Nakasone says export decision 'error of judgment'

TOKYO (AP) — Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone said today his decision to raise the quota of Japanese auto exports to the United States was an "error of judgment" resulting from a misreading of potential American reaction.

Also today, the Ministry of International Trade and Industry announced a five-point plan to increase foreign imports of manufactured products, and Minister Keiichi Murata appealed to Japanese consumers to buy more foreign goods.

A news release from the ministry said it will call on 60 leading Japanese companies, including automobile, electronic and machinery manufacturers, trading houses, department stores and supermarkets, to make special efforts to promote imports.

Among the 60 firms are Toyota Motor Corp., Nippon Steel Corp., Matsushita Electric Industrial Co., Sony Corp., Mitsubishi Co. and Mitsui and Co., ministry officials said.

Besides the appeal to promote imports, the five-point ministry plan provides for import fairs, conferences for foreigners doing business in Japan, the expansion of trade in certain products, upgrading financial aid to importers and a publicity campaign to increase awareness of the importance of buying foreign goods.

"With the benefit of hindsight, maybe we should have studied the situation more in advance" of raising the quota, Nakasone told foreign journalists at a luncheon. "But we hope it is understood that we acted in sincerity and good faith."

The government announced March 28 that auto shipments for the fiscal year beginning April 1 would be 2.3 million, up from the 1.85 million sent in fiscal 1984 when Japanese automakers were still under "voluntary restraint" on exports to the United States.

Nakasone called that decision, which boosts exports to the United States by 24.3 percent, an "error in judgment about the attitude in the United States."

The U.S. Congress, angered by Japan's $36.8 billion trade surplus and what it perceived as Japanese cars flooding the U.S. market, subsequently passed a non-binding resolution to retaliate against Japan if it refused to open its markets to more American competition.

Nakasone's comments were contained in a pool report by reporters at the luncheon.

They came three days after the government's announcement of a new package of measures designed to liberalize Japanese markets for foreign products in telecommunications, electronics, pharmaceuticals and medical equipment, and wood products.

The auto export issue, which has been dealt with separately over the past five years, was not a part of that three-year program, the seventh package of trade liberalization measures offered by Japan since 1981. U.S. and European officials have complained that the programs were inadequate.

Woman who says she lied about rape wants to be tried for perjury

MARKHAM, Ill. (AP) — Gary Dotson returned to prison today to resume serving a 25- to 50-year rape sentence after a judge refused to believe a woman's story that she lied six years ago when she accused him of raping her.

Meanwhile, Cathleen Crowell Webb challenged the court system to try her for perjury if it didn't believe her new testimony that the rape never occurred.

Dotson, 28, who had been freed briefly on bond after serving six years of his sentence, arrived at 8:30 a.m. at the Joliet Correctional Center about 30 miles southwest of Chicago. He and 147 other prisoners had been transported from the Cook County Jail, where Dotson spent the night.

Dotson met immediately with prison Warden J.W. Fairman, and it was decided he would be taken to the prison hospital to talk with a psychologist or psychiatrist, said Nic Howell, a spokesman for the Illinois Corrections Department.

"He is distraught," Howell said. "It's a pretty emotional situation."

Mrs. Webb said in an interview today that "I feel the court system did a great injustice to Gary Dotson by sending him back to prison."

She said "it wasn't just my testimony but the testimony of six other alibi witnesses to prove his innocence."

"And I'd like to see the court try me now (for perjury) and the other six witnesses," Mrs. Webb said. "I'd like to see a jury of my peers hear the truth."

Gov. James R. Thompson said his office had received a phone call from a Dotson relative seeking help to free Dotson. However, Thompson said, "I don't think it would be appropriate for me to go outside the normal channels" on behalf of Dotson.

David Fields, a spokesman for the governor, said any request for executive clemency must be filed with the state Prisoner Review Board.

Circuit Judge Richard Samuels, saying he did not believe that Mrs. Webb fabricated a 1979 rape charge, refused Thursday to free Dotson.

Samuels ruled that Dotson "failed to sustain his burden (of proof) and I cannot find that perjury was committed."

"He's innocent...He's innocent!" screamed Mrs. Webb as she was led from the courthouse Thursday supported by her husband and attorney John McLario.

"I lied in 1979 and I'm telling the truth now," she continued, speaking through tears, pale and visibly shaken.

Mrs. Webb, 23, testified last week she was never raped on July 9, 1977. She said she made up the story when she was 16 because she feared she was pregnant and wanted to prevent her foster parents from learning she had had sex with a boyfriend.

Space shuttle Discovery, Sen. Garn finally in orbit

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Space shuttle Discovery thundered into orbit today, carrying Sen. Jake Garn among its seven-member crew on a much-delayed mission that blasted off with just 55 seconds to spare.

The space plane vaulted off its launch pad at 8:59 a.m. EST, spewing an awesome 700-foot-tall of fire as it climbed swiftly over the Atlantic Ocean and then disappeared from view into a heavy cloud layer. Nine minutes later, Mission Control reported Discovery was in a secure orbit, 281 miles up and circling the globe at more than 17,400 mph.

While the shuttle was accelerating toward orbit, the commander reported a caution and warning light on the cabin pressure. Mission Control checked its readings on the ground and told him it was a false alarm.

The mission, the first of two shuttle flights this month, got off the ground after five postponements caused by a number of problems — and after a 55-minute delay caused by rain and by a cargo ship in the area where the booster rockets fall.

If it had not blasted off by 9 a.m., it would have been postponed again. The launch time was based on requirements for putting two communications satellites into precise orbit.

"We did it with 55 seconds to space, which seems like we were playing brinkmanship," said shuttle operations manager Tom Utsman. "The only thing we were doing was letting our decision process run as long as time would allow."

The mission, which also includes experiments that could produce life-saving drugs, came on the fourth anniversary of the first shuttle flight, on April 12, 1981.

The space agency hopes the flight will kick off its long-sought goal of launching shuttles at a rate of one a month. The schedule earlier this year was scrambled by this mission's problems, and the last mission lifted off on Jan. 27.

Eight more flights are scheduled this year, with Challenger set to take off in just 17 days, on April 29. There are 15 flights planned in 1986 and 17 in 1987.

"We pulled the stopper today, and we're looking forward to getting on with the rest of them," said launch director Bob Sieck.

Among the thousands viewing Discovery's blazing departure were more than 100 people from Utah, Garn's home state.

Garn's wife, Kathleen, who watched with six of Garn's seven children, said, "It was frightening. Even though I had seen it on TV, I didn't realize there was going to be quite so much fire. And I expected it

Grandchildren have fond memories of FDR

DALLAS (AP) — It was 40 years ago today that President Franklin D. Roosevelt died, but two of his grandchildren still share fond memories of visiting the White House during World War II.

Both Elliott "Tony" Roosevelt and Chandler Roosevelt Lindsley remember the late president as a loving grandfather who cared deeply about his family.

"There was always lots of laughter and lots of good times around him," said Roosevelt. "He had a great interest in the family having a good time."

Tony Roosevelt, who was 6 and his sister 8 in 1942, remembers sliding down bannisters at the White House, and setting off security alarms when he and his friends played too close to the White House fence.

"The White House, especially the third floor where guests stayed, was a great place for young kids to play," he said.

During World War II, Mrs. Lindsley said, she would play in her grandfather's bedroom while his advisers briefed the president on the war effort.

"They would always ask if it was OK to discuss war matters with me there in the room," she recalled. "He said, 'Yes, of course.'"

While the president was making decisions that would affect the course of world history, this fact seemed unextraordinary to the grandchildren.

"He was president from the time we were born," Mrs. Lindsley recalled. "It was a fact of our lives and didn't seem unusual."

Both are two of the children born to FDR's son, Elliott, during his 11-year marriage to the former Ruth Goggins of Fort Worth.

They lived during the school year at their parents' Dutch Branch Ranch about 15 miles outside Fort Worth with their brother, David, who now lives in Connecticut.

Even at the Texas ranch, the children could not escape the fact that their grandfather was president.

"We had Secret Service who lived with us at the ranch all the time," Lindsley said. "They took us to school and even came out onto the playground at recess. If I spent the evening with a friend they slept outside in a car all night."

Jewish leaders 'shocked' Reagan to visit German cemetery

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — American Jewish leaders say they are shocked and saddened that President Reagan plans to honor German war dead by visiting a cemetery near the site of World War II's bloody "Battle of the Bulge."

Apparently surprised by the vehemence of the Jewish reaction, administration officials said the plan might be looked at again.

"There is no active reconsideration of it at present. But that's not to say there won't be," said one White House official, speaking privately. "We may or we may not" review it.

White House deputy press secretary Larry Speakes announced Thursday that Reagan will join West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl on May 5 in visiting the cemetery at Bitburg, a German staging area for the Battle of the Bulge. Plans call for a wreath-laying ceremony, a religious service, and a joint U.S.-German military ceremony.

The visit is planned as part of Reagan's 11-day trip to Europe, beginning May 1.

Jewish groups, already disappointed that Reagan would not visit a concentration camp, protested the president's planned stop at a German cemetery.

"We are saddened," said Phil Baum of the American Jewish Congress, "that the president of the United States should decide against commemorating those European Jewish communities destroyed in concentration camps and decide instead to pay homage to the very soldiers who fought a war in defense of a regime that engineered their destruction and indeed who killed thousands of American young men."

B'nai B'rith International, a Jewish service organization, said it hoped he would reconsider.

"President Reagan was reluctant to visit the site of the Dachau concentration camp for fear of reopening old wounds — a decision we take strong issue with," said Daniel Thursz, executive vice president of the organization.

"His willingness now to visit a German military cemetery shocks us precisely because it reopens old wounds — and in a way that will stir the bitterest resentment not just among Jews, but among former American soldiers, the soldiers of our allies, and the families of all the victims who fell to Nazi Germany's madness," Thursz said.

Wholesale prices rise .2 percent in March

WASHINGTON (AP) — Wholesale prices rose a moderate 0.2 percent last month, the steepest increase of 1985, the government said today. Over the last year, however, prices have been up 0.3 percent, the smallest 12-month inflation rate in 20 years.

In March, a hodge-podge of increases more than wiped out cheaper prices for gasoline and food, which was down overall despite a 16.7 percent gain in vegetable prices.

The March rise followed a 0.1 percent decline in February. Prices had held steady in January.

For the first three months of the year, prices were up just 0.3 percent, at an annual rate. Indeed, that rate held true for the last year as a whole and was the lowest since a 0.1 percent rate for the 12 months ending in January 1985.

The 0.8 percent gasoline price decline was the product of the Labor Department's seasonal adjustment process, designed to remove predictable, periodic influences from price activity. Without the adjustment, prices at the pump actually rose 1.7 percent.

Analysts, however, expect pump prices to begin falling before long as pressure builds from the worldwide oil glut.

Indeed, many analysts predict inflation for all of 1985 could be as low as 2 percent, only a slight deterioration from the 1.8 percent gain recorded in 1984.

That performance, combined with a minuscule 0.6 percent increase in 1983, gave the United States its best back-to-back inflation record in two decades.

In other economic news today, the government said that sales of manufactured goods rose a slight 0.2 percent in February following a 0.7 percent decline in January. Business inventories climbed an even faster 0.4 percent in February.

As for March, the department offered these specifics on price activity:

—Food prices overall fell 0.2 percent, the third monthly decline. The drop came despite the big rise in vegetable prices, which was almost four times the 4.6 percent gain of the preceding month.

Prices were also up, but at more modest levels, for eggs and pork while costs fell for fruit, down 8.3 percent, for beef and veal, for fish and for poultry. The drop in fruit prices almost erased the 9.1 percent February gain.

—Energy prices overall fell 0.9 percent, the fourth straight monthly decline. Natural gas prices were off 2.5 percent but home heating oil costs rose 0.6 percent.

Heating oil costs are now 15.9 percent below their levels of a year ago while gasoline prices are off 9 percent.

The energy price calculations reported today were actually for February. That component of the wholesale measure lags a month because energy companies report their prices too late for inclusion in the most recent index.

—New car prices were up 0.3 percent, the smallest rise this year. Light truck prices rose 1.4 percent.

—Capital equipment costs gained 0.4 percent.

The overall rise was also propelled by price gains of 1.1 percent for newspapers, 1 percent for automobile tires, 0.6 percent for furniture and 0.5 percent for women's and children's clothing.

The optimism about overall future price moderation is based in part on the fact that worldwide oil demand is still well below the production capacity of the oil-exporting nations and will likely remain so for some time.

In addition, the dollar, while retreating somewhat from the records set in February, still remains at high levels. By one measure, the dollar has risen by about 70 percent since the end of 1980 against a trade-weighted group of foreign currencies.

The strong dollar holds prices down, especially in a commodity index such as the wholesale price measure, by making imported goods cheaper for Americans. At the same time, U.S. producers are constrained from raising their prices for fear of losing even more business to foreign competition.

If last month's 0.2 percent increase held steady for 12 straight months, the yearly advance would be 2.5 percent. The annual rate reported by the department is based on a more precise calculation of monthly prices than the March figure made public.

In all, the Producer Price Index for finished goods stood at 292.4 in March, meaning that goods costing $10 in 1967 would have cost $29.24 last month.

Price changes that show up in the producer price measure are a good barometer of how food, energy and other commodity prices will move at the retail level. The Consumer Price Index, though, checks for a broader range of items, including housing and medical care, than does the wholesale index.

Consumer prices rose at an annual rate of 4 percent in 1984, only a slight deterioration from the decade-best 3.8 percent increase in 1983.

Samuels, who had sentenced Dotson in 1979 on the rape and aggravated kidnapping charges, said Illinois Supreme and appellate court rulings made it difficult to accept recanted testimony. He said that new witnesses who appeared on Dotson's behalf failed to "establish the credibility of Cathy's recantation."

Dotson, who was freed April 4 on $10,000 bond after Samuels continued the original hearing until Thursday, covered his eyes as the judge began reading his notes from the bench following closing arguments. He will be eligible for parole in 1988.

In an interview from the Cook County Jail in the Chicago Sun-Times today, Dotson said, "I'm not surprised about what happened to me. I've done some research on what has happened in the past with recanted testimony. I learned that never in the state of Illinois has anyone been freed from jail based on recanted testimony."

"I certainly appreciate what Cathleen did and I appreciate it even more now after what she's had to go through in this court hearing. My heart goes out to her and I want to be her friend. And I know she wants to be my friend."

As the judge announced his decision, Dotson's mother, Barbara, screamed "What happened?" from her seat several feet behind her son. Dotson slammed the table, then sat back quietly, staring at Samuels.

Mrs. Webb, who now lives in Jaffrey, N.H., said on ABC-TV's "Nightline," "I lied (in 1979), evidently too convincingly...I regret deeply that it took me six years to come forward...Prior to my decision to become a Christian I didn't have a conscience about this."

Mrs. Webb, speaking this morning on NBC-TV's "Today" show, said, "There were no discrepancies or inconsistencies in my current testimony and if people look at the records of the current testimony they will see that."

Warren Lupel, Dotson's attorney, said, "This is appealable, but I'm not going to comment on what I'm going to do. I'm not going to abandon him because this is an innocent man in jail."

Asked last week by Assistant State's Attorney Peggy Frossard about blood and semen found in her panties at the time of the alleged rape, Mrs. Webb was vague about when she had sex with her boyfriend.

At first, Mrs. Webb testified she had sex a few days before the reported rape, then altered her testimony to a time closer to July 8.

Ms. Frossard picked up that line of questioning Thursday with Mrs. Webb's foster mother, trying to show that Mrs. Webb would not have kept the same undergarment on for several days after having sex with her boyfriend.

Earlier Thursday, Dotson took the stand and was asked by Lupel, "Did you rape her?"

"No," Dotson replied, "I did not." Dotson said he had been drinking beer with friends July 9 and driving around between parties. He said he remained in the car while friends attended one party and "from there I lost track of time because I fell asleep."

The physician who treated Mrs. Webb at the emergency room, Dr. Andrew Labrador, testified that three separate tests shortly after the alleged rape failed to reveal traces of sperm or seminal fluid in her.

Mark Stolorow, a crime lab scientist with the Illinois Department of Law Enforcement, testified for the prosecution that a hair found on Mrs. Webb's body in 1977 "is microscopically consistent with that of Gary Dotson and dissimilar to those of" both the former boyfriend and Mrs. Webb.

As the shuttle raced into space, Gann's bodily functions were monitored by five sensors on his head, four on his stomach and three on his chest, part of an effort to learn more about how the human body adapts to weightlessness.

The other crew members are commander Karol Bobko; pilot Donald E. Williams; mission specialists Margaret Rhea Seddon, David Griggs and Jeffrey Hoffman; and payload specialist Charles Walker, who almost was bumped from the flight Thursday when his drug-making machine sprang a leak.

Only once before have seven people been aboard the same spaceship.

Announcing Reagan's decision, Speaker said "The rationale is that...he is there in a spirit of reconciliation, in a spirit of 40 years of peace, in a spirit of economic and military compatibility of the European community together with its specific allies."

In opting not to visit a concentration camp, Reagan said his European visit, on the 40th anniversary of the end of World War II, should not be a time for "reawakening the memories and...the passions" of those times.

At a news conference last month, Reagan said Germans "should be recognized for the democracy that they've created and the democratic principles they now espouse." He said few Germans alive remember the war and that Germans "have a guilt feeling that's been imposed upon them and I just think it's unnecessary."

JAPAN

In a nationally televised speech following the announcement of the program, Nakasone urged his countrymen to buy foreign products to help reduce Japan's growing surplus with its trading partners, which reached $44 billion last year.

At the luncheon, Nakasone held up a poster bearing his picture and the slogan, "Never before have imports been so important to us." He said it was part of a nationwide campaign to boost the purchase of imported goods.

The auto export quota was raised in consideration to Japanese automakers, who had begrudgingly agreed to voluntarily hold back exports to the United States since fiscal 1981.

President Reagan said March 1 that the United States would not interfere with the lifting of the four-year quota system, adding that "I hope we can look forward to reciprocal treatment by Japan."

Nakasone said Japan should not have specified a new quota, but rather should have "observed the situation" to make sure that the lifting of the restraints did not allow auto exports to go out of control.

He called for more understanding from the United States about Japan's efforts to reduce the trade imbalance, noting that about 30 percent of Japanese exports are under voluntary restraint.

He pledged to fight opposition among other government officials to opening markets.

He said that for 2,000 years, Japanese have turned to the state for

Swedish navy stops search for sub

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — Swedish naval units ended their search today of a suspected intruding submarine because they could find no evidence of the trespasser after combing the waters around Karlskrona harbor, the military said.

Defense staff spokesman Hans Wessberg said no firm contacts had been made in the course of the 13-hour search, during which anti-submarine grenades were fired into the water off the harbor.

Wessberg told the Associated Press today that a later evaluation of the sonar contact which touched off the search indicated there might not have been a submarine after all. He said there had been only one sign of a possible submarine presence.

Earlier in the search, Wessberg confirmed that coastal fleet units had fired at what he described as "alien submarine activities."

"It could be anything," Wessberg said during the earlier stage of the search. "I can't see any dramatic development."

Wessberg said Thursday that Swedish naval units fired at a suspected submarine intruder near the entrance to Karlskrona harbor on the southeast coast.

The national news agency TT reported that anti-submarine grenades were fired, and that a minesweeper later sped to the area some 275 miles southwest of Stockholm and was joined by a navy helicopter and other naval units. By nightfall, three minesweepers and four patrol boats were searching the area, it said.

But Wessberg refused to say what type of weapons were fired or specify the equipment used in the attempt to uncover "alien submerged activities."

TT quoted sources as saying the grenades were fired in swarms about 550 yards from the port entrance and were set to explode at different depths.

The incident took place about 18 miles from the Karlskrona archipelago.

Japan's strict inspection and product evaluation process has been criticized by its trading partners as a non-tariff barrier that blocks imports and thwarts free trade.

"Such products as pharmaceuticals must go through laborious testing that can take months, and then may not be accepted. Until recently, automobiles had to be tested one by one, rather than by a representative car of each model, to see that they met Japanese standards."

The people speak — but usually through a lobbyist's megaphone

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG

An Analysis

WASHINGTON (AP) — In theory, this is the week the American people are getting a chance to button-hole members of Congress and tell them how they ought to vote on the budget and on aid to the rebel forces in Nicaragua.

But, as is so often the case, the average citizen who wants to be heard must stand in line behind hordes of people being mobilized by lobbyists on both sides of the issues.

Key votes on the budget and Nicaragua are expected in Congress before the end of the month.

The citizen who just pays taxes and votes regularly will have to compete for attention with the campaign contributors and other political heavies being mobilized by the White House and its allies in the battle to win support for President Reagan's program.

That citizen, if he or she is not part of an organized constituency, also must also try to be heard over the well-orchestrated campaigns mounted by groups including senior citizens determined to put pressure on Congress to reject the proposal to cut 2 percent from the cost-of-living increase for Social Security recipients.

A lot of the lobbying is incidentally aimed at those citizens not affiliated with any of the organized groups, who are comparable to the uncommitted voters in an election.

None of the people pushing Reagan's programs is as effective lobbying the uncommitted as the president himself. For weeks, Reagan has devoted most of his weekly radio addresses to denunciations of the Sandinista government in Nicaragua and appeals for support of his request for $14 million to aid the anti-government rebels.

Few people in America can better testify to Reagan's skills as a communicator than Walter F. Mondale, who took an historic beating at Reagan's hands in the 1984 election. Said Mondale, "President Reagan's ability to communicate — even things that I think are demonstrably not accurate — verges on genius."

While much of the lobbying is aimed at individuals, in this age of computers and electronic mail, of video cassettes and satellite hook-ups, the power of groups with access to technology is magnified.

Shortly after Reagan and Senate Republicans reached their compromise on the budget, a legislative alert went out from the American Association of Retired Persons to signal the 18 million-member group's volunteer leaders that it was time to step up the campaign to defeat any effort to limit cost-of-living increases for Social Security recipients.

The senior citizens' lobbying group also has run newspaper ads headlined: "The Budget Deficit: A Question of Fairness." The ads go on to ask, "Is it fair ... to cut back on Social Security, Medicare, Medicaid, job training, housing and student loans to help deal with the budget deficit, while ignoring massive federal tax giveaways to large corporations and wealthy individuals?"

Meanwhile, at the White House, Vice President George Bush was giving pep talks to business groups in an effort to get their help in passing the budget compromise.

Art dealers mingle with cattle barons

HOUSTON (AP) — Art dealers and ranchers are mingling with cattle and horses in a ballroom for the 10th annual Western Heritage Sale, an extravaganza where $6 million is expected to change hands.

Only in Texas could a London art expert admire a John Singer Sargent painting worth hundreds of thousands of dollars while prized cattle graze in stalls an arm's length away.

Only in Texas could 1,200 people in tuxedos and gowns sip cocktails in an elegant hotel ballroom and discuss art, cattle and horses while attendants in black ties quickly sweep away manure.

The event, which opened Thursday, has spawned several imitators, but "no one has done anything as audacious and outrageous," publicist Linda Wilson said. "This was absolutely the first."

The sale, which began in 1976 as a Bicentennial project to promote Western art, is the brainchild of former Gov. John Connally, now a Houston attorney, Dallas-area developer Joe Marchman and Louis Pearce, a Houston industrialist. Each of the three are ranchers, as well.

This year's show at the Shamrock Hilton Hotel marks the first time items other than those specifically linked to the American West are being sold.

"We're trying to make art buyers understand they can come to Houston to see and purchase some of the best art in the world," Marchman said. David Messum, a London art dealer who was inspecting the sale items Thursday, said the three-day show was doing just that, drawing much interest and many bids from European buyers.

Last year, $3.4 million was spent over two days, and officials say $6 million could change hands this year.

Artists were selected by a panel of show officials in what has become a year-round job. This year, 44 states and six foreign countries are represented, Marchman said.

The show even has a bit of Hollywood, with actors Robert Redford and Dale Robertson among the people with horses for sale.

Alamo flag likely to stay in Mexico despite pleas

MEXICO CITY (AP) — A flag that flew over the Alamo can't be loaned to Texas for its 150th anniversary celebration next year because it is in poor condition and is being restored, a museum spokesman says.

