What big hands you have!

This gigantic mermaid's face and a folkloric alligator wrestler's huge hands being sculptured by Rebecca Rourke are parts of the fanciful creations which will greet visitors at the main entrance to the 1984 Louisiana World Exposition which opens May 12 in New Orleans. The mythical wrestler, called the "River Guard," will try to protect the 82-acre exposition along the banks of the Mississippi River.

Inquiry may be made into Meese's finances

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Department of Justice is investigating whether a special prosecutor is needed to probe Edwin Meese's finances, but the candidate for attorney general says he'll fight to win confirmation despite the "baseless insinuations."

"I welcome this inquiry by the Justice Department," Meese said in a statement made shortly after the inquiry was announced late Sunday. "I intend to continue my effort to be confirmed as attorney general of the United States."

The Justice Department decision came after top officials, participating in an extraordinary series of weekend meetings, said they would open an inquiry to determine if a special prosecutor should investigate a $15,000, interest-free loan Meese received from a former White House aide.

Meese had failed to list the loan on his 1981 and 1982 financial disclosure statements, as required by the Ethics in Government Act.

While President Reagan said through a spokesman that he was "solidly behind Mr. Meese," Senate Judiciary Committee Chairman Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., immediately agreed with Meese's request to postpone Senate hearings into his nomination, effectively stalling any Senate vote for at least several weeks.

Meese had been scheduled to testify at a second round of hearings set to begin Tuesday before the committee.

One committee member, Sen. Charles Mc. Mathias, R-Md., said today the Justice Department inquiry will affect Meese's chances of confirmation.

"The attorney general must be perceived to be absolutely above any suspicion," Mathias said on the NBC-TV "Today" show. "And it's going to be a tough job to make that kind of a clear and unblemished record for Ed Meese as a result of all of these investigations."

Asked what he thought the effect would be if the department does name a special prosecutor, Mathias said that, "at some point the president has to take account of what the political fallout is and to make some sort of a judgment on his own behalf..."

But Senate Republican Leader Howard H. Baker Jr. of Tennessee said he did not believe the announcement would have any immediate serious effect on Meese's chances for confirmation, although adding that "obviously the preliminary inquiry by the Justice Department doesn't help."

CAB rejects proposal to ban smoking on short flights

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Civil Aeronautics Board today unanimously rejected a proposal banning smoking on most commercial airline flights.

The vote was 5-0.

Beforehand, each board member said he felt airlines' current practice of separating smokers and nonsmokers is adequate.

The board members said a proposal to ban smoking on flights under two hours in duration was impractical and could be anti-competitive.

The airline industry said that a smoking ban on flights of under two hours would have affected an estimated 90 percent of all regularly scheduled flights.

Even the board's two strongest critics of in-flight smoking opposed a prohibition based on flight time.

Board member Gloria Schaffer called such a ban "extremely impractical."

Member Diane Morales, acknowledging she probably holds the strongest views against smoking on the board, said she reluctantly opposed the proposal because of the competitive problems it would cause.

Barbara McConnell, the board vice chairman, said airlines should be left to decide the smoking issue and that a government order based on the length of flight would amount to "an administrative headache" for the carriers.

The proposed ban was strongly fought by the airline and tobacco industries.

In related action, the board decided to formally prohibit smoking on aircraft having fewer than 30 seats and prohibit cigar and pipe smoking on all aircraft. The industry has generally prohibited smoking under those circumstances.

But the board rejected proposals to strengthen rules governing ventilation systems aboard aircraft and one proposal that would have required airlines to take special notice of travelers proving a medical problem from smoke.

The 15-year-old controvery over smoking aboard jetliners is among the longest unresolved issue before the CAB, which goes out of business at the end of this year.

An anti-smoking group, Action on Smoking and Health (ASH), opened the question in 1969 when it demanded that separate seating be provided for non-smokers aboard aircraft. About the same time, consumer advocate Ralph Nader was pushing the CAB to ban smoking entirely aboard commercial planes.

Four years later the board ordered airlines to provide the separate seating sections for nonsmokers, but refused to prohibit smoking except in the case of planes of fewer than 30 seats. ASH and others continued their push for tighter restrictions on smoking, including a ban on at least short-haul flights.

The board three years ago rejected a proposal to ban smoking on short flights, but then a federal appeals court ordered the matter reopened after concluding that the CAB had not given the matter adequate consideration.

AWACS planes sent to bolster Egypt's, Sudan's defenses

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States has sent two AWACS radar planes to Egypt following charges by neighboring Sudan that Libya was responsible for bombing Sudan's largest city, a Pentagon spokesman confirmed today.

The spokesman, Lt. Cmdr. John Woodhouse, said the sophisticated surveillance jets "landed in Egypt this morning." He said the AWACS, along with "a number of support aircraft," will be based outside Cairo.

"The Egyptian and Sudanese governments have requested our assistance to bolster the capability of Egyptian and Sudanese air defense systems...

"The AWACS will take part in combined air defense operations being carried out by Egypt and Sudan. The purpose of the operation is to deter sustained attacks, by demonstrating that the three countries can rapidly put in place the assets needed to deal with such aggression," Woodhouse said.

He added that "we cannot project how long this deployment will last."

The United States last year dispatched AWACS aircraft to Egypt and Sudan to help counter a perceived Libyan threat against Sudan as well as to monitor fighting by Tripoli-backed forces in Chad.

In addition, four of the big surveillance planes have been flying regular patrols in strategically vital Saudi Arabia.

Sudanese officials have charged that Friday's bombing raid, which

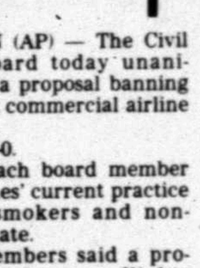
Former congressman comes home to Texas



George Mahon

COLORADO CITY, Texas (AP) — In the 50 years since he was elected to Congress, George Mahon worked with eight presidents and rose to one of the most powerful positions in the country.

"I've had my day in the sun," said Mahon, 83. "I'm trying to leave present-day politics to present-day politicians."

Mahon served for 44 years as the first and only representative from the 19th congressional district that stretches from the rich farmlands around Lubbock to Odessa in the oil-laden Permian Basin.

During his last 14 years in Congress, Mahon was chairman of the powerful House Appropriations Committee.

Now Mahon and his wife, who celebrated their 60th wedding anniversary in December, have come home from Washington to the house they bought in Colorado City in 1934.

"We've been in and out of Washington for 50 years," Mahon told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram. "We decided it was time to come back to the old home county. Health problems have slowed my schedule down. I'm not as active as I used to be."

Mahon declined to say what those health problems were, but said they prevented him from keeping up his regular Washington pace.

"People might say, 'What has old Mahon done since his retirement?' I've been very busy. It has been a very interesting time," he said.

Mahon was elected to Congress during the Depression in 1933. Since retiring in 1978, he has served on a number of committees, including a Smithsonian Institution audit and review committee, a study committee on fighting inflation, and a Smithsonian committee on personnel. He also has worked with the American Institute for Public Policy Research.

Closing Strait of Hormuz wouldn't necessarily cause boom

This is the second of a three-part series examining the close relationship between Midland and the Middle East.

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

MIDEAST CONNECTION:

Second in a series

No more lines for gasoline. No more hoarding.

Even if the Strait of Hormuz were blocked tomorrow and supplies of crude oil from Iran and Iraq were eliminated from the world supply for a year, oil analysts suggest the United States won't suffer through shortages like it did in 1973-74.

However, one Republican congressman is criticizing the Reagan administration for not taking enough steps to avoid the allocation and gas shortages Americans endured after the Arab oil embargo.

It was the embargo that sent Midland's economy soaring as the country was awakened out of its dream-like state to face reality that the United States isn't totally independent. Drilling and production increased in the Permian Basin to catch up with the need as prices rose on the world market.

WITH THE WAR between Iran and Iraq heating up and the Strait of Hormuz threatened to be closed, the world is facing another possible shortage.

Supposedly, the United States isn't sitting in the same dozing position. Through conservation measures, consumption has dropped. And the U.S. began pouring crude into Strategic Petroleum Reserves. Today, with 385-plus million barrels, there is enough crude to fill the United States' demands for 90 days, according to the American Petroleum Institute.

Through the Strait flows 8 million barrels of oil a day, which is about 20 percent of the free world production, according to Earl Ross, spokesman with API in Washington, D.C. A cutoff of oil flowing through the Strait would represent a much larger percentage reduction in the non-communist world's oil supply than the 1973-74 Arab oil embargo or the cutoff in 1979 following the Iranian revolution.

The U.S. buys about 500,000 barrels of oil a day from the Persian Gulf, or about 5 percent of this country's total needs. Closing off the Strait "probably wouldn't tend to increase production in the U.S.," said Ross.

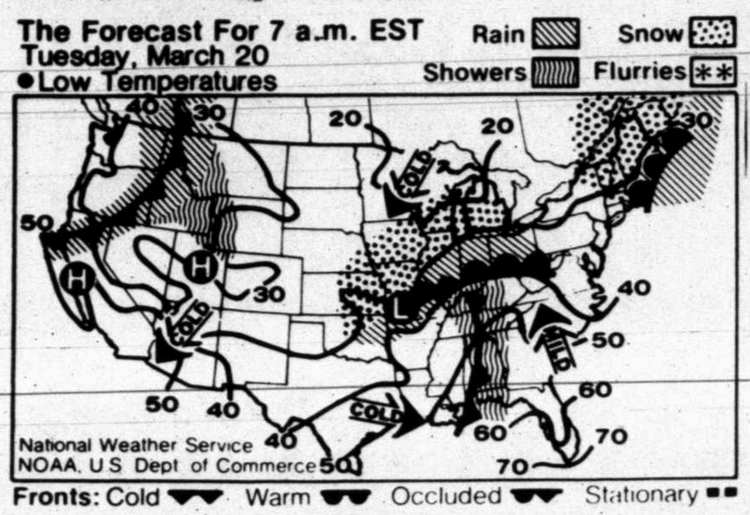
"IF THE STRAIT is closed, I don't think it would immediately produce a boom here," said R.F. Bailey of Alta Energy Corp. "I don't think it would affect the U.S. daily output. I don't think we'd increase our production with possibly the exception of the Yates and East Texas fields.

"But it would bring to light what we saw in the last shutdown; we are dependent on the outside world."

Dr. George Friesen with Chase Econometrics in Bala Cynwyd, Pa., told Permian Basin oilmen last fall that of the 8 million barrels, 4 million could be replaced from production outside the Persian Gulf. "But you would still have a shortfall of 4.5 million barrels per day, which is larger than the shortfall in 1973-74."

(See CLOSING, Page 2A)

WEATHER SUMMARY



The National Weather Service forecasts snow for Tuesday from the southern Plains to the Great Lakes and for New England and rain from the eastern Gulf to the Ohio Valley and the Midwest.

Closing strait may not bring back boom

With some luck, he continued, the Strait could be re-opened in a few weeks and inventories are sufficient to supply the needs of the western world for two to three months.

"But because of the uncertainty created by an escalation of the war in the Persian Gulf area, you could have tremendous pressure put on the spot market again as happened in 1979. You would have enormous pressure on spot prices and ultimately on official prices unless something was done pretty quickly to restore Persian Gulf exports."

It's not the United States that would feel the effect immediately. It would be Japan and Western Germany, whose 95 percent of their energy needs flow through that Strait.

According to Ross, the U.S. is a member of the International Energy Agency along with Japan and the Western European countries that depend on the Persian Gulf oil. If there were a shortfall in one country, other members are required to contribute.

BUT HE POINTED out that "this program has never been tested before."

While the U.S. is remotely dependent on crude from the Persian Gulf, it is obligated to help Japan and other countries, according to U.S. Rep. Tom Loeffler, who represents Midland.

His concern is not so much with helping these countries but with the Soviet Union finally gaining access to a warm water port if the Strait is closed.

"The Soviets have been warming up to the Iranians," said Loeffler, who fears the Soviets could eventually contol the Strait.

The U.S. has stationed warships in the Persian Gulf and the congressman supports the move because of the possible outcome with the Strait and the Soviets. But Loeffler also feels Japan and Western Europe could send their share of military to the Persian Gulf since they have far more at stake. "They want a free ride," he said.

His major criticism goes back to the administration and he chastises the U.S. for not being more energy independent.

In 1976, Loeffler was working under President Ford, who drew up a plan for putting 1 billion barrels of oil in storage by 1979. When the Hunt Republican was elected to congress in 1978, the country had yet to put one barrel in storage, he said.

When the plan finally was activated, the U.S. was storing crude oil at the rate of 300,000 barrels a day. The "fill rate" then was dropped to 186,000. And now, said Loeffler, the administration wants to drop it to 145,000 barrels a day.

"IF WE HAVE the ability to fill the reserve, let's fill it as quickly as we can," Loeffler said. "I won't buy the administration's request to lower the fill rate. I say it's not a risk we want to run."

At least the U.S. has the reserve to last 90 days, he said. "But we have to recognize what happens after 90 days. Not only are conventional sources of oil and gas imperative to us at home, but they are strategic to our national security."

The administration also has pulled back on its promises to allow drilling in the Outer Continental Shelf and on federal lands, he said. "It's ridiculous to have millions of acres of federal land and not allow even a seismograph to go on it and check for reserves we might have." He also would like to see petroleum companies allowed to drill for oil on the Outer Continental Shelf.

"We have to always beware of a shortage," the congressman said. "If the Strait were closed, we'd have a difficult problem on our hands here at home."

Market analysts and local oilmen noted there has been a worldwide drop in demand. But Loeffler said even though the United States is moving from a smokestack industry to high technology, it still takes energy to run computers. "In the last several months, we're seeing a turn upward" in demand, he said. And as the rest of the world pulls out of recession, demand will increase.

Loeffler added, "Nothing works without energy, and oil and gas are our energy sources."

Tuesday: Effects of Middle East events on the local economy.

Sunday's winds peaked at 55 mph at local airport

A tame Monday is following a gusty Sunday.

Westerly winds peaked at 55 mph at 2 p.m. Sunday, said the weatherman with the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport.

During most of the day, winds were westerly to northwesterly at 25 to 35 mph. In the evening, winds shifted to northerly at 25 to 30 mph. Outside the 55 mph peak, gusts were clocked up to 45 mph.

For tonight, the weatherman is calling for a low in the lower 30 degrees and westerly and northwesterly winds at 5 to 10 mph. On Tuesday, the weatherman is predicting warmer temperatures and a high near 70. Winds are to be westerly at 10 to 20 mph.

Sunday's high temperature was 74 degrees, which was short of the record high of 86 degrees for the date in 1978. The overnight low was 35 degrees, and the record low for a March 19 is 21 degrees in 1965.

STATE

Snow fell across the Texas Panhandle early today after hail, high winds, dust storms and tornadoes criss-crossed the state, pushing over a microwave tower and causing widely scattered damage to buildings.

No serious injuries were reported as a result of the rough weather, which was spawned by a rapidly moving cold front.

North Central Texas was pelted by marble-sized hail from severe thunderstorms that produced a tornado late Sunday afternoon which overturned a mobile home and upended a radio tower.

Possible tornadoes were also reported in a severe thunderstorms late Sunday in Zavala and Dimmit counties in South Texas.

Thunderstorms and showers continued to soak the coastal plains, and sections of Southeast and East Texas this morning as a cold front extended from the northeast corner of the state to the Lower Rio Grande Valley.

Meanwhile, snow fell overnight in the Panhandle, but accumulations were generally limited to one inch or less. Authorities reported roads in the area were open early today, although snow forced closure of some highways in the Oklahoma Panhandle.

NATION

A massive storm system moved out of the Rockies on this last full day of winter, spinning off thunderstorms across Texas and the lower Mississippi valley and piling snow on the southern Plains.

Heavy snow piled up in the mountains of southern Colorado and the high plains of Kansas and Nebraska.

Up to 18 inches of snow fell at Rye, Colo., and 11 inches at Grand Island, Neb., while La Junta, Colo., was covered with 7 inches and Lincoln, Neb., with 5 inches.

Freezing rain coated trees and power lines in Kansas City, Mo., causing widespread power outages.

A least five deaths were attributed to the weather over the weekend. Three people drowned in Missouri Sunday when a pickup truck was swept off a bridge by a flood-swollen stream. A woman was killed in Nebraska Sunday when her car spun out of control on a snowy road.

Meese's finances may be investigated

At the White House today, spokesman Larry Speakes said Reagan continues to support his nominee.

One Justice department source, who asked not to be identified, said it might be difficult to confine the inquiry to inaccuracies in Meese's financial statement and that the department might also end up looking at possible connections between financial favors Meese received and the federal jobs awarded some of his benefactors.

