Gov. Bush says education state's top priority

By Wade Warren
Managing Editor

Gov. George W. Bush left little doubt in the minds of Scurry County residents Monday as to what his number one priority is as Texas's governor.

Meeting with around 200 citizens at the Martha Ann Woman's Club, Gov. Bush repeated the education of the children of Texas is his administration's number one priority.

"Educating our children is by far the most important thing this state does," Bush said.

Later in a news conference, Bush said that one of his top priorities in education is a facility funding grant program that funnels money from the state to school districts which have passed bond issues as a way to lower the burden on local property owners.

This progarm was first enacted in 1997 and the amount of money the state sent back to a school district was based on the district's wealth.

If Snyder had been part of the program the first year, the district would have received 39 percent of it's bonded indebtedness from the state.

Bush also emphasized that it is important that the state have some form of measurement to ensure all children are learning the necessary fundamentals to provide them a proper start in life.

"I'm a results-oriented person," said Bush. "I think it is the proper role of the state to measure a student's progress."

"It's up to the local folks, however, to chart the course," added Bush.

"Not many people in Washington, D.C. care about the Snyder Tigers," Bush added.

"Local control of schools is the best way to have excellence in education for our children."

Bush said he wants every child in Texas to be able to read on grade level by the time they reach the third grade.

"Then, we will work to maintain their reading level," Bush said.

The governor voiced strong opposition to "social promotion" in Texas schools.

"We must end this business of social promotion of children who cannot read. There were 40,000 students who were promoted from third grade to the fourth grade in Texas schools last year who could not pass a basic reading comprehension test."

Bush said he feels social promotion gives a child false hopes.

"I believe in high standards for everybody."

Bush also said he will be asking the Texas Legislature to send money back to the individual school districts to help implement reading programs for students.

Bush said children must also set high goals for themselves. "Stay in school and aim high."

He also urged youths not to use drugs and alcohol. "If you use those things, you can't reach your dreams.

Bush also said that 30 percent of the babies in Texas are born out of wedlock.

In light of that fact, Bush urged the fathers of babies born out of wedlock to take responsibility for their actions.

"It's not manly to father a baby and then walk out," said Bush.

Bush drew applause from the audience when he urged young girls to abstain from sex until marriage.

Bush said he had seen several "eras" in his lifetime, but now felt it is time for Texans to usher in the "Responsibility Era."

Bush demonstrated why his popularity ratings are so high as he visited and signed autographs for everyone who asked following his remarks from the podium.

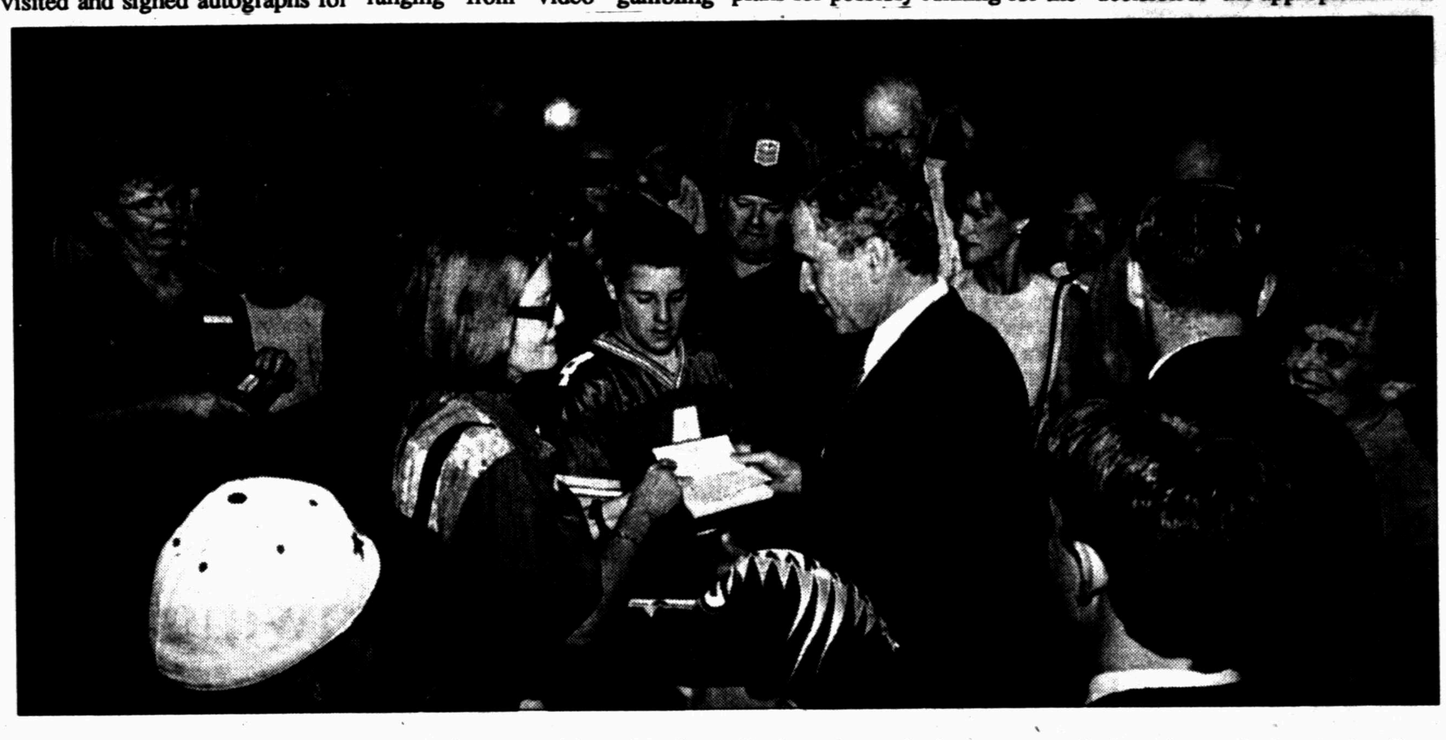

He slowly worked his way back to an area where he conducted a brief news conference, answering questions on a variety of topics ranging from video gambling machines to a run for the presidency.

Bush said he believes eight-liners are against the law, and praised local officials for eliminating them from the Scurry County.

When questioned about his plans for possibly running for the nation's highest office, Bush said he had not made up his mind.

"That is a very personal decision," said Bush. "It is also a family decision."

Bush said he would make a decision at "the appropriate time."

Believe it or not, the best-selling ice cream in America remains vanilla.

We like it, too, as long as there is an ample supply of cholocate to drape over it.

We came across some other interesting facts about ice cream consumption. Anytime is good for eating home-made ice cream, but this summer's hot weather has increased the necessity and the pleasure.

According to a nation-wide survey, when consuming ice cream, men shovel it in while women are more discriminating.

The poll revealed that one in four men consider four scoops to be an average serving. And 40 percent of 'em go back for seconds.

Two scoops are a typical serving for women, and 61 percent of them never ask for a refill.

On the other hand, women pick through their ice cream to find goodies, such as pieces of cookies, nuts or candies. At least half of the men never go mining.

And men are the guilty ones when it comes to polishing it off. Two-thirds of them will eat the last of the ice cream rather than save it for someone else.

