Parade of patterns

Reflections of the 3 p.m. sun from the Summit Building shine down on the beginning of Midland High School's homecoming festivities Thursday. The downtown parade, which featured MHS and Midland Freshman bands, as well as the traditional homecoming court car caravan, kicked off Thursday's activities which ended with a bonfire at the high school's parking lot. The homecoming game will be played against San Angelo Central at 8 tonight in Midland Memorial Stadium, and a dance will be held at the MHS Youth Center Saturday.

Contamination reports pour in across nation

By The Associated Press

Three weeks after seven people died from taking poisoned Tylenol capsules, reports of contaminated products on grocery shelves kept cropping up, with new consumer complaints about mouthwash, nasal spray and rice.

In Florida, hundreds of bags of white rice were voluntarily withdrawn from shelves in 114 7-Eleven stores in three counties after a woman reported becoming nauseated after eating it. However, authorities said the rice might have been accidentally contaminated by chemicals, possibly by exterminators.

In the Chicago suburb of Oak Park, Ill., police on Thursday told retail stores to check bottles of Listerine mouthwash for possible contamination after a woman reported mouth burns from an unwrapped bottle.

And a Texas man was hospitalized Thursday after experiencing nose pain from inhaling nasal spray that "was more acidic than normal," authorities said.

In Jacksonville, Fla., Edward Allen Parker, 27, reported he took a swig of 7-Up on Sunday and got a mouthful of bleach, but health officials said Thursday it was an accident.

City health inspector J.D. Green said the 32-ounce glass bottle was filled with bleach to be used for cleaning and put under a back room sink at a convenience store Oct. 5. Sometime after that, Green said, an unidentified employee mistook it for 7-Up and put in in the cooler.

The company in Jacksonville that bottled the soda pop had expressed disbelief that bleach could have gotten into its product.

Health officials were testing samples of rice from a Lakeland, Fla., store after 7-Eleven officials ordered hundreds of bags of the product pulled from store shelves in Tampa, St. Petersburg, Lakeland and Clearwater on Thursday.

A woman reported she and her family became nauseated after eating Martha White rice, and returned a half-full bag uneaten, police said.

A Polk County Health Department inspector found the remaining rice "had a peculiar odor," like insecticide, said Al Hudson, Polk County sanitarian supervisor.

There was no answer after office hours Thursday at the Martha White rice distributor's headquarters in Nashville, Tenn.

The rice was recalled "strictly as a precautionary measure," said 7-Eleven attorney Mike Sunshine in Atlanta.

Sunshine declined to speculate where the contamination could have occurred. Sanitarian Bill Melton said it might have occurred at the warehouse or by an insecticide sprayed in the store by exterminators.

In Oak Park, Ill., Sadie Daughtrey, 38, apparently suffered mouth burns from sulfuric acid from a bottle of Listerine that had been on the store shelf without the mouthwash's normal brown paper wrapping.

Police Chief Keith Bergstrom said the burning occurred Sunday, the same day she bought the mouthwash at a Jewel Food Store in Oak Park.

Mrs. Daughtrey was treated and released from Oak Park Hospital, said Larry Eils, director of Oak Park's Public Health Department.

Cities try to prevent 'tricks'

By SCOTT KRAFT
Associated Press Writer

The Tylenol scare and fears of copycat killers are prompting more and more communities to ban trick-or-treating, or at least urge parents to keep their little ghosts and goblins at home this Halloween.

Earlier this week, an Associated Press survey found only one town with a Halloween ban. But by week's end at least five cities had outlawed trick-or-treating and dozens of others were strongly suggesting that parents keep their children off the streets.

"It's like banning Santa Claus but keeping Christmas," explained City Council President Bernard Chartrand after Fitchburg, Mass., banned Halloween trick-or-treating by saying "the safety of our children is at stake."

Four other Massachusetts towns voted similar bans and at least one other community is scheduled to consider such a resolution next week.

All cite the Chicago-area deaths of seven people who took Extra-Strength Tylenol spiked with cyanide. Since the deaths three weeks ago, authorities have discovered isolated cases of acid or poison in products such as mouthwash and eyedrops in several states, including California, Florida, Ohio and Colorado.

"Our concern is for the youngsters," said Police Chief Harold L. Olson in Palmer, Mass., where selectmen voted unanimously Wednesday to ban trick-or-treating. "It's not to punish the kids."

Benton Harbor, Mich., commissioners approved a resolution urging parents to keep their children home or throw private parties. Although they didn't make trick-or-treating against the law, Commissioner Mildred Wells said: "We're not sanctioning it."

"Maybe we'll have to do away with Halloween," said Dr. Russell Currier, chief of disease prevention for the Iowa Department of Health. "Maybe it's a custom that has outlived its usefulness."

A hospital in Des Moines, Iowa, and another in Cheyenne, Wyo., will be offering free X-rays of trick-or-treat bags.

"I'm afraid it's come to this," said Mary Ellen Kimball, a spokeswoman at Northwest Community Hospital in Des Moines. X-rays can only detect metal objects, however, not poisons, she added.

A Perry, Iowa, hospital decided against offering free X-rays because "it might be the impetus for some crazy to put something in the candy," said a Dallas County Hospital spokesman.

On Wednesday, for example, a teen-ager in Austin, Texas, said she found a needle buried in a candy bar purchased at a convenience store. Police said it appeared to be an isolated incident.

Miami Mayor Maurice Ferre has asked the city manager to put extra police on patrol Halloween night for "our children's safety."

"The shocking reality that the Tylenol murderer is still at large and the influence that this had had on other unstable minds, including putting acid in eyedrops and other horrors, greatly concerns me," Ferre said.

Trick-or-treating in Massachusetts has been banned in Methuen, Dudley and Holland — as well as Fitchburg and Palmer. Officials in Hull ordered a 6 p.m. curfew on trick-or-treaters and Weymouth imposed a 5 p.m. to 8 p.m. limit. New Bedford, a community of 100,000, will vote on a proposed ban next Thursday.

Most city officials have been reluctant to forbid all trick-or-treating.

Atlanta Public Safety Commissioner George Napper urged parents to plan small parties for children in lieu of trick-or-treating and the Council of PTAs urged the same in Omaha, Neb., where county health officials reported increased calls from concerned parents.

No 'breakthroughs' foreseen in Mideast talks

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administation and top Arab leaders are complimenting each others' Mideast peace plans, but U.S. officials were not predicting any "dramatic breakthrough" in talks today.

A six-nation Arab delegation headed by Morocco's King Hassan, and including the foreign ministers of Jordan, Syria, Algeria, Tunisia and Saudi Arabia arrived at the White House this morning for nearly three hours of meetings with President Reagan.

A senior U.S. official said Reagan would tell the delegation that the road to peace requires Arab nations to "start coming out of the closet" and openly declare whether they will recognize Israel.

Reagan, Vice President George Bush and the Arab officials posed for photographs in the Rose Garden. The president and Hassan did not reply to questions shouted by reporters, including whether the Arabs were prepared to recognize Israel.

Secretary of State George P. Shultz met with Hassan at the home of the Moroccan ambassador here Thursday night in what was described as a courtesy call. Earlier in the day, Shultz conferred with Israeli Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir, primarily on Lebanon.

The administration chose not to publicly object that the delegation includes a representative of the Palestine Liberation Organization, although U.S. officials said they wouldn't allow him at their meetings.

An Arab League official, Clovis Maksoud, chided the administration Thursday, saying the U.S. refusal to receive the PLO representative meant that only "six-sevenths" of the delegation would meet with Reagan.

The purpose of the Arabs' visit, planned long in advance, was to lobby for the Arab peace plan, adopted at Fez, Morocco last month.

DPS fears window film may cloud effectiveness

By VINCE GIORGI
Staff Writer

Hoping to give motor vehicle owners help in their ongoing battle to beat Texas' sometimes unmerciful heat, the Department of Public Safety recently approved the use of glass-coating materials on all automobile windows except windshields.

But while the decision may serve drivers in their attempts to seek privacy and stay cool, a local DPS highway patrol official said the new regulations will give state troopers just one more cause for caution as they approach dark-windowed vehicles.

David Wells, DPS spokesman in Austin, said that effective Oct. 18 automobile owners may install DPS-approved, non-reflective film on all windows except windshields. Prior to the regulation change, it was unlawful to coat the windshield and windows on the driver's immediate left and right.

Glass-coating materials applied to windows behind the driver's seat need not be DPS approved, said Wells. However, he added that vehicles with coated rear windows must have rear-view mirrors mounted outside both the left and right sides of their vehicle.

Wells said glass-coating materials were originally outlawed by the state because no nationally recognized standards had been established for the films. He said DPS officials also were concerned over the potential hazards resulting from possibly insufficient visiblity and the blinding of other motorists by reflective film.

This summer, the American Association of Motor Vehicle Administrators tested and approved several samples of

New Department of Public Safety regulations effective Oct. 18 permit the installation of DPS-approved, non-reflective coating on automobile windows to the immediate left and right of the driver's seat. A local DPS official is concerned that dangerous drivers may conceal themselves behind such windows and make a trooper's job more dangerous.

Saturday good time to rake lawn

According to the National Weather Service forecast, Saturday might be the ideal day to rake the lawn, winterize the car or gather firewood in anticipation of winter's arrival.

Saturday should be fair and a little warmer than today, with a high in the low-70s and southeast winds clipping along at 5-10 mph. Tonight will be fair and cool with a low in the low-40s and southeast winds at 5-10 mph.

No precipiation in the forecast should keep monthly and yearly rainfall totals at 1.01 and 12.63 inches, respectively.

Thursday's high of 69 degrees fell well short of the record high 91 in 1979. The overnight low of 37 more nearly approximated the record low 33 set in 1975.

Midwest under frost, freeze warnings

By The Associated Press

Frost or freeze warnings went into effect across most of the Ohio Valley, Illinois and parts of Tennessee.

Rain fell over the eastern Carolinas, with a few showers over southern Georgia and northern Florida. Rain also fell along the northern and central Pacific Coast, and in Louisiana and southern and eastern Texas.

Scattered showers and thunderstorms were forecast for later today in Florida and were expected to continue in northern California and the Pacific Northwest.

Clouds were predicted across the upper Ohio Valley and central and eastern Texas. Sunny skies were forecast elsewhere.

Other reports:

Pallbearers lower the casket of Bess Truman at the gravesite at the Truman Library in Independence, Mo., Thursday as Mrs. Truman's daughter Margaret Truman Daniel, her husband, Clifton Daniel (escorting Margaret) and their sons follow behind the casket. Mrs. Truman, who died Monday at age 97, was buried next to the grave of her husband, former president Harry Truman.

Bess Truman buried next to her husband

INDEPENDENCE, Mo. (AP) — Former first lady Bess Truman, her mahogany casket draped with 100 yellow vanity roses, was buried less than a mile from the Sunday school classroom where she and Harry S. Truman met and became childhood sweethearts.

Nancy Reagan and former first ladies Rosalynn Carter and Betty Ford were on hand Thursday as Mrs. Truman was buried beside her husband in the grassy courtyard of the Truman Library.

Mrs. Truman, lovingly called "Boss" by the late president, died Monday of congestive heart failure at age 97.

"Your presence as family and friends is 'a well-spoken word' in testimony to a life well-lived," the Rev. Robert L. Hart, church rector, told about 140 invited guests at the 101-year-old Trinity Episcopal Church where Mrs. Truman was married in 1919. "Bess Truman was a Christian woman, a woman of integrity, graciousness and intelligence.

"All of us here today are Mrs. Truman's eulogy," Hart said. "You know who she was and what she was. You know what she meant to you; what she meant to our city and state; to the nation, and to the church. Let us now lift her up to God in thanksgiving. Let us give thanks for her life."

Truman's will, written in 1961, directed that the marker on Mrs. Truman's grave carry the inscription: "First Lady, the United States of America, April 12, 1945-Jan. 20, 1953."

"It's a feeling of emptiness," said Robert Truman Ragland, a second cousin, describing his reaction to Mrs. Truman's death

non-reflective glass coating after the Vehicle Equipment Safety Commission established industry standards for the material. With AAMVA approval on record, Wells said the DPS decided to re-evaluate its policy on glass coatings.

"We can understand a lot of people's desire to do this (coat their automobile windows)," said Wells, explaining that the film reduces glare and slows accumulation of heat inside a vehicle by blocking some of the sunlight beaming through windows.

But while blocking sunlight, the same coating can obscure or conceal a potentially dangerous driver, a fact of concern to some DPS troopers.

Capt. Tony White, of Midland's DPS highway patrol division, said smoky windows could pose additional problems for troopers approaching a vehicle.

"It does make it more difficult for the officer to determine what he's stopping," said White. "The only thing it will do is to make him more cautious."

White said troopers will be watching for the DPS approval sticker on coated windows. He said the citations for unlawful window coating will be dished out at the discretion of the trooper involved.

Lt. Herman Wicker, of Midland's police traffic division, said his department has not had much difficulty with illegally coated windows. He said officers more frequently encounter windows smeared with shoe polish or a broken window replaced by cardboard, hazardous situations that can obstruct a driver's vision.

But while improperly coated windows have not been a large problem, "it's a violation of the law and naturally, if we come upon it, we'll enforce it," Wicker said.

Trooper Joe Agan, of Midland's vehicle inspection division, said enforcement of the window regulations will fall to law enforcement officials, since DPS motor vehicle inspections do not include window-coating provisions. One DPS official noted that enforcement of window-coating regulations during inspections is impractical since the vehicle owner could wait until just after inspection to coat his windows with illegal material.

Wells said manufacturers will be required to submit film samples for testing and approval by the AAMVA before receiving DPS approval. He said windows covered with approved film must also bear a sticker that will enable law enforcement officers to identify DPS-approved window coating. Only coatings that block less than two-thirds of the sunlight are qualified for DPS approval, he said.

Joe White, a DPS vehicle inspectorin Austin, said only about six manufacturers produce the glass coating in this country. To date, White said two manufacturers, Gila River Products of Chandler, Ariz., and Martin Processing Co., Inc., of Martinsville, Va., have met both AAMVA and DPS approval. White said additional approvals for other manufacturers are likely soon.

White said that because windshield glass is tinted, both auto manufacturers and safety officials agree that windshield coating "is a no-no, it is to be left alone."

He said part of the rationale behind the DPS ban on window-coating materials was the hazards produced by coated windshields, which can interfere with eye contact between drivers.

Watt sees fight as battle between Volvos, Ford pickups

WASHINGTON (AP) — To Interior Secretary James Watt, it's a battle between people who drive Volvos and those behind the wheels of Ford pickups — wealthy people with time on their hands vs. middle class Americans concerned about jobs and growth.

But the environmentalists fighting Watt this election season see things differently. To them, they are on a holy crusade against forces seeking to turn back a decade of progress in cleaning up America.

There is no doubt that the Reagan administration has the "green vote" stirred up this year. Thousands of environmental volunteers have abandoned the woods to do their hiking door-to-door, handing out campaign literature.

Environmental groups expect to raise $2 million — double the amount raised for 1980 campaigns. Instead of just one environmental group drumming up campaign contributions, there are now five.

The Sierra Club, breaking a 90-year-tradition, issued its first endorsements ever in congressional races. In all, environmental groups are backing more than 150 House and Senate candidates.

WATT, THE environmentalists' favorite whipping boy, says he is being made a target of a vocal minority of wealthy dilettantes.

"I find its the old Ford pickups with rifle racks on the back that have pro-Watt stickers," he said in a recent speech. "I'd rather be allied with the owners of Fords or Chevy pickups than the Volvo owners of America."

Environmentalists say their support is broader than the "wine-and-brie" set. The Reagan environmental policies are so radical, they contend, that millions of Americans are being driven to sign up in opposition.

The issues bringing environmentalists out are as varied as the geography. In New England, it's acid rain; in Florida, it's clean water and beach erosion; in New Jersey, toxic waste dumps, and in California, Watt's ambitious offshore drilling program has people upset.

The issues have generated a variety of responses:

—In San Francisco, environmentalists have mobilized to aid one of their stars, Democratic Rep. Phil Burton, who finds himself, because of redistricting, in a tough re-election battle. The Sierra Club put Burton on the cover of its magazine, the first human ever so honored. Fund-raisers sponsored by environmentalists have brought in almost $100,000 to the Burton campaign, the biggest outpouring for a single candidate.

—THE LEAGUE OF Conservation Voters, the oldest of the politcally active environmental organizations, is using radio advertising for the first time. They have blanketed Vermont with campaign pitches for Republican Sen. Robert Stafford, chairman of the Senate Environment Committee, and Maine with ads for Democratic Sen. George Mitchell. The ads begin with a thunderclap and the sound of rainfall as actor Robert Redford praises the two senators' efforts to battle the dangers of acid rain.

—The league also is preparing radio ads for a campaign aimed at defeating opponents on the House Interior Committee. It has labeled six Republicans "Watt clones" for their support of the interior secretary. If the league is successful in defeating any of them, it will increase its slim margin of supporters on this key committee.

The six targeted in the "clone" campaign are Manuel Lujan Jr., New Mexico; Dan Marriott, Utah; Larry Craig, Idaho; Bill Hendon, North Carolina; Dave Staton, West Virginia, and Denny Smith, Oregon.

—VARIOUS ENVIRONMENTAL groups are sending organizers into New Mexico where they hope to knock off Republican Sen. Harrison Schmitt, who received the lowest Senate score in the league's annual ranking of voting records.

—The Sierra Club, which last year got 1.1 million Americans to sign petitions seeking Watt's ouster, computerized that list and is making it along with its membership roles available to 100 congressional candidates for fundraising appeals. The club also has the names of the 35,000 people who circulated the petitions and is seeking to get them to volunteer in campaigns.

"All these huge multimillion-dollar campaigns have gone about as far as they can go and people are realizing the importance of foot soliders," says Doug Scott, director of federal affairs for the Sierra Club. "We can supply the foot soldiers."

BUT WATT'S supporters say environmentalists are overemphasizing the importance of their issue.

"The polls we have seen rank the environmental issue way down in the pecking order," said Doug Baldwin, Watt's chief spokesman. "People are concerned about the economy, jobs, inflation."

Environmentalists say they don't mind that their issue is outranked by others in deciding elections.

"We're political realists. To help get our candidates elected, we may be distributing literature that doesn't mention the environment. That's O.K.," Scott said.

Study says U.S. history texts ignore horrors of war

NEW YORK (AP) — American history textbooks generally fail to impress upon school children the horrors of nuclear war, according to a new study of 11 of the most widely used texts.

"Not one of the 11 textbooks raised philosophical questions about the acceptability of war," says the survey, titled "Militarism in Textbooks: An Analysis," and published in the current Bulletin of the Council on Interracial Books for Children.

Bradford Chambers, editor of the Bulletin, said in an interview that the study was inspired in part by the current interest in nuclear disarmament. It was co-written by Sergiu Herscovici, a researcher at City University of New York, and Sharon Wigutoff, an author who has studied sexism and racism in children's books.

A few of the books are singled out for praise. "Let Freedom Ring: A United States History," written by Richard C. Brown and others, and published by Silver Burdett Co., is cited for offering "a very moving account" of the suffering at Hiroshima and Nagasaki, where atomic bombs were dropped during World War II.

"The Free and the Brave," a 750-page book published by Houghton Mifflin and written by Columbia University history professor Henry F. Graff, was cited as the only one of the 11 texts with a section that delved into the arms race and the "increased reliance on nuclear weapons."

But the textbook also was challenged by the study for failing to criticize President Dwight D. Eisenhower for threatening nuclear war to break a deadlock in peace talks during the Korean war.

Graff, in an interview, said the criticism was a "distortion," adding that "I don't know where you do the preaching in a textbook."

The study says nearly all the books examined fail to help students understand how "public funds spent on arms reduce funds for human needs," or "report on and question U.S. threats to use the nuclear bomb in the years since Hiroshima."

It also said the peace movement during the Vietnam War is given short shrift in some books.

The study is probably the first to analyze the way American history texts treat the subjects of war and the military.

Correction

In Wednesday's edition of The Midland Reporter-Telegram, M & E Industries was incorrectly identified as general contractor of the Polo Park Apartments, the complex in north Midland where two buildings were destroyed in a Tuesday night fire. According to Lynnette Lasater, property manager at Polo Park, the general contractor on the apartments is John Pass Investment of Dallas.

Also, the damage estimate of $1.25 million was incorrect, according to Ms. Lasater. There is no damage estimate available yet, Ms. Lasater said, adding that the figure would be announced at a later date.

Incumbents vie for seats due to redistricting

The Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — They have already taken one enormous political blow this campaign, at the hands of cartographers, census-takers, judges and statehouse pols.

Now they are pressed to avoid the ultimate beating, at the polls on Nov. 2. Exactly half will succeed.

They are the 12 House members who, because of the vagaries — and vengeances — of the redrawing of their states' congressional districts to conform to the population changes of the 1980 census, were forced to decide to run against other incumbents.

In their six contests, stretching from California to Massachusetts, the Democratic incumbents have taken the offensive, trying to wed their opponents to the Reagan economic program and emphasize its failures.

Rep. Barney Frank, a liberal Democrat from Massachusetts, strolled down the aisles of Congress during the last session whistling, "Me and My Shadow." This was a gibe at his opponent, Republican Rep. Margaret M. Heckler, who in 1981 was gung-ho for the Reagan program.

When California's irrepressible John H. Rousselot, R, one of the most staunchly conservative politicians in the country, found himself the victim of a Democratic redistricting plan that forced him to decide to run in a heavily Hispanic district, he did what any self-respecting House member in his position would do. He promptly joined the Hispanic Congressional Caucus and set out to become more Hispanic than his opponent, a bona fide Mexican American, Rep. Matthew G. (Marty) Martinez.

WHEN FRANK, WHO is a member of the House Select Committee on Aging, scheduled a committee hearing in mid-August in the new part of his and Heckler's redrawn district to discuss inequities in the Social Security system, hopefully at Heckler's expense, she was not to be outdone.

The night before the hearing, she persuaded a fellow Republican to resign his seat on the committee and let her take it. When Frank gaveled the hearing to order the next morning, who was seated at his side?

There is no end to the insider's jockeying. Incumbents best know the foibles and weak spots of other incumbents, they know the procedural votes, the embarrassing inconsistencies, the glories of pulling things out of context.

Frank, for example, has made a big issue of Heckler's support of something called the Notch Act, a part of the Social Security Act of 1977 that Frank claims is inequitable to people born after 1917. He neglects to point out that the entire Democratic leadership of the House, from Speaker Thomas P. (Tip) O'Neill Jr. and Aging Committee Chairman Claude Pepper on down, supported the same provision.

HECKLER, IN TURN, has ads contending that Frank has voted to reduce the penalties against rapists. South Dakota Rep. Clint Roberts, R, makes similar charges against the incumbent he is opposing, Rep. Thomas A. Daschle, D.

Indeed, they did vote that way, but the Republicans neglect to note that the bill they voted on had to do with changes in the District of Columbia criminal code that were fully supported by women's groups and law enforcement officials as a way to increase convictions.

Since 1954, 92 percent of all House members seeking re-election have won. The figure for Senate races, where big-picture issues come more readily in focus, is 80 percent over the same period; in the three elections since 1976, it has fallen to 62 percent.

The showdown between Heckler and Frank is expected to be one of the most heavily funded in the country, with Heckler raising close to $750,000 and Frank more than $1 million.

Daschle has tried to force Roberts to give back big-business contributions. Roberts has refused. Both candidates are receiving heavy out-of-state contributions.

SOME REPUBLICANS, where voter sentiment is hospitable, have joined the battle on the Democrats' terms and defend Reaganomics. More, however, are bobbing and weaving, trying to play instead the more familiar games of personality, constituent service and seniority.

In New York, which lost two seats to reapportionment, Rep. Guy V. Molinari, R, brings to the race his Staten Island base while Rep. Leo C. Zeferetti, D, hails from the Bay Ridge section of Brooklyn. The numbers of the joined district favor Molinari, who had represented 70 percent of it before. Still, to buttress himself against an attack on Reaganomics, the Republican took the precaution of voting to override the president's veto of the 1982 supplemental appropriations bill.

Just north of New York City, in what the state legislature dubbed the "fair fight" district, Democratic Rep. Peter A. Peyser wants to talk about the nuclear freeze and the economy, while Republican Rep. Benjamin A. Gilman, who has represented more of the district, prefers to stress constituent service.

And in Missouri, Democratic Rep. Ike Skelton likes to lambast Reaganomics, while the Republican, Rep. Wendell Bailey, talks about the now repealed tax deduction Congress voted itself. Bailey didn't take advantage of it; Skelton did.

No stamps required

Three days after the disastrous San Franciso earthquake of April 18, 1906, the postmaster, on his own authority, began to let private letters pass without stamps if they bore the inscription, "San Francisco Free." The Los Angeles post office ignored the frank and marked such letters "Postage Due 2cts."

People disturbed over huge amount of money which finances campaigns

WASHINGTON (AP) — The huge amount of money financing this most expensive congressional campaign in history disturbs many people, but their reactions and proposals for reform vary as widely as their political views.

To some, the cost of elections and the influx of political action committee money corrupts the political process and politicians, adding up to a scandal that requires new limits on contributions and spending.

To others, existing federal regulations damage the American system by limiting people's ability to vote with their dollars. Lifting all the limits, while continuing to require that all contributions and spending be made public, is their solution.

Public financing of congressional races, along the lines of the partial public financing of presidential campaigns, is another idea put forward repeatedly.

And some even suggest that the availability of major amounts of campaign money has created more real competition in Congressional elections where incumbents once seemed invulnerable.

"WE HAVE ANOTHER national scandal on our hands today," said Fred Wertheimer, president of Common Cause, a leader in the push for campaign law changes for the past decade. "This one has been legitimized because PACs are legal.

"When our public officials are dependent and obligated to folks to foot the bills for their campaigns, of course that brings special power and special influence," he added. "We are seeing more and more decisions in Congress being made not on the merits, but on political money."

Rep. Millicent Fenwick, who is not taking PAC money in her try for the New Jersey Senate seat, said "an enormous gulf opened at my feet" when she first heard a fellow House member explain his vote solely in terms of the campaign contributions he received.

"I think it does an enormous amount of damage," said the Republican candidate. "You can see it happen every day on the floor of the House."

But others see the situation differently.

"People who are politically organized are going to get involved and find ways to influence the political process," says congressional scholar Michael Malbin, whether it is through PACs, lobbying or other methods.

ACCUSATIONS THAT America's doctors — through the PAC run by the American Medical Association — "buy votes" on legislation with their contributions are ridiculous, an AMA official says.

"We've been giving PAC money for over 20 years," said Toba Cohen, director of public information for the AMA, whose PAC is one of the largest, oldest and most sophisticated PACs. "Everybody gives PAC money. This bugaboo about the AMA's PAC's buying votes is nonsense...It's an emotional red herring.

"To say that you can buy Congress really says something unnecessary and kind of demented about the whole political process."

Malbin said the levels of campaign spending in this country are not high relative to other democracies.

"The amount of money being spent is fairly impressive," he adds. "In comparative terms, we are in the lower half of democratic nations in amounts spent per voter."

For example, British elections cost much more per voter than the American campaigns, he said.

COMMON CAUSE SUPPORTS a bill now before Congress that would limit a candidate to accepting a maximum of $75,000 from all PACs. Some candidates will collect $200,000 and more in PAC money this year.

"We would want a cap on maximum PAC contributions," said Wertheimer. "It would simply dilute their capacity to influence legislation.

Eventually, Wertheimer said Common Cause would like to see a congressional system much like the presidential system — federal matching money for small contributions and then perhaps full financing for the general election.

But most of the people who are running PACs will say, usually not for attribution, that they would like to see no limits, not more limits.

Icelandic port benefits from volcanic blast

VESTMANNAEYJAR, Iceland (AP) — This bustling fishing port, partly buried by a 1973 volcanic eruption, is prospering again thanks to the side effects of the massive lava flow.

What the Helgafell volcano on Heimaey Island ruined during its five-month eruption, it is steadily making up to the islanders. Not only did the lava improve the harbor — the island's lifeline — it also provided a unique source of fuel.

Professor Thorbjorn Sigurgeirsson says the volcano has supplied the islanders with cheap energy for a decade — heating 98 percent of their homes as well as the fish-farming plant — and "if you include the improvement of the harbor, I would say the islanders may break even with Helgafell."

Before the eruption, the harbor was a nightmare to fishermen.

Locals called the harbor "where the bones lie," because in this century alone, 121 fishermen have died trying to navigate it.

The entrance was 800 yards wide, wide open to easterly and southeasterly storms. Trawlers had to seek shelter on the western side of the island when the winds blew.

Now the entrance, partially blocked by lava, is only 170 yards wide and gives perfect asylum to threatened trawlers. "I'll say we couldn't have a better harbor," said Tourist Council official Pall Helgasson. "Now there is not even a need for a pier."

Helgafell's eruption in the early hours of Jan. 23, 1973, preceded by two powerful earthquakes, surprised islanders who had rested confident in the knowledge that the mountain had lain dormant for more than 5,000 years.

Most of that is restored now. A new residential area has been built in the western part of town, the islanders taking the precaution of building everything in reinforced concrete.

The houses also remind islanders of their good fortune when the volcano blew. Because the island's fishing fleet was moored in the harbor to ride out a storm, its 5,200 people were evacuated within hours. The fishermen and personnel of the U.S. air base at Keflavik, 30 minutes away by air on the main island of Iceland, joined in the rescue effort.

