Libya assassins reported

By CHARLES R. BABCOCK
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Security has been tightened recently around President Reagan and other top government leaders because of intelligence reports that Libyan assassination squads are trying to enter the United States, officials said Friday.

One administration official, who declined to be identified, said increased precautions for the safety of Reagan and Vice President George Bush have been in place for about two weeks. Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. and Secretary of Defense Caspar W. Weinberger also also are being guarded more closely, sources said.

Another source said surveillance has been increased along the Canadian border, possibly between Detroit and Windsor, Ontario, because of intelligence reports that the suspected assassination teams might come through Canada. "It is something you just can't ignore," one Justice Department official said.

Another official said the FBI has heard unconfirmed reports about Libyan assassination teams "that are persistent enough that they can't be overlooked. It's sort of a Catch-22 situation. The information isn't that specific, but you take none of it lightly."

WIRE SERVICE REPORTS that one intelligence report from the Middle East last week included the names of six would-be killers have not been corroborated, the official said.

Libyan officials have denied allegations about an assassination campaign against U.S. officials, dismissing them as administration propaganda.

The administration has made a foreign-policy issue of Libyan lewder Col. Moammar Khadafy and his attempts to export terrorism.

Haig suggested earlier this month that Khadafy may have been behind the attempted shooting of Christian Chapman, acting U.S. ambassador in Paris.

When neither Reagan nor Bush attended the funeral of slain Egyptian President Anwar Sadat last month, reports cited other intelligence information about possible Libyan assassination squads.

Recent intelligence reports have been given credencehbecause of the assassinations of several of Khadafy's political opponents in Europe and the attempted murder of another Libyan dissident in Colorado.

Eugene A. Tafoya, a former Green Beret, is on trial in Fort Collins, Colo., for the latter shooting.

Top aides want Allen's removal

By PATRICK E. TYLER and
LEE LESCAZE
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Two of President Reagan's three senior advisers, along with Nancy Reagan, have counseled that national security adviser Richard V. Allen be removed because of the embarrassment he has caused the administration over a $1,000 thank-you fee from Japanese journalists and a serizs of contradictory public explanations of it, according to knowledgeable administration sources.

These sources say that White House chief of staff James A. Baker III and deputy chief of staff Michael K. Deaver are pushing forcefully for Allen's removal to limit the political damage that the series of disclosures has caused the president.

Baker and Deaver are said to believe Allen made serious judgment errors in receiving the money in the White House. They are also concerned about the appearance of Allen's continued relationship with former associates and clients of the private consulting firm that he sold to former Reagan aide and speechwriter Peter D. Hannaford.

Edwin Meese III is alone among Reagan's top advise;s in resisting te calls for Allen's resignation. Meese's defense of Allen focuses on the lack of evidence or proof that Allen broke any laws or administration rules when he accepted the cash and, by his account, forgot to turn over the money to the proper authorities.

MEESE, ALLEN'S DIRECT superior, reportedly is concerned that Allen is being denied "due process" in a legal sense; Baker, Deaver and Mrs. Reagan are said to be dwelling on the political rwmifications. Several officials are known to think Allen should step aside if a special prosecutor is named, but Allen has openly rejected such a suggestion.

In an interview with one wire service reporter, Meese said Friday that the White House is "waiting for the results" of the Justice Department's investigation and in the meantime is not preparing to replace Allen.

White House officials have been noticeably keeping a distance from Allen and have issued statements in his name only or left him to issue his own statements. Allen has been largely unavailable for comment, but in an interview with The New York Times Thursday he said he would not terminate friendships with former clients simply "because I've become a public official."

Allen reacted angrily to a Thursday Washington Post article that reported questions of conflict-of-interest over his contacts with Hannaford and Hannaford's clients.

Allen said he has receivzd more than $100,000 in payments from Hannaford this year under the terms of the sale of his Potomwc International Corp. to Hannaford on Jan. 19. He said he received $91,000 as a down payment and $20,000 thus far in monthly installments scheduled to retire the total purchase price of $160,000 in three years.

Allen said the $91,000 he received up front comprised his retained earnings in the firm: $75,000 in cash and $16,000 in accounts receivable. Allen said he wanted to avoid declaring the $91,000 as ordinary income, taxable at a high rate, so he arranged to have Potomac redeem some of his stock to enable him to declare the proceeds as a long-term capital gain, taxable at a lower rate.

The remaining $69,000 was to be paid to Allen by Hannaford in installments over a three-year period with undisclosed interest terms. In the end, Allen said, he stood to make about $39,000 on the sale.

THE POST ARTICLE detailed instances where Allen has continued to meet with and advise Hannaford and his clients on an ad hoc basis. It noted that this activity posed ethical questions, given his status as a substantial creditor of his former firm with a vested interest in its continued prosperity.

"I find it particularly revolting to suggest that friendships of many years' standing are seen to contain inherent conflicts of interest," Allen said. "The double standard, the application of double standards by the press — by the media — must stop," he added in The Times interview.

"How can there be a conflict? " Allen continued. "If, for example, one guy leaves a law firm and leaves his accounts, is there a conflict if he meets with the lawyer who takes over those accounts or the former client, particularly if he excuses himself from matters pertaining to the client? The answer is clearly no," Allen said.

Meanwhile, from Japan, the newspaper that broke the first story of the Allen investigation, Mainichi Shimbun, reported in Saturday's editions that Allen was given a "big present" in addition to the $1,000 and two ladies' watches he received from the Japanese magazine representatives who met with Nancy Reagan on Jan. 21.

The newspaper said its information was developed in a second inquiry by Japanese police officials. The report said Allen became involved in arranging the interview for the magazine Shufu no Tomo (Housewife's Friend) only after Allen's longtime friend and business associate, Tamotsu Takase, delivered the unidentified present to Allen's office two days before the Reagan inauguration.

Polish Communist leaders asking for anti-strike measures

Associated Press Writer

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — The country's Communist leaders on Friday were reported to have told the government to submit an anti-strike bill to Parliament in an attempt to end a wave of wildcat walkouts.

Meanwhile, 338 firefighting cadets expanded their protest to a Warsaw barracks and ignored police deadlines to end the sit-in.

Interpress, the government's official news outlet, said Communist Party chief Wojciech Jaruzelski disclosed the ruling Politburo's demand session of the 200-member Central Committee.

Observers predicted the demand would spark new conflict with Solidarity, the union which won the right to strike when it was formed in August 1980 as the first labor feteration free of party control in the Soviet bloc.

Deputy Premier Mieczyslaw Rakowski, in an interview with the Yugoslav weekly newsmagazine Nin, said, 'If there is no common sense, great complications await Poland, I can even say a catastrophe."

He said a "catastrophy" could mean "a disintegration of the economy which would then lead to a general shortage of food and other products...and would in turn lead to street demonstrations.

"This would make possible the first class which could happen very easily. Further (it could mean) bloodshed and something similar to civil war."

SOLIDARITY HAS IGNORED appeals from the party and parliament to end strikes, and alternate Politburo member Wlodzimierz Mokrzyszczak told the Central Committee, "Now is the last time to put the matter in a categorical way. Does the Solidarity leadership intend to respond positively to this appeal? Not only the party, but the while nation is waiting."

Mokrzyszczak added: "The existence and security of the nation are threatened, as is socialism and the party, and the party's resolutions and appeals are ignored.

"The laws of the Sejm (Parliament) go unrespected, the agreements (between Solidarity and the government) are not observed, destructive strikes are continued. Social anarchy is spreading, and disorganization of the market is deepening."

Mokrzyszczak also spoke of a need for 'special rights for the government,"but did not elaborate. Both the party and the Sejmhive warned that stronger measures, including a hinted-at state of emergency, may be needed if strikes continue.

The Central Committee secretary for the economy, Marian Wozniak, read a report of the Politburo that declared "for half a year, there hasn't been a day of peace, a day without strikes or their announcement, strike alerts or other protests.

'Unfortunately, the response to our appeal was a further increase in tension. Various protest actions continue to be undertaken all over the country."

WOZNIAK said national income would drop by 15 percent this year falling to 1974 levels, and that Poland was faced with growing lack of worker discipline and Black market speculation unprecedented since World War I.

Party strategists may be hoping that time is in their favor. In an interview earlier this week, Stefan Olszowski, the propaganda chief, said polls conducted by state television were revealing a continuous drop in the degree of public support for strikes.

The poll showed that, while as many as nine out of 10 Poles supported strikes in August 1900 when Solidarity was formed, last month's poll showed that strikes were supported by only 45 percent of the poplation.

Israel may compromise on European participation

WASHINGTON (AP)— Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. and Israeli Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir met for 7½ hours Friday and were optimistic afterwards that they will be able to resolve an impasse over the planned Israeli veto of European cooperation in a Sinai peacekeeping force.

Shamir planned to leave for Israel, via London, almost immediately after the meeting at the State Department, which lasted 4½ hours longer than scheduled.

He said he was taking "some ideas" back to Israel on how the problem of European participation in the peacekeeping force might be resolved. "There are prospects that we will agree on some proposals."

Asked directly if Haig had succeeded or failed in persuading him that Israel should agree to European participation in the force under existing circumstances, Shamir would say only that "discussions are going on."

Haig called the meeting "very constructive and valuable."

Haig also said he may stop in Israel in two weeks on a trip already scheduled to India and Pakistan. He called a visit to Israel "a possibility that is under consideration."

Until Shamir's arrival earlier Friday for the hastily arranged meeting, it had been expected that the Israeli Cabinet would vote Sunday to reject European participation.

Great Britain, France, Italy and The Netherlands all have agreed last week to a U.S. request to participate in the force, but at the same voiced their belief that the Palestine Liberation Organization should be included in Mideast peace negotiations. That angered the Israelis, who feel European support for the PLO undermines the Camp David peace process, which excludes the PLO.

Asked if the cabinet might postpone a decision Sunday to give more time to develop a compromise, Shamir said that it was possible. "I will bring several ideas for the meeting of our Cabinet and the cabinet will decide," he said.

THE UNITED STATES, which already has committed nealy half of the troops in the 2,400-member force, feels European participation is essential to give it international credibility.

Shamir, before his all-night flight from Tel Aviv, had declared that Europe's "conditions are unacceptable."

An Israeli source said Shamir's opening position in the meeting with Haig was that "the Europeans are unacceptable with the statements, but are acceptable without the statements."

But the source, who requested anonymity, said there might be some way out of the impasse because both the United States and Israel "want European participation."

One possibility, he said, was that the United States would prepare a new statement acceptable to Israel that would reaffirm the U.S. commitment to the Camp David peace process.

Both Israel and Egypt hold veto power over what nations join the force, which is supposed to patrol the Eyptian-Israeli border following the scheduled withdrawal of Israeli troops next April 25.

Only three countries — Colombia, Uruguay and Fiji — in addition to the United States have given unconditional commitments to participate in the force.

SHAMIR CALLED FRIDAY'S talks were "very fruitful. We have discussed at length almost all the problems concerning the relations between Israel and the United States."

Besides the peacekeeping force, he said these included Lebanon, strategic cooperation between Israel and the United States "and other problems." He decliped to specific what other ideas were being considered.

Haig also said he and Shamir also discussed the strategic relationship between the United States and Israel, the situation in Lebanon and the overall peace process.

Reunion of brothers marred by death

GRAPEVINE, Texas (AP) — Two estranged brothers had their joyful Thanksgiving reunion shattered when the 12-year-old son of one collapsed and died.

Steven Tobias of Whueling, Ill., collapsed on the floor of the Dallas-Fort Worth Regional Airport here and was pronounced dead at at local hospital.

An autopsy will be performed Monday, according to the Tarrant County medical examiner's office.

The youth recently had the flu, but had seemed to be in good health, said his mother, Betty Tobias.

John Tobias, 60, of the Fort Worth suburb of Haltom City, had driven to the airport Thanksgiving evening to meet his brother, Paul, of Wheeling. Steven had accompaniud his parents to Texas. The two brothers had learned each other's whereabouts just two weeks ago after 27 years' separation.

John Tobias' two stepdaughters had launched a search to locate members of the family, which had spiit up after a quarrel in 1954. Tobias' desire to see his family had intensified in recent weeks, when he learned he had terminal cancer.

Five minutes after the reunited family hugged and wept, Steven collapsed on the American Airlines terminal floor. Within minutes, paramedics arrived to work on the boy, while the reunited brothers watched, holding hands.

John Tobias had his right kidney removed a year ago, and the cancer was diagnosed this month. After the diagnosis, he confided in his stepdaughters an overwhelming need to be reunited with his family.

Thursday was the first time Tobias had seen a family member since his mother's funeral in 1954, where a heated quarrel broke out. Family members declined to discuss the reason for the quarrel.

The whereabouts of a brother and two sisters still are unknown. An older brother died last year in New Jersey, and another brother had died earlier.

"Until you got the kind of sickness like I got, you don't appreciate a lot of things," John Tobias had said Wednesday, before his brother arrived. "You get a new perspective, start appreciating stuff more. This thing is draining me little by little."

As the family gathered Thursday night after Steven's death, Jay Conklin, John Tobias' son-in-law, said, "Maybe somehow the rest of the family will hear about this, qnd they will all come together. Maybe this is the way God meant it."

Youngster not told of transplant

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — A 12-year-old boy, the youngest known surviving heart transplant recipiunt, hasn't been told yet that the heart beating in his chest isn't his own, his mother says.

Dorothy Wann, mother of Eric Boyd, says her son was told only that he needed heart surgery.

"A heart transplant is very scary for a 12-year-ld," she told reporters. "For now we just told him that his pumping chambers have been replaced. Later on, when he can deal with it, we'll tell him exactly what has happened."

The blond, bespectacled lad underwent a three-hour operation Tuesday at University Hospital after doctors found that he had a life-threatening heart desease, a form of muscle damage, for which there was no other therapy. The transplant was the first done here.

Eric was listed in satisfactory condition Friday. On Thursday hu was able to sit up and eat solid food.

When doctors removed a tube used to help Eric breathe during the operation, Mrs. Wann said, her son looked up at the doctors and said, "Thank you."

FEW HEART TRANSPLANTS have reen performed on youngsters. Doctors say the longest survivor died four months after she received a new heart.

Mrs. Winn said the family began considering a heart transplant some time ago, but a decision was forced on them when his condition suddenly worsened.

"In the last three weeks Eric got bad enough that we had to go through with it," she said. "I don't think he would be alive today if he didn't have the operation."

The donor heart came from 14-year-old Todd Massey of Columbus, Ga., who died from massive head injuries sustaine pin a motorbike ascident. The youth's father, Jimmy Mqssey, said Todd's kidneys and eyespwere also given for transplants.

"A lot of people might read the paper and ask, 'How could you donate his organs?'" Massey said. "But I didn't even hesitate. I loved him so much. He was my heart."

Todd's fatherp said the boy "loved everybody and everybody loved him. (Todd's) spirit lives on."

Eric's hospital stay is expected to last several weeks. John Wright, a spokesman for University of Alabama Hospitals, said the first week is the most critical period. "So far, everyone's encouraged," he said. "It's kind of a day-by-day thing."

Mrs. Wann said her son is doing "fine now, physically and emotionally. He is handling this well. Of course we know that he has some more critical periods to go through yet.

Four men rape 12-year-old

DALLAS (AP) — A 12-year-old girl was rescued by police officers who heard her muffled cries, after she was dragged into an East Dallas apartment and repeatedly raped by four men, authorities say.

The girl, who was treated and released at Parkland Hospital, was rescued by police officers who responded to a neighbor's call and forced their way inside the apartment early Thanksgiving morning.

She told authorities that "those four guys raped me, and I couldn't get away because they were so strong," police said.

Police arrested four men for investigation of aggravated rape.

After the officers received a call about a possible rape in progress, they knocked on the apartment door, police said. A man opened the door about two inches, and the officers heard the girl crying and forced their way inside.

Officers said the girl was naked from the waist down, and that she ran into the kitchen, crying and trying to cover herself.

The girl said the four men took turns holding her down, covering her mouth and raping her.

She said she had been walking down an alley just before midnight when a man approached her and tried to talk to her. The girl said he then grabbed her and dragged her to the apartment, while she struggled and shouted, "I do not want to go."

She was rescued about three hours later, the officers said .

Autumn weather on way out

Along with the last of the turkey and dressing leftovers, the holiday weekend may end the comfortable autumn weather and begin what could be a cold and wet winter.

According to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport, it should be cloudy and cooler through tonight, turning colder on Sunday. The mercury will climb into the middle 60s today, dropping back into the middle 40s tonight. The high on Sunday should be in the upper 50s.

The first precipitation for the month will be recorded this weekend if the NWS prediction of a chance of showers today, increasing through Sunday, comes true.

Chance of rain is 30 percent today and 50 percent tonight.

Winds will be southerly 10-15 mph today.

Friday's high of 60 was 25 degrees cooler than the record high of 85 set in 1945. The low of 40 was 24 degrees warmer than the record low for that date of 16 set in 1976.

Farmer's Co-op catches fire

Members of the police, sheriff and fire departments in Midland had a relatively quiet post-Thanksgiving Day.

According to fire department reports, an unknown amount of damage was the result of a cotton fire at Midland Farmer's Co-op on South Fairgrounds Road Friday morning. Three firemen responded to the call. The fire, which was blazing on arrival, was extinguished with 1,000 gallons of water.

The loss of a 14K gold Rolex watch with a date display, diamond face and 18K watch band, was reported to Midland police Friday morning. According to reports, Maurice Smith of Route 3 said he lost the watch at Midland Farmer's Co-op while loading feed. Value of the watch was $8,000.

Selling Florida harder as economic woes continue

By MELISSA JOHNSON
Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — When non-residents think of Florida, Ed Gilbert wants them to picture endless sunshine, beaches and luxury hotels.

But the state's tourism director says it is not so easy these days to keep their minds off crime, sinkholes and refugees.

"Any time there is negative publicity on a state — whether it be crime in Miami, sinkholes in Orlando, rammed bridges in Tampa, red tide in other parts, shark attacks in Daytona Beach — no matter where it is, it hurts," Gilbert says. "There's no other way to say it, it hurts."

That is a serious problem for a state that has tourism as a leading product. And with the nation's economy also sagging, the 130 people in the state Commerce Department's Division of Tourism are having to work harder to sell Florida's benefits.

Florida is still the top vacation spot in the nation and an increasingly attractive playground for international visitors, Gilbert says. But the number of tourists has dropped slightly this year, following several years of big annual increases.

A recent report by the Commerce Department said 24.5 million Americans and Canadians came to the state in the first nine months — down about 3 percent from 1980. They spent slightly more than $12 billion, also a 3 percent drop from the first nine months last year.

The drop was attributed mainly to the nation's drooping economy, but bad news played a role, too. Florida's tourist trade was devastated in the first three months by several freezes and the type of national media publicity that makes Gilbert cringe — a picture of Florida oranges covered with ice.

THE MOST PRESSING image problem now is southern Florida, with Miami leading the way as the crime capital of the nation. But Gilbert and others contend the danger is being overplayed in the media.

"The impact of crime on the typical tourist is being greatly exaggerated," says Democratic state Rep. Bob Crawford of Winter Haven, chairman of the state House Tourism and Economic Development Committee.

"Often victims of crime are criminals themselves," Crawford says. "Drug-related murders in Dade County are not murders of tourists or even law-abiding citizens."

Although the best answers to crime and other problems seem to lie in long-term solutions, for the time being it is Gilbert's job to counteract the "bad" with a steady stream of positive advertising and promotion.

That takes money, and Gilbert is pressing the Legislature to give him more.

