Shuttle Down Safely!

EDWARDS AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. (AP) — America's rocketship Columbia and her two pilots swooped safely back to Earth today, surviving a blazing plunge from orbit and a heart-stopping landing on a hard-sand runway in the Mojave Desert.

Astronauts John Young and Robert Crippen guided the 80-ton spaceship to a flaps-up, wheels-down landing at about 1:21 p.m. EST on runway 23 on expansive Rogers Dry Lake, climaxing a brilliant and historic 2^{1}_{4}-day flight that could set this nation's course as a space-faring nation.

"What a way to come to California," said Crippen as Columbia soared over the Golden State coastline. Two sonic booms exploded over the landing area.

Columbia came home like a gigantic glider, starting its descent an hour before touchdown with a 2^{1}_{2}-minute burst of two engines that broke its orbital speed 172 miles above the Indian Ocean.

The spaceship slowed from 17,400 miles an hour to about 16,000 mph in minutes and dipped into the upper edge of the atmosphere, where gravity gripped the vehicle and protective tiles began to glow with re-entry heat.

"Hello Houston, Columbia here," Commander John Young reported when the ship escaped its blackout. "Columbia, you've got perfect energy, perfect ground track," said Shuttle Control. The tiles held.

After 54 hours, Young and Crippen had left their weightless world.

Columbia, diving ever closer to Earth, her speed declining, passed north of Australia and headed out over the Pacific. For 15 minutes, during the hottest part of re-entry, temperatures up to 2,700 degrees seared the ship and ionized gases enveloped it, blocking communications between crew and ground.

It was nail-biting time in Shuttle Control at the Johnson Space Center in Houston. Would a winged vehicle come through this period of stress? Would the tiles hold out the heat?

The answer came at 1:06 p.m. Columbia dashed out of the blackout and there were a lot of smiles in the control center.

Carson Show Suspended

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — In a move that TV and movie script writers proclaimed a victory for their four-day strike, NBC has suspended production on "The Tonight Show" and said it will show reruns indefinitely.

"If Johnny Carson has taken this stand, it represents a great tribute by one of our top performers to the value of writers in this industry," Writers Guild President Melville Shavelson said Monday.

But it remained unclear whether the suspension resulted from Carson's support of the striking writers. Neither Carson's publicist nor the show's producer returned telephone calls Monday night.

NBC spokesman Carol Fleischer announced the suspension, but would not elaborate on the reasons for it.

Reagans Get $30,000 Refund

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan and his wife, Nancy, waiting until the last week to file their 1980 federal tax return, are due a refund of almost $30,000.

Although Reagan's income was more than halved last year when he ran for the nation's highest office, he still made almost a quarter-million dollars and paid $67,465 in income taxes and $2,098 in Social Security, self-employment taxes.

Only $232 in taxes were withheld from the president's income of $227,968, but he listed $99,000 in estimated tax payments. He asked that his $29,669 overpayment be applied toward his 1981 estimated taxes.

The Reagans' joint tax return for 1980 was dated April 8, a week before the filing deadline, and was released Monday by the White House. Deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes said it probably would be filed today.

Speakes said the president's 1980 income was lower than the $515,878 he earned in 1979 "because he was campaigning. He cut out his speaking engagements."

15 Students Leave On Tour Today

Fifteen Snyder High School students left town at six this morning for an eight day American Heritage Program tour of Washington D.C., Philadelphia, New York City and Boston.

The group and their sponsors left by car to travel to the Dallas-Fort Worth airport where they will catch a flight to Washington.

School counselor, John Short and his wife, Wanda, are accompanying the group on the college accredited tour.

They will spend three days in Washington taking in the sites; the White House, Lincoln Memorial, Kennedy Center, Mt. Vernon, Smithsonian Institution and the FBI Building, to name a few.

During their three days in New York City, the students will be able to visit the Empire State Building Observatory, Times Square, Greenwich Village, the Statue of Liberty and Radio City Music Hall.

The tour will spend their last two days in Boston. They plan to visit the Old Sturbridge Village which is a re-created New England farming village, and will tour the historical sites of Boston.

The tour group is scheduled to return to Snyder April 21.

Board Approves WTC Contracts

Professional contracts for 69 persons--including basketball coach Larry Dunaway--were renewed Monday night by the Western Texas College board of trustees.

The new contracts for the 1981-82 school year were approved by the board following a 55-minute executive session called for the purpose of personnel discussion.

Contracts were considered as a group and the vote was unanimous.

With Dunaway on the list for a new contract, the vote ended more than a month of speculation that the first-year coach was on his way out.

The issue first surfaced March 11 when an erroneous report was broadcast that Dunaway had been dismissed. College officials quickly squelched that rumor.

At the request of Dunaway, a meeting with the college board was held on March 16 to discuss the status of the boys basketball program, but no action was taken.

Also at last night's meeting, the board authorized advertisment for bids for the construction of a new wing to the college dormitory.

The new facility will house 48 students. Bid specifications will be ready later this week and will be open at 4 p.m. on May 19.

Construction is expected to begin in June and would take about a year. Estimated cost of the project is $462,000 and would

Awards Presented By Conservation District

Seven conservation awards were presented by the Upper Colorado Soil and Water Conservation District 115 during an awards banquet at The Shack Monday night.

Roger Williams of Gail was the recipient of the Rancher Award and Donald Tate of Hermleigh received the Farmer Award.

Williams, a Snyder native, operates 2,490 acres of farm and ranch land in Borden County which he leases from his father. He has been farming and ranching for over 20 years and has carried out 1,200 acres of brush management and range seeding and several projects for better water distribution. It was for Williams' management of resources that he was given the award.

Tate, a native of Hermleigh, was recognized for his adherence to crop rotation practices for soil conservation at a time when most of his neighbors plant only cotton. He operates 647 acres of farm and ranch land north of Hermleigh in Scurry County. Tate is chairman of "D" Community for the Scurry County Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service and works with the Hermleigh Community Improvement Committee.

Conservation Education Scholarships were awarded to three area teachers for their work in the field of conservation. Recipients were Sandra Kay Baker, Molly Kattes and Betty Richardson.

