Air Force expands career options

Pilot management program focuses on self determination

Undergraduate pilot training students now control their career destinies to the fullest, according to Maj. Billy Nichols, Military Personnel Center's chief, Graduate Flying Training Assignments.

Major Nichols, and Capt. Dave Britton of ATC's rated assignments branch, joined Col. Bill Henny, 64th Flying Training Wing commander, for a series of presentations here Monday. Reese students were counseled about career opportunities under the new Pilot Management Program. The program allows students to select one of several career options, including the "merit-based" selection of their individual aircraft assignment.

"The whole program is based on self-determination, your option and your say," said the major. The requirements for pilots have changed due to world events. There are not as many cockpits to fill, so the pilot force structure needs to be modified.

At the heart of the program is the Air Force's commitment to make the transition to a smaller flying force as fair as possible to those currently in training.

The program provides various career options within three student categories. Basically, these are: T-38 students that have already received aircraft assignments, T-38 students without assignments and those students in T-37 training.

While each of these categories contains options that allow students to pursue permanent non-flying or private sector careers, Major Nichols said the Air Force anticipates most will opt to complete UPT and seek a flying assignment.

To ensure that each UPT graduate will get the chance to fly, the Air Force developed a complementary career pipeline called "banking."

Some graduates will enter the banking pipeline for 24 to 36 months in non-flying roles. Up to 700 graduates may elect to be banked from now through fiscal 1992. Literally

Four Reese NCOs selected for E-8

Four Reese master sergeants were selected for promotion to senior master sergeant during cycle 92S8, officials announced Tuesday.

Selectees are: Gerald F. Howell, chief of flight management, 41st Flying Training Squadron; Clem E. Mewmaw, a projected gain, will be NCOIC, Public Affairs Division; Roy L. Threadgill, superintendent, Accounting and Finance Branch; and Michael J. Braskett, first sergeant, 64th Supply Squadron.

Air Force wide, 23,599 master sergeants were eligible, and 1,706 were selected for a selection rate of 7.23 percent.

Air Training Command had 1,855 eligible, with 132 selected for a 7.12 percent selection rate.

Reese has 36 eligible, with four selected for an 11.11 percent selection rate.

From my perspective

by Col. Bill Henny
64th FTW commander

For our undergraduate pilot training students, this has been one of the most important weeks of their lives.

Realignment of pilot production to match force structure has given these young officers in UPT a rare military opportunity — that of self-determination.

The specifics of the program are outlined on page one, but I want to emphasize that, for those of us who have been in the flying business for many years, this is an important and positive initiative

First of all, after their wings and if they elect to stay in the Air Force — no one is being forced to drop out of training. Most will have an opportunity to select their own career paths. Some may serve in non-flying career fields for 24 - 36 months before commencing operational flying. And thirdly, graduates will select their own aircraft or command assignments through a merit system based upon their individual class and command rankings.

I can assure every student pilot that I and my staff stand ready to discuss, advise and assist you during this transition period.

Taking care of our own

As demonstrated throughout Operation Desert Shield/Storm, the Reese community takes special pride in caring for those in need. We have another opportunity to show that commitment to caring during the annual Air Force Assistance Fund Drive.

I don't have to tell you the important role the AFAF plays in supporting this wing and the Air Force. All of us, directly or indirectly, have benefited from the various AFAF programs. Reese people received nearly $65,000 in grants and loans last year. That's more than four times this year's fund campaign goal of $14,944.

I urge each of you to support the AFAF. If you have not yet been contacted by a AFAF keyworker, contact your squadron project officer (see list on page seven).

Still on track

The wing has picked up right where it left off before the UEI/MEI. The recent announcements of "best in ATC" awards for the 64th Services Squadron and the Social Actions Branch continues a string of honors for Reese. Congratulations on a job well done.

Welcome aboard

We welcome two new members of the Reese team. Mr. Geary Wallace is the new contract manager for Lockheed. Capt. James Williams has assumed command of the 1958th Communications Squadron. A West Texas hello to Geary and James and their families.

Homecoming

Going to airports is not my favorite pastime, but each of my three trips last week brought emotional highs for me and hundreds of members of the Reese family as we welcomed back "our heroes." On behalf of all the men and women of the 64th, welcome home to:

MSgt. Joseph A. LaRose
Capt. Dale P. Moore
Maj. Leslie G. North
Capt. Roy H. Fukuoka
SSgt. Ken D. Killingsworth
Sgt. Liston R. Barron
Sgt. William F. Coleman
Sgt. Luis Tang
A1C Delania A. Keene
A1C Leonard M. Acevedo
Sgt. Eleazar Bengoa
SSgt. Robert Kraetsch
SSgt. Alvaro Soto Jr.
Sgt. James T. Chapman
Sgt. Avery L. Canady

Since we still have many who have yet to return, I look forward to many more fun airport trips — see you there.

From YOUR perspective

As wing commander, I need to hear things "from YOUR perspective." Your inputs and suggestions can help Reese remain the pacesetter in the command. If you see something good, call me. If you have a problem that you feel needs my attention, call me. First, however, consider using your chain of command.

You may remain anonymous if you wish, but those who leave their name and number can get a direct response to their call. Calls can be made to the Careline 24 hours a day at 3273.

Give flag proper respect

by SMSgt. J. T. Washington
Reese PME Center commandant

Retreat will be held the Thursday prior to every undergraduate pilot training graduation, at 4:30 p.m.

I believe this is a perfect time to discuss the proper way to show respect to the U.S. flag.

A couple of noncommissioned officers have pointed out that people are not showing proper respect when the flag is raised in the morning or lowered in the afternoon. "It's as if they don't know what to do," they said.

Here is how the Air Force says people should pay respect to the flag:

❑ Reveille — when reveille sounds, stop and face the flag (if visible). If not visible, face in the direction of the music. Assume parade rest and wait until the first note of "The National Anthem" or "To the Colors" is played. When the music begins, come to attention.

If in uniform, render the hand salute and hold it until the last note of the music. If in civilian clothing, place the right hand over the heart (a man wearing a hat should hold it over his heart) until the last note of the music.

❑ Retreat — on the first note of the retreat music, "Call to Colors," do the same as with reveille. If the flag is not visible, drop the salute (military and civilian) on the last note of the music. If the flag is visible, hold the salute (military and civilian) until the last note of the music or until the flag is secured, whichever comes last.

❑ Automobiles — if driving, stop and sit at attention until the last note of the music.

It is important that officers and NCOs set the right example. Too often, officers and NCOs, who should know what to do, are the worst offenders. Each member should be proud to stand a few minutes and show respect to the "Stars and Stripes."

The next time someone stands in the doorway waiting for reveille or retreat to end, ask them to step outside and show the proper respect. There's nothing wrong with walking outside during reveille or retreat to render proper respect.

People also ask, "What should I do if I'm in base housing or playing sports?" The answer is simple — stop what you're doing and pay the proper respect. If those who live in base housing would take time out to render respect to the flag, children would learn to be proud of their heritage and their symbol of freedom.

