School bids

Staff Report

The full slate of bond issue projects recommended by Midland Indpendent School District administrators will be bidded out for architectural planning.

Trustees Wednesday authorized the district to "seek architectural services" for seven building projects, MISD spokesman Ted Miller said.

Projects include: a new elementary school; an alternative school; multipurpose rooms, libraries and classrooms at Sam Houston and Washington elementary schools; a classroom wing and multipurpose room at Bush elementary; multipurpose rooms and office pods at elementaries which don't have them; expansion of the Lee High School Library; and remodeling of science labs at LHS, Midland High School and Lee Freshman High School.

Trustee Larry Rusk said the school board considered community input in deciding the possible bond issue projects.

"The support has been overwhelmingly positive from all parties involved," Rusk said. "We've worked hard to get to this point, an it's nice to know that the community is behind us."

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Andy Rooney's suspension from "60 Minutes" caused him to be more careful, but he says the entire episode "was a better example of timidity than it was a violation of my First Amendment rights."

In February, CBS News president David Burke suspended Rooney for three months after an article published by the Los Angeles-based gay lifestyle magazine Advocate attributed racist and homophobic quotes to Rooney. The suspension was shortened to three weeks.

Gramm says new taxes unneccesary

■ With a budget summit now scheduled to begin Tuesday, deficit-reduction leader Sen. Phil Gramm says a compromise doesn't necessarily mean raising taxes.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Budget summit negotiators should be able to reach a compromise without raising taxes, said Sen. Phil Gramm, the namesake of the law that will automatically make spending cuts if deficit reduction targets aren't met.

But Gramm, a Republican, said Wednesday it is too early to tell whether a budget will be created without new taxes.

"The optimum policy is to limit the growth of federal spending and to meet the deficit targets without raising taxes," Gramm said. "I think it can be. Will it be? I don't know."

Both Texas senators, Gramm and Democrat Lloyd Bentsen, were named to take part in budget summit talks, which begin with a meeting at the White House next Tuesday.

Rep. Bill Archer of Houston, the ranking Republican on the House Ways and Means committee, was asked by House Minority Leader Bob Michel to participate.

Bentsen also said it was too soon to know whether taxes would have to increase to cut between $50 billion and $100 billion from the worsening federal deficit.

Reaching the 1991 deficit reduction target of $64 billion will "require more review than our original understanding" because of changes in the administration's economic forecast, Bentsen said.

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater Tuesday blamed increasing interest rates, lower revenues to the Treasury from a sluggish economy and a higher-than-expected cost of the savings and loan bailout for the widening deficit gap.

Bush said he will discuss a tax increase for the first time in his presidency, which he won pledging: "Read my lips. No new taxes."

But Gramm cautioned that the president's willingness to discuss higher taxes is not the same as agreeing to them.

"It's the difference between going on a date and getting married," Gramm said. "One represents a far more substantial step than the other."

In 1985, Congress passed a deficit reduction law Gramm wrote with Sen. Warren Rudman, R-New Hampshire, and Sen. Ernest Hollings, D-South Carolina.

Girl's death likely accidental, deputy says in custody hearing

■ Custody of Gloria Castillo's brother and three sisters is retained by the Department of Human Services following a hearing in which new speculation about the cause of her death is admitted in testimony.

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Testimony during a custody hearing introduced new speculation on the April strangulation death of 8-year-old Gloria Castillo.

Ector County Sheriff's Deputy Troy Davis testified that the girl, whose body was missing for more than a week, may have been accidently strangled by a rope tied to a post in the trailer court where she lived, Capt. Gene Kloss of the Sheriff's Department said.

The custody hearing for Gloria's three sisters and brother ended Wednesday as the Texas Department of Human Services was granted continued custody, according to Jeff Spain, the attorney who represented the children.

An agreement to allow the four children of Jose and Ninefa Castillo to stay with their maternal grandmother and aunt, was reached, Spain said. The children — girls, ages 6, 12, and 13, and an 8-year-old boy — have been living with their grandmother for the last week, Spain said.

Until Tuesday's testimony by David, law enforcement officials had been tight-lipped on their theories of the cause of Gloria's death. The girl was reported missing from her home on April 14 and her badly decomposed body was discovered one week later in a field about five miles from her home.

According to Bob Garcia, the parents' attorney, the assertion that Gloria was accidently strangled revolves around statements made by her brother.

The boy supposedly witnessed his parents and an accomplice, Donald Bleckler, remove the body hanging from a post and transport it elsewhere.

The boy has mental capacity of a 4-year-old, according to expert testimony by Dr. Owen Grossman, Spain said. Gloria also had a mental disability.

Garcia said the boy was questioned about the incident in judge's chambers during the hearing.

"The brother testified in chamber very definetly did not place my clients near her body in discovering or moving it," Garcia said.

Mrs. Castillo and her husband Jose maintain they did not move her and believe she was abducted, law enforcement officials said.

On Tuesday, the parents were indicted by the Ector County Grand Jury with three misdemeanors, making false reports, perjury and abuse of a corpse, for moving Gloria after her death.

At the same time Bleckler was charged with the same offense as well as two counts of sexual assault of child. The assault cases do not involve Gloria, records indicate.

Bleckler remained in Ector County Jail on $55,000 bond late Wednesday.

Although the sheriff's department investigations point to accidental death, nothing has been ruled out, Kloss said.

The rope with which Gloria was strangled is no longer on the post where the incident supposedly took place, Kloss said.

A man who lived in the area at the time of Gloria's death, said a rope found with the body looked like the same rope, Kloss said.

Garcia and Spain said they are not comfortable with the accidental hanging theory.

"It doesn't make any sense the way it has been described," Spain said.

"I personally don't think they (the parents) knew anything about it and there is no evidence that shows beyond a resonable doubt that they knew anything about" the death, Spain said, who said he interviewed the Castillos' son intensively.

MHCC honors members at award dinner

Midland's Hispanic Chamber of Commerce joined in the celebration of national Small Business Week Wednesday with an award dinner at Midland Center. The dinner celebrated the contributions of local small businesses and honored four chamber members.

"These honorees have put in the extra hours, and gone the extra mile on behalf of the chamber," stated MHCC President Charlene Romero Wurtz. "What better time is there to recognize them than during Small Business Week."

Chosen as Member of the Year was Joe Sena, a division controller with Energas. He told members that he got involved with the chamber because of its work toward economic development and education. Sena currently serves as first vice president of the chamber, but is resigning his position because he has been transferred to Dallas effective July 1.

Symphony director tours 'The Mort'

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

DALLAS — There is, of course, "The Met," both old and new. And now there is "The Mort," which is nothing but new to the world and to Midland.

Midland is going to The Mort to celebrate music.

The Met is the opera house of New York City: The Metropolitan Opera House in Lincoln Center.

The Mort — the $81.5-million Morton H. Meyerson Symphony Center — may become the concert hall of the Great Southwest. It houses its resplendent centerpiece, the Eugene McDermott Concert Hall that is dedicated to music, acoustics, and aesthetics — the performing arts.

For Midland concert-goers, The Mort will be "the place to be" on Sept. 30 when the Midland-Odessa Symphony, directed by Don Th. Jaeger, will perform.

The local symphony's performance will be preceded by that of the New York Philharmonic.

"I think that this is a great opportunity for Midland and Odessa and the Permian Basin to show our commitment to the performing arts," said Joe McShane III, a director and backer of the Midland-Odessa Symphony. "It's a great honor."

The Midland-Odessa Symphony will be the first Texas orchestra from outside the Dallas area, and only the fourth orchestra worldwide to perform in the new center.

"It's probably the premiere symphony hall in the country," surmised McShane.

"It certainly is the newest," said Jaeger, who has conducted in the U.S. and abroad for 22 years.

McShane, a Midland pilot, on Wednesday flew Jaeger and local reporters to Dallas for a tour of the new home of Sunny skies and a high in the mid-80s are on tap for today, NWS forecasters at Midland International Airport said. Winds should be from the south-southeast at 10-20 mph.

Fair weather and a low near 60 is expected tonight.

Friday should see clear skies and a high in the upper 80s.

Wednesday's high of 82 was well short of the record 101 set in 1967. The overnight low was 60. The record low for this date is 40, set in 1981.

STATE

A cold front's collision with warm, moist air from the Gulf of Mexico brought the threat of rain Wednesday in North and Southeast Texas as forecasters issued more flood warnings for the Trinity River and other waterways.

Midland-Odessa Symphony board member Joe McShane III and conductor Don Th. Jaeger examined the Morton Meyerson Symphony Center in Dallas Wednesday.

CONCERT: September date set

Dallas Symphony Orchestra.

"It's not Carnegie Hall," the conductor said. "It's not Avery Fisher. It's not Kennedy Center."

"It's the Meyerson," he said. "It has it's own personality. It's great. (But) it's not fair to compare them. They are all different."

Jaeger has conducted in those three major American concert halls.

Midland-Odessa area concert-goers may sign up for a travel package at the Midland-Odessa Symphony headquarters to attend the Sept. 30 event amid much fanfare in and about the center. The hall seats more than 2,000.

The center, a project of the city of Dallas, was conceived in the late 1970s as a new home for the Dallas Symphony Orchestra, which previously performed in the State Fair Music Hall. The center's estimated original $49.5-million cost had escalated to $81.5-million by September 1989 when the center opened.

Money for building the center came from public and private sectors: bond issues, fund drives by the Dallas Symphony Association, and in 1984 by a $10-million gift from Dallas billionaire H. Ross Perot, whose option was to name the center. His was the largest single gift to the center project.

So, Perot named the center after Morton H. Meyerson, who then was president of Perot's Electronic Data Systems (EDS) and a symphony supporter.

The concert hall was named in honor of Eugene McDermott, co-founder of Texas Instruments, after his widow, Margaret McDermott, a major Dallas arts patron, donated $5 million to the cause.

The symphony center was designed by architect I.M. Pei, and the acoustics, paramount to any concert hall, were overseen by Russell Johnson of Artec Consultants. Pei and Johnson were commissioned to design a symphony center "that would rival" great European concert halls, namely the Musikvereinsaal in Vienna and the Concertgebouw in Armsterdam.

Pei used overlapping and dramatic geometric forms in his design.

The concert hall, designed in a "shoebox" style, has a terrazzo floor, mohair-fabric on the 2,062 seats and walls of African cherrywood. It has been "judged a resounding triumph" in acoustics. Overlooking the maple orchestra stage will be the 4,500-pipe organ being built by C.B. Fisk Co. of Gloucester, Mass., and named the Herman Lay Family Organ for the co-founder of Frito-Lay Inc.

Midland's performance in The Meyerson — is an honor, said McShane.

"We are interested in keeping the performing arts alive and well in Midland," he said.

Jaeger, who has conducted in concert halls from America to Europe, noted that "it's important for me to be 'at' where it counts."

The Mort and its acoustical qualities count much for Jaeger, for Midland, for Odessa, for the musicians, and for the audience.

"It allows you to be free and do truly artistic and creative things," Jaeger said.

The 75 musicians in the Midland-Odessa Symphony were "ready to do something new and exciting."

And the symphony's invitation to perform simply is "part and parcel of being at the right place at the right time," Jaeger said.

The Midland-Odessa Symphony's Meyerson debut, Jaeger said, will be a "program I know the orchestra can play well — and that should be of interest to the critics — and is demanding yet attainable" for both the orchestra and the audience.

MHCC: Efforts to attract CAF praised

(From 1A)

Year is Patricia Chavez De Little, owner of Temporary Resources. Her 10-year-old company has a staff of five and employs 300 temporary workers.

Hispanic Businessman of the Year is Enrique Farias, owner of Farias Tax Service.

Corporate Member of the Year was Mobil Oil, recognized for its work, with the MHCC, in the Step Up to Success and Adopt-A-School program.

The four local winners compete for state honors at the state Texas Association of Mexican-American Chambers of Commerce convention in July in Victoria.

Special recognition was accorded Joe Mabee and Ed Jones for their successful efforts in landing the Confederate Air Force relocation at Midland International Airport from Harlingen.

The chamber also presented seven scholarships totaling $5,000 and Scholarship Committee Chairperson Linda Diaz told the audience she hopes the committee doubles that amount next year.

The focus of the evening was the small businessperson, and guest speaker Price Arredondo, director of small business development with the Texas Department of Commerce told the gathering: "As we start the 1990s, I think it's appropriate to take a look at the role of small business and its importance to the Texas economy."

Over the past decade, the Sanderson native told chamber members and guests, small businesses had created the majority of new jobs in Texas, a trend that's not likely to change soon.

As the '90s progress, businesses will be forced to make a number of adjustments, he cautioned the crowd. Among the changes he forsees:

- Businesses must think in terms of a global economy, and look to exports.
- Businesses must get closer than ever to the consumer, and be increasingly alert, because competition is fierce and competitors are never far behind.
- Those in the public sector must be more responsive to fast-changing markets and technology, and the public sector must be equally responsive in providing tools, such as economic assistance and job training, that help businesses be more efficient and competitive.

"Small business owners must devote time to educating themselves about market trends, their competition and business skills," he said, adding this piece of advice:

"Small businesses need to become more involved on the local, state and federal level when it comes to legislative matters. Otherwise, small business won't have a voice."

The state's small businesses have an advocate in the Texas Department of Commerce, which was created 2½ years ago to help plan and coordinate future economic development in Texas. The department currently has nine divisions and employs 370 in the Austin office.

Among the department's activities, according to Arredondo, are attracting relocations and business expansions to Texas; encouraging investment through foreign offices — the department will soon open offices in West Germany and Korea; providing information and support to those wanting to start or expand a business; support those interested in exporting; coordinating job training programs, and helping cities create enterprise zones.

Two other significant efforts by the department are promoting tourism, and film and music production. Arredondo told his audience that the state began its first nationwide tourism campaign last year, and got 750,000 inquiries on its 800 number. This year, the state hotel/motel tax receipts are up 20 percent, and international travel is up 25 percent. And, in 1989, the state economy got a $125 million boost from film productions within the state.

BUDGET: 'Summit' scheduled

(From 1A)

If Congress and the administration fail to create a budget that meets the $64 billion deficit target, the Gramm-Rudman law calls for across-the-board cuts to begin Oct. 15 that do.

"There's no doubt about the fact that without Gramm-Rudman there wouldn't be a budget summit," Gramm said.

He said the threat of those cuts is the "club ... that forces everybody to be reasonable and to be responsible. What it does is that it forces decisions to be made."

But he dismissed the notion that Gramm-Rudman could lead to a tax increase.

"I knew that balancing the budget would be unpopular before it was popular, but I think it is in the interest of the working men and women of America," Gramm said.

'Severe action' on budget likely

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush and congressional leaders announced plans Wednesday for emergency budget talks to cut up to $100 billion from a rapidly worsening federal deficit. Tax increases as well as spending cuts will be on the negotiating table.

"Severe action" is needed to avoid the huge automatic cuts that would be triggered throughout federal programs if deficit-reduction targets are not met next fall, said presidential spokesman Marlin Fitzwater.

"The leadership in the House and the Senate ... has accepted the president's invitation" to a budget summit with no preconditions, declared House Speaker Thomas S. Foley, D-Wash.

Negotiators for the House, Senate and White House will meet for the first time next Tuesday at the White House, said Fitzwater.

Bush will chair the first session. After that, he "will be involved as necessary," Fitzwater said.

The spokesman blamed increasing interest rates, lower revenues to the Treasury from a sluggish economy and a higher-than-expected cost of the savings and loan bailout for the widening deficit gap.

Internal administration estimates suggest that the government will miss deficit-reduction targets next fall by up to $100 billion, Fitzwater said.

"While the numbers aren't clear, it does seem clear to the legislative leaders as well as the administration that severe action needs to be taken to reduce the deficit and keep the economy on a sound track," he said in announcing the budget talks.

Although a "no new taxes" pledge was a central part of Bush's 1988 campaign, deteriorating economic conditions now make massive spending cuts likely next fall in the absence of major deficit-cutting action, administration officials say.

Neither White House officials nor congressional leaders would predict whether tax increases might be included in an ultimate compromise — or what kind or size they might be if included.

Clarification

The "International Trade Opportunities for the Permian Basin" seminar will be held in the lower level of the Midland Center today, beginning with registration at 8:30 a.m.

A copy of the book "The World Is Your Marketplace" will be presented to the first 75 registrants.

DREAM TRIPS

Trio slates around-the-world balloon trip

WASHINGTON (AP) — An airline pilot, a British tycoon and a Soviet cosmonaut said Wednesday they'll try to be the first crew to successfully circle the world non-stop in a balloon.

In the past, the Soviet Union refused to allow a balloon in its airspace, said project leader and captain Larry Newman of Scottsdale, Ariz.

The Soviet space agency Glavkosmos not only agreed last year to permit the expedition, but offered cosmonaut Vladimir Dzhanibekov as a partner, Newman said at a news conference here.

"Only three years ago, such a trip as this would have been considered unthinkable," said co-captain Richard Branson of the United Kingdom.

Newman, an America West pilot, made the first successful trans-Atlantic balloon flight in 1978 and holds the world record for the longest distance covered in a balloon, 5,209 miles across the Pacific in 1981.

Branson crossed the Atlantic in a hot-air balloon in 1987. Dzhanibekov, a pilot, is chief of Glavkosmos' cosmonaut training department and has been in space five times.

American to bike on Great Wall of China

BEIJING (AP) — Foreigners have ridden horses and danced classical ballet atop China's Great Wall, but on Wednesday a California man set out to become the first person to bicycle from one end to the other, some 3,700 miles.

"Like Mao said, you're not a man until you've reached the top of the Great Wall," Kevin Foster said.

Maybe if the late revolutionary leader Mao Tse-tung were still around, Foster, a 30-year-old part-time actor from Ojai, Calif., might have gotten atop the wall sooner. He spent years trying to persuade Chinese authorities to approve his plan, and several more trying to find financial sponsors in the United States.

The last hitches were smoothed out late last year, and Foster boarded a train Wednesday for the western mountain pass where the wall starts at Jiayuguan, 945 miles from Beijing. He will begin his trek later this week.

From there, the fragmented remains of the more than 2,000-year-old wall snake through desert and mountains before reaching the sea at Shanhaiguan, east of Beijing. Altogether, it covers some 3,700 miles.

Postal Service to test market polyester stamps at ATMs

WASHINGTON (AP) — Polyester postage stamps will be sold through automatic teller machines at banks in a six-month test beginning May 18 in Seattle, the Postal Service announced last week.

Spokesman Art Shealy said the stamps will be test-marketed in a joint venture by the Postal Service and Seafirst bank, first at about 15 Seattle locations and then at other Seafirst branches in Washington state.

Shealy said the sheets of stamps were designed to be like currency so that they could be dispensed the same way cash is dispensed through the machines.

He said the sheets, each with a dozen 25-cent stamps, would cost $3 apiece, debited against the customer's bank account.

The stamp is designed to be self-adhesive, requiring no licking, Shealy said.

"We think it answers quite a large portion of the public's request for a more convenient stamp," he said.

If the Seattle test is a success, Shealy said, the stamps will be tried out nationwide in the spring of 1991.

The Postal Service already sells stamps through supermarkets and other types of store and Shealy said selling them through automatic teller machines "basically is an electromechanical version" of this system.

"We think it is something that our customers want because it will enable them to buy their stamps while they are getting cash for the weekend without needing to stand in line at a post office," he said.

He said some surveys showed as many as half of the people standing in post office lines early in the morning, around noon or in the afternoon were there simply to buy stamps.

Parade marks 45th anniversary of Soviet victory over Nazis

MOSCOW (AP) — Tanks, missiles and troops paraded through Red Square on Wednesday to celebrate the World War II defeat of Nazi Germany, stirring emotions over the reunification of a former foe and the secession of three republics.

"Military danger still exists in the world," Defense Minister Marshal Dmitri T. Yazov said moments before he sent five new pieces of military hardware roaring past the assembled Kremlin leadership and Western spectators.

Yazov, who led a rifle regiment in World War II, also praised in his speech the "new thinking" of President Mikhail S. Gorbachev, which he said had lowered tensions in a Europe that was divided after the Nazi defeat in 1945.

Gorbachev, who did not address the event, was applauded by Western diplomats as he left the tribunal afterward, and in salute he raised a bouquet presented by military cadets during the ceremonv.

The Army staged Victory Day rallies in the capitals of the Baltic republics of Lithuania, Latvia and Estonia. In Latvia and Lithuania they turned into demonstrations.

In Latvia, which declared independence on May 4, a rally turned into a march by 5,000 protesters, supported by the Communist Party and military.

"We consider the declaration of independence a defeat for everyone," said Lt. Gen. Oleg Zinchenko, head of the political directorate of the Baltic Military Region, which encompasses the three republics.

Zinchenko, saying he spoke for the Armed Forces, said appeals from the military to the Kremlin to intervene more forcefully in the Baltics were not signs of weakness.

In the Lithuanian capital of Vilnius, a witness said 200 people tried to block a Victory Day procession. They shouted, "Occupiers go home!" as the veterans marched along Gediminas Avenue near a monument to Soviet Gen. Ivan Chernyakhovsky, a World War II hero.

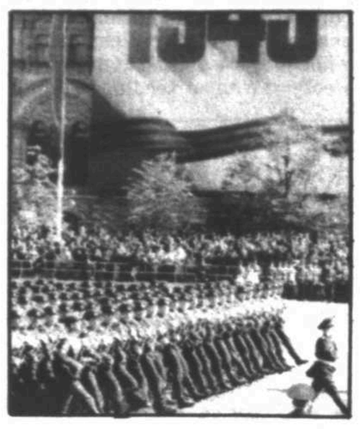
The protesters tried to block the veterans, who were apparently Russians, but a cordon of paratroopers prevented them, said Pranas Karlonas, a Lithuanian radio editor.

Lithuania declared independence on March 11. On Tuesday, Estonia took some steps toward independence, without formally declaring it.

In the Estonian capital of Tallinn, the Soviet Army paraded, but there were no confrontations, said Neme Bruus, an editor at Estonian Radio.

At the Red Square parade in Moscow, the Army took the unusual step of displaying five new pieces of hardware, some of which had never been seen by Western military observers.

"I think it's a very strong message that the army is still valued within Soviet society, that they're still a capable force, and that they're still valued by President Gorbachev," said Henry Dodds, editor of Jane's Soviet Intelligence Review, in an interview broadcast by Britain's Sky TV.



Soviet army cadets march past the reviewing stand at Red Square Wednesday during the military parade which marked the 45th anniversary of the Soviet army's victory over Nazi Germany. In addition, five new pieces of military hardware were paraded before the Soviet and Western spectators.