Ms. Baker teaches first grade at Northeast Elementary. She lived on a farm in the China Grove area and stresses the importance of keeping vegetative land cover to control wind and water erosion. She says she hopes to gain information by attending a Conservation Education workshop so she can do a better job of teaching and promoting conservation with her friends and neighbors.

Ms. Kattes, a first grade teacher at Central Elementary, has 14 years of teaching experience and has grown garden vegetables and flowers in the classroom as part of a conservation learning experience. She also wants to learn from the education workshop so she can help instill young minds with the importance of conserving soil and water.

Ms. Richardson teaches second grade at Central

The Rev. Jim Folsom, pastor of the Church of the Nazarene, will be the speaker for Wednesday's Holy Week service being held at First Presbyterian Church by the Scurry County Ministerial Alliance.

His topic will be "The High Cost of Slavery." Music will be presented by Mrs. Mary McPherson, soloist, and Mrs. Judy Neill, organist. Lunch is served at the conclusion of the services, which begin at 12:10 p. m. and end at 12:30 p. m. The pulic is invited to attend.

Thunderstorms Bring Varied Rainfall Totals

Thunderstorms skipped across the Snyder area Monday night and early today, dumping varied amounts of moisture accompanied by brilliant lightning and booming thunder.

The rainfall reports ranged from half an inch to more than two inches. However, indications were that all of Scurry County, except a small spot near the south county line, got enough moisture to be of considerable benefit to farmers and ranchers.

The official gauge at city water plant had exactly two inches of rain at 7 a. m. today, and some unofficial gauges measured up to 2.50 inches. The heaviest rainfall apparently was in the central and eastern parts town. To the southeast, rain amounting to an inch or more was reported, but it was lighter near the south county line.

Half an inch was reported at Fluvanna and .60 inch was logged at the Lake Thomas dam. However, there were reports of rainfall up to two inches in a small area west of the dam. There had been no runoff into the lake this morning, and it was not known whether the heavier rains covered enough watershed to give the lake a significant boost

Electric power service was interrupted for a time early today in the east part of town when a lightning bolt hit a cross arm on a utility pole. The rains were accompanied by brisk winds from the north, which dropped temperatures from the 80s into the high 40s this morning.

Heavy thunderstorms were reported over North Central Texas and West Texas early today.

Forecasts called for rain and thunderstorms over North Central Texas and West Texas today, spreading over eastern and southern sections of the state by afternoon.

Highs around the state were to be much cooler, ranging from the 50s in the Panhandle to the 80s along the coast with most areas to have highs in the 60s and lower 70s.

A cold front that stretched early today from Northeast Texas southwestward to north of the Big Bend area triggered the showers and thunderstorms.

Some severe thunderstorms were reported during the night in West Texas, but the activity had mostly ceased before dawn although heavy thunderstorms were reported at dawn in the Wichita Falls area southward to the San Angelo-Midland area. Light rain was falling in the Panhandle and in South Central Texas early today.

SNYDER TEMPRATURES:—High Monday, 88 degrees; low, 54 degrees; reading at 7 a. m. today, 55 degrees; precipitation, 2.00; total precipitation for 1981 to date, 3.66.

WEST TEXAS: Thunderstorms south, occasional light rain with few thunderstorms north today. Occasional rain and a few thunderstorms tonight and Wednesday. Much cooler. Highs mid 50s Panhandle to near 70 southeast except upper 80s Big Bend. Lows near 40 Panhandle to upper 50s south. Highs Wednesday 60s except low 70s southwest and low 80s Big Bend.

The SDN Column

America is the land where individual rights are paramount, where government is the servant rather than the master, and everyone is considered innocent until he is proved guilty, right?

Not exactly, according to Congressman Jim Collin of Dallas.

There are a few flaws in the system---flaws that did not exist when the nation was founded---and some of them have prompted Congressman Collins to come up with a "Taxpayers' Bill of Rights."

Here are some of the situations he hopes to rectify with his bill:

At present, when the Internal Revenue Service says you made an error, or violated a regulation, you must prove your innocence. In other words, you are considered guilty until you prove that you are not, which is just the reverse of the what most people consider the American way.

Also, he would provide that, if the IRS takes you to court and you win, it would have to pick up the tab for your legal and accounting fees.

One of the provisions in Congressman Collins' bill would change a situation that we have never been able to understand. At present, if you are uncertain about how a regulation affects your tax return and you seek advice from the IRS, they are happy to respond. However, if someone else in the IRS, or a court, subsequently decides the advice you got from the agency itself was inaccurate, they may renege and you are held responsible for their error. The Collins bill would bind the IRS to advice it gives individuals in filling out their tax returns.

And just to make certain that you understand any such advice you receive, the Collins bill would give you the right to record interviews with IRS agents.

And just to make certain that all taxpapyers would be informed about provisions of the bill, Collins would require that the Taxpayers' Bill of Rights be printed on all tax forms.

One of the big mysteries in our government is the fact that many of the rules and regulations it prescribes for citizens do not apply to government agencies. Therefore, we were not surprised to hear that OSHA announced it could not investigate the grain elevator explosion in Corpus Christi the other day because it was not privately owned. It seems that OSHA only has the power to enforce its regulations on the private sector.

The drug interferon may, or may not, be the miracle cancer fighter that some hope, but its availability in the medical arsenal further justifies the decision to press on with recombinant DNA research.

Interferon is a naturally produced protein, a key element of the body's complex defenses against disease. Tests on laboratory animals have suggested it is effective against lymph cancer and certain tumors. Until recently, however, interferon could only be synthesized from human blood in quantities too small for extensive testing, let alone medical applicaton.

It is becoming more plentiful now, because recombinant DNA researchers introduced a human gene that creates interferon in the genetic material of bacteria that made human interferon in considerable quantities. The drug is now undergoing tests on human patients at a Houston cancer clinic.

This would not have happened if the scientific community had taken counsel of its fears, instead of going ahead with recombinant DNA research. Growth hormones, insulin and now interferon have all been sucessfully produced by gene-splitting techniques. A technological revolution is in the making that will produce drugs tailored to attack a specific virus, just as interferon seems to arrest lymph cancer and shrink tumors.

Such progress will be possible because the questions of a few years ago about the hazards of genetic research were kept in perspective and resolved wisely. The original decisions to press the search for knowledge with adequate safeguards has proved out well.