I recently spoke to nearly 200 kindergarten through sixth grade students at Martin Elementary School regarding the flag and why it deserves proper respect. Their faces said it all — we need to spend as much time as possible educating America's youth on the importance of the flag, and what it symbolizes.

So, the next time the music sounds for reveille or retreat, don't worry about what others do or say. Take the time to show respect and gratitude to the flag.

Every ceremony conducted at Reese, whether it's an NCO status ceremony or an undergraduate pilot training or professional military education graduation, always begins with either posting the colors, playing "The National Anthem," or both. The flag symbolizes freedom.

Anyone with questions about flag etiquette and proper respect for the flag, or participating in local ceremonies, should call 6341/3147.

Creation of the military wife

The good Lord was creating a model for military wives and was into his sixth day of overtime when an angel appeared. She said, "Lord, you seem to be having a lot of trouble with this one. What's wrong with the standard model?"

The Lord replied, "Have you seen the specs on this order? She has to be completely independent, possess the qualities of both father and mother, be a perfect hostess to four or 40 with an hour's notice, run on black coffee, handle every emergency imaginable without a manual, be able to carry on cheerfully, even if she is pregnant and has the flu, and she must be willing to move to a new location 10 times in 17 years. And, oh yes, she must have six pairs of hands."

The angel shook her head. "Six pairs of hands? No way."

The Lord continued, "Don't worry, we will make other military wives to help her. And we will give her an unusually strong heart so it can swell with pride in her husband's achievements, sustain the pain of separations, beat soundly when it is overworked and tired, and be large enough to say, 'I understand,' when she doesn't and say, 'I love you,' regardless."

"Lord," said the angel, touching his arm gently, "go to bed and get some rest. You can finish this tomorrow."

"I can't stop now," said the Lord. "I am so close to creating something unique. Already this model heals herself when she is sick, can put up six unexpected guests for the weekend, wave goodbye to her husband from a pier, a runway or a depot, and understand why it's important that he leave."

The angel circled the model of the military wife, looked at it closely and sighed, "It looks fine, but it's too soft."

"She might look soft," replied the Lord, "but she has the strength of a lion. You would not believe what she can endure."

Finally, the angel bent over and ran her finger across the cheek of the Lord's creation. "There's a leak," she announced. "Something is wrong with the construction. I'm not surprised that it has cracked. You're trying to put too much into this model."

The Lord appeared offended at the angel's lack of confidence. "What you see is not a leak," he said. "It's a tear."

"A tear? What is it here for?" asked the angel.

The Lord replied, "It's for joy, sadness, pain, disappointment, loneliness, pride and dedication to all the values that she and her husband hold dear."

"You are a genius!" exclaimed the angel.

The Lord looked puzzled and replied, "I didn't put it there."

"Career options"

all Air Force specialties are open to those electing to be banked.

They will also continue to draw flight pay. Upon returning to flying each will receive approximately eight weeks of refresher training at a UPT base.

"There is virtually no (senior) pilot right now who has not had a non-flying tour," said Colonel Henny. One of the major advantages to the "banked" initiative, according to Colonel Henny, is "when UPT graduates finally do fly, a bigger percentage will fly longer during their careers than some of us older pilots."

Major Nichols added that after banking, most pilots can expect eight years of uninterrupted flying duty.

With regard to the pilot assignment process, Colonel Henny explained that assignments will be awarded through a merit-based student selection procedure.

Students will be rank ordered and earn selection position within the assignment draft primarily through their performance in the cockpit. Seventy percent of the students' ratings are based on flying airplanes. Ten percent comes from academics and 20 percent from flight commanders' ratings.

In noting that the merit system is an incentive to do better, Colonel Henny said, "This puts the ball in the student's court. How well you perform will determine your position in the selection process and ultimately your own destiny."

Corresponding classes at each of the command's UPT wings will participate in the assignment draft. All wings will use the same rating system to ensure fair selection opportunities for all students. Class 91-09 will be the first to participate.

Banking adds an extra dimension to the selection draft. For example, a student who ranks in the mid-upper portion of the command may want to fly B-1 bombers. By the time that student gets to pick, all of the current B-1 assignments may be gone. But a banked bomber assignment may still be available, giving the student a second chance at the aircraft he wants.

"The new selection process will be much fairer to the student," said Colonel Henny. "It is standardized, understandable and rewards performance. We will start off with every assignment available on the board and take them off as we work around the command."

The colonel said he is excited about the program and was very pleased with the positive reception the AFMPC/ATC briefing team received.

"I am really proud of the way our people went into the briefings with an open mind. They recognized that with the draw down in force structure something had to be done to trim the excess pilot force. Most of our people see the new selection process as a positive initiative," said Colonel Henny.

UPT class 91-08 redesignated

by Col. Larry Driskill
Assistant Deputy Commander for Operations

On April 26, something unusual will happen at Reese AFB; the scheduled UPT graduation will not occur.

UPT Class 91-08, scheduled to graduate April 26, has been redesignated 91-09 and will graduate May 17.

Subsequently, all classes currently in training will "roll back" three weeks and be renumbered. There will no longer be a class numbered 92-08; and beginning with class 92-09, we will be on a six week class entry cycle. The remaining classes for the fiscal year will be 92-11, 92-13 and 92-15.

These changes, along with the decreased student loads, are designed to accommodate the restructuring of the Air Force and decreased pilot production levels. With the six week entry cycle, classes will be divided between two squadrons in preparation for Specialized Undergraduate Pilot Training.

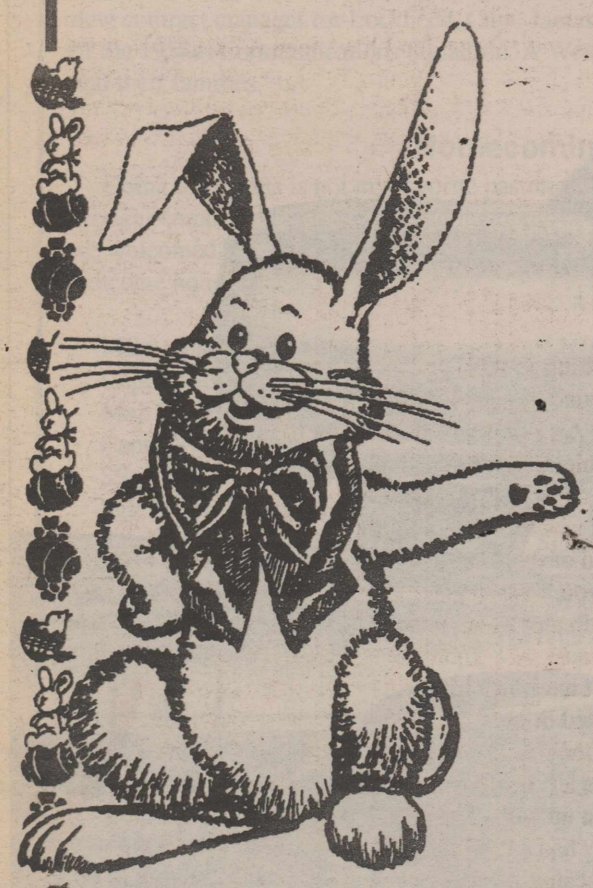

SUPT will begin at Reese with the arrival of Class 93-08 in April of next year.

