Since the first twice-a-year Canton fair was held in 1957, it has been China's most important trade contact with the outside world. Now that China has opened the gates to foreign contact, it may fade in significance.

"I think the importance of the fair is diminishing and the Chinese might want to change it into a series of mini-fairs," Miss Lee said.

THE OLD HOMESTEAD

About one-third of all occupied homes were built before 1940, the Conference Board notes. Some 28 percent were built between 1940 and 1960 and 38 percent after 1960. The Northeast and Midwest have a higher proportion of older homes than the South and West.

Merger Battle Takes New Twist

NEW YORK (AP) — Officials of Brascan Ltd., a Toronto-based company making a $1.1 billion bid for F.W. Woolworth Co., have found almost a third of their company in hostile hands.

The three-way merger battle involving two Canadian companies and the fourth largest retailer in the United States took a surprising turn when Edper Equities announced this week it had managed to acquire 31 percent ownership of Brascan by making huge purchases of its stock on the open market.

Edper officials, who also claim to have the support of additional Brascan stockholders, said they would demand a Brascan shareholders meeting this week, presumably to force a vote on Brascan's determination to take over Woolworth with a $35 a share, or $1.1 billion cash offer.

With the latest purchases and other support from Brascan shareholders, J. Trevor Eyton, one of Edper's directors and its legal counsel, said the firm "now feels it can now speak for 45 percent of the voting Brascan shares." He added that the company was "hopeful that this position would have the desired effect of persuading management not to proceed with the Woolworth acquisition."

Woolworth, which could be helped in its battle against Brascan by the additional pressure brought by Edper, had no comment on the developments.

Edper, an investment company largely owned by members of the Bronfman family of the Seagram liquor empire, had previously owned about 5 percent of Brascan shares and last month made two attempts to bid $28 a share for close to 12 million shares, or enough to give it more than 50 percent of the voting power. Brascan's management has resisted those offers saying it was more in the company's interest to expand by acquiring Woolworth than itself be acquired by Edper.

Brascan is a Toronto-based company which recently sold its major holding, a Brazilian utility, for about $380 million. It is a widely diversified company with interests in oil, gas, insurance and brewing.

Edper's stock purchases of Brascan on the American Stock Exchange Monday and Tuesday were largely at $22.75 a share. Although some purchases also were made on the London Stock Exchange, at the $22.75 price, Edper's purchases would amount to about $154.7 million for the 6.8 million share purchases over the two sessions.

After making 3.5 million in purchases this week, Edper said it was satisfied with its holdings. Brascan stock tumbled after that closing off $1.50 at $21.25 on the American Stock Exchange. The Amex said 3.49 million shares of Brascan traded this week represented a record for the exchange.

Woolworth fell $1.625 to $25.625 on the New York Stock Exchange in active trading. Edper is not publically traded.

AUTO MECHANIC

Car Tuneup Costs Vary At Shops

BY JOHN MEYER

Most auto engines require tuning every year or 10,000 miles to maintain peak efficiency and performance.

Yet few car owners know the basics involved in a tuneup. In fact, many mechanics don't even know those basics.

This ignorance is not necessarily due to lack of understanding of engines, but to many standards of judging tuneups.

There is no such thing as a "standard" tuneup. Manufacturers, flat-rate manuals and individual shops differ in their opinions of what it should include. Design differences in engines also affect interpretations.

Tuneups are for engines, specifically for the ignition components of engines — points, plugs, condensers, distributors, plug wires and the coil.

The problems arise when one considers other elements that affect the ignition system, such as the battery, belts, carburetor and valves. There is the added confusion of different ignition systems, where points and condensers have been eliminated, and of small four-cylinder engines, where valve adjustment is critical.

The minor tuneup rarely includes more than installing the points, plugs and condenser with a minor adjustment to the carburetor. Anything else costs more.

Other garages use the major-tuneup listing. A major tuneup includes a compression check, battery cleaning, servicing of air and fuel filter, coil check, servicing of the heat-control valve and belt adjustment. Valve adjustment may also be included.

Of course, there are garages where you pay for the major tuneup and get a minor one — or a minor one with some alterations.

Some shops use oscilloscopes and infrared spectrometers to make accurate adjustments. Others use less accurate test equipment, ranging down to the old "ear and eyeball" methods of years past.

It pays to learn the kind of tuneup recommended for your make and model of car. Find out which instruments the garage uses. Know if valve adjustment is critical. Then write these things down for your next tuneup.

In many large shops, the least experienced mechanic does the tuneups because the more knowledgeable mechanics are needed for more complicated tasks. This is not always the best arrangement. For instance, the tuneup mechanic should have a strong background in emission-control systems, since they are critical to engine performance.

Ask for the tuneup specialist. Then look at the person's credentials to make sure he or she is a specialist. If the tuneup mechanic turns out to be an apprentice, take your car to a garage with a real specialist

Another way to make sure you get what you want from a tuneup is to make a written request for your old tuneup parts before signing the repair order. This protects you by legitimizing any complaint you might have later. Besides, you can often determine what the tuneup included from the parts.

For instance, if the package has no points or condenser, your car may have transistorized ignition. These electronic ignition systems are easier to tune, so you should pay less. Some flat-rate manuals actually call for more time, usually unfairly.

The really good repair shops take pride in their work and are glad to supply you with your old parts. Many will even list all their fine adjustments and final readings. These are the little extras you should notice and request.

Educate yourself. The common ordinary tuneup is not so common or ordinary. Ask for name-brand parts. Know what you are getting for your money.

Israel Studies Plan For Occupied Zone

JERUSALEM (UPI) — Israel today offered a formal proposal for Arab self-rule in the occupied West Bank and Gaza strip in the first step in the Palestinian round of negotiations on the Egyptian-Israeli peace treaty.

Prime Minister Menachem Begin submitted his plan for Palestinian autonomy to an 11-member ministerial committee that is to start talks with Egypt in a month. The committee met for 90 minutes and details of the discussion were kept secret.

But government sources said the primary thrust of the plan was to give autonomy to the 1.1 million Palestinian residents of the occupied areas and for Israel to retain control over the land for purposes of national security and Jewish settlement.

The committee met against a backdrop of renewed tension in the West Bank because of a shooting Wednesday in which a 20-year-old Arab student was wounded in the chest. The shot allegedly was fired by an Israeli civilian in a passing vehicle. A second Israeli was injured by a rock thrown by Arab students.

Youths in Bethlehem today hurled stones at passing vehicles in a brief recurrence of disturbances in the West Bank, but military authorities said they caused neither injuries nor damage. Troops did not interfere and there were no arrests, the authorities said.

Begin has promised to publish the final Israeli plan for self-government before negotiations with Egypt start. The plan first will be shown to the parliamentary Foreign Affairs and Defense Committee.

The issue of resolving the Palestinian problem is not officially linked to the treaty in writing, at Israeli insistence, but is part of an overall settlement of the Middle East conflict outlined in the Camp David peace accords of September 1978.

Begin has defined his plan as giving administrative but not legislative authority to the Palestinians, meaning the Palestinians would be governed by a local council that would not be permitted to make its own laws.

The military government now overseeing the two territories would move to Tel Aviv but still would retain control over public land and its uses, including the establishment of Jewish settlements. There are 56 settlements in the West Bank alone today, with more in the planning stages.

The plan is expected to be approved, perhaps with only minor changes, in two weeks. It then will go before the Knesset, the Israeli Parliament.

In a West Bank violence Wednesday, Arab-Israeli clashes sent two persons to the hospital in opposing demonstrations on Israel's Independence Day over the future status of the occupied territory.

A bullet fired from an Israeli vehicle into a crowd of students from Bir Zeit university near Ramallah on the West Bank wounded an 18-year-old Arab youth in the chest during a demonstration in which Palestinian flags were waved, a military spokesman said.

An Israeli was injured and hospitalized by a rock thrown by Arab students in Ramallah at a bus travelling to the starting point of a seven-mile march in support of increased Jewish settlement in the occupied region.

The military governor of Ramallah ordered classes closed on the tense Bir Zeit campus today for an indefinite period, Israel radio said.

Panel Approves Water Measure

By BILL KIDD
A-J Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Legislation called the "first step" in allowing West Texas to import water won approval Wednesday night by the House Natural Resources Committee on a last-minute vote change.

Rep. Jimmie Edwards of Conroe switched from "present" to "aye" to give the bill the six votes needed to bring it out for House consideration, 6-0.

Amarillo Rep. Bob Simpson called his measure to allow creation of an import authority for those counties overlying the Ogallala Aquifer "the first step in allowing people in the area to solve our water problem."

Some opposition to the measure was expressed by the League of Women Voters and Lone Star Chapter, Sierra Club, but spokesmen for both groups said they were not opposing the concept of water import as such.

Miami rancher J.T. Webb also appeared to oppose HB 2205, and called on lawmakers to "get Roberts County out of this organization." Rep. Bob Close, Perryton, a committee member and the House member for Roberts County, voted to report the bill out, with Roberts County still part of the proposed entity.

Simpson said he was willing to remove any county which wished to be out — but said he knew of "no opposition prior to tonight" from Roberts County.

He did amend the bill to remove Garza, Dickens and Crosby counties at the request of Rep. Bill Heatly of Paducah.

Wayne Wyatt, general manager of High Plains Underground Water District, Lubbock, told the committee "we are literally mining our groundwater" in the High Plains area — and that it's hoped current studies (including the six-state Ogallala study authorized by Congress) will identify a source of water which can be transported to the High Plains.

Wyatt also said the bill isn't aimed solely at water import for irrigated agriculture: "We have quite a few small municipalities in dire need of water right now."

Department of Water Resources planning director Dr. Herbert Grubb presented statistical information on the Ogallala area, noting the region's importance for oil and gas and for food and fiber productions.

At present, some 6 million acres is under irrigation, Grubb reported, producing some $2.5 billion in products annually.

Shortages in irrigation water would result in decreased production and increased costs to consumers, he added.

An import authority is needed to contract for or arrange for the importation of water, to carry out that importation, and to assure proper distribution of water, Grubb concluded.

Jim McGrey, Panhandle Underground Water District No. 3, who noted he had opposed earlier versions of the importation authority plan, said he feels the current proposal is as good a method as can be offered at present.

Jerome Johnson, Amarillo attorney serving as president of Water, Inc., told the committee "the need for imported water is clear in our area and in Texas."

He reported "great numbers" of persons attended meetings held by Water, Inc., in Lubbock and Plainview on the importation proposal.

Catherine Perrine, League of Women Voters, said the League's position is that it would be better to await results of the Ogallala studies now underway and to make any attempt to deal with West Texas' water shortages part of an overall state plan.

"We are equally aware of the very great need of the High Plains to solve its water problems...It's a knotty problem for which we don't have a solution."

Since the High Plains would not be likely to bear the cost of importing water alone — and since the proposed authority apparently would have power to condemn property outside its boundaries to implement importation — it would be better to approach the matter on a statewide basis, she said.

"I see no sin in bringing water across state lines," she added.

Austin attorney Stuart Henry, representing the Sierra Club, said the bill as drafted indicates the authority could be made statewide at the discretion of the Water Development Board, and suggested language changes be made to limit the authority to the Ogallala area.

Simpson said that was the intent of the bill, and that there was no effort to expand it outside of that area. The bill was reported from committee, with no indication when it may be considered by the full House.

and the rest "were offering moral support."

Steve Ruten of Furr's Construction Co., Inc. (general contractor for the jail construction) said that none of the picketers at the site this morning had been working for him "at the time the pickets went up." He said that "all my people on the jail project" were working.

Olbera said that rather than strike all the sites in the area, the men were going to picket just one site at a time to attempt to reach negotiations in that manner.

Said Bundock, "They may have picked it (jail site) out as the most publicly exposed job. They may feel they would be most effective in that way."

Ruten, however, said that he understood that "apparently the union has walked out from underneath" the strikers at the jail. He said he heard that the picketers "have no representation from Laborers Union International."

Burt, whose company is the mason contractor for the jail job, said he had also heard that the union had decided to cease striking. "I heard they voted in the union hall to go back to work."

Still, Burt, Ruten and Bundock all said that union spokesman Abel Gonzalez was at the jail site this morning. Ruten and Burt said they talked about the contract offers by both sides, but no agreement was reached.

The strike began several days after the contract between the two parties expired. Contract talks were halted over a disagreement on wages for unskilled laborers.

POLARIS END DELAYED

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate voted Wednesday to temporarily block Pentagon plans to deactivate the Navy's 10 Polaris submarines, scheduled to start going out of service in October.

Tornadoes Smash Area In Northern Oklahoma

ENID, Okla. (UPI) — More than a dozen tornadoes raked North Central Oklahoma Wednesday, killing at least two persons, injuring a half dozen others and causing an estimated $4.5 million in damage.

The rural towns of Lahoma, Meno and Waukomis — west of Enid and about 90 miles north of Oklahoma City — were hardest hit by twisters that struck out of heavy thunderstorms shortly before sundown.

At least 43 homes were heavily damaged in Lahoma, a town with less than 700 population. Nine mobile homes were destroyed and roofs from the high school, town hall and fire station were ripped off by one twister.

Red Cross and Civil Defense teams were moved into stricken areas at daybreak to survey damage and aid homeless victims. Oklahoma's Civil Defense director said the twisters may have caused as much as $4.5 million in damage.

Oklahoma Highway Patrol teams closed roads to Lahoma, the hardest hit town, late Wednesday to prevent looting.

Connie Jo Kerfoot, 14, of Meno, was killed by a twister that struck her grandparents' home and deposited her body more than 100 yards away into a field. Police said she had hidden on the ground floor when the twister hit, but the high-speed winds destroyed the dwelling.

Miss Kerfoot suffered a broken neck and was pronounced dead at the scene. Her grandparents, Walter and Luella Peterson, were hospitalized with minor injuries.

Jack Lawrence Baker, 40, of Houston was killed while driving through the downtown section of Coyle, Okla. Police said a twister-tossed tree struck his car and sheared off the roof. He was pronounced dead at the scene.

A third person died of a heart attack as a twister struck a grain elevator near Lahoma, but officials said the death was not storm related.

Authorities said Buford Mayberry, 51, of Enid was dead on arrival at a local hospital. He had gone to the grain elevator with his family seeking shelter, but suffered a massive coronary when the tornado approached.

The victim's son, Rick Mayberry, 19, was critically injured with severe lacerations when he tried to break a window leading to offices at the elevator to call emergency help for his father. There was no telephone in the room where the family had been hiding.

Garfield County Sheriff's dispatcher D.F. van Krevelen said several tornadoes hit the towns near Enid.

"I believe there was more than one tornado, or the twister made a turn," van Krevelen said. "That's the only way to explain the distance between the towns, and the fact that Enid wasn't hit."

"Debris on the roads and high water have made it almost impossible for anyone to get into the disaster areas," he said.

Tornado warnings were issued a 5:15 p.m. Wednesday, about an hour prior to the series of storms.

"I don't know if anybody saw the twister," van Kravelen said. "The town marshall in Waukomis said nobody he talked to saw it, although they could hear it."

South Plains and eastern Panhandle. Heaviest activity was in the eastern portion of the area.

Flash flood watches were posted for Haskell County and much of the Abilene area as heavy thunderstorms drenched that region this morning.

Tornadoes were reported early this morning in several areas of West Texas, but there were no reports of damage.

In addition to the powerful winds, Amarillo and Pampa reported golf ball-size hail, while across the eastern Panhandle there were numerous reports of pea to marble-size hail storms.

At the same time a line of heavy thunderstorms was reported from Aspermont to south of Colorado City and moving in a northeasterly direction.

Measured rainfall in the state during the 24-hour-period ending at 7 a.m. today was heaviest at Childress, with .50 of an inch; Dalhart, .29 of an inch; and Amarillo, .26.

On the South Plains only Tulia, with .20 of an inch, recorded more than .10 of an inch of rain during the same period.

Lubbock temperatures this afternoon were forecast to reach only the mid-60s under cloudy skies before dropping to the mid 40s tonight.

Temperatures Friday will increase slightly to the upper 60s, weather reports said, as a partial clearing trend begins.

pol agents and was sentenced to two years in French prisons.

After serving time in France, he was extradited to Sweden, where he was convicted for forgery and spent a year and a half in Swedish prisons.

When Abagnale was brought back to the United States, he was sentenced to 12 years in a federal prison on forgery and bad check charges.

But the "Great Impostor" still refused to learn a lesson.

He escaped several times from federal prison. Once, disguised as a prison inspector, he was able to walk through the front gates of a maximum security prison untouched.

Abagnale was released on parole for good behavior after four and one-half years and began a new life helping large corportaions, banks and retail outlets halt white-collar crime.

He now tours the country conducting seminars and classes, advising bank tellers and retail merchants on how to spot forged checks.

"The con artist isn't trying to sell bad checks," he said. "He's trying to sell himself, first."

"Don't be impressed with the person's clothes or the fact that he drove up in a Rolls-Royce. Look at the check he's passing to make sure it isn't bogus.

He teaches tellers methods of detecting forged checks in a matter of a few seconds without having to call another bank for verification. And he says the fancy car and expensive clothes are only a prop to fool unsuspecting cashiers.

Abagnale is also a professor of criminology at several Texas universities and trains 45,000 law enforcement personnel and bank tellers each year in the art of detecting forgery.

And he teaches from experience because he personally has committed all the crimes he talks about.

"There are more than 400,000 hot checks written every day in the country at a cost of $185 for each man, woman and child each day."

He says he designs his methods of spotting hot checks without sacrifices to customer service, without which he says there would be no business at all.

Abagnale cited the fact that forgery was up more than 328 percent this year as reasons for a nationwide crackdown on thsi crime.

The Business Crimes Symposium, cosponsored by the Lubbock County Crime Prevention Council, the Better Business Bureau of the South Plains, the Chamber of Commerce and the Retail Merchants Association, began seminars on such subjects as counterfeits and deceptive trade practices following Abagnale's presentation.

Talmadge's Aide Denies Key Memo

WASHINGTON (AP) — The executive secretary to Sen. Herman Talmadge today denied writing a memo indicating that the senator wanted to avoid filing public reports on $600 in campaign contributions received during his 1974 re-election campaign.

Allyne Tisdale acknowledged in testimony to the Senate Ethics Committee that her initials were at the bottom of the Aug. 6, 1974 memo and said, "It is similar to my style."

But she said she never wrote the memo, introduced into evidence during hearings by the committee into allegations of financial wrongdoing by Talmadge, D-Ga.

The memo was provided to the committee by Daniel Minchew, Talmadge's former administrative assistant and his principal accuser.

It consists of two photocopies of envelopes on which are typed notations of campaign contributions of two Georgia supporters of Talmadge, Ted Lamis of Macon and Earl Leonard.

At the bottom is a typed note addressed to DANIEL:

"These sums were given today to SENATOR. None is reported in any form ...."

The memo continues: "As senator said, this helps offset some of the campaign expenses which we are reluctant to pay from the campaign ACT (account)."

Earlier, Mrs. Tisdale acknowledged that specific indications that Minchew maintained a secret bank account containing campaign contributions and Senate expense payments came from Minchew himself.

Need For Doctors Stressed Here

By KIM COBB
Avalanche-Journal Staff

An East Coast public health specialist is calling for a cut in American medical school enrollment to prevent a "nationwide glut of physicians" — but the South Plains area still appears short of medical personnel.

"Increasing evidence suggests there will be a surfeit of physicians in this country within the next three decades," according to Dr. Donald B. Louria of the New Jersey Medical School. He is predicting the overabundance of doctors will lead to cutthroat competition and unnecessary treatment.

Ronald Warner, president of the South Plains Health Systems, says those predictions don't apply to the South Plains.

"I don't think this agency would be for cutting back on doctors," Warner said. "Several of the counties we serve are health care manpower shortage areas," he said, adding that some counties don't have access to any physicians.

"My hunch is that one of the problems is that doctors, because of many factors, continue to locate in urban areas." Communities in West Texas, as well as other rural areas, have trouble attracting doctors, he said.

Writing in a recent issue of the New England Journal of Medicine, Louria said schools are turning out doctors at a far faster rate than the nation is growing. He predicts this rise in doctor-to-patient ratio will mean more doctors competing for less business.

"We don't have nearly those numbers here," Warner said. "One of the reasons the (Texas Tech University) medical school was developed here was because of the lack of physicians in the West Texas area.

"A hundred years from now we may be looking at the same problems," he continued. "But the medical school is just now starting to make an impact on these needs."

Louria is pushing for the development of an ideal ratio of doctors to patients. He said it will be too late to act if the number of American physicians reaches a saturation point.

Louria is predicting "catastrophic effects" on the practice of medicine if that saturation point is reached.

Warner suggested that Louria's fear of too many doctors may be the result of increased government efforts to contain rising health costs. Some government officials, he said, have suggested that overcompetition among physicians creates a situation where doctors may order unnecessary procedures for patients in order to shore up a sagging practice. The government solution, according to Warner, is to "quit training the people who order so many procedures."

Frank Chappell, a spokesman for the American Medical Association, said Louria's prediction of a doctor glut is contrary to the policy of the AMA as well as current trends. "How many doctors is enough?" Chappell asked. "We haven't defined that. It's true there's going to be a lot of them, but that's a product of demand by the American people."

"We're not at all excited about cutting back on physicians' training," Warner stressed. "The supply of doctors, with the encouragement of the AMA, has increased."

But Warner doesn't agree that doctors in Texas create their own markets.

Warner predicted that a national cutback in doctors would only contribute to the present undersupply of doctors in rural areas.

Government and medical associations are currently discussing several approaches to medical cost containment, Warner said. Major approaches to the problem center around government regulation (which many authorities claim only add to health costs), allowing the free market to regulate itself, or promote a nebulous concept of "wellness."

Warner explained the wellness concept as a form of preventive medicine. This idea includes such things as encouraging people not to smoke in order to avoid the high cost of lung surgery.

But he stressed there is no easy solution to the cost containment problem, adding, "Our board really hasn't developed a policy on this."

Education Legislation Advances

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration is counting its battle nearly won after a House committee, in a key test, narrowly approved legislation to create a separate Education Department.

The bill's sponsors already are predicting full passage when it comes to the House floor. The Senate passed a similar bill Monday, 72-21.

President Carter strongly supports the legislation, having promised during the 1976 presidential campaign to push for a separate Education Department.

The House Government Operations Committee approved the plan by one vote, 20-19, Wednesday after intense lobbying from the administration and lobby groups for and against the new department.

"We have now passed the toughest hurdle in our efforts to pass a separate Department of Education," said a White House official, asking not to be named.

Unlike the Senate's version, the House plan would transfer Indian education programs to the new department.

Its absence in the Senate version aroused strong opposition from some groups, who also criticized the omission of Head Start, veterans education and child nutrition programs from the proposed Education Department.

If enacted, the legislation would create a 13th cabinet-level department with a $14 billion budget and 15,000 employees. The agency would be larger than five existing departments — Energy, Interior, Commerce, Justice and State.

