Deaver Announces Commissioner Prec. 1

News is authorized to announce E. L. Deaver, of Wilson, candidate for commissioner, precinct No. 1, Lynn county. We are not personally acquainted with Mr. Deaver, but we are sure that if elected he will look after the affairs of the county, and in a manner that is highly pleasing to all concerned. When you cast your vote in the primaries, we ask that you consider the candidacy of Deaver for the above office.

Portwood Opens Grocery Store in Tahoka

Attention is called to the opening of M. H. Portwood's new grocery store on Westwood street. Mr. Portwood recently purchased a wagon and feed yard from Jones and will operate the store in connection with the same.

Considerable improvements are being made about the store and provisions are being taken care of tourists who spend overnight in the city. Mr. Portwood will have electric lights installed throughout the store and will be one of the best equipped camping sites to be had in the west.

The Tahoka Chamber of Commerce recently contracted with Portwood to take care of the tourists who come this route, to them free water, lights and other during their stay here. There have been a number of tourists received this accommodation already, and it speaks well for Tahoka to be able to furnish them with these accommodations. The Automobile Red Book Texas informs the traveling public that free camping grounds to be had in Tahoka.

John Anthony brother of H. Anthony, is a guest of the family this week. Mr. Anthony has his home in Kaufman, Texas.

C. Hart and family returned the first of the week from an island trip to Spur and other points in that section.

Tahoka Needs Volunteer Fire Department

The News has been requested by several enterprising citizens to mention the matter of the importance of organizing a volunteer fire department for Tahoka. This, in our opinion would be a splendid move, and something that should be attended to at once. Now that the city has the necessary equipment and an abundance of water, it should not require much effort to enter into an organization of this kind. Let's get ready, today.

W. B. Jones, manager of the Jones Dry Goods establishment in Tahoka, is in St. Louis this week for the purpose of buying a large supply of goods for the local store. Mr. Jones departed Saturday via Abilene, where he joined the managers of the various Jones Dry Goods stores, who went to the St. Louis market in a body.

O'Donnell Citizens Will Hold School Bond Election

According to information received the first of the week, the little city of O'Donnell will hold an election within the next twenty days to determine whether or not bonds shall be voted in the amount of $22,500.00 for the purpose of erecting a modern brick school building.

The present quarters are inadequate, according to statements made by citizens residing in O'Donnell.

A corps of eight teachers will be necessary next year to successfully handle the pupils in attendance in that town.

It is predicted that the bond election will carry by a large majority.

BORN—to Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Balch, January 13th inst., a boy.

Mr. and Mrs. Lonnie Blankenship, of Plains, were here yesterday greeting old acquaintances.

Messrs. Percy Williams and Will Duncan, and Misses Willie Davidson and Bertha Cowan motored to Lamesa Wednesday evening and attended the Roy E. Fox Popular players showing at the Majestic Theatre.

How to Keep Our Commercial Club Alive

To keep the Commercial organization alive to its best work, every member must be so filled with enthusiasm for the development of his town, so imbued with civic pride and so educated to realize the importance and opportunity presented through the cooperative efforts of all that he can't resist the call of opportunity. To generate such enthusiasm, to create such civic pride, to consummate such education, these are some of the big questions.

In the first place however there is always a nucleus with which to start. Every town has its "live wires," men and women, who have all reached the point where they value co-operation. It is upon these that at first primarily must devolve the responsibility of propagating the gospel of civic endeavor. They must be the first leaders and through their combined and persuasive efforts others must be added to their rank. There are four kinds of cooperation needed—moral, intellectual, financial and physical. These all must be present if the organization is to keep itself alive to its best work. Men must give of their money, they must morally support the organization; they must give to the organization their best thought and counsel and finally, they must be ready and willing to give their time and physical work to the organization.

Therefore it is vitally necessary to keep the members informed of what is being done. We advocate at least four general membership meetings during the year. We also advocate weekly or monthly luncheons. Every member should be made to feel that he is a component part of the organization; that there is the same responsibility resting upon him for the success of the organization as there is for everyone else.

THE SOCIAL SIDE

Sociology is in many ways a bigger factor in life than business. It antedates business. Its development and expansion create business. Therefore the social side of the organization should not be forgotten. One idea of the Luncheon Club is the social idea. It is a good plan to occasionally have big social meetings. This is especially the case in some of the smaller towns. Such things as membership picnics where the members bring their wives, families, etc., are good things. People will not work together successfully unless they know each other. Every Chamber of Commerce ought to have once a year some big social gathering. Jealousy disappears when people really begin to know each other and people are after all very much alike. They like to feel that they are a factor in development, etc. The Secretary of the Commercial organization, no matter how good he may be can't do all the work of the organization. He must that workers. He can be and ought to be the vital factor in the progress of the organization but he can't do it all. His work should not be handicapped by a constant scramble after sufficient funds and by a lack of interest on the part of the members.

Respectfully,
PORTER A. WHALEY, Manager.

C. of C. Receives Automobile Red Book

The Tahoka Chamber of Commerce is in receipt of a large number of the Automobile Red Book, published by the Automobile Red Book Co. of covering Texas, Southern Oklahoma, Eastern New Mexico, Western Louisiana, Old Mexico and Southern Colorado.

The city of Tahoka is well advertised in this book through the local chamber of commerce and every member of the local body is entitled to receive a copy. Any member can obtain one by calling on the president, S. B. Hatchett, at the First National Bank. The following information about Tahoka and Lynn county is contained in the book, and we publish same for the benefit of those who will not likely see the Red Book:

TAHOKA

Tahoka is at the crossing of the Pudget Sound to Gulf and Dixie Overland Highway, 30 miles south of Lubbock, 30 miles north of Lamesa, 28 miles west of Post, 28 miles east of Brownfield, where the tourists will find free camping grounds, lights, water and other convenience.