Despite these administrative changes, the mission of Reese, "Training Tomorrow's Best Today," goes on.

One on One

Ret. CMSAF James Binnicker
Retired Chief Master Sergeant of the Air Force

(Editor's Note: This week One on One features James Binnicker, retired Chief Master Sergeant of the Air Force. Interview by Amn. José Alejandro)

Q: Since your retirement from the Air Force, are the benefits you received what you expected?
A. Yes. The problem is I live in a civilian town. So I don't get to take advantage of those things we come to expect like the medical , commissary or the base exchange facilities. I do get to use these benefits when I travel to a base. From the standpoint of retirement, the 75 percent of my base pay when I retired is working very nicely. The benefits were a great shock to me when I moved to a civilian town where there are no military facilities. I had to secure a civilian health care plan. The company I work for provides a health care plan as part of my salary package, but it does not cover my family.
Q: What do you see in changes in current benefits for active-duty personnel?
A. I don't see any changes. I think we will continue to fight for those that we have and there are some strong arguments to keep them that way. There are some improvements that I would like to see and we will continue to fight for these. That's one my responsibilities of my new job and that's why I'm here at Reese, just to find out what the enlisted people are saying. My new job is very similar to what I did when I was Chief Master Sergeant of the Air Force or a senior enlisted advisor and that is to have some sense to what people are saying and Congress calls this credibility. Congress pays attention to that, and we need that kind of network to give us a bigger pay raise, enhance medical benefits, and to continue to provide services that we are concerned with.
Q: Do you see a decrease or increase in benefits since the Air Force is getting smaller?
A. I don't think the size of the Air Force will have a relationship on the benefits package. That's a whole different thing and should not affect it. Some people will ask, or at least say, that if we get smaller that means will get fewer benefits. That's not true. We will be able take better care and provide additional things because the price tag will be smaller with fewer people.
Q: What is the job market for retirees in relationship to competition, salary and position?
A. I think we are in a very good position to move from the military to the civilian market. The range of companies that hire a lot of military personnel is getting bigger. For instance, trucking firms want drivers and nuclear power plants want those who have the nuclear skills. The military person in general, but the Air Force person in particular, is in a very enviable position to move into the civilian world. The three things that motivate a person to take a job are location, money and the job itself. You have to decide what is important to you. If you want to move to particular area, then you limit the scope of what you might be able to do. Don't restrict yourself to one of them because then you're not going to be as marketable as you would if you go anywhere to get the job. Even if you're in the Air Force for just one tour, you are indeed marketable to companies. Most companies look for people that are dedicated, loyal and punctual and have work ethics that are not prevalent in the civilian sector.
Q: What should people be doing now to prepare for retirement?
A. One of the short coming is that we have never had a formal education program on developing a financial portfolio. We have not done a good job to prepare people for future life. I want people to take a look at where they are now and where they want to be in the future. Make sure you have a savings account and have all those things that are necessary to build a security base and this will in fact make your transition into retirement a lot easier. This also will give you more options if you have that security. Know what it is your going to get in the way of benefits in advance. Then do something to enhance that, like a savings account or investments.
Q: Which of these factors have been most overlooked by someone preparing for retirement?
A. People are not ready for retirement because they have no savings account and too many bills. The debt to loan ratio is what keeps people from buying houses. Lending institution want at least three months of pay in a savings. Many people get trapped in the credit card business.
Q: How is retirement life treating you?
A. Excellent. I am having a ball. I feel good and as I look back on my Air Force career, I served in the highest position in the enlisted corp. Now I have a new career and a great opportunity and I'm happy about that. I still get stress, but it is a different kind of stress.
Q: What advice would give to a young enlisted troop who wanted to make the Air Force a career?
A. I would say to that person that it is a great choice to make. This is a very exciting time to be in the Air Force since we are going to see a lot of changes and a totally restructured Air Force. What they need to do is become the best at whatever they do. When you become the expert in your field, then everything else will fall into place.
Q: How will striving for a smaller, quality force impact recruiting efforts?
A. A lot of people think since we are cutting our force by 50 percent that recruiters will have an easier job. In fact, their job will become even more difficult. The recruiters have to keep them excited about signing up and also until they come in. They may lose interest if they wait too long. So recruiters will have a tougher job because these people might change their mind or lose interest while in the delayed enlistment program.
Q. What are some of the biggest changes that you have seen in been in the Air Force?
A. The biggest change that I have seen is the emphasis on the quality of life and taking care of people. Now I see an outstanding Air Force, probably the finest military organization anywhere in the world. We have done that and we have taken good care of our people. We almost made a science in the quality of life and focusing on the individual. We can't make everyone happy 100 percent of the time, but I don't think anyone should expect that. The reason I stayed in so long is because I felt that someone really cared.
Q: Anything to add?
A. Everyone owes the military a great debt of gratitude. I think the Air Force was the shining light in the whole Desert Shield/Desert Storm operation, and we were led by the most capable leaders in the world and it showed. The big thing was the attitude of the individuals in the Air Force and of the American people that said "hey, we support you." When you have that kind of support, in fact you can do almost anything. The individuals did great over there because they knew the American people were behind them. Let me finish by saying to all those people who participated in Desert Shield/Storm how much we appreciate what they've done. To all the spouses and loved ones who were left behind a great big "thank you" for what they had to put up with. The people here on Reese that didn't go obviously had a mission to do and we owe them a big thanks because some people had more than one task to do.

COMING HOME

Desert Storm troops arrive in waves

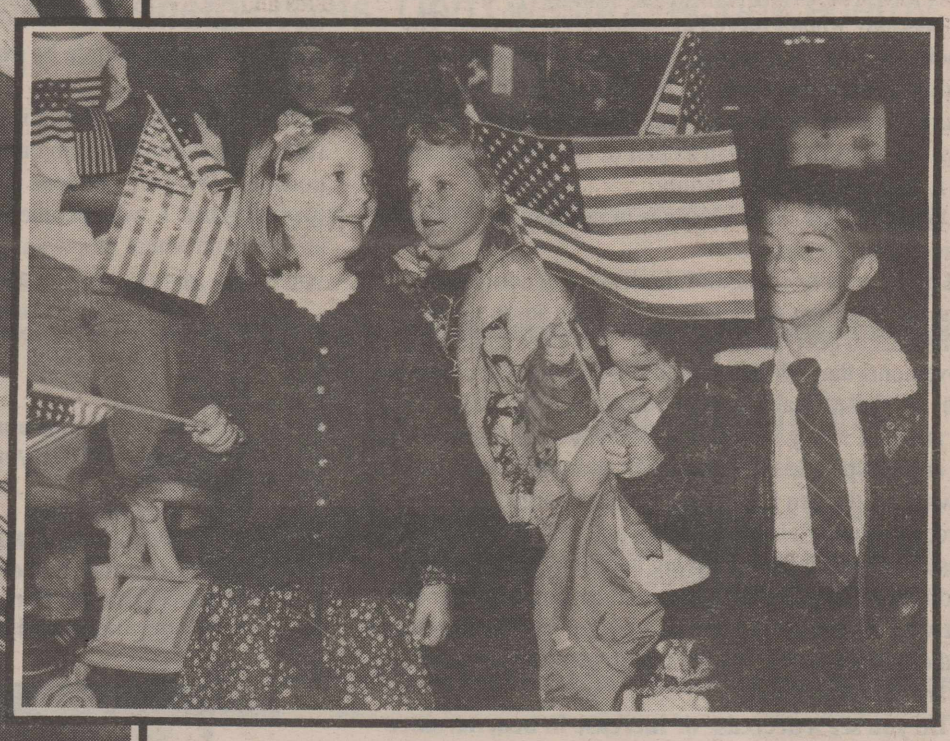

Reese people returning from deployment in support of Operation Desert Shield/Storm continue to receive "a hero's welcome" in Lubbock.