But the source noted that traditionally, federal officials and private citizens involved in a Justice Department inquiry use the investigation to stop commenting publicly on the affair in question, which may serve to dampen the growing controversy surrounding the Meese confirmation hearings.

During the past week, an increasing number of senators have expressed doubts about Meese's fitness to serve in the job, particularly after he disclosed he had "inadvertently failed" to list the $15,000 loan on his financial statements.

Meese's primary opponent on the committee, Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio., said through a spokesman that the Justice Department action was "appropriate."

Meese called Thurmond in South Carolina Sunday night and read him a letter about the Justice Department's decision. Earlier, the White House counselor met with Reagan to seek permission to have the hearings delayed.

Meese's letter to Thurmond was released to reporters by an aide.

In it, Meese told Thurmond the Justice Department would be investigating "certain matters pertaining to the filing of information concerning the $15,000 loan received by my wife in connection with stock purchased for our childrens' education."

Meese received the loan in December 1980 from Edwin Thomas, who later became an aide to Meese in the White House and is now regional director of the General Services Administration in San Francisco.

Thomas's wife, Gretchen, also works for the federal government in San Francisco.

Meese has said the loan was used to buy stock in Biotech Capital Corp., which was later sold for a $3,000 loss. He also failed to disclose the stock purchase, as required by the ethics law.

Under the ethics act, which contains the special prosecutor provisions of federal law, the attorney general has up to 90 days to decide whether there is enough evidence of a federal crime to turn the investigation over to a special prosecutor or an independent counsel, who would be named by a special three-judge panel.

In his letter to Thurmond, Meese said the Justice inquiry "provides a full opportunity to evaluate and to expose the baseless insinuations that have received extensive media exposure and have been undoubtedly motivated by election-year politics. I am confident that a calm and dispassionate examination of the facts will fully reveal the absence of any wrongdoing on my part."

Meese advised Thurmond that he had Reagan's permission to "respectfully request that the confirmation process relating to my nomination be postponed until the Department of Justice's examination has been completed."

The Ethics in Government Act makes it a crime to willfully file false financial disclosure statements, but Meese has maintained that his failure to list the Thomas loan was inadvertent. Generally there is no criminal prosecution if the office-holder promptly corrects any omissions or errors.

It is also a violation of federal law to award a federal job in return for any financial consideration or any favor of value or any promise of either.

Meese has denied in committee testimony that the jobs had any connection with his financial dealings with the men. Those men who have testified thus far have also denied any connection.

Among the financial transactions discussed in committee testimony were the provision of generous mortgage terms to Meese by a San Diego savings and loan institution, two officers of which later received federal jobs. Meese also got a $60,000, unsecured loan from his tax accountant, who was later named to the U.S. Postal Board of Governors.

The committee also heard testimony from Thomas Barrack, a California developer who contributed $70,000 to the sale of Meese's La Mesa home and two weeks later was in Washington discussing a federal appointment. He was ultimately named an assistant secretary of the interior.

Mondale, Hart hunt for Illinois voters

CHICAGO (AP) — Walter F. Mondale and Gary Hart scoured Illinois for last-minute votes in the state's presidential primary after a spirited debate in which the Democratic rivals joined the Rev. Jesse Jackson in a direct appeal for support from black voters.

One public opinion poll pointed to a narrow Hart lead in Illinois's Tuesday primary, the biggest prize so far on the campaign calender. Another poll taken nationwide and released today showed Hart with a narrow lead over President Reagan, while Mondale badly trailed the president in a two-way matchup.

Mondale used a locally televised debate Sunday night to claim a "dramatic difference" between himself and the Colorado senator on civil rights.

"I'm not arguing about Gary's nominal record," Mondale said in the 60-minute encounter. "But I do think there's a dramatic difference in the intensity, the commitment, the effort undertaken, to move this process forward toward true opportunity for all Americans."

But Hart, whose sudden emergence from the pack has dethroned Mondale as front-runner, retorted: "I'm not willing to let Vice President Mondale or anyone else in this country gauge my intensity of commitment to civil rights. I think it's as broad and deep as his or for that matter anyone else's."

"Without the black and brown support in the city of Denver and across the state of Colorado I wouldn't be here today," he said.

Mondale easily won the Puerto Rico primary on Sunday, taking 99 percent of the vote. Hart did not contest Mondale in Puerto Rico.

Both Mondale and Hart were campaigning today in downstate Illinois.

For his part, Jackson said his campaign has placed him at the "apex of the triangle" in the three-way nomination fight, assuring that the Democratic Party will not take his supporters for granted at its nomination convention this summer.

The civil rights leader said the campaign should not be a debate about "programs for the black and the poor, but a commitment to empower the poor" to develop their own programs.

The debate was the only face-to-face confrontation in the Illinois campaign, a fight for 171 convention delegates in Tuesday's election and momentum going into other primaries in the next several weeks in Connecticut, New York and Pennsylvania.

Illinois aside, there are caucuses in Mondale's home state of Minnesota on Tuesday that the former vice president is expected to win handily.

Mondale heads into the Illinois primary after a strong showing over the weekend on his self-described "comeback." His Puerto Rico primary victory came after caucus wins on Saturday in Michigan and Arkansas. He also leads Hart in national convention delegates, with 491 of the 1,967 needed for the nomination. Hart has 261 and Jackson has 60.

But a Washington Post-ABC News poll in Illinois showed Hart leading Mondale 40 percent to 35 percent among 581 registered voters who said they were sure to vote in the primary. Jackson trailed with 17 percent in the survey, which had a margin of error of plus or minus 4 percent. A total of 9 percent said they were undecided or backed other candidates. It was conducted Wednesday through Saturday.

A national poll published in today's editions of USA Today gave Hart a narrow lead over President Reagan, while Mondale trailed in a matchup against the president. The survey of 1,312 registered voters questioned last Wednesday through Friday showed Hart with 44 percent to Reagan's 41 percent.

Against Mondale, Reagan led 54 percent to 35 percent. The poll was conducted by pollster Gordon S. Black of Rochester, N.Y., and had a margin of error of plus or minus 3 percent.

The Post-ABC poll also reported that while Hart was getting the support of only 15 percent of the black vote, that was better than expected when matched up against his showing in earlier contests.

Polls in other states have indicated that Jackson takes black votes away from Mondale, and further losses to Hart could seriously hurt the former vice president's chances on Tuesday.

That may have been the reason for the skirmishing over civil rights during the debate.

"Rev. Jackson and I see eye to eye on opening the doors of this party and welcoming all people in," Hart said. He said he had met with black leaders all over the country, "talking about my record, which I think is as good any any one in the United States Senate..."

Civil rights also figured in the highlight of the debate, when Mondale attacked the centerpiece of Hart's campaign.

Former congressman Mahon comes home to Texas

Mahon has exited the political stage, and he prefers not to comment on current political races, but he has not lost his interest in political issues or the congressional process.

"These are very turbulent, exciting and troublesome times. We do not have a clear vision of what fate holds. We don't know which way the tide will turn. Things, though, somehow will work out to the best interest of this country. I'm not ready to surrender to pessimism," he said.

During his tenure in the House, Mahon forged a bipartisan coalition behind appropriations bills, but he concedes that it is much more difficult now to reach bipartisan agreement on spending.

The status of House leadership has changed, he said. Senior members no longer carry the clout that they did when he was a member.

"In the old days, the chairmen of committees and House leaders set the policy. The new members tended to cooperate with the senior members. Now any congressmen who has a story to tell gets in touch with the media. He may not occupy a powerful position; he may not know anything. It is real difficult to have cohesion now.

"You don't want a yes man, but you have to have some level of cooperation. Leadership has become a more precarious, more difficult position," he said.

Mahon said he looks back on the last 50 years as a time of excitement and of great involvement, but now faces a new challenge.

"I can't just sit around and twiddle my thumbs. I'm not up to par physically. I can't do the things I'd like to do. A lot of things I can't undertake to do. I have to decide what I am going to do now."

CAB rejects proposal to ban smoking on short flights

Under court order, the CAB agreed unanimously last year to re-examine a proposed rule that would ban smoking on flights of either one or two hours in duration, prohibit smoking on smaller planes of between 30 and 60 seats, and provide special protection for travelers who can prove they are medically bothered by drifting smoke.

Ironically, the CAB's restrictions on smoking — both those already on the books and new regulations — may be short-lived. CAB officials acknowledge that without further legislaion, the government's authority to issue regulations on smoking aboard aircraft will disappear when the board goes out of business.

While there is legislation before Congress to assure continuation of the federal smoking rules as they apply to airliners, passage is not certain.

The tobacco industry and the airlines have made clear their opposition to a ban on cigarette smoking on any flights and the Reagan administration has said it wants to leave the smoking issue to the market place.

Transportation Secretary Elizabeth Dole told a recent congressional hearing that she is certain the market place would continue to protect the rights of non-smokers without federal regulations.

"I'm confident the preferences for smokers and non-smokers will be respected," she said.

U.S. sends AWACS planes to Egypt killed five people in Omdurman, was conducted by a single Soviet-built Tu-22 owned by Libya. The fighter dropped five bombs on Omdurman, a city of 300,000 across the Nile River from Khartoum, according to the Sudanese Foreign Ministry.

The bombing raid, which damaged two houses and an administrative building of the state radio, prompted Sudan to order a full military alert, Sudanese officials said.

Egypt has sent troops to Sudan under the terms of a 1976 mutual defense pact, the officials said. Egyptian newspapers said the soldiers sent to Sudan included officers to serve at the military operations center.

The Libyan news agency, JANA, has denied that Libya was responsible for the bombing attack, saying the bombing was staged by rebels within the Sudanese air force.

Woodhouse declined to say where the two radar planes that landed in Egypt had flown from. The main U.S. base for AWACS is Tinker Air Force Base, Okla.

The AWACS — short for Airborne Warning and Control System — is a converted Boeing 707 packed with advanced electronic gear and topped by a distinctive 30-foot-diameter radar dish. While cruising at 29,000 feet, the plane can see 200 miles in all directions. It also has the capability to guide and control fighters in an air battle.

Brenda, left, and twin sister Miriam Hernandez, celebrate their first birthday Tuesday. The twin girls were born Siamese twins connected at the chest and were separtated 11 days after birth during a surgery in El Paso Providence Memorial Hospital.

Siamese twins will celebrate birthday

CIUDAD JUAREZ, Mexico (AP) — On March 20, Miriam and Brenda Hernandez, Siamese twins separated in El Paso, will be a year old, and their parents are planning a big bash to celebrate.

Born in 1983 at a South Side hospital, the baby girls made local medical history when they become the first Siamese twins to be separated at an El Paso hospital.

So tight was the twins' congenital embrace that one couldn't breathe without affecting the other.

They still embrace, but now it's to show affection for one another, said their mother, Maria Dolores Hernandez. They also have begun uttering their first words — "mama" and "papa" — and are learning to walk.

Their Juarez parents said recently that they're thankful for the way things turned out and plan to celebrate big — with pinatas and cake for the children and two barrels of beer for the adults.

This birthday will be special, Maria Dolores said, "because it's their first year, and we once thought they'd never reach it."

Their birth and subsequent separation drew media attention nationwide and abroad. It was treated as a curiosity that turned out happily.

For their family, however, it's been a stressful year, filled with the initial shock of the twins' joined torsos, then the tension of their separation during a two-hour operation at Providence Memorial Hospital.

It also has been a year, the parents said, filled with subsequent medical emergencies and financial hardship.

One month after Providence released the twins April 9, Miriam was back in the hospital for additional surgery. She suffered intestinal complications, her parents explained.

There also were several emergency trips to Providence's emergency room to get the twins treatment for periodic bouts with the flu and other respiratory ailments.

Miriam, the Hernandezes said, still suffers symptoms of bronchitis.

It also has been a tough year financially for the southeast Juarez family.

Their original hospital bill at Newark Methodist Hospital mushroomed from a projected $700 to $1,400 because of the complications of a Caesarean delivery and having twins.

They never had to pay, however, for the hospital or doctor bills from the separation surgery March 31.

But for the Hernandezes, the accent is on the upbeat. A first birthday is to be celebrated, and Raul's 28th birthday falls on the next day.

"We like to think the situation will get better," Maria Dolores said.

"We like to think positively, not dwell in the negative," her husband added.

Fate of old courthouse undecided

CANYON (AP) — The fate of the old Randall County Courthouse has triggered a lively political debate, with one county commissioner labeling the structure "useless" and a local conservationist calling a plan to tear it down an "obscenity."

The courthouse will soon be abandoned in the center of this Panhandle city as a new justice center opens.

Three of the four commissioners — the three whose precincts do not encompass Canyon — say they want to tear down the building. Their meetings lately at the old courthouse have become turbulent.

But members of the Randall County Historical Commission want to preserve the courthouse as a piece of history. They say their objective is supported by the Texas Historical Commission and the Texas Antiquities Committee.

The courthouse has been the meeting place for two added-on buildings whose architectural styles differ not only from the centerpiece but also from each other.

The low office building in the north has a pink-marble exterior, while the just-vacated jail and sheriff's quarters on the south have pinkish bricks, and the courthouse wears a skin of bricks around its squared-off corners.

"I have not had one person outside the city of Canyon tell me that we should keep the courthouse," County Commissioner E.H. "Gene" Klein Jr., a strident courthouse opponent, told The Dallas Morning News.

Klein said he finds that residents of Amarillo, 16 miles to the north and also included in part of Randall County, and Canyon have "totally different" responses to many issues.

Courthouse proponents cite a 1981 study of the building by Pat A. Tunnell, an Amarillo architect, which said that even the clashing additions "have not separated the original courthouse from the fabric of the community."

Klein said he considers the courthouse to be "a pile of junk." He wants to demolish the courthouse, remodel the north and south buildings to provide more office and storage space, build a park and a walkway between the two buildings where the courthouse is now located.

Klein also wants to expand the present Randall County annex building, located in Amarillo.

One of the courthouse's supporters is Vicky Simmons of Canyon, a 37-year-old conservationist. She lives in a restored 1902 home, which she said bears a Texas Historic Landmark plaque that incorrectly dates the structure at 1904.

She said that the courthouse, though built in 1909, is the oldest public building in the county, and has affected the lives of thousands.

Black Republicans cite new clout

DALLAS (AP) — Vivian T. Starks and her fellow GOP supporters say a lot of patience — and a thick hide — have been requirements I's black Republican organization.

Mrs. Starks, 75, said there were three members when she moved to Dallas in 1933. Seeking vote Republican organization.

Mrs. Starks, 75, said there were three members when she moved to Dallas in 1933. Seeking votes door-to-door as a precinct chairman in the early days wasn't a welcome task. One "had to be very strong and take the insults" while trying to sell the GOP to black voters, she said.

Victore Smith, president of the Black Republican Council of Dallas County, has his own vivid memories of being assigned to sit with seven friends at a "Republicans only" table at a meeting of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

"When they introduced us, everybody just laughed at us," Smith said.

But, gladly for Mrs. Starks, Smith and the other black Republicans, times have changed.

At the Black Republican Council's $50-a-plate dinner last month, which featured a speech by Housing and Urban Development Secretary Samuel R. Pierce Jr., the group raised $17,000.

The money will be used to host an out-of-state delegation during the National Republican Convention in Dallas in August, when the council, with 166 dues-paying members, expects to be in the forefront.

"We are here now, we will be here when the convention comes, and we will be here when it leaves," Smith said.

When Republican Bill Clements was elected governor in 1978, an estimated 16,000 blacks helped elect him.

"That was the first time the Republicans actively went after the black vote," says Paula Brown Winningham, chairwoman of the Black Republican Council of Texas.

But Republican leaders admit they lost ground in 1982, when only about 8,000 blacks voted for Clements.

GOP leaders, Mrs. Starks said, "want our vote, they need our vote."

In the Democratic Party, "there's no room. The hierarchy has been locked into place for too long," said Mrs. Winningham, 24.

"It (the Republican Party) wants and it welcomes a much broader role by black Americans," said Sim Stokes III, the first black presidential appointee to the Small Business Administration in Dallas.

Smith said members of his group sit on almost every convention planning committee. His group "hopes to play a major role in the success of the convention," Smith said.

Candidates endorsed

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Women's Political Caucus has endorsed Democrat Lloyd Doggett and Republican Rob Mosbacher in their bids for their parties' U.S. Senate nominations.

Caucus Chairwoman Meg Wilson said the delegates, who met Saturday, discussed only briefly the possibility of giving a dual endorsement in the Democratic race to Doggett, a state senator from Austin, and former U.S. Rep. Bob Krueger.

Only three of the 47 women at the meeting cast a vote for Krueger, she said.

Military duty suggested

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff says religious people should consider military duty as a method to avoid "sinful nature."

Gen. John Vessey Jr., the nation's highest-ranking active military officer, spoke Saturday to a military breakfast sponsored by the Full Gospel Business Men's Fellowship International.

