Rock Skipping at 4-H Camp

A group of 29 4-Hers and leaders returned Sunday night from a three-day county camp at the Texas 4-H Center near Brownwood. The group was the first from Gray County to stay at the $2-million center which was completed this spring. Donors in the county gave more than $5,000 to the fund to build the state center which is perched atop a hill overlooking Lake Brownwood. Among the activities which the youth participated in the center offers a variety of activities for campers, including hiking trails to the lake. John Weeks and Michelle Houston followed one of the trails and Michelle got a lesson in rock skipping. Watch The News for more about the camp and local campers.

$1 Million Suit Filed In Dalton Death Here

By ANNA BURCHELL
Pampa News Staff
A $1-million lawsuit was filed in Pampa this morning in 31st District court in connection with the death of Daniel Gary Dalton, 20, on April 16.

The suit was filed by Dalton's wife, Rebecca Jean Dalton, 20, and her 15-month-old son against Southwest Vault Builders of Dallas and Cook Paint and Varnish Co. of Houston.

Dalton died while working for Packerland Packing Co. when a fire broke out at the plant on April 16.

Mrs. Dalton seeks $750,000 for herself and $250,000 for her child. The suit was filed in Mrs. Dalton's behalf by a Pampa attorney, Ross N. Buzzard.

The widow alleges that during the construction of a meat vault in the expansion of a packing plant east of the Pampa city limits, Southwest Builders installed a "spray-on" type insulation, commonly known as polyurethane, on the walls and ceiling.

She further contends that the insulation was thought to be fire-resistant, while "in truth it was extremely inflammable as to be explosive."

She added that her husband was working in keeping with the instructions of his employer, Packerland Packing Co., at the time of his death.

"He was cutting a steel wall with an acetylene torch when a nearby ceiling, which had been covered with polyurethane...

burst into flames causing the death of Daniel Gary Dalton. He tried to escape from the room but was unable to do so before expiring."

The allegations in the suit contend Cook Paint and Varnish Co. sold the polyurethane to Southwest Builders Inc., who in turn installed it in the vault room.

Mrs. Dalton said that at the time of the sale of the polyurethane which caused her husband's death, it was a defective product.

Cook Paint and Varnish Co. was negligent in failing to provide adequate instructions for the installation so that the installed product would contain an appropriate warning concerning the explosive nature of the product, the widow contends. The company was also negligent in failing to manufacture the product so as to avoid the explosive nature and in failure to test the product so as to determine its explosive nature before offering it for sale.

Southwest Vault Builders Inc. was negligent, according to Mrs. Dalton, in failing to affix a warning on the installed product concerning its explosive nature, and in failing to sufficiently test the product to determine the explosive nature.

At the time of his death Mr. Dalton was in good health, worked regularly and devoted his earnings to the care and support and maintenance of his family, according to the petition.

"He was earning a substantial wage and in reasonable probability his income would have increased," the allegations state.

He had a life expectancy of 49.46 years and would have been the sole support of his wife, and until his child had completed his education would have been his sole support.

The widow said in her petition that burial expenses were $1,926.50 "which represents a reasonable charge for a burial reasonably suited to his station in life."

Coroner Declares Deaths Accidental

By ANNA BURCHELL
Pampa News Staff

Death by carbon monoxide poisoning was the coroner's ruling in regard to three local residents found dead at 1913 Wells about 10 p.m. Friday.

The dead were Mr. and Mrs. Paul Hubert Caylor, ages 79 and 73, respectively and Mrs. Francine Duggan, 50, all of Pampa. They were found in the Caylor home at 1913 Wells.

Justice of Peace E.L. Anderson overruled the Pampa Police Department's request for an autopsy.

"There is no question about it," Anderson said this morning when he described the deaths as "purely accidental."

"This is the saddest in my almost nine years of ruling," he said in referring to the three as "fine, outstanding citizens of this community."

Judge Anderson said Mr. Caylor had apparently left his El Camino in the garage, the key on and tank filled with gas.

He added that an investigation revealed that Mr. Caylor was hard of hearing and had accidentally left the vehicle running.

"I'm satisfied the car ran all day Friday. There was not a drop of gas in the tank nor the carburetor," he added.

The refrigerated air conditioner in the home spread the odorless and tasteless fumes even faster.

Anderson said the ladies were sitting adjacent with their coffee cups nearby.

"They had been dead an estimated 24 to 30 hours," the coroner reported. Mr. Caylor had also been dead about that length of time. He died in the bathroom.

The coroner explained that Mrs. Duggan's family had put out an all-points missing bulletin in an effort to find her.

"It is heartbreaking," the judge said. "After checking everything from A to Z, there is no question about the cause of death — and the family did not want an autopsy. They are satisfied with the decision," he said.

Poland Cheers Fords, Appeals for 'No War'

WARSAW (UPI) — Poland gave President Ford a rousing, cheering, hanky-waving welcome today as he arrived in the Soviet bloc on the second leg of his European tour and heard an appeal for "no more war."

Thousands lined Warsaw's King's Track boulevard to applaud and cheer the President and Poland's Communist party chief, Edward Gierek, as they rode into town in an open black convertible from Okęcie military airport.

The President and Mrs. Ford flew in from Bonn, where they spent a weekend of gay and lavish outdoor partying and where Ford reaffirmed U.S. commitment to strong economic and military ties with West Europe.

Along the sunny Warsaw motorcade route, the crowds waved Polish and American flags, hankies and hunks of cloth, drawing Ford and Gierek to their feet for responding right-headed waves.

At one point, the motorcade slowed so people could crowd around the car to shake the President's hand, get his autograph and holler personal greetings.

Grinning with delight, Ford doled out an autograph and exchanged some chitchat with a blonde in a bright red dress as television cameras beamed the whole scene live by satellite to the United States. Some persons in the crowd gave him bouquets of red, white and blue carnations.

Gierek and the entire Polish government leadership greeted the Fords with full military honors at the airport and extended "a welcome of most genuine cordiality" for their one-day stay in Poland. The President leaves for the European security summit in Helsinki Tuesday.

At airport ceremonies attended by about 2,000 persons, some holding red placards emblazoned in white with the word "peace," Gierek toasted the 200 years of Polish-American friendship and told Ford the desire for peace was uppermost in the minds of Poles.

"Our capital has been restored to life (since the destruction of World War II), beautiful and modern," Gierek said.

"Yet memory of the immensity of sacrifice and suffering remains, as does the desire impressed on our hearts and minds. No more war."

Ford pledged his talks with Gierek and other Polish leaders would "strengthen the traditional friendship between our two peoples and improve prospects for world peace."

Ford also recalled the "courageous Poles who came to our shores and helped" Americans win its independence nearly 200 years ago and conveyed greetings from "all Americans, including the millions who are so proud of their Polish background and heritage."

Then the two leaders stepped into their convertible for the entry into Warsaw, escorted by an arrowhead of nine white-helmeted motorcycle policemen. Brass bands thumped out cheery music in the background as the motorcade passed along the crowd-lined streets.

When he started his day in Bonn, Ford looked somewhat bleary-eyed as he stepped outside his castle guest residence to await German leaders for a final conference. He joked about how hard it had been to get out of bed at dawn after an exhausting Sunday of work and fun that ended in a gala Rhine riverboat party that ran past midnight.

The Ford-Gierek conferences in Warsaw were to cover trade and other East-West issues.

But the main thrust of the visit to Poles to Romania and Yugoslavia after the Helsinki summit — was to demonstrate America's policy of contact with and friendship for the East bloc "states that are 'the old country' to many U.S. citizens."

White House press secretary Ron Nessen said Ford will deliver a "major address" in Cracow, Poland's cultural center, Tuesday. The President was also expected to visit the memorial site at Auschwitz, the World War II Nazi death camp in southern Poland, before he departs for Helsinki Tuesday.

Railway Group Suggests Creation of New System

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Creation of a new railroad system from seven bankrupt eastern lines will require $1.85 billion to $2.5 billion in direct government aid, but a profitable system will emerge by 1979, the U.S. Railway Association said today.

The USRA's predictions came in its final system plan, submitted to Congress today. It outlined a 15,000-mile rail system with about 5,700 miles of branch lines put up for either abandonment or subsidy by local and federal governments.

Congress has 60 days — not counting its August recess — to reject the plan. If it is not rejected by either House or Senate, the plan will go into effect and a new rail system — Consolidated Rail Corp. — will take over operation of the Penn Central and six other bankrupt eastern and midwestern railroads next spring.

Under the USRA plan, ConRail eventually could return to private hands. If ConRail becomes profitable and pays off most of its federal debt, the current creditors would gain control.

Many details of the report were released previously, but this was the first time USRA had spelled out financing arrangements for the new system.

It said the government must purchase $1 billion in special debentures and $850 million in Series A preferred stock, both to pay a 7.5 per cent annual interest rate.

In addition, $650 million should be appropriated by Congress for contingency purposes, $250 million for possible purchase of additional stock and $400 million to be used at the discretion of the secretary of transportation.

Weather

Partly cloudy skies and warmer temperatures are forecast today through Tuesday. The highs both days will be in the 90s, dropping to the 60s at night.

Ford Having Big Time, Running Aides Ragged

BONN (UPI) — The White House deputy chief of staff leaped over a stack of garbage sacks and galloped around a tent to reach President Ford.

Richard Cheney, struggling through the crowds at Ford's visit to a U.S.-West German picnic Sunday, got to the President in time to hand over the draft of a speech the chief executive was to deliver minutes later.

There were other examples Sunday of how the best laid plans of the President's men sometimes can go awry:

— David Hume Kennerly, Ford's personal photographer, entered Chancellor Helmut Schmidt's offices with press photographers to snap the President's talks with West German leaders. Out, ordered Gisela Libal, Schmidt's deputy press spokesman.

"But I am the President's personal photographer," said Kennerly, who has no-knock entrance privileges to the Oval Office.

"This is German territory," said Frau Libal.

Kennerly left.

— Ford stepped off a Rhine party boat briefly at the village of Linz and wine queen Marita Rings, 21, handed him a 15-inch glass holding a quart of wine. Ford jokingly asked, "Do I drink all or just some?"

"All," said Fraulein Rings with no smile.

Ford, pulling presidential rank, took two sips only.

— Chief executives do not routinely drink a can of beer in public. Ford, however, does what comes naturally.

Sweating in the sun while inspecting tanks at Kirch Goens, Germany, Sunday, Ford gratefully accepted a can of Frankfurt brew and drank and drank. Press photographers clicked and clicked their camera shutters.

"Oh, gosh," said one Ford supporter, "there goes the Bible Belt vote."

— Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger shares educator Robert Hutchins' belief that "every time I have the urge to urge to exercise, I lie down until the feeling passes." He was not noticeably jubilant when, leaving the Rhine boat Sunday night, Ford chose to walk instead of ride to the helicopter one-half mile away.

Ford noted this. "Let's step up the pace, Henry," the President said, chuckling.

"Ah," Kissinger said with a sigh and a smile, "whenever negotiations go bad they always make the walk home."

PRICE SHOULD 'FLOAT'

U.S. oil undervalued

The basic differences in the approaches to energy programs were clearly illuminated at the recent debate in the congressional Joint Economic Committee.

Both the Democratic majority on the committee and a spokesman for the administration agree that a comprehensive energy program is needed urgently in the United States of America. Both sides agree also that the price of oil is going to rise sharply in the months ahead whether any action is taken in Washington or not.

However, the Democrats believe that the United States should retain an artificially low price on oil through controls in order not to aggravate the recession.

Alan Greenspan, chairman of the President's Council of Economic Advisers, favors removal of price controls so that all oil produced in the United States sells at world market costs.

The price of about 40 per cent of the oil produced within the United States is controlled at $5.25 per barrel. The controls will expire on Aug. 31 unless Congress acts to extend them.

The gist of the differences is that the Democrats think that the Arab nations will raise oil prices even if the United States removes the controls. Mr. Greenspan apparently does not believe that they will.

It is, of course, hard to second guess the intentions of any other nation. However, it is not necessary to stare into the crystal ball to predict that oil-producing nations are going to act in their own best economic interests.

The economic fact visible among oil-producing nations in recent months is that their incomes are lower because the world appetite for oil has been reduced and that their unity, fragile at best, is undergoing additional stress.

Oil-producing nations have, for example, liberalized credit terms for purchases of oil, an indirect way of lowering the price. And Ecuador, a member of the oil producers' club, recently lowered the price of its oil by 43 cents a barrel to stimulate sales. Ecuador is symbolic of the majority of oil producers who depend on steadily increasing oil income. Even nations with oil surpluses, such as Abu Dhabi and Saudi Arabia, are feeling a pinch as their domestic budgets rise and the world demand for petroleum diminishes.

In the final analysis, however, the United States would be ill-advised to establish an oil policy on the basis of what the Arabs might do with oil prices. We should act according to our best interests, and it is in the interest of conserving our oil to let the cost of our oil rise to the value of the precious resource that is established by worldwide demand.

Pride of paternity

Fathers who sire children in a moment of machismo must not be allowed to forget their pride of paternity in later years. Too many of them start a family and run. The mother is left to take care of the children on welfare. The taxpayers support the burden of the father's irresponsibility.

That is why we applaud the federal government for its decision to inaugurate a new child support enforcement program next month. It brings the full resources of the government to bear for the first time to locate absent fathers and to ensure that court-ordered payments are actually made.

One of the more effective provisions allows the garnishment of wages of federal employes, including servicemen, for family support.

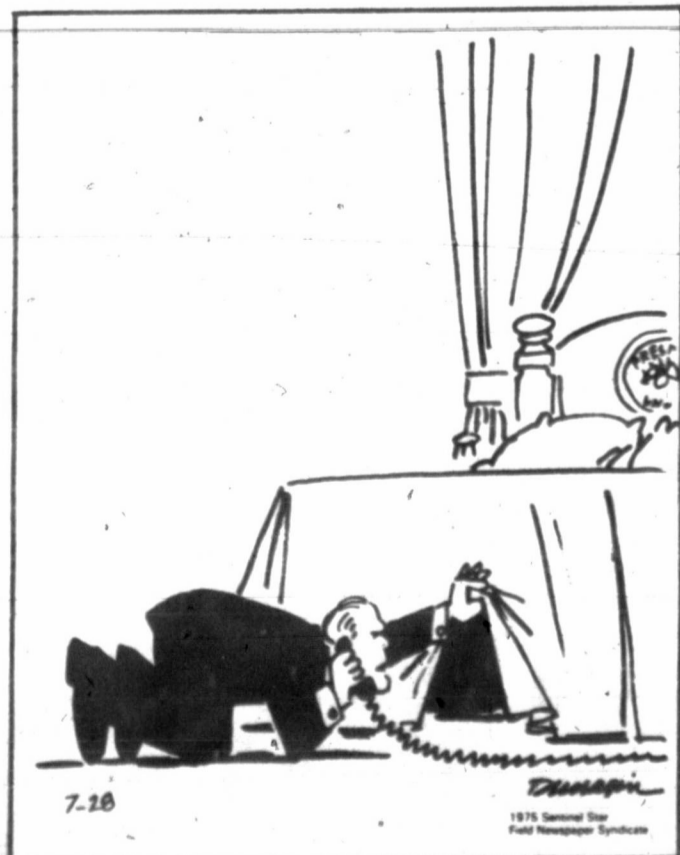

States will be required to establish parent locator services and cooperate with other states. Counties will be given cash incentives for collecting child support payments.

