Police seize guns, possible drugs in early morning raid

By BEAR MILLS
Staff Writer

An early morning raid at a Pampa residence has so far netted a large cache of guns, including one missing from the home of Roy Leon Williams.

Williams was murdered earlier this summer at his home on Bowers City Road.

Pampa police said the raid was the result of a tip to officers of the tactical unit. Arrested in the raid was 26-year-old Pam Spangler. At press time police had not yet filed charges on the woman.

Investigators on the scene at 906 E. Browning said Spangler had a pistol resting beside her when they entered the home.

In addition to the guns and a variety of drug paraphernalia, police believe they have found a quantity of narcotics.

"We also found $12,000 in a safe, along with other valuables. There were also some illegal plastic explosives in the house," said Robert Eberz, chief of police.

Eberz said the explosives would be detonated this afternoon because they were too volatile to store safely.

Police said that besides Spangler, at least four other people live in the house.

"She told us that they had gone to McLean to pick up a car," said Det. Sgt. Charles Love.

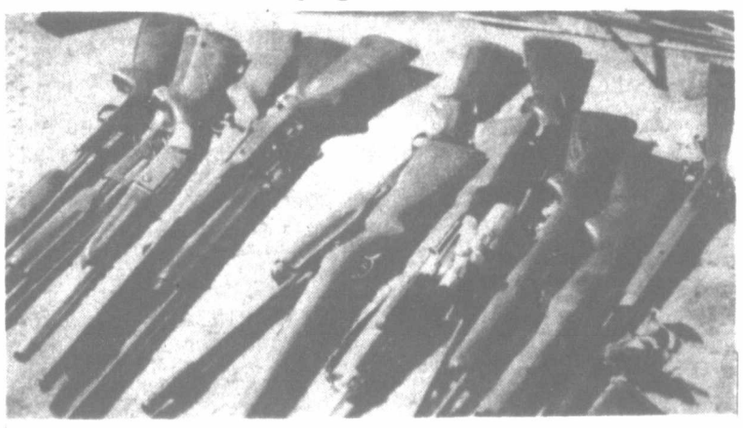

On the porch of the home was a child's big wheel, and police said one bedroom contained children's furniture.

Drug dogs from the tactical unit of the Panhandle Organized Crime Task Force were on their way to Pampa at press time to continue a search for illegal drugs.

During the preliminary search of the house, police found one syringe containing what may be illegal drugs. Authorities also say they found a quantity of "white powdery substance and some rock substance." They refused to speculate on the find, saying it was being analyzed by a crime lab.

Seven cars and motorcycles were at the residence at the time of the raid. However, police reported that none of the vehicles appeared to be stolen.

The seizure has so far netted 20 to 25 guns, plastic explosives, an amount of mercury (often used to detonate explosives), $12,000 in cash, jewelry and an undetermined amount of narcotics.

FBI investigates damage to space shuttle O-rings

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — The FBI and NASA are investigating "suspicious" damage discovered in some O-rings seals that had been destined for use in space shuttle booster rockets, an official of the manufacturing company said today.

None of the damaged O-rings, which were found in June and which appeared to have been deliberately cut, were sent to booster manufacturer Morton Thiokol, said James Dockstader, vice president of operations for HydraPak Inc. the West Jordan, Utah, company that produces the O-rings.

"During the normal inspection procedures in the manufacturing process ... certain space shuttle O-rings appeared to have received damage of a suspicious origin," he said.

"The damaged O-rings were immediately secured, and no damaged O-rings were shipped to Morton Thiokol," he added.

Morton Thiokol, the FBI and the National Aeronautics and Space Administration were advised immediately, and Dockstader said both agencies and HydraPak launched investigations.

"Relying upon the results of these investigations, HydraPack has taken steps to prevent similar incidents in the future and is confident the problem now is solved," he said.

Dockstader said "some kind of incision" had been made in the O-rings, but he declined to say how many were damaged or what instrument had been used.

He also refused to speculate on a possible motive.

No employees have been dismissed, Dockstader said.

Morton Thiokol, which produces the boosters at its Wasatch Operations in northern Utah, on Aug. 18 successfully conducted the final qualifying test of the booster, which had been redesigned in the wake of the 1986 Challenger explosion.

The explosion, which killed Challenger's seven crew members and grounded U.S. manned space program, was blamed on a faulty booster joint which allowed a plume of fiery gas to escape, igniting the craft's main liquid fuel tank.

O-rings are used as seals to prevent the super-heated gases from escaping the joints.

Morton Thiokol engineers have redesigned the joints to incorporate a third O-ring.

Iran, Iraq return to negotiations

By VICTORIA GRAHAM
Associated Press Writer

GENEVA (AP) — Iran and Iraq today returned to the negotiating tables for talks aimed at ending their 8-year-old war, but they abandoned face-to-face talks for the time being and met in separate chambers with U.N. officials.

Continuing direct talks, which began Thursday, still would be difficult, U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar said.

"It is too early for alone face-to-face," he told reporters before the meeting. "Even face-to-face with me alone ... still would be very difficult."

Problems between Iran and Iraq have lasted centuries, "and then it is not in one afternoon that we can decide," he said.

The morning meetings with Iranian Foreign Minister Ali Akbar Velayati and Iraqi Foreign Minister Tariq Aziz lasted two hours and were to resume in the afternoon.

The session began Thursday with a joint session led by the secretary-general, and both sides addressed each other through intepreters. It was the first face-to-face meeting of foreign ministers since the Persian Gulf war began in September 1980.

But after two hours the session was suspended, and both sides met in separate chambers for three more hours, with U.N. officials meeting them and reporting to Perez de Cuellar.

Iraq Foreign Minister Tariq Aziz arrives at U.N. meeting in Geneva today.

The format of separate rooms was continued today, U.N. spokesman Francois Giuliani said.

The secretary-general first met separately with each minister, then the delegations consulted in separate rooms, he said.

U.N. officials, based in another room, occasionally visited the delegations and Perez de Cuellar at times also met the delegations separately.

Meanwhile, a small group of Iraqi Kurds and other Iraqi opposition groups demonstrated outside the building and protested the Baghdad government's use of chemical weapons on its rebellious Kurdish minority.

There was no word on progress in today's talks, but on Thursday Giuliani denied that separate meetings indicated a snag in the talks.

Iraq had demanded the direct, face-to-face talks before a cease-fire to test Iran's intentions. Iran refused and both sides agreed on direct talks shortly after the halt in hostilities.

"I am sure the parties sincerely want to solve the problem," Perez de Cuellar said today. "(But) I think we have to be a little patient."

He said the arrangement was made at the request of the two countries. "I would prefer to have them all the time in the main room with me." But, he said, "I have to accommodate myself to the wish of the parties."

Giuliani denied reports by U.N. officials that the secretary-general was considering appointing former Swiss President Kurt Furgler as his special representative to continue the Iran-Iraq talks.

He also dismissed a Swiss Radio report that Edouard Brunner, the No. 2 official in the Swiss Foreign Ministry, would be appointed.

Perez de Cuellar told reporters before he entered the meeting that he was certain both sides "sincerely want to solve the problem."

However, he added "that is a problem that has lasted many years, I would say centuries, and it is not in one afternoon that we can decide."

Today's talks began about one hour late, after the arrival of Velayati. He refused to answer questions from reporters.

Pampa schools gain grant for dropouts

By BEAR MILLS
Staff Writer

The Pampa Independent School District was one of only 89 schools in the U.S. to be awarded a $148,752 grant to combat the dropout problem.

More than 850 schools around the nation had applied for the grant.

The School Dropout Assistance Grant will cover two years, beginning Sept. 1 of this year. Its primary aim is to nip the dropout crisis in the bud.

"If we really want to do something about dropouts or drugs in our community, we must start at an early age," said Dr. Harry Griffith, superintendent of Pampa public schools.

He credited Tim Powers, John Welborn and Sally Griffith for writing the grant proposal.

"The grant will have two parts. First, we will be placing a liaison professional on the two campuses with the highest percentage of low income children. They will work between the school and families with homework and parent training, primarily parent training," Griffith said.

He said the two campuses would be Baker and Lamar elementary schools. At Baker the school is hoping to hire a bilingual liaison.

"We want to eventually expand this to our other schools. We've applied for a state grant that would do the same thing in our high school," Griffith said.

The second part of the federal grant would be applied to the new Pampa Learning Academy, a summer supplemental program.

"This won't be summer school. This will be an honor to attend. It will be for every elementary school child in the city," Griffith said.

Last year, Griffith said, the PISD had only 30 students attending summer school. "This year we hope to make that 300 students," he said.

"We will focus on math, reading, learning arts, have a full library program, field trips and recreation. It will be something that we hope every child comes home from and can't wait to get back to the next day," Griffith said.

While the program is partially aimed at cutting down on the number of children who might have to repeat a grade, it will also be for students who excel.

For Griffith, the Pampa Learning Academy is something that hits close to home.

"Because of the way my birthday falls, I started first grade at five years of age. That next summer I went to summer school and learned to read. I was able to then go on to the second grade and I've been an avid reader ever since.

"If I could reach every teacher and parent about the importance of the Pampa Learning Academy, it could really change things for a lot of kids," Griffith said.

The Pampa Learning Academy will be on four elementary campuses: Baker, Lamar, Wilson and Mann. Students from all elementary schools will be eligible to attend.

Congressman Beau Boulter, a U.S. senatorial hopeful, was one of the first to call in his congratulations to the district.

"I'm very proud the Pampa school district received this very generous grant. The dropout problem deserves the strongest corrective effort possible. When a child drops out of school, they close the door on their future," Boulter said.

Griffith said in addition to the other areas covered in the Pampa Learning Academy, drug awareness will be focused on as a continuation of the Pampa Says kNOw to Drugs program.

Rainy weather gets city officials down

Water, water everywhere! And boy does that mean trouble!

While much of the rest of the U.S. is reeling from the effects of the worst drought in 100 years, Pampa city commissioners are having problems due to too much water.

The wet summer of 1988 has meant city residents are using less water to keep lawns and gardens green.

"If we see anything but a very dry fall, we're going to have to look seriously at changing city water rates," City Manager Bob Hart said.

Currently, the city is facing a $200,000 deficit in the Water Department.

Part of the blame, say city officials, is the fact that Lubbock no longer buys water from Pampa, which only uses about 40 percent of its Lake Meredith allocation.

When the Lubbock city fathers stopped buying Pampa water, it created a serious financial problem for Pampa.

"I remember when we had all these plans for what we were going to do with the money (from Lubbock sales)," said Mayor David McDaniel. "And now we're wondering how we're going to make ends meet."

A restructuring of city water rates would also, no doubt, mean an increase in cost to consumers.

Hart said that a problem shortage in Lake Meredith supplies may turn out to be a blessing for Pampa.

"In spite of efforts to allow the lake to fill its conservation pool by limiting the supply made available to the cities each year, the lake has not filled.

"In fact, it became dangerously low a few years ago. In turn, the city must follow the recalculation of the safe yield of Lake Meredith," Hart said.

He added that the Lake Meredith water supply is less than half what was expected.

In the long run, however, that may prove a blessing for Pampa's financial woes. Hart has told the commission that a shortage to cities that currently use all their allotment may mean they need to buy water from Pampa.

"I used to look outside and like the rain," said Mayor McDaniel. "Now I just think about all the problems it brings to us."

Hart told the commission earlier this week that the drought has been a financial windfall for cities selling water to people trying to keep their yards and gardens from dying.

"Remember a few years ago when they had that big drought in the San Francisco area? The city started rationing water, but they had to stop because the rationing was costing the city money in water sales.

"So one day they just up and say that the drought is over. It wasn't really over, but when people could start watering again, water sales picked back up," Hart said.

For city officials, the wet summer has been a major enigma. While it has kept the area beautiful and plush, it has cost the city one more major financial blow.

Challenger mission continues with opening of new center

By RUTH RENDON
Associated Press Writer

HOUSTON (AP) — The scientific and education objectives of the space shuttle Challenger will continue at the Challenger Center, organizers say.

"The Challenger Center mission began with the Challenger crew. The idea to continue it was a mission by the families," said June Scobee, widow of Challenger commander Dick Scobee, at the center's dedication Thursday.

The center at Houston's Museum of Natural Science, paid for with a $150,000 private grant, will give students an opportunity to make a simulated space flight complete with a mission control center and scientific experiments.

"We knew we couldn't launch a satellite. Discovery will do that for us, but we could continue scientific and education objectives of that mission," said Mrs. Scobee, chairman of the board of the Challenger Center.

Mrs. Scobee and relatives of other Challenger astronauts conceived the center as a memorial to the crew killed when the shuttle exploded shortly after takeoff in January 1986.

The Challenger carried Christa McAuliffe, a Concord, N.H., high school teacher who was to have conducted the first classroom experiments from space.

Throughout the summer, 580 Houston-area students have been training to fly the simulated flight.

"It's confusing. It's very complicated to memorize everything," said 10-year-old Lindsay Kemp of Houston, who sat in as captain of mission control during Thursday's simulated flight somewhere between Earth and Mars. "But I'm very interested in space and am learning things."