Programs would come from the Depatment of Health, Education and Welfare, the Departments of Defense, Justice, Housing and Urban Development, Agriculture and Labor, among other agencies.

The legislation has split the education community. The National Education Association, a major teachers union, supports the plan, but its rival, the American Federation of Teachers strongly opposes it.

Supporters argue a separate department would save up to $100 million a year, increase efficiency and accountability and streamline the government's management of education activities.

Opponents claim its creation would lead to federal interference in a traditional state and local function. They also warn such a narrowly-oriented department would become the creature of one set of interest groups.

"In my opinion we are enacting another monster in the federal government," said Rep. L.H. Fountain, D-N.C. "It's going to grow and grow and grow. This is going to become a special interest agency."

Last year, the Senate and the House committee approved a separate department, but the plan died before coming to the House floor.

FTC Claims Actions Have Saved Money

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Trade Commission, often criticized by industry, claims many of its recent actions save inflation-strapped consumers millions of dollars, particularly when they buy eyeglasses, blue jeans or audio equipment.

FTC Chairman Michael Pertschuk, in testimony Wednesday before a Senate Commerce subcommittee cited four actions he said "have provided tangible dollar benefits to consumers."

However, the commission ran into criticism from Sen. John C. Danforth, R-Mo. "When I go back to my state and speak to groups like Lions and Rotary clubs, half of my questions deal with the FTC. When my constituents are up in arms about an agency, obviously that affects me," he said.

He singled out an FTC program to finance expenses of groups that otherwise would not have sufficient funds to participate in commission proceedings.

"These outside groups are not adversaries of the commission. They are adversaries of the industry that would be regulated. We subsidize people who come in and agree with the FTC," he said.

Pertschuk told the committee that the most significant recent boon to consumers may be an FTC ban against restrictions on eyeglass and eye-exam price advertisements. "In states where advertising was restricted, studies found that prices ranged 25 to 40 per cent higher than in the states were advertising was permitted," Pertschuk testified.

The ban is being challenged in court.

The FTC also ordered that a consumer be given a copy of his eyeglass prescription to allow comparison shopping.

These actions alone, "by introducing price competition into states where previously there had been none, could save consumers an estimated $500 million a year," Pertschuk claimed.

The FTC chairman also said:

— Blue jeans sold for $15 to $17 when the commission charged Levi Strauss & Co. with retail price fixing. After the FTC obtained an order probiting such practices, prices dropped to $10 to $14.

"A conservative estimate suggests that this development is saving consumers $50 million annually," he said.

Resale price maintenance suits against major audio equipment manufacturers "have saved consumers up to $15 million a year."

— The commission in the last year has ordered various companies to repay consumers more than $10 million after finding "unfair or deceptive trade practices."

Former Bureau Director Denies Giving Preferred Treatment

WASHINGTON (AP) — James A. Conlon, former director of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, has denied under oath giving preferred treatment to a private firm that gave him a new job and a big pay boost.

Conlon, appearing under protest, told the Senate investigations subcommittee Wednesday that its inquiry into his affairs "defies any sense of objectivity, equity or justice."

Conlon has been under fire by both the Senate panel and a federal grand jury regarding the circumstances which led to his resignation July 1, 1977, from his $47,000 job as director of the bureau and his hiring the next day as an $85,000 executive for the American Bank Note Co.

American Bank Note, headquartered in New York, held the largest volume of bureau contracts of any private firm during Conlon's tenure as director, turning profits as high as 33 percent on the production of food stamps and other government coupons.

It sold the bureau four printing presses in 1974, at more than $1 million apiece. According to previous testimony, the presses have proved so troublesome and costly to operate they are used only when other presses are unavailable.

Investigators also have pointed out that Conlon repeatedly urged the government, both before and after his retirement, to purchase a $17 million anti-counterfeit marking system from ABN. If that sale is completed, it could open up a huge separate market among private institutions for the related detection devices.

Conlon offered a defense for all those activities, insisting each was in the best interest of the nation at the time.

But he offered only a brief denial of an allegation that he had secretly negotiated an executive position with ABN long before his official retirement from the bureau.

Conlon insisted his decision to leave the government was "spontaneous" and occurred only shortly before he actually departed.

He acknowledged that eight months before that date, he had personally picked out a suite of offices in nearby Arlington, Va., for ABN to locate a subsidiary company. But he did so, he said, as "an act of courtesy" to the firm, and not in his own behalf.

Conlon was made president of that subsidiary, and he and two former aides at the bureau who also joined ABN now occupy the Arlington offices.

His prepared statement offered no explanation of a real estate agent's testimony a day earlier that Conlon had specifically told him in November of 1978 that he wanted the offices for use when he joined ABN in a top-level job.

That contradiction, as well as the claim of investigators that Conlon had frequent out-of-office contacts with ABN officials, were certain to be explored as the hearings continued.

Conlon characterized conflict-of-interest allegations as a smear upon his long career with the bureau, the last 10 as director. "During my tenure," he said, "the bureau achieved exemplary standards of performance."

But the parent Treasury Department has referred elements of the case to the Justice Department.

Area Solons' Votes Recorded

By Roll Call Report

HOUSE

LOTTERY DEVICES The House passed, 269 for and 121 against, a bill enabling U.S. manufacturers to sell lottery materials such as instant-winner tickets and bingo cards in foreign countries. The bill (HR 1301) was sent to the Senate.

Rep. George Danielson, D-Calif., a supporter, said: "Pass this law and create a few more jobs for American workers. Add a little bit to our own side of the balance of payments and raise some more taxes to help meet our budget deficit."

Rep. Carlos Moorhead, R-Calif., an opponent, said passage of the bill "would place Congress in the posture of encouraging the development and expansion of the lottery services industry throughout the U.S."

Reps. Charles Wilson, D-2, Jim Mattox, D-5, and J. Marvin Leath, D-11, did not vote.

UNITED NATIONS The House rejected, 187 for and 214 against, an attempt to eliminate the $41 million "technical assistance" contribution the U.S. is scheduled to make to the United Nations in fiscal 1980. Technical assistance programs, to be distinguished from the U.N.'s peacekeeping function, mostly benefit Third World countries. The vote came during debate on HR 3363, a State Department spending bill later passed and sent to the Senate.

Rep. John Rousselot, R-Calif., said "the American people need relief from the mandatory assessments" for technical assistance...an 'international income tax' designed to redistribute the world's wealth."

Rep. Edward Derwinski, R-Ill., an opponent, said: "This amendment would not shave anybody's taxes. It would not work to the advantage of the American taxpayer. It will impede us and embarrass us and weaken our leadership at the U.N."

Members voting "yea" wanted to eliminate the U.S. contribution to the United Nations for "technical assistance" programs.

Mattox and Leath did not vote.

SENATE

SHIPS FOR IRAN The Senate rejected, 26 for and 62 against, an amendment to eliminate budget authority for destroyers which the shah of Iran ordered several years ago from a U.S. shipbuilder. The new Iranian government no longer wants the warships, and the Armed Services Committee has called their air defense system "clearly inadequate." The effect of this vote is that budget authority exists for the U.S. Navy to acquire them. At issue are four Spruance-class destroyers under construction at the Ingalls Shipbuilding Division of Litton Industries in Pascagoula, Miss. Total estimated price tag for the four is $1.35 billion. This vote occurred during debate on S Con Res 22, which set congressional spending ceilings through fiscal 1982.

Sen. Donald Riegle, D-Mich., the sponsor of the amendment, said: "We are going to take these ships off the Iranian government's hands, obsolete though they are for our needs, and we are going to buy them out."

Sen. John Tower, R-Tex., an opponent, said that "anyone who has paid attention to evolving Soviet naval doctrine over the past 25 years could come to no conclusion other than that we should avail ourselves of the opportunity to acquire these four (destroyers)."

Sens. Lloyd Bentsen, D, John Tower, R, and Pete Domenici, R (N.M.), voted "nay."

Sen. Harrison Schmitt, R (N.M.), did not vote.

FEDERAL TRAVEL The Senate rejected, 41 for and 44 against, an amendment to reduce fiscal 1980 budget authority by cutting out $500 million earmarked for federal employes' travel, $200 million for filmmaking by federal agencies and $200 million in overtime for federal workers The amendment also sought to reduce the federal work force by one per cent through attrition at a projected fiscal 1980 saving of $200 million. It was proposed to S Con Res 22 (see vote above).

Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, the sponsor, said his amendment would cut expenditures on "items considered extravagant by the American taxpayers."

Sen. Edmund Muskie, D-Maine, an opponent, said the amendment had not been brought up in the Budget Committee, and that he was therefore "not about to just act blindly" and vote for it.

Senators voting "yea" favored the amendment.

Schmitt did not vote.

CRIME MONEY The Senate rejected, 38 for and 46 against, an amendment to increase the fiscal 1980 authority for the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration from $446 million recommended by the Budget Committee to $546 million. The agency awards grants to and works with state and local law enforcement agencies in hopes of cutting crime. The amendment was proposed to S Cn Res 22 (see votes above).

Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., the sponsor, said the agency deserves more money because "in the last five years there has been extraordinary success in the LEAA program."

Sen. Henry Bellmon, R-Okla., an opponent, said "the program has not reduced crime," and that the agency should not get more money "at a time when it is necessary to exercise federal restraint" over the budget.

Senators voting "nay" were opposed to additional funding authority.

Indonesia Conducting Anti-Corruption Campaign

By KENNETH L. WHITING

JAKARTA, Indonesia (AP) — Indonesians who suspect misdeeds by public officials or other corruption in government are invited to mail their information to Post Office Box 999 here.

They may sign their letters or remain anonymous. Corruption fighters who empty Box 999 promise to protect the identities of tipsters.

About 44 letters are received each day alleging fraud, embezzlement, abuse of authority and other irregularities, one official said.

Box 999 is part of Operation Order, or "Opstib" from its Indonesian acronym, which has been battling corruption for 21 months.

Opstib is Indonesia's 10th anti-graft campaign in 13 years and the most successful, judging by published reports of arrests and prosecutions. However, some critics contend that mostly small fry are nabbed while misdeeds in high places remain untouched.

Many of those who are charged manage to avoid conviction with the help of crooked court officials. Deputy Attorney General Sadili Sastrawijaya said earlier this year action had been taken against 270 prosecutors for abusing their authority. Eight judges were dismissed last year.

There is no official estimate as to how much money goes astray, but Sadili said $120 million "is known to have been misappropriated or stashed away by officials during the past five years."

Mashuri, the deputy speaker of Parliament, said recently that foreign aid granted Indonesia is subject to systematic "leakage," a euphemism for misappropriation.

"That there are leaks is certain. The government has admitted it. Parliament has often discussed it. Even the public is aware of it. But as to the amount, I don't know for sure," Mashuri told reporters.

Corruption here dates back to colonial or even pre-colonial times when sultans and other feudal lords customarily rewarded loyal henchmen by granting them official powers they could use for personal gain.

In the Indonesian context, many people to this day do not regard exploitation of official positions as an offense.

Attorney General Ali Said says it is a question of mentality: "What I mean is, there is a widespread willingness to give bribes and a matching readiness to accept them. This shockingly weak mentality has raised this problem to national proportions."

Adm. Sudomo, hand-picked by President Suharto to lead Opstib, estimates it will take 5 to 10 years to clean up this country of more than 140 million people. Others regard his forecast as optimistic.

Sudomo also is deputy commander of the armed forces and head of the powerful security command known as "Kopkamtib," an extra-constitutional body set up to deal with subversion after the communist coup attempt in 1965.

Sudomo launched Opstib in July 1977 by cracking down on "pungli," or illegal levies which lined the pockets of relatively minor civil servants involved in taxation, customs, immigration and other government branches.

Opstib uncovered corruption involving $10.12 million in 1977 and $69.9 million last year. A larger staff and additional funds were budgeted for Sudomo's team this year.

Rigged electricity and phone bills and overpriced equipment cost the Foreign Ministry $696,000, it was announced in March.

Sudomo's deputy said in February that 4,743 officials had been detained since the drive started. In January alone, he added, 191 had been seized, 44 of them to face trial and 147 given administrative punishment.

Lt. Gen. Siswaji, onetime deputy national police chief, is the highest ranking individual caught so far. A military tribunal found in December that he and three other officers embezzeled more than $12 million. They were fined and imprisoned with Siswaji getting an eight-year sentence.

Opstib differs from earlier, mostly abortive, clean-up efforts in that candid assessments of the problem have been issued by Suharto, Vice President Adam Malik and other leaders.

"The basis of the problem is obedience of the law. We shall never arrive at (a solution to) the problem of corruption before we make sure that the law is respected," Malik told the weekly Tempo magazine.

Texas Tech regents and administrators agree with a bill authorizing expulsion of foreign students convicted of certain illegal acts, but they disagree with who the bill empowers to dismiss the students.

Sponsored by State Sen. E.L. Short of Tahoka, the bill allows Texas college and university regents to expel foreign students convicted for rioting or intentionally destroying property.

The legislation easily passed the Senate Education Committee Wednesday and is expected to be uncontested when it goes before the full Senate.

Tech officials and regents interviewed Wednesday called the bill "reasonable." But they disagreed with its stipulation that regents be the ones to expel the foreign students.

"The administration should be given that choice and decision, not the regents," said board member Don Workman of Lubbock.

"This does not fall into the policy-making responsibility of the regents. I can't see the logic of it," Workman said.

Charles Hardwick, Tech's vice president for academic affairs, agreed. "Expelling a student is not normally brought before the board of regents. It should be handled through normal academic channels."

The bill authorizes the governing boards to expel any foreign student who is finally convicted of "disorderly conduct, rioting, obstructing highways or other passageways, disrupting a meeting or procession, desecration of a venerated object or intentional reckless destruction of property," according to Short.

Colleges and universities already have the authority to expel any resident student convicted of such offenses, a spokesman for the senator said, but the law did not include the power to expel foreign students.

"Any rule that applies to resident students should apply to foreign students. They should be treated the same," Workman said.

But both administrators and regents agreed that as in the case of resident students, the dismissal of foreign students should be handled by the university administration.

"I wouldn't want the regents to be placed in the position of judge and jury of an individual student's actions," said board member Clint Formby of Hereford.

"I would prefer that the matter be handled through the administration," Formby said. If the board got involved at all, he added, it only should be after hearing the administration's recommendation.

Short said he introduced the bill because he was concerned with the conduct of Iranian students in Beverly Hills, Calif., and the threatened demonstrations by Iranians in Lubbock when the son of the shah of Iran lived here.

"These continuous threats to people and property by foreign students who are in our country to acquire an education can no longer be tolerated in our society," Short said.

MEMORIAL PRESENTED — Lubbock Fire Chief Tom Foster today was presented a memorial from the Fort Bliss Fire Department commemorating three members of the Lubbock Fire Department who were killed in a fire March 25. The memorial was given as a tribute by the Fort Bliss department and was constructed by Fort Bliss firemen and Fire Chief Walter Henager, using three 1½-inch hose nozzles. The memorial sculpture was delivered to the Lubbock Fire Department by ex-Lubbock fireman, Bill Lyons of Fort Bliss. The straight hose nozzles are considered classical pieces of equipment, used mostly for races among firefighters but still found on some hoses in buildings. (Staff Photo by Linn Scherwitz)

CAB Judge Hears Southwest Request

WASHINGTON (AP) -A Civil Aviation Board judge reminded all sides at the outset of a hearing on Southwest Airlines' request for interstate flights from Dallas' Love Field that he will be happy to adjourn for an other try at outside settlement.

Judge William A. Kane Jr. said Wednesday two settlement conferences held in March and April failed to produce an agreement.

The hearing, marked by an opening salvo from Southwest in the form of a ton-and-a-half of copies of petitions signed by its customers, promises to last for days.

Kane's decision will be submitted to the CAB.

Interstate flights have been banned at Love Field, inside the city limits, since the massive Dallas-Fort Worth Regional Airport opened in 1974.

Opponents of Southwest's request for flights betweeen Love Field and New Orleans say it would undercut the regional airport's efficiency by chipping at its market.

"We're not contending that it (D-FW) is a bad airport, but it's a long-haul airport," said Herbert Kelleher, Southwest's chairman of the board.

The Dallas-based airline pioneered low cost flights from in-city airports, avoiding CAB rate regulations since all its flights were within the boundaries of Texas.

Southwest started its first full-scale interstate service in February between Houston's Hobby Airport and New Orleans.

Prosecutors Seek Change Of Venue

FORT WORTH (AP) — The next murder-for-hire trial of Fort Worth industrialist Cullen Davis should be moved out of Tarrant County because prosecutors fear the lives of witnesses might be in danger.

Prosecutors also claim there are influences in Tarrant County that favor the defendant.

Having the trial in Tarrant County would "jeopardize the lives of witnesses...," lead prosecutor Jack Strickland said in documents supporting a change of venue motion filed last week.

Also cited were "existing combinations or influences in favor of the defendant" as reasons for moving the trial.

The "jeopardy" mentioned in the motion was a reference to an incident late year when district attorney investigator Rod Hinson had the back window shot out of a car he was driving, according to prosecutor John Bankston.

Chance For Settlement Remains In Challenge Of Prison System

HOUSTON (UPI) — There is still a chance a 7-year lawsuit attacking the Texas prison system — the nation's largest — could be settled, a Justice Department attorney reports.

But if attorneys for inmates and the government can't reach a settlement with state lawyers on the lengthy case demanding major prison system reforms, the trial is expected to last another three months.

There has been talk of a settlement, which would have to be approved by U.S. District Judge Wayne Justice, but attorneys for the state have said proposed standards for prison staffing and minimum inmate living conditions are impossible to meet.

"Everything's negotiable," he said after he and inmate attorneys rested their case Wednesday.

They had presented a total of 160 witnesses and 1,500 exhibits before lawyers for the state began their case Wednesday.

Attorney General Mark White had been expected to introduce the state's portion of the trial, but he was unable to appear and the tedious offering of exhibits supporting the prison system began.

Assistant Attorney General Ed Idar had made an opening statement for Texas when the trial began last Oct. 2, so White's introduction was not procedurally required. He was elected attorney general after the trial began.

Texas Women Attain Goals In New York

By RICHARD H. GROWALD
UPI National Reporter

NEW YORK (UPI) — New Yorkers made faces at chicken fried steak. They shunned Texas chili.

The six women who dared open a New York restaurant also found their husbands inspecting the cash register drawer. Alcohol could not be served.

"The men who sold us the refrigerators, sinks and other kitchen furniture thought we were a joke. They tagged our job order 'the girls,'" said Susan McAllister.

The "girls" triumphed. Their restaurant has been making money since it opened Oct. 11, 1976. That day the six had $150 left from $40,000 they started with.

"The first day we took in about $1,100. We've been in the black ever since," said June Jenkins.

Their restaurant, The Summerhouse, at the Manhattan corner of Madison Avenue and East 91st St., has helped trigger a renaissance in the neighborhood, previously an area of middle class apartments and also-ran locksmiths and television repair shops. Since the women went to work, gourmet shops, book and toy dealers to the wealthy have opened.

The women's restaurant has grabbed a choice chunk of the Big Apple. Along with Elaine's and P.J. Clarke's, it has become an "in" bistro even without alcohol. The Summerhouse is within 200 feet of two schools and demon rum therefore cannot be sold by the women. Dishes range in cost from $1.75 to $11.50.

Customers include Gloria Swanson, Robert Redford, Diana Ross, George Balanchine, Bess Myerson, President Carter's son Jack and Secretary of State Cyrus Vance, Caroline Kennedy, Richard Chamberlain, Diane Keaton, one of the Smothers Brothers, Phyllis George, Bob Schieffer, Michael Douglas, Peter Boyle and Elaine of Elaine's and Danny Lavezzo of P.J. Clarke's.

The restaurant has expanded, nudging the liquor store that supplies the wine some customers carry in. Success hasn't spoiled the six women.

"I wish it had," said Angelique McLean Graziano. The six each work some 30 hours a week.

The six women have five husbands and 20 children. The children mostly are in high school and college. The husbands, such as June's novelist and sports writer Dan Jenkins, Angelique's sports equipment executive Jack Graziano and Susan's tugboat magnate Bruce McAllister, endure.

"At first, every one of the husbands was skeptical," June said. "They used to walk in, go straight to the cash register and count."

Now the husbands ask for tables ahead of the line. Sometimes, given no privilege, they huddle across the street in a hamburger shop. Has success affected the women's love life?

Susan: "I'll never tell."

Angelique: "It's made it a lot more meaningful."

June: "Well, we come home smelling..."

"Of garlic and onion," said Eloise O'Connell.

Angelique: "People sniff us in the elevators."

The women, seated at one of their marble topped tables, laughed. They said they all had thought for years of opening a restaurant.

Dina Schmidt, one of the three raised in the New York area, has a Park Avenue life and agreed to take part "just so I wouldn't have to work." She, June, Angelique and Cynthia now labor in the kitchen.

Susan had spotted the location, once an antique store. Eloise and June discussed it during a tennis game. The three plus Dina snared Cynthia because they found she just happened to have in the refrigerator for an impromptu lunch a poached striped bass and bottles of Le Foret wine.

Eloise said, "I went in because everybody told us we were out of our minds."

June and Angelique, from Fort Worth, Texas, and Eloise, from Houston, tried to put chicken fried steak and Texas chili on the menu.

"The Yankees, well, better say, Northerners, did not understand chicken fried steak," said Angelique. "And people weren't crazy about our Texas chili — they wanted tomatos and beans in it. That was sacreligious.

Their success has been based on food that is not exactly European, Asiatic or even American. June: "It's very fresh, carefully prepared food, the kind we serve at home."

The most popular dishes have been filet steaks, a curried chicken salad, a dessert called Fantastic Fudge and the biscuits and strawberry butter laid on every table in the 67-seat restaurant. Naming the restaurant was a problem. June's husband's suggestions included Hello, Young Muggers and The Mousse That Roared, Aspic and Old Space, Buckingham Palates and Betty Crocker's Backup.

Cynthia suggested Summerhouse. "And it worked," said Angelique. "We are restaurateurs of New York," said June.

DEAR ABBY

DEAR ABBY: Please don't laugh at my question, or throw this away thinking it's from some silly kid. It's not. I'm a normal, 33-year old man who would like to learn how to be a great lover.

I know what to DO, but I don't know what to say to a lady while I'm making love to her. I feel as though I should be saying something. But what?

They don't have schools for this sort of thing and I can't ask anyone to give me lessons. I have very few hangups, and I've never had any trouble with my love life, but I'd like to know how to make my partner feel really great.

Wants To Please

Dear Wants: Anyone who sincerely wants to make his partner feel "really great" is well on his way to becoming a great lover. You say you have very few hangups. Fine, because frank dialogue with one's partner is essential. There's also a wealth of information to be found in books. And finally, practice makes perfect.

• • •

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I have some good friends I'll call Marge and Bob. We had some terrific times together until they began having marital problems. They kept calling and asking if they could come over to talk. Their talks always ended up in shouting matches. Nothing was ever settled, and it made wrecks of us, so we asked them not to come over to talk anymore.