The tourism industry brought $17 billion in business to Florida in 1980, reaping $800 million in tax revenues, he says.

That was on a far smaller, although record investment by the tourism office — $8.3 million in the budget year that began July 1.

About $3.6 million is being spent on advertising in New England, the Midwest and other chilly areas extolling Florida's sunshine, beaches and beautiful people. Stressing the problems and discomforts of snow, ice and cold, the television and magazine ads proclaim: "When you need it bad, we've got it good."

"THE WHOLE THING IS relief," says Mike Sloan, head of the Miami advertising agency that created the ad campaign. "Relief from the abuse of winter, relief from boredom, relief from responsibility, relief from routine; and Florida has answers for all of that.

Hassan expects resumption of Arab summit

By MICHAEL GOLDSMITH
Associated Press Writer

FEZ, Morocco (AP) — King Hassan II said Friday he expects the Arab summit conference he suspended earlier this week to resume in Morocco by June.

The Moroccan monarch was chairman of the 12th Arab summit conference, which he called off after only five hours Wednesday because of irreconcilable differences over the Saudi Arabian peace plan for the Middle East.

Hassan told a news conference he considered the suspension a "recess during which the Arab countries should logically consult with each other and reach the conclusions necessary to permit the second session (of the summit) to take place."

Hassan left little doubt that he strongly favors the peace plan advanced recently by Saudi Arabia's Crown Prince Fahd, which implicitly offers to allow Israel "to live in peace" for the first time since thepcreation of the Jewish state in 1948.

The chiefs of state of hard-line Arab countries, notably Syria, Iraq, Libya, Algeria and Mauritania, expressed vigorous objections to the Fahd plan by refusing to attend the Fez summit convened to approve it. They were represented by lower ranking officials.

Hassan said he was convinced the next few months would "bring wisdom" to the Arab leaders and allow them to resume the summit in Morocco with a fresh appreciation of the merits of the Fahd plan. hepsaid the plan contains nothing that hqs not been prev¾e States by srown Oil, Pan Pacific and Granex was importud from the Pxilippines, thu Justice Department said.

The complaint alleged that the three companies and Unitet Coconut OilpMills Inc. a0private company in thu Philippines, conspired to store large quantities of crude coconut oil in various parts of the United States and to cooridnate the sales of0it.

Donald Waldon, 62, of Klamath, Calif., was left jobless when the government closed a Northern California forest to logging. The tractor operator predicts, "It's going to get worse."

'Timberbeasts' lament job losses

By AL MARTINEZ
Los Angeles Times

EUREKA, Calif. — They call themselves Timberbeasts, and once they prowled in abundance through the proud forest lands of the north coast.

They are rough, thick-armed men who logged the California redwoods — artisans of a dishonored craft in an environmental age.

For more than a century, the sounds of their saws and their engines rang through the woods.

There is a silence now. It began three years ago when the federal government took 28,000 acres of timberland to preserve in perpetuity as part of the Redwood National Forest.

It closed the forest to three giant logging companies, put 6,000 men out of work and made the Timberbeast, as one has said, "as useful as the dinosaur."

About half the 6,000 have drawn benefits through a federal job-protection plan, but the $40 million program is already 10 percent over budget with three years left to go — and no one is betting it will make it.

The plan pays full salary to those who lost their jobs because of the forest closure.

But at least 3,000 did not qualify for benefits, and the park has become a symbol of economic disaster.

Three years later, many are still looking for work — any kind of work — in an area where unemployment is figured at 40 percent.

Others have left, abandoning the outdoor lives they love for jobs in the big cities they hate.

A few, bowing to the ultimate humiliation, have taken employment in hamburger stands or department stores at $3.75 an hour; or they mow lawns or run errands or sit around, one wife says sadly, "growing old."

"These are men with 150 percent pride," observes a union business agent who lost his local when the big companies began shutting down their mills. "You can cut that in half now."

"The redwoods have been saved and I'm for that," adds a 20-year logger too old to find another job. "But who's going to save us?"

Cotton Guffie is not the kind of man to waste a lot of hate on old enemies. But ask him about the "park people" — a vague army of hippies and bureaucrats who changed his life — and his eyes grow blue-cold hard.

"They just flat-out put me on my ass," he says. "That's all."

Cotton hunches over his third bottle of Coors in a bar called Dorsey's Lumberjack, 40 miles north of Eureka.

"I worked my whole life to buy a Cat and five years ago I finally got so as I could log on my own. Then (they) took it all!"

The Cat is his Catepillar tractor, and it cost Cotton $250,000. He was a gypo-logger, an independent, and when the forest lands wereshut down to logging, he was shut out.

Beef illness outbreaks reported

ATLANTA (AP9 — Five recent outbreaks of salmonellosis linked to precooked roast beef emphasize the need for strict compliance with rules governing roast beef processing, a national health agency says.

Two of the outbreaks were traced to a Philadephia meat processing plant and at least two others were associated with a processor in Albany, N.Y., the national Centers for Disease Control reported Friday. Neither was identified.

"The public should be advised to recook or avoid excessively rare precooked roast beef," the CDC said it its Morbidity and Mortality Weekly Report.

Three other outbreaks of salmonellosis — an intestinal disorder — were reported last summer, also associated with precooked roast beef, the CDC said. The illness is caused by eating foods that contain salmonella bacteria.

Two of the recent outbreaks occurred in eastern Pennsylvania in late August and September, the CDC said. The first followed a picnic attended by about 60 people in Montgomery County and the second followed a neighborhood party.

Your horoscope

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: "Little Women" author Louisa May Alcott was born on this day in Philadelphia. Those celebrating birthdays today are creative, intellectual and very fond of travel. Marital harmony should be easier to attain in the months ahead. Friends bring you luck and also affect your finances in a positive way. This is not a good time for career changes, however, so hang onto your job and work at improving employment conditions. Most of you are unconcerned about riches, but if you do decide to become wealthy, you will have no trouble doing so. Your talents are in great demand! Singles find romance happy and a bit mysterious.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Contact people who have been of great service to you previously. You may find their advice helpful in making home life more harmonious. Mate makes a valid point in financial discussions.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Leave work, business for another time. Your plans are subject to change today. Social activities could alter the course of romance. Whatever happens, you come out ahead.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Project your true personality better. Others may not know who you are, what you really want. Romance could be affected in positive ways. Short trips prove rewarding.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Be patient with someone who is demanding. Adopt a conservative approach when handling money. Newspaper and magazine ads will give you new ideas for decorating your home.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Spend the day with a younger person. An overheard conversation could cause distress until you know all the facts. Postpone making judgments.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A meeting of minds, an important commitment or a joint decision is featured today. New associations can be valuable in business. A short trip enlivens a routine Sunday.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): The spotlight is on travel today. Any recent tensions or misgivings should disappear. A new personal relationship could be part of the picture. Welcome certain changes.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): An excellent day for making decisions. Mate or partner will be in a very positive mood. Long-distance calls bring good luck! Your unusual ideas require a tactful and sensitive presentation.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Good friends show their true colors today and you are deeply grateful. Go ahead and accept a last-minute invitation. If single, you could embark on an exciting new romance.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): If you have been feeling lonely lately, it may be your own fault. You need to work a little less and socialize more. A day of pleasure results from a chance meeting.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A family Sunday brings you special benefits and means even more to those who love you. Original ideas will shine once seen in the spotlight. Encourage mate to help.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Do not worry about matters that are out of your hands. Get together with good friends and practice the art of good conversation.

Harold Hoopman, center, president of Marathon Oil Co., enters U.S. District Court is Columbus, Ohio, Friday to testify at a hearing in which Mobil Oil Corp. is seeking a preliminary injunction to block a takeover of Marathon by U.S. Steel Corp.

Mobil charges other two firms with conspiracy

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Mobil Corp., battling to acquire Marathon Oil Co., charged in federal court Friday that U.S. Steel Corp. and Marathon had conspired to block Mobil from buying the smaller oil concern.

In Pittsburgh, meanwhile, U.S. Steel lashed out at Mobil's takeover offer in the steelmaker's first public comment since the oil companyp increased its bid to $6.5 billion Tuesday.

U.S. Steel disclosed an agreement of Nov. 19 to buy Marathon for $6.3 billion in cash and notes, nearly three weeks after Mobil made its first bid of $5.1 billion. Mobil, which is fighting an antitrust suit filed by Marathon, is challenging the legality of the agreement between U.S. Steel and Marathon.

Marathon had rejected Mobil's offer and sought U.S. Steel as a "white knight."

At Mobil's request, U.S. District Judge Joseph P. Kinneary in Columbus issued a temporary restraining order against U.S. Steel's agreement with Marathon.

A hearing on whether the order should be made a permanent injunction opened Friday with Mobil accusing U.S. Steel and Marathon of engaging in a "blatant conspiracy" to block Mobil's takeover effort.

But Marathon lawyer Patrick McCartan told the court that Marathon was not required to spell out in disclosure statements what he called "speculation" about potential effects of a merger.

In Pittsburgh, U.S. Steel issued a statement calling Mobil's revised offer "unattractive," citing the several conditions Mobil attached to its bid. In addition to Marathon's antitrust challenge, the Federal Trade Commission is studying Mobil's offer and has until Dec.5 to take action.

Illegal aliens fill Brownsville schools for time being

BROWNSVILLE, Texas (AP) — Eleven-year-old San Juana Ortiz stayed at home last year, feeding, bathing and caring for her younger brothers and sisters in Matamoros, Mexico.

Then her widowed mother moved the family across the Rio Grande to this growing border city.

She now attends school for the first time as a result of a U.S. District judge's order that Texas educate illegal aliens.

"I like school because they give us food here," she said, referring to the federal free lunch program.

She is one of 1,300 illegal aliens enrolled in Brownsville schools out of a total 29,400 enrollment.

BROWNSVILLE OFFICIALS, along with other school districts and the state attorney general, fought the order to provide a free education to all children residing in the district.

Local officials unsuccessfully asked for an exemption from the order. They said they feared the two international bridges from Matamoros would bring a flood of illegal aliens into the already crowded classrooms.

The U.S. Supreme Court hears oral arguments in the landmark case Tuesday.

Brownsville does not have the largest illegal alien enrollment in the state but its border location lays the problem at the front door, officials say.

"I FEEL WE DO NEED to educate these people if they remain here. It would be terrible to have people who are illiterate. They would go on the welfare rolls," said Gracie de Pena, local school board president. "But we need some assistance."

Brownsville, at the southern tip of Texas, has one of the lowest per capita incomes in the nation yet is experiencing rapid growth. Eighty percent of the 80,000 population is Hispanic and many children enter school speaking only Spanish.

The high birth rate, influx of Americans seeking jobs and the stream of undocumented workers from Mexico has strained the school district's resources, said Superintendent Raul Besteiro.

"People are just coming over from Mexico. I can't blame them. They're starving," said Besteiro. "But whose fault is it? The reason we're impacted by illegals is that the federal government hasn't done its job at the border."

An attorney representing an undocumented child argues the problem is misunderstood.

Most undocumented children come from families where a parent or another sibling often is either a U.S. citizen or a resident alien with legal status to remain here, said the attorney, Linda Yanez.

"MY CLIENT AND HIS mother are a very typical situation," she said. "There are three children born in the United States in the family. He happened to be born in Mexico. His father is a U.S. citizen but he never petitioned to have his wife become a citizen. They are now divorced. The mother owns a house and has been living here 14 years," she said.

The child born in Mexico could not enroll in Brownsville schools until last year, although his two older siblings could. The fourth child is pre-school age.

"He lived with his grandmother in Matamoros. But then she got sick and he moved over here with the rest of the family," said Ms. Yanez. "Eventually he will adjust his status. But it makes no sense to keep him out of school until the immigration service does the paperwork."

The lawyer says she realizes some children abuse the privilege, by living with their parents on weekends in Matamoros and crossing the bridges during the week to stay with relatives here.

"But the numbers are insignificant," she said.

She agrees that Brownsville needs money but says the school officials should be pushing for a bond issue instead of lobbying state and federal authorities for impact aid.

School board officials are considering a proposal to sell $40 million in bonds over an eight-year period to finance new elementary, junior high and high schools.

In the meantime, children must be educated, said Ms. Yanez.

FEW KNOW MORE ABOUT the problems of teaching illegal alien children than Blanca Betancourt, a teacher at Cromack Elementary School. The school has approximately 60 undocumented children in its 1,400 enrollment and is located in one of the poorest areas of town.

Miss Betancourt was one of several instructors assigned last year to classes of illegal aliens who had never been to school, either here or in Mexico.

She now has 13 pupils, ranging in age from 8 to 13. Many perform work on the kindergarten level, she said, and all need individual attention.

"We're not supposed to keep them in the intensive English program more than 18 weeks. But there's no way a child with no education can get out of here in that time," she said.

A 15-year-old student has dropped out since last year.

"He gave up. He wanted to go back home to Matamoros. He couldn't adjust to living here with his aunt because he had been on his own," she said. "He said he would rather earn 1,000 pesos ($40) a week over there washing cars and be on his own."

Jose Refugio Vasquez, 12, is one of her current pupils. He moved to Brownsville this year with his family of seven brothers and two sisters. His father is a Matamoros policeman.

"I like it here because they put us to work. If I couldn't go here I would have gone back to Matamoros," he said in Spanish.

Sambo's chain files bankruptcy petition

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Sambo's Restaurants Inc. filed a voluntary bankruptcy petition Friday after closing hundreds of restaurants and laying off thousands of workers around the nation in the past month.

The petition was filed in US. District Court here under Chapter 11 of the federal bankruptcy code, said Arthur Dowd, Sambo's vice prusident for administration.

He said the petition would "have absolutely no effect on the company's operations" and described it as an attempt to buy time from company lenders. He said decision to file for bankruptcy was prompted by a notice of default from lenders, served Wednesday.

"We will continue to operate 667 restaurants nationwide under our present supervision and employees," Dowd said. "The company will continue to do business as before. We want to stress to our employees and vendors that they will be paid as usual as will shareholders."

Last month Sambo's failed to pay a $4.8 million first installment on a $100 million restructured loan. Earlier this week it asked its lenders to restructure the debt again.

On Wednesday, Sambo's said it had laid off up to 10,000 employees and closed 447 restaurants in 43 states this month.

The chain posted losses of $77.8 million in 1979, $11.6 million in 1980 and $29 million in the first nine months of this year.

The chain has sold 12 restaurants as part of its plan to raise cash during its financial emergency. The company asked the New York Stock Exchange to stop trading in its stock Wednesday because of "rumors currently circulating in the financial community."

Two former top Sambo's officials and three other businessmen were named in a federal indictment in Amarillo, Texas, on Tuesday. They were accused of defrauding Sambo's in a complex cattle-feeding scheme.

Sambo's had an $8 million lawsuit pending against two of those indicted, Karl V. Willig, the chain's former president, and William L. Wagner, its former executive vice president and chief executive officer. The suit says the men profited from the alleged cattle fraud at the expense of Sambo's.

FAA welcomes grade-fixing probe

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Officials of the academy that trains the nation's air traffic controllers say they welcome an investigation into allegations of grade-fixing, a Federal Aviation Administration spokesman said Friday.

FAA spokesman Mark Weaver said the visit next week by U.S. House Post Office and Civil Service Committee investigators will be welcome. "We expect they will give us a clean bill of health and that will settle all these problems," he said.

Weaver said a machine malfunction, not test score juggling, was responsible for an incident in which academy students who failed a final exam were notified they had passed.

"As far as I'm concerned it was a machine error, which is being rectified by hand-grading," Weaver said.

On Monday, two investigators of the House committee are expected to arrive at the0FAA Training Academy to examine theallegations.

Rep. William D. Ford, D-Mich., chairman of the committee, said Wednesday he had received complaints from unidentified academy sources that scores from a Nov. 19 test had been changed.

The FAA has greatly expanded academy enrollment to train replacements for the 11,500 controllers dismissed by the Reagan administration after they went on strike illegally on Aug. 3.

The Daily Oklahoman reported Friday that instructors at the school contend the grades of 14 to 16 trainees were changed from failing to passing to cover up a miscount of passing students.

The newspaper said two academy instructors alleged that of 143 trainees in classes entering after the air traffic controllers strike, 49 failed the course.

Parents of murdered children group eases pain

By FRANCES D'EMILIO
Associated Press Writer

SANTA CLARA, Calif. (AP) — John Lewis wishes desperately that he could show his mean racquetball serve to his son Scott. The teen-ager taught his dad the sport, and the memory of those lessons now makes the father weep.

"It hurts me to realize things I want to share with Scott but can't," said Lewis, breaking down.

Scott, like the children of others who gathered here on a recent evening, was murdered, but his body was not discovered for more than half a year.

"Scott really took pride in his body," his mother, Jean, continued. "And when I think of his body lying out there, deteriorating for seven months..."

Mrs. Lewis stopped, her hand shielding her eyes. Others in the room had wept the same tears. For them, spending an evening or two each month with Parents of Murdered Children makes the pain easier to bear.

The shock of losing a loved one can be catastrophic, said Charlotte Hullinger, who started the organization after her 19-year-old daughter, Lisa, was clubbed to death in 1978.

Life after one's child dies is especially devastating since "all your dreams and all your hopes are dying with your child," Mrs. Hullinger said in a telephone interview.

"Violent death brings anger so intense most people can't stand it," she said. "We find that those who would normally be helpful, like people in the church, especially don't like these unacceptable emotions and will try to smooth them over with platitudes like 'It's God's will.'"

She and her husband, Robert, a Lutheran minister in Cincinnati, turned to other parents in desperation.

A priest gave her the name of two couples whose children were slain, and the Hullingers asked the parents to meet informally with them. Mrs. Hullinger says she had no idea that the invitation would grow into Parents of Murdered Children, which now has 20 chapters, all over the country. Its members all have violently lost their children, who ranged in age from 2½ months to 52 years.

Mrs. Hullinger has received a thousand letters from parents and spends hours each day and sometimes $400 or more of her own money each month on telephone calls.

Robert Lea, a counselor at the Grief Counseling Center in Marin County, said a parent is overwhelmed with "the shock, the disbelief, then the rage that such a thing could happen, the pointlessness of it."

"People who suffer a loss like that have to go out and find their own support" from those who have suffered a similar trauma, said Lea, who began couseling after his wife killed herself.

On a recent night, the Lewises, who are from San Jose, drove 45 miles through a rainstorm to meet with several other people in Santa Clara at the Center for Living Dying, which counsels people on death.

Joining them were a couple whose 16-year-old son was killed in a restaurant holdup, a man whose daughter and fiance were shot in the head after a fraternity party and two counselors.

> "Violent death brings anger so intense most people can't stand it. We find that those who would normally be helpful, like people in the church, especially don't like these unacceptable emotions.

The seven sat cross-legged, or sprawled on large, plump cushions and sipped coffee. A warm orange light gave the room a comforting aura.

Sometimes trembling, the parents spoke of frustrating legal delays, of feeling "weird" when emotion grips them in public, of the impatience with which others view their grief.

And they dread holidays.

Three Christmases ago, 16-year-old Tracy Anderson asked for a rust-colored down jacket. Roberta and Jim Anderson tried to find one, but couldn't, so they gave him money instead.

Then Tracy was murdered. The next Christmas found Mrs. Anderson "running out of stores. They all had racks of rust jackets," she says.

Hal Sowers is haunted by the thought that his daughter, Mary Beth, 21, might have been alive while two suspects were in custody for a week before her body was found in a pasture one year ago.

Sowers, a physicist from San Carlos, was angry that investigators could not force the suspects to talk.

