

PRESBYTERIAN SENIOR ENCAMPMENT OPENS

Eleven Teams Already Entered in Tournament

Through the Editor's Spectacles
By GEORGE

How often have we heard the remark: "The good old days." Many of us have a positive nostalgia for the past, a yearning based on a sentimental regard for those remembered pleasures from which time and distance have removed the bitter. But, as a matter of fact, were the "good old times" so good, after all?

Regarding the denist of 1850 and comparing his methods with the skill and science employed by the dentist of today. Regarding the kerosene lamp, the wood stove and, of course, the horse-drawn buggy of 35 years ago, and comparing these implements of the past with the electric lights, the automobiles of today. It is quite obvious that the modern housewife who turns a tap for hot or cold water has a decidedly better time of it, so far as the mechanical equipment of her cultivation goes, than the pioneer other who drew her water from well and heated it over a cook stove.

What most of those who yearn for the good old days are really implying of, is the mental and spiritual maladjustment of modern man to his lot. They yearn for simplicity and its freedom from the hurry and worry that marks the modern day with all its multiplicity of responsibilities and activities. Few indeed of are those fortunate persons who can live serenely in times of stress and trouble. Few indeed, those who can assume burdens of administration beyond an ordinary pursuit and maintain that wholesome sense of mind and balance from which springs real contentment. Most of us get all tangled up in the affairs of every day life, so tangled, indeed, that we cannot make heads or tails of what we are doing or where we are going. We are not in need of the good old days so much as we are in need of balance, a proper and orderly disposition of the mental and nervous system.

Cisco Girls Rap DeLeon 3 to 0 Friday Evening

Pitching three-hit ball, Greer beat the De Leon girls Friday night even though her teammates made seven errors. She got good support, however, in tight places, and her team collecting three hits and three runs in the fourth, the local Kleiner girls won.

It was a pitcher's battle all the way. Ash, for the losers, except for the fourth, held Cisco scoreless, giving up only five safe hits during the game.

VETERANS TO COMPETE FOR AWARDS HERE

Leading Soft Ballers Signed; Hot Games Due for Fans

Cisco takes the lead in the west Texas sports spotlight this week when a soft ball tournament, featuring the leading teams of the entire west Texas vie at the soft ball park here.

Eleven such teams had already accepted invitations sent by the Cisco Lions, sponsors of the Cisco soft ball league and sponsors of the tournament, Smitty Huettis, head of the group in charge of tournament preparations, announced Saturday.

Cisco soft ball fans, as well as those of all Eastland county, are promised a week of the best soft ball performances of the season when the veteran ball clubs tangle competing for the tempting prizes to be offered by the local Lions.

A total of approximately $150 in prizes will be awarded the winner of the tournament and the runner-up. Entrance fee of $10 is being charged each team.

Those teams, which Saturday had already made it known they will compete in Cisco first tournament are Coca Cola of Abilene, Coca Cola of Eastland, Hanlon Officers of Breckenridge, Texas Pipe Line of Breckenridge, Baird, Coleman, Rising Star, Graham, Red Front of Cisco and Jaycees of Cisco, and one other team from Eastland which had not been determined Saturday.

Elimination

The tournament will not be a round-robin schedule, but will be elimination. When a team loses once, it is out of the running.

There is strong possibility that two other teams will be entered, it was said.

During the period of the tournament, two nine-inning contests will be held each night, giving promise of enough entertainment to satisfy even the most ardent sports fans.

Prices for the tournament will be 10 cents to all persons to enter the park and 10 cents for grand stand seats, officials announced.

Special Meeting of Boy Scouts Sunday

Scoutmaster Hittson announced that there will be a special meeting of all scouts and scout leaders at the First Presbyterian church at 2 o'clock Sunday afternoon for making final arrangements for camp.

It will be decided which period of the camp the Cisco scouts will attend and other necessary details discussed. The boys will be given their final instructions as to what to bring, from where and to meet, etc.

Eastland County Farmers Who Have Overplanted Cotton to Be Notified

According to Harry K. Westerman, assistant in agricultural conservation in Eastland county, each cotton farmer who has overplanted his cotton allotment for 1938 will be notified of the fact as soon as compliance has been checked on his farm and the measurement calculated in the county office in order that he may destroy it if he desires to do so before it forms bolls.

If a producer is overplanted, unless he destroys the excess acreage before it forms bolls he will have to pay 2c a pound to sell the cotton produced on the excess acreage.

In addition to the tax, he becomes ineligible to receive a cotton price adjustment payment.

According to a statement by Westerman, all 1937 cotton producers who do not overplant their 1938 cotton acreage allotment are eligible for an additional payment on their cotton produced in 1937 and sold before July 1st, 1938. This payment is to be made on 65 per cent of their base production. On practically all cotton sold since September 10th, 1937, this payment will be 3c.

Late Pioneer and Great Grandchild

Charles Buchanan Jenkins, 81-year-old Eastland county pioneer whose funeral will be held this afternoon, is shown here in a recent picture holding a great-granddaughter, Freshia Jane Chauncey.

Dies Today for Oldest Eastland County Resident

Three weeks of illness with heart trouble ended fatally Friday afternoon at 3:55 o'clock when Charles Buchanan Jenkins, 81-year-old Eastland county pioneer, died at his home, 504 East Tenth street. Funeral services will be held at 3:30 this afternoon from the First Methodist church with the pastor, the Rev. Joe I. Patterson, officiating. Burial will be in Oakwood with Green Funeral home in charge of arrangements.