Now they call us on the phone and talk endlessly. First Marge calls me and complains about Bob, and when she hangs up, Bob calls and tells my husband his version of the story.

Abby, I know good friends are supposed to be supportive, but we're out of patience with these two.

How can we refuse to listen without giving them the impression that we don't care? We do.

Good Friends

Dear Friends: Tell them that BECAUSE you are such good friends you can't view their situation objectively. Urge them to seek help from a qualified marriage counselor. It could save their marriage and your friendship.

• • •

DEAR ABBY: You told a reader whose husband kept bringing home unexpected dinner guests, "Quit being a GOOD scout-be a GIRL Scount instead, and be prepared."

Abby, "Be Prepared" is the motto of the Boy Scouts — NOT the girl scouts.

Girls have succeeded in invading nearly all of the male organizations. Can't the Boy Scounts be kept separate from the Girl Scouts, without making them share a common motto?

Eagle Scout, Bradford, Pa.

Dear Eagle: Your knowledge of scouting is for the birds. "Be Prepared" is the motto for Girl Scouts, too. (Scout's honor!)

Parents Can Help Child Choose Career

By BETTY YARMON

NEW YORK (WNS) — Memo to parents: Your child's future is influenced by events that start in the pre-school years, and continue through all of adult life, and career decision-making is not an event that occurs at a given time. And there is a role for parents in the process of positive career development from the outset.

Here are some tips for parents on how to help children make career plans, as itemized in a recent pamphlet from the U.S. Office of Education:

— Encourage your child to ask and think about the question, "What will I be when I grow up?"

In the early years, children's hopes often are expressed in fantasy terms, especially during play: "I'm Daddy and I'm Superman and you're Mommy and you are Wonder Woman." Don't criticize such statements; your child is exploring who he or she is. It will help you to understand him or her better if you let your child talk in this way.

— Don't discourage your child from planning particular careers at an early age. It is better to respond, "Why does this appeal to you?" than to say something like, "You wouldn't like to do that." Or, "That's a terrific job." Or, "That's completely unrealistic." Until major action decisions have to be made, it is better to let your child think about the possible job choices.

— Try to eliminate sex bias in thinking about your child's career. Your daughter may well wish to enter an occupation you think of as "masculine" or your son to enter an occupation you consider "feminine." Times are changing, and your children will need extra measures of your emotional support.

— Don't hesitate to respond when your child asks, "What do you think I should be when I grow up?" Try to make clear that it is more important that he or she be happy than become what you would like. However, you can point out particular talents that he or she possess, and discuss the jobs in which these talents would be helpful.

— Tell your child about the work you do, in a positive way that will gain respect for you. Neither encourage nor discourage your child from considering your occupation. The important thing is that your child sees that you, through your work, are making contributions to society.

— Encourage your child to ask people about their jobs. Make use of your friends who are in occupations your child is considering. Emphasize to your child that he or she should seek information, not firm advice, from such persons. If your child seems particularly interested, ask a friend if your child can visit to see what the job actually involves.

— Take your child on field trips to see various people at work in factories, offices, shops, etc. This should be helpful in letting children acquire a realistic view of a variety of jobs.

— Help your child explore hobbies and other leisure-time activities that are productive and useful. Sometimes such activities can lead to career choices. But whether they do or not is unimportant. What is important is that they help your child see himself or herself as someone who can accomplish something successfully.

— Help your child understand how important school work will be in later job decisions. Show how such subjects as reading, arithmetic and communications are used in almost all occupations. In short, help them to understand that there are more important reasons for going to school than simply going to school.

— Encourage your child to engage in part-time work outside the home. If such work is done for pay, it can help your child explore career interests, and it can help your child discover the sense of accomplishment and self-pride that can come from work.

— Encourage your child to visit with teachers and counselors about career plans and hopes. After such visits, talk with your children about what they learned. Feel free to tell them what you think, but in doing so, make it clear that you are expressing your opinion, not telling them what to do with their lives.

— Visit the schools your children attend. If your child has been discussing career plans with a teacher or counselor, ask such questions as: "Do you think this career is suitable in view of my child's strengths and weaknesses?"; "What are the best schools for pursuing this field of study?"; "What is the employment outlook for this career?"

Concludes the pamphlet's message to parents: "Your child's career choices will certainly affect your future as well as your child's. In this sense you have a right as well as a responsibility to be active in helping your child make career plans."

LEFTOVER YARN

TOLEDO, Ohio (UPI) — What can you do with yarn left over from latch hook rug projects? Panel members of National Family Opinion, Inc., a market research firm, came up with these suggestions: make ties for homemade gift cards or quilts and-or pompoms to decorate packages or give the yarn to children to make collage pictures. Make squares and put them together as a patchwork pillow or bathroom rug, a bean bag or a denim-backed bicycle seat cover elasticized to fit the seat the way a shower cap fits your head.

Opening lead: Nine of ♡.

There are times when it is obvious that drastic steps are necessary if you are to defeat a contract. That is the time to throw caution to the wind.

The bidding was quite orthodox. After North's one no trump response, East interjected a heart overcall—it is a losing tactic to sit tight with this type of hand in the hope that the opponents will end up in a no trump contract that can be defeated. South showed his strength with a jump rebid, and North had just had enough to carry on to game.

West led the top of his heart sequence. (There is a school that believes in leading low from three worthless cards in a suit partner has bid, which would have made East's task much easier on this hand.) East won the king and noted the fall of the queen. If that was an honest card, there were no more tricks to be had from the heart suit. With solid spades and the ace-king of clubs, declarer would probably have leaped to four spades rather than three, so the defenders could expect one trick from those suits. Therefore, if the contract were to be defeated, diamonds would have to furnish two tricks—and those tricks would have to come quickly, before declarer could obtain any discards on the clubs.

For the defenders to make two diamond tricks, declarer would have had to start with at least three diamonds. So, since the only way must be the right one, East shifted to the jack of diamonds at trick two!

Declarer was left without recourse. He won the diamond in dummy with the queen and ran the nine of spades. West won the king and promptly reverted to a diamond through dummy's king. East's ace-ten scored two tricks for a one-trick set.

Observe that the diamond suit had to be attacked at trick two. With any other defense, declarer will have time to concede a trick to the king of spades, draw trumps and discard a diamond on the fourth club. Time was of the essence.

Small Isle Of Wight Unknown To Most Tourists

By TED J. SIMON
A-J Travel Editor

"Where, far from noise and smoke of town,
I watch the twighlight falling brown
All round a careless-ordered garden
(Alfred Lord Tennyson 1809-1892)

There is a part of England unknown to most tourists. It doesn't have Buckingham Palace, Big Ben or Westminster Abbey. But it has beauty, interesting history, and an unhurried pace that makes it this writer's favorite part of England. It is a small island that will appeal to the most jaded traveler.

Midway along the English Channel, approximately five miles off the coast of England from Lymington or Portsmouth, the Isle of Wight has the good fortune of being away from the usual route traveled by tourists, yet convenient for the informed traveler.

Approximately 23 miles long and 13 miles wide, the Isle of Wight has the shape of an elongated diamond. The shape is appropriate because the island is truely a gem. Reached by ferry, hovercraft or hydrofoil, the island is small enough to appeal to walkers and bicyclists. Rental autos are available and bus services cover the whole island for visitors that don't care to drive on the left side of the road.

Because of its geographic location, the island enjoys sunshine many days when the English mainland is wet with rain. The blend of sunshine, moisture and temperature give parts of the isle a near tropical appearance. There are times of the year when the island is flower scented. The flora attracts many species of birds including ring doves.

The island's official flower, wood calamint, belonging to the mint family, is only found on the Isle of Wight. Bearing pink tubular shaped blossoms, the plant has an aroma of mint. Glanville fritillary, an interesting butterfly with pale orange, black and white coloring, only breeds on the island. Both the flower and the butterfly are protected by law. The isle is also one of two last refuges in Southern England for red squirrels.

Ewen Brenchley, director of the Isle of Wight tourist board, believes vsitors will find the isle to be both unique and familiar.

"This is a miniature England," Brenchley said. "Our isle contains most of what you can find in England. Here you will find country scenes, architecture and historic sites that will remind you of England, and even Scotland and Wales. But, our features are in a much smaller area."

A favorite attraction is Carisbrooke Castle, a bastion dating from the fourth century. The structure and ruins comprise one of the finest examples of a moated Norman castle. In 1817, John Keats wrote: "I don't think I shall ever see ruins surpassing those of Carisbrooke Castle."

Almost story book in appearance, the massive walls and ramparts loom above the ground. As Brenchley led the way across the moat's bridge to the main gatehouse, I wouldn't have been surprised if we had been challenged by an armored knight.

The archway, with tall drum towers on either side, brought forth thoughts of cross bows, catapults and kettles of boiling oil. It was a portal to history and a pathway that had seen victor and vanquished.

Inside the courtyard Brenchley pointed at a second story window. He said, "Charles the First was held prisoner there for just about a year from 1647 toward the end of 1648. While he was here, he tried to escape two times. Both times the attempts failed, and eventually he was taken across to Hampton Court where he was executed."

In spite of such an event, the castle is far from gloomy. The rampart walk affords a spectacular view of the beautiful countryside. HRH Princess Beatrice, youngest daughter of Queen Victoria, when she died in 1944 had known Carisbrooke Castle as her beloved home for 55 years.

The Isle of Wight appealed to Queen Victoria so much that she purchased Osborne House at her own expense in 1844. She preferred the island residence as a place where she could escape the formality and pomp of Buckingham Palace.

Following the death of her husband Prince Albert, the queen returned to the island to retire quietly for the remaining 40 years of her life. She died at Osborne House in 1901.

Much of the large structure, a veritable museum of Victoriana, and the surrounding 1,000 acre estate can be visited by tourists. The present Queen granted permission in 1954 for her great-great grandmother's personal rooms to be open to the public. It is a visit that every person will always remember.

Although tourists can't spend the night at Osborne House, overnight accommodations are available at Farringford Hotel, the home of Alfred Lord Tennyson. You can reside, dine and walk the very primrose path that Tennyson and his bride Emma found so appealing in the late 1800s.

While much of Farringford remains as Tennyson knew it, new structures and modern conveniences have been added for the comfort of guests. Besides the residence that is now the hotel, there are cottages with central heating and garden suites with well equipped kitchens.

Keeping up with times and offsetting the high cost of fuel is a bank of solar panels. "We find them very effective," noted George Evans, proprieter of Farringford. "In '76 we saved 60 percent of our usual oil consumption. Even the water for our swimming pool is heated by the solar panels."

Tennyson enjoyed long walks about the island., and many of his paths can be followed today. A picturesque walk of about five miles from the hotel the Needles, a point of the island that ends in dramatic chunks of white chalk jutting up out of the choppy surf.

If you are a photographer, be sure to have color film in your camera for a visit to nearby Alum Bay. The colors of the sand cliffs are almost beyond belief. Along with earthen colors of brown and beige, there are sandy walls of red, yellow, orange, violet and blue! Visitors are allowed to collect samples of the 21 different colored sands.

Accommodations on the Isle of Wight are priced for all pocket books. Most visitors prefer a package of several days that includes bed and breakfast which allows for a different place for dinner each evening. A very nice establishment with bed and breakfast, and even dinner, will only cost about $25 a day for a three-day stay.

Braniff International with economical non-stop service from D/FW to London's Gatwick Airport has made Southeast England and the Isle of Wight convenient destinations for South Plains residents. Gatwick Airport, served by Braniff's 747, is strategically located south of London traffic; trains arrive and depart frequently at the airport to connect with main line stations all over Southeast England.

A friendlier isle would be difficult to find as the inhabitants are so cheerful and outgoing.

Califano Revises Radiation Exposure Figures

WASHINGTON (AP) — HEW Secretary Joseph A. Califano Jr., told Congress today that persons living near the damaged Three Mile Island nuclear plant received nearly twice the amount of radiation from the accident than federal health officials first suspected.

Califano told a Senate committee that he is therefore revising his earlier assertion that the March 28 accident near Harrisburg, Pa., would cause no additional cancer deaths in the area.

Statistically, at least one additional cancer death should be expected as a direct result of the accident and some scientists believe the number may be as high as 10 additional cancer deaths, the head of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare said.

Testifying before a Senate governmental affairs subcommittee, Califano said a similar number of non-fatal cancers may also be expected among the 2 million residents residing within 50 miles of the plant.

He said an HEW staff report expected to be released next week will show that residents within this radius between March 28 and April 7 — the worst days of the accident — received a total dose of 3,500 person rems, a unit used for measuring total exposure to a given population.

Several days after the accident, Califano told another congressional hearing that the total population dose was about 1,800 person rems.

Califano said the larger estimates of the radiation exposure are due to an increase in the number of radiation monitors brought to the area and more sophisticated calculations.

He said one of the main problems in determining health effects of the accident was that during the early hours of the event there were only a few radiation monitors in service.

Califano said the health consequences to workers at the plant and those involved in the clean-up operation will be even more serious than those to the general population in the Three Mile Island area.

The Nuclear Regulatory Commission was told by its staff meanwhile that company and government personnel in the vicinity of the Three Mile Island plant received radiation exposures generally below standards of no more than 5,000 millirems per year or 3,000 millirems in a three-month period.

A millirem is one-thousandth of a rem, the standard unit measuring radiation exposure. An individual dose of 600 rems at one time is considered lethal, 100 rems can cause radiation sickness and 10 rems can damage vital organs. The average person gets close to 200 millirems a year from medical X-rays and other ordinary sources of radiation.

Leo Higginbotham, assistant NRC director of inspection and enforcement, told the commission that three workers at Three Mile Island received radiation exposures between 3,000 and 4,000 millirems. Two others were exposed to between 1,000 and 2,000 millirems, and 23 received doses between 500 and 1,000 millirems, Higginbotham said.

Another 233 workers were exposed to doses between 100 and 500 millirems, he said.

Higginbotham said seven NRC employes were exposed to 500 to 1,000 millirems after the accident, 16 received between 100 and 500 millirems, and 232 received less than 100 millirems.

NRC staff member Hal Peterson told reporters the maximum radiation exposure possible for any resident outside the plant site would have been no more than about 90 millirems. To get that much, the resident would have had to camp outdoors by the plant fence for 10 days after the accident, he said.

"When I testified on April 4, I indicated that based on the population dose estimate at that time we did not anticipate any additional fatal cancers," Califano told the panel.

"My testimony today that we would expect one additional cancer death from the accident reflects the increase in the estimates of the total population dose level since that earlier date."

However, Califano also told senators that his estimates of cancer deaths were based on traditional theory and that many scientists believe that this theory underestimates the risks of low-level radiation. These scientists "would predict up to 10 additional cancer deaths for this population," he testified.

Although one additional fatal cancer may seem small statistically when compared to the 325,000 cancer deaths that would occur naturally in this population, it is nonetheless ultimately significant for the individuals who become the statistics," he said.

"There is even greater uncertainty about the estimates of genetic defects fom low-level radiation than for cancer deaths and non-fatal cancers," he continued.

However, Califano said that "prevailing theory" would suggest that given the radiation dosage from Three Mile Island, one additional birth defect in the area might be expected.

Rationing System Would Use Coupons

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The gasoline rationing plan President Carter wants authority to impose in an emergency would create a new type of banking, a new currency, and even — its detractors say — "junkyard millionaires."

Both House and Senate are set to vote soon, probably next week, on the rationing plan. Carter calls it essential to prepare for emergencies such as the oil embargo of 1973-74, and promises not to ise it except under the most dire conditions.

Congress has two cracks at the plan: now, to say whether it approves of the way the plan is drawn; and later, if the gasoline shortages get severe enough for Carter to declare a rationing emergency. Then Congress has 15 days in which to approve or kill it.

Here is how it would work:

The federal government would decide how best to divide the available gasoline among the vehicles needing fuel. Officials would periodically send every owner of a car a coupon check.

As with any other government check, the recipient could cash it, but this time at special coupon offices. Instead of cash, the recipient would get coupons.

They will look like miniature currency, carefully designed to thwart counterfeiting and somewhat changed from the batch printed in a 1974 emergency which had a flaw: they could be used in some change-making machines.

Each coupon would entitle the bearer to a designated number of gallons of gasoline. The driver would turn over the coupons when he bought gas.

In what is called the "white market," people would be able freely to give the coupons away, or sell them, to anyone wanting extra coupons.

Carter promised the system would be flexible, allowing plenty of gasoline for emergency and essential vehicles, and giving the states leeway to account for regional hardships.

Just how much gasoline the average driver would receive cannot be determined in advance, since there is no way to know how severe the shortages might become.

The fact that the coupons would be issued on the basis of registration of a vehicle brought the charge from Carter's opponents that "junkyard millionaires" would be created: the rich would flock to junkyards to buy old cars just to get extra coupon allotments.

More serious opposition has come from those who say the plan hurts rural and poor areas, areas dependent on cars and with little mass transit, areas where people have no choice but to drive long distances to work.

As in World War II, the plan would have local rationing boards to consider appeals for higher allotments.

Carter's message to Congress explaining the plan said, "no gasoline rationing program can perfectly meet the diverse needs of millions of gasoline users and still be capable of rapid implementation in an emergency. Some difficult tradeoffs must be made. ..."

The rationing program, if it is ever carried out, would be the first such coupon plan in the United States designed to save gasoline. Ironically, the World War II gasoline rationing — set in motion in 1942 — was not for gasoline conservation, but to save rubber.

At the time, Japan had taken over most of the sources of natural rubber exports to the United States, and rubber was needed for the war effort.

Later in the war, gasoline itself was in short supply, particularly in the northern and eastern states because pipelines were nonexistent or inadequate and ocean transport was all but preempted for the war effort.

Suspect Surrenders To Ohio Authorities

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — One of two men wanted in the kidnap-slaying of Cleveland grocery store magnate Julius Kravitz surrendered early today and told police he had driven the second suspect to the Pittsburgh airport, police said.

Police Major Phillip Barnes said John File, 26, turned himself over to off-duty detective Richard Reese at 3 a.m. at a local high school.

He later gave a statement to police saying he and the other suspect, Michael Levine, 35, had stayed at a downtown Akron motel, registered under File's name, on Tuesday night, the night of the abduction and shooting.

But they checked out Wednesday and File drove Levine to Pittsburgh at 8 p.m. Wednesday, returning afterwards to Akron, Barnes said File told police.

Levine was still at large. Police said earlier the two men could have left the state, possibly with a $100,000 bankroll.

File was held today in Summit County jail awaiting transportation back to Cuyahoga County.

"At first I thought it was a joke," Reese said, describing his thoughts when File telephoned him at home about 1 a.m. "He said he had heard my name on the street and that I was a man of my word and could be trusted."

File was "obviously nervous" when Reese met him about 3 a.m. at Buchtel High School, Reese said.

"He said he wasn't armed, so I searched him, placed him under arrest, read him his rights and drove him to the station," Reese said.

Warrants filed in Shaker Heights against the two men charge them with kidnapping, aggravated murder and attempted aggravated murder in the slaying of Kravitz and the wounding of his wife.

Police believe it was Levine who fired upon Julius and Georgene Kravitz in the back seat of Kravitz's car hours after the couple was kidnapped Tuesday from their Shaker Heights apartment.

The two men allegedly drove the Kravitzes to a motel in Kravitz's car after forcing their way into the couple's 12-room apartment.

Mrs. Kravitz, 56, was shot in both arms but was able to push herself from the automobile and escape. Kravitz, 68, board chairman of First National Supermarkets Inc., was hit three times in the chest and died Wednesday of heart failure following surgery, hospital officials said.

Before undergoing surgery Tuesday afternoon, Kravitz insisted on being permitted to telephone his wife in another hospital, telling her, "I'm glad you made it ... I hope I make it. ... I hope I live to see you. ... I love you," hospital officials said.

Authorities were reportedly investigating reports Levine, who owns a chemical company, had withdrawn about $100,000 from a Twinsburg bank Tuesday.

Shaker Heights Police Chief George Lamboy said Wednesday the evidence against the two continued to mount. He gave the following reasons:

Britons Elect New Government

LONDON (AP) — Britons braved foul weather and began electing a new government today with final opinion polls promising a Conservative victory and Europe's first woman prime minister after five years of Labor Party rule.

Election officials said that despite unseasonable chilling winds, sleet and snow coming from the Arctic, there was a brisk start when the polling stations opened at 7 a.m.

It was the 11th election of a House of Commons since World War II, and three polls forecast margins of 5.7, 6 and 7 percentage points for Margaret Thatcher's Conservatives over Prime Minister James Callaghan's Laborites.

This indicated the Tories should win 330 to 333 of the 635 seats in Commons, giving Mrs. Thatcher a majority of 25 to 30. That would be the biggest majority for a British government since the Laborites won a 96-seat majority in 1966.

Midway through the voting, the country's legal bookmakers reported a rush of bets on the Conservatives to win, including one wager of 20,000 pounds ($40,000) placed with the Joe Carol betting firm. This tightened the odds on a Tory victory even further. From 1 to 3 at the start of the day, they went to 1 to 6 in the afternoon, meaning a bettor would stake $6 and get back only one dollar, plus his stake money, if the Tories win.

Japan Leader To Seek Reductions In Tariffs

WASHINGTON (AP) — Japanese Prime Minister Masayoshi Ohira said today he will seek approval from the Japanese parliament for advanced implementation of tariff reductions agreed to at the Tokyo Round of tariff talks.

Ohira's announcement, made in a speech to the National Press Club, was seen as a demonstration of Japanese good will in the face of persistent American criticism over that country's multi-billion trade surplus.

In his prepared remarks, Ohira said he was proposing the measure "as a contribution to rectifying Japan's international payments imbalance."

Japanese officials who briefed reporters on the speech said that Japan will implement the advanced tariff reductions in stages, in accordance with specified formulas. The officials also said "it is expected" that other developed countries would respond by taking "appropriate measures to counteract protectionist movements."

Ohira, who is on the second day of his official visit here, also pledged a continued effort to strive for "a more open and freer world trading system."

Discussing Japan's foreign policy, Ohira said the Japanese partnership with the United States is pivotal.

"This partnership is indispensible to world peace and stability. We owe it to the world to build on today's solid foundations by developing a still more productive partnership for the 1980," he said.

"The balance of power — and therefore the peace — in Asia and the Pacific, and throughout the world, continues to depend on a strong America."

Ohira said Japan and the rest of the world expect "resolute leadership from the United States, and I for one am confident that the administration is responsive to these expectations."

Gas Station Owners Planning Protest

NEW YORK (AP) — Buying gasoline the weekend of May 17-20 may be difficult in many parts of the nation if service station owners are successful in their plans for a "gasless weekend" to protest federal controls on their prices.

The idea originated in California, where most dealers are expected by industry officials to participate, and since has spread to other states, including Connecticut, Illinois, Idaho, Iowa, Washington, Nevada, Louisiana and Arizona, according to officials of state dealer associations.