It's okay...she didn't want seconds, anyway.

Jury selection continues in trial

Jury selection continued this morning in the 132nd District Court trial of Marcus Lee Rocha.

Rocha, 17, of 605 30th Street, is the second of three people charged in a December drive-by shooting.

He is charged with aggravated assault with a deadly weapon in the Dec. 18, 1997 shooting in the 600 Block of 26th Street.

Rocha, along with Fedencio Ramon, 21, and Solatina Maria Flores, 19, were indicted by a Scurry County grand jury in January for firing a handgun at John Christopher Hernandez. Hernandez was not injured.

On $20.4 million bond issue...

Early voting starts Wednesday

By Joyce May
Staff Writer

Early voting for the Snyder ISD bond election begins Wednesday and continues through Aug. 4

Voters can cast their ballots at the administration building between 8 a.m. and 4 p.m. Monday through Friday. The ad building will remain open on Fridays for early voting only.

SISD Supt. Gayle Lomax gave a presentation regarding the Aug. 8 bond election at the Scurry County Senior Citizens Center Friday

The school chief told the group that structure is not the problem with Snyder's schools, but that electricity, plumbing and heating are.

"Those buildings are as good a building than if we built brand new," Lomax said.

The bond proposal calls for the closing of Central Elementary and major renovations at all other campuses.

"In my estimation and in the estimation of the citizen's committee and the architects that looked at this, we have some difficult problems in the area of plumbing, electrical and heating."

One of those problems, Lomax said, is in a 30-year-old air conditioning unit.

"It is not energy efficient and is running high utility bills. The bottom line is it is just about to play out.

"Every year we play the game of hoping we can get one more year out of the air conditioner at the high school. This hot summer is going to cause us to worry again if we can get her cranked up."

Another concern is a cooling tower with a rusted bottom that will cost $350,000 to replace.

According to engineers installing individual air conditioning/heating units would be the most efficient.

"Our architects and engineers tell us that the best way to go about air conditioning all of our buildings is to put individual units which are much more energy and cost effective."

Lomax said if the bond issue is approved, renovation and construction would probably begin in the spring of 1999 and would take two to three years to complete.

Proposed renovations include improving accessibility, landscaping and grounds, repairing or replacing roofs, windows and floor tiles and renovating restrooms and drinking fountains.

Lomax also said the district will also have to meet ADA requirements.

"The American's with Disabilities Act requires anybody that does a major renovation to go back and make sure the building meets the requirements."

Other proposed improvements include repainting interiors and exteriors, installing new fire alarms and upgrading electrical and communication systems and computer networks.

Also proposed are replacing the portable buildings at Stanfield and Northeast Elementary schools with brick and mortar structures.

One question Lomax addressed was whether people who are 65 or older will have to pay additional taxes if the bond election passes.

"The answer is people 65 or older will not have to pay any additional taxes once the over-65 Homestead Exemption is filed with the Appraisal District," Lomax said.

The total amount of the bond issue is $20,450,000 and it will take 20 years to repay.

"It is a 20-year package. And at the end of 20 years, I can assure you, that money stops being collected."

The bonds will be sold at advertised public sale to the bidder with the lowest interest rate.

"Today we are very fortunate because the bond market is at an all-time low as 5.30 is the lowest price bonds have seen in about a seven to 10 years."

Lomax emphasized that the bond money could not be used for anything other than renovations and construction.

"A question that is asked of me

'Mexican Mafia' behind quintuple slaying

By C. BRYSON HULL
Associated Press Writer

The shotgun slayings of five people in a San Antonio home last August came from a single order by the top lieutenant in Texas' largest prison-based gang, authorities say.

Nine other killings over three years also have been blamed on 16 alleged members of a notorious Texas prison gang in a federal racketeering indictment unsealed Monday.

The indictment accuses the Mexican Mafia, also known as the "Mexikanemi" or "La Eme," of routinely dealing drugs, robbing, extorting and assaulting.

The Aug. 8, 1997, quintuple murders, the worst mass murder in modern San Antonio history, apparently stemmed from an order to rob the house, given by Robert "Beaver" Perez, 40, a top lieutenant in the organization.

San Antonio police Capt. Jeff Page told the San Antonio Express-News that the gang was after drugs and a large sum of money it believed to be at the West French Place duplex.

The bodies of 49-year-old Rodolfo Vara, his 19-year-old daughter, Elbira; her fiance, Ricardo Gonzalez, 18; 19-year-old Chris Tobias and Edward Medel, 18, were discovered shot execution-style amid the Vara's ransacked duplex.

The federal indictment says 28-year-old Jesse "Chango" Gomez, Roberto De Los Santos and another suspect still at large shot all five.

De Los Santos would became a murder victim of his own gang after the slayings, the affidavit states.

Six days later, Perez allegedly ordered 24-year-old mob captain Robert "Robe" Herrera and several other unnamed suspects to kill De Los Santos for talking too freely about the crime, according to the affidavit. De Los Santos was choked, beaten and run over with a car.

Officials say the gang was born and controlled from inside Texas' prisons.

"Eventually, members sought to generate income outside the walls of the Texas prison system to help inmates with legal expenses, commissary expenses and the financial needs of inmates' families," the affidavit states.

The largest source of revenue for the organization was a "street tax," or money extorted from drug dealers, authorities said. Sellers who refused to pay the 10 percent, also known as "the Dime," were robbed, beaten and killed by Mexican Mafia crews, records say.

Gang associates also sold heroin, cocaine and marijuana throughout the San Antonio area, according to police.

Federal authorities say unindicted co-conspirator Heriberto "Herb" Huerta ran the Mexican Mafia from his prison cell. Perez carried out Huerta's instructions on the street and communicated with his boss via letters, court documents show.

"Many of these letters described the struggle for power within the Texas Mexican Mafia," the affidavit states.

The infighting followed Huerta's imprisonment, and eventually led to the slaying of Luis "Blue" Adames on Nov. 23, 1994.

Perez reportedly ordered six associates to murder Adames after he challenged Huerta and Perez for leadership of the organization.

Donor: Sharp knew about conviction

EL PASO (AP) — An El Paso businessman says State Comptroller John Sharp was definitely aware of his felony conviction before accepting a $10,750 donation.

Stanley Jobe dashed off an angry letter Monday to Sharp, accusing the Democratic nominee for lieutenant governor of "obvious and total disregard for the truth."

Jobe said Sharp personally solicited the contribution from him last October and discussed his criminal record before taking it. Sharp returned the donation on Saturday, saying he was unaware of Jobe's conviction until being asked about it Friday by the El Paso Times.

Jobe, his father, Billie Mac Jobe, and three other El Paso businessmen were convicted of federal conspiracy and bank fraud charges stemming from a bank scam. Jobe said convictions on two of the counts were overturned, but others remained intact.

He paid a $15,100 fine and served one month in a halfway house and five months of home detention. Jobe, who maintains he is innocent, remains on supervised release, a form of federal probation.

There's no way he gave Sharp the money without mentioning his criminal record, Jobe said. That has become standard practice since the Democratic National Committee returned a $10,000 donation last year, he said.