"They talk about Miranda rights?" he asked the other parents.

Lea said that with a child's murder "it's just inevitable that it is a much longer and harder grief. There's no comfort" like the kind that comes with knowing you tenderly cared for a son or daughter dying of illness.

Mrs. Hullinger describes Parents of Murdered Children as a "crutch." One person came to a meeting 10 years after a murder. Another calls from Kentucky every Friday afternoon and talks for two hours. The caller's son was killed on a Friday afternoon.

The bereaved "need to go over those things until they're able to put it aside on their own," said Lea.

But mainly, it's comforting to be able to share the terrible experience with others.

"If a person from POMC says 'I know how you feel,' that's right," said Sowers. "They know how I feel."

Police may have tried to aid rape suspects

CHICAGO (AP) — Dismissals will be sought for two policemen who alledgedly tried to help two rape suspects escape arrest, reportedly by warning them that other police were on the way, the police superintendent says.

Police Supt. Richard J. Brzeczek on Wednesday suspended the men for 30 days. It was the most severe action he could take himself, but he said he plans to seek the officers' dismissal by the Police Board.

"What happened was outrageous," Brzeczek said. "It's an insult to every police officer in the department. It is in total opposition to the public trust ..."

The 18-yuar-old victim told police she had been abducted by two men in a van and was raped and beaten by them in the vehicle early Sunday. She said the officers had driven up behind the van and released the suspects after questioning them.

"They stood outside talking to these two guys, even laughing with them — I heard the laughter — and then they let them go."

Suspended were Pelmon Thompson, 39, a six-year police veteran, and his partner, George Lyles, 39, a five-year veteran.

The officers could not be reached for comment on the case.

OTHER OFFICERS ARRESTED two 17-year-olds, John Fitzgerald Moore and Thomas Brown, both of suburban Oak Park. Moore was said to be a Thompson family friend, according to investigators.

They were charged with rape, deviate sexual assault, aggravated kidnapping, aggravated battery, unlawful restraint and robbery.

The Chicago Sun-Times reported Thursday that the suspects told police Thompson and Lyles, the first officers to arrive at the scene, tried to help them avoid arrest, but before they could flee, other policemen arrested them.

The newspaper said the suspects' statements are recorded in detective reports it had obtained.

The victim, a college freshman home for the Thanksgiving holiday season, told police she had a quarrel with her boyfriend and was walking alone when she was abducted.

Investigators said Thompson and Lyles went to the scene after a police radio report that someone had seen the victim trying to escape her abductors. They said that without arresting the suspects, the officers took the young woman to a house, where a neighbor called other officers.

The Sun-Times said that according to a report it had obtained, Thompson and Lyles then went back to the location of the van after hearing on the police radio that it was being sought and warned the suspects. But other officers arrived before the suspects' could get their stalled van started.

Workers restore giant Civil War Cyclorama

ATLANTA (AP) — In the shadow of the downtown skyline, a bloody Civil War battle rages on in a renovated theater here, returning modern-day Rebels and Yankees to the day this city burned 117 years ago.

The battle site is Atlanta's 95-year-old Cyclorama — a 9-ton cylindrical painting which depicts the Battle of Atlanta, when Gen. William Tecumseh Sherman captured the city on his way to the sea.

Seated in one of the cushioned chairs, a visitor is whisked back to a dusty hillside on July 22, 1864, where blue- and gray-uniformed soldiers cover undulating fields.

Officers ride by on horseback, directing the seemingly haphazard battle. Wisps of cannon smoke rise overhead. On the horizon is the dome of the Georgia Capitol. Kennesaw and Stone mountains loom in the distance.

ADD THE BOOM of cannons and the call of bugles from a 16-track stereo system, and all that is missing is the odor of the gunpowder.

The Cyclorama, painted by a team of artists in 1886, came close to rotting from neglect before city, state and private contributions provided the $9 million necessary to restore and renovate the painting and its building.

The painting, 52 feet high and 400 feet in circumference, and its accompanying three-dimensional diorama have been closed to the public since 1978 for the restoration work.

In preparation for its reopening in June 1982, a team of artists has been repainting faded and worn areas and painting new canvas used to repair rips. The delicate structural work that saved the painting already has been completed.

Cycloramas, which usually depict battle scenes, were popular in the early 1800s and enjoyed a resurgence shortly after the Civil War, but their popularity suffered with the advent of photography.

The Atlanta painting, a tourist attraction for most of this century, was produced by a team of 15 artists who worked on it for 18 months, beginning in 1885.

It was given to the city in 1898 and was moved in the mid-1930s to its current home, a building in Grant Park, where a leaky roof damaged the painting.

Layers of dust, mold, oil and water marks were cleaned off and more than 700 holes and tears, ranging from tiny imperfections to rips several feet long, were repaired, said Robert Jones, coordinator of the restoration project.

"IT LOOKS REALLY beautiful now," Jones said. "The colors are coming out better than I'm sure anyone can remember in a lot of years."

The restoration work involves about 14 artists and is supervised by Gustav Berger, an Austrian-born expert based in New York. Berger had to develop ways to canvas so it could be cleaned and restored. Workers tested equipment and techniques on a giant model before attempting to move the painting itself, Jones said.

Cyclorama official Tom Ferguson said much of the work "is applying basic restoration work on a grand scale. Gustav is noted for taking unusual projects, things that other people consider hopeless."

Among the difficulties that had to be overcome was the removal of a coat of linseed oil applied to the canvas to protect it by Works Progress Administration artists during the 1930s, Jones said.

Tom Stevens, chief financial analyst for the city, said funds for the restoration came from several sources: $4.5 million from a revenue bond issue to be repaid from operating funds of the Cyclorama over 15 years; $2 million from anonymous donors; $1.5 million from the state Department of Natural Resources; and $1.3 million from the city.

WHEN THE Cyclorama is reopened, visitors will view the cylindrical painting and the diorama from about four dozen theater seats built on a raised, rotating platform in the center of the 10-sided building.

Beaumont leaders trying to paint new image

BEAUMONT, Texas (AP) — The city fathers are tired of this coastal city's national image as a "heavily industrialized, dirty little town," and they're painting a new picture of an international business center nestled among the aromatic piney woods of East Texas.

In the past, Beaumont has been nationally known as a city of smokestacks and troublesome labor unions, says Chamber of Commerce president Dennis Sederholm.

Beaumont's new image — or at least the image Sederholm and others want to project — consists of residential areas amidst the fragrant piney woods, a skilled and sophisticated work force that can meet the demands of industry and an inland port with space enough for international trade.

"COME TO WHERE the future is. Come to Beaumont, Texas," urges a promotional videotape prepared by the Chamber of Commerce. "This is the city that heads Money magazine's list of top ten growth towns for the 1980s. This is the city of the unexpected: major industry coexists peacefully with some of the cleanest air in Texas. In fact, most of the air pollution in Beaumont is the subtle fragrance of the surrounding pine forests..."

This is the Beaumont being touted by the Chamber of Commerce and the city's Economic Development Foundation. Both organizations are changing their sales pitch to prospective business and industry.

"Our national image is not good," Sederholm says. "People feel like Beaumont is a heavily industrialized, dirty little town.

"Once we get people down here they are amazed," he contends. "They see the trees, the cleanliness. We buck the image."

WHEN COMPARED with an extremely industrialized area, such as Gary, Ind., Beaumont has a lot going for it, Sederholm says.

"We have to make an effort to change our image. We have to let them know that Beaumont is a good business town, that people can make money here and that they already are succeeding."

Economic Development Foundation director Jack Cawthorne believes, like Sederholm, that attracting new industry here has been hampered by misconceptions about the town.

"If we can get industry leaders into the city and expose them to our educational, business and city leaders, then they like it," Cawthorne says of his recruitment efforts. "Our big problem is getting them to Beaumont.

"The problem we have to address is we have an image that over the years has gotten distorted," he says. "Some of the bad things we hear happened 20 years ago. And we know damn well it's changed since then."

TO BACK HIS contentions, Cawthorne and his group have collected information that lays some of the old stereotypes to rest, he says.

Recently released results of a labor study of the city shows that not every business is staffed by union members, Cawthorne said. Many businessmen believe that a major plant in the area eventually would be unionized, he added.

City flooding direct result of urbanization

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — Flooding is a direct result of urbanization — the construction of parking lots, streets, homes and businesses — but cities can and should do something about it, a Texas A&M report says.

The recommendations came from A&M's Texas Water Resources Institute.

"The yards of mud-soaked carpet shown on the six o'clock news may well be directly related to the number of acres of pasture paved or the square feet of buildings constructed miles upstream from the actual flooding," said the institute's November report.

Before development, the report said, pastures woods and fields soaked up much of the rain that fell and slowed any excess that ran off.

"Developed areas, however, shed water quickly and absorb little or none. Modern buildings and their surroundings remove water as quickly and efficiently as possible. Rooftop gutters channel rainfall rather than dispersing it around buildings. Curbs and gutters along city streets direct runoff into underground storm sewers rather than allowing it to flow into roadside ditches," the report said.

As a result, it said, rainfall moves out of a developed area two or three times as fast as it did when the area was in its natural state.

"Unfortunately, the 'improved' drainage affects the amount and speed of water moving downstream," the report said.

It said an institute-funded study by Larry Mays, a civil engineering professor at the University of Texas at Austin, had resulted in recommendations for decreasing or slowing urban runoff.

"Cities can require the use of porous paving materials, on-site detention of rainwater and the elimination of drain spouts connected to storm sewers. They can also prohibit the use of curbs and gutters in areas where roadside drainage would be practical," the institute said.

On-site detention of run-off customarily involves the use of ponds but the institute said parking lots can be designed to release water gradually and buildings can be designed to hold water temporarily on rooftops.

The institute also said drain spouts can be disconnected or eliminated and replaced by splash blocks or crushed stone to prevent erosion and disperse water.

Subdivision requirements are the way cities can attack the run-off problem, the institute said.

"Your city should ... take firm regulatory ..."

His rare disease doesn't stop him from planning future

By STEVE TWEDT
Longview Daily News

LONGVIEW, Wash. (AP) — Christopher Gambaro, 6, wants to be a minister when he grows up, just like his uncle.

Since he's still a first grader, Christopher is a long way from his dream. And he must overcome his own special obstacles.

Christopher has granulocyte chemotasis, a defect in the cellular wall of his white blood cells which makes him unable to fight bacteria. Even a small cut can mean serious trouble for him — recently, a bump on the head, too small to be detected easily, resulted in his being hospitalized for two weeks.

The disease is rare — there are fewer than a half dozen known cases in the United States. So while Christopher is battling for his life, he is making medical history.

The experience cost him his lower right leg last year.

"I had a germ in my leg," Christopher explained. "I was scared because I thought there was a monster in my leg, but it was only a bug. And it didn't hurt when they took it off because I was sound asleep."

Few children his age know life as Christopher does. Since he was 10 days old, he has made an average of two trips a month to Children's Orthopedic Hospital and University Hospital in Seattle, where doctors examine him for even the slightest change in his condition.

"He's been poked, prodded, tied down and dehumanized," says Christopher's father, Mario, an apprentice pipefitter. "I think he has a right to be angry."

Christopher does get angry. He shows it when he has to stay at the hospital for a week or when he has to field endless questions from curious well-wishers. Mario and his wife, Linda, feel the pressure, too.

"You're scared," says Mrs. Gambaro. "You feel guilty."

Arms talks promising difficulty

By ROBERT C. TOTH
Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON — Even if negotiators get beyond an initial Soviet rebuff to President Reagan's proposals, the Intermediate Nuclear Forces talks opening Monday in Geneva will quickly run into difficult problems on how to count missiles and verify compliance with any new treaty.

"Until now, arms agreements have only limited what could be easily verified by spy satellites and other over-the-border methods," a senior Defense Department official said. "But now it is absolutely essential that we go beyond these, to cooperative measures that extend up to, although not necessarily including, on-site inspection."

THIS NEW DEMAND arises in part because the missile systems to be covered are mobile and have the capability of firing more than one missile, in contrast to single-shot, fixed-base systems of the past.

Insistence on more and better verification measures — "emphasizing openness and creativity, rather than secrecy and suspicion," as President Reagan said in his Nov. 18 foreign policy speech — also are rooted in a less trusting attitude toward Soviet compliance with unpoliced treaties. This is a result of chemical and biological military incidents, such as the "yellow rain" toxin found in Southeast Asia in the past two years.

A final factor is that the Soviets have shown themselves to be more willing to agree to "on-site inspections" and other policing techniques than generally has been believed.

Verification issues will not immediately dominate the Soviet-American negotiations. Each side is likely to try initially to impress the anxious Europeans with their sincerity on arms reductions before getting down to hard bargaining.

WASHINGTON EXPECTS THAT, despite some promising statements, the Soviets will drag out the talks toward December, 1983, when the first of 572 U.S. ballistic and cruise missiles are to be deployed in five North Atlantic Treaty Organization nations. Such a Soviet tactic probably would be designed to play for time to erode the political and economic will of the NATO alliance to proceed with deployment while the talks are under way.

Reagan's offer to trade these 572 "paper" missiles for about 610 Soviet missiles already in place was probably unacceptable to Moscow from the beginning. But Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev's response in Bonn last week, proposing "radical reduction" of nuclear arsenals in Europe, including removal of "hundreds" of Soviet missiles, does provide the basis for discussion.

In such discussions, verification issues will loom large and troublesome, particularly in controlling the Soviet SS-20 missile that is the prime source of NATO concern.

The SS-20 is fired form a huge multi-axle vehicle using a so-called "cold launch" technique that allows the launching tube to be reloaded and refired. Each of the 260 SS-20 launcher vehicles now rumbling around Soviet territory has at least two missiles in its train.

KEEPING TRACK OF the number of launchers, as well as the number of missiles (which need not always be close to the launchers), will be far more difficult than monitoring the 350 other intermediate Soviet missiles also targeted on Europe: the SS-4s and SS-5s, which are cumbersome, liquid-fueled and fixed to their sites, with no second-missile capability.

A "zero level" or total ban on intermediate missiles, as Reagan proposed, would be easier to monitor than a treaty that only sets a ceiling. Discovery of even one weapon would be a violation, whereas great care would have to be taken to avoid counting a mobile weapon more than once before charging a violation.

As a consequence, fewer verification measures would be required to police a "zero level" traty and those measures could be less intrusive on Soviet sovereignty and territory, U.S. officials said. They said they hoped this feature might prove attractive to Moscow.

However, even if the Soviets did accept a "zero level" treaty, the NATO alliance has agreed in preparation for the talks that some verification measures beyond the so-called "national technical means" — i.e., satellites and distant eavesdropping — will be required to monitor any agreement, informed sources said.

THE LEAST COOPERATION expected from the Soviets would be to assemble all their mobile SS-20 launcher vehicles in pre-designated areas for a satellite picture-taking session, one official said.

Counting the number of missiles could require inspection of depots to insure that extra SS-20s are not being assembled in illegal numbers.

The United States also may seek an end to the coding of telemetry from SS-20 test flights. At present, the SS-20 is the most heavily encrypted Soviet missile, with the data that is radioed back so disguised that U.S. experts cannot put together as accurate a picture of its capabilities and characteristics as they have of other Soviet missiles.

During the big power-sparring that has led up to the Geneva talks, Brezhnev said the Kremlin believes "national means" of verification are sufficient for any intermediate nuclear weapons treaty. But "some other forms" of monitoring also might be worked out, he added.

What additional verification means the Soviets envisage is unknown, but in past negotiations on nuclear test bans, they have been more forthcoming than generally has been recognized.

Begins plans meeting of Cabinet in hospital

By ARTHUR MAX
Associated Press Writer

JERUSALEM (AP) — Prime Minister Menachem Begin, in good condition following surgery for a fractured bone in his thigh, plans to hold an important Cabinet meeting in his hospital suite Sunday on European participation in the Sinai peacekeeping force, aides said.

Begin's spokesman Uri Porat said Begin, 68, was handling urgent business within hours after emerging from the recovery room Friday morning. A secretary in his office said Begin was "driving us crazy" with instructions by telephone.

Porat said special arrangements will be made in the hospital suite, where Begin was previously confinedpfor heart trouble, to hold the Cabinet session on whether the Europeans take part in theSinai force.

THE ISSUE THREATENS to strain Israul's relations witx Washington, which sponsored the force and was urging Israel to accept European troops despite what Israel call's Europe's "unacceptable" conditions.

Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir rushed to Washington to meet Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. on Friday and planned to be back for the unusual Cabinet session with his report.

Begin is known to favor barring Britain, France, Italy and the Netherlands from joining U.S. and other troops in the 2,500-man force, but government officials said Shamir's report on Sunday could be decisive.

Begin's presence at the Cabinet session could make a difference since his prestige and persuasion often carries the rest of his ministers, a Cabinet source said.

The Israelis are leaning toward rejection of the Europeans because they linked their participation with the European policy for resolving the Palestinian problem. The Reagan administration also was disappointed with the European position but0wanted as broad a force as possible.

Begin "rested well" during the night, said Dr. Shmuel Pinhas, medical director of Hadassah Hospital. "His medical condition is good. We have not seen any unexpected or undesirable developments," he said.

Begin slipped and fell on the wet floor of his bathroom Thursday evening and was carried to bed by two bodyguards who were summoned by his wife Alyza.

THE FALL BROKE the collis femuri, a small bone in the neck of the femur where it joins the hip. Pinxas said the surgery was routine and went smoothly.

Begin fell in almost the same spot where his predecessor, Yitzhak Rabin, slipped and broke his collar bone several years ago. "We're replacing the bathtub," quipped Porat.

The Israeli leader was expected to stay in the hospital for two weeks and will be confined to his home for two or three weeks more, said his personal physician, cardiologist Mervyn Gottesman. After that he said, Begin should be able to walk unaided.

School no laughing matter

DALLAS (AP) — Work is no laughing matter.

At least that's what one administrator of the Wilmer-Hutchins Indpendent School District seems to be implying.

The laughter has gotten out of hand at the administration building and assistant superintendent for personnel Eddie Washington warned that "office congregating and merriment will not be tolerated in the future."

In a memo this week, Washington said "loud talking, laughing, loitering and excessive walking are not mannerisms of true professionals" and should be stopped.

He warned that "future correspondence will be individual and more severe" if employees continue the practices.

Washington declined to comment on the memo.

"It is not my function to tell you why that memo was written," Washington told a reporter.

However, Superintendent Alvin Brossette Jr. said he believed Washington's main concern was with keeping a businesslike atmosphere in the building.

"If you are in one building whooping, hollering and laughing, obviously somebody is being disturbed," Brossette said.

Kimchi: Major Korean ritual

By EDWIN Q. WHITE
Associated Press Writer

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Stacked twice as high as a man's head, tons of Chinese cabbage and giant radishes fill Seoul's Yongsan Market, one of the biggest in South Korea.

Housewives, bundled up against the fall cold, press through the mass of trucks, handcarts, A-frame backpacks and people to do their most important shopping of the year. On a smaller scale, the scene is repeated across the country as the season for preparing winter kimchi reaches its busy climax.

NO SELF-RESPECTING household can be without kimchi, a spicy combination of pickled vegetables unique to Korea.

The idea is to prepare sufficient quantities to last through the end of March when fresh vegetables again become readily available.

ALONG WITH THE cabbage and radish, other ingredients include red pepper, onions, garlic, ginger, meats, tiny shrimp, oysters, chestnuts, pine nuts, walnuts, ginko nuts, sesame seed, anchovies and salt.