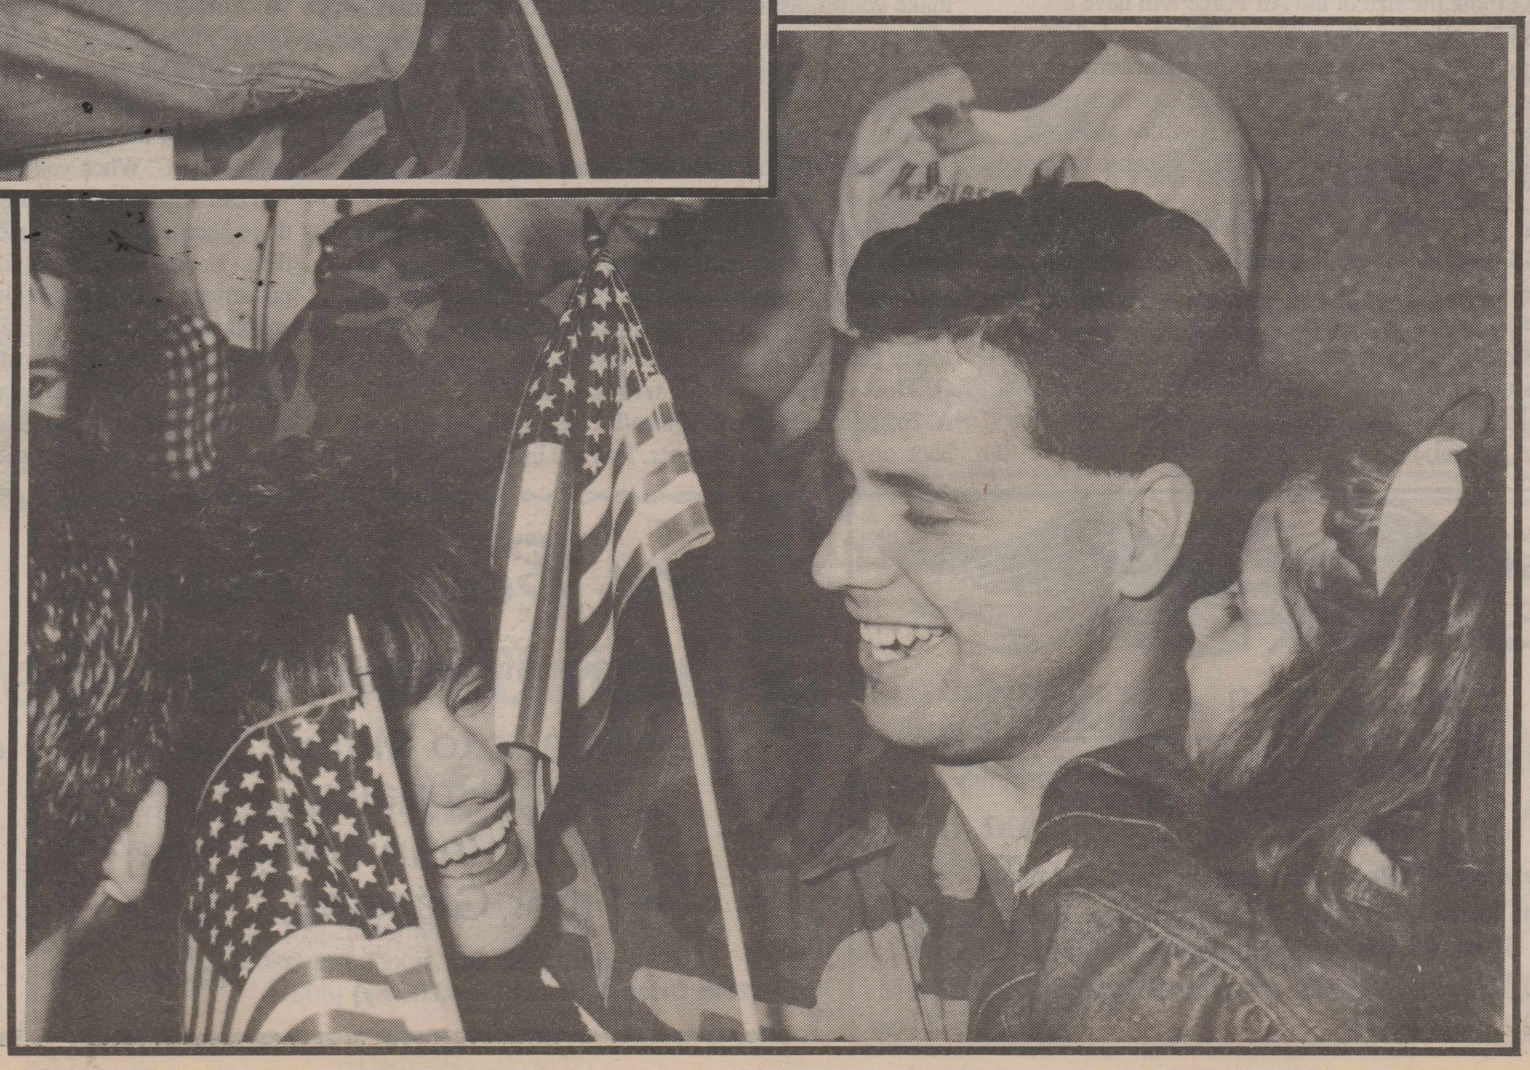

As of press time, 14 of the 40 Reese people who had deployed have made it home. The latest group of returnees included seven 64th FTW hospital members: Capt. Roy Fukuoka, SSgt. Ken D. Killingsworth, Sgt Liston R. Barron, Sgt William F. Coleman, Sgt Luis Tang, A1C Delania Keene and A1C Leonard Acevedo.

Also returning were SSgt Alvaro Soto Jr., and Sgt James Chapman, 64th Security Police Squadron. SSgt Robert Kraetsch, Detachment 11, 24th Weather Squadron, and Sgt. Eleazar Bengoa, 64th Supply Squadron, returned earlier this week. Other returnees were Capt. Dale Moore, Readiness Division; MSgt. Joseph LaRose, 64th Supply Squadron, and Chaplain (Maj.) Leslie North.