The Houston center is expected to serve as a model for dozens of similar centers, or mission sites, planned for science museums throughout the country.

The project will work in tandem with the Challenger Center Space-Life Station, to be built in Washington, and similar mission sites, training and research centers for teachers.

"This is a milestone event," said David J. Barram, vice president of corporate affairs for Apple Computer Inc., who donated computers to the center. "The center and its educational innovations, are giant steps down new pathways to knowledge for our children — and for us."

Already plans are being formed to train teachers who may later bring their students, said Carolyn Sumners, director of astronomy at the museum who also wrote the curriculum, developed the software for the program and trained the children this summer.

The simulator is called the "2061 Simulator" and gives children the impression they are on a mission in that year.

The year is significant, according to Kerry Joels, director of educational facilities for Challenger Center, because it marks the 100 anniversary of spaceflight, the 75th anniversary of the Challenger, and the next visit to our solar system of Halley's Comet.

The simulator experiment, involving 30 students and their teacher, who will face problems and perform experiments astronauts likely would encounter aboard a space station.

Officials hope the center can be duplicated at other science museums for between $75,000 and $100,000, a price tag they said museums easily could afford.

Feds filing 'zero tolerance' drug cases in South Texas

BROWNSVILLE (AP) — A federal prosecutor said he is surprised that people keep trying to enter the country with small amounts of illegal drugs, despite a policy that allows the government to seize boats, vehicles and airplanes containing even traces of controlled substances.

"It's absolutely amazing to me that, knowing Customs inspectors all along the border are cracking down with zero tolerance in mind and seizing vehicles, and knowing that at the very minimum there will be administrative fines involved, that people continue to come across the bridge with small amounts of controlled substances," said Christopher Milner, assistant U.S. attorney in Brownsville.

The zero tolerance policy was initiated March 21 by U.S. Customs officials targeting individual drug users traveling with small amounts.

The policy allows federal agents and Coast Guard officers to seize vehicles, boats and aircraft containing any detectable amount of drugs.

Milner this week filed 26 misdemeanor drug charges brought under the zero tolerance policy.

Amounts of controlled substances cited in the complaints ranged from 0.1 gram of marijuana or 0.1 gram of cocaine to 14.6 grams (about one-half ounce) of marijuana. There are 28 grams in one ounce.

The misdemeanor charges filed this week are classified as simple drug possession and carry a maximum penalty of one year in jail and a $100,000 fine for a first offender.

Customs agents are on special alert at international bridges and coastal ports.

Charles Conroy, Customs spokesman in Houston, said agents made 385 zero tolerance seizures through June in the Laredo district, which runs along the border from Del Rio to Brownsville.

The seizures included 4.6 pounds of marijuana; 836 dangerous pills or capsules; 140 items of drug paraphernalia; $255,636 in undeclared currency; and 263 vehicles, valued at $1,064,947.

Conroy said 97 suspects were arrested in the district under the policy since it began.

"It (zero tolerance) is successful in that its accomplished its purpose in focusing attention on the individual violator," Conroy told The Brownsville Herald. "These people are the ones that cause the drug problem."

Milner said under an "in-house" procedure for prosecuting the cases, they are reviewed by Customs and referred to an assistant U.S. attorney, who decides whether to pursue charges.

Milner said with zero tolerance defendants who are uncooperative in dealing with charges of simple possession, he has the option of presenting the case to a federal grand jury and seeking a felony indictment for importing the drugs into the United States.

Owners of shrimp trawlers and other boats were outraged at the prospect their craft could be confiscated for isolated drug use by passengers or crew.

Jimmy Russell Jr., president of the Brownsville-Port Isabel Shrimp Producers Association, said boat owners are trying to alleviate even small traces of drugs on their trawlers by posting warnings to crew members and asking them to sign agreements prohibiting drug or alcohol use.

"Our point is, we've always made efforts to keep drugs off the boat," Russell said. "The problems we've had are crew-related — someone sneaks a little bit on there."

Russell said the relationship between Customs and the shrimp boat owners has improved since earlier in the summer, when officers seized two trawlers.

Lawyers in discrimination suit claim FBI's investigating them

By HOLDEN LEWIS
Associated Press Writer

EL PASO (AP) — The FBI is using surveillance and unfounded investigations to intimidate attorneys for 311 Hispanic agents suing the bureau in a class-action discrimination suit, the lawyers say.

But the FBI's assistant director labels the allegations "outrageous and repugnant."

Thursday's flurry of charges and counter-charges punctuated the end of the nine-day trial before U.S. District Judge Lucius Bunton. Almost 100 witnesses testified.

Bunton said he hopes to render a decision by Oct. 1.

The 311 Hispanic agents joined in the class-action suit contend the FBI discriminates in the promotion, discipline and assignment of Hispanics. They seek unspecified damages and changes in FBI policies.

About 400 — or 4.3 percent — of the FBI's 9,400 agents are Hispanic, compared to about 8 percent of the general population.

The plaintiffs' attorneys, Hugo Rodriguez and Antonio Silva, complained Tuesday and Thursday that the bureau has kept watch on them and possibly begun an investigation to discredit them.

"This is the FBI," Rodriguez said. "You've heard witness after witness state that the first rule of the FBI is, 'Don't embarrass the bureau.' That's what this case is doing. It's bringing out the dirty laundry of the FBI."

About 40 agents testified that the bureau transfers Hispanic agents more often to undesirable locations, hands them assignments that are less glamorous or more dangerous, promotes them slower and gives them less recognition for their successes.

Witnesses called by the FBI denied the accusations.

Rodriguez and Silva were notified Thursday that the FBI was concerned about a possible security breach in connection with the disappearance of an affidavit from Rodriguez' briefcase last month.

Rodriguez and Silva implied the FBI stole the document July 29 from a hotel room so it could start an embarrassing investigation.

'The first rule of the FBI is, "Don't embarrass the bureau." That's what this case is doing. It's bringing out the dirty laundry of the FBI.'

Someone mailed the affidavit to FBI headquarters.

Silva told Bunton: "The government is attempting to put us in jail, to ruin our legal careers, for representing these men and women of the FBI."

But Milt Ahlerich, FBI assistant director for Congressional and public affairs, said the charge was false and denied an investigation resulted from the affidavit's disappearance.

"They're the ones making a veiled allegation of a document being taken from them," he said. "The idea that the FBI would tamper with attorneys' papers is outrageous and repugnant to the FBI's mission."

On Tuesday, FBI attorney Lainie Simion tried to introduce into evidence a document concerning a closed investigation into whether Rodriguez and Silva were selling arms to the Nicaraguan Contras.

Bunton did not allow the document into evidence.

No charges resulted from the investigation, which Rodriguez dismissed as a groundless intimidation tactic.

"I was supposed to be the Contra arms connection, and he (Silva) was supposed to be the bagman," Rodriguez said, denying any connection to the Contras.

Rodriguez said the investigation began after he resigned from the FBI last year as an 18-year veteran.

Tuesday, Silva said he believed the FBI began watching him and Rodriguez when the trial began Aug. 15.

An El Paso police officer lent credence to the surveillance charges when he testified Thursday that he saw a man hiding in the police garage last April, taking photos through a telephoto lens of Rodriguez and Silva leaving the courthouse with the lead plaintiff, Bernardo "Matt" Perez.

The officer saw the man get into a car with California license plates and reported the incident to the FBI.

A brief investigation revealed nothing, testified Richard Schwein, special agent in charge of the El Paso FBI office.

Perez, the No. 2 agent in El Paso, filed the suit in January 1987.

Hispanic activists have said other discrimination cases could result if the plaintiffs win. Rodriguez has compared the case to those fought by blacks in the '60s and women in the '70s.

Foreman: King of Texas criminal defense lawyers dies

By RUTH RENDON
Associated Press Writer

HOUSTON (AP) — Famed trial attorney Percy Eugene Foreman once said he never was sorry he dedicated more than half a century to practicing law and even conducted business from the hospital intensive care unit where he died.

The king of Texas' criminal defense lawyers, Foreman was best known for bartering a guilty plea for the life of the man who killed Rev. Martin Luther King Jr.

Foreman died Thursday at Methodist Hospital. He was 86.

His courtroom theatrics, issue-clouding rhetoric, spotlight shifting and verbal attacks of prosecution witnesses kept law students and spectators spellbound.

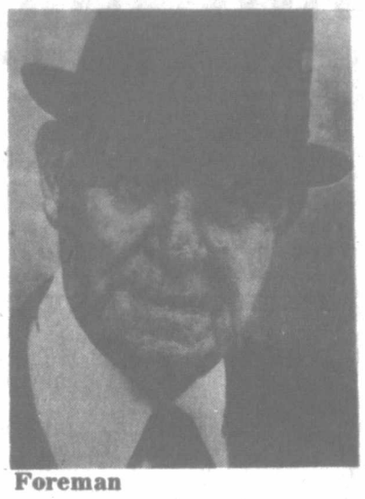

Mike DeGeurin, Foreman's law partner, said Foreman was admitted to the hospital July 15. He was being released last week when he suffered a heart attack. On Thursday, Foreman suffered cardiac arrest at 4:30 p.m and died minutes later.

"He worked up until the day he went into the hospital," said DeGeurin, who worked with Foreman for 14 years. "He actually conducted business in the intensive care unit. He was shooing doctors away."

Foreman estimated once he had tried 1,500 death penalty cases, but of his clients, only a restaurateur named Steve Mitchell was executed. Mitchell was convicted in 1952 of shooting his wife and Foreman, who consistently opposed the death penalty, said later Mitchell had "deserved to die."

"You can't win 'em all," Foreman said of the case, but later confided he blamed himself.

Foreman was a staunch opponent of the death penalty throughout his career. In 1965, he called for televised executions, blaming the death penalty's existence on the secrecy with which it was carried out.

Foreman

He once told the State Bar of Texas, "I've never been sorry I dedicated my life to this area of the law. I am not a criminal lawyer but I am proud of it when people call me one. I am a trial lawyer."

Foreman persuaded James Earl Ray to plead guilty to the 1968 slaying of famed civil rights activist King in exchange for a 99-year sentence. Ray charged later that Foreman pressured him into the plea by saying the odds were "99 percent" certain he would go to the electric chair if he faced a jury.

Another of Foreman's well known cases was his successful defense of Candace Mossler, accused with her nephew, Melvin Lane Powers, of killing Mossler's millionaire husband, Jacques, in Florida in 1964.

Foreman, born in a log cabin outside Livingston on June 21, 1902, was the middle child in a family of 10. His father was sheriff of Polk County. So was his grandfather.

"I decided at age 8 to become a lawyer," he told The Associated Press during an interview last December. "I was operating a shoeshine stand on a principal corner of the courthouse. Lawyers would sit around the corner. They seemed to live better and work less. I thought it'd be an easy way to make a living."

He began studying law at the University of Texas after World War I and kept the $5 bill he received as the fee for his first legal case — drawing up a lease on a five-acre orchard.

"His style, his technique, his manner of handling himself before the jury had a dramatic affect on my career. Not only mine, but many other men and women in the state who practice law," said Houston's other famed attorney, Richard "Racehorse" Haynes, who used to skip law school classes to watch Foreman in court.

"I don't pretend to be the greatest lawyer who ever lived or even the greatest lawyer today," Foreman said in December. "But on the other hand I don't deny it."

He reacted in character April 30, 1982, when a woman whose divorce he had handled was arrested and charged with trying to hire someone to kill him.

"I'm too busy to die," Foreman growled when asked for comment.

Foreman built a practice based on unswerving loyalty to clients. "They may not always be right, but they are never wrong," he once said.

"In a murder case, you should never allow the defendant to be tried," he explained. "Try someone else — the husband, the lover, the police, or if the case has social implications, society generally. But never the defendant."

Foreman was preceded in death by his wife, Marguerite, in 1979.

Survivors include a son, William of Galveston; a daughter, Marguerite of Huntsville; a brother, Keith of Austin; and two sisters.

Services are tentatively set for Monday in Settegast-Kopf Funeral Home, DeGeurin said.

Price Daniel remembered as Texas hero

LIBERTY (AP) — Price Daniel, who held the state's highest public offices, was hailed as a Texas hero.

Daniel died early Thursday at his ranch in Southeast Texas, a place he called his "Golden Pond." He was 77.

He is said to have held more elected positions in Texas than anyone else, having served in the state's executive, legislative and judicial branches.

His varied public career somewhat paralleled that of the 19th century Texas revolutionary hero, Gen. Sam Houston.

Daniel and Houston are the only people in Texas history to serve Texas as U.S. senator first, then governor, a position Daniel said he would rather hold than the presidency of the United States. Houston also was president of the Republic of Texas.

Daniel married Houston's great-great-granddaughter, Jean Baldwin Houston of Houston and, as a young man, opened a Liberty law office where Sam Houston had his law office.

The Daniels had four children. One — Price Daniel Jr., a former Texas House speaker — died in 1981.