"Before committing myself, I spoke to you personally and specifically addressed the issue of my prior conviction in light of the fact that other candidates had returned my funds in the past and I did not wish to experience a similar situation," wrote Jobe, a concrete company president convicted of bank fraud in 1994.

"You assured me that it was of no concern to you and that my support and contribution was welcomed and needed," Jobe wrote in the letter, which he also gave to the American-Statesman.

"It was only upon that assurance by you that I agreed to contribute and to co-host your political event in October," Jobe wrote.

On Monday, Sharp campaign spokesman Kelly Fero called Jobe's assertion "fiction" and repeated that Sharp only learned of Jobe's criminal record on Friday.

Jobe, a longtime high-dollar donor to Democrats, has given money to at least three other statewide Democratic candidates in the 1998 election. Of those, two said they knew about Jobe's conviction.

Democratic gubernatorial candidate Garry Mauro's campaign said it knew of Jobe's conviction and would not be returning the $30,000 he gave.

"He is a longtime friend of Garry's and a longtime supporter of Democrats," said campaign spokesman Billy Rogers.

Hospital group endorses Counts

AUSTIN — The Texas Hospital Association today endorsed the re-election of State Rep. David Counts.

"I'm delighted that I have received the THA's strong showing of support," Counts said.

THA is the leadership organization and principal advocate for the state's hospitals. Most hospitals in the 70th District represented by Counts — including Cogdell Memorial Hospital in Snyder — are members of THA.

Scientists drawing up roadmap for seeking life beyond Earth

MOUNTAIN VIEW, Calif. (AP) — Scientific discussion of extraterrestrial life has moved beyond the question of whether it exists to where and how we should look for it.

More than 100 researchers gathered at NASA Ames Research Center Monday for a three-day conference to consider those issues. The researchers plan to begin developing a five-year roadmap for study and exploration.

Participants, energized by discoveries that suggest we may not be alone, acknowledge that their discussions and plans may seem odd. But they believe it is important to share their excitement with the public.

"Some of the things we'll be talking about over the next 20 years will sound like science fiction to most people," said David Morrison, a NASA astronomer and co-chair of the conference. "It's our job to make it sound like reality."

Sessions will examine the biological basis for distant life, technological challenges in detecting it and possible missions — based on Earth or in space — to find it. Participants hope to reach consensus and draw up a report in the next couple of months.

A number of discoveries in recent years are whetting scientists' appetite. For instance, researchers have found that life on Earth can exist under extreme conditions — in blocks of Antarctic ice, in hot springs, inside rocks. If microbes can live there, perhaps they could live on seemingly dead planets.

Data from the Galileo spacecraft detected signs of water under the surface of Europa, a moon of Jupiter. Another discovery exciting astrobiologists are possible fossils of bacteria inside a Mars rock, although that finding is in dispute.

Causing the most excitement, however, is the discovery of planets beyond our own solar system. Scientists believe some, if they meet the right conditions, could support life.

"Together they make an amazing statement — life may not be uncommon," said NASA Administrator Daniel Goldin, who addressed the audience via videotape. "We may not be alone."

Astrobiologists also are looking at whether Earth organisms can be adapted to survive on Mars or other places human beings might go.

Morrison and others believe nonscientists would support the search for extraterrestrial life.

"We're trying to answer fundamental questions people have always asked," he said. "And if we can find the answers, I think people will think that they money is well spent."

Ask Anne & Nan

By Anne B. Adams and Nancy Cash-Cummings

DEAR ANNE AND NAN: I have a poser. I have been looking everywhere I can think of for emu oil, but I've had no luck. I was told about it by a shop owner I met while I was waiting at an airport, but neglected to find out where I could buy some. Maybe you can help? — BARBARA HORTON, Whittier, Calif.

DEAR BARBARA: So often questions from our readers lead us to fascinating (to us, at least) discoveries: your question did just that.

It turns out that raising emus is a growing industry in our home state of Vermont. As bulk milk prices continue to plummet, many dairy farmers have been forced to sell their herds and look for more profitable ways in which to use their land. Some farmers have turned to raising sheep and goats; others have started raising ostriches and emus!

We spoke with Pat Goodall, president of the Vermont Ratite Association (ratites include emus, ostriches, cassowaries and moas) who has replaced her dairy herd with emus. She lives up in Vermont's Northeast Kingdom, which gets VERY cold in the winter, but she notes that the emus, despite the fact that they are an Australian bird, don't seem to mind in the least. As a matter of fact, they have been, and remain, completely healthy despite — or maybe because of — the weather!

Pat sells premium, refined emu oil which, she says, is "pure as spring water." Since her birds have never been given any kind of antibiotic, never had immunization shots of any kind and are fed organic grain, the oil contains no residual impurities or additives of any kind.

Emu oil is used to ease the inflammation of arthritis and other muscle and joint pain, as a burn medication and as a soothing, healing treatment for chapped and roughened skin.

A 2-ounce plastic squeeze bottle of Pat's Canyon River Pure Premium Emu Oil (a little goes a long way, she notes) costs $23.39 including postage and can be ordered from Pat at RR 1, Box 109, Derby Line, VT 05830.

HINTS FROM OUR READERS: We love to get these!

TEA- AND COFFEE-CUP STAINS: Mrs. James Campbell of Uniontown, Pa., writes: "Regarding a solution to remove coffee and tea stains from cups, etc.: What can be simpler than a bit of baking soda on the tip of a damp dishcloth? Costless and fast!"

When did the U.S. Census Bureau first use a computer?

Computers were slower to catch on in the bridge world, but now they are an integral part of the game. You can even use one to play online 24 hours a day, perhaps with OKbridge. It is also possible to watch exhibition matches. The recent ones have featured Paul Soloway (who lives near Seattle) and Bobby Goldman (from Highlands Village, Texas). This deal occurred during their match against Peter Nagy (a former Canadian international now residing in Las Vegas) and Bruce Ferguson (from Boise, Idaho).

How would you declare six no-trump? West leads the diamond seven, second highest from a weak suit.

Five no-trump asked South to select a slam.

Given the diamond lead, you have nine top tricks: two spades, two hearts, two diamonds and three clubs. If clubs are worth four tricks, four spades will be sufficient. But if clubs are splitting badly, you will need five spade tricks. So, Goldman (South) started by playing a club to dummy's ace and a club to his king. When everyone followed, he took the safety-play in spades: He led a spade to dummy's ace, then played a spade to his nine. This guaranteed four spade tricks (except against an unlikely 5-0 break). Here, starting with the spade king and finessing dummy's jack would have raked in an overtrick, but would have failed if East held queen-10-fourth. Don't risk a slam (or game) bonus for the sake of an overtrick.

The Census Bureau first used a computer in 1889. Holes were punched into special cards.

At Cowboys' training camp...

Ex-Seahawk could be a steal

WICHITA FALLS (AP) — Troy Aikman fades back to pass, checks his downfield receivers and dumps the ball off to Chris Warren.

Warren jukes a linebacker and makes a nice downfield gain. On the next play, Aikman pitches out to Warren who cuts off a tackle's block and races in the clear.

After an eight-year career with Seattle, Warren could be one of the Cowboys' best off-season acquisitions in years. Dallas is so happy with him it cut Sherman Williams, a former second-round draft pick.