Commenting on recent debates concerning the morality of military service, Vessey said that "man's sinful nature is the cause of war.

Women jurors chosen

SAN ANGELO (AP) — Seven jurors, all women, have been chosen so far for Henry Lee Lucas' capital murder trial in the slaying of an unidentified woman whose body was found near Georgetown in 1979.

Lucas' sometime traveling companion, Ottis Toole, is jailed in Georgetown following his transfer from a Florida jail. Defense attorneys say they will call Toole as a defense witness.

The trial was moved to San Angelo on a change of venue because of publicity in Georgetown. Lucas has been convicted in two Texas murder cases. This is the first case to go to trial that could result in a death sentence for the 47-year-old drifter, who has claimed to have killed 150 people.

Testimony slated in trial

DENTON (AP) — Harrison County District Attorney Sam Baxter says he expects testimony to begin today in the trial of a 25-year-old Marshall woman whose two previous trials in the beating death of her daughter ended in mistrials.

The case was moved to Denton after mistrials in Marion County, where the case was moved from Marshall on a change of venue.

Sitcom debuts tonight

NEW YORK (AP) — "Kate & Allie" is rare and special television, a situation comedy in which the situations are real and the comedy funny.

The new CBS series, on trial for the fall season with six shows beginning tonight, is adult, believable and intelligent — bouquets that don't get tossed at the networks' humor mill very often. But the stylish "Kate & Allie" deserves them for treating the contemporary scene with wit, warmth and wisdom.

Susan Saint James and Jane Curtin are divorced women, old friends from high school, who decide to move into an apartment together in New York's Greenwich Village, sharing each other's kids, joys, troubles, strengths, anxieties and idiosyncrasies.

But this is not another "Odd Couple," two misfits who can't really live with or without each other. That's the kind of relationship Kate and Allie had with their ex-husbands.

These women cope well enough. But, for their own different reasons, they would just rather not face the world alone. They support each other, and they like each other enough to tell the truth.

Both as people and as comedy, it's as if Mary Richards and Rhoda Morgenstern decided to stay single and split the rent.

"Kate & Allie" is a series both for and about the 1980s. According to CBS Research, there were 6.5 million single-parent households in the United States in 1982, which translates into more than 25 percent of all families with children. Nine out of 10 of those single-parent units were headed by women.

What that growing minority has now is a terrific, sensitive show that understands and humanizes their lives. What's it like to resume dating? How do you feel about your ex-Mr. Right? What happens to the kids in the middle? How do they get raised?

Each program begins with Kate and Allie in a little taped vignette, shot in different places in New York. (This is the only prime time entertainment series actually produced in New York.) These segments serve to reveal bits and pieces of their characters and their relationship.

This sharp, insightful and believably funny writing comes courtesy of the show's creator, Sherry Coben. She even makes the kids credible and contributing characters, not smart alecks, not miniature Henny Youngmans. This lady knows people, the kind you meet every day. In our homes. Not on television.

ANSWERS TO BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1 — As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠AKQ76 ♡AK1095 ◇A7 ♣8
The bidding has proceeded:

West	North	East	South
1 ♠	Pass	2 ◇	?

What action do you take?

A. — There's something fishy going on here! You have half the points in the pack, yet one opponent has opened and the other has made a jump shift — there just aren't that many picture cards around. You must alert partner to the fact that the opponents are using the vulnerability to try to pull a fast one. Cue-bid three diamonds.

Q.2 — Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠95 ♡983 ◇AQ10653 ♣94
Partner opens the bidding with one no trump. What do you respond?

A. — If you responded two diamonds, we understand — conservatism could prove popular this year. Our choice, however, is a full-blooded leap to three no trump. Your hand has an excellent chance of producing six tricks for partner, which could be all he needs for game. If you chose to respond two no trump, you are a fence straddler.

Q.3 — Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠Q98 ♡K7 ◇852 ♣AQ1096
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	Pass	2 ♠	Dble
Rdble	2 ♡	?

What action do you take?

A. — You are not in a position to suggest a possible final contract. You have already described your hand with your two-over-one response, and all you know about partner's hand is that it is a good one. Give him the courtesy of the road — pass. His next action will chart your course.

Q.4 — Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠KJ4 ♡J10763 ◇AJ95 ♣Q
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	Pass	1 ♡	Pass
1 NT	Pass	?

What do you bid now?

A. — The first question is: do you have enough to force to game? We think so, but only just. However, you do not yet know where you want to play the hand — with your unbalanced shape, a suit contract might be preferable. We suggest a jump to three diamonds. If partner takes a heart preference, bid the major-suit game.

Q.5 — As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠K6 ♡KQJ1054 ♣AJ1092
The bidding has proceeded:

West	North	East	South
1 ♠	Pass	2 ♠	?

What do you bid now?

A. — We have a pet theory — hands with a strong six-card major suit and a side five-card minor play very well in game. Therefore, we would not pussyfoot around. Our choice is a leap to four hearts. As little as the queen of clubs in partner's hand and a reasonable heart split could make four hearts a lock, especially if West were to lead a spade.

Q.6 — Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠85 ♡A106 ◇AQ872 ♣AJ6
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♡	Pass	2 ◇	Pass
2 ♡	Pass	?

What do you bid now?

A. — If you think purely in terms of point count, you might feel that a bid of four hearts does justice to your hand. However, you have not taken into account your wealth of prime controls — there are many dead minimum hands that North could hold that would produce slam opposite your holding. We suggest a temporizing bid of three clubs, followed by a raise to four hearts on the next round, to see if that evokes any interest in partner.

Food for thought

In a free society, a government must walk a fine line between dictating what its citizens should do in their private lives and withholding information that potentially could save their lives.

That issue was addressed by the Reagan administration on March 6 when Health and Human Services Secretary Margaret M. Heckler announed the formation of a "Cancer Prevention Awareness Campaign" designed to publicize the growing scientific evidence linking high fat intake, tobacco use, alcohol and several environmental factors to more than 80 percent of cancer deaths.

Said Heckler, "Too few Americans realize the simple truth that cancer is usually caused by the way we live, and its risks can be reduced by the choices we make. Recently our research has come together compellingly to show how closely cancer is associated with our lifestyle choices. We know that the most important causes of cancer are the ones we can control or influence."

There certainly is a difference of opinion over how involved the government should become in such instances. For example, Agriculture Secretary John Block said during his Senate confirmation hearings in 1981 that the government should "stay out" of publishing nutritional advice because "people are pretty good at figuring out what to eat" on their own.

Perhaps so, but in electing to not publicize nutritional information is the government, in effect gambling with Americans' lives? "All along we've seen a reluctance on the part of government to make dietary recommendations that might harm major food industries," said nutritionist Bonnie Liebman of the Center for Science in the Public Interest, a non-profit food and nutrition research group. "The fact that HHS was willing to risk an uproar from the food industry shows that they've got their priorities straight."

The full information approach is obviously in the public interest. After all, it's been more than two decades since U.S. Surgeon General Luther L. Terry released a report on Jan. 11, 1964, citing cigarette smoking as a "health hazard." Yet millions of Americans continue to smoke.

That's hard evidence that public attitudes are slow to change even in the wake of sobering statistics.

Meese's troubles

Edwin Meese, President Reagan's close friend and adviser whose Senate confirmation as attorney general has run into difficulties, has paid a high price in personal tragedy and financial problems since he came to Washington to serve his president and his country. Two years ago, his 19-year-old son was killed in a motor accident on the George Washington Memorial Highway while driving to the Meese home in McLean, Virginia.

The financial sacrifice Mr. Meese made to become White House counsellor to President Reagan involved a 50 percent cut in income.

It took 20 months to sell his La Mesa, Calif. home, during which time he paid the mortgages on both his California house and the one he purchased near Washington. His non-reimburseable moving expenses cost $10,000. Since coming to Washington in 1981 his wife has had to go to work to help ends meet.

Now confirmation of his appointment as attorney general is being challenged, mostly by the Democrats, because he helped obtain federal jobs for personal friends who arranged loans for him and Mrs. Meese. Denying that he engaged in any improper acts, he accused his Senate critics of making "false and misleading statements" and "indulging in election year politics."

Perhaps he showed some lack of judgement in the handling of the loans and jobs for his friends, but he does not deserve the pilloring to which he has been subjected by extremist liberal columnists who dislike his strong anti-crime and law enforcement attitude, and who, by attacking him, hope to hurt President Reagan's re-election prospects.

Another View:

Censoring charities

Another of the Reagan administration's efforts at censorship — this one involving an attempt to dictate which charities would be permitted to solicit contributions from federal workers — recently came a cropper. A federal appeals court has ruled that the government cannot apply an ideological litmus test in selecting "appropriate" charities.

The administration had argued that the Combined Federal Campaign, an annual charity drive that last year raised $100 million, should be restricted to groups like the March of Dimes, which stay out of politics. It relied on that rationale to reverse past practice and exclude such organizations as the Sierra Club, the Moral Majority Foundation, and the NAACP Legal Defense and Education Fund from the fund drive. And because the administration didn't want to offend any worker's sensibilities, it also excluded groups that it regarded as "controversial" charities, like Planned Parenthood.

This distinction among organizations, all of which are treated identically by the tax code, made no sense to the judges. "History unmistakably informs us that the principal victim of this type of censorship is the unpopular minority — be it religious, racial, political, or some other.... The growth of our nation has not been accomplished by suppressing ideas that we find distasteful."

Amen. Pocketbook suppression is as offensive as the other forms of thought control that the Reagan administration has tried. It's the federal workers themselves who, through their individual choices, should determine which among the charities included in the fund drive they want to support. They don't need official "help" in reaching those decisions.

JACK ANDERSON

Inaction encouraging tech theft

WASHINGTON — Like sticky-fingered kids turned loose in a candy store, the Soviets are looting the West of its high technology. They are using the information to develop sophisticated weapons and modernize their industrial plants. Yet the House of Representatives and the business community seem determined to encourage this high-tech drain.

Jack Anderson

U.S. officials believe that more than 150 Soviet weapons systems contain technology derived from Western sources. One secret Pentagon report lists two dozen methods the Soviets have used to obtain this material. They range from legal purchase to outright theft.

The report, seen by my associates Michael Binstein and Dale Van Atta, mentions 14 specific areas where U.S. technology has helped the Soviets "to develop new generations of smart weapons, to dramatically improve their airlift capability, to make their nuclear weapons more accurate and to enhance their command and control with better computers and communications."

Glomming onto Western high-tech material is a booming industry in the Soviet Union. U.S. officials estimate the Kremlin has 20,000 people engaged in acquiring and analyzing Western-produced systems. Most of the 135 Soviet citizens kicked out of 21 nations last year were trying to obtain high-tech secrets.

The most effective way to staunch the hemorrhage of vital technology to the Soviets would be to revamp and strengthen the Export Administration Act, which expired last year. Instead, the House has passed a poorly crafted bill sponsored by Rep. Don Bonker, D-Wash., which would seriously weaken U.S. export controls.

A basic flaw in the Bonker legislation is that it blithely presumes that COCOM, the Paris-based Coordinating Committee of NATO members, has been doing a good job of controlling high-tech exports to the Soviet bloc. It hasn't.

One of Bonker's colleagues, Rep. Toby Roth, R-Wis., has pointed out this weakness in the legislation, which is now in Senate-House conference. Roth notes that there's not a single report or survey claiming that our European and Japanese allies are effectively policing either their own technology exports or re-exports of U.S. goods.

Quite the contrary, in fact one of the few studies on the subject, by the Atlantic Institute in Paris, cites the existence of "a thriving and lucrative business based on surreptitious sale of strategic and military technology to the Soviet Union and Eastern Europe." The report's author was told by a U.S. customs agent in Europe: "Everything I touch turns to gold. Every lead uncovers illegal sales."

The report concludes ominously: "In view of the exceedingly lax enforcement efforts by certain COCOM countries, the cases that are detected and investigated may represent only the 'tip of the iceberg' ...."

Roth believes there are simply too many items classified as "Militarily Critical Technologies" to be controlled. Instead of presenting a reasonable list of these critical items, the Pentagon labored and brought forth a mountainous, 700-page volume. The result is that the Customs Service and Commerce Department waste valuable time and effort going after low-grade, obsolescent computers when they could be watching for highly sensitive items.

The CIA has a list of the items the Soviets want most — the gourmet products in the high-tech supermarket instead of the bottles of ketchup. Recognizing the need for selectivity, Roth and his allies are trying to put through an amendment narrowing the list of controlled exports in return for stricter enforcement. But business interests are trying to kill the amendment, hoping to get rid of many existing controls on grounds that they're ineffective.

CITIZENS WATCH: Last year, I reported the government's efforts to cut off subsidies to an impoverished rural clinic in Tierra Amarilla, N.M. — and to collect on past loans that had traditionally been written off. The problem was brought to me by Carol Horowitz, the determined clinic manager. The law has now been changed, leaving the subsidies intact, and the clinic will be able to stay open.

And Ms. Horowitz was recently one of a dozen persons invited to Washington to review the National Health Service Corps and suggest improvements in its operation.

HEADLINES AND FOOTNOTES: Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger assured the nation's governors last month that he wouldn't trade U.S. military hardware for Soviet military hardware. Then he added slyly that he also wouldn't trade troops with the Soviet Union because "we wouldn't want all those Russian soldiers running around the United States."

— Mysterious California Dept.: Bob Valenzuela named his San Francisco bookstore "Books for the Price of a Politician." He routinely dresses up his window with pictures of past and present polls. "I like to have fun with politicians," he explained. "We take it all too seriously." He closes his store, he said, on "most holidays" — including Richard Nixon's birthday.

EVANS & NOVAK

'Hizzonor' hasn't endorsed — yet

WASHINGTON — Awaiting the arrival of new evidence of Sen. Gary Hart's love of Israel, New York Mayor Edward Koch is holding off what Manhattan Democratic insiders believed was a tentative plan to endorse former vice president Walter F. Mondale.

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

That will give the feisty mayor until after the crucial Illinois primary next Tuesday to decide. A big Hart win there would have an electrifying effect, attracting new endorsements of his presidential nomination.

Koch told us he "definitely" had not made up his mind. His decision to embrace Hart would chill already cool relations with Gov. Mario Cuomo, who has endorsed Mondale. Mondale backed Koch in his vicious primary battle with Cuomo for the gubernatorial nomination in 1982, but that need not be relevant to Koch's decision. If Hart's Israeli positions satisfy Koch, he could get a nod from Hizzonor the Mayor.

DOMENICI IN DUTCH

The Reagan administration is so furious with Sen. Pete Domenici, chairman of the Senate Budget Committee, for insisting on deep defense cuts that quiet threats are being made about withholding help for his re-election campaign in New Mexico this year.

"I would think he (Domenici) might appreciate a campaign trip from the president," an angry senior official told us. Domenici's insistence on defense cuts much deeper than the president would tolerate has been holding up Senate agreement on a deficit-reduction package.

In contrast, the administration has worked smoothly on the revenue-increasing aspects of the package with another independent-minded Republican with whom it has had troubles in the past: Sen. Robert Dole, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee. Dole has cleared nearly all his tax hikes with the Treasury.

KEEP QUIET ABOUT GARY!

President Reagan's senior staff has put out the word to both the White House and the Reagan-Bush campaign committee: don't join the rush to find fault with Sen. Gary Hart.

That's not because the president's men prefer Hart to Mondale as the Democratic nominee. Rather, the view in the West Wing is that there should be no Republican fingerprints on the rising volume of attacks on Hart's character.

Nevertheless, ever since Hart's explosion, his record has been carefully researched by Reaganites — inside and outside the offical campaign structure. For instance, the political action committee headed by the Rev. Jerry Falwell (head of the Moral Majority) has been combing through Hart's utterances and background.

MONDALE PHYZZED OUT

Just before Super Tuesday, a conference call among most Southern state Democratic chairmen came right to the edge of a big political decision: unanimous declaration in favor of Walter Mondale's presidential campaign.

The highly confidential proposal was made during a tense moment in the conversation when the nearly one dozen chairmen were bewailing and lamenting the onrush of Gary Hart. Originator of the call, Georgia chairman and Mondale intimate Bert Lance, was trying to generate optimism, but the mood was deeply pessimistic among the generally pro-Mondale party leaders.

At that point, Texas chairman Robert Slagle proposed the endorsement of Mondale, but quickly withdrew the idea when it failed to attract unanimous backing. A split decision would have hurt Mondale in the only region that has given him a primary election.

GOP DEFICIT DEBATE

An otherwise congenial breakfast session between key GOP House members and Lewis Lehrman, 1982 Republican nominee for governor of New York, turned nasty when he tangled over the budget deficit with a fellow New Yorker, Rep. Barber Conable.