The lava first crept eastward, toward the tiny island's interior. After a week it switched course, threatening the harbor. Sigurgeirsson, a professor of geophysics at Reykjavik University, suggested using water to stop it.

He said the evaporating water would extract enough heat to solidify the front of the wall of molten rock, acting as a barrier to the lava behind. It worked, just in time to save the harbor.

Texas town takes up collection to pay two weeks' salaries for police officers

RISING STAR, Texas (AP) — Residents of this WestZfor a permanent way to meet the payroll.

Police Chief Curtis McGlothlin and officer Dennis Hall received their paychecks four days late Tuesday after the Eastland County community took up a collection.

Rainbow Cafe owner Robin Reed said $1,074 was raised in about a week to pay the officers.

Mayor H.L. Killion said the salary solution is temporary, and the permanent answer may not come until council members consider whether to adopt a 1982-1983 budget on Oct. 28.

Paul McCartney, Yoko Ono end 'war' after John Lennon's death

LONDON (AP) — Despite a fabled "war" between Paul McCartney and Yoko Ono, the former Beatle says he occasionally socializes with John Lennon's widow.

"You know what's been very important to me? It's that now John's dead, Yoko says he liked me after all. That means so much," McCartney said in an interview with the magazine Woman's Realm published Thursday.

P. McCartney

"This seems to surprise some people because they think she and I are at war, perhaps because of the events of the last 10 years," McCartney said. "But during the last year or so, we've had a better relationship than we've ever had — which is fine."

McCartney, 40, said he and his wife, Linda, occasionally socialize with Miss Ono.

McCartney admitted that before Lennon was shot to death in New York in December 1980, he "could be quite rude about the music I made after the Beatles split up."

After Lennon's death, McCartney says he wrote the song "Here Today" because "I just had to tell the truth and say, 'John, I love you.'"

McCartney said Lennon's death "marked the end of an era. It really wrapped the Beatles up for me, although the four of us had never really thought we'd get back together."

Jimmy Carter

ATLANTA (AP) — Former President Jimmy Carter will leave Saturday on a five-nation European visit, his office here says.

Spokeswoman Jane Simpson said Thursday that Carter will visit Great Britain, Belgium, Germany, Switzerland and Italy for "meetings with friends." He will arrive in Britain on Sunday for his first visit to that country since May 1977.

The former president will pay courtesy calls on Chancellor Helmut Kohl of West Germany, Prime Minister Wilfried Martens of Belgium, and President Fritz Honegger and Vice President and Foreign Minister Pierre Aubert of Switzerland.

Carter, who will return home Oct. 30, will be traveling without his wife, Rosalynn. She will stay in Plains to work on her book, a spokesman said.

NEW YORK (AP) — Someday, Elizabeth Taylor says, she may write or film her life story — but now is not the time and ABC-TV is not the place.

The film and stage star is filing suit against the network to keep a "fictionalized docu-drama" about her from being broadcast this season.

Liz Taylor

"My career is at stake and I'm angry," Miss Taylor said Thursday, announcing the lawsuit.

"Some day I may write an autobiography or I may even do a film autobiography — and this is taking away from my income," the 50-year-old actress said. "I am alive now. I am a working actress. And I plan to go on working a long time."

Tom Mackin, ABC director of program information, said the network had no comment on the suit. He also declined to say whether such a docu-drama was planned.

The suit, filed in U.S. District Court in New York, says ABC plans to broadcast a film based on Miss Taylor's life, titled either "The Elizabeth Taylor Story," or "Liz," sometime this season.

Miss Taylor said she didn't know who had been cast to play her.

The film "is not a biography or documentary," but a "fictionalized docu-drama, deliberately employing manufactured dialogue and invented incidents," the suit says.

"It's fictionalized — unless these people were under the carpet or under the bed for my 50 years," she added.

"My livelihood depends — and don't laugh — on my acting...the way I look and the way I sound," said Miss Taylor, who will appear in a Broadway production of "Private Lives" next spring with her former husband, Richard Burton.

It was the first time they had left the principality since the death of Princess Grace on Sept. 14, following a stroke and an auto crash. Princess Stephanie, 17, was injured in the crash.

She was still wearing a neck brace Thursday, a British Airways official said.

"If it's OK in London and in Boston, I don't know what the problem is in Pittsburgh," Previn said.

"I'm not doing it to appear any less formally dressed for the occasion," he said. "It helps to make the work easier."

Instead of the traditional white tie and tails, Previn has begun conducting in a formal sleeveless jacket designed by his London tailor. The outfit also includes a white shirt and matching black tuxedo pants.

"Some people have been tickled, some have been upset," he said, adding that Previn plans to wear the outfit wherever he conducts.

The outfit is practical — his arms are much more visible to musicians — and it's a sign of changing times, Previn says.

"Twenty-five years ago, when people went to concerts or the theater, they got dressed up in a suit, a cocktail dress, even black tie," he said. "Nowadays, people come to concerts any way they like."

Ape ignores artificial arm, uses feet to peel bananas

SEATTLE (AP) — One arm may not be as good as two, but it's all you need to peel a banana, a young Siamang ape has shown zoo officials.

Sai Buri, who lost her left arm above the elbow as an infant ape, was fitted with an artificial arm when she was 9 months old. But a year later, she still won't use it — so zoo officials have decided to let her do without it.

"She (Sai) was adapting extremely well without it, and she seemed more comfortable without it, so the decision was made to discontinue it," zoo spokesman Hank Klein said this week.

Sai lost the arm when her father bit it off, and zoo officials worried about how she would get around. Siamang apes travel mainly by swinging from branch to branch.

So she was fitted with an artificial limb, which she wore a set length of time daily while zoo nursery keeper Harmony Frazier-Taylor tried to show her how to use it. The arm was equipped with a curved, elbow-length hook and attached by a shoulder harness.

But the young ape, who will be 2 years old in January, has been peeling her bananas and swinging from branch to branch with just one arm for about six months now, Klein says. She has adapted well to life in the ape house with her companion Simon, a young Siamang from the Cincinnati Zoo, Klein said.

"I saw Sai two weeks ago at the zoo," said Sharon Greenberg, a University of Washington occupational therapy instructor who helped zoo officials develop the arm. "I could see how limited she was (in mobility), especially compared to her mate...but in her own environment she's more functional without the arm."

Sai uses her feet to peel bananas, Ms. Greenberg said.

Work will continue on monument to Crazy Horse

CUSTER, S.D. (AP) — Korczak Ziolkowski, who for 35 years painstakingly carved a mountain-monument to Chief Crazy Horse, said with his dying breath that he wanted his huge sculpture of the Sioux Indian finished, "but slowly, so you do it right."

It very well may take years, but a family spokesman said after Ziolkowski's death Wednesday that work on the 563-foot-high, 614-foot-wide monument would go on.

"It definitely will be carried on," said spokesman Robb DeWall. "He left everything so his wife, Ruth, and their children could carry on...And all the momentum he has given the project, it will continue and his family is dedicated to that end."

Ziolkowski, 74, died at a Sturgis hospital of complications from recent heart surgery. He will be buried Sunday in a crypt he built for himself at the base of the mountain.

His last words, DeWall said, were: "Crazy Horse must be finished. You must work on the mountain — but slowly, so you do it right."

ZIOLKOWSKI, A CRUSTY, gray-bearded artist, blasted 7.2 million tons of granite from Thunderhead Mountain north of Custer in his attempt to form the world's largest sculpture.

But 2 million tons more must be removed before the detailed carving can be done.

When completed, the three-dimensional sculpture will depict Crazy Horse, the Sioux chief who defeated Gen. George Custer in the battle of the Little Big Horn. The chief will be seated atop a prancing horse pointing across the mountains that were sacred to his people.

It will be so huge that 4,000 people will be able to line up along the outstretched arm; a 10-story building can be tucked beneath the arm and the horse; the horse's eye will be taller than a two-story building.

The dream of a mountain carving to honor American Indians began in 1940 when Ziolkowski, who had worked on Mount Rushmore with sculptor Gutzon Borglum, was approached by Chief Henry Standing Bear, a Sioux elder.

"Our people have heroes too," the old Indian said, and Ziolkowski's dream of a historic sculpture began.

AFTER SERVING IN World War II, Ziolkowski in 1946 accepted the invitation to create the monument. On June 3, 1948, five old survivors of the Battle of the Little Big Horn were among the dignitaries at a ceremony at which 10 tons of rock were blasted from the mountain.

Ziolkowski, himself a huge man, did much of the blasting in his early years, working alone on the mountain with a jackhammer and a homemade ladder.

He spent his summers chipping away at the face of the mountain. During the winters, he built a visitor center, workshops and roads at its base to support his work, which he wanted to be bigger than Mount Rushmore out of a rivalry with Borglum.

To those who complained he worked too slowly, Ziolkowski replied, "This is my dream. If I die, my dream dies too."

But by 1980, troubled by back injuries and two heart attacks, he loosened his rein on the day-to-day work and turned over the work to his family.

"I'm just a tool like a jackhammer now," he said in 1980. "If it wears out, you get a new one. Anyway, it is an ancient tradition to pass along an epic work for another to finish."

THE OGLALA SIOUX people, who live on the Pine Ridge Indian Reservation in South Dakota, want to see the monument finished, said Robert Fast Horse, the executive director of the tribe.

"We acknowledge that the Crazy Horse Monument was a tribute to a great man, Crazy Horse, a traditional leader of the Oglala people, and that Korczak had to be a man of great inspiration and art to undertake such a project as the Crazy Horse Monument," Fast Horse said.

Scientists urge space search

WASHINGTON (AP) — An international group of scientists is urging governments not to abandon efforts to communicate with other civilizations in space, if any exist.

Sixty-nine prominent scientists and academicians, in a letter published today in Science magazine, said that humans have the capacity to communicate through radio signals with civilizations thousands of light years away.

Several countries, including the United States, the Soviet Union and Great Britain, have conducted limited radio searches in the past.

Last October, an ambitious, six-year, $3.6 million U.S. search effort ended due to budget cuts by the Reagan administration.

The scientists and academicians, including several Nobel laureates, said, "We believe...a coordinated search program is well justified on its scientific merits."

Without such an effort, the decades-long debate over whether there is other intelligent life is likely to remain unresolved, they said.

The scientists, including astronomers, engineers, biologists, physicians, philosophers, anthropologists and computer experts from many countries, said they were divided on a number of questions concerning whether other life exists in space.

"But we are unanimous in our conviction that the only significant test of the existence of extraterrestrial intelligence is an experimental one," said the letter authored by Dr. Carl Sagan, the astronomer and author from Cornell University.

The Nobel laureates who endorsed the call include David Baltimore of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Francis Crick of the Salk Institute and Linus Pauling of the Pauling Institute for Science and Medicine.

Among the signers were: Philip Morrison and Marvin L. Minsky of MIT; A.G.W. Cameron, Edmond O. Wilson and Stephen Jay Gould, Harvard University; Fred Hoyle, Cambridge University, England; Vitaly L. Ginzburg, Lebedev Physical Institute, Moscow; Roald Z. Sagdeev, Soviet Academy of Sciences; Cyril Ponnamperuma, University of Maryland; Lee A. DuBridge and Bruce Murray, California Institute of Technology; and Rev. Theodore M. Hesburgh, president of Notre Dame University.

"Using current radioastronomical technology, it is possible for us to receive signals from civilizations no more advanced than we are over a distance of at least many thousands of light years," said the letter.

Latin American writers gain recognition

The 54-year-old Marquez is the fourth Latin American and the first Colombian to be cited by the Swedish Academy of Letters, which on Thursday called his work "a richly composed world of imagination, reflecting a continent's life and conflicts."

The first Latin American Nobel laureate was Chilean poet Gabriela Mistral, who won the prestigious award in 1945. Guatemalan novelist Miguel Angel Asturias claimed the prize in 1967 and another Chilean poet, Pablo Neruda, won it in 1971.

Other important contemporary writers in Latin American literature have long been considered candidates for the award.

Among the most prominent are Jorge Luis Borges, the 83-year-old Argentine writer of short stories and poetry; Mario Vargas Llosa, a Peruvian novelist and playwright, and Jorge Amado, Brazil's best-known storyteller.

GARCIA MARQUEZ IS THE world's best-selling contemporary writer in the Spanish language. His 1967 novel, "One Hundred Years of Solitude," has sold more than 5 million copies in 33 languages.

His novels, and the works of other prominent Latin American writers, are increasingly available in English and dozens of other languages. But their popularity remains highest in the Spanish-speaking world.

Some of these writers blame the lack of wider recognition on delays in translation of their works and a tendency by many readers to avoid translated literature on the ground that the quality of the original may be lost.

Lesser-known writers rarely appear in translation and, denied the more lucrative foreign markets, have a difficult time making ends meet. In many Latin American countries, a best seller means sales of only a few thousand copies.

Despite such obstacles, Latin American literature appears increasingly on the international scene. Literature critics say the imaginative style of Garcia Marquez and Borges especially influences a new generation of writers around the world.

An active political journalist who has lived in Mexico for 20 years, Garcia Marquez has long been at odds with the Colombian government's anti-leftist policies. He maintains contact with leftist causes and has held well-publicized meetings with Cuban President Fidel Castro.

Borges once took a right-wing stand in support of Argentina's military government. But he recently joined the ranks of those who criticize the ruling military, which often is condemned as being abusive of human rights.

Octavio Paz, a major Mexican poet and essayist, also is a Mexican diplomat. Nobel-winner Neruda was well-known for his support of the socialist government of Chilean President Salvador Allende.

Borges, considered the elder statesman of Latin American literature, specializes in a blend of fantasy and paradox in his intellectual style, and is renowned as a stylist in words and ideas.

ONE OF HIS MOST FAMOUS story collections, "Fictions," includes a piece entitled, "Pierre Menard, Author of Quixote."

It tells of a man who published a duplicate version of Miguel de Cervantes' 16th century classic, "Don Quixote," by studying the author's experience. The story, written in the form of a critical review, concludes that the duplicate version is different even though the words are exactly the same because they were written at different points in time.

In another short story, "The Circular Ruins," Borges compares the world of dreams with art, describing a man who fashions life from a dream, only to discover that he himself exists as the dream of another person.

Vargas Llosa, whose distinguished literary career includes occasional plays, describes many aspects of Peruvian society in most of his novels.

BUT HIS MOST RECENT work, "The Story of the End of the World," is set in northeastern Brazil during a 19th century civil insurrection. Critics describe the book as a moral and political metaphor on man's humanity and inhumanity.

Amado is by far the most popular Brazilian writer. His stories capture the picturesque atmosphere of northeastern Brazil, focusing on the romance and folklore of that African-influenced region. Several of Amado's works have been made into movies, notably "Dona Flor and Her Two Husbands."

Other important contemporary Latin American writers include Carlos Fuentes, a Mexican novelist; Brazil's Marcio Souza; Ernesto Sabato, Manuel Puig and Julio Cortazar of Argentinia; Augusto Roa Bastos, a Paraguayan; Jorge Onetti, Uruguayan; Jose Donoso, Chilean, and Cubans Luis Cabrera Infante and Alejo Carpentier.

WASHINGTON (AP) — In the last days before the election, President Reagan is using tougher language against his political opponents and putting a sharper edge on his campaign rhetoric to defend administration policies.

On a two-day campaign trip through Illinois and Nebraska that ended Thursday, Reagan accused one group of "lying in their teeth." He said critics of his economic program were trying to "stir up more fear and anxiety" about the recession at a time when Americans were psychologically vulnerable about the economy. And he bluntly declared, "I didn't cause this recession."

A White House official said Reagan's tough talk was not calculated or part of a new strategy. "I think it's just him," said the official who asked not to be quoted by name.

"It doesn't hurt, it doesn't hurt a bit," the official insisted. However, the official added, White House Chief of Staff James A. Baker III and Reagan pollster Richard Wirthlin were concerned the president's tact might polarize Democrats and hurt GOP election hopes.

WITH THE ELECTION just 11 days away, Reagan has only three more days of campaigning on his schedule. He plans to travel to Raleigh, N.C., next Tuesday and make a western swing next Thursday and Friday, probably to Montana, Nevada and New Mexico.

Speaking privately, the White House official said final travel plans will be made after a review of late political soundings throughout the country.

The chief advantage of a Reagan visit, the official said, is that "you take away the initiative from your opponent. You dominate the news media for a week, on either side of the event. It can honestly give a campaign momentum.

"With less than two weeks to go, that can be pretty important," the official added.

The intended beneficiaries of Reagan's politicking this week were Nebraska Gov. Charles Thone, an early Reagan supporter in the presidential primaries, and House Republican Leader Robert H. Michel of Illinois, a key figure in pushing the president's economic program through Congress.

IN OMAHA ON Thursday, Reagan campaigned with Thone before an enthusiastic crowd of 8,000 at a Republican rally in the civic auditorium. A flag-bedecked five-car miniature train carrying pompon-waving cheerleaders drove into the arena as Reagan arrived and was parked in front of the stage during his speech.

Defending Thone's record, Reagan said Nebraska residents were paying higher state taxes only because federal income taxes were cut.

"We gave him a problem in Washington," Reagan said, noting that the state tax is a piggyback on the federal tax and that Nebraska lost revenue when federal rates were cut.

"Those who said he raised your taxes...are lying in their teeth," Reagan told the audience. He did not mention anyone by name but left no doubt he was talking about Thone's challenger, Democrat Bob Kerrey, who has criticized the governor on the tax issue.

In fact, state individual income tax rates were raised from 15 percent to 17 percent of federal tax liability after federal taxes were cut.

DEVIATING FROM HIS prepared speech, Reagan defended the tax cut, saying it "was not a giveaway to the rich."

In another impromptu remark, he said that prior to his administration, "people who had no moral right to get (welfare) benefits from their fellow tax payers were getting them."

He said his critics were offering no alternative to his policies — only a "blind return to big spending, big taxing, more regulations, meddling and make-work, more government coming through the windows, under the doors and down the chimney."

State official asks networks to delay projecting winners

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — California's secretary of state is urging the broadcasting networks not to project winners in the Nov. 2 election until after the polls close at 8 p.m. Pacific time.

In letters Thursday to the presidents of NBC, ABC and CBS, Secretary of State March Fong Eu urged the networks to hold off on projecting winners so as not to affect late voting.

Such action, she said, would be "consistent with the public's right to know and to be free of media meddling in the election process."

Last year, Ms. Eu estimated that 401,000 Californians, who had intended to vote late, didn't vote in the 1980 general election after TV networks declared Ronald Reagan the winner and President Carter conceded before the polls closed on the West Coast.

She said several legislative and congressional races were affected.

Elephant threatens keepers

TACOMA, Wash. (AP) — Point Defiance Zoo officials are pondering the fate of their popular — and only — elephant, a 19-year-old pachyderm named Cindy whose nasty temper threatens the lives of her keepers.

"Why Cindy hasn't killed or maimed someone already is a complete mystery to me, but it is only a matter of time until she does so," said Roger Henneous, director of the elephant program at the Washington Park Zoo in Portland, Ore., who evaluated the animal.

Tacoma zoo director Gene Leo and zoo veterinarian Mike Jones told Metropolitan Park Board members that Cindy — a child star in Colorado supermarket promotions — may have to be removed from the zoo.

"Cindy has shown a progressively worsening aggressive behavior over the past eight to 10 years to a point now which I believe jeopardizes the safety of our staff who must work with Cindy," Leo told the park board.

BOARD MEMBERS postponed a decision on Cindy's fate until next month, noting her enormous popularity and saying they wanted to hear from the public before deciding the fate of the bad-tempered attraction.

Cindy came to Tacoma at age 2 in 1965 from Boulder, Colo., where she was used in promotions for a chain of supermarkets until her agent could no longer handle her.

The elephant came free, but Tacoma residents contributed about $7,000 at the time to build a facility for her. And a new home for Cindy was built under a $7 million zoo renewal bond issue in 1977.

"Several staff members have been hit, picked up, wrapped and thrown," Leo said. "Keepers have been instructed not to work directly with Cindy for their own safety."

Cindy's problems became apparent in about 1974, Jones said.

"AS SHE grew, she would not allow me to get close to her or her keeper, Richard Johnson, her favorite," Jones said. Recently "she picked me straight up in the air and if Rich hadn't been there, I wouldn't be here either," he added.

Jones said the only way to treat the elephant is to tranquilize her, which could kill her.

Cindy has no fellow elephants at the zoo, which "is certainly a factor" in her behavior problems, said Sue Vernon, a zoo development officer. But officials aren't entirely sure what has caused their ward's misconduct.

"In my 14-plus years of experience, dealing with four separate males and over a dozen females, I've never seen an elephant like Cindy," the Portland elephant director reported after spending five days with the animal. "She is by far the most aggressive, malevolent elephant I've ever seen and I suspect possibly the most dangerous elephant in the country."

Leo and his consultants suggested the zoo could sell Cindy, buy a baby African elephant for $20,000 to $30,000, or hire an elephant trainer to teach Cindy manners — at a cost of up to $35,000.

LEO SAID he favors the training alternative, although he gives it only a 50-50 chance of success, saying other elephant experts have failed in attempts to reform Cindy.

"This is a very difficult decision given Cindy's popularity in our community," Leo said.

"It seems the board should get (the opinions) of people in Tacoma too," said park board member Jerry Thorpe. "The people of Tacoma might say go ahead and spend the money (for retraining) and take the risk."

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Saturday, October 23, 1982

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: America's favorite late-night visitor, Johnny Carson, shares your birthday. Also born on this date: U.S. Sen. John Heinz (R-Pa.) of the 57 Varieties family, soccer superstar Pele, hockey coach Fred Shero and author-director Michael Crichton. You know what you want out of life and are now able to make major strides forward. It will take courage to persevere, but you eventually emerge on top. Expect things to get very busy around the first of the year. A journey abroad is a distinct possibility. Luck is on your side in financial matters. Although you are somewhat fickle, romance is mostly to your liking.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You find it much easier to achieve your family aims this weekend. A spirit of cooperation prevails, making things easier for everyone. Romance plays a dominant role in your social plans.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You have much to gain and nothing to lose by speaking out at a community meeting or family get-together. You need to get into good physical shape to handle the upcoming workload.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Push ahead with a plan to reduce your debts and build a nest-egg. You can afford to take a chance on loved one. Give free rein to your artistic talents.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): An excellent day for working around your house or apartment. Make a real effort to provide more comfort for your family. Better living conditions will improve your state of mind.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You will find the solution to a family problem more quickly if you avoid becoming emotional. Keep up with the times, but remain within your budget. Postpone gift-buying.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A close friend could be too emotional to be good company today. Spend time with relative and acquaintances who share your interests.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Logic helps you solve a personal problem. Legal matters move in your favor. Reestablish a longtime romantic relationship with new commitments.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): The ability to get along with others is emphasized today. Friendship and romance look highly promising. Extend your hospitality to newcomers.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Friends or neighbors do something nice for you. Concentrate on finding goals that you and mate can share. Watch a tendency to be extravagant.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Be cheerful about your obligations to your relatives and friends. They will be good to you, too. Nostalgia figures in your daydreams.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Use the morning to nurture a relationship that is on the verge of breaking up. Excessive independence could inhibit romance.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Postpone travel. Beware of get-rich-quick schemes. Weigh the pros and cons of changing jobs. Relatives voice valuable ideas.

Dear Charlie:

Here's a hand with a most unusual position. It cropped up in the Trials to select the Italian women's representatives for the current Venice Trophy Competition, being held in Biarritz, France.

I like West's jump to four spades, because it put a lot of pressure on the opponents. South wisely decided that she did not know whose hand it was, so she bid one more. In fact, four spades would have almost surely made—once South shows up with the ace of clubs, North must have both high diamonds for her opening bid.

West led the ace of spades, and it is up to East to direct the defense. Even looking at all four hands, it is not easy to spot how the defenders can come to three tricks. Ask our readers how they would continue.

East played the two of spades, a suit preference signal for clubs. (With a singleton in dummy, you can show suit preference in your long suit: a low card asks for a shift to the lower side suit; a high card asks for the higher side suit; and an intermediate card asks for continuation.) West dutifully shifted to a club, and declarer captured East's king with the ace.

A trump to the king was ducked, and East won the trump continuation. Now she exited with a diamond, and declarer was locked in dummy. She either had to concede a diamond trick, or else allow East to score her trump when she tried to get to her hand with a club. Rather pretty defense, n'est pas?

As ever,
Omar

Check the statistics

With the Permian Basin Oil Show in full swing at Ector County Coliseum in neighboring Odessa this seems like a proper time to dispell a myth about 1982's oil and gas activity.

If you talk to the right people in the right parts of the country, you may get a pretty bleak picture about oil and gas drilling this year. There's only one problem with the dreary forecasts of those doomsayers: The statistics don't back them up.

Most everybody in the Permian Basin who's even a little involved with the oil industry knows that 1981 was a remarkable year. Oil business was booming and the rig counts showed it, along with statistics for exploratory wells and completions. What everybody doesn't know apparently is that 1982 is just about as good.

The September report from the American Petroleum Institute, which provides statistics on wells reported between Aug. 21 and Sept. 23, indicates that total wells drilled for that period nationwide is only slightly below last year's total for that period. This year a total of 7,283 wells were drilled. Last year's total was 7,406 wells.

API's report also indicates it's exploratory wells that have dropped off, while the count for development wells remains strong. Exploratory wells drilled this year totalled 1,342 during that one-month period while last year's figure for that period was 1,442. But development wells drilled this year only lagged slightly back at 5,941, compared to last year's 5,964.

Another indication that 1982's oil and gas activity is strong despite the talk of the doomsayers can be found in Railroad Commission figures on refinery activity in Texas. During July this year, Texas' 62 refineries processed a total of 137,174,565 barrels of crude oil. Last year in July, the refineries processed a total of 130,093,707 barrles — more than 7 million barrels more crude than were processed in the same period this year!

What these figures mean is that the nation's oil industry is not floundering on the rocks as some would have you believe. It's true that fewer rigs are running this year and some sections of the industry are "soft." But the difference in the amount of oil being processed shows an underlying strength in the industry that bodes well for Americans and for the nation.

So before you believe the purveyors of gloom and doom, look at the statistics. You may find that what they're saying just won't hold water.

Twisting truth at U.N.

A free press is one of the treasures of the free world. With all its imperfections it constitutes an essential framework of freedom. Under dictators the press is a tool of the government.

So it comes as more than a mild disappointment that a group of senior officials at the United Nations have prepared a document highly critical of the way reporters in Western nations cover the U.N. To compound the insult, the U.N. report, which is about to be presented to Secretary General Javier Perez de Cuellar for his approval, has praise for the quality of journalism in the Soviet Union.

One does not have to be pro-American or anti-Soviet to realize that this is twisting the truth.

What the U.N. officials are concerned with, obviously, is not a free press, but a pro-United Nations press. They admit as much when the say that coverage by Russian journalists generates "continuing support." They are not so much interested in objective reporting as they are with what they describe in their report as "a favorable climate."

The report, all 5,000 words of it, is scheduled to be published next month if approved by the U.N.'s secretary general and its agency chiefs. Incidentally, it contains no documentation of the charges against the Western press.

We trust the secretary general who, in his short time in office has established a reputation for credibility and statesmanship, will get out his blue pencil. News about the U.N. should always be honest, and never slanted, and let the unfavorable chips fall where they may.

For the United Nations to suggest otherwise is a disservice, not only to the United Nations, but to the millions throughout the world who champion a free and responsible press.

Another View:

Solidarity's dream lives

When the Polish parliament outlawed Solidarity recently, it conceded failure in its efforts to either win a face-saving agreement of cooperation from Lech Walesa and other imprisoned leaders of the independent trade union or blot out all anti-communist resistance.

While the de-legalization measure marks the termination of a unique experiment in independent trade unionism in a communist-bloc country, it in no way spells the end of opposition to Poland's bankrupt socialist system.

President Reagan was not alone in calling the Polish leadership a "bunch of lousy bums." Similar words to that effect must have been expressed during strikes and protests in at least two major Polish cities, including at Solidarity's birthplace, the Lenin Shipyard in Gdansk.

More demonstrations can be expected. One underground wing of the suppressed organization already has called for a nationwide general strike on Nov. 10-11, the anniversary of both Solidarity's recognition by the Polish Supreme Court and Poland's independence from Russia in World War I.

Solidarity actually has been under a form of de facto de-legalization since last December when Polish communist leader Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski imposed martial law. At the time, the military dictator had declared that all trade unions merely were suspended and eventually could be revived.

That hardly is likely under the new trade union law which limits unions to the factory level and severely restricts the right to strike. Moreover, the nation's three million farmers, who had their own independent offshoot of Solidarity, are permitted no labor organizing whatsoever.

Solidarity's official demise may bolster Jaruzelski's military regime in the short-term, especially in the eyes of the Soviet Union, which must prop up the Polish government with both military and economic support. But it is questionable whether the Jaruzelski regime will find any more lasting security than predecessor governments that fell after worker revolts in the 1950s and 1970s.

Solidarity's demise also demonstrates the division within its ranks over finding a form of protest acceptable to the nine million Poles who once were eager to be among its members. But in trying to take advantage of these difficulties, the military government is only buying time.

As a movement advocating truly democratic principles of socialism, Solidarity was anathema to both the unpopular and corrupt communist bureaucracy in Poland and its bosses in Moscow. Brute force may have crushed the Solidarity leadership and apparatus. However, the desire of millions for freedom cannot be wished away with words.

