Nirvana star dies

SEATTLE — Kurt Cobain, the troubled lead singer of the pioneering grunge rock band Nirvana, was found dead Friday in his apartment of an apparently self-inflicted gunshot wound to the head. He was 27. Cobain's mother, Wendy O'Connor, said her son had been missing for six days and that she had feared he would be found dead. "Now he's gone and joined that stupid club," she said, referring to the early deaths of such rock stars as Jimi Hendrix and Jim Morrison./11A

EXECUTIVE STALKER

Bright careers mask story of deadly obsession

By Tom Hays
Associated Press

NEW YORK — They found each other amid the city's tangle of disconnected lives.

Both executives, Rick Varela and Sarah Auerbach met last year at a wine tasting. They dated. She broke it off.

Then came harassing phone calls. She accused him of rape. More complaints followed.

Then on Thursday morning, Varela donned a disguise, followed Auerbach into a dry cleaning shop and pumped six bullets into her head in front of several customers. Sometime later, Varela shot himself in the head.

Varela's body was found early

'Megasavant' who was inspiration for award-winning 'Rainman' film unreels amazing feats of memory

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

Know the names of all the books of the New Testament, who played the first hockey game, what highways intersect Shamrock, the highest mountain in Australia and the third song on side one of the Beatles Sgt. Pepper's Lonely Hearts Club Band album?

Kim Peek does.

He answered those questions and others during an appearance before a crowd of about 500 at Alamo Junior High School Friday night.

Peek's ability to answer such questions stems from his extraordinary recall of nearly everything he has read and heard since a child. That includes the contents of more than 7,200 books.

A 43-year-old megasavant, Peek was the inspiration for the Academy Award winning movie "Rainman." Peek displayed the same feats of memory as depicted in the film.

Peek was described as more likely to know more facts than everyone who attended.

His demonstration of that encyclopedic knowledge was prefaced by an introduction by his father, Fran Peek.

Kim Peek was born Nov. 11, 1951, with a head about one-third larger than normal. Later it would be discovered that he suffered brain damage and that the two hemispheres of Ethnic strife, bloodletting tear Rwanda

■ Rival tribal factions wage vicious street battles; staggering scale of carnage begins to emerge.

N.Y. Times News Service

NAIROBI, Kenya — The Rwandan capital, Kigali, was convulsed by a second straight day of bloodletting and horror Friday, as rival tribal factions waged vicious street battles for control of the city.

The death toll of civilians, government ministers and soldiers — including at least 10 U.N. peacekeeping troops — was estimated to be in the thousands.

With Kigali virtually cut off from the outside world, save for radio links and a few working telephone lines, the United States, Belgium and France discussed steps to begin evacuating their citizens, trapped since the fighting plunged the city into chaos Wednesday night.

In Brussels, government officials said 800 paratroopers were standing by to evacuate about 1,500 Belgians now estimated to be in Rwanda, a former Belgian colony, if U.N. troops are able to secure a safety zone around the airport, until now the scene of some of the heaviest fighting.

The French, with 600 citizens inside Rwanda, also have troops on alert in the Central African Republic, and the State Department said it was considering plans to evacuate 255 Americans who are living in Rwanda.

So far, no Americans have been re-

Hosokawa's fall leaves political chaos in Japan

TOKYO (AP) — Prime Minister Morihiro Hosokawa stunned Japan by announcing his resignation Friday, leaving an unfinished program of ambitious reforms and political chaos that is likely to hinder change.

Hosokawa, who rose to power vowing to clean up Japanese politics, was felled after just eight months in office by precisely the same kind of scandal that plagued his predecessors: financial favors from a wealthy businessman.

Debate over Hosokawa's finances had paralyzed Parliament for more than a month, delaying approval of a budget and disrupting efforts to resolve a trade dispute with the United States.

There was no obvious successor in sight, though speculation focused on Foreign Minister Tsutomu Hata. Hosokawa's coalition is riven by ideological disputes, and analysts predicted at least several days of maneuvering ahead.

The 56-year-old prime minister was credited with pushing through several long-delayed reforms: curbs on political donations and a new election system for Parliament's lower house to replace a system blamed for fostering corruption.

Rios blasts Bonilla for 'milking' tax-credit bill

By Gary Shanks
Staff Writer

Rolando Rios, Democratic hopeful for the 23rd Congressional District in the November general election, took incumbent opponent Rep. Henry Bonilla to task Friday, calling him hypocritical over a bill to give tax credit to working families.

At a news conference at the Midland International Airport, Rios said Bonilla had voted against a bill to provide tax breaks to families with at least one dependent child less than $23,050 annual income.

Rios maintains Bonilla then tried to garner credit for the bill after it passed in spite of his "no" vote.

"With over 51,000 families in this district helped by the new tax credit, how could he vote against it," Rios said. "This is just one more example of how out of touch Bonilla is with the basic pocketbook needs of our families.

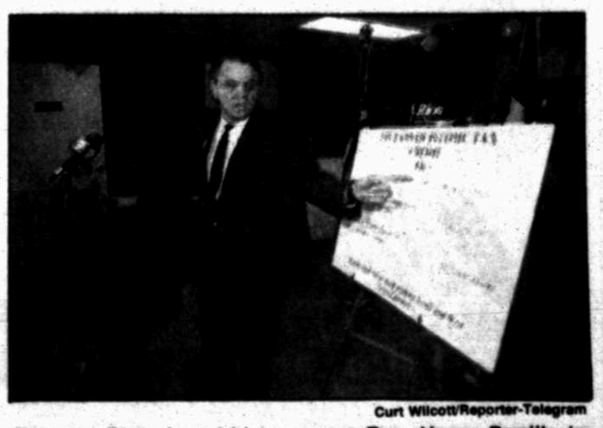

"If Henry Bonilla thinks it's more important to vote the Republican Party line than it is to represent the people of South and West Texas, then hard-working families here have more to fear from him than they do from the Internal Revenue Service," Rios said.

Rios further contends that Bonilla took credit for the tax break in comments to voters in the district.

A Washington, D.C., spokesman for Bonilla's office, however, said House Democrats were misrepresenting the facts.

"The congressman has always supported EITC (earned income tax credit)," the spokesman said. The congressman voted against

Austin's rotating bug flies to new location

AUSTIN (AP) — Willie-N-Festus, the giant rotating bug that has entertained Austinites for three decades, is buzzing to a new location.

Over the years, the 6-foot-long model termite has suffered the slings and arrows of outrageous fortune from atop his perch on the Terminix Company store.

The bug has been pierced by hunting arrows, stolen by fraternities and ridden by late-night revelers from a nearby tavern.

Willie has logged 234,000 miles — the distance to the moon — in his quiet rotations, store owner Bill Youngblood said Friday as workmen removed the bug to move it with Terminix to a new location across town.

Flames engulf abandoned house

Staff Report

No one was injured when an abandoned house at 102 N. Madison St. was engulfed in flames Friday at about 4 p.m.

Neighbors said the house was abandoned and they believed the fire to have started in an old mattress. Firefighters at the scene wore compressed air packs to enter the flaming, smoking structure. When firefighters arrived, flames from the burning building had ignited the yard and were threatening occupied adjacent houses.

Firefighters chopped holes through the roof to attack fires in the building's attic. Within 30 minutes, the fire was under control.

Fire Department investigators at the scene believed the fire was set, either intentionally or accidentally.

Plea ends stolen munitions case

Editor's note: A portion of this story was inadvertently left out of Friday's edition. This is the complete story.

By Tonie Miller-Uzzel
Staff Writer

An Odessa man charged with possessing stolen military munitions pleaded guilty Thursday in federal court to illegally possessing government property.

Jose Hector Flores Jr., 23, pleaded guilty in U.S. District Court in Midland.

Flores was charged with possessing stolen government property following a March 14 search of his home by the Odessa Police Department. The Odessa police secured a search warrant after receiving an anonymous tip that the munitions may be in Flores' possession.

Odessa officers found and identified at least nine military explosive devices including M-21 artillery simulators; a groundburst simulator; M-18 smoke grenades and a live 20-mm practice round.

The FBI was then called in to investigate. Agents determined the explosives were stolen from the U.S. Army at Fort Knox, Ky., where Flores was stationed while serving in the military.

A U.S. Army spokesman told FBI agents all of the explosives, except the smoke grenades, were manufactured and used exclusively by the military. The total value of the stolen equipment was $127.

Flores will be sentenced May 23.

UT to honor Hearst president, CEO, Bennack

AUSTIN — The College of Communication at the University of Texas at Austin today will present its most prestigious award to Frank A. Bennack, president and chief executive officer of The Hearst Corp.

Bennack is the recipient of the 1994 DeWitt Carter Reddick Award.

Established in honor of DeWitt Carter Reddick, who served as the first Dean of the College of Communication from 1965 until 1975, the award recognizes individual achievement in communications.

The presentation will be made today in Austin. Bennack also will give an speech, entitled "A Perspective on the New World of Communications."

Bennack heads one of the nation's largest private companies engaged in a broad range of publishing, broadcasting and diversified communications activities. He is, in addition, a member of the Hearst board of directors and of the corporation's executive committee.

Bennack is a native of San Antonio and is also a former member of the College of Communications Foundation Advisory Council. His early career in Texas included experience in radio and television as well as newspapers. He also served in a variety of management posts, including a seven-year tenure as publisher and editor of the San Antonio Light.

In his more than 30 years with Hearst and before becoming the corporation's chief executive in January 1979, Bennack served as executive vice president and chief operating officer of the corporation and as vice president and general manager of the Hearst Newspaper Group.

Under Bennick's leadership, The Hearst Corp. has diversified substantially and has expanded its operations, more than tripling in size. During his presidency, Hearst has acquired three television stations, 10 newspapers, including the Reporter-Telegram, two trade publishing companies, two major consumer magazines, a television production entity, and various syndication and distribution businesses.

Hearst also launched, with partners, two leading cable networks and a major investment in another. The corporation today includes more than 100 separate businesses and a total of more than 13,000 employees.

Bennack is a director of Chemical Banking Corp. and American Home Products Corp. He is also a governor of New York Hospital, a managing director of the Metropolitan Opera of New York and chairman of The Museum of Television and Radio. He was the 1992-93 chairman of the Newspaper Association of America (formerly the American Newspapers Publishers Association).

In recent years he has been honored for his charitable work by United Cerebral Palsy, the Retinitis Pigmentosa Foundation, the Inner City Scholarship Fund of New York. He received the Isaiah Thomas Award from the Rochester (N.Y.) Institute of Technology in 1990, the Gold Medal from the International Radio & Television Society in 1991, and the Trustees' Award from the National Academy of Television Arts and Sciences in 1993.

In addition, he is a trustee of the trusts established under the will of William Randolph Hearst and is a director of The Hearst Foundation of New York.

Florida man pleads guilty to making, mailing pipe bomb to San Antonian

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — An Orlando man pleaded guilty in federal court Friday to making and mailing a pipe bomb to a business associate in San Antonio, Texas.

John Dean Tsikouras, 28, mailed the bomb on Feb. 3 from Orlando to Angel Gonzalez of San Antonio, said Assistant U.S. Attorney James Glazebrook.

The bomb, which malfunctioned and did not explode, was capable of killing Gonzalez and anyone else in the room, Glazebrook said.

Glazebrook said the bomb also endangered the lives of U.S. Postal Service employees who unknowingly handled the package.

"This device could have exploded, could have killed Angel Gonzalez and could have killed anyone that handled it along the route," Glazebrook said.

Gonzalez received the package at his home on Feb. 5, opened it and pulled out a note that read "F YOU LARRY." The bomb was designed to detonate when the slip of paper was pulled out. Luckily for Gonzalez, a corner of the note tore off and remained stuck between two aluminum foil contacts.

Glazebrook said Tsikouras signed the note "Larry" to throw off investigators.

According to court documents, Tsikouras apparently mailed the bomb to Gonzalez to prevent him from coming to Orlando to check out a questionable business deal in which he had invested $30,000.

Gonzalez contacted Tsikouras on Jan. 30, less than a week before Tsikouras mailed the bomb, to tell him he was coming to Orlando in February to check on his investment. Court records show that Tsikouras had, however, already spent the money elsewhere.

Tsikouras said he only meant to scare Gonzalez, not hurt him, Glazebrook said.

The 8-inch-long pipe bomb could be made from readily available materials, Glazebrook said. The design for the bomb came from a book titled, "Improvised Explosives — How to Make Your Own," which Tsikouras had ordered in January, according to court records.

Drug bust

Staff Report

cc11p3 ODESSA — Cocaine and marijuana was confiscated and two people arrested in separate incidents on Thursday, reported the Permian Basin Drug Task Force.

Approximately 1 pound of marijuana and 1/16-ounce of cocaine were seized at 4307 Windover St. No. 31, officials said. Rodney Allen Burns, 36, of the same address, was charged with drug possession and posted a $10,000 bond, Ector County jail officials said.

In the second bust, officials seized ⅛-ounce of cocaine and 8 ounces of marijuana from a 112 Monticello Drive residence, officials said. Michael Edward Figert, 34, of the same address, was charged with drug possession and posted a $7,500 bond, Ector County jail officials said.

Arson, theft arrest

ODESSA — A juvenile was taken into custody Friday in connection with the arson and theft of a 1985 Dodge Caravan on Feb. 22, Odessa fire officials reported.

The 14-year-old was released due to the Ector County Youth Center being at capacity, officials said. More arrests are expected.

The youth is suspected of being involved in the theft of the vehicle from 509 W. 24th Street. The torched vehicle was found under the overpass of Comache trail park on Interstate 20.

Assault charge

ODESSA — An 18-year-old driver was charged with aggravated assault Thursday night for allegedley trying to run down someone, police reported. Meanwhile, a 15-year-old passenger of the car remained hospitalized Friday with a gunshot wound to the back.

Beauchan Antwion Bergen, 18, told police that a vehicle attempted to run over him several times at Cummings and Robertson streets. He told police he was hit at least once and then chased to an apartment complex in the 2700 block of Henderson Street, where he summoned help from relatives.

An unknown person fired two shots at the vehicle. One bullet entered the right back window striking a teen-ager in the back.

Jesus Lujan Galindo, 18, believed to be the driver of the vehicle, was later arrested for aggravated assault, police reported. Galindo is free on a $5,000 bond, jail officials said.

The gunshot victim, whose name was not released, was listed in stable condition at Medical Center Hospital.

If the shooter is identified, the case will be referred to the grand jury.

Scientists suspect virus in puzzling dolphin deaths

GALVESTON (AP) — Scientists believe a new virus first confirmed off the Florida Panhandle coast this winter may be responsible for one of the worst outbreaks of dolphin deaths on the Texas Gulf Coast.

Based on examination of a limited number of carcasses fresh enough to study, it appears dolphins literally drown in their own blood and body fluids that collect in the lungs, says Graham Worthy, assistant professor of marine biology at Texas A&M University in Galveston.

"We're dealing with very limited data," Worthy told The Houston Post. "Many of the dolphins we're getting are so badly decomposed, we can't even tell the sexes on some."

The suspected virus, which he identified as morbilli, attacks the central nervous and respiratory systems of weakened dolphins.

The virus first came to light in the late 1980s, when scientists researching dead seals near the North Sea stumbled onto its close links to canine distemper, best known in the United States as a potentially lethal virus in dogs.

But Worthy cautions morbilli is only one possible explanation and the reason for the deaths may never be fully explained.

So far this year, officials have recorded 157 dead dolphins and whales along the Texas coast. A volunteer group that tracks such discoveries, the Texas Marine Mammal Stranding Network, says the average number of deaths for an entire year is 150.

The majority of animals this year are washing up on Galveston and Bolivar Peninsula beaches.

As of April 6, volunteers had found 72 dolphins in the Galveston region and another 24 along the Bolivar Peninsula north to Sabine Pass, Elsa Haubold, the network's office coordinator in Galveston, says.

Spring is the peak dolphin-stranding season in Texas, with most occurring between January and April when physically stressed mothers are preparing to give birth.

Also, young dolphins are often pushed from their social cliques in the spring by mothers readying for new babies. Those young dolphins may stray into trouble or are not strong enough to make it on their own.

Scientists say what makes this season's strandings unusual, other than large numbers, is that most dolphins appear to be dying offshore and not in coastal waters and bays.

In addition, the dead animals this year are from all age groups, and not mostly youngsters and babies.

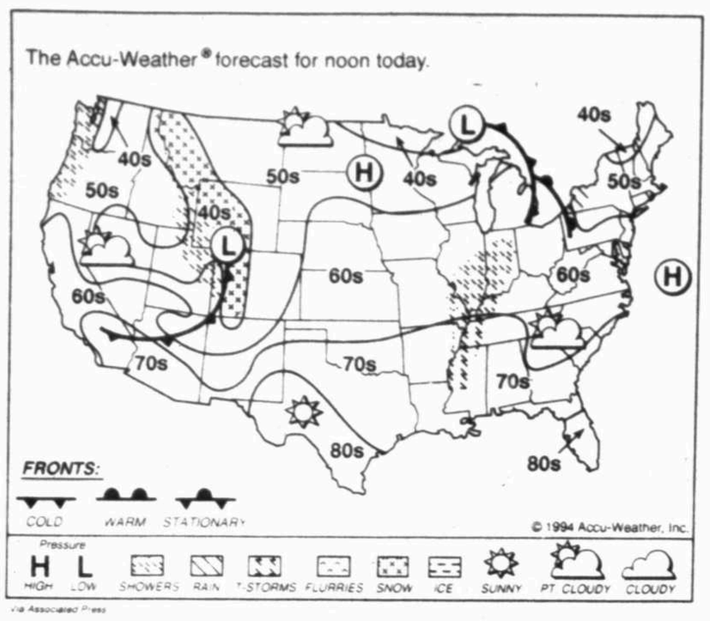

"This leads us to believe that some kind of viral outbreak has occurred offshore, probably in waters in line with East Texas," Worthy says.

WEATHER WATCH

Via Associated Press

Today's menu: clouds, winds, 85

Staff Report

Today's forecast calls for partly cloudy skies with a high near 85 and southwest winds 20 to 30 mph and gusty, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Tonight will be fair with a low near 50.

Sunday is expected to be mostly sunny with a high in the upper 70s.

After an overnight low of 47, Friday's high was 88 compared with the record high of that date of 95 in 1963. The record low for today's date was 20 set in 1973.

STATE

Moisture was streaming up from the Gulf of Mexico on Friday, setting up a dryline in West Texas that could trigger storms over the weekend.

"The dryline is a boundary, much like a front that sets up where the moist air from the Gulf meets the dry air in West Texas," the National Weather Service said in a statement.

"In the springtime, it often moves east into North Texas. If conditions are right it can trigger thunderstorms."

A surface ridge of high pressure extended all the way from New England southward into the Gulf of Mexico. At the same time, the trough of low pressure was deepening over West Texas, producing a strong low-level flow from the gulf, increasing humidity across South Texas.

A large area of middle and high clouds was moving eastward across Arizona and New Mexico into far West Texas, the Llano Estacado and the western half of the Texas Panhandle.

For the second straight day, gusty winds kicked up dirt over much of West Texas. Winds were generally south to southwest at 10 to 20 mph with higher gusts.

Afternoon temperatures Friday were mostly in the 70s and 80s. Highs today should be about the same, the weather service said.

NATION

It snowed in North Dakota and temperatures dipped into the 20s and 30s Friday from Mississippi into New England, just another spring day in the storm-battered Plains and Northeast.

A cold front over the Plains produced up to 4 inches of snow in North Dakota. Winds that gusted up to 46 mph rattled Bismarck, N.D., and Rapid City, S.D.

It was a frosty morning across New England, the mid-Atlantic region and the Ohio and Tennessee valleys. The early morning low was 26 degrees in Asheville, N.C., breaking the record for the date of 27 that was set in 1990.

Widespread frost was reported across much of Kentucky. Temperatures fell to 29 degrees in London, Ky., and 31 in Lexington, Ky.

Heavy rain fell on Oregon and Washington during the morning, and rain fell from eastern Iowa into Minnesota during the day.

Snow fell on the higher elevations of the Cascade Mountains and farther south along the Sierra Nevada range.

STRIFE: Carnage death toll in thousands

ported hurt in the fighting, although officials said their situation remained perilous.

But as Belgium pressed U.N. leaders to allow the 2,500 U.N. peacekeepers already based in Rwanda to use force, if necessary, the commander of the 400-member Belgian peacekeeping contingent in Rwanda said there was a possibility that a cease-fire between the warring factions could be reached as soon as this morning.

The U.N. secretary general, Boutros Boutros-Ghali, now in Geneva, sent a message to the Security Council in New York that any rescue operation would require 1,000 to 1,500 more troops.

Since gaining independence from Belgium in 1962, both Rwanda and Burundi, its equally small and poor neighbor to the south, have experienced tensions between the Hutus, who make up about 85 percent of the population, and the Tutsi tribe, who make up about 14 percent.

Col. Luc Marchal, the Belgian commander, told Belgian state radio that talks toward a cease-fire were under way, although fighting continued through the Friday. But a Red Cross worker said late Friday that the fighting appeared less severe in the afternoon than in the morning.

At the United Nations, the Security Council president, Colin Keating of New Zealand, said that the police and the army in Kigali had agreed on a cease-fire and nominated a new interim government.

It was unclear, however, if the Presidential Guard, which was responsible for much of the killing, had also agreed to ending the hostilities.

The interim government would include a president, Theodor Sindikuwabo, a prime minister, Jean Kambanga, and five other ministers, Keating said.

He said the security situation in the capital improved Friday afternoon and the Red Cross was able to move around the city freely and evacuate wounded people to hospitals. Outside the capital, conditions were reported to be calm.

While reports from the capital remain incomplete, the staggering scale of the carnage began to emerge Friday. Red Cross officials said their workers inside Kigali had counted more than 400 bodies in the morgue of one central hospital alone, and that the corridors of the hospital overflowed with wounded.