Turned First Plow Furrow

Mr. Jenkins, who was credited with having turned the first plow furrow in Eastland county in those early days when most people considered its soil fit only for cattle raising, was, so far as could be ascertained, the oldest Eastland county citizen in point of residence. Born in Saratoga Springs, Ky., on March 1, 1857, he came to Texas in 1870 with his sister and brother-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Townsend, locating first in Comanche county. One year later he came to what is now Eastland county, settling at Lem Switch.

His early life was filled with the hardships and adventure which characterized those early days, not the least of which were battles (CONTINUED ON PAGE EIGHT)

The president was expected to give edge to Thomas.

MISS JACOBS RE-ELECTED

To be Band Sweetheart For Coming Year

Miss Marian Jacobs, high school junior, has been elected sweetheart of the Cisco high school Lobo band for the third year in a row, it was announced Saturday. Miss Jane Moore has been selected head drum major for next year.

The band, under the direction of June Morehart in the absence of Robert Maddox, band director, will play a concert at Lake Cisco Monday night at 7:45.

During the coming week, Mr. Maddox will be attending a school of march music being conducted at Lubbock during the week by Director Mack Hindsley, outstanding band director from the University of Chicago.

There will be a meeting of the band parents club Tuesday evening at 7:30 in the high school band room, it was announced Saturday. All members were urged to attend.