It is unclear, however, just how many dealers nationwide might participate in the proposed closing.

(A spot check of local service stations indicates there is probably no major move on the part of Lubbock retailers to participate in the protest. Of the service station managers contacted, many had not heard of the protest and none planned to participate.

(Walter Bumpass, manager of a 50th Street Shell station, voiced a common opinion when he said, "I'll just close when I want to." Bumpass closes on Sunday anyway, he said, but has no immediate plans to close on Saturday as well.

(Though some service station managers said their allocations had dropped this month, none of those contacted said the drop in allocation would cause them to close on weekends.)

"If something isn't forthcoming from the Department of Energy, many dealers may join the movement," said Charles Matties, who operates an Exxon station in West Hartford, Conn.

"There's a definite feeling toward doing something," said Matties, a former president of the National Congress of Petroleum Retailers, an industry group that has refused to endorse the shutdown proposal.

The aim of the gasless weekend is to force the government to loosen controls on the mark-up gas stations are allowed to take on sales of gasoline. That mark-up, known as "dealer margin," cannot now exceed the amount it was in May 1973, plus 3 cents. Dealers also have been allowed to add small amounts to cover some other costs.

The dealers want the current system replaced with a straight 25 percent mark-up over the wholesale price of gasoline. That would raise the price of gasoline about three cents a gallon above the current national average price of 77 cents a gallon.

The dealers acknowledge that the gasless weekend would inconvenience the public.

"It wasn't our intention to hurt the public, but we don't know what else we can do," said Don Skilling, a spokesman for the California Service Station Association, which represents 2,000 of the state's 14,000 dealers.

Robert Jacobs, executive secretary of the Illinois Gasoline Dealers Association and a longtime advocate of a gas dealer strike, said the planned shutdown "is doomed because of the timing."

Jacobs said it would be more logical to hold the gasless weekend at the end of the month, when supplies are low anyway as monthly allocations run out.

But that weekend is Memorial Day weekend, and the gas dealers are apparently trying to keep from interfering with traditionally heavy holiday traffic by holding their protest the weekend before.

John Wayne Reportedly In Stable Condition

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Hollywood legend John Wayne spent "a good night" recovering from his second operation this year, a hospital spokeswoman said today.

The 71-year-old film veteran remained in stable condition in the intensive care unit of UCLA Medical Center after undergoing surgery to remove an intestinal blockage, said spokeswoman Suzziette Darby.

Al Hicks, a hospital spokesman, said the surgery Wednesday was routine.

UCLA Medical Center night nursing supervisor Barbara Stone said today that doctors had "not issued any statement at all" on the question of whether they found traces of the cancer that had forced removal of Wayne's stomach in January. He also had a cancerous left lung removed 15 years ago.

"There's nothing on the release I have on cancer one way or the other," she said. "To my knowledge there's nothing that's been released one way or the other regarding cancer."

Wayne was taken to UCLA Tuesday night. The hospital said he was scheduled to return to UCLA, anyway, for a check-up following his January cancer surgery.

At that time, Wayne was admitted for gall bladder surgery. But surgeons found cancer in his stomach and had to remove it during a 9½-hour operation. He left the hospital Feb. 10.

"An examination of Mr. Wayne after his admission for a routine check revealed a partial intestinal obstruction that was relieved in an operation this morning," said hospital spokeswoman Bonnie Whitham.

Wayne, who will be 72 on May 26, was taken to the intensive care unit following the surgery, Hicks said, but had been in the same ninth-floor room where he stayed while recuperating from his Jan. 12 cancer surgery.

O'Neill Will Not Block Deregulation Opponents

WASHINGTON (AP) — House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill says he won't stand in the way of those seeking to block President Carter from decontrolling U.S. oil prices even though their efforts may be in vain.

O'Neill's stance on the politically sensitive deregulation issue gave new impetus to an attempt by House liberals to keep price lids on oil.

He commented Wednesday after the House Commerce Committee failed by only one vote to attach a stop-decontrol amendment to a bill authorizing money for the Department of Energy.

The amendment by Rep. Toby Moffett, D-Conn., failed on a 21-21 tie vote. Both sides appeared surprised by how close the proposal came to being approved.

Moffett called the outcome a moral victory for foes of decontrol, who he predicted would prevail the next time a vote is taken.

"I would have voted with Moffett," O'Neill said when asked by reporters for his views on the close committee action.

It was the most direct attack the speaker has made on the president's initiative to raise U.S. oil prices to world levels. In the past, O'Neill generally has supported Carter's plan, saying he could live with decontrol if a strong "windfall profits" tax were in place.

But O'Neill said Wednesday, "I've always been against deregulation." He added that if House liberals follow through with their plans to try to force a House vote on the issue "I wouldn't attempt to thwart them."

"Am I going to lobby for them? The answer is no," O'Neill added. "What do they gain?" he asked, suggesting that even if a block-decontrol bill passed in the House it likely would not win Senate approval.

O'Neill said he would rather spend his time trying to strengthen Carter's "windfall profits" tax on oil companies.

He said that as he reads the mood of House members, "they want a stronger windfall profits tax" than Carter's proposal for a tax which would take about 13 percent of the additional revenues oil companies would reap from decontrol over the next three years.

O'Neill said House Ways and Means Committee Chairman Al Ullman, D-Ore., shares his views and is prepared to "get out the strongest tax bill he can."

Carter's decision to lift price controls from oil starting June 1 does not require congressional approval.

Thus the only way Congress can block it is by passing a new law. Moffett's proposal would accomplish this indirectly, by prohibiting federal funds from being used to implement the decontrol plan in the fiscal year beginnning Oct. 1.

In other energy developments Wednesday:

—The government accused seven major oil companies of violating federal price controls on crude oil by overcharging their customers nearly $1.7 billion during a 5½-year period. The Energy Department said the money should either be returned to customers or given to the federal Treasury. Most of the oil companies denied wrongdoing saying they have followed federal regulations and the others declined to comment until they had more time to study the government action.

—The Senate voted 89-3 to give Carter authority to order thermostats in public buildings set to no more than 65 degrees in winter or less than 80 degrees in the summer. A House vote is expected on the same measure next week.

—The Senate also went along with a recommendation of its energy committee by rejecting, 70-23, a proposal to give Carter authority to ban outdoor electric advertising.

—A California developer showed White House aides and members of Congress an automobile powered by liquid hydrogen. Stephen Writer, general manager of Solar-Hydrogen Development Co., Inc., says the car can run on hydrogen at a fuel cost of about 49 cents a gallon. He has sued the government for a chance to bid on government auto contracts.

—The Energy Department said it has amended its rules to help individual gas stations during a gasoline shortage. Officials said the changes would shift some gasoline into areas where demand has grown greatly in recent years, away from areas of low growth.

Department Says Oil Companies Should Refund Overcharges

WASHINGTON (AP) — Seven major oil companies accused of overcharging customers for crude oil should have to refund the nearly $1.7 billion to consumers or the federal treasury, says the Department of Energy.

The companies were accused by the department Wednesday of violating federal price controls on crude oil, primarily by incorrectly classifying low-priced oil so it could be sold at a higher price.

Paul Bloom, special Energy Department counsel for compliance, told a news conference that the complaints were administrative and did not involve charges of criminal activity.

He said the department would seek to have the alleged overcharges refunded to consumers whose claims can be identified or to the federal treasury.

The latest complaints bring to about $3.5 billion the amount alleged to have been overcharged by refiners during the past 5½ years, he said. The complaints are the result of audits of the major refiners to check their compliance with federal price regulations from August 1973 through March 1979.

The Energy Department's proposed orders seek the highest refund from Texaco at $888.3 million; Gulf Oil followed with $577.9 million.

The orders also seek $101.6 million from Standard Oil of California, $42 million from Atlantic Richfield and $29 million from Marathon Oil.

Gasohol Station Opens In Kansas

TOPEKA, Kan. (UPI) — The first retail gasohol station has opened in Kansas and is offering 2,000 gallons of the fuel mix at 14.5 cents per gallon on a first-come, first-serve basis.

However, the price offered today at the Workingman's Friend station on the west side of the capital city will last only until the 2,000 gallons have been pumped into vehicle gas tanks. The low price is part of a radio station promotion.

The station began pumping gasohol — a mixture of 90 percent unleaded gasoline and 10 percent grain alcohol — on a trial basis Wednesday night.

Ray Gaffney, vice president of Highway Oil Co. which owns the Workingman's Friend stations, said all Highway Oil outlets in Topeka and Kansas City will carry the fuel when details of supply and delivery are worked out.

"Within two weeks we should have something pretty good going," Gaffney said.

Today, the first official day of its sale, KEWI radio agreed to subsidize sale of 2,000 gallons of gasohol, with a 10-gallon limit per customer — at 14.5 cents per gallon. Gaffney said the normal price will be 78 cents per gallon — the same as unleaded gasoline. 3

"We're using the best available 200-proof denatured alcohol," he said. "Anything less and you end up cheating your customers so we will use nothing but the best. It's superexpensive and does add to our cost significantly. But we will it sell for the same price as our unleaded fuel and replace our unleaded fuel with it. We're just happy to be the first company on the street with it."

Gaffney said any car with an internal combustion engine, regardless of age, can use the fuel, without carburetor modifications. He said the fuel has about three points higher octane than regular unleaded gasoline, is cleaner burning, gives off 30 percent less carbon monoxide and increases miles per gallon.

"This is one case where alcohol and gasoline do mix," he joked. "By the way, the corn that is used to make this gasohol is American corn, not Arabian corn or Iranian corn."

Shell Would Prefer Selling Gasoline By Liter

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Shell Oil Company says it would prefer to sell gasoline at the pump by the liter, rather than replace metering units when the price goes above $1 a gallon.

"We estimate that it would cost the industry between $250 million and $300 million above the cost of metric to remain in gallons," Shell said in a statement submitted to the U.S. Metric Board.

The board is holding two days of hearings to decide what to do when gasoline goes above the 99.9 cents-a-gallon price limit that most pump meters — called computers by the industry — can accommodate. The Metric Board does not have the authority to require changes, but it helps coordinate the nation's changeover to metric measurements.

Officials feel the pump problem is their first opportunity to introduce metric measurements in the United States on a large scale. The board heard testimony Wednesday from a Canadian official that a similar conversion there went without a hitch.

Shell, which did not give verbal testimony, said in the statement it could convert its 65,000 pump computers to metric in one to two years, but to change to $1-plus a gallon would take three.

"At some time in the future we will probably be forced to make the metric changeover, either when we reach $2-a gallon for gasoline or whenever a law is passed requiring us to phase in the metric system," the Shell statement said.

At the opening of the hearings Wednesday, board chairman Louis F. Polk said there are at least five options for converting computers on all the nation's pumps, estimated at 1.2 million to 1.5 million.

These are, he said: to register prices above 99.9 cents a gallon; to calculate price per half-gallon, per liter, per quart or to calculate whole number prices and drop the tenths-of-a-cent.

An Amoco spokesman, Ronald H. Berlind, told the board that the prospect of dollar-a-gallon gasoline is imminent and that it "comes at a time when as many as 95 to 97 percent of all the gasoline outlets in the country are not equipped" to display such a price.

Alex Ada of Exxon said a temporary solution would be to adopt the practice of half-pricing used by some gasoline stations in 1973-1974 when gasoline cost above the 49.9 cent a gallon capacity of pump computers. Pumps were set to compute at half price and when the sale was completed, the customer paid double the amount displayed on the pump.

"Even though half pricing does not fulfill the customary practice of full sale registration, it must be recognized as a temporary intrim measure to assure an orderly transition," Ada said.

No Motive Found In Alabama Bombing

SEN. HOWARD BAKER

Baker Predicts GOP Race With Reagan

NEW YORK (UPI) — Sen. Howard Baker predicts he and former California Gov. Ronald Reagan will fight it out for the GOP presidential nomination.

"In the final competition, it will be Reagan and Baker," the Tennessee Republican told the American Society of Newspaper Editors Wednesday.

Baker predicted, however, that he would win because "I can develop new issues and present them to the country in a winning way."

Baker, who is the Senate minority leader, has not formally declared his candidacy. However, after addressing the nation's top editors, he told reporters: "I will be a candidate for the Republican nomination.

"I'm like the weekend rush hour," he added. "I announce every week and nobody pays any attention to it."

In his address, Baker said he was "suspicious" of the soon-to-be-completed strategic arms limitation treaty because it might "have effects that are not understood now.

"I'm leaning against it," he said. "It will take more convincing to make me vote for it."

The Senate minority leader said that while the "odds are slightly against its ratification," 30 to 40 Senate members haven't made up their minds about the SALT pact.

"It might contain a big surprise," he said. "The president has a penchant for big surprises," such as the Mideast treaty.

Baker said he wanted to judge the agreement's effect "on our defense capability for the next decade and that of the Soviet Union." The Soviets are "hell bent for leather to build up" their military strength, he said.

The Tennessee Republican said the major issue in the next presidential election will be the economy. He said the United States would have to break its dependence on foreign oil if it wanted to fight inflation.

"There is no way we can contain inflation when arbitrary price decisions are made by people who have no concern about us," he said.

BESSEMER, Ala. (AP) — Public Safety Commissioner Max Williams had received threats on his life for the past eight months. The threats nearly became reality when a package exploded in his office, killing a police lieutenant and wounding Williams and two other men.

Police Chief George Barron said both he and Williams had received death threats by message and telephone during the past eight months. But the chief said he knew of no reason for the threats.

No motive has been established in the Wednesday explosion which killed police Lt. Clifford T. Hill, police said.

"Things have been going real well lately," said Mayor Ed Porter. "It wasn't politics. I just don't know what to think. God only knows what happened."

"My goodness, I didn't think we dealt in things like hit me," said City Attorney J. Howard McEniry. "That's dope and rackets. This is just a little country town, but durn if this doesn't give us another black eye.

"Max Williams is one of the most noncontroversial figures around. He tried to be congenial and cooperative.

"I had someone call me and say 'reckon it was bingo.' I say no. Max kept out of that. The county came in and shut those places down," said McEniry, referring to a recent crackdown on bingo.

Barron said he had asked Gov. Fob James to offer a reward in an effort to solve the bombing.

Hill, helped by Williams and another city employee, was attempting to open a shoe box-sized package when it exploded, shattering Williams' second-floor City Hall office in this town of 33,000 located about 10 miles southwest of Birmingham.

Williams was listed in serious condition today in the intensive care unit at University Hospital in Birmingham after undergoing surgery. He suffered severe chest and abdominal wounds as well as other injuries.

Gene Lint, the mayor's executive secretary, also was injured in the blast and was listed in critical condition in a Bessemer hospital.

A janitor in an adjacent office, Willie Jones, was treated for a minor eye injury and released from the Bessemer Hospital.

Jones, who was cleaning Porter's nearby office Wednesday morning, said: "I heard a big old blast. It knocked me down in the mayor's office.

"I could hear them hollering in Mr. Williams' office. I heard Mister Williams hollering like he was hurt real bad," Jones said, adding he was unable to reach the men because of smoke and debris.

A few hours before the blast, a major strike had begun by city employees in Birmingham, but there was no indication of any tie-in. The Birmingham Police Department bomb squad abandoned its strike temporarily to offer assistance.

Paul Durham, a federal firearms official, confirmed that a bomb was involved. The FBI joined federal firearms officials and city police in the investigation.

"If you could see that office you could tell it's going to be difficult" to investigate, Porter said.

Engineers Baffled By Corrosion Problem

WASHINGTON (AP) — Engineers and chemists are baffled by a corrosion problem causing pipes to crack and leak small amounts of radioactive water in at least 15 nuclear power plants, federal regulators say.

Staff members of the Nuclear Regulatory Commission told panel members Wednesday the problem has caused extensive pipe damage in steam generators of five nuclear plants and "minor" to "moderate" damage to pipes at 10 other plants.

Darrell Eisenhut, deputy director of the NRC's division of operating reactors, said a chemical reaction involving acids, chlorine and salt causes a corrosive buildup between the pipes and their metal fittings, creating pressure.

He said the only solution now appears to be replacing the pipes. Scientists have been unable to develop a chemical to dissolve the corrosion buildup, he added.

"It's not a problem that's well understood at this time," Eisenhut told the commissioners. "Although they (chemists) think they understand it, they get rather baffled every time they get new data."

NRC technicians said in interviews almost all the radioactive water from the pipes remains inside the steam generators. It is closely monitored and eventually will be decontaminated. However, small amounts turn into steam and are emitted into the atmosphere in amounts below government hazard standards, they said.

Brian Grimes, of the NRC staff, said there is concern over both the leakage of radioactive water and the potential that a plant's cooling system could be impaired.

Eisenhut told the commissioners the so-called pipe "denting" problem was discovered in 1976 and has become extensive at both nuclear reactors at Surry, Va., Turkey Point Units 3 and 4 in Florida, and the San Onofre plant in California, where the most cracks have found.

He said the Palisades plant in Michigan also has had serious corrosion problems, but for an unexplained reason, only "minor" pipe cracking.

The NRC so far has required strict observance of any leaks. If 0.3 gallons to one gallon escapes — the minimum amount varies from plant to plant — the leaking pipe must be plugged and closed, Eisenhut said some plants currently have nearly one-fourth of their steam-generator pipes closed as a result.

The Virginia Electric and Power Co., which operates the two Surry plants, was forced in February to begin replacing its six generators because of the cracking problem.

Eisenhut said the corrosion problem appears to plague all the pressure-water reactors, but those manufactured by Westinghouse and Combustion Engineering appear most susceptible.

White Breaks Down At Murder Trial

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Dan White broke down and wept when Mayor Dianne Feinstein told jurors at his murder trial about the morning her predecessor and another supervisor were gunned down in City Hall.

White, a former city supervisor accused of killing Mayor George Moscone and Supervisor Harvey Milk on Nov. 27, was comforted by his attorney as Mrs. Feinstein testified Wednesday.

"His jaw was clenched, his hair was slightly over his forehead...he was pale," said Mrs. Feinstein, who was then president of the Board of Supervisors, in describing White as she saw him rushing to Milk's office.

"I heard unmistakable shots ... I smelled the gunpowder," she told the Superior Court jury. "I found Milk's body ... I tried to get a pulse but couldn't because of the blood."

White, a 33-year-old former policeman, had resigned his position on the board weeks earlier, saying he could not support a family on the $9,600 salary. He later changed his mind and asked Moscone for his job back.

Moscone was slain moments before he was to name White's successor.

Defense attorneys acknowledge White fired the fatal bullets, but contend that he was mentally ill. He has pleaded innocent to the murder charges while the prosecution is seeking the death penalty under a "special circumstances" provision of a new state law.

According to Mrs. Feinstein's testimony, City Hall was tense the morning of the murders with fears there would be a confrontation between White and Don Horanzy, the man Moscone had chosen to replace White. Horanzy was scheduled to be sworn in shortly after a news conference to announce his appointment.

Moscone was shot moments before the news conference was to take place. Milk, whose office was near Mrs. Feinstein's on the other side of City Hall, was killed some 90 seconds later, according to testimony.

White surrendered to authorities at the police department's Northern Station near City Hall about 30 minutes after the shootings, officers testified.

Witness Says Methods Not Exact

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — A former Kerr-McGee Nuclear Corp. employee has testified that methods for measuring plutonium still in the piping at the firm's closed nuclear fuel plant are not exact.

Bob Marshall, now employed by the Los Alamos Scientific Laboratory in Los Alamos, N.M., told jurors Wednesday in the $11.5 million Karen Silkwood negligence trial that the measurements are only accurate within 25 percent.

Attorneys for the Silkwood family have attempted to create the impression that some 40 pounds of plutonium are missing from the plant. Kerr-McGee contends about 24 pounds of plutonium is caught in the piping and equipment. The firm acknowledges it can't account for about 10 pounds of the radiocative element.

"You can't tell the ladies and gentlemen of the jury under your oath the computations you made represent the actual amount of plutonium in the pipes, can you?" Silkwood lawyer Gerry Spence asked.

"That's correct," Marshall said.

Kerr-McGee lawyer Elliott Fenton asked Marshall if he believed there was plutonium still in the pipes.

"It's there if the radiation is there," Marshall said.

He said radiation measurements were used to calculate the estimated amount of plutonium still in the piping and equipment.

HMOs May Solve Soaring Health Cost Problems

By PATRICIA McCORMACK
United Press International Writer

What if you could get all the medical care your family needed in a year for about $100 a month and have your employer pay for most of it?

Coverage would include: eye exams, operations, immmunizations, a physical examination, including an electrocardiogram, cholesterol checks and other lab work, drugs, allergy treatments, setting broken legs and arms, prenatal and maternity care and all hospitalizations.

Plus the plan would cover anyone who wants to lose weight, calm down or give up smoking or drinking. And provide physical therapy in case your back goes out. And, if you pay anything at all once the premium's paid, it will be small change instead of large bills.

This seemingly magical plan is offered by Health Maintenance Organizations — HMOs.

HMOs are prepaid health plans that have been promoted as one way the private sector can escape the soaring health cost maze.

There are 203 HMOs now, up 23 percent in two years. They enroll 7.4 million members, up 18 percent over 1977. Seventy-one percent of membership is in plans that have been operating 10 or more years.

The oldest, Kaiser Foundation Medical Care Programs, covers 3.5 million people through various plans, including Kaiser-Permanente groups in Southern California, Washington, Oregon, Colorado, Hawaii and Ohio.

HMOs are the hottest plans around as the private sector searches for some solution to enormous health care costs. The private sector is running to keep ahead of the threat of National Health Insurance: a system where big government runs everything in health care — doctors, hospitals, the works.

President Carter, who favors HMOs, is succeeding in getting labor and industry to consider the HMO way out of soaring hospital and health insurance premiums adding to the price of most everything you buy, from oranges to autos and television sets.

It's now a federal law that a company employing 25 or more and operating in an area where an HMO is available must give workers a choice: HMO membership or regular-type health insurance.

As for the cost of regular insurance, look what's happened at Ford Motor Company. In 1965, the health care bill for workers was $68 million. By 1977 the bill had shot up to $450 million.

Spending for each active Ford employee rose from $350 in 1965 to $2,000 in 1977. This year Ford estimates its total health care costs will reach $630 million — $2,700 per worker.

HEW Secretary Joseph Califano Jr., called these "chilling numbers" when he cited them for 1,200 corporate and labor officials attending the first HEW-HMO conference for "private sector" leaders about a year ago.

"They do not include the cost of lost employee time, workers' compensation and other health-related expenses," Califano said.

"All these costs necessarily are passed along to buyers of Ford products. So every buyer of a Ford pays for an invisible piece of standard equipment — employee health costs. For that invisible standard auto 'part,' the consumer paid $22 in 1965 — and last year, $120.

HMOs are the hottest plans around as the private sector searches for some solution to enormous health care costs.