On Thursday, Gov. Bill Clements requested that Texas flags be flown at half-staff in honor of Daniel.

"No man has done more for our state than Price Daniel," Clements said in a statement. "He will be remembered as a great patriot, a great American and, most of all, as a great Texan."

Services are set for Saturday at 2 p.m. at the United Methodist Church in Liberty, with burial in the Daniel family cemetery, near the ranch. A memorial service will be held at the First Baptist Church in Austin on Sunday at 4 p.m.

George Christian of Austin, former press secretary and executive assistant to Daniel, said Daniel suffered what was believed to be a massive stroke at his ranch and was taken to Yettie Kersting Hospital at Liberty.

Hospital spokeswoman Margie Hagan said Daniel was dead on arrival at 1:10 a.m. Paramedic Bill Wainscott said, "We went out there and we did all we could do. Unfortunately, we were unable to revive him."

Former Gov. Preston Smith said, "We're going to miss people of his caliber. I've lost one of my best friends."

Daniel was appointed by Smith to the Texas Supreme Court in January 1971, a job he held until his retirement in 1979.

"Gov. Daniel was one of our Texas heroes," said Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby. "No other Texan served with such distinction in all three branches of government. His accomplishments make us all humble."

Daniel, elected to the U.S. Senate in 1952, served only four years of a six-year term before making his successful bid for governor with a close Democratic primary victory over Ralph Yarborough.

He was governor for three two-year terms in 1957-63 but lost an unprecedented bid for a fourth term as he was beaten in the Democratic primary by John Connally, who also became a three-term governor.

Yarborough, who won a special election for Daniel's Senate seat and served 13 years, said Daniel's death is "a great loss to Texas."

Christian said Daniel's principal legacy would be the preserving of the oil-rich tidelands, or submerged offshore lands that have yielded so much revenue for

Daniel

Texas' public schools.

"He was a hands-on governor whose administration touched a wide variety of issues, and he was devoutly religious — a fine gentleman," Christian said.

In 1940, Daniel married his wife, Jean. Of their four children, three are still living. Price Jr., the oldest, died in January 1981 at the age of 39 after being fatally shot. His wife, Vickie, was charged with murder but found innocent after a Liberty trial.

Customs officials say Peace Convoy vehicles did not cross border

REYNOSA, Mexico (AP) — While the Veterans' Peace Convoy says it crossed five vehicles into Mexico at this port of entry last weekend, Mexican officials say it did not.

And a U.S. Customs spokesman says the agency does not know if the activist group crossed the border here en route to Nicaragua.

"No permit was granted for such a convoy to travel through Mexico en route to Nicaragua," Jorge Gonzalez Nassar, Mexico's Customs tourist development chief in Reynosa told the McAllen Monitor.

Convoy coordinator Gerry Condon told The Associated Press in a telephone interview Thursday from the convoy's Washington, D.C., office that the five vehicles did cross, and were in southern Mexico on Tuesday, when he last spoke with the drivers.

"They had no problem crossing the U.S. border," Condon said.

He said Mexican officials processed them through in less than two hours, that the convoy paid Mexico a $30 fee to transport each vehicle, and the drivers were not required to have an escort.

The convoy reported crossing with a two-ton Mercedes Benz truck, three pickups and a Toyota Corolla loaded with food, clothing and medical supplies for Nicaragua. The group opposes U.S. government policies toward the Marxist-ruled nation.

Reynosa is across the Rio Grande from Hidalgo, Texas, 10 miles south of McAllen in the Rio Grande Valley.

Mexican Customs Inspector Jorge Martinez Galvan, who was manning the bridge checkpoint Saturday, said the five vehicles mentioned by the convoy did not cross the bridge between Hidalgo and Reynosa.

U.S. Customs officials have maintained that the group can take the food, clothing and medical supplies, but cannot legally leave the vehicles in Nicaragua, as the group said it planned to do for humanitarian reasons.

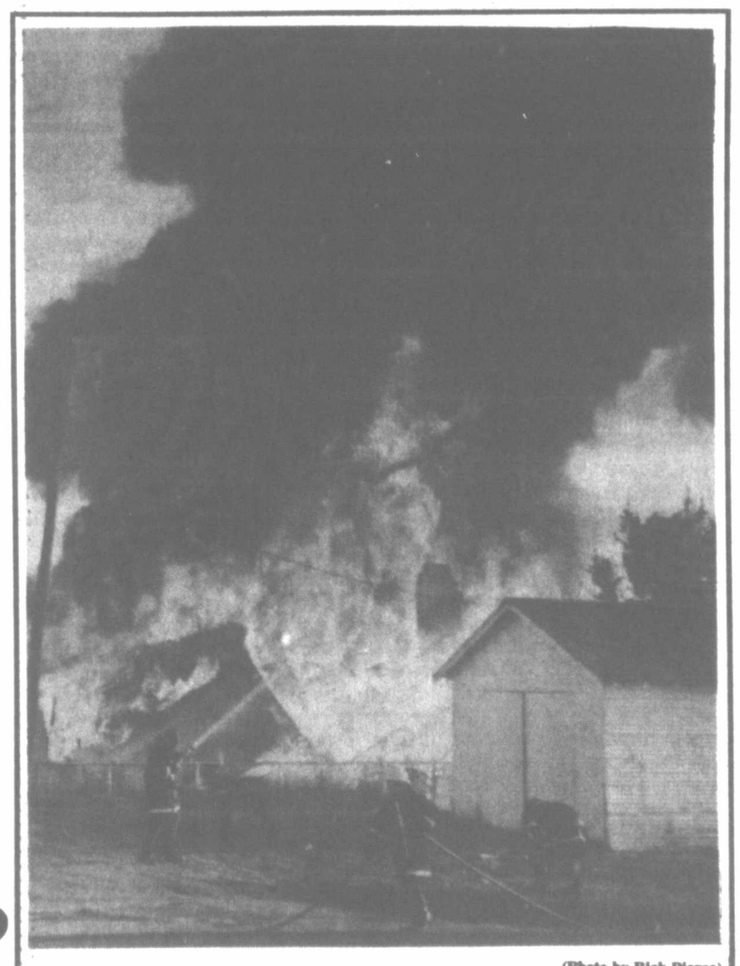

Leaving the vehicles in Nicaragua would the Nicaraguan Trade Control Regulations, a 3-year-old trade embargo on the Sandinistas, Customs officials said.

U.S. Customs has physically blocked the convoy from crossing the border. But the group, which has refused to sign forms agreeing to bring the vehicles back within 30 days, quietly took 15 vehicles across the border at Laredo last month.

U.S. Customs spokesman Charles Conroy in Houston said the agency did not know whether the convoy took the five vehicles across Saturday. If the group did cross, it was not stopped because it did not announce its intentions.

Reynaldo Garcia Duran, Mexico's immigration chief in Reynosa, said the convoy did not obtain permits to travel to Nicaragua on Saturday, as would be required for such a trip through Mexico. Martinez Galvan said vehicles with Central or South American destinations are required to be escorted by customs inspectors.

A federal judge's ruling is still pending in a lawsuit the convoy filed in U.S. District Court in Laredo in an attempt to have its mission ruled legal.

Lefors firemen go to work.

Volunteer firefighters find hot time in Lefors

LEFORS — An old grocery store/malt shop, declared an eyesore by Lefors city officials, went up in flames this week, giving the local volunteer fire department an opportunity to practice their skills.

The two-story building, severely damaged in the 1975 tornado that struck Lefors, was donated to the Lefors Volunteer Fire Department for firefighting practice by the Lefors Senior Citizens organization, according to Charlie Sullivan, president of the group.

Five separate small fires were set in the building at 6 p.m. Tuesday for firefighters to extinguish. The building was then set ablaze.

Heat from the fire kept firefighters busy cooling down a nearby building. At its height, the heat became so intense firefighters were spraying water on each other and a fire truck parked 30 yards away from the burning building had to be moved.

When the flames subsided, tired, red-faced and sweat-soaked firefighters slowly peeled off their protective suits and began to roll up fire hoses.

"Serious thanks" was expressed by Lefors Mayor Gene Gee to the volunteer Fire Department for ridding the city of the eyesore.

Some community members have said they hope to erect a small park at the site.

Landmark case fails to prompt executions

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — When the U.S. Supreme Court early this summer upheld the death sentence of convicted killer Donald Gene Franklin, capital punishment opponents feared the ruling would add to Texas' distinction as the nation's leader in executions.

So far that hasn't happened.

And now 1988 is shaping up as the most execution-free year for Texas since 1985, when three men — J.D. "Cowboy" Autry, Ronald Clark O'Bryan (the infamous "Candy Man," who poisoned his own child with Halloween candy) and Thomas Andy Barefoot — were put to death amid all the commotion that accompanied the then-relatively new procedure of lethal injection.

Only Robert Streetman this year has been belted to the gurney in the baby-blue death chamber at the Texas Department of Corrections Walls Unit, and even his death was controversial.

Defense attorneys contended they tried to halt the execution with last-minute appeals that either were ignored by or unknown to the state. The state argued that all appeals were exhausted. Streetman himself vacillated between wanting to die and asking for relief.

Nationally, the execution situation is similar, with only eight convicts put to death so far this year, compared with 25 for all of 1987. Six of those 25 were in Texas. In 1986, when 18 convicts were executed nationally, 10 died in Texas.

Since the U.S. Supreme Court ruled ruled the death penalty legal in 1976, 101 inmates have been put to death, 27 of them in Texas.

"It's kind of like everybody is saying: 'OK, let's wait a minute,' " says James Beathard, an inmate on the Texas death row.

"Texas has a great deal to do with it," Tanya Coke, research director for the NAACP Legal Defense Fund, says of the execution lull. "The courts heard major death penalty cases which challenge the constitutionality of the Texas law and essentially held them up."

Although the Supreme Court upheld Franklin's conviction and the Texas law, Franklin remains among the 277 men and three women who live on Texas' death row. But the attorney who heads the state's capital punishment efforts promises that Franklin, convicted in the notorious 1975 slaying of a San Antonio nurse, will run out of time later this year.

"I think you're probably going to see three or four by the end of the year," Assistant Attorney General Bob Walt predicts. "Franklin is an absolute certainty."

Nationwide, Walt notes that in the last year many court opinions in death penalty cases went against the states.

"There seems to be a little bit of fine-tuning in state statutes," he says.

About a half-dozen inmate names consistently have appeared throughout the year on the Texas Department of Correction's list of prisoners with execution dates. None, however, has come very close to death.

"We've been in touch with D.A.'s (district attorneys) and have told them, 'Let's get it moving,' " Walt says. "We've had a situation where there have been some cases out of time. I think it will get up to snuff and probably will move a lot faster."

But death penalty opponents are shifting their emphasis to a new Texas case the Supreme Court has agreed to hear. In that matter, attorneys for Johnny Penry contend the convicted killer of a Livingston woman in 1979 should not be put to death because he is mentally retarded.

Arguments in the Penry case won't be delivered to the court until later this year with no immediate ruling likely.

"Franklin, although portrayed as a bad decision, was a good case," says Scott Howe, an attorney with the Capital Punishment Clinic at the University of Texas Law School. "People got a stay on the Franklin issue. We're hoping most people get a stay on Penry now."

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Communists learn thoughts are free

Twenty years ago last weekend, the Soviet Union invaded Czechoslovakia, sent the country's reform-minded Communist leaders to Siberia, murdered hundreds of people who resisted the invasion, and clamped a dark night of repression on the country.

Red Army tanks clattered through the streets of Prague and other cities, pulverizing lightly armed resisters, ending the Prague Spring. This was the first application of the so-called "Brezhnev Doctrine," named after Leonid Brezhnev, dictator of the Soviet Union from 1964 to 1982.

The Brezhnev Doctrine stipulates that once a country is conquered by Soviet Communism, the Kremlin will never allow it to be independent. Under Alexander Dubcek, the moderate Communist who headed Czechoslovakia's attempted reform of socialism in early 1968, the country had strayed too far from the dictates of Lenin. As Brezhnev himself told Dubcek, "Don't talk to me about 'socialism.' What we have, we hold."

Twenty years later, three major things can be said about the legacy of the Red Army's invasion. First, the Brezhnev Doctrine remains a litmus test of the sincerity of any reforms the Soviet Union may advance. Until it is repealed, no true reform is possible. Mikhail Gorbachev, the current Soviet dictator, talks about glasnost, perestroika and demokratizatsiya. And some minor reforms have been instituted both in the Soviet Union and in the captive nations of Eastern Europe. But the reality is that Gorbachev's endorsement of the Brezhnev Doctrine is as strong as ever. Any new Prague Spring — or Warsaw Spring or Berlin Spring or Bucharest Spring — would be met with a new invasion of tanks.

Second, Czechs and other Eastern Europeans during the past 20 years have shed their illusion that there is such a thing as "socialism with a human face," the phrase used to describe Dubcek's 1968 experiment. Communistic socialism, everyone now understands, always presents a face of cruelty, slavery and mass murder. Having awakened to this reality, there are few communistic socialists left in Eastern Europe.