Corporate America may be required to do some fiscal adjusting early on in the new administration.

Involved is a possible revision of tax policy under which privileges of the executive suite would no longer be exempt. Such corporate status perks as company-supplied cars for personal use, company-paid club memberships, low-interest loans and more, much more, that compensate for the high tax rates on high incomes would be treated as income.

It is not a new concept. The Internal Revenue Service has considered it a revenue-raising possibility for some time but it has also been the subject of some controversy there and elsewhere, most notably Congress. The latter barred the IRS for a time from taking action, a moratorium that expires this June 1. Unless congress repeats itself before then, or the administration takes a negative position, the IRS could begin cutting itself in on executive perks.

Not involved is the full range of benefits such as health plans, pensions and profit-sharing programs in which millions of employees outside the executive suites participate—although, since the IRS takes the position that all economic advantage derived from employment can be considered income, such fringe benefits have not totally escaped attention.

Now THERE would be an ox.

profiteering on the poor

Chairman Rostenkowski of the House tax-writing committee says his committee will not support the Reagan across-the-board tax cut; will support only a tax cut for poorer people.

It's obvious where the pressure is coming from. And it is professionally orchestrated pressure.

Representing "poor people" in Washington has become a very profitable business.

Hugh Sidey, in Time, describes Big Labors Lane Kirkland as "riding through Washington in his chauffeured limousine, often in tuxedo with his cigarette held at a jaunty angle—field marshall for the downtrodden."

I know of 185 organizations and representing special interests and resisting any cutoff of tax money for themselves.

Each may have a valid reason for being—the National Low Income Housing Commission—the Center For Community Change—the Food Research and Action Center presently dedicated to the perpetuation of food stamps.

The president has had no recourse but to go over their heads to you—the unorganized tax-paying majority—to urge you to counteract the influence of the professional parasites by contacting your congressman in any way you can.

If Rostenkowski is right—that only poorer people will get tax relief...

If the only people guaranteed a raise every time the cost-of-living goes up are Social Security recipients, union workers and federal pensioners...

Then, as Arthur Burns says, "We have a new elitist group in the United States; the only group immune to the effects of inflation."

That, he considers inequitable.

Cow farmers are told that they will NOT get any increase in their dairy price supports. They acquiesced in a patriotic effort to help the administration knock some cents back into our dollar.

Somebody had to be willing to make the first sacrifice," then Congress has surrendered to the pushers.

It's not the first time.

In the 1960s a man named George Wiley created a union of freeloaders. He called it the National Welfare Organization, the NWRO. It boasted 30,000 dues-paying members in 100 cities. Dues, obviously, were a kickback from welfare checks. Wiley's announced goals were free rent, free food, free medicine and a guaranteed annual income for everybody.

Wiley intimidated businesses, demanded and got huge contributions from them...in the name of "helping poor people."

When George Wiley died he drowned—went down in Chesapeake Bay aboard his own luxury yacht.

WASHINGTON (NEA)—When Jimmy Carter was running for president five years ago, he was sure that he had found a national scandal: The federal government was dependent upon the oil and gas companies for information on energy supplies. The Federal Power commission even admitted that it had no independent means of gathering data or even of confirming the data that it received from the energy companies.

So, Carter pushed through Congress legislation establishing the Department of Energy. Many senators and representatives voted for the new department chiefly because its Energy Information Adminstration would be capable of gathering and verifying energy-supply information.

But David Schwartz, a former consultant to the Energy Department, says that the federal government still is unable to obtain accurate data on energy supplies and is dependent upon the oil companies for most of its raw data.

Schwartz was called in to evaluate the department's information-gathering abilities after it had incorrectly forecast a world-wide shortage of crude oil at the time of the 1979 Iranian revolution.

In early 1980 Schwartz turned in a report highly critical of the accuracy of DOE's data and of the way in which that data was obtained. He found that much of the inaccurate information published by the department had been supplied by the industry. The study was suppressed by DOE officials and only recently was made public.

According to Schwartz, the department reported a dramatic drop in U.S. oil imports at the height of the Iranian crisis in early 1979. The American Petroleum Institute had reported oil imports of 8.8 million barrels for January 1979 and of 8.7 million barrels for the following month. The Energy Department, wanting to be conservative, lowered the API figures by half a million barrels and reported that as the offical government estimate of oil imports.

At the same time, data from the Customs Service and the Treasury Department indicated that petroleum imports were much higher—9.1 million barrels in January and 9.9 million in February. Schwartz says that the Energy Department knew of the Treasury's figures, tried unsuccessfully to reconcile them with the API's and finally sided with the industry. Six months later it became clear that the Treasury figures had been accurate.

The difference was critical. The API said that U.S. oil imports had fallen short of demand, while the Treasury said that imports had exceeded demand. You may recall that gas prices at the pump spurted upward shortly afterward.

Schwartz's main recommendation was that the Energy Department use audit teams to review the information supplied by the oil companies. He advised that these teams "examine company records, documents, correspondence and memoranda in order to assure accurate and reliable data."

A DOE spokesman defended the department's gathering of data as well as its failure to release the Schwartz study or to implement its recommendations. "We feel that our data gathering is accurate to within a percent or two each week," he said. "The study is simply the opinion of one man."

The spokesman dismissed the proposed audits as "very costly" and "not necessary." He added, "There is really no incentive for the oil companies to give us bad data, and we have no indication they have ever knowingly done so."

Those views are challenged by a former DOE official who observed the development of the Energy Information Administration. (Now a Washington lawyer, he asked that his name be withheld "because I have to go back and practice before them.")

"They have spent millions upon millions, bought huge computers, but basically the data that goes into those computers still comes from the companies," said the former official. "They found that it was simply too complex a job to gather their own raw data. So, just as the old FPC did, they use industry figures and hope for the best."

my turn

by john dunnam

I really don't have time to write this column. I know that the tax deadline is not until tomorrow, but I'm not one to put things off until the last minute.

Actually, the rush concerns my vacation, which starts as soon as I can whip out about 500 more words. So briefly, since I haven't packed yet, let's look at the news.

