More than 100 die in Madrid plane crash

Runway disaster

Workmen and rescue personnel clean the runway at a Madrid airport where two Spanish airliners collided Wednesday.

MADRID, Spain (AP) — Two Spanish jetliners collided in heavy fog today as they accelerated to take off from Madrid, touching off a fiery blast and killing all 42 aboard one plane and 62 on the other, Transportation Minister Enrique Baron said.

Airline officials said the accident was similar to the 1977 Canary Islands disaster in which two jumbo jets collided on the ground in heavy fog, killing 582 people. The planes involved today were an Iberian Air Lines Boeing 727, said to be going about 100 mph, and a DC-9 of Aviaco, a domestic airliner hit near the fuel tank, killing all aboard.

First estimates from civil defense officials were that about half of the 93 people aboard the 727 were killed. One of the 727 survivors, Luigi Intligia, said Iberia pilot Carlos Lopez Barranco, who also survived, told him he saw the DC-9 approaching but it was too late to do anything.

He said Lopez Barranco apparently tried to speed up the takeoff of the 727 to avoid the collision and got the plane's nose far enough up in the air to allow those in the front to avoid the effect of the impact and to slide out through the emergency exit.

The accident occurred 10 days after a Colombian jumbo jet crashed near Madrid, killing 181 of the 192 people aboard.

The 727 involved in today's crash was on its way to Rome with 84 passengers and nine crew members aboard. Forty-two of the passengers on the 727 were Japanese on a tour of Europe. The DC-9 carried 37 passengers and five crew and was on its way to Santander in northern Spain.

There was no official word on the cause of the accident, but Iberia and airport sources said the collision occurred as one or both airliners were accelerating in preparation for takeoff. Sources said they believed the Boeing 727 was traveling about 100 mph.

The DC-9 was said to be completely destroyed in the crash and ensuing explosion and its wreckage scattered over more than a mile.

Dozens of ambulances and fire brigades rushed to the scene. Several hours after the collision hundreds of rescue workers were seen combing through the steaming wreckage.

Midland's growth toward west, north to be studied

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Midland's master plan will be zeroing in on actual and potential growth areas to the west toward Odessa and to the north into Martin County.

"Midland has historically grown in a westward direction rather than an eastward," said planning consultant J.T. Dunkin with J.T. Dunkin & Associates of Garland. He made this assessment to the Midland City Council and the Planning and Zoning Commission Tuesday in a joint meeting in City Hall.

In formulating a master plan for the 1980s and beyond, the councilmen and commissioners considered potential development of the Scharbauer Ranch area west of Midland, continued development in the Green Tree Country Club area, possible development at a new airport site in Martin County, and growth of the semi-rural residential area in southeast Midland County.

Potential development of the Scharbauer Ranch land, the location of Midland Regional Airport and the proximity of the two cities "would indicate...the westward direction will continue to be prominent," Dunkin said.

WITH THE WESTWARD movement comes the "most critical" problem of sanitary sewer service. "Water is not the problem," Dunkin said.

The city is considering putting in a trunk sewer line south of Midland and westward to the sewage treatment plant. This would eliminate the airport's sewage treatment plant. Cost of that line, minus rights-of-way costs, would be between $6 and $7 million, said Fred Baker, public works director.

Councilmen and commissioners also discussed the main thoroughfares, such as Loop 250, Big Spring Street, Fairgrounds Road, I-20, U.S. Highway 80, Texas 191, Farm-to-Market Road 1788 and main inner-city streets and the potential extension of Odessa's Yukon Drive to north of Loop 250 in Midland.

"We have not had any significant discussion with Odessa," noted Richard Hennessy, city planning director, on Midland-Odessa regional transportation studies.

Mayor G. Thane Akins noted the thoroughfares "certainly" will make the "land a lot more valuable."

In developing thoroughfares and in assigning costs, the mayor noted, "They sure need to be careful about making special deals" due to the risk of anti-trust suits.

"THE BOTTOM LINE," said Dunkin, "is being fair and equitable."

The prospects of Midland Air Park being replaced with a more isolated air field about eight miles north of downtown Midland and east of Texas Highway 349 within five years "is certainly going to generate development," said Akins.

The City Council last month agreed to swap 92 acres of land at Midland Air Park and Midland Regional Airport for 2,665 acres north of the city. This still leaves Air Park intact with about 500 acres.

To the south, Dunkin noted the "large urban impact below the Interstate" and in the semi-rural area south of Monahans Draw.

"Maybe you ought to talk to the county about doing a master plan for them," Akins suggested.

Christmas has its hazards

SIOUX CITY, Iowa (AP) — Christmas could be hazardous to your health, if you suffer from allergies to holiday trees, dusty or moldy decorations or holiday candies and treats. Even gift wrapping and plastic toys can cause allergic reactions.

Dr. Michael Jones, an allergy specialist based in Sioux City, said one in five people suffers from allergies, and even those who can normally tolerate a certain level of allergens (substances that cause allergy attacks) sometimes suffer around the holidays.

Christmas trees pose a double threat, Jones said, because they can raise the level of dust in a home and may bother people who are allergic to turpin, a substance in a tree's sap.

Dust is the most common allergy, Jones said. People are not actually allergic to dust, but to microscopic mites that live among common household dust and mold. While a tree may not bring enough dust into a home to cause an allergic reaction itself, it can raise the dust level above the allergy threshold.

"A Christmas tree can be the straw that breaks the camel's back," he said.

Jones recommends that his patients use artificial trees. He also recommends that the trees (most of which disassemble) be run through the dishwasher to rid them of any dust acquired during storage.

Christmas decorations are usually stored in dusty closets or basements. That dust, along with mold from old family decorations, can raise allergen levels above the threshhold.

Food allergies can ruin the Christmas season, too. The most common food allergies are to milk, wheat, corn, eggs and citrus fruits. Most candy, including Christmas candy, is made with a corn-sugar base. Candies made with a cane-sugar base also may cause allergic reactions in some people.

Peanuts, pecans and other nuts served during the holidays can cause allergic reactions. One patient, Jones reported, was so allergic to peanuts that he suffered an allergic reaction after kissing a woman who had just eaten a piece of peanut brittle.

No drugs, alcohol found

Toxicologist reports on plane crash victims

Preliminary results of toxicology tests conducted on the pilot and four passengers of a chartered KOSA-TV plane that crashed in a field adjacent to Midland Regional Airport last month showed no evidence of drugs or alcohol, Justice of the Peace Robert Pine said today.

The plane, a twin-engine turboprop chartered by the Odessa television station to cover local high school teams playing in Fort Worth and Wichita Falls, crashed as it attempted to land shortly before 2 a.m. Nov. 26, killing all eight persons aboard.

Pine said he wasn't sure when the results of an autopsy performed on the pilot, 29-year-old Keith Elkin of Midland, would be ready.

Federal investigators say it may take up to six months to determine what caused the fiery crash, which occurred in clear weather as Elkin aborted the landing and pulled the plane's nose up sharply, resulting in an apparent stall.

The plane crashed nose first between two fences on the Scharbauer Ranch, which borders the airport. Authorities believe all eight victims died instantly.

The widow of one victim, Bobby Stephens, filed a lawsuit Friday in Midland's 142nd State District Court. Stephens was chief engineer for the KOSA.

The suit charges the charter service, the plane's manufacturer, its owner and the pilot' estate with negligence. No dollar damages were specified in the suit.

Gaddy, who owned the twin-engine Beechcraft turboprop, said Tuesday he was unaware the suit had been filed, but added, "I suppose things of that nature are normal in cases like this."

Gaddy said that, "to my knowledge," the plane was properly maintained, and called Elkin a "good, qualified pilot." He also said the FAA has not told him the cause of the crash.

Israel pledges to avenge bombing of bus

Police and bomb disposal experts in Jerusalem examine the wreckage of a bus gutted by an explosion.

By The Associated Press

Israel vowed to avenge the PLO bombing that killed four people aboard a crowded Jerusalem bus, and government leaders in Italy and Britain met today to reconsider their role in the multinational peacekeeping force in Lebanon.

In Syria, the state radio said the body of the American pilot killed when his plane was shot down during air raids on Syrian positions in Lebanon was turned over today by the Syrian army to the Lebanese army.

John Stewart, a U.S. Embassy spokesman in Beirut, said he expected the body of Lt. Mark A. Lange to be given to U.S. Marines for its eventual return to the United States.Lange, 27, of Fraser, Mich., was killed Sunday after his A-6 Intruder was downed during a bombing raid by 28 American planes.

■ Recent tragedies indicate complexity of issues — Page 2A

His navigator-bombardier, Lt. Robert O. Goodman, 26, of Virginia Beach, Va., was captured by the Syrians, and Syrian Defense Minister Mustafa Tlass said he would not be released until Americans troops leave Lebanon.

The attack on Syrian antiaircraft batteries in Lebanon was in retaliation for the firing on U.S. reconnaissance flights.

In Beirut, the Lebanese army and Christian militiamen exchanged rocket and artillery fire today with Druse insurgents, and President Amin Gemayel was urged to appoint a new coalition Cabinet representing the country's warring factions.

Prime Minister Shafik Wazzan said he would press for a prompt decision by Gemayel on the resignation of the nine-man Cabinet to make way for a coalition government that might end the prolonged sectarian warfare.

Police in Jerusalem said today that two girls aged 12 and 14 and an elderly man were among the four victims of the bomb that blew apart a bus Tuesday. Forty-six people were injured in the worst terrorist incident in the city in five years.

A spokesman said police were holding five people for questioning.

Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir pledged an all-out effort to find those who planted the bomb and said "they shall not go unpunished." His statement raised the possibility that Israel, following its customary policy, might send aircraft on reprisal raids against Palestinian bases in Lebanon.

The Palestine Liberation Organization claimed responsibility.

AP Laserphoto Map

Mild weather for the West and South are forecast, according to the National Weather Service. Cold weather is expected in the northern Plains, with rain predicted for the Pacific Northwest coastal areas.

Warm weather arrives Thursday

Close only counts in horseshoes or toothpaste. Although the forecasters at Midland Regional Airport's National Weather Service disappointed a few people when today didn't turn out quite as warm as predicted, the promised temperatures should arrive Thursday.

Tonight is expected to be fair with lows dipping into the middle 30s, but Thursday should be sunny and warm with highs in the mid-70s.

Tonight's southerly 5 to 15 mph winds should turn southwesterly and gusty, blowing 10 to 20 mph, by Thursday.

The area's high Tuesday was a mere 54, 24 degrees short of the record 78 recorded for that date in 1966. The record overnight low, 14 degrees below the 34 recorded this morning, was 20 degrees during the bicentennial year.

Cold, wet storm fronts move in

By DANA FIELDS
Associated Press Writer

A "very wet" storm pushed onto the Pacific coast today close behind a frigid system that forced 300 truck drivers to take shelter in a Wyoming school, while Maine braced for up to 16 inches of snow from a storm blamed for a death in Michigan.

In the South, National Guard teams were brought to LaPlace, La., Tuesday night to neighborhoods where 126 homes were damaged or destroyed and 24 people were hurt in tornadoes Tuesday. Six people remained hospitalized today with injuries they suffered when a twister cut a 13-mile-wide path across Selma, Ala.

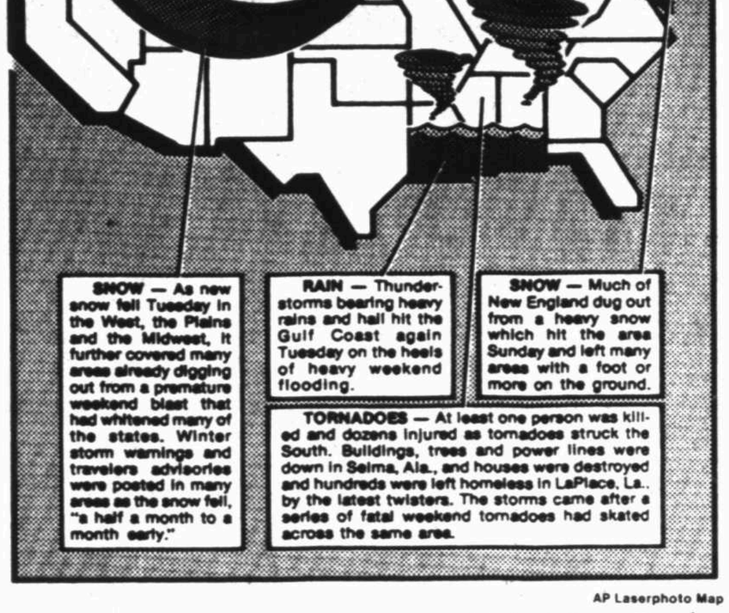
Clear skies over the Plains states meant no snow but subzero temperatures, with Huron, S.D., the early-morning cold spot today at 7 below zero. It was minus-5 at Lidgerwood, N.D., and around zero in much of Minnesota and Montana.

Most of the West Coast was due for a soaking today as the new Pacific storm headed inland, said Nolan Duke, meteorologist at the government's Severe Storms Forecast Center in Kansas City, Mo.

The moisture was already falling as snow in southern Oregon's Cascade and Siskiyou mountains, where travelers' advisories were up, and Duke said the storm would be in the Rockies by tonight or Thursday.

Ahead of that system, the Idaho town of Rexburg got 3 inches of snow Tuesday, bringing the total snowfall there to 48 inches since Nov. 8 — compared to an average November total of 8.2 inches. Pocatello School Superintendent Rulon Ellis sent students home early on Tuesday because strong winds were whipping the snow into drifts.

State police in Wyoming had to shut down more than half of Interstate 80, from Rawlins to the Utah border, as well as numerous smaller roads late Tuesday because of blowing snow that sharply cut visibility. The Desert Elementary School in Wamsutter and residents volunteered blankets for truck drivers forced to spend the night.



AP Laserphoto Map

Heavy rains and hail rumbled across the Gulf Coast Tuesday, causing tornadoes, as new snow fall developed in the West and Midwest.

Two school buses became stuck in 6-foot drifts in northwestern Utah's Cache Valley, said school superintendent Steve Thurston. Most of the children were taken home by car, but 20 students had to spend the night with friends in nearby communities. A farmer driving a grain truck escaped injury when he leaped out as the truck slid backwards onto a hillside railroad track, where it was demolished by an oncoming train north of Richmond.

A 24-year-old Canadian died Tuesday when his vehicle crashed into a trailer in Lincoln Park, Mich. Authorities in Muskegon, Mich., meanwhile, called off a search Tuesday for a fisherman whose boat capsized Monday night on Lake Michigan as the storm began.

High wind warnings were up along the Atlantic coast today from South Carolina to Massachusetts as the low pressure system stalled over Maine, where it first caused snow, then heavy thunderstorms as temperatures rose above freezing and snow again. The National Weather Service warned drivers in northern New England that roads would ice up today as the temperature dropped back.

The weather service in Caribou, Maine, said Bangor and Augusta could get 10 to 16 inches of new snow today.

The system spread snow today as far as western New York, western Pennsylvania and southern Michigan, where heavy squalls were likely in the wind, and in parts of West Virginia and western Maryland.

The storm knocked out an electrical transformer Tuesday morning at Pontiac General Hospital, about 25 miles north of Detroit. When the main power supply was restored about 50 minutes later, the resulting surge "blew the circuits in the intensive care unit," forcing officials to rely on a backup unit, said spokeswoman Kris Karns.

"This is just a very bad storm, although it didn't produce much winter weather," said forecaster Duke. The snowfall averaged 3 inches as the system moved across northern Ohio.

Clear skies over the South today aided the cleanup from Tuesday morning's tornadoes in Louisiana and Alabama.

Eight two-man National Guard patrols moved into the Louisiana town Tuesday night to protect what remained from the twister that damaged or destroyed more than 100 houses.

The number of deaths stood at one in Selma, where 12 trailers, four houses and 40 to 50 new cars at a dealer lot were destroyed. Storms have killed five people in Alabama since the weekend.

A day in Lebanon can be complex

EDITOR'S NOTE: It was the day of the first American air attack in Lebanon. But otherwise it was not an untypical day in Beirut. Here is a report on 24 hours that symbolized the randomness and complexity of the Lebanese agony.

By ROBERT H. REID
Associated Press Writer

BEIRUT, Lebanon — For Badia Tabet, a farmer's wife in Jounieh, nine miles north of here, the day began as usual — she saw her husband, Abdo, off to work his fields, and then sat down to breakfast with her five children in the kitchen.

It was 8:07 a.m., Sunday, Dec. 4.

In the distance, the roar of warplanes could be heard.

The 24 hours that followed — a day of air war and artillery duels, of death from the skies and devastation by terror bomb — tightened the knot of tension around Beirut. And it cost the lives of at least 25 people, including eight U.S. Marines and one Navy pilot.

The events of Sunday morning to Monday morning underlined the unpredictability and the peril of ordinary life among everyday death in Beirut.

While Mrs. Tabet and her children ate breakfast, a U.S. Navy A-7 Corsair, hit by a Syrian missile, plummeted in pieces toward Jounieh. The roar of it came closer, drowning out the everyday sounds of the breakfast table.

The shattered aircraft struck the Tabet house, collapsing the second floor onto the mother and children. Concrete blocks crumbled. Fire flashed over the building.

Rescuers pulled Mrs. Tabet from the rubble seriously injured. Her children were slightly hurt. The American pilot parachuted safely into the Mediterranean and was rescued by a Lebanese boat.

Minutes earlier, in the mountains above the capital, a restaurant owner was awakened by the thundering jets on their first bombing mission in Lebanon and by the Syrian anti-aircraft gun and missile fire that met them.

"I rushed to the window and looked out," said this man, who asked not to be identified. "I could see planes and hear the explosions. I didn't know what to think."

U.S. officials later said the bombing run, a mission by 28 planes, caused "significant damage" to Syrian positions in the mountains. But two planes were lost, the second downed over a thinly populated area. Its pilot was fatally injured and his bombardier was taken prisoner.

The Navy planes, part of a force assembled to protect the Christian-dominated Lebanese government in its confrontation with Syrian-backed Lebanese Moslems, attacked that morning in retaliation for Syrian attempts to shoot down American reconnaissance aircraft.

But in Jounieh even Christians showed little inclination to excuse the violent intrusion into their lives.

"At least the Israelis know how to avoid landing on peoples' heads when their planes are shot down," muttered one woman.

"So much for great America," smirked a man in the uniform of the Christian Phalange militia.

Within hours, as Mrs. Tabet lay near death in the hospital, American Marines sent here to keep the peace were hunkering down as if in war.

Fearful that the Syrians might retaliate against the Marines for the air strikes, Brig. Gen. Jim Joy had ordered his 1,600 men into the bunkers on their base at Beirut International Airport. At 7:30 p.m., the shooting began.

It started as it often has, not with a massive artillery barrage but with the crackle of scattered rifle fire.

About 8 p.m., the firing ebbed. A two-month-old Lebanese truce committee had arranged a cease-fire. But by 8:30 p.m., the shooting resumed, first with automatic rifles, then machine guns, rocket-propelled grenades, bazookas and finally artillery.

As with most of clashes here, this one began as a fight between Lebanese. Druse militiamen and Lebanese army troops based alongside the Marines began firing at one another. Each side blamed the other for shooting first.

Druse leader Walid Jumblatt claims his men have no quarrel with the American peacekeepers and have repeatedly urged them to move away from Lebanese army posts.

Regardless of Druse motives, Marine and Lebanese army positions around the airport are so close that distinguishing between the two targets at night is virtually impossible.

By 9 p.m., Marine positions at the southeastern end of the compound were under fire, and the Marines were shooting back. Eventually, U.S. Navy gunships offshore joined in the artillery duel.

At Checkpoint 76, outside the defense perimeter only 200 yards from Druse lines, six Marines rushed out of their bunkers to join four comrades firing from their post on a rooftop.

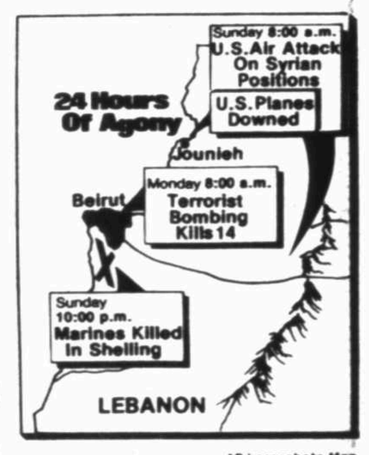
One floor below, the Kady family crouched in terror as troops of three armies — Druse, Lebanese government and American — blasted away at one another around their home.

Around 10 p.m., the family managed to get into a basement shelter. A few minutes later, the Kadys heard a loud explosion and the screams of wounded and dying young men. A shell had slammed onto the roof, killing eight Marines and wounding two others.

"We heard loud screams of pain and cries, and they were shouting at one another," said Mr. Kady, who did not give his first name. "They were screaming for help."

The fighting ceased by midnight. Most Beirut residents were unaffected by the battle rumbling on the city's southern outskirts, and Monday morning began quietly in the Lebanese capital.

In the crowded Tarik Jedida neighborhood of west Beirut, shopkeepers were lifting the metal shutters from their storefronts, parents were sending their children off to school and motorists were maneuvering their cars through the streets on their way to work.



AP Laserphoto Map

Shortly after 8 a.m. on Dec. 5, a powerful blast ripped through the street, shearing off the front of a nine-story apartment building, and sending the men, women and children inside crashing down amid the wreckage. Sixteen people were killed and about 100 injured.

Police said the blast came from a car bomb parked on the street, for years one of Beirut's favored terrorist devices. There was no apparent reason for parking the explosives-packed car on that particular street in a lower-class, Moslem neighborhood.

A shadowy group called "The Front for the Liberation of Lebanon from Foreigners" claimed responsibility for the bombing. The group is believed to have connections to extremist right-wing Christians.

For the people of Tarik Jedida, it made little difference who was responsible. As a rescuer brought out the limp body of a dead little girl, her skin ripped and frayed by the blast, bystanders wailed and cried.

Speaking of the bombers, one woman shouted, "I hope they never rest in peace."

Officer fears Lucas will one day be free

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas Department of Public Safety Col. Jim Adams said today that a lax criminal justice system has left him fearful that alleged mass slayer Henry Lee Lucas will someday be a free man.

Before the opening of a day-long conference of officers who believe Lucas might have killed in their cities, Adams said, "I would like to believe he'll never be free on the street again. But I would no longer make that statement with certainty."

Adams, the head of the state police agency, told reporters that "history has taught us a life sentence doesn't mean a life sentence."

Lucas, who has told law officers he killed as many as 150 people across the nation, has been convicted in two Texas slayings and faces one life term and a 75-year sentence.

The 47-year-old drifter is being held in Williamson County where he is awaiting trial in the slaying of an unidentified female hitchhiker.

Williamson County Sheriff Jim Boutwell said today that Lucas has been cooperative and willing to talk about the scores of slayings that investigators beleive he might know about. Boutwell said he believes Lucas should be executed.

"Anyone guilty of a murder should be put to death," Boutwell told reporters.

Adams said the killings for which Lucas claims responsibility would have been prevented if Lucas had been executed after a 1960 conviction in his mother's slaying.

"Once you put a man to death, you don't have to be worried about him killing again," said Adams.

Boutwell said in his conversations with Lucas he has learned that each slaying made it easier to kill again.

"I think if you kill once, it's easier the second time. Then it's easier again the third time. As to why, we can't answer that yet," said Boutwell.

The Central Texas sheriff said Lucas has told him he wants to be executed.

"Whether he really does when the time might come, I can't answer that," Boutwell said.

Master plan to consider growth toward north, west

To the southeast, "There's an awful lot of scattered development," said Dunkin. "Not that the county doesn't do a good job; they have a different land use."

Dan Sefko of the Dunkin firm noted the urbanized area south of Midland is "not quite butchered up like West Odessa is."

THE CITY OF ODESSA considered annexing West Odessa, Sefko said, but "it turned out to be such a liability that they could not."

Those semi-rural Midland County residents who run out of potable water "could pick up stakes and go somewhere else," said Dunkin. "That would be easy for mobile home" dwellers.

Owners in more permanent housing have "gambled, and they have the opportunity to lose," he said.

Hennessy noted the city can annex up to 10 percent of its corporate area each year and that currently, due to it not exercising all of that 10 percent option in past years, the city "could annex right now 30 percent" of its area. If that were done, the city could rebound and annex additional land far in excess of 10 percent.

"That's the impression I got after visiting with your staff," Hennessy told City Attorney Joe Nuessle.

Nuessle disagreed.

"Yeah," he said, "but they don't know anything."

The city attorney suggested that once 30 percent of the land area has been annexed, the option to annex reverts to 10 percent in the ensuing year.

COMMISSIONER Bart Hotchkiss said Midlanders who leave for a rural environment don't want to annexed by the city.

"One of the major reasons they're out there in the first place was to avoid control by the city. I don't think there's any desire on their part to be annexed," Hotchkiss said.

"Those people down south don't want to be annexed as long as they have water and as long as their septic tanks work," said Hennessy.

Dunkin noted that citizens then living northeast and east of Midland "were content" to live in the semi-rural area and protested when the city this year annexed large tracts of land to the east.

Pearl Harbor anniversary observed

HONOLULU (AP) — Survivors of the attack on Pearl Harbor gathered for aerial displays, formal presentations and a private sunset service marking the 42nd anniversary today of the bombing that launched the United States into World War II.

A moment of silence was to be observed across the Pearl Harbor Naval Base, to be signalled by a shipyard work whistle at 7:55 a.m., the exact minute the attack began on Dec. 7, 1941.

After that, four F-4C Phantom jets from the Hawaii Air National Guard were to fly over Pearl Harbor in a "missing man" formation, in which one of the flight positions remains vacant.

The attack by 190 Japanese attack planes had been prepared months in advance. The two-hour, four minute bombardment killed 2,113 men, 1,177 of which were aboard the USS Arizona. An additional 987 men were wounded. Eighteen U.S. Navy warships were damaged or sunk.

A plaque was to be unveiled honoring the bravery of the men who were aboard the USS Nevada that day. The Nevada had been moored just behind the Arizona, and was the only battleship to get underway during the attack. Despite several fires, heavy casualties and a 30- by 45-foot hole in her bow from a torpedo hit, the Nevada managed to limp toward the entrance to the harbor in a bid to escape the attack.

Navy brass, fearful the ship might sink in mid-channel and block the harbor, ordered it intentionally beached near Waipio Point, now also known as Nevada Point. Fifty-seven men died aboard the ship.

The memorial marker will list the ship's two Medal of Honor winners, the 13 USS Nevada sailors and Marines who won the Navy cross, and the 57 crewmen killed in action.

Also scheduled was a morning ceremony aboard the Arizona Memorial, including prayers, a wreath presentation, a gun salute and echo taps.

Drug valium cleared

BOSTON (AP) — The tranquilizer Valium, one of the nation's most widely used drugs, has been cleared of allegations that it causes birth defects, a new study shows.

Studies conducted in 1975 suggested that Valium causes cleft lips and palates in babies if their mothers take it during pregnancy.

As a result, the Food and Drug Administration required Hoffman-La Roche, Valium's maker, to include a warning of birth defects in drug information supplied to doctors.

The new research surveyed 3,109 pregnancies and found no link between the tranquilizer and cleft lips.

Heartburn doesn't involve heart, occurs after eating

Solomon

Dear Dr. Solomon: I told my doctor that I get heartburn when I eat certain foods, and he told me to stay away from those foods for a while to see what happens. He did not even test my heart on a heart machine. Don't you think that something that affects the heart should be taken much more seriously than this? — Lawrence, Ann Arbor, Mich.

Dear Lawrence: Heartburn does not involve the heart; rather, it is a burning sensation that occasionally occurs after a meal.

Dear Dr. Solomon: During the time I have been pregnant, I have been following my obstetrician's advice and drinking from four to five glasses of milk each day. If I decide that I want to breast-feed my baby, do I have to continue drinking so much milk? — Joy, Aberdeen, Md.

Dear Joy: If you decide to breast feed your baby, you should continue drinking the same amount of milk. Women who can't drink milk can obtain calcium from other foods, such as cheese or yogurt.

Dear Dr. Solomon: How much additional protein would you recommend that a high-school athlete have in his diet? Also, would you recommend vitamin supplements when he is competing? — Mr. T. O'M., Philadelphia, Penn.

Dear Mr. O'M.: Dr. Nathan J. Smith, of the University of Washington School of Medicine in Seattle, says that even the most intense exercise does not increase the body's requirements for nutrients or vitamins; however, additional water and high-energy foods are needed. Dr. Smith, who is a professor of pediatrics and sports medicine, recommends that an athlete's diet be low in fat and protein, but high in carbohydrates and water.

Dear Dr. Solomon: Is it true that people who drink a lot of coffee are more likely to get heart attacks? From what I've read about the subject, the answer seems to be yes, no, and maybe. Do you have any more specific information about the effects of coffee on the heart? — Mr. E.K., N.Y.C.

Dear Mr. K.: I believe that the range of answers you provide pretty well covers the questions you raise. A Swedish study has indicated that people who drink a substantial amount of coffee show an increase in their cholesterol levels, and cholesterol is a risk factor for heart disease. Therefore, the researchers conclude, a person who drinks a lot of coffee has an increased risk of developing heart disease.

I should point out, however, that this study is only one of a number that have been conducted over the past several years, and that the results have been conflicting. It seems apparent that more research will be needed before it will be possible to give a definitive answer to your question.

For Lenore, Nashville, Tenn.: The combined use of protein from both animals and plants can provide nutritious meals and help you save money at the same time. Some examples include a chicken and rice combination, a tuna and noodle casserole, macaroni and cheese, and spaghetti and meatballs.

Black bear pays visit to Nevada's governor

CARSON CITY, Nev. (AP) — Laid out in 1858 on the site of a trading post, Carson City never used to be a stranger to wild animals. But when a bear turns up in town these days, it causes quite a stir.

Such was the case Sunday when a young black bear arrived near the governor's mansion, frightening dogs and managing to elude pursuers before disappearing back into the hills.

Sheriff Hal Dunn said the bear, about 100 pounds, was spotted climbing over backyard fences near Mountain Street, on which the mansion is located.

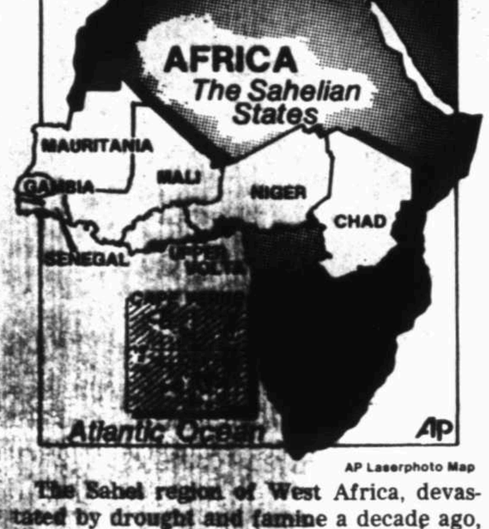
Sahel region troubled

Years of drought, famine give way to political troubles

By W. JOSEPH CAMPBELL
Associated Press Writer



AP Laserphoto Map

OUAGADOUGOU, Upper Volta — The West African Sahel region, devastated by drought and famine a decade ago, now is in the grip of political and economic troubles.

An abortive coup in impoverished Niger in October against President Seyni Kountche's 9½-year-old government was the most recent episode of political unrest in the Sahel, a belt of semiarid, largely impoverished former European colonies stretched between the Sahara Desert and the lush tropical coast.

THE SAHEL STATES — Chad, Niger, Mali, Upper Volta, Senegal, Gambia, Mauritania and Cape Verde Islands — drew wide international attention when the drought and famine caused thousands of deaths, diminished cattle herds and created a sizable refugee population.

Since then, economic dislocation has gone hand in hand with political upheaval.

"Those are the facts of life in the Sahel," said a European diplomat who monitors developments in the region. "The leaders of these countries are up against long odds."

Upper Volta, a landlocked neighbor of Niger, has witnessed three military coups since November 1980. The most recent takeover, in August, brought to power a young paratroop commander, Capt. Thomas Sankara, 34, who initiated a self-styled "popular and democratic revolution."

Chad, Africa's poorest country, has been buffeted for 18 years by intermittent civil war. Fighting flared most recently over the summer. Libyan-backed rebels threatened to topple the year-old government before about 3,000 French troops were sent to Chad, bringing the desert war to an uneasy stalemate. The thinly populated country is now effectively partitioned. Its modest agricultural economy has been disrupted.