Chemical warfare program just 'stink bomb'

Jack Anderson

Poison gas was used with such horrible effect in World War I that no nation dared to unleash it in World War II for fear of devastating retaliation in kind. Yet research in the deadly field went on, and scientists developed ever more lethal chemical warfare weapons.

Alarmed by reports that the Soviets had made great strides in perfecting nerve gas and other chemical/biological killers, Congress and the Reagan administration listened sympathetically to the generals' pleas to close the "gas gap." Over the past two years, hundreds of millions of dollars were appropriated to build up our chemical arsenal.

It's debatable whether the United States needs to achieve the capability of retaliating on an exact, tit-for-tat basis against whatever weapon the Soviets may decide to develop. Critics see no reason why the threat of nuclear weapons, for example, couldn't deter the first use of poison gas.

But on one point there is no argument: defending our front-line troops against a sneak chemical attack. Unfortunately, the Pentagon's chemical warfare defense program has turned into an expensive boondoggle that has wasted millions without developing the needed protective measures.

Quite simply, the protective gear intended to nullify the effects of an enemy gas attack are almost as dangerous as the enemy's chemicals. If it weren't so potentially tragic, it would almost be laughable.

The uniform designed to protect soldiers from poison gas — mask, boots, gloves and coveralls — can incapacitate or even kill the wearer.

An internal Army manual states that the outfit is so bulky and airtight that it "could cause significant numbers of heat casualties" if worn in hot weather. Soldiers encased in the protective garment "may experience heat exhaustion (dizziness and fainting) at any time," the report warns.

Being rendered even temporarily helpless on the battlefield is bad enough. But the protective gear can even cause heat stroke, which the Army report notes "has a 50 percent mortality rate."

Still, the Army concluded, after weighing "heat casualties versus chemical casualties," that the protective outfit should be worn after all. "Reduced chemical protection of troops should not be permitted unnecessarily," the Army warned, "because the risk of heat stress or even exhaustion normally involves only a brief illness, whereas chemical casualties can be much more serious ..."

The gas mask is also a problem. The Defense Department recognizes the possibility of "breathing difficulty caused by the mask," as well as an understandable impairment of the ability to hear and make oneself heard.

There has even been trouble with the antidote developed to counteract nerve gas. The original antidote was atropine, but that is so dangerous itself that the Army spent $1.4 million on a drug known as TAB (no relation to the soft drink).

But sources told my associate Lucette Lagnado that the new antidote contained a hallucinogen. Soldiers taking it would be "high" for hours. They might be protected against nerve gas, but they'd be helpless against other weapons — just as, in World War I, laughing gas was sometimes used to render enemy soldiers incapable of defending themselves against cold steel or lethal gas.

After this expensive false start, the armed services developed another, non-hallucinogenic antidote, and largely scrapped TAB.

Footnote: A team of investigators for the House Defense Appropriations subcommittee, chaired by Rep. Joseph Addabbo, D-N.Y., is now scrutinizing the Pentagon's chemical warfare expenditures more closely. A Pentagon spokesman said the Defense Department will use the increased funds to improve outdated protective gear.

REFUGEE DILEMMA: For nearly four years, the Ayatollah Khomeini has been persecuting Iranian religious minorities — Bahais, Jews and Christians. The State Department has finally decided to initiate a special refugee program for these Iranians — if they can manage to get out of their own country.

Refugee Coordinator Eugene Douglas was responsible for pushing the Foggy Bottom bureaucracy into the program, which he hopes will bring 8,000 Iranians to the United States in the next year.

One reason for the long delay in helping the Iranian religious minorities was the fear that Congress and the American public would be unwilling to offer shelter to Iranians of any kind because of the hostage crisis.

Another fear was that setting up a special program for Iranians would infuriate the ayatollah and cause him to intensify the persecution. Now, however, everyone agrees that the repression couldn't get any worse.

HEADLINES AND FOOTNOTES: Unemployment rates could surpass those of the Great Depression if the supply of Persian Gulf oil were to be cut off, according to an unreleased, congressional study. U.S. unemployment could jump from the current 10.1 percent to more than 35 percent as oil-dependent industries shut down. West Germany's jobless rate could hit 40 percent and France's could top 36.5 percent.

INSIDE REPORT:

Hayden soothing voters with words, money

PACIFIC PALISADES, Calif. — Tom Hayden, looking nothing like the radical street battler of the '60s, stopped by the Pacific Palisades Rotary Club in his new quest for power and told the conservative businessmen there that he wants "to save the free enterprise system from ruin."

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

"If I didn't know who he is, I'd probably be for him," one impressed Rotarian told us after the lunch. He and the others know Hayden is no ordinary Democrat running for the state Assembly but is the nation's leading left political activist. Accordingly, Hayden probably did not pick up one vote lunching with the Rotary at the posh Riviera Country Club.

But it was no wasted two hours. Hayden was so unalarming and reassuring that nobody left his speech ready to man the barricades against his election. That's why Hayden ventures into enemy territory to show himself off as just another Democratic politician, albeit with peculiarly innovative ideas.

Hayden is really far more than that. To win a seat in the state legislature, he will spend well over $1 million (helped no little by his money-making wife, Jane Fonda). That is double what is normally spent for governor in neighboring Western states. His precinct organization not only surpasses anything else in California, but probably cannot be matched anywhere in the nation.

With his financial and organizational resources, Hayden in Sacramento will clearly have his eye on the Assembly speakership some day soon — an office of pervasive power in California. His own organization, the Campaign for Economic Democracy (CED), is today concentrated in California, but has unmistakable national aspirations.

What Hayden and CED have in mind is worker representation in corporate decision-making, with a shared role of corporation, government, community and workers in setting policy. Hayden denies that is socialism, but it is certainly not free-market capitalism.

Hayden's policy aims produce agreement with Republicans by many mainline Democrats that now is the best time to stop him. If he cannot be elected to the state Assembly, Hayden is finished. That accounts for a $500,000-plus campaign budget for Bill Hawkins, the 37-year-old Republican neophyte opposing him in this overwhelmingly Democratic district. It also explains why the National Conservative Political Action Committee (NCPAC) for once has intervened in a state legislative race.

Self-styled "moderate" Hawkins is no less liberal than Hayden on abortion and ERA, but must paint him with a bright red brush. Hawkins billboards quote Hayden as saying, "We want to abolish a private property system ..." That is from "Trial," Hayden's 1970 book, and almost all of his own words used against him in this campaign are of no more recent vintage.

Hayden is more careful about what he says today. Wearing white shirt and tie, blue blazer and gray slacks, the old SDS firebrand was the model of decorum talking to the Rotarians a few blocks from the home where Ronald Reagan spent most of his adult life.

Hayden began by sympathizing with this conservative community's fight against off-shore oil and gas exploration ("This community has a right to the preservation of its character."). Warning that "we are on the brink of a new Great Depression," he attacked "liberal" remedies ("I think that liberals ought to admit that government bureaucracy is just as bad as corporate bureaucracy.").

Such rhetoric is not necessary in most of the district, which includes much of Santa Monica (called the "People's Republic of Santa Monica" after CED rent-controllers took over the city government) and half of UCLA's student body. In a district won easily by Jimmy Carter against hometown boy Reagan, the million-dollar campaign ought to propel Tom Hayden off the Chicago streets of 14 years ago into public office as a challenging and disturbing new force.

Rebel fans let team down

To The Editor:

I was ashamed of the attitude and actions of many of the Rebel fans last Friday night at the Lee-Permian game. In the face of extreme rudeness on the part of the Permian fans (rudeness Texas has grown to expect), the Rebel fans should have shown exemplary manners. They did not.

Coach Dykes, his staff and the young men on the Rebel varsity are winners. In every competition, some one has a higher score, but when you are playing with the highest standards, no one is a loser.

The majority of the Rebel fans, those who sat stone-faced during repeated efforts on the part of the cheerleaders and young trainers to get the adults to stand up and be supportive are a disgrace. The young people can only do so much. Can adults do nothing?

However, the talk of Odessa (especially from the loyal Mojo fans) for the next few months will be the rudeness of those Midland adults who, beginning with the start of the 4th quarter, poured out of the stands. This is extremely discouraging to those young people, both on and off the field. In addition, those of us who stay until the end (win, lose or tie) would like to be able to see the action on the field. This is impossible with the aisles filled with people.

Rebel fans, I hope in the future you will make a choice before you buy a ticket. Plan to stay until the end (you wouldn't get off a plane in the middle of the flight just because the ride was bumpy) regardless of the outcome. Plan to show some spirit and support for the team, the band and the cheerleaders — they do a fine job. Or, plan to stay at home.

As a rebel-ex who has aged to a Rebel mother, I'm proud of all the Rebel teams. Midland, the Rebel sophomores have beaten the Panther sophomores not once but twice this year. Look to the future....

Poor example

To The Editor:

Thursday afternoon I was among the many spectators who watched a high school homecoming parade. The afternoon was just perfect. All the students that participated are to be congratulated for their hard work on the floats. The marching bands were really great too.

There was one incident that bothered me, though. As the parade proceeded to march down Wadley, a rather irate and rude police officer drove down the street yelling and screaming at the top of his lungs. This police officer was screaming at the students because he felt that they were marching down the street at a rather slow pace. So an ultimatum was given: "Either move it or drop out now!"

I was there and I know for a fact that they were not lagging behind! It appeared to me that the officer was being totally obnoxious.

It's no wonder to me why some young people lose their respect for law officers. I hope that in the future this particular officer finds it in his heart to ask that something be carried out, rather than demand. Treat others as you would like to be treated yourself.

Who's paying?

To The Editor:

In all their appearances and bickering on various issues before the Texas Health Facilities Commission, the three area hospitals (Medical Center, Midland Memorial and Parkview) have incurred considerable legal and other costs.

Who's going to pay for these expenses? You don't suppose that they're going to pass the buck (and the charges) along to the patients, do you? If so, that's REALLY sick!

Reagan's economic program under fire

The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — Twenty-four months ago, candidate Ronald Reagan was lambasting President Carter for the national recession — sometimes he called it a depression — and deploring the human misery of the unemployed.

When angry Democrats challenged Reagan's use of the word depression, Reagan had this comment, at a luncheon in Columbus, Ohio:

"As far as I am concerned, the line between recession and depression cannot be measured in the strict economists' terms but must be measured in human terms. When our working people — including those who are unemployed — must endure the worst misery since the 1930s, then I think we ought to recognize that they consider it a depression."

The depression-recession argument provided Reagan with the most popular one-liner of the entire 1980 campaign: "If he (Carter) wants a definition, I'll give him one. A recession is when your neighbor loses his job. A depression is when you lose yours. And recovery is when Jimmy Carter loses his."

Today with the unemployment rate at 10.1 percent, the highest in 42 years, the shoe is on the other foot. Not that Reagan's own job is immediately on the line. But his handling of the economy has become the focus of the 1982 congressional elections, as Reagan seeks to avert heavy Republican losses in the Nov. 2 balloting for senators and representatives.

TWENTY-ONE MONTHS INTO his first term, Reagan still is blaming the Democrats for the state of the economy and insisting his program will work if the nation will only "stay the course."

And again last week, Reagan in his nationally televised address said, "We can do it, my fellow Americans, by staying the course."

The major question of the November elections, however, appears to be whether the voters will continue to buy Reagan's argument and grant him more time or whether their patience is worn too thin.

Reagan's comments about the economy over the months have carried some strong, consistent threads: the problem was caused over a period of 20 to 40 years and cannot be fixed overnight; he will not indulge in "quick-fix" measures to pump up the economy; his supply-side economic program will benefit everyone through accelerated productivity and creation of new jobs.

But the president has been inconsistent in statements dealing with the severity of the economic crisis when he took office compared with the present, how soon his program would spur recovery and what signs to look for to signal recovery is occurring.

For instance, when the Dow Jones stock average burst through the 1,000-point mark this past week, Reagan cheerily took this as a sign his program was succeeding. But, when the stock market went down in September 1981, after much of his program was enacted, Reagan declared: "I don't know what the reason is, but I'm sure not going to take the blame."

EARLIER, WHEN WALL STREET seemed to resist Reagan's massive tax-cut program, Reagan said, "I have never found Wall Street a source of good economic advice."

One Reagan argument for why the economy has not turned around before now is that the recession took the administration by surprise. Conditions suddenly turned worse than expected and, therefore, it would take longer to emerge from the recession, the president said.

Reagan, the man who accused Carter of taking the country into depression, told a press conference Nov. 10, 1981 — more than a year after his election — that "none of us had predicted the stepping over into recession." On Nov. 30 that year, he said, "We still had thought that we knew the economy would be soft. But the recession came and this has obviously changed our own estimates."

"We were all caught by surprise with the recession," Reagan said in a session with reporters Dec. 23, 1981.

On Feb. 8, 1982, Reagan again replaced the start of the recession, declaring: "The recession I believe was, well, actually the recession started in 1979."

One problem for Reagan might have been that he overstated the extent of the crisis when he took office and overestimated the ability of his program to achieve a quick turnaround.

IN AN ECONOMIC REPORT less than one month in office, the new president said, "I regret to say that we are in the worst economic mess since the Great Depression." Two months later, he told a joint session of Congress that the economy had gotten worse over the previous half year and unemployment still was at 8 million. "Six months is long enough. The American people now want us to act and not in half measures," he said.

Congress and the president acted. Today, inflation and interest rates have declined but unemployment has risen to more than 11 million, creating the highest jobless rate since the Depression. This has occurred despite Reagan's assurance at a news conference just last month that "we've pulled America back from the brink of disaster. We're better off today than we were."

In his address on the economy Wednesday night, Reagan acknowledged that many Americans may be confused by all the statistics and "hot air" coming from Washington. Then, he urged voters to keep their eye on the big picture — the concept that gradually, his program is pulling the country out of the economic morass. "Make no mistake — American is recovery-bound," he said.

BUT REAGAN HAD no specific assurances that new jobs would be available soon.

As a skilled communicator, the president always has been adept at graphically portraying the economic mess created by Democratic predecessors. When he became governor of California, he accused the previous administration of "looting the treasury" — a remark he later apologized for. At the same time, Reagan is an optimist who has always believed things would be better if the government avoided meddling with private enterprise and market forces.

U.S.-backed Israel survives U.N. agency's ouster bid

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — Backed by the muscle of a major U.S. lobbying effort, Israel today narrowly survived an Arab bid to oust it from the U.N.-sponsored International Telecommunications Union conference.

But Israel attacked the ITU's final resolution, including the Western compromise that saved its membership, claiming the document contains "false accusations" against the Jewish state.

The showdown here came hours after the Arab bloc at U.N. headquarters in New York dropped its campaign to expel Israel from the General Assembly. There, as in Nairobi, the Reagan administration had threatened a pullout and a funding boycott if Israel were expelled.

After a debate that ran past midnight, the ITU delegates voted 61-57 in favor of a British-sponsored compromise that amended a tough Arab-sponsored draft resolution condemning Israel's June 6 invasion of Lebanon.

Delegates then adopted the amended resolution 85-31. Both votes were by secret ballot.

The British compromise retained a sharp criticism of Israeli military actions in Lebanon, but stripped from the original Algerian resolution a passage that would have barred Israel from ITU meetings, in effect expelling it from the union.

The vote followed a U.S. threat to quit the six-week conference, which began Sept. 28, and suspend its $3.2 million in annual funding to the ITU if Israel were expelled. Other Western nations said they were considering similar actions.

"If there has been one winner, one victor tonight, it is the ITU," said British delegate Michael P. Davies, who led the floor fight on behalf of the compromise. "The union is together and thank God for that."

Australia, Belgium, Canada, Denmark, Ireland, Italy and Norway co-sponsored the British package.

The ITU traditionally deals with non-political issues such as the allocation of shortwave radio frequencies and telecommunications tariffs.

Israel said the agency "passed a very grave test" by not ejecting it from the conference, but it objected to the resolution because of the criticism it contained.

The amended resolution said the agency is "alarmed by the grave situation in the Middle East, resulting from Israel's invasion of Lebanon."

It "condemns without appeal the continuing violation by Israel of the international law" and "further condemns the massacres of the Palestinian and Lebanese civilians" in west Beirut refugee camps last month.

PALMER, Alaska (AP) — A trapper from Cottonwood didn't cotton to a proposed ordinance restricting trapping in residential areas, so he took the matter into his own hands.

A woman supporting the regulation, who complained her dog had been trapped by a neighbor, brought a No. 3 steel trap to illustrate her arguments Tuesday at an assembly meeeting of the Matanuska-Susitna Borough.

Fur-hatted Brooks Vinyard, one of more than 100 trappers who showed up for the hearing, borrowed the trap, set it, held it up and explained it probably was as large as any trap used in the area.

Without flinching, Vinyard then triggered it, and the steel jaws snapped shut on his hand. Holding the trap aloft in no apparent pain, Vinyard said it probably would hurt a dog, but wouldn't maim or cripple one.

"From that point on, the ordinance was doomed," the Anchorage Times reported.

'Robert Mugabe can't tell me what to do,' Nkomo says

Washington Post News Service

BULAWAYO, Zimbabwe — "Robert Mugabe can't tell me what to do," thundered opposition leader Joshua Nkomo. The anger welling up in his 300-pound frame caused Nkomo's voice to tremble as he spoke to a reporter about Zimbabwe's prime minister.

Despite Nkomo's outburst, however, the stability of this southern African country could well depend on Mugabe's ability to persuade — or force — Nkomo to assert authority over more than 2,000 dissidents who proclaim loyalty to the opposition leader.

In the six months since the prime minister fired his former guerrilla ally from the Cabinet and charged him with caching weapons to overthrow the government, Nkomo's Matabeleland stronghold in southwestern Zimbabwe has become a hotbed of violence by dissidents and counteraction by the military.

Nkomo has disavowed the dissidents, mainly members of his former guerrilla army, despite their demands for the release from detention of prisoners loyal to his party.

THERE IS LITTLE sign of Mugabe and Nkomo reaching a rapprochement. Mugabe, from the majority Shona tribe, blames Nkomo and his political party for the dissident activity. In a recent speech in Matabeleland, Mugabe spoke disparagingly of Nkomo, saying his minority Ndebele tribe was "attributing to itself the role of royalty."

The two men, former comrades in arms in the struggle for what was then Rhodesia's independence from Britain, were both in Bulawayo last month. But they did not try to talk about the differences between them, their political parties and their tribes which are at the root of the violence. They have met only once in the eight months since Mugabe fired Nkomo and the talks did not result in any evident easing of tensions.

War-weary residents of this vast, sparsely populated area say conditions now often are like those of the guerrilla war that ended almost three years ago: they are beaten by both the dissidents and the army.

Referring to frequent reports that the army is brutalizing the rural inhabitants in its search for the dissidents, a white former army officer said, "They have lost the local people even quicker than we did."

He recalled how the Rhodesian army was often brutal with the local population and employed small planes with megaphones to warn the people to cooperate — the same tactics that are being used now.

NKOMO AND MANY of the white farmers in the area who identify with the Ndebele say the Zimbabwean army is responsible for most of the banditry, raping and killing that has swept the area. Mugabe and his officials deny the charges.

Sen. Garfield Todd, the last moderate white prime minister in this country, sharply criticized the army in a recent speech to Parliament, saying, "There is something seriously wrong with our army...Which picture of government should the people accept? The splendid speeches and idealism of the prime minister or the conduct of the government as demonstrated by some soldiers?"

At least 57 whites have been killed or injured in the area in the last six months, the farmers say. Black casualty tolls are unknown because many incidents happen in remote areas, but the farmers say the total is bound to be higher.

The government has announced that it has detained 425 dissidents in the area. There are unconfirmed reports that some have been killed by the Army.

NKOMO CHARGED in the interview that the army is meting out "collective punishment" against the people in an area of about 5,000 square miles which has been placed under curfew since six foreign tourists were kidnaped 10 weeks ago. About 2,000 troops have been searching in vain for the hostages and their captors.

The minister in charge of security, Emerson Munangagwa, told Parliament last week that "the government has a complete grip on the security situation" and that "just a few misguided individuals" are responsible.

There are other estimates that more than 2,000 former guerrillas loyal to Nkomo are responsible for the dissidence. The army, which integrated Mugabe's and Nkomo's guerrillas with the former Rhodesian troops, saw some battalions effectively dismantled as soldiers returned to the bush after the two top commanders of Nkomo's wartime army were arrested in March.

REPORTS OF violence have dropped off in recent weeks but the area of the search for the hostages is closed to correspondents, making independent reports difficult to obtain.

Transportation has also been curtailed in the area. Most embassies have advised their nationals not to drive on the highway from Bulawayo to Victoria Falls. Buses along the route are held up so frequently, according to Bulawayo residents, that drivers often simply toss the gunmen their cash bag and the passengers are left alone. Tourism at the falls has diminished; one hotel has laid off 40 percent of its employees.

Despite fears when Nkomo was dismissed of a tribal war, analysts now say that is unlikely because most Zimbabweans are tired of war. The dissidents are said to have neither the firepower nor the numbers to do more than destabilize.

If Mugabe carries out plans to form a one-party state and does it without Nkomo's cooperation, however, the result could be a disaffected minority on the sensitive border with South Africa.

MUGABE ACCUSES South Africa of seeking to destabilize his country. Pretoria denies the charge but dissidents in this region could provide a tempting target, similar to the rebel forces of Jonas Savimbi that South Africa champions in Angola.

West Germany resurrects canal

Washington Post News Service

BONN, West Germany — West Germany's new, center-right coalition government will resurrect plans to complete a controversial project that was envisioned by Emperor Charlemagne 1,200 years ago — a river-canal system through the heart of Europe from the North Sea to the Black Sea.

The decision to go ahead with the project represents a victory for Franz Josef Strauss, the feisty minister-president of Bavaria and leader of Bavaria's Christian Social Union.

Strauss, who has long been an ardent supporter of the idea, obtained the new government's promise to complete the unfinished Bavarian section of the 2,100-mile waterway as part of a three-party agreement that led to formation of the new coalition.

His party and the centrist Free Democratic Party are junior partners in the government headed by Chancellor Helmut Kohl and his Christian Democratic Union. They took over Oct. 4 following the ouster of Chancellor Helmut Schmidt and his Social Democratic government.

The agreement to complete the waterway reversed a decision by Schmidt's government last February. It is certain to revive a long and bitter controversy that has embroiled the federal and Bavarian governments, labor unions, railroad and shipping interests, environmentalists, Austria, the Soviet Union and other German states.

IF COMPLETED, the system would link the Rhine, Main and Danube rivers. To landlocked Austria and Bavaria, it would mean having a gateway to the important North Sea port of Rotterdam at the mouth of the Rhine. To the Soviet Union and other East European states, it would provide a new channel for trade with the West. To its critics, completion of the waterway's last 38 miles would be an ecological disaster that would destroy one of the few remaining natural preserves in West Germany.

Others see it as a massive and unnecessary extravagance that will never pay for itself. To continue to sink money into the project, which has already cost billions of dollars, would be doubly foolhardy, they say, at a time when West Germany is struggling with a faltering economy and seeking ways to cut public spending.

"It is the stupidest project since the Tower of Babel," Volker Hauff, who was minister for transport at the time, said when the Schmidt government killed the project.

The Schmidt government estimated that it would cost $850 million to complete the project. Environmentalists insist that the cost will be closer to $1.2 billion. Under a federal-state contract signed in 1921, the federal government must bear two-thirds of the project's cost. Bavaria must pay the rest.

"There are still financial problems to be worked out," a Bavarian government spokesman said the other day, "but we have been assured that the project will be finished as soon as possible."

BEFORE THE Schmidt government halted the project, it was scheduled to be completed in 1985.

The unfinished section lies between the ancient Bavarian city of Nuremberg and Kelheim on the Danube, through the Altmuehl Valley. It takes the course of a narrow canal built by King Ludwig of Bavaria in 1846, a canal that carried little traffic before it was closed in 1945.

It also traces Charlemagne's effort in the 9th century to link the Main and Danube rivers with a canal. That effort was abandoned because rains continually washed out the work of the 5,000 men employed on the project.

Ludwig's canal, like canals in other parts of the world, fell victim to the massive development of railway systems in the 19th century, and critics say the new canal will suffer the same fate.

The Schmidt government estimated that the new canal would carry only about 2.5 million tons of cargo a year, compared to the 14 million tons projected in a study done 20 years ago.

Bavarian officials have studies of their own that project a level of about 7.5 million tons a year.

Whatever the volume, the canal would be certain to take business away from West Germany's state-owned railroad system and add to its financial woes. The railroad has been losing between $50 million and $75 million a year.

RAIL TRANSPORTATION, the canal's critics say, is more efficient. Hauff, the former minister for transport, said that a river barge would take two days to go from Kelheim to Nuremberg but that a train could make the trip in less than three hours.

Bavarian officials counter with the argument that barge transportation costs are 40 percent to 60 percent below rail costs. The dispute has caused dissension in organized labor. The Bavarian sector of the West German trade confederation is in favor of the canal and the railway workers' union is opposed.

Bulldogs welcome Bobcats to homecoming bash

Midland High, San Angelo among five looking for playoff berth

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

District 4-5A's second season gets underway today at 8 p.m. when the Midland High Bulldogs treat the San Angelo Bobcats to a Homecoming bash at Memorial Stadium with no place set aside for weak hearts and non-dreamers.

Both San Angelo and Midland High are among the five teams currently tied for second place in the mixed-up, Odessa Permian wrecked 4-5A field. Tonight's winner will keep playoff hopes burning bright while the loser will have to sit back and wait for some more strange happenings to take place in hopes of getting back into the race.

Permian has put a head lock on the league race by gunning to a perfect 4-0 loop reading while MHS, San Angelo, Midland Lee, Odessa High and Big Spring remain in the fight thanks to the new University Interscholastic League rule that allows two teams from every district in the state to advance to the state playoffs.

NOWHERE IS the new ruling better loved than in 4-5A where it's Permian and the rest.

But Permian can be forgotten now since both San Angelo and MHS have the Panthers out of the way. Both have renewed lives, thanks to the UIL, and both want to take advantage of the situation.

Midland High enters the contest with a two-game winning streak, the longest of the five teams left in the race, while San Angelo is coming off an 8-0 win over Abilene High. Both teams posted shutouts last week with MHS downing Odessa High by a 10-0 score. The team that scores may win tonight.

"I really think this is the big hurdle for our team," notes MHS coach Pat Culpepper. "We've been up to our neck in good football teams the past several weeks, but our kids went on the road and won two games. That is significant because we have been a very poor team on the road the last few years.

"I think our kids have developed the idea that they can win. Our defense has been just super and the offensive switch to the I Formation has given our kids a lot of confidence. It would sure help our team if we could make something happen early in the game."

After rocking to a 1-4 start on the season, including two losses to open district play, the Bulldogs were given up for dead in the 4-5A race. However, the return of tailback Raymond Chambers (188 yards against Cooper) and Ricky Madrid (119 yards against OHS) have given the Bulldogs new offensive punch and the defense doesn't play the entire game anymore. The Bulldogs are still having trouble mounting points, but the "I" has put them back in ball games again.

The emergence of junior guard Jimmy Essman and the return of injured tackle Greg Bartus has also made a big difference on offense.

BUT IT has been the eight-man defensive front for MHS that has carried the biggest load. Despite a 37-0 loss to Permian, Midland High ranks as the second best defensive unit in the league behind Permian, giving up less than 200 yards per game to opponents this year.

Ends Alex Mata and John Hibbitts have been superb as have linebackers Jody Williamson and Gary Russell along with tackle Bobby Hillin. Chad Hughes, the 145-pound tiny tyke, Clifton Hines (165) and Tommy Davis (182) always face larger opponents and usually come out on top.

"Midland High is extremely aggressive on defense and no one but Permian has moved the ball on them in the district and Permian has moved the ball on a lot of people, including us," says San Angelo coach Jimmie Keeling. "Midland's offense has perked up too since they went to the I and if they hadn't made some mistakes against Odessa High, they would have scored a bunch of points.

"I think everyone in the district has a shot at getting in the playoffs and we think our chances are as good as anyone. Still, we have to take care of our own business because we can't be worried about what some other team does."

SAN ANGELO ranks sixth in team defense in the eight-team league, but are third in team offense while Midland High is last. That alone says this game should be a close contest. The Bulldogs will have to play defense to stay in this one and there is no reason to think they won't with the recent performances turned in.

The heart of the Bobcat attack comes from tailback Trey Wright, who ranks fourth in league rushing with 474 yards. The Bobcats will miss sophomore fullback Bevans Hoffman, who is out with a broken jaw. Hoffman had 438 yards rushing and seven touchdowns. Quarterback Jeff Schkade (366 yards passing on 24 of 64 in the air) is also out and Greg Thomas will start. Thomas has thrown only twice this year and one was intercepted.

Rebels, Steers meet in important game

By ROBERT BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

While Odessa Permian is running away with the 1982 version of the District 4-5A title, the rest of the league is turning its thoughts to more important matters like: who is going to finish second and earn the remaining state playoff berth?

Few, if any, of the 4-5A's also-rans are still hanging on to the hopes of a district title while nearly everyone, it seems, sees second place as an achievable goal.

Midland Lee and Big Spring are among those in this latter category looking for the runner-up position and tonight's 8 p.m. homecoming game in Big Spring between the two will be a deciding factor for either's success.

The Rebels and Steers are tied for second with 2-2 records along with three other district foes — Midland High, San Angelo and Odessa High — and after tonight at least two of those teams, barring ties, could emerge from the pile up with the advantage. Two others, again barring ties, must fall from the ranks since Lee and Big Spring and MHS and San Angelo meet in head on play.