"And what is true for Ford is true for American business generally." Most HMOs work their money magic by paying doctors a salary instead of a fee for each service, do only necessary lab work, perform only necessary operations, send their members to hospitals about 30 percent less frequently than others go, and try to get members to take good care of themselves.

HMOs have little trouble getting doctors to work on salary. Half of what a doctor in solo practice makes is for overhead, rent, malpractice insurance premiums, office aides, for a few examples.

Dr. Conrad Rosenberg, head of Queens-Nassau Community Health Program, an HMO in New Hyde Park, N.Y., said a freshly certified pediatrician might make $70,000 a year in private practice.

Figuring no overhead in an HMO, the HMO equivalent salary would be in the neighborhood of $35,000 — with other benefits:

Neurosurgeons command highest HMO salaries, $80,000 and up; obstetricians may be on a $50,000 or slightly higher salary. One health care economist, Dr. C. Rufus Rorem, 85 and retired in New York, recently was asked what would be a fair salary for a doctor.

Rorem, credited with helping to make Blue Cross and Blue Shield plans so popular, answered that perhaps doctors should be satisfied to be paid as much as a congressman.

Doctors' practices and their fees frequently are cited by health care economists picking apart health care costs. A new doctor, in his first year, generates $250,000 in health care costs by what he orders: tests, hospitalizations, operations, drugs, treatments.

In Health Maintenance Organizations cost control goes hand in hand with quality care.

The federal Health Maintenance Organization Act of 1973, encourages organized health care delivery systems to serve all sectors of the population.

Federal funds were made available for feasibility studies as well as for planning and developmental expenses to stimulate interest in and support for HMOs.

Under the Act, federal loan guarantees also were made available. Specific provisions for assuring the quality of care and for satisfaction of grievances of enrollees were built into the regulations for the program.

Uncle Sam, in years gone by, pushed organized systems of health care for special groups such as merchant seamen, military personnel, veterans and the indigent.

The HMO Act stresses private initiative in developing an organized and rational approach to the financing and delivery of health care services.

Speaking to labor and industrial officials from 600 organizations attending an HMO briefing staged for them by the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, Califano made these points:

—Incentives in HMOs run toward prevention, immunization, health education, periodic physicals, and early treatment rather than drastic acute care. HMOs have the potential to offer health care — not just sick care.

—HMOs that are well-run offer unified, comprehensive, carefully planned care. Their incentive is to offer only necessary treatment.

—HMOs save money. "Our best evidence suggests that HMOs can reduce outpatient visits by 15 percent and hospitalization by 30 to 60 percent." A national reduction of 30 percent in the hospital part of the health care bill last year, some $64 billion, would have amounted to a huge $20 billion.

Califano said the push is on to change the numbers covered by HMOs.

He told the labor and industry leaders:

"We want to give evey American family a choice: to have health care through an HMO if they want it: quality health care at resonale cost."

The words are backed up by an HMO promotion office within HEW. They are backed up by money to provide technical assistance to HMOs and to generate consumer demand. The HEW has an HMO hotline and clearinghouse and is studying a plan to set up HMO networks.

Prepaid group practice, on which the HMO is based, has been around since the 1930s and 1940s. Group Health Cooperative of Puget Sound and the Kaiser prepaid health service programs in Washington and California, as well as the Group Health Association in Washington, D.C., and the Health Insurance Plan of Greater New York were early successful ones.

There was only modest growth of such plans until third-party payers -- Blue Cross, Blue Shield, private insurance companies, the government, labor unions and companies — started feeling the heat from booming health care costs in the 60s.

There are these other developments:

—One of the first scientific attempts to develop comparative utilization and cost information on traditional fee-for-services health care and prepaid group practice was initiated by Metropolitan Life Insurance Company in 1967.

Findings: compared to those with regular health insurance, an HMO group had 22 percent fewer hospital admissions; and among the pediatric crowd in the HMO, hospital admissions were 33 percent lower. The lower level of hospitalization for the study group was attributed to the HMO emphasis on ambulattory diagnostic and therapeutic medical services.

—Blue Cross organizations are into planning, development, financing and administration of HMOs. Nearly half of the nation's Blues are involved in 66 operational HMOs serving 1.5 million. The Health Insurance Association of America reports that 55 insurance companies are involved in HMOs.

—Approval recently has been given by the U.S. Civil Service Commission for 18 Blue Cross and Blue Shield Health Plan HMOs to operate as a network. Under the network, effective in January, all 18 of the Blues HMOs will offer the same benefits at the same rates to government employes enrolled in the Federal Employee Health Benefit Program. Premiums for members: about $21 bi-weekly for a single and $55 for a family.

Walter J. McNerney, president of the Blues association, said advantages of networking include administrative efficiencies and stability — as well as increased access to expanded and uniform benefits. The Blues network for federal workers within reach of HMOs in the following states:

Grain Futures

CHICAGO (AP) — Wheat futures soared Wednesday on the Chicago Board of Trade as talk of new export business and damage to current crops spurred speculative buying.

Wheat gained 9¼ to 17 cents a bushel, scoring new life-of-contract highs. Analysts cited talk of damage to the Soviet Union's winter wheat crop, plus planting delays for spring wheat in both the Soviet Union and the United States, which spurred local and commission house buying.

CCI Director Addresses Plains Cotton Growers

By KATHLEEN HARRIS
Avalanche-Journal Farm Writer

Personal contact with foreigners, making adequate self-supportive credit available to foreign buyers and cooperative advertising and promotion are three of the activities of Cotton Council International, according to David C. Hull, executive director of CCI.

Hull was in Lubbock Wednesday to address about 400 people at the 22nd annual Plains Cotton Growers, Inc. membership meeting at the Southpark Inn.

"With the support and participation of industry leaders, U. S. cotton has been authorized a record $252.3 million in Commodity Credit Corp. credit thus far in fiscal year 1979 and it is helping to move a lot of your cotton overseas," Hull told the cotton producers and cotton-related businessmen.

Under Hull's direction, CCI organizes and supervises trade teams, mill technical services and other cotton promotion programs in countries around the world.

"CCI's cooperating mills abroad, your customers, put up $1.3 million in 1978 as their share of the costs of cooperative advertisements featuring products made with your cotton," Hull said, showing slides from several countries demonstrating examples of the ads.

A basic responsibility of CCI, Hull pointed out, is to bring American exporters and foreign buyers together through trade teams and orientation programs.

Hull recalled a visit made by a U. S. trade team to Peking in May 1978 that resulted in China's purchase of 55,000 bales and another purchase of 150,000 bales by the Chinese after the Chinatex — China's raw cotton buying agency — toured the Cotton Belt last October.

"Building and maintaining the confidence and respect of our foreign customers and appropriate government officials," Hull commented, "is accomplished through personal contacts, through long-term association and through an understanding of the deep-rooted customs and attitudes of our foreign friends."

Such foundations with overseas buyers have built a good reputation with Korea and Japan, the two largest overseas customers, Hull said. Export commitments as of April 15, he noted, amount to 6½ million bales.

"In recognition of the growing importance of your export market, we have moved forward to further strengthen U. S. cotton's export thrust in 1979 and in future years," he said.

The meeting also heard an address by John Garner of Liverpool, England, owner and editor of Cotton Outlook.

Lubbock Lenders Will Finance Solar Housing

By RUTHANNE BROCKWAY
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Although lenders are cautious about financing solar homes, underground homes and other unconventional housing, preliminary results from a Texas Tech survey show Lubbock lending institutions are willing to finance such projects.

Speakers at Wednesday afternoon's portion of the two-day seminar "Coping with the West Texas Energy Crisis" said lenders use caution in making such loans because of the uncertainity of resale value and the uncertainty of the cost of maintenance and repair of such homes.

Susan Mason, a research assistant in the home economics department at Tech, said Lubbock lending institutions approved six loans for solar homes in 1977 and four loans for innovative housing, including underground and dome-type homes.

Dr. William Gustafson, a Tech professor involved in the survey, said lenders themselves are willing to finance such homes but that appraisers have difficulty in assessing the homes.

Meanwhile, those with conventional homes faced with rising utility costs can get tips on energy conservation from Jane Cohen of the Texas Energy Extension Service in Lubbock.

Mrs. Cohen said her office helps individuals interpret information on weatherstripping, insulation, ventilation, air leakage, efficient appliance use and other home energy matters.

While consumers know the energy crisis on a personal basis of rising utility bills, those in the energy industry and government are working on long-term solutions to the problems.

John Poerner, chairman of the Texas Railroad Commission, which regulates the state's oil and gas production, said heavy reliance on imported oil has reached the point that every 12 minutes the United States spends $1 million on imported oil — a total of $2 billion per month.

Other energy statistics affecting the complexity of the energy crisis include the prediction that by the year 2,000 the country will be using one-third of its energy supply in producing energy.

Poerner said coal mining does concern environmentalists and that the Three Mile Island incident has frightened many Americans about nuclear power. But, he said, by 1985 the nation is expected to obtain 70 percent of its electricity from coal and nuclear power.

"Nuclear power will continue to generate controversy, but it will also continue to generate power," he said.

He said the chance of a person being killed in a nuclear accident is one in 300 million — the same risk as being hit by a meteor. Poerner said the risk of dying in a car crash is 75,000 times greater.

Poerner discussed several energy resources, including geothermal and solar, and the rising interest in diesel-engine cars. But, he noted, "We can't be totally dependent on any single source."

One of the principal suppliers of energy to the West Texas-Panhandle area is Southwestern Public Service Company, which serves 290,000 customers.

Company spokesman Ed Weber said "Maybe it will go away" are the five most dangerous words for consumers to think about the energy situation.

"Unless changes are made soon you're going to wind up paying more for less and that scares us to death because we're not at the top of the Hit Parade now," he said.

The changes Weber referred to are government regulations which he said are forcing the utility companies to pass along the rising cost of enforcing such regulations. This, he said, raises utility companies' costs, which are in turn passed along to customers.

Weber said increased government reporting by the industry will cost his company's users an additional $35 per year.

Bob Mills of Pioneer Natural Gas Company echoed Weber's comments on government regulations, calling interpretation of them confusing and warning that penalizing profits kills incentive to solve energy problems.

Because of congressional controls, Mills said, his company will have to pass along at least a 10 percent increase in costs annually.

Mills said solar, geothermal and other energy sources are "a long way" from being fully developed and that the short-term source of energy until that time remains with oil, gas and coal — all of which are growing more expensive to produce.

Compromises between environmentalists and industry will be essential in solving energy problems, he said.

Ed Thompson, executive vice president of Permian Basin Petroleum Association in Midland, discussed what he called President Carter's "non-energy policy."

Thompson blasted Department of Energy officials for their credentials, saying, "There ain't nobody there that knows nothin' about the oil and gas industry."

He said a person undergoing a hospital operation expects to be seen by a surgeon, and that DOE should be run by oil and gas experts but is not because of fear of conflict of interest charges.

Thompson also blasted the Environmental Protection Agency, saying again that the organization is unfamiliar with the oil and gas industry.

The EPA recently issued a list of hazardous wastes from oilfields and included drilling mud and oil production brine, he said.

When Thompson's company president was asked to comment on the list, Thompson said he replied, "Of course it will kill you. But we don't hire idiots in the oilfields who will eat drilling mud or drink brine."

Thompson said oil industry leaders have asked Carter at least eight times for a meeting "to explain to a peanut farmer why the country can't run on hot air or peanut oil" but Thompson said Carter refused because the oil industry is a biased segment of the population.

"In other words, 'Don't confuse me with the facts,'" Thompson said of the refusal.

W.I. "Butch" Parker of Exxon Corporation said his company projects that by 1990 one-fourth of domestic oil must come from reserves yet to be discovered, yet oil companies have been less successfull than originally expected in finding new oil.

Synthetic oil is being researched, but Parker said it will not be commercially available for several years and that by 1990 it will supply only 1 percent of the United States' energy supply. Over 50 percent of the nation's oil is now imported, he said, and with the uncertainty of price on imported oil it is important to provide incentives for domestic oil production and exploration.

City Personnel Representatives Defend Recruitment Efforts

By RHONA SCHWARTZ
Avalanche-Journal Staff

City personnel representatives Wednesday night defended local minority recruitment efforts for fire fighters and police officers, despite sharp criticism from Human Relations Commission members about the lack of minority candidates for the departments.

Personnel director Tom Witt and assistant Rita Harmon responded to complaints from commission members ranging from the lack of minority officers in East Lubbock to the lack of promotions given the few minorities now in office.

"We go above and beyond any efforts to recruit minorities," Mrs. Harmon said, noting the personnel department since the beginning of this year advertised in all Lubbock newspapers, received public service announcement time on radio and television stations and recruited in predominately minority junior colleges in Texas and New Mexico in order to find new applicants.

"We do considerably more (for the police and fire departments) than we usually do for other departments," she said. "This weekend, for example, we will have a booth at the (South Plains) mall, staffed by the minority officers we have, which will dispense general information."

Mrs. Harmon and Witt explained testing procedures used in both departments, saying that the test used for police candidates is one which was developed through a $600,000 grant to the Texas Law Enforcement Agency.

Commission members strongly disagreed with Mrs. Harmon's explanation that "applicant number one must be rejected or accepted before looking at applicant number two," indicating that things in other cities are being done to combat this procedure without violating state laws.

HRC ad hoc advisory committee member Harold Chatman stressed the importance of promotions for minority officers, saying children may look at minority officers who have not been promoted and say "maybe there is not the chance for me to better myself if I join."

One major disadvantage to the promotion procedure, HRC members said, is that extra points are awarded officers with seniority who take a promotional exam. This adversely affects young and minority officers, members said.

The personnel officers both acknowledged the problems surrounding minority recruiting, and agreed to work with HRC on solutions.

"Our gains have been very slow," Mrs. Harmon admitted.

In other business, commission members heard Criminal District Attorney John Montford report that "approximately 90 percent of the juries and panels since January 1 have had minority persons."

"We have found, very pleasantly, that we encourage minority participation," Montford said. "There is no policy in my office and there never will be regarding minority exclusion."

Montford further said his office has been "very encouraged by minority participation and that if there is a problem in terms of percentages it may be in voter registration."

Montford said his office has found, however, an excessive amount of intimidation against minority witnesses and an unwillingness to get involved.

"We find this problem occuring weekly," Montford said, "and any help from the commission would be greatly appreciated from me and my staff."

Authorities Arrest 24 In Smuggling Scheme

BEAUMONT (AP) — Authorities have begun arresting 24 persons in four states indicted by a federal grand jury here in an alleged scheme to smuggle 86 tons of Colombian marijuana, valued at an estimated $69 million, into Texas.

Assistant U.S. Attorney David P. Baugh said 19 persons named in the 28-count indictment had been arrested Wednesday. And he said authorities expected to roundup most of the others soon.

The indictment alleges that four men — shipbuilder Martin Marion Sneed Sr. of Orange, Charles Elbert Foster of Denton, John Ruppel of Gatlinburg, Tenn., and Carlos Gerdes of Newport, Tenn.— financed the purported smuggling operation.

The indictment, which was returned Tuesday but not unsealed until Wednesday, cited violations of federal racketeering laws.

Baugh said the investigation still was underway.

"I've never seen a drug case end. Drug cases grow and grow. There's a strong possibility that our files are going to be open for quite a while," said Baugh.

Sneed surrendered to authorities Wednesday, and his bond was set at $40,000 by U.S. Magistrate Charles K. Ruth.

Ruppel, described as a millionaire recluse who made a fortune in the land development business in Pinellas County, Fla., posted a $250,000 bond in Knoxville, Tenn., Wednesday.

Gerdes and Foster were still at large Wednesday.

The investigation began after the Orange County Sheriff's Department arrested two men and confiscated 1,000 pounds of marijuana on the trawler Bayou Blues in March 1978.

Federal, state and local authorities seized the shrimp boat Agnes Pauline last Nov. 29, and arrested 12 persons transferring 22 tons of the illegal weed from the boat to trucks waiting on the docks.

Sniper Collected Guns Legally

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The arensal of 15 guns and hundreds of rounds of ammunition used by Fiesta parade sniper Ira Attebery was legally collected over the last 15 years, according to police.

Attebery, 64, crouched in a parked motor home, fired wildly Friday into thousands of parade spectators, killing two and injuring at least 50. He then shot himself to death after a gun battle with police.

The gradual acquisition of the weapons — three shotguns, eight rifles and four pistols — was done by a man who enjoyed guns, not by someone with a long-term plan to fire on a crowd, said Police Lt. Walter Hall.

"From what we can gather so far, there was no sign of illegal or unusual activity in the purchase of weapons by Attebery," said Hall. "Apparently he had been accumulating weapons and ammunition for some time and just kept them in his motor home."

Chevrolet's first economy car of the '80s.

CHEVY CITATION

Citation goes a long way on a tank of gas. But that's just the start. Citation has the traction of front wheel drive, rack and pinion steering, front disc brakes, and a transverse mounted engine that's cradled in rubber cushioned mountings to reduce engine vibration. Sleek Citation is easy to park, yet big enough for five adults and lots of cargo. See Chevy Citation for yourself. And to really appreciate it, get behind the wheel!

With standard 4-cylinder engine and manual transmission.

Remember: Compare the estimated MPG to the "estimated MPG" of other cars. You may get different mileage depending on your speed, trip length, and weather. Your actual mileage will be lower in heavy city traffic, and your actual highway mileage will probably be less than the estimated highway fuel economy, the "estimated MPG" is more likely to reflect actual overall mileage than the "combined estimate".

NOTICE OF FINDING OF NO SIGNIFICANT EFFECT ON THE ENVIRONMENT
TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN:
The City of Lubbock, P.O. Box 2000, Lubbock, Texas 79457, Tel. 762-6411 proposes to request the Department of Housing and Urban Development to release federal funds under Title I of the Housing and Community Development Act of 1974 (PL 93-383) to be used for the following project:
Senior Citizens Title VII Nutrition Program-$45,000.00
It has been determined that the request for release of funds will not constitute an action significantly affecting the quality of the human environment and, accordingly, the City of Lubbock has decided not to prepare an Environmental Impact Statement under the National Environmental Policy Act of 1969 (PL-91-190).
The reasons for the decision not to prepare a Statement are as follows: (a) overall effects of the projects are beneficial; (b) beneficial effects are long-term and the adverse effects are short term and environmentally insignificant, being related primarily to activities necessary to construct the projects; (c) since the projects will occur at the neighborhood level, the short-term adverse effects will be confined to limited numbers of people; (d) historic and environmentally critical areas will not be affected; (e) no viable alternatives to the projects, including the no-action alternative, exist.
An Environmental Review Record for the projects has been made by the City which documents the environmental review of the projects and more fully sets forth the reasons why the Statement is not required. This Record is on file at the Municipal Building, 916 Texas Avenue, and is available for public examination and copying, upon request, in Room 207 between the hours of 8 a.m. and 5 p.m.
No further environmental review of the project is proposed to be conducted prior to the request for release of federal funds.
All interested parties disagreeing with this decision are invited to submit written comments for consideration by the City to the Community Development Coordinator, P.O. Box 2000, Lubbock, Texas 79457, by 5:00 p.m., May 18, 1979. All comments will be considered and the City will not request the release of federal funds or take any administrative action on the project prior to the date in the preceding sentence.

Officials Evaluate Education Service

By LISA PAIKOWSKI
Avalanche-Journal Staff

The Region XVII Education Service Center has received high marks from the superintendents of the school districts it serves, a report released Wednesday shows.

The evaluation of the services supplied by the Lubbock-based center to 64 school districts in the state was introduced at a meeting of the joint committee and the board of directors for the center.

Of the 64 districts served, superintendents from 61 responded to the request for evaluation of the programs provided by the state-created agency during the 1977-78 school year.

The center, which provides services on a voluntary basis through federal, state and local funds, received marks that were generally in the "excellent" and "good" range for the specific programs offered.

Dr. O.R. Douglas, executive director of the center, said following the meeting that the ratings were "very good. The overall perception is that it (the evaluation) is very supportive."

He added that the several "poor" and "fair" marks given in some categories were not indicative of the quality of service because the majority of respondents still graded the category as good or excellent.

In bilingual education, for example, of the 42 superintendents who said they received service in that area, one rated the program as poor; four as fair, 27 as good and nine as excellent.

Other services evaluated included adult basic education, crime prevention and drug education, driver education and guidance and student services.

The joint committee also noted a number of recommendations from the report for follow-up by the service center:

—Continue to stay aware of the problems and changes in migrant and bilingual education and provide technical assistance to schools.

—Continue to offer summer programs for professionals.

—Provide workshops and conferences on new school laws and legislation.

—Continue to provide curriculum development and assistance.

In other business, the board of directors adopted a set of goals for the service center as recommended by the joint committee and the board.

Douglas said the action simply formalized the goals to which the center has already been adhering.

Goals include the provision of consultative and technical assistance for school personnel in the region, provision of appropriate and related instructional materials and services to assist in fulfilling the needs of students and the provision of an organized commitment of personnel and resources to support the improvement of school district programs.

In further business, Robert McKelvy of Lubbock was elected to Place 1 on the board of directors. He replaced Owen Hamilton of Lubbock, who requested that he not be re-elected.

Boy Found Clinging To Overturned Boat

GALVESTON (AP) — Ronald Price Jr., 14, apparently orphaned by a fierce storm that swamped his family's small boat and drowned his father and two stepsisters, has been unable to remember details of the tragedy.

The youngster's stepmother still is missing.

A fishing vessel pulled the boy, delireous and badly sunburned, from the Gulf of Mexico Tuesday morning. That afternoon, the Coast Guard recovered the first body. Two more were found Wednesday. Officials said the bodies were of two children and a man presumed to be the boy's father.

Young Price told of clinging to the overturned boat in Galveston's West Bay for two days, and says he survived because he remembered televised instructions to stay with a boat if at all possible after an accident.

He said his father, Ronald Price Sr. 36; stepmother Mary Price, 27, and her two children, Janis Bell, 10, and Norman Radcliff, 7, all of Pasadena, were swept away after their 16-foot boat overturned. Winds lashing the bay during last Sunday's storm were clocked at 50 mph.

Officials interviewed the boy again Wednesday in John Sealy Hospital, where he was reported in fair condition. His account of the accident was better, they said, but details were still fuzzy.

"They started taking on water," said Chief Bob Baeten of the Coast Guard's rescue center in New Orleans, which coordinated the search. "They put an anchor out to stabilize the boat, but water kept coming in, and the weight in the boat shifted. Then they lost balance and fell in."

He said the high winds kicked up stormy waves in the shallow water of the bay.

The Coast Guard, which has had helicopters combing the area where the boat capsized, said it planned to review the situation today to determine whether the search should be continued.

Five Charged With Burglary

Five Lubbock men Wednesday were charged with burglary in a Tuesday garage break-in in which a large quantity of tools and the building burglar alarm were stolen.

Charged were Harvey Bynum, 27, David Ray Boyd, 19, Roscoe Boyd Jr., 22, Tony Joe Boyd, 17, and Willie Earl Ross, 28, all of 2403 E. Sixth St.