Make it a point to come via Tahoka.

Tahoka has one of the best equipped picture shows on the plains, one of the best light and water systems in West Texas, two banks, first class newspaper, five garages, two hotels, three cafes, one confectionery, three cotton gins, nine filling stations, nine grocery stores, two bakeries, one elevator, two meat markets, four general Mercantile establishments, two grain stores, one exclusive dry goods stores and two feed stores. One of the finest court houses in the western section of the state greets the eye of the visitor as he reaches Tahoka, costing $100,000.00. Tahoka is 100 per cent American—white. Not a negro in the county.

Tahoka bids you welcome. Come and stay with us as long as you wish the longer the better. You will find the people of Tahoka hospitable and they will welcome you with open arms.

Lynn county, of which Tahoka is the county seat, has one of the greatest potash deposits in the entire United States. We are also organizing a company to drill a deep test for oil. Our Company has now obtained practically all the lease necessary to start drilling. We are also developing one of the greatest agricultural districts in the entire Southwest. Wheat, corn, cotton, milo maize and all the sorghum crops growing very successfully here. All kinds of fruit, including apples, plums, peaches, pears, cherries, grapes and all kinds of berries do well here. Our rainfall being sufficient to raise all of the above crops and many others without irrigation.

Our live stock industry is one of the most important of our assets. This being the home of many thoroughbred Hereford herds and fine Poland China and Duroc Jersey hogs. Some of the best bred horses and mules in the entire country will be found among our farmers and stockmen here. So if you are not satisfied with your present locality, or just an investment, you cannot do better than stop over at Tahoka and look over our natural resources over. Our growth, 1900, 17 people; 1910, 1,713; 1920, 4751.

This county has now built and is building about 300 miles of first class graded roads which will insure the tourists easy going through this section. Our roads are passable 365 days in the year are all roads lead to Tahoka, so head your this way.

A. M. Sullivan for Public Weigher

In the proper column will be found the announcement of A. M. Sullivan, of this city, for Public Weigher, precinct No. 1, Tahoka. Mr. Sullivan has made his home with his family in Tahoka a number of years, and is well and favorably known by a majority of the voters. He states that he will appreciate the support of the male and female voters in making the race for this office, and if elected will give his entire attention to the duties of the position.

Mr. Sullivan will attempt to see every qualified voter before the primary election, July 22, 1922.

In making your selection for public weigher in Tahoka kindly consider the qualifications of Mr. Sullivan for the office.

Livestock-Poultry-Dairy Meeting Here Saturday

Farmers and business men of Lynn county should not fail to attend the joint livestock-poultry-dairy meeting to be held in Tahoka tomorrow (Saturday), January 28, 1922.

The meeting will be held at the court house at 2:00 o'clock in the afternoon, and it is expected that a large crowd will take advantage of the occasion of hear these experts speak along the above lines.

These speakers are sent out by the West Texas Chamber of Commerce and Lynn county people will have the opportunity of hearing the speakers by reason of the fact that the Tahoka Chamber of Commerce is affiliated with the West Texas Chamber of Commerce.

Let the farmers and business men come out tomorrow and give the speakers a full house.

Fifth Sunday Meeting Began Here Last Evening

The Fifth Sunday Meeting of the Browfield Baptist Association, began in Tahoka last evening at the First Baptist church. A large crowd of delegates from the various towns over the Association are expected today and tomorrow to be in attendance at the sessions held twice daily. The meeting will last until Sunday.

J. K. Nowlin Enters Race For Commissioner

The News is pleased to place in the announcement column of this issue the name of J. K. Nowlin, who enters the race for County Commissioner, Precinct No. 2.

Mr. Nowlin has resided in the county 5 years, and on the same place during this period of time. He is a man that fully understands the needs of the county and is well qualified to fill the office which he seeks at the hands of the voters of this precinct. He states that if elected will serve the people as commissioner to the best of his ability. Mr. Nowlin states that he is a firm believer in the equal distribution of the road and bridge funds over the county.

When you go to the polls on July 22nd., remember to consider the candidacy of Mr. Nowlin for commissioner, Precinct No. 2.

Ed Henderson, a former citizen of Lynn county, is spending the week here visiting with relatives and friends, enroute from his home in Los Angeles, Cal., to Dallas, Texas, on a business trip.

E. L. Howard has sold his theatre at Lamesa. Charley Howard and wife, who have had charge of the show, are moving from Lamesa to Plainview this week.

BORN—to Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Simpson, January 20th inst., a girl.

WILSON DISMISSES 19 LIQUOR CASES

SEARCH WARRANTS MUST BE BASED ON DEFINITE INFOR-MATION—NO HEARSAY.

HOME SANCTITY IS UPHOLD

District Attorney Says Officers Will Now Have to Get First-Hand
Information.

Dallas.—United States District Judge James C. Wilson ruled in court at Dallas Thursday that no private home can be searched for liquor on hearsay testimony, and that this can be done only under search warrants based upon substantial evidence.

The Judge said that it is a matter of the Constitution and Congress that a man has a right to feel sure of the sanctity of his home and of the privacy of his home and of the security in his home against unlawful searches and seizures of all kinds.

According to Judge Wilson's ruling, search warrants in this district must be sworn out on definite evidence. Information must be backed by a sworn statement from the informer, or first-hand information upon the part of the Federal officer swearing out the search warrant.

As a result nineteen indictments returned last week by the Federal grand jury were dismissed, although four of these were old cases in which no search warrant had been issued, according to District Attorney Zweifel.