A red glow that lit up the evening sky Sunday across much of the midwest prompted a number of people to conclude the second coming had arrived, or that the space shuttle was falling. First thought to be the northern lights, which are rarely visible south of Canada, the latest census is that the glow was caused by the sun reflecting off cosmic dust.

The situaton reminds me of what Polly Underwood was said to have quipped on the morning of our Earthquake, Dec. 17, 1979. "Everyone on our block came outside to see what caused the rumble. Being good Baptists, naturally we looked at the sky."

In Washington D.C., Rep. Kent Hance of Lubbock read in the city's prestigious newspaper, the Washington Post, a description of Texas Tech. The article was about the life of John Hinckley, and expressed no surprise that he bought a hand gun from a Lubbock pawn shop. "A penchant for guns hardly strikes anyone as ominous in free-wheeling Lubbock, where some university students carry guns to class and the pistol-packing frontier Texas tradition runs deep and long."

That would be funny until you remember that Washington D.C. is where decisions are made daily that affect us here in the "free wheeling", "pistol-packing" west.

On the lighter side of the news, I see where a club has been formed to reward those who try and fail. "Nice Try" realizes that almost every thing that ever succeeded began as a lost cause, whether it was the bicycle, automobile or airplane. The club has a threefold purpose: to recognize lost causes that should be saved, to recognize successes that should be lost and to encourage those who gave it their best shots and fell flat on their faces.

"Nice Try" is not to be confused with the "Society for the Unification of Lost Causes (SULC), which has folded.

On the depressing side of the news, an 11-year-old boy has committed suicide. He was supposedly distraught over the divorce of his parents, who had both remarried, and made the decision to shoot himself after viewing Masada on TV, which depicted a mass suicide at the end.

He should have shot the television set instead.

Youths who not only plan to be here in the future, but also to shape that future, gathered in Washington D.C. and speculated about eliminating birth defects, computer controlled automobiles and preplanning the sex of babies. These are some of the speculations of 40 high school seniors who met to receive scholarships and awards for their original scientific research projects.

In a few years these promising young scientists hope to do such things as unlock the key to genetics, thus avoiding birth defects and making the sex of children a preselected thing; or learning exactly how the brain works, thus eliminating memory loss.

It was with regret that I noticed not a one of these whiz kids said anything about finding a cure for the common cold.

letter to the editor

To The Snyder Daily News

I am writing to ask for your help in aiding Girlstown, U.S.A. at Whiteface, Texas. As you probably know one of the dormitories was destroyed by fire Monday morning. Forty-four girls and eleven house parents lived in that building. My first interest in Girlstown, U.S.A. was in 1968 when my husband and I went here to see the little eleven year old blonde headed girl that we had started sponsoring. This girl not only visited in our home but in the homes of several other families in Snyder. Other girls came and visited us also and we laughed with them and we cried with them.

I remember a time when you were especially nice. The home was badly in need of a clothes dryer. some of the ladies civic clubs knew of this need and they also knew that my late husband was an amateur magician. They would ask him to entertain, which he loved doing, and they would bring their books of saving stamps to contribute towards getting the dryer. Together we saved enough books to order the dryer for Girlstown, U.S.A. Now there is a new need to contribute money, saving stamps or what ever you can toward helping them. Already there was a waiting list of girls needing a home in Girlstown, U.S.A. but there was not room for them. Please think of the problem now that will occur since the fire.

The girls that live in Girlstown, U.S.A. are girls whose homes were not suitable for them to continue living in. A judge in some cases have ordered the girls removed from their natural homes because of an unfit parent or parents. I know that you will help meet this need as you always have. Those children we started helping in 1968 have become young ladies, but there is always more girls needing our help.

Your contributions can be mailed to Girlstown, U.S.A. Box 35, Whiteface, Texas 79379. Perhaps their greatest need is for your prayers and love. Because of high insurance rates the burned dormitory was not covered by insurance.

thoughts

"Tares" were a weed called "darnel." Before it comes into ear it resembles wheat and can be separated from it only with difficulty. In the parable of the wheat and the tares where the man's enemy sowed tares among his wheat and his servants asked if they should pull up the tares, he said not to do it until the harvest. Then the tares could be distinguished.

"But he said, Nay; lest while ye gather up the tares, ye root up also the wheat with them. Let both grow together until the harvest; and in the time of harvest I will say to the reapers, Gather ye together first the tares, and bind them in bundles to burn them: but gather the wheat into my barn." — Matt. 13:29-30

Midwife In El Paso Still Delivers Babies

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — An elderly midwife says she has delivered an estimated 7,000 babies over the past 65 years and has never lost a mother or child.

"I'm like the postman. I deliver no matter what," said Mrs. Petra Alonzo, who has had cataracts removed from both eyes and a pacemaker inserted in her chest.

She celebrated her 81st birthday Tuesday and said she was still ready to go anywhere at any time to deliver babies.

Because of welfare payments, health insurance and modern medical facilities, Mrs. Alonzo is among a dying breed in San Antonio. Only 24 women are still left on the San Antonio Metropolitan Health District's roster of licensed midwives.

She said she delivered her first baby in 1916 and has delivered as many as five babies a night during her 65-year tenure. Now she averages only two babies a month and the latest delivery was on March 11 when she brought a healthy 7-pound, 15-ounce boy into the world.

Mrs. Alonzo gave birth to eight children of her own, five of whom are still living, and has 17 grandchildren, four of whom she delivered. She also delivered four of her 23 great-grandchildren and one of her four grat-great-grandchildren who was born 18 months ago.

Mrs. Alonzo keeps a thick book of all the babies she has delivered and at last count it contained more than 7,000 names. She said these included 24 sets of twins.

In the early days, Mrs. Alonzo said she charged $35 to deliver a baby. Then the fee jumped to $75 and last year the health district advised her to charge $100.

Why the increase, she was asked.

"It's like everything else," she said. "Inflation."

Beauty Digest

The no-diet diet

To lose a few pounds, adjust your usual meals. Trim fat from meat before broiling and drain hamburgers after cooking. Cook poultry and meat soups ahead so you can cool them and skim off the fat the next day. The chicken breast has the fewest calories — save more by not eating the skin. Steamed vegetables are delicious with lemon juice instead of butter. Low-sugar jams are as nice as the sugar-heavy ones.

