MX missile expected to survive last vote

By LAWRENCE L. KNUTSON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill, all but conceding defeat, said today he expects President Reagan to win in the last of four congressional votes crucial to the MX missile.

With the vote just over an hour away, O'Neill said he continues to "hope against hope" that the $1.5 billion appropriation would be defeated. But he conceded that two Democrats who voted against the MX on Tuesday would not be on hand today.

"So we lose two votes," O'Neill said. He did not name the two Democrats or give their reasons for not attending the fourth and final congressional MX vote.

The speaker said that while he had some hope of convincing three Republicans to vote against the appropriation, "I would have to assume the White House has those three pretty well in line," he said.

Sixty-one Democrats voted with the 219-213 majority in the initial House test on MX and O'Neill indicated he has little chance of turning any of them around.

Using an MX analogy, O'Neill joked that those votes "have been hardened in the silo."

He was asked directly if he saw any prospects for a reversal.

"I always hate to declare against myself," he replied. "I hope against hope."

But he added that, "I don't anticipate any changes."

On Wednesday, O'Neill said he was was making "an all-out effort" to orchestrate an upset to stop the release of the money to build a second installment of 21 of the intercontinental nuclear weapons.

But House Majority Leader Jim Wright of Texas said Reagan clearly has the support he needs in the narrowly divided House to slip the MX money past its final legislative roadblock.

Reagan was expected to continue lobbying by telephone even though he was scheduled to be in New York City at the time of the vote.

"There is a chance, but it's a hard chance," for the House to reverse itself, said Fred Wertheimer, president of Common Cause and a leading anti-MX lobbyist.

The House voted 219 to 213 Tuesday night to authorize the MX spending, a step some House members contended is sufficient to show American resolve and to maintain the weapon as a bargaining chip at U.S.-Soviet arms control talks in Geneva.

They urged the House to bar actual appropriations for the weapon.

But Wright said, "I don't know any reason to believe that the vote would be substantially different on appropriations than on authorization."

Meanwhile, Sen. John Glenn, D-Ohio, urged House members to defeat an MX system he said is too expensive and neither an effective deterrent to a Soviet attack nor an important bargaining chip at arms control talks.

"Nobody likes to change their vote, and no Democrat wants to be painted as weak on defense," Glenn said in a letter to the 61 House Democrats who voted for the MX system on Tuesday.

But he said new Air Force figures indicate that each MX missile will cost at least $254 million when the price is adjusted to include the "super hardening" of the protective silos they will be placed in.

MX is not a deterrent to Soviet attack because it is vulnerable to such a strike, Glenn said.

Loeffler's role in MX missile lobby pays off

WASHINGTON — Rep. Tom Loeffler, R-Hunt, worked into the night in recent weeks trying to persuade House colleagues that the MX missile is a vital "bargaining chip" in arms control negotiations.

House Republican leaders, including Loeffler — the chief deputy whip — arranged convoys of buses to the White House where congressmen were entreated by the president himself not to "cut the legs from the bargaining table."

The president asked chief arms negotiator Max Kampelman to return from Geneva for special, low-key briefings earlier this week.

Some undecided congressmen left the White House with the impression they could expect nice things to come their way if they helped the president with this important vote.

It paid off in a major victory for the president late Tuesday when the House voted 219-213 to release $1.5 billion for 21 additional missiles.

Texans voted 27-7 to authorize production of the weapons, already approved in the fiscal 1985 budget but "fenced off" until released by a second approval after a presidential request.

Congress in 1983 had approved production funds for the first 21 of the multiple-warhead missiles that probably will be based in hardened, existing Minuteman silos. All told, the president wants 223 MX missiles built and 100 deployed, at a total cost of more than $40 billion.

Panel of judges to rule on April 6 city election

By MARK LEWIS
Staff Writer

A hastily assembled panel of three federal judges was to convene today in Midland to decide the fate of the April 6 city election.

Two Midland minority groups are seeking an injunction delaying the election until the Justice Department has approved the ballot language, a move which city officials said could put the election off until August or later.

The federal agency has 60 days to consider the pre-clearance submission it received from the city on March 15, and U.S. District Judge Lucius D. Bunton predicted Wednesday a decision probably would not be forthcoming from Washington, D.C., until the middle of May.

"You can never get any sort of expedited hearing from the Justice Department," Bunton said. "Those folks are going to take their 60 days."

Since state law requires that absentee balloting begin 20 days before the election day, that would delay the election until at least mid-August, and possibly later if any new submissions must be made, city officials said.

Mayor G. Thane Akins led a delegation of city officials which crowded into Bunton's court for a 9 a.m. hearing Wednesday. Also present were Edia Hernandez, president of the League of United Latin American Citizens in Midland; Charlie Jackson, president of the Black Advisory Council; and other representatives of the two minority organizations.

The two sides were represented by the same lawyers who had advised them during negotiations which settled a single-member-district suit out of court in December. The city agreed then to switch from five at-large council seats to four single-member district seats and two at-large seats. The mayor would continue to be elected at large under the agreement, which was negotiated with Midland attorney Charles Tighe advising the city and San Antonio attorney Rolando Rios advising the two minority groups.

When the agreement was approved by Bunton in December and by the Justice Department in February, the issue seemed settled, but the dispute over the ballot language now threatens to unravel the agreement and delay the election.

FDIC named in $12-million suit

By RON GILMORE
Staff Writer

A multi-party $12-million lawsuit naming the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. and six others as defendents was filed Wednesday in the U.S. District Court in Midland.

Two independent brokerage agents, Gil Hollingsworth and Sidney D. Stephens, are seeking damages from the FDIC, Mann Rankin, Rankin Oil Co., Bryan Rankin, the estate of David Rankin, Ensource Inc. and Equitable Holding Corp.

Hollingsworth of Midland and Stephens of Woodland allege they were defrauded out of their interest in a drilling project in which they were contracted to locate and secure development funds.

The two agents are asking damages of $400,000 together with a 1 percent working interest in the Rankin Fuhrman-Mascho project in Andrews County. They contend the project would have amounted to more than $12 million "over a period of time." In addition, they are seeking $500,000 in attorney's fees.

The working-interest owners in that project include Mann Rankin, whom Hollingsworth said represented to him and Stephens that he (Mann Rankin) owns 25 percent of the working interest; Ensource Inc.; Equitable Holding Corp. of New York and "other parties unknown to the plaintiffs, but well known to the defendent."

Stephens and Hollingsworth allege that on Sept. 20, 1983, they entered into a brokerage agreement with Mann Rankin for Rankin Oil Co. in which the two would locate "a commercially-acceptable proposal from third parties financially capable of initiating a drilling program on the Rankin Fuhrman-Mascho project.

Reagan takes budget plea to Wall Street

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan is appealing to the nation's financial leaders for help in rescuing his embattled budget plan from a drastic congressional overhaul.

The president was making his case in person on Wall Street today with a visit to the floor of the New York Stock Exchange in Manhattan and a speech on the economy at St. John's University in the borough of Queens.

Reagan's New York trip was to make a little history: he is the first sitting president to visit the exchange in its 193-year existence. And plans called for him to ring the electronic bell that opens stock trading — pushing the button at exactly three seconds before the 10 a.m. starting time.

"It's a great honor for the president of the United States to come here, to a symbol of the nation's business," said Richard Torrenzano, a vice president of the exchange.

Paschal High School student Mark Mendoza and other members of a controversial group called "Fire It Up" gather outside the school. Members have been targets of violence from a student vigilante corp calling itself the "Legion of Doom."

'Legion of Doom' focusing on 'good intentions,' bad deeds

Associated Press

FORT WORTH — A group of "kids with good intentions" formed a secret organization called the "Legion of Doom," bombed a car and killed a cat in a campaign of violence against drug use and crime at their high school, authorities said.

"This is not an ordinary situation because most of the kids are honor students and athletes who thought they were doing the right thing by the offenses they committed," said Detective Tim Ellis.

The "Legion of Doom" apparently was so secret that officials at Paschal High School knew nothing about it, Ellis said.

Police attribute 30 violent incidents since December to the group, including a spree over the weekend in which the windshield of a student's car, parked near the school, was shot out on Friday, the body of a dissected cat was put inside another on Saturday and a pipe bomb damaged a third on Sunday.

The secret organization included some students with perfect 4.0 grade-point averages — "kids with good intentions who went outside the law," said police Detective Ken Henry.

In the first weekend incident, a note was left on the car bearing a red swastika and the message, "Paschal is now Nazi territory. You are short-lived if you return. Heed our warning, there will not be another."

The pipe bomb, loaded with screws and nails, damaged the student's car, a second vehicle and a nearby house, police said. A note left at the scene said, "We do not like thieves. This is your last warning."

The students were questioned Wednesday and the case will be presented to a grand jury, police said.

Goetz hopes to bring out 'full story'

By SAMUEL MAULL
Associated Press Writer

■ Defense plans examined; Related story — Page 2A

NEW YORK — Bernhard Goetz says he hopes his indictment on four counts of attempted murder will help bring out the full story of why he shot four teen-agers on a subway train and end the controversy that caused worldwide debate on vigilantism and self-defense.

Goetz was to be arraigned today in Manhattan Criminal Court following his indictment Wednesday by the second of two grand juries to investigate the Dec. 22 shootings.

The first grand jury indicted Goetz, 37, only for felony weapons possession charges. He did not testify before either panel.

In addition to attempted murder, the second grand jury charged Goetz with four counts of fourth-degree assault, one count of first-degree reckless endangerment and one count of second-degree criminal possession of a weapon.

Goetz said he shot the youths in self-defense after one of them "demanded" $5. One of the teenagers said he told the second grand jury he was merely trying to panhandle Goetz.

"It's probably all for the best. Everything now should come out in the open, with time, and that will end the controversy," Goetz said.

An attorney for Goetz, Barry Slotnick, said he would immediately move to dismiss the new indictment "because it was brought improvidentially by the district attorney for partisan reasons."

"The chief judge has said a grand jury will indict a ham sandwich if the district attorney wants it to," Slotnick said Wednesday. "Bernie Goetz today turned out to be a ham sandwich."

Attempted murder is a felony with a maximum penalty of up to 25 years in prison. The assault and weapons possession charges carry up to 15 years, and the reckless endangerment charge carries up to seven years in prison.

Goetz faced up to seven years in prison on the felony gun possession indictment handed up by the first grand jury.

Prosecutors were expected to ask for an increase in his $5,000 bail.

"As soon as the first grand jury action came down, we started to review the case," District Attorney Robert Morgenthau said.

Honduran maneuvers take troops near Nicaragua

CHOLUTECA, Honduras (AP) — U.S. troops on maneuvers in Honduras have moved armored vehicles to within four miles of the Nicaraguan border to repel a mock attack by Soviet-made tanks like those used by Nicaragua.

U.S. Army Col. James Witte said the troops will battle a hypothetical invasion of Honduras in the maneuvers, which begin April 8. They are part of the Big Pine III exercises that began Feb. 11 and are to last until May 3.

Anti-Sandinista rebels fighting to oust the leftist government in Nicaragua have used southern Honduras as a base. The Nicaraguan regime has repeatedly said it fears a U.S. invasion.

But U.S. Army Capt. Milford Gutridge said American troops would get no closer than three miles from the Nicaraguan border on land and no closer than six miles by air.

"The Hondurans didn't tell us to do it," Gutridge said of the limits. "It's something we imposed on ourselves for our safety. . .. We don't want to cross someone's border and create an international incident."

U.S. forces on Wednesday drove their vehicles into the border area. The American and Honduran forces involved in the maneuvers have a total of 42 tanks and armored personnel carriers, and U.S. combat aircraft also will be used.

They also brought a Soviet-made T-55 tank, a PT76 amphibious tank and two armored personnel carriers. Nicaragua has T-55 tanks.

It is the first time U.S. troops in Honduras have used tanks and other armored vehicles.

About 2,300 U.S. and 5,500 Honduran troops will take part in the six days of maneuvers at Las Hormigas, south of Choluteca. The U.S. force includes 450 members of the Texas National Guard.

Honduras has been the key to a U.S. military buildup in Central America since the leftist Sandinistas came to power in Nicaragua in July 1979 with a coup that ousted the pro-U.S. regime of Anastasio Somoza.

In January 1984, a U.S. helicopter was shot down and its pilot killed by Nicaraguan troops who said they fired after the craft crossed the border. U.S. officials said the aircraft was off course but did not say whether it had strayed into Nicaraguan air space before landing on the Honduran road, where the pilot was shot.

Between 20 and 24 tanks and personnel carriers were unloaded from a U.S. Navy ship Monday for the exercise.

"All the military materials used here will be returned to the United States once the activity is concluded," said Witte, a military spokesman, on Tuesday.

To prepare for the maneuvers, 1,200 U.S. army engineers are digging trenches, clearing the path for armored vehicles and improving two landing strips near the border with El Salvador.

Ban on covert funds upheld by panel

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's proposal to send $908 million in aid to four key Central American countries has been left intact by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, but the panel upheld a ban on covert funds for U.S.-backed rebels in Nicaragua.

In an amendment to its $12.8 billion foreign aid package for the coming year, the committee voted 9-8 Wednesday night to ban covert aid to "contras" trying to overthrow the Sandinista government of Nicaragua.

The amendment included assurances by the Reagan administration that it would not try to find other sources for covert funds to help the guerrillas in violation of ongoing congressional strictures against the spending.

Langhorne Motley, the assistant secretary of state for Inter-American affairs, said earlier in the week the administration was not searching for "loopholes," but Sen. Christopher Dodd, D-Conn., proposed that the foreign aid bill contain similar prohibitions.

At the same time, the Republican-dominated committee rejected a proposal by Dodd to cut economic and military assistance to El Salvador, Honduras, Costa Rica and Guatemala from $908 million to $750 million.

It voted against a proposal to put tighter limits on the number of U.S. personnel in El Salvador and declined to direct the Reagan administration to increase its support for a Central American peace process organized by the Contadora group of nations in the region.

And finally, it rejected an amendment to divide a special $3.6 billion, three-year, economic aid program for Central America into one-year slices to give Congress more control over the spending.

Similar amendments are given a better chance of passage in the foreign aid bill still under consideration in the Democrat-controlled House Foreign Affairs Committee.

Central American issues were among the most hotly debated proposals during two days of deliberations that ended with 15-1 passage of the Senate aid bill, which committee chairman Richard G. Lugar, R-Ind., gave a high chance of passage in the full Senate.

Since it is roughly the same size as last year's foreign aid spending, "it meets the requirements" of congressional determination to keep a lid on spending. Lugar said.

Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., a long-time critic of many State Department programs, cast the dissenting vote.

In passing the aid package, the committee:

—Adopted Helms' amendment — aimed mostly at China — to bar aid for family planning programs in any country that permits infanticide or coerced abortion.

—In a pro-Greek vote, cut the administration's aid for Turkey from $785 million to $715 million and eased credit terms for Greece's purchase of U.S. weapons.

—In a pro-Israel move, voted to order the Reagan administration to certify that Saudi Arabia is playing a helpful role in the Mideast peace process before proceeding with the scheduled delivery of sophisticated AWACS radar planes to the Saudis next year.

Defense will try to put jury 'in Goetz' shoes'

By RICK HAMPSON
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — In New York state, judges presiding over criminal assault cases in which the accused pleads self-defense usually ask jurors to put themselves "in the shoes of the defendant" to decide whether force was justified.

This reflects the law's position that if the defendant reasonably believed force was justified, then it was justified, regardless of what may appear in retrospect to have been correct.

Bernhard Goetz argues that he shot four youths on a subway train in self-defense after they threatened to rob him.

The key question is not whether the youths were about to rob Goetz but whether Goetz reasonably believed they were about to rob him.

But it appears Goetz's encounter with the youth who either asked or demanded $5 was witnessed by no one except Goetz and the four youths.

In a tape-recorded telephone conversation with his neighbor, Goetz said, "I turned into a monster, that's the truth. But if...a lot of people would have been in my shoes, they would have done the same thing."

A jury would have to ask if Goetz reasonably believed anyone was about to use physical or deadly physical force against him. And the prosecution would have to disprove Goetz's claim of self-defense beyond a reasonable doubt.

But if the law grants Goetz a right to self-defense, it also imposes limits on his use of force.

"You may use deadly physical force only if you expect your antagonist is about to use it and if you believe deadly physical force is necessary to prevent serious injury or death," said state Supreme Court Justice Vincent Doyle of Buffalo, chairman of the State Bar Association's criminal justice committee.

Also, the defendant's force must have been commensurate with the amount of physical force he believed his antagonist was about to use.

If your antagonist is down and no longer able to defend himself, you are theoretically no longer protected by the right of self-defense — even if your antagonist started it.

Under this theory, Goetz — even if he was justified in using force against Troy Canty, who first approached him — still should have stopped at any of several stages:

— After he pulled the gun on Canty.

— After he shot Canty.

— After he shot the second, third or fourth youths, and before he reportedly returned to fire a fifth shot at one of his victims.

But the reality of the jury system sometimes erodes legal theory.

"When jurors hear the judge say, 'Put yourself in the shoes of the defendant (at the time of the crime), they tend to say, 'That's what I would have done,'" Doyle said. "They think, 'How can you be sure (the victim) isn't faking? I probably would have kept shooting, too.'"

"Juries tend to allow continuation of force because they realize that once things start happening, it's hard to slow down and think. The fear and the adrenaline are both flowing," he said.

Doyle recalled seeing Harvard Law School Professor Arthur Miller on ABC's "20/20" program about the Goetz case. Miller pointed out the requirement that someone acting in self-defense not go too far.

"He seemed to be saying that in a situation like this (involving deadly force), you should stop every second. He was talking as if things happen in slow motion, where you can freeze the frame and think about what to do next," Doyle said.

"That just ain't the way things happen," Doyle said. "Juries rightfully recognize this."

Rios said the plaintiffs are seeking the temporary restraining order because "The defendant (the city) has shown bad faith" by reneging on an agreement to let the minority groups consult with them on the ballot language, and because the city hasn't pre-cleared the language with the Justice Department. The plaintiffs also claim the Spanish translation of the language is misleading.

The minority groups want the language for the at-large council seats to read "vote for one or two" instead of "vote for two," a change which would make it easier to "single shoot" votes for a single candidate and increase his or her chances of winning one of the seats.

Tighe responded that the "vote for two" language is mandated by state law, that no agreement had been made to consult on the language, and that stopping the election would polarize the community along racial lines.

More than three hours of testimony from both sides Wednesday amounted to little more than a dress rehearsal for today's hearing after Bunton decided to form a three-judge panel to rule on the injunction, in accordance with the provisions of the 1965 Voting Rights Act.

"The Voting Rights Act calls for a three-judge panel if possible," a U.S. District Court officer said today. According to this official, Bunton had the authority to act on his own if no panel could be formed quickly. But when federal judges Sam Johnson of the 5th Circuit and Walter Smith of the Western District (Waco) agreed to serve today, he decided to convene the panel and hold another hearing.

The hearing was scheduled for 1 p.m., and the panel was expected to issue its ruling today. Bill Garrett, a Dallas lawyer who is assisting Rios, predicted the injunction will be granted.

"It would have been nice to have it today, but we're fairly confident we'll get it tomorrow," he said.

Rep. Albert Bustamante, D-San Antonio, a newly-elected member of the House Armed Services Committee, said he was reluctantly convinced to support MX by his committee chairman, Rep. Les Aspin, D-Wis.

"I will vote for these 21 and no more," said Bustamante. "I'm not going for the full 100; I will actively oppose that."

Rep. Henry B. Gonzales, D-San Antonio, a consistent MX opponent, voted no. Other "no" votes came from Majority Leader Jim Wright, D-Ft. Worth and fellow Democratic Reps. John Bryant, Dallas; Jack Brooks, Beaumont; Ronald Coleman, El Paso; Jake Pickle, Austin, and Mickey Leland, Houston.

Texas Republicans in favor of MX were: Reps. Tom Loeffler, Hunt; Steve Bartlett, Dallas; Joe Barton, Ennis; Bill Archer, Houston; Jack Fieds, Humble; Beau Boulter, Amarillo; Larry Combest, Lubbock; Tom DeLay, Sugar Land, Richard Armey, Denton, and Mac Sweeney, Wharton.

Texas Democrats voting for MX were: Reps. Sam Hall, Marshall; Ralph Hall, Rockwall; Marvin Leath, Marlin; E. (Kika) de la Garza, Mission; Martin Frost, Dallas; Michael Andrews, Houston; Charles Wilson, Lufkin, and Solomon P. Ortiz, Corpus Christi.

Wright, received a standing ovation following a stemwinder speech opposing the weapon.

"A year ago we were told we had to vote for the MX because the Russians were not at the bargaining table," Wright said. "Today we are told we have to vote for the MX because the Russians are at the bargaining table."

United States security requires more than weapons, Wright said. "It rests upon a productive agriculture, ...a healthy industrial base, ...an educated citizenry.

"With eight million people out of work, the president says we can't afford to extend unemployment compensation. He says what the jobless need is training, but he wants to eliminate the Job Corps and cut our job training effort by 28 percent. If we can't afford that, can we afford more missiles?" Wright asked.

Wilson, a member of the Defense Appropriations Subcommittee, in a floor speech, conceded the vote "has nothing to do with patriotism or creation of jobs."

Wilson, like other pro-MX speakers, argued "it doesn't make much sense" to take the MX off the bargaining table just as negotiators sit down with the Soviets.

As for political considerations, Wilson warned fellow Democrats they could not afford to be perceived as "weak on defense" if they expect to remain the majority party in the South and West or ever hope to elect another Democratic president.

Brooks said he woud "vote against the MX until I die." In a prepared statement, he said, "Study after study has shown that the MX would be a sitting duck in the face of a Soviet first-attack."

Finally, 61 Democrats in the Democrat-controlled House joined Republicans to carry the missile while 158 Democrats vote against it. On the Republican side, 158 voted for MX and 24, against.

The two brokers claimed that four companies, Trio Tubular Inc. of Houston, Minden Oil and Gas Inc. of Houston, Dorchester Enhanced Recovery Co. of Dallas and Rio Colorado Drilling of Houston all made acceptable proposals to drill the waterflood and carbon-dioxide project.

Stephens and Hollingsworth further allege that, in late October 1983, Mann Rankin for Rankin Oil Co. began requesting additional funds which were not included in the brokerage agreement or proposal submitted by the defendent.

The funds — an additional $4 million — were to be used to buy out the remaining two-thirds working interest prior to the letting of the drilling program. The two brokers allege that Rankin was contemplating buying the other investors' interest "with the express intent of defrauding the investors of their interest in the additional drilling program which would tremendously enhance recovery of oil and gas from the Rankin Fuhrman-Mascho project.

Stephens and Hollingsworth also charge that Rankin, although having three commercially-acceptable offers, "wholly failed and refused and continues to fail and to refuse to accept any offers made to him...."

They further allege that Rankin took the written offers and attempted to borrow money from other lending institutions, using the offers to show the project was a financially-beneficial transaction.

Mann Rankin and Mann Rankin for Rankin Oil Co. "desires to borrow sufficient monies on his own to buy out the investors and drill the project himself, thereby reaping all the profits from the project, without sharing the same as obligated with the working interest investors or the plaintiffs."

Stephens and Hollingsworth also claim that Mann Rankin "executed one or more written instruments purporting to be deeds of trust creating a lien on the mineral interest and working interest on the project."

The liens, said the suit, were executed for the benefit of First National Bank of Midland and are now held by the FDIC, which took over the bank when it failed in October 1983.

The brokers allege that those deeds of trust are invalid because they were executed only by Mann Rankin, who did not have the authority to execute the deeds for the true owners — Marian Rankin, Bryan Rankin, David Rankin Estate or David Rankin, individually. Rankin Oil Co. is and was a partnership composed of those parties, said the suit.

Stephens and Hollingsworth charge the FDIC is exercising control over the property which they have an interest in and is seeking an order for the FDIC to refrain from asserting or claiming any interest of the Rankins and from interferring with or exercising any rights to the property.

Jury considering punishment for Alvarado girl's kidnappers

STATE

CLEBURNE, Texas (AP) — Jurors who took only 20 minutes to convict two men of the aggravated kidnapping of a 13-year old Alvardo girl now must decide whether the pair should be sentenced to life in prison.

Michael Lynn Mills of Dallas, 28, and James Wesley Foote, 34, of Arlington, were found guilty Wednesday afternoon of abducting Amy McNiel and demanding $100,000 in ransom from her father, a prominent businessman.

Johnson County District Attorney Dan Boulware said both defendants have prior felony convictions. The punishment phase of the trial was scheduled to begin at 9 a.m. today.

Mills' parents were not surpised by the verdict and said their only hope was for leniency.

"I just hope they'll have the kindness not to go the maximum penalty," said Jimmy Mills of Dallas.

"He's young. He could still have a life," said his wife, Geraldine.

Miss McNiel, who was held captive for 2½ days, was a key witness against the pair and is expected to testify again at the trial of three other people accused in the Jan. 11 abduction.

She described how Foote pushed her up against the back window of a car during a running gun battle with authorities.

"I tried to get down on the floorboard, but James Foote said that if they saw me, they might stop shooting," Miss McNiel said. "He tried to put me up into the back window."

After a chase of speeds reaching 100 mph, the shootout ended in East Texas with a Texas Ranger and a deputy sheriff racing through a hail of gunfire to rescue the girl.

Miss McNiel also told jurors how her kidnappers took drugs, stole cars and talked about fleeing to Hawaii with the ransom money.

With her lips sometimes trembling, she said she feared for her life throughout the ordeal.

"I thought that if I tried to run or anything they might shoot me," she said.

She also said the kidnappers discussed of taking more hostages during their final flight from authorities.

In cross examination and in their closing arguments, defense attorneys tried to persuade the jury that the kidnappers never planned to hurt the girl.

Still awaiting trial in the case are Daniel Walter Necker Jr., 21, of Mesquite; George Thomas Barnes, 21, of Dallas; and Lisa Anne Bouvier, 19, of Balch Springs.

All five defendants face additional charges of attempted capital murder in Hopkins County, where they were arrested at the end of the gunfight, and in Titus County.

No pass, no play showdown set for Monday

AUSTIN (AP) — A crucial vote on the controversial no pass, no play eligibility rule for high school athletes and others has been scheduled for Monday morning.

The Senate Education Committee, which is trying to "fine tune" last summer's school reform bill, argued over the rule Wednesday but no decision was reached.

Sen. Carl Parker, D-Port Arthur, committee chairman, said the Monday date would allow time for preparation of amendments that several members said they would present.

"That's appropriate for this. April Fool's Day," Parker remarked.

Parker also warned that "if this bill gets loaded down with a retreat from excellence in education, it is not going to pass."

The argument began when the committee was offered a subcommittee report recommending a bill by Sen. Bill Sarpalius, D-Canyon, to revise the no pass, no play eligibility rule approved by the State Board of Education.

Currently a student is disqualified from playing or practicing athletics or other extracurricular activities for at least six weeks if he fails to make a grade of at least 70 in any course.

Sarpalius' bill, approved by the subcommittee Tuesday, would require students only to maintain passing grades in the 21 courses required for graduation, not electives. The required courses include English, mathematics, science, social studies and history.

"We say as long as you pass required courses you are eligible to take part in extracurricular activities," Sarpalius said. "If you fail one you can't play again until you make up the grade. It may take one week, or three or even six weeks."

"Actually what you are doing is saying a student taking three required courses and three electives, can fail three of his courses," responded Sen. Kent Caperton, D-College Station.

"You are setting lower standards than you should," said Sen. Chet Edwards, D-Duncanville. "You could flunk 23 course at six-week intervals and still participate in athletics. That sends out a terrible message to students of this state."

Woman wins decision on abortion

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — A district judge's decision clearing the way for a 19-year-old woman to have an abortion — despite her estranged husband's objection — proved a two-edged sword on the controversial issue, a priest says.

Sherrill Smith, director of pro-life activities for the archdiocese of San Antonio, said he was not surprised at Judge Peter Michael Curry's decision Wednesday.

After a three-hour hearing, Curry dissolved a restraining order and refused to bar Kim Hayes from having an abortion.

Her estranged husband Keith Hayes, 28, had won a restraining order last week halting the termination of the pregnancy until Wednesday's hearing.

"The law is on the other side — the woman has a right to an abortion and the husband has no standing," Smith said.

But the priest said he was encouraged by the hearing because "we got a lot exposed."

Smith was referring to testimony from pediatrician Dr. Ricardo Riojas, who described in some detail the abortion process and said the unborn child suffers pain in the procedure.

Mrs. Hayes had not had an abortion by late Wednesday, her attorney Ramiro Estrada Jr. said. Estrada said he thought the procedure likely would be performed today.

Curry, in making his ruling, said, "I don't want to be put in the role of murderer of a child. But I'm a believer in the constitution of the United States.

"Accordingly, I can't see how I have the right to prevent this lady from having an abortion. I don't see how Mr. Hayes has that choice," he said.

Mrs. Hayes testified she married Hayes last October and they separated in January. She discovered she was pregnant in late February.

"His morals may not be the same as mine but that doesn't give him the right to dictate to me what I'm going to do," she said.

Mrs. Hayes admitted she had tried to have an abortion Tuesday, but the procedure was halted twice because doctors were given copies of the restraining order.

Hayes testified he did not "believe in killing an innocent baby. It's my child as well as hers. I helped create it.

"The baby should not be killed because she wants to get even. I tried to reason with her that the killing of our baby was plain outright murder," Hayes said.

Under cross examination, Hayes admitted he had been convicted of rape in 1979. He said the case involved an ex-wife he was living with at the time.

Court records show he is still on probation for the crime.

Hayes' attorney Dave Rogers said allowing the abortion would be a violation of Texas' family code, which outlaws family violence.

Rogers said the court did not have to go so far as the constitutional issue of whether the woman has the right to terminate her pregnancy without the consent of the father.

American Civil Liberties Union attorney Gerry Goldstein, who represented Mrs. Hayes, said the Supreme Court had tossed out a Missouri law requiring the husband's consent.

"The balance is in the wife's favor," he said.

No matter what Fed Chairman Volcker says, it's still news

By CLIFF HAAS

An Analysis

WASHINGTON (AP) — No matter what Federal Reserve Board Chairman Paul A. Volcker says, it is still news.

Earlier this month, as he was about to begin a speech to a group of bankers, the television lights came on and Volcker playfully told his audience that "anything I say that's different in nuance or tone from what I've been saying the past week is purely accidental."

He was acknowledging in a lighthearted way his power as an oracle-like figure whose mere words — and the way others interpret those words — can affect financial markets around the world.

The Federal Reserve System was set up in 1913 and functions as the nation's central bank. It determines and conducts U.S. monetary policy and plays a major role in supervising and regulating the banking system.

The Federal Open Market Committee, composed of the seven-member Federal Reserve Board of governors and the presidents of five of the 12 Federal Reserve banks, determines monetary policy but only discloses its decisions weeks after they are made and then only in murky summary.

Thus, financial analysts, brokers, traders and reporters hang on Volcker's every word during public appearances for clues about what the Federal Reserve might be up to.

The problem is that sometimes people hear the same clue but interpret it differently.

"He (Volcker) is always very careful in the words he selects, it's just that people hear the same words differently," said a Federal Reserve official who asked not to be identified.

In making a semiannual report to Congress on Feb. 20, Volcker told the Senate Banking Committee, "the progressive process of easing reserve positions undertaken in the latter part of 1984 ended."

Bond prices plummeted based on fears that Volcker might have been indicating the Fed was going to tighten credit. The dollar, in turn, soared on foreign currency markets.

Six days later, Volcker gave essentially the same testimony to a House banking subcommittee.

Bond prices jumped and the dollar fell.

David Jones, an economist with Aubrey G. Lanston & Co., a government securities dealer in New York, said Volcker testified that easing of the money supply had stopped, "The market crashed on that news because there had been some people ...hoping the Fed would ease further."

House backs day care registration fee bill

AUSTIN (AP) — The House has tentatively approved a bill to impose a license fee on day care facilities, a move one member criticized as a "tax on children" that does little to guarantee quality care.

In a 63-44 preliminary vote, the House on Wednesday backed Pasadena Rep. Erwin Barton's bill setting up annual fees of up to $150. The state now does not charge for day care registration.

The Barton bill would require annual fees of $40 per year, plus $1 per child for day care centers. The maximum would be $150. Registered family homes would pay $15 a year.

Barton said the $1.2 million raised annually would be used for programs to educate day care workers and teach parents what to look for in day care. The money would fund "an adequate education program," he said.

But Austin Rep. Bob Richardson said the fees would do little toward insuring quality care. He suggested increasing the fee to $40 per year plus $1 per child per month, instead of per year. That might raise enough money to inspect all day care facilities, he said.

The Texas Department of Human Resources now inspects the 7,400 day care centers. But the 20,000 smaller, registered family homes are inspected only if a complaint is filed.

"The only reason we should put these fees on day care centers is to increase the quality of the inspections we are getting from the state," said Richardson. "I don't think we ought to tax the children in day care centers to try to resolve our general revenue problems."

"We're getting a decreased quality of inspections today. There are more centers. There are fewer inspectors," he added.

But the House stuck with Barton's plan to put the money into the education programs. He said it would take about $5 million a year to inspect the registered family homes.

"This is the best way to approach it with the funds that are available," said Barton.

Richardson suggested raising the fee to $1 per child per month, instead of per year.

"The key problem we face today is sufficient inspections so parents know their children are not being abused," he said. "This is simply going to put a tax on day care centers. If we don't dedicate it for increased inspections all we are doing is taxing children."

In another preliminary vote, the House OK'd a bill that would relax state regulation of securities offered for sale. Under the current law, securities must undergo "merit review" by the state securities commissioner before being eligible for sale in Texas.

Dallas Rep. Steve Wolens' bill would replace merit review with a "full disclosure" standard under which people or companies selling securities must prepare a prospectus listing all material facts.

Wolens said the current system requires the securities commissioner to do the impossible — "decide whether a stock is going to make money or lose money."

STATE in brief

White approves revision of oil leasing program

AUSTIN (AP) — The U.S. Interior Department's proposal to revise its five-year Outer Continental Shelf oil and gas leasing program meets with the approval of Gov. Mark White.

White, who has been tussling with federal officials over offshore oil leasing policies, said the new proposals are encouraging.

States and the federal government share revenues from offshore oil leases, but White has been arguing that Texas' share has been too skimpy.

"I believe that your emphasis on meaningful consultation with states, local governments and other interested parties early in the process will be a crucial element in assuring a balanced and effective OCS leasing program," White said Wednesday in a letter to Interior Secretary Donald Hodel.

White also told Hodel that the proposal to focus the leasing program on "promising acreage" rather than large area leasing "appears to be more in line with recommendations that I have made in the past."

Special meeting scheduled

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Mark White on Wednesday scheduled a special election for April 27 to fill the Texas Senate seat being vacated by Sen. Lindon Williams, D-Houston.

Two veteran House members — Rep. Gene Green, D-Houston, and Rep. Tony Polumbo, D-Houston — both told news conferences they will run.

Williams last week said he was resigning from the Senate to become a justice of the peace in Harris County.

Green, a seven-term lawmaker, said his experience will be a strong factor in the race.

Polumbo, a six-term House veteran, said he wanted to use the Senate job to continue working on law enforcement issues and education.

Water deaths down

AUSTIN (AP) — Water-related deaths decreased by 148 during 1984, the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department reported Wednesday.

The department said 424 water-related deaths were recorded last year, compared with 572 in 1983.