Warren admits he's not a threat to take away Emmitt Smith's No. 1 running back job. He became a Cowboy to make any impact he could.

"It's really going to hard for defenses to adjust to both of us," Warren said. "We're two different style running backs and it will cause defenses to make an adjustment if they can."

Warren volunteers that he is not even thinking about trying to beat out Smith.

"I know my role and I accept it," he said. "There is no problem."

In fact, there is a possibility both Smith and Warren could be paired in the same backfield in certain offensive sets designed by the imaginative Chan Gailey, the former Pittsburgh coordinator who replaced Barry Switzer.

"I think Chris will be a great complement to Emmitt," Gailey said. "We'll use Chris on third down a lot and when we get into the shotgun offense. Those will be his primary uses."

Gailey said Smith will play in each game as long as he can.

"How much Emmitt plays depends on his stamina," Gailey said. "That will determine Emmitt's status."

Warren scored 44 touchdowns and rushed for 6,706 yards in his eight year career with Seattle. He also caught 194 passes for 1,324 yards.

"Chris has great hands," Gailey said. "He's an excellent receiver."

Warren said he loves Gailey's offense.

"It's going to be a lot of fun," Warren said. "Emmitt is helping me a lot with what he has learned about it. We have a great working relationship."

Warren said being out of Seattle gives him a fresh attitude about football.

"It's a different feeling here," Warren said. "There is a different philosophy and different goals. I like it."

Coincidentally, the Cowboys' first game in the Gailey era will be on July 31 in Texas Stadium against the Seahawks in an exhibition opener.

"I'm looking forward to that game," Warren said. "I'll have plenty of incentive."

Cowboy DE out for season

WICHITA FALLS (AP) — The Dallas Cowboys announced Monday that defensive end-linebacker Broderick Thomas will be lost for the season.

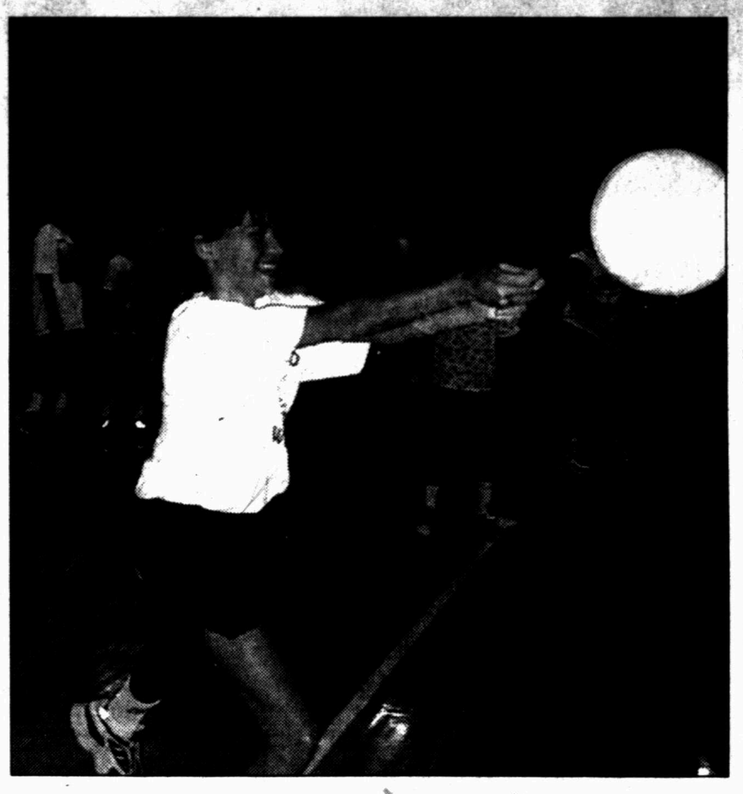

Thomas has a left knee injury, suffered in Sunday's practice at Midwestern State University.

The 10-year veteran from Nebraska was expected to be the Cowboys' best player rushing the passer this season.

His loss has sent Dallas in search of a possible veteran replacement.

He became the second player lost for the season due to a knee injury.

Wendell Davis, a cornerback, suffered a left knee injury Saturday and will be out for the year.

Astros win slugfest with Rockies, 10-9

HOUSTON (AP) — Tim Bogar's RBI single in the ninth inning helped Houston hold off Colorado 10-9 for its fourth straight win, after the Astros blew a seven-run lead Monday night.

Carl Everett went 4-for-5 with three RBIs and four runs scored for the Astros, who tied a season-high with 18 hits.

The Rockies trailed 8-1 in the fifth inning before rallying to tie it 9-9 in the ninth on Dante Bichette's two-run homer. Colorado has lost six in a row and nine straight on the road.

Doug Henry (6-2) won despite allowing Bichette's 14th homer.

Everett reached on a fielder's choice with one out and went to third on Tony Eusebio's base hit. Bogar followed with line drive up the middle off Dave Veres (0-1).

Houston scored four runs in the fourth inning to take a 4-1 lead, and added four more in the fifth before the Rockies began chipping away.

Derek Bell led off the fourth with a single, stole second and went to third on a throwing error by catcher Kirt Manwaring. After Jeff Bagwell walked, Moises Alou and Everett hit RBI singles.

Alou scored when Bogar hit into a double play and Everett scored on a single by Shane Reynolds.

In the fifth, Bagwell hit a run-scoring double, Everett hit a two-run double and Eusebio drove in a run with a groundout.

The Rockies cut it to 8-3 in the sixth when Larry Walker doubled and scored on Todd Helton's 16th homer.

Colorado pulled within 8-7 by scoring four runs on five straight hits with two outs in the seventh. Walker and Bichette hit RBI singles and Vinny Castilla had an two-run double.

Houston moved ahead 9-7 in the seventh on an RBI single by Eusebio.

Reynolds gave up seven runs and 11 hits in 6 1-3 innings.

Rice set for return; Raiders ink Woodson

By The Associated Press

Jerry Rice couldn't wait to get back on the football field.

Rice, coming back from two serious knee injuries that sidelined him almost all last season, showed up at San Francisco's training camp a day early and caught some passes before a cheering crowd of 3,000.

"It's a fresh start for me," said Rice, the NFL's career leader in receptions, receiving yards and touchdowns. "With everything that happened to me last year, this is a new start. I feel like a rookie all over again."

Rice came to camp Monday, a day before the 49ers' first full-squad workout. He worked out individually, running routes and catching the ball while the rest of the team scrimmaged.

"I'm probably about 90 percent right now," he said.

Rice, who turns 36 in October, tore ligaments and cartilage in his left knee during San Francisco's season opening-loss at Tampa Bay. He returned against Denver on Dec. 15, but broke his left kneecap after catching a touchdown pass.

Coach Steve Mariucci plans to limit Rice's preseason schedule in order to get him ready for for the 49ers' regular-season opener Sept. 6 against the New York Jets.

"We are in no rush to see him practice twice a day every day," Mariucci said. "The main objective is to get him to feel good for that first game."

Raiders

Heisman Trophy winner Charles Woodson signed with Oakland a day before the opening of training camp.