In addition to the welcome home recptions by families and coworkers, several local organizations have announced plans to honor Operation Desert Storm veterans at future activities.

AFAF drive nears $14,944 goal

The Reese community has given $11,883 to the 1990 Air Force Assistance Fund campaign, which is 79.5 percent of the local goal.

As the campaign winds down, everyone should have been contacted and should be making their final decision on contributions. Anyone who has not been contacted should call their squadron representative to get information.

One beneficiary of the AFAF is the Indigent Widow's Fund at Air Force Village in San Antonio. The village was started because of the concern for the welfare of older members of the Air Force retired officer community.

Approximately 10 percent of the Air Force Village apartments are occupied by widows whose husbands died before the passage of the Survival Benefit Plan and require financial assistance.

The village provides services for dependent parents of active-duty Air Force officers. Often, officers with dependent parents to care for are faced with difficult emotional problems when they receive departure orders. The village provides the parents with a comfortable, secure life-style so the Air Force member does not have to worry.

The Air Force Village is for retired officers, spouses, widows and family members. It also provides, as mentioned, residency for dependent parents of active-duty officers when a move can cause emotional and care problems.

Local recruiter STEPs to master sergeant

Master Sgt. Richard Maxey, 3567th Recruiter Squadron, picked up his sixth stripe March 11 under the Stripes for Exceptional Performers Program.

"I knew I was up for it, but I didn't expect (to get the STEP) since I thought they had given all the promotions already," the Texas native said. "Getting STEP promoted to master sergeant is the highlight of my career and it opens doors for many opportunities in recruiting."

His job includes recruiting top notch physicians and nurses for the Air Force.

Sergeant Maxey was a ground radio equipment repairman for the first five years of his Air Force career. He volunteered to be a recruiter and has been one for the past 11 years.

Some of his accomplishments during his career include being master recruiter for the western half of the United States, top recruiter in his squadron which includes eight states and the top recruiter in Texas for the Air Force Association.

An accomplishment that stands out in his mind is being nominated for the 1989-90 recruiting service nominee for the 12 Outstanding Airmen of the Year. "It was great being nominated for this award since each command is allowed only one nominee. The award is designed for the entire Air Force."

Sergeant Maxey's decorations include the Meritorious Service Medal and three commendations medals.

He received his bachelor's degree from West Texas State University, and is working on his master's degree from Texas Tech University.

He is a member of the Lubbock Chamber of Commerce and helps with the Muscular Dystrophy fund-raisers. He is also active in the Honor Your Flag Program for children in the local elementary schools.

Sergeant Maxey and his wife Kathryn have four children: Amber, Asia, Austin and Myles. "If it wasn't for my family's support and understanding, my job would be a lot tougher."

AFA to kick off membership drive

The Air Force Association, a national non-profit organization that lobbies for better benefits for Air Force people and supports a strong national defense posture, will begin its annual membership drive at Reese AFB April 15.

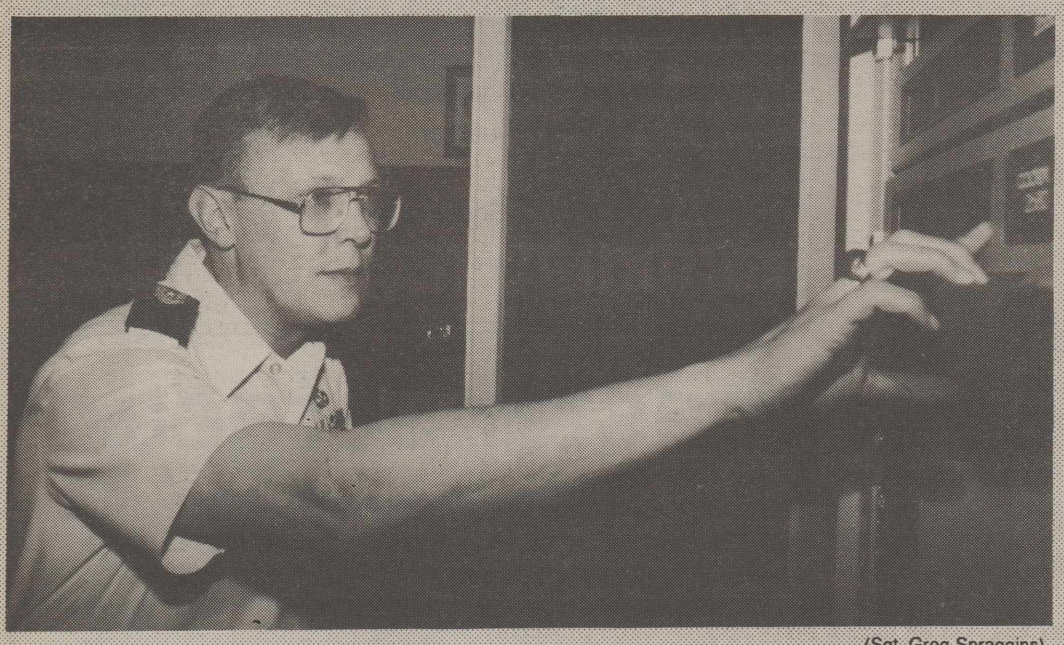

According to Capt. Ed Rinkavage, wing membership drive chairman, AFA's effectiveness in support of Air Force needs is directly related to the size of its national membership. All active duty, Reserve, Guard, ROTC cadets and civilian personnel are urged to join AFA. Additionally, a large portion of our civilian contractor workforce is comprised of former or retired active duty members and they are equally encouraged to join AFA.

"Membership in the AFA is open to all Air Force peopie," Captain Rinkavage said, "and AFA is the only organization that represents the entire Air Force family." AFA has long been regarded as the Air Force's professional society and, through its advisory councils, "hears the needs of Air Force people, takes positions on those needs, and fights for them," Captain Rinkavage said.

The AFA is also in a position to help the Air Force since it has over 350 organized chapters located in all 50 states and many overseas locations. These chapters provide a civilian-military forum for building support for Air Force needs that exists through no other organization. In the Reese area, AFA members are encouraged to join the Lubbock AFA, Chapter 273, and membership dues, only $21 for one year and $48 for three years, include affiliation with the chapter.

AFA members enjoy many varied benefits including a subscription to the highly regarded AIR FORCE Magazine, eligibility for several low-cost group insurance programs, car rental discounts, an AFA/VISA card, résumé preparation and critique, an employment transition service, as well as numerous opportunities to work with all elements of the Air Force family and community leaders to solve problems and effect change.

This year's campaign will begin with a kick-off luncheon at the Officers' Open Mess April 16 at 11:30 a.m. The guest speaker for the event is Mr. John Russell, Texas State AFA president. Mr. Joe Price, Lubbock chapter president, encourages all current and prospective members to attend. For reservations, call Captain Rinkavage at 3994, or Capt. Steve Governale at 3809. For other information, call 3994.

Reese mission maker

MSgt. Michael Braskett, first sergeant, 64th Supply Squadron, is this week's mission maker.