Officials said a campaign against drinking alcohol while boating may have contributed to the decline in boating fatalities. Also, drought caused low lake levels and could have reduced the number of people swimming and using their boats, the department said.

Yet another possible factor in reducing deaths, the department said, was a freeze that killed large numbers of saltwater fish in early 1984. This may have cut down on fishing trips to the Gulf of Mexico, where fatalities dropped from 95 to 47, the department said.

New appointments made

AUSTIN (AP) — Two new appointments to the Texas Parks and Wildlife Commission — Bob Armstrong of Austin and Antonio Sanchez Jr. of Laredo — were approved Wednesday by the Senate Nominations Committee.

Their appointments were sent to the full Senate for confirmation on a 5-0 vote.

Family hauls in record fish

AUSTIN (AP) — A 99-pound blue catfish taken from a Conroe trotline March 3 is a state record, the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department said Wednesday.

Officials said Raymond Lynch of Conroe and his sons Raymond, 13, and Jessee, 8, pulled in the big catfish. It was 55¼ inches long. The former record blue catfish caught by legal means other than rod and reel also was caught at Lake Conroe.

It weighed 89 pounds, 8 ounces, and was caught in February 1984.

State wants institute moved

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Research Institute of Mental Sciences should be transferred to the University of Texas Health Science Center in Houston, a state lawmaker said Wednesday.

Sen. Chet Brooks, D-Pasadena, filed a bill which he said would consolidate the Texas Department of Mental Health and Mental Retardation's responsibilities in the Houston area in a number of ways.

The bill calls for services provided by TRIMS to move to the new Harris County Psychiatric Hospital along with $8.6 million which has been earmarked for the services. The hospital is expected to be completed in July 1986. Research, education and training missions of TRIMS would be moved to the Health Science Center, Brooks said.

Space station planned

AUSTIN (AP) — An orbiting space station with the capability to repair and manufacture satellites should be in place by 1992, a former NASA official says.

Hans Mark, former deputy administrator for NASA and current chancellor of the University of Texas at Austin, told engineering students the space station will probably hold six people, have an orbital vehicle and be a project of several countries.

Mark said he became involved with the project in 1968 when there were budget problems. The shuttle project's $6.5 billion budget was approved in 1972, he said.

Mark also said he expects a small permanent base to be built on the moon by 2000.

Woman chases intruder out of her apartment

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) — A woman says she acted on impulse and didn't have time to be scared when she chased an intruder out of her apartment, vaulted a fence and clung to the windshield wipers of his car as he tried to speed away.

"He told me, 'All right, baby, we're going for a ride,'" Gwen Kemp said Wednesday of her wild spin on the hood of the man's car. "I said, 'Let's go.'"

Ms. Kemp, 31, said a lot of other things, too, during the course of the chase, but she declined to be specific, explaining, "You can't print it."

She said she had never thought what she might do if she found someone burglarizing her apartment, so when she came home for lunch Monday and found the door chained from the inside, "I acted strictly on impulse."

Ms. Kemp — who described her 5-foot-2 body as of "medium" build — bashed the door in. The intruder beat a hasty retreat through the patio door, with Ms. Kemp in close pursuit.

She credited her stamina to having quit smoking and begun jogging "as often as I can stand it" about a year ago.

Even so, by the time she confronted the suspect in a nearby parking lot, both of them were too out of breath to do anything but stare at each other and gasp.

Then he jumped into a car and locked the door before she could pull it open. Ms. Kemp said she beat on the windows, then leaped on the hood when he started the car.

He zig-zagged in the parking lot and tried some short stops, but Ms. Kemp hung tight. Finally, after a sudden stop about a block from the apartment complex, the suspect couldn't get the car going again.

He jumped out and took off running. This time, Ms. Kemp didn't follow.

Court ruling limits police use of deadly force

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Supreme Court ruling limiting police authority to shoot unarmed, fleeing suspects is attracting support from many law enforcement officials who say they already abide by the new guidelines.

The ruling is "just and proper," said Robert Angrisan, spokesman for the International Association of Chiefs of Police in Gaithersburg, Md.

Association members approved the guidelines two years ago "and now the Supreme Court has agreed with us," he said.

The court ruled, 6-3, Wednesday that police may not shoot unarmed, fleeing criminal suspects who pose no apparent threat to the officers or the public. The court said a Tennessee law that allowed unrestrained use of deadly force violated the constitutional rights of suspects.

Nearly half the states in the nation have laws similar to Tennessee. But in many of those states, local police departments for years have banned shooting of fleeing suspects who are not considered dangerous.

Support for the court's ruling was not unanimous.

Tennessee State Rep. Joe Kent, a Memphis police lieutenant, said, "It's a black day for your police officers and it's a blacker day for your law-abiding citizens."

But Assistant City Attorney Charles V. Holmes of Memphis said the local police department had been abiding by the new strictures prior to the ruling. The city's previously revised deadly force policy "is consistent with today's ruling," he said.

The decision stems from a 1974 incident in Memphis in which police shot and killed Edward Garner, 15, as the boy was fleeing from a house burglary.

Wednesday's ruling means the city of Memphis may be forced to pay damages to the boy's father, Cleamtee Garner, whose 1975 lawsuit charged police with violating the boy's rights.

The policeman who shot young Garner in the back of the head said the boy, who appeared to be unarmed, would have escaped if the officer did not fire.

The Supreme Court decision upheld a 1983 federal appeals court ruling that said Tennessee's law on deadly force was unconstitutional.

The high court rejected arguments by Tennessee law enforcement officials that police will be hampered unnecessarily if they are forced to make split-second decisions on when it is permissible to shoot an escaping suspect.

States still may authorize police to shoot to kill armed suspects or those suspected of crimes involving "serious physical harm."

The American Civil Liberties Union said the ruling was overdue.

"The court avoided ruling on this subject for many years," ACLU lawyer Charles Sims said.

'Weird' teeth 15 million years old

REYNOLDS CREEK, Idaho (AP) — When Mark Hoagland dug two shiny, 6-inch-long, 3-inch-wide teeth out of the dirt, he knew they were weird — but not that they were about 15 million years old.

The teeth have been identified as the oldest remains of an elephant-like animal, Gomphotherium obscurum, ever found in North America, said Ted Weasma, a Bureau of Land Management paleontology specialist.

"After I found the bones, I went back to the house and told my kids they (the teeth) were probably from some prehistoric animal. They just laughed at me," Hoagland said.

That laughter spurred him to have the teeth identified.

Weasma sent one tooth for identification and dating to a paleontology expert in Denver who specializes in elephants.

The fossils are from the period when elephant-like animals first came onto this continent, said Greg McDonald, collections manager for the Idaho State Museum of Natural History.

CIA Director Casey willing to put Capital Cities stock in blind trust

WASHINGTON (AP) — CIA Director William J. Casey, facing questions about his stock in a conglomerate that wants to buy ABC television, says he would be willing to place the shares in a blind trust created in 1983 for his other investments.

Casey said in a statement issued late Wednesday that his personal attorney would consult with government ethics officials about placing the Capital Cities Communications Inc. stock in the blind trust.

"It is a matter of indifference to Mr. Casey whether that stock is in the (blind) trust or not," CIA spokesman Kathy Pherson said.

Casey's ownership of stock in Capital Cities raises questions about his possible ownership of a significant stake in a major television network while directing U.S. intelligence.

While his Capital Cities holdings may be worth $7.5 million, Casey's share of the company he helped found amounts to only one quarter of one percent of outstanding shares, according to the Long Island newspaper Newsday.

CIA spokesman Patti Volz said Casey did not place the Capital Cities shares in the blind trust when it was created because Office of Government Ethics regulations don't permit such trusts to include a holding that is more than 20 percent of an entire stock portfolio.

David H. Martin, director of the ethics office, did not return a reporter's telephone call on Wednesday, and an aide, Peter Andriole, said "the office has not made a statement yet."

Earlier Wednesday, White House spokesman Larry Speakes said he saw no problem with Casey's ownership of the Capital Cities stock outside the blind trust. But Speakes declined to say whether Casey should place the stock in a blind trust now that Capital Cities is proposing to take over ABC.

Casey's stock in Capital Cities is among several holdings not included in the blind trust that the CIA director set up in 1983 under pressure from Congress. Casey had come under criticism for his stock dealings while CIA director.

His latest financial disclosure form, dated May 15, 1984, states that his Capital Cities stock is worth more than $250,000 and that his wife's holdings were valued at between $100,001 and $250,000.

House Democrats prepare to defy Reagan, extend jobless benefits

WASHINGTON (AP) — With 380,000 unemployed workers facing a cutoff of federal jobless benefits, House Democrats are preparing to defy President Reagan and vote to extend payments for three months.

A House Ways and Means subcommittee was to start work today on a proposal that would give new life to a $2 billion-a-year program the president says is unnecessary now that the nation's economy is growing.

The House Democratic caucus voted Wednesday to schedule the bill for House floor action as soon as possible.

"This is not an attempt to embarrass the president, this is something minimal and do-able," said Rep. James Oberstar, D-Minn., a caucus leader and author of the resolution to continue the program beyond the week of March 31.

"A three-month proposal is simply an expression of realism," Oberstar said. "It's what a president with any modicum of compassion should sign. We're not throwing down any gauntlet toward him..., but we cannot allow this (Democratic) party to be Reaganized."

The federal supplemental compensation program, known as FSC, now provides up to 14 weeks of payments to some 330,000 jobless workers who have exhausted state benefits. State benefits run for 26 weeks.

The federal program is scheduled to expire next week, but the president said last week he will not ask Congress to renew it because government figures show the economy is generating 300,000 new jobs a month.

Asked Wednesday if Reagan might be softening his position, White House spokesman Larry Speakes responded: "We still oppose it, but we'll take a hard look at what they (Congress) send us."

Believing that opposition from Reagan and the Republican-controlled Senate would doom any hope of extending FSC, Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, has argued against submitting an extension bill.

Instead, Rostenkowski, D-Ill., favors a modified proposal that would allow payments to continue for unemployed workers already in the program until their benefits are exhausted.

Under such a compromise, an unemployed worker eligible for 12 weeks of benefits would receive his full allotment.

"We run the risk of building up false hopes among the unemployed if we submit an extension bill that has no chance of passing," Rostenkowski said.

Base employees build paper airplanes

FAIRBORN, Ohio (AP) — It looked like a typical paper airplane flying contest.

Some of the entries looped and spiraled gracefully. Others, such as one resembling a brick, made nose-dive crashes. A few careened into a building or hit spectators and had to be launched again.

But the contestants were pros: engineers and other employees at Wright-Patterson Air Force Base, where the Aeronautical Systems Division's F-16 program held the eighth annual paper airplane fly-off earlier this week.

Elaborate red, white and blue planes vied with those of triangular, carbon paper design. All had to be made of office or computer paper previously used for official business.

Winners were judged for length of time and antics in the air, accuracy and design.

Members of the top group, the flight dynamics lab, all gave their names as Wilbur or Orville, in honor of the aviating Wright brothers.

"I don't expect to win; I just want to hit the target," said Capt. Keith Beachy, who won the accuracy category.

One of the losers, Capt. Rich Tullos of the flight dynamics lab, clutched a heavy metal bomb casing that he brought as a joke.

Administration wants court to uphold 'Baby Doe' regulations

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration, continuing a legal battle related to the Baby Jane Doe case, is asking the Supreme Court to uphold regulations designed to protect babies with severe birth defects.

The Justice Department asked the high court Wednesday to review a decision by the 2nd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New York that struck down government regulations withholding financial aid to hospitals that deny treatment to handicapped infants solely because of their handicaps.

Ruling on a lawsuit by hospital groups, the appellate court had based its decision on Department of Health and Human Services regulations implementing Section 504 of the 1978 Rehabilitation Act.

The lower court said HHS rules do not prohibit a federally assisted hospital program from withholding life-saving surgery on a deformed infant, even if the hospital would not hesitate to perform the same surgery on a normal child.

But the Justice Department said the appellate court ruling was "flatly inconsistent with the language and purpose of Section 504 and with the (Health and Human Services) secretary's implementing regulations and interpretive guidelines..."

"As HHS's study of this matter demonstrates, refusals to treat even moderately handicapped newborns has been more than just a rare occurrence," it said, adding:

"The protection that the secretary's regulations afford these infants is significant, and the absence of such protection may in some cases be life-threatening."

The department said the appellate court's analysis "could impede enforcement of other anti-discrimination statutes that are worded identically to Section 504, such as Title VI of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, regarding discrimination on the basis of race in the furnishing of medical services and other matters."

The hospital case has been legally intertwined with the Baby Jane Doe case in Long Island, N.Y., for more than a year. In both cases, the administration has been trying to extend the anti-discrimination protection contained in Section 504 to infants born with severe birth defects.

The HHS first issued regulations in March 1983 on handicapped infants, basically requiring hospitals receiving federal funds to report instances in which such infants were denied some form of treatment.

In the case of Baby Jane Doe, who was severely deformed, doctors and the parents concluded they would forgo certain operations. The Justice Department filed suit in federal district court in New York to obtain Baby Jane Doe's medical records to determine whether the infant was denied treatment for legitimate medical reasons or because of discrimination against the handicapped.

The court turned down the request, saying the agency needed first to prove there was a violation of the infant's civil rights before such records could be released.

FBI confiscates weapons from reputed racist's wife

ATLANTA (AP) — Federal officials are trying to determine what Bruce C. Pierce, reputed head of a militant white racist organization, was doing in Georgia when he was arrested with a van full of weapons.

His wife, Julie Ann Wilson Pierce, was detained briefly Wednesday in Jasper, Ala., by FBI agents who said they confiscated a cache of weapons she was hauling in a trailer. She was not arrested.

The weapons found in the trailer included "dozens of hand grenades, explosive powder, foreign- and domestic-made automatic weapons resembling M-16 rifles, hand guns and about $7,000 in cash," special FBI Agent Tom Moore said.

Moore declined to comment on why she wasn't arrested.

The 30-year-old Pierce, appearing Wednesday before U.S. Magistrate William Harper in Atlanta, was ordered held without bond for up to 10 days.

The Metaline Falls, Wash., resident, who is said to head the group The Order, was arrested Tuesday in Rossville, a suburb of Chattanooga, Tenn.

Police can sport beards

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Policemen may sport beards now, but they still cannot start them on city time, according to an order that takes effect today.

In a reversal of 1982 grooming standards, Chief Penny E. Harrington, the first woman to head the department, signed an order allowing facial hair if it is neatly trimmed and less than a half-inch thick.

But beginning a beard on duty still will not be allowed. "At least two weeks' growth of beard must be started on vacation time to avoid a scraggly, unprofessional appearance," the order said.

Judge says jailings 'waste'

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — A federal judge who ordered sentences of up to 18 years for four nuclear weapons protesters who damaged a Minuteman 2 missile site said their jailings were "a waste."

Sentenced Wednesday were Helen D. Woodson, 41, and the Rev. Carl Kabat, 51, both of Madison, Wis., Kabat's brother, the Rev. Paul Kabat, 52, and Lawrence Cloud-Morgan, 46, both of Bemidji, Minn.

"What a waste that the four of you were in the Wyandotte County (Kan.) jail and not in Washington where six votes (in Congress) on the MX might have changed the course of history," U.S. District Judge D. Brook Bartlett said before passing sentence.

Salamanders close road

FRAMINGHAM, Mass. (AP) — It's mating season again for the blue-spotted salamanders of Framingham, and motorists will once again yield to amphibian romance.

For the third year in a row, the town will close a quarter-mile stretch of Hemenway Road for two weeks so that the nine-inch salamanders can cross from the marshes on one side to mate in a small pond on the other.

Residents who live along the road say they don't mind the inconvenience. Before the detour, hundreds of salamanders were squished by passing motorists.

Targeting terrorists

National Security Adviser Robert McFarlane's call for the United States to consider armed strikes against terrorists and those states that support them moved the nation a step closer to what is needed to counter terrorism.

The question of how to respond effectively and realistically to terrorism has been getting more attention as the number of terroristic acts has increased in recent years. Essentially there are two schools of thought: (1) Terrorism should be countered with swift, punitive action or prevented with preemptive strikes against particular targets and (2) attempting to counter terrorism by elevating it to military confrontation only justifies it and gives it stature. It should be avoided, that argument asserts.

Speaking Monday to a gathering of the National Strategy Information Center, a private research group, McFarlane said, "We should be prepared to direct a proportional military response against bona fide military targets in a state which directs terrorist actions against us."

There are obvious concerns about such a response and they've been enunciated by critics. After all, there seems to be a considerable margin for error in such tactics and the United States should not get involved in military strikes against targets that may hold no military affiliation with any country.

While those concerns are valid, to a degree, the United States should view the terrorism threat in its proper context. Terrorists are outlaws. They operate outside the realm of civilized society and launch strikes against civilization in sporadic fashion. Any attempt to counter terrorism by operating within the bounds of civilization likely will end in failure. A government can't succeed playing by the rules when its adversary doesn't even recognize the rules.

The United States has two choices in facing the growing trend of terrorism: (1) Do nothing and hope terrorism will die out or (2) make retaliation for terroristic acts so severe that terrorists fall out of favor throughout the world and lose their bases of operation.

The first alternative is foolish. Terrorists operate outside the laws of civilization because they're permitted to do so. They aren't going to stop killing or setting off bombs or kidnapping simply because civilized society doesn't like what they're doing.

That leaves only the option McFarlane is advocating. The United States can play the game the way the terrorists do or sit by and watch the casualties mount.

By playing the game, at least the United States will make the terrorists — and the governments that support them — pay for every life they take.

Another View: Heed trade alert

It's difficult to remain optimistic in the face of the Commerce Department report that the U.S. foreign trade deficit last year plummeted to a record $101.6 billion, more than double that of 1983. The department said that the United States appears to have become a net debtor nation for the first time in 71 years.

The captain, crew and passengers of the Titanic were in high spirits when their voyage began. The U.S. economy is not in grave peril now. But there may be trouble ahead.

The United States has been running a trade deficit yearly since 1975. Income from U.S. foreign investment in most years has been enough to offset the goods deficit.

Figures just released show that Americans' net investments overseas, which were $104 billion when 1984 began, fell to $32 billion by year's end.

The strong dollar that makes U.S. exports more costly and hard to sell overseas attracts a tidal wave of cheaper imports. It has also triggered a near avalanche of foreign investment taking advantage of high interest rates or buying into nearly all sectors of a politically stable economy.

Underlying the plunging trade deficit is another long-term trend that is weakening the U.S. economy relative to its global competition.

A few weeks ago, the President's Commission on Industrial Competitiveness, chaired by John A. Young, president of Hewlett-Packard Co., concluded that American industry's ability to compete in world markets has eroded over the past two decades.

Competition was defined as the degree to which a nation can, under free and fair market conditions, and without lowering its standard of living, produce goods and services that can meet the test of international markets.

Besides increasing trade deficits, the report cited a drop in the U.S. share of the world's high-tech markets, a fall in the rates of return posted by manufacturers, stagnation of real hourly wages and a productivity growth rate that is slower than that of many nations.

The commission, made up principally of two dozen business leaders, warned that unless remedies are applied, the United States will continue to lose ground in high-tech areas in which it now leads the world.

The commission recommended creation of a science and technology department; coordination of use of the $18 billion a year spent on civilian research and development; fairer tax rates; merger of trade functions of the Commerce Department and Office of the U.S. Trade Representative into one office so as to rationalize trade policy; education designed to improve manufacturing and trade competitiveness, and efforts to help manufacturing produce competitive items.

Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige said the report will not be one that "gathers dust on the shelf."

It had better not. Determination, ingenuity and action in a climate of freedom put the United States out front in science and industry in the greatest success story of the 20th century. It will take the same things to keep us there.

JACK ANDERSON
Kissinger sought LaRouche probe

WASHINGTON — The decade-long feud between Henry Kissinger and Lyndon LaRouche was an exasperating experience for the ex-secretary of state, according to internal FBI investigative files.

Jack Anderson

After years as one of the targets of LaRouche's verbal slings and arrows, Kissinger took unerring aim with an arrow of his own. He wrote FBI Director William Webster in 1982 asking for an investigation of his tormentor.

"I want to make clear," wrote Kissinger, "that I do not ask the FBI to interfere in any manner with LaRouche's First Amendment rights even when they are exercised in a scurrilous and obscene manner. The LaRouche campaign against me, however, seems to go far beyond free speech."

Over the years, LaRouche's followers had written and shouted accusations of personal and political misbehavior against Kissinger, sometimes confronting him in public. The charges ranged from drug smuggling to homosexuality. One incident resulted in the trial — and acquittal — of Kissinger's wife, Nancy, on an assault charge following an airport confrontation with a LaRouche supporter.

A LaRouche spokesman who reviewed the FBI documents told my associate Tony Capaccio that their quarrel with Kissinger was about policy issues.

"We want Kissinger's political career to be over," he said.

The LaRouche spokesman insisted that the campaign never became illegal harassment, and said of Kissinger's request for an FBI investigation, "He got downright paranoid."

Kissinger refused to comment, but sources close to him said he was subjected to "intense verbal and physical harassment" during the period when he asked for the FBI investigation. It has subsided considerably since, the sources said.

Kissinger first wrote to Webster in August 1982 — a "Dear Bill" letter of thanks for forwarding a LaRouche flyer that assailed Kissinger.

The following month, Webster wrote to Kissinger's attorney: "I certainly can understand Dr. Kissinger's concern over the persistence which these individuals have displayed in their campaign against him."

The sympathetic FBI director added that he could "appreciate Dr. Kissinger's reluctance to take legal action against members of this group in the form of a peace bond or otherwise, since to do so would give them the forum they appear to be seeking."

As the campaign continued, the frustrated Kissinger wrote again to Webster in November 1982, asking for an FBI investigation. Within a month, he was informed that the Justice Department could find no actions alleged by Kissinger that violated civil rights laws.

He was told, however, that the actions he described might indicate violations of laws against interstate harassment by telephone.

The FBI files show that Webster wrote a memo to another bureau official about another angle. "The question was raised whether the U.S. Labor Party (a LaRouche organization) might be funded by hostile intelligence agencies," he wrote. "Can you give me an update ... on this matter?"

The FBI investigation did uncover a letter sent by a LaRouche committee to a Texas organization to which Kissinger was scheduled to speak. The letter contained, in the words of an FBI memo, "violations (having to do) with mailing a threat to injure the reputation and-or accuse a person of a crime."

The FBI finally gave up in late 1983. It found no prosecutable offenses and closed its investigation.

BUMBLING ALONG: While thousands of Africans starve, diplomats of nations that could do something about a long-range solution are engaged in an unseemly wrangle over protocol and pecking order. Here's the disgraceful story:

The International Fund for Agricultural Development is run by the United Nations but funded by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries and the Western industrial nations, including the United States. Its purpose is to help Third World farmers increase production and adopt better agricultural practices.

Ever since it was founded in 1977, the contributions were divided roughly on the lines of 58 percent for the Western nations and 42 percent for OPEC, with equal voting rights for each group. But with the recent drop in oil prices, OPEC says it can't afford to keep up its contribution at the usual level. The consensus at the funds seems to be that the Western nations should make up the difference.

But the State Department, faced with a distrust of the fund by many conservatives in Congress, has declined to pledge more — unless the voting ratio within the organization is changed to reflect the ratio of contributions.

On such fatuous falderal do the diplomats dither — while starvation threatens millions.

GEORGE F. WILL
Thatcher 'keeping powder dry'

LONDON — Like the painter Whistler, Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher works a lot with black and white. As Argentine generals and British miners can attest, she does not subscribe to the theory that right and wrong are too tangled to be sorted out. Lesser politicians are expected to speak peculiarly about, say, Soviet leaders. (Denis Healey, a former foreign secretary, describing Gorbachev's face: "Emotions flicker over a face of unusual sensitivity like summer breezes on a pond.") But Thatcher-watchers were puzzled by her statement during Gorbachev's December visit: "I like Mr. Gorbachev. We can do business with him."

George F. Will

She is cross about television coverage that took those words out of the context of words about the chasm between East and West. But she has been in politics long enough to know the risks of such excerptable statements. Besides, the question is: What business does she think Gorbachev is in?

Her answer, given in an interview at No. 10 Downing St., is interesting: Gorbachev, like any Soviet leader, is in the business of making statecraft conform to a "science" that is in shambles.

She recalls a Chernenko speech "all about aren't they lucky: They are the only country that has a scientific form of government." Faced with the system's failure to supply material needs, "They say it's because people are not working it right ... And now if you look at Mr. Gorbachev's acceptance speech, you will find almost the pure Andropov-Chernenko doctrine in it: Our system is not producing the results, we must be much more disciplined, we must have some more initiative, and there must be no deviation."

Soviet leaders feel, she says, they are custodians of an ideology that they are certain is correct, so the system must work. But it does not. The explanation, they feel, must be that people are not working or behaving properly.

If her analysis is correct, Soviet "reform" means not abandonment of ideology but rededication to it, and ruthless removal of human failure that prevents the system's success. Thus it is interesting that in statements made shortly before and after assuming power Gorbachev has promised "resolute measures" to purge "moral degenerates" and other "alien phenomena" from Soviet society. There will be "consolidation of labor" and a fight against "any manifestation of showiness and idle talk, swagger and irresponsibility." Presumably, while he was making these statements, his pond-like face flickered sensitively.

Thatcher recalls being in Yugoslavia and having housewives tell her they were short of detergent. "I said good heavens ... What are you doing bothering yourselves about that? Tell your grocers to go out and buy some. It's your grocers' job." They said: "We don't make any." Thatcher said: "There's plenty overseas." They wondered what they could use for foreign exchange.

That should have taught Yugoslav housewives not to go to Thatcher seeking sympathy about the detergent shortage. She stamps her foot, figuratively speaking, at the folly of command economies. She believes the contrast with the bounties produced by market economies is so instructive that the West should work to get Soviet leaders into "Bloomingdale's or Saks Fifth Avenue" or, she says patriotically, "Marks & Spencer."

This idea is a version of something to which the West, and not least the Reagan administration, is addicted: didactic diplomacy. The plan is to tame the Soviet elite by teaching it a thing or two. For example, we negotiate with the Soviets in the Helsinki process to teach them the "rules" of civilized behavior.

Didactic diplomacy — reform of Soviet behavior through remedial education — is one of many reform plans the West has conceived. Another was bribery, sometimes called detente: We would make getting along with us profitable. Another plan is diplomacy as psychotherapy, with two approaches.

One is the "threat-perception theory." According to it, the spring driving Soviet aggressiveness is insecurity, so U.S. policy should be to prove that we mean no "harm" (President Reagan's word). Another is the "frustration-aggression theory." According to it, if the Soviet Union is not frustrated (in its quest for "respect," or arms "parity," or whatever), it will not vent frustrations in aggression.

Thatcher's idea of a diplomacy that is at once prudent and didactic is: Keep your powder dry and keep exposing the Soviet elite to the larger, more successful world. Unfortunately, that elite is comfortably supplied with material goods and would lose its claim to privilege were it to put aside the "science" of which it is custodian. The elite will not commit a grand act of self-liquidating altruism, de-mystifying and de-legitimizing themselves merely to improve the material life of the masses.

Furthermore, given what that science says about the inevitable death struggle with capitalism, the conclusion dictated by Thatcher's analysis is: Keep your powder dry, and have lots of it.

ART BUCHWALD
Talking seriously isn't enough

The argument on what weapons this country should buy is no longer based on whether they're necessary, or even if they work — but rather how the Soviets will behave in Geneva if we refuse to fund them. The president maintains if Congress doesn't authorize a billion and a half dollars to construct 21 new MX missiles the Russian negotiators will not get involved in serious bargaining.

Art Buchwald

I decided to check out this theory with Blini, my Soviet diplomatic source in Washington.

"How serious are your people in Geneva?" I asked.

"Not very serious," he replied. "Why do you ask?"

"Our president says that you won't become serious until Congress votes funds for the MX missile. Any truth to that?"

"I don't think it makes any difference whether you fund them or not. I doubt if we'll get around to talking seriously about anything until next fall."

"Why the fall?"

"Well, the Soviet delegation doesn't have a chance to leave the motherland very often, and they would love to hang around Switzerland for a while. They know if they become serious too early they could wind up spending next winter in Moscow. Our diplomats always stay on per diem as long as they can."

"With or without our missile?"

"No one could care less about the MX missile. You keep telling the world the only reason you're building it is so that you will have a bargaining chip during the negotiations. If that's all there is to the MX why should we take you seriously?"

"The MX is more than a bargaining chip," I said. "It's a symbol of America's determination to hang tough and remain strong so we can negotiate from strength. The MX tells our NATO allies that we are behind them, and it is a message to the world that this country has only one Commander-in-Chief. The MX may be useless as a weapon, but at the same time it says a lot about what kind of people we are."

"Look, if you wish to build more MXs, go right ahead. It's no skin off our backs," Blini said. "What do you want our people to do?"

"They could have the decency to threaten to walk out of the talks if the U.S. Congress votes the money for the new ones."

"Our negotiators can't afford to do that," the diplomat said. "If they walked out, they would have to immediately fly home and none of them have done their shopping yet."

"How can your people think of shopping when both superpowers are on the brink?" I said.

"What you have to understand about Soviet delegations is that when they go abroad they not only shop for themselves, but also for their relatives and superiors too. If our disarmament officials come back to Moscow from Geneva without Swiss chocolate and cuckoo clocks, their mission would be considered a failure. That is why the Russians are going to string out the talks as long as they can."

"It's hard to believe that after all the lobbying President Reagan has done, and all the arguments he has made, the MX is still not a big enough weapon system to make you people get down to serious business."

"Just because we're not shaking doesn't mean that we're not willing to discuss it. Everything is negotiable in the daytime as long as our delegation can eat in one of Geneva's three-star restaurants at night."

"There's something wrong with all this," I said. "We are spending billions of dollars for new MX weapons so you will take us seriously, and your delegation keeps stalling, just so it can gorge itself on Swiss cheese."

Blini said, "Not to mention the real cream with their coffee in the morning."

Winds could bring blowing dust to area

From Staff and Wire Reports

A West Texas dust storm could keep some Midlanders inside Friday as gusty northerly winds are expected to bring blowing dust, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport.

Forecasters are calling for fair skies tonight with a low in the mid-50s, becoming cloudy Friday with a high warming to the mid-70s. Winds will be from the southwest at 15 to 25 mph tonight, gradually diminishing to less than 20 mph. Friday's westerly winds at 10 to 15 mph and gusty will shift to the north at 20 to 30 mph with blowing dust.

Wednesday's high of 84 was 11 degrees below the record set in 1971. This morning's low was 43 degrees above the record of 19 set in 1931.

STATE

A strong low-pressure system developing over the plains states kept skies clear over the Texas Panhandle today, but forecasters predicted a slight chance of thundershowers in northern sections later.

Brisk south winds caused by the system continued to pull moisture and clouds over the eastern half of the state. The low pressure produced west winds over West Texas and the Panhandle.

Winds averaged 10 to 20 mph across the state, with the exception of the Guadalupe Mountains, where winds gusted at 40 to 50 mph overnight.

Highs Friday in North Texas were expected to range from the mid 70s in northwest sections to the mid 80s in the southeast.

NATION

Snow and high winds blew against the Rocky Mountains today after a spring day that saw balmy temperatures in the Northeast, golf ball-sized hail in Iowa and Illinois and snowstorms from Montana to Nevada.

No significant damage was reported from a tornado that touched down in central Illinois or from the Midwestern hailstorms Wednesday, authorities said.

In Colorado, where forecasters warned of 6 to 12 inches of snow, Air Force officials at the NORAD command center at Cheyenne Mountain clocked one wind gust at 98 miles per hour Wednesday afternoon.

Snow and strong winds also continued across the Western mountains and parts of the northern High Plains. Winter storm warnings for blowing and drifting snow were posted for northern Montana and the northern Sierra Nevadas.

Sightings rare, but Hoyas are in town

By CHRIS JENKINS
Copley News Service

LEXINGTON, Ky. — Again the Hoyas of Georgetown have arrived at the Final Four of college basketball, preceded by their reputation as the D.C. Intimidation Front.

Again, too, this band of alleged terrorists is hiding in the hills somewhere.

Sightings were scarce Wednesday, but the Hoyas are here. Thompson confirmed that himself, breaking his traditional, self-imposed silence by participating in a national conference call with the other three Final Four coaches.

St. John's Lou Carnesecca, Villanova's Rollie Massimino and Memphis State's Dana Kirk went along with it when asked by Lexington writers, not altogether seriously, if any of them would succeed the retiring Joe B. Hall at Kentucky. Ha ha. It seems everybody else has been mentioned for the job.

Thompson's response, however, was icy.

"I just read (in a Louisville paper) that before I get the job, there will be a Martian in the White House," Thompson said. "I fail to see the humor in racism."

Dead silence.

NCAA Final Four

THOMPSON HAS that effect on people, as does his team. Physically imposing at 6-foot-10 and something just this side of 300 pounds, Thompson levels intruders with a stare, or maybe a couple of words.

"I don't have to stay out of (Lexington) to keep people away from my players," he said. "I could put them in a gym and keep people away."

The inference is clear. Don't mess with Big Bad John. Few do.

Nor does anybody trifle with Patrick Ewing, the most dominant center in the college game since Bill Walton and not nearly so polite underneath the basket. At 7-0, 240 pounds, Ewing would be foreboding even if he had no shot. Even if he had no agility or grace. Even if he didn't have the meanest disposition on the block. Even if he didn't have a right cross.

All of which he most definitely does have.

"The last time there was anybody like that, we were talking about Chamberlain, Russell and Abdul-Jabbar, in a different sense," Carnesecca said. "Mr. Ewing is one of the great pivots of the last 50 years."

Let's talk dominance. Before the NCAA Tournament, the Hoyas won their last 12 games by an average of 18.3 points. All were games within the Big East Conference. One need only look at the Final Four field to realize the strength of that league's schedule.

Two of those victories were over St. John's, by a total of 28 points, and the Redmen still are deemed the third-best team in the nation.

St. John's and Syracuse are the only teams that beat the Hoyas this year, and the total point differential in those games was three.

THE SLEEPING giant theory would seem to apply in both Georgetown defeats. Syracuse paid for its victory with a 74-65 loss in the Big East tournament, not to mention the near-loss of star guard Dwayne "Pearl" Washington, who had a brush with extinction when an angered Ewing missed with a haymaker.

Go back further to St. John's 66-65 defeat of Georgetown at the Capital Centre, the one that snapped the Hoyas' 29-game winning streak, the one that put the Redmen atop the national rankings. Georgetown sank just 27 of 67 field-goal attempts that night.

The Hoyas went to Madison Square Garden for the Feb. 28 rematch and splattered the Redmen 85-69. Georgetown has been No. 1 ever since.

According to columnist Mike Lupica of the New York Daily News, there was a lesson for St. John's to learn from that night in Madison Square Garden.

"If you stick out your chin at Patrick Ewing," Lupica wrote, "he will knock you into next week. He will make you No. 2."

But the Redmen didn't learn well enough, for the Hoyas romped over them again for the Big East tournament title. Early in that game, the Hoyas incited another melee. This time it was backup center Ralph Dalton standing menacingly over a fallen Chris Mullin, bringing first St. John's players off the bench, then Thompson and the Georgetown reserves onto the floor. Thompson was assessed two technicals.

Bruins: Too much for Cards, 75-66

NIT Final Four

NEW YORK (AP) — The UCLA Bruins had too much experience and too much Brad Wright for the Louisville Cardinals Wednesday night in the 48th National Invitation Tournament.