They are all mixed together in an elaborate process, called kimjang, that can take several days. Style and taste can vary according to regional background and personal taste, but, by western standards, it usually comes out hot. Kimchi is served throughout a Korean meal, usually with rice.

The amount of kimchi put up for the winter depends on the size of the family and the number of guests expected.

Farming officials say a family of five previously required 100 Chinese cabbages as a kimchi base for the winter, but that quantity now has decreased. They say the westernization of the Korean diet along with widespread use of storage sheds in farming districts to protect vegetables during the winter has lessened the importance of kimjang.

BUT YOU COULDN'T tell it at the Yongsan Kimjang Market this week.

"Business is good. The crip (a type of white turnip) was good this year," said one seller, standing in front of his stock of cabbage that came all the way from Cheju Island off the south coast. "Yesterday one cabbage was 300 won (about 43 cents). Today they're going for 350 won (about 51 cents) and maybe tomorrow higher."

Administration admits peaceful atoms possible

By WILLIAM GIANDONI
Copley News Service

WASHINGTON — The United States finally seems convinced that Latin America really is only interested in atoms for peace.

Recognition of the fact that not one of the other American republics wants to build an atomic bomb and much less engage in nuclear warfare is belated.

Argentina and Brazil, the two countries whose nuclear power programs are most advanced, have been saying so for years.

Yet Washington chose not to believe them, although there was no reason not to.

Until the advent of the Reagan administration, the United States persisted in lumping all countries seeking nuclear power plants together as "proliferation risks."

Now, though, a new U.S. policy of distinguishing between countries interested in the peaceful uses of nuclear energy and those that want to make bombs is being spelled out.

James L. Malone, an assistant secretary of state, told a U.S. Senate subcommittee recently that "we must be able to demonstrate that we understand the legitimate security concerns, including the vital energy security concerns, of other nations."

Then he went on to touch a point that seems to have been forgotten in the United States.

Latin America does not see the United States "as a predictable and reliable partner for peaceful nuclear cooperation."

Few Americans seem to remember that Brazil turned away from the United States and to West Germany on nuclear matters after the United States indicated it might not be able to sell Brazil enriched uranium for a plant Westinghouse was building in that country. That was in July 1974.

Real damage was done the United States then, with the loss of contracts that U.S. manufacturers expected for additional reactors throughout Latin America, and to the U.S. reputation as a supplier of enriched uranium.

Mexico, for example, now is seeking bids for possibly as many as 20 nuclear power plants, from Canada, France, Sweden and West Germany, as well as the United States. Along with the reactors, Mexico reportedly wants enrichment and reprocessing facilities, so as to avoid over-dependence on foreign suppliers of fuel.

Argentina, whose nuclear plant has been generating electric power for years now, avoided the problem by not using "the Westinghouse system" and developing its own with Canadian and West German help.

U.S. manufacturers reportedly are hoping to win Mexico's favor. The nuclear program there could be worth up to $25 billion. But they have to dispel fears generated by past U.S. unreliability and unpredictability.

Soviet arms negotiator is tough bargaining German

BONN, West Germany (AP) — The chief Soviet negotiator at the forthcoming arms talks with the United States in Geneva is a youthful, talented career diplomat with a reputation as a tough bargainer and expert on German affairs.

U.S. diplomats in Washington say Yuli Alexandrovitch Kvitsinsky, with his fluent German and knowledge of the West, may well prove a potent adversary and effective bargainer even though he does not have a broad background in arms negotiations.

They are especially apprehensive that Kvitsinsky may attempt to go beyond the negotiating process by appealing directly through television and newspapers to European public opinion, an arena in which they say he has proved his effectiveness.

Some Western observers speculated that Kvitsinsky might have been tapped for the Geneva assignment because of his awareness of how the issue of medium-range nuclear missiles affects West German public opinion and Bonn's relationship with the United States.

West Germany is a key element in pacifist demonstrations that have been sweeping Western Europe. Until a few months ago, Kvitsinsky served as the deputy chief of mission at the Soviet Embassy here. He had held the post since June 1979.

Bonn has pressed hard for an agreement between the two superpowers on an end to the arms race, especially in medium-range nuclear-armed missiles aimed at European targets.

Western officials and diplomats remember the bespectacled, 45-year old Kvitsinsky as a talented administrator and apparent favorite of Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko.

In Moscow, a senior foreign ministry official who asked not to be identified referred to Kvitsinsky as "one of the most capable and fastest-rising men" in the Kremlin's diplomatic service.

Colleagues called him one of the best-informed members of the Soviet embassy staff in West Germany.

Western officials here, who also asked not to be named, described Kvitsinsky as a tough bargainer who schools himself thoroughly in all aspects of an issue before negotiations begin.

He won that reputation a decade ago during the negotiations which led to the 1972 Four Power Agreement on the status of Berlin.

West Germany's Der Spiegel magazine said Kvitsinsky, then assigned to the Soviet embassy in East Berlin, was suspected of having served as a conduit through which Gromyko passed instructions to his negotiators.

The magazine quoted unnamed West German officials as saying Kvitsinsky could take credit for the Kremlin's success in leaving vague certain aspects of West Berlin's legal relationship to West Germany.

As with many Soviet officials with limited previous public exposure, little is known of Kvitsinsky's background and personal life.

The Soviet foreign ministry said Kvitsinsky joined the diplomatic service in 1959 after his graduation from the State Institute of International Relations in Moscow.

Wolfe writes about his interests

By PHIL THOMAS
AP Books Editor

NEW YORK (AP) — In writer Tom Wolfe's world, things always fall into place — even if they do so by accident.

For example, Wolfe might be a teacher now rather than a writer with 10 books behind him, among them several best sellers such as "The Right Stuff."

Looking back, the soft-spoken Wolfe recalls that "I'd always been interested in writing, but I also figured I had to make a living, so I decided to become a teacher. But while I was working on my doctorate it came to me that I'd been too long in graduate school and needed a break.

"I went out and got a job on a newspaper. And that was it. I loved it. I stayed, and I never looked back."

DURING HIS NEWSPAPERING days, usually working as a general assignment reporter — "the best job on a paper" — Wolfe also wrote pieces on the side for magazines.

"About that time," says the 50-year-old Wolfe, "there was a fad among some magazines to do features on people who either were on their way up or were 'pop.' Somehow these magazines noticed my work and it wasn't long before I was being called 'a pop journalist on the way up.'

"All this came about on the eve of the publication in 1965 of my first book, 'The Kandy-Kolored Tangerine-Flake Streamline Baby.' Usually collections by unknown writers don't do well, but, thanks to the attention I'd been getting, mine was a best seller. And, since I wasn't married then and didn't need much, that gave me the money to become a full-time free-lance writer."

Wolfe, now married and living with his wife and their daughter in New York City, notes that his new book, "From Bauhaus To Our House," had an accidental sort of birth. He traces it back to an earlier book of his, "The Painted Word."

"In 'The Painted Word,'" says Wolfe, "which, by the way, started out as a one-page feature and expanded into a book, my theme was that much contemporary painting exists only to illustrate theories.

"THAT CAUSED SOME controversy, and I began to get letters from architects and those in the music field to take a look at their fields. I dropped the idea for a book about music because I found that much contemporary music is so abstract, so dry, so removed from emotional life that it just kills audiences and it bored me.

"So I looked into architecture and found that, like much modern painting, a lot of contemporary architecture exists only to illustrate theories and has substantially nothing to do with life in America. I expanded on this and what was going to be an article became a book."

Wolfe, a native of Richmond, Va., and holder of a doctorate in American Studies from Yale, says he is continually surprised by the success of his books since "people keep telling me that the things I write about have no commercial possibilities. And, yet, they seem to sell.

"Perhaps it's because I write about what interests me. Everything I write about comes out of an immediate journalistic interest. And, often, what I'm writing about expands from a small interest into a larger one. 'The Right Stuff' started out as a look at the history of rockets and grew into a look at physical courage. I've never sat down and said 'where can I find a big topic to explore?' The topics find me."

WOLFE'S BOOKS TO DATE are non-fiction "in which I tried to bring whatever I was writing about alive through the use of scenes and dialogue and other techniques that you ordinarily expect to find in a novel."

Now, he says, he is working on a work of fiction based on journalism.

"What I want to do is write a novel along the lines of Thackeray's 'Vanity Fair.' It will be set in contemporary New York City and it will be based on reporting. What I find out about the relationships between the races here, on the rather amazing collection of people from different countries who live in this town. These things interest me."

This woman's bird can really talks

Five-year-old Alex the parrot is no feather-brained fowl, but an avian linguist of sorts that correctly wields a four-word vocabulary.

According to Purdue University research assistant Irene M. Pepperberg, Alex has learned such words as "paper," "key," "wood," "pasta" and "walnut." He can also identify triangles, squares and pentagons, and after eating or drinking hollers "cork!" just like a discriminating diner checking the quality of the wine (although in Alex's case, pieces of cork are used to clean his beak).

He doesn't climb but saves those who do

By HANNS NEUERBOURG
Associated Press Writer

ZERMATT, Switzerland (AP) — Siegfried Stangier is a lowlander who has never climbed the 14,690-foot-high Matterhorn. But he believes he knows the world's most photographed mountain better than any among the 100,000-odd people who have made the ascent since Edward Whymper was the first to reach the top in 1865.

Climbing mountains "does not fascinate" him, he said in an interview. But helping climbers in distress to safety does, because he enjoys the thrill of the "calculated risk, the steady probing of one's limits" in almost 10,000 helicopter flight hours.

THE 42-YEAR old, German-born Stangier, who at the age of 17 failed a high-altitude test and was still a teen-ager when he taught others how to fly Luftwaffe choppers, is No. 1 in the exclusive set of Switzerland's daring Alpine rescue pilots.

He has made 174 life-saving missions, and has 1,106 other mercy flights to his credit since he joined the volunteers of the Swiss Air Rescue Service.

STANGIER WAS the first overseas pilot to win the American "Helicopter Heroism Award."

In a recently published book, "Retter, die von Himmel kommen," Stangier recounts for the first time, and in hair-raising detail, his feats and fears while performing an unpaid job which, as he puts it, carries "a certain degree of danger."

He says he hopes the book will be a warning against recklessness, the cause of most fatal mountain accidents. Stangier has recovered the bodies of 181 dead climbers, transporting them to the morgue in red, rubber-lined bags which are kept on board the rescue helicopters.

HE REMEMBERS the young American who fell to his death climbing in jeans and tennis shoes. Or the West German lawyer who was not roped to a fellow climber, but survived a fall. Or the skiers who left staked-out slopes in search of new snow, and died under avalanches. Or the Englishman who wanted his 8-year old son to become the youngest conqueror of the Matterhorn.

Stangier searched in vain for father and son on several of his more than 1,000 flights around the famous mountain where 11 other people also have vanished in recent years. All told, an estimated 400 people have died on the Matterhorn.

WORKDAYS are usually less spectacular for Stangier, who is chief pilot of Air Zermatt, a company whose helicopters fly cement to high-altitude construction sites, serve as ski lifts for well-heeled tourists, haul garbage from mountain lodges and occasionally fly injured cows to veterinarians in the valley.

Even a routine workday can have its hazards, though.

Stangier suffered vertebral fractures recently in his first accident ever. A faulty fuel gauge left the helicopter piloted by a friend without power and the craft plunged 100 feet, crashing near its base.

STANGIER SAYS he plans to remain "on the frontline" of rescue flying for another 10 to 15 years, estimating the work carries "a risk factor just below that of a formula-one racing-car driver."

"Almost every year one (of the Swiss rescue pilots) has had bad luck," he notes in his book. "How many pilots do we have in Switzerland who do our job — 12 to 15?"

ONE SYSTEM STANDS ABOVE THE REST. VERTICALLY. SIMPLY. MITSUBISHI.

Was 849.95
now 769.95

This is the system destined to turn the audio world on its ear.
If you find that hard to believe, take another look. What you see is the interPlay X-10™. The world's first vertical format complete audio system.
No trick photography here. The way you see it is the way you play it. Vertically.
Play a record. Play a cassette. Play the tuner. Any way you play it, it's Mitsubishi.
The vertical linear track turntable allows the X-10 to sit on a small bookshelf. It needs only 10" of shelf depth.
And we've integrated an AM/FM stereo tuner and cassette deck.
Hook up the speakers, plug it in, and turn it on. The interPlay X-10 is stereo at its upright best.

These aerial views of a San Bernardino neighborhood depict the rebuilding of the area one year after a fire destroyed it. The photo on the left was taken the day after the fire swept through and destroyed 286 houses. Four people died in the fire. One year later most of the homes have been rebuilt, photo on right, by those who were burned out.

Plane spots two members of sinking cargo ship

HAMILTON, Bermuda (AP) — A rescue plane spotted two men clinging to an overturned lifeboat today in the Atlantic Ocean east of here, members of a 24-man crew that abandoned a West German cargo ship reported sinking in stormy seas.

The American tanker Chancellorsville, which was in the area, was expected to pick up the men and then continue searching for the 22 others, the Coast Guard said in New York.

Coast Guard spokesman Lt. John Frost said the planes noticed a large oil slick is the area. He said three Coast Guard aircraft and a U.S. Navy plane would continue searching for survivors.

THE COAST GUARD received an urgent radio message Thursday saying the 450-foot, 7,500-ton vessel was sinking about 215 miles east of Bermuda and that the 24 people aboard were getting into life rafts. There was no further communication with the ship, officials said.

Coast Guard spokesman Lt. John Frost said a plane had reported sighting a flare in the vicinity on Thursday.

In another sea drama, two Canadian military helicopters battled gales and rescued 26 people from a freighter foundering off Nova Scotia on Thursday night.

Coast Guard Senior Chief Petty Officer Donald Severy said Thursday night a Navy search plane had seen a flare earlier in the day off Bermuda where the freighter Elma Tres had been reported sinking in "storm conditions."

Waves in the area were running 12 to 15 feet with wind gusting to nearly 80 mph, Severy said.

A spokesman for Bermuda Harbor Radio said it was not clear why the Elma Tres began to sink, although the radio message received from the ship said its cargo was shifting.

"WE HAVE currently engaged or about to be engaged in the search three merchant vessels, two Coast Guard aircraft and later in the day a Coast Guard helicopter," a harbor radio spokesman said today. "They will be searching 200 miles east of Bermuda where the 24 men abandoned the vessel early yesterday affternoon and conditions for a search are quite favorable. But we have no reports of any sightings so far."

The ship, which is internationally registered as Corinna Drescher, left the southern Argentine port city of Puerto Madryn on Nov. 9 with a cargo of fruit juice, leather and wool. It was bound for Boston and scheduled to arrive Sunday.

Off Nova Scotia, meanwhile, a Canadian Coast Guard helicopter lifted 13 of the crew of the grain freighter Euro Princess from the stricken vessel's heaving stern section just before midnight Thursday, nearly nine hours after the 570-foot, 15,800-ton ship grounded on a sandbar off the eastern tip of Sable Island, 180 miles east of Halifax.

A second helicopter rescued the rest of the crew early today.

MOBIL OIL Canada Ltd. said 44 of 62 crew members had been removed from the 7,220-ton oil drilling rig Rowan Juneau. Mobil said the move was taken as a precaution should the wreck of the Euro Princess break free and drift toward the rig, a half mile from where the ship foundered.

Reg Towers, a spokesman for the government agency Transport Canada, said the freighter's lifeboats were washed overboard by the waves.

The Canadian coast guard ship Alert was expected to reach the Euro Princess early today. The freighter, registered in Liberia, was en route to the Black Sea after calling at Montreal.

Sable Island, 28 miles long and one mile wide, was one of the most notorious navigational hazards on the North American East Coast from the first days of European exploration of the continent.

More than 500 ships wrecked on the sandspit, better known recently for the oil and natural gas potential of the ocean floor around it.

Boeing says military contracts won't offset slump

SEATTLE (AP) — Weapons and military aircraft contracts are increasing at The Boeing Co., but analysts warn that the boom in defense work won't offset the slump in commercial jet sales.

"Military sales will be a very meaningful part of Boeing's business, but I doubt if it will ever be more than 20 percent," Hans Pickert, an analyst with E.F. Hutton in New York said Wednesday.

"That's something you can't dismiss," Pickert added. But commercial jet sales constitute Boeing's cash crop, and sales in 1982 are expected to drop about 14 percent, T.A. Wilson, president of the aerospace giant, said earlier this week..

Programs like the Air Launched Cruise Missile are "nice to have," but a contract of a few billion dollars stretched over 10 years "isn't of a size to have more than a moderate impact on an entity that is the size of Boeing. This is a big company," said Wolfgang Demisch of Morgan Stanley & Co.

BOEING'S SALES revenues in 1980 totaled $9.52 billion, with pre-tax profits at a record $1 billion.

Sales this year are about equal to last year's, but profits for the third quarter of 1981 took their first dive in five years.

"It seems unlikely that 1983 earnings will return to the level of 1980," added John MacK-enzie, an analyst with Foster & Marshall Inc. in Seattle. Even if airliner sales pick up, Boeing is in the midst of two new aircraft programs — the 757 and 767 — and startup costs will take a big bite out of profits, MacKenzie said.

Military sales accounted for about $1.9 billion a year to Boeing for the last three years, based on the products delivered each year, said spokesman Jim Grafton. The figure for 1981 may be a little higher, he said.

EVEN IF SALES and orders do increase, the impact on the profit side of the income statement from military contracts is not that great, said Pickert. Once production is in full swing, "you make about 4½ percent after taxes," he said. That's lower than the profit margin on mature programs like the 747 and 727, but higher than margins for programs just getting under way.

But MacKenzie notes that military business is good "because it hires a lot of people."

Boeing's major military contracts include:

—A $318 million congressional appropriation for 705 cruise missiles through fiscal year 1981, and $90 million for development. The first missile was rolled out Tuesday from a new Kent facility, where Boeing expects to produce between 3,000 and 4,000 missiles over at least seven years. The workforce on the project is expected to be about 1,500.

—Congress capitulated to pressure from President Reagan and approved a sale of five Airborne Warning and Control System planes to Saudi Arabia for delivery in 1985. The U.S. Defense Department has ordered 34 AWACS planes with deliveries beginning in March 1977. Total value of the hardware side of the contract is $3.9 billion. About 1,500 people work on AWACS, and Boeing plans to add another 400 next year.

—The Boeing Military Aircraft Co. is developing the electronic "offensive avionics system" for the B-1B bombers in addition to providing the controls and displays for the defensive and tail-warning systems. Boeing expects to have 2,400 workers on the B-1B program at its peak at the end of 1982. The company's share of business on the aircraft is expected to be about $2 billion.

It's not difficult to see which way the wind blows around Middletown, R.I. This old silo on the Alex Simmons farm has stood up, more or less, to many a windy winter over the years. The betting around Middletown is that it will stand up against at least one more — maybe.

He tests pyramid power by moving into one

GURNEE, Ill. (AP) — A six-story pyramid rising out of the plains near Gurnee is being gilded, the better to resemble the Great Pyramid of Cheops in Egypt, its owner says.

Artisans have begun applying paper-thin, 23-karat strips of gold leaf to the Pyramid House of Gold, which when complete will be a wood-framed, five-bedroom, suburban home for contractor James Onan and his family.

If the test strips withstand winter weather, the entire 15,000-square-foot surface will be double-gilded next year.

Onan began building the one-ninth-scale reproduction of the Cheops pyramid in 1978 because he's been fascinated by the ancient shape for years.

Having previously built several models, the highest of which was 14 feet tall, he decided to test the mysteries of so-called "pyramid power" by using himself, his wife and five children as the subjects of pyramid experiments.