Along the borders of Rwanda, relief workers also reported that a steady stream of new refugees were fleeing toward Tanzania, to the southeast, and diplomats here and in Europe feared that unless the fighting could be stopped soon, the country was lurching toward all-out civil war between the Hutus and the Tutsis.

Earlier Friday, the leader of the Rwanda Popular Front, a rebel group dominated by the Tutsis and bitterly opposed to the Hutu faction that controls the central government, said the main body of the guerrilla force was moving toward the capital from strongholds in the heavily forested areas to the north, near the Uganda border.

While a leader of the rebel group, Paul Kagama, said the advance was intended only to restore order in the capital, diplomats feared it would almost certainly mean an increase in the fighting.

In Geneva, Boutros-Ghali ordered his special envoy in Rwanda to do what was necessary to restore safety to the city. The growing list of victims killed by the rampaging troops and gunmen looking to settle old tribal scores now includes the prime minister, more than 20 Rwandan nuns and priests, dozens of Rwandans employed by international relief organizations and a French soldier and his wife, who were killed in their home.

Senior U.N. officials have said they probably need an additional three batallions of soldiers in order to secure the airport. The 2,500 U.N. peackeepers now on duty in Rwanda are equipped with only light arms and have been mostly hunkered down in barracks since government troops turned their guns on them Thursday, killing 10 Belgians.

At least three other members of the U.N. peacekeeping forces who had been kidnapped by Rwandan soldiers are also still missing.

The Belgian soldiers were killed when they sought to hold back Rwandan soldiers and gunmen who had come to apprehend Prime Minister Agathe Uwilingiyamana, one of a handful of native Tutsis in the Hutu-dominated government, after she had taken refuge in a U.N. compound.

The violence that has consumed the capital was ignited late Wednesday night after an airplane carrying Juvenal Habyarimana, the president of Rwanda, and Cyprien Ntaryamira, the president of Burundi, crashed as it was approaching Kigali airport.

The Rwanda government said the plane, returning the men from a conference in Tanzania to discuss ending years of ethnic warfare in their countries, was shot down by a rocket fired by unnamed attackers.

According to U.N. officials, members of an elite presidential guard loyal to Habyarimana, a Hutu, almost immediatly set out to settle scores with Tutsis inside Kigali, where U.N. troops had until then been monitoring a shaky cease-fire signed between the two groups last August.

While the cease-fire had brought a temporary end to the fighting inside Rwanda, the two tribal factions had been unable to agree on a transitional government, and Tutsi political leaders had accused Habyarimana of blocking progress.

The heaviest fighting Thursday and Friday has centered around the Rwanda parliament building, where about 600 rebel troops were encamped, under terms of the cease-fire.

In part, the present animosities between the Hutus and the Tutsis is a legacy of the colonial era, when members of the smaller Tutsi tribe dominated the German and, later, Belgian colonial administrations that controlled this part of Africa during the 19th and early 20th centuries.

Festering resentment of the Tutsis among the Hutus, who are mostly peasants and farmers, exploded in tribal bloodshed in the early 1960s when Rwanda and Burundi became independent

In interviews conducted over patchy telephone and radio links and appearing mostly in French and Belgian newspapers and radio, diplomats, foreign residents and aid workers living in Kigali contributed Friday to a growing description of the chaos and terror that have overtaken the capital.

"There is continous fighting, there is pillaging and killing," reported Katrain Van der Schoot, a correspondent in Kigali for Belgian radio. A Belgian newspaper described the ordeal of Bernard Schyns, a Red Cross worker, who watched from his windows as armed men shot into houses, looted shops and left a dead man on his doorstep.

UNREELS: Real 'Rainman' displays talents

his brain were fused as one.

At 9 months, he was diagnosed as mentally retarded and the pediatrician recommended the baby be institutionalized. His parent kept him.

At 6 years old, a doctor suggested a lobotomy for Peek. His parents shunned the advice.

When Peek was 3, his parents discovered the toddler could read.

Today "if he wants to read really fast, he reads the left page with his left eye, the right page with his right eye," his father said. The ability to remember the information on the pages was described as "photographic."

But despite an extraordinary memory, Peek's reasoning and life skills are lacking.

"He can't remember how to shower and how to shave. . . . He just can't do little survival skills," his father said.

Nevertheless, Peek made some associations Friday evening that seemed to go beyond just recall. When answering some questions, members of the audience seemed a bit confused at the seemingly off-the-wall responses.

One young girl — instead of quizzing Peek about the day of the week a certain date fell on or one of Mozart's compositions — asked if the Midland Angels were going to win the game that night.

As with some other responses, Peek burst into an enthusiastic rendition of the sounds of a song.

One observant attendee recognized the song as "What's the Buzz," from the play Jesus Christ Superstar. The song relates Jesus' frustration on being asked by disciples and others to predict the future.

On a few questions, Peek responded incorrectly or appeared not to know the answer.

But overall his performance drew cheers and laughter from the crowd.

"The only thing bigger than his brain is his heart," his father said.

Indeed, an almost ever-smiling Peek appeared very affectionate, hugging and holding hands with everyone who asked a question.

STALKER: Bright careers disguise obsession

(From 1A)

Friday on a park bench in the elegant Brooklyn Heights section, along a promenade offering a striking view of the Wall Street world where Auerbach had prospered.

The suicide ended a dark story of obsession that stunned those who knew the pair as stable, successful professionals.

"We were shocked and saddened," said Mort Myerson of Ernst & Young, the accounting firm where Varela had worked for the past year.

"We're all in shock," said Robert Baker, spokesman for Salomon Brothers, the investment house where the 35-year-old Auerbach was a vice president in the financial division.

Auerbach was in the midst of a divorce after a lengthy separation, friends said. Last summer, she met Varela, a 46-year-old management consultant who was divorced and had recently moved to Manhattan from the Chicago area.

Their seven-month relationship ended in October. Then came a string of harassing phone calls.

On Nov. 19, Auerbach told police that Varela had appeared at her apartment the night before and raped her at knifepoint. But she did not press charges.

Less than a week later, Auerbach filed a harassment complaint after Varela allegedly showed up at her office. Private security guards at Salomon Brothers were given a photo of Varela and told to turn him away.

She filed another harassment complaint in February, but apparently never sought an order of protection from the courts.

On a visit to Illinois in late March, Varela legally purchased a semiautomatic handgun believed to be the murder weapon, said Lt. Raymond O'Donnell, a Police Department spokesman.

On Thursday morning, Varela drove a rented car to Auerbach's neighborhood. He waited for a few minutes in a bakery across the street from the dry cleaner she had patronized for seven years.

Tony Morales, who works at the bakery, said he was wearing a wig, granny glasses and a long military coat. When Morales tried to wait on him, he left.

Varela had watched as Auerbach dropped off her dry cleaning. He stole up behind her, put the gun to her head and fired several rounds.

"I thought it was a toy gun," said Sun Hi Song, wife of the manager at the cleaners. "It went off — Pow! Pow! Pow! . . . Then he just walked out of the store and she fell down to the floor."

Varela returned his rental car in midtown Manhattan, then went to a movie. Later, he went back to Brooklyn Heights.

His life ended just a short walk away from Auerbach's apartment. Before killing himself, Varela called his ex-wife in Illinois to bid her and their daughter goodbye, police said.

On Friday, someone left a dozen pink tulips on the sidewalk outside the dry cleaners. A greeting card was taped to a parking meter above the flowers.

"Sarah — God bless you," the card read, "and all the women who have been murdered."

CHAOS: Hosokawa's resignation stuns Japan

by opening Japan to rice imports, helping seal a world trade agreement.

But he leaves for the next administration a still bigger challenge: curbing the power of Japan's bureaucrats, criticized by U.S. officials and many Japanese as the principal obstacle to reform.

The Yomiuri Shimbun, Japan's largest-circulation daily, on Saturday blasted Hosokawa's abrupt decision to quit just as the fiscal 1994 budget needed to be passed. Hosokawa's action, it said, "betrayed the public's confidence and impaired Japan's credibility in the international community. It is inevitable that Hosokawa will be labeled as irresponsible."

President Clinton spoke to Hosokawa by telephone Friday morning and "conveyed his regret at the prime minister's decision to resign and commended him for his commitment to political and economic reform in Japan," Press Secretary Dee Dee Myers said in a statement.

"The president expressed his hope that the process of reform would continue in Japan," Myers said. "The president stated that he is confident that our strong bilateral relations with Japan will continue."

Clinton later said the United States did not intend to back away from demands that Japan lower trade barriers, but he indicated that the country would be given some breathing space while a new government is formed.

Japanese officials indicated it is unlikely that trade talks between the two countries, which have been on hold since February, will get going anytime soon.

Hosokawa had promised sweeping cutbacks in bureaucratic regulations that foreigners say make it hard to enter the Japanese market. And he had called for a more open, competitive economy to help consumers get a bigger share of Japan's wealth.

But over the past two months, he backed off from the policies that won him a reputation as a reformer, instead devoting his time to a failed plan to raise taxes and to internal political squabbles.

A market-opening package announced with great fanfare last month was denouned by Japanese commentators and U.S. officials as containing nothing new.

U.S. Trade Representative Mickey Kantor and Japanese Foreign Minister Tsutoma Hata had been expected to make another effort to bridge the gap next Friday in Morocco at the signing of a new world trade agreement.

Analysts said it was unlikely the new government could move more decisively.

"The next administration is going to be vulnerable," said Takamitsu Sawa, a professor of economics at Kyoto University. "I think it will collapse relatively quickly."

Reform has also lost its greatest symbol: the vigorous, dapper Hosokawa, who garnered record approval ratings since taking office last August.

Over the past month Hosokawa took a hammering from the opposition Liberal Democrats, who charged that a $970,000 loan he accepted from a trucking magnate was actually a political donation.

Hosokawa said Friday that the loan was not a gift, but conceded it was interest-free. He said he had learned that only Thursday from his staff.

The prime minister also disclosed a new potential scandal over personal investments entrusted to a close friend. Hosokawa said laws may have been broken but refused to say who the friend was or give other details.

He told a hastily called press conference that the financial questions, while more than 10 years old, were "something for which I must take moral responsibility."

It was unclear when Hosokawa would actually step down. His successor must be approved by Parliament.

BLASTS: Rios rips Bonilla

the bill because of other tax-raising additions to the original document, he said. "You can liken it to going to a restaurant and being told you can't order just one thing, you have to order the whole menu," he said.

Nevertheless, Democrats are blasting Bonilla for "milking" the earned income legislation for political gain. In a February issue of The Zavala County Sentinel, Bonilla wrote an article explaining how earned income credit works. Bonilla ends this piece with "The Earned Income Credit is a great benefit for low-income working families. If you qualify for the EIC, don't miss this opportunity to help your family keep more of your hard-earned money."

This is the first tax break for middle-class families in about 15 years, Rios said. In the 23rd District, which includes parts of South and West Texas, there are 51,627 families eligible for the credit, or about 35 percent of the total population, Rios said.

This is expected to put about $122 million in tax money back into the pockets of middle-class families in the district, he said.

On other issues, Rios said this district needs more state and federal attention to build infrastructure necessary for the increased Latin American trade in the North American Free Trade Agreement (NAFTA).

Israelis remain tense after attacks by Islamic fundamentalists

By Jim Blanson
Associated Press

■ News analysis

JERUSALEM — Police radios crackled with a flurry of reports about suspicious objects and bomb scares after attacks by Islamic fundamentalists left eight Israelis dead this week.

One woman asked police to check out a cake she received unexpectedly, saying it wasn't her birthday.

It was a measure of the daily tension in Israel despite peacemaking with the Palestine Liberation Organization. Bloodshed and worry are taking a toll on support for Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin's moves toward peace.

Israelis are faced with everyday choices in which security is the key component: Is it too risky to go the countryside for a holiday picnic or shop in a mall that could be a bomb target?

The Islamic fundamentalist group Hamas fueled such fears this week, issuing a leaflet threatening attacks on Israel's Independence Day, on Thursday, for the Feb. 25 mosque massacre of 30 Muslims by a Jewish settler. The attack took place just before the Eid al-Fitr feast that ends the Muslim holy month of Ramadan.

"You turned the Eid al-Fitr holiday into a black day, so we vow to turn your Independence Day into hell," said the leaflet.

The leaflet was distributed after a Hamas car bomb at a bus stop killed seven Israelis and wounded 40, and a fundamentalist gunman sprayed a bus stop with gunfire, killing a father of three and wounding four other Israelis.

In response, the Israeli right demanded suspension of the peace talks. Its call gained support after PLO leader Yasser Arafat refused to condemn the latest attacks.

But the government decided to press ahead with talks with the PLO on Sunday in Cairo, although the pace of withdrawal may go slower and Palestinians will pay a price economically.

"I am fully aware that less people are enthusiastic about the peace process but that is not a reason to stop it," said Ephraim Sneh, a Parliament member of Rabin's Labor Party. "What is the option, to surrender to terrorism? Will there be less killings if the process stops?"

Columnist Nahum Barnea of the daily Yediot Ahronot criticized Rabin's government for failing to campaign in the streets for the peace agreement.

"We can perhaps tell these people that it is better to have a little terror with hope for peace than a little terror without any hope, but there is no one saying it," Barnea wrote.

But if Rabin isn't going to the people, the people are getting at him.

The government representative at the funeral for the victims of the car-bomb attack in Afula left under police escort after being cursed and shouted down when he tried to deliver a eulogy.

Earlier this month, eggs and tomatoes were flung at members of the Cabinet who attended the Maimouna, a spring festival celebrated by North African Jews earlier this week. Rabin himself was booed at a rally.

The extent of Israeli concern about violence was reflected in a survey by Tel Aviv University's Jaffee Center for Strategic Studies. The poll of 1,239 Israelis conducted from mid-January to mid-February found 76 percent expressed concern that they or family members would be hurt.

Man charged in Zachery murder makes U.S. Magistrate Court appearance

By Tonie Miller-Uzzel
Staff Writer

A Midland man charged with murder appeared in U.S. Magistrate Court Friday morning in the government's efforts to have his supervised release revoked on a prior conviction.

Terry Earl Stewart, 25, was arrested Jan. 29 and charged by the state with the Jan. 25 murder of James Zachery, a Midland Community Theatre performer and former professional football player.

Zachery was assaulted in the early morning hours in the 1300 block of East Industrial Road. Autopsy results indicate he died of blunt trauma to the head.

Another man, Duann Dewayne Stewart, 17, also of Midland, was indicted by a grand jury earlier this week for Zachery's murder. Terry Stewart has not been indicted.

Stewart was convicted and served prison time in the federal system for use of a communication device (telephone) to facilitate a drug transaction. Following his release from prison he was a resident of a halfway house in Odessa before the supervised release, which is similar to probation, officials said.

Terry Earl Stewart appeared in court, with shackles on his feet. He didn't have an attorney present and was advised of his right to remain silent.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Tom Beery filed a motion on behalf of the government to revoke Stewart's supervised release because of a number of alleged violations of the release.

Stewart appeared in court, with shackles on his feet, before U.S. Magistrate Louis Guirola in an initial appearance on the revocation. He didn't have an attorney present and was advised of his right to remain silent.

Guirola read the seven alleged violations to Stewart.

The first was the alleged failure to report to the probation office monthly and submit a written report to the office during the first five days of the month. The motion indicated Stewart didn't report on Jan. 6.

The second allegation was that Stewart didn't truthfully answer questions of the probation officer by claiming to have gone to the Texas Employment Commission on Dec. 17 in search of a job. An officer said he spoke with the TEC representative and was told Stewart had not been there. The officer also claims to have sent a certified letter to Stewart on Dec. 29 and did not receive a response from him.

Another allegation of violation was made to the government by Stewart's common-law wife. One responsibility of meeting supervised release is to support his dependants. His wife told authorities that Stewart had moved out of their residence and had not supported her or their three children.

Another requirement for supervised release is to work regularly at a legal occupation. The motion for revocation alleges Stewart has been unemployed since Novemeber and had a "lackadaisical" attitude about finding work.

Stewart also is alleged to have violated the release by not notifying the probation office of his current address within a certain amount of time following the move.

In the motion, the probation officer indicated the address given to the office by Stewart following his release from the halfway house was not his address, but his grandmother's. In a visit to the home the grandmother said she didn't know where Stewart lived.

Another alleged violation included not refraining from alcohol and substance use. Part of his supervised release conditions were to report to Mental Health and Mental Retardation center for weekly urine specimens to be taken. On Nov. 11, MHMR reported traces of cocaine found in Stewart's urine.

Stewart also is accused of not meeting conditions of the release in January by failing to attend weekly counseling sesssions at MHMR as part of his drug aftercare program.

Guirola asked Stewart if he understood the allegations made against him.

"Yes sir," he responded.

Stewart also was advised of his right to an attorney. Stewart indicated he had no money, no income, no property and three children and a wife. He told the judge his wife and children lived on welfare.

The magistrate appointed Woody Leverett, who is representing Stewart on the state charges, to represent him on the revocation.

Stewart will appear again for a probable cause hearing on Wednesday.

Stewart remains in the Midland County Detention Center in lieu of $50,000 bond on the murder charge.

REASONS TO RE-ELECT JUSTICE RAUL GONZALEZ

What is the real story behind the high-dollar, negative campaign against Texas Supreme Court Justice Raul Gonzalez?

Justice Gonzalez's opponent, Rene Haas, is a personal injury lawyer from Corpus Christi. Her law partner/husband is David Perry, a former president of the Texas Trial Lawyers Association and one of the wealthiest personal injury lawyers in the nation. According to campaign reports filed with the Texas Ethic commission, a small number of personal injury lawyers have funded the Haas campaign with well over $1 million in an effort to get their hand picked candidate elected. One might wonder why.

Just think, if Hass wins the April 12 run-off, she, her husband and their trial lawyer buddies stand to make millions from her decisions on the court. That's why they are willing to invest so much cash in character assassination, innuendo, and misleading TV ads.

Let's send a message to the trial lawyers on April 12. Our Supreme Court is not their money-making machine. Support Justice Raul Gonzalez and ruin a trial lawyers day.

Let's Keep An Honest Judge on the Bench!

Israel clamps down on outside Arab workers

JERUSALEM (NYT) — Israel took measures Friday to rid itself of Arab labor from the occupied territories by imposing an indefinite ban on Palestinian entry and by deciding to bring in thousands of foreign construction workers and farm hands.

Confining Palestinians to the West Bank and Gaza Strip is a tactic that Israel often uses to reassure its jittery population, only to relax the restrictions after a while.

But after two terrorist attacks this week that killed eight Israelis and wounded nearly 50 others, and with Islamic radicals warning of more bloodshed to come, the government says that this time it means business about keeping the populations apart.

"The first thing on the agenda is to improve the national sense of personal security," said Oded Ben-Ami, a spokesman for Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin.

Once again, however, the government said the violence would not deflect it from negotiations with the Palestine Liberation Organization on carrying out the long-delayed plan for Palestinian self-rule and a companion Israeli troop withdrawal, starting in Gaza and the West Bank town of Jericho.

According to Ben-Ami, Rabin told senior ministers who form his "security cabinet" that Israel's negotiators would resume talks in Cairo on Sunday "in spite of the anger and agony" over the latest attacks.

Opposition leaders have demanded a halt in the negotiations, just as they were suspended by the PLO for five weeks after an Israeli settler killed at least 29 Palestinian worshipers at a Hebron mosque on Feb. 25.

But there is no appetite for such a course among government leaders, who fear that the longer it takes to carry out the Gaza-Jericho plan, the greater the chances for an act of violence so severe that it causes the entire package to come unglued.

As it is, officials say they will have a more difficult time persuading Israelis that Yasir Arafat, the PLO chairman, can be trusted after he refused to condemn the most serious terrorist attack in Israel in five years — a suicide car bombing in the northern town of Afula on Wednesday that killed seven Israelis and wounded 44.

"It puts some question marks not only on his personality but on the overall idea of who your partner is," one official said, acknowledging that the government could be vulnerable to opposition questions about why it is bothering to negotiate with him.

U.S., U.N. envoys seek widespread Bosnian cease-fire

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (NYT) — U.S. diplomats and U.N. officials worked on Friday to arrange a comprehensive cease-fire between the Bosnian army and Serbian nationalist forces as the intensity of fighting reportedly dropped off in the eastern Bosnian enclave of Gorazde.

Sarajevo radio reported Friday night that the Serbian shelling of the town of Gorazde had ceased but that artillery attacks were continuing along battlefronts around the pocket.

Queried after a report on Bosnian radio on Friday night, U.N. officials said an exploding shell slightly wounded one of the eight British army special forces troops sent into Gorazde on Thursday to monitor the fighting.

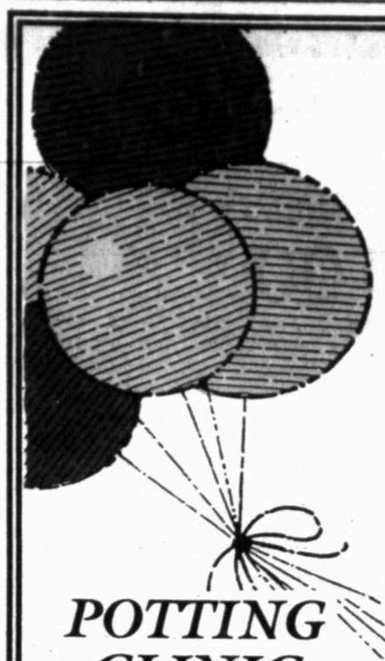

Clashes in the pocket were clearly intense Thursday night, and fighting was reported again Friday near Vitkovici, a village controlled by the Bosnian army just up-river from the town of Goradze, which is believed to hold a weapons production plant.