Prime minister says Lithuania almost out of oil

LONDON (AP) — Lithuanian Prime Minister Kazimiera Prunskiene said Wednesday transportation and industry in the breakaway Baltic republic will halt within two weeks because of the Soviet economic blockade.

"By May 25 we will have a crisis. ... Our reserves of crude oil will run out by then," she said. "Because of a lack of black (crude) oil and fuel, light industry, transport and, in general, different branches of our economy will close."

Mrs. Prunskiene, addressing a news conference after talks with Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, said her administration is saving emergency fuel supplies for hospitals and schools, and was self-sufficient in food.

Medicine was coming from Poland, she said.

Speaking through an interpreter, she reiterated that Lithuania will not rescind its March 11 declaration of independence, but again offered to compromise with Moscow by suspending subsequent laws on citizenship and property.

Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev has refused to negotiate with the Baltic republic and retaliated against its declaration of independence with an economic blockade.

She said it appeared doubtful Moscow would use force if the crisis worsened.

"Those who wanted to punish Lithuania have actually been satisfied," she said.

Pope says Mexico's rich take more than their share of wealth

DURANGO, Mexico (AP) — Pope John Paul II, speaking to an audience of Mexico's wealthiest businessmen, assailed the idea that capitalism has beaten socialism and said Wednesday that Mexico is "still very far from the ideal of justice."

He said the poor had suffered the worst consequences of Mexico's economic crisis and accused the small, powerful upper-class of generating even more poverty.

"The events of recent history ... have been interpreted, sometimes in a superficial way ... as the triumph of the liberal capitalist system," John Paul said in a speech in Durango, a provincial capital 450 miles northwest of Mexico City.

"Some interests would like to take the analysis to the extreme of presenting the system they consider the 'winner' as the only way for our world." But he said that conclusion avoids "the necessary critical judgment about the effects that liberal capitalism has produced ... in the so-called Third World countries."

On the fourth day of his trip here, the pope earlier Wednesday visited a state prison and spent 20 minutes greeting and blessing inmates, including murderers and drug traffickers.

Wednesday evening, the pope ordained 100 new priests during a Mass in a local plaza attended by 200,000 people. The novices prostrated themselves as the pope prayed, then knelt before John Paul one by one as he placed his hands on their shoulders to indicate the transmission of the spirit of God.

His message to Latin America's business people also appeared aimed at U.S. officials and intellectuals who have pushed the idea that Western capitalism beat communism with the upheaval in Eastern Europe.

The Polish-born pontiff used the economic situation in this nation of 85 million people as an example of the failings of capitalism.

"The last few years have seen the deterioration of buying power, and phenomena typical of the organization of the economy, such as inflation, have produced painful effects at all levels," he said.

Mexico's economic crisis exploded in 1982 due to overborrowing and plunging prices for crude oil, the country's main export. The average Mexican's buying power was cut in half between 1982 and 1988.

Mexico, "despite the inherent resources that the Creator gave this country, is still very far from the ideal of justice," the pope said before noting the vast contrast between the rich few and the poor majority.

He said foreign creditors were not the only cause of Mexico's economic problems.

The pontiff said that by taking too big a share of the country's resources, the very wealthy accumulated a "wealth that is a generator of poverty" for others.

John Paul asked business leaders in overwhelmingly Roman Catholic Mexico to create more jobs, pay proper salaries and protect the environment.

At the prison, John Paul urged prisoners not to lose hope because "Christ never loses hope in his creatures."

"The worst prison would be a closed and hardened heart."

Salvadoran rebels offer plan that could lead to cease-fire

PERQUIN, El Salvador (NYT) — In what could emerge as a framework for an end to the fighting here, the Salvadoran rebels have offered to end resupply operations and accept international verification of compliance in return for an end to U.S. military aid to the government.

"This would help end the war," Gustavo Anaya, a senior commander in the most powerful guerrilla faction, said in outlining the proposal in a recent interview in this mountaintop town, which is the capital of rebel-controlled territory.

Anaya proposed the trade-off as part of what he described as a cease-fire between the two sides.

He said he was speaking in the name of the entire high command of the Farabundo Marti National Liberation Front, the umbrella organization for the five rebel groups.

President Alfredo Cristiani is out of the country, and a senior aide of his stopped short of welcoming the proposal, the latest in a series of similar offers.

But the aide did not reject it out of hand. He said it should be discussed during negotiations.

Cyclone hits India coast

MADRAS, India (AP) — A cyclone battered the southern India coast Wednesday with wind up to 155 mph, killing at least 11 people.

The center of the storm struck the Indian mainland from the Bay of Bengal at 6:30 p.m., 160 miles north of the city of Madras, United News of India reported.

Strong wind and towering 33-foot waves lashed the low-lying, heavily populated coastline of Andhra Pradesh state, knocking down hundreds of thatched huts, uprooting trees and downing power lines.

Naval boats were battling rough seas in an effort to reach more than 6,000 people in the coastal town of Yedurumudi who were cut off by the storm from the rest of the country, rescue officials said.

Six of the dead were killed when a wall collapsed in the East Godivari district on the peninsula, United News said. Three others were electrocuted when wind knocked down live electrical wires. Another person died in a building collapse, and a 60-year-old laborer died from exposure, the report said.

12 people die in Beirut

BEIRUT, Lebanon (NYT) — Twelve people were killed Wednesday as warring Christian forces fought savage artillery duels, bringing most of Lebanon's Christian enclave under shellfire in a new flare-up of the four-month Christian conflict, hospital officials said.

Nineteen people were wounded in eight hours of bombardment of territory from East Beirut to the mountain peaks in the Christian heartland 18 miles to the northeast, the hospital officials said.

Forty-five people have been killed in the last four days.

The new fighting between Lebanese army troops loyal to the Christian commander, Gen. Michel Aoun, and militiamen led by Samir Geagea came after Aoun declared the 28-mile Mediterranean coast off the Christian enclave a war zone, and warned that ships sailing there would be attacked "irrespective of their type or cargo."

The blockade was declared in retaliation for a siege the militia imposed against a makeshift sea outlet that Aoun's forces had established at Antilias, a northern suburb of East Beirut.

Lebanese Forces naval craft had twice intercepted ships bound for Antilias and forced them to return to the Mediterranean island of Cyprus.

Accord to be signed

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Mexico and the United States plan to sign an agreement this year for joint petrochemical development projects in the Gulf of Mexico area, the newspaper El Financiero reported Wednesday.

The Gulf Rim agreement would link Texas technology with Mexican petroleum resources, the newspaper quoted Fernando Sanchez Ugarte, deputy director on foreign investment at the Department of Commerce, as saying.

Ugarte said that Mexico hopes to attract U.S. investments to increase petrochemical production for export.

U.S. and Mexican authorities are studying the agreement, he said.

Mexico recently reclassified dozens of petrochemical products to permit foreign investment in areas formerly reserved to the state petroleum monopoly, Petroleos Mexicanos S.A.

NATO envoy resigns

LUXEMBOURG (AP) — Luxembourg's envoy to NATO has quit after he committed a minor security infraction, Foreign Minister Jacques Poos said Wednesday.

He told Parliament that Guy de Muyser, 64, resigned on April 25 after the government learned he "had breached security rules" at the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

Indicating the infraction was minor, Poos said de Muyser will remain envoy to Belgium. Luxembourg traditionally combines the two Brussels ambassadorships.

Sources said the security breach stemmed from trips de Muyser made to the Soviet Union where he gave out NATO documents whose contents had already been publicly reported.

On April 25, the government, citing "preventive reasons," withdrew de Muyser's security clearance denying him access to secret NATO papers and effectively forcing his resignation that same day.

De Muyser became NATO ambassador in 1986. He was envoy to the Soviet Union from 1981 to 1983. During the 1970s, he held senior positions at the Palace of Grand Duke Jean, Luxembourg's monarch.

South Korean protesters demand ouster of president

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Tens of thousands of students, dissidents and radicals battled riot police in more than a dozen cities Wednesday to demand the ouster of President Roh Tae-woo. Police arrested more than 900 people.

In downtown Seoul, students hurled rocks and firebombs in the most violent anti-government protests in the capital since 1987. Dozens of police and protesters suffered injuries.

Protesters set fire to a U.S. diplomatic building, firebombed a police bus, truck and jeep, occupied the front of one of the capital's luxury hotels and took control of a fashionable downtown shopping area for more than three hours.

Two U.S. guards were slightly injured by rock-throwing demonstrators, said a State Department spokesman Richard Boucher.

Violence erupted as the newly created Democratic Liberal Party held its inaugural convention. Radicals and dissidents claim the party, a merger of three political groups, will lead to dictatorship.

Roh's party is declining in popularity as inflation rises.

"Yankee go home!" screamed thousands of students hurling firebombs and rocks. "Down with Roh Tae-woo!"

At the height of the fighting, some 15,000 students rampaged through an area two or three miles wide from the Seoul railway station to Dondaemun market, the country's largest wholesale market.

Protesters ripped up sidewalks and metal grating to make missiles. Street signs were taken apart to use as weapons against police armed with tear-gas masks, truncheons and shields.

Clouds of choking tear gas billowed over the center of this capital city of 10 million people, sending office workers and shopkeepers racing for cover at the evening rush hour.

Thousands of riot police in the city center appeared to be taken by surprise as throngs of 300 to 2,000 radical students dashed along sidewalks to occupy main downtown shopping streets.

Screaming protesters overpowered at least two groups of 200 to 300 riot police and seized their helmets, clubs and shields. Students forced dozens of police to kneel with their hands behind their backs and shouted insults, kicking and beating them with fists and clubs.

"Disband the DLP!" students yelled repeatedly.

After nightfall, about 3,000 students occupied a block around the U.S. Information Service center for two hours before being driven back by volleys of tear gas fired from black armored police vans.

Students broke at least seven windows at the four-story center and threw firebombs into a first-floor window, touching off a fire that raged out of control for more than an hour.

Firefighters and U.S. Army fire trucks from the nearby American base extinguished the blaze after police regained control of the street.

The front gate of the center was shuttered and it was unknown whether there were people inside the building, which includes a library and agriculture and trade offices.

Boucher said the two injured U.S. guards were outside the building. He said no U.S. personnel were known to be in the building during the fighting.

The radicals, who want unification with Communist North Korea, demand the withdrawal of 43,000 U.S. troops based in South Korea.

In front of the luxury Hotel Lotte across the street from the American building, a torched police bus and a jeep burned several hours. The hotel was shuttered, its driveway littered with broken bottles, glass and rocks.

The protests were the most violent in the capital since 1987, when nationwide demonstrations by hundreds of thousands of citizens forced former dictatorial President Chun Doo-hwan to carry out major democratic reforms. Roh was elected president in December 1987 and succeeded Chun in February 1988.

The violent clashes spread to 16 other cities and involved an estimated 50,000 protesters nationwide, police and news reports said.

Forest fires destroy 75 home in Michigan

GRAYLING, Mich. (AP) — Firefighters aided by cool, damp weather gained the upper hand Wednesday over two forest fires that blackened more than 12 square miles of dry woods and grasslands and destroyed 75 homes.

Up to 300 people were evacuated from their homes, most of them along the Au Sable River, after the fires broke out Tuesday in a sparsely populated section of the northern Lower Peninsula, authorities said.

The only known casualty was a firefighter treated for smoke inhalation, said Scott Heather, assistant regional forest manager with the state Department of Natural Resources.

The larger fire began five miles east of Grayling. Fanned by 20-mph gusts, it burned an 8-by-1½-mile swath of woods and grassland and destroyed 66 houses and more than 30 other structures such as shacks and garages, Heather said.

"We feel at this point we've got the fire 75 percent controlled," he said. "The weather conditions are with us; it's cool and damp. We don't anticipate any further problem."

Flames persisted in a mainly marshy area, where it was difficult to bring in firefighting equipment, Heather said.

The second fire broke out 10 miles to the south, in southern Crawford and northern Roscommon counties.

It consumed 450 acres and nine homes and five other structures before being brought under control early Wednesday with help from a quarter-inch of rain that fell overnight, Heather said.

Light rain continued Wednesday as four National Guard helicopters dumped 185-gallon buckets of water on flames.

About 30 evacuees spent Tuesday night at nearby Camp Grayling, a Michigan National Guard base. About 100 turned up at a Red Cross center Wednesday to obtain warm clothing and instructions for seeking financial help.

"This one little old lady in particular struck me," said Crawford County Sheriff's Deputy Heide Miller, who was meeting evacuees at the door. "She had apparently got word her house was gone. She was in shock."

The cause of the fires remained under investigation, Heather said. Other Department of Natural Resources officials said they suspected a trash fire had gotten out of hand.

Most of the northern Lower Peninsula went 13 days without any rain and longer than that without a heavy downpour, said meteorologist Chuck Defever of the National Weather Service's Ann Arbor office. In addition, snow melted early this year, allowing undergrowth to become very dry.

Arkansas expects disaster declaration

Officials expect immediate turnaround in White House once estimates ready

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — A federal disaster declaration for Arkansas, where more than 500 homes were under water on Wednesday, could be issued by the White House later this week, federal and state officials said Wednesday.

"I'd say Monday we could start assisting people if we get that declaration signed" before the weekend, said Joe Brady, operations supervisor for the state Office of Emergency Services.

With the Arkansas River behind them, rolling by at 440,000 cubic feet per second, federal and state officials held a news conference at Little Rock's Riverfront Park on Wednesday to discuss the status of flooding in Arkansas.

Meanwhile, at Pine Bluff the river was expected to crest Wednesday afternoon at 48 feet, higher than the river has been since it reached 52.1 feet in 1943, an Army Engineers spokesman said. About 300 homes in Jefferson County were flooded and some 16,000 sandbags had been delivered in Jefferson County, sheriff's office and OES officials said.

Brady said some initial reports appear to have overestimated damages. Benton County initially estimated damage to roads and bridges at $3 million, he said. That figure has been revised to $2 million, he said.

No firm estimates on damage are available, officials said. Brady said he would estimate damage to roads and bridges at about $10 million, but the figure is expected to escalate.

"There's no way to get precise counts" until the water recedes, he said.

Bradley Harris, regional director for the Federal Emergency Management Agency, said he expects state OES officials, assisted by FEMA personnel, to complete preliminary damage surveys by Thursday or Friday. His office would within hours forward the information to the White House, he said.

Rep. Tommy Robinson, R-Ark., who is seeking the GOP nomination for governor, said later Wednesday he had talked with a White House aide and was assured that paperwork would be expedited on the disaster declaration. Robinson said he expects "an immediate turnaround on it which will trigger all the monies."

Harris said his office has 100 telephone lines ready to put into operation for calls from those seeking disaster aid. The number of phone lines can be doubled if needed, he said.

Army Engineers spokesman Ron Helton said Wednesday that officials continue to watch weather forecasts.

"Our biggest concern now is no more rain," he said. "Our lakes are full and they can't handle any more water, so it will have to come down river."

Label developed for explicit lyrics

WASHINGTON (AP) — The recording industry on Wednesday unveiled a uniform warning label for albums with explicit lyrics and expressed hope that an improved voluntary system will halt campaigns in some states for mandatory labeling.

The black-and-white stickers — reading "PARENTAL ADVISORY — EXPLICIT LYRICS" — will appear on the lower right-hand corner of the front of albums that might be objectionable because of lyrics dealing with sex, violence, suicide, drug abuse, bigotry or satanic worship.

The decision of whether to affix the labels will be left up to the record companies and their individual artists, said Jay Berman, president of the Recording Industry Association of America, whose members produce more than 90 percent of the records sold in the United States.

Berman said the warning labels will begin appearing on the outer packaging, under the cellophane wrap, of potentially offensive records, cassettes and compact discs reaching retail music stores in July.

The label size will range from 1½ inches by 1 inch for albums and CD long boxes to 1 inch by a half-inch for cassettes and CD cases.

"We believe the uniform logo will enhance the existing voluntary system and better respond to the legitimate concerns of parents," Berman told a news conference Wednesday. "Now that we have agreed on this new logo, it will be up to parents to use it as they see fit."

Youngsters aged 10 through 19 accounted for nearly one-third of the $6.5 billion in total sales of recordings in 1988, according to industry figures.

Under a 1985 agreement between the record industry and the Parents' Music Resource Center and the National PTA, which have led the fight against explicit lyrics, individual record companies were free to devise their own warning stickers or print lyrics on albums.

But erratic compliance and the lack of a standard label led to parental complaints, and bills were introduced in several states to require warning labels on albums containing explicit lyrics. The complaints have generally been about rap music and heavy metal records.

By Berman's count, 16 of the 21 state legislatures considering such bills have backed down since the industry announced plans in late March for a standard voluntary warning label.

Berman's trade association is still fighting mandatory labeling proposals in Missouri, Pennsylvania, Delaware, New York and Louisiana.

Conceding "this will not satisfy some people," Berman said most Americans favor a voluntary system of warning labels.

A large advisory logo developed by the recording industry is displayed in Washington Wednesday by Jay Berman, president of the Recording Industry Association of America. The labels will identify material that contains lyrics considered to be offensive.

Durenberger case expanded by committee

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Ethics Committee significantly expanded its case against Sen. Dave Durenberger on Wednesday, finding "substantial credible evidence" of financial wrongdoing, misrepresentations to the Senate and improper administration of his blind trust.

The committee said it had found "substantial cause" to conclude that the Minnesota Republican had "misused United States Senate funds through a pattern of improper conduct which has brought discredit upon the United States Senate."

The latest charges, covering August 1983 to November 1989, all are related to transactions involving a Minneapolis condominium that Durenberger partly owned — and for which he received Senate reimbursements.

The allegations will be included in trial-like hearings the committee has scheduled to begin June 12.

Indomitable spirit alive in Midland

A caller from out of state, obviously having heard rumors about the impact of the oil price slump on the Texas — and particularly, the Midland — economy, curiously asked the other day: "How's it going down there? Are you'll getting by OK?"

In all honesty, we had to chuckle a little to ourselves. Yes, Midland is still "getting by OK." That despite the fact that this is the longest-lasting downturn in the oil economy here in the city's history, according to former editor Bill Collyns.

Fact is an out of city visitor to Midland last weekend might have gone away with the somewhat-confused opinion that things in this oilfield capital have never been better.

That's because Saturday and Sunday were chock-full of entertaining activities designed to generate a good time. Celebration of the Arts, the Cinco de Mayo parade celebrating the Mexican army's victory over an invading French force at Puebla, Mexico, on the fifth of May, 1862, the Permian Basin Petroleum Association's "Blowout" held in conjuction with Energy Appreciation Week, the city, school, hospital district and college district elections and much more combined to give Midland the flavor of a bustling, vibrant city. It was a good feeling!

While the busy pace may not be the norm for a weekend in the Tall City, Midland has not suffered the agonies of a "ghost town" simply because the image doesn't fit the city's demeanor. The people of Midland are survivors partly because of their irrepressible spirit. Instead of looking for a way to succumb to outside forces we look for ways to use those forces to our advantage.

To tell the rest of the world that everything has been just peachy in Midland since the oil price collapse in 1982 would be foolish indeed. Midland has suffered some tough times during the past eight years and from all indications will suffer some more before the oil-based economy rebounds.

But Midlanders aren't wallowing in their despair. They're looking for ways to make the situation better and to enjoy life in the process. Last weekend they did that with gusto and it was a fine salute to the spirit that has kept Midland alive for a century.

JACK ANDERSON

Papandreou faces new allegations

WASHINGTON — Former Greek Prime Minister Andreas Papandreou, awaiting trial for a potpourri of offenses in Greece, now faces allegations with a decidedly American twist.

Anderson

Papandreou's replacement, Constantine Mitsotakis, wants a full investigation of the deal Papandreou made in 1987 to buy 40 F-16 fighter jets from General Dynamics.

Mitsotakis inherited the $900 million purchase when he took office in April, and he doesn't like the terms of the deal. If General Dynamics does not let Greece renegotiate the terms, Mitsotakis has vowed to seek a U.S. congressional investigation into "what extent the Foreign Corrupt Practices Act was violated and to what extent commissions were paid or other benefits."

The Foreign Corrupt Practices Act was written to keep American companies from bribing foreign government officials to secure contracts.

We asked General Dynamics for a reaction to Mitsotakis' hint that the purchase contract may have broken the law. The spokesman told us, "We have been in total compliance with the Foreign Corrupt Practices Act and every other law of either the U.S. or Greek governments. There were no payoffs."

In 1986 when Papandreou was negotiating the contract, he opted to do it directly with General Dynamics instead of going through the U.S. government. The Defense Department's Foreign Military Sales Office is set up to help foreign governments negotiate the purchase of defense equipment. That agency warned Papandreou that he could cut a better deal if he worked through the Pentagon.

General Dynamics claims it was Papandreou who insisted on direct negotiations.

Our associate Jim Lynch has seen internal Greek government documents showing that Papandreou was warned by his military advisers as early as 1986 that the terms of the F-16 contract were not favorable.

In one memo to Papandreou, a Greek air force general warned that General Dynamics was only offering 10 percent of the "offset benefits" that it originally agreed to. Offset benefits are the enticements a company throws in to sweeten the deal. They may include maintenance contracts on the equipment or even unrelated items, like promising to promote tourism in the country that buys the merchandise.

We have seen the General Dynamics letter of intent to provide the jets. That letter, from 1985, mentions offset benefits equal to the entire sales price. But a Greek document indicates that original benefit package was later dropped. The spokesman at General Dynamics said he could not give the current percentage of the contract price that was backed by offset benefits.

Papandreou threw a document-shredding party before he left office, but enough of a paper trail of the F-16 deal remains to be examined in great detail in Greece and the United States.

The House Energy and commerce Subcommittee on Oversight and Investigations has already begun looking into the issue. The House and Senate Armed Services committees have also been briefed on the jet sale in the past month.

The F-16 purchase may become one of the central issues at the Papandreou trial. Despite the fact that Papandreou is already out of office, that trial is shaping up as the equivalent of an impeachment hearing for his leadership of the Pan-Hellenic Socialist Party.

MINI-EDITORIAL — Nations, as well as individuals, simply cannot go on indefinitely spending more than they make. That remorseless process is already debilitating the U.S. economy. In the dynamics of debt, there is a point of no return — a point at which one pays so much in interest on past debts that there is no money to pay for present expenses. The U.S. government is very close to that point. Two thirds of last year's deficit can be attributed to interest on previous debt. You wouldn't run your household that way. Why should your government be allowed to run your country that way?

LETTERS

Media should lead campaign on debt

It is obvious that the members of Congress spend more of their time trying to get re-elected than concerning the nation's greatest problem — the federal debt. And Congress cannot be expected to act in a responsible manner unless compelled to do so.