Lehrman was explaining his views on monetary policy to the weekly closed-door breakfast conducted by two private groups of Republican congressmen. Conable, senior Republican on the House Ways and Means Committee who is retiring from Congress this year, was doing a slow burn over Lehrman's explanation of the Federal Reserve Board's responsibility for high interest rates.

Finally, Conable could stand it no longer and demanded to know why Lehrman omitted two little words: budget deficit. The tension was not eased when Lehrman shot back: "I'll leave that to you."

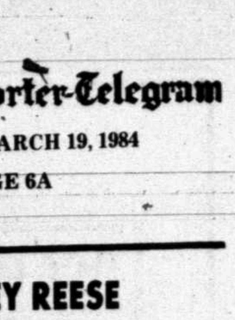
CHARLEY REESE

Bet future on informed citizenry

I shall not eat crow. I predicted Ronald Reagan would not run for re-election and he is running for re-election. I predicted Reubin Askew, Florida's former governor, would do well in New Hampshire. He did worse than Harold Stassen, the Republican eccentric who has been running since most of us were children.



Charley Reese

I was flat, dead wrong. The only thing I can say in my defense is that I was at least smart enough not to bet money on my own predictions. Furthermore, unlike economists, astrologers and palm readers, I do not charge money for my wrong predictions. I hand them out for what they are worth — nothing.

Askew had the right strategy — keep a low profile and make a big showing in New Hampshire. He executed the first phase — keeping a low profile — perfectly. It was the second phase that he bungled. Apparently the people of New Hampshire agree with those who compare Askew to St. Paul — one of the dullest cities in America.

In being wrong, I lost only a chip off my ego. In being beaten so badly, Askew lost a chance to achieve a life's ambition to be president. I'm afraid it just isn't his century.

If it's any consolation to Askew and to Sen. Fritz Hollings, another candidate who was slain in the snows of New Hampshire, the political campaign process is so out of kilter that being a successful candidate has nothing to do with being qualified for the presidency and vice versa.

As a matter of fact, Askew and Hollings were the best of the bunch along with Sen. John Glenn who isn't doing so hot either.

With the brilliance of hindsight, we can all see what happened. It snowed. Only 12 percent of the eligible voters in New Hampshire bothered to go to the polls. I suspect that is because a majority of them are content to vote for Ronald Reagan in November. Polls show him easily trouncing any Democrat in New Hampshire.

Those who turned out were the liberal idealogues and the anybody-but-Reagan Democrats, and about the best you can say of Sen. Gary Hart and Walter Mondale is that they are liberal and they are not Reagan.

None of us should ever forget that our political process put Jimmy Carter in the White House. Even worse, it presented us with a choice between Jimmy Carter and Jerry Ford. That was the equivalent of having to choose between whooping cough and German measles.

I'm afraid that Winston Churchill was right when he said democracy is the worst form of government in the world — except for every other.

What bothers me is that the mix of marketing and media that now comprises our campaign process seems to work against the very kind of strong leaders necessary for these dangerous times.

A strong leader will have strong convictions, be inclined to speak frankly, be unwilling to humiliate himself before special interest groups, and more than likely be inclined to tell the truth rather than to spin dreams. All of those qualities spell death in presidential politics today.

What is so dangerous about democracy is that it is likely to produce the kind of government we deserve and I'm not sure the nation can survive much more of that.

After observing the political process for a number of years now, I have come to rely on divine providence rather than the political process to get us out of the mess our political process got us into.

Given the present state of American culture, however, I don't mind admitting that the concept of a just God makes me a little nervous. In the present circumstances, we are much more in need of mercy than justice.

There is something we can do. We can reject the two things which have poisoned our politics — selfishness and ignorance. Each of us should remember that in addition to being the beneficiaries of what ever government program, we are also citizens of a a republic whose personal fate is tied to the fate of the republic. The vote was not intended to be a mechanism by which we enrich ourselves at our neighbor's expense but rather a mechanism by which a free people maintain their independence.

We should make the strenuous effort required in this age of hype and lies to inform ourselves of the issues and of the specific proposals and records of the candidates.

Otherwise, we may, as several men in the past have predicted, commit national suicide. I pray their predictions are no more accurate than mine.

California high school all-Chinese

By The Los Angeles Times — Washington Post News Service

SAN FRANCISCO — At 79, he is believed to be the oldest high school principal in California, and perhaps in the United States.

He does not speak English.

For 27 years, Wun Sun Wong has been principal of Chinese Central High School, the oldest and biggest Chinese school in the United States.

The school has been in existence 91 years. More than 500 students, male and female, are enrolled. No English is spoken once the students walk through the doors of the school — just Chinese.

Chinese language, writing, culture, history and geography are taught at Chinese Central High. Students attend regular school during the day and Chinese classes from 4 p.m. to 6 p.m. in the afternoon.

Although called a high school, there are classes at the Chinese school for both elementary and high school students.

"Our parents want to be sure we are bilingual, that we know how to speak and write both English and Chinese," explains Jenny Wu, 16. "They want us to know about our Chinese heritage. That is why we study Chinese culture, history and geography."

Chinese Central High has one of San Francisco's best known Chinese drum corps. San Francisco's Chinatown has a population of 150,000 Chinese, the largest Chinese population of any city in the world outside the Orient. The school is sponsored by seven Chinatown associations — Ning Yung, Sue Hing, Hop Wo, Young Wo, Sam Yup, Yan Wo and Kong Chow.

In Los Angeles, at that city's Chinese school in Chinatown, 250 elementary school children are enrolled.

"It's a time-honored tradition with Chinese wherever they live in the world outside China to make sure their children know how to read and write Chinese and know the Chinese heritage," explained Wah Chiu, 50, chairman of the school.

This Chinese school is 40 years old and sponsored by 28 Chinese associations in Los Angeles.

"In many communities with Chinese populations in America, Chinese classes are given in private homes and in churches," said Calvin Fong, 49, secretary of the Los Angeles Chinese School.

DEAR ABBY

Wife 'detests' sex

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: "Serious in Laguna Beach" could have been written by my husband. I simply detest having sex, especially now that we are older. I was never too fond of sex in my younger years, but now I think it's revolting. (I'm 68 and my husband is 69.)

I have never refused my husband, but he knows how I feel about sex and he doesn't bother me very often. I thank God for such a kind and understanding husband.

I offered to give him a divorce, but he said he loves me and doesn't want one. He also said he didn't want to take a chance on another woman — she might deny him sex ALL the time.

He's not very demanding, so I try to accommodate him now and then. I really do love him. — FRIGID IN VIRGINIA

DEAR FRIGID: A marriage between a frigid wife and a kind and understanding husband who doesn't "bother" her very often must have been made in heaven. You are indeed lucky to have found each other.

DEAR ABBY: Some time ago I read a letter in your column from a grieving son. In it was this line: "If I could turn back the clock, I would buy my mom the new coat she needed so badly and take her anyplace she wanted to go."

Please print it again. Someone I know needs to be reminded that he has a mother. — YOUR FAN IN ARIZONA

DEAR FAN: Here it is:

DEAR ABBY: Yesterday was the saddest day of my life. I buried my mother. And now many thoughts come to mind that make me even sadder.

I recall the many times I meant to call her and ask if there was anything she needed, but I seldom got around to it.

I recall the day I ran into Mom in the bakery. Her winter coat looked so shabby and worn, and I thought, "Gee, I've got to take Mom downtown and buy her a new coat." But I never found the time. I was too busy.

On her last birthday I sent her an azalea plant, but I forgot to enclose a card. I had wanted to get over to see her, but there was a football game that day, so I never made it.

The last time I saw Mom was at my cousin's wedding. She looked so old and tired. I told myself, "I must send Mom to Florida to visit her brother and get a little sun," but I just never got around to buying the tickets.

If only I could turn back the clock, I'd buy Mom that coat and spend every birthday with her and take her anyplace she wanted to go. But it's too late now and I am heartsick.

Please print this letter. Maybe if I had seen one like it, I would have done things differently. — GRIEVING SON

Computer 'voice' aids communication

GARDENA, Calif. (AP) — Michael LaFarge cannot speak, write or move, yet people can read what's on his mind.

The 29-year-old former Hughes Aircraft Co. employee became paralyzed when he was stricken with multiple sclerosis in 1973. Some two years ago, one of his former co-workers learned about LaFarge's communication difficulties from the rehabilitation services coordinator at Daniel Freeman Memorial Hospital.

Three Hughes employees, aided by a $3,400 company donation, installed a computerized system in his nursing home here that was programmed to translate Morse code into letters on two video screens — one attached over the patient's bed, and another at his bedside for visitors.

Because of convulsions he suffers, LaFarge was not able to operate conventional devices, so a pressure-sensitive control stick like those used in video games was installed. He grasps the control lever and, through subtle exertion of pressure, imputs the Morse code without having to move his body.

Booklet Captures The Cajun Taste

Chef Paul Prudhomme's Chicken Smothered with Black-Eyed Peas is a mouth-watering Cajun Specialty.

Avery Island, LA -- Chicken smothered with black-eyed peas, dirty rice, sweet potato pecan pie...these are standards in the simple, flavorful cuisine know as Cajun cooking. Outside of Louisiana, few have sampled authentic New Orleans cookery. But superchef Paul Prudhomme, proprietor of the Mardi Gras city's famed K-Paul's Louisiana Kitchen, is out to change that with his 30-page booklet, "Authentic Cajun Cooking"

"I'm a Cajun, and we're known for our joy of living. Our food is exciting, and our music fun and lively. I want to spread that excitement any way I can, and I hope this booklet makes every meal an event for my readers," he says.

Chef Paul is no stranger to promoting Louisiana's bounty. Acknowledged to be one of the most creative forces in American regional cuisine, Prudhomme has been interviewed in every major food publication and on national television talk shows. He even transported his staff to San Francisco for one month to introduce New Orleans foods there.

His 17-recipe booklet is illustrated in full-color and spiced with vignettes from the restauranteur's childhood. "Looking back, the most important lesson I learned from my mother was to use only the freshest products possible---because they always taste best," Prudhomme writes.

"One of the most important things to do is to handle seasoning well," Prudhomme says. "If you've ever tasted Cajun food, you'll never forget it. It's so special it dances in your head."

One recipe from the collection with this unique Cajun taste is Chicken Smothered with Black-Eyed Peas. The chicken is simmered with bits of bacon, onion and celery and is redolent with Tabasco sauce and a careful blend of herbs.

Two killed, 13 injured in fighting in Beirut

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Christian and Moslem militiamen exchanged rocket and mortar fire in and around Beirut today as their leaders struggled to break an apparent deadlock at reconciliation talks in Switzerland.

Beirut police said two people were killed and 13 wounded in overnight combat along the "green line" dividing the capital into Christian and Moslem sectors.

The Israeli military command in Tel Aviv said two Israeli army cars were attacked Sunday night by light arms fire and two rocket-propelled grenades in eastern Lebanon near the Syrian line. The command said there were no injuries, but military sources reported from the scene that a soldier was slightly hurt.

The bomb-shattered commercial district at Beirut's closed port was the scsne of the heaviest fighting, police said. Combatants traded hit-and-run grenade assaults backed up by mortar barrages that spread to neighborhoods along the "green line," according to police.

Clashes drove hundreds of families into basements and bomb shelters in the Shiite Moslem southern suburbs, police reported.

Christian-controlled radio stations said the Christian suburbs of Zalka and Jdeideh, east of Beirut, also were being shelled and urged residents to stay indoors.

However, the fighting, on the sixth day of a cease-fire proclaimed by Lebanese leaders meeting in Lausanne, Switzerland, was lighter than over the weekend, when police said at least 15 civilians were killed and 45 wounded.

U.S. Marine Maj. Robert McLean, spokesman for the U.S. Embassy, said it had been "uncharacteristically quiet" around the embassy compound on west Beirut's Ein Mreisseh seafront boulevard.

There was no reported progress in efforts to find kidnapped American diplomat William Buckley, who was seized by three gunmen outside his west Beirut apartment Friday.

Buckley is first secretary of the embassy's political section, and McLean said the U.S. Embassy had no new information on his whereabouts.

In Lausanne, a Lebanese government spokesman said France had agreed in principle to redeploy its 1,250-man peacekeeping force in Beirut to "buffer zones" along the "green line."

The independent Beirut daily An-Nahar said the troops also would guard the port and airport, closed since Feb. 6, and roads leading to them.

Hoyas hang on; Hogs go home

By Associated Press

Second-ranked Georgetown lulled Southern Methodist to sleep, while upstart Virginia knocked out eighth-ranked Arkansas in the day's big upset in the second round of the NCAA basketball tournament Sunday.

Georgetown, 30-3, used a stall offense during much of the final 10 minutes, and Michael Jackson hit a free throw with eight seconds left as the Hoyas won 37-36. Georgetown trailed 24-16 at halftime.

VIRGINIA, meanwhile, surprised Arkansas 53-51 in the East Regional when guard Rick Carlisle grabbed a deflected shot and hit a short jumper with four seconds left.

The victory moved the Hoyas, 30-3, into Friday's West Regional semifinals against 13th-ranked Nevada-Las Vegas. Dayton plays Washington.

Jackson's free throw made the score 37-34, and Carl Wright hit a jumper with one second left to pull the Mustangs within one point.

After trailing by eight at intermission, Georgetown outscored SMU 16-2 in the first 12:12 of the second half for a 34-30 lead. The Mustangs tied the score 34-34 before Patrick Ewing's tip-in made it 36-34.

The East victory moved Virginia, sixth in the ACC , into the Regional semifinals Thursday against Syracuse. The Orangemen beat Virginia Commonwealth 78-63.

North Carolina and Indiana meet in the other East semifinal.

IN OTHER second-round games Sunday, Louisville defeated 12th-ranked Tulsa 69-67 and No. 6 Illinois beat Villanova 64-56 in the Mideast at Milwaukee. In the Midwest at Lincoln, Neb., No. 4 DePaul defeated Illinois State 75-61, Washington edged Duke, 80-78, and 19th-ranked Wake Forest beat Kansas 69-59.

Louisville's meets Kentucky Thursday in the Mideast. The other semifinal sends Maryland against Illinois. DePaul meets Wake Forest, and Houston plays Memphis State in the Midwest Friday.

Virginia, 19-11, benefitted from an Arkansas turnover with 50 seconds to play. The Cavaliers ran the clock down to seven seconds, when Othell Wilson went up for a jumpshot.

"I saw Othell go up for the shot, and the ball was deflected," said Carlisle, a senior guard. "I just reacted and put it up. When that ball was in the air, it seemed like it took three or four seconds for it to go in."

Wilson scored 13 points for Virginia, including a jumper that tied the score 51-51 with 1:32 left in overtime and a foul shot that sent the game into overtime tied 49-49.

RAFAEL ADDISON scored 24 points, and Syracuse ran away from Virginia Commonwealth in the final 6½ minutes. Leading 59-57 with 6:33 left, Syracuse, 23-8, outscored the Rams 19-6, getting seven points from center Andre Hawkins.

Milt Wagner's 12-foot jumper with five seconds left boosted Louisville over Tulsa. The Cardinals, 24-10, led 67-59 with 2:20 left, but the Hurricanes scored the next eight points to tie it 67-67 with 34 seconds left. Lancaster Gordon led Louisville with 17, while Ricky Ross had 28 for Tulsa, 27-4.

Doug Altenberger scored eight of his 12 points in the second half as Illinois, 25-4, advanced by beating Villanova, which could get no closer than four points after the midway mark of the second half. Bruce Douglas topped the Illini with 13 points.

Kenny Green's 20 points led Wake Forest over Kansas. The Deacons, 21-7, led by 13 points with 7:12 to play and went into a delay offense with 4:07 to go. Lee Garber and Anthony Teachey each had 13 for Wake Forest.

TYRONE CORBIN scored 20 as DePaul ran roughshod over Illinois State, breaking a four-year NCAA tournament victory drought for Coach Ray Meyer. DePaul, 27-2, led by as many as 11 points in the first half and held a 59-40 advantage with 11:03 to play.

Cowboy sale all but OKed

DALLAS (AP) — A group headed by Dallas businessman H.R. "Bum" Bright is close to becoming the new owner of the Dallas Cowboys, three Texas newspapers have reported.

Cowboys President Tex Schramm and Bright met Sunday with the National Football League finance committee during a meeting of league owners in Honolulu, the Dallas Times Herald reported today.

Under the current plan, Bright would own about 20 percent of the team with the rest being divided between 10 other Dallas men, including Schramm, the Times Herald said.

Schramm was scheduled to meet with the owners today in an effort to convince them to waive an NFL rule requiring own person to own 51 percent of a franchise.

The group has offered to pay $55 million for the team and another $20 million to principal owner Clint Murchison Jr., the Times Herald said.