"The flag is not going to be loaned because of the restoration. Because of that, neither can a photo be taken," Rocio Caldillo, a secretary in the office of National History and Anthropology Institute Director Enrique Florescano. "They are restoring it and it's going to take a considerable length of time."

The flag belongs to the National Museum of History in Chapultepec Park, which falls under the anthropology institute's supervision.

Mexican officials say privately that, even if the flag weren't being restored, allowing it to leave the country would touch off a certain firestorm of controversy here and would be simply too touchy an issue.

The flag is the only banner that still exists from the Alamo.

Nicaraguan girl says she will die if deported

BROWNSVILLE (AP) — Fourteen-year-old Connie Linarte, an honors student who didn't speak English when she arrived from Nicaragua four years ago, says she will be killed if she is deported.

Miss Linarte, an eighth-grader at Cummings Junior High School, faces deportation along with the rest of her family after their applications for political asylum were denied.

"I know my father and brothers will get killed," she said, her voice cracking. "I don't know. My mother, sister and I probably will get killed too. I know I'm going to die someday, but not that way."

Last week, Miss Linarte, her parents, three brothers and a sister, were less than an hour from being deported when a federal judge intervened, preventing immigration officials from deporting them.

"Oh, man, I was scared, sad and disappointed," Miss Linarte said. "We all tried our best here and they were just taking us away."

A hearing originally was scheduled today, but U.S. District Judge Ricardo Hinojosa allowed the family's attorneys until next Friday to prepare their arguments.

The family includes Luis Antonio, 41, and Sofia Antonia, 43; Hector Javier, 22; Juan Manuel, 19; Luis Antonio Jr., 17; and Yencia, 12.

The Linartes fled Nicaragua aboard a fishing boat in 1981. Miss Linarte said one of her brothers, Israel, now 21, had joined the Sandinista government and her father did not want that for his other children.

Her father, who worked for a fishing company, put the children on a boat one day, told his supervisors he was taking them to a beach, but headed for the United States.

She said the family later learned that the Sandinista government put the word out to have the ship destroyed and the family killed for leaving Nicaragua.

She said they will be killed if they return because they left the country without permission.

Miss Linarte said her father left his country because he wanted the children to have an education.

When they arrived in the United States, her father enrolled the children in schools and continued working as a fisherman.

Miss Linarte has done well, school officials said.

"She does well in her classes," Principal Eddie Valent said. "She's a good scholar. A nice individual, a lady."

Judge orders woman to have psychiatric exam

HOUSTON (AP) — A judge has ordered a psychiatric examination for a teen-ager accused of smothering her 8-day-old son with her hands.

State District Judge Charles Hearn on Thursday ordered Leanne Marie Nichols Pitts held without bond in the Harris County Jail pending the examination, Assistant District Attorney Casey O'Brien said.

Mrs. Pitts, 19, of Houston, was charged with murder in the death of her son, Michael.

She called officers Wednesday afternoon and said she had smothered her infant son with her hands.

"She just said she had killed her baby," said constable's dispatcher Connie Greiner. "She then gave me her address."

Ms. Greiner said she kept the woman on the telephone for about 20 minutes until officers arrived at the north Houston home.

The officers found the baby's "real bruised" body in a yellow, plastic car seat on the back porch, said Constable Dick Moore. The baby had been dead about four hours, authorities said.

The woman told investigators that Wednesday was the first day she had been left alone with the infant.

Pentagon reports military exercise over in Honduras

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nearly 7,000 U.S. servicemen will participate this month in Universal Trek 85, a military exercise in Honduras that will feature large-scale amphibious and air assaults, the Defense Department says.

The Pentagon also announced Thursday its schedule for Solid Shield 85, an annual exercise conducted along the East Coast of the United States that will involve more than 43,000 servicemen this year.

Pentagon sources had disclosed the upcoming military exercise in Honduras last month, saying it would follow Big Pine III, an exercise now under way that for the first time features the use of tanks in Honduras.

The Reagan administration has gradually stepped up the pace of military exercises in Honduras since 1983, in part as a warning to the leftist government of Nicaragua.

Of the nearly 7,000 American servicemen involved in the Universal Trek maneuvers, about 3,000 will go ashore, the Pentagon said.

It said a Marine amphibious task force will sail from Norfolk next Monday, rehearsing a landing two days later near Camp Lejeune before redeploying for Honduras. On April 18, an air assault task force from the 101st Airborne Division at Fort Campbell, Ky., will leave for La Ceiba, Honduras, the statement continued.

Overall, the exercise will involve about 1,000 Army troops, 400 men from the Air Force, 2,200 Marines and 3,250 sailors, plus about 180 headquarters personnel. The exercise will include an unspecified number of Honduran soldiers, and will be run by the U.S. Atlantic Command in Norfolk in coordination with the U.S. Southern Command in Panama and the Honduran government.

The amphibious and air assaults will be conducted on the Caribbean coast near Puerto Castilla. The Marine amphibious assault will begin on April 23.

Air Force planes will provide air support during the landings and the Military Airlift Command will transport the soldiers and equipment. In addition, F-15 fighters will practice intercept missions against B-52s.

The exercise will end on April 27, with all forces and equipment returning by May 5. The Pentagon said it is planning to allow reporters to observe the action.

Solid Shield will begin April 30 and last through May 16. Various phases of the exercise will be conducted at Camp Lejeune, N.C.; the Marine Corps Air Station at Beaufort, S.C.; Fort Stewart, Ga.; Norfolk, Va., and Morehead City, N.C.

The exercise will "simulate military action between fictitious opposing land, sea and air forces," the Pentagon said, with the goal of testing the military's ability to command and control joint forces drawn from each service and the Coast Guard.

AIDS might be spread through simple contact

BERKELEY, Calif. (AP) — A study of African households suggests that housemates of AIDS patients might run a higher risk of contracting the disease, says a researcher from the federal Centers for Disease Control.

The eight-month study conducted in Zaire is the first to suggest that AIDS may be spread through routine household contact, said Dr. Joseph McCormick.

But other federal health officials warned Thursday that the data was still being analyzed, and said no such cases had been reported in the United States.

Previous studies of the spread of the illness have suggested that acquired immune deficiency syndrome can be spread only through intimate sexual contact, tainted blood transfusions or shared hypodermic needles.

McCormick disclosed the preliminary findings Wednesday at a lecture at the University of California-Berkeley. The complete study is to be presented next week at an international symposium on AIDS in Atlanta sponsored by the Centers for Disease Control.

In the study, researchers examined the blood of family members and unrelated housemates of 48 AIDS patients in Zaire, where some health officials believe acquired immune deficiency syndrome originated. The incidence of AIDS is higher in Zaire than in the United States, previous studies have shown.

In the eight-month study that ended in February, McCormick and his colleagues found that 17 percent of the 204 housemates of AIDS patients had evidence of exposure to the suspected AIDS virus.

Only 4 percent of those not living with patients had the antibodies.

When the researchers excluded spouses — who presumably could contract the AIDS virus through sexual contact — they found that 11 percent of the patients' other housemates had in their blood antibodies to the AIDS virus, suggesting that they had been exposed to it.

Officials said they do not know how many of those exposed to the virus might eventually become ill. They say the presence of the antibodies does not necessarily mean those people will develop the disease, only that they have been exposed.

In the few cases in which the spouses had not picked up the virus, no other household members had antibodies, either. However, in the homes where the spouses were infected, other people — including children, aunts, uncles and cousins — showed signs of exposure.

Health director fired for vacationing during outbreak

CHICAGO (AP) — The Illinois public health director has been fired for vacationing in Mexico even as subordinates were telling the governor that he was holding daily staff meetings on a salmonella outbreak that has been linked to three deaths, the governor's press aide said.

The milk-borne disease has sickened nearly 3,000 people in five states in the second-largest recorded outbreak in U.S. history, and caused the Chicago area's largest grocery chain to close its dairy operation for a thorough inspection in an attempt to find the cause of the outbreak.

Thomas Kirkpatrick "saw fit to leave his responsibilities as director of the Department of Public Health at a time when he should have been at his desk," Gov. James Thompson said Thursday in a statement.

The governor's spokesman, David Gilbert, said health department employees sent memos to Thompson saying Kirkpatrick was conducting daily staff meetings on the crisis when, in fact, he was in Mexico.

"It was a mistake for Mr. Kirkpatrick to go on vacation at this time and not to tell me," Thompson said, adding, "it was a mistake for him to stay there and it was a mistake not to return."

Gilbert said it was not clear when Kirkpatrick left for Mexico or whether he was still there.

Efforts to reach Kirkpatrick for comment Thursday were not successful. A spokeswoman for the department, Mary Huck, said she did not even know that Kirkpatrick had been fired.

"Oh, you're kidding!" she said when told by a reporter. She said she didn't know Kirkpatrick had been in Mexico or where he was at the present time. "We got so busy, I didn't even ask about where he was," she said.

Also on Thursday, four lawsuits were filed in Circuit Court against Jewel Companies Inc., makers of dairy products contaminated with the bacteria. It brought to 17 the number of suits filed against Jewel.

The outbreak has produced a total of 3,902 reported cases of salmonella poisoning and 2,923 confirmed cases in five states — Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Michigan and Wisconsin, said spokesman Chet June of the Illinois Department of Public Health at a Springfield briefing.

While milk from Jewel's Hill-farm dairy is considered the main source of the salmonella, the state health department advised consumers to check cartons of other products made at the Melrose Park dairy, closed earlier this week.

Girl who drove car bomb first sent mother present

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Fatima Mheidieh tore the blue paper off a present from her 16-year-old daughter and burst into tears.

On Tuesday, the girl killed herself by driving a car bomb into an Israeli convoy in occupied south Lebanon.

Sana Mheidieh left her home in Beirut three weeks ago, saying she was going to buy nail polish for her mother. She never returned. The present she sent, which her mother received Thursday, contained perfume and a blue necklace.

Her letter said: "Do not be sad for me. The south must be liberated."

The girl's suicide drive in a car loaded with 440 pounds of explosives killed two Israeli soldiers and wounded two near the village of Jezzine, about 19 miles southeast of Beirut.

Beirut's newspapers called her the "Bride of the South" — a reference to the Moslem practice of calling unmarried women who die "brides" — but her mother said she was hardly dressed for a wedding when she left the family's home in Beirut. She was wearing jeans and a black T-shirt.

"I wish she had told me. I wish she kissed me goodbye," the mother sobbed. "Before she left, she put makeup on my face and dressed me up. She didn't know how to drive a car before she left."

Her mother, Fatima Mheidieh, spoke to an Associated Press reporter at her home as the family received condolences.

A day after her daughter left, Mrs. Mheidieh said, "the phone rang and the person on the other end of the line did not talk. I knew it was Sana. The same thing happened a week later. She probably wanted to hear our voice."

Mrs. Mheidieh said: "For the rest of my life, this present is going to remain as it is now. I wish she had given me a kiss, embraced me instead."

The family is from the southern village of Ankoun, outside the Israeli occupation zone, and Sana Mheidieh's handwritten letter said: "All my life I have been thinking of a revolutionary action. I have decided to fulfill my duty toward the south."

The note went on: "I don't know when you shall receive this letter. Raise your head high, Mother. ... I shall be waiting for all the strugglers. ... Father, had I told you what I was planning to do, you wouldn't have let me go through it."

She wrote across the bottom of the letter: "To the dearest parents in the world."

She had been a member of the Syrian Social Nationalist Party since last year, and a party official who brought the present to the family home said the suicide was her own idea.

"Some of our men tried to persuade her to change her mind," said the official, who refused to give his name. "She got the idea from witnessing what is happening in the country. It was her own feelings."

The official said she thought of the suicide after another member of the party, Wajdi Sayegh, carried out a suicide attack on the Israelis in Jezzine last month.

"Sana realized that the party could help in this respect," the official said. "The car was provided by the party of course."

Relatives said she worked at a video shop where she recorded a statement before the attack that was later broadcast on Lebanese television. In it, she said she was going to join "other martyrs."

Her 40-year-old father, Youssef Mheidieh, said: "My feeling now is that I have lost a person but at the same time I think that she sacrificed herself so her people could live, especially those in the flaming south. I'm proud of her."

A cousin, Hoda Mheidieh, said Sana Mheidieh recently asked her, "Those who carry out suicide attacks, do they suffer pain?"

Most of Israeli-occupied south Lebanon is populated by Shiite Moslems. Shiites such as Sana Mheidieh have launched most suicide attacks and their religion lauds martyrdom for a noble cause.

Government agrees to transfer power to civilians in one year

KHARTOUM, Sudan (AP) — Sudan's unions and political parties today proposed to the new military rulers an apolitical Cabinet to administer the country during a one-year transition to civilian rule.

A spokesman for the Alliance of National Forces, formed by the unions and political parties, said it petitioned for "a Cabinet composed of civilians with no political affiliations" at a meeting with members of the Military Council this morning. The spokesman requested anonymity.

The 15-member council now running the country is led by Gen. Abdul-Rahman M.H. Swareddahab, who led a coup ousting President Gaafar Nimeiri last Saturday.

Protests including a general strike launched by the unions and opposition parties fueled last Saturday's takeover.

The spokesman said alliance members "realize that the caretaker government has very serious problems to tackle, and the absence of any differences on political ideology will make their job slightly easier during the transitional period."

The nation continued to return to normal activities that were disrupted by the strike and coup. The Military Council said Khartoum Airport would be opened today to "all scheduled flights." It had been closed to international traffic after flight engineers joined a general strike last week.

The civilian negotiators disclosed Thursday night that the council had accepted their demand that the transition be limited to a year and that the caretaker Cabinet include only one military member, the defense minister.

Nimeiri named Swareddahab commander-in-chief and defense minister March 18, a few days before he left on his last trip as president. The coup occurred while the president, who had ruled Sudan for 16 years, was returning from a U.S. visit. Nimeiri has been in Egypt since the coup.

Baker says U.S. may host meeting on monetary reform

PARIS (AP) — U.S. Treasury Secretary James A. Baker III today gave the first clear signal that the United States was willing to hold talks soon on ways of improving the world monetary system.

His remarks, on the second and final day of a ministerial meeting of the 24 nations in the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development, appeared to remove a key obstacle to agreement on launching parallel talks on trade liberalization.

Baker said the United States was "prepared to consider" offering to host a high-level meeting of the major industrial nations to discuss a variety of monetary issues, including strengthening the global lending system and stabilizing currency values.

The West European nations, led by France, have been pressing for an international conference on monetary reform. They are eager to find ways of limiting wide swings in the value of the U.S. dollar, which they say harm their economies.

Baker said such a meeting could be held after the results of a study on monetary reform were reviewed in June by finance ministers and central bank governors of the 10 largest industrial nations.

He stressed the talks would not be linked to proposed negotiations on removing barriers to free world trade.

Even so, his statement appeared to offer the political commitment that the Europeans had been seeking.

On Thursday, French and European Economic Community officials had said that any commitment to launching a new round of trade liberalization talks must be linked to parallel negotiations on monetary reform.

That linkage has emerged as the major obstacle to agreement in Paris on when new trade talks should begin under the auspices of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade, which sets terms of world trade.

Baker said that while the study on monetary reform was not yet completed, he understood it would not recommend a major reform of the monetary system, "but that a number of concrete, pragmatic steps should be taken to strengthen the current system."

He said a special high-level meeting on monetary reform, possibly hosted by the United States, would "review the various issues involved in transforming the findings of the (study) into appropriate action."

French Economics Minister Pierre Berezgovoy expressed satisfaction with Baker's remarks. "I am pleased with the positive attitude taken this morning," he said.

Baker reiterated that the Reagan administration wanted a new round of trade liberalization negotiations to begin as soon as possible.

Soviets pay tribute to Roosevelt

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union commemorated today's 40-year anniversary of the death of Franklin D. Roosevelt by praising him and contrasting his administration with that of President Reagan.

The official news agency Tass produced two long stories Thursday about Roosevelt, who died April 12, 1945.

Both stories praised FDR as a "statesman of world caliber" and "a convinced champion of cooperation with the Soviet Union."

The Soviets have long included Roosevelt in the group of foreign statesmen deserving of praise, and cited him as an example of how U.S. presidents should treat the Soviet Union.

He has been given special prominence in the Soviet buildup to the 40th anniversary of victory in World War II. Roosevelt has been praised in a television series on the war and also in a new film called "Victory."

The Tass coverage of the anniversary of Roosevelt's death was unusual because such tributes normally are reserved for figures from Soviet and Russian history.

One of the Tass articles was by Valentin Berezkhov, a leading political analyst who was Josef Stalin's interpreter in talks with Roosevelt.

Noting that Roosevelt died less than a month before the end of the war, Berezkhov said his "death was an irreparable loss to the peace settlement. Many people believe that if he had lived longer, the military situation in Europe would have shaped up differently."

Berezkhov added: "There is every reason to believe that the possibility of accords between the U.S.S.R. and the U.S.A. at the time was directly linked to the position of principle of Roosevelt."

In the other article, news analyst Igor Orlov said Roosevelt was "a statesman of world caliber who is remembered in American and world history as a man who demonstrated the great possibilities of a policy of realism based on world social, economic and political realities."

Orlov noted that it was under Roosevelt that diplomatic relations began between the Soviet Union and the United States in 1933 and that at the time FDR "stressed the idea, relevant nowadays as well, that difficulties ... could only be removed through frank and friendly talks."

Both articles used Roosevelt's example to criticize his successors, especially the administration of President Reagan.

Texas elephant breeding goal of Fort Worth facility

By BETH FULTON

GAINESVILLE, Texas (AP) — Gerry II, Asian elephant at the Frank Buck Zoo in this North Texas city, will be the first female elephant zoo officials hope to breed at Fort Worth Zoo's elephant facilities when they are completed this summer, says Dudley Brown, assistant zoo director in Fort Worth.

The $1.25 million facility, which includes 3.7 acres, is expected to be finished in June. It was financed as part of a bond package approved last year by Fort Worth voters.

The idea was to incorporate a good breeding facility within the elephant park.

Brown said he thinks Indian elephants like Gerry II need to be bred in North America because they are an endangered species.

"The emphasis is to try to breed what we have with what we have," he said. "My feeling is that they need to breed and reproduce, or we're going to run out of them. We're fortunate that we will have a facility."

The Fort Worth Zoo also has tentatively arranged to get a female for breeding from the Tyler Zoo and two females from the San Antonio Zoo.

F.E. Schmitz, member of the Gainesville Zoological Society, is one of the moving forces behind the Frank Buck Zoo, which was created when the Gainesville Community Circus had a fire and needed a place to house animals.

Schmitz has promoted all animals in the zoo for the last 40 years and worked out most of the details with the Fort Worth Zoo for the breeding loan.

"In a breeding agreement between zoos — if it's successful and you have a baby, it's half yours and half theirs," Schmitz said. "If it lives and is healthy, one of them gives the other the first choice of buying the other out."

Gerry II is an Asian elephant named in honor of Gerry Murrel, who started the Gainesville Community Circus in her back yard. Gerry II is now 15 years old. She came to the Gainesville zoo when she was 2 1/2-years-old and was bought for $3,500.

"We had to feed her with a bottle for six or eight months," Schmitz recalled.

Asian elephants are the most expensive and Schmitz said they are tamer than African elephants with a different temperament altogether.

"During all the centuries, African elephants have been slaughtered. In India it's just the opposite — they are friends to humans," he said. "It's something that's born in them."

Brown said Gerry II's breeding will be taken "slow and carefully. She's really a nice animal, I was up there on a Sunday (March 3) to see her," he said. "She's sure a nice animal and appears to be well-mannered and well-trained."

The Fort Worth Zoo has one African bull elephant, which is currently housed in an exhibit built in 1923. Brown said zoo officials requested the bond election partly because their elephant facilities needed updating and upgrading.

The zoo is acquiring Buke, an 18-year-old bull Indian elephant owned by Bucky Steele of Seagoville, as the first male at their breeding facility.

Brown said Steele has had problems with Buke when he was in "musth" — a period in which some male elephants become hard to manage — and at one point considered destroying him.

Musth is a period some male elephants never experience, while some have it two or three times a year. It may last from a few days to months. Trainers have no way of telling when it will occur. They go out to the animal one day, and he is uncontrollable, Brown said.

"If he (Steele) donates his animal to the Fort Worth Zoo, we'll make it our breeding animal," he said.

The new elephant facilities at the Fort Worth Zoo are designed to handle an elephant at any time, including during musth, Brown said.

"A big part of the expense is the hydraulically-operated doors that will enable us to move an elephant like a lion, from room to room, so we can clean and put out new food," he said.

Sunshine State

MARY ANNE RHYNE

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — Florida's crystal-blue water, miles of sandy, palm-studded shores and a fantasy kingdom where Mickey Mouse reigns beckon honeymooners, retirees and families.

Nearly 800 people a day succumb permanently, moving to the nation's sixth-largest state.

But few anticipate the traffic jams, organized crime and drugs or shrinking beaches that are part of the darker side of the Sunshine State.

Floridians are learning that popularity has its price, and they are considering ways to avoid becoming a paradise lost. Each day those 788 new residents generate the need for another 111,106 gallons of water, two more police officers, two more miles of highway, two new teachers and 38 more people who are eligible for Medicaid.

Lawmakers predict that "growth management" will be the hottest topic of the legislative session that begins a week from Tuesday.

Past efforts to plan for growth have failed. Florida was the last state to pass comprehensive planning and zoning laws.

Legislative leaders say this year is different because developers and promoters who made Florida a boom state realize the drawbacks of unrestrained growth.

"The state of Florida is the most attractive state in the country to live in," said Mike Taggart, executive director of the Florida Homebuilders Association. "It puts demands on our state that now are starting to really surface."

Those growth-related problems include brush fires this year that raged in residential developments where firefighters contend there was inadequate fire protection.

There are fears that beachfront high-rises would not withstand a hurricane. The state has not had a major hurricane since 1965, when Hurricane Betsy killed 13 people and destroyed $139 million in property.

Last year the Legislature enacted laws to protect wetlands by giving the state more power over swamps, marshes and flood plain development. It also is working to save the Everglades and purchase miles of fragile coastline.

Gov. Bob Graham said one of the problems is that Florida is a "mistress state," where people go to make their fortune before returning home to raise future generations. He said many residents don't feel they have a stake in Florida's future.

"The public doesn't know what to do about it," said Charlie Reed, Graham's chief of staff. "They want to preserve what they have and preserve what they have a right to — clean water, the right to go to the beach on the weekend."

Graham has sent a general plan for growth to the Legislature, where House Majority Leader Jon Mills and Senate President Harry Johnston are advocating similar plans. All three are Democrats.

One goal of Graham's plan is to funnel new residents away from the fragile coastal beaches; another is to build a high-speed railroad linking the tourist centers of Orlando, Miami and Tampa.

Mills' bill would put stricter regulations on coastal construction and give citizens more ability to challenge developments in court.

One of the biggest questions will be who pays the bill for coping with growth and whether the state can force local governments to control growth.

For a state whose economy rests on tourism, those are difficult questions. Legislators say tourists are likely to have to pay more in the future for services they use, but they don't believe the higher cost would slow tourism or growth.

Mills estimates that by the year 2000, Florida will have a $46 billion backlog of needs for water, sewer and roads. Two-thirds of that backlog already exists, he said.

"The longer we wait to start solving things, the more expensive the backlog gets and the less able we will be to avoid mistakes in the future," Mills said.

"Those of us who live here have a legitimate obligation to deal with the backlog," he said. "The new people coming in have a legitimate obligation to pay for a portion of it."

The Florida Homebuilders Association has proposed a 1 cent increase in the state sales tax to pay for part of the backlog.

State budget officials say it would be impossible to put a price tag on the growth management proposals. Graham said he wants lawmakers to assess new industries for some of the increased costs they cause in such areas as road and sewer construction.

Environmental lobbyist David Gluckman is one of those who believes part of the solution is preventing the state from spending millions each year encouraging tourism and growth.