In a recent letter to the Lubbock Avalanche-Journal, J.W. Reid of that city asked, "Why wouldn't it be in order to mount some kind of nationwide campaign from the people demanding that Congress act?" His idea is a good one. He goes on to suggest that the editorial staff of the newspaper compose a petition that could be circulated nationwide by the news media.

The media seems ready-made to promote the project. The petition should tell the members of Congress that no significant action on their part means no re-election. Faced with that possibility, I predict one would see a meaningful tackling of the problem in short order.

Somebody has to get the petition started. Why not the Midland Reporter-Telegram?

Cheerleaders shouldn't perform 'dirty dancing'

On April 26th, I attended the Midland High Cheerleader tryouts. I was amazed at what I saw!

When someone says "cheerleader," it seems that there should be some cheers. The majority of what I saw was not cheers at all, but hip-shaking, vulgar dancing.

I am not going to mention names because they are unimportant and I don't want to make it sound as though I am against dancing. I like dancing. However, what I am trying to say is that I believe a cheerleader should be good at "cheers" and not simply arousing the male spectators.

Perhaps the point has been missed somewhere along the line.

Midland's lacking in 'teen-age recreation'

For more than 10 years Midland has lacked in the knowledge of "teenage recreation technology." Midland is geared for the over-21 age group unless you hang out at the mall every weekend! And, yes, I remember doing that!

It's time to build skateboard parks in Midland so there will be a safe place to skate (and yes, drug free) and someplace where skaters won't thrash park benches or mess up those $50 (and more) skateboards.

So Midland, let's work together — all they need are ramps and concrete "swimming pools." I may even try it next!

Skateboarding is not a crime.

GEORGE WILL

John Silber not kinder, gentler candidate

BOSTON — Most politicians aspire to be petunias, pleasant commonplace flowers in the public garden. Then there is John Silber, the candidate as thistle.

If you are looking for kinder and gentler, look elsewhere. Silber, 63, a former professor of philosophy, is on leave from the presidency of Boston University where he frequently fought with the faculty. He is seeking the Democratic gubernatorial nomination in Massachusetts. "I don't speak plastic," he says. Indeed.

Will

On his BU salary, the highest among university presidents: "I'm not embarrassed to get one-quarter of what a mindless anchorman on TV gets. I'm not average." Any pledge not to raise taxes "borders on insanity." Jesse Jackson (Silber can't endure "the mindless, rhyming pieces of nonsense on which he has built a career") might be Cabinet material because every President's Cabinet "needs someone to write bumper stickers."

His tongue has always been tart. When the young Bill Bennett, now drug czar, was Silber's student, Silber compared Bennett's doctoral dissertation to Texas chili: "Mostly beans and mush with the occasional meat."

A lifelong educator who has taught at Yale and Texas, his words on schools are especially unminced. Many schools are "institutionalized programs of child neglect." The curriculum of the typical school of education ("certifying the ineducable to be educators") amounts to "a two- or three-year negative intelligence test." A voucher system would mean "the end of public education" unless teachers' unions allowed outside evaluations of teachers and ensured that they are "worthy mentors and available to pupils as needed."

He favors a state examination for all high-school seniors. A school in which fewer than 80 percent pass would be on probation. Two consecutive such years and the school would be decertified and denied public funds. To stop teachers from giving "social promotions," Silber favors similar state examinations for fourth and eighth graders. "The high-school diploma in Massachusetts is too often a fradulent document."

In a time of cloying national triumphalism, Silber's is the voice of a scold. He believes America has become self-indulgent, enervated by wealth and demoralized by bad philosophy.

Self-indulgent? Educational standards "are derisory by standards that were operative in ordinary little country schools a hundred years ago." Enervated? The affluence that capitalism produces is dissolving the virtues — industriousness, deferral of gratification — that capitalism requires. Bad philosophy? The transformation of whims into "needs," then into "rights," proceeds on the assumption that "sincerity" creates "values" and a no-fault life.

Although Silber, like a lot of Democrats, voted for Reagan and Bush, he calls himself "a traditional liberal Democrat." He led a Texas campaign against capital punishment, helped found the Head Start program, and says that without preschool programs for children who lack adequate adult care at home, "we can only talk emptily about equality of opportunity."

He has been a Democrat 54 years, since 1936, when his father received a home-improvement loan from an FDR program. But his father still praised Hoover and lambasted FDR, so child Silber said, "Why is it that everything good that has happened to our family has happened since Roosevelt became president?" The thistle was prickly early.

If Democrats can find the nerve to nominate him, he should win in a state where only 14 percent of voters are Republicans and Republican candidates must attract disaffected Democrats who think liberalism has become woolly headed. However, his party may be unnerved by the accusation that he is "insensitive."

He says charges of "insensitivity" are used to make many sensitive subjects, such as sex and race, undiscussable. The charges are often idiotic.

Is Silber impolitic? Perhaps. If so, so much the worse for Massachusetts' polity. But if this, the only state that George McGovern carried in 1972, can elect the nation's most interesting candidate in 1990, the Democratic Party may find many Democrats coming home to it.

George Will's column is distributed by Washington Post Writers Group.

It was tight contest for Wellesley speaker

This has been a very exciting year for the Miss Wellesley Graduation Speaker's Competition. The graduation ceremony itself will be held June 1. As most of you know, the winner was Barbara Bush, who scored a 9 in the cap-and-gown category and a 10 in the bathing suit contest.

Buchwald

Runner-up was Hilda Marton of Los Angeles, Calif., who played the violin and harmonica at the finals. If anything should go wrong with Mrs. Bush's plans, Hilda will fill in as speaker.

"Congratulations," I told Hilda. "It's quite an honor to be the runner-up in the Miss Wellesley speaker's contest."

Hilda said, "I've dreamed about it all my life. I have a great message to impart to the young women of America, and I hope that Mrs. Bush gets delayed by Mrs. Gorbachev so that I can make the speech."

"What are you going to tell them?"

"I intend to say that there is a lot more happening in people's kitchens than there is on the floor of Bloomingdale's."

"There has been criticism that Mrs. Bush only got where she is because of her husband. Do you believe that this is fair?"

"It's the opposite. President Bush is only where he is today because of Mrs. Bush. Women like the first lady perform amazing tasks when nobody realizes that they are doing anything. My message to the Wellesley graduates is: To be a success, do your own thing and your husband's thing as well."

"Won't their husbands be mad?" I asked Hilda.

"Not really. Manipulating men has always been a Wellesley strong suit."

"The students will be happy to know that."

"There are some graduates who don't want to listen to a speaker unless she has made her mark as chairwoman of The Washington Post. Whether they like it or not, most of the Wellesley graduates will have babies. It's important that they hear this from someone like me who has driven a station wagon in a car pool than from a person who invests money for a teacher's pension fund. I am going to make the point that we all have choices, but you can't go skinny dipping with a two-window office on the 40th floor of a Wall Street building."

"You really gave this graduation speech a lot of thought."

"That's my job as a runner-up speaker. Mrs. Bush and I come from a generation of women who put our children and husbands before ourselves. The present generation, which happens to be made up of our children, thinks that we're crazy. Yet our kids wouldn't be able to do one darn thing if we hadn't ironed their skirts in the basement."

"I'll bet the Wellesley girls would hate to hear that. Do you think Mrs. Bush will say it?"

"No, she's too polite. She'll probably tell them that they have a right to think anything they want to, which I feel is a mistake."

"I don't imagine it will go over very well if you keep telling them to be good wives."

"I'm not asking for a standing ovation."

"Have you spoken to Mrs. Bush about the contents of your speech in case she doesn't make it?"

"I tried once but she was playing in the garden with the grandchildren."

"No wonder Wellesley students are mad at her."

Child's vote kills measure

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — The 12-year-old son of a state representative unintentionally cast a vote that killed a House bill.

Brian Langton, son of Rep. Mike Langton, was sitting at his father's desk last week while the Jacksonville Democrat left the chamber to make a phone call.

A vote came up on a bill that would create a statewide register to document the number of children waiting for assistance from the Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services.

During his weeklong stint as a House page, Brian had seen his father's green "yes" button light up many times. He decided to see what the red "no" button looked like.

He didn't expect to kill an important piece of legislation.

"Once he did it, he suddenly had all these legislators hulking over him saying, 'Did your dad tell you to do that?'" Langton said. "When I came back, the poor kid was frightened to death."

House members were scheduled to reconsider the bill Tuesday, but the vote was postponed.

Langton said he would have voted for the bill had he been there. But Brian's "no" tied the vote at 53-53, effectively killing the proposal.

Langton said he gave his son "a stern talking to," but that Brian was embarrassed and felt bad enough without needing more punishment.

Error strays telescope

WASHINGTON (AP) — A simple math mistake — somebody added when he should have subtracted, or vice versa — caused the Hubble Space Telescope to miss its target stars and point to the wrong spot in the heavens, embarrassed scientists said Wednesday.

The telescope missed its target by one half of a degree — or about the width of a full moon as seen from Earth.

Because of the math error and other problems, scientists won't be able to take the first star pictures with the telescope until next week, NASA said. When the Hubble was launched on April 25, they expected the first picture within a week.

"When we were trying to point the telescope to the center of a pretty rich star field with a high probability of acquisition we were really off to one side of that," said Jean Olivier, NASA's deputy manager of the Hubble project.

They corrected in the wrong direction and "instead of subtracting it they added it or vice versa," Olivier said.

"Instead of going from 18 arc minutes back to zero we went from 18 to 36 or close to 37," he said. "That was the fundamental problem."

Judge divides resources

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — A judge who once granted Chippewa Indians 100 percent of the fish caught in northern Wisconsin ruled Wednesday that the region's "harvestable natural resources" should be divided 50-50 between Indians and non-Indians.

U.S. District Judge Barbara Crabb's decision, which came in a case that set parameters for deer hunting, has sweeping implications that limit the tribe's right to half the available fish and timber in northern Wisconsin, lawyers said.

Under treaties that ceded the northern third of the state to the United States in the 19th century, Wisconsin's six Chippewa bands retain the right to spearfish, hunt and cut timber off-reservation on public lands in the region.

State lawyers said the new ruling essentially alters the previous decision.

Poisoning guide with murder suspect's property

BARTOW, Fla. (AP) — Investigators seized a homemade poisoning guide, boxloads of chemicals and bondage gear from a man charged with the 1988 poisonings of his neighbors, according to court records unsealed Wednesday.

The property of George James Trepal, 41, who was arrested and charged last month with first-degree murder, attempted murder and product tampering, was listed in an item-by-item inventory.

"If you believe everything you've heard so far, sure it looks bad. But when our side is finally heard you'll see the whole picture," said defense attorney Jonathan Stidham, who's called his client "a bit of a different person."

Prosecutors say Trepal, a computer programmer and Mensa member, used poison-spiked bottles of Coca-Cola to kill neighbor Peggy Carr of Alturas and poison her husband and children, leaving two of them partially paralyzed.

In the six years before the poisonings, Trepal complained about the Carr's dogs chasing his cats, loud radios the Carr children played and the all-terrain vehicles they rode, police said.

And in the months prior to the October 1988 poisonings, the Carrs were mailed a typed warning: "You and all your so-called family have two weeks to move out of Florida forever or else you all die. This is no joke."

Mrs. Carr lapsed into a coma and died in March 1989. An FBI analysis of the Coca-Cola showed it was laced with highly toxic thallium nitrate.

When questioned in 1988, Trepal said his only knowledge of thallium came from TV news, according to authorities. But Trepal was convicted in 1975 and served three years in prison for running a drug lab in North Carolina that produced $7 million in illegal methamphetamines.

Repair to delay launch of Columbia

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — A puzzling breakdown in Columbia's cooling system has forced NASA to delay next week's scheduled shuttle launch by an estimated two to three weeks, the space agency said Wednesday.

Columbia had been scheduled to lift off May 16 or May 17 with seven astronauts and the $100 million Astro observatory, capable of probing ultraviolet and X-ray radiation. But engineers this week spotted a problem with a valve that controls the flow of coolant in the shuttle.

"We are obviously disappointed that we are not ready to fly," said William Lenoir, head of NASA's space flight program. "However, this particular system is absolutely critical to the safety of the crew and overall mission success, so we have decided to change the component."

NASA had hoped to confirm a launch date at the end of the two-day Flight Readiness Review meeting on Wednesday afternoon, but that did not occur. Mission managers agreed an apparently faulty valve would have to be replaced and that the work could be done at the launch pad.

"They don't understand the problem enough to feel comfortable flying with it, so they've got to go in and fix it," said Bascom Murrah, a NASA official in charge of prelaunch operations for Columbia.

"We feel we can do that at the pad, but how long that will take I really would only be guessing."

Launch teams expect to have a better idea by early next week as to how long the job will take, NASA said in a statement. The agency has never replaced a cooling valve at the launch pad.

Returning Columbia to its hangar for the valve to be replaced would have resulted in a considerably longer delay.

NASA said mission managers "decided that completing the replacement and checkout on the pad is as safe and effective" as performing the work in the shuttle's hangar.

Engineers noticed the problem Sunday when there was an unexplained change in the flow of coolant.

The valve is in one of Columbia's two Freon cooling loops beneath the payload bay liners.

Former Texas Supreme Court Justice William Kilgarlin on Wednesday was named to write a school finance reform plan in case Gov. Clements and the Legislature fail in a third attempt to enact one.

Court-imposed reform of schools predicted

■ If the House measure is vetoed as expected, three court-approved 'masters' will take the school reform matters in their own hands.

By Rick Brown
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Texas House members Wednesday overwhelmingly endorsed a school finance framework that Gov. Bill Clements already has promised to veto, prompting a session of finger pointing among top state lawmakers.

"Members of the Texas House today have moved us one step closer to a court-imposed master of public education," said Clements in a prepared statement after the 100-41 vote.

But Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby said the blame lies with Clements, who by his negative stance "has in effect announced" that the school finance problem "will be in the hands of a master."

Former Texas Supreme Court Justice Bill Kilgarlin will fill the master's position after his appointment by Travis County District Judge Scott McCown on Wednesday.

Kilgarlin will act as an officer of the court to develop a school finance system that McCown said he will impose should the Legislature and Clements fail to come to an agreement.

The Travis County judge also announced that Billy Walker, a former deputy superintendent of Ector County schools and Jose Cardenas, former superintendent of Edgewood schools,

Strong GOP is in Texas' tea leaves

By Brian Pearson

Despite gaffes by gubernatorial candidate Clayton Williams and a history of Democratic dominance, the Republicans are poised to wield the bigger political sword in Texas, said Fred Meyer, the state's Republican Party chairman.

Meyer, who made the comment at a news conference Wednesday before speaking at a Midland County Republican Women's Club luncheon, said Texas politics are ripe for Republican picking.

"This is the time in the 20th century that the Republicans have a chance to become to majority party," said Meyer, a Dallas businessman who has served as the party chairman for two years. "It's unheard of in this century as far as Republicans are concerned. We sure want to take advantage of it."

Meyer noted that Williams and U.S. Sen. Phil Gramm are two prominent politicians who are spearheading the Republican charge. Both are running for office in November's election.

Although Williams recently made two gaffes — one comparing rain to rape and the other revealing his past experiences with prostitutes — Meyer predicted an overwhelming victory over Democratic hopeful Ann Richards.

"I think Clayton Williams is going to run an extraordinary governor's campaign," he said. "He's a very fast learner."

Meyer, 62, president and chairman of the board of Aladdin Industries Inc., also defended Gov. Bill Clements' stance against raising taxes to finance school funding.

"Money is not the the exclusive answer," he said. "We recognize that an improved education process is essential for our future."

Ernest Angelo Jr., former Midland mayor and a National Republican Committee member, said Meyer is leading the Republican Party in the right direction in Texas.

"We're now in a position to really be the majority party in Texas," said Angelo, also a petroleum engineer here. "The people like Fred Meyer are the reason why we're here. The guy's got energy you wouldn't believe."

Meyer is up for re-election this summer as the state's Republican Party chairman. He said one of his primary goals will be strengthening his party.

Glenn Smith, a consulant with Ann Richards' campaign office in Austin, did not give too much credit to Meyer's statements.

"I have no comment on what Fred Meyers said or thinks," Smith said.

City panel chooses candidate for post

By Brian Pearson
Staff Writer

A city of Lubbock administrator was chosen from a five-candidate field Wednesday to fill Midland's vacant assistant city manager post, Deputy City Manager Mike McGregor announced.

A panel of city administrators unanimously recommended hiring Susan K. Thorpe, Lubbock's budget and research director, over three in-house employees and an administrator from another city, McGregor said.

Ms. Thorpe, 31, will start here June 25 at an annual $55,000 salary, McGregor said.

"She has general and broad budget experience," he said. "Her references really recommended her highly."

Ms. Thorpe's references included Ector County Judge Jan Fisher and Waco City Manager John D. Harrison, a former city of Odessa administrator.

McGregor, Assistant City Attorney Keith Stretcher and the city managers of Andrews and Amarillo comprised a panel which interviewed the five applicants Friday.

"All the candidates had the same education requirements," McGregor said. "What put her (Ms. Thorpe) ahead of the in-house candidates was her experience with

School board OKs new summer school

■ Summertime remedial classes are geared to third-grade-level students who do poorly on TEAMS test.

By David Morris
Staff Writer

School officials are hopeful that a summer school program unanimously approved by trustees Wednesday will help lower dropout rates by improving reading skills among some district third-graders.

The six-week course will offer intense remediation in both reading and writing for third-graders who failed the reading section of this year's Texas Educational Assessment of minimum skills, officials said.

"Pupils tend to want to read what they have written, so this way will help them to become better readers," said Lucinda Windsor, Midland Independent School District language arts coordinator. "What (program

GISD bests state on TEAMS

GREENWOOD — Greenwood Independent School District mastery levels on the Texas Educational Assessment of Minimum Skills exceeded statewide performance on all sections of the test at all grade levels, reports show.

GISD Superintendent Hal Porter said teamwork among parents, teachers, counselors and administrators is the reason for the district's success.

"The success at one grade level reflects teaching at earlier grade levels," Porter said in a statement. "Each year the teachers lay solid foundations for the next year's instructional goals. The classroom teachers should be commended for the success their students have achieved on TEAMS."

GISD results from the February TEAMS administration show that 100 percent of fifth-graders mastered the math section, compared with 90 percent statewide. 100 percent of seventh-graders showed mastery on the math, compared with 91 percent statewide.

Meanwhile, 93 percent of ninth-graders and 99 percent of third-graders mastered the math, compared with respective statewide mastery of 86 percent and 91 percent.

In reading, 97 percent of GISD third-graders showed mastery, compared with 85 percent statewide. In writing, 93 percent of third-graders mastered the test compared with only 77 percent statewide. At the ninth-grade level, 82 percent showed mastery in writing compared with 70 percent statewide.

Women of O'Donnell use years to their advantage

O'DONNELL — Getting up there in years has its privileges — including the option not to take life so seriously that the enjoyment of living fades too fast.

Todd

"I don't do anything I don't want to," casually brags Lonnie Wood, an 80-year-old farmer's widow who seems well settled in her age. "I used to be a go-getter when we farmed."

Today, she's older and has slowed down.

"You can do as you please and say anything you want to," Mrs. Wood reckons.

"Really?" replies an incredulous Bernice Hodnett, who joined Mrs. Wood at a table of senior women for Thursday's weekly pot-luck dinner at the O'Donnell Senior Citizens Center.

"You can get in trouble at any age," says Mrs. Hodnett who, at 75, is hardly a widow. "You get at an age you don't know what you are doing."

Mrs. Wood wasn't fazed.

"You're really just as old as you feel," she insists and figures she feels about 30.

An old upright piano, pat. ntly awaiting talented fingers and a musical mind to tap its potential, rests in one corner of the center — an old grocery store in this farming community. In another corner is a framed patchwork quilt — a comfortable reminder of times past and, mostly, of community.

A table of dominoes, primed to entertain those who yak about this and that as they shuffle and play dominoes, 42 or 84, is nearby like an old friend.

Then, there is the potluck, full of country cooking to make bellies settle down and comradeship to build up.

One by one, the "older" women — not one was "old" — fill their plates with beans, potatoes, corn, okra, rolls, ham and turkey. They comment on the pecan pie.

The anticipation and the ingestion of hearty foods boost dialogue and spunk.

"She (Lois Haire) runs this place, and I run her," Mrs. Wood, cutting up more and more, ventures.

While she eats, Mrs. Haire, the center's director, happens to mention that her cholesterol level is alarmingly high even at her 80 years.

She doesn't seem startled.

"You can get that way and don't know it."

Her level got up to 230, and she prefers that it register somewhere in the 100s. "I put myself on a diet as soon as I heard that."

Tressie Senkirik who at 76 is almost as thin as a scrub-board, considers herself lucky not to worry about fat and her cholesterol level.

"I'm still healthy. As long as it don't bother me, I'm not going to fool with it," says Mrs. Senkirik, who is curator of the downtown O'Donnell Museum.

The dialogue continues and changes to a local folk hero: Dan Blocker, the "gentle giant," Hoss Cartwright, of television's Bonanza. The 6-foot 4-inch fellow grew up in O'Donnell, the heart of South Plains cotton and cowboy country.

"He weighed 20 pounds when he was born, didn't he?" Mrs. Haire wonders.

"He weighed 14 pounds," quickly replies the museum curator. "He weighed 300 pounds when he died."

He had a hearty appetite.

After downing the bulk of the potluck fare, the women, all widows except for Mrs. Hodnett, stretch and reach for desert.

"This is the best pecan pie I've ever eaten," says a satiated Mrs. Haire. "I'm not supposed to eat it."

"You can't make them any better," Mrs. Hodnett declares. And then Mrs. Wood just barely mentions: "It was store-bought."

In pleasant fellowship, they finish the country-style and store-bought food, clean off the table, and agree to meet next Thursday noon to tell what more age has revealed.

Jury finds Cullen guilty in Treaty Oak poisoning

AUSTIN — A jury Wednesday found Paul Stedman Cullen guilty of trying to poison the historic Treaty Oak, a centuries-old tree that was severely damaged by the powerful herbicide Velpar.

Cullen, who has been jailed since his arrest in June 1989, stood expressionless as the verdict was read after about three and one-half hours of deliberation.

He refused to comment as he was led from the courtroom by sheriff's deputies.

State District Judge Bob Perkins scheduled the sentencing phase of the trial for Thursday. Because of a previous conviction, Cullen could face a maximum of life in prison.

During the trial, prosecutors said Cullen poisoned the giant live oak as part of an occult ritual.

"He acted intentionally ... he knew exactly what was going to happen. He intended that the tree be damaged or destroyed," Assistant District Attorney LaRu Woody told the seven-woman, five-man jury.