"There was not a real cease-fire," said a U.N. military spokesman, Maj. Rob Annink. "They kept on shelling and firing, but on a much lower level."

The Serbs have captured about 5 percent of the Gorazde pocket southeast of the town of Gorazde since launching the offensive 11 days ago, Annink said, adding that Serbian forces had not reached the eastern bank of the Drina River as a Serbian commander had asserted earlier.

A U.N. map of the pocket presented at a Friday morning news briefing showed that Serbian forces had pulled to within 2½ miles of Gorazde at the nearest point but that they had failed to conquer any of the strategic high ground above it.

The Serbs began coveting Gorazde soon after the start of the Bosnian war. The pocket, whose population has swelled with refugees to 65,000 after two years of Serbian operations in eastern Bosnia,

Report: Top Mexican rebel is priest

MEXICO CITY (NYT) — The enigmatic leader of the Zapatista National Liberation Army that launched an indigenous revolt in Chiapas state three months ago is a Jesuit priest known as the "Monk of Altamirano," the newspaper Summa reported Friday.

The masked man known as Subcommandant Marcos is really Jeronimo Hernandez Lopez, a 36-year-old Jesuit who arrived in Chiapas four years ago and had not been see since 1992, the newspaper said.

Except for the name and age, little else was revealed about Marcos, who has been photographed wearing a ski mask and occasionally smoking a pipe.

Officials of the Jesuit order in Mexico could not be reached late Friday for comment.

In recent months, nearly every major newspaper in Mexico has carried stories purporting to identify the spokesman for the Zapatistas, but each has been debunked.

Marcos has teased reporters with a few details: he is from the provinces; he learned English by reading the American magazine Playboy; he lived in Monterrey and played for a soccer team; he arrived in Chiapas in the early 1980s to help the poor; he holds a university degree; and he worked as a reporter.

A special federal investigations group based in Chiapas spent three months trying to identify the charismatic man who has become an idol to many Mexicans.

Marcos — his nom de guerre — has captivated the Mexican public through his impassioned speeches and communiques sent to a few newspapers from the rebels' hideout in the mountains of southeastern Mexico.

His photo has appeared on the covers of dozens of magazines and other publications in Mexico and throughout the world. His masked face appears on posters and, to the rebels' dismay, even on packages of Alzados condoms.

According to Summa, a federal agent was able to infiltrate the Zapatista army that seized San Cristobal de las Casas and three other towns in a New Year's Day attack.

During public appearances, Marcos always wears a ski mask, but in the jungle, he often says Mass dressed in white and without the disguise, federal sources told the newspaper.

Investigators working on "Operation Identity," the name given the case, were able to ascertain Marcos' identity by also working with photographs, voice recordings and computers.

Proceso magazine reported recently that military investigators had bugged the cathedral in San Cristobal, where peace talks between Zapatista leaders and the government took place at the end of February.

The army placed microphones inside and outside the 16th century cathedral and even the area where the 19 Zapatistas slept.

Voice tapes of Marcos and a Jesuit priest who said Mass in Ocosingo on Dec. 31, shortly before the rebellion began, matched, Summa said. However, the paper said no one was able to explain why the Mass was recorded before the outbreak of shooting.

In his homily, the priest said: "We will never allow another Indian to be killed. That is why we need to defend ourselves and to always remain united with the help of God at whatever price."

Meanwhile, peace commissioner Manuel Camacho Solis said Friday in Tuxtla Gutierrez that he expects further advances in the peace process could take place in a few weeks.

Camacho briefed Gov. Javier Lopez Moreno and other Chiapas state leaders during a brief visit to the Chiapas state capital.

The peace commissioner denied speculation that he might be headed to a foreign capital as ambassador from Mexico.

Mandela, de Klerk meet with Zulu leaders

SKUKUZA, South Africa (AP) — President F.W. de Klerk and Nelson Mandela met with Zulu nationalist leaders Friday but were unable to persuade them to join the country's first all-race elections less than three weeks away.

However, the parties agreed to call in international mediators and proposed another meeting next week in a bid to settle differences before the April 26-28 vote.

The summit, coming only weeks before the election, was seen as a last chance to curb violence in Zulu areas in the eastern part of the country. The bloodshed threatens to disrupt the polling.

"Urgent negotiation should take place," said a brief joint statement issued at the summit at a nature preserve on the border with Mozambique.

Zulu King Goodwill Zwelethini held 5½ hours of talks with Mandela and ANC officials Friday morning. They were joined later by De Klerk and Inkatha Freedom Party head Mangosuthu Buthelezi, who also leads the Zulu homeland.

De Klerk acknowledged that the joint statement was vague, but said he continued to hold out hope. "Our discussions in many senses of the word have not been complete," he told a news conference.

Zwelethini and Buthelezi are demanding a sovereign Zulu state to avoid ANC domination after the April 26-28 vote, which is expected to be won easily by Mandela's group. Opposition to the election has sparked fierce fighting in Natal Province, which includes the Zulu homeland KwaZulu.

At the meeting, the ANC said it offered Zwelethini a largely ceremonial role as king "with constitutional powers, prerogatives and rights and obligations." But the proposal fell well short of Zulu demands for a sovereign homeland, but it was not immediately clear how the king responded.

Agreement on his status is considered key to the summit's success because most of the nation's 7.5 million Zulus consider him their paramount leader.

If the king accepted a ceremonial role, that could persuade Buthelezi to back down on his demand for an independent monarchy, raising the possibility of peaceful voting in Natal.

Even if Zwelethini and Buthelezi ended their boycott, however, they were expected to press for a delay in the election to give Inkatha time to campaign. Buthelezi already has made clear he wants the vote put off, something the ANC and government reject.

Earlier in the day, Zwelethini issued a presummit statement saying he was offended that he had not previously met face-to-face with Mandela in the four years since the ANC leader was released from prison.

On the eve of the summit, Buthelezi was also defiant, telling foreign reporters that neither military force nor a cutoff of funds from Pretoria would make him drop his demand for Zulu sovereignty.

De Klerk declared a state of emergency in Natal on March 31 and sent in hundreds more police and soldiers to quell political violence between supporters of the ANC and Inkatha. But at least 125 people have died since then, casting doubt whether a fair vote will be possible in parts of Natal.

The summit, the first to bring together the four leaders, was called after a Zulu march through downtown Johannesburg sparked street battles March 28 that killed at least 53 people, most of them Zulus.

Dear Midland Citizens:

For 24 years I have been your County Commissioner and have fought to keep our county government responsive to the needs of the citizens of Midland County by keeping taxes low and services high. We are approaching a critical crossroads in county government, where we will operate efficiently or regress into a tax-and-spend bureaucratic operation. I cannot stay silent any longer and watch my friends and fellow taxpayers being misled and lied to by Jeff Norwood's well financed, slick, and deceptive advertising campaign which is orchestrated by an Austin based political consultant.

Jeff Norwood was recruited to return to Midland to run for County Judge. He has lived in Midland less than one year. He is 29 years old, has no experience, has never paid ad-valorem taxes in Midland, has never been responsible for a mortgage, yet he wants the taxpayers of Midland to vote for him to be the chief fiscal officer of Midland County, who will be in charge of a $20 million a year budget.

For over 30 years our County Judges have been attorneys and have carried a heavy judicial load in addition to their administrative duties. Jeff Norwood, after on the job training, would only be able to do 30% of the work that has been done in the past. You and I as taxpayers will have to raise additional taxes to create a new County Court-at-Law with the additional expense of $180,000 to $200,000 a year, just to take up the slack of a non-attorney County Judge.

In addition I presume Jeff Norwood has adopted new beliefs in order to be accepted and supported by the good people of Midland. It strongly appears that he is using the good people of Midland as a stepping stone for his political ambitions. He has been advised to become active with the "Right-to-Life and Traditional Values groups" regardless of his true beliefs. My fellow friends and taxpayers we are being deceived and misled by Jeff Norwood.

I strongly urge you to support and vote for Teresa Clingman for County Judge and keep efficient, responsible, and conservative county government.

Sincerely,

Win Brown

Recent African history features coups, wars, ethnic killings

By Reid G. Miller
Associated Press

NAIROBI, Kenya — The map of Africa seems constantly erupting in anger — coups, wars and ethnic killings.

The latest eruption came this past week in Rwanda, an orgy of seemingly senseless killing that traces back to the tiny Central African country's pre-colonial past.

Many of Africa's conflicts involve ethnic rivalries. They often pit ancient enemies inside nations whose borders were drawn on the continent's map by former European colonial powers with no regard for civility, or lack of it, among African neighbors.

But Rwanda and neighboring Burundi, an equally small country with an identical ethnic mix, were not artificial creations of colonial rule. They had been organized kingdoms for centuries before being incorporated into German East Africa in 1899.

In each kingdom, the minority Tutsi ethnic group held sway over the majority Hutus in a complex system of governance that largely avoided bloodshed. Cattle-owning Tutsis dominated agrarian Hutus, but traditions limited the degree to which the Hutus could be exploited. Then and now, Tutsis made up only about 15 percent of the populations of each country, Hutus 85 percent.

But the system that had maintained relations between the two groups was gradually eroded by colonial rule, first by the Germans and later by the Belgians, who governed both nations as protectorates from 1916 until independence in 1962.

With the Belgians gone and their self-governing system destroyed, the Hutus and the Tutsis began shedding blood in periodic massacres as they struggled for political and economic dominance.

So last week's violence was nothing new for Rwanda.

Over the past four decades, the savagery of the bloodletting in Rwanda and Burundi has made some other African conflicts look like child's play. Hundreds of thousands have died, millions have fled into exile.

Oddly, Burundi escaped major violence this time, although it was equally affected by the immediate cause of the trouble in Rwanda — the assassination of both countries' presidents in one quick, terrible blow.

Somalia also was not an artificial creation of colonialism, although parts of it were governed separately by the English and Italians until it won independence in 1960. Its people are ethnically one, but are riven by clan feuds over precious water and grazing land for their camels, goats and sheep.

Today, the clans compete for land and power with automatic rifles, machine guns and artillery. That competition brought a devastating famine in 1992 that took the lives of more than 350,000 Somalis. It was ended only by the intervention of the United States and the United Nations.

While America pulled out last month, the United Nations is still in Somalia with some 19,000 peacekeepers from more than 20 nations. But even as U.N.-sponsored peace talks sputter along, clan skirmishes and banditry continue to take lives.

In South Africa, more than 11,000 people have died in factional fighting since 1990, and the violence threatens to disrupt the country's first all-race elections set for April 26-28.

Much of the fighting pits Nelson Mandela's African National Congress against Mangosuthu Buthelezi's Inkatha Freedom Party, a Zulu nationalist group based in the eastern province of Natal.

President F.W. de Klerk declared a state of emergency in Natal on March 31, but more than 120 blacks have died there in the past week.

Inkatha is boycotting the election and demanding an independent homeland for the Zulus, an option rejected by both de Klerk and Mandela.

Russian leader gets into fistfight

MOSCOW (AP) — Vladimir Zhirinovsky got into another fistfight in Russia's parliament Friday, beating up a defector from his ultranationalist party and threatening to tear another lawmaker's beard out "hair by hair."

It was the second time Zhirinovsky had brawled with colleagues at the Duma, the lower house of parliament. Reformers backed a proposal to investigate his "blunt hooligan actions," but it failed to pass.

Witnesses said Friday's punching and shoving match, during a break in the proceedings, grew out of an argument in a corridor with lawmaker Vladimir Borzyuk. Borzyuk quit Zhirinovsky's extremist Liberal Democratic Party this week.

Zhirinovsky's two bodyguards held Borzyuk's arms while he smashed the legislator's head against the wall, lawmaker Alla Gerber said.

When another Duma member, reformer Valery Borshchyov, came to Borzyuk's defense, Zhirinovsky attacked him. Witnesses quoted him as yelling obscenities and telling Borshchyov, "You scum, I'll have you rot in jail!" and "I'll tear your beard out hair by hair!"

None of the participants were injured enough to be hospitalized.

Oil patch senators get House chairman's vote to link health, energy

WASHINGTON (NYT) — A powerful House committee chairman trying to find votes for health-care reform has proposed breaks for the oil and gas industry. Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich., chairman of the House Energy and Commerce Committee, has joined three oil patch senators in signing a letter to President Clinton that links health care-reform with relief for the oil and gas industry.

The letter is the first explicit effort to link the health and energy issues, although many oil patch lawmakers have hinted that they plan to use their health-care votes as leverage to get Clinton's attention on the oil and gas industry's problems.

Dingell is trying to build support on his committee for a health-care plan that lives up to Clinton's goal of universal coverage but modifies some of the controversial provisions of the president's plan.

The letter to Clinton linking "energy and health security" was signed by Dingell and Sens. J. Bennett Johnston, D-La., John Breaux, D-La., and Jeff Bingaman, D-N.M. It asks for the president's support for a number of measures that are supported by a bipartisan group of about 120 senators and House members from oil and gas producing states, including Bingaman, Breaux and Johnston.

George Alcorn, chairman of the Independent Petroleum Association of America, said he was pleased that another influential lawmaker had asked Clinton to move energy issues to a higher place on his agenda.

"It's important for the president to realize this industry is as important as some of the other things he's interested in," Alcorn said.

But Rep. W.J. "Billy" Tauzin of Louisiana, one of the conservative Democrats who holds a key vote on Dingell's committee, said the strategy of linking health care and energy issues is "totally inappropriate," because health care is such an important issue. "Trying to tie them together is not a good idea," he said.

Dingell has already made concessions to moderate Democrats in his effort to craft a health care bill that can pass his committee. Unlike Clinton's plan, Dingell's proposed compromise does not require businesses to obtain health insurance for their employees through mandatory purchasing alliances.

The chairman's plan retains the requirement for employers to buy insurance for their workers but reduces the share of the cost paid by owners of small businesses.

Breaux, a member of the Senate Finance Committee, is the Senate sponsor of the "managed competition" alternative to Clinton's health care plan. His bill does not require employers to buy health-care coverage for their employees.

The proposals of lawmakers from energy-producing states to help the oil and gas industry include tax credits for production from marginal wells and for new production on the outer continental shelf. The proposals call for accelerated write-offs for geological and geophysical costs.

The letter to Clinton also asks the president to support a fee on imported refined products — called an environmental equalization fee — that would be imposed on imported gasoline and other refined products.

Clinton plans massive base closures

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Clinton administration is preparing to lower the boom on the nation's military bases with a proposed list of closures next year that could nearly match all the base closures ordered since 1988.

Faced with a dwindling military force and declining defense budgets, the Pentagon is preparing a base closure list that cuts facilities by at least 15 percent, according to official estimates submitted to Congress in recent weeks.

In three base closure rounds in 1988, 1991 and 1993 combined, the reduction in bases and military facilities was 15 percent.

Congress has approved previous base closure proposals. But Defense Secretary William Perry is predicting "a very difficult battle with the public and the Congress" over the 1995 round of closures.

The anticipated scope of the cuts is already drawing congressional fire, as lawmakers realize that the savings from base closures are still a long way off. Through the end of the century and beyond, the cost of shutting down bases is expected to outweigh the savings realized.

Closing bases has a direct economic impact on surrounding communities. Under the last round, for example, the bulk of job losses will be concentrated in three states: California, slated to lose more than 40,000 military and civilian defense-related jobs; Florida, facing the loss of 22,000 jobs; and South Carolina, which is expected to lose more than 14,700 jobs.

Next spring, the administration will make its recommendation to the Defense Base Closure and Realignment Commission for the 1995 round of closures.

"It is important that we use the last round of closures to align our base structure more closely with our future mission needs," Sherri Goodman, a deputy undersecretary of defense, told a House subcommittee recently. She said Pentagon officials "expect a sizable proposal for closures and realignments."

The 1995 round is the last of three required by law under the fiscal 1991 defense budget.

Rep. James Hansen, R-Utah, a member of the House Armed Services Committee, plans to introduce legislation next week to delay the 1995 closures for two years.

"Let us see where we're going before we do away with some extremely important military bases," Hansen said. Not surprisingly, Hansen is concerned about Hill Air Force Base near Ogden, Utah, in his district. But he is also concerned about the rising cost of base closures, mainly due to environmental cleanup required at bases strewn with hazardous waste and unexploded munitions.

"There's not enough money in the entire defense budget to clean up the bases we're closing," Hansen said.

Last September, the Senate overwhelmingly defeated a similar delaying amendment proposed by Sen. Dianne Feinstein, D-Calif.

According to previous base closure commission estimates, the one-time cost of shutting down the 103 major bases on the 1988, 1991 and 1993 lists and realigning 147 others is $11.5 billion, with savings by the end of the decade from land sales and other proceeds of about the same amount.

Eventually, the government would realize annual savings of about $3 billion from no longer having to maintain those bases.

Nirvana's Cobain apparently commits suicide

SEATTLE (AP) — Kurt Cobain, the troubled lead singer of the pioneering grunge rock band Nirvana, was found dead Friday in his apartment of an apparently self-inflicted gunshot wound to the head. He was 27.

The death came a month after Cobain was hospitalized in Rome for a drug-induced coma.

Cobain's mother, Wendy O'Connor, said her son had been missing for six days and that she had feared he would be found dead.

"Now he's gone and joined that stupid club," she said, referring to the early deaths of such rock stars as Jimi Hendrix and Jim Morrison.

"I told him not to join that stupid club."

Nirvana's music — a dense, weary form of punk rock — came to typify Seattle's grunge sound.

The group is known for the multi-million-selling 1991 album "Nevermind," which featured the hit "Smells Like Teen Spirit" and helped to give grunge a national following. Another best-selling album, "In Utero," was issued last year. Cobain wrote the music and anguished lyrics to most of their songs.

"We are all devastated by the unbelieveable tragedy of Kurt Cobain's death," Ed Rosenblatt, president of Nirvana label Geffen Records, said in a statement.

"The world has lost a great artist and we've lost a great friend — it leaves a huge void in our hearts."

Seattle police said Cobain was found dead at his home from an apparently self-inflicted gunshot wound to the head. A suicide note was found nearby. Authorities gave no detail on the content of the note.

The body was discovered by an electrician who had gone to the home to do some work, police spokeswoman Vinette Tichi said.

The body, found in a cottage apartment above a detached garage on Cobain's property, had been there about a day, Tichi said.

When he fell ill last month in Italy, Cobain had reportedly gone to Rome with his wife, Courtney Love, also a singer, and their daughter to recover from health problems that had forced the band to cancel two concert dates in Europe.

Love, lead singer of the rock band Hole, also has been treated for heroin use, her lawyer said while filing a lawsuit against her doctor last year. The couple's daughter, Frances, was born in 1992. Cobain's mother said she didn't know where Love was on Friday.

FBI eyes possible link between Carter official, KGB

WASHINGTON (NYT) — Guided by the unpublished book of a former Soviet spy, the FBI is urgently looking into whether the KGB recruited a Carter administration official to steal secrets for Moscow, law enforcement officials said Friday.

The central accusation is that the American official, after leaving government service, worked secretly for the KGB, the Soviet counterpart to the CIA. He is said to have seduced the daughter of a CIA employee and to have pressured the employee into supplying him with tidbits of classified information, which he then passed on to Moscow.

The FBI still does not know if these events actually happened, and some officials are skeptical. But the bureau has taken the accusations seriously enough to have assigned several agents to investigate them, racing against the deadline of a publishing house, Simon & Schuster.

The publisher plans to put the story, along with other tales of cold war espionage, on bookstore shelves next month.

Neither the FBI nor a spokesman for the publisher would officially comment on the book, "Washington Station, My Life as a KGB Spy in America," by Yuri Shvets, the former KGB recruiter.

But in its catalogue, the publisher said Shvets would disclose the details of his "prize recruit," a White House and State Department official code-named "Socrates."

Simon and Schuster declined to make the manuscript available to a reporter who asked to see it. Nor is it clear whether the book will identify the American official by his true name.

FBI officials are privately worried that disclosures prompted by the book might compromise their investigation, which remains far from complete. Officially, however, the FBI had nothing to say about the investigation.

The investigation of "Socrates," conducted in the shadows of the higher-profile investigation of the suspected spy Aldrich Ames, is stretching the boundaries of the post-cold war era of openness and creating new problems for American counterintelligence that must now cope with agents-turned-authors.

King case judge accuses lawyers of wasting time

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The third week of Rodney King's civil damage trial ended Friday with the judge chewing out attorneys for wasting time and accusing them of trying the matter "like an auto smash case."

U.S. District Judge John Davies lectured the lawyers when they complained they were not getting enough time to defend their clients.

"What in the world are you talking about?" Davies exploded at lawyer Greg Peterson, representing police officer Theodore Briseno. "You haven't been deprived of anything!"

Davies also berated defense lawyer Ira Salzman for listing 97 potential witnesses. Salzman said he was just covering all bases.

"This is being tried like an auto smash case," Davies said. "You people are getting up and taking depositions of doctors and going off on tangents."

HEAVENLY BEINGS CREATED BY GOD

What role do they play in heaven and earth?

Do people turn into angels when they die?

These questions and others will be considered during a Bible Study on Angels.
The public is cordially invited to attend.
The class will be taught by Walter Schneider.

Deputy Marshall David Krylo holds a new REACT belt, a remote-control-activated-electrified restraining device that sends 50,000 volts of power through bodies of unruly courtroom prisoners. One jolt can make a large man fall to the floor in pain. Some worry about abuses.

New belt shocks unruly prisoners in court

By Larry Gerber
Associated Press

SANTA ANA, Calif. — Behave or be shocked.

A new electric belt can jolt prisoners into shivering submission at the touch of a marshal's remote button.

Defendants sometimes choose it, when they have a choice, because it can be worn out of sight: no handcuffs to give the jury a bad impression.

Some attorneys, however, argue that the painful eight-second "ride" amounts to cruel and unusual punishment, administered in a split-second decision without a hearing.