BOTH LEE and Big Spring are coming off district losses — the Rebels losing to Permian 27-0 and the Steers to Abilene Cooper 37-15 — and both head coaches see this as a very big, very important game and neither is looking ahead to other teams on the remainder of their schedules."

It's just an important football game for a number of reasons," said Lee head coach Spike Dykes. "Reason No. 1 is it's the one we're playing Friday night. No. 2 We're both tied in the district so the loser faces virtual elimination from post season play and No. 3 is it's just one of 10 football games we have and we can't afford to take any of them lightly. You work so hard for so few games they all have a high degree of importance."

"I think it's a matter of pride, a matter of wanting to stay in the race," said Big Spring's Quinn Eudy. "A good football team always wants to come back after a defeat. We've had a good practice this week and we always like to play a good football team."

"We had a good week of practice," echoed Dykes. "The thing about football is you can't dwell on your wins and losses very long because, in all actuality, immediately after each game you have to start getting ready for your next opponent. And that's about as hard after a big win as it is after a big loss."

STATISTICALLY, BOTH teams have their strengths with Lee's main power being on offense while Big Spring has the defensive and kicking advantage.

The Rebels are second in the 4-5A in total yardage with 2,101 yards (Permian leads nearly every category) while the Steers are seventh at 1,293. The big difference betwen the two is in the ground game. Lee Has 1,616 yards rushing while Big Spring has managed only 768. The Steers hold a slight passing edge, 525-485.

Individually, the Rebels have several ball carriers that have produced good yardage this season led by halfback Clarence Smith who has 276 yards (5.3 yards per carry), quarterback Paul Cox with 252 (9.7), halfback Darrell Fennell at 213 (5.3) and fullback Scott Ackroyd with 197 (5.3).

Cox is one of two Rebel quarterbacks that regularly sees action and he seems to be the better rusher of the two. The second, Mike Mercurio, has slightly better passing statistics, 14-of-23 for 230 yards and six touchdowns (most TD passes in the league) with Cox at 9-of-28 for 204 and no touchdowns.

Big Spring has two backs that have carried the ball for most of their yards with fullback Danny Stephen leading the team with 245 yards (4.2) followed by tailback Eric Sherman with 201 (2.8).

Defensively, the edge goes to Big Spring, the No. 3 rated team in the district, having given up only 1409 total yards, 850 rushing and 559 passing. Lee is fifth at 1,654, 924 on the ground and 730 through the air.

Probably Big Spring's biggest key to the game lies in its ability to punt the ball. Punter Jay Pirkle is averaging 40.1 yards per punt this year on 43 attempts. Total: he has covered 1,725 yards and his foot can dig the Steers out of a hole quickly. Mercurio, who doubles as a punter for the Rebels, has a 34.6 per kick average.

COACH DYKES commented on the Steers' strong points saying, "I think Big Spring's strengths, to this point, are playing good defense and an excellent kicking game with an offense capable

MHS volleyball ties San Angelo for 4-5A first place

Third game rally gives Bulldogs narrow victory over Bobcats

Midland High Bulldog Laura Sherman (30) goes up against the defense of San Angelo's Valarie Schlaudt (33) during their key District 4-5A volleyball matchup Thursday night at MHS Gym. The Bulldogs posted a three-game victory to move into a tie for first place with the Bobcats at 10-2 with two games remaining in the season.

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

The Midland High Bulldogs pulled off a desperate third game rally at the MHS gym Thursday night to stun defending District 4-5A volleyball champion San Angelo, 15-13, 9-15, 15-13, to move into a first place tie with the Bobcats.

Both teams now own 10-2 district marks with two games left to play and now both teams appear to be headed for the state playoffs. If the two teams end district play tied for the lead, a single match playoff will be held to determine who represents the district as the No. 1 team and which goes as the second place team.

Abilene Cooper is only a step behind at 9-3, but the Cougars do not have another shot at either MHS or San Angelo. The Bulldogs travel to Abilene High Tuesday and end district action Thursday with a home match against Midland Lee at 7 p.m. San Angelo meets Odessa High Tuesday and Big Spring Thursday. None of the teams involved have beaten either Midland High or San Angelo this year.

The Bulldog victory gives MHS a split for the season against San Angelo, with both winning on the home floor.

It looked for a while Thursday like the Bulldogs had dug a hole too deep to climb out of after taking a 15-13 decision in the first game, a game in which MHS took five serves at game point to put the game away. Still, they did it on the fifth try.

But in the second game, MHS fell apart with some bad serving and were caught out of position on several plays. San Angelo jumped to a 7-0 lead and never trailed in the game.

In the third game, San Angelo busted to a quick 4-0 lead and led 11-5 before the Bulldogs got it all back together. The Bulldogs seemed to get a spark from a late arriving football pep rally crowd, which came from across the street where the bon fire was held.

Penny Griffen and Shelia Christian gave the fuel to the Bulldog rally, and that was the good sign since neither had played very well until it counted. A Griffin spike and three Christian serves tied the game at 11. The two teams were knotted at 12 and 13 before a Christian dink and a Griffin serve pulled the Bulldogs out of the grave and into first place.

"We weren't playing very well for a while, but I told our kids that they were not being aggressive and they certianly had nothing to lose since we were down by several points," noted an elated MHS coach Linda Jolly. "They just got their act together. They have done this so many times this year. They get behind, but they seem to be able to pull it out in the end.

"The big thing is that we are tied for first place and we now have a little breathing room. It was just a great victory for us because San Angelo is such a good team."

Midland High's serving was inconsistent at best and may have won the match easier if they had served better. However, Melinda Raschke and Laura Sherman did help take up the serving slack and Christian later. Denise Lanz was superb at the net as was Theresa Haney.

Griffin and Christian had problems in the first two games, getting caught out of position, poor serving and some missed spikes, but the two were there at the end when it counted, and because of it, Midland High may be playoff bound.

MHS also defeated San Angelo in the junior varsity contest, 15-9, 15-12.

Upsets rule USTA play at MC

By CHAD PUERLING

Thursday was a day of upsets in the Midland Tennis Club's USTA Masters tournament at Midland College.

Third ranked Mark Vines, fourth seeded John Mattke and No.8 Alfonso Gonzales fell victim to lower ranked or unranked players.

With the expulsion of Vines and Mattke, the tournament has lost three of the top four seeds. Second seeded Mavcel Freeman lost in the first round.

Vines, Richmond, Va., fell victim to nineth seeded Richard Acuna, a member of the Chilian Davis Cup team, 6-3, 6-3. Vines won the Paris Indoor title in 1981.

Acuna didn't limit his sucess to singles as he teamed with J. Ayala in defeating Russell Barlow and Bob Blazekovic, Battle Creek, Mich., 6-3, 6-3 in their first doubles match. It was a tough day for the Australian, Barlow, who earlier was eliminated from the singles competition.

THE VICTORY puts Acuna and Ayala in the quartefinals where they will face the team of C. Nunn and H. Reed.

Acuna will battle fifth seeded Sammy Giamalva, Houston, Tx., in the quartefinals. Giamalva had an easy road into today's match when his opponent, Maurice Hunter, Hollywood Hills, Calif., failed to show up.

Hunter left for California without notifying tournament officials.

Mattke, Circle Pines, Minn., lost to No. 16 seed Sean Brawley 7-6, 6-4. It was a quick exit for Mattke who was runner up in the USTA Hunterton Men's Classic in Flemington, N.J., in 1981.

Peeters ejected from Bruins-Oilers game

Boston ends up posting 5-3 victory over Edmonton

By BARRY WILNER
AP Sports Writer

Some goaltenders will take victories any way they can get them. Not Pete Peeters.

The Boston netminder was so annoyed about losing his shutout and then allowing a second goal to the Edmonton Oilers late in the third period Thursday night that he wound up getting himself thrown out of the National Hockey League matchup. The Bruins had the game well in hand by then, winding up with a 5-3 victory. Peeters wound up with a game misconduct penalty and some hard feelings for referee Ron Hoggarth.

"Right from the beginning of the game, the guy was on my case," Peeters said of Hoggarth. "And you can't argue because he'll throw you out of the game. That's what happened at the end."

The Bruins had built a 5-0 lead on goals by Brad Palmer and Tom Fergus in the first period and Keith Crowder, Barry Pederson and Rick Middleton in the second. Peeters' own mistake — he allowed Charlie Huddy's shot from the blue line to bounce in off his glove with 9:21 left — cost him the shutout. After Pat Hughes scored at 17:38, Peeters skated toward Hoggarth and threw his glove at the referee, prompting the game misconduct.

"In the first period, Ken Linseman smashed my head into the goalpost," claimed Peeters, who was Linseman's teammate with Philadelphia last season. "I have red paint on the bars of my mask.

"In the third period, they started running me over. (Laurie) Boschman and (Dave) Lumley, when that altercation started, both ran right over me."

Elsewhere, it was Quebec 8, Pittsburgh 4; Montreal 2, Philadelphia 1; the New York Islanders 6, Washington 3, and Calgary 10, Hartford 3.

"We came up with a big bust," said Oilers Coach Glen Sather, whose club is 1-10-3 against Boston. "There's an uneasy feeling in the room right now and that's not healthy. Our team has always had lots of emotion and drive and there's something missing right now."

Nordiques 8, Penguins 4

Quebec couldn't miss against the slumping Penguins, who are 1-6-1 and have given up 44 goals in eight games. Marian Stastny had three goals and an assist and younger brother Anton registered a goal and four assists. Marc Tardif also had three assists, while Pat Boutette registered two goals for the Penguins.

"We are working better as a line now, especially at getting the puck out of our zone," said Anton, who is teamed with Marian and Peter on the same forward unit. "These games against Pittsburgh and Detroit have helped us practice that."

Canadiens 2, Flyers 1

Doug Wickenheiser, the No. 1 pick in the 1980 Entry Draft, struggled during his first two NHL campaigns. But he's beginning to look like a top draftee this year. Wickenheiser scored twice, giving him eight goals in the Canadiens' first eight games, and the Montreal defense continued to excel. Rick Wamsley stopped 33 shots in goal.

"I can't say that it wasn't tough to be sitting out a lot last year," said Wickenheiser, who appeared a total of only 98 games his first two pro seasons. "It hurts when you've been a star in the leagues you're playing in and suddenly you're not playing."

Islanders 6, Capitals 3

Bryan Trottier scored three goals and Bob Bourne had a goal and three assists as the Islanders won their seventh straight game. The Stanley Cup champions have never lost at home to Washington and are 25-0-2 in their last 27 home games, dating back to last December. Ken Houston scored a hat trick for Washington.

"We're getting to the point we're setting more goals for ourselves as a team," said Bourne. "We'd like to go all 1982 without losing a home game. I can't see any other pro team doing that. It's something to shoot for."

Flames 10, Whalers 3

Lanny McDonald and Mel Bridgman each scored two goals and Kent Nilsson added a goal and four assists as the Flames bombed Hartford. Rejean Lemelin made 30 saves in his first appearance of the season in Calgary's net.

"Sometimes you have to take a hit to make the play," said McDonald. "Tonight, we had several guys who were willing to pay that price. As a team, we haven't always done that this season."

Stargell biggest name on '82 free-agent draft list

By DENNIS D'AGOSTINO
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Willie Stargell may be the biggest name in baseball's 1982 free-agent draft, but he won't be offered any of the long-term, mega-buck contracts that some of his cohorts may get.

Stargell, the veteran slugger who spent 22 years with the Pittsburgh Pirates, was one of the 63 players officially declared eligible Thursday to enter this year's free-agent draft.

Since "Pops," 41, retired as an active player at the end of the season, his eligibility is just a footnote for trivia buffs.

The players on the list, released by Major League Baseball's Player Relations Committee, have until Nov. 4 to declare their free agency for the seventh annual re-entry draft, to be held Nov. 10.

Also among those declared eligible for free agency were veteran pitchers Phil Niekro of Atlanta and Floyd Bannister of Seattle, along with sluggers Jason Thompson of Pittsburgh, Don Baylor of California, Steve Garvey of Los Angeles, and major league runs-batted-in leader Hal McRae of Kansas City.

It's a good bet that some players will sign with their old teams before declaring their free agency. Garvey, for example, has been huddling with Dodger officials and was reported to be near agreement on a four-year pact that would pay him $1 million annually.

And the 43-year-old Niekro, who has spent 19 years with the Braves and is the club's last active link to their Milwaukee years, is also expected to be back with his old club. Niekro went 17-4 this year as the Braves won the National League West title for the first time since 1969.

Other free agents could be limited in their movement. McRae, who had 133 RBI this year, is strictly a designated hitter and thus limited to the American League. Baylor, who set a record with 10 RBI during the Angels' loss to Milwaukee in the AL playoffs, is also primarily a DH.

Bannister and Thompson, two of the more sought-after players in this year's draft, offer a study in contrast. Bannister, who led the AL with 209 strikeouts, has expressed a keen desire to leave Seattle. Thompson, who had 31 homers and knocked in 101 runs for the Pirates, has said he would prefer to stay in Pittsburgh.

Among the veteran stars eligible for free agency are pitchers Ferguson Jenkins of the Chicago Cubs, Luis Tiant of California, Jim Kaat of St. Louis and Woodie Fryman of Montreal. Also, sluggers Tony Perez of Boston, Reggie Smith of San Francisco, Rick Monday of Los Angeles, Gene Tenace of St. Louis, Bill Robinson of Philadelphia and Lee May of Kansas City.

Other familiar names who could dot the free-agent pool are outfielders Omar Moreno of Pittsburgh, Rick Manning of Cleveland, Steve Kemp of the Chicago White Sox, Ruppert Jones of San Diego, Larry Herndon, Chet Lemon and Enos Cabell of Detroit, Joel Youngblood of Montreal, Ellis Valentine of the New York Mets and Al Cowens of Seattle.

They're joined by, among others, first baseman Bruce Bochte of Seattle; infielders Bump Wills of the Cubs and Bill Almon of the White Sox; catchers Rick Cerone of the New York Yankees and Alan Ashby of Houston and pitchers Paul Splittorff of Kansas City and Bob McClure of Milwaukee, the losing pitcher in Wednesday's seventh game of the World Series.

In 1981, 41 players went through the re-entry draft. Most of the prominent ones, like pitchers Ron Guidry of the Yankees and John Denny of the Indians, re-signed with their old teams.

Guidry was drafted by 18 of the 26 teams, but now there's no longer a limit on how many teams can draft a free agent.

Under the new rules adopted after last year's strike, those who rate in the top 20 percent at their position — based on a complicated performance rating — will be declared Class A players. The teams that lose them will then be entitled to pick a player from a pool of players, made up of those players left after each team protects 26.

Five teams — Boston, California, Minnesota, Los Angeles and Seattle — chose last year not to participate in that phase of the draft. While they can't sign Class A players, they aren't required to contribute to the pool.

Midland invited to meet Chap athletes Tuesday

Midlanders are invited to "Meet the Chaps" Tuesday at the Al G. Langford Chaparral Center. It will be the first official opportunity to visit with the 1982-83 Midland College athletes.

Beginning at 6:30 p.m., the public can visit with members of the Midland College men's golf team, men's and women's tennis teams and the National Junior College champion basketball team.

It will also be an opportunity for MC basketball fans to purchase season reserved seats for the 1982-83 Chaparral basketball games.

Climaxing the evening will be an intrasquad basketball scrimmage at 7:30 p.m. There will be free soft drinks and coffee available during the night.

"This is a new event that we have planned for the public," said Delnor Poss, MC athletic director. "There will be time for the public to take pictures, get autographs and get acquainted with these young people."

THE CHAPARRAL basketball team, which won the 1982 National Junior College Athletic Association championship last March, returns six lettermen and a host of talented freshmen. The Chaps begin their season Nov. 2 at home against Cisco Junior College, a team which battled the Chaps down to the final minute in the Region V championship game last spring.

"With the great interest in Chaparral basketball and the requests that we have had, we decided to begin offering season reserved seats this year," Poss said. "We are reserving section J, which is the center section right behind the official scorer's table and the Midland College bench. Season reserved seats will be priced at $40 per person, which includes all the home games and the Chaparral Classic. There are 11 home games, plus the Chaparral Classic that has nine games in three nights."

In addition to meeting the players, fans can see the cheerleaders who will be on hand to add their color and enthusiasm to the scrimmage. Persons may also obtain information about joining the Chaparral Booster Club.

"We think this will be an exciting evening for anyone who enjoys the Midland College athletic programs," Poss pointed out. "Our tennis teams have always been excellent and this year they have the talent to make a run at the national titles again. And the men's golf team is doing well also."

Lee JV, Sophs post wins; Bobcats pound Bullpups

The Midland Lee Stonewall Brigades kept up their winning ways Thursday night as the junior varsity scored a 43-12 victory over Hobbs while the sophs defeated Big Spring's JV, 16-0.

Midland High, taking on the Bobcats in San Angelo, suffered a 48-8 defeat.

For the Lee JV, now 7-1 on the year, halfback Ricky Jackson opened the scoring in the first quarter with a 20-yard touchdown run and punt returner Tyrone Thurman returned a Hobbs kick 60 yards for a second score. On both touchdowns, Matt Mabe added the point after.

Lee quarterback Dennis Mata came up with a pair of four-yard touchdowns in the second and third quarters and Junior Nicholson added a two-point conversion to give the Stonewall Brigade 14 more points. Nicholson also added a four-yard scoring run with Thurman contributing the two-pointer and Mabe, from the halfback slot, ran 35 yards for the final touchdown. Scott Hicks kicked the ensuing PAT.

Hobbs scored a touchdown in each of the third and fourth quarters but failed on the run attempts for extra points to reach the final score of 48-12.

"We played real well offensively," said JV coach Mike Quimby. "I think we had three drives that were 70 yards or better. Defensively we gave up the big play several times on long runs. We didn't contain as well as we should have."

Next week, the junior varsity will travel to Abilene to face Cooper at 1:30 p.m. on Saturday.

While the JV was beating Hobbs, the sophomores kept their perfect season intact with a 16-0 win over Big Spring's JV, their eighth win of the year.

Halfback Mark Brackens made his first start of the season a good one when he scored on a two-yard run in the second quarter to give Lee a 6-0 lead. Craig Kamradt's extra point attempt was blocked, but he made up for before the half ended with a 38-yard field goal.

In the third quarter, fullback Randy Ellis rushed two yards for a touchdown and Kamradt's kick made it 16-0.

The soph's next contest will be in Lamesa on Thursday at 7 p.m.

For the Midland High Bullpups it was a long night as San Angelo posted a 48-8 victory.

Halfback Marcus Hurd scored on a throw-back pass from quarterback James Wellborn that went for 50 yards in the third quarter for Midland's only score on the night. Wellborn then hit Darren Thorpe for the two-point pass.

Overall, the Bullpups are 3-5 on the year and are 3-2 in District 4-5A play.

"We did get a good effort by our fullback again (Gary Browning) but they jumped on us so quick it took us out of our running game and we had to throw. That took away the element of surprise in our passing game which had been working so well."

On Thursday, Midland High will host Abilene High at Memorial Stadium at 7 p.m.

Aggie quarterback should be able to play Saturday

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — Aggies quarterback Gary Kubiak, injured in Texas A&M's 28-23 win over Baylor, should be able to play against Rice Saturday, coach Jackie Sherrill said.

"Gary Kubiak has been working out in good shape this week," Sherrill said Thursday. "I don't think he'll have any problems with his injury on Saturday. He looks like he's about over it."

Kubiak slightly injured his left shoulder blocking on an end around in the second quarter of the contest against Baylor.

Rebels lose to Big Spring

The Rebels won the opening game of the match 15-11, largely on the strength of Lesa Burnett and Felicia Farias at the net, but dropped the next two 2-15, 9-15 to suffer the defeat. The loss gives Lee a 2-11 District 4-5A record.

In junior varsity action, the Rebels again came out strong in the first game to win by a 14-16 count but slipped in the final two, losing 9-15, 11-15.

Tech excited about facing Huskies

SMU puts winning streak on line

By DENNIS D'AGOSTINO
Associated Press Writer

You're only 3-3 on the year. You're playing the nation's top-ranked college football team this week and you're listed as a 20-point underdog. What do you do?

If you're Texas Tech Coach Jerry Moore, you get pretty excited about the whole thing.

"I'd lie to you if I were to tell you our players weren't excited about playing Washington," said Moore. "In fact, we talked about Washington last week, going into the Rice game (won by Texas Tech 23-21).

"I'm pretty open with our players and I told them, 'If we don't go down here and beat Rice, you can play Washington really tough but it won't mean very much."

The Red Raiders' road matchup against the top-ranked and 6-0 Huskies highlights this weekend's college football action. In other games involving The Associated Press Top Ten teams, No. 2 Pitt is at Syracuse, No. 3 Georgia is at Kentucky, No. 4 Southern Methodist is at No. 19 Texas, No. 5 Nebraska hosts Missouri, No. 6 Arkansas is at Houston, No. 7 Alabama hosts Cincinnati, and No. 9 Penn State is at No. 13 West Virginia. Eighth-ranked Arizona State and tenth-ranked North Carolina are idle.

In the Second Ten, No. 11 UCLA is at California, No. 12 Southern Cal hosts Oregon State, No. 14 Louisiana State plays host to South Carolina, No. 15 Notre Dame travels to Oregon, No. 18 Clemson is at North Carolina State, and No. 20 Oklahoma hosts Oklahoma State. No. 16 Miami of Florida and No. 17 Florida State have the week off.

"PLAYING THE No. 1 team in the country ... a lot of people don't have the opportunity to be in a ballgame of that magnitude," said Moore.

"Every time they go out to play, they're playing for the national championship."

Last year against the Red Raiders, the Huskies couldn't score a touchdown but posted a 14-7 victory on the strength of four Chuck Nelson field goals and a safety.

This year, the Huskies must defense Texas Tech's option attack that features quarterback Jim Hart, who's averaging 137.7 yards per game this season.

"The South seems to run more of the option stuff while the West Coast seems to use more passing, with the pro-style setup," Moore said.

SYRACUSE'S ORANGEMEN, struggling at 1-5, lost to Penn State last week, 28-7. They'll be meeting a Top Ten team for the second week in a row when they face Pitt, 5-0, at the Carrier Dome.

Syracuse Coach Dick MacPherson will start one of two freshman quarterbacks — Todd Norley, who was 12-of-30 against Penn State, or Greg Christodulu, who got his only college start the game before.

"Todd didn't do very well, and I told him that," said MacPherson, referring to the Penn State game. "I told him, 'I thought you were nervous, I thought you'd have more poise, I understand that you're a freshman, and you got a lot of good experience and you'd better learn something from it.'"

Marino is 92-for-162 this season for 1,028 yards. But his interceptions outnumber his touchdown passes 14-8, causing some grumbling among demanding Pitt fans.

"Statistically, some people are not happy (with him)," Fazio said. "They expect a blowout no matter who you play. But he has been playing very well — checking off, calling the right plays, controlling the game. I don't think there is a college quarterback in the country who can do all the things Dan Marino can do."

THE FOURTH—RANKED Mustangs, 6-0, have the nation's longest major college winning streak — 10 games. The last team to beat them? Texas, by a 9-7 score last year.

"Texas will be ready to play us," said SMU's Craig James. "They usually don't lose two games in a row. We will have to play our best."

"There's not much you could say about their running backs (James and Eric Dickerson) that hasn't already been said, and unfortunately, it's all true." said Texas Coach Fred Akers. "They are big, fast and talented. Dickerson really put on an exhibition against Houston last week (SMU won, 20-14). He's amazing to be that big and have that kind of quickness and speed."

The Longhorns are coming off a 28-22 loss to Oklahoma two weeks ago.

Alabama, 5-1, dropped from second to seventh in the AP poll after a 35-28 loss to Tennessee last week. The Crimson Tide is favored to get back on the winning track against 4-2 Cincinnati, a team they've met only once ... in 1908. Alabama won that one, 16-0.

Bear Bryant, seeking his 321st coaching victory, didn't remember when he put Cincinnati on this season's schedule. Bearcat Coach Mike Gottfried said the game was scheduled 12 years ago.

Bryant said he is happy to be playing Cincinnati, mainly, he said, "because I'd like for our team to go up there sometime."

Notre Dame's Fighting Irish, 4-1, are coming off a 16-13 upset loss to Arizona. They get a chance to take out their frustrations against an 0-6 Oregon team.

"We certainly don't need Notre Dame coming in here angry over losing their first game last week," Oregon Coach Rich Brooks said, "but I guess that's the way our luck has gone this year."

"I have a feeling someone is going to jump out quickly and put four or five touchdowns on the board," Notre Dame Coach Gerry Faust said. "I just hope it's us."

"We should not be overpowered by Notre Dame," said Brooks, "unless our defense is on the field too long."

Cavaliers name Nissalke new coach

CLEVELAND (AP) — Veteran basketball coach Tom Nissalke says he had no intention of boarding a sinking ship when he signed on as the latest in a string of head coaches for the Cleveland Cavaliers.

Nissalke was named Thursday as the Cavaliers' coach, just one week before the start of the National Basketball Association season. He replaces Bill Musselman, who resigned because of the club's poor preseason performance.

"It's the toughest challenge I've ever had as a coach," said Nissalke, who last coached the Utah Jazz. "The timing is a problem. The plus is, we've got good players here. My job is not rebuilding. We want to win as many games as we can."

Cleveland was the worst team in the NBA last season, compiling a 15-67 record under three coaches — Don Delaney, who will serve as an assistant under Nissalke; former Philadelphia 76ers assistant Chuck Daly, who signed a three-year contract in December but was let go three months later, and Musselman, who began his second stint at the helm of the Cavaliers in March.

Under Musselman, the Cavaliers finished the season with a club-record 19 straight losses. They'll tie the NBA record of 20 straight defeats set by Philadelphia if they lose their regular-season opener to the Boston Celtics next Friday.

Cleveland won only one of its first six exhibition games and had a number of morale problems during the current preseason.

"Obviously, looking at the exhibition results, there was a problem," Delaney said. "The team was not reacting to the coaching situation."

Guard Bobby Wilkerson was suspended for refusing to run timed wind sprints. James Silas left camp complaining that management had ignored his back injury, and Geoff Huston complained that he was not being treated like a returning starter.

Team owner Ted Stepien said Musselman and assistant coaches Bob Kloppenburg and Gerald Oliver would be asked to stay on as scouts.

Nissalke, who said he signed a one-year contract, has coached in the NBA and ABA for a total of 14 years, including 11 as a head coach. He was preparing to coach Las Vegas in the Continental Basketball Association this season when the call came from the Cavaliers Wednesday night.

He previously coached Utah, Dallas and San Antonio in the ABA and Seattle, Houston and Utah in the NBA.

GOLF

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — Roger Stephens of Australia fired a six-under-par 65 to grab a one-stroke lead over American Bill Rogers, the defending champion, and Australia's Ian Baker-Finch in the opening round of the $100,000 National Panasonic New South Wales golf championship.

ST-NOM-LA-BRETECHE, France (AP) — Defending champion David Graham fired a 6-under-par 66 to take the lead after the first round of the $115,000 Lancome Trophy golf tournament.

Two shots behind Graham Spaniard Severiano Ballesteros, who shot a 4-under-par 68.

TENNIS

FILDERSTADT, West Germany (AP) — Martina Navratilova and Pam Shriver of the United States both notched easy second-round victories in the second round of a $125,000 Grand Prix tennis tournament here.

Navratilova defeated France's Catherine Tanvier 6-3, 6-2;Shriver beat Czechoslovakia's Iva Buderova 6-0, 6-2.

In another second-round match, Patricia Medrado of Brazil ousted Claudia Kohde of West Germany 6-1, 5-7, 6-3.

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Three University of North Carolina football players have been sued in federal court by a man seeking $57,000 from each of them as a result of a 1981 scuffle outside a bar in Chapel Hill.

Brewers honored by thousands

By MIKE NADEL
Associated Press Writer

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Appreciation was spread all around Milwaukee as the Brewers, who came within three runs of capturing baseball's world championship, were honored by thousands of fans.

The Brewers, in turn, expressed their appreciation for the fans who supported them through a long season that ended one victory short of a World Series title.

An "appreciation day" crowd of more than 10,000 fans turned out at County Stadium to salute the American League champions, who lost Game Seven of the World Series Wednesday night in St. Louis to the Cardinals.

Earlier, a 15-block-long parade in which the Brewer players rode in antique autos supplied by a local car dealer attracted a crowd unofficially estimated by Brewers Vice President Dick Hackett at 100,000 people. There was no official count.

After entering the stadium about 1:25 p.m., the motorcade traveled around the warning track as the Brewers were cheered by the crowd, including many teenagers.

Gorman Thomas and Pete Vuckovich, riding in the same car, received a loud ovation after raising beer cans high over their heads.

"This is something you expect from people in Milwaukee because they're the best," Thomas, the center fielder, said. "It's nice to come home to people like this."

Teen-age girls howled at Paul Molitor and Robin Yount and the crowd rocked with "Har-vey! Har-vey!" when Manager Harvey Kuenn stepped out of his car.

Pitcher Jim Slaton, a Brewer since 1971 (except for 1978, when he played with the Detroit Tigers), said, "This is the most unbelievable thing I've ever seen. I always wanted to be part of a winning ballclub here. This is what it's all about. This makes it all worth it."

As Bob Uecker, a Brewers announcer and the day's master of ceremonies, took the microphone, Yount blazed around the warning track on a motorcycle.