Mayor Berry Due Back From Trip

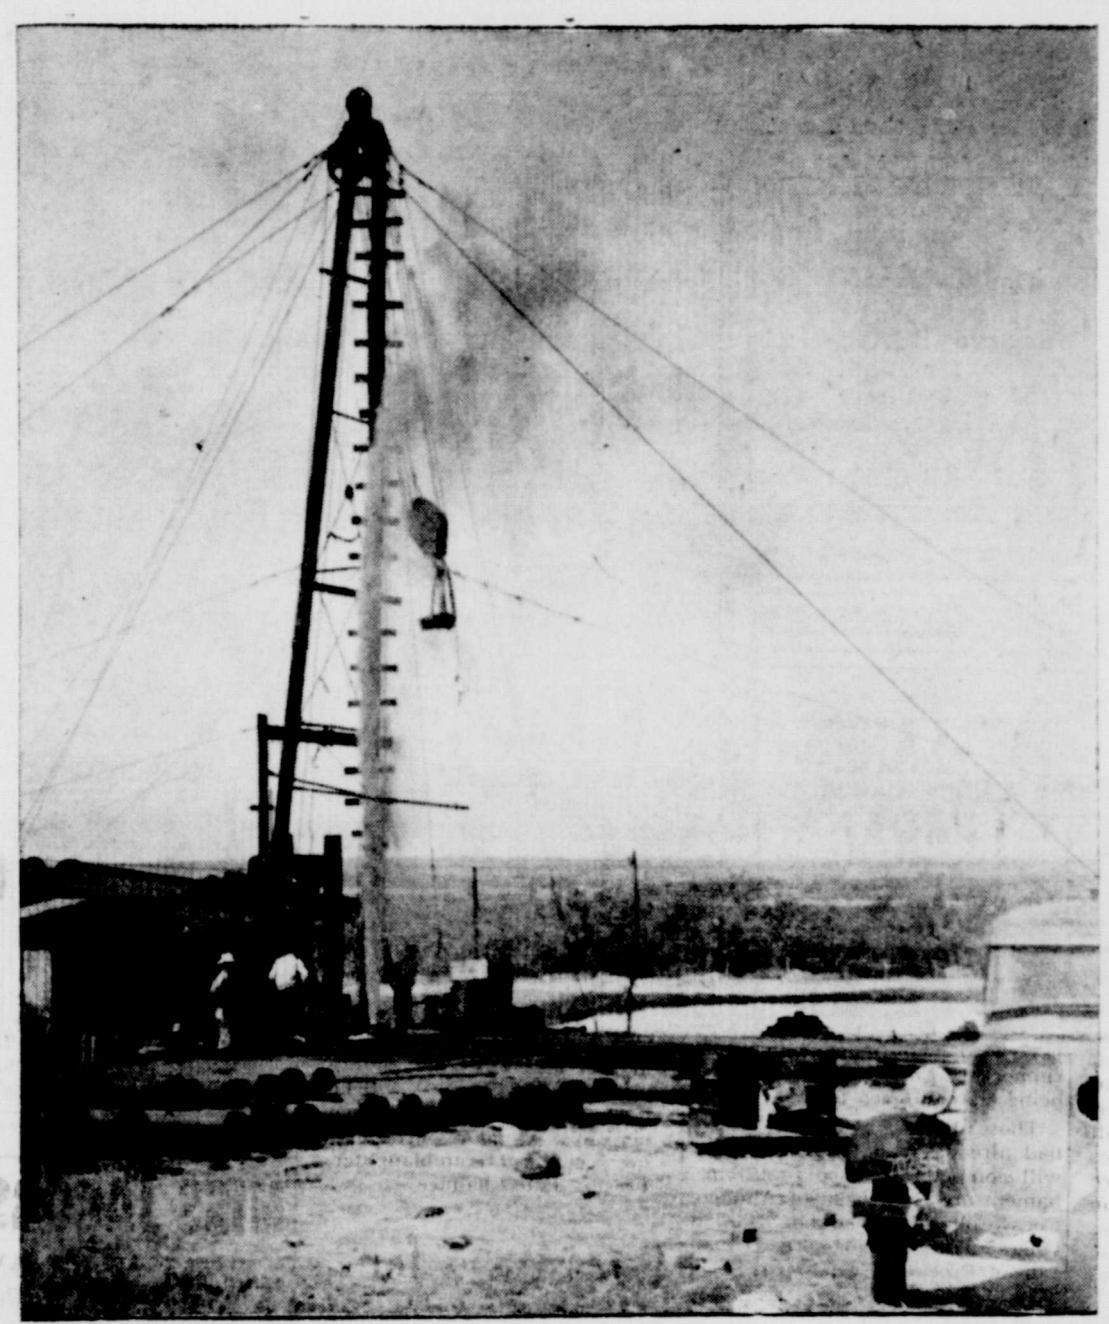

Mayor and Mrs. J. T. Berry and their son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Phil Berry of Stanton, Texas, were to return Sunday from Galveston where they went Thursday on a brief vacation trip, according to a card from Mayor Berry to Connie Davis. The four stopped at the Hotel Galvez where Mr. Berry wrote that he had a room in the basement.

Nazarenes to Begin Bible School Monday

A daily vacation Bible school will begin at the Church of the Nazarene Monday morning at 9 o'clock in a session lasting until 11:45 o'clock. Classes will be held each morning between those hours during weekdays, except Saturdays, for two weeks.

Miss Ava Lou Hall will conduct the school to which children in age from 6 to 16 years, or older, are invited.

Lake Sand Discovery Does Its Stuff

Snapped just as it began heading the other day, the Rich Andrews No. 1 Lake Sand find 16 miles north of Cisco, is shown in this photo making a flow through six inch from only one foot in lake sand. The well, bottomed at 2,667 feet, is to be produced without further drilling. Tubing has been run and an initial test rated it at 120 barrels daily. Operators say its flow would be materially increased by deepening, but production rules will allow no more than 100 barrels production a day and well owners plan to produce it as it stands for the present.

Veteran, Back From Reunion, Had a Big Time, He Reports

Greatest Joy Was Companionship of Old Soldiers, Says

(By CECIL EDWARDS)

Looking very well after his trip, David Blackshear Perdue, Cisco confederate veteran who attended the Blue-Gray reunion, arrived home Saturday morning at 2:20.

"I couldn't have asked for a better trip. Everything for our comfort was given us and it wasn't hard at all. I enjoyed the journey," said Saturday Perdue when interviewed Saturday afternoon.

Mr. Perdue, who will be 92 on October 16, and Wiley Wood Foster, 93, of Atwell were the only two from this area who were at the reunion. Mr. Fred Sieffey, son-in-law of Mr. Perdue, was his attendant. A son attended Mr. Foster.

No Ill Feeling

The greatest enjoyment of the entire reunion was the fellowship. The hatchet between the Yankees and us was buried; there was no ill feeling. The Yankee ladies also treated us as nice as anyone could ask. During the day while we were not being carried by bus to see the different sights in the area of the Gettysburg battlefield, we just talked with each other and listened to stories of our home states and recalled old stories.

Scouts Receive Awards at Court of Honor Friday

The highest honor rang in scouting—that of Eagle scout—was awarded J. C. Paschall and Jack Lauderdale, both of Troop 101, Friday night at the court of honor held at the First Methodist church. Preceding the award the two candidates re-dedicated themselves to the high principles of the scout oath and law in an impressive candle-lighting ceremony after which the boys mothers, Mmes. Crigler Paschall and J. D. Lauderdale, pinned the coveted Eagles on their sons' chests.

Short talks of congratulation and inspiration were made by Scout Commissioner Horace Condeley and Judge Eugene Lankford. All scouts were urged to follow the example set by the Eagle scouts and to strive to reach the high goal as soon as possible.

2 Million Gas Encountered in Johnson Well

Gas production, estimated at 2,000,000 cubic feet, was encountered within one and one-fourth miles west of Eastland this week as Dorothy Oil company's No. 1 Mrs. J. L. Johnson drilled through sand from 1,482 feet to 1,488 feet.

Located in the east half of the southeast quarter, section 29, block 4, H&TC survey, Eastland county, five miles northeast of Carbon. Depth of 1,650 feet is contemplated.

Unconfirmed was the report Hayter, Reeves and Hise are to plug back in the 2,500-foot vicinity in their No. 1 P. C. Larkin, three and a half miles northwest of Rising Star, section 40, block 2, ETRR survey, Eastland county.

Also in the Rising Star area, five miles northwest of the city, J. F. Baker No. 2 N. T. Mullory, section 1, William Ahrenbeck survey, Eastland county, was drilling at 1,750 feet.

In Palo Pinto county, two and a half miles north of Strawn, Palo Pinto Oil and Gas corporation was underreaming six-inch at 3,000 feet in the No. 21 Strawn Coal company and the expected gas pay-off vicinity was believed near.

Drilling was at 5,025 feet on the Gallagher-Lawson et al No. 1 Mrs. Bobbie I. Terry, still in Ellenberger line topped at 3,404 feet. It is in the N. H. Kuykendall survey.

In the Ellenberger area eight miles northwest of Cisco, Hickok Producing and Development company No. 1 G. C. Cleveland, section 476, SPRR survey, Eastland county, at 1,500 feet was drilling.

Across the county line, in Stephens, Lone Star Gas company No. 1 E. H. Brooks, section 54, block 7, T&P survey, projected gas test, was drilling at total depth of 1,800 feet.

Many other wells in this immediate area were shutdown.