It's an example of the law-and-order mentality run amok, said David Kairys, a professor at Temple University School of Law in Philadelphia.

"We've been going on now two decades of this very fierce war on crime, and I don't see us getting very far," he said. "There seems to be no end in sight to the things we come up with."

On one point, there's no argument: These things work.

Dubbed REACT belts by the manufacturer, Stun-Tech Inc. of Cleveland, the devices have been on the market for three years. A 4-inch-wide elastic band wraps around the waist and fastens with Velcro. A battery pack fits at the kidney.

Activated by remote control like a garage-door opener, the belt sends 4 to 6 milliamperes of pulsed, 50,000-volt current in an eight-second burst through the prisoner's back muscles.

The shock is weaker than an electric cattle fence, said Stun-Tech spokeswoman Elizabeth Ryan, but it's enough to make subjects scream and drop to the floor, writhing in pain. Though there's no permanent injury, the company says the feeling can be described in one word: "devastation."

About 150 of the $600 belts are in use throughout the country, Ryan said, and officers have had to push the button just three times. All three incidents took place last year:

- In Kankakee, Ill., a police officer immobilized an inmate who had charged a colleague at a hospital in June;
- A San Diego County bailiff zapped a man facing assault charges when he started walking out of the courtroom during a hearing;
- A judge in Pensacola, Fla., ordered the belt removed from a murder defendant after learning he had been shocked outside court.

Pope plans four-day visit to U.S. in Fall

BALTIMORE (AP) — Pope John Paul II is planning a four-day visit to the United States in October, the pontiff's second visit in as many years, the president of the National Conference of Catholic Bishops announced Friday.

Archbishop William Keeler of Baltimore said plans are being made for the spiritual leader of the nation's 59 million Roman Catholics to say public Masses in New Jersey and Baltimore during his visit Oct. 20-23.

The Vatican has been working on plans for the pope to address the United Nations General Assembly to mark the International Year of the Family. Keeler's announcement was the first official confirmation of specific dates for the trip.

The pope's schedule has not been completed.

LULAC president pleads innocent to fraud charge

LAS VEGAS (AP) — An Hispanic leader who is the key figure in an alleged multi-million dollar immigration fraud pleaded innocent Friday, proclaiming he was the victim of a government vendetta.

Jose Velez, 56, made his initial appearance before U.S. Magistrate Lawrence Leavitt and pleaded innocent to a charge of conspiracy to file false statements with the Immigration and Naturalization Service.

Jose Velez launches attack, claims he's victim of INS vendetta.

Velez, president of the League of United Latin American Citizens (LULAC) is accused in a 17-count indictment of helping thousands of illegal aliens file false immigration applications for fees ranging from $250 to $45,000.

Velez remained free on his own recognizance with the provision he surrender his passport.

After his brief hearing, Velez lashed out at the government, saying he had been the victim of a vendetta by the INS.

"I'll have to deal with that in the courtroom," he told The Associated Press.

Asked if he planned to resign his LULAC post, Velez rejected the idea.

"They're investigating the president of the United States and he's still doing his job," Velez said. "This shouldn't affect my ability to serve my constituency."

Velez has said previously that the LULAC membership is about 115,000. But his political opponents claim the actual figure is less than 10,000. He is serving the final year of a 4-year term as president of the 64-year-old organization, which promotes Hispanic social and political issues.

Velez's attorney, Ted Marshall, said his client would not resign his LULAC post and would cut no deals with the government.

"He's perfectly willing to stand trial," Marshall said after the hearing. "The government will wish they'd put this case out to subcontractors."

Indicted with Velez were Taiwanese businessmen Billy Tzeng, Simon Chang and Al Feng.

Tzeng also appeared before Leavitt Friday and pleaded innocent to the conspiracy charge.

LULAC was not charged in the case, although the government contends some applications were processed through the organization's Las Vegas office, which was operated by Velez.

Velez and the three Taiwanese businessmen were accused of recruiting illegal aliens and bringing them to Las Vegas, sometimes "by busloads," to file false immigration applications.

Tyler Lee's Steve Sikes (14) and Midland's Sean Parnell collide Friday.

■ Tyler Lee's Steve Sikes scores late to break open a scoreless game and the Bulldogs lose 1-0 in state soccer semifinals.

By Mike Butts
Staff Writer

PFLUGERVILLE — For the second time this year a Midland High School team came to Austin to compete for a state championship. At least the Bulldogs are getting closer.

Despite dominating parts of their 1-0 state semifinal loss to Tyler Lee Friday at Pflugerville's Panther Stadium, Midland missed out on a chance to become the first Bulldog boys team to compete in a state championship game since the baseball team won the state championship in 1973. The Bulldogs basketball team lost a lopsided game to Sugar Land Willowridge in a state semifinal in March.

The Bulldogs (21-2) outshot Lee (19-2-2) 5-2 in the first half and missed several opportunities to go ahead early. But Lee's late goal put them into today's 2:30 p.m. championship game.

"It's not that we lost that I'm so upset about," said Bulldog center midfielder Ross Hunter, "but we lost to team that's not as skilled as us."

A stiff wind blowing the length of the field effected the game. Midland controlled most of the first half with the wind. But in the second half Lee, which had played tenacious defense all game, picked up momentum offensively.

"The game just went back and forth, each team taking control for a period of time," Lee coach Rich Brands said. "We definitely felt we had the advantage in the second half with the wind."

Lee came out in the second half to control the ball and began adding some offense to its defense, which has now posted two straight shutouts in the playoffs. The Red Raiders got five of the first seven shots on goal in the second stanza.

"I think just knowing that we had the wind had a psychological effect," Brands said. "And they had be thinking the same thing."

The game's only score came when Bulldog goal keeper Brandon Lang came out of goal to block a shot and Lee's Steve Sikes pushed a ball to Lee Whitus for a short shot through Midland defenders at an open goal with 6:57 left.

The Bulldog's had been held to only one goal in but three of their previous games and had never been shut out.

"That's the only thing that surprised me," Hunter said. "All year long we haven't had a problem scoring goals."

And they didn't have problems getting opportunities early. The Bulldogs had four shots on or off goal in the first 16 minutes of the game. David Farias missed an almost point-blank shot at less than four minutes in, but he was well off-balance when he attempted the shot.

Zach Doss also had a header off a corner kick that bounced over the goal at 28 minutes.

But the Bulldogs best chance was with the score at 0-0 in the second half. Hunter controlled the ball on a dribble

Shapiro said Strawberry was very emotional during a meeting with Dodgers general manager Fred Claire on Monday, but later felt like a heavy load had been lifted from him.

Today's Southwestern Junior College Shoot-Out at the Chaparral Center will be a christening of sorts for women's college basketball at Midland College.

Later this year, MC will begin women's basketball for the first time under the direction of head coach Ron Jones.

The unkindest cut

Nicklaus, Palmer shoot 78s, fail to qualify

By Dave Anderson
New York Times

AUGUSTA, Ga. — As they neared each other behind the 18th green at Augusta National on Friday, Arnold Palmer smiled at Jack Nicklaus.

"Do you want to play somewhere tomorrow?" Palmer asked. "Not here."

They laughed, but only on the outside. For the first time in their careers, they had suffered together the unkindest cut of all: failing to qualify for the Masters' final 36 holes.

After each had shot a 78 in Thursday's opening round, Nicklaus had a two-over-par 74 on Friday for 152, while Palmer, playing in the next twosome, had a 77 for 155.

"I had one birdie in two days," Nicklaus was saying now. "You can't make the cut doing that."

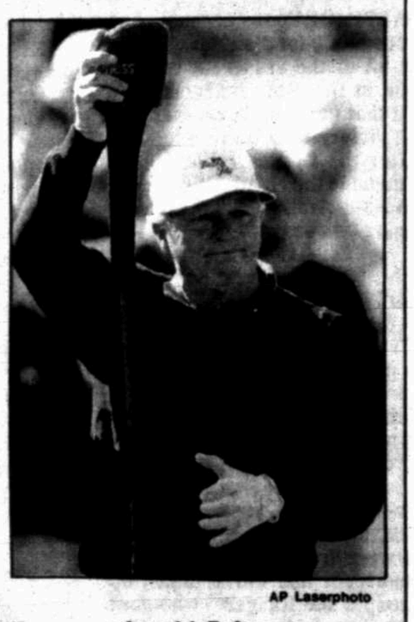

Nicklaus, 54, has won a record six Masters titles. Palmer, 64, has won four. Sam Snead, Jimmy Demaret and Gary Player each won three.

"I've had a lot of good years," the Golden Bear was saying now. "We'll take a bad one."

He started the year by winning the Mercedes senior championships, but has struggled since.

Angels open proud

■ Midland erupts for 15 hits and 15 runs to the delight of the large opening day crowd.

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

Opening day, a new team, a new season, high hopes, a good crowd (4,581) and 15 runs by the Midland Angels. The Texas League is back in town.

The Angels erupted for a 15-3 win over the Wichita Wranglers at Angels Stadium Friday night with a display of unexpected power, gap hitting and sterling pitching. It was a sight that has rarely been seen from Texas League Angels in recent years.

The heroes are almost too numerous to mention, but 5-foot-9 second baseman J.D. Ramirez wouldn't be a bad place to start. The mighty mite, who had hit only 13 dingers in his five-year pro career, hit his first pro grand slam in the sixth inning that won him a mini-lottery of $335 from grateful fans. That made the score 12-3, but it was still the hit of the night.

Ramirez, who played at Sioux City of the Northern League last season where he hit only three homers, thinks he might like hitting in this hitter's paradise, but still doesn't expect to be hitting yard clearers very often.

"I just try to hit the ball hard up the middle," Ramirez said. "I'd never hit a grand slam as a pro, so this was a real thrill to get it on opening day, with a big crowd on hand. I don't get too many homers.

"I think this park, with the wind, is the key. It almost makes you think that you are bigger than you really are."

Jordan bat fails again

HOOVER, Ala. (AP) — With the crowd, Michael Jordan was a big hit. With the bat, he was a big miss.

Jordan went 0-for-3 with two swinging strikeouts and a weak fly ball Friday night in his pro baseball debut for the Double-A Birmingham Barons.

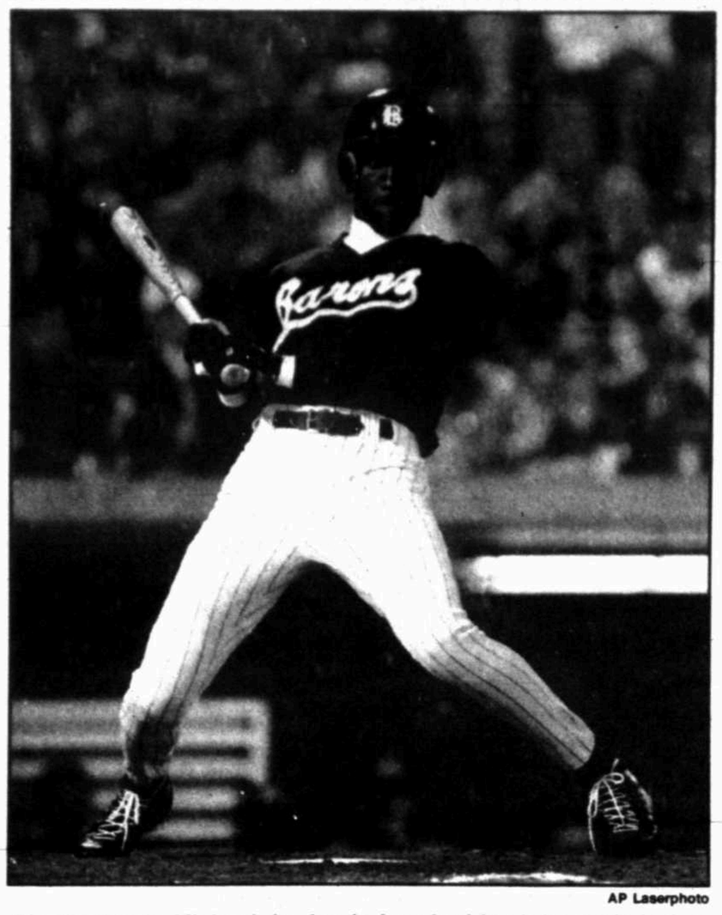

The 10-3 loss to Chattanooga also included another new experience for Jordan — his first brushback pitch, courtesy of Lookouts lefthander John Courtright.

"They told me you sometimes have nights like this," Jordan said. "I was a little eager to try to get a base hit and try to start off right."

"I hope I'm not judged on one night," he said. "I had games like this in basketball. The key is to bounce back."

The evening wasn't a total loss for Jordan. In a Southern League game in which his team made seven errors, he caught all four fly balls hit to right field, plus he made two nice stops on short-hop singles to his backhand.

"He did fine. He hit the cutoff man," Barons manager Terry Francona said. "He played a clean game, no mistakes."

Bulls close in on Hawks

■ Chicago pulls to within one game Atlanta with 100-94 win oevr Indiana.

Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS — Scottie Pippen's 3-pointer with 42 seconds left highlighted a 9-0 run as Chicago took advantage of Indiana's five turnovers in the final 1:40 of the Bulls' 100-94 victory over the Pacers on Friday night.

The Bulls, winners of six straight and 12 of 14 games, won their eight straight at Market Square Arena as they pulled within one game of idle Atlanta in the Central Division.

■ NBA Roundup

Pippen led Chicago with 21 points, Horace Grant had 19 points and 14 rebounds and B.J. Armstrong scored 17 points.

Rik Smits led Indiana with 25 points before fouling out with 15 seconds to play. Reggie Miller, Haywoode Workman and Byron Scott had 15 points each.

Magic 117, Pistons 103

ORLANDO, Fla. — Orlando clinched the first NBA playoff berth in franchise history as Shaquille O'Neal had 40 points and 16 rebounds in a victory over Detroit.

Rookie Anfernee Hardaway had 26 points, nine rebounds and nine assists for the Magic, who also solidified their hold on the fourth seed in the Eastern Conference and homecourt advantage in the first round of the playoffs. They are three games in front of Cleveland with nine games to play.

Terry Mills scored 28 points and Lindsey Hunter 17 for the Pistons, who have lost four straight games and are out of playoff contention.

The Magic led by 20 by the end off the third quarter before Detroit's perimeter game finally clicked. The Pistons, who shot 41.1 percent the first three quarters, hit 11 of their first 17 shots in the fourth, and Mills had 14 points in the quarter.

Bullets 108, Cavaliers 98

LANDOVER, Md. — Rex Chapman scored 29 points and Don MacLean had 26 points and 12 rebounds as Washington prevented Cleveland from clinching a playoff berth with a victory.

Mitchell Butler scored 16 points as the Bullets won for only the third time in 14 games.

Gerald Wilkins scored 21 points and John Williams finished with 18 points and 12 rebounds for the Cavaliers, who will clinch their fourth straight playoff berth with a victory or a Charlotte loss. Terrell Brandon scored 16 points for Cleveland, which lost for the second consecutive night after winning five of six games.

Mark Price came off the bench to score seven points during a 13-6 run in the second quarter, giving the Cavaliers the lead. But Chapman hit a 3-pointer at the buzzer to give the Bullets a 59-58 halftime advantage.

Hornets 99, Nets 78

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — Alonzo Mourning scored 19 points and blocked four shots as Charlotte kept its slim playoff hopes alive with a victory over New Jersey.

The victory, the Hornets' 11th in 17 games, pulled the Hornets within 4½ games of the Nets for the Eastern Conference's eighth playoff spot.

Derrick Coleman led New Jersey with 19 points. Johnny Newman, traded to the Nets from Charlotte earlier this year, scored 14 points.

Former Odessa College standout Larry Johnson finished with 17 points and 10 rebounds and Dell Curry had 16 points for the Hornets.

Charlotte shot just 45.1 percent from the field, but won the game defensively, holding New Jersey to just 34.1 percent shooting and outrebounding the Nets 55-46. New Jersey point guard Kenny Anderson, averaging 18.8 finished 2-for-14 from the floor and scored only four points.

Tyrone Bogues scored seven points and had two of his franchise record-tying seven steals in a 9-2 run in the last 2:50 of the first quarter, giving Charlotte a 30-20 lead. The Hornets extended the margin to 18 in the second quarter and led 58-42 at halftime.

76ers 100, Knicks 97

PHILADELPHIA — Clarence Weatherspoon scored 26 points and rookie Greg Graham made two key free throws with 11 seconds left as Philadelphia surprised New York.

The victory was the second straight at home for the 76ers after they lost 11 consecutive times at the Spectrum and 25 of 26 overall.

Charles Oakley had 18 points and 18 rebounds for the Knicks, who played without center Patrick Ewing, sidelined with the flu.

Philadelphia, which won two straight games for the first time since late January, had a 21-point lead in the second period. But the Knicks rallied behind Herb Williams and Greg Anthony and tied the score 92-92 when Hubert Davis hit a free throw with 2:02 remaining.

Orlando Woolridge had 18 points and Leckner 12 points and 12 rebounds for the 76ers, while Anthony had 16 points and Williams 15 for New York. Weatherspoon had 10 rebounds.

Celtics 112, Timberwolves 108

BOSTON — Robert Parish hit two free throws with 28 seconds left to break a tie, and Minnesota missed two short shots in the last 13 seconds as the Celtics beat the Timberwolves.

The win broke a six-game Boston Garden losing streak and guaranteed the Celtics will not have the lowest won-lost percentage in franchise history. The worst they can finish is 27-55, a .329 mark. Their lowest percentage was .324 in 1949-50.

Boston was led by Dee Brown with 26 points, Parish with 19 and Xavier McDaniel with 17.

SuperSonics 111, Mavericks 93

SEATTLE — Gary Payton scored four of his 22 points in an 11-0 burst to start the fourth quarter as Seattle matched a franchise record with its 56th victory, 111-93 over Dallas.

Jamal Mashburn scored 27 points for the Mavericks (9-65), who need one victory in their final eight games to avoid Philadelphia's record-low of nine wins in the 1972-73 season.

Shawn Kemp had 15 points and 13 rebounds and did not play in the fourth quarter for the Sonics.

Mercker no-hits Dodgers

■ Atlanta pitcher Kent Mercker throws the season's first no-hitter in a 6-0 win.

Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Kent Mercker, without a complete game in 11 previous major-league starts, threw the first no-hitter of the season as Atlanta beat Los Angeles 6-0 Friday night.

Fred McGriff, Terry Pendleton and David Justice hit their first homers of the season with the bases empty against loser Pedro Astacio.

Mercker had combined on the Braves' last no-hitter, going six innings against San Diego on Sept. 11, 1991, before Mark Wohlers and Alejandro Pena finished. The last Brave to pitch a complete-game no-hitter was Phil Niekro against the Padres on Aug. 5, 1973.

It was the first no-hitter against the Dodgers since Dennis Martinez had a perfect game for Montreal in Dodger Stadium on July 28, 1991. It was the first no-hitter in the majors since Jim Abbott of the New York Yankees pitched one against Cleveland last Sept. 4.

■ NL Roundup

Cubs 4, Expos 0

MONTREAL — Rookie Steve Trachsel got his first major-league victory, and Shawon Dunston homered and had three RBIs as the Chicago Cubs spoiled the home opener of the Montreal Expos with a 4-0 victory Friday.

Pedro Martinez, acquired last winter when second baseman Delino DeShields was traded to Los Angeles, was impressive in his debut for the Expos.

Astros 6, Mets 3

HOUSTON — Andujar Cedeno had three hits and three RBIs to help Houston to a victory over New York, snapping the Mets' season-opening three-game winning streak.

The Mets had won nine games in a row, counting the final six of last season and a three-game sweep in Chicago. New York got homers from Bobby Bonilla and Ryan Thompson.

Reds 5, Phillies 4, 10 innings

CINCINNATI — Kevin Mitchell homered twice, and slumping Barry Larkin singled in the winning run in the 10th inning to give Cincinnati a victory over over the previously unbeaten Philadelphia.

Loser David West helped the Reds pull it out in the 10th, when Jeff Branson led off with a single and Tony Fernandez drew a four-pitch walk while trying to sacrifice. West then went to a full count before Larkin, just 1-for-15 this season, singled into the gap in left-center

Rockies 7, Pirates 3

PITTSBURGH — Former Midland Angel Dante Bichette, the majors' hottest hitter, went 4-for-5 with a homer and four RBIs to lead Colorado to a victory over Pittsburgh, ruining the Pirates' home opener.

The Pirates have been outscored 21-5 in their 0-4 beginning, their worst since they opened 0-6 in 1974 before rebounding to win their division. Colorado won its first game after being outscored 33-19 in a season-opening series sweep by Philadelphia.

Padres 4, Marlins 0

SAN DIEGO — Rookie Keith Lockhart homered twice in his first major-league start and Scott Sanders allowed two hits in 7 1-3 innings as San Diego got their its victory.

Phil Plantier also homered as the Padres snapped a four-game losing streak.

Rangers win first game

Associated Press

BALTIMORE — Manuel Lee snapped an 0-for-8 slump with his first hit of the season, a two-run single in the ninth inning Friday night that gave the Texas Rangers a 7-5 victory over Baltimore.

After the Orioles rallied to tie the game in the eighth, Mark Eichhorn (0-1) walked Jose Canseco opening the ninth.

■ AL Roundup

Dean Palmer singled and Canseco was forced at third on a grounder by Ivan Rodriguez. After Bill Ripken grounded out, Lee lined a 3-2 pitch to right.

Tom Henke then pitched a perfect ninth for the save. Rafael Palmeiro, playing against his former teammates for the first time, went 0-for-4 with two strikeouts. Will Clark, his replacement at Texas, also went hitless in four at-bats.

Rodriguez and Chris James homered for the Rangers, who gave up 23 runs in two losses to New York, including an 18-6 rout Thursday. It was the Orioles first loss following two wins over Kansas City.

