Marcos refuses to resign

Rebels proclaim Corazon Aquino new Philippine leader

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Military rebels today proclaimed Corazon Aquino the new Philippine leader, but embattled President Ferdinand E. Marcos, still claiming control of the armed forces, declared, "I have no intention to resign."

The Reagan administration today called on Marcos for the first time to step down, and said using violence to prolong his 20-year rule would be "futile." The White House said it had received reports that attacks were being planned by pro-Marcos soldiers on the rebels, but none was reported.

Mrs. Aquino, who claims Marcos defrauded her of victory in the Feb. 7 election, spoke to a huge crowd outside Camp Crame, where the leaders of the military revolt, former Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile and Lt. Gen. Fidel V. Ramos, the former deputy armed forces chief, barricaded themselves with fellow rebels.

"This is the first time in history that the civilian population has protected the military," Mrs. Aquino told the throng, estimated by reporters at up to 500,000. "Please keep vigil here."

Anti-Marcos politicians flocked to Camp Crame to discuss forming the provisional government announced by Enrile. Later, opposition National Assembly member Ramon Mitra said, "a new government has been set up" headed by Mrs. Aquino, 53, and her election running mate, former Sen. Salvador Laurel.

Mitra said the National Assembly, which had proclaimed Marcos' re-election, would meet and change its proclamation. Mitra said a leading pro-Marcos assemblyman, Rene Cayatano, was now encouraging fellow members of Marcos' New Society Movement party to back the new government.

Faced by the revolt and mass assemblies calling for his departure, Marcos declared a state of emergency on government television. But the broadcast went off the air abruptly, cutting Marcos off in the middle of a sentence.

A rebel force led by Col. Mariano Santiago took over the station, Channel 4, after a clash in which at least four people were wounded. A loyalist soldier who reportedly shot himself in the mouth by accident, Amado Luisado, died later at Capitol Hospital, officials there said.

The television station went back on the air three hours later, with pro-Aquino announcers telling viewers, "this is the first free broadcast from Channel 4."

In a broadcast later on Manila's Channel 9, owned by one of his associates, Marcos proclaimed a curfew from 6 p.m. to 6 a.m. He said he had the rebellion under control and "probably will take action in the next few days."

Only Marcos' voice was used during the television broadcast. "I have no intention to resign. I have no intention to give up the presidency," he said. "I have no intention to compromise on the decision of the people. I am in effective control of the military."

Marcos said, "My family here is covering in terror inside Malacanang Palace because of the threats of bombing by helicopter." He added, "I would like to quietly and casually inform Mr. Enrile and Mr. Ramos that you better stop this illegal, illicit activity."

A military helicopter had made a pass earlier in the day at the Marcos' palace and fired a grenade at the building, according to soldiers on the grounds. They said a tank fired back at the helicopter. Explosions and M-16 rifle fire also heard.

Four soldiers were injured by shrapnel in the helicopter attack. Col. Vicente Tigas of the presidential security command told journalists to leave, saying, "We cannot guarantee your safety."

In Washington, the White House urged Marcos for the first time to relinquish power. A statement from presidential spokesman Larry Speakes said, "Attempts to prolong the life of the present regime by violence are futile. A solution to this crisis can only be achieved through a peaceful transition to a new government."

Speakes also said U.S. officials had received "disturbing reports of a possible attack (on the rebels) by forces loyal to Geb. (Ferdinand E.) Marcos." The outgoing military chief of staff and a staunch Marcos loyalist.

"We urge those contemplating such actions to stop," the statement from Speakes said. "President Marcos has pledged to refrain from initiating violence and we appeal to him and those loyal to him and all other Filipino people to continue to do so."

A congressional source in Washington said the United States had offered the 8-year-old Marcos a U.S. aircraft to use in leaving the Philippines, but the State Department and Pentagon had no immediate comment.

City commission will hold annexation public hearing

The Pampa City Commission will hold its second public hearing at 6 p.m. Tuesday on a proposed annexation of the Kentucky Acres Addition which drew protests and objections from residents at the March 11 meeting.

The annexation matter had been initiated by a resident in the tract west of the city. But at the last regular meeting the resident withdrew his request.

Among the objections voiced at that meeting were that the costs of tying on to city utility lines were too high for residents to pay at this time, uncertainties about added costs for street improvements that might be undertaken, reservations about the costs the city would have to pay for the additional services in the area and questions about the use of residents' well water versus the city's "lake water."

In other agenda matters for the regular meeting, the commissioners will consider the awarding of bids relative to the summer streets seal coating project and proposed street improvements and paving projects.

Streets to be seal coated this summer are generally located in the central and east central sections of the city.

Scheduled for the street improvements and paving projects are the extension of Hobart Street to the north, the widening of the west side of Kentucky Avenue at Hobart for installation of new traffic signals and a turn lane, the extension of Harvester Avenue to the west and the construction of portions of Lynn Street, Worrell Avenue and Decatur Avenue.

In addition, Crawford Avenue will be completely paved, as will one block of Albert Street near Cuyler Street. Also, new signal lights will be installed at Hwy. 60 and Hwy. 70 (Hobart), Foster and Hobart, Alcock-Francis and Hobart, Barnes and Hwy. 60, and Cuyler and Hwy. 60.

Also to be considered is the reconstruction of Somerville Street between Kingsmill and Cook. The commission will decide whether to retain a median with landscaping, at additional cost, or to remove the median completely.

Other agenda items include: - second and final reading of an ordinance amending a section of the Southern Standard Mechanical Code relative to bond requirements;

- payment to Wagner and Klein for architectural services toward renovation of City Hall;

- approval of the final plat of the replat of Blocks J, K and L in Memory Gardens;

- a resolution relative to the Criminal Justice Task Force in the preparation of a broad-based, comprehensive, anti-crime program;

- calling a special meeting for Tuesday, March 4;

- appointment of an individual to the Planning and Zoning Commission;

- authorizing a formal request for funding through the Texas Department of Highways and Public Transportation relative to its landscape development program;

- authorizing an application to the governor's office of General Counsel and Criminal Justice relative to grants for Neighborhood Watch and the school liaison officer;

- a Traffic Commission report; and

- an executive session to discuss personnel and acquisition of property.

Justices agree to rule on budget-balancing act by July

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court today agreed to decide by July the constitutionality of the new law that requires a balanced federal budget by 1991.

The court, setting the stage for a major decision on governmental powers and federal spending, said it will review a ruling that struck down a central provision of the Gramm-Rudman act.

The justices also agreed to hold two hours of arguments, double the normal time, and to hold them sometime in April so they can decide the case before adjourning for the summer in July.

A special three-judge federal court invalidated a key provision of the law on Feb. 7. The panel said the law violates required separation of powers between the president and Congress.

The first $11.7 billion in spending cuts under Gramm-Rudman are due to take effect March 1 and were not affected by the decision of the three-judge panel, which suspended the effect of its own ruling.

The law calls for a deeper, second round of cuts to take effect Oct. 1, the start of the next fiscal year, if Congress fails to reduce the deficit to $144 billion. The deficit stands at about $208 billion this year.

The three-judge court's ruling left intact a "fallback" provision of the law requiring Congress itself to vote "yes" or "no" annually on a spending-cut figure to meet the law's deficit-reduction goals.

But the panel invalidated a provision that assigns the job of ordering those cuts to the comptroller general. The lower court said the Constitution bars the comptroller general, who heads Congress' General Accounting Office, from exercising such executive powers.

The comptroller general is appointed by the president to a 15-year term.

The law was challenged by Rep. Mike Synar, D-Okla., and 11 other members of Congress and also by the National Treasury Employees Union.

Clements urges special session on oil revenues losses

By PAUL PINKHAM
Staff Writer

Former Gov. Bill Clements called on his successor Saturday to call a special session of the Legislature to study declining oil and gas revenues and formulate a budget plan to tackle the loss of state revenue.

"If he doesn't, his problems will increase," Clements said of Gov. Mark White.

Clements, a Republican candidate to win back the seat White stripped him of in 1983, was in Pampa on Saturday night to address the annual recognition banquet of the Adobe Walls Council of Boy Scouts of America. His speech was non-political and addressed various aspects of scouting.

"It would be inappropriate for me to talk about anything else," Clements told those in attendance.

But prior to his talk, Clements, the state's only Republican governor since reconstruction, spoke with The Pampa News about oil and gas issues and House Bill 72, White's sweeping educational reform bill.

Clements said White should call a special session of the Legislature "to work on scrubbing the budget" and work on a plan to head off declining state revenues from oil and gas brought on by a worldwide drop in oil prices.

State Comptroller Bob Bullock has predicted substantial losses in state revenues and White has encouraged 13 percent cuts by state agencies. White has said the cuts can be made without affecting personnel or services.

Clements called White's solution a "meat-ax approach" that no one with experience would consider.

"That's literally a meat-ax approach and you can't do that," he said.

Clements said there are priorities in the state budget, such as prisons, mental health and law enforcement efforts that "if anything, have to increase." He said White should set aside priorities before cutting agency budgets.

The former governor, who faces Rep. Tom Loeffler and former Rep. Kent Hance in the GOP primary May 3, also charged White with failing to take the lead in the white oil issue. He said he does not believe White understands the issue.

"In my judgement, this governor should be out in front on this issue," Clements said.

He said White should first develop an understanding of the issue then go the Texas Railroad Commission and "use his governor's power of persuasion to have that body recognize the issues of fairness and equity" and re-assess its position to reach "some kind of reasonable middle-ground" solution that is fair to both sides.

Clements said House Bill 72 needs some "fine tuning" in the areas of the career ladder, classroom discipline and competency testing for teachers. He said he disagrees with the way the bill has deleted local school board authority and transferred the local boards' accountability to constituents to a "controlling body in Austin."

He said the incentive of no pass, no play must be maintained but the punishment period should be shortened from six weeks to three weeks because, at six weeks, the incentive becomes a "disincentive."

Asked if he would debate White if both men win their respective primaries, Clements replied: "Anytime."

During his speech, Clements spoke of the importance of scouting in his own life. He said scouting helped him in business and politics by teaching him the principals of management by objectives and setting paths toward achieving goals.

He called scouting the greatest influence on his life other than his mother.

Senate television coverage making lawmakers jittery

WASHINGTON (AP) — Could the American people stomach what they saw if they saw the Senate on television?

"They would say it's inefficient, it is a spectacle, it is a charade, it is all the things a democracy is not supposed to be," says Sen. Bennett Johnston, D-La.

Johnston says he favors broadcast coverage. But he is sharply critical of the gavel-to-gavel coverage that would get a three-month, closed-circuit test under a measure before the Senate.

The Senate was gearing up to vote this week on the measure, which would make Senate floor action available for broadcast on radio and television.

The dismal image that viewers would form of the nation's top legislative body would be false, Johnston says, but understandable in view of what he calls the Senate's role as a watchdog to block "improvident" bills.

The Senate is governed by rules designed for the convenience of lawmakers but not spectators. Visitors often appear baffled as issues are raised and then suddenly dropped.

Seemingly serious debate is sometimes punctuated with whimsy. Johnston recently interrupted a discussion of Senate television coverage to insert a snippet of poetry in the Congressional Record.