After he swung around the stadium twice to wild cheers, the shortstop dismounted and raised both index fingers high into the air, sending the crowd into a wild frenzy. Shouts of "M-V-P! M-V-P!" echoed throughout the stadium, saluting the man most likely to be named AL Most Valuable Player.

Cries of "We want Harvey! We want Harvey!" brought the Brewers' manager to the dais.

"This is the most fantastic thing that's ever happened anywhere," Kuenn said. "And there's only one place it could ever happen — Milwaukee. Here, in my opinion, are the number one players in the world today."

Kuenn introduced the players and their wives, who stood and waved to the crowd from the makeshift stage at home plate.

Kuenn said later he will decide "within the next couple of days" if he will ask to return to the helm in 1983.

"The pendulum is swinging toward me coming back," said Kuenn, who replaced the fired Buck Rodgers as manager June 2 when the team was in fifth place.

Flag football playoffs in Odessa

The Midland Men's Flag Football Association Regional Playoffs will be held in Odessa Nov. 13-14.

The double elimination tournament will include teams from Pecos, San Angelo, Sweetwater, Odessa and Midland. The winner will represent this region at state in McAllen, Dec. 4-5.

Yarborough holds pole, makes switch

ROCKINGHAM, N.C. (AP) — Cale Yarborough grabbed the pole for Sunday's American 500 NASCAR Winston Cup race and then announced that he was switching teams for the 1983 season.

Yarborough said he plans to join the Ranier Racing Team of Charlotte next season and that the team will be sponsored by Hardee's Food Systems Inc., a Rocky Mount-based fast-food chain, Coca-Cola and Valvoline Oil.

Details were not completed until early Thursday afternoon and a contract had not yet been signed, but Yarborough said it would be a three-year pact.

Yarborough said he turned down "about $1 million in my pocket" when he refused an offer from the M.C. Anderson team.

Liebler, Bryant share Pensacola Open first

PENSACOLA, Fla. (AP) — Rookie Steve Liebler applied earlier this month to return to PGA tour school, but says those plans could change if he keeps his putter working in the Pensacola Open.

"It's just all starting to fall in place. It's taken 39 weeks," Liebler said Thursday after firing a 7-under-par 64 to earn a share of the lead with Brad Bryant after one round of the $200,000 tournament.

Liebler has played the best golf of his brief professional career this month in the Texas Open and LaJet Classic and said the momentum from those stops carried over to Pensacola.

"I played well in San Antonio (Texas Open), but didn't putt that well," said Liebler, adding that he improved his putting in the LaJet event in Abilene, Texas, where he finished in a tie for seventh two weeks ago.

"The week off helped. I was a little tired," said Liebler, who had seven birdies on the par 71, 7,093-yard Perdido Country Club course.

"It feels great right now. I don't know how it'll feel tomorrow when we start playing," Liebler said of his share of the leadership. "I've got nothing to lose. I'll just try to make as many birdies as I can."

Bryant, who has two second-place finishes this season, birdied his final hole of the day — No. 9 — to climb into a tie with Liebler.

"I putted extremely well, probably the best I've putted in a long, long time ...," said Bryant. "I had 14 makeable putts. When you are playing that well, you are giving yourself the chance to shoot a low score."

Calvin Peete, a three-time winner in 1982, Bill Kratzert, Forrest Fezler and Allen Miller all shot 65s to stand one shot behind the leaders.

Larry Mize, Hal Sutton and George Burns were two strokes off the pace at 66 and seven golfers — Charles Coody, Steve Melnyk, Jim Colbert, D.A. Weibring, Bobby Mitchell, Keith Fergus and Joe Hager — were bunched at 67.

January has lead in Seniors tourney

January fired a 4-under-par 68 in the first round Thursday to finish in front of a field of 50 senior pro golfers at Shipyard Golf Club.

The Dallas golfer, whose round included six birdies and a pair of bogeys, said he made some costly mistakes in the Professional Golfers' Association event.

"I bogeyed the first par 5, and on the 10th I hit a fairway bunker, came out short, then pitched the next shot over the green. I was lucky to get a bogey out of that."

Tied at 3-under-par 69 for second place were Miller Barber, Don Sikes and little-known club pro Art Silvestrone, who qualified Tuesday and gained entry when Jimmy Clark withdrew.

Dinner meeting may help bring NFL strike to conclusion

By BRUCE LOWITT
AP Sports Writer

COCKEYSVILLE, Md. (AP) — Table for five? Seating for 1,500.

Sam Kagel and four of the principals in the National Football League negotiations had dinner Thursday night.

The four were union chief Ed Garvey, union executive committee member Stan White, owners' chief negotiator Jack Donlan and Management Council chief counsel Sargent Karch.

What they discussed may help bring to a conclusion this strike, now in its 32nd day, because when labor disputes are settled, experts in the field say they are settled by the principals, not by committees.

Asked after dinner by Jayne Miller of CBS News whether there was any progress in the talks, Kagel waxed philosphical.

"Y'know, many, many years ago I took a course at the University of California — I was an undergraduate at Berkeley — and this actually was a course on progress, what was progress?" Kagel began. "And we spent a whole semester on reading about Aristotle and so on and so forth on the idea of progress.

"Finally, the professor said at the end of the course, 'I have concluded after spending my whole lifetime reading about what all of the great thinkers of the world consider to be progress, that progress is a slow, gradual movement in a desirable direction.' And one of the students in my class spoke up and said, 'Well, professor what is the desirable direction?' And he said, 'Ah, that's the question.'"

And when asked by Miller whether the owners and players were headed in the desirable direction, Kagel replied: "I have no way of determining what the parties will consider to be a desirable direction. No way. They're going to have to decide themselves."

The 1,500 players are seeking a fixed percentage of the television revenues paid to the league by ABC, CBS and NBC. They're also seeking a central salary fund and a wage scale. The owners flatly oppose the fixed-percentage and central-fund portions of the union's demands and have offered a wage scale far below what the union wants.

On Thursday, William A. Lubbers, the chief counsel of the National Labor Relations Board, said he would issue a complaint sought by the union, one charging the league with unfair labor practices.

Lubbers noted that under the five-man NLRB board's procedures, the league will have a chance to settle the strike and that while he plans to issue a complaint, it could be averted by a settlement.

The NLRB announcement "was a big boost for morale," said White, also a member of the Detroit Lions. "It was very needed at this time. It says what we've been saying and doing all along has been right.

It came one day after the union had been thrown for a loss, when the U.S. Court of Appeals ruled that NFL teams could file suits in state courts to prevent the players from appearing in the union's all-star games, two of which had already been played. Rather than eat up funds chasing NFL litigation around the country, the union chose to cancel the next two all-star games — and perhaps the whole players' league as well.

IT WAS Garvey alone who low-keyed that setback on Wednesday. On Thursday he was flanked by Upshaw and other players and negotiators to bask in the warmth of a victory.

Garvey said the "12-count indictment against the Management Council supports our long-held belief that they have been refusing to bargain since February. The NLRB general counsel's statement confirms that this is indeed an unfair labor practice strike.

"While we fully expect the managment council to say that this is just 'one man's opinion,' that 'one man' is the government's chief prosecutor of unfair labor practices," Garvey said. "He has the power with the approval of the NLRB to go to federal court immediately to compel the management council to bargain wages with us ..."

The Management Council's response was, in fact, along the lines Garvey predicted.

"This is not an NLRB ruling," said Karch. "This is a lawsuit filed by the NLRB general counsel. He is not a judge. He is nothing but a lawyer. He is permitted to file these kinds of suits. Ed Garvey is not. That's why he's filing it and not Ed Garvey."

And while Garvey said an NLRB complaint would likely spur the Management Council into more meaningful negotiations, the council predicted it would "shift attention away from the bargaining table to the courts and unfortunately most likely delay any settlement."

As the fifth weekend without football drew near, more rumblings of discontent were heard from striking players, among them Russell Erxleben, player representative of the New Orleans Saints. He said he will poll his teammates to see if they are interested in returning to camp. The key, he said, would be a promise by the owners to bargain in good faith.

Three Longhorns doubtful for SMU

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Texas Longhorn defensive tackle John Haines, tight end Mike Chapman and defensive back Richard Peavy missed practice Thursday and are doubtful for Saturday's contest against Southern Methodist, said coach Fred Akers.

The 2:50 p.m. contest against the fourth-ranked Mustangs is a sellout.

yards on a 29 of 91 performance) has been throwing better since the Bulldogs went to the I. Culpepper thinks the I Formation spreads out the defense more and gives Page more targets to shoot at than in the tight wing MHS started the season with.

Midland High's sizeless defensive eight will have to overcome a major chore tonight since San Angelo's offensive front is huge. Tackle Eric Hess is 240 pounds while tackle Johnny Walker is 221. Guard Henry Green is 215 pounds and the Bulldogs don't have the size to matchup man-for-man in that war. Still, MHS has fared well against big lines this year, manhandling the awesome front wall of Cooper.

The winner won't be able to print any playoff tickets after tonight, but only two games will be left in the season after tonight and now is the time to take one giant step toward the playoffs.

of ringing the bell when they have a chance. They have an excellent quarterback in Adam Rodriquez. He's a good field general and seems to run the team real well. There's a good offensive line in front of him too."

"We work extremely hard on our kicking game," said Eudy. "We spend nearly as much time on kicking as we do on our offensive and defensive game. We have some kids who have worked hard on it, they're pretty talented kids. We've worked hard on coverage and such and we feel if we win two fazes of our kicking game we'll come out okay. Carl Green handles our kickoffs, extra points and field goals. He's 4-of-6 this year with his longest going 42 yards.

"Lee looks like a typical Lee team," continued Eudy. "They're big on the offensive and defensive lines and they have a lot of speed and are extremely well coached. Coach Dykes does an extremely good job with them. I'd rate them (Rebels) equally strong on both sides of the ball. They put such pressure on you offensively with the triple option and they have the speedsters to put you to the test. Defensively they run to the football with a lot of aggressivness and quickness."

Gordon continues to stop seeded players in USTA

will have to play top-seeded South African Derek Tarr in the quarterfinals. Tarr defeated Andy Avram, N.C., 6-3, 6-4.

Gordon continued to be the giant killer as he handled 15th seeded Jeff Robbins, Utah, 6-2, 6-2. The former top player at the University of Arizona beat No.2 seed Freeman in the opening round.

Gordon will have a chance to bump off another seeded player when he meets No.7 Mike Gandolfo, Lakeland, Fla., in today's quarterfinals.

Gandolfo, a finalist in the Midland tournament last year, advanced with a 7-6, 6-1 win over Californian Phil Lenhoff.

GORDON'S RAMPAGE extended into the doubles where he and Tom Csipkay became the first team to gain entry into the semi-finals. They upset the No.7 seeds, Randy Druz, Houston and Matt McDonald.

In the other doubles match eighth seeded Robbins and Rourke beat Molino and Davidson, 7-5, 6-3 and will face Tom Kieffer and Avram in the only doubles match scheduled for noon.

In an attempt to attract more spectators to the final rounds, touranment publicist Richard Posey announced that the quarterfinal singles matches have been changed from the scheduled 11:30 a.m. time to noon on Friday with the two remaining doubles matches set for 3:30 p.m.

Thursday's Results

Midland landman, geologist help set tempo for 'Waltz'

There is a fine line between the need for scrupulous accuracy in a movie, and the need for dramatic scenes that, although a bit unrealistic, move the plot along.

But when Midland geologist Gail Kettenbrink read one line in the movie "Waltz Across Texas," filmed in and around Midland, she told the writers it absolutely had to go.

"There were some definite technical changes I suggested to them, and some they followed, and some they didn't, which I understand," says Kettenbrink.

"But they had taken a core sample, and the comment was made, 'Look at the pretty crystals.' I told them that definitely had to go," she says with a hearty laugh. "No geologist would ever say that."

Local independent landman Herb Wales, on the other hand, plays a banker in the movie, a modern love story set against the backdrop of the West Texas oil industry. Wales said he didn't have to do any research for the role, because he has had to deal with his banker so often over the years from the other side of table that he knew how the character should act.

Kettenbrink and Wales both played important parts in the development of the movie, but in different ways. They are just two of the many Midlanders who helped either with the production of the film or actually starred in it.

Kettenbrink is the Midlander who saw all four versions of the script, from the initial outline through the final revision. She is also the geologist who helped actress Anne Archer develop the attitudes surrounding the character she plays, geologist Gail Weston. She took Archer to a rig in Garza County for the day so the actress could soak up the atmosphere and mood of the drilling operation.

In addition, she and her geologist husband, Ed, had the fun of playing extras in the bar scene filmed at The Bar in Midland. It was an exhausting, but fascinating, 13-hour day of constant re-takes as the director tried to get everything just right — sound, lights, angles.

"I was amazed at how many times they had to repeat things. It was quite an eye-opener," she says now. "A man came by with a smoke machine to make smoke; people were smoking but apparently they didn't think there was enough smoke in the room," Kettenbrink adds.

Wales, although long a landman, played a banker in the movie — the banker who at first, turns down landman John Taylor (played by Terry Jastrow) for a loan, until Anne convinces Taylor to get back in there and do some hard, West-Texas style negotiating.

"I was really pleased to meet Terry," Wales says. "He is really so charming, I wanted to give him that loan right away. If I were a real banker, I would have given it to him the first time."

Wales has acting experience at Midland Community Theatre, in productions such as "The Moon is Blue" and "the Summer Mummers," and he has also been interviewed on television as both a player and an alumnus at Southern Methodist University.

Also, when Wales worked in California for a time, he met actor Charlton Heston through a friend, and was able to watch parts of the filming of "The Ten Commandments."

Even so, Wales sums up his "waltzing" experience in one word: exciting.

His scene was shot in one long day in the office of Bob Southerland, president of Texas American Bank-Midland ("nee" Commercial Bank and Trust). It was a Saturday last fall, and many bank employees were there to serves as extras — tellers, secretaries and customers.

Both Kettenbrink and Wales were eagerly awaiting the movie's West Texas premiere this evening at the Hodge Theatre in Midland.

Kettenbrink was approached almost three years ago by Bob Monaghan, a Midland petroleum engineer who is a friend of Jastrow's father, independent oil man Kenneth Jastrow of Midland.

"He got me and Virginia Monaghan and Sara Robbins (both female geologists here) together with Terry and Anne just to get the idea, just to get the kernel of their story," Kettenbrink says. "They asked us for anecdotes," about things the women had experienced as geologists in the oil patch.

Later, Kettenbrink arranged an informal meeting at her home between Anne and several female geologists.

"It was just question and answer. Anne wanted to get a feel for it — not an environmental thing, but an atmosphere, an attitude. We're not women's libbers, but we are serious about what we do.

"She was interested in how we acted and reacted to the men on the rig."

Kettenbrink says she was impressed with Anne's thorough research for the role of a female geologist. The actress queried her about what clothes she would wear in the office and what she would wear on the rig. She even spoke of duplicating Kettenbrink's scruffy boots with a scrape of sandpaper.

"There was one scene filmed where I worked at the time (at the Midland office of Earle M. Craig), where Anne did dress in what I would consider appropriate clothing for a Midland professional woman."

Most of the ideas in the movie came from the original writers, but Kettenbrink did have input as she reviewed the script. "I can't think of any one, specific idea in the movie that was my idea. A lot of things were left in that were technically incorrect, not as exact or precise as they could be, but they were left in because it made the story more dramatic."

Wales reports that the film was given an early screening at the annual convention of the American Association of Petroleum Landmen this summer, through the graces of Kenneth Jastrow. Wales received calls from many landmen from around the country who saw the film, and they liked it.

"We're wall to wall with claimants," said Alfredo Lopez, assistant manger of the TEC office in Laredo. "I've seen foremen, managers, supervisors — people we have never seen in the past. They're shocked. They're trying to digest what's going on, wondering what their next move will be."

TEC Commissioner Ken Clapp said TEC offices now are crowded with "first-timers."

"It's especially tragic — the person who is out of work for the first time in his life. They come into our offices discouraged, afraid and frustrated," he said.

The TEC's latest figures, showing the September unemployment rate in 25 metropolitan areas, put Laredo at the top of the list at a whopping 23.2 percent, the highest jobless rate for any Texas city since the TEC began keeping such records in 1970.

The second and third worst figures came from two urban centers in the Lower Rio Grande Valley. The September rate for McAllen-Pharr-Edinburg was 21.1 Percent, and Brownsville-Harlingen-San Benito stood at 15.8 percent.

The Department of Labor did not keep employment statistics during the Depression, but it has estimated the jobless rate peaked at 24.9 percent in 1933. However, labor statistician say the impact then was much greater than it is today because there were no government benefits such as food stamps and unemployment then.

Clapp said unemployment in Texas has not "bottomed out" yet, but he said he saw a glimmer of hope in the payouts of unemployment benefits.

"They are still increasing, but at a much less rapid rate," he said. "I have a feeling the thing is slowing."

Officials blame the state's unemployment problems on a slump in oil drilling, Mexico's peso devaluation, a national recession and hard times for farmers.

Statewide, the se'sonally adjusted rate for September, announced earlier this month, was a record 8.4 percent. The raw figure was 8 percent. It was adjusted upward to compensate for such things as summer workers leaving the job market.

The figures for each urban area, which are released by the TEC about two weeks after the statewide figure comes out, are not seasonally adjusted.

"We're seeing people now who have been working 15 to 20 years in the same job and have never been unemployed," said I.V. Ferguson, district director of the TEC office in Dallas.

Ferguson said the normal waiting time of 30 minutes in the Dallas TEC office now takes up to four hours.

"Most of these people are on edge to start with. Our people try to be as accommodating as possible, but they're overworked" and under pressure themselves$ he said.

He said the situation in Dallas was aggravated by the Braniff shutdown, which threw 5,500 people out of work last May. The September rate for Dallas-Fort Worth stood at 6.4 percent.

Houston's rate leaped to a post-World War II high of 8.2 percent, highest among the state's three largest urban centers. San Antonio ran a close second at 7.9 percent.

Austin had the lowest rate of unemployment in Texas, 4.1 percent, but jobs were scarce there too. Sixty people showed up to apply for a part-time, minimum wage job working in a warehouse after a beer distributorship ran a classified ad this week.

"There's been an upward trend on Wall Street, but I sure don't see it on Main Street," said U.S. Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, who held a news conference in the Capitol Thursday.

He said he has visited Eagle Pass, Del Rio and Laredo recently, and "streets there just deserted on a Saturday afternoon when normally you see crowds of people packing the streets. It's an extremely serious problem. A major part of it can be blamed on the peso devaluation."

Gov. Bill Clements, seeking a second four-year term in the Nov. 2 elections, insisted Texas' economy remains "very healthy."

"Economic indicators are excellent. Basically, inflation is under control. The prime interest rate is down, and this already is stimulating our economy as reflected specifically in new housing starts," Clements said in a statement issued by his office here.

He predicted Texas would be "the first to recover from the national recession."

Midland's unemployment rate down

For the third month in a row, the unemployment rate in Midland declined slightly, from 4.8 percent on August to 4.7 percent in September. The rate in Odessa rose, however, from 6.4 percent in August to 7.2 percent during the same period.

Unemployment in Texas reached an all-time high of 8.4 percent, seasonally adjusted, up from 7.0 percent in August. Unemployment rates increased in all but one state, South Dakota, in September, to bring the U.S. total to 10.1 percent.

Coloring the fact that unemployment levels rose in Odessa and fell a bit in Midland was the fact that both cities experienced a drop in the number of people in the available work force, suggesting a migration away from the two cities or a number of people who have either stopped looking for work and filing unemployment claims, or have taken part-time employment as a stop-gap measure.

Midland's total civilian work force fell from 63,050 to 61,600, a decrease of 1,450 workers, or about 65 people for each of the 22 working days in the month.

In Odessa, the work force dropped from 70,150 in August to 69,450 in September, a decrease of 700 workers.

The number of persons employed dropped in each city also. In Midland that statistic fell by 1,300, from 60,000 in August to 58,700 in September. The drop in Odessa was almost as drastic. September records showed that 64,450 were employed, down 1,200 from 65,650 employed in August.

"I was certain that we had peaked out at 6.4 percent in August," said Odessa TEC manager Frank Kasko. "I was totally unprepared for this 7.2 figure. If this isn't the highest (unemployment rate), I don't want to think about it."

There were 2,900 unemployment claims on file in Midland in September, down from 3,050 the previous month. In Odessa, 5,000 people were unemployed and claiming benefits, according to the TEC.

The unemployment rate in other Texas cities also rose in September. Figures for selected areas are followed by the August totals in parentheses: Houston, 8.9 percent (7.6); El Paso, 12.5 percent (11.1); San Antonio, 8.2 percent (7.6); and Lubbock, 5.7 percent (5.2).

A TEC spokesman in Austin emphasized these figures are preliminary and subject to adjustment in the next week or so.

Businessmen urged to support Reagan

WASHINGTON (AP) — A senior White House official is urging businessmen to rally behind President Reagan's economic program or face a future administration pushing "something much more radical" than the Great Society.

"If we do not succeed in this term and next, we will not go back to the Great Society programs but (to) something much further to the left," David R. Gergen, Reagan's assistant for communications, told a U.S. Chamber of Commerce luncheon Thursday.

Gergen, who hinted that the 71-year-old president will seek a second term in 1984, urged support in the Nov. 2 elections for congressional candidates who back Reagan's program.

He said he would consider it a "major Republican victory" if the GOP loses 20 or fewer House seats next month. Gergen added that this was a personal assessment, not the official White House view.

Since World War II, in off-year elections during the first term of a president, the president's party has lost an average of 12 seats in the House. The Republicans control the Senate and the Democrats have a majority in the House.

The Great Society was the name former President Johnson gave to his effort in the 1960s to boost spending for domestic programs and social reforms. Reagan has sought to reduce such spending and in some cases abolish the programs or turn them over to the states.

Gergen said that if Reagan is unsuccessful in restoring the economy, "something much more radical" than Johnson's program would come about.

Therefore, he said, his audience should work "to see this administration through to a successful conclusion."

Gergen, who serves as a communications and political adviser and a presidential spokesman, said that next month's voting is one of three major hurdles facing Reagan. The others he cited are the special congressional session starting Nov. 29 to consider fiscal 1983 appropriations bills and next year's congressional session.

"Next year could be one of the toughest for Ronald Reagan and his presidency," Gergen said, predicting that some of the disputes over his program "will be brutal."

He said the toughest fights would be over how to build "real, new jobs" to overcome unemployment.

"We are facing a very large chorus that is trying to drown us out," he said.

Gergen said he did not anticipate a decision by Reagan in the near future on whether to run for re-election. The president said last summer that he was not one to run away from an unfinished job and that his aides should not start looking for new employment.

Reagan, steel industry welcome import limitation agreement

By The Associated Press

The American steel industry and the Reagan administration welcomed an agreement to limit the importation of European steel to the United States, ending a bitter dispute between the trading partners.

But that good news for the economy was offset Thursday by a government report that said the unemployment problem was persisting.

On Wall Street, the surge that had boosted the Dow Jones industrial average more than 20 points on Wednesday sputtered on Thursday.

The average of 30 industrial stocks edged up 2.86 points to 1,036.98 as prices turned mixed and the stock-buying rally stalled. It was the 15th session since Aug. 18 that volume has exceeded 100 million shares — rising to 122.46 million.

Over the next two days, meanwhile, ballots will be going in the mail to members of the United Auto Workers union who will vote Tuesday on whether to strike Chrysler Corp. or to continue working under the expired contract until after Jan. 1.

President Reagan said Thursday's agreement with the Europeans was "good news" for the ailing U.S. steel industry and would help the overall economy.

In Pittsburgh, U.S. Steel Chairman David Roderick said the agreement included limits on a wider range of steel products than did an earlier tentative settlement worked out in August. The enforcement provisions, he said, were tougher in the new arrangement.

Other steel company executives said they were pleased by the new restrictions on their European counterparts.

"We believe the arrangement provides an equitable method for relieving injury to the domestic steel industry," said Frederick Jaicks, chairman of Inland Steel Co. in Chicago.

The agreement was reached only hours before a deadline for the imposition of penalty duties on imported steel. It was accepted by American steel companies who had blamed the imports for contributing to their worst financial crunch since the Depression.

Had the restrictions been in place in 1981, Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige said, there would have been 25,000 to 30,000 more jobs for the U.S. industry.

"While we think this will be a shot in the arm for employment in the steel industry, this is not the answer to all of their problems," Baldrige cautioned.

The outlook for improvement in jobs dimmed further Thursday when the government reported that the number of people filing first-time claims for unemployment benefits in early October was the third-highest for any week in the current recession.

The Labor Department said 685,000 people filed for jobless benefits in the week ended Oct. 9, the third highest weekly number of the recession.

— UAW President Douglas Fraser said Thursday the referendum before the rank-and-file focuses on two proposals: suspending the negotiations until immediately after the Christmas holidays or striking Chrysler at 10 a.m. on Nov. 1.

The No. 3 automaker's refusal to grant an immediate pay increase caused a breakdown in negotiations Monday. The rank-and-file had overwhelmingly rejected a tentative contract reached Sept. 15.

Corporate earnings reports, meanwhile, showed more evidence that business was weak in the third quarter.

Sperry Corp., the electronics and farm equipment manufacturer, said its profit plunged 78 percent in the three months, compared with the same period in 1981.

"The lack of business activity is adversely affecting manufacturing industries worldwide, including Sperry," said Gerald G. Probst, chairman and chief executive.

In other economic developments Thursday:

—The Investment Company Institute, a trade group, reported that assets of money-market mutual funds rose $1.3 billion to a record $228.7 billion in the week ended Wednesday. And Donoghue's Money Fund Report, an industry newsletter, said the average seven-day yield of the funds in the week ended Wednesday fell to 9.09 percent from 9.46 percent the previous week. The 30-day average yield dropped to 9.38 percent from 9.53 percent.

—Automotive News, a trade journal, said the major domestic auto companies will build an estimated 113,398 cars this week in the United States, an increase of 16.4 percent from last week. This week's tally will be down 12.9 percent from the 130,168 cars built in the same week last year, the journal said.

—The U.S. auto companies said the number of workers on indefinite layoff rose to 243,300 this week, up slightly from 238,900 last week. Temporary layoffs this week totaled 35,000, up from last week's 31,625.

UAW to vote on strike Wednesday

DETROIT (AP) — United Auto Workers President Douglas Fraser says it could be a "dangerous step" if union members vote to go on strike when they decide next Tuesday what to do about stalemated negotiations with Chrysler Corp.

Fraser said Thursday that the referendum will ask workers whether to strike Nov. 1, or continue working until early next year under a contract that expired Sept. 15. The vote was called after the rank and file turned down a tentative pact and the company rejected a new union demand for an immediate pay raise.

Chrysler, which was on the brink of bankruptcy between 1979-1981, has said a strike could cripple the company.

"Obviously this is a very, very serious situation. We want the Chrysler workers to express their opinion before we take this very important, critical and perhaps dangerous step," Fraser said at a news conference.

The other alternative on Tuesday's ballot will call for delaying negotiations "until sometime after the first of the new year when, hopefully, the economy will have improved," the union said in a letter being sent to Chrysler autoworkers.

Further negotiations at this time would be "futile," Fraser said.

Doug Nicoll, a Chrysler spokesman, said the carmaker would "wait to hear from Doug Fraser" before making any comment on the UAW decision.

Joe Games, president of UAW Local 1183 in Newark, Del., which was the first major Chrysler local to reject a tentative pact reached Sept. 16, said he thought most workers would choose to keep working, but predicted the nationwide vote "would be close"

But Larry Leach, president of Local 1264 at the Sterling Heights, Mich., stamping plant, said he would recommend a strike.

"The company has something to lose, but so do my members," said Leach, whose local rejected the tentative pact by a 20-1 margin.

All 43,200 working U.S. Chrysler autoworkers will be eligible to vote along with former workers on indefinite layoff who are still in good standing with the union. There are approximately 40,000 employees on indefinite layoff, Fraser said.

Vote results should be in by Tuesday night and a simple majority will determine the outcome, Fraser said.

The two sides broke off contract talks Monday after Chrysler said "there simply is no money" for an immediate pay raise demanded by the union.

The UAW says the tentative accord — after a strike of several hours when the old contract expired at midnight Sept. 15 — was rejected by autoworkers by a 7-3 margin because it did not contain an up-front pay raise. The contract did provide for reinstatement of cost-of-living protection and pay raises tied to profits, both to begin in December.

Fraser denied that delaying a strike until Nov. 1 would give Chrysler time to build up a backlog of cars for sale.

"They have the cars stockpiled now — that's nothing new," he said.

Analysts said a strike of no more than two weeks would not hurt Chrysler, which has about a 70-day supply of unsold cars, according to Ward's Automotive Reports. A short walkout also would not hurt the union, which has accumulated a multimillion-dollar strike fund, they said.

Paid Advertisement

According to Marie Moore, hypnotherapist at Clinical Hypnosis, smoking is one of the most common habits the hypnotherapist is asked to treat. Almost every smoker has at one time or another attempted to break this habit. Sometimes this can be accomplished by will power alone, but so often without the help of therapy, a person relapses back into smoking.

The behavior modification therapy used in hypnosis can be more effective than will power alone in eliminating the moking habit, and in keeping you from smoking in the future.

According to Moore, the hypnosis process used attempts to break the habit through proven hypnotherapeutic procedures which get to the underlying cause of the habit. Then the desire to smoke lessens with hypnosuggestion; that process which combines a message for your subconscious with positive reinforcement, and this leads to the desired result--no smoking.