Wheat Growers Should Make Work Sheets

All wheat growers should make work sheets on their farms according to Harry K. Westerman, ass't. in agricultural conservation.

Due to the estimated large yield of wheat in 1938 there is a probability that a marketing quota will be placed on wheat harvested in 1939. As this is probable, all wheat growers in Eastland county were urged to come to the county agent's office and make a late work sheet on their farms. Those producers who have already made work sheets should call and give the acres planted and yield per acre for the past 10 years. If the marketing quota is placed on wheat in 1939 and a producer does not receive an allotment he will have to pay a tax on all wheat produced and sold in 1939. Therefore it is very important that all wheat growers visit the office and make a work sheet or give the necessary information at once.

Farmers who are growing wheat for the first time in 1938 can receive an allotment for 1939. This allotment will come out of the state reserve. All farmers who have had wheat in 1935, 1936, and 1937 will receive their allotment out of that set aside for Eastland county. Those growing wheat for the first time in 1938 should report that fact in order to receive an allotment.

While at the county agent's office they should contact J. D. Guy, Eastland county federal crop insurance supervisor and discuss insurance on their 1939 wheat crop.

Jap Is Sentenced for Anti-War Sentiment

TOKYO, July 9 (AP)—An example of Japan's fear of anti-war sentiment among her people appeared recently when the Supreme Court validated a four months' prison sentence meted out to a man who merely whispered his thoughts on the China conflict to a friend.

Japanese police charged that Sukeichi Okada and an unnamed friend were engaged in a casual conversation aboard a Tokyo-bound train. When their voices dropped to mere whispers, the report read, a woman passenger near them became suspicious.

She proudly testified, in Okada's trial, that she eavesdropped and heard him voice anti-militaristic thoughts. The woman was highly praised for her patriotism.

INTERNE TROUBLE

BY ELINORE COWAN STONE
COPYRIGHT, 1938, NEA SERVICE, INC.

CHAPTER I

Tran Dearborn entered Saint Vincent's as a student nurse with any one's having taken the trouble to warn her that, in a big hospital, the lowest form of human life is a probationer. . . . Over than the callowest of the ones — although even Tran would see that their assumption of tiny sophistication was often but a thin cloak to hide panic and a stinging sense of bewilderment. When Tran's mother had chided her "Tranquility," her husband had warned her that she was a disaster. And anyhow," he had said, "don't suppose any one is going to call her that, do you?" And, of course, no one did. Tranquility seemed so prepositously out of keeping with anything that was Tran Dearborn. Perhaps that was because her body, with its restless dance-feet, and hands that would slip into quick gestures unless held them tightly clasped, needed to be driven by a nervous amo too powerful for its size. . . . More likely it was because her eyes. . . . Those wide, dark eyes of Tran's out of proportion to her small face, with the dusting of freckles over a high-bridged nose that might have been shy if it had not been faintly yellow — often gave her a resemblance to a startled fawn on the eve of flight. . . . That is, you saw them at one of those times when her sense of humor the best of her most paining endeavors to look gravely helpful — while the head nurse explaining the house rules to the probationers, for instance. . . .

Such times Tran managed to her other features composed a earnestly respectful look by her cheeks hard — but her she never could control, even when they were wide. . . . Of course people had not really d her "Tranquility" even in early school days at Miss d's of Virginia, or later, after mother and father had died. Aunt Clara had taken her one Continental school to another. . . . All that was before knew that she would have a to earn with her own hands. . . . It was not until she entered training school at Saint Vincent's that people really began to see the delightful possibilities for parody presented by her given name.

One day, during her first few weeks at the hospital, she was taken with a group of other student nurses on a demonstration tour of some of the less exciting wards. The itinerary happened to lead them past the open door of the Emergency reception room at the very moment when a police ambulance clanged up and stopped outside; and two uniformed figures hurried in, supporting between them a limp, bleeding man.

The rest of Tran's group passed demurely on, headed by an older nurse. . . . But not Tran.

This "that was" happening in Emergency was the kind of thing she had hoped she was coming to the hospital to learn about. Up to date she had not had an opportunity to learn about much of anything except unexciting matters like the anatomy of the circulatory system, and how to make beds — and above all, how not to address one's superiors. . . . Among other things — as Tran had discovered after several disheartening experiences — "probes," as the probationers were vulgarly called, did not make brash suggestions to their betters unless asked for them.

Now, as Tran stood entranced with curiosity, some one else came along the corridor and halted outside the door of Emergency. Glancing over her shoulder, Tran saw a tall, handsome man whose spotless white linen emphasized his look of glowing cleanliness and vitality and self-confidence; and whose arrogant nose and deep-set blue eyes suggested a native impatience not too firmly leashed.

Tran's heart missed a beat as she recognized him. Only the day before some one had pointed Dr. Sargent out to her as the most brilliant surgeon — and the most gosh-awful man to work under — in the whole hospital. It was his "gosh-awfulness" that had won for him the nickname of "Top Sargeant," clipped for convenience to "Top Sarge."

To make a mistake when you were helping him was as much as your uniform was worth. . . . To be personally requested to assist him at an operation was the equivalent of a royal command. That was the mark Tran had set herself to shoot at.

Now the dark, friendly young interne on duty in Emergency glanced up from the figure the officers had placed on the table and called, "Oh, Dr. Sargent, please! If you have a minute, I'd appreciate some advice, sir."