Quorum calls — which in theory summon the lawmakers to the floor — are used several times a day to put proceedings on hold.

The roll call drones on at a glacial pace as senators huddle on the floor or in the cloakroom. The scene is not calculated to win any ratings wars against "Dynasty" or "Miami Vice."

"They would just focus the camera on the presiding officer for a solid hour — just sitting there doing nothing," Sen. Russell Long, D-La., chortles. Sen. John Danforth, R-Mo., says it "would be like watching the grass grow."

But the real fear is how viewers might react to filibusters by senators attempting to block legislation by talking it to death. Such "extended debates" can be choked off by a vote of 60 senators, but skilled tacticians can stall action for weeks.

Byrd and his allies are pushing to couple Senate television coverage with rules changes that would mean a dramatic shortening of filibusters. But that irks lawmakers who cherish the right to fight to the last oratorical ditch.

White Deer firemen launch new area emergency medical service

WHITE DEER — More than $400 worth of new emergency equipment was paraded before the press Sunday as the White Deer Volunteer Fire Department unveiled its new first responder program.

The new equipment, which was delivered to the fire department in December, includes a backboard, three sets of neck braces, leg splints and first aid supplies, since December.

Using White Deer High School junior Staci Thompson as their model "patient," Emergency Medical Technicians from Pampa Medical Services and White Deer volunteers demonstrated how the various pieces of equipment are used.

In addition to the new supplies, the fire department also has a suburban van, which it uses to transport patients on emergency hospital runs.

White Deer Volunteer Fire

Chief Virgil James said the first responder program will help the community which does not have its own ambulance service.

"I think it's going to be a benefit to the community," James said, explaining that most of the people in the fire department work during the day and do not have time to man a full ambulance service.

The first responder program will enable the fire department to administer first aid and to transport patients to the hospital. For more serious emergencies, such as a heart attack or a major accident, the city will still depend on emergency medical services from Panhandle or Pampa, both about 15 miles away. Although six trained EMTs live in White Deer, a first responder unit only requires members who are trained Emergency Care Attendants.

The attendants, or ECAs, do not have the full hospital training as EMTs have.

James believes that such a program may solve emergency care problems of Miami or other towns with no Ambulance Service. Some Miami residents are trying to start an ambulance service, but are waiting for a grant from the state department of health so they may conduct EMT classes.

"I think Pampa Medical Services is talking to Miami about this program," James said, adding that he does not believe White Deer will get a full ambulance service "in the foreseeable future."

Now that the community has the new equipment, James said the next step is to "keep up with our training."

"We have a lot of enthusiasm in the department," he said. "So we're going to keep training and doing the best we can."

HMO accidents draw investigators' scrutiny

DALLAS (AP) — About 22 million people nationally have fed the dramatic growth of health maintenance organizations, a kind of health-care delivery that hopes through clinics and referrals to change the way Americans stay healthy.

But the success of HMOs has fueled a continuing debate in the medical community over the methods and quality of care in programs that have increasingly replaced traditional health insurance plans and family doctors with standardized fees and clinic-style settings.

The death last month of 6-year-old Katoya Woods, one of two children incorrectly injected with morphine by a nurse after a doctor prescribed another narcotic, is spotlighting the quality of personnel and care at CIGNA Health Plan of Texas, the largest HMO in the Dallas area.

The incidents, which initially resulted in CIGNA suspensions of both the doctor and nurse — the doctor was reinstated after an internal investigation — have left both families speaking primarily through lawyers.

The Dallas County medical examiner has filed a complaint, and the State Board of Medical Examiners, which licenses physicians, will investigate the doctor to determine her competency, the Dallas Times Herald reported Sunday.

In addition, the vocational nurse licensing board is investigating the nurse to see if she was negligent, and the Texas Department of Health plans to investigate whether proper drug dispensing procedures are being followed.

Meanwhile, HMOs are growing in popularity. About 100,000 Dallas-area people, and about 700,000 Texans, rely on the organizations to take care of most health-care needs short of major surgery.

CIGNA reported its Dallas-area enrollment increased by 20 percent last year to 57,000. Dallas' Kaiser Permanente grew to a membership of 56,000.

HMO supporters point to a study by the Rand Corporation, a non-profit research institution in Santa Monica, Calif., that shows HMOs hospitalized 40 percent fewer patients in Seattle last year than did doctors with private practices.

Most HMOs, unlike private practices, must meet federal regulations requiring peer review and grievance procedures for dissatisfied patients, said Ruth Stack, executive director of Miami-based National Association of Employers on Health Care Alternatives.

But private-practice doctors say the organizations emphasize cost savings at the expense of good care.

"They are a phenomenon of competition and budget pressures in health care," said Charles Ord, executive director of the American Association of Physicians and Surgeons. "This cost-containment mechanism retions care and reduces its quality."

HMOs aren't new. The first ones were organized in the 1920s, but rapid growth didn't occur until businesses with group insurance plans began trying in recent years to control soaring health-care costs.

HMOs operate by providing comprehensive medical care for preset fees rather than the traditional fees-for-service, and their growth is booming.

Enrollment in HMOs jumped by nearly a third between 1984 and 1985 in Texas, and another third to some 700,000 members in 1985, according to the state Board of Insurance.

Mistreatment cases are on increase at state schools

DALLAS (AP) — The growing number of patient-abuse cases at state schools for the mentally retarded may stem more from better reporting techniques than from worsening care, officials say.

Texas Department of Mental Health-Mental Retardation reports reviewed by The Dallas Morning News showed that 218 cases of abuse and neglect were confirmed at the 13 state schools during fiscal 1985.

Officials said the amount reflected a 34-percent increase over the 162 cases confirmed during 1984. In 1983, investigators confirmed 112 cases of abuse and neglect.

But some state officials believe the increase reflects greater diligence in the investigation of allegations rather than an actual increase in abuse and neglect, the News reported Sunday.

Reports show only 19 of the 1985 cases fell in the category of serious injury or sexual abuse. But the 19 cases reported in 1985 were more than double the nine serious cases reported in the previous year.

The director of the department's client rights and protection office said the figures her office collects present a misleading picture of life in the state schools.

"I don't think there's any increase in abuse," said office director Pam Carley. "If anything, I think there's a decrease."

She said the rise in confirmed cases of mistreatment resulted from vigorous investigation of complaints and a crackdown on employees who mistreat clients, but who stop short of causing injury.

She said that in 132 of the 218 cases of mistreatment, investigators found no evidence that a mentally retarded person actually was harmed, although the employee action "might have caused" injury under other circumstances.

Denton State School Superintendent Jerry Vincent said much abuse involves incidents so minor that it would all but go unnoticed if outside an institution.

"Most of these are like hair-pulling or redirecting a (mentally retarded) client," said Vincent, the superintendent since November. "They might pull a client too roughly."

Officials said the Denton State School recorded an increase from nine to 31 in incidents of confirmed cases of mistreatment.

About 9,400 mentally retarded people were in the 13 state schools, including in Denton and Fort Worth, in 1985. Many of the residents also suffer from physical handicaps and severe medical problems.

The state school system is run by the mental health department.

The figures for the Fort Worth school — which show an increase from 14 to 21 cases — are "almost meaningless" because they don't specify how many incidents were serious and how many were not each year, said the school's superintendent, Mel Hughes.

Teachers get test jitters too

DALLAS (AP) — It's only a test.

But to schoolteachers across the state, the Texas Examination of Current Administrators and Teachers is much more than that.

The March 10 competency test will determine whether the teachers get to keep their jobs, and plenty of them are worried about it.

In response, a team of Dallas psychologists, Southwest Counseling Associates, has produced a teacher's aide — an audio cassette called, "Test Anxiety Reduction and Control."

The tape was created because one of the members of the counseling associates, Dr. Dale General, noticed his wife, who is a teacher, got sweaty palms thinking about the test.

He said she feels better after listening to the tape.

Officials said the 34-minute cassette offers soothing counsel for anyone faced with having to prove his or her smarts. It fights other test jitters that include rapid breathing, a weak stomach, nausea, insomnia, anger, irritability and doubtfulness.

Some anxiety increases concentration and helps in focusing. But Dr. Don Strickler said too much can cause a person to "block" what he or she knows and can do a disservice.

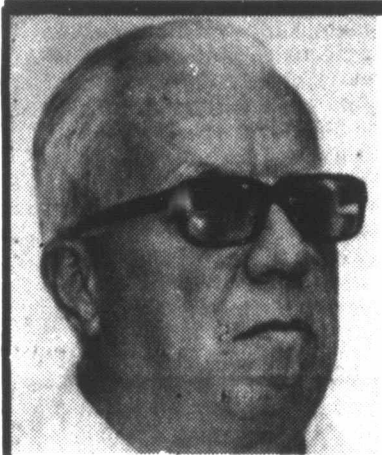

"Most tests have to do with getting a grade or moving up a level," he said. "This one has to do with careers being placed on the line. Certain teachers who are competent may not be able to exhibit their competency due to anxiety."

"This tape won't do a thing for an incompetent teacher," said Strickler. "It isn't going to produce any knowledge for people, but if they do have problems that inhibit the flow of information, it may serve to open the block."

He said the tape contains only tried-and-true techniques of positive thinking, desensitization and work with positive imagery.

Strickler said information about the tape was sent to the 4,964 school principals in Texas to be relayed to teachers. So far, he said, about 300 copies of the tape have been ordered.

The tape, he said, provides a series of unblocking exercises designed to getting teachers to change their "hidden beliefs" about tests, many of which may have been developed when they were students.

Traffic commission at work

I am glad to see that the Pampa City Traffic Commission is taking a look at the various traffic problems around the city.

It has been my impression since returning to Pampa five years ago that nothing is done about traffic problems until there is a major accident at an intersection and then city officials finally install either "yield" or "stop" signs.

Last week commission members considered several traffic problems, but took no action on many of the recommendations.

Personally I hope they decide to keep the school traffic light at the intersection of Faulkner and Alcock. A large number of students of Horace Mann Elementary School cross busy Alcock street at this intersection each school day and operation of the school light at this intersection at least gives them a fighting chance to cross the street without being struck down by a vehicle.

It seems a large majority of motorists in Pampa feel that they own the streets and to heck with any pedestrian crossing a street at an intersection. What happened to the law requiring motorists to yield the right-of-way to pedestrians in marked crosswalks at intersections?

From my experience, especially in the downtown area, most motorists dare a pedestrian to try to cross the street. Recently, while attempting to cross West Foster at Somerville, I have had motorists on Foster speed up when they see that I want to cross the street.

Of course, not all local motorists are so discourteous. Occasionally one will actually stop to permit a pedestrian to cross the street before proceeding. But these courteous people seem to be a rarity.

I noticed Sunday morning that city personnel were repainting the white lines marking the pedestrian crosswalks on North Cuyler. At least the motorists will once again be able to see where the crosswalks are. But, the big question is, will they admit the crosswalks exist when a pedestrian is attempting to cross the street?

So, fellow residents of Pampa, the next time you are driving along our city streets and see a pedestrian crossing the street in front of you — please slow down and give the pedestrian the right-of-way.