A new danger

Tiny gravestones in old cemeteries are a testament to the ravages of childhood diseases — diphtheria, whooping cough, tetanus — in years past. Those diseases took their toll before vaccines rendered the diseases preventable.

Now there's a new threat — lack of the vaccine.

Why a shortage? Because two out of three of the U.S. manufacturers of the diphtheria, whooping cough and tetanus vaccine have been forced out of production by court settlements and the cost of insurance.

This is not a riskless vaccine, the statistics testify. One in 6,000 infants has a severe reaction to the injection and some suffer brain damage. Others die.

Juries listening to the harrowing experiences of parents who took a perfectly healthy child in for a shot and watched the baby turn into a tortured creature understandably have awarded huge damage settlements to the parents. A private group of concerned parents also lobbied hard in Washington to bring the dangers of the vaccine to the public attention — and to crusade for compensation for the victims.

The juries and the lobby are well-meaning. But the unintended result of their efforts has been disastrous — an increased threat of children coming down with whooping cough, which strangles them and does not respond to antibiotic treatment. Yet in some instances, the vaccine can be just as deadly — if not more so — than the diseases it's supposed to prevent.

Doctors who have a short supply of the vaccine now are rationing it out to infants and withholding it from toddlers. Disease officials say an epidemic of whooping cough could break out in schools this year.

What's the answer? Well, the public must provide protection for the drug companies to resume production. Parents must be better warned of the potential dangers of vaccine injections. Judges should be cautioned about the results of runaway settlements. And research for a better vaccine certainly should continue.

Children need protection against dread diseases — and from well-intentioned protectors. The answer to severe reactions to vaccines is not to stop production. That only ensures that other children will suffer and, perhaps, die.

Court alternative

Something called a dispute resolution center opened this week in the District of Columbia. Its mission is to provide expeditious and economical facilities for settling arguments such as those that arise between landlords and tenants, and the solving of problems relating to family disputes and consumer complaints.

This is not the first such center; there are more than 200 scattered around the country. And its establishment may not at first glance seem like earth-shattering news, but no less a judge of the nation's court systems than Chief Justice Warren Burger thinks the District of Columbia's center may be an historic turning point, or a model for the development of similar projects elsewhere.

Justice Burger has long been a constructive critic of America's judicial machinery. He may not be a literal believer in the adage that justice delayed is justice denied, but he has frequently complained that court cases cost too much and take too long.

Consequently, he is interested in the newest dispute center. It will be operated by 30 volunteers who will donate a day a week to the task of settling arguments. They will include social workers and former government employees, and citizens trained in the law and medicine. All will have had experience in mediation techniques.

The goal is to provide speedier and less expensive alternatives to trials. Chief Justice Burger expressed his enthusiasm for the District's unique center by saying it could "point the way" for other efforts. His endorsement should contribute much to the success of the important experiment.

Another View:

Exerting 'leverage'

The continuing abuse of blacks in South Africa by the white-minority government calls for much tougher action by the United States than we have taken so far.

It's not that South Africa is some client-state of ours for which we are responsible, but America's leverage — however strong it is — must be exerted to demonstrate that we don't condone whites killing blacks for throwing stones.

Maybe it isn't even plural "stones" but rather singular "stone." A police officer in charge of the force that shot into a crowd and killed 19 blacks at Uitenhage said only one stone was thrown by one demonstrator before police opened fire. The official government report said firebombs and other deadly missiles had been thrown first, but the lieutenant said no.

This is being dismissed by some as an aberration in which police violated government policy. But, even if that were true, police and everybody else in a society like South Africa's take their cue from the government, and they believe what that government does, not what it says. What it does is treat blacks, who are in the overwhelming majority, as second-, third-, or fourth-class citizens.

Is breaking diplomatic relations with South Africa too harsh — and ineffective? Would it have been too harsh and ineffective to have broken diplomatic relations with Nazi Germany prior to World War II?

We are talking here about that kind of Super Race society. If we won't lead in exerting moral force, especially in the Western World, who will?

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Friday, April 12, the 102nd day of 1985. There are 263 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On April 12, 1945, the 32nd president of the United States, Franklin Delano Roosevelt, died of a cerebral hemorrhage in Warm Springs, Ga., at the age of 63, just three months after beginning an unprecedented fourth term in office. Vice President Harry S. Truman became the nation's 33rd chief executive.

On this date:

In 1606, England adopted the Union Jack as its flag.

Thought for today: "More than an end to war, we want an end to the beginnings of all wars." — Franklin D. Roosevelt (1882-1945) in remarks prepared for broadcast April 13, 1945, but never delivered.

'Mad Dog' waging personal war

WASHINGTON — David Sullivan is a former CIA analyst whose friends call him "Mad Dog." He's a pivotal behind-the-scenes power in the fight over the MX missile and U.S.-Soviet arms control negotiations.

The story of Sullivan's rise to influence is a case history of the way things work in Washington. Educated at Harvard, Sullivan served in Marine Corps combat intelligence in Vietnam and eventually wound up in one of the CIA's most sensitive jobs: analyzing Soviet strategy and nuclear force modernization. He soon discovered that the Soviets were violating SALT I and other treaties with the United States.

But when Sullivan presented his evidence, he was stonewalled by agency higher-ups. This was during the Carter administration, which didn't want evidence of Soviet violations of SALT I endangering President Carter's attempts to negotiate the SALT II agreement.

Frustrated, Sullivan committed bureaucratic hara-kiri: He delivered his report on Soviet violations to a sympathetic congressional aide, Richard Perle. This violated the First Commandment of bureaucratic government: Thou shalt not go out of channels. Realizing his days in the CIA were numbered, Sullivan quit and went to work for Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas. He wrote numerous articles on Soviet duplicity for various publications.

When Ronald Reagan became president, Sullivan was given a top post at the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency. His friend, Richard Perle, became a high official at the Pentagon.

Sullivan's "mad dog" pursuit of Soviet violations guaranteed that his tenure at the disarmament agency would be brief. Frustrated once more, he left for the more sympathetic environment of Capitol Hill, becoming a senior policy adviser to four conservative GOP senators, Steve Symms and James McClure of Idaho, and Jesse Helms and John East of North Carolina.

In this capacity, Sullivan has ghosted a series of letters from the Fearsome Four to their Senate colleagues, President Reagan, Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger and CIA Director William Casey, reminding them of Kremlin perfidy. A recent campaign, for example, tried to get the Pentagon and the CIA to acknowledge that the Soviets now have more than 8,500 ICBM nuclear warheads, instead of the 6,500 they profess to have.

Surprisingly, the Reagan administration, while fulminating about the "Evil Empire," was reluctant to reveal information it had on Soviet arms-treaty violations. The White House finally did so in a secret report early last year — after Symms (with Sullivan at his elbow) had done some high-powered prodding.

Sullivan, the consummate behind-the-scenes operator, has become an irascible and influential monkey wrench in the machinery of U.S.-Soviet arms-control negotiations. It's not just because he now has some committed ideological hardliners backing him; it's because his early warnings on Soviet weapon development turned out to be dead accurate.

Even liberal critics concede that Sullivan is "brilliant" and an opponent to be reckoned with, though they claim — with some justice — that he occasionally stretches the facts to make a polemical point.

Sullivan's latest weapon is a book that will be published soon, "Soviet Military Supremacy: The Untold Facts About the New Danger to America." The co-author is another conservative who served in the trenches of Capitol Hill, Quentin Cromwell.

We've seen an advance copy, and given the amount of intelligence information revealed in the book, it's surprising that the CIA cleared it for release. Clearly, the book will add even more clout to the ideas and recommendations of the ex-Marine whose anti-Soviet warnings were once spurned by the CIA.

Jackson's boycott gun backfired

WASHINGTON — The Rev. Jesse Jackson's selection of the Westinghouse Electric Corp. as a boycott target when he joined anti-apartheid demonstrations last month in front of the South African Embassy has raised troublesome questions.

Westinghouse's modest interests in South Africa were not only exaggerated in Jackson's statement, but one outright error confused the American company with a totally separate British-owned company of the same name. Publicly, Westinghouse spokesmen expressed surprise. What they expressed only privately was the connection they made with efforts by Jackson's half-brother, Chicago multimillionaire businessman Noah Robinson, to become a Westinghouse subcontractor on a mammoth public works project.

Four months earlier, Robinson had written a Westinghouse executive "to get right ... for your own sake." He told us this was "absolutely not" meant as a threat. Both Robinson and Jackson denied to us knowledge of the other's activities. That would make Westinghouse the pivot in an extraordinary coincidence.

Yet it remains unclear why Jackson, picketing March 11 with two sons in front of the South African Embassy 17 weeks after the demonstrations began, selected Westinghouse. The event, coincidental or otherwise, demonstrates the need for great care when Jesse Jackson picks up his boycott gun.

That was true in 1981 when the civil rights leader conducted his boycott against Coca-Cola. Shortly after the company signed a "moral covenant" with Jackson to get more involved with the black community, Robinson became Coca-Cola's first black distributor. He said the company learned of his relationship with Jackson only after the deal was signed, a claim confirmed by Coke.

The coveted distributorship set Robinson off on an entrepreneurial success story, including ownership of a cement contracting firm. When the $100 million-plus "People Mover" rapid transit system to Chicago's O'Hare Airport opened for bids, he sent an upbeat letter Oct. 18 to Westinghouse Vice President Edward Gordon seeking the cement subcontract. "There is no plausible reason," he wrote, why his firm "should be excluded."

Robinson's tone was different in his second letter Nov. 12 ("Dear Mr. Gordon": "I tried to tell you in my 10/18/84 note, in Chicago, picking just anybody 'Black' of your choice ain't going to cut it ... Chicago Blacks are too politically sophisticated to go for the okay dokey. Now Westinghouse is the guy in the middle. You've got time to get right. I'm suggesting you do so for your own sake.")

On Nov. 18, the Chicago Sun-Times linked one of Westinghouse's competitors for the People Mover business, Urban Transportation Development Corp. (UTDC) of Toronto, with Robinson. UTDC was quoted as telling city officials it probably would hire Robinson's firm if it won the contract.

Four months later, as the March 29 People Mover bid-opening neared, Jackson joined the 17-week-old South African protest with a statement attacking Westinghouse that should have been more carefully researched. A lapsed Westinghouse negotiation to build a coal gasification plant there has not been resumed as Jackson claimed; alleged military aid to Pretoria would violate U.S. law.

A reference to the "Westinghouse Rail Group" equipping South Africa's segregated railroads really meant Westinghouse Bellamie Ltd. South Africa, a subsidiary of Britain's Hawker Siddeley Group and no kin to the American company. Business of the American Westinghouse in South Africa consists of one subsidiary employing 105 people, service contracts for the country's nuclear power system and an 11-person sales office.

Jackson's March 11 statement noted that Westinghouse and a French firm called Matra were seeking the contract in Chicago ("one of this nation's most heavily black urban communities") and that both were doing business in South Africa. He did not mention the third bidder, UTDC (which, oddly, is a distant corporate relative of Westinghouse Bellamie).

"I have no knowledge of it whatsoever," Jackson told us when asked about his brother's contract effort. He said he was seeking to "move from moralizing (about South Africa) to something concrete." Robinson told us he knew nothing about Westinghouse in South Africa ("I'm a businessman") and learned about his brother's activity only when Jackson told him of our call.

Could this be coincidence, as Robinson claimed with the Coca-Cola distributorship? Westinghouse's Gordon would not return our calls, but company officials privately reject the pure-coincidence theory. When a leader with Jesse Jackson's moral muzzle velocity aims his boycott gun, any doubt about motives raises troubling questions that could harm rather than advance black interests.

CHARLEY REESE

Classroom child abuse preventable

Writer Ayn Rand once related a tale of people in the Middle Ages who made a business of kidnapping children, deforming them, and then selling them to people who were amused by deformed servants.

If I tell you that a similar process is taking place in some American public schools, you surely will think I am exaggerating. It sounds preposterous. Besides, you remember how public schools were when you attended them.

Let me say that my children are in public schools and that I do not intend to imply that some of the horrors taking place in some classrooms are taking place in all classrooms. But they do occur in some.

For example, in Maryland, a teacher asked a class to decide which of their classmates they disliked most, to write down their reasons for disliking that person, and then read the papers aloud in the classroom. The child who had been selected quite naturally was demolished to tears.

Can you imagine your child being forced to sit in a classroom and listen to a public recitation of his or her faults by the other children? It sounds more like a re-education camp in Cambodia than an affluent suburban public school.

It happened, and it's part of the quackery that has invaded public education, much of it financed by the federal government and mostly ignored by journalists some of whom seem to regard educators as members of a priesthood not to be questioned.

S.I. Hayakawa, an educator and one of few genuine intellectuals ever to serve in the U.S. Senate, put the problem this way: "An educational heresy has flourished, a heresy that rejects the idea of education as the acquisition of knowledge and skills ... The heresy of which I speak regards the fundamental task in education as therapy."

Psychology and psychiatry are legitimate fields of study, but they are still in an early stage. A lot is not known. There are many theories, many disagreements and many charlatans. Anyone can get a four-year degree in psychology. But we're not talking about seeking competent help from a qualified professional. We are talking about children in a public classroom receiving "therapy" from a teacher who is neither qualified, nor authorized to practice medicine and who probably does not even know that that is what she is doing.

A lot of this quackery comes in value-clarification courses, in social sciences or under the guise of sex or health education. Its purpose is not to impart knowledge but to change behavior, uproot the child's traditional values, and replace them with ethical relativism.

Every responsible parent should look into this subject. As a beginning, I suggest you obtain a copy of the book, "Child Abuse in the Classroom." It's available from Pere Marquette Press, P.O. Box 495, Alton, Ill. 62002. The book is an edited transcript of testimony given before the U.S. Department of Education in a series of public hearings prior to establishing rules to enforce the Protection of Pupil Rights Amendment. The parents are a cross-section of people. You may not agree with some of them. I didn't. But you will certainly get an overview of the problem with experimental education programs.

The federal law was sponsored by Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, and prohibits children from being subjected to psychological or psychiatric examination, testing or treatment which reveals information about personal affairs and beliefs of the child or his parents without prior written consent of the parent. It further says that parents have an absolute right to inspect all instructional material, including teachers' manuals, films, tapes or other material in any program which is used in connection with any research or experimentation or project to explore or develop new or unproven teaching methods.

In short, it protects the privacy of the child and parents and gives parents a legal standing to prevent their child from being used as a guinea pig or lab rat.

Your children and your public school system belong to you, but if you fail to exercise oversight, then others will use them both for their own purposes. It was V.I. Lenin who boasted, "Give me four years to teach your children and the seed I have sown will never be uprooted."

BIBLE VERSE

If we confess our sins, he is faithful and righteous to forgive us our sins, and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness. 1 John 1:9

The 145-foot topsail schooner Californian, modeled after the 19th century revenue cutter C.W. Lawrence, heads for the open sea. The California Legislature has designated the Californian as the state's official tall ship ambassador.

Sailing ship

Silhouetted against the pre-dawn sky off the coast of Santa Catalina Island, four young cadets cranked the windlass of the 145-foot topsail schooner Californian. They had already stripped away their heavy jackets and worked up a sweat as they pumped feverishly to raise the anchor.

"Come on, get mad at it," crew member Ted Witten shouted with mock severity. "Bend your backs."

Standing at the helm, Capt. Bill Curry oversaw operations as his wife, Helen, the ship's bosun, directed the raising of the port anchor. "Slack off on your hawse. Take up on your burden," she shouted as the anchor slowly made its way out of the water.

With only a silver of sun sitting on the horizon, First Mate John (Sugar) Flanagan directed other cadets raising the mainsail. "Smartly on that halyard," he shouted. "Take up your sheets there."

When all were ready, Flanagan ordered, "Haul away. Heave, heave, heave," as the mainsail inched its way up the mast.

The Californian, an eight-month-old vessel modeled after the 19th Century revenue cutter C.W. Lawrence, was under way. A sleek seductress of a sailing ship, it was completing an 11-day training mission to give cadets what Curry calls "a unique, challenging experience."

Two weeks ago, most of the 12 cadets aboard the Californian had no idea what the myriad lines aboard a sailing vessel were. Only after coming aboard did they learn that those various strands of what appeared to be ropes could be lines, halyards, sheets, hawse, burden.

But by the time they headed into Dana Point Harbor, 60 miles south along the coast from here at the end of their cruise, they could throw around those terms with all the accuracy and apparent experience of old salts.

"I started from zero," said Greg Meiners, 17, a high school senior. "Now I can name all the lines on the boat, and I know what they do. With a little practice, I think I could handle a small sailboat now."

The Californian and its cruises are the realization of a dream for the 1,100-member Nautical Heritage Society in Dana Point. Society members raised the $1.25 million it cost to build the ship, the only sail training vessel operating on the West Coast.

California's Legislature has designated the schooner as the state's official tall ship ambassador, and the Californian's cadet program is open to any state resident between the ages of 16 and 21.

Cadets were issued a thick binder filled with information on the ship, the basics of seamanship, navigation, the history of the Lawrence, which patrolled San Francisco Bay for the U.S. Revenue Marine Service — forerunner of the Coast Guard — during the California Gold Rush. She sank in a storm off San Francisco in 1851.

Each day cadets were tested on their knowledge of basic seamanship, navigation, knot tying, history. But the cruise taught cadets as much about themselves as about the sea.

"We have people aboard who are shy, quiet," Curry said. "They developed confidence. They do everything aboard the ship, and they're taught everything a crew member would be taught."

The cruise also teaches cadets "to work together and live with a group of people who were initially strangers," said Christopher Gann, 23, a crew member.

On this mission, cadets slept in the saloon — not the booze-serving kind, but the ship's main cabin — in hammocks, with only a few feet of clearance beneath the overhead. Their wake-up call could come as early as 5 a.m., and they would sit dazed and bleary-eyed for up to 20 minutes while waiting to get into the head.

Several became intimate with the ship's rail during the first few days at sea, leaning over the side to "feed the sharks," as their queasy stomachs rebelled against a meal's intrusion. Showers were a luxury unknown on board, and standing night watch in temperatures that sometimes dipped into the 30s sorely tested their long underwear and down jackets.

Yet, any one of the cadets who completed the 11-day training mission would have jumped at the opportunity to repeat the experience. Immediately.

"I'd just like to stay on the boat longer," said Liz Lewis, 17, as the Californian headed into Dana Point Harbor recently at the end of a cruise. "I'd like to learn a lot more."

"I did things like steer the ship that I never dreamed of doing before," said Joanne Curtiss, 17. "And I never knew how much strength it took to haul in a line."

"When I got on this boat, I was terrified of boats and water," said Sioux Pavkovich, 17. "Now I love it, and I want to sail. I'd go back tomorrow. I wish I could stow away."

For James Clarkson, 16, the cruise was "an incredible experience. It taught me how to take responsibility for everything."

Clarkson, who had no previous sailing experience, said the mission taught him how to get along with people a lot better. "I'm usually shy," he said. "Now I find I'm really coming out...maybe a bit too strong. We all do have to work together."

The cadets had nothing but compliments for the Californian's eight-member professional crew, whose patience and love for sailing set an example that made the cadets work all the harder on board.

Cadets row to the ship Californian, which was anchored in the harbor at Santa Catalina Island. The schooner is a training ship for students age 16-21 to learn the basics of seamanship and navigation.

Records set to tumble in Tall City Relays

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

The annual Tall City Relays is primed for its first day-light running at Memorial Stadium Saturday with anticipation soaring high for a record breaking assault.

The Tall City run will also have its first division for girls, making this the most attractive offering the meet has produced.

The meet has always been held on a Friday night, but due to the new eight-hour rule, the event has been moved to Saturday morning and afternoon with field events beginning at 9:45 a.m. and running finals at 1:30 p.m. Running prelims will be staged at 10 a.m.

Memorial Stadium added an all-weather track last year and nine of 15 records were broken on the track's debut. No less than seven, maybe eight, records appear to be in jeopardy Saturday if the weather cooperates. There will also be 15 new records added to the girls since they are making their debut. It should be a dandy show.

To add to the suspense, this is the last meet for those involved before next weekend's District 4-5A meet in Abilene where Region 1 berths can be earned. So teams will be pulling out their "sneak attacks" in efforts to find a few more points.

In the boys division. When both teams have been at full strength this year, there has been no more than one or two points separating them. Toss in Midland High, San Angelo, Odessa High and Big Spring and you have the makings of a mini-4A gathering.

Permian is the heavy favorite to win the girls division, owning a lot of depth. That field will have the same teams with the exception of San Angelo, whose girls have their own track meet this weekend.

Here is a breakdown of boys records that could fall Saturday:
—Shot Put: Midland High's Darrell Davis threw 63-feet-3 1/2 at Austin last weekend. The TC record is 61-8, so Davis has an excellent chance at putting his name on that record.
—Long Jump: TC record is 23-

6 1/2 and San Angelo's Willie Blake has been around that mark all year with a best coming two weeks ago in San Angelo with a 23-10 1/2.

—3200: Lee sophomore Mike Garza is on a tear in this event, running a 9:14 last week and breaking Lee's school record by seven seconds. The TC record of 9:24.63 is well within Garza's grasp.

—110 Hurdles: Permian's Gerry Guster is in a class by himself. He has a 13.6 this year, but has been nursing a bad knee for two weeks. Still, the TC record of 13.93 is ready to fall with Midland High's Randy Simmons and

Homer spills slumping Angels, 9-4

From Staff Reports

EL PASO — The road blues continued for the Midland Angels Thursday at Dudley Stadium as the Diablos took their third straight Texas League contest from the slumping Angels, 9-4.

El Paso first baseman Joey Meyer set the stage for the rout when he slugged a three-run homer in the first inning over the left-centerfield fence off starter and loser Bryan Price (0-1). It was Meyer's second home run off Angel pitching. Price lasted four innings before he was relieved by Ed Delzer in the fifth. Delzer was the most effective of three Midland pitchers, yielding just one hit in two and a third innings. Tom Bryden came on in the seventh and gave up four more runs — two unearned — in an error-filled eighth inning.

THE ANGELS scored three times in their half of the fourth when centerfielder Devon White singled, stole second and came home on third baseman Billie Merrifield's double. Rightfielder Reggie Montgomery then slugged his first homer of the season to score Merrifield.

Billy Joe Robidoux, who has been murder on Midland pitching in this series, had three more hits for the Diablos Thursday, including two doubles, in four trips to the plate. Robidoux's double in the eighth inning brought home two El Paso runs.

Gorman Thomas a hit in Seattle

Associated Press

Seattle's Gorman Thomas knows how it feels to be down. So he wasn't about to show up the Oakland A's, even if it meant passing up a chance to tie a hallowed major-league record.

Thomas, a veteran slugger who hit just one home run in 1984 while missing most of the season with a torn rotator cuff, had already blasted three home runs, including a grand slam, when he came to the plate in the seventh inning Thursday night with the Mariners leading 13-6.

And, in his final at-bat with a chance to tie the major-league record of four home runs in a game, Thomas walked on a 3-2 pitch.

"I would have liked to hit four home runs, but there is no way I was going to swing at a 3-0 pitch or even a 3-1 pitch," said Thomas, who also walked in the first. "Then you're showing someone up. In this game you try not to embarrass yourself or anyone else."

Thomas wound up with six runs batted in as Seattle belted seven homers and won 14-6.

Earlier, when Thomas slammed his third home run, the fans at the Kingdome kept standing and applauding hoping for a wave. But Thomas stayed in the dugout.

"It's not that I don't appreciate the fans' cheers, I do," he said. "But if I come out of the dugout, it could be interpreted as rubbing it in someone's face."

DESPITE HIS production, Thomas was not ready to say that his comeback is complete.

"This is only one night. Come August you can judge my shoulder and my season," said Thomas, who led the AL with 45 home runs in 1979 and tied for the league lead with 39 homers in 1982, both for Milwaukee.

Yet Seattle Manager Chuck Cottier, who did not know during spring training whether Thomas' shoulder surgery would allow him to win a job as the team's designated hitter, was thrilled.

"It's unbelievable," Cottier said. "How many players hit three home runs in a game, let alone coming off a nasty, nasty surgery?"

"I didn't expect to see him in spring training, and the first day he shows up and takes 200 swings," Cottier said.