Going red

Redheads, whether natural or tinted, always seem more fun to be with. If you have light to medium brown hair, a touch of red haircolor will turn your locks a lovely rich chestnut. Henna adds shine along with color but use it with care — it can look artificial and sometimes turns hair green if you've had a permanent. Also, because it's drying and tends to build up on your locks with an orangey result, color experts recommend using it only three times a year.

Cut the static

If your hair crackles, flies away or clings to your face every time you comb it or take off a hat, you've got problems with static electricity. A humidifier at home will cut down the static that comes with drying heat. Condition your hair regularly and try a drop of hair cream or perfume oil on your brush and comb to tame flyaways. Don't wear hats or scarves too tight. And avoid mohair and nylon, which can build up quite a charge.

South wasted no thought on trick one. He knew that aces were invented to take kings and he took his ace of diamonds.

There was considerable thought before the play to trick two. Finally, South ruffed a diamond and led a spade to his queen. West produced the ace and played his ace of trumps and cashed two high diamonds.

"You had the wrong hand, partner," said South.

"Not exactly," replied North. "I had the wrong partner."

North was right. South must make an unusual play at trick one and refuse to take it.

If West leads a trump, South can clear the trump suit while still in control of diamonds and may even get an overtrick if West doesn't take his ace of spades.

If West leads a club at trick two, South wins in his hand, ruffs a low diamond in dummy and plays a spade to his queen and West's ace. Eventually, South will get to chuck his last low diamond on the king of spades or a high club and lose just the first trick and two aces.

If West leads a second diamond, South ruffs in dummy and leads the spade. Once more he will be able to discard his last low diamond.

Aides are sending the president "a lot of material" to read and sign in his living quarters, where he is expected to spend most of the week while he regains his strength, deputy press secretary Larry Speakes said Monday.

"He's making decisions that are required. He's kept abreast of everything that's going on," Speakes said.

CurriculumBill Hits Obstacles

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — An effort to force public schools to teach a religious version of the origin of the universe has been rejected in the House, despite a legislator's claim that voters would "love" such a course.

Rep. Mike Martin, R-Longview, failed in his effort to add an amendment to a curriculum reform bill that advanced Monday on a preliminary voice vote. A final vote is expected today.

Martin's amendment would have required schools to teach "creation-science" on a par with the theory of evolution.

"Your constituents will love it," Martin said of his amendment. He said evidence of non-evolutionary creation is "suppressed in our public schools."

"Don't you think all Mr. Martin would need to do is look around this chamber and see evidence that man descended from a monkey?" observed Rep. Fred Agnich, R-Dallas.

Representatives were not anxious to tackle the curriculum package by Rep. Bill Haley, D-Center. It took a tie-breaking vote by Speaker Bill Clayton to block a move to postpone debate for a week.

The bill, backed by Gov. Bill Clements, repeals state laws requiring specific courses, including kindness to animals, ten minutes of "intelligent patriotism" daily, penmanship, protection of bird nests and eggs, and consumer education. The bill would put the State Board of Education in charge of prescribing curriculum.

"The idea came from the people hollering, 'We've got to get back to basics,'" said Rep. Bill Haley, D-Center, sponsor of the bill.

He said the bill was not an attempt to give new power to the Board of Education but to eliminate the "hodge-podge of courses" mandated by state law. Haley noted that 12 bills have been introduced to add even more required courses, including parenting, racial tolerance and cardio-pulmonary resuscitation (CPR).

Haley was defeated on one major issue when Rep. Lanny Hall, D-Fort Worth added an amendment requiring American and Texas history and government at specific times during students' 13 years of schooling.

"They talk about getting back to basics. These are basics," Hall said.

Haley, a former teacher, said that when 11th graders came to him for American history, they were poorly backgrounded by earlier courses and, worse, "They couldn't read the textbook."

He said the time of students through the sixth grade could better be spent on reading, writing and arithmetic, with American history coming at a time "when it can usefully be taught."

Hall's amendment was added, 76-63.

Work Cards Suggested For Mexican Nationals

WASHINGTON (AP) — A bracero-type card with which Mexican residents could legally enter the United States to work for periods of up to a year might prove the best solution to Texas' problem with illegal aliens, Rep. Sam B. Hall Jr., D-Texas, says.

"It would allow them to come over here for a certain period of time to work, after which they would be required to return to Mexico," Hall said in an interview.

Texas had such a program in the 1960s, "and it worked fine" before it was allowed to die, Hall said. "It was a rather popular program. A very small illegal alien program existed during the time it was going on."

Hall, a lawyer and lifelong resident of Marshall, is a member of the Judiciary Committee subcommittee that is responsible for immigration and aliens.

He said he has had no communication with officials of Mexico concerning a revival of the bracero-type card "but I don't think they protested the program when we had it before. As a matter of fact, I think they were instrumental in seeing that it worked."

Hall, 57, and four other members of the House subcommittee began a 5-day investigative visit to San Diego today to observe first-hand the workings of the Border Patrol along the California-Mexico border.

"We've had several hearings dealing with a lack of manpower on the border between Texas and Mexico and between California and Mexico. We want to see what the present situation is and try to determine what would happen if the manpower is reduced further, as the administration proposes to do."

Hall said the Immigration and Naturalization Service needs more employees, not less. If the cuts recommended by President Reagan are implemented, "it would affect Texas badly, equally as much as it would the California situation," Hall said.

"I'm for most of these budget cuts, but there are some minimum areas that just must be met. To solve these problems, you've got to make some exceptions," added Hall, who twice has been named recipient of the "Watchdog of the Treasury" award in the less than five years he has been in Congress.

Chrysler Not Pushing For Ford Merger

DETROIT (AP) — Chrysler Corp. says it won't push for a merger with No. 2 Ford Motor Co., but the ailing automaker still thinks such partnerships will prove necessary for the industry.

Chrysler Chairman Lee Iacocca said Monday the company had no plans to pursue the merger proposal revealed by Ford last week. Ford said a plan presented on behalf of Chrysler had been rejected by Ford's directors.

The federal Chrysler Loan Guarantee Board ordered the company to investigate mergers when the panel agreed to $400 million in new loan guarantees. Iacocca says he thinks the future of the industry "will of necessity include such partnerships."