I don't claim to be an expert on traffic problems, but I do feel that my experience of having been a police officer for a number of years and also of covering numerous motor vehicle accidents over the years as a journalist has given me some understanding as to the causes of many accidents.

While the term "accident" is generally accepted to describe the various mishaps, I became convinced many years ago that there are very few true traffic accidents.

There are many reasons for collisions: ranging from speeding, inattentiveness on the part of one or more drivers, deliberate hogging of the road and various other reasons.

In my opinion the lack of courtesy is the main factor that results in many collisions. Motorists should be willing to slow down and permit the other vehicles to proceed safely, instead of blasting through an intersection at a high rate of speed.

Also, if motorists would be more attentive to their driving, instead of permitting their minds to wander, there would be less traffic problems. Courtesy plays an important part in driving.

Getting back to the local traffic commission, I hope they decide to install a traffic light at the intersection of North Duncan and East 23rd. Both of these streets are busy traffic arteries and any motorist attempting to either cross or pull onto Duncan from 23rd knows of the hazard there.

This might be a good place to relocate that traffic light at West Francis and North Frost which does nothing but hinder orderly traffic flow at that intersection.

I have expressed my opinion before in this column, and will once more repeat it, that many of the traffic lights installed in the downtown area of Pampa when it was the only shopping area for the community are no longer needed. It seems several of these lights, especially most of those on Ballard, could be relocated to other areas of the city where they are more urgently needed.

Parker is city editor of The Pampa News. Views expressed in the Off Beat columns are the individuals' and not necessarily those of this newspaper.

Elizabeth Chagra returns to witness stand

AUSTIN (AP) — Elizabeth Chagra's retrial on charges that she helped kill a San Antonio federal judge neared the jury stage today with the defendant again on the witness stand.

Mrs. Chagra spent more than three hours testifying Friday before a weekend recess, and cross examination by Assistant U.S. Attorney W. Ray Jahn was scheduled to resume today.

Chief defense attorney Warren Burnett told the court Friday he expected the defense to complete its case some time today.

The government then gets a chance to offer rebuttal testimony before the attorneys give their final arguments to the seven-man, five-woman jury.

Mrs. Chagra, 32, is charged with conspiracy to murder U.S. District Judge John Wood who was shot in the back May 29, 1979, outside his San Antonio home.

Wood, called "Maximum John" for the stiff sentences he gave drug dealers, had been scheduled to preside at a narcotics trafficking trial of Mrs. Chagra's husband, Jimmy Chagra.

Mrs. Chagra's previous conviction in 1982 on similar conspiracy charges was overturned by an appeals court because of improper jury instructions. The retrial, moved to Austin from San Antonio, began Feb. 5.

Friday, Mrs. Chagra testified she was frightened and upset when her husband told her to deliver a briefcase which he at first said contained the payoff for Wood's murder.

"Then he (Jimmy Chagra) said he'd never put me in that kind of a position. He said he was just joking with me," she said.

Mrs. Chagra said that although she was seven months pregnant and not feeling well, she took the small briefcase to a Las Vegas hotel room. On the way back home, she said she bought five fried chicken dinners for her family.

"Did you have any idea the money was to pay for the homicide?" she was asked.

"No sir, I did not," she answered.

Earlier, a witness for the government testified a "very pregnant" woman delivered $250,000 in bundles of bills to the hotel room and the money was given to Charles Harrelson, who was later convicted of slaying Wood.

Mrs. Chagra also said Friday that "never to this day has Jimmy ever admitted to me that he hired Harrelson to kill Judge Wood."

The government rested its case Friday morning.

Much of the government testimony came from seven tapes of recordings made by the FBI in a wiretap placed in the visitors room at Fort Leavenworth, Kan., federal prison, where Jimmy Chagra was serving a term.

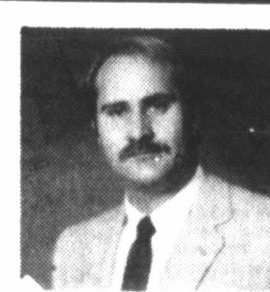

LOWER BACK PAIN

If you've been treated for lower back problem and the pain and discomfort are still there, you may be able to benefit from chiropractic treatment.

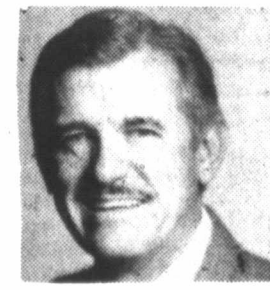

If your spine is out of alignment, this may be causing other problems in addition to lower back pain. Because the body's nervous system is closely integrated with the spine, any misalignment can cause painful irritation. Abnormal nerve function may affect whatever organs, glands, or tissues that are supplied by that nerve.

The nerves of the lower back, for example, are connected to certain organs and other structures in that area. If lower back spinal misalignment is putting undue pressure on the nerves, you may be suffering from more than lower back pain. It may be having a direct effect on other areas of your body.

A thorough examination can disclose exactly where the problem is and how it can be corrected.

Economists say

Lower oil prices to provide a boost to U.S. economy

WASHINGTON (AP)—The United States will enjoy stronger growth this year, with little danger of a recession as falling oil prices help to hold inflation at low levels, the nation's business economists predicted today.

The National Association of Business Economists said its latest survey of 300 of its members found them decidedly more optimistic about future growth.

Currently, 88 percent of the economists believe the current recovery will last into 1987 or beyond, while a survey one year ago found half of those polled expected a new recession to begin this year.

A major reason for the new-found optimism has been the steep drop in oil prices, which the economists believe will boost economic growth and help to lower inflation.

"The economy has begun to pick up steam, growth should persist through 1986 and the fight against inflation continues to feature good news," Kathleen Cooper, president of the association, said. "If oil prices continue their downward plunge, the gross national product will be still higher and inflation lower."

The price of oil has fallen dramatically from $25 per barrel on the spot market a little more than a month ago to less than $15 currently.

"These declines have made NABE members more bullish about the length of this expansion," she said.

Currently, only 12 percent of the economists surveyed believed a recession was likely this year. Another 37 percent optimistically forecast the current recovery, which began in November 1982, will last into 1988 or beyond. In a December survey, only 15 percent expected the recovery to make it to 1988.

Still, 51 percent believed the next recession would begin some time in 1987, a view decidedly different from the administration, which is forecasting strong growth through 1991.

For 1986, the economists predicted the economy would expand at a rate of 3 percent, up substantially from the weak 2.3 percent growth turned in during 1985. The administration is forecasting an even stronger rebound to growth of 4 percent this year.

The economists forecast inflation this year would hold steady at a rate of 4 percent, about in line with the administration's 3.8 percent forecast.

The survey found little optimism for further declines in unemployment, with most expecting it would average 7 percent at the end of next year, basically unchanged from the current rate.

The business economists were also pessimistic about the likelihood that the new Gramm-Rudman balanced-budget law would have much impact in reducing the huge federal budget deficits.

Superfund back on agenda

WASHINGTON (AP)—Nearly five months after missing a major deadline in the nation's battle against toxic waste dumps, House and Senate negotiators finally are ready to meet this week to begin writing a new "Superfund" law.

And with another deadline looming March 31, the conferees face the task of resolving huge differences in the five-year Superfund reauthorization bills passed by the Senate last September and the House in early December.

Congress this week also will focus on President Reagan's ambitious plans for military spending and his expected request for $100 million in aid to Nicaraguan rebels.

At the same time, the leaders of the House and Senate budget committees will be taking preliminary steps that could set the stage for movement toward a bipartisan budget compromise.

There was little prospect of a quick settlement of the Superfund issue.

"It's nothing that's going to happen overnight," said Sen. Robert Stafford, R-Vt., chairman of the Environment Committee and co-leader of the Senate forces along with Finance Chairman Bob Packwood, R-Ore.

Heading the 43-member House team are three veteran lawmakers with reputations as tough, shrewd bargainers: John Dingell, D-Mich., of the Energy and Commerce Committee; Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., of Ways and Means; and James Howard, D-N.J., of Transportation and Public Works.

"The negotiations will be over real quick or be drawn out," said a Dingell aide who, like most staffers in the Superfund process, says he would be surprised by a fast agreement on a bill.

The first meeting of the conferees is scheduled for Wednesday, and as they talk, the effort to clean up abandoned, leaking chemical dumps around the country is grinding to a halt.

Congressional committees, critical of slow pace of cleanups by the Environmental Protection Agency, began trying to rewrite and strengthen the Superfund law two years ago.

Congress was still trying last Sept. 30 when Superfund's taxing authority expired, leaving the program without new revenues and forcing EPA into money-conserving steps that have further delayed the cleanup effort.

EPA Administrator Lee Thomas is warning that unless he gets an infusion of cash by the end of March — either through a new law or an extension of the old one — cleanups will stop so there will be enough money left to keep paying staff salaries through Oct. 1.

In other action this week:

—The Senate continues debate on whether to allow live broadcast coverage of its proceedings.

—The Senate Judiciary Committee begins a series of hearings on white collar crime, particularly fraud in financial institutions, defense spending and pharmaceutical firms.

How high flies the stock market

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP)—With stock prices floating on an updraft of optimism, the thought crosses every investor's mind: When are prices too high?

That's the question that catches the fancy of everyone, and it always will, because nobody yet has come up with an answer.

Nevertheless, there are some standards that might be considered to have some objectivity. There is, for example, the level of prices in relation to earnings, often expressed as the price-earnings ratio.

Based on the 30 stocks that make up the Dow Jones industrial average, the price-earnings ratio now is close to 18.5, meaning those stocks are selling for that many times their per-share earnings.

When the Dow Jones ratio exceeds 15 many analysts consider it high, so that puts the current level well into that category, especially when compared to the PE of about 12 that existed just one year ago.

Some analysts believe guidance can be obtained from what has occurred on stocks markets in other countries, and by that measurement the U.S. market has a long way to go.

John Dessauer, publisher of Dessauer's Journal of financial markets, measured the performance of seven stock markets from January 1, 1982 to December 31, 1985. France's market led the list. The United States was fifth.

These are his measurements of increases during that period: France, 310 percent; Germany, 192 percent; Netherlands, 161; England, 121; United States and Japan, 68 percent each; and Hong Kong, 25 percent.

To what degree such performances can be used as a criterion is debatable. Hong Kong, for example, has experienced its own internal uncertainties regarding its political status. And in France, stock prices reflected investor depression over the election of a Socialist government in 1981.

Future earnings are considered a guideline, although that guideline depends on estimates. Market prices are, after all, a reflection of earnings expectations rather than earnings achievements.

Wright Investors Service estimates that earnings of the Standard & Poor's 500-stock index will rise 12 percent to $16.75 a share for all of 1986, a figure that usually would mean higher stock prices to come.

However, Wright comments that the 12 percent increase "will only make up for the ground lost in 1985," and that return on shareholders' equity for the year will remain below normal.

In such a subdued earnings environment, it comments, the stock market's upward price momentum seems like an act of hope.

Regardless of the Wright estimate, the market has found reasons to advance, and that advance itself is believed to be the cause of some of the rosier forecasts.

Warren Buffet, one of the country's most successful individual investors, once commented that "You pay a very high price in the stock market for a cheery consensus."