Thomas belted his first home run leading off the third against Curt Young, 0-1, to give Seattle a 7-0 lead. In the fourth, he connected for his grand slam off reliever Jeff Kaiser to make it 11-2. Thomas finished the first three-homer game of his career by belting a 3-2 pitch by Kaiser into the center-field bleachers leading off the sixth.

Phil Bradley, Al Cowens, Jim Presley and Dave Henderson also homered for Seattle. The seven home runs were one short of the major league record shared by four teams and tied the American League night game record.

Dave Kingman and Donnie Hill homered for Oakland off winner Mike Morgan, 1-0. Kingman, who homered in the fifth, missed another in the sixth when his long drive headed for the seats hit a speaker wire.

AL Roundup

Tigers 11, Indians 10
Detroit, which got off to a 35-5 start last year and went on to win the World Series, completed a season-opening, three-game sweep of Cleveland when reliever Dave Von Ohlen walked three batters in the bottom of the 10th.

Shortstop Julio Franco's error allowed Detroit rookie Chris Pittaro to reach base to lead off the 10th. Pittaro took second on a sacrifice, and Von Ohlen intentionally walked Alan Trammell. Kirk Gibson's fly ball moved Pittaro to third.

Von Ohlen intentionally walked Lance Parrish to load the bases and walked Tom Brookens on a 3-1 pitch to force in the winning run at Tiger Stadium.

Willie Hernandez, last year's Cy Young Award winner, pitched 3 2/3 innings for the victory.

Detroit's Larry Herndon sent the game into extra innings with an RBI single in the ninth.

Trammell belted a three-run homer and Lou Whitaker had a solo shot during a five-run second inning.

Blue Jays 4, Royals 3
In Kansas City, George Bell blasted a mammoth home run on Royal reliever Dan Quisenberry's first pitch of the 10th inning to give Toronto its triumph.

For the second straight night, Blue Jays reliever Bill Caudill got the victory. He pitched 1 2/3 hitless innings before J. Acker took over in the 10th and got a save.

On Wednesday night, Caudill — acquired from Oakland and given a $9-million contract by Toronto to shore up a beleaguered bullpen — went 2 1/3 innings for the victory as Toronto beat Kansas City 1-0 in 10 innings.

The Royals had made it 3-3 in the eighth against Gary Lavelle on a single by Hal McRae and a double by Steve Balboni.

Red Sox 6, Yankees 4
Dwight Evans clubbed a two-run homer and had a sacrifice fly to help Boston complete a season-opening, three-game sweep of New York.

Roger Clemens pitched six innings for the victory and Bob Stanley finished up for a save. Dennis Rasmussen took the loss.

The triumph marked the first time since 1973 that the Red Sox have won their first three games of a season. The Yankees fell to 0-3 for the first time in 10 years despite a 4-for-4 performance by Dave Winfield, who homered in the sixth.

Brewers 8, White Sox 1
Ray Burris made a successful debut for Milwaukee, holding Chicago to five hits. The right-hander, acquired in a trade that sent Don Sutton to Oakland, was in command the entire way.

The host Brewers took control early, pouncing on former San Diego Padre Tim Lollar for three runs in the first inning. Paul Molitor and Robin Yount led off with singles and both scored on Mark Brouhard's double. Paul Householder then doubled home Brouhard.

McEnroe manhandled in WCT quarterfinals

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

DALLAS — On the day Sweden's Joakim Nystrom shot the lowest golf round in his life, he also whipped defending Buick WCT Finals champion John McEnroe, the world's top-ranked tennis player, in straight sets.

"It was the greatest victory of my career, in tennis that is," said a stunned Nystrom. "My baby being born was another."

"I played my best match. I also played golf earlier and shot 92. It was my best score there also."

The 22-year-old Nystrom knocked off the 26-year-old four-times WCT Finals king 6-4, 7-6, and 6-3 Thursday night and McEnroe said "I felt like my tennis shoes were glued to the floor."

McEnroe had made the finals in the tournament the last six years. "I felt flat," said McEnroe. "But Nystrom is a good player who makes you work. You have to be on top of your game. I played bad."

Nystrom, the world's 11th ranked player and 10th seeded here, will meet America's Tim Mayotte in a Saturday semifinal match.

Mayotte, the tournament's 11th seed, made surprisingly quick work of the favored Mats Wilander, fourth seeded and No. 4 ranked in the world, 6-3, 6-1, and 7-6.

His serve-and-volley game devastated the Swede, who had beaten him twice previously.

"It was the best match I ever played," said Mayotte. "I served well, and had very few errors volleying. I just didn't let him get it together."

Wilander admitted he was dazzled by Mayotte's serve.

"I just couldn't read it," Wilander said.

Mayotte defeated Andres Gomez of Ecuador in five sets on Tuesday night.

Tonight's quarterfinal matches feature 19-year-old Stefan Edberg, who upset his Swedish Davis Cup doubles partner Anders Jarryd in five sets, meeting No. 2 seeded Ivan Lendl of Czechoslovakia.

In the other match, America's 17-year-old Aaron Krickstein, who knocked off Eliot Teltscher in five sets, goes against No. 2 seeded Jimmy Connors, who has all but recovered from back trouble which forced him to default in Chicago last week.

The survivors will play each other in the semifinals on Saturday.

Nystrom is one of five Swedes who started out in the tournament but still not good enough to play singles on their Davis Cup team which beat the United States in 1984.

Nystrom said, "I surprised myself. I had lost to McEnroe 6-4, 6-2 the only time I played him."

"I just wanted to come out and hope to play a good match. After I won the first set, I knew I had a good chance to beat him."

Asked when he knew he had it, Nystrom laughed. "When it was 40-love in the last game," he said.

Hallberg's topper has him in the lead

By THOMAS M. STINSON

AUGUSTA, Ga. — First, all about Gary Hallberg's hat.

"There's no brand on it," he said. "It's an Indiana Jones. I guess. A fedora."

Why does he wear it?

"Eye contact," he said. The snap brim shades out much of the gallery, the distractions, the familiar faces that would mean he'd have to stop, walk to the rope, shake hands and postpone thinking about his next shot.

"Another reason," he said, "it's different. I don't want to be a clone."

Well, is it effective?

"Look at me, sitting up here talking to all you people," he said to a sea of notebooks late Thursday afternoon. "And I was just down with Brent Musberger, you know."

No clone he, Gary Hallberg wakes up Friday morning leading the 49th Masters. He and his hat played the final six holes of the first round 3 under par, finishing with a 4 under 68. While this provided him no particular breathing room from the field — 11 players open the second round within three strokes of him. Hallberg removed his hat late in the day to display his personal glee.

The last time he had led a major championship was in 1976, when he paced the U.S. Open for nine holes at Atlanta Athletic Club, when he was 17. This is a little different. Said Hallberg, "I feel like I'm just starting my career now."

'Start from scratch' says Oilers Herzeg

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Oilers General Manager Ladd Herzeg says National Football League Commissioner Pete Rozelle should void the Oilers' trade that gave Minnesota Houston's No. 1 draft choice and the inside track on University of Miami quarterback Bernie Kosar.

Herzeg says Rozelle also should block a deal that gave the Cleveland Browns the Buffalo Bills' top pick in the NFL supplemental player draft, which could result in the Browns getting the rights to Kosar.

"Then tell everybody that Bernie Kosar will be in the April 30 draft and let everybody start from scratch," Herzeg said Thursday. "To me, that would be the best way to clear up the murky water."

Kosar has said he will graduate computer and no article of haberdashery that is at the heart of Hallberg's emergence. He started consulting Florida physics professor Ralph Malone just three weeks ago before the Tournament Players Championship. Mann matched Hallberg's swing motion against a computer replica of the perfect swing. The findings were profound.

"I was sliding my right hip too much," Hallberg said. "I moved my hip back a little and slid my hands up a little higher. Just those two little things have let me hit the ball well."

His extra distance made a difference immediately. He finished fourth in the TPC Thursday, after an uneven start that included a birdie and bogey in the first two holes. Hallberg turned in 1-under 35 and then tore into the par 5s on the back side, scoring two-putt birdies on both the 465-yard 13th and 500-yard 15th. He then birdied the 17th with a 10-foot putt, pulled away from Tom Watson and Payne Stewart and had the lead all for himself.

"I'm in the slot," he said. "When you're in the slot, you can swing a little harder and the ball will still go straight."

Simple enough. But even though this most tinging day in his career, people just had to keep asking about the hat. Like, as one questioner needed to know, had Harrison Ford called him about wearing the hat he helped make popular again?

"No, I don't think he plays golf, does he?" Hallberg replied. "But I've hit it in a few places where I could have been looking for him, though."

Just not these days.

Herzeg says Kosar should not be included in the supplemental draft because he no longer has college eligibility, forfeiting future collegiate competition when he hired an agent.

Meanwhile, the Oilers, who want to make Texas A&M defensive tackle Ray Childress their top college pick, now are in competition for him with the Houston Gamblers of the rival United States Football League.

Steve Trout made one bad throw, and it cost him a run, but Jose DeLeon's one bad pitch cost him the game.

With two runners aboard in the fourth inning, DeLeon threw a pitch to Chicago's Ron Cey that wandered across the middle of the plate. Cey deposited the ball into the left-field seats to send the Cubs to a 4-1 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates.

"It was a fast ball, the one bad pitch I made the entire game," said DeLeon, who beat the Cubs four times a year ago.

"DeLeon pitched a good game," said Pittsburgh Manager Chuck Tanner. "He made a bad pitch to Cey but Cey could just as easily have popped it up."

Trout, meanwhile, limited the Pirates to three hits in tossing a complete game. His only bad toss was directed toward first base, and the resulting errant toss set up Pittsburgh's only run.

LIKE TROUT, DeLeon had little trouble with the hitters on a day when the wind was blowing out at Chicago's Wrigley Field. All of his troubles came in the fourth inning, when the Cubs scored all their runs.

Gary Matthews opened with a single and went to third when Leon Durham's grounder skipped past third baseman Bill Madlock for an error. After Matthews scored on a wild pitch, Keith Moreland beat out a bunt single and Cey homered.

"I thought he'd pitch me in or jam me," Cey said. "Maybe he made a mistake, but it came out over the plate."

"The weather was ideal," he added. "Usually in April the wind blows in. Two years ago, I lost at least three home runs with the wind blowing in."

Dodgers 4, Astros 3

The Dodgers, who dropped behind 3-0 in the early going, got to Houston starter Bob Knepper for a run in the sixth before erupting in the eighth against reliever Bill Dawley.

Mariano Duncan walked with two outs in the eighth and scored when Ken Landreaux doubled to right. Marshall, who had struck out five times in three games, followed with his first homer of the season.

Carlos Diaz gave up one hit over three innings to pick up the victory in relief of starter Orel Hersheiser. Ken Howell pitched the final two innings for the save.

Mets 2, Cardinals 1

New York, forced into extra innings for the second time in as many games, again won at the expense of ex-Met Neil Allen. After Keith Hernandez singled to open the 11th, Allen came on to face Gary Carter, who won Tuesday's 10-inning affair by belting an Allen pitch into the St. Louis bullpen. On Thursday, Carter singled off the glove of third baseman Art Howe and, when the ball skittered into foul territory, Hernandez chugged into third.

George Foster was walked intentionally to load the bases before Heep was walked on a 9-1 pitch.

The New York comeback ruined a fine outing by St. Louis starter John Tudor, who scattered three hits over nine innings. The only run he allowed was tainted by two errors.

Mets starter Ron Darling spaced four St. Louis hits over seven innings, but the victory went to Roger McDowell, who retired three batters in the top of the 11th in his first major league appearance.

Braves 6, Phillies 3

In addition to Murphy's hitting, Atlanta got a boost from rookie reliever Zane Smith. The left-hander pitched out of a bases-loaded, one-out situation in the fourth inning by getting Jeff Stone to ground into a double play and then pitched three more innings in gaining his first victory. Bruce Sutter earned his first save.

Murphy singled in a run in the first, singled and scored in Atlanta's three-run third, and tagged a two-run homer in the ninth.

John Denny took the loss for Philadelphia.

stopped thus far this season, falling to L.A. again Thursday for a season record of 0-2.

Stars wake up in time for Stanley Cup excitement

Associated Press

After sleepwalking through six months of National Hockey League action, the Minnesota North Stars have awakened just in time.

Minnesota, the preseason favorite to repeat as Norris Division champions, slumped to fourth place with a 25-43-12 record, the worst of any Stanley Cup playoff qualifier. But the Stars appear to have found themselves against first-place St. Louis.

Keith Acton and Willi Pfett scored two goals each and Gilles Meloche made 41 saves to pace the North Stars to a 4-3 victory Thursday night and a 2-0 lead over the Blues. The best-of-five opening round series switches to Bloomington, Minn., on Saturday.

Capitals 2, Islanders 1, OT

Overtime magic seems to have deserted the Islanders, who had won six in a row and 21 of 26 such post-season games entering these playoffs. But Washington took them 4-3 in overtime in Game 1 and Mike Gartner's wraparound goal 83 seconds into the second extra session was the difference Thursday. Lou Franceschetti scored in the first period for the Capitals and Bryan Trottier pulled the visitors even in the third session.

New York goalie Kelly Hrudey, making his playoff debut, and the rest of the Islanders charged referee Don Koharski as soon as Gartner scored, contending Washington's Greg Adams was illegally in the crease. Coach Al Arbour came across the ice and reportedly shoved Koharski, a violation of NHL rules which could lead to a fine.

Flyers 3, Rangers 1

Rookie Todd Bergen scored a pair of goals and goaltender Pelle Lindbergh made 38 saves as host Philadelphia downed the suddenly tough Rangers, whom the Flyers beat seven straight times during the season en route to the NHL's best record. Bergen got the winner at 5:23 of the first period when Brad Marsh's slapshot was deflected to him in the slot and he fired it past New York goalie Glen Hanlon.

Ilkka Sinisalo clinched it for Philly with a 15-foot shot at 17:40. George

Stanley Cup

McPhee had New York's goal 61 seconds into the second period.

Oilers 4, Kings 2

Paul Coffey scored in the first period for defending Stanley Cup champion Edmonton, but the visitors tied it on a second-period tally by Dave Taylor.

The Oilers took charge with their usual quick-striking offense early in the final session. Mark Napier and Mike Krushelnyski scored 42 seconds apart. Napier pounced on a loose puck and slid it into the net and Krushelnyski made it 3-1, converting a pass in front from Wayne Gretzky after some fine corner work by Jari Kurri. Kurri later scored into an empty net, while Doug Smith connected for Los Angeles.

Jets 5, Flames 2

At Winnipeg, Scott Arniel's goal at 9:21 spurred a three-goal third period for the Jets, who carry their lead into the Calgary Saddledome, where they have never won. The winner came after excellent forechecking by the line of Thomas Steen, Perry Turnbull and Arniel, who flipped a backhander over goaltender Reggie Lemelin. Laurie Boschman scored on a breakaway with 1:22 left and Ron Wilson scored into an empty net at 19:13.

Dale Hawerchuk and Doug Small connected 16 seconds apart in the second period for the Jets, who are unbeaten in 15 games — including the regular season. Jets have not lost since March 6.

Al MacInnis and Steve Bozek, both on power plays, scored for the Flames.

Nordiques 3, Sabres 2

Quebec, which swept the Sabres last spring, won at home when Normand Rochefort's routine wrist shot slipped past Buffalo goalie Tom Barasso with 4:51 remaining. The Sabres had tied the game only 41 seconds earlier when Phil Housley beat rookie goalie Mario Gosselin, who was starting on consecutive nights for the first time in the NHL.

The other Quebec goals came on breakaways by Michel Goulet in the first period and Brent Ashton in the second period. Mike Foligno fired a first-period goal for Buffalo.

Canadiens 5, Bruins 3

Chris Chelios sent a blistering slapshot past goalie Doug Keane 20 seconds into the third period on a

Montreal power play to pull the hosts into a 3-3 tie. Chris Nilan won it when he tipped a Bob Gainey shot past the Boston goalie at 15:40, then Nilan assisted on an insurance goal by Guy Carbonneau with 1:39 left. Larry Robinson and Serge Boisvert also scored for the Canadiens. Keith Crowder, Steve Kasper and Rick Middleton collected second-period goals for the Bruins.

Black Hawks 6, Red Wings 1

In the only series with two wipeouts so far, red-hot Chicago stormed to a 3-0 lead in the first period and coasted. The Hawks, who won 9-5 in Game 1, jumped ahead 3-0 on first-period goals by Darryl Sutter, Ken Yaremchuk and Al Secord. Curt Fraser, Keith Brown and Doug Wilson had the other goals for Chicago, while Joe Kocur scored on a breakaway for visiting Detroit.

Bradley, Daniel's 70s share lead at Inamori

RANCHO SANTA FE, Calif. (AP)

While Beth Daniel and Pat Bradley fired 2-under-par 70s to share the lead, most of those who battled the Fairbanks Ranch Country Club course weren't as fortunate in the Kycera Inamori golf tournament.

Only six of the 139 golfers broke par Thursday in the first round of the Ladies Professional Golf Association tournament on the 6,326-yard course, site of the 1984 Olympic Equestrian competition.

Meanwhile, the tournament lost one of its top attractions when two-time defending champion Patty Sheehan withdrew because of illness.

Sheehan, a top-10 finisher seven times this year, and fellow golfer Lauren Howe, ate dinner together

LPGA

Wednesday night at a nearby restaurant. Both ordered the same menu item and later came down with food poisoning. Howe, who also withdrew from the tournament, last played in fall 1983.

Daniel attributed the lack of sub-par rounds to the newness of the course. The LPGA is allowing golfers to improve fairway lies because of the young and fragile condition of the grass.

"Certain sections of the fairways are good, but others are total crab grass. It brings too much luck into it," Daniel said. "In this case, there's no choice because this is a very young course with lots of crab grass."

Angels 4, Twins 3

In Anaheim, Calif., Darrell Miller scored the winning run from third base in the bottom of the 10th inning when slow Bob Boone beat the relay of a potential inning-ending double play.

Miller led off with an infield single against Minnesota reliever Rick Lysander and moved to second on a single by Bobby Grich and took third on a fielder's choice.

Boone hit a grounder that third baseman Gary Gaetti fielded and threw to second for a force, but Tim Lincecum's relay was wide and bounced off first baseman Kent Hrbek's throat, allowing Miller to score.

California, which lost its first two games to Minnesota, scored twice in the ninth off Lysander, 0-1, to force extra innings.

Tom Brunansky and Mickey Hatcher hit solo homers for the Twins, the second of the year for both.

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Save what you can now and you will be ready to take advantage of a golden investment opportunity. Higher-ups want to know what motivates you. What you tell them could affect career progress. Do not sound so independent that others become leery of working with you. Large corporations and small firms alike are looking for team players. As romance deepens, you ponder a major change in lifestyle. Know your own heart. CELEBRITY BIRTHDATES: "Saturday Night Live's" Gary Kroeger, Page Hannah of "Search for Tomorrow," Ricky Schroeder, Lyle Waggoner, Sandra Santiago of "Miami Vice," playwright Samuel Beckett, writer Eudora Welty.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): News from abroad brightens your day. Postpone contacting someone influential. A family emergency could alter your social plans. Suggest an alternative date. Romance begins to heat up. Play it cool.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Keep your wits about you if someone approaches you with a get-rich-quick scheme. Unless you handle a difference of opinion with considerable tact, you could set off a serious confrontation.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Mate or partner has some excellent suggestions. Pay attention. Do not let the miles between you make you forget a true friend. Write frequent letters and plan a short visit.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Saturday employment could be the answer to a sudden cash shortage. Research turns up some useful facts. A personal relationship needs overhauling if it is to continue. Speak candidly.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Consult experts before making any major moves involving joint funds. You need to discuss the matter with partner before making a final commitment. Spend on basics, but skip the luxuries.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): An older person may not be able to live up to his or her promises. Judge not. An emergency could have arisen. Keep expenses down by performing more services for yourself.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Giving your home a new look will boost your spirits. Enlist the help of every family member who can wield a paint brush. Stay calm and reasonable when discussing a sensitive issue.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): If low on funds, create your own entertainment. Old-fashioned parlor games and an in-door picnic appeal to the young-at-heart. Enlist family member's help with the cooking.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Remodeling could be a more practical idea than buying a new home. Get several bids before making your final decision. Your personal relationships are more satisfying than in the past.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Devote as much time as possible to creative pursuits. New ideas keep popping into your head! Be careful not to neglect family life. Domestic matters benefit from your personal attention.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A speculative venture remains much too risky. Protect jointly-owned resources. Singles can further their romantic aims by attending parties. Be good to yourself; set aside more time for relaxation.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Financial aid can be obtained for a college-bound student. Check out every lead. A promotion is in the offing for someone who does extra research or learns new skills. Be patient.

The trademark of most safety plays is that they cost a trick. That is a small price to pay if it is an over-trick at rubber bridge. At duplicate, however, that might be more than you can afford.

North-South were playing five-card major opening bids, hence South's one diamond opening. Specifically in this sequence, when you play five-card majors, the heart rebid is not a true reverse. North bid what he thought he could make.

West led the king of diamonds and declarer ruffed in dummy. In duplicate, you have no problem — you cross to hand with a high trump, ruff another diamond then try to draw trumps. When the suit splits 4-1, you quietly go down three! However, you should get an average score. Most pairs will be in four hearts and, since a 3-2 split is overwhelmingly more likely than a 4-1 division, every declarer should play the same way you did. After

Barbara Bel Geddes to return to 'Dallas' in role of Miss Ellie

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A surprise announcement has thrown a new twist into the behind-the-scenes drama of "Dallas" — the CBS television series that specializes in cliff hangers and whodunits.

Barbara Bel Geddes, who left the series two years ago after suffering a heart attack, will return for the show's eighth season this fall as the poised and distinguished Miss Ellie, a spokesman for Lorimar productions said Thursday.

Lorimar, which produces the top-rated "Dallas" for CBS, hired Donna Reed last year after it seemed clear that Miss Bel Geddes would not return to the show.

"Barbara all along had hoped to come back, and everyone had hoped so, too," said Bob Crutchfield, a Lorimar spokesman. "Donna knew this was a basically temporary situation all along, not knowing going in whether Barbara would recover enough to return."

In the rankings for the official TV season that began last Sept. 24, "Dallas" and ABC's "Dynasty" both have identical 25.0 ratings but "Dallas" is ahead by 2 percent in its share of the viewing audience.

Miss Reed, in an interview published 2½ months ago, indicated that she planned to stay on Dallas, saying "I feel comfortable with (the character of) Miss Ellie, so I hope that comes through."

Miss Bel Geddes, 62, underwent quadruple bypass surgery after suffering a heart attack in March 1983.

She had established the role as matriarch of the vexatious brood of Ewings at the family ranch in Southfork, Texas, when the show premiered on April 2, 1978. She won an Emmy for her role in 1980. Miss Reed returned to television on "Dallas" after about 18 years in semi-retirement. Her last major role on television was Donna Stone of the popular "Donna Reed Show" of the 1960s. She had won an Oscar in 1953 for her role as a Honolulu hooker in the film "From Here to Eternity."

"I was stunned when they told me they wanted me to replace Barbara Bel Geddes," Miss Reed said last September. "I thought it over and decided it was totally right. Miss Ellie was in the right age bracket, and she was the glue that kept everything together. Besides, she remained a farm lady, even though she was terribly rich. Coming from Denison (Tex.), I had always wanted to play a woman of the soil."

LOS ANGELES (AP) — There were no hard feelings between Loretta Young and producer Aaron Spelling after the Academy Award-winning actress withdrew from her role in an ABC movie and projected night-time soap opera "Dark Mansions."

"Loretta Young will not be rendering services because of creative differences over the story," her agent, Norman Brokaw of the William Morris Agency, said Thursday in a statement.

Miss Young had been due to come out of retirement to begin work on the two-hour movie on April 22.

"The parting between Miss Young and (producer) Aaron Spelling was amiable despite the story differences," the statement said.

The 72-year-old actress had been scheduled to play the role of Margaret Drake, the matriarch of a Seattle shipping family in the drama.

