Attack victim stable

BIG SPRING — A local man is in stable condition today after suffering three stab wounds in a knifing attack Saturday evening, a spokesperson at Scenic Mountain Medical Center said.

Eusevio Chevito Calaviz, who refused to disclose his age or address to police, reported he was assaulted with an unknown type of edged weapon by unknown persons at about 6:16 p.m. in the 1200 block of West Sixth Street.

No motive was given for the attack.

Trustees to meet

School boards of the Forsan, Garden City, Borden County and Coahoma school districts will meet tonight to discuss a wide-ranging variety of topics:

Forsan

FORSAN — Forsan school trustees will discuss paying tuition for students to attend vocational classes at Howard College and Big Spring schools when they meet at 7 p.m. in the board room.

A number of Forsan students have expressed interest in participating in the Howard College cosmetology program, according to Superintendent J.F. Poyner.

Trustees will decide whether to pay the students' costs of attending that class, along with Big Spring vocational classes that aren't offered at Forsan, he added.

In other action, the board will consider:

- Computer bids for the junior high and high school; and depository bids for 1989-91.
- Copier needs and costs, a policy update, a request to purchase the old football stadium lights and poles and resignations and hirings.

Borden County

GAIL — Borden County school trustees will have a light agenda when they meet at 8 p.m. in the board room.

Among the action items they will consider is a request from 24 students to transfer into the Borden County system. Several of those students currently attend Big Spring schools, Superintendent James McLeroy said.

In other action, the trustees will consider:

- Lunch ticket prices for the 1989-90 school year.
- Superintendent, financial and personnel reports.
- Selecting a delegate to attend the Texas Association of School Boards convention, to be held in San Antonio this September.

Coahoma

COAHOMA — Trustees will hear reports on enrollment and achievement test scores during their regular meeting at 8 p.m. in the board room.

In other business, the board will consider:

- Selecting a depository for the next two school years.
- Approving a budget amendment.
- Certification of 1989 property valuations.

Garden City

GARDEN CITY — Glasscock school trustees will consider a request to rescind a curriculum change when they meet at 8 p.m. in the board room.

Superintendent Donn Stringer said that the district has received a letter from a parent requesting that the trustees rescind the changes they made in the eighth-grade home economics and speech classes.

In other business, the trustees will consider:

- Depository bids and a block grant to the Region 18 Service Center.
- A proposed tax rate and district valuations for the 1989-90 school year.
- Reports from the superintendent; and contractor on newly completed construction.
- The district's accreditation report.

Chinese transfer students in limbo

By SONNI EFRON
Associated Press Writer

BOSTON — The unrest in Beijing has put the lives of tens of thousands of Chinese students and scholars in this country in limbo, and even the children of the elite fear they must turn away from their homeland.

"If China becomes a democratic country, I will go back," said Qian Songnian, a theoretical physicist at Dartmouth College. "But in this situation, certainly not."

Chinese students began arriving in the United States in small numbers in the years after President Nixon's visit to China. The first large exchanges began in 1978, said Huang Zhengdong, a Yale University law student who heads a semi-official organization of Chinese students in the United States.

The figure of 40,000 Chinese students now in the United States is quoted by such groups as the Returned Student Association in Beijing. But the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service said a recent computer check found 73,000 Chinese with active student visas.

The Returned Student Association says there are an additional 40,000 Chinese students in countries other than the United States.

The majority here are graduate students in science, engineering and mathematics, mostly at major universities. And many are the sons and daughters of China leaders.

The number of student visas granted jumped from 17 in 1977 to 201 in 1978, and has soared to 18,000 new visas granted in fiscal 1988, said spokeswoman Frances Jones of the State Department, which does not keep cumulative figures.

Before 1980, "the political requirements were so tight," said Huang. "Their political backgrounds would be very clean. They came from families that were not class enemies," including families who fought for the communist revolution, workers, and peasants.

The political restrictions were eased after 1981, he said, though a 1987 rule said they had to show they "love the motherland and cherish socialism."

In practice, Huang said, "People who passed the academic examinations usually were allowed as long as their political qualifications were not that bad."

California universities are the top U.S. draw, with more than 10,000 Chinese students, followed by New York, Texas, Illinois and Massachusetts, according to the INS.

A total of 320,000 Chinese nationals are now in the United States, INS spokesman Greg Leo said. Following the crackdown, Attorney General Richard Thornburgh announced that all will be permitted to stay for at least one year.

Though the students here are among the best and the brightest of China, few are sponsored by their government.

By one estimate, only 2,000 to 3,000 students receive full government scholarships. Most graduate students are funded by their host universities. At Stanford University, for example, not one of the 150-odd Chinese students has a government subsidy, said Karlene Dickey, associate dean of graduate studies.

While official People's Republic of China media are condemning the outbreak of "Western bourgeois liberalism," it has been fashionable for China's elite to send its sons and daughters to study abroad where they are exposed to such ideas.

STANTON — If you've seen one arrowhead, you've seen them all — unless you unearthed it with your own plov in your own field and the arrowhead became a museum exhibit.

The Martin County Historical Museum has plenty of them, all brought in by local farmers, along with other American Indian artifacts.

The museum has been designated as one of the best small county museums in the state by the Texas Association of Museums. Although the building may appear small, once inside, a visitor can keep going around the display area a long while before running into "Grandmother's Attic," an exhibit filled to overflowing with every kind of antique item that a grandmother might have used during early frontier days.

Ruby Payne, curator, said that one of the best aspects of the displays is that almost every item, large or small, was brought in by a

Martin County resident. "The arrowheads, the quilts, the churns — everything was brought to us by folks from around here. We have incredible support from Martin Countians."

Hesitant to take much credit for the quality of the exhibits and materials, Payne said that June Reid, president of the Martin County Historical Commission, was responsible for the design and layout of each exhibit.

"In 1969, during the Old Settlers Reunion, June was able to use a vacant office building in downtown Stanton to display some historical artifacts, and she's been doing a great job ever since," Payne said.

It was a one-day event, but the

Suspect in custody after couple injured in attack

By BRADLEY WORRELL

BIG SPRING — A local woman was rushed to a local hospital this morning after she suffered severe cuts on her right hand when a man forced his way in her home and fought with her husband for control of a knife.

The woman, whose name and age are being withheld by police, was treated and released from Scenic Mountain Medical Center for cut wounds after being rushed to the hospital by Rural Metro Ambulance.

The couple's alleged attacker is in custody today after also being treated at Scenic Mountain Medical Center for injuries he sustained while struggling for control of the knife, Police Sgt. Bobby Armstrong said today.

The man had not been arraigned or had bond set as of presstime.

The couple were in their east side home when a man beat and kicked the door at 3:33 a.m. When the husband partially opened the door to determine who the man was, the man succeeded in forcing his way inside the house, Armstrong said.

Once inside, the man threatened the wife at knifepoint and demanded keys to the family car, Armstrong said. Details of the incident are unclear, but apparently the man forced the woman outside the house and the husband followed. The man reportedly used the wife as a shield and told the husband he would release the wife once inside the couple's car.

The house where the couple lived did not have a phone, so the husband ran to a next door neighbor's house and told them to call the police, Armstrong said. At some point the husband and the attacker struggled for control of the knife, at which point the wife and the attacker sustained injuries from the knife, Armstrong said.

Police arrived on the scene a short time later. Armstrong said the couple did not know their attacker.

Inside Texas

Accidental patronage?

HOUSTON (AP) — A city councilman said he was unaware he voted in favor of city contracts that gave about $3.9 million in subcontracting to a company controlled by one of his brothers.

Terry Wilson, an assistant Harris County district attorney, said his office will investigate whether Councilman Ben Reyes' actions on the contracts violated conflict-of-interest or other laws. The Houston Post reported Sunday in a copyright story.

Reyes said he had not filed disclosure forms or abstained from voting in regard to Royal Supply Corp. because he did not make a connection between general contractors who received city contracts and Royal Supply, which worked as a subcontractor.

Reyes' brother, Tony G. Reyes, is president and an owner of Royal Supply.

Alamo artifact found

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A junior archaeology student on a downtown dig initially thought she had struck a chip of common pottery. But the find actually was a cannon ball believed fired by Santa Anna's troops on the defenders of the Alamo.

The bronze-coated grapeshot was uncovered recently by an archaeological team from University of Texas at San Antonio.

The ball, fired in clusters from cannons, was found about two feet down in the northwest corner of a dig across from the shrine of Texas liberty, where historians say a trench was dug to defend against Mexican troops.

"I thought it might be a piece of pottery because I could see the green," said Barbara Meisner, who found the ball.

Dad's triple surprise

BEAUMONT (AP) — For Father's Day, Lynn Lovelace received a home-cooked chicken dinner with all the trimmings — and three sons.

The meal, topped with ice cream, was prepared by the nurses at St. Elizabeth Hospital, where Lovelace's wife, Diane, gave birth to three babies on Sunday morning.

Charge nurse Helen Washington explained it was the least they could do for the fatigued father, although he will undergo lessons in diaper changing and baby care a little later.

"Right now, I'm worn out," said Lovelace, who is a machinist from Mauriceville.

Drought and floods divide, cripple state

By DAVID SEDENO
Associated Press Writer

In San Antonio, patrolmen may be going on water patrols soon if the South Texas city institutes water rationing. In the rain-soaked Dallas area, law enforcement officials are monitoring overflowing lakes to ensure recreational outings don't end in disaster.

The crazy weather that has divided the state for more than a month — flood-like conditions in the north and hot, windy and dry conditions in the south — has sparked concern among city officials, farmers, ranchers and recreational outfitters whose businesses are in danger.

Weather patterns moving out of the Rocky Mountains have dumped large amounts of rain over parts of West and North Texas, flooding communities, overflowing lakes and rivers and resulting in at least 18 drowning deaths.

But in drought-plagued South Texas — most of the area south of San Antonio — scattered showers have brought little relief to the area.