The tall white-clad figure went into the room. After a hasty glance up and down the corridor, Tran recklessly slid in after him. The two men bent over, studying the angry red hole in the bare patch the interne had exposed on the patient's right shoulder. Tran, fascinated beyond thought of caution, eased herself closer, until her breath was almost upon the backs of their necks.

"Pretty deep, shouldn't you say, sir?" the interne suggested deferentially. "I think I'll need a probe."

"A probe by all means," Dr. Sargent agreed.

Tran could hardly believe her ears. "Probes," she had been told, never got within a mile of operations — much less to help with them. Yet the Emergency interne had undoubtedly said that a "probe" was needed; and the terrifying "Top Sarge" had agreed with him. It seemed providential that she was on the spot.

Tran cleared her throat so sharply that they both jumped and turned, frowning at her. "Perhaps," she said breathlessly, "perhaps — wouldn't I do? I'm one a — probe, I mean," she hurried on — as if her gray dress and voluminous apron were not sufficient advertisement of her low estate.

The young interne's face underwent a sort of convulsion; he turned his back and made a disconcerting noise that sounded like a cross between a sneeze, a sob, and a smothered prayer. The terrible "Top Sarge" just stood, looking. But something in the way he looked gave the effect of an amazed Olympian surveying from the heights a particularly insignificant worm.

Tran's heart began to sink. She couldn't be mistaken. He had definitely said, "A probe, by all means." . . . Later, of course, she was to learn that when a surgeon asks for a "probe," the chances are at least one to a billion billion that he does not mean a student nurse, but a surgical instrument used for extracting embedded solids. . . . Now she only understood that something was terribly wrong.

Nevertheless, she persisted, "I mean — well, you did say you needed a 'probe,' didn't you?"

"And even so," Top Sarge spoke with a chilling politeness, "may I ask what you happen to be doing in here?"

Tran put her hands into the pockets of her uniform to keep them from shaking.

"I was — well — looking," she managed to get out. "I — desperately strove for a more chatty note — a hospital is such an interesting place — don't you think?"

Then — because the more frightened she was, the more irresistibly she wanted to laugh — she took her cheeks hard between her teeth; but her traitor eyes got bigger and darker and shinier in her pale little face.

"So interesting," he said, his own eyes like remote blue ice, "that if you're quite through sight-seeing here, I would appreciate your going to do your looking elsewhere."

After a quivering instant, Tran went, with what dignity she could muster.

"And who, Benchley," Dr. Sargent demanded, "would that leather-brain be?"

Young Benchley grinned. "Her given name — believe it or not — is Tranquility — Tranquility Dearborn," he said. "But she's more popularly known as 'Utility.'"

"And what, in heaven's name, is she doing in this hospital — or any other, for that matter?"

"Well — as her nickname rather neatly implies — just about anything that nobody else wants to do — heaven help her!"

Whether Heaven heard his prayer or not, not many minutes had elapsed before Tran was to need the benefit of prayer.

Chapter II

With burning cheeks Tran fled down the corridor — away from those cruelly amused male voices in Emergency. For, although nothing was further from her ethical code than to eavesdrop, she had snickered. As for Top Sarge, of course, no one would have thought of questioning his right to be caustic, any more than if it had been a law of nature. He was "Top Sarge." Nevertheless that "leather-brain" did rankle.

Oh, well, all she had wanted anyhow was to pick up a little useful surgical information; and at least she did know now that the chances against any one's wanting a student nurse when he asked for a "probe" ran into astronomical figures.

She had a good deal of difficulty in finding a good deal of difficulty in finding the rest of the demonstration group, because no one had considered it worth while to tell her beforehand just where they were going, or why.

It began to occur to her that by this time Miss Miller, the senior nurse in charge of the group, just might have missed her. And Miss Miller had an unpleasantly direct way of asking questions.

In the end, it was the homely young interne from Emergency who set her feet in the right path. He came dashing around a corner just as she hastily shut the door to a private room which she had opened by mistake.

There had been a rather unpleasant moment just after she had opened that door. The patient, a florid blond lady, had sat up in bed and demanded in a shrill, lyric soprano, "For God's sake — is this a private room, or a subway station? All I want is a little peace. Heaven knows I'm paying enough for it."

The nurse in charge rustled hastily toward Tran, frowning and whispering, "Sh-sh!" And Tran again took to her heels.

So it was that as young Dr. Benchley hurried around the corner she ran directly into his arms.

"Well!" he gasped. "If it isn't our little Utility again! But say — whoever named you missed a bet. He should have made it 'Agility.' . . . For Pete's sake, kid — this is a hospital not a race track. You'd better get back where you belong."

Nevertheless he steadied her, grinning companionably down at her till she got her breath. . . . His grin somewhat mitigated her resentment. It transformed his dark face from an interesting ugliness to a flashing charm.

As a matter of fact, she found herself suddenly liking him so much that she utterly failed to notice that he was still supporting her; and although she took her cheeks firmly between her teeth, her eyes became starry wells of mischief.

"How about yourself?" she demanded. "After all, this isn't Emergency, either, is it?"

"Dr. Sargent," he said with dignity, "got so much interested in fishing for that bullet himself that he sent me out to take a telephone call for him."

"Just a couple of errand boys, aren't we?" Tran said.

She owed him that one for snickering.

He acknowledged the thrust with a crooked grin. Then, as an elevator whirled in the shaft behind them, he released her hastily, and thrust his hands into his pockets as if to keep them out of temptation.