The subject is then taught self-hypnosis (auto-hypnosis) for continued daily practice during the period of hypnotherapy, and thereafter until the smoker feels the habit is truly broken.

This self-hypnosis can also be used for many other beneficial purposes, such as deep relaxation, relief of nervous tension, insomnia, weight control and a sundry of other undesirable habits.

Clinical Hypnosis strives for 100 percent success in this program. However, as Moore says, "We realize we can only be successful with people who are properly motivated to stop smoking. Unresponsive patients, those who are pushed into the program by their doctor, spouse or friends, are most difficult and will respond only to prolonged therapy, if at all."

Moore says she prefers to accept patients into individual therapy, then if indicated, into group therapy. "At first I prefer having the opportunity to develop therapist-patient rapport, and giving the patient more individually-directed procedures. However, highly motivated subjects may find they can do just as well in group therapy, especially in small groups where patient-to-patient rapport is developed as well as the patient-therapist rapport. In fact, for continued maintenance and reinforcement of abstinance, group therapy is very effective."

One of the benefits of group therapy, according to Moore, is the fact that it is less expensive than individual sessions. However, the decision as to which therapy will be undertaken should take all factors into account. The patient can always transfer from group to individual therapy or vice-versa. Moore says participants can form a group of from four to six people, or if an individual decides to go into group therapy, but does not have a group formed, his or her name is put on a waiting list and as soon as enough have signed up for a group, it is formed.

According to Moore, there are many myths concerning the process of quitting smoking; one of these is that people gain weight when they stop smoking. This is not true, says Moore. People get fat because they eat too much. Those who use weight gain as an excuse to return to cigarettes are fooling no one--not even themselves. If a patient follows the prescribed practice of auto-hypnosis, they will not gain weight after quitting smoking; in fact, Moore says, you can if you wish, lose weight.

Another common complaint heard from those who have given up cigarettes is that they have had a continued desire for years. Since there is no physiological need for nicotine after six or seven days of abstinence, these prolonged desires for cigarettes are psychosomatic. The successful use of hypnosis helps reduce this psychosomatic desire for tobacco. If a patient experiences this discomfort even after additional therapy, there may be hidden motives for such prolonged desire, such as an excuse to resume smoking.

Of course, there are always well-meaning friends who have quit smoking and can't resist the opportunity for martyrdom. These friends tell you about the many terrible pains and symptoms they suffered and how they are still fighting, after all these years, the desire for a cigarette. Moore says, "Don't let these people frighten you. Reinforce your own position and state the real facts to them. There is no discomfort you can't overcome because your desire to smoke has changed to a desire not to smoke."

If you've made the decision to give up smoking, give Marie Moore a call at 685-3344 and discuss hypnotherapy as the solution to your smoking problem.

The Very Thing for gifts

Paid Advertisement

The Very Thing a unique shop in La Vallita Shopping Center, is proud to announce they are the exclusive gallery in Midland for the works of Connie Seaborn Reagan. The beautiful serigraphs which have made Connie Seaborn Reagan a familiar name in national art circles, and which showcase her unique style, are available now at The Very Thing.

The Very Thing, owned by Rita Miller and Joyce Coleman, delights in bringing beautiful objects d'art to Midland; among their offerings are the intricate wood carvings of Larry Restine, protege of famed wood carvist Perry Holly; and signed and numbered prints from artist Bert Seaborn. These original works of art are gifts which will be remembered always.

Some other one-of-a-kind gifts are the fun and beautiful kaleidoscopes designed by Peach. The Very Thing has three different sytles in wood, solid brass and painted. There are limited edition Selkirk glass paperweights from Scotland, and a variety of new graphics. Miller and Coleman invite you to stop by and see these beautiful gift ideas, just in time for early Christmas shopping.

The Very Thing specializes in decorating from the floor up, whether for your home or office. They can offer their customers everything from carpet to leaded crystal, all in the best of taste and latest fashion. The selection of decorator gifts are chosen to compliment both your home and your lifestyle.

Miller and Coleman offer their own personal brand of decorating service, bringing to this venture years of experience in decorating. Miller worked as a color coordinator with the DuPont company and studied at the New York School of Interior Design, while Coleman's field of expertise in in design.

In addition to the many fine gift and decorator items, The Very Thing has expanded their selection of fabrics to include the Greef fabrics. They also have a complete selection of Nettle Creek custom drapes and bedspreads, with coordinating wall paper and table linens.

There is a good selection of Italian leaded crystal in contemporary designs as well as bar glasses in three sizes. There are many unusual lamps, wall accessories, silk flower arrangements, brass accessories and gifts, ceramic fruits and vegetables, hand-made glass birds and animals and Austrian crystal gifts in many designs.

A new feature of the shop is realistic silk trees and plants for home and office. These plants never need watering and are hard to distinquish from the real thing! Miller says they can order these trees up to 15 feet tall.

The Very Thing offers the convenience of MasterCard and American Express, and welcomes layaways. Come in today from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. daily, and through Christmas, The Very Thing will be open on Thursday evenings until 8 p.m. Saturday hours are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Rita Miller and Joyce Coleman invite you to see the beautiful serigraphs by renowned artist, Connie Seaborn Reagan. The Very Thing, a unique shop located in La Vallita Shopping Center, Midkiff at Wadley, is the exclusive gallery for Ms. Reagans work. DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Ear piercing would not be considered child abuse

Dear Dr. Solomon: My mother was born in Europe and she had her ears pierced when she was a baby. I did not have my ears pierced and neither did my daughter. But now my daughter wants to have her daughter's ears pierced. Is there any object to this? I just don't like the idea of subjecting a child to abuse. — Jane, New York

Dear Jane: While I'm neither for nor against piercing, I doubt that anyone would place it in the category of child abuse.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My father had a hernia operation about 25 years ago, and my recollection is that he was out of work for some time. I'm scheduled for a hernia operation and my doctor says I won't have to be away from work for very long. Has there been a change in thinking about how much rest a person should get after such an operation? — George, Washington, D.C.

Dear George: Patients are being helped to return to work much earlier than used to be the case after various kinds of surgery, and they often seem to be the better for it. A study conducted in England of 500 patients who underwent hernia operations showed that those encouraged to resume their normal activities ahead of schedule had a slightly lower rate of recurrence after one year than did those who delayed resuming their normal activities.

Dr. J.B. Bourke, of the University and City Hospital in Nottingham, England, attributes part of the success in getting people back to work earlier to the use of improved material used for sutures.

Dear Dr. Solomon: A friend of mine recently gave birth and everything now seems to be going well with her and her baby. But there was a time when the doctor thought that she would deliver prematurely. Is this common? What could happen if a woman does have a baby prematurely? — Jo, York, Pa.

Dear Jo: Premature labor is defined as labor that takes place before a gestation period of 37 weeks. The incidence of premature labor is about 7 percent.

Physicians become concerned about prematurity because of the possibility of neurologic damage or death in the infant. About two-thirds of all cases of severe neurologic damage and two-thirds of all deaths around the time of birth result from prematurity.

Dr. Robert J. Carpenter, of the Baylor College of Medicine in Houston, points out that it is not always advisable to attempt to halt premature labor. For example, severe hypertension or other disease in the mother may indicate the desirability of permitting delivery to proceed. In many cases, however, postponing delivery for even a few days or a few weeks can have a beneficial effect on the infant.

For Cathy, Charlottesville, Va.: Physicians have some really remarkable drugs at their disposal that they can prescribe for a variety of conditions; but, as I tell my patients, if weight loss and/or sodium restriction can lower blood pressure, why use drugs?

(If you have a medical question, write to Neil Solomon, M.D, 1726 Reisterstown Road, Baltimore, Md. 21208. Dr. Solomon cannot give personal replies but will answer as many questions as possible in his column.)

List company rents names to candidates

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — When a political candidate asks Dodee Black where to look for money, she may steer him to people who buy fruitcakes through the mail.

This is the world of the list broker, the new ward heeler of computer-age politics.

From post office boxes in Oakton, Va., and Skokie, Ill., they guide the guileless through the thickets of political solicitation. They do it with lists: of "Dixie Cream Conservatives," "Carriage Trade Liberals," "Proven High-Dollar Donors" targeted for special fund appeals.

This year, nearly $1 out of every $2 raised by the Democratic National Committee will be generated by direct mail in a $5-million effort spawning 15 million prospecting letters, according to a DNC spokesman. Meanwhile, the Republican National Committee will spend 27 percent of its $26 million budget on direct mail, says Phil Smith, RNC assistant finance director.

The key to both parties' efforts is building "house lists" of donors from a "universe" of potential givers — a time-consuming and expensive process in the day of the 20-cent stamp.

So enter Dodee Black and others who shop, swap and deal the thousands of name collections that candidates, political and social organizations, magazines and mail-order-catalog companies have accumulated.

Black, vice president and general manager of Atlantic List Co. in Washington, works with Republicans, conservatives and the RNC and also does direct-mail fund-raising for environmental groups.

Her bible is a 1,300-page directory published twice a year by Standard Rate and Data Service Inc. of Skokie that details owners, rental rates and other data on thousands of commercial mail-order lists ranging from buyers of weight reduction shorts to subscribers to the Light Opera of Manhatten.

Its important campaign lists, however, are those of political and social groups. A group called Infomat, headquartered in Rolling Hills Estates, Calif., for example, offers a list of 11,909 names described as "contributors to a national antihomosexual campaign." The list can be rented for $55 per 1,000 names.

"When a candidate comes to me," says Black, "I question him about the thrust of his campaign...Usually I would recommend an assortment of lists — a couple of political lists (donors to other candidates), maybe some businessmen's groups if he's conservative, possibly some farmers lists, maybe subscribers to Time and Newsweek and then maybe a couple of catalog lists — people who buy cheese or fruitcake through the mail."

From each list she will choose a minimum buy — usually 5,000 names — for a trial mailing. The first mailing might include samples from 10 different lists: 50,000 names that arrive coded on magnetic tape.

The candidate then mails his fund-raising letter. Lists that return contributions from 2 percent or better are milked again. Proceeds finance rental of more lists in what becomes, if things go well, a snowballing, self-supporting effort.

The most important product of the test mailings is the names and addresses compiled in the candidate's own house list of contributors. These may be hit for contributions eight or 10 times in a year.

One such effort was launched in July 1981 for Sen. Lowell P. Weicker, R-Conn., by the Vic Kamber Group.

"We decided early that Weicker's universe of potential supporters consisted of three principal groups, and we designed separate packages to appeal to each one," said Kamber. "There was the feminist group interested in his stand on abortion and women's rights; there were those interested in general liberal agenda of political issues; and there were those afraid of the growth of the New Right in 1980. Later, we added another package to appeal to Jewish voters."

To target the feminists, Kamber located 75 lists, including those of former Sen. Birch Bayh, D-Ind., Sen. Robert Packwood, R-Oregon, and former Reps. Elizabeth Holtzman, D-N.Y., and John B. Anderson, R-Ill.; organizations such as the League of Women Voters and Planned Parenthood; categories such as "Pro Choice" and "Multi-Dollar Liberals;" and magazines such as Psychology Today and Rolling Stone.

The Bayh list returned a 4.6 percent response, the Packwood list 4.2 percent, the Holtzman list 3.9 percent, and the Anderson list less than 1 percent, Kamber said. Planned Parenthood was "weak" at 1.7 percent.

Kamber followed a similar process for the "universe" of names in the liberal, antiright and Jewish categories. When the program ended last June, its $300,000 investment had produced $750,000 in contributions-nearly one-third of the Weicker campaign budget. It also produced, Kamber said, a house list of 30,000 names — the third largest list in the Senate.

"We were only mailing for about a year," Kamber said. "You really need at least two years to do it right. You have to remember the conservatives have been doing this since the late 1960s."

U.S. looks for Soviet punishment

By WALTER R. MEARS
AP Special Correspondent

WASHINGTON (AP) — Facing political and diplomatic problems over its trade sanctions against the Soviet Union, the Reagan administration is looking for a better way to punish Moscow — something that will work without offending voters at home and allies abroad. The goal is allied agreement on a framework of economic measures and restrictions to be applied to the Soviet Union.

"We're trying to study relationships between the West and the East...as far as economics are concerned," said a senior administration official, speaking on the condition that his name not be used. "This involves financial terms, it involves items that we're selling to them, it involves the whole philosophical question as to whether we should be doing it and, if so, to what extent and what products.

"And the idea is that if you can reach general agreements on all this, you wouldn't have to bother with individual sanctions then," he said. "You're not trying to ease the sanctions themselves, they stay put. What you're trying to do is establish a whole new type of relationship."

That kind of economic framework has been under discussion by western foreign ministers. The administration acknowledges that it is an elusive goal, given the differing philosophies and concerns of American allies.

"At what point in time do you say you don't trade at all, or you have open trade, or you have subsidized trade or no subsidized trade?" the official asked. "How do you treat these people? I think that's the question they're addressing rather than the narrow focus...of what we should do about the pipeline."

The administration trade sanctions deal with technology and equipment for the 3,700-mile natural gas pipeline the Soviet Union is building from Siberia to western Europe. President Reagan imposed sanctions on American export of supplies for the pipeline last December, and stiffened them in June, in response to the Soviet role in suppressing the free trade union movement in Poland. The United States tried unsuccessfully to get western European nations to follow suit.

The sanctions have cost business — and jobs — in some sections of the United States, and where they have, it is an issue in the congressional election campaign. One such area is Peoria, Ill., where Reagan campaigned on Monday for House Republican Leader Robert H. Michel. Democrat G. Douglas Stephens denounces the trade sanctions daily, pointing to their impact on the district's biggest single employer, Caterpillar Tractor Co. The firm has laid off about 8,000 workers, in part because the sanctions barred it from filling more than $90 million worth of orders for pipeline equipments. Another area firm that lost pipeline business has shut down entirely.

Part of the problem is that every trade restriction has its down side, since what the Soviet Union is not allowed to buy, American firms cannot sell.

When President Jimmy Carter imposed a partial embargo on grain sales to the Soviet Union early in the 1980 presidential campaign, Reagan said it wasn't fair to make one segment of the American economy bear the burden.

GAIL BURKE
Staff Writer

And Harold Embry, who has been Parkview Hospital's pharmacist for three years, would rather be viewed as a drug information specialist.

Embry said the main function of the pharmacist should be to act as a drug information specialist for the entire hospital and physicians.

Because the pharmacist is not representing a drug manufacturer, Embry said he can give an objective opinion about a drug.

"Physicians use a limited number of drugs," he said. "He may not be familiar with a particular type of drug that one of his patients may need. I hope I can give him the information about this drug."

THE "DRUG information specialist" at Parkview also extends his job to the patients.

"When the patient first enters the hospital, the admitting clerk will ask if he has any allergic reactions to any medication," Embry said. "If there are no allergies, the letters NKA (no known allergies) are stamped on the patient's card. I don't ask the front desk to specify what kind of allergy or reaction the patient has, so I will go to the patient and discuss it with him.

"I prefer the smaller hospital because you have more interaction, like this, with the patients, nurses and doctors."

Embry said by going to the patient he can clear up any misunderstanding about the allergies.

"The public is confused about allergies," He added. "An upset stomach after taking medication is not an allergy, but a skin rash is."

Embry said today's hospital pharmacies are becoming more active in the hospital, rather than "hanging out in the basement," where most pharmacies are located.

THREE YEARS AGO, Embry introduced a method that was unique to Midland hospitals, a centralized intravenous add program.

Embry explained when a doctor wants a patient to have his medication intravenously, it is "piggy-backed" on an IV solution base. By attaching the IV add to the main IV, the patient receives medication more quickly.

"Some drugs are administered best through an IV — it's the quickest way to get the medication through the body," Embry said. "When you're sick, you usually lose fluid, especially if you're going through surgery. IVs are used to replace that fluid."

The centralized IV add program, a quality control program which allows the pharmacist to make all the IV add medication in one area, saves time and duplication.

With the centralized IV add method, the pharmacist will prepare all the medication needed for each patient in a 24-hour period.

"WE PREPARE THE IV medication in a room with a laminar flow hood, which is not a sterile environment, but a clean environment," Embry explained. "It is free from 99.9 percent of all airborne contaminants above a certain size. This means the flow hood provides us with an ultra-clean environment for mixing these IVs."

Embry said in a 200-bed hospital usually the medication nurses on each floor will make these solutions for 30 or more patients.

"If you are not doing this in one area, the same activity is duplicated six times," he said. "In hospitals with 600 beds or more, there's usually one person in the pharmacy who does nothing but IV adds."

The unit dose system is another quality control method used at Parkview. As in many hospitals, medication is individually wrapped, similar to a string of candy suckers, to prevent tampering with the drugs.

"This also prevents waste," Embry said. "The pharmacist can check on the medication administered to the patient."

EACH PATIENT upon admission to Parkview has a drawer marked with his name at the nurses station. When a doctor writes his orders for medication, one copy stays in the patient file, one goes to the medication nurse and the last one is kept in the pharmacy.

Embry explained that another record, called a medication profile, is also used in the pharmacy for a cross reference of the drugs administered. With these records, he can check when the medication nurse administered the drug and how much. The medication profile is also used for the patient charge.

Embry said the cost is based on the hospital's pricing formula, and although there are hidden costs in the medication, a patient should consider that the medication is being delivered to his bed.

Parkview's pharmacist also does the drug inventory and purchasing. Embry said he keeps up with the latest developments through literature and the manufacturers.

"So many drugs with different brand names are identical, so we'll stock only one particular brand to avoid duplication," he said, adding that Parkview also uses some generic drugs.

Although the public sometimes frowns upon the use of the "generic drug," Embry said all drugs have to be proven safe and effective by the Food and Drug Administration.

Embry said some drugs are not available in generic form, but one particular medication which Parkview stocks is acetaminophen, the generic name for Tylenol.

Lieutenant governor candidates express similar concerns

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

Both are wealthy Houstonians and they see a lot of the same problems in Texas and a need to correct them. But that's the end of the similarities between the two candidates for lieutenant governor: incumbent Bill Hobby and Republican George Strake.

The two men stopped in Midland Thursday for meetings with the media. Footprints left by Strake, who had stopped at the Midland Board of Realtors, hadn't cooled before Hobby arrived at the Coors building less than an hour later for a luncheon meeting with the Petroplex News Association.

Issues are similar and Hobby even agreed with a proposal made earlier by Strake concerning ways to fund maintenance of highways.

But they differed in campaign styles, each other's ability to handle the second ranking job in the state, campaign finances and experience in state politics.

A hurried Strake was greeted at the Realtors headquarters on West Wall Street by a smiling, blonde-haired girl. He sat down in a chair in front of the microphones and the 4-year-old climbed into his lap. She leaned over to talk into the microphones and the candidate stopped her, saying, "I don't think they want a press statement."

SHE MOVED INTO the chair next to Strake and looked smilingly at him for several minutes. Asked who she was, Strake laughed and said, "I don't know. Too bad she can't vote." Afterward, the mother explained that her daughter, Joy Millican, is a "ham."

At the luncheon, a serious-faced Hobby sat down at the table with microphones and cited the main problems facing the state before somberly answering questions from the media. His most humorous comment came during a jab at Strake. In a recent televised debate, Hobby had said that Strake could tell all he knows about state government in 15 minutes.

"We need to make spectacular increases in salary. It's alarming the number of teachers leaving the profession..."

— Bill Hobby

"I'm an advocate of users paying for facilities. That translates into toll roads, and we need to address it soon."

— George Strake

Asked if he regretted making that comment, Hobby replied with a smile, "I regret the statement about the 15 minutes. I should have said five minutes."

Trying to explain the role of a lieutenant governor in Texas, Hobby listed the various committees he serves on and his work in presiding over the Senate.

Because of these many duties, he said, "No one knows what to call a lieutenant governor. The correct thing is 'Bill.'"

In challenging his opponent, Strake called for Hobby to "explain why the highway system has deteriorated, explain why ninth graders are still flunking, explain why we haven't had a water plan, explain why crime has escalated 131 percent."

ALMOST AS IF he read Strake's thoughts, the lieutenant governor outlined three areas of concern in Texas: education, the prison system and highway system.

Noting there are 2½ million students in Texas public schools today and 4 million estimated by the end of the century, Hobby said the declining number of teachers is a problem. "We need to make spectacular increases in salary. It's alarming the number of teachers leaving the profession after six to seven years."

He predicted the state will have to build one new prison each year for the next several years for those people who "have worked pretty hard at being sent to prison."

Quoting remarks made by Sam Nathan, a referee installed by a federal justice, Hobby said, "This prison system is the safest in the country. Inmates are the best fed and clean. So, everything isn't bad in the prison system. It's just overcrowded."

The highway system, he said, was designed for a 20-year life and already has surpassed that and is being forced to take heavier loads of traffic than what they were built to handle. The Highway Index Committee changed its funding formula recently and this should add $100 million to the highway budget.

STRAKE SUGGESTED shunting the new car sales tax directly into the highway "to remedy an immediate cash flow problem. Also, I'm an advocate of users paying for facilities. That translates into toll roads, and we need to address it soon."

Without saying he agreed with Strake, Hobby remarked, "I have no doubt that toll roads will become more common."

Strake also contended that a water plan proposed recently by Hobby is very similar to what he had proposed himself earlier in the campaign.

"The crux of what I've been advocating is that the state use its financial muscle to support local entities in their bonds to reduce their interest rates. And there has to be a strong emphasis on conservation," he explained.

Strake interjected his apprehension about early ideas to import water from states such as Arkansas. "I'm not against the plan. But I don't know if there's enough money to do it. We need to start concentrating on catching the water before it gets down to the Gulf of Mexico with catch basins."

Hobby's explanation of a water plan included a provision that would enable bonds to be sold and more conservation projects.

Strake charged that Hobby had been opposed to tough anti-crime legislation. But in a news release Hobby stated: "I have been at the forefront of the war against crime through efforts to improve law enforcement, expand our court system to speed up trials of accused criminals and relieve prison overcrowding. In 1983, I will ask the Legislature to prepare a comprehensive strategy that attacks crime on all fronts rather than taking a piecemeal approach."

THROUGHOUT THE campaign, Strake has charged that 10 years is long enough for anyone to serve as lieutenant governor. And he recently added that, if elected, he would try to get the law changed so no one can serve more than two four-year terms in an elected statewide office.

The reason, he said, is that lengthy terms tend to "build up fiefdoms and kingdoms."

Hobby, meanwhile, has been using his 10 years as a positive note for his campaign, saying that a lieutenant governor "must have the experience and compassion to deal with funding issues while maintaining a balanced budget without new or increased state taxes." He chuckled over Strake's "fiefdom" comment.

A comment made by Gov. Clements earlier this week during a stop in Midland and sent out on news wires throughout the state reflected that the governor predicted Strake would lose. Strake said he had talked with Clements and a press conference will be held in Houston today where the governor will clarify his statement.

On the financial side, Strake is leading with $3 million that has been raised or borrowed for the campaign. Hobby, with $2 million, said he "could be doing better financially."

Strake admitted he still is trailing Hobby statewide, but believes he is gaining enough to overtake the Democrat by the Nov. 2 general election.

"I THINK I'LL carry Houston," Strake said of his and Hobby's hometown. A poll there this week shows the Republican would take 55 percent of the vote, he said.

Continuing, Strake said he would carry Dallas because of Gov. Bill Clements' influence there and will split the vote in Fort Worth. "I'll carry Smith and Gregg counties. East Texas is tough for any Republican; I'll do OK there but I won't carry it. I've got to do well in West Texas. And I need the Hispanic vote in South Texas. If I can carry there, I think I'll be lieutenant governor."

Asked about Houston and where he will carry the vote, Hobby replied, "I've never lost any major metropolitan area in Texas."

And he predicted he would win with an outcome of 58 to 42 percent.

Local pastor defends Christian school administrator

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

The administrator of a local Christian school, calling the closing of a similar school in Nebraska a violation of the Constitution, has put on hold his plans to show up in that state to support a friend who has been jailed for violating a state law.

On Monday, Faith Christian School in Louisville, Neb. — a few miles south of Omaha — was closed and the church doors padlocked in what was described as a move to eliminate operation of schools using non-certified teachers.

By Thursday, Judge Raymond Case had reversed his order and the school was back in operation, according to the Rev. David Piearcy, pastor of Oaklawn Park Baptist Church and the accompanying school.

Calling the closure a violation of the Constitutional rights that separate church and state, Piearcy said about 1,000 ministers of similar church schools had converged on Louisville. Piearcy had planned to attend, but said he became involved in other matters here. "If I determine they need me, I'll go in a minute," Piearcy stated.

Saying that the people of Nebraska don't understand the issue, Piearcy said Christian schools are thriving across the country and are not set up to compete with public schools.

"Public schools train students to be doctors or lawyers; we train them to be Christian leaders."

The dispute over Faith Christian School centers on its use of teachers not certified by the state. That church's pastor, the Rev. Everett Sileven, has served half of a four-month jail sentence for defying an order to close the school, according to news reports on Tuesday. Sileven is a friend of Piearcy's.

Piearcy said Nebraska is one of eight states in the union that won't allow church schools to use non-certified teachers.

"They (Nebraska officials) say you can have a school, but you have to use our teachers. Our teachers here (Oaklawn Park Baptist School) are not certified by the state, but they all have degrees," he said.

Nebraska has 22 Christian schools and the Louisville school was the first hit in a crackdown, according to the Midland minister.

"It's not fire or safety codes that's the issue. It's not the education. It's the teachers," he continued. And that, Piearcy contended, is a violation of the church's constitutional rights.

Similar schools in Texas faced the same problem two to three years ago, but it was resolved in the last session of the State Legislature with a bill proposed by State Sen. Walter Mengden of Houston. "The Legislature exempted church schools" from the requirement to use only state-certified teachers.

He pointed out the decision to place students in the church schools is made by the parents, and the involvement by the Nebraska government is violating the parents constitutional rights.

While many parents choose to send their children to public schools, "others choose to have their children trained to be Christians and that's their right."

There are 20,000 Christian schools in the U.S., 4,500 of which follow the Accelerated Christian Education program. That ACE study is used by the Midland school and also by the Faith Christian Church, according to Piearcy. It is manufactured by a curriculum firm, and is used by 40 schools in Texas. In fact, Sileven has been an ACE consultant and advised other schools, said Piearcy.

"Our objective is to be accredited by the parents, the church and God," he noted.

In Midland, the pastor said the school apparently is accredited by the parents because "we've got all the students we can handle."

Linkletter to speak at Midland Christian

Art Linkletter will be the featured speaker at Midland Christian School's first annual Tree of Life Dinner at Greentree Country Club Nov. 12.

Linkletter will arrive about 3:30 p.m. Nov. 12 at Midland Regional Airport. Parents and children who wish to meet him are invited to join the welcoming party. A news conference at Channel 2 will follow, with a reception at Greentree Country Club scheduled for 7 p.m. The Tree of Life Dinner will be at 7:30 p.m.

Linkletter, a native of Canada and an orphan, was adopted by a Baptist minister and his wife and was reared and educated in California. He married Lois Foerster and they had five children. Named Grandfather of the Year in 1962, an honor he is proud of, he has been in show business for 45 years. He has received 10 honorary degrees over the years and is the author of 14 books, including "Kids Say the Darndest Things."

Linkletter's chief interest today is his work in the crusade against drug abuse. He has served on the Presidents National Advisory Council for Drug Abuse Prevention and writes, speaks and broadcasts from coast to coast in the fight against drug abuse.

The Tree of Life program involves a group of Midlanders dedicated to quality education in a Christian environment at Midland Christian School. Serving as chairman of the 1982 program is Dwayne Casbeer, of Casbeer and Associates.

All-City Choir clinic to be Tuesday

Selected students from seventh, eighth and ninth grades will participate in the All-City Choir clinic Tuesday. The 80 students participating from Midland junior and freshman high schools were selected from 200 who auditioned early this month.

Barbara Shinn, of Hood Junior High in Odessa, is the guest director for the clinic, which will last from 9 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. The public is invited and encouraged to attend the All-City Choir Concert at 7:30 p.m. There is no charge.

Both the clinic and concert will be in the Midland College Fine Arts Building.

Midland College offers cake decorating

Cake Decorating II will be offered by the Midland College Department of Community Services beginning Monday. The six-week class will be taught by Doris Muehlbrad and is limited to 20 students who have completed Cake Decorating I. Items covered in the class will include intricate flowers, lily cup flowers, garlands, roping and setting up wedding cakes. Class times are from 7 to 9 p.m. and the fee is $18.

The one-day workshop is expected to draw 200 to 300 participants from school districts across West Texas. Sessions for the student council members will focus on leadership and the exchange of ideas.

Workshop hours are from 8 a.m. to 3 p.m. at Lee High School.

Teachers team up at Crockett Elementary

Student achievement is everybody's business at Crockett Elementary School. In first through third grades, the focus is on teamwork in music, art, social studies and science.

The teachers on each grade level plan the work together and one teacher prepares and teaches the lessons for one subject to all of the classes on that level.

The method enables teachers to have more time for better preparation and presentation because they have fewer lessons to prepare. It also promotes closer working relationships among the teachers.

VOE committee holds first meeting

Mary Alice Sanders, Vocational Office Education co-op teacher-coordinator at Midland High School, and Shirley Edwards, VOE co-op teacher-coordinator at Lee High School, discussed their respective VOE programs and presented lists of students and employers during the first meeting of the Midland VOE Advisory Committee Thursday.