In the South Texas community of Agua Dulce, farmer Joe Dunham is pretty much convinced that most South Texas corn and grain growers will have to tighten their belts another notch and wait until next year for a good crop.

The unseasonably hot, dry and DILLEY — Frio County extension agent Clyde Crumley looks over a battered cornfield near here recently. While North Texas dries from flood-like conditions, South Texas suffers from hot, windy and drought-like conditions.

windy conditions of the past several weeks have spelled disaster for many dryland crops, including his 3,000 acres of corn and grain in Agua Dulce, west of Corpus Christi.

"We just finished the hottest and driest May on record. The winds were unbelievably high," Dunham said. "It was like a hair dryer blowing in on the crop and it dried everything completely. There's not much there."

And Clyde Crumley, Frio County extension agent, says numerous corn and sorghum farmers unable to irrigate their crops in his area are in for another long, hot summer.

"There are some poor guys out there who really have had a bad year. They've been through the wringer," he said. "It's been hot and dry and then there's been hail and rain. Some farmers are not going to get a thing."

San Antonio is still about 3 inches below its normal rainfall and before scattered showers brought relief to the area last week, city officials were contemplating instituting water rationing measures and using police to enforce them.

Rain also has missed other South Texas cities from San Antonio to the Rio Grande. Laredo is about an inch below normal; Corpus Christi, about 3 inches below normal; Victoria, 6 inches below normal; and Brownsville, an inch below normal.

"The area south of San Antonio is the worst hit area in the state," said Jose Garcia, meteorologist with the Southwest Agricultural Weather Service Center in College Station.

"Many areas don't have access to irrigation, and the drought in that area will continue to be on the severe side for the next few weeks," Garcia said.

Pleasanton rancher Daniel Heinen said the drought has broken farmers and ranchers in his area, and he has scaled his 500 cows to 200 and will decide at the end of the summer his next step.

"It's very critical right now. It's about as tough as I've ever seen it," he said. "We've been out of surface water for a long time and people try to relate this drought to this year and last year, but this thing started six years ago and we haven't had an average rainfall in about seven years."

While South Texas is scorching, many areas north of San Antonio have been deluged with rain.

Report: FHA misused loan denial regulations

DALLAS (AP) — West Texas farmers, unable to get a break from nature or financial institutions, also have been getting the runaround from a federal government program designed to offer assistance, according to a published report.

The Farmers Home Administration repeatedly has misapplied regulations in denying assistance to the farmers and apparently violated the intent of the Credit Act through slow appeals rulings, The Dallas Morning News reported Sunday in a copyright story.

Some farmers have been pushed to the brink of foreclosure by the series of bureaucratic entanglements that have slowed their appeals to loan denials, the newspaper said.

Acting FmHA Administrator Neal Sox Johnson acknowledged that agency personnel in West Texas are not following proper procedures in supporting loan decisions.

Johnson blamed problems in implementing appeals rulings on the "stressed" workload of FmHA county supervisors.

Meanwhile, Texas FmHA officials defended their county supervisors against the appeals decisions, saying "a good reason" probably existed for delays in implementing the rulings.

FmHA is an agency of the U.S. Department of Agriculture that lends to farmers unable to obtain credit elsewhere. It is the last resort for some farmers whose crops have been ravaged by bad weather in recent years.

"The intent of Congress clearly was that the decisions of this appeals board be implemented in a timely manner," said Laurie Boeder, press secretary for Sen. Kent Conrad, D-N.D.

Conrad was a co-sponsor of the Agricultural Credit Act of 1987 and introduced the bill's provision establishing an appeals staff under the agency.

Ms. Boeder said Conrad, chairman of the Agricultural Credit Subcommittee of the Senate Agriculture Committee, was to discuss the appeals issue today in a subcommittee meeting on the Credit Act.

During the past year, Texas has led the nation in the number of FmHA loan decisions overturned.

When farmers Laurance Kriegel and Leonard Smith proved the government was wrong in denying them loan assistance late last year, they thought they had finally won a long battle.

Signing time Clements completes work on bills

AUSTIN (AP) — When the dust cleared, Gov. Bill Clements finished work on measures passed during the regular legislative session by signing into law 1,263 bills — ranging from requiring that motorcycle riders wear helmets to a record state budget.

On Sunday, Clements ended the bill spree by vetoing a proposal that would have given debtors more protection on foreclosed property.

The legislation produced a major controversy between bankers and developers in the closing days of the session that ended May 29.

Real estate interests had sought to make it more difficult for lenders to recover their losses on delinquent loans.

Under current law, the price paid at the foreclosure auction establishes the "fair market value" for the property and the lender can demand payment from the debtor on the outstanding loan balance.

The Legislature passed a compromise plan that would have allowed the lender to foreclose, but the borrower would have had the right to go to court to receive a determination of the property's value and the amount of the outstanding loan balance. The difference in these two prices is called the deficiency.

Clements vetoed the bill saying it would have resulted in numerous lawsuits. "Such delays and further litigation are not in the best interest of the state," he said.

Also Sunday, Clements approved bills that will:

- Require conversion to natural gas or other alternative fuel in state fleets with more than 15 vehicles, school districts with more than 50 buses, and local transit authorities. The conversions will be phased in from 1991 to 1998.

- Encourage the Texas Air Control board to adopt rules encouraging the use of natural gas in vehicles and boilers.

- Give Texans greater access to government records about themselves, and prohibit governmental entities from charging high prices for providing copies of records.

On Sunday, the governor vetoed legislation that would have:

- Required sterilization of animals slated for adoption from animal shelters.

- Provided penalties for violating a human burial.

- Regulated sports agents dealing with football and basketball athletes.

Clements already had signed many of the major bills from the 71st Legislature, including the $47.4 billion state budget, prison reform, education funding, insurance regulations and rural health care.

Bankruptcy case still in progress

HOUSTON (AP) — A trustee in the bankruptcy case of real estate speculator J.R. McConnell said it may take two to three years before the case is resolved.

McConnell, 41, was indicted last year on bank fraud charges and committed suicide while awaiting trial in Harris County Jail. His estate likely will face more than $100 million in unsecured claims, and it is uncertain whether the estate will be able to pay any of them, trustee Peter Johnson said.

Unsecured claims could rise considerably, depending on how many lenders claim foreclosure losses, Johnson told the Houston Chronicle.

Depending on how much the estate can get for the few parcels of real estate it has left, it is unlikely to raise more than $10 million in available cash and tax collectors will have first shot at the money, Johnson said.

He said the estate probably will owe employee-withholding taxes for the Grand Hotel and also expects tax debts stemming from the 60 to 70 limited partnerships related to McConnell.

Much of the real estate on which

Business

McConnell piled a mountain of debt has been sold and repossessed by lenders. More than 50 banks and thrifts that lent money to the developer have absorbed the losses.

And finally after three years of trauma, the Galveston real estate market that McConnell warped by his frenzied, overpriced buying is getting back to normal.

McConnell bought a huge collection of rental housing and new developments during the boom of the early 1980s. When it all collapsed into a dozen related bankruptcy filings in late 1986, lenders discovered an enormous tangle of conflicting claims on the properties.

Investigators said McConnell arranged to borrow more money by giving first liens — in effect first mortgages — on the same properties to two and three lenders who were unaware of the other creditors with similar security.

The tangle of conflicting claims by lenders has resulted in a bankruptcy case where the complexity of the claims is as daunting as the dollar value.

Scores of lawyers have cashed their checks for legal work in the case, which has grown to impressive dimensions. The 128 bankruptcy files of case 86-10017 stand 12 feet tall when stacked on top of each other. And enough legal problems remain to ensure the stack will grow taller.

The biggest losers in the McConnell saga will be the 1,200 small investors who sank $38 million into Texas Guaranty Investments, the McConnell firm that drew investors with promises of a 19 percent to 21 percent annual return, the Chronicle reported.

The best estimate of the cash that will be available to pay the Texas Guaranty investors is $100,000 to $150,000 — about $3.90 for each $1,000 invested, said Nelson T. Hensley, the court-appointed bankruptcy trustee for Texas Guaranty Investments.

The other big unsecured claim likely will come from Tigor Title Insurance Co.

Helicopter accident kills six

YARMOUTH, Mass. (AP) — Aviation officials were trying to determine why a helicopter carrying four National Guardsmen and two Army Reservists crashed in a thick fog, killing all aboard.

The Army and Delaware Army National Guard on Sunday investigated the wreckage of the UH-1 Bell helicopter, said Lt. Col. Stuart Tauber, spokesman for the Massachusetts National Guard at Camp Edwards.

The helicopter crew was halfway through a two-week training exercise at Camp Edwards. The exercise included 495 members of the Delaware Guard. The camp is part of the 24,000-acre Massachusetts Military Reservation on Cape Cod and straddles the towns of Sandwich, Mashpee, Falmouth and Bourne.

The crash's cause was unknown.

Bush calls for safe, drug-free schools

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush, opening a week of White House events focusing on youth, today called for a day when every school in the nation will be "safe and drug free."

At a Rose Garden ceremony, Bush honored schools for their efforts to rid their corridors and classrooms of drugs.

A high school from each state was cited in the ceremony as part of the annual Drug-Free Schools recognition program, launched by drug policy coordinator William J. Bennett when he was secretary of education in the Reagan administration.

"As I look around here today, I see some of the top commandos in the war on drugs — our teachers, community leaders, parents and students," the president said.

"You're the ones winning this war, because you are the ones looking to tomorrow, you're the ones who know it takes a clear mind to get a good education and lead a productive life. You understand that students have a right to learn in drug-free schools."

Bush said that, while most schools were now out for the summer, "there's one last lesson for all Americans to learn." He called for "downright stubbornness" in the effort to see that "every school in this country can win, every school in this country can be safe and drug free."