Tiny Gambia, long regarded as a West African oasis of sunshine and tranquillity, was the scene of an attempted coup in July 1981. Suspected participants in the failed takeover are still being rounded up.

"The whole region," said a Western diplomat in Ouagadougou, "is likely to remain unstable for some time."

ANOTHER WESTERN ANALYST, who has served in posts across the continent, said of the Sahel: "For the next generation, I would predict little more than poverty and turmoil."

The future for the 30 million people in the eight Sahelian countries seems hardly propitious.

The Sahel, which before the 16th century was one of Africa's most prosperous regions, suffers again from insufficient rainfall, food shortages and the incessant encroachment of the Sahara.

The U.N. Food and Agriculture Organization recently declared the food-supply situation "critical" in 22 African countries, five of which are in the Sahel.

THE PERMANENT Interstate Committee for Drought Control in the Sahel (commonly kown by its French initials, CILSS), which was established 10 years ago in Ouagadougou, estimates the region's cereal-grains deficit this year at a million tons. The deficit for Upper Volta alone is 300,000 tons.

Moreover, the Sahel's food grain imports have quadrupled since the 1960s to an average of 800,000 tons a year.

Meanwhile, the region's population growth — the population is expected to reach 50 million by the year 2000 — continues to exceed increases in food production. Food self-sufficiency remains a distant hope.

"The prognosis for the Sahel is rather grave," said the CILSS planning director, Abdou Salam Drabo. "Although the situation is not yet like that of the early 1970's, there are still shortages of rainfall, the desert is still advancing and there is a constant problem of feeding man and animal."

No human deaths have been reported from drought and famine in the Sahel this year, he added, but livestock has been dying in Senegal and in Mauritania, where rainfall was about 20 percent of normal this year.

THE DIFFICULTIES of raising food and scratching out a living in the harsh conditions of the parched, sweltering countryside have encouraged emigration to the cities of the Sahel which, in turn, have created prospects of further instability, CILSS officials said.

International aid donors, spurred by the killer drought a decade ago, have contributed billions of dollars to the region but results have been uneven. The chronic problems remain and some experts say that dependance on foreign aid has increased.

Assistance projects have been hampered by the vast distances, poor communications and inadequate roadways common to the region.

"The major problems of the Sahel, identified in 1976, are almost unchanged in 1983," said a report prepared for a meeting in Brussels, Belgium, in October of the Sahelian states and their international aid donors.

INCREASINGLY, experts are finding merit in small-scale, grass-roots projects.

"Often there are solutions in little pieces," said Thomas Pierce, an adviser to CILSS, "at the local level, village by village, in building small dikes to prevent rain runoffs or in developing more efficient wood-burning stoves, rather than spending millions of dollars on new strains of sorghum or raising plantations of trees. The question is whether the little-pieces approach can be applied on a broad scale."

CILSS has developed a variety of stoves far more efficient than the traditional African cooking fire of three stones around an open fire.

Market eager for gold bars?

By LARRY THORSON
Associated Press Writer

LONDON — With 6,800 little gold bars in hand, the thieves who pulled off Britain's biggest robbery could have eager buyers all over the world.

That's the opinion of police, security companies and the insurers who are paying out $36.1 million to the still unidentified owners of the three tons of gold.

Police announced the first arrest in the case Tuesday. Anthony John Black, 31, a security guard at the Brinks-Met warehouse, was charged with conspiracy in the Nov. 26 robbery. He was ordered held for three days of questioning.

But there was no word on other members of the gang, believed to number six men, or the whereabouts of the gold, which, if stacked, takes up the space of a twin bed.

Some officials fear the gold was quickly slipped into clandestine markets abroad.

SINCE THE BRONZE AGE, the lustrous, heavy metal has been molded into shapes that have survived in their original form for centuries, such as King Tut's coffin with its unique signature of ancient Egypt.

But gold can also be anonymous and untraceable, and at almost $400 a troy ounce, very desirable.

Thieves can melt modern bullion bars to remove identifying serial numbers and assayers' stamps, and then slip them into any number of illicit markets to be transformed into jewelry, bought for hoarding or used to pay for other illicit goods such as arms or drugs.

"Gold is a commodity which is very easily disposed of in the world, particularly if it is melted down and you change its description," John Wheeler, a Conservative member of Parliament, said in an interview.

"You've only got to think of its value in the Middle East, the Far East, Taiwan, or any other place," said Wheeler, who specializes in police matters and is chairman of the British Security Industry Association.

DAVID POWIS, a deputy assistant police commissioner, said there are numerous "no questions asked" markets for gold around the world. But he refused to give any further information for fear of tipping the direction of the police investigation.

Asked at a news conference whether it would be hard to dispose of the gold, Powis said, "It would not be difficult knowing the amount of gold smuggled on the international scene."

Others disagreed.

A source with one of the insurers, who insisted on anonymity, said, "It will be difficult to get rid of gold in that quantity, but the most likely market is the backstreet jewelry market around the world."

IT WOULD HAVE TO BE melted down and would take some time to disperse, the source said, indicating that the insurers "believe the thieves still have it."

The recipient of the stolen hoard could also have been someone in the secret world of international arms trading, said a second insurance company official who asked not to be identified.

"They can handle large amounts of gold, often paid clandestinely. They would want payment in gold if they don't want the transaction to be traced," he speculated.

Other possible markets are in the Middle East, South Asia and the Far East, where hoarding of precious metals is a traditional hedge against hard times or political upheaval.

Illicit gold could be slipped into the legal market and end up as bracelets in India — ome of many places where a substantial part of a family's net worth goes on the matriarch's arm or ankle.

GOLD HOARDED in Vietnam during decades of war has been used to bribe communist Vietnamese officials and buy a way out for boatloads of refugees.

Gold also has been a vehicle for tax fraud in Britain. A court in London is hearing a case involving evasion of $9 million in sales tax on $60 million worth of gold.

The gimmick, according to the testimony, was to buy South African Krugerrand gold coins, which were not subject to the 15-percent VAT when imported into Britain.

Grenada's economy 'flat on its back,' Reagan administration reports

WASHINGTON (AP) — Grenada's economy is "flat on its back" with its tourist industry in shambles, its banks stripped of cash and a huge supply of nutmeg sitting unsold on the Caribbean island, the Reagan administration says.

Jay. F. Morris, deputy administrator of the Agency for International Development and leader of an interagency team that visited the island, said Tuesday it will take years to rebuild Grenada's economy.

"That is not going to be easy because it really had slipped into a fairly advanced stage (of decay)," said Morris. He said the infrastructure of roads, utilities and telephones was "in a shambles, not because of any combat but because of neglect.

In the team's report, the administration blamed the island's deterioration on three years of Marxist rule that ended with an invasion by thousands of American troops Oct. 25. "Basically, what we found was an economy that was flat on its back," Morris said.

The report said the Marxist government "literally looted the banking system to pay for their pet schemes. If we are going to help restart the economy, some credit needs to be available quickly."

Morris said the number of hostile fighters still hiding in Grenada's hills totals less than 10 and added: "That's no worse than a gang in the south Bronx."

Scoffing at the threat posed by the resisters, Morris said, "If you call 10 people in the hills a military threat, so be it."

Prime Minister Kennedy Alphonse Simmonds of St. Christopher-Nevis, another Caribbean island, said earlier he told President Reagan it's still unsafe to withdraw U.S. troops from Grenada.

Simmonds put the number of hostile troops hiding in Grenada at 12, and said, "A dozen people in the hills can make life uncomfortable."

Discussing security problems, White House spokesman Larry Speakes said Reagan was sticking with his plan to pull all American combat forces off the island by Dec. 23.

However, Speakes noted that American military police and construction engineers likely will remain even after the combat forces leave.

Shultz would meet Gromyko

BONN, West Germany (AP) — Secretary of State George P. Shultz says he is willing to meet Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko in Stockholm next month if such a meeting can be arranged.

Saying high-level talks between the superpowers are valuable, Shultz said, "We are prepared for such a dialogue.... I think it is important for the Soviet leadership to know that."

Shultz said he will discuss the possibility of such a meeting when he goes to Brussels today to meet with NATO foreign ministers. He indicated he expected them to approve. West German leaders, in particular, have been pushing for a Shultz-Gromyko meeting in hopes it would ease rising tensions between Washington and Moscow.

Shultz arrived in Bonn Tuesday evening for meetings with Chancellor Helmut Kohl and Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher. Shultz and Genscher were to hold a news conference later today, after which Shultz planned to go to Brussels for the NATO foreign ministers conference, which runs through Friday.

Costa Rican ship attacked

SAN JOSE, Costa Rica (AP) — The government says it will investigate a claim that Nicaraguan warplanes fired machine guns at a Costa Rican freighter.

The owner of the 600-foot Lyon Heart said it was attacked Monday 80 miles offshore while en route from Miami to Panama. No one was hurt but some cargo was damaged, according to Jose Luis Odio, president of Coordinated Caribbean Transport which owns the freighter.

Odio said the ship's captain, Lee Derek, reported by radio that the planes fired machine guns at the freighter, which was flying a Costa Rican flag..

Costa Rica's public security minister, Angel Edmundo Solano, said Tuesday that Derek will be questioned about the incident.

Turkish premier appointed

ANKARA, Turkey (AP) — President Kenan Evren today named Turgut Ozal premier and formally asked him to form Turkey's first civilian government after more than three years of military rule.

The center-right Motherland Party of Ozal, architect of Turkey's 1980 economic recovery program, won 211 seats in the 400-member legislature in Nov. 6 general elections.

Aquino's brother makes charge

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Opposition leader Benigno Aquino was killed by a gunshot in the head by one of his military guards after another guard gave him "a blow or some kind of a karate chop," Aquino's brother said today.

Agapito Aquino, 44, told reporters two unnamed Filipino witnesses told him his brother was shot Aug. 21 while going down the stairs of a jetliner that brought the opposition leader back to the Philippines and not on the airport tarmac, as stated by the military.

The brother called President Ferdinand E. Marcos "the No. 1 mastermind suspect" in the murder.

Poland won't allow rallies

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — For the second year in a row, the Polish government is refusing to allow Lech Walesa to speak on Dec. 16 at a Solidarity monument honoring shipyard workers killed in the Baltic port of Gdansk.

"There will be no rallies. Our position is clear," government spokesman Jerzy Urban said Tuesday. "We will not allow the organization anywhere in Poland of political gatherings against the existing order in the country."

Urban said Walesa will only be allowed to place flowers at the monument, which commemorates the slaying of scores of workers by security forces in 1970.

Search for relatives begins

TOKYO (AP) — Sixty Japanese who as children were left behind in China in the confusion at the end of World War II today began the search for their lost relatives.

The Health and Welfare Ministry sponsored the trips of the 31 men and 29 women, who arrived Tuesday as part of a program to reunite relatives separated 38 years ago. Should any of the "war orphans" choose to remain here, Japan will welcome them, a ministry official said.

"They are Japanese," said Keisaku Funakubo of the Health and Welfare Ministry. "The Japanese government and the Chinese government will cooperate if they want to stay."

City prepares welcome for Marines

MOREHEAD CITY, N.C. (AP) — Welcoming signs, American flags and thousands of yellow ribbons awaited the homecoming of 1,800 U.S. Marines who survived the Oct. 23 terrorist bombing in Beirut that killed 240 of their comrades.

Members of the 24th Marine Amphibious Unit were to arrive aboard five ships this morning, the 42nd anniversary of the attack on Pearl Harbor. After welcoming ceremonies, the Marines were to take buses to Camp Geiger and Camp Lejeune, where they will be reunited with their families.

The troops, serving with a multinational peacekeeping force, were among those attacked in a suicide bombing at the Beirut International Airport.

Aimee Williams of Jacksonville, whose husband, Donnie, is among the returning Marines, tied 100 yellow ribbons in her front yard and decked pillars with small flags in anticipation of his arrival.

"I've even hung up my father-in-law's flag from when he was a veteran," she said.

Williams was to meet his infant daughter for the first time.

"We've named her Tiffany Faith, the middle name symbolizing the faith it's taken to survive," Mrs. Williams said.

The wife of another Marine who asked not to be identified said she had been washing and waxing her husband's pickup truck, "which is his pride and joy, so it looks good when he gets home."

Lee Ann Kline, whose husband, Robert, is a Marine photographer, used felt-tipped markers to decorate a bed sheet saying "Welcome Home Daddy." She also covered an oak tree in yellow ribbons and horse shoes for good luck.

The Military Affairs Committee of the Jacksonville Chamber of Commerce has distributed thousands of yellow ribbons to line the route into Jacksonville.

"We are distributing yellow ribbons to anyone who wants them," said John Peacock, executive director of the chamber. "We have already gotten 6,000 yards of yellow ribbon and there are 3,000 more yards coming in.

"We are asking anybody who wants to, to pick up ribbons to decorate trees, mailboxes and whatever," he said.

Mat Raymond, chairman of the Military Affairs Committee, said the community wanted to give the Marines a hero's welcome home.

Congressmen use recess to find facts

WASHINGTON (AP) — Members of Congress are fanning out around the world on traditional fact-finding trips that are taking them from Jamaica to India and England to Antarctica.

Most of them will be traveling aboard Air Force planes. Some will bring their spouses who, under congressional rules, can travel free but must pay for their own food.

A survey by The Associated Press shows that the Caribbean and Europe are the most frequent destinations during the two-month holiday recess.

An 11-day trip early this month is taking eight members of the House Ways and Means Committee to the Dominican Republic, Costa Rica, Jamaica, Barbados and Grenada in connection with President Reagan's Caribbean Basin Initiative.

Accompanying chairman Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., are Reps. Fortney H. Stark, D-Calif., Wyche Fowler Jr., D-Ga., Thomas J. Downey, D-N.Y., Robert T. Matsui, D-Calif., Ronnie G. Flippo, D-Ala., Guy Vander Jagt, R-Mich., and Carroll A. Campbell, R-S.C., according to a spokesman for Rostenkowski.

On Nov. 26, members of the the Ways and Means trade subcommittee headed east for nearly three weeks of discussions of East-West trade problems with officials in East Germany, Czechoslovakia, Austria, Hungary, Romania and Bulgaria.

Rufas Yerzaxa, a committee staffer, said the group included Reps. Sam Gibbons, D-Fla., James R. Jones, D-Okla., Barber Conable, R-N.Y., Bill Frenzel, R-Minn., Douglas K. Bereuter, R-Neb., and Sander M. Levin, D-Mich.

THE HOUSE Rules Committee plans to travel in January to Costa Rica, Peru, Argentina, Brazil, tentatively Jamaica and possibly, for a day, to Grenada.

Two subcommittees of the House Appropriations Committee are planning trips next month, one to learn about economic development programs in Spain, Italy, Jordan and Nepal, the other to inspect U.S. Pershing 2 and cruise missile sites in Western Europe.

While some lawmakers headed for warm climates, others went to frigid weather. Joel Widder of the National Science Foundation said that Reps. Harold S. Sawyer, R-Mich., and James M. Jeffords, R-Vt., signed on for a trip to Antarctica early this month to view scientific projects sponsored by the foundation.

A group from the Senate Banking Committee was also visiting Antarctica as part of a three-week trip ending Dec. 18 that includes stops in New Zealand, Australia, Hong Kong and Singapore for meetings with government officials and U.S. business interests.

The party includes the committee chairman, Sens. Jake Garn, R-Utah, Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., and Chic Hecht, R-Nev., the senators' wives, two aides and Senate secretary William Hildenbrand, according to Bill Hendrix, a Garn spokesman.

Traveling under the aegis of the Senate drug enforcement caucus, Sens. Paula Hawkins, R-Fla., and James Abdnor, R-S.D., and three aides left Nov. 27 for a two-week trip to the heroin producing nations of Turkey, Pakistan, Thailand and Burma, according to Tina Evans, an aide to Mrs. Hawkins.

THE TOUR includes a stop in Vienna to confer with United Nations drug enforcement officials and field meetings with two Washington officials — Customs Commissioner William von Raab in Thailand and Dr. Carlton Turner, the White House drug adviser, in Pakistan.

Some of the same ground in Turkey, Pakistan, Thailand and Burma will be covered in January if a trip being considered by the House Select Committee on Narcotics Abuse and Control comes off.

The Congressional Black Caucus plans a two-day trip to Grenada this month to see what can be done to help the Caribbean nation economically, according to Tracy Simmons, a spokesman for the caucus chairman, Rep. Julian C. Dixon, D-Calif.

She said that Dixon will be accompanied by Reps. Mervyn M. Dymally, D-Calif., Katie Hall, D-Ind., William H. Gray III, D-Pa., and John Conyers Jr., D-Mich.

Other recess trips include:

—Rep. William O. Lipinski, D-Ill., London, early this month for the International Maritime Organization's marine environmental protection meeting.

—Reps. F. James Sensenbrenner, R-Wis., and George E. Brown Jr., D-Calif., and two aides, India, Dec. 1-11, to view energy development projects for the Science and Technology energy development and applications subcommittee.

—Rep. Ron Marlenee, R-Mont., planning to spend 10 days or more in Honduras in January "to examine how our assistance programs are working," according to Marlenee's spokesman, Glenn Marx.

Not all trips are paid for by U.S. government funds.

The Jewish Federation of Greater Des Moines funded a trip to Israel and Lebanon in late November so Sen. Charles Grassley, R-Iowa, and two aides could examine the Palestinian refugee situation.

The United Jewish Appeal is paying to send Reps. Dan Glickman, D-Kan., and Lawrence J. Smith, D-Fla., to Israel for a conference of Jewish leaders this month, according to Connie Doebele, a spokeswoman for Glickman.

Taiwanese groups paid for Reps. Les AuCoin, D-Ore., and William Boner, D-Tenn., to make separate visits to the Asian nation last month.

Human ingenuity vital to space missions

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Spacelab's astronauts enjoyed an extra, final day in orbit with science and sightseeing today as researchers on the ground said that without the crew's ingenuity the shuttle mission would have been a failure.

Researchers said the ability of the astronauts to repair and adjust experiments proved that man has a vital role in orbital science.

As the 10-day international mission neared an end, investigators were anticipating the return of a wealth of data from 73 experiments in five research and technology fields. Some were particularly excited by one medical test that may have disproved a 77-year-old Nobel-prize winning theory on the inner ear.

Luigi Napolitano, an Italian phyicist from the University of Naples, summed up the feelings of many of the Spacelab investigators when he said in an interview: "One of the biggest lessons we have learned during this week is that nobody has the right to ask any more why a man is needed up there.

"You know, without those guys, the mission would have been a failure the first day."

Napolitano is one of scores of foreign scientists involved in the experiments aboard the billion-dollar European-built Spacelab. He noted the astronauts had repeatedly adjusted equipment and altered experiments while talking with Johnson Space Center researchers.

Aboard the shuttle Columbia and the attached Spacelab workshop, the six astronauts brimmed with enthusiasm at their accomplishments and relished the one-day extension.

"It's been a very productive day — an outstanding one, as a matter of fact," mission specialist Owen Garriott reported as he and Blue Team partner Byron Lichtenberg turned the Spacelab over to Red Team members Ulf Merbold, a West German, and Robert Parker.

AP Laserphoto

Commander John Young and pilot Brewster Shaw, who will steer Columbia to a landing at Edwards Air Force Base, Calif., were told by Mission Control today: "The Edwards weather and runway are looking very good."

Touchdown is set for 7:58 a.m. Pacific time Thursday.

Mission controllers added a day to the mission when they determined both spacecraft were in excellent condition and that weather conditions would be good at Edwards on Thursday.

The purpose was to add more information to a basket of research data gathered in the fields of life sciences; astronomy and solar physics; atmospheric physics and Earth observations; plasma physics, and materials processing in weightlessness.

Flight planners authorized the crew to take a break from the nonstop science to look out the window and take photos of the Earth.

Gariott and Lichtenberg took a few minutes to photograph the globe and then went back to work on a liquid physics experiment. They were told to take the rest of the shift off, but Lictenberg responded: "I think I will stay here for awhile. This is a lot of fun." Two hours later, he was still there.

Most of the experiments must await analysis back on Earth. But one medical researcher already has reaped a bonanza.

Rudolf von Baumgarten of the Johannes Gutenberg Universitat in Germany said his study of the effects of weightlessness on the inner ear contradicted 1906 research by Dr. Robert Barany of Austria.

For his study, Barany received a Nobel Prize in 1914 and his theory is also applied in an exam commonly given to see if a patient's balance mechanism is working properly. In the test, a doctor introduces a fluid warmer than body temperature into the ear. Then he watches to see if the patient develops a rapid eye movement called nystagmus — which is known to be related to changes in the inner ear.

Since there is no heat convection in the weightlessness of space, von Baumgarten designed an experiment to test Barany's finding using Spacelab scientists Garriott, Lichtenberg, Merbold and Parker.

Each endured having warm air pumped against his eardrums while a camera photographed the reaction of his eyes. Live closeup TV pictures of the eye were relayed to a 13-inch screen in the science control center at the space center.

If heat convection were the determining factor, the astronauts should not have displayed signs that their inner ears were affected.

But von Baumgarten said, "We got a very strong nystagmus in space" from each of the astronauts.

"We are absolutely convinced," said von Baumgarten. But he noted, "it will never be accepted by science unless it is repeated."

The test was being run again today and is planned for another Spacelab mission in 1985.

Thief steals carriage from mother

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — As a frantic mother scrambled to retrieve her two children after a motorist struck their baby carriage, someone stole the carriage, the woman's groceries and her purse, police said.

"The children went flying (in the accident)," Sgt. Gregg Henderson said Tuesday. "When she was gathering up the children, an unknown person came along and took the carriage which contained her purse and her groceries."

Witnesses to the accident just before 6 p.m. Monday were "busy gathering up the kids" and did not notice the carriage theft, Henderson said.

The Pasadena woman, Dominga Bentancott, and her children, whose names and ages were not available, were treated at Huntington Memorial Hospital and released Monday night.

GOP leader: Defense increase won't pass

WASHINGTON (AP) — House Republican Leader Robert H. Michel has told President Reagan there is no chance Congress will accept a 22 percent military spending increase Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger is proposing.

The message is part of a quiet effort that Michel, R-Ill., has begun in hopes of laying the groundwork for a bipartisan budget compromise next year. The first step is to influence the budget recommendations the administration will send to Congress in late January or early February.

For the past two years, Reagan has sent Congress budgets which won virtually no support on Capitol Hill and splintered Republicans, leaving GOP leaders scrambling to piece together their own substitute spending plans.

"It would be my preference to have House and Senate Republicans more closely associated with the preparation of the administration requests so that we would be that much closer to reaching consensus on our side next spring," Michel told the president in a two-page letter sent to the White House Monday evening.

Last week, the defense secretary met privately with Senate Republican leaders and told them he is proposing a $305 billion Pentagon budget for next year, a 22 percent increase over current spending.

"A 22 percent increase in defense (spending) authority is not achievable and would only serve to aggravate any attempt to work a compromise in Congress," Michel said in the letter, a copy of which was obtained Tuesday by the Associated Press.

This year, Reagan sought a 10 percent increase in military spending. Congress adopted a budget outline that made room for a 5 percent increase. The military spending bills that actually were enacted this year amounted to less than a 4 percent increase.

"I would like to see the Congress pass a budget next year that is realistic and achievable," Michel wrote to Reagan. "The Congress made a mockery of the budget process this year with a budget package that we all knew was not credible and could not be implemented."

Michel said he hoped that Congress would be more responsible next year, "and that your administration would do its share by submitting recommendations that are achievable."

Congress was thwarted in efforts this year to enact any significant budget deficit reduction measures because Reagan opposed any tax increases and House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., opposed further domestic spending cuts.

New helmet saves lives in Grenada

WASHINGTON (AP) — A new one-piece Army helmet used for the first time in combat during the invasion of Grenada is credited with saving the lives of at least two American soldiers.

An Army report said the experience of the 82nd Airborne Division troopers wearing the new Kevlar helmet in fighting "has been exceptionally positive."

The helmet, which looks like those worn by German soldiers in World War II, is gradually replacing the old steel pot and liner that American servicemen have worn, with only minor changes, for decades.

Among old soldiers, the new type of helmet has been greeted with something less than wild enthusiasm despite assurances it would give them about one-third more protection than the steel pot. For one thing, it can't be used as a cooking or washing utensil, because of the built-in webbing.

However, some of the resistance may have been dispelled from its performance under actual combat conditions in Grenada.

The Army cited two specific cases. One soldier who took a hit to the head from an AK-47, a Soviet assault rifle, at close range came away with only a dimple in the helmet. Another soldier's helmet was struck by a large piece of shrapnel from a 20-millimeter explosive round, and he came away alive.

Democratic hopefuls raise $1.5 million

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — Six Democratic presidential candidates, winding up a five-city sweep that raised $1.5 million for the party's 1984 warchest, linked hands in unity after attacking administration policies on Lebanon and the economy.

While the Rev. Jesse Jackson declared "our mission" is to remove President Reagan, the aim of Tuesday's cross-country tour was to help the Democratic Party reach its goal of amassing $7 million in its presidential fund by the start of the general election campaign.

Those who put aside differences to make the tour ending in Albuquerque were Jackson, former Vice President Walter Mondale, former Sen. George McGovern of South Dakota, and Sens. John Glenn of Ohio, Gary Hart of Colorado and Ernest F. Hollings of South Carolina.

"Our goal is to remove the repressive Reagan regime in not too many days from now," Jackson said Tuesday night.

Earlier in the day, on a stop in Atlanta, Jackson appealed to Syrian President Hafez Assad to release a U.S. Navy pilot shot down during a bombing raid in Lebanon.

At a $1,000-a-plate fundraising banquet Tuesday night, McGovern called for the immediate withdrawal of Marines from Lebanon, where he said they "for all practical purposes, are hostages at the Beirut airport."

Reagan "is unwittingly taking this country into war," said McGovern, the party's 1972 presidential nominee.

Mondale told reporters he believed Reagan had bungled the Lebanon situation by not pressing Lebanese President Amin Gemayel to include more of the warring factions in his government and by not insisting that the Syrians depart Lebanon earlier.

Hart said he wanted Congress to return to session to "require President Reagan to state clearly what our Middle East policy is and what mission our military presence is designed to achieve."

Glenn, opposing an immediate U.S. withdrawal from Lebanon, criticized Republican budget-making — accusing Reagan of taking a "borrow, borrow, spend, spend" approach to government.

Glenn, Hart and Jackson made stops in Atlanta and Houston before arriving in Albuquerque. Mondale, Hollings and McGovern were the attractions at a $500-a-plate breakfast in Chicago.

The fundraising sweep began with a $1,000-a-plate dinner in Washington on Monday night. Party leaders estimated the tour would raise $1.5 million.

Hollings said that if Democrats were united "no force on earth could stop us."

Ling-Ling, the giant panda, rests on a rock at the National Zoo in Washington, D.C., in August with an antibiotic injection in her shoulder. Ling-Ling is "seriously ill" with kidney problems and her prognosis is poor, a zoo official said Tuesday.

Giant panda suffering from kidney failure

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ling-Ling, the National Zoo's female giant panda whose rocky love life has captivated America, is "seriously ill" with kidney failure and her chances of recovery are poor.

Robert Hoage, special assistant to the zoo director, said Tuesday night Ling-Ling is suffering from kidney dysfunction and severe secondary anemia.

"Her kidneys are impaired and ultimately may fail," Hoage said. "We have a seriously ill panda. Her prognosis for recovery is poor."

Hoage said this morning that Ling-Ling was lethargic but had eaten a little bit.

"She did not have a strong appetite and has not had one for two weeks," Hoage said. "Her behavior is consistent with the seriousness of her illness."

Hoage said blood tests taken Tuesday afternoon showed the 12-year-old panda "to be extremely anemic and there is evidence of kidney failure."

He said that as of Tuesday night, veterinarians had ruled out a kidney transplant or dialysis.

Hoage said Ling-Ling was anesthetized Tuesday afternoon and given a transfusion of blood from Hsing-Hsing, the zoo's male panda, "to boost her critically low red blood cell count." He added that she was being treated with antibiotics as well.

"Ling-Ling's medical condition is much more serious than her general condition indicates," Hoage said. "We hope it can be treated. However, her prognosis for recovery is poor...Her condition is not something that can last forever."

Hoage said Ling-Ling's problem was first discovered on Nov. 25. She was lethargic, didn't eat and passed blood in her urine.

Alleged mob leader's half-brother killed

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A half-brother of reputed organized crime leader Harry "The Hunchback" Riccobene was fatally shot Tuesday night in what police believed was a "mob hit."

Robert Riccobene, 44, was shot in the head after his mother, Jean, struggled briefly with the gunman, police said. Mrs. Riccobene was treated for minor injuries at Mercy Hospital and released.

Police said Riccobene and his mother had returned to her house in southwest Philadelphia at 10 p.m. As he was unlocking the back door, he was confronted by the attacker, who struck Mrs. Riccobene with the butt of the shotgun, said Sgt. Herbert Gibbons.

As his mother struggled with the gunman, Riccobene jumped a fence separating his mother's yard from a neighbor's home, Gibbons said.

The attacker caught up with Riccobene in the neighbor's backyard, and, after the shooting, the gunman dropped the shotgun and sped off with an accomplice in a large blue car, police said.

Asked if it was a mob slaying, Lt. Frank Friel, head of the Philadelphia police contingent of the Organized Crime Task Force, replied: "Indications are that it would be."

Another detective, who asked not to be identified, said, "It looks like a mob hit to us."

Police were questioning Mrs. Riccobene early Wednesday, detectives said, and police and FBI agents were investigating the slaying.

Harry Riccobene, 73, survived two attempts on his life last year in an apparent struggle for control of the Philadelphia-Atlantic City organized crime family. He faces a 9-year sentence on a federal racketeering conviction, which he is appealing.

Another half-brother, Mario Riccobene, was convicted in the case and sentenced to a 4½-year prison term.

The Pennsylvania Crime Commission, in a 1980 report, did not identify Robert Riccobene as a member of organized crime.

Federal officials say more than a dozen members of organized crime have been shot in a power struggle since the slaying of reputed Philadelphia leader Angelo Bruno in 1980. Bruno's successor, Philip "Chicken Man" Testa, was killed in 1981.

Officials have said the opposing forces are led by Harry Riccobene and Nicodemo "Little Nicky" Scarfo.

Decision not to reappoint woman to commission draws fire

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's decision to rebuild the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights without Mary Louise Smith, a moderate Republican, is drawing sharp criticism from representatives of civil rights and a women's political organization.

The remaining three of Reagan's four appointees to the revitalized commission were announced Tuesday and Mrs. Smith wasn't on the list.

Democrats had said that Mrs. Smith's reappointment was part of a compromise that allowed the panel to continue.

Sen. Joseph Biden, D-Del., said in a statement that he was "shocked that after six months of negotiations, a specific commitment like this would have been violated. This calls into question the ability of Republicans and Democats alike to negotiate with anyone who purports to speak for the White House."

Under legislation Reagan signed Nov. 30, after the law governing the previous commission expired, he is allowed to appoint four commission members and the leaders of the House and Senate can each appoint two members.

Reagan last week chose to reappoint Clarence J. Pendleton, president of the San Diego Urban League since 1975. On Tuesday, he appointed Morris B. Abram, a New York lawyer who is a former president of Brandeis University; John H. Bunzel, former president of San Jose State University in California; and Esther Gonzalez-Arroyo Buckley, a Laredo, Texas, high school teacher who is chairwoman of the Webb County Republican Party.

Pendleton was chairman of the commission since March 1982. Under the new legislation, Reagan can name Pendleton chairman with the commission's concurrence.

Reagan had previously nominated Abram and Bunzel to the commission.

Critics of Reagan's decision said that during the negotiations leading up to the revitalization of the commission, it had been understood that Reagan would reappoint Mrs. Smith, the last vice chairwoman.

'Color of his skin' condemned black to death, state says

MOBILE, Ala. (AP) — For $1 and the "color of his skin," two Ku Klux Klansmen stuffed the beaten body of a black youth into a car trunk and later hanged it in a tree, a prosecutor says.

Chief District Attorney Tom Harrison made the statement in opening remarks Tuesday in the capital murder trial of Henry Francis Hays, 29, one of two men charged in the 1981 death of 19-year-old Michael Donald.

The beating death came in retaliation for the mistrial of a black man charged in an unrelated case with killing a white policeman, the FBI said.

The key state witness is Hays' accused accomplice, fellow Klansman James Llewellyn "Tiger" Knowles, who was expected to testify today. Knowles, 20, has pleaded guilty to a federal charge of violating the victim's civil rights.