These are healthy sanctions to impose on those 2.3 million breadwinners who have deserted their families and left the support of their children to the taxpayers at the cost of a tidy $1 billion a year. But sanctions alone cannot prevent family desertion. Congress should be reminded that the present welfare system provides for working fathers to desert their families. Then the children can get welfare. Otherwise they cannot. The system makes Tommy Manvilles out of many men.

If the federal government really wants to discourage family desertion, there's a way. Reform the welfare system so that aid can be given to poor families that stay together.

CAUSE FOR CONCERN

Henry's Secret Agreements

By CLARK MOLLENHOFF

WASHINGTON, D.C. - There is increasing concern in Congress over the "cost and consequences" of the secret agreements left in the wake of Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger's free-wheeling jet-propelled diplomacy.

The complaints about Dr. Kissinger's resistance to accountability cover a wide range of issues that alternately are dear to the hearts of liberals and conservatives, and occasionally on an issue upon which there is reasonably broad consensus.

Dr. Kissinger, instead of responding to the criticism with a more open policy, is busy devising new theories under which the executive branch can hide international agreements from the Congress and the public.

The respected senator, Clifford Case, a liberal Republican from New Jersey and a member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, is charging "defiance" of the law that he and Senator Frank Church (Dem., Idaho) authored in 1972 "to require that international agreements other than treaties, hereafter entered into the United States, be transmitted to the Congress within 60 days after the execution thereof."

The Case - Church amendment excluded treaties because the United States

Constitution provides that all treaties must be ratified by the Senate.

The purpose of the Case - Church amendment in the last months of the Vietnam War was to assure that there was an accounting to Congress on the so-called "executive agreement" dodge that was used for years to keep Congress in the dark on the side deals our presidents and secretaries of state made.

But, the Case - Church amendment was drawn by reasonable men who accepted the idea that national security might from time to time require a president to withhold documents from immediate disclosure to committees of the Senate and House.

That one-sentence qualifying phrase is now used broadly to justify withholding anything other than the briefest description from the Senate Foreign Relations Committee and the House International Affairs Committee.

In recent months, under the innovations Dr. Kissinger, the State Department legal office has been asserting that agreements between agencies of the United States government and agencies of another government are not "treaties" and are not "executive agreements" and thus do not have to be reported.

Senator Case is outraged at these interpretations, which he and his staff regard as "defiance" of the intent of the legislation he authored. He plans to try to put an amendment on the State Department's Appropriation Authorization Act in the next few weeks to spell out even more clearly that all agreements between the United States and foreign governments must be reported to Congress, and that the "national security" exception must be interpreted in the narrowest sense.

Although Dr. Kissinger reportedly has informed President Ford that an amendment requiring such strict accountability must be defeated at all cost, the spreading of Kissinger's secret deals will give the amendment broad support.

Senator Jesse Helms, a conservative Republican from North Carolina, and a number of his colleagues were greatly disturbed to learn that Dr. Kissinger planned to use the agency agreement dodge to turn over police, fire and mail service to Panamanian authorities.

The North Carolina Republican contends if the U.S. gives up police, fire and mail service control, it will in fact be giving up its treaty rights on the Canal Zone.

In the Democratic part, critics of Kissinger's secret diplomacy span the gap between Senator Henry M. Jackson, a friend of the Pentagon, to Representative Les Aspin, a liberal Wisconsin Democrat who ranks with the most persistent critics of the defense establishment.

Representative Aspin has charged the State department with "apparent violation of federal law" and "direct violation of the U.N. charter which provides: 'every treaty and every international agreement entered into by any member of the United Nations after the present charter comes into force shall as soon as possible be registered with the secretariat (of the U.N.) and published by it.'"

Aspin has charged that the U.S. had signed at least 29 major secret international agreements since August, 1972, and has kept those agreements secret in violation of the law.

The State Department has even classified the titles of many of the international agreements that it has transmitted to Congress, Aspin charges.

The Wisconsin Democrat points to the testimony of the recently resigned assistant Secretary of State, Dixy Lee Ray, to make the point that it is high time that the Congress inform itself of "the cost and consequences" of Dr. Kissinger's secret diplomacy.

Dr. Ray, appointed last January to a post created by Congress as advisor on science and technology agreements, resigned in June in frustration, declaring she had not been consulted once by Dr. Kissinger and had in fact tried unsuccessfully to meet with him.

In appearances before two Senate Committees, Dr. Ray stresses the fact that the U.S. is entering into extremely complex international agreements on exchanges of extremely complex international agreements on exchanges of technology without knowing the financial cost of the programs or even whether the exchanges are within the law.

U.S. Playing a Losing Hand at Salt II Talks?

By WILLIAM RUSHER

While all eyes have focused on the recent spectacular goings-on in earth orbit, a far more important Soviet - American encounter has been taking place in prosy Geneva, Switzerland. That is the site of the SALT II arms limitation talks, and at this writing it appears that, unless our resolve hardens, Uncle Sam may leave this particular game of international strip poker in a barrel.

Arms limitation is not only a crucially important subject, but an almost hopelessly technical one. What are the relative advantages of superior throw-weight and superior accuracy? When can a new bomber confidently be said to have "intercontinental nuclear capability"? How important is on-site verification of missile warheads? The very existence of the United States may hinge on an accurate answer to any one of these or a score of similarly difficult questions, yet by and large we must leave their answers to our "strategic planners." Unfortunately, when we contemplate the disaster these wizards mastermind in Vietnam there is little reason to think they are beyond error, or even that they are terribly good at any decent arithmetic that outruns their fingers and toes.

Let us be grateful, therefore, to the American Union, a thoroughly sober and responsible group of citizens who recently warned President Ford, in an open letter, against certain arcane developments in those Geneva negotiations. When you have where you are tempted to concede far too much in a desperate effort to reach an agreement or at least "show some progress." There are unsettling indications that this is exactly what is happening at SALT II.

For example, it is already agreed that bombers having the ability to deliver nuclear weapons from one continent to another must be included in the overall limit of 2400 "strategic delivery vehicles" agreed to last November at Vladivostok. The U.S. B-52 is thus included, and so will the B-1 be when it is built. Now, the Soviet Union happens to have a bomber called "Backfire," whose earlier versions arguably do not have "intercontinental nuclear capability," and which is therefore not included in the 2400-vehicle limit. But more recent versions of the "Backfire" bomber indisputably do have such capability - yet the Soviet Union refuses to include these in the 2400 count, and the American negotiators are evidently preparing to give way on the point.

Conversely, the Soviet Union is apparently insisting that American air-to-ground "cruise missiles" with a range of 600 kilometers (or 370 miles) or more, now under development and obviously for tactical use only, must be included in our 2400-vehicle ceiling.

To compare such cruise missiles with an ICBM or strategic bomber, is, however, preposterous. The ACU therefore recommends that air-to-ground missiles with a range of 1500 kilometers (930 miles) or less be excluded from the 2400-vehicle limitation. Recent reports from Geneva indicate that the Russians may be getting ready, for the first time, to permit on-site inspection of their pledges on such vital matters as not equipping particular types of missiles with multiple (MIRV) warheads. If so, splendid - though almost everything would depend on exactly how much inspection the Russians in fact ultimately allowed. But, unless adequate visual inspection of such MIRV-capable missiles as the Soviets' SS-18 and SS-16 is permitted, to insure that they are (as promised) not equipped with multiple warheads, all such missiles should be included in any negotiated limit on the number of missiles so equipped.

Anyway you look at it, this is a dangerous world. But it will only get more so if we weaken for an instant our resolve to hang in there when the bargaining gets tough - or to increase our strength to dependable levels of the bargaining falls.

Housework Worthy of Poetry

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I know you'll never print this because you career women have the idea that we housewives are second-class citizens, but I've kept this poem for a long time and want to share it with you. (I never did find out who wrote it.)

JUST A HOUSEWIFE
Hello, Mrs. Jones, I've just called to say I'm sorry I cried when you phoned today. No; I didn't get angry when your call came at 4:00. Just as eight cub scouts burst through the door. It's just that I had such a really full day. I'd baked eight pies for the PTA.

And washing and ironing and scrubbing the floor. Were chores I had finished not too long before. The reason I cried and gave that big yelp. Was not 'cause you phoned just to ask for my help. The comment that just about drove me berserk. Was, "I'm sure you'll have time because you don't work."

Sign me, A HAPPY HOMEMAKER

DEAR HAPPY: I think the poem is great. And for the record, before I became "Dear Abby" (at age 37) I, too, was a cub scout den mother, and I also baked my share of pies for the PTA.

DEAR ABBY: I'm another one who hates to have people come to my home for dinner and just sit there, picking at the food, and telling me they are on a diet and can't eat this and can't eat that!

After I have gone to the trouble of making a nice dinner, I get very annoyed when a dinner guest hardly eats enough to feed a bird.

If I were on a diet, I would tell the hostess not to count on me for dinner, but I'd come afterward. It hardly pays to invite people over to eat anymore. Almost everybody is on a diet. Think I'll just pass out carrot and celery sticks, and let 'em chomp like horses. ELLA

DEAR ELLA: A thoughtful hostess includes some low-cal food for the calorie counters. And the ideal hostess pretends never to notice what her guests eat - or don't eat.

CONFIDENTIAL TO C.J. IN HOUSTON: The girl who steals your fiance steals your troubles. Let her have him. He's too wishy-washy to make a good husband.

Answer to Saturday's puzzle.

US Halts Military in Turkey

ANKARA, Turkey (UPI) — The United States has halted military operations at four key bases in Turkey, but American troops are still running 21 other installations in the country. U.S. military officials said operations at Karamusel in western Turkey, Sinop along the Black Sea, Pirinck in the southeast and Beyobasi near

Ankara ended Sunday night on orders from the Pentagon. The Turkish government ordered an end to military operations at all but one of the 25 American bases before last Saturday in retaliation for congressional refusal to lift a U.S. ban on arms sales to Turkey. But the United States, which imposed the ban following Turkey's invasion of Cyprus last summer, said it would take at least several days to halt operations at all the bases. In Washington, House Democratic leader Thomas O'Neill accused Turkey Sunday of blackmailing the United States. But Senate Democratic leader Mike Mansfield said preserving the bases has overriding importance. The main function of the four closed bases has been to monitor troop movements in the neighboring Soviet Union. U.S. officials said the intelligence gathered has been crucial to America's defense. The Turkish government said one of the 25 bases — Incirlik in southern Turkey — would be allowed to keep on operating for North Atlantic Treaty Organization purposes only. The United States has a fighter squadron at Incirlik. The Ankara government has so far made no move to expel the 7,500 American servicemen — and an equal number of dependents — stationed in Turkey.

paid by the Ford administration to end the six-month-old sanctions. Mansfield agrees in effect with those who say the takeover of American bases in Turkey is "blackmail." But he thinks the House should reconsider its refusal to lift the Turkish arms embargo.

House Democratic leader Thomas O'Neill, however, said Sunday he doubts any move to reconsider Thursday's 223-206 vote against resuming the arms aid can come up this week before Congress takes its month-long vacation. Both leaders, appearing on separate broadcast interviews Sunday, said they personally oppose sending arms to Turkey. "I look at it as blackmail, to be perfectly truthful," said O'Neill. "But more than that, I think where we're wrong is if we allow Turkey to get this. If we condone the actions of what Turkey has done — used our weapons for offensive purposes — then there would be a pattern that would be set for the rest of the world."

O'Neill was interviewed on CBS' "Face the Nation." Mansfield said in a floor speech Saturday continuation of the embargo could force Turkey to turn toward Russia for arms and the Arab states to pay for them. "I hope some way can be found to reconsider," he said. Appearing on NBC's "Meet the Press," Mansfield said that unless Congress reconsiders the embargo, "you're going to have us forced out of Turkey, out of these bases. They say they're quite important, a billion and a half (dollars) have been spent there; supposedly 25 per cent of our intelligence capabilities, in relation to the Soviet Union, are located in Turkey."

Mansfield said a factor in the House vote was recognition of the pro-Greek lobby and the large numbers of Greek-American voters. "Ethnicity does have its effect, yes. But I can only give my loyalty to one country, that happens to be the United States of America."

FBI Agent Says Hearst Was Unwilling Captive

LITTLE ROCK (UPI) — An FBI agent who took an active role in the early stages of the Patricia Hearst kidnaping believes Miss Hearst may still be an unwilling captive of the Symbionese Liberation Army. "I don't think anyone will know the real circumstances until Patricia Hearst tells us about it," John T. Kelly said Sunday.

Kelly, who was assistant agent in charge of the San Francisco Division at the time of the Hearst kidnaping in February 1974, became head of the Little Rock FBI office last week. He said he doubted "very much" Miss Hearst had been converted to the SLA.

"But it's hard to say what's in the back of a person's mind. You've got to give her the benefit of the doubt. "We feel it is possible she has really lost sight of reality and that she's involved with them

Police Report Lists Bombing, Tub Caper

A homemade bomb, property loss, a punctured tire and reports of two men attempting to load a cast iron bath tub were among the incidents reported to the Pampa Police Department during the past 48 hours.

Howard Gideon reported that it appeared someone had placed a homemade bomb on top of his compact car. A hole was torn in the top, he said.

Floy Christensen of 2014 Coffee said two men pulled into the alley behind her home Sunday night and started loading a cast iron bath tub.

They announced they were helping the city. However Ms. Christensen told them she would sell the tub for $5. They left for the money and did not return.