The president noted that the red tie and ribbon he was wearing was intended to symbolize drug-free schools. He said it was inspired by Harold Maready, the principal of Roosevelt Vocational School in Lake Wales, Fla.

"He bet (his students) that that if at least half the school wore red — that is, were drug free — he'd paint his bald head with the words, 'Just Say No.' Well, 225 out of 295 showed up in red — and guess what happened."

"I think Mr. Maready had a great idea, and I'm looking for Marlin Fitzwater here somewhere," Bush joked, referring to his balding press secretary.

The president tonight was traveling to the Philadelphia suburb of Wyncote, Pa., to deliver a commencement address at Cheltenham High School. His topic was one that many speakers cover at similar ceremonies: the future awaiting the graduates.

Bush also was meeting today with visiting Guyana President Desmond Hoyte.

Then on Tuesday the 1989 President Scholars — more than 100 of the nation's top high school seniors in academics and the arts — will have their hour in the White House limelight.

Bush also will attend a fundraiser for disadvantaged children sponsored by Washington Redskins football coach Joe Gibbs.

Then on Wednesday, Bush plans another White House ceremony to announce the start of the Youth Entering Service, or YES program — a foundation-led effort to encourage more young people to perform community service.

Bush says he will ask Congress to pump $25 million a year for four years into the YES to America Foundation to help provide matching grants for service projects.

Bush, father of five and grandfather of 11, spent most of Father's Day at Camp David before returning Sunday afternoon with Mrs.

Bush and their eldest grandson, 13-year-old George P.

They came back in time to host their first PBS "In Performance at the White House" concert, featuring singer John Denver and others, that will be aired on PBS stations at 9 p.m. July 5.

The emphasis on youth comes less than a week after Bush successfully vetoed the minimum wage bill, in part because of Congress' refusal to enact a six-month subminimum "training" wage for youth. Congress also wanted to raise the $3.35-an-hour minimum by $1.20.

Also on Bush's agenda this week is a meeting Wednesday with West German Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher, whose dovish views on short-range nuclear missiles nearly caused a rift in the NATO alliance.

Students

said most exchange students are the children of party members, professionals, intellectuals, teachers and technocrats. Children and grandchildren of Politburo members are believed to be among them.

"For those guys, the front door and the back door were all open," said Huang.

A University of Florida administrator added, "I don't ever recall coming across someone who said, 'My parents are farmers.'" Richard Downie, who has worked with Chinese students for nearly a decade at the university's Gainesville campus, recalls one early group who pooled their money and bought a Cadillac, which they drove to Canada during spring break.

"I thought it was a great joke, because here comes a group of people from communist China, and the first thing they buy is the great symbol of American capitalism, the Cadillac," Downie said.

Many of the students assume their government sends a few students to keep tabs on their classmates.

Qian, who arrived in 1981, said he believes a student in his dormitory at the University of Maryland was an informer. When a female classmate struck up a romance with a Taiwanese, she was summoned to the Chinese embassy and reprimanded, he said.

As students wrestle with whether to return home, their government's scrutiny has taken on a more ominous tone.

Huang said he saw someone videotaping the pro-democracy demonstration June 5 he helped organize in New York City. He said he was warned through intermediaries "not to go too far," and his letters have arrived opened.

Huang, asked if he would return, only laughed.

"My picture and my image (are) on CNN and newspapers," he said. "So certainly this is not the right time to go back."

Big Spring man injured in crash

A Big Spring man was injured early Sunday morning when the vehicle he was driving skidded off the road, rolled once and ejected him through the windshield.

David Melvin Wright, 31, PO Box 1524, was treated and released from Scenic Mountain Medical Center after the accident.

Wright was driving a red Chevrolet pickup northbound on Howard County Road #27 when he failed to negotiate a right curve and his vehicle's left tires slid off the road, causing them to dig into the ground and the car to roll, according to a Texas Highway Patrol report. Wright, who was not wearing a seatbelt, went through the front windshield of the truck after the vehicle had rolled, the report said.

The vehicle came to rest on its tires with its back facing the southwest, the report said.

Stanton

response was so overwhelming that Reid, who was then head of the local historical committee, decided it was time for Martin County to have its own museum.

"She worked very, very hard from that moment on to ensure that we had a local museum. She hasn't stopped working yet, even though I took over as curator a few years back."

"June sets up the exhibits, and she does so in a way that is extremely effective. Every detail is thought over, and when she is finished, she always has a masterpiece, and that's one reason we have the statewide reputation that we do."

The Prehistoric Age is a display that contains fossilized mammoth bones thought to be more than 10,000 years old. "They may be as old as 20,000 years," Payne said.

There are countless number of arrowheads in the Indian exhibit, along with one blanket handmade by an Indian tribe and given to Stanton folks in approximately 1908, lots of implements for grinding corn, spears and even a war paint finger pot.

"Apaches were a warring tribe that roamed the West Texas Plains," Payne said. "There were Comanches here and a few other tribes as well."

Payne referred to the book "Martin County, Its Land and Its People, 1881 To 1978", which includes reports about several local excavation sites where human bones, jewelry and other artifacts have been found. One find, made in 1953, was of fossilized human remains. The bones, determined to be female, are referred to as "Midland Minnie," although she was actually discovered in Martin County.

"The information in the book is great for gaining some real insight into what visitors see at the museum," Payne said. She added that Reid was also responsible for its publication.

Sometime around 1881, when Stanton was called Grelton, the railroad came to the area, and that's the subject of the next exhibit. Complete with a mannequin that appears ready to write a train ticket for a traveler or send a telegraph, the exhibit describes the changes created by the railway as well as several pictures of Texas and Pacific trains at various stages of development.

Although Payne is happy to tell all about the railroad, one can sense her eagerness to advance to the next area. It involves the Convent and Academy of Our Lady of Mercy.

"This is my favorite," she said.

Patriotic duty

BOSTON — Sailors from the USS Constitution and the USS Simpson unfurl the Mount Rushmore flag Sunday at the U.S. Navy yard here. The 90-foot-by-45-foot flag was hoisted by a crane and flown before being repacked and shipped to Mt. Rushmore for ceremonies scheduled for July 2.

"This is where it all began."

Beside a painting of the convent, and not far away from an actual prayer altar from the convent, hangs a portrait of Mother Mary Berchmans Kast.

"She headed a group called Sisters of Mercy. They all arrived here in 1894 on the train. They came from San Francisco, California, where they had served in St. Mary's Hospital," Payne said.

According to "Martin County, Its Land and Its People, 1881 to 1978", the community began as a German Catholic one, but lost its Catholic influence after a severe drought forced many residents to leave the area, as well as from increasing Protestant influence. The academy was closed until the sisters arrived.

"The school reopened in 1894 with 16 pupils. By 1896, there were 32 pupils," Payne said. "The enrollment continued to rise. In 1904, there were 110 students. For the next 20 years the convent and academy did very well, with students coming from all over West Texas, and as far away as California and Ohio."

On June 11, 1938, a tornado destroyed what had grown into a Catholic church, the convent, a boys' dormitory, girls' dormitory, laundry, barns, windmills and some recreational buildings. Only the convent building remains and has since become a historical site in the city.

A museum visitor can become engrossed in this story and begin to ask so many questions that it becomes difficult to move on to the next exhibit, which concerns the medical history of Martin County.

Dr. J.R. Vance arrived in Martin County from Ohio in early 1891, an era that brought with it occasions to grab a horse and gallop miles to save a life in such desolated areas like Lamesa and Garden City. The exhibit contains various medicines, pills and ointments — one that reads "improved," just like products today.

Since then, Payne explained, Martin County has had numerous doctors, all with different styles of practicing medicine, and all being highly respected by the community.

Early businesses flourished after initial hard times, including the Hotel Stanton, the sign of which hangs in the next area of exhibits. There was Hall's Drug Store, a motor company, First National Bank, and the dry goods store.

Several protestant churches developed after the one-room Union Church; attorneys established practices and men ran for public office; public schools were built in the area, including several rural ones; women learned the fine art of canning what would grow in West Texas.

Ranching became the economic mainstay and cotton became king in Martin County. Horse-drawn buggies gave way to horseless carriages. Men began going to war. The telephone found its way into the small community and electricity changed everything. Oil was struck and a new era began.

Whatever the subject, if it has to do with Martin County History, it will likely be found at the Martin County Historical Museum. Payne will know about it or else she will have it there to see. If not, one can enter the archives and conduct research.

"We not only have local history in our archives," she said, "but we carry books on surrounding counties, the Permian Basin, state and U.S. history. We have Life magazines dating back to (its earliest issues)."

"This museum has so much to offer. We have lots of stuff in storage that we want to share with the public, and someday we hope to have more space to exhibit it."

Weather

Farther west, the temperature cooled only to 90s early today in the desert Southwest, following a day of 100-plus readings. The nation's high temperature Sunday was 117 degrees at Bullhead City, Ariz., and Laughlin, Nev.

At least two record highs for the date were set in Arizona: Phoenix, at 115 degrees, and Tucson 113. Winslow, Ariz., at 103 degrees, tied its record high.

Also Sunday, thunderstorms spawned one tornado in Maine and another in Florida. Other intense thunderstorms in Florida Sunday night produced high winds that damaged a mobile home's roof in Venice, toppled a restaurant sign onto a car in Clearwater and blew away parts of porches from homes in North Fort Myers.

The Maine tornado, which occurred near Farmington, toppled trees, damaged homes and threw a camper 40 feet into the air. The trailer landed in a tree. Showers and thunderstorms were also widely scattered across eastern portions of the Dakotas and western Minnesota.

Today's forecast called for showers and thunderstorms scattered from the Ohio Valley and the lower Mississippi Valley across the Appalachians to the central Gulf Coast states and the southern Atlantic Coast; numerous showers and thunderstorms over the upper Ohio Valley, West Virginia, and parts of Alabama, Georgia and the Florida Panhandle; scattered showers and thunderstorms later in the day from the upper Mississippi Valley across northern Plains to the central Rockies.