"Knowles will testify that he along with the defendant...set out to find a black to hang," said Harrison. "They searched the side streets for a black, an isolated person. They found Michael Donald."

Donald was forced into a car at gunpoint by the two men and killed "simply because of the color of his skin," the prosecutor said.

Defense lawyer M.A. Marsal told the jury that Knowles is "the biggest liar that ever came down the track." He said Knowles' testimony "reeks with the worst corruption that's ever been brought to a jury in this county."

A jury of 12 whites and two blacks, including two alternate jurors, was being sequestered.

If convicted, Hays could be sentenced to death in Alabama's electric chair.

Knowles, awaiting sentencing on the federal charge, could receive a life term.

Donald was found hanging in the tree on a residential Mobile street on March 21, 1981.

Harrison said Knowles' account of the slaying would be corroborated.

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Thursday, December 8, 1983

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: The Irish-born architect of the White House, James Hoban, Mexican mural painter Diego Rivera and humorist-artist James Thurber were born on this date. Also sharing your birthday: Sammy Davis Jr., actor David Carradine, Flip Wilson and Chicago Cubs shortstop Larry Bowa. By befriending someone at Christmas you guarantee that you will have many good times in 1984. Small projects pay rich dividends. Travel increases your clout at work. Enter contests in April and May. A positive response to unusual requests will bring you extra cash. Romance stabilizes. You and mate are on the road to lasting happiness.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You can improve your financial situation. Continue to concentrate on artistic projects. Relatives do everything they can to help you weather a problem or separation. Remember those who offer their support.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Stay in the background at work. Difficult people or situations could impede progress. Be more tactful when talking with mate. Domestic matters require diplomacy and a new willingness to compromise.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Stick with ventures already under way instead of becoming all wrapped up in new projects. You need to spend some time alone tending to domestic matters. Plan to stay home this evening.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A change in goals is good for you. A brief encounter puts you in touch with exciting new people. Share your expertise. Someone revives your interest in a former pastime.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): It is time to take action on your personal and professional desires. Spreading yourself too thin wastes valuable time and energy. Ignore distractions. Be more considerate of your loved ones' feelings.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Try to be more practical. You cannot afford to be quite so selective when doing business. Candor will help romance along. You are attracted to sensitive, talented individuals.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Face facts; you are not always right. Try not to be so pushy in arguments. Deadlines must be met. Greater give-and-take could patch up a rocky romance.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Take a greater interest in mate's affairs, but do not insist that he or she reciprocate. Imagination is more important than cost when buying Christmas gifts. Be a shrewd shopper.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): A financial or education offer is forthcoming. Although they seem somewhat restrictive, established firms are your best bet. Be generous with your praise. You benefit financially when someone shares a secret.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Be patient! This is not the time to air any grievances. If you have the energy, adopt a charitable cause. An old friend could suddenly turn romantic. Use tact.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Do not try to guess the cause of mate or partner's gloomy mood. Ask direct questions! You find the support you have been looking for. Give a teen-ager the benefit of the doubt.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Keep your promises to an older person. Be more careful about locking up. Romance becomes more serious. Adopt a conservative approach towards people you do not know.

China revisited on NBC

NEW YORK (AP) — How do you feed a billion people? What happens in China if you are mentally ill?

NBC answers those and other intriguing questions — about birth control, justice and the arts in the world's most populous country in the wake of the Cultural Revolution — in an extraordinary two-hour special Wednesday night called "Journey to the Heart of China."

Tom Brokaw, the "NBC Nightly News" anchorman, is correspondent for the "White Paper" documentary, a joint production with Britain's ASH Films, Ltd. The producers accumulated more than 240 hours of film over 18 months, much of it shot in locations never before open to outsiders.

Brokaw says his first visit to China, with President Ford eight years ago, was to a land terrorized by the Red Guard loyal to Mao Tse-tung. On his return trip, the correspondent says, he found a new country, though one still in the shadow of the Cultural Revolution.

"Some of the ... change is a little discordant, a little out of place," he says. "Some of it is downright surprising."

"Journey to the Heart of China" visits places seldom, if ever, seen by Westerners, like a mental hospital in Harbin and a courtroom in Nanjing.

There's no such thing as psycholanalysis in China, Brokaw says, and the Chinese do not follow the teachings of Freud. But, he says, efforts are made to comfort the mentally ill and to relieve them of emotional strain. "Many are beyond hope," Brokaw adds, "but they're cared for ... tenderly."

In another segment, the camera follows Nie Chengying, a woman accused of stealing a TV set, some clothing and food coupons, from a neighbor. She's assigned a lawyer, who doesn't try to figure out a way she might beat the rap. He suggests she repent.

Later, before a panel of judges, the accused admits, "I suffered seriously from bourgeois philosophy. ... I stole and swindled unscrupulously." She promises to "labor hard with both my hands to wash off my crime."

The court is unusually lenient, and sentences the woman to a year's surveillance — equivalent to probation. Still, she must face family and co-workers, who know that she is a thief.

Some Chinese have been allowed to flourish in business, like the "Colonel Sanders of Canton," who's "working hard and getting rich, with the government's help," Brokaw says. The man sells barbecued chicken and is thinking about expanding into spare ribs.

A strong candidate for "Hand of the Year" has been reported by Australian George Havas. It cropped up in his country's national team championship and the declarer was John Stretton.

South showed his strength with a cue-bid over the one heart opening bid. When his partner showed general values, Stretton cut the bidding short by jumping to six spades.

West led a heart and declarer ruffed. Since the opening bid marked East with the king of diamonds, declarer crossed to dummy with the ace of diamonds, and was surprised by the great fall thereon. He paused to take stock. Why had East elected to open with one heart on a hand deficient in high cards rather than with a preempt? Declarer decided that the only reason was that East held spade length with his heart suit.

Backing his reading of the cards, declarer led the nine of trumps from dummy and ran it! When that held, he returned to his hand with the ace of clubs and drew all the trumps. With six tricks to play, declarer was down to one trump, one diamond and four clubs. West held three diamonds and three clubs, and the table had three diamonds, two clubs and a heart.

When declarer led his last trump, West was caught in a strip squeeze. He could not let go of a club, for that would set up declarer's club suit, so he was forced to come down to only two diamonds. Declarer now led a diamond to the queen and threw West in with his remaining diamond. Left with nothing but clubs, West was forced to lead away from his jack into declarer's tenace and the slam was home.

In the other room, the contract was also six spades — down two.

Feldstein's gloom

Martin Feldstein, chairman of President Reagan's Council of Economic Advisers, has found himself crossways with the administration more than once recently, raising serious questions about how much longer he will be of value to the Reagan organization.

Feldstein has said big federal deficits are inevitable as long as the administration pursues a policy of cutting taxes and increasing defense spending, and that interest rates won't improve — and probably will get higher — unless the deficit is reduced. Of course that isn't the economic picture that an administration launching a re-election campaign wants displayed to the public. Thus the problem: What to do about Mr. Feldstein?

First consider a number of points. What Feldstein is espousing is nothing new — or unbelievable. He has said he believes the administration should raise taxes to offset anticipated future deficits, but he was saying that before. So what has changed?

Only this. When Martin Feldstein signed on as chairman of the President's Council of Economic Advisers he became part of the Reagan team whether or not he likes it and whether or not he agrees with the administration's policies. As part of that team, he is expected to conduct himself in a manner befitting that position. While he obviously does not agree with everything the administration is attempting economically, when he speaks of those matters publicly he should present an administration point of view.

Feldstein certainly is entitled to disagree with Reagan's economic approach and to make his views known to Reagan and others in the administration. If he didn't he wouldn't be worth his weight in million dollar bills to the administration or the country because it is in dissent that wisdom can be found.

In that vein, Reagan and others in the administration obviously should heed Mr. Feldstein's privately-uttered differences of opinion on the nation's economic future. Even though we support what the administration has attempted to do economically, we admit that the Reagan approach in cutting taxes while increasing defense spending AND painting a rosy picture of the economy's future is a bit much to swallow. Very few thinking Americans will fall for it.

Rather, the administration should admit publicly that the economic future may not be as bright as it needs to be — even though it's much brighter than it has been in recent periods of big government spending, coupled with high inflation — and outline what it's doing to increase the brightness. Secondly, if Feldstein wants to continue to play on the team until his scheduled return to Harvard University, he should act more like a team player.

Another View:

Don't rush the talks

As expected, the Soviets stalked out of the Geneva talks on limiting medium-range nuclear missiles in Europe following West German parliamentary approval of American cruise and Pershing 2 missile deployment.

In spite of Moscow's threat to retaliate by bolstering its missile force in Eastern Europe, the Geneva hiatus is no tragedy. Excitable freeze proponents in the West would be wise to follow the calm reaction of President Reagan and allied leaders.

While the indefinite disruption of the East-West dialogue may temporarily heighten tensions, the United States and NATO allies had no choice but to hold firm.

The Kremlin had threatened for months to boycott the negotiations if the United States proceeded with deployment. Once the Soviet political campaign of intimidation and threats failed in Europe, Moscow's best short-term option was to walk out and hope for a shift in the U.S. political winds.

It is important to note that, bluster aside, the Soviets left the door open for a resumption of talks by characterizing the action as "discontinuing" rather than "concluding" negotiations. Significantly, Moscow did not announce a parallel break in the U.S.-Soviet START negotiations on long-range missiles; or the East-West talks in Vienna on limiting conventional forces in Europe. The Russians also went out of their way to reassure West Germany that neither trade nor access to West Berlin would be jeopardized.

A resumption of arms reductions talks is quite likely. The major question is when; the answer probably has as much to do with U.S. presidential politics as anything else. In spite of what Sen. Alan Cranston and other pro-freeze politicians would have the public believe, there is a better and earlier chance of an arms agreement under President Reagan than a Democratic administration.

So far, the Russians haven't lost anything but a major propaganda and psychological battle against NATO allies. During the past two years of negotiations and more than a half-dozen arms reduction offers from President Reagan, Moscow has been installing new SS-20 missiles at the rate of one a week while dangling its deceptive freeze offer.

Having failed to prevent the arrival of U.S. missiles, the Russians now will have to seriously bargain over how many of their own missiles must be removed from Europe.

If it appears early next year that President Reagan will win re-election, the Soviets may decide then may be the best time to deal, when the president is eager to bargain. If Democratic Party fortunes improve, the Soviets may be in no mood to talk until 1985.

Such political considerations are a fact of life in the Euromissile debate.

Reagan can end OPEC oil gouge

WASHINGTON — President Reagan has a dramatic opportunity to heal the economy and inaugurate a new era of prosperity. All he has to do is to drive down the price of oil.

Jack Anderson

In an earlier column, I warned that the cost of crude could soar to new altitudes. A flare-up in the volatile Persian Gulf region could create another oil panic, which is all the OPEC extortionists need to inflict the next price gouge upon the world.

Yet Reagan can force the price of oil down by the skillful use of U.S. power. The timing is right to break the OPEC dam, which has been holding back oil from the consuming nations. He merely needs to lift the oilgates and flood the West's storage tanks with oil. This would expand the oil glut, and the price would sink as the surplus rises.

There is an ocean of oil behind the dam — enough to supply the world's anticipated needs well into the 21st century. This is oil that has already been discovered, measured and cataloged. It doesn't include the new oil that will be found. The reserves are expanding faster than consumption is increasing. There has never been a year, not even during the era of cheap oil, that oil men didn't find more crude than they pumped.

Oil remained cheap as long as the United States controlled the oilgates. If the OPEC powers tried to create a shortage in an attempt to jack up prices, the United States merely raised the oilgates enough to keep the storage tanks filled.

Then Richard Nixon became president. Through a jumble of blunders, negligences and timidities, he lost control of the oilgates. Thereafter, the United States not only paid whatever OPEC chose to charge but also worked out the credit arrangements by which the more impoverished nations could also pay their oil bills.

Every time the consuming world cut consumption or raised its own oil production, OPEC simply slowed down its pumps to cancel out the increase and preserve a tight market. The Pikes Peak prices made it possible for the oil sheiks to lower production and still collect more billions than they had ever dreamed of.

As the cost of energy skyrocketed, consumers had less and less disposable income to buy other goods, which cost more and more to produce. Hence, there was a progressive shrinkage of economic activity that had to go on until the oil price bulge was flattened.

This has left the Western world somewhat in the predicament of a stricken person in the pre-scientific age: The victim must simply suffer the full ravages of the disease, his recovery depending on how much punishment his system can endure and how durable is the disease itself.

For a painful decade, we have endured the illness while the OPEC governments have digested a trillion dollars of Western wealth and have become so addicted to spending our money that it hurts them to cut their production further.

Now at last, OPEC's resolve is beginning to crack. Half of the oil-producing countries, anxious for more revenues to keep up with their spending, are secretly selling oil below the OPEC level. Even Saudi Arabia, the bulwark of OPEC, has formed a mysterious marketing company in Switzerland. The company, Norbec Ltd., reportedly is selling Saudi crude on the free market.

This has weakened the price of oil on the "spot market" where oil is sold for immediate delivery. Grudgingly, OPEC has already rolled back its prices to around $30 a barrel. Now the gush of bootleg OPEC oil and non-OPEC oil may cause prices to slide another $4 or $5.

Ready-made jobs come with titles

A Pentagon auditor charged in a document made available the other day that the armed forces pay outrageous prices for weapons because the officers in charge of procurement are hoping when they finish their careers to get a job with the defense contractor they are dealing with.

Art Buchwald

Those who play along with the defense industry are rewarded with cushy positions when they leave the service, and those who gave the contractors a hard time need not apply for a job when they retire. The average retirement age for a middle ranked officer is 43, so whether they like it or not, military officers in charge of procurement have a bigger stake in their futures than in saving their government money.

This is how the scenario is played out.

"Colonel Druthers, we have a slight overrun on the armored dogsleds you contracted our company to build for you."

"But you said you could produce them for $500,000. Now you're telling me they're going to cost $1,700,000 apiece."

"We overestimated the strength of the dogs and underestimated the weight of the armor they had to pull. So we had to add an engine in the back to push the sleds along."

"But that's outrageous."

"It certainly is and believe me, the chairman is furious about it. He's fired the manager of the dogsled program."

"Who is taking his place?"

"We're looking for somebody now who will bring it in somewhere near the price I just told you. We'd like a person familiar with the weapon carrier, preferably a retired military officer who knows procurement and is willing to work his heart out for $150,000 a year, plus bonuses and stock options. Of course the person would have to live in California, but we'll pay all his moving and living expenses for the first year."

"I've been working on the military side of this program for three years. I pushed this program through singlehandedly and I'll never make general when I tell our budget people about the overrun."

"What happens when you don't get your star?"

"Then I'll have to retire and find a job."

"Maybe we could help you."

"The law says I can't work on any military program I've been involved with while I was in the service."

"We have many other military weapons programs you could handle. Our chairman is always looking for good soldiers."

"That's very kind of you, but I've checked your figures on the dogsled project and they're way out of line."

"In what way?"

"You charged us for a million dollar chalet in Aspen."

"We have to test the dogsled somewhere."

"And twelve million dollars for a private Gulfstream III airplane."

"How are our research people going to get to Aspen? By the way, when we're not using it on the dogsled project the plane is available for our other program managers and their families."

"I'm going to have to show these expenditures to my superiors before I okay them."

"Colonel, you don't look like a whistle-blower to me. If there is one type of person our chairman won't hire it's a whistle-blower. He's told me time and time again, 'I'd rather have ten retired military officers who can't read a balance sheet to one rotten apple who knows how to run a cost-effective program.'"

"I gather then if I don't go along with your figures I don't get a job."

"I didn't say that. But the last colonel who complained about cost abuses in one of our weapons programs is now selling shoes at Macy's."

"Are you sure you can bring these dogsled armored vehicles in at $1,700,000?"

"You have my word for it, Mr. Vice President."

"Vice president?"

"Didn't I tell you? The title comes with the job."

Spacelab I voyage marks change for space program

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — The voyage of Spacelab I marks a fundamental change in the pilot-centered American space program: It has brought scientists to the forefront.

"For the first time, the scientists outnumber the pilots," said mission commander John Young, a veteran of five previous space flights.

Already the voyage has paid off: New metal has been made, vital information about the atmosphere has been revealed, new views of the Earth and stars have been gathered and basic new knowledge about human physiology has been gained.

Of the six men on Spacelab, only Young and Brewster Shaw are pilots. The other four crewmen, Owen Garriott, Robert Parker, Byron Lichtenberg and Ulf Merbold, are scientists. Lichtenberg and Merbold are not even astronauts, but university researchers selected as "payload specialists" to fly only on Spacelab 1.

Scientists control the mission. Researchers from around the world — Europe, Japan, Canada and from dozens of American Universities — have assembled at the Johnson Space Center to watch as more than a billion dollars worth of science hardware was turned on in orbit.

In its five days of flight, Spacelab has produced round-the-clock science, with one wonder tumbling on top of another. There have been hundreds of tests in 73 basic investigations. A cascade of data has streamed down from space.

Among the findings so far:

—A French experiment designed to analyze chemistry of the upper atmosphere gathered a precise measurement of the amount of deuterium at 155 miles above the Earth. It proved a theory about the diffusion of the element, a form of heavy hydrogen, into the upper atmosphere and provided a basic formula for this phenomenon.

—Spacelab astronauts created a metal alloy that may be unique. Using a powerful furnace, they melted together samples of aluminum and zinc — two metals that will not mix on Earth. This created an alloy that is both strong and lightweight. Knott said the metals cool from and melt at different temperatures and in gravity they would separate.

—Another materials experiment has produced a non-metalic alloy that is expected to conduct electricity. This is a crystal that cannot be made on Earth. It may have properties of a superconductor, said Knott. This means the material could be used to build computers and devices.

Cabbage Patch desire brings out fatherly love

By ANNE TAYLOR FLEMING
Hearst Feature Service

It seemed, on the face of it, the sweetest of stories, perfect pre-Christmas fare for television news shows and newspapers around the country, practicallly all of whom fell for it last week. The story was this: a Kansas City postman, Edward Pennington, flew 12,000 miles round-trip to London to get his daughter a doll for Christmas.

The doll that occasioned this trip is the so-called Cabbage Patch Kid, which comes equipped with adoption papers. What a shrewdly cynical marketing idea those papers are, aimed at the incipiently maternal — and paternal hearts, for that matter — of little children, who are making the doll a Christmas phenomenon.

So that like a lot of parents around the country, Mr. Pennington couldn't find one at any of his local stores. Hearing that some were still available in London, he then boarded a plane, flew to England, where one of the newspapers, in exchange for an exclusive interview, gave him five free dolls. Cabbage Patch Kids in hand, Mr. Pennington flew home without ever having set foot in London.

My first response was undoubtedly like a lot of people's: what a father, what a loving, doting father to fly all that way for a doll for his daughter. The daughter in me resonated to his journey. "It was a spur of the moment thing," he said of it. "After seeing the way people were going for the dolls, I decided the kid was worth it."

"The kid" — I even liked that part, that tender-tough father-talk. Mr. Pennington seemed like a child's dream of a parent, the pefect Santa Claus, the ultimate wish-fulfiller. Who among us would not wish him for a father; who among us does not remember that ache for this or that particular doll or game or whatever it was, an ache so specific no other gift would do?

For my sister and me, it was endless yearnings for Barbie doll clothes. Growing up in a household of women, neither of us ever wanted Ken, her male companion, nor any of his finery, but we coveted Barbie's every skating costume and pleated skirt, not to mention all those racy spike heels and demure little hats with veils, as later we coveted our own clothes. My mother spent endless pre-Christmas days chasing after our whims, my most longed for and remembered silliness — a white wool coat with blue collar piped in red, which I'd seen on the cover of Seventeen Magazine and fallen in love with and which, now that I think about it, looked remarkably like a Barbie doll costume.

Like the Pennington household, obviously mine was sufficiently endowed to satisfy my Christmas longings or, probably more accuratelly, greed, though so far as I know, neither of my parents ever entertained the notion of flying to another city, let alone another country to find what my sister or I wanted. No, Mr. Pennington with his 12,000 mile trip makes all other parents seem wanting in comparison.

And that's finally what's wrong with his journey, which on first reflection, seemed so wonderful. His super-parent stunt, so widely played in the media, somehow shames all those other parents, especially those with neither the time nor money to spare to go looking for Cabbage Path Kids, however much their own kids might want one.

This might sound a bit curmudgeonly, a bit bah humbugish, but he just sets a bad precedent for all those other parents and all those other children. He also sets a bad precedent for his own, obviously much-loved daughter, giving her the idea that her desires are for the satisfying, however difficult that might be. What man again will do that for her?

Mr. Pennington would have done her, and all the other children out there, a bigger favor if instead of flying to London to get her a Cabbage Patch Kid, he'd explained that none were available, but that there were other dolls to covet and love and that one didn't always need the doll that everyone else had, and that no doll is a measure of a father's love.

Manual erases computer fear

LOS ANGELES (AP) — In an unabashed bid to combine "yesterday's technology with today's terminology to make tomorrow's money," computer maven Peter McWilliams has written a new word processor manual — for the pencil.

The paperback parody gives simple, instructions for using the pencil, which McWilliams calls the McWilliams II Word Processor.

In the 144-page, illustrated satire, the tip of the pencil lead becomes a "printer port" and its eraser is a "deprocessor."

To "create a file," simply "place a sheet of paper under the point of the McWilliams II. Create."

To save the file, "put the piece of paper in a safe place."

And if you wish to "delete" part of the text, simply "place eraser ('deprocessor') side of the McWilliams II over the portion of the file to be deleted. Rub and rub. Portions of text under the eraser will magically disappear. Brush away magic dust."

Reached by telephone earlier this week at a computer show in Las Vegas, McWilliams said he expects the book to sell well.

"If millions of people fork over $4.95 for Garfield (the cat cartoon books), then yes, this is worth $3.95," McWilliams said. "I have no pride. I have no shame. I have not much money and I want a lot."

The "McWilliams II Word Processor Instruction Manual" is the seventh computer book published by McWilliams' Prelude Press, which claims that some people have called the McWilliams II "the greatest thing since Pet Rocks."

The West Hollywood company previously published the popular and "only slightly more serious" volumes including "The Personal Computer Book" and "The Word Processing Book."

Actress won't repeat sexy image

Russell

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actress Jane Russell, who caused a stir with her plunging necklines in the 1943 movie, "The Outlaw," is making her television debut on NBC's "The Yellow Rose" series — but says she won't be trying to be sexy.

"The Outlaw" was censored for six years because of its revealing photography of Miss Russell's cleavage, but Miss Russell, 62, told reporters Tuesday that what was considered "daring" in those days would hardly be noticed today.

As for displays of sex, Miss Russell feels there are "a lot of young girls around to do it now," said a publicist for the show.

Miss Russell, whose 23 films include "Paleface," "Double Dynamite," "The French Line" and "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes," hasn't appeared in a movie since "The Fuzzy Pink Nightgown" in 1957, although her famous bustline has been in evidence in recent years in Playtex brassiere commercials.

NEW YORK (AP) — Country music singer Johnny Cash says that at one time he took as many as 100 barbiturates and amphetamines a day because he "wanted to be John Doe for a little while."

"A man who is strong emotionally and physically, a lot is expected of him. And I felt at times there was too much expected of me. I guess I wanted a security blanket. I wanted to hide from that," the singer said Tuesday in an interview with ABC newswoman Barbara Walters.

Cash credited his second wife, singer June Carter Cash, with helping him kick the habit about 20 years ago.

"She fought me tooth and nail. She would find my medication and would take it and flush it," he said. "I would get raging mad at her...She'd pack but before she'd leave I'd say, 'Don't go. You did the right thing. You saved my life.' "

Cash said he took 100 pills a day — "50 to get me up and keep me up and when I got ready to crash, at least 50 to bring me down."

He said it was "a miracle — a gift of God" that he is alive today.

WASHINGTON (AP) — A question President Reagan asked World War II flying hero Jimmy Doolittle touched off a round of laughter in the National Air and Space Museum.

Reagan used a salute to the 88-year-old Doolittle to jokingly respond Tuesday to criticism about banning reporters from covering the American invasion of Grenada.

"General, if you'll forgive me, I do have a question I've been wanting to ask you for the last several weeks," Reagan told Doolittle, who won the Medal of Honor for leading the first American air raid on Tokyo in 1942. "How did you get away with not taking any newsmen along?"

PITTSBURGH (AP) — As "CBS Morning News" co-anchor Diane Sawyer describes it, she faces a lie detector test every day.

The television camera is a "lie detector," says the 37-year-old Ms. Sawyer, and the public is "going to know whether you know what you're talking about."

"The camera reads what you know over the long run," Ms. Sawyer told about 400 representatives of the news media at the Pittsburgh Press club Tuesday.

Are dolls headed for 'Hall of Fleeting Fame?'

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Are Cabbage Patch Kids headed for the same "Hall of Fleeting Fame" as hula hoops, pet rocks and Davy Crockett coonskin caps?

Retailers are already sizing up the commercial life expectancy of the homely but huggable dolls, says Eugene Fram, chairman of the marketing department at Rochester Institute of Technology.

"This is heavy inventory," Fram said Tuesday. "You don't want to get stuck. The question is, who's looking forward to the point where it's going to die?"

Retailers do not allow sentimentality to sway their buying decisions, Fram said. "The smart ones are out looking, examining, talking to people. They want to know if it will go beyond Christmas."

One hint, Fram said, is how much true "play value" the dolls seem to have for children. Another is the attitude of parents, who are what he calls the "gatekeeper" of the purchase.

Cabbage Patch Kids might win the hearts of America's children the way Shirley Temple dolls did in the 1930s and '40s and Barbie dolls have since the 1960s, but Fram said there is no clearcut way for buyers to tell.

"It's kind of an intuition that some people have and others don't," Fram said. "I wish we could teach it in school."

AT&T breakup will strike sour note

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — American Telephone & Telegraph Co.'s breakup will affect more than just the phone bill — it'll be a sour note for the nation's touring orchestras as five years of support from the Bell System comes to an end.

When Los Angeles Philharmonic Conductor Andrew Davis rests his baton Saturday after a performance at San Francisco's Davies Symphony Hall, he'll be closing that chapter in corporate assistance to the arts.

Under the Bell program, officially ending as the court-ordered divestiture takes effect in January, AT&T has covered millions of dollars in deficits as major U.S. orchestras have traveled to places like Ames, Iowa, and Valdosta, Ga.

"It's comparable to the National Theater of England taking Shakespeare to a small town or the Metropolitan Art Museum sending an exhibit to a small town," says Pittsburgh Symphony Orchestra conductor Andre Previn, who has been involved in the Bell Tour program since it began in 1978.

In all, the Bell System American Orchestras on Tour program reached out and touched 284 cities in 46 states where the orchestras might not otherwise have been heard.

An AT&T spokesman says other corporate aid to the arts will continue and regional phone companies are being encouraged to support local orchestras.

But orchestra officials indicate the end of the program may curtail ambitious tour schedules.

Thirty major U.S. symphonies, including the New York Philharmonic, the National Symphony, the San Francisco Symphony, the Denver Symphony, the Philadelphia Orchestra, the Chicago Symphony, the Indianapolis Symphony, the Minnesota Orchestra and the St. Louis Symphony had tour deficits picked up by AT&T.

Bell officials estimate that more than 2 million people attended the concerts, which cost AT&T $12 million through 1982.

Comet will blaze brightly

From Wire Reports

Chances of getting a good look at Halley's comet as it blazes by the Earth in 1986 are brighter than astronomers first predicted — six times brighter, in fact.

The comet, due for a return engagement after a 76-year absence from view, will shine as bright as the North Star in the spring of 1986, based on new data uncovered by a pair of amateur astronomers. And for the first time in more than 2,000 years, earthbound observers will get a peek at the comet as it heads toward the sun as well as when it draws away.

Scientists formerly believed the comet would be "right on the ragged edge of visibility" as it hurtles to within 40 million miles of Earth, according to Ray Newburn, a leader of the International Halley Watch. But new calculations indicate the comet, including its characteristic tail composed of solar-heated chunks of dust and ice, will be two magnitudes, or six times brighter, than previously predicted. That means it should be apparent to the naked eye, even in the Northern Hemisphere where it will appear low on the horizon just before sunrise between February and April 1986, Newburn said.

Pancakes rolled in court

NEW YORK (AP) — A restaurateur, who had his chief noodle-maker roll pancakes before a jury to prove how delicate they were, has been awarded $20,005 in libel damages from a guidebook that gave his establishment a poor review.

"I think some of them have abused the freedom of the press and that this will help caused some standards to be applied to critics," Michael Chow, owner of Mr. Chow's restaurant in Manhattan, said Tuesday.

Chow won the award after a four-day jury trial in Federal District Court last week.

Officials of the publication, Guide Gault-Millau, a French-language directory of city restaurants, said they probably will appeal the decision.

To counter charges that pancakes enclosing his Peking duck were "the size of a saucer and the thickness of a finger," Chow had chef Stephen Yim in charge of his noodle-making staff, roll pancakes before the jury.

MHS girls put away Klondkie

By BOB BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

Class A Klondike, playing only five girls most of the way, gave, District 4-5A Midland High all it could handle in the first half and kept returning to life every time the Lady Bulldogs tried to put the final nails in the coffin Tuesday night.

It was a valiant fight for the Cougars, but in the end it was Midland High's defense and depth that did them in, 56-47 at MHS Gym.

The Bulldogs, leading 14-7 in the first quarter and 26-20 at the half, looked like they were ready to pour it on early in the third quarter when their defense came up with three big turnovers that led to layups by Charlotte Hines and Diedra Knapp and a 12-foot jumper by Orvetta Johnson for a 34-22 lead.

However, the Cougars gave up only one more bucket the rest of the quarter while picking up four of their own to return the margin to the six-point spread at the start of the half.

So, Midland High tried it again at the start of the fourth. Johnson canned an eight-footer followed by Knapp and Denise Lanz steals for layups and a 42-30 lead. This time Klondike wasn't able to recover, at least not in time to do any good. The Bulldogs kept a 12 and 13-point advantage most of the frame before giving up five unanswered points at game's end for the final score.

Surprisingly, the Bulldogs held off Klondike without any help from the free throw line. Cougar Patti Harris picked up her team's only fouls in the game (three in the first half) while Midland High was whistled 17 times which cost 13 charity points.

DESPITE BEING a smaller school, Klondike has a longer history of girls basketball than does MHS. That tradition has helped produce victories over the Bulldogs in two meetings in the past two years.

Rebs' Diaz refuses to stay down

Midland Lee tight end Charlie Diaz has overcome the effects of a neurological illness called Guillain Barre and now he's starting for the Rebels in the school's greatest moment in sports: The 1983 high school football playoffs. He has helped open holes for Rebel running backs with blocking ability.

By BOB BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

In January of 1981, Midland Lee tight end Charlie Diaz went into the hospital with a massive sinus infection. It was just the beginning of a long nightmare, a nightmare called Guillain Barre.

Guillain Barre is a "neurological disorder that destroys the outer covering of the nerves," said Diaz. "I lost complete feeling from my hips down and in my left arm. There was also an utter weakness throughout my entire body."

According to Diaz, the "complete loss of feeling lasted for a couple of months while the weakness lasted a year and a half."

As a result of the sickness, Diaz — who stands 6-foot-3 and weighs 230 pounds — wasn't able to compete for the Midland Lee Rebel football team his junior year though he was a junior varsity player as a sophomore. He missed "last year and I had to sit out two spring trainings," he said.

That lack of football playing experience, in itself, would have been enough to sideline most players. Add Guillain Barre and its side effects to the list and it's almost insurmountable.

However, Diaz isn't most football players. With the help of friends, fellow teammates, athletic trainers and the Fellowship of Christian Athletes, Diaz has traveled the road to recovery. He traveled it so well, in fact, that he has earned the the starting tight end role for the Midland Lee Rebels in the school's most successful season ever.

"Charlie's just done a great job of keeping his faith you might say," said Lee head coach Spike Dykes. "He's come through some trying times in his life and has never succumbed, never has given up. He never quit believing in himself."

"He was an offensive tackle and since we moved him to tight end for blocking purposes he has done a real good job," said junior varsity coach Mike Quimby, who is coaching the Rebel tight ends during the playoffs. "It's a shame he's missed so much playing time. He's a dedicated kid. He worked real hard to overcome everything."

THOUGH HE never lost his ability to walk, the thought of that loss crossed his mind "quite a few times," he said. And, about his recovery, "If it wasn't for my teammates and FCA, I'm not sure I'd be back now."