But one of his defense lawyers, Terry Kirk, described the 46-year-old ex-convict as a "loser," who only boasted about poisoning the tree to impress a woman acquaintance, Cindy Blaco.

"He wanted her to think that he was somebody," Kirk said, adding that Ms. Blaco became the prosecution's key witness against Cullen to claim some $11,000 in rewards.

"Greed took hold of her and she came into this courtroom and lied to you," he said. "Don't find Paul guilty. He took credit for it — but he didn't do it."

Paul Cullen Stedman is escorted by a sheriff's deputy Wednesday, before an Austin jury found him guilty of poisoning the historic Treaty Oak with a powerful herbicide.

Legend has it that the giant live oak, estimated to be at least 500 years old, was the site of a treaty signing between Stephen F. Austin and Indians during the 1820s.

Prosecutors contended that Cullen used Velpar to poison the centuries-old live oak tree in an occult ritual, which either was designed to end his affection for his counselor at a methadone clinic or to protect her from harm.

will assist Kilgarlin.

While a Supreme Court justice in 1986, Kilgarlin was admonished by the State Commission on Judicial Conduct after a legal aide took a free trip from attorneys with business before the court.

He said Wednesday that "by definition" he would have to develop a "Robin Hood" plan that would use revenues already existing in the state budget.

"I would hope that the Legislature and the governor would work something out, and any plan I would come up with would never be needed," he said.

In accepting the school finance plan that the House Public Education Committee endorsed, House members rejected on a 75-68 vote a maverick plan that would have diverted millions from large urban school districts to poorer ones.

Rep. Tom Craddick, R-Midland, said he voted for the maverick plan and against the bill the House ultimately endorsed out of concern for ballooning costs over the next five years.

The House Public Education Committee had removed all references to costs from the legislation they sent to the House floor in hopes that Clements would sign the bill without knowing its ultimate price tag.

Craddick compared the move to "just leaving a blank check for the future."

"We've got to vote for something we can pay for," he said.

Clements criticized the legislation the House endorsed as leading to higher property taxes and an income tax. It would require $8 billion to $9 billion in new revenue over the next five years, he said.

However, Clements' chief of staff, Mike Toomey, has acknowledged that the House-endorsed legislation contains 70 percent of the reforms recommended by the Governor's Task Force on Public Education.

In addition, action by the House Public Education Committee this past Friday sliced $1.4 billion from the bill's five-year price tag, lowering it from $5.7 billion to $4.3 billion.

other cities."

Ms. Thorpe will replace Stretcher, who left the assistant city manager's position in mid-April to become assistant city attorney, keeping his $58,320 yearly salary.

Stretcher, who said he wanted to get back into attorney's work, replaced Kirk Swinney, who left his $44,508-a-year post earlier this year to take a job with an Austin law firm.

Ms. Thorpe has worked as Lubbock's budget and research director since 1988. From 1986 to 1988, she held a similar position with Odessa, for which she also served as an administrative assistant from 1983 to 1986.

She was a North Texas State University assistant political science teacher from 1981 to 1982 and also an administrative intern with the city of Denton during those years.

She earned a master's of public administration degree from North Texas State University in 1989 and a bachelor's of arts degree from that school in 1981.

Ms. Thorpe said becoming an administrator in a mid-sized city has been one of her long-time goals.

"I'm looking forward to it," she said of coming to Midland. "City management has been my interest.

"I enjoy this part of the country. I've always felt like Midland was a progressive and positive community."

Ms. Thorpe will oversee projects such as traffic, streets, planning, zoning and other public works plans.

McGregor said a list of about 50 applicants for the job was narrowed to five last week.

In-house candidates were Raymond Kendall, director of communications, Mike Butler, assistant director of engineering and transportation, and Rick Menchaca, public relations and economic development coordinator.

Ms. Thorpe and Thomas L. Adams, a city administrator in Seminole since 1986, were candidates from other cities.

RISK: School is hoping for 'maximum participation' teachers) will do is immerse these kids in a language-rich environment."

Reading ability among third-graders is one of the best indicators of how pupils will fare throughout their academic career, MISD Assistant Superintendent William Denton said.

Some 160 third-graders failed the reading section of the February TEAMS test, administrators at Wednesday's school board meeting estimated.

Maridell Fryar, MISD executive director of instructional services, said she would like to see as many of those pupils as possible participate in the program, which will not be compulsory.

"Giving up a little bit of summertime now may save a great deal of time in the future," she said. "If we allow them to continue...they become increasingly further and further behind. We don't know how many students we can get there."

Trustees George Staley and James Fuller said the district should do all it can to ensure maximum participation.

"We ought to have them somehow, as many of them as possible, in a review course," Staley said. "I think it would be important to have someone who would visit these different (third-graders') homes. I think it's essential to get these kids into a program if we can."

MISD Superintendent Joe Baressi promised to use "all of the tools that we have at our access" to inform parents of the program.

Denton said the program's cost will not be known until the number of participants is determined.

"We're within the budget," he said. "These monies are in the budget."

Frank Marlowe, MISD executive director of elementary operations, said participants' parents probably will be asked to make a $35 deposit, refundable upon a pupil's completion of the program.

Baressi added that parents unable to afford the $35 would be exempt.

Ms. Windsor said the program will last from June 11 to July. 20. Classes will meet four hours per day, five days a week, she said.

STATE

Judicial reform plan in holding pattern

By James Cullen
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — A task force Wednesday continued looking for ways to fix the state's judicial selection plan while it waits for a federal appeals court to decide whether the system is broken.

The task force on judicial selection is supposed to recommend a plan to select judges in line with the Voting Rights Act after a Midland federal court agreed with minority plaintiffs and ruled at-large election of judges in nine urban counties, including Midland and Ector counties, diluted minority votes.

Gov. Bill Clements included judicial reform on the agenda of the past two special sessions after U.S. District Judge Lucius Bunton ordered the countywide districts to be split into subdistricts.

But interest waned after the 5th Circuit U.S. Court of Appeals in March notified the Legislature that the appeals court would not order a change until it rules on the state's appeal, which a three-judge panel heard April 30 in New Orleans.

Steve Smith, an attorney for the Texas Legislative Council, which advises the task force, said the court is expected to issue its ruling this summer, but there is little hope the court will find the Voting Rights Act does not apply to trial court judges, since two of the judges signed an earlier opinion that appellate courts are covered by the act.

But the judges appeared receptive to the argument that the state has a legitimate interest in maintaining a system that allows every resident to vote on every judge that serves in a countywide jurisdiction, Smith said.

The appeals court also could send the case back to the trial court to hear more testimony on the impact of partisan voting, he said.

'For heaven's sake, get off your fannies and get us a bill. The people want us to do something.'

— Rep. Doyle Willis, D-Fort Worth

Rep. Bruce Gibson, D-Godley, said the task force is split over whether to move forward. "Some of them at least want to wait until the initial decision by the 5th Circuit," he said.

But Sen. Frank Tejeda, D-San Antonio, said the group must be prepared to move.

"We need to give more reasonable access and opportunities for minorities to get on the bench," he said. "We need to move froward irregardless of what the 5th Circuit does or does not do."

The task force has tentatively endorsed a plan based on a system used in Illinois that would require judges to run first in partisan subdistricts and later to run for reelection in countywide non-partisan retention elections.

Judith Sanders-Castro of the Mexican American Legal Defense and Educational Fund Wednesday questioned the task force's selection of such a plan after more than two-thirds of those who expressed an opinion at public hearings three months ago favored a straight single-member district plan.

She also noted that the 21-member task force appointed by the governor, the lieutenant governor and the House speaker contains only five minority members, and four of them are legislators.

None of the minorities were appointed by Gov. Clements, she noted.

Williams, Richards agree on saving Osprey

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Both Texas gubernatorial candidates Clayton Williams and Ann Richards have vowed to battle to save the embattled V-22 Osprey tilt-rotor military project.

But Williams, a Republican, said he would have more clout as governor with the Bush administration than Ms. Richards, his Democratic opponent.

"I will always have better access than a person who said the president was born with a silver foot in his mouth," Williams said, referring to Ms. Richards' no-holds-barred oratory at the Democratic National Convention in 1988.

"The fact is that if we don't develop this aircraft, Japan and Germany will," Williams said. "These are high-technology, high-paying jobs that will bolster and diversify the employment base of the state."

A spokesman for Ms. Richards' campaign said that she also would fight for the program and charged that Williams would be no more effective in saving the V-22 project than Republican Gov. Bill Clements has been.

"Clements hasn't shown any ability to get things done on the federal level. Williams would have similar problems," said campaign spokesman Monte Williams in Austin.

Williams, asked why Clements has been unable to save the V-22 project, said the governor has been "bogged down fighting the tax bill" that the Legislature proposed to fund school finance reforms.

Lubbock outreach workers takes AIDS battle to streets

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) — She chats curbside with prostitutes and dug addicts and visits the Lubbock County jail on a weekly basis.

Wendy Dearman-Powell doesn't miss a step as she hands out condoms, discusses sexual abstinence and explains to IV drug users the importance of clean needles.

She also gets on the stage of high school auditoriums and stands before church podiums. In these places, too, she talks about sex, drugs and the tie that so firmly binds these elements in today's world — Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome, AIDS.

Ms. Dearman-Powell is a social worker of the streets. She is one of six staff members and four outreach workers constituting the Lubbock Regional Mental Health and Mental Retardation (MHMR) Center's AIDS education and prevention program.

Seven years ago, her boss, Ray Coulombe, was disease intervention specialist for the City of Lubbock Health Department and tested people for the AIDS virus. Greater awareness of the disease led to formation of his current job in 1988. As AIDS education and prevention project coordinator for Lubbock, Cochran, Hockley, Crosby and Lynn counties, he has learned that discussing AIDS prevention is a way to reach into the depths of drug-related problems.

"It's not like you're going out to do therapy with a depressed housewife," outreach worker Benny Brito explained. "These are hardcore addicts, junkies who don't interact with anyone. It's a culture where they take care of their own. They are very alienated from mainstream America. It's a day-to-day existence," he said.

AIDS education outreach worker Wendy Dearman-Powell visits the Lubbock County Jail weekly as part of an education and prevention project.

BRITO SPENT 10 years counseling MHMR clients who were schizophrenic. Then someone Brito knew developed AIDS. Brito realized there was something more to the disease than watching someone die. There was helping someone to live.

"I wasn't afraid to go on the streets. I knew the risks involved," Brito said of his job. He and Everett "Scoop" Hooper, a male outreach worker who worked in drug abuse counseling at MHMR, go to the five county jails as well as schools, churches and the streets.

"We have found street folks can better communicate with someone of their own. Drug use is a culture, but there are subcultures. What is happening in the Anglo community is methamphetamines, speed. There's crack in the black culture, and the Mexicanos use heroin," Brito said.

"We have to do pre-test counseling. We talk to them about their lifestyle, what has put them at risk. We've tested for the virus at the jail, on the streets, in the alleys. We have a nurse who draws the blood. With the IV drug users, if they share syringes we try to get them into treatment. We have heard from health authorities that 10 percent of the IV drug users are infected. It's not the drugs that give AIDS but the syringes shared. If there is the least amount of blood left in the syringe, or in the cooker, that person is shooting the AIDS virus directly into his bloodstream," Brito said.

"You don't just sit there and talk about AIDS. You talk about the family, boyfriends and girlfriends. You listen to their anger at not being able to find a job.

"WHEN THEY WANT to do something in the drug-free community there's a lack of education, a low self-esteem, fear of rejection. They say, 'Why should I go to college; a seventh-grade education was enough for everyone in my family.'

"A lot of times they (those in jail) ask if we would call the family, or they'll ask us to check on a girlfriend or boyfriend who is strung out. Even though we do intervention, we don't stop there. We will get calls. We have home visits." The youths they see are mostly involved with alcohol, though Brito said some are "experimenting" with IV drugs.

"They (the public) don't understand. They (drug abusers) don't want to live a life of drug abuse. I believe it's a sickness that has to be treated by the whole population. Addiction is a disease, a disease that is progressive," said Brito.

Brito shares such feelings with the mainstream on Monday evenings on his Spanish-speaking KLFB radio show, "Your Family, Your Health, Your Life," where he focuses on the importance of education, family issues, drug abuse and AIDS.

Ms. Dearman-Powell alternates Wednesday afternoon sessions with outreach worker Essie Farley at the Lubbock County Jail.

"I think some of these people are really taking this information to heart. I guess we'll never really know what impact we've made, but I do feel like we're making an impact," she said.

"A lot of these people out on the streets, in the jail, may not hear this information otherwise. The gay population started taking care of themselves a few years ago. That's why we feel it's important. I always worried at first, 'Are they going to take me seriously?'

"You have to be a realist. The reality is there. I do this because I see so much good. I see so much potential."

With global tensions easing, WHO is looking to reap 'health dividend'

By Hanns Neuerbourg

GENEVA (AP) — Despite improvement in global health, two of five deaths still occur from preventable causes, according to a survey published in late April by the World Health Organization.

About 200 million people may still die of preventable diseases in the 1990s "if the current trend continues" but that many could be saved if more money were spent on health care, said the U.N. agency's director-general, Dr. Hiroshi Nakajima.

"Many of the world's illnesses are preventable or treatable with inexpensive vaccines, antibiotics or oral rehydration therapy," he said in commenting on the 56-page survey.

"With the decrease in global military tension, there may be more money to fight the worldwide war on disease," he added. "We are looking for a health dividend."

The survey says the 50 million people dying worldwide from all causes each year include 14.5 million children under the age of 5 in developing countries.

"More than 8,000 children die each day because they are not immunized, almost 11,000 a day die of dehydration caused by diarrhea, and about 8,000 a day of pneumonia.

"The cost of immunizing all children and providing medication for dehydration and pneumonia is estimated to be about $2.5 billion a year," it said, adding such efforts could save 7.5 million children a year.

The report did not say how much now is spent on such immunization and medical care.

The report stresses a change in lifestyle would prevent one of two early deaths due to cardiovascular diseases. It also estimates that 3 million adults die annually from "tobacco-related diseases."

"The prevention of these deaths is the most simple of all," the report said.

Hepatitis B, a liver infection blamed in 1-million to 2-million deaths per year, is listed as the most prevalent disease worldwide.

Hepatitis B, a liver infection blamed in 1 million to 2 million deaths per year, is listed as the most prevalent disease worldwide. WHO estimates that more than 2 billion people, or about two fifths of the world's total population, are infected with the hepatitis-B virus, HBV.

It adds that "HBV infection is now preventable with a safe and effective vaccine."

A combined 1.4 to 1.6 billion people are estimated to be suffering from ascariasis and hookworm, intestinal parasitic infections that are particularly widespread in tropical areas.

Cardiovascular diseases, with an annual 12 million deaths, are listed as the biggest single killer, followed by diarrheal diseases, 5 million; cancer and pneumonia, 4.6 million each; tuberculosis, 3 million; and chronic lung diseases, 2.7 million.

Malaria, with an estimated annual toll of 1 to 2 million deaths and whooping cough, which kills about 355,000, are also ranked well ahead of AIDS, estimated to claim about 200,000 lives annually.

The agency, which in 1977 proclaimed a goal of "health for all by the year 2000," said the health situation remains worst in Southeast Asia, where about 40 percent of the region's total population of 1.8 billion suffers from malnutrition and diseases ranging from diarrhea to malaria.

In sub-Saharan Africa, about 30 percent are ill. In South and Central America, the share is 25 percent, the same as in North Africa and the Middle East.

In the past decade, health care has brought some significant improvements, the agency said.

Better phone connection to make Rx difference

HOUSTON (AP) — High-definition television soon may be used in diagnosis by doctors in rural areas if a pilot program established at Texas Children's Hospital is fruitful.

Hospital officials have said they will begin a research and demonstration center to determine if such remote medical consultations are valuable or desirable.

Dr. Ralph Feigin, physician in charge at Texas Children's and chief of pediatrics at Baylor College of Medicine, said the closed-circuit, high-definition TV could be the link rural physicians need to specialty services.

High-definition TV transmits more than twice as many lines as do regular TV pictures, resulting in a much clearer image with more accurate color.

Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. plans to transmit the high-definition images via the $120 million 1,400-mile fiber optic network it has established from NASA to Richmond-Rosenberg, in Fort Bend County, to Spring, north of Houston in Harris County.

The network is made up of bundles of hair-thin strands of glass through which information is pulsed by a laser-driven light source.

Levee break forces evacuation

DALLAS (AP) — The U.S. Army Corps of Engineers brought 30,000 sandbags late Wednesday to reinforce levees along the rain-swollen Red River, where hundreds of residents were evacuated and livestock was stranded.

A Chinook helicopter dispatched to East Texas picked up hay to feed herds of cattle stranded by flooding from heavy rains upstream. Residents up the river, meanwhile, were waiting for homes and businesses to dry out.

About 200 people have been evacuated from rural areas north of Texarkana on the northeast corner of the state as water broke through the top of a 60-foot-long section of a levee, flooding homes.

As many as 400 volunteers, National Guardsmen and Bowie County officials were monitoring eight other weak points on the river levees where water was breaking or seeping through, officials said.

"The work is so manual that we have about 30,000 sandbags coming in from Denison Dam," said Dave Hall, director of the Texarkana Office of Emergency Services. "We have put in excess of that on the levees already."

AP Laserphoto

Cattle were rounded up and put into pens north of Texarkana as the Red River came out of its banks. Some ranchers were able to get their livestock to higher ground, while others will just have to wait for the waters to recede and hope for the best.

He said the river had not yet crested and more emergency workers were needed to stop major breaks on the levees.

"If we can hold the levee, we won't have many more evacuations or problems," he said. "But if the levee goes, no telling how many homes could be affected."

Along the flood-swollen Trinity River, 33 homes were damaged at Long Lake, said the governor's Division of Emergency Management in Austin.

In flooded sections of Dallas, residents were trying to save what they could from homes flooded by several feet of water.

South Dallas resident Barbara Charles spent much of the day Wednesday trying to salvage her blankets, which she said she would need — since she would be sleeping on the floor. Most of her furniture was ruined in this week's flooding.

"I've got my whole life in here," she said, pointing to her house, which was flooded by up to 5 feet of water.

Residents along the Trinity River south of Dallas are hoping their levees will hold when the waterway crests near 50 feet, five feet above flood stage, early Thursday.

"We're pretty well prepared for flooding. We've had it before, and right now we're in pretty good shape," said Crockett Police Chief B.W. Canada. "Thank goodness, most of our low level area is sparsely populated, so we're not expecting any trouble."

In Bowie County, volunteers scanned the levees for breaches, while nearly 100 Guardsmen sought to prevent more homes from flooding.

Hubble's shuttlemates try to minimize delays

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — The astronauts who put the Hubble Space Telescope in orbit said Wednesday they are not worried about the problems controllers have encountered in getting the $1.5 billion observatory operational.

Discovery pilot Charles Bolden said the testing and checkout phase of the telescope by controllers at the Goddard Space Flight Center in Greenbelt, Md., is a tedious, but crucial step in the telescope's mission.

"I asked you to be patient before we flew," Bolden told reporters during the crew's post-flight press conference. "We're our own worst enemy because of the pressure that you put on us, we're telling you that we're going to give you pictures today — that was not in the cards when we started.

"I'm pretty impressed with how it is performing and the progress in its checkout," he added.

The five astronauts deployed the 12.5-ton telescope April 25, and two of them almost had to perform an emergency spacewalk to unfold one of its solar arrays when it wouldn't open immediately.

NASA had planned to snap the first picture with the main camera Wednesday, but that was pushed back to at least Friday. NASA spokesman Dave Garrett had no information Wednesday about the reason for the delay.

Ground controllers on Tuesday tried unsuccessfully to teach the telescope exactly what it was looking at. The instrument was told to look for stars of a certain brightness in what scientists thought was a rich field, but it found none.

Before that failed effort, engineers estimated they were one week behind schedule in their checkout because of earlier problems.

But astronaut Bruce McCandless, a mission specialist on the flight, said controllers were keeping pretty close to their time line.

"All in all, they feel like they're about on schedule," McCandless said.

Astronomers hope to use the telescope to look back to almost the beginning of the time, studying stars and galaxies so distant their light has taken 14 billion years to reach Earth. They hope to determine how and when the universe was formed, currently estimated at 15 billion years ago.

And McCandless noted that a few days delay here and there isn't really going to matter that much.

STATE in brief

Texan charged in church fires

STAUNTON, Va. (AP) — A Dallas, Texas, man was arrested Wednesday and charged with setting fire to two churches, police said.

John Randall Todd, 24, was arrested as he stood in a Botetourt County church.

He was charged in fires Tuesday that destroyed Vesuvius Baptist Church in Rockbridge County and heavily damaged Mt. Carmel Presbyterian Church about four miles away in Augusta County.

Rockbridge authorities charged Todd with breaking and entering and arson in the Vesuvius fire.

The Augusta County Sheriff's Department filed two counts of breaking and entering and one charge of arson against Todd. In addition to the Mt. Carmel fire, the Augusta County charges stem from a break-in at Victory Baptist Church at Folley Mills.

Bus, car collide

HOUSTON (AP) — Six people, including two special education students, were taken to area hospitals Wednesday after a school bus and a car collided, causing the bus to overturn.

The students were riding in the mini-bus when it allegedly was hit on the side by a car trying to pass it about 12:30 p.m., said Ann Spears, director of public information for the school district.

The bus reportedly was traveling west and being followed by a dump trunk and the car when the car allegedly tried to pass both vehicles. The bus was in the process of turning left when the car broadsided it, she said.

Epidemic is waning

AUSTIN (AP) — Four months after it began, the measles epidemic appears to be waning in Austin and statewide, officials say.

The rate of new local cases has been cut by almost half in recent weeks, said Dan Pickens, spokesman for the Austin-Travis County Health Department.

"We seem to be slowing to about 10 to 15 cases a week," Pickens said.

Tuesday, total measles cases in Texas stood at 3,442 — two-thirds of them in Dallas, where all seven of the state's deaths (four of them children) from measles complications have occurred.

"We seem to be slowing somewhat but not as fast as we'd like to see it," said Wesley Hodgson, an epidemiology coordinator for the state Department of Health.

From a March high of almost 400 cases reported each week, Hodgson said, statewide reporting has slowed to about 50 cases a week.

Filing deadline nears

AUSTIN (AP) — Independent candidates for statewide, district, precinct and local offices have until 5 p.m. today to file their applications and submit petitions for placement on the Nov. 6 general election ballot, Secretary of State George Bayoud said.

Only those candidates who have filed a declaration of intent to run as an independent are eligible to file applications and submit petitions, Bayoud said Tuesday.