Dear Abby

Sister Should Shut Brother Out, Not Up

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1981 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I'm sure my problem is common to all young girls who have older brothers. I am 11 and my brother Joshua is 13½.

Joshua keeps saying, "Shut your face." (He's forbidden to say "Shut up," so he uses this instead.) This makes me very angry, even angrier than when he used to tell me to shut up.

If I tell Joshua to shut his own face or something like that, he starts hitting me, then I hit him back. Then he overpowers me and I end up in tears. Please help.

LITTLE SISTER

P.S. Please don't involve my parents. They are sick of this problem.

DEAR SISTER: I can't tell your parents what to do, but Joshua should be forbidden to hit you. (Hitting is worse than saying "Shut up.") Your best defense is to ignore him, stay out of his way and learn to run fast. (P.S. It offers little comfort to you now, but older brothers come in handy later on. The trouble is, they have to grow up first.)

DEAR ABBY: A recent column printed in the Arizona Daily Star featured a verse by John Owen:

"God and the doctor we alike adore
"But only when in danger, not before:
"The danger o'er, both are alike requited
"God is forgotten, and the doctor slighted."

I don't know this John Owen, but I am familiar with an unsigned 16th-century epigram that reads:

"God and the soldier we adore
"In times of danger, not before:
"The trouble past, and all things righted,
"God is forgot', and the soldier slighted."

History does seem to repeat itself.

DEAR ABBY: In regard to the parents who invited only a percentage of a kindergarten class to a birthday party:

In the day of the one-room schoolhouse, Mrs. B. sent apples to school for her daughter's birthday party minus one apple for one little girl whose mother Mrs. B. didn't like. When the "birthday girl" came home, her mother asked her how the little girl took the snub.

"Oh, I gave her half of my apple," she replied.

This is a true story told by my mother, who taught school in Kansas from 1900 to 1910.

Students On Hand To Fight Tuition Increase

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — A tuition increase could shut some low-income and minority students out of Texas' universities and medical schools, a House committee has been told.

But the sponsor of a bill doubling undergraduate tuition at state universities and increasing medical school tuition by 900 percent said the hardship wouldn't be that great.

"When resources are limited, every dollar counts," Jesse Oliver, a University of Texas law student and president of the Student Bar Association, said Monday night.

The House Higher Education Committee heard testimony late into the night, then sent several tuition increase bills to a subcommittee for further study.

More than 100 persons of student age packed the hearing room.

The main bill, by Rep. Bob Davis, R-Irving, carries out recommendations of a special study committee headed by Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby. It increases undergraduate tuition for students with normal course loads from $60 to $120 a semester. Medical school tuition would leap from $400 a year to $3,600. Dental school tuition would rise from $400 to $2,500.

"We are not dealing with impossible economic hardship," Davis said.

He noted that the undergraduate tuition increase would amount to $480 over four years, "less than one-half of one month's salary for an average graduate. That is not much to ask of them to participate in the fine educational system we have in our state."

Davis said tuition covers only 4.1 percent of the cost of a college education, with taxes picking up the rest.

As for medical and dental students, "we are talking about these graduates being the most highly paid members of our society, on the average."

Oliver, speaking for the Texas Student Lobby, said increasing tuition "could be a step toward limiting minority enrollment" and getting state universities in trouble with the U.S. Justice Department.

In an agreement with the Justice Department, the state promised to take steps to increase minority enrollment at public universities.

There was no testimony — other than that of the sponsors — in favor of the bills.

Ray Valdez, a student at the University of Texas Medical Branch in Galveston and chairman-elect of the Texas Association of Mexican-American Medical Students, said a tuition increase could have a long-range adverse effect on health in Hispanic communities.

He said Mexican-American doctors tend to return to their home communities. Mexican-Americans are three times as likely as anglos to die of heart disease, and in some counties 80 percent of the Mexican-Americans are diabetic, Valdez said.

"Increasing tuition would be an impediment to Mexican-Americans and to the health needs of our people," he said.

John Taylor, a University of Texas student, said the time was bad for a tuition increase since financial aid sources that could take up the slack were disappearing.

The Reagan administration proposes to reduce funds for student grants by $9 million, and banks are not making federally-insured student loans, Taylor said.

"The outlook is bleak," he said.

SHS Invitations Are Distributed

Student-ordered high school graduation invitations have arrived at the school and will be distributed today, Ray Courtney, principal, advised. Graduation ceremonies are scheduled for May 29.

Jackson Pulls Toronto Past New York Yanks

by The Associated Press

Toronto Manager Bobby Mattick says he has a special liking for Jim Clancy because "he's got guts. He can throw out of jams."

On Monday, though, Clancy threw into one in the eighth inning. It was Roy Lee Jackson who got him out of it with a double-play pitch to Bobby Murcer, helping the Blue Jays beat the New York Yankees 5-1.

It was the Blue Jays' fifth home-opening victory in their five years in the American League. In two other AL game, Baltimore beat Boston 5-1 and Oakland edged California 3-2 in the Angels' home opener. Detroit's game at Kansas City was rained out.

The Yanks loaded the bases with one out in the eighth on a single and two walks. So Jackson, acquired from the New York Mets in the off-season, replaced Clancy and lowered the boom on the Yanks.

"Roy throws a sinker and I thought it was easier for a right-hander to pitch to a left-handed hitter, especially when he throws a sinker," said Mattick. "Jackson did a real good job."

So did Clancy, the first time he worked his way into a jam. He'd already given up one run on Jerry Mumphrey's single and Dave Winfield's double in the first inning when two consecutive walks brought Jim Spencer to the plate with the bases loaded and two away. This time, Clancy took care of matters, inducing Spencer to ground to second.

Before he was yanked, Clancy checked the Yanks on four hits in 7⅓ innings, retiring 14 consecutive batters in one stretch.

Al Woods and Alfredo Griffin led the Toronto attack. Wood had a two-run single in a three-run fourth inning and Griffin tripled for two runs in the seventh.

Clerc Upset In Tourney

MONTE CARLO, Monaco (AP) — Jose Higueras of Spain upset fifth-seeded Jose Luis Clerc of Argentina 7-6, 6-1 in first-round action at the $250,000 Monte Carlo Open tennis tournament.