Ray Dudley of 123 S. Cuyler observed a young boy park his car Sunday. Two hours later when he started to leave, he discovered a flat. Upon changing it, he observed a small puncture in the sidewall — which he believed could have been made with an ice pick. Two months ago a similar incident occurred, he said.

Theft reports include: — a pair of shoes and $5 taken from a locker at the youth center.

— $390 taken from a purse in a local business. — $143 taken from a local lounge. — a pair of shoes taken from Payless Shoes.

The psychological effect of all this might cause the abducted person to "do anything the kidnapers wanted. We don't know whether this particular psychological trauma she ran into at the time of the kidnaping flipped her mind," Kelly said. "We do know from the experience of other kidnap victims that they will do anything the kidnapers want them to, to try to effect their freedom."

California To Soften Marijuana Legislation

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — More than a half million persons have been arrested for marijuana possession in California in the 10 years since the first big national whiff of pot billowed out of San Francisco's Haight Ashbury district.

Now, joining a handful of other states, California is softening up on marijuana smokers who use the "recreational drug."

A law taking effect Jan. 1 relaxes 60-year-old possible felony penalties for possession, among the longest-running and strictest marijuana statutes in the nation. The maximum term was 10 years in prison.

Under the new law, possession remains a crime — but a far less serious one. For small amounts, there will be no arrest. Violators will be given a ticket and ordered to court to pay a fine up to $100. Violators with more than an ounce will be arrested and face a misdemeanor charge with up to six months in jail and a $500 fine.

Police theorize the three teenagers stole the laughing gas from a hospital loading dock, drove to a horse pasture, rolled up the car windows and opened the tank's valve.

The car and bodies were found by the owner of the pasture, Buddy Collins, 42. He told police he and his wife had gone to the pasture to pick grapes when they saw the car and the teenagers, whom he at first thought were asleep.

Gov. Edmund Brown Jr. signed the measure July 9 and later offered this comment: "C. Arnold Smith gets probation for attempting to take $27 million. I don't know if 10 years for an ounce of marijuana can be equated with not one day for $27 million."

Smith, a friend of former President Richard Nixon, recently pleaded no contest to charges of defrauding his U.S. National Bank in San Diego.

Eisewhere in the nation, Oregon, which decriminalized possession of small amounts of marijuana in 1973, has gone a step farther than California. The same system of written citations and fines up to $100 is considered a civil infraction in Oregon and not a crime.

Alaska, as the result of legislation and a court decision on the right to privacy this year, removed all penalties on possession or private cultivation of small amounts of marijuana.

Maine this summer provided a $200 civil fine for amounts up to 1 1/2 ounces. Colorado enacted a bill this month similar to California's.

Most other states provide misdemeanor penalties for possession, and some are considering a reduction in the law to the old fines. Only Nevada and Arizona retain felony provisions for first-time offenders.

Weekend News Summary

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Southern Republican leaders pulled by the Cox Newspapers back President Ford in a potential nomination challenge from Ronald Reagan.

The survey, printed Sunday in the Atlanta Journal and Constitution, said of 100 Southern GOP leaders polled, 59 per cent said they would back the President in a showdown with Ronald Reagan. Only 26 per cent said they would support the former California governor, while 16 per cent were either uncommitted or undecided.

In a hypothetical matchup among Ford, Alabama Gov. George Wallace and a "moderate-to-liberal Democrat," 46 per cent said Ford would win in their districts, with Wallace the predicted winner in 33 per cent of the districts and the Democrat foreseen as a winner in 5 per cent.

HELSINKI (UPI) — A new study on the effects of marijuana conflicts with a government study that said smoking the weed had no ill effects.

According to research recently completed at New York's Columbia University and released Sunday at the International Pharmacology Conference, smoking marijuana leads to infertility and probably lowers immunity to disease.

The research contradicts the recently completed U.S. government sponsored "Jamaica Study," which said large amounts of marijuana had no adverse effect on man except possibly reducing delivery of oxygen to tissues by the bloodstream.

Dr. Gabriel G. Nahas of the Columbia University College of Physicians and Surgeons said the study on five young men showed "their ability to defend themselves against disease is decreased and their fertility is impaired."

He said more research was needed to prove further the disease conclusions but there was no doubt marijuana decreased fertility.

KUWAIT (UPI) — The Shah of Iran said his country has a $4 billion deficit despite its vast revenues as the world's second largest exporter of oil.

In a newspaper interview Saturday, Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi blamed the deficit on decreased oil revenues and increased costs on imports industrial good plus ambitious improvement programs in Iran.

While in the past the Shah has predicted another oil price increase, this time he did not, saying the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries would decide that.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Rep. Les Aspin, D-Wis., says the government paid $256,600 for a study of Saudi Arabia's defense needs. He contends it should have been paid for not from U.S.

taxpayers' pockets but from Saudi oil revenues.

"I can find no basis in law for the taxpayers to pay for this secret study," Aspin said in a statement Sunday. "There is absolutely no reason for the U.S. taxpayers to subsidize the Saudi Arabian military planning when that country is gouging us with the cartel's excessive oil prices."

Aspin said a State Department lawyer he would not identify had characterized the study as "questionable legality" and "dubious as a policy matter."

"It would be perfectly legal under the Foreign Military Sales Act by U.S. officials on their defense needs. But, there is no legal justification for U.S. taxpayers picking up the tab," Aspin said.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate Saturday passed legislation appropriating $7.5 billion for the Department of Housing and Urban Development and various agencies through Sept. 30, 1976.

The vote was 73 to 7. The bill now goes back to the House for approval of several Senate amendments.

The primary change the Senate made would add $75 million for a home owners relief fund to cover loans of up to $250 a month to unemployed home owners who have received foreclosure notices. Total HUD funding would be $8.8 billion.

SEY WEST, Fla. (UPI) — The Florida Keys seem to have escaped any serious damage from an oil spill a week ago in the Florida Straits.

Biologists said during the weekend they found no harm to wildlife or plant life and divers found no evidence of harm to coral from the oil, flushed by a supertanker.

A bird was found dead by cleanup crews and another covered with oil. A number of stone crabs were found covered with oil but alive and apparently otherwise well.

NOTEZ BIEN! BOGOTA, Colombia (UPI) — The Education Ministry plans to phase out French as an obligatory subject for all high school graduates, leaving English as the only required foreign language for final examinations.

The local association of French teachers has protested against the decree, pleading for "cultural diversity."

Uncle Sam Money Expected Soon

City officials trained an eagle eye on the U.S. Postal Service mail deliveries today looking for that $912,000 federal aid check that was supposed to have been mailed from Washington Friday.

City Manager Mack Wofford said late this morning two or three trips to the post office this morning had failed to turn up the Environmental Protection Agency's offer to pay three-fourths of the cost of Pampa's proposed $1.4 million sewage treatment plant.

Pampa voters recently approved a $300,000 bond issue to pay the city's portion of the cost.

Rep. Jack Hightower's Washington office reported last Tuesday that the EPA had given final approval to Pampa's application for the federal aid.

Ivan Sinclair of Hightower's staff said the EPA had notified the congressman the grant offer with a check for $912,000 would be mailed to Pampa last Friday.

Mayor R.D. Wilkerson and the city manager said they have not received official notice that the grant has been approved.

The city already has received $55,000 in federal grants to pay three-fourths of the cost of preliminary planning for the treatment plant.

When the $912,000 check is received it will push the total of money available for the project to $1,276,000.

Engineers have estimated total cost from $1.2 million to $1.5 million. Based on EPA's total eligible cost figure of $1,216,000, federal aid on the project would total $667,000.

Hospitals Plan Nonprofit Group

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — To combat the rising cost of malpractice insurance, the Texas Hospital Association plans to incorporate a nonprofit company to provide insurance to hospitals at far cheaper rates than private companies, according to an attorney for the group.

General Counsel Dean Davis said a minimum of 40 hospitals are needed to finance the company initially but he expects between 200 and 300 will join within one year.

Davis said there are no immediate plans to offer the insurance to doctors in private practice, but it is possible the company will expand the coverage to include them if the plan is successful.

"The reductions are going to be just as dramatic as they can be. But compared to 18 months ago, they're probably going to be higher," Davis said. "We're going to be nonprofit. So we're not going to have any reason to hide the ball as some companies have."

Texas hospitals have been hit hard by the inflated malpractice insurance rates which have plagued doctors and medical institutions across the nation in the last year. Hospitals in Austin and San Antonio were forced to limit surgery to emergency cases because of a doctors slowdown in May to protest the high rate situation.

Davis said it is too early to predict exactly how much the rates will be reduced, but estimated a $2,000 premium one insurance company charges for each hospital bed can be reduced to $400 to $600.

Committee Heads Named For Heart Association

Committee chairmen were appointed during the July meeting of the Gray County Division, Texas Affiliate Inc., of the American Heart Association.

Announcement was made that a postal box has been donated to the division. It will be used for receiving donations including memorials for the deceased and for living memorials to use for a special cause, including the purchase of a blood pressure reading device.

Chairpersons include Bill

Slaughter, finance; Mrs. Virginia Mitten deputy; Dr. Joe Gates and Homer Thomas, co deputies; Katherine Gibby, publicity; Bob Steger, deputy; Vermell Meador, professional education committee; Mrs. Jean Johnson, public education; Mrs. Jessie Newberry, community service; Dr. C. F. Sparger, coronary care training.

The next meeting is set for Aug. 22 in the conference room of Highland General Hospital.

Texas Surpasses Goal In Democrat Telethon

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The singers sang, the comedians told jokes and the politicians politicked for 22 hours Saturday and Sunday trying to retire part of the Democratic Party's seven-year old $2.3 billion debt and President Ford.

But with the shape of the economy, which provided the Democrats the bulk of their rhetoric — or perhaps because of political apathy — the fourth annual Democratic telethon did not bring in as much as it did last year.

As of midnight, the telethon unofficially had raised $4.6 million in pledges — short of last year's $6.9 million pledged, of which $5.5 million was collected. But if there was a shortage of money on the national scene, there was no lack of entertainment and hard-hitting political speeches.

The appeals for contributions from the "little guy" ranged from the evangelical pleadings of the Rev. Billy Graham and preacher-turned-actor Marjoe Gortner to the serious patriotic pitches of Henry Fonda and the hard-sell salesmanship of party chairman Robert Strauss.

Over and over again, the biggest names in Hollywood, Nashville and the Democratic party hammered away at Republican policies aimed at "special interests" and at the "nonelected" administration of President Ford and Vice President Nelson Rockefeller.

All the party's presidential candidates appeared, either live or on tape, except for Rep. Morris Udall of Arizona, who was hospitalized for a gall bladder infection.

Sen. Henry Jackson, D-Wash., appealed for election of a Democrat as president next year, saying whoever it is will be "devoted to all of the people all of the time, not to some of the special interests most of the time."

Alabama Gov. George Wallace also appealed for contributions to the party, noting that half of everything collected above the $2.7 million in expenses would go to the state parties. He termed the Democrats a party of the "middle class."

Gov. Philip Noel of Rhode Island at one point admitted the party has erred in the past, "but our mistakes have been on the side of the little guy and not the special interests."

A new feature of this year's telethon was a series of panels in which Democratic officeholders answered policy questions submitted by contributors.

As before, some of the top names of show business gave their time and talent to plug for

Refugees Learn Fast: Hurry Up and Wait

FT. CHAFFEE, Ark. (UPI) — Sitting in the summer heat at an Army base in Arkansas, 24,000 Vietnamese refugees have learned the American GI's lament: Hurry up and wait.

"We stay, we do nothing," said Ly Thuan, who was a professor at the School of Government and Business at Dalat. "It is very hard for some — doing nothing."

"I wait. I wait for sponsor to move out of camp," said Vinh Pho, 31, who was a pilot in the Vietnamese Air Force.

The days of each week run together like the rows and rows of white barracks for many at this largest of the four refugee camps in the United States.

About 600 refugees work for the voluntary or government agencies. For the others, life is a roundtrip to the mess hall: breakfast at 7 a.m., lunch at noon, dinner at 6:30 p.m.

There is nothing to do, just go to eat and drink and play around," said Vu Dinh Du, who has been at Chaffee since early May. For two, sometimes three hours a day, Du gathers his seven children, and the children of friends, under a tree to teach English.

The 100-degree daytime heat is stifling. Even the children are lazy. At night the barracks seem hotter than during the day. The Vietnamese seek coolness outside.

They walk in pairs around the camp or sit in small groups and talk and watch the children play baseball or tennis. Sometimes they bring cots from the barracks, but mostly they sit on the ground, ignoring the chiggers that drive away Americans.

"Usually we talk of the past, our lives in Vietnam, our families, our friends," said Thuan. "Sometimes we talk of sponsors and life in America."

A group of fishermen demonstrated two weeks ago to protest the slowness in finding sponsors. That sparked a counter-demonstration among refugees wishing to express "gratitude to Americans." The second was larger than the first. U.S. officials attributed both demonstrations mostly to boredom.

There are 13 YMCA recreation centers and libraries at the camp for the 24,000 refugees where they can play ping pong, read or sew. The tennis and volley ball courts go unused during the heat of the day.

English classes are conducted daily, but refugees attend only two hours a day. "We wait so much," said Pho. But Pho's waiting is almost over. He and his wife and two children, who have been at Chaffee since early May, have found a sponsor and will leave Aug. 4.

A few make work for themselves, like Nguyen Dinh Son, a 28-year-old attorney who represents Vietnamese charged with crimes before a U.S. magistrate who holds court weekly at Ft. Chaffee. Son said he doesn't charge the refugees to represent them.

"They are very poor," he said. "Usually they are charged with stealing. That's one reason I don't want to leave. They need a lawyer even if they do bad things."

Son has a sponsor in Los Angeles and is scheduled to leave Aug. 1, but he doesn't want to.

"We have many conveniences here," he said. "All my family is together. I don't worry about the future."

Many watch the American movies that are shown — several different ones each night — outside, projected on the side of barracks.

Two tennis courts are lighted and the children play, five or six on each side of the net at one time. Teen-agers play volleyball across nets strung between barracks, lit only from light filtering out of the buildings.

Young men gather in the snack bars to drink beer, talk with Americans and listen to the country-western songs on the juke boxes. Vietnamese women seldom go in the snack bars at night.

There are church services, well attended the chaplains say, every night.

Manges Want Bond Back; Parr Waits in Jail Cell

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (UPI) — Over a year ago, millionaire South Texas rancher Clinton Manges put up a $121,500 cash bond to bail his then political ally, Duval County Judge Archer Parr, out of jail on a perjury conviction.