Geneva Harvey, chairperson, hosted the luncheon meeting at the Executive Dining Room of the First National Bank. Plans for an employee-employer get-acquainted function and arrangements for the VOE contest, to be held in Midland March 4-5, were discussed during a business meeting which followed the luncheon.

The VOE Advisory Committee's next meeting will be Dec. 9, and will be hosted by Karl Reagan, supervisor of Graphic Arts and Purchasing of Petroleum Information Corporation.

Trinity announces first honor students

Trinity's Upper School has announced the names of students making the honor rolls for the first six-weeks grading period: Named to the High Honors list for making straight A's were ninth grader Sharon Graham and eighth grader Laura Hinchey.

Students named to the honors list for making A's and B's in the ninth grade were Tahnee Bailey, Derek Brown, Marla Brusenhan, Jim Cavenaugh, Terri Gibson, Joe Gourlay, Peggy Hartman, Millard Kimery, Kaye Knox, Michael Maggio, Kae Tompkins, Jay Wells and Tommy Wood.

Eighth graders making the A's and B's honor list were Andrea Comola, Adam Goff, Steve Hartman, Paul Morrow, Bill Rulla and Sherwood Wagner.

Seventh graders named to the list were Megan Burleson, Noreen Buster, Ginny Graham, Clint Hamilton, Erin Marko and Shannon Mohr.

Bullock mails $35.6 million in sales tax to cities

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — State Comptroller Bob Bullock said earlier this week he has mailed $35.6 million to 967 Texas cities as their share in October of the 1 percent city sales tax.

The payment reflects taxable sales made in August and reported to the state by the end of September.

Bullock said the statewide total of city sales tax payments so far this year is nearly $575.8 million, an 11 percent increase from this time last year.

He said the October payments reflect the impact on border cities of the August peso devaluation. "These are the declines which we predicted last month," he said. "Even though the thorns have begun to show, past experience points to recovery for the border towns with no long-term effect on the rate of growth in sales."

'Great Communicator' occasionally stumbles

It was in Irving, Texas, where his tongue finally got twisted, and the best way out, he found, was to own up to his mistake and try again.

He was talking about the need for support from "rank and file Democrats," and his theory that the nation cannot achieve economic recovery by increasing government spending.

"They know you can't drink yourself sober, you can't spend yourself rich, and you can't pump the prime without priming the pump," he said. The line sounded right and the audience applauded.

But the president went on:

"You know something? I said that backwards. I didn't say that right at all. You can't prime the pump without pumping the prime is the way it should have been said the first time. It's a tongue-twister."

The president has been having his trouble, too, with open microphones. First, there was his crack just before he began a radio speech. He said that the military leaders in Poland are "a bunch of no-good, lousy bums."

Then, before he made a televised address to the nation last week, he made some comments about the timing of the Democrats' response. Those words, too, came through an open line into the White House press room and were reported.

But he's gotten wise to the problem.

Two days later, he gave a radio address that was beamed to Midwestern farm states.

Before the speech began, the first words that could be heard were "....yes, but those wonderful people in the press room woudn't quote me without my permission." A suppressed giggle followed.

Testimony in Wood trial turns to alleged payoff

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Testimony in the trial of Charles V. Harrelson on charges of killing U.S. District Judge John H. Wood Jr. has shifted to the alleged $250,000 payoff for the killing.

Teresa Starr Jasper, 25, brought the money to the Harrelsons in Corpus Christi, Texas, the next day, prosecutors contend.

Defense lawyer Tom Sharpe Jr. contends the cash amounted to only $150,000 and was part of a "scam" that Harrelson was carrying out to bilk Chagra on a narcotics deal.

Chagra was scheduled to be tried before Wood on a narcotics charge when the judge was assassinated May 29, 1979. Chagra will be tried separately later on murder charges.

Mrs. Jasper, who spent six months behind bars last year for contempt of court before agreeing to testify before a grand jury, was prepared to testify today after cross-examination of Canadian Cindy Cote.

Miss Cote, who said she once worked as Mrs. Chagra's personal secretary, testified Thursday that she and Mrs. Chagra drove to a Las Vegas club in June 1979 carrying a mysterious brown attache case.

She identified an empty suede attache case presented by prosecutor Ray Jahn as the one she saw Mrs. Chagra carry into the club while she stayed in the car. Miss Cote testified that Mrs. Chagra returned with the briefcase, but said she never learned its contents.

Also Thursday, longtime Harrelson friend Gregory Goodrum, 33, linked Harrelson to what prosecutors say was the getaway car and the high-powered rifle allegedly used to kill Wood.

Goodrum said Harrelson asked him in June 1979 to go to Dallas and drive a tan-over-gold Oldsmobile Cutlass to Houston after Harrelson said he "had used it on a job" and wanted it cleaned up and sold.

Goodrum said Harrelson earlier showed him a Weatherby rifle equipped with a telescopic sight and said, "Weatherbys were his favorite guns."

Only the weathered stock of a Weatherby rifle found last year near Lake Hubbard east of Dallas has been introduced into evidence. Prosecutors contend it was part of the weapon used to kill Wood.

Representative still contends his innocence of cattle rustling

SULPHUR SPRINGS, Texas (AP) — State Rep. David London has been scheduled to face trial in December on cattle rustling charges, which he contends were brought about by a political vendetta aimed at crippling his career.

The charge "is political," he said last week. "It is ridiculous. Any time you get an indictment against a man in Texas politics, he can't run again."

London said he wants to prove his innocence in a polygraph test and have the charges dropped.

"Since London lives in Austin, we have agreed to set up a polygraph test for him in Austin sometime next week," said District Attorney Jim Chapman. "We are not ready to make any statement on whether charges will be dropped if he passes the test. We will just have to wait and see what happens. I can't speculate on the outcome of the polygraph test or what our options will be if he passes the test."

But Chapman said he did not think the charges are politically motivated.

"I think that is absolutely hogwash," he said. "I don't know what he is talking about. None of that squares with the evidence in the case. Based on what I know about it, they (grand jurors) acted properly."

London was linked to the theft by a check for the sale he cashed at a Commerce bank, Chapman said.

London doesn't deny cashing the check, but said it was as a favor for "a Jimmy Rogers and a Johnny Rogers," who did not have accounts at the bank.

"I placed an ad in the Commerce newspaper asking if anybody knew the whereabouts of Jimmy Rogers," London said. "I lost $1,600 on the deal. I don't know if I was set up for a pigeon drop, or what."

Indecency charges expected; Stabbing under investigation

Formal felony charges of indecency with a child are expected to be filed today against an 18-year-old man who was arrested Thursday for exposing himself to children at Jane Long Elementary School, 3200 Cedar Springs Drive.

The suspect, who gave an Avondale Drive address, was captured after a short foot chase that began as officers attempted to search him. Police were called by witnesses who said a man had been exposing himself at the school for the past three days.

Police Roundup

An investigation is continuing into a stabbing at the Chat & Chew Restaurant about 10:30 p.m. Thursday. The victim, 39-year-old Oscar Cecil Simmons of 200 North Tilden, suffered wounds to the arm and face that required 15 stitches to close. Witnesses said he had been arguing with another man at the time.

In burglary complaints, an employee of Chaparral Realtors said an unoccupied new house at 4100 Crestview was broken into Wednesday night. Taken were three ceiling fans and a light fixture worth a total of $1,400. Entry was gained by prying open a rear door.

Anita Jones of 1611 E. Pine Ave. told officers her home was broken into Thursday night and household items worth in excess of $600 were missing. Entry was gained through a bathroom window.

And Linda McDonald of 1618 E. Maple Ave. said stereo equipment and a camera valued at a total of $465 were stolen in a break-in at her residence early Thursday night. A bedroom window had been broken to gain entry.

Jenice Miller, center, shows Mrs. Mark Keyes and Misty Wright how to defend themselves in case of an attack. The city Parks and Recreation Department is sponsoring a self-defense seminar for the family. The four-session class starts Wednesday and fee is $25 for the family.

Series of self-defense classes offered

As the rate of violent crimes rises, the Midland Parks and Recreation Department will be trying to combat attacks on individuals by sponsoring for the first time a self-defense seminar that is designed for the entire family.

The program consists of four classes beginning Wednesday. It will be held for four consecutive Wednesdays in the Parks and Recreation gymnasium, 300 Baldwin, from 8 to 9:30 p.m.

Normally, the fee for such a program is $80 per family, according to a news release from the department. But through the cooperation of several private benefactors and the department's sponsorship, the fee will be $25 for up to five members of one family. Or, a single person may attend for $14. Class size is limited, and the department is asking that persons sign up as soon as possible at the office on 300 Baldwin.

Instructor will be Jenice Miller, who has a sixth-degree black belt.

"Parents spend fortunes on providing education, recreation, housing, clothing and other luxuries for their children, but few provide for their children's safety outside the home," the news release states. It adds that it is essential that parents and children know how to defend themselves against an assailant.

It points out that since the average parents don't have the knowledge to properly protect themselves against an attack, they aren't qualified then to teach their children. Ms. Miller has developed this program for the family which can be taught to the parents and children.

With a sixth-degree black belt in Tae Kwon Do, she also holds degrees in five other styles of martial arts. As the highest ranking female black belt in the U.S., she travels extensively teaching and lecturing on physical fitness and self-defense. Her programs have been taught in Louisiana, Texas and Mississippi, in public schools and major universities.

Her "Fighting Back" program is designed to teach families the basic self-defense techniques. Because a child's attention span is much shorter than that of an adult, the program is designed to show the adult how to continue the child's training after the course has been completed.

It is recommended that every member of the family attend each class, but it's not required. Either parent may attend with a child, or an adult friend or relative may participate with the child. The program also is open for single men and women.

Congressman's 'tip' appears politically motivated

By PHILLIP SWANN

WASHINGTON — Friday, July 30. 6 p.m. The phone rang. It was a Texas Democratic congressman. He said he had a good story tip — about Joe Wyatt, a Republican congressional candidate.

The congressman, who asked to remain anonymous, told States News Service that Wyatt "had a problem just like Bauman." Former Maryland congressman Robert Bauman lost a re-election bid in 1980 after admitting he had "twin compulsions" — homosexuality and alcoholism.

The congressman and other Democrats wanted to get this story out for two reasons. They had doubts about Wyatt's "character." But, more importantly, Wyatt was giving Rep. William Patman, D-Ganado, a run for his money in the 14th Congressional District.

The "Wyatt problem" was then handled with an eleven-foot pole by the Patman camp, who, observers speculated, wanted to make it an issue without being accused of mudslinging. But in the end it was the Washington, D.C., police who dropped the bombshell.

The call was a total surprise. Never before had the congressman passed along a story tip to the news service.

But the congressman denies that Patman asked him to plant the story with the media.

"Patman and I are not very close," the congressman said this week, adding that he did talk to Patman about the case.

He said that he relayed the "tip" because he believes Wyatt is not worthy to be a congressman.

Then last week the Wyatt episode hit the newspapers — thanks to a Freedom of Information request filed by Patman that led to the release of a confidential District of Columbia police report. Acording to the report, Wyatt was questioned in 1979 for allegedly committing a forced homosexual act on a Maryland man.

The Washington, D.C., police never filed charges against Wyatt in 1979. Wyatt later decided not to seek re-election after entering an alcoholism treatment program. But the release of the police report may have dealt a fatal blow to Wyatt's comeback attempt this fall.

"We have the race won on the issues but this doesn't help him," Patman said this week. "It's a matter of truthfulness.... The folks in this district don't want somebody like that representing them."

Wyatt, who represented the 14th District from 1979-81, had been given a good chance to upset Patman. Texas political observers now say that Patman and his Democratic supporters apparently felt he needed this issue to win the race.

From Our Washington Bureau

In an interview last June, Patman said he was surprised that Wyatt "surfaced" again because of "all the problems he's had...he has problems that I don't have." Patman did not specify what the "problems" were.

Thirty minutes after the interview, Patman called back and said he did not want to "get involved" in discussing Wyatt's past.

But last month Wyatt made a tactical error that opened the door for Patman to make the issue more public. Wyatt, prompted by what he called a Patman whispering campaign about his past, released a statement which provided a detailed account of the night when he allegedly had the homosexual encounter. He denied the charges.

Patman, seizing the opportunity, immediately called for Wyatt to ask the Washington police to release its report on the case. The same day, a small Texas paper published a story that said the police report suggests Wyatt committed the act in question, but that no force was involved.

Patman has a surprisingly easy time getting hold of the report. An internal police investigation, especially a sensitive one involving a U.S. congressman, is normally kept secret.

In an interview this week, Wyatt said that he was notified by the polic that they planned to release the report unless he filed for a temporary restraining order. Wyatt said if he did that it "would be political suicide" because it would make it look like he was trying to engineer a coverup.

Sgt. James Battle, a police department spokesman, said a closed case, such as Wyatt's, is available under Freedom of Information laws unless it is of a "personal nature or constitutes an invasion of privacy." The legal counsel for the police decided that a private citizen's accusations that a member of Congress forced him to engage in sex — accusations that never resulted in charges being filed — were not of a "personal nature or an invasion of privacy."

"If he gets re-elected, he can change the law," Brooks said.

BEAUMONT, Texas (AP) — A 26-year-old man has been sentenced to death by injection after being convicted of capital murder in the robbery-slaying of a downtown Beaumont jeweler.

Jurors deliberated about an hour Thursday before sentencing Maurice Andrews of Port Arthur. The panel convicted Andrews Wednesday.

By ROBIN TEATER
AP Writer

An industrial counselor hired to help employees cope with personal problems says he is seeing more cases of incest and child and spouse abuse, probably as a result of the depressed economy.

"My opinion is that people...have lost all confidence in things that used to provide security," said Nelson Hodgkins, director of the Industrial Counseling Service in Greensboro, N.C. "I think the economy has had a lot to do with this."

Hodgkins, who has run the service since 1969, says that today even people who have not lost their jobs or taken cuts in pay are worried they might be next.

The 50-year-old director says industrial counseling is growing because people feel more at ease in discussing their problems and seeking help for them. Also, industries are becoming increasingly aware of the counseling and are looking for ways of offering services to their employees, he said.

The Greensboro service is a consortium which provides free and confidential counseling to workers and families of the 18 area companies that pay for its services.

Alcohol abuse is the No. 1 problem the service deals with, followed by marital-family problems, mental and emotional problems and drug abuse, he said.

"The majority of the problems we see are personal problems which (employees) bring to the workplace which may affect their work performance," Hodgkins said.

Available for 19,000 employees of the 18 companies, the Greensboro service saw about 775 cases last year, 696 of them new clients, he said.

Begun in 1966, the consortium service is the oldest of its kind in the nation, Hodgkins said.

"We've gotten to the point that most people come on their own referral," he said. "We've been here a while and have developed some credibility."

Workers are occasionally referred to the service by their supervisors or by company medical staffs. And sometimes employees are threatened with job loss if they refuse to seek help for their problems, Hodgkins said.

The service is effective — cost effective — for Burlington Industries' Greensboro area plants, said Dr. Donald Hayes, director of Employee Health and Safety for Burlington's Greensboro plant.

"Our ultimate aim is to keep employees on the job and happy and comfortable in the process," Hayes said.

Some other North Carolina companies, such as Duke Power Co. and R.J. Reynolds Industries Inc., provide "in house" counseling for their employees and families.

Established about six years ago, Duke's counseling program has grown at a rate of about 25 percent a year, according to Joe Coulter, program director.

Also free and confidential, the service is provided by counselors based in Charlotte who travel to Duke's plants with their help.

R.J. Reynolds Industries also has its own counseling service — but it has a characteristic that distinguishes it from most other services.

The Winston-Salem-based firm has provided "pastoral counseling" for its employees and workers at its subsidiaries in the area since 1949.

"From our knowledge, this is the oldest standing pastoral counseling program in the United States," said the Rev. Henry S. Lewis, one of R.J. Reynolds' three counselors.

Lewis said that during the 30 years the pastoral counseling had been in existence, the problems hadn't changed much.

SARDINE EGGS

6 large eggs, hard-cooked
3¾-ounce can brisling sardines, drained
¼ cup mayonnaise
1 tablespoon Dijon mustard
1 small scallion, minced
Small parsley sprigs

Cut each egg in half lengthwise; remove yolks and mash fine. Add sardines and mash fine again. Mix in well the mayonnaise, mustard and scallion. Refill eggwhite cavities with mixture. Cover and chill. Before serving, insert a parsley sprig in center of each stuffed egg. Good served on a platter of tossed greens mixed with vinaigrette sauce. Makes 6 servings.

Jaycees/Jayceettes offer Halloween alternative

The Midland Jaycees/Jayceettes are offering something new this Halloween — a "Spook House" designed for children from toddlers up to age 12. Featured will be face painting, food booths and much more. Since the fun is designed for children, the "spooks" will be friendly.

The Spook House will be open this weekend and next, from the hours of 6 p.m. — 9 p.m. Friday, Oct. 22 and 29, 4 p.m. — 9 p.m. Saturday, Oct. 23 and 30, and 3 p.m. — 9 p.m. Sunday Oct. 31, Halloween Day. Admission is $1.50 for children, and parents are admitted free.

Located beside Ms. M's and Big Cheese Pizza in the Westwood Village Shopping Center at Illinois and Midland Drive, the Jaycees/Jayceettes' Spook House will provide an alternative to more frightening Halloween celebrations that may not be suitable for small children.

The Jaycees' Spook House for adults and older children will be located this year at 400 W. Scharbauer Drive.

DEAR ABBY

Father won't be party to his daughter's festivities

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I want to have a party in the family room of our house next spring. My problem is my father. He said I can't have it there because that's where he likes to sit and relax during the evening.

My father said that when he was my age (I'll be 14 in March) he had parties in the basement, garage or outside. He gave me those choices for my party, but we have no basement, our garage is too small, and there would be a problem with mosquitoes if I had it outside.

How can I persuade my father to let me have the family room for just three hours — from 8 p.m. until 11 p.m.? — NEEDS YOUR HELP

DEAR NEEDS: You need more help than my help — you need an ally in your camp. You don't mention your mother; if you have one, draft her!

Perhaps if your father knew more about your plans — how many kids, the games you'll play, what refreshments you plan to serve, etc. — he'd be more cooperative. Your father, like most people, probably fears the unknown, and is therefore negative. If you ask for HIS help in planning the party, it might improve your chances. You sound like a good kid. Good luck!

DEAR ABBY: I recently had a visit from an old classmate I had not seen for over 30 years. She is over 50, divorced and was reared in a respectable home.

The night before she was to arrive, she phoned to say she was bringing her "boyfriend" — a nice widower her age. I told her I'd be delighted to put him up, too, as we had two guest rooms. She said, "That won't be necessary — one bedroom is enough for us."

I was shocked and annoyed because we have two grown sons living at home, and they know that I disapprove of couples sleeping together before marriage — especially under my roof.

When my friend arrived, I put her in one bedroom and her gentleman friend in the other, but it was obvious the next morning that they had gotten together during the night because only one bedroom had been used. (They even laughed at breakfast about how they had "put one over on me.")

I know I can't change the morals of the world, but I do think I should have control over what goes on in my own home, don't you?

How should I have handled it? — BURNED UP

DEAR BURNED: When your friend told you that she was bringing her "boyfriend," and one bedroom would be enough, you should have told her that you would be happy to make reservations for them at a nearby hotel.

DEAR ABBY: To the man who couldn't stand the sound of birds singing in his yard: For shame! Robert Frost said it so much better than I could ever say it in his poem, "A Minor Bird":

"I have wished a bird would fly away,
"And not sing by my house all day;
"Have clapped my hands at him from the door
"When it seemed as if I could bear no more.
"The fault must partly have been in me.
"The bird was not to blame for his key.
"And of course there must be something wrong
"In wanting to silence any song."

A DOG'S LIFE:

Stress and Your Dog

Helpful Information From The ALPO Center For Advanced Pet Study

The latest research on the impact of stress on the life of a dog has uncovered some interesting facts—details that could be important to you and your pet.

- Prolonged stress can sap your dog's health, making him susceptible to illness and behavior problems.
- Older dogs are particularly vulnerable to stress. Aging diminishes a dog's ability to utilize protein and weakens its immune response system. Stress can aggravate every problem of the aged dog.
- The dog needs abundant protein to build reerves for unexpected stress. Without full reserves, a dog is less able to make antibodies and new blood cells under stress.

For a new, free booklet about stress and your dog, send a request together with 25 cents for postage and handling to the ALPO Center for Advanced Pet Study, P.O. Box 2187, Allentown, PA 18001.

Midlanders to model in Dallas

Two graduates of a Midland modeling and finishing school will be modeling fashions this week in Dallas at the Apparel Mart for international ladies sportswear designer and manufacturer CW-II of California.

Billie Marie Taylor

Leah Brothers and Billie Marie Taylor will appear in CW-II's fashions before buyers representing fashion stores and chains from across the country. The two graduated from and are professional models for Ms. A's Finishing School in San Miguel Square in Midland. Owner Anita Blackford said she was excited that representatives of the school have once again been asked to model the California designers new line of sports and casual wear.

The showing will be Oct. 22 — 27 at the Apparel Mart in Dallas. This is the annual women's and children's spring apparel market. Some of the features of this year's show are bridal fashions by the National Bridal Service Inc., a seminar by Glamour magazine editor Diana Hulet, spring fashions of the Netherlands by the Netherlands Chamber of Commerce, and children's wear trends for spring 1983.

Ms. Taylor is a summer 1982 graduate of Ms. A's, and Ms. Brothers graduated in spring of 1981. Both have appeared in several fashion shows in Odessa and Midland since their graduation.

Red roses are consistently Americans' favorite flower

By BARBARA MAYER
AP Newsfeatures

Fashions in other flowers may come and go. But roses seem to go on forever.

The supply of roses in the American marketplace reached nearly half a billion in 1981 — a growth of 15 percent compared to 1977, according to The Floral Index Inc.

Domestic producers accounted for the lion's share of the rose crop — 421 million blooms — but imported roses still managed to number about 70.5 million.

Not satisfied with what would seem to be a rosy situation for their favorite flower, Roses Inc. — the growers' trade association — recently began a consumer education program to bring roses more before the public.

The group started by appointing several representatives, among them Marjorie Reed, the New York author of a book on entertaining; Nick Nikcolas, a Chicago restaurateur, and Fred Gibbons, who is known as Hollywood's florist to the stars. The three were introduced publicly and said a few words on behalf of a certain flower in New York at a luncheon recently.

What does one serve at a luncheon honoring roses? Silly question: champagne, salmon and sole arranged to simulate a flower, and a white chocolate dessert in the shape of a petalled flower.

AS ONE MIGHT suspect, red roses remain America's favorite, accounting for about 77 percent of all the cut roses sold. However, indications are that color preferences are changing a bit, said Ralph Wright, owner of Utah Roses and chairman of the rose group's trade relations committee.

Although red is still tops, other colors — especially a peach tone in a variety known as "Sonya" — are coming up. Nowadays, peach or coral-color roses account for about 10 percent of total sales in the United Statres. Also available are yellow, pink and white roses. White — the color of innocence and purity where roses are concerned — is the least popular.

Roses are grown commercially under tightly-controlled conditions in greenhouses all over the country. There are approximately 180 commercial growers located in as many as 35 states. California dominates, producing nearly half of all the roses grown in the United States, according to the Society of American Florists.

With demand for roses obviously healthy, one could wonder why growers have chosen to begin a public information campaign. The truth is that Americans buy far fewer cut flowers — including roses — than their European counterparts. The average American spent about $20 for fresh flowers and plants in 1980.

Whereas Europeans purchase flowers and plants for everyday use and for themselves, Americans tend to buy flowers only for special occasions such as weddings, birthdays, funerals and holidays.

IN ORDER TO encourage more frequent purchases, American growers and florists have stepped up efforts to stimulate consumer demand for fresh flowers with promotions such as National Secretaries Week and Friday Flowers — a weekly cash-and-carry special at some florists across the country.

Incidentally, if you buy a bouquet you may be interested in some tips prepared by Roses Inc. for prolonging the life of cut roses.

It suggests immediately plunging roses into tepid water when you get them home. Or, if you can't tend them immediately, store them in a cool dark place such as the refrigerator until you have time.

With a sharp knife or shears and under water, cut about one inch off the stem of each rose, and trim away any leaves that remain below the water line. Mix a floral preservative (available from florists) in the water in a vase or container. Save extra preservative for daily doses.

If the roses wilt prematurely, fill a sink or bathtub with tepid water and submerge the entire rose. Recut and straighten the stem under water and allow one or two hours for the bloom to revive.

Hope for unborns with defects

By ROBERT LOCKE
AP Science Writer

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Medicine is taking dramatic, if tentative, steps toward a time when many major birth defects may be corrected in the womb or prevented before conception, according to doctors at the 10th World Congress of Gynecology and Obstetrics.

"Fetal medicine is now a word that has some meaning," Dr. Charles Rodeck of Kings College Hospital in London said during a news conference Wednesday. "Fetal medicine is now where adult medicine was 30 or 50 years ago."

Doctors who surgically treat severely endangered fetuses in the womb by inserting tubes to drain accumulating fluids from the head or the bladder have won widespread publicity. While such work is impressive, Rodeck said, fewer than 50 procedures have been done around the world and it's too early to assess their future impact.

Dr. Joe L. Simpson of Northwestern University Medical School said, "What's really exciting for the future" are recent successes in fetuses that lack or cannot utilize a crucial enzyme or vitamin.

"This is an area in which fetuses have been successfully treated by administering to the mother large doses of innocuous compounds" containing the enzyme or vitamin, Simpson said.

"This is what we hope we will be able to do (increasingly): not merely diagnose the condition, but treat it and hopefully not be restricted to (surgical) procedures."

"What I'm hoping," said Dr. John Scrimgeour, chairman of obstetrics and gynecology at Western General Hospital in Edinburgh, Scotland, "is that we will find the cause for these diseases and, having found out why it develops we will be able to stop it, preferably before the pregnancy even starts."

Scrimgeour operates a screening program for a birth defect common in Great Britain, striking about 5 of every 1,000 fetuses. The "neural tube defects" occur when the spinal cord, brain or backbone is not fully formed or connected.

Scrimgeour screens 10,000 pregnant women a year with a blood test, then uses amniocentesis, in which a needle through the mother's abdomen extracts a sample of the fluid in which the fetus floats, to confirm suspicious findings.

"The only thing we can offer just now is to terminate the pregnancy," he said. But he said doctors in Britain are trying to give the high-risk mother who has already borne one affected child vitamin supplements before and during the early weeks of pregnancy in hopes of protecting the child.

Dr. M.W. Partington of Queen's University in Kingston, Ontario, cited early results of the British study that found a sharp decrease in the defects among mothers who took the vitamin supplement.

Alternative methods of selling home suggested

By JAMES M. WOODARD
Copley News Service

What can a home owner do when he can't sell his home because of a sluggish sales market and tight financing, yet he must move to a new community?

That's a real problem these days. The same question, in effect, has been expressed by many readers.

Increase the price a bit, and offer a zero-interest-rate seller-carryback mortgage. This plan has great advertising appeal, and could quickly produce a buyer.

The plan, which could be a short-term arrangement of three to five years, is possible when the property is "free and clear" of other loans or when the existing mortgage loan does not contain an enforceable "due on sale" clause.

IN SOME CASES, buyers resist such a plan because there is no income tax deduction generated from interest payments. However, that's an incorrect assumption. The Internal Revenue Service allows an imputed interest.

"Lots of people just won't believe a good thing. The buyer of a house with a zero-interest-rate mortgage can deduct a part of each mortgage payment as imputed interest. It's documented in IRS Private Letter Ruling 8228113."

Another idea: Offer the home under a "lease-purchase" plan. The buyer leases the property for up to one year, with the contractual agreement that they will purchase the home at some point (at buyer's discretion) within the year.

This is often appealing because (1) the buyer may feel he can finance the property purchase with a lower interest rate loan a few months down the road, or (2) his personal finances may be in better shape at that point.

As still another alternative, you might offer the home under a "lease-option" plan. This would probably be for a term of one year, with an up-front option fee paid by the lessee.

If the "option-to-purchase" is exercised, the fee would be credited toward the down payment. In some cases, a portion of the monthly lease payments is also credited.

FINALLY, YOU might consider an exchange of your property for a home in your destination community. Exchanging home-for-home equities is becoming a popular alternative to selling one home outright and purchasing another.

There are many other steps you might take to effectively transplant your family into a new home — e.g., offer your home for a contract of sale, shared ownership plan, or one of the many new home sale techniques.

It's important, however, to be sure the steps you take are really workable and right for your situation. It's best to consult with a real estate professional and your tax consultant before deciding on an unconventional sales plan.

Q. Are more people now late in making their home mortgage payments?

A. Yes. There is a slight increase in the number of late-payers. Payments on about 5.56 percent of the 27 million outstanding home loans are being paid late — 30 or more days past due.

However, the rate of foreclosures on home loans has been holding steady for some time.

WALTZ ACROSS TEXAS

Bob Porter, Dallas Times Herald

American Premiere Film Magazine

"Everybody has been asking about the picture. I tell them you just have to see it. It works on a lot of different levels and is an example of the kind of first class picture that can be made in Texas."

Sam Grogg, Director of USA Film Festival

Bobbie Wygant,
KXAS-TV, Dallas-Ft. Worth

Clay McNear, SMU Daily Campus

"Anne's a very good actress and he's a make-it-happen guy. I think it's fantastic . . . better than the best chicken-fried steak you've ever had with extra gravy on the side."