In other first-round play, Tomas Smid of Czechoslovakia rallied to take a 3-6, 7-6, 6-2 victory over 1980 Wimbledon juniors champion Thierry Tulasne of France.

Phillies Pepper Pitt; Houston Still Winless

by The Associated Press

Steve Carlton is still the strong, silent type. That is, his left arm is still strong and Carlton himself is still silent.

The 1980 National League Cy Young Award winner earned his first victory of the new season Monday night, scattering nine hits as the world champion Philadelphia Phillies won their home opener 5-1 over the Pittsburgh Pirates before a crowd of 60,404.

In the only other National League games, the unbeaten Los Angeles Dodgers edged the San Francisco Giants 4-3, the Atlanta Braves nipped the winless Houston Astros 2-1 in 10 innings and the Cincinnati Reds trounced the San Diego Padres 7-1.

The Phillies received their gold World Series rings before the game. Then they went out and lashed 11 hits to back Carlton's one-walk, five-strikeout pitching. He was in trouble in just one inning, the sixth, but escaped when right fielder Lonnie Smith caught a fly ball and threw out Bill Madlock trying to advance to third.

Braves 2, Astros 1

Rookie Rufino Linares, batting .067 with only a bunt single in 15 previous at-bats, stroked a two-out, run-scoring single in the top of the 10th inning off Houston relief ace Joe Sambito to hand the defending NL West champion Astros their fourth straight loss.

Rafael Ramirez opened the 10th with a single and was sacrificed to second. With two out, Sambito intentionally walked Glenn Hubbard but Linares spoiled the strategy by lacing an 0-2 pitch to right field for the game-winning hit.

Phil Niekro, Atlanta's 42-year-old knuckleballer, went 8⅔ innings, allowing six hits and one run. He also singled home the Braves' first run in the second inning.

Spurs Hope To Shackle Houston's Malone Again

by The Associated Press

You don't tug on Superman's cape. You don't spit into the wind. And you don't get Moses Malone angry.

The last time the San Antonio Spurs riled Malone, by forcing him into a subpar performance in the second game of their National Basketball Association playoff series against Houston, the Rockets' center responded with 41 points and 15 rebounds in the next game, a 112-99 Houston victory.

"They shouldn't have made him mad," Rockets teammate Calvin Murphy said of Malone. "No one's going to keep him down two games in a row."

The Rockets, who resume their best-of-seven Western Conference semifinal at San Antonio tonight, can only hope Murphy's law holds true. The Spurs did their best job on Malone Sunday, limiting him to 17 points and nine rebounds and beating the Rockets 114-112 to even the series at two victories apiece.

"I think Moses may have been a little tired," suggested Dave Corzine, the 6-foot-11, 250-pounder who is one of several Spurs taking turns playing bump and run with Malone. "That's not to say he won't be ready to play again tonight. He is a great competitor and always someone to worry about.

After tonight's game, the Texas shootout shifts to Houston for Game Six Wednesday night. The other West semifinal resumes Wednesday with Kansas City, leading 3-1, seeking to wrap it up at Phoenix.

In the East, Boston already has clinched a berth in the conference final with a four-game sweep of Chicago. Milwaukee and Philadelphia are tied 2-2 in the other semifinals, which resumes in Philadelphia Wednesday night.

The Kings, playing without regular guards Phil Ford and Otis Birdsong, both of whom are injured, dropped their series opener at Phoenix but since have won three in a row. They'd like nothing better than to make it four with their new, slower tempo.

"The momentum is going our way now," said Kansas City forward Reggie King. "We've got their number. I don't think they like playing our style of game. They won 57 games running and gunning. Any team would have trouble adjusting its style."

Tigers Slated Against Cub Delegation Today

BROWNFIELD -- Snyder's Tigers hit the road again this afternoon, taking on non-district opponent Brownfield here at 4 o'clock just before embarking on a holiday break.

There are no District 2-AAAA games slated this week, though several teams, like Snyder, have slated non-loop contests for today. Everybody is off the remainder of the week.

Snyder, 13-7-1, jumps back into 2-4A play in earnest next Tuesday, however. The Tigers, 4-0 in loop play with a two-game lead over the rest of the field, can bag up a first-round conference title with a win over Pecos in Snyder next week. If the struggling Eagles should get by the hosts, Snyder has another chance next Friday when it treks to winless Lamesa.

A win either of those two games would assure Coach Albert Lewis' bunch a berth in any post-season district playoffs, if necessary. Lewis has won his district each year as head baseball coach for SHS; all in the former 3-3A.

Next Tuesday, April 21, the loop schedule looks like this: Ector will test Andrews, Lamesa visits Monahans, and Snyder hosts Pecos. Fort Stockton does not play a district game that date.

Cats Fall To Abilene

ABILENE -- Snyder junior varsity hung on until the sixth inning here yesterday but fell to a six-run rally by Abilene High, 9-4.

The Cats, reportedly 5-9 on the season, take several days holiday break before returning to action Saturday at Lubbock Monterey.

"We played pretty well overall," said Coach Wes Poarch, "but we just had that one bad inning."

Whit Parks was tagged as the losing pitcher for Snyder. Brett Vincent was the leading hitter with a pair of doubles.

To become more energy-independent . . .
let's use what we've got.

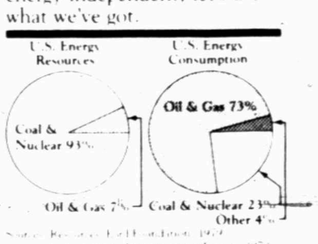
We Americans learn early to be independent and self-reliant, and to use the resources we have. But today we're importing oil for nearly a fourth of our energy needs. This is dangerous because it undermines our economy and threatens our national security. And it shouldn't be necessary, because we have the world's largest known energy reserves right here in the United States.

We can help make America self-sufficient by using alternative fuels like coal and uranium. We can stretch our supplies of oil and natural gas by conserving. We'll develop nuclear fusion, while making more use of other sources such as solar, biomass and wind.

But not today. For the next 25 years or more, the energy we need must come from the resources and the know-how we have now.

At your electric company, we're building plants to use the energy and technology we have now. At the same time we're supporting development of other sources of energy, so we'll have them as soon as possible.

To become more energy-independent, let's use what we've got.