Since then the two have ended their friendship and Parr has been ousted as county judge.

Now Manges wants his money back and Parr is in jail again, ordered Thursday after the U.S. 5th Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans upheld his perjury conviction and 10-year prison sentence.

U.S. District Judge D.W. Suttle is expected to rule today on the rancher's motion to "exonerate and release" the cash bail posted on Parr's May 9, 1974, conviction.

If Manges' motion is successful, it could make it more difficult for Parr to get out of jail. He is held in the Bexar County jail in a cell by himself in the first-floor hospital area on orders of Suttle.

District Judge O.P. Carrillo, a political foe of Parr's, ordered Parr removed earlier this year as Duval County Judge, a position he held for 16 years.

Immediately upon Parr's conviction on six counts of lying to a federal grand jury, Suttle ordered his bond increased from $5,000 to $121,500 and ordered him jailed until the money was deposited in cash to the court registry.

Manges obtained the money from his San Antonio bank and freed Parr after one night in the Bexar County jail. Manges has since allied himself with the Carrillo family in Duval County.

Parr started the falling out with Manges, accusing the rancher-banker of trying to take over Duval County's tangled political machine. He asked Suttle to substitute rancher Praxedis Canales as surety on his bond, but Suttle has not acted on the request.

Then on May 20, 1974, Suttle sentenced Parr to 10 years in prison and fined him the maximum of $60,000. The judge demanded the fine plus $3,810 be deposited in the registry in cash before he could be released to appeal the case.

Suttle set the bond at the exact amount of $121,500 Parr allegedly lied about to the grand jury. Parr was convicted of lying, when he said the money was for legal fees rather than for illegal payments from a Duval County water district as the government alleged.

Quints' Pop Makes No Deals

DALLAS (UPI) — Jerry Davis, the 21-year-old father of quintuplets, knows the future will be a financial struggle but he doesn't want to make any deals his children would regret later.

"We're not rich and in this day and time it's hard to get by with just two," he said during the weekend. "We appreciate anything that comes forth, but we must be careful and make sure it is in the kids' best interest. We don't want to get something that may seem good for the kids and then find them paying for it the rest of their lives."

In an attempt to avoid such circumstances Davis, a $175-a-week mechanic, and his wife, Debbie, 20, have hired an attorney to advise them an offers. He has made arrangements for free milk and bottle service, but no other deals.

"We are hoping to protect our children from any exploitation," he said. "We want to make sure that it isn't a case of someone trying to use our children. We haven't gotten any such offers yet, but from what we have been told we should expect some."

The four girls and one boy were born July 18 at Parkland Hospital, the first quintuplets to be born in Dallas. The children were kept in the intensive care unit for five days, and then transferred to the premature nursery and given good chances for survival.

Pair See Elephants; Collect $150 Reward

HUGO, Okla. (UPI) — Two men decided to try their hand at elephant hunting Sunday and captured a $150 reward even though they failed to capture two young pachyderms missing in the area since July 12.

Jack Ellis and Travis Owens received the money for sighting the elephants, Isa and Lillie. They said they turned a mule loose in the area and it led them to the missing animals.

However, by the time an animal handler from the Carson and Barnes Circus arrived the elephants had fled.

An all day search by 50 men on horseback failed to spot the elephants, who have been hiding more than two weeks in a heavily wooded area covered with dense undergrowth.

"They are really elusive," Gladys Black, secretary for the circus' winter headquarters, said. "They have been spotted several times now but we never can get within range with the tranquilizer gun."

Circus officials hope to tranquilize the elephants, valued at $10,000 each, then chain them and haul them back to the circus grounds.

Spitting Tips From Experts

RALEIGH, Miss. (UPI) — Don Snyder says it's his "two finger pucker" technique, the timing and the arch in his back that makes him the world's champion tobacco spitter.

"I use a lot more body movement than most people, with a headsnap coming back farther, and I spit a lot higher, so it takes a lot more timing — just like a baseball pitcher," he explained after a world record performance Saturday.

The 28-year-old livestock inspector from Eupora won the National Tobacco Spitting Contest, held in a farm pasture near this central Mississippi town, with a world record squirt of 31 feet, 1 inch.

Snyder was a six-time champion of the contest until he was dethroned two years ago by Raleigh attorney John Raymond Tullos, who set the world record at 27 feet, 6 inches in 1975.

The contest started out as a local event, but it has grown each year and now offers something for almost everybody. Almost 8,000 persons attending Saturday's contest heard speeches from five gubernatorial contestants — one of them, attorney Cliff Finch of Batesville, even tried a little tobacco spitting — and there was barbecued chicken, hot dogs, a coon-on-a-log contest and a kiddie carnival featuring a greased pole.

The accuracy contest was won by Jeff Barber, a 15-year-old sophomore at Pearl High School who said he's been chewing and spitting since his grandfather taught him six years ago.

The title "Miss Spit" was claimed by Joan Herring of Jackson, who shot a brown glob of tobacco juice 13 feet, 4 inches to defeat two competitors — one of them 8-year-old Molly Taylor of Pinola.

And In the Cherry Pit Division

EAU CLAIRE, Mich. (UPI) — Anyone spitting pits in the second annual International Cherry Pit "Spit Off" Aug. 2 had better do it right.

First of all, removable dentures out of his mouth or foreign objects that might give a pit-spitting advantage are not allowed.

The cherry must be inserted into the mouth whole. The spitters eat all of the fruit's pulp before spitting.

The tournament's chairman, Herb Teichman, also owner of the Tree-Mendus fruit orchard where the contest is held, says qualifiers will be put into three classes, according to their spitting range.

In order to qualify, he said, each contestant must stand behind a foul line and spit his pit into one of five large tanks 12 to 40 feet away.

Each successful qualifier will receive one to five pounds of free cherries, depending on which number tank the pit hits. "Qualified pit spitter" badges will be awarded.

A handicap system has been developed to compensate for any trajectory advantage of taller contestants. For every inch that a contestant stands over four feet, he must step back two inches from the foul line.

The youths' parents drove 200 miles to Ocean City to claim their sons.

"I think it's the most idiotic law I ever heard of," fumed Pyle's mother. "What about the girls in those flimsy bikini tops?"

Juvenile officer Floyd Bassett predicted chances were "pretty poor" the cases would go to trial, but that the decision was up to assistant state's attorney Joe Moore, who prosecutes cases involving juveniles.

Apollo Crew to See Families But Doctors Continue to Watch

HONOLULU (UPI) — The Apollo astronauts, whose heroes' welcome was delayed by a prolonged hospital stay with serious lung irritations, will be reunited with their families for rest and relaxation in Hawaiian beach houses.

Doctors today said Thomas Stafford, Vance Brand and Donald "Deke" Slayton will be released from Tripler Army Medical Center Tuesday, but will remain in Hawaii for at least 10 more days to avoid complications.

The pilots, who breathed poisonous fumes in their spaceship during their return last Thursday from a historic nine days in space, were much improved but very susceptible to common germs and diseases such as colds and flu, doctors at Tripler and at the Johnson Space Center in Houston reported.

Dr. Peter Barteloni, chief of medicine at Tripler, said he was "optimistic" for a full recovery with no long-term effects.

"I don't have anything at the present time that would lead me to think otherwise," Barteloni said. "I don't think I can go beyond that. In other words, I think the progress is satisfactory."

The leak of nitrogen tetroxide — part of the Apollo's steering rocket propellant — forced hospitalization of the astronauts shortly after they were picked up from their Pacific Ocean splashdown. X-rays showed the fumes, which turned to nitric acid when it contacted their lung tissues, irritated their lungs.

The inflammation and treatments with a cortisone-type steroid drug called prednisone have reduced their immunities and doctors want to keep the pilots isolated from large groups of people who could infect them with respiratory diseases.

"As far as crew status is concerned, the crew is making excellent progress," said Richard S. Johnston, director of life sciences at the Johnson Space Center. "Deke Slayton in particular, who had shown the most changes in his X-rays, has, to use the doctors' words, 'made a fantastic recovery.'"

"And the other two crewmen, likewise, are coming along well."

Their wives and several of their children will fly to Hawaii, possibly late today, to join the astronauts when they leave the hospital.

Slayton's wife, Marge, said the extended stay was disappointing.

OCEAN CITY, Md. (UPI) — Two teen-agers have been arrested as the first violators of new ordinance requiring all persons to keep their chests covered while on the beach.

John R. Pyle and Stephen Simpson, both 16, of Vienna, Va., said they were warned about their naked chests by a policeman at noon Saturday and arrested by the same officer about two hours later. They spent two hours in jail.

The ordinance — an updated version of a 1933 law passed last week by the city council — was necessary to retain the "family image" of this resort city, officials said.

Lloyd Home Still Unowned

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (UPI) — The 15.7-acre lot that silent screen funnyman Harold Lloyd called home still doesn't have a new owner.

An auction Sunday narrowed the possible new owner to Lloyd's "Greenacres" estate to either a Los Angeles businessman or an Iranian immigrant.

Nasrollah Afshani, 60, a retired distributor and importer of electrical appliances who lives in Loma Linda, Calif., put up a top bid of $1.6 million.

L.M. Goodman, 53, a secretive man described by his son-in-law as an investor, bid $1.1 million.

But Afshani wants to pay on a term basis. Goodman offered cash.

The estate's trustees have until 5 p.m. Tuesday to decide which bid to accept or to reject both offers.

Afshani said he was a fan of the bespectacled bungler of the silent movies and intends to keep the house and perhaps sell some of the land.

Goodman did not disclose his intent for the property.

Once a gathering place of the stars in the era when "crazy movie people built crazy places in the crazy 20s," the estate was opened to public tours in 1973 but was suspended last year because it wasn't self-supporting. Upkeep was estimated at $250,000 a year.

Twenty-one persons qualified to bid on the property, built in 1929, by posting a deposit of an irrevocable bank letter of credit of $250,000 in favor of the Milton J. Wershow Co. Trustee. Only about half a dozen qualified bidders made an attempt to buy the estate.

The bidders were camouflaged by the swarms of neighbors, sightseers and the curious who prowled the grounds for a first-hand inspection. The property, a bit neglected since Lloyd's death in 1971, straddles both Los Angeles and Beverly Hills and has a yearly combined property tax of $47,377.11.

The property that was sold includes the grounds, the 44-room Italian Renaissance mansion and all other buildings, a pipe organ, hanging fixtures and hidden safes.

None of the furnishings or memorabilia belonging to the Lloyd family was included.

The property, sold as-is, includes a canoe course, 9-hole golf course, swimming pool, pony stable, aviary, 12 water fountains, gardens and greenhouses.

The buyer will have to assume about $475,000 back mortgage payments and $200,000 in interest on the mortgage.

Production Shortage At Kansas' Rabbit Farm

HILL CITY, Kan. (UPI) — Clinton Peat says he can meet the human demand for rabbits if he can increase the rabbits' demand for each other.

Peat was forced to close his rabbit plant in Hillcrest in November 1974. His bunnies weren't doing enough of what they're famous for doing, and that caused an unprofitable shortage.

But Peat has negotiated a $250,000 government loan to build and equip four buildings and to buy 10,000 breeding rabbits to restore the plant to full production.

"We'll have to acquire the breeding stock from other growers as soon as we can get started," Peat said. "There's no problem at all marketing them. It's just being able to supply the demand."

Although the revived plant still lacks cages, feeders, nest boxes and other equipment, Peat said the facility should be open by the end of the month. Production of rabbit meat and other products could start in six months.

He said he needs to process 8,000 fryers a month to keep up with orders from supermarket.

Double-Ring Ceremony Unites Miami Couple

MIAMI (spec.) — The First United Methodist Church of Miami was the scene of the July 13 wedding of Miss Donna Lynn Philpott, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Donald C. Philpott, and Jay Carey Strahan son of Mr. and Mrs. J.C. Strahan, all of Miami.

Rev. Lewis Holland, cousin of the bride, of Booker, performed the double-ring ceremony before a setting of baskets of white gladioli and blue daisies. The rings were taken from a circle ring pillow of satin and lace, a gift of the bride's great aunt.

Mrs. Janice Monds, sister of the bride, of Amarillo, provided traditional organ music and accompanied Dee Ann Flowers as she sang the "Wedding Song" and "More."

The bride, given in marriage by her father, with the "her mother and I" vowal, wore a formal gown of white nylon fashioned with a mandarin neckline, fitted bodice and long sleeved trimmed with lace. A detachable train enhanced with trim of a lace panel added to the A-line skirt trimmed with a wide band of lace. The dress was borrowed from her sister, Mrs. Ann Bryant of Miami. Her full circle headpiece was edged in lace and attached to a half hat of seed pearls. The veil was borrowed from a sister, Mrs. Janice Monds of Amarillo.

She carried a white bridal Bible topped with a miniature arrangement of white roses and carnations. The Bible belonged to her mother, who carried it at her own wedding. She also wore a blue garter borrowed from her mother and carried a birthdate penny in her shoe.

Miss Karen McNair was maid of honor. She wore a floor-length blue polyester sleeve dress with a sheer blue and white print waist length jacket. She carried a white mum with blue streamers.

Serving as best man was George Campbell, cousin of the bride of Amarillo.

Ushers were Doug Tennant, brother-in-law of the bridegroom and Larry Bryant, brother-in-law of the bride.

As few as one or two seeds of the castor bean plant, used as a houseplant or an ornamental plant outdoors, have been known to cause death.

Mrs. Jay Carey Strahan
...nee Miss Donna Lynn Philpott

Mrs. Jerry Turner presided at the guest register.

Immediately following the ceremony, a reception was held in the fellowship hall. The bride's table was covered with a lace cloth over blue and centered with blue swans under a blue rain tree. The two-tiered wedding cake was decorated with blue rose buds and was topped with two white doves.

Mrs. Ann Bryant served the cake and Miss Sharon Philpott presided at the silver punch bowl. Both are sisters of the bride.

The groom's table, covered with a white lined cloth, was centered with a triangle stand with an arrangement of blue flowers surrounding a blue candle. Mrs. Debbie Tennant and Miss Sheila Strahan, sisters of the bridegroom, served the german chocolate cake and presided at the silver coffee service.

Mr. and Mrs. Strahan are 1975 graduates of Miami High School. The plan to attend college in Amarillo this fall.

For a short wedding trip to Red River, N.M., the bride wore a pale blue pantsuit styled with a waist length jacket. She wore the corsage lifted from the bridal bouquet.