On Sunday, the Fort Worth Star-Telegram placed the sale price at "about $75 million," while The Dallas Morning News said the price was $80 million.

The Star-Telegram also reported that league owners would be asked to change the 51 percent rule, while The News reported that the deal has been structured to give Schramm a voting trust that would give him control of the club.

Cincinnati, Cleveland, Seattle and the Los Angeles Raiders do not have a 51 percent owner, but each team has one person with the controlling vote, the News said.

NFL Executive Director Don Weiss confirmed that the lack of a 51 percent owner would not be a problem.

League executives polled as they gathered for the meeting, which began Sunday, said they could see no problem with the proposal getting the necessary 21 votes for approval as long as Schramm or somebody else was designated to hold the voting trust, The News said.

Dallas businessmen Vance Miller and W.O. Bankston had been mentioned in previous reports as the top contenders to purchase the team.

The News quoted sources close to the negotiations as saying that Murchison planned on Monday to tell Vance and Bankston that their estimated $65 million bid for the club had been rejected.

But the Star-Telegram reported that the Cowboys probably would be sold to the Vance-Bankston group if NFL owners refused to waive the majority control rule.

Miller and Bankston stayed behind Saturday while Bright and Cowboys President Tex Schramm flew to Honolulu for the league meeting.

"I think there probably will be an annoucement this week," Miller said. "Or — maybe not."

The News reported that Schramm has informed George Barbar, a Boca Raton, Fla., land developer, that his $90 million bid for the Cowboys and the Texas Stadium lease had been rejected.

In his proposal, Bright would own 15 percent of the Cowboys, The News reported.

Rice rally beats Houston in SWC

From Wire Reports

HOUSTON — James Thompson's home run in the seventh sparked a four-run rally toward Rice's 6-4 win over Houston in SWC baseball Sunday.

With Rice trailing 4-1, Thompson blasted one to right field, followed by Bryan Foxx's score on a Curtis Fox single. Mark Machalec scored on an infield groundout to tie the game, 4-4. The Owls then took the lead for good on Bobby Eggleston's line drive triple up the alley in left center field.

David Hinnichs, 5-0, who allowed 10 hits and four walks in seven innings, was the winner for Rice. Ed Clark, 4-3, took the loss for Houston. Rice is now 22-2 for the season and 2-1 in the SWC after splitting a doubleheader with Houston on Saturday. Houston fell to 19-9 and 1-2.

•••

FORT WORTH — Darrin Roberts' home run in the bottom of the third sparked Texas Christian to a 6-3 SWC win over Texas Tech Sunday.

It was the ninth win in a row for TCU, which swept the three-game series.

Bob Gross, 3-2, took the loss for Tech, which fell to 14-12 overall and 0-3 in the SWC. TCU is now 13-5 and 3-0.

•••

COLLEGE STATION — Rob Swain hit two home runs in the opener as Texas A&M swept Kansas, winning 9-0 in the first game and 11-3 in the nightcap.

In the first game, Swain homered in the second to score three runs, then added another solo shot in the same inning.

Winner Sherman Corbett, 4-2, had a no-hitter going through the fifth, but allowed only two hits in the last two innings. John Heeney, 1-1, was the loser for Kansas.

A&M ran its record to 16-6. Kansas is 9-7.

Phoenix sweetens NFL pot

BALTIMORE (AP) — Phoenix officials have sweetened the pot by offering to create a $3-million "pool" to Baltimore Colts owner Robert Irsay to guarantee ticket sales of 34,000 each year for 12 years, according to a published report.

The Baltimore Sun quoted an unidentified source as saying that guarantee had been made during a second meeting between Irsay and Phoenix officials in Bakersfield, Calif.

Eddie Lynch, a Phoenix developer, described talks with Irsay as being "at the 50-yard line" and said he hoped to have a decision from Irsay this week.

The Sun's source said Keith Turley, who is the chief exeuctive officer of the Arizona Public Service Co., had told Irsay that Phoenix would create the money pool and allow Irsay to dip into it every time sales fell below 34,000 to make up the difference.

Hokies, Panthers advance

NIT

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Al Young's only basket against South Alabama helped Virginia Tech's Hokies advance to the quarterfinals of the NIT, but Jaguar coach Cliff Ellis would like one more look at the play that ended his season.

Young scored on a tap-in with three seconds left to give the Hokies a 68-66 victory in the nightcap of an NIT doubleheader. In the first game, clutch free throw shooting by George Allen and Billy Culbertson led Pittsburgh to a 66-63 victory over Florida State.

While taller players were crashing the boards for control of Perry Young's errant jumper from the right baseline, the 6-foot Al Young sneaked in for the game-winner.

"I was scared to touch the ball because I thought they might call goaltending," Young said. "When I was going in, it seemed I was the only one that jumped."

Ellis hinted that goaltending might have been the appropriate call.

"I'd like to look at that final basket on video tape," Ellis said. "I don't want to say it should have been called before I look at it."

South Alabama led by as much as 22-12 before the Hokies made a run that ended with a Perry Young dunk that tied the score at 30 late in the first half.

Hitting 11 of 18 from the field, Perry Young led the Hokies with 29 points to raise Virginia Tech's record to 20-12. Dell Curry, the team's leading scorer, was stymied with foul trouble and finished with 10 points before fouling out.

Dexter Shouse sparked South Alabama with 17 points, 15 of which came in the second half. The Jaguars ended the year at 22-8.

Pittsburgh led by as many as eight points, but the Seminoles got a boost from David Shaffer and Alton Gipson and eventually tied the score three times down the stretch.

TED BATTLES

Trio leaves treasure chest of WT lore

(Second of two parts)

When Audrey Gill, Woody Adams and Jay Francis passed away this past winter, they left behind a treasure chest of West Texas Sports lore.

Adams played on the only Midland High team to go unbeaten through a season, the 1936 team which went to the Rose Bowl.

Dutch Baumgarten, not long out of TCU, was the coach and later went on to coach at Texas Western College, where he turned out many successful teams.

Baumgarten had taken over as Midland coach in 1934 and in his final season gave Midland its only undefeated team. The closest thing to a blemish for the '36 team was a 13-13 tie with El Paso Bowie.

Francis, the star of the next three seasons, was still an unknown freshman and it was Dave Wafford who was the backfield star on that team, rushing for a record 1,990 yards behind the blocking of Adams, a 200-pound junior left tackle.

ALTHOUGH PLACE-kicking wasn't the art it is today, Adams booted 16 extra points. His kick against Bowie that could have given MHS an undefeated, untied season hit the goal post and bounced back on the field. Since it wasn't a district game, Midland qualified for the playoffs. Midland beat McCamey, 52-6, in bi-district. Before the game with Littlefield, the Bulldogs were promised a trip to the Rose Bowl to see Pitt play Washington, if they won.

Midland won regional, which is as far as Class B teams went in those days, 25-7, and went to Pasadena.

Adams was a teammate of Francis on the 1937 team that went 7-3.

When he graduated and headed for Texas Christian, Woody had lettered four years in football and track and was the outstanding player on Midland's 1936 district basketball champions.

TCU WAS suffering the after effects of the the Davey O'Brien-I.B.Hale-Ki Aldrich national championship team of 1938 when Adams arrived on campus. However, the Frogs struggled back and earned an Orange Bowl bid against Georgia and Frank Sinkwich in 1942 after a 7-2-1 1941 season and Adams was named the MVP of that team.

Returning to Midland after service, he entered the oil businnes. In the years that followed he watched his son, Sam, follow in his footsteps as a standout lineman at Midland Lee and then at the University of Missouri, where, as I recall, he went both ways in a Gator Bowl victory over Auburn in the 1960s.

GILL was an all-state lineman in high school for Sweetwater, the town that had produced Sammy Baugh, a few years before and led the defense that corraled Jay Francis long enough in 1939 to hand Midland its only defeat that year.

He was a member of Dana X. Bible's 1941 University of Texas team that some were beginning to label, like Nebraska in 1983, the greatest football team ever. The Longhorns slaughtered Colorado, 34-6; LSU, 34-0; Oklahoma, 40-7; Araksnas, 48-14; Rice, 40-0, and SMU, 34-0.

Life Magazine was so awed that it devoted its cover to individual mug shots of each starter on the Rose-Bowl-bound-Austin express.

That week Baylor tied Texas, 7-7, and the following week, TCU accomplished the impossible, beating the Longhorns, 14-7.

There was no platooning as it is known today. But the tactic of using completely different units in the first and third and second and fourth quarters was gaining in popularity. Bible employed it and as a sophomore, Gill played on the second unit.

"After the TCU game, Bible took all the blame," Gill recalled many years later, "He had abandoned his two-platoon system and stuck with the regulars. He felt that was his fatal mistake."

HOWEVER, it was as a football coach, athletic director and school administrator that most Midlanders remember Gill.

After graduating from Texas in 1947, he came to Midland first as an assistant to Barnes Milam and then to Thurman "Tugboat" Jones. When Jones left for Highland Park in 1954, Gill became head coach. In his final game as coach in 1958, Gill's Bulldogs beat an Odessa team led by Ronnie Goodwin, who went on to play for Baylor and the Philadelphia Eagles, 21-8.

It was while Audrey was head coach, we were returning at night from a district meeting in Abilene or San Angelo. The lights of the car went out and there was nothing but West Texas darkness at high speed. It lasted only a few seconds, but when the lights went on again, someone said, "There's nothing that can make you feel more helpless than that."

Audrey responded, "Yes there is, having your baby die in your arms because he can't breath and not being able to do anything about it."

Gill finished his administrative career as principal of Midland High.

In the car the other day, after Audrey's death, we were talking and my youngest son remarked, "Mr. Gill was really nice person. I didn't realize how nice until my junior year. That's when I got to know him. He was like you, Dad. He always looked so stern that a lot of the kids thought he was a grouch until they got to know him."

In the education business, a stern look has to be an asset, if you don't want to get trampled. It just shows, the Audrey I remember was sincere, but he was easy-going and wasn't above a good joke.

It just occured to me. What mischief, that I never knew about, did Brandon commit to require an audience with the principal?

Bomb scare cancels Connors-Lendl match

From wire reports

TENNIS—The Jimmy Connors-Ivan Lendl Rotterdam finals was called off Sunday after an anonymous caller said a bomb would go off in the Ahoy Sports Center. No bomb was found during an ensuing police search, after about 10,000 spectators were evacuated from the hall. The call was received when Connors and Lendl were in the second set, with the Czech leading 6-0, 1-0. The caller said the bomb would go off at 2 p.m. Connors and Lendl immediately left the hall for their hotel and said they would not return to finish the match.

"They are not going to see me here any more," Connors said...

Charley Lau

BASEBALL— Chicago White Sox Coach Charley Lau, considered one of the finest batting instructors in the major leagues, died Sunday at age 50 at his home after an illness. Lau took a leave of absence from the team in June and underwent a battery of medical tests. It was determined at that time that he had cancer of the colon, said Roland Hemond, White Sox GM...

Minority owners of the Houston Astros, disgruntled with the leadership of majority stockholder John McMullen, are again trying to reduce the board chairman's power, The Houston Post reported. The Post said minority stockholders were taking the action out of fear that McMullen will gain control of 51 percent of the Houston Astros and the Houston Sports Association...

FOOTBALL— Houston Oiler running back Earl Campbell, who has asked to be traded, has dismissed agent Mike Trope for the second time and says he will negotiate his own contracts in the future. Campbell retained Trope when he became the Oilers No. 1 draft pick from the Texas in 1977. The Oiler running back fired Trope after he negotiated a contract with the Oilers that Campbell reportedly believed deferred too much of his salary. The latest parting is more amicable...

Now two-time winner Koch can look in mirror

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — For six long years Gary Koch was a non-winner, frustrated, struggling, angry.

"It got to be tough to look yourself in the eye in the mirror," he said.

Now, as the only two-time winner on the PGA Tour this season, he faces a new and much more pleasant problem.

"It's obvious I'm somewhat ahead of schedule," Koch said after a spectacular display that brought him a playoff victory over George Burns in the Bay Hill Classic Sunday.

"I'll have to take some time off, re-evaluate things, re-examine my goals, elevate them so that I don't become complacent."

That re-evaluation, however, won't greatly change the projected schedule for the man who collected $72,000 from the total purse of $400,000 and now leads golf's money-winners with a career-high $194,767.

"There are some tournaments I like to play, some I don't like. When I was struggling, there were some sponsors who were good to me, and I'll remember them when the time comes around to playing in their tournaments," said Koch, who credited teacher Peter Kostis with helping him turn his game around, beginning late in 1981.

The comeback produced a victory early last season, and now has made Koch the game's most productive player. But he used an unorthodox formula to win both his titles this season.

The formula: Get six shots back after three rounds, then, when no one is paying any attention, shoot the lights out.

He did it in the San Diego Open, coming from six back with a closing 65, then beating Gary Hallberg in a playoff.

On Arnold Palmer's Bay Hill course, he was six back after three rounds and "was just hoping to get a top 10 finish and a good check," he said.

But he produced his best effort as a pro, a no-bogey, 8-under-par 63, then birdied both playoff holes against Burns. It gave him 10 birdies in 20 holes.

Hebert's 3 TD passes pace Michigan win

USFL

By The Associated Press

The Michigan Panthers, with Bobby Hebert throwing three touchdown passes, ran their record to 4-0 and their winning streak to 10 games over two seasons by beating the Arizona Wranglers 31-26 Sunday.

Two of Hebert's scoring strikes went to Derek Holloway, one covering 60 yards.

Novo Bojovic's 47-yard field goal late in the fourth quarter gave the Panthers a 31-26 lead, then safety David Greenwood preserved the victory with a leaping interception in the end zone in the final minute.

Houston handed New Jersey its first loss 32-25, Denver topped Tampa Bay 36-30 for the Bandits first defeat, Philadelphia beat Oakland 28-7 and Pittsburgh defeated Washington 16-7.

Saturday, Los Angeles edged San Antonio 13-12, Oaklahoma nipped Chicago 17-14 and Birmingham trounced Memphis 54-6.

Monday night, New Orleans, 3-0 and the only other unbeaten team in the league, plays at Jacksonville.

A crowd of 35,532 at the Astrodome watched as Sam Harrell ran for two touchdowns and Will Lewis interecepted two passes, returning one for a touchdown, in leading Houston past the Generals. New Jersey scored twice in the closing minutes, on a six-yard pass by Brian Sipe and a one-yard dive by Herschel Walker.

Denver cornerback David Martin broke a 30-30 tie by intercepting a John Reaves pass and returning it 38 yards for a touchdown with 6:34 remaining in the game at Denver. The winning score came just 37 seconds after Denver had gained the tie on a 13-yard touchdown pass by quarterback Craig Penrose.

After trailing 23-14, Tampa Bay rallied to go ahead 30-23 on Reaves-Willie Gillespie 85-yard pass-run play, Greg Boone's one-yard scoring plunge and a field goal.

Kelvin Bryant ran for 173 yards and scored two touchdownson in leading the Stars past Oakland at Philadelphia. The Invaders scored first on a two-yard run by Otis Brown.

Visiting Pittsbugh kept Washington winless when Tony Lee kicked an 18-yard field goal and Jeff Delaney ran 50 yards for a touchdown with the interception of a Reggie Collier pass, both in the fourth quarter. Mike Rozier, the 1983 Heisman Trophy winner from Nebraska, enjoyed his best day as a pro, rushing 22 times for 77 yards and catching three passes for 87 more.

Helen and Alvin Hoagland leave the memorial service for their son, photojournalist John Hoagland, Sunday in San Diego. Hoagland was killed during a gun battle between guerrillas and army troops Friday in El Salvador.

Friends, relatives mourn journalist as professional

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Relatives and associates of Newsweek photographer John Hoagland, who was killed covering the war in El Salvador, mourned him as a professional whose sometimes brusque exterior hid a sensitive character.

"He was grumpy," Hoagland's sister, Marcia, told an overflow crowd attending a memorial service Sunday. "In the morning, you learned to give him his coffee and shut up.

"But I was so lucky. He was my brother, but he was also my best friend."

Hoagland, 36, was killed Friday while with a group of journalists covering a battle between leftist guerrillas and government troops near Suchitoto, about 27 miles northeast of the capital. The journalists were caught in a crossfire and Hoagland died when struck by a shell from an M-60 machine gun.

Hoagland had been in El Salvador since 1979 and considered it his home. His family said he planned to marry a woman in San Salvador.

Some of the speakers noted that Hoagland was killed by an American-made weapon and alluded to a death squad "hit list" that included Hoagland's name among 35 journalists singled out for execution.

But James LeMoyne, who was a Newsweek reporter in El Salvador, said Hoagland was a working journalist and not a political activist.