Judge Wilson stated that a man can not be arrested for the possession of a still unless it is proven that he actually intends to use the still for illicit purposes.

"The law requires that the facts be presented, and that they appear before the Commissioner personally making the complaint, and that they either in an affidavit or in a deposition, and all in writing, state the facts until they have stated sufficient facts for the Commissioner—not the officer seeking it—but for the Commissioner to then judicially reach the conclusion that the fact upon which the warrant is to issue has been established, or that probable cause for the issuance of it under some phase of the statute has been shown to his satisfaction.

"And then and not until then, and until all of those things are recorded, together with the names of the parties reporting these facts, is the Commissioner authorized to issue that search warrant."

Federal District Attorney Zweifel stated in open court that he agrees with Judge Wilson in his ruling.

Mr. Zweifel said Thursday night: "This does not mean that the lines will be loosened one bit in the matter of liquor arrests or prosecutions.

"It is merely a technical point of law that was construed. It gives the District Attorney a surer case to work upon, and means that a lot of irrelevant, hearsay cases will not clutter up the courts in the future.

"We are still warring on the bootleggers, and Judge Wilson's decision has only made our lines the tighter, for it has made the Federal prohibition agents get out of their offices and actually get first-hand evidence before they make their arrests. There is no more hearsay about the matter."

BERLIN MUST PAY ITS DEBT TO FRANCE IN FULL

Adherence To Treaty Is Demanded
Of Germany In Chamber Speech.

Paris.—Raymond Poincare, President of the Republic during the war and now Premier of France, with the French Chamber practically unanimous behind him has served notice on Germany that so long as he held office in conducting the destinies of his country Germany must fulfill the obligations she entered upon at Versailles, and may expect no leniency.

"The Versailles treaty binds us to our allies," he said, "but it binds Germany to us all. It must be carried out."

Never since the Germans threatened Chateau-Thierry, when Clemenceau appeared before the Chamber of Deputies to tell France that the war was not yet lost, and there was still hope of victory, has a French Premier received such an ovation as greeted M. Poincare when he presented before the Deputies the ministerial declaration.

He pleaded for national union, and, except for the Socialists and Communists, the French Parliament was as solid behind its Government today as when the Germans crossed the frontier in 1914.

Twyman Indicted In Thames Case.

Gatesville, Texas.—The grand jury of Coryell County, which has been investigating the death of Dell Thames at the State Juvenile Training School for Delinquents on Sept. 25, 1921, has returned an indictment against H. G. Twyman, former military instructor at the school, charging Twyman with murder in connection with the killing of the boy "by choking him to death with his hands." District Attorney Edson refused to agree to bail for the defendant.

Buy a 35-cent bottle of "Danderine." One application ends all dandruff, stops itching and falling hair, and, in a few moments, you have doubled the beauty of your hair. It will appear a mass, so soft, lustrous, and easy to do up. But what will please you most will be after a few weeks use, when you see new hair—fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair growing all over the scalp. "Danderine" is to the hair what fresh showers of rain and sunshine are to vegetation. It goes right to the roots, invigorates and strengthens them. This delightful, stimulating tonic helps thin, lifeless, faded hair to grow long, thick, heavy and luxuriant.—Advertisement.

Maid Enjoyed the Party.

A prominent New York first-nighter and boulevardier recently gave a party at his luxurious apartment. These members of the unfair sex present being the very choicest chorines from a half-dozen Broadway musical shows, who came in their limousines. One girl had her mulatto maid along. That maid, quite as pretty as her mistress, freely mingled with the guests, and the amazing audacity of it silenced comment. When the affair broke up the mulatto maid stepped up to the man who had given the party and remarked:

"Allow me to congratulate you—in deed, you are a perfect host."—Philadelphia Public Ledger.

Sea Babies.

More babies were born at sea during last year than at any period since records have been kept. The official figures show that in British ships alone 276 babies were born on the ocean. Sixty-eight babies were born at sea in ships "to and from England and Wales" in 1918, and 151 in 1919. Babies born at sea are usually very lucky, as the inevitable collection among the passengers usually reaches $500, and very often more. Most of the babies are born in the third-class accommodation.

"How Funny Your Ears

Most of us remember the story of Little Red Riding Hood and how when she went to visit her sick grandmother, she found a savage wolf dressed up like her grandmother and in her grandmother's bed—but Little Red Riding Hood was wise and the wolf didn't catch her.

It's hard to fool the people of the Southwest. In fact, it can't be done. But imitators still exist and just as the wolf tried to fool the little girl into thinking he was some one else, imitators in food products now and then try to make folks think they have something "just as good."

May the Great Lord bless each of them individually and may his blessings rest on the church collectively and may this same spirit be shown in all the services.

Wilson (Bull) Anderson Gets Married Here Tuesday

Wilson (Bull) Anderson, local negro shine at the Sanitary Barber Shop, made a hurried trip to Slaton on Tuesday of this week, where he met his bride, Miss Clyde Robinson, of Ennis, Texas, whereupon they returned to Tahoka, and after being presented with a marriage license by a prominent local citizen, the couple were immediately united in the holy bonds of matrimony, Justice of the Peace I. P. Metcalf, in his usual solemn and impressive manner, performed the ceremony at the court house in the presence of more than one hundred local citizens.

Permanent prosperity can be brought to the South Plains quicker and in a greater degree by the use of the cow, the sow and the hen on the farms than by any other agencies. Dairy products, poultry and eggs and hogs are "cash crops." They can always be sold and keep streaming into our country a steady flow of real cash. They make for a better living at home and more money with which to buy the things we need—Plain-view Herald.