Indians 8, Royals 3

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Charles Nagy won for just the third time since 1992, and Jim Thome hit a three-run homer as unbeaten Cleveland defeated winless Kansas City in the Royals' home opener.

Nagy, a 17-game winner in 1992 who missed almost all last year with shoulder problems, allowed five hits in seven innings, struck out seven and walked one. Steve Farr came in with the bases loaded and two outs in the ninth and retired Vince Coleman on a long flyout for the save.

Red Sox 8, White Sox 6

CHICAGO — Tim Naehring hit a three-run double in the eighth inning and scored on an wild relay throw as Boston won its fourth straight, beating Chicago in the White Sox's home opener.

Chicago hit four homers — giving them nine in the last two games — and rallied for a 6-4 lead on Julio Franco's three-run drive off Rick Trlicek in the seventh.

Yankees 4, Tigers 0

NEW YORK — Jim Abbott and two relievers combined on a four-hitter and Paul O'Neill drove in two runs as New York defeated Detroit 4-0, sending the Tigers to their fourth consecutive loss.

Abbott struck out eight in seven innings and walked two. He allowed a single to Alan Trammell in the second, a double to Mickey Tettleton in the fourth and a lead-off single to Trammell in the seventh.

Brewers 5, Angels 1

MILWAUKEE — Jody Reed drove in three runs and Kevin Seitzer homered as Milwaukee beat California and started the season with three straight wins for the first time since 1987.

Blue Jays 8, Mariners 2

TORONTO — Rookie Carlos Delgado hit his third homer of the week, and Devon White tied a Blue Jays record with two triples as Toronto routed Seattle.

White went 4-for-4, and Joe Carter and Delgado homered in a five-run second inning.

Athletics 10, Twins 9

MINNEAPOLIS — Troy Neel and Scott Brosius hit run-scoring singles in the 10th inning as Oakland beat Minnesota after wasting a six-run lead.

Kirby Puckett of the Twins had the sixth five-hit game of his career, raising his total to 2,004.

Hogan Park hosts Fantasy qualifier

Hogan Park will serve as host for the local qualifying of the Fantasy Golf Challenge that will land some golfers from around the nation to an all-expenses paid trip in November to the Fantasy Golf Camp in Las Vegas.

The format for competition is a 2-player scramble with an entry fee of $100 per person. The two winners will earn a Regional Championship Tournament berth to be held next fall.

Regional winners will earn the Las Vegas trip where Tom Kite, Ben Crenshaw, Davis Love III, Peter Jacobsen, Lanny Wadkins and 20 other PGA touring professionals will join in the Fantasy Golf Camp.

Even non-winners can join the fantasy camp fun if they are willing to pay the $25,000 fee. Campers (those who pay the fee and regional winners who go free) will be treated to lavish amenities, including four days of intense 18-hole Pro-Am golf, four days of individual instruction from the pros, deluxe accommodations at Caesars Palace, gourmet dining and entertainment and round-trip airfare.

Deadline for the local qualifying is April 13. Contact Hogan Park for more details.

It is important to know that no two single-digit handicappers may play together and the combined handicap must be at least 12.

Price Courter, Hogan Park golf pro, says that a minimum of 24 teams must enter in order for there to be a local qualifying tournament.

Mansell wants to make up for last year's wall greeting in Phoenix race

PHOENIX (AP) — Nigel Mansell enjoyed racing on ovals last year, with one big exception — Phoenix International Raceway.

The Englishman, who grew up and prospered as a race driver on road courses, wound up his first year on the Indy-car PPG Cup circuit as champion, thanks in large part to his performance on the traditional oval tracks.

He had four oval wins, as well as finishing third in the Indianapolis 500.

But it was on the one-mile Phoenix track where Mansell, also the 1992 Formula One champion, had one of the worst moments of his career, hitting the wall last April during a practice session for the Slick 50 200.

His Lola-Ford spun and slammed into the concrete barrier backward, sending Mansell to a hospital with a concussion and an absess below the skin on his lower back that eventually necessitated surgery. The concussion also kept him out of the race.

"Phoenix was to be my first oval race last year," said Mansell, who began this season last month in Australia by winning the pole and finishing ninth in the race. "Since then, we've had a go on the other ovals, so we're definitely more comfortable than we were a year ago.

"Certainly Phoenix will be quite a challenge and test. We had a big accident last year, and I can assure you it hurt."

Oklahoma's Billy Tubbs interviews with TCU for vacant basketball job

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Oklahoma coach Billy Tubbs has interviewed with Texas Christian officials about their vacant coaching position, a television station reported Friday.

KOCO-TV in Oklahoma City reported that Tubbs met with school officials in Fort Worth to discuss the position that opened when Moe Iba was recently fired.

Tubbs reportedly was in Great Bend, Kan., on Friday to attend a junior college all-star game. He did not immediately respond to a message left on his answering machine by The Associated Press.

Tubbs is in the winningest coach in Oklahoma history. His team went 15-13 this past season, breaking a string of 12 straight 20-game seasons.

Meanwhile, a published report says Texas Christian officials have contacted two others in their search to replace Iba.

Officials interviewed University of Arizona assistant Jessie Evans on Thursday, the Fort Worth Star-Telegram reported Friday.

The newspaper quoted a source at the University of Arizona.

"I do know he's interviewed or being interviewed," said the official, who requested anonymity. "That's for sure."

Rice's Bronson takes 300 hurdles

AUSTIN (AP) — Rice's Bryan Bronson, the defending national champion in the 400-meter hurdles, took first place in the university division of the Texas Relays Friday night in an NCAA championship qualifying time.

Bronson won in 49.99, a time good enough to qualify for the NCAA outdoor championships in Boise, Idaho, in June. Baylor's Jeff Jackson took second with a time of 50.69, also good enough to beat the NCAA qualifying time of 50.70.

"I felt really good about this race," Bronson said. "I've been working on getting my timing between the hurdles. This was one of my better races."

Andy Kokhanovsky set a national junior college record in the discus, University of Texas' Eileen Vanisi set a Texas Relays record in the shot put and Baylor made strong showings in the sprint relays on the third day of competi-ters at the NCAA indoor meet, tion. The meet wraps up Saturday.

Kokhanovsky, of Blinn Junior College, threw the discus 205-1, replacing the previous national junior college record of 204-11 set by Mike Gravelle of Skyline Junior College in 1986.

"We came here and the record was our primary goal," said Tom Lester, Kokhanovsky's coach. "We knew we could win, but we wanted to set the record."

Second place in the discus went to Kjell Ove Hauge of Texas-El Paso, while Courtney Ireland of Southern Methodist took third.

In the 4x200-meter relay, Baylor's Michael Ford, Tony Miller, Deon Minor and Raoul Howard posted a time of 1:22.07, the second fastest collegiate time this year.

Kentucky, led by Clyde Rudolph who finished third in the 200 me- took second with a time of 1:22.29, barely edging Louisiana State, which finished third (1:22.30).

Earlier, Miller, Minor, Corey Williams and Howard helped Baylor qualify for the NCAA championships in the 4x400-meter relay with a time of 3:04.16 in a preliminary semifinal. The time needed to qualify for the NCAAs is 3:04.70. Minor said the team was shooting to beat the 3-minute mark in the finals on Saturday.

In the 3,000-meter steeplechase, Jim Svenoy of Texas-El Paso successfully defended his Texas Relays title with a time of 8:38.59. Svenoy, who was second in the steeple at the 1993 NCAA outdoor championships, also qualified for this year's NCAAs by eclipsing the qualifying time of 8:44.

Vanisi set a Texas Relays record in the shot put, throwing 57-4¼ and replacing the previous mark of 57-2¼ set by Regina Cavanaugh in 1988.

TCU stuns No. 9 'Horns; Tech wins

Associated Press

FORT WORTH — Shawn Stanek drove in three runs and Darren Tawwater had a two-run homer in the fifth Friday to lead Texas Christian to an 8-6 victory over No. 9 Texas.

It was the first time the Horned Frogs (24-14, 5-2 Southwest Conference) beat the Longhorns since May 4, 1990.

Down one run in the fourth, Texas (28-13, 6-4) grabbed the lead on a homer by Zach Randle and Marcus Hendry's RBI groundout.

Stanek tied the score with an RBI single, then Rob Johnson scored on a wild pitch from Texas starter Ryan Kjos.

The two teams meet again today in a doubleheader.

Texas Tech 11, Houston 3

LUBBOCK — Randy DuRoss hit a 3-run homer — his fourth roundtripper in as many games — leading Texas Tech to an 11-3 victory Friday over Houston behind the pitching of Ryan Nye.

Nye (9-2) went all the way for the Red Raiders, who improved their record to 29-11 for the season and 5-2 in Southwest Conference play. He struck out nine and scattered nine hits.

Houston fell to 25-17 and 4-6.

Rice 10, Baylor 5

HOUSTON — Jose Cruz Jr. and Donald Aslaksen homered to lead Rice past Baylor.

Cruz hit his league-leading 11th home run in the fifth inning to put the Owls into the lead to stay at 4-3. Then Aslaksen added a grand slam during the Owls' five-run eighth inning.

It was Aslakesen's fourth homer of the season and first career grand slam.

past a Lee defender. But his shot missed the post by inches.

"Defensively I didn't think they should have been able to handle us," Farias said. "Their four defenders stayed in the whole game and we had fresh people coming in."

Midland's offense looked frustrated in the second half. They either tried to do too much with one-on-one moves or used uncharacteristic long passes to try to penetrate Lee's defense.

"We came out dominating but we weren't playing our game," Hunter said. "Our game is short passes in the midfield and we didn't get that going until after they scored."

Down 1-0, Hunter broke free on the left wing but was tackled by Lee's Jason Hampton right at the penalty box line.

"We should have been up two or three goals at the beginning of the game," said Midland coach Tom Eskihati, "but when you miss opportunities the other team takes advantage of it and that's what they did."

Midland ends its best soccer season by far, not having made even the region tournament before. They also went further in the playoffs than any other District 5-5A team has.

"A couple of us came up here (to Pflugerville) last year just to watch (the state tournament)," Farias said, "and we said we'd be here next year playing, and we were."

Their accomplishment won't soon be forgotten.

In the girls semifinals, Highland Park beat Kingwood 2-1 in overtime and Arlington Martin topped Westwood 1-0. Martin will face Highland Park in the championship game today at noon.

TALL: Locals host meet

(From 1B)

The girls division will feature a small field with Lee and Midland being joined by San Angelo.

The Midland High boys hope to continue the improvement made since the beginning of track season, coach Monty Stumbaugh said.

"Our relays have been running well and almost everyone has been improving every week," Stumbaugh said. "One thing I can say about this group is that they compete really well, so if they have a chance, they will perform well. Several of the kids are trying to make it to regionals and then, hopefully, on to Austin."

Representing MHS on the 400-meter relay are Dwight Allison, Roy Ratliff, Tim Warren and Roy Coats. Warren and Coats will be joined by Charlie Juarez and Charles Christ on the 1,600 relay.

Christ is the defending district champ in the 800 and will be competing in that event as well. Juarez and Victor Leggett should compete well in the 400. In the field events, Brian Danhof will throw the discus and compete in the shot put.

The Lee boys will be strong in the field events, coach Mike Quimby said.

Quimby said he hopes this meet will give some indication of what he can expect at the district meet.

"If Permian and Odessa bring all their people then we should get a good look," Quimby said.

Michael Nunn will compete in all three jumping events and Daniel Hughes will join him in the high jump. Roderick Mayfield will enter the long jump and the 110 high and 300 intermediate hurdles.

Quimby said he did not think his 1,600 relay would be as strong as his 400 relay. Jerry Stanford, Marlon Henry, Mayfield and Melvin Dunson will represent the Rebels in the shorter relay.

In the girls division, both Midland coach Susan Nix and Lee coach Bill Martin are competing with young teams.

"We've got a really strong group of sophomores but the kids all have it in their hearts," Nix said. "I'm expecting some great things from Ogonna Merritt and Teresa Nobles in the 200. They really come alive when the meet starts."

Merritt and Nobles will be joined by Toya Zachery and Midland's only senior Courtni Harrison in the 400 relay. Merritt, Zachery and Nobles will also compete in the 800 relay with Kara Kidwell.

"Individually, we don't have much speed," Martin said. "I hope to do better and improve our times in the 800 and mile relays."

Kristin Dunn, Farrah Fisher, Niki Hill and Demika Lane will run on Lee's 800 relay while Dunn and Fisher will be joined by Andrea Neal and Kelli Erl in the 1,600 relay.

ANGELS: New team cleans the plate

(From 1B)

Of course, Angel veteran Emmitt Cohick did Ramirez one better by clearing the fence twice. Fans dealt him $360, but he had to hit two dingers to earn more money than Ramirez. Cohick's blasts can be more readily acceptable since he hit 11 homers for the Angels last season.

"That's not too bad for the first game," Cohick said. "I had two homers in a game here last year, but I've never come close to that on opening day. I've always been a very slow starter and then pick it up during the season. This year I had a good spring training and was just trying to carry that over into the season."

Cohick claims that he wasn't shooting for the fences.

"I don't try to think about home runs, or at least try not to. I'm more of a doubles hitter anyway. If they (homers) come, they come."

The Angels also promised a strong-armed pitching staff and starter Shad Williams, who was 7-10 for Midland last season, didn't disappoint with seven innings of four-hit ball.

Williams always seemed to be strong on the road last year, but didn't fare to well in his Midland outings.

"I'm just trying to show people that I can pitch in this park," Williams said. "I'm pleased with the outing. I just try to go out there relaxed, but I must say that 15 runs can help you relax a lot."

Angel returner Chris Pritchett joined Cohick and Ramirez with three-hit nights. Cohick and Ramirez each drove in four runs. Cohick scored four times.

Leadoff hitter Marquis Riley and shortstop Tim Harkrider, a University of Texas grad, each had two hits. Only third baseman Chris Smith and catcher Fausto Tejero failed to hit safely in the game, but Tejero got his first RBI with a bases loaded walk in Midland's five-run sixth.

ANGEL DUST: The two teams meet again at 7 p.m. today with Mark Ratekin (10-8 last year) going against Wichita's Jose Martinez (8-7) ... Wichita's Scotty Pugh, an Abilene Cooper graduate, didn't get a start Friday, but collected a ninth inning double as a pinch hitter ... Midland firsts: First hit, Pritchett, a single; first extra base hit: Ramirez, a double in the third; first RBI: Harkrider in the third; first homer: Cohick in the fifth; first hit by an opponent: Keith Thomas, a double off Williams in the third ... Midland had three double plays in the opener while Wichita had four errors and used five pitchers ...

BANQUET: JUCO all-star games planned

(From 1B)

"I think the tournament is a great idea, it will let everybody know that women's basketball is going to be an item at Midland College and I think its going to be for the conference. It shows the strength of the WJCAC," said Howard College women's coach Royce Chadwick.

"I think anytime you add somebody that is going to do it right it really helps your conference. Traditionally, your conference is only as strong as its weakest link. With Midland in there, making the committment that they are going to make, they should be in regional as often as everybody else."

"I think adding another team to the conference gives some high school players some opportunities, I guess," said Stephanie Cotter, a sophomore from South Plains College who played her high school basketball at 3A power Canyon and is considering attending West Texas A&M, Rice and Incarnate Word.

"It will be tough the first year," said Dennis Smith, first-year head coach of Panola Junior College. "People shouldn't put a lot of pressure on Ron because it is hard to get started, I know from experience."

"With the facilities you have here, it will be an asset for him to sign some good players."

Jones was not in attendance on Friday, out recruiting and trying to sign players on the first day that junior colleges can sign high school athletics.

MASTERS: Mize leads

beat Norman with a 140-foot chip-in in a playoff here in 1987, took a one-stroke lead at the halfway point Friday with a 71, finishing 36 holes at 5-under-par 139.

Norman shot 70 and was at 140 along with Lehman and Forsman, who made seven birdies on his way to a 66.

And Forsman would like nothing better than to have a chance to redeem himself for last year, when he was just one stroke off the lead on the last day before dumping two balls in the water on the 12th hole.

"I suffered a horrendous blow last yea at No. 12," Forsman said. "And I hope someday to have my chances there again. I guarantee I'll be aiming left." He made a par there Friday.

Lehman, who finished tied for third last year in his first Masters, shot a second-round 70.

Norman certainly is in great position to win his first Masters and make up for that playoff loss to Mize and other Masters disappointments.

"I feel very comfortable about my position," Norman said. "Very relaxed. I hope I can play on the weekend like I know I can.

"I have no feeling about being in the wrong place at the wrong time," he said of his past failures here.

The wind died down from Thursday's opening round, the iron shots got a little closer to the hole, and the pin placements became a little less of a problem.

And the scores were lower.

Jose Maria Olazabal of Spain and Ernie Els of South Africa played themselves back into contention with 67s to finish 36 holes at 3 under par, two strokes off the lead. Hale Irwin posted a 68 and was also at 3 under.

Tom Watson, who won the Masters in 1977 and 1981 but hasn't won a U.S. tournament since 1987, birdied the 18th hole for a 71 and 3-under 141. Also at 3 under was Tom Kite, who bogeyed No. 18 for a 72.

Jim McGovern, with a 70, and Chip Beck, Hajime Meshiai of Japan and Ian Baker-Finch of Australia, all with 71s, were 2 under par after 36 holes.

Loren Roberts shot a 68 and was at 1-under 143 after 36 holes along with Corey Pavin, who shot 72.

Mize had a chance to carry a two-stroke lead into the third round but hit the sand off the tee on 18 and bogeyed.

Norman, who also had a chance to win here in 1986 only to bogey the last hole and miss a playoff with Jack Nicklaus, was much more steady Friday than he was in the first round, when he made six birdies, six bogeys and an eagle.

He made two bogeys and four birdies in the second round, three on the back nine, including a gimme on No. 17 after a brilliant iron shot to within a foot of the hole.

Forsman shot 34-32, making birdies on Nos. 10, 13, 15 and 16 down the stretch. Lehman birdied 12 and 13 to get to 4 under and then parred in.

Foreign players have won here five of the last six years and many were considered top contenders, but one by one they fell by the

CUT: Palmer misses again

(From 1B)

Wonderful World of Golf series, then both will compete in the PGA Seniors in West Palm Beach, Fla.

"It'll happen; it always has before," Nicklaus said of his golf game. "I'm not going to give up on me."

Nicklaus had missed the Masters cut only twice previously, in 1967 as the defending champion and in 1959 as an amateur in his first appearance. In 1983 he withdrew before the second round, walking off the first tee with back spasms. Palmer has now missed the cut here for 11 straight years. He also missed in 1968, 1976, 1979 and 1981.

"My mental battle," Palmer said, "is whether I should continue to play here when I've played as poorly as I have the last few years. The tradition of the Masters where the former champions continue to play, that's what I've got to decide. But as long as I can hit it and as long as I can walk, I'm probably going to keep playing."

Asked if he was content matching Nicklaus virtually shot for shot for 36 holes, Palmer frowned.

"If we're matching shots," he said, "I'd rather the shots were a lot lower than they are."

Palmer has been granted a special exemption to play in the U.S. Open June 16-19 at the Oakmont Country Club outside Pittsburgh, not far from his Latrobe, Pa., home. He lost the 1962 Open at Oakmont in an 18-hole playoff with the then 22-year-old Nicklaus.

"I intend to play at Oakmont," Palmer said, then he waved his right hand, smiled and added, "Threat, no. But as long as I can break 80, hopefully a little better than that, I'll continue to play."

PURPOSE

The purpose of the Midland YMCA 1994 Corporate Cup Challenge is to 'Promote health, physical fitness and a sense of community through the spirit of friendly competition.' Toward this end, measures are being taken to assure fair and equitable competition for all participants. Specific rules have been developed for each of the events: these rules will be enclosed in your team packet. Eligibility requirements governing the competition are provided below.

ELIGIBILITY

1. Team members must be at least 18 years of age.
2. Team members must be employed by the sponsoring company or agency at the time of the competition or, if laid off, must still be covered under the company's health insurance plan. In addition, contract labor that is on site full time at a facility where they are supplying a required service of that company, may also participate for that company. A written request to the Registration Committee listing these participants must be made.
3. Up to five companies/businesses of the same or similar professions having 25 or less than 25 employees may combine to enter a team. They must make a written request to the Registration Committee in order to be officially entered.
4. In the division categories, spouse participation will be allowed based on the number of company employees. This scale is listed blow:

of Employees	# of Spouses
99-75	9
74-50	14
24-lower	24

In order to insure participation in the Cup by Division I and II, these teams will be individually evaluated when lacking enough participants of one sex to competitively participate. Rulings allowing additional spouses for these companies and businesses will be made by the Registration Committee and each case treated accordingly upon a written request.
5. Team members must be employed within Midland or one of its reporting district offices.
6. Team members must sign the Midland YMCA Corporate Cup waiver prior to competition; this must be submitted with the team roster.
7. Individuals not employed by a corporation, company or agency may enter the competition provided they form teams as representatives of their professional group(s). Examples are as follows: Midland Medical Society, Midland Bar Association, etc. Groups needing special assistance, may submit a written request.
8. The Midland YMCA Corporate Cup Registration Committee reserves the right to review all team entries relative to eligibility.

TEAM COMPOSITION

1. A team shall consists of no more than 40 members and no less than 20 members; each team must have identifying uniforms consisting of, at the minimum, matching T-shirts. A 1994 Corporate Cup Challenge t-shirt will provided to team members prior to the event with the intention that teams will have the backs of these shirts screened with their own logos.
2. Team rosters are due by April 15th, 1994. It is assumed that each team's roster is final as of that date. Rosters must be typed and all information included. Failure to do so may result in ineligibility for those events.
3. Each team member may participate in up to five events. The Banner and Spirit events will not be counted as part of these five events as we would like everyone to participate in these two.
4. Corporations that enter more than one team may not share or cross-enter members between teams. Each team scores its own points. No points will be shared or split.
5. Protests affecting the eligibility of any team member to compete or represent any agency, company or corporation in any event shall be made in writing to the Corporate Cup Registration Committee before the event is held.