The Brezhnev Doctrine and the Soviet tanks still enslave people's bodies, it is true, but their minds are free. Civil disobedience in the form of underground journalism and freely stated opinions is widespread, though suppressed sporadically at the whim of socialist bosses.

Third, it is only in the free West, ironically, that socialism still thrives as an idea, in particular on university campuses. Hordes of professors still think, and teach, that socialism can be imposed with "a human face." These professors, and any students credulous enough to believe them, should travel to Prague. The Czechs will disillusion them.

Berry's World

"Iran and Iraq have a cease-fire. South Africa, Angola and Cuba have a cease-fire. Why don't WE try it?"

He must not make it worse

James J. Kilpatrick

WASHINGTON - Just a few days ago, sitting in New Orleans on a Tuesday night, this correspondent was pondering some conventional wisdom on presidential elections.

George Bush had just named Sen. Dan Quayle of Indiana as his running mate. The main thing Bush could ask of the young senator, I thought, was simply, "Don't hurt me."

Famous last words.

All day Wednesday the nomination began to fall apart. Thursday morning's streamer headline in the Times-Picayune read, "Draft-dodger questions dog Quayle." The National Journal's Convention Daily led with, "Quayle's Stumbling Answers Raise Qualms for Campaign."

Since then the situation has not perceptibly improved. One-liners have made it to the midnight talk shows: This Quayle won't fly. This Quayle's a turkey. What did Dan do at the time of Vietnam? He Quayled. If the Republican ticket were a beer, what would the beer be called? Bush Light.

The Washington Post ran a photograph of the family mailbox back home in Indiana: "The Quayle's." The fellow can't even get his apostrophes straight.

Even the most dedicated liberal Democrat might shed a sympathetic tear for George Bush. Democrats endured similar pain with the naming of Tom Eagleton in 1972. They suffered water torture with Geraldine Ferraro's nomination in 1984.

Now the cry is "poor George!" But let this be said for the record: Bush brought this political calamity on himself. He alone bears the responsibility for making this most regrettable choice.

How can this fiasco be explained? It can't be explained. For all practical purposes, Bush won the Republican presidential nomination with the primaries of Super Tuesday on March 8. He then had five months in which to think about his first critical decision as his party's nominee. True, he wanted to see what the Democrats would do at Atlanta, but that was a secondary factor.

By a process of elimination, Bush somehow found his way to the junior senator from Indiana. Quayle had a voting record that perfectly echoed the conservative Republican platform. He had demonstrated campaign skills in his home state. He had established a modest reputation in the Senate on issues of national defense and arms control

Bush would feel comfortable with him.

Hindsight provides such perfect vision! Bush's advisers, thinking only of the television ratings, became enchanted with the idea of "suspense." If the name of the vice presidential nominee were released before the New Orleans convention, no one would watch the proceedings.

The stratagem would have worked if Bush had chosen Bob Dole, Jack Kemp, Pete Domenici or some other experienced person with national recognition. It couldn't work with the unknown Quayle.

It didn't work. Quayle was rushed breathlessly in front of the TV cameras on Tuesday afternoon. It was as if a rookie from a Triple A club had been called up to pitch a World Series game. He had no preparation for the experience.

Suddenly he faced hundreds of national correspondents. The news hounds seized upon one line from a hastily printed biography: "From 1969-1975, Quayle served in the Indiana National Guard." Alarm bells rang. Quayle would have been 21 or 22, ripe to be drafted for service in Vietnam. By joining the National Guard, his risk of service could be minimized. What gives?

Under questioning, Quayle faltered. On the matter of family influence he bobbed and weaved. He insisted defensively that there is nothing "unpatriotic" about service in the National Guard. If his unit had been called up, he would have served in Vietnam. He was not trying to avoid combat; he was trying to get on with law school.

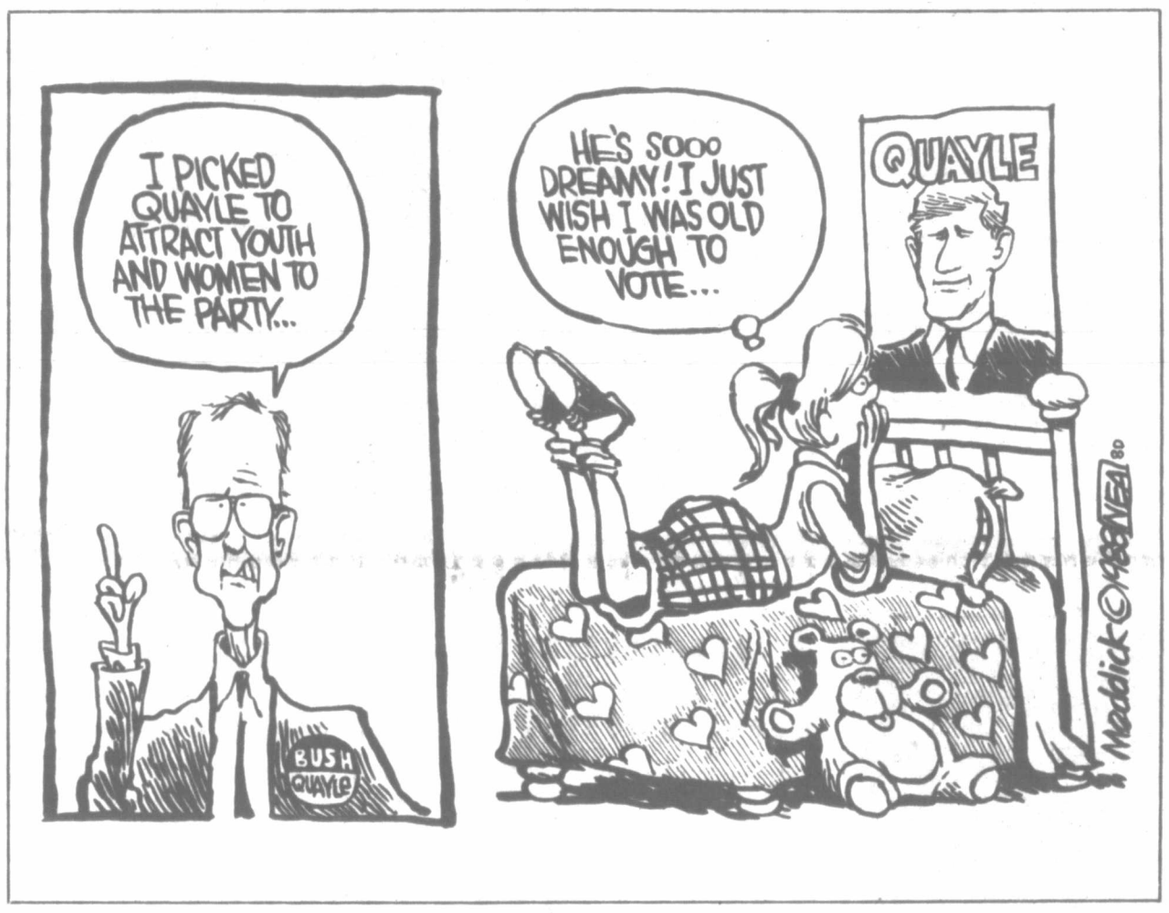

The uproar drowned out the applause Bush earned with his superb acceptance speech Thursday night.

Bush was never better. All the good qualities — the truly presidential qualities — of this seasoned and decent gentleman emerged. It was a knockout of a speech, fully the equal of the fine address Michael Dukakis had delivered at Atlanta.

Friday's headlines still concentrated on Dan Quayle.

What now? Bush may not be able to win with Quayle, but he can't win without him. To dump Quayle now, as McGovern dumped Eagleton in 1972, would be to acknowledge a terrible misjudgment.

Presidents are not supposed to make terrible misjudgments. The Republicans must pray that Quayle rises to the occasion, demonstrates stature and competence, and keeps out of the way. The hurt has been done. He must not make it worse.

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Friday, Aug. 26, the 239th day of 1988. There are 127 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Aug. 26, 1920, the 19th Amendment to the U.S. Constitution, guaranteeing American women the right to vote, was declared in effect. It says: "The right of citizens of the United States to vote shall not be denied or abridged by the United States or by any state on account of sex."

On this date:

In 55 B.C., Roman forces under Julius Caesar invaded Britain.

In 1847, Liberia was proclaimed an independent republic.

In 1873, radio electronics pioneer Dr. Lee DeForest was born in Council Bluffs, Iowa.

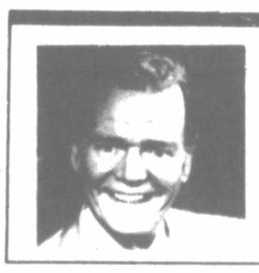

In 1883, the island volcano Krakatoa began erupting with increasingly large explosions.

In 1957, the Soviet Union announced it had successfully tested an intercontinental ballistic missile.

In 1961, the official International Hockey Hall of Fame opened in Toronto.

In 1972, the summer Olympics opened in Munich, West Germany.

He wasn't born in a log cabin

Paul Harvey

When Michael Dukakis was formally nominated in Atlanta, there was a smaller but no less enthusiastic celebration in faraway Pelopi, Greece.

In that ancestral home of the Dukakis family, townspeople gathered at the village cafe to celebrate all night. Feasting on lamb, dancing to bouzouki music, drinking ouzo and toasting the man they call "our Michalis."

And during the so-far campaign in the United States, Dukakis has mentioned with pride that he is the "son of Greek immigrants."

Columnist Mike Royko notes that the very sound of the phrase — "son of Greek immigrants" — suggests poignant mental pictures of a cold street corner where a little man with a large mustache sells hot dogs from a pushcart; sturdy men in wool caps, lunch buckets in hand, trudging through factory gates; weary women scrubbing marble floors of office buildings; crowded tenements where a poor but proud family gathers around a kitchen table for their simple evening meal of thick bread and thin soup.

Royko says he "can almost envision little Mikey Dukakis, a street urchin, helping his pa push that steaming cart."

Politicians since Abraham Lincoln have preferred to profess "humble origins," and that is why we are presently being beaten over the head with the "humble immigrant" hype.

Though for this Greek-American family, the imagery doesn't fit.

Michael Dukakis of Boston is the son of a wealthy Harvard-trained physician, was himself reared in the wealthy Boston suburb of Brookline, went to Harvard Law School and inherited a considerable estate.

He is a man who has never known poverty, never known hunger and has never had to duck a bill collector.

So, says Royko, "The Little Duke's background is pretty much like the background of Ted Kennedy or George Bush."

And while there is nothing wrong with being born to parents who have a few bucks, Democrats particularly don't like being suspected of prosperity.

It suited Jimmy Carter's image-makers to portray him as a Georgia peanut farmer — not an Annapolis man, a naval officer, an engineer — though he was those things, also.

It has become increasingly difficult to attract successful men into public service; they have everything to lose.

Psychologists seek to explain today's notable exceptions by saying that Reagan — an actor — inevitably sought the most important "role" of all.

Bush, so successful so young, needed a further challenge.

Public office for Mike Dukakis means people "looking up to him" — makes him "taller."

If candidates do not want to admit to these motives, perhaps they will at least desist from offending us with silly pretenses at humility.

Democrats need to learn future politics

By BEN WATTENBERG

This being 1988, it is natural that most of us are concentrating on the 1988 presidential and congressional elections. But something is coming up about future elections that deserves attention. Our politics are about to change — because the country has changed.

A national census will be taken in 1990. By 1992, the House of Representatives will be reapportioned on the basis of population shifts recorded in that census. That will lead directly to a new and different presidential electoral formula. Remember, the electoral votes of the states are computed by adding the number of its senators to the number of its representatives.

The population change in America in the 1980s has been noteworthy and powerful. Americans are continuing their tropism to the Sunbelt states of the South and West; in addition, a large number of immigrants have settled in those areas.

Accordingly, in 1992, it is estimated, California will gain five congressmen and presidential electoral votes; Texas gets four; Florida gets three; Arizona and Georgia, two each; North Carolina and Virginia get one each. All this according to recent projections issued by the Population Reference Bureau.

At the same time, states outside the southern and western Sunbelt areas will lose congressmen and electoral votes: New York and Pennsylvania minus three; Illinois, Michigan and Ohio minus two; Massachusetts, Wisconsin, West Virginia, Iowa, Nebraska, and Montana minus one.

What does it mean for our politics? The states loosing population — and votes — are almost all generally more liberal than the states gaining votes. For example, the Northern industrial states have strong union movements; the Southern states have weaker ones, and somewhat more conservative politics. (California may or may not be an important exception to the "somewhat-more-conservative" formulation. It is an exception upon which the 1988 presidential election may turn.)

Moreover, the population movement within states has usually been from central city to suburban areas. That, too, typically represents a move from more liberal areas to less liberal ones — areas replete with what used to be called "suburban middle class values."