Was Very Weak

"After the birth of my baby I had a back-set," writes Mrs. Mattie Crosswhite, of Glade Spring, Va. "I was very ill; thought I was going to die. I was so weak I couldn't raise my head to get a drink of water. I took . . . medicine, yet I didn't get any better. I was constipated and very weak, getting worse and worse. I sent for Cardui."

CARDUI

The Woman's Tonic

"I found after one bottle of Cardui I was improving," adds Mrs. Crosswhite. "Six bottles of Cardui and . . . I was cured, yes, I can say they were a God-send to me. I believe I would have died, had it not been for Cardui." Cardui has been found beneficial in many thousands of other cases of womanly troubles. If you feel the need of a good, strengthening tonic, why not try Cardui? It may be just what you need.

HAD TO FALL BACK ON LUNCH Seemed the Only Thing Left to Which Host Could Invite His Artistic Friends.

GOOD TIME TO BE NEUTRAL Domestic Disarmament Conference an Excellent Thing to Avoid, as Matter of Principle.

Mr. Heming tells an amusing little incident to disprove the general belief that artists are temperamental, dissipated creatures who thrive on the white lights. In the ancient days before prohibition Mr. Heming was in New York to invite American artists to exhibit in the Canadian national exhibit in Toronto. Gardner Symons, the well-known American artist, invited Heming and Frederick Waugh, another leading artist, to dinner at the National Arts club. "Let's go down and have a cocktail before lunch," said Symons. "I never take anything," said Heming. "Neither do I," said Waugh. Symons laughed. "That's funny," he said. "Neither do I, but anyway we'll have some cigars." "I don't smoke," said Waugh. "And I don't smoke," said Heming. "Well, this is a great joke," said Symons. "I don't smoke, either, but I thought you fellows would at least take a cigar. Say, you eat, don't you?—because I've ordered lunch."

Tied Up. Knicker—"Smith says all he is he owes to his wife." Bocker—"Another of those frozen credits."

Will your "Good Morning" last all day?

Easy to start from the breakfast table with zest and enthusiasm, but how easy is it to keep on? Does ambition last, or lag, as the day develops?

The afternoon "slump" is a factor to be counted upon, in business or social life.

Usually, there's a reason.

Nerves whipped by tea or coffee won't keep on running, and they won't stand constant whipping.

Many a man or woman who has wished the afternoon would be as bright as the morning has simply been wishing that the nerves wouldn't have to pay the natural penalty for being whipped with the caffeine drug.

Postum gives a breakfast cup of comfort and cheer, without any penalties afterward. There's no "letting down" from Postum—no midday drowsiness to make up for midnight wakefulness; no headaches; no nervous indigestion; no increase of blood pressure.

Think it over. There's full satisfaction in Postum—a cup of comfort for anybody (the children included), any time.

You can get Postum from your grocer or your waiter today, and probably you'll begin to have better tomorrows, as so many thousands have had, who have made the change from coffee to Postum.

Postum comes in two forms: Instant Postum (in tins) made instantly in the cup by the addition of boiling water. Postum Cereal (in packages of larger bulk, for those who prefer to make the drink while the meal is being prepared) made by boiling for 20 minutes. Sold by all grocers.

LESSON FOR JANUARY 29

ELIJAH IN NABOTH'S VINEYARD

LESSON TEXT.—I Kings 21:1-25.
GOLDEN TEXT.—Be sure your sin will find you out.—Num. 32:23.
REFERENCE MATERIAL.—Lev. 25:1-28; Amos 4:1-5; James 1:14.
PRIMARY TOPIC.—The Sin of Selfishness.
JUNIOR TOPIC.—Elijah Denounces a Selfish King.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC.—Jehovah's Champion Fares.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC.—Respecting the Rights of Others.

1. Ahab Covets Naboth's Vineyard (vv. 1-6).
1. Location of the vineyard (v. 1). It joined Ahab's summer home in Jezreel. He wanted to transform it into an herb garden and thus round out his property.
2. Ahab's proposal (v. 2). He offered to buy it outright for money, or give in exchange a better one. Ahab's wish for it was a selfish whim. He did not at all need it.
3. Naboth's refusal (v. 3). It was for a twofold reason: (1) regard for the paternal estate; (2) obedience to God's law (Lev. 25:23-28, cf. Num. 36:7-9). His refusal was on conscientious grounds. A king, even, has no right to ask of his subject that he violate his conscience.
4. Ahab's behavior (v. 4). He came into his house, lay down upon his bed and refused to eat. The king was sulking like a spoiled child. This is a picture of what a fool even a king may make of himself. Let us learn that "godliness with contentment is great gain" (1 Tim. 6:6).
5. Jezebel's inquiry (vv. 5, 6). Apparently she came with the sympathy of a wife, inquiring as to the cause of his behavior. But when she knew of Naboth's refusal she was violently angry. That a humble subject should refuse to conform to the desire of the king was an insult which she would not brook.

II. Ahab Taking Possession of Naboth's Vineyard (vv. 7-15).
(1) Her contemptuous question (v. 7). She taunted him for his cowardice. The fear of being thought weak moves a weak man quickly. (2) Her exhortation to Ahab (v. 7). "Arise, eat bread, and let thine heart be merry." A wife has great influence over her husband. Many a man has been saved from discouragement and therefore defeat, through his wife's influence. Unfortunately in this case the influence of the wife is bad. (3) Her promise to Ahab (v. 7). "I will give thee the vineyard of Naboth." She took matters into her own hands. If Ahab was too weak to be king, she would rule for him. (4) Her wicked scheme (vv. 8-15). She wrote letters in Ahab's name, sealed them with his seal and sent them to the elders and nobles who were dwelling in the city with Naboth, asking them to proclaim a fast, as though some great calamity had befallen the nation, and place Naboth before the public as the one who was the cause of it all. They were instructed to find two false witnesses who would testify against Naboth. The charge they brought according to the wicked device of Jezebel was blasphemy against God and the king. Naboth's only offense was his refusal to sell his estate, contrary to the law of God. When they had stoned to death Naboth and his sons (II Kings 9:26), they came and told Jezebel, who in turn came to Ahab with the information and directed him to take possession of the vineyard.