Director plays journalist

Opie proves he made right career move

By Yardena Arar
N.Y. Times News Service

LOS ANGELES — If things hadn't worked out for him in Hollywood, Ron Howard says he might have pursued a career in journalism.

Instead, Howard did what for him has become the next best thing: He made a movie about it.

"The Paper," which went into wide release last month after a promising opening in a handful of theaters, allowed Howard to hang around real newsrooms, jotting things down in a reporter's notebook and using somewhat anachronistic terms like "put the wood on it," without having to permanently sign on for the profession's less glamorous aspects of long hours and high stress.

"I had been co-editor of the school paper at Burroughs High School in Burbank, and I loved it. I thought it was great," Howard recalled, seated at a massive table in a glassed-in conference room at his Imagine Entertainment offices on the 23rd floor of a Century City high-rise.

"It was a chance to write, and I really got into it and loved it. I'd go to those competitions and things on the weekends.

"And I thought, if I couldn't make the transition as an actor — or by then I already wanted to be a director — if I wasn't going to be able to do that, or if I couldn't get into a good film school, that it would be a pretty easy thing for me to drift into. Because it was storytelling, and it was writing, and it was about people. I liked all that."

Of course, Howard was already known to millions as Opie, the lovable kid on "The Andy Griffith Show," and Richie, the equally lovable '50s teen on "Happy Days." It wouldn't be too long before the feature directing thing happened. He was 23 when he made "Grand Theft Auto."

Since then, a string of hits including "Splash," "Cocoon" and, more recently, "Parenthood" and "Backdraft," have made Howard one of the most successful filmmakers in the business.

But in the back of his mind, Howard always thought it would be a kick to tackle a movie about newspapering. "I never could come up with a good idea myself. I would jot one down, and I'd think about it for a while, I'd pitch it a little bit, and it was just never any good."

Ron Howard

'Star Trek' not exactly flawless, book says

By Jerry Nachtigal
Associated Press Writer

SPRINGFIELD, Mo. — Some might say Phil Farrand, author of "The Nitpicker's Guide for Next Generation Trekkers," has way too much time on his hands.

How else do you explain watching six years' worth of "Star Trek: The Next Generation" episodes over and over, eight or nine hours a day for months, looking for bloopers, flubs and technical mistakes?

"I have had people write me and ask, 'Why did you do this?'" Farrand said with a hearty laugh.

The answer, says this admitted "incredibly die-hard and slightly lunatic" fan of the "Next Generation" TV series, is that many devoted fans of "Star Trek" and its successor are nitpickers at heart, too.

Since Farrand's 433-page book hit the stores last December, he's received as many as 100 letters a week from fans who share his penchant for spotting mistakes.

"Some of them write to say, 'Thank you. I've done this, too, and people always look at me weird. It's wonderful to know there's other people who do this,'" Farrand said.

The errors may fly over the heads of casual viewers, but Farrand and his breed apply a Vulcanlike logic to viewing. Their sensors take note when:

—A computer tells First Officer Will Riker the holodeck is the next door on his right and he instead enters from the left.

—The reflection of a crystal pyramid on a desk reveals a man off camera with curly hair and glasses, chewing gum.

—An image on a computer screen, when frozen, turns out to be a parrot dressed in a Federation uniform.

—Despite her death in an earlier episode, security officer Tasha Yar is visible in the background waving goodbye to her fans as Jean-Luc Picard, captain of the USS Enterprise, and Dr. Beverly Crusher leave a cargo bay.

Nitpicking "gives you an active role to play while you're watching the show," Farrand said. "You can watch it and go, 'Aaahhhh! You messed up again!'"

Farrand, 35, became enchanted with Capt. Kirk, Spock, Dr. McCoy and the rest of the "Star Trek" crew growing up in the Philippines, where his parents were Assemblies of God missionaries.

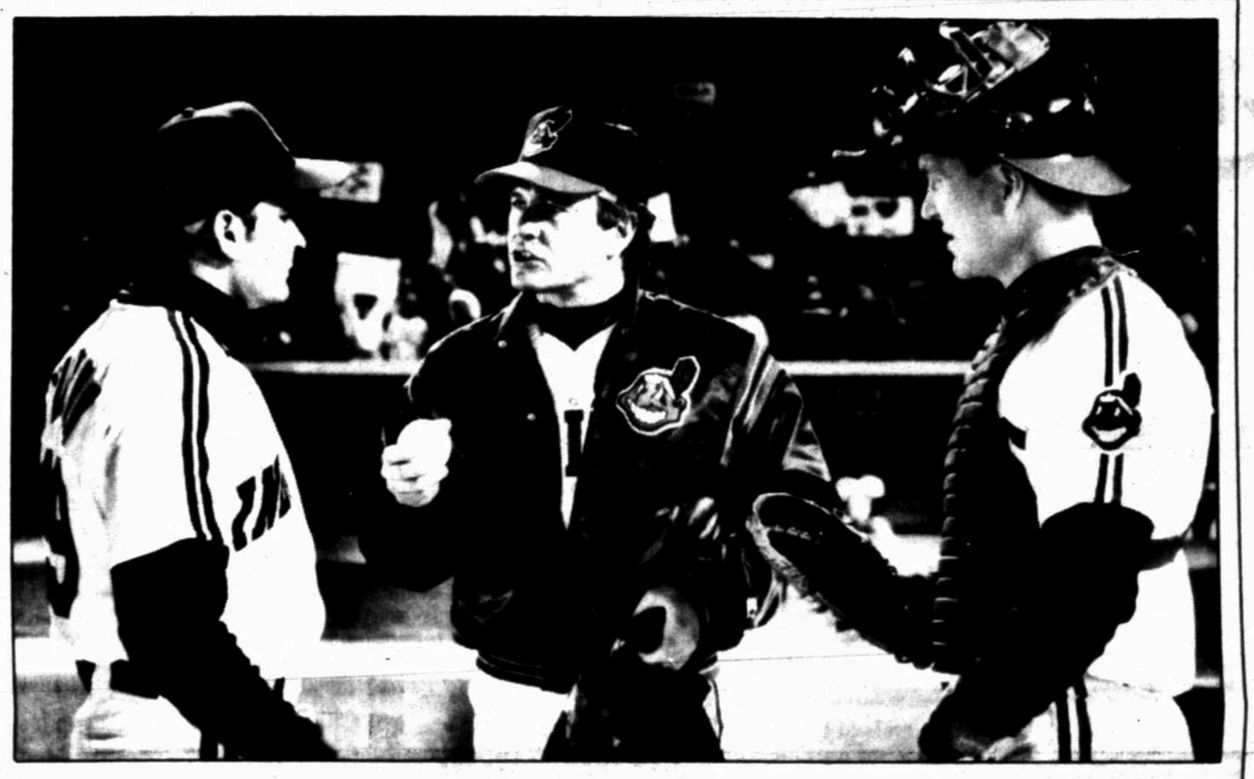

He fondly remembers the first nit he ever picked with the "Next Generation" series. It came in an episode titled "The Offspring" in the show's third season.

Young Wesley Crusher is visiting the android Data in a laboratory when the voice of Dr. Crusher, his mother, cuts in, reminding him he's supposed to be getting a haircut.

Wesley mutters a smart-aleck remark, apparently after his mother had signed off. But he didn't touch his chest badge or a panel somewhere to end the conversation. Why, Farrand wondered, didn't Dr. Crusher hear the remark?

The incident touched off spirited discussion among Farrand and his Trekker friends about just how communicators worked.

Farrand, who formerly worked as a computer programmer and as a desktop music publisher before pursuing a writing career, thought legions of other Trekkers might have similar questions.

Strike two, yer out

■ "Major League II," yet another sequel, is a major strikeout.

N.Y. Times News Service

LOS ANGELES — "Major League II" is as pointless and pathetic a sequel as has ever graced a major studio roster.

The 1989 Warner Bros. original about a collection of misfits molded into a championship Cleveland Indians baseball team was no great work of art, either, but at least writer-director David Ward's characters had a certain off-the-wall charm that made the outing fresh and fun.

My personal favorite was Pedro Serrano (Dennis Haysbert), the guy who had a little voodoo shrine going in his locker, but there were certainly others to choose from — Rick "Wild Thing" Vaughn (Charlie Sheen), the punked-out ex-con pitcher who needed glasses to control his fastball; Roger Dorn (Corbin Bernsen), the lazy glamour boy; and Rachel Phelps (Margaret Whitton) as the wicked witch/owner whose fondest dream was to see the team fail so dismally that she would get to move the franchise to Miami.

They're all back, as are Bob Uecker as commentator Harry Doyle, and Tom Berenger as aging catcher and resident straight man Jake Taylor. But Ward (who directs only) and screenwriter R.J. Stewart have taken them in the most formulaic directions imaginable, and even the best of the mostly cheap gags feel sadly dog-eared.

In fact, some of the humor depends on the audience remembering the one star who didn't re-up, Wesley Snipes. His character, Willie Mays Hays — now played by newcomer Omar Epps — supposedly has gone to Hollywood in the off season and is featured in a mildly amusing action-movie spoof.

Like the others, Hays' troubles stem directly from the complacency born of success. Vaughn has grown his shaved hair and abandoned his motorcycle leathers in favor of designer jackets, Dorn has bought the team (but only temporarily), and Pedro has exchanged his Caribbean mysticism for a sunnier brand imported from the Far East.

Some new teammates are on board: A catcher named Rube (Eric Bruskotter) who can't throw when he thinks about what he's doing, a Japanese ball player (Takaaki Ishibashi) who is supposed to be funny just by being Japanese, and all-around bad guy Jack Parkman (David Keith), who ousts Jake from his catching job.

The dawn of bubblegum bluegrass

Shawn Camp has blended progressive honky-tonk with bubblegum bluegrass.

■ Arkansas native Shawn Camp has a mixture of deep roots and progressive honky-tonk.

By Jim Patterson
Associated Press Writer

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Shawn Camp started playing the guitar at age 5. Fifteen years later he moved to Nashville in January and by February he was performing with the Osborne Brothers on the Grand Ole Opry.

"I don't know if I'd call myself a prodigy," the 27-year-old Camp demurred during an interview at Warner Bros. Records. "I've always played, it's a part of me."

The 10 selections on Camp's eponymous debut compact disc burst with ambition, ranging from the bubblegum-bluegrass (new ground broken here!) of "K-I-S-S-I-N-G" and "Confessin' My Love" to George Jones-styled mourners like "One of Them Days."

'Threesome' falls flat in most categories

By Janet Maslin
N.Y. Times News Service

Groaning and eye-rolling aren't possible for inanimate objects, but if they were, the portrait of Jack Kerouac seen in "Threesome" wouldn't keep a straight face.

Kerouac decorates a bedroom in the college dormitory apartment where Eddy (Josh Charles), Stuart (Stephen Baldwin) and Alex (Lara Flynn Boyle) flatter themselves into thinking they are a boldly bohemian trio. The film is so proud of its alleged daring that it even begins with a dictionary definition of the word "deviant." "Sitcom" would have been more like it.

It cannot have been easy to throw three young, nubile characters into close quarters and sustain an utterly sexless, charmless atmosphere. But Andrew Fleming ("the 'Generation X' film maker whose age belies his considerable experience behind the camera," according to production notes) has done exactly that.

Fleming treats the non-events in this story as if they were of monumental importance, meanwhile managing to postpone the inevitable three-way sexual encounter until the final reel. If you are sufficiently interested, you may wonder why three people sharing very close quarters don't decide to fool around until they are out skinny-dipping, in a highly visible spot, where they can be interrupted by a troupe of kiddie hikers.

In the meantime, there are bathroom jokes, gay-baiting wisecracks, wildly pretentious narration ("Solitude brought out the worst in me; it gave me time to brood over the nature of things") and truly excruciating literary references.

The principals see fit to compare themselves to characters in both "The Catcher in the Rye" and "Jules and Jim." Interesting footnote: It is while discussing the Salinger reference, not the one to Truffaut, that Alex smokes thoughtfully and sports a beret.

"Threesome" gets off to its contrived start once the boorish, sex-obsessed Stuart and the quieter, smarter Eddy realize that a campus computer has accidentally assigned them a female roommate. (With typical grace, the film makes this point by sending Eddy to the toilet while Alex is in the shower.)

The three trade insults briefly, then realize that they are becoming fast friends. But matters are complicated: Alex resists Stuart and likes Eddy. Eddy is attracted to Stuart. Stuart isn't interested in Eddy, a point he makes by using the words "fag" and "homo" with great regularity.

The film suggests that Stuart may be protesting too much, but what does it matter? Every time the characters threaten to become appealing, Fleming has them do things like spray each other with shaving cream.

Top honors for obnoxious behavior are not easily won, and Baldwin seems to have the edge, what with all his constant leering and a terrible haircut to boot. But Ms. Boyle wins handily with a scene that has her writhing orgasmically atop a library table while Eddy reads Hawthorne, in order to demonstrate that big words turn her on.

"I'll mold you into a heterosexual with my bare hands!" she tells Eddy in another scene.

"Threesome" has the bad luck to arrive while other, much better films about three-way relationships between feckless young characters are within recent memory ("Three of Hearts," which starred Baldwin's brother William) or currently in release.

Among the charms of the buoyant "Reality Bites" is that film's ability to pinpoint the pop-cultural context for its characters' lives without sounding smug. "Threesome," on the other hand, has Stuart complaining about his date by saying: "I was out to dinner with her the other night, and I asked her if she liked Scorsese. She said, 'Well, I'm not really that hungry.'"

PRODUCTION NOTES:

Threesome is rated R (Under 17 requires accompanying parent or adult guardian). It includes nudity and profanity.

Written and directed by Andrew Fleming; director of photography, Alexander Gruszynski; edited by William C. Carruth; music by Thomas Newman; production designer, Ivo Cristante; produced by Brad Krevoy and Steve Stabler; released by Tri-Star Pictures. Running time: 93 minutes.

HOWARD: Decision on film comes fast

(From 1C)

So when screenwriter David Koepp ("Death Becomes Her," "Jurassic Park") mentioned a newspaper story he was working on with his brother Stephen, a senior editor at Time magazine, Howard was interested.

"When I read the first draft, it didn't take me more than a couple of days, really. I decided I wanted to do it," he recalled.

The $30 million, multicharacter, multistorylined film takes place in the course of 24 hours at a fictional New York tabloid daily. To nail the atmosphere, Howard spent considerable time before and during production soaking up ambience at the city's two real tabloids, the News and the Post.

In the process, he acquired the unofficial technical consultant services of some two dozen journalists who get screen credit for playing themselves in the film, this on top of the half-dozen credited technical advisers.

"Even though the press has kind of picked up on it, I didn't think of it as much of a publicity thing, because nobody knows who these folks are," Howard said.

"On 'Backdraft' I had a really good experience by having a lot of firefighters do little cameos and be extras. We had our technical advisers, but what happened was, when we needed somebody to ad lib a line, they just knew what to say...

"There was just a nice energy, so I decided to try to do the same thing with journalists."

As it happened, the newspapers themselves were going through a period of high drama at the time, with the Post's future hanging by a thread as a succession of putative owners came and went.

"I was there on Pete Hamill's first day back on the job," Howard said. "It was kind of fun to be around that whole (situation). I wasn't there every day experiencing the bunker mentality, but I was reading about it, and talking to Pete here and there, and I did get invited to a New York Post wake at the Lion's Head (a bar) this one night they thought it was all over."

Howard said he found journalists to have much in common with actors and filmmakers because of the similar interest in telling stories.

"As far as the pressure, I think that it's more grueling and ultimately more debilitating to be a journalist because it just never stops. I mean, it just never stops."

However, Howard added, the difficulty of balancing professional and personal life — a major conflict for the lead character played by Michael Keaton — is not a problem confined to people in journalism.

"When my wife and I have arguments and conflicts, nine out of 10 times it boils down to, 'How are you managing your time? Did you really need to do that?' " said Howard, who divides his time between the East and West coasts.

"That's what our lives are like today. I think, especially if you're in an urban environment and a somewhat corporate job or competitive job field, that you're going to feel all these things."

MUSICIAN: Dream features Owens, Cash

(From 1C)

Sound of the 1960s, replete with strings. The song was written by Camp and Dean Miller, son of the late singer-songwriter Roger Miller ("King of the Road").

"I love that stuff," Camp said, "I love it all. That's why I moved here. This is where all the great records were made.

"I was wanting to be down here and be a part of the 1960s radio playlist. That was my dream, to be on the same playlist as Buck Owens and Merle Haggard and Johnny Cash."

Camp co-wrote all but one of the songs on the record, sung them in his Arkansas drawl, and played guitar and fiddle. It's with a fiddle that he's made a living the last few years.

"Well, after I worked with the Osbornes and Jerry Reed, I went to work with Alan Jackson, then Shelby Lynne, then Suzy Bogguss and Trisha Yearwood."

Camp co-wrote all but 1 song on the record, sung them in his Arkansas drawl, and played guitar and fiddle. It's with a fiddle that he's made a living the last few years.

Camp, who was born in Little Rock, Ark., and reared in nearby, rural Perryville, recalled how he "was raised going to bluegrass festivals."

"My dad plays guitar and sings, and mom used to sing — but we all listened to bluegrass. ... I had little plastic guitars from early on, but I didn't learn the chords until I was 5.

He picked up the mandolin when he was about 8, then the fiddle at 15.

"We used to have pick-ins at the house and stuff. We'd have 50-60 people come by the house and just pick. Every room would be a jam session. We used to go to neighbor's homes, and they would be the same way. That's a lot how I learned to play in front of people."

Camp said he's been writing songs since the fifth grade, but only got competent after moving to Nashville and co-writing with some pros. Besides Miller, writers Will Smith, John Scott Sherrill, Herb McCullough and Jim Rushing are represented on "Shawn Camp."

"They showed me the ropes a bit," Camp said. "Nothing can bring you down the rest of the day if you've finished a song."

Even though he considers bluegrass to be "as true as the trees," Camp listened to advice to tone it down some.

"People have discouraged me from going to extremes in bluegrass at this point in my career because I'm so new and they don't want me to not be able to get out of that."

Still, don't expect Camp to become a pop artist.

"I just never listened to that 'swimmy' pop — that's what I call it. All those synthesizers and stuff," he said. "I could live without ever hearing another synthesizer."

MAJORS: Team starts weak

(From 1C)

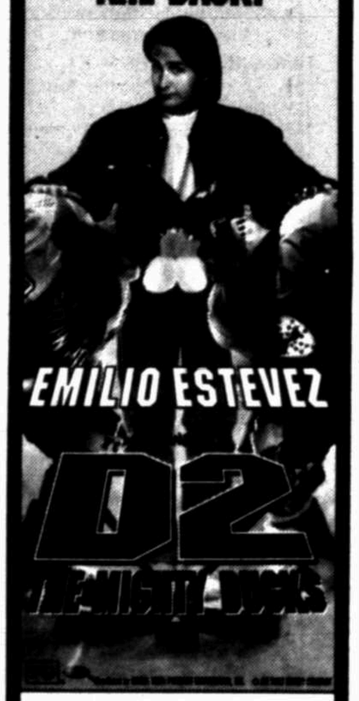

It's not revealing any state secrets to say that the team starts out pretty terrible and ends up winning. You just wish an element of heart had found its way into the by-the-numbers, for-the-bucks mix, or that so many lame jokes hadn't been so mercilessly strung out. When Randy Quaid's uncredited performance as the world's most annoying fan begins to feel genuinely annoying, you know it's time to give up the franchise.

Dear Mr. Courtney:
Last week, after noticing your ad in the newspaper, I had you align the front end on my Volvo. I am pleased with the alignment and the very reasonable cost. I also want to thank you for informing me of a possible tread separation in one of my tires, of which I was completely unaware. The tire company replaced it without a hassle, thus prevent a possible dangerous situation since my daughter is driving that car to California within the week.
Thanks again for a job well done.
Sincerely

President of top Spanish-language TV network pushes limits

By Kathleen Murray
N.Y. Times News Service

MIAMI — Not long ago, Carlos Barba spotted Orlando Narango, an old friend, at Univision's television studios here. Barging onto the set, he rushed up to hug Narango, president of the Latino Chamber of Commerce, who was taping an interview for "Comentarios," a local public-affairs show.

Onlookers were stupefied. A cameraman shook his head. The producer screamed, "Cut!" Seemingly oblivious, Barba, who runs Univision's nine local stations, kept chatting. Sighed Arlene Torres, Univision's communications director, "That's Carlos."

It was hardly the first time Barba has displayed his spotlight-grabbing style at Univision Television Group, part of the nation's top-rated Spanish-language network.

And since becoming the group's president and chief operating officer in January 1993, he has pushed revenues to record levels by revamping programming, cutting staff and expenses, and bringing in new management.

Not everyone has taken to Barba, though. Indeed, some in the industry say it is just his promotional abilities that have made him so visible. But as Univision looks to expand — it is negotiating to buy a 10th station, in Chicago — Barba vows to keep pushing Spanish television into the mainstream.

Last month he signed an agreement with the Florida Marlins giving Univision's local station, WLTV, exclusive rights to broadcast three major league ball games. "That's a first for Spanish-language TV," he said. "People are realizing we are no longer just a minority medium."

Hispanic television is clearly coming of age, with the likes of MTV, CNN, ESPN and NBC forging into Spanish-speaking markets both here and in Latin America.

The Hispanic population in the United States — 30 million and growing — is younger and tends to spend more of its income on food and clothing than other consumers. Cable has fragmented the television market, sending advertisers looking for the best way to reach specific groups.