Poll: Spending, choice of schools favored

NEW YORK (AP) — Most Americans favor greater spending on education and power for parents to choose public schools, and a sizable minority backs a move to year-round classes, a national poll has found.

School competition, through programs allowing parents to choose which schools their children attend, is a cornerstone of President Bush's education policy. Bush has questioned the need for more spending.

The Media General-Associated Press poll, conducted as the traditional school year approached its close, found concern about education on a variety of fronts and enthusiasm for several educational initiatives.

After a decade in which the back-to-basics movement swept the schools, respondents feared that pupils are absorbing facts without learning to think. Most doubted the validity of standardized tests as a gauge of true learning.

Despite the concerns, 53 percent of the 1,084 adults polled rated their community's public schools as good or excellent overall. Those with children in the schools rated them even more highly, with 61 percent favorable.

Among the findings:

- Two-thirds favored more spending on public schools, and nine in 10 of that group said they would accept higher taxes to pay for it. Even adults without children in school backed greater spending by nearly 2-to-1.

- Fifty-eight percent said parents should be able to choose which public schools their children attend. Proponents say that creates competition that forces schools to improve; critics say it drains resources from the schools that need the most improvement.

- More than four in 10 favored year-round classes, with vacations scattered through the year rather than concentrated in a long summer break. Critics question the expense of keeping schools open and paying teachers year-round, while supporters say the continuity enhances learning.

- Fifty-two percent said their local schools do an adequate job teaching children basic facts and skills. But only 39 percent expressed satisfaction with the way the schools teach pupils how to think and reason.

- Fifty-four percent said they believe standardized tests do not reflect how well pupils are learning in school. Such tests have been used to monitor learning for decades; critics argue that they encourage rote learning.

- Parents with children in public schools consistently rated the schools more highly than did other respondents. Big-city dwellers were more likely than others to rate their schools poorly.

The poll found sentiment for a shift in school financing schemes: Among those who favored more spending, only one-sixth wanted it to come primarily from local governments, which usually fund schools with property taxes. Three in 10 wanted more federal money and four in 10 favored greater state support; the rest had no preference.

Support for higher spending declined sharply with age.

Ozone irritates lungs

By NYU MEDICAL CENTER
Breathing in ozone may cause respiratory problems for outdoor exercisers that outweigh exercise gains, according to a scientist at New York University Medical Center.

"Outdoor exercisers should be aware that ozone, a gas that is a major component of smog, is an irritant to the lungs and air passages," said Morton Lippmann. "Inhaling ozone can be especially irritating to people engaged in strenuous exercise."

An article in an upcoming issue of the center's Health Letter says some people are immediately affected by increased ozone levels while they exercise.

"They may cough or experience chest pain and shortness of breath. However, even people who do not experience discomfort may be affected by elevated ozone levels, since respiratory problems may develop over time," Lippmann said.

Ground levels of ozone were higher in 1988 than in any year in this decade and about half the people in the United States live where ozone exceeds the air quality standard — especially in all states east of the Mississippi River, California and Texas.

Ozone is a form of oxygen that contains three molecules rather than the usual two. Colorless and odorless except at very high concentrations, ozone forms naturally in the upper atmosphere, where it helps to shield the earth from the sun's ultraviolet rays.

"At ground level, ozone is formed when such pollutants as hydrocarbons and nitrogen oxides from automobile exhausts and fossil-fuel power plants react in sunlight," said Lippmann, a professor of environmental medicine.

Passport to the future

CHICAGO — Passport Designs' Lowell Levinger demonstrates the firm's Encore software programs at the National Association of Music Merchants summer show last week in Chicago. The software, among other features, enables composers to play their music and have it simultaneously transcribed via computer. Levinger, head of product development for Passport, was a member of the 1960's rock group, the Youngbloods.

Three arrested for fatal railroad station explosion

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Police have arrested three Sikh militants and charged them with planting a bomb that killed 10 people at New Delhi's main railroad station last week, a news agency reported Monday.

The three extremists were arrested June 17 in Amritsar in Punjab state, the birthplace of Sikh separatist movement for an independent homeland, according to the Press Trust of India, which did not identify its sources. The blast occurred June 12.

The three were identified as Nishan Singh, Gurdeep Singh and Baldev Singh, and they belonged to the Bhindranwale Tiger Force of Khalistan, a known militant group.

The news agency quoted sources as saying that Nishan Singh put the time bomb, hidden in a plastic bucket, near the ticket counter at the entrance of New Delhi's main railroad station.

The other two had helped make the device that blew up in a crowd of 600 people, most of whom were vacationers waiting to board trains or lined up to buy tickets, the news agency said.

The blast, which also injured 50 people, was the first attack by Sikh extremists in nearly a year.

The militants told interrogators that they had planned to place the bomb outside a Hindu temple in the busy market place at Chandni Chowk in north Delhi.

But, "deterred by the presence of a large number of people in the crowded Chandni Chowk, they kept the bomb at the station and left for Amritsar ... by train," the news agency said.

The Light Side

Whopper wedding

HACKETTSTOWN, N.J. (AP) — After each had experienced two failed marriages, Ella Crane and Christopher Nelson decided to make their wedding a Whopper.

They were married at a Burger King in a ceremony during which the bride shoved a Whopper hamburger in the groom's mouth instead of wedding cake.

Nelson first set eyes on Ms. Crane about a year ago at the fast-food eatery, where she is manager.

"This is her second home. If anyone would get married here, Ella's definitely the one to do it," said Peggy Volpe, an assistant manager.

Mayor Patricia Harper said she used the "standard verbiage" uniting Ms. Crane and Nelson, both 34, on Thursday afternoon.

"My crew is my family, too, and I wanted them there," said Ms. Crane, who has worked at the restaurant since 1977.

More than 100 people crowded into the Burger King, including old customers, people coming in for a quick meal, the regional manager and employees, Ms. Volpe said.

The bride arrived in a limousine, and a tape of "Here Comes The Bride" began as she walked down the aisle past the soda machine.

Kicking nun

MUNICH, Germany — Sporting nun Eadburga from the Franziskaner congregation in Kaiserslautern is kicking the ball some minutes before the soccer match pitting FC Bayern Munich against VfL Bochum at Munich's Olympic Stadium Saturday. The nun, known as a Munich fan, was invited to the match.

Beware: Guard duck

GRAND MOUND, Wash. (AP) — "Beware: Guard Duck on Duty," reads a sign at the Minnehaha Grocery Store gasoline pumps.

Minnie, named after the store, happened along on June 6, strutted back and forth near the pumps for a while, then took up her post between two pumps. She's been there almost every day since.

At first, store employees didn't feed the muscovy duck because they wanted her to stay independent. They'd take her to a nearby pond, hoping she'd make her home there, but she insisted on flying or walking back.

A few days ago, a customer with two bird dogs in the back of his truck drove up, and Minnie fled into the highway. She ducked beneath a passing car, suffered only an injured leg and is back at her post.

Store owner Mel Hjelm was perplexed by the duck's affinity for the store, but his friend Cindy Lynberg has a theory.

C Train Quiles?

NEW YORK (AP) — A woman gave birth to a boy on a stalled subway train, and the Transit Authority foreman who helped suggested that she "name the kid 'C Train'" after the vehicle in which he was born.

But she quickly thought better of it and named the boy after him.

"There's so many negative things happening on the trains these days. And a perfect stranger. He was a really nice guy," the 32-year-old mother, Kathy Quiles, said from her hospital bed.

Mother and child — 7-pound, 2-ounce Joseph Ramiro Casiano — were in good condition. A hospital spokeswoman said the child was in isolation only because he was born outside of the hospital and had initial difficulties.

"I may not agree with what you say, but I will defend to the death your right to say it." — Voltaire

Opinions from across the U.S.

James Watt — urban consultant?

When a historian writes the chapter about the influence peddlers of Washington and their frenzied feeding during the 1980s, James Watt's strip-mining consultant fees for a low-income housing project will be the perfect case in point.

James Watt, king of the urban tenements! Did you ever dream you'd hear those two topics — Watt and urban housing — mentioned in the same sentence? Not unless Watt was ordering the destruction of a housing project to mine a vein of some valuable mineral.

But the former Interior Secretary during the first Reagan administration — who became a sort of environmental Emperor Nero in the view of his enemies — has gone free-lance, performing some offshore drilling of the Washington money beds, to make his mark in the housing field as a "consultant."

To be specific, Watt consulted a few times by telephone with Samuel Skinner, the secretary of Housing and Urban Development, and Skinner's helpers in the bureaucracy that is now under the command of former U.S. Rep. Jack Kemp. The contractor for whom Watt used his name paid him $169,000 for the trouble.

Watt earned more than $400,000 all told as a housing specialist — although he had no background in housing and never inspected any of the projects.

Bangor (Maine) Daily News

Limit lawmakers to their salaries

There was only one point worth remembering in former House Speaker Jim Wright's smarmy, hectoring sayonara speech to the House.

Wright tried to make the case that some of the House's rules on income and outside earnings are subject to varying interpretations. That's easy enough to fix. The way to do it is to write clear rules of conduct that every House member can understand.

The first step in clarifying these rules is to eliminate honoraria outright. The practice of allowing congressmen to take speaking fees from special interests seeking legislation subjects every congressman — even the honest ones — to skepticism and disrespect.

In fact, why doesn't Congress simply end its soul-searching and ethical squirming by limiting its members to the salary that comes with the job? Even Jim Wright could understand that rule.

Charleston (W.Va.) Daily Mail

Drug giveaway rates applause

Probably some skeptic suspected G.D. Searle & Co. of a publicity gimmick a year ago when it announced it would offer heart drugs free of charge to the poor.

Nationwide, the company has issued 200,000 certificates for a month's supply of heart medicine, with thousands of physicians and pharmacies participating and about 65,000 patients receiving Searle products.