2. Ahab goes to Jezreel to take possession of Naboth's vineyard (v. 16). Ahab had not killed Naboth, but he eagerly accepted the prize without inquiring as to how it was secured.

III. Elijah in Naboth's Vineyard Announcing Doom Upon Ahab (vv. 17-25).
1. Doom upon Ahab (vv. 17-22). Elijah told him the dogs should lick his blood in the place where they licked the blood of Naboth. Evil was to fall upon Ahab and his posterity, even wipe out his seed and name. He was guilty of conspiracy, murder, robbery, perjury, blasphemy, though he had been silent and inactive. God held him responsible for Jezebel's acts, for he was king and head of the nation. The day of reckoning did come to Ahab (I Kings 22:38).
2. Doom upon Jezebel (vv. 23-26). She likewise should be eaten by dogs by the wall of Jezreel. This was literally fulfilled (II Kings 9:33-37). "Be sure your sin will find you out."
IV. Ahab's Repentance (vv. 27-29). Because of this, God promised to withhold judgment during his lifetime.

Death of Abraham.
And these are the days of the years of Abraham's life which he lived, an hundred threescore and fifteen years. Then Abraham gave up the ghost, and died in a good old age, an old man, and full of years; and was gathered to his people.—Genesis 25:7-8.

The Murmuring Congregation.
And the Lord spoke unto Moses and unto Aaron, saying, How long shall I bear with this evil congregation, which murmur against me?—Numbers 14:26-27.

THE GIRL, A HORSE AND A DOG

By FRANCIS LYNDE

Copyright by Charles Scribner's Sons

TANNIE, OLD BOY, THERE'S YOUR FORTUNE!

Your portion of Grandfather Jasper's property was worth, at its valuation, something like $440,000. It lies in a perfectly safe repository, situated between 105th and 110th degrees of longitude from Greenwich, and the 35th and 40th degrees north latitude. When you find it, you will be able to identify it by the presence of a girl with brown hair and blue eyes and small mole on her forehead, a prebald horse which the girl rides, and a dog with a face half black and half white. You will be more than likely to find the three together; and if you make the acquaintance of the girl, you'll be on the trail of your legacy."

There's that! Stanford Broughton is an attractive young society man, relying on the fortune his grandfather is going to leave him. He will give all the tangible property to Stanford's cousin, Percy. Percy writes Stannie, as in the foregoing, sagely adding, "All you got to do is to go to work and find it."

Stannie, shocked into reliance on his own resources, sets out to find the dog and the horse. Next he finds the girl. And then he finds the "perfectly safe repository" is a drowned-out gold mine was flooded and shut down, but as soon as Stannie gets working around it he finds that other people want it, just the way he does. He wants it bad enough to try to kill Stannie and his father, caretaker of the mine, in order to get possession. Dynamite, sulphur fumes—everything goes. Stannie gets his up and turns out to be a regular fellow. And as for the girl—worth a dozen gold mines.

Francis Lynde wrote this thoroughly good story. He long ago himself famous by his railroad stories. Dollars to doughnuts he's of this mining story!

CHAPTER I.

use every one has had the experience of waking in the middle of the night and finding everything perfectly quiet and normal, and yet with an impression persisting that there has been a tremendous crash of some kind, or that something has happened just before the waking. It is a feeling which is not always as clear as the feeling of having been alive enough to realize it. Some such razing jolt as this has given me on the morning of the day when I was called in, with the other members of the family, to listen to the will of my grandfather's will.

What's the difference, however, to give some sense and assume the conditions precedent, as it were, to the will, would say. My father—good, kind, comfort-loving Dad!—owned what Grandfather Dudding had called "the money."

As an architect high in his profession and with fine artistic feeling, he was a liberal income—and spent it; much of it that there was barely left after his death to provide mother and sister, and to keep, as you might say, in an extremely modest manner. Without means, I may as well confess, that I had never acquired the habit. I was always "going to," and so was fatally easy to keep on the edge of the churning plunge. I supposed had been ready on at least half a dozen occasions to take a dive into the pool with a salary attachment; and I was sure my good friend would say, "Oh, come on, Stannie, we're lacking just one more thing to make up the bunch. Don't be a Time enough to settle down you have to," and then it would be off.

And, you see, there was always Grandfather Jasper in the background, and money—lashings of it, so to speak—and it had been a family tradition for years that he intended splitting the bulk of it, fifty-fifty, between my cousin Percy and me. Before we go any farther, let me say that Cousin Percy was—

is—all the seventeen different kinds of things that I am not, and which I wished to be; smooth, neat, well-dressed, a "grind" in college and in the "real deal" with the girls, ambitious as the very devil, and measured his friends by the amount of "pull" he might be able to exert in his behalf; there you have him from the inside of his well-brushed little head and his patent-leather pumps.

You're a fright, Stannie," he would say in his carefully polished diplomatic manner—he had a billet in the Department of State at Washington, was in training for the legation here abroad—"you are a perfect fright. Three whole years out of college, and you haven't done a single thing useful yet. When are you going to begin? And, incidentally, how long are you going to keep waiting?"

Oh, Lord!—right there was another point to agree—Lisette and I—some months or so in advance of Grandfather Jasper's death, and we were in perfectly well assured, and had shared each other a dozen times, that income from Dad's estate wasn't more than half big enough to marry.