"It's true that we had creative differences over the way her character was developing," Spelling said in a statement released by a spokesman, David Horowitz. "She's a great star and a great friend and I hope she always remains both."

NEW YORK (AP) — Dan Rather, Frank Sinatra, Bill Cosby, Dustin Hoffman, Eddie Murphy and John Madden have been named recipients of Showbiz Best awards by the Friars Club, an entertainment industry organization.

Sinatra, 69, the "abbot" or head of the 81-year-old club, was named best entertainer for the third year running.

In balloting by the organization's 1,400 members and 600 show business journalists, the CBS Evening News was cited Thursday as the best national news program, and Rather, 53, its anchorman, was voted best national news commentator.

Cosby, 47, was named best TV performer, and his "Bill Cosby Show" tied with "Hill Street Blues" as the best television entertainment program.

Murphy, 24, was voted best film performer for "Beverly Hills Cop," and Hoffman, 47, best stage performer for his lead role in "Death of a Salesman."

Former Oakland Raiders coach John Madden, 49, was voted best TV sports personality for his CBS commentaries.

The Showbiz Best awards, now in their fifth year, carry no cash prize and there is no presentation ceremony, said club spokesman Al Rylander.

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N.Y. (AP) — Extreme feminist writing and scholarship tends to "deadend reader sensibilities," author Christopher Lasch said at a conference on intellectualism.

Lasch, author of "The Culture of Narcissism" and "The Minimal Self," said Thursday that it was a mistake to "view the whole of history as the history of women's oppression."

"Victimization does not color every aspect of a woman's life," said Lasch, who was joined on the panel at Skidmore University by Renata Adler, an author and senior editor at The New Yorker magazine, and other writers and thinkers.

There was no one on the panel to speak in favor of radical feminist writing.

Lasch said extreme feminist writing has become "one-dimensional, and by this time, completely predictable." That kind of writing "is more likely to deaden rather than quicken the reader's sensibilities," he said.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — When "The Return of the Jedi" made its return to movie screens across the nation, one of the fans showing up to get another look at the third film in the "Star Wars" trilogy was its director, Richard Marquand.

"Now I've been able to take my son to see it," Marquand, 45, said in a recent interview.

"I have a photo of him at five months, sitting in Chewbacca's lap. Now he's three-and-a-half years old." Chewbacca was a friendly, gorilla-like creature in the film.

Directing the sequel to two of the most successful films of all time — "Star Wars" and "The Empire Strikes Back" — was an extraordinary challenge the British-born Marquand said.

Producer George Lucas directed "Star Wars," released in 1977, and Irvin Kershner directed "The Empire Strikes Back," which premiered in 1980.

Hopes of Reagan, Gorbachev summit run high in public's view

By TERENCE HUNT

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — The White House publicity engines are alternately roaring and sputtering about a possible summit meeting between President Reagan and Soviet chief Mikhail Gorbachev.

On the one hand, Reagan and his lieutenants have fueled speculation almost daily with on-the-record comments and background briefings that suggested steady movement toward a summit, which would be the first since 1979.

On the other hand, the White House tries to dampen the speculation, telling reporters not to expect anything soon, saying that any meeting has to be carefully prepared and complaining that the press is creating too much anticipation.

Until Sunday, the White House was single-handedly managing the summit story, broadcasting not only Reagan's invitation and but also leaving receipt of Gorbachev's reply.

Gorbachev finally broke his silence about a possible summit in an interview Sunday with the Communist Party daily, Pravda.

He coupled his acceptance of Reagan's invitation with an announcement that he had ordered a freeze on deployment of medium-range missile deployments in Europe. He said he hoped the United States would do likewise.

That put a chill in the administration's sunny statements about a summit.

The White House quickly labled the missile freeze as a propaganda ploy and said a freeze on U.S. deployments would lock in a heavy Soviet advantage.

Suddenly, prospects for a summit didn't seem so hopeful.

"It seems to me less likely that he (Gorbachev) would find it feasible for an early meeting," said White House national security adviser Robert C. McFarlane.

However, he said the United

An Analysis

States remains "open" on the timing of a summit. "He (Reagan) is open to a meeting occurring at the convenience of the other side. The ball is still in their court."

A day later, White House chief of staff Donald T. Regan began stressing that a meeting would require "a lot of groundwork" and would have to produce some results.

Several weeks ago, the White House had emphasized that Reagan had dropped his insistence on prior assurances of tangible results from a meeting.

Regan sounded a different theme this week. "We think it would be a big letdown, not only for Americans but also for the rest of the world, if the two leaders were to meet and accomplish nothing."

All of the attention has produced unhappiness among some White House aides who think too much publicity is being generated.

"It doesn't help us to get the kind of summit we want if we appear overeager," said one White House aide, speaking privately.

"Any publicity, until you have worked out an agreement, has the potential for making a summit less likely," the official added.

Officials say preparations for a summit are under way at a very-low diplomatic level. The administration does not want to fix a date now for a summit, fearing that would force a hasty conclusion to U.S.-Soviet talks on a variety of problems.

McFarlane said U.S. and Soviet officials regularly consult on arms control, human rights, bilateral issues and regional issues.

"The process involves trying to solve problems in each of these four areas," he said. "Now, the time may come when the two sides acknowledge that enough progress has been made in two or three or all of them to warrant getting together at a summit."

Administration officials had suggested the two leaders might meet in September at the opening of the U.N. General Assembly, but that is not so sure, now.

The latest word is there are "no bets on that one" and that it is "too iffy" to talk about September.

Will there be a summit? Pausing for several seconds, a senior White House official replied, "Probably will be one."

This year? "I wouldn't know about that," he replied.

Regan is the first president in more than 50 years — since Herbert Hoover — not to meet with his Soviet counterpart. Yet, White House officials say that is not a factor in Reagan's interest in meeting the new Soviet chief.

Rains leave Corpus with full reservoir

Downpour chases hundreds from homes

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — Heavy rains chased hundreds of people from their homes in southeast Texas but also left Corpus Christi the kinder gift of a full reservoir heading into the sizzling Texas summer.

Officials expect the runoff from Wednesday's rain to fill Lake Corpus Christi to the brim by the weekend. In fact, the spillway gates will be opened for the first time in three years.

Six months ago, the lake was 35 percent full and communities along the Coastal Bend were forced into water rationing.

National Weather Service meteorologist John Leathers said Sinton received 9.20 inches of rain in the 24-hour period ending at 8 a.m. Thursday. Odem received 5.50 inches in the same period.

The heaviest rain fell at Padre Island National Seashore, south of Corpus Christi, where rainfall was measured at 11 inches before the rain gauge overflowed, park officials said.

As showers gave way to sunshine Thursday afternoon, homeowners returned to homes flooded by rising waters dumped by the slow-moving storm. Over 500 homes were flooded in Sinton, St. Paul, Odem, Calallen and Edroy, according to Art Roberts, disaster chairman for the Coastal Bend Red Cross.

Officials at Corpus Christi and Alice reported high water, but said there were no evacuations.

Only one shelter remained open Thursday night in Sinton, where about 250 spent Wednesday night after being chased from their homes by high water, officials said.

Fields looked like lakes, highways like rivers as displaced families pulled boatloads of possessions.

But the only life lost was a 66-year-old Sinton man, Melvin Lee. He died after suffering a heart attack while trying to move his recreational trailer out of a flooded park, said Sinton Mayor Rosalie Brown.

Mayor Brown said the sun came out Thursday afternoon and the water was gone from most areas by late afternoon.

"We got flooded with about 8 inches inside," Socorro Narvarez of Sinton told the Corpus Christi Caller-Times. "We had to get in the car and spend the night behind the (gas) station."

While some went back to damaged homes, the city of Corpus Christi saw rains dump a two- to three-month supply of water in 24 hours, said Jim Riley, Corpus Christi water supply superintendent.

"If you look at just the last six months, we've stored over two years' worth of water," Riley said.

The storm, triggered by an upper-air disturbance, moved into the Coastal Bend area of South Texas Wednesday afternoon and by 7 a.m. Thursday had dropped more than 11 inches of rain in some areas.

Red Cross official Roberts said about 300 homes in Sinton were flooded and 75 to 80 residences were deluged in Odem. Seven families had to evacuate in Ingleside.

"Things seem so identical to last October," said Jim Tait, chapter manager of the Red Cross in Corpus Christi who was in San Patricio County Thursday. The area suffered 29 inches of rain in an October 1984 storm. One man died while trying to rescue children in a stalled school bus.

Cars and trucks make their way through a flooded intersection in Corpus Christi Thursday after the city had more than 10 inches of heavy rains. The National Guard was called out to help stranded motorists and residents.

MHMR commissioner defends state system

TYLER (AP) — The state mental health commissioner defended the Texas Department of Mental Health and Mental Retardation before a federal judge while a sometimes-criticized state school superintendent in Fort Worth said the school does its best for the mentally retarded in its care.

The comments came Thursday in a federal court hearing on the state's efforts to provide community-based services for the retarded. U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice is hearing motions in a class action lawsuit against the department.

"We've been here for four days, and we've heard a great deal of one-sided testimony from persons brought into Texas by the plaintiffs from places like Massachusetts, Pennsylvania and Nebraska," said Commissioner Gary E. Miller.

"Some of those persons have never seen a state school in Texas and others have made only cursory reviews in the course of tours which lasted only a few hours," he said.

Mel Hughes, superintendent of the Fort Worth State School, said that facility hasn't had time to develop a program for moving residents into smaller, group homes in the community.

Miller, too, stressed the importance of only moving an "appropriate" number of mentally retarded people into community-based treatment during 1986 and 1987.

"A mentally retarded person will be placed from a state school into the community only on the basis of a professional judgment that the person and the placement are appropriate," he said.

The hearing, expected to last at least a week, is to determine if the state is complying with a lawsuit settlement ordering staffing improvements, community programs and other reforms in the care of the mentally retarded.

The plaintiffs — residents of state schools — are asking that approximately 1,000 residents and those on waiting lists be moved into group homes outside the schools. They contend state schools — particularly those in Austin, Denton and Fort Worth — have not complied with the settlement.

Parent groups, which have been in conspicuous attendance at the hearing, have voiced strong opposition to community homes. Several parents have testified that they fear their children will not get the close supervision and constant care they need if they are moved out of the schools into group homes.

"I don't see how you can pull my son and others like him and put them in a normal situation. They just don't fit," said Sandra Koustans, a registered nurse with a child at the Denton school.

In a related development, House Speaker Gib Lewis said he has "a great deal" of concern that the judge ultimately will order more state spending on the mentally ill.

"Don't get me in a comment on that. We'd be here all day long on a soap box," Lewis said in Austin when asked about the Tyler hearing. Lewis earlier this year was highly critical of federal judges who have ordered expensive changes in the state prisons and in the mental health system.

Coastal residents angered by EPA officials' attitude

BROWNSVILLE (AP) — Even before Environmental Protection Agency officials were able to start a public briefing on ocean incineration proposals, environmentalists argued others were being denied answers.

Several EPA officials were in Brownsville Thursday for a public briefing on EPA studies of proposed ocean incineration regulations.

A public hearing on the incinerations is scheduled for April 25, but officials said they will only take comments and not respond. That angered some members of the audience.

"I think our concern is that you basically have eliminated the ground rules responding to the fears and concerns of the citizens of this Valley," said Sue Ann Fruge of the Gulf Coast Coalition for Public Health.

The group has been one of the most vocal against ocean incinerations and representatives have traveled to Washington in recent weeks to lobby against the ocean incineration.

Dr. Allyn M. Davis, a regional EPA director, said they would take some of the comments at the hearing into consideration.

California schools wary of 'eyes of Texas'

DALLAS (AP) — A full-page ad in the University of California at Berkeley alumni magazine warns that the cream of the academic crop could be skimmed off by Texas if colleges don't recognize the strong new competitor for professors and students.

"If we're not careful, many of our top scholars may soon be wearing cowboy hats," the ad says.

Other schools, too, are taking worried note of Texas' efforts to lure the top teachers and students. The University of Texas, for example, recently acquired 32 "chairs" worth a million dollars apiece.

Karl Pister, engineering college dean at the University of California at Berkeley, said he has a friendly rivalry with Ernest Gloyne, who holds the same post at UT.

"I call him 'the pirate,'" Pister told The Dallas Morning News. "He comes to California flying the skull and crossbones. I have to batten down my hatches."

"They have not yet been successful — and I cross my fingers — in attracting any of our faculty," Pister said. "I view UT-Austin as a challenge for Berkeley. We see their rate of ascension as being very rapid. We perceive them as having limitless resources at their disposal."

Five professors at the University of Texas and Texas A&M get six-figure salaries. And to attract Marshall Rosenbluth, a world leader in nuclear fusion research, from Princeton University, UT matched a $5 million federal grant with $5 million of its own.

Texas A&M lured Herbert Richardson from his post as associate dean of engineering at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology by pledging $5 million to upgrade the school's faculty and facilities.

The efforts hit a new high last April when UT officials announced the 32 endowed faculty chairs, which were cited in the University of California ad, and then began looking for professors to fill them.

"We consider the efforts of the Texas schools (to be) exactly what good schools should do to build quality," said Raymond E. Miles, dean of the University of California's school of business.

Texas schools, Miles said, have come a long way since the 1950s, when he received his undergraduate and master's degrees from North Texas State University. He said he felt compelled to head west for a doctorate because "the University of California and Stanford had far better schools."

Nonetheless, Miles said he believes Texas schools still have a way to go before they reach the worldwide recognition for which officials in the state are so thirsty.

"It has a good higher education system, but it deserves a better one than it has," Miles said. "And I say that as a Texan."

STATE IN BRIEF

Lawmaker's remarks on sterilization anger some

FORT WORTH (AP) — A suggestion by a Texas lawmaker that poor women should be sterilized to prevent further pregnancies and government-paid medical expenses has angered religious and medical leaders.

"That's the most asinine thing I've ever heard," said Nelda Barrett, associate director of the Fort Worth-based Central Texas Conference Council on Ministries of the United Methodist Church.

Rep. Brad Wright, R-Houston, made the remark during a hearing Tuesday on legislation aimed at improving medical care for the poor who do not qualify for Medicaid.

"The question comes to mind of the lady who has three children and gets pregnant with a fourth," Wright said at the hearing. "She has no business having more children. We have to address that problem, whether voluntary or involuntary or some kind of birth control program."

Wright said later his remarks were meant to stimulate discussion of solutions to the problem of low-income women with repeated pregnancies. But several officials who work with the poor said the remarks sounded racist and discriminatory.

SMU action protested

DALLAS (AP) — Black seminary students at Southern Methodist University protesting the denial of tenure to the seminary's only black full-time professor say they will ask alumni and others to support their push for more minority teachers.

The students wrote a protest letter to a student newspaper after tenure was denied for Charles Thomas, 37, who has taught sociology of religion at Perkins School of Theology at SMU for six years and has a doctorate from Harvard University.

Thomas told the Dallas Times Herald that he would not appeal the tenure denial. "I think the kind of atmosphere that might be created even should the appeal be successful would not be comfortable to work in," he said.

But the students who wrote the letter said they will distribute it at a black theology conference on campus next week.

Computer tracks officers

DALLAS (AP) — A computer may help keep good officers on the Dallas police force and spot those who need disciplining, counseling or even dismissal.

The system, installed in mid-1984, produces a computer printout listing an average of 20 to 30 officers at a time — about 1 to 2 percent of the force — which is sent to Chief Billy Prince and supervisors.

The printout is used to document which officers need help by providing histories, the number and pattern of complaints against an officer, the number of resisting-arrest charges and other job performance data.

Ex-Odessa teller given five-year sentence

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

A former Odessa teller who admitted that she had "done wrong" by embezzling $11,012.45 from First Savings & Loan Association in 1982 was given a five-year split sentence Thursday by U.S. District Judge Lucius D. Bunton.

"You set out to do it very cold-bloodedly," Bunton told the defendant, 24-year-old Carla Gene Schumpert. The judge ordered her to serve six months in a jail-like facility beginning in August or as soon as possible thereafter and then ordered her to be placed on supervised probation for five years. Mrs. Schumpert, who is pregnant, is expecting her child's birth in late June. Bunton told her to report to the U.S. Marshal to begin serving her six-month sentence Aug. 1 or as soon as the baby is able and well enough to leave her mother. In addition, the judge ordered her to make restitution by making 60 monthly payments of $183.54 after she has served her jail time.

In another case, Bunton accepted a guilty plea from Elmer Louis Sweet, a former installment loan officer for Home Savings Association in Midland. Sweet, 37, of Greenwood, admitted to embezzling $14,900 in 1984 by setting up a fictitious credit application to obtain a loan. The federal prosecutor, Assistant U.S. Attorney Ricardo Gonzalez, noted that Sweet had used the money to "his benefit."

The Federal Bureau of Investigation had probed both cases.

Sweet was charged with setting up additional fictitious accounts in purloining altogether more than $25,000 from Home Savings. Bunton is to sentence Sweet at noon on May 13. Since he pleaded guilty to only one of four counts alleged in the indictment, Sweet could be sentenced to up five years in prison and fined up to $5,000. The date of his offense missed falling under the under the federal government's Comprehensive Crime Control Act of 1984. Under that act, which became effective last October, the maximum fine for embezzlement was increased from $5,000 to $250,000.

"It would behoove you to cooperate with him (U.S. Probation Officer Jack Swan)," Bunton told Sweet, in the preparation of Sweet's presentence report to the judge. Bunton uses information on a defendant's background and character references in determining punishment.

Mrs. Schumpert had asked the judge to sentence her under the federal Youth Corrections Act, but he necessarily declined since that act has been done away with. Under the act's provisions, a defendant between ages 18 through 25 could have served up to six years in a federal corrections institution and then the defendant's criminal records could be expunged and the defendant would not be a convicted felon.

"I know I've done wrong," Mrs. Schumpert told Bunton, "and I'm here to take the responsibility for that. Whatever punishment you decide, I'll go along with that."

Her court-appointed attorney, Kevin Bartley of Odessa, noted that she was 21 at the time she embezzled the money by transferring the funds from First Savings of Odessa into her brother-in-law's account.

Bartley said that Mrs. Schumpert could make restitution by selling a lien on her mobile home or in collecting the $9,000 past due on her child support. "And she's willing to work," Bartley said.

"She can be trustworthy," Bartley said.

The judge admonished her. "Mrs. Schumpert," Bunton said, "the thing that really got to me is that this was not your brother-in-law's idea. It was Carla Gene Schumpert's idea to steal from her employer." He noted that the brother-in-law didn't say, "I'm in dire need and why don't you figure out a way to steal."

"...You went in there and very cleverly stole the money," he noted, and then quit her job.

Bunton noted that he did not say to her, "OK, you're a pregnant lady. You're going to have another child. Let's forget it."

"You didn't think of anybody but yourself," Bunton said. "It was an extremely selfish thing to do."

Area residents warned of alleged roofing scam

From Staff Reports

San Angelo police have alerted area law enforcement agencies to be on the lookout for a group of individuals working on an alleged roofing-home improvement scam in that area and who may be moving to other areas soon.

According to a teletype notice received by Odessa police, San Angelo police said, in one instance, two men approached a San Angelo resident and advised they had roofing materials left over from another job and the resident could save money if he would let them do a roofing job for him.

San Angelo police said once the men began to work they discovered numerous other problems and the previous $50 estimated cost quickly escalated to more than $4,000.

According to the San Angelo bulletin, the men merely spread a small amount of gravel on the roof, spray it lightly with silver paint and leave.

The men are reportedly traveling in two pickups, one blue, the other black, with the name "Donohue Housepainting" on the sides. The license plates on the pickups have been obscured to prevent reading the numbers, San Angelo police said.

Three men are being sought in connection with the alleged scam. One is described as about 30-years-old, with stringy, dirty blond hair, who walks with a pronounced limp because of an injury he claims he suffered on a job.

Woman arrested on charges of prostitution

From Staff Reports

A 22-year-old woman was arrested early this morning on misdemeanor charges of prostitution after an investigation was conducted by two Department of Public Safety criminal intelligence undercover agents at a southside motel.

According to city police reports, complaints about prostitutes in some motels and clubs led to the investigation.

The agents met with the woman at the Sirocco Club in the Holiday Inn at 3904 W. Wall, where an agreement was made to meet later at a motel room in the Lexington Inn, 1003 S. Midkiff, which they had rented as a cover, reports said.

With six police department detectives waiting nearby, the woman drove up in a taxi cab and entered the agents' room to discuss prices, reports said.

The woman reportedly had settled on a price of $50-$80 for sex when the arrest was made at 2:05 a.m.

Reports indicate the woman, who was transferred to Midland County Jail at 3:15 a.m., had been arrested five times in El Paso on prostitution charges, but had no convictions.

About $50,000 worth of criminal mischief was reported at the Texian Inn, 4108 N. Big Spring between 10:30 p.m. Wednesday and 7 a.m. Thursday, according to complaints filed with city police.

Students parley skills into travel

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

Parlez-vous Français? Habla usted Español?

If you can't, perhaps a group of eighth- and ninth-grade students at Trinity School can lend a hand.

The delegation — nine of whom are enrolled in French and two in Spanish courses — recently returned from school-sponsored trips to France and Mexico in an effort to "increase understanding of people and culture; and improve skills in speaking and understanding foreign languages," according to Margaret Farrell, director of admissions.

The students, accompanied by Trinity School teachers Richard Cantania and Marjorie Ulmo, traveled to various sites during their journey, making many of the travel arrangements themselves.

The nine-day visit to France included stops in Paris, Tours, Versailles and the Loire Valley. There, the youths discovered "French culture," not only from tours of museums, the theater, ballet, opera and other historical sites, but also by living with French families in their homes.

"The first couple of nights we really didn't get a chance to practice our French, but after that we talked and talked in French," said Noreen Buster.

Shawn Jauz and classmate Craig Reid recalled their experience, noting few differences between the American and French teen-ager.

"We stayed with a family who had a 17-year-old boy. His name was Frederick, Jauz said. "He liked music, especially American music."

One difference, according to Reid, is "they (French youth) are so rude" in school. "Frederick told us that before tests, kids go to different schools and cover the teachers with eggs. We wouldn't get away with that here."

Keira Kozol said, "My family wanted to know if I knew J.R."

In Mexico, classmates Megan Burleson and Ginny Graham said they found it challenging to speak only Spanish in the markets and restaurants. "We didn't get any help from Mrs. Ulmo," according to Miss Burleson.

Miss Graham said, however, "In Acapulco you really can't practice your Spanish because it seems they all speak English."

Boys' Club keeps members 'off the streets'

By MARK LEWIS
Staff Writer

Some youth clubs are concerned with getting boys and girls out of the house and into the great outdoors, but the Boys' Club of Midland prides itself on keeping its members indoors and off the streets.

"We're there to guide them," said Executive Director Nick P. Sanchez at the Boys' Club awards ceremony Thursday. "We try to be a little of everything to help the kid and keep him off the streets. We're probably the only place they have where they can go and enjoy themselves and be with friends."

The Boys' Club concentrates on helping boys and girls in Midland's south and east sides, hoping to give them a social focus and channel their energies in useful directions.

"It serves a part of our community that nothing else does," said Mayor G. Thane Akins, a charter member of the Boys' Club board of directors. Akins said many young lives have been turned around with the help of the club.

"I've seen lots of good results over the years. I really think it's a grand program."

Board President Gus Jones said the club's success is due to two factors: "Our location (110 E. New Jersey) — we fill a void in an area of town that needs some supervision for young kids. And our executive director has just got a great rapport with the kids. We just keep building each year."

Jerry Menzies/Reporter-Telegram

The Boys' Club of Midland announced its annual awards Thursday at the boardroom of ClayDesta National Bank. The winners, from left, are Rudy Garcia, who won the "Sir Thomas Lipton Good Sportsmanship Award"; Man/Boy of the Year Bruce Brenneman, honored as outstanding volunteer; and Paul Zarate Jr., who was named "Boy of the Year."

The club's name "is something of a misnomer," said Jones, because girls are also among the more than 2,000 youths served each month by the Boys' Club.