"I thought the difference in the game was Brad Wright," said Louisville Coach Denny Crum after the Bruins defeated his Cardinals 75-66 in the NIT semifinals at Madison Square Garden. "He shot the ball well, got good shots and intimidated people."

The 6-foot-11 Wright was a virtual one-man show for the senior-studded Bruins, scoring 23 points on 10 of 11 shooting from the field, grabbing 12 rebounds and blocking four shots.

UCLA earned a berth in Friday night's championship game at Madison Sqyare Garden against Indiana, which earlier in the night defeated Tennessee, 74-67.

"They're a good basketball team playing well and it's tough to beat a team like that," Crum said of UCLA. "We're still a player or two short and we don't have the senior leadership that the Bruins have."

For UCLA Coach Walt Hazzard, the victory was a vindication of sorts for a drubbing his team took from St. John's last December at Madison Square Garden.

"December was a death-march for us," Hazzard said. "I said after that we'd either be dead or good. I guess now we're good. When we were here to play St. John's, we were boys. Now we're men."

UCLA led 36-33 at intermission and six times held nine-point leads before Louisville pulled even behind a run led by Billy Thompson, who scored 16 points. Thompson scored four straight points as the Cardinals made it 56-56 with 5:30 left in the game.

Then, in the last five minutes, Wright took charge, scoring six points during the decisive streak to propel UCLA to a 67-58 margin with 1:06 remaining.

The first half was closely played, with UCLA holding the biggest lead of the half at five points.

Nigel Miguel scored 20 points, including seven foul shots in the final minute, for UCLA, 20-12. The Bruins, of the Pacific-10 Conference, have won 11 of their last 12 games.

Manuel Forrest and Mark McSwain each added 11 points, while Barry Sumpter finished with 10, all in the first half, for Louisville, 19-17. The Metro Conference team will play Tennessee in Friday night's consolation game.

Indiana 74, Tennessee 67

The Indiana Hoosiers held off Tennessee's "Comeback Kids" Wednesday night, showing some grit of their own in the NIT semifinals.

"We have a tendency to let off with the lead — that happened tonight, but we were lucky enough to turn it back on," said Indiana center Uwe Blab, whose 24 points helped the Hoosiers post a 74-67 victory over Tennessee.

Tennessee, which was making a habit of thrilling comeback victories in the NIT tournament, seemed about to do the same against Indiana by rallying from a 13-point deficit early in the second half to take the lead midway through the period.

But Indiana held off that furious charge with some clutch play by Blab and U.S. Olympic team guard Steve Alford, who scored 23 points.

"Alford and Blab are the offense," said Indiana Coach Bobby Knight. "If they're off, we're in trouble."

Knight also said this was perhaps one of the least-talented teams he's had at Indiana.

"We're not a good team, but opponents will come at us as if we were in the top echelon," Knight said. "We can blow leads — tonight we did."

Tennessee Coach Don DeVoe, who had seen his team wipe out a five-point deficit against Southwestern Louisiana in the last 19 seconds of an earlier NIT game, was happy with just about everything, except the last five minutes of the game.

"We just didn't play great basketball in those last five minutes," DeVoe said. "But I'm proud of the team, especially the comeback."

The 7-foot-2 Blab scored 14 points in the first half as Indiana took a 40-30 lead at intermission.

Who's on third? Not Whitaker

Associated Press

Who's on third? No, who's on first. Maybe Lou's on third?

Nope! Lou's on second, where he's always been.

Translation: The Detroit Tigers' great experiment of shifting All-Star second baseman Lou Whitaker to third base, which Manager Sparky Anderson said was "etched in cement," ended before it began. Before the Tigers' 6-3 exhibition loss to the Pittsburgh Pirates on Wednesday night, Anderson announced that Whitaker would rather fight than switch.

"I called him in and said, 'Which do you want to play,' " Anderson explained. "I told him, 'I want to know before we go any further.' He said maybe he'd rather play second. That was it. That was all I had to hear. The man's a star. When the star wants it, that's all there is to it. I would hope you'd do what your star wants you to."

Exhibition Baseball

Instead, rookie Chris Pittaro, whose outstanding play at second planted the seed in Anderson's mind, will move to third, a position he has never played. Anderson said he was confident Pittaro could make the switch.

"Like I told him, I don't care how many errors he makes, I'm going to stick with him as long as I can," Anderson said. "There's always the chance I'm not going to like what I see, but I'm going to stick with it a month — a month for sure.

"The instincts the boy has are so outstanding I have no doubts. With the hands he's got he should have no trouble catching the ball."

Whitaker never played third in any of the Tigers' exhibition games.

Pittaro, not surprisingly, said the switch to third didn't bother him. "I'm just glad to play in the major leagues," he said.

Meanwhile, Jason Thompson and Doug Frobel homered for Pittsburgh while Jose DeLeon pitched six innings, allowing three hits and one run. The setback dropped the world champion Tigers under .500 for the first time at 9-10.

Elsewhere, Frank Viola pitched seven scoreless innings and Greg Gagne and Gary Gaetti homered to lead the Minnesota Twins over the New York Mets 4-0. Viola, who has a

Season ends with Big East Invite

It will arrive on your TV set this weekend in a plain brown envelope marked NCAA Tournament Final Four. That's a thinly-veiled attempt to convey the impression that the contents hold something of interest to folks on both sides of the Mississippi.

It comes with an NCAA disguise, but officially it's the Big East Invitational.

Georgetown, of course, is going to win intramural competition so the only question is, how come Boston College and Villanova aren't meeting in the other semifinal while the Hoyas and St. John's are staging their fourth national championship game of the season?

There it stands as big life, Memphis State, the Tiger-sized fly in the Big East ointment. How did it get there? But for a lucky shot at the end, it would be Boston College.

They only invited five Big East teams to this shindig. Instead of extending six invitations to the Big 10, what if the NCAA committee invited Providence, Conneticut, and Seton Hall? Can you picture what the final eight would have looked like.

THESE THINGS run in cycles and sometimes it's difficult to determine which are the strong conferences and which are not in any particular year.

Back in the Wooden years, UCLA was the only conference, although for appearances sake the Bruins were a member of the Pac-8.

Then, the Big 10 flexed its muscles for a while and, if memory serves, even had two teams in the finals one year.

Of late, the Atlantic Coast Conference and Big East have been the powers with Houston the interloper that never could quite dunk that last rebound.

Although the Big 10, riding its past performances, remained in the public eye thanks to Bobby Knight's courtside behavior, it was still generally assumed that the Big East and ACC were the Mr. Bigs of college basketball.

As the NCAA playoffs began, it soon became apparent the selection committee could have saved itself a lot of trouble by picking its field from the Big East and ACC along with a few special deserving guests...you know, like Lehigh, Mercer, Loyola, Navy, just to avoid byes.

THIS YEAR'S title was decided last spring when Akeem Alajuwon decided to forego his senior year and join Ralph Sampson on the Houston Rockets.

The only remaining question seemed to revolve around the relative strengths of the Big East and ACC. Patrick Ewing gave the Big E the edge at the top, but not every team had a Ewing.

Well, last week, the two conferences began playing head-to-head and it was the ACC that staggered away rubbing ugly red welts.

It's easy to blame the 7-0 Ewing for the disparity between the leagues, but it just isn't so. Last week, ACC champion Georgia Tech had Ewing exactly where it wanted him, on the bench with four personals for most of the second half. That's when Georgetown pulled away.

Face it, even without Ewing, the Hoyas are title timber. So don't expect the Big East to fade away next season. However, without Ewing, the trump card that insures No. 1, there may be some suspense left for the post-season invitational.

McEnroe back after three-week layoff

John McEnroe, the world's top-ranked tennis player, is back after a three-week absence because of a wrist injury.

And he appeared to be in top form, both on the tennis court and in the postmatch press conference.

McEnroe downed West German Boris Becker 6-4, 6-3 Wednesday night in the first round of the $380,000 Fila Trophy indoor tournament, and after the match he pointedly addressed the fact that the United States meets West Germany in the next round of the Davis Cup in August, probably without McEnroe. The 17-year-old Becker, McEnroe said, "will be a problem for the U.S. team."

McEnroe said that his future engagements with the U.S. Davis Cup team were at risk following a pledge of good behavior required by the U.S. Tennis Association for Davis Cup players. "I have not yet signed the pledge and I won't sign it ... My father advised me against signing," he explained.

Sweden's Anders Jarryd, the No. 2 seed, also scored a first-round victory, 6-3, 6-4, against Italy's Simone Colombo...

Second-seeded Ivan Lendl coasted past John Lloyd, 6-3, 6-3, and unseeded Sammy Giammalva of Houston upset No. 4 Aaron Krickstein, 7-5, 6-4, to highlight action at the Paine Webber Tennis Classic Wednesday.

Lendl overpowered Lloyd with eight aces and had no trouble holding serve as he advanced to the second round where he will face Greg Holmes of Danville, Calif.

Krickstein, of Grosse Pointe, Mich., and ranked 10th in the world, fell prey to the serve-and-volley game of Giammalva.

In other afternoon matches, No. 6 seed Eliot Teltscher of Palos Altos Verdes Estates, Calif., beat unseeded Ken Flach of St. Louis, 6-4, 6-3. Seventh-seed Johan Kriek of Naples, Fla. disposed of unseeded John Fitzgerald of Australia 6-2, 7-5. And eighth-seeded Scott Davis of Balmoor coasted past Mel Purcell of Murray, Ky., 6-2, 6-1...

CYCLING — Roy Knickman, of Boulder, Colo., completed a seven-mile course in 14 minutes and 10 seconds, leaving behind by five seconds second-place Karl Maxon, of Eugene, Ore., in the Beatrice Bicycle Classic men's time trial Wednesday. Jannus Kuum, of Norway, was third in 14.16.

In women's competition, France's Jeannie Longo won in 15.51, edging out by two seconds 1984 Olympic silver medalist Rebecca Twigg, of Seattle. Patti Cashman, of Boston, was third in 16.1...

FOOTBALL — Donald Trump, the big-spending owner of the New Jersey Generals, says he would prefer the USFL wait another year before switching to a fall schedule.

"I never wanted to make the move until 1987," Trump was quoted in Thursday's editions of the New York Daily News.

The USFL, which has played a spring schedule since its inception, had recently announced plans to play in the fall of 1986, which would set up head-to-head competition with the NFL. But John Bassett, owner of the Tampa Bay Bandits, firmly said this week that his team would not play games next fall.

Trump, who described himself as "always being a fall player," said he would also prefer to wait, partly because that would give the USFL another year of network exposure...

VOLLEYBALL — The United States and Korea scored opening-round victories Wednesday in the Canada Cup for women's volleyball tournament. Angela Rock, the game's most valuable player, had 22 kills and seven service aces as the powerful American team defeated Canada 12-15, 15-10, 15-6, 15-13.

Korea swept its best-of-five match against Japan 15-8, 15-7 and 15-9. The four teams play again tonight when the round-robin tournament switches to Regina. The final games are slated for Saturday...

BASKETBALL — Portland Coach Jack Ramsay says Jim Paxson may rejoin the Trail Blazers this week. The team had announced the sharpshooting guard probably would be lost for the season after he suffered a dislocated right ring finger in a collision with teammate Tom Scheffler during a practice session March 11 in Kansas City. But the prognosis was changed when Paxson returned to Portland and began receiving treatment from Blazer team physician Robert Cook...

BASEBALL — Joe Pepitone, the Ex-New York Yankees star arrested two weeks ago on drug charges, will not have his case heard by a grand jury for another two weeks. "It's adjourned until mid-April," STephen Flamhaft, Pepitone's attorney, said Wednesday.

Pepitone, Robert Oates and Thomas Carbone, all of Brooklyn, were arrested March 18 and charged with several counts of drug possession and one count of possessing a loaded .22-caliber pistol. All three have pleaded innocent and are free on bond...

BOWLING — Amleto Monacelli rolled a 300 game and jumped out to a 99-pin lead over Mark Baker after the second round of the $130,000 Fair Lanes Open professional bowling touramernt.

Monacelli, who rolled his first PBA 300 two weeks ago in Overland Park, Kan., had games of 258, 209, 234, 300, 232 and 244 for a 1,497 six-game block. That upped his total pinfall to 2,874 — a 239.5 average — and lifted him from fourth place into the lead.

Baker, a one-time tour winner, celebrated his 24th birthday by improving from 17th place to second with 2,775. Three-time champion Bob Handley was third, just 10 pins behind Baker at 2,765. Sam Maccarone and Leroy Bornhop completed the top five with 2,730 and 2,709, respectively. First-round leader Del Ballard Jr. fell to seventh place with 2,700.

E.J. Lee can matchup against ODU

Women's Final Four

AUSTIN (AP) — Coach Marianne Stanley of Old Dominion says among the "exciting matchups" at the NCAA Women's Final Four in basketball, Eun Jung Lee of Northeast Louisiana would be a good match "against all of Old Dominion."

"When you've got a point guard (Lee) that makes lob passes from halfcourt ... and when you've got some big kids that can catch those kinds of passes, it's tough," says Stanley.

"E.J. just does some great, great things," Stanley said of the 5-foot-6 junior guard from Seoul, Korea, who averages 18 points a game. "I told my kids, don't be surprised if she dropkicks one into the basket."

Fifth-ranked Old Dominion, 29-3, opens the tournament Friday night against No. 2 Northeast Louisiana, 30-1, which has a 15-game winning streak.

Western Kentucky, which upset No. 1 Texas 92-90 in the Mideast regional semifinals at Bowling Green, Ky., plays Georgia in the second game Friday night.

Coach Paul Sanderford of Western Kentucky, 28-5, was asked at a Wednesday news conference with the other coaches if his No. 14 Lady Toppers were in a "no-lose situation."

"I feel like we're the underdog. I kind of like being the underdog. The pressure's on Andy," Sanderford said of Georgia Coach Andy Landers, whose Lady Bulldogs, 28-4, are ranked No. 8.

Sanderford said his team might have a "problem with the intimidation factor," because this will be its first appearance in the Final Four. "If we can get by the first half and stay close, we've got a chance," he said.

"What do you mean 'intimidated by?' said Landers. "You've already beat us once."

Western Kentucky, playing at home, edged Georgia 72-67 in overtime Dec. 12.

Landers referred to "Cinderella Sanderford," and said Western Kentucky will "play about seven or eight different defenses and three or four different offenses, eight or nine different players. What you don't expect is what you'll get from Western Kentucky."

Coach Linda Harper of Northeast Louisiana said her team's victory over Louisiana Tech in regionals was the "Super Bowl" for Lady Indian fans, "so now we've got to turn around and get ourselves mentally prepared for the game Friday night."

"We do not match up with Old Dominion in size — we'll be the squatty bodies looking up at them — but we've done that during the year, so we'll try to do another good job," said Harper.

Stanley responded, "I don't know that anybody can outsize Chana Perry and Lisa Ingram (of Northeast Louisiana)." Perry is 6-foot-4, Ingram is 6-3, and between them they average nearly 40 points a game.

Stanley recalled that Old Dominion had opened its season at home in Norfolk, Va., by defeating Texas, and she said, "We talked about wouldn't it be fun and exciting and interesting if we could start the season with Texas and finish the season in Texas."

Sanderford was teased Wednesday about being booed in Austin, the home of the Texas Lady Longhorns, and he said, "If we play them 10 times, they win nine but we won the one that got us here.

"I'm not very popular with the fans in Austin, and I know that my team's probably not very popular with the fans in Austin, but I'm extremely popular with the coaches — especially the three sitting up here — because none of them wanted to play Texas."

Now is time for college shot clock

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. (AP) — The men who write the rules for college basketball are considering putting in a 45 second shot clock, cutting off the bottom of the backboard and various plans to end the parade to the foul line at the end of games.

The shot clock is the surest bet, according to Dr. Edward Steitz, athletic director at Springfield College, who has been the NCAA's national editor and interpreter for basketball rules since 1966.

"The 45-second clock has gotten very strong support from the 19 conferences that experimented with it this season and in our annual poll. It looks like its time has come," Steitz said before leaving for the Rules Committee's meetings in Lexington, Ky., this week.

He said 62 percent of the 700 college coaches and 87 percent of the 660 college referees who answered his annual poll favored using a 45-second clock. Statistics on shots taken and made show that it has had little effect on the flow of the game, except to prevent an outright stall.

If adopted, the shot clock would be put into effect for all NCAA games at all levels, including the chamionship tournament, he said.

For the past three years, conferences have been allowed to experiment with the clock during the regular season, but not during the tournament. With the expansion of the Division I tournament to 64 teams, slow-down tactics have become especially controversial this year.

In contrast, little interest remains in the three-point shot, and with less than one-third of the coaches backing the proposal it appears 'dead for now," Steitz said.

Besides the clock, Steitz said the "primary consideration" of the Rules Committee is finding a ways to prevent the team that's behind from fouling in hopes of getting another possession in the closing minutes of the game.

"We want to get rid of fouling for profit. Not only is there the potential for injury to the players, but the image of the game is at stake," Steitz said. "Basketball is now the only sport where you can be rewarded for committing a foul."

A proposal to change the college rule to give the team fouled the option of either taking the free throws or getting the ball out of bounds received the backing of 44 percent of the coaches and 45 percent of the referees polled, he said.

But Steitz said he questioned whether that proposal, similar to the international rule that will be in effect for the 1988 Olympics, is enough to discourage coaches.

"Personally, I don't think it is enough," he said, suggesting instead that from the time a team goes into the 1-and-1 it have the option of getting the ball out of bounds after taking the first shot of the 1-and-1 or two-shot foul.

"We've got to make the penalty so severe coaches won't consider ordering their players to commit a foul," he said. "If the other team just gets the option of taking the ball out of bounds, the team that's behind can still look to steal the inbounds pass without falling further behind."

He would also like to see a player who is deliberately grabbed and fouled at midcourt on a break-away play, as well as one that is deliberately fouled in the act of shooting, get two shots and possession of the ball. Half of the coaches polled and 55 percent of the referees supported that proposed change.

Another proposed change that may be less noticable to fans than team doctors is a plan to cut the bottom six to eight inches off the rectangular backboards.

The change, which has also attracted the interest of the professional leagues, is aimed at protecting today's high-leaping players from smashing their heads or hands on the lower part of the rectangular backboard, Steitz said. About 12 percent of the referees polled said they had officiated games this season in which a player was injured on the backboard.

"There's no real need for the lower part of the backboard and the ordinary person wouldn't be able to notice the difference," Steitz said.

"We haven't made any changes in the backboards since the 1950's, but the players and the game have changed a great deal," he said, recalling that backboards were originally installed in the early days of the game, invented in 1891 at Springfield College, "to prevent our rowdy students from sitting behind the basket and batting the ball away before it could go in.."

From Staff Reports

Last Tuesday, the Midland High Bulldogs were falling into a deep hole in the second inning of a District 4-5A baseball game against Odessa High. They were down 4-0 and the Bronchos still had the bases loaded.

The Bulldogs were given new life when the dark clouds over the Tall City started dumping their load, drenching the field and forcing the game to be cancelled.

Today, the Bulldogs and Bronchos will replay the game at 4 p.m. at Zachery Field. All action from the previous game will be wiped out and the two teams will start from scratch.

Good bridge players are usually pessimists. In planning the play, they look on the dark side of things. Then, if nothing bad happens, they are pleasantly surprised. But if the cards aren't lying well, they are prepared.

North-South bid very well to get to an excellent heart slam. After cue-bids in the minor suits, South's jump over game showed interest in slam but no control of spades. North now knew that he had the right values for slam.

Declarer won the ace of clubs, drew trumps in three rounds and could have claimed his slam had diamonds behaved reasonably. But the 4-1 split meant that declarer had to lose a trick in the suit as well as the ace of spades. Down one.

It is unfortunate that such fine bidding was squandered by such poor play. Instead of relying on breaks in both red suits, declarer should have planned to try to protect himself against a 4-1 diamond break.

Declarer should draw only two rounds of trumps, then cash the ace-king of diamonds. If diamonds are 3-2, nothing has been lost. Declarer draws the last trump, cashes out the diamonds and establishes a spade for his contract.

However, should diamonds break 4-1, declarer will make his slam whenever the defender with three hearts also holds the long diamonds. Declarer can then ruff a diamond in dummy, get back to hand with a club ruff to draw the last trump, then set up a spade for his twelfth trick.

'We Are the World' organizers delighted with earnings

By CAROLYN SKORNECK
Associated Press Writer

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. — "We Are The World," the fund-raising anthem by 45 music superstars to battle hunger in Africa and the United States, is a fund-raising blockbuster despite its No. 2 rating by Billboard magazine, its promoter says.

The rating "disappointed me some, but it's hard to be disappointed when you've raised $8 million in the past two weeks," said Ken Kragen, who organized the recording.

Kragen, executive director of the United Support of Artists for Africa Foundation, had predicted the single would skyrocket to No. 1 in two weeks.

"I can't turn the radio on without hearing the song, and I haven't been in a store that hasn't said it's the fastest selling record they've ever seen," said Kragen, who manages such stars as Lionel Richie and Kenny Rogers.

The record was inspired by a similar effort to aid millions of drought and famine victims in Ethiopia and other African nations by British rock stars. The British recording was called "Do They Know It's Christmas."

The song hit No. 21 on the ratings its first week then leaped to No. 5 its second week. The list is compiled from a national sample of stores, sales reports and radio play lists, said Carol Henderson of Billboard.

Edging out "We Are The World" for the top slot on the upcoming Hot 100 singles list is Phil Collins' "One More Night."

"World," written by Richie and Michael Jackson, was recorded in an all-night session Jan. 28. It features such stars as Richie, Jackson, Rogers, Bruce Springsteen, Tina Turner, Ray Charles, Harry Belafonte, Stevie Wonder, Bob Dylan, Smokey Robinson, Cyndi Lauper, the Pointer Sisters and Paul Simon. Quincy Jones conducted.

The USA for Africa Foundation has raised $8.7 million, Kragen said. The foundation's net from sales of 2.9 million singles is $4.1 million, with another $1.8 million from sales of 542,000 extended-play versions.

The foundation also has made $600,000 from $1 million in sales of such merchandise as sweatshirts and pins, $2 million from Home Box Office for exclusive rights to an hour-long video and $200,000 in cash donations.

"We expect our first disbursement in June, or perhaps May," foundation spokeswoman Wendy Ferris said.

An album featuring the longer version of "We Are The World" plus nine songs contributed by various top artists will be in the stores next Monday, selling for $9.98, said a Columbia Records spokeswoman who spoke only on the condition that her name not be used.

The album's songs are Steve Perry's "If Only For The Moment, Girl;" the Pointer Sisters' "Just A Little Closer;" Bruce Springsteen & the E Street Band's "Trapped;" Northern Lights' "Tears Are Not Enough;" Prince and the Revolution's "4 The Tears In Your Eyes;" Chicago's "Good For Nothing;" Tina Turner's "Total Control;" Kenny Rogers' "A Little More Love," and Huey Lewis & the News' "Trouble In Paradise."

Billy Dee Williams gets his star

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — The day may have been rainy, but for film and television star Billy Dee Williams the 1,801st star on Hollywood's Walk of Fame shone brightly.

Williams, who appears as Brady Lloyd on the prime-time soap opera "Dynasty" was joined by about 200 people Wednesday, including his wife, children, twin sister and mother, as his star was unveiled just off Sunset Boulevard.

The 47-year-old actor won star status as Louis McKay in "Lady Sings the Blues," opposite Diana Ross' Billie Holliday and also appeared in "Return of the Jedi" and "The Empire Strikes Back."

Williams' first television role was on "The FBI," and in 1971, he received an Emmy nomination and national recognition for his work on ABC's award-winning production, "Brian's Song."

NEW YORK (AP) — Presidential memorabilia caught the eye of publisher-collector Malcolm Forbes, who outbid the competition at an auction for a portrait of Abraham Lincoln and his son Tad and a letter from James Madison.

Forbes, 65, publisher of Forbes magazine bought the 120-year-old photograph of the Lincolns Wednesday for $104,500 and the 1833 letter from Madison to Daniel Webster for $22,000, said Matthew Weigman, a spokesman for Sotheby Parke Bernet auction house.

The photograph, showing the 10-year-old Tad standing next to his seated father as they look at a large studio album of photos, became one of the most popular images of Lincoln.

The items and others brought $907,747 for Elsie O. Sang, whose late husband, Philip D. Sang, was a renowned collector, Weigman said.

A private bidder spent $34,100 for four pages of a draft version of "Uncle Tom's Cabin," signed by author Harriett Beecher Stowe.

The total would have been higher except for the last-minute withdrawal of a document signed by Betsy Ross. The city of Philadelphia is claiming that the document, a pre-printed letter of estate administration, was stolen from its files.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Shelley Long will be allowed out from behind the bar on the set of television's "Cheers." She gave birth to the baby that caused producers to hide her condition.

Miss Long, who plays cocktail waitress Diane Chambers in the NBC comedy, gave birth Wednesday to a 6-pound, 14-ounce girl named Juliana, spokeswoman Lisa Kasteler said.

The baby is the first child for Ms. Long and her husband, Bruce Tyson, Ms. Kasteler said.

In filming recent episodes of "Cheers," set in a cozy Boston bar, Miss Long's pregnancy was disguised by shooting her either from above the waist or while standing behind the bar.

Belzer, host of the Lifetime cable network's "Hot Properties" was interviewing Mr. T and Hogan for the live telecast when the incident occurred Wednesday, said Michael Katz, a publicist for the show.

Mr. T, 32, and Hogan will team up in an exhibition wrestling match Sunday.

"Hulk Hogan was demonstrating the 'sleeper hold' on Richard when he (Belzer) fell and hit his head," Katz said. "At first he passed out and when he regained consciouness he was bleeding."

Katz said Belzer was taken to Mount Sinai Hospital where he was treated and released.

NEW YORK (AP) — In the television business, they're called teasers, little promotional snippets that tell viewers what's coming up. Many are crass and titillating, but the one that closed the "Today" show was quite dignified.

It came from Pope John Paul II.

NBC's "Today" program will emanate from Rome all next week, and the pope mentioned it Wednesday during his general audience from Nervi Hall in the Vatican: "I am particularly pleased to welcome the group from the American television network NBC, which will be broadcasting directly to the United States from the Vatican during Holy Week."

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — The lawyer for a reporter and editor of the National Enquirer said he may appeal a ruling ordering them to testify in California against a woman accused of murdering comedian John Belushi.

In a hearing Wednesday before Circuit Judge Thomas Johnson, lawyer Garson Sweifach argued that California prosecutors already have enough evidence against Catherine Evelyn Smith, a Canadian.

That evidence includes tape recordings of interviews she granted the tabloid and a taped interview with a freelance reporter, in which she purportely confesses to the crime more than 20 times.

Flyers' winning streak snapped, Jets keep rolling

Associated Press

The Philadelphia Flyers' winning streak has ended at 11 games, but the Winnipeg Jets are at nine and still counting.

Steve Ludzik jammed in a rebound at 7:34 of the final period and the Chicago Black Hawks got two insurance goals 28 seconds apart from Steve Larmer and Billy Gardner to post a 5-2 victory over Philadelphia. It not only snapped the Flyers' winning streak, but prevented them from clinching first place in the National Hockey League's Patrick Division.

Ludzik, playing on the Hawks' fourth line, notched the game-winner after Rick Paterson's 10-foot wrist shot was kicked out by Flyer goalie Pelle Lindbergh.Ludzik, standing just outside the crease, picked up the rebound and beat Lindbergh on the stick side. The goal came less than a minute after Philadelphia's Brian Propp tied the game 2-2 with his 41st goal of the season and second of the game.

The Hawks' triumph moved them within three points of Norris Division-leading St. Louis, which lost to Toronto 4-2.

"As luck would have it, Ludzik was in the right place at the right time," Philadelphia Coach Mike Keenan said of Chicago's tie-breaking goal. "But from that point on the Hawks played like this was the seventh game of the Stanley Cup. Their play was inspirational, especially when you consider we had won our last 11 in a row and played another great game."

Jets 5, Canucks 3

Dale Hawerchuk scored one goal and set up two others as Winnipeg, which trailed 2-0 after the first seven minutes, rallied for a club-record ninth consecutive triumph.The Jets, who lead third-place Calgary by four points in the Smythe Division, also have won seven games in a row on the road, longest in the NHL this season.

Doug Smail, Laurie Boschman, Jim Nill and Paul MacLean also scored for the Jets.Jean-Marc Lanthier, Tony Tanti and Peter McNab scored for the Canucks.

Maple Leafs 4, Blues 2

A power-play goal by John Anderson with 6:40 remaining and Bill Derlago's short-handed goal into an empty net with 1:02 left paced Toronto.Joe Mullen gave St. Louis the early lead at 4:18 of the opening period but Toronto's Stewart Gavin tied it late in the period and Rick Vaive put the Maple Leafs ahead 2-1 with 31 seconds left in the second period.

"It's hard to get up for a game against a team that's already out of the playoffs," St. Louis Coach Jacques Demers said. "They tend to put you to sleep. If the Leafs had played like that in October, November and December they'd be in the playoffs today."

Whalers 3, Capitals 1

Goalie Mike Liut turned aside 31 shots as Hartford, already eliminated from the playoffs, stretched its club-record winning streak to six games. The Whalers took a 2-0 lead on goals by Kevin Dineen and Sylvain Turgeon in the first two periods.

Liut preserved the shutout until Bengt Gustafsson scored for Washington at 6:10 of the final period. Ron Francis responded for Hartford at 7:56.

Sabres 3, Rangers 2

New York's Jim Wiemer scored just nine seconds into the game but Phil Housley scored two goals, including a third-period tie-breaker, as Buffalo climbed within a point of Quebec and Montreal in the Adams Division.

Housley's game-winning goal at 7:26 of the final period came just after Buffalo had been unsuccessful on a power-play attempt. New York's Anders Hedberg tried to clear the puck out but Housley trapped it at the blue line, skated in and beat Ranger goalie John Vanbiesbrouck with a 30-footer on the stick side.

Penguins 4, Devils 3

Mitch Lamoureux scored two goals to help Pittsburgh end a five-game losing streak and hand New Jersey its eighth consecutive loss.Mario Lemieux and Warren Young also scored for Pittsburgh. It was the 38th goal of the season for each player.

Flames 4, Kings 2

Rookie Perry Berezan, in his fourth National Hockey League game, had a goal and an assist to lead Calgary to a come-from-behind victory.Berezan blasted a 20-foot slapshot between the legs of Los Angeles goalie Bob Janecyk with 4:59 left in the second period to snap a 2-2 tie.

After falling behind 2-0, Calgary rallied to tie the game on goals by Richard Kromm and Gino Cavallini in a 1:46 span early in the second period.

San Antonio dumps Golden State to even record at 37

Associated Press

Mike Mitchell figured he had some things to make up for. And the San Antonio Spurs figured they had some things to show the Golden State Warriors.

"I wanted to hit those last couple of shots because I had blown a few fast-break opportunities," Mitchell said Wednesday night after sinking consecutive baskets in the fiiana for the worst record in the league.

The triumph enabled the host Spurs to even their record at 37-37.

"We are struggling and we know we can play better," Spurs Coach Cotton Fitzsimmons said. "It's been a real struggle to win these 37 games to get to .500."

San Antonio led by nine points going into the fourth quarter before Golden State closed within 120-117 with 1:30 remaining. But Mitchell's two baskets clinched the victory.

"We just couldn't come up with the right numbers tonight," Warriors Coach John Bach said. "A turnover, or a missed free throw, or a missed defensive assignment really hurt us."

George Gervin scored 29 points for the Spurs, while Larry Smith had 21 for the Warriors.

Jazz 116, Mavericks 101

Reserve Fred Roberts scored 12 points in the fourth quarter to spark Utah past Dallas.

The Jazz led 86-81 going into the final period before Roberts and Adrian Dantley, who scored eight of his 25 points in the fourth quarter, helped clinch the victory.

Darrell Griffith led host Utah with 30 points and Thurl Bailey had 21.

Mark Aguirre got 33 points for the Mavericks.

Pistons 127, Rockets 110

In Detroit, Jo scored the game's next six points and had cruised to a 102-92 lead at the end of the quarter.

Akeem Olajuwon scored 19 points in the first quarter and finished with 33 for Houston, which has already clinched a playoff spot in the Western Conference. Ralph Sampson added 26 for the Rockets.

Hawks 125, Pacers 99

Dominique Wilkins scored 30 points as Atlanta stayed close in the race for the final Eastern Conference playoff spot.

The Hawks are battling Cleveland for that last berth — they are 29-44 with nine games remaining while Cleveland is 29-43.

Atlanta turned the game into rout from the start in sending host Indiana to its eighth straight loss. The Hawks streaked to an 18-2 lead, although the Pacers managed to pull within three points on two occasions, at 41-38 in the second quarter and at 89-86 in the fourth period.

Celtics 105, Nets 95

Kevin McHale and Larry Bird were too much for the Nets in East Rutherford, N.J.

McHale scored 23 points and grabbed 16 rebounds while Bird tossed in 22 points and had 12 rebounds as the Celtics won their ninth straight game.

Boston was ahead comfortably in the first half, using a 14-1 spree to open a 26-12 lead in the first quarter. Another 13-1 run made it 52-35 in the second period.

New Jersey got within seven points early in the fourth quarter, but could not threaten thereafter. Darryl Dawkins and Albert King had 18 apiece for the Nets.

76ers 115, Bullets 97

Julius Erving scored 22 points, including 13 during a game-breaking spree in the third quarter that sent Philadelphia to victory.

The 76ers led 56-47 at halftime, and then scored the first nine points in the third quarter. They kept pouring it on and increased their lead to 75-53 midway through the period.

Andrew Toney scored 18 points and Moses Malone 17 for Philadelphia, while Jeff Malone had 22 and Cliff Robinson 19 for visiting Washington.

Lakers 122, SuperSonics 97

Kareem Abdul-Jabbar and Byron Scott scored 21 points apiece to help Los Angeles resume its winning ways.

The Lakers, 53-19, had won 10 straight games before losing in Portland on Tuesday night, and got back on track by beating Seattle for just the second time in five games this season.

HOYAS

The way Georgetown guard Michael Jackson made it sound, it was all part of a Thompson plan to get the Redmen flustered.

"That's coach's system — composure," Jackson said. "When he comes to the huddle (after the flare-up), he says, 'I got it, fellas. Don't worry about it. I got 'em where I want 'em.' "

Still, Thompson denies the intimidation factor, sort of.

"The physical connotation gets blown way out of perspective," Thompson said. "The word 'intimidation' is overworked. Anybody who's good enough to earn a scholarship is not going to get scared out of a basketball game."

Then again, Thompson added, "teams who don't play aggressively are watching us play here."

FACT IS, the Hoyas are less aggressive by at least one player than the Georgetown team that drubbed Houston in last year's national championship game at Seattle. Michael Graham, the most notorious Hoya last year, left Georgetown due to academic problems.

Another fact is that the Hoyas are a better team than they were last year. Emphasis on team. They might, just might, have gotten this far without Ewing.

Foul trouble kept Ewing on the bench for more than half the Big East tournament title game, yet the Hoyas had almost twice as many rebounds (36-19) as St. John's. Jackson, Bill Martin, David Wingate and Reggie Williams each had at least 14 points.

"The '84 team was better defensively," Thompson said, "but this team is better offensively."

The last time St. John's and Georgetown played, Thompson employed a box-and-one defense, chasing Mullin with either Wingate or Perry McDonald. Asked if that again is his strategy, Thompson said, "I plan on playing myself if it'll help me win."