Now the company is broadening the program to include its newest product, Cytotec, a gastric-ulcer prevention drug for arthritis patients.

These policies rate applause not just for the service they provide but for the example they set.

If the medical needs of the poor and those with no medical insurance are to be addressed adequately, private hospitals and medical firms have to increase their charitable commitment; the task is too big and costly to leave to government alone.

Searle's drug program is . . . essential if we're to help the medically indigent without draining the public treasury.

Burlington County Times, Willingboro, N.J.

Taxpayers shouldn't rescue S&Ls

Reasonable people may differ over many of the provisions of the administration's savings and loan bailout bill, but whatever else is done to stabilize the industry, Congress should make certain that the American taxpayer need never rescue the industry again.

Still, as the House begins debate on the bill this week, that question remains very much unresolved.

St. Louis Post-Dispatch

Foley has an unenviable task

Thomas Foley has the unenviable task of trying to get the House in order.

The 60-year-old Democrat from Washington was recently elected speaker of the House. Known as a negotiator and a consensus-builder, . . . Foley will need all of the political skills that he has acquired over the years if he hopes to restore some semblance of normalcy to the lower chamber of Congress.

The House is reeling from partisan political attacks and ethical investigations of both Democrats and Republicans. . . . Foley succeeds Jim Wright of Texas, who resigned the post and his seat after a House ethics panel brought charges against him.

The speaker said that he hopes to quickly "restore a mood of conciliation, reconciliation and cooperation between the two parties." He also said that revising House ethics rules and campaign laws will be a top priority.

A new era of leadership should not mean that the ethics charges against current members of the House be swept aside. Still, one would hope that all of the allegations could be resolved in a timely fashion so that the legislators could get back to the business they were elected to do — making the nation's laws.

The Leaf-Chronicle, Clarksville, Tenn.

Put GOP hatchet men on leash

Mark Goodin is jobless today, but leaves behind him at the Republican National Committee what has become an increasingly valuable political commodity: Deniability.

Goodin was ousted as committee communications director when a storm broke over his memo smearing House Speaker Thomas Foley with insinuations of homosexuality.

So Goodin goes, but Lee Atwater, Republican National Committee chairman, gets to deny having anything to do with the nefarious memo. He apologizes to Foley, but keeps his job. And his patron, President George Bush, expresses "disgust" at the memo, and life goes on in the White House as he denies finding such actions acceptable.

Perhaps this outrage will be so soundly rejected by proper-thinking Republicans that the party's hatchet men will be put on a tight leash — or asked to join Goodin in the search for honest work. And perhaps the incident will convince Democratic gut-fighters these negative attacks have gone too far.

This doesn't mean questions of political ethics should stop being asked. They just should be asked in an honest, straightforward manner.

THE GREAT LEAP BACKWARD

Divide sharpens between economic, political reform

By KATHY WILHELM
Associated Press Writer

BEIJING (AP) — The government is working overtime to condemn liberal political thought, but there has been no hint the campaign will widen to take on what conservatives have called "Western spiritual pollution," such as sidewalk pool tables, privately owned bars, and miniskirts.

The military attack on student pro-democracy protesters and their supporters this month has been followed by more than 1,200 arrests and an intense media campaign condemning any suggestion that the power of the ruling Communist Party be limited.

Political purges are expected, starting with party General Secretary Zhao Ziyang, who reportedly has been stripped of his post.

So far, the cultural and economic aspects of Western culture have escaped attack.

The crackdown seems likely to increase the great divide between the economic sphere, where selected Western methods are studied and adopted, and the political sphere, where Western philosophy is taboo.

Industrialist Lee Iacocca's autobiography is acceptable, for example, but not the Declaration of Independence.

For a government based on Marx's tenet that economics determines everything else about a society, it is an interesting and tension-ridden division.

This division is at the heart of conflict between senior leader Deng Xiaoping on the one hand, and dissident Fang Lizhi and the student protesters on the other.

For more than a decade, Deng has sought to shake up an economy devastated by collectivization, political battles and an economic planning system that discouraged initiative and bailed out failing factories. In economics, Deng said, pragmatism is best: "Black cat, white cat, it doesn't matter as long as it catches mice."

But Deng always stressed the complete authority of the Communist Party. Two previous efforts to achieve a democratic breakthrough through public outcry — the 1978-79 Democracy Wall movement and 1986-87 nationwide student marches — were put down with arrests and purges.

Fang, who has taken refuge with his wife in the U.S. Embassy in Beijing, won a wide following among fellow intellectuals for arguing that economic and political reforms cannot be divorced.

Although there is no evidence Fang encouraged the student protesters in their spring campaign, as the government charged, they echoed his position. Many economic problems, they said, such as inflation and shortages, were linked to official corruption and a controlled press that dared not expose it.

Many students praised the example of the Soviet Union, where President Mikhail S. Gorbachev has allowed a relative ferment of political debate.

If the students had been willing to make their suggestions to government-sponsored youth groups and student unions, there might have been no great stir.

But they rejected the official bodies as not representing them and demanded a direct say. Their stance implicitly challenged the ability of the party to represent them as well. This, it appears, was going too far.

Many intellectuals had hoped China's economic reforms would carry over to the political system, regardless of Deng's intentions. In the six months before the protests began, some thought this was happening.

Small groups of intellectuals held "salons" to read poetry and discuss democracy. National television broadcast a lengthy series that criticized China's traditional culture as backward, and although Vice President Wang Zhen denounced it, the authors were not punished. Greater daring was allowed in art and film.

These developments may have angered aging leaders, including Deng.

One Western diplomat said the start of the student protests in mid-April may have been seized on by the conservatives as an opportunity to embarrass relative liberals such as Zhao.

The movement for greater political reform flagged several times over its seven-week span, but the government passed repeated chances to end it peacefully.

Instead, according to this theory, it waited until sympathetic teachers, researchers, government workers and even soldiers were infected with the students' enthusiasm and joined in marches, revealing their true thinking. Then it condemned the protests as counterrevolutionary and ordered the army to put them down.

If this theory holds, purges of intellectuals and government workers can be expected to be fairly extensive. On the other hand, the leadership has a stake in restoring normal production as soon as possible, and heavy purges would make this difficult.

Regardless of how many people are purged, Chinese interviewed since the crackdown predicted more protests for democracy within a few years.

One explained: Deng believes he can open a window to the outside and put up a screen to keep out the flies. But even the air from outside is infected with democracy.

Names in black and white

By LEWIS GRIZZARD

A guest editorial in Essence magazine, according to an article in the paper, has criticized the names some black people are giving their children, and the reaction from black readers has been mostly negative.

"What is the meaning of Zohnitah, Equilla, Lakeisha, Neomonishal, Le Domono, De Andrian or Zankusha," asked the author of the editorial, free-lance writer Cathy M. Jackson.

She continued: The names "are cumbersome, unpronounceable and phonetically awkward."

The writer said such names are burdens to black children.

Many readers disagreed. One wrote, "The point is something that is definitely a black name."

Another said, "John and Joe are just plain white folks' names."

As far as I'm concerned you can name your kid anything you want.

But I do wish to point out that, although there are many white people named John and Joe and Jane and Janet, whites do occasionally walk on the wild side and show a little creativity when they name their kids, too.

I swear to you I knew of female white twins named Honey Bee and Honey Bun, and I swear again Honey Bun married a guy whose last name was Hogg, and she became Honey Bun Hogg, and that's right up there with Zankusha.

I once knew a white guy named Fern. His mother was into houseplants.

And there was a white basketball player at the University of Georgia named Cort. His parents obviously came from a spelling-deprived background.

Back home, there was Lott Starkins and Pill Gaines and Snark Foley and Manifold Gilmer, whose dad was an auto mechanic.

Then there were the girls and the women: Ildene Monroe, Felma Johnson, Aunt Mittie Pea Starkins (Lott's mom) and Formica Dinette Davis, who worked at the Kut 'N' Kurl beauty salon.

Think of the strange names famous white people in history have had.

There was Pliny the Elder, for instance. What kind of name is Pliny? And when you think about it, Plato is a stupid name, too, and — although he might not qualify as completely white — what was Mrs. Hun thinking when she named her son Attila? And I wonder if she had had a daughter, would she have named her Honey Bun Hun?

I also think white people are great when it comes to making up nicknames for people.

I went to school with one guy we called Worm and another answered to Butterbean, and how could I ever forget High-Lift Johnson, the town drunk, who raised his left foot higher than his right when he walked.

To be honest with you, I didn't know anybody named Formica Dinette Davis, but you've got to be a bit creative to even make up a name like that.

Beeper users face crack down

NEW YORK (AP) — Two of the city's biggest paging companies are cracking down on drug dealers by raising rates for suspiciously frequent use of beepers.

"The drug problem in the U.S. is far beyond the realm of beepers. They're just tools — if this helps us do our little part in battling drugs then we've done something," said Ron Kilcoyne, a spokesman for NYNEX.

Police have found that many drug dealers use beepers to keep in touch with customers and delivery boys.

NYNEX on Aug. 1 plans to start charging 50 cents extra for every beep over 500 a month, $1 for every beep over 1,000 and $250 for each month a customer gets more than 1,000 beeps.

Metromedia Paging already has begun charging $1 extra for every beep over 1,000.

Kilcoyne said the average pager user gets between one and two calls a day.

Chemical fire forces evacuation

BETHANY, Conn. (AP) — A large chemical fire erupted at a factory early today, forcing state and local officials to evacuate at least 70 people, a state police spokesman said.

No injuries were reported in the blaze that hit the JayChem Industries building about 3:45 a.m., dispatcher Laura Burke said.

Route 63, the main road through the small town north of New Haven, was closed between Woodbridge and Naugatuck, Trooper Francis Tranquillo said.