"He immediately identified with the people, but he didn't do it on political grounds," LeMoyne said. "He had a broader feeling for what the people were suffering."

Flamboyant GOP congressman goes on trial

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. George V. Hansen, the flamboyant Idaho Republican, says he is innocent of government allegations that he supplied false financial information to Congress.

Hansen goes on trial in U.S. District Court here today on charges he concealed financial information, including loans from Texas millionaire Nelson Bunker Hunt.

"My plea is innocent, loud and clear," Hansen said when the Justice Department made the accusations. "I filed my reports carefully each year with the proper congressional committee without challenge.

"And if you want to know how phony and trumped-up these charges are, just ask yourself how a Justice Department bureaucrat can make an intelligent decision on congressional report filing when they've never seen the inside of the ethics committee files and can't for sure know what any congressman or senator has done."

Last April, the Justice Department obtained a four-count criminal indictment here charging Hansen, third-ranking Republican on the House Banking Committee, with making false financial statements for 1978, 1979, 1980 and 1981.

Among other things, the indictment said he omitted mention of a $61,503 personal loan to himself and his wife, Connie, by conservative billionaire Nelson Bunker Hunt, an $87,475 profit made by the Hansens with Hunt's aid during a three-day plunge into silver futures in 1979, and a $50,000 personal loan made in 1981 to Hansen by a bank president in Grundy, Va., who was later convicted of a $2.2 million swindle.

Specifically, the indictment charges Hansen:

— Did not disclose outstanding personal loans of $25,000 and $60,000 made to him by Odell Rogers and Carl McAfee and $50,000 made to him by John Meade Jr. in 1981.

— Excluded an outstanding personal loan of $61,503.42 made to him and his wife in 1980.

— Did not declare that he and his wife purchased 125 silver futures contracts valued at $3,877,800 on Jan. 16. 1979 and sold them two days later for a profit of $87,475.

— Did not reveal an outstanding personal loan to him and his wife for $50,000 made by the First National Bank of Dallas and guaranteed by Hunt in 1978.

The 53-year-old Hansen, now in his fifth term in Congress, replied that he didn't have to report the items. He said some of the transactions inolved only his wife and that some loans to him were used to finance a citizens' taxpayers group he formed in 1981.

Hansen called the charge retribution for his past accusations that the Internal Revenue Service abused the rights of citizens.

The government will have a formidable task in trying to prove the allegations it has brought against Hansen during the trial, which is estimated to last two weeks.

Already, Judge Joyce Hens Green, who will preside, has ruled in pretrial motions that the government cannot subpoena House officials to testify nor can they use a former Hansen conviction against the congressman.

Earlier this month, the judge said government prosecutors cannot subpoena documents being held by Benjamin J. Guthrie, House Clerk, and John M. Swanner, staff director of the House ethics committee.

Reid H. Weingarten, an attorney in the Justice Department's public integrity section who is trying the case, said he still would be able to get Hansen's records entered as evidence, but he declined to disclose how he would do so.

Bail set for man who killed son's alleged kidnapper

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — A father who killed his son's accused kidnapper "couldn't distinguish between right and wrong" when he stepped from a telephone booth and shot the man in the head, a lawyer for the father said.

A bond hearing was scheduled for today for Gary Plauche, but defense lawyer Foster Sanders III said Sunday night that "we may make bail before it goes to a hearing." Bond has been set at $100,000 for the charge of second-degree murder.

Sanders said no further court appearance would be required until a grand jury indicts Plauche. District Attorney Ossie Brown said he probably would present evidence to the grand jury on March 28.

WBRZ-TV had a camera rolling Friday night when Plauche, 39, stepped from a pay telephone at Ryan Airport and fired once into the head of Jeffery Paul Doucet, 25, as unsuspecting detectives were walking Doucet past a metal detector.

After the shooting, the detectives asked Plauche why he shot Doucet and he replied: "If it were your son, you would have done the same thing," police and witnesses said.

Doucet, who died Saturday at New Orleans' Charity Hospital, was being returned here from Anaheim, Calif.

Tower of Power

The new air control tower at Midland Regional Airport began operations in mid-January. The $1.8 million structure replaces a World War II vintage tower.

It was a long climb to the top — the last two flights of stairs heading straight up to the glassed cubicle.

For air traffic controllers at Midland Regional Airport, it was a similar long climb to getting a new control tower as it was to get to the top of the old one.

The wind would whistle and whip and wrap around the old tower, covered in corregated metal. And on a hot summer afternoon when the air conditioner broke, the controllers would feel like fried pies in the sky.

But a $1.8 million new structure is finished and ready to take off with the Permian Basin as it grows. And when the temperatures change overnight from sizzling to chilling, the controllers can do their job in a controlled atmosphere.

IN A SIX-HOUR, lightning quick move, the old tower was shut down at midnight Jan. 14, and the new tower began operations at 6 a.m. — about seven years after the paperwork began and 3½ years after the Federal Aviation Administration agreed to fund the construction. "We unplugged everything at midnight and started running," said Les Barris of the move.

Walking through the 5,400 square foot building at the tower's base, Barris as FAA supervisor pointed out the fluorescent-lighted training rooms, brightly-colored snack bar and patriotic decorator colors.

With a combination of blue burlap walls, ivory vinyl walls, a red wall in one room and red carpeting in the tower, Midland's tower reflects a change in the government's attitude toward decorating. "It takes away the feeling of being in a government building," said Jerry Kubiak, FAA tower manager. "They're getting away from moss green and battleship gray" and opting for red, white and blue.

Before a grand opening is planned, however, the red carpeting is coming out of the tower and a taupe is going in. Kubiak explained there wasn't enough carpeting to fully cover the tower floor, and in buying more the taupe was preferred.

But the red wall in his office stays, although Kubiak wryly admits it sometimes keeps him awake.

"The comments from the controllers have all been good," said Kubiak of the new building. "Several have said they thought it was easier to control traffic. The view of traffic pattern is better and the windows are higher."

MIDLAND'S TOWER follows the FAA standard design for a Level 3 airport, or one which sees what is termed as a medium density of traffic. Level 4 would be an airport such as San Antonio, and Level 5 would be Dallas-Fort Worth, according to Barris.

"I feel like I've grown up with this airport," said Barris, walking through the blue-hued halls, stopping and looking at photos from 1952 showing the old tower.

He's worked at the Midland tower "off and on" for 12 years. Barris explained he was here for about five years, went to the El Paso Airport for another five, and returned about six years ago.

Stopping in the darkened radar room on the bottom floor, Barris said the equipment used to be on top of the tower and the employees were squeezed together in the cubicle.

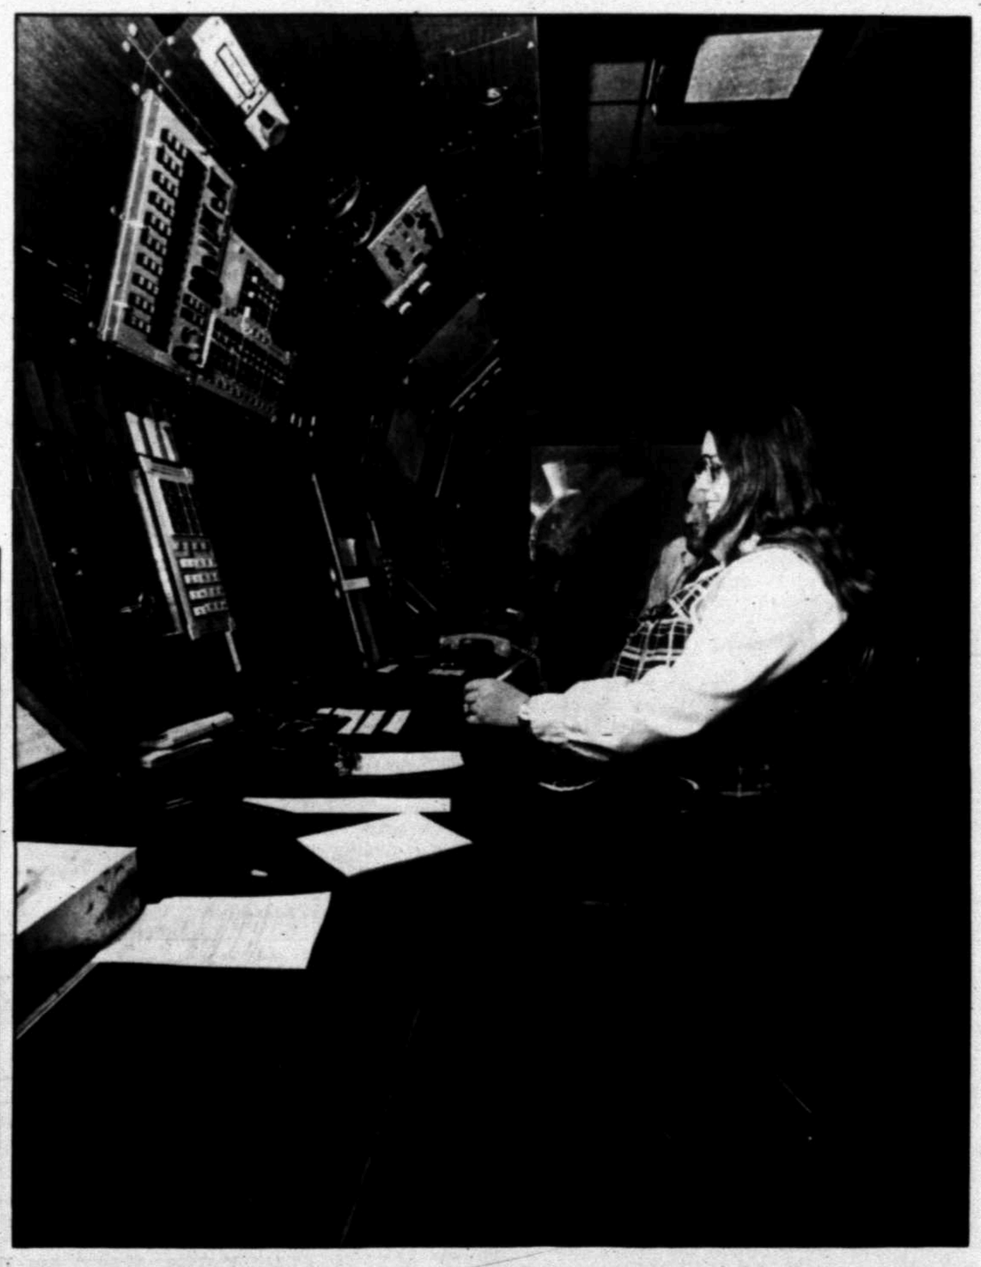
They have three radars now, up from two. And Kubiak noted it can hold five as the tower's needs increase.

"The third scope now can handle excess traffic, or T-37s or T-38s," added Barris.

He headed for the elevator — the one piece of new "equipment" that all employees were wanting.

"This tower is 90 feet and qualified for an elevator," he said with a laugh and punching the "up" button. In the old tower, controllers had to walk up seven flights of stairs, the last two at an almost 90-degree angle.

(See TOWER, Page 2C)



Carolyn Poe, with Rex Hudson watching over her shoulder, check the radar screen as a commercial airliner approaches Midland Regional Airport. The darkened radar room is situated in the air control tower's base.

Air traffic controllers watch the sky and landing strip for aircraft of all sizes, keeping them separated. The new tower has taller windows and a better view of the runways.

Odessan struck by car

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — A 33-year-old woman was listed in stable condition at Medical Center Hospital this morning after being struck by a car in the 4800 block of Andrews Highway.

Elizabeth Esparza, 33, Odessa, was struck about 2:15 a.m. Sunday by a 1978 Chevrolet driven by Patrick A. Thompson, 27, Odessa. Reports indicate Ms. Esparza ran in front of Thompson's car as the car was traveling southbound on Andrews Highway.

Witnesses said Ms. Esparza's body was thrown 20 feet. She was taken to the Odessa hospital, with police reports showing she had broken bones and a skull fracture. The hospital spokesman would not say what injuries Ms. Esparza had been treated for beyond the fact that she was stable in the intensive care unit.

Ms. Esparza, who was not indentified until she regained consciousness at the hospital, "could not describe how the accident occurred," said the report.

Firefighters battle at Furr's

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — Firefighters were still cleaning up at the scene of a major fire at Furr's Cafeteria, 31st St. and Andrews Highway, this morning after battling the blaze for almost four hours.

Preliminary reports indicated 12 units responded to the two-alarm fire at the cafeteria at 5:12 a.m.today. No injuries were reported, but the building received extensive damage.

No cause had been identified as many fire department personnel remained on the scene, participating in extensive salvage operations, according to reports.

Traffic fatalities down in state

AUSTIN (AP) — Traffic accidents killed 448 fewer people in Texas last year than in the previous year, director Jim Adams of the Department of Public Safety said today.

It was the second year in a row that traffic deaths declined, and Adams said that is the first time that has happened in 25 years.

A total of 3,823 people died as a result of motor vehicle crashes last year, compared with 4,271 in 1982 and 4,701 in 1981.

The mileage death rate for 1983, three deaths per hundred million miles traveled, was the lowest in Texas history, Adams said.

He said although public sentiment has continued to build against drunken and unsafe drivers, at least 26 percent of the fatalities involved drunken driving.

Almost 98 percent of the people killed in passenger vehicles were not wearing seat belts at the time of the crash.

Tower generates good working conditions

The tower is "virtually fireproof," he said, pointing to the cinder block and concrete walls. "We had a fear of fire in the other tower. This whole building was designed to keep out dust. In the old building, wind and dust came through.

"We had one tiny bathroom, and the breakroom was so small that only four people could eat at one time," Barris said. "The women now have a separate bathroom with lockers." So do the men.

The new tower, according to Barris, has been needed for at least 10 years. "If we'd had this 10 years ago, we wouldn't have had a problem here with the strike," he said. In the summer of 1981, controllers belonging to the union walked off their jobs — forever. President Reagan refused to incorporate their demands into a contract and new people were hired. Only three controllers were left at the Midland tower.

"Your environment has something to do with the way you like your job," said Barris. Where once Midland's tower had 22 fully-trained controllers, it now has seven with the other employees still in training.

"The tower did have an effect on our controllers," he said. "It would start raining and the roof would leak. The air conditioning would go out and it would get 107 degrees in there real quick."

With the move, the controllers' attitudes have improved, noted Kubiak, who has been in charge of the tower since June 1982. "It's like a family. They work together in a spirit of cooperativeness."

As the tower builds back its staff of trained controllers, Midland's air traffic appears also to be climbing, according to Barris. And with the new tower, it can be handled.

"We're ready for the growth of Midland-Odessa," said Barris. "If Midland-Odessa starts to rebound, our traffic will skyrocket."

Straight up, just like those ladder-stairs in the old tower.

AUSTIN NOTEBOOK

Problem of highways expected to hike taxes

By BILL KIDD
Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The expression that "you can't get there from here" may take on more meaning for Texans, who are likely to find that they can get there, but it will take them longer and cost them more than they would like.

Undoubtedly, the most obvious problem is that of Texas' highway system.

By now, everyone should have been made aware that the state is facing a shortage of money to construct and maintain the highways that most Texans feel are necessary, or at least desirable.

Concern over the deterioration of the existing system, and over delays in construction of new facilities, are expected to result in an increase in gasoline taxes when lawmakers gather for their anticipated special session this summer.

The tax increase would go mainly for highways, with some funds for education, and a number of legislators say they feel that tax increase is the only one acceptable to Texans.

At least, it seems, the tax increase is acceptable to 53 percent of Texas residents, according to a recent poll.

Lawmakers also are talking about providing a local option gasoline tax for cities or counties, to enable them to finance local projects.

That proposal seems to be gaining support both among urban members who represent residents who have constituents who want freeways, and from rural members who represent folks who don't want to pay more taxes to provide roads for metropolitan areas.

But highways aren't the only areas of transportation which need attention.

Gov. Mark White, speaking recently to the County Judges and Commissioners Conference in College Station, said Texas needs to look to its airports and air transportation needs over the next several years.

White commented that areas wishing to attract new businesses need adequate air transportation as well as ground transportation.

Counties, White noted, have been involved for years in constructing roads, but are likely in the future to be called on to do more in the way of developing airports.

Texas needs, White argued, to restore its highway system to first-class status, and to create a comparable air transportation system.

Texas Aeronautics Commission has been an advocate for many years of greater state involvement in aviation development.

TAC has $2.9 million for construction projects grants at Texas airports in fiscal 1984, but has had requests for 20 times the amount of assistance available.

TAC has suggested, in the past, placing a special tax on aviation fuel to provide more construction funds, but that proposal has drawn vigorous opposition from the airline industry.

And in recent sessions, efforts to find other funds for airport construction have run into the budget crunch which has limited other areas of spending.