The gold, which alone will cost $500,000, supposedly will intensify "by 10 times" the purported powers of pyramids, the 44-year-old Onan said in a telephone interview.

The interview was cut short because after some minutes Onan's voice could barely be heard. That fadeout is just one of the mysterious things which Onan said had happened since the pyramid was built.

"I have 10 lines coming in here and the phone company has checked, but there's nothing wrong. I can hear callers but after a while my voice fades off and they can't hear me any more."

"Believers" say that pyramids can prevent food spoilage, sharpen razor blades, speed healing, improve wine and take the bitterness from coffee, as well as deepen meditation, Onan said.

So when the pyramid is finished next year, Onan and his family will undergo a battery of medical tests and move into the four upstairs floors of residential space.

They'll be able to conduct pyramid research under controlled conditions "for the first time," Onan said. Plants and laboratory animals also will be subject of experiments.

Strict security, and water, surround the pyramid, which measures 85 feet per side at its base and is 54 feet tall. Guard dogs patrol the island on which it sits. An electrified fence and a burglar-alarm system complete the picture of impregnability.

"I'm not really qualified to explain or interpret what's happening. We'd like to see a university that has the know-how come in and do these experiments."

Onan added, "Some people walk inside and say they can feel an energy. I don't feel it, myself."

Other mysterious happenings include the appearance inside the pyramid of a natural mineral spring. Water tanks burst at the seams far below normal pressure levels and plywood de-laminated. "You can't prove those things are caused by the pyramid, but it sure is curious," Onan said.

Medical students find it easier in Mexico

By STEVE BREWER
Associated Press Writer

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — For three years, Ralph Mayberry tried to get into dental school in the United States. Each year, he was turned down. The fourth year, he went to Mexico.

"I decided I didn't want to wait any more," Mayberry said. "I had two friends in Chihuahua already and I went down there and changed from dentistry to medicine. I haven't regretted it at all."

MAYBERRY, 32, attends the medical school at the Autonomous University of Ciudad Juarez. The Juarez school is in the downtown section of the bustling Mexican city across the Rio Grande from El Paso.

"I transferred here from the school in Chihuahua in January," he said. "This school has got a lot of advantages for Americans. For one thing, you can live in El Paso. For another, you can do your last three semesters at a hospital in the United States and get credit for it."

MAYBERRY'S story has become a common one in Mexico, where thousands of American medical students go to complete their education.

Because of the difficulty in gaining admission to the U.S. medical schools, more and more Americans are going elsewhere to reach their goal of becoming physicians. Many Americans study in India, Pakistan, the Philippines and the Caribbean. But most go to Mexico.

The Juarez school is becoming more popular with students because of its proximity to El Paso. About 160 Americans now pay the $2,000-per-semester tuition at the medical school.

"MOST OF THEM have already tried in the United States, but it's so competitive because of the numbers that a lot of qualified students can't get in," Mayberry said. "Because of the way the system is, they just can't accept everybody."

Other students don't even try to enter American schools before heading for Mexico because they know their grades will not stand up against dazzling scholars in the competition for admission.

The students say there are advantages to Mexican training besides its availability.

"The big advantage of a Mexican school is that they give you a lot more liberty," Mayberry said. "You actually get to do surgery. In the states, because of all of the malpractice suits and stuff, you have to stand back and watch. We also get to do surgery on animals, and that's outlawed in the U.S."

WORN OUT SHOES

Many people get off to a good start in life. It is later that the rocks on the trail begin to bruise their feet. Soon they're stumbling along on bleeding soles — wondering why God doesn't smooth the road for them.

Spiritual renewal is God's answer to the rough roads of life. It is one more of the blessings that come to men through faithful religious worship.

The earnest church-goer cannot expect fewer rocks on the path ahead. Why then does he walk the trail with such a firm and steady gait?

Because no road is too rugged if we won't let our shoes wear out.

Methodist church will break ground for new fellowship center Sunday

St. Paul United Methodist Church, 4501 Thomason Ave., will break ground for a new fellowship center Sunday at the close of the 10:50 a.m. worship service.

The 14 charter members of the church who still reside in Midland will be honored at the service.

HBF Construction Co. of Midland will construct the building which will contain 6,059 square feet of floor space. Construction is to be completed within 120 days.

Chairman of the building committee is Clifford Chapman. A.A. Thomas is chairman of the church trustees. James C. Holman is pastor.

Charter members to be honored include Mrs. Henry Pudlo, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence E. Grant, Mrs. A.M. McClintock, Mrs. Bruce Bell, Mr. and Mrs. H.M. Walters, Mr. and Mrs. B.J. Wittenbach, Mr. and Mrs. Victor Kuykendall, Mr. and Mrs. Mike O'Connor and Mrs. Bob Massey.

Memorial carillon installed at church

First United Methodist Church, 305 N. Baird St., has installed a Coronation Carillon.

The carillon, manufacted by Schulmerich Carillons, is a gift from Mrs. F.D. Breddlove as an additional memorial to her late husband.

The carillon, with speakers for exterior sound placed in Breedlove Memorial Tower at the church, is programmed for the Westminster Hour Toll from 8 a.m. until 9 p.m. A hymn selection also will be heard at 8 a.m., noon, 5 p.m. and 9 p.m. It can be programmed for additional music in special seasons of the year.

The carillon consists of 25 miniature bell units of bronze bell metal which are struck by metal hammers, producing true bell tones almost inaudible to the human ear. The tones are amplified more than 100,000 times by specially-designed electronic equipment, producing true bell tones.

The carillon is equipped with a keyboard for playing at the organ with selector switches which will permit the bells to be heard within the building, solo or with the organ, as well as from the tower.

First Christian sets Advent services

First Christian Church, 1301 W. Louisiana Ave., has scheduled its Advents and Christmas services.

The Advent I service, entitled "Hanging of the Greens," will be held Sunday at 10:50 a.m. The second service, "An Advent Festival," will be Dec. 6 at 6:30 p.m. At 10:50 a.m. Dec. 13, the morning service of "White Gifts" is scheduled, followed at 7:30 p.m. by the second annual "Candlelight Carol Service." Advent will wrap up with a Family Night Christmas Dinner Dec. 20 at 6:30 p.m. The Christmas Eve candlelight service is scheduled Dec. 24 at 7 p.m.

Steve A. Edwards is senior minister at First Christian, with Steve M. Church associate minister. Darryl P. Knapp is director of music.

A.D. Players to perform Sunday

The A.D. Players will perform Sunday at 7 p.m. at the First Baptist Church, Louisiana Avenue and Garfield Street.

Now in their 14th season, the A.D. Players have performed in more than 20 states through the U.S. and Canada.

Using few if any props, this unique theatre company creates a variety of sets with a mere turn of a chair. Blending humor and drama, the players present scriptural principles found in the lives of characters such as Peter and Paul, Jonah, Mary and Martha, and some more contemporary characters.

Evangelist to preach at Life United

ODESSA — Evangelist Morris Sheats will be at Life Unlimited Christian Center, Interstate 20 at West County Road in Odessa, for both services Sunday.

Sheats, a former pastor of the Beverly Hills Baptist Church in Dallas, will preach at the 10:45 a.m. and 6:30 p.m. services.

A nursery will be provided at both services.

Don Palmer is pastor. For further information, contact 332-7641.

Church will present short program

The Antioch Baptist Missionary Society, 1400 E. Golf Course Road, will present a short program Sunday at 6:30 p.m. in the evening worship service.

The program will feature Mrs. W.L. McKinney as guest speaker. Pastor is the Rev. J.A. Mitchell. The public is invited.

Myrtle McClure honored by Trinity

Mrs. J. Hugh (Myrtle) McClure, a long-time Midland resident, was recently honored by the women of Trinity Presbyterian Church.

The celebration, proclaimed as "Myrtle McClure Day," was held in the Garden Room at Trinity, Louisiana Avenue and Andrews Highway.

A program recalling highlights of Mrs. McClure's life was presented and she was awarded an honorary life membership in the Women of the Church, Presbyterian Church, U.S. This award, presented by Mrs. Thomas Newbold, president of the Women of the Church at Trinity, was made in recognition of special and inspirational service.

Mrs. McClure and her husband, who live at 3303 W. Golf Course Road, originally joined the First Presbyterian Church, later moving to the new Presbyterian Church, Westminster. Westminster subsequently merged with another young Presbyterian church, St. Andrews, and it became the Trinity Presbyterian Church.

Mrs. McClure has served in offices including president of the Women of the Church, chairman for Personal Faith and Family Life and chairman for Leadership and Resources. She's been a prayer leader, a Circle chairman, a Bible moderator, a Christian Community Action representative to Church Women United and a Librarian.

She has also served as Church School superintendent, superintendent of Kindergarten and Nursery Department, chairman of the Adult Church School Department, Vacation Church School superintendent and teacher.

Mrs. McClure's other work includes serving the Midland Association of Churches as a member of the nominating committee, as vice president and as president. She served on the Presbytery's Women of the Church Board as Missions Interpretations chairman, and on the camping committee for Camp Chimney Springs.

Lutheran bishop gives ERA support

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Dr. David W. Preus, presiding bishop of The American Luthern Church, has announced his support of the proposed Equal Rights Amendment.

Writing in the Nov. 20 edition of the Luthern Standard, Preus said: "The Christian faith rejects any sort of caste system, whether based on race, color, sex, national origin or family lineage. We have not made that completely clear in either church or society."

Two conventions of the American Lutheran Church have declined to take a formal stand on the ERA.

Christian agency starts relief project for Poland

MONROVIA, Calif. (AP) — The Christian relief agency World Vision says it has embarked on a $300,000 emergency relief project in Poland.

World Vision is shipping infant formula, baby food, dry skim milk, beans, powdered soap and other supplies, Operations Director Paul Goddard said.

Goddard says the first shipments are targeted for Warsaw and the northeastern district of Suwalksi, one of Poland's coldest areas.

World Vision says Polish government and religious officials have welcomed the operation.

GOD KNOWS NO 'SUPER RACE'

The day will surely come when at God's command Jesus Christ will judge the secret lives of everyone, their inmost thought and motives; this is all part of God's great plan which I proclaim.

You Jews think all is well between yourselves and God because He gave His laws to you; you brag that you are His special friends. Yes, you know what He wants; you know right from wrong and favor the right because you have been taught His laws from earliest youth. You are so sure of the way to God that you could point it out to a blind man. You think of yourselves as beacon lights, directing men who are lost in darkness to God. You think that you can guide the simple and teach even children the affairs of God, for you really know His laws, which are full of all knowledge and truth.

Yes, you teach others--then why don't you teach yourselves? You tell others not to steal-do you steal? You say it is wrong to commit adultery--do you do it? You say, "Don't pray to idols," and then make money your god instead. You are so proud of knowing God's laws, but you dishonor Him by breaking them.

No wonder the Scriptures say that the world speaks evil of God because of you. Being a Jew is worth something if you obey God's laws; but if you don't, then you are no better off than the heathen. And if the heathen obey God's laws, won't God given them all the rights and honors He planned to give the Jews? In fact, those heathen will be much better off than you Jews who know so much about God and have His promises but don't obey His laws. For you are not real Jews just because you were born of Jewish parents or because you have gone through the Jewish initiation ceremony of circumcision. No, a real Jew is anyone whose heart is right with God. For God is not looking for those who cut their bodies in actual body circumcision, but He is looking for those with changed hearts and minds. Whoever has that kind of change in his life will get his praise from God, even if not from you.

Nine hundred-foot Jesus told Roberts to build hospital

By DAYTON BLAIR
Associated Press Writer

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — When Oral Roberts' City of Faith hospital opens here, it will have 294 beds, 33 doctors, more than 100 nurses — and 10 salaried "prayer partners" as part of what the hospital calls its "healing team."

"The Oral Roberts Ministries have always emphasized that medical science should work hand-in-hand with prayer. With the City of Faith we are offering medical science the best facilities to blossom and grow," said Roberts, a nationally known evangelist and the driving force behind the hospital.

THE FACILITY, which to date has cost $120 million, will open debt-free. It was built entirely through contributions of "partners" — those who follow Roberts' preaching.

At one point, when financing was a problem, Roberts wrote his partners that a 900-foot Jesus had appeared to him, lifted the City of Faith in his hand and told him the medical complex would be built.

WHEN THE hospital is completed — probably in 1984, at a total cost of $250 million — it will have 4,000 full-time employees, including 318 physicians and 900 nurses.

The prayer partners are meant to supply the spiritual side of healing, counseling and praying with patients up to the time they go into the preoperating room. The medical side will be supplied through what is being billed as the most advanced clinic and research center in the United States.

PART OF the admission form patients will receive is a section on church preference, activities and special interests. This information will be computerized and made available to the prayer partners, said William Luttrell, chief administrative officer of the hospital.

All prayer partners will be trained to pray with people in medical situations, Luttrell said. "They may receive counseling, but it will not be forced on the patients," he added.

MOST OF the prayer partners are in their 30s or 40s and come from a variety of denominations. Church affiliation was not a factor in selection, Luttrell said.

The ministers and volunteers will have offices in the hospital to be available to patients quickly. Luttrell said 10 salaried ministers are now on the staff and that volunteers would be trained to help the full-timers.

ROBERTS SEES the City of Faith as a natural extension of his ministries and of the university, located adjacent to the medical center in Tulsa. The medical center will provide experience for students in the university's schools of medicine, nursing, dentistry and theology.

Roberts believes in divine healing, and his commitment grows out of his experience as a youth with tuberculosis and stuttering.

AT 15 he had run away from home and was living with a former basketball coach at Atoka, Okla. During a basketball game he collapsed, hemorrhaging from the lungs, and was bedridden for five months.

"I needed to be healed," he said. "I believed I could be healed. I believed I could be cured."

Roberts said he was healed suddenly. He described it as an "explosion inside my lung." A short time later his stuttering ended and the bleeding stopped, he said.

ACCORDING to Roberts, all God's instruments should be used to heal the sick, so he advocates combining medicine with prayer.

"These counselors or 'prayer partners' will complete the healing team of physicians and nurses, providing complete health care to both the patients and their families," the hospital said in a statement.

The ultra-modern complex consists of a 60-story clinic, a 30-story hospital and a 20-story research and continuing education center.

THE RESEARCH tower will concentrate on preventive and curative medicine, primarily in areas of cancer, heart disease and problems of the aging.

Roberts wrote in his book, "I Will Rain Upon Your Desert," that after his oldest daughter, Rebecca, died in a 1977 plane crash, God told him to build the center, detailing even how the buildings should be designed.

"I had a strong impression the hospital should have 777 beds," Roberts wrote.

THE EVANGELIST plans to have 777 beds in use by 1988, although it is opening with only 294 — all that state agencies would approve.

SPIRITUAL ENERGY

Our busy, demanding lives sometime seem to drain us of all our energy. When it appears there's more than we can handle, we want to withdraw...to escape. God is a source of spiritual energy that is there for us each day – if we will ask Him

We invite you to join us in spritual renewal this Sunday. St. luke's is at 3011 West Kansas, one block west of Andrews Highway.

Girls of the Karen hilltribe rehearse Christmas hymns at a church in Northern Thailand earlier this year. Christian missionaries have had some success in converting minority groups, but their impact on ethnic Thais, who are buddhists, has been minimal.

People of Thailand's hills not easy Christian converts

By DENIS D. GRAY
Associated Press Writer

CHIANG MAI, Thailand (AP) — The hills of northern Thailand — inhabited by tribes who grow opium and worship a multitude of spirits — are a last evangelical battleground for Christian missionaries forced out of a vast tract of Asia by political turmoil in the last 35 years.

Come any Sunday evening to the Protestant Community Church in this lovely resort city at the edge of the hills and you will see them praying in the pews.

There are the Lewises, American Baptists expelled from Burma in 1966; the Bryants, Presbyterians who stayed through the 1948 Communist take-over in China; the Morse family, which over three generations staged a reluctant retreat through China, Tibet and Burma.

Chiang Mai and its surroundings have attracted a good percentage of the 1,000 Protestant missionaries based in Thailand, along with a lesser Roman Catholic contingent.

Most are Americans, although Western Europeans and Australians are also represented.

They are a tough breed, especially the old Asia hands. They have spent years living in remote villages, withstanding tropical diseases and trekking along trails shared by opium warlords and insurgents.

The Bible-wielding, conversion-bent among them have had limited success. By far the greatest impact of the missionaries has been through their development projects, or "good works," as they call them.

Missionaries have set up schools and clinics in the remotest areas. They have tried to wean the various hilltribe groups from their wasteful slash-and-burn agriculture and their deeply-rooted habit of opium smoking.

In Chiang Mai itself, they run the city's finest schools, hostels for impoverished students, the superb McCormick hospital and Thailand's oldest leprosarium, the McKean rehabilitation institute.

The missionaries have also served as a catalyst for the Thai government and other agencies to aid the Hmong, Karen, Lisu, Akha and other hilltribe groups.

The Bangkok government basically ignored these ethnic minorities numbering about a million people until the early 1970s. Even today they are in some respects treated as second-class citizens. By contrast, the missionaries lived with the tribes, learned their languages, became their healers and teachers.

There are about 250,000 Christians in Thailand, a nation of 46 million.

Missionary work among the ethnic, Buddhist Thais goes back to 1606, but today only .4 percent are Christians, according to the 1981 Thailand Christian directory. Serious missionary work in the hills only began in the early 1950s, but now three percent of the hilltribe people have converted to Christianity.

The expulsion of missionaries from other Asian nations, most recently from Communist Indochina, has contributed to their concentration in Thailand.

Near-blind man helps others see

By JAMES WYCKOFF
TUCSON CITIZEN

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — The wall calendar next to J. Lester Hearn's complicated array of ham radio equipment here reads Dec. 31, 1978.

Hearn, 67, hasn't much use for the thing. He has been going steadily blind since the 1960s. A shadow of vision is left in one eye.

But recently Hearn was one of the proudest of a select group of amateur radio operators dedicated to preserving sight whenever possible.

That's when the Eye Emergency Radio Network helped arrange its 10,000th transfer from someone who no longer could use a good eye to someone who could.

The network began in 1962 when two Midwest ham operators saw a need for a national radio network that could arrange direct exchanges of eyes between dying donors and eye-injury victims.

'Spies Among Us' disturbing

NEW YORK (AP) — Real-life stories of Soviet espionage in this country have been common in recent years, and NBC News puts the disturbing — indeed, threatening — problem in perspective in an hour-long documentary called "The Spies Among Us."

"It is doubtful that anyone outside the KGB headquarters knows how many spies there are among us," says Jessica Savitch, correspondent for the report to be broadcast Saturday night at 10 EST. She estimates they number in the thousands, including agents attached to other governments which answer to the Soviet Union.

The film, a full year in research and production, includes interviews with former and imprisoned spies, as well as government officials.

The extent of Soviet espionage activity is difficult to measure, Ms. Savitch says, and the arrest of a spy does not necessarily represent the successful conclusion of a government investigation.

"In essence, every time we arrest someone and prosecute them, that is an achievement (for the Soviets) because they have gathered information for which they are being prosecuted," says one FBI official, Edward O'Malley.

The primary objective of present-day espionage is scientific and technological data, Ms. Savitch says, and that is important enough to the Soviets to commit nearly a third of those Russian citizens in this country on official business to spying.

The documentary examines, in addition, Soviet efforts to enlist Americans in spying on their own country. One former Soviet agent who defected to United States in the mid-1950s speculates that greed may be a motivating factor that can "open the gates to be hooked by these agents."