According to Thompson, playing St. John's used to be a simple matter of stopping Mullin, the All-America guard who was chosen over Ewing for player-of-the-year honors in at least one poll. But it's gotten tougher over the years, Thompson said, because St. John's center Bill Wennington has become a factor.

"Patrick respects Wennington an awful lot," Thompson said. "He's got to play him honest now. When Wennington first played at St. John's, we could cheat a lot on him. We can't do that anymore."

Not that Wennington — or Mullin, or anybody — is expected to stand between Ewing and his last NCAA title. This, then, could be brutal.

"John is a very nice fellow," Carnesecca said facetiously. "He'd never crush you. He just anesthetizes you and sets you up nicely for the operation."

And by then, it's too late.

Cannon's NFL career over?

DALLAS (AP) — The pro football career of Dallas Cowboys linebacker Billy Cannon Jr. may have been ended by a spinal injury, team officials say.

Cowboys Coach Tom Landry told Cannon on Tuesday that he has not received medical clearance to play for the National Football League team this season.

A congenital spinal condition was knocked unconscious and suffered a brief paralysis of his arms and legs before being helped from the field.

"Billy is very down, as you might expect," Landry said. "This was a very tough decision for us. But we can't pass him when these doctors show us the extent of the injury. It's just too bad that he got hit the way he did."

Dollar falls further

LONDON (AP) — The dollar, plummeting from record heights reached just four weeks ago, fell further early today amid continued concern over the health of America's economy and banking system. Gold prices were lower, too.

For the dollar, now at its lowest level of the year against most currencies, today was the third straight day of a headlong drop.

"The Incredible Diving Dollar," read a headline in The Daily Express of London. It noted the U.S. currency had shed nearly 20 percent of its value against the British pound since reaching an all-time high of 1.0395 to the pound on Feb. 26.

The dollar began the day with a drop in Tokyo, where trading ends before Europe's business day begins. It slid to a closing 253.30 yen from Wednesday's 254.00. Later, in London, it was quoted at 252.30 yen.

In Europe, the dollar fell below 2,000 Italian lire for the first time in a month and was testing the 3.10 West German mark level as well.

At midmorning, one dollar bought:

–3.1050 West German marks, down from 3.1500 late Wednesday.

–2.6280 Swiss francs, down from 2.6635.

–9.4900 French francs, down from 9.6050.

–3.5245 Dutch guilders, down from 3.5580.

–1,997.50 Italian lire, down from 2,008.50.

–1.3665 Canadian dollars, down from 1.3655.

The British pound was quoted at $1.2373, compared with $1.2310 Wednesday. British banks took advantage of sterling's strength to cut interest rates by a half percentage point. The rate they charge their best borrowers is now around 14 percent.

Panel urges tougher action in US-Japan trade

Associated Press

A Senate panel has approved a resolution urging President Reagan to take tough retaliatory measures against Japan unless it further opens its markets to U.S. products.

The White House, meanwhile, gave a cool response to reports that the Japanese government will allow car exports to the United States to rise about 25 percent — to between 2.2 million and 2.3 million vehicles — over the next 12 months.

And in other economic news Wednesday, the value of new construction contracts in the United States slumped 5 percent in February in large part because a sharp decline in public works projects, a research firm reported.

The resolution concerning U.S.-Japan trade was approved by the Senate Finance Committee.

With some lawmakers declaring that the two nations are in "a trade war," the measure called on Reagan to strike back with tariffs and quotas unless Japan compensates the United States for the expected increase of auto imports to this country starting next month.

"I hate to think that's what we're coming to," Sen. Robert Packwood, R-Ore., told the panel. "An eye for an eye. But that's maybe the only language that's understood."

In Tokyo, the Japanese government declined to comment on newspaper reports that Japanese automakers will restrain their exports to the United States.

White House spokesman Larry Speakes said the administration had received no notification from the Japanese of a new trade policy but that Reagan believes "export restraints are not any substitute for market opening."

Reagan announced March 1 that he would not ask Japan to continue restraints on car exports for a fifth year, sparking fears that Japanese companies would flood the U.S. market with their cars.

But the Ministry of International Trade and Industry has decided that while it will allow additional exports, a continuation of restraints is unavoidable in light of Japan's large trade surplus with the United States, the economic daily Nihon Keizai Shimbun and the nationwide Asahi Shimbun reported.

The U.S. trade deficit with Japan rose to a record $36.8 billion last year from $21.6 billion in 1983.

"There's no surprise in the Japanese decision," said Chrysler spokesman John Guineven. "We expected a flood of Japanese cars if the restraints came off. An additional 400,000 to 500,000 cars coming to the U.S. from Japan over the next 12 months is a 25 percent increase — the equivalent of two assembly plants and six or seven supplier plants, and all the jobs that go with them."

The value of new construction contracts fell last month to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of $204.14 billion from $215.13 billion in January, according to F.W. Dodge, unit of McGraw-Hill Inc. that follows the building industry.

Contracting for public works and utilities construction in February tumbled 24 percent, while contracting for residential construction dropped 3 percent, the firm said.

George A. Christie, vice president and chief economist for F.W. Dodge, said February's decline "was more the result of erratic funding of publicly financed construction than it was a reaction to economic con[illegible]tions."

He also noted that "commercial building, the corner of the construction market that is most sensitive to business activity, was having one of its best months in February."

Southland Corp., Marine Transport make agreement

TULSA, Okla. (SWN) — C.R. Rittenberry, president, chairman and chief executive officer of Southland Energy Corp., has announced that Southland has reached an agreement with Marine Transport Lines Inc., one of the oldest shipping companies in the United States, to acquire from MTLI 600,000 shares of MTLI common stock in exchange for all of the capital stock of International Oil and Bulk Trade Co. Ltd.

Southland has committed to acquire all of the IOBT stock in exchange for 2,000,000 newly issued shares of Southland common stock. IOBT's business activities consist of participation in the financing package of an MTLI-owned vessel, MARINE RENAISSANCE.

"We are pleased that the conclusion of this transaction will improve Southland's financial condition by significantly increasing its net worth," said Rittenberry, who has been nominated as a director of Marine Transport.

"The international bulk shipping industry figures importantly in Southland's present activities. We believe that this significant investment in Marine Transport represents an excellent prospect to create additional value for Southland's shareholders."

Southland, based in Tulsa, is a multi-national resource company with operations in oil and gas, mining and computer services. Marine Transport, based in Secaucus, N.J., operates 34 oceangoing ships which transport bulk commodities primarily under longterm contracts with various oil, chemical, agricultural and steel companies.

Marine Transport also offers a variety of shipping-related services such as management, ship agency, consulting, financing and purchasing.

Canadian agreement rebounds oil activity

New York Times News Service

CALGARY, Alberta — An important agreement between Ottawa and Canada's oil producing provinces has given new impetus to an emerging revival in oil exploration and production.

The accord, reached on Tuesday, comes at a time when the country's oil executives are spending again after several slow years, and indeed may well have been anticipated by these executives, who felt that the new government would lessen the industry's financial burdens.

The reasons for the rebound, experts say, are better domestic and foreign markets for Canadian oil and gas, and more attractive drilling prospects than those available in the United States.

The evidence of recovery includes record drilling operations; speculators lining up to buy land for exploration, and extensive capital spending plans.

And there is evidence on another level in this province: a booming limousine rental business, busy luxury restaurants, and talk that another skyscraper or two will soon sprout from the prairie.

It all recalls the happy days of the late seventies, when there seemed to be no top to the price of oil.

But in 1980, worldwide petroleum prices began their long slide. For the Canadian oil industry, that situation was made worse by new provincial royalties and taxes by the federal government, instituted the next year, that were regarded by the industry as somewhere between unseemly and larcenous.

In Tuesday's agreement, the federal government and the country's three principal oil and gas producing provinces — Alberta, Saskatchewan and British Columbia — apparently sought to ease that burden.

Although details are still secret, reports suggested that the governments initialed an accord to decontrol oil prices and at least to begin the removal of a federal tax on oil and gas revenues that the industry regards as particularly onerous.

"It meets every concern on matters of principle that Alberta feels strongly about," said John Zaozirny, energy minister of Alberta, which produces 85 percent of Canada's oil and gas. Alberta has been particularly critical of the revenues tax.

Formal signing of the agreement, probably by Prime Minister Brian Mulroney and the provincial premiers, could come as early as Friday.

Statistics indicate that the recovery was well under way before the accord. Last year, a record 9,149 wells were completed, compared with 8,965 in 1980, the previous record year. And there has been a 27 percent improvement in the first two months of this year.

Land sales, the surest barometer of future activity, rose to $91.4 million in the first two months of 1985, from $60 million in the comparable period a year ago. Seismic studies — an early phase of oil exploration — have also increased sharply.

"This is an industry that is poised for a significant recovery," said James Gray, executive vice president of Canadian Hunter Exploration Ltd., which is planning to raise its drilling expenditures to $108 million this year from $72 million in 1984.

The only real obstacle, Gray and others in the industry said, would have been a failure to reach a new energy accord.

Pickens group buys Unocal block

NEW YORK (AP) — An investor group led by Texas oilman T. Boone Pickens Jr. bought 6.7 million shares of Unocal Corp. stock for $48 a share, or $321.6 million.

The group, called Mesa Partners II, now owns 23.7 million, or about 13.5 percent, of the oil company's total shares outstanding, said Mesa Partners spokesman David Batchelder.

The purchase was part of a 7 million-share block of Unocal stock that traded hands in a single transaction Wednesday, and it was the second-largest "block trade" in dollar terms in history.

The record block trade in terms of both dollar value and number of shares occurred June 21, 1984, when a 10 million-share block of Superior Oil was bought for $32.37½ a share, or $423.75 million, by Mobil Corp. as part of Mobil's takeover of Superior.

The Unocal trade also tied with two other block trades as the second-largest in terms of the number of shares involved.

Mesa Partners II previously said its purchases of Unocal stock are being made as an investment and that it had set aside enough money to increase its stake to about 15 percent.

Pickens and Mesa Partners have tried to acquire several big oil businesses in recent years, most recently Phillips Petroleum Co. Mesa made an $80 million profit when it dropped that bid and agreed to sell its holdings back to Phillips.

Stockholders take on Bank of Boston

BOSTON (AP) — Stockholders get their crack at the management of the Bank of Boston, buffeted by allegations it condoned money laundering by organized crime figures, as the embattled bank convenes its annual meeting.

The meeting today gave any of the 15,000 shareholders a chance to quiz President William Brown about the controversy that has plagued the bank since February, when it pleaded guilty to violating international banking rules.

"I think naturally with the amount of publicity that has been given to the story, there is going to be a fair amount of time spent on the subject," bank spokesman Barry Allen said Wednesday. "We have made every effort to be prepared."

Bank officials had good news to offer the shareholders in the first hours of the meeting: The company earned $164.1 million in 1984, up 21 percent from 1983. Earnings per share were up 13 percent, from $7.40 to $8.35.

But recent events that have tarnished the reputation of the country's 16th-largest bank, with $22 billion in assets.

After the bank pleaded guilty to breaking federal currency reporting laws, it was fined $500,000, the stiffest penalty ever levied for such a violation.

The bank admitted it had "knowingly and willfully" not told the government about $1.2 billion in currency transactions with nine Swiss banks between 1980 and 1984. But bank officials claimed there was nothing illegal — or in their words, "unsavory" — about the unreported cash transactions. Not telling the government, they said, was "a simple mistake."

Meanwhile, in New York, the Irving Trust Co. and Manufacturers Hanover Trust Co. said Wednesday that they had failed to report hundreds of millions of dollars in cash transactions.

CHAMBER NOTES

Chamber gives publication facelift, new name

By SUSAN ATCHISON

The Chamber of Commerce has initiated an effort to tout citylife in Midland. The means? An old publication with a new name.

CITYLIFE Magazine (formerly Midland/84) will premier as the chamber's official publication on April 1. In addition to the name change, the cover and inside pages have received minor facelifts, giving the magazine a sharp, fresh look. While the publication has, in the past, been available primarily to Chamber members, CITYLIFE will now be found in the news stands alongside other local, regional and national magazines, selling for $1.50 per copy. In honor of CITYLIFE's loyal supporters, advertisers with one-year contracts will receive a laminated copy of their ad, mounted for display in their store or office.

CITYLIFE will be reaching into the community in an effort to draw from it, and reflect, a true image of the citylife Midlanders enjoy. For subscription and advertising rate information, call Jane Inskeep at the Chamber, 683-3381.

•••

Another popular publication of the Chamber is its Membership Directory. Now available for $25 to non-members, the book lists all Chamber members alphabetically. Each entry includes name of business, primary contact person, street and mailing address, phone number, employment range, and up to two categorical listings describing the type of business. In the back of the directory, members are listed again, with phone numbers, under their type of business. Together, the listings provide an easy reference for multiple uses. Chamber members will receive one complimentary copy in the mail, with additional copies available for $10 each.

•••

The Chamber's Small Business Council is winding down from a very successful TradeShow Midland '85, held March 20 and 21 at Midland Center. An estimated total of 1,200 were in attendance. All exhibit booths were filled, including 48 standard "business-to-business" exhibitors and 12 special Sesquicentennial exhibitors, who gave the state's premier showing of Sesquicentennial merchandise. Proceeds from the show will help fund additional Small Business Council Projects.

•••

One such project of the Council is its Scholarship Program. Applications are now being accepted for the $1,000 scholarship offered annually to Midland College students. Due May 6, applications may be obtained in the Midland College Financial Aid Office or at the Chamber, 109 N. Main.

•••

Clean Midland's Third Annual City-Wide Spring Clean-Up Campaign gets underway April 8, when requests for pick-up of large items will be taken. Midlanders can get ride of large tree limbs, old washers — even junk cars — by calling 682-5326 during the request time, April 8-19. The city will then honor those requests, picking up items April 29 through May 17. Requests can also be made by sending in the form that will be available in the Midland Reporter-Telegram and Progressive Times newspapers, as well as at all MISD schools and the following grocery stores: Albertsons, Furrs at Big Spring and Scharbauer, M System at "A" Street and Scharbauer, Safeway at Garfield and Wadley and 4350 W. Illinois and Sundown Market at 703 E. Front. For more information on the Clean-Up Campaign, call Jane Leslie at the Clean Midland office, 682-5326.

•••

The Chamber's Convention and Visitors Bureau has attracted several groups to Midland recently. The Bombardiers will hold a reunion at the Midland Hilton April 11-14. Softball players nationwide will meet in Midland for the following tournaments: Texas State Men's Class "C", Twelve and under Girls Regional Fastpitch Tournament and the National Men's Class "A" Church League Tournament.

•••

The deadline for Gourmet Midland participant replies is March 29. Only a few booths remain available for this May 11 "taste" of Midland. Call 683-3381 for information on participating. Tickets for the event will go on sale in mid-April.

•••

The Economic Development Department, in an effort to attract the GM Saturn plant to this area, recently worked with the Greater Odessa Area Chamber of Commerce to submit answers to a second questionnaire concerning technical details about the cities. Community information and site proposals were included, as well.

•••

Pack the Park Night, a special project of the Chamber, will be held April 17 and 18 at Angels Stadium, when Midland's home team plays the Beaumont Golden Gators. Free tickets will be distributed to all Chamber members. Last year, the event drew a near-record attendance.

THIS SATURDAY
LEARN HOW THE SUPER IRA COULD PUT YOU OVER $100,000 AHEAD.
OPEN: March 30, 1985-9A.M.-3P.M.

If you have your IRA in a fixed-rate CD (or have no IRA at all), you could be missing out on a substantial opportunity.

For example: Suppose you have an IRA rollover-or a regular IRA to which you contribute $2,000 a year. And with our help, you improve the return from, say, 9% to 12%. After 25 years, the extra gain would come to $114,000. If you think that's a worthwhile difference, then it's worth your while to mail in the coupon below.

We call our IRAs "Super" for three main reasons. First, they're investment-oriented. So they offer the potential of substantially higher returns.

Second, they're flexible. You can change your IRA investment as often as you like.

Third, you can choose from hundreds of investments. Including stocks, bonds, limited partnerships, and more.

Which brings up the biggest advantage of all. You don't have to choose your investments alone. On Saturday, meet our Financial Consultants who will help you identify the ones that are right for you- then keep your abreast of new opportunities as they come along.

Come see us Saturday and put our minds to work with yours.

Indian report places blame on company for deadly gas leak

DANBURY, Conn. (AP) — A published report says an Indian inquiry has placed "direct responsibility" on Union Carbide Corp. and its Indian subsidiary for a gas leak that killed more than 2,000 people, but the company says it is standing by its own investigation.

A report by the Indian government that has not been released "places responsibility for the leak on a combination of design flaws, operating errors, defective systems, and managerial mistakes," The Christian Science Monitor reported Tuesday.

The newspaper said sources close to the investigation, who were not identified further, disclosed some of the report's main conclusions.

The Indian report, the result of a seven-week investigation into the leak that killed more than 2,000 people in Bhopal, was prepared by a team of Indian government officials, the newspaper said.

"We know the Indian government has been investigating, but as far as a report goes, we have no knowledge of its existence," Union Carbide spokesman Tom Failla said Wednesday in a telephone interview from company headquarters in Danbury.

Last week, Union Carbide released its own report blaming workers at Union Carbide India Ltd.'s pesticide plant in Bhopal for one of the worst industrial accidents in history. The leak of methyl isocyanate gas on Dec. 3 injured tens of thousands of people.

Lawsuits stemming from the leak are seeking billions of dollars in damages from Union Carbide, which owns 50.9 percent of Union Carbide India.

Ronald Van Mynen, Carbide's chief investigator of the leak, has said the company's report was based on two months of investigation, including the review of plant records and other documents, interviews with factory workers, inspection of parts at the plant and more than 500 laboratory experiments.

"We stand by our report," Failla said. "We made a detailed scientific investigation of the situation, we conducted more than 500 experiments to replicate the accident to determine what happened in the tank."

Both the Union Carbide and Indian reports said the entrance of water into a methyl isocyanate storage tank caused a chemical reaction and an extraordinary buildup of pressure and heat, which in turn forced the gas out of a stainless-steel container and a relief valve to burst.

However, The Monitor quoted an unidentified Indian investigator as saying that "there were no safety procedures adequate to deal with the disaster. And we have plenty of documentation to substantiate that Danbury, Conn., knew exactly what was happening at the Bhopal plant."

According to The Monitor, the Indian report concluded that:

— For at least three days before the gas leak, plant technicians knew something was wrong with Tank 610, but nothing was done to find out what the technical problems were. On Nov. 30, workers found it was impossible to get the MIC out of the tank. Each time they tried to push it out and into the plant producing the pesticide Sevin by pumping in nitrogen, the nitrogen leaked out and none of the workers appeared to know where.

— Of the three interconnected MIC storage tanks, one was supposed to remain empty to contain escaping gas, according to the Carbide's safety manual. However, the overflow tank contained more than a ton of MIC, cutting off an escape route through which the gas could have passed.

— Besides at least six serious accidents acknowledged by management between 1978 and 1982, 14 additional toxic gas leaks had occurred, including three that involved MIC, according to information provided by the plant's employee insurance plan.

— Union Carbide did not sufficiently advise either the Indian government or the district administration of the dangers involved in storing and producing MIC. The plant, in operation since February 1980, had never tested MIC to determine its basic characteristics, its potential neutralization, or its antidote.

— Emergency procedures were inadequate, and the initial response to the leak was slow. There was no adequate alarm system for the public, and no precautions had been taken to protect or evacuate people living near the plant.

Failla also declined to comment on reports that Union Carbide would soon present the Indian government with a proposed out-of-court settlement of liability claims stemming from the disaster.

CANADA

"Not to deliver would be a serious thing," C. William Daniel, president of Shell Canada Ltd., warned.

Now, the industry is expected to spend vigorously. In a recent survey by Nickel's Daily Oil Bulletin, a Canadian trade publication, 31 of 39 companies said they planned an increase in exploration.

Indeed, the Mulroney government seems determined to use the energy industry, which it says accounts for 30 percent of Canada's business investment, as a driving force in its effort to revive Canada's troubled economy.

"Confronted with discriminatory taxes and incentives, investment has left and stayed away," Michael Wilson, Canada's finance minister, said recently. "This will change."

As indicated by its spending plans, industry got the message in advance of the agreement. "We're assuming the next card is going to show an inside straight and we're betting it," said Ian R. Smyth, executive director of the Canadian Petroleum Association.

The subsidiaries of a number of major American oil companies in Canada are expected to benefit greatly. Included are Mobil, Texaco and Gulf, said Ian Doig, an oil analyst here.

Already gone is the anti-American feeling that motivated much of the National Energy Program, and soon to be gone is a feature of that policy that allowed the Canadian government to take a quarter of any discovery. A symptom of the new mood was the lack of notice paid to the recent appointment of an American to head the Calgary-based exploration and production arm of Imperial Oil, which is 69.6 percent-owned by Exxon and is Canada's biggest oil company.

Industry officials say the decontrol of Canadian oil prices will have the effect of raising the price of about half the country's production and lowering the other half. Their assumption is that Alberta has accepted a phased-in, rather than immediate, end to the federal revenue tax. What is not known is whether Alberta has agreed to reduce its large royalties, which range up to 45 percent.

Pan American strikers prepare to return to work Friday

NEW YORK (AP) — Pan American World Airways won the right to cut pensions, reduce health benefits, introduce part-time workers and offer lower starting salaries under terms of a contract approved by union members.

Ground workers ended a four-week strike against the financially troubled airline Wednesday after approving the pact on a vote of 3,583 to 2,193. The workers planned to return to their jobs starting Friday.

Pan Am Vice President Jeff Kriendler said the airline next week will begin operating about 65 percent of its flights, even if flight attendants strike on April 1. By April 28, the company expects to operate at 84 percent of its pre-strike level, he said.

With about 1,000 temporary replacements ready to fly if the flight attendants go out, "that is enough to fulfill our plan," said Kriendler.

The airline grounded half its flights — including all its domestic flights — when 5,800 Transport Workers Union members struck on Feb. 28. Normally, Pan Am carries about 39,000 passengers daily on some 410 flights to six continents.

While the effects of the strike are hard to determine, airline analysts said its end came at a critical time: there should be no serious erosion of the important summer bookings, including flights to Europe, said Thomas Canning of Standard & Poor's Corp.

C. Edward Acker, chairman and chief executive officer of Pan Am, said the TWU ratification "will enable the company to continue with its far-reaching economic recovery plan."

A separate agreement reached Wednesday calls for the striking mechanics, baggage handlers and flight dispatchers to go back to work in order of seniority as the airline adds flights, said John Kerrigan, director of the TWU airline division.

"Most of our people will return soon, but a few hundred may not be back to work for several weeks," Kerrigan said.

Mechanics are expected to be back at work on Friday, he said.

He said the airline won't be able to operate a full schedule until May regardless because the flight attendants had asked travel agents to boycott Pan Am "and that pretty much killed off advance bookings for April."

The TWU also represents about 700 kitchen workers who lost their jobs when the company sold its commissary operations to a caterer at the start of the strike. The new contract reinstates only 75 of those workers, and offers the others severance payments of $10,000 to $30,000 depending on seniority.

TWU negotiators reluctantly accepted the contract Saturday after Pan Am Vice Chairman Martin Shugrue threatened to begin firing thousands of baggage handlers and reduce the company's wage offer.

"There are many things in the agreement we are not happy with, but we are happy that there is settlement, and our people will be going back to work," Kerrigan said.

In addition to giving Pan Am the right to reduce some benefits, the pact offers the workers a 20 percent raise over three years, and immediate bonuses of $600 to $1,000 as partial compensation for a 14 percent raise they waived in 1982.

Pan Am and the flight attendants union held their first joint bargaining session in Washington on Wednesday, but the two sides remained far apart, spokesmen for both sides said.

The main obstacle to agreement was Pan Am's demand for the right to hire foreign flight attendants and base them overseas at salaries as low as $225 a month. If accepted, the proposal could cost more than half of the 6,000 American flight attendants their jobs, union negotiators said.

Pan Am had a net operating loss last year of $206.8 million. The airline has not made a profit since 1980 and has eliminated more than 8,000 jobs in the past four years.

Minister says Japan to continue auto restraint

TOKYO (AP) — The government will limit auto exports to the United States to 2.3 million cars in fiscal 1985 beginning on April 1, Minister of International Trade and Industry Keijiro Murata said today.

That would amount to a 25 percent increase over fiscal 1984.

"Based on our country's own decision, the Ministry of Trade and Industry will ask individual automobile makers to exercise prudence in exports," Murata said in a nationally televised news conference.

"The limit for the year will be set at 2.3 million vehicles," Murata said.

The announcement came after President Reagan's March 1 decision not to ask Japan for a fifth year of "voluntary restraint" on Japan's U.S.-bound auto exports.

Odessan seeks change of venue in alleged assault

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — Pretrial hearings in 70th District Court Wednesday saw a change of venue hearing set for an Odessa teen-ager accused of aggravated sexual assault and a trial date set for a 25-year-old man accused of capital murder.

Reginald Timothy McNeil, 17, accused of the sexual assault of a 21-year-old female patient as she lay in her Medical Center Hospital bed last Sept. 30, took the witness stand Wednesday afternoon to testify to circumstances surrounding a statement he made to Odessa police detectives following the incident.

McNeil said he made the statement voluntarily, although he was understood if he didn't he would be allowed to leave the police station but would be arrested the following day wherever police found him.

McNeil said he signed the statement to avoid the embarrassment of being publicly arrested, perhaps at Permian High School where he was a student.

McNeil was a part-time worker at Medical Center Hospital at the time of the incident.

His attorney, G. David Smith, sought to have the statement given police, in which he purportedly admitted committing the assault, dismissed but Judge Gene Ater ruled the statement would be admitted as evidence in the trial.

Smith had subpoenaed several news media representatives for a hearing on a change of venue motion, but Ater refused to consider the change of venue because Smith had not submitted the motion seven days prior to the pretrial hearing as required by law, he said. Ater set April 15 as the date he will hear the change of venue motion, with McNeil's trial expected to take place in early June.

McNeil remains free on bond pending trial.

The capital murder trial of Donny Lee Bretz, accused in the stabbing death of 39-year-old Tally Ho Lounge owner Gayle Stifflemire Oct. 5, 1984, has been tentatively set for May 13.

Ms. Stifflemire allegedly was stabbed to death by Bretz and his 21-year-old stepbrother, Gary Lynn Wauqua, at the westside Odessa lounge during a robbery in which about $300 was taken.

Bretz and Wauqua have remained in Ector County jail since their arrests in lieu of $100,000 bonds each.

Ater has also set April 15 as the date for a competency hearing for 33-year-old Henry Lee Hill, who is accused of the Aug. 21, 1984, stabbing death of 28-year-old Janet Gregston.

Mrs. Gregston's body was found in the late afternoon hours east of U.S. 385 on East Loop 338. The seven month pregnant woman died as a result of multiple stab and slash wounds, according to Ector County sheriff's officers.

Singer Tom Jones woos audience at Chap Center

A Review

By GEORGIA TEMPLE

From comedian George Wallace's jokes to singer Tom Jones' non-stop performance, 3,500 fans — mostly women — were treated to an evening of solid entertainment at Chaparral Center Wednesday. However, it was not as tight a show as the one he staged at Chaparral Center two years ago and did not receive as enthusiatic an applause.

The audience had been told at 8:50 p.m., when Wallace finished his show, there was to be a short intermission. At 9:15 p.m., the audience began the kind of clapping which says, "We're ready. Where are you?" His band arrived onstage at 9:18 p.m. and Jones was on shortly thereafter. He was through, including encore, at 10:30 p.m.

Part of the problem was his late arrival at the Center, which followed his late appearance at a grand opening in Odessa prior to the concert. Some performers, such as Jerry Jeff Walker and George Jones, have the reputation of being late and sometimes not showing at all. Jones has no such reputation; however, for reasons unknown, he was running behind.

He wasn't alone.

Many of the members of the audience were late. Their slow arrival and the amount of activity in the Center at 8 p.m., when the show was supposed to start, caused Wallace to wait before he went on. By the time Wallace had finished, most audience members had finally found their seats.

When this kind of situation occurs, people who arrive on time are inconvenienced by those who don't. Then, when the main act is also late, the energy generated by the opening act dissipates. It makes for a slow show and often leaves audience members with the feeling they didn't get what they came for, their money's worth.

When Jones came onstage, the audience was past anticipation; it was relieved.

When Jones came out clad in a standard-looking tuxedo (the fabric has to be something special to endure the gyrations), complete with a black bow tie, a woman nearby indicated she thought she was having a heart attack.

After 21 years (his first hit record was released in 1964), he still makes singing while in constant motion look effortless. It isn't.

Imagine what it would be like to exercise an hour and five or 10 minutes in an intensive aerobics class, all the time singing in a clearly distinguishable voice. Then, to top it all off, pull it off as if it requires no effort and be sure and smile and joke between songs. The only breaks are those to drink water and, during that time, keep up a non-stop bantering conversation with strangers.

Jones will be 45 on June 7 and his moves, rather than slowing down, have simply become more polished through the years.

A master showman, Jones twists, turns, jumps, rotates his hips, dances suggestively across the stage and ends many numbers with a full bow, his arms stretched out and upward on both sides of his body. The applause, whistles and screams from the crowd give a clear message — the women love it.

Women rush to the stage between numbers, eager to chat with Jones and receive a kiss; he often gives long ones. Even the men in the audience were laughing at both shows — his and that one provided by the women before Jones had been onstage 10 minutes.

The man is a tease. Jones takes his music seriously, but not himself. He's just having so much fun, it's hard not to get into the act.

He has been performing for 40 years.

When he was 4, in his hometown of Rontypridd, South Wales, a neighborhood grocer would stand him on an orange crate so travelers and salesmen could hear him sing. Then, he spent his young years singing at private functions, such as birthday parties, wedding receptions and at school. During his teen-age years, he worked construction and sang in pubs at night.

He was told often during his early years that he was going to grow up and be a star. Wednesday's concert showed off his marvelous voice, which is at its best when he's singing ballads.

Perhaps the best received numbers of the night were "Green Green Grass of Home," and a medley of his hits, which included, among others, "Darling," "Daughter of Darkness," "It's Not Unusual" and "Love Me Tonight."

At least, that's the way it was until he came out for his encore.

When he went into "Just take the old records off the shelf...I like the old time rock'n'roll," the audience went wild, including those who had begun walking toward the doors. He needs to sing more rock'n'roll. He's good, and he already has all the moves.

Tom Jones named honorary citizen of Odessa

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — The population of Odessa, briefly Wednesday night, increased by one, honorarily at least.

Singing superstar Tom Jones, appearing in concert at Chaparral Center in Midland, took time out to attend the formal opening of London Square in Odessa and be named an honorary citizen of the city, with Mayor John Minor on hand to present Jones a certificate.

London Square, formerly the site of the Sand and Sage motel at 1213 W. 2nd St., is a revitalization effort launched by Odessa businessman Jamie Berryhill, owner of English Tweeds in northeast Odessa.

Berryhill presented Jones with a limited edition bronze statuette, created by Kauba around 1920. Only 25 of the pieces were produced.

Jones, running about 30 minutes behind his scheduled 7 p.m. Odessa appearance time, was mobbed by autograph seekers as he moved from a maroon limousine to a stage area to greet the crowd.

Accepting the honorary citizenship certificate from Minor and the statuette from Berryhill, Jones posed briefly for pictures, then noted he was performing at the Chaparral Center, and running late, he said he hoped to see everyone at the concert.

London Square, as described by Berryhill, is a unique development in which rooms of the former motel have been converted to storefront, or shop, areas that house a variety of novel establishments.

London Square, Berryhill says, will be open on weekends to provide shopping, fun-feasting and entertainment of varying descriptions on the outdoor stage area.

The "weekend market place," as Berryhill described it, will provide people who complain of having nothing to do on weekends someplace to go and do something.

Saturday afternoon, he said, Odessa City Council candidates will hold an outdoor forum.

Majid indicted for murder; Man indicted for alleged child beating

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

Indictments were handed down by the Midland County Grand Jury Wednesday afternoon on a 28-year-old man charged with hiring a "hit man" last week to kill his brother's ex-wife and a 21-year-old Midlander charged with serious bodily injury to a child after he is alleged to have shaken a 4-month-old girl so violently that doctors say she will be permanently blind.

Muhammed M. Majid, 3601 Andrews Highway, Apt. 706, remained in Midland County Jail on a $1 million bail after he was arrested Saturday on charges of attempted capital murder.

The convenience store clerk is suspected of hiring an undercover officer with the Midland County Sheriff's Office to murder the ex-wife of his brother, Khalid Majid, 30. No charges have been filed by authorities against the older brother, who lives and works with the suspect.

Majid maintains he had hired a man to find the whereabouts of the 24-year-old Abilene woman, whom he said had remarried and refused to allow her ex-husband to see his child, despite court-ordered visitation privileges.

Majid denies the meetings had anything to do with murder.

Intelligence agents with the Department of Public Safety and sheriff's officers, however, said tape recordings and videos of the meeting Saturday will prove the man was discussing murder.

Majid, who is being represented by Midland attorney Edward Garza, was arrested after the officer, wired for sound, is alleged to have met with Majid at an eastside laundry-grocery store to discuss payment for the job. A photograph of the woman's body, "bloodied" with ketchup and lying in a field, was used as "confirmation" of her death, officers said, but no money was exchanged.

Walter Felix Paul, 21, was indicted on charges of serious bodily injury to a child after grand jurors heard testimony the man had caused permanent blindness of the 4-month-old daughter of his former live-in girlfriend.

Election doubtful, but officials look forward to 'good' election

By MARK LEWIS
Staff Writer

The April 6 city election is still in doubt, but City Secretary B.C. "Bill" Clanton presided over an election-law seminar Tuesday night so local election officials will be prepared if everything comes off on schedule.

"This will be a very exciting election — one which we will remember for years to come," said Thomas Epperson before addressing the assembled election judges and clerks on qualifying and assisting the voters.

This will be Midland's first election since the City Council switched from at-large places to a mixture of at-large and single-member district seats. Two minority groups are seeking an injunction to delay the election until the Justice Department approves the ballot language, but the seminar proceeded on the assumption the election will be held April 6 with the current ballot.

The switch to single-member districts "will not change the election procedure for election judges and clerks whatsoever," said Melinda Nickless, an election specialist for the Secretary of State in Austin. "There's not going to be any difference as long as you've got the right ballot for your precinct."

The League of United Latin American Citizens and the Black Advisory Council claim the ballot language for the two at-large council seats is confusing and the Spanish translation is misleading. Several election officials at the seminar in the City Council chambers were concerned about how much assistance they could offer confused voters.

"There were a few parts (on the ballot) where it was hard to read the translation," said Isabel Rey.

But Ms. Nickless said they could translate the language and explain its meaning (vote for none, one or two of the five at-large candidates).

Cities, towns still have olden days appeal

There's something about touching yesterday that feels good. You can do that in Austin and other cities and towns across Texas and the world.

It's not just the novelty of the quaintness associated with grand and petit "old things" that's appealing. It's a mystic link to the past. It's as though you are not burying the past and your ancestors forever. It's a comfortable feeling.

Take Austin. The inside walls of some Sixth Street cafes are the outside brick walls of the old buildings. It's not just happenstance. It appears that interior designers with historical perspective put their two-bits into the renovation, restoration or piecemeal work.

Even cracked sidewalks that appear to be a hundred years old seem in place.

The 100-year-old Driskill Hotel, as stately in its own way as is the granite Capitol, quickly baptizes the meanderer into the past. The Filling Station Restaurant & Bar soon immerses the patron into another era — that of the first half of the 1900s. It's comfortable, too.

