TWO U.S. PAN-AMERICA FLIERS KILLED

RANGERS WILL TAME OIL CITY OF "RAMSEY"

New Panhandle Boom Town To Know Weight Of Law's Power

"SALOONS" PUT UP

Meanwhile Federal Officers Stage Borger Raid Late Saturday

Special to The Record News.

AMARILLO, Feb. 26. — Two women and 43 men are in the Potter county jail here tonight as a result of federal raids in Borger today. They will be arraigned before U. S. Commissioner Jewel Scales here Monday on charges of sale of intoxicating liquors.

AMARILLO, Tex., Feb. 26.—Another "wickedest town in America" is about to make its appearance in the Panhandle section of the Southwest, where Borger, which gained the "distinction" of being the "wildest community" in the United States a few months ago, is located.

And in anticipation of the opening of this newest oil boom town, "Ramsey", two Texas rangers were ordered into the Hutchison county oil fields today.

Borger, thought tamed by the muzzles of menacing six-guns in the hands of rangers, prohibition agents and federal secret service operatives, is not losing its grasp on the name it earned in the early boom days of the Texas Panhandle oil fields, without a struggle.

Rangers on Way.

As the two rangers were making their way to a group of wooden buildings strewn over several acres of ground a half mile from the Ramsey brothers oil well, which opened the vast Oklahoma-Panhandle oil field, prohibition agents were again raiding Borger's "dehards."

Armed with search warants, fifteen dry agents, led by Frank V. Wright, prohibition administrator of Texas and Oklahoma, swooped down upon Borger today and searched place after place for the bootleg which has left in its wake murder, suicide and hi-jacking.

Ramsey, where the guns of the two rangers will bring law and order, is located in the heart of what was known for many years in the Texas Panhandle as "no man's land." The town is springing up around an old dug-out, which, in days gone by, was the rendezvous for robbers, bandits and other desperate characters who desired to evade the law for the course of time.

Indications that "Ramsey" will be "wide-open" is seen in the number of false front saloons and dance halls which have made their appearance in the last few days. And hardly before the paint on the new buildings had dried, habitues of the dance halls and saloons in the Borger of a few months ago flocked to the new mecca, their palms itching for the glittering gold that is always found in a newly discovered oil field.

To Clean Up Town.

"Ramsey" will be cleaned up, Borger flaunted its lawlessness to the whistling Panhandle winds until local officials called in rangers and federal operatives. The "bad men" and "painted women" quietly stole away and those who elected to take a fling "at law and order" are now Borger's leading citizens.

As Borger was tamed so will Ramsey be tamed, the two rangers say.

SIX BORGER MEN FIGURE IN ATTACK

BORGER, Feb. 26. (AP)—Two men were brutally beaten up, one wounded from a gun shot and left lying on the prairie for dead Friday night, when six men attacked them, one at a time and then attempted to make their escape from Electric City and Borger after cleverly planning the act.

Deputy Sheriff Tom Wilson and J. W. "Shine" Popejoy, of Electric City, were the victims of the gangsters. Deputy Wilson was badly beaten and bruised, while Popejoy, was shot through the forehead and seriously wounded.

Bill Parks and Bob Hanna, managers of the dance halls at Electric City and Pantex, were arrested by a posse of deputies under Sheriff Joe Owney after an all-night search that ended temporarily at daylight. The search was continued Saturday for the other four men who yesterday were still unknown.

Telephone lines out of Stinnett and Electric City were cut Friday night, evidently by the gangmen in planning their escape following the assault.

10 Per Cent Tax Penalty Goes in Effect

Pay up Monday or else—

Add 10 per cent to the amount of city and school taxes, in addition to 6 per cent for the time that the taxes are delinquent.

This was the ultimatum delivered Saturday by W. Ralph Hyer, city tax assessor and collector.

The last day for the payment of city and school taxes, without the addition of a 10 per cent penalty or the payment of 6 per cent interest, is Monday, according to a decree of the city council, which extended the time of tax payments from February 1 to February 28.

PROFESSOR SUES

Claim Against Man Whom Governor Pardoned Filed in Court

DALLAS, Feb. 26.(AP)—Suit for $48,856 was filed here Saturday by Prof. Morgan Callaway Jr., of the University of Texas against E. A. Decherd, former state senator, who recently was pardoned by former Gov. Miriam A. Ferguson.

Callaway alleges that on December 6, 1923, Decherd made a written obligation to him of $40,661 and that only one payment has been made. This was a payment of $19,000, January 1, 1925, the petition states. The amount asked includes attorney's fees, principal, interest and court costs.

Decherd was sentenced here to 12 years' imprisonment on charges of land fraud, but was granted a full pardon and did not serve any of the sentence.

BOULDER DAM'S DEFEAT SEEN

Proponents Lack Power To Halt Filibuster

By Universal Service.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 26.— The Boulder dam project is dead for the present session of congress, after the most magnificent battle waged in a decade for a piece of progressive, humanitarian legislation.

It was buried in the senate today beneath an avalanche of votes by administration senators, combined with the Democrats, in opposition to the cloture petition offered by Senator Hiram Johnson of California, co-author of the measure.

The vote was 59 to 32 against cloture, which, if adopted, would have crushed the bold filibuster that has thwarted the will of a majority of the senate for a week and would have given an opportunity for a vote on the merits of the Swing-Johnson bill.

The defeat of this last-resort move on the part of Senator Johnson means that Boulder canyon will remain a jagged gap in the Colorado river for another year at least. Both Senator Johnson and Representative Phil D. Swing of California expressed confidence of getting favorable action on their measure at the first session of the next congress.

Meanwhile, the mighty walls of the canyon instead of forming an anchorage for a towering 550-foot dam to check the angry Colorado, will remain a channel for the roaring floods that rush by to menace the lives and property of 85,000 men, women and children of Imperial Valley, Cal.

Senator Johnson and his cohorts went down with colors flying. But they realize the time is too short to get a vote in the senate between now and March 4. The situation in the house is equally hopeless.

TEXAS NEEDS 40 OFFICERS ON HIGHWAYS

Regular Police Negligent For Political Cause, Is Charge

HOUSE GETS BILL

State Road Patrol Force Proposed in Measure By Solons

AUSTIN, Feb. 26.(AP)—Claims that Texas needs 40 state highway patrolmen to enforce motor car lincese fee collection in sections where "local officers are lying down for political reasons" were made today in the house in support of a bill to create a patrol.

The bill was one of the three today to strike snags of discord and misconception, however, as several other measures have done recently, and action was deferred until Tuesday.

Several minor measures were engrossed, but the house, only branch of the legislature working Saturday, displayed only mild interest and at times it was hard to muster a quorum.

Amnesty Vote Seen.

The Love senate bill to repeal the amnesty act which restored to former Gov. James E. Ferguson the political citizenship taken from him by impeachment in 1917, probably will face the house about Wednesday.

Other weighty measures include the proposed constitutional amendment originating in the senate authorizing the legislature to fix the salaries of constitutional state officers which probably be acted on Tuesday.

The highway patrol bill by Representative Williamson of San Antonio and others was explained by Representative Petsch as needed to provide means for more efficient collection of motor license fees. He said the state is losing thousands of dollars every year because of laxity of collection.

Goaded by ridicule of Representative Hornaday, who said it would be "nonsense," to expect 40 men to cover the state, Petsch said the men would be transferred in groups to "localities where the local officers won't collect license fees on account of political reasons." Enforcement of the fee law is the main object of the proposed patrol he said. Hornaday had asserted that "the state might as well elect constables at large."

An amendment by Representative Williams of Austin to strike out provision for uniforming the patrol was adopted after Williams sarcastically suggested sending "a brass band along to head the parade."

These and kindred remarks concerning the other bills postponed were interpreted by the speaker and authors of the measure as revealing the temper of house members against any heavy Saturday while their senate colleagues were taking the day off. Facetiousness punctuated the session, which was adjourned at 1 p. m. until Monday.

Primary Bill Postponed.

It was agreed to postpone also until Tuesday Representative Durham's bill to institute a preferential primary system in Texas, and Representative Gray's bill to appropriate $30,000 as emergency apportionment funds for a scholastic overflow at Borger, whose available school money as based on the last census, is entirely inadequate.

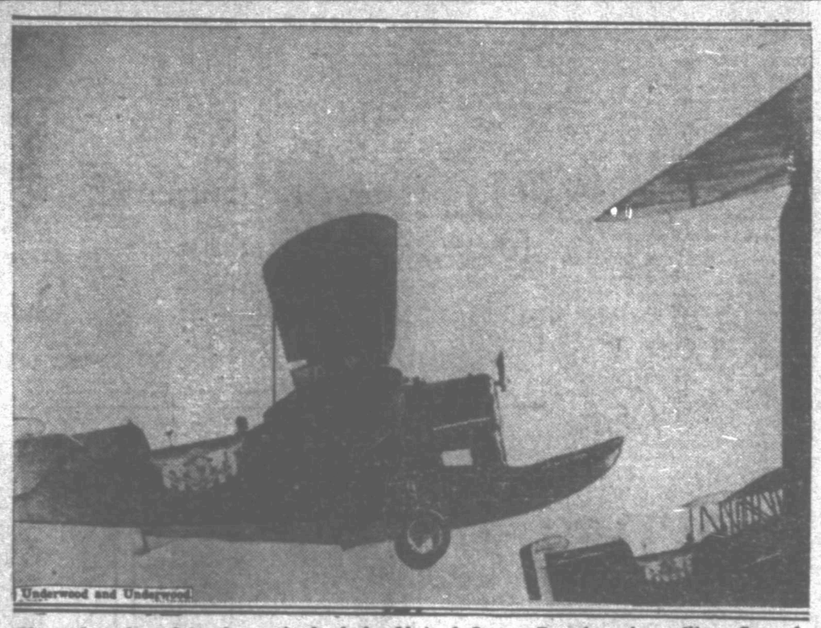

The house has worked until 6 p. m. nearly every day mowing down some of the legislation certain to be caught in the jam of regular session closing. The outstanding measure passed finally during the week a bill to regulate Junior college establishment to curb unwise tendencies along that line now manifest. Powerful opposition killed the Daniels bill for state licens of real estate operators.

The latter plane figured in the fatal collision with the New York.

MOODY HEARS PRISON PLEAS

Convicts He "Sent to Pen" Shake His Hand

FREEPORT, Texas, Feb. 26. (AP)—Pathetic stories of human suffering and remorse Saturday were poured into the ears of Gov. Dan Moody, paying his first visit to the prison system.

Moody listened to the pleas of the convicts, but in no instance promised clemency.

"I'll give your case careful consideration, if it comes before me," was the smiling answer he gave to most of the prisoners.

The most dramatic moment of the trip came when Moody shook hands with Foster Bell, whom he prosecuted and sent to prison for 11 years in two murder cases. Bell participated in the Sealy street fight of several years ago in which four men were killed.

Two of the men were brothers of Bell, and the other two were named Scaffner, a father and son from Bellville. The fight grew out of a controversy over the ku klux klan.

With Mrs. Moody, members of the state penitentiaries committee, and four members of the house of representatives, Texas' youngest governor inspected seven prison farms in Fort Bend and Brazoria counties, before arriving here to spend Saturday night.

The inspection will be resumed Sunday. Every member of the party was asked by at least one prisoner to help him obtain clemency.

A delegation of Fort Bend county citizens, headed by County Judge W. J. McFarlane of Richmond asked that the three prison farms in that county be abandoned by the state, and the 16,000 fertile acres be sold in small tracts and on long time payments to farmers.

BUENOS AIRES FLYING FIELD DEATH SCENE

Capt. C. F. Woolsey and Aide, Lieut. John Benton, Die As "Detroit" Burns

TWO OTHERS SAVED

Pilots of "New York," Other Ship in Collision, Escape Fate

BUENOS AIRES, Feb. 26.(AP) Death came today to two members of the United States army flight squadron just at the end of the first half of their good-will visit to the Americas. Captain Clinton F. Woolsey of Michigan, pilot of the Detroit and the squadron's maintenance officer, and Lieut. John W. Benton of California, the relief pilot and youngest of the aviators, were killed when the New York and Detroit collided in the air and crashed to earth.

Maj. Herbert A. Dargue, flight commander and pilot of the New York, the flagship of the squadron, and Lieut. Ennis C. Whitehead, his relief pilot, jumped from their machine and were landed by their parachutes safely.

Flying in close formation over the Palomar, field, a few miles from Buenos Aires, the Detroit slipped down upon the New York when the signal was given to break formation for landing purposes. The wings of the two planes became entangled and they went into a spin together, the Detroit taking fire. The other two planes, the St. Louis and San Francisco, proceeded to the landing place.

Two Leap to Safety.

Major Dargue and Lieut. Whitehead succeeded in leaping from their plane, but, according to Capt. Eaker of the San Francisco, Lieutant Benton was thrown free and was killed by the fall. An early version had it that Benton was burned to death when the Detroit came down in flames.

Commander Dargue announced later that the flight would be continued by the two undamaged machines, the fifth plane, the San Antonio, having only reached Coquimbo, Chile, today.

The bodies of the two valiant airmen were taken to an emergency hospital and later brought to Buenos Aires.

Eye-Witness Story.

Capt. Ira C. Eaker of the San Francisco, who was in a position of vantage in the air, witnessed the collision of the Detroit and New York.

"We had just flown in close formation," he said.

"The four planes formed a diamond over the landing field at Palomar, Major Dargue, piloting the New York at the head of the squadron signaled to the others the breaking up of the formation for the purpose of landing.

"Captain Woolsey, in the Detroit, in No. 3 position, and the New York, No. 2, turned out simultaneously, Woolsey to the left, Dargue to the right. The New York continued as did the St. Louis, slightly higher and to the rear.

"The Detroit turned upward and away from the New York several hundred feet; then turned back to the right and went into a slight dive.

"At that instant Woolsey was above the New York, and probably did not see it. The Detroit started a gentle gliding turn slightly toward the New York's left wing; the ships telescoped and began a spin as one plane.

"Very soon one parachute opened at an altidude of a thousand feet A second 'chute' opened at about 200 feet. Only two jumped in the parachutes. Another body fell free just before the planes struck the ground.

Crash at 1,400 Feet.

"The collision occurred at about 1,400 feet. I thought the New York was the plane most damaged, and from my position in the air, thought the two who had escaped were the Detroit's crew.

"On landing I found that Major Dargue and Lieutenant Whitehead had been saved by the parachutes.

"Lieutenant Benton fell without a chute, and Captain Woolsey remained in the front cockpit of the Detroit.

"The Detroit burned. The New York did not."

PLANES IN FORMATION AT TIME OF CRASH.

BUENOS AIRES, Feb. 26. (AP) The crash between the New York and Detroit occured as the planes were coming down for a landing on the Palomar flying field.

They were in close formation, and in the act of making a turn the wing of the New York crashed into the left wing of the Detroit.

The planes became entangled and instantly began to fall. The two pilots could be seen by the watchers attempting to restore the equilibrium of their falling machines, but to no avail.

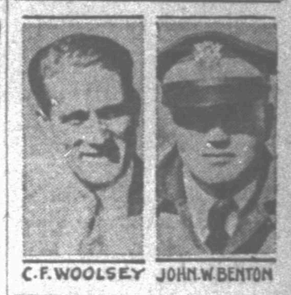

Within a moment, the Detroit was afire.

The four men aboard the planes, which were coming down rapidly, were observed adjusting their parachutes and making ready to jump. Lieutenant Benton for some reason was unable to get loose and was burned to death. His body was taken from the debris of the Detroit.

Cantonese Army Concentrates On Shanghai in Battle For Big Port

By Universal Service.

SHANGHAI, Feb. 26.—The Cantonese armies were today closing upon the city, their objective.

The defenders of Shanghai under General Sun Chaunfang are disorganized. Unless Chang Tso-Lin's armies can be rushed to the front within a very short time, the Cantonese will be in a strategic position to rush the city's gates.

Concentration of the Shantung forces continues. All night long, troop movements were made, bringing 15,000 Shantung soldiers to the front. Additional troop trains are arriving here every hour.

Conditions in the International settlements are more normal. Foreign troops command the first line defenses, ready to cope with any untoward demonstrations by the demoralized Chinese armies.

American troops are ready to disembark and throw their strength into the melee at any minute. The British marines will arrive tonight to augment already heavy forces. Japanese and Italian soldiers, supporting the other foreign forces, patrol the streets.

The hand of the "Red" is seen in the mix-up. One report, apparently well-founded, indicates that the Russian Soviet has promised the Cantonese leaders a fund of $7,000,000, if they will continue anti-British agitation.

Girl Gets Prison Sentence As One Of Principals in Negro Flogging

THOMASTON, Ga., Feb. 26. (AP)—Ruth Foster, 18, member of a prominent family in the agricultural community of this county, was today under suspended sentence of 12 months in the state penitentiary as the result of her conviction on a charge of participating in the flogging of a negro and his wife.

With her brother and four other men she stood trial Wednesday and was convicted. Her sentence was suspended. The others convicted were Claude Foster, Connie Watson, Jim Harvey and Olin Maulding.

Frank Gill and his wife, the negroes, testified that the five men and the girl came to their home one night about two weeks ago and accused them of stealing liquor. Despite their pleas of innocence, the witnesses said, their assailants took them from their house and whipped them severely.

Miss Foster admitted she accompanied the men, but denied actual participation in the assault. She remained in an automobile, she said, while her companions went to the negro home.

TRAGIC EVENT MARKS FLIGHT

Planes Crash As They Were About to Land

troit succeeded in making the leap, but Woolsey's parachute failed to open and he was killed by the fall.

Dargue and Whitehead came down safely and were not injured.

The Detroit was burned, while the New York was wrecked.

Many persons who had gathered to witness the landing at the flying field, saw instead a dreadful tragedy in which the two American aviators who had only a few minutes before been complimented on their skill, met death.

TRAGEDY ENTERS HOME WHERE CHILDREN WAIT

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 26.—Tragedy entered a little home amid the tree-clad hills of the Presidio, army headquarters here tonight, when Mrs. John W. Benton was notified that she had been made a widow by the crash of an army plane in South America in which her husband, Lieut. Benton and another flier lost their lives. Two children were rendered fatherless by the crash.

The news was broken to Mrs. Benton at her home in "officer's row" at the Presidio by a newspaperman.

At the same time a telegram was sent to Redding, Cal., where Benton's mother lives. His father is dead.

Lieut. Benton had been stationed at Crissy field, the army flying station, connected with the Presidio, for four years and there Mrs. Benton and her two children were watching with pride his flight as a member of the "good will" squadron over South American countries.

"One of the best fliers in the country," was the tribute paid him by his officer comrades here.

Lieut. Benton had been in the flying service nine years and during that time had practically "grown up" with the service as he was only 29 years of age recently.

HALF OF FLIGHT HAD JUST BEEN COMPLETED.

SAN ANTONIO, Feb. 26.(AP)—The Pan-American good-will fliers had completed about half their 20,000 mile journey, which started from San Antonio December 21, when disaster overtook the New York and the Detroit at Buenos Aires today.

The flight of the five amphibian planes and their crews of ten was beset with difficulty from the outset. They were delayed a day in hopping off from Duncan Field here by rain and fog. Duncan Field became a quagmire, and the five planes were moved to Kelly Field from which they took off the next day after several hours delay because of fog. Then at Tampico, Mexico, the planes became separated. On the hop-off from Tampico four of the planes turned back because of engine trouble, but one continued the flight to Vera Cruz, being joined later by the four.

Five Amphibian Planes.

The five amphibian planes were a curious mixture o fthe aerial and the nautical, having both wheels and hull and being at home on both land and water. They were built with a view to carrying a maximum weight at a maximum speed.

Major Herbert A. Dargue, pilot of the flagship New York, which collided with the Detroit, is one of the most experienced aviators in the United States army.

He was a pilot with Pershing Mexico in 1925. While reconnoitering with Captain R. H. Willis below Parral one day, his airplane crashed in rough mountainous country. Both the fliers were slightly injured and they wandered for 45 hours without food and water until they reached the advance lines o fthe Pershing expedition.

Major Dargue is credited with being the first man to receive a radio message in an airplane. He taught Maj. Gen. Mason M. Patrick, chief of the army air service, to fly. He is 40 years old and is a graduate of West Point.

All Fliers Married.

Lieut. Ennis C. Whitehead, who escaped death with Major Dargue by leaping with his parachute, is a Kansan, and was once a reporter for the Topeka Capital. He flew one of the army planes in the 1925 Pulitzer races.

All the fliers involved in the crash were married. Captain Woolsey's widow was reported here to be visiting relatives in Belgium. Mrs. Benton was said to be at Crissy Field, Calif.

Major Dargue's wife was believed to be in Washington or with relatives in New York state, and Mrs. Whitehead was reported to be in

AIR SERVICE OFFICIALS GLOOMY OVER MISHAP

By Universal Service.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 26.—War department and army air service headquarters were plunged in gloom tonight when news of the crash of two of the Pan-American "Good Will Flight" planes, with the deaths of two officers reached here.

The 20,000-mile tour of Central and South America began December 21., when five amphibian planes, able to alight on either land or water, "hopped off" from San Antonio, Texas. Major Herbert A. Dargue was in command.

Nearly 7000 miles had been covered by the planes, without serious mishap, to date. The most hazardous leg of the flight, over the Andes mountains, had been negotiated with ease.

The aviators were fairly started on the third division of their flight when the crash occurred. The first division took them from San Antonio to Mexico, Guatemala, Salvador, Honduras, Costa Rica, to France Field, Panama canal zone.

On the second division, the fliers visited Bolivia, Colombia, Peru and Chile, proceeding down the west coast of South America. From Valdivia, Ichile, the planes crossed the Andes to Neuquen, Argentina, the first "hop" of the third division of the flight.

From Neuquen they proceeded to Bahia Blanco, Argentina, a few days ago.

Buenos Aires was the next scheduled stop, on the northward journey.

Due to motor troubles and accidents to landing gear, only four of the planes were still in the flight. The other plane was disabled in the Central American stage of the flight, before reaching the Panama canal.

West Texas Towns Preparing For Record Attendance at C-C Convention

The people of West Texas are expecting the greatest entertainment ever afforded at the annual meeting of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce convention, which will be held in Wichita Falls May 16 and 17, it is indicated as the result of a visit to Amarillo, Plainview and Lubbock by H. J. Adair, publicity manager for the Wichita Falls Chamber of Commerce.

"Sweetwater and other places are already discussing their plans for the special train", Adair said Saturday afternoon on his return.

"Sweetwater is making plans to offer a strong bid for the next conference and with that in view is making big plans for a special train. The South Plains is taking great interest in the convention and as usual as making big plans for the celebration. These people are still rejoicing over the railroad plans which will give them direct connections with this city.

"The idea of the Congress of Nations is taking well with all the people wherever the plan has been presented in detail. Many of the cities are entering enthusiastically into the plans and if nothing happens this feature should undoubtedly make one of the most colorful parades or pageants that has ever been presented in the Southwest."

Manager Homer D. Wade of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce has advised local chamber officials that he is expecting at least 50,000 visitors in Wichita Falls on both days of the convention.

"People are unusually enthusiastic about the meeting in Wichita Falls," he said, "and we are expecting this to be the greatest convention in the history of the organization."

THREE HELD IN LIQUOR RAID

75 Gallon Still Seized By Sheriff

A lone house situated in a field about two miles east of Iowa Park and a mile north of the Wichita Falls-Electra highway sheltering a huge 75-gallon still, said to have been operating night and day for the past three weeks, was raided by Sheriff W. G. Bralley and his deputies early Saturday afternoon.

Charges of possession and manufacture of whiskey were filed before Assistant District Attorney E. F. Fruechte against Clyde Jackson, Clifford Duckworth and Bernice Miller.

The building, from appearances a well kept farm house, contained all of the apparatus necessary to the manufacture of whiskey, four large barrels filled with mash, and about 15 gallons of liquor newly made.

According to Sheriff Bralley the mash in the barrels was still warm when the house was raided, and the still appeared to have been recently filled.

Cross, Feverish Child is Bilious or Constipated

Look, Mother! See if tongue is coated, breath hot or stomach sour

"California Fig Syrup" can't harm tender stomach, liver, bowels

Every mother realizes after giving her children "California Fig Syrup," that this is their ideal laxative, because they love its pleasant taste and it thoroughly cleanses the tender little stomach liver and bowels without griping.

When cross, irritable, feverish, or breath is bad, stomach sour, look at the tongue, mother. If coated, give a teaspoonful of this harmless, "fruity laxative," and in a few hours all the foul, constipated waste, sour bile and undigested food passes out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again. When the little system is full of cold, throat sore, has stomachache, diarrhoea, indigestion, colic—remember, a good "inside cleansing" should always be the first treatment given.

Millions of mothers keep "California Fig Syrup" handy; they know a teaspoonful today saves a sick child tomorrow. Ask your druggist for a bottle of "California Fig Syrup," which has directions for babies, children of all ages and grown-ups printed on the bottle. Beware of counterfeits sold here, so don't be fooled. Get the genuine, sold by "California Fig Syrup Company."—Adv.

PRODUCTION SWELLS WITH BIG WELLS COMPLETED

ARCHER FIELDS SCORE WELLS

Graham Area Booming With New Development

Oil operators in the Wichita Falls district took advantage of a week of ideal weather during the past seven days and satisfactory results were obtained in a large number of tests, work on which had previously been retarded by inclement weather.

The Turberville pool in Archer county, the old stand-by, continues to pay dividends to lease holders there. About 2,000 barrels of flush production was added to this area with the completion of five wells. L. T. Burns' 50 acres up in block 142, Carson survey, is turning out to be about the best "fifty" in Archer county. Not only is the regular 1450 foot sand unusually prolific but to add a little more glitter to this golden tract, an entire new sand which is apparently good for production was discovered this week in Burns' No. 6-D at 1318-23 feet.

Burns' three producers were Nos. 4, 5 and 7 which swabbed 250, 300 and 800 barrels respectively from the regular pay. In the American pool, block 151, the No. 11 found the sand at 1501-02 feet and is being equipped to pump with the hole standing full of oil. The Marland Oil company again tapped the southwest trend in its lease in block 172 and No. 18 swabbed 400 barrels initial from the 1500 foot level.

Duster In 157.

An attempt to connect the portions of the pool failed when Simmes Oil company and Consolidated drilled into salt water in their No. 3 Turberville, located in block 157. This failure gives a lusty jolt to a sizeable territory between the areas.

In the Consolidated pool in southeast Archer the Consolidated-Underwood No. 3 found the pay at 1000 to 1010 feet and is being put on the pump estimated at 100 barrels.

The Camp-Hedrick Drilling company completed Munester's premier producer in their No. 2 Kelley which swabbed 225 barrels from sand at 1315-24 feet. This is the fourth producing well in the townsite pool.

The heavy play being given the East Graham area in south Young county is causing a mild boom in the hustling county seat town. Besides the Morrison pool just east of Graham, the South Bend pool farther south takes on more life daily. The largest well of the week in the East Graham area was Coons and Hotchkiss' No. 1 Mathis in the J. W. Terry survey, which swabbed 405 barrels from sand at 2250 to 2253 feet. Pitzer and West, while their No. 2 Boozer is blowing itself in for an undetermined output, completed their No. 1 Mitchell in the pay at 2142-63 feet and it pumped 125 barrels initially.

Wichita County.

Following a series of dusters in the M. A. Love pool southeast of Iowa Park in Wichita county, Cooper and McLaughlin finished thir No. 2 Love in the W. S. Kinnard survey for a big producer. It swabbed at the rate of 500 barrels in the first gauge from the sand at 1510 feet. In the Sheldon pool northeast of Electra, Sheldon, et al, effected a slight extension in their No. 1 Honaker which swabbed 90 barrels from the regular pay. One of the pioneer deep tests in the Burkburnett area was a failure in Continental and Magnolia No. 1 Beach which was abondoned at 3502 feet.