Sergeant Braskett's selection for senior master sergeant during the 92S8 cycle, was announced Tuesday.

The Columbus, Ohio native, has been in the Air Force for over 22 years, the last five being at Reese.

Sergeant Braskett served as NCOIC, Propulsion-Mission Support Unit with Supply prior to taking over as first sergeant in April of 1988.

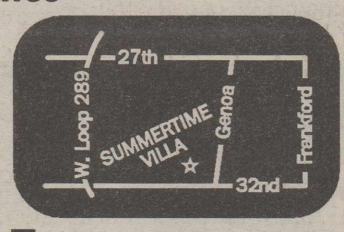

"The most enjoyable thing about my job is the chance it gives me to communicate with my people so that problems are not escalated beyond this level," said Sergeant Braskett. "I love working with and helping people."

His past assignments include Myrtle Beach, S.C., Tyndall AFB, Fla., Kwang Ju AB, Korea and RAF Sculthorpe AB, England.

The 41-year-old enjoys golf, auto mechanics and yard work.

He and his wife, Marilynn, have two children: Beth, 18, and Scott, 15. Both children attend Frenship High School.

People make the Red Cross special

(Sgt. Greg Spraggins)

by Capt. Christy Giroux
64th FTW Hospital

March is Red Cross month!

Each year, our country takes time to recognize the efforts of the millions of volunteers who have given of themselves through the American Red Cross.

The American Red Cross was founded by Clara Barton, a woman referred to as "the Angel of the Battlefield." Her efforts during the Civil War in boosting the morale of soldiers, tending to the sick and injured, and helping to locate missing prisoners set into motion an activity still going strong throughout the world today.

Red Cross societies began appearing in the late 1800s. These organizations incorporated many of the ideas of Henry Dunant, a citizen of Switzerland, in his book, A Memory of Solferino, which illustrated the horrors of the battlefield and the need for trained volunteers and international cooperation for the sake of humanity. These ideas were also instrumental in the founding of the Geneva Convention — which we abide by today.

The American Red Cross has two functions: disaster relief and service to the armed forces and their families. The Red Cross, in fact, was recognized by Congressional Charter as the primary relief agency in the country in 1905. In the field of disaster relief, the Red Cross is here to help in the initial hours and days after a disaster, providing food, clothing and shelter to those in need.

In the area of service to the military, the Red Cross provides emergency services to military families 24 hours a day, acting as the emergency communication link between a family and a service member abroad.

The Red Cross has become a primary blood collection agency, collecting over one-half the blood and blood products in the country and acting as a leader in blood research.

The Red Cross is a primary promoter of health and safety, teaching courses in cardio-pulmonary resuscitation, first aid and swimming.

Red Cross people are just like you and me. They are neighbors and friends committed to making things better for those around them.

For more information on volunteering to help the Red Cross, call Reynalda Schroeder, 3305.

AF committed to force reductions

Force structure reductions due at the end of fiscal 1991 will be difficult to achieve as a result of Operation Desert Storm, but in making these cuts the Air Force is committed to meeting programmed end strengths for fiscal 1992, the Air Force deputy chief of staff for personnel told Congress.

In mobilizing to support a war effort, the Air Force and the other services took manpower actions directly opposite of those actions they would normally take to prepare for a year of sharp reduction. This limited their ability to make the 100,000 reduction in the active-duty force ordered by Congress last year.

"The Air Force will probably come in at the end of fiscal year 1991 a little bit over strength," Lt. Gen. Thomas J. Hickey said March 14 in testimony before the Senate Appropriations Committee subcommittee on defense. "But by the end of fiscal 1992 we should be able to meet the president's budget in terms of end strength.

"Accordingly, we need to move with studied caution during the force drawdown. Wholesale non-programmatic reductions must be avoided."

Although the Air Force implemented programs to downsize the force — while involved in the largest military operations in history — the impact of Desert Shield and Desert Storm severely limited its ability to make the 26,675 reduction the 1991 budget called for.

Moreover, Stop Loss programs associated with the war have hindered reductions in many areas, General Hickey said.

Stop Loss was initiated by the Air Force Sept. 17 to assure commanders that personnel resources needed to support Desert Shield would be available.

Air Force Stop Loss was limited to only a few thousand critically needed people who will be released as rapidly as possible, General Hickey said.

However, some reduced number may have to be retained for the task of redeploying troops and material back to their home stations.

The overall budget plan calls for the Air Force to draw down 130,000 people in the next five years.

Sen. Daniel K. Inouye, D-Hawaii, chairman of the subcommittee before which General Hickey and the other service personnel chiefs testified, said congress was willing to be flexible to immediate reductions after the troops come home from the Persian Gulf.

"I don't want a situation where troops returning from serving in the Middle East will be given a pink slip when they return," Senator Inouye said.

General Hickey said a concerted, coordinated effort between Congress and the services is needed to address the immediate problem of fiscal 1992 strength levels.

"We pulled all the rabbits out of the hat that we own and the only other thing now to allow us to avoid involuntary actions is an extension of time," he said.

End strength cuts in 1991 and 1992 for voluntary reductions include constraints on officer and enlisted accessions; lower high-year-tenure policies for many enlisted grades; tightened re-enlistment controls for first-term airmen; continuing the officer early-out program; and waiving some time-in-grade and time-in-commissioned-service requirements for officer retirements.

"Air Force philosophy has been to meet force reductions through a balanced approach of reduced accessions and the voluntary loss programs," General Hickey said.

> "It is a cornerstone of our efforts to attract high quality recruits and retain professional career personnel. It will become even more important as we reduce the force."
> Lt. Gen. Thomas J. Hickey
> Air Force deputy chief of staff for personnel

However, in working hard to comply with congressional intent to streamline and downsize the Air Force in the coming years, the general said it may mean the use of other separation methods, including involuntary ones.

"We can do some significant reductions and do that over time, but if it gets too rapid in a short period of time, then we just run out of options."

He also said there are involuntary actions that are built into obtaining and maintaining proper end strength in fiscal 1992 and 1993, but didn't go into detail on what they might be.

With regard to any recruiting shortfalls, the general said in terms of quality, "Right now the Air Force would rather go short than lower its standards.

"We think we have the right standard, and we would rather do without than have anything less."

Between fiscal year 1986 and the end of fiscal 1990, the Air Force drew down by nearly 73,000, primarily through reducing accessions and offering voluntary early separations to both officer and enlisted people.

While other proposed changes to lower military and civilian end strength have not yet been approved, the services are planning a wide range of cuts to reduce force structure to a smaller overall size, said Christopher Jehn, assistant secretary of defense for force management and personnel.

"Despite these changes, the budget continues to put the emphasis on readiness, and we continue to support compensation," Mr. Jehn said.

Perhaps the significant factor — in terms of personnel concerns — in the president's budget requests are for pay raises of 4.2 percent in fiscal 1992 and 4.7 percent in fiscal 1993 for military people.

In his testimony, General Hickey elaborated on the pay issue and offered some of the rationale for supporting any pay increase in the future.