He added: "Uncertainty actually is the friend of the buyer of long-term values."

Shuttle out of commission for a year barring need for spy satellite

WASHINGTON (AP)—Unless a national security emergency requires a new spy satellite, NASA officials believe it will be at least a year before they try to launch another space shuttle, a senior agency official says.

This official disclosed that before it makes another launch, the National Aeronautics and Space Administration intends to remedy a cold-weather problem with O-ring seals on the solid-fuel booster rockets, even if that turns out not to be the cause of the explosion that destroyed the Challenger last month.

The official, who spoke Sunday only on condition of anonymity, said the leading option for a remedy was to install heaters on the launch pads at the Kennedy Space Center in Florida. But all of NASA's leading options for preventing the seals from leaking in cold weather would require 10 months to 14 months to implement and test, this official said.

There are heaters, which use the exhaust of two jet engines, on a new shuttle launch pad at Vandenberg Air Force Base in California, but they were not previously thought needed at the warmer Kennedy Space Center in Florida. Other options include using additional bolts and flanges to strengthen the links between the booster segments, the official said.

At a closed meeting last Thursday with former NASA employees, acting NASA Administrator William Graham defended delaying shuttle flights until the seals are improved, "because the seals were a recognized problem before the accident, and with the public attention they've gotten, it would not be prudent to fly without a remedy," this official disclosed.

On Sunday, recovery workers brought to Port Canaveral in Florida a 15-foot piece of jagged metal from the Atlantic Ocean floor that appeared to be part of Challenger's external tank, a key item in the investigation.

In addition, an unmanned sub-mersible spotted "motor parts" believed to be from the space plane's main engines. That wreckage was not picked up pending a firmer identification.

A top NASA shuttle official said Friday the accident's cause could not be determined for certain unless additional physical evidence is retrieved from the ocean, particularly the right booster and the external fuel tank.

The seals may have been harmed by cold either from the air blowing off the icy external tank or from a leak of super-cooled liquid hydrogen or liquid oxygen in that tank.

Interviewed on "NBC Nightly News," Richard Feynman, a physicist on the presidential commission studying the accident, said calculations he supervised during the past week put the temperature of the suspect booster joint at 29 degrees Fahrenheit, plus or minus two degrees, at launch time.

"It appears to me that weather temperature does have significance for these things in the sense that they affect the stiffness of the O-rings and change the likelihood that they will leak," Feynman said.

Federal officials examine mascot

MESQUITE, Texas (AP)—U.S. Department of Education officials plan to look into a resident's allegation that a high school's one-eyed, knife-clutching pirate mascot violates his freedom of religion.

A preliminary investigation will begin March 9 into David Rucker's complaint that the mascot of Poteet High School, with its skull and crossbones, symbolizes Satanism.

"A pirate is a terrorist, a murderer and a rapist and that is a fact," said Rucker, who lives near the school that will open for classes in the fall. Rucker, who does not have any children attending school in the district, said a pirate is a bad role model for children.

"We're just sending someone to look in on the situation," said Iwa Iwahiro, a regional supervisor for the education department, which can deny the district federal funding as a possible sanction for the mascot.

Mesquite School Superintendent Ralph Poteet, notified of the department's plans Sunday, said Rucker is a "one man show."

Poteet said the school board has twice rejected requests by Rucker, who owns a Dallas photo studio, to change the mascot.

He said Mesquite voters overwhelmingly selected the pirate seven years ago to represent the new high school named in his honor. He said an earlier investigation by the Texas Education Agency found no basis for Rucker's complaint.

Lancaster looks at wave-action pool

LANCASTER, Texas (AP)—Officials in this south Dallas County suburb have hired a consultant to study the feasibility of building a $1.5 million municipally owned and operated wave-action pool.

It would be only the second such pool in Texas to be owned and operated by a city, officials said.

The city of Garland opened Texas' first municipally owned wave pool, which uses large fans to create artificial waves, in 1984. Officials said it has been a money-maker.

Officials said Lancaster has two conventional municipal pools that are money-losers.

A tree dressed fully in bright green leaves is beautiful. Seeing that same tree with its foliage gone gives us a different perspective of the tree. Stark, but revealing, because we see the inner tree, not just its summer trappings.

Sometimes we need to remove the "trappings" from our lives and take a long, penetrating look at the whole us, not just the exterior we've grown accustomed to.

Self-examination, while sometimes painful, may open our eyes to what's really important in life.

REAPING REWARDS OF RELAXATION

Q: I'm feeling overwhelmed. I feel tired and exhausted. And although I'm constantly on the go, I'm gaining weight and I don't understand why.
A: One reason many of us overeat is because we are living in a stressful situation. We become anxious and overtired. Then we often mistake these feelings for hunger, nibbling unconsciously at prepackaged foods.

This is one reason we need to take time out for ourselves. It is a very important part of weight control. Even 15 to 30 minutes of daily, private relaxation will rejuvenate, reenergize and prepare you to cope more effectively in all phases of your life.

Don't depend on chance to find personal time; plan it out, set a goal and follow through with it consistently. You'll be pleasantly surprised at the satisfaction this discipline brings to your life. You will then be more likely to eat only when you are really hungry, and you will be on the road to achieving a well-balanced life.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Do not take things out of context today. If you do, you may be angered by a friend's comments where no ill will was intended.

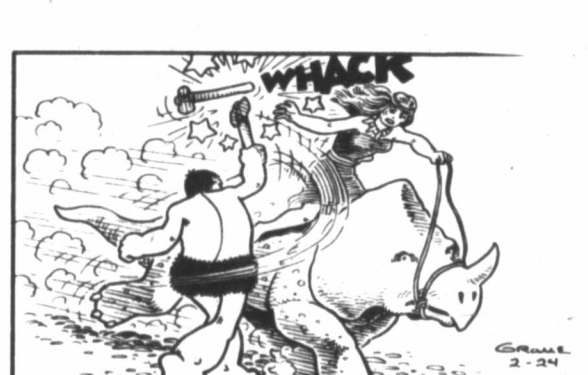

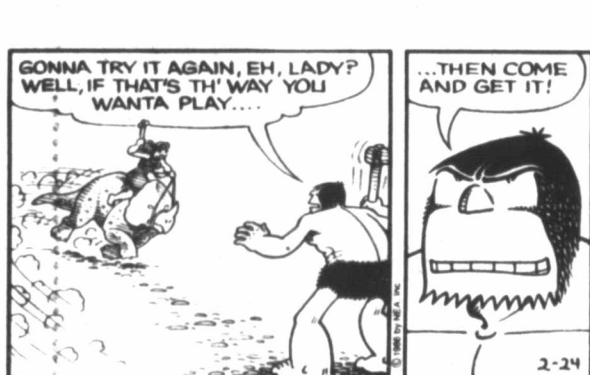

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) People who have been previously lucky for you materially will be fortunate for you again today. Avoid losers because they'll have the opposite effect.

Former Pampan wins award

Mary Jane Rose Johnson, a Pampa native, is to be honored Tuesday as one of seven Amarillo Women's Network Career Achievement Award winners with a reception at 5:30 p.m. on the second floor of the Pioneer Plaza Two in Amarillo.

The 1985 Career Achievement honorees were selected for their contributions in finance, community organization, industry and performing arts. Each honoree has achieved recognition within her chosen field. These seven women were selected through nominations submitted to Amarillo Women's Network from across the Panhandle.

Operatic soprano Johnson is being honored for her extensive contributions to the performing arts. She has represented the Panhandle area by contributing her considerable talent on opera stages in the United States and Europe. She was honored with a Career Achievement Award for her 1985 European tour with Opera North. Johnson, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Rex Rose of Pampa, has distinguished herself by winning the Luciano Pavarotti Competition and for her appearances on stage at the Santa Fe, San Francisco, Seattle, Milwaukee and Florentine operas.

This year's honorees from the financial field are Margo Fields, president of Palo Duro Savings & Loan Association; Sue Weatherly, president of Security State Bank in Hedley and M. Brenda Beal, partner with Peat, Marwick, Mitchell and Co.

Representing the non-profit community organizations is Lynn Singleton, executive director and board member for the Don and Sybil Harrington Foundation. Selected for their contributions in the wholesale industry are Barbara Miller, vice president and general manager of Robert's Paper Company and Tricia Sowers, secretary-treasurer of Ben E. Keith in Amarillo.

The Career Achievement Awards were begun in 1980 by the Amarillo Women's Network to honor women for their individual success. Begun as a support group for professional women in 1979, AWN has grown into an organization of 420 women representing 30 employment fields. Award winners do not have to be members of AWN to qualify for recognition. Nominations for the Career Achievement winners are submitted from a variety of sources each year. This year's recipients are representative of the talent women contributing to the marketplace, their communities and churches of the Panhandle.

Area author to appear at exposition this week

Nationally known author and humorist, John Erickson, is to have a booth at the Equity Sales Expo at the Ochiltree County Exposition Center in Perryton, Wednesday and Thursday.

Publishing through his own company, Maverick Books, Erickson has written the popular "Hank, the Cowdog" series about the humorous antics of canine head of ranch security. The first book of the series, "Hank the Cowdog," was produced last year as an animated feature for CBS Storybook.

In addition to the Hank series, Erickson has written a number of books dealing with the traditions and life of the cowboy. He examines the day to day job of the modern Texas cowboy from the point of view of a man that has been a cowhand in the Texas and Oklahoma panhandles.

Erickson has also published a collection of cowboy humor and tales. "The Devil in Texas," "Cowboys are Partly Human," and "Alkali County Tales," have received wide acclaim through the Western ranch country.

His most recent effort is the biography of Ace Reid, the creator of "Cowpokes" cartoons. This combination of two of the most popular humorists of our day resulted in a book that brings the comic genius of Ace Reid to life.

A native of Perryton, Erickson lives there with his wife Kristine, and their three children, Scot, Ashley and Mark. He has spoken to groups all over the United States and Canada. He has lectured at the Library of Congress and is a member of the Texas Institute of Letters, the Philosophical Society of Texas, and a board member of the Western Writers of America.

Dear Abby

Woman wishes man would dump ballast off his boat

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1986 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I am a 58-year-old divorcee, and he is a 64-year-old widower. We have been dating for a year. When we met, he came on to me like I was the only woman in his life; then I found out I wasn't. He never asked me to go steady, but we seemed so right for each other we became lovers immediately. He tells me I am the one he wants to settle down with, but he's not ready yet.

His boat is our love nest. We go there to spend the night, and it's very romantic. I know he takes other women on his boat overnight. I know he does because he's never tried to hide it. It just kills me, but I pretend it doesn't bother me.

What should I do? I believe we will eventually end up together; in the meantime I am hurting. I'm a very attractive woman and I'm not hard up for dates, but he's the one I want. Please advise me.

feel uncomfortable.

The problem: Our son is getting married this summer and the bride's family is having a similar wedding reception, including a buffet, to which these cousins will be invited. How can I tactfully discourage them from a repeat of their usual buffet raiding? When we were the hosts it was bad enough, but to have this occur at our son's wedding, when we are not the hosts, would be humiliating. We'd like to prevent this from happening. Any suggestions from you or your readers would be most appreciated.