The slash in crude prices which greeted the fraternity on Tuesday apparently will have little if any effect on local operations, judging by the number of new locations announced during the week. In Archer and Young counties alone more than 60 new locations were announced and increases in new operations were reported from most of the other counties of the district.

Pipeline runs went back over the 100,000 barrel figure, gaining 700 barrels over the p[rev]ious week.

News of The Fields

KOLL-TEX, VAN HORN.

Maer and Staniforth have made location to put down a test approximately 800 feet east of the Plains Production company producer on the B. Z. Lyles land, the new location being 350 feet from the north and west lines of the south 40 of the north 80 of the south 270 acres of the Day Land and Cattle company survey in Archer county and on the L. F. Wilson land.

MINTON, WILSON.

COOKE COUNTY.

Jack Abernathy has spudded in his second wildcat south of Gainesville in Cooke county and is drilling below 1200 feet in No. 1 Hundt, located in the Francis Godley survey and one mile west of the Dayton Godley test recently drilled by Abernathy, McElreath and Suggett are rigging up for their No. 1 Joe Fischer, south of Muenster.

DEEP ROTARY TEST.

The Security Drilling company is rigging up to drill No. 30 McClusky for the Panhandle Refining company in the South Bend pool of Young county. This test is to go to the 3800-foot horizon and will be watched with interest as it is the first attempt at drilling to this sand with rotary tools. Panhandle's No. 7 McClusky, which is being deepened is drilling at 3790 feet.

TRADING 'HOT' IN PECOS AREA

Producers In West Texas Are Being Drilled Deeper

SAN ANGELO, Feb. 26.—The hottest sector in West Texas oil play during the week and in spite of the slump in oil prices the lease and royalty activity was spirited, was in eastern Pecos and western Crockett county, all on account of the Midkansas Oil and Gas Company's Yates No. 2 which came in two weeks ago drilled itself in until it gunged at one 24 hour period 6,538 barrels. The Midkansas Oil and Gas Company's Yates No. 1, account 2, was flowing Friday 20 barrels hourly from 1,323 feet. The first pay was struck at 1,195 with production of one barrel hourly between that depth and 1,205 feet. At 1,218 feet the showing increased. Drilling is being carried on cautiously. The surface elevations, the tops of the pays, and the total depths on the three wells in the Yates area follow:

	No. 1.	No. 2.	Accnt. 2.
Elevation	2,401	2,422	2,610
Top of Pay	892	899	1,185
Total depth	1,005	1,001	1,223

Majors Buy Heavily.

In the meantime the activities of the majors had resulted in their leasing of a number of large blocks in the strictly wildcat territory in Culberson, Terrell, Hudspeth, Brewster, Borden counties, some of them being large as 80,000 acres and most of them of the ten-year paid up variety. The Tidal and the Monarch Royalty company established offices here this week. M. W. Shriver, J. A. Johnson and Jesse Finston all of Tulsa bought 60,000 acres in south central Pecos and will drill three wells there.

The Simms-Atlantic No. 2 A, University, northern Crane county, has been pinched in and the Humble Pipe Line is taking all the flow, which before pinching in had made an average of 7,000 barrels a day.

The Simms Atlantic No. 1-A, Crane county, is drilling deeper with the hope of increasing production to the volume of the No. 2-A. The Magnolia O'Keefe No. 3 University has been drilled seven feet deeper with a number of heads made during the process but no guage has been taken. The Simms Atlantic made four locations in the Church Fields area near the big gusher.

On the Estep lease in Upton county the Marland is drilling several of its producing wells deeper.

In Upton County.

The T. P. Lane No. 1-A, in the southeast extension of to the Burleson area in Upton county which came in for better than 1,700 barrels a day has increased its flow to 2,525 barrels daily. The pay was increased from 2,010 to 2,020 with the formation passing out of the pay at 2,023.

The Independent Oil and Gas company's No. 13 Wooley flowed 140 barrels an hour after tapping the pay at 2,150 and the Roxana No. 8 Bowen was making Friday 60 barrels hourly. The Independent well in section 3, block R. G. C. and S. F. Ry. survey. The Roxana well is in the northwestern part section 6, G. C. S. F. Ry. survey.

Tidal Oil company No. 1-E. topped the pay at 2,930 and was drilling Thursday at 2,946 with 1,200 feet oil in the hole. In the same area, the Prairie Oil and Gas company's No. 4-A and an offset to the Simms Atlantic No. 1-9 University topped the pay at 2,965 and was drilling at 3,105 with a hole full of oil.

In Ector county the Tidal is reported to have bought one-half of the Maxwell and Thurman acreage in the Ector county ranch of John Scharbauer, involving between 6,000 and 7,000 acres for $150,000. The play in this area has been to the northwest of the Cosden-Connell No. 1-A. The Magnolia has bought at $6 base $49,000 worth of royalty in Pecos county.

The Texas company scored another producer in the King lease when its No. 20 King came in for 28 barrels an hour flowing Friday morning. It is located in the northwestern part of the Taylor Hughes area in Upton county.

A show of oil was encountered Friday at 1,375 in the Marland Mabry Taylor No. 1 Sansom Cattle company, Concho county had a slight showing of oil.

The Republic Powell No. 2, Powell field, Crockett county, made 187 barrels in the first fourteen hours according to an official guage. The depth is 2,671.

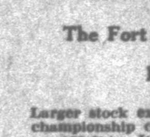

A general movement to make the roads better in this area and the fields more accessible is finding reflection in a numerous bond elections to be called on road improvements.

OIL "SPIRIT" IN NEW BOOM TOWN

Ramsey Takes On Appearance of Second Borger

BOISE CITY, Okla., Feb. 26. (AP)—Petroleum is the permeating spirit of Ramsey, mushroom oil town that is springing up near the Ramsey discovery well in the northwest corner of the Oklahoma Panhandle, 11 miles north of here.

The town, which is being organized by E. R. Johnson, Boise City banker, and associates, was named in honor of W. R. and W. E. Ramsey, brothers who drilled the well on a state-owned tract.

Its streets are named after oil men and its avenues bear the names of oil towns, such as Eldorado, Amarillo and Trinidad.

Local color, in the form of dance halls and surreptitious gambling places and saloons, has not yet arrived at Ramsey, although it is characteristic of virtually every boom oil town that has sprung up in Oklahoma.

An example of the bounds that values have taken since the first oil issued from the mouth of the Ramsey well several weeks ago, is found in the investment of an itinerant Kansas broom cor buyer. This man purchased 25 lots in Boise City at $1 each several months ago. Since the discovery of oil he has sold three of the lots for $100 each and still has 22 of the tracts.

Roberts-Allday Wildcat Opens Young Co. Pool

Swabbing 100 barrels of oil from three feet of sand topped at 835 feet Saturday, the Roberts Oil company and others' No. 1 Keen Graham in northeast Young county spectacularly opened up a new pool for that district.

The sand was being drilled deeper Saturday and the output was expected to be materially increased.

This new producer is located 460 feet north and east of the southwest corner of the west 125 acres of the Keen-Graham and in section 2401, T. E. & L. survey. It is two and one-half miles southeast of the old Benson pool and approximately one and one-half miles northeast of the Monroe well which is the only producer in its immediate vicinity.

This important discovery it on a structure worked out by C. W. Clark, Wichita Falls geologist, and Henry Craig of Olney.

Besides the Roberts Oil company of Breckenride the well is owned by the Allday Oil corporation of Wichita Falls, the Atlantic Oil Producing company and C. W. Clark.

SUCCESS MET IN SHUT DOWN

Operators Co-Operate to Cut Seminole Production

TULSA, Okla., Feb. 26.—Good co-operation in bringing about a general shutdown in the Seminole field was reported yesterday by Ray Collins, umpire.

Mr. Collins spent practically all day canvassing producers who have properties in the pool, and said that the situation looks encouraging. He declared, however, that results should not be expected too soon, as it will take time to get the plan adopted by the shutdown committee under way. Mr. Collins will spend part of his time in the field and the remainder in Tulsa.

Production for the last 24 hours was 308,006 barrels, a decline of 3500 barrels from the previous day, and a falling off of approximately 20,000 barrels in the last three days.

It was announced by the Prairie Oil & Gas company that a number of their drilling wells in the Bowlegs pool will be shut down.

Burnsdall Oil corporation ordered additional storage to be erected on its leases in the Seminole field. The order covers 17 30,000-barrel tanks, the approximate cost of each to be $30,000, or a total expenditure of $510,000.

Landon-Hill Hooks With Panhandle In Title Series

Half-and-Half Champions Stage Double-Header On Junior College Court Tuesday With Rubber, If Any, Wednesday

The smoothly-functioning Landon-Hill machine stormed the championship heights the past week, walloping the Guardsmen and Continental and wading automatically into the championship of the last half of the Commercial basketball league drive when the Guardsmen turned around and faced Panhandle Friday night for a 3-point victory.

As a result of the meteoric finish by the Landon cagers, one week's play has been lopped off the schedule and Panhandle, first half champs, will open a championship series play-off with Chubby Neal's men Tuesday night on the Junior college court.

The Guards will take Draughons in a grudge battle Tuesday at 7 o'clock after which Pan and Landon hook up in a double-header, the first two games of a scheduled three-game series. The team copping the series will win the city championship. If one team makes both ends of the twin bill Tuesday the race will be over, but if they split the games a third melee is to be staged Wednesday night on the woman's league program.

The Wichita Falls champions will invade Fort Worth March 4 (that's next Friday) to do battle with Fort Worth's champs in the first inter-city lap on the roadway to a possible Texas amateur athletic federation championship.

John Tyson's doughty Panhandlers have not shown so well the past four games, but ardent Oiler fans are firm in the belief they will rally smartly and take the speeding sporting goods outfit to a quick cleaning. 'Tis said the Oilers have been taking it easy the last few games, not rushing matters any because they are champs of the first portion of the split drive and were to be given a double whack at the title win or lose.

Tyson's squad pins gobs of faith on the husky Rawls to Dead-Eye-Dick the championship. Rawls' phenomenal accuracy at the basket all winter has created quite a furore in the league and has had opposing teams on the verge of nervous breakdowns every time he hooked his claws into the ball.

Most of Landon-Hill's hope will be tacked on the work of Gantner, forward, and John Clary, guard. These stars have flashed brightly all season.

YOU'LL FIND IT IN THE "CARTE"

Roy Grove, sports writer and artist for the Record News, told you what would happen in the recent Delaney-Maloney fight a week in advance.

"Delaney must win the fourth round to stay in the elimination contest," said Grove. "Beyond this point the French Canadian tires and the fight will go to Maloney in the tenth on points. The modern classic is a replica of the famous McCoy-Sharkey fight."

BATTLER FREED

Theft of Film Charged Against Former Fighter

BUTTE, Mont., Feb. 26. (AP)—The missing film which caused the filing of charges of robbery against "Battling" Nelson, former world's lightweight champion, was returned yesterday to W. J. Sullivan, manager of the theater from which it was alleged Nelson stole the film last March. The charges will be dropped, Sullivan announced.

MOODY MEAN SWIMMER

Max Moody of the University of Minnesota, varsity swimmer, is looked upon as a dangerous contender for collegiate laurels. He is credited with lowering the short tank record of 100 yards free style from the 0:53 4-5 to 0:53 3-5 in the 60-foot home pool.

Masonic Lodge May Build Gym

"Wichita Athletic Club" Has Been Incorporated

The Wichita Falls athletic horizon assumed another roseate tint Saturday with announcement outlook is exceptionally bright in direction of realization of still another and successful gymnasium project. The National guard plans construction of a gym in conjunction with an armory. A. Y. M. C. A. committee supposedly is bearing down on the practicability of opening a finance drive for erection of a Young Men's Christian association building and completely equipped gym.

Meanwhile, Wichita Falls Masonic lodge, 635, takes into heavy consideration the idea of construc-t ing a gymnasium, regulation basket ball court and the like in connection with the building of a Masonic structure, already planned, on Scott avenue between Ninth and Tenth.

The gymnasium project represented by P. B. Curd, Lester Jones and C. C. Frazee was put before the lodge finance committee. It passed. The proposition must now be placed before the lodge proper. A meeting is to be held next Saturday for settlement.

The ramrods o fthe project already have stepped out and lined up a corporation. The "Wichita Athletic Club" was incorporated during the week at $5000 by L. Heineman, W. S. Rowe and W. L. Guthrie.

The Houston pitching staff now includes lefthanders Ed Clough, Myers, Crandall and Irving and right handers Bery, Berniers, Boyd, Carleton, Dorey, Frankhouse, Hardway, Jacobus, Moore, Penner, Pipkin and Shelberg.

WITH GEORGE MORIARTY — MANAGER DETROIT TIGERS

In landing Tris Speaker, Clark Griffith is satisfied that he has put one over on the various American league clubs that participated in the brisk bidding match for the services of the former Indian pilot.

Griffith figured he could well afford to outbid the others for a couple of excellent reasons. The first advantage was the realization that Speaker's presence in center field would give Washington the fleetest trio of fly chasers it has ever had.

Another important consideration is the fact that Speaker hit .343 in the Senators' ball orchard last season, while his mark for the entire summer was only .304.

Last, but not least, business instinct tells Griff that the handsome salary he is paying "Spoke" would amount to less than the purchase price, if the Gray Streak had not been a free agent.

Which leads us to believe that the cognomen "Old Fox" has not been applied in vain to the proprietor of the Senators.

Sam Jones, erstwhile Yankee, recently traded to the St. Louis Browns for Cedric Durst and Joe Giard, seems to be the hoodoo flinger of the American league. Possessed of a world of stuff, Sam seldom is able to get by in a season without the breaks going consistently against him. Before a game at the Yankee stadium last summer, Sam told me about his hard luck, and was evidently trying to find a solution that would put him back in winning form. "It can't be my arm," said Jones, "because it feels as free and easy as ever. Neither is it my control, because I can put the ball in the groove or over the corners whenever I try. I never get excited, and I keep mixing my deliveries as wisely as possible, yet I can't strike a winning gait, so I'm waiting for someone to tell me what is wrong."

All the ball players in the American league believe that Jones should be one of the greatest pitchers in the business, which only adds to the mystery of his ineffectiveness. Dan Howley, manager of the Browns, told me at the Asheville meeting that he was sweet on Jones, and would like to land him.

Dan was a backstop of much wizardry during his playing days, and he is going to make a powerful effort to separate Jones from his constant jinx this summer.

Helen Wills Back In Her Net Togs

Former Court Queen Out To Regain Throne

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 26.—Helen Wills, queen of American tennis courts for three years and the young maid who dethronod Mrs. Molla Bjurstedt Mallory, seven times champion, has started an intensive training campaign to re-establish herself on the tennis throne.

She is holding religiously to a program of two sets of tennis each day and a rigid course of setting up exercises and walks to regain her old form.

Miss Wills was forced to undergo an operation for appendicitis after facing Mlle. Suzanne Langlen on the French courts last spring. She returned to the game later in the summer but found that the operation had weakened her and was advised to retire from tourney play for the season. She was forced to default, therefore, in the national women's tourney.

Mrs. Mallory, playing through a brilliant field of American and European stars, regained the title, which Helen had held three years.

Left Ankle Heals Then Right Comes Up Ailing

AUSTIN, Feb. 26.—Leo Baldwin, of Wichita Falls, all-around Longhorn athlete, who has been prevented from varsity competition since track season of last spring due to a torn ligament in his left ankle, is now going about the campus with his right foot in a cast.

It is the result of a fractured achilles bone received while scampering over a basketball court for training exercise a few days ago. At first the injury was not considered serious, but X-ray examination showed that the splinter of bone extended up beside the ankle socket.

Physicians fixed it back in place and put the foot in a cast, with the purpose of permitting it to grow back in place.

While Baldwin had no intention of getting in varsity competition this spring, pending the healing of his old injury, he had been taking his daily routine of conditioning exercises, calculated to keep him in top form pending another football season. But the new injury will prevent even this for a space of about six weeks, it is thought.

Many critics of Longhorn athletes and their doings have often made the assertion that Baldwin is the greatest all-around athlete ever to put foot upon the university campus. His ability in baseball, football and track is outstanding. In basketball he is a capable performer. Loss of his services, along with that of Ed Beular's, was a serious blow to Longhorn football last fall.

Spring Odds Favor Giants and Macks

NEW YORK, Feb. 26.(AP)—Spring prices quoted today by New York betting commissioners against the chances of 16 major league teams made the Giants and Athletics favorites to win their respective 1927 pennant races. Odds were offered at 2 to 1 against each club.

The chances of the Yankees in the American league, winners in 1926, were fixed at 3 to 1, while the St. Louis Cardinals, world's champions, were rated at no better than 5 to 1. Ahead of the Bresdon entry was rated the Pittsburgh Pirates at 4 to 1.

Spuds Start Week With Six Athletes In Harness

Turgeon, Fussell, Jenkins, Estill, White, Sargent On Deck Already—Batteries Start Unlimbering Tuesday

Old Man Basketball is on the verge of taking a run-out powder and leaving the way clear to King Baseball as far as Wichita Falls is concerned. Already one of the city's titular races has been settled, a second nears an end and a third is galloping merrily on to a finish three weeks hence.

Meantime, the game made famous by K. M. Landis, Dutch Leonard and Swede Risberg has shot its vanguards onto the field of battle.

Four members of the Wichita Falls baseball squad which this spring looms as powerful as ever did a Wichita Falls team, trekked in the past week and joined the lone Spudder pair, Pete Turgeon and Fred Russell, who held over here during the winter, augmenting—if you are only fair at your arithmetic, the squad to an even six.

Pitchers Sunk Now.

The newcomers were none other than Terrible Tut Jenkins, the arch-assassin of pitching dreams and the Texas league's king in the bludgeon who led 'em all a merry chase for slugging honors in the 1926 season; Tom Estell, the worthy spitballer; Jess Sargent, rookie lefthander from the coast who blew in with enthusiastic recommendations beating him a long way to the punch; and Long Beach Lester White, the cotton-topped, unemotional starboarder who last year stacked up as a pitching diamond in the rough until he wrenched a rib or something and temporarily lost his effectiveness.

Lester and Jess rolled in Thursday. The two Toms hit town Friday. All four of 'em with Pete and Fred hit the deck Saturday afternoon and indulged in a light limbering-up calesthenics while Gardner and Sec. Airey sat around admiring recent improvements made in the archard, stand, port palisade and this and that.

Bert, the trainer, has everything shipshape at the club house. Estell is the only inhabitant right now, but the Spudder Man Friday is standing by expecting a deluge of athletes almost any hour.

Manager Carl Williams is due in town Sunday afternoon, according to wire received last night. Battery work proper is scheduled to swing under way Tuesday or Wednesday at the latest.

Straggling In.

The gang will be stringing right along all this week even though the inner and outer garden crew has not been ordered to answer roll call before March 10.

Jenkins came in ahead of the squad because he figures that if he is to hold the pace he set last year he should obtain all the preliminary training benefits possible. Pete, the banker, dopes it not that he's in pretty fair shape but just naturally mustn't run any risk of not being at his very best when the opening gong is sounded April 12, so he's at the plate every day now thawing the icicles out of winter-stiffened sinews. Fussell looks like a million bucks. In the best early spring shape ever in his life and all rearing to start curving 'em just as soon as the weather warms up a little more.

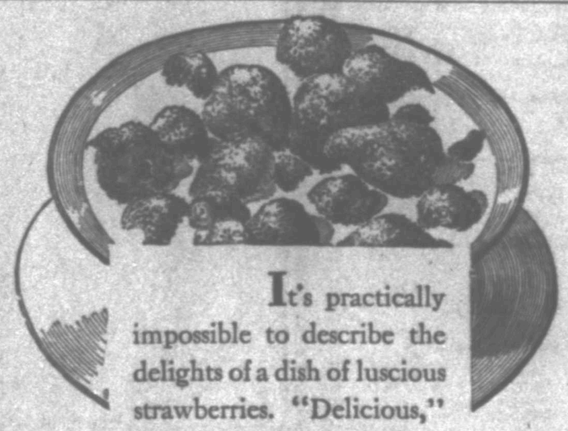

GOOCH CATCHES

PASO ROBLES, Feb. 26.—John Gooch, veteran Pittsburgh Pirate catcher, was the first casualty of the spring training season which began here this week. Gooch has been confined to his bed for three days with an attack of "flu." His fever today reached a temperature of 103, but his condition is not considered serious.

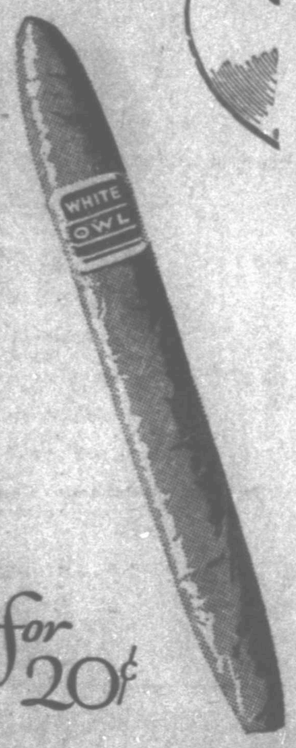

Manager Owen Bush declared today that the pirates are stronger now than when they won the world's series in 1925.

GROVER REACHES 40

AVON PARK, Fla., Feb. 26, (AP)—Grover Cleveland Alexander, pitching ace of the last world's series, observes the 40th anniversary of his birth today. He is getting under way deliberately for the 17th major league campaign.

It's practically impossible to describe the delights of a dish of luscious strawberries. "Delicious," you'll say.. "satisfying".. "sweet as honey".. but these are just words.. inadequate words. The taste of strawberries can ONLY be realized through personal experience.

NOT BAD IDEA.

Now that the great irrational pastime and the session of alibis almost are with us, it would not be out of order to attribute recent reverses of the Wichita Falls polo team to poor spring training facilities and wet weather.

Caught Over the Counter.

Two slightly bedraggled male persons, stamped with the ever legible trade mark of traveling commodity-dispensers, cantering several degrees to starboard, slowly floated into Arthur's enchilada emporium late the other night and after a minimum, considering an apparently shifting ballast, trajectory-taking, got the aim, tossed out the spring lines and moored to the dock.

* * *

The glistening orbs of one inebriate strayed to the open copy of an early mail edition resting on the counter. He scanned it unsteadily, then:

"Looksh, thish guy Pupulino wins and turnsh two flips to shelebrate."

"Yesh, and he'll turn shum more flips 'n it won't be shelebration either if he ge's shin rings with Sharkey or thish Muloney," urgled the other solemnly.

"Or Jack Dempshey," added another one, nodding knowingly.

"Naw, Jack 'shno good anymore."

"Well, yuh gotta hand it tuh Jacksh. He'll fightsh any man living for tree-quartersh million dollarsh any ol' day," staunchly retorted party of the first part.

It finally simmered down that these sporting gentlemen had approached a certain whisper joint, found the proprietor absent and the doors barred. Did they hesitate? Nope. Hustled around and learned from one of the neighbors the proprietor's other 50 per cent had gone to church a few blocks away. So these gay blades attended church, also. Rounded up the lady of the house after the meeting and straightaway were recompensed in the liquid mode they desired. That's life and another angle.

ANOTHER TOUGH BREAK.

Tom Estell, the famed exponent of the saliva spheriod, sailed into camp early, he says, more to confer with Spud Prez Gardner than anything else about what he terms a very peculiar situation. "I hear," says Thomas, "that Dallas won the 1927 pennant a month ago. Now, if that's right I want to toddle on back to the farm without going through any unnecessary labor here."

Nothing peculiar about that. Six other teams grabbed the gonfalon more than a month ago, too.

Can You Imagine This Guy?

Picture anybody endeavoring to auction anything off on Breezy Guy Airey. Joe Persky, the reformed motor jockey, took a fling at selling something or other to the frugale Spud business manager for a souvenir book the constabulary is getting up in connection with a circus it intends to pull some day. Atmosphere in characteristic Hebraic style countered by offering to play if the city cops will purchase a fullsize advertisement plot on the Spudder left field fence.

LAY OFF, WILL YUH.

It is with a feeling of having set out to perform a very noble task that I arise in defense of the eminent Mr. Swedish Thor Jensen from attack of the gallery god who accused him of being an "alley athlete." Mr. Swedish Thor Jensen by all means is not of that type. He may be related in a manner to the tumble-and-roll gentlemen of the well-known "alley oop" variety, but it is a certainty one can not connect Mr. Swedish Thor with the other classification. Mr. Swedish Thor, we would have you understand, has moved in very select circles. In fact, Mr. Swedish Thor has been so choice in his selection of circles that at the tender age of 18 summers and winters to say nothing of the intermediate seasons, he climbed to sufficient height in the social realm of crumple-eardom as to fraternize publicly with the one-time ultra-ritzy Mr. Ad Wolgast. It is not necessary to say Mr. Swedish paid dearly for his pains. A Mr. Battling Nelson gave the countersign that put our Mr. Jensen on the inside of the inner circle long enough to play at gloves in a 20-chukker game with Mr. Ad Wolgast. After the initiation, Mr. Jensen suddenly had a change of heart. Decided he did not care to remain a member of the order. The game had reached only eight chukkers when Mr. Jensen found it imperative to call time-out for repairs.

* * *

Sad, sick but smart, Mr. Jensen forsook the Marquis of Queensbury for the Lord Lonsdale. But he did not invade the lists of the wrist-wreckers until a truent chin bone had been returned to its original location and a new set of molars had been supplied. During that period of, let us say, relaxation, our Mr. Jensen went in for the higher arts—so much so that he acquired a position as school master in Kensel, N. D. But he couldn't stand the hubub and hustle of the big city. Suddenly developing a sort of missionary yen he departed American soil and returned to the land of his birth—Minnesota. Settled in Winona and tried to civilize the natives. His higher learning failed to make an impression. The inhabitants didn't care much for knowledge other than how to mow the hay, separate the wheat and eat three large meals a day. So Mr. Swedish Thor decided to go west again but some yokel gave him a bum steer at the cross-roads and he wound up in Alaska. He started a wrestling tournament among the Eskimos and whatnot. Won it himself and was awarded a large loving cup on which was inscribed "Champion of the Frozen North." No hokum. We do not deviate from the truth. Swede will show you that cup today just any time you give him the chance. Having conquered the great silence and the spell of the Yukon 'n all weights, he returned to the land of constitutional amendments and joined a Y. M. C. A. as instructor. Tiring after a span of being a Christian he migrated to Amarillo and Wichita Falls and degenerated to such an extent that he wrestled Dutch Mantell and Charley Grip. Notwithstanding this fall from grace, can you with a clear conscience call him an "alley athlete?" Need more evidence be produced?

So Billy's Back With Mr. Jensen--Well, Well, Well

And the Lovely Mr. Grip Would Entertain This Mr. Basanta Singh—Just Think of the Pleasant Little Party in Store

THE CARD

Billy Romonoff versus Swede Jensen. Catchweights, two falls to a finish.

Basanta Singh versus Charley Grip. Middleweights, two falls to a finish.

Time: 8:15 o'clock Tuesday night.
Place: Palace theater.

BY BLONDY CROSS

Your old boy friend, Billy Romonoff, the rollicking Russion who looks more like a Swede than the Swedish Mr. Jensen himself, returns with the same old cocky air against the "Champion of the Frozen North" Tuesday in the nightcap of a double wind-up wrestling program a la Police Gazette.

Charles G. Grip and the well-known Mr. Jensen have promised to be nice boys on this occasion, bear down and give the customers an exhibition of "real clean" wrassling. In which case the sledding may not be of the most pleasant for the Great Grip and the jocular Mr. Jensen.

The comely Mr. Romonoff has proven himself a man of parts when it comes to the dispensation of competitive athletes in a quite ethical, nonetheless, not so gentle a manner, regardless of size, form or what would you?

Mr. Matty and Mr. Jack.