In recent years it has been said that America has become more conservative, that's why Reagan was elected, that's why the Democrats have a bad track record in national elections. That view is widely debated. But it is accurate to say that more Americans live in states and locales that are generally regarded as on the more-conservative side. The trend to the South and West has been going on for many decades, and so has the move from city to suburb.

Now, this doesn't necessarily mean that Republicans, who are more conservative, will gain over Democrats, who are more liberal. More likely, Democrats competing in some states and some districts, or running nationally in general elections, will become somewhat more conservative in order to accommodate the changing voter base.

In fact, they already have. It was no accident that liberal Michael Dukakis of Massachusetts chose moderate Lloyd Bentsen of Texas to be his vice-presidential running mate. It is no accident that Dukakis is now described as making a move to the right.

Nor is any of this likely to change soon. In the presidential election formula, some censuses are more equal than others. The 1980 census controlled the apportionment of electoral votes for just two elections. The 1990 census will control it for three — 1992, 1996 and 2000.

It's a wise politician who knows how to count; above all a politician seeking the presidency must know the numbers. Demography is destiny.

Rally planned to rekindle King's dream

By BRYAN BRUMLEY
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Organizers expect tens of thousands of people to gather Saturday to try to rekindle the dream that the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. shared with the nation 25 years ago during the march on Washington.

King's widow, Coretta Scott King, Democratic presidential nominee Michael S. Dukakis and civil rights leader Jesse Jackson plan to address the gathering.

But Republican presidential nominee George Bush did not respond to an invitation, said the Rev. Joseph Lowery, who succeeded King as head of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference.

"We have not heard from Mr. Bush," Lowery said at a news conference Thursday. A Bush spokesman, Dan McLagan, said the vice president plans to campaign in Texas on Saturday.

An estimated 250,000 people marched in Washington on Aug. 28, 1963, one of the great days in the civil rights movement and the occasion of King's moving "I have a dream" speech.

The same number of people commemorated the 20th anniversary of the march five years ago.

Lowery said he expects "throngs" to march Saturday, but he declined to predict the number.

The march in 1963 spurred Congress to pass the Civil Rights Act of 1964.

"Something magic happened there. A new vision was shared with the American people. Whether that happens on Saturday or not, I don't know," said Andrew Young, who in 1963 was a young minister working with King and is now the mayor of Atlanta.

Since 1963, said Lowery, "everything has changed and nothing has changed. We have come a long, long way. But we still have a terribly long way to go, particularly in the arena of economic justice."

Thirty-one years after King, Lowery and Ralph Abernathy helped found the SCLC, the median income of blacks remains only 57 percent of the median white income, Lowery said.

"We won the battle about where you sit on the customer's side of the lunch counter, but the battle about the cash register side of the lunch counter is still raging," he said.

With or without Bush in attendance, Saturday's event was shaping up as a broad attack on the Reagan administration.

The march, said Lowery, "will emphasize jobs, peace, freedom and equality. We will leave Washington with an intensified voter registration effort. ... It is our concern that we not allow the electricity of the campaign of Jesse Jackson to stop."

Although the SCLC will not endorse a presidential candidate, Lowery said, it will challenge what he called "the marriage of the political right and the religious right."

"This marriage has led this country to support tyranny, to sanctify war and to subsidize terrorism. We shall reject this illicit, illegitimate union of the political right and religious right," said Lowery, a Baptist minister.

"We shall not reject the gospel according to Matthew, Mark and John for the gospel according to Meese, Baker, Swaggart and Falwell," he said, referring to former Attorney General Edwin Meese III, former Treasury Secretary James Baker who is now Bush's campaign chairman, and evangelical preachers Jerry Falwell and Jimmy Swaggart.

Young criticized the Reagan-Bush administration more directly.

"What we are looking for now is leadership that will once again provide stability to the economy of the world," he said in a speech at the National Press Club.

"It requires a kind of vision and it requires a kind of long-range view, and I, of course, think that Michael Dukakis is the only one that has that," Young said.

"If Bush had any ideas about what to do, he and Baker could have done it in the last four years."

Bush promises jobs for minorities; Bentsen hears jeers

By The Associated Press

Vice President George Bush promised new jobs for minorities and said he'd be a "good president for all Americans" during a swing through his adopted home state, but his running mate ran into fresh questions today with a report he fudged on his official resume.

Democrat Michael Dukakis kept up his code of silence on Dan Quayle questions but unloaded again on the Reagan administration, saying it has lost the war on drugs with Bush as the lieutenant.

Dukakis running mate Lloyd Bentsen ran into flak Thursday when the World War II veteran pilot told a veterans' group that Dukakis and the Democrats could be trusted with the nation's defense.

Bentsen, wearing a VFW cap, was warmly received at the Veterans of Foreign Wars Convention in Chicago. But in trying to make the case for Dukakis on defense, he was interrupted four times by boos or jeers — once when he mentioned former President Carter's name.

Quayle was campaigning in the Midwest trying to answer questions on farm and trade issues when The (Cleveland) Plain Dealer reported that he exaggerated his job record in the Indiana Attorney General's office.

Quayle had just begun to shed some of the questioning about his military record and relations with a former lobbyist.

Quayle's Senate biography, which is being distributed as official background of the Republican vice-presidential nominee, says: "He was chief investigator for the Consumer Protection Division of the Indiana Attorney General's Office from 1970-1971."

The Plain Dealer reported that the Consumer Protection Division didn't even exist in 1970 and that Quayle spent most of the period as a low-level clerk. It said he put in less than three months in the investigator's job, and had already moved on to another job when the division officially opened for business in September 1971.

The new disclosure came just a few hours after Bush had declared the controversy over his running mate to be a thing of the past.

Campaigning in Texas with a Mariachi band and wearing a guayaberra, Bush promised in the sweltering late-summer heat of San Antonio "to help those minorities who haven't really had a shot at the starting line."

"The best way to do that in employment is to have urban and rural enterprise zones, a break in that tax structure that will encourage business to locate where those populations are."

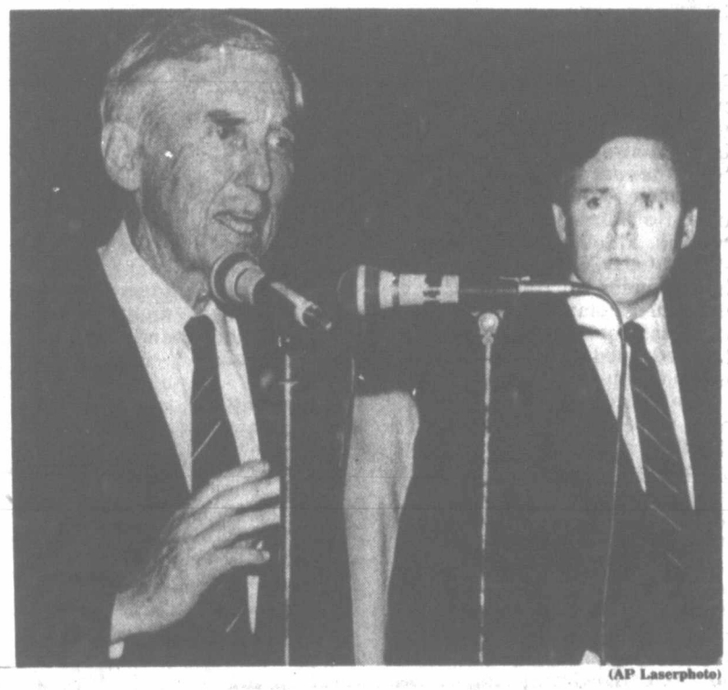

Reagan tried to create such zones on a national level in the early part of his administration as a means to combat unemployment, but opponents said they failed to produce results.

Bush also said he supports affirmative action programs "so minorities have a better shot at the American dream," pledged to fight gun control and help the faltering oil industry.

Dukakis, returning to Boston after a Midwest sojourn, escalated his attacks on Bush through his role in the Reagan administration.

"Why after seven years of task forces and policy boards and grandiose claims have cocaine imports tripled, drug-related deaths doubled, and heroin imports risen by 50 percent?" he asked at a rally in Cleveland.

He also said the administration's association with Panamanian leader Manuel Antonio Noriega while he was "actively involved in the drug business" was "criminal."

Town feels compassion for strange family

CORBIN, Ky. (AP) — For years, a mother and three grown children in this small town were known as a strange brood: their furniture was upside down, they refused to use household plumbing and shouted at all hours of the night.

But the odd habits of Anna K. Moore, 68, and her children generated only sympathy from townspeople, which deepened when utility workers found the decomposed body of Mrs. Moore's daughter, Dawn, in their house, officials said.

"I feel terrible about this whole situation," said John C. Mullins, the police chief in this southeast Kentucky town of 8,000 people. "To me, the outcome of this is the Moore family is going to be stuck in a mental institution."

Officers on Wednesday arrested Mrs. Moore, her 38-year-old daughter Michella and Michella's twin brother John, police said. They were taken to a Lexington hospital for a medical evaluation ordered by Whitley District Judge R. Blaine Stewart.

The family's strange habits had grown stranger in the last two or three years, according to Mayor Tom Thurston. In addition to the upside-down furniture, shouting and refusal to use plumbing, the house was falling apart and there was no glass in the windows.

On Aug. 5, gas workers checking a meter at the house found 35-year-old Dawn Moore's body in a bedroom after Mrs. Moore asked them if they would like to see her daughter, officials said.

The family had put Miss Moore to bed after she collapsed July 8, then rubbed her with lotions and flour in an attempt to heal her, authorities said.

Mrs. Moore later said she did not realize her daughter had died until Miss Moore's body turned black.

The woman died of natural causes, said Whitley County Coroner Carl Paul, citing a preliminary autopsy report.

The medical examination of the family was requested by Mrs. Moore's brother, Richard Taylor of Louisiana, after he heard about his niece's death, said his attorney, Darrell Saunders.

For the people of Corbin, the order that the Moores be examined represents an emotional release, Thurston said.

"We have a community that would have helped, if they had been allowed," said the mayor.

"But they (the Moores) were unusually independent and would not accept aid by anybody."

The family was considered harmless. John Moore used to listen to his portable radio while he picked up trash downtown and his sisters sat on a curb and watched.

Mrs. Moore and Michella were arrested as they walked to a grocery store, said police Lt. Pauline Burgan. They did not resist, but did not seem to know what was happening, she said.

"The mother started hollering, 'Don't hurt my daughter,' and that was it," the lieutenant said.

John Moore, arrested in woods behind his house, was handcuffed after he screamed, neighbors said.

"I liked to cried when I saw them put him in the police car," said Harold Adkins.

Officials: Ex-Army sergeant operated international spy ring

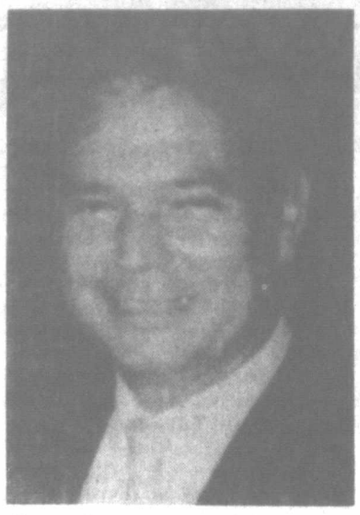

By KEVIN COSTELLOE
Associated Press Writer

FRANKFURT, West Germany (AP) — A former U.S. Army sergeant was ordered held in prison for allegedly heading an international spy ring that authorities say sold NATO secrets to the Soviets since the late 1970s.

A special Supreme Court panel ordered the suspect, Clyde Lee Conrad, held in prison pending further investigation following his arrest on Tuesday, said Chief Federal Prosecutor Kurt Rebmann. He was charged with "compelling suspicion of espionage activities in an especially grave case," according to the prosecutor's office.

The New York Times, quoting U.S. and West German officials, said today that Conrad is believed to have transferred information on rocket bases and on NATO's secret oil pipeline to resupply tanks in West Germany.

Officials earlier said the ring was believed to have stolen documents concerning NATO defense plans for Europe and U.S. Army contingency plans for a ground war with the Soviet Union in Europe.

Conrad

Rebmann's spokesman, Alexander Prechtel, said Thursday that it's too early to determine what damage the spying caused the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

A second American soldier who was not identified received a "five-figure sum" of money for supplying the ring with military secrets, Rebmann said. Prechtel said two Hungarian-born brothers arrested Tuesday in Sweden with cipher keys, coded messages and radios were a part of the ring.

"We can't exclude the possibility that millions of dollars are involved," Prechtel said.

A U.S. Justice Department official, speaking on condition of anonymity, called the case "a serious encroachment on our national security."

Army records released in Washington said Conrad, of Sebring, Ohio, was born in 1947 and worked for the U.S. military for 20 years, first as an infantryman and then as an "administration specialist."

According to his service records, Conrad received the National Defense Service Medal, the Vietnam Service Medal, five Army Commendation medals, the Army Achievement Medal, three Meritorious Service medals and seven Good Conduct medals.

Prechtel said Conrad worked with classified military defense plans for seven years at a U.S. Army base in Bad Kreuznach in central West Germany, with access to a wide array of secret documents.