Probe reopens in terrorist bank robbery

Hearst News Service

SAN FRANCISCO – New subpoenas have been issued and more secret grand jury sessions set in Sacramento County's reopened probe of a 15-year-old bank robbery-killing by the terrorist Symbionese Liberation Army.

While District Attorney Steve White continues to refuse to talk about the case, critics of the probe say the grand jury investigation is more of a fishing expedition than a signal there is new evidence.

"They're still throwing out subpoenas, and it looks like they're trying to scare someone, anyone, into talking," said a law enforcement source with knowledge of the case.

One of the latest moves by Sacramento authorities was to serve a subpoena on a golf course to the elderly father of the only person ever put on trial for the April 1975 holdup in suburban Carmichael, Calif., in which Myrna Opsahl, a mother of four, was slain as she delivered her church's collection money to the bank.

The golf course subpoena served Wednesday on Martin Soliah, who is in his 70s and in poor health, drew an angry reaction from his son-in-law, Michael Bortin.

"I've had it with this bull," Bortin said. "They deliberately embarrassed and humiliated him on the golf course, knowing he had nothing to tell them. This is wrong. It's beyond wrong."

Sacramento detectives served a separate summons on Soliah's wife, Elsie, at their modest retirement home in Palmdale.

"They're scaring the hell out of them, and they're intending to scare the hell out of them," said Bortin, who is married to the Soliahs' daughter, Josephine, and himself is considered by some authorities as a suspect in the robbery-killing.

A Soliah son, Steven, was acquitted of federal bank robbery charges in the case. No other charges have been brought against anyone.

Patricia Hearst, who was kidnapped more than a year earlier by the SLA and later joined them, admitted complicity in the holdup. She was granted immunity by agreeing to turn state's evidence against Steve Soliah. She never testified, and authorities never disclosed why.

Another Soliah daughter, Kathleen, who authorities say was recruited into the SLA after most of its original members were slain in a Los Angeles shootout and it changed its name to the New World Liberation Front, is still a fugitive in connection with a bombing allegedly carried out by the NWLF.

The only one talking for the record was Bortin, among those whom Hearst, in her book about her kidnapping and subsequent experiences as an active SLA-NWLF member, identified as being at the robbery.

"I'm so sick of dealing with the innuendos from that lying book," Bortin told the Examiner in a telephone interview. "I wasn't there and had nothing to do with this thing."

Bortin has not been subpoenaed, although he said two Sacramento detectives had offered him immunity when they visited his Portland home two months ago if he would finger SLA member Emily Harris as Opsahl's slayer. He kicked them out of his home, he said.

Molecule may affect immune system

N.Y. Times News Service

Researchers have tracked the activity of an unusual molecule in embryo cells, a finding that could help elucidate one of the most compelling problems in immunology: Why does a mother's body not reject a growing fetus as foreign tissue?

The scientists report that the molecule is switched on almost exclusively in the placenta, where the fetus comes into contact with the mother's bloodstream.

They propose that the molecule can both cloak the fetus against maternal immune cells that might try to destroy it, and still persuade the immune system to ward off pathogens.

The detection of the molecule, known as HLA-G, was reported recently in the journal Science.

Sparing owl habitat would deal economic blow

By Christopher Hanson
Hearst News Service

WASHINGTON — The economic blow to the Pacific Northwest would be far heavier than the Forest Service first estimated if a government scientists' plan to spare the old-growth forest habitat of the imperiled spotted owl is carried out, according to a recent government report.

The report on the economic impact of saving the owl said proposed cuts in federal timber harvesting would cost 28,000 jobs in Washington, Oregon and northern California over the next decade.

Original Forest Service estimates of jobs lost in Washington and Oregon were 9,000 to 14,000, with far fewer in California.

The report released Thursday also estimated the scientists' plan would force a cut in federal timber sales of 56 percent in Washington, up from an initial estimate of 25 percent or slightly higher.

"It's more than double. We're all reeling a bit," said Rep. Jolene Unsoeld, D-Wash.

When the scientists' recommendations were released April 4, the reaction of most members of the Washington state delegation was to accept their implementation as all but inevitable. They spoke in terms of damage control — relief measures for timber communities.

But the report put some of them in more of a fighting mood.

Rep. Norm Dicks, D-Wash., said the delegation should consider asking the Bush administration to stop the scientists' plan from going through or to modify it. U.S. wildlife officials say they would like the scientists' owl-saving plan to be implemented.

Dicks called for new hearings of the Interior Appropriations subcommittee, on which he is a senior member, to question Forest Service officials and "put their feet to the fire."

Forest Service officials have said that they were not in a position to release the economic report until both the secretaries of interior and agriculture had a chance to analyze the data.

The officials had said their initial estimates of the economic impact were preliminary and would probably be subject to revision in a more sophisticated economic analysis.

Forest industry leaders, reacting to the report, accused the Forest Service of understating the economic impacts.

But Jean Durning of the environmentalist Wilderness Society's regional office in Seattle said the economic impacts predicted in the report were misleading in another way.

Corporations' taxes below expectations

WASHINGTON (AP) — Corporations' federal income taxes are falling more than $21 billion a year below expectations, chiefly because forecasters were too optimistic when the 1986 tax overhaul was written, analysts said recently.

Witnesses at a Senate Finance Committee hearing agreed that corporations are paying less tax than predicted because their taxable profits are not up to expectations.

They disagreed, however, on how much of the profit decline was caused by a growing reliance on borrowing, rather than issuance of stock, to finance business expansion.

Robert S. McIntyre, director of Citizens for Tax Justice, a labor-financed research organization, said heavy borrowing, especially for the leveraged buyouts favored in corporate takeovers, is to blame for most of the problem.

"Corporations are sending their profits to bondholders rather than paying dividends to shareholders and taxes to the Treasury," McIntyre said.

Vermonters think they've discovered monster in the lake

By Paul Grondahl
Hearst News Service

NEWPORT, Vt. — Move over, Nessie and Champ. Another lake serpent is vying for the attention of the supermarket tabloids.

The monster, nicknamed "Memphre," looms large in the legend of Lake Memphremagog, a narrow, glacial-cut lake with depths of 350 feet and a length of 27 miles, straddling the Vermont-Quebec border.

Now, Barbara Malloy, 51, who calls herself a "dracontologist" is trying in scientific circles throughout the United States and Canada to gain acceptance for what she describes as a 50-foot-long, humpish, gray, slimy, mud-burrowing beast.

Malloy, with Jacques Boisvert, formed the International Dracontology Society of Lake Memphremagog, based in Newport, Vt. (Dracontology is an invented word from drakon, which means "serpent" in Greek.)

Malloy, a homemaker and mother of four, and Boisvert, a retired insurance broker who is Memphremagog's local historian and a veteran scuba diver, so far are the only members of the Dracontology Society.

Newport, with a population of 6,000, is located about 75 miles east of Burlington and the shores of Lake Champlain — domain of the elusive serpent Champ. Nessie reportedly lives in Scotland's Loch Ness.

MALLOY AND Boisvert claim to have documented more than 100 Memphre sightings by some 250 witnesses, dating back as far as 1816.

The Dracontology Society has a standing offer of a $1,000 reward for rights to the first authenticated, publishable photo of Memphre.

Malloy last summer snapped what is believed to be the only photograph of Memphre, but the blurry, grainy image of a dark streak on the lake surface could be a wave, a boat's wake or a log.

The Dracontology Society has enjoyed some success over the past couple of years.

Malloy took part in a press conference with Quebec and Vermont officials to announce dual U.S.-Canadian citizenship for Memphre.

And Malloy helped shepherd a joint resolution through the Vermont state Legislature that recognized Memphre and made it a species "protected from any wilful act resulting in death, injury or harassment."

Malloy and Memphre also have been featured in articles in The Montreal Gazette, The Boston Globe, Vermont Life, Omni and a cartoon in The Atlantic magazine. Last week, she welcomed a Boston television crew.

THE COURSE of Malloy's easy-going Vermont lifestyle was altered on Aug. 12, 1983, when she made her first UAS (unidentified aquatic sighting).

"My daughters (and I) were driving back from the store when we saw something out on the lake. I thought it was a couple of jet skis at first, ... then we saw it wasn't a jet ski, but a creature that was as long as a house and moving very quickly in an undulating motion. We watched it for several moments until it dove down, out of sight."

"Oldtimers who have been fishing on the lake for 50 years and haven't seen anything think we're all crazy," Malloy admits.

To non-believers, there are rational explanations for Memphre. They suggest that the object could be a huge sturgeon frolicking on the lake surface. Or a large tree trunk that sinks and surfaces periodically. Or a hoax.

Malloy has Memphre pegged as a plesiosaur, a longnecked sea reptile that lived 65 million years ago, whose legs evolved into powerful flippers when it moved from a land- to a water-based habitat.

Malloy believes a colony of plesiosaurs live along the 45th parallel. That's where Loch Ness and Lake Champlain are located. And similar sightings of lake monsters have been reported along that latitude in Maine, Canada and Japan.

"At the bottom of these deep lakes, there is a buildup of sediment that is very deep and these plesiosaurs live, breed and die way down under all that mud," Malloy said.

'...(T)hen we saw...a creature that was as long as a house and moving very quickly in an undulating motion.'

— Barbara Malloy

Candidate finds that Taft name not what it used to be

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Robert Taft II, whose family produced a president and two U.S. senators with careers spanning most of this century, has found that being a Taft is not what it used to be.

The 48-year-old lawyer, serving his third four-year term as a Hamilton County commissioner in Cincinnati, abandoned his bid to become Ohio's next governor in February after disappointing showings in the polls.

He said his aborted try for the Republican gubernatorial nomination made him understand that he needs to become better known to younger voters.

"Among those who knew me, the reaction was positive," Taft said. "But there was a number who didn't know the family name. Among those who knew the name, many don't know who I am."

Taft ran unopposed in Tuesday's GOP primary for secretary of state, leaving former Cleveland Mayor George Voinovich unopposed for the GOP gubernatorial nomination.

It has been 20 years since a Taft won a statewide election, although the family name was on the ballot in 1976, 1982 and 1986.

James Wray, political director for the White House, said that while the Taft family made "a tremendous contribution" to the GOP and the nation, Taft will have to work to increase his name recognition.

"He's going to have to get out there and identify himself," Wray said.

James Ruvolo, Ohio's Democratic chairman, said Taft is not well known outside of Cincinnati.

"The name is not the drawing card it once was," Ruvolo said.

Taft quit the governor's race after party contributors balked at funding a costly battle between him and Voinovich. His switch to the secretary of state's race will pit him in November against two-term incumbent Democrat Sherrod Brown, who is unopposed in his party's primary.

Voinovich, state Chairman Robert Bennett and other party leaders praised Taft as a team player whose willingness to change races reflected his family's party loyalty.

Taft's father, Robert Jr., served three terms in the U.S. House before his election to the Senate in 1970. He was defeated in a re-election bid in 1976.

Robert Jr.'s father, Robert A., was known as "Mr. Republican" while serving in the Senate from 1939 to 1953. He sought the GOP presidential nomination in 1952 against Dwight Eisenhower.

William Howard Taft, father of Robert A. and great-grandfather of Robert Taft II, served from 1909 to 1913 as the 27th president and then became U.S. chief justice.

In 1982, Seth Taft of Cleveland, a businessman and distant cousin of Robert Jr., ran for the GOP nomination for governor, finishing second in a field of four.

Robert Taft II became involved in politics when he helped his father get elected to the Senate. He served in the Peace Corps and was a State Department aide in Vietnam.

Taft served in the Ohio House for two terms, from 1976 to 1980. He ran for lieutenant governor in 1986 as the running mate of former four-term Gov. James A. Rhodes, who tried to make a comeback at age 77 but lost to Democratic incumbent Gov. Richard Celeste.

"I think I got some visibility in 1986, but Rhodes was the issue," Taft said. "It was difficult to emerge clearly."

Last year, Taft decided to head his own ticket in the race to succeed Celeste, who ends his second consecutive four-year term in January and is barred by law from seeking a third. Taft announced his candidacy in June and insisted through most of the year that he was in the race to stay.

"But among a lot of voters, particularly, maybe younger voters, maybe there wasn't a lot of awareness built up. I had never been involved on my own in a statewide campaign," he said.

Cable debated

WASHINGTON (AP) — Professional sports executives Wednesday assured Congress that they're not ready to dump sports off "free" TV in favor of cable TV, but they acknowledged that team owners will turn increasingly to cable to pay their bills.

That could mean more sports on cable as teams faced with increasing costs go where the largest TV audiences are. The executives said cable operators are more than willing to compete for sports rights, particularly for local viewing of baseball.

They said that doesn't mean viewers will have to pay $10 just to watch the Super Bowl or the World Series — at least for the foreseeable future.

Ex-Raider cut

IRVING (AP) — The Dallas Cowboys released veteran defensive back Victor Scott and former Texas Tech running back Ervin Farris on Wednesday.

Scott, a second round draft pick in 1984, didn't play last year because he had been suspended twice under the NFL's drug policy. He was signed to a contract in April.

Farris played at Texas Tech and was signed as a free agent.

Coach Jimmy Johnson said neither Scott nor Farris looked good at a recent mini-camp.

Texas ex dies

AUSTIN (AP) — June James, a former University of Texas linebacker who went on to play in the NFL, was killed when his car ran off a road in southern Louisiana. He was 27.

James, who played linebacker for the Longhorns from 1981 to 1984, died about 1:10 a.m. Tuesday in the accident in Ascension Parish, according to Sgt. Hamilton Mixon of the Louisiana State Police.

According to Mixon, James was northbound on U.S. 61 on the inside lane when his car left the road for unknown reasons. Mixon said it struck a guard rail and spun into the median before flipping over several times.

Mixon said James was killed instantly.

House doubles Rebel cage list

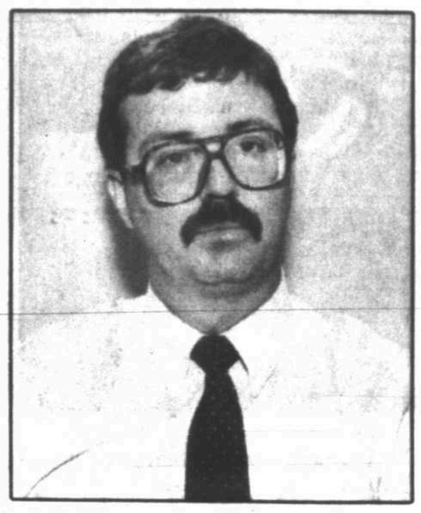
■ Midland Lee names Jon House to replace Paul Stueckler and become only the second head boys basketball coach in the school's 30-year history.

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

Midland Lee's list of head basketball coaches doubled Wednesday when Midland athletic director Jack Tayrien named Jon E. House, 36, as the Rebels' new cage boss.

House, who comes to Midland from Lamar Consolidated, replaces Paul Stueckler, who announced his retirement last month after 29 years of service. Stueckler is the only head basketball coach Lee has ever had — until now. House now becomes No. 2 in Lee's short list of basketball coaches.

"I'm really excited about the opportunity to come to Midland," said House.



Jon House

"This is one of the schools I really had as a coaching objective. I played college ball at McMurry and my wife is from Abilene, so it's good to be back in West Texas.

Tayrien said, "Obviously we are happy to have Coach House with us. We had a lot of good applicants for the job, but he was our choice. I'm hoping this is another long relationship."

House said that the stability shown in Stueckler's long stay at Lee was certainly a consideration in making the move to Midland, but being in West Texas was the major factor.

"Stability is certainly important, but I could have stayed at Lamar Consolidated. I was safe there, but this area appeals to me," said House.

House owns a career coaching record of 167-103 at three schools. When he took the head cage job at Lamar Consolidated in 1988, he inherited a program that had a 5-50 District 23-4A mark in the previous five years and hadn't won a district game in the previous two seasons.

He turned the program around quickly with a district runnerup in 1989 and a district co-champion this past season. Both of his teams fell in the area playoffs.

This past season, House had two returning starters and no one else with varsity experience. Three of his guards made the All-State list, one on the third team and two honorable mentions. Guard Rich McIver signed with Michigan.

His team was 16-15 overall this past season, but it was almost by design.

"We played all 5A schools in our non-conference games to get ready for district," said House. "I would play Midland College in every non-conference game if they would let me. That way you have no surprises when district rolls around.

"I also do a lot of experimenting in the early games. I play a lot of people to see who can play. I just want 15 kids who want to play basketball. I like to have athletes who dive on the floor, play defense and not afraid to get bruised up a little."

House promises a wide-open offense that is generated off of a ball-hawking defense.

"At Lamar Consolidated, we led the league in scoring the last two years. We will run some sort of press the whole

Ameel can cap prep career with win

■ Midland High senior Elizabeth Ameel seeks the state Class 5A singles crown this weekend in Austin before heading for the college ranks.

By Joe Wyatt
Staff Writer

Elizabeth Ameel was a pigtailed 12-year-old when she began playing tournament tennis in earnest, touring the Highway 80 circuit in search of her future.

Now just one tournament remains, the crowning one, before she turns her final prep corner.

Ameel, a Midland High senior and Region I runnerup, will be vying for a Texas title at this weekend's state tennis tournament in Austin. Thereafter, because her 19th birthday is on the horizon, the District 4-5A singles champion will be compelled to enter the women's bracket of any and all tournaments to come.

Little, however, could delight the daughter of Jim and Joanne Ameel more. Elizabeth is presently ranked 17th at the super championship level for her age group in Texas by the United States Tennis Association. And the state tournament, a finale on the one hand, will also mark the birth of her destiny at the doubly competitive collegiate level.

Mowles provides leadership

■ Midland High catcher Patrick Mowles will try to lead his Bulldogs to a doubleheader win Saturday over Lubbock Monterey.

By Bill Price
Staff Writer

Midland High's senior-dominated baseball team does not need an overt amount of leadership – that quality comes with the team's maturity, according to MHS coach Tim Whalen.

But as the Bulldogs head into Lubbock Saturday with the burden of trying to win two games in one day over fourth-ranked Lubbock Monterey, the 'Dogs' intestinal fortitude will be tested.

That's where catcher Patrick Mowles come into play. As one of the two MHS football quarterbacks in 1989 (he and MHS shortstop Jason Stone alternated), Mowles showed his leadership potential.

With his recent acceptance as an appointee to the United States Naval Academy, Mowles' leadership capabilities have led him to a career as an officer. But no matter how gentlemanly he is off the field, nobody should think Mowles had been any too kind to the opposition. As a matter of fact, there was a time about 12 months ago when he carried the reputation of "hothead" around the District 4-5A circuit.

But he has displayed a cooler disposition as the Bulldogs went to an 18-8 finish in 1990 to claim second place in 4-5A and the bi-district playoff berth against Monterey, which MHS trails 1-0 in a best-of-three series after a 7-5 loss Tuesday at Zachery Field.

In addition to batting .452 in district play, Mowles has excelled on defense this season. With constant hustle and Bulldog tenacity aginst base runners, Mowles has easily been the "quarterback" of the MHS defense.

"This team doen't need a lot of leadership because everybody wants to win. A lot of times the situation gets so tense I just try to keep everybody in the game," Mowles said of his defensive instructions to the infield.

However, he did not always carry the passion for his position.

"In Little League I never could pitch, so my older brothers started working with me to make me a catcher. I hated it the first couple of years, but now I realize it was probably the best thing that could have happened to me," he said.

And even though he has accepted the onus of wearing the "tools of ignorance," Mowles is one of MHS' brightest lights in

Wacker, Iba speak

By Jimmy Patterson
Assistant Sports Editor

At first glance, it looked suspiciously like a Texas Christian University booster meeting that was being held at The Bar Wednesday night.

At first glance, it even looked like The Bar.

But if one looked a little closer, it was obvious that what this was, was open mic night at The Improv.

Or at least that's what it looked like.

TCU's Permian Basin Association brought in head football coach Jim Wacker, basketball coach Moe Iba, soccer coach Dave Rubinson and women's golf coach Kristi Arney.

Iba played the role of Rodney Dangerfield, Rubinson played the role of Woody Allen, and Wacker, well, Wacker was just Wacker.

Each coach took turns cracking up the faithful purple in attendance, for the most part staying away from the serious stuff.

"There's nothing real funny to talk about with the football program, Wacker, the headliner, said. "I'm just thrilled to be here. But when you finish 4-7, you're thrilled to be anywhere.

"The good news is that we won our spring game. The bad news is that so did everyone else."

Wacker, who may be looking over his shoulder a bit after five straight lackluster seasons, got one of the biggest responses of the night with a story about a new offensive lineman.

"He doesn't know the meaning of fear," Wacker said. " 'Course he doesn't know the meaning of a lot of other words either ..."

Ba-da bump.

On the more serious side — one of the more rare moments of the evening — Wacker is obviously excited about sophomore quarterback Leon Clay who stepped in during the season last year to lead the Frogs to an upset of then-ranked Air Force. Wacker called Clay "the best quarterback we've had since I've been at TCU."

"Overall," Wacker continued, "I think we have a chance. Recruiting went very well. If we can just block and tackle, I think we'll have a chance."

Iba, whose basketball team finished in the middle of the SWC race last season, but upset such powerhouses as Arkansas and Houston, made a point of mentioning his strong recruiting class, which includes 6-6 Jody Bentley, the top junior college player in Tennessee, and 6-11 Bobby Frain, a Houston Klein Forest High School graduate considered by TCU recruiters as "the best big man prospect in Texas."

Iba felt his Horned Frog basketball team would be better next season, but added that his team would be competing in "the strongest Southwest Conference there's ever been."

Appealing to the crowd, Iba joked — somewhat — about his disdain for the Texas Longhorns.

"We haven't beaten Texas since I've been at TCU," he said. "I don't like Texas. They've got that coach that's got that curly hair and is always getting into trouble."

And then there was Rubinson, who, joke-wise, stole the show, talking of how his soccer players have finally gotten purple jerseys like the rest of the athletes.

"We've got a great field,' too," he said. "It's way over on the west side of Fort Worth. For a long time, our field was better than our players."

And of the large number of foreign born soccer players TCU has, the nine-year Horned Frog head coach spoke of one in particular.

"Soccer players aren't all American, and you've got to be prepared for that," Rubinson said. "I was telling one of my players, I said, 'Man, I'm getting you shoes, I'm getting you shirts, I'm gettting you shorts. Shoot, I'm even getting you athletic supporters.' And this boy said 'We got sponsorship?'

Wacker left the crowd with the second-biggest laugh of the night after Rubinson's assorted one-liners.

"(One recruit) filled out a recruiting form," Wacker said. "Name, address, phone number, you know. For church preference, he put down 'Red brick.' There was a line on there that said 'Race'. He put down '100-yard dash.' There was another line on there that said 'Sex'. He put 'Once in a while.'