Noted and acclaimed as one of the social leaders in the select stratum of the jolly gentlemen of Grapple and Groan, many an aspiring wrestling man has discovered to his deep regret that it is very bad form to dispute Winsome Willie off or on the mat. Quite a few of the equally elite such as the worthy Matty Matsuda and the noble Jack Reynolds have felt the heavy displeasure of an indignant Mr. Romonoff merely because they assayed to tread in the same path the Russian royalty had choosen. So chagrined has Mr. Reyonlds becomc that he assiduously avoids Mr. Romonoff on all occasions. Some matter-of-fact persons even go so far as to assert he snubs the foreign nobleman outright. But others who aver they know their mushrooms, say 'tis merely caution on the part of Mr. Reynolds. Mr. Matsuda is visiting on the Pacific Coast at present. Of course, he could not be expected to return and settle that old score laid up in San Angelo last year when Mr. Romonoff so far forgot himself as to treat the Gentleman of Japan quite roughly and very rudely before a gathering of the home clientele right in Mr. Matsuda's own gymnasium.

And then He Said—

So Mr. Swede Jensen, several pounds the heavier, has been selected to subdue the Russian man of mat. That with clouts on the chin barred—and, remember, Mr. Jensen has promised to behave, appears almost a total loss.

Mr. Jensen, says Mr. Romonoff, may make me a rough, tough battle, but I can sink any Swede that ever saw the sunlight in Minnesota. I am, continues Mr. Romonoff, prepared to defend the championship of the world and Ohio avenue in any form of combat, be it rough and tumble or with chop sticks. If this surly Swede would wrestle me under gentlemen's rules i. e. Police Gazette, then it is all the better for me. I will not have to re-comb my hair after the engagement: If he would battle me New York commission rules, which I consider a very crude type of warfare nevertheless very affective if one wishes to obliterate his opponent entirely, legally and without fear of causing umbrage of the law, then I shall meet him in that mode. And may the gods and little fishes protect him if he disarranges my pompadour.

Mr. Romonoff, although a Russian born in Kalamazoo, has not learned to speak the English language yet. The communication was relayed to the reporter by a Nicaraguan translator.

That Settles It

Mr. Jensen, who gurgles fluent Minnesotan, has nothing to say other than: If that guy Charley Grip doesn't lay offa me I'm going to drape a coal shovel over his dome!

Whereupon, Mr. Grip replies: I ain't half as tight with my money as Dutch Mantell.

Now that we're down to business, let us adjourn to the golf links.

Mr. Reynolds declares Mr. Grip stands just as much show of trimming Mr. Basanta Singh as the modern-day flapper has of trimming a hat, evening gown or doing anything else that was known as feminine back in the days when mother was a gal. Allow us to deduct a few percentages. Jack is given to occasional exaggeration. Perhaps it is not so bad as that. One would not wish to insult the Mr. Grip by insinuating he is a set-up. Of course not, isn't Mr. Grip the most popular man in town, the idol of the maiden's dreams and quite the rage when fickle fortune hands out all the luck? No, no, no, Mr. Grip is not a set-up but he may become a set-down when he enrages Mr. Singh. One will find out soon whether Mr. Reynolds is a man to be trusted.

INDIANS DIVIDE TOURNEY TILTS

Domestics Beat Wesley Five; Lose to Tarleton

STEPHENVILLE, Feb. 26.—Wichita Falls Junior college split its tournament games here, winning two out of four. Trimming Paris and losing to N. T. A. C. Friday, the Indians came back Saturday morning and walloped Wesley, 37 to 29. They succumbed to the driving attack of the powerful John Tarleton aggregation in the afternoon game, 37 to 23. This was the closest score any team held the Plowboys to.

Wagenfeuhr, Indian forward, was unable to play today because of a severely sprained ankle received in the N. T. A. C. conflict Friday night.

Hickam led the Wichita Falls advance with 18 points in the Wesley game and nine against Tarleton. Harvey scored 11 points against Wesley. Howard and Banks made five each against the Plowboys.

Mr. Tut Goes In For Rough Stuff

Genial Mike Takes Up Study Of Artistic Rudeness

BY ED CURLEY
Universal Service Staff Correspondent.

NEW YORK, Feb. 26.—Mike McTigue, the resurrected "King Tut" of the prize ring, went through his paces at full speed this afternoon at Billy Grupp's gym.

The human miracle never backed up an inch, hesitated a second, took a steady shellacking while he was handing a little himself.

13 Hard Rounds

Thirteen rounds did Michael skip through and when it was over he displayed no sign of being winded and the Methuselah's skin was pink as a little Bambino's.

You cannot get away from it. James J. Johnson, who plays the character of Simon Legree with Michael, has developed the most drab, uninteresting boxer into a fighter with lust for blood and mangling of his victim.

The workout today was termed by James as the "cataclysmic climax" of Michael's prep for Jack Sharkey, the man who exploded the black menace, better known as Harry Wills.

Battles Five Men

In his strenous trial Mike boxed five gladiators. They climbed through the ropes in the following order: Yale Okum, three rounds; Pat Lester, two rounds; Tom Roper; Able Bain, three rounds, and Jack Golden, two rounds.

The lads slammed Mike with hundreds of rights and lefts. It was lucky for Mike that he protected his gaelic features by a headguard, for the leather mask stopped many a nasty wallop.

There was none of the old McTigue tactics in the five workouts.

Instead of feinting, holding and boxing, the veteran tore right in and kept up a steady attack on the bodies of his antagonists. Punches in the nose and on the chin he shook off and waded in for more. He was a rough, rough fighter, getting hardened for a tough battle.

McTigue weighs close to 170 pounds and will face Sharkey around that poundage.

SCHOLZ TO RUN AT PENN

Manager H. J. Swartz, of the University of Pennsylvania relay carnival to be held at Franklin field in April, has received Jackson V. Scholz's acceptance to take part in the special series of sprints to be held in conjunction with the relay carnival.

Maloney Learned From Delaney

JIM MALONEY—LIKE McTIGUE—HAS LEARNED FROM JACK DELANEY

BY ROY GROVE.

Evidently Texas Rickard, the world's champion enemy maker, has made another foe for James J. Tunney.

Also beefy Maloney, the strengthy Bostonian, has learned his lesson. We mean nothing more than a "lesson of learning" in saying so. None have ever fought M. Oliver Chapdelaine and left the ring without the confidence of a champion and the knack of "knowing how," as it is put in the mannerisms of extended mitts.

M Chapdelaine has made James Maloney the most dangerous "set-up" in the game and its referred columns.

James J. Tunney, the world's champion heavyweight, will agree with a nod, a cautious nod, a nod full of facts and realization, for he is a student of the prize ring and knows how hard he had to fight in learning from Harry Greb, the greatest, along with Delaney.

Harry Greb made a champion of Tunney. Flowers learned his game after meeting Delaney. Mike McTigue, the old man of Gazette days, did likewise. It was Mike, the smartful, who listened and felt every smack and saw from whence it came, in crossing with M. Oliver Chapdelaine, and it was also this very Mike who transferred these thoughts to Paul Berlenbach, in his prime, and knocked him cold.

Now Irish Maloney has fought M. Delaney and won. Maloney could have lost the decision and won as much in learning, but he was wise from the gong and learned during the progress of the fight and consequently won over Delaney.

Gene Tunney went back to Harry Greb four times before he could master the situation. Greb defeated the king in their first fight.

Maloney, through his accumulated knowledge, could fight Delaney every night in the week and win, since Jack has shown him how.

For the same cause the trend of the fighting game changes. The vogue now is to win on points, as it is such safer and just as easy.

The day of the knockout king is gone; Delaney could not reach Maloney. Maloney knew the Dempsey-Tunney fight; he was there and fought Gene's fight against Delaney. Delaney shows ringcraft dangerous to the present champion.

It is the same story of the slugger and the boxer.

When Sharkey and Maloney meet, Maloney will win over the slowness of Sharkey. Dempsey stands an even chance of winning over either of them, but the whole crew could not defeat Gene Tunney.

Gene Tunney would use his same ringcraft against Shar-Maloney or Dempsey, and win again in the same manner—on points. He may improve his cleverness to win by a knockout, but that is doubtful.

If you would learn to defeat Tunney—box Delaney, and in winning you are dangerous, and in losing you have won that super-action that is positive of a champion.

Tarahumara Tribes Runs Prelim Today

By Universal Service.

MEXICO CITY, Feb. 26.—Men and women of the famous Tarhumara Indian tribe will compete Sun. in long distance runs to determine who shall proceed to Texas next month to participate in an endurance race in connection with the University of Texas relay carnival.

Fifteen villages in the neighborhood of Creel, Chihuahua, are expected to contribute 60 contestants in the elimination events. The men will run 150 kilometer and 50 kilometer races.

Three men and three women, according to latest plans, will go to Texas. Tribesmen and tribeswomen are reported to be keenly aroused over the prospect of the elimination trials developing sharp rivalry among the different villages.

ACROSS COUNTRY DRIVE

Doe Grahame, of the Country club of Mobile, Ala., has undertaken a great golf game which he estimates may take him from five months to five years to finish.

He will drive a golf ball from Mobile to Los Angeles, a task which mathematical calculations indicate will require 1,500,000 strokes.

NEVILLE GRABS HOUSTON TITLE

Von Elm Falters Crucial Test, 3 and 2

HOUSTON, Feb. 26. (AP)—Jack Neville of Los Angeles, today wears the Houston Country club invitation golf crown by virtue of his three up and two to play defeat of national amateur champion George Von Elm, also of Los Angeles, in the 36-hole final round here Saturday.

There were two sensational features to the final round, aside from the glamour of an all-California finals. First was the complete explosion of Von Elm on the morning nine holes when he was nine strokes over par with a 45; second his complete recovery on the inside nine of the morning nine to complete the first 18 holes but one down to his fellow townsman after the latter had led seven up at nine holes.

Neville had Von Elm 3 down at the 27th, and from that point forward played on level terms with the national titleholder.

Their afternoon cards:
Neville, out: 336, 534, 443—35.
In, 435, 444—2.
Von Elm, out: 445, 553, 444—38.

GOLFERS BEWARE

CHICAGO, Feb. 26. (AP)—One of the exhibits at the annual international golf show here March 21-26 will be a device known as a "lie detector," Spearman Lewis, manager of the exhibit, said today. Adopted by many criminal investigators to check the pulse beats of a suspect under cross examination, the detector is expected to have some appeal to golf club officials for use in checking score cards.

NEW FOR FOOTBALL

Will shift play be abandoned in football? "Just about certain," says Knute K. Rockne, Notre Dame university's famous coach.

"The balance of power in the voting rests with the east, where the shift is in favor. If it is abolished football will lose much of its spectacular interest, as heavy line-crushing backs will be needed instead of the lighter backs used today," says Rockne.

He hints of working on "something" entirely new in football for next fall.

WHIPPETS GO AFTER CROWN

Electrics Meet Rejuvenated Auto Crew Wednesday

At least one team, the Whippets, took a new turn-over on life last week in women's basketball league strife with the injection of boys' rules and the start of the second half race of the split season.

Coaches John Clary and Chubby Neal sent a rejuvenated team onto the floor against the Conocos and nosed out an 11-8 victory in an extra period of battle, giving the Whippets their initial victory of the year and an even-Stephen shot at the second-half championship with the Electrics.

The Kilowatts staged a spectacular rally, sinking four long baskets so fast the scorer almost missed the tabulation in their game with the P. B. M. athletes. Overtaking what had appeared to be a fairly comfortable lead, the Electrics forged to the front in characteristic championship style, defeating P. B. M. 25 to 20.

Tie For Top Rung

The Whippets and Kilowatts, deadlocked at the top for league leadership clash in the second game of the league's weekly double-header Wednesday night on the Junior college court. The Electrics have shown themselves to be the class of theloop so far, but Whippet mentors believe the automobile midgets with a few more days of intensive practice at the masculine style of play will heave a heavy surprise into the ranks of the red-jersied band. On paper, the Electrics boast an edge. But if the Whippets improve as as rapidly during the next set of practice sessions as they did the last two or three it will be difficult to hazard correctly just which team will be the victor Wednesday. A battle royal looms and that's the best that can be said.

Hallman Still Leads

P. B. M. battle Conocos in the opening game. The Oilers, embittered by their Whippet setback, will be out with heavy hopes of retrieving in part their lost ground.

Hallman, P. B. M. star forward, although slumping very much last week still leads the league in point-making. This accurate markswoman has scored 43 points. Mrs. Bill Abbott, out of the last contest because of sickness, remains in second place with 38 points. Captain Jessie Doke of the Electrics has tabulated 37 points and Ollinger of P. B. M. has made 33 points.

TAKE IT OR LEAVE IT—

Pershing's Idea— Prima Donnas— Michael's Elixir— Not Such Much—

By GENE FOWLER

NEW YORK, Feb. 26.—Jimmy Bronson, who knows more about boxing than a Subway Guard does about cellars, says that General Pershing "made" the modern Fight Racket. The General, he hastened to add, did all this inadvertantly. He added:

If it had not been for Pershing's stimulation of boxing among soldiers after the Armistice, the game would still be in the horrible disrepute that it suffered before the War. There were 79,000,000 men recruited in the Allied Armies. Pershing's boxing detachment so popularized the sport that 657,000 more witnessed the bouts than there were in attendance on baseball games."

* * *

General Pershing's O. K. on athletics was a life-saver, Bronson declared. He said that boxing did more to stimulate good feeling among homesick men than any other agency. It was like the playing of an orchestra in a crowded theater when there is a fire backstage. It prevented moral and mental panic.

"When the men, most of whom had only a remote sense of fighting with fists, returned to America, they spread the gospel of sound competition. The undesirables among managers and fighters were about through. A better atmosphere was created. Consequently box offices have prospered. Theoretically, Pershing ought to have a share in every fighter's purse. Mayor Jimmie Walker, with great courage and foresight, carried through the Pershing idea and made boxing possible along sound lines in this state and city. Now, instead of opposition to boxing, it is encouraged in church gymnasiums."

* * *

Jimmy Bronson, who had as much, if not more, to do with the handling of boxers during and after the war, believes that Gene Tunney's championship has completed the link to make boxing a desirable sport. Persons who used to shudder when some impolite party said, "John L. Sullivan" before guests, now fight for ringside seats. In fact, a man has to know a lot about fighting to get near the box office windows at certain of our shows.

* * *

"How does it feel to be manager of 16 fighters?" Bronson was asked.

"Well," and he reached for his blackjack, "you can imagine how fine it would be to manage Mary Garden. Yet, you cannot imagine having two Mary Gardens, can you? My boys have become a fine family, interested in one another. Still, it takes a lot of diplomacy for once a fighter gets out of the amateur class, he develops temperament."

* * *

The recent Fred Fulton was said to have been a most courageous plasterer until he was in the ring and pitted against one man. His manager, Jimmy Johnson, took him to Columbia university to be psychoanalyzed. After a discreet talk, wherein Fred told what he dreamed about—particularly while reclining on the rosin rug—the Professor gave Johnston a vial containing an elixir.

"What is it?" asked Johnston.

"Never mind," replied the Prof. "Just give him a spoonful of this in three spoons of water and see what happens."

Johnston put some of this mysterious liquid in milk and gave it to his cat. The cat jumped out a window and chased three bulldogs. Johnston claims he used it on Fulton and Fred punched Floyd Johnson dizzy. It is believed he had the prescription filled for Mike McTigue.

When McTigue fought Delaney, he consulted an Astrologer and Palm Reader named Mayer in Hoboken. Mayer told McTigue that he didn't know who could win the fight but that he could see a commotion in the fourth round and that that round would be a decisive one. It was. Although Johnston claimed that Referee Haley counted Mike out after the bell, Mike was draped plenty over the hemp.

When Mike was getting ready for Berlenbach, he was asked:

"Say, why don't you go see the astrologer?"

Mike shouted:

"To the so-and-so— with that blinkety blank!"

Boxiana:

"What ailed you tonight?" Dan McKetrick asked one of his fighters who had almost broken his hip while sitting under a punch.

"Sick at the stomach," replied the Pufe. "The Doctor said I had Nausea!"

ATTENTION, MR. BASEBALL BUG

First Baseball Score of 1927 Has Been Rung Up

By Universal Service.

SARASOTA, Fla., Feb. 26.—When honeysuckles bloom down here it doesn't mean a thing,
But when the baseball scores appear
It is a sign of Spring.

Lifting it's modest head above the bermuda grass in the ball park, the first baseball score of 1927 bloomed here today.

It was a pale, anemic little score, only six innings long and without an umpire or a catcher to its name, but a score is a score in February, be it ever so humble. Incidentally, Rogers Hornsby's team beat Jack Bentley's, 9 to 5.

Ordinarily, a score belongs at the bottom of a baseball story, but at this time of year it deserves a higher position in the world. It did not merit the dignity of a man's size box, but the batting order and the score by innings were:

Hornsbys—Hamby, 3b; Grimes, 2b; Hawkins, 1b; Hornsby, ss; Kallina, cf; Cummings, rf; Greenfield, lf; Holland, p; Cheeves, p.

Bentleys—Bentley, 1b; Groh, 2b; Lebourveau, ss; Porter, 3b; Devormer, cf; Fitzsimmons, rf; Henry, lf; Clarkson, p; Barnes, p.

Score by innings—

Hornsbys	. . . .	000	153	—	9	13	1
Bentleys	. . . .	220	000	—	5	9	2

Home run, Bentley. Three-base hit, Devormer. Two-base hits, Hornsby, Summings, Porter. Umpires, none. Time of game, too early in the morning. Weather clear; track fast.

Alex Limbers Ancient Souper

Youngsters and Vets Alike Scamper Spryly

ATLANTA, Ga., Feb. 26.(AP)—Rookies in major league baseball camps frolicked under a warm sun in Florida today while veterans proceeded leisurely to warm up arms, stretch limbs, and focus the batting eye.

Grover Cleveland Alexander, pitching star of the champion St. Louis Cardinals, at Avon Park, was among the veterans to change their hurling pace with extraordinary zip during the afternoon. "Old Alex" had an inspiration as he prepared, for it was his fortieth anniversary and he was confident that other wins were in the ancient "souper."

Another National league pitcher at the same time was getting practice of another brand for Eppa Rixey, of the Cincinnati Reds was winning the annual George Washington birthday amateur tournament at Hot Springs, Ark. His opponent was Sam Rice, veteran fly trapper of the Washington Senators, who last year copped the tourney. Eppa won one up today.

As the light training proceeded along the Dixie fronts, a promise of more strenuous work appeared for the approaching week. When the roll is called in 11 Florida conditioning sites tomorrow night, only the Cleveland Indians will be missing, and Manager McAlister has had an array of battery men working at Hot Springs, Ark., for some time. The Indians will reach Lakeland Tuesday.

At Shreveport, La., eight members of the Chicago White Sox will arrive tomorrow with rookies beginning to trek in Monday and other regulars a few days later. The Boston Red Hose and Detroit Tigers will be a few days later in getting started at New Orleans and San Antonio, respectively.

Training gates of the New York Yankees, Brooklyn Rabins, Phillies, and Cincinnati Reds will open tonight for the first contingent.

Jim Reese's Track Squad Looks Good

Prospects along the cinder path line are quite rosy at Electra this year as Coach Jim Reese shoves his doughty Tigers through their training paces.

Coach Jim was in the city Saturday and although not what might be termed exuberent, he was more or less optimistic.

Has what he thinks is a stronger squad possibly than last year's. John Judy and Dick Hauser stack up as a couple of pretty fair dash men. In the shot put, Bob Smith is looking fairly spry. Has three neat pole vaulters in Dick Kent, Sylvan and Hall Cloninger. Willis Carnahan has ben shifted from the hurdles to the mile. Looks like he's going to make the grade in wonderful style. Kent and Henry Culpepper are leaping the hurdles.

SCOTLAND ADDITION

SCOTLAND ADDITION in every way is getting better day by day. You may not realize it, but there were over 100 homes built in this close in addition during the year 1926. WHY?

Ask any loan company, banker, business man or employe; he will tell you the reason. The principal one, an addition that is only five minutes ride from the business section either by street car or automobile; another reason, it has all modern conveniences. We do not have to promise that we are to have conveniences, we already have them. Then the attractive outstanding feature—THE PRICE—within reach of everyone.

If building conditions continue there (and it looks as though they will double up) all Scotland lots will in a very short time, have happy and contented homes on them. THINK! School, Park, Street Cars, Gas, Telephone, Electric Lights, Sewerage and Opportunity. THINK! Who will be next?

Cotton

NEW YORK COTTON.

NEW YORK, Feb. 26.(AP)—The cotton market showed increased activity and firmness today, with buying attributed to the trade and commission houses. Nearly all months made new high ground for the movement. May deliveries selling up to 14.24 and October to 14.62 or 8 to 7 points net higher and a point above the best price touched early this month. May closed at 14.20 and October at 14.60, the general market closing steady at net advances of 1 to 8 points.

The opening was rather irregular. There was selling on the relatively easy showing of Liverpool and some southern hedging, with first prices a point higher to two points lower. These initial offerings were soon absorbed, and the market became firm during the middle of the day on reports of continued good spot demand in the south and good trade buying.

The opinion was expressed in some quarters that the failure of the market to break on the veto of the McNary-Haugen bill yesterday had brought in some previously procrastinated buying, as well as covering by recent sellers. March sold up to 14.08 and July to 14.41, net advances of about 5 to 9 points on th egeneral list, but there appeared to be more contracts for sale around 14.20 for May and 14.40 for July. Realizing for over the week-end constituted a good part of these offerings. Last prices were within a few points of the best with apparent difference of only 12 points between March and May, compared with 17 points at the close yesterday.

The amount of cotton on shipboard awaiting clearance at the end of the week was estimated at 195,000 bales against 153,000 at this time last year.

NEW ORLEANS COTTON.

NEW ORLEANS, Feb. 26.(AP)—Good spot demand both in southern markets and abroad held cotton prices on the upward trend today and the New Orleans market after moving to highs 12 to 18 points above the day's lows closed steady at the high points with net gains for the day of 2 to 8 points.

Liverpool came in four to nine penny points worse than due and first trades on the local market showed losses of 1 to 2 points. The downward movement continued until March sold for 14.00, May for 14.10 and July for 14.27, five to six points under the previous close.

Spot sales on the Liverpool market of 12,000 bales and heavy local and southern demands reversed the movement, with covering by shorts for over the week-end aiding the rally.

March ultimately went to 14.14, May to 14.25 and July to 14.27, seven to nine points above the previous close. The close was near the top.

The day's exports totalled 41,840 bales.

N. Y. Stocks

NEW YORK, Feb. 26.(AP)—Renewed activity and strength of some of the southwestern rails featured the resumption of the upward movement in today's stock market. Wabash common was the individual feature, moving up over 4 points to a new high at 73⅝ while the preferred "A" climbed 1⅞ to a new peak at 92½. Rock Island common and Frisco common also attained new top prices. The average of 20 leading industrials touched another new high record.

The general list disclosed widespread irregularity, due to the usual week-end readjustment of speculative accounts, but in most cases recessions were held to a point or less. Speculators for the advance, confident of easier money rates next week, were again active in a number of industrials and specialties. Among the dozen or so new highs in that group were the Barnsdall issues, DuPont, Great Western Sugar, Collins and Aikman common and preferred, Texas and Pacific Land Trust (new), and Oppenheim Collins.

Erratic price fluctuations in the steel commodity markets had no effects on the steel shares which held fairly steady. U. S. Steel common fluctuated within a range of one point, closing ⅝ lower at 160⅝. Republic touched a new top at 68⅝. Accumulation of the rubbers was based on the belief that recent stabilization of the crude market would result in substantially increased earnings by tire companies this year. U. S. Rubber showed an extreme advance of over two points at 56 while Ajax advanced to within half a point of the year's high.

General Motors received excellent support on reports of large current sales of its popular lines, showing a final gain of one point to 162. Mack Truck moved up over three points to a new 1927 peak on buying influenced by the recent publication of the company's balance sheet, showing large cash reserves and no bank loans. The oil groups, which has received excellent support in the face of recent crude oil and gasoline price cuts, pointed upward under the leadership of the General Asphalt issues which showed extreme gains of five points each.

Foreign exchange trading was quiet, with few important changes in rates. Demand sterling was quoted around $4.84⅝, and French francs around 4.91 cents.

THREE FIRES

City Department Kept Busy By Small Blazes.

Three alarms, all for minor blazes, kept the Wichita Falls fire department busy Saturday.

A chicken house at 711 Austin street caught fire at 10:40 a. m. Saturday and threatened residences in that neighborhood. No damage was reported.

A trash fire at 806 Austin street called out the chemical truck at 2:10 p. m., while a grass fire at 2007 Hayes was the cause for a run shortly before 5 o'clock Saturday afternoon.

TO HEAR SCHOOL PROBE

AUSTIN, Texas, Feb. 26. (AP) Public hearing on the split investigating committee report charging and denying mal-administration of John Tarleton Junior Agricultural college at Stephensville will be held Thursday night by the house committee on education, H. T. Brown, chairman, announced Saturday night.

COLLEGE HEAD RAPS CRIME

Sandifer Urges New Pledge To Law Enforcement

Commenting on the crime wave that "is sweeping the entire nation," and declaring that the citizens should dedicate themselves to the enforcement of law, government and justice, Dr. J. D. Sandifer, president of Simmons university at Abilene, addressed members of the Wichita Falls University club Saturday upon the general subject of education and the duty of collegbred men and women.

Praises School Here

"Today there are college men and women everywhere," he said. "A half century ago a college graduate was regarded as one who could not do any manner of labor. But with the great school systems we have established colleges within the reach of every man and woman in the state, and an education may be procured without great sacrifice."

He commented on the bill now before Governor Dan Moody, standardizing the Junior colleges of the state and permitting the organization of such colleges by municipalities. In this regard he complimented local citizens upon the success of the Wichita Falls Junior college.

"The American and English system of higher education ought to send men to do the things that have not been done by others who have not had the opportunities of education.

"The intellectual side of the training is not the major side. If the college graduate cannot contribute to the social order, then he is not living up to the opportunities that are his own."

With the exception of the parent, the lawyer and the teacher are greatly responsible for the condition of the social order today, the speaker added.

Crime Increasing

"Statistics show that there are 350,000 criminals in America today. There is a larger army of criminals than there were soldiers at Gettysburg. There are 12,000 murderers, and only about one of 99 is ever brought to justice. And Italy and Mexico are the only other nations in our class.

"An average of two banks are robbed in the United States every 24 hours. Many of these crimes are committed by college men."

A quartet composed of Mrs. W. L. Underwood, Mrs. Brown Hopkins, Mrs. J. S. Pitman and Miss Winnie Baker, accompanied at the piano by J. S. Pitman, entertained with two selections.

Frank Queisser is throwing another sale. This time he's offering a "Dutch" auction on an Essex coach and a Hudson coach. The price will be reduced $10 each day until the cars are sold. They may be seen at the Hudson-Essex company sales rooms.

Hall presided and introduced Ben Thorp, state agent of the Federal Life Insurance company and an active worker in the Dallas Underwriters association who made the principal address. The difference in the performance of a motor fueled with Motor Essence and one fueled with ordinary gasoline is astounding. Motor Essence gives your car a silky smoothness of operation that is remarkable. One touch to the starter results in a "whirr" of your motor, then shifting from low to intermediate and into high you'll get a sensation of quick get-off you have never known before . . . you will hear a quiet musical tone in your motor instead of annoying knocks . . . and as you press down on the accelerator, you will marvel at its alert speed and power. Alamo P.-T.A Has Noted Record In State As Well As In City Work

(EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the first of a series of articles to appear in the Sunday Record News, giving the history of the organization of Wichita Falls Parent-Teachers association.)

BY MRS. MARVIN SMITH.
President, Alamo P-T. A.

In searching for information of the organization and growth of the Alamo Parent-Teachers association, there have been hundreds and thousands of mothers and members through the years that have come and gone. The members were at Alamo some six, five, four, three or one year, but as the children advanced the parents followed the child into another school. Who is at Alamo that was a member of the club from which Alamo grew? Only one surviving member with her interest in the Mothers club as loyal today and through the years as it was in the beginning. We sincerely acknowledge this beauiful membership of Miss Kate Haynes. Last week recognition was made of her church life. Today we recognize her service of loyalty to the Alamo Parent-Teachers association. From her a few facts have been gathered of the first movement.