"We give them a place where they can go after school," he said.

The "Boy of the Year Award" was given this year to 12-year-old Paul Zarate Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Zarate, for his "dedication to the Boys' Club," Sanchez said. Paul is a sixth-grader at South Elementary School.

"He's real helpful to the staff, and real active in all activities," Sanchez said.

The "Sir Thomas J. Lipton Sportsmanship Award" went to 14-year-old Rudy Garcia, son of Mr. and Mrs. Felipe Garcia. Rudy, an eighth-grader at Alamo Junior High School, is "a real competitor" who always has a good attitude, according to Sanchez.

The "Man/Boy Award" for outstanding volunteer work was awarded to Bruce Brenneman, an assistant vice president at ClayDesta National Bank and a Boys' Club board member "who volunteers a lot of his time to the club," said Sanchez.

Next week is National Boys' Club Week, as proclaimed by President Reagan, and the Boys' Club of Midland will celebrate the week with a football tournament on Tuesday, a pool tournament on Wednesday, a basketball free-throw tournament on Thursday and arts and crafts and cooking classes on Friday.

"We're inviting the public" to come by and see "the club that beats the streets" in operation, Sanchez said.

Odessa judge to consider change of venue at hearing

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — A change of venue hearing for a 17-year-old youth accused of aggravated sexual assault is scheduled to be held in 70th District Court Monday morning.

Reginal Timothy McNeil was indicted by an Ector County grand jury in connection with the assault of a 21-year-old Midland woman while she was a patient at Medical Center Hospital last Sept. 30. McNeil was a part-time employee at MCH at the time of the incident.

During a pretrial hearing March 27, McNeil testified he gave Odessa police a statement concerning the incident voluntarily, although he said he understood if he didn't he would be allowed to leave the police station but would later be arrested wherever police found him.

McNeil's attorney, G. David Smith, contending this represented coercion, sought to have Judge Gene Ater suppress the statement as trial evidence.

Ater was also supposed to have heard Smith's change of venue motion March 27 but refused to do so because, he said, Smith had failed to submit his motion seven days prior to the hearing.

McNeil has remained free on bond pending trial.

After Monday morning is also slated to hold a competency hearing for 33-year-old Henry Lee Hill, who is accused of the Aug. 21, 1984, stabbing death of 28-year-old Janet Gregston.

The woman's body was found east of U.S. 385 on East Loop 338. The seven-month pregnant woman died as a result of multiple stab and slash wounds, according to Ector County sheriff's officers.

Senate shows education reform 'here to stay'

AUSTIN (AP) — An education bill approved by the Senate serves notice that education reform in Texas is "here to stay" even if changes are a "little painful," its sponsor said.

The bill dealt gingerly with the controversial no-pass, no-play eligibility rule that has had some parents and students in an uproar by leaving any revision of the rule up to the State Board of Education.

Sen. Carl Parker's bill, which was sent to the House on voice vote Thursday, would shift more money to teacher bonuses and would allow the Board of Education to decide whether teachers should be tested on their specialties, such as math or science.

The bill, however, requires the testing of teachers to see if they can read and write well enough to do their job satisfactorily.

Parker said that test would "certainly weed out anyone who shouldn't be in the classroom... If someone cannot function, is not literate enough to pass a basic skills test of this nature, they should not be in the classroom teaching children."

Referring to the sweeping public school reform law passed in a special legislative session last summer, Parker told his colleagues:

"There have been those who expressed the view that education reform in Texas is in deep trouble, and just as soon as the Legislature had the opportunity, they would dismantle it. I think this serves notice to those who labor under the false, vain hope that education reform is a transitory thing in Texas — it's here to stay."

Midlanders asked to 'dress Western'

From Staff Reports

The Midland Centennial Commission and the Midland County Commissioners are asking Midlanders to dress in pioneer or Western wear each Friday between now and July 5 in an effort to promote participation in Midland's Centennial celebration.

Hopefully, "Centennial Friday" will "bring more attention to the July 4th Parade, the Centennial Festival and the Centennial year as a whole," said Hank Henry, parade committee chairman.

Centennial Events Committee Chairman Barbara Jowell, said "by people dressing in Western attire or period costume, it shows they support the Centennial. The same goes for growing a beard — the Centennial is a once-in-a-lifetime event for most of us and we want to have lots of things for the citizens of Midland to be able to participate in."

The July 4 parade will begin near ClayDesta National Bank, travel south on Big Spring Street, circle at the Midland County Courthouse and conclude at Midland High School. It reportedly will feature a chronological account of Midland history.

Deadline for space reservations is May 1. For information or to apply, call Gayle Dodson at 682-3376; or Hank Henry at 561-6520.

"I think this is a firm, strong commitment from the Texas Senate that we're committed to academic excellence even though there are some little painful areas along the way."

One of those areas would be the rule that a student who fails any course is ineligible for extracurricular activities, such as sports or band, for six weeks.

The rule has only been in effect for a few months but already there have been stories of entire spring sports squads being virtually wiped out by grades. A story told Thursday was of a star baseball player who had four "A's," one "B" and a 69 in chemistry, and he had to miss the season.

On Thursday, the Senate beat back an amendment 16-11 that would, in effect, call for daily grade checks to determine eligibility.

Sen. Kent Caperton, D-Bryan, said the amendment "represents a significant retreat — that we don't really care all that much."

"Is this the big game amendment?" quipped Sen. John Traeger, D-Seguin, and Caperton replied, "I think so."

The sponsor, Sen. Bill Sarpalis, D-Canyon, insisted that his proposal "is not a retreat — if anything, it makes the bill stronger." He said students would be immediately ineligible if they flunked a test.

Senators rejected 19-8 an amendment that would set a minimum of three weeks ineligibility for failing a course. The Parker bill states that the Board of Education "may provide" for a grade reporting period of less than six weeks.

Bentsen: Checkpoint closings due to economics

MCALLEN (AP) — U.S. Sen. Lloyd Bentsen says a decision by U.S. Customs officials to keep three U.S. border checkpoints closed may be due to economics rather than a threat of physical harm to agents.

Bentsen, at a news conference Thursday, said Customs officials are using the threat to agents as an excuse to keep them closed, when in fact it is a budgetary decision.

The three crossings, Falcon Dam, near Zapata; Amistad Dam, near Del Rio; and a hand-operated ferry at Los Ebanos, were among nine along the border that were closed in February after threats to U.S. Customs agents.

Bentsen said customs officials are keeping the crossings closed to save money, but said those crossings pay for themselves with the tariffs.

"They may be using the question of safety (to the agents) as an excuse," Bentsen said.

But U.S. Customs spokesman Charles Conroy said Thursday that the crossings would be closed indefinitely, not permanently.

"Those are very real threats to us," he said. "One of our officers was murdered last year and we take those very seriously."

Personnel at those crossings have been relocated to other crossings, he said.

Bentsen also said the United States needs to get tougher with Japan to balance a trade deficit.

He said President Reagan should begin selling the country more.

"The guy is a great communicator and we ought to have him start selling our products," Bentsen said.

The trade deficit with Japan was $36.8 billion last year, he said earlier this week.

On the Rio Grande Valley economy, Bentsen said he saw nothing wrong with U.S. companies expanding their operations across the border.

Several U.S. companies, including GM and Zenith, have twin plants in the Rio Grande Valley and across the border in Matamoros and Reynosa.

Local pilot's plane recovered after forced landing in field

From Staff Reports

The slightly-damaged plane of a Midland pilot who was forced to make an emergency landing late last night was recovered this morning in a field eight miles west of Andrews.

Pilot Peter Gloves of Midland, who was not injured in the incident, was about 10 miles south-east of Andrews on his way home when his 1973 Cessna 182 began vibrating. He radioed Midland Regional Airport at 8 p.m. that he would attempt to land at Schle Meyer Field in Odessa, Department of Public Safety reports said.

When the engine quit a few minutes later, Gloves was forced to make an emergency landing in a field about two miles west of FM 1788. A passing motorist gave him a ride to FM 1788, where a Texas Highway Patrol car met him and a search for the plane began.

The search was called off after an hour Thursday night because of difficulty in the dark. The plane was recovered at about 9:30 a.m. today after the search resumed.

Reports indicate Gloves had flown Wednesday to Cheyenne, Wyo., where mechanics had taken the plane apart for a potential buyer.

The plane was reassembled Thursday and Gloves departed Cheyenne at 2 p.m. for Midland. He stopped in Andrews to refuel and, according to DPS reports, had seven quarts of oil added before leaving on the last stretch.

Investigating the accident were DPS Troopers Mike Moore and Curtis Becker, both of Andrews.

J.C. Blackwood told officers walls, floors and ceilings in Building A sustained $25,000 worth of water damage and the plumbing and outside walls of Building B sustained another $25,000 worth of damage.

Debora Smith Bennett of 718 Raymond Dr. told police Thursday a person who had taken her 1971 Buick LaSalle from her driveway at 5:30 p.m. March 29 had not returned the $700 vehicle. Reports indicated the person borrowed the car to pick up a family member at the airport.

Yvonne Noiset, 1300 E. Maple, reported her home was entered between 1 p.m. and 4 p.m. Thursday by someone who pried open patio doors on the southside of the house.

The only item reported missing in the incident was a $350 color television set.

About $300 in cash was reported stolen between 7:10 p.m. Wednesday and 8 a.m. Thursday from a cash register locked overnight in a storage room at Conner's Car Wash, 2404 N. Big Spring. Manager Ruth Woods reported the theft. There were no signs of forced entry.

In reports filed with the Midland County Sheriff's Office, Steve J. Kloesel, Route 7 Box 462, told deputies $480 worth of items were stolen from his truck, parked in the yard, within the past two weeks. Taken were a 30-gallon iron kettle, pitch fork, thermos and a .22-caliber Magnum pistol.

20-years-old and five feet 10 inches tall, reportedly has been working out of a San Angelo motel and using a local answering service.

The men reportedly have a woman and two children, one about 7-years-old, with them.

Anyone having information about these individuals is asked to contact local law enforcement agencies.

Added Miss Burelson: "Men are very complimentary of women. I don't know how many told me I was pretty. I didn't know what to say. Then I found out it was just a greeting."

Woman recalls days she succeeded husband as sheriff

By KEELY COGLAN

BIG SPRING, Texas (AP) — Lucille Merrick tenderly picked up the pair of polished handcuffs.

"My husband had these engraved," said the county's only woman sheriff. She held the steel cuffs up to the window so light gleamed on the block letters spelling her late husband's name, "A.J. Merrick."

She sorted through the rest of the items on the table near her: the pearl-handled Colt automatic pistol; the short, lead-heavy leather club; a set of four sheriff's badges — keep-sakes of her and her husband's tenures as Howard County sheriff.

The gun is hers, though she never used it during the 11 months she followed her husband in office. She served as Howard County sheriff from Feb. 7, 1944 to Dec. 31, 1944. "Working helped me cope," said Mrs. Merrick, 78.

"My husband died the 3rd of February, 1944, from a heart attack. They buried him the 6th, and the commissioners appointed me sheriff the 7th," she said.

Mrs. Merrick stayed away from the office when she was first appointed to fill her husband's place, she said. Later, she came to enjoy working in the office.

"If I hadn't had the the responsibility, it would have been much harder. I would have been alone more," she said. "I felt like it was something I must do. My husband was elected to the office, and I felt I had to finish his term."

Other widows in nearby counties — Dawson and Glasscock — had been chosen to replace their husbands about the same time. In Dawson County Mrs. Joe Ray ran for re-election after her appointment and won, Mrs. Merrick said.

"It was not unusual for a widow to be appointed. There were several men who asked for the appointment," Mrs. Merrick said. "But the commissioners court and the county judge, James Brooks, asked me to do it. They were very supportive."

Andrew, her husband, had been appointed to fill one term and been elected to another. Before he died, he had announced he was running for re-election, Mrs. Merrick said.

Mrs. Merrick said she concentrated on the administration and officework in her tenure; the chief deputy under her husband, Denver Dunn, was in charge of the field-work, she said.

"I didn't ever lock but one person up," she said. "There was a teenager who had given us a lot of trouble. I saw him walking down the sidewalk

(in front of the courthouse), so I called to him and brought him into the office, and we arrested him."

She also had a jailbreak during her term in office. "One of the lesser deputies left the door open after feeding the prisoners," she said. "There weren't very many. We got them all back within a couple days."

"There were always jailbreaks then. We had a combination lock, and after the deputies fed the prisoners, they weren't always careful to see if it was locked right," she said.

Mrs. Merrick said she didn't regret her husband's career, though it caused many sleepless nights during the 20 years they were married.

"He was a deputy sheriff when I met him, when I was working in the sheriff's and county tax offices in Lamesa. I didn't mind him being off. He liked that kind of work. He liked trying to figure out why people would do things," she said.

"There were many nights when I stayed up to 3 or 4, waiting for him to get home," she said. "I worried about him. I didn't worry about me. I wasn't out in the field."

When Andrew Merrick first started working for the Howard County sheriff's office, the town was in the middle of an oil boom, and bootleggers had operations all over town. "It was dangerous to walk down the 100 block of Main. My husband wouldn't let me walk down the sidewalk by myself," she said.

Twin sergeants stretch the buddy system into long time

By CHRISTINE MANNING

FORT HOOD, Texas (AP) — James Carpenter is seven minutes older than his brother Jon, but both have been in the Army for exactly the same amount of time.

Sgt. 1st Class James Carpenter and Jon Carpenter enlisted in the Army 16 years ago, in their hometown of Stow, Mass., under the "buddy system," which allows "buddies" to enter the Army together and guarantees they will stay together through basic and advanced individual training. But the togetherness didn't stop there.

After basic and AIT, both were sent to the same two-week doorgunner course, and then in 1970, both were sent to the same unit in Vietnam.

"You really weren't supposed to have two brothers fighting in a combat situation at the same time, and when we got to Vietnam this sergeant major who was talking to a big group of us explained the situation and said one of us could go home if we wanted to. All we had to do was stand up," James Carpenter said. "But I was new to the Army, and I'd never seen anybody with so many stripes on his uniform. So neither of us stood up, and we both stayed there for a year."

The Carpenters are now together again — this time at Fort Hood. They are both in the 528th Transportation Company, 13th SUPCOM. Jon has been at Fort Hood on this tour since 1977, and James followed him there in 1980.

This isn't even their first assignment at Fort Hood together.

In 1970, after fighting with the 282nd Assault Helicopter Company in Vietnam, they were assigned to the same unit in Fort Hood. Fort Hood is the only U.S. post which either one of them has permanently been assigned, and other than a three-year tour in Germany and his Vietnam service, Jon has spent his entire military career at Fort Hood.

Jon left Fort Hood for Germany in 1974. When he came back in 1977, he said, he couldn't believe the amount of growth that had occurred in Killeen. "I was coming over the Nola Ruth Hill on U.S. Highway 190 at night, and I saw all these lights in the distance. I thought I was lost. There was no way that could have been Killeen," Carpenter said, but it was Killeen.

"We've never really had any problems working in the Army together," Jon said. "Even though we're in the same company again, we have separate jobs, and we really don't spend that much time on or off the job together."

Jon's job deals mainly with aircraft production control, and James's job is geared at quality control.

Both brothers have served continuously since their enlistment and have served previously at Fort Hood and West Germany, and James served one year in Korea.

Dollar slides

LONDON (AP) — The American dollar, depressed by poor U.S. March retail sales and market fears of more bad economic news from Washington, dropped sharply against all major currencies in early European trading today. Gold prices were firm.

The dollar continued its slide from lower levels in New York late Thursday.

One Frankfurt dealer said Thursday's announcement that U.S. retail sales in March fell 1.9 percent was the main factor pushing down the dollar.

But he said the currency could slide sharply later today if the U.S. March Producer Price Index and the February Business Inventories and Consumer Credit statistics, both scheduled for release, were below expectations.

In Tokyo, where trading ends before it begins in Europe, the dollar plunged to close at a two-week low of 251 yen, compared with Thursday's close of 253.90. In later European trading, the dollar was quoted unchanged at 251 yen.

In London, the dollar dropped by more than a cent against the pound which cost $1.2562, compared with Thursday's late rate of $1.2455.

Gold opened in London at a bid price of $332.75 a troy ounce, up from late Thursday's bid of $331. But prices fell in later trading and London's five major bullion houses set the midmorning recommended "fixing" at $331.25 an ounce.

In Zurich, gold opened at $332.60 bid, up from $332.25, and was little changed in later trading.

Silver was quoted in London at a bid price of $6.72 an ounce, unchanged from late Thursday.

Unocal files antitrust suit against Pickens

LOS ANGELES (AP) — An antitrust suit has been filed by Unocal Corp. against a group led by Oilman T. Boone Pickens that is attempting to takeover Unocal.

The suit alleges that their attempts to restructure the oil industry are decreasing competition in oil and gas exploration.

The suit was filed in U.S. District Court in Lafayette, La., and was announced by Los Angeles-based Unocal, the nation's 13th largest oil company and the parent of Union Oil Co. of California.

The suit was the third stemming from the takeover battle. Two of those have been filed by Unocal, and one by Mesa Petroleum Co. of Amarillo, Texas, of which Pickens is chairman.

The latest suit names Mesa Petroleum and others in addition to Pickens.

Mesa Petroleum spokesman Warren Vieth in Amarillo, Texas said the company had not seen the suit and had no immediate comment.

A Pickens-led investor group already owns 13.6 percent of Unocal's 173.9 million shares and has offered $54 per share, or $3.46 billion, to boost its stake to 50.1 percent.

The Pickens group has also said that, if successful in the initial offer, it will seek to buy the remainder of Unocal's stock for cash and debt securities worth $54 per share.

In composite New York Stock Exchange trading Thursday, Unocal was up $1 to close at $47.75 a share.

The latest court action alleges that Pickens' efforts to take over or restructure other oil companies actually constitute a conspiracy to restrain trade by so burdening targets with debt that they are less able to compete for oil and gas exploration properties.

The suit cites Pickens' takeover forays in recent years against Cities Service Co., Superior Oil Co., Gulf Corp. and Phillips Petroleum Co.

Pickens efforts resulted in the companies either restructuring themselves and assuming huge debts or being taken over by other companies that substantially increased their indebtedness.

A court injunction blocking Pickens from continuing efforts to restructure the industry is sought in the suit.

House favors Craddick's two oil-related bills

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The House Thursday gave preliminary approval to HB 1867 by Rep. Tom Craddick, R-Midland, relating to the regulatory authority of the Railroad Commission over wastes associated with oil and gas production, and legislation providing for lease of highway right-of-way for oil and gas development.

Craddick says HB 1867 is intended to clarify the jurisdiction of the RRC and the Department of Water Resources in such matters. The bill received quick approval, with final passage expected Monday.

Rep. Bill Hollowell, D-Grand Saline, charged that the lease bill is intended to benefit major oil companies, and attempted to amend the measure to eliminate provisions against leasing right-of-way within 2,500 feet of existing production, and for preferential leasing to adjacent landowners.

Hollowell argued the Legislature should restore the prior law, which was changed in 1981, to allow unrestricted leasing of lands owned by the Department of Highways and Public Transportation.

HB 918, Hollowell said, "makes some distinct gifts to oil companies," adding that the oil companies are attempting to get the current law changed before it is held unconstitutional by the attorney general.

"Those oil companies are scared to death that Jim Mattox will rule it is unconstitutional before they can protect their special interests," Hollowell argued.

Rep. Fred Agnich, R-Dallas, joined Craddick in defending the bill, saying highway rights-of-way constitutes so little acreage they can't be leased, while Craddick's bill would result in capturing additional royalties for the State.

Hollowell said that prior to the change in 1981, Texas could have received $5 million in royalties, while Craddick's bill would provide for half that amount.

Hollowell's amendment was tabled 72-56, and the bill received preliminary approval on a 118-10 vote.

Lawmakers react to Saturn plant proposal

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) — Minnesota lawmakers have responded with mixed reactions to Gov. Rudy Perpich's offer of nearly $1.3 billion in incentives over the next 30 years to bring the new Saturn auto plant to the state.

Perpich unveiled the specifics of the offer Thursday. Many of the proposals require legislative approval. The Legislature adjourns May 20 and General Motors officials have said they will announce a site early this summer.

"Obviously, it's a generous offer; some would say it's too generous," said House Speaker David Jennings. "I'm not against the proposal; I'm willing to talk about it."

Sen. Gary Laidig, R-Stillwater, whose district includes a site being considered for the plant, said the state offer raises numerous questions.

Minnesotans, Laidig said, "are going to want to know why should we provide this kind of a subsidy for a corporation that posted a ... record profit last year."

"We have to meet the competition, and I know what the competition has been doing," Perpich told a Capitol news conference.

Sen. Sam Solon, D-Duluth, said the incentive package was not too generous.

"If you're from Duluth and northern Minnesota, you don't care what the package is, you want to create the incentives for Saturn to come here and turn the economy of our part of the state around."

The package to attract the $3.5 billion plant to a Cottage Grove or Duluth location includes $804 million in tax abatements over 30 years; a $371.3 million commitment from the private sector and $93.6 million in additional state expenditures.

The additional state expenditures include:

- $4.5 million for relocation expenses and subsidized mortgages for the top 100 Saturn executives who would move to Minnesota, providing them with 30-year mortgages at an effective interest rate of 10 percent;

- $7 million for relocation services for other Saturn employees who opt to move to Minnesota;

- $1 million for day-care services for children of Saturn employees;

- $30 million to pay for the plant site and improvements;

- $20 million for creation of a center of advanced manufacturing technologies at the University of Minnesota; and

- $31.1 million for customized job training at an on-site center.

The DFL governor classified Minnesota's package as "the best offer" of any of the 27 states competing for the plant, which is expected to employ 6,000 workers and to create another 14,000 jobs in related fields.

Despite the size of the state's offer, Jennings said it's his understanding Minnesota is "no better than a moderate long-shot" in the bidding war to win the plant. "We're still in the running, but we're by no means a front runner," he told reporters.

But Perpich said: "I firmly believe we are in the running as much as any state."

Rabbits, Golfs recalled

DETROIT (AP) — Volkswagen of America Inc. says it is recalling 46,000 U.S.-made cars because of problems with carburetors and seat belts.

About 25,000 Rabbits from the 1984 model year have carburetor throttle shafts that may crack at the threaded hole where the shaft meets the throttle plate, causing the engine to race uncontrollably, VW said Thursday. The cars can be stopped by disengaging the transmissions and applying the brakes.

The other recall covers 23,000 models of the new Golf, the subcompact car that replaced the Rabbit for the 1985 model year. VW said the Golfs have front seat belts that may not lock as they should in a crash or when the brakes are applied suddenly.

Spokesman Joseph Bennett said the carmaker would fix the carburetors and replace the seat belts free of charge. He said VW knew of no accidents or injuries caused by the defects, which were discovered by quality-control workers and dealer mechanics.

The recalls also apply to GTI versions of the Rabbit and Golf.

Chrysler, GM, Toyota settle lawsuit

TOKYO (AP) — Chrysler Corp. said today an out-of-court settlement had been reached in its lawsuit objecting to a plan by General Motors Corp. and Toyota Motor Corp. to build Toyota-designed small cars in California.

Chrysler had protested the 1983 deal between its competitor, General Motors, the world's largest automaker, and Toyota, Japan's largest, as a threat to fair competition in the U.S. auto market.

Specifically, the number three U.S. automaker questioned Toyota and GM's contention that they needed to cooperate closely for 12 years in order for the U.S. firm to learn how to produce Nova subcompact cars.

The announcement, issued from Chrysler headquarters in Highland Park, Mich., and made available to reporters in Tokyo, said the out-of-court agreement stipulated that the period of "active cooperation" between the two auto giants would be reduced from 12 to eight years, although the joint operation would continue for up to a dozen years.

It said GM had also agreed not to buy additional cars of the same type directly from Toyota for sale in the United States or Canada during that time.

The $400 million joint venture, called the New United Motor Manufacturing Inc., began operations four months ago on the site of a once-idle GM plant in Fremont, Calif.

About 1,200 workers are assembling Japanese-designed Novas, which are being prepared for sales starting in May or June in the Midwest, according to General Manager Bob Hendry.