"So we signed him, he's gonna be our new quarterback, and we're building our program around this kid."

Ba-da-bump.

Navratilova advances in Italy

ROME (AP) — An injured Martina Navratilova and a healthy Jennifer Capriati fought off challenges from unseeded opponents Wednesday to advance to the third round of the Italian Open.

Navratilvoa, hobbled by a hamstring injury, defeated Australia's Rachel McQuillan 6-2, 3-6, 6-2, while 14-year-old Capriati outlasted Susan Sloane 6-4, 7-6 (7-5).

The top-seeded Navratilova, wearing a bandage around her left thigh, showd little movement over the red clay of the Foro Italico.

"I'm playing it day by day," she said. "I can't go 100 percent. I'm playing at about three-quarter speed."

The 33-year-old Navratilova said she aggravated the injury last week at Hamburg during a doubles match with Capriati.

Capriati, who turned pro in March and is seeded 12th here, had beaten Sloane 6-4, 6-1 at Hilton Head, S.C., last month in her third pro tournament. Sloane, ranked No. 41 in the world, gave Capriati all she could handle this time.

Other seeds advancing were No. 5 Manuela Maleeva of Bulgaria, No. 13 Catarina Lindqvist of Sweden.

Angels end stand with 4-1 mark

By Joe Wyatt
Staff Writer

They call it suicide, but the Angels lived by it Wednesday night.

Jim Aylward's suicide squeeze bunt in the seventh inning got by stumbling Missions' pitcher Kevin Campbell and Ruben Amaro crossed with the deciding run in Midland's 6-5 victory over San Antonio.

Tim Meeks, the Angels third pitcher, got his third win in as many decisions by allowing just one base runner in 2⅔ innings of work. And Midland finished its abreviated homestand with a 4-1 mark.

"These guys just don't want to lose any more," said Angel manager Eddie Rodriguez, whose club improved to 11-19.

"I think some other clubs with 19 losses would be looking at the second half. These guys are looking at the 11 wins," he said.

After the first four innings, however, the Angels were looking at the elusive knuckleball of Dennis Springer and a 3-0 deficit. But the bottom third of the Midland batting order lit a fire in the fifth, and the top half fueled it for five runs and the lead.

Mike Knapp, batting in the No. 7 spot, led off Midland's half of the fifth with the team's third hit of the game, a bloop single to center. Scott Cerny doubled the Angel catcher home to make it 3-1, and Steve DeAngelis provided a two-out, two-run double that knotted the score and looked like the big hit of the inning.

But Angel first baseman Mark Howie corrected that assumption on the next pitch, blasting it over the left-field wall for his second home run of the season. The fifth was Springer's last inning.

"You just have to be patient with the knuckleball," said Howie. "He (Springer) floated one up high that didn't get the break, and I just hit the ball well."

But Midland's 5-3 edge was short-lived as Jerry Brooks and Mica Valdez knocked back-to-back doubles in the top of the sixth to end Carl Hamilton's bid for his third victory of the season. And a game-tying RBI triple by Steve Finken chased reliever Mike Butcher from the mound in the seventh.

Meeks, a ninth-year professional, inherited the runner at third with just one out but escaped unscathed on a pair of ground balls.

Amaro tripled down the third-base line to lead off the seventh. After DeAngelis popped out, Howie was walked intentionally to set up the double play. But Aylward would have none of it.

He squared up and bunted straight toward the mound. Relief pitcher Kevin Campbell, 1-2, tripped, stumbled and fell off the mound. The bunt rolled up and over it, and Amaro's slide was unnecessary.

"Howie was on first, and he said the play probably wouldn't have been that close anyway," Aylward said. "I knew Ruben (Amaro) had gotten a good jump at third, so I don't know what would have happened if the pitcher hadn't fallen.

"I just wanted to put the ball in play, but the first-base line would have been a better place to go with it," he said.

Bruins sweep Caps to move into finals

Stanley Cup

LANDOVER, Md. (AP) — Boston moved into the Stanley Cup finals for the second time in three years as Cam Neely scored twice Wednesday night in a 3-2 victory that gave the Bruins a four-game sweep of the Washington Capitals.

Boston took a 1-0 lead on John Carter's goal 53 seconds into the game, made it 2-0 on Neely's power-play goal late in the period, then turned things over to goalie Andy Moog and a defense that ended up allowing Washington only three goals over the final 202 minutes of the Wales Conference finals.

The Bruins, whose last post-season sweep occurred in 1979, will face the Campbell Conference champions, either Edmonton or Chicago, in the finals. It will be the Bruins' 17th trip to the championship round. Their last appearance was in 1988, when they were swept by the Oilers.

The Capitals, making their first-ever appearance in the Stanley Cup semifinals, were swept for the first time in 13 playoff series.

Following the victory, the Bruins were presented with the Prince of Wales Trophy, given to the Wales Conference playoff champion.

Neely scored the eventual game-winner early in the third period, notching his 12th playoff goal on a brilliant pass from Brian Propp to make it 3-1 with 17:52 left.

Dale Hunter scored the Capitals' first third-period goal of the series with 9:33 remaining, but Moog thwarted Washington the rest of the way to improve to 12-3 in the playoffs. Thanks to a tenacious Boston defense, Moog faced only 14 shots.

Jordan's big third quarter helps surging Bulls nip 76ers

NBA Playoffs

CHICAGO (AP) — Michael Jordan scored 15 of his 45 points during a torrid third-quarter comeback and the Chicago Bulls rallied from a 16-point deficit to defeat the Philadelphia 76ers 101-96 Wednesday night for a 2-0 lead in their NBA playoff series.

The best-of-7 Eastern Conference semifinal now swings to Philadelphia for games Friday night and Sunday.

The Bulls, who trailed 54-38 in the second quarter, were down by 11 before a 19-7 surge carried them to a 78-77 lead after three quarters. Chicago never lost the lead in the final period.

Rookies Stacey King and B.J. Armstrong scored the Bulls' first 10 points of the final period as Jordan rested for 3½ minutes. Jordan returned in time to score 11 of Chicago's last 13 points, keeping the 76ers at bay.

Scottie Pippen had 16 points for the Bulls, while Hersey Hawkins led the 76ers with 23. Johnny Dawkins had 18 and Charles Barkley and Mike Gminski had 16 each.

The 76ers took charge in the second quarter and remained ahead until the Chicago surge in the third quarter.

There were eight ties and three lead changes in the first quarter. Jordan, who scored 13 points in the period, went out for a rest with two minutes left.

Philadelphia then went on a 10-3 run, with Barkley scoring five of the points, to give the 76ers a 30-25 lead at the end of the quarter.

The 76ers scored the first six points of the second period to up the lead to 36-25. Philadelphia, which shot 61.5 percent in the first half, then stretched the lead to 16 points before the Bulls scored the final four points to make it 57-46 at the half.

Jordan's 15 points in the third period included the last five, three on free throws when he was fouled by Rick Mahorn and Mahorn was given a technical for pushing Stacey King.

Rutherford hurt after hitting wall

Indianapolis 500

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Three-time Indy 500 winner Johnny Rutherford was hospitalized with a concussion Wednesday after his second crash during the opening week of practice for the May 27th race.

Rutherford, 52, was taken by ambulance to Methodist Hospital where he was in good condition. Officials at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway said the Fort Worth, Texas, driver was awake and alert after the crash. Hospital officials said Rutherford would be kept overnight for observation and further tests on a possible left knee injury.

Rutherford's 1989 Lola-Cosworth went out of control as he drove through the windswept third turn on the 2½-mile oval. The car skidded sideways through the turn, did a half-spin, slammed into the wall then spun away, coming to a rest on the inside track apron. The accident left a big gouge in the asphalt surface.

Rutherford was first taken to the speedway's infield hospital for examination before being transferred to Methodist. His car received extensive damage to the left side.

Rutherford had done only two laps before the crash, with a top speed of 146.668 mph. His best lap was on Monday, when he hit 212.039 before the car came out of the second turn high and brushed with wall with its right tires. Rutherford was not injured.

Rutherford, who won the 500 in 1974, 1976 and 1980, is seeking his 25th start at Indianapolis. He qualified last year but was bumped from the lineup by the final qualifier.

It was the sixth crash since practice began Saturday, and all have involved late model Lolas.

New aerodynamic rules this year include the use of 2-inch diffusers in all models prior to 1990 to narrow the size of the undercar tunnels that help produce downforce to keep the winged cars on the track.

Steve Chassey, who crashed a 1987 Lola-Buick on Tuesday, said, "These tunnels are junk. They've destroyed these cars and they're totally unbalanced. They (U.S. Auto Club officials) don't feel there's any problem, but I've got news for them — they're wrong."

Chassey, who was not injured, said, "You cannot take a car designed for one thing and just change it."

Hough helps Texas snap three-game skid

Associated Press

Charlie Hough survived six walks in the first two innings and went on to pitch six innings of two-hit ball Wednesday night as the Texas Rangers snapped a three-game losing streak with a 9-3 victory over the Kansas City Royals.

Julio Franco went 3-for-3 and Ruben Sierra had two hits, including a homer, to lead a 14-hit attack in support of Hough, 3-1.

After Hough walked in two runs in the second, he settled down to retire 11 straight batters from the third through the sixth before Mike Jeffcoat came on in relief to start the seventh.

The decision broke a three-game winning streak for the Royals.

The Rangers took their first lead in a game since last Saturday with a four-run second inning off Storm Davis, 1-4. Jack Daugherty's two-run double highlighted the inning. Geno Petralli added an RBI double and Gary Pettis drove in another run with a single.

Texas went up 5-2 in the third to chase Davis, who gave up five earned runs and eight hits. Sierra hit a leadoff homer, the fifth of his career off Davis and sixth of the season. Franco's RBI single in the fourth boosted Texas' lead to 6-2.

Hough's control was awful over the first two innings and he twice issued walks in the second with the bases loaded.

AL Roundup

Tigers 2, Brewers 1

Lou Whitaker and Lloyd Moseby hit conescutive two-out home runs in the first inning and Detroit snapped a four-game losing streak with a 2-1 victory over Milwaukee in a game called after eight innings by rain.

Athletics 2, Yankees 1

Rickey Henderson's bases-loaded walk in the 11th inning gave the Athletics a three-game sweep and their ninth win in 10 games.

Henderson scored from second on Carney Lansford's grounder in the eighth, then walked on four pitches in the 11th off Eric Plunk (2-1) after Oakland loaded the bases on two singles and a walk.

The Yankees got their lone run in the first on a single by Steve Sax, Roberto Kelly's double and Don Mattingly's RBI grounder off Dave Stewart, who failed to win for the first time in seven starts this season despite allowing only six hits in 8 1-3 innings.

Indians 7, Twins 3

Tom Brookens' first RBI of the season scored the go-ahead run in the sixth as Cleveland beat Minnesota, ending the Twins' winning streak at six games.

Cleveland's Sergio Valdez (1-0) gained a victory in the first American League start of his career. Valdez, who was picked up on waivers from Atlanta on April 30, allowed seven hits, struck out three and walked three in seven innings. Doug Jones finished up for his 10th save.

Blue Jays 4, White Sox 3

Nelson Liriano drove in two runs, including the go-ahead tally with a single in the sixth, as Toronto erased a three-run deficit to beat the White Sox for the 1,000th win in the club's 14-year history.

Liriano, whose RBI double triggered a game-tying three-run rally in the fourth, singled with the base loaded in the sixth.

Frank Wills (2-1) got the win with 2 2-3 innings of hitless relief. Duane Ward pitched the final two innings for his fourth save of the season.

Red Sox 4, Mariners 1

Boston right-hander Roger Clemens snapped a two-game losing streak, recording his fourth consecutive victory at the Kingdome and 100th of his career with a four-hit victory over Seattle.

Carlos Quintana and Luis Rivera hit consecutive home runs in the seventh inning for Boston and Mickey Pina slugged another in the ninth.

Clemens (5-2) gave up only a solo home run and single to Alvin Davis and two singles to Edgar Martinez.

He did not allow a runner past first base until Davis' homer in the seventh and at one point retired 14 straight hitters. Clemens struck out six and walked one.

Clemens has been near perfect the last two years against the Mariners.

NL

HOUSTON (AP) — Pat Combs sparkled in his hometown debut with eight scoreless innings and benefited from six Houston errors as the Philadelphia Phillies beat the Astros 10-1 Wednesday night and snapped a seven-game Astrodome losing streak.

Combs (2-2), who grew up in Houston and resides here in the off-season, outdueled Mike Scott (1-3) in his first Astrodome appearance. He yielded five hits, walked three and struck out five. Terry Mulholland pitched the ninth and yielded a run on Gerald Young's sacrifice fly.

Scott allowed nine hits and eight runs — four earned — in 4 2-3 innings and his ERA is 6.27.

Houston shortstop Rafael Ramirez committed two errors and he has nine of the Astros' 29 this season. The club record for errors in a game is seven.

Cubs 4, Braves 0

Ryne Sandberg and Domingo Ramos hit two-run homers and Les Lancaster allowed four hits as the Cubs beat Atlanta in a game shortened to 4½ innings by rain.

Lancaster (2-1), making his first start since June 4, 1988, struck out two and walked none. He got the final out in the top of the fifth, making the game official, just before thundershowers halted play. The game was called after a 90-minute wait.

Sandberg homered off Pete Smith (2-2) after Jerome Walton's single in the third and Ramos hit his first homer since April 8, 1989 following Curt Wilkerson's two-out single in the fourth.

Pirates 6, Reds 2

Bobby Bonilla's run-scoring double triggered Pittsburgh's four-run sixth inning as the Pirates beat Cincinnati, ending the five-game winning streaks of the Reds and pitcher Jack Armstrong.

Jay Bell had a triple off Armstrong (5-1) and scored twice while winner John Smiley (3-3) allowed seven hits over six-plus innings before giving way to Bill Landrum, who pitched three hitless innings for his fourth save.

The Pirates and the NL West-leading Reds, the league's dominant teams in the 1970s, met as division leaders for the first time since Aug. 24, 1975.

Giants 4, Mets 2

Robby Thompson and Kevin Bass spoiled Bob Ojeda's first start of the season by homering during a four-run first inning as San Francisco snapped the Mets' four-game winning streak.

Bob Knepper (1-1) won his first start of the season and ended the Giants' losing streak at three. He gave up two runs on six hits in 5 2-3 innings. Jeff Brantley pitched 2 1-3 innings and Steve Bedrosian worked the ninth for his fourth save.

Ojeda (0-1) retired the first batter before Thompson hit his third home run of the season, Will Clark walked, Kevin Mitchell singled and Bass followed with his fourth homer. Kevin Elster drove in both New York runs with a double and homer.

Expos 5, Dodgers 3

Kevin Gross won his fourth straight decision by limiting Los Angeles to five hits in 8 1-3 innings and red-hot Andres Galarraga drove in two runs. Gross (4-1) last won four decisions in a row from May 27-June 17, 1988, when he was with Philadelphia.

The Dodgers committed four errors, giving them nine in the past two games. Loser Fernando Valenzuela (2-3) left after four innings, allowing four runs, two earned.

Cardinals 11, Padres 5

St. Louis, who scored only eight runs in losing their previous five games, erased a five-run deficit with seven runs in the fifth inning and four more in the sixth.

THURSDAY, MAY 10, 1990

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Look forward to promoting an important money-making venture. Think in terms of your long-range goals. A change of personnel will work to your advantage in September. By November you will be pondering a possible change in lifestyle. Higher-ups show new respect for your idea. Spending the winter holidays in a sunny climate will appeal to your romantic side. Past favors will be repaid in January and February. Traveling in March could result in an exciting romantic link!

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: dancer Fred Astaire, actor Taurean Blacque, TV host Gary Owens, sportscaster Pat Summerall.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Networking could be the best answer if you suddenly find yourself alone. Regular exercise helps restore your vitality. Be firm but gentle with tiny tots. Try to reassure an overanxious friend.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): A good day to tackle financial problems. Seek advice from experts. A co-worker shows great interest in your personal affairs. Be cagey — avoid confiding too much. Romance sizzles.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Steer clear of friends' financial schemes. Boredom could lead you to act out of character. An associate's entertainment idea could prove too expensive. Spend the evening at home relaxing.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A misunderstanding can be straightened out. Put personalities aside and stick to the facts. A correct decision may be difficult to reach. Your plans for the evening could change.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Do not be in such a hurry. Contracts and agreements should be negotiated with great care. Use the evening to patch up a disagreement with mate. Postpone a business trip in favor of romance.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Use your powers of persuasion to smooth over any problems with your coworkers. A financial siutation shows improvement, thanks to an expert's advice. Romance could have its ups and downs.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Handle important paperwork. Higher-ups are impressed with your quickness under fire. Consult a professional before risking your money on speculative real estate deals.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Productivity rises if you refuse to allow pleasure to come before work. A sense of style is important. Avoid making sudden domestic changes. Date someone who has a positive attitude.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Prove your efficiency. Do your own research instead of relying on hearsay. Someone conveys admiration for your mental abilities in a charming way. A longtime relationship is rejuvenated.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You gain widespread support by winning a difficult person over to your views. Write letters and return phone calls. Member of opposite sex has designs on your heart. Be coy.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Patience and diplomacy will help you avoid confrontations with family members. Do not insist on getting privileges from an employer that were not promised. Romance soars to new heights.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Show more tact when working alongside less experienced associates. Today can be a turning point! Resist the temptation to make extravagant gestures designed to impress others. Romance heats up.

TODAY'S CHILDREN have astonishing patience and endurance. Once these Taureans dig their heels in, they are almost impossible to budge.

Had most players we know held the West hand, they would still be complaining about the dearth of high cards they had been dealt. Not so many-time world champion Mike Lawrence, of Berkeley Calif., who picked up this uninspiring collection during the Open Pairs event at the recent Spring North American Championship in Fort Worth, Texas.

East's redouble showed a better-than-minimum opening bid with spade support. Since South had a clear preference in the minor suits, his bid of two clubs was to prevent North running from the redouble to two diamonds. Lawrence wielded the ax, partly as a warning to partner not to bid on, then defended beautifully to reap the maximum dividend.

Dummy's ace won the first trick and, with nothing better to do, declarer returned a heart. East took the king and switched to the king of trumps, taken by the ace.

When declarer next led a low diamond off dummy, East inserted the queen to lead another trump through declarer, who played low, allowing West to win the jack and return a trump to the queen.

A diamond to the jack forced the ace and East exited with a heart. Declarer inserted the eight and Lawrence discarded! Next came the queen of hearts and Lawrence again refused to ruff. Declarer ruffed his last heart in dummy, but that was North-South's sixth and last trick. Note that had Lawrence ruffed, declarer would have been down only one. Dummy would have been able to overruff and cash three diamond winners to go with two trump tricks and the ace of hearts.

Comedians make appeal for assisting homeless

WASHINGTON (AP) — Comedians Robin Williams and Whoopi Goldberg appeared before a Senate panel Wednesday to urge passage of a bill providing long-term help for homeless families.

Williams

"It's a very sad state of affairs when we cannot take care of our own," Goldberg said.

Both appeared before the Senate Labor and Human Resources Committee and are working with the Comic Relief group, which has raised money for the homeless.

Goldberg

"George, read my lips: Help us," Williams said, referring to President Bush, at a news conference before addressing the committee.

The celebrities support a bill sponsored by committee chairman Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., and others that would authorize $265 million next year for services for homeless people.

Appearing with Williams and Goldberg was a formerly homeless woman, Connie Perez of Oxnard, Calif., now a case worker helping other homeless people. She described the hardship of trying to keep her seven children together during three years of homelessness.

"My children suffered the most," she said. "I am still trying to correct the damage that was done."

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP) — Mary Martin and Celeste Holm are among nearly two dozen stars marking the Shubert theater's 75th birthday Saturday by reprising or reminiscing about its Broadway shows that "opened out of town."

Miss Martin is expected to sing Cole Porter's "My Heart Belongs to Daddy," from "Leave It To Me," which premiered at the Shubert in 1938. Her tryout for the show was her first time on stage.

Miss Martin also appeared at the Shubert in the pre-Broadway tryouts of "South Pacific," in 1949, and "The Sound of Music," in 1959.

John Raitt will sing "Bill's Soliloquy" from "Carousel," which opened here in 1945. Miss Holm will sing "I'm Just a Girl Who Can't Say No," from "Oklahoma!" which opened in 1943.

Others stars featured include Yvonne DeCarlo, Robert Goulet, Connie Stevens, Maureen Stapleton, Vincent Gardenia and the Rockettes in the 90-minute show directed by Joe Layton, creative director of Radio City Music Hall.

From the 1930s to the 1960s, the Shubert was known as the "birthplace of the nation's greatest hits."

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP) — Architect Maya Ying Lin, who designed the Vietnam Vetesans Memorial in Washington, D.C., when she was a Yale student has returned to her alma mater to mark the arrival of women undergraduates 20 years ago.

Yale has commissioned Lin to design a sculpture to celebrate new generations of Yale women on campus, culminating a yearlong observance of the 20th anniversary.

The monument "is more about the future than commemorating the past," Lin said Tuesday, and likely will include places where "people can sit and enjoy themselves." She would not discuss possible designs.

In 1981 as a senior, Lin's design was chosen from 1,420 entries for the Vietnam memorial, a black granite work inscribed with the names of 58,000 Americans killed or missing. It is the most visited monument in Washington.

Lin also designed a monument to those slain during the civil rights movement. The work was dedicated in Montgomery, Ala., in November.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Singer Sinead O'Connor announced Wednesday she has refused to perform on "Saturday Night Live" this weekend, becoming the second performer to boycott the TV show because of foul-mouthed guest host Andrew Dice Clay.

"It would be nonsensical of 'Saturday Night Live' to expect a woman to perform songs about a woman's experiences after a monologue by Andrew Dice Clay," the singer's publicist, Elaine Schock, said in a phone interview in Pelham, N.Y.

"Saturday Night Live" cast member Nora Dunn announced Monday that she was boycotting the program, saying "In my heart, I know I can't work with him."

Dunn called the comedian's expletive-laden act, which twists nursery rhymes into deviant sexual tales, "hateful."

LOS ANGELES (NYT) — Zsa Zsa Gabor has filed comp'aints against the judge and prosecutor in her Beverly Hills cop-slapping case claiming that they violated her rights, her publicist said.

Gabor sent letters to the Committee on Judicial Performance and the State Bar of California saying that communication between Deputy District Attorney Elden Fox and Beverly Hills Municipal Court Judge Charles G. Rubin amounts to collusion, according to her publicist, Phil Paladino.