"Military pay is a basic GI barometer against which troops measure the public's true appreciation for their contributions to the nation's security.

"It is a cornerstone of our efforts to attract high quality recruits and retain professional career personnel. It will become even more important as we reduce the force," he said.

Former POWs receive heroes' welcome

In a news conference held March 14 at Andrews Air Force Base following their release from captivity, eight Air Force former prisoners of war talked about the war and the treatment they received at the hands of Iraq. The eight agreed their treatment was not as harsh as that described by their Vietnam-era counterparts. They lived in constant fear, however, from solitary confinement, physical abuse and, in one case, electrical torture.

Maj. Jeffrey S. Tice, an F-16 pilot from the 401st Tactical Fighter Wing, Torrejon AB, Spain, told reporters that he had been subjected to electrical torture from a device he called the "Talkman."

While on a Jan. 19 attack against Iraq, the major's aircraft was hit by anti-aircraft artillery south of Baghdad. He managed to glide his aircraft for about 150 miles more before he had to eject.

He was immediately captured by Bedouins, held overnight and taken to Baghdad the next day where he was handed over to the Iraqis.

Calling the treatment electrical shock therapy, Major Tice said he had wires wrapped around his ears and under his chin, and was shocked repeatedly early in his captivity.

"They went from just your average human hand and a couple of rounds of Mike Tyson-type of beatings to electrical shock," Major Tice said. Although he lost some teeth during the interrogation, Major Tice suspected from the beginning that he was not in danger of dying.

"You get kind of numb after the first few shocks," he said. "It was more physically tiring than it was physically damaging."

While trying to coerce him into making a propaganda video tape, the Iraqis appeared to be on a schedule with the prisoner's interrogation, Major Tice said.

"I was destroying their schedule a little bit. So they increased the intensity of my interrogation at that stage of the game."

While many of the former POWs said they had suffered physical abuse at the hands of the Iraqis, the separation from their families and each other and the uncertainty of the future were what tortured them most. Almost all of their time was spent in solitary confinement, with very little food, no beds and only a couple of blankets, and no news or word from the world outside their cells.

Col. David Eberly, deputy commander for operations for the 4th Tactical Fighter Wing at Seymour Johnson AFB, N.C., said his worst night came about three weeks after he was captured by the Iraqis.

The colonel was on a combat mission in an F-15E along with Maj. Thomas Griffith Jr., also of Seymour Johnson, when they were shot down in western Iraq on Jan. 19.

Colonel Eberly said one night in early February, pacing around in his tiny cell, he began to think more and more about his family. "I suddenly realized that someone had had to notify my family. My family had to go through someone telling them that I might be dead."

"That was the toughest night," Colonel Eberly said.

During the press conference, the repatriated airmen expressed thanks for the support and the homecoming welcome ceremonies given them by the American people.

Speaking on behalf of the other former POWs, Colonel Eberly asked the nation to extend the same type of welcome to all the returning men and women who had served in the Gulf.

"We are grateful for all the attention you've given us, but I would encourage those who have watched our homecoming to get out and welcome every one of the total force of people involved in Desert Storm — the people in the fighter and infantry units, Army, Navy, Marines, active duty, Guard, Reserve — every single one. As they arrive home, shake their hands, hug them, and tell them how proud you are to be an American after the decisive victory they gave us."

The eight Air Force members will return to their home bases once they have been medically cleared by doctors at Malcolm Grow Medical Center at Andrews. (Air Force News Service)

Controlled area badges prevent unauthorized entry

Should you have a controlled area badge?

The Controlled Area Badge is issued to those identified by their commander who routinely work in or visit a controlled area. The badge is gold in color and is issued to each person granted unescorted entry to a specified controlled area.

"The badge provides an immediate visual assessment for personnel in an area to detect unauthorized persons," said MSgt. Julian Duran, 64th Security Police Squadron. "It is by no means the complete answer for security, but when combined with proper security education and motivation it is a valuable tool."

The badge should be displayed at all times on your outer garment between the neck and the waist with photograph facing outward when inside the controlled area. Remove it from view when outside the controlled area. It should also be displayed at all times at the contingency support center and the nonnuclear munitions storage area. For guidance on obtaining a badge, refer to wing supplement 1 to AFR 125-37, attachment 1, or call Sergeant Duran or SSgt. Kathrine Meyers at 3615.

AF officer-to-enlisted ratio to change, say officials

The Air Force has spared some officers from force reductions and it has nothing to do with the war effort.

The action stems from a waiver built into the 1991 Defense Authorization Act, a senior programs official said. The law sets total end-strength numbers and officer authorizations for each military department as the Defense Department prepares to down size the force. Using a system of percentages of officers to enlisted in each branch, Congress handed down its verdict of how the military should look in the coming years, said Col. Josh Moran, chief of the force programs division at the Pentagon.

"When the staffers who wrote the legislation told the services what they were doing, all of the services balked," Colonel Moran said. In responding to the congressional action, he said, the Air Force told Congress "That is such a low number (percentage), you're going to force us to do involuntary separations."

Both Congress and the DOD wanted to achieve reductions in military strength by voluntary separations. If that wasn't possible, then the military branches, with secretary of defense approval, could ask for a waiver to those end-strength reduction targets for officers.

"And in fact, that's what we've done", said Pentagon spokesman Pete Williams.

Deputy Defense Secretary Donald Atwood signed two memorandums March 8 — one to the secretary of the Air Force and one to the secretary of the Navy — waiving the restrictions.

In the case of the Air Force, the law had said the number of officers on active duty as of Sept. 30 would not exceed 95,027. With the waiver, DOD has set the number of officers for the end of the year at 96,660, preventing a 1,633 reduction in force.

In the middle of the big personnel reduction debates of last year, Congress and the Defense Department seemed resolute in their quest for a "leaner and meaner" United States military.

"Now, what we're hearing from Congress is they're rethinking the 'slope' of the drawdown," said Colonel Moran.

"What they're saying is, we're (Congress) not sure we want to make it as steep as we initially had it. Therefore, we're going to soften the slope a little."

If Congress eases the reductions, Colonel Moran said, approving the Air Force waiver will not impact the original end-strength figure.

"Congress' concern was that we had too many officers in comparison to enlisted," the colonel said. "The difficulty we (the Air Force) have is the officer-to-enlisted ratio is an arbitrary management tool. We obviously aren't managed that way. But because Congress has concerns, we are now managing to an officer-to-enlisted end-strength."

Starting in fiscal 1992, Colonel Moran said, the Air Force is going to achieve an officer-enlisted ratio of 4.29-to-1. "In other words, 4.29 enlisted to every officer", he said. In comparison, the ratio at the end of fiscal 1990 was 4.35-to-1, down from a 4.51-to-1 ratio in 1989.

We would've needed the officer end-strength waiver at the end of fiscal year '91 regardless of Desert Shield or Desert Storm," stated Colonel Moran. But war or not, he said, "We didn't want to do a RIF."