He said authorities were prepared to evacuate more people if it became necessary. He also said the cause of the fire was unknown as were the specific chemicals involved in the blaze.

Kentucky coal miners join strike

OMAR, W.Va. (AP) — Miners at the Pittston Coal Group's only active mines in Kentucky walked out early Monday, joining a bitter strike by an estimated 20,000 coal miners in six states.

On Sunday, about 4,000 people attended a solidarity rally in Waynesburg, Pa., near the West Virginia line. "The labor union has been asleep, but this sleeping giant has awakened," said Ed Yankovich, incoming president of United Mine Workers District 4.

Miners began walking off their jobs in southern West Virginia at the beginning of last week in support of the strike against Pittston. By Monday, the walkout had spread to Pennsylvania, Indiana, Virginia, Kentucky and Tennessee.

UMW President Richard Trumka on Sunday called a strike by about 200 miners at three Eastern Coal Corp. mines in eastern Kentucky near the West Virginia border, the only active Pittston holdings in that state. The walkout began at 12:01 a.m. Monday.

Prized French show dog found

MOUNT PROSPECT, Ill. (AP) — Korsair, a valuable European show dog missing for a week, had only to hear a few words of French to realize he was back among friends.

"As soon as I started speaking to him in French, he came right up to me and buried his head in my side," said Gerald A. Rousseau, a dog trainer who took command of the 3-year-old Belgian Malinois after he was captured by police.

The dog, valued as high as $50,000, slipped from his cage while he and his French owner were changing flights at O'Hare International Airport on June 12. Korsair was spotted Sunday morning in the back yard of a Mount Prospect home, a few miles from the airport.

Police officer Jim Lange won Korsair over with a few dog biscuits and was able to slip a leash over the animal's head.

BEIJING — Flowers decorate an overpass in Beijing Monday in memorial to PLA soldier Li Guorui, 20, who was killed during the attack on Tiananmen June 4.

Chinese continue secret leadership

BEIJING (AP) — Authorities today postponed indefinitely a special session of the national legislature that was scheduled before the pro-democracy movement was crushed with the intent of discussing the movement's demands.

The move further deepens the mystery about what is going on inside Communist China's traditionally secretive leadership. The legislature may be waiting until the Communist Party holds an expected Central Committee meeting to formally oust party General Secretary Zhao Ziyang, who has reportedly already been stripped of power. Qiao Shi, the party official responsible for security, has emerged as a likely successor.

Wan Li, the chairman of the National People's Congress, had scheduled a special session beginning Tuesday.

But a man who answered the telephone at the Congress's press office said the session was postponed because Beijing has not yet returned completely to normal. No new date was set.

Several thousand student protesters had planned to stay in central Beijing's Tiananmen Square, outside the Great Hall of the People where the Congress meets, until the session began.

But they were routed out June 3-4 when troops with tanks and machine guns shot their way through huge crowds protecting the students and rolled into the square. Hundreds of unarmed civilians were killed.

The nearly 3,000-legislature normally meets just once a year, with a 135-member Standing Committee fulfilling its duties the rest of the year.

It was not clear what Wan had in mind by calling the session, though discussion had been expected on how to deal with the pro-democracy movement's demands for reforms including a free press and an end to official corruption. The congress has played a somewhat larger role in shaping legislation in recent years.

World

Polish voters rebuff Communism

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — In another rebuff to Communist authorities, three in four voters did not cast ballots in runoff elections in which nearly all candidates were Communist Party members or allies.

Only in districts where Solidarity-backed candidates were running did turnout in Sunday's vote exceed 25 percent, and the free trade union movement appeared after the runoff to have won all but one of the Senate's 100 seats.

The new chamber is the East bloc's first freely elected legislative body.

The victory Sunday of Henryk Stoklosa, a rich fodder farmer backed by the Communists, prevented a Solidarity sweep of the Senate, where the union handily won 92 places in the first round of voting June 4.

IRA linked to military bombing

OSNABRUECK, West Germany (AP) — A bomb exploded outside living quarters at a British military barracks in this northern city early today, and West German authorities linked the attack to the Irish Republican Army.

The blast caused minor damage, but no injuries.

The bomb went off about 1:10 a.m. next to a building at Quebec Barracks where soldiers had been sleeping, a police spokesman said by telephone from this city about 100 miles north of Duesseldorf.

A spokesman for the Federal Prosecutor's office said the IRA was suspected. "We are assuming that, but so far there has been no claim," said Hans-Juergen Foerster.

The blast comes five days after authorities announced the indictment of two alleged IRA members for earlier attacks on British soldiers in West Germany.

Palme's widow points out killer

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — The widow of Prime Minister Olof Palme stood in court today 30 feet from the defendant in her husband's murder trial and identified him as the killer.

Lisbeth Palme, who was leaving a movie with her husband when he was shot to death the night of Feb. 28, 1986, said she clearly saw the defendant's face just after the shooting on a Stockholm street.

Upon cross-examination, however, she said she had not seen the man's hands, and thus could not say whether he had a gun.

Mrs. Palme's testimony was crucial to the case against Christer Pettersson, a 42-year-old Swede with a long criminal record. He was arrested in December.

Prosecutor Anders Helin asked her if she could point out the man she saw seconds after the shooting. Without hesitation, she pointed at Pettersson, who was sitting across the room.

American captured by Afghans

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (AP) — An American free-lance photographer traveling with Moslem guerrillas has been captured and is being held by the Afghan government, Afghan guerrilla sources said today.

They identified him as Tony O'Brien, 42, a photographer from Santa Fe, N.M., on assignment for Time-Life Inc. He had been covering the Afghan war based in the Pakistani frontier city of Peshawar. The Afghan government did not immediately confirm the arrest. U.S. Embassy officials in Pakistan said refused to comment on the report.

Guerrilla sources in Pakistan who demanded anonymity said O'Brien was captured Wednesday in western Kabul, the capital. The sources said O'Brien was being held in the capital and was reported to be in good condition.

Museum in dogfight over jets

CHINO, Calif. (AP) — The government is locked in a dogfight with the Chino Planes of Fame Museum over two Soviet fighter jets on display.

The State Department, Customs Service and Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms insist the museum imported the MiGs from Poland illegally.

Officials also say the museum's 1947 Antonov, a Soviet-designed biplane still in flying condition, must go because it was bought in Hungary.

U.S. law bars importation of military equipment from a list of countries that includes Poland and Hungary. "based on our belief we should not contribute to their armament industries by purchasing implements of war," said Jack Killorin, an ATF official in Washington.

Museum officials said they had no idea their purchases were illegal.

"They sat on the docks down there for two weeks and customs passed them right through," said Karen Hinton, museum vice president.

"We made a mistake," said Customs spokeswoman Maryanne Noonan. "Those planes never should have reached the museum, but over a million containers a year come in through the seaport. We physically inspect only a small percentage."

The 31-year-old museum, which showcases 90 vintage aircraft, figured it scored a coup last summer when it purchased the MiGs through a broker. The MiG-15 and MiG-17, similar to those flown against U.S. forces in Korea, were restored by volunteers.

People who write own wills leave problems as a legacy

DEAR ABBY: I am a practicing attorney who reads your column daily, as I find your responses to be down-to-earth and based on commonsense reasoning.

However, I think you did your readers a disservice when you instructed them on how to write their own wills. Unfortunately, some people who write their own wills without the advice of an attorney create serious and expensive problems for their survivors.

Recently an elderly friend of mine bragged to me about having written his own will. I finally convinced him to let me take a look at it.

Dear Abby

In one paragraph, he left all of his personal property to a certain person. Then in the next paragraph, he proceeded to leave his coin collection to "Party A," his gun collection to "Party B," and all of his books to "Party C" — all of which items are personal property that he had disposed of in the previous paragraph.

You can imagine what the judge's decision would have been if that will had been filed for probate. — RAY MATTOX, WINTER HAVEN, FLA.

DEAR ABBY: Would you tell a reader with a broken arm how to set and cast it? If not, why did you instruct your readers on how to prepare their own wills?

I have been practicing law for only four years, and thus far I've come across the following:

1. A prominent Texas physician left handwritten notes all over town detailing how his affairs should be handled after his death. He had separated from his wife 13 years prior to his death, but since they were never legally divorced, she received one-half of his estate. In addition to this community property interest due to Texas law, his will left her one-half of his entire estate. If he had known that she was to receive one-half as her community interest, he would not have given her one-half of his half community interest — or a total of three-fourths of the entire estate!

2. Another client's mother died. Her handwritten will left everything to her husband — my client's father, who died nine months later, leaving everything to my client and his two sisters. The total estate and inheritance tax amounted to more than $100,000. The taxes could have been avoided entirely if either parent had consulted an estate-planning attorney.

3. Another individual, trying to avoid leaving anything to her only daughter (a drug addict), carefully specified each piece of property in her will and which heir was to receive it. However, after writing her will, she received a large inheritance from her father. Because the inheritance was not listed in her will, under the intestacy laws of the state of Texas, the inheritance passed to her only daughter — clearly not her intent!

These are only a few of the horror stories I have come across that could have been prevented if the people involved had consulted an attorney rather than written their wills. — DANIEL PALMER, WACO, TEXAS

DEAR ATTORNEYS PALMER AND MATTOX: Thank you for writing. I'll take my lumps. Instead of telling my readers how to write their own wills, I should have repeated the advice I have so frequently given: "In legal matters, hire a lawyer and pay him (or her) for what he knows."

Teen-age breast cancer

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Women who took birth control pills while teen-agers in the 1960s face about five times the usual risk of breast cancer before they reach menopause, a study concludes.

The research, conducted in Sweden, is one of several recent studies to raise concerns that the pill may increase the odds of breast cancer.

While describing their findings as "alarming," the researchers cautioned that birth control pills have changed substantially since their introduction, and newer pills may not heighten the risk of breast cancer.