Woodson, the fourth overall pick in the draft, reportedly signed a six-year deal worth $14.5 million, including an $8 million signing bonus.

"I told my agent when we first talked that I didn't want to be a holdout," the former Michigan cornerback said.

Woodson is the highest draft pick this year to come to terms with his team. New Raiders coach Jon Gruden said Woodson will be given a legitimate chance to start.

"We don't discriminate because of age," said Gruden, 34, the former offensive coordinator for the Philadelphia Eagles. "I'm a rookie head coach."

Seahawks

Seattle opened its training camp without holdout quarterback Warren Moon.

Newly acquired running back Ricky Watters said he hopes the 41-year-old Moon works out his contract dispute with the team.

"He's one of my heroes," said Watters, who signed as a free agent after gaining 1,110 yards with Philadelphia last season. "I expected to be playing with him."

It is the first training camp holdout of Moon's 20-year pro career. Last year, he set team passing records with 313 completions and 3,678 yards.

Packers

Reggie White, who has gotten into hot water for his remarks on homosexuality and other social issues, wasn't talking at Green Bay's training camp Monday.

White was set to talk with a group of reporters, but coach Mike Holmgren canceled the interview because he didn't want his star defensive end making any more news. Holmgren has done the same thing in the past with quarterback Brett Favre.

"Put them in a situation where they have a microphone in front of them and anything could be said," Holmgren explained. "I would just like to minimize the distractions just a little bit."

Falcons

Mark Rypien, a former Super Bowl MVP who signed with Atlanta as a backup quarterback to Chris Chandler, was placed on waivers.

Walker to leave hospital

ENGLEWOOD, Colo. (AP) — Football great Doak Walker, who was injured in a January skiing accident, will be released Wednesday from Craig Hospital.

Walker, 71, has been undergoing rehabilitation at the hospital, which specializes in helping spinal-cord and brain injury victims.

Walker will be transferred to the Extended Care Center of Routt Memorial Hospital in Steamboat Springs, Craig Hospital administrator Kenny Hosack said Monday.

The move will allow Walker, a resident of Steamboat, to be closer to his family and friends, Hosack said.

Walker suffered a spinal injury Jan. 30 while skiing in Steamboat Springs.

Last week, Walker's son, Scott Walker, said his father remains paralyzed from the neck down and uses a respirator to help him breathe. He said his father's prospects for a full recovery are uncertain.

Walker was an All-America halfback at SMU from 1947-49. He won the Heisman Trophy in 1948. He went on to a Pro Football Hall of Fame career with the Detroit Lions, playing from 1950-55 and leading the team to two NFL titles.

Appraisal board chief clarifies name of man

In a Monday story about the Scurry County Appraisal District Review Board, Wayne Glass was identified by the district as the person who protested the mineral values on a lease at SACROC and an Exxon lease.

In fact, it was Waylan Glass who met with the review board on the appraised value of the E.B. Glass lease.

The district apologizes for the mis-identification, said chief appraiser, Ray Peveler.

Internet told to improve customer privacy

WASHINGTON (AP) — Impatient federal regulators are handing an ultimatum to companies on the Internet: Find ways to improve consumer privacy by year's end or face the possibility of tough new privacy laws.

Federal Trade Commission Chairman Robert Pitofsky told a House panel today that the agency hopes businesses can develop adequate privacy rules for themselves, but he noted "considerable barriers to be surmounted."

"We have not given up on self-regulation," Pitofsky said. "If it does not work out, we believe Congress should seriously consider legislation."

Pitofsky's remarks to a House Commerce subcommittee are the strongest suggestion yet that the Clinton administration is willing to seek new federal privacy laws if companies cannot find ways to regulate themselves.

Rep. Billy Tauzin, R-La., noted that the FTC and the administration have waited for the industry to come up with self-regulatory plans, and said "that kind of patience is extraordinary, but it doesn't last forever."

Earlier Monday, an industry trade group racing to convince the government that new laws weren't needed said it would use electronic seals on Web sites to assure consumers.

Under the proposal by the Online Privacy Alliance, these seals would guarantee to consumers that a commercial Web site voluntarily complied with a privacy plan approved by the group.

The alliance — a group of more than 50 companies and trade groups including Microsoft, America Online, IBM, Netscape and the Direct Marketing Association — also planned to testify at today's hearing.

Deirdre Mulligan, a lawyer with the Washington-based Center for Democracy and Technology, lauded the industry's latest efforts but suggested it was too little, too late.

"We strongly believe that industry acting alone will continue to fall short of the goal of providing pervasive privacy protections," she said in her prepared remarks.

The White House has warned businesses that sell products on the Internet to improve protecting the information they collect from customers, often using online questionnaires to gather data such as names, postal and e-mail addresses and personal preferences. Some Web sites sell the information to third-party advertisers and others.

Privacy advocates want companies to tell consumers how personal information will be used, give them the choice to participate, make sure the information stays safe and let consumers review and correct data collected about them.

"In order for self-regulation to work, you need third-party enforcement," said Christine Varney, a former federal trade commissioner and the alliance spokeswoman. "If consumers have a dispute with a company and can't get it resolved, they have to have somewhere else to go."

Two groups already offer such seals or plan to soon: California-based Truste; and the Better Business Bureau, with its BBBOnline program. BBB General Counsel Steven Cole asked lawmakers for more time to make industry's solutions work.

"Expectations that the Internet environment would produce in its infancy a cohesive, fully developed, comprehensive and completely effective."

Growers start opening tobacco markets

WARESBORO, Ga. (AP) — With millions of pounds of unsold tobacco in storage and their industry under attack by some in Washington, Georgia's flue-cured tobacco growers prepared to sell their drought-stricken 1998 crop with apprehension.

Tobacco markets were set to open Tuesday in Georgia and Florida, kicking off a three-month season that is critical to growers who depend on the golden leaf to fund their farming operations. Georgia's 1,500 growers produced $153 million worth of tobacco last year.

This year, cigarette companies face lawsuits by states trying to recoup money spent to treat smoking-related illnesses, some members of Congress are calling for the elimination of tobacco subsidies and tobacco sales have been sluggish on the world market. As a result, 180 million pounds produced last year remains in storage at growers' expense.

"It scares me to death," said grower Donald Mixon, 51, of Waresboro. "The average person doesn't realize what tobacco farmers have invested. We have a million dollars in tobacco equipment. If we were forced out of the business, it would put us in financial ruin."

Donald Mixon farms with his 71-year-old father, Jack, and his 20-year-old son, Phillip.

With 212 acres of tobacco this year, the Mixons are considered cutting-edge growers. They were among the first to use center-pivot irrigation and they have added five greenhouses to grow tobacco plants.

"Tobacco has been my life," said Jack Mixon. "I was raised on a small farm with three acres. When I was 16, I went to Canada to pick. Their fields were 60 acres. It was my ambition to have a big field of tobacco."

"Tobacco has been good to us," he said as he toured his field.

J. Michael Moore, an extension service tobacco specialist, rates the crop as "good-plus," despite three months of drought and temperatures around 100 degrees. Most of the crop is irrigated.

"It's better than average, but not the excellent crop we expect," Moore said.