This comparison illustrates why Dr. John McKetta, former chairman of the National Energy Policy Committee, insists we must develop the domestic energy we have.

Blue Law May Go Out

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The 20-year-old Texas law that arbitrarily tells merchants what they may and may not sell on weekends may be headed for extinction. A bill to repeal the "blue law" passed a House committee and is now eligible for full floor debate.

The House Business and Industry Committee approved the bill by Rep. Doyle Willis, D-Fort Worth, 6-2.

The law, passed in 1961, forbids the sale of 42 classes of merchandise on both Saturdays and Sundays, including certain kinds of clothing, furniture, appliances and sporting goods — all items commonly found in both department stores and discount houses.

Merchants who operate on both Saturday and Sunday typically obey the law by roping off one section of their store on Saturdays and another on Sundays.

Enforcement has been poor in some areas with prosecutors waiting on complaints from competing stores before filing charges.

The law was passed at the request of department store owners, which were beginning to feel the pinch of competition from the growing number of discount houses that operated on Sunday.

Sen. Bill Moore, D-Bryan, who sponsored the original law and successfully defended it as one of the Senate's more powerful members, was defeated for re-election last year, quickening expectations that the Legislature might repeal the law.

A spokesman for department stores said at a House hearing last month if the blue law is repealed, major department stores might feel compelled by competition to open seven days a week.

Man Hurt In Rig Mishap

A rig accident this morning sent one man to the hospital where he is listed in good condition. Tommy Hurtt was injured when the blocks fell onto the rig platform and hit him on the right side.

Hunt was transported by Scurry County EMS from the rig owned by GCO Drilling Co. to Cogdell Memorial Hospital. Hospital personnel say he is being held for observation.

ASTRO·GRAPH

Bernice Bede Osol

Your Birthday

April 15, 1981

Success in your chosen field is likely this coming year, but you may have to work harder than usual in order to attain it. Be prepared to pay the price.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Coworkers are likely to have their own problems today, so be careful not to lay any extra burdens on them. Yours may be the straw that breaks the camel's back. Find out more of what lies ahead for you in the year following your birthday by sending for your copy of Astro-Graph. Mail $1 for each to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth date.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Don't take too seriously today things meant to be fun. Making a few bum shots in tennis shouldn't be allowed to spoil your whole day.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Your staying power may not be up to par today. Too many distractions will get you off-course and inhibit your will to finish what you start.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Stand up for what you believe in today, but don't deliberately introduce controversy into your discussions. The less said the better.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Normally you are very generous, but today you may not be too eager to share with others things they had a hand in helping to bring about.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Be very careful today businesswise and financially, especially with persons you feel have stung you in the past.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) For one who is usually tactful and diplomatic, you could find yourself in frustrating situations today because of a failure to use these assets.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Serious responsibilities should not be shelved today in hopes they'll care for themselves. That which you neglect may compound itself and cause new complications.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) In social situations today it may prove unwise to appoint yourself chairman of the entertainment committee. Friends won't like to be told how to have a good time.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Competitive situations aren't likely to be your cup of tea today. If at all possible, try to avoid them. Let challenges be taken up by others.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Be careful today when dealing with persons who hold equally strong views. They won't appreciate your trying to make them over into your own mold.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Even if things have been running pretty smooth financially up until now, don't take matters for granted today. There may be a fly in the ointment.

HEALTH

Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

Avoid standing still

DEAR DR. LAMB — I'm 26 years old and would like to know what I can do about varicose veins. My legs started getting like this when I was about 21. What caused this and what can I do to prevent them from getting any worse?

If they get any worse I couldn't stand it. I would never wear shorts or a bathing suit around people, including my husband, again. People say I look pretty good in a bikini but I don't want to be ashamed of my legs. I see a lot of women older than me who still have real pretty legs, especially "Charlie's Angels" or Suzanne Somers. I'm probably not on my feet as much as they are.

DEAR READER — Varicose veins are veins that have lost their natural elasticity, like an overstretched balloon. That happens in part because the vein walls may be weak and because there is an accumulation of pressure from blood inside the veins.

When you stand up, blood pools in your leg veins and builds up the internal pressure. Garters or anything that constricts the normal flow of blood through the thin-walled veins can increase the problem. Pregnancy obstructs the flow and increases varicose veins.

As you start walking, the leg muscles contract and squeeze the deep veins inside your legs, milking them and helping to pump blood uphill to your heart. This also milks the external veins that empty into your deep leg veins. The internal pressure falls. That is why walking is better than standing still.

Even if you inherit a tendency to have varicose veins, there are things you can do to help prevent them or keep them from getting so bad. These are explained in The Health Letter number 5-8, Varicose Veins, which I am sending you. Others who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

Avoid standing still. Avoid sitting with pressure on the backs of your thighs. Do wear support hose when you can and especially during pregnancy. External pressure helps to prevent excessive stretching of the veins.

DEAR DR. LAMB — In one of your columns a young girl asked about enlarging her bust. You mentioned her seeing a physician to check for an endocrine or hormone problem. Just what would I ask my doctor about this? Is there a physical sign? I have read many articles about breast development and they all say it is hereditary but both my mother and younger sister wear a 36 C. I don't even fill a 34 A. I just had a check-up and a thyroid test and everything is normal.

DEAR READER — My point was that breasts do develop in response to female hormones. The enlargement of breasts is one of the earliest signs of puberty and the increased production of female hormones.

Some women who do have a hormone deficiency do not develop full-sized breasts, although more often breast size is inherited — from both sides of the family. A woman who wonders about this can simply ask her doctor if her breasts are small because she is low on estrogen, the female hormone that has most to do with breast development.

The doctor can get a pretty good idea from your physical examination and your history (such as menstrual history), but he can refine his judgment by having a laboratory examination of your hormone levels if he thinks it is indicated.

Traffic Light Hit By Truck

Police worked one minor traffic accident Monday evening when a 1978 Kenworth truck pulling a trailer apparently hit a traffic light at 4200 College. Driver of the truck was Uel Grissom of Odessa. Officer Bill Armstrong investigated the incident.

Police were dispatched to Snyder Oaks nursing home early this morning when the home reported their power was out and they couldn't locate the emergency generator. Police found and started the generator for them.