Conrad allegedly engaged in espionage work after he left the service in 1985, Prechtel said.

In a statement, Rebmann also alleged that Conrad had turned over the most recent batch of information to his Soviet bloc contact in Vienna last month.

Rebmann said officials still were investigating to determine exactly what was missing.

Cable News Network on Thursday quoted unidentified West German sources as saying Conrad systematically photographed files between 1980 and 1985. The CNN report said investigators believe he may have transferred material onto a personal computer, which was seized at his home.

Prechtel said that while "several" people had been taken into custody or arrested, he could not confirm a New York Times report Thursday that eight people were rounded up.

Polish steel workers on strike

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Mechanics joined hundreds of other workers on strike at a steel mill in southeastern Poland, and police backed off after staging a massive show of force around a strikebound coal mine, labor leaders said today.

Ewa Kuberna, a spokeswoman for the outlawed Solidarity free trade union, said about 3,000 workers were occupying the Stalowa Wola steel mill. She said the mechanics joined other strikers late Thursday.

Workers arriving for the first shift today were turned away by management, Kuberna said.

In the coal mining region of Silesia, police briefly surrounded the July Manifesto mine near Jastrzebie late Thursday, Solidarity activists said. Robert Kozak, a Solidarity spokesman in Warsaw, said about 100 police vehicles, some equipped with water cannons, surrounded the mine where a strike spawned Poland's worst labor unrest since 1981.

Kozak said police drove up to the main gate and turned flood lights on the compound, which has been occupied by strikers for 11 days.

He said security forces made no attempt to enter the mine, where an estimated 600 workers remained holed up. Police left a short time later, Kozak said.

Earlier Thursday, three strikes crumbled in Silesia and steel workers gave up an on-again, off-again strike in the Nowa Huta steel mill outside Krakow.

Strikes continued along Poland's Baltic coast, in the major ports of Gdansk and Szczecin, and at least two coal mines, in addition to July Manifesto, remained crippled by strikes.

The strikers are demanding legalization of the Solidarity trade union federation and better wages.

An 11 p.m. to 5 a.m. curfew was in effect in Jastrzebie, at the heart of the coal mine strikes. Provincial officials decreed Thursday that nonresidents were not permitted in the town.

One strike committee member said riot police beat at least six miners when they forced strikers to evacuate three paralyzed mines Wednesday night, including the Borynia mine in Jastrzebie and the Morcinek mine in nearby Kaszyce.

But at least 20 people remained barricaded underground at the third mine, the Mosczenica, witnesses said.

The state news agency PAP said strikes ended Thursday at three other shafts — the Krupinski, ZMP and First of May.

Protests cripple train, air service for Burma

RANGOON, Burma (AP) — Strikers demanding democracy today halted all train and air service in the capital, and sources said rioting prisoners set several buildings ablaze in Rangoon's jail. Most government offices were deserted.

"Government control is eroding, but it has not disintegrated," said a Western diplomat in Rangoon. He spoke on condition of anonymity.

Radio Rangoon said some "hooligans" torched shanties in suburban areas.

Striking workers shut down factories under the Industries Ministry and two oil refineries, in Syriam across the Rangoon River and in Mann in central Burma. A strike at Rangoon port left foreign ships waiting.

No newspapers appeared on stands for the second straight day because workers at the six state-run dailies stayed home to demand democracy.

The influential daughter of Burma's late independence leader told about 400,000 cheering protesters that an interim government should be formed to bring about democracy and end 26 years of authoritarian rule.

Aung San Suu Kyi said this alone could ease weeks of unrest that have toppled one president and killed at least 112 people.

Aung San Suu Kyi has no political experience but wields considerable symbolic influence as the daughter of Aung San, who led the country's struggle for independence from Britain and was assassinated in 1947.

She spoke a day after the country's most outspoken dissident, Aung Gyi, also demanded an interim government. Aung Gyi issued his call hours after he was freed from jail following a month of detention on charges of "attacking the state."

Catholic priests and nuns sang hymns to begin today's rally in a field near the revered Shwedagon Pagoda. People of all ages and from all walks of life, including students and Buddhist monks, attended.

Fire broke out at the capital's Insein Jail, where Aung Gyi and nearly 1,700 anti-government protesters had been held. Smoke could be seen eight miles away. Sources said rioting prisoners started the fires.

State-run Radio Rangoon said that all 2,750 people arrested during demonstrations Aug. 3 to Aug. 25 in Rangoon had been released except those who committed serious crimes. It said those freed included 744 students, 165 government employees, and 27 Buddhist monks.

All other protesters nationwide have been ordered released.

The demonstrations forced hard-line President Sein Lwin's resignation on Aug. 12 and put pressure on Maung Maung, who took power Aug. 19, to move toward multiparty democracy.

Maung Maung is president and chairman of the ruling Burma Socialist Program Party.

Protection

The signal light is man's guide to safer travel. However, they protect only as they are obeyed.

The Bible is God's Signal Light and guide for man's path through life.

"Thy word is a lamp unto my feet, and a light unto my path."

Through study of God's word, we learn His will for our life, and He will lead in paths of righteousness.
ATTEND CHURCH

EVERYONE IN THE CHURCH ... THE CHURCH IN EVERYONE

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that, however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny; the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.

Chriestenson

Chriestenson to lead revival at local church

Brother Ray Chriestenson will be preaching in revival services at Highland Pentecostal Church, 18th and Banks, from Sunday through Wednesday.

Services are at 6 p.m. Sunday and 7 p.m. Monday through Wednesday, with the congregation inviting the public to attend.

Evangelist Chriestenson has been in the ministry for more than 40 years. He and his wife Elsie have been married for more than 37 years. They have four sons, all committed to the ministry.

Tim, the oldest son, has preached and sung around the world, on two occasions ministering behind the Iron Curtain. The three other boys traveled for seven years in the United States, including Alaska, and in Canada in a concert ministry. The sons are all involved in Christian ministries individually.

Chriestenson has pastored churches in Arkansas, Colorado, Kansas and Texas for a number of years. He and his family spent three years at North Pole, Alaska, where he helped build a Christian radio station, KJNP, known as "The Voice of King Jesus North Pole."

For the past several years, he has been involved in evangelism in the United States, Canada, Denmark, Sweden and Poland, and in July 1986 he was a participant in the "Amsterdam 86" sponsored by the Billy Graham Evangelistic Association.

His Touch

By Charlotte Barbaree

Scripture: Instead, speaking the truth in love, we will in all things grow up into him who is the Head, that is, Christ. From him the whole body, joined and held together by every supporting ligament, grows and builds itself up in love, as each part does its work. (Ephesians 4:15-16 NIV)

My middle daughter was a dedicated gymnast for nine years. Through the years of watching her learn and hone her gymnastics skills, I developed a greater appreciation for the mechanics of the human body and the cybernetics of the human mind.

Each gymnastic element requires the precision of every muscle and ligament; if a required muscle isn't well enough developed, execution of the correct motion and posture is impossible. As the feeble muscles develop, the motion becomes smoother, prettier, easier and more consistent.

However, no amount of body strength and flexibility can compensate for intellect. The brain is the muscle by which a competition is won or lost. It concentrates, coordinates, trouble shoots, makes error corrections and registers a routine well done.

The correct combination of brain and body power results in motion of such dynamic beauty and grace it draws involuntary gasps and enthusiastic cheers from even the most bleacher-weary spectators.

Jesus Christ is our infallible intellect; we Christians comprise the muscles, ligaments, bones and vitals which are His body of believers.

He has a purpose for each of us, and He transmits to us individualized spiritual directives. When each Christian is striving for strength in His purpose, the result is a smoother, mightier, more consistently effective evangelistic endeavor.

The combination of Christ's omnipotence and the Christian Body's faithfulness culminates in a spiritual movement of such dynamic beauty and grace, even the most hardened unbeliever can be moved to a confession of Christ and a shouting of praise!

Praise, worship spectacular begins

"Move With the Cloud," a praise and worship spectacular, will be presented tonight and Saturday at the Spirit of Truth Church, 1200 S. Sumner.

Involving speakers, Bible classes and workshops, "Move With the Cloud" is co-sponsored by the Spirit of Truth Church and Ariel Ministries. The activities will concern the use of banners, dance and drama as a means of praising and worshiping God.

Opening the two-day events will be a 7 p.m. session today with Claude C. Hargis as speaker. Hargis, an internationally traveled Bible teacher, is the founder of Ariel International, now headquartered in Pampa. He has introduced several congregations to the use of dance in worship.

Saturday morning at 9:30 a.m. will be a session with Jacquie Hopper as speaker. She is an anointed Bible teacher, singer and worship leader who also has traveled internationally.

Saturday afternoon will be devoted to Bible classes at 2 p.m. and workshops at 3:30 p.m.

Bible classes will cover such topics as the New Testament application of David's tabernacle, God's restoration of praise and worship, the scriptural use of banners, dancing as an acceptable form of worship, flowing with the Holy Spirit in leading praise and worship, and spiritual warfare and high praise.

The practical workshops will cover banner making, dance, drama, and a question and answer forum for pastors and worship leaders.

In addition to Hargis and Jacquie Hopper, other teachers and instructors include:

- Gary Hopper, anointed worship leader at Messiah Ministries in Oklahoma City, Okla. He is a highly trained musician and keyboardist.
- Ladell Neitzell, an ordained Bible teacher from Messiah Ministries. She has introduced the use of banners to many churches. She is president of New Creations, which makes banners and costuming.
- Tom McGuire, who has served as worship leader in several churches in West Texas. He ministers on the keyboard and in song.
- Mark and Brenda Zedlitz, pastors of Spirit of Truth Church.
- Shira Simcha, the dance troupe of Spirit of Truth Church, led by Nancy Watson.
- Praise, the drama team of Dorothy Farrington and Debbie Lawrence.

Activities will conclude at 7 p.m. Saturday with "Move With the Cloud," presented by all teachers, instructors and the dance and drama teams moving together in corporate anointing.

The Friday and Saturday evening services are open to the public, with no registration fee required. Registration fees will be taken at the door for those not having pre-registered.

Fee for the Saturday morning and afternoon classes and workshops is $20 an individual or $30 for the entire family. There is no fee charge for senior pastors. There also will be reduced rates for those who are not able to attend all the sessions.

Teacher now coaches jail inmates

By RUTH FRIEDBERG
Borger News-Herald

BORGER (AP) — Six years ago, Borger High School teacher and coach Roger McFarren took to heart a Biblical call to visit those in prison and became an interdenominal jail minister.

It was a vocation to which he says he believes the Lord directed him.

"It's quite a challenging job," McFarren, 48, said of his sideline, which has taken him to large prison units and small county jails across Texas.

"The Lord loves these men just like the Lord loves you and I. Many are from broken homes and divorces and we are admonished by the Lord that we should do this," McFarren said of his ministry, which works mainly through Gideon's International.

McFarren is head of Jail and Prison Ministry for Texas overseeing about seven other lay preachers. He says he believes being interdenominational helps them get access to more prisons than if they represented a specific denomination.

On a typical visit, the lay ministers hold a service in the prison mess hall, then distribute copies of the New Testament to inmates as the men head back to their cells. Sometimes the preachers hand out as many as 2,000, he said.

In an average year, McFarren may visit two to four prisons. Last year, he said the Gideons went to 13 prisons.

In addition, McFarren and Hugo Riemer of Stinnett try to cover every jail "from Amarillo north" each Sunday.

Recently, McFarren and Reimer went south, visiting a jail in Pecos where more than 80 men attended their service and 50 of those "Accepted Jesus for rededication," he said.

"Many of these men were very open and receptive to us in hearing the good news — the gospel of Jesus Christ," McFarren said.

Being a good Christian in prison is not always easy, he said.

"Outside of prison walls we live Christian lives daily, but behind prison walls it's different because you're made fun of," he said explaining that the jeers came "just because they're Christians or because they go to church inside the prison."

But, according to prison wardens, an estimated 80 percent of those that make fun end up back in prison, McFarren said.

"They go out and revert back to the type of life they know," he said.

"People are leary to hire them. They go back to the only way they know how to survive. Many are uneducated and a big percentage are dropouts," he said.

Some people might be afraid to visit people incarcerated for violent behavior, but McFarren says it doesn't bother him.

"It has never really affected me because of all the prayers that have gone up from local churches ... and local Gideons. I never felt fear knowing that the Lord was with us."

Prayers from his wife, Joyce, and his children also see him through, he said.

Despite his six years of experience being face to face with hardened criminals, he said the most shocking thing he has experienced is seeing local youths in the Hutchinson County Jail at Stinnett.

But a benefit of his vocation and 25 years as a coach and teacher, McFarren says, is that he can spot the trouble signs in young people and has counseled several about their problems. He says sometimes problems are triggered by something as simple as parents not coming to see a child at a volleyball game.

"It's a great mission field in the public schools to witness to so many kids," he said.