"Say, listen, Agility," he admonished in a lowered tone, "don't let old Sarge get you down. He's a good egg really; but with half the females in this hospital making passes at him, you can't blame him for getting a little scratchy when he finds a new one breathing down his neck."

"Really?" Tran said with delicate venom. "Well, I can't imagine any one pursuing him from personal motives — unless she was looking for a chance to put poison in his soup."

"You wait. In no time at all, you'll be swooning with adoration when he passes, like all the rest of them," said Dr. Benchley, grinning down at her, his hands still in his pockets.

Then as a door opened down the corridor, he said swiftly, "Listen, Agility, if Miller misses you and sends out a search party, you might as well turn in your apron. . . . For your information, I just passed her little flock going into K-6. . . . If Miller asks embarrassing questions, he called softly as she turned away, 'the old one about having a nose bleed may work.'"

Tran sped off down the corridor.

K-6 was the Women's Surgical ward. By good luck the door stood open. Tran slid in like a slim gray wraith and joined the little group of aproned girls following Miss Miller's crisp white linen down the long room.

Miss Miller might have modeled for a Red Cross poster as the ideal nurse. She was erect and trim, blond and coolly lovely as a snow maiden, with quietly watchful blue eyes, slim, beautiful white hands, and an air of serene detachment which had won for her the nickname "the icicle." . . . Miss Miller was not a regular nursing instructor; but as a nurse, she was recognized as tops. Rumor had it that she was Dr. Stephen Sargent's favorite nurse — a rumor, Tran knew, which gave her enormous prestige throughout the hospital.

Now, "the icicle's" cool, quiet voice was explaining the organization and management of the long white ward through which they were passing; her graceful, beautifully groomed hands were pointing out the arrangements of the beds in their small curtained cubicles, the proper adjustment of lights for the comfort of the patients, the correct grouping of articles on the bedside tables, and other kindred matters which she called "the elementary groundwork of good nursing."

Meantime, on either side of the long aisle, the ward nurses — some graduates in their trim white uniforms, caps and white shoes, and a sprinkling of student nurses in gray striped dresses and white bibbed aprons — lined up at respectful attention as Miss Miller passed. That was because here Miss Miller was supervisor, and consequently senior nurse.

It was all rather like a military inspection. Tran found herself feeling absurdly small and insignificant as part of so much pomp and circumstance — and more than a little uneasy, even while she managed her most convincing expression of grave, respectful attention. . . . Had Miss Miller missed her? She was not long left in doubt.

When it was over, and Miss Miller had marched her double line of gray-clad girls back to their quarters, she summoned Tran with a lifted eyebrow and a backward inclination of her smooth blond head. The rest fled away with carefully restrained glances of curiosity and pity which were by no means lost upon Tran. . . . She had been seen then.

"The icicle" began crisply, "Now it's no use wasting my time with the one about stopping to tie your shoelace and getting lost. No," she went on as Tran half opened her lips, "nor the bromide about having had the nose bleed, either. They both grew whiskers years ago. . . . Besides, I'm not even going to ask you where you've been. Because I know."

"I'm sorry —" Tran began.

But Miss Miller raised a slim hand for silence.

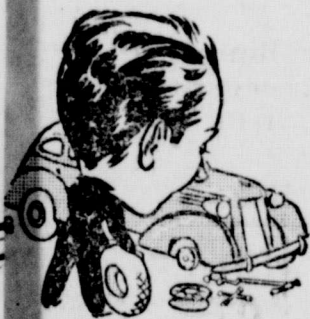

"I should prefer," she went on, "to let the matter rest between us. After all, it's no credit to me to have girls in my charge openly defiant of discipline. But unfortunately I am not the only one who saw you follow Dr. Sargent into Emergency. . . . I'm not even asking you why you did it. You can explain that to the Director of Nursing. I have repeatedly noticed in your attitude a tendency of frivolity which has no place in the nursing profession." . . . Miss Miller was one of Tran's superiors who had frequently found those uncontrollably dancing eyes of hers vaguely disconcerting. . . . "I might warn you," she went on, "that you will not find anything in Miss Armstrong's displeasure that you can laugh off."

It was just after Tran had finished discussing a particularly juicy and loathsome frog in the zoology laboratory next day and had gone to her room to clean up that the summons from Miss Armstrong came.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

In Christ Jesus we who sometimes were far off are made nigh by the blood of Christ. For He is our peace.—Eph. ii. 13, 14.

Why fret the soul
For things beyond thy small control?
Do but thy part, and thou shalt see
Heaven will have charge of them and thee.
Sow thou the seeds, and wait in peace
The Lord's increase.

We reap what we sow, but nature has love over and above that justice, and gives us shadow and blossom and fruit that springs from no planting of ours.—George Eliot.

Citizens Must Cooperate

THE step which the city commission has taken in applying for WPA projects for paving Cisco residential and business streets which are unpaved or are in need of repaving and for building a cottage community at Lake Cisco to accommodate tourists and vacationers who go there for recreation is most commendable. We were beginning to wonder if, while other towns and cities went after their parts of the large federal spending and lending program, if Cisco meant to pass up this opportunity to obtain large expenditures for employment and community improvement. The step that has been taken insures that Cisco is not asleep at the switch in this respect. Expenditure of this money is for the primary purpose of putting people who need employment to work and generating spending power to combat the so-called "recession." Objection to applying for it was based on the fact that Cisco as a municipality is deeply indebted. But the facts are that other cities not so far away are just as much up to the hilt in obligations that will be extremely difficult of meeting, if they are ever met, and these are obtaining projects of magnitude. They realize that this money is going to be spent, that it is going to be spent for a definite purpose of making economic conditions better, and that the WPA money that is thus to be used without indebting the communities which receive it, is in reality a debt against the whole nation of which Cisco and its sister towns and cities must eventually bear their prorate shares whether they get any of the funds or not. So, whether we like it or no, the spending program represents an additional debt, and the wise course to pursue is that which the city commission has taken to get the benefit of a share of these funds in providing employment and community improvement.