Diaz started his rehabilitation with the normally simple task of walking.

"My trainer just had me start walking around the track at the beginning," said Diaz. "They also had me riding a bicycle, a stationary exercise machine. I didn't work any weights for quite a long while. Once I showed I had enough stamina, they let me work with five-pound dumb bells and stuff like that."

And how long was it before he was able to start running?

"I'd have to say it was about December of last year before I could jog half a lap. It (rehabilitation) was still very slow but it gradually started coming back. I got back a little coordination and a little balance. I still don't have all my balance back. It's one of those things that takes time to rebuild."

His teammates pushed him along throughout his efforts, giving the most important thing they could: their encouragement and support.

"These guys out here (the Lee practice field) are the best friends I've ever been around," said Diaz. "They helped keep my spirits up when they were really low. The coaches always stayed behind me, helping me a lot. People at FCA stood behind me and kept pushing me. They wouldn't let me stop. They kept saying 'You can do it.' These are just the best guys I've ever been around and I thank God for them."

Now, with Diaz nearly back to normal, he has a chance to enjoy the rewards that his team is reaping in the state football playoffs. As a tight end for the Rebels, a team well noted for its love of the run and not the pass, Diaz is a blocker. Because he gets his job done, few teams run the ball as well as Lee.

"He's a good football player," said Dykes. "He's a good pass receiver too. We're not afraid to throw the ball to Charlie."

Diaz may not be known for his pass catching abilities, but at least three teammates — fullback Issac Garnett, halfback Tyrone Thurman and halfback Walter Jones — call him a friend. They reap the dividends from Diaz' massive holes.

Lee girls rally to beat Monahans, 49-46

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

Midland Lee's girls basketball team was simply flat at the Lee gym against the Monahans Loboes Tuesday night, so they made up for a lack of scoring punch with some hard work.

The Rebels fought back from a nine-point defecit at the half to earn a 49-46 victory over the Class 4A Loboes. It wasn't an easy task.

"We were just kind of dead out there and Monahans is a good team," said Lee coach Shirley Stephenson. "However, somewhere in the third quarter, our press began to get things going. I don't think we would have won if the press hadn't worked so well because we sure weren't hitting anything offensively.

Monahans played the role of the first half aggressor. Lee stayed in the game in the first period and was down by a mere 17-16 margin at the buzzer. Still, a four-point output in the second quarter is not something on which to build victories and that's what Lee had in the second period as Monahans chipped in with 12 more for a 29-20 lead at the half.

Lee still didn't shoot very well in the second half, but Monahans found it tough getting down court on the swarming Rebels, who worked their way into this victory.

Tunya Mayberry, who scored nine of her 11 points in the second half, got open enough to bring Lee back into the fight. A Mayberry bucket with 6:50 left in the game lifted Lee into a 33-33 tie and Felicia Farias, who led Lee with 12 points, put the Rebs into the lead at 35-33 with a short jumper. Lee never gave up that lead as the press kept taking care of business.

Mayberry went into the game averaging 13.7 points per outing and Farias, who missed the Amarillo tournament over the weekend, was averaging at a 24-point per game clip. Neither had an outstanding shooting night.

"I missed the Amarillo trip, but I needed a rest. I guess you can say I got the rest over the weekend while I was taking my SAT test," said Farias.

Monahans' Melody Holloway was the first half pain for Lee as she scored 15 points in the first two periods. She ended up with a game high 17 points, but the Loboes could have used more than two points from her in the second half. Holloway came into the game averaging 12.8 per game.

Shelia Adams, Monahans' leading scorer this year with a 16.5 per game average, hit for 14 points, eight coming in the first half. Holloway and Adams are class players, but the Loboes could have used some backcourt help in the second half.

Lee scored only nine points in the third period, five by Mayberry, but the press haunted Monahans as they came up with a four-point effort. Lee came back with a big 20-point fourth period to salt the game away.

Lee, the defending District 4-5A champion, is now 5-2 for the season while Monahans fell to 3-2.

Lee's junior varsity won a 36-22 decision over Monahans as Valencia Wallace scored 10 points. No players were in double figures for Monahans.

Midland Christian's girls varsity won a 47-38 verdict over the Lee sophomores, running the Mustang record to a perfect 5-0 for the year. Georgann Williams and Anissa Wyatt led the Mustang attack with 12 points each. Laura Woolard also chipped in with 10. Lee's Regina Watson led all scorers with 18 points.

Don't tell Hairston he can't keep it up

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Baptist forward Terry Hairston is a man of few words, but he had plenty when a team member suggested he wouldn't be able to keep up his shooting pace all season.

"I think I can shoot like this the rest of the year," Hairston said, surprised that everyone didn't have his high confidence.

Hairston, who shifted from the sixth man to a starting role, led the Huskies last season with a 65.3 shooting percentage and now that he is a starter, the 6-4, 225 senior has hit 23 of his 26 shots this season for an 88.5 percentage.

Hairston was five-for-five in the season opener, hit seven of nine shots in an upset of Oklahoma State and canned 11 of 12 baskets in last Saturday's victory over LeTourneau College.

The 6-4, 225 pound senior also has contributed at the free throw line where he's hit eight of nine shots.

Teammate center Anicet Lavodrama must wonder what it takes to lead the team in shooting. The junior from the Central African Republic has converted 15 of 23 field goal tries for a 65.2 percentage.

The sizzling shooting pace by the two players has helped Houston Baptist, the defending Trans America Athletic Conference, to a 3-0 start this season.

"He's playing exactly like a senior," Coach Gene Iba said of Hairston. "He shoots only when he is open and he works diligently to get open. The main thing about Terry is that he works so hard to catch the ball in a position to score that he can get a high percentage shot.

Lee must carry on tradition

When Midland Lee beat Odessa Permian Saturday, the "pure gravy" portion of the 5A state football playoffs ended. The fun and games were over.

The Rebels are no longer playing for the sheer joy of personal achievement. Sure, that's still part of the package, but they now shoulder another responsibility in beating the Panthers.

Lee is now saddled with the task of carrying on the proud West Texas football tradition, a tradition that is a source of awe and wonder in less blessed areas of the state.

The Rebels Saturday against Plano will be seeking to become the 15th state finalist from this district since 1951 with a crack at becoming the 10th state champion from this section of the state.

ALTHOUGH MORE remains to be achieved, Lee already has accomplished more than any other Midland team in 5A playoffs. In two previous trips to the playoffs, Lee never got beyond the second round. Saturday will be the fifth playoff game for Lee.

Of course, it never would have happened, if it hadn't been for the UIL ruling that invited second place teams in all sports to the state playoffs. Two years ago, Lee would have been at home watching in envy.

That brings up another matter. Here's a Rebel team that has beaten Odessa Permian twice, is a state semifinalist and yet isn't the district champion. The Mrs. was horrified when informed of the oddity, demanding, "Why doesn't the UIL do something?"

Since she started taking out-of-town game statistics at the R-T on Friday nights during the regular season, the Mrs. also has become more aware of the significance of statistics.

When she came home from shopping Saturday afternoon, she was duly impressed by the 20-0 score, but when she heard the statistical spread, she almost choked, "Lee outgained them 263 to 15 yards...why that's terrible," making it sound like it had been Larry Holmes against Marvis Frazier. Of course, it wasn't that bad, but you know how women like to exaggerate these things.

To their credit, Permian's Panthers handled the disappointment with a maturity that came as a surprise. I don't really know why, except that dealing with defeat is such a rarity for Permian, that it's a surprise they handled it so well.

WHILE SATURDAY'S rematch with Permian was approached with more than passing trepidation, after all it seemed like tempting fate a second time was valor above and beyond the call of duty, it bore a remarkable resemblance to the first game.

Lee, playing with the same intensity as the first time, pounced on Permian miscues and turned them into points. At the same time, Lee kept its mistakes at a minimum, although Coach Spike Dykes' game plan called for attacking with wreckless, damned-the-topedoes, don't-be-afraid-to-take a chance abondon. Threw two passes, he did, and more pitchouts than could be counted without taking off your shoes.

"We played them last year and beat them by two," said Klondike coach Joey McQueen. "But, graduation took four starters from our team. We have a strong tradition in basketball. In the last 16 years we've won 20 or more games. We have a 4-2 record so far this year"

Midland High is also a graduation-depleted team this year and Coach Jane Young is working a lot of players to find who can fill the holes. She is also looking for steady improvement.

"I think we were a little better tonight, and I thought Diedra, Denise and OJ (Orvetta Johnson) did a fantastic job rebounding and hustling."

Olberding gets hot, sets pace for Kings' victory

By The Associated Press

The Kansas City Kings got plenty of help from an unexpected source to cool off the hottest team in the National Basketball Association.

Mark Olberding, averaging only nine points per game for the Kings, got some erncouragement from Coach Cotton Fitzsimmons and then scored a season-high 26 points to lead Kansas City to a 112-103 home triumph over Dallas Tuesday night, snapping the Mavericks' eight-game winning streak.

"When Cotton came to me tonight and said, 'Look for your shot, take it to the hole, and make your guy guard you,' I took it as the green light for me to go out and have a good night," Olberding said. "But if I score two points tomorrow night and we win, I'll be happy."

"Olberding was very effective and we looked to him tonight," Fitzsimmons said. "We wanted him to take a look at the basket."

The Mavericks, who have not made the playoffs in their three years in the NBA, are still 13-5 despite the loss, with a 2½-game lead in the Midwest Division.

In other games, it was New Jersey 114, Cleveland 105; Denver 117, New York 112; Atlanta 95, Phoenix 88; Boston 118, Chicago 105; Washington 113, Houston 109; Golden State 108, Seattle 103 and Portland 130, San Antonio 118.

Olberding was only 7-of-18 from the field, but his extra aggressivness in going to the basket helped him draw a lot of fouls, and he was 12 for 13 from the free-throw line.

Meanwhile, Mark Aguirre, third in the NBA in scoring with a 28.7 average, poured in 38 points to lead the Mavericks, but their next-highest scorer was Kurt Nimphius with 14. Dallas got only one point in 23 minutes from Rolando Blackman, its second-leading scorer with a 19.6 norm.

Dallas Coach Dick Motta said Kansas City is a better team than its 9-10 record.

"We beat Los Angeles the other night by 17 points, and Kansas City beat us tonight," Motta said. "I think they (the Kings) are a better ball club than their record indicates. I picked them all along to win the division."

Forward Eddie Johnson scored 25 points for the Kings, while Larry Drew added 16 points and 13 assists.

The Kings led by as many as 10 points in the third quarter, but the Mavericks cut the deficit to five on two free throws by Jay Vincent at the 8:16 mark of the fourth quarter.

Then the Kings scored the next eight points to go up 103-90, their biggest lead of the contest. The Mavericks got no closer than six points the rest of the way.

Nuggets 117, Knicks 112

Kiki Vandeweghe and Dan Issel were held out of the starting lineup to mix up Denver's attack and the strategy worked as the Nuggets snapped New York's eight-game home winning streak.

Vandeweghe scored 25 of his 33 points in the second and third periods, while Issel had three three-point plays en route to a 23-point night.

The Nuggets trailed by as many as 12 points in the first quarter, rallied to lead 93-82 in the third period, then held off a late Knicks rally to win.

Bullets 113, Rockets 109

Washington also won on the road when Greg Ballard scored 21 of his 31 points in the second half against Houston.

The Rockets trimmed an eight-point deficit to 102-100 with 4:05 to go in the game with six consecutive points, four of them by Ralph Sampson, who led Houston with 19 points. Ballard kept the Bullets safely in front with two free throws with 1:19 remaining.

Nets 114, Cavaliers 105

New Jersey won at home to snap a three-game losing streak as Darryl Dawkins scored a career-high 36 points against Cleveland.

Dawkins, who also had 10 rebounds, scored eight points during a 17-4 fourth-quarter spurt that turned a two-point edge into a commanding 108-93 advantage.

Celtics 118, Bulls 105

At Chicago, Boston handed the Bulls their sixth straight loss as Larry Bird scored 24 points and Robert Parish 21.

Chicago, which got a game-high 32 points from Orlando Woolridge, cut a 14-point halftime deficit to 98-90 early in the fourth period. But the Celtics responded with nine straight points to put the game away.

Hawks 95, Suns 88

At Atlanta, Eddie Johnson keyed a fourth-quarter rally by scoring all 14 of his points against Phoenix.

The Suns, who got 22 points from Maurice Lucas and 20 from Larry Nance, scored 11 in a row to pull ahead 69-63 early in the fourth quarter. But the Hawks, who were led by Dominique Wilkins with 21 points, fought back to take the lead for good at 73-71 on a jumper by Johnson with 6:30 left.

Blazers 130, Spurs 118

Portland handed San Antonio its 10th straight loss on the road this season behind guards Jim Paxson and Lafayette Lever.

Paxson scored 26 points and Lever had nine of his 23 in the second quarter. The Trail Blazers outscored the Spurs 33-20 in that period to take a 61-48 lead at halftime and Portland went on to lead by as many as 20 in the fourth quarter.

Warriors 108, Sonics 103

At Oakland, Purvis Short scored 26 points, including four free throws in the final minute to keep Golden State ahead of Seattle.

Eric Floyd added 22 points for the Warriors. His layup with 1:08 left put Golden State ahead to stay at 104-103.

Tom Chambers had 23 points to lead the SuperSonics.

Walton's injuries moving up body; This time it's a finger

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Bill Walton, who in nine years in the National Basketball Association has missed 487 of 758 games because of injury, is on the sidelines again.

But San Diego Clippers General Manager Paul Phipps says the news isn't all bad — "We've now gotten the injury above his waist."

All Walton's previous injuries were to his feet or knees. His latest malady is a broken finger, suffered Sunday when his hand slammed into the backboard during a game at Los Angeles. He is expected to miss about two months.

The 31-year-old Walton hasn't talked since after the 120-99 loss to the Lakers. But Phipps has spoken to him.

"Naturally, Bill is frustrated, but there's an encouraging side," Phipps said Tuesday. "He's in pretty good shape, probably the best shape he's been in in years, because he hasn't had any problems with his legs. Now he can still run, bicycle, swim to keep in shape. In the past, he'd lose whatever conditioning he'd built up because he couldn't use his legs."

IN FIVE years with the Clippers, Walton has played only 62 games, including 15 this season. With Portland, Walton played in only 86 games his first two seasons because of leg problems, but was in a career-high 65 games in leading Portland to the NBA title in 1977.

After 58 games with Portland the next year, he suffered the first of five breaks to the tarsal-navicular bone in his left foot. The breaks caused him to sit out the 1979, 1981 and 1982 seasons, and he managed only 14 games with the Clippers in 1980.

He started a cautious comeback last season, playing on a once-a-week schedule that allowed him to take part in 33 games while his foot healed.

This year, caution was again the watchword, but lately Walton had developed to the point where he felt able to play back-to-back games. He was averaging 16 points and 9.5 rebounds.

"Sure, Bill's down, but he's a competitor," Phipps said. "With most people, you might get to the point of saying, gee, why go on?. But I don't sense that in Bill, never have as long as I've known him. He's one of the few professional athletes with the competitiveness of a high school kid for playing the game."

THE CLIPPERS had Walton's past in mind when they made a pre-season trade with Seattle for James Donaldson, a 7-foot-2, 270-pound third-year pro.

"You don't do these things as a self-fulfilling prophecy, but Bill's history sure dictated it," Phipps said. "We knew we had to have someone who could start in his absence. Now we have depth with Donaldson in the middle."

Phipps said the Clippers, 6-14 with Walton, could use the injury "as a rallying point."

"When we came out of the chute, we played well the first week, but we've struggled since then. While this may not be the best timing, it could unify the team and make them play better for when Bill gets back."

Bosox, Pirates complete first winter meeting deal

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — The Boston Red Sox and Pittsburgh Pirates completed the first deal of the annual baseball winter meetings Tuesday, and the arrival of New York Yankees owner George Steinbrenner really heated things up.

The Red Sox sent left-hander pitcher John Tudor for left-handed hitting outfielder Mike Easler. That was announced in a morning news conference, then writers waited until 10:15 p.m. CST for the much-anticipated arrival of Boss George.

The media were hoping Steinbrenner would comment on reports that he was ready to fire Manager Billy Martin and hire Yogi Berra, a Yankee coach, in his stead.

But when he arrived, Steinbrenner said: "Fellows, I'll have nothing to say today. I'm tired. It's been a rough day."

The Easler-for-Tudor deal provided much-needed pitching help for the Pirates and supplied the Red Sox with a left-handed hitter to augment all their right-handed power.

"We've lost Jim Bibby to free agency. Don Robinson had another shoulder operation, and we don't know if we can sign (free agent) Kent Tekulve," Pirates General Manager Pete Peterson said. "We wanted to improve our pitching staff, so we've given up a good, young player."

Red Sox Manager Ralph Houk said he hadn't had time to make any specific plans for the 33-year-old Easler, but "I want that bat in our lineup. He should hit well in our park. He hits the ball all over, and he's got good power to left-center."

Sources and published reports persisted in predicting that Steinbrenner, before he leaves, would announce he has fired Manager Billy Martin, whom he would replace with Berra.

Contacted at his home in Montclair, N.J., Tuesday morning, Berra said he hadn't talked with Steinbrenner since last Thursday night. At that time, Steinbrenner met informally with Berra after a Boy Scouts dinner at which Steinbrenner was the featured speaker.

Berra confirmed to several sources at that time that he had been offered the Yankee job, which he held in 1964.

" haven't heard from George since then," Berra told The Associated Press. "There's nothing going on that I know of."

Berra said he had no immediate plans to travel to Nashville. "I have to pick up my wife at the airport, then I've got a dentist appointment at four," he said. "After that, I'm going over to my racquet club."

Originally, Steinbrenner was expected to make an announcement on his managerial situation on Tuesday. Speculation was, however, that the funeral may have pushed back Steinbrenner's timetable by at least a day.

Yankee officials, meanwhile, maintained that there was no announcement imminent and Berra said that as far as he was concerned, "Billy's still the manager."

"If there is any announcement, George will make it," Yankees General Manager Murray Cook said.

Such an announcement would end Martin's third term as Yankee manager one month short of a year after he was hired.

Cowboys' sale 'progressing'

DALLAS (AP) — Club President Tex Schramm says the sale of the Dallas Cowboys is "progressing" but still hasn't centered on a specific new owner.

Schramm said Tuesday that if he found the proper prospect he "would not prolong it (the sale) if it's the right person and the right combination."

He said it was possible the club could be sold while the team was still in the National Football league playoffs.

"Timing is no distraction to the players as long as the new man brought the same organization they are accustomed to under (majority owner) Clint (Murchison)," Schramm said.

"I know I'm not likely to find another Murchison but we're looking for the next best thing," Schramm added.

Nordiques claim sixth straight

By The Associated Press

NHL

Hockey fans in La Belle Province have been on a roller coaster recently. Followers of the Montreal Canadiens have seen their team fumble its way through the last five games, going 1-4, while the Quebec Nordiques thrilled their fans with a perfect record over that span.

Tuesday night, the Canadiens and Nordiques were headed in the same direction as each humbled National Hockey League opponents. Montreal beat Hartford 4-1 and Quebec blasted Calgary 8-1 to win for the sixth straight time.

Elsewhere, it was the New York Islanders 5, Vancouver 2; Boston 5, Pittsburgh 3, and St. Louis 8, Buffalo 2.

Mats Naslund scored twice for Montreal, which limited the Whalers to only 14 shots at goalie Rick Wamsley. The line of Naslund, John Chabot and Mario Tremblay combined for all four goals.

"It wasn't a classic hockey game, but I don't think anybody can expect a classic hockey game, the way we've been struggling the last four games or so," said Naslund. "I have no idea why we've been doing so poorly — it's a lot of little things — but I hope this was what we needed to get us back on track."

Naslund felt relieved to be back on track himself.

"Scoring goals is a big part of my game, but I haven't played a good game in the last three or four and I have no excuses," he said. "The big key for me is to carry the puck and skate. When I struggle, I tend to shoot it in from the blue line and that's no good for me."

Naslund's first two shots went past Hartford netminder Greg Millen. He took a pass from Tremblay, split the defense and scored at 7:37 of the opening period. On the first shot of the second session, he made it 2-0 and the Canadiens romped home to move three points ahead of fifth-place Hartford in the Adams Division.

Nordiques 8, Flames 1

A four-goal first period, paced by Dale Hunter's successful penalty shot, drove Calgary netminder Reggie Lemelin to the bench. The Nordiques added four third-period goals, two by Andre Savard, to move into a tie for second in the Adams with Buffalo, one point behind the Bruins.

"All our lines contributed with a great team effort," said Nordiques Coach Michel Bergeron. "In our last seven games, we've been scored on only once in the third period.

"We're keeping down our shots against, and (goaltender Dan) Bouchard is making the key saves."

Hunter got things started with his penalty shot goal.

"It's the first time I've ever scored on a penalty shot," said Hunter."I think I deserved to have a penalty shot because he (Kari Jalonen) pulled me down before I could shoot."

The goal was Hunter's fifth in his last three games and 17th this season, equalling his output of 1982-83.

Islanders 5, Canucks 2

Kelly Hrudey made his first start since Nov. 15 and got first-rate support from his defensemen and forwards. Hrudey made 31 saves and the Islanders killed off seven Vancouver power plays. Bryan Trottier had a goal and two assists, while both Mike Bossy and Duane Sutter scored a goal and set up another.

"Our last two games have been the most disciplined we've been this season," said Islander coach Al Arbour. "We had total discipline for the entire 60 minutes and I'm very pleased with that."

Blues 8, Sabres 2

Wayne Babych scored three times, while Bernie Federko and Brian Sutter both registered two goals as the Blues belted Buffalo. Sutter added two assists, Joey Mullen and Doug Gilmour each had three assists for the Sabres.

Bruins 5, Penguins 3

Barry Pederson collected three goals for his fifth hat trick.

"I've been having a lot of shots of late but they haven't been going in. Tonight they went in," Pederson said. "I felt I could have had five or six. Rick (Middleton) made some great passes."

Middleton had a goal and four assists.

Lysiak case could cause NHL refs to walkout

NEW YORK (AP) — When the National Hockey League hears Tom Lysiak's appeal of his 20-game suspension at its winter meetings in West Palm Beach, Fla., on Thursday, a strike by game officials could hinge on the outcome.

The Associated Press has learned that the NHL Officials Association is considering a walkout if Lysiak's suspension is reduced. The Chicago Black Hawks center allegedly upended linesman Ron Foyt in game against Hartford on Oct. 30.

Jim Beatty, counsel to the union, said Tuesday night that the officials had not decided on a course of action should the suspension be reduced. But a source in the union has told The AP that several referees and linesmen met informally last week and discussed their options, including a walkout. The source said there was definite support for a strike.

"No decision can be made until we hear the NHL's decision after the appeal hearing (on Thursday)," Beatty said. "When we've heard it, then we will respond.

"We're going into the appeal hearing to win it. We have been assured by (NHL President John) Ziegler that we will have a full chance to make a presentation. If we don't, there will be trouble."

Beatty wouldn't specify what kind of trouble.

John McCauley, the NHL's assistant director of officiating and a former referee, said the game officials "have a no-strike clause in their agreement with the league and we hope they would honor it. They are honorable people."

McCauley admitted that any official who went on strike might be dismissed.

McCauley denied that referees and linesmen under contract to the American Hockey League and some amateur leagues have been approached about replacing the regular officials if there is a walkout. But an official working in the AHL told The AP that he had been approached about the possibility of working NHL games should the regular officials walk out.

Lysiak received the 20-game suspension under Rule 67a for "deliberately applying physical force in any manner against an official." After being ejected from several faceoffs, Lysiak appeared to hook his stick in Foyt's skates, upending the linesman, who was not hurt.

Sparlis travels strange road to Fame

NEW YORK (AP) — Of all the men in the College Football Hall of Fame, it is doubtful anyone traveled a stranger road than Al Sparlis.

From an orphanage — although not an orphan — to a Nevada reformatory for 6½ years to top student in his high school class to a star on the gridiron for UCLA to a heavily decorated hero in three wars to associate vice president of Coldwell Banker, the nation's largest brokerage house.

There were more famous names among the inductees Tuesday night at the National Football Foundation's annual awards banquet — Woody Hayes, Darrell Royal and Frank Broyles as coaches, and 10 former college stars.

The players, in addition to Sparlis, were Dick Butkus, Illinois linebacker, 1962-64; Bill "Moose" Fischer, Notre Dame guard, 1945-48; Lee Roy Jordan, Alabama center, 1960-62; Charlie Krueger, Texas A&M tackle, 1955-57; Floyd Little, Syracuse halfback, 1964-66; Lewis "Bud" McFadin, Texas guard, 1948-50; George Owen Jr., Harvard halfback, 1920-22; O.J. Simpson, Southern Cal running back, 1967-68 and Jack Scarbath, Maryland quarterback, 1950-52.

But Sparlis' story was something special.

"My parents were divorced when I was 4," Sparlis, now 63, recalled. "I had two brothers, 2 and 6. My mother took my little brother because he needed a mother's companionship and my father took my older brother because he could put him in school. I ended up in several homes and finally wound up in a Carson City orphanage at the age of 8.

"My father, who was in the mining business, finally came and got me, but he took off for Europe when I was 9½. We were living just outside Ely, Nev., and I hung around with a gang that robbed the company store and other places. I never went inside, but stayed outside and made noise if anyone came along.

"When I was 10 I was sent to a reformatory. My sentence was supposed to run until I was 21 or at the disposition of the court. Four years later, the warden told me that as far as the state was concerned I was free to go, but no one wanted me."

SPARLIS' MOTHER had remarried and was living in Phoenix. Eventually she came for him.

"But I didn't get along with my stepfather," Sparlis recalled, "so I took off and bummed my way on a freight train to Los Angeles, where I was born. I thought I might find some relatives there, but all I could find was a grandmother who was unable to take care of me. I slept in a dry cleaning store and worked in a creamery after school. On weekends I worked as gardener."

School was Los Angeles Polytechnic High, where Sparlis was introduced to organized football. "I also had the highest grade in my graduating class of 289 students, but I didn't have a proper suit to accept the award," he said.

His one year of competitive football had impressed UCLA, and so did his marks — "In those days, you had to have a 'B' average to get into school" — in 1½ years at Polytechnic.

"I played a couple of years at UCLA, including the 1942 Rose Bowl against Georgia, but I had already signed up for the Air Force," he said.

Sparlis flew 70 missions in light bombers in the China-Burma Theater during World War II and won seven campaign medals before returning to UCLA for the 1945 season and doing some acting, as well as working as a grip for a film. In 1946, he played with the Green Bay Packers as a guard and linebacker, but then took a job as sales supervisor with the General Cigar Co.

CALLED BACK to active duty during the Korean War, Sparlis flew 65 missions in B-26 attack bombers and won three more campaign medals. He was "shot down a couple of times, but never hurt."

Avoiding fights could be cheaper for Jets

WINNIPEG, Manitoba (AP) — The Winnipeg Jets of the National Hockey League have been hit with a $5,000 fine for their fourth violation this season of a referee's orders to stay clear of a fight.

"Yeah, we got the telex but he (General Manager John Ferguson) has already appealed the fine," team governor Barry Shenkarow said Tuesday night in a telephone interview from Palm Beach, Fla.

Pats try to find kicker in Mexico

FOXBORO, Mass. (AP) — First, they tried England. Then, they turned to West Germany. Now the New England Patriots have dipped into Mexico to try to solve their place-kicking problems.

Joaquin Zendejas, who could be the first of several family members to join the National Football League, signed with the Patriots Tuesday and will play in their game Sunday at Los Angeles against the Rams.

A Mexican native, Zendejas replaces Fred Steinfort, who was born in West Germany. Steinfort took over for John Smith, an Englishman.

Steinfort was cut Monday for the sixth time in his seven-year NFL career after making just six of 15 field-goal attempts in nine games with New England. He missed six of his last eight tries and all three of his attempts in Sunday's 7-0 victory over the New Orleans Saints.

Smith was released after connecting on three of six attempts and 12 of 15 extra-point kicks in the first five games.

Zendejas, 23, has two placekicking brothers in college. Luis Zendejas of Arizona State was named a first-team All-American Monday. Max Zendejas kicks for Arizona.

Another brother, Alan, kicks at Antonio Lugo High School in Chino, Calif., and a cousin, Tony, kicks for Nevada-Reno.

Redskins' theft ratio has Landry worried

DALLAS (AP) — The Washington Redskins' ball-stealing talents have Dallas Coach Tom Landry worried.

The thieving Redskins have a National Football League high of a plus 40 in turnovers.

Landry called the Washington surplus of recovered fumbles and interceptions "incredible."

Dallas is second with a plus 16 turnovers or takeaways.

The National Football League history books don't list records for plus turnovers but the current edition of the Redskins would qualify as one of the best ever.

Ironically, the only two games Washington has lost this season were ones in which they didn't have plus turnovers.

Dallas beat Washington 31-30 in a season opener and the Redskins were a minus one in takeaways.

In a 48-47 loss to Green Bay, Washington was even in turnovers that night.

"Washington is on a roll and that roll basically is turnovers," Landry said. "It's incredible that the team is a plus 40 or almost three a game. That's an extra thirty yards or so each game."

SPECIAL ASSISTANT Neill Armstrong said "I don't know any team that's ever had 40 plus turnovers at this time of the year. Normally, 15 to 16 for this part of the season is excellent."

Both teams are 12-2 and have clinched wild card spots going into Texas Stadium Sunday for their 3 p.m. National Conference Eastern Division showdown.

Dallas, which beat Washington 31-30 in the season opener, can win the title with a victory because of a big edge in tie-breaking procedures.

The Redskins would have to beat the Cowboys and the New York Giants the next week to win the championship.

Landry said a third Dallas-Washington confrontation in the playoffs would "have to be expected if things go normal."

THE CONFERENCE winner gets the home-field advantage throughout the playoffs and doesn't have to play until either Dec. 31 or Jan. 1.

Dallas has lost three consecutive seasons in the NFC title game on the road.

The runnerup in the NFC East will host a first round wild card game Dec. 26, but will have to play on the road the rest of the playoffs.

The Cowboys were rated a field goal favorite and Landry said "They (the oddsmakers) must be giving us credit for playing at home."

Dallas has a 9-1 record over Washington in Texas Stadium.

The lone loss to Washington in Texas Stadium was a 27-14 decision in 1976.

Dallas is seeking to win 13 games for the first time in the history of the club.

Kanda picks Dallas over Washington

DALLAS (AP) — Celebrated pro football prognosticator Kanda the Great eased the anxieties of the hometown fans Tuesday when he picked the Dallas Cowboys to defeat the Washington Redskins Sunday.

The 1-year-old gorilla, who made monkeys of the Dallas Morning News sports staff by posting a 33-22-1 record in four weeks of predicting National Football League winners, has never been wrong about a Cowboys game, said Dallas Zoo spokesman Bill Stewert.

He even picked the San Diego upset of the Cowboys four weeks ago.

"There was a great sigh of relief this morning when he picked the Cowboys," Stewert said. "He went right for it. He seemed pretty confident about it."

Kanda makes his predictions by snatching slips of paper that have team names and point-spreads from Stewert's hand.

UNM's Carter named AP third team All-America

NEW YORK (AP) — University of New Mexico senior Jimmie Carter Tuesday was named to the third team defensive unit on The Associated Press 1983 All-America football team.

Carter, a 6-foot-2, 213-pound defensive end from Austin, Texas, was the leader of New Mexico's defense that was ranked the best in the Western Athletic Conference.

Carter finished his collegiate career this season by being named to the All-WAC team for a third straight year.

Three other New Mexico players received honorable mention recognition by the AP. They were junior linebacker Johnny Jackson, junior safety Ray Hornfeck and punter Ron Keller, who averaged 42.6 yards a kick this season.

Statistics released by the WAC office showed the Lobos led the conference in defense for the third time in four years.

The Lobos gave up 298.1 yards a game to lead the league. New Mexico was also first in the conference in defense against the rush with an average of 116.6 yards a game and first in scoring defense, giving up 19.4 points a game.

New Mexico ranked second behind Hawaii in pass defense. The Rainbows led that category with an average of 171.1 yards a game, compared to New Mexico's 181.7 average.

Georgetown rips St. Leo, gets ready for DePaul Saturday

By The Associated Press

Georgetown, tuning up for its first stiff test of the season, against DePaul Saturday, ran its record to 5-0 Tuesday night as freshman Michael Graham scored 16 points and Patrick Ewing 15 for an 82-50 victory against St. Leo, 1-3, which got 23 points from Brad McDonald.