Out West Texas way, there are isolated efforts to link the past to the present, and it has been done successfully in a commercial sense. Historic Fort Davis in the scenic Davis Mountains has made a "go" of it from its Sutler's Boarding House Restaurant to the old-fashioned drug store and the Limpia Hotel and even Prude Ranch. Marfa has "done good" with its Paisano Hotel. Today and the yesteryears blend in harmoniously just as the Smithsonian Institution in Washington, D.C., seems so much in place in this "modern age."

You can find links to the past just by walking or driving the streets of Lamesa, Stephenville or Cooper where many of the streets are laden with bricks, which seem to endure when asphalt fails.

Midland, though, at times seems hellbent on being thoroughly "modern" and more Dallas than Dallas. But Dallas still has its old Magnolia (Mobil) Building and the Flying Red Horse, the winged Pegasus, and the old courthouse and other landmarks from the past.

So does Midland but not as prominently. What could be termed as Midland's center pivot is the 1929-vintage Petroleum (T.S. Hogan) Building. The ornate building is the forerunner of Midland's network of office buildings and the edifice-catalyst which helped Midland earns its oil "headquarters" title.

But not unlike many Texas cities, Midland has torn down some old houses and buildings — stately, rustic and quaint — in the name of progress — whatever that might be.

It's fortunate, as one Midlander noted in a campaign to save the Lancaster House from destruction, the Alamo Mission wasn't built in Midland.

Episcopal youth to begin Intentional Famine Friday

From Staff Reports

About 25 youth from The Episcopal Church of the Holy Trinity and St. Nicholas Episcopal Church will begin an Intentional Famine on Friday. The Rev. David Price said the group will have a two-fold purpose in going without food for 30 hours.

"We plan for the youth participating in the program to stay together during the famine so that while we share the experience of feeling hungry, we also can learn why hunger exists in the world, and what we can do about it." Price said many factors contribute to hunger, including lifestyles, population and poor education.

"We will learn about these factors causing hunger through audiovisuals and other program materials and discuss how we can be part of the long-range solution," he said.

The Intentional Famine hunger program also has a practical side, he pointed out. Each youth will contribute $6 — $2 for each meal missed — to participate in the program. They'll seek out Famine supporters throughout the community to contribute as well.

"Our goal is to raise $2,000," said Price. "The money we raise may help feed many families or even an entire village for a month or longer."

The funds will be channeled through the Presiding Bishop's Fund for World Relief, which is the helping arm of the Episcopal Church. This fund supplies aid to the hungry and needy around the world. At present, much of the effort is being directed toward the need in Africa. Price said 93.8 percent of the money donated to the Bishop's Fund gets to the people in need.

Individuals interested in learning more about the Intentional Famine program or in helping the Episcopal youth meet their goal can contact Price at 683-4207.

Police seek information about missing woman

From Staff Reports

Carolee Andres

Midland police are seeking information about the disappearance Feb. 23 of 19-year-old Carolee Andres.

The Midland woman was last seen working the night shift at the 7-Eleven convenience store, 4401 W. Illinois Ave. Police said evidence at the scene suggested a robbery-kidnapping had occurred.

Ms. Andres' work frock was found hanging in the store, which was open but unattended. Cash from the register was missing.

The woman, who is half Hawaiian and half Filipino, is described as 5 feet 2, weighing 150 pounds, with black curly hair, a dark complexion and dark eyes.

Police and her family, with whom she resided at 305 S. Eisenhower, are concerned about her safety. Foul play is suspected.

Persons who have seen her or know of her whereabouts are asked to contact the Midland Police Department Detective Division, 683-4281.

Deadly poison reported taken from animal shelter

From Staff Reports

Fourteen bottles of a lethal poison used in euthanizing animals were reported stolen in a burglary Wednesday night of the Midland Animal Control Shelter, 1601 Orchard Lane.

According to officials, the liquid, packaged in whitish plastic bottles with a white label identifying it as Fatal Plus, were taken during a break-in that also resulted in the theft of more than $100 in cash.

Rice Freeman-Zachery, public informations officer, said the last officer left the shelter about 9 p.m. Wednesday night. When he returned this morning between 7:30 and 8, he noticed the shelter had been entered by prying open a back gate. A window was broken with a hammer and a door had been kicked in.

The offices of Coy Willis, director, and his secretary next door had been ransacked although nothing was taken, according to Ms. Freeman-Zachery. A 250-pound safe containing about $150-$160 was missing from the main office and a cash register, which was empty with a key in it, had been pried open and damaged.

Police were on the scene this morning dusting for fingerprints.

About $5 had been stolen from the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals donation jar. "It isn't much, but it's kind of depressing," Ms. Freeman-Zachery said.

Authorities were concerned about the missing poison, which is fatal for all animals and humans.

Ms. Freeman-Zachery said the poison has no "recreational" value as a drug, and doses can burn painfully if not injected into a vein. If injected into a vein, immediate death results.

The liquid is considered a controlled substance and possession of it without a license is a felony offense.

Animal control officers urge anyone who may come across the plastic bottles, which measure 6¼ inches tall and have a skull and crossbones and the word "poison" written in red, to return them to the shelter immediately. The persons responsible for the burglary are urged to not throw out the bottles.

"They can put them in a box and throw them over the fence if they want," Ms. Freeman-Zachery said.

Those with information about the burglary are asked to contact the Animal Control Shelter at 683-2941, or the police department at 683-4281.

Indecency with child trial to begin

From Staff Reports

The indecency with a child by exposure trial of a 32-year-old Midlander was expected to begin today in 142nd State District Judge Pat Baskin's courtroom.

Kenneth Leon Craft, 3601 Boyd, is charged in connection with an incident Dec. 5 in which the man is alleged to have exposed his genitals to two girls, ages 14 and 15, who were walking home from school.

According to police reports, Craft, dressed in a red robe with nothing on underneath, was arrested the next day during a similar incident after Midland police conducted surveillance of Craft's residence during the same time of the afternoon.

The man is suspected of exposing himself through an opening in a fence where a board is missing, according to the felony complaint.

A warrant was issued Dec. 7 and Craft was arraigned on a $15,000 bond, which he posted.

ELECTION

She also told the judges a new federal law forbids them to deny voting rights to anybody without a registration card who swears an affidavit that he or she is properly registered, though that vote can be invalidated later if it turns out the person was unregistered or registered in another precinct.

"You cannot deny a person the right to vote" if he or she swears, said Ms. Nickless. Swearing falsely is a third-degree felony, she added, but election officials should be careful about challenging voters whom they suspect are actually unregistered.

"It's against the law to intimidate voters."

INDICT

The unemployed man was arrested March 7 at an apartment in the Manor Club Apartments, 5009 Rio Grande No. 25-E, where he lived with the woman and her two children.

Since the alleged assault, the mother, an employee of Fairmont Bowling Lanes on West Loop 250, has moved in with her sister, who lives in the same apartment complex, and has severed relationships with Paul, sheriff's officers said.

Both the 4-month-old and her 2-year-old sister were placed in the custody of the Department of Human Resources, officials said.

According to the arrest affidavit, Paul babysat the two girls and their 4-year-old cousin Feb. 16. Later that evening, the 4-month-old girl suffered seizures and was taken to Midland Memorial Hospital where she was diagnosed as suffering from hemorrhage to the spinal cord and brain.

Officers charged Paul with shaking the child and throwing her down, causing the injuries.

The child was transferred to Fort Worth Children's Hospital. Physicians there notified Midland authorities March 6 the child would be permanently blind.

Doctors separate Siamese twins

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Doctors at Wilford Hall Medical Center successfully separated Siamese twin boys, an Air Force spokesman said today.

The twins, who were born at the military medical facility about 5:15 p.m. Wednesday, were joined at the abdomen and shared a common liver, said Airman Stanley Bass, a medical center spokesman.

Two surgical teams separated the boys during a 2½-hour operation that was completed about 11:30 p.m., Bass said.

"One infant has a congenital heart defect and his long term prognosis is unknown at this time," Bass said. "He may require heart surgery in the future."

Man gets $1.5 million in damages

From Staff Reports

A 34-year-old Denver City man, who lost his right foot in a mishap on a Shell Oil Co. lease in 1978, on Wednesday was awarded $1.5 million in damages by a Houston jury.

The man, Danny Songer, then a lineman for Arthur Electric Co. in Denver City, suffered the injury in August 1978 when his foot came in contact with a high-voltage line while he was on a pole working on a transformer.

Songer, formerly of Odessa, was represented by Odessa attorney Warren Burnett.

The six-person jury in Houston's 164th State District Court determined that Songer and Shell shared the negligence which led to the mishap. The jury found Shell and Songer each were 50 percent at fault, according to a spokesman for Burnett.

At the outset of the trial, Shell had offered Songer $150,000 settlement but Burnett opted to "roll the dice" and present the case to a jury, the spokesman said.

Last year, another Houston jury tried the same case, couldn't reach a verdict and wound up as a "hung jury."

Man charged with kidnapping

NEW BRAUNFELS (AP) — Authorities say a Garland man has been charged with aggravated kidnapping after a Dallas woman left notes along Interstate 35 saying that she had been abducted.

Linda Guillemaud, 20, was found by police in a New Braunfels restaurant at midday after she slipped a waitress a note asking for help.

Officers said that Bret Cook was arrested Wednesday. Ron Zipp, Comal County court-at-law judge, set Cook's bond at $25,000.

Authorities said the woman, who told them that she had been picked up about 2 a.m. after her car ran out of gas in Dallas, had left similar notes on toilet paper at service stations in Dallas and San Marcos. She said the man had hit her several times.

AUSTIN (AP) — Tuition increases being considered by the Legislature would force many foreign students to return home and reduce the cultural diversity of the University of Texas, a campus rally was told.

Nineteen international student groups at UT sponsored the rally, which UT police said was attended by 500 people.

A bill passed last week by the Texas House would increase out-of-state tuition at state universities from $40 an hour to $120 next fall and to $180 an hour in 1986-87, after which tuition would be set at 100 percent of the cost of education.

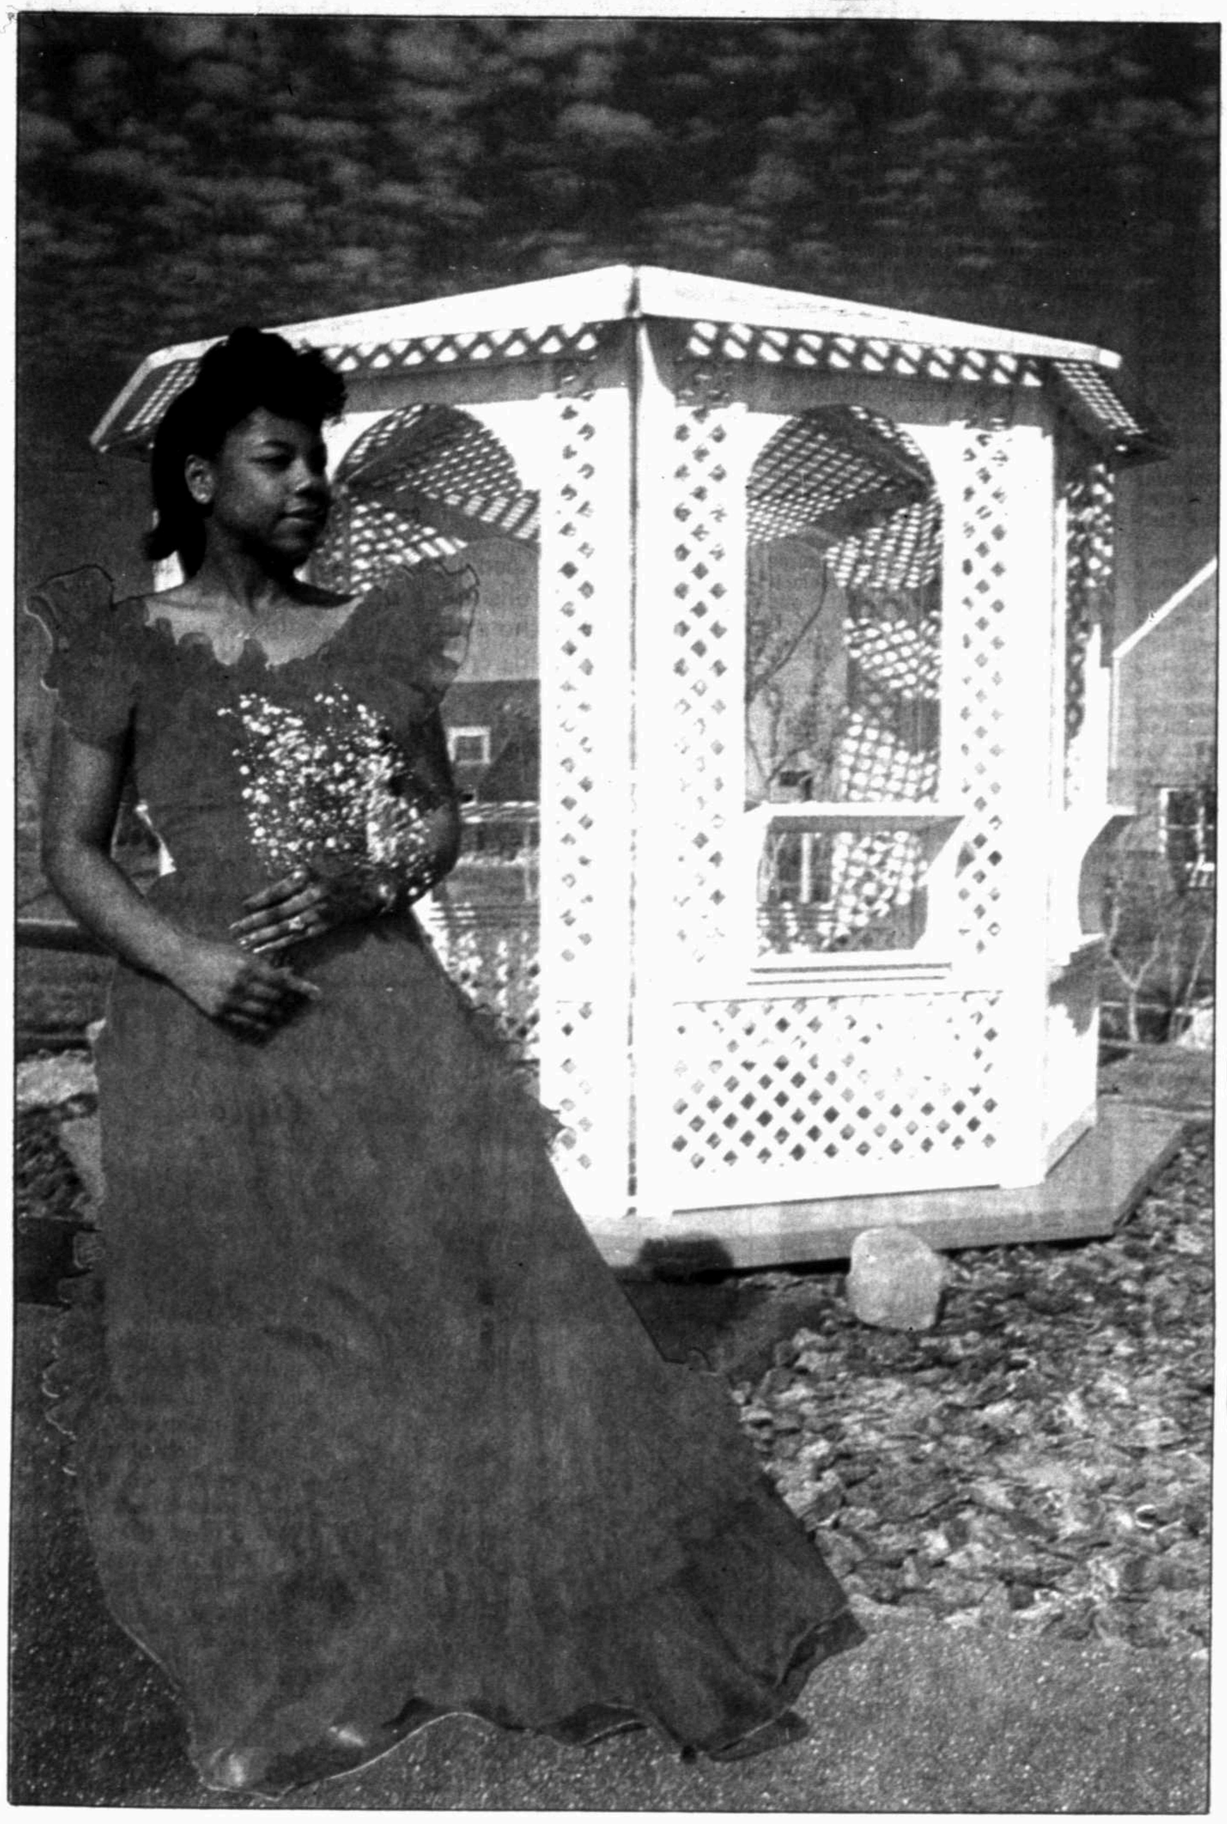
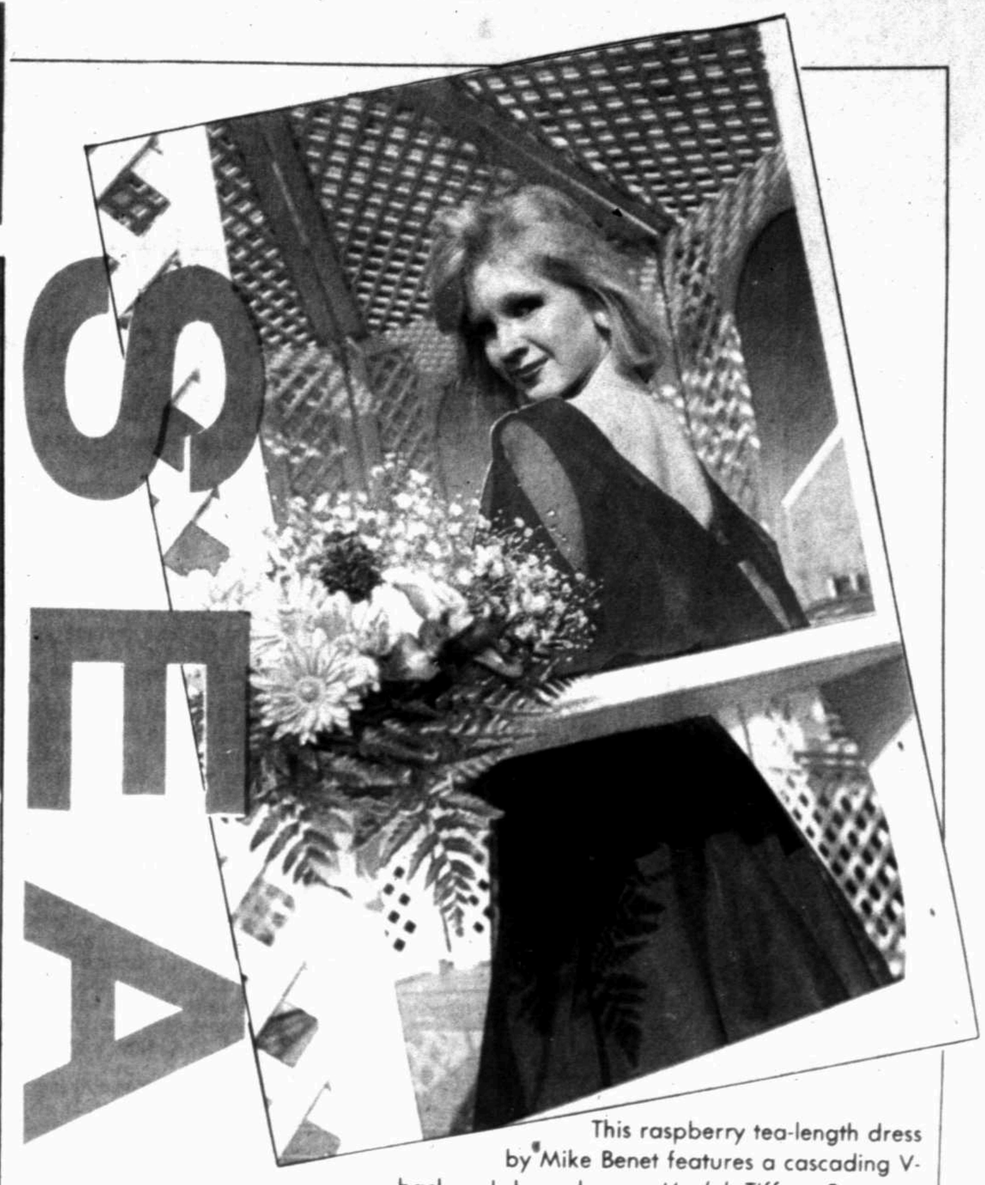
FRESH SEASONS





This raspberry tea-length dress by Mike Benet features a cascading V-back and sheer sleeves. Model: Tiffany Barnes.

Spring brings a refreshing perspective to life.

This fresh season marks a turning point in many people's lives — and for every pomp and circumstance a celebration is almost guaranteed.

This spring, the biggest news in fashion for such occasions is color and contrast, and lots of it — from pastel to neon shades. The styles go to any lengths for fun: the look is short or shorter, or tea-length, waltz-length, intermission-length, or anything-you-want-to-call-it-length, down to the ground-length.

The looks are soft and subtle or bold and wild. Either way, they are extremely feminine and the perfect touch for the high school prom, a college graduation, a beauty pageant, a black-tie benefit, a best friend's wedding or an announcement of her very own.

Spring's higher hemlines highlight latest shoe styles

Copley News Service

This spring's fashion forecast for shorter pants, skirts and dresses reflects a strong focus on legs, and that means a more visible role for shoe styles.

With shoes as this season's fashion focus, choosing the right shoe is more important than ever. Cheryl Anderson, fashion director for G.H. Bass, a shoe manufacturer, offers the following tips for selecting shoes for both style and comfort this spring.

First, shop for shoes in the middle of the day, after feet have enlarged to their normal width. After a night's rest, feet tend to be narrower than usual. At the end of the day, they are wider.

It's a good idea to have feet measured every time footwear is purchased. Most people don't realize that feet are affected by changes in exercise or climate.

A change of socks or stockings also can affect the fit of a shoe, so be sure to wear appropriate leg wear when shopping.

When trying on shoes, the first things to look for are support and comfort. The myth of shoes that alter themselves to fit the foot is more wishful thinking than fact. Walk around on the carpet for approximately two minutes, and test shoes standing up as well as sitting down.

Allow between ¼- and ½-inch between the end of the toe and the inside of the shoe. The heel should fit closely, and the ball of the foot should rest comfortably on the shoe sole.

In terms of style this season, shoes can be seen in a variety of colors and textures. For example, said Anderson, the gladiator shoe retains its popularity but incorporates new design.

As with fashion, what's missing in footwear often can be as architecturally important as what's present.

"This spring," said Marilyn Harding, vice president of Tobe Associates, a fashion forecasting firm, "look for cutouts, open weaves, sling backs and low-cut sides."

California designers show symphony of newest styles

By CATHY LAWHON
Copley News Service

California no longer will tolerate its reputation as the fashion capital for bathing suits and active sportswear. In case you haven't noticed, West Coast designers are perfectly capable of — in fact, are adept at — turning out sophisticated day wear and elegant evening gowns. And if you want a sense of humor with your fashion, they can provide that, too.

That was the message communicated during the California Collections press preview of spring fashions held in Los Angeles.

What was missing, however, was a common language for that message. California designers revel in their independence. Each speaks with his own voice. For every trend spotted, there was an exception; for each fashion direction, a stylish detour.

Many of the clothes, for example, were old-fashioned and feminine, trimmed with delicate laces and antique-look beading. At first, it seemed as if the oversize menswear look had died a quick and quiet death.

But wait. You still saw lots of long, unconstructed coats of linen worn over pants and crop tops. Several of the San Francisco designers (collectively a more avant-garde group than the Los Angeles contingent) carried oversize about as far as it can go without looking clownish.

Then there are the contradictions in color. The neutrals — taupe, khaki, olive, black and white — are strong as ever. And if you're into the peachy-pink and minty-aqua color combinations, you'll love the spring palettes. But don't forget the rock 'n' roll video-flash influence. Neon brights of orange, chartreuse, electric blue and magenta showed up in many collections, often in the same outfit.

There were long, lean, sophisticated ensembles and short, full ones. For every form-fitting cinched waist or wrapped hip, there was a figure-flattering drop-waisted chemise. In short, California designers offer options for spring — lots of them.

But if you must find trends among the options, if you're just not comfortable planning your spring wardrobe without some up-to-date guidelines, consider the following.

— Evening glamour. The simple basic black dress just doesn't make it in Hollywood anymore. If your spring social calendar already is looking crowded, you'd best invest in an important dress.

— Rock influence. The free-spirited, whimsical influence of rock-music fashions shows up in the use of vivid neon colors and graffiti prints.

— Decent exposure. Summer skin is to be revealed, whether it's peeking demurely out from under lace, or boldly exposed in halter tops or crop tops with deep armholes and strategically placed cutouts. You can bare it all in dressing styles from the barely there wisps of spandex called bathing suits to the elegance of strapless evening gowns. Skin is in.

— Sophisticated sportswear. Sportswear always has been much more than jogging shorts and a sweat shirt. But this spring, designers are turning to sophistication with a vengeance.

Dresses for spring make new fashion statement

Copley News Service

How to dress up the spring season? With a dress.

One of the most important looks for the coming season will be the dress, according to officials of the Donna Moda showing in New York City. When hundreds of buyers from throughout the country converged on the presentation of spring fashions from Italy, their opinions were unanimous — the dress is back.

But the dresses you'll be seeing — and wearing — have not been around for years. They have new proportions, new fit and a new fashion message — they're meant for women. The new dresses are sexy, sassy and short.

The body is definitely "in" and spring dresses wrap it, tie it, hug it and mold it to make it look better than ever before. From sashes to sarong effects, the look is curvacious.

As for hemlines, lengths are short or shorter. The best dresses will be just above the kneecap or ones that barely cover it. The other option is mid-calf length — narrow and fluid and looking a bit like the '20s.

This spring there'll be a burst of color — hot color, cool color, neon brights, ice-cream pastels and, of course, black and white.

Prints, which haven't been around for years, also are big news. A pattern explosion will produce floral, graffiti, abstract and wallpaper prints. And some of the best dresses mix several prints at once.

The most popular fabrics are bound to be linen, silk, textured knits or lightweight suede or leather.

Styles simple but elegant

By BERNADINE MORRIS
New York Times News Service

PARIS — Unlike some other couturiers showing their spring and summer collections here this season, Yves Saint Laurent does not believe that the very rich are all that different from you and me. Along with ordinary mortals who get around by subway and bus, he believes that the limousine and Concorde crowd often prefers simple styles that are practical and not all gussied up.

Those are the kinds of clothes he presented at a recent Paris show. As the audience — which included Saudi Arabian princesses, movie stars and every American socialite in town for the collections — filed backstage to kiss the designer and murmur "sublime," it was clear that purity of line and restraint have not vanished from the world of high fashion.

The show began with a reptile-printed raincoat to establish the practical note and moved on to battle-jacket suits with scoop-neck blouses as undecorated as T-shirts, chemise dresses with a minimum of fussy detail and plenty of trouser suits in a variey of shapes, none of them complicated.

THERE IS, of course, a basic difference between these elegantly tailored clothes, where the prices begin at about $5,000, and those they might resemble at less elevated ranges.

The fabrics are silks with enough body to hold their shape and not crease and the kind of woolens that are used in men's bespoke suits. These are supplemented by luxury cashmeres and butter-soft leathers. But an occasional more plebeian wool jersey and even cotton fabric does show up. The workmanship is such that the clothes follow the body's lines effortlessly.

The audience sat in quiet appreciation as these superbly cut daytime clothes were presented on the long runway of the Inter-Continental Hotel. Reasonably broad, sharp shoulders and knee-length, narrow skirts provided a neat, precise framework.

UNEXPECTED COLOR combinations, never garish, pleased the eye. A rose lining was a nice touch for a tobacco-colored battle jacket. An orange jersey blouse provided a shot of color for a saffron double-breasted jacket and chestnut pants.

Colors became even more important as the collection moved from day into evening. A number of outfits combining clear pastel colors were dedicated to Christian Berard, the painter and theatrical designer whom Saint Laurent has long idolized.

As a boy of 13, he saw a performance of Moliere's "The School for Wives" in Oran, Algeria, where he grew up. The settings and costumes were by Berard. Enthralled, the youth immediately considered him his master.

The clothes in the collection are a form of homage. Among them are a violet coat over turquoise pants and a rose blouse, all in silk crepe. It makes an infinitely pleasant blend of colors.

IN A RICHER mood, a crisp grosgrain coat is embroidered with ribbons of rose and green jewels. It covers a plunging-neckline dress with a cerulean blue bodice, pale green middle and mauve skirt.

While the collection emphasized elegant, civilized clothes with nonaggressive designs, there were some ideas that should prove influential. The return of the plunging neckline, was one example. And soft, flowing hoods on dresses are sensible.

The hoods appear on navy jersey and tobacco crepe for day and most dramatically in black crepe for evening. The hood of the black dress can be thrown back to form a cowl, leaving the shoulders bare. The model did just that on the runway by removing a giant jeweled pin. It was a dramatic gesture, and the dress was effective enough to hold its own alongside the more showy jeweled styles.

NEXT CAME the show of Hubert de Givenchy, which ended with a display of luxurious beaded dresses that left the audience breathless. Even women who do not normally worry about their budgets were wondering how much these clothes cost.

Representatives of the house at the show said they were not quite sure yet but later estimated the prices at $9,000 to $11,000.

Not only were they extravagantly beautiful, but these intricately beaded, shimmering dresses were also examples of an art that is vanishing, even in Paris. They flowed tantalizingly over the body in patterns as detailed as any mosaic, mingling seed pearls and chalk beads and even jet. They are tomorrow's heirlooms and examples of magnificent dressmaking.

Usually the dresses first appeared wrapped in floating, sheer silk coats with many-tiered ruffled sleeves. The audience waited expectantly for the removal of the coats so they could gasp at the embroideries.

OTHER LONG, slender dresses were sheltered by short boleros that were solidly paved with beads and sequins.

Givenchy has a penchant for these waist-length bolero jackets. They turn up for day over sleeveless blouses or even strapless camisoles and are accompanied by beautifully cut pants suits that look delicate, never tough. Some have collarless, square necklines.

Spring coats are an endangered species in the couture as in ready-to-wear. A navy and red striped fitted coat with three rows of gold buttons on the chest should help revive the style. It was shown over a matching scoop-neck dress. Buttons are also used as decorative elements on sleeves and even down the sides of pants.

TO ROUND out the fashion picture, Givenchy showed a throng of pretty printed silk dresses, the kind his followers like to wear to lunch. They included overblouse dresses, chemises and shirtwaist styles with neat white collars and cuffs and belted waistlines.

Both collections were warmly appreciated, and both designers received ovations. It was a good day for the Paris couture and a good day for fashion.

Prints: Fashion plus this spring

By WENDI WINTERS
Copley News Service

Roses are red. This spring, they also are turquoise, pink, peach and black. For this season, New York's fashion designers used gaily flowered prints in their collections with an enthusiasm unseen since the days of psychedelic flower power.

Flowers, especially roses, bloomed everywhere in bright, bold palettes of color. After years of solid-color designs or carefully engineered prints, the wild roses and freewheeling prints that paraded down Fashion Avenue runways were a welcome sight.

Don't, however, go digging for your old Woodstock dresses and love beads. These new prints are products of the '80s — modern, clean and sophisticated.

One high-tech example is by Cleopatra Broumand, designer for Cleopatra. She photographed a single American-beauty rose, then blew up and multiplied the image using a computer. The stunning result is a collection of silk crepe de chine dresses printed with large, detailed red roses on a black background. Her computer-generated designs also appear knitted into pale cardigans and long, lean sweater dresses.

Gargantuan red roses with black leaves were knitted onto sweaters and skirts as striking accents in the Betty Hanson collection. Perry Ellis dotted realistic printed roses at the waist, hip and bustline of his simple crepe de chine separates. In the Nipon collection long flowered skirts were paired with broad-shoulder cotton sweaters with a single knitted-in rose.

Tori designers Charles Marks and Mitchell Silverman introduced the Bavarian rose — a large, shocking-pink blossom tinged with bright orange against black grounds — printed on light challis.

"We're using this print in tops or jackets as an accent — almost as an accessory — for our solid dresses and sportswear pieces," they explained. "The response by the buyers has been outstanding."

Bavarian roses also appeared in exquisitely beaded shawls wrapped about the neck or hips of Oscar de la Renta's white crepe evening slinks.

Flowered prints also took on the look of an exotic hothouse jungle in simple sarong skirts or big shirts from Anne Klein and Norma Kamali. Tohbia for Tokyo Blouse, a Japanese sportswear collection, executed a group of soft-tone tropical-print linens in short boxy tops and full, mid-calf skirts. The Yonson Pak collection featured white, stylized palm fronds on lime green.

A melange of bright, abstract flowers gaily splashed across the silk cocktail dresses and knitted sportswear of the Bob Mackie collection. Morton Myles chose a graphic "graffiti scribble floral" of black on white silk for his hit dress of the season — an after-5 flatterer with a low scooped back accented by an oversize bow lined with black silk.

Prints also made news as amplified graphics or as pieces of modern art. Gene Ewing for Bis designed her striking prints with strong daubings of black on blue, yellow or orange backgrounds printed on linen or cotton. For the walls of the auditorium where her collection premiered, she framed and hung several of her bold, modernistic prints. On the runway, they appeared in broad-shoulder jackets, boxer shorts and gored skirts.

Adam Beall highlighted white linen blouses with black or turquoise brush strokes and combined them with sleek white skirts or cropped trousers.

Designer Michael Katz produced breathtaking, hand-painted, one-of-a-kind designs with imaginative and original combinations of shade and shape for his collection of dresses and sportswear.

And with prints this season, the sky was not the limit. Both Adri and Stephen Sprouse looked upward for inspiration. For her sportswear, Adri used printed designs she referred to as planet, space dust or meteor. The '60s inspired Sprouse-designed wrap-around moon photo prints.

Prints. Wear them alone or mix them with solid-color clothes in your wardrobe. They will be a quick pick-me-up and an easy, colorful accent for the months ahead.

Expert: Wise shoppers plan ahead

By NANCY ANDERSON
Copley News Service

The biggest fashion mistake a woman can make is to shop without forethought.

That's according to Pat George, fashion consultant on "Good Morning, America." She suggests that a total analysis of one's closet should precede any shopping spree.

"If you don't plan ahead," she said, "you'll go into a store and get something you don't need or can't wear, because it doesn't work with anything else you have."

Therefore, time invested in a careful and objective study of one's wardrobe is time well spent, George said.

"Make a list of the items you already have that you like, that fit you, and that you actually wear," she said.

"Carry that list with you in your billfold. Then, when you shop, be certain that the item you're interested in will go with at least two of the items on your list.

"If it won't, don't get it, even though it may be on sale and you may love it."

George also recommends that the shopper choose classic or timeless fashion rather than trendy gear.

"When you are shopping," she said, "ask yourself, 'Have I seen this before?'

"If you haven't, avoid it, because it may be something that's hot at the moment but will be out of style in a season.

"If you buy classic clothes, you can wear them for a long time."

George has items in her closet that have been there for 10 or 15 years, although she keeps some of these for sentimental reasons only. Others have been recycled.