Ms. Savitch traces Soviet spying to the CIA and even Congress, and interviews a former congressional aide who spent seven years as a double agent. "For every double agent we know about, the Russians have one we don't know about," he says.

The report considers defense against Soviet spying, with little optimism.

"What it all comes down to is that a free and open society, such as ours, will always be at a disadvantage in espionage wars against closed totalitarian nations like the Soviet bloc," the correspondent says in her conclusion. "And when you really think about that, it shouldn't make us nervous. It should make us grateful."

Cable News Network considers Soviet-American relations on an entirely different level in the premiere edition Saturday of "Moscow Live," a weekly half-hour interview show featuring CNN correspondent Stuart Loory in Washington and a Soviet representative in Moscow.

Loory's first scheduled guest in the live-by-satellite program is Vitaly Kobish, section chief in the international relations department of the Soviet Communist party's Central Committee.

The program will be broadcast at 11:30 a.m. EST, and will be repeated twice.

Natural rubber increasingly popular

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — Natural rubber may not receive as much attention as oil, but it's also vital in keeping the wheels of the jet-age society rolling, says an executive in the rubber industry.

Last year American manufacturers imported 609,000 metric tons of tree-grown rubber, valued at $800 million, to make products ranging from tires to surgical gloves, notes James Walsh, natural rubber purchasing agent for the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co.

HIS COMPANY alone consumed nearly 132,000 metric tons of natural rubber — 22 percent of the U.S. consumption, he reports.

Among imported raw materials, only oil, natural gas, iron ore and wood are more widely used, says Walsh.

The growing of Hevea rubber is a science, he explains. Getting it from the primary rubber-producing countries of Malaysia, Indonesia and Thailand to the United States has become an art in precision planning.

AN INCREASINGLY popular way of transporting natural rubber halfway around the world is by Lighter Aboard Ship (LASH) vessels.

Mother ships pick up rubber-filled barges, similar to large floating containers, in Belawan, Indonesia, Kelang, Malaysia, Singapore and other Far Eastern ports and deliver them about a month later in Norfolk, Va., New Orleans and Pascagoula, Miss. — major U.S. ports for receiving natural rubber.

HOURS AFTER dropping the barges of rubber offshore for tugboats to tow into the docks for unloading, the LASH vessels begin the return trip to the Far East with cargo consisting mainly of machinery and food products.

"The LASH system is the most sophisticated and efficient way of transporting rubber to the United States," says Walsh, whose company worldwide consumes more natural rubber than either the Soviet Union or China.

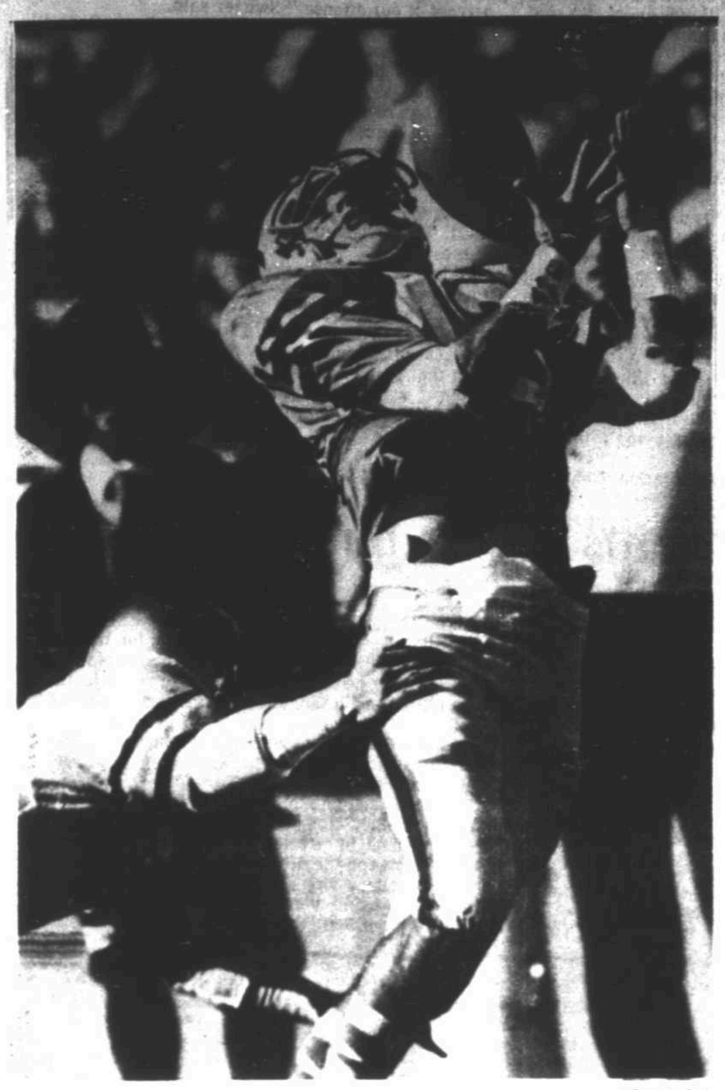
Miami's Kelly guns down Irish



AP Laserphoto

Notre Dame's John Grimm is late as Miami's Larry Brodsky catches a pass from Miami's Jim Kell y at Miami.

MIAMI (AP) — Coach Howard Schnellenberger opened up ninth-ranked Miami of Florida's offense Friday. The result was a record-breaking day for quarterback Jim Kelly, who threw for 264 yards and two touchdowns as the Hurricanes whipped Notre Dame 37-15 in a nationally televised college football game.

Kelly completed 17 of 25 passes and dazzled an Orange Bowl crowd of 50,681 by breaking two Miami single-season and career passing marks. In recent weeks, the junior quarterback from East Brady, Pa., has been called on to try to establish the ground game firs. But Friday, Scxnellenberger turned Kelly's passing arm loose from the outset.

"We were just ready for the game. We knew what (defenses) they were going to come with. It was just a matter of execution," said Kelly.

"We accomplished what we wanted to do. The first xalf was probably the best our offense played all year. Their secondary was daring us to go deep, so we tested them."

THE LOSS dropped Notre Dame's record under first-year Coach Gerry Faust to 5-6 — the worst finish for the Irish since Hugh Devore's 1963 squad went 2-7.

Asked to comment on Notre Dame's first losing season in 18 years, Faust said:

"It's no fun, is it? I sure won't want to go down in history that way. It doesn't bother me, to be honest with you. I hurt for the kids, that's the thing.

"These young men have worked hard and are a great group of young men. I hurt for them more than I do myself."

Miami finished at 9-2 for its second straight nine-victory season under third-year Coach Howard Schnellenberger and only was the Hurricanes' second triumph in the 15-game series with the Irish.

Miami, which climbed to the Top Ten this week for the first time in 13 years, is barred from postseason play because of NCAA probation for recruiting violations.

Kelly rifled an 18-yard touchdown pass to senior Mike Rodrigue in the first quarter and teamed with Rocky Belk on a 63-yard scoring play midway through the second period.

Miami drove 80 yards in eight plays after the opening kickoff to take a 7-0 lead on Rodrigue's touchdown run and Miller's conversion kick 3:26 into the game.

Bell took the ensuing kickoff at his own 2-yard line and returned it up the left sideline, shook off two potential tacklers and sprinted to the Miami end zone. Oliver's conversion kick was blocked, however.

Kelly, who passed for 238 yards in the first half against a defense that had yielded only 112 per game, hiked the lead to 14-6 with his scoring pass to Rodrigue. After two Miller field goals, Miami led 20-6 with 11:25 left in the half.

Four minutes later, Kelly — on a first-and-ten play from his own 37 — hit Belk in stride at the Notre Dame 20 and the speedy wide receiver waltzed into the end zone for a 27-6 advantage.

Miller closed out the first-half scoring with a 24-yard field goal set up by Ronnie Lippett's second interception of a Tim Koegel pass.

The Fighting Irish were a different team in the second half.

Starting quarterback Blair Kiel returned to the lineup and marched the Irish from the Notre Dame 40 to the Miami 18, where Oliver booted his 24-yard field goal with 11:27 left in the third quarter. That cut the deficit to 30-9.

The Irish defense also same alive, sacking Kelley three times for 31 yards in losses. Notre Dame scored its final points on Duerson's interception return with 5:22 remaining in the game.

No. 1 at stake in Keystone state

PITTSBURGH (AP) — In college football, you can't get much bigger than No 1, the ranking held by the University of Pittsburgh, and in Pennsylvania, college football doesn't get much bigger than the Pitt-Penn State game.

"It's equal to any game in the country," Pitt Coach Jackie Sherrill said of today's contest between the Panthers and the 11th-ranked Nittany Lions.

"Every year this game has grown bigger and bigger. The intensity has really increased," he said. "You see it throughout the state. Anywhere people are gathering, they are talking Pitt-Penn State and making friendly wagers, and that's great."

The game marks the third time since 1976 that either team has been ranked rest in the country going into their traditional season finale.

"This is the easiest game to coach as far as I'm concerned," said Penn State's Joe Paterno. "You don't have to worry about motivating kids.

"This is an easy game to coach. It's not an easy game to win."

PITT dominated the series from 1922 to 1938, beating Penn State 14 straight times. From 1966 until 1975, Penn State handed Pitt a string of 10 losses.

But the rivalry entered a new era in 1976, when the No.1-ranked Panthers, led by running back Tony Dorsett, beat Penn State en route to the national title.

Pitt, shooting for another national title, would even the series record at 39-39-3 and stretch its string of consecutive victories — now longest in the country — to 18 with a win today at Pitt Stadium.

"We're going to give it our best shot," says Pitt quarterback Dan Marino, a stay-loose type whose 32 touchdown passes have helped Pitt to a 10-0 record this season.

"If we come out a winner — great. If we come out a loser — we gave it our best shot. And we've still got a chance against Georgia in the Sugar Bowl," he added.

THE NITTANY Lions held the No.1 spot before being toppled by an Oct. 31 loss at Miami. Still, Paterno chooses not to take on a spoiler's role.

"Everybody wants to play No. 1," says Paterno. "But we don't want to win anything for anybody. We want to win for ourselves."

The 8-2 Nittany Lions also took a beating from Alabama, but rebounded last week with a victory over Notre Dame.

"The first half of our season is over now. Now comes the second half — Pitt," says linebacker Chet Parlavecchio.

"Beating Pitt will make my season," echoes Penn0State guard Sean0Farrell.

While Penn State has played several heavyweights, the Panthrs haven't beaten a team currently numbered in the Top Twenty.

Chaparrals nip Panola by 74-73

AMARILLO—Chester Smith's free throw in the fading seconds gave Midland College a 74-73 win over Panola in the semifinals of the Amarillo College Basketball Tournament Friday night and raised the Chaparrals' record to 4-3 for the season.

MC will play in tonight's finals against the Amarillo-Clarendon winner.

Puntus Wilson pumped in 20 points to pace Midland while Spud Webb chipped in with 17 and Lance McCain jumped the cords for another 16 as Midland overcame a 38-33 halftime deficit to win.

It was 70-70 going into the final minute. Midland got a point lead, but Panola Panola forged in front throw before Wilson's basket gave Midland the lead again.

When a Panola free throw tied it, Smith, who had scored 18 points in Thursday's win, won it with a free throw.

It was a close game all the way, but in the end MC's defense, holding the opposition under 75 points for the second night in a row, came through. Both Jerome Crowe and Smith, a couple of freshmen, have been strong under the boards for the Chaps in the tournament.

Tall City cage fans are relishing the 15th annual Tall City Invitational Basketball Tournament being played at Chaparral Center on the campus of Midland College as defending champion Midland High and Midland Lee advanced into the winners bracket.

Joining the Bulldogs and Rebels with first-round Friday night wins were El Paso Burgess and El Paso Bel Air.

Lee advanced with an impressive 81-63 victory over Amarillo Palo Duro while the Bulldogs crushed outmanned El Paso Parkland 84-41. Bel Air was victorious over Odessa Ector 66-57 while Burgess nailed a last-second field goal to nip Big Spring 29-28.

Andre Van Buren scored a career-high 28 points to led four Rebels in double figures as Lee took the lead in the first quarter and never looked back in posting its win. Joining Van Buren in double digets for the Rebs were Randy Pepper with 10 points, Olen Smith had 13 points and Berry Blackwell popped in 12.

The Dons head the lead twice — 4-2 and 6-4 — before the Rebels took the lead for good on a roof-shaking slam dunk by Smith with 2:01 left in the opening stanza. Lee went on to build up an 18-12 advantage at the end of the first quarter.

Palo Duro stormed back in the second quarter to trim the deficit to 24-20 with 6:01 to play in the half before the Rebels went on a tear. Over the next four minutes, Lee outscored the Dons 14-5 to take a commanding 38-29 lead at intermission.

In the second half, the Dons came out strong the first couple minutes of the third quarter. Behind the aggressive rebounding of Doug Butler, Chris Ballard and Earnest Bowie, the Dons outscored the Rebels eight to two to cut the lead down to 40-37.

That was to be the closest the Dons could get the rest of the evening. Lee went on another spurt and stretched the lead out to 56-43 at the end of three periods.

The Midland High contest was a game for only the first two minutes of the first quarter. The Matadors stunned the Purple Pack as they jumped to a 6-0 lead.

This only angried the Bulldogs as they come pounding back to grab a 20-10 lead at the first break.

Parkland tried to make a game of it once again late in the first half. With just 1:36 left in the half, the Mats had trimmed the Bulldog lead down to six, 29-23, but that was to be the high-water mark for the Mats. MHS ripped off six straight points to take a 35-23 lead into the locker room.

In the second half, the depth shy Mats simply wore out against Jack Stephenson's "Wave". The Mats could only tally 18 second-half points while the Purple Pack was lighting up the scoreboard with 49 — 28 in the final quarter.

Fifteen Bulldogs got into the scoreboard with Preston Robertson's 23 leading the attack. Don Sharnowski added 11 points before being bench by Stephenson after picking up a technical foul in the third period. Parkland was led by 5-10 junior Ken Grant with 18 points and Tony McCray with 11.

Odessa Ector, the only Class AAAA club in the eight team field was plagued by poor shooting from the field and free throw stripe and was never able to mount a serious challenge to the Higlanders of El Paso Bel Air. The Highlanders scored the first eight points of the contests and the Eagles were forced to play catch up the rest of the night.

The Eagles found themselves down 14-8 after one quarter, 26-21 at haltime and 45-33 after the third stanza.

In the first contest of the night, El Paso Burgess scored at the buzzer to nip Big Spring 29-28. The Steers had taken the lead and maintained a four to six point advantage through most of the game.

With only 14 ticks left on the clock and holding the ball, it looked like the Steers might have this one in their hip pocket. But an unwise shot changed that.

With the clock down to 11 seconds, Bobby Earl Williams found an opening and moved inside the key where he put up a 5-foot jumper. The ball bounced around on the rim before falling off into the eager hands of Tom Shukitt.

Mustang coach Tony Harper quickly called timeout to set up a play with only eight seconds left.

The Mustang got the ball down court quickly, made two passes before the ball wound up in Bud Larson's hands on the right side of the hoop 21-feet away. He put up a shot that found nothing but the bottom of the net as the buzzer blared ending the game.

The loss knocks the Steers into today's early game at 10 a.m. against Palo Duro. In the 11:30 a.m., Ector and Parkland meet.

High and Bel Air tangle at 1 p.m. with the Lee — Burgess meeting to follow at 2:20 p.m.

The finals are scheduled at 9 p.m. with the third place game set for 7:30 and te consolation finals at 6 and the seventh place game at 4 p.m.

El Paso Palo Duro (63): Brown, 6-0-3-12; Hardy, 5-0-1-10; Bowie, 1-0-1-2; Freeman, 6-3-0-14; Dufur, 3-0-3-4; Ballard, 2-1-2-5; Butler, 2-3-5-6; Campbell, 4-3-0-10. Totals: 28-7-14-63.

Bryant, Tide go for record

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — It is annually the game for bragging rights in the State of Alabama. And if the University of Alabama beats Auburn Saturday, Paul "Bear" Bryant will be able to brag about something no other college football coach has done.

The record Bryant's chase after the magic number of 315 has captivated the football world all season and now he stands poised at the threshold with a chance to snap the deadlock he forged with Amos Alonzo Stagg at 314 coaching victories two weeks ago when Alabama whipped Penn State 31-16.

The 68-year-old Bryant is being low-key about the whole situation. "I'll be glad when it's over," he said Friday. "I don't think our players will be worried about my record except trying toObeat Auburn. We want that conference (Southeastern) championship and a chance for bigger things."

FOURTH-RANKED Alabama has an 8-1-1 record, 5-0 in the SEC. Third-ranked Georgia, 9-1 overall, finished SEC play at 6-0, so an Alabama victory would leave the two teams, who haven't met in several years, tied for the championship.

The Sugar Bowl chose Georgia as the host team some two weeks ago — the Bulldogs are ranked higher and have a better overall record, was the official explanation — and some Alabama people are mad, even though the Crimson Tide received a bid to meet Texas in the Cotton Bowl.

"I don't think they showed very good taste in not waiting until this weekend," Bryant said. "But there's no ill feeling. We've had good treatment down there and they've got to look out for themselves."

Auburn, this year's host team for the intrastate battle, also is playing itl. The sports information office points out tongue-in-cheek that Coach Pat Dye, in his first season at Auburn after six years at East Carolina and one at Wyoming, is going for his 60th career victory in what it calls Bryant's "first chance" at tbe record.

"THEY'RE SUPPOSED to be going for the record, but from what I've heard, they've got this one in the record books already," said Auburn defensive back Mark Dorminey. "Some papers have been writing that people should get their congratulations to Coach Bryant in early. That's like we're being totally overlooked."

Steve Kemp — Chet Lemon

Detroit trades Kemp for Chisox' Lemon

(Compiled from R-T wire services)

Detroit traded outfielder Steve Kemp to the Chicago White Sox for Chet Lemon when the Tigers and Kemp couldn't agree on a long term contract. Kemp was offered a five-year pact at $750,000 a year and reportedly was demanding a $1 million a year contract. Lemon hit .302 with nine homers and 50 rbi while Kemp was a .277 hitter with nine homers and 49 rbi. "Lemon is a player we've had our eyes on for a long time," Detroit General Manager Jim Campbell said. "He hits for power and average and is one of the better defensive outifelders in our league." Lemon's lifetime average is .288, but he has hit over .300 in three of his last four seasons...

Shockers rock ACU

WICHITA, Kan. (AP) — Sixth-ranked Wichita State, led by forward Antoine Carr's 16 points and four other players who scored in double figures, destroyed out-manned Abilene Christian 93-55 in the Shockers' season opener Friday night.

The Division II Wildcats were no match for the taller, stronger and swifter Shockers, who upset the Wildcats' slowdown spread offense with a tight, full-court, man-for-man defense.

Wichita State took an early lead in the first half and cruised to a comfortable 42-27 halftime edge on the strength of 60 percent shooting and tough rebounding.

Carr, a 6-foot-9 junior, had 11 points in the opening half and got unexpected scoring help from freshman forward Xavier McDaniel, who came off the bench to shoot 10 points in the first half and finish with 14.

Wichita State's Cliff Levingston started slowly with only 2 points in the first half, but came on to can 14 for the game. Also scoring in double figures were freshman guard Aubrey Sherrod with 14, and 7-2 freshman center Greg Dreiling with 10.

'Oklahoma State's best chance'

Switzer warns Cowboys

STILLWATER, Okla. (AP) — Oklahoma has had to lower its sights from the national championship to the Big Eight title Conference to the state bragging rights this year, but now the ailing Sooners risk that when they play the Oklahoma State Cowboys Saturday.