Ewing, playing with four personal fouls much of the second half, also contributed nine rebounds and four blocks. Bill Martin scored 14 points and grabbed 12 rebounds as the Hoyas controlled the boards.

DePaul, meanwhile, led by 26 points in the first 10 minutes en route to its fourth victory in as many games. Tony Jackson's 14 points led the balanced Blue Demons' 84-60 attack against Western Michigan, 1-3, which started four freshmen.

Maryland, upset by Penn State last season, slowed down the tempo and held the ball after the Nittany Lions pulled to within 49-47 with 12:02 to go. The Terrapins led only 57-51 with 1:27 remaining, but Jeff Adkins' seven free throws clinched a 67-58 victory, their third against one loss.

Adkins finished with 15 points and Adrian Branch added 14. Penn State, 1-1, was led by Dick Mumma's 17 points.

Unranked Teams

At Bloomington, Ind., freshman Steve Alford scored 26 points and Uwe Blab and freshman Marty Simmons added 13 apiece as Indiana, 2-2, downed Tennessee Tech 81-66. Steve Kite scored 14 points for Tech, 1-2.

Virginia, with Ricky Stokes' 15 points leading four Cavaliers in double figures, boosted its record to 5-0 against host George Washington 65-55. It was the first loss in four games for the Colonials, who got 24 points from Mike Brown.

At Nashville, Tenn., George Montgomery scored 17 points in powering Illinois, 5-0, over Vanderbilt 69-55; at Richmond, Va., unbeaten Virginia Commonwealth was forced to rally in posting its third victory, 41-38 over William & Mary; host San Diego State got 29 points from Michael Cage in thumping Long Beach State 91-76, and Bob Lojewski scored 10 of his 27 points in the last four minutes as St. Joseph's edged Philadelphia rival La Salle 74-72.

Delaney Rudd and Kenny Green each scored 16 points as Wake Forest, 4-0, tripped Davidson 62-51 at Winston Salem, N.C.; Steve Mitchell's 23 points and 12 assists earned host Alabama-Birmingham an 83-73 Sun Belt Conference victory over Old Dominion; David Allen's 22 points led Northern Arizona to a 71-70 upset over visiting Arizona State 71-70, marking the first time since the 1959-60 season that the Lumberjacks beat the Sun Devils.

Wayman Tisdale's 29 points led Oklahoma past Arkansas State 83-61 at Norman, Okla.; host Southern Methodist hit 64 percent from the field in crushing Penn 98-66; James Williams scored 20 points and grabbed 11 rebounds as Southern Mississippi tripped Mississippi State 55-48 in Hattiesburg, and Texas got by visiting Biscayne 51-50.

Lewis brings in Murphy for free throw shooting lessons

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston Cougars, known for flamboyant dunk shots, took lessons from former National Basketball Association star Calvin Murphy on the art of successful free throw shooting.

The Cougars have been hitting a mere 57.1 percent of their free throws this season. Murphy, the second best free throw shoooter in NBA history, patiently explained to the team about relaxation, concentration and building confidence at the line.

But the lesson might have been lost on the Cougars, who responded last Saturday by hitting only 13 of 28 shots en route to a victory over Biscayne.

Murphy is only the latest in Coach Guy Lewis' efforts to improve his team's free throw percentage that has not exceeded 70 percent since the 1970-71 season.

Most have met with failure similar to an occasion last season when an elderly man told Lewis he had the solution to the problem.

After free throw practice the following day, Lewis told his team "I bet I can pick somebody out of the seats who could do better than that" and summoned the man to the court.

Lewis instructed the Cougars to watch closely. But the man tossed up three straight air balls. End of lesson.

Reid Gettys, Houston's best free throw shooter the past two seasons, finally has fit into the program, dropping from 90 percent as a freshman to 70.6 percent to 57.1 percent this year.

Gettys' most memorable performance was a 10-for-10 effort as a freshman against Boston College in the NCAA playoffs.

"I'm starting to get my confidence back now," Gettys said. "A lot of it has to do with a willingness to be at the line. When I made those free throws against Boston College, I got in my mind that I couldn't miss, so I couldn't wait to get a chance.

"Now, even hough my percentage is down, if the game is on the line, I want to be the one up there shooting free throws."

Michael Young, eight for 10 this season, said the main problem was a lack of confidence.

"Everyone keeps saying we can't make free throws and now some of the guys believe it," Young said. "They think 'We're here at the line, and we're not supposed to make them.'"

Center Akeem Olajuwon has hit only eight of 21 for a 38.1 completion percentage.

"From now on, I put any feeling of pressure out of my mind," he said. "I won't think about missing. I will just relax and concentrate."

Guard Alvin Franklin, who is 12 of 13 this season has an even simpler solution.

"People keep writing that we can't make free throws so we ought to just quit reading the papers," he said.

No criticizing until you answer these questions

The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

I'm always amused by the great gnashing of teeth and ranting that go on when a name pro golfer makes headlines for being suspected of "cheating." It happened recently when Tom Watson did or did not catch Gary Player removing a growing obstruction from his ball in the playing of the "Skins" tournament in Arizona.

The great sucking in of breath and tsk-tsking that ensued in the nation's locker rooms would be laughable if it weren't so hypocritical.

You see, the plain fact is that we all cheat, fellow duffers. No less an authority than Joe Dey himself, ex-head of the U.S. Golf Assn., governing body of golf, once said that less than 2 percent of all golfers know and play by the rules. That leaves a lot of us who couldn't very well serve on the jury trying Gary Player.

What? That doesn't include you, you say? You resent being lumped with the 98 percent who fudge the rules?

OK, then you won't mind taking this little quiz with me. Before we give you our Diogenes Award, we'd like you to mark your answers on this little multiple-choice term paper.

1 – When your tee shot goes off in this right-to-right pattern, with the out-of-bounds line on the right, when you get to it, 225 yards from the tee, and it is indeed out of bounds, do you say (a) "Oh, well, there are guys already on the tee back there, so, in the interest of speeding up the game, I will just drop one and play it from here lying 3," or do you (b) make the long walk back to the tee and risk hitting another one, or two, out of bounds as Rule 29-1 dictates?

2 – When you hit a ball in the deep rough and find it embedded in hay-like weeds do you (a) take a whole bunch of "practice" swings till you have mowed enough hay so you have a perfect 3-wood lie, or do you (b) say "No, Rule 17-1, Tom Watson's rule, says you may not 'improve or allow to be improved your line of play by bending or breaking anything growing' and that you may part the grass or remove an impediment only 'in making the actual stroke or the backward movement of the club for that stroke.'"?

3 – OK, now you come to a water hole, playing a new Pinnacle 4 ball, and the carry over water is 150 yards, do you (a) lean down and replace that new ball with an old cut range ball just for this shot and, then, when you make it over the water, do you lean down again and put your brand new Pinnacle in play again, or do you (b) play the ball you started the hole with all the way through as Rule 21 requires?

4 – If you can't find the ball you have hit in the woods after a five-minute search do you (a) say "Well, I know if I could look long enough I would find it, but those guys in back of us are getting impatient, so, what say I just drop one here and play it, no penalty, strictly in the interest of saving time," or do you (b) declare a "lost ball" and take a stroke penalty and go back to where you struck it and hope you don't lose this one, too, as Rule 29-1a requires?

5 – When you are establishing a handicap or trying to lower your handicap so you can play in the prestigious 14-and-under club championship and your friendly opponent is also the guy who sells you insurance and he keeps knocking away these 7 12-foot putts with "That's good," do you (a) accept it gracefully and put the ball in your pocket and put down a par, or do you (b) say "No, no. Concessions are for match play. Since we're effectively playing stroke play so I can qualify for the Crosby, rule 7-2 says clearly that, in stroke play, 'If a competitor fails to hole out before he has played a stroke from the next tee, he shall be disqualified.'"?

6 – Do you (a) play "winter rules" on a perfectly gorgeous day in Palm Springs or Palm Beach and nudge the ball up or clean and replace it just because the calendar says it is November, or do you (b) say "The USGA does not endorse 'winter rules' or 'preferred lies' and says its 'ground under repair' rules should be sufficient to take care of any 'abnormal' (weather) conditions. Therefore, I am not going to apply any 'winter rules' on a day that would be a nice July day in Connecticut"?

7 – After you have missed a 3 12-foot putt, do you (a) stand there and keep practicing that putt till you make it before you go on to the next hole, or do you (b) cite the recommended local rule by the USGA that 'a player during a round shall not play any practice strokes on or to the putting green of any hole he has played' under penalty of two strokes or loss of hole?

8 – When you shoot a 10 on a hole, do you (a) say "Well, give me a 6 there. I am a 12-handicapper and thus I can't take more than a double bogey on a hole" and do you have a lot of holes like that on a round, or do you (b) say "The USGA doesn't recognize 'adjustments' but says only 'If a competitor returns a score for any hole lower than actually taken, he shall be disqualified.' Therefore, give me what I got, a 10"?

If you answered (b) to all eight questions, you are either Jack Nicklaus or a 28-handicapper. If you answered (a) to any or all of them and think you are a 14-handicapper, I would like to get you in a match at full handicap with Joe Dey refereeing.

Secret confessions of a sports writer: It's my fault

By SCOTT OSTLER
Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

Some news items:

—Saints running back George Rogers has a bad day and attributes it to the print media's speculation of his re-involvement in drugs.

—Rod Carew blames the media for a subpar '82 season, saying writers pressured him into trying for RBIs.

—The 11 American athletes who left the Pan American Games in Caracas, Venezuela, early during the drug scare say they left because of bad conditions and because they were continually "hassled" by the media.

—Willie Wilson blames his poor season on the media's preoccupation with an ongoing drug investigation. Later, teammate Willie Aikens blames the media for his three-month jail sentence.

—Howard Cosell blames the print media for the Marvis Frazier-Larry Holmes mismatch.

YOU PROBABLY think I'm about to defend the media against all these unprovoked attacks, but you're wrong.

I have come to confess.

I can't speak for others in my profession, but I think it's time someone stood up and shouldered some blame. Since it takes a big man to admit he is wrong, who better to step forward?

Where to start? Caracas, perhaps.

I arrive early at the Pan American Games, and in my eagerness to take care of my large traveling entourage, I book all the city's decent hotel rooms. By the time the athletes show up, the only lodging left is in cramped, unfinished dorms.

And to those American athletes who failed their drug tests, I can only say that I'm truly sorry. I thought you realized I was kidding when I told you the drug tests would be multiple choice.

ROD CAREW, ah, that man would have batted .400 the last two years if not for me. I have an unusually noisy typewriter, and every time Carew comes to bat, I'm up there in the press box, banging away on those keys, creating a terrible racket, destroying the man's concentration.

How am I to know Rod has real sensitive ears but is just too darn nice a guy to say anything to me about the noise?

I'm going to get the typewriter fixed. Also, from now on, I swear, I'm going to stop giving advice, no matter how many times someone asks.

Magic Johnson calls me up and wants to know how he can improve his ballhawking skills. So I tell him, "Mag, you waste energy and motion when you use your whole hand to steal passes. Try using just one finger."

HEY, MY intentions are good, but I guess that's what they all say. I'm pretty tight with Mark Gastineau, and I know how shy he is, so a couple Christmases ago I give him a gift certificate for dancing lessons at Fred Astaire Studios. How was I to know what kind of dances they teach these days?

Then Mark starts getting into trouble on the field. I call and tell him, "If you've got to show off, Mark-o, go find yourself a quiet saloon and arm-wrestle the bartender."

Sometimes bad luck just finds you, know what I mean? For a vacation, I jet over to Newport, R.I., to take in the America's Cup races. One of my hobbies is sketching sailboat keel designs, and I'm in a bar, doodling on my margarita napkin. I come up with a real nifty design, sort of a winged keel.

How am I to know the bartender is a close personal friend of the Australian skipper? I must say, when the Aussies won the cup, I had mixed feelings.

Then I'm in Las Vegas to cover the Holmes-Frazier fight. I wander into a gym and pretty soon I'm sparring with a couple of the local heavyweights, when Marvis Frazier comes in.

He says he likes my boxing style and asks me for some tips. Why can't I just keep my mouth shut? No, I tell him that Holmes is a sucker for a straight forehead lead, that the champ has a glass fist.

My sense of humor gets me out of a lot of jams, but as you can see it also occasionally backfires. Sometimes people don't know when I'm kidding.

And sometimes I'm just trying to be nice, it's my nature. I'm down in Arizona, covering the big "Skins Game" golf match with Nicklaus, Player, Watson and Palmer. I'm in the gallery, minding my own business, taking notes. Gary Player spots me and asks me to come take a look at his lie and give him some advice on club selection. I'm bending over for a closer look when my pen falls out of my pocket and knocks his ball against a rooted leaf.

"Just yank the stupid thing out," I tell Gary. "It was my fault, and nobody's looking."

The thing I feel worst about, I guess, is that I invented cocaine. Not intentionally, of course, but isn't that always the way?

I'm pretty handy in the kitchen, and one morning I'm trying to whip up a sugar substitute, something to sprinkle on my Cheerios that won't rot my teeth. I've got some plants left over from a botany expedition to India, and I put 'em in the blender. Before I can even try the stuff, my dog sticks his nose in and walks around the house grinning like an idiot.

Right away I throw the stuff in the trash, but somehow it gets in the wrong hands.

There's a lot more I could confess, but why wallow in guilt? Besides, if I make a big deal out of a little bad luck, the media will blow it all out of proportion.

Lendl holds on to beat Smid; McEnroe cruises past Masur

MELBOURNE, Australia (AP) — Ivan Lendl, the world's top-ranked tennis player, was headed toward an Australian Open showdown with Wimbledon champion John McEnroe, but all the Czech ace seemed to want was to lie down.

"I've had enough," Lendl said today, looking mentally and emotionally drained after a tough year on the circuit and still battling the effects of a virus.

Nevertheless, Lendl summoned up sufficient firepower to subdue fellow Czech Tomas Smid 7-6, 2-6, 6-1, 6-2. He now meets American grass court specialist Tim Mayotte in the semifinals.

Mayotte beat fourth-seeded American Eliot Teltscher 6-4, 6-2, 3-6, 7-6.

MEANWHILE, THE second-seeded McEnroe cruised past 20-year-old Australian Wally Masur 6-2, 6-1, 6-2. But the fiery American could face a major obstacle in his semifinal clash agaiunst third-seeded Swede Mats Wilander.

Wilander showed he was improving rapidly on grass by whipping Johan Kriek, defending champion of the $400,000 event, 6-3, 6-4, 7-6.

Later, McEnroe acknowledged Wilander was adapting well to grass.

"It's important that I serve well and attack him when I have a chance because that's the way I need to be to play him in order to beat him on grass," McEnroe said.

Wilander outsmarted Kriek from the base line, and said his serve had improved markedly in the past two weeks.

McEnroe dropped his opening serve against Masur, but then displayed his full array of strokes to blast the young Australian out of the tournament.

The top-seeded woman player, American Martina Navratilova, scraped through to the semifinals after a rain-interrupted match against Britain's Jo Durie.

Navratilova wrapped up the match 4-6, 6-3, 6-4 after Durie claimed the first set Tuesday before rain intervened. Navratilova had not lost a set since the Canadian Open in august.

Navratilova now faces third-seeded American Pam Shiver in the semifinals.

The other semifinal also will be a battle of Americans, Kathy Jordan and Zina Garrison. Garrison advanced when she defeated fourth-seeded Aussie Wendy Turnbull 6-2, 7-6.

Shriver and Jordan had advanced earlier.

Denver pushing for '89 Final Four

DENVER (AP) — Landing the 1985 NCAA West Regional basketball tournament gives Denver the perfect chance to show it should be the site of the 1989 Final Four, according to civic and sports leaders.

"We're delighted to be awarded the regional and we think we'll do a great job in proving to them that we're capable of hosting the Final Four," said University of Colorado basketball coach Tom Apke.

On Monday, University of Utah Athletic Director Arnie Ferrin confirmed that Denver would be the site of the regional tournament.

"I don't know whether the 1989 Final Four championship will be awarded to Denver, but this gives the city and the University of Colorado an opportunity to show whether they can handle an event of that magnitude," said Ferrin, who serves as the District 7 representative on the NCAA Basketball Committee.

The University of Colorado and Denver have submitted a bid for the 1989 Final Four. The decision on the 1989 site could ccome as early as next July when the NCAA Basketball Committee meets at The Broadmoor, in Colorado Springs.

"If Denver is not selected at our meeting in July, the 1985 West Regional would still serve as a kind of dry run for them," Ferrin said. "If they do a good job on it, that would be a real good indication that we ought to come back at some subsequent time and consider them for the Final Four."

Ferrin said several factors were involved in the decision to award Denver the 1985 West Regional.

"You look at the facility. You look at accessibility for fans and teams and fans to get to the site. You look at community support. You look at game management. You look at the facilities for the media. And you look at the availability of good hotels and lodging for the fans.

Ferrin said Denver qualifies on each count, but he still has reservations about the city's ability to work with the University of Colorado in providing a smooth-running format.

However, three Denver civic boosters say the regional tournament provides a great opportunity to impress the NCAA Basketball Committee.

"I'm very enthusiastic and excited about the prospects for Denver holding the regionals and possibly the NCAA finals," said Roger Kinney, of the Metro Denver Sports Committee, and a long-time Chamber of Commerce sports booster.

"Having the regionals will provide us with a great test run of what's needed to host the finals, should we get them. This gives us a great opportunity to rejuvenate the old enthusiasm for college basketball in the Denver area."

"I'm delighted that Denver will be getting the regionals and is a finalist with Seattle for the NCAA finals. This is an event that we've wanted for a long time," said Rex Jennings, of the Chamber of Commerce.

Banker tells oilmen industries share strain

Thomas J. Wageman

By JULIE FAUBEL
Business-Energy Writer

Thomas J. Wageman, president of RepublicBank First National Midland, told a group of oilmen Tuesday night that banking and oil better have a future in the Permian Basin because he did not want to relive the past.

Speaking at the monthly meeting of the Permian Basin Chapter of the American Petroleum Institute, Wageman said both industries havean essential product which the world needs.

"Mine is money and service and yours is oil and gas and service. Yours depletes and mine inflates and both are bad," Wageman said.

Both industries, he said, are worried about the future.

"My business is deregulating and that deregulation is producing an awful lot of uncertainty. Your business is also full of uncertainty: uncertainty with respect to volumes — that is demand — both local and worldwide and price. It's a difficult issue to predict."

Wageman told API members the key element to future success in any business operation is the "inventory position." Many businessmen tend to forget about the "long run implication" of inventory position and acquire inventory and assets at a fixed rate. When this changes, he said, companies can find themselves in a "negative inventory position."

He explained, "When oil goes down from about $34 per barrel to about $29 a barrel and if you've got oil that you drilled for $10 a barrel, you're OK. But if you just drilled it, expecting $39-40 a barrel, you can't carry it."

Wageman said businessmen need to constantly think about their inventory — what is that inventory and what can happen in the future.

Wageman predicted "big changes" for the banking business from the way banks do business to the size of the industry. He said the number of banks in the country would continue to decline in the next 10 years.

"I don't know what that number will be but we won't have 14,000."

Wageman also talked about the changes at RepublicBank. Since assuming the deposits of failed First National Bank of Midland on Oct. 14 and reopening on Oct. 17, assets have grown to about $730 million. Deposits, he said, are up $95 million from that same time.

He also confirmed earlier reports that RepublicBank would ask the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. for another 30-day extension of its exclusive right to buy back loans the FDIC assumed when FNB failed. Wageman added the additional time will be needed.

The bank was originally granted 30 days to review and purchase loans from FNB's estimated $1.1 billion portfolio. In November, RepublicBank asked for and was granted a 30-day extension which will expire in mid-December.

Saying the bank could not have accomplished the task by now, Wageman predicted it will "clearly, by the end of this month, be in much better shape in terms of acquiring loans" from the FDIC. However, he would not say how many loans the bank has already repurchased.

Trying to find a "bright light" in the current situation, Wageman said the FDIC would be one of the top 10 employers and a major user of office space in Midland next year.

Trying to reassure API members, Wageman said the FDIC has a difficult job to do and it was "not here to punish people or to make a bad deal. They're here to make something better out of what they have.

"They (FDIC) had a very difficult experience in Oklahoma (the failure of Penn Square Bank). It was a major liquidation for them and I don't know that they're exactly proud of the way they handled it to begin with. But the industry is in a different position now and this is Midland, not Oklahoma. The situation here is really quite different than the situation that prevailed up there. It's nowhere as complex."

The FDIC will move slowly and carefully in liquidating property in Midland, he said.

"It takes a lot of time. I think they're going to be reluctant to foreclose. I think they're going to work with the customers as much as they can."

OPEC crude committee advocates holding line

By The Los Angeles Times—
Washington Post News Service

GENEVA, Switzerland — The committee that monitors crude oil markets for the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries recommended Tuesday that no changes be made in the cartel's current benchmark price or production ceiling, members said after a brief meeting here.

The 13 OPEC ministers, who begin their winter meeting here Wednesday, were expected to accept the recommendation, a move that should extend the current stability in world oil prices at least until spring.

Nonetheless, tension over the price and production accord reached last March in London continued as the Iranians met with members of at least one other delegation to discuss their proposal to hike prices $5 a barrel, while the Saudis and other moderate OPEC members continued to support the current level.

"No change, no change," Saudi oil minister Ahmed Zaki Yamani said as he arrived at the conference.

Emerging from the brief market monitoring committee meeting, Indonesian Energy Minister Soebroto told reporters that the committee would recommend sticking with the current $29 benchmark for Saudi light crude and the 17.5 million barrel a day production levels agreed to last March.

Soebroto also said the committee will recommend retaining the current quota system under which the 17.5 million barrel allocation is divided among the 13 OPEC countries. A number of countries have been routinely cheating on their assigned quotas, driving total OPEC production as high as 18.5 million barrels a day at times and contributing to the lingering worldwide oil glut that has depressed crude oil prices.

With worldwide crude oil demand trailing expectations and OPEC production at less than half of capacity, some OPEC nations have grown increasingly restless under the restraints of their nine-month-old accord.

Iran argued at a long-term strategy meeting that ended in disarray after three hours in early November that dropping prices and limiting production have not stimulated the hoped-for demand for their crude oil, and so the cartel should raise prices $5 a barrel. Venezuela at that time argued for lower production levels to bring OPEC oil supplies into better balance with demand.

While many oil experts expect the March accord to hold through the meeting this week, despite these tensions among the member nations, there is concern that a mild winter and continued depressed demand could lead to price and production wars by spring.

Meanwhile the spot crude oil market, where oil is sold for immediate delivery, was quiet Tuesday as traders around the world waited for the outcome of the OPEC conference. However,the Soviet Union reportedly had dropped the price of its benchmark crude by 40-cents a barrel, putting further pressure on OPEC and dimming Iran's already-remote chance of a price increase.

Getty fued intensifies; Big stockowners swap complaints

By The Los Angeles Times —
Washington Post News Service

LOS ANGELES — The feud for control of Los Angeles-based Getty Oil Co. intensified Tuesday as the company's two largest shareholders accused the company of violating a 2-month-old truce and moved to weaken management's power by amending the company's bylaws.

It was the latest round in the conflict between the company's top executives and Gordon C. Getty, youngest son of company founder J. Paul Getty. The feud has pitted Gordon Getty against his brother and has prompted the corporation's management to attempt to break Gordon's control of the family holdings, the Sarah C. Getty Trust, owner of 40.2 percent of Getty Oil Co.

Getty, a musician and anthropologist living in San Francisco, has indicated that he believes the company has not been profitable enough under the leadership of Chairman Sidney R. Petersen. Petersen last week accused Gordon Getty of trying unsuccessfully to oust the company's board, but he claimed that the plot failed when the Malibu, Calif.-based J. Paul Getty Museum, the company's second largest shareholder (11.8 percent), refused to go along.

Under Petersen's direction, the company also attempted to issue additional Getty stock in an apparent plan to dilute the holdings of Gordon Getty and the museum.

That attempt and the feud appeared to die down in November when the company approved a one-year "standstill agreement" with Gordon Getty and the museum. The two shareholders agreed not to sell any of their stock, thus quelling speculation about a breakup of the company.

In exchange, management promised not to make any "fundamental corporate changes" without approval of the two big shareholders, thus halting the stock dilution scheme. The agreement also allowed Gordon and the museum to name five new members to an expanded Getty Oil board.

Only days after the agreement was made public, the company joined an effort to wrest control of the family trust from Gordon Getty. With the company's support, attorneys on behalf of another Getty son, J. Paul Getty Jr., filed a lawsuit asking that the San Francisco-based Bank of America be named co-trustee of the trust.

The suit, filed in the name of J. Paul Jr.'s son, 15-year-old Tara Gabriel Galaxy Gramaphone Getty, claimed that J. Paul Getty, who died in 1976, did not intend for Gordon to run the trust alone.

Analysts called the challenge to Gordon an extraordinary gamble, in which Petersen wagered on retaing control of Getty Oil by breaking Gordon's hold.

On Tuesday, Gordon Getty and the Getty museum alleged that the company's support of the lawsuit constituted a failure to honor the standstill agreement. They also criticized the company for supporting the lawsuit without notifying Gordon, and for refusing the request of Gordon, museum chairman Harold M. Williams, and three other company directors for a special meeting to consider the matter.

Gordon and the museum, representing a majority share of Getty Oil stock, also moved to restrict management by unilaterally amending the corporate bylaws to require a vote of 14 of Getty Oil's 16 directors on any major management action, require a special directors' meeting at the request of only three members and require that any board action include only a full meeting of the board.

The two shareholders also agreed that either can sell its shares provided it has approval of the other trust.

Hot new study splits House banking panel

WASHINGTON (AP) — Some members of the House Banking Committee are disassociating themselves from a committee study that rakes the Federal Reserve Board over the coals for the secrecy of its monetary policy sessions.

The study, released Tuesday by the banking committee, uses strong language to criticize the central bank and calls for it to lift the "veil of secrecy" surrounding its decisions.

"Continued secrecy and even deception is not only inefficient and out-of-line with democratic traditions, but it flies in the face of the free market principles Fed officials claim to follow," said the study, put together by the staff of the banking committee.

Paul Volcker, chairman of the Federal Reserve, said earlier in the week, "You won't get better policy by conducting (it) in a goldfish bowl ... Any attempt to announce every judgment every time would lead to more, rather than less, confusion; more, rather than less, anticipation of action; and more, rather than less, instability."

He also said the Federal Reserve is the "most open central bank in the world."

Several panel members complained about the study's tone and noted the full committee did not adopt the document, which includes a disclaimer to that effect on its cover.

Rep. Doug Barnard, a Democrat and a former Georgia banker, said in separate remarks that he wanted "to express my dismay at the tone of this document."

"The rhetoric ... is extreme and unnecessary and I do not wish to be associated with the harsh critical tone of the report," he said.

Rep. Stephen L. Neal, D-N.C., contended some of the language "is little more than slander."

Moreover, he said, "I do not believe it reflects majority sentiment on the committee."

A committee spokesman, who asked not to be identified, said, however, "It generally reflects the views of a majority of the committee."

The study took a look at several aspects of the Federal Reserve's policymaking but reserved its harshest criticism for the private meetings in which bank officials make key decisions on monetary policy.

The policymakers — known as the Federal Open Market Committee — meet about eight times a year. The minutes of the meetings aren't made public until about six weeks later, after the next meeting. The panel consists of the seven governors of the Federal Reserve Board and the presidents of five of the 12 regional Federal Reserve Banks.

In those sessions, the Open Market Committee decides how to control the supply of money and credit to the banking system, which indirectly affects the level of interest rates. The policymakers have been maintaining a modest level of restraint on the money supply in an effort to keep inflation under control.

"The veil of secrecy must be removed from Federal Open Market Committee actions," the study said.

"The board of governors has not been authorized to conduct covert operations in our nation's money markets, but the Central Intelligence Agency would be proud to match the Fed's record for operating in the shadows."

To mend their ways, it urged the policymakers to announce certain decisions on monetary policy — their intermediate targets for the growth in the money supply — as soon as they are made.

Among the other recommendations:

—The Federal Reserve should give up its weekly measure of the basic money supply, called M1, which includes currency in circulation and private checking accounts.

"The volatility, uncertainty and meaninglessness of the weekly M1 numbers certainly justify such a decision by the board," it said.

—The term of the board's chairman should coincide more closely with that of the president's, a suggestion that Volcker has supported.

—The central bank's expenditures should be subject to congressional control. The Federal Reserve made money from its operations last year, turning $15.2 billion over to the Treasury.

FDIC bolting bank's doors; Police foil plan

Midland Police thought they were preventing a crime at an abandoned house earlier this week, only to discover the person was a crime preventer, like themselves.

The "suspect" it turned out was an employee of Midland Lock & Safe Service, 1408 N. Big Spring, which has been contracted by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. to change the locks on approximately 150 houses and other property owned by the FDIC as a result of the failure of First National Bank of Midland.

Before FNB failed Oct. 14, it had acquired through, foreclosure or deed, real estate which eventually would have been sold.

Betty Byrom with the FDIC said, "We are securing our properties, there are too many keys out." By changing the locks, she said, the FDIC would be better able to control who has access to its property.

"We've had some vandalism and we just don't want anyone going through our property."

While Byrom would not confirm the number, sources familiar with the failed bank said the number was fairly close. Sources also said this action did not represent any foreclosure proceedings as a result of the FDIC being named receiver of FNB's $1.1 billion loan portfolio, adding that such proceeding take quite some time.

Brad Ward, Midland Lock & Safe, said although he had not been told not to discuss the matter, he did not want to say anything about the subject. Ward did not know if the company would be changing more locks in the future.

Fund swithcher says money making easy

By ARELO SEDERBERG
Hearst Feature Service

Dick Fabian says it's so easy to make money in the stock market these days that he's ashamed to accept payment for his advice.

In that case, I feel perfectly justified in giving you the Huntington Beach, Calif., financial advisor's secrets for nothing, hopefully without the caveat that free advice more often than not is worth what it costs.

Fabian is no tipster, no pusher of penny stocks or high-tech issues at 50 times earnings. He's not into deep-discount bonds or risk arbitrage. He's into mutual fund switching, where he thinks any numbskull can attain a growth of 20 percent a year over any given five-year period.

Mutual funds buy securities and in turn sell shares in themselves to the public. There are any number of varieties — income, long-term growth, aggressive growth. Before the bull market took off in August 1982, they were languishing in a horrible sink pool. But they soared with the bull's revival. Sales in the first nine months of 1983 amounted to $31.3 billion, double the full-year total of 1982.

These days, many are "no-load" funds, which means you buy them directly from the issuer and pay no commission charges. Of course, there is no free lunch; you pay a management fee, a small percent that is not really so small at all when you consider total assets. Fund assets now are about $110 million.

The other factor in the Fabian equation is the money market mutual fund. Money funds buy financing instruments such as Treasury bonds, bank certificates of deposit and corporate commercial paper. They, too, sell their shares to the public. They buy their paper in big denominations and thus get interest rates higher than those usually available to you and me in a bank or savings and loan.

Fabian's rule is this: "While the market's trend is up, you should be positioned in aggressive mutual funds. While the trend is down, you should be in money funds."

Does that sound too pat, too easy? Perhaps it even sounds somewhat like Will Rogers' sage comment: "Making money in stocks is easy. You buy a stock and it goes up. If it doesn't go up, don't buy it."

But there is more to Fabian's rules. There are three indicator tables you must know and compile. They are:

— The Dow Jones industrial index, week-ending closing figures, plus a 39-week average of the Dow.

— The Dow transportation index, week closing, plus the 39-week average of the Dow.

— A table of aggressive mutual funds, listing weekly closings, and again, the 39-week average.

The way you spot the current market trend is to watch the relationship between the readings of the three indicators and their 39-week averages, which is a momentum index or moving average, smoothing out the wide oscillations of weekly prices.

So, if you're in a mutual fund now, you switch to a money fund when the current price of the mutual fund falls below its 39-week average price. You do the same when either or both of the Dow averages also fall below their 39-week average.

And if you're in a money fund now, you switch to an aggressive growth fund when the Dow industrials AND transportations pass their 39-week average OR the current price of the mutual fund you're going to buy passes its 39-week average AND at the same time either or both the Dow transportations or industrials rise above their 39-week average.

Right now? Well, it's still signals go for the bull market, Fabian believes, despite a rotating correction.