"Read fashion magazines and consider how the colors they are showing can be incorporated into your own wardrobe," she said.

"Last year they were showing bright colors with black. I realized that I had those colors and I had black, but I hadn't used them together.

"By trying new combinations, I got a new look from clothes I already had."

A snip, a nip and a tuck also can transform a tired oldie into a fresh goody.

"Remember when we were wearing long skirts?" George asked. "I had a long, plaid wool skirt that I just loved because the colors were so pretty. I cut it off so that I still have a skirt I can wear and made a stole from the excess fabric."

Every woman should have a full-length mirror, she said, so that she can analyze her figure and dress it for best results.

Pat George

"Every woman has her own figure type," George said, "and should decorate that type.

"Any woman can make herself look 10 pounds heavier or 10 pounds lighter through the way she dresses. For example, if your hips are broader than your shoulders, choose clothes to make the shoulders wider."

Designers use 'housewares'

By NINA HYDE
Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

PARIS — There were hats that looked like overstuffed chairs, jewelry-like pulls on a chest of drawers and gold embroidery in the shape of candlesticks on the sleeves of some dresses in the Karl Lagerfeld show.

At the Jean-Paul Gaultier collection, some models were wrapped in rugs, complete with fringe, others in dresses decorated with passementerie (drapery and upholstery fringe) and creations made from fabric used in satin bedcovers.

It is midway in the French ready-to-wear shows, and the preoccupation of many of the designers with household things is just one recurring theme.

Through snow and rain and cold, thousands of buyers from around the world — thought to number about 2,000, plus almost as many journalists and television crews — have made the rounds of three tents in the Tuileries Gardens to see the creations of Paris designers for next fall.

"WOMEN ARE away from their homes so much, working and traveling, they want to take their houses with them," joked Lagerfeld before his show. Lagerfeld has been redecorating his homes in Monte Carlo and Rome recently, which may have a lot to do with his newfound focus on household things.

Gaultier has an equally legitimate claim on the theme. When he got started in this business, he could only afford to buy upholstery fabrics in the flea market.

Now he uses them in his irreverent yet expensive and trendy clothes, which are a big hit here and a tremendous influence everywhere. In fact, the tapestry sweater he made last fall sold well and sparked many designers to pick up the same theme and coloring.

But this is hardly the only subject in these or other collections. While some designers use their last collections (particularly those things that sold well) as the starting point for the next, Lagerfeld challenges himself to do something quite different each season.

IT IS NO small task for him, because he also designs the fur and fashion collections for Fendi in Milan and Chanel in Paris each season. The Fendi and Chanel collections are curbed by the signatures of those houses.

At Lagerfeld's own year-old house, there are no such limitations. He lets his ideas and humor run wild.

"A woman can be as tall as a man today," says the designer, turning that viewpoint into "giants" as he calls his models, with towering hats and shoes with thick crepe soles.

The brim of a mannish hat is turned up at the back, lapels are big and pointy, and jackets and coats have blouson-shaped backs and rounded sleeves, all adding to this look, he explains.

Lean skirts and stretch pants heighten the towering effect. Many of his jackets and coats have rounded shoulders without the familiar shoulder pads of the past couple of seasons.

"WHEN YOU are very tall, you don't need such broad shoulders," said Lagerfeld. "Besides, even the most ordinary house has adopted the broad shoulders, so I must do something else."

He always does something apart from others with his embroidered evening dresses. Humorous themes and beautiful hand-embroidered dresses are juxtaposed to undermine their seriousness, in spite of the whoppingly high price tags — usually the same price as your basic automobile.

One year he used a plumbing theme with running faucets embroidered on dresses and jewelry; last year it was embroidery like brilliantly colored Hawaiian shirts.

This year he remembered his trips to Texas — perhaps prompted by the success here of the film "Paris, Texas" — and used silver embroidery like the tooling on cowboy boots, and huge, embroidered griffins on a dress that had the shape of a boot.

ON ANOTHER there was the image of a city complete with factories and smoke, and on others, the household furnishings.

Even though Lagerfeld continues with large coats, what is underneath is usually slim and tight — a look that most designers agree on this season.

Claude Montana is a master of big coats, which he often designs without shoulder pads as well. Like Lagerfeld, he has fiddled with the shape of the sleeve.

Lagerfeld ingeniously has cut the sleeve so it appears to twist around the arm. Montana, very effectively, has put gathers on the outside seam to give it shape.

But Montana's strongest cards for next fall are his fabulous color sense and color combinations, sometimes showing up as several colors in each part of one costume, other times with colors combined in one sweater or coat.

HE USES pale pastels in some groups, bold pastels other times, often putting them over long, skinny, ribbed, black turtleneck sweaters and black stirrup pants that only heighten the brilliance of the color.

"Have I got a yellow mink sweater for you," David Cohen, the fur buyer for Bergdorf Goodman, shouted to Dawn Mello, the store's president, outside the tent after the Montana show.

Mello obviously liked Montana's colored furs — in fact, the entire collection. "Now I know why I came to Europe," said Mello.

Anne-Marie Beretta used bright-color silks for a group of ski clothes and quilted coats that could generate a return to down coats next season. And her big raincoats in iridescent fabrics will no doubt inspire others to revive that look, too.

But the strongest impact will be from her more fitted suits, the shoulders less broad than previous seasons, and jackets with big lapels, eased through the top for comfort, then tight over the hips with a narrow skirt or pants. Her jackets and coats often had huge pocket flaps.

ISSEY MIYAKE'S clothes are narrower this season, too. "I like to betray what people expect," said Miyake after his show.

Last season he surprised everyone by introducing a tailored jacket, "because no one thought I knew how to make one," he said at the time. And that jacket, with a pointed cutaway hem, worn with a soft skirt, became one of the season's most copied designs.

While he has narrowed some clothes, he has managed to hold onto his staunch theme for his 15 years in business-comfortable clothes. He has developed a gray flannel fabric with a two-way stretch, which he uses in trousers for just that reason.

He has looked to new and old for fabrics. "Because people always tell me my clothes aren't very wintery," Miyake said, he discovered a new way to make a fake fur, which is the artisanship used in costumes for the Kabuki theater.

AND HE has taken a silicone fiber used to protect doctors and patients from the harm of X-rays and a high-tech material used in computers for some of his designs. (The computer fabric, which has a metallic sheen, won't actually be used in the clothes that get to the stores, Miyake said sadly. It would make the clothes too expensive.)

After Miyake's show, Boy George was the first to get backstage to offer congratulations. He wanted to take Miyake's beekeeper hat, an ideal disguise, right back to London, but the designer needs it for his show in Tokyo next month.

Boy George, hardly disguised by his new, short, spiky haircut, was also at the Gaultier show.

Sitting nearby, slumped down into her seat, chewing gum and wearing a black leather jacket with silvery zippers, was a rather shy Princess Stephanie of Monaco. She, too, had a very short haircut, which made her look charmingly boyish.

It was hard to distinguish the boys from the girls by their haircuts or their clothes in the Gaultier show held in the Cirque d'hiver, the small circular theater that is the home of the winter circus, for which the Cirque is named. But because his last show was an outrageous circus, Gaultier got more serious and conservative this round.

Bestselling author interprets clothing colors

Hearst News Service

Adrien Arpel will tell you: Shocking pink is the color most women get raped and murdered in. Dark red is terrific for the divorce court. Mid-blue and mid-green are the best for borrowing money (they have cool vibes). Red is for power.

If you want to tell a lie, wear white (religious leaders have worn it for centuries). White also means rich, rich, rich, probably because of the dry cleaning bill. Black gives off no vibes, so it creates mystery.

But that's not all. In Arpel's books — she's sold millions — the world is divided into two skin tones: ruddy and sallow (red and yellow). People come in two shades: traditional and avant garde. Thus, we have four types: trad sallow; trad ruddy; avant-garde sallow; avant-garde ruddy. That's it.

"I never met a woman I liked who spends more than 10 minutes on her makeup," Arpel said. "The cosmetic industry relates to great beauty (using models who have yet to reach the age of consent), instead of considering the needs of ordinary people."

Famous model now designs own fashion line

Hearst News Service

Christie Brinkley — America's reigning beauty — is on tour, promoting her new casual clothes and swimsuit collections. She won't discuss her personal life, especially her upcoming nuptials with pop star Billy Joel, scheduled for next month, but she is eager to talk about other aspects of her life.

Brinkley lives in New York, was discovered while studying art in Paris about 10 years ago, but grew up in Malibu, the daughter of Don Brinkley, the producer of the hit TV series "Trapper John, M.D."

She has appeared on more than 150 magazine covers, and Harper's Bazaar has twice named her one of the world's 10 most beautiful women. But it was her curvaceous swimsuit posing on the cover of Sports Illustrated that catapulted her to fame and subsequent fortune.

In addition to her deal with Russ Togs, the manufacturer of her collection, Brinkley has held major advertising contracts with Chanel 19, Cover Girl Cosmetics, Revlon, Breck, MasterCard, Kinney Shoes and L'Oreal.

TODAY, AT age 30, Brinkley, who looks 10 years younger, has gone on to find personal and professional happiness. Her most rewarding work, she says, is still ahead of her. "The Warmup Project," an event she's organized with the fashion industry to raise funds for African famine relief, as well as needy Americans, will take place in New York on May 16.

Brinkley said she entered the garment business because, "I was looking for a new challenge. When Russ Togs approached me, I saw that their clothes were very good quality, and they were really nice people. To be given this opportunity was more than I could pass up. Very few fashion designers can be as involved as I am — from coming up with a design to modeling the clothes in magazines.

"I haven't really decided when I'll stop" modeling, she said. "Probably when I'm too bored with it.

"I could live without" being a superstar model, she added.

"It's not in any way necessary for my personal happiness. However, I love what's happening on this trip. At the first store we expected 400 people and 4,000 showed up. I was sort of swept through the crowd. At the other end, I was handed a microphone and all I could say was, 'Wow.' The reality was overwhelming.

"I NEVER THOUGHT I'd be making a living off my looks. My looks opened a lot of doors, but my career would be over if that's all I had going.

Asked about if she was really shy and chubby as a child, she said, "I don't know about shy, but I sure was chubby.

"I grew out of the chubbiness and learned to watch my diet and to exercise. I eat a lot of salads, raw vegetables and fresh fruit. I work out. I ski, swim, snorkel, ride horseback and play tennis.

"When I was asked to be a model in Paris, I saw how skinny the other girls were. I ate nothing but yogurt for a couple of weeks. Then I got too thin and everyone said, 'We liked you because you were different. You had meat on your bones.' Actually, my chubbiness proved a blessing. Sports Illustrated used me because of my figure."

Miss Brinkley is planning another modeling first — a fashion show to support drought-stricken Africans.

Brinkley sportswear 'easy-fitting'

By Gwen Jones
Hearst News Service

Calvin Klein she's not, but Christie Brinkley isn't trying to pass herself off as another high-fashion designer. Here's how she sees it: "I've modeled enough clothes in my life to know what looks and feels good and what travels well."

Indeed, the new Brinkley sportswear line, a collaborative effort between the model and Mitchell Gross (a designer for Russ Togs Inc., which manufactures the clothes), has the kind of easy-fitting clothes that both career women and homemakers can work into their wardrobes.

There's a choice of full-cut or body-contoured jackets and trousers, short and long skirts, tailored shirts and T-shirts. A complete outfit costs between $200 and $250.

The styles come in cotton, linen and silk in an array of colors and patterns, ranging from smoky pastel melon, lavender and celadon green to off-white, flax, mocha and black. The swimwear, designed by Monika Tilley, is primarily nautical in theme, in red, white and blue, with coordinating coverups.

The one-piece maillots are one area in which Brinkley should have been able to swim with confidence, having appeared in seven swimwear spreads and on three covers for Sports Illustrated.

Unfortunately, she is barely treading water with a group of unimaginative bathing suits.

As for the sportswear, it's roomy enough to fit the opposite sex, which the model had in mind when she designed the collection.

Chanel: Dash with class

PARIS (AP) — Coco Chanel might come back to earth to haunt Karl Lagerfeld, who now designs her collections. He stunned a big audience today with some daring new looks at the prestigious house recently considered to be mired in stodgy traditions.

The ready-to-wear show for next winter had dash and derring-do, as clothes were paraded by top models with class, such as Ines de la Fressange, who looks a bit like Chanel.

The new look included big rounded shoulders, short skirts revealing the knee, and draped pastel sweater outfits to rival those of Sonia Rykiel — who happened to be in the audience.

Sleek leather suits in everything from chocolate to hot red emphasized the winds of change here. There was not much left of Chanel except the gold coin buttons, plastered boldly all over suits, belts, sweaters and coats.

Hubert de Givenchy showed a collection centered on spectacular fitted evening clothes, more couture than ready-to-wear.

The trendy set that goes for layers might not like the Givenchy style, very sexy and female. But even timid dressers would feel elegant in Givenchy's sapphire.

But there was no denying that these shapely clothes in black satin and lace, pepped up with snaky velvet patterns on ruby or sapphire panels, were outstanding.

'Generation gap' opens

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

PARIS — At first, the big news out of Paris seemed to be the emergence of the third sex — a new fashion species dedicated to wearing gender-less clothes.

Then the tight-and-tarty temptress appeared to dominate the runways of spring fashion.

And now that the French ready-to-wear collections are over, it looks as if the real clothing issue of 1985 will be the age factor. Mom, it seems, is going to look like a sexpot next year in tight skirts; and daughter is going to look sexually ambiguous in oversize overshirts.

This latest fashion gap between the generations probably began last season when the androgynous look was pretty much bypassed by the 40-and-over female population and taken up by the kids — kids who assembled their versions of this oversize menswear look from family closets or thrift shops.

IN ONE OF those intricate improbabilities that people in fashion love to recount, a look that had come from the kids — the unemployed fashion plates along London's King's Road — had now gone back to the kids.

In the world of young fashion, where Jean Paul Gaultier and Kenzo are the big influences, the new clothes-for-all-sexes ideas include sarongs, bare midriffs, bra tops (yes, bras for men), tights, pants with crotches at the knees and big knee-length overshirts that hang below big mannish jackets.

In the world of adult fashion, the byword is erotica, and the center of erotica has shifted to the rear. The fanny is flaunted in a flurry of cowls, cups, slings and thongs seldom seen outside of the Folies-Bergere or a Las Vegas chorus line. Gaultier even provides the perfect new all-in-one — a dress made to look like a girdle out of that snappiest of all girdle fabrics — the two-way stretch.

THERE IS A subtle irony to all this, especially when you consider that daughter, who is enjoyed unparalleled sexual freedom, is willing to cover her sexuality in shapelessness, and mother is ready to put aside her real or imagined innocence in favor of becoming a sex kitten. Make that sex cat.

Whether or not this fashion psychodrama really takes place next spring is up to mother and daughter, of course. In the meantime, here are the trends that will tempt them:

— PRINTS: From those tiny all-over petal prints grandma used to wear in the '30s to stylized Cubist configurations, prints are the fabric of spring fashion. In the either-or clothes category, sarongs take shape in big tropical motifs such as a splashy banana leaf or an undulating palm tree.

For serious daytime dressing, there are tapestries, wallpapers, plaids, dots, Jacquards, damasks and considerable numbers of magnified paisleys, which are sometimes extracted for use as decoration. One of the most beautiful plaid magnifications is Nino Cerruti's giant Prince of Wales pattern, which he uses in a soft wool-and-silk jacket.

For evening, Karl Lagerfeld wins the print award of the season for his beaded fireworks embroideries on silk. One of them features a Manhattan skyline lit by sparklers and rockets. The average price of one of these masterpieces: $28,000.

— KNOTS: Fashion is all tied up in knots for spring, including knotted midriffs, knotted sarongs, knotted jacket backs, knotted shirttails, knotted sleeves, knotted hip slings, knotted turbans, knotted jewelry and even knotted hair. That is the legacy the New Wave Japanese designers have left to Western dress, and it is a styling device used in all price ranges.

— COLOR: The black, gray and white palette that sifted all over fashion with Japan's so-called atomic-ash look has finally given way to a brighter spectrum. Claude Montana gives us lime green, buttercup yellow and geranium pink. Issey Miyake introduces smoky lavender, sage green and pinky Bordeaux. Thierry Mugler brings bright-blue leather to the forefront.

And Sonia Rykiel invents a new, barely pink shade called powder and surrounds it with salmon, gray and yellow, plus an occasional purple and red.

— GODETS: This time-honored dressmaking technique whereby skirts are released near the hem in pie-shaped wedges of fabric, is perhaps the strongest design signature of spring.

— HEMLINES: There are more short skirts for spring than in many seasons, but every designer who shows knee-baring hemlines also offers to deliver them just below knees. There are more long skirts, including floor-sweeping versions at Yves Saint Laurent, than in many seasons. And these two hemline extremes are often offered by the same designer.

There also are more shorts in Paris than at any time since the '70s — shorts for all ages and sexes. They range from Hubert de Givenchy's impeccably cut city shorts to Azzedine Alaia's saucy dance shorts with rolled hemlines. Kenzo even brings back jams — those above-the-knee surfer shorts that first splashed on the scene in the '60s.

Stick kept king up on his heels

Copley News Service

France's King Louis XIV (1638-1715) used an elegant walking stick to help him keep his balance when he wore the high heeled shoes that he favored.

The king also gave his second wife a walking stick which was decorated with her portrait surrounded by rubies.

Because of the way it symbolized his royal authority, Louis let no one else carry a walking stick in his presence with the exception of his finance minister.

Lightweight wools soft, practical

By LAURE QUINLIVAN
Copley News Service

Spring fashion's return to femininity, featuring shorter hemlines and curvy silhouettes, may indicate that the love affair with menswear is over. However, a fabric traditionally associated with men's suits — lightweight worsted wool — is in widespread use in women's fashion this spring.

"Women finally are discovering what men have known for years — that lightweight wools are cool and soft to the touch," says Patti McCarthy, women's wear manager at The Wool Bureau. "More importantly, these cool wools are a good wardrobe investment because they can be worn practically year-round," she says.

The Wool Bureau's New York fashion office analyzes and projects fashion trends for coming seasons. Here is the bureau's guide to spring — pivotal pieces for the season's look and changes in color and fabric affecting the look and feel of fashion.

— Skirts. Hem length is optional, but the long, lean look that has been popular for several years is still strong. Short skirts that reach to the knee or just above are fresh alternatives this spring.

— Dresses. Feminine looks that cinch the waist and skim the hips are back in style. Dropped shoulders and oversize pockets give dresses a new look, as do jumper looks in menswear checks and plaids.

— Pants. Fuller and more fluid, pants are less cropped than in the past. Pleats and waist treatments make pants more feminine.

— Jackets and coats. Shoulders often are padded, but the look is easy and unconstructed.

— Sweaters. Soft and oversize sweaters are paired with short skirts or walking shorts for new combinations.

— Big Shirts. Worn as a jacket, tunic or tied sailor-style at the waist, the big shirt is one borrowed-from-menswear item that promises to be popular this spring. It's loose, comfortable and easy to wear with just about anything.

— Color. Pastels, staples for spring, are the newest colors to be associated with wool fabrics. Peach, lemon and white give sheer wool gabardines and crepes a soft, fragile look that belies their strength and durability. Pastels mix well with neutrals such as khaki or beige.

Bright colors are exploding onto lightweight coats, tank dresses and casual wear. Cobalt and fuschia are "safe," while the daring shade emerging from the bright palette is neon coral.

Navy, white and red continue to be classic spring color combinations. Black is still strong, especially when paired with neon brights.

— Fabric. Cotton and linen again are used widely for spring wear, with lightweight wools appearing on a large scale for the first time.

Lightweight wools used for sportswear separates and oversize dusters include gabardines, flannels, jerseys and challis. Very lightweight wools such as sheer voile, gauze and crepe are used for dresses and blouses.

Spring clothes signal a fundamental shift away from hard-edged masculine tailoring that dominated fall. New looks incorporate a bit of menswear dash in the way of patterns and fabrics, but the significant attention to waist and hips emphasizes rather than downplays the female figure.

Spring fashions bring changes in hairstyles

CHICAGO (AP) — As the fashion pendulum swings away from the man-tailored, oversized looks of previous seasons to a renewed awareness of the feminine form, hairstyles, too, will change to complement spring's new short skirts, soft-shaped shirts and flashy floral prints.

According to the members of the Helene Curtis Hairstylists Advisory Board, the sheared, mannish cuts of last fall will make way for softer, sensuous designs that move forward to flatter the face.

"The forward movement of hair is the big message for spring," notes board member Victor Figueroa of New York City. "Spiky wisps that curl around cheeks and brows will frame the face with a totally feminine, gamine look."

Rocco Altobelli of Minneapolis adds, "There's a new shaggy texture, almost like macrame, that's cut into the hair and enhanced with a soft perm for gentle lift. Perm techniques that use a mix of rods and rollers to achieve several different wave patterns within the style are favored by fashion-aware stylists for today's soft looks."

Short hair is still the preferred length because of its versatility and adaptability to the busy, active lives of working women, board members say. But they add that there may be several lengths of hair in each style — from super-short at the nape with longer lengths on top, to looks that feature a very short, feathery crown graduating to shaggy chin-length layers.

"Along with the support of a perm, we're adding color to the hair to give a multidimensional illusion," says Darleen Hakola of Portland, Ore. "We often emphasize a wave in the hair with color or lighten only the tips of an airy, wispy style to add interest.

"And, while the colors we will be using this spring are vivid tones, they have none of the hardness of the neon colors used last fall. The overall effect should be soft and easy on the eye."

The versatility of spring hair fashions can be seen in the differences between day and evening looks. Geri Mataya of Pittsburgh feels that daytime looks "will rely on the support of perms, mousses and styling gels for lift and all-day support with a soft feeling. But at night, the influence of the '60s comes into play as lots of back-brushing adds more volume and moves hair up and out in any direction."

Douglas Marvaldi of Winter Park, Fla., sums up the spring hair fashion statement of the advisory board in one word: unconstructed.

"Spring looks are much easier for everyone to wear and to style at home," he says. "There is a softness to the styles that is flattering to every woman. After a good professional cut, perm and color, achieving the look at home is a simple matter of foaming in a bit of mousse, then 'squishing' the hair with the hands as it dries into a natural, crinkled, textured line."

New spring collections unmistakably feminine

Copley News Service

Whether they're heads of companies or factory foremen, women will be looking more like women in body-conscious designs this spring. The trend across-the-board in sport, casual and evening wear is two-pronged, either toward shapes that are unabashedly feminine or masculine with feminine overtones.

With growing success and confidence in themselves, many women are shunning traditional man-tailored business suits in favor of classic, feminine looks that are equally professional — and designers are responding in full force.

Oscar de la Renta's and Bill Blass's spring lines feature neat, hourglass silhouettes in suits nipped at the waist that are both businesslike and appealing. For festive occasions, sophisticated evening gowns are draped and cut to the curve, while the long-absent cocktail dress is making a comeback.

Du Pont's "American Original" award-winner Kanae Ikai offers day wear with uneven hems and fluid, asymmetrical lines in this spring's color palette of whites, neutrals and pastels. Shorter, leg-revealing hemlines typified by Anne Klein's flirtatious sarong skirts are among the newest selections for casual wear.

Continuing in a feminine vein, Koos van den Akker's spring designs have comfortable loose shapes. Koos uses bright colors in his signature collage fabric, often blending natural fibers with Dacron for its easy-care qualities. Perry Ellis's soft crepe daytime clothes and Anne Pinkerton's vibrant floral prints also are part of the season's feminine fare.

Once again, women will be borrowing from their boyfriends' and husbands' closets, but with a twist for a softer look. Taking their direction from men's fashions, oversize shirts and tailored shirt jackets will be resewn to suit a woman's lines.

Ralph Lauren's spring line includes full, man-tailored shirts and jackets and long narrow skirts. Patricia Clyne, runner-up in Du Pont's award program, blends the modern and classic in the easy-moving lines of her softly tailored coats, oversize blazers and mix-and-match separates.

Although today's women fill men's shoes, they don't have to wear them.

Linen fashionable spring fabric

Copley News Service

More than in any previous spring, linen garments are fashionable for both men and women this season.

Linen refers to any cloth made from the flax plant. Such cloth is desirable because of its durable body, which is composed of thick and thin fibers.

Before you buy a linen outfit, there are certain aspects of the fabric you should know about, according to William Seitz, executive director of the Neighborhood Cleaners' Association.

One drawback to linen, according to Seitz, is that "linen cloth has problems maintaining its color. Due to inadequate dye penetration, linen is subject to dye crocking, or the breaking away of color from the fabric. This often gives linen a streaked or faded look."

Wardrobes need versatility

Copley News Service

Building a versatile wardrobe — one that meets all occasions but doesn't cost a fortune — is the goal of every fashion-conscious woman. And she wants to build a wardrobe that won't have to be replaced every year.

Following are some suggestions for building a basic and lasting wardrobe from Maxine Forman, senior vice president for Russ Togs Inc., a clothing manufacturer.

Absolute musts for a working woman's wardrobe include:

— A classically styled suit in a neutral color such as camel, gray, navy or black. This can be mixed or matched with other pieces — different skirts and jackets, pants and blouses — to dress the suit up or down.

— A textured suit, tweed or herringbone, for less formal office or day wear.

— A dressy dress, either solid colored or in a pattern that complements your suit jacket.

— A two-piece dress for versatility and mixing-and-matching with other pieces in your wardrobe.

When selecting skirts, have hemlines hit just below the knee. That length always is in style, year after year through all the seasons.

Lauder's memoirs to be published

"Estee," the memoirs of Estee Lauder, will be published this year by Random House.

The publishing company announced Mrs. Lauder's book, which she has been working the past few years, "will be a richly anecdotal account of the creation of her vast cosmetics empire," and will tell how Mrs. Lauder "built her company with monumental strength and determination," seeking "to make every woman in the world beautiful."

Major fashion designers marketing children's wear

New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — The well-dressed infant or toddler today may sport swimsuits from Oscar de la Renta or dresses from Yves Saint Laurent. These well-known women's wear designers — along with Diane Von Furstenberg, Christian Dior, Mary McFadden and Liz Claiborne — have recently entered the children's apparel market. "It's not your basic pink and blue stretchy anymore," said Stanley Kaye, who directed the trade-sponsored National Kids Fashion Show in New York last week.

That's not to say that "stretchies" — pajamas with feet — are no more. But the new styles are designed to resemble tuxedos, for example, complete with white bib front and tails. Other fancy togs for toddlers these days range from jogging suits made of a parachute fabric to mohair sweaters adorned with rhinestones.

Seibel & Stern, a sales representative for Yves Saint Laurent dresses, was showing a taffeta dress decorated with sequins. According to Harold Dannenfelser, the company's director of sales and marketing, such "special" dresses will be passed from generation to generation.

At Delfino of Italy, which offers imported Italian children's wear, a three-piece color-coordinated outfit sells for $134. The ensemble — wool pants, a flannel shirt and a plaid wool and mohair jacket — can be worn by children aged 6 months to 6 years. "We are finding a trend away from synthetic fabrics toward natural fibers," said Manne Charhon, president of Delfino's American subsidiary. "People seem to be willing to pay higher prices for a certain fashion look."

Indeed, while the upper end of the market represents a small fraction of the $15.9 billion children's apparel business, industry observers say it is racking up $400 million in annual retail sales and is growing at an annual rate of 10 to 15 percent.

Analysts attribute the growth to changing demographics. "The feeling is that in two-income families, where mothers are working and having fewer children, people are going to be spending more money on their children's clothes," said Brenda Gall, an industry analyst with Merrill Lynch. Designers, she said, have seized the opportunity to expand.

Earlier this month, for example, Mary McFadden introduced a line of satin and chiffon pleated dresses in pastel colors. The dresses, made for infants through girl's size 6, cost between $500 and $560. A quilted jacket of china silk retails for $600.

Not all the clothing is that expensive. Liz Claiborne's collection of sporty separates for girls, introduced last year, ranges from $20 to $40.

At Christian Dior, three new licensees manufacture girl's dresses, boy's dress suits, sportswear and sleepwear. This year the company is licensing a line of outerware priced at between $80 and $150.

Dior entered the market in 1976 with sleepware licensed by Slumber Togs.

Children wearing traditional styles

Hearst News Service

What will stylishly dressed youngsters wear this spring?

A year ago, it would have been scaled-down versions of grownup garb. For boys, that meant battle jackets and skinny pants. Girls got gussied up in either dresses stuffed with shoulder pads or androgynous man-tailored apparel.

This time around, girls will look like girls: You'll see smocks with peek-a-boo hemlines and handknit dresses. Boys too will assume a more traditional look, with sweater vests, rompers, shorts and perky bow ties.

It only sounds old-fashioned. These classics have been updated with a youthful sense of whimsy through detailing such as watercolor-inspired prints, eyelet-linen fabrics and colors ranging from black and white to peach, celadon green and vibrant red and green.

The trend toward more traditional silhouettes, in the opinion of some merchants, is a reaction to all the gimmicky styles that flooded the market the past three years. (Consider the Michael Jackson-inspired merchandise that fizzled about the time the Jackson's Victory Tour ended last fall.) The shift also can be viewed as a backlash to the "adult" style of dressing that parents have chosen for their children in recent years.

The most popular names in children's wear — size 6 months to 6 — include Guess?, Esprit, Sylvia Whyte, Baby Dior, Oshkosh, Ruth Scharf, Izod, Choozie and Nannette, which continue to build their reputations with 1985's "new" classics, despite despite price tags that might read $80 for an infant's outfit and $150 for a girl's jacket.

The move to more timeless, youth-oriented fashions comes at a time when many children and their parents seem to be caught up in the "hurried child syndrome," which child psychologist David Elkind writes about in his book, "The Hurried Child."

Practicality important in swimsuit designs

Copley News Service

Often when you look at women's swimsuits, you'll see novelty approaches, from plastic-look polyurethane suits to rhinestones and plastic tubing around high-cut thighs and low-cut tops.

But it's the easy-to-wear active swimsuits that really attract most consumers.

These suits get their style not from gimmicks, but from how much skin they expose to the much-sought-after sun.

"Women like the high-cut leg that makes them look taller and thinner," said Pam Feltman, a swimsuit designer.

"From there, it really depends on the age group," she said. "Over 25, they want to look as good as possible with coverage in the right places. Under 25, it's the skimpier, the better," she added.

"I think people still are interested in getting a tan, in spite of what the medical profession says about sun," said Sid Smilove, another designer. "So they do want maximum exposure from their suits, and they want an active look that actually functions for water activities.

"Of course, the younger girls want the more dramatic lines, the higher leg line and such. It all has to do with the active lifestyle and exercise. Swim wear has to reflect that," he pointed out.

This season, it's again reflected mainly on one-piece suits.

This is because designers report that it's easier to put style and fashion into a one-piece suit — however skimpy — than into bikinis made of four minuscule triangles of fabric held together with strings.

Style and fashion are accomplished with the use of side and back detailing.

On the side of swimsuits, watch for buttons that allow small expanses of skin to peek out or laces that tie at the leg.

In back, detailing shows up in criss-crossed straps, industrial-strength snaps and deep-dipped backs.

"There seems to be more interest in one-piece suits at the beginning of the summer when we don't have tans yet," said Tracy Rasmussen, a swim wear buyer for a clothing store.

"Toward the end of the summer, we start seeing more bikinis," she noted.

With the popularity of prints this season, bikinis often are reminiscent of something Jane might have worn while swinging through the jungle with Tarzan, because of all the animal prints that abound.

Swimwear's history 'skimpy'

Hearst News Service

From bloomers to bikinis, swimwear has come a long way from the days when women covered every inch of skin and men were almost as well concealed in drawers that extended below the knee and long tunic tops that covered the torso. By comparison, today's suits for men and women are just barely legal.

— 1890: Society's standards of modesty dictated total cover-up. Women wore long bloomers under billowing dresses of somber-colored flannel or serge, thick black stockings and mobcaps. Men were almost as well-concealed: drawers extended below the knee, and long tunic tops concealed the torse.

— 1900: Probably the first real attempts at bathing dress designs were the attractive sailor-style outfits, but fabrics were still heavy and hardly conductive to real swimming. Black stockings were still de rigueur.

— 1910: Australian swimming champion Annette Kellerman popularized a functional, shape-revealing all-in-one suit rather like today's longleg leotards, but made in a heavy knit fabric. By 1915, swimming was becoming a popular sport, and attitudes slowly changed on accepted attire for serious swimmers.

— 1920: The term "swimming suit," as opposed to "bathing dress," was more frequently used. Tunic and trunks outfits of knitted wool began to appear in a briefer version. These early Jazz Age outfits often were sold with knitted socks reaching to mid-calf.

— 1930: Body-covering continued to diminish as swimmers and beachgoers discovered sunbathing.

— 1940: With Hollywood spreading its glamorous influence, new and more colorful fabrics began to appear and swimwear designs became positively daring. Skirted styles were popular for film star-inspired suits, as was the slenderizing sheath, with its figure-controlling panels. The first two-pieces for women appeared in the late '40s, styled in cable and fancy-stitch knit fabrics, some with jacquard designs. Men by this time had abandoned their tops and tunics and were wearing swim trunks, usually belted at the waist.

— 1950: Women began not only to reveal their figures but also to enhance them with tummy-flattening lastex panels and bust-shaping and molding.

— 1960: The bikini made international headlines, and from its inception the two-piece named by Frenchman Louis Reard had been one of swimwear's hottest silhouettes.

Trend-watchers say that when things have gone about as far as they can go, look for a return to old styles. The '80s began with a return to glamorous Hollywood-inspired one-piece swimwear featuring shirring, plunging decolletes and low-cut backs.

Different male physiques require different swimsuits

Copley News Service

OK, guys, want to know what's new in swim wear and which new swimsuit would look best on you?

Women's magazines every spring run articles telling women with figure problems what to look for in swim wear to minimize their flaws, but men are left entirely on their own when it comes to buying flattering swim wear.

That's unnecessary, men's swimsuit designers say. They offer the following suggestions for buying a suit.

— A man with good legs but a thick waist should try a "silhouette" swimsuit with an expanded waistband and smaller leg.

— The man who is completely physically fit might consider a micro-bikini, which has a side waistband just 1 inch wide.

— Younger men might like to consider "the retro look," a return to the longer boxers, Hawaiian prints and madras plaids of the 1960s.

— A gentleman with a protruding tummy might do well in a longer-cut boxer suit. Boxers are coming out in a variety of lengths to provide a choice.

— Men with longer legs might want longer shorts than their friends with short legs.

— Men who spend a lot of time in the water, no matter what their body types, might try a suit made of quick-drying blends of polyester, cotton and nylon.

Overall, there's a definite trend toward recreational swim wear, or swim wear that can move out of the water and make a transition to sportswear with the addition of a jacket or knit shirt. Men now wear active wear shorts all day and also to swim in.

Many men wear bikinis under their boxers instead of supporters. And to swim competitively, the fastest suit is a bikini light enough to glide through the water. Designers say the best fabrics are 100 percent nylon tricot or combinations of nylon and Lycra.

Blues are still the strongest colors in swim wear.

Jeans become unbuttoned

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — The young woman in the Esprit ad left the top button of her jeans open "because they were so tight I couldn't zip them up," giggles Laiko Bahrs, a shop manager in San Francisco and one of the models for the ad series.

The man and the woman wearing white jeans in the current Calvin Klein ads left their top buttons open "because it is something provocative, which we like," says Klein.

In a full-page ad for La Cetch, a model wears a jeans skirt with the top button undone "because she's wearing it backwards and that's the way it fit," explains Michael Hoffberg, president of the company.