The research, directed by Dr. Hakan Olsson and colleagues from University Hospital in Lund, was presented at the annual meeting of the American Society of Clinical Oncology.

At the meeting, an Italian specialist described a new approach to treating breast cancer that he said could virtually eliminate the need for mastectomies, which have been the standard approach to the disease for nearly a century.

Breast cancer is the leading cancer killer among American women and strikes one in 10.

Olsson's study was conducted in southern Sweden, where the pill was widely used by teen-age girls after its introduction in the 1960s.

SOARING MEDICAL COSTS ARE RAISING CAR INSURANCE RATES.

Why do car insurance premiums go up? One big reason is the soaring cost of medical care for auto accident victims. In 10 years, the price of hospital medical services went up 160%. Semi-private rooms went up 143%.

There are now over 5 million injury-causing accidents a year. Medical care for those accident victims comes out of everyone's premiums.

And as both the number of accidents and the cost of treating each victim go up, premiums get hit with a double increase.

At State Farm, we believe that ways must be found to keep these factors from forcing premiums to go up. Lower speed limits are one way to reduce deaths and lessen the number and severity of injuries. That's why we're still strongly behind the 55 mph speed limit. We also work with automakers and consumer groups to encourage the development of safety features. Our past work in this area helped lead to today's airbags and automatic safety belts.

State Farm is there, every day. Finding more ways to help protect our policyholders from the causes of rising premiums. So we can keep insurance affordable.

Strange wins Open again

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — The gallery chanted, "Two, Curtis, Two," and it was almost too strange to believe.

On Sunday, Curtis Strange became the first golfer to win consecutive U.S. Opens since Ben Hogan in 1951. And, believe it or not, he sealed the victory with a birdie at the 16th, the first on his card in 36 holes.

"If there was a shot that won the Open, that did it," Strange said.

Strange hadn't made birdie since the 16th hole of Friday's second round. And, if that isn't bizarre enough, consider that in the space of 1½ hours, Tom Kite, one of the game's best shotmakers, went from three ahead to one behind with a triple bogey and two bogeys.

"My play stunk," said Kite, winner of 12 career tournaments but never one of the majors. "It's been a very long day for me. ... It's a bitter pill to swallow."

Sometimes, truth is stranger than fiction.

For the second straight year, Strange made that march up the 18th fairway, cheered by the huge gallery, arms raised in the air. And, for the second straight year, he embraced his wife, Sarah, then walked away with the U.S. Open trophy.

Strange, a 34-year-old winner of more than $4.8 million in 13 years on the PGA Tour, is the fourth golfer to win consecutive U.S. Opens. First, there was Willie Anderson's three in a row from 1903-05, John J. McDermott's two in 1911-12, and Hogan's two 38 years ago.

Not only did Strange equal Hogan's feat of consecutive Open victories, but he also equalled Hogan's Oak Hill Country Club course record in the second round with a 64, his only subpar round of the tournament.

"Move over, Ben," Strange said. "You know, as great a player as he was, it's a great feeling not so much to do what he did, but to do something that others haven't done, like the great Arnold Palmer, Jack Nicklaus and Tom Watson."

Strange finished the day with an even-par 70 after a meaningless bogey on the 18th, and he shot 2-under 278 for the tournament. He had 71 in the opening round and 73 on Saturday, starting the day at two under and three back of Kite and two behind Scott Simpson.

Both Kite and Simpson — playing in the final pair of the day — ran into horrendous troubles over the 6,902-yard East Course.

Call them the Gruesome Twosome.

Kite birdied the par-3 third hole, going six under for the tournament, while a bogey there put Simpson at three under and one shot ahead of Strange. It didn't last long, in fact no more than a half hour.

Kite hit his tee shot on the 406-yard, par-4 fifth hole into the water on the right side of the fairway. When he took his drop, he was too far behind some trees to see the green, so he laid up with a wedge,

Former Oakland Raider dies from heart attack

LOS ANGELES (AP) — An autopsy Sunday failed to determine the cause of death of former Oakland Raider John Matuszak, the hard-hitting, hard-living defensive lineman who died unexpectedly at age 38.

Matuszak, who played on two Super Bowl teams before turning to an acting career, was taken from his Los Angeles home to St. Joseph Medical Center in Burbank Saturday night after suffering massive heart failure. He died at 9:39 p.m. PDT.

The coroner's office will conduct more tests to find out what triggered the heart failure, said coroner supervisor Lillie Shelton. A preliminary police investigation found no signs of foul play, said Sgt. Tom Toutant.

The 6-foot-9 Matuszak, who played with the Raiders from 1976-81, was an imposing sight on the field, staring down opponents with a black-bearded scowl before firing off the ball with speed that belied his 280 pounds.

Matuszak also wrote his autobiography, "Cruisin' With The Tooz."

Nicknamed "The Tooz," Matuszak's aggressive play and tough attitude embodied the spirit of the Oakland Raiders and helped earn the team Super Bowl victories in the 1976 and 1980 seasons.

"I'm just overwhelmed, shocked," said Al Davis, the Raiders' managing general partner who moved the team to Los Angeles. "We really loved the guy, he was our friend."

After sitting out the 1982 season, the Raiders' first in Los Angeles, with an injury, Matuszak retired to pursue acting full-time.

As an actor, Matuszak generally played the tough guy in guest spots in film and television, with credits that included the movies "North Dallas Forty," "Caveman" and "Ice Pirates," and television shows "M.A.S.H.," "Trapper John, M.D." and "The Fall Guy."

He starred in a short-lived 1985 prime time television series, "Hollywood Beat," playing George Grinsky, a huge gay informant whose business was used by undercover cops working in Hollywood.

Matuszak also wrote his autobiography, "Cruisin' With The Tooz."

Born John Daniel Matuszak in Oak Creek, Wis., Matuszak was an All-State defensive end his senior year of high school.

Fittipaldi overcomes all obstacles to win grand prix

DETROIT (AP) — Nothing could stop Emerson Fittipaldi in the Detroit Grand Prix.

Not two bumping incidents with Mario Andretti, not a punctured tire, not a stalled engine, and not the narrow, treacherous downtown street circuit on which the Indy-cars were debuting Sunday after seven years as a Formula One venue.

"It was an incredible race," Fittipaldi said. "It was my race to win because my car was beautiful."

The Brazilian driver's Chevrolet-powered Penske PC18 somehow survived the 62-lap, 155-mile grind that left only 13 of the 28 starters running at the end.

In fact, Fittipaldi, who earned $144,160 from the $1 million purse, beat Indy-car rookie Scott Pruett to the finish line by 29.544 seconds.

It appeared for 54 laps that Michael Andretti, Mario's son, would win easily while others struggled.

The youngster led all but two of those laps, giving up the top spot to his father only during his last scheduled pit stop.

Michael's luck ran out on lap 55 when a broken wire caused the throttle to run open and Andretti jerked the gearshift to slow the car down. That broke the gearshift linkage.

A pit stop cost Andretti the lead and, moments later, the throttle stuck again, sending the 26-year-old racer into a concrete barrier. He wound up 13th.

DETROIT — Bernhard Jourdain of Mexico City appears exhausted after crashing into the wall during the Detroit Grand Prix Sunday on the downtown streets of Detroit. Jourdain crashed on the 50th lap, forcing him out of the race.

"We gave this race away," said Andretti, who had built a 57-second lead over Pruett. "I can't make my car run any easier."

Meanwhile, the 42-year-old Fittipaldi was charging on the difficult track.

On the first turn of the first lap, Fittipaldi and the elder Andretti touched wheels, sending Andretti spinning into a barrier and puncturing Fittipaldi's right front tire.

The incident cost both drivers dearly, dropping Andretti to 20th and Fittipaldi to 26th — last at that point in the race.

"I was so far behind, I couldn't give up any seconds," Fittipaldi said. "I couldn't back off. But the car was beautiful. It was set up right for this circuit."

The elder Andretti, like Fittipaldi a former Formula one champion, was charging, too.

By lap 18, with the help of one of three full-course caution flags, Andretti was running fifth and Fittipaldi was seventh.

By lap 34, the veterans were second and third, less than nine seconds behind Michael Andretti.

Fittipaldi made a clean pass for second on lap 39, but a series of scheduled pit stops moved him back to third. He tried to get past Mario again on lap 48 and, this time, Emmo locked up his brakes, the cars bumped and slid to a stop, both engines dead.

"It was a comedy of errors out there," Andretti said. "But my car

Labonte ends one-year drought

LONG POND, Pa. (AP) — Terry Labonte had a hunch his new Ford Thunderbird would be tough at Pocono International Raceway. It just took him a couple days to prove it.

Labonte, starting 23rd based on his Friday qualifying time, quickly made up ground Sunday and won his first race in more than a year with a persistent, 1.88-second victory over Harry Gant in the $514,000 Miller 500 stock car race at Pocono International Raceway.

Miller 500

"It takes a big load off your back," said Labonte, who last year drove a Chevrolet. "Believe me, these races are tough to win."

The 32-year-old Corpus Christi, Texas, native grabbed the lead with 14 laps to go and held off Gant's Oldsmobile for his first victory on Pocono's 2½-mile tri-oval. Dale Earnhardt finished third, Ken Schrader fourth and Morgan Shepherd fifth.

Pole-sitter Rusty Wallace, outside-pole starter Darrell Waltrip and defending champion Geoff Bodine — the top qualifiers — established themselves early as drivers to beat, but bad breaks took the race out of their hands.

Starting 23rd isn't what Labonte had in mind going into the weekend.

"Before we qualified, I told the guys this is the best car I ever had at Pocono and we were really quick in practice," he said.

"I was disappointed that we didn't have a good qualifying run but it didn't make any difference. It's a long, hot race."

Labonte ran strongly all day, moving to fourth after only 19 of the 200 laps.

He led three times before taking the lead for good as the field came off a three-lap caution period, edging Gant at an average speed of 131.319 mph.