These tactics were not really possible until the mid-1970s, when money funds came on strongly. Money funds continued to soar during the high interest rates of the late 1970s and early 1980s, but then started to sink as interest rates declined and the equity markets started to soar. The money fund industry is still giant, however, with assets of about $160 billion.

Investment counselor reaps profit from stocks with simple technique

By DONALD C. BAUDER
Copley News Service

Picking stocks isn't so complicated if you limit your universe to 30 stocks.

Michael B. O'Higgins of Albany, N.Y. has done just that — he deals only with the 30 Dow Jones industrial stocks. And his performance is right at the top among money managers.

O'Higgins' five-year-old investment counseling firm has $55 million under management and 120 different clients around the United States. His fund has averaged a return of more than 28 percent a year since 1979. The total return (capital gains plus income) was 32.2 percent in 1979, 13.7 in 1980, 14.2 in 1981, 48.2 last year and 25.2 through nine months this year.

That's a cumulative gain of 218.5 percent. Over the same period, the Standard & Poor's 500 gained 121.8 percent and the Dow Jones industrial average gained 102.5. It puts O'Higgins in the top 7 percent of the A.G. Becker ranking of money managers.

"We outperform the Dow itself because we're always in the strongest groups," O'Higgins said in an interview. His brother John is a municipal bond specialist with Kidder, Peabody and is an investor in his brother's firm.

O'Higgins picks Dow stocks selectively. He divides them into three tiers of 10 stocks each. The bottom 10 are the ones that are doing poorly at the time. But when a stock starts moving up out of that bottom tier and inches into the middle tier, it's a likely buy. Normally, it's a buy while still in the top tier, but if it starts slipping into the middle, O'Higgins will unload.

Thus, he is waiting for trends to be established. "We don't go bottom-fishing," he said. "We buy late and sell late — we're not trying to get in at the bottom and out at the top."

It's a conservative approach. Eastman Kodak, one of the 30 Dow stocks, took a terrible licking in the 1970s. Bottom fishers picked it up each time it hit new lows — but it continued to decline. O'Higgins waited until an uptrend was in force.

But he doesn't dump a stock just because it keeps rising. He bought IBM at $63 and still has it, saying it has not nudged down sufficiently. Today, it's vulnerable, as it continues to slip: "I think IBM is going to be our next sale," O'Higgins said.

By concentrating on the 30 Dow stocks, he gets plenty of liquidity. The 30 stocks in the Dow represent 20 percent of the value of all stocks, he noted. Average shares outstanding are 187 million per issue. Average assets are $18 billion and average revenue $20 billion per company, he said.

That's stability — but there is also enough volatility to produce action. "The average volatility — from the low to the high — is 53 percent each year. You can make money on that kind of movement," O'Higgins said.

Several Dow stocks take the round trip — they move from 30th in the standings (worst-performing) to first. And sometimes back again. Inco was 30th in 1977-1978 and then moved to first in the 1978-1981 market — then dropped back to 30th in 1981-1982 and is now a solid performer again.

Some of the so-called "defensive" stocks — companies making consumer necessities whose earnings tend to be stable — will drop in bull markets and then outperform the others in bear markets. Procter & Gamble, a classic defensive stock, is up just 3 percent this year, O'Higgins noted.

Condo goes cheap

Willowtree Condominiums, 2301 Cotton Flat Rd., Midland, was sold Tuesday at a public sale at the Midland County Court House for $2,700.

The new owner is S & S Glass & Hardware Inc, also of Midland. According to company spokesman Rick Shepherd, S & S has tried for the past seven months to collect for work done at the condominium complex from former owner Consolidated Structures of Texas.

Shepherd said earlier this year, S & S filed a mechanics and materials lien against the Las Vegas-based company requesting payment for its services. When the lien was not paid, S & S then petitioned the court to issue a judgement. When the judgement was not paid, the glass company then sought foreclosure of the property.

By law, Consolidated was notified of the pending sale and given time to respond. When no action was taken the condominimums were sold.

Shepherd said he was not exactly sure what S and S planed to do with the complex at this point and he expected the details would be worked out later this week.

Siberian gas line may not be needed

By BERNARD D. KAPLAN
Hearst European Correspondent

PARIS — The controversial Siberian natural gas pipeline, which provoked a political storm between America and its European allies two years ago, may not have been needed by Western Europe, after all.

France and West Germany, the two principal contractors for the gas, currently have so much fuel from other supply sources that they literally have no idea what to do with the Siberian gas, due to begin reaching them early next year.

President Reagan denounced the pipeline as likely to make Western Europe vulnerable to Soviet economic "blackmail." At one point, he sought to prevent U.S. technology from being employed to help build it. The episode stirred much transatlantic ill-feeling.

Now, a more than somewhat embarassed French government has decided to take delivery only of the minimum amount allowed under its contract with the Russians. The French will have to pay for the rest, but will insist that the Russians stockpile it, thus saving themselves a large storage bill. The authorities in Bonn are expected to take a similar position. France already has cut back by more than a quarter on other existing contracts that it has for Soviet gas.

"We have more sources of gas supply than we know what to do with," an unidentified official of the state-owned utility, French Gas, told a Paris newspaper last week. "It's an embarrassment of riches."

French Gas is to launch a publicity campaign in the new year to persuade the public to use more gas for home heating.

Complicating France's problem is its longterm and inflexible contract for Algerian natural gas. The Algerian product costs more, at least nominally, than Siberian gas. For political reasons, the French have felt it necessary to commit themselves to be the main customers of their former North African colony.

Whether Algerian gas really is more expensive than Siberian is open to argument. The latter's nominal price fails to calculate in the comparatively cheap financing accorded to the Russians by France and other Western participants in the pipeline's funding. Recent analyses have indicated the project's cost has fallen substantially on the Western European taxpayer.

In 1984, France is expected to take delivery of the minimal contract provision of 800 million cubic meters of gas from Siberia. Thereafter, as the pipeline moves into full operation by 1986, deliveries are expected to be at least one billion (cq) cubic meters less than the originally projected eight billion cubic meters annually.

By paying for their full contractual obligation but storing as much of the surplus as possible in Soviet tanks, the French not only will save storage costs, but can conduct an advantageous bookkeeping maneuver. Payment for the undelivered gas can be carried as part of France's overall balance of payments instead of its shakier commercial balance, thus giving a psychological boost to the weak franc.

Many Western European experts concede that if the existing world oil glut had been foreseen to be as semi-permanent as it now appears, their governments would have been less eager to rush into the Siberian project.

When the Bell System splits up, your phone bill won't.

Beginning January 1, different companies will provide different parts of your phone service. It's due to the break up of the Bell System.

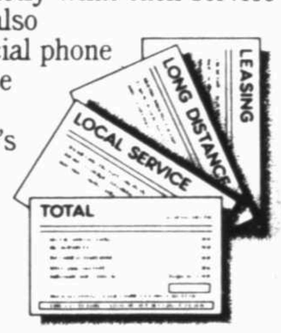
But you'll still get only one bill each month at your home or office.* Because all of the services previously provided by the Bell System will be billed through Southwestern Bell Telephone, except for purchases of new telephone equipment from AT&T.

So you'll continue to make just one payment each month to Southwestern Bell Telephone as you now do. But the way your phone bill looks will change. It'll have more pages.

For example, local service from Southwestern Bell Telephone will be on one page, long distance from other companies will be on another page and leased equipment on an additional page.

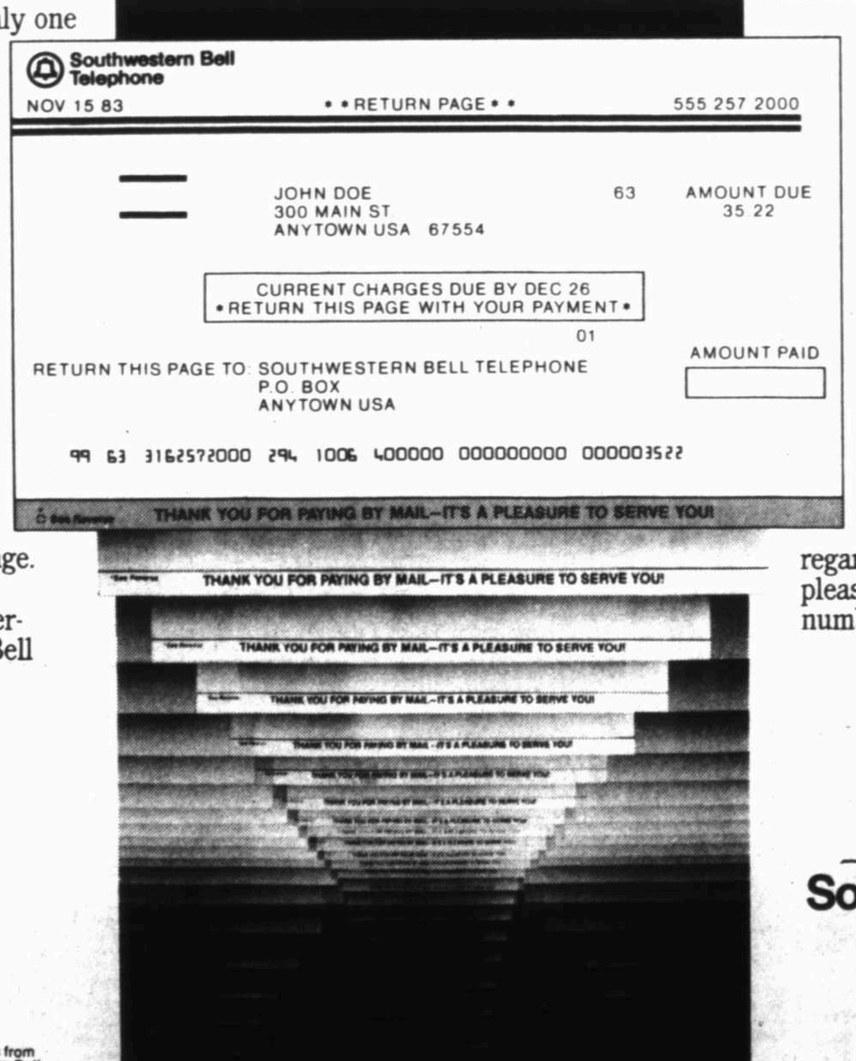
You'll also see a separate page for some long distance charges from Southwestern Bell Telephone. These would be for long distance calls made within your surrounding area which Southwestern Bell Telephone will continue to handle. Outside that area, though, long distance will be provided by other companies. And all long distance calls and charges will be itemized as always.

Separate company charges will show you exactly what each service costs. There also will be a special phone number on the first page of each company's section that you can call for questions about that part of your bill. That's important, because each company will be responsible for handling questions concerning its services.



Southwestern Bell Telephone has combined all of these separate service charges into one bill to make it easier for you. And to show you exactly how much each part of your total telephone service costs. It's one more way we're working to keep your telephone service, even with all the changes, what most people think is the best in the world.

If you would like to find out more about your new bill format, call 1 800 555-5000, toll free. We'll be glad to answer your questions. For questions regarding specific charges, please refer to the phone numbers on your bill.



*If you have long distance or other services from companies other than AT&T or Southwestern Bell Telephone, you will receive a separate bill from them.

Money talk

U.S. Rep. Ron Paul clamps down on the pink- and blue-colored "new money" being proposed by the Federal Reserve. The monetary system is a primary issue in Paul's campaign for the U.S. Senate seat being vacated by John Tower.

Candidate wants monetary reform

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

Ron Paul is interested in money, but not in the usual sense that dollars are needed to fund his political campaign.

The Republican candidate seeking his party's nomination in the U.S. Senate race wants to reform the monetary system. In his opinion, economic reform would follow.

Paul, a congressman from the Lake Jackson area, visited Midland for the first time Tuesday in his race for the seat being vacated by Sen. John Tower, R-Wichita Falls.

"Monetary policy is so fundamental for economic growth," said Paul, who later cited differences between him and other Republicans.

During a news conference he criticized a proposal by the Federal Reserve to change the country's paper money from its green color to pink and blue. "I called the Fed about a month ago and they said they had been studying it six years and the new paper currency would be released in 1985."

This money would have a metal strip which would allow officials to detect persons carrying large amounts out of the country.

The official explanation offered for changing the money's color, he said, is that it would stop counterfeiting. "But there's less counterfeiting today than 10 years ago. The Fed said they anticipate there will be more counterfeiting in the next few years," said Paul.

"There's something strange when you put metal strips on money. We've never had that."

The congressman sees this "tap" on money leaving the country as a means to restrict how much currency travelers can take with them. "We must not forget that in recent years, a number of free-world nations have begun to limit the transfer of money out of their country. I intend to monitor the plans for this new currency to guard against the American people losing any further control over their dollar."

Paul sees this as a government tactic to avoid balancing the budget. "I'd back up the currency with silver or gold. I want monetary reform. I want to reform the Federal Reserve system."

In looking at the Republican race, he charged that opponent Phil Gramm has nothing new to offer — "same old money system, same foreign policy. It's the same old cliches."

He declined to say anything about the third Republican candidate Rob Mosbacher, noting that he didn't know much about his views.

"My approach is different than the average conservative," said Paul. "I vote for welfare for the poor, but I'm against welfare for the rich and against foreign welfare. Conservatives are real good about condemning waste and fraud in the welfare program, but they don't do anything about expenditures for the rich."

He specifically cited a recent bailout given bankers.

Paul believes the United States should direct its foreign policy to providing security for America. "We have over-defended ourselves overseas. We're neglecting ourselves." He called for spending less money on the military and more on national defense.

He disagreed with President Reagan's stand to keep American troops in Lebanon. "We're in a position now that the longer we're there the more difficult it will be to leave. We don't even know who the enemy is."

He supported the three-year tax cut plan that was passed in 1981, but voted against the Gramm-Latta budget, saying it still had too many deficits.

The campaign against front-runner Gramm will be tough, but Paul said he thinks his chances for winning are good. And if he wins the nomination, Paul suggested the Democratic ticket might be headed up by Bob Krueger.

Paul is depending on the independent Democratic voter to give him the backing to win the race.

U.S. currency changes have been proposed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Picture, if you will, George Washington winking as you move a dollar bill from side to side.

A blue dollar bill, that is.

Woven with metal threads carrying information in secret code.

Our currency for the 1990s?

The mental picture goes well beyond what the government is willing to say about plans to change America's folding money in the next few years. And it's probably wilder than what which will actually happen.

But changes are indeed coming for familiar old U.S. currency — the first substantial changes in more than half a century. And the possibilities apparently do include colors, coded threads and "optical variables" that change shape when viewed from different angles.

Though officials are secretive about proposed alterations, they are open about the cause: a fear that sophisticated new photocopying machines could soon make counterfeiting much easier than it has been.

Need groceries on the way home from work? Before leaving, just run off some cash on the office copier. Federal officials, studying the problem for several years, don't think that's far-fetched in light of expected technological advances in copiers.

And former U.S. Treasurer Angela Buchanan, whose signature still appears on new currency, real or counterfeit, said in an interview before she left Washington earlier this year, "When you bring counterfeiters into the office-boy level, you really have problems."

Federal Reserve Chairman Paul Volcker, who is responsible for guarding the credibility of the U.S. monetary system, said recently the threat seemed to be genuine and "the desire to keep ahead of that technology may point to some technical devices" in American currency.

Treasury spokesmen say no decisions have been made on how to change paper money. And they play down the possibility of drastic changes, noting that the government wouldn't want do anything to lower the respect U.S. currency commands.

However, a decision is close enough that officials felt the need to show a few congressmen prototype bills in a secret meeting last month.

Other changes being considered, according to sources in the government and out:

—Holograms, which produce three-dimensional pictures, or plastic strips that would show different images when viewed from different directions. A winking George Washington would never be seriously considered, but one possibility is changeable wording on the Federal Reserve seal on the left front of bills.

—The tinted backgrounds, though Treasury spokesman Robert Levine says the idea of brighter colors was discarded after being "kicked around."

—Coded, metallic threads that special machines could read, thus detecting counterfeits. However, that wouldn't be much help to people who casually pay out and accept cash every day.

Levine and other officials have said that a switchover to new currency would take about two years after final decisions are made.

Man saves co-worker's life

A co-worker is credited with saving the life of an oilfield hand who fell from a drilling rig near the Midland-Martin County line early Tuesday morning.

"It looked that way to me," an unidentified employee of the Odessa-based Lewis Casing Crew company said in a telephone interview Tuesday afternoon.

Paul Gwinn, a 25-year-old Lewis employee, was working on the rig about 3 a.m. when he lost his balance and fell about 40 feet.

Fellow employee James Koval, 26, also of Odessa, broke the fall, however.

He was listed in fair condition at Midland Memorial Hospital Tuesday afternoon with a broken pelvis, a broken shoulder and possible internal injuries.

Koval was released following treatment for a contusion to his left knee.

Films teach difference in 'OK, not OK touches'

Rape Crisis Center sponsors program

By RHONDA RIGENHAGEN
Staff Writer

When it comes to sexual abuse, "children need to know, the best defense is knowledge," Vicki Webb told about 40 parents at Santa Rita Elementary Tuesday night.

The assistant director of the Rape Crisis Center was explaining the program used to teach elementary children the difference between acceptable and unacceptable touches by adults.

The audience indicated approval of the two animated film strips — "Speak Up, Say No" for kindergarten through third grades and "For Pete's Sake Tell" for fourth- through sixth-graders. The films, starring Penelope mouse, are designed to teach children to recognize "not OK" touch and encourage them to report it.

"If you receive a touch that makes you feel uncomfortable or really confused, you need to tell someone," Ms. Webb tells the children.

While the films skirt the issue of what is considered unacceptable, in the following discussion children are told those body parts covered by a swimsuit are private and should not be touched.

By using an uncle and a neighbor as examples, the films also dispel the myth that molesters are usually strangers. "Sometimes, it's people we think we can trust," the children are told. "We still need to say no. It's your body and it's your right to say what touches you want."

"Eighty to 85 percent of all cases are committed by someone they know," Ms. Webb said. "Over 50 percent come from fathers, stepfathers and guardian figures." She said of the 91 cases of sexual assault reported to the Rape Crisis Center last year, half the victims were under 17 years of age and the youngest was 1 year old.

Parents also need to be aware that such abuse is usually not an isolated incident, she added. "Too many times it's someone who has easy access to a child, takes his time to develop a relationship and comes back and does it over and over. The child is an easy victim, because they know the child won't tell."

Words like rape and molest are not used during the presentation and the speakers do not represent themselves as being from the Rape Crisis Center. "We never try to frighten the children. Scare tactics are not what we go for," Ms. Webb said.

Through animation and rhymes the films convey the confusion, doubt, fear, shame and guilt children may feel when touched inappropriately. It encourages them to discuss the situation with a parent, teacher or someone they know and trust.

"The person who can make or break a situation is the parent," she said, explaining a parent must stay calm and find out as much information as possible if a child reveals he has been abused. "Anger or tears may cause the child to clam up. Most of all you need to support your child.

"It's very important to report the crime," she continued. "By reporting, you don't have to prosecute. It's important to keep this on file because the abusers don't do this just once. If a child is blocked off from them they'll go to another child and another and another." State law requires suspected child abuse to be reported to child welfare services.

She said it is also a mistake to force children to show affection to a relative or friend. "Children need to understand they have to rely on their instincts about people and about situations. It's very important not to undermine these feelings. Abusers are looking for children who feel they have to do whatever the adult wants."

Ms. Webb said the program is necessary because "it's something people don't want to deal with at all. They think if they don't think about it and ignore it, it won't happen. But statistics show one out of every four girls and one out of nine boys will be molested, fondled, raped or attempted raped before reaching 18."

The films have been shown on several elementary and private school campuses since the program began last year, and the Center hopes to show it on all campuses. Principals decide whether to allow the preview and subsequent showing, and Ms. Webb said none has turned them down.

Students must bring signed consent forms from parents before being allowed to view the films, and parents also may attend the showing.

Downtown Midland won't be decorated this year

If downtown workers have been waiting on edge of their chairs for the Christmas decorations that adorn the sides of street lights to go up, they can wait until next year.

The decorations will stay packed in their boxes this year.

The Midland Chamber of Commerce has been responsible for putting up the decorations in past years. But Grant Billingsley, executive vice president for the chamber, said the cost was prohibitive this year.

"It costs too much money," he said, "and I don't think anyone ever knew we did it."

Cost for putting up the decorations ran about $5,000, he said, and the chamber decided the money should go into other programs.

"It's one of those hard decisions we had to make," said Billingsley.

Odessa bank has new president

ODESSA — First State Bank of Odessa, which was National Bank of Odessa before it was declared insolvent Sept. 30, announced a new president and chief executive officer at a Tuesday morning press conference here. Also reported was the request by First State Bank to the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. for an extension on reviewing loans.

James J. Atkins, 48, assumed his new position Monday after moving to Odessa from a similar position at Citizens Bank in Irving, one of the banks under Independent Bankshares Inc., owner of the Odessa bank.

"I'm excited about coming to the Permian Basin," said Atkins. "You'll find that we're going to become a very important and vital part of the community."

Defining the new bank's position in considering loans as "conservative," Atkins suggested that First State will continue to make loans to energy-related companies.

"I think we'd be foolish to take the position of not making qualified loans," said the new president.

Brad Stephens, president of Independent Bank Shares Inc., said, "Jim is a West Texan, a native of Plainview. He knows West Texans, their heritage, their problems, their resources and their potential. He is

Defendant blesses jury for declaring him able to stand trial

By LAWRENCE BUDD
Staff Writer

ODESSA — A man calling himself Immanuel Prince and Prince Michael was judged mentally competent Tuesday to stand trial in an Ector County district court.

The defendant, whose legal name is Michael Oscar Bradbury, blessed the jury that determined he was mentally competent in legal terms — a decision which means the defendant will face prosecution on charges of rape, aggravated kidnapping and two residential burglaries — rather than first undergoing treatment for mental illness.

On reading the verdict overriding arguments by defense attorneys that Bradbury needed psychiatric help, the defendant burst out, "Hallelujah, excuse me, but bless you."

Attorneys Mark May and Bill Bowden Jr. tried unsuccessfully to convince jurors that their client had offered them no help in preparing for the Tuesday afternoon hearing in the 161st District Court or for any upcoming trial on the felony counts. They argued that until Bradbury was able to answer their questions, they would be unable to properly advise him.

But felony prosecutor Anthony Foster insisted that "he's using it (the legal proceedings) as a soap box." Len Wilder, an investigator working on the case, said Bradbury believed he had been instructed to commit the alleged offenses July 7 to provide a forum for his religious beliefs.

Admitting that "Sure, the trial's going to be tough, tough on both sides, and sure, he's a bit of a nut," Foster told jurors that Bradbury possessed a rational and factual understanding of the proceedings and sufficient "present ability" to stand trial.

The defense went on record, outside the jury's presence, that they had advised Bradbury not to testify. Bowden took the stand and told the jury that, even before being appointed to represent Bradbury, he had passed his cell and heard the defendant preaching and answering his own questions.

"I have never been able to communicate with Mr. Bradbury about the facts of this case," said Bowden, explaining that his client always turned their interviews back to his religious beliefs — which neither defense attorney believed they understood.

"Generally, he does not do what I or Mike tell him to do," said Bowden. The defendant took the stand — against the lawyers' advice — wearing a jail uniform, with a pair of handcuffs dangling from his belt.

Referring to pages from a legal notebook, his felony indictment and other small scraps of paper, Bradbury said he had lists of names covering the front and back of six legal sheets of witnesses that he felt would aid his defense.

Bradbury questioned why the defense had not contacted any of the people on the lists and estimated that 900 subpoenas would be necessary to bring them together. Apparently, the defendant did not have any addresses, but was prepared to give investigators directions to the residence of each witness, many whom he admitted knowing long before the alleged offenses occurred.

The 56-story RepublicBank Center, the third-tallest skyscraper in Houston, is being dedicated this week. Unlike other rectangular or cylindrical buildings in the city, the new structure is of Renaissance design, with copper spires and a red granite exterior.

RepublicBank building adds to Houston skyline

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston's 20th century glass and steel skyline this week is welcoming a throwback to another era with the grand opening of the Renaissance-style 56-story RepublicBank Center.

And while the copper-spired roofline atop Napolean red granite walls adds a distinctive touch to the city's rectangular and cylindrical chorus line of skyscrapers, it also is contributing to the glut of office space drowning Houston.

According to a recent survey by The Office Network Inc., a Houston-based corporation of 21 independent commercial real estate firms in major American cities, Houston leads the nation in vacant office space with 38.4 million square feet. That's more than double the amount available in Los Angeles, Dallas and Chicago, which rank second, third and fourth, respectively, in vacant office space.

"Buildings begun during the height of activity (in the energy boom days of the early 1980s) are completed and now adding more existing space to the market," according to the Office Network survey of Houston. The problem is compounded by companies delaying expansion plans or tightening their existing space, the survey says.

The RepublicBank Center, with 1.2 million square feet of space, is about 75 percent leased, says Kevin Shanahan, assistant project manager for Gerald D. Hines Interests, developer of the building. Construction began in 1981. He refused to put a price tag on the structure, which encompasses an entire city block, and, in fact, is built around an existing Western Union building.

"We are giving no cost figures," Shanahan said. "We consider that confidential."

He also refused to provide an estimate for what it costs to lease space, which averages $25 per square foot in downtown Houston.

"It varies by term and space," he said. "We only provide those figures to people serious about leasing."

The prime tenant in the new building is RepublicBank Houston, the city's fifth-largest bank with more than $1.8 billion in assets. The bank is a member of RepublicBank Corp., which has 37 members banks across Texas and more than $18 billion in assets, making it the second largest bank holding company in the state.

The idea for the new structure came as RepublicBank, formerly housed in the downtown Tenneco Building, was looking for a way to boost its visibility.

"We really didn't have any recognition," explains bank spokeswoman Marilyn Pharr. "There was not even a sign outside the Tenneco Building."

She said bank executives "decided it had to be something distinctive but didn't want to be in the race for the highest building."

Texas Commerce Bank has that distinction downtown, with its 75-story Texas Commerce Tower. Allied Bank is 65 stories. RepublicBank is third at 56.

The design, from New York architects Philip Johnson and John Burgee, was the third choice of RepublicBank Chairman Ronald Brown, who has spent much time in Europe and "likes cathedrals and something that makes a statement," Ms. Pharr says.

"We offer a stimulating workplace for our employees," according to Brown.

Indeed, the 850 RepublicBank employees, who occupy the bottom 15 floors of the building, are surrounded by an extensive collection covering four centuries of classical and contemporary art.

an experienced banker, serving important posts in Irving and Fort Worth."

Stephens has been president of First State since Independent Bankshares acquired the financial institution.

Atkins suggested that repurchase of 50 percent of the $52 million in loans taken over by the FDIC after National Bank was declared insolvent would be a target number. The bank expects to hear within the next 10 days whether it will receive the same extensions on reviewing loans offered to RepublicBank First National of Midland by the federal agency.

Stephens indicated that local FDIC officials had recommended the bank receive these same provisions, under which the government would take over any loans that were not being paid off within one year off according to agreements.

"I think we're at the beginning of an economic recovery," said Stephens, predicting the economy is on the upswing, but should not be expected to reach its previous heights.

"But I think that is healthy. I think we'll enjoy a more stable economy," said Stephens.

Biologist trying to help bats' image

DALLAS (AP) — Dr. Donna Howell would like to put in a good word for bats.

Bats need it. Bats have an image problem.

Ask yourself, what form does Dracula take when he goes in search of a midnight snack? What shape are the devil's wings? What flies out of hell and hangs around in a belfry? What carries rabies, gets tangled up in your hair and is all together loathesome?

Not a pretty picture, and not a particularly accurate one either, according to Ms. Howell, the Floyd B. James Trustee professor of biology at Southern Methodist University, where she is sometimes known as Bat Woman.

NEW MEXICO-BORN, she got her Ph.D. in biology at the University of Arizona and then went to Princeton for postgraduate work, studying bats and bat sonar for the Navy. So she knows bats inside and out.

In the past few years, Ms. Howell and her bats have starred in a BBC documentary. They have been featured in national magazines. Recently, she took her bats to the University of Dallas for a lecture. Later, she read a paper on bats during a conference at the Chihuahuan Desert Research Institute in Alpine.

Nobody likes bats very much, but everyone seems to find them interesting.

According to Ms. Howell, there are from 1,000 to 1,200 species of bats in the order "Chiroptera" (from the Green, meaning "hand wing," since the bat wing is a modification of hand and finger bones.)

"The earliest bat fossils, which are 60 million years old, look like perfectly good, modern bats," said Ms. Howell.

NEXT TO RODENTS, bats are the second most common mammal.

"If you were to line up all the mammals in the world, every fourth or fifth one would be a bat. It's the most diverse group of mammals. The order of bats does more jobs, fills more ecological roles or niches than any other group of mammals," she said.

To human beings, the most important bats are the bug eaters.

"Bats are more important than birds for insect control," said Ms. Howell. "Most of the really economically injurious bugs are nocturnal."

She said the brown bat, the kind that lives in attics, consumes twice its weight in moths a night.

"A colony of little brown bats — the number a grown man could hold in his hand — is responsible for 4,000 grams of insects a night. That's nine pounds," Ms. Howell said.

A CAVE NEAR San Antonio is known to harbor 20 million Mexican free-tail bats, she said, and the Congress Avenue bridge in Austin is home to another million.

If you discover a bat flapping around your house, Ms. Howell says not to panic.

"Open the window, shut the door and leave," she advises. "The bat will find its way out. If you can't do that, get a big Turkish towel and when the bat lands on something, gently gather it up, take it outside and shake it out. The bat cannot bite you through a thick towel. Most bats in Texas have a hard time breaking the skin."

If you want to get them out of your attic, ecologically the safest way to do it is alter their microenvironment.

"You can put a fan up there for a few weeks to dry it out, or an air conditioner to cool it down. Your bats are going to leave and eat their nine pounds of bugs over somebody else's garden," she said.

"EXTERMINATORS USE very dangerous poisons and they charge an arm and a leg. Then, too, with any animal you poison, the animal doesn't die right away. And while it is dying, that's the time it's flapping around out on the sidewalk where it's likely to bite your dog or your child."

No wild animal should be picked up, but tales of bats and rabies have been exaggerated, says Ms. Howell. She says only about three-tenths of 1 percent of all bats brought into public health departments turn out to be rabid.

Other than the vampire bat, "we have no evidence at all that bats make gratuitous attacks on humans," Ms. Howell said.

So where did bats get such a bad reputation?

"Bad press — movies and horror stories. Also, I think people are a little suspicious of nocturnal animals. If an animal was any good, it wouldn't be skulking around at night. This is not true in the Orient where bats are symbols of long life and good health.

White pushing state citrus crop

WESLACO (AP) — Texas could broaden its economic base by marketing the state's citrus crop much more widely, Gov. Mark White says.

White on Tuesday told a convention of Valley Interfaith, a coalition of church groups, that the state cannot fall "in the trap" that has crippled the economy in the North and East.

The Rio Grande Valley's produce should be marketed throughout the nation and "to the rest of the world," because the state's economic base needs to be broadened beyond oil and gas, White said.

The governor also told the group that he was committed to raising teacher salaries, covering farmworkers with workmen's compensation and reforming the manner in which the state's school districts are financed.

White was applauded repeatedly Tuesday when he said he was committed to working on issues raised by Valley Interfaith in a McAllen meeting last June 26, and the new "initiative for regional economic development" proposed in a Tuesday night by Ofelia de los Santos of La Joya.

Defendant blesses jury for decision

A past history in mental and penal institutions included a 225-day stay in Rusk State Hospital ending in March 1983, during which Bradbury was treated with medication for schizophrenia. He was released and tried for aggravated assault in Conroe, for which he received probation.

Bradbury had stopped taking medication for his condition soon after leaving the state's care, and had not resumed the medicine since being put in jail.

Exuberant with the jury's verdict, Bradbury had handcuffed himself during closing arguments, during which his attorneys insisted that medical treatment would be best for the defendant and society.

The state's lone witness was a doctor from the Permian Basin Mental Health and Mental Retardation Center in Midland who testified that, at their August interview, he had judged Bradbury mentally ill, but not to the extent that he was not competent to stand trial.

District Judge R.L. McKim cut short Bradbury's planned testimony after both sides closed their questioning of the defendant. But not before Bradbury assured the jury "I'm still the Prince Michael."

"Do you want to go to trial?" asked Foster.

"Please," answered Bradbury.

Bradbury will stand trial in Ector County.