Communications security is every member's responsibility

by Mr. Charles V. Coward
Reese TEMPEST manager

It can be called the invisible danger. It can't be seen or heard, but it's there, and you can bet our adversaries are taking advantage of it at every opportunity.

"It" is TEMPEST and the threat is real.

TEMPEST stands for the detection and analysis of unintentional compromising emanations that reveal national security information.

Unintentional electronic and magnetic signals may be emitted whenever computers, word processors, voice or recording communications, or other similar electronic information-processing systems are operated. Radiated signals, like radio waves, pass through solid walls and can be detected at varying distances from the processor. Signals on the powercord conducted onto the electrical distribution system may be detected several miles away. Likewise, signals coupled to any nearby metallic object, such as telephones, telephone lines, water pipes, and air ducts can be carried far beyond the effective control of information being processed. When the radiated or conducted signals contain classified information, they become compromising emanations.

The purpose of the TEMPEST program is to create an awareness of this threat and what must be done to minimize the danger. The message is simple. Unless specific countermeasures are taken, then it is likely that unintentional signals will be radiated — signals that contain classified information.

If a person will be using equipment to type, display, hear, print out, reproduce or generate classified material, then the person should contact their local TEMPEST manager to ensure that the specific equipment being used is approved as installed for processing classified information.

Some countermeasures that can be taken include:

❑ Keeping equipment that processes classified information separated from those processors which do not.

❑ Keeping wires that carry classified information separated from wires that carry unclassified information.

❑ Shielding wires or running them in conduit, and ❑ Establishing controlled and accessibility spaces to contain the compromising emanations.

When a small number of systems are of concern, the protection should be done on an equipment basis. Naturally, cost plays a part, and the countermeasures implemented should be selected to achieve the desired protection at the lowest cost.

The protection and safeguarding of classified information is everyone's responsibility.

For more information, call Charles Coward at 3227.

EWC scholarships offered

The Reese Enlisted Wives Club announces the availability of scholarships to graduating seniors, who have maintained a B average or above their junior and senior years of high school.

Included in these scholarships will be two special scholarships: a $300 scholarship donated by the Association of Military Comptrollers; and a $1,000 scholarship donated during the Sweetheart Ball by Chapters 1068 and A1068 of the Air Force Sergeants Association.

Students applying must be dependents of active duty or retired military of all services, a DOD civilian or Lockheed personnel employed at Reese AFB and attending high school in the Lubbock and surrounding area.

Candidates must complete an application and include : two written recommendations from high school principal or counselor and another teacher, an official high school transcript, ACT or SAT scores, and an essay entitled, "Why I want to further my education."

Scholarship applications are available from your senior counselor, or call Bonnie Martin, EWC Scholarship Chairperson, at 885-4429 or 885-3819.

All applications and supporting material must be postmarked no later than April 20, 1991 to Bonnie Martin, 344 Mitchell Blvd. Lubbock, Texas 79416.

OWC scholarships offered

The Reese Officers Wives' Club will award three scholarships ($1,000, $750, $750) this spring to eligible high school seniors.

Eligibility includes: dependent children of active duty or retired military personnel associated with Reese AFB; dependent children of active duty military personnel whose last permanent duty station was Reese AFB, and whose spouse and family elected to remain in the vicinity; children of military personnel who are deceased or missing in action; and students graduating from high school in the current academic year.

The following information must be included in the application: official school transcript; three letters of recommendation from school counselors or teachers; a separate sheet of paper listing activities and organizations participated in since the ninth grade; a brief statement explaining major and career goals; completed scholarship application form.

Completed applications must be returned not later than April 12, 1991, to: OWC Scholarship Chairperson, 6016 15th Street, Lubbock, Texas 79416.

Golf lessons available

Beginners golf lessons will be offered at the High Plains Golf Course for six weeks starting April 2. Sessions will begin at 5 p.m every Tuesday. Lessons are free for anyone wishing to learn.

Through these lessons, beginner golfers can learn while playing an actual round of golf.

Although the lessons are free, participants will be charged one-half the normal green fees. Green fee prices for those taking the lessons are: $2 for airman basics through sergeants; $2.75 for staff sergeants through captains; and $3.25 for majors and up.

In addition to beginners, the free lessons are also available to any golfer who does not have an established handicap.

For more information or to sign up, call Dick Davis at 3819.

Rattlers compete in Academy tourney

(Amn. José Alejandro)

by Amn José Alejandro
staff writer

The base's men's volleyball team completed its season Saturday with the conclusion of the 1991 Air Force Academy volleyball tournament.

The tournament kicked off with the round-robin round in which the top three teams in each pool would advance to the double elimination bracket. The Rattlers started the round-robin round by winning the first game against Peterson AFB, Colo. 12-10. In the second game the rattlers hit a cold spell as Peterson went on a nine point run to lead 9-0. The Rattlers found their rhythm for a short while coming back to trail 9-5, but ran out gas to lose 11-5.

When the Rattlers met McDill AFB, Fla. they came out hitting and passing cold, as they would fall behind early 5-0. Good hits and blocks by Phil Thompson brought the Rattlers within three points, 10-7. McDill rallied back to take the first game 11-7. In the second game the Rattlers fell behind 7-2 only to start an eight point run to lead, 10-7. They would go to win 12-10.

The Rattlers next opponent, AFA cadet red team, was not only the defending champions but were the only undefeated team left in the pool until they met Reese. The red team managed to increase their early lead to 8-4. Good setting by Darin Middleton and good kills by Thompson, Chris Knehans and J.R. gave Reese a come from behind 11-8 victory. In the second game, the Rattlers were outmatched by the red team as they garnered the win, 11-0.

The Rattlers also played Holloman AFB, N.M. and lost 6-11 and 5-11. As Holloman was the only team to defeat Reese in the round-robin round twice. The Rattlers then played The AFA cadet white team and defeated them 11-7 and 11-6. The AFA Flyers II were the next victim for the Rattlers. The Rattlers crushed the Flyers II team 11-3 and 11-6.

Reese was the only team that defeated all six teams in their pool at least once in a game. Having a round-robin round record of 7-5 qualified Reese to advance to the double-elimination championship round. Only six of the 14 teams in the round-robin round would advance to the next round.

The base team met the AFA Flyers I team in the first round of the winners bracket, but were outgunned in the first game, 11-4. In the second game, the Flyers I team jumped out to a 4-0 lead. Great serving by Matt brought the Reese team within one point of the them, 5-4. A six point run would give the Flyers I team an 11-5 win. The loss sent the Rattlers to the losers bracket to face Holloman for a second time.

Reese jumped out to a 5-0 lead that Holloman would never be to catch up, as they went to defeat them 11-7. The second game saw a see-saw battle, but Holloman prevailed with a close 12-10 victory. The split of the first two games meant the two teams would meet in a rally point game. In this game every time the ball is out of play someone scores a point. After leading 7-4, the Rattlers were once again outgunned by Holloman, 11-8. The loss eliminated the Rattlers from the tournament.

The Rattlers had a great season. Other players on the squad were: Daniel Goeres, William Bedesem, Roscoe Kahumoku, William Randag, and Thomas Hunter.