Mr. and Mrs. J.C. Strahan, parents of the bridegroom, hosted a rehearsal dinner at Ferg's Cafe in Miami.

Mrs. Stone Installed

Mrs. H.M. Stone was recently installed as president of the Worthwhile Home Demonstration Club at a meeting in the Courthouse Annex.

Other officers installed by Mrs. Elaine Houston, County Extension agent, were Mrs. C.A. Carter, vice president; Mrs. Corrine Wheeler, secretary; Mrs. Ralph Brookshier, treasurer; and Mrs. Maggie Smith, reporter.

Mrs. Stone appointed new committee chairman which are Mrs. W.K. Dougal, 4-H; Mrs. Ralph Brookshier, finance; Mrs. Beulah Walling, recreation; Mrs. H.C. Skaggs, cultural art; Mrs. Janice Myers, family life; Mrs. Mattie Brown, health and safety; Mrs. Edna Doughtie, citizenship; Mrs. Lottie Reynolds, and Dorothy Chisum, telephone committee; and Mrs. Estelle Purvis, parliamentarian.

Plans were completed for entertaining the Progressive Home Demonstration Club Aug. 15 with a brunch at 9:30 a.m. at Mrs. Lester Reynolds home at 420 N. Crest St. Mrs. C.A. Carter, Cora Lee Robertson and Maggie Smith will be co-hostesses for the brunch.

The next meeting will be Aug. 22 at Mrs. Mattie Brown's home, 503 N. Russell at 2 p.m.

14 members and two visitors, Mrs. Lady Bryant and Mrs. Elaine Houston, were present. Mrs. Stone was hostess for the meeting.

Hints from Heloise

Dear Folks:

I met the cutest girl at an airport recently and when she recognized me, she just couldn't stop talking.

But I did finally figure out something that she had learned that I surely hadn't thought about in 15 years of writing this column.

It's a way to remember the hints that appear in our column daily.

When she sees a hint that she wants to try, she cuts it out and either tapes it on whatever product that it concerns or, better yet, she says she puts a rubber band around each bottle and just shoves it under there.

Say she is going to cook pancakes for instance — she tapes the hint for a new way to fix 'em on the box. Or sweeping floors, she tapes it to her vacuum or broom — and the next time she goes for that certain product, she has used all her life, she tries our new suggestion!

If she likes our way better, she leaves the hint taped on until it finally soaks through her noggin "NOT to use the old way."

Only when she gets this soaked into her beffy good, does she destroy the hint that was printed.

'Now, that's not wasting any time or brains, right? So let's all tip our hats to a darling doll.

Jewels Can Be "Fingerprinted"

NEW YORK (UPI) — For many years it has been accepted in trade circles and by detective story writers that expert jewelers invariably can recognize a particular diamond or other precious stone.

But this is, at least partly, fictional convention.

It's true that no two diamonds, emeralds or other transparent, faceted gemstones are exactly alike and minute descriptions of the more famous and valuable stones are circulated in trade circles. Also, a diamond cutter or an expert jeweler can recognize his own work just as a dentist can.

But until very recently there has been no systematic way to identify positively valuable but run-of-the-mill gemstones so a permanent record of each stone can be kept on file like human finger prints.

Now the Weizman Institute of Science in Haifa, Israel, has developed such a system and Chicago diamond merchant William Levine has acquired North American rights to it. Levine has formed a company called Gemprint, Inc., to operate the system under license from Julso, Ltd., of Haifa, the manufacturer for the Weizman Institute.

Levine's firm will start offering the Gemprint service to American jewelers this fall. First, he has to arrange for a computer network to file the gemstone identifications so they can be retrieved instantaneously for verification purposes when a stone is offered for sale or when one is stolen and it is necessary to supply the police and the insurance company with evidence of identity.

Levine said jewelers, insurance companies and the police long have been interested in better means of identifying gems.

The Gemprint system is not 100 per cent effective, Levine conceded, because it depends on shining a laser beam on the "table" or top facet of a cut stone. Hence, if a very large diamond is stolen and recut, its original spot-like table reflections are changed and the identification record made useless.

"But very few diamonds are big enough to encourage thieves to recut them without taking a serious loss," Levine pointed out. "For the overwhelming majority of cut transparent stones, Gemprint will provide a satisfactory permanent identification."

The Gemprint camera can photograph gems of any size without removing them from rings, bracelets or other settings. Whole pieces can be photographed as well as the individual stones.

In operating the system, Levine's firm will issue two certified numbered photos of each stone identified. One will go to the purchaser for use in insuring it or selling it and the other will be stored in the computer indexed central registry in Chicago.

The individual jeweler will be supplied with a little laser-powered camera that weighs 26 pounds and makes instantaneous photos with ordinary black and white Polaroid film in four by five inch blowup of the stones. The laser camera will be rented to jewelers. Levine said European and Asian jewelers and police had hailed the system as a breakthrough in the long, puzzling problem of positively identifying run-of-the-mill diamonds and other transparent gemstones.

Transparency is an absolute requirement for the system. Some emeralds that are nearly opaque, for example, cannot be identified by means of Gemprint.

Three Enter Dress Show

Three girls from Gray County will model their own creations Tuesday at 2 p.m. at the District 4-H Dress Show at the Fine Arts Building of Amarillo College as they vie for top honors and the right to represent the 22 county Panhandle area in state competition in Dallas this fall.

They are Kathryn Morgan, senior division, Bobbie Skaggs, intermediate division, and Penny Miller, junior division.

"Bicentennial of Fashion" is the theme for this year's revenue, according to Mrs. Elaine Houston, county extension agent for some economics.

Already winners of county competition, the contestants will be judged on their sewing and construction skills, overall appearance, modeling abilities and their 4-H record books.

State Senator Max Sherman will present the junior awards and Congressman Jack Hightower will give senior awards.

In addition to the naming of five top seniors, awards will include the recognition of the girl making the best all-cotton outfit, the best all-wool, and the best all-synthetic garment. In addition, this year, for the first time, a division has been set up for the best all-western or riding outfit.

The junior level contest is for younger girls aged 9 to 14. They will not compete past the district level. Senior winners will advance to state competition in Dallas Oct. 3.

Accidental Swallowers Can Be Treated At Home

By MICHAEL J. CONLON

WASHINGTON (UPI) — If your child accidentally swallows a household cleaner or gulps prescription medicine, chances are that he or she can be treated at home.

Dr. Richard W. Moriarty, director of the National Poison Center Network, says fully 70 per cent of accidental poisonings involving children can be treated without a panicky ride to the hospital or the cost of emergency room treatment.

But Moriarty says the problem lies in many parents' failure to realize most cities have poison control centers where quick information about treating victims can be obtained by telephone.

He advises parents to check such centers out, and keep the telephone number handy.

Moriarty's center in Pittsburgh has developed, and is promoting nationally, an additional device that may help prevent poisonings in the first place. It consists of a round sticker with the reverse of the popular "smile" face, a frown with the tongue sticking out.

In tests both the drawing and the off-green color were found to be offensive to children. A parent is supposed to show the can of drain-cleaner or other dangerous substance to the child, tell him it's bad, and then affix the sticker to it while the child watches.

Information on the sticker program is available from the National Poison Center Network, 125 De Soto St., Pittsburgh, Pa. 15213.

A new survey by the Consumer Product Safety Commission estimates that about 32,000 persons were treated in the nation's emergency rooms last year for injuries from carbonated soft drink bottles. Most injuries were caused by explosions.

The study also reports that big soft drink bottles are more dangerous than smaller ones. The reason is simple: there is more force behind an explosion from a big bottle, the parts are larger and they travel farther.

Most injuries involved fingers and hands, but the severest were to the eyes.

The Commission held hearings last year on the question of bottle safety, but it has not yet come up with proposals to reduce injuries.

Nurses Agree Flowers, Plants Are Good Medicine For Patients

Flowers and plants aren't just pretty to look at, but have a psychological effect that encourages some patients to feel better, according to national poll of nursing supervisors.

To many hospital patients, pretty flowers and green plants are a symbol that he or she is loved by the person sending the gift. Ill persons eagerly to tender, loving care, the nurses explain, and therefore many take a turn for the better after a kind, reassuring word from a physician or nurse.

The views of 2,400 supervisors of nursing in the nation's hospitals and nursing homes were sought by Florists' Transworld Delivery (FTD), the intercity floral delivery network. Of the 650 responses, more than 90 percent were in accord in believing that flowers have a therapeutic effect on many patients. More than 70 percent of the nursing heads felt that plants symbolize "life" and "growth" to many patients who, as they watch plants develop and grow strong, are stimulated to do the same.

A few nurses thought the psychological impact of flowers and plants might work in reverse. Plants and flowers may die due to lack of care, they noted, possibly causing some patients to brood and become depressed. However, one respondent added that a patient may draw a psychological lesson that if good care helps flowers thrive, good care also will help him thrive.

In reply to other queries, most nurses said floral gifts should be delivered to patients in the afternoon, rather than in the morning. Relatives and friends also were urged by the nursing directors to send bouquets of brightly colored flowers, rather than muted tones.

Whether a flower arrangement or a plant, the gift should be small due to limited space in hospital rooms, it was pointed out.

The personal favorite flower of nurses is the rose, as it is of the general public.

Among the nurses' comments on the therapeutic benefit of flowers were the following:

"fresh and lovely flowers are an incentive to be healthy — a token of love, hope and beauty..."

"flowers are a reminder that someone's thoughts and prayers are with the patient."

"being part of something growing and feeling you're part on the development and growth can give a feeling of satisfaction."

"a plant is a symbol to a patient that it is something to take home, so he's going to get better and go home."

Household Hints

By United Press International
If grease or fat catches fire, smother it at once with a tight-fitting metal cover or pour lots of salt, baking soda or flour on the flames. Never use water on a grease fire because water will spread the blaze.

Cloudy fluid in canned food may be a sign of spoilage. But it also may be caused by minerals in the water or by starch from overripe vegetables. If liquid is cloudy, boil the food rapidly 15 minutes before tasting. Do not taste or use any food that foams during heating or that has an off odor.

Turning on exhaust fans over the kitchen range while cooking, and in the bathroom while showering or bathing, exhausts heat and steam and helps cool the house.

Water, which is an important part of all cells and fluids in the body, carries nutrients to and waste from body cells. It helps the body digest and absorb food and regulate body temperature.

If natural cheese molds, cut off the mold and use the rest. The molds in such cheeses as blue, gorgonzola, Roquefort or stilton produce characteristic color and flavor.

Combination foods such as soups and stews need to be processed for canning with recipes especially designed for them. The correct time and temperature should be determined scientifically. Experiments by homemakers can lead to spoilage and deadly botulism poisoning.

Keeping window shades and drapes drawn during daylight hours will keep lots of heat out of the house. Closed windows and doors also help keep rooms cool.

To thaw commercially frozen cakes, follow the manufacturer's package directions. For un-iced homemade cakes, thaw one hour at room temperature with wrapping intact. Directions for commercially iced cakes usually suggest removing them from freezer bag or box before thawing for an hour. To keep beads of moisture from forming on the icing, use a rigid cake cover high enough so that it does not touch the cake.

If the flavor, texture and color of your home frozen foods are not as good as their commercial counterparts, consider this: appliances used by manufacturers freeze faster and at lower temperatures, sealing in freshness and nutritive value more effectively.

Torrential Rains Ruin Lower Food Price Hopes

Torrential rains and windstorms this week washed away any remaining hopes of lower retail prices for fruits and vegetables at the late summer peak of the harvest season in the Northeast and several other areas of the country.

Food prices in general continued to rise, although the cost of feeding a family of four in New York City last week dropped 6 per cent from the previous week.

The New York market basket figure is based on a weekly 38-item study by the Department of Consumer Affairs. It cost $67.11 last week, 38 cents less than that of the week ending July 4.

But in a Dallas supermarket, the price of a pound of butter rose to $1.22 a pound, while chicken was as dear as meat in some cities covered by UPI's regular survey of basic food prices in the United States.

Hartford's top price of 99 cents a pound for whole broiler/fryer chickens was almost double the average of 58 cents recorded March 16. The low of 48 cents a pound in San Diego was 10 cents below the average. At the higher prices, about the only way to save money is by using the birds in combination dishes, such as main dish salads or hot entrees, including Spanish paella and chicken a la king.

Bargains in pork chops were equally hard to find. A high of $2.28 a pound for loin end chops was reported in Cincinnati, almost a dollar above the average. The low, 99 cents, was in Phoenix.

The butter price in Dallas represented a 26 cent a pound increase over the average during the base week last March 16. The low of 89 cents in Hartford, Phoenix, Buffalo and Milwaukee dropped 7 cents below the average. One Hartford supermarket sold a premium brand of corn oil margarine for the same price as butter there. At 89 cents a pound, it was the top for the week in UPI's survey. The low, 53 cents, was recorded in Grand Rapids.

Pickers looking for inexpensive eggs to hard-boil or deviled could find them in San Diego. The 48-cent-a-dozen price for large grade A eggs there was the national low, 29 cents below the average. The high of 85 cents a dozen in Hartford and Honolulu was 8 cents above the average.

Ground chuck for hamburgers, meatballs and combination dishes rose to $1.39 a pound in Miami, and was $1.28 or $1.29 in five other cities. However, Los Angeles reported only 69 cents, 26 cents below the March average, and in six cities it sold for $7 to 89 cents a pound, compared with the 95 cent a pound average.

tripleton K-Q-x of hearts. Therefore, reasoned East, if he took his ace of hearts, he would be creating two heart tricks for South. So East elected to play the seven of hearts on West's jack, to give South one immediate heart trick instead of two. As is evident, South's queen won the trick.

After winning his heart queen, South cashed the ace and king of spades. When the queen failed to drop, South exposed his hand and claimed the contract: two spades, one diamond, five clubs, and one heart.

Of course it is apparent that if East had won the first trick with the heart ace, and returned a heart, declarer would have lost the first five tricks, and incurred a one-trick set. It is equally apparent that if West had opened his fourth-highest heart (the eight-spot), East would have taken his ace and played back a heart, thus resulting in declarer's defeat.

Executive Playboy Says His Case Not Unusual

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A Xerox salesman, fired for telling a magazine about his nightly pursuit of "foxy skirts," says he is not unique. He contends girl chasing is business as usual among executives.

In a $1 million lawsuit, Stuart Bauer says Xerox executives frequently take time off from company training sessions to try out sales techniques on women at singles bars — and their sexual successes often leave them exhausted.