Iowa Park First

The first Parent-Teachers association in Wichita county was organized at Iowa Park. Mrs. Mamie Dale Brown, president, Miss Emma Haynes was a teacher there. She sowed the seed of enthusiasm in Wichita Falls that has produced such a bountiful harvest. Through the efforts of her sister, Miss Kate Haynes, and others, the first Parent-Teachers association was organized, on or about 1906 in the little Tenth street school, which stood where the Masonic building is now located. Mrs. J. W. Lee was president, Miss Lenna Phillips, secretary, Miss Kate Haynes was sent as a delegate from this club to the state organization of Texas Congress of Mothers. Mrs. Porter was made president of the state organization.

As the school moved, the Mothers club followed. In January of 1911, the present Alamo building was occupied, though the building has since been enlarged. This same Mothers club began to function at Alamo and became known as the Alamo Home and School club. The wife of Superintendent Toland was the first president of the club after occupying the new building. Succeeding her as president were: Miss Kate Haynes, Mesdames E. W. Carter, G. Clint Wood, J. W. Culbertson, L. R. Buchanan, G. H. Wilson, T. M. Conrey, T. H. Lawson and Marvin Smith.

Many Accomplishments

During this period, there have been many various and worthwhile accomplishments. The most outstanding ones were: The organization of the City Council of Parent-Teachers association; placing of drinking fountains through the building; permanent playground equipment, 700 trees planted on north and west side of campus; $200 steroptician, slides, $3.50; Kate Haynes Fountain, $2200 Travis school piano fund, $50; artificial limb for a little girl, $125; placed pictures to the value of $450; victrolas and records, $350. We were unable to presume to name all the accomplishments of the years as time and memory prevent.

The open air cafeteria was started in 1921 by the Parent-Teachers association on the south side of the campus, sandwiches, fruit and milk were served at five cents per. Even a profit was shown on these few items sufficient to encourage further equipment. Next, a two-room house was rented at $25 per month, the building was poorly equipped with not even running water. Still it grew. In 1923 the cafeteria capacity was doubled and a broader menu was offered the children. The Alamo Parent-Teachers club still operated the cafeteria until 1926 when it was then turned over to the board. The cafeteria was at all times self-supporting and at that time had an equipment valued at $1500.

During the war the Alamo Parent-Teachers association purchased Liberty bonds and sold war saving stamps.

Largest In Congress

The Alamo Parent-Teachers club has grown from a mere handful to a large enthusiastic membership, reaching its peak during the years of '22 and '23; having a membership of 1122 and at that time the largest in the history of the Texas Congress of Mothers. Again in '24 and '25 the prize for the state membership was won, though a little less than the previous year. This club membership has always been characterized by the most loyal interested, capable and faithful women. Through many of their children, suitable and appropriate gifts have been placed in the rooms and halls. This club's record has not only stood out in the city's recognition but throughout all Texas has the Alamo Parent-Teachers club been known as a leader through the years.

During the past year an innovation was made in the finances of this club. The budget system was adopted with Mrs. J. A. Newby chairman. Through their plans an average of $50 per room was formed. From the 20 rooms it was hoped to obtain $1000. Of this amount $586 has been paid in cash. From this amount and a few minor incomes the club has been able to place a brown velour stage curtain in the auditorium, $231; equipping a teacher's rest room, $82.02; library fund, $100 replacing play ground equipment, $32; deficit on piano fund, $300. Alamo claims the distinction of having the oldest piano purchased by a Mothers' club and one of the ing Principal J. P. Park, $25; misnewest, a Baby Grand Ivers and Pond, bought by the club in '25 and '26; life membership, honorcellaneous expenses, $30; welfare, $12. There are still three months ahead for us to round out our year's work.

The accomplishments this year have been possible through the hearty response of all patrons and interested friends of the school, the loyal support of the teachers and executive board, and by the strong foundation of the Alamo Parent-Teachers association. May it long exist and flourish and enlist not only the motherhood, but the fatherhood of every boy and girl to aid and encourage the faculty in their efforts to train our children.

DOUBLE
ACTING-STRENGTH-VALUE

Calumet is the modern baking powder—made in the world's most modern and sanitary baking powder factories—because it is double acting—because it possesses double the ordinary leavening strength—it does away with all the old time bake-day worry.

It also enables you to produce better bakings and more healthful bakings. You get best results in a moderate oven, but you may bake in either a hot or slow oven with safety.

Always use Calumet and you'll always be able to supply your family with the best of good things to eat.

Calumet's Double Action gives you a baking powder containing two leavening units—one begins to work when the dough is mixed, the other waits for the heat of the oven, then both units work together—your guarantee against failure—against waste. Use slip found in can to secure a beautiful Cook Book.

Elaborate Affairs— Art and Music—
And Many Small Ones— Readers' Club—
Brides of Spring— Welsh Singers—

SO many things happened on Washington's birthday that I hardly know where to begin to tell you about them. I told you last week that lots of things would happen on that date, but I didn't realize how much until the time had passed and I began to count up. Of course, you have heard about the really wonderful Colonial ball the D. A. R.'s gave at the Country club. This was one of the most delightful affairs of the entire month and more than 300 guests enjoyed several hours of dancing and games. The atmosphere of Colonial days was indeed transported to the club house on that night, and the quaint setting was effected through the use of spinning wheels, powdered wigs, hoop skirts and other articles suggestive of our ancestors.

AND then on Tuesday afternoon and evening, another affair drawing almost as large a crowd as did the D. A. R. ball, was the Colonial tea given at the home of Mrs. Harry Hines when members of the executive board of the First Christian woman's council were hostesses. The Colonial atmosphere prevailed here just as it did at the Country club and the costumes and setting were truly elaborate.

And while the week has been unusually filled with large affairs, some of the most enjoyable smaller ones of the winter have also been given. Two popular out of town visitors added zest to these parties, in the persons of Mrs. E. G. Lasar, attractive matron from St. Louis, guest of Mrs. Hugh Weaver, and Miss Virginia Fryberger of Duluth, Minn., guest and former schoolmate of Crystelle Waggoner. Mrs. Lasar has furnished inspiration for a veritable round of lovely informal affairs, and while Miss Fryberger hasn't been here long, it is rumored that many things are being planned for her.

AND I almost forgot the brides. With as many weddings and prospective ones on hand as is the customary quota for June, the florists have been busy watching the tulips, rose buds and lilies unfold their petals in preparation for shower bouquets for the brides. Only the past week, two weddings of interest took place, one on Wednesday and the other on Thursday morning when Mattie Lona Vincent, who has made her home in Wichita Falls since she was 11 years of age, and is a graduate of the local high school, became the bride of W. E. Robertson, and on Thursday morning at the Sacred Heart church, another girl equally as well known, Catherine Tiernan was married to Joe Hurley.

On Monday evening, the wedding scene will be shifted to San Antonio. In that city Jarrell Gose, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. Steve Gose, will wed Kitty West Schreiner. Ivy V. Larkin of this city will be one of the attendants and went to San Antonio last week to be present at the numerous elaborate affairs that will precede the ceremony, and Mrs. Steve Gose Sr., is also there to see her son married.

A bride-elect who is somewhat in the social limelight at present and is furnishing inspiration for man affairs for members of the younger set, is Donna Mitcham, whose marriage to O'Dell McDuffy is announced to take place March 15. Both of these young people have lived most of their lives here, attended the local schools, and are popular in the younger set.

SEVERAL bridge parties of unusual interest added pleasure to the week for the younger matrons and girls and one especially was that given at the Wichita club when Mrs. A. R. Dillard was hostess. This was in the nature of a bridge luncheon. Individual tables, centered with pretty small rose, green and yellow vases filled with garden flowers in the pastel shades, were arranged for the menu and games. Among the out-of-town guests attending were Mrs. Howell E. Smith of Athens who spent a few days here with her sister, Mrs. E. P. Bass, and Miss Virginia Fryberger of Duluth, Minn., house guest of Crystelle Waggoner.

NUMBERED among the important cultural events of this week is the presentation by members of the Readers' club of one of their most talented artists, Ella Merle Mathis who will appear in recital Monday evening at the Wichita club. Musical numbers for the event will be given by Mrs. C. Y. Tully, vocalist, and Mrs. Jouette Bonner, violinist. Invitations have been issued by the club to numerous friends, and the program is being looked forward to with enthusiasm as probably one of the most interesting of the winter.

AND closely akin to the dramatic art is music, and we are also scheduled to have a treat along this line for a world renowned musical organization will be an attraction of the week. The Rhondda Welsh singers will appear here on Friady night at the Junior college under the auspices of the Teachers' association and for lovers of good music this is expected to be an outstanding event. The group consists of 14 voices with six tenors, three baritones, and three basses, besides the director and accompanist chosen from the best singers in Wales. The program will include numbers in Welsh, English, Italian and southern airs.

AND speaking of music reminds me that Olga Samaroff, noted musical critic, says "that the general enjoyment of music depends a great deal on the psychology of listening to it, and everyone who goes to hear music has a certain responsibility because it can scarcely be denied that, while the reaction of the listener is primarily important to himself, it also plays a part in the immediate destiny of creative art-works, and the artistic careers of the performers.

"The art of music can be viewed from many different angles. To the artist it is a religion, a spiritual, mental and emotional necessity; a means of expression for himself and others which opens the universe. It absorbs life and fills it. It seems that the listener, who is not an artist, can scarcely be expected to share these feelings—certainly not in the same degree. But for the average human being music can mean many different things, according to what his natural qualities are and what type of life he leads. To some it is, even in a different way, just as much a spiritual necessity as it is to the artist. To others, busy and absorbed in different phases of life, music is a pleasant relaxation or a part of the general culture they wish to acquire. For many it is a fad pure and simple, but even such patrons of the opera and concert must get something they like out of it, or they would conceivably turn in another direction, for there are plenty of amusing things in the universe of which fads may be fashioned."

But with all this talk about parties, brides and music, I have at last "run down," and after bidding you good night will sign myself your friend—

Mrs. Jeffers Hostess To Frejay Bridge Club

Mrs. O. R. Jeffers was hostess to the Frejay Bridge club at her home Friday afternoon when in a setting suggestive of St. Patricks' day, tables were arranged for the games. Mrs. J. M. Dooley won the high score favor, a quilted boudoir pillow; Mrs. W. E. Lindley, second high, a bottle of perfume, and Mrs. M. D. Bolton, the cut favor, a vanity. Mrs. F. K. Foster won the high guest favor, a gilded bridge set; Mrs. John Dobbs, second high, a tea apron, and Mrs. A. A. Peters the cut favor, a bridge set.

A plate lunch was served to Mesdames W. E. Lindley, M. D. Bolton, J. M. Dooley, C. M. Stice, E. A. Shull, C. V. Lemen, L. R. Kukendall, W. C. Duncan, Leo J. Wilmuth, A. A. Peters, John Dobbs and F. K. Foster.

Alahi Camp Has Party at Church

Milly Pastusek and Frances Hyland prepared refreshments for the Alahi Camp Fire Girls at the meeting held at the Catholic church hall Friday afternoon as a part of their fire makers rank work.

Those attending were Nellie and Mary Pastusek, Frances Hyland, Grace Kerwin, Bora Nix, Vera Shelton, Edna Mae Stegall, Mary Theresa Doyle, Louise Van Emden, Charlotte Kennedy, and Mrs. A. Ayers, guardian, and Mrs. J. F. Hyland, assistant guardian.

BEDFORD, O.—Marshal E. G. Carver and Deputy Marshal Theodore Mathews are worried. They were defendants in a $10,000 damage suit, but were ordered to pay only 5 cents. That wasn't what worried them. "It can't be done," Carver mumbled. "No, it can't," Mathews replied. They are trying to decide how they can pay equal shares of the 5-cent verdict returned against them.

SPRING TONIC NOT IN BOTTLE

Expert Gives Advice On How To Meet Change

MRS. FREDERICKA BEAL
Red Cross Nurse

Health is the most salable product in the world. Hard-headed business men and thrifty wives, who would not buy an article in a store without absolute proof of its worth, will seize avidiously upon every new panacea for physical ills which ingenious heads concoct to fill their purses.

One morning recently when the mercury was hovering around 15 degrees, a swarthy, bearded man stood on the back seat of an automobile in a downtown New York street, without a coat and with his shirt-sleeves rolled up. Several hundred supposedly sophisticated spectators crowded about him, their teeth chattering as they pulled the fur collars of heavy overcoats around their necks.

"Wonderful" Fluid

The modern "medicine man" was asserting that although he was 95, cold weather and other inconveniences from which ordinary mortals suffered meant nothing to him. He modestly confessed that he was the healthiest person in the world. When the crowd became large enough to let it in on the secret. It was because he took a certain "tonic." Moved by humanitarian impulses, he announced, he had decided to let others enjoy the same health. For a minimum sum, each shivering mortal could carry home a bottle of the wonderful fluid.

Unfortunately, physicians who have spent their lives in studying the problems of health and disease, disagree with such "medicine men." Health, they say, cannot be bought in bottles, and medicines, taken without a doctor's instructions, can work serious harm. Health is, by and large, a matter of the way you live. It has its foundations in infancy and there is no tonic on the market that can be used as a substitute for regular habits of eating, sleeping and exercise.

Yet each year spring-time is the signal for mysterious "tonics" to appear in drug store windows, advertised and guaranteed to alleviate "that tired feeling," cure all ailments and banish "spring fever." The small boy who plays hookey from school on the first warm day and takes to the woods for a frolic, is obeying an impulse that is true to nature, and he is acting more wisely than his elders who start to take medicines.

"Tonics," says Hugh S. Cummings, surgeon-general of the United States Public Health service, "are one of the fallacies that bloom in the spring. What we need is not medicine ladled out in spoons from sticky jars or poured out of mysterious bottles, but fresh, clean foods and fruit, plenty of fresh air and sleep, and more outdoor exercises."

Fresh Air and Food

"Winter hems us in more or less with a barrier of snow and unfavorable weather. We take less exercise than we need and, tempted by the warmth indoors, we spend less time than we should in the open air. In winter our houses are more tightly closed, our rooms not so well ventilated and our whole manner of living is to a greater or less degree changed by the restrictions of winter.

"Some physiological chemists hold that there are even certain differences in the make-up of the human blood in summer and winter.

"Spring fever is not a disease. It is but the popular name for a common experience which, in part, is probably psychic. Neither should it be the signal for the giving of spring tonics. The boy who makes a wry face and objects to having these tonics administered has just grounds for complaint and objection.

"The call to the out-of-doors is a real call and a true call, and the wisest mother is the one who knows that it should not be denied. Dosing with home-made mixtures or with drug store remedies will do little more than upset the stomach and make spring for the small boy a time to be dreaded when it should be rather a period to enjoy.

"If you feel that some tonic is needed in addition to that which is provided so lavishly by nature, take the children to your physician for their annual physical examination. Get an intelligent diagnosis and follow the advice given. As a matter of fact, the spring is the best time to make an inventory of your own health needs and the needs of your child, and the best way to take a health inventory is to consult your physician.

"Why pay one dollar a bottle—six bottles for a five-dollar bill, for something that will do you no good, when you can get all the benefits you need out of sunshine and fresh air which cost you nothing?"

LEONARD MILLER SLAIN.

BRECKENRIDGE, Feb. 27. (AP)—Leonard N. Miller, 27, was shot to death and officers were seeking his slayer at the Phillips Petroleum company plant 15 miles north of here today.

Weak as a Kitten

"I WAS in an awful bad state of health," says Mrs. Charles Jerkins, of McCullough, Ala. "I was all run-down and weak as could be. I did not have the strength of a kitten. Some days I could hardly lift my head from the pillow.

"I looked like a skeleton, I was so thin and haggard. It took all my will power to drag myself around the house. I never walked any farther than I had to, for it hurt me to stand on my feet. My back and sides hurt me until I thought I could not stand it. I saw myself growing gradually weaker and I did not know what to do. I tried several things but nothing helped me.

"One day I read about how other women had been helped by taking Cardui, so I thought I would try it. I found it a splendid medicine. After I began to take it, I soon began to feel stronger and able to do things. From that time to the present I have taken Cardui several times when I was run-down in health. It has never failed to help me."

Fight Bolshevism With Bible, Wichita Falls Pastor Urges, In Powerful Sermon at Lexington

Special to The Record News.

LEINGTON, Ky., Feb. 26.—Sounding a solemn warning against the growing menace of bolshevism and atheism in the United States, the Rev. Paul Henry Packard, noted evangelist and pastor of the Highland Heights Christian church of Wichita Falls, told a large audience here that the time had arrived for Americans to range themselves firmly, squarely and uncompromisingly behind American ideals.

"Our people have an abiding faith in our country," the evangelist declared, "but they must supplement that faith with action, remembering always that there is but one place for a real citizen to stand."

Cites Statistics

Scoring the I. W. W. and other red organizations in this country, to whose influence and doctrines he laid most of the crime in America, the Rev. Mr. Packard quoted a few statistics showing that the United States lead the world in nine of the outstanding evils of civilization.

We have, he said, more divorces in one year than Canada has in 75 years; 83 percent of our criminals are under 21 years of age; 75 per cent of our financial crimes were committed by juveniles; 50,000 girls were lost in the underworld in one year, 5000 of them in one city; 14,000 felonies were committed in one county last year. The cost of fighting crime in this country exceeded our national budget, taxpayers contributing $9,500,000 daily for that purpose.

"One of the best things this country ever did," cried the evangelist, "was to chuck Alexander Berkman, Emma Goldman, Ethel Bernstein, Dora Lipkin and 245 other reds out of the country. Look at nihilism and anarchy, rabid socialism and bolshevism with its infernal spawn. No patriotism in their creed; armed with torch and bomb, openly boasting to blow into smithereenes our established forms of government. Do you know that we have a school in one of our great cities where 12,000 children meet every Sunday afternoon to be trained against the principles of this country?"

Warns Against War

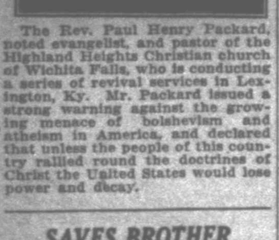

Reverting to the 100 per cent Americanism shibboleth, the evangelist declared that an Americanism built independent of the claims of God would usher in another world war.

"In order to save America," the preacher said, "we need some real men, men who will have some positive convictions and will stand by them at any cost. You can date the rise in anarchy and bolshevism in the United States almost to the day we took the Bible out, and you'll find that in the states where there is the least of God, there is the most of anarchy.

"The darkest day this nation ever passed through was the day when the Bible was taken out of the public schools in 12 of our states, and we instituted in its place the dance and the cold blooded and hopeless theory, 'There is no God.'

"American youth is building on the wrong foundation. No God in the home, no Christian influence in the public schools, colleges and universities."

Sees Red Menace

The Rev. Paul Henry Packard, noted evangelist, and pastor of the Highland Heights Christian church of Wichita Falls, who is conducting a series of revival services in Lexington, Ky. Mr. Packard issued a strong warning against the growing menace of bolshevism and atheism in America, and declared that unless the people of this country rallied round the doctrines of Christ the United States would lose power and decay.

GIRL AT 'STAG' PARTY.

BOSTON.—Virginia Wright of Cambridge enjoys the distinction of making John Harvard's sons almost as mad as Princeton did. Disguised as a man, she attended the student stag smoker. Several students were co-conspirators with the girl, providing her with all the male collegiate garb except a coonskin coat. When the Harvard stags had had their fill of policemen and a score or more of them had been arrested, Miss Wright was a cheering section in herself, urging the students on to do and be arrested for dear old Harvard.

MAKING MODERN MENUS

One way of managing to get the children to drink their quart of milk a day is to give them cocoa in a weak form. Cocoa is not as rich as chocolate but, like coffee, neither one is often prepared correctly. Cocoa is the better beverage for both children and invalids as it lacks the fat which is contained in chocolate.

COCOA

Take one-fourth to one-third cup of cocoa, according to taste, and mix it with one teaspoon of flour and a pinch of salt. Add one cup of cold water and cook in the top of a double boiler over the direct heat three minutes after the mixture begins to boil, stirring constantly. Add three cups of milk, two to four tablespoons of sugar and heat until it begins to look foamy. Beat with an egg beater to prevent a scum forming on the top and serve at once or place over hot water and cook until ready to serve. Left-over cocoa may be reheated and served, a known, as the flavor is improved, thing which is not generally

A Benefactor

A public benefactor is one who helps people to be happy. Such a man was Dr. R. V. Pierce.

It is impossible to be happy if you are suffering—in pain or distress—ill. To restore health and strength to ailing people was Dr. Pierce's mission. NOTED RAT KILLER TELLS HIS SYSTEM

Ring Gives Inside Story of How He Garnered Ratskin Rug — Plans Home Lectures to Let Public in On Big Game Secrets.

It Was Then Agreed By a Vote of 8 to 1 That I Better Spend That Night in the Studio With Only a Dim Light Burning and Keep As Quiet As I Could.

"No You Ain't, You Big Swede, You Are Going to Get Off Right Here."

To the Editor:

The madam and I got to talking it over the other day and we decided that it was little lest than criminal towards the kiddies to allow my shyness to prevent me making important money giving lectures like Prince Wm. of Sweden. To be sure they ain't no royal blood in my veins though on more than one occasion I have been on parties and overheard some fellow or gal say to another "He is certainly a Prince" when they could not of been referring to nobody but me. And furthermore I was riding on a North State Street car in Chicago one night and a big drunk was sharing the back platform with me and we took a fancy to each other and he asked me where was I going to get off and I said Goethe Street and he said: "No you ain't, you big Swede, you are going to get off right here." So I did, though I was still five blocks from my boarding house but I often think walking does a person good especially late at night.

Marauder First Appears in Studio.

But that is either here or there. The point is that Prince Wm. is touring the country with a lecture on big game hunting and I have been something of a big game hunter myself and why should I not cash in on it the same as the Prince and even more so because I speak English very plain whereas about all you can understand of the Prince's remarks is "Ay ban Svenska" and "Skol."

Anyway I am going to take the plunge only I will do all my lecturing right here at "The Mange" in Great Neck on acct. of the madam not being willing for me to rip out or tear down the different trophies and exhibits of the chase and carry them around with me and without which my talk loses half its guste.

It would be folly for me to say in these pages all that my lecture would consist of and name all the different trophies which would be connected with same, yet a few hints of what is in store for them may suffice to convince my readers that their trip to our little nest would be worth their time and money even though they may live a long distance off.

The first thing that attracts the visitor's attention on entering our living room is the rat skin rug that lays in front of our open fireplace. I will never forget the struggle I had bringing this fellow down. The first time I had a suspicion that he was in the vicinity was one day when I entered my studio and discovered that half of a piece of chocolate candy which I had left on my desk had disappeared. I called in my four kiddies and thrashed each one within an inch of their life but could not draw a confession from none of them. My attention was then called by the fourth maid to a freshly made hole in a corner of the room where the floor joined the wall, a hole big enough to let in Connaughton the Georgetown guard.

We had a council of war and decided to plug up the hole with the piano. Next morning they was nothing left of the piano but a few black keys and furthermore somebody had broke into my desk and eat up a play manuscript that even Morris Gest had choked on. It was then agreed by a vote of 8 to 1 that I better spend that night in the studio with only a dim light burning and keep as quiet as I could. But somehow another I just could not help singing all night that night and as luck would have it, the most of my selections was double fortissimo, like "Lord Jeffrey Amherst" and Rudy Friml's Vagabond song.

The day after that the third chauffeur contrived the following impromptu trap: He drove the big limousine into the studio, smeared the back seat with cheese, bichloride of mercury and tidbits of all kinds and fixed a spring on the floor of the tonneau so that the instant a rat or vermin of any kind stepped on it, the door would slam shut and lock. Thus it was I bagged our man and at first the madam wanted me to have him taken to an osteopath to be stuffed, but in order to make room for him where people could see him it would of been necessary to remove the chaise lunge and take out the bookcases. So we sent him to a notorious skinner and the result is what you will see in front of the fireplace.

Amongst the many trophies on the walls is the horns of two Buicks and one dilemma, the heads of many a rodent and the stuffed carcusses of a hundred or more roaches which I shot down or drowned in our first apartment in Chicago. The history of the slaying of these and many other beasts of burden will be included in my lecture and I have not named one-quarter of the exhibits.

I noted in the papers that on the occasion of the Swedish Prince's New York appearance, customers who paid $66 for a box gained the privilege of shaking hands with Wm. when his lecture was over. I haven't no boxes at "The Mange" except a couple of box springs, but anybody who cares to pay 66c to set on same is welcome to give me a good rousing kiss either before or after I am through talking.

Adventures In The Shops

AS TOLD BY

Jacqueline

THE smartest and most beautiful modes of the season are exemplified in the Orchid Shop's spring models, from Sweet Sixteen to the more pretentious creation—bearing such labels as "Star and Herbert" (nearest and dearest to youthful hearts because of Claire's invariable attainment of the picturesque).

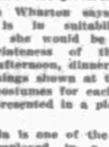

Edith Wharton says "Perfect taste is in suitability"—how pleased she would be with the appropriateness of the street, sport, afternoon, dinner and evening things shown at the Orchid shop—costumes for each occasion are represented in a pleasing variety.

Jorella is one of the new fabrics employed in a handsome dress coat heavily embroidered and with ermine collar.

Ben Gershal uses much shiny braid. This is an important trend, especially effective in all black.

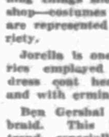

Laces, too, are polished — a lovely dinner frock, with its blouse of alternate cream and black lace, is of almost patent leather gleam.

Dainty dance frocks of all-over lace, and the elaborate sport things so stunning for resort wear, also attract your attention in a survey of the exclusive and truly exquisite gowns and wraps for Milady's springtime at the Orchid Shop.

TOMORROW is the last day of the shortest month of the year. Has it passed too quickly for you to accomplish all you had planned? One thing must not be postponed—have your eyes examined tomorrow, negligence in this respect causes untold injury. Appearance is another thing of paramount importance and the elegant, inconspicuous, rimless lenses, recently returned to favor, are the ones you should have. Dr. G. W. La Spencer, O. D. will fit them. 703 Ohio Avenue.

A STACC..TO sprightliness is an undoubted quality of the smart new hats at Miller-Ferguson's.

A close fitting, black Milan, brimless, and cleverly trimmed with a shining cluster of green satin leaves caught at the top of its crown, emanates that air of assurance which is the essence of fashion.

Braids, straws, frosted and macro felts—you will find them all in the dependable millinery department of Miller-Ferguson's, where expert fitters show hats in accord with your individuality.

SEWING sets which would lure anyone to sew a fine seam! Porcelain coaracter pin cushions (a cocky yellow rabbit for one)! These are among the unusual gifts in Pearl Cummins' Gift Depdriment of the Cinderella Shop.

YOU'LL feel guilty for weeks if you miss "The Popular Sin" beginning at the Olympic Theatre today! Florence Vidor's exquisite charm, quiet dignity and genuine artistic ability are displayed to the best advantage in this role, similar to that of "The Grand Duchess" which she made such a success. The splendid and diversity of Greta Nissen's and Florence Vidor's wardrobes in "The Popular Sin," will attract men and women alike. Clieve Brook, whose ardent lovemaking in "Three Faces East" is well remembered, and Philip Strange, are also leading characters in this love comedy of Parisian society.

Elisabeth King's Petite Revue of five exceptional entertainers is listed as the vaudeville attraction.

MAUDE McVICKER, Exclusive Millinery and Ready-to-Wear, 905-A Ninth Street.

A COLLECTION of pioneer photographs in the lobby of the Wichita State Bank and Trust Company this week is both entertaining and instructive. The first automobile, the first sheriff, first Unity Club, first uniformed fire department and horse-drawn hose wagon, the old school building which was located where the Masonic Temple now stands, the first pipe organ in Wichita County, the first Boy Scout's Hall and others of equal interest, are among the photographs dated from 1800 through 1885 and 1887.