You see, it was this way: Lisette is one of a family of four girls in a fairly comfortable household, and there isn't anything to lean on on that side of the fence. Though, of course, we never discussed it brutally in so many words, we were waiting for that fifty-fifty look-in at the will which family tradition declared had already been drawn up, signed, sealed, witnessed and put away in cold storage; otherwise in the safe-keeping of Grandfather Jasper's family lawyer.

All of which may serve to bring as back to that nightmare effect registered at the start. When the Dudley will was taken out of the icebox and read to the assembled members of the family, there were at least two shocking surprises. Jasper hadn't been anywhere near as rich as we had all been thinking he was; that his modest manner of living had been, perhaps, as much a matter of necessity as of choice. Bad investments—of which the family had never heard so much as a whisper—had cut his fortune down to something less than half a million, all told. That was shock Number One; and shock Number Two was strictly personal to me: Grandfather Jasper had left me his love and best wishes, and had willed the money and property—all of it, mind you—to Cousin Percy, giving as his reason that he thought Percy would make better use of it.

Of course, I had everybody's sympathy and condolence—even Percy's, for that matter. My mother wept; and, as I recall it, Lisette managed to compass a tear or so when I told her what had happened; or rather what had so ignominiously failed to happen.

"Whatever will you do?" she faltered. "I suppose you will really have to go to work now, won't you, Stannie?"

"Perish the thought!" I told her; then I gave the good reasons why there was no hope for us in that direction. "A fat chance I'd have to earn any real money. I can navigate a yacht—a little—drive a motor, ride a polo pony, and play a fair hand at bridge and the other great American game. I think these are the sum total of my shining accomplishments. You needn't return the ring," I grinned, seeing that she was looking at it rather regretfully. "You can wear it on some other finger, you know."

"Yes; I suppose I could do that," she agreed; and I'm blest if she didn't shift it to a finger of the other hand right there and then!

It was less than a week after this little fade-out scene with Lisette that Percy's letter came. This is what it said:

"Dear Stannie: I know just about how you felt last week when you heard Grandfather Jasper's will read, and it isn't going to make you feel any better now when I tell you that I knew of its provisions more than a year ago. When the will was drawn, grandfather showed it to me, and gave me a sealed envelope, which I was to open after his death. That envelope, as I knew at the time, contained, among other things, a codicil to the will. By its provisions you are to receive a legacy under certain conditions which were to be revealed to you at such time as I might think best."

"Your portion of Grandfather Jasper's property was worth, at its latest valuation something like $440,000. It lies in a perfectly safe repository, situated between the 105th and 110th degrees of longitude west from Greenwich, and the 35th and 40th degrees north latitude. When you find it, you will be able to identify it by the presence of a girl with brown hair and blue eyes and small mole on her left shoulder, a prebald horse which the girl rides, and a dog with a split face—half black and half white. You will be more than likely to find the three together; and if you make the acquaintance of the girl, you'll be on the trail of your legacy."

"So there you are, Stannie, old boy; there's your fortune. All you've got to do is to go to work and find it. Perhaps by that time you will have acquired the working habit—which is what Grandfather Jasper hoped might prove to be the case."

"Wishing you great joy in your search, I am,

"Your affectionate cousin,

"PERCY."

Naturally, I had a quiet little laugh over this screed of Percy's, taking it for a joke; a poor joke and in rather bad taste, I thought. In that mood I handed the letter to Lisette for her to read. She didn't laugh, but she did look a bit scornful and put about, "If you know what I mean."

"I don't suppose the blue-eyed girl would appeal to you," she said, "though the horse and the dog might. When do you start?"

We discovered that Meridian 105 west of Greenwich split the state of Colorado just beyond Denver, Colorado Springs and Pueblo, and the hunting-ground plotted out for me took in three-fourths of the remainder of the state, a slice of Utah, a good bit bigger slice of New Mexico, with a bite out of the northeastern corner of Arizona. Just for good measure.

"Me for the wild and woolly!" I brayed. "Don't you see me rigged out in a nice, hairy pair of 'shaps' and riding hell-bent-for-leather—I believe that's the phrase—over the snow-capped peaks or the boundless prairies, as the case may be? But just imagine Percy the immaculate pulling a bone-head joke like this!"

"You are taking it for a joke?" she questioned.

"Sure I am; and it's a rather rotten one at that. I should say—considering the source."

"Then you won't go to look for the blue-eyed girl with nut-brown hair and the cunning little mole? Think of what you may be missing!"

For just one crazy minute I had a hunch, or a premonition, or whatever you like to call it, that the letter might not be a joke. Grandfather Jasper had always been a bit eccentric—a rich man's privilege and a rich old man's incontestable right. What if he had actually done this thing to me—a thing scarcely less devastating than cutting me off without a penny? On the spur of the moment I said:

"If I should go, would you wait for me, Lisette?"

She took her time about answering—a good and sufficient plenty of it.

"I think perhaps I'd better not change the ring back, Stannie," she said, sort of wistfully. "If there is any money and you should happen to find it, you would probably find it all away before you could get back to Boston. Besides, there is the blue-eyed girl; if she should bring you a fortune, you'd have to marry her, wouldn't you? You are big and strong, and—well—er—nice in a good many ways, Stannie, and much too good-looking for your own good; but when you marry—if you do marry—you'd better be sure that the girl has money enough to buy her own hats. I haven't enough, as you know."

"I know only too well that the love-in-a-cottage idea has never appealed to you," I said, with the regretful stop pulled all the way out in deference to the sentimental deities.

"Not in the least, Stannie, dear; not in the slightest least."