Georgia had 44,000 acres of tobacco last year, with average yields of 2,030 pounds per acre. The average price was $1.71 per pound.

Growers have 42,000 acres this year, and Moore expects yields to average about 2,000 pounds per acre. The market season lasts for 14 weeks.

Matt Drudge called appropriate guest

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — "Meet the Press" host Tim Russert says he has no regrets about putting Internet gossip columnist Matt Drudge on the NBC show after Drudge broke the Monica Lewinsky story.

Russert, speaking Monday to the Television Critics Association, said he would invite Drudge back if he again became part of a story.

He was asked if it was sound journalism to give air time to Drudge, whose online reports include stories that have proved false.

"I make no apologies for putting Matt Drudge on a roundtable for people to see who he is, how he articulates things and what his tactics and techniques are," Russert said.

To act as if Drudge doesn't exist is to "put yourself above the news," Russert said, noting that Drudge's Lewinsky story drew 6 million "hits" on the Web.

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

Dogs or Kids in Closed Cars May Lead to Summer Disaster

DEAR ABBY: Recently on a very hot day, I saw two dogs left in parked cars with the windows up. It's that time of year when people need to be reminded never to leave pets or children alone in vehicles. It could be deadly.

When riding in an air-conditioned vehicle, it's easy to forget how quickly the temperature rises once the vehicle is turned off and sitting in the sun. Even on a comfortable day, the temperature climbs quickly and becomes a hazard in only a few minutes. A quick trip to the store could be fatal.

Also, I would like to remind people that animals need shade. Doghouses in the sun do not provide the shelter pets require. It can be hotter inside the doghouse than outside. What a difference could be made by simply placing the doghouse under a shady tree. And please, provide plenty of cool, fresh water and food in clean bowls that cannot be easily tipped over. Remember, a metal bowl conducts heat and cold.

Animals have feelings just like people. Please have a little compassion, and don't keep a dog tied up in the yard day in and day out without giving it some attention.

Please be on the lookout for helpless animals that are left in these situations, and notify the owners or the proper authorities. These animals cannot defend themselves. Their lives and well-being depend on you.

A final thought: Please neuter or spay your cats and dogs. Neutered animals make better pets, and this would alleviate the tragedy of thousands of unwanted animals who die each year.

AN ANIMAL LOVER,
FREDERICKTOWN, OHIO

DEAR ANIMAL LOVER: Many readers will appreciate your timely reminder that pets, as well as children, are vulnerable to the heat of summer. Neither should be left unsupervised in a locked vehicle, even for a few minutes. To do so would invite tragedy.

***

DEAR ABBY: I'm 71 years old and feel good, but I follow the same routine every day.

Abby, I arise between 5:30 and 6:30 a.m. every morning, read the newspaper, do the crossword and Jumbleword, watch soap operas for an hour and a half, and then go to bingo.

I have a male companion living with me who works several days a week. Even when he is off work, he tells me to go ahead and go to bingo because he knows I like it. He's very good to me and gives me his whole paycheck.

Abby, I look forward to bingo and consider it socializing, but I am stuck in a rut. I wonder why I'm so regimented. Is this normal? I think I should sign this ...

BINGO ADDICT

DEAR BINGO: Bingo! Your signature says it all: I suspect that what you are hooked on is the rush you get from gambling. However, since you're hurting neither yourself nor your companion, I wouldn't classify this as a "problem."

If you like, test yourself for addiction. Make plans with your companion or a friend to go to the movies on a bingo afternoon and see if you are able to carry through with your plans. If you can't resist canceling in favor of bingo, you may be bingo-compulsive, but not necessarily a problem addict.

Your Birthday

Wednesday, July 22, 1998

This is not the year to be a flower wilting on the vine. Strike out on an adventurous path by initiating a new enterprise or pursuing an artistic endeavor.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) If you're the guy/gal who calls the shots today, things should go smoothly. However, if you palm your work off onto others, results could be stymied. Cancer, treat yourself to a birthday gift. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions for the year ahead by mailing $2 and SASE to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 1758, Murray Hill Station, New York, NY 10156. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Let those you're involved with savor the spotlight today. You'll be much more effective as the stage manager who directs the operation from the wings.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) There's a good chance you'll receive favors from friends today. Be sure to reciprocate at a later date.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) No job will be too difficult for you today, and the way you handle your tasks will enhance your standing in the eyes of your peers.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) The last thing you want today is to find yourself stuck in a rut of mundane activities. Plan something adventurous or exciting.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) People you've been involved with in the past few days appear to be overlooking something that's obvious to you. Bring it to their attention,or act on it yourself.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) The only types of crowds you'll find enjoyable today are the family clan and/or old friends.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Frittering your time away will leave you empty and unfulfilled as the day wears on. It's important to find a productive project in which to immerse yourself.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) If there is someone special whose friendship you'd like to cultivate, this is a good day to give them a call and suggest a get-together.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Your instincts for gauging the needs and wants of others is adroit today. Acknowledge your intuition if you're marketing something with a broad appeal.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You're better equipped for mental pursuits than physical ones today. Spend your time balancing accounts or answering your mail instead of cleaning the house.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) If you're interested in buying or selling merchandise today, don't let a surrogate make the deal for you. Your negotiations will be better.

GOOD NEWS

By Wayne Horton

A little boy, closing his prayer one evening said, "God, take care of yourself because without You, we'd be sunk!'

My family just took a little tour through seven of the Central States. It was a great trip and the thing I noticed most is that it's raining everywhere north of Kansas! I prayed that it would rain here while we were gone. It didn't.

Well, the Bible says that it rains on the "Just" and the "Unjust". Makes me wonder which of those groups is getting the rain right now?

But, folks, if the Lord tarries, it WILL rain again in Snyder! We've all prayed for rain. God will send it sooner or later. But, you know, it occurs to me that maybe He (God) is trying to teach us something. Maybe He's trying to get us to see how we need Him. Maybe He wants us to take a good look at ourselves. Maybe he wants us to confess our own sinfulness and our understanding that, like the little boy said, without Him we're "sunk".

We plan our trips and buy our things and eat out and entertain ourselves and spend, spend, spend. And sometimes give no thought to our need for God. Maybe it's time for us to repent - change our ways.

The Bible has been correct all along. "There is none righteous, no not one." So, Father, please forgive our foolish ways and may we dedicate our hearts to You as we love and serve our fellow man.

Fire threatens Carnival cruise ship Ecstasy

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Authorities expressed relief today that a fire aboard the giant cruise ship Ecstasy didn't become a Titanic-size tragedy, while passengers recalled their fear when the cruise to Mexico turned into a smoky ordeal.

With the Ecstasy just two miles from shore, fire broke out Monday afternoon, possibly in a crew laundry room. Coast Guard Lt. Dennis Seehoaus said Carnival Cruise Lines initially told him the crew was dealing with a small fire and didn't need help.

But soon, flames were shooting from an open deck on the rear of the ship and many of the 2,575 passengers were on the main deck, wearing orange life vests. Some passengers said they heard an announcement but no fire alarm.

"My wife opened the door and the smoke was so thick she couldn't even see," said Edmund Thomas of Buffalo, N.Y., who was on the four-day cruise with her and their three children. "She tried to get the life jackets but she couldn't. And me and my kids were without life jackets so that's what was scary."