Pioneer days are brought vividly before the observer of these pictures and no one interested in the growth of the city will miss dropping by the Wichita State this week for a glimpse of them.

SPRING is the flower season—with a double meaning. Never have beautiful shoulder blossoms been so important. Joan Dickson shows the large "floppy" silken posies which, in matching or harmonizing colors, add so much to the becomingness of new frocks and wraps.

IT is quite unnecessary to endure the turmoil of wash day when a capable, economical laundry, which handles your work much better than the home laundress could, is at your disposal.

The City Laundry, 400 Austin Avenue, will return your things spotlessly clean.

BABY and Little Miss must not be forgotten in the midst of Fashion Shows for grown-ups. Many models of Katherine Hutchin's dresses, and guaranteed special orders are the smartest things offered by the kiddies authority, Francis Shoppe, 1401 1-2 Tenth Street.

YOUR next washing done, without cost to you, in the 1900 Whirlpool Washer—that is the amazing offer of the Texas Electric Service company for March.

When you try a Whirlpool, you will be convinced that it washes anything from the heaviest, most soiled garments, to the filmy fabrics of dainty feminine possessions. These latter are in no danger of being torn because there is nothing in a Whirlpool which can grip, tear or wear the sheerest fabric. The machine is safe from another standpoint,—since all lower parts are enclosed, the smallest child may approach it without harm.

Convenience and compactness are also important attributes of this washer. Women will be glad to know that there is only one piece to all this simple, powerful mechanism, which takes up so little space.

If you wish a washer of which you may be proud (and of course you do) the trim lines, glowing copper and polished aluminum of the Whirlpool will be a constant source of delight. This machine washes faster than any other and added to speed are its capacity (8 pounds of dry clothes per tub) and dirt filter. The Whirlpool washes always with clean water in constant lively action.

Capable housewives demand these many advantages, and find all of them only in the Whirlpool which is made by the same exact methods and with the same expensive machinery as the finest automobile.

Phone Texas Electric Service company concerning free demonstration and easy payments.

REAL Rainbows — promise including — await the shoppers in search of something new. They are blouses, with a promise of smartness, at Miller - Ferguson's. An adorable one in silk, with slanting rainbow stripes of yellow and pea - green against a white ground, had two pockets and points at the front like a man's vest, and a cunning buckled vest strap across the back! Others boast brocaded fabric, popcorn color, geometric tuckings and double breasted fronts. $5.95 and $6.95 are the remarkable prices.

COZINESS and convenient location are outstanding characteristics of Oren Doolnaer's Beauty Shop so recently opened in the Marchman Hotel (adjoining the lobby). It is a salon of courteous, efficient service, where every aid to beauty may be pursued and under expert advice, at the usual price.

STARS OF STAGE AND SCREEN VIE ON BILLS AT WICHITA THEATERS

'SUNNY' TO BE PUT IN FILMS

Popular Musical Comedy Will Be Movie

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Motion Picture Editor, Universal Service
By Universal Service.

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 26.—"Sunny," that popular musical comedy which starred Marilyn Miller for three years on Broadway has at last been sold into picturedom. John Considine Jr., let it be known that Features Productions, which he heads, has purchased the film rights to the play that for three years had everybody whistling and humming the music.

More interesting even than the news of the purchase is the report that this will be Corinne Griffith's first starring production for United Artists. Certainly, United Artists with the purchase of "The Garden of Eden" and "Sunny" intends to fortify Miss Griffith with a list of strong plays.

Many After "Sunny"

Practically every company in the film producing business has registered a bid for "Sunny" for in addition to its music it has a plot. It remained for Beulah Livingstone, head of the editorial department of the Joseph Schenck productions to carry off the prize. She closed the deal with Regina Murnel, a New York agent. The price is a secret but knowing something of how much such a property can command I suspect the price was not far from $75,000 or $100,000.

"The Hungarian Rhapsody" sounds as if Vilma Banky, Lya de Putti or some of our Hungarian motion picture actresses will be starred. Who knows but eventually it will revert to one of them but right now it belongs to Edward Small and will shortly be made into a motion picture. With the phenomenal success of "McFadden's Flats" in New York, Mr. Small is planning to br out more and more in the movies. Who can blame him?

Good Story Glimmers

A good story went aglimmering yesterday when the yarn that Pola Negri became so temperamental that Ricardo Cortez left the cast was denied. This is the truth and since all the parties raise their right hands and solemnly swear I would be the last to deny their words. After three days' work on "A Woman On Trial," Ricardo Cortez looked so husky as the tubercular lover of P-la that it was decided some one less healthy in appearance be substituted. Einar Hansen was rushed into the part. Pola expressed regrets at losing Mr. Cortez and Mr. Cortez expressed reprets at not being able to finish the picture, so there you are.

Doug Wants A Story

Douglas Fairbanks is on the point of offering a price for anyone who can give him an idea for his next picture. He wants a romantic comedy drama of the sort he usually does and let me add, if you have any ideas, send them direct to Mr. Fairbanks and not to me.

Rudy Valentino Lives in Film

Late Film Star Appears With Notable Cast

When Rudolph Valentino comes to the Mission Theater Tuesday for two days in "The Son of the Sheik" he will bring along one of the greatest casts of any recent picture.

Vilma Banky, beautiful and exotic Hungarian actress who came to America a few years ago and has since appeared to fine advantage with Ronald Colman in "The Dark Angel" and other films, plays the leading feminine role.

Montague Love himself a star in pictures, plays the chief villian's role, and is said to be so bearded and begrimed that admirers will hardly recognize him. In his robber band there is one chesty soul to whom a turban is a new thing. This famed beauty is one other than Bull Montana.

Agnes Ayres, who was finally the wife of the Sheik when Rudy played that dashing lover several years ago, returns to the screen as a courtesy out of gratitude to a picture which meant so much to her success. In "The Son of the Sheik" Miss Ayres is the wife of the sheik who thinks of the early days in the Son, Ahmed, lives the passions of the desert.

George Fawcett, veteran at father roles in a hundred noted films, is the renegade Frenchman whose indomitable will causes so many pangs to his beautiful daughter, Yasmin. Other notables who support Valentino are the baldheaded Bynunsky Hyman, smiling Erwin Connelly and Charles Requa. The significant role of S'rir, which will be remembered by many of the thousands of readers of Mrs. Hull's novel, is played by William Donovan.

Karl Dane, the famous "Slim" of "The Big Parade," has one of the leading supporting roles in the cast of "The Son of the Sheik," for it is he who plays Ramadan, the giant friend of Ahmed and protector of Yasmin.

Joan Crawford and Owen Moore come to the Strand Sunday and Monday in "The Taxi Dancer."

HE LEARNED

Buffalo Bill, Jr., Turns Woman Hater When Sweetie Leaves

"An' I learned about women from her."

The immortal words of Rudyard Kipling fit in nicely with the motion picture "Coming an' Going" which opens Sunday at the Gem Theater.

The star is Buffalo Bill, Jr., which is "nuf sed."

The theme of the picture tells the story of a man who rides into town and as he makes his entrance into the village views his sweetheart driving out of town to be married to another man.

From then on the jilted lover is a "woman hater." However, the theme takes a peculiar turn and at the finish everybody concerned is satisfied with the conclusion.

Buck Jones Honor Guest at Rodeo

Buck Jones, noted western star, whose latest starring vehicle, "A Man Four-Square," is now at the Garden theater, was not too busy during the making of the picture to take a couple of days off to be guest of honor at a big rodeo at Salinia, Calif.

Besides being guest of honor at the rodeo, Mr. Jones gave $500 to the winner of the bucking horse contest. The purse attracted a great many contestants and made the affair a lively one.

Any time there is a rodeo within a radius of a few hundred miles you can depend on Buck attending it, if he can get away from his work.

"There is one thing I like very much, and that is to see a good bucking horse contest," commented Mr. Jones on his return from Salinas, "as I have ridden a lot of those 'rocking horses' myself. The rodeo at Salinas proved to be a very lively one, and I certainly enjoyed it."

Mrs. Jones and their daughter, Maxine, accompanied him.

In the cast of "A Man Four-Square," with Buck Jones, are Florence Gilbert, Marion Harlan, Jay Hunt, Sidney Bracey and Frank Beal.

"TAXI DANCER" OPENS HERE

Joan Crawford Star of Noted Picture

If you don't enjoy dancing, you don't enjoy life to its utmost!

Believe it or not, this is the contention of Joan Crawford, who was a Broadway dance celebrity before attaining a like position as a picture actress and who is playing in "The Taxi Dancer," at the Strand Theater Sunday and Monday.

One can't talk to Joan for five minutes without realizing that here is a girl who is getting the utmost out of every experience, whose effulgent personality carries her through every difficulty to a point a little bit higher than she occupied before.

Joan says that dancing taught her to project this personality, to live in a veritable whirl of life and rhythm, and by sheer force to conquer her misfortunes rather than let them conquer her.

"Dancing is far more than a physical exercise," says Miss Crawford. "It is something that takes hold of one's spirits as well, and pitches them to a higher key. I would advise every young person and especially every girl, to study dancing, even if she knows that she will never put it to any so-called 'practical' use."

Joan plays the title role in Harry Millarde's production of "The Taxi Dancer." It is the screen version of Robert Terry Shannon's popular novel of the same name, and the cast includes Owen More, Marc MacDermott, Douglas Gilmore, Gertrude Astor, Rockliffe Fellowes, Bert Roach, Claire McDowell, William Orlamond and Charles French.

JOHN GILBERT SCORES AGAIN

Greta Garbo Plays Vamp In Story of Love, Honor

John Gilbert, the famous doughboy of "The Big Parade," isn't a one-role actor by any means. His greatest success was as the American soldier—and now he has turned about and scored another success just as great—as a young German.

It proves two things—one of them that John Gilbert is an actor who can essay anything and do a great piece of work; another is that young men are young men the world over, and the color of the flag that flies over their native land doesn't have anything to do with the color of the red blood of youth.

All of which is to say that John Gilbert has done one of the greatest pieces of work in his career in "Flesh and the Devil," now playing at the Majestic theater.

He has caught the idealism of the European youth and tinged it with the adventurous susceptibility to feminine charms that the author so graphically painted in word pictures; and from the Sudermann character he has evolved a new triumph.

Greta Garbo is the heroine, a charming, exotic siren who charms him almost to doom, a literal modern prototype of Germany's legend of the Lorelei; Miss Garbo establishes a new school of screen vampire in her role in the new picture. She is compellingly convincing and dramatically charming, and when the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios lured her from Sweden they laid the foundation for a very great success. Lars Hanson is a compelling figure as the wronged husband, and George Fawcett a dominant character as the old pastor. William Orlamond, Barbara Kent, Eugenie Besserer and others of note have adequate roles.

Clarence Brown, the director, did a remarkable thing in this picture; he directed a strictly European story in a strictly European way—but with all the finesse of the American director. It is hard to believe that this remarkable portrayal of life in Europe was really made in America.

Its drama is tremendous—and the cast and director well worthy of it.

Denny Very Ill Man

Reginald Denny has been much sicker than anyone realized. An appendicitis operation which sounds simple this case seems to have been serious for it will be fully a month before Mr. Denny will be permitted to work again. His slowness in recovering may be due in a measure to a serious automobile accident in which he figured some months ago.

Florence Vidor and Clive Brook take the leading roles in "The Popular Sin," starting at the Olympic Sunday.

Florence Vidor Gets Serious About "Popular Sin"—But It's a Comedy

Mortal or deadly sins, says the dictionary, are seven—Pride, covetousness, lust, anger, gluttony, envy and sloth.

What is the "popular sin?"

Florence Vidor, after pointing out emphatically that she doesn't want to be considered an authority on the subject, says she believes it to be none of these. The "popular sin" cannot be placed in any such classification, according to Paramount's lovely star.

The discussion was provoked by the title of her new starring picture, "The Popular Sin." Monta Bell's comedy of Parisian stage life in which Clive Brook, Greta Nissen and Philip Strange are featured, showing at the Olympic theater Sunday, through Wednesday.

"Take the cardinal virtues," said Miss Vidor. "If I remember correctly they are Justice, Prudence, Fortitude and . . . . ."

"Temperance," prompted Director Malcolm St. Clair.

"And Temperance," repeated Miss Vidor. "Now if you mix up the four cardinal virtues and add the seven mortal sins in small, equal parts, you have the receipe for an average human being.

"The complexities of human life make it almost impossible to put one of these labels on any specific action. Good deeds are often motivated by selfish reasons, and what is stamped as sin is just as often a misunderstood attempt to act virtuously."

"Yes, but how about the 'popular sin,' Miss Vidor?" someone interrupted.

"Well, now," the star replied, "you can't expect me to answer that. I really don't know enough about it.

"And anyway, why do you suppose Monta Bell put such a provocative title on his story? You'll just have to see the picture when it's completed."

To those who may be confused by Miss Vidor's serious discussion, let it be said that her latest vehicle is a comedy-drama of Parisian marital infel- and felicity.

INVESTORS

Movie Colony Buying Real Estate These Days.

Once upon a time movie stars bought rich raiment and rode around in purple cars with pink upholstery. But not these days. Only the Los Angeles oil millionaires have gaudy cars nowadays. The film players are saving their money and then investing it in Hollywood and Los Angeles real estate, in which fortunes are being made every week. This is true, especially of film stars who make "big" money. Yakima Canutt, who comes to the Mission Theater Sunday, in his latest Goodwill picture, "The Outlaw Breaker," has also been bitten by the real estate bug, and bitten hard. "Yak" only has his horse, "Boy," and a flivver. The rest of his money is in property, pennies growing into dollars, thousands growing into millions, as it were.

BOX AND THE MEXICANS

REPRESENTATIVE JOHN G. BOX, Texas member of the house committee on immigration, has declared that years of intense study and observation have made it plain to him that the main body of immigration to America does not head to the farm. He says Mexico is now one of the main sources from which immigrants come to America, that from 60,000 to 90,000 come annually through the immigration stations and probably larger numbers are smuggled in. He says Texas gets the greatest number with California next, and that he was recently advised by unofficial documents furnished him by the department of labor that the Mexican population of Texas is now approximately 500,000. This is the viewpoint of Representative Box:

"All of the evils which our immigration laws have been enacted to check are in, and it is known that not the best people of Spanish or Mexican extraction but the mass of illiterate, ignorant, often diseased and vicious Mexican peons are imported and moved about by their importers as only that class of people can be handled. All of the reasons for the thoroughly settled policy of restriction of immigration apply to them in full force. Their heavy contribution to the ranks of paupers, the diseased and criminal can be overwhelmingly shown to any public spirited person who wants to know it.".

Representative Box will be reminded by employers of Mexican labor that the Mexican is industrious, law abiding, an excellent worker and that he is neither a pauper nor a criminal. Of course there are criminals among the Mexicans. There are criminals among the whites of Texas. There are many papuers among them. There are many killers among them. There are many hi-jackers and crooks among them.

Representative Box should be fair to the Mexicans of Texas. They do the rough work in Texas. They are easily handled. They pay their debts. They keep to themselves. There are thousands of Mexicans in Texas, who never participate in primary elections nor do they go to the polls on general election day.

REED IN THE RACE

SENATOR JAMES A. REED of Missouri is a candidate for the democratic presidential nomination. Missouri democrats launched his boom at a banquet in Jefferson City. There were plates laid for 600 leading democrats of the state. Senator Thaddeus H. Caraway of Arkansas was to have delivered the keynote speech, but illness prevented.

Reed is a picturesque figure in the politics of America. He is the greatest debater of the senate. He is serving his third term in the upper house. Politics is a queer game. Seven years ago Reed was denied a seat in the San Francisco convention. He was thrown out after his congressional district had elected him a delegate. He had fought the League of Nations and the friends of Woodrow Wilson controlled the convention. Now the man who was cast out of the democratic convention in 1920 is a candidate for a presidential nomination in 1928.

Reed is an old school democrat. He believes in the time tried policies of economics and government. He talked against the McNary-Haugen bill and he voted against it. He believes that a people the least governed are the best governed. He may never win the nomination for the presidency, but if the Missouri democrats submit his name to the national convention next year, he may have a powerful voice in the naming of the prize, if it is the prize.

If he fails to win the nomination he will return to private life after 18 years service in the American senate. He will return to the practice of law. This Missouri gabfly is not a wealthy man. He gave up a lucrative practice to serve the people of Missouri as their senator. Now if his ambition to be the standard bearer of the party is not realized, he is going to make money as a lawyer. Next.

LAFOLLETTE IN EVIDENCE

SENATOR ROBERT M. LAFOLLETTE of Wisconsin submitted a resolution to the senate on Washington's birthday in which that body is asked to declare against another term for President Coolidge. Of course Young LaFollette did not name the president in his resolution, but it declares that the precedent established by Washington and other presidents in retiring after two terms had become by universal concurrence a part of our republican system of government.

Calvin Coolidge is serving his first term. As vice-president, he became the successor of Warren G. Harding, when death called the Ohio statesman to his long home. Arthur Brisbane is a democrat when he feels like voting the democratic ticket. He is a Coolidge democrat. He believes that Coolidge will be given a second nomination and that he will be re-elected. Brisbane is the highest priced newspaper writer in the world. He may be a false prophet this time, but all the signs indicate that Coolidge will be renominated by the republicans and win the election next year.

Many things may happen before the coming of the next convention of the republicans, but the adopted son of Massachusetts is sitting easy in the boat and he isn't rocking it. All the politicians are watching him. Some say that he will veto the McNary-Haugen bill; others say that he will permit it to become a law without his signature.

Regardless of his actions, price fixing of farm products is certain to follow if the corn and cotton senators stand together as they did when the price fixing bill was approved by both houses of congress and sent to the president.

MONEY IN OIL

THERE is money in oil in Texas. George A. Henshaw, a San Angelo independent operator sold to the Texas company a lease on 320 acres in Brown county for a minimum of $2,000,000 cash. George A. Henshaw entered the oil game mainly to condition himself for football at the Oklahoma A. & M. college. Now he has a couple of millions and doesn't need the money to equip himself for the game. There is money in petroleum. There is going to be money in petroleum for years to come.

The HOLLYWOOD GIRL

By BEATRICE BURTON
AUTHOR OF "LOVE BOUND," "HER MAN," "HONEY LOU," ETC.

READ THIS FIRST:

BOBBIE RANSOM, a little blond school teacher is film struck and wildly eager to break into the movies. Neither her widowed father nor ANDY JERROLD, who wants to marry her, will lend her the money to take her to Hollywood. But she borrows five hundred dollars from the widow Perkins, who is to be her father's second wife, and goes.

At MRS. MANGAN'S boarding house she meets STELLA DELROY, an extra girl in pictures. Through Stella she gets a few days' work at the Magnifica Studio, where ROY SCHULTZ, a famous director, shows great interest in her for a while and then apparently forgets her. But she becomes good friends with LOTTIE, his wife, who once was a school teacher, too. Lottie is jealous of a gold-digging picture "vamp" named MONICA MONT, and because of her finally leaves Roy.

The assistant director, GUS MACCLOUD, falls in love with Bobbie and she with him. Through the long months when she has no work he encourages her and lends her money on a diamond bracelet given her by Andy, and some other trifles. He promises her a good part in the first picture of his own that he is given to direct.

Then Bobbie begins to hear queer stories about him. Lottie says he's to blame for taking Roy out to wild "girly" parties, and she is scandalized at the number of young friends he entertains unchaperoned at his own house. Stories come to Bobbie about a love affair between him and Monica, between him and unhappy little Stella, who presently commits suicide by drinking poison. He finally admits to Bobbie that he has a wife who is divorcing him, but says nothing about marrying again once he's free. But he goes on trying to make love to her, and angers her so that she refuses a part he offers her in a picture, and goes to work in a book store. Later they patch up their quarrel and Gus proposes marriage. Bobbie accepts him, and writes to Andy to tell him of it, but receives no answer. She worries about him.

She works in a picture that Gus is making, and then in one of Roy Schultz's. Gus becomes jealous of her and Roy one night, when they are in Roy's office together, and begins to quarrel drunkenly.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER LXII.

It came to Bobbie, in a flash, that Gus was drunk.

Not cheerfully tipsy as she had seen him two or three times at his own house, but beastly drunk. "Fighting" drunk, the way Old Charlie, who had often washed windows for Aunt Gertrude years ago, used to be.

She could still remember how Old Charlie had looked when he had been carrying three drinks too many. Red-eyed, with his face red and shiny, and with a lurch to his walk. Once she had found him lying in the vacant lot next door to the old house on Locust street, and thought him dead. But Aunt Gertrude had gone to look at him, and pronounced him only "dead drunk."

Bobbie had been dreadfully frightened, then, of Old Charlie.

But she wasn't the least bit afraid of Gus now, as he looked at her with puffy, blood-shot eyes. She was only filled with a deep disgust and a kind of sick weakness. She felt as if she wanted to cry. Tears pricked along her eyelids and seemed to well up, warm and choking, into her throat.

"I've Taken a Flat of My Own, Mrs. Mangan"

"No—no—no," she said as he came toward her. She thought he was going to try to take her in his arms, and for the first time she had a horror of his touch. His touch that always before had sent a delicious tingling along her nerves, and a feeling of warm languid happiness through her veins.

She shrank from him now as he came close to her.

Then, as he pushed Roy away from him with his left arm, his right hand grasped her roughly by the chin and tilted her head back so that she had to meet his eyes. They were smiling now between narrowed lids.

"Listen, Baby," he said, "Lemme tell you something—"

"You can't tell her anything! Not in the state you're in now!" Roy Schultz broke in, pushing Gus' hand out of his way as if it had been the hand of a tailor's dummy. "What you're going to do is go home with me, see? I'm going to take you, old man." His voice became gentler as he spoke, and he put his arm around Gus' broad shoulders.

But Gus flung it way from him. "Get your hooks off me or I'll beat you up," he threatened sullenly. "You keep out o' this."

"Now, you listen here," he said, still holding Bobbie's chin between thumb and finger, as a scolding mother might have held her child's chin, "you don't owe this guy, Schultz, anything. You don't have to come up here to his office and let him fool around with you—"

"He wasn't fooling around with me!" Bobbie burst out. She could feel the hot blush of humiliation that dyed her face and neck and breast. "How can you say such a terrible thing to me? You let me alone, Gus MacCloud!!" She put up her hands and tried to push his flushed face away from her. His breath was thick with the smell of the whiskey he had been drinking. Sickening. Oh, how could he be so horrible to her? This man that she was going to marry. This man that she had promised to love—that she did love.

"You don't owe Schultz a dogoned thing," he was saying slowly and heavily. "Don't let him kid you into thinking that you do. You owe it to me. I was the guy who made him give you a chance in this picture"—he pronounced it "pichsur-" and after he had said it he hiccuped.

Then he hiccuped again, his face not two inches from her own. It was exactly like a slapstick comedy on the screen, she told herself wildly. And all at once she burst out into a laugh—the wild, high hysterical laughter of a woman who is on the verge of a collapse. She had been working like a slave all day, and she was dead tired and shaky, anyway.

How she got out of Gus' clutch, and out of the lighted office and down the stairs, she never clearly knew. But presently she was out in the moonlit darkness, with the spangled stars over her, and the fresh, keen, sweet night air taking the stale scent of whisky out of her nostrils. In the room above her she still could hear Gus' loud, chick, muttering voice.

She cried all the way home in the Yellow cab that she picked up outside the grilled iron gates of the Magnifica Studio.

A half hour later she cried again her tears dropping into the cup of hot tea that Mrs. Mangan brought her after she was in bed.

"Cry it out, dearie," said the good woman, "and if it'll ease your little heart, just tell it all to old Mangan. Just tell it all to me, an' get it off your chest."

Bobbie knew that she was dying to know why she was crying. She had a "nose for news," had Mrs. Mangan, and a bit of spicy gossip was the breath of life to her.

But Bobbie shook her head and refused a second cup of the tea. She couldn' talk over the man she loved with anyone. Perhaps she could have told her mother about Gus if she had had a mother. Perhaps not.

It is hard to discuss the people you love with other people—and doubly hard to discuss their faults. Their faults and their failings. The mean and shameful things about them.

* * *

By morning things didn't seem so black and tragic to Bobbie.

She was still young enough to feel sunny and light-hearted because the sun was shining, because the wind was stirring in the palm trees outside her window, because there was a bird singing somewhere near the house. The beauty of these things passed over her like a soothing hand. It smoothed away her troubles, much as a gentle hand strokes away a headache.

Suppose the man she loved—the man she had hated and loathed last night—had taken a drink mor, than he could stand? Didn't a good many me ndrink more than wes good for them?

"I'll make him stop getting 'lickered' up, anyway, when I marry him," thought Bobbie along with thousands of other girls who have married men to reform them—and failed at their jobs!

And suppose he said insulting things when he was drunk, she went on thinking, as she went into the bathroom to take her shower. He probably hadn't known what he was saying!

Some of the things he had said were true, anyway. She did owe everything that had come to her in the way of success to him. It was he who had urged Roy to give her a part in "The King." It was he who had loaned her money on Andy's bracelet.

Andy's bracelet! She hadn't thought of it in weeks. She must get it from Gus and send it back to Andy. He'd be wondering why she was keeping it, now that she was engaged to marry another man.

"I wonder if Gus is awake yet," she thought, running a wet comb through the yellow ripples of her hair before the mirror in her room. "I wonder if he remembers last night. I'll bet he doesn't."

Someone had once told her that a drunken person never knows what he is doing, and in her innocence she had believed it.

But Gus remembered his "night before" it turned out.

For as Bobbie, trim and fresh in a new blue street suit, started down the steps of the house at half past eight, he came driving into Las Palmas street and drew up in front of her with a great screeching of brakes.

Remorse was written all over him. He got out of the car and came up the walk in the most hang-dog way possible.

As he came close to her, Bobbie saw that the sun-wrinkles around his eyes were deeper than she had ever seen them. They were like long fin cuts in his skin. His face was gray where usually it was ruddy and firm—and to think that she had called him a "sun-god" in the early days of her infatuation!

"Baby," he said to her, looking down at her with a half-shamed grin. "What can I say after I say I'm sorry?"

He looked so pathetic with his head to one side, and Bobbie was feeling so light-hearted with that radiant morning-mood upon her, that she forgave him on the spot.

"Only you've got to swear off drinking," she said firmly. "When I marry you, I'm not going to marry the Demon Rum, too. Gusty."

"I wouldn't want to drink if I didn't get so blue, sitting around without you, all the time," he declared. "You dash away from the studio, and dash off to bed for fear you'll get a wrinkle—and I'm left out in the cold these days. No wonder I've taken to drink."

If she had stopped to think, she might have remembered that he had drunk more or less all the time she had known him. But when does a girl in love ever stop to do any real thinking?

"If you had a flat of your own, we could have dinner together every night, at least," Gus said moodily. "When we get out to a restaurant we never get home 'til midnight. Why don't you get a place of your own?"

The old, old bone of contention between them again!

Bobbie stared hard at him for a minute with her velvety brown eyes that were just the color of amber as the sun struck full upon them.

"All right, I will!" she cried, and with a swish of silk skirts against silk stockinged legs, she turned and flew into the house—quickly before she could change that changeable mind of hers.

Mrs. Mangan was washing dishes in the kitchen. She was a perfect symphony in gray this morning, with her gray skin, gray clothes, gray-looking arms buried to the elbows in gray dishwater. There was a glum gray look about her face, too.

She wiped her hands on the roller towel when Bobbie came flying into the room and turned around from the sink.

"Well, now what?" she asked with the air of a person who is used to hearing bad news, and always expects it.

"I'm giving you notice, Mrs. Mangan," the girl told her gently. She hated to do it. She knew that it is hard to rent rooms in Hollywood in the slack summer season. "I'm taking a flat of my own. I'll leave here the end of June, I think."

Instead of answering, Mrs. Mangan snorted. Then she walked over to the open door and looked out. Through the street door, she could see Gus standing out in the sunlight, waiting for Bobbie.