TAC also is looking at studies which indicate that while the need for air facilities is growing, the ability of private airports to meet those needs is shrinking.

A recent study of private airports in the Dallas-Fort Worth area concludes that many are nearing capacity and need to expand, but may be forced to close due to increased costs — including such expenses as rising property taxes.

Public transit systems also have their problems.

Such systems have always been largely an afterthought with most Texans, but situation has been changing in recent years.

But difficulties in creating a metropolitan transit system in Dallas, and voter opposition to creation of a rail system in Houston, indicate Texans aren't ready to take the bus — or railcar — and leave the driving to someone else.

Texas Research League has completed a study on financing public transportation in Texas, concluding that the state's taxpayers will put $400 million into such operations in 1984.

That includes $318 million in direct local contributions to 15 city and four metropolitan systems, including revenues from the special one cent per gallon motor fuels tax dedicated by Congress to public transit.

In 1981, TRL notes, Texans paid $191 million in taxes to 16 city-owned and two metropolitan systems — with the federal government contributing $56 milllion and state government over $ 5 million.

TRL notes that metropolitan systems San Antonio, Houston and Dallas use (or will use) sales tax funds — an approach it doesn't like, saying there's no "logical relationship" between the tax and the service financed.

But regardless of any relationship or non-relationship, taxes for financing transporation systems — whether the financing is direct or indirect — probably will continue to increase in Texas. So you may be able to get there — but it's going to cost you more to do it.

Vice principal suspended

HALLSVILLE, Texas (AP) — The Hallsville school board has suspended, with pay, a vice principal charged with aggravated assault after a high-speed chase in which a youth was wounded by a gunshot and nine others were injured when a pickup overturned.

The board, meeting in special session Sunday, took the action against Oliver Timberlake Sr., who was released from jail Saturday after posting a $3,000 bond.

The chase began Thursday night when a truck with 10 youths pulled up in front of Timberlake's house and occupants shouted insults and hurled bottles toward the house, said Harrison County Sheriff's investigator.

The truck left and Timberlake followed it in a car, she said. Several shots from a .22-caliber rifle were fired at the truck during the chase, she said. The truck overturned, spilling seven of the youths in the bed of the pickup.

Police officers prepare for high speed chases

HOUSTON (AP) — The police car, siren screaming and lights flashing, weaves through traffic, pursuing a fleeing vehicle at a high rate of speed.

It's a scene familiar to residents of most cities and re-enacted countless times on television and in the movies.

In Houston, it happens an average of once a day, officers say.

And when it does occur, police officials want the officer behind the wheel to be comfortable in that high-stress situation.

"Not only is he looking out for himself, but for the other citizens out there," says Don Thompson, one of several instructors in high-speed driving techniques at the Houston Police Academy.

So 490 police cadets each year, and officers who seek retraining, come under the guidance of people like Thompson, Mike Bell or Jim Alexander, all officers with more than 15 years experience and dozens of high-speed pursuits under their belts.

"We teach how to drive well, not how to drive fast," Thompson says. "If you can place a car in position at low speed, you can do it at high speed."

Instructors have set up two courses at the Houston Police Academy — one a high-speed layout similar to driving on a highway, and the other a serpentine course marked with pylons to simulate veering around obstructions.

"We teach them to make decisions quickly," Alexander says. "A second is a lot of time when you drive a car. A mistake could cost your life or someone else's life."

Alexander says the average driver doesn't know a lot about inertia, braking, road design, driving on different pavements. And because officers are taught those aspects — "hammered," as he puts it — that gives police an advantage even if the person fleeing has a much higher-powered car. In addition, he says the officer in pursuit generally knows the streets in his patrol area, knows where obstructions and curves are and can anticipate what driving actions will be necessary.

"The majority of time the person being chased will get in an accident," Thompson says. "He will mess up."

Among tips for better control Alexander passed along during a recent high-speed swing through the course were that officers are trained to keep their hands at the 3 and 9 o'clock positions on the wheel, rather than the 10 and 2 o'clock positions taught in high school driver education. Also, officers are taught to avoid hand-over-hand cornering when flinging the steering wheel from side to side. Although there is no department rule, seat belt use is encouraged.

The typical Houston officer will spend 30,000 to 50,000 miles a year in his car. The favored speed on routine patrol is 20 mph.

Among the decisions the officer must make is whether to even get involved in a high-speed chase.

Thompson says most situations begin with a traffic violation, with the officer not knowing whether the motorist is wanted for any other crime. If the pursuit would send the cars speeding through a school zone where children are at play, it would not be worth the risk, he says.

"What it all boils down to is a lot of judgment by the person involved," Bell adds. "We have to make that decision instantly.

"Everything an officer does is subject to public scrutiny and litigation."

Department guidelines insist that officers "may not throw all caution to the winds," Bell says. "It's a very hard decision to make once you're in that kind of situation."

In Houston, where 80 percent of the officers experience a chase in their first year on the job, pursuits must be cleared by a supervisor and the dispatcher on duty must be aware, the instructors say. The first thing the officer tries to get is the license plate number of the fleeing car to determine whether it's stolen or perhaps wanted for other offenses.

Break-in reported at MC

From Staff Reports

In weekend burglary complaints to city police, a Walkie-Talkie and recharger were reported taken in a break-in of the administration building at Midland College, 3600 N. Garfield. Entry was gained by prying a window. Total loss was placed at $2,000.

J.C. Brown of 1509 S. Belmont said someone kicked in his front door and took five guns worth a total of $1,350.

About $300 worth of coins was reported taken from five vending machines in the cafeteria snack bar of Midland Memorial Hospital on Friday night or early Saturday morning. A key was used to open the machines.

A washer, dryer, ceiling fan, two lamps and a light fixture were reported stolen from a residence at 703 S. Dallas. No dollar figure was placed on the loss, which occurred sometime in the past week.

Fire of undetermined origin extensively damaged a mobile home belonging to Sherry Sander at Elm Grove Mobile Home Park on North Fairgrounds Road early Sunday morning.

Five fire department units responded to the 1:49 a.m. call and used 500 gallons of water extinguishing the blaze. Firefighters remained on the scene 1½ hours.

DECISION '84

Mexico oil reserves up, production down

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Mexico's oil reserves increased to 72.5 billion barrels in 1983 while crude oil production dropped 2.9 percent, Mario Ramon Beteta, director of the country's state-owned oil monopoly said Sunday.

Reviewing the performance of Petroleos Mexicanos, S.A., in what he called a "difficult year for the international petroleum market," Beteta said additions of proven reserves outstripped production and at the end of 1983 were 500 million barrels higher than a year earlier.

He referred to declines in world demand and prices that were a blow to Mexico's efforts to recover from its worst economic crisis in 50 years.

"World demand for crude declined despite signs of recuperation in the economies of the industrialized countries, especially in the second semester," Beteta said in the report, presented at the inauguration of the New PEMEX petrochemical complex in the southeastern state of Tabasco.

Mexico, although not a member of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, matched the cartel's price cuts a year ago, dropping Isthmus crude $3.50 to $29 a barrel. The price of Mayan crude also was lowered, but returned to $25 a barrel in a two-stage increase last August and October.

Beteta urged oil producers to continue to maintain stability in the market.

"We know that the equilibrium of the international market is precarious and we do not wish to alter it," he said. "Any attempt by an important exporter to increase its foreign exchange income over the short term can influence other producers to the same conduct, which could affect price levels."

PEMEX' annual report, also released Sunday, said the company had a favorable trade balance of $15.5 billion, 2.9 percent below 1982. But Beteta said the company had reduced its own foreign debt by 10 percent.

Production of crude averaged 2.66 million barrels a day, compared with 2.75 million a year earlier, Beteta said.

Natural gas production dropped 4.5 percent, from 4.2 billion to 4.05 billion cubic feet a day, Beteta said.

PEMEX boosted its crude oil exports 3 percent, to just over 1.5 million barrels a day, 56 percent of it the heavy Maya type and 44 percent the high-grade light Isthmus, with more than half going to the United States, the report said.

Natural gas exports were 217 million cubic feet a day rather than the 300 million expected because of a drop in U.S. demand, Beteta said. Domestic demand, particularly for diesel and gasoline, declined.

At the current rate of extraction, the increased reserves are sufficient to last 54 years, he said. Eleven oil and six gas fields were added during the year.

He touched only lightly on the continuing campaign to eliminate corruption in both the company and its union that has put Jorge Diaz Serrano, PEMEX director from 1976-1981, and a former Oil Workers' Union leader in jail in separate fraud cases.

Saying the year's results were the product of "tenacious, responsible" work, Beteta said, "This is the new image of Pemex that we would like public opinion to recognize. A constructive image, that should not be blurred despite certain episodes that we have regretted and have pledged to correct."

The report is presented annually on the anniversary of the 1938 expropriation of Mexican oil from foreign companies.

Bankruptcy courts may go 'belly up'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's bankruptcy judges, saviors for thousands of debt-ridden Americans, may have to turn in their robes unless Congress reorganizes their court system by March 31.

The House may vote this week on a salvage plan for the bankruptcy courts, nearly two years after the Supreme Court said the current system is unconstitutional. The Senate passed its reorganization plan nearly a year ago.

But just how the sinking system will be rescued will remain in doubt until legislative horse trading produces a compromise among competing special interests.

The fight includes federal judges, consumer groups, farmers, fishermen, credit card companies, labor unions and even Mothers Against Drunk Driving.

"The lobbyists are all over the place," said one congressional staffer who asked not to be quoted by name.

The federal judiciary is concerned about the powers of bankruptcy judges; the other groups debate whether the law should be made easier or tougher for those who can't meet their financial obligations.

While it is unclear exactly when the bankruptcy issue will be settled, the Senate has scheduled a definite end to its debate over a proposed constitutional amendment to restore officially sanctioned school prayer. The vote on a prayer amendment is scheduled for 3 p.m. EST Tuesday.

The bankruptcy controversy began after the Supreme Court ruled 8-2 in June 1982 that a 1978 bankruptcy law was unconstitutional. The 1978 measure gave bankruptcy judges the wide-ranging powers of other federal jurists, but not the protections that insulate other judges from politics.

The protections include life tenure and a prohibition against salary cuts. Bankruptcy judges serve 14-year terms and theoretically can have their compensation reduced.

Since the decision, the debtor courts have been operating under a temporary rule imposed by the Judicial Conference, a sort of board of directors for the federal judiciary. After several extensions, the temporary rule expires March 31.

Louisiana Senator would delay oil mergers

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate sponsor of a bill to delay oil company mergers says he opposes the corporate deals because they tie up money that could be used for drilling and are paid for in part by U.S. taxpayers.

Sen. Bennett Johnston, D-La., said Sunday it is unfair that oil companies which collectively arranged to borrow $29 billion for recent acquisitions can deduct interest payments on those loans from their taxes.

"You borrow $29 billion and have the taxpayer pay for that. That's a lot of school lunches, that's a lot of highways, that's a lot of things the federal government needs," Johnston said on ABC-TV's "This Week With David Brinkley."

"Why should we be subsidizing $29 billion worth of loans in order to make oil companies bigger, when instead of finding more oil, they'll be finding less oil?" he said.

However, T. Boone Pickens, chairman of Mesa Petroleum Co., said on the same program that money used for mergers is not diverted from drilling operations.

"There's plenty of cash for drilling, but the prospects are just not there for us, so you're not going to take dollars away from exploration," Pickens said.

The Reagan administration along with oil companies opposes Johnston's proposal, which would block the merger of major oil companies for six months.

The bill would immediately affect mergers between Mobil Corp. and Superior Oil Co., and Standard Oil Co. of California and Gulf Corp., which were announced earlier this month.

Stock market loses

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market suffered a broad setback today as many banks raised their prime lending rates.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, up 44.60 points last week, fell 12.56 to 1,171.80 by noontime today.

Losers held a 4-1 lead over gainers among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

The market had its best week of the year last week amid spreading hopes for progress in the struggle to shrink the federal budget deficit.

But the rally abruptly ran out of steam this morning after many large banks across the country raised their prime rates from 11 to 11½ percent.

Increases in the nominal charge set by banks on loans to their best customers had been widely predicted in the wake of a recent rise in open-market money rates. Nevertheless, analysts said the prime rate move this morning, and the speed with which it spread through the banking industry, served to emphasize fears of rising rates in investors' minds.

Warner Communications fell 1¼ to 21⅝. Over the weekend Warner said it had bought the more than 5 million Warner shares owned by News Corp. Ltd., for $31 apiece.

The NYSE's composite index lost .89 to 90.84. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was down 1.65 at 210.77.

Volume on the Big Board came to 31.21 million shares at noontime, down from 63.61 million at the same point Friday.

Buy stock in real estate?

NEW YORK (AP) — If investing in real estate catches your fancy, suggests one investment analyst, don't buy land and buildings. Buy stocks.

Specifically, what Donald Hartsoe, an analyst specializing in real estate at the Value Line Investment Survey, has in mind is the stocks of companies that own large amounts of real estate properties.

There are risks in these stocks that can't be ignored, Hartsoe acknowledges. Nevertheless, he says, they may be the best way for a small investor to try to cash in on the recent resurgence of the U.S. real estate market.

WHY not buy property on your own? "Most individual investors don't have the time, capital, and skills required to select and manage properties successfully," Hartsoe says in a recent special report in Value Line's weekly "Selection and Opinion."

What about those ever-so-popular real estate syndications — limited partnerships that allow people with small amounts of money to get in on the wheeling and dealing in apartments, office buildings and shopping centers?

These often do offer attractive income-tax advantages, Hartsoe concedes. But he also argues, "the partnerships are paying top dollar for properties, and the amount of each limited partner's dollar that actually goes for the purchase of real estate is often reduced by hefty fees and large markups."

TO be fair, Hartsoe's arguments would not go uncontested in any gathering of real-estate aficionados. Many people of this persuasion like their real estate investments to be direct, without having to worry about the intervening vagaries of something as unpredictable as the stock market.

POSITIVE THINKING

Woman learns to smile, changes outlook on life

I received an upbeat letter from a young married woman who writes, "I've developed a great new outlook and have a better attitude. For as long as I can remember I have been defeating myself with feelings of inferiority and nervousness. Now I have begun to practice what you suggest and I have too found that it really works.

"I have replaced my usual grim expression with a smile and I find it much more satisfying to have good things to say about people instead of derogatory remarks. I have again taken up a positive attitude and I truly believe that it has already begun to work for me.

"Now I find myself practicing positive beliefs. As a result I have a more cheerful outlook. I have finally learned and accepted the fact that no one is against me but myself. I have been able to make new friends out of old enemies."

Then my correspondent goes on to illustrate her new-found attitude with this down-to-earth incident: "Last night, just for fun, I ran a little experiment at the laundromat. As you may know, there's not much fun in doing laundry. Well, I cleared by mind of any previous dislike of laundry and told myself that it simply had to be done and that I must make the best of the situation. So," the young woman continues, "with my new-found smile firmly and pleasantly in place, I started out. I smiled at everyone, and in turn people smiled back at me. When one of the washing machines I was using quit, a lady came up and helped me fix it.

"Then I noticed a man having touble with the candy machine. Thinking that the coin he was using might be defective, I offered to trade coins with him. The machine still didn't work, but while I wasn't looking this man picked up my empty soda bottle and returned it to the rack for me. Then a young father sitting with his nine-month-old daughter struck up a conversation with me. Time passed quickly. After I left the laundromat I was so happy that instead of cursing all the obnoxious drivers on the road I just hummed a song, marveling at how much better I felt.

"I have forgotten about myself and the problems I had imagined myself to have," she concludes. "I have put in their place a sincere interest in others and a desire to show them every kindness. I have come out of my shell at long last. I cannot adequately describe the happiness I now feel, instead of the self-pity and self-hate that once was me. I have interested my husband in positive thinking and he too is beginning to find a change coming over him. I nag less and find more things to be thankful for."

This woman's story makes it sound easier, of course, than it actually was. Basic and permanent changes in oneself cannot be achieved without arduous self-discipline. A person who does not persevere ends up by being the same old person living the same old unsatisfactory life. To have a changed life it is necessary to become a changed person with a real revision of attitudes. And that is hard to do sometimes, as hard as changing the proverbial leopard's spots. Some things about personality resist change stubbornly.

But it can be accomplished by linking self-disciplinary determination to the greater power of the mind. However hard it may be, the effort is a sure way to increased happiness.

Women with diabetes usually can't take pill

Dear Dr. Solomon: Is it all right for a woman who has diabetes to be on the pill? — Kim, N.Y.

Dear Kim: Oral contraceptives usually are not recommended for women with diabetes because of an increased risk of blood vessel complications; however other methods of birth control are considered safe. I suggest you discuss this with your physician.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I have a question about exercise that I have never gotten a good answer to. People usually talk about how good exercise is for the health. But people who run around while playing tennis, foe example, sometimes hurt themselves. My question is: Then why exercise? — Lou, N.Y.