A 10-member team from the National Transportation Safety Board was sent to investigate the blaze.

Robert Francis, NTSB vice chairman, told the "Today" show this morning that investigators hadn't been able to view the fire scene yet because of "hot spots" but planned to tour it later in the morning.

Asked if the fire did start in the laundry room as widely reported, Francis said it wasn't yet determined. "There are a lot of people saying that's where it started. There are chemicals in there, obviously heat, and soiled towels that lend themselves to flammability," he said.

While he said "we're obvious delighted there was no loss of life. ... part of what we'll do in addition to trying to find out how it started will be doing an evaluation of how the crew reacted and how the fire was dealt with."

About 60 people were injured in the fire, most of them suffering from smoke inhalation. At least 14 people were taken to four hospitals; four were admitted in stable condition, two seamen suffering from smoke inhalation and one seaman and one passenger suffering from chest pains. The other 10 people were treated and released.

"We don't know if we have anything left. We walked out in the hallway and saw the smoke. We had enough time to get dressed and we just made it," said Robert Bookstein of Washingtonville, N.Y.

The dramatic scene could be seen by condominium dwellers on their beachfront balconies and live on television. The 10-deck Carnival Cruise Lines ship, which also had more than 900 crew members, was bound for Key West and then Cozumel, Mexico.

Crews, aided by other boats spraying water at the stern, needed about three hours to extinguish the fire.

"It wasn't that noticeable at first," said Sumpter Flakes, 56, of Fort Lauderdale. "One of the other passengers said the ship was on fire and we still didn't believe it."

His brother, Robert Flakes, 62, of Tallahassee, said: "The fire was a lot more intense and widespread than we ever imagined while we were on the boat. They tried to keep us calm."

Other passengers expressed frustration with the crew. "There was total lack of information.

Health-care ID numbers, privacy eyed

CHICAGO (AP) — A government plan to assign every American a lifetime health-care ID number — much like a Social Security number — has raised fears that it will destroy privacy by giving insurance companies, employers and others access to people's medical records.

A 17-member government advisory panel opened the first of a series of hearings Monday on how to go about carrying out the plan.

The 1996 Health Insurance Portability and Accountability Act requires that everyone receive an "identifier" such as a number to streamline the electronic transfer of medical data.

President Clinton signed the politically popular bill into law in 1996 amid much celebration that it guarantees that anyone changing or losing a job can get health insurance, even with a pre-existing medical condition. A lesser-known provision contains the requirement that identifiers be developed.

The panel, the National Committee on Vital and Health Statistics, will advise the Health and Human Services Department on what kind of identifier to use. It doesn't have to be a number, although testimony suggested it probably will be.

Before testimony even began, one panel member made it clear that he thinks the whole idea is a bad one.

"Once everyone's required to use a government-issued health identification card, it may become impossible for any American citizen to walk down the street without being forced to produce that card on demand by a policeman," said Robert M. Gellman, an information policy consultant in Washington.

"You won't be able to use a credit card, cash a check, fly on an airplane, check into a hotel, go to school or enter or leave the United States without showing that card. You may not be able to use Viagra or even buy an aspirin without the federal government being notified."

Gellman was reminded by fellow panelist Dr. John R. Lumpkin, Illinois' public health director, that assignment of identifiers has been mandated by Congress.

It will be months before HHS comes up with the regulations on the identifier, and two years after that before employers have to start using it.

Several witnesses testified that not enough legal safeguards exist against misuse of the identifier. Current law provides up to $250,000 in fines and 10 years in prison for wrongful disclosure of medical information.

But one witness, Dr. Christopher G. Chute of the Mayo Clinic Foundation in Rochester, Minn., said a unique patient identifier — if properly set up — might actually reduce the risks to patient confidentiality in the present system.

"If fairly and intelligently implemented, electronic patient records using common identifiers might actually reduce risks to patient confidentiality relative to what exists today in our paper environment, which has no ability for audit or usage trail, as it's currently managed," he said.

Several standard-setting organizations have endorsed the idea of identifiers, including the American Nurses Association and the National Association for Prescription Drug Programs.

Keeping an eye on Texas

Kids can feel safe at school

Texas law is clear about the responsibilities of the state's schools to keep children safe while teaching them clear standards for their behavior. As parents are concerned about crime and violence in public schools, a new report, "Keeping Texas Children Safe in School," outlines the roles of teachers, principals and other district personnel. The report, published by the Texas School Performance Review* team, is available by calling toll-free 1-800-531-5441, extension 3-4900, or by writing P.O. Box 13528, Austin, TX 78711-3528, and on the Internet at: <http://www.window.state.tx.us/tpr/tspr/safe/childsafety.html>.

Guidelines for an effective school safety program

Prevention
1. Know your goals and objectives: where your district is going and what you want to accomplish.
2. Establish clear expectations for students, parents, teachers, and administrators.
3. Address warning signs before they turn into trouble.

Intervention
4. Look for trouble before it finds you.
5. Recognize trouble when you see it.
6. Have individuals in the right place and at the right time to intervene.
7. Have a plan of action appropriate for the occasion, and practice it.

Enforcement
8. Leave no room for double standards.
9. Ensure that discipline management extends inside and outside the classroom.
10. Alternative programs are not just a matter of compliance with the law; they are many children's last chance at success.

* The Texas School Performance Review was created by the Texas Legislature in 1990. In the past seven years, TSPR has offered more than 2,800 detailed ways to save taxpayers nearly $340 million in 28 public school districts throughout Texas.

House measure expands after-school, nutrition programs

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House has overwhelmingly passed legislation expanding after-school nutrition programs intended to keep children out of trouble and starting an elementary school breakfast program aimed at all students.

The initiatives, contained in a bill reauthorizing the Agriculture Department nutrition programs, was sent to the Senate on a 383-1 vote Monday. Only Rep. Ron Paul, R-Texas, voted no.

The measure would allow students through age 18 to receive a snack during an after-school program, which many educators believe helps prevent unsupervised teen-agers from committing crimes, using drugs and alcohol or having sex.

Previously, the nutrition program's cutoff age was 13, making it financially difficult for many schools to offer after-school services for older students that must include some kind of light food.

"We desperately need more after-school programs for adolescents," said Rep. Lynn Woolsey, D-Calif. "This is not Twinkies for teens."

The measure also lifts a restriction that prevented schools from participating in the after-school nutrition program unless it was in place in 1989. The bill authorizes $46 million in mandatory spending for the upcoming fiscal year.

For school breakfasts, the legislation authorizes a pilot program in which elementary schools in five states to be chosen later by the Agriculture Department will offer free breakfast to all students, regardless of their family income level.

Although most federal nutrition programs are aimed at the poor, supporters of universal school breakfasts say they are particularly needed by middle-class, two-job families where there often isn't time for an old-fashioned morning meal.

"They all need to start the day with a nutritious meal in order to be ready to learn," said Rep. Matthew Martinez, D-Calif.

That provision calls for $13 million over five years and includes an in-depth evaluation on whether breakfasts help students, but the money is not mandatory and thus subject to annual competition in Congress with other federal programs. The Senate version, which has yet to come to a floor vote, sets aside $20 million and makes the spending mandatory.