"This is the best chance they've ever had and they'd better take advantage of it," Oklahoma Coach Barry Switzer said of the cross-state rivals.

But an amused Cowboys; Coach Jimmy Johnson retorted, "He'd better stop worrying about our chances and start worrying about his chances."

The game will decide the No.2 spot in the Big Eight, as the 7-3 Cowboys try and improve a 4-20league record over the 3-2-1 Sooners, who are 5-4-1 overall this year.

"This is for the state championship," said starting Cowboys' quarterback Rusty Hilger. "This game is my real test, but this is the game I've dreamed of playing all my life."

Last week in his second start, Hilger, a sophomore, and his roommate, tight end John Chesley, combined for three touchdowns against Iowa State.

This week, he heads an offense that Johnson said has "gained more balance. We're playing with more intensity."

The Sooners have been recuperating from last week's 37-14 loss to Nebraska and the team's trainers said that top running back Stanley Wilson will miss Saturday's game. "He's probably more than 50 percent of our offense," Switzer said.

Another key player, senior quarterback Darrell Shepard, whom Switzer called the best in the Big Eight, was limping on a badly bruised knee and was listed as doubtful. His backup, Kelly Phelps, nearly has recovered from a sprained ankle.

"We're a quarterback-fullback offense this year. Stanley is a guy who makes things happen," Switzer said. "Anytime you lose a player like that it's a loss you can't replace."

Oklahoma State last beat the Sooners in 1976, by 31-14, but Oklahoma has won 13 of the past 14 games.

Oklahoma State's Larry Roach will have a chance to extend the NCAA freshman record he set last week when he kicked his 17th and 18th field goals against Iowa State. The previous record for one season, set in 1980, was 16.

In that game against the Cyclones, the Cowboys' defense, ranked eighth in the nation, held vaunted running back Dwayne Crutchfield to 26 yards on 16 carries.

Oklahoma leads the nation in rushing with an average of 344 yards per game.

Angry fan wants Giants renamed

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — A new phone offered by New Jersey Bell Telephone Co. has angered one Giants' fan who thinks the team should be known as the New Jersey Giants.

A telephone offered by New Jersey Bell features interchangeable faceplates with the colors and insignia of any team in the National Football League. In an advertisement for the phone, the front for the team playing in East Rutherford says "New York Giants."

Anthony Zarillo is one of many fans who say the name should be changed.

"New York" was dropped from the team's uniforms once it started playing at Giants Stadium in the Meadowlands. But the corporate name still is The New York Football Giants Inc. and New York is printed on game tickets and listed in the standings.

Zarillo also is the executive officer for the state Board of Public Utilities, which regulates New Jersey Bell. But he said he was voicing his objections as a citizen and a fan, not as a member of the BPU staff.

"I think that phone should not be marketed in New Jersey," said Zarillo. "The least they could do is delete the reference to New York."

Nelson Runger, a New Jersey Bell spokesman, said the faceplates were manufactured under a contract held by Western Electric with the NFL, which approved the design.

After seeing a copy of the ad, Zarillo said, "maybe instead of calling them New Jersey Bell, we should just call them Bell."

Tight ship not not producing

HOUSTON (AP) — Ed Biles came on board as the Houston Oilers head coach last January with a spit-and-polish approach to discipline to replace Bum Phillips, whose idea of punishing a player was to thrash him in a game of dominoes.

But this matter of repeatedly being compared to Phillips comes down to a matter of style, Biles says, and he thinks the whole idea is being overemphasized.

"I think this football team has confidence that I can do the job," said Biles, embattled since the Oilers dropped to a 5-7 record Sunday with a 27-24 loss to Phillips' New Orleans Saints.

The Oilers try to regain their winning form Sunday in the Astrodome against the Atlanta Falcons.

p'There is a sharp contrast between Tom Landry, Don Shula, Bud Grant and Bum Phillips. That's who you're comparing," Biles said. "Yet they all have been successful."

BILES WOULD align himself more in the Landry-Shula-Grant camp in coaching style qnd he thinks his methods will eventually all prove successful. With the Oilers skidding from an 11-5 record under Phillips, rumors have spread that Biles' disciplinary approach has failed to inspire the team.

'pI really think too much0is made out0of the difference between Bum and me." Biles said. "It's really not that much.

"There's nothing wrong with this football team that a few victories won't cure. All txese rumors ant discontent cme out when you start losing" he said. 9 Free-spirited cornerback Z.C. Wilson has one method of weighing the differences in Biles and Phillips — his wallet.

"I've been fined three times this yuar," Wilson sait. "But Bum had a system where he didn't fine anyone. He always said it but he never did. In my three years with Bum, he never fined me once."

ASKED HOW many fines he might have incurred with Biles at the helm over the last three years, Wilson said, "How many games do we play a year — 16? I'd guess I'd have about 20 a year."

Oilers Daryl Hunt says critics will have to look elsewhere to uncover team problems.

"Discipline, curfews and stuff like that haven't affected how I play. Coach Biles hasn't put any strict rules on me that I can't handle. We were kind of loose under Bum, and we're kind of loose under Eddie

Aaron, Robinson eligible for Fame

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

The names of Henry Aaron and Frank Robinson will appear for the first time on the ballot for the 1982 baseball Hall of Fame, and there is little question that both shortly will have their own private little niches in the museum at Cooperstown, N.Y.

They could make it the first time out. If not, neither can be long denied the honor. They have all the credentials. The question is: Will ultimate induction — the game's highest honor — douse the bitter resentments that have simmered in their chests?

In all of baseball, there has been no one more outspoken in calling attention to the inequities of the sport — the slight of the black player who, after performing not only adequately but often brilliantly on the field, has found the doors to the manager's office or to an executive post shut in his face.

IRONICALLY, Aaron and Robinson are two blacks who managed to crash the barrier. Aaron, baseball's home run king, is vice president and director of player personnel for the Atlanta Braves. Robinson, MVP in both leagues, with 586 home runs and a .294 batting average for 21 years, is manager of the San Francisco Giants, having earlier been fired as field boss of the Cleveland Indians, the first of his race to hold such a position.

Informed this week that he was now on the ballot for the Hall of Fame, Robinson was asked if the prospect of this final honor would in any way ameliorate his feelings about lack of consideration given retired ball players.

"Why should it?" he said. "If anything, it only emphasizes the situation. Sure, Hank and I have executive-type jobs. But give me some others. ... I think it's a shame that there are not more black managers and front office executives."

Aaron has been even more vitriolic.

Once he said that no matter how well black baseball players perform, they ultimately get "shafted." He added that the men who run baseball "want to look at us as monkeys."

Aaron had reason for his bitterness. He played 23 years, getting 3,771 hits (second only to Ty Cobb), batting .305 and winding up with more games, at bats, RBIs, sacrifice flies and home runs (755) than anyone in history.

HE PLAYED in the shadow of the more colorful Willie Mays and never received the national exposure he deserved. His bid for Babe Ruth's record of 714 home runs was marked by acrimony, a squabble with the commissioner's office over whether he could be held out of a game in order to hit his 715th at home and pressures from fans and the press.

Robinson was one of baseball's toughest competitors, the first ever to win MVP in both leagues. He was the majors' first black manager, joining Cleveland in 1975 and serving 2½ years before being fired.

"I can yell my head off about discrimination," he said. "Hank Aaron can demonstrate as he did in New York. Lou Brock and others may complain of injustices. They are like scattered BB shots.

Gators, Seminoles eye Peach Bowl

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (AP) — A Peach Bowl berth will be at stake Saturday when the Florida State Seminoles face the University of Florida. But the bowl bid is an unneeded added incentive for the bitter cross-state rivals.

"Playing Florida is enough," said Florida State fullback Michael Whiting. "The bowl is certainly nice, but that's secondary."

The Peach Bowl committee announced last week that the winner of the game will oppose West Virginia in the Dec. 31 bowl at Atlanta.

Both teams enter the game with 6-4 records, but of more pressing concern is the Seminoles' four-game winning streak in the annual game, cutting Florida's overall lead in the series to 16-6-1.

The Gators are coming off an impressive 33-12 romp over Kentucky, while the Seminoles were humilated 58-14 by Southern Mississippi.

Gators Coach Charley Pell believes the Seminoles' last performance wasn't representative of what he expects from Florida State Saturday.

"Any team that beats Ohio State and Notre Dame on the road hasn't done it with mirrors," Pell said. "You do that with good players and good coaching."

Two of the top young offensive players in the nation will be on display.

Gators' linebacker Fernando Jackson calls Florida State freshman Greg Allen similar to Herschel Walker, Georgia's sensational running back.

"Greg Allen reminds me of Herschel Walker, and that isn't good news," Jackson said.

Walker scored all four Bulldogs' touchdowns in Georgia's Nov.7 victory over Florida.

Allen has broken most of Florida State's rushing records for freshmen while tooaling 827 yards on 126 attempts for an average of 6.5 yards per carry.

"We know their offense is improved with him running the ball, but he isn't everything they have," Jackson said. "Rick Stockstill understands what they're trying to do on offense and they have a lot of other good people, too."

Stockstill, a senior quarterbacked Florida State to a 17-13 victory over Florida last year.

Meanwhile, the Seminoles, whose secondary was decimated in the Ohio State victory and losses to Pitt and Southern Miss, faces the Gators' sophomore quarterback, Wayne Peace.

"He's another in a long line of outstanding quarterbacks we've had to go up against this year," said Florida State Coach Bobby Bowden.

"Wayne hasn't gotten the national reputation yet because he's just a sophomore, but we know

For Christmas Shopping

A few weeks before Christmas and all through the stores the merchants were busy doing merchantly chores.

Decorations were hung in the windows with care.
realizing that customers soon would be there.

The shops were nestled all snug in their places.
ANTHONY'S employees
all had smiles on their faces.

When out in the parking lot
there arose such a clatter
GENE BARTUS ran out to what was the matter.

Away in a flash to follow the noise was Mrs. Soto and all of the SOUND MACHINE boys.

And what to their wondering eyes did appear.

Auburn gets 'honor' of providing Bear with record 315

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

The natives in Alabama, at least those who live and die with University of Alabama football, have been restless.

First, they were angered by the Sugar Bowl's selection of third-ranked Georgia (9-1) over fourth-ranked Alabama (8-1-1) to represent the Southeastern Conference, even though 'Bama can tie for the title by defeating Auburn on Saturday.

Then, more than a few hackles were raised when a Sports Illustrated article described Paul W. Bryant Hall, the football dorm, as "a garish curiosity, with a hideous interior," adding that "little of the campus offers much in the way of beauty."

The anger does not apply, of course, where Auburn University is concerned. Down in Auburn country, they say a lot worse things about Bear Bryant and Alabama than the magazine did.

And so, it is ironic that the 68-year-old Bear has a chance to become the winningest coach in the history of college football Saturday when Alabama and Auburn square off at Birmingham's Legion Field.

AUBURN IS playing this one to the hilt, on and off the field. On the field, the much-improved Tigers boast a first-year head coach in Pat Dye, an assistant at Alabama under Bryant from 1965-73, who probably has seen most of the Bear's tricks. And in news releases, Auburn has been calling this Bryant's "first chance" to break the record of 314 victories he shares with Amos Alonzo Stagg.

Few people think the Bear will need more than one chance, and Alabama is an 11½-point favorite. It says here that Famous Amos will be supplanted by a rare Bear ... Alabama 30-10.

WHILE BRYANT goes for his personal No.1, one of his former players, Pitt Coach Jackie Sherrill, will be striving to hold onto the No.1 national ranking when the 10-0 Panthers wind up their regular season by entertaining No.11 Penn State. The Panthers are a 6-point favorite and the pick in this bitter Pennsylvania rivalry is ... Pitt 28-17.

Notre Dame at No.9 Miami, Fla. (favored by 2½): A loss would mean a losing season for the Irish ... Miami 17-10.

Lamar at No.17 Southern Mississippi: The Golden Eagles bounce back with a vengeance from that loss to Louisville ... Southern Mississippi 42-0.

ARIZONA at No.18 Arizona State (13): Southern Methodist, one of three Top Ten teams in probation, finished 10-1. Miami can wind up 9-2 and so can ... Arizona State 27-20.

Other games: Florida (4) 28, Florida State 21; Hawaii 35, Colorado State 14; Boston College (11) 28, Holy Cross 14; Oklahoma (8½) 31, Oklahoma State 14; Houston (12½) 33, Rice 20; San Diego State 38, Air Force 21; San Jose State 28, North Texas State 14; Tennessee (7)024, Vanderbilt 14; Nevada-Las Vegas 35, Texas-El Paso 14; LSU 20, Tulane (3) 14; Virginia Tech (7) 27, Virginia 13.

Longhorns unveil another Street at quarterback

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — Texas quarterback Robert Brewer's performance in a 21-13 victory over Texas A&M reminded a locker room visitor of James Street.

Like Street, he is not big or fast, nor does he have a strong passing arm. Also like Street, he is undefeated.

Brewer came in at halftime of the Houston game, with Texas trailing 14-0, and led the Longhorns to a 14-14 tie, then started the three following games as Texas beat Texas Christian 31-15, Baylor 34-12 — to clinch a Cotton Bowl spot against Alabama — and A&M on Thursday.

No. 7 Texas completed its regular season with a 9-1-1 record.

"Just like Street," a visitor told Texas Coach Fred Akers after the Aggie game.

"Shoot, you think he even remembers him? Why, Robert was just a child when James was here," Akers responded, laughing.

Against A&M, Brewer had 22 yards rushing and completed eight of 10 passes for 134 yards, including a 38-yard touchdown toss to sprinter Herkie Walls, who caught the ball without breaking stride in the end zone.

"You know me, big-play Brewer," he joked. "Can't even throw it 30 yards in the air."

BREWER GOT support from third-teamer John Walker, who carried 36 times for 178 yards, the most by a Texas back since Earl Campbell gained 222 against A&M in 1977, an offensive line that includes several pro prospects and the natSTexasChristian)," said Kubiak.

Kubiak went out after he was sacked three times for 23 yards in losses and had been knocked down several other times, including twice when Texas was called for roughing the passer.

Rams keep Pittsburgh's hopes alive

How dead are the Steelers?

By BRUCE LOWITT
AP Sports Writer

Just how dead are the Pittsburgh Steelers' playoff chances?

Not dead at all. In fact, by sundown Sunday, they should be alive and well, compliments of the Cleveland Browns.

The Steelers play Los Angeles, a crumbling club if e.er there was one. Pittsburgh should have a relatively easy time of it. Over in Cleveland, though, the Browns will give the visiting Cincinnati Bengals the shock of their lives.

Look, too, for the New Orleans Saints and the St. Louis Cardinals to pull off mild surprises.

Last weekend's record against the spread: 9-5. For the season: 88-78.

This weekend's picks (home teams capitalized):

PITTSBURGH minus 6½ over Los Angeles: If the Rams go with Pat Haden, Pittsburgh'll pick him apart. If they go with Dan Pastorini, the Steelers'll beat him to a pulp. If they g with Vince Ferragamo, they've got a chance — or have you forgotten Super Bowl XIV?

CLEVELAND plus 2 over Cincinnati: Brian Sipe will publicly apologize for last Sunday's six-interception disaster by finding every seam in the Bengals' secondary and shave their AFC Central lead to one game.

UPSET SPECIAL.

NEW ORLEANS plus 1 over Tampa Bay: It should come down to George Rogers' running vs. toug Williams'0passing, but don't be surprised if Archie Manning has a big say in the outcome.

St.Louis plus 4 over NEW ENGLAND: Any team that absorbs five of its 10 losses by four points or less has to be looking over its shoulder, wondering what's going to go wrong next.

New York Giants plus 5½ over SAN FRANCISCO: The 49ers will win their division title and, as has happened so often, they'll win by a field goal or less.

BUFFALO minus 5 over WASHINGTON: Just a couple of guys named Joe ... but Theismann won't have the kind of day Ferguson will. BEST BET.

Philadelphia minus 2 over MIAMI: The Dolphins couldn't move much against the Jets' defense, one of the better ones in the league. Philadelphia's the best.

Other games:

NEW YORK JETS minus 12 over Baltimore.

MINNESOTA minus 7 over Green Bay.

SAN DIEGO minus 4 over Denver.

Atlanta minus 3 over HOUS-TON.

Oakland even over SEATTLE.

BYU nips Bruins

LOS ANGELES 8AP) — Forwards Fred Roberts scored 23 points and Steve Trumbo added 22 to give Brigham Young an upset 79-75 victory over No 2-ranked UCLA Friyday night.

The Bruins led most of the way but BYU rallied in the second half on a jump shot by Roberts to tie UCLA at 67 with 4½ minutes to play.

The Cougars extended their lead to 76-71 with one minute to play but UCLA rallied with a jump shot by0Michael Sanders and two free throws by Michael Holton to cut the lead to 76-75 with 28 seconds to play.

After freshman guard Scott Sinek made one of two free thows to put BYU ahead 77-75, Roberts blocked a lay-in by UCLA freshman center Stuart Gray with eight seconds to go and Sinek provided the final margin by making two free throws with one second to play.

Center Greg Kite added 12 points for the Cougars who are now 1-1 on the season.

The Bruins who were pl)ying their season opener were paced by 22 points by Sanders and 12 each by Kenny Fields and Rod Foster.

Landry, the guy's amazing

TED BATTLES

BATTLE SCENE

Dallas Cowboy Coach Tom Landry is a never-ending source of his wonder. His record is legendary. It's all there in black and white, but even so you sometimes wonder how he does it.

You've seen him on the sidelines and from his expression, you'd never be able to guess whether the roof of Texas Stadium had just caved in or the Cowboys had just blown it off with one of their miracle finishes.

HE'S UNCANNY. He's a native Texan, played for the University of Texas. And who ever heard of a Texan who didn't wear his sentiments on his sleeve. He'll tell a joke and break your back with a slap that is supposed to make you laugh, but makes you feel like crying. Tom's delivery is straight out of Vermont.

It's not only on the sidelines in front of the rube fans in the stands, but in the locker room before the sophisticated members of the media.

It was after the Buffalo game, Dallas had won going away in the last half, completing a four-game sweep of some of the most dreaded opposition in the NFL, both NFC and AFC.

In the same situtation, Dick Vermeil would have been treating the press corps with the inside stuff, the foxy strategy cooked up at one of those midnight meetings while the opposition slept. It would have be been hailed the next day as a master stroke of genius, "We set 'em up," I believe, is the term used. And who could blame him for capitalizing on the glory of the moment.

AND NOW here was Landry, not reveling in the recently accomplished success, but worrying about the next four games against the dredges of the NFL.

He was telling the press, TV and radio folks about the pitfalls ahead in the next four games. His audience was spellbound, I think. Landry was amazing. He was explaining the perils of facing Detroit, Washington, Chicago and Baltimore on successive weekends and doing it with a straight face. Nary the semblance of a smile.

He was explaining, he didn't "worry about how the team would perform against teams with whom we are rated even. It's the games against teams that have had a rough time and are rebounding that worry me."

At the time I remembered wondering if he would hurry out of the press room, find an out of the way closet and roll on the floor while holding his ribs, letting out, at last, the surpressed laughter.

AND HOW could all these suave, sophisticated, not to mention calloused, experts swallow be so gullible. There wasn't a guffaw in the crowd.

Of course, as it turned out, Tom knew whereof he spoke.