This appeared to be the end of our rather lukewarm love-dream, and to be really honest and aboveboard about it, I am obliged to confess that it didn't break as many bones for me as I suppose it should have. Anyway, a half-hour or so after I had said good-bye to Lisette I met Jack Downing; and when he asked me if I didn't want to go with him and a bunch of the fellows for a little spin down the coast

Further along we met in the smoking room, at a time when the stuffy little den had no other occupants. Mr. Composite Section's only cigar turned out to have a broken wrapper, so I naturally tendered my own pocket-case. That served to break the ice and we talked, dribbling along from one commonplace to another until finally Brown-beard said:

"You don't by any chance happen to be a mining engineer, do you?"

"Far be it from me," I laughed; "nothing so useful as that."

"I didn't know," he hastened to say, half apologetically. "I saw you studying maps as we came along."

Now, ordinarily I'm apt to talk a lot too much about my own affairs—I'll admit it; but this was one time when I had a sort of hunch not to. So I merely said:

"I saw you doing the same thing."

"Sure you did," he admitted cheerfully. Then he told me his name—which I got as Bullock, or Bulletin, or something like that—and said he was a mining engineer, which was the reason why he had asked me if I wasn't one.

Fast that, the talk ran mostly upon his profession, and since the mysterious hunch was still nudging me, I let him have the floor, so to speak, figuring chiefly myself as a good listener.

"Yes; we do run across some rather queer propositions in our trade," he said, after he had given me some sort of an idea of what a mining engineer's job is like. "In my own experience, for example, the only sure shot I have ever had—or possibly ever will have—got away from me."

"Was up to me to bite, and, of course, I did it."

"How was that?"

"The man died," he replied laconically.

nor'easter blowing and the sea getting up to give me the time of my young life to hold the Guinevere to her course, nor nor'east, half a point east, as we lifted the Shoals on our port bow.

In such jolly good company as we had aboard the stout ship Guinevere, three full days elapsed before a thought of Percy or his joke ever entered my head again; and it's a ten-to-one shot that I wouldn't have thought of him, or it, during the remainder of the cruise if we hadn't been obliged to tie up at Rockland for motor repairs. This, as I recall it, was on the fourth day, and it was a dog that made me remember; a mongrel cur that followed the motor repairman down to the wharf; a most disreputable looking mongrel, at that, but—by Jove! he had the magic markings! Half of his face, measuring from a line drawn straight down over the tip of his nose, was black, and the other half was a dingy, dirty white.

So then I did a little rapid figuring on train schedules. If Percy had left Washington as I knew he was planning to, my diplomatic cousin should have been, at that figuring moment, just about due in San Francisco. That being the case, or the likelihood, I sent a message, a "dressing" in the care of the captain of whatever might be the next steamer due to sail for ports in China. All I said was: "Your letter was as funny as an hour in a dentist's chair. Bon voyage to you."

Night found us still tied to the Rockland wharf; and just as we were getting up from dinner in the yacht's saloon, here came a boy with a telegram. The wire was from Percy, and it said:

"Don't be a complete fool. It was no joke at all. Ask my lawyer."

Even then, I didn't go off at half-cock, though I have often been called an impulsive jackass. The thing was still too ridiculous to bite very hard. But further along in the evening, when I got to thinking it over, and more especially when it was shoved in upon me that I really did owe it to Lisette not to turn down even the tenth part of a chance to provide her with the means of buying her future hats, the die was cast, as the play-writers say. I made some sort of a foolish excuse to Jack Downing and the other fellows, caught a night train for Boston, stopped off at the home station long enough to pack a couple of grips and to tell my mother and sister good-bye, and the thing was—oh, no; not done—nothing like that. It was only just begun.

CHAPTER II.

A Needle in a Haystack.

Since my happy hunting-ground began in the middle of Colorado, I took a ticket to Denver by way of Chicago and Omaha. As I recall it now, it was after the train had passed North Platte that I first became sensibly conscious, as you might say, of the fact that the man in the opposite section of the sleeping-car had a little Pullman table set up in front of him, and was studying maps—and blue-prints. He was a rather efficient-looking fellow of maybe thirty-two or three, with dark hair and eyes, and what Lisette would have called a determined nose, and he sported a beard and mustaches, nut-brown as to color, and neatly trimmed.

Further along we met in the smoking room, at a time when the stuffy little den had no other occupants. Mr. Composite Section's only cigar turned out to have a broken wrapper, so I naturally tendered my own pocket-case. That served to break the ice and we talked, dribbling along from one commonplace to another until finally Brown-beard said:

"You don't by any chance happen to be a mining engineer, do you?"

"Far be it from me," I laughed; "nothing so useful as that."

"I didn't know," he hastened to say, half apologetically. "I saw you studying maps as we came along."

Now, ordinarily I'm apt to talk a lot too much about my own affairs—I'll admit it; but this was one time when I had a sort of hunch not to. So I merely said:

"I saw you doing the same thing."

"Sure you did," he admitted cheerfully. Then he told me his name—which I got as Bullock, or Bulletin, or something like that—and said he was a mining engineer, which was the reason why he had asked me if I wasn't one.

Fast that, the talk ran mostly upon his profession, and since the mysterious hunch was still nudging me, I let him have the floor, so to speak, figuring chiefly myself as a good listener.

"Yes; we do run across some rather queer propositions in our trade," he said, after he had given me some sort of an idea of what a mining engineer's job is like. "In my own experience, for example, the only sure shot I have ever had—or possibly ever will have—got away from me."

"Was up to me to bite, and, of course, I did it."

"How was that?"

"The man died," he replied laconically.

That sounded rather interesting, so I gave him another pinch.

"Tell me about it; if it won't bore you."

He grinned good-naturedly—and accepted another cigar out of my pocket-case.