The plant will produce up to 60,000 cars in its first year of operation, and turn out up to 250,000 cars annually starting in mid-1986, according to Toyota officials.

Hendry said the four-door sedan has "nothing in common" with previous Chevy Novas. It has the same platform and power train as the Toyota Corolla and a similar model made for Japanese consumers called the Sprinter.

The Chrysler suit was filed at U.S.

District Court in Washington in January 1984.

A statement from Chrysler said GM and Toyota had agreed that "as the Fremont venture developed, experience demonstrated that the original 12-year learning period could be reduced to eight and still provide them the learning both sought."

"While Chrysler still questions the impact of the joint venture on competition between General Motors and Toyota," it said, "the parties agreed to compromise on the eight-year period of active cooperation without shortening the overall term of the joint venture."

A Toyota spokesman, reached by telephone at the company's headquarters in Nagoya, confirmed the Chrysler announcement but said officials authorized to discuss it were not immediately available. He refused to be identified.

The project marked the first time that a major Japanese automaker had joined in a U.S. car production venture. Each firm owns 50 percent of the company.

Easter fell on April 7, and most of the retailers' reporting periods ended the day before. Last year, Easter fell on April 22.

Jeffrey Edelman, an analyst with Dean Witter Reynolds Inc., said that "if we were to exclude the effect of Easter, sales would have been the same last year trend we saw in the month of February."

Though IRAs and Keogh plans are major long-term commitments, many people focus only on their short-term attractions, Mintz says. "All they care about is the tax deduction," he remarked in a telephone conversation early this week.

From his perch in Dallas, Mintz sees things like IRAs quite a bit differently from the standard Wall Street viewpoint.

In the final days before the deadline for making IRA contributions for 1984, with financial institutions hawking their wares in full cry, he argues that savers should avoid committing their money to any long-term proposition.

He says they are better off putting their money in a savings account or money-market mutual fund from which it can be removed at any time.

After that, he says, they can devote the time necessary to studying all the alternatives available — and, after having made a long-term choice, they can have their accounts moved into the vehicle they have selected.

"IRA regulations permit you to move from one seller to another as often as you like and when you like," he notes. "One seller sends your funds to another seller."

The red tape involved in an IRA transfer can be onerous. But Mintz argues that it is worth the trouble to give yourself the time to make a well-

Investment in BB or Ba bonds very risky move

A. You're looking at what Wall Street calls a "junk bond" fund. That nickname bond fund that nickname should give you pause, but it shouldn't necessarily scare you off.

Junk bonds are those rated BB or lower by Standard & Poor's Corp. and Ba or lower by Moody's Investors Service.

Bonds with higher ratings from those two rating services are counted as being of investment grade. Those rated BB.

It stands to reason that companies with low credit ratings must pay higher interest on their bonds than companies with high ratings. When you buy a low-rated bond, you expect to get high interest, because the bond just might default. Right here, the point must be made that bond defaults are relatively rare occurrences. Nevertheless, any outfit with less than a high credit rating pays high interest when it borrows money by issuing bonds.

A mutual fund holding junk bonds collects high interest and, after deducting its operating expenses, passes that money along to fund shareholders as dividends.

Junk bonds usually move up faster than investment grade bonds when interest rates fall and go down more sharply when interest rates rise. That adds an additional speculative tinge to junk bonds and junk bond mutual funds.

Office of Personnel Management director fights for his job

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's point man in the war against bureaucrats is beset these days by critics who say he has politicized the civil service and demoralized government workers with attempts to cut their pay.

Donald J. Devine, a combative conservative Republican who used to teach political science, has become a target because he needs Senate confirmation if he is to serve a second four-year term as director of the Office of Personnel Management.

Some senators aren't pleased about things he's been saying about them.

Sen. Paul Sarbanes, D-Md., for example, expressed irritation with a Devine comment he'd heard about: "Congressmen are like snowflakes, one or two don't make the difference, but a lot of bad ones are a problem."

However, Devine's supporters such as Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., say he has tried to streamline the federal bureaucracy with proposals to restructure government pensions and tie pay hikes to job performance.

"Dr. Devine has succeeded in turning the perennially dull issue of government efficiency into one of the liveliest issues in Washington," Helms said last week at Devine's confirmation hearings before the Senate Governmental Affairs Committee.

Opposition comes chiefly from Democratic senators, smarting from Devine's campaign rhetoric last fall, and federal employees unions, angered by administration proposals to cut federal pay 5 percent and reduce government pensions.

James Pierce, president of the National Federation of Federal Employees, told the Senate committee Devine "has set about a smear campaign designed to represent federal pay and benefits and retirement as an unwarranted burden on American taxpayers."

The federal unions also oppose Devine's plan to tie civil service raises to job performance instead of seniority. Under the current system only career employees who receive unsatisfactory evaluations are denied step raises.

Democratic lawmakers object to Devine's politicking for Helms and 12 Republican House candidates last fall, saying the head of the non-partisan civil service shouldn't participate in politics.

Sen. Thomas F. Eagleton, D-Mo., said the OPM director "has degraded the civil service system" and "brought the system into disrepute with his crass political activity."

Devine admits he has made partisan statements, but says his campaign appearances were part of his job as a political appointee.

"Our job is to be the policy representative of the president on personnel matters. We're not supposed to be non-partisan. This office was particularly created to do that," he said in an interview.

Devine said he has eliminated what he calls the longstanding hypocrisy of civil service that allowed previous administrations to hide political appointees in career posts.

Democrats, however, are quick to point out that at OPM, Devine has doubled the number of political appointees from 17 to 35.

Sarbanes, who testified at the confirmation hearings, said George Nesteruk, OPM's associate director, left the agency for three months in 1982 to manage the campaign of Sarbanes' Republican opponent.

Several days after the election, Nesteruk returned to his job at OPM.

Said Sarbanes: "I want you to stop and think what it means if OPM is to be the stable for political hit men running all around the country engaged in these partisan campaigns."

Although he acknowledged in testimony his political association with Nesteruk dates back to Reagan's 1980 campaign, Devine said he did not arrange to keep Nesteruk's job vacant while he campaigned against Sarbanes.

"I didn't get around to filling it," he said. "There are a lot of jobs that remain vacant for a long period of time in the government."

Critics contend Devine is overly combative in his relations with Capitol Hill. During the confirmation hearings, Devine was repeatedly confronted with his statements about lawmakers, including the remark that, "Congress is our biggest management problem and we have to make some changes if we want it to work."

Florida Department of Agriculture inspectors decontaminate their hands after gathering fruit samples to test for medfly infestation.

Medfly hunt, fruit quarantine continue

MIAMI (AP) — Agriculture officials are keeping a close watch over 2,100 pyramid-like medfly traps hung throughout a 110-mile quarantined section of Dade County, but no more of the destructive pests have turned up.

"I wouldn't be surprised if we found more," Linda Perry, spokeswoman for the Department of Agriculture's Division of Plant Industry in Gainesville, said Thursday.

"These males just emerged from the pupa stage and this tells you it's a second generation," Ms. Perry said. "We're still not sure where the infestation actually is."

The 90-day quarantine was imposed Wednesday, a day after a pair of male Mediterranean fruit flies were discovered trapped in an orange tree about two miles southeast of Opa-locka Airport near Miami. A lone female fly was found in the area in February.

Under the quarantine, no fruit or vegetables can leave the area and certain trees must be stripped of fruit and treated with pesticide, Ms. Perry said.

She said the quarantine isn't likely to have much impact since there are no major commercial growers in the area. But she noted that lime, mango and guava crops could be damaged if the medfly were allowed to spread south.

Aerial spraying of the pesticide malathion is to begin Monday over two 9-square-mile sectors of the county where the three medflies have been discovered.

"I don't think we're being overly cautious," Ms. Perry said. "We want to avoid a repeat of what happened last year."

Last summer, the state spent $1.6 million in a four-month campaign against the medfly that involved similar tactics near downtown Miami and in sections of the city's Little Havana neighborhood.

NATION IN BRIEF

Kidnapped girl unhurt after abductor killed

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A 4-year-old girl kidnapped by a man who demanded money for her safe return was recovered unhurt after her abductor was killed by police following a high-speed chase, authorities said.

A man identified by the Los Angeles County coroner's office as Erez Bar-Levav, 24, died Thursday after two officers fired 10 rounds at him when he appeared to try to back his car over them, Lt. Charles Higbie said.

"He said he would harm her if he did not get the money," Higbie said at a news conference.

The girl, Deanna Jin, 4, was found unharmed at an apartment, Higbie said.

Klansman will get life

MOBILE, Ala. (AP) — A Ku Klux Klansman who said he and another man killed a black youth and hanged his body from a tree to "show Klan strength in Alabama" was sentenced to life in prison.

James Knowles, 21, on Thursday received the maximum sentence for violating the civil rights of Michael Donald, who was 19 when he was abducted and killed in 1981.

Knowles, who pleaded guilty, had testified that he and fellow Klansman Henry Francis Hays, 29, abducted Donald at random from a Mobile street. Hays was sentenced to death in 1984.

School busing to continue

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — School busing to achieve racial desegregation will continue in the state's second largest school district even after it is freed from eight years of court control, officials said.

U.S. District Judge Robert Duncan, who steps down from the bench Friday, on Thursday called Columbus "the most desegregated school system in the United States" and lifted court control imposed after a 1977 order to integrate.

"The buses will still roll," said Raymond Gugel, district supervisor of school desegregation monitoring. "We still cannot discriminate. We'll still have to maintain a racial balance."

Day care workers laid off

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Six day care workers subpoenaed to appear before a grand jury investigating fractured legs suffered by six children at the center have been laid off because the school has been closed.

"The reason is that there aren't any children to care for," said Denise Hartfield, director of the infant ward at the We Serve Humanity School. "They will be called back once this has been resolved."

Since March 11, six children, aged 18 months or less, who were cared for in the nursery have been found to have broken legs. The injuries were described as spiral fractures which usually result from violent force such as twisting.

Woman shows no remorse

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A woman sentenced to 15 years to life in prison for strangling her roommate hacking up the body and cooking some of the parts showed no remorse for her crime, the judge said.

Superior Court Judge Robert Devich on Thursday imposed the term on 44-year-old Francisco Cruz Her 14-year-old son also is charged in Juvenile Court, said Deputy District Attorney Beatrice Donoghue.

Ms. Cruz, an undocumented alien from Mexico, pleaded guilty March 14 to a count of second-degree murder in the slaying of Juana Campos, 58.

Ms. Cruz said she killed the woman in a fit of rage because she mistreated her, Ms. Donoghue said.

Improved relations sought

WASHINGTON (AP) — Developing improved relations with the new Soviet leadership could lead to a revival of U.S.-Soviet cooperation in space exploration, White House space advisers say.

At the annual meeting of the American Institute of Aeronautics and Astronautics on Thursday, Col. Gilbert Rye, National Security Council director of space programs, said the two countries "certainly have capabilities each could benefit from" in space.

The Soviets have said there could be no space cooperation unless Reagan drops his Star Wars' anti-missile defense research program.

Navy team leaves Mobile

MOBILE, Ala. (AP) — A Navy team that toured Mobile briefly to study its suitability as a possible home for a battleship group left the port city today after quizzing anxious city officials.

"This trip was sort of a whirlwind tour. This time we're here to find out specific answers to questions we have about Mobile's proposal," Capt. James Ridge said after meeting with city officials on Thursday.

Ridge heads the eight-member site selection team that arrived in Mobile on Wednesday. Mobile is one of six ports on the Gulf of Mexico vying for the battleship group and the $60 million Navy payroll.

The Navy team planned to meet with Gov. George C. Wallace before departing, but a Wallace aide said Thursday the governor was suffering pain associated with his paralysis and may have to seek hospital care today instead.

FDA criticizes programs

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Food and Drug Administration says screening programs for spinal curvature may be subjecting teen-age girls to excessive radiation at a time when their developing breast tissue is particularly sensitive to the cancer-causing effects of X-rays.

About two-thirds of the cases of scoliosis, a curvature of the spine that develops during adolescence, detected in school screening programs are in females, the FDA said.

The followup evaluations often involve X-rays every three to six months until skeletal maturity, which means teen-age girls may receive cumulative radiation doses 10 to 20 times higher than the amount of radiation received by adult women undergoing mammography, the agency said.

EPA sets new regulation

WASHINGTON (AP) — A new Environmental Protection Agency regulation will require uranium mines to seal off unworked areas to reduce the release of radiation into the air.

The radioactive decay of uranium releases radon, a short-lived radioactive gas that can be breathed into the lungs, where further decay into other solid elements can irradiate the lung and cause lung cancer.

Falling ore prices have reduced the number of active U.S. uranium mines from 300 five years ago to six, but the EPA says some mines could reopen. The active mines are in New Mexico, Utah, Colorado and Arizona. The EPA did not say Thursday whether any of the active mines would be subject to the regulation, which applies to mines with annual production of at least 10,000 tons or a lifetime production of 100,000 tons.

Houses haven't changed much over the years.

Only the names of the rooms.

We put a tablecloth on our kitchen table and the next thing you know, it was a "Breakfast Room." When we added a chair and a lamp to the bedroom, it somehow became a "Suite." When we put a television set in the living room, it became a "Television Room."

Our "Television Room" used to be the "Recreation Room." It was a lot of fun then. At one time we had a ping-pong table there and when we got a few more bucks, we replaced it with a pool table. There were a couple of chairs and a few magazines and a phonograph so we could hear music while we laughed and talked.

But all that ended when we got the TV set. The pool table went to the back porch which was immediately named the "Sun Room." I never understood this as it got the same sun when it was referred to as the back porch.

The TV set brought about a lot of changes in the television room. The chairs and sofas all faced the east wall and there were snack tables at the end of every row of chairs and the three-way lights never got over 40 watts. Naturally, since no one could study there with all that heavy breathing and car chases, the desk had to be moved to the sewing room. It was renamed the "Den." Since you couldn't sew there and have some- one study at the same time, the sewing room went to a small room at the end of the hall, which used to be called simply the small bedroom.

With all those rooms, you'd think I would have a place to sit and read in some kind of privacy, but I don't. The "Den" always has someone talking on the phone. The "Breakfast Room" is noisy and the "Sun Room" is cold in the winter.

There's only one place left for me. It used to be called a bathroom before we added an exercise bicycle and a bathroom scale. Now it's called the "Personal Fitness Room." It will always be a library to me.

Origin of 'feminine' gesture lost

By DICK RORABACK
Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

LOS ANGELES — June Allyson did it. June Haver, too. Never June Havoc.

Gloria DeHaven says she did, but nobody remembers seeing her do it. Gloria Swanson would have died first.

Rita Gam, a putative natural, came along too late.

Debbie Reynolds? Incontrovertibly. Anybody named Debbie is a lock. Or Judy, or Midge, but never Deborah, Judith or Margaret, as in Kerr, Anderson and Rutherford. Ann Rutherford, yes, but last names don't count (unless it happens to be Ouspenskaya).

Cute girls did it, perky girls, wholesome girls. Evil girls — the "other women" — didn't. Tarnished images are too hard won to be compromised on a frivolity.

Mature types — Greer Garson, Madeleine Carroll, Marjorie Main — would have looked silly.

Femmes fatales didn't have to.

Yet an entire generation of young women, getting their cues from the Silver Screen, did it in slavish imitation, risking limb, if not life. A lot of them broke their heels. Some even broke their legs. None of them, as near as can be determined, ever broke a heart — ironic, since that was the object of the whole tssmmes. By its very nature, the exercise was totally lost on the target of seduction. Assuming he was tending to business, he couldn't even see it, for crying out loud!

THE MANEUVER — which we shall call the Gambit, from gam plus bit, as in stück — was and is calculating in concept, precarious in execution, obscure in origin. (Who was the first? And why? Did Eve amble on a bumble in mid-smooch?)

A young lady — somehow she had to be young — standing and ordinarily fully clothed, would reach up to embrace her boyfriend, usually around the neighborhood of the shoulder or neck. As they kissed, one leg would rise until parallel with the ground or a little higher, depending upon the degree of devotion. The other, less comely, limb would maintain contact with the ground or reality, whichever came first.

Smack, slurp — and whoop went the leg. The hip bone connected to the thigh bone.

The leg in question, of course, was the more shapely of the pair. Studies were made, generally in front of the mirror. Like fingerprints, no two legs, even those employed by the same owner, are alike. You could look it up.

"We were taught to do it," said Debbie Reynolds from Reno, Nev., where she was headlining her own show.

"It was a pose, to show off the leg, I would guess.

"Or maybe it was supposed to mean you got so excited one of your legs went numb."

REYNOLDS, OF COURSE, was one of the prime perpetrators of the Gambit — young, cute as a bug's ear, vivacious and the proud progenitor of one of the world's best pair of pins, then as now.

"Sure," she said, "a certain type would do it and a certain type wouldn't. The 'cute' ones would do it, the ones who wore Peter Pan collars and bangs. The others would do things much more sexy, at least for that era.

"Remember, too, it was pin-up time, Varga time, and you had to have the legs to pull it off. Betty Grable, naturally, and all the dancers — dancers have good legs. Heck, even Joan Crawford did it — before she forgot how to dance.

"I don't think it was a natural motion. It was just something a girl learned to do — probably from the movies — when she was 16 or 17."

Did Reynolds do it when she was 16 or 17?

"Me? Hey, I never kissed when I was 16 or 17. I was raised a Nazarene. No matter what, your feet stayed firmly on the floor."

MOST INFLUENCED by the Gambit, rampant in movies and mags from the early '40s to the mid-'50s, were American women who are now of uncertain age — i.e. uncertain, at least for publication, as to whether they are closer to 40 or 60.

Whatever, they all admit to having done it — those with at least passable legs, that is — and reflecting on their semi-savory pasts, they confess that they were basically emulating their celluloid counterparts.

"Railroad stations," said Betty, 40-

60. "That's what I associate with the Gambit. Railroad stations or some other place where you'd be meeting your guy or seeing him off. I mean, you wouldn't be doing such a damn-fool thing if nobody was around to see it."

(A reporter, 40-60, concurs, remembering with moronic affection the regular Saturday milk run, Smith-Holyoke to Dartmouth. For 15 quasi-lustful minutes, the platform would resemble a forum of flamings in bobby sox. It made the blood bubble. It really did.)

"Oh, and there was one other circumstance, too," added Betty: "When your parents were watching you kiss a guy. Up went the leg, zingo, so the kiss wouldn't look too serious."

Linda, 40-60: "It looked so good in the movies; so — I don't know — romantic. I did it because I thought it would make the kiss better. It never did, really, but I kept doing it, hoping it would put a little zip into the smooch. All it put was runs in my stockings. Still, it seemed sophisticated somehow."

ELIZABETH, 40-60: "Didn't it have something to do with being short? I'm only just 5 feet, and I think I did it just to get up there. But I suppose I might just as easily have raised myself on tiptoes. Both tiptoes. The Gambit put you off balance. Then again, so does love ...

"Anyway, it just seemed like the thing to do, like crooking your little finger when you drank tea."

Jan, 40-60: "I never did it, but my mother told me about it."

"Seriously, though, it was such a feminine thing to do, or so we thought. I think the appeal was a peculiar but heady blend of innocence and savoir-faire. Of course, the guys who kissed me had their eyes closed — sometimes for the entire date, but that's another story."

"I still do it, or so my man friend tells me. I think it's when I'm putting my heart into something. Nowadays, it's usually opening a bottle of ketchup."

"Let's face it," said Gloria DeHaven by phone from New York. "It was an affectation — feminine, but affected."

"They posed us that way, mostly for the movie mags. It pulled muscles, arched the leg, made the calf look better. The whole look was great for the body. Like you bent one leg in when the camera was head-on.

"What we wore for the magazine photos, if you can believe it, were blouse tops, high heels and shorts. Today, I suppose, you'd be bare."

"I REMEMBER being asked by the studio to do a layout. We spent the whole day on a farm! Ava Gardner was there, and Donna Reed, I think. There we were, giving this come-hither look to a calf or a pig, with one shapely leg up in the air. Oink! It was hysterical!"

"You got the best effect when the man was tall and the girl had to reach up. No, I don't think it would've worked very well with Joyce Grenfell and Alan Ladd ...

"I did it in films, I'm pretty sure, but less so than, say, June (Allyson). She was 'cute.' I was the 'tease.' There was a difference. Thank heaven I've matured."

"Still, you're right. A certain type would, a certain type wouldn't."

Just for kicks, The Times bounced a short list of "woulds" and "wouldn'ts" off DeHaven. Whatever it was or wasn't, that je ne sais quoi, DeHaven and Times were 100 in sync:

Terry Moore? "Yes." (And still does, God love her.)

Cleo Moore? "Who's Cleo Moore?"

Yvonne de Carlo? "No."

Mitzi Gaynor? "Oh yes!"

Ella Raines? "Never. Nor Claude."

Piper Laurie? "Undoubtedly."

Agnes Moorhead? "You're kidding."

THE POSSIBILITIES are intriguing, if inconclusive. (Any number can play: Send us your short list.)

Definites would have to be Doris Day, Diana Lynn, Ginger Rogers, Jeanne Crain, the early Judy Garland, Priscilla Lane, Janet Blair, anybody playing opposite Van Johnson or Tab Hunter.

Definitely not would be Jane Russell, Thelma Ritter, Audrey Totter, Lauren Bacall, Carole Landis, Jessie Royce Landis, Vera Hruba Ralston, Dina Merrill, anybody named Redgrave.

Betsy Palmer would have done it but not Lilli. Audrey Hepburn but not Katharine. Nobody named Silvana, Marlene or Patience would have hoisted more than a toe.

Do they still do it? Occasionally, but either as a gag or a mnemonic device.

DEAR ABBY

Couple decides in-laws best enjoyed at a distance

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Concerning "Heartbroken Parents," who blame their daughter-in-law for "stealing" their son from them, thank you, Abby, for saying the daughter-in-law may have influenced her husband, but the final choice was their son's.

We live only a few hours from my in-laws, but we visit less and less each year passes. I would enjoy a nice relaxing visit at their home, but it never happens. Please let me speak to them through you, Abby.

You turn every visit into a golden opportunity to impose your religious and political beliefs on us. They're not "discussions"; they're lectures on why your beliefs are right and ours are wrong.

Your son and I are forced to watch the painfully obvious favoritism you show toward your other grandchildren who live in your town and therefore see you more often.

We are subjected to your entire schedule of television programs because you think yours are the only appropriate choices.

We, who are health-minded non-smokers, are subjected to a thick cloud of cigarette smoke during the entire visit.

In short, instead of making us feel as though you enjoy our company, we leave with the feeling that we have spent the weekend at boot camp. — YOUR "THIEVING" DAUGHTER-IN-LAW

DEAR D-I-L: Read on: DEAR ABBY: This is for "Heartbroken Parents," who blamed their daughter-in-law because they no longer "had" a son.

It is a quote from "The Prophet," by Kahlil Gibran: "Your children are not your children. They are the sons and daughters of life's longing for itself. And though they are with you, yet they belong not to you. You may house their bodies, but not their souls, for their souls dwell in the house of tomorrow, which you cannot visit even in your dreams." — MRS. C., LAGUNA, CALIF.

DEAR ABBY: May I say a word about the "Heartbroken Parents" who blame their daughter-in-law for "stealing" their son from them?

I'm a daughter-in-law, too, and if it weren't for me, my in-laws would see a lot less of their son. I'm the one who reminds my husband to call his mother. I'm the one who keeps track of the birthdays in his family. I'm the one who writes the letters, buys the cards and gifts for Mother's Day and Father's Day, and puts the pen in their son's hand to get him to sign the card. And I'll bet I'm not all that unusual.

No name or town, please. My mother-in-law thinks her son is perfect. — ANONYMOUS WIFE

Researchers believe viruses could be cause of cancer

SAN DIEGO (AP) — If viruses do cause cancers, as some researchers suspect, it would take "very intimate contact" for the disease to spread from one person to another, says the director of the National Cancer Institute.

"We probably have underestimated the role viruses play in human cancer," Dr. Vincent T. DeVita Jr. said.