Revenues at the nation's two Spanish-language networks — Univision and Telemundo Group — have been rising since the late 1980s, a trend that is expected to continue. "There's enough out there that both networks can gain without stealing from each other," said Richard Makoujy, an analyst with BDS Securities in New York.

To Barba, 59, a Cuban-born actor turned promoter, this is a dream come true. Within five years, he predicts, corporate advertisers like Procter & Gamble and General Foods will realize that with Univision they can reach Spanish-speakers throughout the Americas. "I've been preaching this for 15 years," he said, his English still halting after more than 20 years in America.

In person, Barba lives up to his reputation as a charmer. A visitor quickly becomes his captive, but comfortable, audience. He says goodbye with a hug, and he closes telephone calls with, "I send you kisses."

On one recent day, Barba, who is also general manager of WLTV, was giving a party for advertisers and other clients. As usual, he was running behind. A mad dash across town at 4:15, missing a lunch appointment, found him hugging the proprietor of La Giocosa, who was apologizing for being able to hold his kitchen open only until 3:30. Then it was back to his hotel to scavenge for tomato soup and a vodka tonic in the bar.

His energy restored, Barba was soon joking with the actor Eric Estrada, formerly of the series "CHIPS" and now a star in Latin American telenovelas, or soap operas. On the way out, he waylaid two hotel guests, Elton John and Sylvester Stallone, not satisfied until he had extracted their promises to try to come to the party.

Fortunately, perhaps, they did not show up. About 150 guests were expected, Ms. Torres said, but about twice that many appeared — because Barba kept inviting people.

Barba's love of show business has deep roots. The son of a well-to-do doctor in Havana, he turned his back on medicine because he couldn't stand the smell of a laboratory. Instead he chose baseball, playing second base on the Washington Senators' farm team for two years in the 50s until a shoulder injury forced him to quit. "I thought my life was over," he said.

It wasn't. While working as a waiter at a Miami restaurant, he persuaded the owner to let him tell jokes and sing, and his career in entertainment was born. On his return to Cuba, Barba got a job at a Havana television station writing, doing comedy and playing romantic roles in telenovelas. "When you're hungry," he said, "you're not that picky."

When Fidel Castro came to power, in 1959, Barba fled to Caracas, Venezuela, landing a job as a performer and scriptwriter. Ten years later he moved to Puerto Rico to manage a television station owned by Columbia Pictures. He later went to work for WNJU, a Spanish-language station in New York, which later became part of Telemundo.

Barba ventured into promotions at a time when Hispanic media were virtually nonexistent in the United States. He still remembers trying to convince Castro Convertibles that many Hispanic customers, short on money, used couches as beds.

The manager told him flat out that he did not advertise in the Hispanic market. So Barba spent the next day writing down customers' names, finding that 52 out of 87 had Hispanic surnames. "Castro became a client," he said. Another time he went up to Frank Perdue at a Chinese restaurant, telling him Hispanic people eat a lot of chicken. He too began advertising.

While station manager at WNJU, Barba brought the rock group Menudo to Radio City Music Hall for a series of concerts. Eva May, a senior vice president with Noble & Associates, an advertising firm in Irvine, Calif., describes him as a natural at promotions.

Cameo appearances enjoy long history in American movies

By Matthew Purdy
N.Y. Times News Service

In the film "Naked in New York," Jake, a young playwright struggling to grasp fame and hang onto his girlfriend, finds himself on Martha's Vineyard at cocktail party among stuffed shirts in summer wear.

Feeling forlorn as his girlfriend waltzes from this pretentious conversation to that, Jake asks himself with both disdain and awe, "Who (italics) are (end italics) these people?"

Glad you asked, Jake.

These are all Famous People doing what they do best — acting famous. Only now they are doing it on camera, making cameo appearances in yet another film decorated — or burdened — with famous faces. These are not movie stars; they are movie meteors who vanish almost before they are noticed.

But "Naked In New York," which opens on Friday, solves the "problem" of the fleetingness of fame. The camera roams the party and then stops, freezing on each fairly famous writer — Richard Price, Ariel Dorfman, Bruce Feirstein, Marsha Norman, William Styron — as his or her literary credits roll up the screen.

Our bewildered hero, Jake, asks, "What am I doing here?" But the real question, of course, is, "What are they doing here?"

With recent films employing crowds of celebrities, viewers are often left with another nagging question: "Who is that person?"

In "The Paper" it might be Pete Hamill, the erstwhile columnist, or one or another of a string of New York media types. In "Chips" it might be Larry Bird, the retired Boston Celtics great. In "Reality Bites" it might be Karen (Duff) Duffy, of MTV fame.

"Everybody wants to be in movies now," said Andrew Sarris, the film critic and professor of film at the School of the Arts at Columbia University. "Everybody either wants to write them, direct them, produce them or be in them, if it's only for 10 seconds."

Cameos are "a kind of silliness," he added. "It's kind of marginal in terms of whether the film is good or not." Occasionally, he said, famous people playing themselves "authenticates the fictional characters." He himself once had a bit part himself, in a film called "Guns in the Trees," but it wound up on the cutting-room floor.

Dan Algrant, the director of "Naked in New York," said it was the idea of the producer Frederick Zollo to load up the film with celebrities. (Besides the writers, there are a half dozen other cameo appearances scattered through the movie.)

Using real writers "added some absolute authenticity" to the party scene, the director said. He was able to snag Styron, a family friend. Zollo rounded up the rest. The fact that Martin Scorsese — who taught Algrant in college — is the film's executive producer didn't hurt.

Getting the writers was one thing, but the film makers had another problem: audiences might not recognize their faces. To establish connections, resumes were put on the screen — the film version of putting clothing labels on the outside. The tactic was also a gentle mocking of the use of cameos.

Cameo appearances in movies have a long history. Alfred Hitchcock wrote bit parts for himself in his films, and "Around the World in 80 Days" used dozens of cameo appearances by stars of the day, from Frank Sinatra on down.

Recently, the film "Dave" used bit parts by politicians like Sens. Howard Metzenbaum and Christopher Dodd and news people like Robert Novak and John McLaughlin to add authentic Washington atmosphere. "The Player" used cameos by known movie faces, including Lily Tomlin and Cher, to give the feel of Hollywood.

And who could forget John V. Lindsay in "Rosebud," or Pete Rose in "Babe Ruth," or Dr. Timothy Leary in Cheech and Chong's "Nice Dreams"? The answer, of course, is nearly everyone, except their families and close friends.

"It's a major boost to the ego," Sarris said. "You can dine on it for weeks."

Well, maybe for a day. Philadelphia's Mayor Edward G. Rendell, who plays himself in a brief scene in "Philadelphia," said he hasn't gotten much reaction.

"My brothers' daughters in Dallas went to see it, and when I was on the screen they applauded," Rendell said. If anyone else recognized him, there was no indication.

But celebrities can help films. Media people, for instance, are sometimes wont to crow on the air and in print about their appearances — and about the film — creating promotional opportunities that are not lost on producers.

In other cases, walk-ons by the well-known can lend cachet. Donal Lardner Ward said he believes that "My Life's in Turnabout," his low-budget film about a cabdriver and a bartender who make a low-budget film, gets some legitimacy in the industry by the cameo appearances of the director John Sayles, the actress Phoebe Cates and others.

"I think these people even in small cameos help to boost the credibility of our film with distributors," said Ward, whose film will be released in June. He said the actors came to them by chance.

For example, his partner in the project, Eric Schaeffer, is a cabdriver and happened to pick up Ms. Cates a few times. Ward said she finally agreed to appear in the film, re-enacting the meeting in Ward's car.

And for those who do cameos, the whole thing can just be fun.

The flamboyant defense attorney William Kunstler is, perhaps not surprisingly, a frustrated actor. He has four film credits to his name, including "The Paper," where he plays himself being interviewed, and "Carlito's Way," where he's shown in a topless bar "stuffing dollar bills in the G-string of naked dancers."

He was the judge in "Malcolm X" and Jim Morrison's lawyer in "The Doors." He is a "card-carrying member of the Screen Actors Guild," and now he's thinking about merging his careers and fighting for the rights of cameo actors everywhere.

'Good Morning America' by ABC wins ratings war

NEW YORK (AP) — ABC's "Good Morning America" won the ratings crown among network morning shows for an eighth consecutive week, the network said Thursday.

For the week ending April 1, "GMA" had a 4.3 rating, 18 share. A single rating point equals 942,000 homes, or 1 percent of the 94.2 million U.S. TV households. Share is the percentage of sets tuned in during the time period.

NBC's "Today" was a close second, with a 4.1 rating, 17 share. "CBS This Morning" earned a 3.1 rating, 13 share for a third consecutive week, according to Nielsen Media Research data released Thursday.

For the calendar year, "GMA" has won 11 of 13 weeks. In addition, ABC has won 67 of the past 73 weeks and, in the last 222 weeks, has won 189 weeks, tied 12 and lost 21.

"GMA" spokeswoman Cathy Rehl said ABC also won four of the six key demographic groups: Among women ages 18 to 49, where a single rating point equals 1.21 million people. ABC had a 2.3 rating, NBC had a 1.9 and CBS a 1.2.

Among adults ages 25-54, where a single rating point equals 1.09 million people, ABC won with a 2.1 rating, NBC had a 1.9 and CBS a 1.3.

"GMA" also won the other women and adult categories, ages 18-49 and 25-54, but placed second to NBC among men ages 18-49 and 25-54.

Magazine ranks stars according to 'value'

By Yardena Arar
N.Y. Times News Service

LOS ANGELES — Tom Cruise is worth every penny of the $14 million to $15 million he supposedly is getting for "Interview With the Vampire," but Eddie Murphy, said to be getting as much for "Beverly Hills Cop II," is being overpaid.

That's the verdict from Entertainment Weekly in its "Are They Worth It" issue pegging the fees stars are paid for their services and offering opinions on whether the money is well spent.

Cruise was the highest-paid star in the magazine's "worth it" column. Others included Michael Douglas ($12 million for "Disclosure"), Harrison Ford (the $10 million he is said to be getting for "Clear and Present Danger" is described as "a genuine bargain"), Wesley Snipes ($7 million for "Drop Zone"), Sharon Stone ($5 million for "The Specialist") and Marlon Brando ($3.25 million plus 12.25 percent — of what, it's not stated — for "Don Juan Demarco and the Centerfold").

Deemed not worth it were Richard Gere ($8 million for "First Knight"), Nick Nolte ($7 million for "I Love Trouble" — "he doesn't open movies"), Robert De Niro ($4 million to $5 million for "Mary Shelley's Frankenstein" — "Some insiders believe he actually keeps people away"), Joe Pesci ($3.5 million for "With Honors") and Geena Davis ($2 million to $3 million for "Cutthroat Island").

Among some of Hollywood's best recent buys identified by Entertainment Weekly were Holly Hunter, who was paid $500,000 for "The Firm"; Christian Slater, who received $250,000 for "Interview With the Vampire"; and, surely the best among bests, Robin Williams' $75,000 fee for his voice work in "Aladdin."

SPIELBERG'S LIST: Steven Spielberg has zoomed to the top of Premiere's Power List, up 12 notches from last year.

Spielberg displaced top Warner Bros. executives Bob Daly and Terry Semel, who jointly slipped to second place. Superagent Michael Ovitz held steady in third place, followed by Disney studio chief Jeffrey Katzenberg, MCA topper Sid Sheinberg, Kevin Costner, Tom Cruise, Sony Pictures Entertainment chairman Peter Guber and, in 10th place, Viacom Entertainment Group chairman Jonathan Dolgen.

Paramount Pictures chairman Sherry Lansing, who slid from 11th to 13th place, was the top-ranked woman.

Clinton enters religious territory long enjoyed by Republicans

By Julia Malone
Cox News Service

WASHINGTON — President Clinton, a Southern Baptist who quotes from Scripture in speeches and openly talks about his own faith, is conducting a quiet missionary drive into religious territory long dominated by Republicans.

In the Democratic White House, the president hosts breakfasts that draw conservative preachers and openly laments the retreat of religion in American public life.

As a further sign of his outreach, Clinton recently gave an interview to ABC-TV on his spiritual outlook. "I do not believe I could do my job as president, much less continue to grow as a person, in the absence of my faith in God," he said to applause from some in the religious community.

The president speaks more about his religious views in an interview to be published this month in Christianity Today, an evangelical magazine.

And some observers suggest it's not bad politics, either.

For more than a decade, the conservative religious community and especially evangelical Christians have been flexing their voting power on behalf of Republicans.

Now Republicans are shying away from the religious right, which was blamed for damaging the GOP in the last presidential election. And Clinton is coming courting.

"Sincerity aside — and I think the president is sincere on these issues — there's good political reasons to want to try to appeal to these groups," said John C. Green, an expert on religion and politics at the University of Akron.

Evangelicals make up as much as one-fourth of the electorate, he said. In 1992 Clinton chipped away at the Republican dominance in that group by stressing a moderate image. Increasing his support among them could go a long way to strengthening Clinton's reelection potential.

"The evangelical community is a worthy target for votes," said Reverend Richard Cizik, an official with the National Association of Evangelicals. "I don't blame him one bit for going after them."

Cizik was among those invited for a White House session last November to discuss the war on AIDS. It was just one of several gatherings between Clinton and religious leaders in the last several months.

After Clinton had breakfast with a dozen evangelicals last October, he was rewarded with comforting words even from conservative Jack Hayford, pastor of the 8,000-member Church on the Way in Van Nuys, Calif.

Hayford wrote later of telling the president that "God flooded my heart with a genuine love for him" and that "it is God's will for him to be president."

But the so-called "gang of twelve" breakfast also stirred a bitter division in the religious community, especially among those who were enraged by Clinton's moves to lift abortion restrictions and ease rules against gays in the military.

Philip Yancey, columnist for Christianity Today, has been stung by the hundreds of angry letters attacking his chatty report on his breakfast with Clinton. Several compared the session to a meeting with Hitler.

Yancey was invited for the interview with Clinton that is to be published in the magazine late this month. But watching the religious community become polarized, he now has doubts about the White House outreach. "It may even have been counter productive," Yancey said.

Overall, Green gives Clinton's outreach a mixed grade. "He's not been tremendously successful in that he hasn't yet brought a lot of evangelicals into his fold," he said.

"What he has succeeded in doing is to blunt the image he developed early in his administration as a liberal," Green continued, recalling Clinton's early actions on abortion and homosexual rights.

But if ministers continue to meet with Clinton and "it doesn't appear to effect any change in policy," then the division between religious conservatives and the president could grow deeper, Green said.

Some Christians tell jokes, believe God has sense of humor

By David Briggs
AP religion writer

Nearly a decade ago, when Lutheran comic Merrilyn Belgum performed at a nursing home chapel, the altar was stripped bare of religious symbols. The unspoken message: "Now, we're going to have some fun and humor, but it has nothing to do with the church."

But today, when the "Queen Mother of Comedy" arrives with her trademark feathered boas, sequined dresses and oversized glasses, no one removes the cross and other trappings of faith.

In 1994, laughter is welcome on the pulpit and in the pews; Belgum is part of a new generation of clergy, theologians and, yes, comics, who seek converts to a faith that celebrates rather than endures life.

Their mission: to recapture what they envision as the joyful world of the early Christians, a world in which the resurrection was a living memory and centuries of church tradition had not relegated its celebration to one Sunday a year — Easter — and funerals.

Already, there are a number of signs that serious Christians no longer — as H.L. Mencken once wrote of Puritans — worry that someone, somewhere, is having a good time.

Jokes and cartoons have become common in religious bulletins, and an increasing number of clergy loosen up their congregations with funny stories.

"How do you disperse a threatening crowd?" asks the Joyful Noiseletter. "Take up a collection."

And according to The Parish Chute, "Anybody who has ever used the expression, 'It was no Sunday school picnic' has obviously never been to a Sunday school picnic."

The Fellowship of Merry Christians, founded in 1986 with 250 members, now has 10,000. And another new group, the Association of Battered Clergy, finds healing in humor for the pressures most ministers face daily.

The movement to a more celebrative faith focusing on joy and fueled by humor is not based solely on theological grounds. Fear of losing generations of baby boomers and baby busters who find the church boring — along with research into the physical and mental benefits of laughter — also are convincing religious leaders to lighten up.

"We came from an almost puritanical type of attitude: If it's fun, it must be wrong," said George Goldtrap of Madison, Tenn., who left full-time ministry in the Churches of Christ to be a professional speaker.

"We've come almost 180 degrees," Goldtrap said, "to the point where a positive mental attitude and a positive, happy demeanor is critical to one's spiritual welfare."

"A cheerful heart is a good medicine, but a downcast spirit dries up the bones," advises Proverbs 17:22.

Take off the solemn blinders many put on to approach the Bible and some biblical scholars say you can see Jesus had a sense of humor. In first-century Palestine, his disciples probably would have gotten a chuckle out of his one-liner aimed at religious hypocrites: "Why do you see the speck that is in your brother's eye, but do not notice the log that is in your own eye?"

In the Gospel of John, Jesus tells his disciples not to let his death overshadow his resurrection: "So you sorrow now, but I will see you again and your hearts will rejoice, and no one will take your joy from you."

Scholars say the earliest Christians, for whom Christ's death and resurrection were embedded in recent memory, heeded that advice.

Those Christians would not have recognized all the fuss over Easter. For them, every Sunday was Easter in terms of celebrating their belief that Jesus rose from the dead.

It wasn't until the fourth century, when Christians who once risked death to profess their faith suddenly were given social cachet by the Roman Emperor Constantine the Great, that the first Easter Christians began to show up in churches.

By the time of Gregory the Great early in the 7th century, the focus of services shifted from celebrating the resurrection to commemorating Jesus' suffering on the cross, said Catherine Gonzalez, a professor of church history at Columbia Theological Seminary in Decatur, Ga.

Go into the nearest museum and look at hundreds of years of religious art and you'll find plenty of depictions of the passion and crucifixion of Jesus but few post-resurrection portrayals or even joyful scenes from his life.

The Messiah whose message was "Be of good cheer" often is depicted as "a tormented depressive," according to Cal Samra, editor of The Joyful Noiseletter.

In America, the Puritans and their descendants not only eschewed humor, but stripped churches of even the slightest ornamentation.

Even today, many say that one of the great paradoxes of American Christianity is how a religion that proclaims joy, peace and everlasting life turned out to be so somber.

People will intone the Eucharistic prayer celebrating the most hopeful belief of their faith — Christ is risen, Christ will come again — then file up with great solemnity to receive the Host.

It's almost as if they believe a somber expression and solemn gait are necessary "to make it count," said the Rev. Paul Lintern, a Lutheran humorist from Mansfield, Ohio.

Sister Mary Christelle McAluso, a popular speaker known as "The Fun Nun" (not an oxymoron, she insists), contends people from a culture unfamiliar with Christian services would never guess activities so low-key could be considered celebrations.

"To picture religion as such a somber, dry and heavy thing," she said, "it's pitiful."

Monsignor Arthur Tonne has been telling jokes since he was a little boy, but when he first entered the priesthood, he was circumspect about using humor — until he noticed he was part of a quiet fraternity of priests using comedy to make the doctrine go down easier.

Today, Tonne, 89, is at work on the ninth volume of "Jokes Priests Can Tell." Three years ago, he even appeared on "The David Letterman Show."

"They used to tell me Jesus didn't smile," Tonne said. "I don't believe it."

Neither do a growing number of other religious folk, who are teaching people in the pew how to play, as well as pray, together, in a variety of forums from day-long "playshops" sponsored by the Fellowship of Merry Christians to social events with no purpose other than promoting fellowship.

"When people laugh, they listen," said the Rev. Ron Birk, author of "What's A Nice God Like You Doing in a Place Like This?"

Lintern started a "Saturday Night Alive" program at his old church in Doylestown, Ohio, in which prayer, skits, songs and Letterman-like Top 10 lists are offered to an audience containing some people who feel alienated from the churches they grew up in.

(Some of the Top 10 pick up lines at a Christian singles church: "What's a charismatic like you doing in a place like this?" and "Don't worry, I'm attracted to you purely in a spiritual way.")

Churches need to allow the full range of human feelings to be expressed, Lintern said.

"One thing that keeps people away is the assumption laughter is not allowed in the church," he said. "So many people grow up 'God is pointing fingers at us, waiting to stomp on us.'"

Kirk Hadaway of the United Church Board of Homeland Ministries said many younger adults who do not belong to churches say worship "is sort of boring," or not an environment where they feel welcome.

"They feel out of place, or people there are judging them," he said.

Goldtrap said it is impossible to attract young adults if you're constantly condemning and fault-finding.

"If you look at the churches that are growing, they are taking a lighter approach. They've deserted the hellfire-and-brimstone approach," he said.

Tom Mullen, a Quaker humorist (also not an oxymoron, he says), recognizes his fellow religionists' seriousness in contemplating war and peace and other weighty issues, but feels they don't enjoy life as much as they have divine permission to enjoy it.

Laughter is a gift from God, said Mullen, who teaches preaching skills at Earlham School of Religion in Richmond, Ind.

"Absence of joy, absence of celebration, is part of the evidence for religion that has lost its power, lost its connection to life," he said.

Still, advocates of humor in the sanctuary want to make it clear that they are aware the church is not a place, as Mullen puts it, to be entertained only long enough "to beat the Baptists to the restaurants" on Sunday mornings.

The challenge, he and others say, is to draw from the insight of the Book of Ecclesiastes to recognize that there is a time for every matter under heaven, including "a time to weep, and a time to laugh."

"I believe fully," says Christian humorist Liz Curtis Higgs of Louisville, Ky., "that the church should be the place where we laugh louder, and harder and longer than anyone else."