AMEEL: Star netter ponders college choice

From 1C

ge," said Ameel "Tyler is ranked number two in the nation, and they've got a lot of good players.

"Tennis will be an important part of the decisions I'll be making. I'd like to eventually go to TCU or somewhere like that and play Division I tennis.

"I'll be playing in the women's bracket at about 10 tournaments this summer, and I'll be playing a lot of doubles," she said.

"This summer will be real important for me. A lot of college players enter the tournaments I'll be playing in. And I'll have to work at my doubles because that's a big part of playing collegiate tennis.

"I've been playing nothing but singles this year."

However, it is that inundation of successful singles play through which Ameel has earned the right to compete at state.

A three-year member of the MHS varsity, Ameel won her first district title in early April. And using her sizzling forehand and two-fisted backhand, she closed out the month with a second-place finish at regionals where the top two finishers advance to Austin.

Amarillo Tascosa's Wilson Pate took the regional title, 6-4, 7-6, over Ameel.

"Going to state is very important to me right now," she confides. "Since that loss at regionals I have to prove I can play. I think I can do better.

"I don't think my mental game was not very strong at all, at district or at regionals. I think it will improve a great deal at state. I've been thinking about winning state, and the more I think about it the easier it is to get ready.

"I think it's important to go in with confidence. I'll get a harder bracket than I would have if I had won at regionals, but they're all hard at state.

"I figure I've got nothing to lose and everything to gain at state."

Ameel has refined her game under the tutelege of her professional coach Joe Dan McBeth of the Midland Racquet Club and MHS head tennis coach Steve Hoover. She further cultivates her knack for winning with the help of Luke Morrow, her boyfriend who was a state doubles champion last year for MHS with Harper Essex.

"They all have helped me so much," she says. "And Mom and Dad have been behind me all the way. It takes a lot of money and nearly all summer to go to all the tournaments I've entered.

"And those tournaments are so important. My family has been wonderful."

The charm of the state tennis tournament in Austin will be aided, even abetted, by the presence of Elizabeth Ameel, the Midlander who has learned to win or lose with equal grace, albeit much more seldom the latter.

"I just think it will be fun and an experience to remember," she said. "After all the tournaments I've been in, you could say it's just another on the list. But I used to play a lot of basketball when I was younger, then I switched to tennis because I believed I could go farther.

"I get tired sometimes — I'll tael ready. I've gotten this far, and I'm going to give it everything I've got."

the classroom. Even with his participation in varsity athletics, Mowles has found the time to carry a 4.66 grade point average.

"I have a lot of friends to get together with and we study. Also, I have had some good teachers who understood what I was trying to do, so they went out of their way to make sure I got the instruction I needed during class time," he said.

Despite his high marks, his appointment to the Naval Academy was in question until last weekend, when Midshipman coach Joseph Duff called to confirm Mowles' acceptance.

"They originally said no, but there was still some talk going on through last week. When I visited there (in early December) I talked to both the football and baseball coaches. I told them that I wanted to concentrate on baseball, but somehow they didn't understand that until last week."

But Mowles and his Bulldog teamates still have a job remaining before they consider any aspect of college life – beating Monterey.

"We're just focusing on Monterey right now."

game and push the ball up court. When you produce turnovers with your defense, you generate offense," House said.

House has a list of early priorities even though he won't officially be in Midland until the end of school.

"I want to make sure that all the kids at Lee know I have an open door. My goal is to put 15 kids on the floor who want to play varsity basketball. We also want to get the numbers up for the junior varsity and I want to visit with the freshmen. Numbers cure a lot of problems.

"Of course, I want to get my system in, but it's not that complicated. The kids are going to like the style of game we are going to play.

"I want the kids to know that I'm enthused about Midland Lee. They will see me at the band and choir events and other athletic events. They will be able to see that I'm interested. I've had football starters on my teams at Lamar Consolidated all three years. I just like athletes. The way I look at it, if a kid can play tennis, he has some quick feet. We'll just be looking for athletes."

House was raised in Oklahoma City and attended U.S. Grant High there. He played at Grayson County Junior College in Dennison before going to McMurry.

His coaching career began in 1978 at San Saba as head coach for two years. He then went to South San Antonio (West Campus) as an assistant in 1980. While there South San went 33-5 and went to the state 4A semifinals before losing to Canyon.

House dropped out of coaching to work for LTV Corporation in Abilene for three years before becoming an assistant at Lamar Consolidated in 1983. He was the head coach at Needville for one year in 1985

Basques sought in bike bombing

PAMPLONA, Spain (AP) — East Germany's Uwe Raab won the rain-soaked 16th stage of the Tour of Spain on Wednesday, a race marred by the explosion of two small bombs believed to have been set by Basque extremists.

The two bombs exploded before the cyclists rode by and no injuries were reported. The leg finished 90 minutes behind schedule.

Raab completed the 102-mile leg from Logrono in 4 hours, 44 minutes and 19 seconds, winning in a mass sprint for the finish line for his second stage victory. Malcolm Elliot of Britain finished second, leading the main pack, all clocked in the same time as the winner.

Marcio Giovannetti of Italy retained the overall lead in the 22-day, 2,292-mile race for the sixth straight day. He leads Anselmo Fuerte of Spain by 1:31 and Spaniard Pedro Ruiz Cabestany by 1:32.

The bombs were placed on the boundary between Basque country and the autonomous region of Navarre, of which Pamplona is the capital. Navarre is considered by Basque separatists as part of the Basque country.

Officials said callers who said they spoke in the name of the armed Basque separatist group ETA telephoned police before the bombs exploded.

Gold prices ended the day narrowly lower.

TXCO merger

San Antonio, (TX) — The Exploration Company (TXCO) (OTC) announced today that it has agreed to a joint venture with a New York Stock Exchange oil and gas company for the development of 50,000 acres which TXCO controls in Maverick County, Texas.

The other company will horizontally drill TXCO's La Paloma No. 1-112 well in the Pearsall formation and will drill a second vertical well on the acreage block.

TXCO has tested the La Paloma No. 1-112 at rates of approximately 500,000 cubic feet and 50 barrels of condensate per day from the Pearsall formation. TXCO is not aware of gas wells that have been drilled horizontally in the United States, the Pearsall formation is an ideal candidate for horizontal drilling because it has low permeability and is vertically fractured.

Real estate auction to be worldwide

■ The federal agency charged with selling properties from failed S&Ls plans to hold the world's largest auction by satellite.

N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — The federal board that inherited $17 billion in real estate from insolvent S&Ls decided Tuesday to stage a worldwide "satellite auction" this summer to unload up to $300 million worth of distressed shopping centers, office buildings and hotels.

"We hope to make it the largest auction in the history of the world," said Jim Gall, chairman of the Miami-based auction house retained by the federal Resolution Trust Corp. (RTC) to run the sale.

The board also voted to allow federal agents in charge of managing S&L property to offer new discounts of 20 percent below appraised value as they try to sell off another 30,000 homes, condominiums, farms, resorts and other properties around the country.

The global auction is sure to have a Sunbelt flavor, since most of the skyscrapers and other speculative property the government acquired through the collapse of S&Ls is located in Texas, Florida, Arizona and California.

Gall said he expects to put together a satellite auction, in which an American auctioneer will take bids from potential buyers assembled in various American cities, as well at bidding sites in the Middle East, Asia and Europe.

Up to now, the largest auction in history is believed to be the Sotheby's sale of French impressionist art last November, in which $269 million worth of paintings including a $40.7 million Picasso were auctioned in about two hours.

The satellite auction will offer only commercial projects with appraised values of $1 million or more, and will accept bids starting at 70 percent of each property's appraised value.

Some fears were expressed by real estate interests that the coming sale would further depress the moribund commercial real estate market in the Southwest.

"We are obviously concerned about the auction approach because that does place a considerable amount of property on the market," said William North, executive vice president of the National Association of Realtors. "But we think that their base minimum price of 70 percent of appraised value is something the market can live with."

Regional auctions of commercial and residential property will be held later under the policy adopted by the board.

In its 4-0 decisions to approve auctions and discount sales, the RTC board hoped to speed up the disposition of the more than 30,000 pieces of hard-to-sell commercial and residential property which the federal government has gradually acquired as it took over failed S&Ls.

"It's time for us to move this property out as fast as we can still exercising some reasonable approach to the matter," said board member C. C. Hope Jr. "Getting rid of that property is the best thing for us and for the property and putting it back into production."

Southland Center will become biggest renovation project

■ A Dutch investor will spend almost $130 million to renovate the lackluster Southland Center in downtown Dallas, and some see it as positive sign of recovery.

Associated Press

DALLAS — The Southland Center, once Dallas's premier office address, has been sold for the second time in two years, this time to a Dutch investor who says he'll spend twice as much to renovate the almost-empty complex as he did to buy it.

Lars-Erik Magnusson, chief executive of Larmag Investments Group of Amsterdam, said Tuesday he had paid $190 million for the three-building complex in downtown Dallas.

Magnusson, in partnership with KTI Associates, said the purchase price of the building was about $60 million and he will spend $130 million on renovating the two office buildings and hotel, including replacing the turquoise-tile and florescent-light facade derided by locals.

"I think Dallas has had its worst years behind it," Magnusson said by telephone from his home in The Netherlands. "I've been looking at Dallas for a couple of years, but last year I felt it was too early to go in. This year I feel much more comfortable."

The largest building, the 42-story Southland Tower, was the tallest in Dallas when it was completed in 1959 by Southland Financial Corp. Its companion 31-story Skyway Tower was finished in 1981. The office buildings have about 1 million square feet of leasable space, but are only 30 percent occupied. The 508-room, 29-story Sheraton Dallas Hotel completes the complex.

The deal is the largest for the city's central business district since the real estate market collapsed in the mid-1980s, leaving new skyscrapers almost vacant and sending rental rates plummeting.

Boosters welcomed the news as the latest indication of recovery, but some said the deal's success depends on the refurbishing.

"The 'recladding' could dramatically increase the appeal of that building, if they can do all that work, and can get acceptance by the public as a new project rather than just a rehashing of the old project," said Bob Edge, executive vice president of Cushman & Wakefield of Texas Inc. real estate firm.

But Edge said, "They're going to have do one heck a job of retrofitting that building to get that kind of acceptance."

Magnusson, whose personal worth has been estimated at about $200 million, said he planned to begin work by the end of the year, with completion during 1992.

"I think that the lease market in Dallas

Decker Dawson honored

By John Paul Pitts
Business & Oil Editor

Tom Landry was "the only coach the Dallas Cowboys ever had," and Decker Dawson is the only Society of Exploration Geophysicists president that Midland has ever had.

Dawson, the current president of SEG, was recognized Wednesday for his contributions with a special award presented at the regular meeting of the Permian Basin Geophysical Society. The award was a framed photograph of Dawson, taken as he was making the presidential address at the Midwest Meeting of SEG in Midland earlier this year.

In making the award, Hal Pardue, vice president of Dawson Geophysical Co., called Dawson more than just a member. Pardue said Dawson, a charter member of the Permian Basin society, had contributed generously of his time and money to the support of the local society and to the Society of Exploration Geophysicists.

A graduate of the University of Oklahoma and a longtime Midland resident, Dawson was described as a booster of the City of Midland.

What stocks make up Dow Jones Average?

By Scott Burns

Q. Can you give an amateur a bit of information concerning the Dow Jones stocks? How many are there? How are they selected? Does the list remain more or less static? What is the criteria for inclusion on or exclusion from the list? How is their performance consolidated into meaningful information? — C.L., Closter, N.J.

Burns

A. There are 65 Dow Jones stocks. The ones you hear about most often are the 30 stocks that comprise the Dow Jones Industrial Average. Another list of 20 stocks makes up the Dow Jones Transportation Average. And a third list of 15 stocks makes up the Dow Jones Utilities Average.

The stocks in these averages are very large companies whose performance is a reasonable proxy for the entire economy. While many observers feel the Dow Jones is not fully representative of the economy or investment opportunities, it remains that the 30 stocks in the Dow Jones Industrial Average represent a great deal of investment wealth. Their total value is around $600 billion. By way of comparison, the new Fortune 500 Industrials list shows a total market value of $1,376 billion.

Although the lists don't overlap, eg. ATT, American Express, McDonalds, Primerica, Sears, and Woolworth are included in the Dow but excluded from the Fortune 500, you can get an idea of just how much wealth and power is represented by a handful of companies by contemplating a single fact: the profits of General Motors, $4.2 billion in 1989, were larger than the total market value of smaller Dow Jones Average companies such as Bethlehem Steel, Goodyear Tire, Navistar, Primerica, Union Carbide, and Woolworth.

Every time a substitution is made in the Dow there are arguments about its suitability. Many have questioned, for instance, the inclusion of McDonalds in a list of industrial companies.

For more information on the Dow stocks, I suggest you take a look at the weekly "Market Laboratory" at the back of Barron's. In recent years there has been a proliferation of indices and subindices to represent various markets or segments of markets. What does it mean? As computers make everything easier, observers try to create more statistical "windows" on the markets. Each is useful. And each has limitations.

Being part of an index, even a select index such as the Dow 30 industrials, does not mean that all companies are alike. According to research by David Tripple, who manages Pioneer II mutual fund, $10,000 invested in Phillip Morris in 1970 would have grown to $698,132 by the end of 1989 if you had reinvested all dividends; the same amount invested in Navistar would has shrunk to $3,074. While those are incredible extremes, the same research shows that you had an 80 percent chance of picking a stock with a long term return of 8 percent a year or better; a two thirds chance of enjoying a long term return of 9 percent or better; and a one third chance of enjoying a long term return of 13 percent or better.

Q. My wife is 58 and does not work. I am 61 and on total disability, $1040 a month. My home, valued at $150,000 is paid for. We own another building with two apartments valued at $85,000 and get $600 a month in rent. I have $8,000 in stock, $21,000 in IRAs, $11,000 in savings. With what we have could we possibly live comfortably?

My other question is I would like to invest $65,000 to get tax-free monthly dividends. Is it possible that you could tell me how to do that? I am not interested in stocks or mutual funds. — J. T., Easton, Pa.

A. To have a virtually riskless source of tax-free income you would need to invest in a money market mutual fund

Analysis

By CHET CURRIER
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market drifted through a mixed session Wednesday, pausing after more than a week of steady gains.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, up 93.83 points over the past seven sessions, slipped 0.68 to 2,732.88.

Advancing issues just barely nosed out declines in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed stocks, with 760 up, 733 down and 501 unchanged.

Volume on the floor of the Big Board came to 152.22 million shares, against 144.23 million in the previous session. Nationwide, consolidated volume in NYSE-listed issues, including trades in those stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, totaled 183.60 million shares.

Interest rates moved higher in the credit markets. Prices of long-term government bonds dropped about $5 for each $1,000 in face value, increasing their yields to the 8.86 percent-8.90 percent range.

Analysts said both the stock and bond markets seemed to be on hold while investors watched the progress of the Treasury's quarterly auction of bonds and notes.

A warm reception was reported Tuesday for the first of the offering's three installments, a $10.5 billion sale of three-year notes.

The financing continued Wednesday with the sale of $10 billion in 10-year notes, which went for an average yield of 8.88 percent in what analysts described as positive results. It winds up with $10 billion in 30-year bonds on Thursday.

Among actively traded blue chips, Bristol Myers-Squibb rose ½ to 58½; International Business Machines gained ⅛ to 111¼; Philip Morris was unchanged at 43¾, and Westinghouse Electric was down 1½ at 74.

Sotheby's Holdings fell 3⅛ to 16½. A Tuesday night sale of contemporary art at the auction firm brought results that were reported to be sharply below expectations.

Gold and silver mining stocks were broadly higher, aided by signs of a rebound in the recently depressed precious-metals markets. Gold for this month's delivery rose $1.90 to $371.90 an ounce on the Commodity Exchange in New York.

ASA Ltd. rose 1¾ to 49¾; Homestake Mining 1 to 18; Newmont Gold 2¼ to 42¾; Battle Mountain Gold ¾ to 13¼, and Hecla Mining ⅝ to 12⅛.

Utility issues extended their recent rally amid hopes that interest rates might have topped out. Dow Jones's average of 15 utility stocks rose 1.69 to 213.78.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks gained .38 to 187.49.

DALLAS: Southland Center set for major renovation will be tighter in the next 18 months and that gives me just the time I need to renovate," he said. "I'm sure I can deliver top class buildings."

(From 9C)

The purchase "is another piece of the recovery," said Larry Fonts, president of the Central Dallas Association, a downtown business group. "It is a big deal."

Magnusson, who has invested more than $2 billion in Europe, is a relative newcomer to U.S. real estate, paying $630 million last year for three trophy properties in New York and Chicago.

He said the Southland Center purchase, in partnership another investment firm, is the first for Maglantic Holding, a subsidiary of his Larmag Investments Group.

The center once was the headquarters for Southland Life Insurance Co., later a subsidiary of Southland Financial, an insurance company owned by Dallas's prominent Carpenter family. The life insurance company was sold in 1964, and the office complex followed in 1968 in a deal with Ashton Development Corp., a partnership owned by Saudi Arabian investors and New York investor Ian Kean.

While domestic geophysical activity is at an all time low, he said activity overseas was still strong.

BURNS: Looking at Dow

market mutual fund that specializes in short term tax-free obligations. You can arrange, in these funds, for a monthly income check. That's the good news.

Recently the average tax-free money market fund provided a yield of 5.57 percent. That isn't much of a yield and it won't do much for you. From the figures you provided, your income is taxed at no more than 15 percent which means the equivalent taxable yield is only 6.55 percent, far less than you can actually get in a taxable money fund.

Let me put this in bald dollars and cents:

—If you invest $65,000 in a tax free money market fund, you will have a monthly income of $301.71;

—If you invest $65,000 in the average TAXABLE government money market fund (recent average yield 7.80 percent), you will have a pre-tax monthly income of at least $422.50 and an after tax income of at least $359.13;

—If you invest the same amount in one of the higher yield taxable government money market funds, you will have a pre-tax monthly income of $470 and an after tax income of about $399 a month.

The difference is $60 to $100 a month in spendable income, a fact that tells me you should be investing for taxable income even it means filling out a tax return and writing a check to the federal government.

Your second question, whether you can live comfortably, is harder to answer.

You've got $1040 a month in disability income and $275,000 in real estate and financial assets. How comfortable you are on that depends on where you live and how much of your resources are devoted to real estate. Odds are you could materially improve your standard of living by moving to an area that would allow you to reduce your real estate commitment.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Age 59 1/2, withdraw some, none from IRA

By Bill Doyle

Q. My individual retirement account is in certificates of deposit and a money market deposit account at my bank. I reached age 59 1/2 this month and now plan to have the interest from my IRAs transferred to my regular checking account, which is not an IRA, each month.

Will this have any bearing on the mandatory IRA withdrawals I make after age 70 1/2?

A. None at all. Between ages 59 1/2 and 70 1/2, you can take any amount you please — or none — out of your IRAs. After you pass 70 1/2, you will be required to start IRA withdrawals based on your life expectancy or the joint expectancy of you and your IRA beneficiary. Those mandatory withdrawals must start by April 1 following the year in which you turn 70 1/2.

Doyle

Tables telling how much you must withdraw after age 70 1/2 are found in Internal Revenue Service Publication 590, "Individual Retirement Arrangements." Withdrawals you have made prior to age 70 1/2 don't change those required withdrawals.

If you fail to make the required withdrawals after 70 1/2, you will be subject to a 50 percent tax on the amount you should have taken out.

Q. The cutoff date for putting money into an IRA is age 701/2. I learned from your column that self-employed persons can continue making contributions to their Keogh retirement plans after 701/2.

I am 71 and still a part-time, self-employed consultant. I intend to keep putting 20 percent of my self-employed income into my Keogh plan. Do I have to make withdrawals from my Keogh plan at the same rate as from an IRA?

A. Yes. Even though you are allowed to continue making tax-deferred contributions to you Keogh plan that doesn't change the fact that you must begin making withdrawals — on the same schedule as IRA withdrawals.

This rule will work out to your advantage. At 71, your life expectancy is 15.3 years. So, assuming your withdrawals are based on your life expectancy alone, this year you must take out of your Keogh plan the balance of the account as of January 1 divided by 15.3. Next year, that number dips to 14.6. Life expectancy does not drop a full year for each year you survive.

The money taken out of IRAs and Keogh plans is taxable as ordinary income. But it's a virtual certainty you are saving more tax dollars by continuing to make Keogh contributions.

Q. My wife is the beneficiary of my retirement plan, which operates under rules similar to an IRA. I am 72. When I die, will the amount remaining in my retirement plan have to go through probate?

A. No. IRAs are not subject to the time-consuming and expensive probate process for the simple reason that IRAs are in trust form. Retirement plans and other things in beneficiary form also escape probate. So do assets in joint ownership and co-ownership.

But a word of caution. Keeping things out of probate does not necessarily mean they escape all taxes. Depending on the details of the specific assets, federal estate and state inheritance and/or estate taxes might be due.

However, if your retirement plan follows IRA rules, there will be no estate tax bite. Instead, your wife will have to pay income tax on the retirement plan money as she receives it.

Q. In reply to a couple who intend to make IRA withdrawals, you wrote: "Just don't take so much out that the IRA balance would be down to zero while either of you is still alive."

Why did you give that advice?

A. Because doing otherwise would leave them broke and on their financial uppers in their old age.

'Nothing to wear' issue confuses consumers

By Lena Williams
N.Y. Times News Service

Barbara Rodman stopped wearing her full-length mink coat last winter. The animal-rights advocates had finally gotten to her, and soon she began to feel good about her new-found social consciousness.

Then she was maligned by an animal lover for sporting a coat, pants and boots in black leather. After all, where did she think leather came from, she was asked.

Mrs. Rodman, a retired accountant who lives in Washington, took offense.

"The woman who was criticizing me about my leather coat was dripping in diamonds and gold," Mrs. Rodman said. "I asked her if she knew that her diamond earrings and her engagement ring and that gold watch she was so proud of were probably mined in South Africa. She hadn't thought about that."

Fur, leather and jewelry, along with other items of clothing or adornment, are the targets of diverse — and sometimes competing — special-interest groups seeking to encourage people to be conscious of social concerns when they shop for their wardrobes.

But some consumers say the choices have become so complicated that if they satisfied the critics they would be walking around with nothing on their backs.

SO WHAT is a well-intentioned person supposed to do?

Those opposed to the use of animal materials suggest wearing natural fabrics like cotton, or synthetics like nylons and polyester.

But environmentalists say synthetic materials and the chemicals used in processing them causes considerable harm to the earth's atmosphere and pollutes water supplies.