U.S. currency changes proposed

Apparently the new bills would be printed and injected into the economy gradually with old bills continuing to be legal tender.

Secret Service officials, responsible for fighting counterfeiting, have suggested such a drawn-out process could be a problem since bogus copies of the old bills could still be turned out. But Levine said no sudden call-in of old currency was likely.

Since the size of U.S. currency was reduced in 1929, only minor changes have been made, such as the addition of the words "In God We Trust" three decades ago.

Farmers urged to sign up to receive corn

Farmers who are located in disaster-designated counties and who are eligible to purchase lower-grade Commodity Credit Corporation corn to feed their livestock or poultry are urged to sign up at their county Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service office. The sign-up period will end Dec. 14.

The corn is priced at 75 percent of the 1983 basic county loan rate in the county where it is stored. Nationwide, about 27 million bushels of grade 4, 5 and Sample corn are available from CCC. Farmers purchasing the corn are responsible for transporting it.

Authorization for the CCC corn sales came with President Reagan's signature last week to a measure passed by Congress dealing primarily with the dairy and tobacco programs.

In addition to being located in a USDA-designated disaster county, a farmer or rancher eligible to purchase the corn must also have insufficient feed on hand to maintain foundation livestock and poultry through the end of a 90-day feeding period. The peiod begins when a producer applies for the assistance. The maximum amount of corn allowed to be purchased will be 10 pounds of feed per day per animal unit times the number of days in the feeding period.

Ansel Adams film to be shown at museum

"Ansel Adams: Photographer," a film biography of one of America's best known photographers and conservation enthusiasts, will be shown at the Museum of the Southwest," 1705 W. Missouri Ave., Thursday at 7:30 p.m.

This film, which takes viewers to the locations of some of Adams' most famous photographs, includes conversations with artist Georgia O'Keeffe and photographic historian Beaumont Newhall as well as Adams' own view on photography.

The museum is sponsoring this film in conjunction with its current exhibit, "Mountains to the Sea: The Life of the Rio Grande." This photographic essay exhibit is the result of a 14-year odyssey by Southwest artist and environmentalist Jim Bones, who studied and recorded the Rio Grande from its origins in the mountains of Colorado to the Gulf of Mexico.

The 44-photographs show the detail, brillance and use of color for which Bones is famous. The exhibit will be on display in the Stables Gallery through Jan. 3. Museum hours are Tuesday through Saturday 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. and Sunday 2 to 5 p.m.

Democratic candidates visit Houston

HOUSTON (AP) — Texas Democrats plunked down $500 for the opportunity to hear three candidates for the Democratic presidential nomination say in three minutes why Ronald Reagan should be replaced.

The Rev. Jesse Jackson and U.S. Sens. Gary Hart and John Glenn visited Houston on Tuesday as part of a two-day national fundraising drive.

The fundraising swing, which began Monday in Washington, made a breakfast stop Tuesday morning in Atlanta, then headed for Albuquerque after the visit to Houston.

Another entourage, including Walter Mondale, George McGovern and Sen. Ernest Hollings, was in Chicago on Tuesday before linking up with the others in New Mexico.

Reubin Askew, originally slated to travel with the southern group, had to bow out because of a death in his family, party chairman Charles T. Manatt said. The party's other presidential candidate, Sen. Alan Cranston of California, declined to participate because of a dispute over selection of convention delegates from Iowa and New Hampshire.

Jackson also said Tuesday he was unhappy with the delegate selection process, and Manatt said a meeting would be held in a week or two to try to iron out the differences.

"There are a number of restrictions in the rules that tend to lock the majority out and lock the minority in," said Jackson, the only one of the trio to draw a standing ovation. "The fact of the matter is that it is tilted to those with the most money to put in the campaign."

Jackson, who only recently entered the race officially, said his opposition to the rules "was not a personal concern.

"If we make room for the majority of the party, it will be victory," he said. "This is a time for us to address this matter.

"It should be seen not in any way as a threat. It should be seen as a therapy, a chance to open up."

Jackson's complaint is that the delegate selection does not accurately represent "female, Hispanics, blacks, Asian and the young."

Manatt said, however, that under the party rules, 50 percent of the delegates to the party's convention next summer in San Francisco would be women, another 30 percent would be black and Hispanic.

"The meeting in a week or two should be interesting," Manatt said.

Glenn said it was getting late to change the rules, with only 90 days remaining before the Iowa caucuses. But while the rules were established before he entered the race, "I'm willing to look at them. Give us rules and we'll play by them," he said.

Manatt appealed to those attending the luncheon to spend $10,000 to become a presidential trustee, which is the title the party is bestowing on those who make the contribution. A trustee, he said, would get seating privileges at the convention and have access to the convention floor.

Parents can bid on dolls

EL PASO (AP) — Frustrated parents who have tried unsuccessfully to buy a Cabbage Patch doll may be in luck — if they are willing to pay dearly for the privilege of putting one of the homeless waifs under the Christmas tree.

Lonnie Peterson, the wife of an airman at Holloman Air Force Base, has purchased two of the dolls at their $20 to $25 retail price and says she will sell them to the highest bidder.

Bidding starts at $50 — double the retail price, she said.

The dolls, which are come complete with adoption papers, are in short supply and have triggered near-riots among would-be buyers in some department stores.

MS. PETERSON wouldn't say Tuesday what the highest bid has been so far, but she told the El Paso Times that $50 probably won't be enough to buy a doll.

"I got them from a friend," Ms. Peterson said.

Ms. Peterson's friend had ordered the dolls from a catalog, but bought others before the catalog order arrived, she said.

Although Ms. Peterson has three children, including a 4-year-old daughter, she said keeping the dolls didn't cross her mind.

"(My daughter) wants one that walks and talks and these don't do either," she said. "I'm interested in making sure the Cabbage Patch dolls have a good home."

SO IS THE doll's manufacturer, Coleco Industries of Hartford, Conn., said company spokesman Mort Handel. But Handel added that Coleco prefers the dolls be found through stores.

Handel said that people are reselling the dolls at higher prices in some areas of the country, although the practice has not yet been reported to be a nationwide trend.

"I think that's terrible," he said.

Ms. Peterson said she has had a lot of response to classified newspaper ads in El Paso and may put ads in other papers.

Despite her financial success, Ms. Peterson said she doesn't understand why the dolls are so popular.

"I'm baffled, really," she said. "I guess people are looking at them as more than dolls."

Prosecutor denies Dallas DA's office will review Geter case

DALLAS (AP) — A prosecutor has denied a claim by an NAACP attorney that the Dallas County district attorney's office has agreed to review its handling of the case of a black engineer serving a life sentence on a robbery conviction.

Prosecutor Ken Carden on Tuesday accused the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People of using Lenell Geter's case to raise money without actually being concerned about Geter's welfare.

"There will be no reopening of the case, because there were no discrepancies" in the way it was handled, Carden said.

Geter received a life sentence in October 1982 for the $31 robbery of a Kentucky Fried Chicken restaurant in the Dallas suburb of Balch Springs. Five witnesses identified Geter as the gunman, but nine of Geter's co-workers at E-Systems Inc. in Greenville testified he was at work the day the robbery took place.

Despite the fact that Geter, who was recruited by E-Systems in 1982 from South Carolina, had no prior criminal record, the jury was told that he had a bad reputation and was suspected of committing more than 30 robberies in South Carolina.

Geter's case and that of his former roommate, Anthony Williams, who was acquitted on a similar charge last month, were the subject of a report on CBS-TV's "60 Minutes" Sunday. On that program, two people were interviewed who said they could specifically vouch for Geter's whereabouts at the time of the robbery.

"I told them (Lenell Geter's attorneys) if they brought us evidence that convinced our investigator" of Geter's possible innocence, "we would take another look at the case. They said they certainly wanted to get with my investigator, but they never came back. Instead they just immediately went out and had a press conference."

— Dallas prosecutor Ken Carden

Carden said he talked to NAACP attorney George Hairston and Dallas attorney Ed Sigel, both of whom represent Geter, shortly before noon Tuesday.

"I told them if they brought us evidence that convinced our investigator" of Geter's possible innocence, "we would take another look at the case," Carden said. "They said they certainly wanted to get with my investigator, but they never came back. Instead they just immediately went out and had a press conference."

Hairston told reporters that Carden had "indicated he would now begin an internal review" of the official handling of Geter's case.

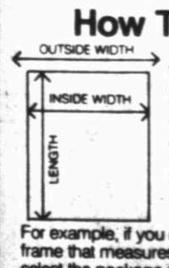
How To Measure



If installing inside window frame, measure width and length.
If installing outside window frame, add desired overlap, such as molding width, to inside width.
If there is no molding, recommended overlap is 1½" per side.
For example, if you are installing inside a window frame that measures 23½" wide and 56" long, select the package marked 23" to 23⅛" wide x 64" long. Blind lengths can be shortened at home.

Former bank officer sentenced to prison for embezzling $10,000

WICHITA FALLS (AP) — A former trust officer at InterFirst Bank Wichita Falls was sentenced Tuesday to three years in prison for embezzling $10,000 from the bank.

Greg James, 29, pleaded guilty in September to a charge of misapplying fiduciary trust funds May 25. In return for the plea, prosecutors dismissed charges that he embezzled another $90,000.

James said he took the money to pay off some gambling debts.

U.S. District Judge Mary Lou Robinson told James after sentence was passed, "I am not going to grant you probation Mr. James. What you committed is a very serious offense. It involves what is by any standard a great deal of money."

Horse auction to benefit GOP

AUSTIN (AP) — A horse auction to help finance campaigns by Texas Republican candidates for the Legislature and important county races has been scheduled for Saturday.

Former Gov. William Clements, who has donated a horse for the auction, is honorary chairman of the event, which will be held at Sutton Farms near Gunter, about 40 miles north of Dallas.

Clements said in a statement from GOP state party headquarters that about 20 horses and 20 stud services have been donated.

Mattox's pretrial hearing postponed

AUSTIN (AP) — A hearing to consider pretrial motions in Attorney General Jim Mattox's commercial bribery case has been postponed again, until Jan. 12, says the Travis County district clerk's office.

A spokesman for the district attorney said Tuesday the delay was requested by the defense to allow more time to prepare motions for the hearing before State District Judge Mace Thurman.

No date has been set for trial of the felony charge in which Mattox is accused of trying to ruin a Houston law firm's public bond business unless the firm stopped trying to question Mattox's sister.

Authorities negotiate boats' release

PORT ISABEL (AP) — American and Mexican authorities have been negotiating for the release of two Texas shrimp boats and their crews who were seized after they allegedly fished in Mexican waters, the U.S. Coast Guard says.

The boats — the Santa Monica and the Charmaine — were seized Monday after being chased about 30 miles back into U.S. waters, officials said.

Negotiations were being conducted Tuesday in Tampico, Mexico, for their release, said Coast Guard Petty Officer John Anjain.

Bank to underwrite bond sales

AUSTIN (AP) — The Veterans Land Board accepted Tuesday a 8.96 percent bid from the First Boston Corp. of New York to underwrite the sale of $85 million in bonds for the Texas Housing Assistance Program.

The housing program, created by the recent Legislature, provides $20,000 loans to eligible Texas veterans for home loans.

Richard Keahey, bonds and investments director for the Veterans Land Board, said initial indications are that pre-sale orders for the bonds will be more than $60 million.

Former deputy sheriff, bail bondsmen to be sentenced

HOUSTON (AP) — A former deputy sheriff and two former bail bondsmen accused of setting up roadside "marijuana traps" to steal from unsuspecting motorists have pleaded guilty to reduced charges.

Gary Parker, 22, a former reserve deputy in San Jacinto County and the son of former Sheriff James C. "Humpy" Parker, pleaded guilty Tuesday to one count of conspiracy to deprive the civil rights of a motorist.

James L. Browder was prepared to plead guilty to one count of being an accessory after the fact to conspiracy and Herbert R. Atwood was prepared to plead guilty to one count of misprison of a felony, or failure to report a felony.

The trio will be sentenced Feb. 17 by U.S. District Judge Robert O'Conor.

Parker could be sentenced to a maximum of 10 years in prison and fined $10,000. Browder could face a five-year, $5,000 maximum punishment and Atwood could face three years in prison and a $500 fine.

Former deputy Robert Rice, also charged in the case, had his case severed from the other defendants Tuesday. No new date was set for his trial.

The four men were charged with conspiring to violate the civil rights of several motorists.

A federal indictment accused the four men of operating a lucrative "marijuana trap" to take drugs, weapons and money from drivers they stopped.

Parker's father, "Humpy" Parker, also is charged in the case but will be tried separately.

The elder Parker was earlier convicted of civil rights violations stemming from water torturing prisoners to gain confessions and was sentenced to 10 years in federal prison.

A woman whose car had been stopped by the younger Parker testified earlier that she had been ordered to submit to a strip search.

Kerry Thomas, 22, testified Gary Parker wrestled with her beside her car during a 1981 incident and tried to remove her clothing.

"He told me I had drugs and told me to give them up," Ms. Thomas testified. "I told him that if he thought I had drugs to take me downtown and have a female officer search me."

Fire-damaged chemical plant will be rebuilt

HIGHLANDS (AP) — A chemical plant gutted by a series of explosions and fire that forced about 2,000 nearby residents to leave their homes will be rebuilt, a company spokesman says.

Joe Dollar, a spokesman for Hi-Port Industries Inc., estimated damage to the plant at about $20 million. Dollar said several warehouses and the company's corporate offices were destroyed in the blaze.

The firm will begin limited production within 10 days, Dollar said.

Dollar said no herbicides or jet fuel were destroyed and no determination had been made as to what caused the explosions.

The blasts started Monday night and by early Tuesday about 70 percent of the plant had been reduced to charred rubble, Baytown firefighter Gilbert Contreras said.

There were no fatalities in the blast that raged out of control for 3½ hours, but five firefighters and two police officers suffered minor injuries, officials said.

Electrical power, turned off during the height of the fire, was restored early Tuesday, officials said, and schools opened on schedule.

The inferno burned about seven acres of the 34-acre plant, which manufactures jet fuels, insecticide and anti-freeze, said Harris County Sheriff's Department spokesman Ed Macaluso.

Many residents who left their homes in the community 20 miles east of Houston parked on streets outside the evacuation area and sat on the car hoods, eating and drinking and watching the flames.

Department of Public Safety Sgt. Rick Rose estimated that about 2,000 residents within two miles of the plant left the area because of the threat of toxic fumes being created by the blaze.

Firemen at the Hi-Port Industries chemical plant at Highland continue to pour water on the fire that broke out at the plant Monday night. Explosions and flames caused 2,000 nearby residents to leave their homes.

Jury says Hooten competent

DENTON (AP) — Jurors have decided for the second time that Robert James Hooten is competent to stand trial for the killing of a Flower Mound man.

Another jury decided on Oct. 25 that Hooten was competent to stand trial for the July 27 shotgun slaying of Michael Eugene Maughan, who prsecutors said was the boyfriend of Hooten's ex-wife, Jerry Ann Hooten of Lewisville.

But defense attorney Bob Scofield asked for the second competency hearing on Nov. 28 after the prosecution had rested and Hooten took the stand but refused to testify.

He told Scofield he would not testify in the presence of a visiting class of Denton high school students.

THE TRUE TASTE IS IN THE GIVING

Where do holidays begin? Most often in the home, but more specifically in the warmth of the family kitchen. Looking ahead — cooking ahead — that's the sign of the times. So, it's logical to select from your roster of traditional recipes, those that can be made in advance and stored until serving time — or, giving time. Glance at your gift list; earmark a few homemade goodies to be wrapped with loving care and given with delicious best wishes.

Simple, yet sophisticated glistening glass-containers are a glamorous complement to these "sweet successes." Novice or expert, you'll find inspiration in this small treasury of recipes selected from the Baker's chocolate and coconut heritage collection. Among them is a contemporary granola snack recipe to appeal to people "on the go."

Be direct. Get to the heart of holiday greetings with deep, rich chocolate. Bake batches of irresistible nutty Mint-Glazed Brownies — fudgey brownies with a fabulous history. As far back as the early Forties, experienced bakers relied on the basic brownie recipe that appeared on packages of bars of unsweetened chocolate. Then, along came a variation in the Sixties — a butter cream glaze topped with a fancied up "design" of chocolate drizzle.

Pack a tantalizing assortment of coconut macaroons in a sparkling glass container to use long after contents have been savored. Coconut macaroons enjoy a heritage dating back to the early Thirties when "just plain" macaroons and a chocolate variation appeared in Baker's coconut and chocolate recipe books. Most recent of variations — Fruited Macaroons developed in 1980 — combines chopped mixed candied fruit in a flaked coconut mixture.

Tote tea bread in a basket to Grandmother's house! Wrap it on a serving dish or colorful breadboard for a gift that goes beyond eating enjoyment. Toasted Coconut-Banana Bread, a recipe developed in 1954, continues to be a favorite, boasting a delicate batter with moist, creamy flaked coconut. Bake several loaves; wrap and store, because the bread grows more mellow over a day or two.

To balance these heritage recipes, a contemporary Coconut Granola Snack will appeal to those who love healthful out-of-hand snacks. You'll work like a whiz preparing this one-bowl mixture which includes flaked coconut, dried fruit, honey and sesame seed. Packed in glass jars, the snack will add excitement to your bevy of gifts.

Of the time-honored heritage chocolate recipes specifying German's sweet chocolate, two deserve to be in this cache of holiday specials. Toffee Squares (not shown), a rich cookie dough glazed with sweet cooking chocolate, and Brownie Drops (not shown), cookies with fudgey centers and glossy tops, hail from the Sixties group of recipes.

Yesterday meets today in a collection of jewel-box recipes designed for celebrating. A gentle reminder: it begins with you in the warmth of the family kitchen.

Coconut Granola Snack

2-2/3 cups flaked coconut
1 cup quick cooking rolled oats
1/4 cup firmly packed brown sugar
1/4 cup chopped pitted dried prunes
1/4 cup chopped dried apricots
2 tablespoons sesame seed
1/4 cup oil
1/4 cup honey
1/4 cup seedless raisins

In a large bowl, mix coconut with cereal, brown sugar, prunes, apricots and sesame seed. Combine oil and honey in saucepan; bring to a boil over medium heat. Pour over cereal mixture; mix to coat well. Spread evenly in 13x9-inch pan. Bake at 325° for 20 minutes, stirring several times to toast evenly. Sprinkle with raisins; spread out on a tray to cool. Break into small pieces and store in airtight container. Makes 7 cups.

Garnish with candied cherry halves, maraschino cherries or whole almonds, if desired. Bake at 325° for 20 to 25 minutes, or until edges of cookies are golden brown. Remove from baking sheets immediately. Makes about 1-1/2 dozen cookies.

Chocolate Macaroons. Prepare Coconut Macaroons as directed, folding in 1 square semi-sweet chocolate, melted, before baking.

Fruited Macaroons. Prepare Coconut Macaroons as directed, adding 1/3 cup chopped mixed candied fruit before baking.

Toffee Squares

(NOT SHOWN)

1 cup butter or margarine
1 cup firmly packed brown sugar
1 egg yolk*
1 teaspoon vanilla
2 cups unsifted all-purpose flour
1/4 teaspoon salt
1 package (4 oz.) sweet cooking chocolate, broken into squares
1/2 cup flaked coconut, lightly toasted

*Or use 1 whole egg.

Combine butter, brown sugar, egg yolk and vanilla; blend in flour and salt. Press into bottom of greased 13x9-inch pan. Bake at 350° for 30 minutes, or until edges are golden brown. Remove from oven and immediately place chocolate pieces on top. Let stand 5 minutes, or until chocolate is softened. Spread evenly over entire surface; sprinkle with coconut. Cut into squares while still warm; cool. Makes 32 squares.

Brownie Drops

(NOT SHOWN)

2 packages (4 oz. each) sweet cooking chocolate
1 tablespoon butter or margarine
2 eggs
3/4 cup sugar
1/4 cup all-purpose flour
1/4 teaspoon double-acting baking powder
1/8 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon cinnamon
3/4 cup finely chopped pecans*
1/2 teaspoon vanilla

*Or use 2/3 cup flaked coconut.

Melt chocolate and butter in saucepan over very low heat, stirring constantly. Remove from heat. Meanwhile, beat eggs until foamy. Gradually beat in sugar. Continue beating until very thick, about 5 minutes. Blend in chocolate mixture. Add flour, baking powder, salt and cinnamon; blend well. Stir in nuts and vanilla. Drop from teaspoon onto greased baking sheets. Bake at 350° for 10 to 12 minutes, or until firm when lightly touched. Store in tightly covered container. Makes about 3 dozen cookies.

Note: Pecan half may be placed on each cookie before baking.

Toasted Coconut-Banana Bread

2-3/4 cups unsifted all-purpose flour
1 cup sugar
3 teaspoons double-acting baking powder
1 teaspoon salt
1-1/3 cups (about) flaked coconut, toasted
1 tablespoon grated orange rind
1 egg, well beaten
1-1/2 cups mashed ripe bananas (3 or 4 bananas)
1/3 cup milk

Sift flour with sugar, baking powder and salt; stir in toasted coconut and orange rind. Combine egg, bananas and milk; stir into flour mixture. (Do not beat.) Pour into greased 9x5-inch loaf pan. Bake at 350° for 1 hour and 10 minutes, or until cake tester inserted in center comes out clean. Cool in pan 10 minutes; remove from pan and finish cooling on rack.

Note: For easier slicing and mellowing of flavors, store bread overnight, wrapped in waxed paper, plastic wrap or aluminum foil.

Alternate Baking Pans: Two 8x4-inch loaf pans; bake about 1 hour.

Toasted Coconut

Spread flaked coconut thinly in shallow baking pan. Toast at 350° for 7 to 12 minutes, or until lightly browned. Stir coconut or shake pan often to toast evenly.

Mint-Glazed Brownies

2 squares unsweetened chocolate
1/3 cup soft butter or other shortening
2/3 cup unsifted all-purpose flour
1/2 teaspoon double-acting baking powder
1/4 teaspoon salt
2 eggs
1 cup sugar
1 teaspoon vanilla
1/2 cup chopped nuts*
Mint Frosting
Chocolate Drizzle

*Or use 3/4 cup flaked coconut.

Melt chocolate and butter in saucepan over very low heat, stirring constantly. Mix flour with baking powder and salt. Beat eggs well; then gradually beat in sugar. Blend in chocolate mixture and vanilla. Add flour mixture and mix well. Stir in nuts. Spread in greased 8-inch square pan. Bake at 350° for 25 minutes (for moist chewy brownies) or about 30 minutes or until cake tester inserted in center comes out clean (for cake-like brownies). Cool in pan; then spread Mint Frosting thinly over brownies; then add Chocolate Drizzle. Cut into squares or rectangles. Makes about 20 brownies.

Mint Frosting. Cream 2 tablespoons butter or margarine. Blend in 3/4 cup sifted confectioners sugar alternately with 2 to 3 teaspoons light cream, beating until smooth. Add 1/4 teaspoon peppermint extract. Makes about 1/2 cup.

Chocolate Drizzle. Melt 1/2 square unsweetened or semi-sweet chocolate and 1/2 teaspoon butter or margarine in saucepan over low heat, stirring constantly. Cool slightly and drizzle from teaspoon over frosting.

Ethnic holiday entrees add dimension to tradition

By DESIREE VIVEA
Copley News Service

During the holidays we spend more time with relatives, keeping those old family traditions alive. For many of us, this season is a time for remembering our "roots" — and much of the cooking we do is ethnic, recalling the special cuisine of the "old country" of our ancestors.

America really is a melting pot of many different nationalities: large numbers of Germans and Scandinavians settled in the Midwest, the British in New England, Acadians and Moravians in the Old South.

These groups also brought with them new cuisines and in different parts of the country, local cookery is spiced by French, Italian, Slavic, Chinese, Mexican, and Spanish influences. So no matter what your origins, that old family recipe you cook up special for the holidays is probably an American variation of a foreign favorite.

Updated fruitcake recipe feautures macadamia nuts

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

This is a round, fairly shallow fruitcake of candied fruit and whole nuts with the merest lacing of batter featuring macadamia nuts.

MACADAMIA FRUITCAKE

½ cup unbleached all-purpose flour
½ teaspoon baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon ground allspice
⅛ teaspoon ground nutmeg
1-3rd cup butter, cut up or at room temperature
3 tablespoons firmly packed light brown sugar
3 tablespoons honey
2 large eggs
2 tablespoons orange juice
1 cup (7 ounces) candied cherries
1 cup (7 ounces) candied pineapple chunks
½ cup (6 ounces) candied orange peel, finely cut
½ cup (6 ounces) candied lemon peel, finely cut
3½ cups (16 ounces) salted macadamia nuts

Grease a round layer cake pan (8 by 1½ inches). Line bottom with wax paper and grease paper.

On another sheet of wax paper or in a small bowl thoroughly stir together the flour, baking powder, salt, allspice and nutmeg.

In a large bowl cream the butter and brown sugar. Beat in the honey until blended. Beat in the eggs, one at a time, until blended each time. Stir in one-third of the flour mixture and then 1 tablespoon of the orange juice; repeat, ending with the flour. Spread 1-3rd of the batter over the bottom of the prepared pan.

Reserve some cherries for a garnish. Into the batter in the bowl, stir in remaining cherries, pineapple, orange peel, lemon peel and macadamias. Spoon over batter already in the pan. With a small spatula level the top. Decorate with the reserved cherries, pressing down firmly. Cover with greased foil.

Place in a larger baking pan containing ½-inch hot water. Bake in a preheated 300-degree oven for 1 hour. Remove from water bath. Continue baking until cake is firm — about 1 hour longer. Place on a wire rack for 10 minutes. With a small metal spatula loosen edge; turn out on rack; with another rack turn right side up. Cool completely Store in a tightly covered container. If desired, brush with a glaze before serving.

Makes one 2¾-pound cake.

A 'tasteful' idea for stocking stuffers: Recipe books

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

If you enjoy giving presents you make yourself, or want a stocking-stuffer for someone who loves to cook, I highly recommend a new softcover 48-page book, "Gifts From the Christmas Kitchen."

It's a collection of fine recipes contributed by almost 60 food writers and cooking teachers (and a few restaurateurs) from various parts of the country. They have donated their royalties from the book to "Meals on Wheels," an organization that brings meals to homebound elderly people.

The recipes are for candies, cookies, preserved fruits, savories, breads, desserts and other delights, spirited drinks. And for seven dishes that range from chili to a gratin of leeks.

The gratin was contributed by master French chef Jacques Pepin, whom we are fortunate to have living in the United States because he is a superb teacher and cookbook author and recently completed a remarkable television series.

The leek gratin is a luscious dish to bring to a "covered dish" party at holiday time. When we baked it in my test kitchen, we used a round copper 1½-quart shallow baking dish and it was handsome indeed.

GRATIN OF LEEKS

10-11 large leeks, trimmed of roots and heavy green tops
4 slices bacon, cut into ½-inch pieces and blanched 20 seconds
1 cup water
Salt and freshly ground white pepper to taste
½ teaspoon thyme
1½ tablespoons butter
1½ tablespoons flour
1½ cups milk
1 cup heavy cream
2 tblsps. grated Swiss cheese
1 tablespoon grated Parmesan cheese

Cut the leeks into 2-inch pieces and quarter them. Wash very well and drain. Cook the blanched bacon in a saucepan until nicely browned. Add the leeks, water, salt, pepper and thyme. Cover tightly and cook for 20 to 25 minutes, until the leeks are tender and the water has evaporated.

Melt the butter in a saucepan and stir in the flour until smooth. Add the milk, whisking constantly until the sauce comes to a boil. Cook for 5 minutes. Stir in the cream and Swiss cheese, then fold in the leeks.

Transfer the leeks to a shallow, ovenproof dish and sprinkle with the Parmesan cheese. Bake for about 40 minutes, until golden brown. Let rest for 20 minutes before serving.

Yuletide fare differs from land to land

AP Wine and Food Writer

For many food writers, Christmas is the signal for eulogizing roast turkey and the trimmings. We occasionally pay tribute to the yuletide roast goose of England, and that's about it.

This year, I have been browsing through foreign cookbooks to see how the yule is celebrated abroad and have made some interesting discoveries.

In Germany, which is rich in game, many cooks build the holiday feast around a wild boar or saddle of venison, especially if there is a hunter in the family. The Germans also have a lavish supper the night before Christmas, usually omitting meat and serving carp or some other fish instead.

In Poland, Christmas Eve is a festive day, with the meal running 12 courses in many homes, to symbolize the Apostles.

In Scandinavia, where December is the bleak time of year when nights are longest, Christmas is an antidote for the gloom. Christmas Eve is the most lavish meal of the year in most homes, but most Scandinavians keep feasting right on through Christmas Day.

In Sweden, for instance, they usher in the yule with a ham and red cabbage that is deliciously flavored. This is accompanied by many side dishes in this land of smorgasbord, such as liver paste, spareribs, spicy sausage and pickled herring. A high point of the meal comes when everyone dips bits of rye bread into the pot of broth in which the ham and sausages were boiled. Here's a recipe for the Swedish red cabbage, called Rodkaal.

RODKALL

1 medium head red cabbage, about 2½ pounds
4 tablespoons butter, in small pieces
1 tablespoon sugar
1 teaspoon salt
1-3rd cup water
1-3rd cup white vinegar
¼ cup currant jelly
2 tablespoons grated apple

Wash cabbage in cold water, remove tough outer leaves and cut head in half, top to bottom. Lay flat sides down on chopping board, cut away core and slice cabbage finely. Combine butter, sugar, salt, water and vinegar in 5-quart casserole, preferably stainless steel. When mixture comes to boil and butter has melted, add shredded cabbage and toss well. Bring to boil again, cover and cook in 325-degree oven 2 hours. If cabbage becomes dry, add water. About 10 minutes before vegetable is done, add jelly and grated apple.

Present nutritious

Instead of candy to add to the holiday calorie count, why not drop a booklet of nutritious recipes into that Christmas stocking?

The "Eat Well, Be Well," recipe booklet is a fine stocking stuffer for almost anybody, with recipes from the nutrition series shown on public television stations.

Single copies of the booklet can be obtained by writing "Eat Well, Be Well," H&SE Division, Dept. XM, Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, One Madison Avenue, New York, NY 10010.

Coast-to-Coast Holiday Cake combines prunes with cranberries in a festive, only-in-America Christmas creation.

Christmas cake festive

During the Christmas season, we all want to cook and serve our best. There was a time when this desire for quality meant sweetmeats, imported from around the world, to grace our holiday tables.

Today we can be proud of our American delicacies. A special treat for the holidays can be made with the best food offerings from the American East and West.

This yuletide season, you can be proud to serve Coast-to-Coast Holiday Cake, a sweet marriage of thick, mellow California prunes and tart, tangy New England cranberries. And in keeping with American lifestyles, this cake's elegance belies its simplicity.

Cut through the decorative sugar and nut topping to reveal a layer of rich and delicious prune butter which separates magically from the batter during baking. With the bits of bright red cranberries at the lusciously dark layer of prunes, the cake is colorful and festive.

Serve Coast-to-Coast Holiday Cake for a dessert after dinner or as a coffee cake when friends drop in. Make extras to present as hostess gifts the next time you go partying.

COAST-TO—COAST HOLIDAY CAKE

Prune Walnut Filling
¾ cup butter or margarine, softened
1½ cups sugar
3 eggs
1 cup sour cream
1 teaspoon vanilla
3 cups flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
1½ cups fresh or frozen cranberries, thawed
½ cup coarsely chopped prunes
½ teaspoon cinnamon
⅓ cup chopped walnuts

Prepare Prune Walnut Filling; set aside. In large bowl beat butter and 1¼ cups sugar until fluffy. Beat in eggs, sour cream and vanilla to blend thoroughly. In another bowl combine flour and baking powder. Add cranberries and prunes to flour mixture; toss. With rubber spatula fold flour mixture into butter mixture to blend thoroughly.

Generously grease a 9x3-inch springform pan. Spoon half of the batter into pan; level top. Cover evenly with reserved prune mixture. Spoon on the remaining batter; smooth top.

In small bowl combine the remaining ¼ cup sugar, the cinnamon and walnuts. Sprinkle evenly over top of cake. Bake in preheated 325 degree oven 1 hour and 40 minutes to 1 hour and 50 minutes until pick inserted in center comes out clean. Cool on rack 30 minutes. Remove side of pan. Cut into wedges and serve warm or at room temperature as a breakfast or brunch cake or as a tea cake.