It is up to the residents and particularly the property owners to cooperate to an extent to permit use of the maximum funds which are regarded as certain of being awarded. The cost of participating in the paying program is so low that no property owner in need of paving can afford to withhold his support. It will be a mighty long time, no doubt, before another opportunity to secure valuable improvement so cheaply is presented. Moreover, the immediate effects of this cooperation in assuring the greatest amount of employment and the largest distribution of the benefits of this employment are important to community economic conditions next fall and winter.

Don't Slip the Poor Into Uniform

MORE and more, as "preparedness" agitation begins to gain force, eyes turn to the Civilian Conservation Corps. Those who believe in increased military preparedness are drawn, like flies toward sugar, to the hundreds of thousands of young men passing through the CCC.

Here, they reflect, is the raw material of armies, ready at hand.

Here are young, eager fellows, receiving outdoor physical training under the supervision of army officers, learning the rudiments of discipline in the necessities of living together. Why not utilize this material, ready at hand, as the nucleus of a military trained reserve? All it would take would be a little close-order and small-arms drill to convert this great body of youth into a valuable military reserve.

It sounds, superficially, attractive. But it ought to be resisted with the last ounce of strength.

THE key to the reason why this plan won't do was unwittingly uttered by Maj.-Gen. Hugh Drum in a message to CCC boys in the Chicago area. General Drum said:

"Enrollees come from all walks of American life..."

No, general. Enrollees come from only one walk of American life. That is the all-too-great stratum which has been unable to find a place in the "regular" economy of the country. The CCC enrollees are the children of need, and the sons of necessity.

That, general, is not the basis on which to build an army reserve. Quite apart from the question of whether increased military training is necessary is the question of how it ought to be provided if it is necessary. Thousands of boys have found no better school than the streets, no better occupation than idle wasting. For the government to give them an opportunity to go to the woods, live in a healthy manner, learn a trade and earn some money meanwhile—that is all to the good. But to go on from there and say, "Now we will also train you as soldiers, to be first if military need arises"—that would be a gross betrayal.

It would be a grave denial of democracy, and a mockery, in that even the European systems of universal service are more democratic, for they make all men subject to military training, not merely those for whom the economic machine has not been able to find a use.

If we are to have mass military training, or universal service, let us have it as such, so we will know where we are going, and not slide it in under cover of a civilian works program made necessary by other failures. If young men must train for war, let it be all young men, not a group made helpless by forces beyond them.

The name, general, is CIVILIAN Conservation Corps.

THE EIGHTY-EIGHTH DISTRICT COURT

(Judge Patterson, Presiding)

New Cases Pending

The following are cases of recent filing in the district clerk's office for litigation in the 88th court:

Mrs. Cecil A. Maxwell vs. R. W. Maxwell, divorce and custody of minor child, and for support of minor. Carrie Kearnes vs. C. H. Kearnes, divorce, custody and support of child.

Judgments and Orders

The following judgments were rendered in the 88th court the past week, but there were no assignments made for the coming week. Owing to the nearness of the July primary Judge Patterson stated it was difficult to get the parties ready for trial. The jury for the week was not called, but remained as drawn to be called when needed, so all jury cases tentatively set for hearing were passed for the week:

Cisco Mortgage & Loan Co. vs. L. A. Voorhees, debt. Judgment for plaintiff for $2,700.

Juanita Elen Woltz vs. Harley H. Woltz, divorce. Judgment for plaintiff for divorce and restoration of maiden name of Juanita Elen Daniels.

Willie Mae Jarrard vs. H. D. Jarrard, divorce. Judgment for plaintiff for divorce and custody of minor child.

By special order Judge Patterson formally opened the July term of the 88th court Monday with all officers of the court present.

THE NINETY-FIRST DISTRICT COURT

(Judge Davenport, Presiding)

New Cases Filed

The district clerk's records show the following new cases filed on the docket of the 91st court for hearing in that tribunal:

Nannie Walker vs. V. V. Cooper, note and foreclosure of trust deed. Marguerita Soto vs. Cristobal Soto, divorce. L. R. McGill vs. W. M. Weber et al, damages and injunction.

Judgments and Orders

July and August are dull seasons in the courts. Only a few orders were issued in either court the past week. And then, too, the approaching primary election interferes materially with litigation. Judge Davenport only handed down one decree during the past week when Eugenia Gann was granted a decree annulling her marriage with Millard O. Gann, which also authorized her to resume her maiden name of Eugenia Antee.

However, several convictions were had in criminal matters the week previous. Discussing the number of convictions for violating the criminal laws District Attorney Earl Conner, Jr., stated that in proportion to the number of cases tried there has been a greater number of convictions in the past two years than in any like time for several years. Convictions were had in all cases tried except two at this term of the 91st court.

THE DEPARTMENT OF THE COUNTY COURT

(Judge Adamson, Presiding)

Convenes Monday

The July term of the county court convenes Monday, with only a light docket in prospect. Juries had been drawn for the term, but it is doubtful if there will be any jury trials, as Judge Adamson said it is rare that jury trials are had during July and August.