The criminal district attorney's office is recommending bonds of $7,500 each against Tony Joe Boyd and Roscoe Boyd Jr., $15,000 each against Bynum and David Ray Boyd and $20,000 against Ross.

They are accused of breaking into Charles' Auto Clinic and taking 100 wrench sockets, four adjustable wrenches, two body hammers, 10 combination wrenches and other tools in addition to the burglar alarm.

Other charges Wednesday included one for aggravated assault against James Guerra, 17, of 2903 Auburn St., who is accused in the shooting of 20-year-old Albert Marmolejo Tuesday at Town and Country Shopping Center.

George Z. Archulita, 20, of 2008 E. Fifth St. was charged with burglary of a habitation in a reported April 9 home burglary in the 3500 block of 21st Street in which $1,000 in stereo equipment was stolen.

Isaac Ray Mahuron, 25, and Royce Dan Thorne, 17, both of 3004 Baylor St., were charged with forgery in reported April 10 and April 29 forgeries on the bank account of a Lubbock woman.

Senate Reconsiders Polaris Phase Out

WASHINGTON (AP) — Pentagon plans to phase out the Navy's 10 Polaris submarines could be blocked, at least temporarily, by new action taken in the Senate.

The submarines are scheduled to be taken out of service, starting in October. But the Senate adopted an amendment Wednesday that would require the Navy to keep the ships operating for at least a year beyond the planned deactivation. It also would require the Pentagon to study whether it is feasible to keep the subs running through 1985.

Clinic To Treat Needy Children

A Texas Department of Human Resources clinic will focus on needy Lubbock County children with possible health problems. The clinic will be conducted 7:30 a.m to 5:30 p.m. Monday at 3411 Knoxville Ave.

Medicaid recipients under the age of 21 are eligible for the clinic, called Early and Periodic Screening, Diagnosis and Treatment. These includes recipients of Aid to Families with Dependent Children and Supplemental Security Income. Anyone wishing to participate should contact the local DHR office for an appointment.

Volunteers are needed to provide transportation, watch siblings of children participating in the program and provide refreshments. Volunteers should contact Pearl Berry at 762-8922.

Lubbock Police Arrest Suspect In Break-In

A 23-year-old Lubbock man, shot in the face early today after he allegedly burglarized a 37th Street apartment, was arrested after police learned that a gunshot victim was being treated at Methodist Hospital.

The man, one of two persons suspected of burglarizing Robert Leon Wiggins' No. 9 apartment at 306 37th St. about 12:30 a.m., was wounded by another apartment resident, who told police he witnessed the break-in.

Though the suspect reportedly was shot in the face with a shotgun pointed from a distance of just four feet, the man managed to get away.

Later, police arrived at Methodist Hospital after learning a man matching the Mexican-American's description was being treated there for gunshot wounds.

The suspect was transported to the county jail about 1:30 a.m. after being released from the hospital.

The witness said he saw two men enter Wiggins' apartment through an unlocked door. He told police he saw the suspects leave the apartment carrying property, one of the men going to a parked van, and the man he later shot walking into an alley behind the complex.

Reports state the witness got his shotgun and walked into the alley where he saw one of the suspects hiding between two trash dumpsters. He said he shot the alleged burglar after the suspect raised up with something in his hand. After being shot, the burglar ran west down the alley, according to police.

Wiggins told officers he suffered a $500 loss in the break-in, including a television, stereo equipment and tapes.

Police this morning continued to look for suspects in two separate robberies, both occurring Wednesday.

Mary Jones, 35, and Gary Julian Gallardo, 25, both of Altus, Okla., told Lubbock police they were robbed about 2:20 p.m. Wednesday at a bar in the 1400-block of Avenue F.

They said they were looking for Gallardo's cousin when a Mexican-American man and woman told them the cousin might be at the Avenue F business. The Oklahoma couple reportedly drove to the bar with the pair.

Mrs. Jones said that while her companion and the female were in the bar, the man pointed a large pistol at her and snatched her purse containing $1,900 cash.

Gallardo said that about the time Mrs. Jones was being robbed, he and the woman got into a fight inside the club and she took $7 from him. Both suspects fled the scene and remained at large today.

In another incident, a 69-year-old Lubbock woman said she was robbed of $361 cash about 9:30 a.m. Wednesday in front of an east Lubbock supermarket.

Madge Miller of 3405 Cornell St. told police she had just cashed her $361 Social Security check and was getting out of her car when confronted by the robber, a Mexican-American man wearing a red shirt and blue pants.

She said the bandit told her he was holding a gun in his pocket and said, "I saw you cash that check, and this is a robbery."

Reports indicate the bandit got into a blue Chevrolet and drove off after the victim handed him the money.

A 17-year-old Lubbock woman told police that a man attempted to rob and rape her at her home shortly after noon Wednesday.

The woman said that she and a male friend were in a bedroom of her home when she heard a knock at the door. Because she was dressed and her companion was not, she got up to go to the door, she told officers.

When she entered the hallway, a young Mexican male grabbed her, pinned her arms behind her and placed a hand over her mouth.

"Be quiet. Shut up, I just want some money," the man said, according to police reports.

The intruder took the woman to a second bedroom of the house, where he began taking her clothes off, she said. At this time, the man in the other bedroom became aware of the intruder.

He dressed, and went into the kitchen to look for a weapon, but couldn't find one. So he went outside to get a piece of pipe out of his car.

When he returned and went into the second bedroom, he found the intruder trying to rape the woman.

She told police that the intruder then jumped up from the bed, and appeared very frightened.

"Hey, man, I've got the wrong house, I've got the wrong person," she said the intruder said.

When the woman's friend approached the intruder with the piece of pipe, he told the couple he had a gun.

Then the friend hit the intruder on the neck with the pipe. But the would-be rapist ran out of the house and down the street.

The woman said she had seen the man in her neighborhood several times in the past.

Burglars Fill Motor Home With Goods

Burglars filled a motor home parked in a Lubbock warehouse with 1,676 gallons of expensive herbicide, and then drove off with $94,000 in stolen goods.

The stolen herbicide retails for $60 per gallon.

"There's a big market in the field for this herbicide," said Charles Robertson, owner of the warehouse. "Whoever took this could sell it to any farmer in West Texas."

The burglars entered the steel building by slicing a hole in the south side with a cutting torch, police said.

Then they stripped a 23-foot motor home parked in the warehouse of all furnishings. The home, valued at $15,000, belonged to Robertson.

After emptying the motor home, the burglars stuffed it with herbicides stored in the warehouse. The stolen herbicide, valued at $79,000, is used to kill Johnson grass and other weeds in cotton fields.

Missing from the warehouse Wednesday were 319 five-gallon cans of Roundup herbicide, 36 one-gallon jugs of Roundup, and 10 five-gallon cans of Prowl herbicide.

Police are searching for the 1977 GMC motor home, which is believed to be damaged on both sides. When the home was driven out of the warehouse, it hit one side of the exit frame, and a 30-gallon drum, police said.

Robertson estimated that it would have taken two men between one and two hours to unload the motor home, and then load it with the herbicide.

He told police the burglary occurred between 5:15 p.m. Tuesday and 7:30 a.m. Wednesday.

Firefighters May Join Strike

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (UPI) — Firefighters threatened to join 2,000 striking police, sanitation workers and other city employees as garbage began piling up today in Alabama's largest city.

"The rats are going to be eating down," said one sign-carrying member of the Laborers International Union picketing at City Hall, where garbage had been dumped on the steps.

The strike, called Tuesday to protest changes in the city' group medical insurance policies, forced cancellation of a normal garbage pickup scheduled today.

Police reported a generally quiet night, with no more than normal calls, despite skeleton police patrols made up of supervisory personnel and state troopers. All but emergency calls have been ignored since the strike began.

A small group of local National Guardsmen was brought in to assist at City Hall Wednesday, but the guardsmen were later withdrawn and about 15 others placed on standby at a National Guard Armory.

The police strike in Birmingham was the third such walkout in major cities of the South in less than a year. Memphis police struck last August in a pay dispute and New Orleans police walked off their jobs last February during Mardi Gras. In addition, police, firemen and sanitation workers in Nashville, Tenn., are threatening to strike over wages.

Birmingham Mayor David Vann said he thought employes "were tuned up to strike" even before the insurance controversy and were "looking for an excuse. That's an instinctive thing. Maybe I'm wrong. I hope I am."

Fathers Eligible For Diplomas

Many fathers of Texas Tech University graduates will be eligible for special diplomas at the same time commencement exercises are conducted by colleges of the university, according to James D. Eppler, president-elect of the Texas Tech Dads Association.

A father is eligible if he has a son or daughter graduating, is a life member of the Texas Tech Dads Association, is a four-year member of the association, or has paid annual membership dues during the past four years.

Members who meet the requirements, according to James G. Allen, executive director of the association, may contact the Texas Tech Dads Association at 742-3630, for their diplomas.

"It would seem only right," Allen said, "that when his son or daughter gets a diploma at the end of four years of study, Dad should also get a diploma certifying that for the past four years he has supported a student at Texas Tech and the Dads Association as a dues paying member."

Qualifying members are invited to visit the office of the Dads Association, Room 164, Administration Building, on commencement day to pick up their diplomas.

LCC President Heads Council

Lubbock Christian College President Harvie M. Pruitt has been named president of the Texas Council of Church-Related Colleges.

The council was organized in 1937 and now has 40 college and university members.

Dr. Pruitt, who had been vice president of the council, will serve until March 1980. Other officers elected were Dr. Morris J. Paschal, vice president of Southwestern Assemblies of God College in Waxahachie, to a three-year term as secretary-treasurer, and Dr. Charles H. Oestreich, president of Texas Lutheran College, to a one-year term as vice president. The immediate past president is Dr. Donald McAdams, president of Southwestern Adventist College in Keene.

The purpose of the council is to provide a fellowship among those who work in the tradition of church-related colleges and universities; to provide a place for study and a forum for discussion of issues and problems that are common to church-related colleges and universities; to encourage cooperation among the church-related colleges and universities of Texas toward such goals as can mutually be agreed upon; and to encourage a spirit of cooperation among all public, private and church-related institutions in Texas.

YWCA Sets Group Goal

Members of the YWCA Family Division established a group goal of $35,000 Wednesday as their share of the overall drive to provide funds for a physical fitness center.

Joy Lambert, chairman of the division, announced the goal as the group met at O'Neil Center to launch its phase of the drive.

The new, standard size, multi-purpose gymnasium will be built adjacent to the Margaret Richards Aquatic Center, 36th Street and Flint Avenue, at a total cost of about $535,000.

Section leaders for the drive are Anne Andrews, Margaret Randle, Jewel Hodges, Geneva Collins and Diane Jurica.

Although, according to Bob Dunbar, general co-chairman of the fund-raising campaign, traditionally it is easier to raise money for men's and boys' programs than for those for women and girls, this is not the case in Lubbock. He said the YWCA has gained the respect of the business community for its good management and operation over the years.

General fund drive chairman Howard Yandell, therefore, said he is confident the building fund goal will be "oversubscribed."

The initial report for the division will be announced May 8.

He served at Reese from September 1971 until July 1974; and also has served in Mississippi, Thailand and Japan.

KIDS-ONLY CLUB

Reader Sends Shari Collection Of Riddles

By SHARI LEWIS

Your Kids-Only Club column is now getting thousands and thousands of letters — and it's becoming very, very hard for me to answer them all. But I do make it my business to read every single one!

Now, most of the riddles and jokes and brain twisters and ideas that come across my desk are ones that I've seen before. But today I got a delightful surprises. Jessica Black of Lake Villa, Ill., sent me a collection of stumpers, and I had never seen any of them before! Her letter contained these three winners:

1 — CAN you guess these: A city in China? (Sample answer: CANton). A political can? A city in Panama? A floating can? A noisy can? A sweet can?

2 — Behind each boy is a girl, behind each girl is a boy. Now what's the smallest number of people that can be arranged in that manner?

3 — My head and tail both equal are,
My middle slender as a bee,
Whether I stand on head or heel,
Is all the same to you or me,
But if my head should be cut off
It's true but very strange,
My head and body cut apart,
Immediately to nothing change.

ANSWERS:

1 — CANton, CANidate, CANal, CANoe, CANdle, CANary, CANon, CANdy.

2 — Two people can be arranged in this manner — one boy and one girl, back to back.

3 — The number 8.

YESTERDAY'S BRAIN TWISTER: Here's another line drawing for you to try — can you draw the figure shown without lifting your pencil from the paper?

ANSWER: (See illustration.)

TODAY'S BRAIN TWISTER: What were the first cities to be incorporated in the United States? (Look for the answer in tomorrow's Kids-Only Club column.)

OSU LB Cousineau No. 1 Draft Pick

From A-J News Services

Tom Cousineau, a hard-hitting linebacker from Ohio State called by his former coach, Woody Hayes, "the best-conditioned athlete I've ever coached," today was selected by the Buffalo Bills to open the 1979 National Football League draft.

Cousineau, who plays in the same relentless style as his boyhood idol, Dick Butkus, is only the second linebacker to be made the first pick in the draft since it was started in 1936. Atlanta took Tommy Nobis of Texas as the top choice in 1966.

It took less than a minute for the Bills to make the selection,using a pick they received from San Francisco in the trade last year that sent running back O.J. Simpson to the 49ers.

The 6-foot-2½, 230-pound Cousineau has been compared to another Ohio State product, Denver all-pro linebacker Randy Gradishar.

The Dallas Cowboys, who had the next-to-last pick of the first round because of their Super Bowl loss to the Pittsburgh Steelers, went for Robert Shaw, an All-Southeastern Conference center from Tennessee.

The Bills also had the No. 5 pick in the opening round.

Reaction from more than 200 spectators packed the roped-off gallery in the Starlight Roof ballroom on the 18th floor of the swank Walforf-Astoria Hotel, was rather subdued, apparently awaiting the picks of the hometown New York Giants and Jets.

The Kansas City Chiefs, as expected, then went for defensive line help, taking Colorado State tackle Mike Bell, whose value did not diminish despite a late-season knee injury.

The Cincinnati Bengals, perhaps jolting the hopes of the Giants, took Washington State quarterback Jack Thompson as the third pick. That brought a rousing reaction from the crowd — booing, cheers and some taunts directed toward the Giants' table.

The Giants had the No.7 pick.

Thompson, nicknamed the "Throwin' Samoan" because his family moved from American Samoa to the United States when he was 4, passed for an NCAA record 7,818 yards in four seasons and ranks among the all-time career leaders in total offense, completions and touchdown passes.

The Bengals had been expected to go for offensive line help, so the selection of Thompson was a surprise.

The Chicago Bears, picking fourth with a choice acquired from Tampa Bay in the Wally Chambers deal of a year ago, selected Dan Hampton, a 6-5, 250-pound defensive tackle from Arkansas.

Buffalo, using its own pick, then went for Jerry Butler, an All-American wide receiver from Clemson.

Butler is not only a fearless receiver with great leaping ability but also has held his own with world-class sprinters and once beat Auburn's Harvey Glance in the NCAA 60-yard dash. Butler caught 58 passes for 906 yards last year and his career figures are 139 for 2,223.

The Baltimore Colts, desperately in need of defensive help, chose Barry Krauss, a 238-pound linebacker from national champion Alabama who was the Most Valuable Player in last season's Sugar Bowl game as well as the 1976 Liberty Bowl.

That brought up the Giants' first pick — and the local

LHS Coach Quits

Talbot, whose career record with the Westerners stands at 10-18-2, will take over the helm of Woodrow Wilson High School in Dallas, a Class AAAA school.

Talbot's best year at LHS was this last one when he compiled a 4-5-1 mark. That improved on a 2-7-1 record in 1977 and a 4-6 season his rookie year.

"Record-wise, I don't think it speaks for the job that the assistant coaches did and the Lubbock High athletes did," said Talbot.

"With the size of enrollment I think we played very good football and were very competitive. There are a lot of underlying accomplishments that don't go on the scoreboard."

Talbot said one main reason for taking the Dallas job was that he was raised there, attending North Dallas High.

"The main reason was an opportunity for a head coaching job in Dallas, that's where I went to school."

Latin Players 'Not Spoiled'

Editors' Note — The reasons for the influx of Latin players into major league baseball are varied. But they represent trends. This article, the last of a three-part series, examines the future for Latin players in major league baseball.

By DAN SEWELL
AP Sports Writer

"They're not as spoiled, not as pampered, they're hungrier than the American players. Their whole life is baseball," said the general manager of the Houston Astros, which has six Latin-born players on its roster, the most in the majors.

"They play baseball year-round, and the interest in baseball in the Dominican, Puerto Rico and Venezuela is extraordinary," he said.

Houston is one of several teams building a strong foundation for what is expected to be an unprecedented boom in the number of Latin major league players.

The number of Latin players has nearly doubled, to about 70, since 1974. That figure does not include the 20 or so American-born players whose parents are Latin-born, like Pittsburgh pitcher John Candelaria and Boston pitcher Mike Torrez.

Reasons for the influx include the efforts of Roberto Maduro, a special liaison between Latin America's Winter Leagues and Commissioner Bowie Kuhn. Other reasons are the tremendous salary inflation in the major leagues and the increased Latin America scouting operations by many teams. Another doubling within five years seems likely.

Bud Greenspan's Shows Among Very Best On TV

By FRED ROTHENBERG
Associated Press Writer

Network sports programming is on target most of the time in its coverage of live entertainment. But nobody does sports documentaries better than Bud Greenspan, who has been hired by ABC, CBS and NBC to do mini-shows for the upcoming Olympics and Pan-American Games.

Although the networks have the resources to bring documentaries to the small screen, the networks' focus is on events and pizzazz that will attract big audiences, ratings and advertising dollars.

Greenspan, who works with his wife, Cappy, also believes in events, but he likes to retell the historic ones — the first sub-four minute mile, for example, which was run by Roger Bannister of England 25 years ago this Sunday. The piece on Bannister is part of Greenspan's "Numero Uno" series.

"We went to 13 countries and did the life story of their Babe Ruth," said Greenspan, whose series includes shows on skier Jean-Claude Killy of France, Canadian hockey star Maurice Richard, japanese sumo wrestler Taiho and American discus thrower Al Oerter. "The idea is greatness maintains greatness if done properly. If we do enough research and create the right atmosphere, the event can still be exciting."

That credo took Greenspan to the Olympic Stadium in 1964 to film "Jesse Owens Returns to Berlin". Having Owens listen to a record of "Deutschland Uber Alles" wasn't enough, it had to be a 1930s copy.

But it took four years before the Hughes Sports Network bought the show for a limited broadcast in 1968. And it was another four years before ABC decided to show it.

The Bannister show is another gem. The British Broadcasting Co., located just five miles from Bannister's home, has bought this show and the other 12 "Numero Uno" segments. "ABC's Wide World of Sports" will air portions of the Bannister piece this Saturday.

With fabulous footage of the race and the principals, Greenspan has brought excitement and anticipation to an achievement 25 year old, but one that will last forever. No one can take that away from Roger Bannister, and Bud Greenspan's artistry makes that certain.

"I can still remember the headlines, huge headlines: "BANNISTER FAILS," said Chris Brasher, Bannister's teammate. "And it was then that he decided he had to have something to replace this...The one thing that everybody was after was the four-minute mile."

So did Oxford colleagues Ros and Norris McWhirter, who later became famous as the editors of the "Guinness Book of Records."

"Our role was to keep Roger supplied with information from all over the world about what his rivals were doing," said Ross McWhirter. "Not just the times they did, but more detailed information about the lap times and the tactics (keeping) him fired with the urgency to do it first."

May 6, 1954 was a cold, bleak, windy afternoon. There were some 1,000 spectators at Iffley Field huddled together watching a seemingly insignificant dual meet between Oxford and a British amateur athletic team. The ninth event of the program was the mile run. Entered for the British amateur team were Brasher, Chataway and Bannister.

The weather conditions weren't good, and Bannister was uneasy. "Then I remembered talking to Franz Stampfl earlier that day and he said, 'If you don't take the chance that you're given, you may never get another chance and you may never forgive yourself.'

"I was so full of running and so impatient that I couldn't believe that he was going fast enough," Bannister said. "I remember saying, 'Faster! Faster!' and luckily he kept his cool and he knew what a first lap should be."

Chataway took over the lead in the third lap. The runners circled the track and headed into the fourth and final lap. The three-quarter mile time was announced over the loud speaker: "three minutes."

Bannister inched closer to Chataway, "gradually getting impatient to overtake him. I kept behind him and then leapt past him on the back-straight, then I had 300 yards to run on my own.

"I began to feel, really for the first time, fatigue, and then there's a moment when time seems to slow up. The finishing tape, instead of getting near, it almost seems to recede.

"I knew that I was getting very tired and I more or less flung myself at the tape. I knew, though, that I must have been very, very close, if I hadn't, in fact, done the four-minute mile."

There was a delay — which seemed an eternity — before the official announcement. Then, with a flair for the dramatic, Ross McWhirter bellowed:

"Ladies and gentlemen, here is the result of Event No.9, the one-mile. First, No.41, R.G. Bannister of Exeter and Merton Colleges, for the Amateur Athletic Association, with a time which is a new meeting and track record, and which, subject to ratification, will be a new English Native, British National, British All-Comers, European, British Commonwealth, and World's Record.

OH BOY!— George Gervin's eyes light up when he sees the basket through the trees in Wednesday night's NBA playoff game against Philadelphia. Tall timber for the Sixers are Darryl Dawkins and Bobby Jones. (AP Laserphoto)

Spurs Turn To Bullets

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The San Antonio Spurs have earned a playoff rematch with the Washington Bullets. And veteran Louie Dampier says the Spurs will show up this year without the playoff monkey that's been on their backs for a decade.

With emergency starter Mike Green hitting nine crucial fourth-quarter points and guided by the seldom-used Dampier, the Spurs shaded the 76ers 111-108 Wednesday night in the decisive seventh game of an NBA Eastern Conference semifinal series.

The Central Division champion Spurs have qualified for either the ABA or NBA playoffs in 11 of the franchise's 12 years, but hadn't won a series since 1968 — when they were the ABA's Dallas Chaparrals.

They also won the Central Division last year and got a bye into the second round, only to be eliminated by Washington in six games. There was grumbling about a playoff jinx.

"It's just a nice thing to finally get the monkey off our back," said the 34-year-old Dampier, who hit two fourth-quarter jumpers and quarterbacked the Spurs' late surge.

"A lot of people said we couldn't win, but we all had faith in ourselves," said forward Larry Kenon.

The Spurs, who had frittered away a 3-1 lead in the best-of-seven series, led the 76ers by as many as 18 points in the second period and nine at halftime.

But the 76ers, led by Julius Erving, had clawed back, taking a 104-101 lead with 2:33 remaining. The 6-foot Dampier, who had played briefly in only two games of the series, connected on an 18-foot jumper and Mark Olberding had a free throw to knot the score.