DEAR PERPLEXED: Phone your "toting" cousins in advance and tell them that they are welcome to eat as much as they wish at your son's reception, but please leave the plastic bags at home.

DEAR ABBY: Your suggestion to invite someone who lives alone to join you for Christmas dinner ruffled my feathers. Not everybody who lives alone spends his or her time looking at the four walls, feeling miserable and neglected.

Believe it or not, some people enjoy staying home alone to watch a special TV program or listen to Christmas carols on their radio. Or they may be expecting phone calls from relatives or friends.

The assumed notion that no one should be alone at Christmas is ridiculous. Thank you for letting me say this.

Dad's business isn't for him

By Bruce Williams

DEAR BRUCE — Since I graduated from college, I have worked for my dad in the family business. It has been six years now, and although I make a good living and am pretty good at what I do, I hate to go to work every day.

I simply don't want to stay in this business, but I don't know how to approach my father. I know he'll be disappointed in me.

How can I maintain my relationship with my dad but still strike out on my own? — L.L., NEW ORLEANS.

DEAR L.L. — Yours is not a unique problem. For a variety of reasons, many young people choose not to go into the family business.

One of my sons is a business partner of mine. Happily, we enjoy a good personal relationship, as well as a good business relationship.

Fourth in art series planned

The fourth of Carson County Square House Museum's free series on art in America is set for 7:30 p.m., Tuesday, at Freedom Hall at the museum in Panhandle.

Entitled "Morris Louis: Major Themes and Variations," the program explores paintings by the American artist, Morris Louis, and follows the development of Louis' work, including the earliest Veils, the Unfurleds and the later stripe paintings. Special attention will be paid to the way in which elements of Louis' style relate to impressionism, cubism, abstract expressionism, and other aspects of modern painting.

For more information, please contact Kay Brizzolara, curator of education, P.O. Box 276, Panhandle, 79068 or call 537-3118.

Obviously, I would be disappointed if he told me he wanted to leave the business, but I would be even more disappointed if I discovered that he was unhappy and had not let me know. The fact that I'm his father and he's my son doesn't give us a master-slave relationship.

I would hope that any parent who truly loves his or her child would be mature enough to see that there are times when it just isn't possible to work together. I think your dad will appreciate it if you go to him and explain how you feel. Emphasize that under other conditions you might enjoy working with him but that this kind of business simply isn't for you.

Chances are that your father will be willing to work out an arrangement by which you can disengage yourself from the business and get on with other pursuits in life. If, in the worst case, your father is upset and chooses to make things difficult for you, I think it is even more important that you extricate yourself from the business.

No parent has the right to insist that a grown child be miserable simply for the pleasure and convenience of the parent.

College basketball roundup

Tar Heels staggering

By DICK JOYCE
AP Basketball Writer

Suddenly, top-ranked North Carolina is staggering.

The Tar Heels are in jeopardy of losing the No. 1 ranking they have held since the college basketball season began after suffering their second straight loss Sunday.

North Carolina State, behind sophomore Chris Washburn's 26 points, downed North Carolina 76-65 in an Atlantic Coast Conference game at Raleigh.

The Tar Heels, playing without two injured players — starting guard Steve Hale and top shot-blocker Warren Martin — dropped to 25-3 and 9-3 in the ACC, tying them with Georgia Tech for second place and putting both a full game behind first-place Duke.

North Carolina, which plays host to Virginia Wednesday night, will visit Duke next Sunday in both teams' final regular-season game — a contest which could decide the ACC crown.

In other Sunday games, No. 9 Syracuse edged No. 13 Georgetown 64-63 in Big East Conference play, and Purdue upset No. 15 Indiana 85-68 in the Big Ten Conference.

Three other Top Twenty teams were upset Saturday. Florida State beat No. 4 Memphis State 82-80, DePaul topped No. 6 St. John's 81-72, and Southern Mississippi beat No. 18 Virginia Tech 69-66.

In other games involving ranked teams, No. 2 Duke beat No. 10 Oklahoma 93-84; No. 3 Kansas topped Kansas State 84-69; No. 5 Georgia Tech defeated Maryland 77-70; No. 7 Michigan routed Alabama-Birmingham 62-54; No. 8 Kentucky beat Georgia 80-75; No. 11 Nevada-Las Vegas coasted over Fresno State 72-56; No. 12 Bradley stopped Wichita State 74-64; No. 14 Notre Dame mauled Miami, Fla., 126-73; No. 16 Louisville romped over Houston 76-59, and Navy defeated Army 55-52 in overtime.

No. 20 N.C. State 76, No. 1 North Carolina 65
Bennie Bolton added a career-high 18 points as N.C. State boosted its record to 18-9, 7-6. Brad Daugherty led North Carolina, which shot only 30 percent in the first half, with 23 points.

North Carolina cut a 17-point deficit to 62-57, but Bolton's clutch shooting help pull the Wolfpack away again.

No. 9 Syracuse 64, No. 13 Georgetown 63
Syracuse got 24 points from Dwayne Washington, including a free throw with 25 seconds left for the winner, avenging its only Big East loss. A victory over St. John's Wednesday night at Madison Square Garden would clinch the Big East crown for the Orangemen, who have a 13-1 league mark, 22-3 overall.

Georgetown's Michael Jackson's missed a 25-footer at the buzzer as the Hoyas fell to 9-5, 20-6.

Purdue 85, No. 15 Indiana 68

Todd Mitchell's 24 points led Purdue, which pulled a half-game behind front-runners Indiana and Michigan in the Big Ten race. The Boilermakers led 46-29 at halftime and held Hoosier guard Steve Alford to eight points, 15 below his average.

It was Purdue's fifth straight win and snapped Indiana's five-game winning streak.

No. 2 Duke 93, No. 10 Oklahoma 84

David Henderson scored 28 points and Johnny Dawkins added 20 as Duke coasted to a 23-point lead in the first half, then withstood the Sooners' comeback.

No. 3 Kansas 84, Kansas State 69

Kansas clinched its first regular-season Big Eight title since 1978 as Ron Kellogg scored 30 points.

Florida State 82, No. 4 Memphis State 80

Freshman center Tat Hunter put in Pee Wee Barber's missed shot with two seconds left to win the Metro Conference game for Florida State, the league's last-place team.

No. 5 Georgia Tech 77, Maryland 70

John Salley scored five of his 22 points during a seven-point spree that helped Georgia Tech pull away in the second half.

DePaul 81, No. 6 St. John's 72

Dallas Comegys scored 21 points, grabbed six rebounds, blocked three shots and had three assists to lead DePaul, 15-10, which kept its NCAA playoff hopes alive. Mark Jackson topped St. John's with 23 points.

No. 7 Michigan 62, Alabama-Birmingham 54

Antoine Joubert scored 20 points and Gary Grant added 14 as Michigan rallied against UAB. Michigan went on a 10-2 spree to grab the lead for good at a 48-47 lead with 6:33 left.

No. 8 Kentucky 80, Georgia 75

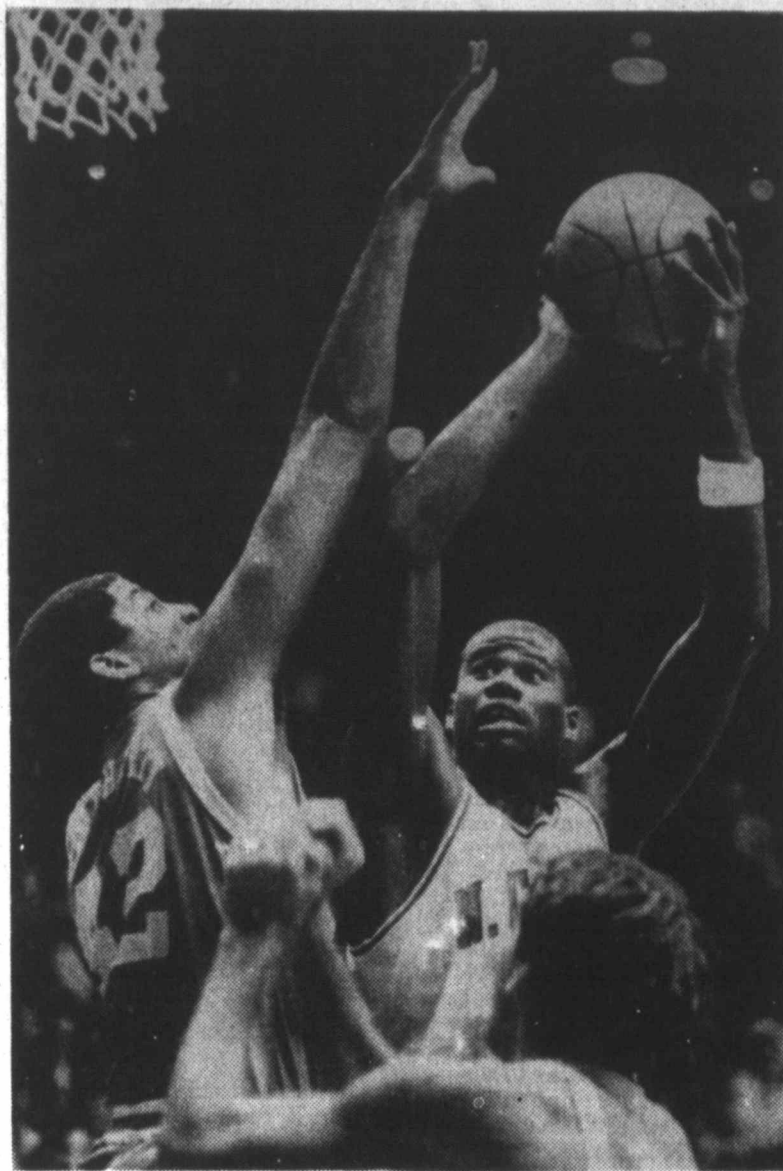

Kenny Walker scored 22 points and Winston Bennett added 20, including three foul shots in the final 32 seconds, as Kentucky clinched the Southeastern Conference championship.

No. 11 UNLV 72, Fresno State 56

Anthony Jones scored 17 points, including five in a nine-point first-half run that put the UNLV on top for good.

No. 12 Bradley 74, Wichita State 64

Hersey Hawkins scored 22 points as Bradley ran its winning streak to 19 games, longest in the nation. The Braves, 15-0 in the Missouri Valley Conference, raised their record 28-1, the best mark in Division I.

Killer Frogs closing in on SWC crown

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

Texas Christian's fairy tale Frogs need just one more basketball miracle.

And it may take another 30-foot shot at the buzzer to beat Texas Tech in Lubbock Wednesday night or the Houston Cougars in Coach Guy V. Lewis' final South-west Conference regular season game on Saturday night.

The Frogs can clinch at least a tie for the title and the No. 1 seed in the SWC Post-Season Tournament with a victory at either Lubbock or Houston.

TCU had a prayer answered Saturday with a 55-54 victory over the Texas Longhorns.

Jamie Dixon's 30-foot "prayer" shot at the buzzer gave TCU its first 20-game winning season since 1959. It also moved the Horned Frogs to a 12-2 SWC mark to Texas' 12-3.