It's hardly a coincidence that several companies are showing their pants partially unbuttoned these days. Wearing the waist button open on jeans has been around for years, and not just for those who have outgrown their pants. A discreet signal in the gay community, it is a popular look here at the Exile disco and is common among some groups in San Francisco. Male hookers on the Rue Ste. Anne in Paris often leave the top buttons of their jeans undone.

But the origin of the style is not entirely gay. When Levi's 501 button-fly jeans became popular in Europe in the late '70s, many kids bought them oversize — sometimes because that was all they could get — and wore them hiked up.

Designer Calvin Klein thinks wearing jeans with one button unbuttoned is just plain sexy, the effect he wanted in his new ads photographed in Puerto Vallarta, Mexico, by Bruce Weber. "I love the purity of the white- and cream-colored clothes. Particularly in contrast to the suggestiveness of the way they are worn with the open button," he says.

"With the button open, the fantasy starts," says style authority Robert L. Green. Michael Hoffberg, president of La Cetch jeans in Los Angeles, first showed unbuttoned jeans last month when he was featuring jeans with attached printed underwear. "The point then," he says, "was to let people know about the pants underneath."

Esprit stylist Margaret Nelson says that's really why she left the trousers unbuttoned in some of the new ads for that company. "There were these wonderful printed boxer shorts, and I just didn't want to show them on their own," she says. "But I never expect that anyone will walk around with their pants undone."

Children's clothes growing up fast

Copley News Service

After a winter of heavy clothing and indoor games, children are thrilled with the prospect of shedding their coats and mittens and moving outside.

Throughout the winter months, they wait for the first signs of green to appear, for they know then that it's time for fun and games, special occasions and new clothes.

Influenced by Michael Jackson, video games and television, children no longer want to dress like "little kids," especially for special occasions.

"While classic ensembles such as the jacket dress and Eton suit still are important, they have been designed in a wider selection of fabrics and colors to reflect current trends," according to Betty Adcock, vice president of design for Nannette, a children's-wear manufacturer.

In direct response to junior and women's clothing-market trends, neon colors and lace are prominently featured in children's wear this spring. Also featured are dropped-waist dresses and sundresses topped by cropped jackets.

High-voltage brights may light up the season, but stark primary colors still add their traditional charge in other outfits.

Although the interest in "petite haute couture" already is evident in large metropolitan areas like New York City, Chicago and Los Angeles, "areas that are the most traditional and the slower to change are asking for the 'trendiest' merchandise," Adcock said.

But for many consumers (especially grandparents), spring will be a special time to dress children in traditional classics such as brother and sister ensembles.

Other seasonal favorites for special occasions include delicately detailed pinafores made in cool, crisp fabrics.

Truth in Lending Act gives advertising guidelines

By LINDA TRUITT

If you have been watching advertisements lately with the intent to buy a car, house or furniture, you might have noticed isolated terms like $310 a month, 5 percent down and 7.9 percent financing available appearing more frequently. Advertisers beware; you might be violating the federal Truth In Lending Act.

The main purpose of the Truth In Lending Act is to assure the meaningful disclosure of consumer credit and lease terms so that consumers can compare those terms and shop wisely. Prior to the passage of the Act, an advertiser might have disclosed only the most attractive credit terms, thus distorting the true cost. For example, an advertisement might have read, "84 Ford Mustang, no money down, $200 per month."

Whether this is a bargain depends upon the information missing from the advertisement, such as the cash price and the number of payments. The Act requires that the advertisement tell the whole story.

The Act's provisions are simple. If an advertisement contains any one of a list of terms specified in the Act, then that advertisement must also include a number of prescribed disclosures. If the "triggering" terms are left out of the ad, then the disclosures are not required.

The type of transaction advertised (open- or closed-end credit) determines the triggering terms as well as the disclosures. In all cases, the required disclosures must be made "clearly and conspicuously."

Most new car and real estate transactions involve closed-end credit where credit is advanced for a specified period of time and the amount financed, the finance charge and schedule of payments are agreed upon by the lender and customer. In an advertisement promoting "closed-end credit," if any of the following triggering terms are used, the five specific disclosures must also be included in the advertisement:

— The amount of downpayment or a statement that no downpayment is required, such as "leave your pocketbook at home" or "you won't pay anything until after June 1;"

— The amount of any installment, such as "monthly payments less than $99;"

— The number of installments, such as "36 small payments are all you make;"

— The period of repayment, such as "36 months to pay;"

— The dollar amount of any finance charge; or — A statement that there is no charge for credit.

If any of the above triggering terms are used in a closed-end credit advertisement, then the following disclosures must also be included in that advertisement:

— The "cash price" or the amount of the loan;

— In a credit sale, the amount of any required downpayment (using the term "cash downpayment") or a statement that no downpayment is required, as applicable;

— The number, amount and due dates or period of payments scheduled to repay the debt;

— The amount of the finance charge expressed as an "annual percentage rate;" and — The "deferred payment price" (in credit sales) or "total of payments" (in loans and other nonsale credit). Neither disclosure need be made in the case of the sale of a dwelling or a loan secured by a first lien on a dwelling to purchase that dwelling.

Linda Truitt is president of Better Business Bureau of the Permian Basin Inc.

Terms on labels defined

By MARIAN FARR

Dieters used to go to the grocery store and stock up on raw carrots and cottage cheese. But today's calorie-conscious consumers can select from a bewildering number of products marketed specifically for them. All this choice is an advantage, but may also lead to inappropriate food selections, higher costs and even more calories for consumers who don't know what they're getting in a diet food.

Because products aimed at the calorie-conscious usually make nutritional claims on the label, the Food and Drug Administration requires that the food label meet certain regulations. A key FDA distinction is between "low-calorie" food and "reduced-calorie" foods. A food product can be labeled "low-calorie," "low in calories" or a low-calorie food only if a serving has no more than 40 calories. Foods naturally low in calories, such as celery, may only be labeled a "low-calorie food."

"Reduced-calorie" foods contain at least one-third fewer calories than an equivalent serving of the food for which they substitute. The label must list the calorie content of a serving of the "reduced-calorie" food, and a serving of the food for which it substitutes.

Also "reduced-calorie" food must be similar in nutrition and all sensory properties, such as taste, smell and texture, to the food for which it substitutes. But reduced-calorie foods are not necessarily low in calories.

The meaning of other terms commonly seen on food product labels depends on whether the product makes claims for weight control. These terms include:

— Light (lite) foods contain less of substances such as fat, sugar or alcohol (in the case of beer or wine) and they are usually lower in calories. When the term "light" represents a claim for weight control, these products must conform with regulations for low- or reduced-calorie foods.

— "Diet" or "dietetic" foods must comply with either the "low-calorie" or "reduced-calorie" food regulations or regulations for foods used for other dietary purposes, such as sodium reduction.

— Diabetic food product labels must state: "Diabetics: This product may be useful on your diet on the advice of a physician." If the food is not low-calorie or reduced-calorie, the label must state that fact.

— Formulated meal replacements such as special diet milk-shake type drinks or frozen dinners, can be used in calorie control programs, but are not necessarily low in calories. For example, diet plan frozen meals may contain regular foods, but simply limit calories with smaller portions. Also, many meal replacements control calorie intake simply because they are eaten in place of a full meal.

— "Sugar-free" or "sugarless" foods may be labeled "low-calorie" or "reduced calorie" if they meet the requirements for those foods. Sugar-free foods may contain sugar alcohols such as sorbitol, xylitol or mannitol, that have the same calories as sugar. These foods must state that the product is not for weight control. Foods that have substantial natural sugar content, such as fruit in fruit juices, may contain a factual statement that the food is unsweetened or contains no added sugar.

Buying special food products isn't always the best way to reduce calories. But if you do plan to include diet foods in your meals, compare them with the calorie counts of "regular" foods and read the labels carefully.

Statements now traditions

By LINDA ANDERSON

Over the years several statements — such as "The check is in the mail," or "Of course I'll respect you in the morning" — transformed from white lies into traditions. These are the claims which everyone says and hears and which no one ever believes.

Commercials and advertisements also have similar "traditional" sayings which are used over and over — and for a broad selection of products — but which are so obviously false no one believes them. For example:

— "Stays crisp in milk." There is no cereal, in flake, puff or other sugar-sparkled weirdly-shaped form, that stays crisp longer than 10 seconds in milk. Of course, advertisers never specify the length of time the cereal is supposed to stay crisp.

— "Skin so soft it glows." Ideal skin should be clean, blemish-free, smooth and soft, but glowing is for lightbulbs.

— "Sexy" or "sensuous" when used to describe inanimate objects. Cars are exciting or practical, not sexy. Perfume and other fragrances can be pleasant, not sexy. Frozen TV dinners and cakes made from boxed mixes are definitely not sensual.

— "Makes housework easy." Anyone who has ever spent more than 10 minutes on housework knows it is tedious, time-consuming, constant, sometimes demeaning and occasionally — in that split second between the time the day's cleaning is done and the time the kids get home from school to mess it up again — housework can be rewarding and satisfying. But it is never easy.

— "Smooth, creamy root beer." Root beer is a dark brown, carbonated soft drink. Its main ingredient is water, not cream. How can something based on water be creamy? How can something carbonated be called smooth?

— "Fresh as a country lane after a spring rain." In the words of a teenager I know, a country lane after a spring rain would probably be muddy.

— "Holds without stiffness." It seems to contradict the laws of physics or thermodynamics or some other natural law for any hair spray, gel or mousse to hold without a certain amount of stiffness. How else would hair spray work?

— "New hit series!" As more and more viewers either turn to cable television stations or turn the tube off altogether, television networks' advertisements of their own shows become more and more frantic. How can "hit series" be used to describe a program which hasn't even been shown yet? How do they know it will be a hit?

— "I don't have time to count calories." I didn't realize this particular activity required a lot of time.

Statements such as these can be heard and seen hundreds of times a day in commercials and other advertisements, both in print and on the air. But who pays that much attention to commercials anyway?

Medicine cabinets should be organized

Associated Press

The bathroom medicine cabinet can be a cluttered and dangerous place and should be traded in for a new system of storing medical supplies.

The bathroom is fine for toothpaste, shampoo and beauty supplies, according to an article in the April issue of Redbook, but it is too damp and crowded for medicine.

Bathroom cabinets tend to be cluttered and confusing, mixing prescription and over-the-counter drugs, often housing unlabeled or outdated medication, sometimes in uncovered containers and non-sterile conditions.

The first step toward safe and sane medical supply storage is to create two medicine chests, according to pharmacy experts at the Food and Drug Administration Office of Public Affairs.

One box should contain only prescription drugs; the other devoted to nonprescription drugs and first aid supplies. Each box should contain clearly labeled compartments — fishing tackle boxes are easy to convert to this use.

In the prescription drug box, compartments should be labeled with the name of both the drug and the person for whom it was prescribed. Tape a list of contents to the lid of each box.

The best place to store medicine chests is a clothes or linen closet that is cool and dry — but make sure it does not contain moth crystals or insect repellent whose vapors might damage drugs.

Richard Penna, director of professional affairs for the American Pharmaceutical Association, offered a general guideline for what the well-stocked medicine chests should hold.

Drugs to have on hand include aspirin and/or acetaminophen, antacid, anti-bacterial topical medication, anti-diarrhea medication, antihistamines for allergy symptoms, antiseptic solutions such as iodine and hydrogen peroxide no stronger than 3 percent.

Also: burn ointment, calamine lotion, cough syrup, decongestant, an emetic such as syrup of ipecac to induce vomiting in case of accidental poisoning by a non-caustic substance, hydrocortisone cream, laxative, and petroleum jelly.

First-aid necessities suggested by Penna include absorbent sterile cotton for cleaning wounds, adhesive bandages, sterile gauze and adhesive tape, elastic bandages, an eye cup, small blunt scissors for cutting tape ar 1 gauze, thermometer, and tweezers for removing splinters.

The medicine chest also should have an emergency phone number list: the nearest hospital, an ambulance service, your doctor, pharmacy and poison control center.

Troubles wash away in unique Austin laundromat

New York Times News Service

AUSTIN — It seems an obvious thing to do, and you wonder why somebody didn't think of it before: Most people wash clothes at some time, and it's about as much fun as being caught in traffic. So why not give coin laundry customers something to do besides watch their clothes go around in circles? Like eat, drink and be merry?

So two Austin brothers opened a combination washateria, restaurant and saloon in an Austin shopping center last October and called it Barwash. They're cleaning up.

"Business is great, real good," said 25-year-old David Walsh, a co-owner. "During the day it's generally housewives; by nighttime it's a younger crowd. The place starts rockin' about 7, and is open till midnight."

The laundromat is glassed-off from the bar and restaurant, which serves wine and premium beer along with items like Croissant Cordon Bleu, pates and anchovy caper garlic bread.

Warning issued on defibrillators

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government is warning that an unknown number of battery-powered heart defibrillators could go dead in the middle of a medical emergency, possibly allowing a heart attack victim to die rather than be revived.

In a safety alert issued earlier this week to hospitals and rescue squads, the Food and Drug Administration said the lifesaving equipment "may fail suddenly and without warning" because of defective power packs that go dead prematurely.

"Failure of the defibrillator to operate can result in failure to revive a patient who might otherwise have been saved," the agency said. Spokesman Dave Duarte said the agency does not know if anyone has died because of the battery failures.

The FDA also said that testing the batteries, manufactured by General Electric Co., "will not reliably identify batteries subject to the potential failure." The batteries will test normal until they actually begin to fail, GE spokesman Bud Schaller said.

Two defibrillator manufacturers earlier issued a recall for some 11,000 machines because of the faulty GE batteries. The FDA's warning said a third manufacturer issued a recall last Thursday, and an unknown number of other companies also may have used the GE battery packs.

A heart defibrillator is a lifesaving device that delivers an electric jolt to the chest of a heart attack victim. The charge often can restore a regular heart beat to a patient whose heart has lapsed into useless, irregular beat called fibrillation.

In battery-powered defibrillators, such as those used in ambulances or emergency rooms, the electric jolt comes from a capacitor that is charged by the battery pack. If the batteries go dead, FDA noted, they cannot charge the capacitor, and the defibrillator will be unable to give the lifesaving electric shock.

The FDA confirmed that two manufacturers, Physio Control Corp. and Datascope Corp., had issued voluntary recalls for nearly 11,000 hospital and ambulance defibillators because of potentially defective batteries.

In its new warning, the FDA said a third manufacturer, Hewlett Packard, issued a recall last Thursday for two models of its machines. Duarte said he did not know how many Hewlett Packard machines were affected.

But the agency also warned that "other makes and models could present a similar hazard. ...

"FDA and GE are investigating the possibility that other manufacturers of defibrillators may have used these batteries.

"We are not providing battery model numbers or specific date codes at this time because such information may not be readily accessible on the battery packs, and because GE is still conducting testing for other possibly defective lots," the agency said.

DEAR ABBY

Husband exhausts wife

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I am 46 years old and my husband is 44. We have been married two years — his third, my second. My problem is that this man is insatiable in the bedroom! He's been this way ever since we were married. He wants sex at least three times a day. On weekends we spend the whole day in bed. I thought he would eventually slow down, but his sex drive is as strong as ever.

He's a model husband in every other way, but I am exhausted from all this lovemaking. I feel like a prostitute who has to deliver on demand, only I'm not getting paid for it.

Once a day would be plenty for me, but he insists it's not enough for him. I want to be a good wife, and I'm afraid if I deny him he will go elsewhere to satisfy himself. What can I do? I don't want to lose him. — EXHAUSTED IN PALO ALTO

DEAR EXHAUSTED: Look at the facts: Your husband's sexual appetite far exceeds yours, but you continue to deliver on demand like an unpaid prostitute for fear you'll lose him. Meanwhile, you're exhausted.

My dear lady, you must tell your "model husband" exactly how you feel. If you lack the courage, see a counselor who will surely call your husband in, since he is part of the problem. You need to be assured that your feelings are every bit as important as his. And he needs to know it, too. If you married for love, perhaps you have the wrong man. And if he married for sex, perhaps he has the wrong woman.

DEAR ABBY: It happened again, and I am furious! Someone with whom I correspond sent my letter on for others to read without asking my permission to do so. Would you call that ethical?

Is it necessary for a person to state in so many words that the writer does not want his/her letter sent to another? Or shouldn't that be assumed?

I would appreciate your printing this. I think I know what you will say, but some people need to see it in black and white. — FUMING IN BURLINGTON, IOWA

DEAR FUMING: Is it ethical? No. Don't assume anything. Remember, the pen is not only mightier than the sword, it can be equally dangerous. So if you're concerned about your letters being recycled, write nothing incriminating, or write nothing at all.

DEAR ABBY: Two years ago, my watch stopped, so I decided I'd try to fix it myself with a feather and some kerosene. While trying to pry the back open, I dropped the watch. I picked it up and dropped it again. This time all the insides fell out, so I picked up the pieces and put them together again.

Believe it or not, that watch has kept perfect time ever since. How can you explain it? — IDA IN LAGUNA HILLS

DEAR IDA: Beginner's luck. It's like "repairing" a vending machine with a kick!

Window displays make, break stores

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

WESTPORT, Conn. — Linda Cahan takes her window displays so seriously she sometimes has nightmares about the mannequins.

The 35-year-old Westport artist — she calls herself a "visual merchandising consultant" — knows that the decisions made in her business can make or break a store, even if the customers she tries to lure are not even aware the profession exists.

Her favorite story illustrates the point. A window designer for a shoe store in West Hampton, N.Y., forgot the first rule of his trade, which is to reign in the artistic impulse and go with what sells.

"He was trying to use a sense of humor," Cahan recalls. "He used a male mannequin who was a flasher. All the guy was wearing was the store's shoes and a tan raincoat. Then he had three female mannequins looking somewhat shocked, wearing lace underwear and bras and fancy high-heeled shoes.

"NOW MALE mannequins are not well-endowed; they are not genetically correct. It was in poor taste; it wasn't funny, and the community boycotted the store," forcing it to close.

"Unless you know your customer you can really blow it. There's a fine line between educating the populace and offending them."

Windows are not high art — uncompromising and eternal; they are what Cahan calls "street-art" — flexible and occasional.

"It's OK for you to think the store you work for is tacky," she told her display class at Parsons School of Design in New York recently. "But the owner better not think you're tacky."

And so, for $40 to $60 an hour, she puts up with some odd requests.

Like the one this fall from a furrier in Westport who wanted a windowful of Cabbage Patch Kids and a Cabbage Santa on a mechanized sled pulled by reindeer — all wearing little fur coats, hats and boots.

HER OWN tastes are more subtle — suspending half of a Cadillac Seville in a window at Bonwit Teller ("it made the papers"), spotlighting a nude woman mannequin's rear-end and a row of pumpkins for a Halloween display, hanging a giant cut-out alligator over a baby to advertise Izod shirts.

The goal of visual merchandising is to win the battle for the shopper's attention, "again, within the boundaries of good taste."

Outrageousness aside, there is a cool science to it described in a 368-page book Cahan co-authored last year, "A Practical Guide to Visual Merchandising," published by John Wiley & Sons.

Her own 14 years of experience are as varied as the text's advice. She broke the sex barrier as the first woman visual merchandising manager at Bonwit Teller ("I was 5-foot-8 and large enough to look like I could carry ladders.")

SHE LATER became the second woman display manager at Macy's, working at a store in New Haven, Conn. She was the first woman on the corporate staff at D.M. Reads, a chain of six department stores based in Trumbull, Conn.

For the last three years, she has sustained a successful free-lance career in New York and Fairfield County, Conn., and recently began what she hopes will become a regular series of seminars for local merchants on display techniques.

Her more than a dozen clients include General Electric Co. in Fairfield, Richardson-Vicks Inc. in Wilton, First Federal Savings & Loan in Norwalk and the New England Carpet Center in Stamford.

She has done very different things for each client, ranging from drawings for Vicks Formula 44D to major interior renovations at the carpet center.

"WINDOWS ARE one-hundredth of what I do," she said. She livened up the GE employee store, persuading the company to get flexible mannequins for a variety of poses.

"Everything the store has is personal stuff, but there was no sense of people," she said. "I'm going to have mannequins doing different things every couple of weeks — putting electric curlers in their hair, drinking a cup of coffee ...."

"People will start to name the mannequins ... actually start to look for changes. This is why I encourage merchants to change their windows as often as possible. People will start to depend on you for their visual stimulation."

Large corporations often have generous budgets for visual merchandising; during Cahan's tenure at Macy's in the late 1970s, the chain spent more than $1 million per year on display in its New York regional division alone.

Smaller stores rarely can afford such purchasing freedom, but they, too, can benefit from careful color choices.

"Color is probably the best way of drawing the customer, the easiest also," she said. "There are some basics: green casts a shadow and is terrible for clothing. Orange is too vibrant. Pink is the color of love and harmony and acceptance."

USING THE entire space in a display is also important.

"Doing a window is like doing a sculpture. If all the elements work right, it becomes a three-dimensional composition."

What kind of dummies should fill the space? Mannequins cost hundreds of dollars and vary from zombie-like, "pure virgins" to "major attitude" sexpots, Cahan said.

Cahan insists that a well-dressed dummy makes a difference in sales, offering as proof a description of how she presented one female mannequin at Bonwit.

"She was standing there with her hands on her hips, her head thrust back and she had fire in her little painted eyes. She looked hot. I unbuttoned the blouse all the way to the waist.

"THE OUTFIT was $500. They sold out two days later, and the average age of the buyer was 65. These women would never in a million years unbutton their blouses, but every time they put that outfit on they're going to feel sexy. That was the illusion."

'Do-it-yourself' repair tips offered

By ANDY LANG
Associated Press

Tips that may be of help to you when you're doing it yourself:

— When attempting to get rid of rust stains from a porcelain surface, why not try a rust remover? People seldom think of it in connection with a sink or tub. An excellent type is a jelly that also removes lime stains from porcelain.

— If you ever decide to fix a sagging floor with adjustable steel jack posts, remember they must be turned up very slowly — no more than half an inch every three or four days.

— When you have to repair the crumbling mortar between bricks in a wall or house exterior, be sure you get a special mortar mix which contains hydrated lime.

— Whether you use a plunger, a snake or auger, or a liquid or powdered chemical to clean a clogged drain pipe, do it as quickly as you can after the clogging is noticed. It's much easier to clear a partly clogged pipe than a completely clogged one.

— If you are putting in a new doorbell or chime at the front or rear door, it is not necessary to turn off the electricity, but if you do any work whatever on the transformer, shut off the power or call in an electrician.

— Avoid getting on a ladder to check for openings in the side of a house, by standing on the ground and using a moderate or large-sized flashlight.

— One way to be sure of using a wood putty that matches the wood on which it will be used is to get some fine sawdust from the same wood (if it is practical) and mix it with a glue that contains resin.

— When replacing an old door lock with a new one, the job will be a lot easier if you can purchase a lock of the same kind or at least with the same dimensions.

— Use cabinets with locks on the doors to keep potentially dangerous tools and chemicals away from children.

— If you ever contemplate the installation of a central air conditioner, use several thermometers to check the differences in rooms at certain times of the day. When the installer is there, show him what you have noted and see if separate controls won't save you energy and money.

— You can avoid trouble in the hammering of nails if you hold the nail with the thumb and index finger of one hand until you have tapped it gently with the hammer in the other hand. Once the nail is securely in place, go ahead with the hammering. An advantage of this practice is the lessened chance of bending the nail.

— Before attempting to add an extension to your house, check the local building codes to determine what the restrictions are. The chances are you will need a permit to begin work and a certificate of occupancy after it is finished. Many people skip this procedure and have to take down the addition, sometimes years later.

— When utilizing the space under stairways for storage, consider putting casters on large boxes or bins so that what you want can be rolled out easily.

— When you are engaged in a project in your home workshop and you spill anything on the floor (even a single drop of liquid), wipe it up or pick it up immediately. It is when you delay and forget about what was dropped that you or somebody else takes a fall.

— Vinegar and water sometimes will soften old glue that must be removed. The effort to remove the glue must be done quickly before the liquid dries and the glue hardens again.

— Varnish applied over lacquer will not harm the lacquer, but lacquer applied over varnish may soften the varnish.

Consumers' group studies sugar in food

WASHINGTON (AP) — Most Americans would likely deny that they eat the national average of 125 pounds of sugar each year, but much of the sugar consumed isn't readily apparent, being hidden in processed foods and beverages.

Sugar has become an important focus of the battles to keep weight down and to prevent tooth decay in America, and while it is listed on some ingredient lists, the variety of names can be baffling and the amount hard to determine.

More than half of added sugar in the diet can be avoided by skipping soft drinks, sweets such as jams, syrups and deserts, baked goods and ice creams.

For example, sugar appears in many breakfast cereals, even the non-sweetened varieties; in fruit juices, salad dressing and ketchup, and even pork and beans, and peanut butter.

To help shoppers serious about nutrition, the Center for Science in the Public Interest has compiled a scoreboard of sugar in common foods and published it in the form of a handy wall chart. The information was collected from manufacturers in some cases, while other figures were calculated by the CSPI. In determining the amount of sugar in a food, all types of sugar were combined.

Copies of the "How Sweet it Is: Sugar Scoreboard" can be purchased for $3.50 from the Center for Science in the Public Interest, 1501 16th St., N.W., Washington, D.C. 20036. The center is a non-profit consumer group organized to provide consumer information on health topics. It is supported by membership dues, foundation grants and sales of publications.

The scoreboard lists more than 250 common foods, the number of teaspoons of sugar per serving of the food and the percentage of that food's calories that are provided by sugar.

In addition, the chart contains brief descriptions of the different sugars such as brown sugar, corn syrup, dextrose, fructose, sucrose and honey. And there is also a description of the artificial sweeteners aspartame, saccharin and cyclamate.

The biggest source of sugar in the American diet is soft drinks, the center reports, accounting for 25 percent of intake.

Panhandle-raised Joe Ely comes to Yucca Theatre

ENTERTAINMENT

By GEORGIA TEMPLE
Entertainment Writer

Sometimes called by his fans "Austin's musical apostle of change," Panhandle-raised singer, songwriter and guitarist Joe Ely brings his band to Midland for the first time for a one-night show Friday at the Yucca Theatre, 208 N. Colorado Ave.

His music has been described by other writers as "hard rockin' Tex-Mex country swing" and as "a mix of rockabilly vitality and fresh Texas lyrical sophistication."

In a recent telephone interview, Ely laughs as these descriptions are read to him. Then he agrees.

"I guess all those have something to do with it. All my roots came from West Texas. I grew up in Amarillo and moved to Lubbock when I was about 10 or 11, and some of the first musical influences that I had were listening at the back doors of dance halls in Amarillo to swing bands."

He recalls the first performer he saw whose performance had a lasting effect on him.

"I remember as a kid seeing Jerry Lee Lewis playing on a flatbed trailer in a dust storm outside of a Pontiac dealership when they were selling cars. And that made a big impression on me. First of all, the music itself made an impression, and the other thing was just that a band could actually play in a dust storm had a big impression on me."

He learned to play the guitar when he was about 10 years old by taking steel guitar lessons from a man who came around door to door selling lessons. Years later, Ely was to discover that Buddy Holly, whose songs were among the first he learned, took steel guitar lessons from the same person.

HE PUT HIS first band together when he was in junior high and left home to pursue a career in music when he was 16. After playing places like The Cellar in Fort Worth, he moved on to places in New Orleans and Houston before winding up on the West Coast for a couple of years.

"I bounced back and forth between LA and San Francisco and Lubbock," Ely says. "There's a big triangle there where I'd wear the road out." He laughs.

Much of that time was spent alone with his guitar as his only companion.

"I'd always find that I'd come back to West Texas because it was a good place to gather my ideas and actually put them together. There's something about that part of the country — I guess because there's not a whole lot else to do — it's a good spot to get all your thoughts together.

"It's not a good spot for anyone thinking about a recording career because there's not that much going on. I think, if I'd never left West Texas, I'd probably never recorded any records because the thought just never occurred to me that those kind of things were possible until I left and saw what was going on other places."

When he began writing songs, Ely says, "I took in just about all of the influences that I had, including things Tex-Mex, rock'n'roll, country, kind of stirred 'em all up in a big pot just to see what would come out. I took not so much what was popular on the radio at the time, but the songs that I thought needed to be sung."

ELY HAD envisioned himself as a country singer; however, when he began recording albums for MCA he discovered otherwise. "I was actually being accepted by the rock'n'roll crowd especially on the West Coast, East Coast and most of all in England."

Ely found himself playing as much in England as in Texas. It was during a tour there that Ely met such performers as Elvis Costello and The Clash. He found they had many similarities not so much in their music but in what had influenced it. On one tour for The Clash, Ely was the opening act.

"They had listened to the same singers when they were growing up as I had, so we had much in common. I've always been easily influenced. I take in a wide range of things and then kind of boil 'em down to the way I want to play them."

Today this 34-year-old singer-songwriter has six albums to his credit, including the 1981 release "Musta Notta Gotta Lotta," considered by many his best.

ALTHOUGH ELY has received much critical acclaim for his music, he hasn't so far had the kind of commercial success experienced by many other Texas performers. However, Ely looks "toward the horizon" and doesn't "take much stock in disappointments.

"In the whole music world everyday there's probably as many disappointments as there are surprises. I don't get disappointed easily. I tend to just kind of pick up where I left off and continue forward."

He has just been through a period which required him to pick up the pieces. In late 1982, his band broke up. When the 1983 New Year's gig was finished, there was talk of a final tour. Then, drummer Robert Marquam's battered body was found on his front lawn in Lubbock.

"I thought at one time that we could put the band together again, but that was the final straw."

Ely suffered guilt feelings. He wondered why he had ever taken Marquam out of the Lubbock clubs and put him onstage at the Roxy in LA where "it all appears to be big-time show business.

"I've been out there and seen it for what it is, but it was all so new for Robert. When someone is pushed that suddenly, he loses track of reality when the lights come up.

"All we know about how he died now is that he was with a bunch of people who were partying hard, where nobody knew what anybody else was doing, and when they found him the next morning, he had bruises all over his body."

PRIOR TO the Marquam tragedy, Ely and his band had been touring for a year and a half pushing the "Musta Notta Gotta Lotta" album. Although the tour was successful and the record, in this country, made it to the top 40, it never climbed "real high" on the charts.

"The constant touring — every day a different city, living in motels and truck stops and sleeping on the bus, I found after a while wasn't satisfying to me anymore because there wasn't exactly a creative angle to it. I found myself clamping on the brakes.

"I'd put together quite a few ideas just on the backs of matchbook covers and napkins, and I came back and dumped everything out on the floor and started putting together new ideas and new songs. I had to completely start all over to really take a look at where I'd been and where I was going."

From this period of regrouping came Ely's latest album, "Hi Res," which combines his West Texas roots and urban sophistication.

"It's definitely more of a kind of urban sound. It still has its Texas roots. The songs take place in the cities of Texas instead of the windy, dusty spots where the first five albums took place."

IN HIS Friday performance at the Yucca Theatre, Ely will play his standards as well as material from his new album. Tickets, priced at $12, for the show, which opens with Jesse "Mr. Guitar" Taylor and Tornado Alley, can be purchased at Endless Horizons.

Ely is eager to play Midland.

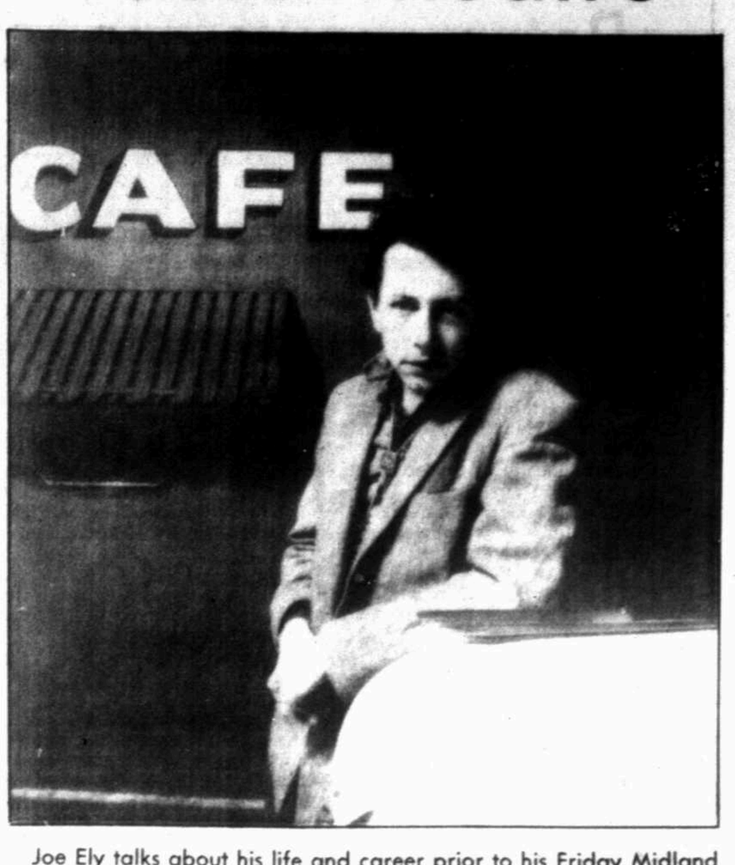
"I've heard a lot about this Yucca Theatre. I'm really anxious to get there," he says. "Somebody takes the initiative to save a spot like that, they seem to have a lot of soul because there's something about an old theater that you just can't recreate."

Fans say the same about Ely; they talk about his uniqueness. His music gives voice to the windy, dusty isolation felt by those who grow up in this area of the country, in addition to recapturing other Texas sensations.

Ely agrees there is something about barren, dusty West Texas which urges those who have left to return.

"It not only gets in your soul," he stops. Laughs. Then he finishes, "but it gets in your shoes and under your fingernails and in your hair."

Pausing, he adds, "I moved to Austin in late '80 because it's more of a music center. There's more actual music being recorded and tons of places to play and a lot of mixture of musical ideas, and I find that real stimulating. But, it's still no substitute to the strong feelings I get every time I go back to West Texas; I have this strong feeling that I'm coming home."



Joe Ely talks about his life and career prior to his Friday Midland performance.

ENTERTAINMENT IN BRIEF

ACU professor presents piano recital at MC

Dr. Ronald Rathbun of Abilene Christian University will be presenting a solo piano recital at the Allison Fine Arts Auditorium, Midland College, at 8 p.m. today.

He will be playing Prelude in B Minor by Bach, Siloti, Sonata Opus 11 by Schumann, three etudes by Debussy and an Etude, Nocturne and Ballade in A Flat Major by Chopin.

Rathbun received his doctorate in piano performance and pedagogy from the University of Iowa. He also holds degrees from Southwest Missouri State University and Indiana University. He has studied with John Simms, Ozan Marsh, Raymond Dudley, Frances Bolsterli and Wilfred Adler.

He has previously taught at Angelo State University, Concord College, West Virginia, the University of Iowa and in public schools in Missouri.

He is chairman of the piano division at Abilene Christian University and an active conductor. He has presented solo and chamber music recitals, piano workshops and master classes and has served as an adjudicator.

The public is invited to attend this free performance.

UTPB hosts free concert

ODESSA — The Gregg Smith Singers will perform a free concert at 8 p.m. Friday in the Odessa College Recital Hall. The performance is sponsored by University of Texas of the Permian Basin.

The Singers, who perform contemporary and rarely-done older music, have received awards from Stereo and Hi-Fi Magazine as well as three Grammy awards. The most recorded classical vocal ensemble today, the chorus has more than 50 albums to its credit. Noted for remarkable discipline and ensemble sound, the chorus has been hailed as a pioneer in imaginative programming and in presentation of new music.