Green, starting in place of injured Billy Paultz, then hit a pair of free throws and a jumper and Gervin had two other free throws to put the game out of reach.

"Mike Green and Louie Dampier came through and really won the ballgame for us," said San Antonio Coach Doug Moe. Dampier was pressed into service because starter James Silas was in foul trouble and reserve Mike Gale wasn't shooting well.

"We really didn't really expect that out of Green," said Philadelphia forward Bobby Jones. "But I played with him my first year in the league (at Denver) and I knew he was a clutch player."

"Green played excellent basketball," said Philadelphia Coach Billy Cunningham. "We were up by three with about two minutes to go. In the last two minutes it was anybody's game. We had the opportunity to win."

Gervin had 33 points and Kenon added 27. Green finished with 18, but was credited with 20 because of an apparent error in the official boxscore.

As for the Bullets, the drained Moe savored a beer in each hand and smiled, "I don't even know we're playing Washington yet. As far as I'm concerned, they don't even exist at the moment. You just win a big game in a big series, you don't turn it off right away."

The series opens Friday night in Landover, Md.

'Fly' Admits Special Lie

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — A former basketball player says he lied about receiving under-the-table payoffs at Austin Peay State University because another interviewee on an NBC special report offered him several hundred dollars.

James "Fly" Williams, who was the nation's fifth leading scorer during his freshman year in the 1972-73 season, told NBC's Edwin Newman he had been given a car and a house while at the Clarksville school.

Asked on the television report, "College Sports: Big Money On Campus," if he had been offered a car to attend college, Williams said, "Sure. Not only a car but also a house and everything else I wanted."

In an interview with the Nashville Banner, however, Williams said he never received a car and lived in a dormitory during his two seasons with the Governors.

"Hey, I walked around Clarksville, I didn't have no car," Williams, who left Austin Peay after his sophomore year, told the newspaper Tuesday. "I set some basketball records at the Peay but I set another record folks may not know about — that's the number of times I flunked my driver's test."

Asked why he made the remarks to Newman, Williams, playing semi-pro ball in New York, said, "I was offered a lot of things by a lot of schools. I'm working with the ghetto kids up here trying to keep them in school and get them away from drugs. I didn't even know what the TV program was going to be."

Williams said Rodney Parker, also interviewed on the television show, offered him the money.

"The Horse That Didn't Come To Dinner" — Czaravitch

Horse Sitting Out Derby

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

He's the horse that didn't come to dinner.

While Spectacular Bid and Flying Paster are busy posing for photographers, while their trainers are holding non-stop press conferences outside their stables and thousands are drowning themselves in mint juleps in the madcap excitement of Louisville's Kentucky Derby week, a majestic chestnut colt named Czaravich is placidly munching in Belmont Park's Barn 57 back in New York.

There were hard boots who said this magnificent but lightly raced animal could be the thorn that would prick the bubble of the two favorites for the year's Triple Crown honors.

But saner heads decided Czaravich would pass up the first round — the most prestigious of horse races. But take note of the name. You are bound to see it prominently on the form sheet in big races to come — quite possibly the Preakness, almost certainly the Belmont Stakes.

Whether the pride of the East, Spectacular Bid, or the toast of the West, Flying Paster — or colts of lesser stature — wins the Derby, the prospect of a third consecutive sweep of the Triple Crown events appears remote.

Czaravich has to be contended with down the line.

Billy Turner, the colt's trainer, was asked how difficult it was to bypass the Derby, the horse race that has become a part of the nation's culture.

"It wasn't hard at all," replied Turner, a reed-thin former steeplechase rider who saddled Seattle Slew in his three victorious Triple Crown races two years ago. "The colt simply isn't ready. He's done a lot in a short space of time. You can't go to the well too many times too soon."

It was consideration for the horse first — the possible glory and fanfare next — that cost Turner his job as trainer of Seattle Slew.

Slew had had only six races — three as a 2-year-old and three as a 3-year-old — when he came to Churchill Downs for the 1977 Derby, a $17,500 ugly duckling bargain colt bought at public auction by two young couples, the Mickey Taylor's and Jim Hill's.

After sweeping the Derby, Preakness and Belmont, the owners — heady with success — decided to sent the colt to the Pacific Coast for the Swaps Stakes.

The owners disdained the advice. Slew raced and finished 16 lengths back of the winner, J.O. Tobin. It was Slew's first defeat, a shattering blow.

Turner's bitterness ran deep and he didn't hide it. The Taylor's and Hill's got a new trainer. The road back for Seattle Slew was long and arduous.

Turner, a bright young guy of 38, had no problem finding new responsibilies. Horsemen sought him out. One of these was William Reynolds, a retired business executive living in England, who had in his stable a raw-boned chestnut son of Nijinski, an English champion. The Russian name came naturally — Czaravich.

The announcement brought another wave of derision from the crowd — much of it done for the benefit of, and sometimes at the urging of, local television camera crews.

But even before the pick was made, the fans were shouting sarcastically at the Giants' table, yelling such names as "Eldridge Small ... Rocky Thompson ... " and other first-round Giants picks of the past who never made it big in the NFL.

Simms was considered a "sleeper" since he only made second team All-Ohio Valley Conference last year, completing 92 of 173 passes for 1,229 yards and six touchdowns. However, he was the OVC's top-rated passer in 1976 and 1977.

The St. Louis Cardinals, trying to make up for the loss of speedy Terry Metcalf to the Canadian League last year, picked running back Ottis "O.J." Anderson from the University of Miami in Florida.

The Bears, up for the second time in the first round, used their own pick to take Al Harris, an All-American defensive end from Arizona State.

Dorney, a strong 262-pounder, has excellent mobility despite only average speed. He is adept at blocking for both the run and the pass.

The New Orleans Saints spoiled the Philadelphia Eagles' hopes of grabbing an all-round kicker by taking Russell Erxleben of Texas, who did the Longhorns' placekicking and punting.

Erxleben is considered the best combination kicker to come along since Oakland's Ray Guy. He was a great passer in high school and has even been projected as some team's No.3 quarterback, although he was too valuable as a kicker to play elsewhere in college.

Erxleben shares the major college record with a 67-yard field goal and kicked 31 field goals of more than 40 yards in his career, including a record 52-yarder in the Senior Bowl. He is a conventional, straight-ahead kicker, not a sidewinder.

The Bengals, using a choice acquired from the Washington Redskins for Lemar Parrish and Coy Bacon, took running back Charles Alexander of Louisiana State, a 214-pound combination of speed and power who holds the all-time Southeastern Conference rushing record of 4,035 yards. He is one of only eight runners in major college history to gain 4,000 yards.

The Cleveland Browns used all but 24 seconds of their allotted time, then swapped first-round picks with San Diego and also received the Charges' second-round selection this year. The Chargers then took Kellen Winslow, a tight end from Missouri.

The crowd, which had been chanting the name of Marty Lyons before the Jets' announced their pick, cheered wildly when the team complied by selecting the All-American defensive end from Alabama.

The Green Bay Packers took Eddie Lee Ivery, a triple-threat running back from Georgia Tech who gained an NCAA record 356 yards against Air Force on 26 carrie last fal. He holds Georgia Tech's career rushing and scoring re-

The Green Bay Packers took Eddie Lee Ivery, a triple-threat running back from Georgia Tech who gained an NCAA record 356 yards against Air Force on 26 carrie last fal. He holds Georgia Tech's career rushing and scoring records with 3,517 yards and 26 touchdowns.

The Minnesota Vikings, whose running game went to pieces last season when age hit the offensive line, took All-American running back Ted Brown from North Carolina State to complement Chuck Foreman in their backfield.

The Atlanta Falcons selected Don Smith of Miami, Fla., a defensive tackle whom they see as an end in the NFL. The 250-pound Smith is a fine pass-rusher whose specialty is sacking quarterbacks.

The Seattle Seahawks went for Manu Tuiasosopo of UCLA, a 250-pound defensive lineman who has played both tackle and nose guard. He is a cousin of Jack Thompson's.

The Los Angeles Rams, with a pick acquired from Oakland in exchange for cornerback Monte Jackson, took George Andrews, an outside linebacker from Nebraska who played last season as a graduate student, which is permissable under NCAA rules.

The Browns, using the pick obtained in the swap with San Diego, selected Willlis Adams, a wide receiver from the University of Houston, who led the Southwest Conference champions last fall with 29 receptions for 534 yards.

The Eagles, stymied in their quest for Erxleben, went for UCLA linebacker Jerry Robinson, a three-time first-team All-American.

Robinson led UCLA in tackles each of those three years, making 452 in his career. He is a fine all-round athlete who 4.6 speed over 40 yards, has high-jumped 6-5, long jumped 23-2 and run a 9.9 100.

The Denver Broncos, who reportedly would have liked to take a quarterback, instead went for pass protection, choosing All-American offensive tackle Kelvin Clark from Nebraska.

Kansas City acquired Houston's first-round choice by giving the Oilers their second-round picks this year and next. The Chiefs then selected Clemson quarterback Steve Fuller, two-time Player of the Year in the Atlantic Coast Conference.

The Miami Dolphins selected Jon Giesler, a 253-pound offensive tackle from Michigan. Giesler was sidelined by a fractured foot early in the 1977 season, but came back late in the year, and last fall he replaced Mike Kenn, the Atlanta Falcons' first-round choice in the 1978 draft.

Family Fuels Sprinter

By JIM FERGUSON
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

Along with the personal satisfaction that goes along with it, Jerry Isaacs has a couple of other reasons why he enjoys winning the 220-yard dash so much, and so often.

"I got married last June," recalled the Dunbar senior, "and I sure enjoy my wife feeling proud of me everytime I win."

That's reason uno.

"Now I've got a little son," continued Isaacs. "and when I get out of high school I want to have something to show him about what I did."

And that's reason two.

If things go according to Isaacs' plans, the DHS sprinter will have a few more medals to show off to his offspring in a few years. Along with running on the Panther spring relay team which garnered a state meet berth, Isaacs will also head to Austin in both the 220 and 100-yard dashes. And he feels his chances of capturing gold in each event is "pretty good."

"I think my best chance (of winning) will come in the 220," said the 5-6, 135-pounder. "I know in the 100 (Estacado sprinter Robert) Humphrey is going to be awfully hard to beat."

A Running Battle

Isaacs and Humphrey have kept a running battle going all season in the 100. However, up until this point Isaacs has come out on the short end, beating Humphrey only once (and that came after the Matador sprinter had been disqualified for jumping the gun at the Levelland Relays). But in the 220, things have been quite a bit different, since Humphrey doesn't run the longer sprint anymore.

Explaining his success this year in the 220, Isaacs commented: "Since I'm short I can really lean into the curve more than the taller runners can. You have to know how to run the curve...and I do. I can really get after it on the curve."

If the 100 was run as a curve race, instead on the straightaway, Isaacs feels he might be unbeatable.

Isaacs' name has popped in and out of the state's top times all season, starting back in late March when he recorded a 9.7 clocking in the 100-yard dash. Since then, Isaacs has run a 9.6 in the 100 and a 21.7 in the 220 (both school records). He also holds school marks in the 100-meter dash (10.5) and the 200-meter (21.5).

Since The Middle Of March

Since the middle of March, Isaacs has worked out as a quartermiler under the direction of DHS coach John Ford. And both Ford and Isaacs feel its been those harder workouts that has helped develope him into a class sprinter.

"It has made my legs a lot stronger," said Isaacs, adding he hasn't had a serious injury yet this season. "Also when I come down the straightaways I have a lot more extra kick than I had last year.

Because of that extra strength Isaacs feels a 21.4 clocking isn't out of the question. "At Austin, I think I can run a 21.5," commented Isaacs, "and maybe if everything is just right, a 21.4."

While there are those who don't enjoy a Big Dog running right next to them, Isaacs says that extra pressure makes him run just a little bit harder.

"I love pressure," said Isaacs. "The more the pressure the harder I run. I just hate to come in last."

Asked if he'd ever brought up the rear in a race, Isaacs smiled and said: "No. And I hope to keep it like that."

Jimmy Connors Picks Up A Low Forehand Shot

Connors Struggles Through Win

DALLAS (AP) — Jimmy Coniors said it wouldn't be any fun if he was perfect all the time.

And the world's No. 2 player was far from flawless Wednesday night in a World Championship of Tennis quarter-final victory over hustling Gene Mayer, currently ranked No. 55.

Connors prevailed 6-7, 6-1, 6-4, and 6-1 but it took two and one-half hours and a good deal of frustration in his first meeting ever with the 23-year-old New Yorker, who plays all shots two-fisted with an oversized racquet.

Connors will play 20-year-old John McEnroe in the semifinals Friday night. The survivors for the other semifinal match will be determined tonight when defending champion Vitas Gerulaitis meets Brian Gottfried and No. 1 ranked Bjorn Borg plays Australian Geoff Masters.

"I wish I could be at the top of my game all the time but it is the mark of a champion to win when you aren't playing great tennis," said Connors. "Now, it wouldn't be any fun at all if I was at the top of my game all the time. There's an extra special feeling about winning when you aren't playing well.

"It's very difficult for anybody to keep at the pinnacle of his game all the time. I have my slumps. I just started hitting the ball cleanly in the last three sets tonight. I hadn't hit it well in about two weeks."

Mayer, known more as a doubles player, took the first set away from Connors in a tie-breaker 7-2.

"I served well but the old Jimmy of 1974 and 1975 finally caught up with me," said Mayer, playing Connors for the first time. "Back in 1974 and 1975 Jimmy played every game good and solid. He still has his brilliant moments but you don't see the same Jimmy you saw before. Sometimes his forehand falls apart. He used to hit every ball 100 miles an hour."

New Bowling Lanes Set

Groundbreaking ceremonies for a $1.8-million, 40-lane bowling facility were held Wednesday at 5150 69th St., future site of South Plains Lanes.

Construction is expected to be completed in August, according to manager Gerry Wilson. League bowling will start Labor Day weekend, he said.

The 36,000 square-foot building will also include a six-table billiard room, pro shop, lane for the handicapped, 180 rental lockers, a meeting room, lounge, snack bar, glass-enclosed game room, an awards program for league bowlers, and supervised preschoolers' playroom.

Marilyn Harrison will be the office manager, having moved here from Denver to assist in setting up the new facility. Already, nine leagues have applied to use the facility with league applications are still being invited.

Wilson also came here from Colorado (Boulder) where he managed a 24-lane operation. Wilson said an assistant manager will be named in the near future.

The groundbreaking featured a portable lane and the Muscular Dystrophy poster child rolled the first ball. Dignitaries also got to try their luck, and the lane owners contributed $20 for each hit to the MD fund.

Twenty-two of the dignitaries scored "hits," but Brunswick pitched $20 into the MD treasury for all 55 attending the groundbreaking for a total donation of $1,100.

EHS Loses To Lobos

LEVELLAND (Special)— David Bulls struck out 12 batters and came within one out of a no-hitter as the Levelland Lobos moved into a tie for first place in the 1-AAA baseball race by defeating the Estacado Matadors 4-0 in a makeup baseball game Wednesday afternoon.

Bulls had two strikes on Estacado second baseman Tony Gutierrez with two outs in Estacado's last chance to bat in the top of the seventh.

The victory gives Levelland a share of the loop lead with Dumas and Borger. All three teams sport 7-3 district records. The loss drops Estacado to 3-7 in loop play.

With one out, first baseman Tim Nichols walked and moved to third when designated hitter Wes Harley doubled to left field. Estacado then intentionally passed Lobo pitcher Bulls to load the bases.

With two outs, left fielder Gary Dockery lined a single to center driving in Harley and Bulls.

The final two runs occurred when catcher Britt Long grounded to Estacado shortstop Hector Limon. Limon bobbled the ball allowing both Dockery and second baseman Robert Leaks to score.

The only Estacado threat came in the second inning, when the Matadors got the first two runners on base via errors. However, Bulls got out of trouble by getting Kenneth Davis to pop out, and both Dewayne Slaughter and Michael Sykes struckout.

LHS, 'Dogs Split Pair

PLAINVIEW (Special)—Noel Jaime drove in four runs with a homer and third baseman Sammy Chavez had three more RBIs and Oscar Lopez had three more hits as the Lubbock High Westerners defeated the Plainview Bulldogs 15-1 in a game called after five innings because of the 10-run run in the first game of a 4-AAAA doubleheader Wednesday afternoon.

The Bulldogs, however, rebounded in the second contest to gain a split in the action. Plainview took the second contest 5-3.

Every player on the Lubbock High team was able to get a hit during the first contest. Pitcher David Rush, meanwhile, was able to keep the Bulldog batters at bay with six strikeouts. Rush only faced 24 batters.

In the second game, it seemed at first that the Westerners were going to sweep the twinbill by building a 3-0 lead afer three innings.

Plainview, which concluded its season, wound up with the most successful year in the school's history. Bulldogs finished with a 5-3 second half record and 9-7 during the district race. Plainview is 14-14 on the season.

Many Baseball Execs See More Latin Players

lies' Latin America coordinator, have greatly expanded the club's attention to Latin America. And Green said the advent of the collegiate baseball draft has helped spur his team's Latin development.

Better organization in Puerto Rico and the Dominican Republic is better preparing players from those countries, and the success of Latin players in the states has increased national attention on U.S. baseball.

"All of a sudden, it seems like playing baseball in the United States is what everyone in the Dominican Republic wants to do," said Phillies pitcher Nino Espinosa.

Maduro helped facilitate rules changes allowing more U.S. b)llplayers to play in the winter leagues and also improved relations with the club owners. He expects to see more major league players from the Carribbean, Panama, Venezuela, and even nontraditional baseball countries such as Nicaragua and Colombia.

Maduro left the commissioner's office last year to start the new Inter-American League, a Triple-A caliber league with teams in Miami, Puerto Rico, Dominican Republic, Panama and Venezuela.

"I think this new league will help get more Latin players into the major leagues. There is a great deal of difficulty for the players to adapt themselves here. That's one of the big reasons I started this new league.

"I feel the players, no matter how good the instruction, develop and learn quicker if they are playing for their own teams in their own countries," Maduro said.

Although Mexican players have traditionally preferred to play in their own country's leagues, Detroit veteran Aurelio Rodriquez, a Mexican, noted, "A lot of players come here. then go back, because they know they have a job there. But if they can make so much more money here, they might stay here longer."

San Diego Padres minor league director Jim Weigel, who said his team would love to come up with a Mexican star because of its proximity to Mexico, said, "There seem to be more Mexican players making it now. We've just hired a full-time Latin scout."

And as Preston Gomez of the Dodgers points out, the Latin increase comes without new Cuban ballplayers. In the early 1960s, most Latin players in the majors were Cubans. But after a period of cool diplomatic relations between the United States and Cuba there are only four.

However, President Fidel Castro began last year to allow exiles to visit Cuba, and may soon allow Cubans in the country to come to the U.S. to play baseball.

"Some day the political situation will be solved with Cuba, and then you will have a lot of Cuban players again," Gomez said.

The question underlying the coming Latin wave is whether greater numbers will result in greater militancy among the players, some of whom have giant lists of dissatisfactions, especially their pay and the lack of Latins in managerial positions in baseball.

Some things on the list seem likely to be taken care of almost naturally. Baseball, at its heart, is fiercely competitive, and if fielding nine Latins will beat the Yankees, it seems likely that any team would do that.

"Pittsburgh isn't an area with a lot of Spanish-speaking people, and I think that city has proven that people will pay to see a winner, regardless," said former Pirates outfielder and current Astros Manager Bill Virdon.

And Virdon and the Expos' Dick Williams, two managers with Latin coaches, agree that they are indispensable on a team with several Latin players.

"With more Latins, I think a manager's job is a lot easier with a Latin coach," Virdon said. "He's very important for communication."

Teams such as Pittsburgh, San Francisco, Houston, Los Angeles and Cincinnati already sprinkle their farm systems with special Latin personnel, and other teams are doing the same. Several Latin players now have front-office positions, with titles such as Latin America coordinator, and the Inter-American League is giving former players such as Luis Aparicio a chance to gain experience running a franchise.

So far, the Houston Astros are the only team that offers formal classroom tutoring to enable Spanish-speaking players to learn American culture and language.

There are many in baseball who feel more can be done.

"There needs to be a concerted effort to be cognizant that there are social and philosophical barriers to the Latins. Baseball must start doing things to ease those barriers," said Reggie Jackson of the Yankees.

"It seems to me that for any employer hiring young people who initially come from a different culture and different language, it would be most wise to offer help to ease that transition," said Marvin Miller, executive director of the Players Association.

Miller was quick to admit that the Players Association needs to print its agreements and notices in Spanish and offer help with such special problems as those of players who can't collect on baseball health care plan in the hospitals of their home countries.

And the Latin players are hoping that they will get their chance to prove that Spanish-speaking athletes can hawk products as well as anyone else.

"I guess they don't think the Latins would express themselves very well on television," said Gomez. "I think if they would try, they might be surprised."

"I speak with an accent," said the Astros' Cesar Cedeno. "But so does Ricardo Montalban."

Robinson Homers Lead Buc Rampage

By The Associated Press

Pittsburgh's Bill Robinson went into the game determined to have a good time, which, lately, has been a rarity for him. But this time, he had a ball.

Robinson belted a pair of two-run homers and went 3-for-5 as Pittsburgh ripped the Atlanta Braves 10-2 Wednesday night. With two swipes of his bat, Robinson doubled his home run production for the season.

"I was perfectly relaxed," he explained.

It has been a long time between laughs for the 6-foot-2, 200-pound slugger, who will be 36 next month. Last year, when he was hampered by an early-season injury, his batting average plunged 58 points below his major league high of .304 in 1977, and this spring, Robinson lost his left field job to the John Milner-Lee Lacy tandem. When he did get chances to hit, he didn't make the mst of the. He took a .232 batting average into Wednesday night's game as a replacement at first base for Willie Stargell, who was resting an ailing hip.

Robinson said he made up his mind before the game, that, "I was going out there and have fun. It didn't matter if I got five hits or made five outs."

Robinson belted his first homer of the game off Mickey Mahler in the first inning after Dave Parker had doubled. "Mahler threw me a change up that came in real fat," Robinson recalled. "It went out."

He chipped in with a single in the third inning when the Pirates scored five runs and chased Mahler, then had some more fun in the fourth inning. Parker again was on base, on a fielder's choice, when Robinson slammed homer No. 2 off reliever Frank LaCorte.

Reds 4 Cubs 1

LaCoss' bid for a perfect game ended when he walked Barry Foote to start the Chicago sixth, then Ted Sizemore followed with a single. LaCoss, 2-0, gave up two more hits before leaving with two outs in the eighth. George Foster's double and Ray Knight's single drove in two of Cincinnati's runs.

Cardinals 5 Astros 2

Reynolds' error in the fifth set the stage for Mike Tyson to double home the tying run, and he scored on a single by Garry Templeton. John Denny, who had to pitch his way out of several jams, conceded his victory was "not a thing of beauty."

Ryan Outduels Guidry

By The Associated Press

Giving up just one run and five hits, you'd normally expect to win a baseball game.