Texas' only remaining game is next Sunday against Texas Tech in Austin. TCU can win the title outright by sweeping both Tech and Houston on the road.

"Somebody is looking over us," said TCU Coach Jim Killingsworth, who is shooting for his first SWC title since he took over the Horned Frog helm seven years ago.

"We have a good shot at it now," said Killingsworth, who hastily added "I could sure pick out better places to go than Texas Tech or Houston for Guy V. Lewis' last game. But I guess we have to do it."

TCU is 20-5 overall and finished the season 14-0 at home in Daniel-Meyer Coliseum.

In other games Saturday, Baylor beat Rice 57-44 to sweep the Owls, defending champion Texas Tech ripped Southern Methodist 57-44 in Lubbock and Louisville whipped Houston 76-59 in a non-conference game. Baylor can't play in the post-season tournament because it is on NCAA probation.

Dixon said he didn't even see his shot go in.

"I couldn't see whether it was going in or not but when everyone started jumping all over me I got the idea that it had gone in," said Dixon. "It was luck."

There has never been a mob scene like the one in sold-out Daniel-Meyer Coliseum after Dixon's shot. Some of the 7,223 fans poured out of the stands to celebrate as Dixon was mobbed by happy players and fans.

One of the celebrants was TCU Athletic Director Frank Windeger, who floundered into the pile and was knocked over by an exuberant fan.

"I really believe we are this year's team of destiny just like Texas Tech last year," said TCU forward Larry Richard.

In games Wednesday night besides the important Tech-TCU showdown, Arkansas is at Baylor, Texas A&M is at Rice, and Houston is at SMU in an 8:00 p.m. game.

Tewell makes victory walk after 11 years

LOS ANGELES (AP)—After 11 years on the PGA tour, Doug Tewell finally got to make a triumphant march up the 18th fairway.

"The applause was deafening when I walked up there today," a smiling Tewell said Sunday after his sensational 8-under-par 63 gave him a seven-stroke Los Angeles Open victory over Clarence Rose.

Tewell, 36, had won just twice before on the tour, with both those victories coming in 1980. And he was denied a winner's walk up to the 18th green because one of the wins came by one shot in a playoff and the other he secured only after he'd finished his round.

This time, his big lead assured him the victory as he walked up to the 18th hole to the cheers of the large gallery at Riviera Country Club. Tewell then punctuated his round by sinking a final birdie putt.

"It was my dream to be the last guy on the golf course, to walk up to the 18th green and be able to hold my arms up in the air," he said after winding up the tournament with a total of 270, 14-under-par.

Tewell, who'd gone nearly six years without winning, had quite different dreams — as in nightmares — on the eve of the tournament's final round, as he went in with a one-shot lead.

"I slept awful last night," he said. "I kept telling my wife, 'I don't think I'm going to win ... I'm too scared.'"

"I had a nervous stomach before I teed off this morning. I felt like I was in a trance out there ... I ran like a scared rabbit."

He ran away from the field, shooting the second-lowest round in LA Open history.

Tewell, who collected $81,000 for the victory, said he'd considered cutting back sharply on his tour appearances to concentrate on business, but then thought, "What better place to make money?"

Lendl captures Lipton title

BOCA RATON, Fla. (AP) — Ivan Lendl cemented his hold on the No. 1 world ranking by beating the best of the rest without playing his best in the $1.8 million Lipton International Players Championships tennis tournament.

The top-seeded Czechoslovakian outlasted second-seeded Mats Wilander of Sweden 3-6, 6-1, 7-6, 6-4 in a rain-interrupted final Sunday to earn $112,500 of the total prize money of $1.8 million.

In the women's final Saturday, top-seeded Chris Evert Lloyd downed second-seeded Steffi Graf of West Germany 6-4, 6-2. Lloyd also pocketed $112,500.

A 3-hour, 15-minute rain delay in the third-set tiebreaker helped Lendl pull his game together. Play was stopped with the two knotted at 2-2. And, when they returned to the court, they battled to 5-5.

Then, Lendl used power to win the 11th point, running Wilander from side to side with his looping forehand, and finesse to win the 12th, taking the tiebreaker 7-5 and the set with a perfect drop volley.

Neither player could make a dent in the other's serve in the final set until Wilander started mis-firing in the last game. Lendl kept returning Wilander's weak second serve deep, and the Swede hit four straight balls long to end the match.

Lendl has been complaining throughout this two-week, Grand Slam-size event that he hasn't felt sharp. He said Sunday wasn't any different.

"It's very satisfying to win a tournament when I'm not playing well," said Lendl.

Wilander said the delay didn't affect him any more than it did Lendl.

"It's always very difficult because a tiebreaker is so tense," he said. "But it's better to sit for three hours than to wait until the next day."

Neither player had completed his semifinal match on the hard courts at the Boca West resort. Lendl was leading Jimmy Connors in their semifinal when Connors refused to continue to play after what he considered was a bad line call. When Connors defaulted, Lendl was a 1-6, 6-1, 6-2, 2-6, 5-2 winner.

Stefan Edberg of Sweden was forced to quit after the second game of the second set of his semifinal with Wilander because of a pulled abdominal muscle.

Like Lendl, Lloyd felt she was playing below par for most of the tournament. Even early in the final, she said she wasn't playing the way she would like.

Then she started hitting her famous ground strokes with some authority and won eight of the final 10 games.

Graf should have left the tournament Thursday afternoon after her impressive semifinal victory over Helena Sukova of Czechoslovakia.

Moses Malone led Philadelphia with 27 points. Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, who established the all-time record for NBA games played by appearing in his 1,304th contest, had 28 for the Lakers.

Celtics 113, Pacers 98

Larry Bird had 30 points, 12 assists and 11 rebounds as Boston broke open a close game by outscoring Indiana 35-20 in the fourth quarter.

Dennis Johnson's three-point shot at the buzzer tied the score 78-78 after three periods. The Celtics then made 17 of 25 shots in the last 12 minutes to win easily.

Robert Parish added 27 points and 15 rebounds for Boston, while Herb Williams led the Pacers with 24 points and 12 rebounds.

Clippers 110, Knicks 99

Kurt Nimphius and Junior Bridgeman each posted season highs with 26 and 25 points, respectively, as Los Angeles defeated New York.

Bridgeman came off the bench for 13 points in the second quarter, helping the Clippers take a 56-39 lead, then scored seven in the first 2½ minutes of the fourth quarter as Los Angeles extended a nine-point lead to 98-82 with 8:22 left.

Louis Orr scored 28 points for the Knicks, tying his career high, while Ken Bannister added 20.

Kings 127, Warriors 124

Reserve forward Eddie Johnson scored 23 points and Terry Tyler hit two free throws with 10 seconds left to lead Sacramento over Golden State.

Tyler's free throws followed a three-point basket by the Warriors' Purvis Short that reduced the Kings' lead to 125-124. The Warriors missed three-point shots by Terry Teagle and Short in the final 10 seconds.

Short led all scorers with 34 points for Golden State, while Reggie Theus had 21 points and 11 assists for Sacramento.

LA catches 76ers, 117-111

By WILLIAM R. BARNARD
AP Basketball Writer

For the Los Angeles Lakers, beating the Philadelphia 76ers is the next best thing to beating the Boston Celtics.

"We set high standards for ourselves because we're a championship team," Lakers Coach Pat Riley said of Sunday's 117-111 overtime triumph over the 76ers. "We've been beaten two times on national TV (by the Celtics), so we just wanted to let the rest of the country know we are still OK."

"Considering the circumstances — that we hadn't been playing well — this win was better than any other win this year," said Earvin "Magic" Johnson, who had a season-high 34 points and added 11 assists for the Lakers.

The Lakers, who had lost four of their previous nine games, overcame a 107-104 deficit when Johnson hit an uncontested three-point shot at the end of regulation to force the extra period.