Dan Jenkins, Author of Semi-Tough

Plot . . . Delightful!
Acting . . . Nice!
Audience response . . . Happy.
Should you go? YES!

Tom Jordan, KDFW-TV
CBS-Dallas/Fort Worth

"When Waltz Across Texas is released in Los Angeles . . . audiences are certain to buzz about the wonderful on-screen chemistry between the characters John Taylor and Gail Weston (played by Anne Archer and Terry Jastrow.) And that's just the beginning of the buzz promised by this film."

Deborah Caulfield, Los Angeles Times

Bill Springer of The Eyes of Texas television program captures a rehearsal of the Thouvenel String Quartet, from left, Eugene Purdue, Edmund Stein, Sally Chisholm and Jeffrey Levenson. The filming, done here July 30, will be aired at 6:30 p.m. Saturday on KMID-Channel 2. The Thouvenel segment will be the first part of The Eyes of Texas program and will include a mini-concert held at Theatre Midland.

Thouvenel String Quartet will be featured on 'Eyes of Texas' TV program Saturday

By GEORGIA TEMPLE
Entertainment Writer

Saturday at 6:30 p.m. on Channel 2 The Eyes of Texas television program will begin with a segment filmed here last August. That's right. It's time for the Eyes of Texas to look at Midland's world-class classical quartet, The Thouvenel.

For those wondering what to expect, let's roll time backward to July 30.

The setting is the Museum of the Southwest. The scene — The Eyes of Texas filming crew, Gary James and Bill Springer, capturing the Thouvenel players, Edmond Stein, Eugene Purdue, Jeffrey Levenson and Sally Chisholm, in a rehearsal situation.

PURDUE EXPLAINED that his Midland contact had been Dr. Thomas Hohstadt, the Midland-Odessa Symphony's conductor. Purdue said he was told Midlanders had "a strong interest in serious music."

Turning to the only female in the group, Springer asked Miss Chisholm how she arrived in Midland.

"I'm married to the first violinist," Miss Chisholm said. "We met in Oklahoma at the University of Oklahoma. We met in a string quartet. Gene played second string and he had a beautiful sound and I fell in love with him."

When asked about Midland concert goers, Miss Chisholm replied, "They're wonderful concert goers. They sometimes provide an electric feeling when we walk out on the stage. They are more devoted to us than we are deserving of sometimes, I think."

AS LEVENSON said of Midland audiences, "This audience here is as good as any in the world and better than most."

When the newest member, Edmond Stein, was asked how he felt as a new arrival in West Texas (he'd been here one week at that time), he replied, "Feels great. I don't think I could be playing with better people now."

Of the music they play, Purdue perhaps summed up the others' feelings when he said, "It's a high. It brings you out of your everyday life. We hope we can share that with others and bring them out of their everyday lives."

Following the questions and answers (only a fraction of which is recreated here) Springer and James filmed a practice session. Next up after filming interviews with those associated with the group was a shooting of a performance set for 8 p.m. at Theatre Midland.

ACTING AS emcee for the evening's show was Jerry Fullinwider, former Midland-Odessa Symphony Association president and current board member and chairman of the Thouvenel String Quartet Committee. The Thouvenel String Quartet is sponsored by the Midland Symphony and Chorus Association.

It was Fullinwider's duty to instruct the audience on proper behavior during filming. The audience responded with laughter when he said, "We are filming a mini-concert. You will be the audience and will be filmed as well. The Eyes of Texas will be poking its cameras into all kinds of places. Don't wince. Don't stare into the camera. Look at the Thouvenel String Quartet."

Good advice and easy to follow once the concert began. It is this concert as well as the rehearsal and mini-interviews which will compose the footage for Saturday's show.

This past July was Springer's first filming session in Midland, but not the first one for James. The two musical programs he has filmed in Midland could not be farther removed from each other in genre and audience behavior.

ENTERTAINMENT

IN 1981, JAMES filmed the Summer Mummers. He hadn't forgotten the experience.

The night he picked was a Thursday. The crowd was rowdy, but in good spirits.

Catching up with James about halfway through the Olio, which follows the melodrama, his comment then was, "I haven't been able to hear anything since the first act. This is really something."

His opinion hadn't changed.

Then as well as now, the only point of reference in his own life he could find to relate the Mummers' atmosphere and crowd to was "the Stampede in Big Spring on a Saturday night." James is originally from Big Spring, where he first worked for a radio station at age 16.

He has been with "The Eyes of Texas" since its inception at KPRC—TV, Channel 2, Houston, in 1969. Prior to that he was filming documentaries for KPRC—TV, where he won the Peabody Award in the early 70s for his documentary "The Right Man." This piece dealt with the life of Dr. Robert Hayes, the president of Wiley College in Marshall.

Springer first came to KPRC Sept. 13, 1967. He joined The Eyes of Texas program in January of 1978. As Springer explained, "When there was nobody left to work on Eyes of Texas, I was trapped."

James chimed in, "I was trying to get Bill for several years. On this show we have to do every aspect of the news business. There was an opening on my staff nobody else could fill. I was given Bill."

"Gary and I started in the business at a time when you did everything. In the course of the next 10 to 15 years the business changed."

"The business changed," James said, "but The Eyes of Texas is a throwback to the way business was 15 years ago."

In short what the two are saying is that, including the show's host, they are The Eyes of Texas. And as James said, "We want it that way."

Play not sequel to 'Miracle Worker'

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — William Gibson would prefer us not to think of his new play at the Kennedy Center as a sequel to "The Miracle Worker" (1959).

True, it picks up the story of Helen Keller and her beloved teacher, Annie Sullivan, a dozen years after their epic battle of the water pump. Helen is now a brilliant young woman on the brink of world fame, Annie a sharp-tongued duenna on the edge of permanent spinsterhood. They are still jockeying for position, and this time there is a man involved.

But the new play has a different tonality, more inward and rueful. Gibson's title expresses the difference well: "The Monday After the Miracle." Monday is washday, not a day of revelations. Monday means work.

Annie (Jane Alexander) does happen to be hanging laundry when she and Helen (Karen Allen) receive a rather conceited young caller named John Macy (William Converse-Roberts). A writer and an editor, he can help Helen put together "The Story of My Life." He is also attracted by Annie's snapping eyes.

He starts out on the wrong foot by stealing a kiss from Annie, thinking she is the maid. But he makes himself useful enough to Helen, and attractive enough to her mentor, to join their little family. Eventually he marries Annie, promising to nurture her as she nurtures Helen. It is understood by everybody that Helen comes first.

Things go smoothly for a time. Helen's book is an enormous success. Annie enjoys the married state. John is amused to play cock of the walk. But he grows restless as he begins to appreciate that, truly, the ruling relationship here is that of Annie and Helen.

Annie created Helen, in that moment by the pump. She must see her work through. She is like a writer laboring on a manuscript, only truly alive while at the typewriter. Macy knows that feeling, knows that he is odd man out. Slowly, he begins to self-destruct. At the end of the play Helen and Annie are alone again, and there will be no more suitors.

This is a literate and decent play, avoiding the dark corners that another writer might find in the situation. Gibson shows great respect for all parties to this tricky and ultimately impossible triangle. His best guess as to what destroyed it — the real Annie burned Macy's letters and never discussed their marriage — was that the man simply discovered he could only play second fiddle for so long. There's no hint of anything physical between the women, who are quite pleased to have a man about the house. Indeed, they subtly compete for his attention. It's spiritual intimacy that he misses.

Hearst Feature Service

HOLLYWOOD — Dyan Cannon is surely one of the best leading women in motion pictures today. There are some who think she is the best we have.

But perhaps more significant are her views about what attracts stars of the first magnitude to TV, and the state of moviemaking today. Her views reflect those heard increasingly from other major figures in film.

Cannon thinks it's not a matter of movies vs. TV, but that too many filmmakers "say that people don't want affairs of the heart. The reason so many of us are going to television is that they'll deal with those stories on TV. And people watch them.

"Audiences are not dumb. Audiences are not gonna go out and spend five bucks for caca. I hardly go to a movie anymore where it's packed. I walk out on two-thirds of them,'" she said, "because they don't interest me, because they're boring, because they have no substance. Because they're trying to manipulate me. Because they're filled with killings, brutalities and massacres. I know that stuff exists in the world, but I don't want to look at it.

"I will not go to movies that are violent; they make me sick. The proof of the pudding is, in the last three or four years, 'E.T.,' 'Kramer vs. Kramer,' 'Ordinary People' — those last two are soft films according to moviemaking people. And 'E.T.' is still a simple little movie, except for the special effects. What's that movie about? A little boy and his love for this little thing. I mean, a brilliant, brilliant movie. And people go, because audiences aren't stupid. 'We spend five bucks. Entertain us.' "

Cannon, one of Hollywood's truly free spirits, adds: "I'm gonna go where the work is. My company is co-producing a movie for television with Johnny Carson Productions. It's called 'Sex and Salvation,' and I'm starring.

"Listen, I also want to reach the masses. On a bad night, 20 million people see you; on a bad night. I am not giving up films. I'm talking about substance. I don't care where it surfaces. I'm gonna do a radio show with Walter Cronkite. I'm not going to limit myself to sitting around and making movies for the big screen when I don't know what percent of it is caca.

"There seems to be such a big gap between what seems to be the artist and what seems to be the businessman. That's always existed, but we've got to swallow all those concepts because the business is going through an incredible change now. A lot of people aren't working. A lot of people are hurting.

"I think we really should begin making movies for $5 million, not over. With stars taking less money. And bring down those ticket prices at the box office, if we really want people to start seeing movies, because more and more, they're not going.

"A few times a year they come out, but usually they don't, and film-makers don't understand why. There's no big secret. We've got to lower those prices and stars have got to take less money and we've got to work together to do this, or else the movie business is going to go out on its tush. The signs are there. We've really got to start paying attention to them."

In the meantime, Cannon, who won Oscar nominations for "Bob and Carol and Ted and Alice" and "Heaven Can Wait," is aiming for her feature motion picture debut as a director, possibly with a film called "Current Events," if the script can be smoothed out. The directing opportunity stems from a daring, gripping 48-minute film drama she wrote, produced and directed under the sponsorship of the American Film Institute, "Number One," which dealt with young children's natural curiosity about their bodies and the reaction of the adults around them.

"Current Events" too is about "teen-agers and the need to belong, teen-agers living in the world today," says Cannon. "It's not 'Porky's' or 'Fast Times at Ridgemont High.' The subject interests me because kids are where all the things we carry on with all these years begin, and we have to fight our way out of. I like retracing and taking a look at the concepts that fill these kids' heads."

Cannon says she is having "the best time of my life" because when she returned to films after a three-year hiatus in the 1970s, "I decided not to compromise again. Before, I was doing things I didn't like. I was listening to my agents. I was working for them."

There was, for instance, the time in the early days when she lost a studio role "because they said my nose was too flat. So I went to a plastic surgeon and said, 'Change my nose.' He said, 'Get out of my office.' I said, 'Whatdya mean?' He said, 'That's what makes you different. Get out of my office.' So I had my first big lesson in Hollywood."

Jordan's story of Carter's last days may become TV miniseries

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Hamilton Jordan's story of the final days of the Carter administration and the Iranian hostage crisis is being developed as a miniseries for CBS.

"Can we pull it off and make it credible?" asks Jordan, a former White House chief of staff. "We'll have to wait and see. A lot of voices will be heard in this film.

"I'm sensitive to the fact that I was the reporter for this story. You'll have to see how we handle it. I hope when it's all over people will see that we have not whitewashed the facts."

Jordan was in Los Angeles to promote his new book, "Crisis," and to talk about plans for the six-hour TV series based on his account of the hostage crisis. Three hours of the screenplay have been completed and the other three hours are due Dec. 1.

A decision on whether to go ahead with the miniseries will be made after the network looks at the screenplay, says Bob Markell, CBS' vice president for miniseries.

Jordan attended a press luncheon with Markell and Gerald Rafshoon, who ran the media campaigns for Jimmy Carter in 1976 and 1980 and was the president's assistant for communications. Rafshoon will be executive producer for the miniseries.

"There is a distinction between the book and film," Jordan says. "I did a lot of research that I did not include in the book.

"For instance, I interviewed the doctor of the Shah of Iran. No one knew that the Shah had cancer for a long time. Not even his wife. That didn't fit in because my book was a first-hand account of what I knew at the time. But it will be in the film."

The leading characters will be the actors from the hostage crisis: Jordan, President Jimmy Carter, the Shah, Ayatollah Khomeini, Iranian Foreign Minister Sadegh Ghotbzadeh, Gen. Omar Torrijos (the leader of Panama), Col. Charles A. Beckwith (leader of the aborted American rescue effort), and Lt. Col. Charles W. Scott (highest-ranking American hostage). Rafshoon did not want to discuss any possible actors for the roles.

He says every effort was being made to substantiate all the information in the film. Every page of script is backed by pages of supporting documents.

"It was with a little bit of trepidation that I turned my book and notes over to the screenwriters," he says. "I didn't want Jimmy Carter, or anyone else to say, 'Hell, that didn't happen.' I think there is such color and conflict in the truth that we don't have to create anything.

"One of the perceptions that hurt our administration was the perception that President Carter had manipulated the hostage crisis for his own benefit," the former White House official says. "That was one of the reasons he was defeated."

Jordan was personally involved in secret negotiations and traveled in a disguise that included a wig, fake moustache, dark glasses and trenchcoat, he says. His participation will be a part of the film.

The hostages were seized on Nov. 4, 1979, and were not released until Jan. 20, 1981, the day Ronald Reagan took office as president.

Jordan says he saw it not as a story of good guys versus bad guys but as a story of misunderstanding. "I think my book shows that plenty of mistakes were made," he says.

Rafshoon says the miniseries also would go into the private life of Jordan. "We will deal with the cocaine charges against him," he says, "and the fact that these distractions had a negative effect on the hostage crisis. One day, the president asked Hamilton to be present at a meeting. Hamilton said he had to go to New York to answer questions for the grand jury."

Gail Weston (Anne Archer) and John Taylor (Terry Jastrow) battle it out in this scene from the movie "Waltz Across Texas," opening to the public Saturday for a limited two week engagement at the Hodge Theatre. Filmed entirely in the Midland area last fall, the movie's scenes contain numerous area sites and faces. The West Texas premiere is being held today at 7:30 p.m. at the Hodge Theatre. All proceeds for the $100-per-person gala affair go to High Sky Girls Ranch.

Its beginning is typical of West Texas. Anyone who has ever spent a year here will instantly relate to the usual West Texas set piece — a dust storm.

That's not all they will recognize. Filmed entirely in Midland and the surrounding area, "Waltz Across Texas" is a must for Midlanders who enjoy seeing familiar sites and faces.

Engaged in last year's shooting were 300 locals, both behind and in front of the cameras. Among those who have speaking parts are Herb Wales, Robert Underwood, Jim Salners, Bill Shaner and Darrell Ward. Familiar Midland locations include The Midland Hilton, the inside of the Stardust, the Bar, the Petroleum Center, Midland's skyline and inside shots of Commercial Bank and Trust as well as Midland National Bank.

For those who know the places and the faces, none are hard to spot with the exception of Ward whose line falls in the very opening scenes.

Local cast members do quite a nice job in their respective roles, with Salners delivery of the old "you're fired" line being quite convincing, as was Wales' portrayal of a banker. His (Wales) face is quite an impressive one for a character role.

The movie has been Terry Jastrow's project from beginning to end. A former Midlander, Jastrow's parents, Mr. and Mrs. K.M. Jastrow, live in Midland. The story line deals with the oil business, a subject familiar to the son of an independent oil man. It is a romantic comedy, with the plot's conflict centering around a twosome (Anne Archer-Terry Jastrow) who are attracted to and repelled by one another. Both are independent and determined to have their own way especially if they can do so in the other's backyard.

For those who have enjoyed the Katherine Hepburn-Spencer Tracy battle-of-the-sexes comedies filmed in the 1940s and early 1950s, the plot to date probably sounds familiar.

During the project's beginning stages, actress Anne Archer (wife of Terry Jastrow) compared she and Jastrow to Tracy-Hepburn. One of her statements at that time was, "Terry and I met as actors in an acting class in L.A. We had the opportunity for six or seven months to act together. I realized there was a wonderful chemistry between us and it would be a shame not to get it on film."

She plays the straight man. With her wonderfully expressive face, her close-ups are delightful. Her manner and dress establish her as one not interested in monkey business of any kind, while her husky voice has a definitely seductive quality to it. The two combine to make her decidely appealing. (No wonder he's interested. She's a sure challenge.)

Jastrow is the comic. (She, of course, isn't interested. Or is she?) He plays the light scenes well. His blond good looks combined with her dark beauty are visually impressive. But when it comes time to get serious, his portrayal, at times, lacks depth. An exception to this occurs when he asks her to leave after she has not too subtly suggested he isn't a man.

Yes, the chemistry is there, but it's still in its embryo stages. The sparks fly when the two get together, but the electrical charges are not consistent. They are definitely not Tracy and Hepburn, but the potential is there.

It is obvious from beginning to end that this movie owes its fluidity and quality to the efforts of director Ernest Day (David Lean's camera man on such movies as, "Dr. Zhivago," "Ryan's Daughter," "Lawrence of Arabia," as well as the director of "Green Ice") and producer Martin Jurow ("Breakfast at Tiffanys," "Pink Panther" and "Shot in the Dark"). The movie contains some breathtaking West Texas sunsets, with effective framing done in indoor scenes. Some of the scenes could easily make beautiful still life photographs.

The movie contains no sub-plot. None. By the time the hour and 39 minute film is over, the audience has been saturated with Miss Archer and Jastrow. Since this project has been Jastrow's baby since its beginning, and he helped the writer write the script, it's at his doorstep where the blame must fall.

A Review

The supporting cast does an admirable job with their roles, especially Mary Kay Place. It doesn't matter whether Miss Place has her Texanese down or not, her cameo spots create a dynamic energy level on the screen. It would have been wonderful to have had more of her.

Richard Farnsworth as Frank Walker is quite believable as is Josh Taylor as Luke Jarvis. The problem with Taylor's role is he's hard to understand. I was told that the sound problems in Dallas were due to the theater and not the film. I hope so. If not, it's almost impossible to understand his words. (He is talking through a chaw of tobacco.)

All in all, "Waltz Across Texas" is a chamber piece which bears more than a passing resemblance to Jastrow's life. It portrays the oil business and Texans in a positive manner with more laughs in it than even Miss Archer and Jastrow expected. And after all, with a song like "I Stepped in a Pile of You and Got Love All Over Me," how can it miss being appealing?

It will be interesting to see how it does nationwide.

'Waltz' has been labor of love

By GEORGIA TEMPLE
Entertainment Writer

From beginning to end, the project is his baby. It started with a dream and ends with the box office totals.

"Waltz Across Texas," a love story set against the search for black gold, had its birth not in this country but in England.

At age 22, Terry Jastrow was the youngest producer in ABC network history. His area of expertise lay in sports coverage. While he was in England filming, the idea for the beginning scenes of a motion picture came to him.

It happened something like this: The opening scenes of what is now "Waltz Across Texas" came to Jastrow as he was almost sleeping in a London hotel. He could see it. A West Texas duster storms across the screen when suddenly the sounds of a light aircraft break through the dust. Next the aircraft comes into view, and then, and then...Jastrow had to return to New York.

WHILE HE WAS in New York, other movie scenes began flashing in his mind.

These flashes went something like this: Boy meets girl, girl meets boy; girl is impressed, boy isn't. No, no, no. Boy meets girl, girl meets boy; boy is impressed, girl isn't. Maybe. A love story? It needed something. Ah, yes, conflict.

From the beginning, he knew what would provide the backdrop. There was never a question on where these sequences of scenes, when and if they became a movie, would be set. Nor was there a question on the movie dealing with the oil business. That he had known for a long time.

After all, Jastrow was a West Texas boy. A former Midlander, Jastrow's parents, Mr. and Mrs. K.M. Jastrow, are Midland residents.

JASTROW WENT to the University of Houston on a golf scholarship and from there wound up in New York City working for ABC Sports, but his roots were always in Midland. And with an independent oilman for a father, the movie would revolve around the industry Jastrow knew.

At this time, Jastrow also was taking acting classes whenever he could (beginning in 1973 with Lee Strasberg).

As the script for the movie began to form more clearly in his mind, he shared his idea with co-workers. Dan Jenkins, writer for Sports Illustrated and author of, among others, "Semi-Tough," was one such co-worker and friend.

Jenkins was among the close to 1,000 in attendance at the Dallas Premiere of "Waltz Across Texas." He reminisced about Jastrow, saying, "His nickname at ABC used to be Nerve Ends. He was so hyper; he had so much energy. He was an excellent producer and director of sports events, but he found out it was too easy."

Jastrow wanted more challenge in his life. Besides he had a dream which he refused to let go. It was more clearly defined by this time and included acting as well as producing. The ultimate goal was putting together a script, a cast, a producer, a director and creating the story he wanted to tell in movie form. He knew it was a risk, but he decided to go for it.

IN THE FALL of 1976, Jastrow confided to a man he had just met in person who said he had "admired Terry from afar," that he was leaving ABC Sports. That man was also on hand for the Dallas event. In fact the voice of the Dallas Cowboys was the emcee for the premiere.

Vern Lundquist told the audience in his opening statements, "We were over a cornfield at about 2,500 feet when Terry said, 'I'm going to leave ABC Sports.' I said, 'Wait a minute. You're my key to the kingdom.'"

Several years later, Lundquist said Jastrow told him, "I'm in love (enter actress Anne Archer). Then a year and a half ago I heard them (Jastrow and his wife, Miss Archer) discuss a dream. They had formed Aster (Corporation) to bring the dream to fruition."

To reach that goal, Aster Corporation had to raise a great deal of money. The tab to date is somewhere in the neighborhood of $2 million ($6 million was the original budget by Warner Brothers, but independent producer Martin Jurow said from the outset he could do it for less and did so).

The list of investors consists of, besides Jastrow and Miss Archer who put up their ranch as collateral, 16 Texans, 10 of whom are from Midland, and one investor from Colorado. Approximately half of the investors are associated with the oil business with only one of the 17 has any prior experience with movie investing.

FOR LUNDQUIST the Dallas premiere was "a thrilling night." He was pleased "to be here when the dream reaches the screen."

The movie was filmed entirely on location in the Midland area last October and November. It employed 300 locals behind and in front of the cameras.

When the distribution rights for the movie were sold to Atlantic Releasing, Aster Corporation retained the rights to distribute the movie in West Texas.

Both premieres were originally set to be closer together, but due to scheduling difficulties the dates moved to 10 days apart. The movie's World Premiere in Dallas was co-sponsored by The USA Film Festival.

The West Texas premiere tonight is sponsored by Aster Corporation, with all proceeds going to High Sky Girls Ranch. The movie opens to area audiences Saturday at the Hodge Theatre for an exclusive two week engagement. The proceeds from public ticket sales go to Aster Corp., not Atlantic Releasing because Aster Corp. is also responsible for all costs.

For Jastrow, the "negativity in films today is a problem." In all of his interviews he places the stress on his desire to "make a terrific movie that is uplifting and entertaining" as well as his hope "to do so in a way we would be proud of."

The project has been one of love. As he said, "I have traveled around the world and there is such a decency about the people here."

It was this decency he wanted to capture.

He also knew from the beginning that to wind up with the product he wanted rather than one a studio desired, he might have to go the full mile. As he said, "If we were going to make films about subjects we felt deeply about, we knew we might have to do it ourselves."

And so he did.

Hardliners win seats in Irish election

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — This strife-torn province appeared as divided as ever today after hardliners on both sides of its religious-political conflict won seats in an assembly that Britain hoped would represent the first step toward peace.

Three members of Sinn Fein, the political wing of the outlawed Provisional Irish Republican Army, emerged victorious and Protestant radicals opposed to the IRA also scored well in first results announced Thursday. Moderate parties appeared to be the main losers.

The predominantly Roman Catholic Sinn Fein was expected to pick up another two seats in the 78-member provincial assembly when the final results of Wednesday's elections are announced.

Protestant militants denounced Sinn Fein's electoral gains as a "vote for the gun." The Catholic party said it would not take its seats in the assembly as a protest against British rule in Northern Ireland, and warned that the anti-British guerrilla campaign was not over.

IT WAS THE FIRST TIME Sinn Fein, Gaelic for "Ourselves Alone," participated in an election under its own banner since the Provisional IRA was formed in December 1969 and launched its battle to unite Protestant-dominated Northern Ireland with the overwhelmingly Catholic Irish Republic.

Sinn Fein fielded 12 of the 184 candidates for the assembly. Before this week's balloting, the Social Democratic and Labor Party was the only major political voice of the Roman Catholic minority.

Britain had called the election in hopes of giving Roman Catholics a say in government and ending the 13-year-old blood feud between the province's estimated 1 million Protestants and 500,000 Roman Catholics.

The British, who have ruled the province from London since they suspended a Protestant-controlled Parliament in 1972, have said they want to hand over limited social and economic powers to the assembly — but only if 70 percent of its members, including Catholics, agree to make the new assembly work.

Among the Protestant parties, the Rev. Ian Paisley's militant Democratic Unionists won eight seats, including an easy win for the firebrand Paisley in his district of North Antrim.

THE OFFICIAL UNIONISTS, the other major Protestant party, won 14 seats. Paisley's party was expected to pick up more seats from rural areas not yet counted.

The two main Protestant parties bitterly oppose unification with the Irish Republic and have pledged never to share power with Catholics.

Social Democratic and Labor won six seats, seen as a clear indication that it had lost votes to Sinn Fein. The non-sectarian Alliance Party won only three, with the small Ulster Popular Unionist faction winning one.

Protestant militants chanted "murderer" and "scum" when it was announced that Sinn Fein Vice President Gerry Adams had won in staunchly Catholic west Belfast.

Adams, a former IRA guerrilla chief who was twice jailed by the British in the last decade, said his election was "a vote (by Catholics) for British withdrawal" from Northern Ireland.

"Obviously people support the IRA," he said.

CATHOLICS CHEERED AND MARCHED behind Adams, 33, to Sinn Fein headquarters, waving waved orange, white and green Irish flags and jeering rifle-toting officers of the predominantly Protestant Royal Ulster Constabulary.

Another Sinn Fein victor was Martin McGuinness, 32, an ex-butcher's boy who became the IRA commander in Londonderry. McGuinness hailed Sinn Fein's advances as "an historic moment for the Republican movement."

The election results were announced during a sudden lull in the violence that had marred the three-week election campaign.

REV. JOE JORDAN AT ASSEMBLY IN CHRIST

"THESE SIGNS SHALL FOLLOW THEM THAT BELIEVE" is a verse from Mark 16 that most accurately describes Rev. Joe Jordan, Evangelist and Teacher from Riverside, Calif. The signs following have resulted in people being saved, baptized in the Spirit, and healed in virtually every service.

Rev. Jordan's main theme is always centered around LIVING FAITH and the scriptural path one should use in obtaining more Faith and then exercising his rights to work with the known will of God. At the present time Rev. Jordan has about 20 hours of teaching on cassette tapes, and has authored five books, all of which lay a foundation for one's relationship to Christ and his fellow man in these closing days.

Rev. Jordan takes time to personally pray with each person who desires prayer in a meeting. This means, of course, that many nights he doesn't finish ministering until around midnight, but this type of compassion always produces a great many healings, deliverances, and miracles of great variety in each service. It is not uncommon to see from 90 to 95 percent of those who come forward with back trouble receive instant healing. Also many other problems, physically and Spiritually are intantly healed.

Altho the miraculous is observed so frequently, Rev. Jordan points all credit and glory to Jesus Christ, the Healer and Source of all miracles.

Rev. Jordan will be ministering in the Assembly In Christ, 3125 Travis, Midland, Fri. Oct. 22, Sat. the 23rd at 7:30 P.M. also Sun. A.M. 11:00 and Sun. P.M. 7:30.

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's tax and spending cuts will widen the gap between the rich and the poor in America, an analysis by the National Journal concludes.

The weekly magazine, which specializes in analytical reports on federal policy and politics, said Reagan's policies inevitably will cause "income in the United States (to) be distributed more unevenly."

The magazine based its analysis on figures supplied by the Census Bureau, the Congressional Budget Office and the congressional Joint Committee on Taxation.

The cuts enacted in social programs over the past two years will have "a disproportionately heavy impact" on America's poor and "seem almost certain to accelerate the trend toward a more uneven distribution of cash income," the magazine said in its Oct. 23 issue.

The magazine said the poor are hit the hardest by budget cuts because they "rely so much more heavily than others on federal aid."

The magazine's staf analyzed 1981 income fi ures — the most recer year for which actua spending and tax da were available.

The first year's payment and buyer qualification will be calculated equivalent to a rate of 8½% for 95% loan-to-value. Interest will be charged at a rate of 13½% for the first 6 months of the loan. After the first 6 months interest will be charged at the most recent 6months Treasury Bill rate plus 4.25%. Payments on these mortgages are graduated so as to increase the principal and interest payments 7.50% each year for the next 4 years. At the end of the first 5 year period, the graduation in payments will cease. A new payment schedule will be computed using a variable rate mortgage to amortize the remaining balance over the remaining 25 years of the mortgage based upon the then current Treasury Bill rate plus 4.25%. The 7½% maximum increase can be more if the original loan principle exceeds 125%. At each 5 year anniversary date, the payment may be adjusted to allow the remaining payments to fully amortize the loan. ANNUAL PERCENTAGE RATE APPROXIMATELY 14.28%