"You'll be the one to be bored. It was this way: A little over a year ago I was on my way to Chicago with a report that I had been making on some properties in the Cripple Creek district. In the Denver-Omaha Pullman I fell in with a nice old gentleman who had been buying himself a gold brick in the shape of a flooded mine. The mine had at one time been a 'producer,' though not by any means what you'd call a 'bonanza.' After a rather extended dividend-paying period—I don't know just how long, though it was some years—the luck changed, as sometimes happens. In sinking and drifting the operators had uncovered another vein which was exceedingly rich. Don't let me talk your arm off."

"Go ahead," said I. "My arms are insured."

"Well, at about the time that they struck this new underlying vein, they also struck water; so much of it as to lead them to suspect that they had tapped an underground lake. The old gentleman wasn't exactly a woolly est in the property to me upon the completion of the job and the unwatering of the mine.

"At the moment I was under engagement to go to Peru for a Chicago syndicate, and I expected to be out of the United States for at least six months, and maybe longer. As it turned out, the South American job was a lot bigger than I had anticipated, and for that reason the time limit of a year expired a week ago, on the day that I landed in New York. Yesterday I called upon the Omaha banker, and he gave me the cheering information that my old man was dead—had died just a few days earlier."

"Still, I don't see how you have lost out," I put in.

"Wait; here comes the funny part of it. Mr. Banker tells me solemnly that I am remembered in my old gentleman's disposition of some cash legacies made just before his death, and I'm to have the thousand dollars which he put up as a forfeit. I took the prize down and spent some of it within the next few minutes wiring the old man's home lawyer, whose name and address the banker had given me. I briefed the situation for the lawyer, said I was ready to fulfill my part of the contract, and asked him to wire me the name and location of the mine. You'd never guess in a thousand years the kind of an answer I got."

I shook my head.

"No; probably not. What was it?"

"It was a bolt from the blue, all right. Mr. Home Lawyer wired that his client had never owned a share of mining stock in his life, that there was nothing in his papers or records bearing upon the subject of my telegram, and that I must be either drunk or crazy. Of course, he didn't put it just that way in his reply, but that is what he meant."

"How do you sort it out?" I inquired.

"The lawyer's telegram? I put it up that my cautious, secretive old gentleman never told anybody at home about his mining investments; kept them in a separate pocket, so to speak. Quite possibly he didn't have any other excepting the one I've been telling you about, and the one he regarded as a dead cock in the pit. That would explain the situation nicely, don't you think?"

The story had left me a bit fogged as to the present state and standing of the thing, and I said so.

"Well, it stacks up about this way," said Brown-beard. "There is a perfectly good mine somewhere west of us that is worth anywhere from a quarter to a half million, and at the present moment it is kicking around without an owner. So far as I can see, I'm the only man on top of earth who has a claim on any part of it. And I have no more idea than the man in the moon where it is 'at.' No; I'm afraid my handsome fortune is a lost dog, so far as I'm concerned."

His mention of a lost dog hit me right in the center of the solar plexus and I laughed like a fool.

"What struck your funny-bone?" he demanded, sort of dubiously, I fancied.

"Nothing," I gargled; "nothing worth mentioning—only I'm hunting for a lost dog, too."

But I didn't tell him any more. After we'd smoked a while longer, and Brown-beard had apologized for making me listen to his rather longish tale of woe, we took the porter's hint that he'd like to have the smoking room for his nightly shoe-shine, and turned in.

"I could see by his expression that he still thought me crazy."

Electric Refrigeration.

A brine tank in place of ice, which by means of an electrical instrument keeps a mean temperature in the refrigerator, is growing in popularity in suburban and country places where ice is difficult to obtain. Its advantages are that it does away with the ice-man, it gives a dry temperature advantageous for the preservation of food, and there is no slime, dirt or drip at with the use of ice. It is arranged to freeze a little ice for table use when that is desired. It is not an inexpensive luxury, costing about $400 to install in any refrigerator.

Torrens Registration System.

This is a system of registration of titles to real estate introduced by Sir Robert Torrens in Australia, and bears his name. This system of official examination and registration of titles has been adopted in Australia, England, New Zealand, British Columbia and parts of Canada. In a modified form it is used in several states of the Union, in Hawaii and in the Philippines.

Peculiarities of Hair.

Examined through a microscope, the hair may show certain peculiarities: the hairs of different people vary considerably. Apart from color, they may be coarse, medium, or fine; in shape they may be round or oval; in structure they may be made up of large or small rings. Certain races, too, have hair of a very distinct type.

Local American Legion May Stage Boxing Match

At a recent meeting of the American Legion of this place a resolution was passed to stage a wrestling and boxing exhibition during the coming year. "Clever Joe" Denton, Champion Light welterweight boxer of West Texas, has been notified to prepare to meet Rufe Bentley, of Coleman, in the near future. This bout was to have been staged at Lubbock but young Bentley was unable to meet "Clever Joe" and substituted his older brother, Talmage, who was kayoed in the 9th round.

Much interest and is being manifested in the Bentley-Denton bout for the reason young Bentley in a former engagement secured a draw with Denton after having survived a fourth knock down.

Nothing but the highest class will be staged it being the intention of the Legion to secure some of the best boys in the State to send up against Joe Denton whose success in the ring the past year has been remarkable. These bouts will be staged in connection with high class wrestling matches.

Non-property Holders Can Pay Poll Taxes

An erroneous impression has been gained with reference to the payment of poll taxes, in some quarters. According to the local tax officials, one does not have to be a property tax payer to pay poll tax, in a fact he is expected to pay his poll tax whether or not he is not a property holder, they say. If one is a qualified voter in other respects, he is eligible to pay the poll tax and should do so.