Faith Tabernacle

The Walter Hodges Evangelistic Party will be in services this weekend at Faith Tabernacle, 610 Naida. Services will be at 7:30 p.m. today and Saturday, and at 10 a.m. and 6:30 p.m. Sunday. The Hodges family has been ministering in churches for sometime, with fulfilling results, said Pastor Aaron Thames. Pastor Thames and the congregation extend "a warm, cordial welcome" for the public to come and enjoy the ministry of this family.

Two women form 'Praise' to worship the Lord in drama

(Staff Photo by Duane A. Laverty)

By DEE DEE LARAMORE
Staff Writer

Two Pampa women form the backbone of an innovative Christian drama team called "Praise," which uses no written scripts to present its message.

"We use no written scripts," explained Deborah Lawrence. "We sit and praise and worship and pray, and we believe through the Holy Spirit we will know just what to do that that particular church and those particular people need."

"I believe this concept is unique," said Dorothy Farrington, the other team member. "If we allow the Holy Spirit to speak through us, He can give us the specific words and just the right inflections."

Farrington will be teaching art part-time at Pampa High School. Lawrence, a published novelist, is working on a trilogy. Both said they were worried about the time the drama team would require.

"It's nice not to have to worry about scripts and memorizing," Lawrence said.

Each presentation becomes tailored to the group for which it is intended. Sometimes only Lawrence and Farrington are the characters. Sometimes others are brought in.

"Sometimes we use costumes; sometimes we don't," Lawrence said. Once Lawrence dressed up as a Giggle cookie and Farrington came as Kool-Aid in an illustration about taking communion for a group of youngsters.

"We know that is a very serious subject. But sometimes it can be pretty frightening talking about pain and grief," Farrington said.

"We try to get across the seriousness of it and still retain the fun," she said.

Though the team only began in February, they have already been asked to perform for many local organizations. Recently they were asked to minister at El Reno Federal Prison in Oklahoma.

In this instance, Lawrence played a man in prison who could not forgive her father. Farrington played the abusive, violent father.

"It was so exciting," Lawrence said. "There were men who got up and danced before the Lord."

"Two men were saved," Farrington added. "Almost all of them prayed for forgiveness."

'It's nice not to have to worry about scripts and memorizing.'

The play went over so well, the prison chaplain has invited them to come back, they said.

They've been invited to perform at a church in Dardenelle, Ark., and at Highland Pentecostal Church. Recently they were asked to go to Botswana, Africa, and to travel with a team in Russia.

"These are all tentative," Farrington said. "We have no money to go yet. The Lord will have to provide."

"Praise" joined in a visiting evangelist's street rally earlier this summer, where they met varying reactions. Lawrence made signs saying "Jesus Loves You" and sat on the hood of her car in a parking lot where passing motorists could see the sign. "The response was something else, everything from people putting the visor down so they wouldn't see us to people hanging out their windows waving," she said.

Farrington said while they were on the parking lot of a bank, a lady got in her car and raced out of the parking lot.

"While we were at Wal-Mart, one lady was just enthralled but a lot just walked by and ignored us," Lawrence said.

One attempt at ministering backfired on them, however. They had received permission to do a skit at the M.K. Brown Swimming Pool. Dressed as hillbillies and affecting an exaggerated hillbilly manner, they passed out some religious tracts to people at the pool.

"It was completely misunderstood," Lawrence said. They had handed some tracts to some children and told them all about a mythical Uncle Joe who had gotten religion and turned into a devil stomper.

"We told them to be careful, because if they read those tracts they might become a devil stomper like Uncle Joe," Farrington said.

Unfortunately, their message was turned around and word got back to city officials that there were some hillbillies telling the kids in so many words that they were going to hell.

"I didn't know we were that good," Farrington said. "People believed we were for real. We're really sorry that the misunderstanding occurred. All we wanted to do was get the kids interested in reading the tracts."

While Farrington has a college degree in speech and drama, Lawrence's acting background came from her experience with ACT I theatre group.

"Debbie is so dependable," Farrington said of her partner. "She always carries her end of the stick."

"I can say the same for you," Lawrence added.

As to what the future holds, neither member of "Praise" can say.

"We're willing to do whatever the Lord shows us," Lawrence said.

"There is so much joy in doing something that you love so much," Farrington said.

Extend toddlers' reach with easy-to-make stands

Crafts

By BOB SAWYER

There's nothing at all wrong with being short. I love short people. Some of my very favorite toddlers are so short they don't even stand head-to-head with the dog.

But being short has defininte disadvantages, for instance, not being able to reach life's basic necessities like the sink, the toothbrush, the fruit drinks or the cookies.

When my kids were small, I started banging together simple stair-step stands to help the little ones reach higher in life. There got to be so many that they were given a name — 'nother stand. Wherever there was a need, we built a 'nother stand.

Easy and inexpensive, you can assemble any size stand in just a few hours. A nice paint job dresses up these stands just enough to make them attractive plant or knickknack displays.

Our detailed plans for the stands include a materials list, cutting diagrams, illustrated step-by-step instructions and full-size patterns for folk art designs and contours.

Another easy project, and one that is just as popular and useful, is our potato and onion bin. It's a bit of Americana for your kitchen, with a spacious interior bin and drawer that holds loads of spuds and onions.

To order plans for the 'nother stand, specify Project No. 525; or for the potato and onion bin, specify No. 545. Send $4.95 for either plan, or order both for only $8.90 and save a dollar.

Mail to: The Woodwright, Dept. 79065, P.O. Box 1000, Bixby, Okla. 74008-1000. If you'd like our catalog, which includes coupons worth $16, add $2.95.

I used ¾-inch solid-core plywood for the 'nother stands. To make the 24-inch-tall model with two steps, you'll need to cut the following parts: two sides, 14 x 24 inches; one support, 7 x 15; two treads, 7½ x 18; and two risers, 3½ x 15.

Cut a 7 x 12-inch rectangle from the top front corner of each side. Cut a scroll contour up into the center of the lower end.

Cut a shallow scroll contour along the bottom of each riser. Round off the front long edge and both ends of each tread.

Assemble the stand with glue and finishing nails. First, attach the two risers between the sides, flush with the top edges of the two stair levels. Attach the support flush at the back.

Attach the treads on top of the stair levels and risers, extending equally at each end. The rounded long edge will extend out past the riser at the front.

And that's all there is to it, except for finishing. If you are making a larger stand, you can make shaped cutouts in each side. Hearts are nice, or try some flower designs if you like scrollwork.

One way to finish the stand is to first paint a base coat, then draw and paint decorative designs on the sides, treads and risers. A coat of stain, applied after the paint is dry, gives an antique effect.

Fall menswear is experimental

NEW YORK (AP) — Maturing baby boomers are changing the rules for menswear as they look for clothes somewhere between jeans and T-shirt and the pinstripe suit.

"Most of the younger guys who are working grew up on MTV and rock 'n' roll," said award-winning designer Bill Robinson, whose label is starting its third year.

This generation, he says, is "breaking down barriers of how and where you wear things."

The experimentation is evident in clothes shown for fall.

The look includes round, softer shoulders on sportcoats; high-waisted sweaters meant to be tucked in; mock turtlenecks to be worn under vests; buttery "antique leathers" and suedes. Browns, grays and blacks are popular, but some designers are throwing in reds, yellows and what one called "vegetable colors."

"I think men are ready to wear color," said Ronaldus Shamask, a relative newcomer to menswear whose minimalistic designs in such shades as mustard, teal and wine have won acclaim. "Men are becoming much more comfortable with experimenting."

The classic Polo line by Ralph Lauren, who's been designing menswear for more than 20 years, is trying out American Indian styles, suede shirts and "antique ski and expedition clothing."

Even the business suit is "loosening up," said Tom Julian, associate fashion director of the Men's Fashion Association. "Men are more aware (of fashion) today," Julian said.

Death records can help in ancestor search

Approximately 6,800 people are listed in the recently published Alabama Mortality Schedule 1860 by MARILYN DAVIS BAREFIELD, 1108 18th St. South, Apt. 1, Birmingham, Ala. 35205.

This list supposedly covers everyone who died in the year between June 1859 and June 1860 in Alabama. It also provides the following information: age, sex, marital status, place of birth, month of death, occupation, cause of death and number of days ill.

A mortality schedule can be the source to provide that missing clue to what happened to your ancestor. Most states have a printed copy of the schedules for 1850 and 1860, and many have 1870 available.

A free brochure listing the family names of descendants of Emperor Charlemagne, found in Volume I, II and III of Pedigrees of Some of the Emperor Charlemagne's Descendants, can be obtained by writing to The Genealogical Publishing Co., 1001 N. Calvert St., Baltimore, Md. 21202.

When writing to any of the publishing companies, ask for a catalog of other books or materials. Related items (notepads, stickers, etc.) vary from company to company, and the wise shopper comparison shops!

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

Navy recruiter refuses to lie for sleepwalking nephew

DEAR ABBY: I've been in the U.S. Navy for 13 years. Last year I was a Navy recruiter. My brother's son was considering joining the Navy when he graduated from high school last year. It is a well-known fact in our family that this nephew is a sleepwalker, so I told my brother and his wife that their son was not enlistment-eligible. His mom asked me to "overlook" the fact that her son was a sleepwalker, and I told her there was no way I would jeopardize my Navy career and her son's life by overlooking something like that.

If my sleepwalking nephew were to join the Navy without acknowledging that he was a sleepwalker, he could very well sleepwalk right over the side of his ship at sea, or if he were assigned to an aircraft carrier, he could walk into a piece of machinery and get killed.

Furthermore, if it became known that his recruiter knew of his condition and suppressed it, the recruiter could be court-martialed.

My nephew was all for keeping his sleepwalking a secret, but I would have no part of it, so he's not in the Navy. My conscience is clear and I know I did the right thing, but my family has been very cool to me and my wife, and we feel terrible about this.

Now I hear that this sleepwalking nephew wants to enlist in the Air Force. Is there anything I should do?

TRUE TO THE NAVY

DEAR TRUE: If your nephew is man enough to defend his country, he should be man enough to speak for himself. Talk with him, man-to-man, and impress upon him the importance of being 100 percent truthful about his sleepwalking. Tell him that if he either lies or knowingly withholds this information on his application or during his physical, he could be liable for a stiff fine and possibly a prison term.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: I never thought I'd be writing to you for advice at my age, but I've read your column for years, and have never seen a problem like mine. I need an answer.

What do you tell a bride who calls you after the wedding to tell you that she didn't like the wedding gift you gave her, and she'd like to have the sales slip so she can return it for something else?

Mind you, Abby, the gift was not a duplicate; she just didn't like it.

I have the sales slip, but I don't want to give it to her. I think such rudeness deserves to be ignored.

How should I handle this?

DISGUSTED SENIOR CITIZEN

DEAR DISGUSTED: Tell her the gift is hers to do with what she chooses, but you wouldn't feel comfortable giving her the sales slip, and let it go at that.

* * *

CONFIDENTIAL TO DISGRACED IN CHARLOTTE, N.C.: You cannot be disgraced by anyone but yourself, so hold your head high. Your son disgraced only himself.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: I need a family matter settled fast. Yesterday I went to my in-laws wearing a fairly expensive brand of perfume. I might add, I have worn it over there several times in the past. I do not overdo it. I just spray enough on to give off a nice fragrance.

My father-in-law walked up to me and said, "Please do me a small favor and change your brand of perfume; I had to go outside to keep from choking."

Abby, I was hurt beyond words. Should I quit wearing that brand around him, or just stay away and tell him why, if I am asked? Nobody else has ever complained about my perfume.

HURT AND INSULTED

DEAR HURT: Perhaps your father-in-law has an allergy to that fragrance. It's also possible that you use more than you should. Try another brand. Don't be hurt. He may have done you a favor.

'Love, Medicine, & Miracles' author to speak in Amarillo

AMARILLO — Dr. Bernie Siegel, lecturer and author of Love, Medicine, and Miracles, will present a program entitled "The Psychology of Illness and the Art of Healing" at 3 p.m. Sunday, Aug. 28 at Amarillo Civic Center Auditorium.

The Amarillo College Nursing Division is sponsoring the presentation. Admission is free of charge.

In his surgical practice and support groups, Siegel has developed a unique approach to working with people facing chronic or catastrophic illness. The disease is no longer a sentence but a redirection. His therapeutic approach is aimed at the integration of body, mind and spirit. Siegel explores the role of hope, love, spirituality and unconscious beliefs in the healing process.

An autograph party with Siegel will be held from noon to 2 p.m. Monday, Aug. 29 at Hastings Bookstore in Wolflin Village. Proceeds from books purchased during this time will go to the AC Nursing Scholarship Fund.

Siegel will be the guest of the Amarillo College faculty for a brunch/discussion from 9 to 11:30 a.m. Monday, Aug. 29 at the West Campus, 6222 West 9th.

Heat waves are deadly

WASHINGTON (AP) — Heat waves do far more damage than people realize.