"Ho-hum!" said Mrs. Mangan with a knowing nod. "I see! I suppose that you want to be married from a swell flat of your own instead of from the boarding house of Mrs. Mangan! I suppose that's why you're leavin' me, now."

Bobbie shook her head.

"No, indeed!" she replied. "I just think I'll have more freedom in a place of my own. I don't know when I'm going to be married, Mrs. Mangan, and that's the truth. The date isn't set."

As she said it, a great wave of relief swept through her. It was nice not to have to think of tying herself up to Gus—or to anybody—for a while. It was lovely to be free, wasn't it? She felt as if the gray carpet in Mrs. Mangan's front hall was air as her feet passed over it.

Weeks afterward she realized just why it made her feel happy to think of being free. To think of not having the "date set."

Weeks afterward she knew why she could be so happy that morning, and wasn't the least bit crushed because her lover was a drunkard.

But she certainly did not know it then. She went out to Gus with a face that was like a new-opened flower in its brightness, and she chattered and laughed about nothing all the way to the studio.

"It does you good to have me get drunk," Gus said as he left her. "I think I'll have to do it often."

Even then her smile did not fade. It stayed—too bright and too fixed—all the way up to her green-and-yellow dressing room, where the white chiffon-and-pearl costume of a dancer was hanging against the wall, looking for all the world like one of Bluebeard's wives, hanging in the torture chamber.

Wouldn't you think that a girl who had everything she wanted—the man she wanted, the job she wanted, the clothes she wanted, would be happy? Read about one girl who wasn't in the next chapter of this story.

Would You Like To Retire?

By BRUCE BARTON
Illustrated by RAEBURN VAN BUREN

RECENTLY I had the interesting experience of seeing a man brought back to life who had been as good as dead. He was a successful corporation official ten years ago; and when he reached the age of fifty, he sold his interests, put the money into good safe bonds and retired.

He traveled about the world for a few months, but soon made the sad discovery that one city is just about like another. Then he came home, and decided to take things easy.

All day long he would sit on his porch or potter about the place; and except for his daily visits to his doctor, he had no definite engagements at all. His health and temper grew daily worse; he was useless to himself and the community, and in a few months, or years, would have passed away.

One day his banker sent for him and said: "We've got a lot of money in a little concern that ought to do well, but doesn't. Why don't you take hold of it for us and see if you can't straighten it up.

He did take hold of the little business. Instead of getting up at ten o'clock he began to get up at seven. He neglected his appointments with the doctor, at first, because he had no time, and after a while because he had never felt so well in his life. Men who watched him said that he became ten years younger in the next six months. Idleness and pills were fast hurrying him into the grave; he was resurrected and given a new, long lease of life by the wonderful magic of work.

The world is full of men who have the foolish idea that they will some day retire and "spend their last years in comfort and ease." As a matter of fact, they will probably spend part of those last years in querulous discomfort and the rest of them in the grave.

"Why don't you retire?" a man once asked the late J. P. Morgan.

"When did your father retire?" the old man demanded in reply.

"In 1904."

"When did he die?"

"In 1906."

"There you have it," said the wise old banker. "If he had kept at work, he would be alive and happy yet."

Franklin did his best work at an age when most men are dead; so did Voltaire and Goethe and Gladstone and Commodore Vanderbilt. By keeping busy right up to the end they finished the course happy—and young.

There is no other secret for eternal youth. And personally I cannot see very much difference between the man who refuses to work because he has five dollars in his pocket, and the man who refuses to work because he has a million. Both are a nuisance in a busy world and ought to be treated as such.

Bill Hart's Son

After martial trouble that has existed since he was born four years ago, the custody of William S. Hart Jr., son of the screen's "two-gun man," and Winifred Westover Hart, has been settled finally. A Nevada divorce decree, won by Mrs. Hart, gives her complete charge of the child.

Note his resemblance, even in infancy to the movie star: The careless side-lick of his hair, keen eyes and other features.

COPS FORCED TO COP!

RAHWAY, N. J.—Mayor Thomas A. Fyffe heard that the town's policemen were devoting more attention to other people's business than to their own. So the mayor set out to get first-hand information. He went into a grocery store to get a bottle of vinegar. The clerk wore a blue uniform with form with brass buttons and police shield and parked his billy on the cracker case while making the sale. Glancing out the window the mayor was horrified to see one of Rahway's finest parading with two charming damsels. If there's any parading with damsels done, the mayor—well, anyhow, a policeman shouldn't do it. So it came to pass that the whole force is being transferred.

THIS BEATS FICTION!

CALDWELL, N. J.—Although they have lived within 15 miles of each other, Herman Deshere, phonograph dealer here, until a few days ago had not seen his brother, Albert, in 27 years. A few days ago Mr. Deshere saw an advertisement in a Harrisburg, Pa., newspaper inquiring as to his whereabouts placed by Albert Davis of the Bronx. He went to that address and learned Davis was his brother, Albert, who had changed his name a few days before and whom he had not seen since he was 12 years old. The brothers celebrated with a dinner party in New York.

A FAT CHANCE!

TOLEDO, O.—Well proportioned women aren't worried, but are laughing over the news that fat girls will be excluded from a $50,000 home for young women to be erected here 50 years from now, under the provisions of the will of David Bourdette Burgert, bachelor and member of one of Toledo's oldest families. The will, filed in probate court here today, provides for the erection of a home with the luxuries and conveniences of its time for "women between the ages of 16 and 28, of small stature (no fat women need apply,) bright, ambitious, stylish and good to look at."

MUSIC VEILS ELOPEMENT.

PHOENIX, Ariz.—An expedient that would have been possible only under Latin conditions was used by a swain in Ajo, Ariz., to smuggle his promised bride from the home of her parents, who had forbidden him the house. He hired a Mexican orchestra to serenade the house, and then, while interest was diverted to the front, the girl slipped away to meet her lover and to be married.

EMBRACE CRACKS RIBS.

HARTFORD, Conn.—David N. Case, claim adjuster for an insurance company, revealed that one of the recent claims made against his company came from a father whose ribs were broken when he was embraced by his daughter.

NEW MARMON WINS FAVOR

200 New Dealers, Distributors Added to Sales Body

Public acceptance of the new little Marmon Eight at this winter's automobile shows throughout the country is one of the outstanding events of 1927 in the automotive world, according to reports received from those cities in which automobile shows have been held.

In both production and sales Marmon this year is establishing one of the largest percentages of increase ever recorded in the industry. As a result of this record demand it has been necessary for the Marmon factories in Indianapolis to increase production schedules to a substantial extent and the company's plants are now operating at capacity in order to meet the requirements of its distributors and dealers.

200 Dealers Added

Since Jan. 1 nearly 200 new distributors and dealers have been added to the Marmon sales organization and applications are being received at so rapid a rate that company officials believe the number of sales outlets will be doubled within the next 60 days. These new connections presage even greater popularity for the large Marmon series 75 since its presentation will be more complete than ever before.

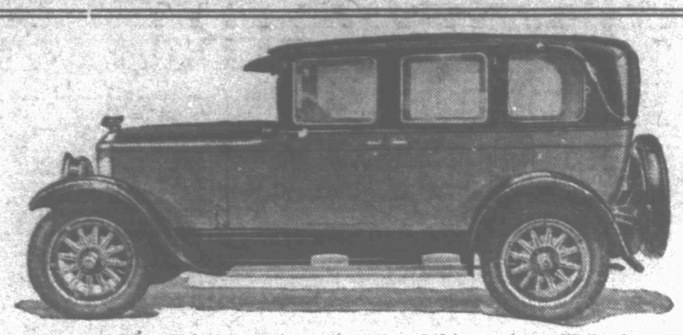

"The striking success of Marmon's full line of quality automobiles has been made evident in many definite ways since the new little Marmon Eight was introduced early this year," H. H. Brooks, general sales director of the Marmon company has announced. "Not only is the large Marmon series 75 selling at early season volume, but the demand for our new small eight is reflecting the desire of buyers of fine cars for just this type of automobile.

Distinct Innovation

"The new little Marmon is a distinct innovation in the automobile world, since it combines the beauty, power, stamina and riding comfort of the large, luxurious car with the flexibility of the small car in this age of parking and traffic difficulties. In other words, the small eight is a large fine motor car in a compact form and, just as its companion the large Marmon series 75, is built entirely in Marmon factories to Marmon methods of precision manufacture."

New Buick Town Brougham Luxurious Model

Among the new models which attracted the crowds at the New York automobile show was a new body type introduced by Buick. This model is called the Town Brougham, and is a deluxe five-passenger closed car on the series 115 chassis.

The body is of the sedan type, with the rounded, leather-covered rear quarters and the landau hinges of the brougham. It is distinctly in the deluxe class, carrying special equipment, upholstery and finish. The color on the upper works of the body is Delaware green, with Yorktown green below the belt. The leather quarters are colored. Double gold striping is placed over the black lower molding. The wheels are dark natural wood. The upholstery is a shade of green to harmonize with the body colors.

A very pleasing effect has been obtained by skillful application of colors. While the entire part of the body is in Delaware green, the the insets around the windows are in the lighter Yorktown green. This treatment gives an effect of color harmony hitherto associated only with the most expensive custom-built cars.

The series 115 chassis has a wheelbase of 114 1-2 inches and is powered with the Buick valve-in-head engine of 207 cubic inches displacement, developing 63 horsepower.

Chrysler Coupe Is Fast Seller

One of the striking new cars displayed for the first time at the recent national and local automobile shows was the new Chrysler "60" two-passenger coupe with rumble seat.

This coupe, which is listed as $1245 f. o. b. Detroit, is said by officials of the Chrysler Sales corporation to be meeting with exceptionally generous public reception and they are predicting notable popularity for it.

The car is making a special appeal, its makers say, because of its attractive color combination of wills green with flamingo carmine and gold bronze striping, and its upholstery in a fine grade of mouse gray mohair. Further favorable comment has been aroused, according to the makers, by attractive outlines resulting from the use of the new small wheels, by the graceful rounded rear windows; the smooth sweeping curves of the rear deck, and the smart, brisk appearance of the body as a whole.

Rear Window Control

Among the other features reported to be much liked in the new car is the control of the rear window by a crank regulator which lowers the glass out of sight and not only permits free conversation between occupants of the front and rumble seats but provides full ventilation for the body of the car when desired. The unusual refinements of the new "60" instrument panel are reported to assist in creating an impression of exceptional interior luxury.

Appointments of the special coupe, which its makers declare are unusually numerous and desirable, include a spacious rumble seat, trimmed in molespin imitation leather; rear view mirror; automatic windshield wiper; bullet type head and cowl lamps; smartly barred, Butler finished hardware with domelight to match; heavy rubber floor mats, and kick plates below each door.

NEEDS TO STAND ON TOES.

MILWAUKEE, Wis.—Napoleon was a little man, but Leo F. Kosak must grow half an inch if he wants to be an officer in the United States army. Kosak has received a coveted appointment to West Point military academy, but he must acquire the half inch before July 1 if he is to be accepted. He has adopted a strenuous program of stretching exercises to attain the required height of 5 feet 4 inches.

Strong Honored By General Motors

E. T. Strong, president and general manager of the Buick Motor company, has been elected a vice president of General Motors, according to the announcement of Alfred P. Sloan, Jr., president of the corporation.

This is the second important promotion coming to Mr. Strong within the last few months. He was advanced to the presidency of Buick late last Fall from the office of general sales manager, a position he had held for the past ten years.

Mr. Strong became associated with the Buick Motor company 15 years ago, starting as a special traveler for the sales department. He was manager of several important branches of this company in several cities of the country, and left the office of manager of the Chicago branch to fill the sales manager position. During his regime as head of the sales department, Mr. Strong directed the sale of 1,500,000 Buick cars.

HUPP SALES SOAR IN 1926

Net Income Is $3,507,628; Stock Increased Million

Net income of the Hupp Motor Car corporation and its subsidiaries for the year 1926 was $3,507,628, or at the rate of $3.48 per share on the 1,005,189 shares of common stock outstanding at the close of the year. This compares with net income of $2,854,519 or $3.02 a share on the 913,809 common shares outstanding in 1925.

The Hupp report, made public today by DuBois Young, president and general manager, reveals the greatest sales year in its history, with net sales exceeding $50,000,000.

The report reveals a continued strong financial and general condition for the company. Current assets, including $4,144,885 in cash, $3,614,202 in United States certificates, were $13,955,166, against current liabilities of $2,330,323, a ratio of six to one. There is no funded indebtedness nor are there any bank loans against the company.

Sales Increasing

Mr. Young, in his letter to stockholders, points out that, 'With the wide choice of models Hupmobile is offering, consisting of 14 eight and five six-cylinder body models, and the appropriate improvements and refinements, we feel that it is the most attractive line we have ever offered the public. At the recent motor show these cars have been enthusiastically received, and our dealers are anticipating a marked increase in sales."

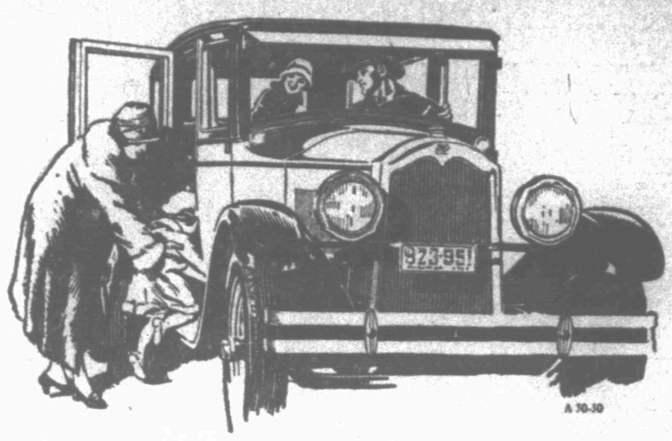

During the year stockholders authorized an increase in the number of shares of the company's common stock from 1,000,000 to 2,000,000 shares. Directors shortly afterward declared a stock dividend of 10 per cent and increased the cash dividend from $1 to $1.40 per share per year.

$1,556,646 Added to Surplus

In addition to its increased dividend declarations, the company added $1,556,646 to its surplus account during 1926, bringing that figure to $9,504,599, after writing off depreciation of plant and equipment and reserves for taxes and other business activities. It also decreased its inventory from $6,020,716 as of the beginning of the year, to $5,025,630 at its close.

This phenomenal success born of public preference

When public opinion takes hold of a product like the Chrysler "70" and in three years' time lifts it from 27th to 4th place over the heads of long-established cars, the significance of the act is almost too plain to require analysis.

It can only mean, of course, that people have found in the "70" from its beginning, and have continued to find in the finer Chrysler "70" in ever-increasing numbers, qualities and values that they did not and do not find elsewhere.

Finer, more exquisitely graceful bodies—finer, more distinctive silhouette with military front and cadet visor—finer design with smaller wheels—greater luxury of comfort—greater riding ease—rich upholstery—greater perfection of appointment—more refinements in controls and lighting, with a lock conveniently placed on the dash—more attractive color harmonies, far in advance of current blendings.

AIR NOW BIG AUTO BUILDER

Huge Output Made Possible By New Formulas

The American automobile industry is reaching new strides in productive capacity while many millions of dollars in new economies are being affected through the positive, mechanical control and manipulation of air in a hundred different processes and functions, leading plant engineers in the industry declare.

The spectacular growth of the industry with its giant volume of mass production has been made possible by wide adoption of air control in all the important phases of manufacture and the value of controlled air has been translated into terms of lower prices, greater efficiency and higher quality of material and workmanship to the car buyer, these engineers assert.

Production Increased.

"It has been the speed with which the industry has adopted important developments in science to facilitate production, protect health conditions of labor and reclaim material waste that has made it one of the most outstanding and spectacular in American history," the chief plant engineer of one of America's greatest motor car builders declared.

"Advances in the science of air conditioning has made it possible to increase the production of plants several times over without increasing their size or buildings. This is true of all the big builders such as Ford, General Motors, Willys-Overland, Stearns-Knight, Chrysler, Nash, Studebaker and others."

While systematic ventilation of all buildings plays a big part in the automotive industry, it is in a multiplicity of other applications that electrically controlled air is of vital importance to the industry and its thousands of workers. According to Arthur Sheldon, works manager of the Willys-Overland Company, many states have laws compelling industry to protect workmen from dusts, gases, fumes and other by-products of manufacture but the motor industry has gone far beyond the letter and spirit of these laws to both protect its workmen and to increase productive capacity.

"Dust must be collected, shavings conveyed away, gases, odors and fumes driven out if production is not to be hampered and the lives and health of workmen protected." Mr. Sheldon said. "These objectionable dusts and other by-products result from grinding, polishing, sand blasting and other operations, and are all handled by air driven at great force by huge blowers and other air-control equipment.

"There is hardly a department in the Willys-Overland plant which does not have both an intake and exhaust air system for not only proper ventilation but for collecting all these gases and grist. Each system plays a different part but each effectively gives protection and speeds up the manufacturing processes. In the baked enamel ovens, where explosive gases are easily formed, air is controlled by machinery to prevent these explosions. It is kept in motion and the gases driven out."

Dignity and Convenience In This Car

Business today puts the greatest demands upon the automobile. The car of the commercial representative must do more than furnish fast and safe transportation —it must have dignified appearance that reflects the standing of the business firm; it must be economical in operation and maintenance to meet the requirements of strict budgets; it must have stamina to withstand gruelling drives day after day, and it must be constructed to have ample and well protected luggage carrying space.

This trend has dictated the design of the Fisher-built body of the Oldsmobile "multi-purpose" coupe. Long and graceful lines characterize the body from the radiator shell to rear spring tips. The blue Duco finish and harmony of line is further emphasized by the black fabricord rear quarter with landau bows.

The creation of this attractive appearance was but one of the designers' objectives. Special attention has been paid the needs of the "traveling man" and all those who require carrying utility as well as transportation. Ample space to carry sample cases in addition to other baggage is provided under the rear deck.

The deck is hinged, permitting ease in the placing in or removal of large pieces of luggage. Beside the deck opening, access to this compartment may also be had through a small door in the right side of the body.

As a further convenience there is a package space behind the seat of ample size for brief case, portfolios and small bundles.

TRADE SLUMPS SEEN AS PAST

Jobs, Output Stabilized, Says Dodge Head

By E. G. WILMER,
President, Dodge Brothers, Inc.

Events during 1926 justified the widespread opinions voiced a year ago that America had passed the crisis created by the World War, that the nation had gone far to re-establish its equilibrium, and that business had entered upon an era of prosperity which gave promise of enduring for a long period.

There is no reason to think that entry into the New Year of 1927 will project any sudden or radical change into the situation.

To be sure, the history of the human race is a history of peaks and valleys; peaks of prosperity and valleys of depression. In ancient days whole tribes starved and died during periods of famine. But as knowledge increased, storage and other facilities were devised. Eventually, human beings learned that devastating famines virtually could be eliminated.

Finding New Solutions.

Just as their ancient forbears sought and found the solutions of famines, so modern business men are seeking and finding the solutions of business panics and business depressions. Modern business leaders appreciate that stability is far more to be desired than a constant succession of highly prosperous and deeply depressive waves and cycles. They are endeavoring to create a stability of employment, a stability of production, a stability of money; all to the end that the human race may live fuller and happier lives.

Progress of the last half century has placed many new tools in the hands of business. With these tools are being carved comparatively gentle and stable curves in the charts of business statistics, in place of the violent upswings and downswings that were characteristic of earlier times. Fast railroad trains and ships, telephones, telegraph, radio, automobiles, motor trucks, calculating machines, typewriters, automatic machinery, electric power and light, are but a few of a multitude of tools now at the command of modern business.

Big Improvements Made.

Vast improvements have been made during recent decades in distribution systems, in financial methods, in transportation, in communication. Perhaps the most far-reaching improvement of all is the improvement noted everywhere in human relations. Vendors and customers, managements and workers, are showing an interest and sympathy with each other's plans and problems that would have been undreamed of a few short decades ago.

While the millennium has not yet arrived, men and groups of men are realizing that their own success and prosperity depend upon the success and prosperity of others. The interests of workers, of stockholders, and of executives are mutual. The interests of groups in iron and coal are the same as the interests of the groups who work in rubber and concrete. The interests of the bankers and the manufacturers and the agriculturists and the transportation groups have much in common. Realization of a far-reaching dependence, each upon the other, is bringing about a spirit of good will and fair play that is extending throughout the world.

Sees 1927 Banner Year.

Certainly no prophet can be wrong who says that 1927 will strengthen the bonds of ever growing allegiance that each man owes to every other man in the onward march towards perfection of modern civilization.

As for the specific business of Dodge Brothers, Inc., third largest manufacturer of motor cars and trucks in the world, we are looking to 1927 with confidence of being more useful to more people than during any year before.

17 YEARS AGO

Speed of 18 Miles Hour "Big News" In Early Day

Seventeen years ago a Texas editor found news in the fact that a Buick model 10 traveled a distance of ninety miles at an average speed of eighteen miles an hour. The item read:

"Last Saturday Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Moore started out towards Fort Stockton with their twenty horsepower Buick model 10, going forty-five miles out and return and making the distance in five hours." Then was added this editorial opinion: "That certainly is making splendid time over country roads."

This model was the first horizontal four-cylinder valve-in-head Buick ever built, and was quite a sensation in its day. It was in this car that Louis Chevrolet, Bob Burman and others gained fame as automobile racing drivers. Many of the stock car records they set seventeen years ago still stand on the record books.

CHEVROLET HAS BANNER YEAR

Gain in Truck Output in 1926 64,200 Over 1925

Attaining a production of 112,499 commercial vehicles during 1926, an increase of more than 132 per cent over the preceding year, the Chevrolet Motor company is now the world's largest manufacturer of gear shift trucks, according to figures just announced by company officials.

The increase is a gain of 64,200 over the 1925 production of 48,299 trucks.

This enormous increase is attributed in no small degree to the numerous refinements and lowered prices of the new trucks. Dealers everywhere reported an enthusiastic reception by the public of these new models.

The 1925 production in its turn had more than doubled the 1924 output of 23,134 trucks.

According to present manufacturing schedules an even greater monthly production is contemplated for the truck division during the coming months to insure dealers a sufficient supply to meet the growing demand.

Production during January, 1927, totalling 15,927 trucks, also broke all truck productions for a single month in the history of the company. The previous high mark was in September, 1926, when 12,845 trucks were manufactured.

Whippet Sales Set New High Record

Since the price reduction was announced a short time ago by Willys-Overland, retail sales of Whippets in less than two score important cities of the country on Feb. 15 had reached a total of $6,725,000. This figure combined with the sale of Willys-Knight sixes in the same cities registers a total retail sales volume for both lines of $10,121,000.

The price reduction coming simultaneously with the introduction of the new cars has brought a response on the part of the motor car buyers which has resulted in a record business for the Toledo manufacturer, one that indicates that 1927 will see Willys-Overland establishing a new high mark for sales and production.

The largest sales volume came in most of the cities following the annual automobile shows when the public was given its first opportunity of viewing the 1927 line of Whippets, Whippet Sixes and Willys-Knight Sixes. Up to that time the car buyers merely "marked time" awaiting the formal presentation of the new models.

Auto Clubs Launch Nation-Wide Fight Against Unfair Motor Laws

Removal of many of the more important forces that restrict the range of the automobile will be one of the outstanding accomplishments of motordom this year in the opinion of James Boyle, executive secretary of the Wichita Valley Auto Club, Inc.

An intensive attack on unfair local legislation and unduly heavy taxation on the motorist has been launched by motor clubs in all parts of the country, according to Mr. Boyle, and already there are evidences that success will mark the club's efforts.

The three forces that serve to retard the complete motorization of the nation are unfair laws limiting the use of the car, excessive taxation and the lack of good roads in some parts of the country, Mr. Boyle points out:

A. A. A. Behind Fight.

"A fight to eliminate these three forces long has been one of the basic features of the program of the A. A. A. and its 560 affiliated clubs," says Mr. Boyle. "The effort has become more intense and far-reaching this year than ever before. Every club that comprises the membership of the A. A. A. is vigorously in the fight and motorists seeing the advantages to be gained, are rallying to the standard of their local organizations."

Even the seemingly slightest successes in eliminating one of the conditions that arouses the ire of the motorists is marked by an increase of understanding on his part of the wisdom of organization. Organized motordom is the greatest single power in this country. Unorganized, it has the futility that characterizes individual effort in any general reformatory gesture.

The hope of the local clubs and the national organization for success in their campaigns to remove restrictive influences is a rapidly swelling membership. Because they are seeing their rosters grow daily, they are confident that this year's fight is going to be the most successful ever waged.

TOWN OFF THE MAP.

NEW HAVEN, Conn.—The century-old society for the detection of thieves and robbers in Enfield, Conn., rates civic pride highly and as a result it has decided to "pursue" the New Haven railroad for "stealing" the prestige and self-respect which comes to a community listed in the time table. The road discontinued the station recently and F. J. Sheldon, 80 years old, author and publisher, will bring "charges." He wants the town restored to the railroad map.

DODGE BROTHERS MOTOR CARS

THE PERFECT MAN: HIS STORY BY BRUCE BARTON

The Man Nobody Knows

INSTALMENT XXII.
Simon Squires.

Jesus taught all this without ever teaching it. Every one of his conversations, every contact between his mind and others, is worthy of the attentive study of any sales manager. Passing along the shores of a lake one day, he saw two of the men whom he wanted as disciples. Their minds were in motion; their hands were busy with their nets; their conversation was about conditions in the fishing trade, and the prospects of a good market for the day's catch. To have broken in on such thinking with the offer of employment as preachers of a new religion would have been to confuse them and invite a certain rebuff. What was Jesus' approach?

"Come with me," he said. "and I will make you fishers of men."

Fishers . . . that was a word they could understand . . . fishers of men . . . that was a new idea. . . . what was he driving at. . . . fishers of men . . . . it sounded interesting . . . . well, what was it, anyway?

He sat on a hillside overlooking a fertile country. Many of the crowd who gathered around him were farmers, with their wives and sons and daughters. He wanted their interest and attention; it was important to make them understand, at the very outset, that what he had to say was nothing vague or theoretical but of direct and immediate application to their daily lives.

"A sower went forth to sow," he began, "and when he sowed some seeds fell by the wayside and the fowls came and devoured them up . . . ." Were they interested . . . were they? Every man of them had gone through that experience . . . the thievish crows . . . many a good day's work they had spoiled. So this Teacher knew something about the troubles that farmers had to put up with, did he? Fair enough . . . let's hear what he has to say . . . .

It would be easy to multiply examples, taking each of his parables and pointing out the keen knowledge of human motives on which it is based. In a later chapter we shall have something more to say of these parables—the most powerful advertisements of all time. For our present purpose the examples already given are enough. They show how instantly he won his audiences. With his very first sentence he put himself in step with them; it was invariably a thought in line with their own thinking, easy for even the dullest to understand, and shrewdly calculated to awaken an appetite for more.

Every salesman knows the value of being able to sense an objection and meet it before it is advanced. Jesus knew that far better. He went one night to dine with a prominent Pharisee. His presence in any house attracted strangers who found it easy under the less rigid conventions of those days, to make their way into the room, where they could watch him and listen. Thus, while the Pharisee's dinner was in progress a certain woman of unfortunate experience crept into the room and kneeling down by Jesus began to bathe his feet with precious ointment and wipe them with her hair. Jesus knew what this outburst of unselfishment meant to an over-burdened spirit, and accepted the tribute with gracious dignity, even though its emotional warmth must have been embarrassing. But all the time he was perfectly well aware of the thoughts that were passing through the self-satisfied mind of his host.

"Ah," said that cynical gentleman to himself, "if he were a prophet he would have known that this woman is a sinner, and would have refused to let her touch him."

He might have been tempted to put his thought into words, but he never had a chance. Quick as a flash Jesus turned on him:

"Simon, I have somewhat to say to thee."

"Teacher, say on." It was a half concealed sneer.