At the top of his form, the star of the California Angel staff is hard to beat — as he was Wednesday night. New York's Ron Guidry was as stingy as ever, yet wound up getting burned by Ryan's flame-thrower and lost a 1-0 decision in Anaheim.

"I didn't throw the ball very well at the beginning," said Ryan after his nifty six-hitter, "(but) the longer I threw, the more confidence I got."

Ryan had been removed from his last two starts because of a groin injury, but it didn't seem to bother the hard-throwing right-hander against the defending world champions.

Terry Humphrey scored California's only run on a double by Jim Anderson in the third inning off Guidry, 2-2. A sellout crowd of 40,648 watched the strong pitching performance by two of baseball's best hurlers. Ryan, 4-1, struck out seven and walked two while Guidry fanned nine batters and walked three.

Humphrey singled with one away in the third inning and Guidry struck out Orlando Ramirez before Anderson doubled to left-center to score the game's lone run.

"We played the powers from the East and proved we can play with them," said Ryan, whose Angels took two out of three games from both Boston and New York. "The fans are getting confidence in us."

Brewers 6, Indians 1

Gorman Thomas slapped four singles to lead a 14-hit Milwaukee attack and Moose Haas posted his first major league victory in more than a year as the Brewers defeated Cleveland.

Haas, 1-1, struck out six, walked three, and allowed only five hits in going the distance for his first victory since April 12, 1978, before he tore a muscle in his pitching arm.

Cleveland loser Wayne Garland, 0-3, was tagged for three runs and eight hits before he was relieved by Dan Spillner with none out in the fourth.

"I'm still not all the way back, but the first step is the most important," said Haas. "I didn't let the injury get me down and I never doubted myself. I knew the muscle would heal and with a little patience and a lot of work. I knew I would get things together."

Red Sox 2, A's 1

Dwight Evans' solo home run in the eighth inning provided the winning run and Mike Torrez hurled a four-hitter as Boston beat Oakland.

One of the hits off Torrez was a homer by Jim Essian that tied the score at 1-1 in the bottom of the seventh. There were two out in the eighth when Evans connected on a 1-2 pitch from Matt Keough and hit his second homer in two games.

Orioles 9, Mariners 3

Billy Smith knocked in three runs, John Lowenstein blasted a three-run homer and Mike Flanagan and Don Stanhouse combined on a seven-hitter as Baltimore beat Seattle.

Smith had a two-run single in the second and a bases-loaded RBI groundout in the fifth. The Orioles smashed 15 hits off four Mariner pitchers while winning their 13th game in the last 14. They capped their scoring with a five-run ninth, three of them on Lowenstein's blast.

Twins 7, Blue Jays 5

Ken Landreaux drove in four runs with a pair of hits, leading Minnesota past Toronto. Landreaux drove in two runs with a single in the third inning and another two runs with a double in the fifth that gave the Twins a 5-4 lead.

Ron Jackson hit a solo homerin the fourth inning for the Twins as Dave Goltz picked up his third victory in six decisions after surviving a shaky start. Mike Marshall notched his ninth save when he came on in the eighth inning to relieve Goltz.

Rangers 3, Royals 2

Al Oliver smashed a solo homer in the fifth to help Texas take a rain-soaked victory over Kansas City. The Rangers, expected to challenge Kansas City's three-year grip on the American League West, took the first season series between the rivals, 2-1.

Steve Comer scattered eight hits in 71-3 innings as a light-to-heavy rain fell steadily throughout the game. Sparky Lyle finished up for the Rangers, gaining his fourth save.

Said Oliver of his homer: "Just before I went up to the plate, I told (Mike) Jorgensen, 'The only way I'm going to get a base hit off these guys is to hit one out.'

Faceless Knight - Sir Nolan of Ryan

His name is far more well known than his face, but for the past 11 years, Nolan Ryan has been the most exciting pitcher in baseball. In 1971, New York dealt him to California, feeling his walks per inning were too close to his strikeouts, but history shows that the decision was one of the worst ever made in a front office.

Stocks Rise In Moderate Trading

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices rose in moderate trading today, despite a new report showing another large increase in wholesale prices.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks rose 4.76 to 860.27 in the first two hours of trading after ending unchanged in the previous session. Gaining issues outnumbered losers by a 3-2 margin in a noon tally of New York Stock Exchange trading.

Analysts said the .9 percent rise, at a 10.8 percent annual rate, in producer prices in April was within a range most traders had expected.

The NYSE composite index added .22 to 57.58. Big Board volume was a moderate 13.65 million shares at midday against 13.02 million in the previous session.

Among the actively traded NYSE issues, Ramada Inns rose ¼ to 14⅛. Ramada said its proposal for a casino in Atlantic City, N.J. had been approved by the city planning board and other approvals needed for construction could come this month.

Among other gambling related issues, Holiday Inns gained ½ to 21⅛; Bally rose 1¾ to 79½; Del E. Webb rose 1⅛ to 20⅝ and Playboy Enterprises added ½ to 23.

General Public Utilities tumbled ¼ point to 10½ as the second most active issue at midday. The utility is seeking about $450 million in credit to help cover the cost of the nuclear accident at its Three Mile Island plant.

Smithkline rose 2¼ to 91 in active trading after tumbling 5¾ points in the previous session. The company said it received approval from the Food and Drug Administration to market a new drug to lower blood pressure. On Wednesday its stock fell sharply on a report in medical journal raising questions about the effects of an ulcer drug.

Iran Mourns Murdered Leader

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — More than 200,000 mourners marched through downtown Tehran today with the body of Ayatollah Morteza Motahari, the second leader of the Iranian revolutionary regime assassinated within nine days.

A telephone caller purporting to speak for the assassins said other leaders of the regime were marked for death. But Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, the architect of the revolution, said the "martyrdom" of Motahari and Gen. Mohammad Vali Gharani made the leaders of the revolution "more determined in our fight against corruption and imperialism."

The procession started at 8 a.m., and the line of marchers swelled as it moved through the city. The government ordered national mourning for the day, and shops and factories were closed.

Amid the wailing of women in traditional long black veils, some of the mourners chanted slogans condemning communists and leftist guerrillas, calling them "parasites on society," because the group that claimed responsibility for the assassinations used leftist as well as religious terminology in its statements.

The procession traveled for about a mile. Then the body was transferred to a black hearse to be taken to the holy city of Qom, Khomeini's headquarters.

Motahari, a member of Khomeini's secret Islamic Revolutionary Council, was shot Tuesday night in Tehran. An anonymous telephone caller said the assassination was the work of Forghan, a secret organization opposed to the religious domination of the revolution and the group that claimed to have assassinated Gen. Gharani, the first post-revolution army chief of staff, on April 23.

Another caller purporting to represent Forghan telephoned The Associated Press and other Western news agencies Wednesday and said: "These killings are the first step in proving our point." He said Forghan's next victims would be major officials of Prime Minister Mehdi Bazargan's provisional government and other members of the revolutionary council, the supreme power in the country.

There was no way to confirm the authenticity of the calls.

Italian Leftists Set Off Bombs In Rome

ROME (AP) — Leftist terrorists set off bombs in the Rome headquarters of the Christian Democratic Party in a pre-election raid today and killed at least one policeman in a shootout as they fled, police said.

Two other policemen were wounded critically, police said.

The Italian news agency ANSA quoted firemen as saying they found the bodies of three persons in the rubble, but there was no confirmation of this. Fire officials said the only casualties were policemen.

The gang, possibly numbering as many as 15 members, set off high-powered explosives, devastating one floor of the building and causing damage to other floors in the six-story structure.

Scores of police cars and armored vehicles rushed to the scene near the Tiber River in downtown Rome and helicopters hovered overhead in an attempt to spot the fleeing gang members. Some were said by witnesses to have fled in a red Simca and others on high-powered motorcycles.

Italian radio said firemen found the gang had painted the five-pointed Red Star symbol of the Red Brigades, Italy's most feared terrorist group, on the walls inside the building.

The attack came a month before Italians go to the polls in a national election, and the radio said the terrorists scrawled on the walls: "Transform the electoral fraud into a class war."

Sketchy reports from the scene described the gang members as young and unmasked. The gang was said to include several women.

Police said the terrorists struck about 9:30 a.m. One group armed with submachine guns entered the building and led out workers found inside, some of them in handcuffs.

Vietnam-China Tensions Grow

BANGKOK, Thailand (UPI) — Vietnam today accused China of new armed provocations along their border and Western intelligence analysts reported Vietnamese troops in Laos moving toward China, raising tensions along the volatile frontier.

The official Vietnam News Agency said Chinese warplanes had crossed into its airspace and Peking's troops had made hit-and-run raids into Vietnamese territory.

In neighboring Laos, Vietnamese troops were moving north toward the Chinese border, apparently to reinforce Laotian defenses, Western intelligence analysts in Bangkok said.

"The Vietnamese in Laos are definitely reinforcing along much of the border," one analyst said. "They are gearing up for something."

Vietnam and the pro-Hanoi government in Laos have repeatedly said Chinese troops were massing on their borders for new assaults, but a propaganda blast by Hanoi today indicated tensions have escalated sharply.

The Vietnamese news agency said that, while making the provocations along the border, Chinese negotiators in Hanoi were "eluding the urgent measures to ensure peace and security in the border areas."

'Ike' Called WWII 'Soap Opera'

By PETER J. BOYER

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Dwight D. Eisenhower, I have no doubt, was a great general. I mean, we did win the war. But Eisenhower wasn't exactly flamboyant. They did not call him "Blood and Guts" or "Ol' Iron Britches" or "Bull."

They called him "Ike." A blunt, economical name for a blunt, Kansas type of guy. Ike didn't leave legend wherever he trod. Maybe that's why they waited so long to make a movie about him. Maybe that's why the movie they finally made takes pains to portray everyone else involved in World War II as comical idiots.

"Ike," tonight, Friday and Sunday on ABC, is a World War II soap opera. There is a lot of Kay Summersby, much hinting about her alleged relationship with Ike. There are also a lot of showdowns between Ike and the other principals in the great war drama — Ike battling Montgomery, Ike battling Gen. Marshall, Ike battling Patton, Ike battling Churchill.

Ike wasn't a front-line hero; that's why this movie is crammed full of these backstage dramtics. Ike was a tactician and an administrator, the Supreme Commander of the Allied Expeditionary Forces — a headquarters man. He didn't tote a pearl-handled pistol or invent nifty sayings.

That's not to say "Ike" isn't an interesting movie. It is, in a television sort of way. It's just not a serious war movie, as some might have expected.

At the beginning of tonight's episode, for example, we see America's military brass in a planning session at the Pentagon. General Marshall and the others are there just to make Ike look good. They float simplistic balloons, which Ike quickly punctures, thereby showing himself qualified to go to Europe and win the war.

And wait until you see Steven Roberts as FDR. I promise, you will giggle. Wide-eyed and grinning like a raccoon, he looks like something the "Saturday Night Live" crew dreamed up. As I say, anything to make Ike look good.

Robert Duvall's Ike is respectable, though perhaps more of a bully than the Eisenhower most of us remember. Maybe that's a purposeful overcompensation, intended for those who remember Ike as a rather dull but nice guy, the kind they don't make movies about. Lee Remick turns in a nice performance as Kay Summersby, acting suitably interesting and fiery, the qualities that supposedly led to Ike's affection for her.

The treatment of Kay Summmersby is a major problem in this movie. If you're going to make a soap opera, do it right. For some reason, ABC couldn't decide whether to go ahead and let Ike and Kay have a real affair, as in "Past Remembering," the Kay Summersby book on which the film is based, or just a hinted one, conducted through meaningful glances.

"An affair is hinted at," an ABC spokesman said, "but we didn't want to make it overt, out of respect to Mamie." C'mon. Why is she there all the time, giving Ike puppies and such? Is that supposed to make Mamie feel good?

The best thing about this six-hour movie is the use of an electronic process that converts black and white film into color. Great stuff, 18 minutes of real film footage of landings, Hitler, battles — in color.

If you've ever wanted to hear Eisenhower cuss or wondered how he held his own with Churchill, you might find that "Ike" is actually sort of fun. That's one of the problems. I don't think good war movies are supposed to be fun.

Publishers Claim Breach Of Contract

NEW YORK (AP) — Grosset & Dunlap Inc. alleges in a $50 million federal suit that rival publisher Simon & Schuster is trying to infringe on its exclusive rights to such juvenile fiction classics as the Hardy Boys and Nancy Drew mysteries.

The books are produced by the Edward Stratemeyer Syndicate. Stratemeyer, who died in 1930, founded the syndicate for writers who mass-produced the juvenile mysteries and such other series as the Tom Swift and Bobbsey Twins books. The suit claimed Simon & Schuster's plans to publish a new series of the books is a breach of its contract with the Maplewood, N.J.,-based syndicate and violates a licensing agreement. Simon & Schuster could not be reached for comment Tuesday evening.

The Almanac
TODAY IN HISTORY

By United Press International

Today is Thursday, May 3, the 123rd day of 1979 with 242 to follow.

The moon is approaching its first quarter.

The morning stars are Mercury, Venus and Mars.

The evening stars are Jupiter and Saturn.

Those born on this date are under the sign of Taurus.

Danish-American journalist and civic reformer Jacob Riis was born May 3, 1849.

On this day in history:

In 1919, U.S. airplane passenger service began when Robert Hewitt flew Mrs. J. A. Hoagland and Miss Ethel Hodges from New York City to Atlantic City.

In 1933, Mrs. Nellie Tayloe Ross was sworn in as the first woman to be director of the U.S. Mint.

In 1940, Congress proclaimed the third Sunday in May as "I Am An American Day."

In 1968, the United States and North Vietnam agreed to start peace talks in Paris.

A thought for the day: British novelist Edward Lytton said, "The easiest person to deceive is one's own self."

CB Convac

By INK DIPPER

(EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the concluding column of CB Convac.)

Is it going out? Are there uses to which it can be applied to make its utilization even better?

T.R. Atterbury, of the Fort Worth Police Department, thinks his Channel 9 Police Monitor has reduced crime, shortened the arrival time of emergency squads to accident scenes, and made traveling through his area a lot safer.

His volunteer program has enabled the city to maintain a 24-hour vigilance. The record speaks for itself.

Though the U.S. Post Office issues no rules or regulations about citizens band radio, most of the 33,000 rural mail carriers could not make it without CB.

These are the rolling post offices, handling thousands of dollars in stamps, packages, postal money order blanks — all the normal function of your post office. Except they are out on the road, subject to weather, road conditions, whatever. CB is their lifeline.

Is CB a way of determining social behavior? Mike Salovesh, an anthropolist, thinks so. He's planning seminars on the subject.

Is it a way of telling Americans about their history as they pass though each part of our country? Clive Veri, dean of the College of Continuing Education at the University of Northern Illinois, in Dekalb, has advanced a program and is working hard on it.

Lep Wenzler in Decatur, Ala., came up with a unique idea: set up the CB channels like the yellow pages of your telephone directory. Then everyone would know what channel to turn to when they approached a strange community and needed some kind of help.

Wenzler got letters from every state in the United States and Canadian provinces after we wrote about his plan.

The Personal Use Advisory Council (PURAC) set up by the FCC was a bust. Nothing ever happened to it or its recommendations. On the other hand, there has been a great response to our notice of the World Administrative Radio Conference.

Then there's Dr. Harry Johnson, of the University of Tennesee in Knoxville. He discovered CB when he bought a car that was equipped with one. Now his CB is his constant companion. "Anyone who doesn't have one is missing a good part of the universe," he says.

This column has often said that CB will one day be in every moving vehicle. It will be factory equipped. Ultimately — if for safety only — Congress will pass a law to this effect.

For now, it's 10-7 and out, good buddy. Catch you next time.

CBS Announces Seven New Shows To Air In Fall

By JOAN HANAUER

NEW YORK (UPI) — They're breaking up that old gang of theirs at CBS — but not voluntarily and not completely — as Edith Bunker, Olivia Walton and Danny Williams desert their precincts.

When CBS announced its new schedule this week, it revealed that "All In The Family" will become "Archie Bunker's Place," with Archie devoting his time to his Queens' tavern and Edith dropping by occasionally. Michael Learned will appear as Olivia on Walton's Mountain only 10 times, and James MacArthur will not return at all to "Hawaii Five-0."

"Stockard Channing in Just Friends" won't be a September starter, but she'll return before 1980.

Gone completely will be "Kaz," "Paper Chase," "Good Times," and "The Mary Tyler Moore Hour" (she will return in a sitcom in the fall of 1980, as previously announced). Limited series such as "Billy," "Time Express" and "Dear Detective" also are off.

For a medium specializing in "stars" nobody ever heard of, there are a surprising number of familiar "names" cast in the seven new shows CBS announced — four hour-long dramas and three situation comedies.

In the case of "Trapper John, M.D.," the familiar name in the title will not be played by the actor who created the role in "M-A-S-H." The new hour show presents Trapper 28 years older and sober, played by Pernell Roberts instead of Wayne Rogers, in a hospital drama with comedy sidelights — it is hoped.

"Big Shamus, Little Shamus" stars Brian Dennehy (the rotten sargeant in "Pearl") as a hotel detective in Atlantic City whose life gets overturned when legalized gambling brings in new owners and a new clientele. The "Little Shamus" of the title is his son, bachelor fathers being a television favorite since the sitcom of the same name.

"Paris" stars James Earl Jones as a Los Angeles detective captain — and if anybody can bring back the cop show, it's an actor of Jones' caliber.

"We're Cruisin'" stars Jimmy McNichol in a late teen-age hour of music, girls, cars and beach blankets that CBS is slotting opposite "Happy Days" and "Laverne & Shirley."

Sitcoms include "Working Stiffs," with John Belushi's brother Jim as one of a pair of bumbling brothers working as janitors in their uncle's office building; "The Last Resort," about fun and games in a mountain resort, and "Struck by Lightning."

"Lightning" stars Jack Elam as the caretaker of an old inn who actually was created by the Dr. Frankenstein-style experiments of the present owner's great-great-grandfather.

In the interests of "continuity and stability," CBS has kept all its returning shows in their old time slots, except for "The Jeffersons," which will move to Sunday nights.

Society Elects New Directors

NEW YORK (UPI) — The American Society of Newspaper Editors elected three new members to its 12-member board of directors Tuesday.

The three, who will serve for three years, are Anthony Day, editor of the Los Angeles Times; Michael Gartner, editor of the Des Moines Register and Tribune, and Charles Rowe, editor of the Fredericksburg (Va.) Free-Lance Star.

Clayton Kirkpatrick, editor of the Chicago Tribune, and Claude Sitton, editor of the News and Observer and the Raleigh (N.C) Times, were reelected to three-year terms on the board.

William Hornby, editor of the Denver Post, will be installed as the new ASNE president at a banquet tonight. He succeeds John Hughes, editor of the Christian Science Monitor.

RUNAWAY INDIANS

ABC Still Holding Ratings Lead

NEW YORK (AP) — It was little more than a hint that something from NBC might catch on, but for the No. 3 network, even that might be a good sign.

NBC listed but one show in the A.C. Nielsen Co.'s Top 20 for the week ending April 29 — "CHiPs" in 20th place — but between there and 30th place the network had six programs, including four introduced since the end of 1978.

ABC, as usual, was a runaway winner in the networks' competition, with NBC still a distant third behind CBS. "Three's Company" on ABC was the week's most-watched show, with CBS' "M-A-S-H" second.

NBC programs bunched between 20th place and 30th were "Diff'rent Strokes," No. 21, "The Duke," 22nd, "B.J. and the Bear" 28th, and "Hello Larry" 27th. Two other shows — "Little House on the Prairie" ranked 25th and "The Rockford Files" in 28th place — are long-running NBC series.

Most programs aired during the week were reruns, but there were important exceptions. "Sanctuary of Fear," a two-hour NBC pilot starring Barnard Hughes as G.K. Chesterton's priest-private eye, Father Brown, finished the week No. 40. CBS' "I Know Why the Caged Bird Sings," based on Maya Angelou's book, was 47th. And a variety show, "Presenting Susan Anton" on NBC, did even worse, 54th.

The rating for "Three's Company" was 28.6. Nielsen says that means of all the homes in the country with TV, 28.6 percent saw at least part of the ABC show.

ABC's rating, meantime, was 17.7, with CBS second at 16.6 and NBC third at 14.3. The networks say that means in an average prime-time minute during the week, 17.7 percent of the homes in the country with TV were tuned to ABC.

NBC and ABC each had two shows at the bottom of the ratings, and "CBS Reports: Boston Goes to China" was the week's lowest-rated program, No. 67. No. 63 was an NBC News special, "College Sports, Inc.," followed by "What's Happening" and "John Denver Special," both from ABC, and "Highcliffe Manor" on NBC.

"Three's Company," with a rating of 28.6 representing 21.3 million homes, ABC; "M-A-S-H," 26.4 or 19.7 million, CBS; "Laverne and Shirley," 26.3 or 19.6 million, and "Mork and Mindy," 26.2 or 19.5 million, both ABC; "60 Minutes," 25.6 or 19.1 million, CBS; "Angie," 24.8 or 18.5 million, "Happy Days," 24.4 or 18.2 million, "Charlie's Angels," 24.1 or 18 million, and "Taxi," 23.4 or 17.4 million, all ABC, and "WKRP in Cincinnati," 23 or 17.1 million, CBS.

The next 10 shows:

"Alice," "Stockard Channing in Just Friends," "One Day at a Time" and "All in the Family," all CBS; "Barney Miller," "Eight is Enough" and "Vegas," all ABC; "Mary Tyler Moore Hour," CBS; Movie-"The Master Gunfighter," ABC, and "CHiPs," NBC.

Woman Agrees To Settlement

NEW YORK (UPI) — The granddaughter of Frank Phillips, founder of Phillips Petroleum Co., has agreed to pay her ex-husband $1,600 a month in the first significant alimony award to a man in New York state.

The settlement between Henry Durand Irwin, 62, and Elizabeth Phillips Irwin, 57, was reached this week with the aid of Manhattan Supreme Court Justice Felice Shea.

Mrs. Irwin agreed to pay her husband $1,600 monthly, plus half the proceeds from the sale of a 30-acre estate in Southbury, Conn., valued at $250,000.

In return, Irwin, a West Point graduate who had no significant employment during the 34-year marriage, agreed to the divorce. She sued for divorce in 1977, citing cruelty and abandonment, but he resisted.

PIONEER SKIERS

A gold mine near Johnsville, Calif., may have been the home of America's first ski life. In the 1860s, skiers skied down the mountain slope there on Sundays, riding up again aboard the mine's chain line of ore buckets.

Handicapped Man Now Auctioneer

HARTSVILLE, S.C. (AP) — Elias Joe Jr. who lost both his arms in a textile industry accident in 1967 says, "You have no choice. You have a handicap and you have to learn how to deal with it."

Joe, 36, dealt with it by finding an occupation "that you could do without hands."