A little over a year ago Brauer described his lifestyle — financed by his $30,000 salary — in detail for Potomac, the Washington Post Sunday magazine.

"I chase foxy skirts all the time," said the young salesman. He described his plush apartment, two sports cars, stereo equipment, expensive suits — and his search for a different woman each night.

Entitled "Last of a Breed, In Entrepreneurial Pursuit of the Illustrious Foxy Skirt," the article brought letters from angry women, one of whom said she hoped he was the last of the breed.

And he was fired by Xerox, who, according to Brauer, said it was not only the embarrassment of the story but also an act of "exaggerated sexual misconduct" on a Fort Lauderdale beach at a sales training course that got him fired.

The suit, for "mental and emotional stresses" allegedly caused by the firing, said training sessions are "a virtual mecca of sexual activity" for high level Xerox executives who "view their stay in Fort Lauderdale as a fun-in-the-sun vacation from wives."

The sessions emphasize not sales but "extra-curricular activity with the opposite sex" including orgies, with pursuit starting on the beaches during two hour lunches and continu-

Hathaway Was Victim Of System

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Stanley Hathaway, who resigned — exhausted and depressed — after five weeks as interior secretary, was a victim of a merciless Washington system, according to three senators.

President Ford Friday accepted Hathaway's resignation "with my deepest regrets." The 51-year-old former Wyoming governor has been hospitalized since July 15 suffering from exhaustion, depression and mild diabetes. He has received psychiatric care.

Hathaway was sworn in June 13 after a grueling Senate confirmation battle during which virtually every major environmental group opposed his nomination.

Sen. Mark Hatfield, R-Ore., said Friday Hathaway was a sensitive and open person, unprepared for the "fierce political hassle surrounding his confirmation."

"As a relaxed 'old shoe' personality, he took very personally all the attacks on his views and his record," Hatfield said. "His sensitivity should have been an asset in this city where insensitivity and thick-skinned callousness unfortunately seem to be better equipment for survival."

Hatfield said the Senate shouldn't rubber stamp nominees but should treat them with dignity.

Sen. James A. McClure, R-Idaho, said, "I suspect it was the bitterness of that fight, marked by 43 days of the hearing process in which Gov. Hathaway's integrity and beliefs were needlessly and constantly maligned, that left it toll."

Sen. Frank Moss, D-Utah, said, "I am greatly concerned about how the sometimes laborious and merciless cross-examination of nominees for public office takes place. It becomes a trial by ordeal."

Hathaway wrote Ford that he was resigning "for reasons of personal health."

The resignation becomes effective on appointment and Senate confirmation of a successor. The department will be run meanwhile by its solicitor, Dale Frizzell.

Some political sources said William Banowsky, president of Pepperdine University and political ally of former California Gov. Ronald Reagan, might be a candidate for the post.

Former Viet POW Bitter With Routine

TULSA (UPI) — Former Vietnam prisoner of war Harold Monlux left the Air Force disappointed and bitter because of what he describes as inconsequential "Mickey Mouse routine."

Monlux now is studying law and plans to possibly enter politics.

Monlux went straight from flight training to Vietnam, flying 10 combat missions during his first 13 days in Vietnam. He was shot down during his 11th mission, on Nov. 11, 1966.

When he was released in March, 1973, the former POW's disappointments began with flight proficiency training.

"I wasn't very impressed with flying when I got back," he said.

Instead he took a ground assignment as a survival training instructor at Fairchild Air Force Base near Spokane,

Wash., but even there "I was very discouraged and disappointed with what I saw."

Monlux said 9 per cent of his time was tied up with paperwork and other duties he considered "Mickey Mouse routine" and inconsequential; what he was supposed to be doing.

"Maybe I was disillusioned because I never saw a staff job before," he said. "I may find myself pretty well disillusioned all the way along the way (as a civilian)."

Monlux already has had some civilian disappointments, too. A major retail store canceled his credit card and, even though his wife saved most of his service pay while he was a POW, he has been unable to obtain a housing loan.

Mrs. Monlux, who was active in POW-MIA organizations and efforts to obtain the release of her husband and the other prisoners, supported the family by working as a registered nurse.

Although he is a native of Sioux City, Iowa, Monlux has decided to settle in Tulsa, his wife's hometown and the possible site of his political efforts.

"Things are going to move here and I want to be part of it," he said.

Long-Nosed Snakes Carry Advantage In Bright Color

By JIM CORNETT
Copley News Service

The bright, multicolored reptile known as the long-nosed snake seems ill-suited to his barren desert environment. Deserts are popularly known for their vast stretches of sparsely covered ground. A brightly colored animal with shades of black, yellow and red would seem to stand out against the drab landscape, revealing itself to hungry predators. Yet these colors are actually an advantage due to the long-nose's nocturnal habits.

During daylight hours many predatory animals can readily distinguish various colors. This is true for man and other creatures who possess color vision.

Yet, at night even the most brilliant yellows and reds fade to various shades of gray as the available light is simply not sufficient to reflect colors. Thus our brightly hued long-nosed snake suffers no disadvantages as a result of his contrasting pattern; at night he looks like any other drab-colored animal. In fact his markings tend to break up his image making him all the more difficult to detect.

Danger awaits the long-nose that ventures out during the day. Zoologists Alden Miller and Robert Stebbins describe an interesting account from California's Joshua Tree National Monument of a red-tailed hawk that was discovered to have eaten a long-nosed snake.

Since hawks do not hunt at night it seems possible the reptile became careless and revealed his attractive coloration to the morning sun — a mistake that cost him his life.

Known to herpetologists as Rhinocheilus lecontei, the long-nose gets his name from his elongated snout. At night lizards, other snakes, small rodents and some insects will bury themselves for protection. The long-nose uses his snout to dig them up, trapping these animals in their burrows. Powerful coils render the victims helpless.

The long-nosed snake is found throughout much of Texas, Oklahoma and southwestern Nebraska, west to central California. Any elevation where spring and summer evening temperatures remain above 60 degrees Fahrenheit is acceptable to our two-to-three-foot friend.

Because of this reptile's control on rodent populations he should always be welcomed along our American nature trails.

Flowers Ecology Asset

TOKYO (UPI) — They're putting the flowers to work in Japan — which may help explain why what once was an essentially have-not nation has become one of the world's superpowers.

No more standing around just looking pretty. The flowers, specifically a special strain of begonia, are taking up employment in the field of ecology.

Petunias and morning glories were put to the test and found wanting. They can go on being just pretty flowers.

But the begonia is a new strain developed by the Tokyo Metropolitan Government's Isotope Research Center. Its name is now winter Queen Gamma 3, and its job is to give an indication of the seriousness of Tokyo's smog — known here as photo-chemical haze.

The Winter Queen Gamma 3 also is supposed to give an early warning of photo-chemical smog in what some claim to be the most smog-ridden city on earth.

The strain was developed by exposing the seedlings to radiation. When the beautifully petalled flower is left out for six hours in an ozone concentration which calls for a smog alert, the leaves develop white spots.

If the smog continues for two days, the spots become blisters. The Isotope Research Center said. Then, the leaves turn brown and are filled with holes.

After exposing the new begonia to radiation, it became more sensitive to photo-chemical smog than the petunia and the morning glory, according to the center.

In 1974, there were 26 official smog warnings. So far this year, there have been eight.

The smog is blamed mainly upon automobile exhaust fumes which rise into the atmosphere and, when the right amount of sunlight hits the right amount of cloudy fumes, it descends upon the city.

It is spotty, however, in that it sometimes will hit only a small area. Schools have had entire classes felled with wheezing, coughing and fainting. Other areas only a mile away, or less, are comparatively unaffected.

Japan, with 20 million exhaust fuming vehicles, has the highest density of automobiles in the world. Traffic patrolmen on some of the highly traveled streets wear gas masks. The trees and the bushes in the gardens surrounding the Imperial Palace must be replaced on the average of every two years.

The nation must import 80 or more per cent of the materials it needs to live and manufacture. But if the begonias apply themselves, Japan may become the first country in the world where flower power really works.

Old Times Draw In Tourists

NANTUCKET, Mass. (UPI) — Stretched out on a fine sand beach on Nantucket as the day turns cool in late afternoon, with the ocean crashing nearby and the breeze blowing in tendrils of fog, it's easy to imagine masts and sails just over the horizon, just beyond sight.

They were there once, the big far-ranging ships of the Nantucket whalers whose hunt for Moby Dick and the sperm whale was at its most successful just before the American Revolution. But by 1820 Nantucket was surpassed as a whale port by New Bedford and the development of kerosene by 1860 destroyed the sperm oil industry.

Today Nantucket's main industry is tourism.

The whale feeling follows the visitor throughout Nantucket, an island 15 miles long, six miles wide at its widest, and 30 miles out to sea off Cape Cod.

It's there as he walks the cobblestones on Main Street, as he goes along the side streets to see widow's walks and fanlights set above the doors in federal buildings, many of those outside the town proper built by whalers. Fire in the mid 19th Century destroyed some gems in town, and it was whale money that built their often striking replacements.

Nantucket maintains its air of New England seaside charm through strict rules about any architectural innovations within the town area; homeowners must get clearance even to change a window line.

Everywhere there are grey, weatherbeaten shingles, some covered in roses, often sparkling in sunlight and sometimes deepening in color as they are misted by fog.

For anyone who wants to see America, to get the feel of another day in American history, Nantucket is a good choice. The only qualification is that the traveler must love the sea and its accoutrements—about 90 miles of fine beaches from high surf to glassy smooth, excellent fishing, a sprinkling of lighthouses, the masts of sail-ships crisscrossing the harbor and intermixed with powerboats from putt-putts to yachts.

The only community of any size on the island is the town of Nantucket, meaning faraway land in Indian dialect, according to local lore. There also are small developments clustered in the fishing townlet of Madaket, the summer colony at Siasconset (pronounced "Sconset"), and way out on a spit of sand called Wauwinet.

The atmosphere of the island is quiet, although year by year the cacophony of modern living encroaches more and more. Where once the majority of visitors biked around the nearly flat island, now on the narrow roads near town the cyclist is endangered by cars with license plates from as far away as Colorado.

On Main Street on fair weekends the day trippers from the mainland tend to overpower the town's quiet charm.

Then they leave the town to those who come for longer stays.

If Nantucket is quiet, it is not dull. There are several really fine restaurants with fare ranging from continental cuisine to fish so fresh it almost bites the fork. There also are restaurants and nightspots sufficiently pretentious to please the snob in the worst of us, and a few inexpensive eating places with good, plain American cooking, although these have become scarce as whale's teeth in the last few years.

Entertainment after dinner runs more to guitars and sea chanteys than to nightclub acts and everyone tends to turn in on the early side hoping for good weather the next day.

Artists always have been drawn to Nantucket, and there are a dozen galleries on the island for browsing or buying.

The established tourist sights are pretty much self-explanatory—the Whaling Museum, the Old Jail (1805), the Old Mill, the island's oldest house, the Jethro Coffin House (1686).

Where you stay in Nantucket depends on what you want, and for how much. For several generations college and post-college young people have stayed in rooming houses in town, usually a family's old home—spotlessly clean rooms, sparsely but cheerfully furnished. The tab ranges from $8 to $16 a night.

You can go up from there, all the way to the White Elephant (with swimming pool) where Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis stays when she's on the island. There room rates are $47 to $65 for two, with your choice of accommodations in the hotel or in a tiny cottage on the grounds. Another outstanding entry is the Jared Coffin House, a restored 1845 mansion that charges $26 to $45 for two.

Nantucket can be reached by plane via Air New England, or by ferry from Hyannis or Woods Hole, Mass. Reservations must be made months in advance if you want to be sure of bringing your car across, but there's no need for booking ahead if your party consists of just people. You can bring a bike across or rent one on the island, and outside of town there are both special bike paths and roads on which cars appear only at interludes.

The weather on Nantucket, tempered by the water that surrounds it, tends to be cooler in the summer and warmer in winter than on the mainland. Nights are invariably cool, days sunny except when a nor'easter blows.

But there's a special flavor to wind and rain on an island as it slicks the rocks and bends the beach grass and foghorns blow in the harbor from which 125 whaling ships once sailed.

Russian Cosmonauts Return After 63-Day Space Flight

MOSCOW (UPI) — Two cosmonauts, loaded with the scientific results of a record-breaking 63 days in orbit, returned safely to earth Saturday and set the seal on the Soviet Union's most spectacular week in space.

"We feel well and are ready to fulfill new tasks," said Lt. Col. Pyotr Klimuk and civilian engineer Vitaly Sevastyanov after their Soyuz 18 capsule bumped down in exactly the same area of the Central Asian desert where two Soyuz 19 cosmonauts landed Monday after linking up in space with three Americans.

Tass gave both touchdown points as 34 miles north of the Kazakhstan town of Arkalyk. Moscow radio said, "The successful landing confirms that the U.S.S.R. is approaching step by step the creation of orbital stations with replaceable crews."

Klimuk and Sevastyanov spent their 63 days aboard the Salyut 4 scientific station, easily breaking the Soviet space endurance record of 30 days set by two Soyuz 17 cosmonauts earlier this year.

They also surpassed the 59 days in orbit of the U.S. Skylab 2 crew and fell short only of the American Skylab 3 record of 84 days.

The Soviet Union was the first nation to put a man into space and a Russian was the first to walk in space, but the Soviets have never before attempted the range of simultaneous space activities the world has watched this week.

Red Hot Red Sox Defeat New York

The Boston Red Sox may have fond memories of July 27, 1975 right on through the World Series but the date they're remembering right now is August 24, 1974.

That's the date on which they had a seven-game lead and then went into a tailspin that cost them the American League's Eastern Division title. They lost 10 of their next 12 games, suffering shutouts in seven of them and failing to score an earned run in two others.

The Red Sox scored a 1-0 and 6-0 sweep of the New York Yankees Sunday and lead the AL East by eight games over the Baltimore Orioles, who also won a doubleheader. Barring a "baseball miracle," they knocked the Yankees out of the race by sending them 10 games out of first place.

Manager Darrell Johnson played it cool after the sweep, blowing smoke rings with a big cigar and saying, "they're working very well together... we're playing good baseball."

Jim Rice, who along with Fred Lynn gives the Red Sox one of the most sensational rookie combinations in the game's history, said it a little better.

"What I did today is past," he said. "I'm just looking forward to tomorrow. I'll live on memories after the season is over—and I think there's going to be some pretty good ones."