"There was a man who had two debtors," said Jesus. "One owed him five hundred shillings and the other fifty. Neither could pay and he forgave them both. Which of them, do you think, will love him most?"

Simon sensed a trap, and moved cautiously.

"I imagine the one who owed him the most," said he, and wondered what was coming next.

"Right," said Jesus. "Simon, seest thou this woman?"

Simon nodded. He began to wish the conversation had not started.

"When I came into your house, you gave me no water for my feet," Jesus continued with that extraordinary frankness which cut straight to the heart of things. "But she has washed my feet with her tears and dried them with her hair. You gave me no kiss, but she has not ceased to kiss my feet. You poured none of your expensive oil on my head, but she had taken her precious ointment, which she could ill-afford, and anointed me."

Simon squirmed in his seat. It was not comfortable to be reminded before a crowd of his delinquencies as a host. He had invited this "interesting" ex-carpenter because it was quite the fad to invite him. But the whole atmosphere had been one of condescension—the unspoken intimation was, "Here's a good dinner; now go on and amuse us with your ideas." There had been none of the niceties; the rich are so well accustomed to being inconsiderate.

The dining-room was silent; every eye was turned upon the Teacher; the poor woman still knelt at his feet, embarrassed that her action should have caused so much comment, wondering of the incident was to end in a rebuke. Jesus did not look down at her; he was not yeyt through with Simon.

"She is like the debtor who owed the five hundred shillings," he said. "Her sins which are many are forgiven, for she loved much. To whom little is forgiven, the same loves little." And then with a glance of infinite tenderness:

"Thy sins are forgiven," he said to her simply. "Thy faith has saved thee; go in peace."

A double wedding for the Tally girls.

And there the likeness ceased. Florence married money and success. Mercedes married struggle and poverty.

Love matches, both of them.

Elton Smith slowly but surely reached a peak in his work that assured him a position of foremost importance in his profession.

Frank Conant was still trying to lift himself rung by rung.

Nothing but unforeseen calamity could happen to the Elton Smiths now. Frank still had his spurs to win.

But the zest of life—who found it?

THE Tally girls had a double wedding.

But that was about all that was identical about their marriage — the time and the place and the same clergyman who had said the Episcopal marriage ceremony over their parents twenty-six years before.

There were two years' difference between the Tally girls. Florence was twenty-five when she married Elton Smith, eleven years her senior and an arriving civil engineer. Elton was more than just an arriving engineer. The biggest plum of an assignment that the state had to offer him had fallen his lot the day before he proposed to Florence.

People spoke of the engagement as "a fine match."

Mercedes Tally was twenty-three when she shared double wedding with her sister. A slighter, frailer girl with some, but not all, of her sister's equipment of vitality.

There was much disparity of opinion between people as to the relative qualities of these girls. Some preferred the sturdier personality of Florence and her quality of frank outspokenness which made her both feared and loved in her circle. Others were out and out of the opinion that the quieter Mercedes was worth two of her more showy sister.

In a worldly sense, Mercedes made the less spectacular match of the two. As a matter of fact, Frank Conant was a junior partner in Elton Smith's office. Twenty-eight, a serious minded young fellow in horn-rimmed glasses, with a nervous habit of blinking the eyes behind them, he was by no means arrived when he married Mercedes Tally.

It was a love match, out and out. No doubt of that. But so was the Florence-Elton alliance for that matter.

It was two inordinately happy couples who finally took up residence in one of the town's choice residential sections. The Elton Smiths in a large double brick Georgian House on a boulevard. The Frank Conants in a story and a half bungalow on a pretty side street that bisected the boulevard.

There had always existed between the sisters an amity that was delightful. It was their parents' boast that cross words had never passed between these girls. That was virtually true. Florence and Mercedes enjoyed a compatability not always found between members of the same family. Their marriage if anything cemented this relationship.

Scarcely a day that the greater part of it was not spent in each other's company. The shadow of the disparity of their economic planes never threw its shadow across them.

Frank Conant was a modest salaried fellow in an office where Elton Smith was head and shoulders above him in position and earning capacity.

After five more years Elton Smith had slowly but surely reached a peak in his work that assured him a position of foremost importance in his profession.

Frank Conant was still trying to lift himself rung by rung.

It was, of course, inevitable that Florence should soak into her manner some of the smugness her position now afforded her. And, yet it was almost too subtle to diagnose. Because Florence had a large home and servants with whom she could leave the establishment, it was she who spent the greater part of her time over at Mercedes' bungalow, where household duties, incumbent upon the younger girl, made her not so foot loose. When they talked of the future, it was Florence who sat back with almost a purr in her manner while little lines came out around Mercedes' mouth and enclosed it in brackets.

Nothing much except unforeseen catastrophe could happen to the Eltons, now.

Frank still had his spurs to win.

The Elton Smiths were not ungrateful of this fact. When they were by themselves they frequently discussed it.

"It's wonderful, Florence, to feel that no matter what comes, nothing much can happen to us. Barring panic, earthquake, disaster of unforeseen nature, our nest is feathered. We don't have to bother. The gamble is out of our future."

It was rather a different song over at the Frank Conants. Frank was plainly restive. His brother-in-law treated him with a scrupulous consideration. Too scrupulous, Frank sometimes thought, as if for fear he might be accused of favoring a member of the family. But Frank was playing for big stakes. Frank wanted to branch off on his own. Frank wanted more than anything in the world to make it possible for him to obtain the kind of plum that Elton had struggled for and won.

That plum was no longer delectable to Elton now. He had gone further. He was too smug, too secure, to need to bother about any more plums. Elton's plums were largely repetitious now. As one of the acknowledged successes in his profession, the tension was out of the race for him. After another five years new honors meant new laurels but to a crown already green with them.

If Frank envied his brother-in-law his attainments he was fairly good humored about it.

"Hang it, Mercedes, if I could just get myself to where Elton is we'd do so much more with it than they do. Of course, they've got a fine home and all the things we're striving for, but—oh, I don't know—if I ever lay my hands on Elton's kind of success—just you watch us!"

It thrilled Mercedes to listen to Frank's dreams, ambitions, yearnings and hopes. It made each day a sort of dash ahead in the long race.

Frank's ambitions were like torches that he carried. The days were too short for him. The sleeping hours too long. Even after years it kept Mercedes tiptoe. There was excitement in just the telephone ringing or Frank's step running up the veranda steps in the evening.

Realization lay just around the corner. Frank's entry into various competitions was eagerly to be awaited. His submitted plans to this and that contest. His sealed bids.

Life was a race to the Frank Conants. They were both a little breathless with what lurked just around the corner for them.

If Mercedes' clothes were makeshift and sometimes dowdy beside her sister's, her eyes were like star points. If Frank meekly took his morning orders from his chief, Elton, he ripped open his morning mail with an alacrity that had long since sped from Elton's own fingers when he fiddled with his great batch of daily letters.

Florence sensed something of this so poignantly that one morning, observing her husband put aside his stack of correspondence unread and stab into his grapefruit, she said to him:

"Elton, something has gone."

"Not cook, again?"

"No, Elton, something even more important."

"Good Lord, what now? Can't be so very bad but what we are in a position to replace it. Nothing need worry us now."

"That's what gone, Elton. Our zest."

"Zest?"

"Yes, our zest or life."

"You mean. . . ."

"I mean that our fingernails are out of our palms. We are out of the race. We've arrived. We're satisfied. We've let our success make us smug."

"Yes, but we've struggled for it. We deserve——"

"Elton, we're in danger. We are in danger because we feel so safe. This is spiritual death. I want to feel lean, Elton, like Mercedes and Frank. In the race, full of the zest of the struggle. We've hitched our wagon to a chandelier, Elton, and now that we're there, we mistake it for a star."

"A fellow does need new interests, Florence, once he's arrived."

"We've been getting — getting — getting— now our new interests must be to give, give, give. We can't go on this way, Elton—just being satiated."

"You're right, Florence. Sometimes I envy Frank . . . he's like a race horse with the wind in his face and his nostrils pink and his ears laid back. I've broken through the tape."

"We've been in the race for getting, Elton, and we've won. Now let's get in the race for giving——"

"That's an idea, Florence," said Elton slowly, "there's room for the development of a great philanthropic idea down among the wretched tenements of the marshlands of this city——"

"Elton," cried Florence, "let's be the ones to start it!"

Facing one another across their breakfast table, something like the old zest began to square the shoulders of the Elton Smiths.

Adventures Abroad of Charlie Chaplin's $250-a-Week Girl Pal

While Lita Grey's Lawyers Were Probing Edna Purviance's Status on the Studio Payroll, the Beautiful Blonde Faced Death in France from Wolves.

One of the Pack of Trained Wolves Used By Monsieur Diament Berger in Producing Edna Purviance's New Motion Picture—Shown Here "Attacking" an Actor as Instructed by the Director.

Below: Chaplin and Edna in One of Their Old American Film Successes, Taken When She Won Popular Fame as His "Everlasting" Leading Woman.

WHEN Lita Grey, second girl-wife of Charlie Chaplin, brought suit for divorce and liberal financial settlement, recently, California investigators dug down into the ledgers of the famous film clown and began to scrutinize every item on Chaplin's studio pay roll.

"What's this?" they cried, as they came upon an entry indicating that Edna Purviance, for years Charlie's leading woman, was receiving $250 a week for her services as an actress. "Why, Edna hasn't actually worked for Charlie's company since the days of 'A Woman of Paris.' Why should SHE be entitled to all this regular 'jack?' And speaking of Edna, where is she nowadays, anyhow?"

It was really too bad, just at that moment, that the trans-Atlantic telephone wasn't hooked up with the south of France. For if it had been, and the investigators had tuned in on Mont Revard, near Lyons, they might have heard a fierce wolfish growl, and the sound of dull, blunt implements in savage action. THAT would have given them the answer to their question: "Where is Edna and what is she doing?"

Miss Purviance—whose right to a place on the Chaplin payroll will be indicated later—has for the past few months been on what they call in the army "detached service." Loaned by Mr. Chaplin to a Franco-British film concern, the dainty blonde of "A Woman of Paris," and a score of other Chaplin successes, has been working hard professionally in an elaborate and costly French photoplay, "The Indiscretion of the Prince."

(It should, perhaps, be explained for the sake of the layman that such a procedure is far from uncommon. Dorothy Gish, Betty Blythe, Mae Marsh and other American photoplay queens frequently make pictures in Great Britain, Italy or Germany for the sake of travel and new experiences.)

Monsieur Diament Berger, one of France's premier producers, made arrangements for Miss Purviance to appear in "The Indiscretion of the Prince." It was a romantic scenario based on a popular star play with a Greustark background and calling for a spectacular feminine star. Accordingly, Miss Purviance disappeared from her customary American haunts just about the time—this was pure coincidence—that the Chaplin disagreement exploded in a shower of legal sparks.

It might as well be explained at this point that Edna's status on the Chaplin payroll was not in the least complex or mysterious. It is a custom among the more celebrated motion picture directors, like Chaplin, to maintain on their books certain actors and actresses who are likely to prove useful to them in contemplated productions. Scripts, especially farcical and comic ones, are subject to change at any moment. Fresh "gags," new "business" may be injected during the actual "shooting" of the piece, and these impromptu changes affect individuals in the cast by a process of either elimination or addition. Edna Purviance having been thus elimininated because there was no suitable part for her in the new Chaplin release, she went abroad. Meeting Monsieur Berger in Paris she was handed a copy of the script. But when she got to a certain juncture in the narrative, she paused, ruffled the leaves irresolutely, frowned, and looked questioningly at the affable Berger.

"Are you people over here expert with animals?" she asked him. "I see that one sequence in the scenario calls for a hot pursuit of the heroine by ferocious wolves over a snowy mountain pass. Of course, it's a thrilling idea, and, personally, I'm all for it. But —well, are you sure of your wolves?"

Monsieur Berger closed his eyes in artistic ecstasy, raised finger and thumb to his pursed lips, blew a sugary kiss in the direction of the south of France, and replied, somewhat florally, as follows:

"Ah, chere Mam'selle, is it that you do not comprehend how experienced, how pratique, we have become in that dear France since we learned American methods du cinema? In the old, bad days, we would have dressed collie dogs up in skins and pretended that they were the so-wild beasts of the forest. But now—

"Vraiement, if I told you that in a stockade near Mont Revard there are packs of large, warm wolves the most amiable and yet, at the master's bidding, the most for-r-r-midable; tiens, would you believe me? You shall, however, see for yourself."

The animals to which Monsieur Berger referred, really did exist. Furthermore, they were creatures of tact, talent, past usage and familiarity with picture methods. They had been employed, at the cost of a lavish outlay of soup bones and dog biscuit, in a film called "The Miracle of the Wolves," and had given eminent satisfaction.

Miss Purviance was charmed. She had "worked with" cats and puppies and mice and parrots in American films, and had found them much more biddable and tranquil than most actresses. She thought fondly of the cunning dog in Charlie's "A Dog's Life," and her heart was inspired with a desire to meet a few wolves socially so that she could boast of her French experiences when she got back to the States.

"It'll be just swell," she enunciated. "I wouldn't miss the chance for a million fr—I mean dollars!"

But Monsieur Berger was alarmed and downcast by such a decision. "Mais, Mam'selle Poorvi-hance," he ejaculated in horror and dismay. "Zat would nevaire do. It was not the intention, please believe, that you should disarray yourself by such a process. No, no. The wolves are well-meaning, but not reliable. Suppose one of them gets annoyed during a scene and you find your ankle between his jaws. No, we will hire what you call a double for the dangerous sequence. Then we will 'shoot' you for the close-ups, et cetera."

The director did not know the American fighting spirit as manifested in plucky leading women for the movies. Miss Purviance refused to budge an inch from her stand. Bites or no bites, she was going to have wolves or else! Her request seemed to take on the tone of a demand. The suave Frenchman was forced into a corner. He could not say her nay.

Pass the little weeks. The company had departed for Lyons, which was to be their headquarters during the "shooting" of the picture. The wolves had been de-stockaded. Red tongue, dripping jaw, padding paw and eyeball wildly rolling—they didn't scare Edna Purviance. She got into the sleigh-chariot which was to bear her over the frosty mountain top. Miss Purviance clicked to the nervous nags, who sniffed the wolf-laden air with uneasiness.

Then—"Attention, Messieurs et Mesdames!" shouted the director through his icicle-dripping megaphone. Like a cannon shot, the horses bounded up the white incline. Like a rattle of hail, after them sped the wolves. "That too-daring Americaine miss," siged Monsieur Berger. "I hope no disaster will fall upon her so fair head."

He was wrong. As the wolves pressed faster about the sleigh, the twitching horses took fright and, as the vehicle gathered speed, began to bolt.

Miss Purviance, a little pale at the lips, steadied herself by tightening the reins. Then, crash! the sleigh overturned, casting the plucky girl into a snow bank, where she was instantly the centre of a struggling, snarling mass of furry bodies. One of the wolves began to "worry" her. Ice cut her wrists. Snow filled her eyes. And all the while the trained wolves yapped and retreated and came back to inspect this curious human trophy thrown at them from above, till rescuers arrived.

One of Monsieur Berger's assistant cameramen gives the following account of Miss Purviance's mishap and subsequent rescue:

"I can't imagine what went wrong with the wolves that day. We had used them before in pictures and they had always seemed such reliable, trustworthy beasts, well-trained and not given to outbreaks of savagery.

"When we 'shot' 'The Miracle of the Wolves,' however, I noticed one of the pack who seemed to be a little restive—not openly defiant, but low-spirited and rather surly. Their owner never touches them up with a whip; you can't make animals work for you well if you are cruel to them. And wolves are pretty much like dogs; sensitive and quick to understand that you are displeased with them even if it's only an intonation.

"I was so busy at the time Miss Purviance was thrown out of the sleigh that I didn't realize at first what had happened to her. I thought maybe it was a well-tricked bit of 'business' that Monsieur Berger had invented on the spur of the moment, and marveled how well she was doing it. For we know what chances American actresses will take in front of the camera. No French woman would go to the lengths that they do, and I knew Miss Purviance in the old days had always scorned the idea of a double."

Edna's injuries, at first reported grave, proved to be not of major consequence. She is recovering nicely from her wild little outing. But if anyone thinks she isn't earning $250 a week as one of Charlie Chaplin's "guest artistes" rented out to Continental producers, just let him ask the lady in question, whose fingers still bear the bruises that ensued from her refusal to "let any French extra double for ME!"

Miss Purviance was given first-aid treatment on the spot and later removed to her hotel, where French physicians said she was suffering from cold and shock.

Why Sinus Disease Is Easy to Get and Hard to Cure

Germs Invade Bone Cavities in Skull and Set Up Many Dangerous Infections.

Above: Demonstrating the Method of Examining a Patient for Sinus Disease. Left: Antiseptic Air Filter for the Nose to Prevent Breathing Disease Germs, Dust and Other Impurities. Right: Beware of the Sneezer Whose Spasms Spray the Surrounding Atmosphere with Germs That May Spread Sinus Disease.

Cross-Section Anatomical Drawing Showing the Location of the Frontal Sinus Just Above Each Eye and the Sphenoidal Sinus Back of the Nose, Danger Spots That Become the Harbor of Influenza Germs.

WHAT is sinus disease, and from where does it come? Why is it so easy to get and so hard to cure, if neglected? Not so many years ago sinus disease was practically unknown. Some explain its prevalence today as an aftermath of the World War. Whatever the explanation medical scientists may find for it, there are but few who have not had sufficient experience with this malady to realize the actuality of the condition and to ponder over its serious and extensive spread today. While much is yet to be learned concerning this disease of the bony sinuses of the head, physicians have so rapidly advanced their knowledge of this malady that general interest in this puzzling disease may be satisfied by the following clear and accurate description which Mahlon Ashford presents in Hygeia:

The sinuses are bone cavities in the skull and are lined with a living membrane, delicate in structure and ultimately continuous with the mucous membrane of the nose and throat. In one way or another the special senses are in intimate relationship with the head sinuses, and for this reason one or more of these senses is frequently affected when sinusitis develops.

Five pairs of sinuses will be discussed here. Above each eyebrow there is a more or less prominent ridge, termed the superciliary ridge. This is the protuberance that is popularly supposed to indicate mental development, but it is in reality the outer wall of the frontal sinuses, a cavity filled not with gray matter but with air. These frontal cavities are not present in the newly-born and develop like the brain through the years of maturity. A thin wall of bone separates them from the brain behind and the eye below. Through a minute opening in the floor of each is a canal into the nose.

It is difficult to picture the location of the ethmoidal sinuses, or labyrinths. Each lies in a space between the eye socket and the forward attic of the nasal passage. The ethmoidal sinuses have a cellular structure much like a honeycomb, each cell being separated from its neighbors and from surrounding structures by the thinnest imaginable wall. This ethmoidal labyrinth communicates with the frontal, sphenoidal and maxillary sinuses and with the nasal cavity. Communication with these cavities, proximity to the brain and eye, delicate lining membrane and cellular structure unite to render the ethmoidal sinuses peculiarly difficult to wrest from bacterial occupancy once infection is established.

Just back of each nasal attic lies a sphenoidal sinus. This sinus has an opening into the nasal cavity so situated that complete drainage can be effected only when the owner assumes the usual posture of a quadruped. Its intimate relationship with the brain, the optic nerve, vital vessels and other structures and its direct communication with the nasal cavity and other sinuses render it, like its next-door neighbor, the ethmoidal, a frequent abode of serious infectious mischief. The three pairs of sinuses described may be visualized as a honeycomb structure extending backward between the eye and the nasal attic, and separated from the brain by the shelf of bone on which that organ rests.

On either side of the nose and squarely below the eye is the antrum, or maxillary sinus. It also has an opening into the nasal cavity and is separated from the mouth by its floor, which helps to form the hard palate, or roof of the mouth. Thus the roots of the forward grinders and the canine, or eye teeth are directly below the sinus. When these teeth are abscessed they may discharge into it or infect it.

The remaining sinus is the mastoid, which is located just behind the ear and is separated from the brain above and from the delicate organ of hearing in front by a thin wall of bone. Inflammation of the middle ear often involves this sinus. Such infections may proceed from the throat to the ear by a channel called the eustachian tube.

It is manifest then that all of these sinuses have in common the following features: Proximity to vital structures of the brain and special other; delicate lining membranes; and minute openings for drainage, which are readily shut off when the membrane becomes inflamed. In short, they have everything necessary to start and continue serious trouble, once the bacterial invader penetrates their defenses.

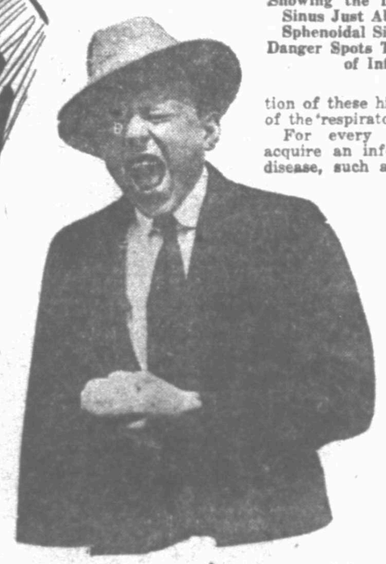

Nearly all sinus trouble originates with an infection, that is to say a bacterial invasion of the lining membrane. This infection is usually secondary to successful bacterial attack elsewhere, as for example of the nasal passages, the tonsils or teeth. The infection may travel to the sinus along the membrane from the nasal or throat passages, or through the lymphatic or blood vessels, but this is immaterial to the patient.

The first thing that happens is that the lining becomes congested or swollen, shutting off the natural outlet for discharge. Then, if the invader gets the upper hand, dead and dying body cells pile up, forming that ugly white matter called pus. Usually by this time the person has definite and distressing symptoms, and he is fortunate if he consults a competent specialist, who will locate the trouble and evacuate the septic purulent matter from the sinus.

If the condition is untreated, the body cells may gain the mastery, the swelling of the membrane may subside and the mass of dead cells and bacteria may be discharged. If the cells of the lining membrane are defeated in this struggle, an abscess may form or the infection may spread to other sinuses or organs, may induce septicemia, or may gradually subside into a chronic localized process.

Changes in the habits and living conditions of the nation are responsible for the rise of sinus disease. Among these is the trend from rural life to urban life, so that the latest census reports reveal the fact that the majority of the people of the United States now live in cities. In these cities mighty hosts are massed together in the complicated association of modern life. Millions are crowded each hour in public conveyances, millions herded each night in motion pictures and other amusement halls, millions fed daily in public eating places. A generation ago this massing of human beings was scarcely 1 per cent of present-day conditions. Is there any wonder then that there is widespread dissemination of these highly infectious diseases of the respiratory type?

For every hundred persons who acquire an infectious respiratory disease, such as influenza, a fraction will have a complicating sinus infection. In fact, the opinion is growing that the major portion of persons who have one of these influenza or grippe colds also have at the same time some inflammation of one or more of the head sinuses. Fortunately, however, the patient usually overcomes this local sinus infection, as he does the constitutional disease. Those who do not overcome it join the vast army of sinus victims.

From the point of view of preventive medicine the sinus diseases belong to the infectious respiratory group, of which the most infamous member is influenza. Sinusitis is usually the resultant, primarily or ultimately, of one of this respiratory group of infections. Sometimes sinusitis develops immediately following one of these infections sometimes long afterward from a residual focus that may have established itself in the crypts of the tonsils, in the adenoid tissues of the respiratory tract or in the infected root of a tooth.

Manifestly, then, a person should take every reasonable precaution to avoid constitutional infections of this type. Should one be unsuccessful in this effort, he should take prompt actions against such infections.

Should efforts to escape a prevalent respiratory infection fail, what then may a person do to avoid the hateful brood of consequences that such diseases so often engender? In the first place, it is the part of wisdom to regard and te treat these infections as serious affairs from the start. Without question the majority of pneumonias, sinus infections and many other alarming involvements that develop as a result of exposure might be avoided were the person put to bed in suitable surroundings and with proper care at the onset of infection.

After the period, when the patient is under his physician's care, comes the stage of convalescence, when the patient is restive to resume his usual pursuits, although still below par. No doubt he still harbors in the mucous membrane of the upper respiratory passages, in the crypts of the tonsils or in one or more of the sinuses, virile germs of the infection. Evidently he is still in that state of physical and mental depression that lowers his general resistance and invites local operations by the still present enemy.

Therefore the convalescent should take great care of himself, avoiding fatigue, anxiety, cold and similar risks. Exposure to cold winds is a fairly certain way to change a diminishing and recessive inflammation of the sinuses into an active and progressive attack. This is an excellent period to remain under the doctor's guidance and to assume toward life the nonchalant attitude attributed to the mollusk.

Suicides Due to Imitation

IMITATION and suggestion may be offered in partial explanation of the increase of suicide, according to the London Lancet, but they can only operate in the presence of other determinants. These determinants, so far as they are known, constitute the actual problem, and their investigation is imperfect, for obvious reasons. Friends and relatives often testify at an inquest that the deceased had no known reason for his act, and the frequent invocation of "nervous breakdown" hides under an evasive nomenclature the ignorance of causes. The stereotyped verdict of "Suicide while temporarily insane" is, of course, a relic of the times when a verdict of suicide involved both denial of religious burial and interference with the rights of successors.

This writer gives as an example the increase of suicide by inhaling coal-gas as an independent phenomenon doubtless affected by the publication of detailed reports of the methods used in this particular case.

"But even when the influence of this knowledge is admitted," declares this authority, "we cannot be sure that it affects more than the manner of the suicide, for it may be argued that if the one method were not available some other would be used. This is true to some extent, for with the increase of suicides by poison, including coal-gas, there has been a diminution of those in which clumsier means of voluntarily ending life were employed; if it were a general truth it would stultify any precautions by which we seek to impede the obtaining of poisons lest they should be used for suicidal purposes. Yet, though we can only speculate how far opportunity is responsible for suicide and how far we can expect to influence its incidence by precautionary measures, there can be no hesitation in condemning the publication of descriptions of easily achieving the end.

"There are sources of poison accessible to practically everyone—in gardens and hedgerows, for example—and a sensational case of the use of some vegetable poison, reported with full details, might start a new fashion by providing opportunities that are now lacking through ignorance. It may be fortunate that the story of the death of Socrates has no news value."

Telescopic Goggles for the Aviator

SPECIALLY designed for use by air pilots is a goggle that gives the wearer telescopic vision when he wishes. It has been newly patented by Byron Q. Jones, of Washington, D. C. Strapped upon the user's head is a compact telescope, which, when thus adjusted, is directly in front of his forehead, its eyepieces being in his line of sight when he looks slightly upward.

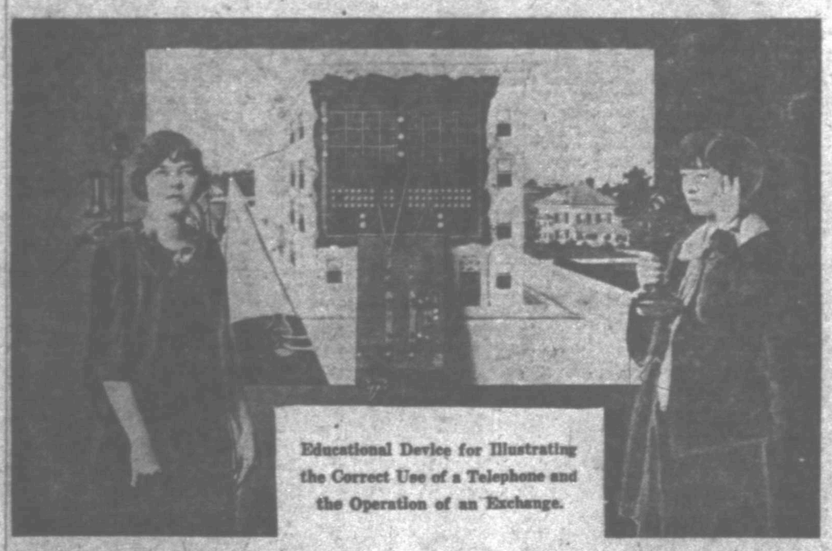

The telescope has an eyepiece for each eye, and is so constructed that light rays entering through lenses in its upper part are reflected by little mirrors in such wise as to pass through the eyepieces to the eyes of the user.