As for cotton, conservationists say it exhausts soil, falls victim to pests and requires high quantities of fertilizers and pesticides, not to mention all the toxic dyes, formaldehyde finishes and fire retardants it may bear, residues that are harmful to humans.

And the list is growing.

Some groups like the Animal Liberation Front, an underground movement among animal-rights advocates, have made a case against wearing wool, saying that sheep are often nicked during shearing and that some freeze to death after being shorn.

Most animal-rights groups say goose down is out because removing down causes considerable pain to animals.

Silk is shunned by some people because its manufacture involves killing silkworms and by others because formaldehyde finishes may be used.

"Pretty soon, we'll be back to paper dresses, but only if the paper is recyclable," said one woman who asked that her name not be used because she did not want to offend anyone's sensitivities.

JEWELRY AND health and beauty aids have also come under attack.

Many human-rights advocates and black Americans like Mrs. Rodman are opposed to wearing diamonds and gold because 20 percent of the world's diamonds and 80 percent of its gold are mined in South Africa.

Human-rights groups like TransAfrica, based in Washington, and Amnesty International, based in London, while not leading the charge on this issue, say they are receptive to the idea of individual acts of protest.

Conservationists focus their efforts on protecting endangered species. Those particularly concerned with elephants have asked Americans not to buy or wear ivory.

Animal-rights groups like People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals, based in Washington, have made an argument against using cosmetics and toiletries that are tested on animals or that contain ingredients derived from animals.

"If you're not confused, something's wrong," said Dr. Strachan Donnelley, director of education at the Hastings Institute of Society, Ethics and the Life Sciences in Hastings-on-Hudson, N.Y. "I think we have to find a way to balance human, animal and environmental issues. But that's easy to say; hard to accomplish.

"We're talking about extremely complex issues." added Donnelley, who is directing a project at the institute on ethical guidelines for animal experimentation.

"One concerns the increasing ethical imperative to uphold the integrity of the environment and prevent ecological disaster. A second issue concerns animal rights; showing an ethical concern for animals and not necessarily exploiting them or using them for our own whims. Then there are those concerned with human welfare. I think that most of us find ourselves in the troubled middle, trying to maintain a balance."

DESPITE SCATTERED evidence that consumers are becoming more socially responsible in their buying habits, it is difficult to measure how widespread these changes are or whether such shifts in attitudes and behavior are results of lobbying efforts and public awareness campaigns by private interest groups.

But some of the companies that provide products made from natural ingredients and those that have not been tested on animals say the proof is in their growing inventories and lists of clients.

Frank Zigrang, owner of Heartland Productions Ltd. in Dakota City, Iowa, said his business, which makes non-leather shoes, had grown considerably since it opened two years ago. He now fills more than 100 orders a month now, as against 10 to 15 pairs of shoes a month in the beginning.

Similarly, Barbara Bloomfield, general manager of One World Trading Co., a firm that sells handwoven men's and women's apparel made of natural fabric by Mayans in Guatemala, said sales in 1988 were up 58 percent over 1987.

"There is a minority of consumers who feel very strongly about the social responsibility of companies whose products they purchase, and those who are more sensitive about the wearing of furs or other endangered species," said Steve Brobeck, executive director of the Consumer Federation of America, an umbrella organization for 240 consumer groups.

"Yet, I suspect very few would be reluctant to purchase products like gold or diamonds because of its possible origins."

THE BOTTOM line for most consumers, he said, is whether a product works, how much it costs and how safe it is.

Some consumers have devised their own system for coping with today's more socially conscious society.

"I draw the line at cruelty to animals," said Ellie Doctorow of New Rochelle, N.Y. "I'm against the abuse of animals. But I don't decide whether or not to buy something simply because it comes from an animal."

Even some animal-rights advocates say they have trouble deciding what to wear.

"It is difficult to be a purist," conceded Fernando Ariza, an animal-rights advocate who became a vegetarian several years ago and gave away all of his leather apparel two years ago. "I try to wear only natural fibers, cotton and wool, and non-leather shoes. I understand the arguments against that. I don't know, it's a difficult situation."

SOME CONSUMER groups fear a backlash from an American public that is overwhelmed by an increasing emphasis on watching what is worn or eaten.

Others see a degree of self-righteous hypocrisy in America's growing preoccupation with the moral responsibility to animals and the exploitation of nature for humankind.

"All these movie stars and rock stars who are out there burning their furs and goose down jackets can afford to do so," said Rodney Barrett, a graphic artist who lives in Saddle River, N.J., and supports efforts to protect the environment.

"But a lot of people can't afford to throw away clothes just because someone else objects to them. We'd be left with nothing to wear."

Regardless of where one's sympathies lie, advocates of socially responsible dressing say there are ways for people to make a statement without going to extremes.

There has been a proliferation of mail-order houses around the nation that specialize in products made of natural fibers and non-leather goods as well as health and beauty supplies that are not made from animal by-products or tested on animals.

A BOOKLET published by the Council on Economic Priorities, a research group in New York, called "Shopping for a Better World," provides consumers with a look at 138 companies and 1,300 products, evaluating them on such issues as animal testing, minority advancement, protection of the environment, South Africa, community outreach and charitable contributions.

Alice Tepper Marlin, executive director of the council, said that of 500 consumers who have responded so far to a questionnaire by the organization, 80 percent said they changed their shopping habits after reading the guide.

Still, there are those who feel the entire situation has gone from the sublime to the ridiculous.

"Whatever happened to freedom of choice?" Mrs. Rodman said. "You spend enough time each day trying to figure out what to wear. Little things like the weather, is it clean, do I have to iron it, is it appropriate. My goodness, if you've got to start thinking about every poor animal that may have suffered to put clothes on your back, you'll end up wearing a burlap bag."

Maybe not. Burlap comes from two plants, jute or hemp.

Some conservationists and botanists say there is evidence that plant life suffers tremendous harm and trauma when its natural growth process is eroded or forcibly altered.

Fifteen minutes of fame is more than most people deserve

By Erma Bombeck

I was watching a sportscaster the other night giving a live report on TV. Well, sort of. Mostly I was distracted by the 15 or 20 kids popping over his shoulder, waving their arms and capturing their 15 minutes of fame promised by Andy Warhol.

Bombeck

It's amazing how that little red light on the television camera can activate the "star gene" in everyone. Game-show contestants who are coached to say two words, "Big money," and shut up, look into the camera and add, "I want to say hi to my wonderful husband, Leroy, and my three beautiful children. Hi, Mitzi, Marksy and Todd."

There was a time when the only way you could make it to celebritydom was to become a movie star. Not any more. It's getting easier. If you're a secretary, shred something; a lawyer, steal something; an evangelist, cry; or a sports figure, drop off at the Betty Ford clinic for a week or two.

Author Mifflin Lowe has even written a small handbook on "How to Be a Celebrity." He has wonderful advice for celebrity authors: "Insult a major religion. Islam would do nicely." He advises talk-show guests: "As soon as you sit down, mention a city. Any city. At least 50 people will applaud."

Lowe tells you how to get there, but he doesn't tell you how to stay on top. In New York one day, I was waiting in front of my hotel when a photographer asked me to step aside. A limo approached and a dog got out as the photographer shot a roll or two of film. I asked the doorman, "Who's that?" He said, "The dog who appeared in 'Down and Out in Beverly Hills.'"

Where is that dog now? Hey, baby, two weeks at Betty Ford's clinic and he'll be back on top again.

Cosmetic business makes changes to help keep environment beautiful

Associated Press

The beauty business has become environment-conscious with everything from moisturizer to mascara being rethought and possibly reformulated.

Beauty in the '90s, according to an article in a recent issue of Harper's Bazaar, will encompass all aspects of the new naturalism, starting with ingredients.

There was a time when natural elements like aloe vera, cocoa butter and jojoba were considered the stuff of old wives' tales or folk medicine, but now the scenario has changed.

Not only do plant and mineral extracts have an emotional appeal, but laboratory experiments are confirming that they can be at least as effective as man-made substances.

Riding this wave of clinical evidence, the practice of aromatherapy — the therapeutic use of botanicals — gradually is moving toward the mainstream.

Among the findings, wound-healing studies indicate that flower essences control bacteria and fungus growth and help skin regenerate faster than synthetic antiseptics do.

Camomile, now recognized as an important anti-inflammatory, is included in many products.

Gingko biloba, the oldest tree known to man, contains high levels of flavonoids, anti-oxidants that play a key role in keeping skin youthful.

Beauty companies are incorporating a number of essential oils and extracts in their skin- and hair-care lines.

Moisturizing peach kernel, grape seed, flax seed and rice bran oils are becoming almost commonplace in body creams, shampoos and conditioners.

Marketers of preparations that are closer to the cutting edge of naturalism have found that black currant extract, organically grown carrots, kaolin clay, sandalwood powder and calendula can be beneficial in facial masks, scrubs and cleansers, balancing areas that are too oily or too dry.

Petroleum-based items, whose processing endangers the ozone, are declining. Beeswax and rosewax make excellent replacements.

Cosmetics can be developed without artificial dyes, using plant-and mineral-derived coloring to deliver a range of shades.

Packaging is another important environmental issue. Just as fast food companies are seeking ways to recycle or eliminate plastic containers, the beauty industry is researching tubes, compacts and bottles that won't add to the waste crisis.

Manufacturers are taking a critical view of today's overpackaged products and challenging their research and development departments and suppliers to come up with environmentally responsible materials such as plastics that are bio- or photo-degradable.

Several firms are using unbleached, unprocessed and recycled paper and cardboard, and eliminating plastic outer wraps.

Consumer Groups Storm Local Grocery Stores!
Stores point finger at newspaper
Today saw one of the largest consumer responses of the week to offers made by local grocery stores for discounted prices. Across the city, shoppers were redeeming coupons cut from the local paper in record numbers.
"We know any offer we make will be highlighted most by the newspaper," commented a grocery store spokesman. "Our goal is simply to inform the consumer that these discounts are available. We are confident they will respond if they see it in the paper." His statement was backed by recent Consumer Data Service reports that indicated grocery store ads triple volume on discounted items and double volume on regularly priced items. It also revealed grocery ads are read by well over 70% of newspaper readers.
Grocery store representatives unanimously agreed that newspaper advertising was the only way to get immediate consumer response. One grocer remarked, "Most people read the paper, add a bunch of those readers clip our coupons. It's that simple." His comments reflect the latest known Manufacturer's Coupon Center report which stated that over 80% of all families use coupons.
"When consumers want more for their money, they always go to the newspaper," a grocery official said. When pressed by reporters for the best offer he could make to the consumers he replied, "Look in the paper, it's all right there. Green leaf lettuce, two heads for 79¢ ... with a coupon of course."
Grocer claims local newspaper "totally responsible" for consumer rush
"We make great offers in our newspaper ads every week, and we always get great response."

DEAR ABBY

Birth mom, adoptive mom can each claim to be 'real'

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: In May 1971, my father gave me one of your columns, because at the time I was faced with the most difficult decision of my life — whether or not to place my son for adoption. This column, which I am enclosing, helped me to make the right decision.

Van Buren

Abby, it is 19 years later, and now I can part with this precious article because my son and his parents have made our reunion possible! That little boy I parted with 19 years ago wanted to meet his birth mother, so his parents contacted me, asking if I wanted to meet him, and them. We all agreed to meet, and words cannot express now what it felt like to finally hold my son in my arms again!

There is no longer a void in my life; it is filled with my loving son, his wife and their son, my newly born grandson!

A simple "thank you" is not enough. You have truly touched my heart and soul. May God bless you and your work. — ANOTHER UNWED MOTHER

DEAR UNWED MOTHER: I'm delighted to reprint the two letters in the column you enclosed:

DEAR ABBY: My 7-year-old son, when told he was adopted, asked the inevitable question: "Then, Mamma, does that mean you're not my real mother?"

"Well, let's see," I said. "Here, pinch me real hard and we'll see if I'm real or not." He pinched, I squealed, and we both had a good laugh. A happy, frank discussion followed.

But the most wonderful part is that this precious son of mine has two mothers. I have had the privilege of rocking him, feeding him and watching him grow into an adorable 7-year-old. Yes, I am his "real" mother and don't you dare call me less.

But no less real is the little girl who refused to have an abortion, insisting, "This little life inside me has as much right to live as I." The little girl who looked the social worker in the eye and said, "This adoption will work, because I am doing it for his sake, and I don't ever intend to hurt him by interfering with his life." That brave little girl has been true to her word for seven years.

Someday when he is grown to a big, strapping 6-footer, if his appearance in her life would not hurt the children she is now bearing for herself, I should be happy to think that I had so taught him to love and respect the thought of her that he would take her in his big arms and whisper, "Mother, I love you."

She has every right to his love. And he will be a better man if he proves wise enough to know it. — HIS OTHER MOTHER

DEAR ABBY: Not too long ago, a young boy celebrated his 14th birthday. I'm sure he had a birthday cake. He actually had two because I also baked him one and put 14 candles on it.

This boy was born to me out of wedlock. I was 17 years old and decided it would be best for Stevie if I gave him up for adoption. Stevie is not his name now, but that's the name I gave him for the short time he was mine. I have no regrets because I know that my son has a wonderful home with parents who love him. To them I want to say, thank you for opening up your hearts and home to my son. I send my dearest love to you, and him. — STEVIE'S OTHER MOTHER

What teen-agers need to know about sex, drugs, AIDS and getting along with their peers and parents is now in Abby's updated, expanded booklet, "What Every Teen Should Know." To order, send a long, business-size, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Teen Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. Some newspapers critical of pope's visit to Mexico

By [illegible] (AP) [illegible] sharp tongues ca[illegible] amid the cheering th[illegible] John Paul II in [illegible] voices cl[illegible] ing the rul[illegible] ing [illegible] political mi[illegible] about the ch[illegible] political accom[illegible] in power fo[illegible] olic policy, the exclusivity of the first papal Mass on Sunday and the commercial hoopla surrounding the pontiff's eight-day visit.

They are singing counterpoint to the chant that has echoed through the streets, "John Paul II, The whole world loves you."

Always in Mexico, some of the most biting commentary was made by editorial cartoonists.

Fisgu, one of Mexico's cheekiest, drew only the outline of the pope. The words inside said: "A well-drawn likeness of the pope was going to appear here but for the time being I prefer not to publish it. A certified copy of the original will be sent those kind readers who send a postal money order for 50,000 pesos."

The conservative, pro-government newspaper Excelsior ran a cartoon about church opposition to birth control that showed the pontiff's 747 jetliner approaching Mexico amid a huge flock of smiling storks.

Political analyst Adolfo Gilly, meanwhile, described the pope in a front-page piece in the daily La Jornada as "that great priest of the Old Testament who goes around the world preaching 'submission theology,' " as opposed to "liberation theology," a doctrine that holds the church must actively involve itself in the fight for social justice.

The pope has also been criticized for his support of celebrations of the 500th anniversary of Christianity in the Americas, set for 1992. Indian activists say the church served as an agent of the Conquest, which decimated their population and shredded their culture.

El Financiero, Mexico's business daily, noted that only the well-connected and the affluent got tickets to the Basilica of Guadalupe for the pope's Sunday Mass.

The shrine was a sea of lace, pearls and patent leather pumps, of ostentatiously jeweled rosaries, silk ties and soft wool suits.

Thousands of others, patient in their humble clothes, had to stand behind police barricades outside in the rain.

"Do you know what happened in those streets you toured in your covered car?" the daily La Jornada later asked the pontiff.

Even the government daily, El Nacional, took note of the plight of the masses.

"Hours of waiting? Was it worth it to see the pope for less than a minute?" ran one of its headlines Monday.

The pope and President Carlos Salinas de Gortari have been sharply criticized for striking what some see as a rather unholy alliance. The cartoonist Helguera, for instance, drew a grassly grinning pontiff holding a crucifix superimposed over the flag of the Institutional Revolutionary Party, or PRI, which has ruled Mexico for 61 years.

"Use and Abuse," it said.

The PRI clearly hopes to make political points with the papal visit and the prospect of establishing formal relations with the Vatican.

The church, which supported conservatives and opposed social reform, lost its property and many of its rights between 1859 and 1926.

Church officials have said they would welcome amendments to a constitution that now forbids the church to own property, bans religious education, outlaws clerical garb in public and bars priests from voting.

Most of those restrictions are winked at in practice nowadays, but opposition politicians have criticized the PRI for what they say is a cynical attempt to shore up its flagging support by engineering a formal rapprochement with the church.

There is still enough opposition in Congress to make Salinas reluctant to try to ram through constitutional changes, but normalizing relations with the Vatican would not require that.

"The whole world can see the political intentions in all this," observed leftist opposition leader Cuauhtemoc Cardenas, who ran second to Salinas in a fraud-tainted 1988 presidential election.

Vets refuse to attend ceremony

PARIS (AP) — Vice President Dan Quayle hailed America's World War II troops Wednesday as heroes who helped create a unified Europe, but some veterans boycotted a ceremony because of complaints about Quayle's military record.

Quayle also held security talks with President Francois Mitterrand and urged greater cooperation between the United States and Europe on space.

He left for Washington in the late afternoon, completing his first European tour since being elected in 1988.

Quayle opened the day by praising former President Dwight Eisenhower in remarks to about two dozen members of the American Legion of Paris, some of whom fought under Eisenhower when he served as Supreme Allied Commander.

"Eisenhower foresaw that the Europe that existed in his time must change to reflect the fundamental principles that these heroes fought for, principles that the United States and France have shared for some 200 years," he said.

But one legionnaire said several people in his 750-member organization refused to attend the ceremony because they believed Quayle avoided combat duty during the Vietnam War by joining the Indiana National Guard, an accusation that arose during the 1988 presidential campaign.

"But he could have gone to Vietnam," the veteran said. "The Massachusetts National Guard was called up and they took heavy casualties because of bad training."

Roger Lamtgne, a heavily decorated member of the 101st Army division that parachuted into Normandy on D-Day, called his views on Quayle's military record "personal."

"But I will say that I think a man owes at least one time in his life to his country," said Lamtgne, a Lewiston [illegible] who sported an "I like Ike" [illegible] his Bronze Star and Purple [illegible] during the D-Day landings.

Quayle's talks with [illegible] followed the April 19 summit in [illegible] the French leader and [illegible]

"Things are changing in Europe," Quayle said after the 45-minute meeting. "There is changing on the positive side of the ledger. President Mitterrand has a vision of where Europe should be going. His views are not only listened to, but solicited."

U.S., Iran may be in accord on small claims

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States and Iran have reached tentative agreement to settle 2,370 U.S. small claims pending against Iran since the 1979 Islamic revolution for $105 million, the State Department announced Wednesday.

Negotiators for both countries also agreed to settle 108 Iranian claims against the United States and U.S. companies and individuals for $400,000, deputy spokesman Richard Boucher said.

The text of the agreement settling claims of up to $250,000 remains to be worked out, signed and ratified by the Iran-United States Claims Tribunal which was established under the 1981 Algiers Accord which resulted in the release of U.S. hostages held by Iranian militants at the U.S. Embassy in Tehran.

"The proposed settlement is the results of many months of effort," Boucher said, noting that negotiators discussed the issue at meetings held almost every month since last April.

Meanwhile, a department official, who commented on condition he not be identified, said he could not predict whether the agreement will result in the release of U.S. hostages held in Lebanon.

Department officials have said repeatedly that there is no link between the negotiations to settle the claims and the hostage situation. They maintain that the talks at The Hague in the Netherlands are not a forum in which hostages are discussed.

The Bush administration has repeatedly declared it will make no deals to secure the release of the six remaining hostages, whose captors are believed susceptible to Iranian influence.

Nonetheless, the final settlement of the claims issue could remove a long-standing irritant in U.S.-Iranian relations.

Boucher said some of the claims now near settlement involve U.S. government claims, including those involving loans to Iran made by the Agency for International Development.

Claims also include those for private U.S. property expropriated by Iran and for goods and services which were delivered but never paid for.

Still outstanding are claims by Iran for U.S. military equipment for which it contracted but did not receive. Iran in 1979 cancelled contracts for $9 billion in weapons, including four destroyers under construction that were later taken over by the U.S. Navy. The Tehran government has since claimed $11 billion for undelivered gear.

Also outstanding are oil claims by major U.S. firms for properties expropriated by the revolutionary government.

OIL PLUG SLIPPED AWAY?

Dear Tom and Ray:

Last Wednesday I had the oil changed on my 1988 Hyundai Excel at one of those "10-minute oil change" places. By Saturday, I had driven less than a hundred miles when the oil light came on and stayed on. I pulled into the next gas station and proceeded to add a quart of oil. As fast as I put the oil into the top of the engine, it came out the bottom of the engine. The gas-station attendant looked underneath and told me that my oil plug had done a disappearing act. I went back and asked Mr. 10-Minute Oil Changer if it was possible that the oil plug was left loose and the bumps and vibrations shook it looser until it finally fell out. His answer was, "Impossible. Someone must be playing games with you and your car." My response to him was, "Two things are impossible. One, it's impossible for someone to tamper with the car since it is always garaged and safe from anyone who would be dumb enough to play that type of cruel prank. Two, it's impossible for me to trust you with my car again. Nice doing business with you. Bye." Well, is my theory possible? What's your guess? — Carl RAY: Hey Carl, was Mr. 10-Minute Oil Changer wearing a top hat and spats when you talked to him? Because he was giving you a song and dance.

TOM: The probability that your explanation is correct is about 99.9 percent. We've seen it happen before, and we can't imagine why someone would play games with your oil plug. What does he think, that the neighborhood kids ran out of marbles, and borrowed your oil plug for the final shot?

RAY: So we have good news and bad news for you, Carl. The bad news is that you've probably fried your engine by driving it after the oil had drained out. Even driving for just a few minutes (to the next gas station, for instance) without any oil can ruin an engine. Even if yours still runs, significant damage has probably been done.

TOM: The good news is it was only a Hyundai Excel, and now you have an unexpected opportunity to trade up.

RAY: We also think you let Mr. 10-Minute Oil Changer off too easily. First of all, he's probably insured for mistakes like this. If he refuses to settle with you, take him to court. Your receipt proves that he had his hands on the oil plug just miles before it disappeared. If you can get the gas station attendant to testify that it was, in fact, missing when you drove in, you should have an open-and-shut case. Consumers win cases like this all the time.

TOM: This is also an example of another one of the famous Click and Clack Great Unyielding Truths (GUTS): "It's the impatient person who works the longest." It takes time to do things properly. It's more important that a job be done right than done in 10 minutes or less. Next time, I'd go to Mr. Half-Hour Oil Changer. Not only will you have time to finish the sports pages while you wait, but HE'LL have time to make sure the drain plug is tight before he gives you back your car.