Even in victory, Labonte had to contend with rumors about his future with car owner Junior Johnson's team.

"We haven't talked about next season yet. We still have a long way to go this season and there are a lot of races left."

A caution on lap 184 set the stage for the final sprint. Larry Pearson didn't stop for tires when other drivers did, taking the lead into the first green-flag lap, 187.

Labonte passed Pearson inside the first turn.

"I just dove under him and took off," Labonte said.

Gant said tires proved crucial.

"Terry's car was just better than ours was at the end," Gant said.

Earnhardt boosted his Winston Cup points lead with the showing, combined with the troubles of Waltrip, Wallace and Bodine, the drivers who had been his closest challengers.

"We made some mistakes last year and it hurt us in the points," said Earnhardt, who has nine top-four finishes in 13 races. "The guys are working real hard to keep that car consistent."

Bodine crashed after 78 laps and Waltrip's engine failed him while running second after 104 laps.

Wallace led 100 of the 200 laps but fell out of contention for the race and an $83,600 bonus for a victorious pole-sitter when his left front tire blew and cut an oil line on the 159th lap. He finished 22nd, six laps down.

"It's hard to put it into words, the way we ran out there and then for this to happen. I really ran fast. It handled perfect. I thought I had the class of the field," said Wallace, who at one point had a 6.5-second lead over Labonte.

Labonte finished second in the Winston 500 at Talladega, Ala., on May 7, when he lost by .22 seconds to Davey Allison in his previous best showing of the year. His last previous victory was in April 1988 in the First Union 400 at North Wilkesboro, N.C.

Earnhardt, who led Waltrip by 109 season points going into the race, now has 1,945 points and a 190-point lead over Wallace. Waltrip fell to third with 1,738.

U.S. hoopsters upset

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The United States came to qualify, Puerto Rico came to win. Both got what they wanted, but somehow the Puerto Ricans felt better about it.

"It's the happiest day of my life," Coach Raymond Dalmau said Sunday night after Puerto Rico beat the United States for the first time ever and took the gold medal in the Tournament of the Americas basketball competition.

"They had the emotional edge," admitted U.S. coach Bobby Cremins after Puerto Rico's 88-80 victory left him holding the silver.

"Our goal was to qualify (for next year's world championships)," Cremins said. That was accomplished Thursday when the U.S. team made the semifinals by beating Canada.

The edge showed as Puerto Rico refused to be intimidated by a larger, faster U.S. team that couldn't seem to sink outside shots or free throws.

"Determination was the name of the game," said Puerto Rico's muscular center, Jerome Mincy, who scored 20 points, pulled down a game-high 10 rebounds and got the top U.S. scorer, center Doug Smith, into foul trouble.

The Puerto Rican zone press gave the United States fits, but the game was close until Smith, who led the U.S. with 18 points, fouled out with 3:44 left.

Forward Mario Morales also scored 20 points and guard Ray-

Kite lost his share of the lead on the 10th when he missed the green and two-putted from five feet, and matters got even worse when he shot double bogeys on Nos. 13 and

Tigers continue to stumble

By The Associated Press
The beat continues for the Detroit Tigers, who are getting beaten by just about everyone.

The Tigers fell to 25-41, their worst record in 13 years, by dropping their third straight game and 13th in 16, a 3-1 loss to California on Sunday. The last time Detroit, which won the AL East two years ago, was so low was Sept. 16, 1976.

The Angels scored all their runs in the fourth. Claudell Washington led off with a walk, Johnny Ray singled and Devon White walked. Wally Joyner singled to score Washington and, after Brian Downing struck out, Chili Davis knocked in Ray when pitcher David Palmer couldn't handle a slow roller down the first-base line. Lance Parrish drove in the other run with a groundout to shortstop.

At Minneapolis, Gary Gaetti's second homer of the game, with two outs in the bottom of the ninth, won it after the Twins blew a 6-3 lead in the top of the inning. Gaetti also homered in the fourth, the first homer given up by Chris Bosio in 38 2-3 innings.

Phillies wheel and deal; beat Mets

By The Associated Press
The Philadelphia Phillies are finally a big deal in the National League.

NL

The team with the worst record in the league traded former All-Star Steve Bedrosian and Juan Samuel on Sunday in separate swaps that could affect both divisions.

"We think that coming to a club that's in the race will stimulate Steve," San Francisco general manager Al Rosen said after getting Bedrosian in a five-player swap.

The New York Mets may have found the offensive spark they wanted by getting Samuel for Len Dykstra and Roger McDowell.

"Every time we play the Phillies, I worried about Samuel," Mets manager Dave Johnson said. "He reminds me of Bobby Bonds."

Time will tell whether the trades work out for the Phillies. They were winners on Sunday, though, beating the Mets 6-5 on Von Hayes' leadoff home run in the bottom of the ninth inning.

The Giants also won, beating Cincinnati 2-1. San Francisco leads the NL West by one game over Houston and 2½ games over the Reds. New York is third in the NL East, two games behind first-place Chicago.

Bedrosian, who did not pitch Sunday, figured he would soon be somewhere else. He has gotten little work this season because the Phillies have not been in position to win many games. Bedrosian and a player to be named later went to the Giants for pitchers Terry Mulholland and Dennis Cook and minor-league infielder Charlie Hayes.

Jeff Parrett, expected to be the Phillies' main stopper with Bedrosian gone, went 1-2-3 innings for victory and is 3-2.

Giants 2, Reds 1
Brett Butler's third hit, a tie-breaking single in the seventh inning, sent San Francisco over visiting Cincinnati.

Terry Kennedy opened the seventh with a single against Jose Rijo, 6-4, and pinch-runner Donell Nixon took third on Jose Uribe's hit-and-run single. One out later, Butler singled.

Cubs 5, Expos 4
Andre Dawson tagged Montreal again, hitting a three-run homer that kept Chicago in first place in the East. The Cubs moved 1½ games ahead of the host Expos.

Fernando Valenzuela won his third straight decision and Los Angeles beat Atlanta.

to three hits in six innings and retired the first 14 batters.

Red Sox 7, White Sox 4

At Chicago, Luis Rivera had four singles and Joe Price got his first American League victory. Five of Boston's seven runs off Steve Rosenberg, 2-3, were unearned as the Red Sox made it three straight victories to equal their longest winning streak of the season.

Mariners 8, Blue Jays 2
At Toronto, the Mariners got going quickly with three runs in the first and didn't look back.

Greg Briley led off with a single and went to second on a wild pitch. Harold Reynolds walked and Jay Buhner's drive went under the glove of a charging Junior Felix in center for a triple. Ken Griffey Jr. then singled in Buhner.

Rangers 5, Yankees 2
At New York, Ruben Sierra drove in three runs and Charlie Hough's knuckleball finally befuddled the Yankees.

Sierra, who has hit in 11 straight games, had an RBI single in the first inning and a two-run single in the third as the Rangers averted a four-game sweep in New York.

Indians 4, Royals 1
At Cleveland, Greg Swindell, 9-1, won his fifth straight game. Swindell allowed nine hits, struck out six and walked two while pitching his fourth complete game.

Lendl Graf tabbed top seeds

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Ivan Lendl and Steffi Graf were seeded No. 1 today for next week's Wimbledon tennis championships, as Americans dominated both men's and women's rankings.

Lendl, a Czechoslovak living in Greenwich, Conn., has won every Grand Slam tournament except Wimbledon. Graf, from West Germany, won her first Wimbledon last year en route to the Grand Slam sweep.

Defending men's champion

Stefan Edberg of Sweden, the French Open runner-up, was seeded second in the men's draw, just ahead of two-time champion Boris Becker of West Germany.

U.S. players took seven of the 16 seeds in both singles fields for the grass-court Grand Slam tournament June 26-July 9, headed by fifth-seeded John McEnroe among the men and second-seeded Martina Navratilova among the women.

McEnroe is going for his fourth

Wimbledon singles while, while Navratilova is aiming for a record ninth women's crown.

Michael Chang, who became the first American man to win the French Open in 34 years earlier this month, was seeded ninth, one spot after U.S. veteran Tim Mayotte.

Chang, a 17-year-old from Placentia, Calif., was unseeded at Wimbledon last year and started the French Open as the 15th seed.

mond Gausse had 19 for Puerto Rico.

It was the third time in as many years that the United States had failed to win an international tournament. U.S. teams lost to Brazil in the 1987 Pan American Games and to the Soviet Union in the Olympics at Seoul last year.

"I'm satisfied," Cremins said. "This was a lot tougher than I thought. They had their tough guys out here."

Cremins' team met for the first time on May 28 and had a week to practice before coming to Mexico. "We've been together three weeks and a day. We learned a lot," said forward Billy Owens of Syracuse, who scored 16 points and sported a Puerto Rico cap after the game.

"We thought we had a chance because the U.S. didn't bring its best team," said Dalmay, whose team lost to the United States 105-92 in a qualifying-round game.

Cremins said he had feared the U.S. team would not even be able to finish among the top five here, which would have left the United States out of the 1990 world championships in Argentina.

The biggest U.S. victory of the tournament came with an upset of the more experienced Brazilians Friday night. The U.S. team had watched the tape of the 1987 defeat several times and came out psyched.

Cremins said he didn't know if any members of his scratch team would be playing in the championships next year, and added that it still wasn't clear whether professionals would be allowed to participate by then.

"I can tell you what happened in two sentences," he said. "They outplayed us. They made some of the shots and rebounds that win games."

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — NBC News President Michael Gartner said the network was caught off guard when it decided against sending anchorman Tom Brokaw to China for Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev's recent visit.

"You make decisions all the time about what to do and what not to do," Gartner told a luncheon audience Friday of nearly 900 at the national conference of Investigative Reporters and Editors.

The comments came when a member of the audience asked Gartner if he had any regrets about Brokaw's absence while CBS anchorman Dan Rather remained in Beijing.