DeVita said during the American Cancer Society's science-writers seminar that he believes viruses will prove responsible for most lymphomas, cancers of the lymph nodes.

"Evidence is very strong that people with liver cancer have had prior exposure to the hepatitis virus," he said. "I have little doubt hepatitis vaccine will not only wipe out hepatitis, but liver cancer."

There also is good evidence that papilloma viruses, which normally cause warts, cause tumors of the cervix in women, DeVita said.

He emphasized that cancers known to stem from viruses cannot be transmitted by sneezes or other casual contact.

"You need very intimate contact" through sex or exposure to contaminated, transfused blood, he said. "It's not easy, thank God."

Recent reports that several people in North Carolina developed cancer of the blood cells after being visited by someone with the disease may turn out to be nothing more than coincidence, he said.

The idea that viruses can cause human cancer drew intense scientific interest in the late 1950s and early 1960s after viruses were found responsible for cancers in animals, DeVita said. But the concept faded when research efforts failed to establish definite links with human tumors.

In the late 1970s, however, the NCI's Dr. Robert Gallo discovered a form of leukemia was caused by a virus that invades human T cells — white blood cells that are part of the body's disease-fighting immune system, DeVita said.

Men worry more about strength

Hearst News Service

If you're male, over 35 and more worried about decreasing physical stamina than appearance, Dr. Louise Atcheson says you have a lot of company.

Atcheson is a licensed clinical psychologist who has been traveling the country and interpreting a national survey on men's attitudes toward aging, commissioned by Collagen Corp. The survey was conducted through 1,000 face-to-face interviews with middle- and upper-income American men over 35 in 15 shopping malls around the nation. The study is a companion to Collagen's 1983 survey of American women, on which Atcheson also worked.

One of the things the male quiz found was that 78 percent of those questioned were more concerned with losing their zip than their looks.

"Only 27 percent of the women surveyed felt the same way," Atcheson says. "I wanted to check that out, to see if other people's research had turned up the same result. I found that a group in Chicago had come up with exactly the same conclusion. Men focus much more on physiology in midlife. What women fear most about growing older is looking older. In certain respects, women see themselves as gaining energy as they age. Two-thirds of them said life begins at 40. Less than half of the men said that."

Some of the other findings in the male survey:

— More than two-thirds of American men over 35 approve of a man having a medical procedure (skin tightening, hair transplants, etc.) for reasons of self-esteem or career advancement, and about 15 percent said they'd consider such a process for themselves.

— "If we'd done the survey 10 years ago, that 15 percent probably would have been zero," Atcheson says.

— Wrinkles are more distressful to men than balding as a sign of aging.

— Fear of death was more than twice as high for men as for women.

— What men enjoy most about getting older is the same thing women enjoy most: "more freedom," although this was mentioned by 18 percent fewer men than women (45 percent to 63 percent).

— Women mentioned that with the children grown and out of the house, they had more time for themselves," Atcheson says. "Men talked more about having time for recreation and hobbies. I got the impression that women don't perceive themselves as slowing down, while many men feel burned out. Women are going back to school or into a job; men are saying, 'What happened?' They either poured so much into their jobs they didn't have time to develop themselves, or they didn't reach their goals and considered themselves failures."

— Men, in general, are much more fearful of aging than women are, but talk about it less — or are hesitant to talk about it at all.

— "Talking about themselves still is very difficult for men," Atcheson says. "When we asked what men fear most and enjoy most, 11 percent and 14 percent had no opinion."

— "Most men see themselves as enjoying changed attitudes as they age," she says. "They feel wiser, better able to accept what they have and be more content. They don't want to look beautiful or like they're 20, but they want to look more alive. I understand things are difficult for men now. They have needs that should be addressed but perhaps aren't, and I think it's time women put out a helping hand."

Bleyer attributed the increase in lives saved to more individualized methods of predicting outcomes of the disease. That means children expected to do well are identified

Noting that cancer is the second greatest killer of children over the age of 6 months, Bleyer said that at least 300 youngsters are alive today because of the advances made in tailoring treatment to the individual. He drew the figure from a study of about 3,000 children with cancer beginning in April 1978. Five years later, 2,000 of those children are Calling brain cancer "the last frontier in the fight to combat childhood cancer," Finlay said new studies show that 41 percent of children with brain tumors, who receive drug treatments in addition to surgery and radiation therapy, are alive today.

Officials say arrests only one battle in war against drugs

By CARL MANNING

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Two of Mexico's top drug traffickers are behind bars and their La Familia organization damaged, but U.S. and Mexican officials agree a major anti-drug war lies ahead before they can claim victory.

Authorities on Thursday continued questioning Ernesto Fonseca, 60, known as "Don Neto," the man the government calls the nation's drug overlord and leader of La Familia, or "The Family," a confederation of drug traffickers.

He was arrested Tuesday as Rafael Caro Quintero, with a reputation as one of the top four members of the organization, was brought before a federal judge on drug charges following his arrest last week in Costa Rica.

Caro Quintero had been sought as the chief suspect in the kidnapping of U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration agent Enrique Camarena Salazar and a Mexican pilot who worked with him, Alfredo Zavala Avelar. Both men were kidnapped Feb. 7 in Guadalajara and their bodies found March 5.

The power of La Familia reaches throughout Mexico with a well-organized, well-funded operation that has international connections.

"In many ways it is like a cobweb. You pull a string and think you are getting close, only to find another string. It's an endless process and as long as there is demand there is going to be a problem," said a ranking Mexican official who spoke on condition he not be identified.

"Mexico works at its own pace, maybe not as quick as some would like, but in the end you have more than you thought."

American officials criticized Mexico for its slow initial response to reports of Camarena's kidnapping within sight of the U.S. Consulate in Guadalajara, home base for La Familia and considered a major drug center in Mexico.

A U.S. Embassy spokesman, who did not want to be identified for protocol reasons, agreed the anti-drug war, in which the United States has been cooperating with Mexico, is far from over.

"Nobody expects them to stop doing business overnight. One or two battle victories doesn't mean the war has been won. It just means we have to keep fighting the war," he said.

One source with close ties to the investigation said the drug operation has been "severely damaged" because it has not been able to operate as freely as in the past. The source, who spoke only on condition of anonymity, estimated the organization's losses "in the millions of dollars."

U.S. officials have estimated that nearly 30 percent of marijuana and 38 percent of the heroin used in the United States comes from Mexico while 30 percent of the U.S.-used cocaine passes through Mexico from South America.

As an indication of its power, La Familia controls the flow of 12 of the 20 tons of cocaine that passes through Mexico annually, U.S. officials say.

Counting Caro Quintero, 16 people have been formally charged, including six Jalisco state policeman and a former officer. Officials say Fonseca is expected to be charged along with 23 people arrested with him.

Caro Quintero said in his confession, which he repudiated, that he paid the equivalent of about $300,000 to Armando Pavon Reyes, former commander of the Federal Judicial Police in Guadalajara, to be able to leave that city in his private jet Feb. 9.

Pavon Reyes was fired after reports circulated that he and Caro Quintero exchanged a farewell embrace at the airport and was last seen over the weekend when he surrendered to federal police here.

Governor urges action be taken against acid rain

QUEBEC (AP) — The rapid decline of West German forests in recent years should be a lesson proving the value of quick action to fight acid rain, Wisconsin Gov. Anthony Earl said.

Earl, who led a delegation from the National Governors Association on a European tour, on Thursday described his trip to a convention on acid rain which drew representatives from 15 U.S. states and six Canadian provinces.

"Unfortunately it took great damage to a treasured natural resource to move the West Germans to action," Earl said in an address. "I hope we can learn from their misfortune."

Acid rain is the popular term for pollutants blown long distances before falling to earth and damaging lakes, streams and forests.

Earl said there was enough scientific evidence to support immediate action against acid rain while research continues.

"It does not make a great deal of sense to wait until the last 't' is crossed or 'i' dotted," he said.

He suggested a comprehensive "early warning system" to detect forest decline.

"By the time you see such visible damage, you've lost the battle," Earl said.

Programs to cut back acid rain — likely to cost billions of dollars and eliminate jobs in the industrial Midwest — have been stalled in Congress.

The Reagan administration says more study is needed before starting an intensive, wide-reaching cleanup. Last month, Canada and the United States each named a special envoy to work together on the problem.

Gov. John Sununu of New Hampshire, who also spoke to the convention, said Canada has relied more on rhetoric than action in the fight against acid rain.

"Canada has been talking a great game. Canada has done nothing," Sununu told reporters after his speech.

Sununu, a Republican, backs a program to cut acid rain, but said he wanted to dispel the "legend that has been propagated" that Canada is far ahead in its cleanup program.

"Your emissions per capita are twice as large as ours and emissions per unit of industrial output three times as large," Sununu said, speaking to the Canadians in the conference room.

"We must make a choice whether we will move toward international agreement or remain stalemated through international rhetoric," he said.

The New Hampshire governor said the commitment by the Conservative government of Prime Minister Brian Mulroney to cut the culprit emissions in half by 1994 is "long overdue" and will merely let Canada catch up to the United States.

"We should work together rather than merely posture," Sununu said. In one gesture of cooperation, New York state and Quebec province launched a computer database of bibliographic information on acid rain, to be called ACIDOC.

The database, which operates in both French and English, is intended to provide information at a fee to researchers, environmental groups and the public.

New York's commissioner of environmental conservation, Henry G. Williams, issued a list of topics proposed by researchers for study to determine if acid rain is a threat to human health.

"These distinguished scientists are leading the way into a new and critical area of study — the link between acid rain and human health," Williams said in a statement. "The links are complex, and there is much research work to be done."

Airport closed following attack

TOKYO (AP) — New Tokyo International Airport was closed today after it appeared that several rockets were fired across the runway, Japan's Kyodo News Service reported.

Attacks with rocket-like explosives were reported in three other areas, including one near Tokyo's second airport, at Haneda, Kyodo said.

Haneda airport remained open and flights scheduled to land at the international airport at Narita were diverted there, Kyodo said.

Kyodo said explosives were fired across Narita's runway at 8:55 p.m., and that the airport was closed within five minutes.

No injuries were reported. One car near Narita airport caught fire and one station wagon in front of the Haneda terminal was hit and heavily damaged by rocket-like explosives, Kyodo said.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Bishop doesn't care whether he's unpopular

LONDON (AP) — The Bishop of Durham, the Rt. Rev. David Jenkins, said he didn't care whether his doubts on basic church doctrine and political opinions made him unpopular.

"When you have learned something over 40 years, you have to pursue it. ... I get on very well with my family and the priests in my diocese, and that is what matters," Jenkins said Thursday.

Politicians, laymen and some members of the state Church of England's clergy have called for him to cease his remarks, some of which have been critical of Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's government, or step down as bishop. He has rejected the idea.

Jenkins has angered Anglican traditionalists by expressing doubt about the historical accuracy of biblical accounts of the Virgin Birth and the Resurrection.

Ship allowed to sail home

MARSEILLE, France (AP) — A Libyan freighter which last year was suspected of laying mines in the Red Sea was allowed to sail for home after being held in Marseille's harbor for nine months.

The freighter, the Ghat, had been held under a court order obtained by a French company whose vessel, the Rove, has been held in the Libyan port of Benghazi since October 1979.

The Libyan vessel was freed Thursday after the French company, Marseille Fret, and an official Libyan delegation agreed last week the Rove should be sold for scrap.

The Ghat was suspected by French authorities of having been involved in laying mines that started exploding in the Red Sea early last year.

No firm proof of who laid the mines has been established.

Plant to remain closed

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — The Union Carbide Corp. said it will not reopen its pesticide plant in Bhopal, where a gas leak killed more than 2,000 people and injured 200,000 last December.

A company statement issued in Bombay on Thursday said the decision came after government officials made it "abundantly clear that permission to restart the factory will not be given."

The plant in Bhopal, capital of Madhya Pradesh state, leaked more than 40 tons of methyl isocyanate on Dec. 3 in the world's worst industrial disaster.

The plant was closed after the leak, and government officials have controlled it since then while investigations were conducted. The Madhya Pradesh government said Thursday the factory would be officially shut down July 11.

Bombs damage churches

ROME (AP) — Gasoline bombs were thrown into two Roman Catholic churches in central Rome, heavily damaging the front door of one and destroying a confessional booth in the other, police said.

No injuries were reported. An anonymous caller to the ANSA news agency later claimed the Anti-Fascist Attack Squad, which police said has no record of any previous terrorist acts, was responsible for the bombs.

The caller was quoted as saying the bombs were a response to "the political protection offered by the pope to Almirante, Le Pen and Greek Fascists."

Pope John Paul II on Wednesday met with 16 rightist members of the European Parliament, including Giorgio Almirante, leader of Italy's neo-Fascist Italian Social Movement, Jean-Marie Le Pen, president of France's extreme right National Front, and Chrysanthos Dimitriadis of Greece's National Political Union.

Oil company jet crashes

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — A twin-engine jet operated by the national oil monopoly crashed in a northwestern province, killing all those on board, company officials said. They said the tentative death toll was seven.

Hiracio Alonso, spokesman for the YPF monopoly in Buenos Aires, said the British-made Hawker-Siddeley jet left the capital Thursday carrying seven people. He said officials were uncertain if anyone came aboard or disembarked during a stopover in the city of Tucuman.

The plane crashed in a remote, hilly area of Salta province about 1,050 miles northwest of Buenos Aires, Alonso said.

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — An American-born bishop suffered slight wounds when a group of assailants tossed a grenade at his jeep in northeastern Nicaragua.

Monsignor Salvador Schaeffer, a U.S. citizen who is bishop of the Nicaraguan city of Bluefields, said he was not sure who threw the grenade in the attack Thursday. The Sandinista government blamed Nicaraguan rebels.

Schaeffer, 65, a native of Wisconsin, spoke briefly with reporters when he arrived in Managua, his face scratched and his blue shirt spattered with blood.

He said grenade fragments caused flesh wounds in one hand and his lower back but his driver, Isaac Vargas, was not injured.

Coup could be possible

GUATEMALA CITY (AP) — Thousands of panicky shoppers were stocking up on food and gasoline after the military government pledged it would carry out a new austerity program and rumors of a coup swept the country.

Gen. Oscar Humberto Mejia Victores, the chief of government, said on national radio and television Thursday that he would not back-track on enforcement of tough new economic measures raising taxes on imports and imposing new taxes on most domestic products.

Cher leaves glitter for serious roles

By DOLORES BARCLAY

NEW YORK (AP) — For almost a decade she was a one-name megastar who flashed her flesh in Bob Mackie splendor and wryly dropped quips in deadpan delight.

Today, Cher is one of the hottest "new" serious actresses around. The quips still come and go. But the sequins have been shipped to that great glitterdome in the sky, and a more subdued, though still glamorous, Cher has emerged.

Her Academy Award-nominated role in "Silkwood" and now her portrayal of Rusty Dennis in the movie "Mask" has transformed her into a commanding screen presence. She displays a simple, physical beauty in the film and speaks the universal anguish of a mother with a dying child.

Rusty bops around with a steely exterior, but inside there's a sweet vulnerability. Her son Rocky, played by Eric Stoltz in layers of face makeup, suffers from a congenital disorder of excessive bone growth called craniodysplasia. His head ballooned to monstrous proportions, while the rest of his body remained normal. Their very special mother-son relationship is the spirit of this Peter Bogdanovich work.

"I have this feeling that no matter what anybody does to this movie adversely, you can't ruin it," Cher said one rainy evening in an interview at her hotel suite. "The story is so good and the relationship between Eric and me was so good."

"I told my agent that if I knew this movie was going to be a bomb, I'd do it anyway," she said, stretching leather clad lean legs across the sofa. "This was important to me. This is something that happened to somebody at one time in history... This is what I want to do — help people become aware of their humanity."

For the 38-year-old Cherilyn Sarkisian, the journey from show biz glitz queen to acting fulfilled a youthful vision.

"This is something I've wanted since I've wanted anything," said Cher, taking a healthy swig of hot chocolate from a delicate porcelain tea cup. "When do you start wanting things? When you're 6?"

At first, it was fame she desired and it arrived with ex-husband Sonny Bono. She was 19 when they became a singing team and sold more than 3 million copies of their first record, "I Got You Babe." They sang their way through the '60s into the '70s until she split with Bono. Then she married and divorced rocker Greg Allman.

"I wanted to be famous. Then I got to be famous," Cher said. "But fame without substance makes you feel guilty and stupid. Celebrity status isn't much fun. Fame is the most bizarre thing. Unless you can do something meaningful with it, it means nothing."

With fame came money. Yes, said Cher, "I like money. But also, it leaves you kind of empty."

To make a full commitment to acting meant divesting herself of a sizable income as a showstopper. She was earning as much as $320,000 a week for doing two shows a night in Las Vegas.

"I'm paring down my lifestyle," she said. "The trappings were important. But I see Meryl (Streep) walk around grubbed out to the max, and Jane (Fonda) too. They could care less because it's what inside that's important. I'm glad this came to me late. I'm better prepared for it."

Her start in acting was an auspicious one. Though she had made two small films, "Good Times" and "Chastity," she wasn't recognized as an actress until she landed on the New York stage in "Come Back to the Five and Dime, Jimmy Dean, Jimmy Dean." Director Robert Altman later put her in the movie version.

She wasn't fully accepted as an actress until Mike Nichols cast her opposite Meryl Streep as Karen Silkwood's lesbian roommate in "Silkwood." The role, played without makeup and in blue jeans, earned Cher an Academy Award nomination last year for best supporting actress.

Dallas' Non-Smokers Inn proves more than pipe dream

By ALAN SAYRE

DALLAS (AP) — Three years ago, Lyndon Sanders opened a motel catering exclusively to non-smokers. He believed it would be successful. He was right.

Today, Sanders' Non-Smokers Inn is making money, but he isn't planning to expand. In fact, he recently turned down an opportunity to take over a small non-smoking inn in England.

He'd rather talk about smoking and help other businesses expand their non-smoking facilities.

"I have restaurants and motels calling all the time asking how do we do it," he said. "That's what I wanted to accomplish — not build a chain of non-smoking inns."

"I've divested myself of everything else but this so I can work on the smoking issue," he said.

Sanders, 58, who was "born into the motel business" in Fort Stockton, made 27 speeches last year to various clubs and organizations on the subjects of smoking in the workplace and in public.

Sanders said he has a personal interest in the issue. "Smoking killed my father and killed a dozen of my close friends," he said.

Many of the 80,000 to 90,000 guests who have stayed at his motel, located on the Airport Freeway in west Dallas near Texas Stadium, have heard of the inn from others, he said.

"We knew we were going to be a success, although some (in the industry) said we were crazy," Sanders said.

Those staying at Sanders' inn sign an agreement to pay a $250 cleaning fee if they smoke in a room. Sanders said there have been only about five cases where a guest broke the no-smoking agreement.

Sanders said he became interested in building a tobacco-free hostelry in the early 1970s because of his experience as an airline passenger. "I began noticing how people appreciated non-smoking sections," he said.

The first experiment came in 1974 when Sanders designated 15 units of a 218-room motel in Albuquerque, N.M., as non-smoking. The motel's restaurant also included a non-smoking section, he said.

By the time Sanders sold his interest in the inn last August, 120 of the rooms were reserved for non-smokers, he said.

The Non-Smokers Inn in Dallas, with 134 rooms and no restaurant, started making a profit within six weeks of its opening, he said.

In contrast, lenders who finance motel projects usually "look at three to seven years to make a profit," Sanders said.

A non-smoking room nets a profit of $1,000 more each year over a smoking room, Sanders said. It's simply easier to clean a smoke-free room, he explained.

"We did a study in Albuquerque. It takes 26 percent less time to clean a non-smoking room," he added.

In addition, he said, non-smoking employees miss fewer days and are more productive.

Sanders said he doesn't object to adults smoking in private. But second-hand smoke in public areas is another matter.

"People are waking up to the fact that smoke hurts non-smokers," he said.

The health effects of passive smoking — breathing other people's cigarette fumes — are still controversial, although some experts believe that it irritates the lungs and aggravates angina, among other things.

Researchers have found that the most passive smoking occurs in homes where family members puff more than 40 cigarettes a day. In those cases, a non-smoker would inhale the equivalent of one or two cigarettes, according to a study published last September in the New England Journal of Medicine.

Many who doubted the feasibility of non-smoking motels have become believers, Sanders said.

Dallas' Non-Smokers Inn proves more than pipe dream

By ALAN SAYRE

DALLAS (AP) — Three years ago, Lyndon Sanders opened a motel catering exclusively to non-smokers. He believed it would be successful. He was right.

Today, Sanders' Non-Smokers Inn is making money, but he isn't planning to expand. In fact, he recently turned down an opportunity to take over a small non-smoking inn in England.

He'd rather talk about smoking and help other businesses expand their non-smoking facilities.

"I have restaurants and motels calling all the time asking how do we do it," he said. "That's what I wanted to accomplish — not build a chain of non-smoking inns."

"I've divested myself of everything else but this so I can work on the smoking issue," he said.

Sanders, 56, who was "born into the motel business" in Fort Stockton, made 27 speeches last year to various clubs and organizations on the subjects of smoking in the workplace and in public.

Sanders said he has a personal interest in the issue. "Smoking killed my father and killed a dozen of my close friends..." he said.

Many of the 80,000 to 90,000 guests who have stayed at his motel, located on the Airport Freeway in west Dallas near Texas Stadium, have heard of the inn from others, he said.

"We knew we were going to be a success, although some (in the industry) said we were crazy," Sanders said.

Those staying at Sanders' inn sign an agreement to pay a $250 cleaning fee if they smoke in a room. Sanders said there have been only about five cases where a guest broke the no-smoking agreement.

Sanders said he became interested in building a tobacco-free hostelry in the early 1970s because of his experience as an airline passenger. "I began noticing how people appreciated non-smoking sections," he said.

The first experiment came in 1974 when Sanders designated 15 units of a 218-room motel in Albuquerque, N.M., as non-smoking. The motel's restaurant also included a non-smoking section, he said.

By the time Sanders sold his interest in the inn last August, 120 of the rooms were reserved for non-smokers, he said.

The Non-Smokers Inn in Dallas, with 134 rooms and no restaurant, started making a profit within six weeks of its opening, he said.

In contrast, lenders who finance motel projects usually "look at three to seven years to make a profit," Sanders said.

A non-smoking room nets a profit of $1,000 more each year over a smoking room, Sanders said. It's simply easier to clean a smoke-free room, he explained.

"We did a study in Albuquerque. It takes 26 percent less time to clean a non-smoking room," he added.

In addition, he said, non-smoking employees miss fewer days and are more productive.

Sanders said he doesn't object to adults smoking in private. But second-hand smoke in public areas is another matter.

"People are waking up to the fact that smoke hurts non-smokers," he said.

The health effects of passive smoking — breathing other people's cigarette fumes — are still controversial, although some experts believe that it irritates the lungs and aggravates angina, among other things.

Researchers have found that the most passive smoking occurs in homes where family members puff more than 40 cigarettes a day. In those cases, a non-smoker would inhale the equivalent of one or two cigarettes, according to a study published last September in the New England Journal of Medicine.

Many who doubted the feasibility of non-smoking motels have become believers, Sanders said.

FUTURE THINK.

Who would have thought a Buick Electra could be so aerodynamic, responsive, and precise in handling? Who would have expected front-wheel drive, available multi-port fuel injection and rack-and-pinion steering in a car so quiet, luxurious, and smooth riding? Buick thinks ahead without forgetting the past. Look at the proof.

Buicks are equipped with engines produced at facilities operated by GM car groups, subsidiaries or affiliated companies worldwide.

tough enough to win the world's roughest off-road race, and you can't go home
a loser.

In case you didn't know, an Isuzu just won the Baja 1000 in the Stock Mini-Pickup Class.

While that may come as a surprise to Chevrolet, Ford, Nissan, Toyota and Mitsubishi, it doesn't surprise us.

Because we've been building trucks tougher than the world's toughest roads since 1939.

And since Isuzu can survive the torturous badlands of Baja, where there are no roads, it'll certainly take any punishment you can dish out.

So if you're looking for a tough truck, here's your chance to invest in a real winner.