The three dogs have given him more grief than Philadelphia, Miami, Buffalo and Los Angeles. He was 4-0 against them and he's 2-1 in the last three. One of the wins was by 14 points, but wasn't nailed down until the final minute. And against 'Northwestern' the Cowboys had to rally for a 10-9 win.

We're convinced. When Tom speaks, we'll listen, more attentively, from now on.

And if Tom says the cause is hopeless against lowly Baltimore next Sunday, I'll just hope the Cowboys can contrive of some way to 'steal' the game from the Colts so they can get back to playin' somebody easy like the Eagles.

New Mexico defeats Midwestern State

ALBUQUERQUE (AP) — The University of New Mexico Lobos, behind veteran Phil Smith, rolled over Midwestern State (Wichita Falls, Texas) 108-59 Friday night as the Lobos opened their basketball season.

Smith tallied 14 points and seven assists in the game that was attended by a crowd of 16,249.

The leading scorer for the Lobos was Don Brkovich, a transfer from Michigan State, with 18 points. Brkovich was followed by Jeff Reinert with 14 points and Mark Snow who put in 13.

Bill Harvey, with 11 points, was the other Lobo player in double figrues.

Midwestern, which trailed throughout much of the game, had only two players in double figures. Mark Richardson shot for 15 points while Joe Cotton tallied up 10.

The Lobos, who stand at 1-0,0 lso out-rebounded the Indians 63-40.

Leading rebounder for the Lobos was senior forward Larry Tarrance with 13.

ENMU triumphs, 80-70

SEGUIN, Texas (AP) — Behind the shooting of Charles Carter and Brent Timm, Eastern New Mexico University outscored Our Lady of the Lake College (San Antonio, Texas) 80-70 Friday night to win the first round of the Texas Lutheran College tournament here.

Carter was the top scorer for Eastern with 24 points and Timm was right behind him with 22.

North Texas on top

DENTON, Texas (AP) — Junior forward Kenneth Lyons ssored 30 points and Delonte Taylor added 21 as North Texas State overcame an early deficit and rolled to a 88-71 college basketball victory over Southwestern Friday night. The win cqae in the season opener for North Texss and the loss dropped Southwestern's season record to 3-4.

NEW YORK (AP) — David Russell scored 27 points, including 10 in a game-breaking stretch midway through the second half, to lead the St. John's Redmen to a 75-55 victory over Xavier of Ohio in the opening round of the seventh Joe Lapchick Memorial basketball tournament Friday night.

Xavier led the Redmen by 29-27 at the half, but St. John's moved ahead 43-38 after intermission and then broke open the game with a 20-5 spurt behind Russell. That gave St. John's a 63-43 lead with 8:21 remaining in the game.

'The Bear': A southern general goes after the record

By JULES LOH
AP Special Correspondent

EDITOR'S NOTE — A week ago, AP Special Correspondent Jules Loh spent a day, from breakfast to nightcap, with Alabama Coach Paul "Bear" Bryant. They got away from the football field and the locker room and traveled to the farm owned by Bryant's son. What followed was a long conversation. Not about those Saturdays after Saturdays that will put him in the record book as the winningest football coach ever. Not about the adulation that has been heaped upon him. But about the Bear himself and what has shaped the man.

TUSCALOOSA, Ala. (AP) — That little bitty ole record — being the winningest football coach on the planet — doesn't really mean much to Bear Bryant. Winning does. Records don't.

"Tell you the truth," he was mumbling the other day, in his down-home humble way, "I'm more 'fraid about how it might affect the team than what it will do for me.

"Shoot, I wouldn't think about it at all if it weren't for all the fuss everybody's making over it."

YOU HAVE TO believe the man. For one thing, Paul "Bear" Bryant — the name falls from Southern lips as reverently as Robert E. Lee — long ago amassed more awards than you can stack in Bryant Stadium, or hang in Bryant Hall, more recognition than others in his profession could expect in two lifetimes. When an Alabama contestant for Miss U.S.A. was asked to name the world's greatest person, she didn't hesitate: Paul "Bear" Bryant. But his fame has long since leapt the bounds of Alabama.

For another, he is so believable it's unbelievable. That sugar and 'lasses drawl, that face all tanned and wrinkled like a bluetick hound, those wet, soulful eyes, make people more inclined to want to hug him than doubt him.

MAYBE NOT ALWAYS. "My mama wanted me to be a preacher," he mentioned the other day during a reflective drive in the country. "I told her coachin' and preachin' were a lot alike. I don't think she believed me."

Too bad the coach's mama didn't live to see a postcard you can buy in Tuscaloosa. It shows her son walking on water.

The drive in the country occurred last Sunday, a week and a day after Bryant's University of Alabama football team had delivered him his 314th victory in 36 years of coaching, tying the lifetime record of Amos Alonzo Stagg.

Apparently the Bear wanted to get away for a spell, away from the week-long clamor and idolatry that event brought on.

Or perhaps he just felt like accommodating a reporter who asked to meet him and chat about things other than football, because there really is no escaping the idolatry.

> "I've got a little piece of this, a little piece of that. Meat packing plant. Some land. Investments. The second thing I look at in the paper every morning is the stock table. First thing is Ann Landers, usually on page six."

At breakfast in a motel coffee shop, well off the beaten path, an adorer simply had to shake his hand. At a filling station out on the highway, he inadvertently pulled up to a self-service pump. "Don't worry, Mr. Bryant," the attendant said, falling all over himself. "I'll do it."

NOT UNTIL HE DROVE across the grass-rich hills of Greene County, did the threat of worship end. The Black Angus merely stared.

"We'll raise a covey of quail when we make that turn yonder," he said. "Last time I drove by there I raised three coveys. Best place for birds, though, is down at Jimmy Hinton's place. You have to beat 'em away with a stick."

Jimmy Hinton is Bryant's close cattle guard at his son's farm, in the friend and business partner. With Jimmy, he has become a humble millionaire.

"I've got a little piece of this, a little piece of that," he said. "Meat packing plant. Some land. Investments. The second thing I look at in the paper every morning is the stock table. First thing is Ann Landers, usually on page six."

At his son's lodge, Bryan popped a can of Coke, flipped on the TV and eased his 6-foot-3½-inch frame into a chair in front of the fire. At 68, he seemed fit enough. Is he?

"Doctor says I am. I weigh 208 on my trainer's scales and 199 on my wife's scales. I like my wife's scales. When I played football, I weighed 'bout 205."

HOW MUCH DID HE weigh at 14, when he wrestled the bear?

"I reckon 'bout 165. I was a big kid for my age."

That was back in Moro Bottom, Ark., where Paul Bryant grew up dirt poor. "A carnival came through and they had this little ole scraggly bear. A man was offering anybody a dollar a minute to wrestle it.

"I got the bear pinned, holdin' on tight. The man kept whispering, 'Let him up. Let him up.' He wanted action. Hell, for a dollar a minute, I wanted to hold him 'til he died.

"The bear finally shook loose and so did his muzzle. I jumped off the stage, the man took off and I never did get my money. All I got was some scars on my leg and a name."

He pulled out a package of filtered cigarettes.

"BEEN TRYING TO CUT back on my smoking. These damn things are next to nothing." He mumbled something unintelligible, reached in another pocket, pulled out a pack of unfiltered cigarettes, lit up, and turned his attention to the TV.

"See what whoopee pass? Richard learned that at Alabama. Just a little ole forward pass behind the line. Howard Cosell has a big name for it but what it is is a whoopee pass. Richard is really popping 'em today."

He was speaking of Richard Todd, quaterback for the New York Jets, one of more than 65 professional football proteges of Bear Bryant, not to mention 44 coaches.

There might have been more, except for all those years he was not allowed to recruit black players.

"I wanted to get black players as far back as when I was coach at Kentucky, back in the late '40s. They wouldn't let me. Then, at Alabama all those years, my hands were tied.

"TELL YOU THE TRUTH, Sam Cunningham did more for integration at Alabama than anybody else, including Martin Luther King."

Sam Cunningham?

"He was a black running back for Southern Cal. Came down here in 1970 and ran all over my skinny little white boys. Scored three touchdowns."

McDowells searching the country for family's history

By CAROL KRUCOFF
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Connie McDowell divides the world into two groups: Those who think she and her husband Scott are "absolutely crazy" and those who "wish they had the guts" to do what the McDowells are doing.

Six months ago, the 40-year-old "ex-housewife" and 1-year-old retired Coast Guard pilot set off on what one genealogy expert calls "the family historian's dream." They gave their furniture to relatives, leased their San Francisco home and hit the road in a 1958 Greyhound bus — converted into a comfortable motor home — complete with stereo, microwave oven and computer.

Destination: "Everywhere and anywhere," says Scott McDowell, "where we can trace our ancestors."

So far they've visited dozens of cities from Portland, Ore., to Union City, N.J. — stopping in town halls and libraries, foraging through census schedules and land records, talking with telephone operators, newspaper editors and the oldest people they can find in an effort to fill in the ever-expanding branches of their family trees.

"I'VE ALWAYS WANTED to know where I came from," says Scott McDowell, who is tracing about 65 different surnames in his ancestry and is writing a book about one, the Jaggers. "Ever since I was a kid, and my parents teased about how our family was started by an Irish priest and an Indian princess, I've wanted to know about my ancestors."

Connie McDowell's interest in genealogy started about 20 years ago when her grandmother gave her a family history she'd been compiling and a diary written by McDowell's great, great grandmother.

But neither McDowell began searching their roots in earnest until shortly after they married in 1975. "I brought home some genealogy charts from the library," recalls Connie McDowell. "(Scott) got all excited and pulled out $ll his family history stuff."

In 1976 they crossed the country five times in a van, stopping in city halls and courthouses along the way to root out obscure ancestors. "We both discovered we loved to travel and were fascinated by family history," she says. "We started to dream about doing this permanently."

After Scott McDowell's retirement in 1979 (his last commission with the Coast Guard was the same as Alex Hailey's) they both got real estate licenses. In two years they had earned enough money so that, with Scott's pension, they could finance their dream.

The bus cost $32,500 ("plus a lot more we put into it") and gets about nine miles to a gallon of diesel fuel. They tow a compact car — "Have you ever tried to find a parking place for a bus?" — and budget about $200 per month for fuel.

"If we use up our fuel allowance," says Connie McDowell, "we just stay put." If all their money runs out, "we'll be Kelly People or get some kind of job until it builds up again."

THE MCDOWELLS PARK at the homes of friends and relatives across the country or stay in campsites. On a recent trip through Washington to research at the National Archives, they stayed in the drivew$y of Paul and Sara Andereck's Fairfax, Va., home. They met the couple through a Genealogical Computing new letter the Anderecks publish.

Relatives who originally thought the McDowell were "cuckoo," says Connie McDowell, now think "it's great." Among their newly-converted fans are their six children — they each have three teen-agers from a previous marriage.

The kids are fascinated, too, by their own ancestors," says Scott McDowell. "It's history that's personal. Hearing about what your great, great uncle was doing at the same time Lincoln was building log cabins makes history a lot more vivid than it is in a classroom."

"You really learn what life was like," adds Connie McDowell. "The diary my grandmother's grandmother wrote in 1848 talks about traveling with their belongings in a wagon and walking on foot from Indiana to Iowa, watching the railroad being built and avoiding places with fresh graves because that meant a measles ep8demic.

"We traveled that same route, saw the same landmarks she was describing. It was awesome to think they could travel that distance. And I got a kind of strange deja vu feeling ... like I'd been there before. It was really very beautiful."

CONNIE MCDOWELL HAS traced her family back about 10 generations to the Coffins who came in 1642 to Nantucket Island, Mass., from Devon, England. Scott McDowell has traced his lineage back about 18 generations to an English farmer, John Scott.

The bulk of his research has been with the Jagger line (his mother's maiden name is Jagger). He has traced the family back to John Jagger who came to America in about 1635 and has between 45,000 and 50,000 descendants — some of whom, McDowell hopes, will want to buy his book on the Jaggers when it's finished.

I know it won't make the best-seller list," concedes McDowell, who has had no formal genealogical training. ("I just get down and do a search the same way we did a (rescue) search in the Coast Guard".) "But I'll get it published even if I have to do it myself. Then 100 years from now if one of my descendants wants to know where they came from, it'll all be there."

Although neither has uncovered any horse thieves in their ancestry, the McDowells have found "a whole lot of dirt farmers" and some "unusual characters," such as:

— Ancestors who "missed the boat." Two boats — the Mayflower and the Speedwell — left from England the same day. The Mayflower sailed into history; the Speedwell sprang a leak and returned to England. Scott McDowell's ancestors were on the Speedwell.

— Bo'swain Parks, who crossed the Delaware with George Washington.

— A YOUNG BOY FROM the Rennick family who was kidnaped by Indians in Virginia. He was raised as an Indian and became an Indian chief.

— The first Supreme Court justice of New Jersey.

Connie and Scott McDowell stand next to their mobile home, a converted Greyhound bus. The McDowells are devoting their time to search for clues to their past — Editor of The Cincinnati Inquirer.

Discovering these ancestors, says Scott McDowell, "has been fantastic ... as exciting as I'd imagined. We didn't do this on a lark. I spent the first 22 years of my adult life working 70 to 90 hours a week, getting moved every two years.

"There comes a time in everyone's life, I think, where they want to know where they came from. So when people ask me why we're doing this I say, why not?"

While the "roots search" is now their primary goal, both McDowells say they're open to traveling in new directions. "At this point," says Scott McDowell, "everything is an option."

"WE MAY FIND SOME place we want to settle," says Connie McDowell. "We almost bought an old Victori$n home in Cape May (N.J.) to turn into a Bed and Breakfast. We're open to just about anything."

But when people ask, "We tell them we're going to do this for two years."

Navy fighter pilots: A cut above

By PAUL NUSSBAUM
Los Angeles Times

SAN DIEGO — They talk with their hands.

One hand follows the other, swooping, diving, climbing, turning — the fingertips of one constantly seeking a kill shot on the other wrist.

Reliving the day's flights in the officers' club at Miramar Naval Air Station, fighter pilots are conspicuous — less for their olive-drab flight suits or khaki uniforms than for their restless hands.

"If you take him up like this and he can't stay with you" — one hand drops out of a climb — "then you've got him" — the other hand noses over.

The nearly naked dancer on stage at the front of the club doesn't have a chance. Pulsating music and a lithe body are inadequate weapons in a room full of young men fascinated by their own hands.

"We were up here" — the left hand wiggles — "and they came through underneath" — the right hand zooms below — "and we lost them for the rest of the fight. Did you see what happened to them?"

Even when they're not in their airplanes, these men are flying, recreating the day's air-combat maneuvers in endless variation, improving and embellishing reality with each pass of their hands.

These are Navy fighter pilots, an elite group even in the select military aviation community, an aggressive, egocentric, intelligent, voluble, competitive, cocky, venturesome breed that is trained to do one thing: shoot down enemy airplanes.

They don't drop bombs, they don't ferry passengers, they don't hunt submarines. In a mission that in many ways is little changed since aerial combat was born over the trenches of France in World War I, they fight their battles in isolation, airplane against airplane and pilot against pilot, quick, intense battles that are decided by one's ability to see better and move faster and shoot first.

> "He deals with that constant proximity to death by denying it, by saying it will never happen to him."

It's a breed that attracted national attention a couple of months ago, when two Navy crews flying F-14 Tomcats shot down a pair of inferior Soviet-built Libyan jets over the Gulf of Sidra on Aug. 19.

There are only about 400 active fighter pilots in the Navy, most of them flying the two-seat, twin-tailed, swing-wing, $23 million F-14, the Navy's front-line fighter. In the pecking order of military pilots, which includes helicopter pilots, patrol pilots, bomber and attack pilots, fighter pilots are at the top, and Navy fighter pilots like to think of themselves as one cut above even other fighters because unlike their Air Force brethren, they land on and take off from the pitching decks of aircraft carriers.

FROM THE cockpit, an aerial dogfight is not the smooth, almost slow-motion dance it appears to be from a distance. It is a brief (engagements of three minutes are considered unusually long), stomach-churning swirl of confusion.

The pilots, pressed into their seats by forces that make their bodies feel four and five times heavier than normal, squeezed by automatically inflating suits designed to push enough blood into their brain to keep; them from blacking out, twist constantly in their seats, trying always to keep the enemy plane in sight as it skids through the sky. Lose sight, lose the fight, they are constantly told — almost all downed pilots are shot down by somebody they never saw.

As the sky and earth change places on the horizon with unsettling frequency, the pilots work the stick and throttle with all their attention focused outside the cockpit. The right index finger is poised on the trigger on the control stick, because the opportunity for agood shot flashes before the canopy in a fraction of a second.

The idea in these aerial duels, practiced two and three times daily over the desert and ocean, is to push the other plane and the other pilot into a maneuver that forces them beyond their performance capabilities — a climb too steep, a turn too wide. Every tiny loss of energy in the circling battles is a tremendous disadvantage in the struggle to get on the other guy's "6 o'clock" — directly behind him where a heat-seeking missile will be most deadly.

DESPITE STATISTICS that show flying a Navy fighter jet is dangerous business, even in peacetime (a 1970 study showed that 25 percent of fighter pilots didn't survive a 20-year career — Navy officials say the mortality rate is much lower now, although they have no current figures), pilots consider themselves invincible.

> "They buy me a $28 million airplane, build me a $3 billion ship to land it on, they teach me to fly that $28 million airplane, and then they buy my gas and pay me a salary?"

Death is something that will always happen to the other pilot, and the standard line is, "If he's dead, he must have sone something wrong."

"The price tag for failure is not matched by anything else in the world," said Dr. Frank Dully, a Navy flight surgeon at North Island Naval Air Station who has been studying fighter pilots for most of his lengthy career. "He deals with that constant proximity to death by denying it, by saying it will never happen to him."

The attitude isn't a new one for fighter pilots. In the ready room of squadron VF-2 (the "Fighting Bounty Hunters") at Miramar Naval Air Station, there's a quotation on the wall above the blackboard: "We flew close together, increasing our speed. We each felt superior to the enemy, and more than anything else, knew we could rely on each other. That is the main point — one must know with whom one flies." The quote is attributed to Manfred von Richthofen, Germany's "Red Baron" of World War I, credited with 80 kills before being shot down in 1918.

Those feelings of superiority and fraternity are still part of the baggage of a fighter pilot, part of a psychological makeup that fliers and their Navy doctors contend are essential to survival in a world of sudden death and violent accidents.

"If he's worth his weight, a fighter pilot feels that on any given day, he can beat any given adversary," said Rear Adm. George Furlong, an active pilot and the commanding officer of Miramar fighters.

FRESH CHRISTMAS TREES AND WREATHS SHIPPED DIRECT FROM THE VIRGINIA PLANTATION

You can have (or send to your friends) a Christmas Tree so fresh that it caresses your face with its soft foliage. The fresh needles will stay on the tree. We have shipped trees and wreaths to Texas friends for years.

The tree will be a groomed white pine 10ft under six feet tall. It will be cut, wrapped in a net sleeve to protect it and shipped by UPS on the date you specify. The beautiful wreaths are pine, with cones and a big red bow—approximately 19" in diameter.

Delivered prices: Trees $29.95 Wreaths $17.50

Send check or request information from: Chandler Smith, 3604 Hyde Park, Midland, Texas 79703, Phone 915-694-1514

4309 CRENSHAW

This beautiful home is one of the most popular Ramcon models. When you see it you'll know why. One of the largest living areas you'll find in a home this size is accented with stained ash paneling and an all-brick, wood-burning fireplace. The master suite is sequestered and has it's own bath and dressing area along with a walk-in closet. Come see the rest for yourself this weekend.