Rice went 0-for-4 in the first game but Lynn scored the only run when he reached base on an error, stole second and scored five in the 10th to win the game.

Al Brumby tied the score with a three-run homer in the Orioles' six-run ninth, Ken Singleton singled in the tie-breaking run in the 10th and Tommy Davis followed with a grand slam homer.

The Cleveland Indians defeated the Detroit Tigers 7-2 after an 8-7 loss, the California Angels beat the Minnesota Twins 6-1, the Oakland A's downed the Chicago White Sox 10-1 and 7-1, and the Kansas City Royals edged the Texas Rangers 2-1, in other AL games.

In the National League, it was Pittsburgh over Montreal 4-1 and 5-3, New York over Chicago 4-1 after a 4-2 loss, St.

Louis 9 Philadelphia 6, Los Angeles 5 Cincinnati 3, San Diego 3 Atlanta 1, and San Francisco 3 Houston 1.

Tigers 8-2, Indians 7-7
Aurelio Rodriguez tripled home Jack Pierce in the eighth inning to give the Tigers their winning run in the first game with rookie Fernando Arroyo picking up his first win. Oscar Gamble drove in three runs with a double and a homer in the second game with Fritz Peterson going 6-1-3 innings for his fifth victory and Lerrin LaGrow suffering the loss.

Angels 6, Twins 1
Dick Lange pitched a four-hitter for his fourth victory and rookie Dave Collins hit a two-run homer for the Angels, who dealt the Twins' Jim Hughes his ninth setback against eight victories. Tony Oliva homered for the Twins.

A's 10-7, White Sox 1-1
Reggie Jackson and Joe Rudi homered in each game as the A's rolled over the White Sox. Vida Blue won his 14th game with an eight-hitter in the opener and Stan Bahnsen picked up his seventh win in the second game.

Royals 2, Rangers 1
Váda Pinson's run-scoring double in the fifth inning was the big blow for the Royals as Steve Busby won his 13th game against eight losses. Gaylord Perry was tagged with his 15th defeat.

Bucs Dump Brew

Willie Stargell is like that giant shark in "Jaws"—he can destroy you with one swipe.

Stargell, after striking out twice previously against Dan Warthen, belted a three-run homer in the eighth inning off the Expos' rookie to give the Pittsburgh Pirates a 5-3 triumph over Montreal in the nightcap Sunday for a sweep of their doubleheader.

The triumph, coupled with Philadelphia's loss to St. Louis, boosted the Pirates' lead in the National League East to 5½ games over the Phillies.

In the opener, Ken Brett combined on a three-hitter with Larry Demery and also singled home a run to lead the Pirates to a 4-1 triumph.

Stargell, who has won many games with late-inning homers during his career, unloaded his 19th homer of the season and the 365th of his career to cap a four-run inning that erased the Expos' 3-1 lead.

Frank Taveras began the rally with a walk and Rennie Stennett and Al Oliver followed with singles to score one run before Stargell unloaded a 410-foot shot over the centerfield fence.

Stargell, who was unable to make solid contact against Warthen in three previous at bats, switched to a lighter bat in his last trip to the plate.

"He (Warthen) threw a lot harder than anyone anticipated," said Stargell. "I took a lighter bat hoping that I could make contact and maybe get a sacrifice fly."

The Pirates had 14 hits in the opener, with Stargell, Stennett, Dave Parker and Taveras contributing doubles. Brett, who had two hits and singled home a run in the sixth inning, went 6-2-3 innings to gain his seventh win in nine decisions. Demery did not allow a hit over the final 2-1-3 innings.

The Pirates begin a three-game series with the Phillies at Pittsburgh tonight, and judging from the attitude of the Pirates' players following the doubleheader sweep the Phillies are in for trouble.

"We're ready to play anybody," said Oliver. "There's no reason to be especially 'up' for this series. We play the same whether it's Montreal or Philadelphia. We're always psyched up around here."

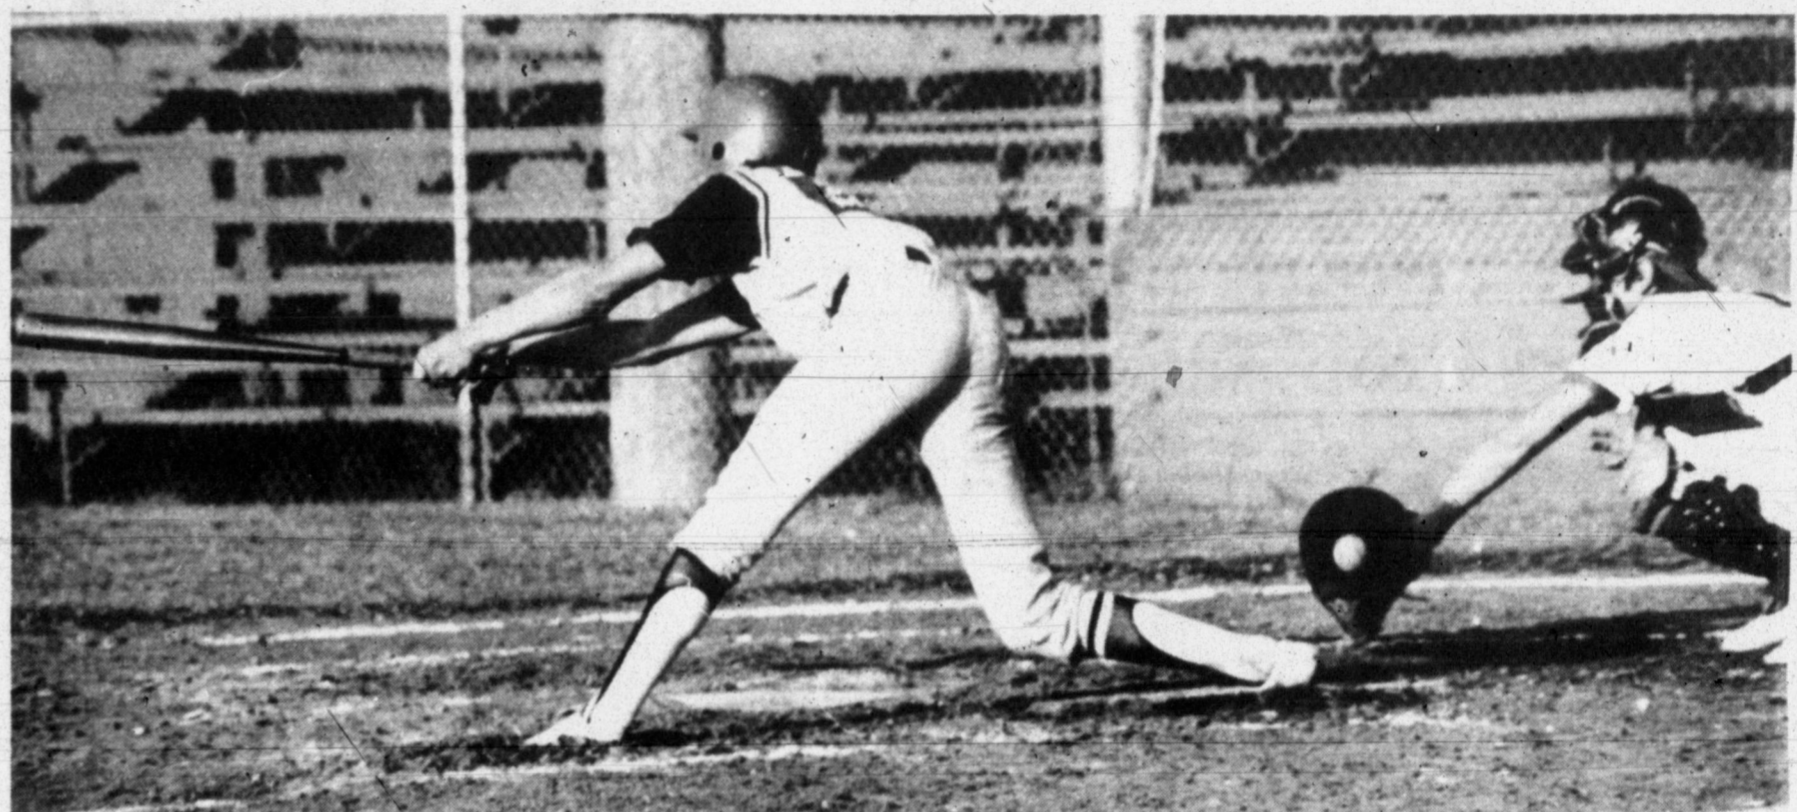

The Phillies have beaten the Pirates 10 straight at Philadelphia, but Pittsburgh has won the same number in a row over the Phillies at Three Rivers Stadium.

"We never seem to win here and Philadelphia never seems to win here," said Stargell.

In other NL games Sunday, St. Louis downed Philadelphia 9-6, Los Angeles defeated Cincinnati 5-3, San Diego beat Atlanta 3-1, San Francisco topped Houston 3-1 and New York edged Chicago 4-1 in 10 innings after losing the opener of their doubleheader 4-2.

In American League action, Boston took two from New York, 1-0 and 6-0, California beat Minnesota 6-1, Kansas City nipped Texas 2-1, Detroit topped Cleveland 8-7 then lost 7-2, Baltimore swept Milwaukee, 7-4 and 11-6 in 10 innings and Oakland defeated Chicago twice, 10-1 and 7-1.

Giants 3, Astros 1
Chris Speier and Dave Rader hit homers to lead the Giants to victory over the Astros. Speier's homer was his third in the last six games and gave him 15 runs batted in over the last eight games. John Montefusco pitched five innings and gained credit for his 10th win in 14 decisions.

Strike Three, You're Out!

Inability to hit the ball was the main reason the Pampa 14-year-old all-stars lost 2-1 to the Pampa 13's in the championship game of the Pampa Optimist Club Invitational Baseball Tournament Saturday at Optimist Park. Catcher is Mark Jennings, who held onto 10 "third strikes" in the contest. The two Pampa teams, in reaching the finals, eliminated Amarillo No. 1, Amarillo No. 2, Borger, High Plains Babe Ruth League and Top O' Texas Babe Ruth League. The Pampa tourney is slated to be an annual affair, according to Babe Ruth president Robert Dixon, tourney director. (Pampa News Photo by Mike Higgins)

Easy Date Is Easy Winner

RUIDOSO DOWNS, N.M. (UPI) — Veteran quarterhorse owner Walter Merrick figures his champion filly Easy Date is worth a million dollars right now, with the price going up every time she steps onto a racetrack.

The rarely beaten filly added to her awesome credentials Sunday by speeding to an easy victory in the $65,000 World Championship Classic at Ruidoso Downs.

The win, the 20th in 23 starts for the daughter of Easy Jet, boosted her career earnings to $751,602 and moved another step closer to becoming the first quarterhorse in history to earn $1 million.

Although Merrick indicates he has no plans to sell the horse which has already earned more money than any other in quarterhorse racing history, he knows he would have no trouble finding a buyer.

"If we ever decided to sell her, I'm sure a syndicate would be formed pretty quickly to acquire her," Merrick said. "I haven't given much thought as to the pricetag we'd put on her but I suppose it would be around $1 million."

Just as in most of her races during her brief two-year career, Easy Date Sunday got to the front early and then outran the talented field of challenger to the wire in the 440-yard race.

The filly covered the distance in 21.51 seconds and returned $2.60, $2.80 and $2.90 to her backers. A pair of longshots, Maskeo Lad and Snazzy Rocket finished second and third.

The $32,907 check Easy Date earned in the race is about what she has averaged every time she has gone to the post. Maskeo Lad, one of the few horses who has beaten Easy Date, picked up $11,188 and Snazzy Rocket earned $6,581 for third.

Easy Date's next test will come in the $500,000 All American Derby in August at the same Ruidoso Downs track where she has never been beaten.

Joe Jeffers won the battle of the Ford's Body Shop pitchers Saturday night at Optimist Park where he pitched the Pampa 13-year-old all-stars to a 2-1 win over Ricky Marsh and the Pampa 14-year-old all-stars in the finals of the Optimist Club Invitational Baseball Tournament.

Both Jeffers and Marsh will be third-year players for Ford's next Babe Ruth season. Jeffers, one of three 14-year-old players added the 13-year-old team to make it more competitive, gave up four hits in the championship game, while Marsh yielded just six.

The Pampa 13's fell behind, 1-0, in the second inning of the contest and battled back with two runs in the top of the fourth.

In the bottom of the second, Steve Stout led off with a single for the 14's second and moved to third on a ground out to the second baseman by Marsh. Stout scored on Buddy Brown's sacrifice fly to centerfield.

Greg Quarles led off the fourth for the 13's with a walk. Clyde Coffee walked and Quarles scored on a single by Brett Achley. Bobby Taylor knocked in Coffee with a base hit.

The 14's threatened in the bottom in the fourth after Stout singled and moved to second on a throwing error by the third baseman. Buddy Brown was safe on a fielder's choice, putting runners on first and third with one out.

Rick Dougherty then hit a shot to rightfielder Coffee, who speared the ball and threw to first to double up Brown.

Jeffers gave up a base hit to Keving Hall in the fifth and struck out four in the last two innings while not allowing another hit to pick up the win.

Marsh pitched his way out of trouble throughout the contest. He left two on base in the second, two in the third, three in the fourth, two in the fifth, two in the sixth and one in the seventh.

Jeffers struck out 10 while Marsh fanned two.

"It was a good game to end the tournament on," said Paul Sims, coach of the 14's. "We knew we had it tough going into the game. If we won the first game, we would have to play a second game."

"Everybody's talking about how the 13's put three 14's on the team and how that lost us the tournament. But I don't think so. The 13-year-old players on that team have been playing together a long time and they're just great players."

"Sure, you got Jeffers on that team and he pitched a great game. But, if you look at the stats, the 13-year-old players got four of the six hits."

"With all the talent Pampa showed in the tournament, it's easy to predict how great the Babe Ruth League's gonna be next year."

Weiskopf Good Student

ILE BIZARD, Que. (UPI) — Tom Weiskopf took a lesson from the master, then went on to beat him for the Canadian Open title.

The master, Jack Nicklaus, had to settle for second money, his third Canadian open runner-up performance, when Weiskopf holed a three-foot birdie putt Sunday at the first extra hole of a sudden-death playoff. Both men had tied at six-under-par 274 after 72 holes.