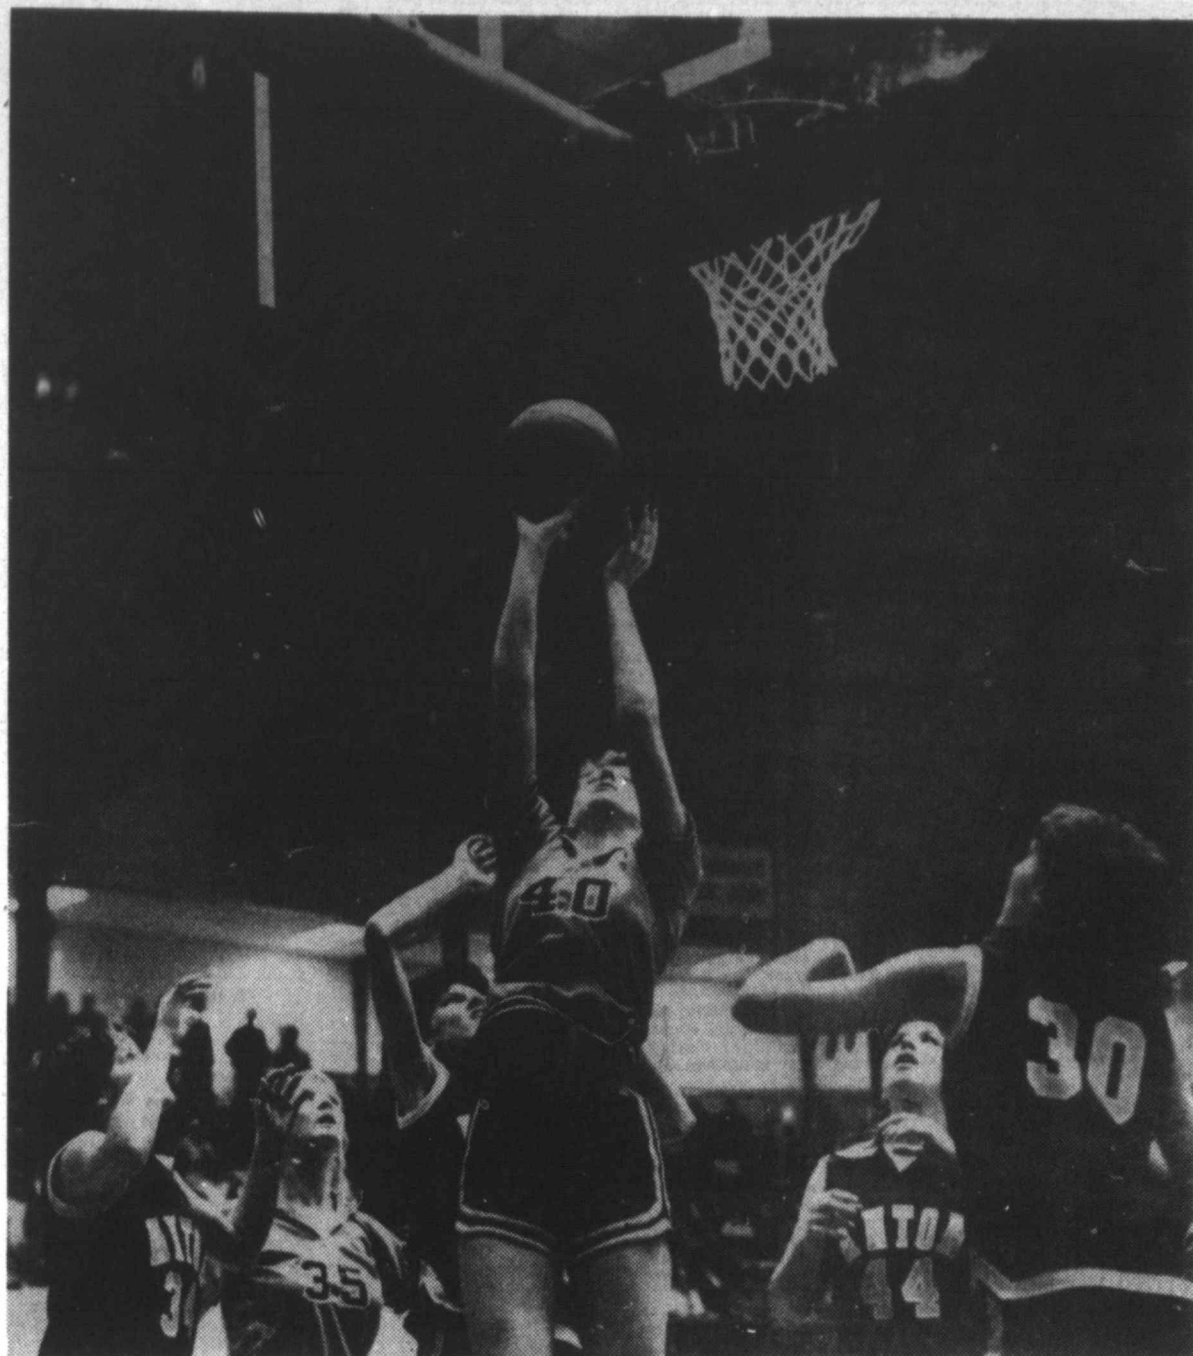

"I was trying to cut off the penetration (to keep Michael Cooper from getting the ball), and he stopped just outside the three-point line and shot," Philadelphia's Julius Erving said of Johnson's game-saving basket.

In Sunday's other NBA games, Boston tripped Indiana 113-98 at Hartford, Conn.; the Los Angeles Clippers beat New York 110-99; and Sacramento defeated Golden State 127-124.

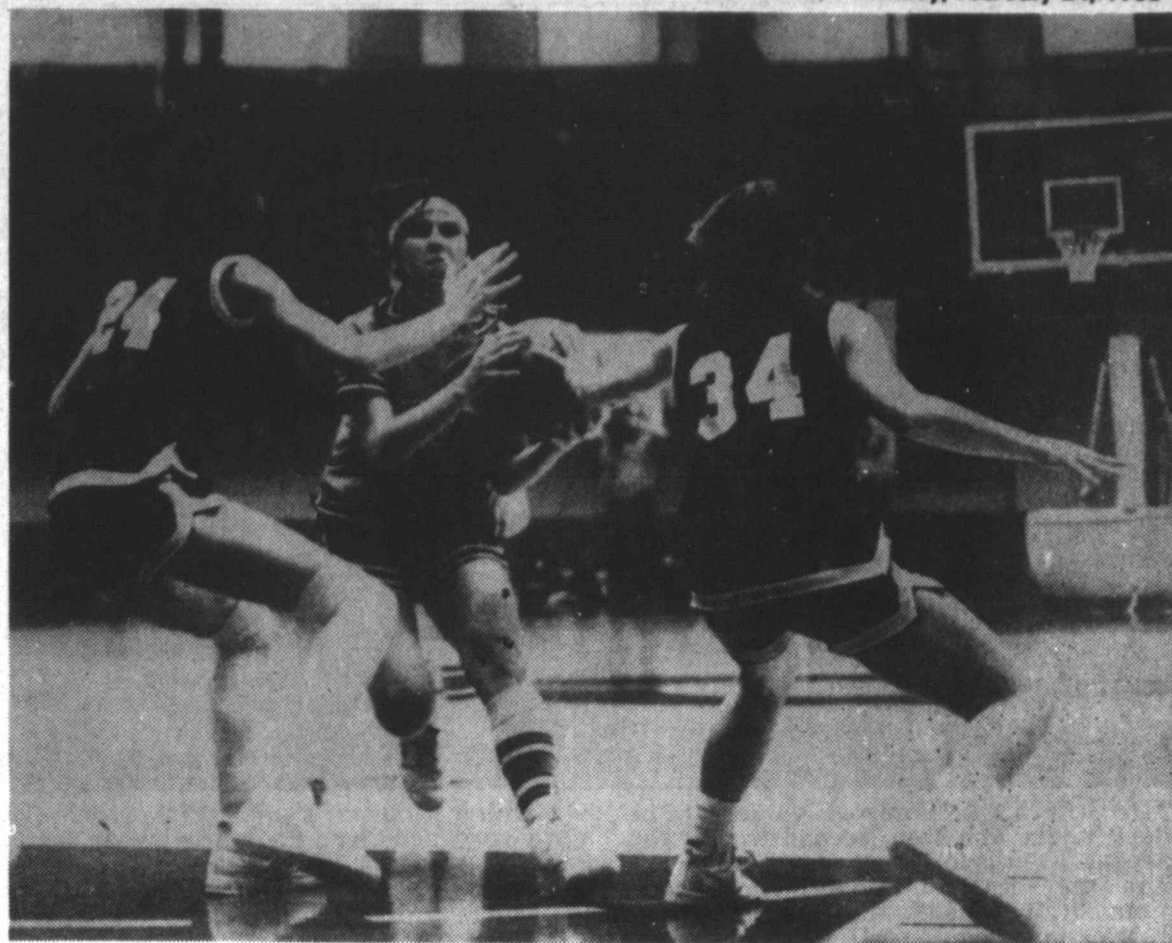

Although they nearly won the game, the 76ers acknowledged that Los Angeles currently has a better team.

"You look up at the scoreboard and it's 117-111," said Erving, who scored 12 points. "Maybe that tells the story. Maybe that's where the two teams are now. Looking at our team, we've still got a ways to go."

"They're a better team," added Philadelphia forward Charles Barkley, who had 24 points and 18 rebounds. "It's going to take a perfect or near perfect game for us to beat them."

A near miss for Wheeler

LEVELLAND — Those who saw it are probably convinced that the shot that knocked the Wheeler Mustangettes from the state basketball playoffs is still hanging on the Texan Dome rim.

O'Donnell eliminated the Mustangettes from the Class 1A state girls basketball playoffs Saturday in a 52-51 heartbreaker in Levelland. Wheeler led from the game's beginning until the Lady Eagles' Stacy Bessire sank a free throw with 21 seconds left to give them a 52-51 lead.

Wheeler had a chance to win it, but was foiled by gravity. Mandy Smith shot for the win with four seconds left. The ball hit the back of the rim and appeared to be in. It spun around the front of the rim and crawled to the top. The ball and the hearts of everyone in the Texan Dome stopped and balanced for three full seconds atop the rim.

As the buzzer sounded, the ball fell out the side and most of the stunned Mustangettes fell to their knees and cried.

Nazareth later beat O'Donnell 57-37 for a berth in the state tournament, but the game was anticlimactic for tournament insiders had pegged Wheeler as the only team with a chance of beating the defending state champion Swiftettes.

The Mustangettes, whose season ended at 28-4, held off Anton 50-47 in their opening game and jumped to a 12-2 lead against O'Donnell.

But Wheeler never got to show the regional crowd the kind of basketball it could play, as most of the time the Mustangettes were mired in foul trouble and struggling from the free throw line.

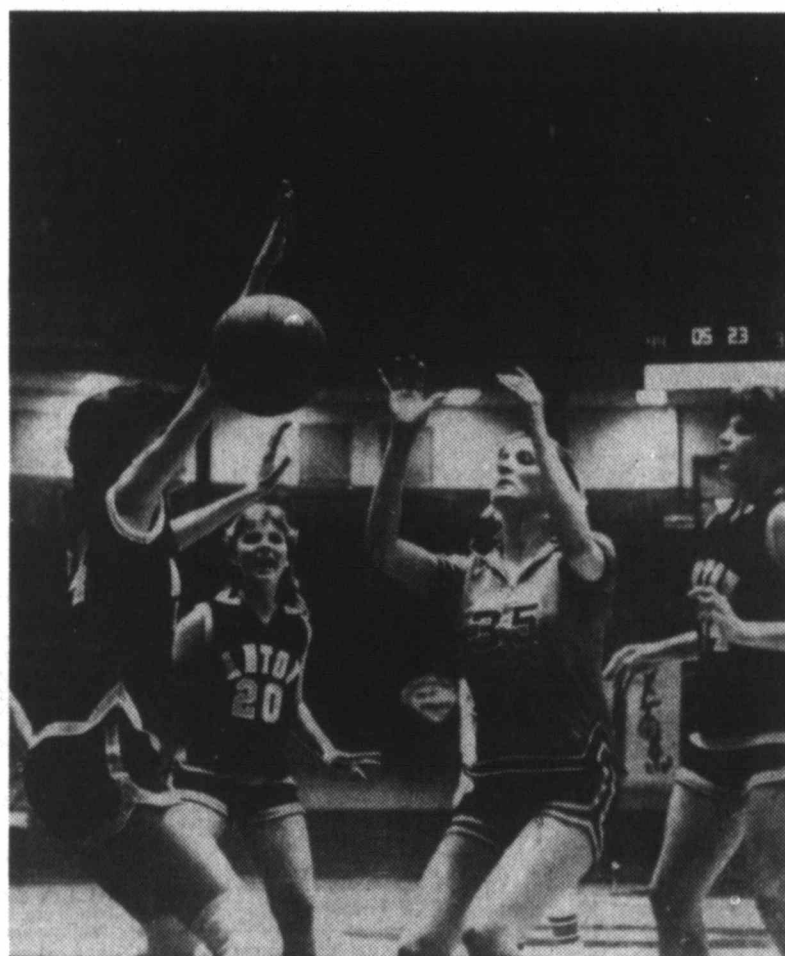

Fouls decided Wheeler's game with O'Donnell. Four of the five Mustangettes' starters had three fouls at halftime against the Eagles, and leading scorers Marlo Hartman and DeeAnn Jolly saw their playing time drastically cut because of fouls.

The case was the same against Anton, and the Texan Dome crowd never did get to see Wheeler's starters play a full quarter together.

Still and all, the Mustangettes would have had their shot at Nazareth, if after their season stopped on the rim for three seconds, it would've fallen on the other side.

After beating Anton, the Mustangettes were in top spirits.

DeeAnn Jolly goes for the ball.

Reporter's digging leads to a conviction 17 years later

KENOSHA, Wis. (AP) — A phone call from a stranger started it all — a reporter's obsession with a young boy's death and a suspicion that a terrible crime had gone unpunished for 16 years.

The boy, Donnie Miller, died in 1969 at age 4. How he died had been a mystery, but his sisters thought they knew. Nearly a generation later, when they told a radio reporter, he decided to look deeper.

So began a six-month odyssey for reporter David Cole that led to a reopening of the case and a murder conviction. The boy's killer: his stepfather.