The bill also reauthorizes several USDA nutrition programs, including the Women, Infants and Children program that serves some 7.4 million needy women and children. GOP sponsors say the measure overall will save $69 million compared to current law.

Help for swallowing problems

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT: My 86-year-old husband has trouble swallowing. Regular food doesn't seem to go down as easily as liquids and pureed or soft foods.

A gastroenterologist performed upper endoscopy, found a narrow portion of the esophagus and dilated it with a balloon. However, the problem persists. What can we do?

DEAR READER: There are many causes for dysphagia (difficulty swallowing), ranging from strictures and cancer to ulcers and neurological impairment. From your brief description, it appears that the gastroenterologist discovered a physical blockage in your husband's esophagus, the muscular tube that connects the mouth to the stomach.

I am unclear about the nature of this obstruction. Many older patients develop strictures — areas of constricting scar formation in the esophagus — that can interfere with swallowing. However, growths, both malignant and benign, can also cause dysphagia.

The specialist chose to dilate the constricted area with a balloon. This may not have been enough. Your husband may actually need a repeat procedure, called bouginage, during which his esophagus is progressively stretched using firm instruments of increasing diameter. In addition, he may need a biopsy to make sure the tissues are healthy.

In my opinion, your husband should return to his gastroenterologist for further diagnosis and treatment. Let me know the results.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I'm a 48-year-old woman with heart palpitations for which my doctor prescribed atenolol. Now and then, I get a "sting" in my chest. My doctor says not to worry. Should I?

DEAR READER: Not necessarily. However, with the increasing realization that heart disease and angina are a potential threat to women (as well as men), many doctors would order a stress test to see if your chest discomfort has a cardiac origin.

Atenolol is a long-acting beta-blocker used to treat palpitations, hypertension and a variety of heart ailments. It is not the cause of your stinging sensation.

Check with your physician to determine the cause of your symptom.

Early voting on bond election to begin is, 'Superintendent, are you going to take any of that $20 million 450 thousand and for example pay teacher's salaries or give yourself a raise?' The answer is absolutely not."

Taxes to service the debt would be based on the value of a person's home based on a district valuation of $465 million.

The amounts varied from $36 additionally a year for 20 years on a $25,000 home to $309 a year on a $100,000 home.

"I know that is a lot of money, but I am also here to tell you that at some time in this community, that we as citizens of Snyder have got to be able to address the needs of buildings that have not been addressed in several years."

The closing of Central has been recommended because of the decline in elementary enrollment since 1989.

"At present we are losing about 100 elementary students a year. You cannot continue to maintain the same number of schools when you are losing that many students," Lomax said.

In what he termed as "dangling a carrot" Lomax said, "I don't want anyone to misunderstand me, I cannot promise you that facility funding is going to be coming to Snyder from the Texas Legislature. I can tell you that two years ago when the Legislature met, facility funds were given back to school districts that had passed bond issues."

Lomax said he had been in touch with State Rep. David Counts and Sen. Tom Haywood and both lawmakers have indicated they want this facility package adopted again.

"We won't know until January if facility funding will be available to the schools, but if the Legislature does another facility package, and I believe they will because the governor has a $3 billion surplus, 40 percent of this tax increase is going to be paid for by the state.

Lomax said two years ago districts didn't get that money unless they passed a bond issue.

"If a community passed a bond issue, then they were the ones given the additional funds. Now I realize that is dangling a carrot, and I am not promising that 40 percent of this is going to be paid for by the state, but if I had to bet today I would tell you there is going to be a facility package and Snyder is going to get some funds rebated to it, but to qualify we are going to have to pass a bond issue."

Pentagon reviews CNN, Time report

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Pentagon review has found no evidence to support allegations by CNN and Time magazine that U.S. troops used sarin nerve gas during a 1970 military operation in Laos designed to hunt down American defectors, Defense Secretary William Cohen said today.

The allegations were made during a report on "Operation Tailwind" broadcast by CNN on June 7, followed by a report published in Time magazine under the bylines of two CNN employees. But by early July, the network retracted the story.

County to receive money from tobacco settlement

State Rep. David Counts announced Monday that counties and hospital districts within House District 70 will receive more than a million dollars from a tobacco agreement reached over the weekend.

Scurry County will receive $329,096 designated toward indigent health care.

This money is part of Texas' multi-billion dollar settlement in a lawsuit directed at tobacco companies and the settlement designates the money go to the entity responsible for indigent health care, be it the county or a hospital district.

In addition to the initial lump sum payments, a permanent trust account will also be established and funded over a four-year period in the amount of approximately $1.8 billion. The income from this permanent fund will be distributed to the counties and hospital districts on a pro rata basis in proportion to their amount of unreimbursed health care expenditures for indigent health care.

"This trust fund will provide a large continuing source of revenue to help offset the cost of providing health care. This approach will guarantee that this settlement will provide lasting benefits for Texans," Counts said.

Legislative leaders met Saturday with the counsel for the counties and the hospital districts that intervened in the tobacco settlement, and Judge Jim Meyers, a court-appointed mediator. As a result of that meeting, an agreement was reached.

It includes the stipulation that the motion for sanctions against the governor and several legislators must be withdrawn before the agreement is finalized.

Chamber studies past events and schedules new activities

Summer activities keep chamber officials busy. Directors met Monday to plan several upcoming events and hear reports on this month's projects.

The Ritz Variety Show is set for this weekend. The September date for the Lorber opening will be announced later and the annual Scurry County Fair is set for Sept. 17-20 at the coliseum.

Executive director Donna Fowler said the White Buffalo Festival Committee met and have begun working on White Buffalo Day set for Oct. 3 around the square.

Oil Appreciation Day will kick off with a golf tournament at the Snyder Country Club on Oct. 16. That same day, Fowler said, women are invited to a tea at the Scurry County Museum on the WTC campus.

In addition to a performance at The Ritz, Room A of the coliseum will also be open to view more displays of the early days in the oil fields. She said a 6 p.m. banquet is being planned for Oct. 17 at the coliseum with S.B. Price, vice president of Chevron, as guest speaker. A slide presentation along with a display of pictures from individuals will be among memorabilia from the Permian Basin Museum and Scurry County Museum.

Following approval of minutes and the financial statements, the board welcomed Snyder Multi-Specialty Clinic, Laura Jones and CADA as new members.

Fowler said the Western Swing Festival was successful and was a "break even" project and with pledges in donations for the July 4 fireworks, it should also break even. The contract was renewed for next year's Western Swing to be held the third week of June.

The Snyder Beautification Committee and the Snyder Garden Club presented the chamber with the Most Improved Business Yard of the Month. Fowler said work on the landscaping is continuing and the board approved estimates for several items including a sprinkler system, grass and other necessities. Fowler said the poles used in landscaping were donated by Midwest Electric.

Also, the board granted permission for Fowler to take bids for repairing four billboards.

Others attending the meeting were Jeffrey Martin, Trent Driggers, Rod Waller, C.R. Perez, Paula McWilliams, Elois Pruitt and Keith Hackfeld.