Dear Lou: People who do not exercise also hurt themselves occasionally. Moreover, a person in poor physical condition and with weak muscles who slips or takes a false step may be more severely injured than will a tennis player in good physical condition whose muscles are better able to support the weight-bearing joints.

Without going into all the details, I can tell you that the bottom line is that the benefits of regular exercise far outweigh the risks.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I used to think that aspirin was aspirin, but I'm not so sure any more. Do all these different kinds of aspirin I see advertised really make any difference to the person using it? — Clay, Orlando, Fla.

Dear Clay: Some people cannot tolerate regular aspirin; they may react with stomach irritation or develop other side effects. This becomes a particular problem when aspirin has to be taken in large doses over an extended period of time, as, for example, by patients with rheumatoid arthritis.

To overcome this problem, aspirin comes in liquid froms, as buffered tablets, with a coating that keeps it from dissolving in the stomach, and in a form that releases aspirin very slowly into the bloodstream.

If you cannot tolerate regular aspirin, your physician may prescribe one of these special kinds.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I have a grandson who is showing some development around his breasts. He is 13 years old. His mother tells me that they have been to their pediatrician and he has told them it's nothing to worry about. Maybe grandmothers worry more than mothers, but I would appreciate it if you would explain what this condition is and whether you feel there is cause for concern. I would also like to know if an operation will be necessary. — Mrs. J.S., Port Arthur, Texas

Dear Mrs. S.: The condition you describe is called gynecomastia, and it is very common in boys during puberty. It may involve either one or both breasts in varying degrees. Surgery is not usually indicated unless there is marked enlargement of the breast or the condition is having a serious emotional impact on the child.

Since the pediatrician has advised that there is nothing to worry about, I assume that neither of these indications for surgery is present, and I suggest you follow his advice.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My father has Alzheimer's disease, and my brother and I are in some disagreement about how to handle the situation. To put it in a nutshell, how much should we try to involve my father in making decisions about what should be done for him? — Arthur, Tucson, Ariz.

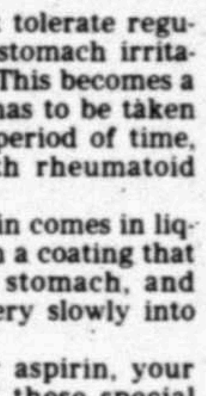
Dear Arthur: The most I can do in responding to your question is to provide some general guidelines. I agree with Dr. Saul Moroff, of the Bronx Municipal Hospital Center, that physicians should always try to get the patient's permission for any course of treatment. Furthermore, if the patient refuses the treatment, the physician should reevaluate the need for it. The point behind all this is that a diagnosis of Alzheimer's disease does not imply that the patient is completely incompetent.

The criteria for treatment should be relief of pain, preservation of function, and prolongation of life; however, I believe it is important to distinguish between prolongation of life and prolongation of dying.

Neil Solomon, M.D., is a columnist for Los Angeles Times Syndicate. If you have a medical question write Dr. Solomon at 1726 Reisterstown Road, Baltimore, Md. 21208. Dr. Solomon will not give personal replies but will answer as many questions as possible in his column.

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

Pay off mortgage unless you can invest money at higher rate



Doyle

Q. I have owned a parcel of land for 22 years and now have an opportunity to sell it for a few thousand dollars more than the balance of the 12.75 percent mortgage on my home. The temptation to pay off the mortgage is great, but I've been told a person should never do this. What is your advice?

A. Unless you can put the money you will net from the sale of that land to work where it will earn more than 12.75 percent, the advice is short and simple. Pay off the mortgage.

We've all heard arguments, which usually don't hold water, against paying off the mortgage. There's nothing complicated about this. When you have a mortgage or any other debt and have extra cash, you just have to compare the interest you're paying on the debt against the return you're getting on your money.

If the interest on your debt is higher than the return on your money, you'll come out ahead by paying off the debt. If things are the other way about, it's wise to stay in debt.

Here's a caution. Don't overlook the fact that you will be required to pay tax on the profit from that land sale. Because you have owned the property for more than one year, your profit will be a long-term capital gain — only 40 percent of which is subject to income tax.

However, even if the tax bite leaves you with less money than the unpaid balance on your mortgage, you still would be wise to pay down on the mortgage — unless you can get more than 12.75 percent on an investment elsewhere.

• • •

Q. I am 68 and can use extra income. My broker advises me to take out a mortgage on my home at about 12.5 percent and put the money into a mutual fund paying 16.9 percent income. What are your thoughts on this?

A. Don't do it. No mutual fund pays 16.9 percent "income." In good years, such as 1982 and 1983, many mutual funds had "total performance" better than 16.9 percent. But that total performance included dividends, capital gains distributions and increase in value of mutual fund shares.

More recently, the results have been different. For the early months of 1984, most mutual funds posted negative total performance, because the value of their shares fell as the stock market went down.

Only dividends should be counted as "income" from a mutual fund.

Common Market leaders debate reforms

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — Leaders of the Common Market met today to debate financial reforms which many experts believe are essential to save the 10-nation trade bloc from going bankrupt by the end of the year.

Officials said the two-day summit must agree on ways to raise new income, assess membership contributions more fairly and limit farm spending. The issues are linked, and agreement on one was not considered likely without an accord on the others.

About 100 Irish and French farmers demonstrated outside Common Market headquarters as the leaders arrived, urging them to safeguard the interests of Europe's farming sector. The French farmers had come from Paris on foot, a 12-day trip.

British sources said Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, whose country has been at the center of most of the policy disputes, entered the talks seeking a pledge that the growth rate of spending on farm price supports — which devours two-thirds of the total $21.6 billion budget — should be less than that of overall income.

The 27-year-old European Economic Community is running out of money, in part because of its generous price supports for its 8 million farmers, a program that has created immense surpluses, especially of cereals and dairy goods.

Margaret Thatcher

Many officials predict EEC coffers will go dry by fall.

British Foreign Secretary Geoffrey Howe, in a television interview Sunday, said, "There is widespread understanding...of the need to have effective control over community spending, to put into effect in the community the same kind of strict rules that every country has had to put into place on its own."

"We have to see if we can get that part of the agenda sorted out in clear terms," Howe said. But he added, "On that subject, let's say there are many voices to reconcile."

Mrs. Thatcher, President Francois Mitterrand of France, West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl and the seven other leaders were beginning their talks this afternoon with a luncheon at EEC headquarters. They were to have dinner at a suburban chateau followed by a fire-side conversation with top aides.

Mitterrand, the Community's current chairman, has submitted a working document which he hopes will lead to agreement on more balanced membership contributions coupled with an unspecified increase in revenues. He has much prestige riding on the summit, and officials said he would like to start a week-long visit to the United States, due to begin Wednesday, with an agreement behind him.

Belgian Foreign Affairs Minister Leo Tindemans said Mitterrand had "spared no effort to bring together all the points of view" in his draft accord. But he added that serious disagreements persisted.

Past efforts to trim farm price guarantees have run into sharp protests in the major producer nations of France, Italy, Belgium, Luxembourg and Ireland. An attempt to resolve the crisis failed completely at a summit in December in Athens, Greece.

In the past week, EEC agriculture ministers, led by France's Michel Rocard, agreed to limit milk output — the major surplus item — and trim farm prices for this year by an average 1 percent for most products. They also agreed to end a costly and complex system of border taxes and subsidies.

However, these agreements must be approved by the summit, something officials said will hinge on British acceptance of guarantees of budget reforms.

Mrs. Thatcher also is insisting on general budget "discipline" and a smoothing out of budget imbalances which are causing "unfair payments" by some countries.

Britain, one of the poorer member nations, and West Germany, the richest, are the only members who pay in more than they realize in benefits.

The community has agreed in principle to give Britain a refund on its 1983 budget contribution amounting to about $640 million and West Germany about $180 million.

Among other things, Mitterrand's draft accord on budgetary reform proposes that EEC farm spending cannot rise faster than its income, that the members can get refunds keyed to their relative prosperity and that the maximum rate of sales taxes each country pays to the budget will be raised from the current maximum of 1 percent.

Bus crash kills 12 people

CARACAS, Venezuela (AP) — A bus carrying a band of young musicians went off a mountain road and plunged into a ravine, killing 12 people and injuring 35, authorities report.

They said the accident occurred Sunday on a mountain pass known as "Christ's Slope" near the city of Valencia and 132 miles east of Caracas.

The youngsters were members of the "Young Firefighters," a band sponsored by the Valencia fire department.

Police said about 50 people, most of them teen-agers, were in the bus en route to perform at a town festival.

Czechs criticize Soviets

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — Czechoslovak university students and some municipal officials have criticized a decision to station new Soviet missiles in their country, emigre sources said today.

Letters expressing concern about the deployment also continue to appear in government-controlled newspapers, said the sources, who keep in regular contact with dissidents in Czechoslovakia.

Czechoslovakia pledged late last year to station new Soviet nuclear missiles in response to NATO deployment of U.S.-built Pershing 2 and cruise missiles in Western Europe. Since then, there have been reports of isolated public protests of the plan.

Most recently, said the sources, students at Prague's Karl University last month posted an appeal calling for the dismantling of Soviet missiles in Czechoslovakia.

Libya sentences Italians

ROME (AP) — The Foreign Ministry has confirmed that three Italians have been sentenced by a Libyan court to life prison terms for allegedly supporting a 1980 coup attempt against Libyan leader Col. Moammar Khadafy.

A Foreign Ministry spokesman, who spoke on condition his name not be used, said Sunday that the sentences were handed down the previous day by a court in Tripoli, but he had no further details.

Ireland's 'Mad Dog' expected to be arraigned for 1977 murder

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — "Mad Dog" Dominic McGlinchey, Ireland's most wanted terrorist, is expected to be arraigned this week on a charge of murdering a 63-year-old postmistress in 1977, authorities said today.

McGlinchey, 30, who has boasted of killing 30 people since 1972, was captured Saturday in a gun battle with police in the Irish Republic.

He made legal history by becoming the first guerrilla fugitive to be extradited by Dublin authorities to British-ruled Northern Ireland since the island was partitioned in 1921.

A spokesman at Belfast police headquarters said McGlinchey was still being questioned by police detectives late Sunday, 24 hours after Irish police handed him over to Northern Ireland authorities at the border near Dundalk.

McGlinchey, chief of staff of the outlawed Irish National Liberation Army, was dubbed "Mad Dog" by his comrades for the brutality of the killings he allegedly carried out.

He is expected to be arraigned in Belfast's Magistrate's Court in connection with the 1977 murder of Hester McMullen, 63, who was killed when guerrillas riddled her home in Toomebridge, County Antrim, in a bid to kill her son, a police reservist.

McGlinchey admitted participation in the slaying when he appeared in court in the Republic in 1982 but claimed the crime was politically motivated.

Under Britain's emergency powers regulations, suspected terrorists can be held by police for up to seven days before being charged.

Police sources, who asked not to be identified, said McGlinchey was being questioned about "between 15 and 20 murders" in Northern Ireland. Police said he also faced questioning about 200 other shootings and bombings.

The INLA to which McGlinchey belongs is a Marxist offshoot of the Irish Republican Army. Both guerrilla groups are fighting to end British rule in Protestant-dominated Northern Ireland and unite it with the overwhelmingly Roman Catholic to end 62 years of partition.

Irish Prime Minister Garret FitzGerald said the Irish Supreme Court's speedy ruling to extradite McGlinchey made it clear that those who commit offenses in Northern Ireland can no longer be assured of refuge in the Republic by claiming their offenses were politically motivated.

Official: Theft of aid not 'rampant'

WASHINGTON (AP) — A top U.S. foreign aid official says theft of American economic assistance to El Salvador is not "rampant," although that nation's safeguards against corruption need improvement.

Jay Morris, deputy administrator of the U.S. Agency for International Development, conceded that Central American accounting procedures are inadequate to ensure proper use of U.S. assistance, but said that problem will be corrected by the time Congress acts on a major aid increase this year.

"I honestly do not believe that we have a serious corruption problem in El Salvador — certainly no worse than found in most of our recipient countries," Morris said in a recent interview with The Associated Press.

Congressional concern about alleged misuse of U.S. aid in El Salvador has grown since President Reagan's National Bipartisan Commission on Central America recommended $8.4 billion in U.S. economic aid to the region over the next five

Some members of Congress nave questioned whether El Salvador and the other major recipient nations, Honduras and Costa Rica, can effectively handle the stepped-up aid.

Defense opens case for four men in second barroom rape trial

FALL RIVER, Mass. (AP) — A defense lawyer says it's a "different jury and a different trial" for four men charged with raping a young mother on a barroom pool table, despite the conviction of two other defendants in the case.

The defense for the four men opens its case today in the shadow of the guilty verdicts handed down Saturday in the case of Daniel Silva and Joseph Vieira.

It took a jury of eight men and four women 5½ hours — including an hour lunch — to find Silva, 27, and Vieira, 28, guilty of aggravated rape in the March 6, 1983, attack on a woman in a New Bedford bar.

The two Portuguese immigrants face up to life in prison and possible deportation. Sentencing has been scheduled for Friday.

The conviction set off a dramatic courtroom scene and angry shouts of "Racists!" from a crowd that jeered the jurors as they left the Fall River courthouse.

Vieira's father, Joseph Vieira Sr., was arrested on charges of disorderly conduct in the parking lot outside the courtroom.

But despite the emotions of the weekend, attorneys think the verdict won't affect the second trial that is expected to go to a separate jury this week.

"Although I'm disappointed in the result, I think my client is going to receive a fair consideration," said Francis O'Boy, the attorney for defendant Virgilio Medeiros. "It's a different case and a different jury."

Court officers face the task of keeping news of the verdict from that second jury. While the afternoon jury deliberated on Saturday, the morning jury was away from this seaport city on a bus trip in western Massachusetts.

Chief Court Officer Peter Cordeiro plans extraordinary steps to keep the jury isolated. The windows of the bus that takes them from their motel will be covered, and they will be kept busy with other activities when they are not in court.

"This has been a real challenge so far," said Cordeiro. "It's going to be even tougher now."

Medeiros, Jose Medeiros, Victor Raposo and John Cordeiro are charged with aggravated rape for their alleged part in the barroom attack.

They are being tried separately because of statements they gave police.

Children opt for honesty

CRESSKILL, N.J. (AP) — Six children who found a businessman's briefcase containing $2,200 cash and $4,000 in checks fantasized about what they could buy with the money, then returned it to its rightful owner, the mother of one of the youngsters says.

For their honesty, the children received a total $200 reward and were promised baseball gloves sold by the businessman's company, said Arlene Cohn of Alpine.

Mrs. Cohn said she was driving her daughter and the other youngsters to school Friday when they came across the briefcase on the road.

Police search for men

TRUTH OR CONSEQUENCES, N.M. (AP) — State police were searching for three men who may have been with four children and a woman who apparently drowned while boating at a state park.

The three boys and a girl, who appeared to range in age from 3 to 8, and a woman in her mid-20s, were discovered Sunday by Elephant Butte State Park police. The identities of the victims were not released.

Inmates' tunnel found

LOMPOC, Calif. (AP) — The U.S. marshal's office was investigating an apparent escape attempt at Lompoc federal prison involving an elaborate 80-foot tunnel, equipped with lights and a railroad track.

Six inmates worked as long as six months to build the tunnel.

Marriage gets off to running start

BELLEVUE, Wash. (AP) — Bruce Leone and Sharon Johnston-Bonora's marriage got off to a running start, and their hands were still clasped at the finish line.

In formal attire — a silver sweatsuit for the bride, royal blue for the groom — the two were wed as they jogged across the Mercer Island floating bridge Sunday in Seattle's Emerald City Marathon.

They set out single, holding hands, a full minute behind the leaders in the 26.2-mile marathon. When rice rained on them more than four hours, 45 minutes later, their hands were still clasped, helping each other across the finish line.

"This relationship could endure anything," said an exhausted Mrs. Leone afterward.

The marriage ceremony took 20 minutes, 47 seconds, according to the minister's digital stop watch. It was not a personal best: the rehearsal took 18:55. But endurance rather than speed, they said, will help them through their marriage.

Mrs. Leone, 29, a paralegal, and her husband, 30, a cabinetmaker, met at a party celebrating Sharon's finish in last year's marathon. Once Leone proposed, they sought a ceremony that expressed their values, she said.

One of their biggest hurdles was finding a minister who could perform the ceremony while jogging backwards across the 1.5-mile bridge linking Seattle and suburban Bellevue.

The Rev. Cliff McCrath, a Presbyterian minister, said that when he heard of the plans, he considered it a gimmick and refused to perform the ceremony. But the minister said he changed his mind after talking to them.