PRUNE WALNUT FILLING: Combine 1½ cups (about 9 oz.) pitted prunes, ½ cup water and 1 teaspoon cinnamon in container of electric blender. Blend until almost smooth, turning blender on and off and scraping sides as needed. Stir in ⅔ cup chopped walnuts.

Honey Apple simple sweet

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

HONEY APPLE

One of my sister Rowena's "quick fancies" that I repeat by request.
1 tablespoon butter
2 tablespoons honey
1 very large red Delicious apple, pared and coarsely shredded (1⅓ loosely packed cups)
Dash each of ground mace and ground cardamom

In an 8-inch skillet melt butter and honey, stirring, until hot. Stir in apple, mace and cardamom. Cook quickly and briefly, stirring, just until the apple is very hot and slightly cooked — shreds should not lose their shape. Serve at once with vanilla ice cream. Makes 2 servings.

Zucchini peppers made in skillet

2 small (each 5 ounces) zucchini
1 large (5 or 6 ounces) green pepper
1 medium-small (2½ ounces) onion
1 tablespoon olive oil
Salt and pepper to taste

Trim ends from zucchini, don't peel; cut into ¼-inch cubes — there should be about 2 cups. Halve, seed and de-vein green pepper; cut into ¼-inch squares. Peel and quarter onion; cut into thick strips. In a 10-inch non-stick skillet, over moderate heat, heat the oil; add zucchini, green pepper and onion; cook uncovered, stirring often, until zucchini is tender — 10 to 15 minutes. Makes 3 servings. —(AP)

Liquid soaps pamper skin not purse

By LINDA ANDERSON

It's hard to resist the temptation of a long, hot, bubbly bath, but most of us these days can't afford the luxury — we are in a hurry to get to work or to get to school or to take the kids somewhere or pick them up from somewhere. Many of us, for the sake of speed, shower instead.

Because taking showers instead of baths is so common and because liquid hand soaps have been such a successful product in the past few years, manufacturers have taken the concept one step further and created some new liquid soaps either recommended for or designed specifically for shower use.

We home-tested three of these new liquid soaps against each other and against their advertising claims, to see if they were as good as they are supposed to be and to see how practical and economical they are. The products were tested by adults, teenagers and small children. (Prices listed are from a local supermarket. Prices from other locations may vary.)

The first soap tested was Liqua 4, a pearly-white liquid soap whose label says it is good for washing hands or taking showers. It comes out of a soap-bar shaped plastic container (price for one 5-oz. container: about 85 cents) that you flip open and squeeze. The container also will float in the bathtub, which made it a hit with the 3-year-old tester. She hates to take showers anyway.

Liqua 4 is advertised on the box as containing skin softeners, a desirable ingredient in the West Texas dryness. The soap did feel smoother than a regular bar soap in the tub or shower, but the softener didn't seem to last very long after the skin was dried (which may have more to do with the hard Midland water than the soap itself). The soap is concentrated and a small amount will make a large amount of lather.

While all the testers said they could feel the difference between Liqua 4 and regular bar soap, only the teenage testers named Liqua 4 as their favorite of the three soaps tested.

ShowerMate, a liquid shower soap which comes in 12-oz. bottles designed to hang from the shower nozzle, was also tested. The construction of the bottle is one of the best features of this soap, because after the handle has been hooked on and the bottle is hanging cap-down from the shower head, all the user has to do is squeeze the bottle. The soap comes out from a specially-designed hole in the cap which is closed when the bottle is not being squeezed. ShowerMate also carries advertising concerning its skin-softening ingredients, but once again these softeners disappeared when the skin was dried. It also was said to be concentrated, but did not seem to make as much lather as Liqua 4. ShowerMate, purchased for $2.39 for a 12-oz. bottle, was the most convenient of the three to use, and was also the favorite of the adult male tester.

Bare Elegance, $2.55 for a 8-oz. bottle, was the most expensive of the soaps tested and the most difficult to find — instead of being with the other body soaps on the supermarket shelves it was stocked with lotions.

Advertising for Bare Elegance promotes its skin-softening abilities and luxurious feeling, claiming these softeners are released by "the heat of the shower." This soap is available unscented and in Jasmine and Fresh Spring scents. None of the testers liked Bare Elegance except the adult female, who said her skin really did feel softer and smoother after showering with the soap.

These liquid soaps are much neater than bar soaps and much more fun to use but are expensive. Ounce for ounce, the liquid soaps were more costly than bar soaps.

Compared to bar soaps, all three made the skin feel softer, but the softeners seemed to be overpowered by the hardness of Midland's water. Only one of the testers found that only one of the three soaps, Bare Elegance, eliminated the need of after-shower lotioning.

The liquid soaps may be too expensive for regular use, but we found them just right for a little bit of self-pampering. Once in a while.

Microwave cookies, candy mailable

Copley News Service

Mailable goodies are perfect for long-distance gift giving. If someone you love lives in another area, or if a family member is away at school or in the service, sending a box of homemade sweets is a thoughtful way to convey warm holiday greetings.

Cookies and candy which you've made yourself bring with them a special touch of home, and they're fast and easy — when you make them in your microwave!

Candy and cookies to be mailed should be packed in a sturdy, airtight container. A decorated tin is perhaps the best idea: these make useful containers long after the goodies are gone, and they won't break in the mail. Separate layers with waxed paper and fill any empty crevices with crumpled tissue paper. The tin should be mailed inside a heavy cardboard box which is just a little larger. Again, fill any empty spaces with crumpled paper (plain popped popcorn makes good packing material, too) to ensure that your sweets arrive undamaged.

Mark the box with the words "PERISHABLE" and "HANDLE WITH CARE" — and don't forget to allow enough time for your package to arrive before Christmas.

Get those microwave goodies in the mail early, and make an extra batch as a little gift to yourself. What a sweet way to say, "Happy Holidays!"

SESAME SPANISH PEANUT BRITTLE

1¼ cups salted roasted Spanish peanuts
¼ cup toasted sesame seeds
1 cup granulated sugar
½ cup light corn syrup
1 tbsp. butter or margarine
1 tsp. vanilla extract
1 tsp. baking soda

Place peanuts in dish towel, gathering up corners so as not to spill any. Rb peanuts together inside of towel to loosen skins. Pick out nuts, leaving in a few bits of skin to add color to brittle. Set aside.

In glass mixing bowl, combine sugar and corn syrup; microwave 7 to 9 minutes until bubbling. Rapidly stir in peanuts, sesame seeds, butter or margarine and vanilla. Blend in baking soda and stir quickly, just until mixture begins to foam.

Pour immediately onto greased baking sheet. Tip sheet, if necessary, to spread evenly. Let cool at least 15 minutes, then break up and store in airtight container. Makes 1 pound, 3 ounces brittle.

SIMPLE GLAZED ALMONDS

1 cup blanched almonds
½ cup water
½ cup sugar

To blanch almonds, place whole nuts in bowl and cover with boiling water. Lt stand just long enough to loosen skins. Remove skins from almonds and place on paper towels to dry. Set aside.

In 4-cup glass measure, combine water and sugar; microwave 4 minutes. Add almonds and microwave on DEFROST setting 3 to 3½ minutes. Almonds should be tender.

Remove nuts with slotted spoon and drain on paper towel. While still damp, sprinkle more sugar over nuts, coating all sides. Let dry thoroughly, then store in airtight container. Makes 1 cup glazed almonds.

DEAR ABBY

Niece fears former favorite uncle's touch

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I am a 13-year-old girl with a problem I can't talk to anybody about. I have an uncle who everybody thinks is the greatest. He's 39 and married.

Lately he has been pulling me on his lap, feeling me, and trying to give me grown-up kisses on the mouth. He used to be my favorite uncle, but now I feel funny when he gets near me.

I can't prove that he has done anything wrong because he really hasn't, but I think he would if he got the chance.

If I told my mother she probably wouldn't believe me. I don't have a father, so I can't tell him. My uncle comes over a lot and wants to teach me how to drive. I'd like to learn, but I really am afraid to get into his car and go for a ride because of this funny feeling that comes over me when he touches me. I don't think it's just my imagination.

What should I do? — ASHAMED AND AFRAID

DEAR ASHAMED: It is NOT your imagination. That "funny feeling" you get is a warning signal.

The next time you see your uncle, tell him that you do NOT want to sit on his lap, that you do NOT want him to put his hands on you and that you do NOT want any "grown-up" kisses. Tell him that if he tries to do any of these things, you will tell your mother. And if she doesn't believe you, tell another adult — a relative, a teacher or your minister.

Don't be afraid, honey. And don't be ashamed. You have done nothing wrong. Just make sure your uncle knows that you are NOT to be touched! Please write again soon and let me know how you are. I care.

DEAR ABBY: Please tell me what my correct name is presently, based on the following facts: (1) I was born Janet Sue Flanagan. (2) I married John Donlevy and became Janet Flanagan Donlevy. (3) John died and I recently married George Williams.

Am I now Janet Donlevy Williams, Janet Flanagan Williams or Janet Sue Williams? — JANET

DEAR JANET: When a widow remarries, she has the option of using her first husband's name as a middle name or of dropping his name and using her maiden name. If she was married for a long time and has children, she will undoubtedly prefer to keep the name of the man with whom she spent many years and which identifies her with her children.

So, take your choice: Janet Donlevy Williams or Janet Flanagan Williams.

DEAR ABBY: Your recent column in which you quoted the late, beloved Sam Levenson, contained an error.

In listing some outstanding contributions to medical science made by Jews, he credited a Dr. Z. Woronan with the discovery of streptomycin.

Abby, I hope the Nobel Committee in Sweden doesn't hear about this, because in 1952 they awarded the Nobel Prize for medicine to Dr. Selman Waksman of Rutgers University for discovering streptomycin!

However, Dr. Waksman belongs on that list because he, too, was Jewish. — ARTHUR ISBIT, PH.D., CHULA VISTA, CALIF.

(Every teen-ager should know the truth about drugs, sex and how to be happy. For Abby's booklet, send $2 and a long, stamped (37 cents), self-addressed envelope to: Abby, Teen Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

NEW WORLD COFFEE CAKE

Filling, see recipe
1¼ cups whole wheat (graham) flour
1¼ cups unbleached all- purpose white flour
2½ teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
6 large egg whites
1¼ cups sugar
½ cup safflower oil
2 teaspoons vanilla
1¼ cups sugar
1½ cups milk

Make the filling and reserve. Grease and flour a 10-inch angel cake pan.

On wax paper or in a medium bowl, thoroughly stir together whole wheat flour, white flour, baking powder and salt; reserve.

In a medium bowl, beat the egg whites until foamy; gradually beat in ¾ cup of the sugar until the whites form peaks that tilt slightly when the beater is slowly withdrawn; reserve.

At once in a large bowl, without washing the beater, beat together the oil, vanilla and the remaining ½ cup sugar until combined. Add the reserved flour mixture 1-3rd at a time, alternately with the milk, beating gently after each addition just until blended. Add the reserved egg white mixture and fold in.

Spoon 1-3rd of the batter into the prepared pan; sprinkle with ½ of the Filling. Repeat. Add remaining batter.

Bake in a preheated 350-degree oven until a cake tester inserted in the center comes out clean — about 45 minutes. Let stand on a wire rack for 10 minutes. With a small metal spatula, loosen edges. Turn out onto the rack; with another rack turn top side up. Serve warm. Slice any leftover coffee cake as needed, wrap in foil and reheat in a moderate or hot oven.

FILLING: In a small bowl stir together 1-3rd cup firmly packed light brown sugar, 1½ teaspoons cocoa, 1½ teaspoons ground cinnamon; stir in ½ cup finely chopped golden raisins, then ½ cup coarsely chopped walnuts.

"Maria"...soft Nabuk pigskin in pretty colors of pink, blue, lilac or tan on the Famolare Boatlite bottom, $45.

BETTER BUSINESS

Credit shopping important

By LINDA TRUITT

At Christmas many of us decide to give our loved ones the gift that tells them they are special, whether it is a mink coat, stereo or a diamond necklace. Since Christmas purchases are rarely planned, credit is frequently used to delay the payments. If credit must be used it is just as important to shop for the best credit terms as for the gift for that special person.

Depending on the purchase, first a decision must be made about whether to pay for the item with a revolving (open-end) charge account or an installment (closed-end) payment plan. The type chosen will determine how much in finance charges must be paid.

Revolving charge accounts (including bank cards such as Visa and MasterCard) allow repeated purchases to be made, up to a set limit established by the creditor when the account is opened. Retail creditors are not able to state dollar finance charges in advance for this type of credit. Since charges are computed on the unpaid balance, they will depend on how much credit is used and how quickly it is repaid. However retailers must state the applicable periodic rate used in calculating the charge and the annual percentage rate. Charges computed at 1-1/2 or 2 percent monthly amount to 18 or 24 percent when stated as an annual percentage rate.

How a retailer defines the unpaid balance is a major factor in determining how much interest will have to be paid. Some creditors determine the finance charge by applying a monthly rate to the opening unpaid balance (the most expensive method). Others apply the monthly rate to the average daily balance. Or creditors may apply the rate to the opening balance minus any payments that are made during the month (the least expensive method). By knowing the annual percentage rate and the definition of the unpaid balance, which must be stated in the contract, which stores require the least amount of interest to be paid can be determined.

Unfortunately during the rush of buying gifts many people do not keep track of the amount they have charged. They are then embarrassed when the store discovers they have reached their limit and will not allow the purchase to be charged. To prevent this from happening, a ledger should be kept which includes all purchases and payments made on each charge account.

Installment purchases usually involve a written agreement for each credit purchase. A downpayment or trade-in may be required, with the balance to be repaid in equal installments over a period of time. Generally the seller holds title to the merchandise until payments are completed. Finance charges vary according to the amount financed, the length of the repayment period and the item serving as collateral. Charges typically range from 12 to 36 percent when stated as an annual percentage rate.

If only revolving charge accounts are used, more money may be paid in interest than needed. If the gift is moderately expensive it may be worthwhile to shop for the best credit terms. By borrowing cash from a bank or credit union, better interest rates may be available. Using a savings account as collateral is a relatively inexpensive way to borrow money.

Before handing over a credit card, future bills and ways to pay less by using an installment payment plan should be considered. More information on credit is available in the pamphlet, "Tips on Consumer Credit," BBB/Permian Basin, P.O. Box 6006, Midland, Texas 79711.

Linda Truitt is president of the Better Business Bureau of the Permian Basin.

LIVING TODAY

Baking methods quicker

By SHARON A. HILLIS

This is the time of year when we can all enjoy all the wonderful baking traditions heralding the holiday season. Chances are your menus for these special days change little from year to year. Fortunately many hostesses today can rely on streamlined methods and convenience foods which can shorten preparation time considerably.

Here are some handy guidelines for turning out praiseworthy pastry which were developed by the professional home economists in the Betty Crocker Kitchens in Minneapolis. The tips make entertaining easier during the holidays or anytime:

— To save time use pie crust sticks or mix when making that favorite pie shell. Pastry, often considered one of the trickiest culinary feats, comes out flaky, rich and tender with little time and effort. And "easy as pie" becomes more than simply an expression.

— Roll out dough on a lightly floured cloth-covered board, rolling from center to edge with light strokes. Maintain the circular shape as you roll by periodically shaping with cupped hands.

— If patching is necessary moisten edge of torn or irregular area. Next cut a piece of pastry to fit the space and firmly press into place. Heatproof glass pie plates are best for even browning.

— Whatever edging design you prefer, press the pastry firmly against the rim of the pie plate or hook over the edge so it stays firmly in place while baking. If pastry is to be baked without a filling prick the bottom and side with a fork at frequent intervals to prevent "puffing."

— Add your favorite holiday fillings: mincemeat, pumpkin, apple, sweet potato, pecan, cranberry, turkey and main dish or dessert pies, tarts and turnovers can be served with confidence. Leftover tidbits of turkey or other poultry or game combined with vegetables and tucked into a pastry shell make tasty supper or lunchtime dishes.

— Both baked and unbaked crusts adapt well to freezing for up to several months. Fruit pies, baked and unbaked, freeze well up to four months. Avoid freezing homemade cream and custard pies and any with meringue topping. Bake pecan pie before freezing to avoid soggy crust.

It is not too early to ready your holiday fruitcakes. For best flavor these holiday treats should be made about a month in advance. Wine or brandy can be poured over cooled cakes before wrapping in plastic wrap or aluminum foil. Or cover fruitcakes with wine or brandy-soaked cloth. Properly wrapped fruitcakes store well in the freezer about six months. Glazes and other decorations should be added after thawing.

Berry relish unusual

GRAPEFRUIT AND STRAWBERRY RELISH

We worked out this unusual offering for the winter season.

2 large grapefruit
10-ounce package frozen halved strawberries in syrup, thawed
1 small onion, finely chopped (¼ cup)
3 scant tbsps. lime juice
1 cup sugar
½ tsp. ground ginger
½ tsp. dry mustard
⅓ cup slivered crystallized ginger

Cut grapefruit in half crosswise; cut away sections from dividing membrane and remove to 3-quart saucepan. Squeeze grapefruit juice from shells into saucepan; add strawberries, onion, lime juice, sugar, ground ginger and mustard; bring to a boil, stirring until sugar dissolves. Boil vigorously, occasionally stirring down the foam, until liquid is partly reduced — about 20 minutes. Continue boiling gently, stirring often to prevent sticking, until fairly thick. Stir in crystallized ginger. Store tightly covered in the refrigerator. Makes 1¾ cups.

Entrepreneur deals out funds to float ship-board casino

AUSTIN (AP) — Entrepreneur Phillip Fry, the man who turned a fake mountain into an amusement park, now promises to have Texans gambling at a floating casino by spring.

Under the Fry plan, a foreign ship will be anchored in the international waters of the Gulf of Mexico. Ferries leaving from Port Arthur and Galveston will take gamblers to the ship-board casino.

"We're very busily expanding our world of entertainment," said Fry, who runs the Prairie Dell Lake Amusement Park built around an artificial mountain near Salado once billed as the Matterhorn.

The mountain also plays a part in the casino plans. It serves as a bettor's practice ground. Since Oct. 1, Fry has run a no-money casino, complete with slot machines, 21, poker and a dice game. There is no betting, he said.

"A lot of adults wanted more adult type things to do" at the amusement park, he said. "One of the options we explored was having a fun-type casino with people playing for the fun of it."

Fry said the success of the no-money casino inspired his plans for the off-shore gambling enterprise.

A news release from Fry said the practice casino will allow bettors to "sharpen their playing skills."

State officials say they can't find anything wrong with Fry's plans for a floating casino.

"If it's totally outside the state and the state's jurisdiction, I wouldn't imagine there's anything illegal," said Mike Hodge of the Attorney General Department's enforcement division. "It sounds like one of those law school questions. There's no good answer for it until they do it."

Joe Murphy, Department of Public Safety assistant commander for intelligence, said it sounds legal, but he asked to see a copy of a news release prepared by Fry.

Murphy recalled that a casino ship ran into legal problems when it docked in Galveston several years ago.

"They came into the dock there with all their slots out in the open. The law says they've got to be locked up," said Murphy.

Fry said the casino ship in his plan would never come to the Texas shore.

The Secretary of State's Office here recently approved the incorporation of Gulf Coast Recreational Cooperative Inc., the legal name of Fry's Legal Gambling Private Club.

The club will not own or operate the ship. Fry said he is negotiating with foreign ship owners. Dues collected by the club will go to the shipowners, allowing club members to use the gambling facilities.

Club membership also entitles Texans to free ferry service to the casino ship, according to Fry.

"The function of the Legal Gambling Private Club is to make legal gambling more accessible to Texans by bringing a Las Vegas casino into international waters," he said. "We're negotiating with various foreign companies that own ships to get the best deal we can. There are more ships available than you might think."

"It's not that intricate to arrange for a ship and casino offshore. This already happens off of Florida," he added.

Economic recovery hasn't helped homeless

By The Associated Press

On the eve of winter, agencies helping the homeless across America say thousands more down-and-out people are roaming the streets and spending nights in emergency shelters this year.

And a new study concludes that the country's economic recovery has not improved the plight or the numbers of homeless Americans.

"Underneath the veneer of recovery, the problem of homelessness remains at pre-recovery levels. In fact, indications are that it has increased," said the National Coalition for the Homeless in a report, "The Homeless and The Economic Recovery."

The coming of cold weather can only compound an already critical situation," the report concluded.

From New York to California, soup lines are longer, beds are being filled up more quickly and there are more people living on the streets.

New York City is providing shelter for twice as many families as last year. The Los Angeles Mission reports a 10 percent increase in the number of men being sheltered in its 70-bed facility.

In Helena, Mont., the Salvation Army says it has given lodging assistance to 1,287 homeless people this year, up about 60 percent from last year. The St. Vincent de Paul Transient Assistance office in Phoenix, Ariz., has been receiving an average of 32 requests a day for emergency housing from families.

"There will be virtually no empty beds in emergency shelters anywhere in the country tonight, tomorrow night and the next night," said Robert Hayes, director of the National Coalition for the Homeless.

The number of homeless nationwide — estimated at about 2 million last year — may now be 3 million, the highest number since the 1930s, said Hayes. About half of them are mentally disturbed, drug addicts or alcoholics; the other half could live independently, he added.

"They're not the strongest or the smartest people in the country, but they are employable people who, in a better housing market, would be able to hold on," he said.

The coalition says the homeless have been untouched by the economic recovery because of a lack of low-income housing, cutbacks in public assistance programs and a paucity of jobs for unskilled workers. The national jobless rate, which has been dropping, doesn't count people who have exhausted their unemployment benefits, the coalition noted.

The New York City Coalition for the Homeless estimates that 40,000 to 60,000 people passed through emergency shelters in 1983 and the city is spending more than $50 million annually on the homeless.

In Chicago, the homeless number as many as 25,000, an increase over the 12,000 homeless last year, partly due to the demolition of 3,000 single-room dwellings. An estimated 9,000 are homeless in Detroit, up from 6,500 last year.

A recent study in Pittsburgh concluded that about 1,500 people would be homeless at some time this winter. The demand for shelter seems to be increasing.

"We are beyond our capacity and have been for six months," said Sister Mercia O'Neil, director of a church-sponsored shelter for women in Pittsburgh.

City's housing too expensive for welfare families

NEW YORK (AP) — In a city where a one-room apartment can rent for $800 a month, a welfare family's $218 housing allowance doesn't go far. In the case of some families, it goes just as far as the Urban Family Center — and no further.

Most of the 71 families at the emergency shelter are single women caring for several young children. And the families are staying longer and longer as the shortage of housing in New York City becomes more critical.

"This is by far the best housing they've ever had," said Danny Kronenfeld, who runs the center. More people are staying longer and are "harder to get out," he said.

But Jacqueline Sawyer isn't in emergency public housing by choice. Her husband left her and their three children before the youngest was born two years ago, and she went on welfare.

With her $194 a month housing allowance, she rented a small walkup apartment that turned out to have no heat or hot water. She also got $335 in welfare payments and food stamps to feed her children, now ages 2, 8 and 10.

But last winter Mrs. Sawyer, 32, had to keep electric space heaters running throughout the apartment — two in the baby's room — to keep her children warm. She used the food money to pay the average $110 mothly electric bill.

Worse, the roof of the building leaked. Mrs. Sawyer tried to keep the mold and mildew wiped up as best she could. After one of her children was hospitalized with asthma, a doctor told her she had to move.

She arranged to move into one room of a friend's apartment, but a social worker told her she would lose her welfare benefits if she did; the rules bar a four-person family from living in one room.

"I was desperate," she said. She called the city's Crisis Intervention office and ended up in emergency housing at the Urban Family Center on the Lower East Side.

Pueblos still house Indians

In the Four Corners area of the American Southwest, Indians still live in pueblos as their ancestors did when Coronado first entered that area in 1540.

Sharks appear on prison menu

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — Shark is now on the menu at South Carolina prisons, and officials say the inmates are taking to it.

"It's gotten a real good reception," said prison food service director Tim Miller on Tuesday.

Miller likes it too, because the shark meat is currently shipped free to the prisons, courtesy of the state Wildlife and Marine Resources Department.

The department's seafood marketing services section is in the midst of a one-year effort sponsored by the Gulf and South Atlantic Fisheries Development Foundation in Tampa, Fla., to cultivate South Carolina tastes for shark.

Academy's new president doesn't fit mold

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — When Gene Allen was elected 24th president of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences a few months ago, people asked: "Who's Gene Allen?"

It is a natural question, as Allen is first to admit. Previous Academy presidents have been familiar names in the industry, such as Douglas Fairbanks, Bette Davis, Gregory Peck and Charlton Heston.

Allen is not an actor. He's a production designer, and one of the best. He won on Oscar for 'My Fair Lady" and was nominated for "A Star Is Born" and "Les Girls." He has also produced, directed and written movies.

The son of a Los Angeles police captain, he started in the studios as a blueprint boy in 1937 — carrying set blueprints — and rose through the ranks to become George Cukor's designer.

"My one big regret is that George didn't live quite long enough to see his boy become president of the Academy," said Allen, a friendly, outgoing man of 65.

ENTERTAINMENT

"He took a raw kid — well, not really, I was a pretty good illustrator — and broke him into production design. He was my mentor."

Cukor died earlier this year, just before the Academy presented the Judy Garland "A Star Is Born" with footage restored to an approximation of the director's original version.

Some Academy presidents have coasted on the honorary aspects of the post; others have been activists. Allen seems to be in the latter group. He knows the inner workings of the Academy, having served 10 years on the Board of Governors and three years as treasurer.

"Most people know the Academy only for the awards," he observed. "That occupies only 30 percent of the Academy's activities. Seventy percent are in other affairs, including student awards, special programs and tributes, the best library on film in the world, restoration of old films, etc."

The Academy has already outgrown the glass-walled headquarters in Beverly Hills which it has occupied since 1975. The library is so jammed, said Allen, that donations of memorabilia have to be declined.

"What the motion picture industry really needs is a museum," Allen said. "I know that a Hollywood museum is almost a dirty word, because it has been kicked around for so many years. But something must be done to provide a place where the industry's heritage can be collected and enjoyed. That's one of the things I plan to campaign for."

Among the new president's other plans are special programs for members in New York, who number 428, and London, where there are 105. He also hopes to bring some improvements in the awards telecast.

'Day After' steals thunder from 'Testament'

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Producer Lynne Littman is ambivalent about the rash of publicity surrounding recent movies dealing with the effects of a nuclear war.

"On one level, the attention has been good," she says. "My only fear is that we may have drowned in the media blitz."

She was referring to the effect ABC-TV's "The Day After" may have had on her film, "Testament." The Paramount release, which concerns a family in the aftermath of a nuclear attack, had surprised the film trade with big grosses in a limited release. But the returns have dropped since the telecast of "The Day After" on Nov. 20.

"There's no doubt that the TV show hurt 'Testament,'" said a Paramount official who asked that his name not be used. "People may feel that they've seen enough of Armageddon."

Adds Miss Littman: "I just hope we're not lost in the shuffle of boredom over nuclear disaster. Our movie is too good to get lost."

The film, which opened last month, was highly praised by critics. Audiences have been profoundly moved by "Testament," which gently shows how a suburban mother copes with her dying family and community.

The entire experience is a source of wonderment to Miss Littman, who never expected to find herself the director of a theatrical feature.

"Testament" was originally planned as a film for the PBS series, American Playhouse. "That's part of the reason I had the guts to undertake my first feature," Miss Littman said. "I figured if I screwed up, not too many people would notice."

The movie ended up in theaters because PBS could provide only two-thirds of its $778,000 budget. Miss Littman found the rest from a British firm, Entertainment Events, which acquired rights to theatrically issue "Testament." The movie won't be seen on American Playhouse until 1985.

Miss Littman discussed her film in the Paramount studio office of her husband, director Taylor Hackford, who did "An Officer and a Gentleman."

A slender woman with long dark hair and wide intelligent eyes, she grew up in New York as a "theater junkie" with ambitions to act. But after summer stock, she decided she wasn't good enough — "and I couldn't put myself in the position of powerlessness that actresses must face."

In 1963, she started working for public television, then the only area where women could become directors and producers. She turned to documentaries, and her study of elderly Jews in Venice, Calif., "Number Our Days," won an Academy Award in 1977. She found "Testament" as a short story by Carol Amen in MS. Magazine. She paid $1,000 for the rights and spent 2½ years getting it made.

Her financial reward was the Directors Guild minimum fee, $25,000. She'll share no profits for "Testament," having sacrificed her ownership to acquire financing.

"Testament" was filmed with a non-union crew, and Jane Alexander, William Devane and the rest of the cast worked at Screen Actors Guild minimum. They will receive additional payment because of the theatrical release.

Has the film had an effect on the new director's career?

"It has given me three minutes of heat in this town," Miss Littman said wryly. "I used my last minute over Thanksgiving — I got cold with the turkey."

Not really. She plans to hold out for another project she believes in as passionately as she did "Testament."

"Everyone tells me I should strike while the iron is hot, otherwise I'll be out on my (rear). Well, I've been there before," she said.

Former Beatle gets weird telephone call

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Former Beatle Ringo Starr wrapped up his 26-week radio series, "Ringo's Yellow Submarine," with a live performance — and an unusual telephone call.

Starr taped all the other segments at his home studio in England, but agreed to wind up with a live show with calls from the audience.

The second call was from a listener who asked this question: "How are you getting along with John, Paul and George these days?"

Incredibly, the caller seemed unaware that John Lennon was shot to death in December 1980.

Nevertheless, Starr was fast on his feet. He answered, "I haven't been getting along too well with John lately. But I get along fine with the others."

Will 'Poppy' wither on Broadway?

LONDON (AP) — Backed by five American producers, the musical hit, "Poppy," has reopened on the West End and British critics are singing the praises of the Broadway-bound show once again.

"Poppy" has been redesigned and largely recast for the run that opened last month. Current plans are for the show, set during the 19th century Opium Wars in China, to go to Broadway in the spring in time to qualify for the Tony Awards.

But the show's eventual welfare in New York is a source of concern to Peter Harlock, the director of publicity and marketing for the Royal Shakespeare Co., which ran the musical in repertory.

The RSC has watched several of its shows fade on Broadway: "Piaf," "Good" and "All's Well That Ends Well." Harlock does not want "Poppy" to be the next casualty.

Texas is Conoco Country.

When Anthony Lucas discovered the great Spindletop Field near Beaumont in 1901, America overtook Russia as the world's leading oil producer. And a new era began in the development of the Lone Star state.

Soon wildcatters multiplied like jackrabbits, exploring for likely drilling sites. Some oil companies came and went. But others, like Conoco, found a home in Texas. And today, we continue to play an important role in one of the state's most important industries.

Texas is headquarters for Conoco's worldwide petroleum operations. The many parts of our worldwide petroleum business are all coordinated here. Operations and facilities span the state from Port Arthur to Pecos and from Corpus Christi to Amarillo. And next year, we're moving our petroleum headquarters in Houston to a new office complex on the west side of the city.

Texas ranks as Conoco's number one state for petroleum production. We operate more than 3,800 oil and gas wells here. And more than one-third of our domestic oil and one-quarter of our natural gas production comes from the state. Because we intend to continue producing in Texas for a long time, we are using new technologies to extend the life of old fields here and to develop alternative resources such as tar sands.

Throughout the state, our production facilities maintain the highest environmental standards. For example, we've been producing petroleum in the Aransas National Wildlife Refuge on the Gulf coast for almost 35 years in harmony with the ecology and wildlife.

Texas is a major market for our petroleum products—more than one billion gallons last year. There are almost 800 Conoco service stations here, owned and operated by independent business people who have helped make our gasoline and automotive products the Hottest Brand Going. We also market directly through about 50 stations, primarily under the JET brand.

Because Texas is the hub of Conoco's petroleum operations, our contributions to the state's economy are substantial. We employ about 4,300 people here with an annual payroll of $165 million. And in 1983, we are investing more than $300 million in Texas in new operations, facilities, and equipment.

We also support the state with taxes and royalty payments. Last year, Conoco provided Texas with more than $71 million in direct taxes and almost $5 million in royalty payments. And we collected more than $6 million in motor fuel taxes for the state.

To help make the place where we work a better place to live, Conoco is giving more than $1 million this year alone to philanthropic, educational, and cultural programs in Texas. Our contributions are helping to build the Wortham Theater Center in Houston, provide crisis housing at the Women's Shelter of Bexar County in San Antonio, fund the Children's Heart Institute of South Texas in Corpus Christi, and do much more.

From petroleum production to performing arts, we are an integral part of the Lone Star state. That's why we say with pride: Texas is Conoco Country.