Ordination of women priests shakes divided Church of England

By Louis J. Salome
Cox News Service

BRISTOL, England — Amidst smiles of victory, audible protests and open revolt, the Church of England consecrated its first women priests last month in a stately 830-year-old Norman Cathedral.

The Right Rev. Barry Rogerson, bishop of the diocese of Bristol in southwest England, performed the revolutionary honors when he ordained 32 women, who ranged in age from 30 to 69.

About 1,200 people, each bearing a special pass, filled the Cathedral of the Holy and Undivided Trinity for the two-hour late-afternoon ceremony.

Church officials said there was a three-month waiting list for seats, making the ceremonies one of the toughest tickets in all England.

The event was certainly controversial, although fewer and fewer people attend services of England's official state church, and still fewer seem to care what transpires in the institution whose origins lie in the mid-16th century.

According to plans, by July 2 bishops will ordain slightly more than 1,000 women priests in the church's 43 English dioceses. This will absorb the backlog of women waiting to become priests, and from July 2 on, women and men will be ordained priests as they become eligible, Steve Jenkins, a church spokesman, said.

But church law still doesn't permit women to become bishops.

The Church of England lags far behind other branches of the Anglican communion worldwide in ordaining women priests.

Already about 1,100 women priests, and three women bishops, serve the Episcopal Church in the United States, the American branch of the Anglican communion. The first authorized ordination of women in the U.S. church was in 1977.

Women have been ordained priests in 15 other Anglican provinces around the world, according to church officials in London.

Still, the decision to ordain women, approved narrowly by the laity but more confidently by bishops and other clergy at a general synod in November 1992, remains highly charged and has split the church.

Carol Edwards, 47, one of the women who was ordained, said, "I wouldn't want to talk about a victory for women because, by definition, then there has to be someone else who has been defeated.

"My big fear is that this issue will divide the church if we let it. If we have the will, we can live together with our different views."

This already divided and uneasy institution, privileged and powerful as it remains, also suffers from flagging membership, the closing of numerous parishes due to population shifts and a glaring lack of interest, plus sagging finances due to bad investments.

A debate is even simmering among church leaders about whether links to the state should be severed or altered.

Leslie Houlden, theology professor at King's College in London and an Anglican priest, said the ordination of women is separate from the church's other evolving problems.

"It's a revolution to some, an evolution to others," he said of the ordination of women. "It's emotive; quite irrational passions are aroused. But people will adjust."

But the ordination of women has already caused some traditionalist clergy and laity to bolt for the Roman Catholic Church, which does not allow women priests.

Officially, 140 Anglican priests have left, or plan to leave, for Rome. According to several news reports, five bishops and about 600 other clergy recently signed a declaration accepting the authority of the pope.

Other reports say that up to 1,000 clergy, of the 11,000 in the church, will eventually join with Rome. This would cost the ailing church about $150 million because of its policy of reaching financial settlements with clergy who, for reasons of conscience, can no longer stay in the church.

No one knows how many lay members have left or will go.

Court hears case of landlords who refuse unmarried couple

By Jonathan Yenkin
Associated Press

BOSTON — A high court in Massachusetts has become an arbiter in a culture clash pitting religion against the sexual revolution.

In a case that bears resemblance to others around the country, two Catholic brothers are facing charges of discrimination because they refused to rent an apartment to an unmarried couple.

The brothers claim they were following their religious beliefs, but the state says their rental business doesn't qualify as a religious activity.

"Catholicism is not on trial here, but (the brothers') strongly held religious convictions are," said Jay Sekulow, counsel for the American Center for Law and Justice, a Virginia group founded by religious broadcaster Pat Robertson.

The center, which is representing the landlords, Paul and Ronald Desilets, presented arguments recently before the Massachusetts Supreme Judicial Court.

Nikolas Nikas, another attorney with the Virginia group, said the landlords were justified in refusing to go against their religion. He also noted that fornication is still against the law in Massachusetts, although authorities say it is rarely, if ever, enforced.

"The commonwealth is attempting to force the Desilets to violate their sincerely held religious beliefs," Nikas said.

But Judith Beals, an assistant attorney general, said the landlords are engaged in a commercial activity, not a form of worship that is protected under the law.

"The landlords have not shown how the government has restrained them in their religious worship," Beals told the court.

Similar cases have arisen in other states. In 1990, the Minnesota Supreme Court ruled in favor of a landlord who also refused to rent to an unmarried couple because of his religious beliefs. In California, the state Court of Appeals sided with a landlord, but the state Supreme Court last year refused to make a ruling.

Last year in Wisconsin, a state judge ruled a woman violated open housing laws by placing an ad for a "Christian handyman" to rent a room in her home.

Such cases evoke different views of how far religious liberties should extend.

Anne-Marie Amiel, an attorney with the Rutherford Institute, an organization that specializes in religious civil liberties, said if a person rents a room in his or her home, "they should be allowed to choose who they want under their own roof."

But she said, if someone owns a string of rental properties, "you are basically a commercial landlord. The (fair housing) laws apply to you."

A federal law passed last year, called the Religious Freedom Restoration Act, prevents any form of government from interfering with a person's exercise of religious freedom unless it can show a "compelling" interest.

Some religious groups say the law bolsters the case of landlords such as the Desilets.

While the government has a legitimate interest in ensuring open housing, it has a variety of tools to achieve that goal without having to "run roughshod over the religious liberties of others," said Brent Walker, general counsel for the Baptist Joint Committee, which focuses on religious liberty issues.

LOS ANGELES — Expect some pretty special special effects if Michael Jackson does a musical remake of the fantasy film "The Seven Faces of Dr. Lao."

The 1964 film starring Tony Randall tells the story of an elderly Chinese man with a penchant for spectacular disguise who solves the problems of a Western desert town.

"Michael has been interested in 'Dr. Lao' for some time and he is actively involved in all of the creative aspects of the development process. He's very excited that it is being done," his manager Sandy Gallin said this week.

Details of the project were still being negotiated and specifics weren't available. But special effects wizard Stan Winston, who worked with Jackson on "The Wiz" in 1978, confirmed he was involved in the negotiations.

Los Angeles and Santa Barbara county authorities have been investigating child molestation allegations against Jackson for eight months, but no charges have been filed.

BILOXI, Miss. — John Grisham has one thing on his mind these days and it's not writing. It's his other love: baseball.

John Grisham has one thing on his mind these days: baseball.

"When Stephen King and I get together, we talk about baseball. He coaches his son. When I was on the set of 'Pelican Brief,' I talked to Denzel Washington. He was mad because he was missing his 9-year-old's baseball game."

Last year, he took over his daughter's soccer team and went undefeated to win the city championship.

His big name means nothing on the playing fields.

"I've never detected any special treatment from umpires, opposing coaches or fans. They aren't intimidated. They love to beat me. But it's all in good fun," Grisham said.

FARMINGTON HILLS, Mich. — Tito and Jermaine Jackson have a new gig in TV commercials for a car dealer.

Michael Jackson's singing brothers spent Tuesday at a studio in this Detroit suburb making a series of spots with Mel Farr, a former running back for the Detroit Lions who owns seven car franchises.

"We happened to like Fords and a lot of his other products, and he makes us laugh," Jermaine Jackson said of Farr, who compensated each brother with a 1994 Lincoln Town Car.

"It's definitely something different than performing," Tito said.

The brothers met Farr after reading about him in Black Enterprise magazine. They made their first commercials with him in November 1992. The latest spots will be broadcast this month.

BOSTON — Forget the obligatory tote bag or logo-plastered umbrella. People who pledged $125 to the Boston Symphony Orchestra got lessons Friday from conductor Seiji Ozawa.

Symphony supporters win lessons from Seiji Ozawa.

About 50 symphony supporters won the lessons in conduction during the orchestra's annual fund-raiser last month. The group ranged from people who knew virtually nothing about conducting to amateur conductors, said Bernadette Horgan, a spokeswoman for the symphony.

Ozawa is the symphony's music director.

LAKE FOREST, Calif. — Olympic gold medalist Florence Griffith-Joyner hurt her back and neck when a hit-and-run driver struck a car she was riding in.

The 34-year-old runner and a chauffeur were treated and released from a hospital after the rear-end crash Thursday, said California Highway Patrol Officer Bruce Lian.

Her husband, Al Joyner, wasn't hurt.

Eloy Adelberto Griego Jr. was arrested later while trying to hide in the attic of a nearby home, Lian said. He was booked for investigation of felony hit-and-run driving and attempted breaking and entering.

The State in brief

■ Counties urge use of 5,500 prison beds

AUSTIN — Representatives of overcrowded county jails Friday called on state leaders to immediately implement State Comptroller John Sharp's audit, which said 5,500 inmates can be moved into state prisons.

"The jails are dangerously overcrowded," said Margo Frasier, an attorney who represents several counties. There are about 29,000 state inmates backed up in county jails.

"We're talking about a situation where it is becoming extremely dangerous for the people who are working in those jails," she said.

But Bill Cryer, a spokesman for Gov. Ann Richards, said the 5,500 beds outlined in Sharp's audit of the prison system are in doubt.

"A lot of those beds, if you can use them at all, will have to be retrofitted with extra showers and toilets. That's not something you can do immediately," he said.

"Legal questions still have to be answered," he said.

State leaders have said they fear that some of the audit recommendations would result in state control of the prison system being taken away by the federal courts under the Ruiz settlement.

The 77,000-inmate system operates under agreements spelled out in a long-running prison lawsuit named for inmate David Ruiz.

■ Grandmother faces murder charges

DALLAS — A woman with a past murder conviction has been charged in the death of her 3-year-old granddaughter, who police say was found naked, cold to the touch and suffering a massive head injury.

Antoinette Hudson died Thursday, 10 days after paramedics were called to her grandmother's south Dallas apartment.

Charged with injury to a child is her paternal grandmother, 42-year-old Shirley Ann Hudson.

Hudson, who has been jailed since last week, told police that the girl fell down a concrete staircase.

Detective Dan Lesher said the injuries were inconsistent with the explanation. Lesher said Friday police would not upgrade the charge to murder because it is harder to prove. Injury to a child is a first-degree felony.

Hudson, who remained jailed Friday with bail set at $100,000, has a criminal record dating to at least 1974. Dallas County records show she pleaded guilty to murder and was given two years' probation in 1975, though specifics of the case were not available.

■ Officials: Soldier robs motel, kills self

ORANGE — Officials say they're baffled why a soldier from Fort Polk, La., came to Orange while he was on emergency leave because of a death in his family in North Carolina.

Sgt. Brian K. Fisher of Lake Toxaway, N.C., chatted for two hours Wednesday with the front desk clerk of the Best Western Inn Motel, then produced a semiautomatic pistol and robbed her, police say.

Nearby patrolmen say they cornered Fisher between the motel and an adjacent motel but said he put his gun to his head and killed himself as they encouraged him to surrender.

■ Lawmen nab most-wanted criminal

LUBBOCK — One of the state's most-wanted criminals has been booked into jail after lawmen dressed in riot gear nabbed him eating lunch.

John Trual Mathis Jr., 41, was arrested without incident Thursday at a home in Anton, about 30 miles northwest of Lubbock.

Officials said the Galveston County man — named to the governor's top 10 fugitive squad list — was wanted for parole violation, indecency with a child, aggravated robbery and damage to personal property.

Deputy U.S. Marshal David Mead said he received a tip on Mathis' whereabouts Thursday morning.

The front door was open when federal and county authorities arrived at the home about noon.

"He was at the kitchen table eating and looked up and saw us," Mead said. "He just put up his hands and turned around and put them on the wall."

Mayors, police exchange juvenile crime ideas

DALLAS (AP) — Early Friday morning, someone sprayed about 20 rounds of gunfire into a north-central San Antonio home, killing 18-year-old Aldo Gutierrez and wounding a 16-year-old.

Police are terming the killing of Gutierrez, who was known to them as a gang member, as a "walk-by shooting."

San Antonio Mayor Nelson Wolff, who professes a dislike for most gatherings involving mayors, said the incident illustrates why he decided to attend a juvenile summit in Dallas Friday.

"We're having young kids killing each other over the most minor of infractions. You looked at somebody wrong. You messed with his girlfriend," he said.

Wolff was among 12 mayors and 12 police chiefs representing the nation's 17 largest cities at the summit Friday. The two-day gathering was called by Dallas Mayor Steve Bartlett, who believes that local leaders are best equipped to solve the problems of juvenile violence and crime.

Each leader was asked to bring an example of a successful anti-juvenile violence program to share in a series of sessions. Many touted their gang intervention units, curfews, truancy crackdowns and community policing programs.

San Diego Mayor Susan Golding was scheduled to lead the first session, "Early Intervention." She said she believes the juvenile crime problem is the toughest one for city leaders to solve.

"Young people seem to be increasingly out of control. . . . Life does not hold the value that it held for us when we were younger or for our parents," she said.

Ms. Golding advocates programs that teach self-discipline and control to children as young as 5. She believes educators should be better instructed in finding learning disabilities among young children, because they most often become criminal offenders.

Community policing, in which officers are assigned to learn neighborhoods and know their citizens personally rather than just simply respond to radio calls, has been instituted, Ms. Golding said.

In New York City, about 100 officers are assigned to question school-age children who aren't on campus and take them into custody. The truancy program will be among several successful programs Chief John Timoney said he would present.

Wolff said San Antonio youth have been subjected to a nighttime curfew for two to three years. But a new daytime curfew, in effect from 9 a.m. to 2:30 p.m., has curbed truancy in his city.

Dallas implemented a "zero tolerance gang task force" in December. Sixty officers were charged with targeting street gang members — following them, monitoring their hangouts, searching their vehicles, stoppings them for traffic violations.

Through Feb. 27, the crackdown resulted in 924 gang-related arrests and the seizure of 69 weapons. Drive-by shootings in Dallas were reduced from 44 in the two months before the task force began to 28 in the eight weeks after.

Jacksonville, Fla., Mayor Edward Austin said his state has a problem with enforcing the laws. Judges have less discretion than social service workers in deciding a juvenile's fate. And Florida only has a "pitiful" 500 beds for all of the juvenile offenders in the state, said Austin, who was a prosecutor for 25 years before becoming mayor three years ago.

He said a newly adopted statute will return the proper authority to judges. And he expects the Legislature to approve a bill for 3,000 new beds for juvenile offenders.

"It is terribly, terribly unfair for us to tell young people . . . if you commit criminal acts, nothing is going really happen to you."

Galveston Republicans pass AIDS quarantine resolution

GALVESTON (AP) — AIDS patients and others who deal with the deadly disease are upset with a resolution approved by Galveston County Republicans who are calling for a quarantine of those who have the AIDS virus.

"In my opinion, the whole resolution is filled with rhetoric, innuendo and misinformation," says Maurisa Bylerly, coordinator of the AIDS Coaliton of Coastal Texas.

"To put forward such a resolution is merely giving voice to fear rather than taking constructive action to address the pandemic."

The resolution recommending the isolation and quarantine of persons who are HIV-positive was passed by a majority of the 300 delegates at the March 26 county convention, party officials said Thursday.

The resolution calls for a quarantine until a cure is found so the general population can be protected from the disease. It also calls for the identification of individuals carrying the AIDS virus and the tracing of sexual contact.

The measure was one of 115 passed at the county party meeting and forwarded to the Texas GOP for possible consideration at the party's state convention in Fort Worth in June.

"I think the intent of it was to stress the importance and seriousness of AIDS so that people will recognize that action needs to be taken," said D.D. Haney, the GOP candidate for county judge. "It seems like overkill, but it's a way of getting their attention."

Haney said it was difficult to remember what happened to 115 resolutions in a single day, but that he probably voted for it.

David Jameson, chairman of the Galveston County Democrats, said the idea was akin to a concentration camp.

"It sounds like Hitler doctrine is alive and well and apparently in the majority of the Galveston County Republican Party," Jameson said.

"The one question I would like to ask is this: What if the person that is infected is your mother, brother, sister, child, etc. Would you still want to ship them off?" said Darlene Bouse, of Galveston, a University of Texas Medical Branch secretary UTMB secretary who has been HIV positive for three years.

Interior secretary stops in Houston to pitch Clinton health plan

HOUSTON (AP) — Interior Secretary Bruce Babbitt came to Houston Friday to pitch the Clinton health care program, holding a talk show-style forum with about 50 senior citizens at a community center.

"We really need to make certain everyone understands how important an issue this is," Babbitt said, speaking in both English and Spanish.

His appearance was at the Magnolia Multi-Service Center, a city-run community center in a predominantly Hispanic area of Houston. The center includes a clinic that provides pre-natal care and health services like immunizations for children.

He spoke primarily to retired people who complained to him about the high cost of prescriptions. They also were concerned that illegal aliens were getting free health care while they had to pay at least some of the costs.

"This doesn't cover non-citizens," Babbitt told them. However, he said, there are not yet provisions in the Clinton plan on how to handle illegals.

"We're going to have to do a lot of thinking about that," he said. "But we can't keep these people away from emergency rooms for emergency care."

One aspect that pleased several people, however, was that prescription drugs would be covered under the Clinton proposal. Some of those who questioned Babbitt told of spending as much as $200 a month on prescription drugs.

Another questioner asked about dental care, but Babbitt said the plan so far would include that for children only.

President Clinton has sent a plan to Congress and is willing to negotiate the details as long as the program includes universal guaranteed coverage and some reasonable choice of doctors, the secretary said.

He also toured the center, which when opened 10 years ago, handled 5,000 people annually. City officials said it now administers to 250,000.

Governor didn't order destruction of telephone records, report says

AUSTIN (AP) — A report on the destruction of long-distance telephone records in Gov. Ann Richards' office says Richards didn't order the destruction of those records.

The report released Friday also said there was no evidence that Richards' staff made phone calls for political or campaign purposes, but that some made personal calls.

The report by attorney Martha Dickie was greeted with skepticism by state Republicans.

Texas GOP executive director Karen Hughes said Richards' staff had "a very contagious case of collective amnesia."

"Senior people in the governor's office do not make a decision to destroy three years of records and then say they don't remember," she said. "This story has no credibility."

Richards' spokesman Bill Cryer responded, saying, "The decision that was made at the time was just not considered very carefully. It was a very small part of our lives. I don't think anyone, unfortunately, considered it very much."

The report was forwarded to the Travis County district attorney's office. The office's Public Integrity Unit, which investigates complaints of fraud against public officials, is reviewing the August 1993 destruction of long-distance phone records from the governor's first 32 months in office.

Richards' office is now keeping such records for three years.

"We will be reviewing the report and determining what if any steps need to be taken," Claire Dawson-Brown, chief of the unit said.

In the report, Ms. Dickie says that the governor's staff wanted to reduce the number of documents because they were being overwhelmed with the amount of paper accumulating in the office.

The staff then started discussing how to reduce the amount of paper in the office, the report said.

"Gov. Richards advised the staff to make sure that all this was done in compliance with all the requirements of the law. The governor never ordered or directed the retention or destruction of any records. She was not aware that the retention of phone records had at any time become any issue," Ms. Dickie said.

KENT KWIK

WHO, ME --- WORK IN A CONVENIENCE STORE?

Like most Kent Team Members, you probably never had a dream of working in a convenience store when you were a kid. But you probably didn't like a lot of things when you were a kid that you like now.

Talk to our Team members on the job. They'll tell you that Kent Oil is the premier retail employer in the Permian Basin. It's not unusual for our Team Members to average 5 -20% more than their base salary on an annual basis due to our bonus plans. That means if your salary is $5.00 an hour, that you could earn $5.25-$6.00 an hour annually with your bonus figured in! We have individual, store and store group bonuses. Why would you want to work at any other retail business?

In addition, 95% of our store managers started at the entry-level and worked their way up in the company. It takes an average of six months to become an assistant manager (earning $5.50 an hour and up, before bonuses) and an average of another six months to become a store manager (starting at $375/week --- and our top managers made over $30,000 last year!)

We'll give you strong initial and ongoing management training to help you learn and grow in our industry. We'll give you 40 hours a week (if you want them.) We have part-time hours available too. If you want to work full-time, some night and/or evening hours are required. A limited number of manager trainee positions are available for qualified applicants.

If all of this interests you, please come by our office for initial screening from 8-3 Monday through Friday. The first step is to take one hour of testing (math, reading, and work attitudes) which tells us if you have the potential to be a good candidate for our team. Please pick up an application at one of our locations, fill it out, and bring it with you when you come for testing. We also do criminal and credit background checks, and a drug screen is required. We are an equal opportunity employer.

Distributorships Now Available

PART-TIME INCOME OPPORTUNITY

The Midland Reporter-Telegram has early morning routes which need to be filled with dependable individuals with reliable transportation. Often asked questions:

➥ Is it worthwhile for adults also?

YES! 95% of our Distributors ARE adults! Morning Routes are attractive for:
★ ADULTS who have fulltime jobs, yet want to supplement their income with a steady part-time job!
★ MOTHERS who can't justify a small job AND daycare, because as a Distributor, you don not need daycare!
★ COLLEGE STUDENTS needing a part-time job which will work with classes!
★ SENIOR CITIZENS wanting regular exercise, added retirement income, or just want to work with people, neighbors, and friends!

➥ How much money can I make as a Distributor?

Depending on the size of the route(s), from $350 to $800 monthly, in some cases...even more!

➥ OK...but how long does it take?

The actual delivery takes 1-2 hours Monday-Saturday, and 2-3 hours on Sunday, depending on the size of the route(s), Also some time is needed each month to collect from subscribers. Many Distributors choose to handle some of this by putting envelopes in the subscribers' papers and having payments mailed to them. Some collecting in person will be necessary though, particularly on some routes more than others.

➥ When do the papers have to be delivered by?

Papers must be on the yards by 6 am Monday-Friday, and 7 am on weekend mornings.

➥ Do I ever get a day off?

The job requires a 7-day a week commitment. However, most Distributors do take days off by finding a friend, family member, or another Distributor to substitute for them!

➥ What else?