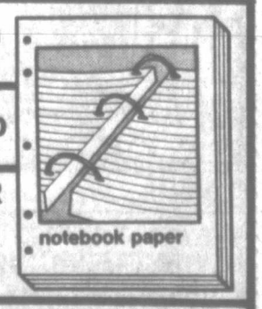

The National Weather Service estimates that heat waves kill between 200 and 400 people in an average year. By contrast, tornadoes and hurricanes kill fewer than 150 combined. What's more, the actual number of deaths caused by sudden hot spells is probably even higher than figures show, since the weather service only counts people who died from heat exhaustion and heat stroke — not the heart attacks and other fatalities that rise with the heat.

Astro-Graph

by bernice bede osol

In the year ahead you may find yourself involved in several enterprises, each different. One will have legitimate promise, whereas the others might just keep you busy and anxious.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Your affairs could end up in a muddled state today because you may start several things and not properly follow through. Get a jump on life by understanding the influences which are governing you in the year ahead. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions today by mailing $1 to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-0-3428. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) To be on the safe side today, it's best you rely upon yourself and not others. Favors you request could be ignored or poorly handled.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Try not to get too many people involved in today's plans. If you do, everyone will want to project their own ideas and your own could be overshadowed.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) It's going to be difficult to please everybody today. You may have to do so if caught in the middle.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Give others a chance to express their own thoughts today, even if their views oppose yours. They could have some valid points that you might find helpful.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Be wary if a promotional scheme is presented to you today by an entrepreneur with a poor track record. It could be that nothing worthwhile is being promoted.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Guard against impulses to make commitments to others you won't take seriously — but they will. There will be a day of reckoning down the line.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Guard against inclinations to start more projects than you'll be able to finish. In order to use time productively, you must have a good game plan.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) The way you conduct yourself socially will be reviewed later by some of your friends. Be sure the impressions you make are favorable.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Favorable results are questionable today, because you may have tendencies to stop when the finish line is in sight. Unfortunately, near-misses count for nothing.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) You could be too gullible for your own good today. There's a chance a glib friend may sell you on some unsound ideas. Don't be easily impressed.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) There are indications you might not make the most of the opportunities presented to you today. You may have blinders on regarding their true values.

Nebraska's Taylor touted as Heisman candidate

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Football Writer

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — In his 26 years at Nebraska, first as an assistant and the last 15 as head coach, Tom Osborne has seen such outstanding quarterbacks as Jerry Tagge, David Humm, Vince Ferragamo, Turner Gill — and Steve Taylor.

Tagge, Ferragamo and Humm were "great pure throwers," Osborne says. Taylor probably is the closest thing to the multi-talented Gill, who could hurt teams running with the football or throwing it.

Or is Gill the closest thing to Taylor?

"Probably in terms of all-around athletic ability, he (Taylor) is the most gifted," Osborne said Thursday. "He has great physical skills and he's run an electronically timed 4.5 40, which translates to under 4.4. He has a very strong arm, a lot of agility and he's a great leader."

Taylor, a 6-foot, 205-pound senior, has been listed among the preseason favorites for the Heisman Trophy. And he will be the first of the front-runners to make his 1988 debut when the second-ranked Cornhuskers meet No. 10 Texas A&M on Saturday night in the sixth annual Kickoff Classic.

Taylor's other early-season performances have been memorable.

In the 1986 opener against Florida State, his first career start, Taylor completed 10 of 16 passes for 130 yards and two touchdowns and rushed 12 times for 139 yards and two more scores.

The West Orange Stark Mustangs and Plano Wildcats do not lack for incentive in their upcoming schoolboy football seasons.

Each team has won back-to-back state titles and they're trying to become the first team to win three straight titles in almost 32 years.

The Mustangs have a 23-game winning streak to go with their two Class 4A titles.

Plano has a 28-game winning streak that includes two straight Class 5A crowns.

West Orange Stark starts off the season ranked No. 1 in Class 4A of the Associated Press high school football poll, joining Sugar Land Willowridge in 5A, defending champion Cuero in 3A, Camden-Corrigan in 2A and Munday in A as the pre-season favorites.

Plano, with only five lettermen and three starters back, starts out the season ranked No. 2 behind Willowridge in the poll of Texas sports writers and sportseasters.

"That No. 1 ranking is nice in August but it's great in December," West Orange Coach Dan Hooks said. "Our kids accept that No. 1 honor and try to live up to it."

"We've got a chance and that's a pretty good position to be in," Hooks said. "We can't let ourselves think about it too much.

Hooks is trying to keep the lid on the excitement as the Mustangs prepare for their season opener against Newton, the No.4-ranked team in Class 3A.

"We've got to try and keep it low key. We've got a 23-game winning streak, going for our third straight title but we've got to focus in on Newton, our first opponent."

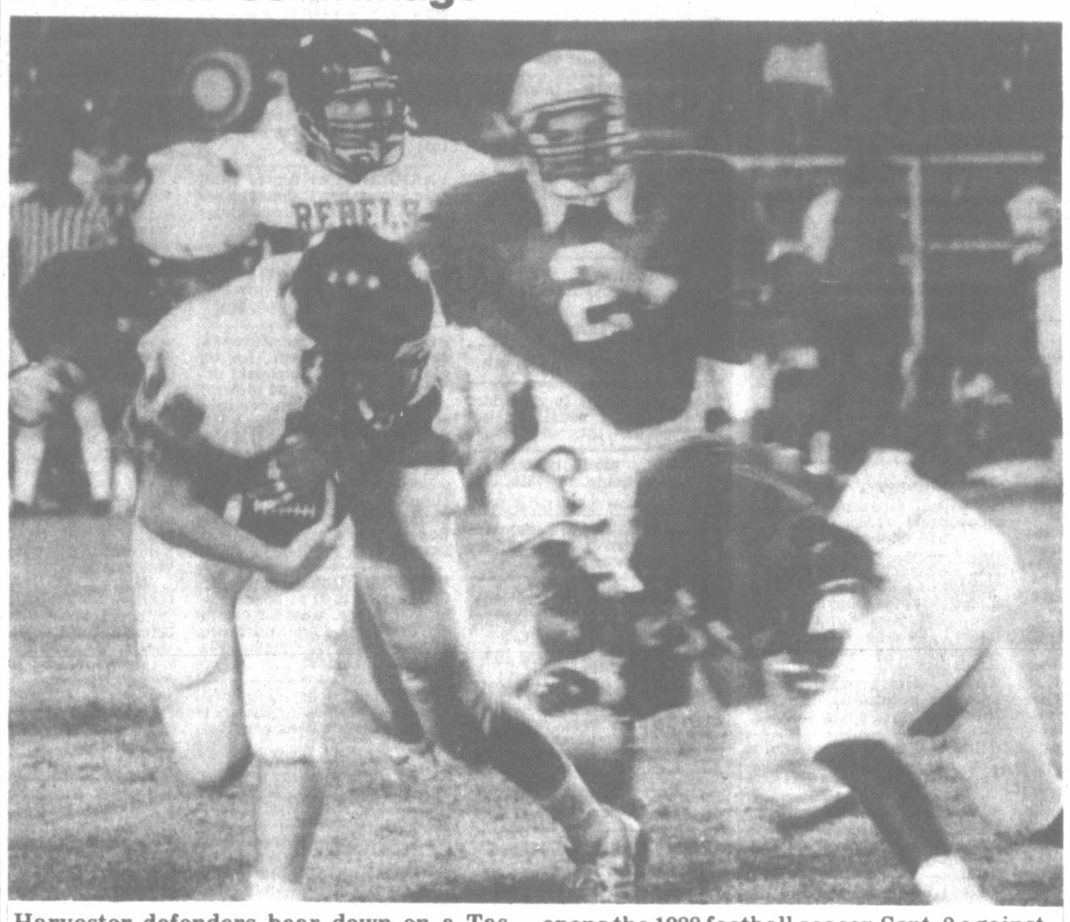

Only three high school teams have ever captured three straight state titles, Waco, 1925-27, Amarillo 1934-36 and Abilene 1954-56.

Plano Coach Tom Kimbrough hopes the Wildcats' rich playoff history will help mold another champion. Plano has won state titles in four classifications.

"It's important to set realistic goals," Kimbrough said.

Wheeler edged Bremond 23-21 for the Class A title last year but starts off the 1988 season ranked third behind Munday and No. 2 Bremond.

Cowboys meet Oilers in preseason tilt

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

IRVING) — The Houston Oilers shoot for their third undefeated NFL preseason Saturday night against the Dallas Cowboys, who are on their best exhibition roll since 1985.

Houston is 3-0 including a 20-17 overtime victory last Saturday against the Los Angeles Rams when Tony Zendejas kicked a 47-yard field goal.

The Cowboys are 2-1 after defeating the Chicago Bears 17-9 on Monday night with Luis Zendejas, Tony's cousin, hitting a 49-yard field goal.

Houston had undefeated preseasons in 1965 and 1986.

The annual joust for the "Governor's Trophy" will be at 8 p.m. in Texas Stadium with some 15,000 seats still available.

Houston Coach Jerry Glanville says his team has tremendous confidence heading in the preseason finale.

"The best thing about this team is that it keeps finding a way to win," Glanville said.

"Pinkett said "winning a game in overtime like we did against the Rams helps our confidence because they kept their first team in for most of the game."

Dallas coach Tom Landry has been pleased with the Cowboys' progress, saying "We've had one of our best summers since I can remember."

He said the Oilers will be a good test.

"You won't find a team that will give you more speed problems than the Oilers," Landry said. "They have aggressive defense, good personnel, and great speed."

The Cowboys hold a 15-6 all-time advantage over Houston in the annual exhibition, but the Oilers have won 17-14 and 18-13 the last two seasons.

The two teams meet again during the regular season on Thanksgiving Day at Texas Stadium.

Quarterback Warren Moon has been hot as the August weather for the Oilers in the preseason, hitting 21 of 31 passes for 295 yards and no interceptions.

The Cowboys will start Steve Pelluer, then follow with Danny White and possibly Kevin Sweeney.

Herschel Walker, who scored on a 54-yard run for the Cowboys against the Bears, is expected to play at least the first half.

Coody stricken by drought

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — While Charles Coody isn't a weatherman, he knows what it's like to go through a drought.

Coody's last victory on the PGA Tour came 17 years ago when he won the Masters, etching his name among golf's greats and walking away wearing the coveted green sports coat.

He will be trying to snap his winless drought in the 54-hole Senior Golf Classic that begins today at Marriott's Griffin Gate golf course.

And Coody believes he's close to experiencing victory.

"I sure hope so," he said. "It's been a long dry spell."

Coody doesn't mind being remembered for his triumph in the Masters in 1971.

"I think that's what people associated me with," he said. "I don't think that's the case with guys like (Jack) Nicklaus, (Arnold) Palmer or (Gary) Player. You know, those guys that have won a number of major tournaments. But with a guy like me, I think the Masters is really my claim to fame."

Coody hopes he can regain some glory on the Senior Tour.

"When I started to get close to 50, I started playing the (regular) Tour again to some extent," he said. "It wasn't on a steady basis, but I wanted to get my game back in tournament shape. I really did want to come out here and play well. I wanted to come back and win again."

Coody joined the Senior Tour last year, competing in 31 tournaments and earning $93,064. He has six top-10 finishes this year,

"I'd give anything — well, almost anything — to win again," he said. "I feel like I can do it. It's just doing it."

Where are they now list almost endless

WHERE ARE THEY NOW?

We get asked many times in a year the where-a-bouts of various individuals associated with sports or school systems in the area, teammates, coaches, and so forth. As the new school year is about to begin and so you can follow the fortunes, good and bad, of their programs, here is a partial list. Some names will mean something to you, some won't but will be of concern and knowledge to others. In some instances, last season's coaching record is included in parenthesis.

GARY PARRISH, athletic director-head football, Henrietta (6-4); BUDDY SHARP, same duties at Cisco (5-5). DANNY PALMER, head basketball (10-16) at 3-A Aledo, where Chuck Curtis is head football; brother RICK PALMER is AD, head football (6-4), basketball and golf coach at Arlington's Oak Ridge School, a TAPS League institution. GAIL SIMPSON, head basketball (16-14) at Austin Reagan, where principal is JIMMIE VIRAMONTES. EARL (Buddah) CLARDY, assistant football-track coach at Austin McCallum.

FRED STOCKDALE, band director-cheerleader advisor at Azle; his son JOHN is band director at Bridgeport. HOUSTON POWELL, athletic director, head football (4-6) at Beeville. NANCY WALLING, girls sports at Belton. JACK MOSS, athletic director-football coach (7-2-1) at Boerne. RON PINCKARD, AD-football-golf at Booker. Football coach BOB KEYES and basketball coach DUANE HUNT serve as co-athletic directors at Borger.

JEFF BEARDEN, assistant football and baseball coach at Breckenridge. MARK ELAM, AD-football (9-1-3) at Brenham. ROY HARPER, AD at Burkeville. JACK QUARLES, AD-football (0-10) at Canutillo, farthest point west in Texas. DON TATE, AD-football (6-4) at Carrizo Spring. DOC ROWELL, trainer at Coahoma.