Last Wednesday, during a practice round on the Royal Montreal Golf Club's par-70, 6,628-yard Blue course, Nicklaus gave Weiskopf a putting tip, telling his fellow Ohioan to move his hands directly over the ball.

"He said I had my hands a little bit behind the ball," Weiskopf said. "I tried to work on it this week. Any time you make a change it makes you concentrate harder on what you're supposed to be doing."

After losing the Masters by a stroke to Nicklaus earlier this year, Weiskopf took particular pleasure in winning this event and especially beating Nicklaus.

The 32-year-old former British Open champion, who pushed his PGA earnings this year to $169,565 with the $40,000 first prize here, said he never really got over the letdown of losing at Augusta.

"I was disappointed, as disappointed as I've ever been," he said. "But this kind of takes care of that, especially since I beat Jack."

Weiskopf, who at times has seemed to resent playing second fiddle to the 35-year-old Nicklaus—he was three years behind Nicklaus at Ohio State University—lavishly praised his tournament rival.

"I think it's more rewarding to me to beat the greatest player who's ever played the game of golf and still is playing it, Jack Nicklaus," Weiskopf said.

It was Weiskopf's second Canadian Open title; he won at Richelieu Valley near here in 1973.

Nicklaus, who found one of the few titles he never held elude him again, conceded that he lost the tournament when he drove into a water hazard at the 148-yard 18th hole. He took a bogey five.

"The drive at 18 was the one that hurt," Nicklaus said. "It was particularly surprising since I hadn't hit a ball to the left all week."

He finished with a 68 Sunday while Weiskopf who gained the tie with a 15-foot birdie putt on the 17th, had 67.

Gay Brewer missed a chance to make it a three-way playoff when his 45-foot birdie putt went by the cup at 18. He settled for par, a round of 69 and third-place money of $14,200 with five-under-par 275.

Arnold Palmer finished fourth at three-under 277, picking up $9,400.

Little League Playoff Today

There will be no admission charge to the sectional Little League playoff between the Pampa National League all-stars and Muleshoe at 7 p.m. today in the National League park.

Instead, donations to Little League International will be taken at the contest, which will decide which of the two teams advance to the state tournament next week at Waco.

Pampa is the District 1 champion, while Muleshoe won the District 26 title.

Pampa's 8-6 win over Borger last week marked the first time in four years a Pampa team kept Borger from advancing to the state tourney.

Cripple Creek Lives Again

CRIPPLE CREEK, Colo. (UPI) — The El Paso mine once was the 10th largest producer in the famed Cripple Creek-Victor gold fields. Now it is going back in business, thanks to new technology and sharply increased gold prices.

Dale Weaver and a group of investors took a look at what they are paying for gold today and figured the time had come to restart the El Paso mine.

Weaver, a former theology student and importer-exporter, assembled about 50 stockholders this year to buy the defunct pit.

The new company, El Paso Gold Mines, Inc., will not bring new ore up from underground — at least not yet. Instead, the firm will use a rebuilt mill to process an estimated 275,000 tons of gold-bearing rock left in piles by earlier miners.

"They dumped the rock because the gold in it was of too low a grade to extract economically," Weaver said. "Now, with the gold prices about five times what they were, we feel it will be worth our while to process the ore and remove the gold."

"You might say we're involved in a gold-recycling process."

Weaver said the mill, which began operations in January, will be able to process 50 tons of ore per day when it is in full production in several months.

"We expect to get about 10 ounces of gold from each 50 tons of ore," said Weaver. "Our processing costs will run about $9 per ton, or $450 a day."

"At current prices of $165 per ounce, that will leave us $1,200 per day, from which we will have to subtract the refining costs. We hope to come out about $1,000 a day in the black."

The mill will produce a gold-rich sludge which will be shipped to the American Smelting Company in El Paso, Tex., for refining. The sludge, or concentrate, will contain "about 95 per cent of the gold in the original ore with about one-fortieth of the original bulk," said Weaver.

American Smelting will pay Weaver and his associates 92½ per cent of the refined gold's value, based on an average gold price of the previous month. The Texas company will keep the remainder for its refining and processing costs.

Weaver and his investors will use the initial profit from the recycling process to expand underground operations. That phase, expected to begin in two or three years, will produce "an ore much richer than the dump ore," he said.

Other plans, which Weaver said hinged on the price of gold and the success of current operations, include construction of a mill five to seven times the size of the present one.

Not So Gloomy Oil Picture Forecast

TULSA (UPI) — A gloomy prediction by petroleum industry forecasters has failed to materialize and the industry is expected to enjoy a busy second half of 1975, the Oil and Gas Journal says in its upcoming midyear report.

Many observers felt oil companies would drastically cut their domestic operations after Congress killed the percentage depletion allowance, the report says.

However, a Journal survey of 150 companies reveals drilling remained strong in the first half and will continue strong in the second half of 1975.

Any budget cuts have been very selective with refining, petrochemicals and marketing taking larger percentage reductions than exploration and production, companies told the Journal.

The magazine's editors say the cuts to refining and marketing budgets should come as no surprise.

"It reflects reaction to the impact of Federal Energy Administration regulations. Industry officials say the FEA rules don't allow a refiner to recover capital expenditures or to earn a return on capital," they say.

The largest cutback probably will occur in money for federal offshore lease bonuses, projected to reach $5 billion. Two major lease sales this year reaped only $507.6 million in bonuses.

The Journal estimates 35,075 wells will be drilled this year, a 6.6 per cent increase over 1974, while demand for petroleum products will average 16.9 million barrels a day, a gain of only .5 per cent over last year.

Crude oil production is expected to continue its decline through 1975 with total production expected to be 8.4 million barrels a day, a drop of 4.1 per cent over last year.

An estimated 13.2 per cent increase in foreign imports oil is forecast.

A Journal editorial in the issue says Congress should not impose further economic burdens because of the current high level of industry investment.

"A number of explosive bills currently being considered could do a neat wrecking job," the Journal says.

"Big issues are still in doubt. For instance, will controls be kept on crude prices? Will they be rolled back? Will gas prices at the wellhead be freed or will federal controls be tightened to include intrastate gas sales? Will profits from oil be subjected to a windfall tax? Will Congress take the first step to nationalization of the industry by organizing a federal oil company?" the publication asks.

Democrats Predict Gloom If Ford Proposals Pass

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Democrats in Congress have been given an apocalyptic view by their own economic experts of what could happen to the economy if President Ford lifts price controls on domestic oil as he proposes to do.

Ford administration experts insist that the major impact will be an increase of 5 to 6 cents a gallon in the price of gasoline by the end of 1978, and the President has said that is a small price to pay for conserving oil and making the United States less dependent on imports.

His economic advisers contend the price lid can come off gradually to boost domestic production without hampering recovery from the recession or triggering another round of inflation.

But some Democratic economists predict that decontrol will throw a million Americans out of work and boost the cost of living by 2 per cent by the end of next year and 3 per cent by the end of 1977.

The Democratic analysis comes in two parts: one by Gerry, who performed an economic autopsy to find out what happened to the American economy — not just to the motorist — during last year's post-embargo oil price increases; the second by Charles L. Schultze, former Johnson administration budget director, who predicts what will happen if oil prices rise in the next two or three years.

The two men, both economists, prepared their analyses for congressional Democrats after Ford first proposed a plan to decontrol prices. Congress rejected his first proposal last week but Ford has now sent another to Capitol Hill that would accomplish virtually the same decontrols over a slightly longer period.

Perry found that last year's oil prices drained some $35 billion from American consumers. That had to come from somewhere and the immediate result, he said, was that there was $35 billion less to spend on other goods and services. That meant less demand, less industrial production and fewer jobs.

Perry traces at least one-third of the increased unemployment — 1.5 million jobs — to failure of the government to restore that lost purchasing power.

The result: the worst slump since the black depression days of the 1930s.

Schultze has taken the lesson of the recent past and applied it to the future, if prices go up again.

He points out that if oil prices rise, coal prices will follow and so will the cost of unregulated natural gas sold within the states.

Ford's pending plan would allow the price of "old" oil — produced from wells existing in 1972, comprising 60 per cent of domestic production — to rise gradually from the current ceiling of $5.25 per barrel to $13.45 by November, 1978.

So-called "new" oil — the rest of American production — is not now controlled and is selling for about $13.50. Ford proposes rolling the price back Sept. 1 to $11.50 a barrel and then letting it rise gradually until it also reaches the $13.45 level in November, 1978.

Schultze has come up with some startling figures.

Based on "old" oil being decontrolled over a three-year period and assuming a $2 dollar-a-barrel increase in oil prices by Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, he says the direct cost to consumers by the end of this year would be $5.5 billion.

By the end of 1976, he predicts, the higher consumer costs would be $19 billion and by the end of 1977, $30 billion.

If energy costs $30 billion more, consumers will have that much less to spend on other items.

Copter-Powered Cultists Blamed For Mutilations

KIOWA, Colo. (UPI) — Cattle mutilations have popped up again and this time ranchers are speculating cult worshippers using helicopters are responsible for the deaths of 58 head of livestock in the area since spring.

A meeting earlier in the week of officials from six counties turned up more of the same speculation that the killings were the work of cult worshippers who may use animal parts in their rituals.

One officer said he believed the killers operated by helicopter at night using a spotlight to pick out cattle and horses.

"I got a look at one (helicopter) through field glasses the other night over my place just a little west of Kiowa," said Elbert County

Undersheriff Bill Waugh.

"I was able to seek the lights in the cockpit," he said. "That was a pretty good-sized chopper." He said he could not hear the engines of the aircraft and "my dogs did not bark at all."

Waugh said five carcasses of mutilated livestock were found in Elbert County this week, including a bull valued at $1,200.

Flywheels May Power Autos In Near Future

MENLO PARK, Calif. (UPI) — The flywheel has been around as long as the potter's wheel, but in just 15 more years they may be powering automobiles.

"It now appears we will be able to build a 350-pound flywheel that can store enough energy to drive a Ford Pinto about 30 miles," said Peter M. Newgard, head of a Stanford Research Institute team developing the new energy system for cars.

Newgard said the new auto will be a hybrid of power systems, using a flywheel, gasoline to replenish the flywheel's spin on long trips, and electricity while parked at night to rev up the flywheel's rotation.

The flywheel works like this — when the driver steps on the accelerator, the rotational energy of the flywheel is transferred to the wheels of the vehicle, causing them to rotate faster and reducing the flywheel's spin. When the vehicle decelerates, the energy contained in the moving car can be transferred back to the flywheel, restoring some of its speed and its stored energy.

Flywheels would be best for cars driven on trips up to 20 or 30 miles. Newgard said, noting that these short-haul rides account for 75 per cent of all urban driving.

One of the major stumbling blocks in development of the flywheel-powered automobile is that conventional materials, such as steel, would be too bulky and heavy to withstand the flywheel's high rotational speeds.

Newgard said his group is working with a new fiber composite material which has strength-to-weight ratios up to 10 times as high as that of steel but which does tend to stretch across the weave of the fibers.

Pampa Markham Barber Shop

Mike Wesbrook

Mike Wesbrook was not satisfied with what he was doing until he read the advertisement that got him interested in the business he now owns.

Pampa Markham Barber Shop opened two weeks ago at 614 West Francis.

Wesbrook was employed with another local Barber shop until he decided to open one of his own.

"I learned a lot from working in the King's Row Barber Shop," he said.

Wesbrook named his business after the line of hair care products he carries. Jim Markham is a hair stylist in Hollywood. He has shampoo, hair conditioner, and hair spray products he has developed and distributes.

Wesbrook explained that each of the shops that carry these products is called a Markham Style Innovator Shop.

According to Wesbrook each person should have daily hair care — especially during the summer months when the hair is exposed to the sun.

"The reason we recommend conditioners for the hair is to restore all that has been taken out by wind, sun, and such," said Wesbrook.

Wesbrook claims that his business is good even though he has been open for only two weeks.

"I am doing better already than I thought I would do when I began styling hair and opened my own business."

Your Horoscope

TUESDAY, JULY 29

Your birthday today: Opens a long period of balancing conflicting pressures to achieve satisfactory daily living. A tight budget—or, rather, the self-discipline that makes one possible—is essential. Relationships will sort themselves out, and you will wind up with fewer contacts fairly soon. But they will be more significant. Today's natives have a great potential for leadership. At times they may divert it into physical perfection, or athletic or technical pursuits.

Aries [March 21-April 19]: The consequences of past minor indiscretions will converge upon you, with the result that no one will agree with your plans. Older people raise questions for which you are likely to have no immediate answers.

Taurus [April 20-May 20]: While your activities have moderate to good encouragement, those of your associates meet complex conditions requiring not only your attention but perhaps some of your cash as well. Give it all serious study.

Gemini [May 21-June 20]: Expenses run higher; try to see what you're getting for your money. Friends can safely be left to their own devices and may have a very interesting story to tell when you get back to them.

Cancer [June 21-July 22]: Business affairs contain complications which you must take into account on the spot. Extra work coming your way promises special benefits in the future but shouldn't be rushed now.

Leo [July 23-Aug. 22]: Stop right where you are for a hard look at yourself and your environment. It's time to move to a better situation, but not on impulse. You are likely to have spending whims, but expect nobody to chip in.

Virgo [Aug. 23-Sept. 22]: Your scholarly knowledge of facts and figures stands up and your friends in good stead. Patience and persistence pay off. There's special reward coming to those who stick to the job.

Libra [Sept. 23-Oct. 22]: Costs increase slightly, and you must make some decisions on how your current enterprises can be managed. Arrange to spend more time with those you cherish. Bring them symbolic gifts.

Scorpio [Oct. 23-Nov. 21]: Any subject will do for bickering and arguments can ensue. Long or hasty journeys are ill-advised. Avoid exposure that affects your health. Remove hazards from home and work areas.

Sagittarius [Nov. 22-Dec. 21]: Overoptimism leads to potential difficulties. Creative projects are vulnerable to high-priced intrigue and may get out of hand before you realize their cost. Make your own decision.

Capricorn [Dec. 22-Jan. 19]: There is no room for experimentation if your efforts are to succeed. Perplexing choices are made more easily, perhaps very quickly, on property or home changes and self-improvement.

Aquarius [Jan. 20-Feb. 18]: In the course of minding your own business there's a thorn or two among the roses. Distant news isn't complete and can't be used as a basis for action. Plan on alternatives in any case.

Pisces [Feb. 19-March 20]: Financial moves fail to bring hoped-for results, particularly if you've been careless with details or poorly advised. Children create a stir and may subject you to extra expenses as well.