One of the most important innovations of the group has been its music in multi-dimensional sound, where the choristers are positioned in groups of various sizes at all parts of the auditorium, producing what the Washington Star has described as "a stereo sound such as you have never heard before."

Coggins to perform

Singer, songwriter and guitarist Barry Coggins is performing at 9 p.m. today through Saturday at Bella Roma Restaurant, Plaza Shopping Center.

Coggins, who has been playing professionally for over 10 years, has several albums out, including "Lady of the Lake," which can be purchased at Endless Horizons. A frequent performer in Midland and Odessa since 1976, he recently finished a weekend at Barnaby's, Odessa.

"I think there's a small market for acoustic music in this city," Coggins says. "You can't reproduce that live entertainment situation by recorded music, radio or disco."

There is no cover charge to hear Coggins.

'Dining Room' to end

Midland Community Theatre's production of A.R. Gurney's "The Dining Room" closes Saturday at Theatre Midland, 2000 W. Wadley Ave.

The production, MCT's entry into the Festival of American Community Theatres, has been held over twice due to sold-out houses.

The production will be onstage in Theatre Two today at 7:30 p.m. and Friday and Saturday at 8:30 p.m.

For reservations call Theatre Midland's box office, 682-4111.

Bunny to visit museum

The Easter Bunny will visit the Museum of the Southwest, 1705 W. Missouri Ave., from 2 to 3:30 p.m. Sunday.

Rumor has it that he will be stopping near the museum's Stables Gallery and will be available for snapshots with parents and children.

At 3 p.m. the Easter Bunny will head a parade around the museum grounds. Easter Bunny helpers will be on hand to help participants make cardboard Easter baskets to carry in the parade. Baskets will be provided.

The public is invited to attend.

Director follows DeMille

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Australian director Bruce Beresford has picked up where the late epic maker Cecil B. DeMille left off: He's trying to pull off a Biblical spectacle.

Ignoring the obstacles, Beresford has come forth with "King David," which stars Richard Gere as the shepherd boy who became the king of Israel.

Beresford, asked why he attempted so treacherous a venture, replied: "To try and do one well. I've always loved epics — 'Ben Hur,' 'El Cid,' movies like that.

"But they were always made with such reverence, those films. I wanted to change all that. I wanted to make a Biblical movie in which people spoke as they do in normal conversation.

"I must be careful (of) what I say," he added. "After all, I don't know if I've succeeded or not. Perhaps some critics are going to say, 'If he'd made it more like a DeMille film, it would have been better.' But I do think it's realistic, this movie."

Fans raise money for star

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Singer Teresa Brewer's fans have raised $1,200 to replace her damaged star on Hollywood's walk of fame.

The star, dedicated in 1961, is near a bus stop at the corner of Hollywood and Vine and heavy foot traffic damaged it. It eventually read only "Teresa Brew," and the surrounding terrazzo was broken.

REVIEW

Petra wows crowd with rock gospel

GEORGIA TEMPLE

Georgia Temple

Loud music, a stunning light show, sermons, a plea for tithing for Third World children and an altar call gave 2,500 gospel rock'n'rollers all they could pray over during Tuesday's two-hour Chaparral Center Petra concert.

The three-hour concert began with the Joe English Band. English, the former drummer for Paul McCartney and Wings, closed his 30-minute set with "Every Eye," which includes an incredible drum solo.

In it, English clearly demonstrates his musical expertise. He also has a lovely voice, which unfortunately was difficult to understand at times. Nonetheless, the two established him as the outstanding individual performer onstage during the three-hour concert.

Promoted locally by Street Level, Odessa, the "Beat the System" tour Petra (which means rock in Greek) is expected to play to more than 560,000 people in 100 cities across the United States and Canada. Plans are also under way for performances in Australia, New Zealand, South Africa and Western Europe.

FOR THOSE unfamiliar with this gospel rock group, Petra has, in its 10-year history, sold over 600,000 albums and has played more than 1,300 concerts in the United States, Canada and Europe.

It shows.

Petra's equipment would make many secular rock groups turn green. Visually, the presentation is one of the best I've seen.

The five-member band — Louie Weaver, Mark Kelly, Greg X. Volz, Bob Hartman and John Lawry — perform amid billowing fog, lighted from above by several hundred multicolored lights, which make multiple changes — soft rainbow colors, alternately contrasted by red, stark red, against black and gray, multi-combinations of blues and basic black and white. Lights also flash on and off from under the top platform of the stage which houses the drummer and keyboardist.

Two ramps, one running diagonally up the center of the stage, which is inset with three-rows of lights, and the other in a V across the back, provide plenty of running room for lead singer Volz, songwriter/guitarist Hartman and bass player Kelly.

Weaver also gets in on the act when he jumps up from his drums, waving his sticks, and runs down during his solo to encourage the crowd.

FOR THE ENCORE, the center ramp rises, and the lights flash on and off behind Volz.

The verbal message is usually clear. Volz says in his opening comments, "We're glad to be here to praise the Lord."

Then he says, leading into the next song, "If we fill our minds with garbage, we get garbage out, so it's important to fill our minds with good things or we have 'Computer Minds.' " The song "Computer Minds" and Volz encourage kids to break out for the Lord.

After that set, Kelly speaks of death, saying, "Death does not mean defeat for a child of God." He leads up to the next selection by quoting Scripture and talking about how Christians have nothing to fear from death because they have the resurrection and eternal life to look forward to.

After reading about Petra, I discovered the group is very concerned about teen-age suicide and that it is Petra's intention to affect its audiences in a positive way while also entertaining them.

The group's booking agent and manager Mark Hollingworth said in an article in New Christian Media Quarterly: "Never before has there been a time when young people are disillusioned with almost everything. To be able to share with them the foundation of Jesus Christ, of how He is a Rock they can stand on...a Person they can trust...a Guide to lead them is what we are trying to show...We don't promote violence, we don't promote rebellion, we don't promote drug-use or anything else of a negative nature."

ALTHOUGH THE intent may have been impeccable, the message during this part of the concert was somewhat obscure to this reviewer.

It was clear that Petra was saying death is not to be feared, but I didn't hear the message that life is to be lived and cherished by living, not dying, through God. At least, I think that's what they meant to say.

Throughout the performance, the musicians take turns giving their testimony. Each one's comments flow into the next selection.

Then, Volz talks about sharing and having compassion for children from the Third World. A screen drops from the front of the stage for a film presentation on the organization Compassion, which provides care for needy children in the third world.

Volz says: "It's really a special ministry to us. We write to our kids and they write back to us. It's a good way to share the abundance we have in this country...When we do something to help a child, we've done something for Jesus. I don't know anyone who ought to be more interested in helping Third World children than Christians."

Petra breaks into "Blinded Eyes," then Volz asks those who are interested in participating to fill out the form which has been provided, and says, "We have checked out the organization and they are good stewards."

Just before Petra moved into its closing number of the night, "Adonai," the band plays the most uplifting number of the evening. Actually it is part of a larger work, an oratorio first performed in Dublin, Ireland, in 1742, and written by George Frideric Handel.

With the words "And He shall reign forever and ever, Hallelujah, Hallelujah...King of Kings and Lord of Hosts...Hallelujah...," the center vibrates with positive energy. Volz's vocal powers are obvious for one of the few times during the concert.

It was for this reviewer a more effective close for a "Praise the Lord" concert than Petra's song, "Adonai."

THE CROWD wanted more and got it. When Petra returned for its encore, Volz asks those there who want to to give their lives to Christ by coming forward and going backstage to talk with counselors waiting there.

"Jesus was not embarrassed when he came forward," Volz says. "I don't want you to be embarrassed. Come on down. Now is the time."

Young people begin coming down the aisles and Volz says, "Welcome into the family of God. Nobody's going to yell at you. We just want to love you, to share with you. He that began this work in you, He's going to finish it."

As the concert closes with Petra's "It Is Finished," over half of the audience there is standing, as many have been all night, and waving their arms back and forth, riding high on the blessings they have received.

'Cosby Show' about 'little kids being little kids'

By FRED ROTHENBERG

NEW YORK (AP) — There were nine kids acting silly on the couch, if you count the tall one in the corner, Bill Cosby.

Essentially, that's what NBC's "Cosby Show" tonight is all about — little kids being little kids, quite intentionally and spontaneously, while being egged on by Cosby, the program's star, co-creator and executive consultant.

The storyline is deceptively simple. Eight 5-year-olds are having a sleep-over at the Huxtable household. Cliff (Cosby) is in charge. It's impossible to have youngsters that age remember lines and stage directions, so much of the taping had Cosby ad-libbing and interacting with his little friends.

The episode, entitled "Slumber Party," had two full-scale tapings in front of audiences Feb. 28. Because of all the impromptu joshing, each taping had an hour's worth of material — some tedious, some priceless — for what amounts to one 22-minute program (without commercials).

"Is this a two-parter?" kidded Cosby after the early taping.

"It was the longest pudding commercial of all time," said Joanne Alfano, an NBC publicist.

Two scenes highlighted Cosby's wonderful rapport with youngsters. In one, he asks each child his or her name and plays off their answers, their dimples, whatever. Another segment has him giving each kid a ride on his knee.

Tonight's episode was a departure for "The Cosby Show." The programs always have been for the family, but this was the first one that was designed for pre-schoolers. Keep them awake; it's worth it.

"This is a special show," said Cosby. "Sometimes we get into stories where the 5-year-old doesn't know what's going on, so we decided to turn the tables and ask the grown-ups to enjoy a show that was done for the little ones. It's a lot hipper than 'Sesame Street.' "

MCT to hold long-range planning meeting Saturday

Interested parties are invited to attend Midland Community Theatre's long-range planning meeting from 1 to 5 p.m. Saturday at Theatre Midland, 2000 W. Wadley Ave.

"The purpose of our long range planning meeting is to allow our members to have a voice in our preparation," says Greg Elsner, MCT's business manager. "We hope that the theater-goers of Midland approve of most of what we are doing and that they will give us their consent to continue to do more of the same. We are ,however, a growing, living organization and we cannot stagnate but must strive to perfect what we do in the arts and explore new avenues to achieve our goals."

Some of the areas which may be explored include operations and business management, artistic quality, financial planning, types of theater presented, play selection, improving volunteerism, revenue enhancement, goal setting for growth and facility utilization.

The session, which is hosted by MCT's Board of Governors, will be chaired by Guy McCrary. It will be held in Theatre Two.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Not all doctors share same philosophy

Dear Dr. Solomon: I have had a hysterectomy and my doctor has prescribed estrogen. He says that among other things, it will help keep my bones from getting thinner as I grow older. What I find confusing is that I know other women who have a background that is not much different from mine, and their doctors have not prescribed estrogen. Would you be able to explain this for me? — Mrs. J.T., Jacksonville, Fla.

Dear Mrs. T.: Part of the reason for different approaches may simply be the fact that not all physicians share the same philosophy about the treatment of patients with similar conditions. It is also possible, of course, that even when two patients appear to have similar conditions, there is sufficient difference between them to warrant different approaches.

The Food and Drug Administration has approved the use of estrogen for both the prevention and treatment of osteoporosis (loss of bone); however, this form of treatment is believed to be most effective in thin, white women who use alcohol or who smoke cigarettes.

It is also well to bear in mind, as the Food and Drug Administration emphasizes, the osteoporosis can best be prevented by means of an appropriate diet, adequate exercise, and the intelligent use of calcium supplementation.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I don't know if you have ever seen kids breakdancing, but my impression is that you have to be a pretty good athlete to do that kind of dance. I know that I'm fairly active but I don't think I could last five minutes doing it. There has been a lot of interest in sports medicine lately, and I was wondering if anyone has given any thought to breakdancing and the possibility of injuries, just as with other athletic events. — Terry, Philadelphia.

Dear Terry: Dr. Paul Sheitel, a podiatrist from Baltimore, Md., has reported that breakdancing can lead to bursitis, arthritis and cartilage damage. As with any athletic activity, an adequate warm-up before actual participation in breakdancing is important to prevent injury.

Dear Dr. Solomon: What is non IgE mediated allergy? — Miss A.M., Easton, Pa.

Dear Miss M.: Mechanisms other than IgE can trigger an allergic response resulting in symptoms in various organs.

Sometimes, epecially if asthma starts in adult life, no apparent cause can be found. Usually the first outbreak of symptoms follows an infection which may have been either bacterial or viral in origin.

The common cold, cold moist weather, smoke, chemicals and psychological or physical stress can be responsible for episodes of this type of asthma.

Most occupational allergies such as contact eczema are not IgE mediated.

Most of my patients with food allergies have non IgE mediated allergies.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I heard a talk by a doctor and he spoke about the importance of breast-feeding when a family has a history of allergies. But I forget whether he said that breast-feeding was better or worse in such a family. Can you clear this up for me? — Mrs. T.R., Racine, Wisc.

Dear Mrs. R.: It has been suggested that breast-feeding is more important in a family in which there is a strong history of allergy; however, the mother's diet would have to be controlled in order to reduce her consumption of allergy-producing products. There is evidence that the incidence of allergies in children increases when the number of women who breast-feed decreases.

Dear Dr. Solomon: As a woman who is now in her forties, I was of course very interested to read your items on bone loss in older women, and how this could lead to fractures later on. Since diet is supposed to be so important in preventing something like this from happening, I would like to know what this means if the woman happens to be a vegetarian. Because her diet is more limited, what are her chances of avoiding loss of bone? — Mrs. F.O., Savannah, Ga.

Dear Mrs. O.: According to a study by researchers from the University of North Carolina, vegetarians do even better in maintaining strong bones in later life. Dr. John J.B. Anderson has reported that combination of a high calcium diet and exercise helps women build up and preserve their bone. Among the women who were a part of the study, vegetarian Seventh Day Adventists did better than meat-eating women.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I am allergic to animals. Any special advice? — Mr. A.S., Houston, Texas

Dear Mr. S.: If you are allergic to animal hair or fur, reduce contact with them to a minimum. Symptoms will disappear at least for a time following removal of hair and fur from the environment.

In many cases, removal of household pets is the only solution, although it can prove to be very traumatic. Should removal, however, not be possible, then the pet should not be allowed in the bedroom and a careful vacuum-cleaning should be done daily.

If a member of the family is allergic, it is useful as a preventative measure to remove animals from the home even if no allergy to the specific animal has been found. This may help to prevent additional allergies developing. It follows that any patient allergic to animals should not have furred or feathered house pets, even if allergy to that specific animal has not been found.

Carpets, fabrics, etc. made from animal hair should be avoided if possible.

Contact with animals outside the home should be avoided, e.g., if you are allergic to horses, you should not ride. A problem can arise when allergic individuals visit the homes of pet owners; the best solution is to take a symptom-preventing drug prior to the visit.

Remember that symptoms can be provoked at circuses and zoological gardens.

Dear Frank: Without commenting on the advisability of getting stray animals off the streets, I would point out that most cases of rabies do not result from exposure to domestic animals. According to a study conducted by the Centers for Disease Control, there were 38 cases of rabies reorted in the United States between 1960 and 1979. In 32 of these cases, the cause was either known or probably known; and, of these, only eight involved exposure to dogs or cats.

The most likely cause of rabies in humans is exposure to wild animals and to bats.

President Reagan's lobbying takes toll on phones, furniture

By TOM RAUM

WASHINGTON (AP) — A visit by the president to Congress can help mobilize votes on crucial issues, but it takes a toll on phones and furniture.

When President Reagan came calling the other day to win converts for his MX missile program, it followed days of extensive security preparations — including transforming what had been a comfortable lounge outside Senate Majority Leader Robert Dole's office into a command center.

The president's route took him right past the site of the 1983 bombing near the Senate chamber, and officials wanted to take no chances.

"It was a tremendous production," said Dole aide Walt Riker. "The Secret Service brought in mobile equipment, radio transmitters, telephone lines, Space Age equipment. Their advance team came up a week ahead. They were all over the place."

For security purposes, the three regular telephones in the lounge — often used by senators for calls back to their offices while visiting Dole — were ripped out and replaced with the Secret Service's own special phones.

But apparently Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., didn't know the phones had been swapped. He walked into the lounge, picked up a phone and tried to make a call.

He tried several times to make the phone work.

"What the hell is going on here?" a miffed Goldwater demanded.

Whether Goldwater's efforts set off alarms at Secret Service headquarters was not reported.

The lack of real phones in the office "really wasn't very funny. It caused problems for everyone," Riker said.

But the tight security in the Capitol for Reagan's visit didn't cause problems for a group of junior high school students from Johnson County, Kan., a suburb of Kansas City.

They had come to see Dole, but were stopped in the corridor at a roped-off checkpoint.

Dole spied them as he was escorting the president and detoured Reagan over to the students.

The president talked with them, asking if it was their first trip to Washington and whether they had seen everything they had hoped to see.

"They probably saw more than they bargained for," Dole was reported as interjecting.

And the tight security wasn't enough to stop Sen. Dave Durenberger, R-Minn., from entering a secure area to stand by Reagan's motorcade outside the Capitol.

He stood there alone for several minutes, then as Reagan got into his car and the motorcade drove off, Durenberger waved goodbye.

The president waved back.

Administration may seek action by OAS against Nicaragua

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration says it may seek action by the Organization of American States against Nicaragua if mediation is unable to bring about a peace settlement in Central America.

The U.S. ambassador to the OAS, J. William Middendorf, told a meeting of the OAS Permanent Council on Wednesday, "My government does not intend to allow this organization to ignore its responsibilities in this regard, and reserves the right at some future date to introduce a resolution leading toward a satisfactory solution of the Nicaraguan problem."

Middendorf's speech drew a sharp reaction from Nicaraguan Ambassador Edgard Parrales, who accused the United States of attempting to circumvent the Contadora mediation effort being carried out by Venezuela, Colombia, Mexico and Panama.

As evidence of the lack of U.S. sincerity, Parrales said the United States has raised the Central American issue at the OAS on 15 occasions since the Contadora effort got under way in early 1983.

Middendorf said the OAS has a special responsibility for Nicaragua because it withdrew support for the government of President Anastasio Somoza in 1979 in exchange for Sandinista promises to call early elections, establish an independent judiciary and protect human rights. The Somoza government fell a few weeks later and was replaced by the Sandinistas.

Because of its special role in 1979, "the Organization of American States has a responsibility to assure peace in Nicaragua," Middendorf said.

Under the Rio Treaty of the OAS, hemispheric nations can impose economic and diplomatic sanctions against offending countries under certain circumstances. Use of armed force is permitted as well.

U.S. officials have acknowledged, however, that there is scant support in the OAS for taking collective action against Nicaragua. According to one estimate, only about a third of the signatories to the Rio Treaty would support OAS action against the Sandinistas. A two-thirds majority is required.

During the debate Wednesday, the only countries that sided with Middendorf's position were Honduras, Grenada and El Salvador, while 13 others voiced full support of the Contadora process, generally contending that any discussion of a possible OAS role would be premature.

Talks resume on medium-range missiles

Viktor Karpov

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — U.S. and Soviet negotiators today open talks on medium-range missiles — the issue that led the Soviets to walk out of the arms talks 15 months ago.

The talks are part of the three-tiered superpower arms reduction negotiations that also cover long-range missiles and outer space and other defensive weapons.

The talks revive the Strategic Arms Reduction Talks that were halted in December 1983 when the Soviets walked out to protest NATO's deployment of the first of 572 U.S.-built Pershings and cruise medium-range missiles.

NATO said the missiles were needed to counter Soviet SS-20 missiles aimed at Europe.

On Wednesday, the Soviet delegation issued a formal statement saying they were discussing with the United States methods of keeping outer space free of all weapons.

The Soviets were denying a newspaper article published earlier in the day that quoted a U.S. spokesman as saying Tuesday's arms control meeting between the two superpowers "discussed possible anti-missile systems in space."

"This report is not based on facts," the Soviet statement said. "What was discussed was not possible anti-missile systems in space but the question of the need for strict compliance with the agreement reached on Jan. 7-8 in Geneva concerning the elaboration of effective measures to prevent an arms race in space."

The Soviets were referring to the meeting between Secretary of State George P. Shultz and Andrei A. Gromyko, the Soviet foreign minister, that led to the current arms talks in Geneva.

Reagan claims the Star Wars idea is purely defensive and aimed at the elimination of all nuclear weapons.

The Soviet Union has called Star Wars a U.S. attempt to gain a nuclear first-strike capability.

A U.S. spokesman, who spoke on condition of anonymity, acknowledged the newspaper report did "not reflect what the spokesman of the U.S. delegation to these arms talks actually said."

Reading a statement over the telephone, he said, "In keeping with the principle of confidentiality that has been agreed between the U.S. and Soviet delegations, we will have nothing further to say on this question."

A Soviet official read the statement to about a dozen Western and East European reporters invited to the Soviet mission on short notice for what a mission spokesman, Vladimir Evdokushin, said was a "clarification briefing."

Journalists experienced in arms negotiations said they did not recall a similar Soviet briefing during any previous bilateral arms talks in Geneva.

The Soviet statement was issued a few hours after the chief Soviet negotiator, Viktor P. Karpov, met with U.S. negotiator John G. Tower, for the first detailed talks on long-range weapons since the Soviet Union withdrew from the strategic arms reduction talks in December 1983.

Alexei Kovalsky, the Soviet delegation member who read the statement, declined to answer questions, citing the confidentiality agreement between the two sides.

The first subgroup meeting took place Tuesday between teams led by the chief U.S. delegate, Max M. Kampelman, and Yuli A. Kvitsinsky.

Lufthansa hijacker captured

ISTANBUL, Turkey (AP) — Security men disguised as airline employees sneaked aboard a hijacked Lufthansa jet in Istanbul Wednesday and overpowered a Syrian hijacker armed with a knife and a broken bottle, authorities said.

The hijacker freed the 142 other passengers and five of the eight crew members an hour after the Boeing 727 landed at Istanbul's Yesilkoy airport, but held the other three crew members hostage until his capture.

The Istanbul public prosecutor, Nabi Koker, identified the hijacker as Marwan Hritani, 35, a Syrian geologist with a good command of German. He said none of the passengers and crew was harmed, including the three held hostage.

Koker said six security agents wearing Lufthansa uniforms entered through an emergency exit in the rear and captured the hijacker slightly more than two hours after the plane landed.

The state radio said authorities had rejected the hijacker's demand that the plane be refueled.

Koker said he was not sure sure of the hijacker's motive. He said Hritani told him he was "trying to express the opinions of the Arab world" and described his action as "purely individual."

The semi-official Anatolia news agency quoted security officials as saying the Syrian chain-smoked and drank beer while he was in charge of the plane, and appeared drunk when their men seized him.

Hritani faces trial in a Turkish court. Aircraft hijacking carries a minimum penalty of 10 years in prison under Turkish law.

Lufthansa spokesman Lutz Laemmershold said in Frankfurt that the West German airline was sending another crew to Istanbul, to fly the passengers to Athens on Thursday morning.

Lufthansa officials said the jet was diverted one hour and 25 minutes after it left Munich, West Germany, and an hour before it was due in Athens. They said the man had demanded to be flown to Libya.

Another Lufthansa Boeing 727 was hijacked Feb. 27 on a flight from Frankfurt to Damascus, the capital of Syria, by two Syrians being deported from West Germany. The plane landed in Vienna, where the two released all 33 passengers but held eight crew for nearly five hours before they surrendered.

The hijackers said they feared death sentences in Syria and demanded asylum in Austria.

Khadafy meets with aide of Rev. Farrakhan

TRIPOLI, Libya (AP) — Col. Moammar Khadafy, the Libyan leader, has met in Tripoli with Akbar Mohamed, "the deputy" to the Rev. Louis Farrakhan, the leader of The Nation of Islam in the United States, the official Libyan news agency reported today.

The dispatch by the Libyan news agency JANA said Mohamed delivered to Khadafy a message from the leader of the U.S. black Muslims "who is leading the battle of liberation and freedom from the racist suppression."

"Louis Farrakhan confirmed the close cooperation between 'Muslim Nation' in America and Libya in all fields and on all levels," JANA said.

Farrakhan, a critic of Israel, is a controverial figure in America.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Police route protesters from closed hospital

LONDON (AP) — More than 100 police stormed the South London Hospital for Women and routed an occupation by 40 feminists protesting a government order closing Britain's sole women-only hospital.

Scotland Yard said there were scuffles between police and women protesters Wednesday at the hospital, and two protesters were arrested.

The protesters had been occupying the building since last July after the patients were moved to other hospitals. The 73-year-old hospital, part of Britain's state-run National Health Service, was closed earlierthis month to curb spiralling costs.

Asylum-seekers surrender

LOEGSTOER, Denmark (AP) — Seventeen Lebanese and Palestinian asylum-seekers have surrendered and released two policemen and three interpreters they held hostage for three hours, police reported.

Duty officer Konrad Pape said the refugees held knives and what appeared to be firebombs as they held the five hostages Wednesday at a refugee housing center on the island of Livoe in north Jutland's Limfjord.

He said the cause of the incident appeared to be related to frustration over isolation at the island center and fears that Denmark would refuse to let them stay as refugees. About 150 refugees live at the Livoe center.

Italian official killed

ROME (AP) — An anonymous caller claiming to represent the leftist Red Brigades claimed responsibility for the assassination of a union leader as he sat in his parked car at the University of Rome, police said.

Police said the victim was Ezio Tarantelli, 43, a leading official of the Confederazione Italiana Sindacati Lavoratori. He also was a professor at the university and an economist who was a member of the government commission that drafted a plan last year cutting workers' automatic wage increases.

According to police, two young assailants ran up to Tarantelli's car Wednesday and fired through the window on the driver's side, hitting him in the head. The youths fled on a motorscooter into heavy traffic.

Authorities found at least 20 shell casings near the car, and a Red Brigades' leaflet next to the vehicle, police said. A male caller later told a leftst Milan radio station: "We are the Red Brigades. We claim the attack."

Sino-Soviet talks to resume

PEKING (AP) — China has announced it will begin a sixth round of normalization talks with the Soviet Union in Moscow on April 9.

The talks opened in 1982 and stalled over the issues of Cambodia, Afghanistan, and troops along the Chinese-Soviet border. The last session ended in Peking Nov. 2.

The new meeting, announced Wednesday by Chinese Foreign Ministry spokesman Ma Yuzhen, coincides with a significant shift in Peking's attitude toward its Communist neighbor, especially after Mikhail Gorbachev became Soviet leader this month.

For the first time in a quarter century, the general secretary of the Chinese Communist Party — now Hu Yaobang — sent a message of congratulations to his counterpart in the Kremlin.

Doctor shortage ends

LONDON (AP) — Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's government has announced it will bar most foreign doctors and dentists from entering Britain to practice medicine.

Social Services Secretary Norman Fowler told the House of Commons Tuesday night that with a few exceptions, immigration rules will be tightened next Monday to end unrestricted access to this country by doctors and dentists from abroad.

Fowler said that at one time Britain's state-run National Health Service became heavily dependent on overseas medical staff, but an expansion program at medical and dental schools that began in the 1960s had eliminated the shortage of British-trained medical and dental students.

Peasants' charges dropped

AYACUCHO, Peru (AP) — The attorney general's office says it has dropped charges against 17 peasants accused of beating and hacking eight Peruvian journalists to death two years ago in Peru's Andean guerrilla zone.

District Attornay Oscar Guerrero ordered the charges dropped Wednesday for lack of evidence against three peasants who had attended the six-month trial and 14 being tried in absentia, the office said.

A government commission headed by Peruvian novelist Mario Vargas Llosa found that the journalists were killed by villagers who mistook them for members of the Maoist guerrilla group Shining Path.

Queen OKs marriage

LONDON (AP) — Queen Elizabeth II has given formal assent to a special law permitting a 29-year-old truck driver to marry his mother-in-law, the speaker of the House of Lords announced.

The truck driver, Alan Monk, has been seeking permission to marry Valerie Hill, 48, since he divorced her daughter, Jeanette, in April 1983.

The House of Lords approved a law last December permitting Monk's marriage, while leaving untouched a law prohibiting marriages between close relatives.

The monarch must give formal royal assent to any law for it to take effect.

U.N. employees leaving Lebanon

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — U.N. agencies began paring down their foreign staff today on orders from the United Nations to withdraw non-essential employees in the wake of a series of kidnappings of foreigners in Lebanon.

But U.N. spokesman Louay Djoundi said there is no plan to evacuate all foreign workers and said the withdrawal is part of an ongoing process.

"Since 1983, most non-essential staff has left," he said. "Essential staff and heads of mission are still here."

In New York, U.N. spokesman Joe Sills said Wednesday each U.N. agency in Lebanon has been asked to determine which staff members are not absolutely essential.

Sills was responding to reporters' questions about the abduction Monday in Beirut of British journalist Alec Collett, 63, who was on assignment for the U.N. Relief and Works Agency.

A relief agency official, who asked not to be identified, said the agency had not heard anything about Collett's whereabouts today. "We're still groping in the dark," he said.

He said British employees were leaving at the request of their government.

"We have a staff of 2,300, 11 of whom are internationals," said the official. "At the moment, that's the way we're sitting."

Raymond Naeimeh, the Lebanese now in charge of UNICEF in Beirut,

Geoffrey Nash

said of the agency's three foreigners, one Italian was going to Amman, Jordan, for a training course and a Canadian was taking a leave.

Earlier this month, 36 British and Americans who worked for the U.N. Peacekeeping force in south Lebanon, were withdrawn from the country.

Later today, a group that has claimed that it killed two British diplomats in Greece and India last year claimed responsibility for Collett's abduction, the latest in a two-week series of kidnappings in Lebanon.

A statement delivered to a foreign news agency office in Beirut said the "Revolutionary Organization of Socialist Moslems" had kidnapped Collett, and accused him of being a British spy.

The group earlier had claimed responsibility for the killing of British diplomat Kenneth Whitty last March in Athens, Greece. It also claimed responsibility in the killing of Britain's deputy high commissioner in Bombay, Percy Norris, in November 1984.

Sills said U.N. agencies have approximately 50 foreign employees in Lebanon. He was unable to say how many would be withdrawn, and he refused to reveal their nationalities, citing security reasons.

Most U.N. agencies have representatives in Lebanon, including UNICEF, UNESCO, the UN High Commission for Refugees, the UN Works and Relief Association, the Food and Agricultural Organization and the World Health Organization.

Nine foreigners have disappeared in Lebanon in the past two weeks. On Wednesday, a kidnapped Briton, Geoffrey Nash, was released unharmed near his home in West Beirut. Nash, a 60-year-old metallurgist, was the first of nine Westerners kidnapped or reported missing in Lebanon since March 14.

The others are two more Britons, four French citizens, a Dutch Roman Catholic priest, and American journalist Terry A. Anderson, chief Middle East correspondent for the Associated Press.

Nash's daughter, Nadia, said the men who kidnapped her father told him they had believed he was American. She said they let him out of a car in the Hamra commercial district near their home in the mostly Moslem sector of the capital, and he walked up to the door shortly after midnight.

Responsibility for most of the recent abductions was claimed by Jihad Islami, or Islamic Holy War, whose members are believed to be Shiite Moslem extremists with close to ties to Iran.

But on Tuesday a previously unknown group calling itself the Khaibar Brigade claimed it was holding Nash and businessman Brian Levick, another Briton, and three French diplomats — Vice Consul Marcel Fontaine, embassy protocol officer Marcel Carton and his daughter, Danielle Perez, a secretary at the embassy.

Another group calling itself the Lebanese Armed Revolutionary Factions claimed Monday it had abducted a fourth Frenchman, Gilles Sidney Peyrolles, director of the French cultural center in Tripoli, a port in north Lebanon. Peyrolles, 32, was last seen Saturday.

The Dutch priest, the Rev. Nicolas Kluiter, 44, disappeared the day of Nash's abduction.

Currency crowd

Poles line up to deposit U.S. dollars and other "hard" currencies at a Warsaw bank Wednesay in a rush to beat new government regulations which take effect Sunday. Until then, Poles can deposit Western currencies without proving they got them from a legal source. Such deposits can be used to buy goods in a stare-run shop or for foreign travel. After the new regulations take effect, Western funds acquired in Poland's black market can't be withdrawn for a year.

China thanks South Korea for returning boat

PEKING (AP) — China today thanked its political adversary South Korea for returning a torpedo boat, 13 sailors and the bodies of six crewmen who reportedly were killed in a mutiny six days ago.

In a statement from the Foreign Ministry, the Communist government said: "The South Korean side handed over to our side on the highs seas on March 28 the Chinese naval torpedo boat and all its crew members, with which contact had been lost."

The Chinese foreign ministry statement added "Chinese departments concerned expressed their thanks to the South Korean side for its assistance."

It was the second comment from China, which has no diplomatic relations with anti-communist South Korea, since the drama in the Yellow Sea began last Friday, creating a delicate diplomatic problem for the two countries.

Initially, there was speculation the boat's crew might want to defect to the Nationalist Chinese government on Taiwan, a bitter foe of the Communist government in China. South Korea is the only Asian nation with diplomatic ties with Taiwan, and both nations are strongly anti-communist.

In previous incidents, defectors from China came to South Korea, said they wanted to go to Taiwan and were allowed to do so.

But South Korea made it clear that the reported mutiny was not political, and said the 13 sailors wanted to return home. It said if Peking apologized for the intrusion into South Korean waters of three Chinese boats pursuing the torpedo boat, the errant vessel would be returned.

South Korea said Tuesday that Peking had apologized for the intrusion, but China made no public apology.

The South Korean news agency Yonhap, in a dispatch transmitted from a South Korean destroyer at the site, said the transfer of the torpedo boat was completed shortly before noon today at a point of equal distance from their territorial water boundaries.

The transfer operation was delayed for 24 hours because of rough seas.

China made no mention of where the vessel was taken, nor the possible fate of the crew. China's national media did not report the sensitive incident.

The Chinese boat, a high-speed hydrofoil armed with twin torpedo tubes, drifted into South Korean waters and sent out distress signals. When it was reached by a South Korean fishing boat, six of its 19 crewmen were found dead from gunshot wounds, and two were wounded.

Survivors describe school bus crash which killed 42 students

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Survivors of a school bus crash that killed 42 children described today the horror of fighting to escape from the double-decker bus as it sank into the murky waters near the Westdene dam.

"Most of the girls went hysterical and panicked," said Marcelle Wilsnach, 14. "There was a turmoil of bodies, of people trying to get out as the bus sank underwater. I'm lucky I'm so small, I could get through a window. But there were a lot of people who couldn't."

Meanwhile, police said five people were killed in another bus crash this morning near the Natal Province city of Pietermaritzburg when the bus went off a road and rolled down an embankment.

The death toll in the Wednesday crash near Johannesburg, in which the bus plunged 12 feet into the water, rose to 42 following the deaths of four more children overnight.

Twenty-eight children remained hospitalized today and seven escaped unhurt.

The passengers ranged in age from 13 to 17 and attended a white Afrikaans-language high school in the Johannesburg suburb of Rossmore. They were on their way home to suburbs in western Johannesburg when the accident occurred.

One 13-year-old boy, Petrus van Heerden, said he swam "towards the light" to safety through a broken window of the bus. He said the bus went down a hill toward the dam and suddenly lurched to one side.

"It looked as though a tire had burst or something went wrong with the steering mechanism, and suddenly we were in the water. The bus stayed upright, but it sank immediately. It all happened in about 30 seconds," the boy said.

Passersby dived into the dam and rescued about 15 children, many of them injured. Rescue crews worked for hours to remove bodies.