"If it weren't for David Cole, this case would still be sitting in a file drawer," said Richard Ginkowski, special prosecutor in the trial. "There's no question about it."

David Wilson, 52, was convicted last month of second-degree murder in the death of Donnie, whose stomach had been ruptured, bringing on shock and infection. Wilson will be sentenced Feb. 25 and faces up to 25 years in prison. He plans to appeal.

For Cole, a 30-year-old reporter and the news director at WLIP-WJZQ radio, the conviction marked the end of a journey through faded records, a family's torment and the short life and abrupt death of a child.

The journey began with a phone call.

When Cole arrived at work one day in December 1984, he found a message from the evening disc jockey. "A lady called," the note said. "Here's her tale of woe..."

Pamela Miller, 27, one of Donnie's four sisters, wanted to talk with a reporter.

When Cole returned the call, could be escalated in a highly emotional environment."

However, Babbitt allowed 65 members of the Arizona National Guard to participate in a road-building exercise in the interior, the same mission which Brennan thought was too dangerous for a 35-member engineering team from his state.

"Honduras borders El Salvador and Nicaragua, two Central American countries with ongoing internal rebellions," Brennan said in a statement. "Both rebellions have spilled into Honduras. The possibility of violence in either of these neighboring countries moving into Honduras is very real, as is the potential for anti-American violence."

However, Dan Donohue, spokesman for the National Guard Bureau in the Pentagon, says, "The security risk in Central America is no greater than it is anywhere else in the world."

Guard forces have never been closer than 26 miles from the Nicaraguan border, and there has been no incident in which troops have been caught in the lived with his family, retraced investigators' steps and consulted with a forensic pathologist who, according to court records, concluded with "better than a 95 percent level of certainty" Donnie had died from child abuse.

After a few weeks, Cole met with District Attorney Robert Zapf and urged him to reopen the case. Zapf said it would be difficult; Donnie's mother and coroner Harold Wagner were dead, and some evidence might no longer be available.

Cole persisted. He admitted he was obsessed. "The thing that got me going was the apparent injustice of it all," he said.

What especially piqued his interest was Wagner's description of a tear in Donnie's stomach of three centimeters — more than an inch. Wagner reported the cause of death as "shock and peritonitis following rupture of the stomach due to undetermined trauma."

The coroner also reported Donnie had five old rib fractures.

At the trial in January, prosecutors charged that Wilson had delivered a "high-energy" kick or punch to Donnie's stomach.

Wilson's attorneys plan to appeal and to seek a new trial based in part on pre-trial publicity and the televising of the trial by a local cable station.

Wilson, meanwhile, faces another charge of interfering with the custody of his 16-year-old daughter, about whom Ms. Miller first called Cole. The girl is now living with relatives.

After the verdict, Cole and the four Miller sisters — Pamela, Joan, Susan Antrim and Dawn Stewart — gathered to celebrate and to visit Donnie's grave. "We couldn't have done it without him," said Mrs. Flatley.

Republican State Chairman Andrew Natsios charged that Dukakis was "just grandstanding for the populist left in the Democratic Party."

"Several governors are putting politics in a military training operation," Rep. G.V. "Sonny" Montgomery, D-Miss., said earlier this month after visiting Central America.

Montgomery and Lt. Gen. Emmett H. Walker, the chief of the National Guard Bureau, issued a joint statement which said in part: "To those who say we are up to something sinister, we say come look at what we're doing."

Slivers said found in Gerber's baby food

HOUSTON (AP) — Relatives say they are keeping a close eye on an 8-month-old New Waverly boy since his aunt said she found glass slivers in a jar of the Gerber chocolate pudding he was eating.

Rhonda McClure, the child's grandmother, said that after the slivers were found Friday, the jar was shipped to Dallas for examination by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration.

"I called the doctor that night and he told me to watch for his stomach swelling and to watch for continuous crying and grabbing of the stomach," Ms. McClure told Houston's KTRK-TV. "So far we haven't seen anything like this."

Crockett clan goes to Alamo

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — The descendants of Davy Crockett will reunite this week at the Alamo, where their famous forefather made his final stand against Santa Ana's Mexican troops in 1836.

The third Crockett descendants' reunion, which is being held in Texas to help celebrate the state's 150th birthday, is filled with symbolism, said reunion organizer Jim Dumas of Pigeon Forge, Tenn., Crockett's great-great-grandson.

"Davy is one of the first big links between Tennessee and Texas, and there are plenty of them," said Dumas, 56.

"The first two years, we met in Greenville (Tenn.), near where Davy was born. But this time we'll be meeting where he died," said Dumas.

He said he hopes the reunion will draw as many as 200 Crockett descendants from both branches of the family. Crockett, born at Limestone, Tenn., in 1786, was married twice, first to Polly Finley who died in 1815 and then to Elizabeth Patton.

The gathering is to last from Wednesday through Saturday when the descendants will be guests of the state at a party in their honor at Witte's Museum, Dumas said.

Crockett descendants will be staying at the restored Davy Crockett Hotel across from the Alamo and will tour the fort, the city of San Antonio and hold an organizational meeting for family affairs.

The reunions have served to reunite family as well as educate the Crockett descendants about the real Davy Crockett, Dumas said.

"He didn't go west to fight Indians or Mexicans. He went to homes, said Dumas, who cites a letter Crockett wrote 30 days before his death in the winter of 1836.

BEEN THROUGH SIX FLOODS — Hank Scholting, 72, whom locals call the Mayor of River Road, stands in his flooded front yard in Rio Vista, Calif., Sunday as flood water began to recede over the weekend. Scholting said he had been through six floods in the same house and this one was the worst with flood waters coming up to his second story. Rio Vista is located next to the Delta about 30 miles south of Sacramento. (AP Laserphoto)

Man charged in death of Hurst woman

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — A 25-year-old construction worker is jailed today on a capital murder charge in the death of a Hurst woman whose stabbed, nude body was found in a burning field, police say.

Richard W. Jones of Fort Worth was charged Sunday and is in the Tarrant County Jail in lieu of a $500,000 bond, said a jail spokesman who declined to give his name.

Jones is accused of slaying Tammy B. Livingston, 27, whose body was found Wednesday night in a field in east Fort Worth.

The woman, who was stabbed several times in the neck and doused with gasoline before being set afire, disappeared earlier Wednesday while shopping for party supplies, police said.

An 18-year-old woman allegedly involved in the case was at first held on $500,000 bond on an investigatory charge of capital murder. But that bond was dropped Sunday, and she was being held on a $50,750 bond for investigation of forgery and tampering with evidence, the spokesman said.

Californians return home, flooding hits Oregon, Idaho

By The Associated Press

Thousands of northern California residents returned today to clean up homes flooded by nearly nine days of nonstop storms and officials in Oregon and Idaho were "praying for no more rain" after floods and mudslides severed highways.

Civil defense crews in Boise, Idaho, on Sunday built a ditch of sandbags to funnel water from hillsides through town, cutting the east end of the state's capital to traffic.

Some of the heaviest flooding Sunday was in western and northeast Oregon and southwest Idaho. In Oregon, 22 people and two families were evacuated.

"We're just praying for no more rain," Umatilla County sheriff's dispatcher Toni Murray said in the northeast Oregon city of Pendleton on Sunday after floods washed out several rural roads.

The National Weather Service said rain was expected to continue today and Tuesday as a new weather system moves into the state. Residents of Pendleton and parts of Washington and Idaho were warned about flood danger.

In northern California, about 16,000 people were back in their homes as floodwaters continued receding, but 11,000 residents of West Linda, 90 miles northeast of San Francisco, were not being allowed to return, said Yuba County Undersheriff Dennis Moore.

About 26,000 people fled Thursday night after a levee broke on the Yuba River's south fork. The levee was repaired Saturday.

Moore said he doubted that homes in West Linda would be habitable for a couple weeks. Workers kept watch on fragile levees.

A leaking 400-foot levee bulge at Robbins that spurred the evacuation of hundreds of residents over the weekend showed only minor seepage, said Dale Follas of the Sutter County Office of Emergency Services. Robbins is about 10 miles south of the Linda-Olivehurst area.

At least one death was blamed on the Yuba River flood, a 61-year-old man Moore said had refused to evacuate.

In the Sonoma County town of Guerneville, roads were hazardous because of debris and downed power lines, county spokeswoman Brenda Bellinger said.

Amtrak restored its coast run from San Francisco to Los Angeles on Saturday, and two San Joaquin Valley runs to Bakersfield on Sunday, said spokesman Arthur Lloyd.

Panhandle Industrial Co. Inc. One of Pampa's Largest Employers

At 50 years old and with close to 100 employees, Panhandle Industrial Co. Inc. is one of Pampa's oldest and largest employers with offices located at highway 60 and Gray.

And they're growing all the time.

Panhandle Industrial just recently opened up a general machine shop located on West Alcock.

Although the company has always done general machine work, company president Paul Turner said the new project was started with an idea toward being competitive with other machine shops in the area.

Dealing with both major and independent oil producers, Panhandle Industrial's general machine shop is available to repair all facets of machines, engines and compressor cylinders.

Another recent addition, the operations and maintenance division, handles complete gas plant services, from turnkey construction to engine overhauls to contract maintenance, including regrouting and rebuilding engines on location in the field.

The on - location work can cut down on shut - down time, according to Turner.

Currently, Panhandle Industrial's operations and maintenance division has three crews running, but Turner says he is hoping for six crews this summer and 10 by this time next year.

These newer divisions are in addition to the existing ones that have made Panhandle Industrial Pampa's fifth largest employer.

For instance there's the manufacturing division, fabricating replacement parts of natural gas engines and compressors.

Panhandle Industrial has become one of the largest manufacturers of replacement parts such as pistons, cylinders, heads and rods.

Or the compressor division, fabricating, installing and servicing skid mounted com-pressor units, enabling the company to handle smaller compressors.

Little did the founders of Baash - Ross Tool Co. — as Panhandle Industrial was known in 1936 — know that one day the company would have outlet and warehouse locations in not only Pampa but in Odessa, Pasadena, McPherson, Kan., Charleston, W. Va., and even Calgary, Alberta, in Canada.

The Kansas location also houses the Kansas Cylinder Head Division, repairing engine cylinder heads.

The growth of Panhandle Industrial has been steady and stable.

Even through the late '40s and early '50s, when the oil and gas industry faced a decline, Panhandle Industrial chose to expand its markets by including the manufacture and repair of natural gas engine parts, rather than letting the market determine the company's fate.

The '70s were another period of growth as Katy Industries purchased Panhandle Industrial and the company acquired crosstown competitor Grayco Machine Corp., adding 50 percent to its production capacity and introducing gas compressor parts and repair to an expanding line of services.

Also during the '70s, the company added the Kansas Cylinder Head Co. and opened its sales territory to our Canadian neighbors to the north.

One might be led to wonder why, with a sales force reaching across America and into Canada, and customers in places like Sweden and Germany, Panhandle Industrial would choose to be headquartered here.

The reason is the company believes in Pampa.

As Turner put it, the strong spirit of the people, the forward thinking attitude, the determination to shape the future and the knowledge that, working together, we can all control our destiny, is as alive today as when the company started as Baash - Ross Tool Co. in 1936.