Telescopic Lenses, One for Each Eye, Are Held in Position by a Frame Placed Above the Ordinary Lens of the Goggles.

Fastened to the lower part of the telescope is a frame that holds a pair of plain glass lenses, through which the user under ordinary circumstances directs his gaze. When he wishes to get a more distinct view of a distant object, a slight elevation of his eyes enables him to examine it through the telescope.

To TEACH Correct USE of Telephone

Educational Device for Illustrating the Correct Use of a Telephone and the Operation of an Exchange.

ONE of the most surprising things of today is that thousands of persons do not know the correct way to use a telephone. The contrivance shown in the accompanying photograph is used to illustrate the method of operating a telephone system. Its object is educational, and on suitable occasions it is exhibited in schools and in public halls, with a demonstrator to explain it.

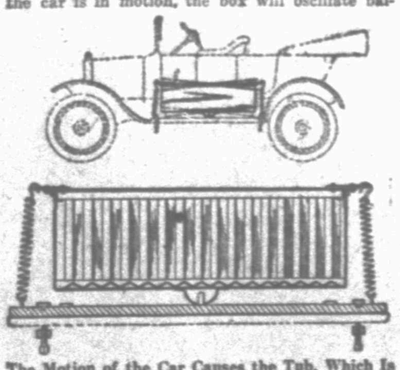

In the middle of the picture is a telephone switchboard, meant to represent one unit of a large number in an exchange. The girl at the right is supposed to be a subscriber, using a 'phone in the ordinary way. She is calling up "Central."

Central is represented by the girl on the left. She says, "What number, please?" The girl on the right gives a number and the one on the left responds by "plugging in" to make the required connection. Thus the whole process may be easily understood by the onlooker

How Tourists Can Wash Their Clothes as They Motor

A CONTRIVANCE that will do the tourist's washing while he travels, is the invention of Joseph L. Grant, of Chicago. It is an oblong metal box, carried on the running-board of the car. A metal plate, which serves as a base, is clamped to the running-board, and upon it the box is balanced, resting upon a crosswise semi-cylinder which is fastened to the bottom of the box. The semi-cylinder has openings at its ends to receive pins carried by the base, so that the box has a tendency to oscillate back and forth, being restrained in this movement only by springs, as the drawing shows.

The springs, at the two ends of the box, connect the hooks on the cover of the latter, to eyes in the bas plate. Their action is such that, when the car is in motion, the box will oscillate balance-wise on the semi-cylinder, while at the same time they hold the cover of the box securely.

The Motion of the Car Causes the Tub, Which Is Held in Position on the Running Board by a Spring at Each End, to Swing Back and Forth and Wash the Clothes.

Thus, when the box is filled with clothes and soapy water, the motion of the car will cause the water, together with the clothes to rush back and forth from end to end of the box, by this means accomplishing the requisite cleansing. To help the process, the box is lined with corrugated metal sheets. Beneath its ends are cushioned stops to reduce jar.

The Cause of Lisping

TO TALK, man uses his lips, tongue, teeth, nose, throat and palate, playing on them in varying positions with the air breathed out from the lungs. So that there is really a good deal to go wrong with the voice machinery.

Instructors in voice culture say that lisping, which is really making the sound for "th" instead of for "s," can be caused in a variety of ways. A palate, for instance, may be a fraction of an inch too high, or may be split, a tongue not quite normal, or other parts of the voice machinery slightly out of gear. But as surgery is year by year getting better and less dreaded, most of these trifling malformations are easily cured, which explains why the lisp is less common today than formerly.

Paper Made from Clay

CHINA-CLAY is the fine white clay used in making the porcelain articles. Its great virtue lies in the fact that it is of a pure, or nearly pure, white, both before and after being fired, making it of great value in the manufacture of porcelain. It is also used to a great extent by papermakers, and in less quantity in the making of some chemical products.

Technically, china-clay is known as kaolin, derived from Kaoling—"high ridge"—the name of the hills in China where the clay was first discovered and used in the manufacture of porcelain. It was introduced to Europe by missionaries and in the middle of the eighteenth century the clay was discovered in England. Kaolin is also found in France and America.

Real Truths About Our Defamed First President

New Unbiased Facts of Washington's Private Life.

Intimate Painting of Washington at Home, One of the Few Picturing Him in Other Than a Heroic Pose. A Quiet Evening in the Music or Card Room Was a Great Joy to Him, Says Mr. Bache.

FOR the past year, the history-reading public has been astonished, shocked, amused and disturbed by a series of attacks on and defenses of the private character of George Washington.

Rupert Hughes, novelist, critic, musician and motion picture director, in January, 1926, let loose a thunderstorm of criticism when he described "The Father of His Country" as a card-player, strenuous dancer and whiskey-drinker, addicted to profanity and "not a religious man."

Albion Parris, ex-president of the Sons of the American Revolution, was the first to resent Mr. Hughes's remarks. Albert Bushnell Hart, Harvard history teacher, then leaped into the breach with a scathing denunciation of the Hughes pen-portrait of Washington. Professor Hart also attacked the viewpoint of W. E. Woodward, another critical biographer of Washington.

Through charge and counter-charge the issue became clouded. Today is printed on this page what is, perhaps, the first unbiased account of the social and spiritual life of the President by a man who has devoted many years to its study. Mr. Bache has no ax to grind; he merely sets forth what long research has revealed to him.

By RENE BACHE.

GEORGE WASHINGTON has come to be, in a way, a mythological character. Popularly, he is regarded not as a man, but as a being superhuman, like the storied heroes of antiquity.

If he could "come alive again" today, he would be astonished to find himself embalmed in tradition as a sort of demigod.

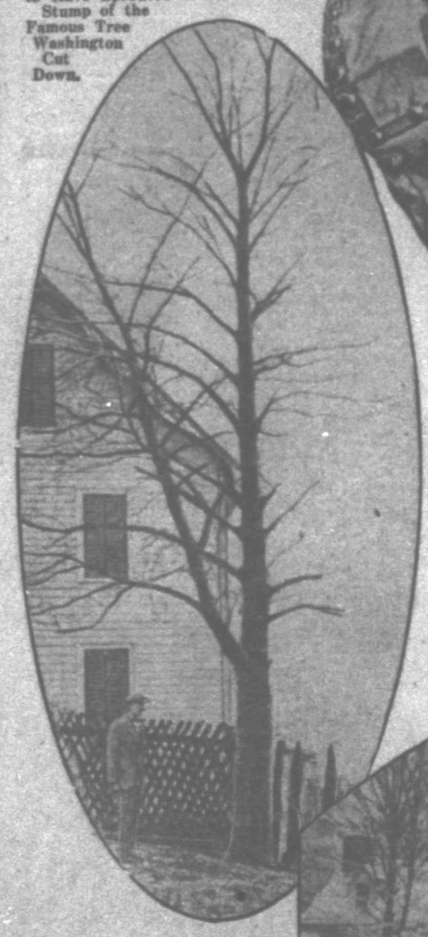

No man was ever more vilified during his lifetime. His enemies, in their search for epithets to hurl at him, almost exhausted the vocabulary of vituperation. Some of them referred to him as "The Crocodile." Yet, today, to speak of him as if he were just a human being, with normal impulses and perhaps some faults, is accounted almost blasphemous.

He was, as everyone knows, a man of singular purity and nobility of character. In Virginia he lived as contemporary gentle people did. They were cavaliers, whose ideas and ideals differed radically from those of the grim Puritans. Nor is it to be inferred that they were to be less admired, the important difference being that they did not think it necessary to make a hell of this world in order to enjoy Paradise in the next.

It had not then been discovered that it was wicked to drink a glass of beer. That beverage was regularly brewed at Mount Vernon, and in one of Washington's memorandum books, now preserved in the New York Public Library, there is a recipe for "small beer," written by him in 1757. In a letter to his nephew, William Augustine Washington, dated February 27, 1798 (the year before his death), he gives a recipe for making whiskey and tells what cereals he favors. It is not to be supposed from this that Washington was a tippler. On the contrary, he intensely disapproved of the use of alcoholic stimulants, save in utmost moderation. In his own house at Mount Vernon there was always plenty to drink, both of wine and spirits. But had it been otherwise, the hospitality of the master would have been impugned. In those days, alas! there was a deal of hard drinking among gentlemen.

How times have changed! Moralities have become immoralities, and vice versa.

Take horse-racing, for example. Today more than a suspicion of wickedness attaches to it. Yet Washington subscribed generously to horse-racing enterprises, and ran his own horses for money prizes. That he made bets on the races may be taken for granted. He often spoke of gambling as an abomination, but his definition of the term was risking more money than a person could afford to lose without discomfort or annoyance.

A Puritan would have called him a gambler, because he was extremely fond of betting small sums in various ways. He liked to take chances in the lotteries and raffles which were so fashionable in those days, and his personal accounts make mention of sums as high as fifty pounds sterling invested in lottery tickets. His favorite evening amusement was with what the Puritans called the "devil's picture books." While his wife knitted, he would play cards for small stakes, and each night, before he went to bed, he put down in his diary the amount he won or lost. One entry in the diary says, "At home all day over cards." Doubtless it was a stormy day, preventing him from going out. The record shows that he was usually unlucky. The largest winning he mentions is three pounds. On one occasion he lost nine pounds, fourteen shillings, and ninepence, it is recorded.

He was very fond of dancing. During the Revolution he frequently danced at the quarters of his generals, and on one accasion he and Mrs. Green "danced upward of three hours without sitting down." General Knox wrote that at one of these affairs His Excellency "danced all night." With his wife, he regularly attended the subscription balls held at the City Tavern in Alexandria, which were assemblies of all the aristocracy of the Northern Neck of Virginia. The dancing of those days, however, was stately and formal, the participants bowing and posturing in graceful evolutions. There was no embracing or other physical contact, save that of the hands.

A while ago, there was published a statement that Washington never prayed. This is pure nonsense, and its sole basis seems to be the fact that he never knelt in church. He was a very devout man, and his letters contain frequent references to a ruling Providence. Unitarians claim that he was a Deist, and virtually of their faith. Certainly he was not what would be called orthodox in his belief, and he was not a communicant.

Where the fair sex was concerned, Washington was extremely impressionable, at least in his younger days. Notwithstanding that weakness, if such it can be called, which he evinced before his marriage in a series of unsuccessful love affairs, no scandal of any sort was ever attached to his name. Indeed, when a youth, as in after life, he seems to have been exceptionally virtuous and regardful of the proprieties. No Puritan was ever more stern in disapproval of irregularities of conduct. That by no means implies that as a boy he at all resembled the wretched little prig described by the imaginative Parson Weems, author and inventor of the famous cherry-tree story, who makes him out to have been a super-Rollo, altogether abnormal.

There is, as a matter of fact, very little known about his early life, up to his nineteenth year. Weems was able to pick up only a few scraps of information, filling out the story with fiction of a kind to suit the literary market of the period, in which a boy book-hero was required to be an unwholesome exemplar of all the moralities.

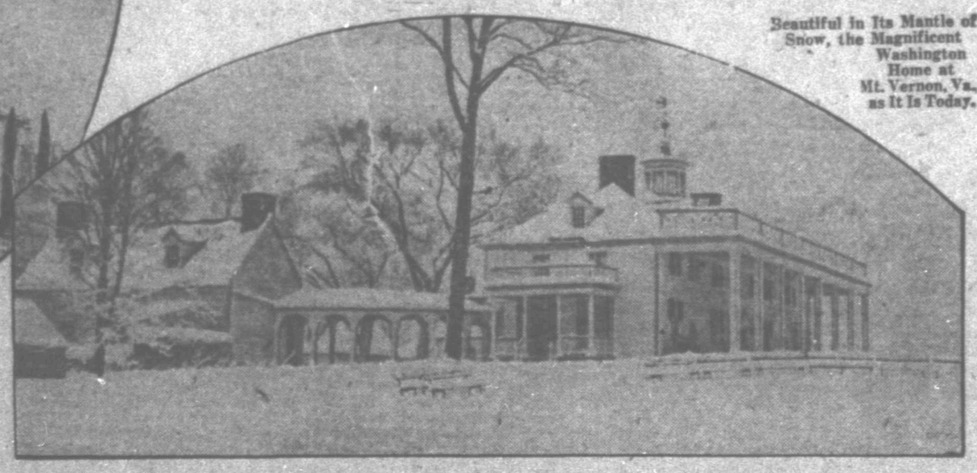

According to Weems, if little George found two of his playmates engaged in fisticuffs, he would try to restrain them, give them a lecture on the wrongness of fighting, call their attention to the sorrows their parents would feel on seeing them come home with bloody noses, and then, if they refused to desist, go and tell the teacher. One can imagine the wrath and indignation of Washington if such a story about himself had been printed in his lifetime, and he had read it.

The truth is that Washington had a high and even violent temper, which he strove to keep under close control. In all likelihood during his boyhood he had many a fight, although there are no authentic records of any.

Speaking of Washington's careful control of his temper, Thomas Jefferson wrote: "If, however, it broke its bounds, he was tremendous in his wrath." That on rare occasions he did swear is beyond a doubt. Why not? He had at times plenty of provocation, and he was a man, not a milk-and-water saint. Neither was he a demigod, though patriotic folks nowadays would make him out to have been a mixture of the two.

But why not let us be satisfied to accept him as he really was, even though elevated (as he has a right to be) on a pedestal for patriotic worship? Drop the mythology. Forget the blameless and priggish boy described by Parson Weems, and the man equally faultless and uninteresting of schoolbook history. How much better to contemplate him as he was, "the noblest figure that ever stood in the forefront of a nation's life."

MAGIC — The Weekly Puzzle Page — RIDDLES

Krazy Kut for Kiddies

WHEN these black pieces have been cut out and put together correctly they will form a silhouette drawing of a man playing a popular game. The figure is not composed of the black pieces themselves, but appears in white.

The Racing Toothpicks

AFTER placing twenty toothpicks on a table tell your friend that you are going to take away either one, two or three of them. Permit your opponent to do the same. This process is to be continued until all the toothpicks have been taken up.

The key numbers for the race are three, seven, eleven, fifteen and nineteen. You are sure to win if you start with three, but if your opponent begins with that number you can still win, if he does not know the key numbers. If he starts with three you should do likewise, making six. Should your opponent take three more, making nine, you will then take only two, making eleven. From this point on, watch your opponent and take enough toothpicks to make his number up to four so that fifteen falls to you and then nineteen, thus compelling your friend to pick up the last toothpick and lose the race.

The "Robbers and Policemen" Card Trick

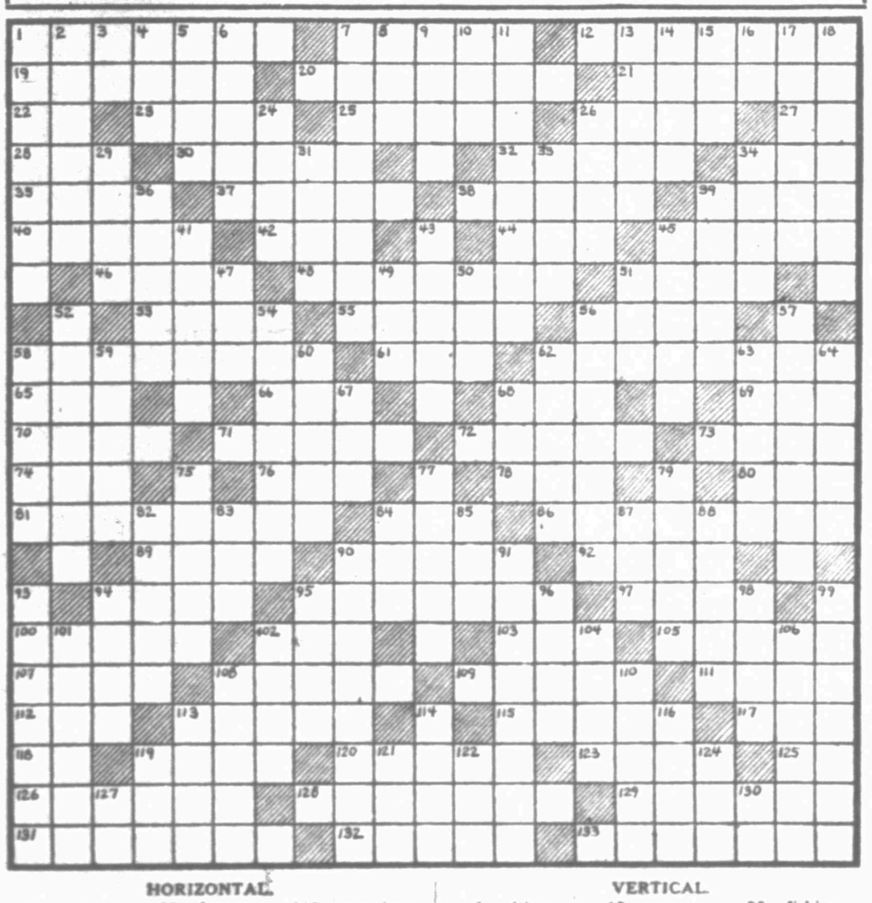

A CARD trick called "Robbers and Policemen" is mystifying, but simple to perform. You proceed as follows: Select four kings from a deck of ordinary playing cards and conceal at the back of one king three other cards. Next hold the four kings in one hand so that your audience may distinctly see the face of each. Arrange these cards in such a way that when placed upon the pack, one king will remain on top and be followed by three ordinary cards, while following these will come the three kings. Display the cards and say:

"Here are four policemen guarding a house containing many valuables. This is their plan." Now place the cards in your hand upon the top of the deck and continue:

"One remained in the garden (now discard the top card, which is, of course, a king, face upwards. "One stayed in the dining room" (taking, as you speak, the next top card, which is an ordinary one, and carelessly placing it in the middle of the deck). "Another entered the drawing room (now slip another top card into the deck) while a third went into a bedroom." Here you place the third ordinary card in the pack. Now continue:

"Nothing happened until the policemen in the garden seeing a figure stealing away, called the three policemen." As you say this produce the three kings from the top of the deck where they have been all the time.

Answer to Last Week's Cross-Word Puzzle

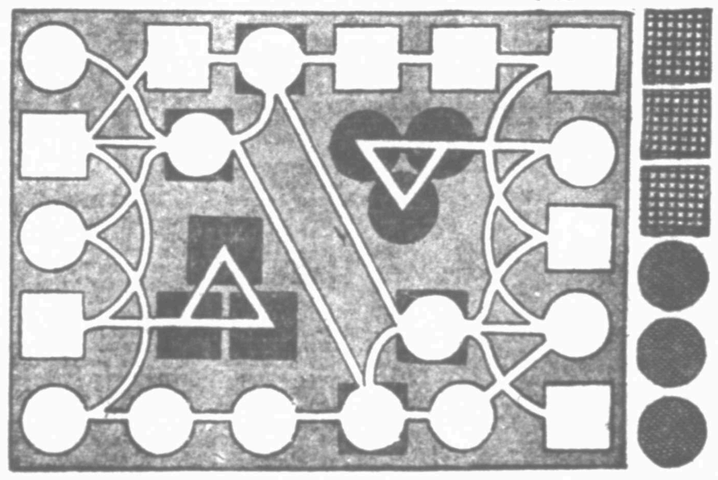

Just What Is Wrong With This Picture?

THE arrival of the ten o'clock "local" is a daily morning event of great importance to the people of Reubenville. In drawing this scene the artist has made twenty-four mistakes. For example, the legs are missing from the rooster. Can you find the remaining twenty-three errors?

The Game of Circles and Squares

CUT out and paste this drawing on cardboard and when dry cut out each of the six "men" represented by the three circles and three squares for the two players. Place the circles in the round spaces at the left of the diagram and the squares in the four-sided spaces at the right. The spaces are connected by roads.

Each player makes one move in turn, going along a road to the next round or square space, if it is vacant. If it is occupied, four of the spaces (black squares with white circle centers) may be used by both players. The full black circles and squares are the respective homes of the two players. The first player who gets his three men home wins the game.

Buried Names

BY joining parts of certain words in each of the following sentences you can spell the names of boys:

1. With great joy, Cedric accepted the gift from his employer as an expression of appreciation of his services.
2. The clerk could not remember whether a woman or man left the parcel on the counter.
3. The guards were determined to capture the escaped convict or give up their jobs.
4. The witness testified that he saw the man slip at Rickert's corner.

ONE word taken from each of the five following sentences, will form a familiar proverb:

1. Love me little, love me long.
2. There are many strange things that challenge belief.
3. Success depends upon your ability to please.
4. "Man wants but little here below."
5. Great minds run in the same channel, they say.

A Puzzle Problem

A COG wheel having ten teeth is in mesh with a wheel that has just four times as many cogs. The smaller wheel, which is directly above the larger one, has one of its cogs marked. When the former has completely revolved around the latter, how many times will the marked cog make a complete revolution?

Selling the "Soul Kiss" to the Chinese Flapper

Astonishing Inroads of American Made Movies Upon Century-Old Customs and Why "Petting" May Become a Problem There.

Miss E. E. Dick, Chinese Screen Beauty, Who Believes in the American Way of Movie Love-Making and Who Defends Petting for Kiss-Hungry Young China.

THEN AND NOW.
"In the wake of American movies have come many Western customs, chief among which is the American 'soul kiss.' And Chinese flappers are now discarding the age-old love ko-tow for the fervent salutations they have learned from the films."

TO kiss or not to kiss, that is now the question in China. And it is American movies that are responsible for that hot and bothered state pervading the Celestial Empire.

For, strange as it may seem, the kissing problem, which has been quite satisfactorily settled for the last 2,000 years in the West, has never before been even raised in China. Until the invasion of American movies, such a thing as a kiss was practically unknown, a gesture too revolting to be even considered.

But now so well have the flappers and vamps of screendom popularized their stuff that China is beginning to wake up and take an interest in petting. No longer are the American films censored in the matter of passionate closeups. In fact, Miss Mamie Lee, outstanding Chinese film star, has at last completed a Chinese-made movie in which the "soul kiss" has not been left to the imagination.

It is in this Chinese-made movie, whose title translated means "Two Women in One House," that has served to crystallize public opinion in regard to the kiss in China, and divided the country nearly as conclusively as the latest revolution. It has lined up the arguments for the kiss pro and con, as logically as any reform wave in America has ever done. And the problem of petting may soon become as vexatious a one for China as it is for America, with reformers warring on "flaming youth" and trying to legislate the casual kiss back to its pre-historic position.

Scientists say that the kiss really originated in the early days of Rome, some 2,000 years ago. In those days wine was offered as a sacrifice to the gods, but it was improper for any of the vestal virgins or matrons of the time to sneak a sip on the side.

To ascertain where the guilt lay when some of the wine was missing it became the custom for men to smell their kinswomen's breath. And one thing leads to another so surely that before they were well aware of the fact the Romans had stumbled on one of the world's best known inventions.

With the spread of Roman civilization the kiss spread too becoming one of the most popular features of Roman conquest. In later times it became so common in England that a visitor entering a house made a point of kissing the father, the mother, the sons and daughters, the dog and cat, and anything else that was loose. In France at one time every dance ended with a kiss, while Louis XII was supposed to have kissed every woman in Normandy.

But there still remained some parts of the world that did not yield to osculation. Russia did not become converted until about 1850. To this day a kiss is unknown in Africa, where rubbing noses has always been considered as a satisfactory substitute. Kissing is also unknown to the Eskimos, perhaps because of the danger of a permanent freeze.

The Far East, China and Japan particularly, remained singularly lacking in inventive genius in this regard. They had heard of the kiss, but long centuries of tradition had given it the reputation of being the most disgusting form of gesture, a symbol of voluptuousness too extreme to be tolerated in any kind of public place. And the only gesture that the placid Oriental could find to substitute was a chaste little pat on the back, or a form of kowtowing that consisted chiefly in each person clasping his or her own hands and bobbing up and down.

Only a few years ago when an exhibition of several masterpieces of French art was opened at the National Fine Arts Gallery at Bueno Park, Tokio, there was a tremendous sensation. Among the pieces lent by the French Government was Rodin's famous work, "The Kiss." It represented an idealized young man and woman in a state of nature rushing together for a long, passionate kiss. But it awoke no ideals in the minds of the Japanese police.

They promptly surrounded the statue by bamboo screens and set a police guard. "Springtime," another Rodin group, was similarly served, as were Raphael Collin's paintings, "Sleep" and "Youth and Nonchalance." The Prefect of Police further stated: "Kissing is a custom entirely foreign to the East, and it is most undesirable that it should be introduced. It is unclean, immodest, indecorous, ungraceful, and likely to cause the spread of disease."

When American-made movies first started their invasion of the Far East with their stop-watch kisses and their passionate vampire scenes, the distributors found that the kick had to be taken out of the picture if they were to be shown successfully. Japan instituted a stringent film censorship, and for the most part the film companies themselves clipped the kisses from the films being shown in China.

But gradually, according to the export managers of several of the larger companies, intimate scenes slipped by their own censors and appeared before the Chinese. These, at first indignant, gradually became interested. Less and less censorship was done, and at last the Chinese came to accept the kiss in an American film as an interesting attribute.

Students of the subject state that the American movies have introduced more Western customs into China than any other influence. Niel Sanford, the psychologist specializing in the problems of isolated groups, upon his recent return from the Orient after two years at Yale-in-China, confirmed in a large measure the facts already discovered by the movie distributors.

"The moving pictures," Mr. Sanford stated, "are one of the most interesting influences in China today. They are giving Orientals a tremendous insight into Western customs, an insight that at times is erroneous, perhaps, but which, on the whole, I believe to be beneficial.

"In the matter of kissing, where American films were formerly speeded up when they reached that point, or severely censored, they are now accepted in more rational manner by the Chinese. My Chinese students also took the most intense interest in the subject, I being frequently asked to confirm the fact that it is a universal form of salutation, or other questions as to its social usage.

"I see no reason why it is not fair to say that the movies have served to popularize the kiss in China. The introduction of many other American customs can be traced to that influence. Gum is now extensively chewed in China, the manufacturers putting it up in packages with Chinese symbols on them. Ice cream soda and bobbed hair have come in during the last few years, and the girls of an age known in America as flappers, are achieving a new and hitherto unknown freedom of conduct, even taking to dancing, a thing that would never have been countenanced at the time movies were first introduced.

"Of course the movies have given certain erroneous ideas of American life. For instance, Dr. W. J. Hale, Dean of Yale-in-China, at Chang Sha, had to request publicly the men students recently not to powder their faces before going into town, the students having concluded that it was an American custom not confined to women. There are many other misapprehensions that they may have arrived at from the movies."

However, while American movies, with the petting left in, have grown to be acceptable, and while the bigger companies, such as United Artists, state that they do not have to clip even their Valentino films for Chinese distribution, local prejudice had held over to the extent that the Chinese-made movies had consistently steered clear of all forms of "necking."

That is, until Miss Mamie Lee, foremost Chinese film star, backed by a number of other leading local actors and actresses, decided that the time had come for their films to follow Western traditions. The new film with the lingering soul kiss fadeout was the result.

Chinese producers are watching the experiment with the deepest interest, and it is confidently expected to revolutionize the love technique of the local pictures. At the same time a storm of discussion has followed the exhibition of the picture throughout the country that at times has rivaled the local revolution in interest.

Many Chinese moviegoers who sanction the kiss in American-made pictures criticize its use by a Chinese woman. Others warmly praise the beautiful Miss Lee for her broadmindedness and her efforts to place the local film business out from under the shadow of hypocrisy. Other beautiful Chinese film stars, such as Miss E. E. Dick and Miss Wang Lan Ying, who have been advocating American technique, have written congratulating Miss Lee. They state that her work is bringing Chinese films into a position where they may economically compete with American films and even seek foreign markets. And the general professional opinion is that in a few more years Young China will be sold on the "soul kiss."