One application for permit to sell beer at retail is pending for hearing. That of V. A. Stewart, at a location two and one-half miles west of Cisco, on the Bankhead highway.

Matters in Probate

The following probate business was transacted during the past week:

Mrs. Marie Gilman, petition for letters testamentary of guardianship of the person and estate of Jane Marie Gilman, minor. Approved and letters issued after petitioner had qualified by sub-pena to the required oath and the approval of her bond fixed at $28,000, with the United States Fidelity and Guaranty Co., by E. P. Crawford, attorney-in-fact, as sureties. A. H. Rhodes, E. P. Crawford and J. H. Reynolds were appointed appraisers of the estate.

Application of Norma F. Conway, administratrix of the estate of W. D. Conway, deceased, to sell real estate, was approved and order of sale issued. Report of sale was approved as filed.

H. A. Collins, guardian of the estate of Lurline Brawner, application to sell real estate. Approved, order of sale issued after hearing July 5. Report of sale approved as filed.

L. H. Morrison, petition for letters of administration of the estate of W. M. Morrison, deceased, approved and citation issued for hearing July 18.

Fred Rodgers, petition for letters of temporary guardianship of the estate of Roger Edward Hurst, Charline Hurst and Billy Guy Hurst, minors. It appearing to the court that offers are pending to lease real estate of said minors, and there being no legal guardian of these minors, it was the opinion of the court that application should be approved and letters ordered issued to petitioner for temporary guardianship, and it was so ordered. Citation issued for hearing on final action for July 18.

Licensed to Wed

The following couples were issued marriage licenses during the past week by the county clerk:

T. T. Love and Minnie Lee Quarles, Santo.

H. D. Hardin and Modes Mahan, Ranger.

Pete Hurst and Vida Payne.

J. T. Belknap and Myrtle Inez Pounds, Moran.

Dick Dillard and Minville Proctor, Pioneer.

Miss Porter Is Honored at Party Thursday Evening

The lawn of the First Methodist parsonage Thursday evening, Mrs. C. W. Trammell and J. Curry were co-hostesses at a party given honoring Miss Alyene Porter of Dallas, directing the Wesley Players during the month of July.

The lawn was lighted with rows of gaily colored Japanese lanterns, and chairs were placed for guests. Mrs. John Shertzer and Miss Marian Chambliss presided at the punch bowl, set on a covered table.

The feature of the evening's entertainment was the presentation of the one-act comedy, "The Flor Shop," by the Wesley Players. The playlet, given by a group of young people interested in studying dramatics, was received with much enthusiasm and applause. Miss Porter, dramatic director as well as director, gave several numbers.

Miss Porter, who is working in the interest of dramatics in the First Methodist church here this month, is former head of the drama department of the Cooke School of Dramatics in Dallas.

found none from the regiment I served in during the war.

Souvenirs.

"I had a big time and I enjoyed every bit of it," he said. When asked if he was glad to be home he said, "Yes, it surely is good to see the folks and home again."

Mr. Pardue exhibited a miniature souvenir confederate flag given each southern soldier present. He also had a new umbrella given him. He showed several articles, such as a pillow slip and other household articles which he brought back from Gettysburg.

"Everything that could be fixed for our comfort was prepared. We had plenty of good cats. It was estimated that the food prepared each day for the 2,000 veterans cost $1,000," he said.

Tent City.

All the old soldiers stayed in the tent city built at the historic Gettysburg site, he said. The streets between the tent shelters in which they stayed were of plank and the walks from the tents to the streets were of plank, too. "It was nice. There were planks all over the area."

Mr. Pardue said the soldiers were taken on several bus excursions, but that the most enjoyed part was the companionship between themselves.

"We liked the fireworks display every night." He said an enormous beautiful display was offered each evening.

"The day President Roosevelt came out to dedicate the Gettysburg Memorial there were more people there than I have ever seen in my life." Faulty hearing kept him from understanding much of the president's speech, but he enjoyed the service and thought the monument was beautiful.

The Cisco veteran looked hale and hearty after his journey. It seemed that the trip hadn't tired him at all.

Mr. and Mrs. Cotton Wallace of Odessa have returned to their home after a visit with Mr. and Mrs. S. O. Barnhill.

Methodists to Give Missionary Play Tonight

The Wesley Players of the First Methodist church will present a missionary play, "The Color Line," at the evening service on the church lawn Sunday.

The play tells of the life of a Chinese student in America and his struggles to retain his faith in Christianity in the face of race prejudice.

The cast has been assisted by Miss Alyene Porter of Dallas who is here to give dramatic instruction to the group during this month.

Included in the cast are: Louise Statham, Mildred Curry, Chrysolle Reynolds, Durward Boyd, Rev. Westfall and Thomas Stamey. The play is under the direction of Maxine Hampton.

Stage arrangements will be made by Edgar Noel and Virgil Meador, and the sound equipment is to be furnished by A. D. Estes.

The governor, the president said in a letter dated February 1 to Senator Logan of Kentucky, wanted him to "traffic in judicial appointments." The letter was written soon after Logan announced he would not resign from the senate to accept a judicial appointment. Resignation would have opened the way for Chandler to run for his seat. When Logan failed to step out, Chandler announced in opposition to Barkley.

But nomination is not equivalent to election except in the south and most primaries have been roundly attacked by Roman Catholic priests because they have expressed sympathy for the Spanish republic. Some of those with large Catholic constituencies are worried.
